CIA indictment

WASHINGTON — A federal grand jury Tuesday indicted Duane R. Clarridge, a former senior official at the Central Intelligence Agency, charging him with seven counts of perjury and making false statements stemming from a secret missile shipment to Iran in November 1985 that was one of the first steps in the Iran-Contra affair.

No charges

BIG SPRING — A grand jury has declined to indict any Big Spring police officers, amid complaints that some officers engaged in aggressive behavior. A Howard County grand jury late Monday announced no indictments would be returned. The Texas Attorney General's office had been investigating the Big Spring police department for about two months.

Scrolls open

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The last restrictions on scholars' access to the Dead Sea Scrolls have been removed, the head of the official team overseeing their publication has announced. Emmanual Tov said Monday that the Israel Antiquities Authority, which controls the scrolls, had dropped a rule that those wishing to use the scrolls or photographic facsimiles agree not to publish in full the texts that they cited. In the last few months, scholars have taken steps to expand access to the precious documents.

Career change

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. — Rudy Gatlin of country music's Gatlin Brothers tried his hand at busing tables and taking orders when an eatery where he was having lunch got busy, the restaurant's owner says. The singer got up and cleared tables for more than an hour Nov. 13 at Biddle's Lunch Box outside Nashville, the Nashville Banner said Monday. "He started waiting on customers, putting orders in the back ... en people started asking him for autographs," said owner Sharon Biddle, who was missing an employee because of jury duty. "He said he'd always wanted to call an order back through a window," she said.

Council calls tax vote

Election set for Jan. 18

■ The ¼-cent sales tax would be used for economic development in Midland.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

In front of a highly supportive, overflow crowd Tuesday, the Midland City Council voted unanimously to set a Jan. 18 election on an economic development sales tax.

Councilmen approved an ordinance on first reading that sets a city-wide vote on the issue. Its passage would increase local sales taxes by ¼ cent with revenues targeted for use by an economic development corporation.

"This tax would be an investment Midlanders can make to create new jobs, ... assist in recruiting new business and expand businesses who are already here," said Gregg Owens, past president of the Midland Chamber. He and other members of Midlanders for Economic Opportunity (MEO), a group of chamber and business leaders that has spearheaded the tax proposal, addressed the council.

U.S. shuts air base in Philippines

Associated Press

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines — The United States closed one of its largest overseas bases Tuesday, ending a nearly century-long military presence at this historic facility because it was buried by volcanic ash.

Filipino base employees wept and embraced departing Americans at the end of a two-hour ceremony, where the U.S. flag was lowered for the final time at Clark Air Base. About 15,000 Filipinos lost their jobs because of the closing.

"The long-standing U.S. military presence is ending," said Maj. Gen. William Studer, commander of the 13th Air Force. He said the 13th Air Force headquarters would move to Guam and units would be deployed elsewhere in the Pacific.

The 250 remaining Americans left for Subic Bay naval base, 30 miles away, where they were to depart for new assignments. In recent years, Clark was home to about 20,000 troops, military dependents and Defense Department civilians.

U.S. sources said looters already had picked over the 130,000-acre base, taking appliances, cables and other goods.

Clark had been a major transportation hub and training center for U.S. and allied air forces in the western Pacific, with its presence here dating to the Spanish-American War of 1898.

Man indicted in stabbing of secretary

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 20-year-old Midland man was indicted Tuesday for the Nov. 13 murder, rape and robbery of a church secretary.

Gerald Benjamin Kelly remains jailed with bond denied in connection with the death of Brenda Branch, 28, who died after sustaining multiple stab wounds at the Living Way Church, 419 Alta St.

Ms. Branch's partially disrobed body was discovered about 11:12 a.m. in the back room of the church by Rev. James E. Whitaker, upon his return from running errands.

"Some of the concerns of the public I hope we can lay to rest at this time," said Midland police Chief Richard Czech at a news conference Tuesday afternoon.

"Putting things together over the last couple of weeks, we were able to come up with this indictment today," Czech said.

But Czech and District Attorney Al Schorre said they could not elaborate on witnesses or evidence that led to the grand jury decision.

Democrats weigh calling Congress back for tax work

■ House Speaker Thomas Foley may call Congress back Dec. 10.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress' drive to adjourn for the year slowed to an imperceptible crawl Tuesday night as Democrats debated whether to accept a challenge from President Bush and craft a year-end tax cut. Major bills to build highways, aid the Soviets and protect bank deposits awaited action.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, angered by comments from Bush and other Republicans, met privately with House Democrats to discuss whether to bring Congress back on Dec. 10.

Sheriff, commissioners continue vehicle standoff

■ The sheriff did not turn in vehicle keys Tuesday as ordered by the court.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

High noon had come and gone, and still no sheriff.

Midland County Gary Painter had opted to defy a Commissioners' Court oral "direct order" which commanded him to park a third of his fleet of 62 vehicles and by noon Tuesday and to surrender the vehicles' ignition keys and fuel cards to the county auditor in the Midland County Courthouse.

"They're not their cars to confiscate," Painter said late Tuesday afternoon. "And I question their authority to control the sheriff's department through policy-making."

County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer later Tuesday noted that the Commissioners' Court is "not confiscating" the vehicles.

"We are not going to finance them in any way. We are not going to maintain them, service them, fuel them, or insure them any more."

However, the sheriff is free to drive the vehicles "as soon as he comes in and shows us his (liability) insurance."

Clock retreats

CHICAGO (AP) — The Doomsday Clock was turned back Tuesday to 11:43 p.m. — its farthest point ever from "nuclear midnight."

"The Cold War is over. The 40-year-long East-West nuclear arms race has ended," the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists said in an editorial. "The illusion that tens of thousands of nuclear weapons are a guarantor of national security has been stripped away."

The clock appears on the cover of the Bulletin, founded in 1945 by University of Chicago scientists who helped build the atomic bomb. The Bulletin's directors and editors determine the setting.

The clock had stood at 11:50 p.m. since March 1990, after democratic revolutions swept Eastern Europe.

Decades bring change to bilingual education

By William Celis III
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO (NYT) — As Maria del Socorro Leandro makes her morning rounds at Burleson Elementary School, where she is the principal, she sees classroom lessons begin in English, then switch to Spanish and back to English.

First graders discuss in English the characters in Dr. Suess's book, "Green Eggs and Ham." A third grade class studies Texas history in Spanish. And in another classroom, a group of parents receives instruction in Spanish on how to encourage their children to speak English at home.

"We can't do the same things we used to do," Ms. Leandro said later in an interview, referring to the now-criticized repetitive drills in English and the obliviousness to parents that used to be the norm. "Everyone needs to be engaged."

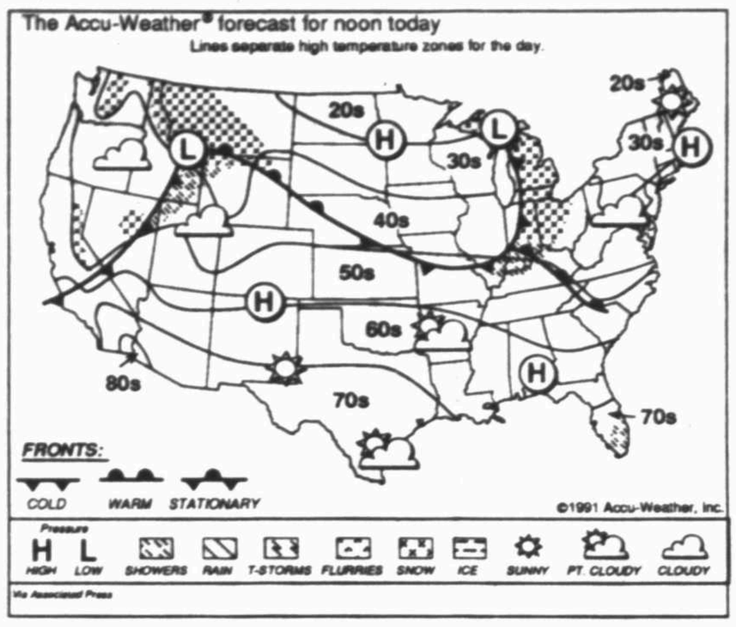
WEATHER SUMMARY



Sunshine today, clouds later

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 70s and southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the lower 40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thanksgiving Day should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 34, Tuesday's high reached 72 compared with the record high for that date of 83 set in 1990. The record low for Tuesday's date is 16 set in 1938.

STATE

West Texas was clear Tuesday, but the rest of the state was mostly cloudy and mild as surface moisture spread inland from the Gulf of Mexico. Light rain was reported along the coast into East Texas.

Winds were southerly at 10 to 20 miles an hour and occasionally gusty.

Temperatures peaked in the 50s and 60s. At 3 p.m., readings included 52 degrees in Lufkin and 66 in Abilene.

The forecast for North Texas was for partly cloudy skies through Thursday with a chance for light rain in the east. High temperatures Wednesday were expected to be 63 to 72 degrees with lows Wednesday night 49 to 57. Highs Thursday were expected to be 66 to 76 degrees.

NATION

One storm spread snow and rain across the upper Mississippi Valley Tuesday and a new storm from the Pacific spread rain across the Northwest with a threat of snow across inland mountains.

Locally heavy snow was scattered around the lower Great Lakes.

A storm system sliding across the middle Missouri Valley produced strong, gusty wind in the central Rockies and spread snow into the upper Mississippi Valley. Wind gusted to 54 mph outside Boulder, Colo.

Light snow and light freezing rain extended from western Nebraska to Iowa and Minnesota.

Tuesday's low for the Lower 48 states was 6 below zero at Eau Claire, Wis.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Midland statistics

Today: Sunny, high in the lower 70s, southwest wind at 10-20 mph.
Tonight: Partly cloudy, low in the lower 40s.
Thanksgiving Day: Partly cloudy, high in the mid-70s.

COUNTY: County officials continue debate

(From 1A)

"Even the sheriff of Midland County cannot drive a vehicle that is not insured," Seltzer said, "because that violates state law."

General-fund insurance paid on those vehicles will be canceled by 5 p.m. today (Wednesday), Seltzer said.

Meanwhile, Seltzer said he would consult with County Attorney Mark H. Dettman on what sanctions, including contempt of court, the Commissioners' Court could place on the sheriff for defiance of the court's order.

According to Texas law, the Commissioners' Court "shall punish a person held in contempt by a fine of not more then $25 or by confinement for not more than 24 hours."

But the sheriff, who had consulted with his retained attorney, Hal Upchurch of Monahans, said he would ignore the order until it is put in written form "and then we will discuss it and will respond to that.

"A verbal order from the Commissioners' Court is not binding," Painter said.

The court Oct. 14 had enacted a "Sheriff's Office Vehicle Policy" which restricted the sheriff to 40 vehicles, including 18 "police-package" patrol cars, two vans for transporting prisoners, and 20 "General Fund Vehicles" which are to be distributed among deputies in the sheriff's Operations Division, which includes criminal investigation, narcotics, and civil warrants, and the Detention (jail) Division.

About 40 of the sheriff's 62 vehicles, including patrol cars, pickups and vans, were purchased with General Funds. The remainder were either purchased with seized drug money, taken in drug raids, or were donated to the Sheriff's Office.

Restricting use of all of his vehicles "is just another area in which they (members of the Commissioners' Court) are trying to exercise control," Painter said.

In addition to the 40, the Commissioners' Court is exempting from its order five vehicles which were either purchased with seized money or were seized in raids. The five are assigned to the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE), Crime Stoppers, Litter Control, and Crisis Intervention. The five vehicles are maintained through grants.

An order signed Oct. 23 by Seltzer and the four commissioners, Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia, and Win Brown, sought to justify limitation on the sheriff's fleet of vehicles.

The order states that "Due to budgetary considerations, the Midland County Commissioners' Court cannot afford to pay for or otherwise fund the maintenance, operation, fuel, and/or insurance of any seized, donated, or grant vehicles assigned to and/or operated by the Midland County Sheriff's Office."

Further, the order states that the sheriff "shall be solely responsible" for the cost of maintenance, operation, fuel and insurance of "all seized, donated or grant vehicles."

Money for that necessarily would come from the sheriff's Drug Forfeiture Fund, which amounts to about $234,000 but which had reached a peak of $400,000.

Since mid-1986, sheriff's sting operations, engineered by his Operations Division captain, ex-Texas Ranger Clayton McKinney, have grossed the sheriff more than $1 million. Over the years, much of those funds have been spent on new radio equipment and vehicles.

The sheriff, who on Aug. 12 filed a lawsuit against the Commissioners' Court for writing policy in trying to control the sheriff's operations outside Midland County, indicated that he might file suit against the court for restricting his use of vehicles.

"As the sheriff of Midland, that is my responsibility and my authority ... to set policy for the Midland County Sheriff's Department," Painter said. "I don't know where they are getting their authority."

In Commissioners' Court Monday, Seltzer indicated that a court order is valid until it is challenged and overturned by a court or by action of the Texas Legislature.

"That's the premise that he's going on," the sheriff said. "That's not right. He could start passing anything. The only way I can challenge or stop it is to file suit."

McKinney, the former Texas Ranger who since 1985 has been the planner behind the sheriff's sting operations to arrest drug traffickers, criticized members of the Commissioners' Court for interfering with the sheriff's job.

"They are showing a lack of concern for the welfare of the citizens when they restrict the mobility of the police agency," McKinney charged. "The real thrust of this thing is entirely political."

By that, McKinney said he meant that "Gary Painter repeatedly fails their obedience test."

"If anybody has failed an obedience test," Seltzer said, "I would suggest that the sheriff is upset because we, the Commissioners' Court, have failed his obedience test."

"Gary Painter took office in January 1985 with a budget of $2.3 million, 68 employees, and 28 vehicles," Seltzer said. "In fiscal year 1991, six years later, Sheriff Painter had a budget of $4.86 million, 162 employees, 62 vehicles, a brand-new jail, and a brand-new Law Enforcement Building which houses all of his law-enforcement people.

"We have also purchased, and maintained for him, a super-sophisticated computer system, as well as allowing him to acquire two helicopters, one of which he (a pilot-deputy) crashed while herding cattle," Seltzer said.

"We have also paid for maintenance and upkeep of the remaining helicopter, while the sheriff, one of Captain KcKinney's sons, and another Midland County sheriff's deputy worked on earning their helicopter's license.

"The truth of the matter is," Seltzer said, "this Commissioners' Court had the courage and intestinal fortitude to finally say 'Enough.'

"We are not going to continue to finance Gary Painter's empire-building," Seltzer said, "nor are we going to continue to finance his extremely risky out-of-county narcotics operations."

Seltzer said that "while the Sheriff's Office was experiencing this exponential growth, most citizens of Midland were enduring extremely hard economic times, including forced layoffs, early retirements, and involuntary salary reductions."

The sheriff, McKinney and Sheriff's Lt. Tim Rogers, who serves as the sheriff's in-house interpreter of laws, said that the Commissioners' Court does not have authority to control the sheriff's vehicles which were purchased with the seized money or were confiscated in raids.

State law on "Forfeiture of Contraband" states that:

"The agency receiving the forfeited property 'may' maintain, repair, use, and operate the property with money appropriated for current operations. If the property is a motor vehicle ..., the agency receiving the forfeited vehicle is considered to be the purchaser, and the certificate of title shall issue to the agency," which, in the Midland County case, is the Sheriff's Office.

However, Seltzer noted that the "may" in the wording "is legislative language for discretionary" and is not mandated as "will," "shall," or "must."

What Painter views as Commissioners' Court's infringement on his office is "a continuing saga" on control and power.

"That's how I look at it," Painter said. "There may be others who look at it in a different manner."

VOTE: Council sets tax election for Jan. 18

(From 1A)

"This is probably one of the most important issues we've had affecting Midland in a long time," said Forrest Allen, a board member of the Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

"We're pleading for jobs," said local businesswoman Patricia Little. "I'm seeing a lot of lay-offs. It's not getting any better. The oil companies want to pull out. What are we going to be left with?"

Other supporters touted the tax as a way Midland can compete for development. Fifty-two Texas cities have such taxes in place to fund their efforts.

"It's been said many times cities don't stand still, they either grow or they die," said Earnest Angelo, a former mayor who said he normally opposes additional taxation.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said local interest in the idea deemed it worthy of a vote.

"I think there's significant interest in the community in the possibility of the sales tax that this is an appropriate step," he said.

District 2 representative Michael DeVaughn said he backs the plan and hopes it would achieve minority support.

"It looks like it could be a positive step for economic development," he said. "The tax would actually benefit all citizens, not just certain groups."

Committee members embarked on a campaign to educate voters about the issue, using a slogan, "New Jobs? The Choice is Ours."

Owens said the group will speak to groups and organizations, but plans to let the proposition "sell itself."

"It's really so positive, we think it's going to get support," he said.

Allen said education of minorities will be very important.

"There are churches, there are social groups. I want to make myself available to talk to people about this, about the facts," he said. "This is a tax that will impact everybody — the rich, the poor. There are no loopholes.

"But the benefits are there for everyone also," Allen said.

Local businessman Jack Sherman said the tax proposal had widespread support among retailers.

"Business people look for one thing, return on investment," he said. "If business people here are going to survive, they need customers. This is a way all of Midland can invest in Midland itself."

Edna Walger, founder of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, said she was not entirely satisfied with the proposition.

"This is a very well-orchestrated meeting," she said, indicating graphs, charts and a logo displayed in council chambers by MEO supporters. "But there are many things to be considered. I feel I must speak for the taxpayer."

She recommended the council place a "sunset clause" or termination date on the tax issue before it goes to a vote. If imposed, a vote for repeal of the sales tax would require a petition of 10 percent of the registered voters or a majority of the council.

"I'm still smarting from the defeat of the (hospital district) rollback," she said. "Many of the people who are for this were active in fighting the rollback. Once you impose a tax, it just goes on and on and on.

"Your presentation is great, but can we tolerate more and more and more taxes?" Walger asked.

Money from the tax would be used by the corporation for both support of existing businesses and recruitment of new industry to the area. Manufacturers would be targeted, supporters say, as they "export a product and import dollars to the community."

A second reading on the election ordinance is set for Dec. 17, the council's only regular meeting that month.

BASE: U.S. closes Air Force facility

(From 1A)

But the base was heavily damaged in June when Mount Pinatubo erupted, dumping tons of volcanic debris on the installation and nearby towns.

U.S. officials decided to give up the base rather than repair it. Washington then signed an agreement with President Corazon Aquino's government to keep Subic 10 more years in return for $250 million in annual aid.

But the Philippine Senate rejected the agreement in September; talks are expected soon on a multiyear withdrawal from Subic.

Lt. Col. Ron Rand, a base spokesman, said the troops feel some "excitement about going home, being back with your families again, sadness at leaving your friends here — all mixed up with some fatigue from working the way we have for the last four or five months."

Antonio Abad Santos, mayor of nearby Angeles, said the closing of Clark will create severe economic problems unless the government can quickly convert it to civilian use.

The government had planned make the base into an international airport when the Americans left but uncertainty over Pinatubo's future rumblings has forced reconsideration.

Abad Santos said about 30 percent of Angeles' 250,000 residents had already moved in search of jobs.

Placards were placed near the ceremony site expressing regret Americans were leaving. "No country can replace you in our hearts," one sign said.

U.S. forces first used this site 50 miles north of Manila when they seized the islands from Spain, letting horses for the cavalry graze there.

President Theodore Roosevelt declared the area a military garrison in 1903, and in 1919, the Army Air Corps established an air base. Clark was bombed by the Japanese shortly after the December 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor. Japanese pilots flew suicide missions from a nearby airfield at the end of World War II.

The base was also used to support U.S. forces during the Korean and Vietnam wars and was the first stop for U.S. troops after they were released by the North Vietnamese.

In 1986, the late President Ferdinand Marcos and his family left from Clark for exile in the United States after the popular uprising that propelled Corazon Aquino to the presidency.

DEATH: Midland man indicted

(From 1A)

Schorre said a large portion of evidence is being tested at a crime lab in Dallas. But lab results will not be made public until the case goes to court, which will be at least six months, Schorre said.

Several witnesses testified before the grand jury last week in connection with the crime, officials previously reported.

Kelly was arrested on a parole violation warrant at his home two days after the murder. The warrant was issued by the parole board in Austin.

Court records indicate Kelly was convicted in Midland in 1988 of two robberies and burglary of a building and began serving a 21-year sentence for the three crimes on July 4 of that year. On Sept. 10, 1991, he was released on parole.

Kelly is expected to be arraigned in the next week or so, Schorre added.

"We will continue to work on this case until it is finished," Czech said.

TWO: Bilingual classes help some students

(From 1A)

As bilingual education enters its third decade, the early and untried ways of educating children who have little English have increasingly given way to what is called a transitional method like that used at Burleson.

Under this approach, students are taught basic subjects in their native tongue while they receive intensive English-language instruction. The transitional method varies with the district, but the idea is to prepare these children to move into all-English classrooms by the third grade.

As more districts adopt bilingual education, either in response to court orders or because of growing enrollments of students with little or no English, the transitional method has won favor over other approaches, including sink-or-swim English immersion.

The method allows students to develop verbal and writing skills in their native language, which, its proponents say, makes it easier for them to learn English by building on the skills they have developed in their native tongue.

"There is an emerging consensus on what's good for kids," said Eugene Garcia, a bilingual education expert at the University of California at Santa Cruz. "And transitional is increasingly the consensus model."

In 1989, the last year for which statistics are available, nearly 500 school districts offered federally funded transitional education programs, as against 138 districts in 1985, according to the Education Department.

Although federally funded programs represent a small portion of the total number of bilingual education programs in the country, supporters and critics alike assert that a national snapshot of bilingual education would reflect the trends of the federal statistics, which also indicate that 720 school districts in 1989 offered some type of bilingual education as against 206 in 1985.

One reason transitional bilingual education has flourished is the refinement it has undergone since the 1960s.

WORK: Congress stalls over tax questions

(From 1A)

"Whether we can get it (a tax bill) done depends on what the president can accept," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

After nearly 12 hours in session, lawmakers had little to show for their work, particularly on a day that they hoped would bring an end to their labors for the year.

A crime bill that contained a waiting period for handgun purchases and expanded the federal death penalty was kept off the House floor as leaders sought the votes to enact it. Bush and Republicans were opposed, as were some Democrats.

Lawmakers sent Bush legislation extending unemployment benefits beyond an extension voted two weeks ago. And the House voted 409-21 to slap conditions on renewal of normal trading status with China for next year — a symbolic vote, since the Senate isn't expected to act on the measure until 1992.

"It is going to be a long day," Foley sighed as it began.

And there was no doubting that.

The tax talk came after Bush, under attack from the GOP right wing, expressed enthusiasm for a House Republican plan including a capital gains tax cut.

The talk of a December session was part of the battle for a political leg up before the final gavel, as both Democrats and Republicans tried to cast their parties in the best light going into the 1992 election year.

Bush blasted at Congress anew for going all year without considering his own tax proposals and for having failed to produce a crime bill to his liking.

The anti-crime version favored by Democrats, he groused, would do little to make sure the convicts on Death Row are executed without endless appeals. Without his support, Democrats were left hunting for enough votes and the bill was in jeopardy regardless of the adjournment date, even though it expands the federal death penalty to 53 additional crimes.

Democrats brought out Jim Brady, former press secretary to President Reagan, in a last-ditch effort to win over liberals who objected to the measure.

"The president is holding a gun to the head of the Brady Bill," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., referring to the five-day waiting period for gun purchases included in the crime bill and named after Brady, who was severely wounded by a handgun bullet intended for Reagan.

But it was the GOP chiding on the economy that got the Democrats' goat, during a particularly rancorous day.

"If they want to pass this, let them pass it today.... This idea of dancing around — that's not good enough for the American people," the president said in a statement to reporters later read on the House floor by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the House Minority Whip.

But Democrats said the Republican plan to stimulate the lackluster economy actually amounted to a giveaway to the rich — and welcomed the comparison.

Republicans themselves were divided.

The World

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Serb-dominated Yugoslav army pounded Osijek in east Croatia on Tuesday despite a U.N.-sponsored truce, but elsewhere the cease-fire generally appeared to be holding.

In The Hague, Netherlands, meanwhile, the president of a panel of European Community judges said his group will consider the right of self-determination for ethnic Serbs, a major issue in the Serb-Croat conflict.

Robert Badinter, who heads a five-member arbitration panel working in conjunction with an EC Yugoslav peace conference, said Tuesday his panel would consider the rights of Serb minorities in Croatia and in the neighboring republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina.

He said Serbia also wanted the court to consider the status of existing borders between Serbia and the two republics. The borders were drawn up after the reformation of Yugoslavia following World War II.

The Serbian-led army and Serb insurgents have taken control of more than one-third of Croatian territory since war began after Croatia's June 25 independence declaration. Prior to the war, ethnic Serbs made up about 12 percent of Croatia's population.

Sporadic fighting continued Tuesday east and south of Zagreb, Croatia's capital, even as the federal army began withdrawing men and heavy weapons from other parts of the war-scarred, secessionist republic.

Two people were killed and several wounded in Osijek, the main city of eastern Croatia, which Serb fighters last week said was their next target. Serb-dominated forces captured the city of Vukovar, 20 miles southeast of Osijek, on Nov. 16.

Two other people were killed when Croatian modified crop-dusting planes bombed the Serb-controlled villages of Vera, Tenja and Bobota, southeast of Osijek, the news agency Tanjug reported, quoting Yugoslav army commanders.

It was the first report of a Croatian air attack. Tanjug said 20 houses were damaged in Vera and the local defense force chief was killed.

Croatia has no air force and all the previous bombing was done by the Serb-dominated federal air force.

Weapons and soldiers were seen rushing westward through Belgrade toward eastern Croatia on Monday.

The capture of Osijek would give Serb-led troops control of most of the Slavonia region, which has oil deposits and arable land.

Serb fighters have indicated a desire to colonize the ethnically diverse region with Serb refugees from other parts of Croatia and Yugoslavia.

Proposed plan elicits confusion and mistrust

ELPANCINGO, Mexico (NYT) — For 74 years, the Mexican Constitution has promised land to any citizen who would work it. But there were a few catches: the land could not be rented, mortgaged or sold.

So when a government functionary began telling local farmers here the other day how President Carlos Salinas de Gortari was going to change all that, the men might have been expected to applaud. They did not.

"What?" an older man bellowed over the din that rose in the ruins of a once-vast estate here, not far from where the peasant revolutionary Emiliano Zapata was killed in 1919. "Was the revolution worth nothing? What did all of those people die for? There is nobody, not even the president of the republic, who can take away our land!"

As the official tried to point out over a few shouts of "Viva Zapata," the proposed law would merely allow peasants to rent or sell their plots or join with outside investors; it would no compel them to do so. But the confusion and mistrust was by no means unusual. Officials in Mexico City said they expected such explaining to continue around the country for months.

The tumult underscored how Salinas's plan to transform Mexican agriculture has quickly become the stiffest challenge of his quest to modernize the economy.

"This is touching the very heart of Mexican history of the last 70 years," said Luis Tellez, the under secretary of agriculture who was a principal architect of the proposed laws. "It is the point of no return."

The "agrarian reform" that most Mexicans knew had been a seemingly endless process, the basic tool by which the government redistributed wealth in the countryside and asserted political control over it. But early in November, with 2.5 million peasants still waiting for their plots, Salinas told the country what its leaders had realized for years: that there was no more land to hand out.

In addition to legalizing the sale of redistrbuted land, he also moved to permit large-scale agribusiness ventures, with foreigners free to participate.

While there is little doubt that the Congress, dominated by Salinas's Institutional Revolutionary Party, will approve his plan, the debate reinvigorated the country's floundering political left to the point that the president took the unusual step of inviting opposition parties to propose amendments to the new laws.

Kenya arrests officials in slaying of foreign minister

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — In an apparent response to growing international pressure, Kenya on Tuesday arrested two once-powerful government officials for questioning in the slaying of the foreign minister.

An investigator has called the men prime suspects in the murder of Robert Ouko, who reportedly was investigating government corruption when he was shot and set on fire in February 1990.

The detentions, five in all, followed increasing international pressure on President Daniel arap Moi to halt corruption, improve human rights and move toward multiparty democracy like many other African nations.

But the action did not head off a World Bank decision to halt all aid to Kenya for six month because of human rights violations and demand social and economic reforms. The bank announced the decision after a two-day meeting in Paris of Western donors, including the United States.

The donors declined to announce any specific levels of aid for Kenya for the coming year but made clear their unease with recent events there.

An independent Nairobi newspaper reported that the government seized 5,000 copies of the U.S. magazine Newsweek last week and all copies of the International Herald Tribune for Nov. 17, 18 and 19 because of articles describing government repression. The report was carried by the Daily Nation.

Moi in effect scrapped a judicial inquiry into Ouko's slaying and turned it over to police.

But the lead investigator in the case has raised questions of police corruption. The three members of the commission of inquiry said Tuesday that police had intimidated them and bugged their hotel rooms and that they would not continue their hearing until a "guarantee of our security is forthcoming."

Those arrested included Nicholas Biwott, dismissed by Moi last week as minister of industry, and Hezekiah Oyugi, who was in charge of state security at the time of Ouko's death.

Also detained were Julius Kobia and Jonah Anguka, both regional administrative officers in western Kenya, and George Oraro, a prominent Nairobi lawyer who represented the Ouko family before the judicial inquiry.

Jeremiah Matagara, a senior assistant police commissioner in Nairobi, confirmed the arrests but declined to say whether the five had been charged.

John Troon, a retired Scotland Yard detective who led an investigation into Ouko's death at Moi's request, identified Biwott and Oyugi as his chief suspects in testimony last week before a commission of inquiry. Biwott once was considered one of Moi's closest associates.

Troon testified that he believed Ouko was killed as he was preparing a report on high-level corruption.

Although the president brought in Troon to investigate, there still were allegations that the government was trying to sabotage the inquiry. Troon himself said that government officials, including Anguka and some police officers, had tried to hamper his work.

Police used excessive force to kill, judge rules

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A judge ruled Tuesday that police used excessive force when they fired more than 250 rounds that killed 12 blacks during an African National Congress protest earlier this year.

The ruling by Justice B. O'Donovan was the latest of several judicial inquests that have criticized police handling of unrest in black townships.

The ANC has long accused police of routinely using excessive force against blacks, a charge denied by police commanders.

O'Donovan's finding was referred to the attorney general for possible investigation and prosecution.

In his ruling, O'Donovan said police who fired more than 250 rounds on the crowd in the Daveyton black township on March 24 "exceeded the limits of self-defense."

Police fired on the crowd of ANC supporters after ordering it to disperse. The ANC supporters claimed they were trying to protect themselves from supporters of the rival Inkatha Freedom Party.

Violence broke out when two shots were fired as police began searching protesters for weapons, O'Donovan's ruling said. Police Sgt. Jan Petrus van Wyk then was stabbed to death by six protesters.

The judge said he was unable to identify the six and criticized Daveyton residents for claiming they did not know who killed van Wyk.

"This disclaimer of any knowledge of the attack on van Wyk simply cannot be true," he said.

The judge ruled police were not responsible for the death of an 8-year-old girl who was shot near the clash. He said the bullet that killed the girl did not match police ammunition.

The inquest was part of government efforts to curb what critics consider to be excessive use of force by police.

Yeltsin renames Russian KGB

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin signed a decree Tuesday recasting the Russian KGB into a new State Security Agency, the latest move by the republic's president to reorganize the secret police.

The new agency will be responsible for intelligence, counter-intelligence, fighting organized crime, uprooting corruption and combating terrorism within Russia, the largest of the 12 remaining Soviet republics

Victor Ivanenko, director of the new agency, was quoted by the Interfax news service as saying he has fired 20 of the 70 local KGB chiefs in cities and regions throughout the republic. Another 30 will be replaced soon, he reportedly said.

The Soviet KGB remains, but some of its many functions have been divided up among newly created agencies since the failed August coup against President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in which former KGB Chairman Vladimir Kryuchkov was a conspirator.

A separate organization now is responsible for foreign intelligence, and the Soviet KGB's uniformed border guards have been placed under the control of the national Ministry of Defense.

The Soviet KGB is expected to cooperate with the new Russian agency, but it is unclear how they will share responsibilities and authority.

Yeltsin's government has steadily been stripping power over the economy, science, culture and other fields from Gorbachev's central government.

The Soviet KGB remains, but some of its many functions have been divided up among newly created agencies.

Japan agrees to ban big nets

TOKYO (NYT) — Bowing to American pressure on a sensitive environmental issue, Japan agreed Tuesday to comply with a United Nations moratorium on the use of huge fishing nets in the northern Pacific Ocean that scientists say are responsible for widespread destruction of marine life.

The Japanese decision, announced after a Cabinet meeting, brought an end to an unusually contentious issue between Washington and Tokyo and defused a controversy that had threatened to do further damage to Japan's reputation on environmental matters.

"We made this decision because we have to give consideration to Japan's position in international society," said Masami Tanabu, the minister of agriculture, fisheries and forestry, explaining that Japan was forced to yield because of "severe" pressure from other countries.

The United States has led the drive in the United Nations to ban the use of so-called drift nets by June 30, 1992. The nets, extending up to 40 miles, are criticized as "walls of death" that slaughter vast numbers of dolphins, whales, turtles, birds and fish.

Japan said Tuesday that it would curtail half of its driftnet fishing by the June 30 deadline and the remaining half by the end of 1992, a position that appeared likely to satisfy Washington.

North Korea will permit inspection

TOKYO (NYT) — In one of the first signs that it may be softening its hard-line position, North Korea has announced that it is ready to permit international inspection of its secret nuclear installations if the United States also allows inspections to guarantee it is removing all nuclear weapons from South Korea.

The four-point proposal was vague on some key points, leaving it uncertain how much the North Korean position had really changed. But it included what was, by North Korean standards, conciliatory language and thus represented a potentially modest easing in the verbal jousting of recent months over the inspection issue.

The comments were the latest in a series of exchanges in a quickening diplomatic effort to persuade the North Koreans to halt their nuclear program, which intelligence experts fear may be just a few years away from building a nuclear bomb.

The South Korean government had no immediate comment on the statement. American and Japanese officials said it did not include any major initiatives, but it did appear to show signs that the heavy international pressure being applied on North Korea may be having some effect.

Avoiding the vitriol that usually characterizes such releases, the North Korean statement said it "welcomed" the recent announcement by President Bush ordering the withdrawal of American tactical nuclear weapons from South Korea and Europe.

The statement, issued by the Foreign Ministry, was carried by the Korean Central News Agency in Pyongyang late Monday and was monitored in Tokyo.

In the proposal, the North Koreans said they would sign the accord mandating international inspections of their nuclear installations when the United States begins to withdraw its nuclear weapons from South Korea; would permit simultaneous inspection of its sites with inspection of American bases in South Korea; would negotiate directly with the United States on the inspection question, and would negotiate with South Korea on making the peninsula a nuclear-free zone.

Mrs. Bush puts media on line

First lady Barbara Bush showed earlier this week that she doesn't mince words in dealing with the Washington press corps.

Miffed by recent published reports suggesting that she believes President Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, should be replaced, Mrs. Bush on Monday came to Sununu's defense and put the press in its place.

"It isn't true," she said of the published accounts, "and it's ugly and I don't like it." Furthermore, she added, "He knows it isn't true."

Sununu has been on the receiving end of numerous unflattering articles in the media in recent months and has been remored on his way out for about the same length of time. Such articles regularly start what is known as a "feeding frenzy" by the media.

Mrs. Bush's candor should tell all Americans that they alone must judge the validity of news reports concerning the Sununu mess. That's particularly true in reports emanating from the nation's capital, where news reporters face extraordinary difficulties in obtaining news stories with any measurable difference from those of their colleagues.

In such an atmosphere, the temptation to speculate or to report what "may be" happening can be tremendously strong and, sometimes, the heavy-handed competition pushes reporters over the limit of good journalistic practices.

All that doesn't mean that there has never been a difference of opinion between John Sununu and Mrs. Bush. What it does mean is that some journalists may have tried to stretch their minimal information too far and in the process they stepped on the first lady's toes.

Barbara Bush is a wonderful person, but she's not one to let the news media intimidate her when she thinks the media are wrong.

Her willingness to stand up and speak her mind about excesses of the media is refreshing. It will help to keep the news media honest and possibly spark an always-productive self examination as to whether that fine line between honest, wide open reporting and news column "speculation" is being breached.

China's image of tranquillity tells lies

XIAN, China — Big Brother is watching in this ancient capital, watching through television cameras mounted on a dozen or more street corners. Most of the citizens of this city don't know they are being electronically spied on when they walk down the street.

Anderson

A knowledgeable official pointed out the cameras to us and said they were always going. And like much of the "modern" technology in China, they work very well, he said. He had seen the video tapes. The faces could be discerned and sometimes even private conversations could be picked up at intersections.

The official used the Chinese expression for "tranquillity on the outside, repression within." This is a society that, to outsiders, appears calm, but inside is seething under the government jackboot.

It is fitting that unseen soldiers would be watching the people of Xian today. This is the city where, in 1974, one of the wonders of the world was discovered — 8,000 life-sized clay figures of soldiers and horsemen entombed with an emperor who died during the 200s B.C. The soldiers, now excavated, stand in a 22-square-mile sunken area, in row after row as they were designed to be, guards to protect the dead emperor on his journey to the next life.

The Chinese put on a show for tourists in Xian that is tranquil on the outside and repressed within. An underground army of real people rules the lives of these citizens when the tourists aren't looking.

It was the same in Tiananmen Square. The government official told us that unknown to the people in the square, video cameras were rolling during their demonstrations, and the tapes were used to identify offenders and bring them to swift trials, convictions and sometimes executions.

The demonstrations spread to Xian, too. U.S. intelligence sources believe that thousands of Chinese citizens were arrested in the wake of the demonstrations in Beijing and other parts of the country. The majority of them were peasants and workers, not students and intellectuals, and they were sent to prison and forced-labor camps. Hundreds were secretly executed as criminals.

Officially, the Chinese admit to having 1.26 million people imprisoned in "re-education" camps. But the human rights group Asia Watch thinks that the number may be as high as 20 million people, or one in every 50 Chinese. Asia Watch has been able to prove that those prisoners are forced to make consumer goods, some of which are then exported to the United States — a fact that the pro-China Bush administration would rather forget.

The worst offenders are not given the luxury of forced labor. They are executed, and their families find out when the body of the loved one is returned home for cremation. With some of those bodies are personal effects including wills and last testaments that have been censored with scissors.

A confidential government edict sent to Chinese court officials in 1984 encourages judges and prison guards to censor the wills of prisoners sentenced to death. The memo complains that some on death row have used their written wills as a way to take a parting shot at the government they hate. Any part of a will that is "slanderous," says the edict, should be censored.

And, the edict further says, "It is strictly forbidden for any person to hold funerals and make trouble on behalf of a criminal who has been executed, or to take the opportunity to disturb public order or engage in other such acts." Even in death, the brave people of China are not given their last words.

ACHILLES' HEEL — The Democrats have found a vulnerable spot in the Bush administration when they talk about the woeful state of health care in America. Some 37 million Americans have no medical insurance at all. Another 50 million are inadequately insured.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The U.S. Postal Service is getting out of the T-shirt business. Too many people complained that it was unseemly for the Postal Service to sell clothes, clocks, stuffed animals and hats in Post Office lobbies while people were lined up waiting to buy overpriced stamps. The truth is, the Postal Service wasn't very good at making a living selling T-shirts, just like it isn't very good at making a living selling stamps.

Bush needs better campaign strategy

WASHINGTON — Foot-in-mouth disease has become so rampant in the Bush administration that Mikhail Gorbachev is trying to think of ways to help his friend shore up the center in Washington.

Safire

The White House counsel, trying to give conservative coloration to a surrender on quotas, circulates a policy that the president has not even seen; and the new attorney general, after the political trouncing of the old, is shown to be out to lunch.

The tottering chief of staff, having suggested that the president zap the banks by calling attention to usurious credit-card rates, says publicly it was a Bush ad-lib — turning the president into a lightning rod for the chief of staff, a political first.

The groundhog of American prosperity comes out, looks around, and decides to go back into its hole, presaging a winter of discontent.

As a result, a less cocky president retreats to Camp David to consult the Great Catoctin Spirit about ways to bring a second wind to his heavy-breathing presidency.

The Spirit said: (1) throw John Sununu off the sled to satisfy pursuing wolves; (2) show interest in health care and crime to prove you are not fixated on foreign affairs; (3) blame the Democratic Congress for the droopy economy and attack "liberal carping" as the source of bushwhacking.

That advice is defensive, other-directed and un-presidential. Here is a better way to avoid following Herbert Hoover and Jimmy Carter into one-term presidencies:

1. Recognize the New Hampshire Republican primary as your spring battleground, the result of which will color the coverage of all pre-convention politics and affect poll ratings.

This means your early theme should be to save the country from defeatist isolationism (represented by Pat Buchanan) and populist-coated bigotry (represented by David Duke). If these dark forces take over your party, they will not be stopped by the weak Democrats; insist that "only George Bush" can save the country from the America-firsters of the right and the government-firsters of the left.

Have John Sununu declare "I shall go to New Hampshire." Assign him the task of running your campaign there, providing him not only a face-saving exit from Washington but making use of his undeniable New Hampshire organizational talents.

You will, of course, lose in New Hampshire, just as President Johnson was deemed the loser even after winning numerically.

The trick is to turn that primary tactical "defeat" into a campaign strategic asset. Here's how:

2. Boldly grab and widen the safe right-of-center. You're an authentic moderate; this means the left considers you mean-spirited and the far right condemns you as unprincipled, and both are partly correct, but it also means that your real self is neither the Willie Horton-basher nor the new tax seller-outer.

The economy will either react to low interest rates and stimulating deficits and turn up soon or it won't; cut out the losing combination of fretting and jawboning.

First, take advantage of a beatable challenge: Fight for the soul of your party against the Wrong Right, whose members always despised you and now seek your ruin. You can beat them on everything but abortion, where they can out-anti you, but you're stuck with your minority position there; so present it to centrists as an example of principle over popularity.

If you run as a phony rightie against a centrist-appearing lefty, you'll lose. If you run as an unabashed moderate against the extremes of right and left, you'll win.

Concerned parent offers suggestions

I have learned some things about the school system that concern me. As the parent of a well behaved sixth grader I did not question classroom activities because my child has always done well. At open house and in conversations with teachers, principals and various administration personnel, I confirmed four areas I consider wasteful.

1. Excel math is used in the elementary schools and is purchased by Midland Independent School District (MISD) in addition to the textbook. I personally think those funds could be put to better use. The sixth grade at Travis Elementary was regrouped on Oct. 28. My son has a different math teacher and uses the math book. This will help him prepare for seventh grade, where Excel is not used, but what about the rest of the students?

2. I believe that each child should have a textbook in each subject and be allowed to take that book home. Sixth graders and others share science books and until parents complained, the books were not allowed out of the classroom. I understand from others with children at other schools that the same policy exists throughout the district.

3. I believe the assignments geared to improve achievement test scores are a waste of educational time. Those tests should be a true indication of knowledge, not drilled practice.

4. My final problem concerns access to the school facilities. Due to the cluster system, my son spends nearly 12 hours a day to attend school. The five and a half hours-plus per week he spends on campus waiting on the bus is unproductive. The children are not allowed to use the library facilities or the multipurpose building. The first week of November a system was developed for select books to be taken to the cafeteria. We pay a librarian to be at school until 4 p.m. and yet access to the reference material or other services is not allowed. If the only facilities our kids can use are the classroom and the cafeteria, eliminate the expense of libraries, multipurpose rooms and computer labs and build the needed classrooms.

I realize my views are not necessarily those of the majority of parents, but I would like to alert other parents with children doing well to ask questions, look at classwork and don't assume school hasn't changed since you were there.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 27, the 331st day of 1991. There are 34 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On November 27, 1978, San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk, a gay-rights activist, were shot to death inside City Hall by former supervisor Dan White.

On this date:

In 1839, the American Statistical Association was founded in Boston.

In 1901, Army War College was established in Washington D.C.

In 1910, New York's Pennsylvania Station — at that time, the world's largest railway terminal — opened.

In 1939, the play "Key Largo," by Maxwell Anderson, opened at the Ethel Barrymore Theater in New York.

In 1953, playwright Eugene O'Neill died in Boston at age 65.

Politicians want only employed middle class

As the political rhetoric heats up, we hear more and more about the "middle class" taxpayer who carries the financial burden of the country. Both parties are promising him relief. There is an obvious reason for this. The middle class continues to represent the largest voting bloc and still has money to give to a political campaign.

Buchwald

But the way things are going you can be riding high as a member of the middle class one day and be really low class the next. This is what happened to my tennis partner, Woody Turtle. He had a good job with a consulting company. He was not only middle class, he owned a Mercedes Benz and went skiing at Sun Valley, where he mingled with the upper-upper class, and once even had hot chocolate with Sylvester Stallone.

When Turtle's company found itself out on the sidewalk with all its filing cabinets, Turtle was canned and became one of VISA's greatest credit card risks. He talked it over with me in the sauna. "I'm out of a job. Does that mean I am no longer considered middle class?"

"I wouldn't go that far," I assured him. "But let's say that you're not as alluring to the politicians as you were before. They're aiming all their promises at the people who are still working."

"I'm no different than I was before. I have the same education, and I'm trying to hold on to my house. Don't you think that the president will give me something for that?"

"He'd like to, but this election is going to be won on which party gives the most to the middle class. It's not your fault that you lost your job. At the same time, it isn't the president's. Since you're not a wage earner any more the pollsters have you down as a political liability. Frankly, the president considers you an embarrassment."

"What about the capital gains tax? Am I entitled to that?"

"You would be if you had any money. The capital gains tax is for businessmen who'd use their money to invest in America. People in the lower class would rather use theirs to pay their bills."

"How do I get back into the middle class so that Bush will respect me?"

"It's not easy. More and more people are being dropped from the preferred-voter list because they're laid off. Many are picking up unemployment checks. They don't say it out loud, but Washington is very suspicious of those who need government money to get them through the recession. President Bush rarely makes a political appeal to them for votes because he considers unemployed people 'budget busters.' "

"I'm in a tough spot," Turtle said. "This is the last sauna I'll be able to afford. I doubt if I'll ever be in a position to buy another can of tennis balls again. Whatever happened to the American dream?"

"Reagan dreamed it, and we all went broke. Look, Turtle, I don't care if you're homeless, lower class, middle class or upper-upper class. You're still my friend. You may not be the type of voter the politicians wish to appeal to, but someday you'll be back on top, and you will no longer be considered a disgrace to the economy of this country. I have to go now. They're holding a political rally this afternoon for all the people in Virginia, Maryland and the District."

Turtle asked, "Can I come?"

I was embarrassed, "I wish I could take you, but it's just for middle-class people in the area, and you would probably feel terribly uncomfortable."

Court passes ruling on AIDS insurance

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that employers who provide self-insured health plans for their workers have the right to substantially reduce medical benefits to those with AIDS-related illnesses.

The Nov. 4 decision by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals could hurt patients with other illnesses, lawyers involved in the issue said in interviews this week.

"If this ruling stands, it's a question of any illness that an employer decides to exclude from their health plan, not just AIDS," said Thomas B. Stoddard, executive director of Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York City.

"A self-insured employer could decide leukemia is too expensive, or for that matter any type of cancer or any other illness."

It was the first federal appeals court ruling of its kind and becomes law in Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi unless overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court. A decision on whether to ask the high court to review the ruling will be made by Dec. 5, Stoddard said.

■ More national news/5B

The ruling, in one of two cases in the federal system, focused on whether employers can legally deny health benefits to a few of their sickest employees in order to continue benefits for the rest of their work force.

Stoddard is one of the attorneys representing John McGann in a lawsuit against a Houston music store that cut his medical benefits after he told them he had acquired immune deficiency syndrome. McGann's benefits dropped from $1 million to $5,000.

Supporters said the ruling backs the right of self-insured employers to choose between providing catastrophic care for a few seriously ill workers or providing benefits for all employees by limiting coverage needed by a few.

The statute reviewed by the court is the only federal statute that provide protection against discrimination by companies that self-insure, Stoddard said this week.

If it is ruled to have little or no meaning, he said, companies that self-insure can escape both federal and state regulation.

"In essence, under this ruling, a company can set one group of employees against another by deciding what are acceptable illnesses to cover and what aren't," Stoddard said.

Atlanta AIDS Project Attorney Chip Rowan, who is handling a similar case before the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, agreed the decision could be used to eliminate coverage for other expensive diseases.

"This leaves anyone with a catastrophic illness vulnerable to having their benefits cut off," said Rowan, who expects a spring ruling in his case.

The 5th Circuit said federal law does not dictate what type or level of benefits employers must offer workers. The H&H music store argued that by reducing benefits to McGann, it saved health benefits for other employees.

Congress OKs boost in benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress on Tuesday voted easy approval of a bill expanding unemployment benefits beyond the improvements enacted just two weeks ago.

The measure, a response to lawmakers' complaints that the earlier legislation shortchanged some states, gives extra weeks of benefits to people in 23 states and adds about 200,000 jobless Americans to the new coverage.

It also liberalizes trade with several nations in South America and East Europe.

The Senate approved the bill on a voice vote and the House followed suit a short time later, sending the measure to President Bush for his expected signature.

"It assures jobless Americans in all 50 states they will have more time to find work and fewer worries about how they will pay the mortgage," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

But approval was not universal. "Once again Congress has cringed before the icon of political expediency," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas. He said the bill would extend benefits to more than half a dozen states where they are not needed.

Bush fought Democratic efforts since the summer to expand benefits for the 300,000 people per month who have used up the regular 26 weeks of unemployment coverage during the recession.

But the president, under attack as the economy continued to falter, relented after Democrats agreed to minor tax changes to pay for the changes. He signed a $5.3 billion package helping 2.8 million Americans on Nov. 15.

The new bill sweetens the earlier one by giving all eligible people who have used up the regular 26 weeks of coverage at least 13 extra weeks, instead of the six extra weeks people in 23 states would have gotten.

And it lets people in all states qualify for the extra coverage if they used up their regular benefits anytime after last March 1. Under the old bill, people in 18 states qualified only if they used up the regular coverage since Nov. 17. The Labor Department says this makes 200,000 more people eligible for coverage.

Thousands stay home this holiday

NEW YORK (AP) — Fewer Americans plan to hit the road this Thanksgiving holiday, partly due to the lingering recession.

The American Automobile Association predicts 19.5 million folks will travel 100 miles or more from home by auto to observe the Thursday holiday. That's down 4 percent from the 20.4 million who ventured out for turkey feasts last Thanksgiving, the auto club said.

Even though gasoline prices are sharply lower this year, the AAA projection of holiday travelers is the lowest since the group began this type of survey during the height of the economic boom in 1985.

"Since that time, travel has decreased fairly constantly on this holiday," said Geoff Sundstrom, a spokesman for the AAA, headquartered in Orlando, Fla.

Actual numbers of holiday travelers tend to be a bit smaller than the projections, he said.

Still, the responses AAA got in this year's survey showed that the recession has a far greater impact on people's travel plans than higher gasoline prices did.

The per-gallon price is about 22 cents cheaper this week than it was a year ago, when Iraq's occupation of Kuwait spooked the oil markets, but that didn't keep as many people home.

Midland utilities director to retire; council seeks replacement

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

City leaders have begun the process of seeking a replacement for John Lowe, utilities director, who has announced he will retire Dec. 31.

Lowe, a 21-year veteran of Midland city administration, said he submitted his formal letter of retirement Tuesday, although city officials have been aware of his plans for some time. City staff then discussed their search process with the City Council in an executive session.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said because of the no-growth policy now in effect at City Hall, the job opening will only be advertised internally.

"We'll post it (the announcement) internally, and much preference will be given to a degreed and licensed civil engineer," McGregor said.

The director of utilities supervises all water, sewer and sanitation systems, including water purification, sewer treatment and the landfill, as well as the effluent farm and well fields, alternate sources of city water.

Under the latest of a series of restructurings, the public works and utilities departments were combined, with the director of utilities supervising all related operations. Other administrators are Ken Jones, deputy director of utilities, and Jack Burns, assistant director of utilities.

Jones, effectively second in command now, is interested in the top job and has the engineering qualifications, McGregor said.

Pet ordinances gain council approval

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Councilmen Tuesday gave final approval to an ordinance that holds pet owners reponsible for keeping animal waste off streets, lawns and sidewalks.

The rule makes it a class C misdemeanor for pet owners to allow waste to remain on public property or private property not belonging to the pet owner. Leaders said it will satisfy property owners and park joggers for whom animal waste is a nuisance.

Dogs, cats, horses — all domestic animals — are subject to the rule.

Among other animal ordinances passed on second reading Tuesday was a set of fee increases that included a tiered scale for impoundment charges. The first impoundment of a pet would cost its owner $40, which could be reduced by $15 with proof of spaying or neutering. Second and third impoundments will cost $50 and $60, respectively.

Residents urge more thought in Project Think

■ Parents, teachers are concerned about racial proportions of the gifted program for first, second and third grades.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Several teachers and parents — attending Tuesday's school board meeting — said administrators need to put some more thought into Project Think.

Project Think — the program which serves the top 20 percent of students in the first, second and third grade — has only a handful of minorities enrolled.

Patricia Maurer, Project Think program coordinator, said students were identified for the program in a blind test.

"Students were given a number," she said. "We didn't have their names, ethnicity, school, origin or gender."

Candidates for Project Think were ranked on the basis of 10 items, including scores from national standardized tests, IQ, grades, teacher recommendation, a sample of writing and critical thinking skills.

"Selecting students was not totally test dependent," Ms. Maurer said. "We used a portfolio approach to look at items in a file including a writing sample and teacher recommendations."

A committee of principals and teachers made the selection.

Sandra Green, a teacher at Washington Elementary School, said she became physically ill witnessing the disappointment of the Project Think students who were not admitted to the GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program in the fourth grade.

Project Think identifies a pool of the top 20 percent of pupils in each grade. GEM — which serves fourth, fifth and sixth graders — serves the top five percent of students, according to state guidelines.

"I am concerned as a teacher and a parent," Ms. Green said. "We get these students all pumped up in the first through third grade and then let them down in the fourth when they don't make it into the GEM program."

Ms. Green also questioned the lack of Hispanics in the program. She suggested implementing a probationary six-week program to see if some students — who did not qualify for gifted programs — could make the grade.

Shawn Edgerton, another teacher at Washington, questioned how much the selection committee weighed the national test scores and the cognitive ability test. "Every year I recommend kids who don't get into the program," she said.

Ms. Maurer said the only way to increase the number of minorities in the the gifted programs "overnight" would be to instill a quota system.

"Some districts have done this. There will be trade-offs," she said. "It would mean some Anglo kids who didn't qualify would have higher test scores than some minorities in the program."

"Nobody is asking for a quota system," said Larry Goodwin. "That is a knee-jerk reaction ... We would like equality in the program."

"I don't see quota as a bad word," said Isabel Jiminez of LULAC (League of United Latin American Citizens). "I see it as making things equal. The top 20 percent of any race is going to achieve."

Debbie Kiser, a Hispanic and a Project Think teacher, said, "Do I

Santa Rita Elementary wins award

Rusk Elementary receives honor for increased PTA participation

Staff Report

Midland's Santa Rita Elementary School was named the state's Outstanding School Volunteer Program by the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association.

Students and staff honored the school's volunteers with an appreciation rally Tuesday, with a special "thank you" going to Susan Johnson, the school's Volunteers-In-Public Schools (VIPS chairperson).

Ms. Johnson coordinated the appreciation process, detailing the 10,000 plus hours of volunteer activities that took place at the campus during the 1990-91 school year.

"The primary purpose of the volunteer program is to enrich the partnership between home, school and community through an organized volunteer program that maximizes educational opportunities for all students," Ms. Johnson said.

Among the activities coordinated included:

■ "Apples for Students," in which volunteers provided computer training to fellow volunteers, staff members and more than 500 students.

■ "The Wildcat Cafe," a special cafeteria seating area used to reward positive student behavior.

■ Multicultural awareness programs.

■ Pen pal program to servicemen and women during Operation Desert Storm.

Santa Rita Elementary was chosen from a list of 12 finalists.

Rusk Elementary also was honored as one of four finalists for the PTA's Project Participate Award. This awards category targets projects aimed at enhancing parental participation.

Through a special promotion with the local skating rink, KC's Nutty Roller, membership in the PTA has increased more than 20 percent. The second annual Grandparents' Drive increased membership by students' grandparents, local and out-of-town, three-fold, officials said.

Area cotton candy maker wins international inventors club award

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Native Midlander Reuben Darnall has become a part of an elite circle of entrepreneurs, joining the International Hall of Fame of the Inventors Club of America.

Darnall, 37, founder of Big Top Enterprises, a cotton candy-manufacturing concern located in Big Spring, was honored as "Entrepreneur of the Year" and received the "New Product of the Year Award" for reviving what Inventors Club founder and president Dr. Alexander T. Marrinaccio called a dormant product.

Others honored at the recent banquet included Alan Rand, inventor of the night vision system, Paul Braddy, creator of the "soft tomahawk" used by Atlanta Braves baseball team fans during the recent World Series, and 94-year-old Nick Robales, inventor of the "Escape Line" and the flamethrower.

Darnall's story began in November 1990 when he borrowed a friend's cotton candy machine to sell the product to raise money to send care packages to troops stationed in the Persian Gulf. In January he and his friend began a cotton candy operation in Midland Park Mall. According to Darnall, during Super Bowl weekend, he sold 1,778 bags of cotton candy at $1 per bag.

At the time, Darnall was unemployed, his wife was cleaning houses and the family was on food stamps.

Misfortune was not new to him.

At 13 months he was diagnosed as a Grand Mal epileptic. "At 18 months, I was placed in an iron lung and pronounced dead twice. Call it luck, fate or whatever, but to this day, I believe that God's hand was upon me and he has always had a special purpose for my life."

When he was 15, his parents were told he would never grow to adulthood, marry, have children or be self-supporting.

They were wrong.

He is married to Denissa, whom he credits with helping build his business, and is the father of three children. A fourth, a girl, died in 1988 at the age of five.

Bivins blasts redistricting plans

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, accompanied by John McCamish, Senior Trial Council on redistricting lawsuits, spoke to a sparse crowd of Midlanders Tuesday night and lambasted the various congressional redistricting proposals.

Redistricting will affect U.S. congressional districts, as well as state senate and representative districts.

Lawsuits covering all three levels have been filed by the Republican Party of Texas.

But Bivins is most concerned with the impending split of Midland into the jurisdiction of three U.S. congressional districts.

"Splitting Midland in such a way — where people in one town would be represented by three different representatives — is uncanny, and I believe it is what concerns the people of Midland the most," he said.

Midland currently is represented by U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, a San Antonio Republican.

McCamish, who is president of McCamish, Martin and Loeffler law firm in San Antonio and who is currently primarily representing the Republican Party of Texas, called the actions political gerrymandering and accused state Democrats of "trying to maximize the number of Democrats that people can elect."

Bivins called McCamish a "general in the biggest war the state of Texas has had to fight in 10 years," referring to a prior lawsuit challenging redistricting plans.

Lindsey Dingmore Jr., administrative assistant to Bivins, said the senator has offered alternative plans to the proposals which would limit the number of cities to be representatively split.

"While Sen. Bivins would love to represent Midland, we realize that the proposals aren't fair in how they divide communities," said Dingmore. "It also isn't fair to other Republican senators who would be placed in districts heavily dominated by Democrats."

On the state senatorial level, plans call for Midland County and part of Ector County to move from the 25th District to the 31st District. Under this proposal, Bivins would inherit the area now served by Sen. Bill Sims (D-San Angelo).

"District 31 should stay in the Texas panhandle," said Bivins. "And the legislature is not where this battle stops. We're fighting it, and we know the citizens of Midland are outraged at the plans."

Judge stops nuclear waste shipments to WIPP

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday ordered the government to halt its plans to ship nuclear waste to an underground storage facility near Carlsbad, N.M.

Congress has not authorized the storage of radioactive waste at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, said U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn, ruling in favor of the state of New Mexico, which challenged the plan.

The Energy Department wants to ship as many as 8,500 drums of plutonium-contaminated waste from Idaho to the plant 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad. The test program was intended to help officials decide whether to use WIPP as a permanent disposal site.

However, Penn wrote, "Defendants have presented no convincing evidence that the hazardous waste materials they seek to introduce in the WIPP site can be retrieved."

State officials contended the underground salt beds could collapse and make it impossible to remove the radioactive waste, thus making WIPP a permanent storage site by default.

In Santa Fe, New Mexico Attorney General Tom Udall said he was "very pleased and excited by what the judge has done today."

DEATHS

Carolyn Bostwick

Funeral services for Carolyn Bostwick of Midland have been set for 10 a.m. today at Bellview Baptist Church with the Rev. G.A. Mabee officiating. Graveside services will be at 3 p.m. at Crane Memorial Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Bostwick

Pallbearers will be Keith Cotton, Bryan Yancey, Bart Ryan, Dean Cope, Jack C. Russell and Erwin Lehker.

Mrs. Bostwick died Monday at her residence.

She was born March 21, 1944, in Odessa and was reared in Crane, where she graduated from high school in 1962. She met John Bostwick in Crane in 1961 and they were married on Nov. 24, 1962. They had lived in Midland since 1962.

Mrs. Bostwick attended commercial colleges in Midland and Odessa, graduating in 1963. She was employed with several businesses in the Midland area.

Survivors include her husband; one son, John Cal Bostwick of Tampa, Fla.; one daughter, Sonya Bostwick Cotton of Midland; her parents, Frank R. and Lila Yancey of Odessa; one brother, Bryan Yancey of Odessa; two grandchildren; three nieces and five nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Building Fund of Bellview Baptist Church.

Christine Long

Memorial services for Christine Long of Midland have been set for 10 a.m. (MST) Tuesday, Dec. 3, at First United Methodist Church in Roswell, N.M., with Associate Pastor Tim Thurson officiating.

She died Tuesday at a Midland hospital.

She was born June 17, 1918, in Del Norte, Colo. She received her RN degree from Presbyterian Medical Center in Denver, Colo., in 1939. A year later she met Charles Long in Denver, and they were married Jan. 4, 1941, in Colorado Springs, Colo.

They lived in Milo, Fairfield and Waterloo, Iowa, before moving to Roswell, N.M., where they lived for 16 years.

While in Waterloo, Mrs. Long was the head nurse in the operating room at Allen Hospital.

They just recently had moved to Midland.

Mrs. Long had been a member of First United Methodist Church in Roswell, N.M.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Charles N. Long of Lubbock; one daughter, Patricia Breen of Midland; one sister, Jeanne Hoogendyk of Englewood, Colo.; two grandchildren and one niece.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland 79702.

Eula Mae Murdock

Services for Eula Mae Murdock of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. today at Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield and Royce Griffin officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Murdock

Mrs. Murdock died Saturday at her residence.

She was born May 3, 1923, in Lipan and lived there until 1929 when she and her family moved to Midland. She met Art Murdock, and they were married Sept. 27, 1939, in California. In 1940, the Murdocks moved to California and then returned to Midland in 1963.

They owned and operated A&M Upholstery. The Murdocks retired in 1988.

Mrs. Murdock was madame president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles from 1986-87.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Wayne Murdock of Cresent Gardens, Calif.; two daughters, Margaret Bledsoe of Lancaster, Calif., and Joyce Dourgherty of Fresno, Calif.; one sister, Mrs. Alvey (Virginia) Bryant of Greenwood; 14 grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; two nieces and four nephews.

She was preceded in death by her sister, Margaret Nutt.

Olen Coomer

Services for Olen Coomer, 65, of Andrews are set for 2 p.m. Friday at Second Baptist Church in Andrews with the Rev. Mike Henson of Calvary Baptist Church officiating. Interment will follow at Andrews Cemetery under the direction of McNett Funeral Home.

He died Monday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Born Dec. 24, 1925, in Hamilton, Coomer lived in Andrews 10 years after moving there from Kayenta, Ariz. He married Ellen Irene Honey Dec. 21, 1946, in Andrews.

Coomer retired from Peabody Coal Co. in March. He was a member of the McKinney Acres Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Ellen Coomer of Andrews; two sons, Rodney Coomer and Roy Coomer, both of Andrews; four daughters, Linda McQuitty of Andrews, Darlene Hernandez of Needles, Calif., Deborah Mansker of Page, Ariz., and Lana Attar of Flagstaff, Ariz.; a brother, Elmer Coomer of Midland; two sisters, Linnie Hall of Midland and Merle Carruth of Andrews; 18 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Aubrey Smith

Graveside services for Aubrey T. Smith of Midland have been set 11 a.m. Friday at the Eldorado Cemetery in Eldorado with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Smith died Monday at his residence.

He was born Nov. 14, 1913, in Eldorado, where he attended high school and played on the football team.

He married his high school sweetheart, Anna Ruth Smith. They later moved to San Angelo where he was employed as a building contractor. Upon retiring, he moved to Midland and was active in the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Survivors include two daughters, Lee Ware and Tommie Ruth Smith, both of Tampa, Fla.; one sister, Mildred McCollum of Alpine; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Sue Puckhaber

Sue Katherine Puckhaber of Dallas, formerly of Midland, died Sunday in Dallas.

Services will be at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at the Sparkman/Hillcrest Chapel on Northwest Highway in Dallas with Joe Nix and Hugh Rucker officiating. Interment will follow at Hillcrest Memorial Park.

She was born Feb. 8, 1932, in Wilmington, Del., to Edward and Rachel Puckhaber. They moved to Dallas in 1933. She attended Parks Cities schools and graduated from Southern Methodist University in 1954.

She taught school in Midland and Corpus Christi prior to meeting her husband, Everett Puckhaber. They were married on Dec. 13, 1958, at her parents' home in Dallas.

She had been a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority, the Assistance League of Houston and the Assistance League of Dallas. She had been a longtime member of the Preston Road Church of Christ in Dallas.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Edward Puckhaber of Houston; and one daughter, Katherine Clement of Dallas.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Cancer Society.

RETIRES: Director retires

"I told him just about everything I know," Lowe said. "He knows where everything is and how it works."

But McGregor said any qualified person would be considered for the position. He said city management will appoint a new director after a search process of several weeks.

"We discussed our plans with the council as a courtesy, but they don't need to approve of our choices," he said.

According to the city charter, administrators are appointed by the city management.

councilman, continued to vote against the measures, saying the percentage increases were too high. The boarding fee increased from $3 to $5 per day, or $6 per sick animal. Flea and tick dips will now cost $12 per animal.

Ferrets must have annual rabies shots under the new ordinance, and it is illegal to keep an ostrich or emu in the city limits.

In addition, councilmen gave first-reading support to a change in the licensing method for off-leash training of pets in city parks. Licenses, at a cost of $5 per year, will be issued by Animal Control Director Coy Willis.

Under the former ordinance, pet owners had to secure a license from the community services department, and the license had no time limit. Willis said limiting the time will allow animal control officers to better control off-leash training, because loose animals pose a greater threat in city parks.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Man pleads guilty

Staff Report

A Midland chiropractor pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Midland Tuesday to one count of violation of mail fraud.

Howard Gregory Cooper, 40, proprietor of the Cooper Chiropractic Clinic at 4411 W. Illinois St., was arrested on Oct. 25 by members of the Intelligence Unit of the Texas Department of Public Safety and federal investigators.

The arrest occurred after a federal grand jury charged him with six counts of mail fraud. According to the indictment, Cooper allegedly devised a scheme to defraud health insurance companies by submitting false medical claims through the mail.

Sentencing for Cooper is set for Jan. 16, 1992.

Court sentences man

A 40-year-old Kermit man was sentenced in U.S. District Court Monday to two and a half years in prison and two years supervised release in connection with attempting to extort $1 million from an Odessa grocery store in July, federal officials said.

James Houston Reed II, who was arrested on Oct. 7 as a result of a 10-week investigation by the Odessa Police Department and the Department of Public Safety, pleaded guilty to the charge on Oct. 24.

Reed threatened to place contaminated products on the shelves of Thriftway Grocery Stores if not paid the money demanded, officials said.

Tip leads to arrest

Two Midland residents were charged with possession of a controlled substance early Tuesday morning after narcotics officers from the Midland County Sheriff's Department recovered about one ounce of cocaine after acting on a Crime Stopper's tip, local officials said.

Melissa Ramos, 23, and Jaime Flores, 26, were arrested at 2911 W. Louisiana St. at 3:20 a.m. Bond was set at $30,000 by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe. The cocaine has an estimated street value of $1,500, officials said.

Police arrest four

Four men were arrested Tuesday for possession of about 50 pounds of marijuana in Ector County, federal officials said.

The men, arrested by the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, made an initial appearance before a U.S. Magistrate Tuesday afternoon.

Arrested were Daniel Bone, 26, Arturo Ruedas, 38, Matias Montoya, 32, and 25-year-old Carlos Hernandez.

been contacted by people from across the U.S. He is in contact with interested parties in Helsinki, Finland and San Juan, Puerto Rico. He estimates the responses at nearly 130.

"I'm getting more response out of this than I ever dreamed of," he remarked. "I had no idea there was so much interest."

Since getting started earlier this year, he has changed his business practices. He no longer finances others or merely lets them take over his accounts. "Now I sell them a business package and let them operate it on their own," he explained.

Right now he's excited about developing a way to package cotton candy that would extend its shelf life to eight to 10 months as opposed to eight to 10 days.

It should open new markets for him.

"This way I could send cotton candy to school systems for fundraising, or ship it to Wal-Mart or Sam's Wholesale Clubs or HEB stores. I could ship it anywhere in the world without worrying that it would go bad before it can get on the truck."

He has talked with a number of investors willing to invest in the company and the new packaging, expanding it considerably, but has balked at accepting the money because these investors generally want controlling interest in return.

When he's not busy making or delivering cotton candy or talking with potential cotton candy makers, he works with the West Texas Epileptic Association. He helped put on a fund-raising cook-off and dance in Big Spring this past December, and plans to make it an annual event, eventually adding fund-raisers in Midland, Lubbock and Abilene.

"I'm real happy I can afford to do things I couldn't do earlier, like putting on these shows and providing for my family," he said.

He admits that "I have big dreams, and I'm excited about what next year will bring."

But he hasn't forgotten where Big Top Enterprises got its start — with a borrowed cotton candy machine.

PROGRAM: Residents question Project Think as a Hispanic want our curriculum to come down? We want to push (the standards) up. I went to a convention and found out that 19 percent of our dropouts are gifted and talented. We need to serve their needs, too."

Persons addressing the board asked what could be done to involve more minority students in gifted programs and serve students who don't qualify for the gifted program but aren't served by a general program.

"I'm opposed to a quota system," said board trustee James Fuller. "But parents came to us more than a year ago about this very same issue."

Fuller noted when parents asked for another tier to serve students who didn't qualify for honors but were unsatisfied with the general courses, the board created the advanced tier.

"Why don't we consider the same type of approach on this issue? It is very apparent that parents want a program which addresses their students' level of achievement. I submit to you that students may not be quite good enough for GEM, but they are a whole lot better than the program in which they are subsequently placed."

Fuller said 11 Project Think teachers for 22 elementary campuses may not be sufficient.

"I'm not opposed to hiring additional teachers," he said. " ... we knock ourselves out trying to save money relative to construction projects. Why don't we spend as much time on education."

Fuller also said he was "tired of people who say: We want quality education, but we don't want to pay for it."

Jimmie Kelly, executive director of compliance for the school district, said he would research the specifics of creating another gifted program and how it would impact GEM.

MISD trustees tabled the motion to rebid the construction of additions to Fannin, Pease and Washington elementary schools. The initial bid, presented at the Oct. 29, meeting was rejected when it came in more than $538,000 over budget.

Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services, said he needed time to firm up numbers with architects on a proposal with a smaller scope of work.

"I think, from ballpark numbers, we show that we can reconsider the original bid with changes," Heidelberg said. "Campbell construction was the low bidder on the original bid, and I think we can work with him."

Board President Ken Marks noted that decreasing costs by decreasing the amount of work would not downgrade the facilities.

"There are 30 areas where we could find a savings. This will not compromise the buildings in any way," Marks said.

Trustees called a 5 p.m. Dec. 5 meeting to consider rebidding for the construction project.

In other action, trustees approved the selling of the remaining $4 million of bonds. Merrill Lynch was the low bidder on selling the bonds with an effective interest rate of 6.64 percent.

Trustees noted that interest rates were very low and projected they would save taxpayers $46,000.

Offices observe holiday

Staff Report

Local governmental offices, including those at city, county and school level, will be closed both Thursday and Friday for the Thanksgiving holidays.

All will reopen next Monday.

Local banks will be closed on Thursday but will be open on Friday.

The U.S. Post Office will be closed on Thursday but will resume regular delivery on Friday.

Meanwhile, local businesses, many of whom will be closed Thursday, are gearing up for major Christmas shopping on Friday, the day after Thankskgiving. That is traditionally one of busiest shopping days of the year.

Law enforcement officers will be on duty as usual throughout the holiday weekend.

Plaintiffs rest in redistricting case

EDINBURG (AP) — A state House redistricting map submitted by plaintiffs in a legal fight over voting boundaries addresses concerns expressed by the U.S. Justice Department when striking down an earlier plan, a witness testified Tuesday.

The map creates five to six new minority seats and strengthens some of the weaker minority districts, said George Korbel, the main architect of the plan and an expert witness in the redistricting case before Judge Mario E. Ramirez.

The map also has been supported by most Hispanic representatives in South Texas and El Paso County, Korbel said.

"The plan meets all of the standards that each one of them set," he said.

Attorneys for minority interests opposing a twice-rejected state House map are asking Ramirez to approve their plan for use in upcoming weeks as candidates begin filing for the 1992 elections.

The trial in 332nd state District Court is expected to resolve at least some of the disputes surrounding redistricting maps approved by the Legislature earlier this year.

The case revolves around a lawsuit challenging the state's use of census figures to redraw Texas voting boundaries.

The census missed about 500,000 Texans, particularly minorities, according to the plaintiffs. As a result, redistricting plans based on the flawed count underrepresented minorities and diluted their voting strength, the suit says.

The plaintiffs, several South Texas residents who said they were missed in the census, have asked the court to force the state to redraw the lines.

In August, Ramirez declared the maps unconstitutional, saying they discriminated against minorities. He ordered lawmakers to adjust population figures and remap the state accordingly. The state, which argued that it had no choice but to use the census count for redistricting, appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

Before the high court ruled, however, an agreement was reached on a Senate plan, which Ramirez approved last month.

That left only the House map, which in addition to being rejected by Ramirez was also declared invalid by the U.S. Justice Department.

The Justice Department cited specific instances in El Paso County, South Texas and Dallas County where the plan discriminated against Hispanics.

Catfish farm shuts down artesian wells

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The owner of a controversial catfish farm in south Bexar County has sold his fish and shut down his huge artesian wells to comply with a lawsuit filed by two water agencies.

The Edwards Underground Water District and the San Antonio River Authority had filed the suit, demanding Ron Pucek Jr. and the Living Waters Artesian Springs farm stop wasting water.

Pucek sold the fish and turned off the wells Monday.

In a related matter, a diverse group of officials from six counties were gathering Tuesday in San Antonio to begin work on a regional management plan for the Edwards Aquifer.

Austin Mayor Bruce Todd has agreed to chair the sessions, which will include officials from Bexar, Comal, Hays, Medina, Uvalde and Kinney counties. The effort is an attempt to appease Texas Water Commission chairman John Hall, who wants an end to regional feuding over the aquifer, a natural underground reservoir.

The catfish farm, which used 43.2 million gallons of aquifer water a day, has been part of the ongoing water controversy in this region.

Kelly Morris, a spokeswoman for the Edwards Underground Water District, said officials with the district and the river authority were pleased with Pucek's action and would not pursue court action that had been scheduled Tuesday.

Officials agreed Pucek had brought the farm's discharge substantially into compliance by cutting the water flow by 95 to 97 of the previous flow.

The flow was cut to about 1.7 million gallons, Ms. Morris said.

Pucek said technical problems prevented him from cutting the flow completely, but that some flow was needed to prevent his ponds from drying out and cracking.

"Because of that degree of progress, we are not going to push for a temporary injunction (Tuesday)," Ms. Morris said.

Advocate suggests lower rates for home insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — The state advocate for insurance consumers recommended Tuesday that the "benchmark" rate for homeowners' insurance in Texas be 5 percent lower than the current maximum rate for regulated companies.

That compares with increases of 15.9 percent and 16.5 percent recommended by Allstate Insurance Cos. and State Farm Insurance Cos., respectively, said Amy Johnson of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel.

For a typical policy on a $100,000 frame house in the Austin area, the cost at the current state rate is $641, according to Ms. Johnson's office.

The public counsel's office said that under her recommendation, that would go to $609; under State Farm's, to $747; and under Allstate's, to $743.

But under a new flexible rating system approved by lawmakers, the benchmark rate is only the starting point.

The new law provides for insurance companies to charge rates that are a certain amount higher or lower than the benchmark without obtaining prior approval from the State Board of Insurance.

Under Ms. Johnson's recommendation, companies could charge up to 15 percent more and 30 percent less than the benchmark rate without getting a specific OK from the board.

The insurance companies, Allstate and State Farm, have recommended that flexibility be allowed for 30 percent above and 30 percent below their proposed benchmark rates.

The State Board of Insurance is scheduled to begin a hearing on the rates Monday.

"I don't think they need to charge that much, and I don't think that we are recommending a rate that's unhealthy to insurance companies," Ms. Johnson said of the insurers' recommendations. "My goal is not to put insurance companies out of business."

Industry spokesmen said that a benchmark rate that is too low could make it harder for some people to get insurance by making it unprofitable for companies to insure them.

"There can be a real problem with availability of insurance," said Roger Parker, Allstate underwriting manager for South Texas, based in Houston.

He said most of his company's homeowners' policies currently are below the board rate. Ms. Johnson said that 81 percent of the premiums written for homeowners insurance in 1990 in Texas were below the state rate.

Jerry Johns, president of Southwestern Insurance Information Service, said severe weather and natural disasters influence how much Texas property owners pay for insurance.

'Certainly a rate increase for property insurance in Texas is needed," Johns said.

Judges reject Bell's rate hike request

HOUSTON (AP) — Prices for directory assistance, call waiting and other services offered by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. should not be raised, judges for the state Public Utility Commission have said.

In two separate cases, PUC hearing examiners Monday recommended against the phone company's requests for higher rates for "custom calling" services and directory assistance, saying that the company offered no proof it needs the money.

Both cases will be decided by the full commission next month.

Southwestern Bell wants to raise the price of call waiting to $3.10 per month from $2.10 per month, and charge higher prices when customers opt for that service in conjunction with other services such as call forwarding, three-way calling and speed dialing.

For certain other combinations of features, customers would pay less than they do now.

The company also wants higher rates for directory assistance calls. Customers still would get three calls free each month, but would be charged 40 cents for every call after that. The current price is 30 cents.

The higher charges for custom calling would increase the company's revenues by $15.9 million. The proposed rates for directory assistance would add another $11 million.

Bob Digneo, a spokesman for Bell, told the Houston Chronicle that Texas has the lowest rates in the country for call waiting service.

"It's the profit from services like call waiting that are used to make the price of basic service as affordable as it is," he said. "They generate profit that is used to subsidize basic local service."

In the directory assistance case, Digneo said, the company is simply trying to recoup the costs of the service, which he contended lost about $11 million every year.

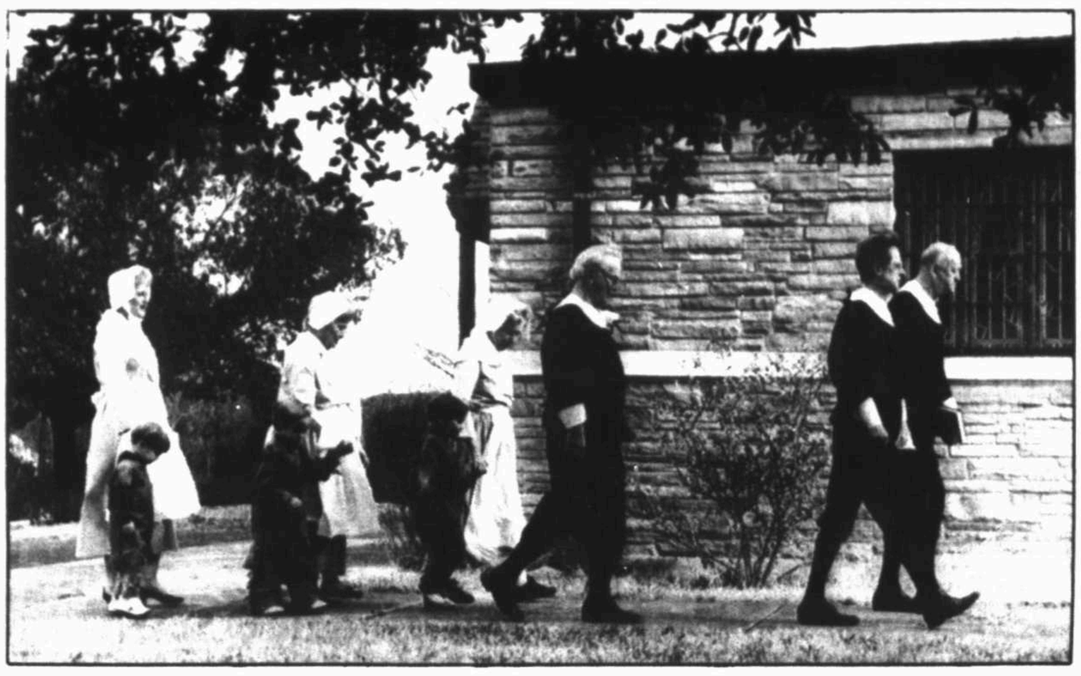
Fort Worth church plans re-enactment of Puritan Thanksgiving



AP Laserphoto

The First Congregational Church in Fort Worth re-enacts a traditional Puritan Thanksgiving.

By Jeff Guinn
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — At 8:30 a.m. Thursday, the blare of a conch-shell horn will summon a group of pilgrims to Thanksgiving worship.

Dressed in suitably sober colors — black for men, gray for women — the group will file solemnly into their church sanctuary, there to be separated by sex on opposite sides of the aisle to hear a holiday sermon and offer hymns of praise, though the hymns must be "lined out" since no hymnals can be used.

The service will be held in Fort Worth, not near Plymouth Rock. Instead of Puritans grateful for eking out a year's marginal survival, these pilgrims will be members of the First Congregational Church, who enjoy re-enacting their denomination's traditional style of worship each Thanksgiving morning.

"It's the one time during the year our church can have its special moment," explained Carol Finley, who has taken part in the Thanksgiving service re-enactment since childhood. "Many people don't know where the Congregational Church has come from, the Puritans. So this is when we blow our own horn — or maybe I should say our conch shell."

In most ways, the First Congregational service mirrors the old Puritan style of worship.

At the conch shell signal, costumed members file into the church sanctuary. As in Puritan times, no levity, even the tiniest smile, is permitted. After men are seated on one side of the aisle and women on the other, a designated "tythingman" steps forward. He carries his traditional stick tipped on one side with a feather and on the other with a small brass weight.

The tythingman raps three times on the floor with his stick, a signal for the congregation to stand in greeting for the minister. The minister then delivers a 30-minute sermon (much shortened from the old Puritan preference for three- or four-hour performances; the real pilgrims felt deprived by anything less).

During the sermon, the tythingman circles behind the congregation with his stick in hand. He uses the brass weight to tap on the heads of men and boys who don't appear to be giving their full attention to the minister. Inattentive women and girls are tickled behind the ear with the feather.

No hymnals were used in Plymouth Rock-era Puritan services; as was the way of that time, this Thanksgiving morning at First Congregational a "precentor" will sing each line of chosen hymns, and the fellowship will repeat after them until the entire hymn is completed.

Also in keeping with the Puritan traditions, no music is played during the service.

"We just feel this gives people something to do on Thanksgiving besides watch football games," Ms. Finley said. "Anyone who'd like to experience the Puritan tradition is welcome to join us."

Ralph Nichols, pastor of the First Congregational, said the service will last approximately 40 minutes.

Hood had $100,000 policy for wife, agent says

FORT MORGAN, Colo. (AP) — Brian Hood was the beneficiary of a $100,000 insurance policy covering his wife Dianne that paid double in the event of an accidental death, an insurance agent testified Tuesday at Hood's murder trial here.

Hood is on trial in Morgan County District Court for first-degree murder in connection with his wife's slaying. Mrs. Hood, 32, was gunned down on Sept. 12, 1990, as she left a meeting for lupus sufferers. Hood is a former resident of San Angelo, where he played college football at Angelo State University.

Hood is accused of plotting with his lover, Jennifer Reali, to kill his wife. Mrs. Reali has confessed to pulling the trigger, but said she did it at Hood's prompting. Hood's attorneys claim Mrs. Reali acted alone to prevent Hood from breaking up their relationship.

In testimony on Tuesday, Raymond Lewis of the Prudential Insurance Co. said Mrs. Hood was covered by a $100,000 life insurance policy that named Brian Hood as beneficiary. Lewis said the policy contained a provision calling for an additional $100,000 to be paid in the event of an accidental death.

If Brian Hood is found to be involved in any way in Mrs. Hood's death, he will be unable to collect on the policy, Lewis said.

Defense attorneys criticized the prosecution for putting a former neighbor of Mrs. Reali on the stand to testify that he saw Brian Hood come to Mrs. Reali's home in July 1990.

Defense lawyers said it was pointless for the prosecution to bring Tomace VanDarwege all the way from California for 15 minutes of testimony about a subject that already has been covered. Both Mrs. Reali and Hood's lawyers have conceded the two had an extra-marital relationship.

On Monday, Hood wept and sniffled while his former boss, Mark Ramey, described the scene at the hospital where Dianne Hood died after the shooting. It was his most emotional display since the trial began.

"He was cursing, he was taking his fists and putting his fists in his hair and literally pulling his hair out," Ramey, Hood's manager at the Prudential Insurance Co., testified Monday about Hood's behavior at the hospital that night.

Ramey said he was one of the first people Hood called to the hospital. Besides working together, the two men were close friends and attended weekly Bible readings together.

Ramey broke down in tears under cross-examination when asked by defense attorney Richard Tegtmeier whether he actually watched Hood pull clumps of hair from his head in anguish.

He said Hood told a policeman at the hospital that "he wanted to go be with Dianne," despite the officer's warning that "it was not a pleasant sight."

Also, Ramey said Hood spoke wildly of revenge.

Student loan agency says outlook improves

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp., which paid a record $244 million in default claims last year, said that he believes things may be looking up.

"Over the last five months, we've seen a steady decline in the number of default claims filed," President Joe McCormick said. "We turned the corner in August or September of last year."

Officials say a shakeout in the default-plagued trade school industry is improving the agency's financial prospects.

Most of the $244 million in claims were covered by federal reinsurance. However, because the Texas guarantee agency's defaults exceeded a rate determined by a federal formula, the state student loan corporation had to pay $14.1 million out of its reserves.

That resulted in a record loss for the 1991 fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

On the positive side, the agency guaranteed fewer loans for students of for-profit trade and technical schools in the year just ended, McCormick said. Loans to such schools have proved risky.

More private trade and technical schools have closed across Texas as the federal government has tightened restrictions on school default levels and loan sources have dried up, said Dee Bednar. Bednar heads the Texas Education Agency's division of proprietary, or for-profit, schools.

Many of those schools get most of their tuition from students who receive low-cost loans from the federally guaranteed loan program.

Bednar said 70 Texas schools closed during the 13-month period ending Oct. 1. Closings have outnumbered openings for the past three years, and the total number of trade and technical schools has dwindled from 342 a year ago to 301 now.

"The main reason for the closings seems to be the lack of lenders in Texas," Bednar told the Houston Chronicle in Tuesday's editions. "Also, there's been a concerted effort ... to more closely regulate those schools."

As trade school fortunes have faltered, the guarantee agency's portfolio mix has begun to shift toward more stable loans, such as loans to students at four-year universities and graduate students, McCormick said. Trade school loans made up 31 percent of the state student loan corporation's portfolio in 1990 but declined to 19 percent in 1991.

McCormick said 68 percent of the $244 million paid in default claims last year went to cover bad loans to students who attended for-profit schools. Students from two-year colleges accounted for 9 percent, and students from four-year colleges defaulted on the remaining 23 percent.

Overall, the student loan corporation's volume grew slightly from $703 million in 1990 to $706 million in 1991.

Highway Dept. says roads clear for holiday travel

AUSTIN (AP) — Holiday travelers should have mostly clear sailing over the Thanksgiving weekend, the Texas Department of Transportation says.

The department said Tuesday that work at most highway projects will come to a halt for Thanksgiving.

There are a few places, however, where motorists may encounter delays, the department said.

On Interstate 45, a 3½-mile stretch south of Corsicana has been reduced to one lane in each direction.

Interstate 35 through Temple will be restricted to one lane in both directions all day Wednesday.

Near Beaumont, the Veterans Memorial Bridge at the Neches River is open only to northbound traffic. Southbound motorists are being routed to the Rainbow Bridge.

In the Corpus Christi area, motorists on U.S. 77 should expect delays near Driscoll.

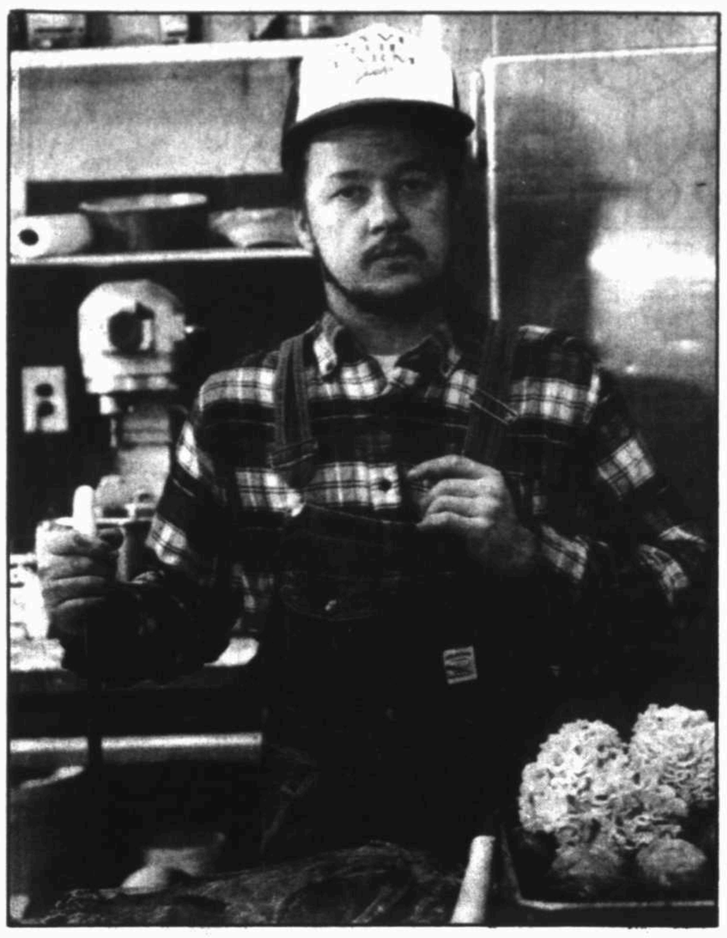
Recession turns donors into receivers



AP Laserphoto

Jack McDavid stands in the kitchen in one of two eateries which he owns in Philadelphia Tuesday. McDavid has organized a citywide food donation network and plans to serve meals to about 250 elderly people who are homebound.

The economic slump has charities struggling to cope with increased numbers of people seeking aid this Thanksgiving, including a "new class of poor" who were the donors of past years, officials say.

A Connecticut church group is turning people away in what its director calls "the most heart-wrenching decision I've ever had to make."

In Michigan, which abolished welfare for 83,000 adults last month, a soup kitchen is facing "astronomical" demand.

In Burlington, Vt., the emergency food service is trying to serve up to 20 percent more people with only a tiny increase in donations.

"Don't tell me that the recession is over," said Ruth Shecter, executive director of the Housing Information Center in Kansas City, Mo. "President Bush needs to walk with the people and find out what it really means."

Capt. Phil Murphy of the Salvation Army in Raleigh, N.C., said donations to his unit are off $18,000 from last year for the Christmas and winter relief drives, but the number of people seeking help has been rising.

"There are more people living from paycheck to paycheck than ever before," he said. "This is a whole different strata of people, and it's going to happen for some time."

In Bridgeport, Conn., hard-hit by economic troubles, a coalition of churches known as Area Congregations Together, or ACT, is turning away about 100 families who sought Thanksgiving food, out of about 250 who applied.

"It's unbelievable, it's tragic, it's the most heart-wrenching decision I've ever had to make," said executive director Kathleen Samela.

Donations to fund the holiday meal program are down so sharply that "we don't know if we can feed the families we've accepted, never mind the ones we've had to turn away," Samela said.

"In our annual mailing asking for donations, we've received a lot of letters from people who have been big donors in the past saying 'I just lost my job. Here's $2,'" she said. "These are people who might have given $10, $25 or more last year."

Kay Wallick, executive director of the Mid-America Assistance Coalition in Kansas City, Mo., described the ranks of new applicants for aid "a new class of poor, new clientele who have never used assistance before. These are people who used to give to the United Way."

Bill Thompson, 47, has been living at the Open Shelter in Columbus, Ohio, since July when he lost his job at a racetrack. Though he found work at a local paper company this month, he still will be spending his first Thanksgiving at a shelter.

"It'll be something new for me. I have to put up with what I can do," said Thompson.

In Jackson, Miss., Cassandra Crump, a 21-year-old mother of five, was one of 50 people who lined up last week at the Community Stewpot, waiting to be screened by volunteers to determine if they were eligible for aid.

"You try to get a job and they just holler at you to come back,"

Smith's lawyers suggest motive

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith's attorneys suggested Tuesday the rape claim against him was motivated by his alleged victim's need for attention. A judge ruled they may again question the woman before trial.

The woman's desire for attention from her family and former boyfriend, and her politically active stepfather's dislike for the Kennedys, have played roles in the case that goes to trial Monday, lawyer Mark Schnapp told Circuit Judge Mary Lupo.

"What this woman was suffering was from a lack of attention ... (causing) a propensity to make a false claim and do something to get attention for herself," Schnapp said.

Also, he said, her stepfather is politically powerful and active, contradicting the woman's own statement that she was fearful of the Kennedy political influence. And the woman knew her wealthy stepfather would support her because of a longstanding dislike of the Kennedys, Schnapp suggested.

Stephen Cohen, attorney for the stepfather, countered that the stepfather didn't have a feud with the Kennedys. The stepfather is a self-described conservative Republican whose complaints with the Kennedys stem only from their liberal politics, Cohen said.

New York schools receive condoms

By Greg B. Smith
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The reaction ranged from applause to anger Tuesday as guidance counselors at two New York City schools and volunteers at subway stops handed out condoms to help stem the spread of the fatal disease AIDS.

The controversial program, which is being watched closely by school officials across the nation, will spread to 14 more New York schools within two weeks and to all of the city's 120 high schools by the end of the school year.

Starting at 9 a.m., guidance counselors at John Dewey High School in Brooklyn and City-As-School, an alternative high school in Greenwich Village, offered students condoms without requiring parental permission.

Kim Bohen, spokeswoman for the city Board of Education, said the program was "well received" Tuesday, but she would not say how many condoms were distributed.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be careful about choosing sides at work. Early in 1992, the economic winds blow good news your way. Review your investments next March. You could find just the business opportunity you have wanted. In August, a low-key approach will work best with conservative financial backers. Sentimental and generous, you find it difficult to say "no" to people. Put your family's needs first next November.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author James Agee, actress Robin Givens, country singer Eddie Rabbitt, journalist Gail Sheehy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Research opens new doors for those in sales. Be alert to technological changes that will help you personally. Romance could complicate some family plans. Be diplomatic and you will get what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Consistency plays an important role in shaping your career. Many eyes are watching you now. Perform to the best of your ability. Be discreet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stay alert and there is no limit to how far your career can go. Asking the right questions produces some extraordinary answers. Be careful how you use certain inside information.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This is no time to be cautious. Strike out in a new direction. You could have the Midas touch when it comes to making money for yourself and your employer! Reinvest profits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Something that is usually expensive could have a low price tag this week. Investigate further. Making your own plans increases your chances for success. A conversation proves reassuring.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not let wanderlust carry you away from your duties just when higher-ups have their eye on you. Work now and play later! Your sense of style can be a tremendous asset.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It is not too late to build a foundation for the future. Open up more when talking with a child. A loving heart is a special gift. You profit from someone else's mistakes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take control of a situation that could affect your future before it is too late. A career goal that has eluded you in the past now moves within reach. Redouble your efforts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Those involved with the introduction of new ideas or products enjoy good luck now. Travel is favored. The arts influence both your outlook and your spending. You continue to choose quality over quantity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): As your confidence grows, so does your success. Work hard, but save more time for family life. Protect your health by eating right and getting enough rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Making excuses will only put you in a deeper hole. Face reality and you will soon devise a winning strategy. Financial backing will come through old friends. Repay a benefactor with loyalty.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Document everything you do at work or someone else's mistakes could cost you as well. You must have faith in what you are doing before you can convince other people. Review your research.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will thrive when surrounded by beauty and order. They dislike mess and feel very uncomfortable when others act crude or angry. Although these Sagittarians like to spend time alone, they do need the support of a few close friends. Encourage them to open up more when talking with their loved ones. These children need to be reassured that someone cares about their feelings and impressions.

Opening lead: ?

Know thine enemy. What you do at the bridge table is sometimes determined by the quality of the opposition. If, for example, declarer knows that the opponents are not the best defenders, a deceptive play might stand a better chance than the technically correct line. On this hand from rubber bridge, a defender who knew the enemy were reliable bidders employed that knowledge to find an unusual lead.

Sitting West was San Francisco internationalist, bridge teacher and cruise director Ron von der Porten. The one thing certain on this auction was that North held at least an eight-trick hand. The other was that declarer surely held a diamond stopper. Since a diamond lead was likely to give declarer the fulfilling trick, West cast about for more fertile ground.

Von der Porten considered leading a heart, but that probably was only delaying the decision. With nothing much to go on, West decided North was more likely to be weak in spades than clubs, so the king of spades hit the table.

There was now just one way for declarer to make the game—win the ace of spades and return the jack, pinning the ten and setting up the nine as the fulfilling trick. Not surprisingly, declarer did not find that line.

Instead, declarer ran six heart tricks. West discarded three diamonds, East high-lowed in clubs to show a feature in the suit, then sluffed a diamond and a spade, and declarer let go three spades and a club. Declarer tried a diamond to the queen. West won and returned the king of clubs, and the defenders were assured of five tricks—three diamonds and one in each black suit.

Dallas County commissioners get preview of Stone's 'JFK'

DALLAS — Dallas County commissioners get a sneak preview of Oliver Stone's new film "JFK" as part of the agreement to allow Stone to film at the assassination site.

If the commissioners are unhappy after viewing the film Tuesday, they can add a disclaimer to its credits. Stone agreed to the terms to obtain permission to film at the former Texas School Book Depository.

Stone

The film, which stars actor Kevin Costner, questions whether Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Stone has kept details of the movie secret.

Commissioner Nancy Judy said they have been asked not to discuss the film with the public or the media. The movie is scheduled for release Dec. 20.

The depository is now the Dallas County Administration Building.

MALIBU, Calif. — Musician Graham Nash and his wife, Susan, donated their collection of 19th-century camera lucida drawings to the J. Paul Getty Museum.

"It's a great collection. I thought it should be in a great place," said Nash, who bought a volume of 316 drawings by Sir John F.W. Herschel in 1974. Nash said he was keeping 36 drawings, which may find their way into other collections.

Nash

The drawings of European landscapes and buildings, made with the aid of an optical device that was a direct precursor to photography, constitutes the bulk of the only known drawings by Herschel (1792-1871).

Herschel was a British astronomer and mathematician and one of photography's early innovators.

"The drawings, done between 1816 and 1865 with an exacting prismatic device that led to the development of modern photography, complement the strength of the Getty's collection," said museum Director John Walsh.

The gift was disclosed Monday.

Nash, a founder of the group Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, began collecting photography in the early 1970s. He discovered the Herschel drawings at a bookstore in London.

ROME — Gian Carlo Menotti, the Pulitzer Prize-winning musical impresario, is raring to go two months after being hospitalized for exhaustion.

"My doctor told me I had an incurable disease — I'm 80 years old," Menotti said at a recent lunch with reporters.

Menotti was hospitalized in mid-September and kept under observation for a couple of weeks.

But Menotti, composer, director and founder of twin arts festivals in Spoleto, Italy, and Charleston, S.C., is barely slowing down.

"Now instead of two glasses of wine, I drink one, and I go to bed at 1 a.m. instead of 2 a.m.," he said. "But I still have two festivals."

Menotti gave a sneak preview of the program for next summer's festival in Italy, announcing that both Richard Wagner's opera "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" and Gaetano Donizetti's "Il Duca D'Alba" will be performed. The Donizetti opera also will be performed in Charleston.

NEW YORK — Art will imitate life as Ivana Trump makes her acting debut on the soap opera "One Life to Live."

Mrs. Trump, who ran the Trump Castle in Atlantic City before her divorce from Donald Trump, will play the operator of a fictitious casino called "Ivana's," also located in the New Jersey resort.

She said she took the role for fun, but also to thank women around the country who supported her during the dark days of her divorce.

"The soap opera is watched mostly by the women in America, and the women have been very supportive in the last year and a half to me," she said.

"It's my way of returning to them something I knew they would enjoy."

The show, taped Monday, will air on ABC-TV on Dec. 18.

BOSTON — Author Diane Middlebrook says she is shocked that a psychiatrist's decision to give her tapes of therapy sessions with the late poet Anne Sexton has set off controversy.

Middlebrook said she expected a flap over her book's discussion of another psychiatrist's relationship with Sexton.

"I thought the scandal that was going to be discussed was the sexual relationship," Middlebrook said in Tuesday's Boston Globe. "I was quite worried that he was going to get in a lot of trouble."

Middlebrook's book says at least five psychiatrists and social workers knew about the sexual relationship between Sexton and her therapist, but none reported it to the medical board.

Johnson dies

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bob Johnson, who died Tuesday of brain cancer just six months after coaching the Pittsburgh Penguins to the Stanley Cup, wanted to be remembered simply as a hockey coach.

Johnson

The Penguins said he was much, much more.

"He was so upbeat, so positive, he created such a very family-like atmosphere, he was really like the father to our organization," Penguins general manager Craig Patrick said. "It takes a special man to take a group of young people and accomplish what he did in such a short period of time."

Johnson died Tuesday morning at his Colorado Springs home, four months after being diagnosed with brain cancer. He was 60.

Doctors in Pittsburgh removed a malignant tumor Aug. 30, but decided against removing another and prescribed radiation. He returned to his Colorado home in early September, but the treatments left him weakened and unable to speak.

Even as he fought for his life, he communicated via notes, sketching out strategy and sending frequent messages to the Penguins via fax machine. His last communique was last week, when his wife, Martha, sent his best wishes to the team's new owners.

Camp Award

DETROIT (AP) — Desmond Howard was awarded the Walter Camp Trophy on Tuesday, the first of what promises to be a harvest of postseason awards for the Michigan split end.

The Camp trophy is given annually to college football's most outstanding player in balloting by coaches and sports information directors of Division I-A schools.

Last year's winner was Raghib "Rocket" Ismail of Notre Dame.

Howard led the No. 4 Wolverines (10-1 overall, 8-0 Big Ten) to their 36th conference championship, their 14th outright, with a dazzling season. The 5-foot-9, 176-pounder scored 23 touchdowns and finished with 1,749 all-purpose yards.

Howard's 138 points this season are a Michigan record.

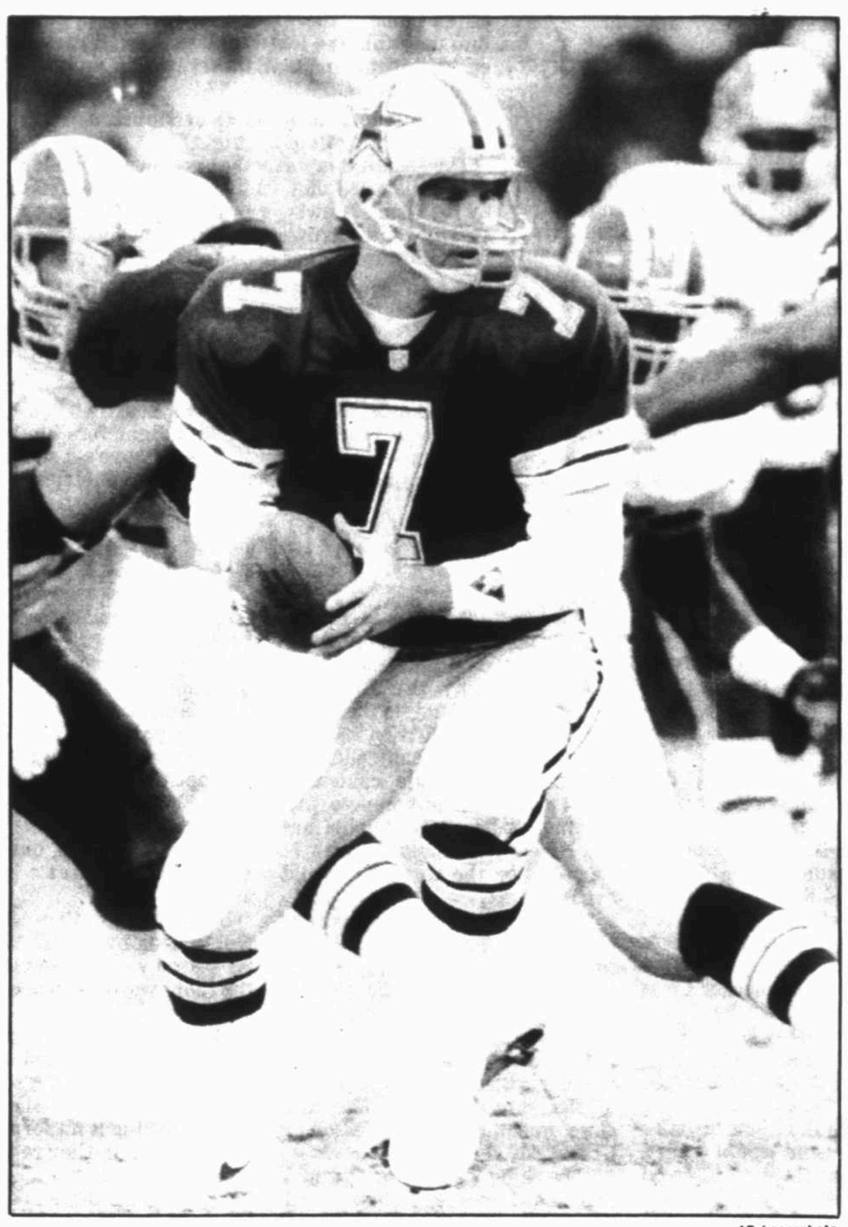
Beuerlein takes Dallas reins



AP Laserphoto

Dallas quarterback Steve Beuerlein hopes he can prevent the same kind of slide the Cowboys suffered last year after Troy Aikman was hurt.

Johnson hopes new backup can out-perform Laufenberg

■ With Troy Aikman injured, the Dallas Cowboys look to a new quarterback in their drive for the playoffs.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — For the second year in a row, the Dallas Cowboys have lost Troy Aikman for the playoff drive. The difference this year is that this season Steve Beuerlein is the man to carry them instead of Babe Laufenberg.

It's quite a difference.

Beuerlein, who so infuriated Al Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders that he gave the former Notre Dame star to Jimmy Johnson for a fourth-round draft pick, helped Dallas to a 24-21 victory over the previously unbeaten Washington Redskins on Sunday after Aikman went down with a knee injury.

"A year ago the team was flat when Troy went down," Johnson said. "We would have had the same situation last Sunday but we didn't. Without question we have someone at quarterback we can win with."

Aikman won't be ready until late December, if at all, with a partial ligament tear. It's the third consecutive season he has been injured.

Last year, he sustained a separated shoulder in the 15th game against the Philadelphia Eagles. Laufenberg faltered badly in a season-ending loss to Atlanta that cost Dallas a spot in the playoffs.

Laufenberg was released in training camp and Johnson took advantage of Beuerlein's contract dispute with Davis to trade for him on Aug. 25.

Beuerlein started 15 games for the Raiders and hit 213 of 455 passes for 3,320 yards, and 21 touchdowns. He was intercepted 16 times. However, he became expendable when Davis decided he liked Jay Schroeder and also drafted Todd Maranovich of Southern California.

Beuerlein, who will play Thursday against Pittsburgh with a sprained left ankle, said he believes the team will rally around him again.

"I'm the leadership type," he said, "someone who will take charge."

He said he relishes the challenge of taking a team to the playoffs while Aikman heals.

"This is the kind of pressure I like," Beuerlein said. "I'm not trying to put to rest the ghosts of last year but I've heard people talk about them. I'm not worried."

Beuerlein said he was amazed he was traded for just a fourth-round pick.

"I think the Cowboys got a pretty good deal for me," Beuerlein said. "I gave the Raiders everything I had and I'm not interested anymore in what they think about me. I have some opinions about Davis but I'm not commenting on them."

"We very fortunate to make the trade. We had no reluctance to make the deal," Johnson said. "Probably some of the other teams in the league are saying they wish they had made the deal. You have to be willing to take chances."

Johnson said Beuerlein "has a live arm and he's a winner and a competitor. He's very talented and I think we can win with him."

Running back Emmitt Smith said he has been very impressed by Beuerlein.

"This team fell apart last year after Troy was hurt," Smith said. "Beuerlein knows what he's doing. He's very calm and cracks jokes. The man can play."

White Sox hire new manager

■ Pirate third-base coach Gene Lamont takes the helm on Chicago's South Side.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Gene Lamont became the freshest face on the major league managing scene when he was hired Tuesday to lead the Chicago White Sox.

Lamont, Pittsburgh's third-base coach, succeeds Jeff Torborg, who quit to manage the New York Mets.

"We wanted freshness, a new guy and not someone recycled," White Sox general manager Ron Schueler said.

Lamont, 44, filled the 14th and final major league managerial opening this year and became the fifth manager hired without previous major league experience.

"I can promise only one thing," Lamont said. "When we start the game, I'll put in a good day's work and our players will be ready to play both mentally and physically."

Schueler's first choice had been Jim Leyland, but the White Sox were denied permission to talk to the Pittsburgh Pirates manager, who has two years left on his contract.

"Leyland backed me for the job and I learned a lot from him," Lamont said. "I'll be a lot like him in handling players but I'm not quite as outgoing as Jimmy."

Schueler said all four finalists were approved by owner Jerry Reinsdorf. Schueler picked Lamont over three other coaches: Bill Russell of Los Angeles, Rene Lachemann of Oakland and Larry Bowa of Philadelphia.

"Personality-wise he's a lot like Torborg," Schueler said.

AP Laserphoto

New Chisox manager Gene Lamont tries on the new uniform Tuesday at Chicago.

"Jeff had a lot of strengths because the fans, the players and the media all liked him. Gene's a little more aggressive coming over from the National League."

Lamont joins Phil Garner of Milwaukee, Butch Hobson of Boston, Buck Showalter of the New York Yankees and Bill Plummer of Seattle as rookie managers.

He managed in the minor leagues for eight seasons before coaching for Leyland in Pittsburgh for six years.

"I'm proud he was a member of our organization for as long as he was," Leyland said. "To be honest, I had the luxury of having him on my staff for three years longer than I thought."

Chicago was 87-75 last season and finished second to Minnesota in the AL League West. Lamont said he was getting "a good team, a team that should contend."

Lamont is a native of Rockford, about 85 miles northwest of Chicago.

Yanks back off from Buechele

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Less than 24 hours after the New York Yankees said they were going to pursue free agent Steve Buechele, they abruptly reversed course Tuesday and backed away.

On Monday morning, Yankees general manager Gene Michael invited the third baseman and his agent, Alan Meersand, to tour the New York-New Jersey metropolitan area this weekend. Late Monday night, he and Yankees chief operating officer Leonard Kleinman told Meersand to scrap the trip.

"I received a conference call with the Yankees, with Gene Michael and Leonard Kleinman," Meersand said. "Kleinman did all the talking. I want to stress that. Gene didn't say anything. And in the conference call I was told the Yankees want to delay the visit."

Buechele is seeking a $13 million, four-year deal. The prelimary negotiations have caused a confrontation in the Yankee front office that has made it clear the team's baseball operations are being controlled by Kleinman and managing general partner Robert Nederlander.

"They told us they wished to postpone because Mr. Nederlander is not available," Meersand said. "They told us they are pursuing other alternatives and they are not in a position to make an offer at this time."

Eyes of Texas could be good for Lee

District 4-5A is heading into its most critical weekend of the Class 5A state football playoffs, riding high with a perfect 6-0 record.

Williamson

The Little Southwest Conference is one of only two districts to have all three teams remaining in the playoffs and this is the very last week that the loop has a chance of winning all its games.

With Midland Lee, Odessa Permian and San Angelo all winning area contests over the past weekend, these teams helped push the district into elite status among state teams.

Last year, in the first test of the three-team playoff format, no district had all three survivors get past two rounds. District 4-5A joins District 13-5A this year as the first to have all three district survivors gain third round status. Waco, Killeen and Temple of 13-5A are also alive.

Only six third place teams (three in the Big School Division and three in the Small School Division) are still alive. When San Angelo meets Arlington Sam Houston Friday at Texas Stadium, it is for sure another third place team will fall since both those schools are third place district finishers.

San Angelo and Sam Houston have never met. That holds true for the Saturday meeting between Lee and Sherman in Wichita Falls. These are uncharted waters.

But it's no secret where the Eyes of Texas will be this week. No. 1 Arlington Lamar vs. No. 2 Odessa Permian. Forget the rest. This is already being called the battle for the state Small School championship. And these teams are not strangers.

Permian owns a 3-0 record against Lamar and has the 2 p.m. home Ratliff Stadium advantage on its side. It's an advantage that is impressive.

Permian is 12-1 in state playoff games played at Ratliff, losing only 29-21 to Plano in 1987. Old Mojo has also been rough against teams from the Dallas-Fort Worth area, owning a 34-6-2 overall record against Metroplex teams and a 21-6-2 mark in the playoffs against those teams.

But the hype has started and the pressure is on. Most figure this game is dead even going in. This is a flip a coin — or wait to see who fumbles first — type of game. One thing is for sure. No winner can come out of this game with all gears intact. Coaches call this leaving something on the field. The winner will have to play its peak performance. That makes the next week dangerous for the winner.

That's where Lee comes into play. The Rebels could catch the winner on the downside of its game next week. Of course, that is if Lee can beat Sherman, which is also being tossed out as a toss-up contest.

This is a Lee opportunity that doesn't have a good past history. Lee hasn't gotten past the third round since 1984 and has done it only twice in 10 previous playoff tries.

But you can't be around the Lee players and coaches this year without getting the feeling that they understand the past region round roadblocks. There seems to be very little talk of how far they've come. Eyes are focused on how far they can go. This is a hurdle they seem to understand. They haven't buried past woes, but seem to be drawing from it.

This isn't necessarily to say that Lee will beat Sherman, which is a strong and powerful team, but there is no way that Lee will show up and play the type of game it did in the 1987 when it lost to Arlington High, 27-7, in Fort Worth. Many consider that Lee's most disappointing loss.

Few consider this year's Lee team of the same caliber as the 1987 Rebels, but they could put a big mark in the Lee history book with a victory Saturday night.

And then, who knows? The Rebels couldn't be in a better playoff bracket position. The Eyes of Texas have seen to that.

Wilmer-Hutchins grid coach says infraction unintentional

Associated Press

HUTCHINS — Wilmer-Hutchins coach Robert Woods says he accepts the state ruling barring his defending state champion football team from the playoffs, but the rule infraction was not deliberate.

"People need to understand that it was nothing intentional and that we abided by the rules in all instances," Woods told the Dallas Times Herald.

He added that Lancaster officials, who questioned the eligibility of a Wilmer-Hutchins player, "set a trap" for his team.

A University Interscholastic League district committee ruled junior linebacker Glenn Rice Jr. did not fulfill a residency requirement and was ineligible to play, forcing Wilmer-Hutchins out of the state football playoffs. Lancaster replaced the Eagles on Saturday in the state playoff game against Carthage. Lancaster lost 20-10.

Officials from Lancaster brought the eligibility question to the committee.

Carlsbad snatches win from Lee

Staff Report

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Low-percentage shooting and a rash of fourth-quarter turnovers added up to defeat for the Midland Lee Lady Rebels Tuesday night, as the Lee girls lost to Carlsbad, 50-47.

The Lady Rebels led by five going into the fourth quarter and had led by as many as eight on two previous occasions.

The loss drops Lee to 2-3; it was the season debut for the Carlsbad girls.

Ranee Franklin had 11 points and Courtney McHugh and Tekeira Strambler had 10 apiece to lead the Lady Rebel scoring effort.

But the play of Carlsbad's 6-0 junior post, Annie Dodson was too much for Lee. Dodson had 24 points on 6-of-6 from the line, and 15 rebounds.

The Lady Rebels shot 27 percent for the game and had 10 turnovers in the final period.

"We played good, we just couldn't get the ball in the bucket," Lee head coach Elise Wheat said. "It'll be nice when we have the courtesy of playing at home all the other teams have."

Midland Lee (47) — Courtney McHugh 5 1-2 10; Debbie Kuntz 2 1-2 5; Lachette Crisp 2 0-0 4; Lisa Cochran 1 0-0 2; Tekeira Strambler 5 0-1 10; Tanisha Mills 1 0-0 2; Tiffany Grafa 1 0-0 2; Ranee Franklin 4 3-7 11. Totals: 21 5-12 47.

MCS girls defeat Grandfalls, 43-34

Staff Report

Tracy Burgess scored 16 points to lead the Midland Christian Lady Mustangs to a 43-34 win over the Grandfalls Cowgirls Tuesday night.

The win improved MCS' record to 3-0 on the season; Grandfalls fell to 1-1.

Karen Nash had eight points for the Lady 'Stangs while Tammy Hull popped in seven.

MCS never trailed and held a 25-17 halftime lead.

The Lady Mustangs travel to Midland High next Monday at 6 p.m. for a matchup with the Lady Bulldog sophomores.

Midland Christian (43) — Tracy Burgess 8 0-0 16; Holli Hutton 1 0-1 2; Angela Hagins 2 2-2 6; Karen Nash 3 2-2 8; Jeannette Moralez 0 0-0 0; Amanda Miller 2 0-0 4; Tammy Hull 3 1-3 7. Totals: 19 5-8 43.

Saints have another chance to clinch

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The New Orleans Saints started losing games too late to miss the playoffs. The San Francisco 49ers started winning games too late to make them.

So Sunday's game between the Saints and 49ers becomes little more than another exercise by New Orleans to see if it can clinch the NFC West. And it's another exercise by the 49ers to make a last dash for the playoffs that isn't guaranteed even if they win their final four games.

San Francisco may get Steve Young back for this one, although it's hard to envision George Seifert subjecting Young's gimpy knee to the New Orleans pass rush. If he's as mobile as usual, fine, but that's unlikely.

Does he, however, want to subject Steve Bono to Pat Swilling, Rickey Jackson and the rest of the guys who comprise both the offense and defense for the Saints — unless you count practice squad refugee Fred McAfee.

Not surprisingly, the first game was a 10-3 affair, won by the Saints' defense.

This time, the 49ers are favored by three. Make it seven. 49ERS, 10-3.

Chicago (plus 3) at Detroit (Thursday)

The one thing the Bears know is that there won't be any snow on the ground this week. The Lions know it, too — they're 8-0 in domes, 0-4 outdoors, where they've been outscored 130-34.

A guess. Detroit spent a lot of emotion in beating the Vikings last week. It will be hard to regenerate it in three days. The Bears won the first, 20-10. Make this one BEARS, 20-17.

Pittsburgh (plus 6½) at Dallas (Thursday)

The Cowboys may be in the same situation as the Lions — there was a lot of emotion put into upsetting the Redskins last week. However, the spent emotion theory works on the Steelers, too. COWBOYS, 17-13.

Philadelphia (plus 6) at Houston (Monday night)

The Eagles don't exactly have an easy path to the wild-card they seek — this one followed by the Giants, Cowboys and Redskins. Warren Moon won't throw five interceptions this week, but he will get pressure. OILERS, 24-20.

New York Jets (plus 9) at Buffalo

The Jets, who should have beaten the Bills at the Meadowlands, have the misfortune of catching them on the rebound this week. BILLS, 27-17.

Kansas City (plus 1½) at Seattle

Suddenly the Chiefs are in a fight for the playoffs, courtesy of Christian Okoye's bad hands in Cleveland. Marty Schoettenheimer says it won't happen again. OK. CHIEFS, 20-15.

New England (minus 8) at Denver

When last we saw these two, Hugh Millen was getting tackled in range of a game-tying field goal to let Denver win 9-6. New England keeps them close. So does Denver ... BRONCOS, 9-6.

Washington (minus 9) at Los Angeles Rams

Does anyone get the impression that the Rams have thrown in the season. Plus the Redskins are a little bit miffed. REDSKINS, 41-3.

New York Giants (minus 8½) at Cincinnati

The last time Phil Simms played the Bengals, he threw for 513 yards ... and lost. This time, he'll probably throw for 153 and win. It'll be boring, too. GIANTS, 23-13.

Los Angeles Raiders (minus 4½) at San Diego

Do the Raiders play the Chargers nine times a season? It only seems that way. RAIDERS, 17-7.

Green Bay (plus 8½) at Atlanta

The latest Bill Parcells sighting is in Green Bay. That's next year. FALCONS, 27-10.

Tampa Bay (plus 9) at Miami

Now that the Dolphins have proven they can play in the snow ... DOLPHINS, 20-10.

Cleveland (minus 5½) at Indianapolis

Art Modell vs. Bob Irsay. No contest. BROWNS, 20-7.

Last Week: 6-8 (spread), 6-8 (straight up).
Season: 80-84-4 (spread) 103-65 (straight up).

Lions can pull even with Bears in NFC Central

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Usually at this time of year the Detroit Lions are just playing for pride. Now they're playing for more. A lot more.

The Lions' Thanksgiving Day game with the Chicago Bears is for NFC Central lead.

The Lions (8-4) helped set up the Motown Showdown by beating Minnesota 34-14 Sunday while the Bears (9-3) were upset 16-13 in overtime by the Miami Dolphins.

"We've never been in a position like this before," linebacker Chris Spielman said. "If we let it get away, we have no one to blame but ourselves. We have to 'keep on truckin',' that's the way the phrase goes."

The last time the Lions were 8-4 was 1970, when the team coached by Joe Schmidt finished 10-4 and lost a 5-0 playoff game to the Dallas Cowboys.

That 1970 team won its final five games to earn a wild-card berth. This year's team, which has won its last two, probably needs to win its four remaining games.

"We're not looking forward to any other week until we take care of this one," Lions nose tackle Jerry Ball said. "The most important thing right now is Chicago."

A victory by the Lions on Thanksgiving would tie them with the Bears for the division lead. But a defeat would virtually eliminate the Lions from title contention and leave them to compete with Atlanta, Dallas, Philadelphia and the New York Giants (all with 7-5 records) for the three NFC wild-card spots.

"Every game is a big game, and right now we have a chance to be tied for the division lead," defensive end Dan Owens said. "This is the biggest game I've played in up until this point."

The Lions, who have yet to win outdoors, host the New York Jets on Dec. 8 in the Silverdome, then close out the regular season at Green Bay and Buffalo.

"The thing we have to do now is take it up another notch," coach Wayne Fontes said. "Chicago has been there before. We know they'll be ready. I'm looking forward to it and so are our players."

The Bears, who have won their three previous dome games this season, get the Packers and Bucs at windy Soldier Field, then complete the regular season at San Francisco.

"I'm not surprised Detroit is challenging," Chicago linebacker Mike Singletary said. "I've always thought any team in this division could come out and give us some competition. This might sound crazy, but I'm proud of Detroit. Everybody always assumed this was a weak division, but the Lions are proving that's not true anymore."

Bears coach Mike Ditka, who will be looking for his 100th regular season victory Thursday, knew the Lions were for real a long time ago.

"When you look at films and their draft picks and see what Wayne's been doing, it's no surprise," Ditka said. "The success they're having is no surprise to me because I think they're a very solid football team."

Ditka thinks there are three basic reasons why the Lions are roaring.

"Look at how much better they're playing on the defensive side of the ball," he said. "In comparison to years past, the turnover ratio is better. With the run and shoot, it was a high-scoring offense, but yet it was a high-mistake offense. Now, they've taken the mistakes out of it. They're not making the mistakes with the offense.

Hogs make Maui Classic final

Associated Press

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Isiah Morris, starting for suspended All-America Todd Day, scored 25 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead No. 2 Arkansas to the finals of the Maui Invitational with a 99-84 win over Chaminade on Tuesday night.

Oliver Miller had 18 points and eight rebounds and Lee Mayberry added 18 points as the Razorbacks (2-0) held off a second-half rally by the Silverswords (1-2).

The Division II Silverswords hung tough against the more talented Razorbacks, and pulled with o wr points, 76-72, with 4:38 to play thanks to a 16-4 run. The Razorbacks responded with a 13-5 run to take an 89-77 lead with 2:55 to play to seal the victory.

Arkansas held its largest lead, 72-56, with 12:09 to play after a seven-foot jumper by Morris, who's replacing Day, the Southwest Conference player of the year who is sitting out the first two months because of disciplinary infractions.

Ohio St. 94, Miami, Ohio 61

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Jim Jackson scored 22 points and fifth-ranked Ohio State's pressure defense produced 25 turnovers as the Buckeyes beat Miami of Ohio in their season opener.

Chris Jent added a career-high 21 points, Mark Baker and Jamie Skelton each scored 15 and Jamaal Brown chipped in with 10 for Ohio State.

The Buckeyes used two critical streaks — both fueled by their full-court pressure — to pull away. For the game, Ohio State totaled 14 steals.

The Buckeyes missed nine of their first 11 shots from the field and trailed 11-9 in the game's first 5½ minutes. But with Skelton scoring five points and Jackson and Mark Baker each scoring four, Ohio State ran off 15 straight points to build a 24-11 lead with 10:08 left in the half.

Seton Hall 89, Bridgeport 78

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Sharpshooting Terry Dehere scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half, including four 3-point baskets in a 2:15 stretch, to spark seventh-ranked Seton Hall to a victory over Bridgeport.

Dehere and Jerry Walker, who had a career-high 18 points, ignited a 14-5 spurt early in the second half that boosted the Pirates (2-0) to a 50-38 lead.

After Derrik Russell opened the second half with a basket for Bridgeport to pull the Purple Knights to 36-33, Dehere went to work and hit a pair of three-pointers.

Winston Jones interrupted with a free throw for Bridgeport before Walker hit a short hook shot. Dehere came back to sandwich 3-pointers around a basket by the Knights' Lambert Shell to put the Pirates in command.

No. 12 Kansas 91
Ark.-Little Rock 80

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Alonzo Jamison scored 22 points and Rex Walters added 20 as No. 12 Kansas struggled past Arkansas-Little Rock.

The Jayhawks won their 20th consecutive home game and their 100th in the last 108.

But Kansas (2-0) fought to find its rhythm offensively and found it difficult to pull away from Arkansas-Little Rock (1-1).

The Trojans never led after the first five minutes but managed to stay within 10 points much of the way. They trailed only 83-76 after a Tony Martin 3-pointer with 3:12 to go.

The Jayhawks were plagued by 23 turnovers and lackluster free-throw shooting (23 of 36 for 64 percent).

Oklahoma 61, S. Carolina 60

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Jeff Webster sank a short turnaround jumper with eight seconds left to rally 19th-ranked Oklahoma to a victory over South Carolina.

After time outs by both teams, Webster, who finished with 16 points, took a pass from Terry Evans and hit a 12-footer from the left wing.

South Carolina guard Jo Jo English missed a 3-pointer with Evans in his face as time ran out, giving the Sooners their second victory in as many games.

South Carolina (1-1), which held the Sooners to their lowest point production in two seasons, led 28-27 at the half and pushed its lead to 46-38 with 11:09 on eight straight points by Joe Rhett.

But the Sooners inched back, tying it at 52 on Brent Price's 3-pointer with 6:06 left. The Sooners took the lead at 54-53 on Webster's two foul shots with 5:16 left.

Damon Patterson, who scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half, hit a jumper from the left wing to make it 56-53 a minute later. But South Carolina tied it at 58 on Barry Manning's three-point play with 2:13 to go.

Iowa 95, Western Illinois 58

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Acie Earl scored 25 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead No. 21 Iowa to a victory over Western Illinois.

The Hawkeyes (2-0) of the Big Ten enjoyed a height advantage at every position over the Leathernecks (0-1) and used it for a 27-11 rebounding edge and a 51-25 halftime lead.

A basket by Brig Tubbs, who had two 3-point shots in the first half and 10 points for the game, capped a 14-8 run to start the second half and put Iowa in command at 65-33 with 15:34 remaining.

Western Illinois, a member of the Mid-Continent Conference, never got closer than 30 the rest of the way.

Frogs upend Tulsa, 94-81

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Michael Strickland scored 21 of his 32 points in the first half Tuesday night as Texas Christian raced to a 94-81 victory over Tulsa.

SWC

The Horned Frogs (3-0) relied on the long-range bombing provided by Strickland, who hit five 3-pointers, and Kurt Thomas' inside play to overcome Reggie Smith's early foul problems. Smith, the Frogs leading scorer, spent the final 7:30 of the first half on the bench with three fouls.

But TCU still managed to lead 45-35 by intermission.

Baylor 99, Sam Houston St. 60

WACO — Alex Holcombe scored 20 points and pulled down six rebounds as Baylor jumped out to an early lead and went on to an easy victory over Sam Houston State.

Baylor (2-0) took a 17-3 lead over the Bearkats (0-2) to start the game and never looked back. Dennis Lindsey keyed the run with his hot-shooting. Lindsey, who was 6 of 6 from the floor in the first half, scored nine points during the Bears' opening run.

Michigan St. 75, Rice 67

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Center Mike Peplowski scored 18 points, including six in the final three minutes, to lead Michigan State past Rice and into the final of the Maui Invitational tournament.

Michigan State (2-0) plays second-ranked Arkansas in Wednesday's title game.

UNLV tape reveals wrongdoing

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A secret videotape of a UNLV conditioning class shows the school's basketball players apparently practicing defensive tactics and fast breaks a week before official practices were to begin.

The tape, publicly released for the first time Tuesday by the University of Nevada regents, appears to clearly back up contentions by UNLV officials that the class was being used for early basketball practice in violation of NCAA regulations.

The taping itself has caused an uproar since it was disclosed earlier this month that UNLV legal counsel Brad Booke authorized it in an effort to either confirm or disprove allegations that practices were being conducted prior to the official Oct. 15 start of practice.

The tape in question, made Oct. 8 from an air conditioning vent above a university gym, clearly shows UNLV basketball players and assistant coaches running defensive drills without basketballs, at one point defending an imagined inbound pass.

It also shows a player running the full court and simulating a dribble while another player defends him and others sprint down on a fast break.

NCAA regulations forbid coaches from instructing or running basketball formations, even without a ball, prior to the official Oct. 15 start of practice.

Lady Buffs take first victory

Staff Report

STANTON — The Stanton Lady Buffaloes earned their first basketball win of the season Tuesday night with a 46-35 decision over the O'Donnell Lady Eagles.

Innet Brown's 15 points led the Lady Buffs while Christie Hirt also broke into double figures with 11 for Stanton.

The Lady Buff JV also came away successful, winning 48-36.

Stanton's girls (1-2) travel to Colorado City December 3.

Stanton (46) — Innet Brown 15; Brandy Bundas 7; Christie Hirt 11; Nancy Chapa 2; Kali Lee 4; Stacy Tollison 4; Sonja Hopper 3.
O'Donnell (35) — Blackwell 2; Anderson 1; James 4; K. Franklin 2; Stewart 1; Ash 17; Cavazos 2; M. Franklin 6.

Rockets overcome center dearth for win

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell and Sleepy Floyd combined for 24 of Houston's final 30 points, sparking the Rockets to a 118-109 victory Tuesday night over the woeful New Jersey Nets.

Maxwell finished with 29 points and Floyd 16 as the Rockets played without injured centers Hakeem Olajuwon and Larry Smith. Otis Thorpe added 22 points and 13 rebounds, while Kenny Smith had 18 points.

Drazen Petrovic led the Nets, losers for the 10th time in their last 11 games, with 33 points. Sam Bowie had 19 points and 10 rebounds. Terry Mills added 16 points and Kenny Anderson 15.

After building its largest halftime lead of the season at 62-46, Houston allowed New Jersey to take its first lead at 90-88 with 7:17 remaining.

Maxwell and Floyd then took charge, scoring 13 and 11 points respectively in the final seven minutes, leading the Rockets to their fourth victory in five games.

Cavaliers 95, 76ers 91

PHILADELPHIA — Brad Daugherty scored 31 points, including eight consecutive free throws in the final four minutes, as the Cavaliers rallied to beat the 76ers for their third straight victory.

Cleveland trailed 86-79 with 5:07 left. The Cavs then outscored the 76ers 12-3.

The Cavaliers' Craig Ehlo made a jumper from the corner to make it 93-89. Philadelphia's Johnny Dawkins made a jumper with 24 seconds left for the 76ers' final basket.

Daugherty made eight of 15 from the field and 15 of 16 at the free throw line. He got help from Larry Nance and Henry James, each with 14 points, and Mark Price with 12.

Hersey Hawkins led the 76ers with 23, while Dawkins scored 19 and Armon Gilliam 17. Charles Barkley, playing with a flak jacket to protect strained rib muscles, scored only 11 points.

NBA Roundup

Pistons 103, Hawks 93

ATLANTA — The Detroit Pistons, hitting eight straight free throws, outscored Atlanta 14-9 in the final 3:10 to beat the Hawks and halt a five-game losing streak.

The Pistons defeated the Hawks for the seventh straight time in the regular season, and ended Atlanta's four-game home winning streak.

Dominique Wilkins scored two of his game-high 29 points to cut Detroit's lead to 89-84 with 3:25 to play, but the Pistons took command. Joe Dumars hit a baseline jumper and two free throws before Isiah Thomas, the Pistons' top scorer with 22, hit a jump shot. Dennis Rodman made another for a 97-84 lead.

Five other Pistons scored in double figures. Dumars had 15, Rodman 14, Orlando Woolridge 13, Bill Laimbeer 11 and Mark Aguirre 10.

Lakers 98, Magic 87

ORLANDO, Fla. — James Worthy scored 25 points and Byron Scott 20, leading the hot-shooting Los Angeles Lakers to their eighth consecutive victory.

The Lakers shot 62 percent in the third quarter to break open a close game and continued to play outstanding defense — holding an opponent under 100 points for the sixth straight game.

Scott scored 16 second-half points, including 11 in the third quarter when Los Angeles hit 13 of 21 shots to open a 14-point advantage after leading 44-40 at the half.

Nick Anderson led Orlando, which has lost three straight games, with 22 points.

A.C. Green came off the bench to score 16 points and Sam Perkins had 15 points and 10 rebounds for the Lakers, who started a season-long, seven-game road trip without center Vlade Divac.

Knicks 98, Heat 81

NEW YORK — Gerald Wilkins equaled his season high of 28 points and John Starks came off the bench to score 19, keeping New York a perfect 6-0 at home as the Knicks beat the Miami Heat.

The loss knocked the Heat from first place to third in the Atlantic Division, behind the Knicks and Boston Celtics.

New York (8-5) also picked up its fourth straight win and has won eight of its last 11 games. The 81 points scored by Miami was a season low against the Knicks, who have held their opponents to under 100 points in each of the last five games.

Miami (7-5) dropped its second consecutive game, but still is enjoying its best start in franchise history.

Nuggets 103, Hornets 97

DENVER — Denver's Dikembe Mutombo and Charlotte's Larry Johnson, considered the brightest of this year's NBA rookie crop, lived up to expectations as the Nuggets held off a late charge.

Mutombo set a career high for rebounds with 20 and added 21 points as Denver broke a four-game losing streak. Johnson, after a four-point first half, finished with 25 points and 16 rebounds for the Hornets.

Reggie Williams led the Nuggets with 22 points. Kendall Gill had 20 points for Charlotte.

The Nuggets took a 16-4 lead with 5:08 left in the first period. But the Hornets trimmed it to 20-17 at the end of the quarter and went ahead 24-22 for their only lead of the game with 10:39 remaining in the second period.

The game was tied at 26 before Denver assumed the lead on a 6-foot jumper by Chris Jackson. The Nuggets never trailed thereafter.

Charlotte remained in contention throughout.

Vogler, Maston take SWC honors

FORT WORTH (AP) — Matt Vogler ended his college career in a way that would have made John Wayne proud. He was wounded but he won.

The Texas Christian senior quarterback gamely rallied the Horned Frogs to a 49-45 victory over the Houston Cougars despite his injuries.

The performance earned him The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week award.

Baylor linebacker Le'Shai Maston, who made two key defensive plays in the Bears' 22-11 victory over Texas, was named the AP's Defensive Player of the Week.

Vogler burned his hand while cooking and had to wear a protective glove. Then on Nov. 7, he suffered an injured hip against Texas A&M.

Although he was limping, Vogler hit 20 of 39 passes for 238 yards, and two touchdowns.

The game-winner came with 66 seconds left when he hit Stephen Shipley with a 15-yard scoring pass.

"You talk about courageous performances," said TCU coach Jim Wacker. "This was a story about courage and not giving up."

Prices plunge

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell sharply Tuesday on perceptions that OPEC will keep its taps wide open, despite predictions of an oil glut.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in January settled at $21.02 per barrel, down 40 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil has not been this cheap since early July.

The big drop by crude prices came as oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met in Vienna, Austria.

Traders said they believed the cartel would keep pumping all the crude it can, even though demand for OPEC oil is expected to fall off early next year and the eventual re-entry of Iraq to the world market is viewed as inevitable.

There were some big oil sales Tuesday, traders said, even though the market got reports of refinery and production problems in California, Texas and the North Sea.

After the market was closed, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the nation's supply of gasoline and home heating oil rose last week, while the supply of crude oil dropped.

The nation's stockpile of gasoline rose 5.3 million barrels, to 202.7 million. The supply of distillates, which include home heating oil, rose 2.5 million barrels, to 138.6 million.

The supply of crude fell 5.6 million barrels, to 346.9 million.

Dollar climbs

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar took a wild ride Tuesday, first tumbling on gloomy news about the U.S. economy, then surging dramatically on word that Germany's top economics aide said the U.S. currency's value was too low.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.23 yen to close at 128.30 yen. In New York trading, the dollar fetched 130.15 yen, up sharply from 127.90 yen late Monday.

The dollar fetched 1.5795 marks in European trading, down from 1.5835, before the German minister's remarks were reported. But later in New York the dollar surged to 1.6115 marks, up dramatically from its 1.5885 exchange rate late Monday.

The British pound fell in London to $1.7975 from $1.7995 late Monday. Later in New York the pound fetched $1.7730, cheaper than its $1.7945 value late Monday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.4265 Swiss francs, up from 1.4125; 1.1363 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1383; 5.4055 French francs, down from 5.4290, and 1.217.00 Italian lire, up from 1.201.75.

OPEC to keep taps wide open

■ Oil ministers tenatively agree to pump at nearly full capacity.

Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC ministers tentatively agreed Tuesday to extend their "free-for-all" policy of pumping crude oil at nearly full capacity to meet cold-weather demand.

The decision was reached at daylong discussions at a meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The producers said they were ready to continue during the January-March period their current agreement to supply 23.65 million barrels a day — near the cartel's estimated capacity.

"For the first quarter, it's a rollover," said Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh.

The ministers will continue their talks to sketch out ideas for reducing the flood of oil during the spring when demand normally drops.

Tuesday's tentative accord would likely keep crude prices fairly steady in coming months unless the weather turned unseasonably warm in the United States and reduced demand for heating oil.

Despite full production levels, prices have remained firm — although still below the cartel's target of $21 a 42-gallon barrel. The average price of an OPEC marker was $19.74 a barrel last week, off from $19.98 in the previous week.

U.S. and European light sweet crude prices are usually about a dollar or two higher than the OPEC average.

In agreeing to pump at top speed, the cartel was guided by estimates of demand for its crude at more than 24 million barrels a day in the first quarter of 1992.

Saudi Arabia's influential oil minister, Hisham Nazer, predicted demand could be as high as 25.2 million barrels a day.

The cartel has been producing near its limit since August 1990, when Iraqi forces invaded fellow member Kuwait.

Iraqi Oil Minister Abdul Razzak Al-Hiti displays a graphic showing the complicated procedures for purchasing Iraqi oil.

Iraq's oil remains embargoed under United Nations sanctions. Kuwait's production is crippled by damage caused by Gulf War fighting. Before the crisis, the two major producers supplied a total of 4.6 million barrels a day.

"The challenge will be to ensure that the return of Iraq and Kuwait to full production, at whatever pace it occurs, does not disturb market stability and prices," Venezuelan Oil Minister Celestino Armas told the ministers Tuesday.

Armas expressed concern that the cartel would not be able to make up for Soviet oil production. Soviet exports are off about 30 percent this year.

Some OPEC nations fret that excess output could lead to an oil glut in the spring quarter — and lower crude prices. Ministers will likely delay setting output goals beyond the winter because of uncertainties about Iraq and Kuwait.

Baghdad has so far refused to accept strict conditions for a U.N.-approved sale of $1.6 billion in oil to buy food and humanitarian supplies and pay war damages.

Kuwait's oil minister, Homoud al-Rqobah, has said his nation was producing 360,000 barrels of oil a day. He predicted its output would rise to about a million barrels a day, two-thirds of pre-war production, in mid-1992.

OPEC members are: Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezula.

Consumer confidence takes fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Confidence in the economy plunged below 1982 recession levels in November as Americans grew increasingly worried about job security, according to a widely followed survey on consumer attitudes released Tuesday.

The Conference Board, a business-supported research organization, said its monthly index of consumer confidence skidded more than 9 points to 50.6 following a drop of nearly 13 points in October.

The erosion in consumer confidence marked another grim portent for the economy. Consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of the gross national product, is crucial for the economic recovery to succeed.

The Conference Board index now stands more than three points below its lowest reading during the 1982 recession.

Fabian Linden, a Conference Board economist, said concern about job security was undermining consumer faith in the economy. The number of survey respondents considering jobs difficult to get these days jumped to 47.9 percent in November from 43.5 percent.

Linden said the drop in confidence "cuts across all segments of the population — all age groups, all income brackets, and all regions of the country."

Consumers continued to pare their plans for major purchases within the next six months, which bode ill for the economy down the road.

Retailers evenly split over holiday sales, study shows

DALLAS (AP) — A survey released Tuesday of some of Texas' largest retailers showed an even split on holiday sales performance.

Half said sales were flat or slightly below planned levels. Half said sales were slightly to significantly above plans.

But the analysts who looked at the results said the only clear signal from the survey is most shoppers are holding back for the day traditionally viewed as the start of the shopping season.

"It appears that shoppers are waiting for Friday, when the typical post-Thanksgiving shopping surge begins," said Larry Gresham, a professor of retailing studies at Texas A&M University.

The school and Arthur Andersen's Dallas-based Southwest retail services group during the holiday season survey the weekly performance of 10 large chains with stores in Texas three largest cities.

The survey asks the retailers to identify performance in 11 product categories. Sales were up in nine of the categories in Dallas and seven in Houston and San Antonio.

In Dallas and San Antonio, womens' apparel and shoes were identified as best-selling. Mens' apparel and shoes sold the best in Houston followed by womens' apparel.

Cosmetics and scents sold second-best in San Antonio and mens' apparel and shoes were No. 2 in Dallas.

"The shorter season, 26 days in 1991 versus 32 in 1990, and lackluster consumer buying offer a major challenge to retailers who want to emerge in 1992 with a degree of momentum," said Louis Grabowsky of Arthur Andersen.

But the analysts who looked at the results said the only clear signal from the survey is most shoppers are holding back for the day traditionally viewed as the start of the shopping season.

Retailers are finding consumers drawn more to traditional fashions and basic gifts.

"Most of the retail community is positioned for less consumer spending and lower ticket purchases," Grabowsky said.

A national survey by the retail trade group of Deloitte & Touche said consumers plan to spend more than retailers anticipate and holiday sales should be better than last year.

IBM announces plan to cut 20,000 jobs in 1991

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM said today it would cut 20,000 jobs next year and reduce its fourth-quarter earnings by $3 billion to pay for the voluntary severances and other costs.

Aker

International Business Machines Corp. also said it would announce in coming weeks a plan to streamline operations and give business units more independence from the company's bureaucracy.

IBM Chairman John Akers said the plan "will lead, over time, to a fundamental redefinition of how IBM does business."

Under a previously announced program, the world's largest computer maker plans to eliminate about 20,000 jobs this year as it struggles to boost its sagging profits. After next year's reduction of another 20,000, IBM will employ about 333,000 people.

IBM said the newest cost-cutting plan is expected to save about $1 billion next year and $2 billion each year thereafter.

Trading of IBM stock was halted on the New York Stock Exchange after the announcement, which followed a meeting of IBM's board of directors. Such a reorganization and job cutting had been rumored for several weeks.

When the stock resumed trading, it rose 50 cents a share to $95.62½.

"We will be taking a series of steps to enable each business unit to better focus on its own opportunities, be more responsive to its own customers and accountable for its own results," Akers said in a statement.

IBM's statement provided only a broad outline of how it plans to loosen the ties that bind business units to its headquarters in Armonk, N.Y.

Among them, it said IBM's marketing units will be able to combine IBM products with products made by other companies, "thus providing total solutions that are tailored to customer needs."

In its announcement, IBM did not go as far as some analysts expected in freeing its business units. Some believed the company would form separate subsidiaries for each business unit, leaving the parent corporation to act like a holding company.

IBM has been criticized for years as having a stifling bureaucracy that slows decision-making and saps creativity. The problem is particularly troublesome in the fast-moving computer industry, where products can become outdated within months.

Bless Your Heart restaurants restructure

By Mella McEwen

BLESS YOUR HEART restaurants have been undergoing some restructuring recently.

McEwen

The company sold its store in Courtyard shopping center across from Midland Park Mall to Skinny Dip restaurant, and is expanding hours at its two remaining locations in ClayDesta Plaza and downtown in the Empire Plaza building.

Current new hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays at the ClayDesta location, 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday at the downtown location.

Beginning January 5, the remodeled ClayDesta location will extend its hours, from 7 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Saturdays. Also extended is the menu, with heart-healthy Mexican, Italian and chargrilled chicken dishes added.

Bless Your Heart will also unveil a new diet program with breakfast, lunch and dinner selections.

The Odessa location has also been closed for renovations and will reopen this spring.

• • •

Open in a new location and under new ownership is HUB CAP ANNIE, which is now found at 3302-C W. Illinois, adjacent to Tommy "Hossfly" Atchison Guns and Trades.

Stan Lee and Tommy Atchison purchased the franchise and moved it. Atchison will operate Hub Cap Annie's, which offers a variety of center caps, wheel covers, hub caps and center rings.

Hours are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

• • •

Under new ownership is MIDLAND INDUSTRIAL WAREHOUSE, located at 2601 W. Industrial.

Permian Basin Disposal Inc. now owns the Class A, 203,848 square foot warehouse facility, which is managed by Westlake Realty Corp.

The property offers spaces from 1,800 to16,800 square feet and features a card-operated security gate, paved drive access, dock high concrete foundation for most units, and overhead doors.

Don't be intimidated by a turkey; it's just a big chicken

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

A food editor's phone rings like crazy at this time of year. Otherwise sane cooks, perfectly competent at turning out pastry crusts and dealing with fresh game, go cuckoo when confronted with the big bird. Calm down, y'all. Think of turkey as a large chicken, and you'll sail through Thanksgiving dinner.

WHAT TO BUY: Whole turkey comes fresh or frozen. Industry sources say there is no difference in taste, but the popularity of fresh birds points to a couple of consumer concerns. One, you save time and refrigerator space with a fresh bird because it's not taking up a shelf for as much as four days to defrost. In addition, fresh birds aren't injected with "basting" juices, the best option for those with fat and cholesterol concerns. The basting juices are usually broth, oil and other manufactured fats. Not all frozen birds are pumped with lubricants, so if that's a concern, read the label.

Buy one pound of turkey for each diner. That will yield plenty for dinner and leftovers.

If you're taking advantage of low Thanksgiving prices and want to buy an extra bird, count on it keeping in your freezer for six to eight months for optimum flavor.

HOW TO THAW: Thaw the wrapped turkey in the refrigerator on a tray. A 9- to 12-pounder takes one-and-a-half to two days; 12 to 16 pounds takes two to three days; 16 to 24 pounds will take three to four days. If you can't get to the store on time, place the whole frozen turkey, in its wrapper, in a sink of cold water. Change the water every hour. A 9- to 12-pounder will take four to six hours; a 12- to 16-pounder will take six to nine hours; and a 16- to 24-pounder will take nine to 12 hours. Never, ever, ever, defrost the turkey at room temperature. This is a sure way to give bacteria a prime breeding environment.

HOW TO COOK: The Butterball people suggest open-pan roastig for best results.

Remove neck and giblets from cavities. Rinse and drain turkey. Pat dry. Stuff turkey if desired. Stuff loosely; stuffing expands as it cooks. Turn wings back to hold neck skin in place. If untucked, return legs to tucked positions. It's not necessary to truss the turkey.

Place turkey, breast up, on flat rack in open pan about 2 inches deep.

Insert meat thermometer deep in thickest part of thigh next to body but not touching bone. Brush skin with oil. Further basting is not recommended.

(The biggest fear of cooks is a dry turkey. Basting is often the culprit. Continual opening of the oven lets in dry air and basting itself is a wasted effort because the skin of the bird is waterproof and sheds all the extra fat to the bottom of the roasting pan.)

Roast at 325 degrees. When skin is golden, shield breast with foil to prevent over-browning.

Internal thigh temperature should be 180 to 185 degrees; center of stuffing should read 160 to 165 degrees. Juices should be clear, not pink, when meat is pierced. Let turkey stand 15 to 20 minutes before carving.

AFTER THE PARTY: Strip the turkey immediately after the meal. Wrap and store meat in refrigerator. Remove any remaining stuffing from cavity and store separately.

DON'T DO THIS: Two popular baking methods over the past decade are not recommended.

Don't roast your bird in a brown paper grocery sack. Many manufacturers include recycled paper these days and the chemicals can be dangerous to the digestive system. Those same chemicals can cause the sacks to ignite.

Don't cook the turkey on low heat overnight. This process doesn't get the meat warm enough for bacteria to flourish.

WHO TO CALL: The Butterball Talk-Line is staffed Sunday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and through Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Hours Thanksgiving are 6 a.m.-6 p.m. The line will reopen the day after Thanksgiving, and the Monday-Friday hours until Dec. 23 are 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Call (800) 323-4848.

Cooking a perfectly golden brown bird is as easy as imagining it is just a big chicken.

Fudging tradition a little puts new life in Thanksgiving meal

N.Y. Times News Service

Tradition may be a big part of your family's Thanksgiving meal, but are you tired of the same old pumpkin pie?

Cooking teacher Elise Griffin designed this menu, traditional "but not boring," for a family with strong Polish roots and "adventuresome palates."

Here are her suggestions for a meal makeover . . .

THE TURKEY: To save time, cook the dressing separately. In order to impart a fresh new taste to the bird, rub a rosemary- and lemon-infused herb butter underneath the skin, right onto the breast meat. Smear the rest of the herb butter over the skin and stuff remaining fresh herbs in the body cavity.

THE DRESSING: Go beyond white bread crumbs. Ms. Griffin varied this a bit by using challah, or egg bread. And she added currants and chopped dried apricots for a taste variation. To lighten the dressing, she added only enough turkey stock to moisten it — and no eggs.

THE BREAD: Ms. Griffin suggested muffins made with sour cream, softened butter and self-rising flour. They should be baked in miniature tins because they're so rich, and can be prepared in advance and frozen.

THE SIDE DISHES: Traditionally, the family had served its green vegetables in the form of a crudite platter. Ms. Griffin liked that idea since the veggies can be steamed or blanched and chilled ahead of time. She concocted a yogurt and dill dip that is low-fat. Mashed potatoes, on the other hand, are a high-calorie mainstay that the family didn't want to do without. Ms. Griffin added caramelized diced onions to the potatoes for extra flavor and crunch.

COLD SALAD: One tradition was lime Jell-O with marshmallows and crushed pineapple, combined with whipped cream and softened cream cheese. Ms. Griffin was stumped.

DESSERT: Pies are the preferred dessert, and Ms. Griffin didn't want to stray from that tradition. She added a praline layer to the standard pumpkin and a handful of cranberries and a cinnamon butter streusel topping to the apple.

'Supermarket Strangeness' takes over our shelves, pocketbooks

By Linda Anderson

Never mind science fiction movies — if you want to see some really strange things, go to the supermarket.

Anderson

Food manufacturers seem to be outdoing themselves coming up with new and unusual products for us to spend our money on. And let's face it, with money as tight as it is, a new product has to be really unusual for most of to be even tempted.

Here's a few examples of "Supermarket Strangeness:"

■ Grizzly Chomps. These new cupcakes from Hostess are clearly designed for the youngest generation — you know, the ones who whine for mom to buy them something until she either breaks down and buys it or never brings them to the supermarket again (which is not a bad idea, either). Anyway, these cupcakes (chocolate cake, chocolate icing, multi-colored sprinkles) have a "bite" taken out of them, supposedly by the cartoon grizzly bear pictured on the package. He's supposed to be saying something like, "I start 'em, you finish 'em." See, it's all kid stuff. But it doesn't take a mathmatical genius to figure out that (1) that "bite" taken out is about one-fourth of the whole cupcake; (2) you're paying the same price as you would for whole cupcakes; and (3) they don't even have that white stuff in the middle. Took my kids about a minute to figure out that Grizzly Chomps are a rip-off. Why on earth would you want to pay the same price for three-quarters of the product? Makes no sense.

■ Pop Qwiz microwave popcorn. Must be tough competition in the microwave popcorn market, because the only difference in this variety and about a dozen others is that this one comes in colors — red, yellow, blue and green. Why would anyone want to eat blue popcorn? Suggested retail price is about $1.29 for a 7-ounce package containing four "child-size" bags. I checked some regular-sized microwaveable popcorn bags, and they were 3.5 ounces each — which means the entire box of Pop Qwiz (in all those colors) makes about as much popcorn as two ordinary microwaveable popcorn bags. For $1.29. Somehow that seems like an awful lot of money just to get popcorn in different colors. Maybe they could be popped and strung to hang on the Christmas tree — hey, 'tis the season and all that. The price of $1.29 for 7-ounce box may be expensive for popcorn, but have you priced Christmas decorations lately???

■ Here's one I haven't actually seen in the store yet, but I'm not looking forward to when I do. You know those "fruit" snacks that are supposed to contain "the goodness of fruit," but are really just candy in disguise? You know, fruit rolls and fruit shapes (dinosaurs, sharks, etc.)? Well, the latest one is called Garfield Fat Cat Funnies (based on the cartoon character, Garfield). General Mills, maker of the product, calls them "the only fruit roll with comics printed right on them. Wild Blue fruit rolls feature the antics of Garfleid and friends printed in edible ink directly on the roll. Each roll shows a different comic. Read and laugh, the enjoy." Can you imagine your kids eating this stuff??? Mine would probably l-o-v-e them. I'm not buying any. Candy is candy, and Sunday funnies are Sunday funnies, and in my house, I hope the two never meet.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket and from company information. Prices at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

In troubled times, still we have thanks to give

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow is Thanksgiving. So let us pause for a moment today and make a mental note of all those blessings for which we can be thankful.

Van Buren

How is your health? You have a few minor complaints? Well, thank God they're not major. If you're reading this — you're still here. You can probably think of at least one person who isn't around this year. (I know I can.)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, read the newspaper with two good eyes (or even one) — praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't. (Say a prayer for those who have perished — from natural causes, fire, flood, earthquake or war.)

How's your pocketbook? Thin? You're not alone. But many people in much of the world are a lot poorer and have far less hope than we have in America.

Are you lonely? Well, the way to have a friend is to reach out to someone and try to be a friend. If nobody calls you, call someone. Go out of your way today to do something nice for another person. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern — concern for fair treatment under the law. Our country may not be a rose garden, but it is far from a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can worship in the church of your choice (or not worship at all if that's your choice), cast a secret ballot and even criticize our government without fear of retribution. And for the first time, we are living in a unipolar world free from the threat of impending nuclear disaster.

As a final thought I'll repeat my Thanksgiving prayer. Perhaps you will want to use it at your table tomorrow — let one of the children read it:

"O, heavenly father, we thank thee for food and remember the hungry.

"We thank thee for health and remember the sick.

"We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.

"We thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

"May these remembrances stir us to service,

"That thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen."

May the spirit of Thanksgiving be shared by one and all! Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and may God bless you and yours. — Love, Abby

P.S. Why not invite a friend who lives alone to share a Thanksgiving meal — or better yet, call and say, "I'm coming to get you, and I'll see that you get home." Try it, and let me know how your day was.

Bassett 'chews the fat' about bird fixing

By Diane Duston

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roger Bassett got out of the gourmet ice cream business when health conscious consumers started turning away from high-fat foods.

Now he's franchising a fast-food restaurant that specializes in one of America's favorite low-fat meats — turkey. And he's got a few tips for consumers fixing the bird this holiday season.

"You have to start off with a fresh turkey," says Bassett. "If it is frozen, it will be a drier product and it will be a little stringier."

Then, he says, cook the bird at 250 degrees instead of the more commonly used temperature of 325 degrees.

"Cooking lower, makes it much juicier. The negative is that it won't give a browned skin, but that can be fixed by turning the temperature up to 400 degrees in the last 10 minutes of cooking."

He also says that turkey will taste best if you turn the oven off when the internal temperature of the bird is 160 degrees. "It will continue to cook and it will be perfect," he said.

Bassett buys about 25 to 30 turkeys a day for each of his restaurants, which generally are in the food courts of shopping malls. Obviously, he's got to use as much of the bird as possible and has some advice for leftovers.

"What we do is a soup," he says. The turkey carcass gets simmered in a pot with celery leaves and onion skins left over from making dressing. The stock is strained and the broth becomes the basis for the soup, to which turkey meat, vegetables, rice or pasta can be added.

His simple turkey salad adds mayonnaise, celery, parsley, salt and pepper to the scraps. And he has a stuffing sandwich that makes use of leftover cranberry sauce, stuffing and turkey by putting it all between two pieces of fresh baked bread.

Bassett, 30, of Philadelphia, comes from five generations of ice cream makers. He opened his first Bassett Original Turkey in 1983 and started franchising two years ago when he decided the high-fat, butterfat ice cream business was doomed by a consumer trend away from fat.

Changes in habits can avoid holiday weight gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans commonly gain weight between Thanksgiving and New Year's and then make resolutions to diet.

But a specialist in preventive health care says that a few simple changes in personal habits can keep the weight off without much effort.

If you eat a doughnut or muffin at breakfast, switch to two pieces of toast with jam. You'll lose five pounds between Thanksgiving and February, says Lawrence Stifler, president of Health Management Resources in Boston.

At lunch, substitute mustard for mayonnaise on your sandwich each day. Another three pounds will drop off, he says.

And if you start taking a 20-minute walk every lunch hour, you'll be 22 pounds lighter by next Thanksgiving.

Stifler says the traditional holiday meal can be lower in calories if you:

■ Remove the skin from the turkey before you eat it.

■ Skim the fat off the gravy.

■ Bake the stuffing outside the turkey.

■ Eat baked potatoes instead of masbed or candied sweet potatoes. Use sour cream instead of butter.

■ Eat pumpkin or apple pie instead of pecan and leave some of the crust.

But if you'd rather pig out on a fat-and-calorie-loaded feast accompanied by full day of television football watching, Stifler's advice is to under-eat the next day and find time to walk for at least 30 minutes.

Proper diet can help athletes gain competitive winning edge

Staff Report

Anyone serious about athletic competition needs to be equally serious about the foods they eat. Endurance athletes and athletes who train strenuously on a regular basis can gain a winning edge through proper diet.

Time was when a large cut of meat was thought to be fit food for those in training. Today we know that complex carbohydrates are key. The relationship of carbohydrates to athletic performance, is the focus of a new boklet available free from Uncle Ben's, Inc. — official sponsor fo the 1992 Olympic Games.

"Carbohydrates — The Winnig Edge," explains how carbohydrates provide energy for activites, how carbohydrate stores are depleted during activity and how these stores may be replenished most efficiently. Pre-event carbohydrate loading is explained, and the booklet includes favorite rice recipes served at the U.S. Olympic Training Center, where Uncle Ben's Brand Rice has been the only rice served to Olympic hopefuls.

For a free copy of the booklet or for quantity copies for distributuion to athletic teams or groups, send name and address to Uncle Ben's Nutrition For Athletes, P.O. Box 11147, Chicago, Ill., 60611. Offer is good while supplies last.

Officials wait for Magic to contact government

By Faith Keenan
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Several transcontinental calls after Earvin "Magic" Johnson announced he was infected with the AIDS virus, federal health officials still have not connected with the L.A. Lakers star to schedule his swearing in as the new member of the National Commission on AIDS.

A health official speculated Tuesday that Johnson has been so besieged by calls from fans and friends and by book and promotional offers that he has not had a chance to sort out his dramatically changed life, let alone set a date with the federal government. The official requested anonymity.

Stephen Rivers, a spokesman for the Creative Artists Agency, which is handling some of Johnson's AIDS-related efforts, said he did not know when a Washington trip was planned by Johnson, who announced his retirement on Nov. 7 because he was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS.

"We don't have an answer yet on that," said Rivers. "We hope to soon."

Lon Rosen, Johnson's business manager, could not be reached for comment on the matter.

As a result, Johnson could miss the commission's next scheduled hearings on Dec. 9 and 10 to consider proposed changes in the "case definition" of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Thomas Brandt, a spokesman for the commission, said panel members also did not know when Johnson would officially join the group.

The commission is the second such panel formed to advise the president and Congress on federal AIDS policy. Five of its voting members are appointed by the Senate, five by the House of Representatives, and two by the White House.

In a Nov. 13 letter to Johnson, George Bush invited the basketball wonder to fill the slot left open when one of his previous appointees, Belinda Mason, died of AIDS in September. Mason, a Kentucky journalist, contracted HIV through a blood transfusion.

Johnson accepted Bush's offer on Nov. 15.

At its upcoming meetings, the commission will hear testimony on a proposal by the federal Centers for Disease Control that the definition of an AIDS case be broadened to include about 160,000 people who are infected with HIV but show no symptoms of AIDS. The current definition requires infection as well as the existence of diseases associated with AIDS.

The new regulation would enable more people to qualify for disability payments. It would encompass all HIV-positive individuals with disease-fighting white blood cell counts of less than 200. A normal amount of such cells, known as CD4 cells, is 1,000 to 1,500.

As health officials await word from Johnson, he appears to have independently tailored his "safe sex" message to put abstinence ahead of condom use as the main way to prevent HIV transmission.

In public appearances immediately after his nationally televised announcement, Johnson emphasized condom use as the primary means to practice "safe sex."

His revised message reflects the federal government's emphasis in its AIDS prevention materials: No sex is the safest sex, but if you must, use a condom.

Bush's appointment of Johnson prompted a backlash from some conservatives who believed Johnson's acknowledged promiscuity would send what they considered the wrong message to teen-agers: that it is OK to have sex with as many people as you want so long as you use a condom.

"We were not happy with the appointment based on the advice he was initially giving to young people," said Gary Bauer, a former Reagan White House adviser who now heads the Family Research Council. The council supports what it considers traditional family values.

Bauer said Johnson's new message is more acceptable.

The heat from the right, however, has not wilted Bush's support for Johnson's appointment, a senior White House official said.

"We hope people realize (Johnson) has lots of messages to convey — among them that promiscuity is bad," said the official who asked not to be identified. "It's not bad just because it's morally destructive, but because it's bad for your health."

However, Johnson probably will not be sworn in at a White House ceremony, as Bush had suggested in his invitation to Johnson to join the panel, according to the source.

"At this point, the most likely thing would be for something to go on at HHS (the Department of Health and Human Services), not the White House," the official said.

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
