Ambassador as escorted from the British Embassy by as many as 60 uniformed policemen to the Foreign Ministry, his wife, Julia, said in a telephone interview. She did not specify why Miles had been summoned.

A retaliatory siege of the British Embassy in Tripoli also continued today, but Foreign Office undersecretary Richard Luce said he did not think the embassy staff or the estimated 8,000 other Britons in Libya were "in any danger at the present time."

The Foreign Office said three British citizens had been detained in Libya since the London attack.

A Foreign Office spokesman said 25 people, including 11 women and two children, were trapped in the British Embassy in Tripoli, surrrounded by "revolutionary guards." Another seven British women and 11 children remained in staff homes around the city, surrounded by "small crowds."

"There is no suggestion at the moment of any attempt to storm our embassy, but it's a minute-to-minute situation," added the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Luce said the Libyan Embassy, surrounded by police since the shooting, "expressed to us, through our contacts, regret at the fact that a British policewoman was killed."

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said it had learned that the expression of regret was authorized by Col. Moammar Khadafy's government in Tripoli, Libya.

Turner said that there were still prospective chamber members in Snyder and that it would be a good idea to continue recruiting efforts. He also indicated that membership drives might need to be held more than once a year.

Besides hearing the latest facts and figures on the membership drive, directors also listened to several reports pertaining to recently completed events and the activities of chamber committees.

According to preliminary figures, the 1984 chamber banquet has "broken even." Ray reported that some 648 tickets were sold for a total revenue of $6,480. Banquet expenses thus far have totaled $6,323.

Ray also reported that the combination July 4th/-Centennial celebration was now back at Towle Park and that plans were still being made for the event.

She reported that the Gold Coats had assisted with the recent rodeo at Western Texas College, but she indicted that since the college handled all the money matters she did not have any financial figures to report.

Director and college president Don Newbury indicated that Saturday night's crowd "was the biggest ever in five years."

Alert sticker offered

Members of the Snyder fire department are introducing a new program here called "Child Find."

According to Fire Chief Terry Don McDowell, it is designed to aid firefighters in locating children inside a burning house.

Starting this week, firemen will be distributing 4x6 inch stickers bearing the words "Child Find" in large letters. The sticker includes a picture of a firemen carrying a child.

"We want to encourage people to get these stickers and place them on their children's bedroom windows," McDowell said. "This way we'll know where to look for children at a fire scene."

He said some 2,000 stickers have already been distributed.

Although the bedroom window is the preferred location for the sticker, McDowell said individuals may also choose to place them on bedroom doors.

He said the stickers may point out the rooms of any persons who might have difficulty fleeing a burning building. As examples, he noted handicapped individuals or elderly persons.

The stickers are available free of charge from all members of the fire department.

Roger Mize, president of Snyder National Bank, called last week to disclaim any connection with the "death match" golf tournament planned between some of his associates.

Rex Robinson and Ted Crenwelge have challenged Mickey Nunley and M.L. Duke to a match, with the Robinson-Crenwelge team being spotted a minimum of a stroke each hole.

"Normally, these are men of character," Mize said. "However, put them on a golf course, and they quickly lose their credibility. Not only do they play golf, they also try to fish, and you know what liars fishermen can be."

Mize added that he wouldn't bet a nickle on either team. "I know them too well. They'd get behind the cart sheds and split up the pot."

There's still no date for the match, but Wide World of Sports is said to be interested in TV rights.

Western Texas College is offering a calligraphy workshop on April 28. Several years ago, the college offered a course at its extension center in Crosbyton.

Former students were notified of the workshop, and one interesting response came from 72-year-old Woody Robertson.

"Now that I'm 72, maybe I'd better stick to my tractor driving....You can tell my hands are not as steady as an 18-year-old, but I sure like to try."

Robertson enclosed samples of his work and a business card that says he "grows cotton, wheat and careless weeds." Also included is the slogan, "Go to church-Have a Nice Day."

Aline Parks, public information officer at WTC, reminded us that a purpose of a community college is to bring learning opportunties to people of all ages. If Mr. Robertson is any indication, the goal is a success.

Q. — How long are cars to stay stopped when a school crossing guard has the sign up and is the penalty for not stopping the same as running a regular stop sign?

A. — Local municipal court officials say a driver should stay stopped as long as the school guard's sign is up. Violaters would be fined the same as for running a stop sign, a $10 charge plus a $6.50 state tax.

U.S. unveils weapons plans

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Vice President George Bush today presented a new U.S. proposal for banning chemical weapons and said America was "willing to pay the price" by allowing inspections on short notice to verify compliance.

Addressing the 40-nation Geneva Conference on Disarmament, Bush said the verification provisions of the 66-page draft treaty were "indispensable to an effective treaty."

The key article of the draft spells out what Bush called an "open invitation" verification proposal under which the United States "is willing to join other parties in a mutual obligation to open for international inspection on short notice all of its military or government-owned and government-controlled facilities."

"This pledge to an 'open invitation' for inspections is not made lightly," Bush said.

In a reference to the Soviet Union, which has already criticized the proposal, Bush said "some governments speak as if openness and effective verification cut against their interests alone."

"But openness entails burden for every state, including the United States. Openness of the kind we are proposing for the chemical weapons ban would come at a price... The U.S. government is willing to pay the price of such openness."

The Soviet ambassador to the conference, Victor Issraelyan, was scheduled to speak later today.

Bush said the U.S. verification proposal "springs from a desire that the ban work — work permanently and effectively to provide the security all of us seek."

Bush had promised such a treaty proposal 14 months ago when he addressed the same disarmament conference.

The Reagan administration wants to put teeth into a 1925 Geneva protocol and a 1972 treaty outlawing chemical and biological weapons, The proposed treaty calls for provisions for enforcement and verification — stipulations lacking in the existing pacts.

Reagan announced on April 4 that his administration had come up with a plan to ban production, development, possession and use of chemical weapons but withheld details, saving the specifics for the conference.

The proposal comes amid White House reports that Iraq used chemical weapons in its war with Iran and Soviet denials of U.S. charges that its troops used chemical weapons in Afghanistan. The Iraqis have denied they used the weapons.

On Tuesday, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said his nation "firmly objects to the dishonest game being played with regard to the banning of the chemical weapons.

"The latest statements by Washington hint at such unworthy maneuvers," Gromyko said, after arriving in Budapest, Hungary, before a meeting of Warsaw Pact nations.

Differences on enforcement and verification have deadlocked debates on a chemical weapons ban.

May be 'indigent'...

De Lorean's assests are tied up in court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The public may be billed for John De Lorean's defense in a cocaine-trafficking trial opening today because legal fights have tied up his millions, said one judge as another court denied the automaker's claim to $975,000 from his failed company.

De Lorean's latest loss of a potential life raft of cash came Tuesday when a federal bankruptcy court in Detroit ruled in favor of unsecured creditors in the bankrupt De Lorean Motor Co.

The bankruptcy judge said De Lorean had no legitimate claim to the $975,000 because he had fraudulently mingled money invested in his car company with personal funds he used to buy a Utah firm that makes equipment for maintaining ski slopes.

Still another creditors' suit has kept the 59-year-old De Lorean from using his last available asset — a San Diego ranch — as collateral for a $2 million loan.

Opening statements were to begin today in De Lorean's long-delayed trial on a charge of conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to save his ailing sports car company.

Jury selection took five weeks, and the proceedings were postponed for several months following a leak to the press of videotapes of De Lorean's Oct. 19, 1982, arrest in a government "sting" operation.

On the same day as his arrest, the British government shut De Lorean's Northern Ireland car company and began bankruptcy proceedings. The automaker's attorneys say their client is now "penniless."

"He can't pay his mortgage. He can't pay his phone bills. And he can't pay his lawyers," chief defense attorney Howard Weitzman said Tuesday.

De Lorean has $19 million in assets but, because of the various creditors' suits, could be eligible for indigent status if he requested it, said U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi, who is presiding in the drug case. If declared indigent, his legal bills would be paid from public funds.

Takasugi, calling the timing of the Detroit ruling "rather curious," said he would interrupt today's opening statements to talk by telephone with De Lorean's creditors about releasing some assets for use as loan collateral.

In Detroit, another De Lorean lawyer, C. William Garratt, vowed to appeal the ruling by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Reynolds Graves on the $975,000.

"Do you have any insider information on who is going to get the 'WIMP VOTE?'"

Paul Harvey

June graduates: The Conference Board interviewed 1,500 CEO's and got a near unanimous prognosis: this year more jobs are waiting for you than any year in eight.

And communication is where the action is.

Some of my recent broadcasts, telecasts and newspaper columns have been prepared on and delivered from a farm in the Missouri Ozarks. And almost nobody knew.

With a dish on the roof and a satellite in the sky the news sources find me and my voice finds you — from anywhere to anywhere — in a hundredth-of-a-second.

What was impossible yesterday is already commonplace.

Wait'll you see what's next!

With your next telephone you'll be able to see who's calling before you answer.

In the next automobiles — there will be no way for you to get lost. Your location and destination will be pinpointed by satellite navigation.

Telephones, already becoming commonplace in cars, will be available shirt-pocket-size.

At home you will enjoy holographic TV in three dimensions.

It is functional now; it will be price-practical within five years.

Young Americans wanting to ride the wave should get aboard now.

If your business is worldwide, the new telecopiers will automatically translate our words into any language.

Corporations used to be able to market some new technology, confident it would be in demand for 30 years. Today's state-of-the-art technology comes off the production line already obsolescent.

Yesterday's copper-wires and radio signals and ground antennas — even electricity itself — are fast being replaced by glass fibers and microwaves and satellites and laser beams and the pulsating digital language of computers.

U.S. News recently tried to compute the dollar value of all this communications technology — and couldn't. Sales of hardware alone reached $60 billion last year; next year is incalculable, potentially astronomical.

By the end of this century there is no reason communication cannot replace the classroom with home study.

And now I'm going to tell you a little more than I know: Overseas diplomats and some business executives are being equipped with implanted transmitters. There is noplace a kidnapper could hide him.

And this is but the dawn of the information society; it's going to be an exciting day!

Incidentally, today's hand was greatly overbid. The way Watson sets up the cards is about the only way South can bring home 10 tricks.

This hand is not too difficult, but it is one that can give lots of declarers, including some rather good ones, a chance to go wrong.

The defense starts with three rounds of hearts. As declarer, you ruff the third one and look for nine more winners. The temptation is to ruff a diamond or two in dummy. It's a tempting play, but it won't work. In fact, you may even go one or two in the soup.

The winning play is to attack clubs and hope that the suit will break 3-3 or that the ace will be doubleton.

So you lead your 10 of clubs. East ducks but wins the club continuation and leads back a diamond. You take your ace and again a ruff is tempting, but you don't take it. You need all of dummy's trumps.

Now you play your A-K of spades. You go to dummy with the queen of spades, removing the last enemy trump. Now you can run your established club suit to make your contract.

Had trumps or clubs broken badly, you would surely have gone down at least one trick, but in bridge books, all usually goes well with an overbidder.

Witness says devil possessed accused couple

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman accused of hacking a couple to death with a pick ax was satanically possessed, as was her co-defendant, a prosecution witness has told jurors.

Karla Faye Tucker, 24, charged with capital murder, is accused of chopping to death 26-year-old Jerry Lynn Dean and 32-year-old Debra Ruth Davis Thornton. Daniel Garrett, 38, is also charged in the June 13 killings but has yet to stand trial.

Daniel Garrett's brother, Douglas, testifed Tuesday a demonic force was at work in the slayings.

"The devil had taken over their minds and bodies," Douglas Garrett, 37, testified. "I can't say whether they knew right from wrong. I can say I do believe the devil was in it."

Dean and Ms. Thornton were killed in bed at Dean's apartment. Prosecutors contend Ms. Tucker bore a grudge against Dean and killed Ms. Thornton because she saw the other slaying.

Douglas Garrett allowed police investigating the case to secretly equip him with a tape recorder while he discussed the killings with the accused couple.

The tape was played for jurors Tuesday.

On it, Douglas Garrett asks Ms. Tucker if it's true she had an orgasm "with every stroke" of the weapon.

"Hell, yes," she replied.

The recording shows Douglas Garrett told his brother and Ms. Tucker that homicide detectives have told him the two are prime suspects in the killings.

"They're just digging," Ms. Tucker responded.

Douglas Garrett asked his brother if the man and woman were asleep when they were killed.

"The guy woke up," Daniel Garrett replied. "The girl started waking up. I told her to stick her head under the covers."

Douglas Garrett commented that photos of the crime scene made it look "like it could have been done neater."

"That was the way it came down," Daniel Garrett replied. "It was a freak thing."

At one point while Ms. Tucker was out of the room, the brothers wept and lamented the killings and Douglas Garrett said, "You never would've done something like that on your own."

Circus continues after elephant, trainer die

SPRINGHILL, La. (AP) — "The show must go on," the circus boss said, and so it did, even though a 2-ton Burmese elephant and its trainer were electrocuted while the beast was raising the big top.

But the crowds were small for Tuesday night's shows of the Roller Brothers Circus, which had to perform without a tent in a lot behind the Piggly Wiggly Shopping Center.

"They weren't able to have the big top up because they didn't have the elephant to put it up," said Wayne Smith, president of the local Jaycees, which brought the one-ring troupe to town to entertain children.

The 40-year-old elephant, named Ellie, was electrocuted Tuesday morning when the central tent pole she was pulling into position with a chain touched overhead power lines, said circus supervisor Jim Silverlake.

Ellie toppled over onto trainer Tim Mericash, 23, of Norwalk, Ohio, electrocuting and crushing him, Silverlake said.

"Sparks were jumping and it seemed like it went on for an eternity before the fuse blew," said Silverlake. "The tent was so full of smoke you couldn't see what was going on."

A circus employee standing nearby, 21-year-old Mickey King, suffered second-degree burns on his back and legs and was taken to Baptist Medical Center in Little Rock, Ark. A hospital spokesman said King was in "alert and satisfactory condition."

The crew decided to proceed with the two shows scheduled for Springhill, a town of 6,800 in northwestern Louisiana on the Arkansas border.

"The show must go on. It's an old circus tradition," Silverlake said.

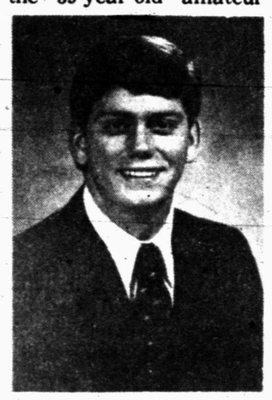
MIAMI (AP) — A chilling photograph shows Christopher Wilder eyeing a mini-skirted model at a fashion show after which a 17-year-old participant vanished, a suspected victim of the dead sex killer's 8,000-mile rampage of terror, authorities said.

The photo was released by the FBI here Tuesday, shortly before the body of the 39-year-old amateur race car driver — who died in a struggle with lawmen in New Hampshire last Friday — was flown back to Florida for final examination before funeral services, officials said.



The blurred picture shows the bearded Wilder glancing at an unidentified model wearing a light-colored mini-skirt and carrying flowers. The disappearance of Michele Korfman, who has not been seen since she appeared in the April 1 fashion show in Las Vegas, Nev., has been linked to Wilder by the FBI.

Wilder is suspected in the abductions of 11 women, most aspiring young models who apparently believed his claims of being a fashion photographer. Four have been found slain, four remain missing and three escaped from the wealthy electrical contractor, officials said.

The photo shows Wilder wearing white pants, a plaid shirt and a brown jacket, sitting with his hands clasped, one foot slightly behind his other leg.

"It (the picture) was furnished to us by our Las Vegas office," said Joe Del Campo, a spokesman for the FBI office here. "We don't anticipate releasing any other items ... not right now."

Meanwhile the FBI in Buffalo, N.Y., said Wilder's camera case had been found, and Special Agent Philip D. Smith expressed hope that someone may discover the Australian-born businessman's camera along a roadway.

The camera "could possibly contain film that might give us some clue as to the travels or the whereabouts of the four victims that have not been found," Smith said.

A Delta Air Lines jet transported Wilder's body, in a white cardboard coffin with a wood bottom, to Palm Beach International Airport on Tuesday night. The cellophane-wrapped box was transferred from an air freight terminal to a waiting Cadillac hearse.

Four Palm Beach sheriff's vehicles, with lights flashing, escorted the black-topped hearse to the office of Dr. James Benz, Palm Beach County medical examiner.

Benz was to make a plaster cast of Wilder's jaw and take photos of his body for various law enforcement agencies, said Dennis Aiken, special agent with the FBI's West Palm Beach office.

The plaster cast was needed because apparent bite marks were found on some of Wilder's victims, Aiken said.

Canadian cops question group about robbery

HOUSTON (AP) — Canadian police officers have begun questioning six people arrested in Houston about the robbery and slaying of an armored car guard in Montreal, police say.

But Houston Police Lt. Don McWilliams said Tuesday officers "are operating under the assumption" that three men will not be extradited to Canada until Houston authorities have tried them in an attack on a Brink's guard in Houston.

Two of the men, Dores Gatien and Mario Valiquette, were charged last week with aggravated robbery and attempted capital murder in an attack April 11 on Bernie Saintes, who was delivering bags of money to a north Houston bank.

Yves LaSalle, whom prosecutors contend was driving a getaway vehicle, was charged this week with aggravated robbery.

The three were arrested with three women at a Houston motel Thursday, McWilliams said. He said the women were turned over to federal immigration officials Tuesday and will probably be deported to Canada. They have not been charged with any crimes here.

Canadian officers refused to discuss their interviews with the group. But Andre Blanchette, a spokesman for Quebec provincial police, said last week Canadian authorities were investigating the Dec. 22 killing of Yvon Charland, a Brink's guard in Montreal, who was robbed of $47,000.

McWilliams said Canadian police officers plan to stay here several days for further interviews.

Iron bars aimed at blocking leaps from Reno suicide spot

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Iron bars are going up in a seven-story garage that, in the state with the nation's highest suicide rate, has gained grisly status as a high-publicity, glamour spot for ending one's life.

The high rise has become a symbol of an undercurrent of despair among Nevada residents that is often hidden by the glitter of casinos, some experts say.

At least 10 people have leaped to their deaths since 1972 from the First Interstate Bank garage, a block from the downtown casino strip, and several others have tried. Death on the sidewalk below is nearly always instantaneous.

But now the bank is spending $80,000 to install 4-foot bars between existing railings and ceilings, with a 6-foot fence to ring the highest level. The project is due for completion May 1.

Bank officials were initially reluctant to install barriers, said spokeswoman Joal Redmond.

But their hesitance ended when operators of Crisis Call Center, a suicide prevention hot line, told them the garage had acquired a reputation as a good place for killing one's self — "like the Golden Gate Bridge" in San Francisco, Ms. Redmond said.

Most victims, with an average age in their early 20s, were probably angry at the public, said Dr. Robert Hiller, a psychologist.

"Since there is publicity in jumping off that particular place, it's kind of like rubbing their depression in other people's noses," he said.

Nevada's suicide rate is 28.4 of every 100,000 people, compared with 12.5 nationally, said Rachel Gartner of Crisis Call. In Washoe County, where Reno is located, the rate is 32 of every 100,000.

The state also has the nation's highest rates of alcohol consumption, alcoholism deaths, divorce, bankruptcy and violent crime, she said.

"People coming into the area are leaving family and friends and support systems behind," Ms. Gartner said. "They think they're going to be making it big at the casinos or will be able to find work."

But that fantasy can end quickly for the numerous new residents of Nevada, the state with the highest growth rate.

State officials generally contend Nevada's high ranking for suicides, alcoholism and other social ills may be inflated by its huge numbers of tourists.

Reno psychologist Jerry Nims disagrees.

"The tourist influx — the Saturday night tourist who blows his brains out — does inflate the figures, but that's only a small part of the problem," he said. "Most of it is homegrown."

Volumes present new angle on history

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A new history text published by two professors at Texas A&I University teaches national events and issues from a borderland perspective.

"Our students in general feel excluded from the United States," said Dr. Terrence Barragy. "It (the book) is a way of telling people that they're included, that they have a history, too."

Terrence and co-author Dr. Russ Huebel, both history teachers at A&I for 15 years, culled a variety of journals for articles to include about the Southwest, Mexican-Americans, women and blacks.

Ringing in the ears

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 67 years old and have had ringing in my ears for 30 years. Sometimes it's very annoying. About 15 years ago I had severe pressure in one ear. The doctor said there wasn't much he could do, but he gave me some Roniacol to relieve the pressure.

I've been taking one-half tablet of Roniacol daily and it relieves the ringing.

When the ear noises get worse I take an extra quarter or half tablet, which happens about once a week or so. I'm wondering if it's safe to take Roniacol daily. I don't notice any side effects.

DEAR READER — Roniacol is nicotinyl alcohol. It belongs to the niacin and nicotinic acid chemical group. It's a vasodilator and is claimed to relax the blood vessels. It isn't harmful in the amounts you're taking.

There are two intriguing aspects to your story. Many cases of ringing ears are probably related to circulation. The sound of the blood flow itself may be a factor. Turbulence in the arteries because of constriction (perhaps from fatty-cholesterol deposits) may be a factor. The effects of circulation noise or stimulus directly on the brain cells may also be factors.

Nicotinic acid has been used effectively to lower cholesterol levels. Several research programs have investigated its possible use in preventing fatty-cholesterol blockage complications.

The question is whether improving the circulation to your ear, or to your brain, helped to diminish the ringing sensations. The question can't be answered, but it indicates where ear research is going.

You'll want to know more about ear noises, so I'm sending you the Health Letter 12-10, Help for Tinnitus — Noise or Ringing in the Ear. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — The right side of my heart is blocked. The doctor says there's nothing to do until the left side goes too, then they'll give me a pacemaker.

The left side is enlarged and working hard to take over for the right side. My legs hurt from numbness, I have to go to the bathroom four to five times every night and I can't sleep because of these problems.

Why should I have to wait until I start blacking out (the doctor said I would) before I can get a pacemaker? It seems to me a pacemaker would help the strain that's being put on the left side now.

DEAR READER — Obviously you have several medical problems. But you're probably saying you have a right bundle branch block. That doesn't decrease the ability of the right side of your heart to pump. It just delays the onset of its contraction by perhaps 0.04 seconds every time, which isn't significant.

If you had both right and left bundle branch block, then your heartbeat might be too slow and a pacemaker might help. But with a normal heart rate and a slight delay of contraction on the right side, it wouldn't help at all. You don't want an unnecessary operation.

In Nicaragua...

CIA reportedly attacked key ports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA directed attacks against Nicaragua's seaports three months before mining that nation's harbors and one sabotage raid touched off a major oil fire at the key port of Corinto, intelligence sources say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said that like the mining, the Oct. 10 attack on Corinto involved CIA-hired Latin mercenaries who reached the port by speedboat while American CIA agents directed the operation from a mother ship offshore.

One source described the Corinto raid as "totally a CIA operation" and said the attack — not the mining — marked the first time the spy agency entered directly into the war against the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Another source said the Corinto raid was one in a series of CIA-directed seaport attacks dating back to an assault on oil storage and pipeline facilities at Puerto Sandino on Sept. 8. Both Corinto and Puerto Sandino are on Nicaragua's Pacific Coast.

In an interview Tuesday, Adolfo Calero, head of the CIA-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN), said Nicaraguan rebels from his group carried out those raids, but he added he did not know the degree of CIA involvement or whether saboteurs from other Latin American countries took part.

Members of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who complained last week that they were not adequately informed about the mining, also appeared not to have known about the CIA's role in the Corinto raid, according to sources close to the panel.

One source said the CIA provided no information on the Corinto attack last fall and told the committee in September that the Puerto Sandino operation was carried out by Latin scuba divers who worked for the Honduras-based FDN, the largest rebel group and the one most closely tied to the CIA.

The sources said the first time the Senate committee staff learned that the special Latin paramilitary team worked for the CIA was on March 30 when the agency sent a letter on the mining that mentioned "unilaterally controlled Latino assets," meaning agents directed exclusively by the CIA.

On April 2, the CIA told the Senate committee staff that those agents were used in the mining operation, a disclosure, which according to one source, led to the panel's discovery that the Corinto raid and other port attacks also were directed by the CIA.

In those raids, the sources said, American CIA agents remained on a mother ship more than 12 miles off the Nicaraguan coast, the territorial waters recognized by the United States although Nicaragua claims territory extending 200 miles from its shores.

Prior to the seaport raids and mining, the CIA exercised control over the rebel groups mainly through allocation of military supplies, the sources said. By threatening to withhold supplies and training, the agency could pressure the groups into accepting its advice, but the CIA did not direct specific military operations, the sources said.

Corinto residents said that on the night of Oct. 10, the attackers positioned their speedboats behind a South Korean ship and then opened fire on oil storage tanks. The residents said the shells set one oil tank ablaze, touching off a chain of fires at nearby fuel tanks that raged out of control for two days. The Nicaraguan government claims at least 3.2 million gallons of fuel were destroyed, more than 20,000 residents forced to evacuate and 112 people injured — including three South Korean sailors.

A day after the Corinto raid, Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government charged that the "criminal attack" was "part of the plans of the Central Intelligence Agency."

District to divert Beal Creek water

Directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District will receive bids April 24 for approximately $8 million in revenue bonds to finance "quality-quanity" water projects.

Approximately two-thirds of the funds realized from the sale of bonds will finance a diversion of the low, poor-quality flow of Beals Creek southeast of Big Spring.

As planned, this will not interfere with high-quality flood waters flowing on to Lake E.V. Spence.

Part of the diverted water will be delivered to oil companies for secondary recovery, and the excess will go to a newly created side storage reservoir on Red Draw a mile and a half south of the diversion point.

Most of the remaining bond money will be used to acquire ground water rights in Winkler County as a hedge for the west end of the system against summer peak demands.

Erase name from diplomas

NEW YORK (AP) — The Board of Education is spending almost $20,000 to erase the name of suspended Schools Chancellor Anthony Alvarado from 71,500 high school diplomas.

The board last week requested bids on a new set of diplomas for the city's 110 high schools bearing the name of Acting Chancellor Nathan Quinones, who replaced the Alvarado amid allegations regarding the chancellor's personal finances.

Schools officials estimated the cost of reprinting the diplomas at $19,900.

"Because we don't have any assurance that this matter will be ameliorated before the June graduation, we have taken the contingency precaution of printing new diplomas reflecting the name of the person presently in charge of the school system," a schools spokesman said. "Anthony Alvarado is suspended and and as such it would not be appropriate to list his name."

Last May, when Alvarado became chancellor, predecessor Frank Macchiarola's name was removed at a cost of $18,000.

Alvarado was suspended with pay in March pending a May 15 hearing on charges by the city's Department of Investigation that he violated board regulations when he borrowed some $92,000 from subordinates and friends.

Alvarado is also being investigated by the Brooklyn and Manhattan district attorneys and by the U.S. attorneys for the eastern and southern districts.

Testimony concludes in hearing over baby

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Officials of the Edna Gladney Home, where a young woman claims she was pressured into giving up her baby for adoption, say the mother never indicated she wanted to keep the child.

In the final day of testimony Tuesday before State District Judge Brian Carper, Lisa Burdon, a social worker at the home, testified that Barbara Landry received nine counseling sessions between November and January.

Ms. Burdon said that during the counseling sessions, Miss Landry never mentioned the possibility of keeping her baby, a girl born Feb. 10 at a hospital affiliated with the home.

Miss Landry, 20, of The Bronx, N.Y., contends officials at the home for unwed coerced her into relinquishing custody of her baby, who has been placed with an unidentified couple.

The young mother is seeking a trial to determine whether she should be bound by an addidavit she signed Feb. 14 in which she relinquished her parental rights.

Judge Carper indicated he would rule either today or Thursday on the matter.

Miss Landry said officials of the home gave her a "one-sided view" of adoption and told her she would have to a pay a bill of between $3,000 and $7,000 if she kept the baby.

"I felt obligated to sign," Miss Landry testified. "They tell you it (adoption) is the best thing for you and the best thing for the baby. Then there's the money, and you can never pay all that."

Motions filed by Michael Berg, her attorney, challenge the legality of the adoption agreement Miss Landry signed.

"I was just confused and they were giving me just one side. When I saw her, she was just beautiful. I don't know why I signed the papers," Miss Landry said Tuesday.

Last November, when she was six months pregnant, the home paid for her to be flown from New York to Fort Worth and agreed to pay her medical expenses if she would give up the baby for adoption, court testimony showed.

Chamber reports offered

Ray reported that the Sundowner's Riding Club Rodeo would begin Thursday and that the AJRA Committee was continuing to work out details for this year's rodeo finals.

Director Phil Fortune reported that the Business Development Committee is regrouping and planning for a broad base retail promotion for the upcoming July 4th and Centennial Celebration. He also indicated that the committee has discussed the possibility of the chamber allotting funds for the 1985 budget to be used for promotional purposes.

He also said that the Petroleum Relations Committee was reviewing complaints — especially from newcomers moving from larger communities — that there "isn't enough to do" in Snyder. Also printed materials should be made available to newcomers to make relocating in Snyder easier.

Director Troy Williamson reported that the Cultural Affairs Committee has been looking into the possibility of utilizing the Western Texas College Fine Arts Theatre throughout the summer to book various performances.

He noted one drawback since the theatre does not have a cooling unit separate from the remainder of the building. On weekends during the summer months, the building's main cooling unit is turned off.

Directors agreed to ask the college trustees to look into the possibility of obtaining a separate cooling unit for the theatre. Directors Newbury and Roy Baze, a college trustee, abstained from this vote.

Regarding the Scurry County Leadership II meetings, Williamson said that three more sessions were planned before the summer hiatus and that new sessions would begin in the fall. An agriculture tour is planned for May 3 and the final meeting will be May 17 at the chamber.

Directors attending were Baze, Turner, John Jarrell, Ray, David Thompson, Gene Thomas, Troy Williamson, Newbury, Max von Roeder, Ernie Armstrong and Fortune.

Chamber personnel attending were Mort Ewing and Sammie York.

Preacher says...

Faith not medicine healed girl

LAFOLLETTE, Tenn. (AP) — Preacher Larry Hamilton says it was faith — not court-ordered medical treatment — that stopped his daughter's bone cancer, and he wishes doctors, judges and social workers would leave his family alone.

When a judge ordered chemotherapy for 13-year-old Pamela Hamilton last September, she had a rapidly growing tumor the size of a football in her left leg and less than a 25 percent chance of survival, according to doctors.

Now her doctor thinks the tumor is just a lump of scar tissue the size of a baseball. Although it is too early to pronounce a cure, Dr. Frank Haraf says he can find no more signs of cancer.

"God does it and the doctors take credit for it," Hamilton said in an interview in the living room of his white-frame house, near this northeast Tennessee coal town.

Hamilton is pastor of LaFollette's 38-member congregation of the Church of God of the Union Assembly, a fundamentalist sect that believes in faith healing and forbids taking any medicine.

Hamilton insisted it was faith that shrank his daughter's tumor, and said all the chemotherapy and radiation did was "make her hair fall out."

As he spoke, Pam sat nearby in an easy chair, roughhousing with her 6-month-old sister, Dabrea. The evening was warm, and Pam soon took off a wig that resembled the long, brown hair she lost.

Pam seemed little like the frail child who could hardly sit up in court last September and told a judge she was willing to die "when the Lord gets ready for me." She was dressed up, having been to Wednesday night church service, and her crutches were the only obvious sign of illness.

She responded mostly "yes" or "no" to questions, but said she was hoping to return to school as an eighth-grader in the fall. Her father said she maintained a "B" average this year by studying with a county teacher who visited their home twice a week.

Pam receives her last chemotherapy treatment in September. After that, Hamilton said he wants to be rid of doctors, judges and state social workers, whom he called "a bunch of Nazis."

Although Hamilton's church, which has nearly 4,000 members in 17 states, bans medicine, it allows members to see doctors for such things as broken bones.

Pam broke her leg last July, and a doctor discovered a tiny tumor while mending the bone.

When Hamilton didn't take his daughter to a cancer specialist, social workers took him to court. A Juvenile Court judge declared Pam a neglected child, gave the state temporary custody and ordered medical treatment.

Chemotherapy began Sept. 22 after the state Court of Appeals rejected Hamilton's appeal. The state Supreme Court refused to hear the case, and in January, Hamilton quit fighting.

Hamilton said he was fired from his job as a dispatcher for a Knoxville trucking company because of the controversy, and hasn't been able to find steady work since.

"When I go to look for a job and people find out what who I am, they pass me by," he said. "But I can live with that. I don't want any sympathy."

Hamilton said he isn't paid for preaching, but has managed to support his wife, two sons and two daughters. "God has taken care of me," he said.

The church covered Hamilton's legal expenses. And because Pam is legally a ward of the state, it has covered her medical bills.

Hamilton fears the state will sue him to try to recover the cost of treatment. "But they ain't going to do any more to me than God will let them," he said.

Hamilton sued East Tennessee Children's Hospital in Knoxville for $15,000 because Pam slipped on her crutches, fell and broke her cancer-weakened leg while receiving treatment there in November.

"I'm going to get every dime I can out of them," he said. "I didn't ask for this."

The tall, burly preacher said the past nine months have only confirmed his beliefs about the power of faith and the evils of medicine. And he said it has brought his family closer to the church they love.

There were only three photographs displayed in the Hamiltons' living room — two of Jesse Pratt Jr., the church's general overseer, and one of Pratt's mother.

"There's more love in this church than I've seen anywhere," Hamilton said. "This is the only church that's being persecuted. But we've got the Bible on our side."

On the coffee table in front of Hamilton were two Bibles. He constantly thumbed through one to find passages he said supported his opinions.

"God don't give doctors their knowledge. All the knowledge that God gives us is in this book here," he said. "A man could spend a lifetime and never understand it all."

'Dallas' top show of season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The winner and still champion: CBS, which captured the ratings title for the 1983-84 TV season on the strenght of heavyweights "Dallas" and "60 Minutes" and such miniseries as "Master of the Game" and "Chiefs."

CBS claimed its fifth ratings victory in a row at the April 15 close of the current 29-week season. ABC was second and NBC was third. Here are the final ratings: CBS 18.1, ABC 17.2, NBC 14.9.

ABC, which had the week's highest-rated show with the Academy Awards presentation, tied CBS in the last week of the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey, but, unlike last year, posed no last-minute threat to CBS.

Tigers now 6-0...

SHS skins Panthers

FORT STOCKTON -- Snyder skinned the Fort Stockton Panthers for five first-inning runs, then went on to post its third straight victory by the 10-run rule, 13-2, in District 2-4A baseball play here Tuesday night.

It was Snyder's ninth consecutive win and gives the Tigers records of 6-0 in district and 14-5 for the season. Fort Stockton falls to 6-10.

The Tigers are idle Friday, and will trek to Pecos for a key district outing next Tuesday at 7:30.

Paul Tate once again took WP honors for the Tigers. He struck out nine, gave up four hits and walked only two batters. Guy Gladson was tagged with the loss. He pitched two-thirds of an inning before being relieved by Richard Morales. Gladson later came back to pitch the final inning. Between them, Fort Stockton hurlers handed out 12 hits and eight walks, striking out six batters.

"Paul struggled a little. His back was sore and he couldn't bend like he normally does. But he had control of the ball game," said Tiger coach Albert Lewis. "And, we helped Fort Stockton a little here and there."

Fort Stockton's only runs came in the third inning, after Snyder had taken a 6-0 lead. Tate struck out first-up Jerome Chavez but Omar Calderon and Daniel Saribia both singled. Saribia was thrown out trying to steal second base. Calderon scored, however, when Gabriel Fierro lashed a third single in the inning.

Fierro then stole second and took third on an errant pickoff attempt. He raced home on a passed ball.

If there was any question of Fort Stockton climbing back into the game, Snyder answered it in the top of the fourth. William Cotton led off with a walk, moved to second on a single by Chad Peterson and scored on a basehit by Bobby Velasquez. Next-up Charles Bollinger then doubled to bring around Peterson and Velasquez, and came in himself when Chris Sanders belted a single.

Snyder cracked two more basehits in the inning and managed to load the bags, but a fly ball to center and back-to-back strikeouts got the Panthers out of further trouble.

Snyder took the 10-2 advantage and turned it into 13-2 in the top of the fifth. The Panthers put Gladson back on the mound and he immediately walked Peterson and Velasquez. Peterson stole second and took third on a pickoff try that ended up in the outfield. He later scored when the Panthers tried to throw out Velasquez at second base. One out later, Sanders drilled a single to push Velasquez in. Snyder's final run came when McClure doubled to bring home Webb, who had walked aboard.

Snyder had jumped out in front 5-0 in the first inning. Velasquez walked and scored on a fielder's choice. Gladson then issued three straight walks, forcing in Bollinger. A single by Willie Greathouse bought two more runs.

In the third, Sanders singled on and came in on a basehit from Malone.

McClure had the hot bat for Snyder, going three-for-three with a couple of RBI. Sanders was three-for-four with two while Malone was two-for-three with two.

Pecos pops AHS; Snyder rolling on

Pecos popped Andrews 8-4 to stay close behind league-leader Snyder, but the win also aided the Tigers to a three-game cushion over third place as District 2-4A baseball continued Tuesday.

To clarify, Pecos' long-ball powered victory gave the Eagles a 5-1 district record. Snyder, which thumped Fort Stockton 13-2 in five innings, is 6-0.

That kept Pecos in contention for the title, but Andrews' loss left the Mustangs in third with a 3-3 record - a full three games behind Snyder with only four contests remaining on the schedule.

In the only other 2-4A game Tuesday, Lamesa blanked Monahans 7-0.

Tuesday's outcomes set the scene for a Snyder-at-Pecos matchup next Tuesday which should play a major role in the district race. Because of the upcoming holidays, there will be no district action this Friday.

Pecos got three home runs - a pair of two-run shots by Elias Peyan and Sonny Orona and a single-belter by Omar Trevino - to defeat Andrews. Peyan (5-3) was the winner. Shay Morris took the loss.

Snyder got a 12-hit performance to win its third straight district game by the 10-run rule. Paul Tate (6-1) was the winner. He doled out only four hits. Guy Gladson was the loser.

In Lamesa, Gilbert Arredondo rapped his ninth home run of the season to help lift the Tornadoes to their second 2-4A win among four losses. Chris Mason also rapped a homer. Johnny Gonzales (4-5) was the winning hurler. Trey Ford was saddled with the loss.

In addition to next Tuesday's Snyder-Pecos contest, Lamesa will host Fort Stockton and Andrews will travel to Monahans.

Girl tracksters begin competition at region

BROWNWOOD -- Snyder High School could put representatives in the Class 4A State Track Meet if all goes well here today and Thursday.

Snyder's Lady Tigers are here at the regional relays in six events, four of them which have preliminaries today.

The meet begins at 4 p.m. with prelims in the 400 meter relay. Snyder's first event will be the 800 meter relay preliminaries at 4:45. The Lady Tigers go into the event with the third fastest time in the region, a 1:46.11. Running on the squad are Anderina Kitchens, Katrina Reed, Donna Anderson and Karlene Thompson.

That will be followed by the 400 meters at 5, the 200 meters at 5:15 and the 1600 meter relay at 5:30.

Thompson runs the 400 meters and has the fifth fastest qualifying time with a 61.75. Kitchens will then run the 200 meters at 3:15. Her qualifying time was a 27.22, seventh overall.

SHS's final preliminary entry today is the 1600 meters. The Tigers come in with a 4:07.6, the fastest time in the region. Team members are Kitchens, Reed, Dora Hernandez and Thompson.

If there is a problem for the Tigers today, it is the obvious lack of time for rest between each event. All four events are within 45 minutes of each other.

Thursday's competition opens with the long jump at 9:30 a.m., followed by the triple jump at 11. Running events begin at 1:30. The 800 relay will be held at 2:45, followed by the 400 at 3:00, the 200 at 3:15 and the 1600 relay at 3:45.

Thompson qualified in both the triple jump and long jump. Her triple jump is a 37-9½, which is second in the region. Her long jump of 17-1¾ ranks 10th, however.

First and second place finishers at region will automatically be entered in the upcoming state meet.

Thursday in San Angelo...

Snyder ready for 2-4A track

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder competes in the boy's District 2-4A Track Meet here Thursday with hopes of qualifying several individuals to region.

The single-day relays begin with the high jump at 11:30, followed by the pole vault and shot put at 12:30 and the long jump at 1. The discus will be held at 4 p.m.

Running preliminaries will be held in five events, beginning with the 110 high hurdles at 2:30. Others will be the 100 meters at 2:50, the 400 meters at 3:10, the 300 intermediate hurdles at 3:30 and the 200 meters at 3:50.

All other events will be run as finals, which get underway with the 3200 at 7 p.m. The final event, the 1600 meter relay, is scheduled for 9:15.

Depth-strong Monahans and Andrews are expected to be the teams to beat for the district title.

"Monahans and Andrews are favored for number one and we should end up a high third, challenging for first and second if everybody performs like they are capable of," said Tiger coach Robert Crawford, who feels Snyder's best chances to qualify to region are the 100 and 200 meters, the long jump, discus and the relays.

"Chad (Peterson) is probably favored to win the 100 and the long jump, with a good chance to win the 200. His main competition in the 100 and 200 are Eloy Baeza of Andrews. Chad's beaten him in the 100 every time and he's beaten Chad in the 200," noted the coach. "Ricky (Vaughn) has a very good chance to win the discus. And Kyle (Freeman) has a good chance to place high in the shot and discus.

"Really, we have a chance to get to regionals in a lot of events. Some of them aren't what you'd call great chances, but we do have a chance if we perform to the best of our capabilities," Crawford said.

Some of Snyder's outside shots seem to be in the 200 with Darren Greenway and Tommy Holladay, in the high jump with Marcus McGlouthin, Sunny Cobb and Chris Garrett, and in the pole vault with Reggie Price and Robert Patterson.

Another is the 300 intermediate hurdles.

"We'll do real well (in the meet) if Norman (Malone) can get up there and do the type job he's capable of doing in the hurdles, and if he and Willie Greathouse can do well in the long jump," said Crawford. "Those would be some very valuable points for us. Darren and Tommy could also get some key points in the 200 meters and with a little luck, they might even get to regional.

"I think both of our relays have got a shot. Andrews and Monahans are both taking some people off the relays to run them in other events and that could give us an even better chance," he said.

Snyder's 400 meter relay team is made up of Greenway, Holladay, Freeman and Peterson. The 1600 squad will be McGlouthin, Greenway, Cobb and Holladay.

Lady Tigers leading regional golf tourney

BROWNWOOD -- Coach Jan Kruse's Lady Tigers were leading the regional golf tournament by eight strokes at the midway point here, with thoughts of a state berth looming brightly.

The Tigers shot a 374 over the first 18 holes to stay in front of a well-respected Belton team which turned in a 382. Andrews, runnerup to Snyder in the District 2-4A race this season, is third with a 394. Granbury shot a 403 and is in fourth place.

The 36-hole tournament was to conclude with today's morning round.

Other Snyder team members and their scores are Rebekah Powell, 95; Leslie Light, 99; Susan Hamlett, 101; and Xalyn Harris, 102.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: If you had to print that letter from "Nancy B." with her off-the-wall list of no-nos for Seventh-day Adventists, why didn't you follow it with some facts?

I always thought you did your homework, Abby. Now I'm beginning to wonder about your literary professionalism. If you're going to throw church ideologies and personal theories into your column, you should become knowledgeable in the doctrines of all churches and not accept as gospel any old thing some reader happens to send to stir up things and cause your readers to come to wrong conclusions.

Seventh-day Adventists are Christians who worship in church on Saturday, await the second coming of Christ, believe in the virgin birth, the Trinity and baptism by immersion. They discourage divorce and do not drink alcoholic beverages or use tobacco. They are discouraged from drinking coffee and tea (notice I said discouraged, not thrown out if they do). They are interested in medical and welfare works of all kinds around the world and so many other caring involvements with our society.

Back to Nancy B. and her "list" of taboos: For the most part she was on target, but I'm an S.D.A. and I wear a wedding ring and a touch of makeup.

However, that last no-no forbidding marital relations on the Sabbath because "it is considered a sin to seek pleasure on the day set aside to worship the Lord" is totally false. Please set the record straight.

MAGGIE B. IN BARSTOW

DEAR MAGGIE: My apologies. I shall attempt to set the record straight by publishing this letter:

DEAR ABBY: "Nancy B." is not very well-informed about what is expected of Seventh-day Adventists.

She was correct to say that Adventists avoid the use of tobacco and alcohol. That may be one of the reasons they live about seven years longer than the average.

But as far as abstaining from marital relations on the Sabbath is concerned, God certainly did run a risk by creating Eve on Friday and expecting her and Adam, for whom she was created, to spend their honeymoon in abstinence.

Abby, God invented sex, so it is highly unlikely that he would forbid it on the Sabbath.

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST PASTOR

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Sex six times a week is enough. We rest on the Sabbath.

A SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am constantly running into an acquaintance who says, "When are you and your husband coming over; we'd love to see you!" She makes me feel almost guilty for not having barged in on her.

Personally, I would not want anyone dropping in on me, and I am not the type to drop in on others without a definite invitation.

Do people who say, "We'd love to see you; why don't you come over sometime?" actually expect you to drop in? Or am I expected to phone and say, "Hi, are you folks busy tonight? We'd like to come over."

Please print this, Abby. Others may be wondering the same thing.

ANNOYED IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR ANNOYED: The vague "Come see us sometime" invitation should be regarded as pleasant rhetoric—nothing more. People who really want your company will invite you for a specific time.

Rules confound probe of shootings

NEW YORK (AP) — The aftermath of the shooting of 11 people outside the Libyan Embassy in London shows how the legal concept of diplomatic immunity can shield diplomats who commit criminal acts from arrest and prosecution.

"The purpose of diplomatic immunity is to enable countries to carry on their international business without the interruptions of people being interfered with by local courts," said William W. Bishop, an international law professor at the University of Michigan.

The cloak of diplomatic immunity goes back centuries, to when warring tribes agreed not to kill each other's couriers. The concept is designed to prohibit one country from harassing another country's visiting diplomats and their aides and family members.

Diplomatic immunity also strives to keep individual misdeeds from becoming international incidents, but may prevent the British from arresting and trying anyone for the Tuesday shootings, which left a London policewoman dead and 10 people who were demonstrating against Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy injured.

British officials say the exact status of the Libyan Embassy is unclear because in January a group of students entered the building and took over its functions. The British Foreign Office asked the Khadafy government who was in charge, but there was no answer.

By guaranteeing that a Soviet diplomat in Washington will not be arrested for shoplifting or for not paying parking tickets, for example, the United States expects that its diplomats in Moscow will not be arrested on trumped-up espionage charges. And vice versa.

"It's sometimes a sensitive area insofar as the public is concerned in seeing a group of people with a privileged status in the United States, our classless society. It's sometimes hard to understand," said Richard Gookin, the associate chief of protocol at the State Department in Washington.

Diplomatic immunity has been law in this country since the early 1800s, and it has been part of formal international law since the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations.

Among other things, diplomatic immunity is designed to protect foreign officials from unfamiliar legal systems.

An unfortunate side effect, however, is that diplomatic immunity routinely allows some people to escape the consequences of their illegal acts simply because they are part of the diplomatic community.

The strongest formal action a country can take against someone who has diplomatic immunity is to expel the offender.

In the London shootings, British sharpshooters surrounded the Libyan embassy. But authorities were barred from entering the building, searching the premises and interviewing the people inside to determine who fired the submachine gun shots from an embassy window.

Texans willing to pay more

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans seem willing to pay higher sales and gasoline taxes to fund a revamped public school system, according to Gov. Mark White.

The governor, who said he will announce his tax package proposal within 10 days, also said Tuesday that "luxury taxes" might have to go up.

White is expected to call a May or June special session of the Legislature to deal with education. The Select Committee on Public Education meets Thursday in Dallas to approve its final recommendations for reform.

The governor told reporters that other officials' predictions of a $1.6 billion price tag for the reforms is "approximately" right. Raising the five cent a gallon gasoline tax and the 4 percent state sales tax "are the two that seem to have the greatest support at this time," he said.
