Both Sides Claim Canal Votes Lead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate lineup for and against the Panama Canal treaties is so close that both sides take heart from what they have seen the past two weeks.

Supporters think the trend is in their direction. Opponents think they are on the verge of enough votes to get the treaties changed or even sent back to the drawing boards.

"The movement is in the direction of ratification," Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said. He is one of the key proponents of the treaties, which have been debated two full weeks in the Senate.

Church, who is expected to succeed Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is one of the key floor managers of the canal treaties.

"For" Votes Growth Seen

"I think the votes for the treaties will continue to grow as opinion in the country moves in the direction of the treaties," Church said in an interview.

He estimated there are 60 firm treaty supporters, 30 against and 10 undecided.

To pass, the treaties must be ratified by two thirds of senators present and voting, or 67 if all 100 members are present.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., assistant Democratic leader, told UPI, "We are mildly optimistic. It is still a very tough battle, and very close. We think the opposition does not really have too much more to say. We have quite a bit more to say. The opposition's tactic now seems to be to drag it out as long as possible."

Changes Expected

Critics are equally optimistic that they can make some changes, complicate ratification, or even send the treaties back for new negotiations.

In a first test vote last Wednesday, the Senate defeated a complicating procedural motion, 67-30. Opponents were cheered they had nearly the 34 votes needed to defeat the treaties altogether.

Church acknowledged the Senate may add some changes beyond those proposed by the Senate leadership to clarify U.S. defense and naval passage rights. Amendments require only a majority vote.

Some substantial amendments could send the treaties back to Panama for new negotiations and a new Panamanian popular vote. But the Panamanian government has indicated the leadership's amendments would not require new negotiations or a vote.

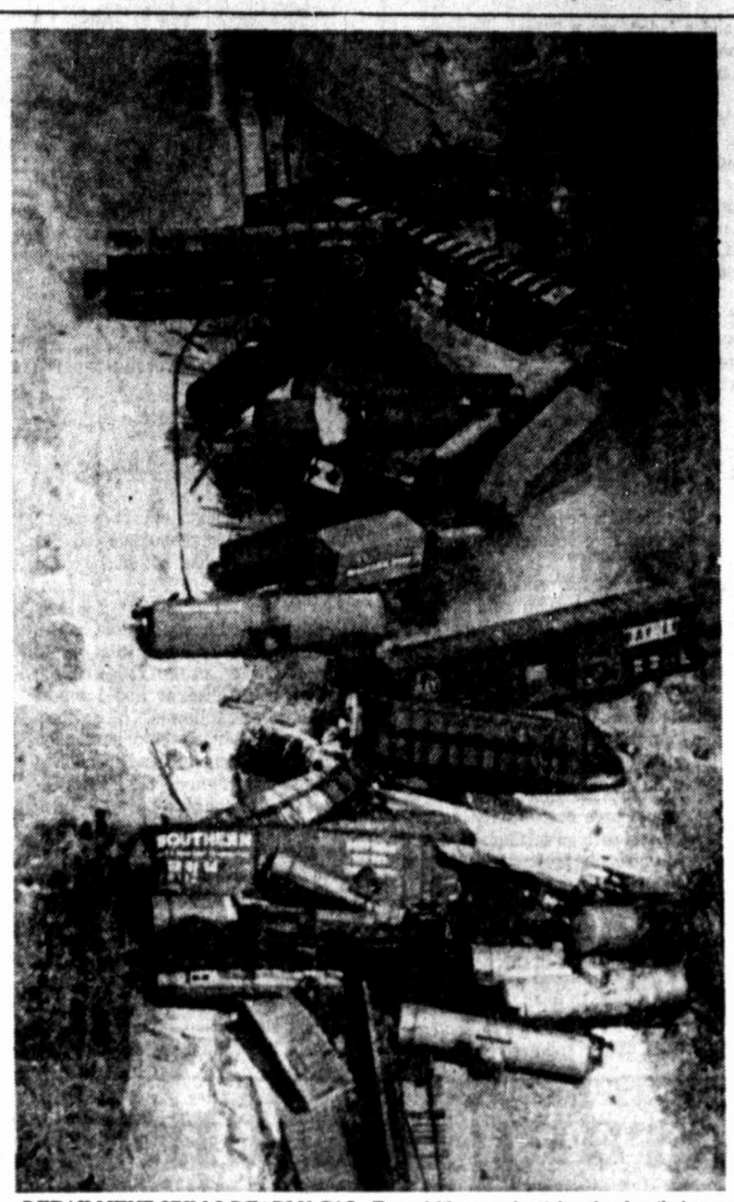

Church said if opponents rally enough votes to add complicating amendments, a compromise may be found that would call the additions "understandings" or "reservations" to the final ratification resolution.

"So far the opponents have been unable to show any serious defect which reaches our vital interests as a nation," Church said. "If some changes should become necessary, then we may add them in the form of reservations.

"We should not allow the decision to be made on what Panama would have to do."

Church said he hopes the Panamanian government will stay patient.

"They have borne up under rather humilating conditions before," Church said.

Deadly Gas Cloud Kills Eight After Train Derailment

YOUNGSTOWN, Fla. (AP) — A freight train derailed near this Florida Panhandle community early Sunday, rupturing a tank car and spewing a cloud of deadly chlorine across a busy highway. Authorities said eight persons were killed and at least 67 were hospitalized.

"It was instant death," said Al Smith, an emergency troubleshooter for the Environmental Protection Agency from Atlanta. "The kind of death we're talking about, it literally burns your lungs up."

Car Engines Stall

Automobile engines apparently stalled as the the chlorine cut off the oxygen needed for combustion. Cars careened into roadside ditches. Some motorists fled into a swamp near the tracks, only to be enveloped by the searing greenish-yellow cloud.

Bay County Sheriff's Deputy Tom Loftin said he was driving to the scene before he knew what had happened, when he found people stumbling along the highway, vomiting and screaming for help.

Had Punch To It

"I didn't really feel it too much, but it had a punch to it," Loftin said. "It was like smelling Clorox, maybe a thousand times worse."

About 2,500 residents of an 80-square-mile area of rural North Florida were evacuated and told it would not be safe to return before Monday. The Florida Highway Patrol blocked U.S. 231 where it parallels the short railroad line between Dothan, Ala., and the popular Gulf of Mexico resorts at Panama City.

The highway was blanketed for hours after the 1:30 a.m. CST derailment by the cloud that escaped from the ruptured tank car about 200 yards away.

About 47 cars and five locomotives of the 140-car freight were derailed, police said.

Broken Rail Blamed

Russell Gober of the National Transportation Safety Board said it appeared the derailment was caused by a broken rail, but he added that was a tentative conclusion.

The dead were apparently all young adults or teen-agers, said officials at the three hospitals where victims were taken. An admitting officer at one hospital said some of the youths had been raccoon hunting in swamps near the track when the choking cloud swept over them.

The eighth victim was not located until late Sunday afternoon, when searchers in a helicopter spotted a lifeless form in a swampy field across the highway from the wreckage.

An ambulance crew then brought out the body of a girl about age 15. She was not immediately identified.

Florida Highway Patrol Lt. O.J. Gilbert said discovery of the dead girl meant all missing persons had been accounted for.

It was the second Southern disaster involving a derailed freight train in less than 48 hours. In Waverly, Tenn., nine persons died and scores were injured when a propane-loaded railroad car exploded Friday, one day after the train had derailed.

A third derailment occurred later Sunday near Milan, Tenn., and authorities evacuated persons from an area about a mile around the wrecked freight after a tank car began leaking caustic fumes.

In Florida, the crew of the Atlanta and St. Andrews Bay Railway train apparently escaped Sunday's wreck without serious injury. Engineer Ray Shores, 53, of Panama City, found a pocket of air in the swamp alongside the tracks and waited eight hours for a helicopter to bring him out.

At Calhoun County Hospital in Blountstown, where 10 persons were treated for lung injuries, Dr. E.B. White said all of Coal Agreement Hopes Brighten

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Sunday they think the odds are good that striking coal miners will accept a tentative contract settlement and return to work.

"Well, there's a good chance," said Carter as he strode past reporters at the conclusion of services at First Baptist Church, where he prayed for ratification of the contract and an end to the nation's longest continuous coal strike.

A similar view was expressed by Marshall, who stopped short of predicting ratification but indicated that the union gains made in the new contract would make it acceptable to the rank and file. Marshall represented Carter in the marathon bargaining talks that preceded announcement of the tentative settlement last Friday.

Hands-Off Time

"This is a hands-off time for us because the decision now is up to the miners, and that's the way it should be," Marshall said in an appearance on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"We will let the democratic process take its effect," the labor secretary said of the 10-day ratification process in which 166,000 miners will vote on the new pact.

Marshall said the administration's faith in collective bargaining has been "vindicated" and that its actions in the coal strike would not encourage other unions to hold out for White House intervention to get a better deal.

He denied, however, that the administration took the union's side in the crucial hours preceding the president's plan to take "drastic" government action to end the strike.

Pressure On All Sides

"I can tell you that that didn't happen," said Marshall, who was questioned about the possible precedent-setting nature of the administration's actions. "I think there was pressure on all sides...," he said, adding that everyone was aware that a settlement was preferable.

Marshall had been asked about the administration's exertion of pressure on the Bituminous Coal Operators Association to accept the United Mine Workers' "bottom-line" contract offer last Friday. Only a few hours before Carter announced the tentative settlement, the White House had appealed to coal operators and steel

Park's 'Tell All' To Congress Near

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unknown outside Washington when he suddenly left the country in 1976, Tongsun Park is on the verge of becoming a household name.

Park flew here Sunday amid expectations that he is going to identify members of Congress who got payoffs from him in a South Korean influence-buying scandal.

Despite all the publicity, many questions remain unanswered about the 42-year-old Korean businessman and one-time Washington socialite who is said to have intriguing worldwide financial interests reminiscent of a smaller scale Howard Hughes.

Was Park an agent of Korea's Central Intelligence Agency? How did he pay for the lavish parties he threw for the likes of House Speaker Thomas O'Neill? Did he try to bribe congressmen to make himself a fortune from rice sales or to get their support for military aid Korea's government sought in the early 1970s?

Some skeptics doubt Park really will "spill the beans" in the way that John Dean, Richard Nixon's White House lawyer, undid the Watergate cover-up.

Park is sure to face tough questioning to show that his promise to tell all is not a trick to fool American and Korean politicians alike and avoid prison.

Investigators, for example, are known to believe Park kept much of the estimated $9.2 million he earned from commissions on sales of surplus U.S. rice to Korea — even though he evidently told officials in Seoul he was using the cash to bribe American politicians.

Claims $750,000 Contributed

During questioning by Justice Department officials in Seoul last month, Park is said to have acknowledged giving close to $750,000 to members of Congress.

He starts testifying secretly Tuesday to the House ethics committee — in a prelude to public hearings and federal court appearances.

Unless he gets caught lying, Park is assured immunity from prosecution despite his indictment on 36 counts of bribery and other felonies.

Whatever his testimony, Park will not return to the lifestyle he once led in Washington. Two mansions he left behind have been seized by the Internal Revenue Service. So have the luxury automobiles he sported.

His long-time girlfriend, Tandy Dickin-

Settlements Policy Retained By Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The Israeli cabinet voted Sunday not to change its policy on settlements in occupied Arab territories in an apparent attempt to avoid upsetting delicate Middle East negotiations during the shuttle efforts of U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton.

The decision, which came after a long and emotional debate on the future of the occupied territories, was at least a temporary defeat for Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon's proposals to build new settlements on a large scale.

Officials said the decision means there will be no change in Israeli policies until Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman return from talks in Washington next month with President Carter — who consistently has opposed the settlements.

They noted that the debate came during Atherton's efforts to get Israel and Egypt to agree on a statement of principles for peace negotiations.

"The government did not want to change things during this delicate period," one official said.

Israeli officials said existing policy calls for expanding and strengthening the 19 settlements in the Sinai and moving civilians into three existing bases on the West Bank of the Jordan by the end of March.

A commentator on the army radio station said the government declaration meant support for settlements in principle but a temporary freeze on actually setting up new sites in occupied territory.

Newspaper reports earlier said the two-day debate focused on Sharon's proposal for new settlements to guarantee the Jewish presence west of the Gaza Strip in the Sinai.

Israeli peace proposals call for this region to come under U.N. control with an Israeli force defending the settlements.

Cabinet Secretary Arye Naor said the cabinet also discussed the latest Egyptian proposals for a peace settlement as relayed by U.S. officials and a response would be passed on Monday.

British Foreign Minister David Owen arrived in Israel for an official visit Sunday and said he feels Israel should not

Deaths Of Animals Called Negligence

GRAND PRAIRIE (UPI) — A Dallas newspaper Sunday said the owners of Lion Country Safari ignored warnings they could lose large numbers of the exotic animals if they did not provide adequate shelters to protect them from the North Texas winters.

About 20 exotic animals — including a rhino, zebra and an antelope — died this past month from exposure to the cold weather and snow.

The Dallas Morning News quoted sources at the park which said a large number of animals also died last winter and that the owners — International Animal Exchange of Ferndale, Mich. — apparently ignored advice from animal handlers that more shelters were needed.

Nixon Estate Tour 'Disappointing' For Some, 'Great' For Others

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon let the public in for the first time Sunday to the lush seaside estate where he has lived since leaving the White House in disgrace. Thousands of tourists took a 10-minute bus tour through the grounds — a trip that thrilled a few but disappointed many.

"Like everything Nixon's done, he promised more than he delivered," said a disgruntled tourist, one of 8,000 who paid $2.50 apiece months ago for the right to see the compound once known as the Western White House.

Many expressed disappointment at not catching a glimpse of the former president and his wife.

"I enjoyed it," said one woman, "but I just wished they'd have come out and waved to us."

The visitors, who came from all over North America, almost all complained that the trip was too short.

"We came here from Canada," said Lydia McLean. "I wouldn't say it was worth the price of our plane ticket out here. But it was worth the $5 a couple."

But two Southern California women wearing "I'm for Nixon" buttons said the tour was great.

"It was thrilling to just be on that private property," said Pauline Pfau of Riverside. "I was just thrilled to know that President Nixon was on the grounds."

The tour, arranged by the Chamber of Commerce to celebrate San Clemente's 50th birthday, began at a high school a few miles away. From there, buses carrying about 50 ticket-holders each made repeated trips to the Nixon estate.

The buses spent 20 minutes on the freeway and 10 minutes inside the estate, with only six minutes inside the actual private grounds of the Nixon's four-bedroom home and guest house.

On the freeway, a tape-recording told visitors the history of San Clemente. As the buses entered the gates of the Coast Guard station which surrounds Nixon's home, another recording described the prefab buildings near the estate which were paid for by taxpayers to serve as Nixon's offices when he was president.

The buildings are now used as offices and mailrooms for Nixon.

"The former president is in his office at this moment finishing the final draft of his memoirs which will be published in May," the tape recording announced.

Nixon's golf cart stood outside his office. As each bus rumbled past the mailroom, the recording mentioned that Nixon does not have enough funds to answer all his mail.

The bus then turned into the private grounds of the $1.4 million Spanish-style villa known as "Casa Pacifica."

The recording spoke of the "quiet peaceful surroundings for President Nixon's writing and Mrs. Nixon's hobby of gardening."

Visitors could see through the main entrance into a courtyard landscaped

Prostitution In Lubbock Proves Big Business

(EDITOR' NOTE: This is the second in a series of three articles in which The Avalanche-Journal examines porostitution in Lubbock).

By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IT'S A dark side of life:

Not knowing whether the next call is the freak, the sadist or the cops.

But despite the problems, the dangers, and the risks involved, prostitution in Lubbock is big business, a business seldom cloaked in any semblance of secrecy.

From listings in the newspaper's classified ads, call almost any one of more than 30 massage parlors sometimes advertised, and chances are you'll get more than prices for a massage.

Some are discreet. You must arrive, agree on massage prices and undress before hearing the inevitable proposition. At some, you must even make the proposition.

Others are flauntingly arrogant: "We got the standard for $20, hot oil for $25 and the switch for $40. You get a straight date for $50. Anything else costs more."

Of the more than 30 massage services frequently advertised, an Avalanche-Journal check found only one that might meet standards set out in a proposed city ordinance requiring masseuses be educated in the art they perform — massage.

Of those services, each with one to four girls, one 17th Street woman is a former physical therapist who works with patients referred to her by doctors and with clients who see her ad, which begins straight to the point: "True, legitimate massage..."

Standing in the doorway of her Lubbock home, Farah is typical of most other sidestreet masseuses in the city.

"What you want honey?," a voice sounding more like a 40-year-old than this 26-year-old woman trying to look 16 wails out. Once inside, she runs through the options — a scene typical at most home massage salons.

Across Lubbock, a standard "legitimate" massage runs about $20. Other more elaborate massages can run as high as $100.

Once price and a treatment are agreed upon and the masseuse has her money, the patron disrobes in an adjoining room, and his hour begins. It doesn't take long.

Earthquake Information Stored In Colorado

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — The earth rumbled and shook beneath the leafy, mountainous jungles of western New Guinea in the southwest Pacific Ocean.

The earth's crust strained, bent, and then, when the stress exceeded the strength of the rocks, it snapped to a new position. Seismic waves quivered through the planet's surface like ripples in a pond.

Needles jumped on delicate seismographs around the globe, and alarms rang in the bedrooms of scientists tending seismic observatories at Guam; Honolulu; Palmer, Alaska, and Newport, Wash.

The quake, a serious one, registered 7.1 on the Richter Scale. Observatory reports were relayed to Newport, and a scientist there reached for a telephone.

Half a world distant from the rumble, geophysicist Waverly Person sat in front of a television set at his home in Boulder, Colo. It was about 8 p.m., Oct. 29, 1976, when his telephone rang with the call from Newport.

Person jotted down the quake's magnitude, coordinates, measurements of seismic waves and what time they were taken. He went upstairs to his study and sat at the desk.

He plugged a portable computer terminal into the telephone receiver, dialed into a Denver computer and typed out the information.

Back came a latitude and longitude. Person reached to his left, amid the bookish clutter on the floor around his chair, for his world atlas. His finger moved to 4.5 degrees south and 140 degrees east — west New Guinea.

Earthquakes are common in New Guinea, lying in the infamous "Ring of Fire" volcanic earthquake belt encircling the Pacific Ocean. Person knew this, and asked the computer when the last serious quakes had occurred in the region. Back came the figures on a printout.

Person then telephoned the wire services and gave the world detailed, technical information about the earthquake 2½ hours after it had occurred.

Reports of the 133 persons killed in the tremor would not come for several days out of the dense jungles. Only then would the National Earthquake Information Service know of them.

Waverly Person is one of 10 geophysicists alternately on standby when the NEIS is closed at night. Their work days are spent with colleagues at a U.S. Geological Survey building on the Colorado School of Mines campus in Golden.

The NEIS, foremost collector of earthquake information in the world, operates on the top floor of the four-story, white, brick building overlooking foothills of the Rocky Mountains.

Prediction of earthquakes is not the concern of scientists at the NEIS; that's done at the National Center for Earthquake Research in Menlo Park, Calif. "Our main function here is the location of earthquakes worldwide," said Person.

Each day, geophysicists at the NEIS routinely locate significant earthquakes around the world, about 6,000 annually. They determine magnitudes, intensity of shaking, location of quake epicenters and other technical information. The facility's location, far from shakey California, means the NEIS would continue to function during any major rumblings along the notorious San Andreas Fault.

The NEIS receives reports from the 116-station Worldwide Standardized Seismograph Network, a 63-station network of seismographs in the Soviet Union and about 2,150 additional stations throughout the world. Bulletins of earthquake data are published regularly and distributed to the seismological community.

During the day, any earthquake of 6.5 magnitude and higher anywhere in the world trips an alarm in NEIS offices. At such times, Branch Chief E.R. Engdahl, Person and several others gather in the War Room, on the south end of the building.

Seismicity maps cover the east wall, and a faded, green 32-inch diameter globe stands near the window. In one corner is a teletype, next to a wooden rack crammed with atlases. Nearby, on a long table, are telephones and a computer terminal.

It was in the War Room that geophysicists first learned how serious was the earthquake that occurred last July 27 in the Tang-Shan area of China.

"We knew it had to be dangerous," said Person. "We knew the magnitude (8.0), and we knew it was near the surface, and we knew it was in a populated area. The damage extended as far as Peking."

When the government of China finally released casualty figures, more than 655,000 persons were reported killed and 799,000 injured. It was the second deadliest earthquake in recorded history, since 830,000 persons died in a quake in the Shansi Province of China in 1556.

Since the last China earthquake, Person said the general public has taken to thinking that earthquakes are occurring more frequently. But, he said, "It's just that we've had earthquakes in populated areas this year.

"People call in and say: 'Oh, we're having a lot more earthquakes.' It's not the case, not at all. We're just having them in populated areas."

Taking the elevator to the basement four stories below, Person took his visitor on a tour of the NEIS instrument room, where seismograms transmitted from 60 seismic stations across the United States show everything from a rare, mild earthquake in Virginia to an underground nuclear explosion in Nevada.

"You could jump up and down on the floor in here, and it wouldn't do a thing," said Person. "The signals come into here from all over the United States, but the actual recording instruments are elsewhere."

Only two seismographs are located at the NEIS in Golden. They are also in the basement, in the corner of a storage room, secluded from the heavy footsteps of visitors.

Back upstairs, in an office filled with maps, charts, journals, reports and monographs, Person said his agency regularly gets calls from persons reporting earthquakes that actually are an overhead airplane or a passing truck or plane.

"We check them all out," said Person. "Sometimes it turns out to be a slight earthquake of, perhaps, a magnitude of 3 or 3.5. Other times it turns out to be a passing train.

"Most people who hadn't been in an earthquake would probably think a truck was passing," he said. "Excepting, of course, people in California. When they report a quake, it probably is one. They know an earthquake when they feel one."

Earthquake Danger Threatens Japanese

TOKYO (UPI) — In olden times Japanese children were told their country rested on the back of a big catfish that slept on the bottom of the sea.

Everytime the fish stirred in its sleep, Japan had an earthquake.

The catfish gave its latest twitch Jan. 14. A quake with a force of seven on the Richter scale rolled through the Izu Peninsula, a resort area 100 miles southwest of Tokyo, bringing death and destruction. It was Japan's 17th fatal earthquake since World War II.

The Izu quake touched off the usual rash of warnings that the 27.1 million residents of the teeming Japanese capital and its bedroom cities live under continual threat of an earthquake disaster.

The quake in the non-urban Izu district was frightening enough. All roads and rail lines into the area were blocked instantly by landslides, which also killed 25 people. Japan's coast guard had to evacuate 4,000 tourists by ship.

About 40,000 Izu residents lost their water service. A dam holding back cyanide sludge at a gold mine gave way and 100,000 tons of poisoned mud spilled into a river. Almost every fish in a 27-mile stretch of the river was killed. Towns that drew drinking water from it had to go on indefinite water rationing.

"Disaster prevention systems in Tokyo would have been utterly ineffective against such an earthquake," says Tokyo university professor Takamasa Nakano. He is a member of the city's disaster prevention council.

Tokyo already has been through one earthquake disaster in this century. A quake with a force of 8.3 on the Richter scale smote the capital and the nearby city of Yokohama in September, 1923. It was followed by fires in the two cities and tidal waves along the Pacific coast. The death toll was 140,000. Tokyo has not had a fatal quake since.

As in the 1920s, most of Tokyo is thickly built with wood frame houses and shops. Nakano said that if the Jan. 14 quake had taken place in the capital, a fire disaster would almost certainly have followed. Nakano predicted the streets would have been clogged with damaged and abandoned cars, making it impossible for fire engines to reach the blazes.

The destruction of water mains and loss of water service in parts of the Izu area was another eye opener. Especially in a fire, the effects in Tokyo could be devastating.

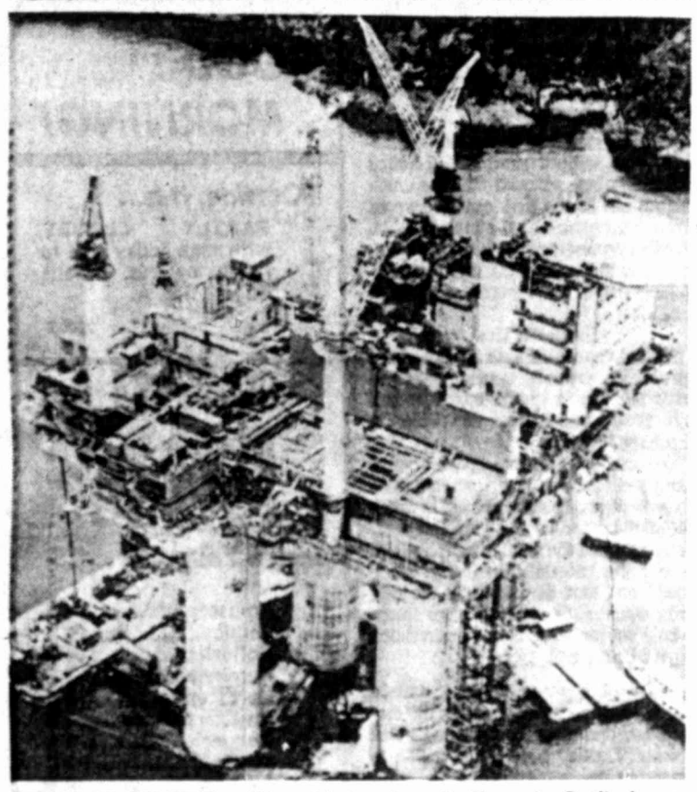

Nakano's colleague on the disaster council, another Tokyo University professor named Etsuzo Shima, reminded the city government that the council already has pinpointed 2,300 hills in the capital where landslides could occur during a quake.

Shima urged that some of the worst slopes be covered with retaining walls. However, with the city finances running deep in the red, that isn't likely to happen soon.

The council predicted in 1975 that a quake and fire in Tokyo under the worst possible conditions could take half a million lives. It defined "worst possible" as a quake with an up-down motion occurring at supper time in February or March. In those months Tokyo is swept by harsh north wind, and the fire hazard is at its worst.

Kozo Kimura, a seismologist for the earthquake office of the government's meterological agency, backed up his quake predictions with action when he retired in 1976. He moved to a rural area 300 miles out of Tokyo.

"There is a possibility Tokyo will be attacked by a big earthquake tomorrow," he told friends. "I don't want to be here."

New Program Lessens Surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of elective surgery patients found that in one of four cases where a second opinion was sought, the first doctor's recommendation for surgery was not upheld. The findings seem to bolster fears that many operations are performed unnecessarily.

The preliminary results were released Sunday by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York and were based on 1,500 cases in which subscribers obtained consultation from a second physician.

Of 353 obstetrical-gynecologicial cases studied, 28.6 percent of the initial recommendations were not confirmed by the consultant. Of 253 orthopedic cases, the need for surgery was not confirmed in 33.2 percent of the cases. Of 229 ear, nose and throad cases, 26.6 percent of the recommendations were not confirmed.

"We are continuing to study the patients to add further data to see how many had operations immediately anyway, how many deferred them for a year or two, or perhaps indefinitely," Silbery said. "We also want to see what happens to the people who have decided not to have surgery. However, we believe the program is immediately beneficial if some subscribers are spared pain by not having surgery. In terms of lowering costs, we also anticipate significant savings."

For each operation not performed, Silbery said, the insurance plan saves about $1,500 in hospital fees. He estimated total savings of $700,000 in the two years the program has been in effect.

In 1976, the 4.5 million subscribers and dependents in the New York plan were offered the free "second opinions" to double-check the initial recommendations for surgery. However, few have taken advantage of the option.

"The issue of unnecessary elective surgery peaked in 1976, when a congressional subcommittee reported that such surgery costs the country $4 billion annually, Blue Cross-Blue Shield said. The subcommittee, using a 1974 study by Dr. Eugene McCarthy of the Cornell University Medical Center, estimated that 2.4 million unnecessary operations were performed in that year.

"The figures were, and are, controversial, because of a lack of valid data to challenge or support them," Blue Cross-Blue Shield said. "In an attempt to gather such data, Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans are experimenting with second-opinion programs."

The New York study was the first in the nation, the plan said. A number of others have since been started, including those by Blue Shield of Pennsylvania, Blue Shield of New Jersey, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Illinois, Blue Shield of Massaschusetts, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan and Ohio Medical Indemnity.

53 Dead In Argentine Wreck

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — A survivor of a truck train collision that killed 53 people and injured more than 120 says he'll probably never forget "that hell of crushed heads, of people screaming for me to kill them."

Railway officials Sunday blamed a "careless" truck driver for the Saturday crash of the 18-car passenger train near the northern town of Saa Pereyra. It was the second worst railroad disaster in Argentine history.

"How long will it take me to forget that hell of crushed heads, of people screaming for me to kill them?" one survivor said of the victims trapped for hours in the twisted wreckage.

"How can I forget this, how can I forget it?" the man said to a woman at the Buenos Aires Mitre train station, where thousands of people had gathered to await the return of the survivors Saturday night.

Another survivor, Edmundo Ferreyra, said he and his family were tossed forward when the train crashed "and then everything was lopsided ... When I got outside it was a horrifying scene, screams were coming from all the cars."

Police said the bodies of the 53 victims were moved Sunday to a schoolhouse in Saa Pereyra, 350 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, for identification by relatives.

Authorities said more than 120 people were injured in the crash, 56 seriously enough to require hospitalization. Four were under intensive care and one child required extensive surgery, a public health spokesman said.

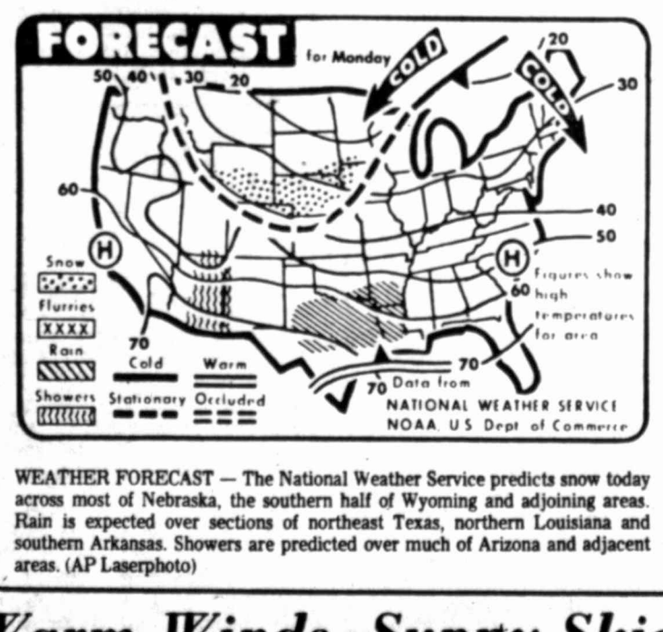

The crash occurred when the "Northern Star," carrying 2,130 passengers on the 810-mile run from the northern city of Tucuman to Buenos Aires, clipped the rear end of a refrigerated meat truck at a road-level crossing.

Eleven cars derailed and most of the deaths occurred when one car telescoped 21 feet into the one in front, crushing its passengers in a jumble of twisted steel that took rescue crews hours to cut through, police said.

A statement issued by Argentine Railways said the "careless" truck driver crossed the tracks "ignoring the ringing and flashing light signal warning of the train's approach."

Police in Santa Fe, 45 miles south of Saa Pereyra, identified the driver as Ruben Franchini, 28, and said he had been detained. He was not injured.

Argentina's worst train disaster occurred in 1970, when 142 died in a collision between two trains.

Warm Winds, Sunny Skies Predicted

Residents may cast away those heavy overcoats and woolen scarves as mostly sunny skies and warm southerly winds are on slate for the South Plains today.

A low pressure system over eastern New Mexico and West Texas is producing the light and variable southerly winds along with moderate temperatures.

However, a stationary front is also lingering in the area bringing in some low cloudiness.

Temperatures should hit the low 60s today and dip to the mid 30s by tonight. The high Tuesday should be near 60.

The National Weather Service predicted no precipitation of significance through Tuesday and expected nearly six hours of sunshine today and Tuesday.

But, forecasters predict a chance of rain in the mountains of west Texas by Wednesday, which should spread eastward over most sections by Thursday.

Across Texas Sunday, temperatures were in the 50s in the Panhandle, 60s in the central portions and 70s in south Texas.

GRAZING TO MANUFACTURING

Colorado, once primarily a mining and grazing state, now draws the largest segment of its income from manufacturing, followed by agriculture, tourism and mining. Its snow-capped peaks, ski centers, ghost towns and health spas make it a popular vacation-recreation area.

TOM T. HALL

Singer Pays Visit To Two-Man Show By Area Artists

By FRANK COATS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The slowly increasing crowd milled about, looking at the artwork in the First Federal Savings and Loan lobby, drinking coffee and talking. The art show, called "West Texas Realism," is an exhibit of portraits of people, places and moods by Lubbock artists Jim Eppler and Paul Milosevich.

Many people stood around a Milosevich portrait of a man called the "poet laureate of country music."

Casually a black limosine pulled up in the parking lot, and a horde of people piled out: Eppler and Milosevich, various others, and another gentleman who became the center of attention as soon as he walked in.

"Tom T. Hall," he said as he shook each proferred hand.

Hall was in town Sunday to help promote the show, which will be here until Friday. The two artists are friends of his, and Milosevich has drawn a limited edition of Hall as part of a series he's doing of recording artists.

Other musicians Milosevich has penned include Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson and Joe Ely.

Eppler's commissioned clients include the Nashville Songwriter's Hall of Fame.

The crowd was as much a cross-section of Lubbock as anyone will ever see. There were bankers and artists, beards and jeans, long dresses and $300 suits. The were all there to see the art show, and Tom T. Hall.

Hall was supposed to appear in the Lubbock Club Saturday night, but he was flying in to Lubbock from Toronto and he missed one of several connections. The crowd waiting for him requested his songs from a talented young performer playing there, Gary Campbell.

Hall conceded to requests to sing Sunday afternoon, and sitting on the edge of a couch, he started strumming a borrowed guitar. He went through the first few strains of the classic "Mr. Bojangles," before looking up and laughing.

"That's not my song," he said. "You knew that, didn't you?"

"I came down here out of selfishness," he went on. "I'm a great fan of these artists, and a great fan of this type of art."

The 41-year-old songwriter is a success in his trade; he's well known, well-respected, and he doesn't have to struggle any more. He now is able to work when he wants to, and rest and relax on a 54-acre farm in Tennessee named Fox Hollow.

He's been a successful songwriter for many years, with such songs as "Harper Valley P.T.A.," "The Year Clayton Delaney Died," "Pamela Brown," "I Like Beer," (many's the fraternity that knows this song) and many more. But now that the struggle is over, his life is not that much different.

"I still write songs," he said. "And I've written a book about songwriting and a new book — a biography of my 15 years in Nashville.

"It's still about the same; I just don't have the hassle. I may have been too serious," he said of his years on the road. "I may have tried a little too hard. Now I'm 41, white-headed, and beat up from travelling all around."

He looked around at the art show, feeling relaxed and comfortable, and said "this is probably the way I should have done it."

Hall still tours, of course, but not in the winter. His working dates fall between April 1 and Dec. 15. Except for those days, he says, "I won't go out of the house as a professional person, except for maybe some TV spots."

"I can't do it (travel) for 12 months again; I don't see how other people can get up and go somewhere."

But when Hall works, he works pretty hard. "Between April 1 and Dec. 15, I'll work 150 different places, and be gone four or five days of the week, and sometimes three weeks at a time."

Hall travels in a 40-ft. bus with seven other musicians and a valet. "There's an art to travelling," he said. "The main thing is to get some rest. So many people want to see you and want you to make appearances, but when I haven't slept for 18-20 hours, even if I show up I'm useless. I've learned how not to tax my strength."

During the winter months Hall lives on his farm, where he raises vegetables, beef, has fish in a couple of lakes and a few chickens and goats.

When Hall talks about his farm, he leaves very much the impression of a country gentleman. This is where he does his writing and where he lives with his wife Dixie. It's a resting place, a refuge and a home.

"We freeze a lot of stuff and can a lot of stuff. It's a pretty place, but it's a working farm, too.

"I love it there. The time I really want to be there is when I'm on the road," he said.

But he still enjoys the audience. After he played Jerry Jeff Walker's "Mr. Bojangles," he played a couple of choruses of his biggest hit, "I Love," and closing with the beautiful "Old Dogs and Children and Watermelon Wine."

"What a way to make a living," he said as he put the guitar up and stood up from the couch.

Moslem Ire Said Behind Rioting

TABRIZ, Iran (AP) — Riots a week ago in this city near the Soviet frontier have brought to the surface deeply rooted animosity among Moslem leaders toward the Shah of Iran. Disorders could erupt again soon, informants say.

Government officials say the rioting Feb. 18 here in Iran's second largest city left nine persons dead and 125 injured. The cause of the deaths and injuries was not officially reported.

Moslem leaders claim, however, that security forces killed about 300 men, a figure that could not be confirmed by independent observers.

Damage to government buildings, banks and businesses amounted to $2.5 million, government officials said. About 350 persons, mostly young men, were reported arrested.

"The total damage may not amount to much, but the ferocity in which the rioters aimed their vengeance at government buildings, decorated with emblems of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's reign, was frightening," said one resident of this city of almost one million population.

Believed to be at the root of the troubles is the opposition of conservative religious leaders to the shah's efforts to Westernize and modernize this traditional Moslem society.

Hardest hit in the rioting was the government's Rastakhitz Party headquarters building. Every window in the building was broken and rioters attempted to set it afire until police, backed by army troops, arrived.

A rock was thrown through the first-floor window of the Iran-American Cultural Society.

Informed sources said demonstrators shouted "Death to the shah!" as they marched up and down Reza Pahlavi Avenue, smashing bank windows and attacking moviehouses, hotels and shops.

Witnesses and sources who talked to this reporter asked to remain anonymous.

Police said 73 banks, mostly small branch offices, were hit by the rioters but not looted.

Other sources said the banks bore the brunt of the riots because they were among the few business establishments that had defied religious leaders' orders to close down Saturday, Feb. 18, to mark the 40th day since Moslem demonstators clashed with police in the southern city of Qum. Seven persons were officially reported killed there, but opposition sources claimed that as many as 100 may have died.

"Religious leaders of Tabriz also claim that troops shot and killed close to 300 persons in the riot here, as it started near the city's main bazaar and then fanned out quickly," one source said. "However, it appears that the death reports are exaggerated because it would be too difficult to hide hundreds of bodies and then bury them without word getting around in this city."

The same source said the demonstrations started out as religious protests "but now they have taken on a broader meaning and are directed against the shah and his government. Communists may have been behind the demonstrations, but it's still not clear who was responsible."

"We expect more protests of this kind to break out," the source added. "The riots were not spontaneous. They were well organized, and religious leaders distributed leaflets three days before, tipping their hand what they planned to do."

The shah has been trying to thrust his oil-rich nation of 35 million people, many of them Moslem ultra-conservatives, into the 20th century "too soon, too fast," as one Moslem Tabrizian claimed. In addition, Moslem religious leaders oppose the government's attempt to desegregate the sexes and promote women's liberation in what they consider to be a violation of Moslem traditions. Many Moslems still harbor resentment for land reforms that expropriated giant tracts of mosque farmlands.

Religious leaders are considered highly influential in this conservative area, where few women venture out in public without veils.

City officials have opened an investigation to find out who organized the disorders and how to resolve differences with religious leaders. The government also intends to keep army units stationed nearby.

But the informants claim the religious leaders can muster a bigger crowd for any new demonstrations.

Police, who estimate that about 7,000 persons took part in the riots, threatened tougher measures in the event protests take place again. Officials expressed concern that religious leaders might call demonstrations to commemorate those killed in the riots.

Cosmonauts Poised For Space Record

MOSCOW (UPI) — Psychologists are helping to keep the Soyuz 26 cosmonauts in shape to challenge the U.S.-held manned spaceflight record by feeding them news from earth.

Lt. Gen. Georgy Beregovoi, head of the cosmonauts' training center, said in a weekend interview with the official Tass news agency the crew's continued efficiency depended on "how successfully (work) loads alternate with rest hours."

Beregovoi said cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko, 33, and Georgy Grechko, 46, refuse any form of rest expect sleep aboard the orbiting Salyut 6 laboratory so psychologists had to find other ways to "relieve tension."

"One such method, checked in previous long flights in Salyut stations, is that several times within the day the crew receive different news from earth which remove from them the feeling of separation from home," Beregovoi said.

Romanenko and Grechko already have broken the Soviet record of 63 days in space and next Saturday, if all goes well, will equal the U.S. record of 84 days set Feb. 8, 1974 by three astronauts aboard Skylab 4.

Psychologists apparently are trying to avoid the problems that beset the Soyuz 21 cosmonauts, who cut short what was expected to be an attempt at a record space stay after 49 days in August 1976.

The Soviet press reported shortly before the end of their mission that they were suffering from "sensory deprivation" and ground control was trying to help them overcome this with increased news from home.

"Psychologists believe that most important for the cosmonauts' high spirits is different news from scientific laboratories, which already process the materials of experiments carried out by Romanenko and Grechko," Beregovoi said.

But, he said, "news from home, from relatives and friends," also was considered important.

"Once a week," he said, "the cosmonauts' families come to the room of 4the group of communication with the crew. Having learned the latest news (from home), having slightly reprimanded their children for accidental threes in school, having praised them for successes on a ski trail, the cosmonauts' spirits grow higher."

Under the grading system in Soviet schools, five is excellent and three is passing.

Police Charge Seven Men In Drug Smuggling Bust

DALLAS (UPI) — Seven men suspected of operating a multi-million dollar marijuana smuggling operation between Mexico and five states have been charged with federal conspiracy to distribute drugs.

The men were arrested Thursday in what was described as the biggest marijuana seizure in Dallas and Ellis counties. Officials said they found about 4,500 pounds of marijuana worth $480,000.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jay Ethington said the alleged drug ring was believed responsible for distributing at least 170,000 pounds of marijuana since November 1977.

The operation was said to have originated in Mexico and to involve drug distribution in five states including Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma and Tennesee. Officials said more arrests might be expected here and in other cities.

Arraigned Friday before federal magistrate Bailey F. Rankin were: Christelo Arce, 40, and Jesus Galvan Perez, 29, both of Dallas; Valeriano Delo Garza, 30, Hector Garcia-Garcia, 27, and Jaime Eloy Sanchez, 23, all of Rio Grande City; Reynaldo Tamez, 47, of Je Soto; and Benjamin Sundoval, 24, of San Juan, Texas.

Preview Of Things To Come?

IT MAY BE that the Panamanians will do what the U.S. citizen seemingly can't accomplish, get the Panama Canal Treaties defeated.

Latest reports from Panama City note that Panamanian citizens will stage a huge street demonstration March 8 to counter "offenses against our dignity" as committed by U.S. opponents of the Canal treaties.

The information, as carried in an influential Panama daily newspaper, is enough to make even the most rabid pro-Panama senator take a second look.

IT SEEMS THAT what has riled the paper and some Panama residents is the probe into possible dope peddling by some members of Panamanian Dictator Torrijos' family.

Full accounts of the Senate debate over the treaties are making big news in the Canal Zone, including the drug episode.

As a result of that, and some other things to which the Panamanians allegedly object, plans are for a "massive demonstration to reject the offenses against our dignity."

AND ALTHOUGH plans for the protest call for it to be a peaceful one, it like many such demonstrations could easily erupt into violence.

If this is the case, then those in the Canal Zone as well as the Senate of the United States may get a good preview of what we can expect for the next 22 years before they completely turn the vital waterway over to whoever may be running the show at that point.

It will be recalled that three days of bloody rioting erupted in January of 1964 when about 200 Panamanian students marched into the zone intent on pulling down the U.S. flag and raising the Panama banner.

BEFORE THE ensuing trouble subsided, 20 persons were dead and many injured. That incident and the planned upcoming protest only serve to emphasize the shaky and dangerous grounds upon which any agreement with Panama may be made.

We have neither a way of knowing who will be "running the store" down there in the year 2000, nor who will be running it a year from now.

One thing we do know, however, is that the man currently in charge, Gen. Torrijos, is a military dictator, a good friend of Cuba's Communist Premier Fidel Castro and could easily invite Russian help if he thought he needed it.

While the matter of alleged drug peddling may be of importance, the political affiliations of those with whom we deal—and their ability to control the mobs they hold in armed subjection—is of much more concern.

Furthermore, it re-emphasizes why the Senate should take a second look at what it is doing to this nation's defense posture while snubbing the wishes of a majority of the American public.

AN EDITORIAL:

Berkeley Profits From Loss

WHAT'S THAT, you say, the cradle of radicalism is being rocked by the reality of a need to show a profit? Egad, what's the world coming to?

That's what the story said out of Berkeley, Calif., the other day. The Berkeley Co-Op, which has supported such "causes" as a boycott against non-union-picked grapes and aerosol spray cans, is in a financial pinch.

This has caused a saccharin-sweet battle royal to erupt internally between the activists and the more realistic members of the food cooperative.

THE BERKELEY Co-Op has been around for 40 years, the largest consumers cooperative in the country and owner of an unusually profitable supermarket.

It has about 90,000 members who have taken advantage not only of good food prices but also of such other services as a credit union, inexpensive legal advice and child care centers for shoppers.

During and since the 1960s, though, the Berkeley Co-Op supported the Black Panther Party by supplying food for its breakfast for children program, backed Cesar Chavez' boycott of non-union lettuce and table grapes, fought for an end to milk price supports and sold cigarets only from locked cases.

But, according to the Pacific News Service, the Co-Op lost $122,000 in 1976, $359,000 in 1977 and $244,000 in the first two months of fiscal 1978.

BECAUSE OF these mounting losses, the Co-Op couldn't go along with proposed boycotts of Coors beer (accused of discriminating against minorities) or Florida orange juice (because it is advertised by anti-gay activist Anita Bryant).

The losses also prompted a slate of concerned members to run for, and win, control of the board of directors.

"We need to spend more time on managers' reports than on the cause of the month," said one successful candidate.

The new board adopted a policy of ruling out boycotts and of removing products from the shelves only for the same reasons free enterprise stores remove theirs: Health and safety or slow sales.

Now, all this certainly doesn't signal that Berkeley will eschew its radical politics and become a bastion of conservatism, but at least it shows that when the chips are down even some political radicals understand the profit motive.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Russians Push Ahead While We Lag Behind

WASHINGTON—Canada's recent ouster of 13 Soviet diplomats for alleged involvement in subversion is one of those recurring Cold war "surprises" that is not especially surprising.

Anybody who has been paying attention for the past three decades should be aware that the Soviet "diplomatic" corps, so-called, is chockablock with agents of the KGB.

The same is true of scientific delegations, cultural exchange groups, athletic teams and other blocs of Soviet visitors.

The Kremlin fears such contacts with the West as opportunities for espionage, and all its diplomatic and other missions are heavily larded with apparatchiks of the KGB.

This well-known fact of life has been neglected or downplayed by American officials and the media in the era of detente.

THANKS TO THE supposed relaxation of tensions between East and West, recent years have witnessed a massive influx of Communist diplomats and other personnel to American shores —with a corresponding increase in the number of Soviet secret police who are able to move about the United States on their subversive assignments.

Outgoing FBI Director Clarence Kelley has observed, for instance, that the number of Soviet-bloc officials in the United States has more than doubled in the span of a decade—from 806 in July, 1966, to 1,955 in December, 1976.

The number of Soviets entering the United States under special "exchange" agreements, he adds, has also doubled, to more than 5,000 a year.

U.S. INTELLIGENCE agencies estimate, meantime, that 65 percent of the Soviet "diplomats" in this country are actually agents of the KGB.

Other opportunities for subversion have been presented by the opening of 40 American ports to Soviet ships since 1972, also in obedience to the spirit of detente.

John Barron of the Reader's Digest, author of the definitive book, "KGB: The Secret Work of Soviet Secret Agents," reports that in 1976 more than 25,000 Russian crewmen came ashore in the United States.

"Because it is impossible to keep so many people under surveillance," he notes, "U.S. security officials have no idea how many were engaged in KGB missions or how many remained as spies."

Predictably enough, this rising tide of Soviet-bloc personnel has been accompanied by repeated instances of Communist infiltration of our government.

IN A CASE THAT surfaced last year, two men were convicted of copying secret codes concerning U.S. reconnaissance satellites and other sensitive matters for the KGB, and funneling these to the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City.

This was a case that got some public notice; but countless others have been ignored.

For instance, there have been numerous reports of Communist-bloc efforts to penetrate and manipulate the U.S. Congress—such as a contact by an East German agent disclosed to the FBI last year by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill.

Kelley and other FBI officials have confirmed that the KGB has been making an extensive effort to cultivate contacts on Capitol Hill, but the problem has received very little attention in public discussion.

THE SAME IS TRUE of efforts by Soviet "diplomats" to intercept the phone calls of American citizens.

The official response by the U.S. government has been to look the other way.

Former FBI agents say the State Department has resisted efforts to bar some of the more notorious operatives of the KGB from the United States.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

A Special Madness

NOVAK

NEW YORK—Having failed to convince America that they really feel remorse for long years of profligacy that have brought them to mendicant status, the big spenders of New York City have one weapon left to avoid bankruptcy: terror.

Strategists planning this city's drive for long-term federal guarantees are warning that bankrupcy is just around the corner, closely followed by catastrophe spreading far beyond the Hudson.

Since the day is long past when the fate of New York evokes sympathy from the hinterland, the campaign of terror is the only reason why Uncle Sam may yet save the city.

It seems to be working. Although no definite decision has been made, the Carter administration is expected within the next two weeks to back a long-term federal guaranty program of the city's bonds.

But even if given presidential sponsorship, that program must still clear the much higher hurdle of congressional approval. Congress is in no mood to save a city whose employes will soon get higher pay and whose citizens will soon pay lower taxes.

THE OPTIONS are clear:

(1) Bail out this city's free-spending government, however undeserving it is, and avoid bankruptcy;

(2) Pass a short-term loan and probably avoid bankruptcy now, which would only postpone the showdown—perhaps only until the 1980 presidential election year, when congressional sympathy will be non-existent;

(3) Do nothing, thereby mandating bankruptcy.

Is bankruptcy all that bad? The rest of America, specifically including Congress, thinks it might be a good thing to bring this fabled city in touch with reality (a view shared privately even by some Wall Streeters).

In truth, municipal bankruptcy would not trigger overall financial collapse today as it might have in 1975, when Manhattan's banks were clogged with city bonds.

NEVERTHELESS, city bankruptcy would threaten New York state with bankruptcy. It surely would further weaken the shaky dollar and worry unstable money markets.

Financier Felix Rohatyn, finishing a long hitch as chairman of the Municipal Assistance Corp., paints a scary but credible picture of Jimmy Carter's bargaining strength with Leonid Brezhnev being diminished by bankruptcy here.

What is clear to New York's astute Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan is that nobody today would accept the 1975 argument that this is an urban crisis, not a New York City crisis.

The fact that Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston are not experiencing the same trouble suggests a special madness here.

New York cannot persuasively argue to Congress that its madness is under control. While police commissioner Robert McGuire asks "real dollar increases" for his men, municipal labor leader Victor Gotbaum demands a half-billion dollars in higher wages amounting to a 12 per cent increase.

ASSUME MAYOR Edward Koch digs in his heels in the impending negotiations and whittles down Gotbaum's demands to a more reasonable 4 per cent increase. That is still too much, when heaped on the present $1 billion annual deficit.

Insiders sympathetic to the new mayor don't see how he can balance the budget unless the unions are held to practically no wage increase. A deficit-building wage boost added to state and municipal tax cuts will harden congressional hostility.

Ex-Congressman Koch's insistence that "collegial" relationships with his former pals in the House will pass New York aid is not taken seriously here or in Washington.

Koch was not the House's most popular member and another ex-Congressman, deputy mayor Herman Badillo, was one of its least popular members.

With the Senate Banking Committee aligned against another New York bail-out, the House is in no mood to act before the Senate does. Yet, on his last visit to Washington, Koch failed to touch bases either Moynihan or his Republican colleague, Sen. Jacob Javits.

FURTHERMORE, New Yorkers clearly have to appeal to emotion, as Moynihan did in a recent conversation with President Carter, as follows: Herbert Hoover, whatever else he did, went down in history only for inspiring "Hoovervilles" (depression shanty towns); do you want to go down in history as the President who sent New York into bankruptcy?

That may move Carter, but even stronger language will be needed for the reluctant Congress. Responding to the Senate Banking Committee, Rohatyn accused it of playing "Russian roulette" and "pushing the city toward bankruptcy."

But Rohatyn cannot wage the campaign alone Ed Koch will have to drop his smiling optimism and instead terrorize Congress.

Whether Koch understands it or not, such perceptive New Yorkers as Moynihan and Rohatyn realize that other Americans do not much like, admire, respect, trust or believe in this city.

They will help only if convinced that New York's financial collapse will be the indirect cause of their own ruin, which may indeed be the case.

ANDREW TULLY:

Hope Is Relative

WASHINGTON—In any examination of the workings of high-level government, hope is a relative thing—like the reaction of the guy who, asked "How's your wife?" replied "Compared to who's?"

In that vein, I offer a report on the inflation front that could be good news compared to the nothing President Carter has submitted. The report, verified by a White House aide, is that Carter has been listening to Arthur Burns, who will relinquish his post as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board on March 31, or earlier.

Burns wanted reappointment, but another guy got his job and he decided not to stay on as a board member.

Anyway, Carter has talked with Burns several times recently and has seemed interested in Burns' proposal for the establishment of a wage-price review board.

THE BOARD WOULD have the power to require prior notice of wage and price increases, to suspend proposed increases for a limited period, and to recommend action to the President.

The Burns proposal is not new. He urged it on President Nixon in early 1971, calling the rate of inflation "unacceptable and dangerous." Burns even told the Joint Congressional Economic Committee that the need for mandatory wage-price controls could be imminent.

Eventually, Nixon came up with Phase II of his anti-inflation program, which was working before he surrendered to Big Business and Big Labor, to whom any form of controls is anathema. Burns supported Phase II and tried vainly to persuade Nixon to continue its operation.

AN AIDE TO Burns says the review board plan he has been peddling to Carter is consistent with his long-held argument for an "incomes policy" —short of controls.

That is to say, the plan calls for only limited suspension of wage and price increases while government, labor and business "discuss the situation."

So far, however, Jimmy Carter has refused to learn from a segment of recent history, which might be called the Decline and Fall of Lyndon Johnson.

Johnson had his Arthur Burns in Gardner Ackley, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers. Ackley fought vigorously but unsuccessfully for an incomes policy featuring compulsory arbitration of wage-price changes and temporary freezing of wages and prices in certain areas.

JOHNSON NOT ONLY was deaf to Ackley's arguments, he even abandoned the wage-price guidelines, based on productivity, instituted by the Kennedy administration. Meanwhile, he fought a major war without funding it—igniting the fuse that exploded a decade of runaway inflation.

Jimmy Carter's war is, or should be, reducing the inflation he inherited from Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon. But like Johnson and, after Phase II, Nixon, he is walking softly and carrying a small stick.

JAY HARRIS:

Room At The Top

IF CONFIDENCE counts for anything, two men who have a lot of it see themselves winding up in a showdown for the governor's mansion in Austin.

We refer to former Gov. Preston Smith of Lubbock, and Republican candidate Bill Clements of Dallas.

Smith, who seeks the Demo nomination, and Clements didn't make their predictions face to face. But each did so within the space of two days in the office the past week. And each came up with some reasons "why not..."

In Clements' case, he feels he is the leading contender over former Rep. Ray Hutchison, also of Dallas and long active in GOP circles. In Smith's case, he thinks the voters are tired of what he terms a "free spending" Gov. Dolph Briscoe, and afraid of "Liberal" Atty. Gen. John Hill.

DON'T SELL either man short. Both talk good games and aren't afraid to speak their minds and take stands.

Clements, who is 60, heads up SEDCO, one of the world's largest oil drilling companies. He is a former roughneck and served as U.S. Deputy of Defense.

A no-nonsense guy who "says it like I think," Clements comes off as a fiscal conservative.

He faults Gov. Briscoe on four major points: That the governor has not fought for Texas' interests in the energy crisis; that he has ignored the illegal alien issue; that he has not raised his voice or used his influence against federal labor law reform which threatens Texas' Right to Work Law, and that the governor has presided over "the fastest-growing state bureaucracy in the nation."

IT IS ON the labor law reform the Dallas man faults the Governor the most.

"If the Labor Reform act passes Congress, you are going to see some real fireworks. If you think the Panama Canal is an emotional issue, let this get jammed through..."

Clements also scores President Carter's amnesty program for illegal aliens. "One day, Texas is going to wake up and find it has 3 million new citizens," he says.

As things now stand, Clements says private polls, as well as his own "galloping" survey, show "Gov. Briscoe is in big trouble." Right now, he says he thinks Hill will win, although he adds: "I was surprised to note that Gov. Smith is doing quite well..."

IT MAY BE wishful thinking, but Clements obviously would rather go against Hill in November, if for no other reason than it would fall into Conservative Vs. Liberal lines.

He says the Attorney General is surrounded by "the same crowd that supported Ralph Yarborough and Sissy Farenthold." Clements says he figures he would pick up Briscoe's conservative following in such a race.

Figuring much the same way is Lubbock's own Gov. Smith, a man who inexplicably seems to have more support downstate than he does in his own back yard.

Gov. Smith isn't kidding himself about the task he faces. Right now, he knows he is third man on the totem pole and as much as an underdog as one can get. But that doesn't faze the man who has waded through some of Texas' most turbulent years and most of the time came out on top. "If we can get enough people to listen, we can win," he says with confidence.

THAT VERDICT is still out. But, what the savvy veteran of many a political battle has to say —and display—is worth listening to and looking at.

Wherever Preston goes these days, he totes around a large flat, cardboard type satchel. He thinks it is loaded with enough ammunition to shoot down Gov. Briscoe's hopes for six more years in the statehouse.

"I'm getting a lot of mileage out of this," the Governor says, as he shows three large charts, each amply colored and filled with figures on state spending the past quarter century.

There is a graph showing how much money was spent under the regimes of Governors Allan Shivers, Price Daniel, John Connally, Smith and Briscoe. Another depicts estimated Per Capita State Expenditures in the fiscal year 1971-79, and another State Expenditures by Governors from 1952-1979, All Funds.

THE PICTURE the former governor paints is an impressive one.

According to Smith's figures, Shivers oversaw the spending of $4.4 billion in six years, Daniel $7.3 billion in six years, Connally $11.9 billion in six years, Smith $14.2 billion in four years and Briscoe $16.7 billion thus far, with projections of $39.4 billion by the end of his term.

"This shows that although Gov. Briscoe claims he has raised no new taxes, the money came from somewhere, much of it new taxes brought on by inflation," Smith charges.

The Lubbock man then offers another look at figures which show estimated per capita state expenditures for fiscal years 1971-79.

From 1971 through 1973, during Smith's tenure, per person spending was $301, $326 and $340, respectively, the chart shows. In 1974, Briscoe's first year in office, it is listed as $367. In 1975, the chart jumps to $440, then $497, $519 and this year is projected at $645, according to Gov. Smith's "bombshell."

Gov. Smith is the first to admit that charts and figures don't win elections. But, he doesn't buy the idea that the voters "have to be mad" to vote someone out these days. "If they realized what is happening to their state, they would be angry," he argues.

Some have called this Gov. Smith's "last hurrah." He sees it as not only a comeback, but an opportunity to "tell it like it is." You have to give him an A-plus for effort...

Peking Readiness Urged For Taiwan Takeover

TOKYO (AP) — Standing beneath huge portraits of himself and Mao Tse-tung, Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng opened China's fifth National People's Congress on Sunday by urging military readiness for a takeover of Taiwan.

Hua said the 3.5-million-member People's Liberation Army "must make all the preparations necessary for the liberation of Taiwan," Peking's official Hsinhua news agency reported in a dispatch received here.

Hsinhua's excerpts from Hua's 3½-hour speech did not amplify on the reference to Taiwan. He and other Peking leaders have called repeatedly for the "liberation" of the island from the Nationalist Chinese, who fled there after the Communist Chinese victory in 1949. But they generally have played down the potential military character of such a takeover.

Chinese insistence that Washington withdraw its recognition and defense pact with Taiwan has been the main obstacle to establishment of U.S.-Chinese diplomatic relations.

Hua said the struggle against "the two hegemonist powers, the Soviet Union and the United States, and in particular against Soviet social-imperialism, is on an upsurge higher than ever before."

However, he indicated indirectly that China would continue its policy of improving relations with America and the West. Hsinhua said he pledged to carry out the "revolutionary line in foreign affairs" of the late Chairman Mao, who began the rapprochement with Washington.

A television broadcast seen here of the congress' opening showed the 3,456 delegates and their guests applauding while the smiling Hua entered Peking's Great Hall of the People, followed by Marshal Yeh Chien-ying, the party's first vice chairman, and by the other vice chairmen, Teng Hsiao-ping, Li Hsien-nien and Wang Tung-hsing.

The assembly rose in silent tribute to three leaders who died in 1976 — Mao, Premier Chou En-lai and Chu Teh, head of the standing committee of the congress, China's parliament.

This session is the first since their deaths and the arrest of the radical "Gang of Four," led by Mao's widow, Chiang Ching. The radicals, who emphasized ideological purity and distrusted foreign influences, were seized in October 1976 on charges of plotting to overthrow Hua, whose government stresses technological progress and greater openness to the West.

Party Chairman Hua, 57, addressed the congress in his concurrent capacity as premier. Some analysts expect this congress to give that office to Teng, 74, a pragmatist protege of Chou. Teng, purged under the radicals, has regained his popularity since being restored to power last year.

In his speech, Hua emphasized the need for unity among all Chinese, including those on Taiwan, and for giving full scope to the country's intellectuals, minorities and non-Communists. He outlined the first three-year phase of an economic modernization campaign aimed at turning China into an advanced industrial nation by the year 2000.

A joint editorial of the Peking newspapers People's Daily, Red Flag and Liberation Army Daily hailed the congress, saying: "Chairman Hua is leading us on a new Long March. We shall build a powerful China, modernized in the socialist way. A great ideal shall be attained!"

The Long March was the Communist strategic retreat of the 1930s, led by Mao, and the reference underscored the important role the party's old revolutionaries play in the present power structure.

The congress is described by Chinese theoreticians as the "highest organ of state power," but in practice it is subservient to the Communist Party. Delegates to the congress, which is described as combining legislative and administrative functions, are said to be elected from local people's congresses and the army.

The congress' constitutional term is five years. The first through third congresses met in 1954, 1959 and December 1964-January 1965, but no subsequent session was held until January 1975, when the fourth congress met in secrecy at Peking.

Convened simultaneously with the fifth congress is the adjunct People's Political Consultative Conference. Several leaders who had fallen into disgrace in the past decade or more appeared for its sessions, including the former ambassador to Moscow, Liu Hsiao.

Also present for the consultative conference, Hsinhua reported, is the one-time Tibetan leader the Panchen Lama, said to have been in a work camp since his ouster in 1965. For a time after the 1959 flight to India of his spiritual superior, the Dalai Lama, he was the Communist front man in the former Himalayan kingdom.

Hsinhua reported Sunday that the Panchen Lama said in a speech to a group of delegates:

"For a period of time I discarded the banner of patriotism and committed a crime. Guided by Chairman Mao's revolutionary line I have corrected my errors.... I have deeply recognized that only by placing itself in the big family of the unified motherland can Tibet have a bright prospect (and) a happy future."

A spokesman for the Dalai Lama said Saturday in India that he questioned whether the Panchen Lama was attending voluntarily.

Governors Demand Coal Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors demanded Sunday that a national energy policy be devised to head off crises such as the one brought on by the current coal strike.

"Settlement of the coal strike is only a first step," said Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray in a television interview as the governors gathered here for their winter meeting.

"America needs a national energy policy," echoed Gov. Pierre S. duPont of Delaware, another guest on the program. He suggested that the governors would provide "some prodding" as they opened an energy production conference with administration officials. The governors had been seeking the conference for the past year.

President Carter is scheduled to enter the discussions this week, but other top administration officials, led by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, were on the griddle Sunday. The governors concentrated on energy matters during the first day of their three-day conference.

While general pressure was aimed at an energy production policy that would take the heat off crisis-ridden governors, the immediate issue was the 83-day old coal strike, which Gov. Otis Bowen of Indiana said has his state on the brink of disaster.

"We are 97 percent dependent on coal for electric generation," Bowen said. "We're down to an average of about 40 days of coal for our six utilities, and we have a couple of them that are down to about the 35-day level."

Even if the tentative contract settlement reached by negotiators for coal miners and the industry is ratified by the miners, it would take at least 30 days for new coal to reach generating plants in Indiana and get into use, he said.

"If it continues to get down to a 30-day supply level, industries will have to cut back to at least 50 percent on their utilization," Bowen said. "The number of employees laid off could approach 40 to 50 percent."

Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania said if the miners fail to approve the proposed settlement, it would be disastrous for the miners and "the economic health of the nation in serious jeopardy."

The four governors made their remarks in an appearance on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers."

"I think the serious consequences to the nation as a whole, regardless of the timing of the settlement is going to be felt," Miss Ray said, "because there will be large increases in salaries, there will be additional costs, and that means that the price of coal will go even higher and that will be reflected throughout the economy."

duPont said the national problem is aggravated by the fact that the country is moving toward an energy policy which includes greater use of coal.

"It's a good policy," duPont said. "We have to be moving in that direcion. But we've got to be sure that we have the proper kind of leadership across the nation so that that coal continues to flow or industries are going to be in very serious condition."

duPont criticized Carter for not moving more firmly and quickly in seeking a resolution to the strike, but Shapp and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said measures such as Taft-Hartley Act injunctions are not sure cures.

"It's easy to say, 'get in early and pull all the strings the president can'," Brown said. "Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't."

Brown appeared on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

He disagreed with the other governors who supported more nuclear power development and called instead for "alternative supplies that are more benign and compatible with our environment."

duPont called, however, for "a balanced policy that involves nuclear, that involves getting the coal out of the ground, getting the sulphur out of the coal and burning it cleanly. We need to develop our oil resources, our solar power.

"The problem today is that we have no coherent national energy policy," duPont said. "For Heaven sakes, let's get on with doing something."

School Group Hears Federal Representative

The two-week old Citizen's Alliance for Successful Schools met for a training session Sunday with guest speaker George Cerny, a representative of the Community Relations Service.

Cerny said the small federal agency is called upon to meet with both sides in a situation involving discrimination.

He described to about 75 CASS members gathered at the Wesley Foundation Sunday how other citizens groups had helped make the implementation of court ordered desegregation plans smooth and peaceful.

In Dallas, where Cerny lives, the League of Women Voters set up the Committee for a Smooth Transition with the PTA in Dallas.

Cerny said they set up a speakers bureau, an information bureau and a media committee and were provided office space by the school system.

Committee volunteers handed out material on desegregation plan at branch libraries and established information centers and rumor control centers in each of the high schools.

In April, 1976, when the desegregation order was handed down, Cerny said the committee set up school exchange visits.

Those in charge of security when Detroit, Mich., schools were desegregated were brought to Dallas to speak to school safety and security personnel.

"Every school should have a contingency plan," Cerny said which includes at what point and under what conditions police are brought into the picture.

Cerny said the Dallas Chamber of Commerce was very active in efforts for a smooth transition an enlisted top business and community leaders in Dallas.

He said Dallas business permitted employees to take off a few hours without loss of pay, to go to talk their child's school teacher. One large business in Dallas permitted workers to take time off without losing pay to work in the schools.

Official Says Dolphin Kill Necessary

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japanese fisheries official Sunday defended the slaughter of 1,000 dolphins by Iki Island fishermen as "an act of self-defense, or a life-and-death matter."

Perhaps the dolphins, said to be clever animals, will "learn a lesson" from the massacre and stop stealing the fishermen's catch, said Takashi Hashimoto, chief of the provincial Fisheries Division.

An uproar of international protests was sparked Friday when the fishermen's cooperative in Iki Island, in southernmost Japan, lured some 1,000 dolphins to shore, clubbed them to death and dumped some of their bodies in the sea.

The fishermen call dolphins "gangsters of the sea" because they feed on cuttlefish and yellowtail snappers, the fishermen's main catch. They say their catches fell to less than two thirds of normal last year because of the dolphins.

"In the eyes of wildlife lovers at home and abroad, the killing of dolphins might appear as a merciless act, but to the local fishermen it's an act of self defense or a life-and-death matter," Hashimoto said.

Niichiro Kasui, leader of the Iki Island's fishing cooperative, said, "We are fully aware of animal lovers' feelings" against killing dolphins but after all, which is more important, dolphins or our livelihood?"

The provincial government has offered a $12 bounty for each dolphin killed. An estimated 300,000 dolphins swim in in the nearby Tsushima Strait separating Japan and South Korea.

Japan's Maritime Safety Agency was warned the fishermen that dumping the slain dolphins into the sea violates a law forbidding contamination of the ocean. The fishermen have been looking for land where the dolphins can be buried.

Carter Job Proposal Poses Many Questions For Solons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's new proposal for $11.4 billion worth of job and training programs is raising many questions in Congress.

Among them:

—To what extent should job programs be aimed at disadvantaged individuals as opposed to economically distressed regions?

—Is the government providing too many dead-end, temporary jobs for the unemployed and not enough training to help them find permanent work?

—To what extent should localities be allowed to use federal money for jobs they would have financed anyway out of their own funds?

Carter proposed the program Wednesday, asking Congress to extend the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act four more years, with $11.4 billion to be spent under it in 1979.

The act combines most of the government's job and training programs, including those for youth. The largest and best known part finances public service jobs in state and local governments and in non-profit organizations.

Under the program, the public service sector already has been expanded from 300,000 jobs last spring to 725,000 by next month. Carter proposes to maintain that tevel during 1979, and vary it later on depending on the unemployment rate.

The administration has increasingly aimed public service jobs toward disadvantaged groups.

In 1975, when emphasis was on hiring skilled workers put out of work by the recession, 43.6 percent of jobs under Title 6, the biggest public service program, went to the economically disadvantaged.

In 1977, when emphasis began to shift to the hard core unemployed, the figure was 66.5 percent, including new and old participants.

Counting only those admitted since the emphasis changed, 86 percent of the jobs go to the economically disadvantaged, and the president plans to aim future CETA programs almost entirely at them.

Some on Capitol Hill question whether this change is taking place fast enough to help high unemployment groups, such as blacks (12.7 percent) and black teen-agers (38.7 percent).

The percentage of Title 6 public service job holders who are black rose from 22.9 percent in 1975 to 25.8 percent in 1977, and to 32 percent among new enrollees.

So far the administration has announced no steps to channel jobs toward distressed areas, particularly cities in the Northeast and Midwest and poor rural areas.

At a hearing Thursday, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., accused the administration of taking "a myopic view" by concentrating on needy individuals but not needy areas. He forecast "a tug of war" in Congress between advocates of individual and geographic targeting.

Another issue is whether CETA as a whole should provide more training.

Only 52 percent of the money in Title 1, which is supposed to be the training part of CETA, actually goes for training. The rest is largely "work experience" — work in which no particularly marketable skill is taught.

Javits says training is "an enormous area for improvement" in CETA. Eli Ginzberg, chairman of the National Commission for Manpower Policy, says many CETA graduates suffer "a great letdown" when they find they still can't get a permanent job.

Ordinarily, no training goes with public service jobs. What on-the-job training there is usually involves white-collar skills, and in much of the country, that is not what a person needs to find a permanent job in private enterprise.

Another criticism of the program is that many localities use public service jobs as a way of getting federal money for jobs local taxpayers otherwise would finance.

A new study by the Brookings Institution indicates this happens, but not as often as many estimated. The study, done in 42 localities, showed only 18 percent of the public service jobs would have been financed by local taxpayers without CETA.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Matt. 9:13-29, The Living Bible

13 Then He added, "Go away and learn the meaning of this verse of Scripture, 'It isn't your sacrifices and your gifts I care about—it's that you have some pity.' My job down here on earth is to get sinners back to God—not to worry about the good people."

14 One day the disciples of John the Baptist came to Jesus and asked Him, "Why don't your disciples fast as we do and as the Pharisees do?"

15 "Should the bridegroom's friends mourn and go without food while he is with them?" Jesus asked. "But the time is coming when I will be taken from them. Time enough then for them to refuse to eat.

16 And who would patch an old garment with unshrunk cloth? For the patch would tear away and make the hole worse.

17 And who would use old wineskins to store new wine? For the old skins would burst with the pressure, and the wine would be spilled and the skins ruined. Only new wineskins are used to store new wine. That way both are preserved."

18 As He was saying this, the rabbi of the local synagogue came and worshiped Him, "My little daughter has just died," he said, "but You can bring her back to life again if You will only come and touch her."

19 As Jesus and the disciples were going to the rabbi's home,

20 A woman who had been sick for twelve years with internal bleeding came up behind Him and touched a tassel of His robe,

21 For she thought, "If I only touch Him, I will be healed."

22 Jesus turned around and spoke to her. "Daughter," He said, "all is well! Your faith has healed you." And the woman was well from that moment.

23 When Jesus arrived at the rabbi's home and saw the noisy crowds and heard the funeral music,

24 He said, "Get them out, for the little girl isn't dead; she is only sleeping!" Then how they all scoffed and sneered at Him!

25 When the crowd was finally outside, Jesus went in where the little girl was lying and took her by the hand, and she jumped up and was all right again!

26 The report of this wonderful miracle swept the entire countryside.

27 As Jesus was leaving her home, two blind men followed along behind, shouting, "O Son of King David, have mercy on us."

28 They went right into the house where He was staying, and Jesus asked them "Do you believe I can make you see?" "Yes, Lord," they told Him, "we do."

29 Then He touched their eyes and said, "Because of your faith it will happen!"

Trouble With Pollution Burgeons In Michigan

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)p — In 1975, George LeMunyon lost his first herd of dairy cows to chemical contamination. Using money from the court settlement, he bought a second. Last March, that herd too was found to be contaminated and had to be destroyed.

LeMunyon is the first Michigan farmer to be hit twice by the wave of chemical contaminants that has troubled Michigan for four years. But he fears he won't be the last.

"If we don't watch out, I'm afraid we're going to be poisoned in this country real bad," he says. "There's something radically wrong."

Michigan has wrestled with pollution from chemical plants for more than a decade. But it wasn't until 1973 that public apprehensions became widespread. That year, the fire retardant PBB — polybrominated biphenyl — was found inadvertently mixed into livestock feed.

The state still is smarting from the repercussions. The contamination cost citizens and corporations at least $60 million and led to an abortive movement to recall Gov. William Milliken. More than 600 farms were quarantined, nearly 30,000 cattle had to be destroyed and buried in a sandy pit along with hundreds of thousands of chickens and tons of butter, eggs and milk tainted with PBB.

Human health costs still are unknown. Scientists studying 1,100 Michigan residents, mostly farm dwellers, said in a preliminary report that the chemical seems to attack the body's disease-fighting system, and one farmer told a public hearing that his 4-year-old son had a liver and spleen enlarged from PBB. A state-sponsored study of 105 persons, however, was inconclusive.

Furthermore, there is no sign that the problem is going away. In the last several months PBB appeared on five widely separated farms never exposed before. LeMunyon, hit in the first PBB epidemic, found his new herd contaminated by PCP — pentachlorophenol — a wood preservative.

Howard Tanner, head of the Department of Natural Resources, wrote in a November newsletter that toxic materials and hazardous wastes "will be with us forever." Tanner cited six recent chemical threats by name and warned, "There will be more."

William Turney, environmental protection chief for Tanner's department, says: "The top priority of this department is a war on toxic chemical pollution. But I'm enough of a realist to know that the more we look, the more we'll find."

Michigan has 116 chemical plants and a history of pollution. Its troubles may seem more acute than those of other states, but Turney contends: "Any state with urban, industrial areas has problems of this kind. Whether they've found them, I don't know."

Officials at the federal Environmental Protection Agency tend to agree. In fact, not until December, when the EPA asked chemical plants to provide information on products and pollution hazards, did the agency devise ways of assessing the amount and kind of such pollution in each state.

After the PBB outbreak, Michigan passed laws requiring tests of all cattle heading for slaughter and lowering the permitted level of PBB in feed. Of the first 7,400 cattle checked under the new program, 139 had to be destroyed because of excess PBB.

To many farmers, state action seemed too little and too late. A group called the PBB Action Committee began a drive to recall Gov. Milliken. While it couldn't come close to the required 665,225 signatures in 90 days, it focused attention on the politics of the problem.

One accusation against Milliken was that he refused to fire Agriculture Commissioner B. Dale Ball, who was blamed for delays in acting on PBB. The governor acknowledges that chemical pollution will be a campaign issue this year, but says: "I can honestly say that I tried never to make my actions on PBB conditional on the political impact of what I'd do. I resent people who try to politicize it."

PBB also has jammed the courts. Settling about 700 claims cost the two major firms involved in the 1973 leakage nearly $40 million with more than 100 suits awaiting trial.

There are continuing problems with other chemicals. Eight farms were quarantined last year for contamination of PCP, the wood preservative. One herd tainted by dangerous dioxins in the preservative was destroyed. Last fall, a farmer shot 80 animals he couldn't sell because of dioxin. Six other herds were Discovery of fresh chemical pollution has become an almost weekly event, and criticism of state efforts to control is growing. State Rep. Thomas Anderson, who heads a legislative investigating committee, says, "there's strong evidence that agency inaction was often the reason" why some contaminations became crises.

Anderson cites "repeated industrial violations without penalty" and "repeated inaction of state governmental agencies in exercising their statutory powers."

Turney and Tanner concede that the department may have been lax in the past. They note, however, that not until late 1976 did Michigan's Department of Natural resources gain central authority to deal with pollution. Earlier, that responsibility was split among several state agencies and commissions. Until 1970, pollution crackdowns generally consisted of appealing to polluters to comply voluntarily with state standards.

In 1970, after mercury was discovered in the Great Lakes, two major bills were passed: a Truth in Pollution bill and the state's Environmental Protection Act.

The first law requires annual reports by firms discharging materials designated by the state. Last year, the list was expanded to 144 chemicals and 82 pesticides, with PBB making it for the first time.

Companies completing the 20 pages of forms are charged up to $9,000 to have the state watch their discharges. Failure to report discharges of materials on the list is a misdemeanor.

Last year, the state got nearly $4 million in penalties from seven firms listed as major polluters. Targets, including Ford Motor Co., Great Lakes Steel and Hooker Chemical, also agreed to spend at least $147 million correcting sources of pollution.

The state called the penalties the nation's heaviest against polluters, but Turney says federal EPA workers labeled them inadequate. The state still seeks settlements with at least seven other firms that missed water quality discharge deadlines in July.

Meanwhile, a bill aimed at tightening enforcement against chemical polluters is before the legislature. It would require firms to obtain permits before disposing of toxic wastes (the state already requires a permit to move such materials), impose liens against polluters to cover cleanup costs, require reports from companies using critical substances on the state's list, even if there is no discharge, and require bonds from firms disposing of hazardous waste. The bill also seeks funds for state facilities for chemical waste disposal and a special fund to handle pollution emergencies.

Turney says public pressure is speeding his agency's response to pollution.

"Public awareness has gotten us to the point where we've got to run before we have all the information," he says. "If people thought we were lax, they'd crucify us."

Consumer Attitudes Show Uncertainty

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research (ISR), one of the nation's oldest surveyors of consumer attitudes, has turned up evidence of a disturbing trend in consumer confidence.

For years, U.S. consumers consistently registered 80-90 on ISR's "optimism index." In 1974, however, the index sank below 60. Worse still, graphs tracking confidence and expectations among a sample population representing national sentiment now peak and plunge in a generally downward trend.

The erratic swings have confused business analysts and have made economic planning difficult because optimism influences how much consumers spend. And now, ISR's social scientists say they've identified the whipsaws as part of a long-term case of consumer jitters and wariness about buying.

This could be bad news for economic recovery. A spurt of consumer optimism largely was responsible for the measure of national prosperity that followed the '74-'75 recession. But ISR's director, Thomas Juster, doubts it will continue.

"The spree us over," he said. "Consumers may feel a lot better than they did a few years ago, but they are not going to provide more steam for expansion."

The reasons for their jitters are laid out in a forthcoming book co-authored by George Katona, a founder at ISR in 1946 who made attitudinal surveys central to its work. Katona was among the handful of scholars who argued in the 1940s that opinion research could aid business and government by finding out what consumers wanted. In his book "A New Economic Era," he says the country changed fundamentally about 1970.

From the end of World War II until that time, surveys demonstrate a belief that the public understood "the system," and how to make it function. The economy was an important source of satisfaction. People believed that their lot would improve, and their institutions, both public and private, would ease the way.

A rush of events dissolved this underlying confidence, ISR says. The Vietnam war, racial upheaval, double-digit inflation and the experience of seeing those in the highest positions of trust removed —to jail in some cases—for Watergate abuses replaced certainty with confusion. It is a state of mind psychologist Katona calls "the most destructive force against economic stability."

Consumers feel they have lost control over their lives, and, worse, that their institutions stand powerless to help, Katona says.

Before 1970, he says, people believed government stood for price stability, a prospect now so distant that it is no longer even discussed. The issue has become "how much inflation?" instead of "why inflation?" Similarly, they thought, "What goes up, must come down," and vice versa. But they look at current high housing costs and low stock-market prices, and aren't so sure.

Tired Rangers Wait For Hippopotamus To Make Appearance

SANTA ANA, Calif., (UPI) — Five tired rangers from a wild animal park remained hidden around a lake in the green Luguna Hills of Orange County Sunday hoping a hippopotamus named Bubbles would surface.

They have been there off and on for a week since the two-ton Bubbles escaped from a corral at Lion Country Safari, waddled through two fences and headed for the hills.

When she found the lake, she found sanctuary.

The rangers, three of them armed with tranquilizer dart guns, were hiding in the reeds around the lake hoping she would come out to graze. But hippos spend the daylight hours under water and feed at night.

"Bubbles was very active in the lake last night," Mrs. Jo Schetter, the park's public relations officer, said. "But she didn't come out of the water."

Bubbles broke away from the park for the third time last Sunday. The first two times, in the company of her calf, she was caught, tranquilized and taken back — once carried back in the scoop of a bulldozer.

"The rangers are staying out there for 24 hours as long as there's no fog and no danger to themselves.

"They're getting tired and very much overworked at this point. There's only a limited number of people trained in this situation. It's not as though we could call out the National Guard," Mrs. Schetter said.

On a couple of occasions the rangers, with their four-wheel drive vehicles and dart guns, had to leave when fog rolled in at night. They don't want Bubbles getting behind them when they can't see her.

Hippos have been known to bite small boats in half.

Since Bubbles' escape through the fences, one of them made of barbed wire on the Irvine Ranch property, the park's other hippos have been confined indoors.

Mrs. Schetter said they would like to get Bubbles back to her herd and her female calf.

"But we don't want her to go home by way of an inhabited area or a busy road," she said.

Publicity, Profit Main Motives For Many Energy Conferences

WASHINGTON (AP) — There may or may not be an energy shortage, depending on your point of view. But one thing is certain: There is no shortage of expensive conferences to discuss the question.

The energy crisis has spawned a new field of expertise, and in the past year or so there have been dozens of conferences designed — in part — to help industry energy experts keep pace with technological and political developments.

But in some instances, the conference sponsors appear equally interested in publicizing a particular magazine or service and often they hope to profit financially from the meeting.

DOE Employee Guidelines

The development has prompted the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) to issue new guidelines generally forbidding employees from participating in energy conferences that seek to earn a profit.

"Obviously, energy is hot right now and we're getting a tremendous number of requests for speakers and participants," said John Harris, a DOE spokesman. "We have to be a little bit careful about how we use federal people."

Harris calls the situation "a gray area." No one is suggesting that it is illegal or unethical to seek profit by sponsoring an energy conference, but some officials are uneasy about the situation.

Recent Conferences

In recent months, conferences have been held or scheduled to discuss Energy: Myths and Realities (Washington, Nov. 8-9, registration $250-$295 per person); How To Get Into the Solar Business Successfully (Washington, Nov. 28-30, registration $225); Inside the Department of Energy (Washington, Dec. 5-6, registration $250).

Similar conferences were held in New York, Florida, California and elsewhere.

One of the more ambitious conferences will begin here Monday. Sponsors of the 5th Energy Technology Conference & Exposition expect at least 1,500 people to attend the three days of meetings and another 3,000 to participate in a display of energy equipment and material.

The cost is $155, and the sponsors — including DOE itself — say all the proceeds will go toward paying the affair's expenses.

Next weekend, Columbia University's Graduate School of Business will conduct its fifth annual Columbia Energy Forum at a palacial retreat 50 miles north of New York City. About 80 industry experts, professors, government officials and reporters are expected to attend the three-day conference for which only expenses are charged.

"The place is isolated, so our attendees see each other all weekend long," said Professor Charles Stewart, organizer of the affair. "The learning experience continues day and night. The idea is to get people of various persuasions all together."

The Washington exposition and Columbia weekend are the latest versions of previously successful affairs, but sometimes the conferences have difficulty attracting enough people.

Felicity Medinger, coordinator of the Energy: Myths and Realities conference here last November, said her employer — Business Communications Co. Inc. of Stamford, Conn.— had expected to turn a profit on the affair. But only about 100 people attended.

"By the time we covered the cost of printing up the conference books and paying for the (meeting) rooms and food (luncheons) and advertising, we barely made a profit," she said. "We were lucky to make a few thousand."

Miss Medinger, whose firm also publishes Energy Magazine, said one of the main objectives behind the conference was to "get a little more interest behind it (the magazine). We wanted to get people to know that we were out there and were something of an authority."

Contacts Sought

She said another objective was to get conference attendees in touch with federal regulators. "For a lot of them, meeting with the DOE was more important than getting the information (at the sessions)."

After that conference and before the one planned by Energy Daily, a newsletter, to deal with the topic "Inside the Department of Energy," the DOE issued its guidelines forbidding participation in conferences sponsored by profit-making organizations.

Energy Daily canceled its plans, saying: "Since the conference was intended to focus on the Department of Energy and since four or five of the dozen speakers were to be officials of the department, there seems to be scant reason for trying to hold the enterprise together."

Richard Myers, an Energy Daily staffer, refused to make extensive comments about the affair.

"We ventured this idea and it didn't float," he said. "I just don't feel like resurrecting it or talking about it."

Asked if the firm hoped to make money from the conference, he said: "We hope to make money on everything we do."

Steel Mills Face Slump In Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Men who used to run blast furnaces today mow lawns and tend gardens in front of silent steel mills in many parts of Japan.

Part of the day their companies send them to classes, where they learn how they will make ever better and cheaper steel when the recession now gripping the Japanese steel industry comes to an end.

Production is down and blast furnaces are flickering out in Japan, which even American steel men say has the most efficient steel plants in the world.

The big difference from America is that nobody is getting fired or laid off — yet.

Under Japan's system of "lifetime employment" companies have a moral obligation, not easily ignored, to carry their workers through bad times. With production and profits falling, the question is how long the Japanese industry can bear the burden.

Japan could make 145 million metric tons of steel a year, if a market could be found for that much. However, the domestic economy is in a slump and exports are shrinking as American and European steel makers pressure their governments to limit imports.

In calendar year 1977 the Soviet Union was the world's leading crude steel producer, with an output of 144.8 million tons. The United States was second with 113.2 million, and Japan third with 102.4 million.

Japanese mills cut production in every quarter during 1977. The Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) now guesses that the crude steel output for the 1977 fiscal year ending March 31 will dip below the 100 million ton mark for the first time since 1972.

Two more of Japan's 68 blast furnaces were blown out Jan. 20, raising the number idled to 22. Nippon Steel Corp., an industry leader, has nine of its 25 furnaces out of operation.

Economists on the staffs of the big steel makers see little hope of a revival of demand for several years. They estimate the demand for Japanese steel in the 1980 fiscal year at 110 million metric tons at most.

Japan made only half a million tons of steel in 1946, in the depression that followed the country's World War II defeat.

Since then, the Japanese industry has been one of the wonders of modern business. In the 1950s, Japan adopted Austria's basic oxygen furnace, most efficient technique for steel making then in use.

Foreseeing the country's shipbuilding and automobile booms, industry leaders plunged billions of borrowed dollars into plants equipped with BOF and the latest modern technology. By long term contracts with the United States, Brazil and Australia, they locked up assured supplies of iron ore and coking coal.

The results were sensational. Japanese crude steel output went from 22.14 million tons in 1960 to 93.32 million tons in 1970. It crested at 119.32 million tons in 1973, the year the world was plunged into recession by the oil crisis. It has never regained that level since.

Like businessmen elsewhere, Japan's steel tycoons failed to anticipate the post-1973 recession. New and now unneeded blast furnaces have been coming on stream ever since.

Kobe Steel Corp. will kindle a new one, which will be the last, sometime in February. An older furnace will be shut down immediately to make way for the new one.

Earlier this month Japan's five largest steel makers asked the government to declare steel an "employee surplus industry."

Steel industry leaders argued that up to 25 per cent of their 200,000 employees had become superfluous. If the industry is granted "employee surplus" status, the government would have to take on part of the cost of carrying the workers, or retraining them for jobs in other industries.

No decision is likely for several months.

The market at home continues to decline. The shipbuilding industry is one of steel's best customers but launchings in 1976 were down 33 per cent from 1974. When the 1977 figures are made public they are expected to reveal a further decline.

Exports still loom large. In the current fiscal year, Japan is selling about 34.2 million tons of steel products overseas, more than one third of her output.

Shipments to the United States will run around seven million tons. However, the Carter administration's "trigger price" system for steel imports probably will ward off further gains in America.

Forcible Collection Of Rent Brings Arrest Here

Lubbock police Saturday arrested a 65-year-old retiree's landlord for robbery after the man complained that the woman had taken more than $480 from him by force after apparently deciding to collect rent earlier than usual.

A.C. Tadlock of 2213 26th St., Rear told officers he was napping about 2:15 p.m. Saturday when he awoke to find his landlord and another 65-year-old woman standing inside the apartment.

His landlord demanded the rent, and became upset when he told the woman it wasn't due, Tadlock said. When she approached the man's bed, Tadlock said he shoved the woman to the floor, but her companion pinned him down.

The two women took his wallet, he claimed, containing more than $480.

Officers arrested one woman after she drove up outside the man's home while police were taking the man's report.

Also Saturday, officers were investigating a 19-year-old Texas Tech University student's report of a man exposing himself to dormitory residents.

The student told officers he saw a naked man wearing a red scarf and driving an orange pickup about 2:47 a.m. Saturday near a dormitory on the campus.

Officers investigating the complaint said they followed an orange pickup seen leaving that area and, after a long chase, pulled the vehicle over. But when officers walked to the man's car, he drove off.

Police eventually arrested a 24-year-old white man for indecent exposure after the man's pickup was involved in a collision with a parked vehicle.

In a similar incident, a 30-year-old Uvalde Avenue woman told officers her two children had been the target of a "flasher" also.

The woman said her children were riding bicycles in the area of 40th Street and Avenue A about 4:30 p.m. Friday when a car stopped near them, its driver got out and allegedly removed his pants in front of the youngsters.

Acting on a confidential informant's tip, officers arrested a 47-year-old black woman for possession of marijuana for sale after finding 43 pre-rolled cigarettes and two plastic bags of a substance believed to be marijuana.

Two officers following up on the tip alleging marijuana had been delivered to a 306 Idalou Road club about 6:30 p.m. Saturday arrested the woman after seeing the plastic bag containing the cigarettes lying on a shelf and finding two plastic bags of the item inside a coffee pot.

Lubbock police were also investigating a woman's complaint that she was being harassed in connection with her testimony scheduled to be heard in an upcoming murder case here.

A 27-year-old masseuse scheduled to testify in the shooting death of another Lubbock masseuse said she had been told by a man seen sitting outside her firm that a certain man was "going to kill you."

James Joseph Burks of Lubbock told police two men had been bothering him for several days, but Saturday about 2 p.m. took action on their complaints. Burk said the two men tossed rocks at him while he was inside a phone booth at 6800 19th St.

Car burglars reportedly took several cases and part boxes from Richard Melbourne Whitman's car while the auto was parked outside a Lubbock motel. The San Angelo man said the incident occurred between 4 p.m. Friday and 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

Burglars removed a $250 stereo from the 3302 East Broadway home of Rudy Espinoza about 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Robert Michael Southard of 2302 Slide Road No. 39 told officers someone pried open a door to his house and then took three television sets, a $550 camera, a $40 dress, $4,950 in jewelry and $1,100 in cash between 10:30 p.m. Friday and 6:45 a.m. Saturday.

Grace Berry reported the theft of a $320 refrigerator and wardrobe closet from her 2429 27th St. home between 6 p.m. Friday and 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Pat Mills of 5215 27th St. also reported the theft of $400 in wire from his 4121 Frankfort Ave. business between Jan. 22 and Feb. 22.

Department of Public Safety investigators said Johnny Godwin was dead about 7:30 p.m. on arrival at Lubbock's Methodist Hospital.

Tax System Called Unfair To Farmers

SEALY (AP) — Texas farmers and ranchers spend up to half of their net income on property taxes while other taxpayers spend only about four percent of their income on property taxes, Attorney General John Hill said Sunday.

"In 1975, USDA figures showed net farm and ranch income in Texas was $634 million, while reports on property taxes showed farmers and ranchers paid $324 million," Hill said in a speech prepared for a meeting of the Austin County Taxpayers Association.

"By comparison, the percentage of non-farm net income needed to pay property taxes as 4.2 per cent."

Hill said the 1977 Legislature considered a plan to tax agricultural land on the basis of productivity rather than market value.

"When the plan failed by just one vote, the governor made no effort to find that vote. As a result, we still have no program to give our farmers the relief they need from our unfair property tax system," he said.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Doctor Raps Trampolines

DALLAS (UPI) — According to an Indiana orthopedic surgeon, one of the most dangerous sports in the world is being practiced in the nation's schools, recreation centers and even backyards without adequate safety precautions.

The sport is trampolining, and Dr. George Rapp called it "a disaster to the family and the state."

In a speech before the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons Saturday, Dr. Rapp said the trouble with the trampoline was "that anyone can get on them and bounce and flip and turn somersaults — but they may break their necks in the process."

Rapp reported on 34 cases of paralysis and three deaths and said most of the injuries occurred when the trampolinists were attempting somersaults or were using the wrong equipment for more complicated tricks.

"American's No. 1 all-around gymnast was killed a few years ago when he was attempting a double somersault at a camp on mini-tramp," the Indianapolis doctor said. "Certainly he had the skill."

Rapp said he became interested in trampoline-related injuries when a son's friend was paralyzed in a trampoline accident at a neighborhood gym. Since that time he has successfully banned competitive trampoline events at 35 high schools in Indiana.

"When I first started looking into trampoline injuries, the manufacturers claimed the sport was no more dangerous than basketball," he said. "Well there are very few basketball players who break their necks on the court."

Sport's Secret Weapon

Chris Evert does it. So do members of the Dallas Cowboys amid the Miami Dolphins. And they do it for as little as $450.

What they're doing is trying to control pain electronically with such miniature electric nerve stimulator as Med general's Microceptor, the smallest on the market. At this stage, no one is exactly sure why the device works, and unfortunately no one can really predict for how long the pain will be controlled.

"Sometimes players feel less pain for several hours, but a treatment may also be effective for only 30 minutes to one hour," explained James Pat Evans, team physician for the Cowboys.

CHRIS EVERT

One theory suggests that minute electrical signals are transmitted to underlying nerves which in turn transmit electrical impulses to the spinal chord. There, the "pain message" to the brain is blocked.

Whatever the reasons — and there are other theories — the device has found many friends in the professional sports arena. Along with such past and present winners as Evert, the Cowboys and Miami, word has it that Tampa Bay is doing it, too.

Everyone's Miss Brooks

Our Miss Brooks hasn't been on the air for 20 years, but it seems Eve Arden is still everyone's favorite wisecracking English teacher.

"You know, after all these years, I can hardly walk down the street without someone stopping me to say hello," said Arden recently.

Even at sea and in the air, fans pop up. Aboard the Queen Mary to Europe once, Arden was treated not only to the sounds of the sea, but also the theme song of Our Miss Brooks — being played over the ship's radio by the captain. Then on a flight from San Francisco, an enthusiastic stewardess finished up her farewell speel with "...and thank you for flying with us, Our Miss Brooks."

EVE ARDEN

But a lot has happened, particularly in TV, since Connie Brooks first passed out grades in 1952. In those early days of the medium, said Arden, "We had great autonomy. We were felt comfortable. Maybe there are too many fingers in the pie now. Often, it seems to me, shows don't really get a chance to prove themselves. You need time to find yourself, to learn to know and love the characters."

Which perhaps wasn't too hard for Arden. According to Richard Crenna, who played her favorite student Walter Denton, "All that warmth exuded on the screen as Connie Brooks or whoever, that's the real Eve Arden."

FBI's Kelly Confesses

Outgoing FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley was asked recently if he had ever been tapped by any one of three presidents under whom he served. His answer was a denial, but contained a different sort of admission.

"Nobody has ever approached me," he said. "I have never even been approached by a prostitute...I have absolutely no sex appeal.

Unfortunately, it was not Kelly's lack of sex appeal that bothered his critics in the past. In his farewell speech, Kelley tried to straighten the record. "When I became director, I was urged to 'clean house' among the upper echelons," Kelley told the press club audience. "I suppose I disappointed some people by not engaging in a dramatic shakeup among FBI executives. But I believed it was possible to change policies rather than people, particularly people as disciplined as FBI people. I was right."

CLARENCE KELLEY

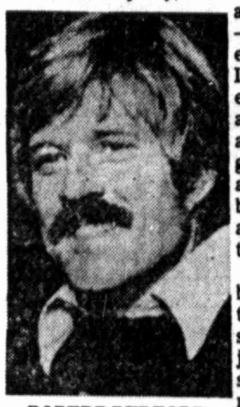

Only time will tell whether or not his succecssor, Judge William H. Webster, agrees. Until then, present FBI officials have something to think about.

Redford And Twinkies

Once one of the most approachable of actors, Robert Redford has of late shied away from interviews. But he recently sat down with a reporter for Mariah, a new conservation magazine.

Sporting his Sundance Kid moustache, and confessing a fascination for outlaws, Redford tried to tarnish his fair-haired boy image a bit with a couple of other admissions that should cheer the junk food fans and flatfooted among his followers.

"I'm basically lazy," admitted Redord, "contrary to what a lot of people write about me — that I'm sort of disciplined, energitic health freak. No so, I'd love to be able to say that I eat vegetables and fresh fruits, and that I don't eat Twinkies and Oreos as much as I do yogurt. The thing is, I eat yogurt and Oreos. I drink too much beer, probably too much wine, and I eat a lot of other things that aren't good."

ROBERT REDFORD

And he doesn't jog off those beer and cookie calories, either. "I don't like jogging," he said. "I try to force myself to jog on occasion as a kind of self-discipline, but it never really works out...if I'm going to run, I want to be chasing something or to be chased by something."

New Reynolds Romance

A sophisticated romance in the tradition of the Ernest Lubitch comedies is how Paramount is billing Burt Reynolds' next picutre, "Rough Cut." That's quite a tradition to live up to, if you recall the "Lubitch touch" on such films as "Ninotchka," "Heaven Can Wait," and "To Be or Not To Be."

BURT REYNOLDS

But they're giving it the old school try, with David Merrick producing, Blake ("Pink Panther") Edwards directing and Larry Gelbart, of TV's M*A*S*H, scripting the adaptation of Derek Lambert's novel, "A Touch of the Lion's Paw."

Reynolds will get to work his charms overtime on the project as a jewel thief who emerges from retirement to pull off a seemingly impossible burglary. Production is set to begin in June, with locations in Europe.

Who's Who On Life

The 40th edition of Who's Who is having a tougher time than usual getting into print, but it's their own fault. Since the 38th edition, the editors have invited their biographees to submit personal statements called "Thoughts on My life." Needless to say the personal sentiments seem to be springing eternal.

Noting the editors' problem, The New York Times decided to peruse the current edition and see if the results have been worth the effort. Buried in the 3,614 pages are such gems of wisdom as:

"I have always been suspicious of a man who calls himself 'a middle-of-the roader'. In the middle of the road one finds dead possums, dead skunks and yellow lines for miles." (Dale Coffman, lawyer.)

"Methodology is the last refuge of a sterile mind." (Marianne L. Simmel, psychologist).

And then a sneak preview of the new volume found actor Sylvester Stallone announcing: "Once in a man's life, for one mortal moment, he must make a grab for immortality; if not, he has not lived." Didn't Anthony Newley put that to music once?

BIG BAND BASH — The sound of swing will be back, for one night at least, when the musical greats of the '40s — as they were and as they are today — star in a national public television special on March 18. Among those recapturing the feel, style and music of days gone by will be (top to bottom, left to right) Maynard Ferguson, Dizzy Gillespie, the Pied Pipers, Woody Herman and Count Basie.(NEA Photo)

Oil-Rich Turkmenia Bears Soviet Stamp

ASHKHABAD, Turkmenia, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — A sleek, red-and-white bus brakes at a camel crossing. Nearby, a hydrofoil boat skims the placid waters of the canal that is changing the burning Kara Kum desert into farm fields.

Turkmenia, a Soviet republic long feared as a haven for cutthroat highwaymen and the Mongol hordes of Genghis Khan, is a hot, dry land where old and new struggle for dominance.

Located along the Afghanistan border and across the Kopet Dag mountains from Iran, the republic nearly the size of France provides 20 per cent of the oil and natural gas for the Soviet Union.

What once was the useless, burning Kara Kum desert is now sliced by the 621-mile Kara-Kum canal, which has spawned irrigated farming and increased cotton production eight-fold since 1925.

New apartment buildings adorned with slogans touting Communist Party achievements overshadow the older homes built by Turkmenians, more than half of whom are Turkic-speaking Moslems, while the rest are mostly Russians and Uzbeks.

But Turkmenian people hold fast to tradition, and as recently as two years ago authorities complained of fathers who practiced the age-old custom of selling daughters into marriage — sometimes for as much as $16,400.

Turkmenian women have abandoned their face veils, but most most still wear the long dresses of swirling, red, blue and yellow cloth, scarves tied below their neck and dark coats. Only the faces of most women are exposed — even among young students at the state university.

In the central fruit market in the capital of Ashkhabad, bearded Turkmenian men squat among the piles of hay selling sweet melons and drinking hot green tea from bowls.

Unlike other Central Asian peoples, Turkmenians maintain tribal and clan divisions, with the intricate symbols of tribes woven into the 104,000 square yards of hand-woven rugs produced annually in the republic.

Under pressure from authorities who believe religion has kept a backward people from progressing, the Moslem religion appears to be dying out. Worshipers in Ashkhabad have no mosque and must use a converted building.

"Islamic traditions helped to keep women down," said Bibi Palvanova, the Turkmenian Minister of Education, who was herself sold into marriage at the age of 16 in 1938.

The grip of tradition is not surprising in a republic dotted by the ruins of civilizations dating as far back as the third century B.C.

Near the town of Mary, 200 miles east of the capital, are miles of fortress walls left from the old city of Merv that reached its height in the 7th century as a main center of Islamic learning and a city for four million people.

Since then the territory has changed hands continuously as warring tribes ransacked the land, from Genghis Khan in the 13th century to the Uzbeks in the 18th century and finally the Russians in the 1800s.

Although Merv and Turkmenia served as a crossroads between Asia and Europe, the Kara Kum desert that covers 80 percent of the area and hits an unbearable 119 degrees in the summer has never offered its inhabitants more than a meager chance to scratch out a living.

The capital of Ashkhabad has been completely rebuilt since a devastating earthquake in 1948 but still looks like a dusty, desert town.

Much of the housing is crowded and outer walls are peeling, roads are dusty and unpaved, and although the city is sprouting acres of new apartment buildings, block after block of homes are tiny adobe-style houses.

Yet Turkmenians don't seem to measure their living standards by what they have now — they mark it by the distance they've come since the land was a nation of nomads rather than a Soviet republic.

Authorities say that in 1917 there were no books, magazines or newspapers in the Turkmenian language, and educational expenditures amounted to 20 cents per person a year.

But in a recent year, the average person received $130 worth of education a year and almost four million copies of books were printed in the native tongue. The republic now also boasts more than 3,000 libraries.

Turkmenia produces more than 50 billion cubic meters of natural gas and five million tons of cotton a year. The canal, which sports barge traffic and hydrofoil boats, has turned 980,000 acres of once-lifeless desert into irrigated farm fields.

Such growth has brought the region closer to the standard of living in the rest of the Soviet Union, but also has created enormous manpower and housing shortages in which some families must wait up to three years for apartments.

Groups Hit Ban On TV Sugar Ads

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A staff proposal that could lead to a ban on children's television advertising for sugared cereal, candy and snack foods is under attack from all sides even before the Fedeal Trade Commission takes it up.,

Public interest groups that have been pushing the sugar issue for years say the proposal should be stronger. For different reasons, cereal makers and the broadcast industry don't like it either.

When the four FTC commissioners meet Tuesday, they will consider a staff recommendation for:

—A ban on TV commercials aimed at children under age 12 for "those sugared products most likely to cause tooth decay."

—A requirement that people who advertise to children under age 12 for any sugared product also fund public service announcements preaching good nutrition and dental health.

The staff proposal says many cereals being advertised to children are more than half sugar. TV advertisers aiming their commercials at children too young to understand their selling purpose are caught in a "sugar derby" to maintain their market positions, it said.

The recommendations in part reflect the philosophy of two staff members, Tracy Westen and Albert Kramer, who Chairman Michael Pertschuk brought with him to the commission. They were once involved in a television reform consumer group.

But Robert Choate, whose testimony about sugared cereals during a congressional hearing several years ago helped start the controversy, was critical of the proposals for not going far enough.

He said they would ban candy ads to pre-schoolers "while apparently leaving afternoon and evening advertising of household caustics untouched. The latter products have written child warnings on the labels; Life Savers do not."

Peggy Charren, head of the Boston-based Action for Children's Television whose petition prompted the proposals, also said they did not go far enough. But she said she was happy the FTC was finally responding, and "at least now we're in the ball game."

The Cereal Institute called the proposals misguided. There is less total sugar in a one-ounce serving of a presweetened cereal than in a medium apple or a six-ounce glass of canned orange juice, it said.

"Pre-sweetened cereals offer children vitally needed nutrition at breakfast while contributing only a small amount of the sugar they consume each day," it said.

The National Association of Broadcasters said "if a product is hasmful it should be dealt with in the marketplace."

A Capsule View Of Tastes, Interests And Attitudes

...in graffiti

Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel used to sing, "The words of the prophets are written on the subway walls, tenement halls..." And it's true that some of today's mot creative writing appears on the walls of public places.

Here are some especially innovative offerings from the "Encyclopedia of Graffiti":

—I'd give my right arm to be ambidextrous.

—Death is nature's way of telling you to slow down.

—Don't hate yourself in the morning — sleep till noon.

—Dracula wears dentures.

—Retain your humanity. Cash it in when the price goes up.

—Cinderella married for money.

—Hummingbirds never remember the words to songs.

The demented Marquis de Sade was as gentle to his souffles as he was cruel to his lady friends.

Notorious Lucretia Borgia was praised for her steamed stuffed artichokes; unfortunately, she was said to throw in a pinch of arsenic along with the garlic.

These facts were uncovered by Martin and Dorothy Blinder, who concluded that savory foods have throughout history accomplished unsavory behavior. Here are some authenic favorite dishes of the infamous from the Blindres' "The Lucretia Bogia Cookbook."

...in bad dressers

Politicians are among the few Americans who seem to cultivate reputations as bad dressers. Perhaps they fear that custom-made shirts and ties of fashionable width might suggest to taxpayers they are dipping into the public till.

Hence, few tears were probably shed when Washington magazine recently drew up a list of the capital city's "Best-Known Worst-Dressed Men." Among those who made the list were:

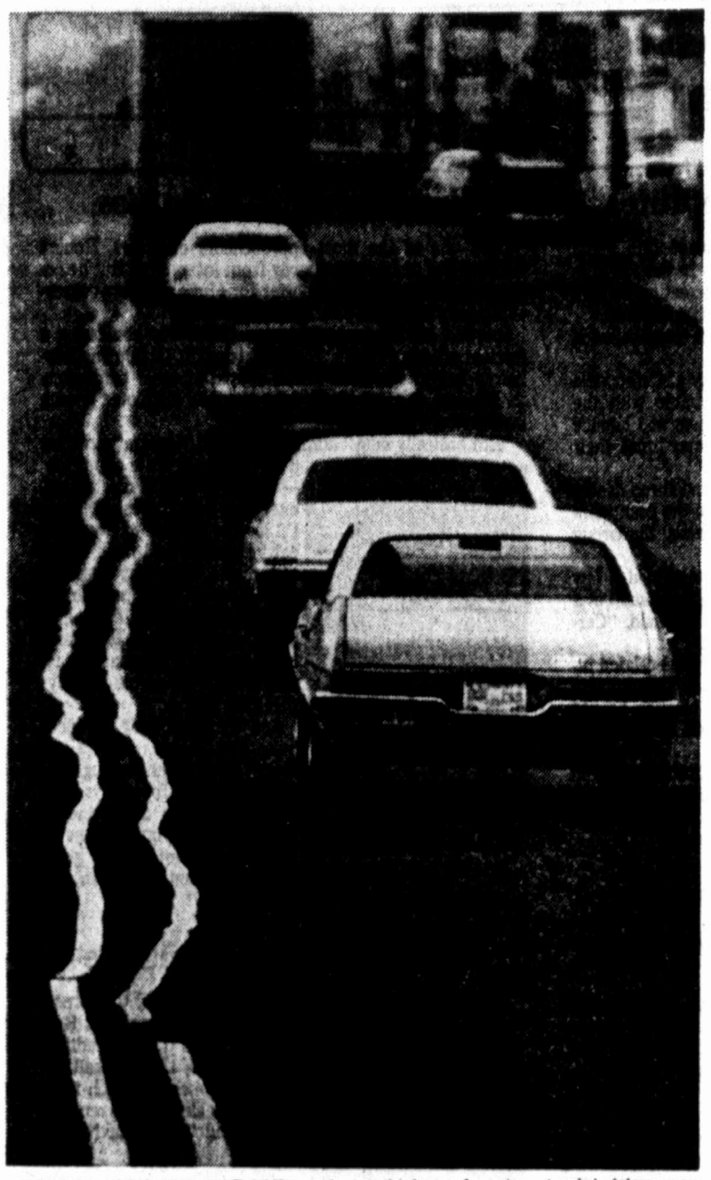

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance (for the "Old-boy Rumpled Look")

Representative Bob Carr of Michigan.
Senator Carl Curtis of Nebraska.
Representative Bob Eckhardt of Texas
House Speaker Tomas P. "Tip" O'Neil.
Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.
Representative Charles Wiggins of California.
Presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan.

Mike Riordan, former basketball pro.

And guess who was voted onto the list for his "polyester and wool sweater look?" None other than president Jimmy Carter.

Administrative Problems Linked To Overpayments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government disability programs for the aged, blind and disabled have made overpayments of about $64 million a year because of administrative problems, a report released Sunday said.

The General Accounting Office, which evaluated the two disability programs administered by the Social Security Administration, also said that about 46 percent of the 498 cases it reviewed were delayed unnecessarily. Most of those delays were caused by a lack of administrative action, it said.

Supplemental Security Income serves the needy aged, blind and disabled. In addition, there is a disability income program for workers who have made substantial contributions to the Social Security system. Claimants may apply for both, but SSI benefits are supposed to be reduced or eliminated if a person begins receiving disability payments.

The report, requested by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., found that the two programs have different payment systems. which have led to $64 million in annual overpayments, most of which is not recovered, GAO said.

GAO found that the major reasons for delays were the failure of district Social Security offices to establish claims-processing goals and inadequate supervision.

GAO's report recommended that district offices establish time processing goals and a management review system and that the disability insurance and SSI payment mechanisms be realigned.

The report said that Social Security already is taking steps to rework the payment systems.

Patrol Car Crash Kills Deputy Sheriff

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP) — A collision between two sheriff's patrol cars on their way to answer a burglary call Sunday killed one deputy and injured three others, the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department reported.

Deputy Gregory Low, 30, and his partner, Reserve Deputy Charles Plumleigh, 21, were crossing an intersection in this desert community 70 miles northeast of Los Angeles, said Deputy Jim Borland, when they crashed into a second car. Low was dead on arrival at Antelope Valley Hospital Medical Center, and Plumleigh was reportedly in critical condition. The two deputies in the other car were not seriously hurt.

Onslaught Of Locusts Feared

LONDON (UPI) — Men are fighting and killing each other in the war in the Horn of Africa while in the soil beneath them an old and implacable enemy of both sides is beginning to stir.

The locusts are breeding again in worrying numbers — the voracious insects that were the eighth biblical plague of Egypt and whose last great migration over the present war zone of Ethiopia and Somalia, in 1958, stripped the earth of 80,000 tons of food a day.

There were an estimated 40 billion locusts in a single swarm that covered 400 square miles in that outbreak. And if anything even approaching that order should happen again — an unlikely but not impossible prospect at this point — the scientists who would pool their knowledge to minimize the damage would find it infinitely more difficult to work effectively.

"If tanks and soldiers and fighting aircraft are in the area, it obviously won't be as easy for our teams to operate — especially the planes spraying insecticide," said Chris Hemming, an assistant director of the Center for Overseas Pest Research.

Recently the center, which has a long and worldwide reputation in the fight against locusts and other pests, sent Jeremy Roffey, one of its experts, to the locust breeding areas in Saudi Arabia, The Yemen Arab Republic, Oman and the United Arab Emirates to determine what measures will be necessary to head off a serious outbreak.

"It isn't panic stations yet," Hemming said, "but the situation is certainly worth following closely and Roffey will help do that."

Before heading for Arabia Roffey stopped off in Tanzania where bands of hoppers — locusts that migrate on the ground — have been reported from the Wembere plains in the central part of the country. For more than a month Saudi Arabian ground teams assisted by spraying aircraft have been attacking other locust swarms covering more than 100 square miles near Jizan on the southern Red Sea coast of Saudi Arabia.

And unofficial reports reaching the center from East Africa indicate there are probably sizeable concentrations building up in Ethiopia and Somalia.

The main cause of the upsurge is the same as it must have been centuries ago when locusts ravaged the crops of the first farmers —unusually heavy, widespread and prolonged rainfall. This has been turning the soil in the countries around the Gulf of Aden into fertile breeding areas since October 1977.

Repeated rainfall thereafter in large areas of Arabia and East Africa have also made these highly suitable for breeding.

Filter Queen Home Sanitation System Among Popular Lines At Smallwood's

At Smallwood's, 3019 34th St., owners Eugene and Evelyn Kerr are pleased to announce the return of Reuben Loggins, Jr. to that firm as salesman-repairman, coming back after a two-year absence.

Reuben returns just in time to help with the Golden Anniversary Celebration of the all-new Filter Queen Home Sanitation System, "the only vacuum that cleans carpets, drapes, upholstery and the air you breath at the same time, quietly and efficiently!"

(The Filter Queen is said to be the only vacuum that does not suffer suction "slow-down" as the bag fills. Filter Queen removes 99.5 per cent of the impurities in the air as you vacuum, so . . . come by and let us show you this ultimate in vacuums!)

Other Lines, Parts

Smallwood's also carries a complete line of Eureka, Hoover, Kirby, Rexair, Powr-flite and Sunbeam Vacs, as well as parts and bags for most other brands.

Steam cleaners also are available at a moderate cost.

And note this:

Electrophonic stereos, Sanyo, Midland, Teknika and Philco TVs are available at the same location, along with repairs on all makes of stereos and television sets by technician Ron Wright.

Smallwood's also supplies the area with the Muntz Home theater TV with the huge 54-inch diagonal screen and remote control, also supplying Sanyo video recorders.

With more than a quarter century in Lubbock, Smallwood's has earned quite a following, and its products and service are designed to give lasting satisfaction, needless to say.

"You'll like Smallwood's way of doing business; you'll appreciate the value.

Remember the location, at 3019 34th St., phone 795-5253, with off-street parking, and with products that need no introduction.

Lock Assortment, Tools For Garden, Home, Builder, All At Childress Firm

"Security" is very much in the minds of most people today. And properly so.

It would be foolish, and likely impossible, to seriously consider security for the home or business without attention to the locks . . . such as dead bolts, etc.

And this is where Childress Hardware comes in, for Childress for years has stocked the finest in security hardware. The knowledgeable personnel there will be glad to discuss one's door fastener needs, providing the right lock for the situation at hand.

Not only at this time when crime seems to dominate in so many news reports, but for the entire past half-century, Childress Hardware, at 902 Main, has stocked needs for every season, the practical hardware items appreciated throughout the region.

Outdoor Tool Needs

"It also is pointed out that just as soon as the winter weather abates, most of us are anxious to turn attention to the challenges for house, yard and garden improvements; a busy outdoor time of year is fast approaching.

The correct tools and equipment can be the big item in convenience and accomplishment, whether the task is lawn and garden work or even a remodeling job for the home."

This is a store that meets the season's needs.

For example, do these items have a function in your plans:

Pruning saws, garden hose, sprinklers (from the smallest to the most elaborate), reels for the garden hose, fertilizer spreaders, walking garden plows, rakes, hoes and spades, shears, trimmers, hose, etc.

For Home Improvement

Then for the home handyman or even the professional builder who appreciates good hand tools, there is a wide stock, including the respected name of Stanley, Crescent, Thorson, Nicholson, Bluegrass, Disston, Lufkin, Plumb and others long associated with quality and integrity in tool-making.

On and on the list could go in enumerating the lawn and the building needs provided at Childress Hardware, but suffice it to say that "if it is in the hardware line, you can get it there.

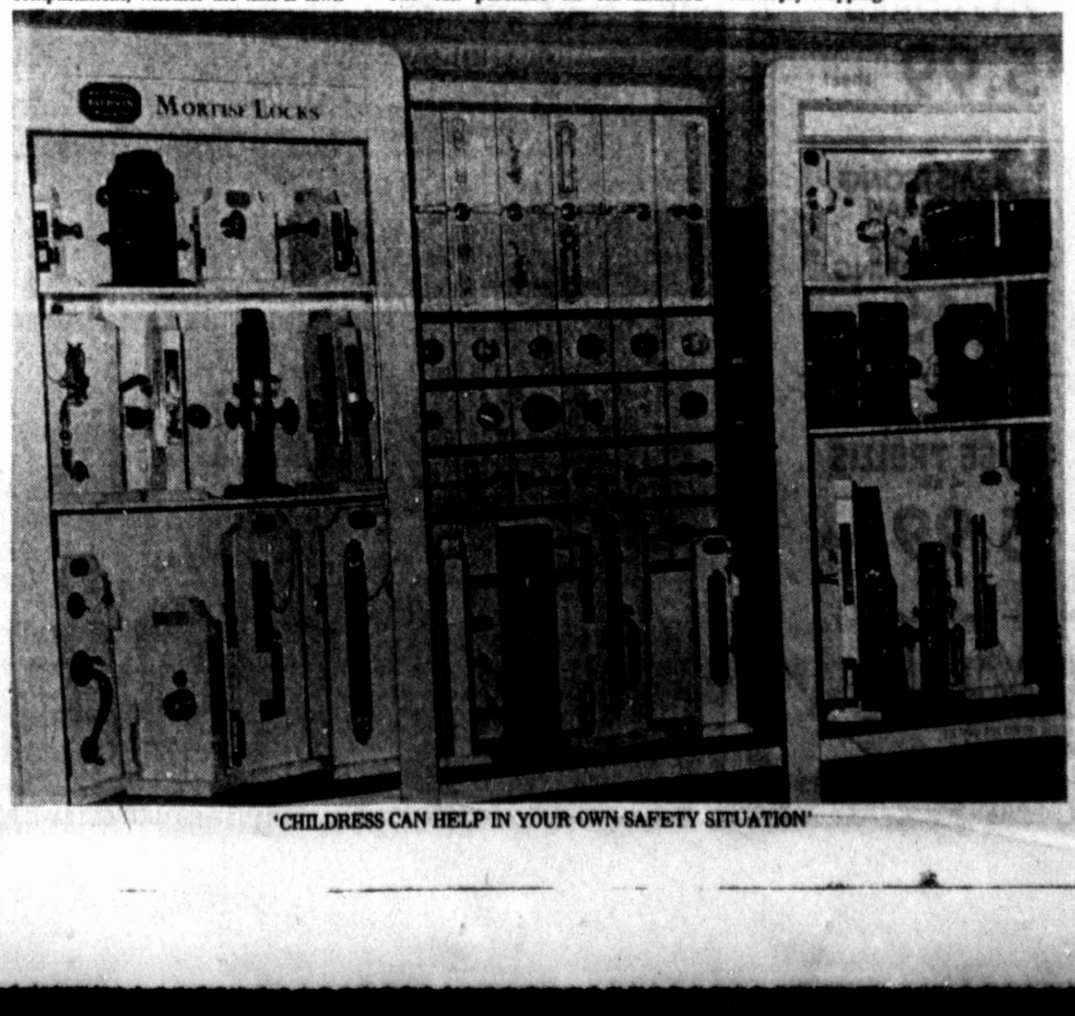

One can purchase an old-fashioned sprinkling can or a lawn watering device that negotiates your yard; a well pulley or a lamp chimney; actually more than 10,000 different items.

Childress Hardware continues as a popular place with carpenters and craftsmen, who make it headquarters for nails of all sizes, as well as a wide range of other fastenings including stove bolts, capscrews, carriage bolts, machine screws, metal screws, wood screws and brass screws, chain, rope — you name it, for home, industrial or farm use.

Cabinet Hardware

The Fred Childress Hardware also stocks one of the most extensive line of cabinet hardware in the city, with latest designs in hinges, pulls and latches attractively displayed. Here again brands such as Stylecraft, Christensen, Phylrick and Pfanstiel are indicative of top quality and design.

With all this stock, one might have the wrong conception — that the store is messy and ill-arranged — but this is not the case. At Fred Childress Hardware, 902 Main St., the entire stock is grouped for easy viewing and selection. It is a neat, attractive store in which the wife can enjoy shopping.

'MUCH MORE THAN A PAINT STORE ALONE'

Felix West Paints, With Convenient Clovis Road Address, Serving Region

"Much more than a paint store alone", Felix West Paints, on Clovis Road east of University Avenue, stocks fully to justify the invitation:

"Get it all at Felix West."

And most often there are some real bargains in discontinued items, remnants, etc., making it advantageous to check the store frequently for special savings.

Open Saturdays

Another item of customer consideration is the long hours observed every weekday. Felix West Paints is open from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays; yes, Felix West is open all day Saturdays.

General Hardware

Thousands of general hardware items and scads of other products contribute to the "difference that is Felix West Paints".

Colony paints, Armstrong and Congoleum ... these are among the names that spell true quality and availability for the demands of every season; always at Felix West.

Felix West has a pipe threader as an added service, enabling cutting and threading in every pipe need (new pipe only). A good stock of pipe also is provided.

Located just one block east of University on the Clovis Highway (2319 Clovis Road), Felix West not only is one of the easiest stores to find (look for the distinctive signs), but it provides all the popular and even hard-to-find hardware items that make a trip there worthwhile.

Whether one selects from the Colony paint stock or chooses from the wide inventory of hand and power tools, pipe fittings, shop items, inexpensive gas or electric bathroom heaters, etc., the price and quality is unmistakably the best — a tradition well practiced and protected at Felix West Paints in its one big Lubbock location.

Felix West is no newcomer to Lubbock or to the hardware and paint trade, and he is unusually adept at stocking the right items for South Plains clientele.

Lubbock Kash & Karry Wholesale Grocery Tells 'Money-Saving Truth'

"What percentage of your income is budgeted for food needs?

"Quite likely, whatever the amount, it can be trimmed to a very apparent extent by patronizing the Lubbock Kash & Karry Wholesale Grocery."

"Many of you have profited — for months — by checking the ads of Lubbock Kash & Karry Wholesale Grocery on these pages, and purchasing accordingly. (Selecting at the same time from the hundreds of other items already marked at 'rock bottom' at this popular Lubbock grocery that recently celebrated its second anniversary).

"Others of you possibly have yet to learn the money-saving truth . . . that Lubbock Kash & Karry Wholesale Grocery can be a tremendous friend to the family budget.

Certainly, all will agree that it is advantageous to shop more carefully than ever before . . . for price and value. Then . . . be sure and check the Lubbock Kash & Karry ad.

(Not only this week, but check each week on representative money-saving staple items provided by this distinctive firm at 901 N. Ave. Q.

"Did you know that groceries still can be purchased in Lubbock at rock-bottom prices — and — with full carry-out and sacking service?

"If you are shopping elsewhere, you may be doing much of the work yourself, and still be paying too much; so — try Lubbock Kash & Karry Wholesale Grocery and pocket the savings!"

Located at 901 N. Ave. Q, phone 747-6033, this firm is Lubbock's only independently and wholly owned and operated wholesale grocery.

Low Overhead

It takes pride in "selling for less," a policy made possible by its cash arrangement, low overhead, purchases directly from the manufacturer, its policy of "pick it up yourself and save the difference," and local warehousing.

Co-owners are Tommy Toombs and Noble Sides, with Toombs as manager. Sides, formerly with the Ben E. Keith Co., enjoys a wide acquaintance in the area, as does Tommy who also is a longtime Lubbock resident. Both are on the job to give their personal attention.

In its fully-stocked quarters on North Avenue Q, Lubbock Kash & Karry sells in quantities as small as one-half case lots, and packaged meats, etc., by the package.

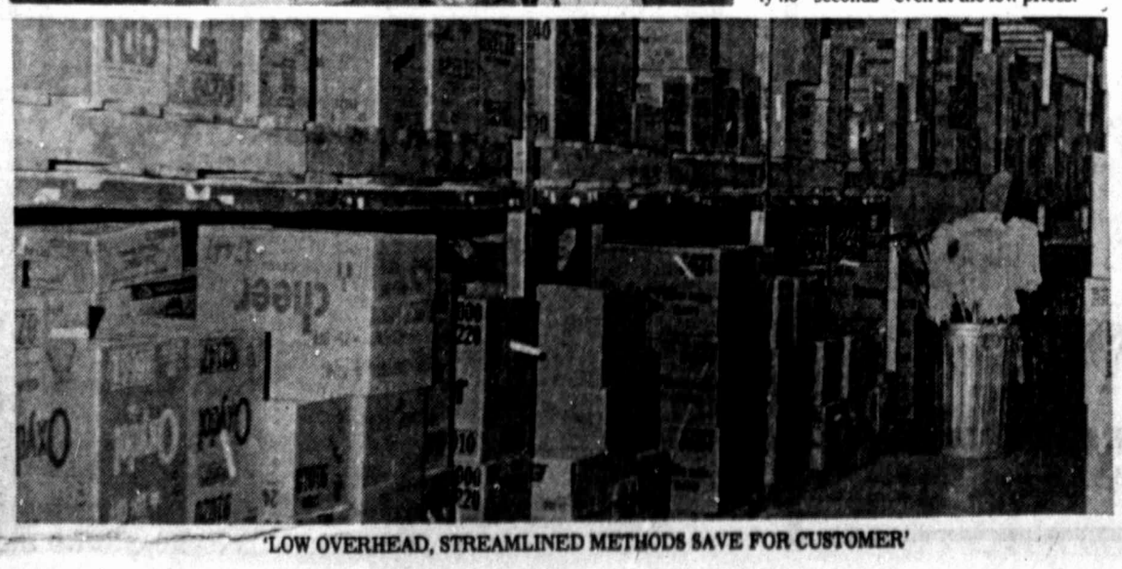

A very good stock of refrigerated products, including these packaged meats, is maintained.

The firm has enjoyed acceptance and appreciation of those even coming long distances to take advantages of the prices and selection. More than 1,600 items are included in the stock that veritably affords "anything for the grocery business," and housed in a big 6,000 sq.ft. building at the north Lubbock location.

Everything is top quality, with definitely no "seconds" even at the low prices.

Business & Industrial Review

SKILL, KNOWLEDGE AND RIGHT EQUIPMENT — Shown with latest machines at Dubose Automotive and Machine Shop are Doug Dubose, Tim Rowlette and Weldon Coffman with a boring bar and a new flow bench, both pieces of equipment said to be the only ones in town. The firm can bored down to 1 1/2 inch, as one of its services, providing an added benefit when small foreign cars, even mowers and other small motors are involved, together with the "big jobs." The flow bench helps to develop top performing engines, checking air flow in heads, intake manifolds, carburetors, etc.

Dubose Automotive & Machine Shop Is Full-Service Facility

"We have been telling you how very much Dubose Automotive & Machine has to offer; now it is easier than ever to see for yourself."

Dubose, at 1520 19th St., phone 765-8429, actually can handle any machine work for auto, truck and irrigation engines, in addition to its full-service garage, all at one convenient location.

The big shop now is compltely re-arranged, with the modern, efficient machines now grouped in an area where the customer cannot help but note the quality of tools and workmanship provided.

(Some modern machine shop installations are the only of their type in Lubbock, it is reported, such as the new Superflow 110 Flow Bench that checks the airflow in the total induction system.)

In the garage, tune-ups and other quality-type service are capabilities.

Even with all other advantages afforded at the firm, the most important could well be the statement of policy:

"Our goal is to satisfy every customer, providing quality parts and service at least expense. We do what is needed, no more. If we find your auto needs additional repairs we contact you before doing more than you expected."

A trained staff is dedicated to this business concept, and every one of this staff is sent to any available training schools in the area to keep them "in the know" about the fast-changing automobile world.

Major and minor tune-ups are a specialty in the automotive section, and a guarantee of 6,000 miles or six months with limited warranty is provided.

Not only does Dubose do work for the individual motorist, but also for other garages and dealers.

The machine shop specializes in steel sleeved Vega short blocks, being among the first to offer this rebuilding service.

Dubose also now has the ability to bore small cylinders with its new equipment, enabling boring of lawn mower cylinders, motorcycles, etc.

Other service includes valve grinding, valve guide knurling and valve seat and guides replacement, resurfacing of heads and engine blocks, piston pin fitting, rod resizing, vat cleaning, brake drum grinding, disc rotor grinding, crankshaft exchange, Kwik-way bead blasting, and more.

Meet Mr. and Mrs. Dubose (Doug and Nancy) who are lifelong Lubbock residents and who have gathered around them a staff fully qualified to serve in a manner that deserves one's patronage.

Local Gill Construction Firm Tells Saving In Quality Home Improvement

"When your home's overhangs start to deteriorate, the entire residence begins to get that 'run down' look. Right?"

So . . . it is then time to learn of a Lubbock firm, Gill Construction Co., that utilizes the United States Steel soffit and fascia system that is more than just a cover-up for overhangs; it is more like a whole house beauty treatment.

Three (and even more) factors should cause one to give Gill special consideration:

(1) Savings of up to 30 per cent are posted in a limited-time offer;

(2) Gill Construction Co. is an established "home town" firm, one that will be here tomorrow to stand behind its contract job and products;

(3) Gill can show you how you never need paint your home again (and with the rising costs on every hand, doesn't this appeal?)

Gill Construction Co., 1926 34th St., phone 747-5513, headed by Ike Gill who has 13 years in related business in Lubbock and the South Plains, is glad to give full details, explaining without obligation how you never need paint your overhang and facia board again ... by installing USS materials. Call collect, visit the office, or write P. O. Box 333, Lubbock.

Ike Gill can show the many, many advantages of fascia and siding, both or either, and his capable crew can install anywhere in the area — fast and immediately.

"Wouldn't it be great to eliminate painting forever? It can be done, thanks to Ike Gill and the USS buildings materials. Brick homes with wood overhang most certainly can benefit from the system, he points out.

And remember, USS siding also is installed by this Lubbock firm.

Furthermore: there is a 30-year guarantee on material and labor.

No down payment is required. Financing is available! The program is acceptable to FHA — Title I, Gill reports.

Consider the USS materials and their advantages, including:

(1) Available in a number of colors; (2) never needs painting; (3) goes up easily over old wood, asbestos, stucco or masonry walls; (4) superior insulation against heat, cold and outside noises; (5) does not support combustion; (6) will not peel, blister, flake, or warp; and (7) fast installation with professional results.

"So, homeowners take notice" it is true, with no gimmicks. You need never paint your home again.

A LAMP FOR EVERY DECOR, EVERY PREFERENCE

House Of Shades & Lamp Repair Aids New Look For Any Room, Any Season

"Getting spring fever? Tired of the inclement weather and anxious to get on with home decorating, etc., as is traditional at this time of year?

"Likely new shades or lamps would be a very good beginning, good weather or foul! Or maybe you received a lamp for Christmas, but the shade doesn't quite match the decor of your room."

In either event, why not make a visit now to the House of Shades and Lamp Repair, 2710 50th St.?

Even for those familiar with the House of Shades and Lamp Repair, a visit there at this time will reveal added services, newest shades and a full staff to afford every customer consideration.

Unique lamps of distinction, quality lamp shades, replacement lamp parts and glass, expert lamp repair, custom building, re-wiring, re-design and re-finish (to make your lamp a shade better) in essence comprise the business scope of this better lamp house.

Some months ago the House of Shades and Lamp Repair made giant strides, doubling its floor space, as example, to better serve. Consequently, more merchandise was stocked and more convenient display was enabled.

From an outsider's viewpoint, it is noted that actually the expansion in physical facilities was simply another step in many progressive moves at this popular Lubbock firm.

"Come on out and let us personally thank you for your trade and confidence that has made our steady growth possible."

The House of Shades and Lamp Repair is in its seventh year of service.

Even at its beginning, this Lubbock firm recognized the needs in its field, and stocked and served accordingly. Since that date, even more has been learned of customer preferences, and consequent growth and expansion has followed. Yes, the House of Shades and Lamp Repair is here to stay!

Owners Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Houchin report that continually they are able to get more and better stock.

The House of Shades has complete facilities for lamp wiring, repair and rebuilding. One's favorite antique, bottle or vase can be professionally converted to a lamp to specifications. "We'll make a lamp out of any old thing!"

Mr. and Mrs. Houchin point out:

Shades, though a most important part of any decor, do get soiled and worn. A new shade or repairs on present ones present the solution.

"Now, when we say 'lamp shades', we are not talking about only the conventional hardback or stretched shade as many people might think. There are glass shades in many sizes and colors, ball shades, small shades for chandeliers, wooden, silk, metal shades, etc. We have them all."

Special pride is taken in custom shades and in custom lamp building.

"Simply bring us your idea and we will do the rest."

Diet Center, On 50th Street, Explains Weight Loss Method

"If you weigh more than you prefer, more than you should, you have lots of company!"

There is simple solution, however, that is satisfying, economical and lasting; it is the program available at Diet Center, 2321-A 50th St. in Lubbock, phone 793-5444, where thoroughly experienced counselors draw upon all facilities of the huge Diet Center resources and knowledge to work for you, too!

Thoroughly Experienced

Meet these counselors, Marianne Maestas and Glenda Bratcher, each with many years in the weight reducing business and who are folks you likely already know, as they formerly were with another firm in Lubbock.

"We are acquainted with a number of weight reducing programs, and we are thoroughly sold on the Diet Center method," they emphasize when comparing the available routes to less weight.

An adjustable program, to fit the needs of the individual, is provided, and all counseling is private.

At a very, very modest price, one may avail herself or himself of daily counseling during the weight loss period, counseling during stabilization, and further aid during later maintenance for a lifetime of weight control.

For Diet Control

Essentially a diet program, the Diet Center method also advises light exercise.

With varied programs available, it could be pointed out that possibly the most popular is a 6-week program in which women usually lose from 18 to 30 pounds, with men losing even more.

The counselors at the Diet Center, 2321-A 50th St., are happy to work closely with the client's physician if there is a medical problem involved.

To simplify explanation, it could be said that the most popular Diet Center program takes from two to six weeks with an expected weight loss of one-half to one pound a day. When the desired weight has been attained, a sustaining program, at no further charge, is set up. Then if the old programs of stuffing away food return as fatty deposits, a refresher weigh-in quickly sets one on the right path.

The Diet Center approach is strictly dietary, involving a series of tasty menus that are inexpensive and easy to prepare. The diets help keep the blood sugar stable, serve as natural dieuretics and keep away hunger pangs!

"You'll feel well, and if you persevere, in no time at all you'll begin to look as great as you feel!"

Inquiries Invited

A dietary supplement that's part of the over-all program supplies an invert sugar that gives immediate energy and reduces the craving for sweets; it is not a drug or medication.

Full details are gladly given regarding all facits of the Diet Center plan that involves no shots, drugs or gimmicks. But don't delay; let Glenda or Marianne enter the picture now; call 793-5444 for appointment.

Hallie's Thrift Shoppe Providing New Year Wardrobe Economy, Fashion

Was wardrobe expenditure sacrificed for other gifting needs during the holiday season?

Is your clothing budget less than preferred?

The answer to either likely will focus attention on a sensible solution . . . recognition of Hallie's Thrift Shoppe as a great place to trade.

Hallie's Thrift Shoppe, 3510 Ave. Q, can appreciably aid the fashion need and the economy need "for you, too" in every season of the year.

It's a reality: One can beat inflation, beat the rising apparel costs, by depending upon Hallie's Thrift Shoppe for the right apparel at lowest prices.

At Hallie's Thrift Shoppe there is lots of new merchandise plus consignment items that are strictly "first class" that can be a smart solution to the wardrobe budget.

With the seasonal expenses now present, and with the increased costs at every hand, it is exciting to find a firm that can greatly reduce some of this cash outlay.

One can dress smartly for every season, and at a cost "that can be lived with," thanks to Hallie's Thrift Shoppe's full selection and unique business concept.

Hallie's, primarily a resale shop for better merchandise, has been at its present 3510 Ave. Q location (with off-street parking) more than four years, with owner-operator Hallie Payne formerly at another Avenue Q location for five years.

Special-occasion apparel and fantastic buys in winter and party clothing are now available.

The exceptional stock, attractively displayed with plenty of room for selection and fitting, involves top quality new and nearly new formal wear, school and street wear, etc.

There are clothes for the entire family (sold on consignment) and the prices are most appealing.

"If you have items suitable for consignment, call Hallie's at 744-6772 for appointment and arrangements."

New merchandise from area stores also is stocked by Hallie's.

though, before the only discussion is haggling over the price for after-the-rubdown treatment.

Typically, Lubbock masseuses are from 19-to-25-year-old white women set in business because they have no other business, some said, or because they were taken off the streets in earlier years by someone who eventually forced them to "pay their own way." But there are exceptions.

Sammie, a 26-year-old Lubbock masseuse, started three years ago training with a health spa masseur she met during a time when Sammie was unemployed, emotionally unstable and broke, she says. The man got her the job.

Soon after, a client suggested she could start her own firm since she had learned the talents of a good masseuse and offered to set her up in business in a vacant rental "house" he subleased, she said.

It didn't take long, though, before rent became $100 weekly, instead of the "$10 plus valuable considerations" each week they had agreed upon.

Valuable considerations included payment for items such as steam cabinets, massage tables, linens and other items the client supplied. The "house" was furnished as a parlor before she moved there.

Soon the equipment stopped workin, but rent kept rising, she said, to $600 a month for a small, two-room parlor not even equipped with heating or a telephone. Her "client" began making demands, and with no place to go, Sammie became a prostitute, working at a former customer's whims.

Her story repeats itself across the city, and in some versions, the tale grows worse.

One parlor advertises patrons have a choice of masseuses, but on one occasion a question about choice got only the answer, "It's like this man. We usually got three (girls) here, but one of us is out of town for getting her baby took care of, and the other one's got the flu, or at least that's what she tells me she's got. So I guess you win. Look's like its me or nobody."

Another Lubbock masseuse — whose 34th Street parlor is advertised by her landlord as a "health club" even though the steam cabinet will not work, hot water is virtually non-existent, plumbing is poor, heating is by means of a leaky gas heater and the ceiling has holes allowing drafts — found herself on the street last week for failure to pay a $160 weekly rent bill only two days late.

A nearby parlor also advertised as a health studio offers "exercise classes," says one masseuse, adding "but they haven't been going too well lately."

Business across town, in fact, hasn't done too well, masseuses told The Avalanche-Journal, since the first notice that council members might try regulating their enterprise.

From the average four to six customers per day paying about $45 apiece at a typical salon, Lubbock masseuses who would talk dollars said business has dropped sometimes to no clients a day and only a few on good days.

With city council threats to require masseuses to keep log books of patrons' names and the type of service received, businesss may not have hit bottom yet, though.

Gandhi Party Wins Election Victory

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's political fortunes rose Sunday when her new party won a decisive state election victory in southern India.

The government information office said Mrs. Gandhi's wing of the recently split Congress Party captured 130 of the first 190 seats decided in the Karnataka state assembly, assuring it of a comfortable majority in the 224-member chamber and the right to form the new state government.

Karnataka was the first of five states and one federal territory to report results from assembly elections Saturday. Counting is scheduled to begin Monday in the five other areas, with results expected Monday night and Tuesday.

Of the 190 Karnataka races decided, Prime Minister Morarji Desai's Janata party elected 49 candidates to the assembly, minor parties and independents a total of seven and the pro-Moscow Communist Party and anti-Gandhi Congress Party two each, the central government said.

The united Congress Party had ruled Karnataka until last Dec. 31, when Desai put the state under central government rule.

Formed From Split

The "Indira Congress," as Mrs. Gandhi's new party is called, split from the united Congress last month. The Congress Party had ruled India for 30 years up to its defeat by Desai's Janata forces in the March 1977 national parliamentary elections.

A strong showing by the Indira Congress in Karnataka had been expected, but the dismal performance by the rival Congress Party was a surprise.

Mrs. Gandhi's faction needs to defeat the other Congress in as many states as possible to uphold its claim to be the authentic political heir of the traditional Congress Party, which led India to independence.

Leaders of the anti-Gandhi Congress, including party President K.B. Reddi, huddled at Reddi's home in New Delhi in what politicians termed a crisis meeting.

A poor showing in the other five state elections could bring defections from the Reddi Congress to the two other major parties. But Reddi's party is expected to fare better in some of the other states, where it controlled the outgoing state governments.

Inherited Party Machinery

In Karnataka, the Indira Congress inherited all the party machinery and organization of the old united Congress because Devaraj Urs, the last chief minister of Karnataka, was a principal lieutenant of Mrs. Gandhi and helped engineer the split.

Urs and at least 10 of his state ministers were elected to the new assembly.

This was a rebuff of sorts to Desai's Janata government in New Delhi, which dissolved Urs's state government two months ago on charges of corruption and of having lost public confidence.

But the Karnataka election results still represented progress for Desai's party in efforts to build strength in Southern India. Its landslide victory in the national election was mainly in the northern states.

At the time the Karnataka government was dissolved, the united Congress had 160 seats in the assembly, compared with 35 for the Janata, the second-strongest party.

Colombians Vote; Troops On Alert

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Troops patrolled city streets and travel was restricted Sunday as Colombians voted in congressional and local elections that also served as a presidential primary for the ruling Liberal Party.

Early returns showed the moderate Liberal Party's congressional candidates were building a strong lead with 184,000 votes compared to 74,000 for the Conservatives, the second largest party.

Turbay Ayala Leads

They also indicated Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala, who had served as foreign minister and ambassador to the United States, would win the Liberals' presidential primary and be the candidate in June against Conservative nominee Belisario Betancur.

Initial, unofficial returns gave Turbay Ayala 109,508 votes to 80,162 for Carlos Lleras Restrepo, who was president from 1966 to 1970. The third candidate in the Liberal primary, Carlos Holmes Trujillo who once served as ambassador to East Germany, appeared to be out of the race.

Some five million ballots are being hand counted and final results are not expected before late Monday or Tuesday.

Small Bomb Explodes

A small bomb exploded in front of the Nicaraguan Embassy Sunday, but officials did not believe it was linked to the elections in this South American democracy. They said it apparently was a protest against the Nigaraguan regime of President Anastasio Somoza. The blast caused minor damage andno casualties.

Six bombs went off at campaign offices in four provincial cities Friday and Saturday, with four persons injured in one of the blasts, officials reported. They said left-wing guerrillas exchanged shots with soldiers in several rural clashes and set fire to a provincial department store in election-eve attacks but no casuaties were reported.

Voting is not compulsry, and the turnout was relatively light on a pleasant sunny day. Analysts predicted that about half of the 12 million eligible voters would cast ballots.

To increase security and encourage voting, the government halted domestic airline flights and inter-city bus travel. Military and police checkpoints kept private cars from leaving the cities.

The election was to fill all 311 seats in the Senate and Chamber of Representatives, name municipal councils and select the Liberal Party nominee for the June 4 presidential election.

Last Election's Results

The center-right Liberal Party won a total of 180 seats in the last parliamentary election in 1974, the Conservative Party took 104 seats and two small leftist groupings won the others. Sunday's election was expected to preserve about the same Liberal majority.

Political analysts, commenting on the Liberals' presidential primary, said Turbay Ayala had the support of outgoing President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, who by law can not seek re-election or participate in the campaign. Michelsen has denied that he backed Turbay Ayala for the four-year term as president.

It is Colombia's first presidential primary. Previously, all parties picked their presidential nominees at conventions, and the opposition parties still do.

The Liberal presidential candidates were not named on the ballot sheets distributed in the 14,489 polling places.

Eight Killed By Deadly Chlorine Gas them were motorists who ran into the gas and found their cars stalled in the chlorine-filled air.

"The first ones to get here had tried to get out of their car when it first stalled, and realized they wouldn't get far enough on foot," White said. "So they got back in, managed to restart the car, and drove on through it. It stalled a couple of times and they restarted it.

"They drove on, and the driver passed out and had to be replaced. When they got out of the fog they got out and took some deep breaths, then drove on here to the hospital."

Deputy Loftin said that as soon as he realized what had happened, "I called the station and had them block the roads.

"We started right then trying to get people out." He knocked on doors and had people call their neighbors and flee the area.

Bay County sheriff's Lt. O.J. Gilbert said the evacuees were being housed in emergency shelters in Panama City and other nearby communities. He said the danger would not be over until railroad crews coming from Mississippi had righted the cars safely and made sure there were no more leaks.

Chlorine is an element often used in bleaching, water purification and other chemical processes.

Anti-Smoking Day Slated In Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Demnark (AP) — Denmark's estimated two million smokers faced a nervous Monday, with some three million non-smokers vowing to observe it as a "smokeless day."

Leaders of the National Association for the Combat of Heart Disease said public response to the "smokeless day" project has been overwhelming. Some smokers told reporters they felt puffing tobacco in public wouldn't be very popular.

Many factories and businesses have pledged to contribute to the association the equivalent of the cost of one day's supply of cigarettes for each employee who gives up the habit.

"This is to be a rebellion by non-smokers who have become a suppressed majority in this nation," said Tage Egsmore, a lung cancer specialist.

Nixon Estate Tour Attracts Thousands with multi-colored flowers and a fountain.

A Secret Service guard stood at the entrance to the home with a walkie-talkie. Guards and a policeman were aboard each bus, and no one was allowed off the vehicles, which continued moving throughout the tours.

As the bus approached the exit, the deep male voice on the tape recording announced: "History has been made here. And you as members of the first tour of the grounds of La Casa Pacifica have also become part of history."

The first buses through the gates were jammed with reporters and photographers — the largest contingent to visit here since Nixon resigned and returned here from Washington in 1974.

He purchased the estate in 1969 and never allowed the public to see the grounds before.

The tours were arranged by Mayor Donna Wilkinson to help celebrate the 50th birthday party of the city, which was held Saturday. She said, "It's been a great success in terms of a whole city being able to celebrate. It was very nice of the Nixons" to open their estate to public view.

WELCOME BACK—Tongsun Park reaches to shake hands upon arrival at Dulles International Airport Sunday. son, remains close to him.

But many old acquaintances — even members of the George Town Club which he started — are letting it be known they would just as soon he not drop in. It was at the social-dining club that Park threw parties for Washington VIPs and acquired a reputation for being a sophisticated, gracious host who knew how to give fancy presents.

One of three sons in a wealthy family owning gasoline stations and other resources in Korea, Park came to Washington in 1956 to attend Georgetown University and made friends with people who later moved up in Washington power circles.

Although he is often described as a millionaire, there seems no reliable way to get a solid estimate of his worth. In past years, Park is said to have made big investments in shipping, oil and other ventures.

Witnesses at past congressional hearings said Park approached the Korean CIA in the late 1960s, offering to help the Seoul government lobby for U.S. military aid if he could get money to set up the George Town Club.

Made Exclusive Agent

Later, according to evidence and testimony, the Korean government made Park exclusive agent for its rice purchases — meaning U.S. firms wanting to sell to Seoul had to deal with him and pay him commissions.

Investigators now think it is clear that congressmen got some of the $9 million in fees Park collected, but who and how much they got is yet to come out.

"create situations or settlements" that would make it more difficult to renew negotiations with Egypt or bring in Jordan.

He met in Jordan with Premier Mudar Badran and said in a speech in Amman that Israeli settlements in occupied territory "are illegal and a major obstacle to peace in the Middle East."

Badran said in an interview with a Kuwait newspaper Sunday that Jordan will join current peace efforts only after Israel declares a willingness to withdraw from occupied Arab lands, including Jerusalem.

"You think most unions are going to want to have an 80-day strike?" he asked. "I don't believe it. I think the way to keep them out of the White House is to encourage them to settle their own disputes."

"We always knew that if the government involved itself precipitately in these conflicts that bargaining would break down," Marshall said when reminded of contract negotiations later this year involving rail and trucking unions.

National Interest Is Key

"We intend to continue that policy and the only time we will become involved is when we believe the national interest requires it," he said.

Marshall declined to speculate on what the administration would do if the latest contract offer is rejected by the miners.

"I don't know. We'll have to cross that bridge when we come to it. It's obvious a yes vote would be best," he said.

Whatever happens, Marshall said, the administration will seek a policy that is fair to all sides while at the same time ensuring a continuation of coal production.

Enrollments In Colleges Show Gains

CINCINNATI (AP) — College enrollments, which declined last year for the first time in 25 years in the United States, gained about 2 percent in 1977-78 to an estimated 11,332,500, according to an enrollment analyst.

Dr. Garland G. Parker, executive director for the Enrollment Policy and Educational Research Department at the University of Cincinnati, bases his annual report on studies of 2,716 institutions enrolling more than 10.5 million students.

Parker, who has been doing the survey for 18 years, said increasing numbers of women are going to college but that enrollments in the late 1980s will nosedive because of smaller birthrates.

Parker said that in 1,710 four-year colleges, enrollment increased by 1.6 percent and an increase of 2.7 percent was reported at 1,006 two-year schools.

Parker's completed survey will be published by the American College Testing Program (ACT) in a special copyrighted report.

Parker said the increase "simply means higher education is just holding its own and conforming more closely to population trends in recent years."

However, Parker also reported:

—Fulltime students increased by 1.3 percent.

Kidnapped Executive's Fate Remains Mystery

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Two years after he was kidnapped by leftist guerrillas, the fate of Ohio business executive William F. Niehous is still unknown.

Niehous, vice president of Owens-Illinois of Venezuela, was snatched from his home by seven armed men the night of Feb. 27, 1976.

His kidnappers broke off communications in August, 1976. Newsmen and police speculated that Niehous had been murdered.

But columnist Jack Anderson, in a recent syndicated column from Washington, disclosed receipt of photographic proof that Niehous was still alive in captivity as late as March 19, 1977.

Anderson defied a threat by the kidnappers to kill Niehous as well as a written plea by Niehous to keep the latest contact secret in a "calculated risk" to re-establish ransom negotiations.

Ransom Demands Sent

The columnist reported the guerrillas sent to an Owens-Illinois office in Europe an envelope containing ransom demands, a photograph of Niehous reading a newspaper clearly dated March 19, 1977 and a note from him to his wife, Donna, of Perrysburg, Ohio.

The envelope was deposited in a seldom used mail drop, Anderson said, and was not discovered for several days. Meanwhile, Owens-Illinois executives in Caracas received calls from a female guerrilla demanding their reaction.

"I'm not going to call again," she said. She hasn't.

This prompted the company and family to authorize Anderson to disclose the developments and to offer to meet the kidnappers "anywhere in the world."

Anderson disclosed he had been approached in 1976 by an intermediary who suggested the columnist would be acceptable to the guerrillas as a go-between. Anderson said he wrote Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez offering his services, but the letter was ignored.

Perez publicly has vowed not to "transact" with the kidnapers, whom he has denounced as "common criminals who seek to dignify their crime with an ideological shield."

Two months after the kidnapping, he ordered the expropriation of Owens-Illinois of Venezuela for defying a government order not to deal with the kidnappers.

Eight Persons Linked

As for the criminal investigation of the case, eight persons have been formally charged with military rebellion for alleged direct involvement.

Two of these are leftist splinter congressmen Fortunato Herrera and Salom Mesa Espinoza. Both assert they were involved only in the ransom effort, and only for humanitarian reasons.

Another was charged posthumously. Jorge Rodriguez, a university Socialist League leader, died in his cell of a ruptured liver. The official autopsy found that he probably had been kicked to death. Four detectives convicted of his murder are appealing 27-year sentences each.

The kidnappers have been identified, for the most part, as members of a Maoist fragment known as "Red Flag." Of the seven actual participants in the abduction, police claim to have positively identified six, four of whom — including Rodriguez — have been arrested.

In June of 1976, Interior Minister Octavio Lepage said "From a police point of view, the (Niehous) case is solved."

But two years after the kidnapping, his fate and whereabouts remain a mystery.

Investors Lose Big In Options Scheme

BOSTON (AP) — The frequent telephone calls from the insistent saleswoman were chipping away at James Cristo Jr.'s resistance. Finally, he decided to give it a try; he'd borrow $2,060 from a bank and invest it in something called London commodity options.

After all, he thought, even if the saleswoman's guarantees were wrong, the most he could lose was a few hundred dollars, right? Wrong. Within six days he was notified that his entire investment was gone.

"I know now it was a dumb thing to do," said Cristo, who owns a small repair shop in Millbury, Mass. "But the way she talked, we thought we couldn't lose. I thought we'd practically be millionaires."

James Cristo Jr. was one of at least 6,000 profit-hungry people, few of whom understood the complexities of options trading, who allowed themselves to be cajoled, pressured and in some cases bullied by Lloyd, Carr & Co. representatives into investing their life savings, and sometimes borrowed money, in one of te most highly speculative investment plans yet devised.

Although Lloyd Carr has been shut down, and founder Alan Abrahams—alias James A. Carr—captured by the FBI, officials say it could take years to sort out the dozens of laweuits already filed and expected to be filed against the one-time $50 million enterprise.

And they say only Abrahams knows if there is a pot of gold at the end of the legal rainbow. In any event, there appears to be little chance that Lloyd Carr customers will recover significant sums of money; in fact, some of them still are being preyed upon by quick-buck operators.

In commodity options trading, an investor buys the right to purchase or sell commodity futures on or before a given date. A commodity future is a contract to buy or sell a commodity such as coffee or sugar at a particular price, time and place.

The option seems attractive to small investors because it is much cheaper than an actual commodity future. If the futures price goes above a certain level, the option holder can sell the option at a profit to a commodity trader. But if the futures price doesn't go above that level, the option holder can lose the entire investment.

Options cannot be sold on U.S. commodity futures, although the federal government still hopes to set up a pilot program this summer. But high-pressure salesmen, many of them unlicensed, have been selling options on London commodities for the last several years to American investors.

Sandra Steele, an attorney who works for the receiver appointed by a judge to find Lloyd Carr's assets and eventually distribute them to creditors, said two consecutive telephone calls received recently from investors illustrate the range of people taken in by the operation.

"The first one was from a judge in Texas who lost $10,000," Miss Steele said. "The second was from a guy in California who couldn't even spell the word 'judge.'"

The sales pitch often included promises of guaranteed profits, suggestions that Lloyd Carr had inside information concerning commodity prices and urgings that time was of the essence, according to affidavits signed by Lloyd Carr customers.

The pitch often did not include details about how options trading worked or about the firm's enormous commissions. Last summer, Lloyd Carr was selling an option for $6,360 that other dealers were offering for $1,800. Therefore, Lloyd Carr's customers had a lesser chance of making money.

Many customers said they were harassed with frequent telephone calls. "She must have called me 20 times," said Cristo. "She constantly haunted me."

Another customer said he was called eight times in two weeks until he agreed to spend $4,390. After numerous phone calls and a suggestion that she not contact her attorney, a third customer invested $2,490.

After agreeing to buy options, customers frequently were told to have a certified check ready for pick-up. A courier arrived within hours.

But not every potential customer agreed to buy the options and often they were verbally abused:

—"On Dec. 30, 1977, I was telephoned by a salesman for Lloyd, Carr & Co...," Samuel Bernstein of Randolph, Mass. said in a sworn deposition. "The man said, 'How would you like to invest $5,000 and see it go to $25,000?'

"I said I was not interested in investing. He said I must be some kind of fool if I didn't want to invest ... I told him I was not interested and he said he hoped I went bankrupt."

CFTC officials say that while all this was going on, they were trying to get Lloyd Carr shut down or at least to reform its sales practices. And despite criticism of the agency, the record tends to support the claim. It also shows how Abrahams benefited from the judicial system.

On at least three occasions, judges refused to issue injunctions against the firm. Finally on Nov. 7, 1977, 13 months after the CFTC began making its suspicions known, a U.S. district judge in Michigan —acting after complaints from local Lloyd Carr customers—issued a temporary restraining order.

Last Jan. 11, Abrahams—still selling options and still known only as James Carr—was arrested, fingerprinted and released on bail. Most of Lloyd Carr's operations were suspended.

On Jan. 16, the FBI announced that James Carr was an escaped felon named Alan Abrahams, and that he had skipped bail. Within days, Abrahams was arrested in Florida and charged with escaping from a New Jersey prison while serving a term on a bad-check charge; violating federal probation; and jumping bail.

"I just don't know anything that we could have done that we didn't do ...," said Schleeter of the CFTC. "We did everything but insult the judges (who refused to issue injunctions)."

But Schleeter also pointed out that the judges were being cautious. "In some cases, the judges were exercising discretion that the public wasn't," he said. "The judges didn't know anything about it (options) either."

Before long, retired Massachusetts Superior Court Judge Walter McLaughlin and his law firm were appointed equity receivers to organize claims against Lloyd Carr and to search for assets.

It is not an easy job. Thousands of letters and hundreds of phone calls have poured into McLaughlin's office. More than a dozen employees are trying to separate secured creditors— those with outstanding bills against the firm—from thousands of customers who are seeking restitution.

McLaughlin associates believe they have traced assets of $1.7 million to foreign banks, but they have not been able as yet to examine the accounts. There also are suspicions that millions of dollars are salted away in Swiss banks.

State and federal prosecutors, meanwhile, are investigating for possible criminal offenses. Sources say the investigation could lead to federal charges of mail fraud and-or wire (telephone) fraud.

"We know the brokers badgered and harassed customers and we know that some absurd promises were made," said Asst. U.S. Attorney Michael Collora. "And we suspect that not all the options actually were bought—they may have just banked the money."

Miss Steele and Collora said the case could be cleared up relatively quickly if Abrahams cooperated. But Abrahams' attorney, Anthony Cardinale (an associate of F. Lee Bailey), said his client planned to mount an aggressive defense if new charges are filed.

"First of all, we're going to fight the receivership," Cardinale said. "It was set up while Mr. Abrahams was a fugitive and now he's back."

In addition, Cardinale said Lloyd Carr bought every option. "No question about it and there's nothing illegal about high pressure sales or high markups," the attorney said.

He said the markups were necessitated by the high commissions Abrahams paid his salesmen and the firm's "enormous telephone bills." Cardinale also said that Abrahams should not be held accountable for the actions of salesmen who were hustling for commissions.

So there appears to be no quick settlement in sight. And when the case finally ends, and the receiver is satisfied that all assets have been found, the general creditors will get paid before any customers who might be able to prove they were defrauded.

Some of the investors, meanwhile, have succumbed to a spurious offer from a Chicago-based group which claimed that for $450 it could recover any money lost through Lloyd Carr investments. Chicago authorities closed down that operation a few weeks ago.

And there could be bad news in store for the last couple of investors—those who were able to stop payment on checks after hearing that Abrahams' empire was falling apart.

Miss Steele said there appears to be some cases in which options were bought for those customers before the checks cleared. Therefore, she might have to sue the customers for payment for options which by then could be worthless.

"That money is a potential asset and we have to pool all the assets and then divide them up," she said.

Although there are many complaints about lax enforcement, officials involved in the case believe virtually without exception that the investors should reserve plenty of blame for themselves.

"They didn't understand what an option was and a lot of them still don't understand what it is," said Collora. "And they put up their money on that basis."

"A lot of people simply aren't admitting that they were holding options," said Schleeter. "With the advantage of hindsight, a lot of them are just plain embarrassed and are going to take their beating."

At least 35 firms still are selling London commodity options, but generally at lower rates than were offered by Lloyd Carr.

As for Cristo, the Millbury repairman, he had to extend the 90-day loan he took out to buy the options. But he is clinging to a thin silver lining.

"After they told me I lost my money, after it was all over, they wanted me to put in another $4,000," he said. "But this time I smelled it out. It wasn't even logical anymore."

Farm Strike Endorsed By Organized Labor

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (UPI).— Organized labor Sunday endorsed the farmers strike, saying farmers — just as other workers — deserve a fair return for their toil.

In an official policy statement, the AFL-CIO Executive Council called on the Carter administration and Congress to seek speedy and effective solutions to the plight of family farmers.

In a separate document, the council asked Congress to pass revisions in the Hatch Act so federal and postal service employees can run for office and engage in political activity.

The 35-member council, the governing board of the AFLCIO, was expected to conclude its mid-winter meeting Monday.

Its backing of the farm strike was the most significant endorsement yet for the American Agriculture movement.

Beginning late last month, farmers have been demonstrating and lobbying in Washington for a 100 percent parity for their crops, a move that would increase farm prices about 20 percent and consumer prices about 50 percent. The strike's effectivness has been limited.

"Obviously the farm strike is a legitimate exercise of their right as Americans to withhold their labor when conditions are unfair," the council said.

"Just as we believe that workers are entitled to a fair wage for their labors, we believe farmers are entitled to a fair return for their labors."

It said the movement "deserves the support and assistance of the labor movement" and said the strike it called was a last resort "in the same way that union workers are sometimes forced to strike."

"Family farmers are threatened by corporate and foreign takeover of farm land, which would also leave consumers at the mercy of corporate monopolies and absentee land owners," the council added.

Right-wing and corporate interests "working through the ultra-conservative, big business-oriented Farm Bureau Federation" have launched an attack against the labor movement designed to alienate family farmers from traditional allies," the council said.

"The traditional bond between workers and family farmers must not be allowed to be severed by cheap political propaganda."

The council said the committee should "take up and act promptly" on the bill.

Technology, Research Questioned

By LOUIS HARRIS

Scientific research and technological development are seen as a mixed blessing in modern American society. While a nearly unanimous 92 percent of Americans feel that such research is necessary "to keep the country prosperous," 56 percent feel it also "makes everything bigger and more impersonal," and 65 percent hold the view that it "makes people want to acquire more possessions rather than enjoying non-material experiences."

As Americans see it, the ultimate test for science is the extent to which the practical applications of technology contribute to a better quality of life, not necessarily to the accumulation of more physical goods. For example, a substantial 69 percent feel that scientific research is "the only way we can clean up air and water pollution."

It is significant, for instance, that by 52-36 percent, a majority of Americans feels that scientific research "tends to overproduce products and this is wasteful." By a narrower 42-38 percent, a plurality also believes that such technological development leads to "far too much use of scarce raw materials and natural resources." The clear implication is that the applications of future scientific research will have to be far more selective than they were in the past, when raw materials were more abundant and natural resources seemed unlimited.

There is also evidence that points to a reversal of the traditional connection that long has been made between scientific progress and the growth of job opportunities. A sizable 69-16 percent majority is convinced that technological advances are "the main factors in increasing productivity." But only a narrow 44-42 percent plurality believes that they are "the only way we can create enough jobs for people who need them."

In fact, it is only by a close 44-39 percent that the public disagrees with the contention that technological progress will "eventually lead to the loss of jobs." A substantial 62-21 percent do believe that technological development will "eventually mean a four-day workweek." However, it is evident that many people are not sure that this will be a desirable eventuality.

By 48-37 percent, a plurality feels that scientific progress is a "way to make the rich get richer and the poor poorer." Balancing this, however, is the belief, expressed by an almost identical 46-38 percent plurality, that technology "makes the country prosperous enough to take care of the needs of the poor."

A clear-cut 64-21 percent majority believes that one direct benefit the United States derives from scientific research is that it provides "the real basis of our military strength." This result reflects the comeback in recent years of public support for defense spending and the need for the United States to have the most advanced technology in the country's military establishment.

Many of these responses reflect a sense of uneasiness on the part of the American people, both about scientific research and also about an economy that is based on ever-increasing production of physical goods. A thread running through Harris Survey results over the past few years is that America appears to be well into a post-industrial era, where the main drive in society is no longer the production of better gadgets or physical objects. Instead, the message emanating from the public again and again is that nonmaterial experiences are valued far more than the acquisition of products.

In a basic sense, then, this recent Harris Survey of 1,520 adults nationwide reveals that scientific research is viewed in a mixed way. Even though it is seen as indispensable, it is also seen as containing within itself grave drawbacks. Chief among these are glutting society with products that are not needed and developing production methods that can reduce rather than increase job opportunities.

Citizens Recovering Following Explosion

WAVERLY, Tenn. (UPI) — Residents of this explosion wracked town returned to their homes and church services Sunday after explosives experts emptied the twin of a derailed tanker which exploded in a ball of fire and seared two city blocks with death and destruction.

More than 2,000 of the city's 5,800 residents were evacuated while the second derailed tanker was drained of 20,000 gallons of volatile propane, flushed with water to expel lingering fumes, and hauled away on a flatbed car early Sunday.

Police Barricades were officially removed at 8:45 a.m., just in time for the five downtown churches to hold services.

Workers used three large hoses and a "spark-proof" motor to pump the propane, also known as LP gas, into another tanker just a few yards from a 20-foot crater left when a similar tanker exploded Friday, raining burning bodies and debris over the area.

Five persons were killed instantly, and four others burned died Saturday in Nashville hospitals. "It was like we died and we've been to hell and back," said Carl Stokes, 37, of Nashville, one of the burned survivors.

More than 50 persons were injured. Ten of the critically burned were flown Saturday from Nashville hospitals to burn centers in other states.

Work crews flushed the crippled tanker and then capped it before an all clear was given to homeowners who had spent the night with friends and relatives or at evacuation centers.

Mary Nell Hand went to nearby McEwen to stay with relatives and returned to her home less than 100 yards from the explosion scene only briefly.

"You just can't imagine how helpless you feel," Miss Hand said as she stood crying in the front yard of her modest brick home.

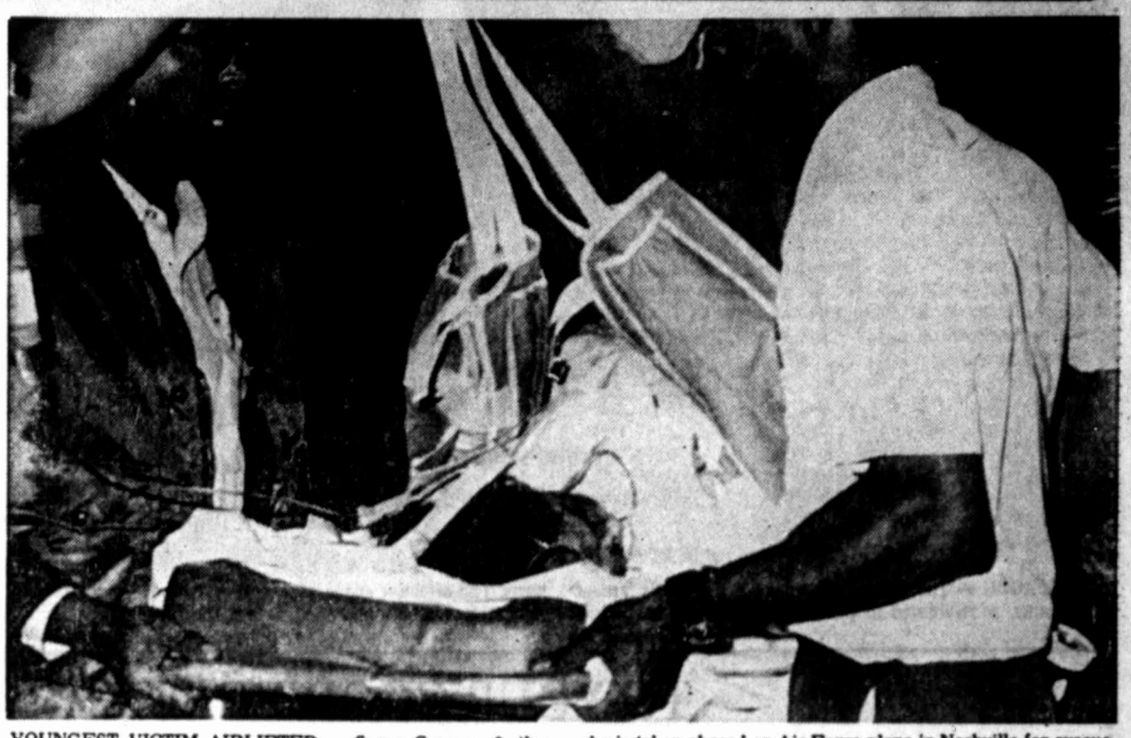

"We just came to see about things but will probably leave again. I feel very uncomfortable, but I just had to see about the condition of my home."

Fifty feet away, employees of Slayden Lumber Co. picked through the charred rubble of a firm they plan to reopen Monday. "We're going to open up somehow," said Bobby Story as he looked through what was left of the store window. "We won't have any hardware but we still have our lumber to sell."

The immediate area around the explosion site remained sealed off as federal investigtors checked the cause of the tragedy. Curious onlookers gathered on a nearby highway overpass to view the mangled remains of railroad cars and the scorched earth around the site.

Mrs. Louise Phillips came to the overpass shortly after she returned to her home half a mile away. "I don't like to live this close to the tracks," she said, "but I won't move. I was just glad to come home."

YOUNGEST VICTIM AIRLIFTED — Susan Cravers, 6, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cravers, was the youngest of the hospitalized casualties in the explosion of a propane railroad tanker car in Waverly, Tenn. In this Saturday-night scene she is taken aboard an Air Force plane in Nashville for evacuation to a burn treatment hospital in Cincinnati. (AP Laserphoto)

CONSUMER MOVEMENT — Ralph Nader, assessing the consumer movement after a major defeat in Congress, says it needs to turn to state and local solutions to consumer problems. Nader Says Consumer Groups Need Local, State Solutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader, assessing the consumer movement after a major defeat in Congress, says it needs to turn to state and local solutions to consumer problems.

Nader said the Feb. 8 House vote against legislation to establish a federal consumer agency was only a temporary setback for him and the consumer movement.

Nader has been credited with originating the idea of a federal consumer agency. A coalition of consumer activists and President Carter joined him in supporting the bill. Although the measure had come close to passing in earlier years, it went down to a 38-vote defeat this year, possibly killing the idea for good.

There have been suggestions from some quarters that the consumer movement and Nader's influence are waning.

"Of 20 major pieces of consumer legislation before Congress in the last 10 years, 16 have gotten through," he said in an interview last week. "So we're batting about .800. It's like (baseball star) Reggie Jackson striking out the fourth time after hitting three home runs.

"When you have a basic record of winning, then when you lose it appears to be much more of a jar," Nader said.

Asked if the House defeat shows a backlash against him, Nader replied:

"Me? Oh no, it was just a defeat. I was defeated for six years before I even began tackling General Motors. I'm used to all this. You've just got to develop new responses."

Nader's 1965 book, "Unsafe at Any Speed," attacking General Motors' Corvair, first brought him to prominence.

Nader said the biggest opportunity now for the consumer movement is to organize over local and statewide issues. Rather than work to defeat individual Congress members who voted against the consumer agency bill, the movement should try to organize around concerns that will become political issues, he said.

As an example, he cited utility bill checkoffs, a subject that has not attracted national interest but which he said recently has won legislative victories in several states.

Under the concept, utility firms would be required by state law to allow consumers to make a contribution along with payment of their monthly bills. The utilities would have to turn that money over to a nonprofit organization that would oppose utility rate increases.

"If Congress is not willing to recognize that the people who pay all the bills in this country, the consumers, deserve a stronger voice in Washington...then you have to go back to the districts and strengthen the organization of consumers to achieve justice directly," Nader said.

Nader also has been criticized for setting himself up as someone who can determine what is in the interest of consumers, whether consumers actually want his reforms or not.

He said this is "another ploy" by some business groups and others who oppose consumer initiatives. "They are trying to say there is a professional elite in the consumer movement, a full-time professional consumer advocate that doesn't reflect the people back home.

"But they don't get 2,000 letters a week describing all the ailments of the economy direct from the pen or the typewriter of consumers. If they don't think I reflect consumer interests, they can first look at the polls or try to debate me before a random group of consumers. To say that we don't reflect consumer interest because we want better warranties and fewer defects in cars is an absurdity."

Panel To Discuss Non-Smokers Rights

A panel discussion about the rights of non-smokers will be featured at the Non-Smoker's Forum at 7:30 p.m. today in the Texas Tech University Center Senate Room.

Panelists State Sen. Kent Hance, Dr. John H. Selby, a thoracic surgeon, and Texas Tech Law professor Charles Bubany will discuss the topic, "Everything you always wanted to know about how to stop smokers but were afraid to try."

Dr. Selby will discuss the effects of cigarette smoke on non-smokers. Bubany will speak on the legal precedents of recent court cases and the constitutional rights of non-smokers. Hance will talk about what Texas legislators have done and what they will propose in the future concerning non-smoking laws.

The forum is sponsored by the American Lung Association of Texas, West Texas area, and the Eta Sigma Gamma, the health education fraternity at Texas Tech.

Admission is free and the audience will be invited to to ask questions at the end of the presentation.

Viking King's Grave Found

JELLING, Denmark (AP) — Archaeologists believe they have found the grave of the Viking King Gorm and his Queen Thyra, who died in the 10th century and are considered the founders of the Danish monarchy.

"We still don't have the definite proof, but do believe that this is it," said Knud Krogh, curator of the national museum. He said digging under this village's 800-year-old church had turned up a man's skull, bones of a man and woman and a silver trinket.

Krogh said he believed the son of Gorm and Thyra — King Harald Bluetooth, who Christianized Denmark — had moved their bodies from nearby pagan burial mounds to the crypt under an earlier church he built here.

Brown Defends Carter's Ideas; Declines To Give 1980 Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., considered one of President Carter's leading rivals within the Democratic Party, defended Carter Sunday as an innovative president, not properly appreciated by the public.

"A number of the things that President Carter has stood up for and hasn't done very well on (in public opinion polls) are good ideas, and I think the country is going to come to appreciate them," Brown said

Brown appeared on NBC's Meet the Press television show.

"The fact is this is a transitional period with respect to energy, arms sales, human rights, the environment, labor union organization, suburbs, cities," Brown said. "We're in a state in our country where it's very difficult to formulate clear initiatives on the part of the public sector and mobilize widespread support."

Brown cited as examples, Carter's opposition to the Clinch River nuclear power facility in Tennessee, which he said "I think people are going to like ... but they may not like it for a couple of years," and the recent hike in Social Security taxes.

"Somebody had to fund it," he said of the Social Security program. "It's just that he had to bring the bad news that for decades we had been not funding and paying our debts for the old people in the country.

"So, he has been saddled with some unpleasant realities, and he just happens to be the fall guy," Brown said. "But I think in time people are going to appreciate a number of the initiatives that he's brought about."

Although he defeated Carter in all five Democratic presidential primaries in which he entered in 1976, Brown, who announced recently he will seek re-election in California, declined Sunday to say what his designs are for the 1980 presidential election.

"My present intention is to serve a full four-year term and do the best I can," he said. "And what happens four years later or six years later is just hard to tell."

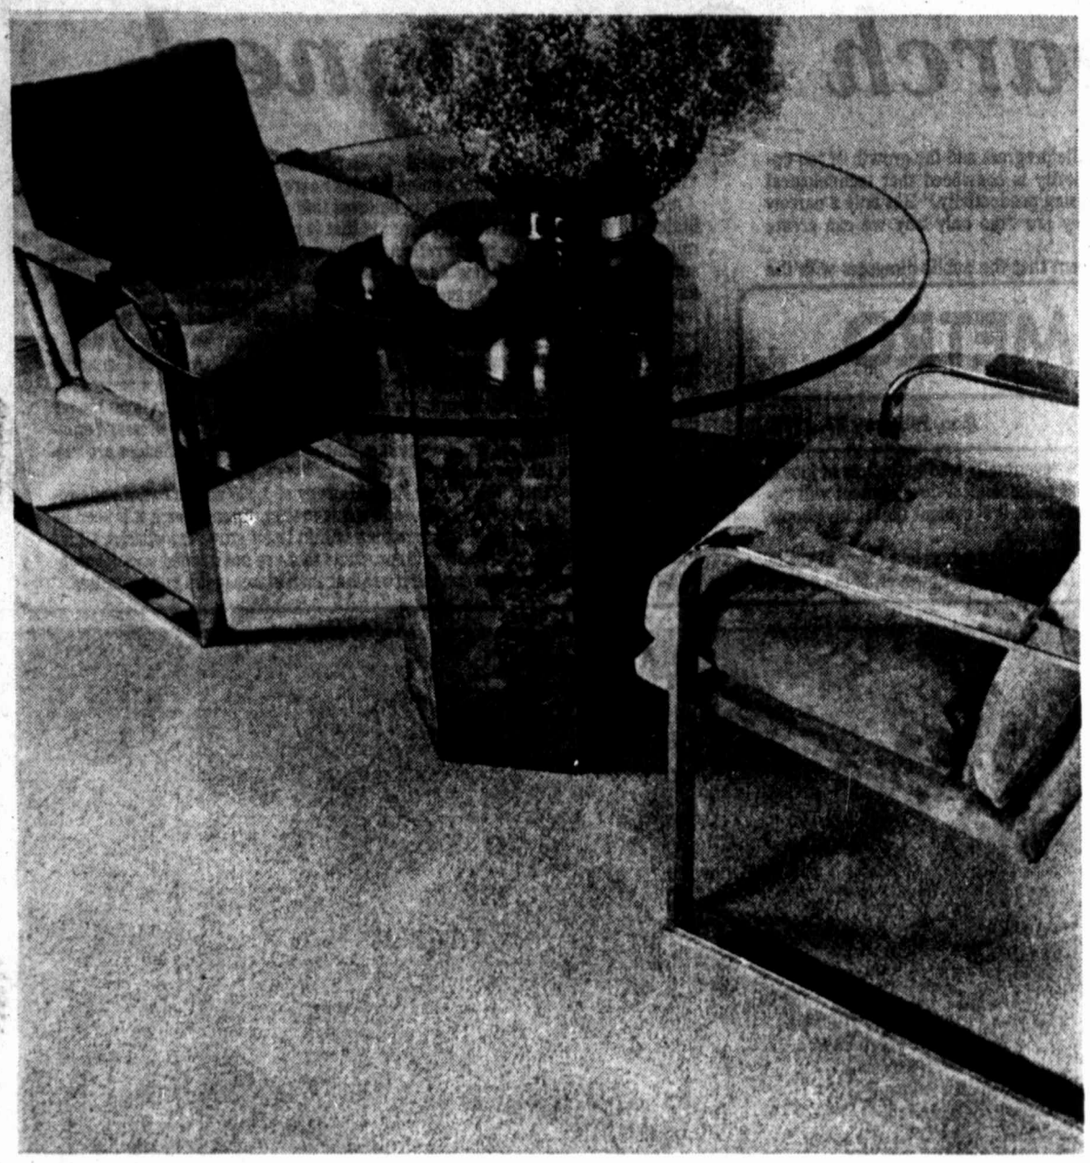

However, Brown would not take himself out of the 1980 presidential picture, declaring, "I generally don't say anything that flatly. I don't like to plan ahead that long."

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡KQJ72 ◇A874 ♣AQ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dble.	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—North has not made a particularly strong bid. If he had good all around values, he would have made a free bid of one no trump over West's one spade interference. At this vulnerability we would pass. If we were vulnerable, we might take a shot at game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♡93 ◇KQ10764 ♣K972
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. North's rebid in this sequence should guarantee a six-card suit. Since there are virtually no prospects for game, get out of the auction as quickly as possible. A bid of three diamonds may not uncover a better fit and all you will have accomplished is to increase the level of the auction—and the danger of a penalty double.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q965 ♡K104 ♣AKJ1094
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—It is simply a question of whether to play a small or a grand slam. That should depend solely on partner's trump holding—our clubs should take care of any heart losers he may have. We would jump to five no trump—the Grand Slam Force, asking partner to bid seven if he holds two of the top three honors in the agreed trump suit, spades.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K952 ♡QJ1094 ◇Q82 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Dble.	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Partner's double is for penalties. Had he wanted you to bid a suit, he would have made a takeout double of one club. With your fine defensive values, you should anticipate a rewarding set.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A87 ♡95 ◇Q9652 ♣843
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—The choice is between a raise to two spades and one no trump. We would be inclined to make the less encouraging response of one no trump, despite our ruffing value, because we have an absolute minimum. Give us a fourth spade instead of a fifth diamond, however, and we would bid two spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ10 ♡A762 ◇AQ84 ♣KJ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Had partner responded at the one-level, you would have shown your 19 HCP by jumping to two no trump. Since partner's response was at the two-level, you now have to jump to three no trump to show your strength.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J6 ♡AK10952 ◇7 ♣A1062
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—In terms of high cards, your hand is minimum, yet your good six-card suit offers excellent trick-taking potential. You should not yet rule out slam possibilities. Your hand is worth one further move, and we suggest four clubs as the most descriptive bid.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J2 ♡984 ◇AKJ ♣QJ872
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Your partner has gone out of his way to show you a singleton diamond, but that is just what you did not want to hear. Most of your strength is concentrated in partner's short suit, and that means duplication of values for suit play. Bid three no trump to tell partner that you have the diamonds well stopped.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son has Klinefelter's syndrome and has been taking hormone injections every two weeks for several years. He's also had the breast operation, which was very successful.

The doctor advises me never to try to find out about the subject, that it would frighten me, and that modern medicine has come a long way in normalizing the obvious symptoms. He says his only handicap would be sterility.

So, over the years I am supposed to suffer in blissful ignorance. The child, now 17, has always been a problem and the "black sheep." As he approaches manhood, we worry that his problem might hinder his going out into the big world. Wouldn't it be better for us to know about Klinefelter's syndrome if only so as not to relate all his abnormalities to it? Or do you agree with the doctor? Psychiatrists are of no help. Enlighten me please. – A.O.R.

I do not agree that you should avoid informing yourself about the condition. It is a congenital defect (occurring at birth) in the sex glands. There is an extra "X" chromosome present. We all have two kinds of chromosomes — X and Y. The normal male has an "XY" combination. With Klinefelter's, the combination is "XXY." This results in feminizing traits and physical characteristics.

Hormone therapy is helpful to a point, but it will not correct his sterility. You should know that. Behavior problems have been associated with the syndrome.

You and he have been dealt a pretty severe blow of genetic fate, and it would be well to learn as much as you can about the disorder. I say this particularly in the light of your letter. You seem to be an intelligent parent trying to cope with a most difficult problem.

Guidance of some sort — psychological or psychiatric — would be in order. With this, you cannot expect overnight miracles. It's a complex problem, but I do not suggest closing your eyes to the facts. Make your feelings known to your doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was wondering if you get mail from doctors. –J.

Occasionally. Some colleagues are kind enough to write suggesting additional information relating to a reader's question, or to tell of an experience with treatment of an ailment in their practices. I also hear about it when I make a booboo. In any event, they are always welcomed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me something about lecithin. I have been told it can help blisters on the side of my tongue. What is it and what does it do in the body? –S.C.

Lecithin (LESS-ih-thin) is one of a group of phospholipids involved in the body's use of fats. Studies show it increases with fat intake. The liver seems to produce it as needed. I have no evidence that lecithin as a supplement is beneficial. There is a rare condition in which a hereditary deficiency appears, but this is untreatable.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 59. Three years ago I had a partial hysterectomy. We have moved and I have a new doctor. He told me that the cervix is removed in a partial hysterectomy and that therefore I no longer need the Pap smear. Is this correct?

Further, he has given me a complete checkup, except for an internal and rectal examination. Should these be part of the checkup? –M.B.M.

You should continue to have Pap smears. The cervix is removed in a partial hysterectomy, a fact easily established by any internal examination, which should, by the way, be part of a thorough physical, as a rectal should also.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could thrombophlebitis in the leg cause a stroke? – A.V.C.

A clot originating in a leg vein would affect the lung first, not the brain. An embolism (traveling clot) arising from the heart-neck (carotid) artery might cause a stroke.

Did you know that 80 per cent of stroke victims resume to some degree their former lives? In "Stroke Recovery –Hope and Help," Dr. Thosteson describes the causes and treatment of stroke. For a copy write him at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 35 cents and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous amount received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Opening lead: ♠ 2.

BY OSWALD JACOBY AND ALAN SONTAG

Oswald: "It was customary in the old books on play to give an example of how declarer would figure out the distribution if the opening lead was a deuce. It was a certainty that the leader could not have a five-card suit anywhere if the lead was against a nontrump contract."

Alan: "Today, players have a bad habit of leading the deuce from a five-card suit, making it impossible for declarer to get that type of count. They may be fooling their partner also, but they take the chance."

Oswald: "In spite of this possibility, South was reasonably sure that West's deuce lead was an honest fourth best and that he didn't hold any five-card suit."

Alan: "The next step in South's analysis was to count his winners and to see that his only problems about nine tricks would be if someone held all four missing clubs. Then he noted that East could not hold all four since that would mean that West held some five-card suit. At trick two South led the king of clubs. East did show out, but South picked up the suit by means of a double finesse."

PREMATURE WITHDRAWAL: "It's not my turn. I didn't eat anything so I'm out."

NEGOTIATIONS OPEN: "Wait a minute, we ought to be able to figure this out. I did them Tuesday because we had spaghetti. I always get stuck doing them when we have spaghetti because Mom never liked me."

"Get off our cases, you haven't done them in three weeks because of ball practice. I don't even think you're on the team. I think you just suit up and sit in the shower room to get out of doing dishes."

"That's a pretty rotten thing to say for someone who lets the dog help him clear. You think we haven't seen you?"

"At least I don't leave the broiler in the oven, the pans soaking in the sink, and put a bowl in the refrigerator with a peach pit in it."

BREAKDOWN IN TALKS: Food on plates begins to petrify.

ASSESSING ALTERNATIVES: "Look, we can sit here all night or we can just start at the beginning again and go according to age. (This spoken by the youngest.) I'm calling Chuck. He'll remember." (Backup troops.)

WITHDRAWAL: "Hey, I've got homework. When all of you decide whose turn it is, call me and I'll come back and debate it some more...BUT...

RECIPROCITY: "If you decide it's my turn, someone is going to get punched out."

Peace in the Middle East is a probably certainty (I only say that to hear Edwin Newman give a primal scream) — but peace in the kitchen...NEVER!

Puerto Rico Rich In Culture, People

By ROBERT J. MISCH
Women's News Service

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (WNS) — Sometimes we forget that Puerto Rico means Rich Port. It's a good name, for the commonwealth is rich in beauty, rich in hospitality, rich in culture, rich in people. "Puerto Ricans," said my wife, "are as warm as the Puerto Rican sun." Many islands of the Caribbean are simply that — islands. A beach, palm trees, a hotel, a few shops — and that's it. But Puerto Rico is a 3-million-strong nation, with its own music, art, historic places, theater, cultural activities.

San Juan, the capital and center, is a fine colorful city, ranging from the sparkling modern to the mellow and picturesque. The countryside is lush, teeming with bird life, flowers and tropical verdure including the world-famous rain forest of El Yunque. At the other end of the island is the city of Mayaguez and across the island is pretty Ponce. Fine roads interlace the island. While not all are freeways, they are adequate and in keeping with the countryside.

We explored the interior one day, under the guidance of men from the Puerto Rican Agriculture Department. We visited one farm and saw great gobs of papayas growing — and oranges and tuberoses and plantains. The farmer confided that he has another fine crop — sons. He's raising 13!

Another farm we visited was rearing hundreds of pigs and thousands of laying hens. We were very kindly offered lunch there. Good, I thought, here's THE place for ham and eggs. Wouldn't you know we'd be served cod fish?

Then back to town.

The Hilton International people are the center of things hotel-ish. Besides operating the deservedly world-famous Caribe Hilton, they have in the past year assumed operation of the El Centro complex, which includes the fabulous multimillion dollar Convention Center, flanked by the Hotels Condado Beach and La Concha — one at each end. A Hilton operation for just a year, these three connected edifices are, you might say, the heart of the island.

In La Concha we found our two favorite restaurants — one called, not too oddly, La Concha, as it is located within a huge concrete conch shell. The food is stunning, French and Continental: Dover sole with artichokes, Gaspe salmon steak poached, noisettes of veal aux chanterelles, roast rack of lamb provencale. And I couldn't resist the broiled Caribbean lobster. Prices — very fair: $7.50 to $11.50 for entrees.

Another night we "went Puerto Rican" at the Concha's native restaurant, "Las Delicias." That needs no translation. Everything was delicious. I sampled as good a paella as I ever had in Spain while my good wife pitched into Carne Mechada — chopped beef filled with onion, garlic, sweet and green peppers, capers and oregano, served with yam fritters and a side order of pigeon peas. Incidentally, these peas (sometimes beans), with rice and plantains, constitute the numero uno food of the island, eaten by peasant and prince alike. Prices here are about the same as at La Concha. But, one cannot leave Las Delicias without mentioning the service and the superb native pottery and crockery used in this authentic native restaurant.

Food is important when you're away from familiar strands. And Puerto Rico "eats good" — with quality, versatility, and freshness. The fish are still wiggling. The fruits and vegetables are just picked. The chefs are of all nationalities. For example, one night we regaled ourselves at the Hostal Castilla, a beautiful, popular and very elegant establishment. The menu includes fare worthy of a United Nations: Iranian Beluga caviar, Spanish ham and sausages, snails Bourguignonne, bouillabaise Marseillaise, Shashlik, English mixed grill — and flan shares dessert billing with Crepes Suzettes. A superb restaurant, the Hostal Castilla.

In the old city there's a relatively new French place called LeChatelet, hard by the cathedral. The decor is in keeping with old San Juan but the menu is classic French. Duckling — choose it Bigarade, with orange, Montmorency with cherries, or au poivre vert (with green peppercorns). Or, should you prefer beef: select from entrecote, tournedos, chateaubriand. Leave in time to catch the late show down the block at Ocho Portes (Eight Doors), where piano virtuoso Joe Valiente plays Mozart and — or Sondheim.

For a place far simpler, and less expensive too, try La Fonda Del Callejon, reputedly the oldest in old San Juan. Here is where you sample such "especialidades" as fricassee of kid, pionono — banana and meat with egg — or try fried beef with plantains.

With your rice and beans you can have cod, squid, chicken, shrimp or lobster, whilst the overhead fans whirl and cool.

If you have any appetite left, save it for light lunch pool-side at the Concha's delightful El Patio — sandwiches, omelettes, salads. As you eat, watch a fab fashion show. Or, go to the buffet in El Centro. Formerly the Biteca, or as it is now called, the Canado Plaza. For $5.15, gratuity included, you can eat and eat and eat native Puerto Rican dishes, salads, super desserts. Best value in town.

Why am I so enthusiastic?

Aside from the grub — which has become splendid — I like the cosmopolitan atmosphere. No banana island, this. If I want music it is there — from grand opera to steelband.

If I want dance, I can attend the Le Lo Lai Festival including the Ballet Folklorico, which is utterly charming, or the Bomba Fiesta of Afro-Caribbean dances, rhythms and drums, or the old San Juan street fair, or the Fiesta Jibara beach party complete with rum and rhumba.

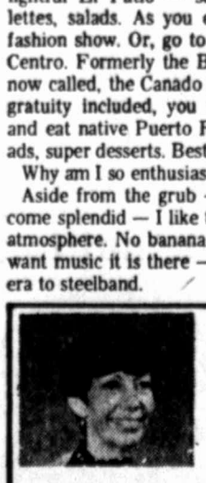

If I want theater, the young Puerto Rican repertory companies are always doing something of note, or the hotels are importing great acts, entertainers, events. We were lucky enough to catch the opening of Chita Rivera at the Caribe Hilton. Phew! For one and one-half hours that lady never stopped singing, dancing, undulating, insinuating. Energy crisis? Plug in Chita — she can light a city, or a stage.

And then there's something else. I mentioned the warmth of the people. They're just naturally pleasant and anxious to have you like their island. "Service, service, service," said Rudy Greiner, bossman of Hilton's El Centro complex, "is the watchword." And everyone on the staff must have been listening.

I think you'll like Puerto Rico — only three and one-half hours away from New York by deluxe Eastern Airline jets, with entertainment all the way. I know I did!

BEANS AND POTATOES

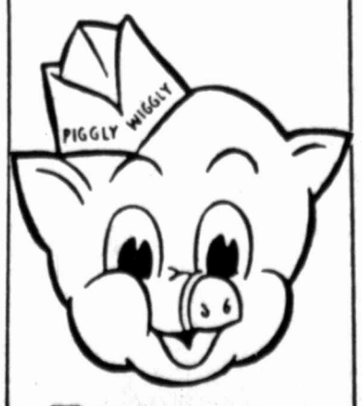

Potatoes are good teamed with snap beans. Peel and dice the potatoes and cut the beans in small pieces; cook together in a small amount of salted boiling water until tender. Dress with butter and garnish, if you like, with crumbled, crisply cooked bacon.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Thought I would tell you what I do as a time and money saver that someone else who lives alone might use...

I purchase meat and vegetables for the express purpose of making my own dinners. I do not necessarily use leftovers.

I buy two or three different kinds of meat and buy frozen vegetables in the family packs (as it usually is cheaper to buy in quantities) and make 12 to 14 dinners at a time. (These could be made up according to what room you have in the freezer.)

When I get the dinners ready, I cover each one with foil and put in the freezer. These can be marked or labeled as to contents, or left unmarked.

If unmarked, a person gets a surprise each time one is used; however, when storing in the freezer, alternate the dinners so one is not eating the same kind each night.

When I come home from work, I just take a dinner out of the freezer and pop it in 375-degree oven for about 30 minutes. Then all I have to do is fix a salad and dessert, if desired.

This way saves on the daily chore of making decisions as to what to have, cuts down on dishwashing (saves soap and water) and time.

Also gives me a balanced meal plus I can't go back for seconds! -Mildred Minor

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband was tired of retrieving our garbage can cover (and garbage) after the wind had blown it off, or the neighborhood dogs had knocked the can over.

He took one of our backpack stretch tie-downs and fastened the hooked ends through the handles on both sides of the can, stretching the strap over the top and through the lid handle.

It keeps the cover on tightly, and it is easy to unhook the strap to empty the garbage into the can. -Sandra Jones

Great! It works! -Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Halfway through a roll of toilet paper, squeeze the cardboard tube to make it an oval shape.

The paper will be a little more difficult to pull, and less likely to come rolling off in excessive amounts.

This little tip will save many sheets of that expensive item. -Mrs. Pat Higgins

DEAR HELOISE:

With a little ones around the house, there is often something made of glass getting broken.

I more or less try to piece it back together before throwing it away to make sure there aren't any pieces missed that little bare feet might step on. -Coleen Fierro

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a suggestion using vegetable-based non-stick cooking spray...

Along with spraying the inside of your pots or pans, try spraying your spatula and serving spoon as well.

DEAR HELOISE:

To save chair rungs from heels, buy the clean plastic golf club tuves (very inexpensive).

Cut to the correct length of the chair rung; then with a knife carefully cut through the length of the tube and slip over the rung.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was very much impressed with the funeral services of that dearly loved Senator from Minnesota, Hubert H. Humphrey. If ever a man earned the title "Greatest Living American," it was HHH.

Our entire family was glued to the TV set watching both funeral services — the one in the rotunda of the nation's Capitol and the church services in St. Paul. Our eyes were moist when Vice President Mondale said, "He taught us how to win — he taught us how to lose. He taught us how to live — and he taught us how to die."

President Jimmy Carter, in his eulogy delivered at the Church of Hope in St. Paul, quoted Mahatma Gandhi's list of the seven most grievous sins. I wish I had written them down because such gems of wisdom should be read and reread. Can you find these seven sins for me, Ann? — Just Another American Who Loved "The Happy Warrior" (A Vermont Republican, At That)

Dear Vermont Republican: I was among those present at the services in St. Paul and was also deeply moved by the eulogies. I, too, wanted a copy of the President's quote from Mahatma Gandhi and managed to get it. Here it is:

"Mahatma Gandhi once wrote that there were seven sins in the world: wealth without work, pleasure without conscience, knowledge without character, commerce without morality, science without humanity, worship without sacrifice, and politics without principle."

President Carter then added, "Hubert Humphrey may have sinned in the eyes of God, as we all do, but in the eyes of Mahatma Gandhi, Hubert Humphrey was without sin."

Dear Ann Landers: I made up my mind if it happened one more time I would write to you. I am going to sign my name and address and you can print it for the whole world to see. I've had it.

I received a birthday card this morning signed, "With Love from Harriet and Fiddlesticks." I want you to know that "Fiddlesticks" is Harriet's toy poodle.

This woman signs her dog's name to everything. I don't want best wishes from a poodle. It's the same at Christmas time — only worse. Harriet isn't the only one. Other friends send pictures of the "family," with dogs, cats, monkeys, rabbits, goldfish, hamsters and canaries all lined up — and named, right along with the children.

Will you please say something in your column about this insulting practice? — Frothing In Fresno

Dear Friend: Please note, I made up a name for you and put you in another part of the country. By the time this letter appears in print you will undoubtedly have cooled off. I'd hate to have your letter rub in your friendship with Harriet forever, and it would have, had I printed it as you wrote it. (You'll notice I also changed "Harriet's" name and that of her dog.)

Many people consider pets part of the family. Even if you think it's wacky, accept it. Remember, dear, "Everyone is a little queer — but thee and me — "

New Oven Turns Self Off

NEW YORK (UPI) — A microwave oven that cooks without the aid of a timer or a temperature probe features an automatic device that "senses" when the food is done and turns itself off automatically.

The system includes a thermistor that monitors the heat food gives off. The thermistor is programmed to cut off power when an appropriate temperature rise occurs.

CALCULATE INTAKE

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — One way to try to cut down your food intake is by registering every bite you take on a calculator-type device. The hand-held electronic counter recently introduced by a Fort Collins manufacturer is supposed to monitor not only how much you eat but how fast you eat it. The device comes with a chart to record daily diet progress and speed of intake and a guidebook that discusses nutrition, dieting and permanent weight loss.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. A reader's query in your column recently compared a $10,000 annuity paying $81.51 a month for life with a 7 3/4 percent savings account. that annuity income does not represent a 9.87 percent return. Actually it means you have a little more than 10 years to recover your investment. If you die before that, you've merely used up your money, at no interest. Clearly, an annuity is a gamble and should be recognized as such.

A. Call it a gamble, a lottery, a horse race, a bet–whatever you will. An annuity is NOT an investment; it is a contract to provide you with income. You hand over $10,000 now (or over a period of years) and the insurance company (or the other side of the deal) agrees to give you $81.51 a month–or whatever payment your age and sex indicate on its mortality you buy a "refund" type, it promises you fixed income for life plus payment to your heirs of any part of the $10,000 you don't live long enough to collect.

The reader you refer to bought a lifetime contract, and he did it precisely because he did NOT want to gamble on the chance of running out of money before he runs out of breath.

You can draw up all the tables you like; compare $775 a year bank interest (with principal intact) with $987.12 from the annuity with capital gone. Actually, you don't have to figure the $10,00 used up at death; it is no longer yours when you first turn it over. you've bought a contract for which you've paid $10,000 cash.

there's a point in your figuring how long it takes to get your money back anymore than you can figure on getting bck whatever number of dollars it now costs to buy a marriage license. You've made a deal.

Q. Why am I expected to pay for my stock in five days, but do not receive the certificate for a month or more? If something happens to the broker, am I reimbursed for loss of interest during a period of litigation?

A. I think the average shareholder has a lot of things to be peeved about. But your complaint is of your own making: The insistence on having a stock certificate in your own hands (or vault).

Have you ever stopped to think that you may deposit a $2,000 check in your savings account, or in your commerical bank, and all you get for it is an entry in your passbook or a stamped carbon copy deposit slip? We don't ask the bank or savings and loan for a $2,000 engraved certificate attesting to our investment. Many of us own homes for decades but haven't the slightest idea where the satisfaction of mortage is or, often, the title papers. We depend–so would our attorney in the case of sale–on title registration at town hall.

The securities industry has tried for years to do away with the costly and time consuming shuffling of stock certificates back and forth between buyers and sellers. It takes, as you point out, weeks and even months.

You pay for your stock in five days after purchase because that's the law and becaue you became owner of the stock the moment your broker agreed to the purchase on the floor of the exchange. In fact you are paying five days late.

It makes no difference when you get the certificate.

The day you receive the certificate (or the date on it) has absolutely NO bearing on whether or not you receive a dividend, stock split or proxy for the annual meeting, etc.

If by any chance, some brokerage firm problem intervenes, this also makes no difference in your claim on these dividends or rights. So there is no point in talking of loss of dividend, or interest in the case of a bond.

HEARTLINE: My father is going to be 65 years old in July of this year. He will be retiring and going on Social Security and Medicare. My father has a heart problem that makes it necessary for him to go to the doctor quite frequently. I have read that Medicare is not adequate coverage for retired people. Yet, I do not know much about purchasing a health insurance policy for someone on Medicare. Can you help me on this? C.J.

A. Many different insurance companies have various types of Medicare supplement insurance policies. A person shopping for this type of policy can usually get one to pay any of the deductibles under the Medicare program. Listed below are the most basic types of coverage offered by Medicare supplements:

1. Pays the first $144.00 of your hospital stay which is not covered by Medicare Part "A."
2. Pays the Part "A" $36.00 deductible per day from the 61st through the 90th day of hospitalization.
3. Pays the Part "A" $72.00 deductible per day while you are using your 60 day life-time reserve.
4. Pays so many dollars a day from the 90th day on (for a certain number of days) in the hospital.
5. Pays so many dollars a day from the first day of hospitalization above and apart from the deductibles
6. Pays the $60.00 deductible on your doctor and medical bills which Medicare Part "B" does not cover.
7. Pays 20 percent of the reasonable charges of your doctor and medical bills after your $60.00 deductible since Medicare will only cover 80 percent of the reasonable charges.

Remember that not all Medicare supplements pay all that is listed above. Some supplements pay a few of these. Very few, if any, pay all of them and a policy with all of the above coverages would be extremely expensive. Most supplements offered contain the coverage listed in numbers (1), (2), and (4), probably the most important supplement coverage. It would also be wise to get one with the coverage listed in number (7).

For people who have problems understanding their health insurance, Heartline has developed a book to help them. "Heartline's Guide to Health Insurance and Medicare" supplements covers the major questions you will have concerning the purchase of health insurance. This book covers Medicare supplements, disability income policies, and regular health insurance policies. There is also a policy checklist in this book which will help you in asking questions to an insurance agent that calls on you. To order, send $1.50 to "Heartline's Guide to Health Insurance," P.O Box 11934, Chicago, IL 60611. This book is completely guaranteed. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am a 63-year-old widow. My husband passed away two years ago. I have been drawing Social Security widow's benefits ever since. In the last year I have been seeing a gentleman quite frequently. We are thinking of getting married, but there is one thing that bothers me. I have heard that my Social Security benefits will be reduced if I remarry. Can you tell me about this? K.S.

A. Under the new Social Security tax bill passed in December, 1977, a widow or widower can remarry without having their Social Security benefits reduced. This regulation becomes effective January, 1979. It also permits reapplication by both men and women whose dependent benefits were reduced because of changes in their marital status.

Therefore, any widows and widowers whose Social Security benefits were reduced because of remarraige, should apply in January, 1979, to have their benefits reinstated at the previous level.

HEARTLINE: I have worked in the Railroad Industry for most of my life. I have heard from my employer that I might be eligible for a supplement annuity from the Railroad Retirement program. Can you tell me how to become eligible for this? T.S.

A. In order for a Railroad employee to be eligible for a supplement annuity, he or she must have at least 25 years (294 months) of creditable Railroad service and a current connection with the Railroad industry on his or her regular annuity beginning date. Also, their regular annuity must have been awarded after June 30, 1966, and he or she must permanently generally the last day of the month following the month they attain age 65.

Nicklaus Back On Track, Defends Inverrary Crown

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus fired five consecutive birdies on the last five holes for the 65 he had predicted he'd need Sunday, and won the $250,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic by one stroke over Grier Jones.

Nicklaus, nine strokes behind at the midway point in four-round tournament, said he would need a 65 on the final day to stay in contention. He shot that 7-under-par 65 Sunday for a four-day total of 209 over the par-72, 7,127-yard Inverrary Country Club Course. or the $50,000 first prize.

"Nothing unusual happened today," said Nicklaus, jokingly, as he entered the press tent after winning the $50,000 first-prize check. "It was just a pleasant walk in the park."

Nicklaus made an 80-foot chip shot for a birdie on No. 14, starting the string that produced the victory. Jones, who shot a 5-under-par 67, said, it was that shot that turned the tide.

"He chipped in at 14 and then turned the whole day around," said Jones, who earned $28,500. "It was just one of those days where everything went right for him and you've got to believe that when everything goes right for him, he's going to win."

Nicklaus' last victory came in his own Memorial at Muirfield, Ohio, last May. He said it was good to be victorious again, especially after blowing up last week and finishing second in the Los Angeles Open.

"Winning again is fun — particularly after throwing away that one last week, making the bogey and double bogey," he said. "I looked like I wasn't in this one and kept with it. I had a couple of things happen near the end and then got myself in position to win."

He could not remember previously making five consecutive birdies on the last five holes.

Hale Irwin, also in contention, finished third with a 3-under-par 69 on the day while Andy Bean and Jerry Pate, 9-under and three behind Nicklaus in the tournament, tied for fourth place.

Irwin, who had a 3-day total of 278, picked up $17,500. Bean, who shot a three-under-par 69, and Pate, with a five under 67, earned $11,000 each.

Nicklaus shot 70 and 75 in the unusally cool Florida weather on Thursday and Friday, and came through with a 66 Saturday when temperature began to warm.

He started his consecutive birdie string on the 436-yard, par 4 No. 14. His drive went in the trap and a three-wood from there landed on the fringe some 80 feet from the hole.

"I played well up to 13 and was discouraged because I wasn't gaining of Greer," said Nicklaus.

On the 532-yard, par-5 No. 15, he hit a three wood into the woods on the right and then chipped to about 13 feet from the hole before sinking the putt.

He put his four iron about 18 feet away from the hole on the 199-yard, par 3 No. 16 and holed the chip shot.

Nicklaus then pulled his drive on the 400-yard, par 4 No. 17, hit a six iron within some 20 feet and sank the putt to pull even with Jones.

Then, on the 407-yard, par 4 No. 18, Nicklaus hit a three wood and a nine iron to about four feet from the hole. Jones was about 12 to 15 feet away.

"After the four previous putts," he said, "this was the only putt I expected to make."

Nicklaus birdied the first hole then bogeyed No. 4 before coming up with another birdie on No.9 to tour the front nine in one under.

He missed a 30-feet eagle putt on No. 11 but settled for a birdie and then went on his birdie string at No. 14.

Jones, meanwhile, made the turn in two under. He then had birdies on Nos. 12 and 13 and held a two-stroke lead on Nicklaus before the "Golden Bear" started his birdie streak.

"I played about as good as I could but I guess it just wasn't good enough," Jones said.

"It was just one of those days where everything went right for him and you've got to believe when everything goes right for him, he's going to win," said Jones.

Irish Surprise Warriors 65-59

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Freshman Kelly Tripucka, held scoreless in the first half, pumped in 15 second-half points Sunday to fuel a furious Notre Dame charge and lead the Fighting Irish to a 65-59 comeback victory over top-ranked Marquette in college basketball.

The nationally-televised triumph boosted ninth-ranked Notre Dame's record to 19-5 and improved their prospects for a post-season bid to the NCAA tournament. The loss dropped Marquette's record to 22-3.

The Warriors had led all the way until Don Williams hit a jumper with 2:50 left in the game to put the Irish on top 58-57. Marquette, which streaked to a 39-25 halftime advantage, gradually saw its lead slip away, although five times in the second half the Warriors scored after Notre Dame had pulled to within one point.

After Williams' bucket, he hit three free throws, Tripucka added a pair from the foul line and Dave Batton scored his first two points of the game on free throws to stretch the lead to 65-57.

Butch Lee added a meaningless bucket for the Warriors at the buzzer.

The Irish, who snapped Marquette's seven-game winning streak, started the second half by trying to take advantage of Marquette's Jerome Whitehead, who had picked up three first half fouls. Notre Dame repeatedly went to Tripucka, who brought the Irish back to 49-48 on two free throws with 9:09 left in the game. That gave him 13 points on the day.

The teams then traded baskets and the Marquette lead was 57-56 with 3:24 to go.

Williams then hit the jumper that put Notre Dame ahead for good. The senior guard finished with 14 points. Marquette was led by Lee, with 14 points, and Whitehead and Ulice Payne with 12 each.

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps praised the job that substitute Bill Hanzlik did on Lee, who entered the game as Marquette's leading scorer with a 17.0 average, but hit only 6 of 19 free throw attempts.

"He was the key factor in controlling

Heiden Defends Crown

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — American Eric Heiden kept up his winning streak Sunday by defending his title in the Mens' World All-Around Speedskating Championship, defeating Norway's Jan-Egil Storholt and Sergey Marchuk of the Soviet Union.

The 19-year-old Madison, Wis., native chalked up a total of 169.016 points to take his second consecutive grand slam and his sixth world title in 55 weeks.

Storholt, a former European champion, finished second with 170.346 points and reigning European champion Marchuk was third with 171.144 points.

The young American, who baffled the skating world last year when he won his first unprecedented grand slam, took a commanding lead after the first two races Saturday, demoralizing a strong pack of European contenders.

Heiden first won the 500-meter opener in 39.01 seconds, .78 of a second ahead of runner-up Storholt and another .09 of a second faster than Kaj Stenshjemmet, also of Norway.

The young American then captured the 5,000 meters in 7 minutes, 20.80 seconds — normally Heiden's poorest distance — to increase his lead.

One of the tournament's pre-favorites, Masayuoko Kawahara of Japan, had a disasterous tournament, clocking 41.25 seconds in the 500 and 7:54.93 in the 5,000, putting him out of contention for the medals.

Martina Continues To Roll

DETROIT (AP) — No. 1 seed Martina Navratilova, characterizing herself as "a steamroller" after taking 12 straight points, breezed past Dianne Fromholtz 6-3, 6-2 Sunday for an unprecedented sixth consecutive women's professional tennis tour triumph.

Navratilova, the Czechoslovakian defector who now calls Dallas, Texas, home, pocketed the $20,000 first prize of the $100,000 tournament as she extended her tour victory record to 30 matches.

Her six first-place finishes surpasses the old mark of five set by Billy Jean King in 1971.

Navratilova said she got a little "tentative" after taking those first dozen points.

"I said to myself, 'This is too easy,'" she said. "You always feel this way when you win the first match 6-love. You know your opponent will come back and pull out all the stops.

"I was upset with myself when I let Dianne break my service in the second set at 4-1. Then it was 4-2."

Australian Fromholtz, a 21-year-old left-hander like her opponent, said she was nervous and "just happy to be in the finals."

"I was watching Butch all along" while on the bench, said Hanzlit. "Out of all the guys I've seen, he never does the same thing twice. I was playing a little off him and trying to get him to take the jumper. It's a little harder than a layup."

"We've had some great comebacks in the history of Notre Dame athletics," Phelps said. "I would have to compare this to winning the UCLA game and ending their 88-game winning streak when they were No. 1."

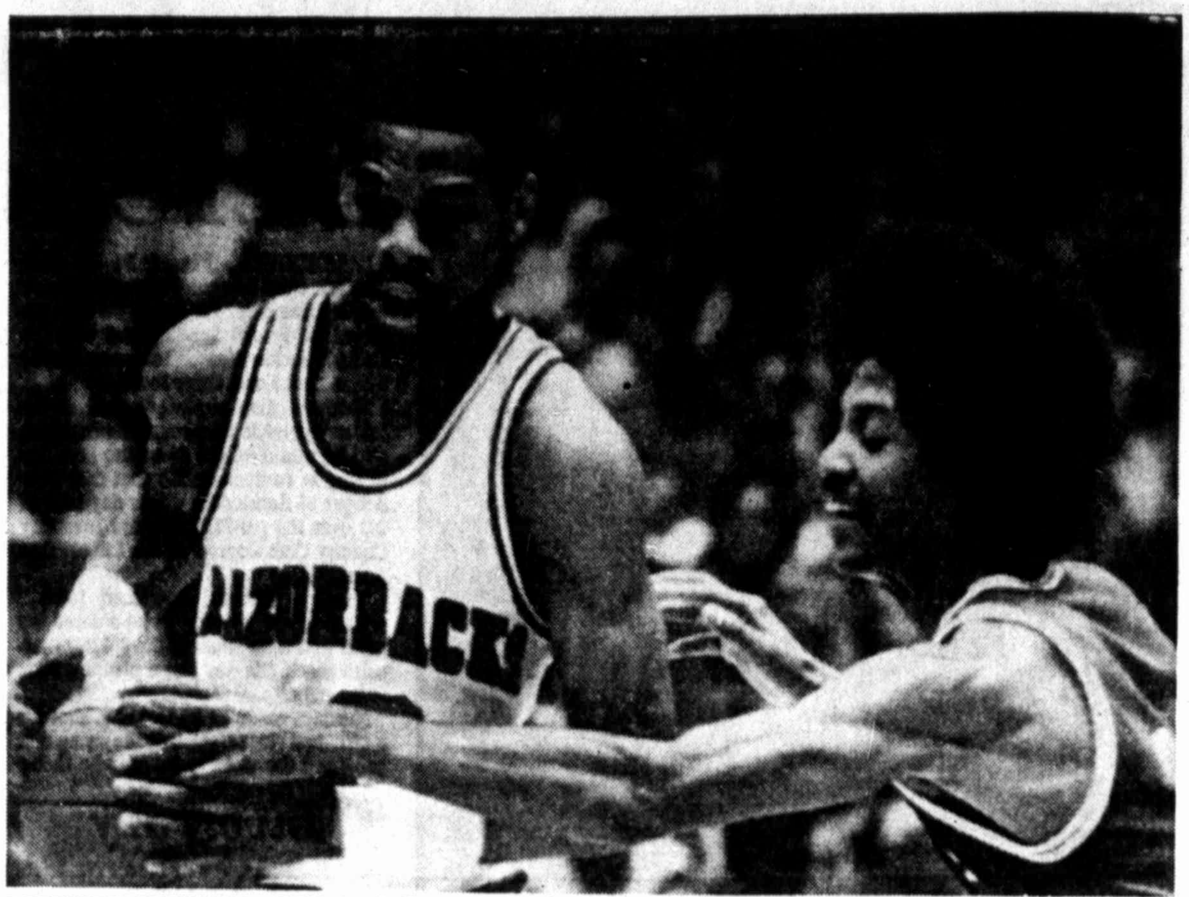

Marquette coach Hank Raymonds said, "I don't know what happened. They just had the momentum. We had absolutely no movement in the second half."

Frog Coach Likes Cougs

By The Associated Press

The Texas Christian basketball coach had just seen his lowly Horned Frogs get blasted off the court 84-42 by Arkansas in the first round of the Southwest Conference postseason tournament but Somerville said: "I still think Houston will win the tournament because of its rebounding."

Arkansas and surprising Southern Methodist, which ambushed Baylor 73-68 in Waco, meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in a quarterfinal SWC tournament game at The Summit in Houston.

Houston, an easy 108-67 destroyer of the Rice Owls, plays tough Texas Tech which came from behind to trip Texas AM 85-78 immediately after the Arkansas-SMU tilt.

The semifinalists play Friday night with the winner going against The University of Texas which shared an SWC cochampionship with Arkansas at 14-2. Texas got the bye because of a better record against third-place Houston.

However, Somerville wasn't bad-mouthing Arkansas because he likes Houston.

"I thought Coach (Eddie) Sutton could have played his starters less than he did. I know he put them in for the ovation, but it took a while to get them all out.

"This is probably the best Arkansas has played all year. Arkansas is definitely ready for the tournament. If Arkansas can stand up physically, they have a good chance."

Sutton said of his fourth-ranked Razorbacks: "I thought we played 40 minutes about as well as we have in a long while. Before the game, I told our seniors 'Let's go out in style and make it one to remember.' They did.

"It's just not going to be the same without them. We gained a lot of momentum and confidence in this game. We looked like the team that beat Memphis State, LSU and Kansas. Defensively, we looked awesome. We're starting a new season ... I don't think any of the players would admit it, but I think they were just biding their time until the NCAA. This was the type of game we needed to have."

Tech got a scare from the Aggies in a game that had tight security. There were no incidents in the aftermath of an incident at College Station in which Willie Foreman and Tech's Kent Williams collided with Williams suffering a broken jaw.

Williams wore a modified catcher's mask on his jaw and scored eight points.

"It was a real sweet win considering the circumstances," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "This was the first time we've performed well in a pressure situation since Kent got hurt."

SMU withstood a Baylor comeback to down the Bears after losing two games to them during the regular season. Baylor's Vinnie Johnson scored 30 points but it wasn't enough as SMU takes a poor 10-17 record into the tournament. SMU's record is the worst of any team to play in the postseason tourney.

Tickets are going fast for the 15,600-seat Summit. A sellout for the Saturday day is assured.

NCAA Probe Begins Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former investigator for the National Collegiate Athletic Association will be the first witness Monday as Congress opens public hearings into the enforcement policies of the NCAA, the major governing body of U.S. intercollegiate athletics.

J. Brent Clark, a 29-year-old Oklahoma lawyer who resigned from the NCAA Dec. 30, reportedly will tell the House oversight and investigations subcommittee that the NCAA has a policy of "selective punishment" under which certain major colleges are never investigated or penalized by the association when these institutions are suspected of having violated NCAA rules.

Clark also is expected to tell the subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., that the NCAA selects for penalities those major colleges that do not fully cooperate with the NCAA, the New York Times said recently.

Clark resigned from the NCAA, the newspaper said, because he was "unhappy with the investigation and enforcement methods" employed by the association. The attorney is also said to claim that Walter Byers, the NCAA's executive director, selects "untouchables" — major colleges that will not be investigated.

Clark reportedly also will testify that the NCAA "selects for punishment certain colleges based upon factors other than reports of violations."

Byers said last Friday that Clark "won't be telling the truth" if he testifies "in accordance with published articles."

He added, "Brent Clark is either speaking from ignorance, fantasizing or deliberately misrepresenting the facts."

The Congressional investigation was prompted by Rep. James Santini, D-Nev., last fall after two schools in his state — the University of Nevada at Reno and Las Vegas — were punished by the NCAA for rules infractions.

Santini, a subcommittee member, told a news conference recently: "After a highlight review of the evidence gathered to date, I am persuaded that when the NCAA's method of operation is revealed there will be many surprised and dismayed reactions.

"I knew there were a lot of problems with the NCAA," he said, "I really didn't fully appreciate how many serious violations of people and institutional rights were going on.

"I think we have many examples that demostrate that there's a need for very, very serious people changes and rule changes in the manner of operation of the NCAA," Santini added.

Connors Wins Denver Event

DENVER (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, hitting blistering passing shots to negate Stan Smith's serve-and-volley game, crushed the lanky Smith 6-2, 7-6 Sunday in the final singles match of a $125,000 men's tournament here.

It was Connors' third first place finish in the Denver tournament in as many tries. He has never lost a match here, having entered the 1975, 1976 and now the 1978 tournaments and won all of them. His triumph was worth $25,000 while Smith collected $12,500.

In the doubles final played later, South Africans Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan met Americans Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair.

Connors, 25, broke Smith's serve in the third and seventh games of the first set. Both players held service in the second set, setting up the seven point tie-breaker, during which several unpopular calls were made by linesmen.

Connors jumped to a 6-2 edge in the tie-breaker when he boomed two passing shots while Smith was wide witth a half volley and netted a return. Smith double-faulted on the next point to give Connors the match.

Tar Heels Ride Ford To Win

By The Associated Press

Phil Ford will always remember his last game at Chapel Hill, N.C. — and it's likely that Duke will, too.

Spurred on by a standing ovation in his final appearance before the hometown fans, North Carolina's classic guard played one of the best games of his career.

Unable to overcome Ford's emotion and the Tar Heels' devotion, a fine Duke team went down to a dramatic 87-83 defeat Saturday night in the game that decided the Atlantic Coast Conference's regular-season basketball championship.

"Ford was great," said Duke coach Bill Foster after watching the North Carolina star shoot his team full of holes with a career-high 34 points. "He did everything. He shot the ball well. He caused a lot of damage. You can't get insurance for that."

As emotional as Ford usually is, he was given an extra lift by the adoring Tar Heel fans at game time. They cheered long and loud when he was introduced.

"I told my friends I wasn't going to cry," said Ford, "but this big apple came into my throat and I couldn't hold back. It's so much fun out there. I wish I had some more games to play. I didn't care how many points we scored. I just wanted to win."

The victory gave the Tar Heels a first-round bye in the ACC tournament, which begins Wednesday in Greensboro, N.C.

While North Carolina was gaining a strategic position for the ACC playoffs, Kentucky and San Francisco secured NCAA playoff berths and Michigan State moved to the brink of a post-season playoff spot.

Kentucky defeated Tennessee 68-57 to clinch a share of its 31st Southeastern Conference title. The victory guaranteed the nation's second-ranked team the SEC berth in the NCAA's Mideast Regionals because of its two victories this season over runnerup Mississippi State.

San Francisco clinched the West Coast Athletic Conference title with a 79-73 decision over Nevada-Reno. The 49ers' victory earned them an automatic berth in the NCAA's West Regionals.

Michigan State's 89-67 triumph over Illinois Saturday, assured the Spartans of at least a tie for the Big Ten championship. To win the title outright and gain an NCAA berth, they need only a victory in one of their next two conference games or a loss by runnerup Purdue.

Meanwhile, Creighton whipped Southern Illinois 62-56 to capture the regular-season championship of the Missouri Valley Conference. The victory assured the Blue Jays a bye in The Valley playoffs until the final game on March 5.

Arkansas, Houston, Texas Tech and SMU were winners in the opening round of the Southwest Conference playoffs. Arkansas defeated Texas Christian 84-42; Houston trounced Rice 108-67; Texas Tech trimmed Texas AM 85-78 and SMU turned back Baylor 73-68.

South Alabama upset top-seeded North Carolina-Charlotte 66-56 and New Orleans routed Jacksonville 79-64 to advance to the final of the Sun Belt playoffs.

Elsewhere, third-ranked UCLA disposed of Oregon 83-57; fifth-ranked New Mexico stopped Brigham Young 71-66; No. 6 Kansas whipped Colorado 70-60; St. John's upset No. 11 Providence 60-51; No. 12 Florida State edged Georgia Tech 85-82; No. 15 Illinois State walloped Centenary 90-77; No. 16 Detroit outscored Xavier of Ohio 83-77; 17th-ranked Syracuse blasted Boston College 97-80; 18th-ranked Georgetown beat Holy Cross 77-61; Indiana shocked No. 19 Minnesota 68-47 and 20th-ranked Louisville crushed Memphis State 115-97.

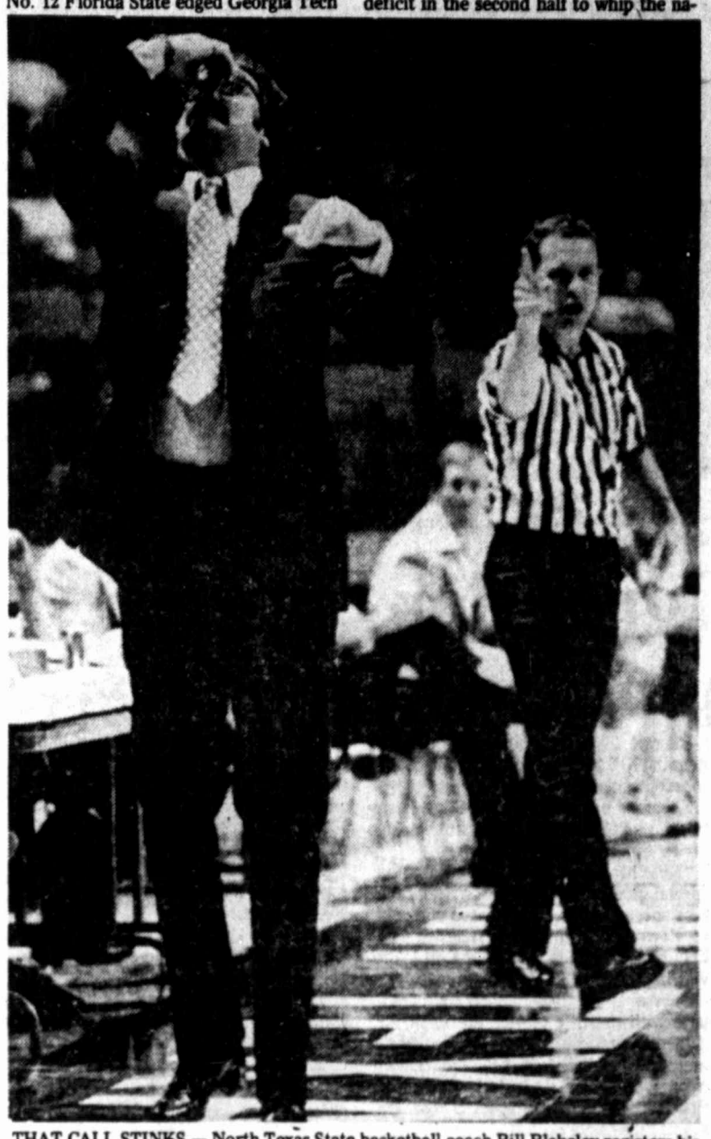

Ford capped his magnificent performance by sinking two free throws with six seconds left to clinch the victory for eighth-ranked North Carolina over Duke. The Tar Heels rallied from a seven-point deficit in the second half to whip the nation's 13th-ranked team.

Jack Givens scored 18 points and Mike Phillips added 13 as Kentucky beat Tennessee for the first time on the Volunteers' home court since the late Adolph Rupp retired in 1972. The second-ranked Wildcats had missed two practices the past week because 11 players were down with the flu. But they made up for a lack of stamina with a lot of effort, Coach Joe Hall said,

"It was one of the greatest efforts I've ever seen," said Hall, not easily given to praise. "You just don't know how sick we've been this week. I just can't say enough about those who played today."

Winford Boynes broke open a tight game with nine points in the first five minutes of the second half to lead San Francisco past Nevada-Reno. Boynes' strong effort sparked the Dons out of a 38-38 halftime tie.

"We handled their press well," said San Fransico Coach Bob Gaillard. "Nevada is a very difficult team to play against. They can beat you with their great quickness and they shoot very, very well."

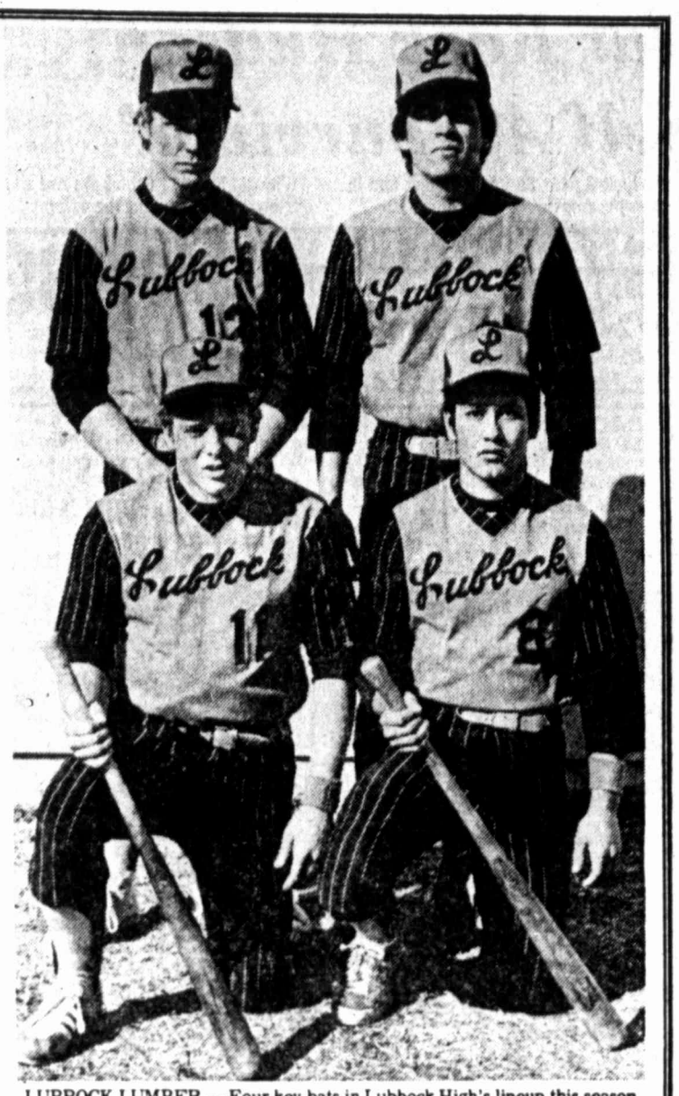

THAT CALL STINKS — North Texas State basketball coach Bill Blakeley registers his opinion of a call by referee Tim Ashmore while Ashmore registers his opinion of Blakeley by calling a technical foul. The incident stemmed from a charging call in North Texas' game against Houston Baptist College in Denton. (AP Laserphoto)

LUBBOCK LUMBER — Four key bats in Lubbock High's lineup this season will be (top row) Jamie Greene and Ernest Day and (bottom row) Terry Brady and Bobby Ibarra. Westerner Boss Back In Saddle

Lubbock High's baseball team and its most important returning member? Come on, quick, don't think too hard. Ernest Day? No. Noel Jaime? Nope.

The man's name is Vince Buffamonte, who returns to his head coaching duties after one year's absence (or less) for medical reasons. Buffamonte suffered a heart attack on Valentine's Day, of all days, last year. His doctor discovered no permanent damage, fixed the coach up in no time but Buffamonte tried to bounce back too quickly. Therefore, the good doctor wisely advised the coach to bypass last season. And you don't think our coach isn't trying to make up for lost time?

"Sometimes I think I've worked them too hard. Half of their girlfriends aren't with them anymore. They never get to see the guys," Buffamonte said.

The Lubbock High coach guided his Westerners to the district diamond title in 1976. Last year's team under the direction of football aide Mike Plumlee went 17-13 and 7-9. Buffamonte admits this year's club will be young, but good and young.

"These are the Sesame Street kids. We've got two juniors in the outfield and a sophomore at short. But if age is going to win games, you play your seniors every year. Some of our best players happen to be younger and we just play the best we have," said the LHS coach.

The best he has, according to Buffamonte, could be a better overall hitting team than that 1976 group. However, none of the individuals seem to stand out such as Marvin Simpson and Kenny Toney did on that team.

"We will be contenders. We have an awful long way to go but we know we have some ability to go along with it. Our pitching needs experience. Hopefully, our hitting will carry us until those guys come around," Buffamonte noted.

The coach describes this Westerner unit as a "typical Lubbock High team" in many ways. Long on speed. Short on power. "We couldn't swing for the fence if we had a golf club. We'll have to settle for 120-foot bleeders," he said. And many of Lubbock's better players are small little sticks of dynamite, too. "They go around bumping into kneecaps but they're tough little toots," he said.

The ones who get yelled at, according to their coach, are the ones which attract his interest. And Buffamonte yells at every single one of them.

"What irritated me most was not coaching," he said. "There's a different rapport with kids in the locker-room than there is with kids in the classroom. The kids love it here. They don't like to leave this place."

Unlike most coaches at this time of the year, Buffamonte already has his lineup figured out. Returning second baseman Noel Jaime (.189 last year) leads the team in speed and figures to hit first. Ernest Day (.327 last year), an all-city selection, returns to center field and bats second. Day's speed ranks with Jaime's and this asset will allow the other two outfielders to guard the foul lines closer.

"When Ernest yells 'I've got it,' everybody else can get out of the way and stand around," the LHS coach said.

"Both of them hit it well. They may go out and hit .200 but they're the best we've got. We've worked with both of them defensively and they're improving. If we hit a ball out of the park, it will be Brady, Greene or (David) Rush," Buffamonte said.

Rush bats fifth and pitches first in the starting rotation. He worked only three varsity innings on the mound as a sophomore. Buffamonte labels Rush as his hardest thrower on the staff and jokes "he will throw it through a cement wall."

The sixth-place hitter Roy Morin pitches second in the rotation and plays a steady defensive first base. Rush and Morin will also hang around to handle the designated hitter's role if Buffamonte fills his lineup card too quickly. Morin, a senior southpaw, hit .254 last year and won two games with a 3.00 ERA during 14 varsity innings.

Andy Vasquez, a sophomore, bats seventh, plays shortstop and causes his coach to rave about his ability. Buffamonte calls Vasquez' arm "strong and accurate." The soph may see some mound duty along with another pitcher-shortstop Pete Del Busto, a senior who hit .250 last year.

The eighth-place hitter, third baseman Bobby Ibarra, went to the plate only six times in varsity action last year. Ibarra figures to be a spray hitter but Buffamonte likes his defense.

Tech Fem Runners Win Cinder Crown

A 1-2-3-4 finish in the 880-yard run provided the big push as Texas Tech's women ran away from their three competing teams to win a quadrangular track meet Saturday.

The Tech women, coached by Beta Little, scored 28 points in that one event en route to a winning sum of 165 points. Abilene Christian came in second with 95, followed by Angelo State with 67 and West Texas State with 22.

Tech women captured seven individual events and three of the four relays. Tech won the two-mile, 440, and mile relays. Only baton event to escape the hosts was the 880-yard medley relay.

Miss Smalley, who missed out on the 880 victory, was a double winner, taking the high jump with a leap measuring 5-2, and came back to take the 100-meter hurdles in 15.16. Miss Goodwin won the mile run (5:46.88) as well as the 880.

The mile was almost a photo finish, as Miss Goodwin nipped West Texas' Elaine Waits by .02 second. Earlier, Miss Goodwin anchored the Tech two-mile relay to victory.

Isabel Navarro, former high school runner at Brownfield, won the two-mile run for Tech, in 12:16.27.

ASU Hangs On

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — Angelo State watched a 10-point lead dwindle to a single marker at the buzzer Saturday, hanging on for a 60-59 upset win over Stephen F. Austin in first-round action of the Lone Star Conference basketball tournament at Brownwood.

The Rams had followed Ronnie Kubenka's 16-point scoring leadership into the final minutes, but winning Coach Phil George said "casual ball handling" made the game close.

Angelo was never headed after it took the lead with a little more than a minute left in the first half.

The loss ended the coaching career of SFA's Marshall Brown, who has been the Lumberjack coach the past 19 seasons.

HUDSON AND REMICK TO STAR IN WHEELS — Rock Hudson, pictured on the set of "Wheels" with actress Lee Remick, marks his 30th year in films. Hudson, a one-time mailman from Winnetka, Ill., was 22 when he appeared in his first movie, filling a small role in "Fighter Squadron." (AP Laserphoto)

Film, TV Star Rock Hudson Describes Self As 'Survivor'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rock Hudson describes himself as a survivor, and that seems an apt description as he marks his 30th year in films.

The former mailman from Winnetka, Ill., was 22 when an agent gave him a strange new name and found him a small role in "Fighter Squadron," starring Robert Stack and Edmond O'Brien.

Hudson, who had served in the Navy as Roy Fitzgerald, recalls: "Working on a movie set was all new and strange to me. The lights dazzled me, and I couldn't figure out why the set had no ceiling."

Fifty-eight films later, he survives. He recently completed a 10-hour movie for NBC, "Wheels," based on the Arthur Hailey saga of the auto industry. He is leaving for Purgatory, Colo., to star in Roger Corman's disaster movie, "Avalanche," opposite Mia Farrow.

On April 24, Rock opens "Camlot" in Chicago and continues a 16-week tour ending at Lincoln Center in New York — "Whee I'll get attacked; the critics don't think actors from Hollywood can act, or sing."

At 52, he shows signs of graying, but the classic face remains unlined. He admits to excellent health, although he once flunked a routine insurance exam all lead actors must undergo before starting a film.

"The doctor said I had high blood pressure and refused to pass me," the actor recalled. "My own doctor said it was because I was working on 'McMillan,' was under strain, overweight and getting no exercise.

"As soon as I finished the series, he had me take brisk walks — not runs — in the hills. Within two weeks, my blood pressure was back to normal."

A film historian once termed Rock Hudson "the last major star to come out of the Hollywood studio system... a traditional Romantic Hero in an era when such types are exceedingly rare." Hudson spent 18 years at Universal, and during one four-yar period made 22 features.

That was good for me, because I started with very little experience," he remarked. "By the time I got my first good dramatic role in 'Magnificent Obsession,' I was ready for it. Then I had to fight, cajole and threaten to get the studio to loan me out for another film I wanted, 'Giant.'"

The 1956 epic drew him an Academy nomination as best actor, and he seemed destined for a dramatic career.

"Then I did 'Pillow Talk' and I was cast in comedies only. That was okay for a while, but it became a detriment instad of an asset. I had to fight against it, and along came a picture that was not a commercial success but convinced people I could act — 'Seconds.' Then it was back to drama."

When films moved toward th anti-hero as leading man, Rock eased comfortably into television. "McMillan and Wife" started as a World Premiere movie, ran six years as a mini-series. In its last season he lost wife, Susan St. James, and the show became merely 'McMillan."

Why did it end? "I think we had all run ourselves dry, including the writers."

NBC Sets Hopes For Future On Developing New Comedies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — To paraphrase an adage, the folks at NBC are saying: "Laugh and the world lays high Nielsens on you; cry and you land in the cellar."

NBC has run third in the three-horse ratings race the entire season, trailing ABC and CBS by substantial numbers of viewers.

Viewers may shrug and ask what's the difference of a couple of rating points.

The difference is astounding.

A show with a 30 rating ostensibly has 30 million homes tuned in. Sponsors are billed according to number of viewers.

According to NBC executive Dick Ebersol, each rating point is worth $36 million per season.

"It's projected ABC will win this season's ratings by four full points over NBC and CBS," said Ebersol. "That means a difference of almost $150 million, which is a hell of a lot of money."

Ebersol, 29, is the youngest vice president in NBC history. He is also one of the most outspoken.

Ebersol's theory of why NBC has been in the pits is a lack of successful weekly series, especially comedy shows.

"NBC has historically concentrated on special programs," he said. "And each new special has to be promoted and sold to viewers individually. A series is sold only once and then rides along on habit viewing."

Ebersol is a serious-minded Yale graduate with the title of vice president for comedy and variety programs, a department in which NBC has been notoriously weak for most of its history. Excepting Bob Hope and comedy specials now and again, there have been few laughs on the network.

"Laverne and Shirley,""Happy Days" and "Three's Company," the trio of ABC sitcoms, have led the Nielsen parade all season.

In other days it was "I Love Lucy,""The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "All In The Family" knocking them dead at CBS.

The best NBC had to offer was "Sanford and Son" and "Chico and The Man," both now dead as doornails.

"Our network was the king of variety for a while," Ebersol said. "We had Bob Hope, 'Show of Shows,''Laugh-In' and my own project, 'Saturday Night Live.' But it is situation comedy that counts most right now.

"Both ABC and CBS have 14 half-hours of sitcoms. We have two, 'CPO Sharkey' and 'Quark.' We've never been strong on sitcoms.

"NBC tends to do too many things by committee. It works in some areas, but not comedy. The responsibility for developing some comedy shows is mine.

"I'm thrilled that Fred Silverman is coming to NBC from ABC. He will make people accountable for errors and establish a system of communication in the network free of red tape, which is what we need."

So far, Ebersol said, he has held some 700 meetings with writers at which roughly a thousand ideas were presented for sitcoms. NBC put up the money for 80 script deals, paying from $24,000 to $35,000 per script.

Of those 80 scripts, all written by professionals, Ebersol found only 14 worthy of being made into pilot shows.

"Last year NBC made 20 pilots for comedy series," he said, "and not a single one of them got on the air.

"Eleven of our projected shows haven't been done yet. We have 'Sweethearts' and 'Roller Girls' this spring and a Norman Lear series, 'The Arrangement,' about a young couple living together, set for the fall.

"I've made two firm commitments to NBC comedy. The first is to include females in comedy. NBC has been a sexless network in both comedy and drama. For almost all its history it has been a male network. Only 'Bionic Woman' and 'Police Woman' are on the air now. Otherwise, it is all male stars.

"Women today prefer to watch other women on the tube in comedy and drama, and so do male viewers. Look at 'Charlie's Angels.'

"My second commitment is to bring new comedy stars to the network. We have Joe Namath in a new sitcom playing a basketball coach. Paul Williams, the singer-composer, and Jerry Reed are starring in pilots, too."

Ebersol said the other two networks have 10 executives in their comedy departments. His only associate in comedy at NBC is Brandon Tartikoff, 28, a classmate at Yale, although they didn't know each other in college.

CBS Anniversary Shows Nearing Tube

NEW YORK (UPI) — A three-ring circus would look like a snap to Alexander Cohen, who recently was shuffling around 120-odd stars (including Lassie) with the dexterity of a blackjack dealer.

He and his wife, Hildy Parks, also have been digging through 25-years of CBS television programs, from Edward R. Murrow to Lucille Ball to "M-A-S-H."

Cohen, best known as a Broadway producer who also has put on the highly praised televised Tony Awards programs, is executive producer of the seven-night, nine-and-a-half-hour CBS birthday salute to itself. His wife is head writer and script editor.

"CBS: On the Air" will celebrate the 50-year history of CBS, but the accent will be on television, which has been around for only about half that time. The opening show, hosted by Walter Cronkite and Mary Tyler Moore, is scheduled for March 26, 8-10 p.m., Central time, to be followed by 9-10 p.m. (Central time) programs March 27-31, winding up with an 7:30-10 p.m. gala on April 1, during which CBS chairman of the board William S. Paley will appear.

Anniversary shows, like awards presentations, can become a meaningless hodgepodge of star bows and film clip snips that add up to no more than a back-patting network exercise in self-congratulation. Cohen has avoided that pitfall on the Tony shows and believes he has done it again for CBS.

"You need insistence on perfection," Cohen said in an interview. "You need the constant inability to settle for anything else. It drives actors crazy. I won't let them rehearse on camera. I sent each of them a lovely letter a week ahead of time saying I was looking forward to working with them, telling them where and when the shooting was going to be. Then in a P.S., all in caps and underlined, I wrote, 'There will be no cue cards' and enclosed a script."

Cohen refuses to name the actor, but he swears he arrived at CBS one day to find a cue card on the studio floor that read, "Hello, I'm (actor's name)."

"I said to the cue card man, 'How dare you offend this man that way! Take all the cue cards out of here.' I thought the actor would fall over dead. But he did better than he had ever done before."

Cohen said the CBS series of shows has been arranged to associate stars and programs with the days of the week on which they appeared, although he allowed that "CBS has loused us up on every day in some way." He referrad to the schedule changes, so that "Kojak," "Carol Burnett" and "M-A-S-H," among others, now appear on different nights from those on which they were scheduled when the anniversary show was prepared.

March 26, opening night, features the big parade of stars, all the men in black tie ("not navy blue," Cohen insisted) and all the women in basic black. "Member of the Family" is a delightful Jerry Herman tune written for the show, depicting CBS as a member of the viewer's family and via flashbacks reminding the audience of days gone by, particularly Sunday nights.

March 27 is Monday night, comedy time for CBS, with George Burns, Lucille Ball and Bea Arthur in a baggy pants production number.

Alan Alda hosts March 28, a Tuesday night ("M-A-S-H," of course, now has been switched to Monday) testing viewers nostalgia expertise with a "Name That Theme" quiz. Guest stars include Garry Moore and Phil Silvers. March 29, Wednesday, will team the Peanuts characters with Dick Van Dyke, Cicely Tyson, Buddy Ebsen and Danny Kaye. The Waltons, including John-boy, take over Thursday, March 30.

Friday, March 31, Lauren Bacall focuses on Edward R. Murrow's "Person-to-Person," and Eve Arden ("Our Miss Brooks"), Linda Lavin, Bonnie Franklin, Jim Nabors and Richard Crenna (Miss Brooks' favorite student, Walter Denton) perform an original song by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, lyrics by Cy Coleman.

Saturday, April 1, will put cowboys and clowns together in an original dance set to music by Jule Styne, while Carol Burnett, Art Carney, Art Linkletter, Carroll O'Connor and Tony Randall, among others, entertain.

Cohen decided all clips must come from shows on the air at least four years and must include meaningful material ("no subliminal glimpses") and all major characters.

There was help offered but no interference from Board Chairman Paley, Cohen said, contrasting Paley with RCA's Gen. Sarnoff.

"NBC is a division of a conglomerate that manufactures electronic equipment. Sarnoff was a visionary communications man in the hardware business.

"CBS is in the entertainment industry, and Paley is as much a showman as P.T. Barnum or Flo Ziegfeld," Cohen said.

With all the unlimited budget and special nature of the assignment, on leaving the CBS studios in Hollywood Cohen knew a pang of real regret. Taking a shortcut, he went past a storehouse of videotape in cans.

"There must have been 7,500-8,000 cans of tape on those shelves," Cohen said. "I was so depressed I could have cried, because that's where this show will end up — on a shelf in one of those cans. It can't be rerun. It'll be all over."

Executives Lose Interest In Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Modern business executives are experiencing "the executive menopause" much earlier than their predecessors, showing a marked slowdown and loss of interest in work, a survey has found.

The survey of 329 executives by Wareham Associates Inc., a consulting firm, found such symptoms of the condition as taking full lunch hours without talking shop, accepting calls at work from spouses, not taking work home, not attending weekend conferences, and losing interest in profit sharing and incentive plans. "Many new-generation managers tend to be doubtful of corporate values and are questioning the intrinsic worth of corporate success," said John R. Wareham, president of the firm.

Long John Silver's

FOODSERVICE MANAGEMENT

If you've had a taste of the foodservice business, here's a lifetime feast.

The foodservice industry is the third largest business in the country. And Long John Silver's Seafood Shoppes are America's largest seafood chain with 900 restaurants in operation and 225 on the drawing board.

A big part of our success comes from a carefully worked out plan for personal development. A manager of one of our restaurants can become a supervisor of five restaurants in an area. After that, a district director with responsibility for five areas. And on up the ladder. This makes rewarding careers for our people and dedicated professional managers for us.

Along the way there are incentive bonuses, profit sharing and other outstanding benefits.

So if you've got a start in the foodservice business and are ready for accelerated growth, give us a call.

Conservatives Predict Trends From Ratings Of Legislators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Conservative Union gave only two senators and 24 House members perfect scores in its tally of 1977 voting records and concluded there is a new trend to the right.

"In the years that ACU has been rating the Congress, the results have always indicated a downward trend — the scores had been getting lower each year as the Congress became more liberal," said ACU legislative director Gary L. Jarmin in releasing the ratings.

"In 1977, however, we see an encouraging sign — an increase in the scores and a definite shift to the right — particulary in the Republican Party," Jarmin said.

Jarmin said the average rating for House Republicans for 1977 jumped 5.1 percent, from 73.9 percent in 1976 to 79 percent last year.

The ACU scores for 1977 support similar conclusions drawn earlier by the Americans for Democratic Action, which issued ratings from the liberal perspective and also noted a conservative drift.

The ACU said both the House and Senate showed a 2 percentage point increase in conservative votes in 1977. The House average for 1977 was 44.67 percent, compared to 42.56 for 1976. The Senate rose to 38.74 percent, up from 36.59.

In the Senate, the "perfect" scores of 100 percent, based on floor votes on selected issues, went to Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Six senators and 10 House members scored zero, meaning they disagreed with the ACU's opinion on every test vote rated.

The six zeroes in the Senate went to Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Wendell Anderson, D-Minn.; Harrison Williams, D-N.J.; Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.; Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio; and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

The zeroes in the House were by Philip Burton, D-Calif.; Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif.; George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif.; Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md.; Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.; Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J.; Frederick W. Richmond, D-N.Y.; Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y.; Ted Weiss, D-N.Y.; and Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas.

The ratings were based on 30 separate votes in each house, with some issues considered especially important carrying double weight.

These included votes on funding for the B-1 bomber, increases in the minimum wage and the Social Security tax, common situs picketing, deregultion of natural gas and pay raises for members of Congress.

The ACU has about 100,000 members nationally and is headed by Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill. While it lobbies for conservative causes, political action such as candidate support is done by a separate committee.

Prisoners Programs Receive Key Support

AUSTIN (AP) — The director of Texas' Department of Corrections says community correctional programs and paroles are the main hopes of controlling the state's fast growing prison population.

"The population yesterday was 22,827, which is the highest it has ever been," Jim Estelle said Sunday on a radio panel program (State Capitol Dateline). "In 1977 we had a net gain of 1,700 inmates. . . that's really a full institution.

Estelle said that under the present circumstances the prison system would gain between 1,500 and 2,000 inmates a year the next five years.

However, he said he was not sure the prison system would have to make room for maybe another 10,000 prisoners.

"I'm hopeful of the possibility offered by community-based correctional programs that already exist or new ones that will be initiated, without compromising the safety of the community. That the key to any community-based correctional program. Don't compromise things.

"If we can do that and if we give parroles the resouces that they really need I think there are some ways we can . . . we are not going to manage the committment rate because that is set by the community and their courts.

"I think we can devise other ways of handling the population maybe a little more efficiently and a little more economically.

"Now if those things don't come about obviously we are going to have to continue to build prisons as we are now. And we are overcrowded now and playing a catchup game and very honestly we are going to continue playing a catchup game unless there are some alternatives to imprisonment."

Estelle noted that the 1977 Legislature authorized construction of a new prison unit which is now under construction in Anderson County and a prison hospital in Galveston. It also authorized acquisition of a site for still another prison unit somewhere west of the Colorado River. He said the new site probably would be named in the next 60 days.

Tourism Deficit Worries Canada

OTTAWA (AP) — The national tourist deficit — the gap between what foreigners spend in Canada and what Canadians spend abroad — broadened by $500 million to a record $1.7 billion last year, a government agency reported.

Statistics Canada said early estimates for 1977 show Canadians shelled out $3.7 billion in other lands while Canada earned $2 billion from visiting foreigners. The number of tourists from the United States, by far Canada's most important source of visitors, dropped to 31.8 million, down 1.4 percent from 1976, year of the Montreal Olympics.

Writer Claim Oswald Diary Bared As Fake

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Edward Jay Epstein says he has evidence that the diary picturing Lee Harvey Oswald as disillusioned with the Soviets was written all at once just before Oswald returned to the United States in 1962.

Epstein, whose book "Legend: The Secret Life of Lee Harvey Oswald" is to be published soon, described his research on Oswald in a New York magazine interview.

"Oswald's diary was a fake," he said. "I submitted it to a brilliant graphologist called Dr. Thea Stein Lewinson, who, after scrutinizing it under a microscope, announced that it had been written in just two sittings. "He may have taken only a half-hour rest between them," Epstein added.

Epstein said he had also found that the diary was "full of anachronisms," and cited a supposed 1959 entry mentioning an official who was not in office until 1961. Epstein did not name the official.

Epstein said a firm for which Oswald worked shortly after his return to this country, Jaggars-Chiles-Stovall of Dallas, did "highly classified work for the Army Map Service," involving typesetting of names of cities in the Soviet Union, China and Cuba later put on maps used by spy satellites and U-2 spy planes.

He said the president of the company had told the Warren Commission that Oswald had no access to the secret work, but his own talks with employees of the firm indicated that "all workers there, including Oswald, had access to all parts of the plant."

Epstein also cited Oswald's address book where, under the name of Jaggars-Chiles-Stovall, he had written the words "micro dots."

"Microdot is a basic technique of espionage in which information is miniaturized and then mailed to a contact," Epstein said.

Epstein said the address book also contained the name Pavel Voloshin, which also appeared on a letter from Moscow found in Oswald's effects after his death.

"The CIA 'trace' on Voloshin's name," Epstein added, "showed that he was a KGB officer who had been in the Far East at the same time Oswald was there with the marines, and had visited California in 1959 when Oswald was preparing to defect.

Czech Television Figures Released

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — If they want to, residents of this East European nation can watch television 17½ hours a day, the official news agency CTK reported.

CTK said the state-run television channel, which signs off for 6½ hours daily, makes 55 percent of its telecasts in color and has on hand 1,500 imported films and plays — 30 percent from the Soviet Union, 30 percent from other Communist nations and 40 percent from "the rest of the world."

British Consider Limiting Imports

LONDON (AP) — The British government may limit auto imports from Japan "unless the Japanese car industry comes forward with a firm commitment to voluntary restraint," The Observer newspaper said Sunday.

Japanese passenger cars took 10.6 percent of the British market last year, and the Japanese Automobile Manufacturers Association earlier this month refused to agree to export ceilings requested by Britain's Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders. The Observer said the government-controlled British Leyland Ltd., the United Kingdom's largest car maker, had asked for quota protection.

Merely Another Pollution Source

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists might have had better luck tracing oil spilled from the Argo Merchant had they used wine bottles for their messages. Instead, after the tanker broke up off Nantucket in December 1976, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration dumped 12,000 floating plastic cards into the ocean.

The cards were printed at a cost of about $600 in English, French and Spanish, bore the NOAA's address in Boulder, Colo., and instructed finders to mail the cards back. Not a single card has been returned, the agency said over the weekend.

Breach In Canal Destroys Homes

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — About 65 mud homes in rural Sind province were washed away when "miscreants" opened breaches in the bank of an irrigation canal, the government said Sunday. It said 20 persons have been arrested for questioning.

The government statement said another 100 houses were damaged, but there were no reports of injury to people or loss of cattle in the farm area near the town of Shahpur, 300 miles northwest of this southern port city. Non-government sources suggested the canal might have been damaged by persons with political motives.

Syrian University Funds Committed

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Saudi Arabia has granted Syria a $40 million loan to build its third university, Arab diplomatic sources reported.

They said the new institution at the Mediterranean port of Latakia would be called Tichrin — Arabic for October — after the month in which Syria and Egypt attacked Israel in the 1973 Middle East war. The loan is to come from the Fund for Arab Development, which taps the vast oil revenues of the Saudi kingdom.
