Pilsudski Is In Control Of Presidential Home, Premier A Fugitive

By United Press.
WARSAW, May 14.—Marshal Pilsudski's troops today captured the presidential palace to which President Wojciechowski, Premier Witos and other members of the government withdrew after Pilsudski's occupation of the city Thursday. It was reported that several of the members of Wojciechowski's cabinet were captured but that some escaped by airplane.

BERLIN REPORTS CASUALTIES AT 600

By United Press.
BERLIN, May 14.—An unconfirmed report from Warsaw today intimated tremendous casualties during the fighting between the troops of Marshal Pilsudski's and Marshal Sokorski in the suburbs of Warsaw. The report estimated the casualties from six to eight hundred. A m. United Press dispatches direct from Warsaw yesterday reported 60 killed in street fights since the Pilsudski and Sokorski troops have been engaged but there is no confirmation of the foregoing facts.

PRAGUE ADVISES 150 KILLED, 80 WOUNDED

By United Press.
PRAGUE, Poland, May 14.—It is reported here that 150 persons were killed and 80 wounded in a battle at the gates of Warsaw last night.

SIKORSKI RESORTS TO USE OF DYNAMITE

By United Press.
BERLIN, Germany, May 14.—Marshal Sikorski has resorted to dynamite to head off the efforts of Marshal Pilsudski to consolidate his positions, and to place himself in position of dictator of Poland. It was said today that Sikorski troops dynamited a bridge across the Bug river compelling a Pilsudski contingent of troops enroute to Warsaw to turn back.

Sea Flea Is Safe Off The Coast At Marseilles

By United Press.
MARSEILLES, France, May 14.—Nicholas Gassenko and his "sea flea" are safe today about two miles from Marseilles after the start of what Gassenko hoped would prove a non-stop journey from Marseilles to Rome. The "sea flea" is a glider propelled by an air propeller. The draft of the craft at full speed is so little that it actually skims the water. The propeller broke soon after the start to Rome today.

"Cave Men" Get Billy Mitchell

Billy Mitchell, former air service chief, was kidnapped at Hornbrook, Calif., while touring the west coast, and taken to a mountain den by a group of "cave men." Photo shows Mitchell being initiated into the order by tearing off a raw beefsteak with his teeth. After initiation he made the "cave men" a speech about the air service.

WOODRUFF JAILED IN EASTLAND

J. C. Woodruff, wanted in Eastland county on an indictment charging him with murder in connection with the killing of policeman Jim Daniels early in 1925, is now in the Eastland county jail where he was placed late last night after having been brought from Wichita Falls by Deputy Sheriff Virge Foster and members of the Ranger police department. Officers have been hunting for Woodruff since the shooting of Daniels, and a few months ago believed they had him when a man by the name of Woodruff and resembling J. C. Woodruff, was arrested in Deming, N. M. He proved to be the wrong man, however, and was immediately released. J. C. Woodruff, said to be 33 years of age and married, was arrested by the officers at Waurika, Oklahoma, through the efforts of Eastland county officers and State Ranger Sebastian. He was taken by the Oklahoma officers to Wichita Falls and then turned over to the Eastland county officers and brought to Eastland, arriving here about 11 o'clock last night. Thursday, Sheriff Bob Edwards of Eastland talked to the sheriff at Waurika over the telephone. He also talked with Woodruff, who was not in jail, but was under arrest. Woodruff seemed to be under the impression that he was wanted as a witness in the Daniels case and indicated to the officer that he was willing to talk. Sheriff Edwards did not tell him in the long distance telephone conversation that he held a warrant for him charging him with the murder of Daniels. The arrest of Woodruff makes a total of six men, indicted by the Eastland county grand jury for murder in connection with the killing of Policeman Jim Daniels of Ranger. They are Cleve Barnes "Pat" Starnford, Luke Barnes, Harve Wells, Edward Bush and Woodruff. Bush, Wells and Cleve and Woodruff are under indictment and conviction on other felony charges. All of the parties are in jail or under bond.

Mike Morgan Well Attracts Attention; Shows Gas and Oil

Much interest is being manifested in the Mike Morgan well being drilled by Correllus Brothers et al of Eastland in the Long Branch community about seven miles southwest of Carbon. The well, which is gassing and showing some oil at a depth of 3025 feet, is purely a wildcat and is shut down temporarily. THE WEATHER. West Texas—Tonight and Saturday, partly cloudy to cloudy; warmer Saturday in north portion.

Blanton Wins Fight Against Fred A. Fenning

Special Correspondence.
WASHINGTON, May 14.—Without a dissenting vote, the house has passed the Blanton resolution instituting impeachment proceedings against Commissioner Frederick A. Fenning. The action was perhaps the most decisive taken by the house during the present session. Not a voice was raised against the resolution from either side of the aisle. Under the resolution, the house judiciary committee will begin immediately its investigation of the impeachment charges against the accused district official. The committee which removes any restriction which might block impeachment, by striking out the words "and for which he should be impeached," from the resolution. Representative L. C. Dyer of Missouri, ranking member of the judiciary committee, explained the amendment.

Baptist Select Louisville, Ky. Next Meeting

By United Press.
HOUSTON, Texas, May 14.—The adoption of a plan to take care of retired ministers, ministers' widows and orphans and the selection of Louisville, Ky., for the 1927 meeting were the high lights of the Baptist convention today. Dr. Wallace Bassett of Dallas will deliver the convention sermon. Former Gov. Pat M. Neff, dressed in a black suit and standing collar, read the report of the laymen's committee on the new service, annuity plan.

Mexican Section Hand Dies From Injuries Received

Luis Toineio, a Texas & Pacific Mexican section hand, while working with his crew near Tiffin, Thursday, was struck by a jack handle, which fractured his skull. He was taken to City-County hospital where he never regained consciousness. He died at about 5 p. m. Burial arrangements had not been completed at a late hour today.

SAN ANTONIO, May 14.—Felice Garcia, 11 years old, was found drowned last night in the municipal bathing pool. She was clothed in a bathing suit. The body was found by Ramond Malvinos, when he dived in several feet of water.

BALDWIN PLANS NEGOTIATIONS SEEKING PEACE

Government Subsidy Is Offered By The Premier To Miners

By United Press.
LONDON, May 14.—The industrial strike was subsided in Great Britain today. Vigorous peace efforts have resulted in the signing of an agreement in the resumption of work by 450,000 striking railroad men, and the resumption of work by the dock workers. Premier Baldwin conferred with the coal mine owners today after he had announced in his house of commons speech that he had drafted terms for a settlement of the mines stoppage and would present them to both parties. Premier Baldwin's plea for peace in the mine industry contained a promise of $15,000,000 government subsidy, it was announced today. Baldwin proposed that the subsidy should be paid over an indefinite period, but it is contingent on the miners' acceptance of his proposal, which provided for a solution of all disputes in the industry.

GREAT BRITAIN ALMOST ON NORMAL BASIS

By United Press.
LONDON, May 14.—Hundreds of thousands of men are still on strike today but negotiations to return them to their old jobs on re-employment agreements mutually satisfactory to employers and strikers are beginning to bring success. Great Britain has returned to normal 48 hours after cancellation of the strike order which brought the country to the verge of an industrial catastrophe. Signature of a re-employment agreement which would send 450,000 railroad workers back to their jobs in the outskirts of London. The drill was down 1,450 feet Friday morning. No oil sand is expected short of 3400 feet it is announced. This well within plain view of parts of the city, started by the same company which drilled in the old discovery well, after a long hiatus, is attracting more attention and it holds greater interest probably for both oil men and laymen than any test within the past six years or more. Oil men say it comes in strong, it will mean much to the Ranger territory. They point out however, that even should it prove as good as the McCleskey discovery well, Ranger would take it with far greater calm, and cite as evidence of that, the fact that every few days or weeks, a good well is brought in, in the territory which, if it were to be discovered in some new field, would start a mad boom. As one oil man put it: "For operating, there is no better field than Ranger. For selling leases, some new field not a tenth as good, may be better."

TALENT NOW IS WATCHING HODGES WELL

Good progress is reported by the drillers and operators drilling the T-P well on Hodges heirs tract, near the old McCleskey discovery well in the outskirts of Ranger. The drill was down 1,450 feet Friday morning. No oil sand is expected short of 3400 feet it is announced.

Radio Restores Her Hearing

Jean Williams of Los Angeles was born five years ago, a deaf mute. But now she can hear and talk. Radio did it. Ed Albright, announcer at station KNX, took the girl to the studio and put headphones on her ears. For the first time in her life she began to hear sounds. Then he began teaching her to talk—and in another year, it is said, her hearing and speech will be perfectly normal. He is shown holding her on his lap.

NEW FIELD LOOMS UP IN EASTLAND

A new field looms up four miles due east of Eastland, where the Gulf Production Company's No. 1 S. H. Person is standing with 600 feet of oil in the hole, a mile from the nearest production and yielding from what is declared to be a new sand. The well will be drilled in this afternoon, it is expected. Scores of oil men have visited the well and it is occasioning much interest. The Gulf well is a mile southeast of the Olden field a mile south some six weeks ago. Cowboy Evans and associates are drilling at 600 feet on the R. J. Fox, 1350 feet east of the Woods well and the Robert Oil Corporation is rigging up on the Gullett, about 1350 feet south of the Woods well.

Thousands Crowd Churchill Downs For Big Derby

CHURCHILL DOWNS RACE TRACK, Kentucky, May 14.—While thousands crowded the course for this afternoon's races interest centered on tomorrow's derby and last minute entrants and workouts for several entrants for this rich classic. The "clockers" and the "railbirds" were on hand early in the morning to time the sleek animals which on tomorrow will carry the hope and money of the throngs gathered for the year's most spectacular event. Col. E. E. Bradley's "Bubbling Over," the favorite among the Kentucky folks, pleased his admirers today in a six-furlong test. He was timed at 23:3-5 for the quarter, 47:2-5 for the half, and the three-quarters at 1:13-4-5. The colt looked like his speediest and in the parlance of the turf "should have no excuse."

Death Claims Devil's River Miner at Camp

By United Press.

SNOW FLURRIES ADD HAZARDS TO AMUNDSEN MEN

Nome Still Hopeful That Party Is Safe Somewhere In Air

By United Press.
NOME, Alaska, May 14.—Snow flurries today added to the weather hazard facing the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Mobile dirigible Norge, presumed to be drifting somewhere over the Arctic seas north of here. At 11 o'clock this forenoon, eastern standard time, snow was falling here; wind driven, while heavy skies increased the airship's peril. The barometer registered 29.52 degrees and was steadily falling at that hour. Old-timers predicted a severe storm blowing in from the ocean over which the explorers are believed to be soaring. Reports which went back and forth across Alaska, as radio operators traded news of their endeavors to get in touch with the Norge, have given no encouraging word since early Thursday.

STRONG WINDS HAMPER NORGE
Nome, Alaska, May 14.—The strong wind from the north today combined with heavy clouds heightened the storm dangers to the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Mobile dirigible Norge floating somewhere in the Arctic skies. At 7 a. m., eastern standard time, Nome still was without the faintest trace of word from the airship due here 24 hours ago on its 2,000-mile dash from King's Bay, Spitzbergen, across the pole. As the morning advanced the dense clouds off shore increased and a wind of fairly heavy intensity sprang up. Doubt was expressed as to whether the men of Nome would be able to pull the dirigible to earth if the wind increased, should it reach here during the storm.

LITTLE APPREHENSION FELT FOR AMUNDSEN

The last word heard from the ship was early Thursday. Since then nothing but silence has prevailed, and there have been no signals at the radio stations at Nome, Anchorage and other Alaskan ports. Last night flares were lighted, 25 on the landing field, which had been marked with great letters, "Norge," in order to bring about a successful completion of the flight. The crowd remained on hand during the night. Little apprehension is felt, however, concerning the fate of the ship. Amundsen has been missing before in the Arctic, once more than a year, but he has always returned with tales of adventure.

STRONG WIND MAY SEND NORGE SOUTH

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, May 14.—Naval air men said today the northwest wind in Alaska might be blowing the Norge further south than Nome, where it had planned to land. With a good strong wind the dirigible could shut off its power and become a free balloon in which case it could drift with the wind a great distance, it was said. It would be difficult to land anywhere in Alaska except Nome, as there has been no landing arrangement made elsewhere, they stated.

METHODIST SESSION IS STORMY

By United Press.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 14.—A stormy session of the Southern Methodist general conference is expected here today when an attempt will be made to force the body to operate in the future under a constitution instead of a set of rules, now in effect. The delegates appear about evenly divided. Those favoring a constitution contend that a legislative body not held in check may go beyond the authority intended for it. Opponents contend that religious bodies should not become highly organized, contending that with too many rules religious bodies tend to become ritualistic.

 hearted man, in whom the Lord put wisdom and understanding to know how to work all manner of work."
 Ex. 36:1.
 Prayer: Help us, Lord, to work
 the work of God.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.
 The development of the child into good citizenship should be given first consideration by every municipality.
 The development of the agricultural and the care of the stranger third.

The necessity for supervised play
 and the establishment of recreation centers has been brought home to the state and cities in the past two decades in the increase in delinquencies. The cost of delinquency mounts up into the millions in the nation and state and up into the thousands in the towns and villages.

There are a number of towns that spend thousand of dollars in constructing and keeping up tourist camps that bring in practically no
 revenue. They are liabilities, and yet
 those same towns will not spend one cent toward maintaining playgrounds
 and recreation centers and employing competent supervisors of play.

It has been demonstrated that delinquency has been cut to a minimum
 in all towns where recreation departments have been established and play supervised. Statistics from Dallas, Waco, Fort Worth and other towns speak volumes for the need of supervised play. The decrease in delinquency in those towns has been marked.

It took a fight to put the recreation departments over, but now it would take a war for them to go back to the old ways again. Towns like Ranger and Eastland have the same problem. Delinquency mounts
 up into the thousands of dollars, records show.

One or two good recreation centers
 would be worth more to this town
 than all the tourist parks in the state. However, the parks probably do some good, but so far as we know they have never brought any new industries to towns. Most of the towns now are beginning to charge
 for their use. They have been found liabilities instead of assets.

The future of this town and the republic rests upon the shoulders of the children of the day. Is it not worth an effort to do something to save them? The supervised play has been tested and found good, so let's try it.

EUROPEAN SITUATION.

The downfall of the German cabinet, the revolution in Poland, the strike in England and the war in Morocco makes us praise God all the more for being allowed to live in a land like America. It strengthens us and should strengthen all Americans
 in keeping out of the League of Nations and holding to the Monroe doctrine.

Back of the war in Poland is the church. Wherever church dominates
 a nation you may expect trouble.
 Mexico is just emerging from such an ordeal. For years Mexico was a seething mass of revolution.

In Germany, it's the case of "Ich und Gott" Wilhelm and his cohorts wanting to get back in power. In France it's a case of wanting the United States to give them all the money they owe us in addition to the number of lives we gave them to make that land safe from invasion
 and domination by "Ich und Gott."

It's glorious to be able to live in a land where all men are given an equal opportunity to enjoy life and seek for happiness. It's glorious to live in a land where the son of the humblest citizen may become the executive head of the nation. It's great to live in a land where every man is a king, and is allowed the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

"RAINBOW'S END"

Attraction tonight.
 The old legend tells us that at the end of the rainbow is a pot of gold
 —the musical opera tonight at the High school, given by the pupils of the Central Ward school, assures us
 that this particular rainbow's end is not a pot of gold, but an evening full
 of delightful entertainment.

Rehearsals have been brisk this week and the teachers who are putting the project over have been untiring in their efforts to make it a most worth-while entertainment.

All the favorite characters of childhood will greet you on the stage tonight. There will be a queen of course, and Peter Pan, as well as Jack Frost and Morpheus and a lot of other jolly fairies. The efforts of the pupils and the teachers in arranging
 this affair should meet with a large response from the patrons of the school and others.

WEDNESDAY BRIDGE

MEETS AT ACCORN ACRES

The members of the Wednesday
 Bridge Club and a few extra guests
 were delightfully entertained Wednesday, by Mrs. Gus Coleman, at Accorn Acres Tea Room. Cut Flowers were used for decorations and a daintily appointed two course luncheon was served at the end of the game.

The high score prize went to Mrs.
 Helen Gifford Clegg and the low
 score to Mrs. Clyde Kilpatrick.

Bridge devotees were Mmes. Walter Burden, Frank Champion, Fred Yonkers, R. M. Coyle, Leola Thompson, Chas. Conley, Roy Jameson, Helen Gifford Clegg, Paul Lacy,
 Clyde Kilpatrick and Harry Logsdon.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS ENTERTAIN

WITH GREAT SUCCESS

The Royal Neighbors entertained
 with great success last night at the old K. of P. Hall on Main street.
 Such a large attendance greeted their efforts that there was not seating room for all. A parade of the Juvenile Camp early in the evening
 through the down-town streets, which was led by Mrs. Carrie E. Henry, district deputy, attracted much favorable attention.

State Deputy of Modern Woodmen
 of America, Robert J. Viddler, was present and addressed the Royal Neighbors. Modern Woodmen and the Juveniles.

The drill by the Juvenile team of Breckenridge was greatly enjoyed
 and one of the most attractive features of the evening. This team is composed of girls and boys from 1
 to 16 years of age.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake,
 pie, lemonade were served.

Everyone present reports a most delightful time, a wonderful entertainment and delightful refreshments.

Commencement

Dates For Ranger
 Fixed, May 28-31

The dates for the Ranger schools
 commencements have been definitely fixed, according to Superintendent
 R. F. Holloway. All grammar schools,
 Young, Cooper, Central, Merriam
 and Tiffin will hold their exercises
 Friday afternoon, May 28 at 2 o'clock. The high school play will be given Friday at 8 p. m. at the high school. Baccalaureate sermon
 by Rev. W. H. Johnson, Sunday, May 30 at 11 a. m. High school graduating exercises Monday evening, May 31, at 8 o'clock in high school auditorium. Judge Homer Brelford of Eastland, probably will deliver the graduating address.

The number of graduates is yet to be positively determined but it is estimated that 100 will pass from grammar school to high school and 45 from high school to junior college. The percentage is slightly in favor of the girl graduates in both instances, it is said. About 60 percent of all graduates will be girls,
 it is estimated.

Maddocks Sets

Precedent In Beautification

C. E. Maddocks, real estate dealer, has what is believed to be the most remarkable back yard in Ranger.
 Peach, plum, pear, apple and apricot
 trees, grape vines, strawberry, blackberry and dewberry beds, lilac bushes
 and other plants, vines and shrubs vie
 in making the place a bower akin to a little paradise. Ripe strawberries give a touch of red to the picturesque green of the entire ensemble of verdure at the present time.

The Maddocks home is in Young addition and is a model for others to copy in the city beautiful which, it is said, is soon to be launched in Ranger.

Skinned Nose

Results From A
 Cowboy Stunt

Trying to do a cowboy stunt and rope and stop an unruly cow at his home, in the outskirts of Ranger,
 Dick Riddle had the unique experience Thursday of having his saddle
 pulled clean over his horse's head,
 girth unbroken, and himself hurled several feet in the air. A badly skinned nose and some severe
 bruises are the extent of injuries sustained.

La Societe des forty hommes et eight cheveaux, which in plain United States means forty men and
 eight horses, met all but the horses,
 at the Ranger country club last night
 and held a stag party which is said
 to have been one of the most enjoyable since war times. The 40

 shoppers and others tomorrow. Sandwiches, coffee and cake will be served
 and flowers given to the ladies,
 it is announced. Both Mr. Bronson,
 in charge of the Decker's display, and Howard Davis, in charge of the market, join Manager Howard McCleskey
 in an invitation to the public to be present and see how a Piggly Wiggly
 is formally launched.

Woman Lightning Calculator Would Revise Teaching

LONDON.—Hopful of bringing about a revolution in the teaching of arithmetic and making it more of an art than a science, Miss Elleu-nette Betis, a language teacher here,
 wants learned mathematicians to test
 and study her system of lightning
 calculation. She is American born,
 but French by nationality, and claims to be the only woman lightning calculator in the world.

Miss Betis can listen to long columns of figures being enumerated
 and give the correct addition, without use of pencil and paper, as soon as the last figure is spoken. She will do multiplication, subtraction and division with the same facility, and given any date in any year she will furnish without a moment's hesitation the day of the week.

She says her methods are based on the decimal system and are the same as those used by the ancient Egyptians.

"I adopted the methods instinctively
 at school," she explained, "but I have learned by investigation in the British Museum since that they are thousands of years old."

"It may be a high aspiration, but I want to bring about a revolution in

Complex Radio Reports Help Air Service

By United Press.

LONDON.—How the safety of Americans traveling on the English
 and European air-routes is guarded
 by the most perfectly organized airways meteorological service in the world was described to the United Press by G. R. Hay, chief meteorologist at Crocyden Aerodrome.

For Crocyden, the busiest airport in the world, is the focusing point to constant wireless dispatches from more than 100 stations along the lines of the different air routes—dispatches that advise Crocyden instantly
 of any changes in wind direction and strength, mists, fogs, storms, height
 and degree of thickness of the clouds.

"These reports," said Hay, "are immediately incorporated on tags
 which are hung on a huge blackboard
 map of all the air routes. Thus,
 when a pilot is about to start on a trip he goes to his blackboard and is able to get instantly a mental picture
 of the weather conditions along the entire line of his route at the time of starting. Take for instance the London-Paris route. There are thirteen stations reporting hourly as to conditions along this route, and oftener if sudden changes warrant special bulletins. The pilot about to start for Le Bourget aerodrome just outside of Paris goes to the board

 and reads from the tags: 'Crocyden:
 visibility 6 miles; height lowest cloud
 4,000 feet; sky 9-10th overcast;
 speed and direction of the wind at surface, W.S.W., 2 miles an hour; at 2,000 feet, direction 260 degrees, 15 miles an hour.' Successive tags as you see read very similarly until we come to 'Channel from Hythe' where we have 'slight mist, visibility 4,000
 yards.' After that the tags show that the visibility increases again to 6 miles, but that the clouds are down to 2,500 feet and that the sky is totally overcast. While at Le Bourget, the pilot reads the state of the weather as: 'Slight drizzle; visibility 2,000 yards; height of clouds 800 feet, sky totally overcast; wind
 at surface S.S.E., 5 miles an hour.'

The same type of information is available for the pilot about to start on the longer London-Amsterdam, or London-Cologne routes. And where huge passenger machines are roaring away on their flights at a rate of three or four hour throughout the day as is the case during the height of the tourist season, this bulleting
 board which is also available for examination by the passengers is the center of an intensely interested throng.

"But the information contained on the blackboard," continued Hay, "is not the only protection afforded pilots and passengers in the way of meteorological information. For all the passenger machines are equipped with wireless telephones enabling the pilot to be in constant touch with the Crocyden station. Say, for instance, that on reaching the channel he should run into a dense fog. He immediately wonders how far inland
 on the French coast the fog extends and whether indeed it lies over Le Bourget Aerodrome. He immediately 'calls up' Crocyden, where a wireless operator sits with receivers constantly clamped over his ears.

"Heavy fog over channel. What's it like on the French side?" the pilot
 asks. The operator turns to the latest wireless messages from stations
 along the London-Paris route and is able to advise the pilot as to the exact state of the weather conditions
 he will find along the rest of the way
 of his trip.

"There is a general disposition on the part of the air-traveling public to believe that the question of their safety rests entirely upon the reliability
 of the engines and the skill of the pilot. But as an actual fact, accurate meteorological information to the weather conditions the pilot will encounter enroute, is almost as an important a factor in the safety of the public as reliable engines and capable pilots. What we are trying to do is make flying 100 percent safe from the weather point of view, and we think we are approaching our goal."

COLLEGE YOUTH
PLAYED BY JACK

Extreme repression from the time a child is born is the thing that makes for an inferiority complex in a man and the cause of nine out of ten "hen-pecked" husbands.

This is Jack Pickford's belief. Jack is playing the part of a more worshipping than worshipped youth in "Brown of Harvard," coming to the Lamb Theater today and Saturday. The part of "Doolittle" is that of a boy suffering from the worst form of an inferiority complex, so bad that he must ask the support of his friends in everything he says or does.

"Doolittle" is one of the most interesting characters I have ever portrayed," declares Pickford. "It presents the psychology of a youth with no mind of his own, one that is always seeking affection because he never receives any. While there is no background of boyhood presented, I feel sure that the only reason for such a form of dementia is the fact that his every act must have been under severe criticism since childhood. Naturally, since all his thinking was done for him, he cannot think when it is necessary for him to do so.

"A boy who feels sorry for himself can never hope attain popularity with his fellow companions, even though he is pure gold at heart, because a man is almost always repelled by anything which he pities."

William Haines is playing the title role in "Brown of Harvard," while the supporting cast includes Mary Brian, Francis X. Bushman Jr., Ernest Gillen, Edward Connelly, Guinn Williams and Edna Gregory.

Legless Beggar
Of New Orleans
Rolls In Wealth

By United Press.

NEW ORLEANS, May 15.—Henry Molere, legless and wealthy, is a beggar—and he is proud of it.

In fact it is a wonderful recreation and his greatest pleasure, says Henry, whose check for five figures would be cashed without question at the Union Planters bank at Memphis, Tenn., where the cripple stores his easily gotten funds.

"Why should I be ashamed of being a beggar?" he asked. "Can you tell me of a more ancient profession? Do you know of a more honorable one? I am a benefactor of mankind. I soften hearts. I fight greed in a crowd as well as in the individual.

"A man gives to me and he feels uplifted by helping someone poorer in the world's good than he."

Molere took "to the streets" after his legs had been severed in a freight train accident.

He is a familiar figure at the race tracks and admits cheerily he plays upon the superstitions of track followers.

"I understand the practical side of psychology," he went on. "I know

Episcopal Church
Now Out Of Debt
Says Treasurer

By United Press.

RACINE, Wis., May 14.—The Episcopal church is free of debt and in the most favorable condition financially since 1919, Louis B. Franklin, vice president and treasurer of the National Council of the Episcopal Church, reported at the opening session of the spring meeting of the council here today.

As a consequence of the funds which have been contributed since October last by the dioceses throughout the country to extinguish a deficit of $1,500,000, "outside of money borrowed from our reserve deposit accounts in the sum of $708,000, we don't owe a penny to anybody," Franklin told the council.

The "reserve deposit accounts" are special funds available for use by the missionary society, in effect, the church itself, at such times as its income may be less than its expenditures, with a provision that money thus borrowed must be returned as soon as possible. The Episcopal church, therefore, according to Franklin's report, is free of debt, except to itself through its reserve deposit accounts.

This is the first time, Franklin declared, that the church has been in such a favorable condition financially since 1919. He stressed, however, the importance of restoring the reserve deposit accounts without delay.

A highly favorable report on the position of the church in Mexico was made to the council by Dr. John W. Wood, executive secretary of the department of missions. Bishop Creighton, who was recently dispatched to look after the church's interests here, has reported that he has been assured of the kindly intentions of the Mexican government towards the church.

An improved situation in China was also reported by Dr. Wood. A Chinese commission appointed to dispose of the Boxer fund returned to China by the United States has notified the officials of Boone university, the Episcopal institution in the district of Hankow, of an award of $10,000 annually for three years for the support of its library school, the only school in China for the training of librarians.

Republicans
To Hold Rally
In Fort Worth

By United Press.

DALLAS, May 14.—Although the republican party in Texas will hold a primary to nominate candidates for state offices for the first time this summer, the voting will be more or less of a cut and dried affair in most sections of the state, according to local republican officials.

The rally of republicans called in Fort Worth for May 22 will be in fact a convention to draw up the list of state candidates, who will be presented to the republican voters for confirmation in the July primaries. The counties will be represented by delegates to the Fort Worth pre-primary convention on the basis of votes cast for the republican candidate for governor in the 1924 election.

That the difference between Harry M. Wurzbach of Seguin, the only republican member of congress from Texas, and R. B. Creager, national committeeman and Eugene Nolte, state chairman, have taken on a statewide aspect is indicated by recent efforts of the Wurzbach sympathizers to gain control of the Dallas county organization.

Harry Rogers, capitalist of San Antonio is presumably the choice of the republican leaders in Texas as that party's candidate for governor.

He was talked up by both Nolte and Creager on their visits to Dallas during the past year.

The Dallas county democratic committee will not meet until the second day after the final limit for filing of candidates' names, June 21. This meeting, according to Murrell Buckner, county chairman, merely to certify the ticket and assess the cost of the primary on candidates. Democratic politics in this county are not making much stir.

The argument between the county republicans and democrats over the use of the ballot boxes for the primaries has been settled, so far as the commissioners' court is concerned. Use of the ballot boxes has been given the democrats, in spite of the protest of the republicans.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti—Soccer is rapidly replacing revolution in the interest of the native Haitian.

'Tex' Rickard Plans
To Invade Pacific
Coast With Talent

By United Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—Tex Rickard is slated to provide fistic entertainment for the thousands of fans in the San Francisco bay region.

John Tait, who built his reputation on things to eat, and whose name is said to be known to everyone who ever ate a dinner west of the Rockies, is to become a fight impresario and Rickard, according to plans, will furnish the big-time talent for Tait's main events.

Tait, in announcing completion of plans for a big new fight pavilion, to seat between 10,000 and 15,000 persons, revealed that he had entered into a tentative working agreement with the New York promoter.

Tait will furnish the arena and the supporting cards and the crowds, and the fistic luminaries, for whom San Franciscans have been lustily clamoring, will be furnished by Rickard.

Tait's lease on the ground now occupied by the Dreamland rink, which is sufficiently historical to be a decrepit antique, has been renewed for a 50-year term. The old rink will come down and the new pavilion will go up sometime this summer, according to Tait.

Japan To Exhibit
Miniature Pagoda
Made of Pearls

By United Press.

OSAKA.—Among numerous exhibits from Japan at the Philadelphia exposition will be a five story miniature pagoda made of pearls, valued at $350,000.

The pagoda will be exhibited from the Mikimoto pearl store in Tokio. It was made after the pattern of the famous pagoda of Haryuji temple, the oldest Buddhist temple in Japan, and is three feet two inches in height. The Mikimoto began making this pagoda in October, last year. In it there are 201,230 Mikimoto culture pearls, 20,270 natural pearls and 72,875 ounces of platinum. Among the pearls is one which weighs 0.46 ounces. The number of people that participated in the making of the tower amounted to 750.

"Have a Camel"
Open one up! The tobacco
tells its own story

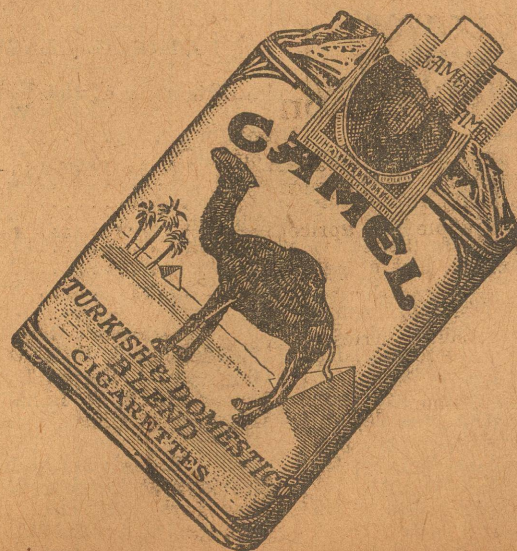

CAMELS are made of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. To prove what we say about Camel's tobacco quality, make this test:

Take a Camel and any other cigarette. Tear off the papers and place the tobaccos from the two cigarettes in separate piles. Now shake them up and examine the tobaccos. Your own eyes will quickly show you the difference, how the Camel tobacco is longer and of a riper color. Then gather up the two piles separately—and smell them.

You will at once notice the rich, fragrant aroma of Camel tobaccos not found in the other.

This marked difference is even more apparent when you "taste the smoke." It is solely because of the quality of the tobaccos and the skill of the blending that Camels never tire the taste, never leave a cigaretty after-taste.

Camels are so good that we know you will like them. Give them every test known and you will find Camels the highest quality cigarette made, regardless of price. Have a Camel!

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR TROUBLES OF IRELAND

Irish Free State Ready To Stand Among Nations

By GEORGE MACDONAGH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
DUBLIN, May 14.—Early in the fourth year of its existence the Irish Free State finds itself in a position which if not giving its citizens grounds of unqualified satisfaction certainly inspires them with a good deal of hope for the future.

Normalcy has only come within the past two years with peace and order restored after almost a decade of turmoil. The country is suffering from the general trade depression caused by the Great War which is the common lot of all European countries and it has the additional double handicap in that it is still suffering from the effects of its pre-Treaty war with England and its post-Treaty civil war.

But notwithstanding these disabilities it can claim to be in a better position today than the most optimistic anticipated. Many ambitious schemes for industrial development have been launched and the national indebtedness of ten million sterling is the smallest of any country in Europe.

Agriculture
Fundamentally the country is an agricultural one and consequently agriculture has been the subject of legislative relief. Already beneficial results are demonstrable by increased value of most important farm products, notably eggs, butter and poultry.

All other things being equal it is officially claimed that the present visible adverse trade balance of twelve million sterling per annum will be wiped out in six or seven years by the cumulative effect of these agricultural reforms alone. Impetus in this direction will also be given by the increased cultivation of beet sugar which is state subsidized for ten years.

The government is also bent on the encouragement of manufacturing in order to make the country less dependent on agriculture. The power development of the River Shannon which will be completed in 1928 is the first important step in this new industrial progress.

High Tariff Urged
The American tariff system is being closely studied and there is a growing opinion here in favor of assisting Irish infant industries by a similarly rigid tariff wall. This is expected to be one of the major issues in the next elections.

The many small railroads of the country have been amalgamated under one governmentally supervised company with the result that normal service has been maintained even into remote and profitless sections of the country. The banking and currency system of Ireland is now being studied by a commission of experts presided over by the American banking authority, Parker Willis.

Chief among the governmental problems confronting Ireland at present are the twin questions of national taxation and expenditure. The estimated expenditures for the coming year total approximately 24 millions sterling and in the present condition of trade the difficulty of meeting this sum by taxation is recognized.

Famine in West
Among social problems the most serious is the threatened famine in the west of Ireland where the failure of the winter fishing season and an inadequate potato crop has spread want and disease among the majority of the population. The government is being urged to cure this condition by encouraging the migration of half the western population to other sections of Ireland. Since these West Irish speak Gaelic almost exclusively their scattering over other portions of Ireland is expected to assist in the more general use of this language throughout Ireland.

To the solution of these and other problems confronting Ireland the best brains of the nation are being directed. Much remains to be done and it is a hard uphill fight but, confident in their capacity to surmount all obstacles and believing in themselves, the people feel that the worst has been left behind and are looking to the future with hope and optimism. They are sanguine that the years to come will hold for them greater prosperity than they have enjoyed in the past.

Irish As Nation Cling To Ancient Ideals Of People

By L. T. COSGRAVE
President of the Irish Free State
(Written for the United Press)
DUBLIN, May 14.—I am glad of the opportunity offered me by the United Press of America of explaining, to their numerous readers in the New World, something of the present position and prospects of the Irish Free State.

The Irish Nation is one of the old nations of the Old World. The national consciousness of our people has survived wave after wave of immigration. It has survived every effort that has been made in the past to mould it to institutions which were not its own, and in which its identity, might have been lost. At last the opportunity has come for the creation of a State, which shall interpret the national life of the people as far as that life can be interpreted by political institutions.

Uphill Fight
Let it be said frankly that we face a heavy undertaking and an uphill fight. The higher the goal the steeper the road. We cannot in a day overcome all the effects of the long period during which the state which we sought to build was as yet unrecognized. That period has left us problems, the solution of which must, necessarily be gradual.

I do not wish to introduce here any word of criticism of any Irishman with whom I do not agree, but I would like to say that I believe those problems are actually in process of solution, and to indicate the road by which I believe the solution will finally be reached. The continuance of these problems is partly due to the fact that the State was only recognized after a long political struggle. That struggle left its mark, and its memories. It has been my duty to encourage all Irishmen to recognize that the struggle is a thing of the past, and that the State is above all party. It is a thing in which all Irishmen can join, for which all can work, of which all may be justly proud. This is the spirit which is gradually uniting the Irish Nation, and the voice of those who would interrupt its work is dying away unheeded on the wind.

Growth
The growth of the Irish State, politically and economically must, in the first place, be thought of as the development of a State, the citizens of which are very largely agricultural. For this reason the government at a very early stage gave its attention to the completion of land purchase and the development of modern methods in farming. Through the operations of the Irish Land Commission and the Department of Agriculture, the farmer knows that the Irish government is throwing its energies into the development of the country's greatest industry.

It is the government's policy to foster the development of urban industries in suitable centres throughout the country. The Shannon Electric Power Station, in course of construction is intended to supply power both for agricultural operations and for uses in factories throughout the country. Much raw material for industry can be obtained from agricultural districts when power is everywhere available. Other industrial resources will soon develop. From the sons and daughters of our farmers we can draw unrivalled workers.

Purpose Of Fianna Fail Is Reuniting Of Irish People

By EAMON DE VALERA
(Written for the United Press)
Dublin, Ireland, May 14.—The new republican organization, Flanna Fail, has for its purpose the reuniting of the Irish people, especially the young people, and the banding them together for tenacious pursuit of the following ultimate aims:

- 1.—Securing the political independence of a united Ireland as a republic.
- 2.—The restoration of the Irish language, and the development of a native Irish culture.
- 3.—The development of social system in which, as far as possible, equal opportunity will be afforded to every Irish citizen to live a notable and useful Christian life.
- 4.—The distribution of the land of Ireland so as to get the greatest number possible of Irish families rooted in the soil of Ireland.
- 5.—The making of Ireland an economic unit, as self-contained and self-sufficient as possible—with a proper balance between agriculture and the other essential industries.

Conviction
The conviction which has led to the formation on the new organization is this: That in the heart of every Irishman there is a native undying desire to see his country politically free, and not only free but truly Irish as well, and that the people recently divided now ardently desire an opportunity of coming together so as to give effective expression to their desire—conscious that if unity can be secured Ireland is theirs for the taking.

The name Flanna Fail has been chosen to symbolize a banding together for national service with a standard of personal honor such as that which characterized the ancient Flanna Eireann, and a spirit of comradeship and devotion such as that of the Irish Volunteers from 1913 to 1921.

Path of Allegiance
The Free State Oath of Allegiance to the King of England is the prime obstacle to the achievement of national unity. It is vital that the representatives of the people be all brought together in a common assembly. Otherwise, there cannot be that unified direction and control of the national activities which is essential for progress. This is impossible as long as the oath remains, for it inexorably divides the national forces into two camps.

The best of the Irish people, those who are willing to make the greatest sacrifices in the national interest and to work most disinterestedly in the national service will never bow their heads to a foreign king, or admit the right of any foreign power in this country. They will therefore never directly, or through their representative subordinates, to an admission which would be a formal admission of England's right to overlordship here.

The removal of the oath of allegiance is then our immediate objective. At the next election we shall ask the Irish people to give a definite mandate for its abolition. Once it is gone Republicans will be free, without sacrifice of their principles, to use the machinery of the existing Free State assembly for the further prosecution of their aims and for the removal, one by one, of the remaining political and economic fetters.

Dividing Ranches
The breaking up of the ranches, the proper distribution and development of the land and the creation and development of native industries by protective tariffs and other aids will be the immediate objective. We propose, too, to bring present extravagant administration quickly to an end, and to bring taxation down to the level the people can easily bear. We know that the men who have been willing to give their lives for Ireland can be depended upon to give at least ten years of national service for the up-building of Ireland with the minimum remuneration.

The political stability which will result from the satisfaction of the national aspirations, and the accession of civic spirit which it will bring, will make possible a reduction to reasonable dimensions of the army, police, and such public services, with a saving to the community which will be reflected in greater prosperity for every individual citizen.

For this the new organization has been formed.

struction is intended to supply power both for agricultural operations and for uses in factories throughout the country. Much raw material for industry can be obtained from agricultural districts when power is everywhere available. Other industrial resources will soon develop. From the sons and daughters of our farmers we can draw unrivalled workers.

Tourist Traffic
Much thought is being given to the development of tourists traffic. Roads and transport conditions are steadily improving. Our country is one of the most beautiful in the world. I believe that we may reasonably expect that visitors from abroad will seek our shores in increasing numbers each year bringing with them both the economic and cultural advantages that flow from such widening contacts. They will always find a cordial welcome.

As the different industries and economic activities of the country find their true direction, and the people at large become increasingly conscious that they are citizens of a State which should honor the traditions of Ireland's greatness among the nations of the world, I believe my best hopes for Ireland's future will see fulfillment.

Chili Buys Battle Planes From Sweden For Use in Army

MALMO, Sweden.—Six all-metal bombing planes with machine gun turrets and the speed of pursuit machines, veritable battle cruisers of the air, have been completed here and delivered to Chile.

With three motors each, the planes are equipped with torpedo bombs, machine guns, radio and photographic apparatus. They will have crews of six men—two pilots, one observer, a wireless operator and the two machine gunners seated in revolving turrets that can be raised or lowered at will.

TO WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN:

Statistics show that a very small per cent of the people are saving, but those that do are acting wisely by laying aside some of their earnings in safe and sound investments. Statistics also show that Building and Loan Associations's stocks are one of the most profitable and conservative investments to be made.

It has come to our observation that considerable money is being sent to out-of-town Building and Loan Associations monthly by our citizens for investment purposes. This we would like very much to see placed with our "Ranger Building and Loan Association", where the investor will receive a greater return on his money than in most Building and Loan Associations, and at the same time we will be helping Ranger to grow.

Yours Very truly,

W. W. HOUSEWRIGHT,
Vice-President.

Sympathy Keynote of Success In Drama, Says Elsie Ferguson

Sympathy is the very keynote of dramatic success, in the opinion of Miss Elsie Ferguson, famous actress, now appearing in "Close Quarters." For how can you portray a character, she asks, "unless you have the power to think its thoughts, feel as it feels, find within yourself every motive that moves it? And even that sensitiveness to the mind and personality of another is not enough. Besides feeling the reasons for the motives and acts of the person you seek to portray, you must have for these a sympathetic understanding. This does not mean that you must be saintly to reproduce the picture of a saint, or base to show the baseness of a villain. Shakespeare was neither saint nor villain, yet he could touch, at will every emotional and intellectual key between the two."

Intolerance is an absolute bar to success in the drama, thinks Miss Ferguson. "For intolerance is based upon hatred and fear and these emotions freeze up the channels of expression," she says. "But intolerance is rare," she adds, "the business of portraying many characters gives one gradually a sense of unity with all humankind. One finds every potentiality of good and evil within one's own soul. And in the average person the good so greatly predominates; divinity is so thinly veiled, that the sincere artist must come eventually to a feeling of respect for all mankind and a very real attitude of humbleness within his own heart."

Next to sympathy and tolerance, appreciation is the greatest aid to success upon the stage, Miss Ferguson believes. "Many generous and kindly people shower the artist with greeting cards after a successful performance. The joy and inspiration conveyed by these bright symbols of approval and encouragement, can scarcely be exaggerated. The custom of sending greeting cards to artists has come to be a very real impetus to the production of fine art."

"Do you absolutely lose yourself,

Miss Elsie Ferguson

forget your own individuality, in the character you are playing?" Miss Ferguson was asked.
"That would be fatal to good art," she replied. "There are two schools of thought upon this subject. One advocates the complete submergence of the artist's personality in that of the character. The other pictures the artist standing, so to speak, behind the character he plays, his arms extended under those of the character whom he moves about at will, remaining mentally within the character and yet outside and above it; at all times watching and listening to his own performance. This latter school is far truer to conditions and leads to better art. Combine the keen and critical method of character portrayal with a deep, intuitive sympathy for others and you have an excellent foundation for success in the drama."

Now is Season For Transplanting; New Directions

Gardening has now reached a period when transplanting the seedlings which have been grown in hotbeds, cold frames and boxes in the house is the main task. The first of these to go out are the head lettuce seedlings, which can stand considerable in the way of cool weather and like it.

In transplanting the lettuce, snip off the ends of the leaves for half their length. This will equalize for the disturbance of the roots in transplanting and the plants will take hold much quicker. Set the lettuce plants eight inches apart in their beds and let the rows be at least foot apart. A small bed which can be reached across by hand can be set eight inches each way to economize space. The wider rows permit hoeing.

Following the lettuce the seedling onions to give the big onions next fall are due to go in and they, too, should be shipped off, this rule applying to all seedlings in the vegetable garden. Measure the proper distance between plants as detailed on seed packets and stick to it even if the little plants look lonesome for the time being in their beds. They will fill their space in due time.

Dig a hole sufficient to let the root occupy its full depth and to spread out the side roots. Don't drop it in a wad. Set deeper in the garden than the plans set in the seed box, almost to the seed leaves. This will be particularly necessary with seedlings that have grown long and rangy. Firm the earth about them carefully after the soil is filled in and soak. Choose a cloudy day if possible and if it is sunny and warm it is advisable to shade the transplanted plants with paper, strawberry boxes or flower pots for a day or so. A board set on flower pots is a con-

For the spring growing plants requiring a rich soil, a little sheep manure may be mixed with the soil at transplanting time so the roots will have food at once. Do not be too generous with fertilizer, however.

100 Graduates Of A. & M. Will Benefit State

Special Correspondence.

COLLEGE STATION, May 13.—More than one hundred graduates of agriculture will go out into the state from the A. & M. College of Texas as trained leaders and agricultural workers after the graduation exercises on June 1. Some 25 of these men will go into Smith-Hughes teaching, that is as teachers of agriculture in the high schools over the state where from one to three years of work is given the students in different lines of agriculture. Approximately 25 more of the group will go into some phase of practical agricultural work, as county agents, ranching, poultry raising, truck farming, etc. Most of these men will take charge of places owned by their parents. The remainder of the group will enter other lines of trained agricultural work, as county agents, cotton breeders, and cotton marketing specialists.

"The criticism is made of the College that we are not sending men back to the farms after they complete their studies in agriculture," said President Walton in discussing the

Advertising Pays In Daily Papers

Newspaper advertising is of vital importance to every man or woman who spends money for the necessities or luxuries of life. By making a daily practice of reading the newspaper advertisements, you keep in close touch with the latest offerings and lowest prices.

Well advertised brands of merchandise are not only dependable in quality, but are also, as a rule, the most economical. Here is a very concrete case of why this is true:

Mr. Warren Wright, president of the Calumet Baking Powder company, is the authority for the statement that they spend millions of dollars in newspaper advertising. This tremendous volume of advertising creates a demand that is maintained by the unrivaled quality of Calumet.

As demand grows, manufacturing costs are reduced and the price of Calumet, to the user, is brought down to the low point of economy.

Calumet advertising, like all other advertising back of a meritorious product, goes on record in black and white as to the value of Calumet baking powder. It promises the housewife better bakings at lower baking costs and the Calumet company must live up to their printed pledge, which, of course, they do and have done for the past 37 years.

"Newspaper advertising is localized advertising. Consequently, it benefits the dealer as well as the consumer, because it reaches buyers who can transact business with him. It moves the goods from his shelves. It keeps his stock fresh and clean. It enables him to sell the highest quality merchandise at the lowest possible prices.

The very fact that a dealer carries and features heavily advertised brands is clear evidence of his sincerity in serving his customers to the best advantage. He might temporarily make a bigger profit through the sale of unadvertised brands, but he could not give his trade the values made possible by advertising that decreases costs through increased demand.

If you want reliable merchandise at reasonable costs—if you want goods that are backed by the faith, the integrity and the printed pledge of the manufacturer—read the advertisements and remember that the millions of dollars spent by prominent manufacturers is a mighty factor in giving your money greater buying power.

SAD BUT TRUE

The pastor who was fond of figures of speech was making a funeral oration. He began his address: "Friends, we have here only the shell of the man, the nut is gone."—Good House-ware.

People Who Were Once Good Looking

A heartrending and yet interesting thing happened in a downtown store when a middle-aged lady got into a loud argument with a clerk. "I know what I want," she kept saying. "I have tried all those other things, but I know from what I saw it do for some friends of mine that it is Black and White Ointment which gets rid of these pimples and blotches. I was just as pretty as any girl when I was young, but I got careless and now I am in the fix you see."

So many people are now insisting on Black and White Ointment, and Black and White Soap, to get rid of pimples, blotches, eczema, rash, tetter, ringworm, "breaking out," etc., because they see and hear of the thousands of others who now know they can depend upon it. And they are more economical, too. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the liberal 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and Soap.—(Adv.)

Beds of annuals of a single variety and that preferably a simple color (one without distinct markings, undoubtedly give the finest effect in the garden. One need only plant a bed of the beautiful Rosy Morn petunia beside a bed of mixed colored petunias to test out the idea. Most of us like variety and this is obtained by grouping colonies of color in harmonious arrangement. There is a lighter petunia of the same type as Rosy Morn, also a much darker one, the three blending beautifully. Also there are blues which would go with it as well as whites for contrast.

Beds of yellow, salmon, pink, or scarlet snapdragons are brilliant features of park plantings. The purple verbenas in great sheets is also used for brilliant effects.

Some few flowers which are naturally mottled or variegated are as effective mixed as in beds of a single variety. The pinks are an example. The butterfly flower or schizanthus, not enough grown, is another plant of marked variegation in the individual flower which is as well mixed. The snapdragons have usually a lip of yellow or white in contrast with the color of the rest of the

Denver Music Week Will Be Broadcasted

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN,
United Press Radio News Editor.
NEW YORK, May 14.—KOA's arrangements for the broadcasting of Denver Music week, beginning Sunday, May 16, are among the most thorough broadcasting jobs which have ever come to our attention.

Starting with Sunday's special music week church services and continuing on through the following Sunday, KOA is offering western fans a series of programs which would be impossible at any other time.

The Rocky Mountain station, already immensely popular throughout the middle-west and the far west, undoubtedly will add new laurels to its crown, for it will be on the air practically all day from 9 a. m. to near midnight, with the exception of Thursday, May 20, when its transmitter is scheduled to close down at 8 p. m.

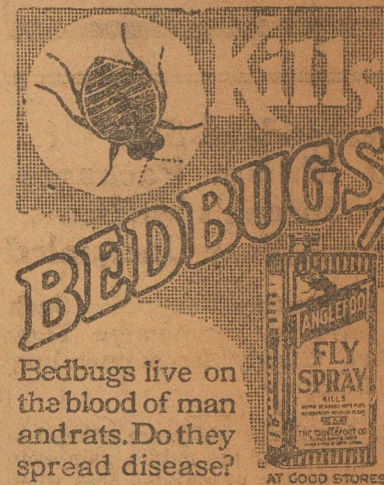

Organ recitals, children's recitals, and "cheer-up" programs will occupy the morning periods, with mid-day artist recitals, "pop" concerts and high school glee club and orchestra contests filling in until 6 p. m.

Nightly at 7 o'clock, following the usual dinner music, twilight concerts will be broadcast from the Greek pink, yellows, oranges and scarlets.

The nasturtiums are good for mixed plantings as the flowers are so well commingled with the foliage that the color mass is diffused at best. In arranging an annual garden or border the colors most favored may be selected in the different annuals and a handsome color pattern laid down. Plantings all in yellow, blue, pink, red or white are readily arranged although they have the fault of monotony unless relieved by contrasting plantings.

theatre, featuring the Denver's most popular programs will be broadcast from the following schools:
Monday, May 17—Programs of training spirit and development.
Tuesday, May 18—Patriotic music.
Wednesday, May 19—The development of oratorio.
Thursday, May 20—Silent.
Friday, May 21—The development of opera.

Tremendous Sale Of 10 Million Packages St. Joseph's Medicine Each Year Unequaled

Druggists Say They Give Such Universal Satisfaction They Are Gladly Recommending Them.

So few things which are offered to the approval of the public, gain even a small degree of success, that when the now famous St. Joseph's medicines passed the ten million mark last year, it was an achievement to be proud of and to be regarded with significance by the big multitudes of people who find it necessary to use medicines in their homes.

St. Joseph's G. F. P., the phenomenal medicine which women and girls now depend on to restore their vitality, is believed to be the first direct specific for so-called "female troubles"—which have now been proven to be caused by catarrh of the generative organs.

St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (in the BIG 25c CAN) is correcting chronic constipation, so regularly and unfailingly that its fame has spread more quickly than anything of a similar nature.

Druggists everywhere are now familiar with all the St. Joseph's medicines, and it is suggested that when you need the help of the peculiar merit of the remarkable preparations, to correct some acute or chronic condition in your system, ask your druggist first. In many cases he can spare you disappointments, and long drawn out periods of suffering and discomfort.

Perfect Man Shuns Women After Contest

By United Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15.—
Imagine the most handsome, the most physically perfect man in all San Francisco, shunning the women.

Adonis-like Walter G. La Berge has left all women alone. He has reached the age of 21 years and girls have never turned his head. He stays home nights and gets an average of nine hours sleep. He is browned
from daily swimming and brawny
from heaving bar bells and weights.

Such a man has been proclaimed
the most perfect male. The whole thing started when Prof. Frank C.
Kleeberger, University of California,
declared that "men are more beautiful than women."

His statement immediately suggested the fact that the "most beautiful" sex never has held beauty contests, so one was started. San Francisco was combed and out of the 81
most promising candidates La Berge
was picked.

Now he has more worries than he ever had before. Since his perfection was discovered the girls are beginning to besiege him and he runs—Adonis fleeing from Venus.

"What do you think about the comparative beauty of men and women?" La Berge was asked.

"I don't know," he said, with apparent disdain for most of the opposite sex.

"But I would like to meet this Miss America."

Use Nasturtiums To Produce Brilliant Colors At Little Cost

The easiest way to produce a sheet
of brilliant color with a minimum of effort in the flower garden is to plant nasturtiums, whether the dwarf or the climbing varieties. There is only one cultural warning to give for this oldtime favorite and that is, do not give it too rich soil. It is at its best on rather poor fare. In rich soil it runs too heavily to leaves. In poor soil it is a most abundant bloomer.

For bowls of cut flowers in the house in both soft and brilliant colors there is nothing more convenient in the garden. Ranging from sulphur and pure yellow into rose
colors, it also has velvety oranges, scarlets and maroons that are almost

black, with many variegated sorts.

The nasturtium is an excellent
plant to tuck into tulip plantings, delaying the sowing of the seed until the tulips are fading. The nasturtiums will then come up to cover the dying leaves of the tulips with a mantle of their gray-green foliage
spangled with a wealth of flowers a later in the season. They are an excellent for beds or for edgings.

The climbing sorts are really tail-ers or ramblers, having no means of supporting their long stems. They give an excellent effect when tailed to scramble over some low-growing shrub. Tied to strings or supports they make a brilliant porch vine and
are particularly effective when woven into wire fences. There are two types of the climbing nasturtiums,
the tall and the Lobb varieties. The latter are shorter-jointed in growth
and have an especially fine series of rich red shades. They are somewhat more free with their bloom than the climbing type. Both will make a growth of from six to ten feet. They are used with fine effect as long trailers from window boxes in sunny positions.

They furnish cut flowers from July until the first hard frost, which puts an end to their brilliance as they are somewhat tender.

Shanghai Installs Police Siren To Aid The Police

By United Press.

SHANGHAI.—A huge siren is the latest device of the alert police department to combat the armed robber menace, which has been frightening the shopkeeper here into placing his wooden shutters on all doors and windows as soon as the sun goes down.

That the armed robber is a growing danger and a dealer of death to his victims, when resisted, has been become axiomatic with the protectors
of the settlement. In 1925 349 armed robberies were perpetrated by organized gangs, double the number in 1924. The first three months of 1926 indicate that crime is increasing in geometric ratio.

When the new system is completed
sirens will be installed, one to a square block, with electric push buttons in every shop.

Some of the new spring hats look
almost good enough to eat.

CONSTIPATION CAUSES INDIGESTION—

Get prompt and permanent relief

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

On the way he called loudly for the maid.

He laid Audrey on her bed and knelt beside her. Her sobs had resolved themselves into a steady, rhythmic clicking, broken by short, disconnected phrases. Her eyelids were growing heavy and her eyes dull.

When the maid came with ammonia and smelling salts, he ran down to the telephone. His fingers shook as he took down the receiver and called the first nerve specialist in the telephone books, and he talked so incoherently that the doctor's secretary had to ask him to repeat from the beginning. It was well along in the afternoon when the specialist arrived. Morton waited for him to come downstairs in an agony of impatience.

The doctor looked at him shrewdly as they went into the drawing room. "What is your relationship to this young woman, sir?"

"I adopted her when she was a little child," said Morton. "What is wrong with her? She hasn't had any physical illness."

"No," the doctor answered. "It's purely nervous—a complete collapse. Now tell me all about her recent life."

So Morton related the whole story of Audrey's hopeless love for him, her flight from Crofton, her entrance into stage life, and, finally, of her despondency over her "uselessness" in the world.

The specialist looked at him gravely. "I fear you have contrived to wreck a very fine and beautiful organism, Mr. Morton. While striving to gratify Miss Morton's every wish, you have denied her just those natural and simple pleasures which girls of her age require for their mental health. She should have had young friends, parties and a normal school and college life. She fell in love with you because she was starving, and you were the nearest male. You should have seen the danger signs long ago."

Morton covered his face with his hands. Glancing at his aunt body, the neurologist relented. "See here, you can't let go, too. You may be needed to look after that girl upstairs. I didn't mean to accuse you of anything. You've just been blind, that's all."

"Now you get things ready for the two nurses that I will send and hand them these notes when they arrive. I'll look in again tonight. I think she'll sleep soundly for some time now."

Morton rose staggeringly. "Tell me," he begged. "Will—will she get well?"

The doctor was closing his satchel. "She will not die," he said. "But whether she will get well—I cannot say. She seems to be slipping into coma."

Morton caught at the chair back

No more RHEUMATISM

IT'S GONE! That awful agony! Rheumatism can't stand the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build.

But rheumatism will bring pain and misery to your joints and muscles just as long as you are without plenty of rich, red blood in your system.

It's the red-blood-cells that S. S. S. helps Nature build that drive out of your system the impurities that cause rheumatism. And until you do build up your blood to where it is pure and rich and red, you simply can't get rid of rheumatism.

And S. S. S. is the thing. Red blood conquers rheumatism. Everybody knows that.

S. S. S. means millions of red-blood-cells—means health all over. No more rheumatism. Nights of rest—days of joy, filled with the happiness of accomplishment—made possible by a body brimful of red blooded life, energy and vitality.

That's what the end of rheumatism means—that's what S. S. S. brings to you. Get S. S. S. from your druggist. The larger bottle is more economical.

THESE WOMEN

with one fumbling hand.

A night and a day had passed and another night had begun.

It seemed impossible—unbearable—that those English chintzes in Audrey's bedroom could leer so starkly with their great splotchy flowers under the dim, cold light of the moon streaming in through the window.

All night long their monstrous poppies had mocked the grief-stricken man who sat in Audrey's little wicker sewing chair in the window alcove.

When the night nurse put out the tiny red night light and lay down on the couch by the girl's bed, hoping to bring deeper rest to her patient by perfect darkness and quiet, Morton still sat rigid in the little chair.

Audrey slept heavily throughout the night. Only once or twice, when she made a little uneasy moaning sound and stirred in the bed, did Morton leave his post.

Standing over her bed at these times, he strained his eyes for some sign of returning consciousness. But the dark-fringed eyes never opened and the slightly puckered forehead did not relax its lines of strain and weariness. He crept miserably back to his chair.

At dawn the day nurse, coming on duty, found him still wide-eyed, staring at Audrey's bed. "Come," she said, "you must go to bed. You look very ill yourself with sleeplessness. I will call you the instant Miss Morton awakes. She is sure to ask for you."

But the man only shook his head and dragged himself to his feet. He went out of the sick room and down the stairs. Tears welled into his eyes and he stopped a moment, leaning against the bannister.

As he stood there the front door-bell rang. The butler was not yet abroad and Morton hastened to open the door himself. A small, dingy-faced boy in messenger's uniform stood in the doorway.

"Is Mr. Harry Morton at home?" he asked with a certain impudent assurance. Morton saw him slip a foot in between the door and the jamb in case of an attempted ejection.

"What is it?" he said. "I am Mr. Morton."

"Huh," said the lad, "I've got a message for you. Wasn't to give it to anybody else but you. Thought I might have trouble busting in."

Morton surveyed the little fellow. "Somebody must have paid you well to ensure such loyalty. Suppose you step in and tell me all about it."

In spite of his sad preoccupation he felt a twinge of pity for the little messenger with his ragged uniform and pinched face.

The butler was just poking a sleepy face through the hall door from the kitchen regions. Morton turned to him. "Bring hot coffee and some crullers or something to the drawing room, please," he said.

The boy's face brightened. "Oh, gee!" he said under his breath.

In the drawing room Morton pointed to a davenport but the youngster was abashed by its silken cushions and stood clumsily on one foot.

"What is your message?" asked Morton. "Tell me quickly."

"Well," the boy began, "it's from a young lady. She said I was to see you if I had to climb the fire escape to do it. She's been calling you all night but the 'phone don't answer."

"There is sickness here," said Morton. "The bells are muffled."

"Well, I guess there's sickness at the other end, too," replied the boy. "When the lady sent for me she looked about ready to kick the bucket herself. All pale and scared looking."

"What did she say to you," said Morton impatiently. The butler was coming in with a tray and the boy's eyes drifted to the steaming silver coffee pot and the sugar-coated crullers.

Then, coming back to the business at hand with a jerk, he said, "She told me to tell you that you must come at once, that she HAD to see you right away. And I was not to take 'No' for an answer."

"Who is the lady?" asked Morton. The boy drew a card from his pocket and handed it to Morton. On it was penciled the single word, "Nona."

"I was to come back with the answer," said the child, devouring the breakfast tray with his eyes.

Morton turned toward the door. "You eat your breakfast while you wait. I'll give you the answer in a minute."

He went out of the room and up the stairs. The nurse met him at Audrey's door. "How is she?" he asked, breathlessly.

"About the same," said the nurse. "If anything she's sleeping a little more quietly. She seems thoroughly exhausted. The doctor will be here before noon."

"Then," said Morton, "I am going out for a little while. It is on urgent business or I wouldn't leave her. You don't think she will ask for me?"

The nurse shook her head. "This some seems to be very heavy. In cases of this sort unconsciousness usually lasts for two or three days. We can't tell anything about her condition till she comes out of it."

Morton entered the drawing room a moment later dressed for the street. The messenger was scraping up the last crumbs of the crullers from the plate. His face was smeared with powdered sugar.

"Come on," said Morton, and they left the house together. "You can go on your business now," he said to the boy. "I will answer the message myself."

The boy hesitated while a belligerent expression dawned and died on his face. "But she wasn't going to pay me till I came back with the answer," he said, civilly enough.

Morton gave him a bill which sent him gleefully scampering.

The first taxi on the street that morning picked Morton up. He gave an anxious glance back at the apartment house as they drove away. "Hurry!" he said to the driver, giving the address of Nona's apartment.

The faint, sick light of early morning was over the streets of Scranton. The only spots of light and activity were the quick lunch shops on corners here and there where workmen were stoking the machinery for the day's labor.

They neared their destination. Morton glanced up and saw that a light burned in Nona's bedroom. He paid the cab driver and ran up the stairs of the apartment building, not waiting for the sleepy elevator man.

When he tapped on Nona's door it gave under his touch and he entered the room. For a moment he stopped in horror. The place was littered with bottles and cigar ashes. The porcelain lampshade on Nona's little table had been broken in three pieces and one of these lay on the rug at his feet.

Every electric bulb was still burning. While he stood in the doorway the door of Nona's bedroom burst open and Nona herself stepped out. She was wrapped in a long white robe with a border of eiderdown and her black hair and white face completed the effect of some stark and tragic etching.

She staggered toward him, clasping her hands. "Harry."

Morton went to her. "What on earth is wrong, Nona?"

She swayed slightly and passed her hand over her brow. "I had to see you. I HAD to see you. I called and called, and you didn't answer. And I got desperate. You're life itself to me, Harry!"

She clung to him with her face buried on his lapel. The robe fell back and he could see that she was wearing an evening dress underneath.

She let the white robe slip from her shoulders to the ground.

"Haven't you been to bed, Nona?" She shook her head. "I don't want to sleep. Last night, when you weren't in the theatre, and didn't come to my dressing room, I thought I couldn't stand it. I don't know how I got through with the show."

"When the gang wanted to come here for a party afterward I said all right. But I lay on my bed in there most of the time they were here wondering where you were."

"They've made a fine wreck of your room," commented Morton.

Nona nodded wearily. "Yes, they were having a bethrothal celebration. Lois and Sunshine are going to get married."

"Married!" gasped Morton.

"Yet, she's tired of working and dieting for the stage and he's always liked her. I'm glad—but what about me? We've got to talk about you and me!"

Morton frowned and looked down at her sternly. "What is there to say, Nona?"

"Just this," she flashed at him. "You've made me love you more than anything in this world. And now you propose to send me away. Well, I can't go."

"I know there's been a love in your life that I can't make you forget, but it's in the past. And I have to go on living all through the years. I can't go on alone."

"Harry, I don't ask you to marry me. I am humble, beneath you. But, oh Harry, I love you. You mean all of life to me! Let me stay with you!"

Georgia Lady, Who Had Lost Too Much Weight, Was Advised to Take Cardui and Is Now Well.

Columbus, Ga.—Mrs. George S. Hunter, of this city, writes:

"After I married, thirteen months ago, I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides during ... My side hurt so bad it nearly killed me. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks at a time. I could not work and I just dragged around the house."

"I got very thin—I went from 125 pounds down to less than 100. My mother had long been a user of Cardui and she knew what a good medicine it was for this trouble, so she told me to get some and take it. I sent to the store after it and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve."

"My side hurt less and I began to improve in health. ... The Cardui acted as a fine tonic and I do not feel like the same person. I am so much better. I am well now. I have gained ten pounds and am still gaining. My sides do not trouble me at all."

Women's Happiness

Rests largely on solving their oldest hygienic problem this new way—true protection; discards like tissue

TO be fresh and charming every day, to live every day unhappily, to wear sheerest frocks without a second thought, any day, anywhere . . . you can now do all, a new way.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old-time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! Deodorizes, too. And thus ends ALL fear of offending.

NO LAUNDRY

✓ As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying, "KOTEX"; you ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. Eight in 10 better-class women employ it. Proves the unnecessary risk of old ways.

No laundry—discard like tissue

Is there any real difference in Gasoline?

Yes

ABSOLUTELY! All gasolines are different, and the difference is one largely of wetness and dryness. A wet gas in the manifold floods some cylinders to feed the rest. A dry gas gives each cylinder a better, more even mixture.

The difference between the new Texaco and all other gasolines is that the new Texaco Gasoline vaporizes to a dry gas in the manifold at a much lower temperature than others. The new Texaco is a dry gas.

It is this ease of vaporization, this ability to form a dry gas, that makes the new Texaco results so immediate and apparent. Engineers have tried for years to produce such a gas on a commercial scale. The Texas Company's engineers have at last succeeded.

You'll notice the better acceleration—to the maximum without flooding—the easier start, quicker pickup, increased mileage and smoothness, and an entirely new freedom from carbon troubles and fouled spark plugs. Gasolines are different, and Texaco is far different. You will notice with pleasure the improved operation and condition of your engine.

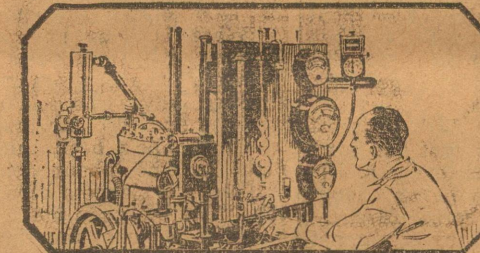

The Distillation Test proves it

—by indicating the volatility; the low initial boiling point, 42° better than government specifications; the higher percentage of volatile fractions, balanced range and low end point.

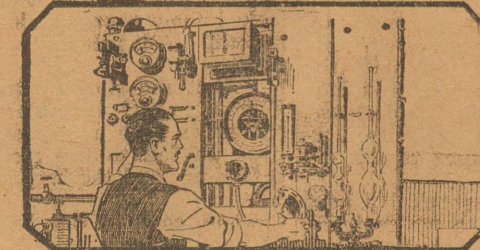

The Detonation Indicator proves it

—by verifying the smooth flow of power and anti-knock qualities of the new Texaco Gasoline under actual engine cylinder conditions.

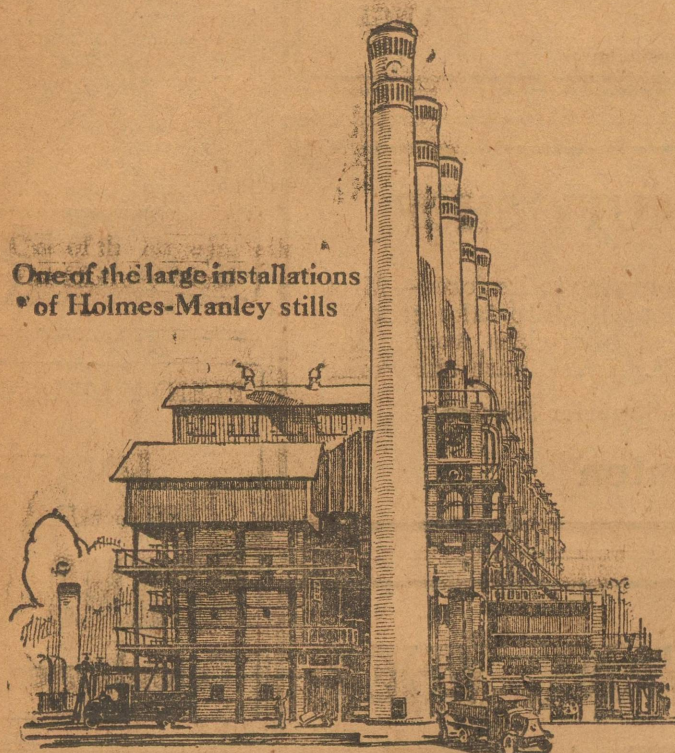

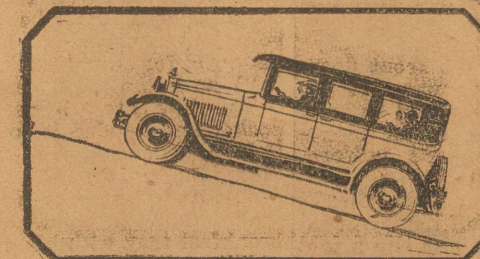

The Dynamometer proves it

—by accurately measuring the gain in engine efficiency under normal working conditions, and the actual power and work output delivered.

Your Engine proves it

—by its responsiveness, flexibility in traffic, better hill work, quietness, gas economy, reduced upkeep and better all-around performance. By laboratory test or road test, the new Texaco is unmistakably better.

One of the large installations
of Holmes-Manley stills

Stop at the first Texaco pump you see. You don't have to ask for the new and better Texaco—it's there. Fill with Texaco Gasoline; and Texaco Motor Oil, the clean, clear, golden oil, known everywhere for its quality, full body and purity.

The Texaco Pump has a new meaning. Better motor results — unmistakably better.
