SISD trustees meet today

Will consider superintendent applications

Snyder public schools trustees will begin studying applications today in their first hands-on step toward selecting a new superintendent.

Meeting at 4 p.m. in executive session, the board is expected to review applications from about 10 candidates recommended by a consultant team. Some 39 applications have been received by the Texas Association of School Boards consulting firm, hired by the district to find a replacement for retiring superintendent Dalton Moseley.

Trustees are expected to consider the firm's recommendations — and review any of the other applications if they wish — and narrow the list of candidates to about a half-dozen before adjourning this evening.

Those six or so semifinalists will be brought in for interviews Thursday, Friday and Saturday by the board.

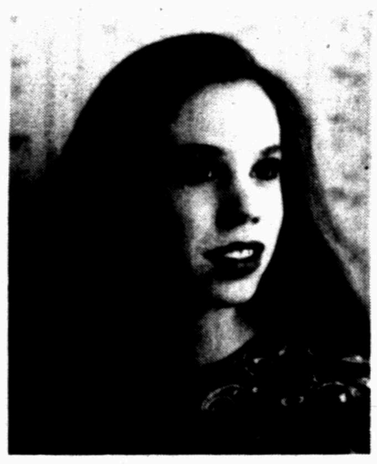

According to a timetable established by the board and the consultants, trustees will meet again with the consulting firm next Monday to select three candidates from those interviewed. Those finalists will be interviewed again April 21-23.

Trustees hope to name a new superintendent April 28.

Local girl selected HOBY participant

Snyder Kiwanis Club, in cooperation with high school principal Larry Scott, has selected Sterling Cave to participate in this year's Hugh O'Brian Youth (HOBY) Foundation Leadership Seminar as the ambassador from Snyder.

Cave will attend the Texas Leadership Seminar on April 22-24 in Amarillo with other outstanding sophomores from throughout the state. Participants will meet with leaders in business, industry, government, education and the professions to learn about the free enterprise system and the democratic process.

STERLING CAVE

The criteria for selection included evidence of emerging leadership ability, cooperation, sensitivity to the needs of others, ability to relate to new pursuits and acquaintances and the desire to learn and share knowledge and experience with others, as well as academic success.

At the leadership seminar, one boy and one girl will be selected to attend the annual, all-expense paid, week-long World Leadership Congress.

For more than 30 years, the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation has held leadership seminars for high school sophomores throughout the United States, Canada, the Bahamas and Mexico.

The Kiwanis Club of Snyder has sponsored a student to the HOBY Leadership Seminar for a number of years. Cave will be invited to attend a weekly luncheon meeting of the club to report on her trip.

Collins named TDCJ head

DALLAS (AP) — James A. "Andy" Collins, who has directed the state's network of prisons for the past four years, is the new executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

"It's a very humbling experience. I've been with the department for several years, and this is a great honor. There's a lot of hard work ahead," Collins, 43, of Huntsville said Sunday following his unanimous selection by the nine-member Texas Board of Criminal Justice.

"This state is on the verge of making several key decisions concerning criminal corrections. We are seeing a change of focus from adult confinement to issues dealing with kids," he said.

Problems involving adolescents "have changed dramatically over the past 10 to 15 years," Collins said.

Collins succeeds James Lynaugh, who resigned last September, and James Riley, who had been serving as interim director. Riley will return to his former job as director of medical services for the prison system.

Collins has been with the Texas prison system the past 24 years. Since January 1990, he had been responsible for the state correctional system housing about 65,000 prisoners and 24,800 staff members in 50 Texas facilities, as well as 2,700 inmates in four private facilities.

He now will oversee additional divisions, including probation, parole and state jails.

The board conducted a six-month nationwide search for a director. Board Chairman Carol S. Vance of Houston said "in excess of 100 people applied for the job."

Court business session quick

Scurry County commissioners court may have set a record this morning, taking care of two agenda items in less than four minutes.

Despite a late start — 10:04 a.m. — County Judge Bob Doolittle adjourned court at 10:08.

During the brief session, the court unanimously adopted a resolution of support for a residential program for female juvenile offenders. The proposed juvenile detention facility will be located in Robert Lee.

The only other agenda item was approval of bills. Also attending were Commissioners Jerry Gannaway, C.D. Gray Jr., Ralph Trevey and Roy Idom.

Energy proposal, bids on WTC board agenda

Western Texas College trustees will consider resignations, contract renewals and proposals for an energy management system when they convene at 5:45 this evening in the administration board room.

Bids for food service and golf cart paths, approval of the Spring Opportunity Session small class report and consideration of a date to canvass votes of the May 7 trustee election are also on the agenda.

Representatives of Honeywell, Inc. will meet with trustees this evening to present a proposal regarding an energy management system. The board received a proposal from Johnson Controls, Inc. last month.

The firms are proposing to help the college save energy costs by a variety of methods.

Trustees will consider two resignations and 69 contract renewals. The routine renewals include all personnel under contract, including deans, professors, assistant professors, instructors, directors, managers, and other staff members, including controllers, registrars, counselors and administrators.

During information and discussion, the board will meet Doug Hutchinson, economic development executive director, and consider pre-bid information for a financial aid record reporting system.

Beautification projects are ongoing

Deep Creek lighting and landscaping and murals for vacant buildings are among the projects in the works for Snyder Beautification Committee.

Carolyn House, committee chairperson, has announced that Tommy Pherigo of J.T. Electric has volunteered to install lights under the bridges on 27th Street and College Avenue. The lighting, arranged through TU Electric by district manager Daryl Thomas, will eventually illuminate the Deep Creek walking path.

The path has been graded, and is under construction.

Stephen Tate, Western Texas College professor of golf-landscape technology, will have his students design landscaping in two major areas as a class project. Tate's class will landscape areas at College Avenue and 30th Street and 25th and 26th Streets before classes end for the summer.

Members of the Beautification Committee and volunteers will also do some of the landscaping, such as placement of benches, bird baths and trees and scrubs.

House also reported that the Texas Highway Department is behind on asphalt projects, which will delay completion of the path. It is hoped that the path will be completed by early October.

Doug Hutchinson, economic development executive director, has requested the committee work with him on murals and clean-up projects throughout the city.

Mary Beth Vestal, Glenna Bane, Wilson Howell and Glenda Glasscock will join Hutchinson on a drive-around tour to select areas that need to be addressed.

The committee received a request to enhance the appearance of the area in front of Trinity Methodist Church where the street ends. Bane and James Fields will work on the project. Fields is a Price Daniel Unit officer and is in charge of the inmates who have been working on the Deep Creek project.

House noted that Bane and Mary Westmoreland have placed jugs at many businesses throughout Snyder for donations.

"The response received in the way of donations of benches, bird baths and picnic tables has been more than we could have hoped for," said House. "We want to thank everyone for their support." The bench and picnic table needs are almost complete but three benches and two picnic tables are still needed.

House said a slide presentation will be ready next month which committee members can use when talking with organizations about projects.

Maps for the Garden Club's yard of the month and most improved business of the month can be obtained at City Hall, House said. The monthly selections will begin in May.

Anyone wishing to make donations or volunteer to help in beautification projects should contact House at 573-4960, or any committee member.

Welfare mistakes and fraud cost U.S. taxpayers $1 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — State agencies overpaid welfare recipients by $1 billion in 1991 because of fraud and mistakes, according to a federal survey.

At the same time, thousands of other low-income families with children were improperly denied welfare benefits by state and county workers responsible for deciding eligibility for Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The survey by the Department of Health and Human Services measures mistakes by agency employees and fraud and errors by welfare recipients. It found that overpayments accounted for $1 billion of the $20.7 billion paid to low-income families in 1991, an error rate of 4.96 percent and the lowest on record.

Conservative welfare experts say the survey fails to measure more sophisticated or hard-to-catch fraud by recipients who work off the books or by using phony IDs, hide assets, claim fictitious children, or double dip and collect benefits in two states or counties.

But liberals complain that caseworkers put more effort into keeping errors down than helping single mothers on welfare become self-sufficient.

The question of welfare fraud is especially sensitive as the Clinton administration drafts a plan to pump billions of new dollars into the welfare system to help low-income mothers get the skills, education and child care they need to get off welfare and into the work force.

Efforts to fight welfare fraud are rarely mentioned in the administration's draft plans to overhaul AFDC. And the Clinton administration on April 1 began cutting back the federal government's share of the cost of investigating both AFDC and food stamp fraud.

States and the federal government divide the expenses of running AFDC and providing cash benefits to 5 million low-income families with children. State or local employees decide eligibility and investigate fraud.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., chairman of the House Small Business subcommittee on regulation, says the AFDC survey is the latest evidence of substantial fraud in the nation's welfare programs, set against a backdrop of federal cuts for local fraud investigators.

"These are potential daggers aimed at the heart of welfare reform," said Wyden.

"If you have mistakes in both directions — deserving people losing out and people who are undeserving taking advantage and exploiting the system — it undermines your ability to show that the government can really use resources wisely and implement overall reform," Wyden said.

In addition to the overpayments, the government's survey shows that tens of thousands of families were improperly denied benefits, including 15,057 in Texas, 13,266 in Florida and 11,955 in California.

Mike Genest, deputy director for welfare programs in the California Department of Social Services, is also critical of the Clinton administration for cutting spending on anti-fraud efforts. He said welfare fraud has been ignored by officials drafting the president's welfare reform plan.

"You can save a lot of money in welfare, without hurting anyone who really needs it, by clamping down on fraud," Genest said. "They need to put welfare fraud prevention and detection somewhere at the top of the welfare reform agenda."

Genest believes there is far more welfare fraud than what the government's survey detects, a sentiment echoed by Robert Rector, a welfare expert for the conservative Heritage Foundation.

"'That's the tip of the iceberg," Rector said.

But Robert Greenstein, executive director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a liberal research and advocacy organization for the poor, said there is no evidence to support such claims.

Boy rescued

TEXAS CITY (AP) — A 6-year-old Houston boy was in serious condition Sunday at a Galveston hospital after falling from a small raft in the Texas City Dike, officials said.

A Texas City police officer saw the child, who had drifted away from shore aboard the craft, fall from the raft and disappear. A short while later, two men in a boat saw the boy face down in the water, rescued him and began administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation, officials said.

Fire department officials called to the scene continued first aid when the boat reached shore. A Coast Guard helicopter flew the child, whose name was not released, to the University of Texas Medical Branch hospital.

Officials said the boy was suffering from fluid in the lungs and hypothermia.

How to win the battle of the bulge

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 51-year-old female. For the last four to five years, I have been unable to lose any kind of weight. All attempts have been unsuccessful. I take Synthroid and my last reading was normal. Could there be a connection between the medication and my obesity?

DEAR READER: No. You were probably prescribed Synthroid (synthetic thyroid hormone) to correct a deficient thyroid gland. If your blood tests show that you are receiving the proper dose of medicine, you can ignore the thyroid gland as a cause of your weight problem. An underactive thyroid does not cause obesity, although this has been a popular theory in the past.

Most cases of obesity are caused by too many calories in the diet. More precisely, people gain weight when their caloric intakes exceed their caloric requirements; those calories not burned for energy are stored as fat.

Granted, some obese patients have a very low metabolism and require fewer calories than normal. But most overweight persons can lose weight by following a sensible, low-calorie diet, such as reducing dietary fat, and omitting alcohol and sugar.

Ask your doctor to recommend a diet (or a good dietitian) and regularly monitor your progress. Or consider any of the diet plans, such as Weight Watchers.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Calorie Wise Cooking," "Winning the Battle of the Bulge" and "Weight Control Through Calorie Control." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title(s).

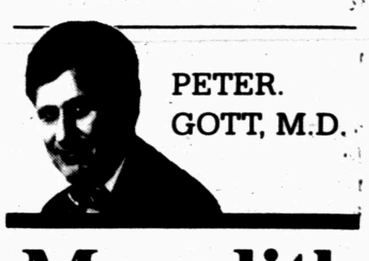

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've suffered with back pain for two years. An MRI revealed a bulged disc that my doctor feels shouldn't cause much pain, but the pain is there all the time. Could the disc be worse than what the MRI shows? The exercise program my doctor put me on isn't helping. What else can be done?

DEAR READER: It's often impossible to tell by MRI scans or X-ray tests whether a patient's back pain is due solely to a herniated disc. The fact is: You're having pain and are known to have a bulging disc. Putting two and two together, I conclude that there is a strong probability that the condition is causing the symptom.

In order to resolve this puzzle, I recommend that you be examined by a neurosurgeon, who will also review the MRI findings. He may wish to perform a myelogram, which is a special type of X-ray study that is taken after material has been injected into the spinal canal. The disc may actually be causing more damage than the MRI shows and you may need corrective surgery to relieve your pain.

Man drowns in Lake Meredith

FRITCH (AP) — A 26-year-old Amarillo man who fell into Lake Meredith during a late-night fishing trip apparently has drowned, a park official said Sunday.

Billy Dean Bratcher fell out of an inflatable raft about 1 a.m. Saturday. A man who was with Bratcher at the time, 25-year-old Thomas Earl Fine, spent about 11/2 hours searching for Bratcher before notifying rangers at the Lake Meredith National Recreation Area about the accident.

Searchers looked for Bratcher all day Saturday and Sunday.

"The air search and ground search has been called off. But the water search will continue with sonar on and off," park Superintendent Pat McCrary said.

"We don't have a real good location where he left the boat so it's a very large search area," he said.

The lake has 100 miles of shoreline and is 72 to 74 feet deep.

Neither man was wearing a life preserver at the time of the accident, McCrary said.

The two men had boated from their campsite in Harbor Bay to the Evans Canyon area of the lake where they ran a trotline. As they headed back across the lake, Bratcher fell overboard.

Chief Ranger Larry Nielson said a coincidentally scheduled Civil Air Patrol search and rescue exercise aided authorities Saturday. The Civil Air Patrol provided aircraft and two ground search teams with dogs that walked the shoreline, Nielson said.

Eight boats were involved in the search Saturday, including two from the National Park Service, two from Moore County, one from Texas Parks and Wildlife, and three U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary boats, Nielson said.

The National Park Service and Moore County authorities continued the search Sunday, McCrary said.

The drowning is the fourth at the lake within a year, but that doesn't mean the lake is unsafe, he said.

"With the million and a half visits a year, you may average two to three drownings within a 365-day period. That is a very low number. Of course it's tragic anytime anyone does (drown)," he said.

Parasitic worms may save fruit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tiny parasitic worm may spell doom for the root-chomping, leaf-chewing citrus root weevil that is wreaking havoc in Florida's citrus groves.

A species of nematode, called Steinerema riobravis, stops the onslaught of the weevil, which caused more than $70 million damage last year, says William J. Schroeder of USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

The nematode killed 80 percent of citrus root weevil larvae in greenhouse and laboratory tests, said Schroeder, who works at the ARS facility in Orlando, Fla.

Once the nematode has attacked the weevil larva, it releases a bacterium that kills the larvae within 48 hours. Offspring from the nematode then feed on the corpse and produce a second generation of hungry juvenile nematodes.

The adult citrus root weevil feeds on leaves, but the larvae do the most damage by attacking tree roots. This interferes with the transport of nutrients and water to the rest of the tree, resulting in fewer and smaller fruit and the eventual death of the tree.

"This new nematode is much more effective than other nematodes being used against the weevil because it is not heat-sensitive," Schroeder said. "This species has been proven effective in tests in Arizona soil where temperatures exceed 100 degrees Fahrenheit."

The citrus root weevil, a native of the West Indies, first appeared in Florida in 1964. Schroeder said at that time, strong chemicals were available to control its spread.

But the Environmental Protection Agency removed most of the chemicals from the market because of concerns about their effect on the environment and human health.

"Growers are left with few options," Schroeder said.

Your Birthday

Tuesday, April 12, 1994

Obstacles and restrictions which impeded your progress last year will lack strength in the year ahead. It will be you, not them calling the shots.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your budget might not be as elastic as you think at this time, so try to put a damper on excessive spending. Reverse your inclinations and figure out ways to accumulate more revenue. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Negotiations will fare better for all concerned today if you don't see the other guy as one who is trying to take advantage of you. Forego prejudging others without a valid reason.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unfortunately, it might not be wise to put too much stock in the promises of persons with whom you'll be involved today. Stand on your own two feet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your creditability could suffer today if you exaggerate or oversell what you have to offer. Modesty has more impact than magnification.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is a day to try to get more out of your head than you get out of your wallet. Don't buy something you can get for nothing by improvising or making it yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're the only one who is apt to be impressed by your grandiose ideas today. Keep ti is in mind before laying it on too thick in your presentations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It could prove counterproductive today if you spend or rely on funds that are not yet in your account. The timetable you're using might not be compatible with your cash flow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Decisions you make today should not be predicated upon limited information. This could be a big weakness with you, so be very careful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In order to impress others today you might volunteer for something about which you are insincere. You'll be taken at your word and, if you don't deliver, it could hurt your image.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The value of a relationship in which you're presently involved might be grossly exaggerated in your mind. Don't drop the association, just try to view it more realistically.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An objective for which you're presently striving might not live up to your expectations once it's achieved. Before knocking yourself out, be sure it is worth the effort.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be the first to call attention to any blunders you make today. If you're honest about your errors, they will be easily resolved. If not, they might be compounded.

Troopers can't work with sheriff

WACO (AP) — Falls County Sheriff Larry Pamplin says no tension exists between him and Texas Department of Public Safety troopers.

But the lone highway patrolman there, Bobby West, says he's leaving after more than three years because of just that.

West said he's tired of the Sheriff's Department giving out his home telephone number to complainers, calling him to herd stray cattle in the middle of the night and, for a while, preventing him from booking people into jail without having them arraigned immediately.

Nine present and former troopers told the Waco Tribune-Herald that the tension between the state troopers and the sheriffs of Falls County has resulted in a decades-long departure of many of the county's highway patrolmen.

Pamplin, who succeeded his father in office in 1976, said he has no authority over the troopers, but he said he has a small force and needs their help.

Top brass at DPS in Waco say they haven't heard of a longstanding feud between the troopers and the sheriff. DPS officials in Austin would not release to the newspaper statistics on what troopers indicate is a high turnover rate in Falls County and documentation on why troopers have transferred. An attorney general's opinion on whether the records should be released is pending.

Falls County normally has four troopers. Two left in the fall of 1993. A third transferred to Waco April 1.

The power of two

By Phillip Alder

Do you have a particularly close rapport with someone? Does each of you always know what the other is thinking? Can you have conversations without saying anything?

In my experience, twins are particularly adept at this. And arguably the best bridge-playing twins were Englishmen Bob and Jim Sharples. They had an almost uncanny knack for avoiding bidding misunderstandings. And their card-play wasn't bad either. Bob played today's deal many moons ago.

The auction is typical of the point-and-shoot style used before bidding became "scientific." Still, one wonders why West didn't sacrifice in four spades at the prevailing vulnerability.

West led the spade jack: three, queen, ace. Declarer played a diamond to dummy's jack and East's ace. Back came the heart king.

Sharples had to bring in the clubs. And finessing through West looked normal. But from his unblock of the spade queen at trick one, East must have begun with only one or two spades. This meant he had made a risky take-out double. To compensate for the spade shortage, East had to have full high-card values. So declarer placed him with the club queen.

After winning with dummy's heart ace, declarer called for dummy's club jack. East played low, but Sharples played low also. The successful backward finesse raked in five club tricks and the contract (with one or two overtricks — the report doesn't specify).

East's short-spade double isn't recommended. Nowadays most experts would overcall one heart, getting safely into the auction and indicating a good lead.

HIV positive man bites policeman

WACO (AP) — A man claiming that he recently tested positive for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, bit a Waco police officer, a department spokesman said Sunday.

The officer, who was not identified, was reportedly bitten late Saturday on the right hand by a man arrested near Baylor University on a charge of public intoxication.

McLennan County Justice of the Peace Cindy Evans identified the suspect as Charles Guglioatta, 26.

He was taken to the McLennan County Jail, where he was charged with exposing another to AIDS, a third-degree felony.

Guglioatta gave a blood sample to a city nurse. However, results of an AIDS test run on it were not available late Sunday, police said.

The bite broke the skin on the officer's hand, police said. But it was unclear from police reports whether the officer had undergone an AIDS test after the attack.

The incident began about 11 p.m. Saturday when police arrested Guglioatta and put him in the back of a patrol car, police said.

Once inside the car, Guglioatta began kicking the door and eventually was placed in leg restraints.

The man then reportedly began hitting his head against a window inside the vehicle and jumped from the car when the officer opened the door to stop him, police said. As the officer was putting the man back in the car, Guglioatta allegedly bit him, the spokesman said.

Poll shows Mattox, Fisher are close

by The Associated Press

As the Tuesday runoff election approaches, a poll indicates that Democratic U.S. Senate candidates Jim Mattox and Richard Fisher are locked in a dead heat.

Mattox had the support of 48 percent and Fisher 46 percent of likely Democratic voters surveyed in a copyright poll published Sunday in The Dallas Morning News and the Houston Chronicle.

Of the 713 Texans polled, 6 percent were undecided. The survey has a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

The closeness of the race means the outcome of Tuesday's voting could turn on factors beyond the candidates' control, such as weather or local contests, said pollsters Micheline Blum and Julie Weprin.

The pollsters and other experts predicted a very low voter turnout for the runoff.

"Either one could (win), and either could do it by several points, depending on turnouts in regional areas," Ms. Blum said.

Both candidates, meanwhile, spent the final weekend of the race campaigning across Texas. Mattox went to several small Baptist churches in Houston on Sunday, while Fisher took a swing through several small South Texas towns.

Mattox said he was encouraged by the poll's results, but he said his campaign still needs to get the vote out Tuesday to win.

"I think its always comforting when a poll shows you're ahead," he said. "I think we are ahead and I think we're headed towards victory."

But Fisher also found the poll encouraging for his campaign.

"What is interesting about the poll is that it shows Mattox is viewed unfavorably by 39 percent of those polled and I was viewed unfavorably by only 21 percent," Fisher said.

"The second thing that's critical is that it really looks like it's impossible for Mattox to beat (GOP Sen.) Kay Bailey Hutchison. According to the poll, 64 percent of my supporters said they'll vote for her if he wins the runoff, while only 34 percent of his supporters said they'll vote for her if I win."

"If Mattox is at the top of the ticket, he will lose, because too many Democrats will vote for Kay Bailey Hutchison," Fisher added.

The telephone poll was conducted between last Monday and Friday. The survey mostly talked to voters who said they cast ballots in the March 8 Democratic primary and plan to vote Tuesday.

Pollsters said several thousand calls were made before finding a usable pool of likely voters — another indication, they said, that the runoff has generated little interest.

The biggest winner in the survey appeared to be Mrs. Hutchison, who will face the winner of Tuesday's runoff. Among the likely Democratic runoff voters, a stout 47 percent said they approve of the way the Mrs. Hutchison is doing her job.

"She got good approval among everybody," Ms. Blum said. "To me, she's the big winner of this runoff, no matter what happens."

The poll indicates Mrs. Hutchison would do better in November's general election if Mattox is the Democratic nominee.

The Democratic voters said they preferred Mattox over Mrs. Hutchison by 55 percent to 37 percent. Fisher would fare better, beating her by 56 percent to 30 percent.

And a whopping 64 percent of the voters who favor Fisher said they would vote for Mrs. Hutchison if Mattox is the Democratic nominee. Only 34 percent of Mattox's supporters said they would vote for the Republican if Fisher wins the nomination.

Mattox, a former state attorney general, won more support from black and Hispanic voters than Fisher. Mattox also did better among younger Democrats and those with lower incomes and less education.

Successful festival

POTEET (AP) — The 47th annual Poteet Strawberry Festival blossomed in its first two days with possible record crowds.

Tens of thousands of people lined downtown streets for Saturday's parade, then many enjoyed the key event: the strawberry contest and auction. The result was somewhat predictable as Sulema Chavez of Poteet won the grand champion prize for the best strawberries. She and her husband, Joe, have won 10 grand championships since 1972.

Mrs. Chavez's crate of strawberries — about 24 pints — went for a record $6,000 in the auction. That translates to about $19 per strawberry.

Selso Garcia of Poteet was reserve champion. His crate of berries sold for $2,750.

Tigers fall to FHS in 2-4A showdown

WOLFFORTH — Snyder baseball coach Albert Lewis made it very clear why his Tigers lost to Frenship on Saturday.

"They made the plays, we didn't," said Lewis, speaking of Snyder's 15-9 District 2-4A loss. "We didn't play the elements very well. It was very, very windy and we lost a lot of little pop-ups and fly balls that we should have caught."

In all, SHS made seven errors, leaving Frenship with only one earned run.

"There were some positives, too," Lewis said. "We are still hitting the ball well and we got two solid innings from Lee Idom."

The Tigers rapped 11 hits against FHS, including a 3-for-4 game by Chris Mitchell, who slapped a 2-RBI single in the third, then ripped a sixth-inning double and scored.

Idom, who has had a sore arm, faced seven batters in two innings of work from the mound, getting six, including three strikeouts.

Frenship opened up a 6-0 lead in the last of the first inning. Chad Fox struck the big blow, drilling a 2-run double off Snyder starter Curt Rinehart.

Snyder answered with four in the top of the second, led by an RBI double from Bryant Roberson that scored Gabriel Castillon, courtesy running for Brad Hart, who reached when he was hit by a pitch.

Snyder tied the score in the third as Castillon and Roberson scored on a single by Mitchell.

Frenship took the lead for good in the home half of the third, adding five runs on an error, two walks and RBI triples from Shawn Reeves and Donnie Hart.

Snyder rallied for three runs in the top of the sixth. Rinehart opened the inning with a double, John Clinkinbeard was hit by a pitch and Roberson tripled to score them both.

Reagan Key followed with a single that sent Roberson home.

Rinehart took the loss for Snyder, lasting three innings, striking out four, walking five , allowing seven hits and giving up 11 runs.

Bryan Lickey pitched an inning of relief and Idom mopped up in the fifth and sixth.

Frenship's Carey Henderson, 4-0, went the distance, fanning eight and walking four, while getting tagged for 11 hits and nine runs.

Snyder slips into a second-place tie in the district with Saturday's loss. The Tigers are 11-9 overall and 2-1 in loop games.

Frenship claims the loop lead with a 3-0 2-4A slate.

Plainview, an 11-0 winner over Levelland Saturday, and Estacado, which hammered Lamesa 10-0, also carry 2-1 marks.

VRJC, Tarleton claim wins at NMJC Rodeo

HOBBS, N.M. — Vernon Regional Junior College and Tarleton State University dominated men's and women's point totals at the weekend New Mexico Junior College NIRA Rodeo, leaving little for those following, including WTC.

Vernon scored a whopping 420 points, including 250 in bareback riding, to take the men's crown here, while TSU's women had all 170 of their points in barrel racing.

Western Texas wound up with 70 points, all in saddle bronc riding, to remain in second place in the regional standings, in spite of finishing sixth here. The WTC women scored 40, all in goat tying, but are still leading the region, even after a fifth-place tie over the weekend.

Fletcher Tigner was runner-up in saddle bronc riding for WTC, scoring a 63 in Sunday's short go to go with his second-place 70 in the preliminary round.

Tigner trailed event winner Justin Washburn, who finished with a 2-ride 141.

Leslie Lewis scored all the WTC women's points in the long go, earning a first-place 8.9 in goat tying. She received a no-time in the finals when her goat escaped, leaving VRJC's Christi Sultemmeier's 18.1 the top time in the average.

Cheyann Lambert of West Texas A&M was the women's all-around winner, claiming first in breakaway roping with a 7.6 time on two head and flashing a third-place 17.27 barrel racing time in the long go-round.

The men's all-around title was shared by Trent Walls of Tarleton and Vernon's Shane Hatch.

Walls captured first in calf roping with a 22.7 clocking on two tries, and was a team roping finalist.

Hatch and partner John Folmer of Howard College were second in team roping, hammering out a 13.6 time, after the VRJC standout was clocked at a fourth-place 23.4 in calf roping.

The next stop on the NIRA Southwest Region's spring tour will be in Snyder.

SHS thinclads peaking as district meet nears

BIG SPRING — Snyder tracksters appear to be peaking at just the right time.

In the weekend Big Spring Relays, the last meet before the District 2-4A gathering, Snyder's Lady Tigers had no fewer than seven personal bests on their way to third place with 98 total points.

Snyder's boys accumulated 48 points and wound up fifth.

"Everybody did really good," said SHS girls' coach Patty Grimmett. "Nearly all our runners, whether they placed or not, had personal-best times.

"We're getting close to that peak point, and it's coming at just the right time."

The girls' charge was led by 1993 regional qualifier Vicky Green, who won the shot put and the discus throw.

Green's 37-83/4 was tops in the shot, while she hurled the discus 117-61/2.

Jina Miller won the high jump Saturday, tying an SHS school record with her own best 5-2 hop, while Jamie Prather snagged second in the 800 with a personal-best 2:31.8 and a third in the mile with a 5:56.46.

In addition, Devon Reed took second in the 100-meter dash, flashing a 13.09, then wound up third in the long jump with a personal standard of 16-23/4; Edwina Brooks was third in both the 100, posting a 13.29, and the triple jump, notching a personal-best 34-9; and Raechele Wemken came in fourth in the high jump, leaping 4-10, her best ever, fifth with a personal-best 66.15 in the 400, and sixth in the 800, ringing up a 2:38.07 time.

Also, Kristi McClure bagged third in the shot put with a 35-5 effort, and Keri Kemp was fourth in the 100-meter hurdles with a 17.27.

The Lady Tigers' mile relay team of Bianca Rocha, Wemken, Maria Quiros and Prather nabbed fifth, posting a 4:44.02, and the SHS 800 relay team, Trish McGrew, Kelly Clay, Brooks and Reed, were sixth with a 1:57.1.

The SHS boys were led by Melchor Parra, who ran the mile in a second-place 4:57.82, and field events specialists Emiliano Chaidez and Chris Denson.

Chaidez wound up third in the shot put, going 48-1/2, while Denson's 134-73/4 was good for third in the discus.

Others placing for the Tigers included Ricky Post, who went 6-4 for fourth in the high jump; Josh Bell, who was sixth in the 800 with his 2:06.66 time; and Jason Miller, who was fifth in the 110 hurdles, posting a 16.39, fourth in the triple jump at 41-11, and sixth in the long jump, flying 19-2.

Frenship captured the girls' title here, gathering 1321/2 points. Host Big Spring had 169 points to win the boys' crown.

The District 2-4A meet, which will include boys' and girls' teams from SHS, Frenship, Estacado, Lamesa, Levelland and Plainiew, will be held Friday and Saturday at Frenship.

Chavez wins in Midland

MIDLAND — Tracey Chavez captured the boys singles title for Snyder High School at the weekend Midland Invitational Tennis Tournament, the last warm-up before the District 2-4A tourney.

Chavez outlasted Wade Parkinson of Bowie, 6-4, 6-1, for the boys' crown.

"All our players played extremely well mentally and physically," said SHS net coach Teri Hoerster. "Some of the players were a little discouraged, having to play 5A opponents, but I think by playing bigger schools, they get a lot more experience and learn more about strokes and strategy on the court.

"Hopefully in district, we'll come out with players advancing to regionals," Hoerster added. "I am very optimistic."

Others placing for Snyder at the weekend meet included the boys' doubles team of Salvador Aguirre and John Purcell, who went to the semifinals before falling to Glen Abrams and Eric Chandler of Midland Lee; Christina Gonzales, who made it into the quarterfinal round before Midland High's Bonnie Tarrazas handed her a 6-2, 6-3 loss; and singles Amy Herrera and Jamie Bass, who were downed in the consolation semifinals.

The District 2-4A Tennis Tournament, Snyder's next outing, is scheduled for Friday and Saturday at Levelland.

Olazabal wins Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jose Maria Olazabal's scrambling victory in the Masters changed Europe's "Fab Five" into the "Super Six."

The 28-year-old Spaniard's two-stroke triumph, secured with his deft work around the glass-slick, treacherous greens of Augusta National, added his name to those of older stars who, in recent years, have dominated America's premier tournament.

The leader of that group, of course, is Olazabal's countryman, Seve Ballesteros, who ushered in the European era with his victory here in 1980.

He won again in 1983 and soon was followed by Bernhard Langer of Germany in 1985 and '93; Sandy Lyle of Scotland in 1988; Nick Faldo of England in 1989 and 1990; and Ian Woosnam of Wales in '91.

All are about a decade older than Olazabal, who joins the ranks of the group that has won six of the last seven Masters and ninth since 1980.

But Olazabal, the son of a Spanish greenskeeper, was very careful to recognize his junior status.

"I have won one major. Seve has won several majors. He is one of the great players in the world. It is not fair to compare me with him," Olazabal said.

And he quickly paid tribute to the man who has been his mentor.

"Seve has had a great influence on me," Olazabal said.

The triumph over Tom Lehman and Larry Mize centered around a 30-foot eagle putt on the 15th green.

His 5-iron approach came within one foot, by his estimate, of backing into the pond that guards the green. It hung there, just over the precipice, in the short rough. He rolled the putt home for a three-shot lead.

Lehman, the journeyman toughened by a decade of scrambling around golf's mini-tours, had a 15-footer to match the eagle and close within one shot.

"I put my heart and soul into that putt," Lehman said.

It missed as he collapsed on the green, pounding his fists into the turf in frustration.

He made birdie, but Olazabal had a two-shot lead with two holes to play. Olazabal traded his three-putt bogey on the 17th with Lehman's last-hole bogey from a fairway bunker.

Olazabal's 3-under-par 69 produced a 279 total, 9 under. It was worth $360,000 from the total purse of $2 million but, more importantly, elevated Olazabal to a loftier status.

"I am 28," he said. "I have won 18 tournaments (around the world). I think that is pretty good."

Lehman, who missed makeable putts of 15 feet or less on the last four holes, was second with a closing round of par 72 and a 281 total.

"I feel like I played better than I scored," he said. "I feel like I played well. I am not disappointed or ashamed of myself for not winning."

He also offered an opinion on the European factor in this event, a success story that does not extend to the other American majors, the U.S. Open and the PGA.

"They are very creative around the greens," Lehman said. "The little bump and runs around the greens — that's what you get a lot of around here — they're masters at it."

Lehman was followed by Larry Mize, whose playoff pitch-in beat Greg Norman in the 1987 Masters, at 71-282. Tom Kite was next at 71-283.

Norman, the favorite going in, followed a pair of 70s with a 75-77 finish. That left him tied for 18th place.

Olazabal now returns to Europe "to see my friends," he said. He will come back for the U.S. Open and the PGA.

Rangers open stadium after win over Orioles

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Texas Rangers can't wait to make themselves right at home at their new ballpark.

After opening the season with five road games, the Rangers were to formally open The Ballpark in Arlington this afternoon against the Milwaukee Brewers. The game begins a stretch in which Texas plays 13 of 17 games at home.

"We need it. I feel like I've been on the road for two years," manager Kevin Kennedy said. "Getting settled at home will be nice for us."

The Rangers will be taking a bit of momentum with them after beating Baltimore 8-7 Sunday.

As the Rangers packed their bags to head home, the Orioles were preparing for a six-game swing through Detroit and Texas.

Jose Canseco, undaunted by a 1-for-14 start, had a perfect day at the plate Sunday, reaching five times and scoring three runs.

"We know he's going to hit 45 or 50 homers," reliever Tom Henke said. "Juan (Gonzalez) is going to do the same thing, especially in our ballpark where the ball jumps."

Ivan Rodriguez homered and had three RBIs Sunday, while Dean Palmer had three hits and drove in two runs. But Texas first baseman Will Clark sprained his right ankle in the first inning and left the game in the second.

"He says he'll be all right," Kennedy said. "We'll wait and see how it goes after 24 hours."

Baltimore's Rafael Palmeiro had a homer and three RBIs against his former teammates, but it did little to ease the pain of the defeat.

"It doesn't mean anything because we got beat," he said. "I'm glad this series is over. Now I can relax a bit more and get on with the season."

Hammonds also homered for the Orioles, who have at least two homers in each of their five games this season.

SHS JV tops Rotan, 15-5

ROTAN — Jeremiah Johnson, Patrick Cumbie and Patrick Jordan combined to strike out 12 hitters Saturday in Snyder's 15-5 JV baseball victory over Rotan.

The Tigers were led offensively by Brock Gard, who slapped a triple and drove in four runs.

Teddy Murray added a three-bagger, Eric Tovar had a double and Wayne Braziel, Bubba Hildebrand and Jordan each singled.

Snyder, now 8-3, will visit Estacado today at 5 p.m.

The Tiger JV will host its own tournament Thursday and Saturday at Moffett Field.

The Texan wins first place award in overall contest

The Western Texan, Western Texas College's student newspaper, won first place in the Overall Newspaper competition this past weekend, a contest sponsored by the Texas Intercollegiate Press Association.

The statewide competition saw the Texan named to the top of the list for Division 3, comprised of two-year and four-year colleges and universities with enrollments of up to 6,000 students.

The publication has placed in the top three for best overall newspaper three out of the past four years. The win announced Saturday marked the first time it had finished in first place, however.

Contest results were revealed at the annual TIPA convention, held this year in Corpus Christi. The Texan finished ahead of second place winner The Flare, published by Kilgore College in Kilgore; and third place winner The Skyline, the Sul Ross State University newspaper in Alpine.

Two college publications received honorable mention in the Best Overall category, the Midland College newspaper El Paisano; and the Texas Lutheran College newspaper Lone Star Lutheran.

The newspaper competition is judged by out-of-state professional journalists. Judge's comments about the Texan included "(It) used no spot color to dress up its pages. It was a simple black and white presentation with great overall story balance."

In addition to the first place win, two Texan staffers were singled out for individual awards and the WTC literary magazine, Aquifer, won for its illustrations.

Texan writer Marci Regalado of Colorado City won second place in the sports news competition for a piece she did on the demise of the men's basketball program at WTC.

Staff artist Otis Thompson of Aspermont won second place also in the illustration category. His drawing depicted "spring break" on campus.

For the Aquifer, Bryant Thomas of Snyder won second in the literary magazine illustration contest.

The staff of the Texan attended the TIPA convention in Corpus. Staff members are Jeff Corkran, Toni Evans, Sandra Hall, Lisa Nix and Wacey Parks of Snyder; Mike Hughes and Lindsey Northcott of Ira; John Campos of Colorado City; Michelle Romero of Roby; Neally Hernandez of Sunray; Justin Lester of MaCamey and Will Gray of Midland. Adviser for the newspaper is Donny Brown.

NATO bombing:no apparent effect

Herzegovina (AP) — For the second straight day, NATO today bombed Bosnian Serb ground forces attacking the Muslim enclave of Gorazde.

But the air raid had no apparent effect. A spokeswoman of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Belgrade, Lyndall Sachs, said Bosnian Serbs shelled Gorazde after today's NATO attack.

Gorazde city official Esad Orhanovic said in a ham radio broadcast that the Serbs continued pounding the city center, leaving many buildings in flames.

At least two tanks and personnel carriers were struck in the 2:24 p.m. bombing run, the Pentagon said. Two U.S. F-18 jets based with NATO forces in Aviano, Italy, made the fly-over, and one warplane dropped bombs, Pentagon officials said. The Pentagon earlier said two F-18s conducted bombing runs.

The United Nations said three bombs were dropped, destroying a Serb tank "firing directly into the town."

Maj. Rob Annink, a U.N. spokesman in the Bosnian capital, confirmed the NATO bombing run on Serb forces in the Gorazde area 35 miles southeast of Sarajevo, but said he had no details on casualties.

United Nations peacekeepers who had came under fire in the city requested the NATO air protection.

Today's air strike came hours after Bosnian Serbs suspended peace talks with U.N. and U.S. envoys and struck anew at Gorazde with artillery, tanks and heavy machine gun fire.

U.N. officials in Belgrade said today that 200 refugees were wounded in an artillery attack on a former schoolhouse.

"What the United Nations wants is for the Serbs to stop the shelling and to withdraw and to resume the negotiations," President Clinton said after today's air strikes.

For nearly two weeks, Serbs have been attacking Gorazde, which is on the main highway between their positions to the southwest and east.

Tank and artillery fire was "quite heavy" today, said Charles Redman, the U.S. envoy to Bosnia.

In Sunday's attack, two U.S. F-16 fighters bombed a Bosnian Serb tank and command post. U.N. officials said both targets were responsible for firing into the enclave.

Gorazde is one of the six "safe areas" for Bosnian Muslims designated by the United Nations last year.

The attack Sunday was NATO's first on ground positions in its 44-year history. In February, NATO jets downed four Serb planes violating a "no fly zone" over Bosnia.

Redman said any attempt to restart the peace talks would have to wait until the situation in Goradze was resolved.

Up to five bombs were dropped Sunday on positions that NATO officials in Belgium described as field artillery headquarters, which directs the guns to their targets.

U.N. officials said it took 15 minutes for the U.N. chain of command to agree on the bombing runs, which the officials took great pain to describe today as close air support to defend U.N. forces rather than air strikes.

Guards, families remember, reflect one year after riot

LUCASVILLE, Ohio (AP) — John Kemper can't go back to work. The beating saw to that.

A year after rioting inmates armed with pipes, clubs and other makeshift weapons took control of Cellblock L at the maximum-security Southern Ohio Correctional Facility, the 50-year-old prison guard is still recovering.

Kemper was beaten, kicked and clubbed during the seven hours he was held in the besieged cellblock. Inmates stole his boots, smashed his glasses, then tossed his battered body outside the cellblock when they couldn't find a pulse.

"They thought I was either dead or dying," he said. "They didn't want a dead officer on their hands."

Kemper lost the sight in his left eye, sustained brain damage and is struggling to recover from a stroke.

He considers himself lucky. One guard, Robert Vallandingham, was strangled to death during the prison riot, the longest and deadliest in Ohio history. Nine inmates also were killed.

Only one of the 12 guards taken hostage has returned to work. Others, including the five held all 11 days of the siege, still are recuperating.

Guards and their families worry that not much has changed inside the prison outside Lucasville, a town of 1,500 people about 80 miles south of Columbus.

But state prisons Director Reginald Wilkinson disagrees.

"There's nothing that I think is the way it was a year ago," he says.

State investigators believe the primary cause of the riot was a planned lockdown April 12 so prisoners could be tested for tuberculosis. Muslim inmates objected, saying their religion prohibits such testing.

Then-Warden Arthur Tate, who declined to be interviewed for this story, refused to cancel the test. Rioting broke out after an inmate fight that some say was staged. Prisoners took over the cellblock.

During negotiations, inmates complained about forced racial integration of cells, lack of religious freedom, high commissary prices and lack of phone privileges. They also wanted Tate replaced. None of the inmate leaders of the riot would agree to an interview.

The Ohio Civil Service Employees Association, which represents prison guards, blamed the riot on understaffing and inadequate training. In Ohio, 40,453 inmates live in jails designed for 22,513 people; there are 8.7 prisoners for every guard.

Some guards blamed the riot on lack of discipline.

"If you put 500 inmates out in the yard or let them run around the corridors, they can take it over, so why not?" guard Roger Thomas said.

Since the riot, cells have been segregated after both black and white inmates complained about integration in two-man cells. Some inmates have been transferred to other prisons to relieve overcrowding.

Inmate movement is more restricted and security is tighter, Wilkinson said.

And the state is spending about $25 million to renovate the 22-year-old prison and repair the damaged cellblock, where inmates smashed toilets and windows, and set fires.

Student stabbed

GALVESTON (AP) — When the title player in "Dracula" raised a bloodied hand and adlibbed his last few lines, cast members of the Texas A&M-Galveston production realized all was not right.

The play became more realistic than it was meant to be when sophomore Paul Bishop accidentally suffered a punctured lung when a stabbing scene went awry. A knife meant to be stuck into a prop board landed in Bishop's chest, said drama club adviser Melanie Cravey.

Bishop, who was listed in good condition Sunday night at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, remained calm and finished the play.

"I wasn't feeling any pain and I wanted to milk it as much as possible without hurting myself," he told The Galveston County Daily News in Sunday's editions.

Horrors of Holocaust Should Spur Us to Speak Up and Out

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've just seen "Schindler's List," a very powerful movie that every American should see. I was reminded of a piece you had in your column titled "I Didn't Speak Up."

Now that "Schindler's List" has won seven Academy Awards, that column merits repeating.

NANCY SMITH, PHOENIX

DEAR NANCY: I have run that column several times over the years. It was written by the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, a German Lutheran pastor who was arrested by the Gestapo and was sent to Dachau, a concentration camp, in 1938. He was freed by the Allied Forces in 1945.

Here is his moving piece:

I DIDN'T SPEAK UP

"In Germany, the Nazis first came for the communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, but I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak for me."

DEAR ABBY: I am a recently divorced woman. I had not been with a man for more than a year — until two weeks ago when I met my next-door neighbor and his live-in girlfriend. I knew him slightly in high school. He is very attractive, and I felt an instant magnetism when our eyes met.

Well, his girlfriend went out of town, and he came over. One thing led to another, and he spent the night here. It was one of the most wonderful experiences of my life. I am not easy, but I'm now feeling a lot of mixed emotions like guilt, shame, depression and joy. I don't know how to act around him when his girlfriend is around. I'm on the verge of tears every time I think about it.

Abby, normally I can solve my own problems, but I've never been in a situation like this before.

Please don't use my location — they have a newspaper on their doorstep every morning, too.

By the way, I made him use a condom — that's one less thing to worry about. We were both sober; he's in AA, and drinking is against my religion. Please tell me what to do. I feel like a schoolgirl again.

SEEING STARS

DEAR SEEING STARS: A person who is living with someone of the opposite sex should definitely be considered off-limits. I advise you not to see him again as long as he and his live-in lady are roommates. If you do, you will surely end up with a broken heart. Or worse.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a disagreement between a work associate and me. Is it proper to apply lipstick at the table after lunch or dinner in a restaurant?

T.L.R., CHULA VISTA, CALIF.

DEAR T.L.R.: A 10-second dab of lipstick is permissible. However, any procedure that lasts longer than half a minute and might cause dandruff to fly, or powder to settle on the tablecloth, is a no-no.

Four gang leaders agree to cease-fire

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Leaders of four warring street gangs have agreed to a cease-fire.

The agreement came Sunday when a dozen teen-agers representing the gangs comprising 100 to 150 members at the end of a three-day peacemaking conference at a downtown church.

More than 100 gang members, many wearing their "colors" or identifying clothing, crowded on the stage at Grace Lutheran Church standing shoulder-to-shoulder with rivals to announce their agreement to "put down their arms."

"It's not worth it. We're fighting just to die for no reason," said a young man who identified himself as a gang leader. "We want to have a better life."

Another gang leader said his group would abide by the cease-fire negotiated during the San Antonio Peacemaking Conference on Gang Violence.

But he said the promises of assistance with jobs and education by community leaders must be kept if the peace is to last.

"We've wanted this for a while," he said. "We hope it's not a front. We hope something's going to happen."

One of the mediators who took part in the summit warned that they aren't signed in blood and soon could be challenged once the youths are back on their home turfs.

"Right now, they're in a cease-fire. They've never ever been used to that," said Wayne Crooks, director for My Father's House of Ministries in San Antonio. "We're trying to help them cope with what that means and how to deal with others who will try to test their fortitude."

Crooks also corrected statements made by a summit spokeswoman Saturday that the estimated 30 gang members who took part in the talks had agreed to "drop their colors."

"We're not asking them to put down their colors. The colors represent camaraderie and loyalty. We're saying, 'Put down your arms and let's work toward a better community,'" he said.

Four other gangs involving 100 youths from other areas of the city failed to reach agreement on a truce.

Fanya Baruti, a mediator from Los Angeles, held out hope that the summit exposed them to an alternative lifestyle.

"We made some inroads on the East Side and made contact with the brothers," he said.

Police Chief William O. Gibson said he was encouraged by what he called a "significant first step" to reducing the number of drive-by shootings and violence on city streets.

"Anytime you can get warring factions to sit down in the same room and talk about their differences and at least agree to end violence, you have to consider that a great success," Gibson said.

It is too early to say what impact the cease-fire might have on the record number of homicides recorded in the city the past two years, Gibson said.

British troops ready to leave Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — Boots, jeeps, spent shells and assault craft — it's all got to go. China recovers Hong Kong soon, and the departing British army is holding garage sales of historic proportions.

Chinese troops will march into Hong Kong in July 1997, so the British are packing, mothballing weapons, clearing barracks and preparing to leave. What they can't take with them is coming under the auctioneer's gavel.

Unlike many other colonies Britain has left, Hong Kong is being ceded without a shot. Britain and China agreed on the transfer of sovereignty in 1984.

"It's the first time, I believe, that we have handed over our property to a foreign power — and a communist one at that — and that makes Hong Kong unique," army spokesman Paddy Hartigan said in an interview.

For famed units like the Nepalese 10th Gurkhas and the Black Watch regimental brass band, Hong Kong will be the last stop in long, distinguished service. They are going out of existence, victims of the Cold War's end.

"It's not just our unit. It's happening to armies all over the world," said Ian Peaple, leader of the band.

"Scotland the Brave" and "Highland Laddie" filled the humid Hong Kong air when the 200-year-old band performed publicly for the last time at a rugby tournament in March. Band members, nicknamed "kilted foreigners" by locals for their resplendent skirts, feathered black hats and sporrans, will board planes for home May 2 and "fly into history," Peaple said.

Britain plans to reduce its total forces by 40,000, or 20 percent, by 1995. Withdrawal from Hong Kong will end Britain's military commitments east of Suez and reduce its once-mighty empire to 13 colonies.

"It's like the last days of the Raj," said Maj. Mike Edwards, who is supervising the sale of surplus equipment. "When you think that there are fewer and fewer places to be posted to as interesting as this, it's quite sad, really."

Hong Kong, with its vibrancy and night life, was a plum posting for British soldiers, especially compared to tours of Northern Ireland or Germany.

Texas woman staunch guns-rights advocate

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Suzanna Gratia crisscrosses the country, intent on convincing citizens and lawmakers that gun control is wrong, she believes she's detecting a new mood.

Despite the recent enactment of the Brady law and the likelihood Congress soon will impose an assault weapons ban, the Texan doesn't feel she's fighting a losing battle.

"I think I'm working against the legislative tide, but I don't believe I am working any more against the tide of the public en masse and the media," she said in a recent interview.

A hail of bullets in a crowded Killeen cafeteria transformed Ms. Gratia from a Copperas Cove chiropractor into one of the gun-rights lobby's most visible advocates.

She was having lunch with her parents on Oct. 16, 1991, when George Hennard crashed his pickup truck through a Luby's cafeteria window, jumped out and opened fire with two semiautomatic pistols.

Al and Ursula Gratia were among the 23 people Hennard massacred before killing himself. Suzanna fled the gunfire, thinking her mother was following. She later learned that Ursula Gratia remained behind to tend her husband of 48 years, who was shot in the chest after he lunged at Hennard.

A gun owner since the age of 21, Suzanna Gratia emerged from the tragedy with one certainty in her mind — that lives would have been saved had her gun been with her instead of in her parked car.

"The only reason my gun was not in my purse was because I wimped out and I was worried about losing my license to practice (as a chiropractor). So I began leaving my gun in my car a couple of months before the incident," she said.

"Stupid, stupid, stupid."

Her anger isn't directed at Hennard. "How can you be mad at a rabid dog?" she asked. "This guy just simply went nuts."

Her wrath is for others. "I was very angry and I'm still very angry ... at my legislators for legislating me out of the right to protect myself and my family," she said.

Spurred by the tragedy, she quickly hooked up with the National Rifle Association. In the 21/2 years since then, she has testified before legislative committees in Texas, Colorado, Hawaii, and Missouri and has traveled extensively to other states. Her appearances number well into the "three figures by now," she said.

Last month, she appeared on Capitol Hill before a Senate judiciary subcommittee to oppose gun control legislation drafted by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

"I think she's a very courageous lady and am grateful as an NRA member and as a law-abiding gun owner for her willingness to speak out," said Tanya Metaksa, the NRA's chief lobbyist.

Ms. Gratia is among "three or four dozen" people whose lives were marked by violent crime who speak out on behalf of the NRA, Ms. Metaksa said.

While Ms. Gratia isn't an NRA member, the organization or other gun-rights groups pay for many of her trips.

She deliberately chose not to join the NRA, saying she doesn't want to be labeled.

"I am speaking for everyone out there who has a strong belief in the 2nd Amendment and in our right and ability to protect ourselves both from the criminal element and our own government if need be," she said.

Ms. Gratia acknowledged that the grim credentials she brings to the debate give her an edge. "It is very hard for someone to go up against someone who has been there," she said. "You want emotion, you want blood and guts and the horrible human end of it, and I've got it."

Susan Whitmore, a spokeswoman for the gun-control group that championed the Brady law, agreed that victims are among the most persuasive advocates.

"Obviously victims, no matter what side of the issue they are on, they can be very compelling and very powerful speakers," said Ms. Whitmore, who is with Handgun Control Inc.

"I think, on the other side of the coin, there are probably very many more people that have come away from similar tragedies with a different point of view," Ms. Whitmore added. "Certainly, there are a lot of victims who have decided to speak out for tighter gun control, not weaker gun control."

For Suzanna Gratia, the issue comes down to one of personal rights. Her belief is anyone eligible to vote should be able to own a gun — and the burden of proof should be on the state to show why a person should be denied that right.

Her one-woman crusade may end some day.

"I'm out of town now constantly. That gets a little rough," she said, adding the absences are hurting both her business and personal life. "I don't know how much longer I can afford to do it; that's what it comes down to."

House changes earn mixed reviews

By Diane Duston
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Viewers devoted to the televised after-hours activities from the House floor have noticed a few changes of late. They seem to like the Oxford-style debates, but give the tighter camera angles a derisive Bronx cheer.

At least that's what C-SPAN junkies tell the cable system that airs what Congress is doing.

After a team of Democrats and a team of Republicans faced off over health care last month in a late-evening, highly structured debate, viewers phoned in to say it was "fantastic," "wonderful," "one of the most exciting things I've ever seen."

The exchange was intended to elevate the quality of debate in the House by forcing members to listen to opposing comments and respond directly rather than simply make speeches, said Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

His hope was that the monthly exercise would eventually affect floor debate and "help the deliberative process."

The first such program on March 16 seemed at times to be a shouting match, but "as we get used to it, we'll get better," promised Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

Viewers can decide later this month if they're improving. House debating teams are tentatively set to take on welfare reform April 27. C-SPAN will have a call-in show immediately following it.

Meanwhile, another House development has many viewers irked.

Back in 1984, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. ordered TV camera operators to periodically pan the empty chamber when long-winded members gave "special orders."

This period of speechifying follows the day's legislative business and gives House members their only opportunity to talk at length on any subject. Normally, they're alone in the chamber and often the time has been used to attack the opposite party.

O'Neill wanted to make sure viewers knew no one was listening.

Now, both Republicans and Democrats fear scenes of the empty chamber leads viewers to think Congress is not at work. They agreed to stop the wide-angle shots and keep the camera tight on the speaker.

"Congress has decided this small piece of honesty-in-government is too revealing," criticized Shirley Ragsdale, opinions editor of the Journal and Courier in Lafayette, Ind. "Instead of dispensing with the audience-less speeches, the House has decided the best way to save themselves from further embarrassment is to limit the scope of the camera."

Her readers agree, said Ragsdale whose editorial against the change prompted many phone calls to the newspaper.

"We encouraged people who called us to contact either C-SPAN or their member of Congress," she said.

Brian Lamb, C-SPAN's founder and chief executive officer, is on Ragsdale's side, but the House and Senate control the television cameras in the chambers.

"They don't ask my advice," said Lamb. "We would rather have our own cameras in there. I would rather the audience see what they would see if they sat in the gallery."

Lamb says House decisions about TV coverage "goes to the whole argument of why you don't want politicians controlling the media."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Diane Duston, who has covered the cable television industry, is now chief of the AP's congressional staff.

TV correspondent becomes father

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a news flash in his personal life: "60 Minutes" correspondent Steve Kroft is a dad.

His wife, Jennet Conant, gave birth Saturday night to John Conant Kroft in a Manhattan hospital, said Roy Brunett, a spokesman for the CBS show.

The baby weighed 8 pounds, 2 ounces. He and his mother, a freelance writer, are doing fine, Brunett said.

In 1966, the United States recovered a hydrogen bomb it had lost off the coast of Spain.

Whitney Houston sings in opera

NEW YORK (AP) — Whitney Houston stretched her already flexible, platinum vocal cords a little further — into opera — all for the good of the rainforest.

At a bash to benefit The Rainforest Foundation, Houston joined Sting, Elton John, Luciano Pavarotti, Aaron Neville, Branford Marsalis, James Taylor and Tammy Wynette for a rollicking finale of the aria, "La donna e mobile."

Pavarotti, naturally, led the way on the popular aria he's sung dozens of times as the womanizing duke in "Rigoletto."
