Bush seeks better ties

President makes gesture toward North Korea

■ Bush offers to cancel annual joint U.S.-South Korea military exercises if North Korea opens nuclear program to inspection.

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — President Bush on Monday said the United States and South Korea would cancel the annual military exercises known as "Team Spirit" for 1992 if North Korea opens its nuclear program to inspection.

At a news conference with South Korean President Roh Tae-woo, Bush said the United States would seek improved relations with North Korea if the Communist regime stops being a threat to its neighbors, and improves its record on human rights.

Bush also vowed the United States will remain in Korea "as long as there is a need and we are welcome."

On the third stop of a 12-day tour of Australia and Asia, Bush met for more than an hour with Roh privately on his first day in Korea.

The South Korean leader said the two men had signed agreements on science and technology and patents, but gave no details.

Roh too said he favored improved U.S. ties with North Korea if Pyongyang "ceases to be a threat."

Bush's indication that the annual spring military exercises might be called off this year appeared to be a gesture to the Communist North Korea, which has recently warmed toward the South after four decades of truculence.

Bush was speaking to the South Korean General Assembly a few hours after his news conference.

In his prepared remarks, Bush returned to the subject of nuclear weapons, challenging North Korea to live up to its Dec. 31 promise to join in a ban of nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula. He said prospects for peace here "are brighter than at any point in the past four decades."

While hailing the easing of tensions between North and South Korea, Bush stressed, "Paper promises won't keep the peace." He recalled that North Korea signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty six years ago but has not yet allowed international inspection of its nuclear facilities.

He said North Korea, along with South Korea, must

Opponents continue attack on Georgian president's bunker

■ Republic's leader thinks rebels will reject U.N. referendum on demands for his resignation.

Associated Press

TBILISI, Georgia — Rebels pounded President Zviad Gamsakhurdia's stronghold with rockets and machine gun fire Sunday, hours after the embattled leader proposed a U.N.-supervised referendum on demands he resign.

But Gamsakhurdia, speaking to reporters in his makeshift bunker under the Parliament building, predicted opposition forces would reject the offer and continue the uprising that has claimed at least 73 lives in two weeks of fighting.

"This is not a democratic opposition. This is an armed terroristic junta," said Gamsakhurdia, guarded by soldiers in motley uniforms with hunting guns and AK-47 rifles.

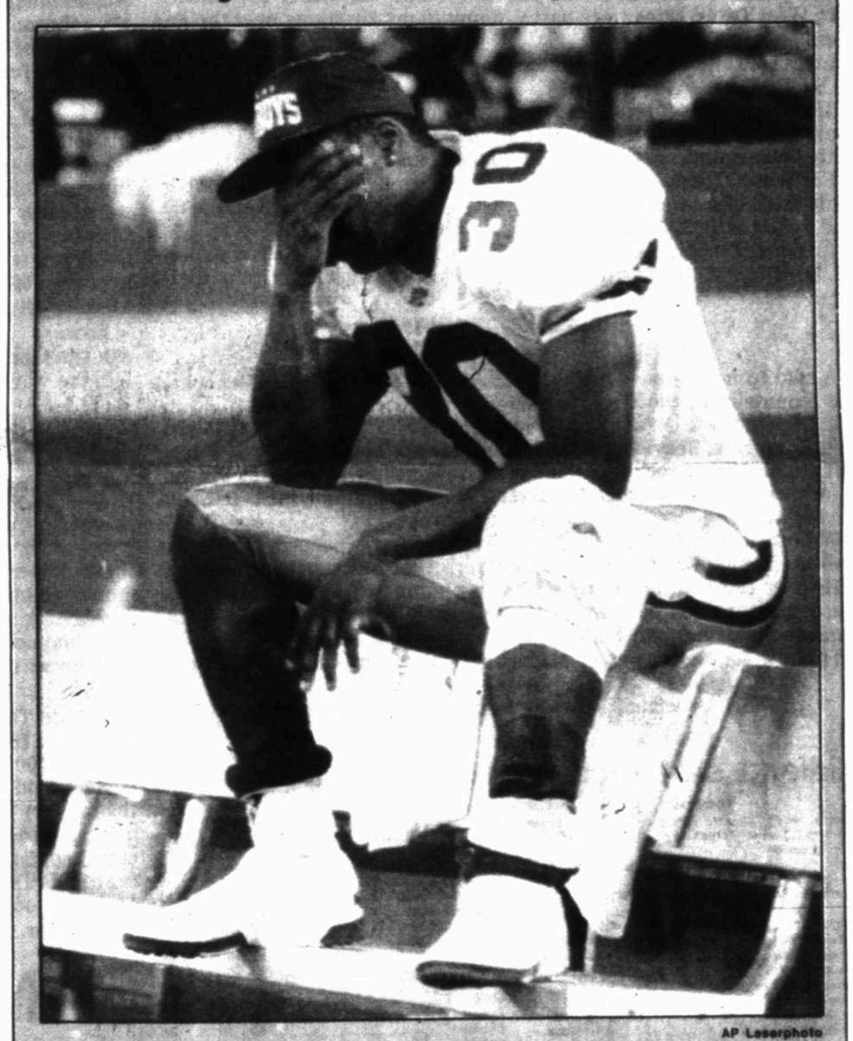

Outside, smoke wafted around the Parliament building and snipers fired from rooftops. The downtown area was littered with burned-out vehicles, shattered glass and debris.

Loyalist troops, estimated at 300 to 500 men, defended the Government House with a T-55 tank and several armored personnel carriers. Opponents, led by rebel National Guardsmen, have staged daily attacks on the building since Gamsakhurdia fled inside Dec. 22.

They accuse Gamsakhurdia of seizing dictatorial powers, shutting down oppo-

Texas oilman renews search for missing son

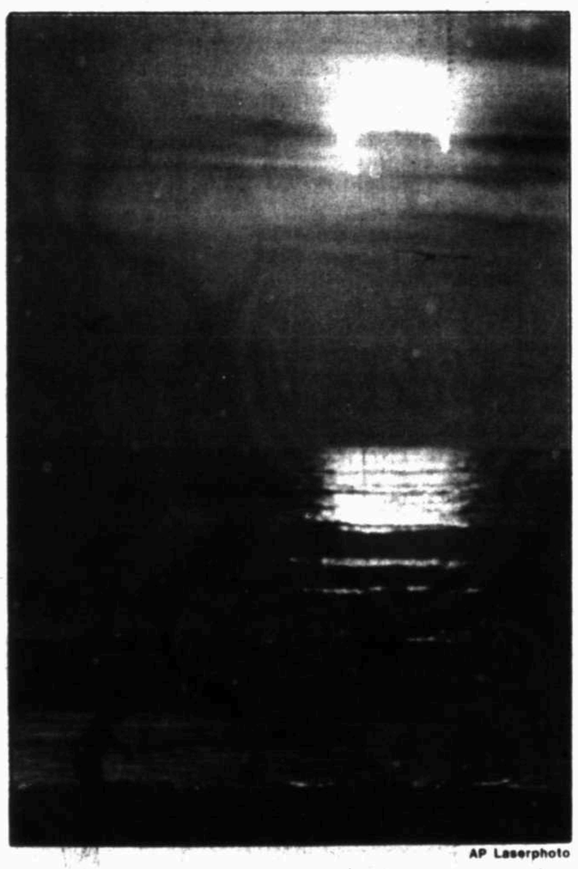

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The patriarch of the prominent Farenthold family in South Texas has renewed the search for his son James, who has been missing for nearly three years.

George Farenthold, 75, the prominent Belgian-born oilman long influential in South Texas politics, says other family members have neglected efforts to find his youngest son.

Farenthold, whose former wife, Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, once ran for Texas governor and was nominated for vice president at the 1972 Democratic National Convention, is offering a reward for information leading to his son's return.

Man seeks buyer for what he says is sprinkling of moon dust

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Hard times have driven Steve Goodman to try to sell his most valuable possession: a 4-inch strip of dirty tape, stuck on a piece of paper.

Goodman thinks the tape might fetch $100,000 or more.

The reason for the astronomical price? The brownish-grayish grit on the tape is moon dust — at least, that's what Goodman says.

"I figured if somebody was rich and wanted a conversation piece, that would be the thing for them," Goodman said in a recent interview. "I'm going to college and I'm flat broke."

Goodman's sample doesn't look like much. But his lawyer, Keith Hallam, noted: "If it were cocaine, it would put you in prison. It doesn't take very much of something to either put you in jail or be happy."

Hallam's words may be prophetic. It's illegal to own moon material, according to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Clearly, according to our regulations, lunar dust is government property," said Gary Tesch, NASA's deputy legal counsel. "In general, the sale or con-

Some Spaniards lament Santa's intrusion into holiday tradition

By Stephen Wade
Associated Press writer

MADRID, Spain — Draped over a fashionable shopping street, red and white lights form the image of Santa Claus — a modern intruder for purists hoping to retain the essence of Spain's ancient holiday traditions.

"It's an example of how Santa Claus is taking over," said Isabel Fernandez on Sunday, the eve of the traditional Epiphany holiday. "Today, children know more about Santa Claus than they do about our own tradition of the Three Kings."

Today, Spaniards exchange gifts and celebrate the Epiphany, a holiday that predates Christmas and marks the Three Kings' visit to the newborn Jesus Christ as described in the Bible. Epiphany, which means revelation, signifies the moment the Bible says Jesus was revealed as the Messiah to the Maji.

Traditionally, it is the major yuletide celebration in Spain and the only day of the season Spaniards give presents.

But in recent years, the commercial countdown to

Production down

MOSCOW — Oil production in Siberia fell by about 15 percent in 1991 and is expected to plunge to even lower levels this year, Soviet media reported Sunday. Yuri Lesovoi, deputy head of the Regional Economic Affairs Board in the oil-rich Tyumen region, said Siberian oil production declined by 50 million tons to 305 million tons in 1991. Production is expected to fall to about 260 million tons this year, the Russian Information Agency reported. Western Siberia was the largest oil-producing area in the former Soviet Union, accounting for about 60 percent of the country's total output.

Sitter charged

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — A babysitter was arrested for allegedly beating an infant to death with an electric pet-fur trimmer, authorities said. Jane Heidi Jensen, 28, was arrested Saturday for investigation of second-degree murder and felony child abuse in the death of 10-month-old Jacqueline Rosenfield on Dec. 31, Arapahoe County Sheriff Pat Sullivan said. Jensen, who provided child care in her suburban Denver home, was being held in lieu of $1 million bond. Jensen was grooming her poodle when the toddler began crying, and she picked up the child by the hair and beat her with the electric trimmer, investigators said. The child suffered two skull fractures and brain damage, and went into convulsions later that day, Sullivan said. Jensen maintains the baby was injured in a fall, Sullivan said.

Cloudy skies in forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-60s and south winds at 5 to 10 mph, increasing to 10 to 20 mph and gusty by noon. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a low in the lower 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be partly cloudy with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 37, Sunday's high reached 65 compared to the record high for that date of 78 set in 1948. The record low for that date is 13 set in 1970.

STATE

Cloudy skies gave way to the sun in West Texas Sunday as light drizzle continued in North and South Texas.

Skies remained mostly cloudy over pine belt of northeast Texas while patches of drizzle fell near Lufkin. But mostly sunny skies returned to Wichita Falls, Abilene and Stephenville.

Low pressure moved eastward across North Texas stretching from Gainesville to near Mineral Wells.

Temperatures stayed mostly in the 50s and 60s across the state.

In West Texas, skies were partly sunny to mostly sunny over the Far West and Panhandle.

Light rain and drizzle moved to a line from Victoria to College Station in South Texas.

The West Texas forecast shows mostly cloudy skies expected through tonight. Widely scattered showers are expected to move into the region with lows mainly in the 30s and 40s and highs in the 60s.

For South Texas, partly cloudy skies are predicted through tonight with possible showers late Tuesday. Highs today are forecast in the 60s and 70s lows in the 50s and 60s.

In North Texas, a partly cloudy today with highs in the 60s is expected. Lows in the 40s. Mostly cloudy Tuesday with a chance of rain. Highs in the 60s.

NATION

A cold front produced heavy rain and snow Sunday in California and the mountains of the West. Snow fell in the northern Plains, and rain fell from upstate New York to Maine.

In California, heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included 1¼ inches at Mount Wilson, nearly an inch at Fresno, three-quarters of an inch at Bakersfield and half an inch at Santa Barbara.

Winter storm warnings were posted for California's Sierra Nevada, as well as the mountains of Nevada, southern Utah and northern Ariaona.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included more than an inch at Bangor, Maine, nearly an inch at Caribou and Limestone, Maine, and half an inch at Houlton, Maine.

The low for the Lower 48 states as 8 below zero at Alamosa, Colo.

KOREA: Bush may cancel maneuvers implement the inspection and verification provisions of their Dec. 31 agreement.

"Prompt action by the North will make a new milestone on the path toward peace," the president said.

In his speech, Bush also nudged South Korea to lower its trade barriers to Western imports. "Korea must see clearly that prosperity in the new century ahead lies in open markets."

At the news conference, Bush praised Roh for his work to achieve reunification of the North and South — where 39,000 American troops remain nearly four decades after the end of the Korean War.

He noted rapid progress on that front, but called on North Korea to "fully implement its obligations" under the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

"If North Korea fulfills its obligations and takes steps to implement the inspection" agreement, "then President Roh and I are prepared to forego the Team Spirit obligation this year."

Team Spirit is the name given to the annual exercises that American and South Korean forces mount annually in the springtime. North Korea claims the exercises are an act of aggression and in the past has called off peace talks in protest.

Roh said "there are a lot of worries" about North Korean compliance with nuclear inspection. But he said North Korea has promised to allow international inspection and "in my view, they will faithfully follow through."

Bush is expected to press Japanese officials to lower trade barriers when he arrives in Tokyo, and he sidestepped a question on what results will be necessary to make his trip a success.

"They've already taken some steps on the economic front ... in terms of lowering interest rates," Bush said. He added, "I can guarantee you political opponents, no matter what is achieved, will say, 'Hey, you didn't jump high enough.'"

Bush was jabbed from afar earlier in the day when Democratic presidential contenders criticized him for not being tough enough with Japan.

Bush met earlier with Korean businessmen and noted at his news conference that he favors fair trade between the two countries.

Bush also was asked whether he would support Japan for a permanent seat on the United Nations Security Council — a distinction held only the United States, Russia, China, Great Britain and France.

He noted it would be extraordinarily difficult to change the United Nations charter, and there would be other claimants for seats on an expanded council.

Security issues top the agenda here, as U.S. intelligence agencies estimate North Korea could have a nuclear weapon within two years.

On Dec. 31, North Korea joined with South Korea in a pledge to ban nuclear weapons forever from the Korean Peninsula.

"These positive developments come at a critical moment of rising concern at a time when North Korea's pursuit of nuclear arms stands as the single greatest source of danger to peace in Northeast Asia," Bush said.

Earlier, Bush told Korean business leaders he is "determined to fight the waves of protection," as election-year pressures mount.

"A lot of this trip is about business and how we can do more creating opportunity in the United States, job opportunity" as well as business opportunity in South Korea, he said at a breakfast meeting with Korean and U.S. businessmen.

Bush said Koreans no doubt wonder what the U.S. election year might mean in terms of pressures on the administration to impose protectionist measures to help the troubled economy.

"I'm determined ... to fight the waves of protection that are almost inevitable when one's own economy is not doing well. The one way to make things do less well is to resort to protectionism."

Trade disputes, once a dominant feature of talks between Seoul and Washington, receded as South Korea has sharply cut its trade surplus with the United States, from $9 billion several years ago to about $1 billion. In fact, Seoul says it actually has a $1 billion deficit with Washington.

With the turnabout in North Korea's attitude about nuclear weapons, the administration said there was a chance for improved relations between Washington and Pyongyang, which have been almost nonexistent.

Yet, officials are leery about whether North Korea actually will allow inspections of its secretive nuclear facilities. U.S. intelligence believes North Korea might be capable of producing weapons-grade plutonium sometime this year and a nuclear weapon or year or so later.

U.S. concern over North Korea's nuclear program led to a suspension of plans for a second phase withdrawal of U.S. troops in 1993-95. Plans to reduce troops by 7,000 by the end of this year, to 36,000, are proceeding.

version of government property is a violation of criminal statute."

More than 80 percent of the 840 pounds of moon pebbles, soil and stones obtained during the six Apollo missions is in two vaults at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. Most of the rest was loaned to scientists for research.

Goodman's moon dust — if that's what it is — was a gift from his father 20 years ago when Edward B. Goodman Jr. worked for International Latex Corp., a Delaware company that made space suits for the Apollo missions. Steve Goodman said his late father was in charge of processing the Apollo 14 suits after the mission.

Edward Goodman supposedly ran the tape down one suit's pant leg, the way you would to remove lint.

He then stuck the tape on ILC letterhead and printed this message:

"Steve 22 April 1971

"A trace of moon dust removed from the LH leg section of pressure garment ASSY S-N A7L-073 worn by Astronaut Mitchell during his walk on the Apollo 14 mission.

"The suit came to us this morning for cleaning and I got the sample.

"Dad"

Several NASA officials said Goodman's story sounded plausible. And one person who worked for the space suit company that subcontracted with ILC during the Apollo era said it was common for uniform cleaners to take lunar dust samples.

"No one ever said it was absolutely illegal to keep the dust," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We were just throwing it away."

Goodman said he had all but forgotten about the moon dust until a few weeks ago when he and his mother were looking through his late father's papers. There, in a metal strong box, was an envelope from ILC containing the dusty tape.

Goodman, who at 31 quit work to return to college full time, decided the dust might be the solution to his financial worries.

Although he lives in Dover, Del., Goodman ran a classified ad in The Washington Post: "MOON DUST. ... This is the only private ownership in the world. Best offer over $20,000."

About a dozen people answered the ad, half from the news media, Goodman said. One of the respondents was Hallam, an Alexandria lawyer who says he and Goodman decided to join forces.

"This is a unique thing," Hallam said. "It's worth zero or it's worth $1 million. We have to test the market."

Michael Duke, a lunar rock expert at the Johnson Space Center, said the sample could be authenticated by looking at a few grains through a microscope.

John Dietrich, the lunar sample curator at the Space Center, said his department recently authenticated a sample of moon dust that had been bought at a flea market. NASA confiscated it.

Lewis Rinker, NASA's deputy inspector general, said the agency turns such cases over to the Justice Department for criminal enforcement.

Hallam said he doesn't believe Goodman was breaking any laws by possessing or trying to sell the dust.

GEORGIA: Leader predicts he'll win referendum sition newspapers and violating human rights since he was elected in May. A military council last week claimed control over the former Soviet republic of 5.4 million people.

Outside Tbilisi's train station — well away from the battle zone — about 1,500 Gamsakhurdia supporters held a rally in defiance of the military council's ban on demonstrations. Protesters held clenched fists above their heads, chanting "Down with the Junta!" The one-hour rally was peaceful.

A similar rally Friday ended in bloodshed after about 15 opposition gunmen killed at least two demonstrators. At least one man accused of shooting into the crowd was captured and interrogated at gunpoint.

"I fear for Georgia, not for myself," said Kacha Kochatadze, a law student who attended the Sunday rally. If the military council gains power, he added, "There will be a new Lebanon in Georgia."

Gamsakhurdia, 52, looking pale and worried but speaking calmly in English, said the rebels cut telephone lines to his stronghold and were attempting to block food and medicine. But he said they were not strong enough to storm the massive building.

"It is impossible for them. They boast every day, but they have no forces. Their main way of fighting is blockade and cutting communications," he said.

Asked how long he could hold out, Gamsakhurdia said he did not know. "I appeal to Western governments ... to help us because we are a constitutional government," he said.

Gamsakhurdia did not give a date for the proposed referendum on his leadership, but he said he was confident he would win a vote if rebels agree.

"If they speak about resignation of the president, it must solved by referendum. Yes, I am ready. But they do not want that, they know they will be defeated. They want to take power by violence," Gamsakhurdia said.

He proposed the United Nations help oversee the referendum, but noted that Georgia is not a U.N. member.

Georgia and the three Baltic states are the only former Soviet republics that have not joined the new Commonwealth of Independent States. Gamsakhurdia said he was studying whether to join.

SANTA: Three Kings the focus of Epiphany

(From 1A)

Dec. 25 and other Christmas symbols such as Santa Claus and decorated trees have competed against Epiphany. Many Spanish children now receive gifts on both days. For their parents, Christmas used to be a day for a family dinner and nothing else.

"The influence of American television, the American movies about Santa Claus, the store advertisements, the billboards," Ms. Fernandez said. "When did you ever see the Three Kings in a movie?"

In Greece and other Orthodox Christian areas, Epiphany is an important religious event and some sects celebrate Christmas on Jan. 6. Mainstream Greek Orthodox priests cast crucifixes into the sea and rivers to bless the waters on Epiphany, also known in some places as the 12th day of Christmas or Little Christmas.

"This holiday (Epiphany) never had a consumer angle," said Professor George Moustakis, a Greek theologian.

Outside influence in Spain increased dramatically following the death of dictator Francisco Franco in 1975, and the nation's entry into the European Community six years ago brought further changes.

The Jan. 6 holiday predates Christmas by about 100 years. The Roman Catholic church in the 4th century began celebrating Christ's birth on Dec. 25 and Jan. 6 was set to mark the visit of the Magi.

The concept of the familiar red-suited Santa first appeared in the 1800s in New York. The Christmas tree dates to medieval Germany.

Although Christians throughout the world celebrate Epiphany, Spain is the only European nation where the Dec. 25 holiday was not also a major holiday.

Italians tend to celebrate both days, telling children the good witch brings gifts to good kids and coal to bad ones on Jan. 6. In Rome's main square, children and parents did last-minute shopping and enjoyed festivities Sunday. In one booth, children could get their photo taken with Santa in a 1950s Fiat.

Portuguese mark the day with a glass of port wine and a slice of special cake.

But in Spain, Kings' Day is still tremendously popular. Parades are held Sunday night led by the Kings, represented by men painted in blackface.

"I don't see it (celebration of Epiphany) disappearing, but it could happen," said Ms. Fernandez. "The one advantage of Christmas is that kids have all of their school holiday to play with their toys. When the toys only came from the Three Kings, you wound up taking them to school the next day."

The country's largest parade takes place in Madrid, where children use upside down umbrellas to try to catch candy die," said Farenthold, who is recovering from a stroke in Corpus Christi. "Whatever it takes."

Farenthold has sought help from friends and a private investigator and has persuaded the Nueces County Sheriff's Office in Corpus Christi to take the case.

James Dougherty Farenthold, now 37 if he is still alive, is thought to have taken a plane out of San Antonio almost three years ago. There have been few clues about his whereabouts and George Farenthold said he has no better idea of where James is than when he began a sustained search six months ago.

The missing man's mother, who remains an outspoken political activist and practices law in Houston, said she doubts her son is alive.

"God knows I wish he were alive. God knows I wish he were well, and some days I think maybe that could be true. But that's the optimistic days," she said.

The disappearance was the latest in a long string of Farenthold family tragedies. James' twin brother, Vincent, died in 1960, at age 4, after a fall that proved fatal.

In 1972, George's son by his first marriage, Randolph Farenthold, was beaten and strangled, chained to a concrete block, and dumped into the Gulf of Mexico. A former business associate, against whom Farenthold had agreed to testify in a federal fraud case, was convicted of his murder more than four years later.

Israelis head for talks, predict Arabs will too

JERUSALEM — Israeli negotiators headed on Sunday night for another round of Middle East peace talks as senior officials here predicted that Arab delegations would also journey to Washington before long despite having delayed their travels to protest Israel's planned expulsion of 12 Palestinians from its occupied territories.

"They will come," said Health Minister Ehud Olmert, who is close to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. "Don't worry."

Other officials accused Palestinian leaders of using the expulsion order as an excuse to "blackmail the United States," as one of them put it, and thereby perhaps gain favorable concessions at the peace negotiations, scheduled to resume on Tuesday after a three-week hiatus.

"They'e trying to gain more American involvement and pressure on Israel, which they failed to get at the first Washington round," one official said. "They'll show up. They don't want the peace process to stop. They're the ones with the most to lose, and they understand it very well."

Despite the Israelis' public confidence, it seemed increasingly unlikely that the next round of talks would start on schedule. Even if they do get going, senior Israeli officials say that they expect the discussions to dwell, as they have thus far, on procedural matters, with substantive issues not coming until a later stage, when Israel hopes to shift the negotiations closer to the Middle East.

Although Palestinian leaders here have said that they also expect to show up in Washington sooner or later, they made no final decision on Sunday. And since Syria, Jordan, and Lebanon have also delayed their departures in a display of solidarity with the Palestinians, it meant that Israel's negotiating teams would land in Washington with no guarantees that they would eventually have someone sitting opposite them at the peace table.

There was no small paradox in that, for it was the Israelis who had refused to arrive at the appointed time last month for the first Washington round, leaving the Arab delegations to wait five days for them.

In Cairo today, Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said he and other Palestinians were still debating what to do. A Palestinian leader in East Jerusalem, Faisal Husseini, said a decision would await an expected debate on the announced deportations by the United Nations Security Council. Some Palestinians have called on the Council to condemn the Israeli action and to demand that it be reversed as violating provisions of the Geneva Convention.

But Israeli officials insisted that they would stand by the decision, made on Thursday, to expel 12 Palestinians accused of inciting terrorism in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. The officials acted a day after an ambush attack killed a Jewish settler in Gaza, the fourth Israeli to die in the last 10 weeks, each incident occurring just before the start of a new phase of the peace process.

U.S. role in Singapore stirs suspicions

SINGAPORE (AP) — Plans by the United States to expand its military presence in Singapore are stirring suspicions in the region.

President Bush won approval Saturday to shift to Singapore the U.S. Navy logistics command that's being evicted from the Philippines. Bush, who flew Sunday to South Korea, described the move as "symbolic of our commitment to the region."

Others reacted with less enthusiasm. In neighboring Malaysia, Foreign Minister Abdullah Ahmad Badawi said he hoped it would not lead to establishment of a permanent U.S. base.

In a separate development Saturday, more than 100 people demonstrated near the U.S. Embassy in Kuala Lumpur against the planned transfer.

Malaysia said previously that any facility that might be construed as permanent was unacceptable because it was contrary to ASEAN's goal of making Southeast Asia a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality.

ASEAN, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, includes Thailand, Brunei, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines.

Malaysia and Indonesia were troubled in mid-1989 when Singapore first offered to sign a deal to play host to the U.S. military, which had been visiting for years on an informal basis.

They saw the proposal as setting the stage for a shift in the regional balance of power, with tiny Singapore gaining much muscle and greater standing among its much larger neighbors.

Officials in Jakarta and Kuala Lumpur relaxed only after being assured that no new bases would be built and only a handful of U.S. personnel would be assigned to the island.

The World

Vice President Dan Quayle and Singapore's then-prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew, signed a "memorandum of understanding" in November 1990 that enables U.S. warships and planes to make greater use of existing bases in this city-state.

The U.S. Air Force is permitted to send jet fighters to Peyar Lebar Air Base several times a year on short-term training exercises. The Navy may increase the number and duration of ship visits for repairs and maintenance.

To support the increased activity, about 95 Navy personnel are based in Singapore. In addition, about 75 Air Force personnel rotate in with each deployment of planes, which have flown from Japan and South Korea.

Transfer of the logistics unit expands upon the existing agreement. It will add as many as 200 Navy personnel.

Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong said he agreed in principle to the transfer.

Kalugin report merits notice

Those are interesting comments by Retired Maj. Gen. Oleg Kalugin, a former KGB official for the Soviet Union, who said recently that Soviet agents questioned three American prisoners of war in Vietnam as recently as 1978. He also said that a dozen or so Americans were kept in Vietnam long after the war with the United States had ended.

Kalugin's statements to the Associated Press seem to confirm the contention by some Vietnam veterans, families of servicemen and others that Americans were held in Vietnam long after the war had concluded and potentially could be there today. In fact, some reports by independent observers have indicated in recent years that Americans are still alive in Vietnam, an indication that raises numerous questions about this government's actions — or lack of action — to gain the release of prisoners.

Many of those questions were raised in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," a 1990 book by Monika Jensen-Stevenson of CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" and her husband, William Stevenson. "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" contended that U.S. officials at the highest levels knew all along that American POWs were left behind in Vietnam at the end of the war. Even worse, the book contended, the U.S. government has regularly obstructed efforts of private citizens to discover the truth about that despicable decision.

An Associated Press article quoted Kalugin as saying, "There were at least three of them, as far as I remember. I would not remember their names. I recall simply that one was a naval officer, the other was from the CIA and the third I think was an Air Force pilot."

Kalugin also revealed the information about the POWs in a book that he has written. The U.S. Senate recently invited him to testify about his statements.

Kalugin's revelation lends even more credence to the nagging concern that the American people are not being told the whole story about the POWs. From all indications, the final chapter in this saga will be a blockbuster.

Gorbachev options could be profitable

If we were his agent, we'd sit down with Gorbachev at his dacha outside Moscow and lay his options on the table.

For instance:

■ The lecture circuit. If Norman Schwarzkopf can command a few thousand for a speech, then the sky's the limit for Gorbachev. All Schwarzkopf did was beat up a tinhorn dictator. Gorbachev whipped the ghosts of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin.

■ Consulting. General Motors and IBM would pay dearly for Gorbachev's answers to their own perestroika problems. Nobody restructured like Gorbachev restructured.

■ A book. New York publishers would drool over Gorbachev's memoirs. Books by Schwarzkopf and Lee Iacocca are generally limited to the U.S. market. Tales of Gorby would sell in every bookstore in the world.

■ Autograph signings. Don't laugh. Baseball players sign balls or bats at $50 a pop, and do hundreds in a day. Gorbachev could get lots more per autograph than some cheap .250 hitter.

■ An endowed chair at a major university. A bidding war between Yale and Harvard for the rights to Gorbachev's classroom lectures would be awesome. Throw in a couple of other wealthy universities — Stanford and Texas come to mind — and he'd need the economics faculty to balance his checkbook.

So have your lawyer do lunch with our lawyer, Mikhail. This could be the start of a beautiful 10 percent friendship.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Jan. 6, the sixth day of 1992. There are 360 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Jan. 6, 1942, the Pan American Airways Pacific Clipper arrived in New York after making the first round-the-world trip by a commercial airplane. The trip, which required more than 200 hours of flying time, began on Dec. 2, 1941.

On this date:

In 1412, according to tradition, Joan of Arc was born in Domremy.

In 1540, King Henry VIII of England married his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves. The marriage lasted six months.

In 1759, George Washington and Martha Dandridge Custis were married.

In 1838, Samuel Morse publicly demonstrated his telegraph for the first time in Morristown, N.J.

In 1912, New Mexico became the 47th state.

In 1919, the 26th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, died at his home in Oyster Bay, N.Y., at the age of 60.

In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt delivered his Four Freedoms speech in which he outlined four goals: freedom of speech and expression; the freedom of every person to worship God in his own way; freedom from want; freedom from fear.

In 1945, George Herbert Walker Bush married Barbara Pierce at the First Presbyterian Church in Rye, N.Y.

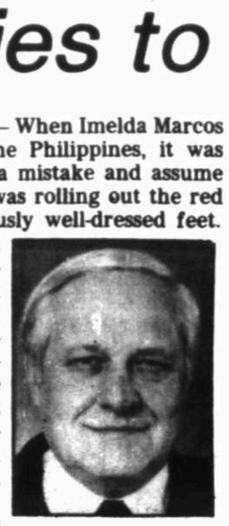

In 1967, 25 years ago, U.S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops launched Operation Deckhouse V, an offensive in the Mekong River delta.

Ten years ago: Truck driver William G. Bonin was convicted in Los Angeles as the "freeway killer" who tortured and murdered 10 young men and boys in Southern California.

U.S. ties to Marcos may finally fade

WASHINGTON — When Imelda Marcos returned to the Philippines, it was easy to make a mistake and assume that the White House was rolling out the red carpet for her notoriously well-dressed feet.

Anderson

Her much-publicized homecoming, code-named "Operation Beauty," was handled by two recently departed White House operatives who did advance work for President Bush. And she was accompanied by a squad of American bodyguards.

The connection was not lost on current White House officials who were nervous that it would send the wrong signal to the Philippine government. The Bush administration has worked hard to cement ties with Philippine President Corazon Aquino and wipe away old memories of America's allegiance to the regal and greedy Marcoses, Imelda and the late Ferdinand.

Imelda's homecoming was coordinated by Gordon James, who left the White House advance team last year to form his own public relations firm. James hired another White House veteran, Spencer Geissenger, to help with the logistics and the Philippine press.

Neither was on the government payroll when they accepted the Marcos assignment. But sources told our associate Jim Lynch that the White House didn't like the appearance of a connection. James still does some advance work and scheduling for the White House on a free-lance basis. Both he and Geissenger were considered to help run the advance work for Bush's Asian trip.

Judging by Imelda's splash, the two men know how to make the most out of a trip. Imelda had a $2,000-a-day suite at Manila's Plaza Hotel and 56 rooms for her entourage.

Although many of Imelda's loyalists cheered her return, she was not coming as a conquering heroine. She is awaiting trial in the Philippines on charges that she helped her late husband steal the country blind. She was acquitted on similar charges last summer in New York when she stood trial for allegedly stealing more than $200 million from the Philippine treasury, using most of it to buy jewels, art, buildings and shoes in the United States.

The White House has always had a soft spot for Imelda. She is one of the few first ladies on which the Central Intelligence Agency bothered to work up a full profile. Once a glamorous beauty queen, the ambitious Imelda charmed U.S. Presidents Nixon, Carter, Reagan and Bush. She still loves to drop their names.

In a conversation with a U.S. congressman in 1985, Imelda sketched a map of the world with the Philippines at the center, and then said that her "friend," Richard Nixon, once confided to her that the real reason the United States got into the Vietnam War was to protect the Philippines.

Imelda later bragged that Ronald Reagan advised her to tell her husband not to lift the onerous martial law in the Philippines. During Imelda's trial in New York, her attorney claimed that then-Vice President George Bush had advised the Marcoses to invest some of their overflowing cash reserves in U.S. real estate.

During the Marcoses' long reign, Imelda was a notorious shopaholic. While poverty raged in the Philippines, she junketed around the world on shopping sprees, demanding the royal treatment wherever she went. More than 100 advance people and press aides were sent to make sure the red carpet was ready for her 1982 visit to the United States.

When the grand dame herself arrived with 300 pieces of luggage, she checked into a $1,400-a-day suite in the Waldorf Astoria in New York.

James and his team made sure Imelda's return to the Philippines from exile in the United States had the same golden touch.

James told us that he has done some advance work for the White House on a volunteer basis since he left full-time government service. He characterized his work for Imelda as "nuts-and-bolts" details such as baggage and flight logistics. And he said he was unaware of any concerns at the White House about what his involvement might imply to the Aquino government.

Press pundits miss mark with Cuomo

I do not know the real reason Mario Cuomo decided not to seek the presidency. I don't believe it was the reason he cited — the New York State budget problem. Budget problems have never deterred any politician from self-aggrandizement.

Reese

What is interesting about Cuomo is that he was primarily the favorite of national political journalists. I never detected any groundswell of enthusiasm among the people of New York for Cuomo as governor, much less for Cuomo as president.

But national political journalists had pronounced him the top Democratic candidate. On what basis? On the basis of one speech, given at a long ago Democratic National Convention. On the basis of his ability to articulate criticism in the form of populist-style sympathy for the downtrodden on a few interview shows. On the basis of their conversations with each other.

From what I hear from folks in New York, Cuomo has been no prize as a governor, just as the folks in Arkansas, who know Gov. Bill Clinton best, practically gag at the idea of him in the White House.

National press pundits, however, don't seem to care anymore about the views of local folks outside their magic cities of New York, Washington, and Los Angeles than they do for reality in general. They seem to live inside their own heads. There is a lot of vacant space there.

If I seem harsh in this view of the national political press corps, it's because of its past record and its present lack of interest in doing anything better. American political campaigns are the most informationless campaigns in the democratic world, a sad rebuke of journalism in the land of the First Amendment.

If you want to know what the candidates' positions are, assuming they have positions, then you'll have to write their campaign headquarters. You'll likely never see them reported in detail nor see a candidate have an opportunity to state his positions on television. What you will get from the political press corps is a presidential campaign as a sports event. The coverage will be as superficial as a cousin's kiss at a wedding. These would-be presidents are treated as celebrities, rather than as serious men seeking a serious office.

One of the things you need to look for is who the insiders are in the different campaigns. That will tell you more about the candidates than their public posing and posturing.

For example, early in the 1976 campaign, when Jimmy Carter was presenting himself as a conservative Democrat, I noticed that civil rights attorney Morris Dees had raised several million dollars for Carter.

Well, voters may be fooled, but men who raise big campaign dollars are not. Dees, who is, to put it mildly, left of center, would not raise a cent for a conservative anything. I knew then that Carter was far more liberal than he was presenting himself.

I noticed, too, that Carter had been one of only two governors personally invited by David Rockefeller to be a member of the Trilateral Commission, a private globalist outfit started by Rockefeller. Well, Rockefeller does not hang out with outsiders or anti-establishment types, so I knew then that Carter's claim to be an outsider was just a lie.

In both cases, the information was in the public record but the national press continued to present Carter as an outsider and a small town peanut farmer (he was actually a broker and wealthier than Gerald Ford).

If by November, you wish to cast a ballot based on knowledge and critical thinking, then you should consider the presidential campaign as a research project in which you will have to do most of the work.

Look for facts and pay no attention to assessments and opinions expressed by journalists — including me. If you get the facts, you can make your own assessments. The national political press corps are usually wrong in theirs anyway.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

'Miracle Season' holds special place on shelf

One of my Christmas gifts was a copy of "Miracle Season," the story of the 1991 Atlanta Braves by I. J. Rosenberg, who covered the team for over 200 games, starting back with the first chirps of spring when you could have gotten astounding odds on Ted Turner's team finishing just about anywhere but its usual spot dead last.

Grizzard

I'm thankful for getting the book. I'm thankful it was written. Giving up the Braves that night in Minneapolis was a difficult parting for me.

But now I'll have this chronicle whenever the longing to relive that season of seasons comes over me.

The Soviet Union fell apart in 1991.

"We will bury you," Khrushchev once said.

Guess again, Nikita. It's the hammer and sickle that went to the grave.

There was a war on television in 1991 and we bagged Baghdad. A war on television? Sure.

But then came the Clarence Thomas hearings and the William Kennedy Smith rape trial. Pubic hair and pantyhose on television.

And Magic got AIDS and Wilt said he had sex with 20,000 different women, and then there was Pee-wee Herman.

But the Atlanta Braves went to the World Series. And now I've got a book that I can refer to when I still have my doubts it really happened.

I was in Honolulu and caught the first inning of a Reds-Braves game. The Reds led 6-0 after one inning in the furious last days of the pennant race against the Dodgers.

I boarded a plane and the next morning at five I was in Dallas waiting for another flight to Atlanta.

I picked up a newspaper Braves 7, Reds 6.

"I can't believe it!" I shouted aloud.

I looked up from my paper, people were staring at me.

"It's the Braves," I said. "Y'all wouldn't understand."

The night the Braves were behind Montreal 7-1, I had turned off my TV in disgust.

Thirty minutes later a friend called and said, "Do you believe the Braves?"

"What is it now, 15-1?" I asked.

"You're not watching," he asked me back. "They're ahead."

I almost broke my neck getting back to TV to see if this was some sort of hoax. It wasn't. The Braves came back and won.

I watched Atlanta win the National League Pennant over Pittsburgh on TV in the janitor's room at the Kennedy Center in Washington in the midst of a travel nightmare called a book tour.

"I can't believe," I said when the game was over. "The Braves are in the World Series."

"And you'll be going?" my schedule-maker asked.

"How could I miss it?" I answered.

He immediately went to the phone and cancelled about 300 interviews that were scheduled for me in the next 10 days.

Didn't matter. You don't miss the home team in the World Series for anything.

I must admit I gave up on the Braves 50 times during the season. But they wouldn't fold. Each time I left them for dead, they awakened, rallied and won.

"Miracle Season" will have a special place in my library. I'll read it and I'll read it and I'll reread it.

'91 and the Braves: Splendor on the grass. Drama and heroism.

And, now, the joy of remembrance.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

Vatican relations with Israel have warmed, cardinal says

JERUSALEM — Cardinal John O'Connor paid official calls on Sunday on Israel's president and prime minister, and said later that relations between the Vatican and Israel had warmed even though the question of full diplomatic ties remained a "complex, delicate one."

Israeli officials and representatives of American Jewish groups called the cardinal's visits significant, given the long chill in relations with the Holy See and the smoothness of his encounters on Sunday compared with the considerable tensions that marked his last journey here five years ago.

After meeting with the cardinal in his office for about an hour, President Chaim Herzog said it was clear to him that there was "a desire to improve the relationship now between the Vatican and Israel."

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, according to a spokesman, told O'Connor at a separate session in his office that he hoped that "normal relations" would be established since, he said, "Israel is a fact in this part of the world, and the Holy See is aware of this reality."

For his part, O'Connor, the archbishop of New York, emerged from his talk with Shamir saying that "we see a warming of relations" but adding that "there are many things that would have to be worked out."

The mere fact that he had visited the Israeli leaders in their offices was of itself an important development.

In January 1987, he had scheduled formal appointments with both men and then had to rescind them.

Ghali to ask Security Council to send 50 military observers to Yugoslavia

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — In an effort to encourage Yugoslavia's warring factions to respect their fragile cease-fire, the new United Nations secretary general, Boutros Ghali, will ask the Security Council today to send about 50 military observers there as quickly as possible.

But Ghali will not ask the Council to send a proposed 10,000-member peacekeeping force to Yugoslavia until he has clearer evidence that the truce that went into effect Friday continues in force and until the civilian leaders of Serbian-occupied regions of Croatia agree to cooperate with a peacekeeping operation, diplomats and other officials say.

The officials say the proposal, which the Security Council is expected to approve early this week, is intended to press all sides in the Yugoslav conflict to exercise restraint.

It builds on an earlier United Nations pact accepted by all the factions in Geneva on Nov. 28 and spells out exactly what the various armed forces may and may not do.

The United Nations mediator in Yugoslavia, former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, expressed satisfaction on Sunday that the cease-fire, the 15th in the civil war, appears to be holding reasonably well.

He said he would ask all the Yugoslav combatants to stick by this latest truce agreement.

Swiss reopen Tehran embassy

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss, who represent the United States in Iran, on Sunday reopened their embassy in Iran a week after shutting it because of a diplomatic row.

The Swiss charge d'affaires in Tehran, Walter Haffner, said the visa and foreign interests sections were operating normally, and Iranian police were allowing free access to the building.

Switzerland shut its embassy on Dec. 29 after Iranian authorities confiscated the passport of Swiss diplomat Christa Felder as she was about to leave the country on her honeymoon. The movement of other officials was also restricted.

In Bern, Swiss foreign ministry spokesman Christian Meuwly said that Ms. Felder left Iran on Sunday morning.

The Iranians apparently had confiscated Ms. Felder's passport because Swiss police arrested an Iranian national on charges of participating in last August's murder in France of Shahpour Bakhtiar, the late Shah of Iran's last prime minister.

The Iranian arrested in Switzerland, Zeyal Sarhadi, had been staying at Iran's embassy in Bern. Tehran charged that the arrest violated international agreements on diplomatic immunity.

Iraq again rejects call for accepting U.N. resolutions

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq on Sunday again rejected U.N. resolutions allowing Baghdad to sell oil worth $1.6 billion to buy food and medicines.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman as saying that U.N. Security Council resolutions 706 and 712 "severely undermine Iraq's sovereignty as a free country and a member of the United Nations."

On Friday, a U.S. State Department deputy spokesman, Richard Boucher, urged Iraq to "immediately and unconditionally accept" the resolutions, adopted in October.

The resolutions set a mechanism for selling $1.6 billion worth of Iraqi oil under U.N. supervision to buy humanitarian needs. Iraqis have been suffering from various shortages caused by an international embargo that was clamped after Saddam Hussein's August 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

INA, monitored in Cyprus, quoted the unidentified spokesman as saying the resolutions were "complicated, impractical and unfeasible.

Confused By Misinformation?

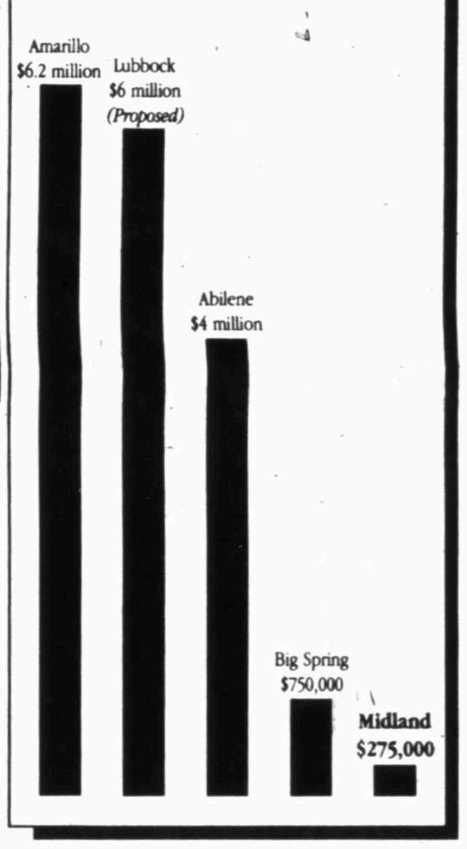

Here Are The Facts About The 1/4¢ Sales Tax For Economic Development

On January 18, Midlanders will finally have the opportunity to do something about our economy - attracting new industry and helping existing businesses expand. Don't allow misinformation to confuse the issue. Here are some important facts you need to know.

Why do we need a sales tax for economic development?

- To diversify Midland's economy - by providing financial help and incentives to new and existing industries.
- To broaden Midland's tax base - by increasing the number of businesses and employed Midlanders who in turn will become new taxpayers.
- To have every available tool to compete (and win!) against major West Texas cities who are serious about attracting new businesses at Midland's expense.
- To create jobs - every 100 jobs we help create adds approximately $6 million each year to our local economy!
- To create new customers for every retail business in Midland.

City Revenues for Economic Development
Per Year

How much will it cost?

- The Texas Comptroller's office estimates that a Midland family with an annual income of $25,000 will pay $20 per year.
- Food, medicine and medical care, gas, automobiles and other necessities are not subject to this tax
- The cost if we don't invest in our economy will be loss of jobs, decreasing property values and higher taxes paid by fewer employed and fixed-income Midlanders!
- The cost of a $10 item including tax will increase by 2½ pennies!

How will the funds be used and managed?

- Our City Council will appoint a five member unpaid board of directors with proven business qualifications to run a new economic development corporation.
- The capital raised will be used to assist new and existing employers involved in manufacturing, processing or distribution.
- Use of funds is limited by state law to the encouragement of economic development and creation of jobs.
- Retail businesses are not eligible for assistance.
- Examples of assistance:
  - loans for acquisition or construction of industrial facilities.
  - build for lease-back of industrial buildings and equipment.
  - investments in land, utilities, roads and transportation to sites.
  - investments facilities and equipment for education/training.

Who will benefit and how?

- Every Midlander...a strong, diverse Midland economy will create many opportunities:
  - managerial, administrative and technical jobs
  - increased real estate sales and property values
  - an expanded tax base and economic prosperity
  - increased retail sales
  - diversification and new industry

If we're going to keep Midland great, we've got to work together and create our own future.

If you have questions about the vital issues related to economic development or if you would like to offer your support, call 688-8500 or write Midlanders for Economic Opportunity at P.O. Box 1890, Midland, Texas 79702.

Clinton, Kerrey assail Bush on health care

■ More nation news/6C

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Two Democratic candidates for president Sunday criticized health-care proposals being developed by the Bush administration, saying they would not do enough to control health costs or to protect the millions of Americans who lack health insurance.

One of the Democrats, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, asserted that the administration did not have "the guts to go after the wasteful health-insurance system we've got, the wasteful health-care system we've got."

The other Democrat, Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, said the Republicans' idea of using tax credits to help people buy health insurance was "not a step in the right direction" because it did nothing to slow the rise in health costs. He said health costs were "growing at a fantastic rate."

The Commerce Department and the Department of Health and Human Services estimate that spending on health care will account for a record 14 percent of the gross national product in 1992. They estimate that such spending will reach $817 billion this year, up from an estimated total of $738 billion last year.

In his State of the Union Message in January 1990, President Bush said he was "committed to bring the staggering costs of health care under control." But since then health care prices have risen about twice as fast as the Consumer Price Index for all items.

Administration officials say that Bush, as part of his budget request to Congress later this month, is likely to recommend tax credits and other tax benefits to help individuals, families and small businesses buy health insurance.

Insurers say that health insurance premiums reflect the price of health care and have risen rapidly in recent years, so that fewer and fewer businesses can afford such insurance. Thirty-four million Americans have no health insurance.

Bush is also expected to propose new restrictions on various government benefits for the most affluent people, administration officials say.

Clinton said that in the absence of a comprehensive plan to control health costs, he would oppose Bush's proposal to increase Medicare premiums for high-income people.

Cargo ship loses five containers filled with arsenic

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Coast Guard on Sunday searched for five cargo containers loaded with arsenic that were lost at sea between New York City and Baltimore during the weekend's violent coastal storm.

Where and when the containers slid overboard wasn't known, the Coast Guard said. If the poison gets out near shore, it could cause problems, a Maryland official said.

A Coast Guard plane searched from Delaware Bay to New York City for the containers, which resemble tractor-trailer rigs and were stacked on deck.

The storm struck the Maryland and Delaware coasts early Saturday with winds of up to 70 mph.

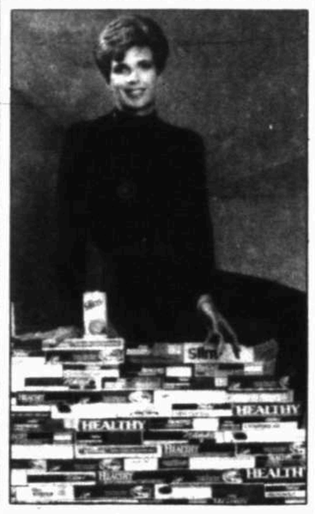

The 492-foot cargo ship Santa Clara left New York on Friday and arrived Saturday in Baltimore minus 21 of the containers. Five of them held a total of 540 drums of arsenic trioxide, a powdered chemical compound used as a pesticide and rat poison. The others were empty or held non-hazardous materials like cotton fiber, the Coast Guard said.

"Because the weather was so bad, they didn't even know they had a problem until they entered Delaware Bay," said Lt. Comm. Michael Kearney, a Coast Guard investigator.

Above, David picks out his son's clothes for school. Right, David and David Jr. eat at the church most Wednesday nights. The meals are inexpensive and that is one less meal David has to worry about.

David Jr. gets a piggy-back ride from his dad as a reward for brushing his teeth before going to bed.

Love enough for two

On a brisk early December evening, 32-year-old David Myrick proudly watches his 7-year-old son sing in a church Christmas play. He sits with his brother-in-law among numerous other beaming parents. The function is one of several he has attended over the holiday season and as he watches his only son, he knows he wouldn't trade his position as "Dad" for anything.

Life has dealt Myrick a fate being shared by an increasing number of men nationwide. Myrick is a single father who, unlike many of his fellow gender, decided not to shirk his fatherhood responsibilities.

Faced with the knowledge that his son's mother was not handling the responsibility of raising a young child, four years ago David decided to abandon his wild lifestyle and fight for custody of his son.

"I got a lawyer, signed some papers for full custody and got him," Myrick says. "I figured it was hard — that a woman had more rights — but it really wasn't. She was too busy partying to notice what was happening. It's been me and him since he was 3."

David Jr. playfully dances across the room. Company's here and it's time to show off.

DAD: Single father has close relationship with his son

(From 1B)

"Watch this," he says, moments before he cartwheels over the coffee table.

Myrick laughs and offers his son a somewhat tired smile.

The two have engineered a comraderie often never achieved in many father-son relationships.

"It's neat having a kid around," Myrick explains. "Sure it can be a pain when we're running late in the mornings or something, but overall, I like it. It's not a burden. Basically, the good things outweigh the difficulties."

Dedicated to ensuring David is raised in a family-oriented manner consistent with his own upbringing, the mild-mannered oilfield worker appears to possess an enormous amount of patience with his rather rambunctious, and indeed typical, son.

David hops across the living room practicing his somersaults and coffee table-hurdling.

His father shakes his head and lights a cigarette.

"Sometimes it's a hassle. Sometimes I think it would be easier raising him with two people," he says. "But if I had a wife, I would still do my part."

Once a self-described "major partyer," in 1987 he realized no one was taking adequate responsibility for the 3-year-old boy. He didn't want that, so he made a commitment to make a change. And when it became evident to him that the mother had no intentions of abandoning her lifestyle, he took her to court.

David notices his father is smoking. He springs from the floor and tries to grab the cigarette.

"You shouldn't do that," he says. "It's not good for you, ya know."

"Yeah, I know. Now get down, please. I'm trying to talk," counters his father.

He takes another puff.

Myrick and his son both seem to benefit from the other. In a sense, the closeness that is forced upon them by the confines of a one bedroom apartment symbolizes the support they give one another. Myrick avidly attends a support-group meeting each Thursday and David encourages his father's attendance.

"He needs to go because it helps him when he comes back," David says.

"He knows that I go there on Thursdays. He wants me to go," Myrick says. "For an hour an a half I can get away and talk about anything or just sit and listen to the others. I guess if I had a wife it's something I wouldn't need to do."

But Myrick confesses that he would be lost without the help of his older sister, Jana Little.

"I probably wouldn't be here right now without her," he admits. "I can always talk to her and my brother-in-law. They're real neat people. They stand behind me 100 percent. It would sure be rough without them."

Myrick, who works for a temporary service, even entrusts his finances to his sister.

"I'm not good at managing money, so she handles it. She gives me a set amount each week and says 'stretch it.' I guess it's sort of like getting an allowance, but I asked her to do it. And it sure has helped us manage better."

At the urging of his sister, Myrick and David began attending St. Paul's United Methodist Church two years ago. They've both joined Sunday school classes and regularly attend the church's Wednesday night meals.

"It's a good thing. I associate with members of my Sunday school class but they're all married," Myrick says. "But going is good for us both."

The two know it won't be easy alone but Myrick is in no hurry to find a wife or a mother for his son.

"You have to change a lot of things when you have a kid around. If it (dating) happens, it happens, but I'm not actively pursuing it right now," Myrick says. "The truth is — I really don't have time for it. But if the opportunity arises ..."

Myrick has spent the last two years disassembling submergeable pumps for Centrilift. He was hired through Manpower Temporary Services but he tries not to be troubled by the worries of nonexistent job security or the fact that his job doesn't provide him insurance.

"No use worrying about it. We use to have five temporaries out there and now we're down to two of us," he says. "There have been a lot of rumors of layoffs but so far, so good. Right now there's just enough work that if they let us go they would probably hurt, so I'll be all right."

"And if not, I'll just find another job," he says.

Ultimately he hopes to be hired full-time on the day shift.

"I could have gotten hired full-time but it was on the night shift. I said 'no' because I could never see David. I mean, it's a good job, but he means more to me than a job."

Little David looks up from his playing and smiles.

Myrick urges other single fathers interested in gaining custody of their children to "go for it."

"If you want your kid, there's no reason you shouldn't try to do it," Myrick says. "But you've got to realize there's a lot of responsibility and you should be ready to cut out a lot of the things you may have done before."

He pauses.

"But personally, I'd do it all over again."

DEAR ABBY

Recycled Christmas gift strikes recipient as trash

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I received a set of matched luggage as a Christmas gift from a close relative.

Van Buren

When I opened the packaging, the odor of stale cigarette smoke engulfed the room. On further inspection of the luggage, I discovered motel receipts and an empty miniature liquor bottle! The luggage had obviously been used.

I feel insulted and hurt that the giver assumed that I would gratefully accept a used cast-off as a gift.

My question to you: Should I write the traditional, gracious thank-you note? Or should I acknowledge the deception? — NO NAME OR CITY

DEAR NO NAME: A set of matched luggage is a splendid gift that should serve you well in the years to come. But it was thoughtless of the giver to have sent it to you without checking the interior. Make no mention of the fact that it obviously had been used, and acknowledge the gift with a gracious thank-you note.

DEAR ABBY: The writer who said "hugging is healthy" meant well, but listen to this: My husband, who is of average height and weight, was so happy to see his Tennessee cousin after five years, he grabbed her and gave her a big bear hug. She is a tall and well-built woman, but that hug broke two of her ribs!

On another occasion, my husband picked up my petite sister, who had arthritis in her legs, and carried her up the church steps for her son's wedding. His firm grip on her fractured three ribs!

My mother-in-law is a dear, affectionate woman who always gave me a hug when I went to visit. After surgery for a ruptured disc in my neck, I had to wear a brace for three months. The day after I took the brace off, she hugged me again, and I had to go for X-rays and tests. The doctor said my neck was sprained, but the fusion of the vertebrae was intact — but it would probably take me longer to get over the sprain than the surgery. My mother-in-law's method of hugging was to throw her arm around my neck, getting a vise grip on it — then squeeze!

Abby, tell your huggers to please be gentle with necks and ribs. — STILL DUCKING IN KENTUCKY

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Two-vehicle crash hospitalizes man

Staff Report

A Midland man was listed in stable condition late Sunday night following a two-vehicle accident at Wadley Avenue and Loop 250 Saturday night, officials said.

John H. Breedlove, 42, was traveling north on Loop 250 at about 9 p.m. when his 1991 Chevy Suburban collided with a 1973 Buick Electra driven by 48-year-old Robert Lewis Bolton of Midland, police said.

Breedlove's vehicle then veered to the left, struck the median and rolled.

Both men claimed to have the right-of-way but police investigations determined that Breedlove was traveling at a speed deemed unsafe because of the heavy fog conditions. Both men were wearing seatbelts, police said.

Bolton was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Police charge woman

A Midland man was shot allegedly by his wife Saturday morning while lying on a couch in their apartment at 427 B Neely, police said.

Danny Glenn White, 33, said he was fired at again as he ran from the residence at about 2:18 a.m. He suffered minor wounds to the elbow and right side, police reports said.

Sharon Green, 37, was charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Bond was set at $5,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

White was treated and released at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Woman robbed

A 65-year-old woman was robbed Saturday night while leaving an automatic teller machine, police said.

Manus Ruth Laverne, of Single Springs, Calif., was approached by a Hispanic male between 13- and 15-years-old, police said.

The boy held up a baseball bat, demanded money and took $11 before fleeing, according to reports. He was wearing blue jeans and an Army fatigue jacket, police said.

The location of the machine was not available, according to reports.

Skiing equipment stolen

Various items of water skiing and scuba equipment were stolen from a local supply store Saturday night, police said.

Employees of Falcon Marine, 1920 N. Loop 250 West, reported the burglary Sunday morning. Entry was gained by breaking glass in one of the business' doors, police said.

Boy robbed at mall

A 14-year-old Midland youth was robbed by four Hispanic males while standing outside Midland Park Mall Saturday night, police said.

Rusty Miller, 6100 S. CR 1183, told police he was waiting by the Food Court entrance at 8 p.m. when a vehicle pulled up and stopped beside him. Four males between the ages of 16- and 18-years-old got out of the vehicle and told Miller to give them his wallet or he would be beaten up, according to reports.

Miller gave them his wallet and the culprits fled, police said.

Lawmakers draw lines, but face challenges

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lawmakers have drawn their district lines, but those boundaries are not set in concrete.

The Legislature returns today facing legal and political challenges before their work is finished.

Republicans opposing a Senate redistricting measure are armed with numerous amendments and have threatened a filibuster, which is an attempt to try to talk a bill to death.

The Senate Saturday informally approved 19-12 a senatorial redistricting plan that was the result of a settlement agreement between minority plaintiffs and state Democratic leaders.

Today, the Senate will take up the measure again in an official vote, which is when the delay tactics could start.

Meanwhile, House members approved a new redistricting plan Saturday by an 84-61 vote.

Under the House redistricting plan, district boundaries imposed by a three-judge federal panel would be used for 1992. The judges, all appointed by Republican presidents, handed down new legislative maps in a lawsuit brought by Republicans.

Beginning in 1994, the bill would replace the federal judges' map with a plan almost identical to a settlement plan agreed to by a majority of House members and minority groups, which also sued the state to win greater representation.

Lawmakers are meeting in special session after state and federal courts rejected plans earlier passed by the Legislature for redrawing House and Senate districts.

The Legislature draws new district lines every 10 years after the federal census in order to adjust for population changes.

The House also approved a bill to delay the March 10 primaries for all offices until April 11 unless 1992 redistricting plans adopted by the Legislature in this special session are ordered into effect by a court by Jan. 17. The Senate has given a preliminary OK to similar legislation.

Senate Democratic leaders were dealt a setback Saturday when the U.S. Justice Department said its redistricting proposal, which had earlier gained Justice Department approval, would have to be studied again because of the more recent three-judge plan.

Democrats said the White House had directed the Justice Department to change directions.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and other Democratic party officials said that National Republican Committee member Ernest Angelo of Midland had contacted Bush about redistricting.

Dam releases subside; flooding continues

LIBERTY (AP) — Authorities were releasing less water Sunday from a dam on the rain-swollen Trinity River, but people in low-lying areas downstream were told to expect several more days of flooding.

"It's going slow, if it's going at all," said Dorothy Patterson, 68, who since Dec. 26 has been staying with her daughter, June Amaya, and her great-grandson at a shelter in Liberty, about 50 miles northwest of Houston.

"I was determined I was going to stay in my home until Christmas, but after that we had to get out," Ms. Amaya said. By Sunday, she said her home and her mother's in Hardin were under water for the third time in two years.

"It'll work out. It always does," Ms. Amaya said.

The Trinity River Authority on Saturday began curtailing the release from Lake Livingston Dam, about 50 miles upstream from Liberty. On Sunday, output was about 80,000 cubic feet per second, still five to six times the normal flow from the dam, said authority spokesman Forest Powell.

"The lake has leveled off, but we've still got a lot of water coming down from Dallas and we've still got flooded areas north of us," Powell said.

Officials said the Trinity should begin receding today or Tuesday, but said flooding would continue for several days.

Rain that drenched Texas before Christmas caused widespread flooding along the Brazos, Colorado and Trinity rivers, taking at least 15 lives and causing millions of dollars in damage. No deaths have been reported in the past two weeks.

Twenty-four Texas counties have been declared federal disaster areas, and Gov. Ann Richards said last Friday that at least 2,500 homes had been flooded.

At Liberty, the Trinity was at 29.8 feet, 5.8 feet above flood stage. Officials said at least 180 homes were flooded in Liberty County.

Twenty-seven Liberty-area residents spent Saturday night in a shelter set up in a hardware store.

Crash of experimental plane kills two

SAN MARCOS — Investigators on Sunday were rummaging through the wreckage of a single-engine airplane that crashed and killed two men.

The experimental airplane crashed and burned Saturday night, killing pilot Allen Campbell, age unavailable, and Brendan Sandiford, 42, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox. Both were from San Antonio.

Both men were pronounced dead at the scene.

The plane went down about 5 p.m. Saturday in a muddy field near the intersection of Interstate 35 and Posey Road, said Roger Myers, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

The plane was hangared at New Braunfels Municipal Airport, where it had taken off Saturday afternoon.

FAA releases impact study of DFW airport

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is expected to release an environmental impact study today that could fuel three cities' opposition to a $3.5 billion expansion at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The Final Environmental Impact Statement, expected to be more than 2,000 pages, will describe what effect the proposed two-runway expansion would have on nearby Grapevine, Euless and Irving.

The cities, which have been fighting airport expansion since 1989, fear that the runways will cause an exodus of residents and millions of tax dollars.

The FAA administrator will either approve or reject the environmental impact statement after a 30-day waiting period. Attorneys for the three cities say they'll immediately file a federal lawsuit if the FAA approves the study.

A lawsuit would attack the impact statement while challenging the expansion on grounds that it would not pass other standards mandated by federal laws, attorneys said.

"I don't think that they can both produce an adequate EIS (Environmental Impact Statement) and at the same time make the kinds of findings which the law would require in a substantive way before they can approve the project," said Eliot Cutler, a lead attorney for the cities.

"We've said all along that we think we've met the requirements of the federal laws in putting the EIS together," said airport Executive Director Vernell Sturns. "I don't know of anything yet that would change that."

The airport released a preliminary study 18 months ago, but it was assailed by the cities and some federal agencies as incomplete.

Critics said the study addressed only potential side effects of the two runways, leaving out other aspects of expansion such as new terminals and parking lots. They also said the study failed to analyze increased noise levels.

Cutler said he doesn't expect the FAA study to be much different.

"I anticipate they'll do a better job ... than they did with the draft," Cutler said. "I also don't expect they will come close to solving the problems that plagued the draft."

Airport planning director Jeff Fegan said he expects the report's final version to support expansion.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices settled mixed Friday as traders took profits in choppy dealings.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February, which rose 37 cents on Thursday, fell 26 cents to settle at $19.23 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Other contract months also declined.

Crude prices surged in the early going, with the near-term contract trading as high as $19.78 a barrel before traders moved in to take profits, said Richard Redoglia, a vice president at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures.

Technical selling sent prices sharply lower before crude moderated near the close.

Natural gas prices continued to be undermined by mild winter temperatures and ample supply. Contracts for delivery in February fell .6 cent to settle at $1.299 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar climbs

NEW YORK — The dollar rose broadly in foreign-exchange dealings Friday, strengthened by new weakness in the German mark and speculation that the U.S. currency's recent weakness may be overdone.

By the time trading concluded in New York the dollar fetched 124.65 yen, up from 124.60 late Thursday.

In New York the dollar fetched 1.5435 marks, up from 1.5315 Thursday.

Investor rights

WASHINGTON — Investors in mutual funds will have the same voting rights as corporate shareholders under a rules change approved by federal securities regulators.

The Securities and Exchange Commission voted Friday to require banks and brokers that oversee their clients' investments, to forward proxy materials and other information to their clients for consideration.

Investors who own stock in publicly traded companies have to vote their shares or designate a proxy to cast their absentee vote.

More women climbing real estate ladder

N.Y. Times News Service

When Dorcas T. Helfant took her first job selling homes in a small real estate office in Portsmouth, Va., in the mid-1960s, she was the only person on the sales team who wore a skirt.

"I was surrounded by men in my first sales job," said Mrs. Helfant, speaking from the vantage point of nearly 25 years in the residential brokerage business.

Today she has plenty of female company. Nearly half of those working in residential sales are women. In the last decade, the ranks of women in brokering, ownership and management positions have swelled.

Now her election as the first woman to head the 83-year-old National Association of Realtors, an 800,000-member organization, is coming as a symbol of the rise of women to leadership positions as the heads of real-estate businesses.

Mrs. Helfant owns a brokerage business in Virginia Beach, Va. She took office as president of the realtors' association in November.

"Women have been doing well in residential sales for a long time," said Mrs. Helfant. "But one of the changes I have seen is that we do not view sales as just a way to make money; many more women have an entrepreneurial attitude about the business."

It took changes in attitudes about women in business, as well as the statutory clout of civil rights legislation, for women to start moving into ownership and management in significant numbers.

Women leveled the playing field in sales by proving they were as capable as their male colleagues at handling the technical, financial and legal aspects of real estate transactions.

Despite the gains, the market's tumble of the last few years has left many companies, including those owned by women, treading water. Some offices have survived by cutting the sizes of their sales and management staffs, others by diversifying the services they offer.

In real estate sales the first rung of the ladder is that of sales agent. Licenses are required for anyone working as a sales agent, which is the stepping stone to brokering.

Brokers are professionals who have taken additional course work and passed more stringent state licensing requirements. A broker's license is required of anyone who handles a real estate transaction or owns a real estate sales business. But but not all of the people who hold brokers' licenses use them to maintain businesses.

Surveys by the NAR of its members show women making numerical as well as proportionate gains in sales and brokering. In 1975, fewer than 4 out of 10 full-time sales agents were women. By 1987, the date of the most recent survey, two-thirds of the people working full-time as sales agents were women.

Between 1975 and 1987, the proportion of member women working as brokers rose from 18 percent to more than 36 percent of the NAR's membership. In 1975, women brokers earned 60 percent of what men did — $15,000, compared to $25,000. By 1987, women were earning 75 percent of what men did. The average was $30,000 for women to $40,000 for men.

Auto sales decrease

■ U.S. automakers are expected to report that 1991 was the worst year since 1983 for the sale of new cars and light trucks.

By Frederick Standish
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — Automakers prepared to report today that 1991 was the worst year for new car and light truck sales in the United States since 1983. And there's a sense of deja vu in the cyclical industry.

As the battered auto industry left the Japanese year of the sheep and entered the year of the monkey, the U.S. economy was in the ditch, consumer confidence was dragging and governmental trade sabers were rattling.

In all, it was expected that automakers today would report sales of about 12.3 million new vehicles in the United States last year, down from 13.8 million the year before. The Honda Accord was virtually certain to be the best-selling car in 1991, as it was the two previous years.

Back in 1983, 11.7 million new vehicles were sold, said the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association; that same year, Ward's Automotive Yearbook carried a headline that seems timely nine years later:

"Protectionist Fever Sweeps Washington Amid Efforts to Spark Economic Recovery."

Legislation is pending in Congress that would establish trade barriers against Japanese automotive imports if a timetable for reducing the $41 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan is not met.

Analysts contacted last week forecast a modest upturn in market share held by General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. during 1992. Overall sales should reach 13.3 million to 13.7 million, analysts and auto executives have said.

"I think we'll take some share from some of the European players," said auto analyst Joseph Phillippi of Shearson Lehman Brothers in New York City. "I think we'll take some share from the smaller Japanese players.

"But it's not going to be easy. None of these guys are going to roll over and play dead for you. And we're only talking about tenths (of a percentage point)."

Through the first 11 months of 1991, the Big Three held 70.4 percent of the U.S. market — down 1.4 percentage points from a year before — and Japanese automakers had 26.8 percent, up 1.9 points from 1990.

The Big Three "are going to hold share in 1992 and the reason is primarily political," said analyst John Casesa of Wertheim Schroder & Co. of New York.

Analysts said part of a reason for a halt in the slide of Big Three market share stems from increasing confidence that GM, Ford and Chrysler vehicle quality has improved dramatically.

But they said Detroit automakers had better be ready to prove it; otherwise, customers who abandon their Japanese vehicles and try a Big Three product will head right back to an import in a few years.

"There are a lot of the yuppie types who are saying, 'I'll give these guys a chance, but don't screw me this time,'" Phillippi said.

Japan says it will relax inspection standards for imported vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will relax inspection standards for imported cars to boost the sale of U.S. vehicles, reports said Sunday, two days before President Bush was to arrive with demands for more open Japanese markets.

Kyodo News Service said the changes would meet about 80 percent of U.S. requests for easing standards for imported cars. It said they would be listed in an "action plan" to be released by Bush and Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa after talks this week.

Under the plan, Japan will accept the results of U.S. tests on imported cars' brakes; and international inspection of headrests, heat sensors, side lights and front blinkers, Kyodo said. Currently, those items must be retested in Japan on imported cars.

Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, told ABC television that he was not aware Japan had made such promises.

"If the document is already written, if the fix is in, I haven't seen it," he said from Seoul, where Bush was visiting Sunday. "What we want is an open market for U.S. automobiles and for U.S. auto spare parts."

Bush arrives Tuesday in Japan with 18 U.S. executives including the chairmen of the "Big Three" automakers, and is expected to pressure Japan to lower its trade barriers. He has said more sales overseas mean more jobs in America.

Autos and auto parts account for about three-quarters of Japan's $41 billion surplus in trade with the United States last year.

American cars account for only 0.4 percent of the market in Japan, compared with the 30-percent share of the United States vehicle market captured by Japanese manufacturers.

In other developments:

■ Toyota will increase its purchases of General Motors Corp. parts by up to four times within the next few years and start distributing GM cars here.

■ Mazda Motor Co. will boost sales of cars made by Ford Motor Corp. from 1,500 last year to 4,000 this year, the Yomiuri Shimbun daily said.

■ Honda Motor Co. will boost sales of Chrysler Corp.'s Jeep model, while Mitsubishi Motors Corp. is considering importing passenger cars it will produce jointly with Chrysler, the Yomiuri said.

Japanese auto makers already have announced plans to nearly double purchases of U.S. auto parts.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Utility's stock should weather downturn

By Bill Doyle

Q. With interest rates falling, utility stocks seem to be attractive. Some gas and electric utility companies offer their customers, of which I am one, the opportunity to purchase stock directly from the company. By doing this, I would save a broker's commission and could have the dividends, currently yielding 7.5 percent, reinvested to buy more shares.

Doyle

Two things bother me about this stock. The price-earnings (P-E) ratio seems high at 25-to-one. Also, how will the dividend hold up in these hard times? People already are finding it difficult to pay their utility bills.

A. The rough economic time our nation currently is struggling through shouldn't hurt that utility or others in the electric, gas, telephone and water industries too badly. Although it's a strain for some families to find the money for utility bills — and some don't — the vast majority do pay.

While these are tough times, things are not nearly as bad as in the Depression of the 1930s, which the utility industry survived, although many electric and gas company cut dividends and/or were drastically reorganized. (Back in those days, my father's admonition to turn off lights went: "Do you own stock in Public Service?")

Your major concern about the stock you are considering should be its financial condition. With a 7.5 percent yield and a P-E ratio of 25-to-one, the company is paying out more in dividends than it is earning in operating profits. That can't go on much longer, unless the company has a fat cushion of cash tucked away.

Do some more study on that company by reading its reports to stockholders and financial manuals at public library. Check with several brokerage firms to find out what research reports are available.

Based on its P-E ratio and yield, that stock is high-priced in comparison to the Dow Jones utility average. The 15 stocks used to compile that measurement of utility stock prices currently have an average P-E ratio of 15.6-to-one and an average yield of 6.8 percent.

Q. I keep hearing people on radio and television talking about 1992 price-earnings ratios. How can they possibly know what those figures will be?

A. They can't. They are projecting P-E numbers, based on a stock's current price and a forecast of 1992 earnings. P-E, of course, is the relationship between a stock's price and its earnings per share.

If XYZ stock is trading at $16 and earned $1 per share during the last 12 months for which earnings were reported, XYZ's P-E ratio is 16-to-one. Expressed another way, XYZ is selling at 16 times earnings.

Instead of basing P-Es on reported earnings, some brokers and other prognosticators use estimated future earnings in their calculations. The estimated earnings very often are way off the mark and have the earmarks of con jobs. When estimated earnings are higher, a stock's P-E ratio is lower. That appears to make the stock a more attractive buy.

Q. How do I learn the interest yield of a stock I am thinking about purchasing?

A. For openers, stocks do not pay interest. They pay dividends. Interest is paid on debt securities, such as bonds, and is an obligation. Dividends are paid on stocks, which represent ownership in a corporation and are the owners' share of the company's earnings.

Current yield is arrived at by dividing dividends paid on a share of stock over the past 12 months by that stock's market price. If XYZ stock pays a 20-cent dividend every three months, for a 80-cent annual rate, and XYZ is trading at $16, it's current yield is 5 percent.

Who wants it?

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, who were unable to lure Bill Parcells from the television studio to the sidelines, are still looking for a coach two weeks after firing Lindy Infante.

San Francisco 49ers offensive coordinator Mike Holmgren has interviewed for the job and is considered one of the top candidates, along with former Seattle coach Chuck Knox.

By week's end, Holmgren is scheduled to have been interviewed by all six NFL teams with vacancies. In addition to the Packers, Holmgren has interviewed with the Los Angeles Rams and Pittsburgh Steelers.

He's scheduled for interviews with Indianapolis and Minnesota by Thursday, according to his agent Bob LaMonte. Another report says the 43-year-old Holmgren also will talk with Tampa Bay on Tuesday.

Holmgren was hired by the 49ers as quarterbacks coach in 1986 and was promoted to offensive coordinator in 1989 when George Seifert replaced Bill Walsh as head coach.

"I don't think cold weather or snow will have an effect," 49ers offensive line coach Bobb McKittrick said of Holmgren's decision.

Knox, 60, is considered a strong candidate to rejoin the Rams, who gave him his first NFL head coaching job in 1973. He led the Rams to five straight division titles before leaving for Buffalo in 1978. He also stayed with the Bills for five years before going to Seattle in 1983.

Know, who has a 171-114-1 record in 19 years as a head coach, resigned after the Seahawks went 7-9.

"I know he's interested in that (Green Bay) job," said John Becker, the Seahawks' offensive coordinator under Knox.

Playoff times

NEW YORK (AP) — The AFC championship game next Sunday at Buffalo between Denver and the Bills will start at 11:30 a.m. CST, the NFL said Sunday and will be televised on NBC.

Whoa, Cowboy! It's a Lion

■ A quarterback from nowhere takes Detroit to within one game of the Super Bowl with a 38-6 victory over Dallas.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. — Nearly 80,000 fans left the Pontiac Silverdome with the same words on their lips: "I saw it but I don't believe it."

Believe it.

Erik Kramer, the quarterback from nowhere, took the Detroit Lions, the team from nowhere, to within one victory of the Super Bowl in a game that even he conceded "was unimaginable for me."

Kramer, who replaced the injured Rodney Peete at midseason, passed for 341 yards and three touchdowns Sunday as the Detroit Lions, who hadn't won a playoff game in 34 years, beat the Dallas Cowboys 38-6 to advance to the NFC title game. It was Detroit's seventh straight win and ended a six-game Dallas win streak.

"Today was just something special," Kramer said. "From the first series on I was in that zone everyone hopes and dreams he can be in."

He was helped by a Dallas defense that was stacked to stop Barry Sanders, who was limited to 22 yards in 11 carries until he broke lose for a 47-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter for the final Detroit score.

He was also egged on by the Cowboys, who taunted him, particularly early in the game.

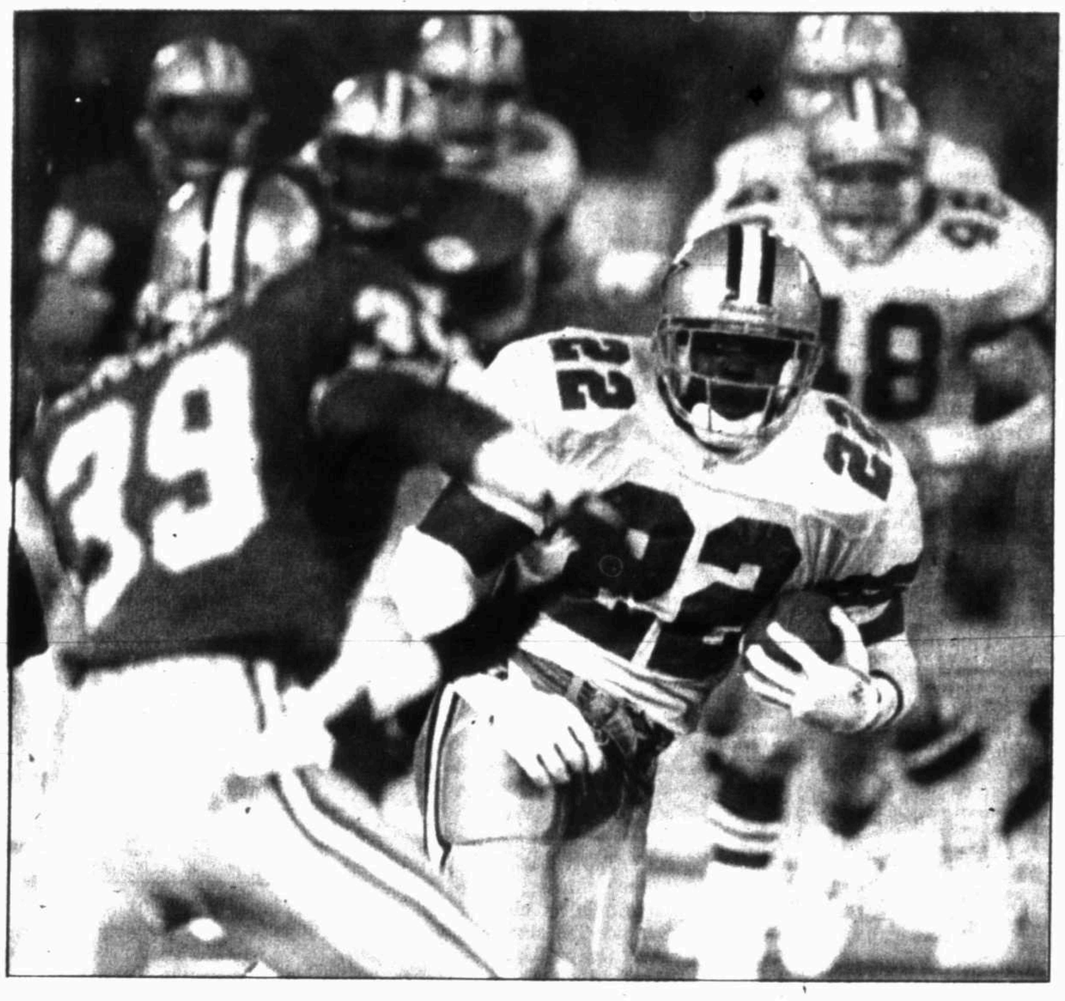

"I took it as a challenge. They kind of called me out," Kramer said. "They didn't have too much respect for me. They said 'This is the guy who's got to beat us.'"

So beat them he did, leading the Lions to their ninth win without a loss in the Silverdome. The Lions, the only NFL team to go unbeaten at home, won the NFC Central title with a 12-4 record. It was Detroit's first winning season since 1983.

This victory sends the the Lions to a far less friendly place for next Sunday's NFC title game — RFK Stadium in Washington. That's where they lost the season opener 45-0 to the Redskins in a game they played without Sanders and with Kramer sitting on the bench.

On this Sunday, the quarterback who first played in the NFL as a replacement player for Atlanta in the 1987 strike and Dallas running back Emmitt Smith (22) finds no running room Sunday against the ever pressent defense of the Detroit Lions. Detroit eliminated the Cowboys from playoffs.

Cowboys looking up after worst loss of season

By Jim Irwin
Associated Press Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. — Flat on their backs after their worst loss of the season, the Dallas Cowboys could look nowhere but up.

"Somebody had to lose the game. We didn't play well, and it was us," running back Emmitt Smith said after the Detroit Lions rolled over Dallas 38-6 on Sunday to advance to the NFC championship game.

"Now we have a taste of the playoffs," said Smith, the NFL rushing champion who gained 80 yards on 15 carries against the Lions. "We know what it takes to get there."

Dallas (12-6) had what it took a week earlier in knocking off Chicago 17-13 in a first-round playoff game. On Sunday, the Cowboys converted two first-half drives into field goals and nothing more.

"We should have found a way to get it done," said quarterback Steve Beuerlein, whose inability to get Dallas into the end zone prompted coach Jimmy Johnson to replace him with Troy Aikman late in the first half.

"We were moving the ball," said Beuerlein, who completed seven of 13 passes for 91 yards and an interception that cornerback Melvin Jenkins returned for a touchdown. "We just were not getting the ball into the end zone. That was the difference."

Aikman completed 11 of 16 passes for 114 yards and one interception. He also fumbled two snaps that killed second-half drives.

"We were looking for a spark at that stage and we decided to stay with him in the second half," Johnson said of Aikman.

"I don't think I gave us much of a spark," Aikman said. "They're not the kind of defense that gives up a lot of points anyway. And when we got behind as much as we did, it took away our running game."

Bills pay off Kansas City debt

■ Buffalo lost to the Chiefs 33-6 earlier this year, but that is ancient history after Sunday.

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Everyone knows about their atomic offense. Guess what — the Buffalo Bills can dominate with defense, too.

Sure, they routed the Kansas Ciy Chiefs 37-14 on Sunday to move back into the AFC championship game. And Jim Kelly threw for three touchdowns and Thurman Thomas, the NFL's most valuable player, rushed for 100 yards.

But it was defense that set the tone. Sparked by Kirby Jackson's two interceptions and strong line play by Cornelius Bennett and Jeff Wright, the Bills yielded just 213 yards. That was in sharp contrast with the Bills' No. 27 league ranking in total defense.

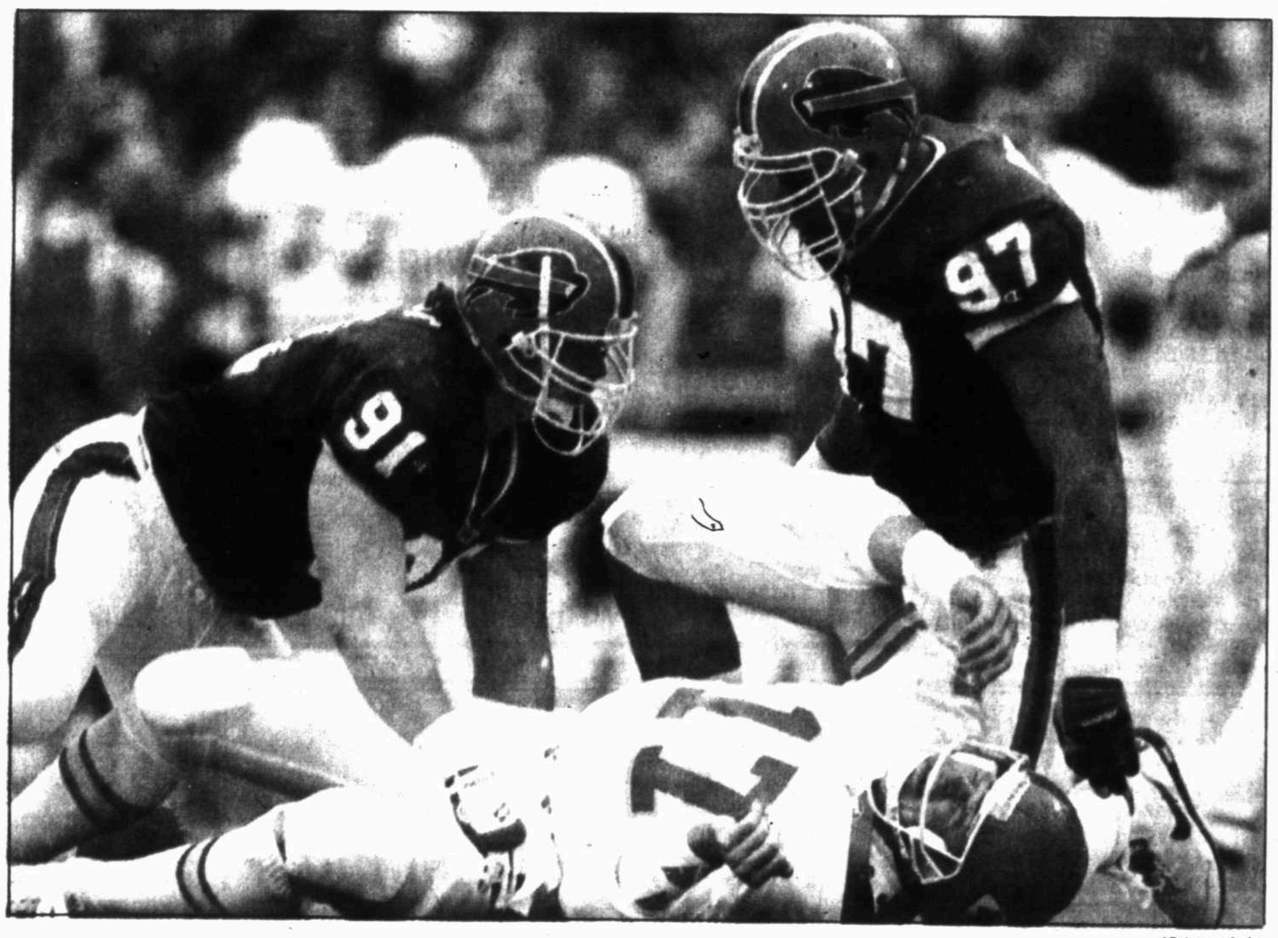

"Rankings are ridiculous," Wright said. "People tell you the defense is worth nothing. We showed what we can do today. We made our statement on the field.

"We're tired of hearing how we had the second from last defense. They were loaded for bear and we stopped them."

Stopped them dead.

Kansas City, which routed Buffalo 33-6 this season and gained 397 yards in the process, never was in the game. Steve DeBerg completed only five passes for 29 yards before leaving midway through

Lee Rebels rip Artesia

Staff Report

CLOVIS, N.M. — Midland Lee made its last non-conference basketball outing count with an 82-71 victory over Artesia, N.M., here Saturday, but it may have been an expensive victory.

Martin Lattibeaudiere pulled a groin muscle and Henry Stewart hurt his back on a dunk attempt and both are "doubtful" for Tuesday's 8 p.m. District 4-5A opener with cross town rival Midland High, according to Lee coach Jon House.

Still, Lee got 23 points from Wayne Wilson in the victory. And David Wilson scored 20 of his 22 points in the second half against 6-2 Artesia. Jeramy Skaggs had 10 points.

Lattibeaudiere scored only four points and fouled out of the game while Stewart had six points.

Lee will enter district play with a 12-9 record as the Rebels have already won more games than the 11 victories posted all of last season.

UTEP sinks Tech, 68-62

EL PASO (AP) — Prince Stewart and Ralph Davis each scored 16 points Sunday, and the Texas-El Paso Miners held off the scrappy Texas Tech Red Raiders 68-62.

Stewart and Johnny Melvin, who scored 11 points, each hit a pair of free throws in the final minute to hold off the Red Raiders and improve to 10-1 heading into Western Athletic Conference play.

SWC

Tech, of the Southwest Conference, fell to 6-4.

Texas Tech's Bryant Moore stole an inbounds pass from Roy Howard with 18 seconds remaining and tossed it in to pull the Red Raiders within 64-60, capping a comeback from a 49-30 deficit with 10:56 left.

But after a timeout, a lob pass over the Tech press gave UTEP's Davis an easy layup for a six-point lead.

Tech's Lance Hughes and Will Flemons sparked the comeback, combining for 25 of the Red Raiders' final 32 points.

Flemons led all scorers with 28 points, a career-high. Hughes added 15.

UTEP jumped out to a 33-20 halftime lead, led by Stewart, who scored all of his 12 first-half points in the final 5:30 before intermission.

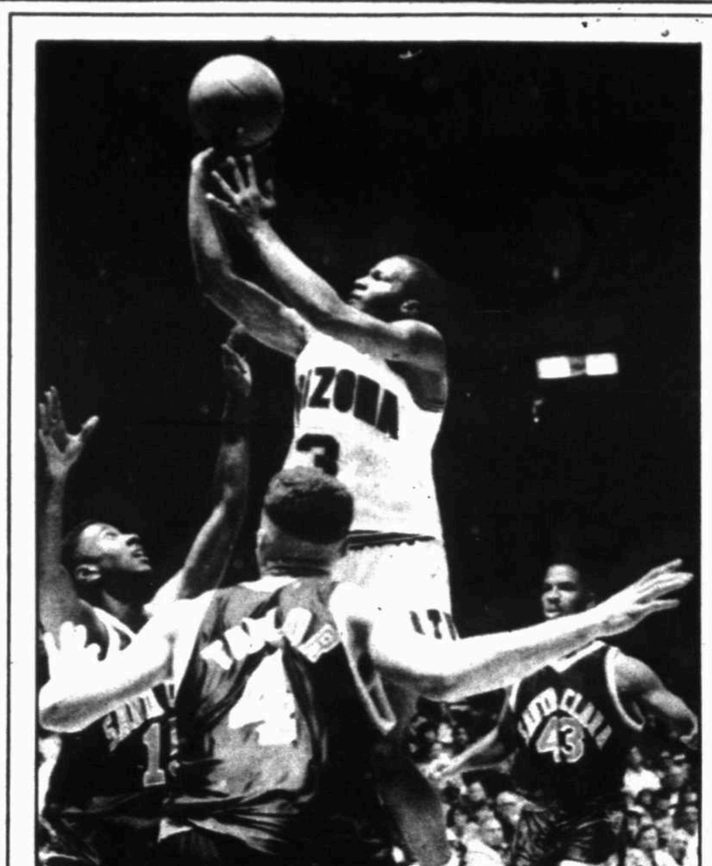

Stewart scored seven straight points as the Miners built a 19-14 lead to 26-17.

Arizona runs home streak to 70 straight

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Arizona's home winning streak was in any doubt for about 25 minutes Sunday. The sixth-ranked Wildcats then pulled away to a 79-60 victory over Santa Clara, their 70th straight at McKale Center.

Sean Rooks scored 21 points for Arizona (9-1), which turned a 49-46 lead with 13:24 to play into another home win with a 10-0 run highlighted by two 3-pointers by reserve guard Damon Stoudamire.

The Broncos (4-9) went scoreless for 5:48 and when they did score again, on two free throws by LaCoby Phillips to pull within 59-48, it was as close as they would get.

Ed Stokes' tip-in triggered the deciding Arizona run. Then on successive possessions, Santa Clara's Pete Eisenrich traveled, each time stopping without an official blowing a whistle and handing the ball over.

Stoudamire followed with a 3-pointer, then Rooks hit a jumper from the top of the key.

Khalid Reeves added 14 points for Ariona and Chris Mills had 12. Eisenrich and Rhea Taylor had 11 points each for the Broncos.

The win was Arizona's fourth in a row and coach Lute Olson's 200th in nine seasons with the Wildcats.

No. 15 Georgia Tech 92, Maryland 67

ATLANTA — Matt Geiger had 15 points and 11 rebounds and four other Yellow Jackets scored in double figures as No. 15 Georgia Tech beat Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams.

The Jackets, leading 44-37 at halftime, got four points from freshman James Forrest in an 8-4 start of the second half that built a 52-41 lead that Maryland couldn't overcome.

Walt Williams led the Terps with 28 points and Evers Burns had 18.

Tech (11-2) also got 17 points from freshman Travis Best and 15 from Forrest, who had 10 rebounds. Maryland fell to 7-4.

Using a three-guard offense, Tech finished with nine 3-point field goals in 24 attempts, with Best and Jon Barry each hitting three. Maryland was held to 2-for-13 from 3-point range.

Tech trailed 33-31 with 3:20 left in the first half, but went ahead for good on a 3-pointer by Best that started a 9-0 run.

NBA Roundup

NEW YORK — Xavier McDaniel's 22-foot jumper with 20 seconds left in overtime broke the 18th tie of the game, and the New York Knicks defeated the Phoenix Suns 108-104 Sunday night.

Each team scored just four points in the first 4½ minutes of the extra period, with the Knicks missing eight of 10 shots, before McDaniel, scoreless since midway through the third quarter, connected with the game-winner. The game was McDainel's first against the Suns since they traded him to New York in the offseason.

Trail Blazers 115, 76ers 102

PORTLAND, Ore. — Cliff Robinson scored a season-high 22 points to lead six Portland players in double figures as the Trail Blazers beat road-weary Philadelphia.

The Blazers scored the first 10 points of the game and hit their first 11 shots.

After Portland jumped out to a 24-6 lead, the 76ers cut the margin to four in the second quarter before the Blazers blew open a 22-point halftime advantage.

The Blazers led by as many as 31 in the third quarter. Philadelphia closed to within 13 against Portland reserves in the final quarter before coach Rick Adelman put starters back into the game.

Star status hurt Tarpley

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Mavericks forward Roy Tarpley says the money and pressures involved in being a basketball star led him to alcohol and drugs and, ultimately, a lifetime ban from the NBA.

Tarpley, who lives in a north Dallas townhouse when he's not in a Houston drug rehabilitation center, made his first public statement since the banishment in Sunday's Dallas Morning News.

The 7-footer was kicked out of the league for refusing to take a drug test Oct. 16.

"In the end, just say that I tried to be hip, slick and cool and get high on the sly," Tarpley, 27, told the Morning News. "That's all you have to know about why I am where I am."

The ban ended Tarpley's rocky five-year career with the Mavericks, who drafted him seventh overall from Michigan in 1986.

He was frequently brilliant on the court, earning a place on the 1986-87 All-Rookie team and winning the 1987-88 NBA Sixth Man Award. But arrests for drunken driving and brushes with the league's substance abuse policy frequently kept him out of action.

Tarpley said he began drinking as a teen-ager and continued while in college, but he insists that alcohol was not a problem at Michigan.

"It was college," he said. "Sure, I'd go to fraternity parties. I was drinking and stuff. Everybody drinks in college. My problem is that I'm a cocaine addict. That's my problem, cocaine. My biggest problem is that Roy did what Roy wanted to do."

His problems worsened in the NBA, where he found more freedom and a lucrative contract, he said.

"I guess once I got hold of a lot of money, I thought I could party, stop, and do the job," Tarpley said. "It didn't work out that way. I just kept partying. As soon as I got hold of money, my decision-making went all out of whack."

Tarpley's first strike with the NBA drug program came after the 1986-87 season, when he admitted problems with drugs and alcohol. He returned for his best season in 1987-88, leading the Mavericks to the Western Conference finals against the Los Angeles Lakers.

He got his second strike and was suspended indefinitely in 1989 after telling drug counselors he needed help with a drug problem. Tarpley never played more than a half season after that while battling substance abuse problems, drunken driving charges and injuries.

The forward, who averaged more than 10 rebounds and 12 points per game in more than five seasons, said he tries not to think about what he's been through.

"The past, it brings up bad memories," Tarpley said. "I try to move forward, to move on. I have a couple of dark secrets. We all have. Why bring them up when all they bring are anger and resentment that lead to arguments?"

Tarpley's wife, Dawn, said the source of her husband's problems was success.

"Roy said many times that success was his problem," Mrs. Tarpley said. "What I always interpreted it to mean was that he thought people expected more and more from him. The more he gave, the more they wanted.

"When he isn't playing, like now, no one bothers him. Not family. Not so-called friends, no one. I think that makes him happiest."

Tarpley said he doesn't know how long he will remain in the John Lucas rehabilitation facility, but he plans to begin getting in shape soon for a return to basketball.

Although he can't play for a European league team while he is banned from the NBA, he can play for a Continental Basketball Association team when he's cleared by the Lucas center.

"I'm excited about the possibility of playing again," said Tarpley, who is eligible to apply for NBA reinstatement after the start of the 1993-94 season. "I love basketball. I want to play again."

Cowboys-Lions Notes

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Dallas running back Emmitt Smith outgained Detroit's Barry Sanders in a matchup of the NFL's two leading regular-season rushers. Smith gained 80 yards on 15 carries, while Sanders mustered 69 yards on 12 attempts. Sanders, who was held to 55 yards on 21 rushes in the Lions' 34-10 win over Dallas on Oct. 27, did break Billy Sims' career record for touchdowns (48) with his 47-yard TD run in the fourth quarter. ... The Cowboys fell to 2-15 when Smith has fewer than 18 rushing attempts. ... Detroit's Erik Kramer and Dallas' Steve Beuerlein, both backup quarterbacks at the start of the season, came out throwing in the first quarter. Kramer completed seven of nine passes for 102 yards and hit Willie Green with a 31-yard scoring strike. Beuerlein completed four of eight for 57 yards, but was replaced late in the second quarter by Troy Aikman. ... Lions cornerback Melvin Jenkins' second-quarter interception was his first of the season. Jenkins was signed in the offseason as a free agent from Seattle. ... The Lions extended their winning streak to seven games, equaling their longest since 1962, and ended Dallas' string of six straight wins. The Cowboys had snapped Philadelphia's eight-game winning streak and Atlanta's five-game run in the final two weeks of the regular season. ... Dallas dropped to 21-17 in 38 playoff appearances, but still holds NFL records for postseason wins and games played. Detroit's postseason record is 7-4, but only 1-3 since 1970. ... The Cowboys, 1-15 in 1989, reached the playoffs quicker following a zero- or one-win season than any team in NFL history. ... Lions wide receiver Herman Moore, who had only 11 pass receptions during the regular season as the team's top 1991 draft pick out of Virginia, caught six passes for 67 yards on Sunday and hauled in his first career TD on a 7-yard pass from Kramer late in the third quarter. Moore saw limited action with starter Robert Clark plagued by a pulled hamstring. ... The Lions have outscored their opponents 127-54 in the fourth quarter this season. Detroit was outscored 113-95 over the final 15 minutes in 1990.

LIONS: Kramer has career day with 341 yards in air joined the Lions from the Canadian League last year, was as good as any Montana, Marino or Elway. Or as good as Bobby Layne, the Hall of Fame quarterback for the Lions' title teams of four decades ago.

Kramer threw a 31-yard TD pass to Willie Green on Detroit's first possession and then, with the Lions leading 17-6, hit Green from nine yards. Sixty-four seconds later, after Victor Jones' recovery of Troy Aikman's fumble on a snap, Kramer threw seven yards to Herman Moore for another TD.

"He had one of the finest games reading I've ever seen," said Dallas safety Ray Horton, a nine-year veteran who was beaten by Green on the first touchdown. "We'd change our defense. He'd wait until the last minute to snap the ball and he knew what we were in."

Aikman, injured six weeks ago, replaced Steve Beuerlein late in the first half after Beuerlein had thrown an interception that was returned 41 yards for a touchdown by Melvin Jenkins. Beuerlein completed seven of 13 passes for 91 yards and Aikman hit 11 of 16 for 114, but lost two fumbles and was sacked twice.

Jenkins was only part of a defense which, despite missing nose tackle Jerry Ball and several other key players, forced four turnovers and registered three sacks and limited the Cowboys to 28-yard field goals by Ken Willis when twice Dallas reached the 10-yard-line in the first half.

In fact, it was a career day for just about every Lion but Sanders, who rushed for 1,548 yards, only 20 less than NFL leader Emmitt Smith of Dallas, in the regular season. It wasn't much of a game for Smith, either. He managed only 22 yards in 10 carries.

"They gave us the pass and we took it," said coach Wayne Fontes, who went to Sanders at halftime after the NFL's second-leading rusher had only four carries for eight yards.

"I told him we were going to stick with what we were doing with Erik and he said 'Fine.' That's the class act he is."

Because the Cowboys crowded the line to jam Sanders, it opened things up for Kramer, who completed 29 of 38 passes.

"We got a little exposed on defense today," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, whose pass defense had allowed only three quarterbacks to pass for more than 245 yards. "They got us isolated one-on-one and that type of passing game has hurt us all year."

The two receivers most open were Green and Moore.

Green, who spent his rookie season of 1989 on injured reserve, had the best day of his career, catching eight passes for 115 yards. Moore, the Lions' first-round draft pick this year, had five catches for 75 yards after having only 11 receptions in the regular season.

"Everyone asked all season where Moore was," Fontes said. "You saw him today. He's going to be a great receiver."

With Kramer, whose previous career high was 268 yards, going 18 of 22 for 195 yards and the defense twice stopping Dallas at the 10-yard-line, the Lions led 17-6 at halftime.

BILLS: Buffalo puts end to Schottenheimer streak

(From 1C)

the second quarter with a sprained right thumb. Mark Vlasic replaced him and was 9-for-20 for 124 yards and four interceptions.

"We forced them into a passing situation, something we want to do to every team," Bennett said. "We were very determined not to let them run on us. We really concentrated on stopping the run across the board."

In doing so, the defense complemented the usual supply of big plays from the top-rated, no-huddle attack led by Kelly. Andre Reed caught two TD passes and James Lofton had another as Kelly hit 23 of 35 for 273 yards.

"It seemed like everything worked out perfectly today," Reed said.

Buffalo, 13-3 during the season in winning its fourth straight AFC East crown, will be host to Denver for the conference championship next Sunday. The Bills, 20-19 losers to the New York Giants in last year's Super Bowl, have lost only once in their last 19 home games — a 17-14 overtime loss to Detroit in the season finale, when Kelly, Lofton and Thomas did not play.

While their offense was stalled early, the defense was unrelenting. Kansas City never could establish any ground dominance, which meant the Bills offense got lots of chances to work out the kinks after a week off.

"I think we're one of the best defenses in the league, not one of the worst, when we're all here," Bennett said.

Buffalo's offense got going late in the first quarter. Kelly capped the first scoring drive with a 25-yard scoring pass to Reed.

The Bills held and took over at their 35. A 5-yard holding penalty on Jayice Pearson kept the drive going after a third-down incompletion, but Keith McKellar had a pass deflect off his knee. The ball tipped off Lonnie Marts' hand to Eric Everett, who returned it to the Kansas City 40.

Again, however, the Chiefs went nowhere and punted.

And again, Reed victimized Pearson. The Bills' star receiver broke free down the middle in single coverage to haul in Kelly's pass for a 53-yard score, making it 14-0.

"They were different calls, audibles, just man-to-man patterns," Kelly said. "It was just a matter of him beating them."

Which was no problem for Reed.

"Those routes are in the game plan every week," he said. "Jim saw a look out there that was perfect."

Scott Norwood's 33-yard field goal with two seconds left in the half made it 17-0.

The Bills clinched it by marching 36 yards after Kirby Jackson's interception to start the second half. Kelly hit Lofton with a 10-yard TD pass.

Thomas's 100 yards was his fourth straight playoff game with at least 100 yards. Norwood also had 47 and 20-yard field goals. Ken Davis scored on a 5-yard run with 4:57 left in the game to close out the Bills' scoring.

It was 24-0 before the Chiefs got Barry Word's 3-yard TD run late in the third period and Vlasic hit Fred Jones with a 20-yard scoring pass with 2:07 left in the game.

The defeat was the first for Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer against the Bills after five victories. It also marked the sixth time he has taken a team to the playoffs and exited before the Super Bowl.

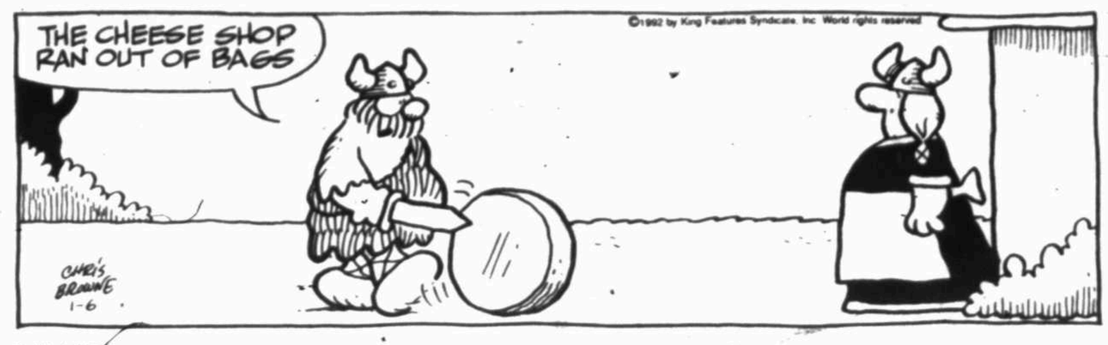

"We didn't have a true indication of their team in Kansas city and they didn't have a true indication of our team today," Chiefs center Tim Grunhard said. "Maybe we should meet somwhere in the middle."

Kansas City finished second in the AFC West and beat the Raiders 10-6 in a wild-card game last week.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, JANUARY 6, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: It takes more than physical attraction to turn a romance into a lifelong alliance! A new work project could get your career off and running in May. Put your personal imprint on everything you do. Getting better organized is essential during the summer. Replace bad habits with good ones. Level-headed and thorough, you often pick up on things others miss. Someone asks you to supervise a special campaign late next fall.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Loretta Young, author E.L.Doctorow, football star Howie Long, golfer Nancy Lopez Knight.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid financial arrangements promoted by pals and seek a simpler solution to a cash shortage. Someone influential may try to rattle you. Button up when someone asks personal questions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The creative mood you have been waiting for shows up in all its glory. Activities involving music and art hold special appeal. Be careful not to get ahead of yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance has its ups and downs. Pursue your professional goals with zest. Investigate new avenues of employment. A second career is possible if you enroll in high-tech classes. Follow your star!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): People with similar taste should come together now to work on a project. Seek inspiration from reading good books. Buy household linens while they are on sale this month.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Power plays are taboo at work. Follow the sound business procedures devised by yourself or those close to you. A vigorous sales campaign could mean extra money in your pocket.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Worrying about events over which you have no control is futile. Give indecision the brush-off. Romance beckons. Buy tickets for a play or concert.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Ideas strike as fast as lightning today. You find a way around an apparently insurmountable problem. Observe the rules at work. Anything could happen where romance is concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A splendid day for interviews and getting together with your allies. Diplomacy helps you avoid needless confrontations. Keep a public discussion of tactics general.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tap into confidential sources of information to try and satisfy your financial or domestic requirements. Move ahead full throttle with your career aims.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good news is winging its way to you! Look forward to a period of stepped-up mental activity or travel. If single, you could run into your intended mate today! Dress your best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The behavior of your associates is a constant source of wonder. Seniors benefit from plunging into church activities or a community cause. Romance could be on the wild side.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A tax or investment matter requires prompt attention. Careful management is essential. When two or more people get together to formulate policy, something good will eventually emerge.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are ambitious but family-oriented, putting their loved ones' happiness ahead of everything else. These Capricorns work hard for everything they get but prefer to labor behind the scenes. When forced to participate in group discussions or asked to recite, these children often freeze up. They are much more adept at putting their thoughts on paper! An early interest in writing fiction should be gently encouraged.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1— Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J2 ♡Void ◇KJ954 ♣1098432
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's four clubs is a cue-bid to tell you that he has a maximum two no trump with a good fit for diamonds, otherwise he would have bid three no trump or simply raised diamonds. Also, partner does not have the aces of hearts and spades, since it's normal to cue-bid the cheapest ace first. Still, if there is little duplication in hearts, slam should be, at worst, on a finesse. Cue-bid four hearts to see how partner reacts.
Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK842 ♡Void ◇AQJ2 ♣AK97
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—You could easily have a grand slam. However, if partner has little more than long hearts, even a small slam might be too high. You will need a lot of room to find your best spot, so don't start with a jump shift despite your powerhouse. Bid one spade.
Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ654 ♡AQ4 ◇7 ♣J1062
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Despite the fact that your spade response did not move partner to great things, you could still have a game, perhaps even slam, in clubs. Jump to three clubs and see whether that sparks a sign of life from partner.
Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A109765 ♡K7 ◇AKJ ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—In the modern style, partner's reverse creates a one-round force, so you could rebid two spades to confirm a five-card suit. But that wouldn't express the full value of your hand, and neither would a preference to three clubs. We would make the advance cue-bid of three diamonds to see whether that elicits delayed spade support from partner.
Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ53 ♡109 ◇A54 ♣1085
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner is cue-bidding to show good spades, a maximum two-no-trump opening and first-round control of clubs. You have already shown slam interest—had you been interested only in game, you would have leaped directly to four spades. Despite your seven-card suit, you have only five high-card points, so apply the brakes by simply rebidding four spades.
Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ98632 ♡J73 ◇7 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner is cue-bidding to show good spades, a maximum two-no-trump opening and first-round control of clubs. You have already shown slam interest—had you been interested only in game, you would have leaped directly to four spades. Despite your seven-card suit, you have only five high-card points, so apply the brakes by simply rebidding four spades.

Spain's King Juan Carlos has surgery after skiing accident

MADRID, Spain — King Juan Carlos turned 54 on Sunday in a hospital, recovering from knee surgery following a skiing accident.

Juan Carlos

The Spanish monarch tore up his right knee Dec. 28 when an out-of-control skier knocked him down while the royal family was on their annual holiday in the northern Spanish resort of Baqueira.

A hospital spokesman said the king's Dec. 30 surgery was successful. He could be on crutches for three months. The king was told Friday he could leave the hospital, but elected to stay and continue therapy.

He spent his 1983 birthday in a hospital following a ski mishap.

RADNOR, Pa. — Television weatherman Willard Scott said he's still wounded over a 1989 memo Bryant Gumbel wrote, lambasting Scott for holding the "Today" show hostage to "whims, wishes, birthdays and bad taste."

In a look back over the show's 40 years, Scott predicted in the Jan. 11 issue of TV Guide that the memo will follow him to his grave.

"I'd love to put it behind me. I'm sure in my obituary it will read, 'Mr. Scott, you may recall, was mentioned prominently in the freaking memo.'"

But Scott complained Sunday night that TV Guide blew his remarks "way out of proportion."

"I can't believe they chose to focus only on this and not on the other positive things I had to say," Scott said through NBC-TV spokeswoman Tory Beilinson.

The private memo to their NBC bosses was taken from Gumbel's computer file and leaked to the news media.

Gumbel told TV Guide: "To this day, I still contend that writing the memo was a fit and proper thing to do. But I don't think anybody who was mentioned in the memo bears any lingering feelings one way or the other."

Scott told TV Guide: "It mattered. It hurt. It was a terrible thing. There's always going to be a scar." He added that it was one of the reasons he shifted his headquarters to Washington, leaving Gumbel in New York.

Scott said Sunday night he was working well with Gumbel and co-hosts Katie Couric and Joe Garagiola.

"The memo was 1989. That was three years ago and it's way behind us. What TV Guide neglected to say is that Bryant and I have moved on beyond the memo. It is largely because of him as well as Katie and Joe that I am thrilled to be a part of Today at 40," he said.

RADNOR, Pa. — Newlywed Jane Fonda said working on a retrospective of her late father's work had a special meaning for her because of her husband's involvement.

Fonda

"I felt particular poignancy at the fact that I was in the Brentwood home in which I spent my early years, in front of the cameras for the first time in two years, to pay homage to my father, at the behest of my fiance, Ted Turner," she wrote in the Jan. 11 issue of TV Guide.

The two were married Dec. 21. The show, "Fonda on Fonda," will appear Jan. 13 on TNT, owned by Turner.

Fonda said she regrets that Henry Fonda didn't get to talk about his hobby of fishing with her new spouse.

"Sometimes, when I'm out on the creek, I imagine I see him up ahead alongside Ted, two long-legged, lanky figures in fishing vests and floppy hats jabbering away about lures and tackle as they cast for the big rainbows," she wrote.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kathy Bates said she's glad her latest role is tamer than her past parts.

"Almost every role I've done has been of somebody off-center," she told The Tennessean in an interview published Sunday.

Bates won an Academy Award last year for her role in "Misery." She played a fan who takes her favorite writer hostage.

"That woman clearly is a psychopath," Bates said.

Her new movie is "Fried Green Tomatoes" with Jessica Tandy and Mary Stuart Masterson. Bates portrays a frustrated housewife who befriends an elderly woman in a nursing home.

"She eats too many candy bars because her life is in disarray, but she's not afflicted and she eventually manages to straighten things out pretty well," Bates said.

NEW YORK — William F. Buckley will read aloud from one of his novels at a small gathering Tuesday night in the home of Marion Javits to benefit the reading program of PEN, the organization of writers and editors.

The purpose of the program, said Tamara Moskowitz, PEN's director of development, is to send authors into libraries, schools and community centers to encourage people to read more adventurously.

Resurgent MIA issue may impede U.S.-Vietnam ties

By Barbara Crossette
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Expectations that the United States and Vietnam would soon establish diplomatic relations, more than 15 years after the end of the Indochina War, may be set back by a resurgence of interest in one piece of unfinished business that will not go away: the fate of missing Americans.

The revival of the issue has been spurred by a series of statements over the last six months — from apparently bogus reports of sightings of live Americans to unsubstantiated information that Soviet officials interrogated American prisoners in Indochina after the time that Vietnam said it had freed them.

While most United States officials discount such reports, their persistence has led to the establishment of a select committee in Congress that will begin to draw together new threads of the story in hearings over the next few weeks.

This week, State Department officials are expected to meet with Maj. Gen. Oleg D. Kalugin, the former Soviet intelligence official who reported the interrogations in October. The former KGB official, who has already been interviewed in Moscow by American Embassy officials, is expected to testify in the next week or two at a closed session of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs.

The panel will also this week begin interviewing former intelligence agents or servicemen who had access to secret information in the 1960s and 1970s and who have reportedly offered to testify that the United States knew more about the location and fate of missing Americans than subsequent administrations admitted.

Some members of Congress predict that the panel's findings will move the American-Vietnam relationship from the foreign policy arena to domestic politics.

Rep. Robert G. Toricelli, D-N.J., said he would guarantee that the issue will be brought up in this presidential election year, and that this would not be confined to the campaigns of right-wing Republicans who want to continue denying recognition to the communist government of Vietnam.

"The steady accumulation of information and persistent expressions of doubts about the fate of missing Americans has now shifted the burden of proof to the Vietnamese," said Toricelli, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, who first discussed the issue with officials in Hanoi in 1984 and has closely followed it since. "If George Bush persists in moving toward recognition now, he is putting himself at considerable political risk. I wouldn't have said that six months ago."

In October, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said the United States was prepared to begin talks with Hanoi to establish relations.

Baker said progress in the talks would depend on Vietnam's willingness to furnish information about 2,273 Americans who officials say remain unaccounted for. They are listed in records either as prisoners of war or missing in action.

On Friday, the State Department reiterated that the United States conditioned the lifting of economic sanctions and the opening of diplomatic relations with Hanoi on its cooperation in making a fuller accounting of cases of missing Americans.

Public calls for judge's ouster after remarks

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A white judge's remarks in court and in print about blacks, women and Jews are provoking a public outcry that he's racist, sexist and anti-Semitic and should be removed from the bench.

But after 30 years as a jurist, Chief Circuit Judge John Santora says he's sorry if he hurt anyone's feelings. And that's all.

The tug of war over Santora, who turns 69 today, is tearing apart the three-county northeast Florida circuit he heads. Cries for his ouster sound outside the Duval County Courthouse, in houses of worship and the usually sedate offices of the Jacksonville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Jesse Jackson appeared twice in one week to rally forces against the judge.

With the business community's efforts under way to bring a National Football League franchise here, black leaders are threatening to contact the NFL and urge the city be denied an expansion team if Santora doesn't quit.

Meanwhile, the D.W. Perkins Bar Association, a group of black lawyers, filed a complaint Friday seeking Santora's removal by the state Judicial Qualifications Commission, which reviews judicial conduct.

Some judges and the mayor urge forgiveness in light of Santora's apology. Those sensitive to bias say he's a bellwether of feelings in the society at large.

The public apparently got its first inkling of the judge's views from reports of his testimony in December in a lawsuit seeking more minority judges. Santora said Jacksonville had enough black judges — three out of 40 judges in his purview — but more Jewish judges were needed to work on Christmas and other holidays. He later said his comment about Jewish judges was in jest.

Then The Florida Times-Union on Dec. 22 published an interview with Santora in which he said he personally opposes interracial marriage, referred to women as girls and said black youngsters in private school behave better than those in public classrooms: "They don't molest teachers, they don't rape."

The outcry was immediate. People demonstrated and took to podiums calling for Santora's removal or resignation.

Governmental rules force closure of garbage dumps

By Keith Schneider
N.Y. Times News Service

LUVERNE, Ala.— New federal and state rules are forcing the closing of hundreds of old community garbage dumps and prompting the development of many fewer, but much larger landfills that only the biggest cities and the largest garbage companies can afford to build and operate.

And residents of thousands of small communities, like this one south of Montgomery, will be forced to choose the revenues and heavy truck traffic of a new nearby landfill or the huge increase in costs of transporting their garbage far away. What is definite, though, is that the new regulations are proving to be a bonanza to large garbage companies.

"A little county like ours can't afford to build a new dump," said Dwight Faulk, the burly probate judge and chairman of the Crenshaw County Commission. "So we have to have a company do it for us. These laws were set up for big business to monopolize an industry."

Industry executives agree. "There are only a handful of companies that will have the capabilities to provide the type of environmentally sound facilities that the public is demanding," said John C. Shirvinsky, vice president of public affairs for the Chambers Development Company, a Pittsburgh-based garbage company that operates 14 huge landfills.

Rarely have environmental regulations produced as many political distractions for the communities they are written to protect, or meant as much to the bottom lines of the industry they are intended to regulate.

The intent of new federal regulations, which were issued in October, was to eliminate toxic waste problems caused by community-owned dumps that leaked. The government now requires new landfills to be built with plastic and clay liners, liquid collection and treatment systems, and other expensive environmental equipment that has raised the cost of opening a landfill to $10 million or more. Old town dumps that fail to meet the new requirements must close by 1993.

The new federal rules, and a few older state laws including those established by New York and New Jersey, mean most of the 6,500 community dumps across the country will be forced to close within the next few years, the Environmental Protection Agency has said. In their place will be 1,000 or so immense landfills owned primarily by a dozen or so companies and designed to serve entire regions.

In effect, the government may be helping to establish regional monopolies, and that worries some officials.

"It's not difficult to project a situation in the future where very few firms could have regional or statewide control on the management of public wastes," said Thomas C. Jorling, the commissioner of environmental Conservation in New York, which will have fewer than 100 landfills by 1995, down from 518 in 1983. "If that occurs, it might be necessary for some kind of public utility regulations so that the public is not ripped off."

Garbage industry executives insist, though, that there is enough competition to protect homeowners and businesses. "There will not be so few landfills that a city has only one option for disposal," said Philip S. Angell, the special assistant to the chairman of Browning-Ferris Industries, the nation's second-largest disposal company, in Houston.

Nixon: West should quickly finance reforms in former Soviet republics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and other western nations should offer financial aid this year to Russia and other former Soviet republics that follow Russia's lead in political and economic reform, says former President Richard Nixon.

"To put it bluntly, Russian President Boris Yeltsin and those like him in other republics must not fail," Nixon wrote in an article in the issue of Time magazine to be on the newsstands today.

"Unfortunately," the former president said, "the West has been slow in committing itself to a comprehensive program of assistance to reform-minded republics."

President Bush said on Dec. 26 that he wants to meet with Yeltsin soon and the United States should "help where we can" as the republics try to develop free-market economies.

Nixon said large-scale assistance should be provided only to republics that hold free elections, protect minority rights and adopt free-market reforms. He said only Russia has met all three conditions so far.

"Once Yeltsin's full reform program is in place, the West should commit the billions of dollars needed to help stabilize the Russian economy," the former president said.

'If the free market succeeds in Russia," he said, "it will inexorably spread to the other republics."

"Russia and any other republics that break decisively with their communist past in 1992 deserve our help no less than did the new democracies of Eastern Europe in 1989," Nixon argued.
