

Budget ax swinging, 12 agencies targeted

AUSTIN (AP) — The budget ax is swinging.

Gov. Mark White has announced the 12 state agencies he wants abolished or merged into other agencies in order to eliminate the state budget deficit.

The House Appropriations Committee has "zeroed" the budgets for two agencies and stripped the prison system of $33.8 million that Texas Department of Corrections officials say they need to meet a court order.

Lawmakers and the governor worked Thursday on finding ways to attack the $3.5 billion deficit projected by Comptroller Bob Bullock. White announced in a Wednesday speech to the Legislature that he wants to solve the problem by raising the sales tax, now 4 1/2 percent, to 5 1/2 percent, and make program cuts.

The 12 agencies targeted by White for abolishment or merger would save the state $3.59 million in the 1987 budget year, which begins Sept. 1, said William Hamilton, White's budget officer.

Hamilton said nine offices would be abolished through merger into other agencies. Three may be able to continue through a combination of private, federal or other funds, Hamilton said.

The three which would lose all state general revenue tax funds under the governor's plan are the Texas Conservation Foundation, Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and Natural Fibers and Food Protein Commission.

A total of $78,575 would be taken from the conservation foundation, $200,000 from the intergovernmental relations panel and $1.49 million from the food and fiber commission.

The nine agencies which would be closed through merger into others and the amount of savings anticipated under White's plan are:

— National Guard Armory Board, merged into the adjutant general's department; $543,615.

— Automated Information and Telecommunications Council, into the State Purchasing and General Services Commission; $552,000.

— State Ethics Advisory Commission, into the secretary of state's office; $57,000.

— Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness, into the Department of Health; $138,546.

— Board of Examiners in the Fitting and Dispensing of Hearing Aids, into the health department; $17,004.

— State Board of Morticians, into the health department; $250,770.

— Board of Physical Therapy Examiners, into health department; $117,054.

— Polygraph Examiners Board, into Department of Public Safety; $107,535.

— State Rural Medical Education Board, into College and University

Coordinating Board; $25,356.

The Appropriations Committee, which plans to complete its cuts proposal early next week, voted to remove all state funds from the Good Neighbor Commission and the Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness.

The panel also voted Thursday to take from TDC $33.8 million the agency said it needs to hire additional guards and make other changes required by a federal court order.

"We're in trouble," said Bill McCray, TDC assistant director for budget.

TDC has saved $33.8 million since Gov. Mark White asked agencies in February to make spending cuts.

McCray said about half the money was to be used to hire 1,955 additional guards.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, said the cut would "make no noticeable difference" in TDC's operation.

Dumas' SIPCO to add second slaughter shift

A $4 million expansion of the Swift Independent Packing Co. plant near Dumas, which should add 300 new jobs by February 1987, was announced Thursday by the company.

A news release in the Moore County News reported the end result of the expansion would increase the beef processing capacity of the plant by adding a second 8-hour slaughter shift. SIPCO officials said the $4 million will be spent to enlarge a refrigerated "cooler" area in the plant where beef carcasses are stored.

The Moore County plant, located at Cactus, currently employs about 1,200 persons. It has the capacity to slaughter and process as boxed beef some 800,000 head annually. By next February, the plant will have a slaughter capacity of 4,600 head per day and will be able to process 4,000 head in its boxed beef facility.

The plant near Dumas is one of three beef processing operations in SIPCO. Other company plants are located at Des Moines, Iowa, and Guymon, Okla. The Guymon plant is scheduled to close sometime this year.

The company was purchased earlier this year by interests of the Dallas industrialist. SIPCO is the nation's largest full-line meat packer with annual sales of more than $4.2 billion, as a result of its combination with Val Agri Inc., another Cox interest. The "Swift" name was retained in the change of ownership.

The SIPCO plant here in Hereford was closed in June 1985, and the purchase of all Swift operations by the Cox interests was announced in October. The sale was finalized earlier this year. The new owner is currently arranging bond financing for the Hereford plant, and an announcement on the plans for the facility are anticipated later this year.

When the Hereford plant closed last year, company officials said it was due to continuing losses at the facility. About 490 persons lost their jobs with the closing. Some of them were moved to the Dumas plant where production was to be increased at that time.

Test Run

A test run of a booth on Thursday night proved that pre-school children will like what the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce is to offer at the Jubilee Junction on Aug. 16 in Dameron Park. Checking the fun of finger painting which will be at the booth are, from left, Kristan Dodson, Eric McNutt, Wade McNutt and Jenny Burton. The booth also will have a section for making macaroni necklaces. Parents are asked to bring photos of their children to the park for a large collage to be made. The Jubilee Junction will run from noon until 6 p.m. that Saturday. Brand Photo by Jeri Curtis)

Feds break up largest cocaine ring in history, $4.2 million found buried

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has charged 12 persons with smuggling more than 7 1/2 tons of cocaine from Colombia into this country since 1980 — the largest documented amount of the drug ever brought in by a single trafficking organization, the Justice Department said today.

The indictment, returned under seal in Harrisburg, Pa., on July 29 and unsealed today, charged the defendants used a charter air service company, Air America, Inc., to fly cocaine from Colombia to the United States and the same aircraft to fly back to Colombia with more than $25 million in cocaine sale profits.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III said federal investigators obtained warrants earlier this week to search for money hidden by the trafficking ring and found $4.2 million in cash buried on property in the Poconos resort area of Pennsylvania.

"This is the largest documented amount of cocaine ever smuggled into this country by a single trafficking organization," Meese said.

The largest amount of cocaine previously cited in a federal drug case was five tons in a 1984 indictment in Atlanta. In that case, Harold J. Rosenthal was convicted of operating a continuing criminal enterprise and sentenced to life in prison without parole.

The government said one of the men who provided the airplanes and pilots in the Pennsylvania operation, Frederick John Luytjes, 38, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator and has signed an agreement to plead guilty to drug trafficking charges.

Under department policy, Luytjes, who owned Air America, an air charter and maintenance company located at the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre International Airport in Avoca, Pa., could obtain such a deal with the government only by agreeing to tell all he knows about the operation.

The indictment said individual flights brought as much as 1,300 pounds of cocaine into this country and took $1 million or more in cash back to Colombia.

Destinations of the cocaine flights included Columbia, Lackawanna and Northumberland counties in Pennsylvania and Binghamton and Elmira, N.Y., the indictment said.

The government said Air America was used as the site to prepare and launch the aircraft that flew the cocaine from Colombia to this country. At least six persons served as pilots for the ring, flying modified, long-range aircraft to and from Colombia, the indictment charged.

The drug ring installed radio equipment in Colombia and set up communications centers at Luytjes' home in Deer Lake, Pa., and at the property of John F. Robertson III in Lake Wallenpaupack, Pa., to monitor the movements of the Air America planes during the cocaine flights, the grand jury charged.

Robertson, of Palos Verdes, Calif., was among the 12 indicted. The grand jury said he and another defendant, Thomas Keen Edenfield, Jr., of Albuquerque, N.M., joined Luytjes in providing the planes and pilots.

All of the defendants were charged with conspiracy to import and possess with intent to distribute cocaine. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and a $125,000 fine.

Justice Department spokesman Dean St. Dennis said it was not immediately known by federal officials in Washington how many of the 12 had been taken into custody.

Food packaging cost may exceed net farm income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of putting food in packages in 1986 could exceed net farm income for only the third time on record, according to tentative projections by the Agriculture Department.

If current forecasts hold, net farm income this year may be in the range of $26 billion to $30 billion. That would be down from preliminary readings of $29 billion to $32 billion in 1985.

Food packaging last year cost an estimated $27.1 billion, up about 3 percent from $26.3 billion in 1984. If there is another 3 percent increase, the 1986 packaging bill would be around $27.9 billion, in the ballpark of USDA's farm income forecast.

Relating packaging to farm income has no particular significance, except that agricultural economists and politicians sometimes do it to illustrate how food starts out as an agricultural product but winds up on grocery store shelves as a transported, processed, packaged product of an industrial society.

Only twice before have food packaging costs exceeded net farm income. That was, in 1980 when packaging costs totaled $21 billion and farm income was $20.2 billion. It happened again in 1983 when food packaging rose to $24.3 billion and farm income plummeted to $15 billion.

A new Food Cost Review report, published annually by the department's Economic Research Service, says Americans spent $343.6 billion on U.S. farm-produced food last year.

About $219.4 billion of last year's total expenditure was for food bought at grocery stores. About $124.2 billion was eaten in restaurants and other places away from home.

Of the total spent for food in 1985, the farm value or the equivalent received by farmers for raw products — wheat, cattle, milk and other items — was $86.4 billion. That included $69 billion for groceries and $17.4 billion for food eaten away from home.

The difference between total spending and the farm value is called the marketing bill. That includes all the transportation, processing, packaging and labor that goes into food after it leaves the farm and is sold to shoppers or diners.

In 1985, the marketing bill was $257.2 billion or about 75 percent of the total spending for food produced by American farmers. When only grocery store food is considered, the farmer got 31 cents of each consumer dollar spent, the lowest share on record.

The largest hunk of the $257.2 billion in marketing costs was labor at $116.8 billion in 1985, followed by packaging, $27.1 billion; intercity rail and truck transportation, $16.3 billion; fuels and electricity, $13.3 billion; corporate profits before taxes, $17 billion; and "other" costs, $66.7 billion, which included depreciation, rent, advertising, promotion, interest, property taxes, insurance and other professional services.

Pollutants kill thousands of fish

DALLAS (AP) — The first major fish kill in the Trinity River in more than a year was blamed on recent rains which brought relief after a week of century mark temperatures.

The rains stirred up oxygen-eating bacteria and organic solids resting on the river bottom, robbing the fish of life-giving oxygen, officials said.

"This is a bad fish kill," Texas Water Commission spokesman Max Woodfin said Thursday. "Whether it will outnumber last summer's, I'd be a fool to guess one way or another. We'll just have to wait until it's over."

The last major kill in the Trinity occurred in July 1985, when about 270,000 fish died.

The kill was first spotted Wednesday at Trinidad in Henderson County, about 50 miles southeast of Dallas, where 5,000 to 7,000 fish were found dead.

The noxious water, plagued by dangerously low levels of oxygen that in essence suffocate fish, moved south Thursday past U.S. Highway 287 in Navarro County toward Highway 79 near Palestine, Woodfin said.

"You can smell it. It's like a sewer down there," said Gene Reynolds, a Fairfield resident who has been active in lobbying to stop fish kills.

The latest plunge in oxygen levels stemmed from Sunday's heavy rains upstream in Dallas, hot weather and a low summer river flow, said Roger Meacham, spokesman for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

While wildlife officials in flat-bottomed boats netted dead fish, others monitored oxygen levels in the river. Woodfin said the levels at the worst section plummeted from 6 parts per million to less than one and stayed that low for about 10 hours.

Many fish tried to swim to the side of river to get out of worst part of the oxygen depletion, he said.

How long the kill will last is unknown.

Defector phones parents

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — The parents of former CIA agent Edward Howard said their son told them he plans to live in the Soviet Union after he phoned from Moscow to tell them of his defection.

"He said more or less he's going to settle down and wants his family to come see him," Ken Howard told the Garland Daily News in a telephone interview Thursday.

"I'm relieved to know where he's at and that he's OK," said Howard, who declined to reveal specific details of his Tuesday conversation with his son.

Edward Howard, 33, vanished from his Santa Fe, N.M., home last September, just days before the FBI charged him with espionage. The Soviet Union said Thursday it had given him asylum.

It was believed to be the first defection by a CIA agent and the first American defection to Moscow since the 1960s.

Just before disappearing, Howard quit a job with the New Mexico state legislature's finance committee.

FBI agents said his wife, Mary, aided his moonlit escape by placing a dummy in a car to make it appear he was there.

Mrs. Howard later left Santa Fe and her whereabouts were unknown. However, Ken Howard told the Daily News that his daughter-in-law and her 3½-year-old son moved to Minnesota to live with her parents.

PUC proposes deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — AT&T Communications should be allowed to set its own long distance rates in Texas beginning in 1989, the Public Utility Commission staff says in a deregulation proposal.

The recommendation was sent to the commission Thursday. No hearing has been set.

AT&T competitors, who are not regulated by the PUC, say AT&T must remain regulated because of its size.

"Obviously we are competing with someone who has by far the vast portion of the market share," said Paul Herrmann, an Austin lawyer who represents Sprint, one of AT&T's major competitors in Texas. "You have to be concerned about their ability to crush you."

But AT&T officials say consumers might benefit from deregulation, which was among the goals of the court-ordered 1984 breakup of the Bell System.

"It appears from the proposed rules that the PUC staff recognizes Texas, like most other states, needs to move from a regulated to a nonregulated telecommunications marketplace," said Pres Shepard, an AT&T vice president.

Don Butler, an Austin lawyer who represents cities in utility cases, said the PUC staff proposal is a bad one.

"It would turn AT&T loose to do its thing, which is to undercut its competition ultimately at the expense of all the ratepayers in Texas once its driven its competition out of business," he said.

Butler also said AT&T would raise prices in areas where customers have no other long distance company to turn to.

"What they want is not a level playing field. They want a clear playing field. They want the competition gone," Butler said.

Drug tests set for Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of President Reagan's senior staff are getting an offer they might find hard to refuse: Join the president and Vice President George Bush in volunteering for drug-screening tests.

The time is Monday. The place is the White House medical unit. And the purpose, says Deputy Press Secretary Albert R. Brashear, is "to set an example" of Reagan's determination to root illegal drugs from offices and schools.

Brashear revealed Thursday that a memorandum was being sent to the 78 senior White House staff aides to Reagan, asking them to take part in the drug tests "on a voluntary basis."

There will be no reprisals against those refusing to take the test, he said, adding that "we're not out to punish anyone."

Brashear said he was confident that none of the urinalyses, designed to detect the presence of such drugs as cocaine, marijuana and heroin, would turn up positive.

"The president has made it clear that he is seeking a drug-free work place for all Americans," the spokesman said. "He believes that all federal employees deserve a drug-free environment, and that federal employees should set the example for state and local government and the private sector to follow in identifying users of illegal drugs."

White House staff members were notified up to five days in advance about the tests, thus raising questions about the effectiveness of the screening. For occasional drug users, most drugs would disappear from the body after one to four days. Under mandatory testing, there is no advance notice.

Reporters asked Brashear several times to spell out the consequences for members of the senior staff who did not take the test.

Modern problems to be featured

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue is betting there's an audience for him in prime time, where he will be all next week exploring human relationships on "The Human Animal."

If he's right, the bars will be packed and the crisis hotlines will be busy come Friday, after five days of his gloomy and sobering look at America.

"The Human Animal," based on his book of the same name, teems with failed marriages, pregnant teen-agers, desperate farmers, unemployed steelworkers, lonely singles and impoverished mothers raising families alone.

Even amid the swimming pools and sprawling lawns of Richardson, Texas, Donahue finds children disturbed by divorce and alienated by their parents' headlong pursuit of career success.

"The series does call attention to what we believe to be a significant gathering storm, the damage of which will be expressed most painfully in the next century," Donahue said in an interview. "But this is happening at a time when we do seem to be looking the other way."

"Any perfunctory examination of the human animal reveals that we are endowed by our Creator to do much better than we are doing, and that we cannot begin to do better unless we become, at the very least, curious about who we are — something that this nation has not been altogether enthusiastic about."

The NBC series, starting Monday and airing on five consecutive nights at 10 p.m. EDT, begins with "Love and Sex," and continues with "Nature and Nurture," "War and Violence," "Woman and Man" and "Family and Survival."

"Nature and Nurture" describes Donahue's aim: to sort out whether violence, for instance, is inbred or is something we learn.

Skipping rapidly over the technical ground, Donahue makes his points more through closeups of individuals than through statistics and talking academic heads.

Those stories can be moving. The most deeply disturbing, perhaps, is the teen-ager who intentionally became pregnant so she could have something to call her own. At age 16, she and her boyfriend have given up on life. When Donahue asks them what they hope their child will be, they say, "Not like me."

On the flip side, he talks with parents who wave flashcards of Italian phrases and historical arcana in infants' faces in hope of raising geniuses. Those parents, he feels, are the exception.

"Culturally speaking, the richest and the most powerful nation in the world has abandoned its children," he said, waxing as enthusiastic in his cluttered office as he does every morning on "Donahue."

"Have you been to a ballgame lately?" he asked.

"The shirtless boys of summer are at the ballgame. They come in all colors, and they have a beer can in their hand," he said, lapsing into a stream of guttural noises to mimic their lusty behavior.

"Now what we're trying to say in this series is that this isn't just an isolated kind of Tom Sawyer expression of malehood. These young men — honorable, talented, potentially wonderful human beings — have not been given the essential tools to develop a sense of self-esteem, to be independent, to have compassion, to be able to love, and their numbers are growing."

"The Human Animal" doesn't propose solutions, but it is clearly at odds with the "stand tall, America is back" rhetoric of Ronald Reagan.

The unemployed, Donahue said, "are jobless in a country that appears to be saying, with increasing frequency, 'fix this yourself.'"

"Fix this yourself," he repeated incredulously. "The government is off your back."

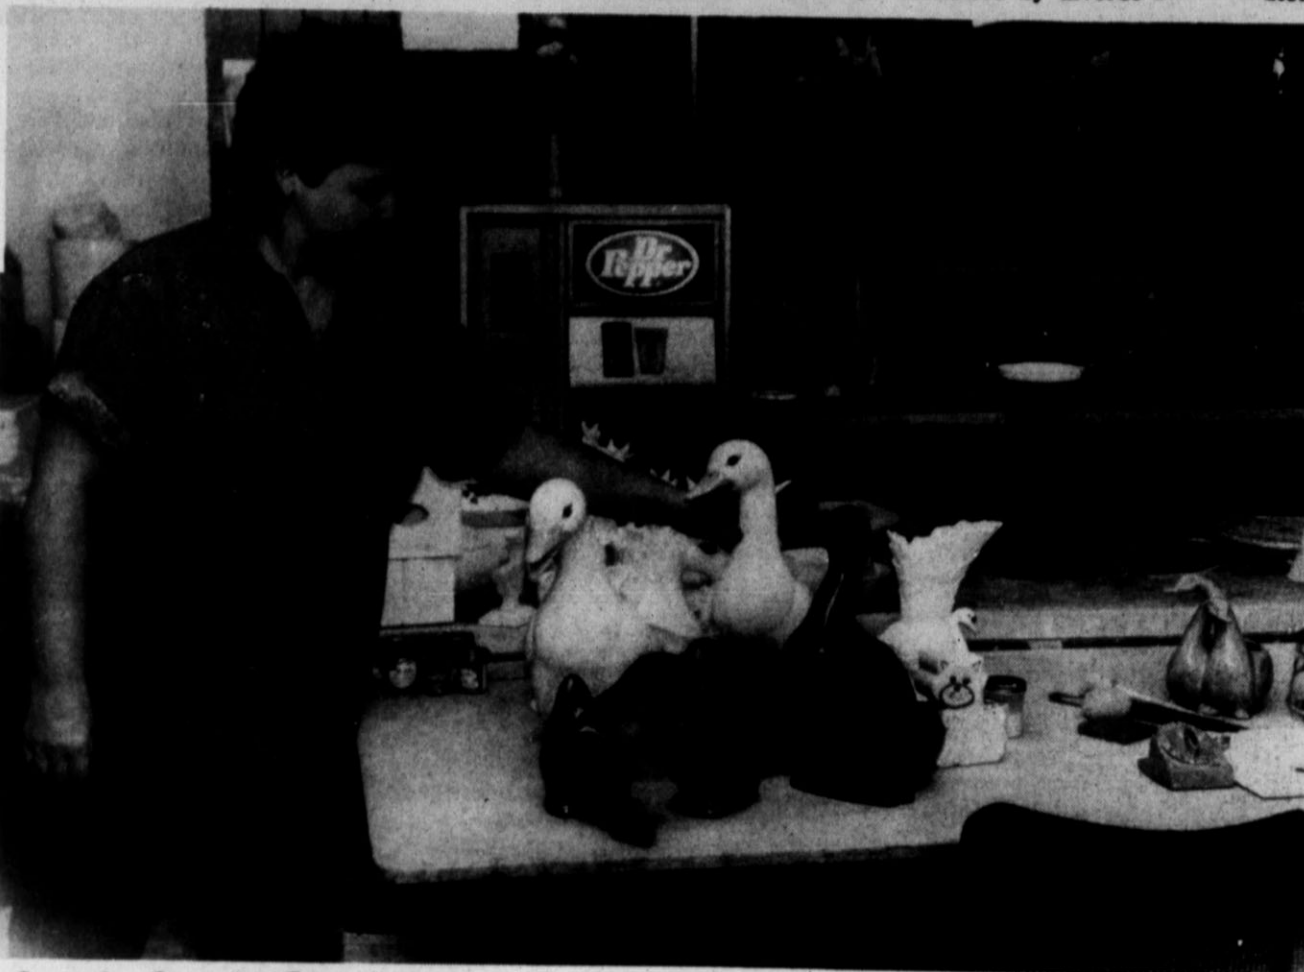

"We are a nation," Donahue said, "which brags about the valor of brave men and we do what brave men never do, should never do — we have made women and children the most vulnerable people in our culture."

the Jubilee of Arts to be held Aug. 15-16 at the Community Center. She will also have softie ceramics, a technique using a dry brush, that resembles stuffed animals.

SAT testing draws criticism from educators

NEW YORK (AP) — This fall, more than a million high school students will, as is customary, lose sleep, chew their nails, sharpen their No. 2 pencils, and spend three hours taking the dreaded SAT.

They know all too well the Ivy-covered rewards of a high score. Thousands will spend $500 or more to improve their scores with SAT coaching.

This year marks the SAT's 60th anniversary. It also marks the retirement of the president of The College Board, George H. Hanford, a pillar of educational testing for three decades.

But if a recent College Board-sponsored gathering of about 100 of the nation's top testing experts is any indication, Hanford's successor, as yet unnamed, will bear the brunt of increasing criticism against the SAT.

"The time has come to replace the SAT," said James Crouse, education professor at the University of Delaware, who argued that the SAT "adds little to the predictions of college success based solely on the high school record."

White counting on public support

AUSTIN (AP) — As the Legislature continues to hunt ways to balance the budget, Gov. Mark White says public opinion may convince them to accept his proposal for a sales tax hike combined with spending cuts.

"I am hopeful that the people of Texas will give guidance to their elected representatives, as I have listened to people across Texas in this regard," White said.

"I think the people of Texas will be more persuasive in telling them they want the problem solved," he told a news conference Thursday.

The governor: this week proposed to solve the budget deficit crisis with $1.4 billion in spending cuts and a one-year increase in the sales tax from 4½ percent to 5½ percent.

White acknowledged that the mood of the House — where all tax bills must start — is against a tax increase. But he said that could change.

"I think you're finding stronger support for positions of compromise that will permit us to solve this problem. That's what we're asking for," he said at a news conference.

Offering a glimpse of his decision-making process, the governor said he and his staff worked until just hours before his speech to the Legislature's special session.

White said he repeatedly ordered aides to find enough cuts to save the $2.2 billion he believes will close the budget deficit.

"I think I fired my staff two or three times. I kept saying there must

University of Maryland education professor William E. Sedlacek raised the possibility that the SAT is inherently biased against minority students. Since the exam is designed to predict freshman-year college success, Sedlacek suggests it is unfair to minorities, many of whom do not hit their academic stride until later in their college careers, he said.

Short-answer tests like the SAT are profoundly affecting school curricula and the way youngsters think, said Gerald W. Bracey of the Virginia Department of Education. Multiple-choice testing encourages the view that learning consists of bits and fragments of "right" answers, rather than an understanding and appreciation of a coherent body of knowledge.

The stress on test scores, the SATs included, means teachers, principals and other educators ignore the content of tests at their peril.

"There is too much public pressure on test scores for administrators or teachers to ignore them. The media, the legislature, the general public, the people who call my office wanting to know where to live when moving to Virginia, and especially real estate agents and apartment managers, take test scores as the principal tool by which to evaluate schools," Bracey said.

The criticism of the SAT from some quarters has not, however, meant any rush by selective colleges to abandon the exam as an entrance requirement.

One of the few that has is tiny Bates College in Lewiston, Me., which made the SAT optional two years ago.

William C. Hiss, Bates' dean of admissions, in a report on the school's experiences since dropping the SAT requirement, concluded that achievement tests were slightly better predictors of college success than SATs.

Bates was also concerned about what the report called "the current mania among students for coaching." If coaching does improve scores, Bates objected to it as one more advantage for the wealthy SAT test-taker. If it doesn't work, students are wasting time and money.

The overall conclusion: Making the SAT optional has not hurt the quality or size of Bates' application pool.

And the school believes it is making just as good admissions decisions without the SAT as when they required it.

Still, for every Bates College, there are hundreds of other schools clinging loyally to the SAT as a useful admissions tool.

"I am convinced the SAT does what I want it to do in our admissions process," said Richard G. Cashwell, director of undergraduate admissions at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "Simply stated, the SAT improves my decisions about students."

Adopt-A-Cow brings aid to drought-stricken farmers

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The lure of adopting a cow has brought dozens of calls from school children, a West Coast radio announcer and others who empathize with the plight of drought-plagued farmers.

"Who can turn down those beautiful brown eyes of a cow? They're really beautiful animals," said Sheila Thompson, a Charleston artist who came up with the idea.

The $140 adoption fee is the estimated cost of feeding a cow between now and spring, when South Carolina farmers hope to draw on their home-grown feed supplies again.

The plight of the cows also brought a quick response from Arlene Baker, who operates a gift shop called Everything Cows in Stowe, Vt.

"This is a dairy state and everyone is very sympathetic to what's happening in the Southeast," she said, adding she plans to offer the adopt-a-cow certificates at her shop, which sells "everything from cow T-shirts to cow planters to cow pottery."

At San Francisco's KYUU-FM, employees chipped in to adopt a cow.

"For people in the metropolitan area, it's a way to get involved," said newscaster Vickie Jenkins, who grew up on an Illinois cattle farm. "We have a lot of closet farmers in the Bay area."

But she said some of the staff members wanted more information before investing. "One wanted a prospectus on what the investment allowed," she said. "One wanted a steak and another wanted a quart of milk."

The adoptions are being offered by a recently formed group known as Farmers Assistance Relief Mission (FARM), which has an initial goal of raising $1 million to continue shipments of hay and feed into the state.

The $140 entitles the adoptive parent to name the animal and to a certificate suitable for framing.

"If they have more money, we'll do whatever they want," said Michael Rose, a Summerville attorney and businessman who founded FARM.

"They can call it and have the cow talk to them over the phone. Or they can stop by and visit the cow on their way to Florida."

Most of the offers for help come over the phone and the agency hasn't been able to make a complete accounting yet of how much has been raised or how many offers they've received.

Some people are so anxious to help a cow, they've found Rose's home phone number and the family is getting 20 to 30 calls a day, said his wife, Vivian.

"The phone just rings and rings. The calls come from all over the United States. I'm overwhelmed," she said.

Pupils at the Westside First Church of God in West Columbia will donate the offering from their week-long vacation Bible school to adopt a cow, said school director Nancy Harrell. She added that the offering, usually about $170, has been sent in the past to an orphanage. But many of the pupils, who range in age from 2 to 11, know about the problems the farmers are facing.

Rose said there are plenty of cows that need adopting, noting that there are 316,000 cows on farms across South Carolina.

Leahy says security needs to be stricter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first defection to Moscow by a former CIA officer shows that U.S. spy agencies should step up reinvestigations of employees' security clearances, Senate Intelligence Committee vice chairman Patrick Leahy says.

The Vermont Democrat said ex-CIA agent Edward Howard, 34, had done "serious damage" to U.S. spying in the Soviet Union, but he and other U.S. officials refused to spell out the harm for fear of telling the Soviets even more.

Asked about a published report that Howard "wiped out" the CIA's Moscow station, a senior U.S. intelligence official, requesting anonymity, replied, "Maybe it would be good for the Soviets to believe that."

Meeting reporters in the Capitol Thursday, Leahy said, "Both the CIA and the FBI realize there were problems in handling this case and steps have been taken by (CIA Director William) Casey and (FBI Director William) Webster to correct them and not sweep them under the rug."

Leahy said there was no way to halt defections, but he said they might be limited if U.S. intelligence agencies would "do a better job of on-going screening and on-going checks of people with access to classified information."

Casey conceded this summer that every U.S. intelligence agency is years behind schedule in reinvestigating its employees for security risks.

A congressional source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that since the spate of spy cases last year, U.S. agencies were "giving greater emphasis to re-checking the employees they've already hired."

The government has acknowledged that a year after he was fired by the CIA in June 1983, Howard, still smarting over his dismissal, had told former agency co-workers that he had contemplated entering the Soviet Embassy in Washington and telling what he knew. This information was not given to the FBI for more than a year.

Leahy said he expects the Soviets "will do a great deal to show him living well and to trumpet him. I expect to see him brought out a lot to make all kinds of statements. I caution you to take them with a grain of salt. They will try to make it a very big event to try to get others to defect."

He said the timing of the Soviet announcement about Howard in the Soviet newspaper Izvestia may have been designed to deflect attention from the defection to the United States on Monday of two tightrope walkers with the Moscow Circus.

Howard had been trained to become a clandestine CIA agent in Moscow as a U.S. Embassy budget officer. He was fired before beginning that job because a polygraph test suggested he had used illegal drugs and engaged in petty theft.

The FBI was put on Howard's trail last fall by Soviet KGB defector Vitaly Yurchenko, who himself returned to the Soviet Union last year.

Last September, Howard, then a budget analyst for the New Mexico legislature, eluded FBI agents watching his house, days before he was charged with selling secrets to the Soviets in Austria in 1984 for $6,000.

Last October, U.S. sources said he had been spotted in Finland and was presumed to have gone to the Soviet Union.

Americans eating more fruit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are consuming more fruit than ever before, according to Agriculture Department economists.

On the average, each person consumed an estimated 210.5 pounds in 1985, up from 196.6 pounds in 1984. The figures are based on a fresh fruit equivalent and include juices.

Last year's rise was primarily because of greater consumption of orange juice, the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday in a report.

"With steady to lower prices, per capita orange juice consumption is expected to continue increasing," the report said. "Increasing U.S. demand for fresh fruit is being met by larger domestic production and imports."

Exports of major deciduous fruit declined significantly last year, including grape exports, down 18 percent; apples, 16 percent; pears, 13 percent; and peaches, 10 percent.

In contrast, imports of most fresh non-citrus fruits showed strong gains in 1985. Bananas and apples, the two leading imports, were up 15 percent and 20 percent, respectively.

However, fresh pineapple imports were down 12 percent from 1984.

Citrus exports fared somewhat better, with shipments of fresh grapefruit and lemons off 13 percent and 3 percent, respectively, while orange exports increased 10 percent, the report said.

Church leader seeks unity

DALLAS (AP) — The head of the Greek Orthodox Church says he looks forward to the day when the 12 separate American branches of Orthodoxy are united to speak with one voice.

Archbishop Iakovos told the 2-million-member denomination's clergy-laity congress that Eastern Orthodoxy must "arm the church with the spirit that will secure its unity in the Western hemisphere" so as to more effectively serve the cause of "peace among the churches and people."

Pope Paul VI and Patriarch Benedictos of Jerusalem met in the Holy Land in 1964 for the first meeting in five centuries between a Roman Catholic Pontiff and an Eastern Orthodox Patriarch.

Rangers win another slugfest over Orioles

By The Associated Press

Gary Ward, fighting to overcome the mental anguish of two personal tragedies, has found therapy on the baseball field.

"I'm all right as long as I'm at the ballpark," Ward said after driving in five runs as the Texas Rangers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 9-8 Thursday night. "I concentrate, and it helps a lot."

Ward rejoined the Rangers in Baltimore on Tuesday, after missing nine games because of the stillborn death of his child in California. Earlier in the season, his father died. After sitting out the first game of the series, after taking an hour of batting practice, Ward went 7-for-10 in the next two games, scoring four runs and driving in six.

"I had to come right back and get right in it, to put aside what has happened to me," Ward said. "I've had a lot of turmoil in my life this year. I think there'll be a lot of good things happening to me ... I've had enough bad things."

Playing without relief ace Don Aase, who leads the major leagues with 28 saves, the Orioles lost an 8-5 lead in the series finale after squandering an 11-6 advantage on Wednesday.

The Rangers, who blew a 6-0 lead on Wednesday, lost 3-0 and 5-3 advantages Thursday before scoring four runs in the seventh to win for only the eight time in their last 30 games in Baltimore.

The winning rally came against Brad Havens, 3-2, and Mike Flanagan, a regular starter pressed into service for his first relief appearance since 1982. Don Slaught tied the score with the second of his three singles, and Steve Buechele drove in the game winner with a sacrifice fly.

Jeff Russell, 4-1, pitched three innings to get the victory and Dale Mohorcic notched his fifth save with 123 innings of relief.

Mohorcic, who lowered his ERA to 1.50, pitched 7 1-3 innings against the Orioles this season without allowing a run as the Rangers won the season series, 7-5, for the first time since 1977.

"It's like they want it to happen, so we can come from behind," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said of his club's blown leads. "It's a plot to kill me. I'm going to find out who the ringleader is, and take him with me."

The two clubs, who set a major league record with three grand slams on Wednesday night, started on a slightly lesser note Thursday. Ward hit a three-run homer for Texas in the first, and John Stefero countered with a similar shot in the second.

An error by first baseman Eddie Murray, just activated off the 21-day disabled list after recovering from a pulled hamstring, led to two unearned Texas runs in the fifth, Ward and Larry Parrish contributing RBI singles.

But Murray, who last played on July 9, doubled in the tying and go-ahead runs in the bottom of the inning, as the Orioles scored five times to take an 8-5 lead.

"We're glad to have him back," rookie Jim Traber said of Murray. "He can carry us all the way into the playoffs."

Traber lost his temporary spot at first base with the return of the team captain, but he rapped out four singles and drew an intentional walk as the designated hitter. He is batting .352 in 19 games, with eight homers and 22 RBIs.

In Thursday's other AL games, Detroit swept a doubleheader over Cleveland 15-1 and 6-2, Toronto beat Kansas City 5-4 and Milwaukee crushed New York 10-2.

Tigers 15, Indians 1; Tigers 6, Indians 2

They have a four-game winning streak; they have the lead down to 4½ games and they have the Boston Red Sox coming to town tonight.

They are the Detroit Tigers — suddenly playing some of the best baseball in the majors. They swept a two-night doubleheader from Cleveland Thursday, 15-1 and 6-2, their second doubleheader sweep over the Indians in three days.

The Tigers are now 16-6 since the All-Star break, while the Red Sox where gone 6-13.

At the break, Detroit was 13 games behind the Red Sox, in sixth place in the American League East. They moved into third after Thursday's sweep, with the Red Sox coming to town for four games.

Jack Morris and Mark Thurmond continued Detroit's strong pitching in Thursday's doubleheader. Morris threw seven shutout innings in the opener, while Thurmond fired six shutout innings in the nightcap.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, who suddenly has a contender on his hands, pulled both starters quickly.

"I was going to get him out after six innings, but I allowed him to go seven," Anderson said of Morris. "If I had another pitcher, he might have been gone after five. I was watching him real close. You don't fool with your pitchers."

"Anytime I can get one of my starters out of there now, I will, from here on out."

Blue Jays 5, Royals 4

Reliever Steve Farr balked home the tying run in the eighth inning.

then gave up a game-winning single to Willie Upshaw to give Toronto the win over visiting Kansas City.

Brewers 10, Yankees 2

Cecil Cooper and Rick Manning hit three-run homers, as the Brewers won three of their four games in New York and eight of 13 with the Yankees this season.

The Yankees have lost eight of their last 11 games.

Angels 4, Mariners 3

California's Jack Howell, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the ninth and doubled, ended the game with a homer leading off the bottom of the 11th inning.

Howell hit his third homer of the season off Pete Ladd, 6-3, who had relieved in the ninth and pitched 1 1-3 hitless innings.

completed the suspended second game of Wednesday's doubleheader.

Expos 5, Pirates 4

Montreal rallied to tie the game in the seventh, then won in the ninth on a double by Tom Foley and Dann Bilardello's run-scoring single to complete a four-game sweep in Pittsburgh.

Andy McGaffigan, 6-4, worked two scoreless innings of relief for the victory. Tim Burke and Bob McClure pitched the ninth, McClure getting his fifth save.

Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds hit a bases-empty homer in the fifth, his 10th of the season and most by a Pirates rookie since Richie Zisk hit 10 in 1973.

Montreal's Tim Wallach hit his 17th homer of the season in the sixth.

Win 10th straight home game

Cardinals play in '85 form

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals, while reverting to last summer's National League championship form, are busy proving once more that power's far from everything.

"We're just being aggressive," Ozzie Smith said after Thursday's 6-5 conquest of the Philadelphia Phillies. "We're trying to make things happen. That's basically the way we play baseball."

St. Louis, in overcoming Philadelphia's three homers, parlayed 10 singles, a double and five stolen bases into its fourth straight victory and record-tying 10th straight at Busch Stadium.

In other NL games, New York finished a suspended 7-6 victory over Chicago, then won the regularly scheduled game 12-3; and Montreal edged Pittsburgh 5-4.

"We're in a groove right now where everybody's running; everybody's trying to make things happen," Smith said of the Cards, who are 15-5 since the All-Star break. "We've been doing that the last three weeks."

Philadelphia Manager John Felske, his team's belated flurry against left-hander John Tudor, 11-5, notwithstanding, concurred.

"The Cardinals just have too much speed," Felske said. "Vince Coleman may be the best that's ever played."

Certainly he's the best now."

Coleman's theft of third, his 77th of the year, set up St. Louis' first run and afterward even Tudor got into baserunning that helped the Cards erase a 2-1 deficit.

St. Louis' pitcher doubled and made it to third with a head-first slide after the catch on Coleman's fly to right with one out in the fifth. He scored on Smith's single to create a 2-2 tie and in the sixth laid down a bunt that sent the Cards ahead.

"It's all part of (winning), there's no doubt about it," Tudor said of his suicide-squeeze bunt, which he followed in the eighth with a single and his second run.

St. Louis stole 15 bases in the four-game sweep and has 39 thefts in 14 games against the Phillies.

Mets 12, Cubs 3; Mets 7, Cubs 6

New York won its second and third straight games. Rick Aguilera won his sixth straight in the later game. He threw a six-hitter, struck out six batters and walked nobody.

Gary Carter hit a three-run homer in the fourth, Danny Heep homered in the sixth and the Mets turned the game into a rout with six runs in the eighth inning. Ray Knight, who went 4-for-5, had a two-run single before run-scoring singles by Keith Hernandez and Rafael Santana.

Earlier, Howard Johnson homered in the eighth inning as the teams completed the suspended second game of Wednesday's doubleheader.

Montreal rallied to tie the game in the seventh, then won in the ninth on a double by Tom Foley and Dann Bilardello's run-scoring single to complete a four-game sweep in Pittsburgh.

County Extension Agents

Two Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers have earned the right for their 4-H record books to compete on the state level. Jeff Hicks and Rickie Vogel each took top honors at the 20 county District 1 4-H Record Book Contest in their division. Hicks qualifies in the Sheep & Goat division while Vogel's is entered in the Beef Production category. The books will be judged by Extension specialists in mid-August at Texas A&M University in College Station.

Kristi Powell turned in a tough Achievement Record Book that placed second in district while Chris Urbanczyk's Beef Book placed 4th in tough competition. Eight Junior 4-H'ers each earned a blue ribbon in their prospective categories. They include: Jim Brett Campbell, Don Metcalf, Clara Shirley, Jennifer Hicks, Kinann Campbell, Thad Hill, Jeremy Myers, and Cody Powell.

4-H'ers are preparing for the Bake Show which will be at the Heritage Room of the Library on August 15th, and will emphasize wheat, which is the number one agricultural product in the Panhandle. Judging of the 4-H'ers products will commence at 9:00 a.m. on the morning of the 15th and awards will be presented at noon.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Giant sky harp created

BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP) — Japan is a land of high technology and ancient ways and both are reflected in sculptor Rob Fisher's mammoth "sky harp," a three-story mobile of folded, pastel aluminum squares created by computer for Osaka's newest hotel.

Sophisticated programming and computer graphics allowed the artist in less than six months to study, design and build the mobile, which from various angles resembles falling water, wind chimes or Japanese peaked roofs.

"This is, without a doubt, the most complicated piece conceptually I've done," Fisher said of his first international commission, which will debut in September when the Osaka International Hilton is scheduled to open.

The 1,600-pound sculpture, which will hang in the hotel's atrium, is divided into 16 squares arranged in a grid pattern to make shipping and installation easier.

Sixteen delicate, but super-strong, cables descend from each of the 16 stainless steel plates, which will be bolted into the ceiling just under the third floor of the hotel. The cables, which can each support 500 pounds, are the same ones used on hang gliders, said Fisher, who got the idea for using them after studying planes at a nearby glider port.

With computer accuracy and a calculated eye for randomness, Fisher will string 896 small, origami-like aluminum squares — colored mauve, robin's egg blue and blue-green — on the cables with 256 stainless steel tubes dangling at ends of various heights. Origami is the art of Japanese paper folding.

Computer programmer Ray Masters, with whom Fisher has worked the last four years, developed the program that gave Fisher a three-dimensional look at his creation, allowing him to add and subtract designs and raise and lower cables with the touch of a computer stylus to a pad.

Fisher designed the piece a module at a time. After coming up with a prototype for one module, the artist recreated it in his Pennsylvania studio. Adaptations and variations were done in similar fashion.

But he has never seen the entire sculpture assembled. He and a crew of Japanese workers are to begin assembling the as-yet unnamed sky harp in August.

The 47-year-old Fisher defends his use of the computer in his art and says it's a tool like any other used in the craft.

But he does not use the computer for his other sculpture and would never rely on it without recreating parts of the design in the studio.

"I don't claim to be the first, but I doubt there are other artists who have taken it quite so seriously. But it's complicated in a very exciting way. You just feel you're on the edge of a new form."

Vaccinations not just for kids

Most adults assume vaccinations, like tricycles and long summer vacations, are just for kids. But, according to the Texas Medical Association, many adults are not adequately protected against vaccine-preventable diseases.

To determine whether you should obtain one of the immunizations listed below, check your vaccination record. If you are unsure about whether you have been sufficiently immunized, the safest bet usually is to assume you have not and to consult your doctor for the appropriate vaccine. Be sure to keep a record of current and future vaccinations.

Diphtheria. A disease that typically produces a severe sore throat, diphtheria can also affect the heart and other internal organs. Most adults received primary immunization during childhood; if you did not, do so without delay. To remain immune, all adults require a booster shot every 10 years. This ordinarily is combined with tetanus toxoid in a vaccine called Td.

Tetanus. The bacteria that cause tetanus enter the body through a contaminated wound and can cause painful muscular contractions, which may prove fatal. Adults should receive a booster every 10 years, or following a heavily contaminated wound if no booster has been given within five years.

Measles and mumps: Many adults are no longer susceptible to these diseases because they had them as children. But a substantial number of young adults born after 1957 have had neither the diseases nor vaccination. Furthermore, people vaccinated for measles between 1963 and 1967 may have had a short-lasting vaccine and should be vaccinated again.

Rubella. Injury to a fetus or miscarriage are the major consequences of rubella (German measles) in adults. Women of childbearing age who have no history of vaccination should be tested for antibodies and, in their absence, be immunized. Following immunization, a woman should wait at least three months before becoming pregnant.

Influenza: To be effective, flu vaccine must be administered yearly. The vaccine is strongly recommended for everyone 65 and older, since severity and risk of death from flu increase with age. Anyone with chronic pulmonary, heart, or kidney disease or with diabetes also should get annual flu shots.

Pneumococcal pneumonia: A vaccine is now available that offers protection against most of the pneumococcal disease. The same groups immunized for influenza should be immunized with pneumococcal vaccine, but only once. Yearly or booster doses should definitely not be given.

Religious leaders denounce accusations

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Lutheran and Roman Catholic leaders have denounced accusations by a government informant in El Salvador that various churches there and church relief agencies have ties to rebel insurgents.

Several church workers have been arrested. The accusations have been reported in El Salvador newspapers and television despite denials by Roman Catholic, Lutheran, Episcopal and Baptist churches.

Officials of Lutheran World Relief said the Salvadoran government seeks to discredit groups providing humanitarian relief to displaced people, putting church workers in danger from death squads.

Msgr. Daniel F. Hoyer, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, urged that authorities "move swiftly to rectify this scandalous development."

Catholics and Lutherans run two of the largest relief agencies in El Salvador, aiding swarms of displaced people.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your columns touch all our lives in so many ways, and I bless you for the days you've brightened and the things you have taught us. You are part of our national heritage. No day is complete until we read Ann Landers. And what God-given energy to have written every day since 1955!

After 20 moves in 35 years of married life, I can tell you I could not have made it without you, Annie. And now will you please rerun my favorite column? I found it stuck in my recipe book. This gem deserves to be repeated. Thanks a million.—A DECATUR, ILL., READER

DEAR DECATUR: Here it is, with pleasure.

THE STATION

By Robert J. Hastings

Tucked away in our subconscious minds is an idyllic vision. We see ourselves on a long, long trip that almost spans the continent. We're traveling by passenger train, and out the windows we drink in the passing scene of cars on nearby highways, of children waving at a crossing, of cattle grazing on a distant hillside, of smoke pouring from a power plant, of row upon row of corn and wheat, of flatlands and valleys, of mountains and rolling hillsides, of city skylines and village halls, of biting winter and blazing summer and cavorting spring and docile fall.

But uppermost in our minds is the final destination. On a certain day at a certain hour we will pull into the station. There will be bands playing and flags waving. And once we get there so many wonderful dreams will come true. So many wishes will be fulfilled and so many pieces of our lives finally will be neatly fitted together like a completed jigsaw puzzle. How restlessly we pace the aisles, damning the minutes for loitering...waiting, waiting, waiting for the station.

However, sooner or later we must realize there is no one station, no one place to arrive at once and for all. The true joy of life is the trip. The station is only a dream. It constantly outdistances us.

"When we reach the station, that will be it!" we cry. Translated it means, "When I'm 18, that will be it! When I buy a new 450 SL Mercedes-Benz, that will be it! When I put the last kid through college, that will be it! When I have paid off the mortgage, that will be it! When I win a promotion, that will be it! When I reach the age of retirement, that will be it! I shall live happily ever after!" Unfortunately, once we get "it," then "it" disappears. The station somehow hides itself at the end of an endless track.

"Relish the moment" is a good motto, especially when coupled with Psalm 118-24: "This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it." It isn't the burdens of today that drive men mad. Rather, it is regret over yesterday or fear of tomorrow. Regret and fear are twin thieves who would rob us of today.

So, stop pacing the aisles and counting the miles. Instead, climb more mountains, eat more ice cream, go barefoot oftener, swim more rivers, watch more sunsets, laugh more and cry less. Life must be lived as we go along. The station will come soon enough.

DEAR READERS: If ever I printed something that has the possibility of changing a few lives, that essay is it. I hope Robert J. Hastings' little masterpiece will move you to savor the moment—stop putting things off that you can enjoy this day, this week or this year. "One of these days" may be none of these days.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents and a self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

The crowd grew out of control and Etherington was summoned to appear in court for disturbing the peace.

THE EYES OF SHARKS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — They are feared as killers of the sea, but sharks also can be allies in the effort to cure cataracts—a disease for which more than a half-million people annually undergo surgery.

Dr. Seymour Zigman of the University of Rochester says he has found that some shark eyes are very similar to human eyes. He has found a correlation between the pigment in the lenses of shark and human eyes and cataract formation.

Further tests of shark eye lenses may reveal the chemical basis for cataracts, and this, in turn, may lead to the restoration of sight for those with cataracts, he said.

Traditional Jewish mourning customs get new emphasis

NEW YORK (AP) — When death strikes in a Jewish family, the traditional mourning follows a somber pattern — no work, no entertaining, garments torn, praying thrice daily, and unrestrained tears.

For seven days, the bereaved remain at home, always with a light burning, symbolizing the inextinguishable soul. The mourners wear slippers, and when sitting, it's on a low stool or other low place, signs of deprivation.

"Extolled and hallowed be the name of God. ... May his kingdom come, and his will be done in all the earth," goes the ancient, oft-repeated mourners' prayer, recited in Hebrew.

"To the departed ... may peace and bliss be granted in life eternal."

The customs are described in a booklet newly issued by the Women's League for Conservative Judaism in an educational campaign on appropriate family practices at death and other special occasions.

"There is a growing emphasis on traditional practices," says Rabbi Akiba Lubow, program director of the Rabbinical Assembly, the Conservative wing of the three branches of U.S. Judaism, also including Reform and Orthodox.

The trend applies across-the-board, he says, adding, "As we advance more and more technologically, people are looking for forms that come from out of tradition as an anchor for their lives."

At a time of death in a family, that especially shattering time, the customs are meant to bring the grieving through that hard passage in full perspective both of present loss and faith in ultimate good.

The practices evolved through centuries, insights now often reflected in modern psychology.

For example, the guidebook advises that in the circumstances, let the tears flow, that talking and crying about the deceased "is important" and shouldn't be suppressed.

"Judaism doesn't encourage holding in emotions at such times of grief, but expressing them," says Lubow.

The rules of mourning apply at the death of a spouse, parent, son, daughter, brother or sister, lasting for a basic period of seven days, "the shiva," and in moderated degrees, going on for an entire year.

At the start, on the funeral day, those left behind, the "avelim," rip or cut some upper garment — blouse, shirt or a tie — symbolizing rending grief. Sometimes a black torn ribbon is substituted.

Unlike practices in some Christian funerals, there is no "viewing the body" in Jewish tradition which considers the deceased best remembered in life rather than as a corpse.

After the funeral, friends are expected to prepare a meal for the bereaved family — the food traditionally circular such as bagels or hard boiled eggs, signifying that life goes on.

But the meal is only for the bereaved, and "a 'shiva' visit" is not a time for socializing, the guidelines say. "It is an attempt to bring consolation," with conversation and concern confined to that.

The bereaved stay home during the seven days of the "shiva," except possibly for Sabbath synagogue worship. They are not to transact any business. Any household duties are done only for their own use. Marital relations are suspended.

Records show that town doesn't exist

NEVADA, Texas (AP) — Records that turned up after being misfiled more than 50 years ago have forced officials to cancel what would have been this tiny town's first election since 1932.

Residents recently petitioned and won permission to elect new officials Saturday, believing Nevada was still incorporated although it has had no officers since before World War II.

"They knew there had been an election to disband in 1932, but they were under the impression that it didn't pass," Rhonda Watkins, Collin County elections clerk, said Wednesday. "But it did pass, by a narrow margin."

The records to prove that turned up recently after a Texas Power & Light Co. official saw stories about Nevada's impending elections and remembered old company files mentioning the town.

His information prompted Ms. Watkins' office to renew its search, and the records reflecting the disincorporation turned out to have been misfiled, she said.

"That means we've got to start again from scratch and incorporate all over again," said George Webb, 66, a retired farmer and one of the 26 people who signed the petition. "But we're working on it, and hope to be on the ballot after the first of the year."

Webb remembers when the last mayor stepped down in this town 30 miles northeast of Dallas. He also recalls there was an election to disincorporate Nevada, pronounced "Neh-VAY-dah."

The push to get local government back on its feet started as a way to control and route Dallas' sprawling growth as it neared Nevada.
