WORKERS DIG BY LAMP LIGHT TO RESCUE SURVIVORS

By United News

GARY, Ind., June 14.—Digging by lamplight in the smoldering ruins of a two story coke oven building which was wrecked by a terrific gas explosion here, workmen believe the last human body has been removed. The death toll now stands at ten but half a dozen others are hurt critically and may not recover. Five men were killed instantly and five died in a hospital during the afternoon and evening.

The accident which occurred in the lake front by-products plant of the Illinois Steel corporation Monday morning, was the most serious that this thickly populated industrial district has experienced in many years.

The force of the blast lifted the roof from the coke oven building where nearly a hundred men were employed and broke windows in other buildings throughout the community. The wall of the structure collapsed outward as the roof rose into the air and when it came down again the scene was one of twisted bodies, beams and bricks.

The gates of the big plant were immediately closed to all except physicians, nurses, police and fire companies. Every ambulance and doctor in Gary rushed to the scene and assisted in caring for the dying and injured.

VARE ADMITS ANOTHER HALF MILLION IN CAMPAIGN

By RAYMOND CLAPPER.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Another half million dollars was uncovered when the senate campaign fund investigating committee Monday night delved into the accounts of William S. Vare, who won the republican senatorial primary in Pennsylvania.

This brings the known total cost of that primary to $1,336,734, with still more to come. From Thomas F. Watson, Vare's state treasurer, the committee learned of $524,754 that had been raised, about half of which was handled in cash and never put through a bank.

Adding the $71,000 personal expenses previously reported by Vare, his known total is brought to $695,754.

The committee already has traced the cost of Governor Pinchot's campaign to $145,000 and that of Senator Pepper's to $1,045,000. Pepper's expenses were twice the sum thus far traced to Vare.

Money spent in the recent primary was as legitimate as money given to the church, declared Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the dominant figure in Pennsylvania politics commenting Monday on the disclosures before the senate campaign fund investigating committee.

ROCKFORD AND STERLING INHABITANTS FLEE TO HIGH GROUND

By United News

CHICAGO, June 14.—New rain storms are reported by flooded areas of the middle west, but the weather bureau predicts clearing skies will bring relief from the high water menace before Tuesday night.

Streams throughout the Chicago forecast zone are overflowing their channels, causing heavy damage in several small towns.

Although the worst of the cloud-bursts struck Sunday intermittent rain continued Monday night and residents of Rockford and Sterling, Ill., were leaving their homes for safer lodging on higher ground.

Hail, high winds and lightning accompanied the record breaking rainfall in some sections, bringing the death toll to eleven in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska and Wisconsin.

Growing crops were badly damaged in Iowa, Nebraska and Indiana. Rockford, Ill., is waterbound. Streets have been turned into rivers by backwaters from Keth creek and dozens of families have been rescued from house tops by firemen floating about the town in row boats.

Air mail, interurban lines and steam railroad service were interrupted by the gales and floods. Several main highway bridges were washed out, leaving motorists stranded or forcing them to make long detours.

Rockford, where nearly five inches of rain fell in less than two hours, estimates its property damage at half a million dollars.

In Chicago the property loss will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Five hundred basements were flooded on the South side where drainage facilities are poor. Water overflowed the sidewalks, running down the aisles and into the orchestra pit of a crowded theatre.

THE LORD'S BLESSING—"The Lord thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand." Deut. 2:7.

STATE RIGHTS

The formation of a new organization called the "Sentinels of the Republic" to start a drive against Federal bureaucracy, communism and the tendency of the Federal government to encroach on the rights of the states and of individuals, should be hailed as a distinct and needed step toward the protection and preservation of state rights. The avowed purpose of the Sentinels is "to maintain the fundamental principles of the American Constitution, to oppose further Federal encroachment on the reserved rights of the states and of the individual citizen, to stop the spread of Communism, to prevent the concentration of power in Washington through the multiplication of administrative bureaus under a perverted interpretation of the general welfare clause, to help preserve a free republican form of government in the United States." Certainly these are aims to which every right thinking American can subscribe. Certainly they are ideals, which, if attained would constitute a splendid contribution to the welfare of America. As Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, associated in the Sentinels, says, "A third turning point in their history now confronts the American people with Federal bureaucracy and various forms and varieties of Communism threatening to change the whole form and spirit of our government." For some years now the states have smugly contemplated the usurpation of rights by the Federal government without regret, because of the expense or trouble involved in taking care of the various matters themselves. The result has been that the precious doctrine of state rights has been jeopardized far beyond the limits contemplated in the original draft of our Republic or by the results of the Civil War, ought primarily to evolve an accurate definition of state rights and their limitations. The "Sentinels of the Republic" certainly have a sane and sensible aim in view and it is to be hoped that the citizens of the nation will respond to the appeal of this new organization and stop the centralization of power within the Federal government.

A DESPERATE REMEDY

France is about to attempt a desperate remedy to restore the franc, a remedy that may change the commercial complexion of all of Europe and will vitally affect the foreign trade of the United States. It is a desperate remedy, because its effects cannot be accurately estimated in advance and it may have unforeseen consequences of a most disturbing nature. Briefly, the plan is for the government to control importations, limit foodstuffs for export and switch the majority of importations from Great Britain and the United States to Germany so that the purchase money for these importations may be marked off against the reparations payments as they come due instead of forcing the payment from the French treasury in dollars and pounds sterling. The effect upon the foreign trade of the United States is immediately apparent. There will be a curtailment of a very good market and one which has been well educated to the good points of American goods. The effect on Great Britain will be only slightly less serious. Of course it will be a strange sight to thus see France and Germany working together for mutual rehabilitation. For Germany the mutual trading would provide an easy method of paying much of the reparations debt and for France the goods could be paid for without depleting the actual treasury reserve. The plan has something to recommend it and perhaps it will work toward the stabilization of the franc, as is hoped. We cannot be selfish enough to hope for failure simply because our own commercial prosperity will be temporarily curtailed in some degree. The immediate result of the new order will be the virtual declaration of a state of siege in France with the whole nation on war time rations, with the government in the saddle controlling everything in a last desperate effort to bring France back to normal times. Let us hope that the experiment will not be in vain.

AVIATION'S FUTURE

The future of aviation is certainly one of much promise. Beginning as a daring dream of "hair brained" experimenters, it has grown in every sense of the word until it is on the threshold of becoming one of the greatest developments of the future. Already much of the danger has been removed from aviation, commercial and mail lines are operating with a favorable coefficient of reliability and safety, and remarkable steps have been taken toward the developments of even safer planes. It has been a dream of years that an aeroplane could be developed that would carry 100 persons, be practically free of the danger of failing engines and be outfitted in comfortable manner. Now we are about to see that dream come true as a German firm begins the construction of a giant cantilever monoplane, boasting 12 separate engines and carrying just 100 persons. According to all accounts it will be a machine of stupendous proportions and will be able to fly at three quarters power with three motors out of commission. If such a machine can be produced and proves successful, it will mean that a regular airplane line across the Atlantic will not be such a visionary scheme but will be well within the realm of reasonable development. Fortunate indeed is the man, who, living today, may be privileged to live long enough to see the evolution of aviation in the next ten years.

FAULT FINDING TRAVELERS

A club woman in a recent public address devoted to friendlier international relations uttered one sentence that has other helpful application than the one she intended. "We should not travel so bristling with Americanism that we can only notice that in other lands they don't have pancakes for breakfast and sit in rocking chairs." There is much evidence to show that that is a real weakness of many of many American travelers abroad. Their powers of observation are used too much for the purpose of drawing unfavorable comparisons between the new scenes and customs and the familiar ones at home. Sometimes Americans traveling in their own country go about with so much local pride that they see only the faults in the cities visited. They complain of one community's traffic system and laugh at another's town hall and abuse privileges and take for granted a welcome they don't deserve by their actions. Travelers who can't be friendly and appreciative of the interesting and good qualities of their host towns ought to cease being travelers and stay at home.

THE BORAH BOOM

Senator Borah seized the publicity bull by the horns in an attempt to prove himself Presidential timber, when he made his scathing attack upon the proposed New York state wet referendum, but, like a blank cartridge, the attempt was noisy but did no harm. Senator Borah is an excellent mouthpiece but, in the opinion of those in power in the Republican party, he is not a promising candidate for the office of President in 1928. Even to those who are on the outside, so to speak, Senator Borah does not recommend himself for such a high office. As a senator where he may indulge his flair for oratory and violent disagreement, he does very well but one can not imagine him as the level headed captain of the ship of state. Rather he reminds one of the old time bucko mate who roamed the decks with a belaying pin in each fist and a torrent of abuse issuing from his mouth. To most political observers the Borah boom is but a flash in the pan, interesting fireworks, but nothing more serious.

MILITARY TRAINING

Now that the Federal Council of Churches has taken up an active fight against compulsory military training in colleges and high schools we may expect to witness a concerted publicity drive, against this valuable adjunct of the education of youth. Military training is not for war purposes, it does not breed a desire for war, but it does assist in building finer bodies, quicker minds, a good carriage, self-reliance and a true sense of discipline. All of these, it must be admitted, are much to be desired. And opposed to all these good points is the contention that military training inculcates a "militaristic spirit" in the youth of today, which contention may or may not be true. It has never been proved and thus we are entitled to doubt it. Military training builds self-reliance character and certainly this country and the world needs a good stiff injection of that. The Federal Council of Churches might occupy their time with some more worthy movement.

THE EGYPTIAN SITUATION

There is now much in the Egyptian situation to make the student of Near East affairs feel somewhat easier in mind, for, with the rather unexpected reasonableness of former Premier Zagloul Pasha, the tension has relaxed a great deal. Zagloul, whose sweeping victory at the polls so complicated an already ticklish situation, has retreated from his former position that he be given the reins of government and thus Great Britain's worst fears will be allayed. The formation of the new ministry, with Adly Yeghen Pasha as premier and minister of the interior, seems to be progressing with the approval of the majority of the electorate and certainly it is proving most acceptable to the British government, which had even dispatched a warship to Cairo to guard British interests there. We can be grateful, of course, that the anticipated hostilities did not occur but we cannot but deplore the condition that will allow such crises to come about. The Near East situation in general is an unbalanced, dangerous one and will bear constant watching at all times.

MOSUL

The signing of the Mosul agreement by Turkey and Great Britain has undoubtedly removed another probable cause of war in the Near East. While primarily an oil treaty, yet the political ramifications of the agreement are such that all parties are more than satisfied with the result. On our part we should be particularly glad since the agreement automatically protects the American oil companies, which will get 25 percent of the output of a rich, undeveloped oil field. The treaty even goes so far as to establish a definite Mosul boundary. Undoubtedly one of the terms of the treaty is that Turkey shall get about 10 percent of the oil revenue but even this is a cheap price to pay for a plentiful petroleum source and an era of peace.

Calling Him Off His Best

It Is Reported

That the Governor's spokesman is going to make campaign speeches regardless of the objections of some of the voters. He has threatened to call out the rangers if necessary. So we are told.

That old Battle Axe was seen in the courthouse yesterday and was disrespectful enough to the temple of justice to expectorate on the marble steps. Isn't that awful.

That Germany will establish two air lines in France.

That the railroad crossing on Broadway is simply unbearably rough. Lubbock would appreciate it if Mr. Santa Fe would have this put up in better condition.

That the boy scouts are going to have a big barbecue and picnic at the Scout park near Post on June 29th celebrating the opening of that park.

That after all liberty is only a habit.

That some people have no more sense than to think because some laws are violated that it is no harm to violate others.

That the good are never as good as they seem or the bad as bad as they appear. We wonder if this is really true.

That nearly all strikes are settled after both sides are pretty thoroughly licked.

That men put forth a lot of energy trying to get a public office that does not pay half as much as some other commercial positions. However such a thing could be that they would not be worth more than they are getting.

That a scientist has stated that both the North and South Poles are moving and it will be necessary to make a new discovery very near each year. That gives a chance for more honors for more people.

That when a man begins to lose faith in Santa Claus he begins to believe in hair restorers and hence we believe in something all the time.

That the old auditorium will be torn down this week and moved to the fair grounds, where it will be built into some useful structure. It will no doubt fill a long felt want there, and it has served its day of usefulness as an auditorium.

That the United States Government is liable to make another cut in taxes. Pretty soon they will get them down to bargain day prices.

That the committee still has a few tickets to sell on the special train to 'Amarillo'.

So Think We

We think Lubbock should be the best market for dairy products on the South Plains, but it seems that it has been given the black eye by the new milk Ordinance. Whether or not it affects the sale of cream and butter it certainly does with many people and if the business men do not undertake to educate the people up to the real meaning of the ordinance it will continue to drive people away from Lubbock.

We think that we cannot be too careful about the gas franchise. The first one that gets it and puts it into effect will be the one that will have the edge over all others, and it will take a mighty strong pull to get another one. We are for gas, but let's know what we are going to get, when we are going to get it, and all about it. We have a right to know.

We think that Lubbock needs a good weed cutting campaign. Some of the property is getting mighty ragged looking, and a few hours weed cutting every day will help the looks of it a great deal.

We think there is a lot of question marks after many of the things that some public officials do.

We think that Lubbock is building just about as many houses right now as any town on the South Plains, and yet some people seem to think it is dull in this city.

We think when people come to Lubbock and see the large number of people in town every day they think business must be on the boom in this city, still we hear people talking about dull times.

We think the race for governor will be pretty fast and furious, if the candidates do not bog down in the mire and slime that they are throwing at each other. Its a dirty job this thing of running for governor.

WORLD TOPICS

RADIO TIMEPIECES

In a recent interview, Olof Ohlson, chief engineer of the Waltham watch factory, made an interesting prediction that watches of the future may be run by radio impulses sent out by a broadcasting station.

Mr. Ohlson is quoted as saying that "the time may not be very remote when we shall be able to transmit energy by this means to operate watches without the aid either of a mainspring within them, or of a local battery."

Should this prediction prove true, it will mark another epochal advance in horological science, which had its beginning in the ancient sundial. The sundial was perhaps the only instrument employed for time-keeping from the dawn of civilization until the invention of the water clock, ascribed to Plato, about 400 B. C.

Clocks were not invented until many centuries later. While a primitive instrument, called the horologium, is said to have been devised in the 9th century, A. D. the earliest clock of which any description has been preserved is one made in Egypt about the year 1332. A beginning in clock-making was made in Germany about 1364, the clocks being regulated by balances. The invention of the mainspring in 1500 and the pendulum in 1583 gave great impetus to clockmaking and it is believed that the first watches were made shortly afterward. But the minute hand was not added until after the invention of the balance spring, about 1660.

Since that time many improvements have been made, both in the watches and clocks, until we have the almost perfect chronometers and other time pieces of the present.

While Mr. Ohlson's idea of a radio watch, which may be carried in the pocket while kept going through impulses from a distant station, may appear fantastic, the wonderful achievements already witnessed must inspire a belief in its possibility.

Happiness costs so little and comes so easy to children that it ought to be the business of all grown people to give them as much as possible.

Back Into De Ole Time

By OLIVER ALLSTORM

(Copyright)

The following poem was written by Oliver Allstorm, veteran newspaper man, who passed through last week on a hike from New York to San Francisco, subsisting enroute entirely on the proceeds of sale of his verses:

Back into de ole time Ah's wanderin' tonight,
 Aroun' de ole log cabin, whar once wuz all delight.
 Ah hears sweet voices callin', but dey am strange an' low,
 Dey don't soun' lak de darkies ob de happy long ago.
 Der songs dey am de new ones, der voices am de free,
 But all of dem hab promised dey'll sing de ole fo' me,
 Dey'll thump upon de banjo, an' sing wid all dar might,
 An' call fo' me de ole times Ah's dreamin' ob tonight.

Refrain:
 Back into de ole time Ah's wid de

folks tonight;
 "Back into de ole time" now big mah heart delight.
 Come, sing de songs of Massa, an' songs ob Missy dear;
 Sing ob de snowy cotton, sing ob de possums here;
 An' dance, yo' pickaninies, rejoice yo' black an' white,
 Ah's back into de ole time home wid de folks tonight.

Back into de ole time, Ah's lak a chile at play,
 Ah feels jes' lak a shoutin', fo' long Ah's been away.
 Don't ax me whar Ah's been, chile, 'jes let me sit an' res'
 Wid de green magnolias 'bove me an' yo' hed upon mah brea,
 Ah's powerful glad to linger here in de sunset's glow.
 If Ah ken keep a-lookin' on de scenes Ah uster know,
 Each corner here am precious, de wind am a melody,
 An' song-birds am a singin' familiar-lak to me.

DUKE BASSINGER, ALL SOUTHWESTERN CONFERENCE PITCHER OFFERS TO WORK WITH HUBBER CREW THROUGH SUMMER

Skipper Allen received a telegram yesterday morning from a former Lubbock lad who was acclaimed as the foremost hurler in the southwestern conference, in Duke Bassinger, who for a number of years was a resident of Slaton, Texas, and desires to take a position with the Hubbers as pitcher for the summer. Duke, in the southwestern conference played with the S. M. U. Mustangs and was named as one of the all conference moundsmen. But with the chances of getting hold of Duke there faces the baseball association the conflict of sufficient funds in order to secure his services.

By securing the services of Duke Bassinger would make a rather nice combination with right handers and left handers to work with through the season. But a rub comes in that there is not enough money on hand to meet the payroll of the players already employed. It is now the plans of the baseball association, of which I. F. Holland is secretary, to stage another drive in order that the team now on hand will not drop through and will be available for the trip to Denver this fall for the Post tournament which was won by the Hubbers last year.

This drive will more than likely be staged within the next few days and the baseball association desires to put forth their proposition to Lubbock that the victory in the Denver Post tournament last fall gave to Lubbock and the south plains the greatest amount of advertising that they have secured since the establishment of the Texas Tech college. For seven days during the month of September, which is most prosperous month in Colorado, the Denver Post displayed the Hubbers on their front page with a circulation of more than 300,000 throughout a territory that knew practically nothing of Lubbock or the south plains, yet with the appearance of the Lubbock team on the front page of the Rocky mountains' foremost daily paper was worth more than money could buy for advertising the town in any other publication printed. The thing that faces the Hubber aggregation, or rather the Lubbock baseball association is, when are the fans of Lubbock going to do their part?

The Hubbers have a full schedule for the next ten days with meeting Plainview at Plainview today; Panhandle at Panhandle for two days; Amarillo at Amarillo Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; then here with Lamesa Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 25, 26 and 27.

City League Loops Will Open Today

This afternoon the two loops of the City League will begin their seasons with the Bankers and Sherrod-Myrick clubs in the Merrill Park and the Rix-Baker and Wholesalers, of the Twilight Circle, opening at the Tech Park.

The two leagues will alternate in the use of the ball parks. Majors will have use of the Merrill Park for the first week, while the Twilights will use the Tech Park; in the second week it will be vice versa.

Schedule for the leagues have not been completed and will probably be ready for publication the latter part of this week.

TENNIS INTEREST NOW AT WIMBLEDON

PARIS, June 14.—The tennis spotlight began to be focused on the Wimbledon tennis tournament for the unofficial world's championship as the French hard courts tourney ended Monday.

American hopes, partly blasted by the illness of Helen Wills and the defeats which the United States players suffered in Paris, were revived as the stars began preparations for the English tournament.

Hubbers Will Meet Plainview This Afternoon

This afternoon the Hubbers will journey to Plainview where they will meet with the Plainview nine. The fans of Plainview are preparing for a great game with the Hubbers and are expecting a large crowd for this afternoon's performance.

The club will leave this morning at 11 o'clock and should there be anyone that is going and have plenty of room for players they are requested to notify Skipper Allen so that rides will be provided for the club.

Skeet Ratliff, lanky Hubber, will be detailed for duty this afternoon.

Babe Ruth Reaches 1921 Homer Mark

ST. LOUIS, June 14.—Babe Ruth again drew abreast of his 1921 home run record Monday afternoon when he made four bases out of Charley Robertson's offerings in the second inning of the Yanks-Browns game here.

It was his 22nd of the season. Five years ago, while making his record of 59 homers, the bambino clouted his 22nd on June 14.

GREB LOSES COURT BOUT

NEW YORK, June 14.—Harry Greb, former middle weight champion pugilist, lost a supreme court decision Monday and was enjoined from boxing except under the management of James M. Mason of Pittsburgh.

Previously the New York state boxing commission had decided in favor of the fighter, holding the contract he had with Mason was null and void in this state.

Greb asserted he did not know the terms of the agreement which gave him two thirds of the receipts and the manager the remainder, when he signed it.

SHE KISSED HIM CRAZY, JUDGE FINDS HIM SANE

LOS ANGELES, June 14.—A long blistering kiss and a bite on the lip administered by Clara Bow, "flaming flapper" of the screen, were but two of the disturbing things that drove Robert W. Savage, Yale grid hero to attempt suicide for her love. The other things, Savage's friends revealed at his sanity charges here Monday, were the "soft California moon," a kiss on the porch and the fact that in the spring a young man's mind gets "kind of sappy."

Berlenbach Will Fight Delaney

NEW YORK, June 14.—Right on the heels of his decisive victory over young W. L. Strubling, Paul Berlenbach, the Astoria assassin, who is willing to meet any fighter in his class, signed an agreement Monday with Humber Fugazy to meet Jack Delaney for the world's light heavyweight championship.

To Represent S. W. In National Open

DALLAS, Texas, June 14.—Winning out in a 36 hole medal competition at Brook Hollow country club here Monday afternoon Keefe Carter of Oklahoma City, Willie McGuire of Houston, Tom Lally of San Antonio and Harold Scott Long of Oklahoma City won the right to represent the southwest in the national open golf championship tournament to be held at Scioto club, Columbus, Ohio, July 8-10.

Keefe Carter who is western and Oklahoma amateur champion turned in low score for the day 74-75-150. The other three winners are professionals. Long won fourth place in a one-hole play off with Edwin Jugler, San Antonio, both having turned in cards of 156.

Secluded corners in parks, even abandoned churchyards, as well as playgrounds and other available open spaces will be utilized this summer for the 137 open-air classes that the London County Council plans to operate at an expense of about 5,000 pounds.

AMERICAN LEAGUE IN TOP NOTCH SHUFFLE

The first division in the American league was considerable shuffled Monday afternoon by the Philadelphia-Cleveland game which ended 6 to 5 in favor of the Indians. Although the Yanks retained their tremendous lead, the Athletics dropped to fourth place, Cleveland jumped into the runner-up position and Chicago, which was idle in Chicago because of wet grounds, was sandwiched in between.

The division looks like this:
New York Won Lost Pct.
Cleveland 40 16 .714
Chicago 31 26 .544
Philadelphia 30 26 .536
Philadelphia 31 27 .534
The circuit clouts of Ruth and Meusel—was the Babe's 22nd—were insufficient to take the Browns into camp. St. Louis won 7 to 3, driving Penhock out of the box.

The Braves, playing the most sensational ball in the National league, took a 3 to 2 verdict from the world champion Pirates to win their 10th victory in 11 starts on their home grounds. Boston crunched four hits including a triple, for three runs off Yde in the 5th.

Five home runs featured the Chicago-Philadelphia game which was won by the Cubs, 9 to 7. Wrightstone hit a four base blow with the bases full and Stephenson hit two homers in successive innings.

The Giants rose on their hind legs and bested Cincinnati 4 to 3 in a pitchers' duel. Although out-hit, the McGraw men were able to make their bingles count. They scored the winning run in the 9th off Donahue.

Brooklyn stopped the Cardinals short, coming out on the long end of an 8 to 5 score. Bob McGraw went the route for the Robins while Horneby used three pitchers.

Detroit won an old fashioned slugger match from Boston, 8 to 7. The offerings of six pitchers were pasted all over the lot.

Judge Upholds Censored Play

NEW YORK, June 14.—The worm has turned and it appears that New York's much touted "play jury" system which was heralded as an excellent solution of the problems of compelling some measure of decency and an occasional garnet on the New York stage, has received a knockout blow.

Supreme Court Justice J. V. Mullan assailed the play jury idea in his court Monday with the result that the line probably will continue to form to the right outside the theatre showing "The Bunk of 1926," a revue featuring Beryl Halley as a very nude Eve which District Attorney Banton tried to close when the play jury found it objectionable.

The show closed for but one night and then re-opened, defying Banton and his petit play jury whose decision he was prepared to enforce.

Justice Mullan, who was hearing an argument by Banton to vacate an injunction obtained by the revue producer forbidding him to close the show, said he had no sympathy with the idea of wealthy persons meddling in affairs of state and trying to regulate things by their own ways of thinking.

After two hours of arguments by 3 lawyers, an assistant district attorney and an assistant corporation counsel, Mullan refused to vacate the injunction and reserved final decision until Friday.

THE WIFE WHO WASN'T WANTED with Irene Rich in a picture line of this series.

SYNOPSIS

Jerome Wallace has promised Eileen Mannering, wife of the district attorney, that if he is elected to that office he will release Bob, Eileen's son, who is accused of causing the death of a woman in a motor smash. Mrs. Mannering is torn between loyalty to her husband and devotion to the boy until Marjorie Patterson, who is in love with Bob, convinces her that no sacrifice would be too great to make for his welfare.

See, even as might some alchemist gaze upon a precious elixir, he raised a bottle and viewed its ruddy contents with loving eyes. With care he drew from it, adding a dash of this, a drop of that, with the skill of practice. Into the shaker it went, and as he deftly agitated it his happy countenance brought memories of mirrors, of shining mahogany, glistening glasses and polished foot rails. Shaken sufficiently, he carefully divided the contents into three thin glasses, and one he raised to view it, as might some artist who had completed a canvas and knew it to be good.

Now he turned and, approaching Greta, graciously presented the glass as if she were a goddess and he Hebe, grown fat and masculine. "There's a cocktail that will put whiskers on you," said Slick proudly.

It was plain that Greta had no desire for whiskers. She received the glass coldly, but, deigning to taste it, made a terrible face. "Bah! Who ever told you you could make a cocktail? What are you trying to do—poison me?" she spluttered.

Filled with righteous indignation, Slick fastened a reproving eye upon Greta. Here was but a poor return for artistic effort.

"That's good stuff," he protested. "I mixed it right, and it's smoother than oil skin an' mellower than an apple. I thought that stuff myself."

"You mixed it," retorted Greta icily. "I'll say you did, and it tasted worse than any rotten apples to me. And say, listen, who ever told you you were any judge of whiskey was cuckoo."

"The h—ll you say," he began. But she broke in coolly.

"Listen, Slick. Can that rough stuff, back to the gas house for you. If you want to get anything off your chest get them to connect you up with the mains. I'm not interested." Then she yawned.

Highly amused at the repartee of his dinner guests, Wallace sat back and chuckled.

But, shaken by the greatness of his wrath, Slick turned upon him. "Say," he thundered, indicating Greta with a scornful finger, "if by any chance you do happen to get in as District Attorney here's a chapter of your life that will have to be cut out."

With blazing eyes Greta leaped for him and no doubt would have added bodily injury to insult so far as Slick was concerned had it not been for the entrance of the Japanese servant, who, moving to Wallace's side, leaned down and whispered a message in his ear.

Ever suspicious, Greta forgot her feud with Slick to turn upon Wallace, fairly brimming with curiosity.

"What's the big idea, sweetheart—what's going on?" she demanded eagerly.

But Wallace seemed instantly another man. With that inscrutable smile upon his face he said:

there headless of Greta, but thinking, thinking deeply.

"I thought she would come, I thought that would bring her," he mused softly, and there was a note of exultation in his tones.

Low as was his voice, his words did not escape Greta's keen ears. Abashed with jealousy, she was upon him in a flash, her manner angry and insistent.

"She—who is she?"

With a gesture of indifference Wallace waved her aside and arose to his feet. "Clear that table," he told the Japanese, and, indicating Slick's laboratory, "get those bottles out of here."

"Listen, what's the big idea?" began Greta indignantly.

"Take her out of here, Slick," ordered Wallace coolly.

Slick regarded the wrathful Greta much as if he had been instructed to remove an irritated wildcat. Despite her insults, he seemed loath to lay hands upon her.

"Where?" he inquired tentatively.

"Anywhere, so long as you get her out of here. The next room will do."

Slick chewed vigorously upon his cigar, even as a cow might ruminate upon its cud. Then, he ventured a polite bow and a courteous gesture towards the next room.

Greta never budged.

"Come on, kid; let's you an' me beat it," he said, essaying the mien and tone of a gentleman inviting a lady upon an excursion of pleasure.

"Don't kid me, you fat clam!"

Diplomatically speaking, Slick was at the end of his tether, so figuratively he spat upon his hands.

"Hey, you, get the—," he had begun in loud tones, when Wallace hastily interrupted.

"It's only Mrs. Mannering," he whispered.

Calmed by this concession, Greta followed Slick into the next room, and, the Japanese servant having by this time cleared away all the evidences of the festivities, Wallace indicated that Eileen was to be admitted.

A moment later she appeared in the doorway, but only to pause upon the threshold and to peer irresolutely about, her face unutterably anxious and weary.

As if filled with surprise at her coming, Wallace leaned to his feet and hastened towards her with outstretched hand.

"Way, Eileen, I am honored indeed."

But, obsessed by the single thought which had brought her, she never heeded his hand and, careless of his greeting, plunged almost breathlessly into the business which had brought her.

"This morning, Mr. Wallace, you told me that if you were elected District Attorney you would see that my son was freed. Did you mean it?"

Again Wallace seemed filled with surprise.

"Won't you be seated, Eileen?" he urged with grave courtesy.

She shook her head impatiently. "You said that—didn't you?"

He hesitated, appearing to consider his words well before he uttered them, but when he spoke it was with emphasis.

"Of course I said it, and I meant it, too, Eileen."

She took a deep breath, as from relief.

"What could be done, then, to cause my husband to lose the election?" she demanded bluntly.

From Wallace's face he seemed to disbelieve his own ears. He was amazed, almost shocked, at the idea. But, managing to recover himself with marvelous speed, his manner grew even careless.

"If Mannering were to compromise himself, it he were to get mixed up in some sort of scandal—"

"That is impossible," she interrupted quickly.

He shrugged his shoulders, shot a quick calculating glance at her and then smiled, as if what he was about to suggest was equally absurd.

"Well, in politics a man's wife can get him into lots of hot water. The next best thing would be for you to do it, Eileen."

"If," she cried, surprised indignation written in every line of her face.

"Oh, I know it's ridiculous," chuckled Wallace, much amused even at the thought. "I had no idea you would want to go through with it."

"But I do," she burst forth only to swiftly change her mind. "No, no; I couldn't do it," she groaned.

HERE IS THEORY OF READINESS-TO-SERVE

The so-called "readiness-to-serve" charge, which is a "fixed" amount which must be paid whether or not service is used, is not a peculiarity of the gas business, according to C. S. Reed, chairman of the rate structure committee of the American Gas Association. People pay a similar charge almost every day without realizing it.

The standard taxicab fare in many cities is an example as there is an operating charge plus a waiting charge. The same applies to attorney's fees, as a lawyer may not do any work for his client in a certain month, and yet the client must pay a retainer fee because the lawyer is ready to serve in case of emergency.

"If a like charge was made for gas service," says Mr. Reed, "the bill would look like this: The customer would pay for convenience, speed and power, and fuel. He would pay for a superior method of cooking or heating made possible by the extensive distribution system of the gas company. He would pay for speed and power, as people with high-powered appliances should pay a higher speed charge. The bare cost of producing gas is covered by the commodity charge, similar to the gasoline, oil and tire expense of the automobile."

SMILING THROUGH AT CHAUTAUQUA

WHIMSICAL PLAY PROMISES TO DRAW BIGGEST CROWD

Attendance at yesterday's chautauqua programs was especially good and the crowds were pleased with the three act musical revue, "Oh, Percy."

An even better treat, however, is promised in the programs for this afternoon and evening, and attendance will likely be even better due to the fact that the chautauqua is attracting more attention with the conclusion of each program.

This afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, the program will be given by Miss Katharine Costin and assisting artists. The address will be given by Major J. J. H. H. African explorer, world traveler and lecturer, at one time associated with Cecil Rhodes, in a vivid portrayal of the looting and constructing of the Cape to Cairo railway, the longest transcontinental railway in the world through the least known part of the world—a compelling narrator of life on the continent of Africa, its flora, fauna, natives, diamond mines, gold mines, pygmies, cannibals, giants, witch doctors, ancient ruins and big game hunting.

This evening at 8:15 o'clock, "Smiling Through" will be presented by an all star cast of comedians who have been selected for their parts in the presentation of this emotional character.

"Smiling Through" is a quaint, whimsical play, composed of scenes, hobnobbing with heart interest and unassuming with plenty of humor. On the night that John Cartwright and Monyone Clare are to be married a reformed author, Jeremiah Wayne, kills Monyone with a bullet intended for Cartwright.

In the years that follow Cartwright utterly remembers that Wayne has slain the woman who was to have been his wife.

It is a terrific shock when Cartwright learns that Kathleen, his niece and ward, and Kenneth Wayne, son of Jeremiah Wayne, are lovers. Cartwright orders Kenneth to leave the premises and forbids Kathleen to see him again. "Disregarding the wishes of her guardian, Kathleen goes to say good bye to her lover as we leave for the war. Then—but you must see "Smiling Through" for the story.

DENVER WELCOMES TEN THOUSAND

ROTARIANS, GATHERED FOR THEIR SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

DENVER, June 14.—Welcoming the ten thousand visiting Rotarians to Denver Ralph Mayo, president of the host club said at the opening of the first session of the seventeenth convention of Rotary international, at the Denver University stadium, tonight, "Denver welcomes Rotarians from the entire world in the interests of international citizenship."

This was the keynote of a convention at which eight thousand delegates chosen from about 2,000 clubs have met to consider the advancement of the principles of Rotary and their influence in international business affairs.

The vanguard of Rotary found the city greatly decorated with Rotary wheels, American flags, bunting of blue and yellow, and flashing emblems of Rotary. Fifty band played songs that are sung by the various groups in hotel lobbies and the spirit of song infects the heart of the city.

Denver hostesses who have opened their homes for the lodging of visitors who could not obtain accommodations at hotels have entered into the spirit of the occasion and assist in entertaining the visiting throngs at their homes and by giving personal automobile service.

Following the opening address by the president of the Denver club, Charles Rhodes of Auckland, New Zealand, accepted the hospitality of the Denver Rotarians and citizens striking the same keynote of international friendship as a basis for world peace.

He has traveled over fifteen thousand miles to attend this meeting, coming the furthest distance, though there are many who have come ten thousand miles to join their fellow Rotarians.

So widespread is the interest taken in overseas countries in the American ideas and ethical principles generally supposed to be foreign to the thoughts of old world citizens, that it can be fairly stated that hardly any country will not be represented by some notable leader in a business or profession. New Zealand not only sends Charles Rhodes, a former director of Rotary international, but sixteen other members of its clubs; Australia is represented by 28 Rotarians; Chile by 2; there are 1 from Italy; 2 from China; 3 from Japan; 10 from Spain; 7 from Holland; 5 from Bermuda; 4 from Belgium; 2 from the Argentine; 2 from Switzerland; 78 from Mexico; 18 from Cuba; 2 from South Africa; 3 from Tasmania; Hawaii and Honolulu, 18; and 18 from Holland. The ladies accompanying their delegate husbands are being received by local ladies of foreign birth or ancestry, and have had their first views of snow-capped mountains and western hospitality.

Many Rotarians have seen the Rockies for the first time, the entertainment committee turning them into the great open spaces where fifty mile ranges of snowy tipped heights fill their guests with wonderment.

President Donald A. Adams, of New Haven, Conn., convened the week's intensive work with an address of fitting welcome and high inspiration. He announced that he had just returned from the continent where he had found business men speaking foreign languages understanding the purpose of Rotary adopting with great sincerity its basic principle of establishing fair dealing in all commercial and political contact. It is expected that his annual report will stress the same keynote of interchange of friendliness and international integrity in business life.

Paul P. Harris sent his annual message to the convention stressing the simplicity of living upon which his ideals of the world wide friendship had been founded and the necessity to keep Rotary's functions in civic life clear and simple in order to make its purposes continually effective.

Twelve hundred Denverites took part in the great pageant at the Denver University stadium where twelve thousand Rotarians and guests gathered Monday evening, June 14. Five hundred voices rose in choral song and the Denver Symphony society of 150 pieces accompanied the singers. In this manner the great convention got under way, with only a few scattering delegates to arrive.

OVERHAUL C. I. A. PRESIDENT'S MANSION

DENTON, June 14.—The president's mansion at the College of Industrial Arts, in use during the past 18 months as a classroom building for the department of reading, is being completely overhauled and will be the home of President and Mrs. L. I. Hubbard beginning July 1. Refinishing work is being done outside and inside the structure. The president's mansion is a large residence of approximately ten rooms and is located on the campus.

SAYS MILKING ADAY KEEPS BANKER AWAY

WOLFARTH, Texas, June 14.—M. M. McReynolds of Wolfarth, has a good herd of cows on his farm two and one half miles northeast of here which adds beauty and finance to his pocketbook. Mr. McReynolds is a very progressive farmer as well as a dairyman. He says that if it was not for his cows life would not be worth living on the south plains. Mr. McReynolds has a good trade for all his products from his farm, which he is enjoying very much. From the sale of his commodities from his cows and poultry as well Mr. McReynolds is a strong competitor to the Lubbock bankers. Mr. McReynolds says that he has often heard it said "that an apple a day will keep the doctor away." But he says that a good cow milked regular a day will keep the banker away.
