Condemned killer dies by electrocution

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Condemned murderer John Louis Evans III died in Alabama's electric chair Friday night, less than two hours after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to stop an execution he had once demanded.

It took three 30-second jolts of 1,900 volts of electricity to kill the 33-year-old Evans, who was sentenced to die for the 1977 robbery-murder of Mobile pawnbroker Edward Nassar.

"I have no malice toward anyone. I have no hatred toward anyone," Evans said in his final statement in the death chamber. The prison chaplain, one of nine witnesses, repeated those final words to reporters before he was admonished by Prison Commissioner Fred Smith because Evans had requested that his last statement remain private.

Evans appeared calm as he was strapped in the chair and the warrant was read. He smiled several times and seemed to recognize a friend who was among the witnesses.

Evans was wearing white prison clothes when he was strapped into the electric chair and after the warrant was read, a skull cap filled with electrodes was placed on his head. His chin was strapped tight and a black mask was placed over his face.

When the first jolt of electricity hit his body at 8:30 p.m., Evans tensed and the electrode on his left leg burst off. When he was hit with the second jolt, he still did not moveand doctors said he was not dead.

After the second jolt of electricity was administered at 8:33 p.m., Evans' attorney, Russell Canan, asked Smith to request clemency from Gov. George Wallace. Canan said the penalty was "cruel and unusual" since Evans was not dead after the second charge. Smith was on the telephone to the governor's office at the time, and conveyed Canan's plea to press secretary Billy Joe Camp.

The third jolt of electricity was administered at 8:40 p.m., and Evans was pronounced dead at 8:44 p.m.

After the execution was completed, a Death Row inmate played "Taps" on a trumpet.

Canan called the execution "a barbaric ritual. John Evans was tortured in the name of vengeance and the disguise of justice."

Richard Nassar, brother of the man Evans killed, spoke with the prison chaplain by telephone from mobile Friday night, asking him to tell Evans he was "praying for him. Nassar previously had written Wallace recommending clemency for Evans on religious grounds.

Evans received two temporary reprieves before Friday night's execution — the second coming less than 24 hours before his death.

A 7-2 ruling from the Supreme Court about 7 p.m. finally cleared the way for the execution, overturning a stay issued Thursday night by a district court judge.

Evans, who admitted killing Nassar and said during his trial he would do it again, initially demanded the death penalty but later said a 1979 stay of execution he did not seek was "a sign from God." He then fought to overturn the death sentence.

Evans had been described earlier Friday as "at peace with himself" and "ready for anything that comes down the pike."

Evans was the first inmate executed in Alabama in 18 years and the seventh in America since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976.

Prison spokesman Ron Tate said Evans ate no "ritualistic last meal" as he had Thursday, when he received last rites only to find out his execution had been stayed.

Tate said Evans spent most of the day on his bed in a cell only 25 steps from Holman Prison's yellow-painted electric chair, known as "Yellow Mama."

Calm but without appetite throughout the day, Evans prayed with Prison Chaplain Martin Webber in the morning, then prepared to walk with Webber and guard's to his execution.

U.S. District Judge Emmett Cox of Mobile signed an order about 9:30 p.m. Thursday blocking the execution temporarily and calling for a hearing Monday. After a telephone conference call, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta refused to alter Cox's ruling.

Word of that decision reached Evans at 11:50 p.m., 11 minutes before his scheduled 12:01 a.m. execution.

But Alabama Attorney General Charles Graddick filed an emergency appeal with Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell shortly after midnight and stayed up much of the night waiting to hear if the execution would be restored in the predawn hours.

It wasn't, but Graddick aide Janie Nobles said 10 pounds of court documents were submitted to the Supreme Court on Friday to assist Powell. It was Powell's second review of the case in two days.

Evans decided not to see his family again unless he was granted a permanent reprieve, hoping to "spare them from the ordeal" of saying goodbye again, Tate said.

Earlier Friday his mother, Betty Evans Dickson of Beaumont, Texas, said the stay had given her "renewed hope that John's life may be spared."

Evans, who said he turned to crime despite a comfortable white middle-class upbringing, once demanded the death penalty for Nassar's murder. In April 1979, he came within six hours of execution before a stay was granted over his own objections.

But in recent years friends and family have said he has spiritually transformed, with humility replacing arrogance.

When word reached Evans that an appeals court had joined a federal judge in blocking the execution, Evans was concerned about the emotional toll on his mother, Tate said.

Jobless rate down; So is labor pool

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Midland's jobless rate fell slightly in March, but so did the size of the available labor force and the number of persons at work, according to preliminary figures released Friday by the Texas Employment Commission.

Midland's jobless rate was 5.9 percent, down from 6.1 percent in February. The latest figure was higher than that reported in March a year earlier, when the rate was 5.2 percent.

"There are fewer people in the labor force than there were a year ago, and yet there are 400 more people unemployed," said Charmian Carl, claims representative at the Midland TEC office.

"We lost 1,700 in the labor force, and there are 2,100 fewer people working."

The labor force here fell to 64,300, down from 65,100 reported in February. A year ago, 66,000 persons made up the labor pool.

The number of people working here also fell in March, to 60,500, as opposed to 62,600 working in February.

Midland is still not suffering as badly as other places in Texas or the nation, however.

Unemployment in Odessa rose to 9.6 percent in March. In El Paso, it was 13.6. The statewide jobless figure was 8.7, compared to 8.8 in February, according to the TEC.

The number of Odessans out of work climbed to 6,900 from 6,300 a month earlier.

The Tall City was listed as having one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country in the April 18 issue of U.S. News & World Report, said Ms. Carl.

During March, Midlanders filed 538 new claims for unemployment benefits, and there were 4,817 continued claims filed.

As of April 15, 250 initial claims had been filed and about 2,300 claims have been continued so far this month, she said.

Astronauts shocked at pollution viewed from above

HOUSTON (AP) — The astronauts of space shuttle Challenger said Friday they were shocked during their five-day flight at the amount of pollution they saw surrounding the Earth below them.

"It was appalling to me to see how dirty our atmosphere is getting," Paul J. Weitz, commander of the first flight of the Challenger, said at a news conference at Houston Space Center Friday.

"Unfortunately, this world is rapidly becoming a gray planet," Weitz said. "Our environment apparently is flat going downhill...What's the message? We are fouling our own nest."

Weitz said the heavy pall of pollution resembled the blue smoke of burning wood and seemed to hang over all the world's land masses, even undeveloped countries.

Weitz's comments came as he and his crewmates — Karol Bobko, Story Musgrave and Donald Peterson — held their first news conference since their return from space April 9. They reported that their mission overall was "smooth, quiet and steady."

Musgrave and Peterson, mission specialists who conducted a 3½-hour space walk during the flight, said their experience proves that a newly designed space suit is ready for operation.

The suit provided good mobility and should work well on future flights for astronauts who perform repair and construction tasks, Musgrave said.

He said the suits "performed extraordinarily well....We achieved all the test objectives we set out to do."

Bobko said the spacecraft performed as expected. The mission was "the most nominal (normal) flight of the series so far," Weitz added.

"I cannot say how pleased I was with the performance of this vehicle," Weitz said.

Attention Midlanders: It's time for a change

Here's a timely quiz in anticipation of the often confusing clock changing associated with daylight savings time, which begins officially at 2 a.m. Sunday.

First question: Fill in the blank in the following helpful reminder — "Spring ( ), fall back." If you answered "forward," you're ahead of the game already.

Second question: Except for people in Alaska, Hawaii and 16 counties in Indiana, all other U.S. residents will (gain, lose) one hour of sleep tonight? If your answer was "lose," give yourself a pat on the back.

Third question: If you hop into bed after the news at 10:30 p.m., you should set your clock to (9:30 p.m., 11:30 p.m.) before you doze off? Moving the hands forward means you'd set the clock at 11:30 p.m., thus losing an hour of sleep.

Final question: Which of the following is likely to best describe those people who walk into church Sunday as you are about to leave? (a.) They got caught in traffic; (b.) They failed this test miserably; (c.) They enjoy being fashionably late; (d.) They got so confused they put the clock outside for the night and set the dog back an hour.

Deputy tax assessor digs in to help out

HIBBING, Minn. (AP) — Jim Steele figures he has plenty of job security in his new dual role as a deputy tax assessor and gravedigger.

"What else can be more certain than death or taxes?" he said. "I'm going to see you sooner or later."

Steele, 45, saw his deputy tax assessor's job reduced to part time this year when the city cut back in most departments.

So when the Maple Hills Cemetery crew lost a heavy equipment operator and the city began looking for a replacement, Steele, who had experience with the machinery, decided to apply.

He begins his new duties Monday and will be paid his current salary of $1,800 a month.

"I don't say this is the best combination," Deputy Clerk Harry Gherardi said Friday. "But we've got to have more people doing more different things. We're trying to tighten our budget."

"The assessor's office is busy at different times of the year and we hope to have Steele there when they need him," Gherardi said.

But Steele wondered whether the plan would work.

"I suppose I'll be filling in when other equipment operators are on vacation or are sick," he said. "Because of vacation schedules, I'll be away from the assessor's office for 11 weeks during the summer and that's when we do the bulk of our field work."

Steele, who is an accountant, won the assessor's job last August when it opened up.

County courthouse's future decided today

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Whether the Midland County Courthouse gets $11.69 million worth of attention over the next 1½ to two years will be decided today by Midland County voters, who will be casting ballots at 29 countywide polling places from Midland to Greenwood to Midkiff.

The proposal, which would increase the county's tax rate by 25 percent to 22.43 cents from 18.03 cents per $100 valuation, effectively calls for building another courthouse adjoining the 1930-vintage, five-story edifice and more than doubling the size of the present jail.

Main thrust of the low-key bond issue campaign has been twofold: a need for more courtrooms to mete out justice and more jail space to satisfy mandates of federal courts and the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. Federal courts demand "decent" lodging for prisoners — whether they be only accused or those found guilty and sentenced. The fifth-floor jail, added to the courthouse in a $1.95 million bond issue in 1970, currently is certified to house between 80 and 90 prisoners, including men, women and juveniles of varying degrees of temperament. A "bull pen" — a large open room without cells — is available for conversion to cells for housing about a dozen prisoners. But Midland County commissioners, who called the bond election, opted not to expend the half-million dollars required for the limited conversion.

The current bond proposal calls for a jail to lodge 225 inmates.

Additionally, the issue includes provision for more courtrooms, which today number fewer than the active courts in the county, and would provide space for an expanded judiciary.

Should the bond issue be approved, estimated construction time would be from 18 months to 24 months.

Polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Firearms-laws violator out on bond

A Midland man arrested and indicted Thursday for allegedly violating federal firearms laws is free on $20,000 bond.

Charles Ralph Cobb, 31, of Route 3, Box 503, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on four counts of firearms violations.

In one count, Cobb is accused of making a false statement in order to buy a firearm from Jack's Pawn Shop, 204 N. Grant Ave. in Odessa, on March 7, 1981. Cobb reportedly denied having been previously convicted of a felony.

Cobb is also charged with illegal possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

A third count alleges Cobb shipped a .22-caliber revolver from Odessa to Montezuma County, Colo., on March 9, 1981, in violation of a federal law regulating interstate transportation of firearms.

Cobb is also charged with receiving the same revolver two days earlier, an act which would constitute unlawful receipt of a firearm that had traveled through interstate commerce.

Odessa attorney Willie Schmerler has been appointed by U.S. District Court to defend Cobb, according to court records.

Odessa woman to be on commission

AUSTIN — An Odessa woman has been named by Gov. Mark White along with 28 others to the Governor's Commission for Women, which is expected to work closely with White in promoting state policies to provide equal opportunities for women.

Named to the commission is Sandra Lorraine Bonner, of Odessa, a communications supervisor with the Ector County Independent School District.

Ms. Bonner is also a member of the board of directors of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children, and a past president of the board of the Odessa Rape Crisis Center.

"I am counting on the members of the commission to help me open the doors of opportunity even wider for women in our state, and to tell me what state government can do to help open those doors," White said in making the appointments public.

Members are appointed to two-year terms and will serve without pay, except for travel expense reimbursement.

Gay Taylor Erwin of Austin will serve as executive director, and Martha S. Williams, dean of the University of Texas School of Social Work, will serve as chair of the commission.

Tax assessor digs in

"I don't blame the city for trying to experiment, but I think it's a little ludicrous to have an assessor-gravedigger," he said. "What if they run short of people at the cemetery during a busy day. I can't really go over and dig graves in my suit and tie."

City assessor Ralph Deger also was unimpressed with the decision.

"I think the combination is ridiculous," he said. "There must have been better combinations than to make a deputy assessor a gravedigger."

Odessa policeman shot in finger

ODESSA — An Odessa man was in jail facing attempted capital murder charges Friday after one of the random pistol shots he fired from inside his home struck a policeman in the left index finger.

Police arrested Joseph Edwin Ownby, 32, of 3404 Rocky Lane when he put down his gun and surrendered after about a half hour of potshotting from both inside and outside his home.

Patrol Sgt. John Blanco was treated and released from Odessa Medical Center Hospital after suffering a minor finger wound, according to an Odessa police spokesman.

The spokesman said neighbors summoned police to the address about 3 p.m. after Ownby, reportedly irritated by "family problems," drove into the driveway firing a pistol into the air and ground before entering the house, where he continued shooting.

Seven officers surrounded the house while another officer contacted Ownby by telephone and attempted to "talk him out."

Sgt. Blanco edged near a glass patio door about 3:30 p.m. and was struck in the finger by a shot fired in that direction. Ownby reportedly surrendered a short time later.

Attempted capital murder charges are expected to be filed against Ownby, according to the spokesman who could not elaborate on the man's "family problems."

Flag at half-staff in honor of dead

"Old Glory" will wave at half-staff through Tuesday in front of the George Mahon Federal Building in memory of the 17 Americans, including six U.S. Marines, killed in Monday's bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon.

Sixteen American embassy staffers and one visitor died in the blast, which is believed to have killed at least 47 people.

A spokeswoman for the Main Post Office, in the federal building on Wall Avenue, said the federal government directed that flags at all federal buildings be flown at half-staff through Tuesday.

Lions Club head calls drug abuse a menace

Everett J. "Ebb" Grindstaff of Ballinger, president of the International Association of Lions Clubs, called drug abuse an international menace when he spoke Thursday night at the Downtown Lions club 55th anniversary celebration.

About 185 persons attended the dinner at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. New members and officers also were installed.

Grindstaff keyed in on two of his major programs — diabetes control and drug abuse. He said people around the world can relate to these programs and response to the Lions International war on drugs program has exceeded expectations.

"There is no war like the war against drugs," he said. "People around the world are waking up to the problem. The potential of Lions and Lions Clubs around the globe in combating this problem is tremendous.

"Our job is to educate all persons as to the problem and the means of overcoming same," Grindstaff added.

Listing other projects and programs of Lionism, Grindstaff said, "Lions help those who can't see to know, and those who can't hear to understand." He urged greater individual involvement in Lionism by all Lions.

He congratulated the club on its 55 years of service as one of the largest and most active clubs in the international organization. At the same time, he challenged the club to reach for even higher goals.

Lions International, he said, is the world's largest service organization with 36,000 clubs functioning in 157 countries around the world.

Stressing his "Share the Vision of Service" objective, Grindstaff told the new officers and directors they have a tremendous challenge in putting this philosophy into practice at home and around the world.

George Loudamy heads the new slate of officers as president. Other officers are Bill Malone, Keith Somerville and Norman Gould, vice presidents; Victor Horn, secretary-treasurer; Wilson Hollars and Steve Shannon; Lion Tamers; Bob Price and Bill Turner, tail twisters; and Jerry Lancaster, pianist.

Directors include Roy Darden, Norman Henry, Ralph Lea and Charlie Sprayberry, one-year terms; and Ed Brannon, Floyd Heard, Hank Henry, Lloyd Jobe and Doyle Snow, two-year terms.

Grindstaff presented an "Ambassador of Good Will Award," the highest in Lionism, to past district governor Carl O. Hyde of Midland. Earlier, he had presented a similar award to past district governor Roy Minear of Midland, who was unable to attend the banquet because of illness.

Another Midland past district governor, Duke Jimerson, who has brought 271 members into the club, received the "International President's Award" for dedicated service to God and Lionism.

"Lion of the Year" awards went to Hollars and Shannon. Charlie Sprayberry received the "Paul Murray Memorial Award" for being the top ticket salesman for the pancake event. His sales totaled $5,682.50.

A plaque went to the Lion Tamers Club for its continued support, and particularly for wrapping knives, forks and spoons for the pancake jamboree.

A life membership in the Texas Lions Camp for Crippled Children went to Jack Darden, retiring president. And the club contributed $750 in Grindstaff's name to Russell Manning of Midland, a recent cornea transplant recipient, to pay his enrollment fee as a student at Texas Tech University Law School.

Midland jobless rate, labor pool decrease

"I see some slowdown in the number of new claims," Ms. Carl noted. "At least it isn't increasing. There were fewer in the first half of April than there were in the first half of March."

"Midland followed the statewide trend of very little change, but Odessa must have had more new claims filed," said a spokeswoman in TEC's Austin headquarters.

"We didn't see much movement statewide in either employment or unemployment. I think any changes for the better are mostly seasonal," she said.

Ms. Carl agreed. "I suspect these are seasonal increases because things always pick up in the summer — landscaping and construction work especially."

According to TEC-Austin records, the number of non-agricultural jobs filled in Midland rose by 700 during March. Biggest gain was seen in the retail and wholesale trade category, where 800 new jobs were filled. Services and manufacturing were up by 100 each.

A drop of 300 jobs in the mining category, which includes the petroleum industry, offset these gains.

"We have had some job orders for pulling unit operators and mud loggers," Ms. Carl said. "We have not had these kinds of orders in many months. Maybe it's a good sign."

The number of clerical job openings on file in the Midland TEC office is fairly good, she said, "but nothing like we had a year or two years ago."

Overall, the number of job openings on file here is less than a year ago. There were 65 job orders on file with the Midland TEC Friday; that number has been as low as 15 or 20 in slow weeks.

"But, job orders get filled quickly now — in a day or two," Ms. Carl said. "A year ago, a job might be open for a month or so. We have more people willing to take a lesser paying job, or a job they wouldn't have taken a year ago."

Parimutuel wagering bill still alive

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Amarillo Sen. Bill Sarpalius attempted to kill Senate consideration of a bill legalizing parimutuel wagering on horseracing by stating the measure "is for the raising of revenue and may not originate in the Senate," but Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby overruled Sarpalius' point of order.

The bill, sponsored by Dallas Sen. Ike Harris, was approved by a vote of 17-12, with Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo, whose district includes Midland County, voting for the bill.

The Senate is expected to take up SB 440 on Monday.

While the Texas Constitution states all bills for raising revenue should originate in the House of Representatives, Hobby said the bill — aimed at regulating and licensing pari-mutuel betting — is not within the scope of the constitutional prohibition.

"There is no serious basis under Texas law to contend that a bill imposing license fees in connection with the regulation of an occupation must originate in the House," Hobby said, in overruling Sarpalius' objection to SB 440.

Primary purpose of SB 440 is legalization of horserace wagering in Texas, said Hobby, adding, "The Chair is also of the opinion that those provisions of the bill that would in fact produce revenue are merely incidental to this purpose."

Once the Senate began debating the measure, Sarpalius introduced an amendment allowing counties to hold elections prohibiting horseracing three years after any county votes for legalization, but it was defeated by a 17-14 vote.

A similar Sarpalius amendment permitting such elections five years afer the date of the initial horseracing referendum was adopted without debate.

South Texas gets federal aid

AUSTIN (AP) — San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros announced Friday an economic assistance program for South Texas which includes $167 million in federal aid.

Cisneros, who is vice chairman of the governor's task on jobs, said a "triple whammy that hit the Texas economy in the last few months — the peso devaluation, the recession and the oil price turndown" had created an "immediate and urgent" crisis along the Rio Grande.

The aid plan, endorsed by Gov. Mark White, includes, using more than $150 million in federal funds made available through the federal jobs bill signed recently by President Reagan. The money will go for job corps training centers, direct aid to the poor and emergency food and shelter.

White said his office has also received another $17 million in federal funds that were collected as fines from companies accused of fuel overcharge violations.

Town wins first round in bus bout

MERKEL (AP) — This West Texas town of 2,500 has won the first round of a fight to remain a stop on the Greyhound bus route.

Railroad Commission hearing examiner Renee McCright will recommend that the commission deny Greyhound's request to discontinue service to the Taylor County town, Carriker said.

The RRC is expected to officially make a ruling by June 1. But if RRC official Ray Grasshoff is right, Merkel's first-round victory won't keep the town from losing the whole bout.

In a transportation regulatory bill passed last year by Congress, bus carriers such as Greyhound were given a much easier route to closing down unprofitable stops than they had had in the past. Even a ruling by the RRC in Merkel's favor could be appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the new law.

Man kills himself over divorce

TAYLOR (AP) — A man wounded his estranged wife and her brother, then fatally shot himself in the head when confronted by officers, Police Chief Stafford Bengston said Friday.

Bengston said Charles Edward Williams was pronounced dead on arrival at Johns Community Hospital shorty after 1 a.m. Friday.

His wife, Brenda Williams, and her brother, Vernon Bell, were in good condition at Scott & White Hospital in Temple. Mrs. Williams suffered gunshot wounds to the knee and left arm. Bell was shot in the ear, abdomen and foot.

Bengston said the shooting stemmed from a divorce action.

White says media misunderstood proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — In his most heated news conference as governor, Mark White insisted Friday a proposal attributed to him to raise gasoline taxes was merely one alternative and was "misunderstood" as more than that by the press.

"I think the media misunderstood that we were making any direct suggestion that we were going to raise the tax. Not at all," White told Capitol reporters.

Texas now imposes a 5-cent per gallon tax — the nation's lowest — and in public statements prior to this week, White has strongly opposed any increase in that tax.

But the governor was quoted Thursday by legislators emerging from a private meeting with him as having proposed doubling the gasoline tax to a dime a gallon to help fund highway construction bonds and make money available for pay raises for schoolteachers.

"I didn't say that," White said at his weekly news conference. "I said that was one of the alternatives we discussed.

"I don't believe we need a 5-cent gasoline tax and I don't intend to see one passed. The only proposal we suggested was through a constitutional amendment, where the people have a chance to express" their will by voting on it, White said.

"Some people are saying by tossing to the people you are just too chicken to do it yourself," said one reporter.

"Well, I'll oppose it then. How's that?" White said. "I have said so all along — I was opposed to raising a nickel tax on gasoline."

Asked if he intended to suggest a constitutional amendment to the Legislature on the one hand and then later oppose it at the polls, White said, "Let's wait and see."

At one point during the news conference the governor said in response to a question from a reporter, "Maybe I haven't made myself clear."

> "I think the media misunderstood that we were making any direct suggestion that we were going to raise the tax...I didn't say that. I said that was one of the alternatives we discussed."

"You certainly haven't," the reporter snapped.

State leaders face the prospects of raising taxes for the first time in 12 years because of declining revenue estimates. White has been meeting with legislative leaders over the past several days trying to work out a compromise with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who has said a tax bill is inevitable, and House Speaker Gib Lewis, who is opposed to any new taxes.

White complained to news reporters Friday that "you've already gotten more than I intended to say about this subject."

"I have laid out alternatives and I have not made those public. Those were meeting in the mansion and other places," he said. "I'll be glad as soon as we finish work on the program — we'll lay out the program, but until we do I think it's premature to discuss it.

"There hasn't been a consensus reached yet" among the governor, the lieutenant governor and the speaker regarding taxes, White said.

Earlier Friday, Lewis said, "I'm somewhat the fly in the ointment" on a tax hike.

"I've been the only one in the leadership who has taken a firm stand on new taxes," the House speaker said.

Lewis said only 10 to 15 percent of the 150 state representatives favor a tax hike.

23-year-old woman bludgeoned to death

HOUSTON (AP) — A divorced mother of four who wrote in her diary that she'd rather be dead if anything happened to her boyfriend was found bludgeoned to death with a two-by-four, authorities say.

The nude, bloodied body of Sharon Elaine Munos, 23, was discovered in a small camper where she lived with her boyfriend. Authorities said Friday they were searching for the boyfriend, a Mexican national, whom neighbors said often beat the victim.

Police and medical examiner's investigators said Ms. Munos had been struck numerous times about the head and upper body, apparently by a two-by-four.

A Jan. 31 entry in the woman's diary read: "(He) beat me for nothing. Please, God, let him be well. Every week (I get) a beating."

On Feb. 13, she wrote: "If anything happens to (him) I'd rather be dead."

Another entry on Feb. 20 said "(He) is really all I have. He is what I love most."

The woman's four children live with relatives.

David Garcia Sr., 59, who lives in a nearby apartment, said Ms. Munos followed her boyfriend to Mexico three months ago to bring him back to Houston after he was deported by U.S. authorities.

Police said Ms. Munos also had visited the boyfriend at the city jail after he was arrested several weeks ago on a weapons charge.

"She was always looking for him, even though she was beaten by him," Garcia said.

The couple had lived in the makeshift camper home for the past three months, neighbors said.

Neighbors said Ms. Munos ran to a neighbor's home late Wednesday after allegedly being stabbed in the legs.

She returned to the camper despite strong warnings against it. Glenda Lott, 25, a neighbor, said she heard noises that sounded like someone being beaten with a board.

Fake war staged on Nevada desert

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Residents of the tiny eastern Nevada town of Pioche say the mammoth B-52s pass over at an altitude so low you can almost see the rivets in the bellies of the aging warhorses of America's nuclear fleet.

The 225-ton giants cut west across 200 miles of rugged desert terrain for a realistic rendezvous with jet fighters bearing ominous red stars.

Several times a year, for six weeks at a stretch, electronic war games are played out as the giant B-52s and more sophisticated F-111s zip through canyons carved between 9,500-foot mountain peaks, homing in on targets on the desert floor.

More than 40 men have died since Operation Red Flag was initiated in November 1975 by an Air Force worried about heavy losses in Southeast Asia. Seven B-52 crewmen died on a Red Flag exercise last week when their huge bomber slammed into the side of a Utah mountain during a blinding snowstorm.

Yet the Air Force says the losses in the peacetime war raging over the three million acre desert bombing range are a necessary price to pay if American pilots are to hold their own in real combat.

On a clear day, the 600 residents of Pioche and the 40 people in the nearby hamlet of Caselton, 180 miles northeast of Las Vegas, watch the powerful B-52s lumber down the valley between their communities.

"They're so close to the ground you can practically hit 'em with a rock," says Lincoln County Sheriff Larry Wilkinson.

He says people at higher levels of the valley can look down on the camouflage-speckled wings, which stretch nearly two-thirds the length of a football field, as the bombers sneak in low to the ground to avoid radar detection.

Awaiting the huge bombers and escort fighters are elaborate Soviet-style tracking gear and an aggressor squadron trained in the latest techniques of Warsaw Pact pilots.

"It's almost impossible to go in there and not get in a fight," says Col. Joel Hall, commander of the 4440th tactical training group at Nellis Air Force Base. "Everybody's gotta die at least three times or we're not doing our job."

Hall's "job" consists of orchestrating battle conditions so realistic that pilots return totally drained to Nellis or their home base after a mission. The B-52 that crashed was flying out of Warner Robins AFB in Georgia.

While the pilots and crew evaluate the mission, a threat analysis section spends the night viewing videotapes of the battles. It is then the pilots and crew learn whether they survived their encounter in the desert, 200 miles north of Las Vegas.

"It's almost impossible to go in there and not get in a fight. Everybody's gotta die at least three times or we're not doing our job."

Eight times in the morning and seven times in the afternoon planes of all descriptions lift off the Nellis flightline for their desert battles.

The job of the friendly or "blue" pilots is to knock out desert targets — tank convoys, airfields, industrial complexes, surface-to-air missile sites and a railroad yard complete with tunnel.

Aggressor aircraft and the "red" battle commander, also headquartered at Nellis, are there to make the job as difficult as possible.

Electronic dogfights rage from the desert floor to a height of 25,000 feet while commercial flights slip over the area at 37,000 feet — passengers unaware of the realistic war games below.

Army, Navy and Marine pilots also participate in Red Flag, preparing for weeks at their home base before deploying to Nellis for a six-week stint — equipped as if they were heading for battle.

"They have to anticipate scheduled maintenance," says Hall. "We don't want to stop in the middle of combat to change an oil filter. If they bring in six airplanes, they'd better bring in the supplies for those six planes."

The pilots and crew are even required to have necessary shots in case they should be deployed straight from Nellis to a battle area.

Problems for the pilots start out relatively simple.

"We start the war easy, gradually making it harder," says Hall. "We start out one step higher than what they've been doing at their home base. I feed the war to them one day at a time."

Air crews work 12 to 13 hours a day, and for some it is their first experience at loading live ammunition. More live ammunition is loaded at Nellis, and delivered at the bombing range, than anywhere else in the world, Hall says.

When the planes are armed they head north for the encounter with the aggressor aircraft and missile sites. Giant AWACS early warning radar planes are stationed near the battle site and help control the battle, tipping friendly forces to the location of red planes and missiles.

The Taxpayers of Midland County Deserve a Better Courthouse than they have now.

Several Factors are Important to Remember when you vote Saturday:

•Midland County does not have a Grand Jury Courtroom. Even small communities, such as Big Spring, afford this common courtesy to jurors when they are offering their valuable time to this highest of civic duties.

•Midland County has three district judges BUT only two courtrooms. Therefore, the backlog of cases grow at staggering rates and our elected judges can do nothing about it.

•Our jail is consistently filled to over capacity. We don't need a "Country Club" for a jail...We simply need more room to keep criminals behind bars and away from our families.

•The work and records of the clerks offices at the Courthouse are vital to the Oil & Gas Industries in Midland. Due to the incredible crowding, this work cannot be done efficiently. (Ask any landman how critical county records are to the energy business.)

Please, join your neighbors and VOTE FOR THE BONDS Saturday, April 23, 1983.

Highways, cactus rustlers threaten rare plant species

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — There probably won't be a committee to save the orchids.

On the whole, the endangered flowers of the United States are just not as recognizable as the nation's endangered animals. There hasn't been an impassioned actress who stood up for an orchid or a cactus — only the whales and whooping cranes.

That lack of interest is partly because the federal government has only been working to list plants as endangered species since 1975.

There are now only 64 endangered plants listed in the United States.

But 12 of those grow in Texas, and one is in Brazos County.

Navasota Ladies' Tresses — Spiranthes parksii — are located in the proposed right of way for the Texas Highway 6 expansion south of College Station.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife office is preparing a biological opinion to determine whether the orchids will be affected by the highway expansion.

The purpose of the opinion, requested by the Federal Highway Administration, is not to halt progress — the highway will be built. But if the orchids will be affected by current design plans, federal authorities will have to come up with a solution that at least takes into account the endangered flowers' chances for survival.

"WE WANT THE highway and the flower, both," says botanist Russell Kologiski of the federal endangered species office.

But official concern for such plants is a relatively recent phenomenon.

"Nobody thinks about plants," said Dr. Hugh Wilson, a Texas A&M University assistant professor of biology. "Were there plants on the Ark?"

Wilson is studying the habitat of the 100 to 150 existing Navasota Ladies' Tresses to learn more about why they grow in only selected spots in southern Brazos County.

Earlier this month, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Board listed as either endangered or threatened the same 12, federally recognized plants on the state's newly written list of endangered plants.

The Texas Legislature passed a law to protect endangered plants from commercial sale or destruction on state property during its last session.

Most of Texas' 12 plants are species of cacti growing in West Texas, and many are located only on private land.

It was news of "cactus rustlers'" that led Rep. Debra Danburg of Houston to introduce the state's endangered plant bill. Europeans and Japanese residents visit this country every year to pick cactus, Kologiski said.

"EVERY SUMMER, THEY come over with lists of cacti they want to send home. They have very detailed maps and seem to know exactly where to go," he said.

"They put the cactus in a box and mail them home. And then, when they get back, they sell them and pay for the cost of their trip."

David Riskind, the director of resource management with the state's park division, says the rustlers are seldom interested in plants that can be reproduced in greenhouses. They want the real plant from its native habitat.

Federal and state laws now protect against this kind of wholesale picking of endangered plants, which could force the rare species into near extinction like the wolves and buffalos that once ranged throughout much of the Southwest and Great Plains.

The S. parksii is not the only endangered plant to run afoul of official planners.

Another interesting and rare plant listed in Texas is Texas Wild Rice, which grows only in the upper reaches of the San Marcos River, along with a couple of endangered species of salamander — the San Marcos Salamander and the Texas Blind Salamander.

The listing of that portion of the San Marcos River as an endangered habitat spurred a lawsuit against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department.

THE EDWARDS Underground Water District filed the suit and the City of San Marcos joined in.

Based on some studies, if the Edwards aquifer is pumped dry — a future possibility — the endangered habitat portion of the river would be dry by the year 2010, said David Bowman, an endangered species biologist with Fish and Wildlife.

All parties to the suit agreed to a federal court stay until a recovery team can develop a plan to protect the rice, one of the few endangered aquatic plants listed in the United States.

Kologiski predicted that the number of truly endangered plants in Texas may turn out to be double the number now listed.

Dr. W.F. Mahler, a botanist and associate professor at Southern Methodist University, is researching some 90 species of plants that may be endangered or threatened in Texas for the federal endangered species office.

The search for and understanding of rare plant species is so far behind animal research on similarly endangered species that some relatively recent plants may have reached extinction without anyone taking notice, Mahler said.

While on a field trip last week to locate the Navasota Ladies' Tresses, Mahler looked for another potential endangered plant — the Texas Meadow-Rue, a member of the buttercup family, scientifically known as Thalictrum texanum.

THE MEADOW-RUE WAS last sighted in 1970 and there were only four other known sightings prior to that. It seems to grow, the scientists think, in habitats similar to the Spiranthes orchids.

Contract to study clouds

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Development Board has given authorization for the executive director to enter into contracts totaling $150,000 with Texas Tech University and the Colorado River Municipal Water District to analyze and collect cloud data as part of a study to measure rainmaking potential.

The contract with Texas Tech University in Lubbock could not exceed $60,000, according to Herbert Grubb, director of planning and deelopment for the board, and its purpose would be to analyze "cloud microphysical data" and develop an experimental design for a West Texas weather modification research experiment. The project would be funded from the research account of the Water Loan Assistance Fund, Grubb said.

The contract with the Colorado River Municipal Water District in Big Spring could not exceed $90,000 and its purpose is defined as "collecting and recording cloud microphysics data." Grubb said the project would be funded from professional fees and services appropriated to the department for fiscal year 1983.

The contracts are a continuation of an overall study to identify cloud characteristics and atmospheric conditions which appear conducive to rainfall enhancement by cloud seeding, according to the board's planning and development division.

"We need additional data about the clouds this summer," Grubb told the board, to determine "what's in there and what happens if it's seeded with different materials (to produce rainfall)."

Industry resists VDT controls

BOSTON (AP) — Proposed controls by the state of Massachusetts on the use of computer video display terminals are needless regulation that would affect more than 100,000 businesses in the state, an industry spokesman says.

But state Rep. Elizabeth N. Metayer told a legislative committee earlier this week that controls are needed to protect workers from "the latest occupational threat."

Labor and industry representatives disagreed on whether there is evidence the terminals are harmful to workers in testimony prepared for the Legislature's Commerce and Labor Committee.

William J. McCarthy, attorney for Associated Industries of Massachusetts, opposed the legislation, calling it "a classic example of needless, excessive government regulation." There is no credible scientific or medical evidence to show that the use of VDTs is harmful, he said.

Ms. Metayer said the bill is based on scientific and medical studies.

It Doesn't Take Perfection...

Byrne's days are long waiting to turn it over

CHICAGO (AP) — For four years, Jane Byrne thrived on 13-hour workdays and around-the-clock phone calls. As she prepares to leave City Hall, the hours and the demands are fewer, but her days seem longer.

For Chicago's first female mayor, the days of power, perks and politics are almost over; the city is preparing to welcome its first black mayor, Harold Washington.

"I think we're prepared to turn it over," she said quietly in an interview. "Now it's sort of like waiting for the day in which you do it. It makes the days long."

For Jane Margaret Byrne, these are the days for taking stock — measuring accomplishments and filing away regrets.

"There's a feeling of having it all off the ground, but not completed," she said.

The days are also a time of concern — for the future of the city she loves and the damage done to its world image, which she had cultivated with zest.

The racial tensions that marred Washington's campaign against Republican Bernard Epton and brought in reporters from all over world "hurt" Chicago's image, she said, and that annoys Chicago's No. 1 booster.

What's important now, she said, is for Washington to keep the city moving.

Jane Byrne

"He's got to bring dissidents together," she said. "He's got to come in with a program. He's got to move the city forward, and those are challenges enough, believe me."

After one term, Jane Byrne is not eager to leave center stage in a city where the mayor is always the star, where her name is on billboards and garbage cans and always in the news.

Jane Byrne, the protege of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley who bucked his Machine to win City Hall, was always the leading player in a sometimes tumultuous tenure on the fifth floor of City Hall.

There were serious moments — she faced three public employee strikes in her first year — and showy moments — she rode a horse down Michigan Avenue and posed as one of the Blues Brothers.

There also were times of trial, like her struggle with city fiscal problems, and times of action, like her move into the gang-infested Cabrini-Green housing project.

With her flair and flamboyance, Mrs. Byrne proved a ready target for the lampoons of critics. Some said she had a split political personality — a "Good Jane" and a "Bad Jane." The media dubbed her "Mayor Bossy" and "Attila the Hen."

At the same time, the petite, straight-talking mayor faced an increasingly disenchanted public, frustrated with her never-ending public duels with enemies, her "revolving door" administration and her political U-turns.

It was a relatively unknown Jane Byrne who captured the mayor's office four years ago, defeating the machine with little power and less cash. She coasted into City Hall with a record 82 percent of the vote, after narrowly winning the primary on the strength of a snowstorm.

This year, she had a $10 million warchest and the political muscle of her patronage army, estimated at 30,000 strong. But with two strong opponents, it wasn't enough to keep her job.

There's no doubt Mrs. Byrne regrets that.

A former debutante turned seasoned politician, she is neither meek nor mild when it comes to touting her administration.

She rattled off her accomplishments: a rapid transit line to O'Hare International Airport, the first contract for firefighter and police officers, restoration of the city's financial health and bringing the World's Fair to Chicago for 1992.

"For 3½ years, it's pretty good. And I say 3½ because we've spent, it seems to me, better than half the fourth year campaigning," she said.

The Jane Byrne who will leave office on Friday, the day picked for Washington's inauguration, is in some ways a different Jane Byrne from the woman who beat incumbent Michael Bilandic in 1979.

Critics asserted in her primary campaign that there was a "new Jane Byrne," the product of New York media consultant David Sawyer, who masked petty foibles with a slick commercial appeal.

Edison didn't know power

Inventor Thomas A. Edison had no idea his phonograph would displace the music box. He planned to market it as an office dictating machine, and was displeased with those who suggested its entertainment possibilities. Finally he let some pre-recorded cylinders be sold, and the squeaky recordings were soon in great demand.

Exercise vital to lung patients

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Three years ago, Jack Sugarman was a debilitated man. Chronic emphysema made life for him a continuous gasp for breath. "I had days when I couldn't do anything. I couldn't walk 4 feet without huffing up a storm," says the 69-year-old retired Long Island baker.

When his doctor advised a climate change, Sugarman and his wife moved to San Diego. He entered University Hospital's Pulmonary Rehabilitation Program, and now acts like he's in training for a marathon.

Sugarman still has emphysema. But he refuses to let his damaged lungs keep him from his daily 15-mile walk, his workout at the Jewish Community Center gym, his half-mile swim. When giving his testimonial to renewed health, Sugarman credits the University Hospital program and his own courage to overcome.

For many of the 35,000 Americans annually disabled by lung disease, life has shrunk to a single room, to one chair, to one window. Explains program coordinator Morton Davis, "They all have places in their homes that I've come to call the command post.

"USUALLY IT'S at a table near a window. There is a lamp on the table, a telephone, a note pad. There is usually a television close by, often with a remote control. They have closed off the doors to the bedrooms. They rarely go to the kitchen anymore. There is a coffeepot on the table and some kind of nibble-type food. It's all very convenient. And they just sit there at the command post all day and watch the world go by."

For victims of lung disease, the University Hospital program offers many things: group discussions, new techniques for breathing, dietary hints. But the greatest tonic offered here is exercise. Destroy the command post, Davis suggests, and start walking.

"To our delight we have found that it is not their disease that keeps pulmonary patients housebound," Davis explains. "It is because their bodies have become so unaccustomed to exercise that they are physically deconditioned. If a task leaves you breathless, most people quit doing it. But the less people do, the more deconditioned their bodies get, and then the less they can do."

Pulmonary patients in the program don't become jocks overnight. In fact, therapists here acknowledge that Sugarman is the exception, not the norm. Instead of marathon walking, a more reasonable goal is returning the patient to normal functioning — to shopping and housework and, for some, returning to work.

DISEASES LIKE emphysema and chronic asthma and bronchitis don't ever go away. But by training persons to make the most of their lung capacity and by stressing the importance of exercise, the program has returned dozens of persons to a greater degree of independence.

Diseases like chronic emphysema and bronchitis are progressive and, although drugs are often prescribed to minimize the symptoms, there is no cure. Nationally, pulmonary disease ranks second in economic costs only to heart disease, with millions of dollars in Social Security disability being paid out annually.

Yet the concept of rehabilitation for such patients has gained acceptance only in recent years. Dr. Kenneth Moser established the program in 1968 at University Hospital and ran it entirely on grant money until insurance companies and MediCare acknowledged the worth of the program and began covering the cost in the late 1970s. Now the program, with a rehabilitation staff of five, accepts four to six patients a month.

Assistant Director Dr. Andrew Ries says that most graduates of the four-week program are able to resume normal day-to-day functions, thereby improving the quality of their lives. Rehabilitated patients also have less need for medical care. Because shortness of breath and panic often go hand in hand, pulmonary patients are frequent visitors to emergency rooms. The program teaches patients how to make the most of their reduced lung capacity, how to relax during gasping attacks and when it is necessary to call a doctor.

THE BACKBONE of the four-week program is an individualized exercise program. During the first week when participants stay in the hospital, they are connected to various stress-measuring devices and asked to walk on a treadmill.

Group invites essay on 'Why I want to be mayor of Boise'

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A group trying to recall Boise Mayor Dick Eardley says it plans an essay contest to select a successor, if the recall movement is successful.

The group is trying to recall Eardley because of Boise's long-stalled downtown development project. For 17 years, the city has been trying vainly to put together a 750,000 square-foot downtown mall.

Lester Hopkins, spokesman for a group trying to recall Eardley, said petitions are being circulated for a recall election. If the action is successful, the group wants to hear from possible replacements.

Craddick bills received favorably

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two bills sponsored by Midland Rep. Tom Craddick — one helping the Texas Department of Water Resources to enforce environmental laws and one conforming state litter laws — have received favorable reports from the House Natural Resources Committee.

Both measures will be sent to the full House for consideration.

HB 1585 amends the Texas Water Code by broadening the definition of "person" to allow criminal prosecution of publicly-owned treatment plants. The current code defines "person" as an individual or private corporation.

"This definition exempts publicly owned treatment plants from criminal prosecution," said Jim Taylor, an engineer with the Harris County Pollution Control Department. "While civil litigation is available, we have found the process unwieldly and ponderous, and not designed for quick remedial action."

If such plants were covered by the code's criminal section, an additional 77 cases would have been sent to the district attorney's office since January 1982, Taylor told the committee.

"Passage of this bill by the Legislature will make available to enforcement agencies a valuable tool," he said, "the use of which will encourage and promote better water quality in Harris County and across the state."

Also testifying for the measure was Winston Cochran Jr., Harris County assistant district attorney, who suggested some of the bill's language "may not be clear enough."

Cochran recommended inserting a phrase which would mention "criminal offenses" since the bill only mentions that penalties are provided. "There's a difference between an 'offense' and a 'penalty.'"

No witnesses testified against HB 1585, which was reported out of committee by a 7-0 vote.

HB 1953, which Craddick said just codifies existing law under the Texas Litter Abatement Act, was reported out of committee with an 8-0 vote. No testimony was presented on the bill.

Publisher welshes on contest

BROOKLYN, Iowa (AP) — The Brooklyn Paper's lucky number contest has become a curse on the small weekly after a machine got stuck and stamped the winning number for $50 in at least 50 papers.

Publisher Chuck Dunham has decided not to pay off.

"I'm in an interesting pickle," Dunham said.

"There may be 50 winning numbers scattered about. We aren't going to pay them all off. It would actually be fairly impossible for a small weekly to pay off that many winners."

At $50 each, 50 winners would amount to $2,500.

Show focuses on banks

NEW YORK (AP) — The dizzying revolution in the U.S. banking industry, which is facing new competition at home and trouble in collecting loans made abroad, is the subject of an hour-long "NBC Reports" documentary Friday night called "Banking on the Brink."

The program takes a broader look at the changes in banking than an ABC documentary on the risks of international lending that was broadcast earlier in the week.

NBC breaks no new ground in "Banking on the Brink," but Marvin Kalb, the correspondent, clearly outlines the newly "complex, global, vast, uncertain, dangerous" business of buying and selling money.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, one of many experts and insiders interviewed on the show, says he is satisfied with the growing deregulation of banks that allows them access to new markets with new inducements for savers and investors. But he warns that banks could be in danger if they "bite off more than they can chew."

Indeed, the program goes into considerable detail on the collapse last July of the Penn Square Bank of Oklahoma City, the biggest bank failure since the Depression. It was the Depression, during which thousands of banks failured, that prompted the period of regulation that is now being phased out.

Penn Square wrote almost $2 billion in loans, most energy-related, and sold "participations" in them to bigger banks "upstream," at handsome fees. Many of those loans turned out to be bad risks, when the oil glut caused a recession in the energy industry.

Also discussed is the subject of international lending, in which foreign governments and private companies, most of them in Latin America, owe banks in the West about $600 billion.

The documentary suggests that at least three-quarters of that foreign debt will have to be "rescheduled," a banking term for allowing a borrower to pay back interest and principal over a longer term than originally agreed to, and sometimes at lower interest rates.

At home, the late 1970s are seen as another turning point for banking. That was when Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest brokerage house, first developed its "Cash Management Account," in which relatively small investors could share market-rate returns on pooled purchases of $100,000 certificates of deposit, out of reach of most individual investors.

Group protests testing

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK -- The Mobilization for Animals Coalition has announced plans for a worldwide protest this Sunday against animal research experimentation.

Demonstrations sponsored by local animal rights groups will be held throughout the United States, with four main demonstrations taking place in Boston, Atlanta, Madison, Wisc., and Davis, Calif., as well as in Western Europe, New Zealand and Australia.

According to the Coalition's national coordinator, Dr. Richard Morgan, "Over 70 million animals a year are used and killed" in research laboratories that perform "meaningless, unnecessary and brutal" experiments. The purpose of the April 24 demonstrations are "to raise public consciousness (about) the waste of money and life."

Unemployed bilked out of $1300

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A man who advertised phony construction jobs in California bilked 26 unemployed men out of $50 each, Phoenix police said Friday.

The phony employer invited the men to breakfast at a downtown Phoenix restaurant Wednesday, collected $50 as bus fare to the supposed job site and then left them holding the tab for breakfast, according to police.

Several of the unemployed men had borrowed the $50, police said.

Both The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette carried the classified advertisement, which offered three months' work for a Phoenix subcontractor at $6 to $8 an hour, plus overtime.

Artist sentenced in family's murders

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Commercial artist Clyde Spurlin was sentenced Friday to 26 years to life for the hammer-beating and strangulation murder of his 9-year-old son.

A sentence of 15 years to life for the second-degree murder of Spurlin's wife, Pegge, will be served concurrently, Superior Court Judge J. Perry Langford ruled.

Spurlin, 41, who admitted killing his wife and his son, Scott, told police he couldn't bring himself to murder his 5-year-old daughter, Carrie.

Defense attorneys said the murders, which occurred after the Spurlins had argued about extramarital sexual activities, were triggered by Spurlin's fear of rejection by his wife.

Ex-pastor faces 72-year sentence

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An ex-pastor convicted of molesting a 12-year-old girl faces up to 72 years in prison, prosecutors say.

Sentencing for Harry Flinner, 59, who was minister of the Church of the Nazarene in El Monte, was scheduled for May 18 following his conviction Wednesday on charges stemming from sexual acts with a child under 14.

Flinner suggested to the girl's mother in March 1980 that the child needed sex education, Los Angeles County Deputy District Attorney Robert Carney said. During the following 10 to 11 months, Flinner progressed from discussing sex with the girl in slang terms to fondling her and committing other lewd acts, the prosecutor said.

In addition, Carney said the mother showed her daughter how to do some of the acts and ordered the reluctant girl to perform them on Flinner.

The girl's mother already has served a year in jail after pleading guilty to one count of lewd conduct in connection with the alleged incidents.

300 people protest pipe import

ALLENPORT, Pa. (AP) — An estimated 300 people rallied outside Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp's plant here Friday to protest the importing of Japanese-made pipe couplings.

The couplings are being trucked into the Allentown facility for storage, said Chuck Bruce, a grievance committeman of United Steelworkers Local 1187.

"We don't want them here in our plant. We don't think it's right," Bruce said. "We're asking the company to move them."

About 250 workers remain on the job at the Allentown plant, which has closed a tube mill that once made pipe couplings. About 1,200 workers are on furlough.

Rails first used in mines

The first railways recognizable as such were used in central European mines in the 16th century. Flanged wooden tracks were used to carry wheeled ore cars drawn by men or horses. The first iron rails were in use in Coalbrookdale, England, in 1767.

Minister stunned after church jury suspends him

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A United Methodist minister said Friday he felt "stunned disbelief" when a church jury that had cleared him of immorality charges decided he should be suspended from the ministry for two years.

The Rev. Thomas Lane Butts, head minister at the First United Methodist Church, was found innocent early Friday of most allegations lodged against him in the first such trial conducted by the Methodist church this century.

But the jury of 13 ministers decided Butts had denied a former colleague due process in church disciplinary proceedings.

"I still stand in stunned disbelief at the viciousness of those who have tried to destroy my ministry with no regard for me, my family or my church," Butts said after the jury returned the verdict.

"May God forgive them, and I pray he will also forgive me for the ill feelings that are so difficult to restrain," he said.

After Butts read his statement, about 100 spectators who waited for the verdict with him at Capitol Heights Methodist Church joined in singing the Doxology, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

Butts' attorney, Ed Hardin of Birmingham, said an appeal of the verdict would be filed with the church's Judicial Council in Atlanta. The suspension means that Butts can't practice as a Methodist minister for two years and would have to resign his position.

The First United Methodist Church is a large, imposing church located in Old Cloverdale, an area where many of Montgomery's wealthier families live.

The verdict ended almost 12 hours of jury deliberations and a two-week church trial. It was marked by accusations of sexual impropriety, clerical politics and drinking and gambling in church.

Many members of the divided congregation have attended the trial of Butts, a minister for 33 years.

Butts was acquitted on charges of immorality and "participating in practices incompatible with Christian teaching," including allegations that he had sex with a married woman parishioner in motels and his office and that he became intoxicated at work.

Butts was found guilty of violating the due process rights of former associate minister Al Norris, who turned over his ministerial papers after being accused of having an affair. Butts was accused of "misrepresenting" to Norris what would happen to him if he did not resign, Hardin said.

Bishop Leroy Hodapp of Illinois, who presided over the trial, announced the verdicts.

Church trials are rare since the charges are usually dropped beforehand or the minister resigns. Proceedings are normally closed to the public, but Butts requested that his trial be open.

The church trial, which was not conducted under the same rules as a civil or criminal trial, included hearsay about Butts' conduct, the conduct of various members of his congregation and church politics.

The trial stemmed from a complaint by Claudia Pike of Montgomery and her husband Raymond.

Lawyer criticizes nine indictments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The indictment in North Carolina of nine people tied to the Ku Klux Klan or the American Nazi Party is a "whitewash" of the shooting deaths of five anti-Klan demonstrators because it largely ignored roles of government officials and informants, an attorney for the victims said Friday.

Daniel Sheehan said the indictment made no mention of two Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents who infiltrated the organizations that attacked Communist Workers Party demonstrators Nov. 3, 1979, in Greensboro, N.C.

Nor did it name FBI and Justice Department officials who, the attorney said, should have known about the attack was coming or who concealed information from the federal grand jury.

Five Communist Workers Party demonstrators were killed and six marchers and a television cameraman were injured during 88 seconds of gunfire that erupted when a Klan-Nazi caravan drove to the demonstration site.

Thursday, a federal grand jury in Winston Salem, N.C., indicted six present and former members of the Klan and three American Nazi Party members. Four of those charged were accused of interfering with federally protected rights, resulting in death, which carries a top penalty of life imprisonment.

Editor quits after spy accusation

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

TOKYO — The editor-in-chief of Japan's fourth-largest newspaper, Sankei Shimbun, has resigned after a former Soviet secret police agent charged that he had spied for Moscow, the newspaper said Friday.

Editor Takuji Yamane resigned after former KGB Maj. Stanislave Levchenko charged that Yamane gave Moscow "confidential information" about the 1976 summit between former U.S. President Jimmy Carter and Takeo Fukuda, who was then Japan's prime minister.

In a statement Friday, Yamane denied the charges that Levchenko made before a U.S. congressional committee. Levchenko had defected to the United States in fall 1979 after living in Japan for four years.

He admitted that in 1976 he published what was purported to be the late Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai's "last political will" after Levchenko, who was posing as a journalist, gave him the document.

American yachtsmen detained

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippine coastguard detained three Americans and two Britons for questioning after finding guns and ammunition aboard their yacht, a coast guard spokesman said Friday.

Commander Felix Carbonnel said two shotguns, two rifles a revolver and 1,300 rounds of ammunition were found aboard the 74-ton, British-registered yacht after it anchored Tuesday at Puerto Princesa on Palawan Island, 370 miles southwest of Manila.

The spokesman identified the three Americans as skipper Stephen Woodward Courtney, Robert Eugene Stewart and Paul Coughlin. He said the British were Kenneth Christian Patricklane and Curt Henry Odell. Hometowns were not immediately available.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said the detention of the yachtsmen is "not a police matter but a customs affair." Carbonnel said the men had been turned over to customs and immigration officials.

Marco Polo Bridge under repair

PEKING (AP) — Workers have begun repairs on Peking's 800-year-old Marco Polo Bridge, famous both for its 485 carved stone lions and as a World War II landmark.

Replacement of damaged stone slabs and cementing of the gaps between slabs is expected to be finished by June, the Peking Daily said Friday.

The 820-foot bridge, called Lugouqiao in Chinese, was built in 1189-92. A shooting incident there between Japanese and Chinese troops in July 1937 is considered the start of China's anti-Japan resistance war.

To reduce wear on the bridge, a new one was built nearby more than a decade ago and each bridge carried only one-way traffic. But sharp increases even in its one-way traffic damaged the old bridge further.

Mount Etna lava flow stops

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Lava from Mount Etna virtually stopped its advance Friday, more than three weeks after it began oozing down the mountain's southeastern slope, authorities said.

Thatcher, Kohl: Deployment necessary

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Friday there is little hope for an arms accord with the Soviets this year and that new U.S. nuclear missiles will have to be deployed in Western Europe.

Mrs. Thatcher gave that assessment at the end of five hours of talks with the German leader, and Kohl said he "wholly agreed."

Speaking at a news conference, Mrs. Thatcher said the prospects of reaching the zero option — eliminating both Soviet and U.S. missiles — were "very, very slender indeed."

She added: "I believe, therefore, that both the Pershings and the cruise missiles will have to be deployed."

She said the NATO plan to deploy 572 of the missiles will take five years and that "after some of them have been deployed, I think there's probably a much better chance of securing some respose to the (U.S.) disarmament proposals on the part of the Soviet Union."

The United States proposed in November 1981, that if the Soviet Union dismantled its SS-20s and two other types of missiles aimed at Western Europe, NATO would scrap its plans to deploy the 108 Pershing 2 and 464 Tomahawk cruise missiles in five Western European countries, starting by the end of this year.

On March 30, President Reagan, under pressure from his European allies, proposed an interim agreement on reduced numbers of missiles.

While publicly rejecting the new proposal, the Soviet Union has not yet given its formal response at the Geneva arms talks, in recess until May 17.

Kohl, speaking through an interpreter, said he was convinced the Untied States is "seriously negotiating" with the Soviets, and said "We are being fully informed and consulted."

Deployment has become a major issue in both Britain and West Germany, with strong opposition from peace groups.

Libyan planes with arms for Nicaragua seized

MANAUS, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian army on Friday took over the airport where three Libyan transport planes are being held with their cargoes of arms for Nicaragua.

Six truckloads of uniformed Brazilian troops and two cars and a vehicle with Red Cross markings appeared at the airport in this Amazon jungle city at 3:45 P.M. (1:45 p.m. CST). Columns of troops armed with automatic rifles marched to the planes. Sharpshooters took positions along the edge of the runway, and other soldiers stationed themselves on the airport balcony.

Bystanders were cleared from the area and the airport was closed to civilian traffic.

Brazil seized the three Ilyushin cargo planes, and a Libyan C-130 transport in Recife, after they landed for servicing Saturday with a purported cargo of medical supplies and equipment.

Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy has acknowledged the planes carried arms destined for Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government and has apologized to Brazil for the deception.

Foreign Minister Ramiro Saraiva Guerreiro said the apology was "very well received" by the government, adding that both countries hoped to resolve the incident "without damaging relations."

Presidential spokesman Carlos Atila said Thursday the government was waiting for Libya to appoint a representative to accompany the inspection. The Foreign Ministry said Friday that no response had been received.

Husne Ashur, identifying himself as an official of the Libyan People's Bureau — or embassy — in Brazil said "we will do everything possible to make sure the planes are not opened."

Brazil maintains discreet diplomatic and trade ties with many radical Third World governments.

Pulitzer Prize winner writes of life in South

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Growing up in backwoods Georgia, Alice Walker wanted to be a painter, a blues singer, a wild woman with the audacity and style to transform her sharecropping world.

Instead, since "it was cheaper to get a pencil and paper," she reshaped her world with words. This week she became the first black woman to win the Pulitzer Prize for fiction, receiving the award for her latest effort, "The Color Purple."

The 39-year-old novelist and poet was among seven women awarded Pulitzers in the arts and journalism, the best year women have had. Fifteen prizes were awarded. Those won by women were drama, fiction writing, nonfiction writing, composing and, in journalism, feature writing, special local reporting and criticism.

Coming just days after her novel won the American Book Award, the new honor has filled Ms. Walker's apartment balcony with flowers from wellwishers, prompted the purchase of a telephone answering machine and, for once, robbed her of words. "I don't know what I feel yet," she admitted in an interview. "I don't know what it means."

But then she said, "If it means that my characters get to meet more people, encourage more people, then that's fine."

The characters possess her still. They chased her across the country five years ago, from New York to San Francisco to a Mendocino County hamlet, where she finally gave them life.

The story, set in the South between the World Wars, unfolds in Celie's letters to God, because she's too alone, too desolate, too

"And if they're not oppressing me, if they're not oppressing women and they're not oppressing the earth, I'm prepared to like them."

— Alice Walker

oppressed to talk to anyone else. Raped at 14 by the man she calls Pa, who sells her two babies, Celie is married off to a widower who says: "You black, you pore, you ugly, you a woman. Goddam, he say, you nothing at all." He even installs his ailing mistress in the house for Celie to nurse back to health.

Yet that woman, a blues singer called Shug because she's sweet as sugar, prods Celie to life. Celie's folk-talk letters, barely literate, turn into poetry; a tale that begins in tragedy somehow works its way toward happiness.

Celie and Shug, though creatures of Ms. Walker's imagination, bear witness to real people, real pain. Ms. Walker's great-great-grandmother Celie was raped by the man who owned her.

"She gave birth to my grandfather's father when she was 12," Ms. Walker said. "So I did a lot of thinking about her and what she must have felt. ...

"And yet in those days, they didn't consider that rape. They considered it more his right since she was property. ... For years I didn't realize that she'd been raped. My mother's explanation of it was that she had been 'put with the master.'"

Since the book's publication last summer, Ms. Walker has come under fire for its pulsing rage at men. "I don't like oppression," she responds. "And if they're not oppressing me, if they're not oppressing women and they're not oppressing the earth, I'm prepared to like them."

Part of Celie also comes from a step-grandmother. After weaving memories of the two women into one character, Ms. Walker said she "tried to figure out a way to make her happy."

"I knew she wouldn't be happy with any of the men around her own life ... but I thought she would have a chance with Shug Avery," she said.

Shug has her origins in the blues singers and flamboyant women Ms. Walker admires, especially in the aunts who descended on the family in Eatonton, Ga., "in their glory on Sundays," their day off as domestics.

They had spunk and style, "dressed beautifully in these outrageous colors and wore all these funny fur stoles with these animals biting each others' tails, ... doused themselves with great perfumes and wore wonderful red stockings and high-heeled shoes and had big pocketbooks a child could just get into and find all kinds of treasures," Ms. Walker said.

She left those Sundays behind at 17 when she won a scholarship to Spelman College in Atlanta and then to Sarah Lawrence in New York State. There, Muriel Rukeyser helped get Ms. Walker's first poems published.

Since then, she has produced three volumes of poems, three novels, two collections of short stories and a children's biography of Langston Hughes.

Active in the civil rights movement in Mississippi, Ms. Walker married a white lawyer, had a daughter, Rebecca, and later divorced.

Air Force investigates skyrocketing prices of parts

By ROBERT L. SHAFFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Why does a 1-cent washer cost $1.56? How did the price of an electrical connector jump from $7.99 to $726.86 in one year?

Air Force officials scrambled to find answers to these and other questions about skyrocketing prices following a report by a congressman about cost increases on parts used at the Newark (Ohio) Air Station.

Testifying this week at a hearing of a House Armed Services subcommittee, Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, presented a list of Air Force parts that last year experienced a steep price increase.

Air Force Col. Paul R. Lange, commander of the Newark base, said in a letter to Kasich that parts costs were "relatively stable" in 1980 and 1981 but jumped to $12.2 million last year from 1982's $8.8 million.

Lange said he was making his own investigation and, at Kasich's request, forwarded a report on 125 items selected at random from the thousands which he said had shown price increases.

The Newark station, which does some repair work for Minuteman missiles as well as aircraft, listed the projected cost of 308 of the washers expected to be used this year at $480.48, compared to $3.08 last year.

A small machine screw used on the Minuteman II missile cost $1.08 last year but now is priced at $36.77. The 220 used by the station last year cost $237.60, but the cost for the same number this year is projected at $8,089.40.

Col. Lange said in a telephone interview Thursday that the 125 items reported to Kasich were "a random selection" from those he is studying.

Asked for specific information on the items, including the identity of the manufacturer, Lange referred a reporter to the public relations office at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

A public relations official said the staff there spent all day reviewing the 125 items listed by Kasich.

Record-setting Rebs leave 4-5A in dust

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Prior to the District 4-5A 1600 meter run here Friday night at Ratliff Stadium, Midland Lee sophomore Marc Brackens asked, "Hey coach, how many points do we have? Are we going to win it?"

Lee coach Sam Volpe, smiling for the first time this season, said, "Son, the Fat Lady done sung."

And it was the sweetest tune to grace the Lee track team in its 22-year history. Not only did Lee win the 4-5A championship with 162 points, but it was their eighth straight team title, a school first, and set four district records in the process.

Lee also qualified 10 individuals and two relays for the Region I track meet in Lubbock in two weeks, another school high and maybe another district record. Shoot folks, that's a track team in itself.

"I've had my heart in my throat all week," said Lee assistant coach Eddie Wolski, "but I knew everything was going to be OK when we left Midland this morning and hit all green lights.

There wasn't a red light all day as Lee won the crown by 27 points over Odessa Permian in a meet that was supposed to be close.

Damon Polk remained undefeated in the 110 hurdles with a record 13.73, his eighth straight victory in that event.

Polk didn't win the 300 hurdles, where he had won four of six, but he did place second for another Region berth. Teammate Luther Johnson beat Polk for the third time this year with a record best 38.32.

"I told everyone I would do it in this race," said Johnson after beating Polk. "We're good friends and you can tell everyone that," said Polk.

Sophomore Walter Jones began "The Legend" with a record 10.52 in the 100 in his first district meet. He won at the wire, but glory days are ahead for this youngster. And to add to the sophomore explosion, Brackens qualified for Region with a second in the 400 meters.

"I've finished third all year to the Permian runners, but I knew I could beat (Thurman) Hines today," Brackens said.

Lee's other record performance came in the sprint relay where Carlton Johnson and Luther Johnson had strong legs to produce a 41.67.

Lee's other first came from Issac Garnett in the shot put, his seventh title of the year, with a 57-7½.

Midland High's only Region qualifier came from Chuck St. Germain in the 800 meters, but it was a golden moment. St. Germain finished fifth only two weeks ago, but came back Friday with a 1:56.18 to defeat Permian's Bruce Bennett, the defending champion who beat St. Germain last year.

"There was no revenge factor, but I've thought a lot about losing to him last year. I just told him I would be back this year," St. Germain said.

All of Lee's other qualifiers were second place finishers, but some were extraordinary events.

Michael Barton won the second place Region berth in the high jump with an official 6-6, but it took a leap of 6-8 to do it. He tied with San Angelo's John Johnson for second, but in the jump off, the two waged a war, taking four jumps to break the tie. Barton won with a career best of 6-8.

"I knew I could do it. I knew my mother was with me," said Barton, who was wearing a black band around his wrist in remembrance of his mother who he lost last fall during the football season.

Eric Cooper won a Region berth in the shot put, coming from fifth to second on his final throw of the day with a 54-10 to beat out Permian's Britt Hager. The toss was over two feet better than his previous best of 52-9.

Wayne Brandt, who was nursing a bad ankle and jumping in a high wind, got a 13-3 in the pole vault for another second. Carleton Johnson won second in the 100 with a 21.58 after finishing as low as fourth in some previous meets. Johnson may be one of the most improved runners over the season.

Odessa High's Thomas Taylor tied the high jump record at 6-8 and almost cleared 7-0 in his second attempt. Permian's Dennis Alexander set a record in the 400 with a 48.80 and Permian's 1600 relay team set a new loop mark with a 3:17.40.

The future also looks bright for the Midland High Bulldogs since its junior varsity team won team honors with 124 points while Lee was second with 81.

But this was a Rebel day, one that will be long remembered and hard to top.

Permian's Harrison wins regional shot

LUBBOCK—Melissa Harrison, Odessa Permian, won the shot with a toss of 140 feet, three inches in the girls Region I 5A track meet here Friday while Big Spring and Odessa Permian qualified for the finals in the 1600 and 800 meter relays today and Abilene High made it in the 1600 meter relays.

Rebels shoot for playoff berth

Victories for Midland Lee and San Angelo can all but lock up the District 4-5A baseball race for the two state playoff berths available.

The two are tied with 8-3 records and hold a two-game edge over Abilene High, Big Spring and Odessa High, each at 6-5.

The Rebels have the home field advantage against Big Spring while San Angelo hosts 3-8 Midland High. Elsewhere, third place teams Abilene High and Odessa High square off in Odessa. Odessa Permian, 2-9. Abilene Cooper 5-6. All games start at 2 p.m.

THE REBELS are coming off two big 4-5A victories that snapped a three-game losing streak, a 19-2 win over Abilene Saturday and 6-1 against Permian Tuesday.

In the two victories, Lee blasted 33 hits to increase the team batting average to .334, but even better news comes from the pitching mound. Craig Ray and Kerry Robertson each went the distance giving up 10 hits and only three runs.

MIDLAND HIGH continued its downhill trend with two losses during the week, 7-6 to Abilene Cooper and 7-5 to Odessa High.

Now the Bulldogs face an enraged Bobcat squad that saw its top pitcher get knocked off the mound early (against AHS) and suffered the futher indignity of collecting only four hits.

Big inning gets Cubs again

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The big inning has cost the Midland Cubs dearly in the early stages of the 1983 Texas League season. Friday night was no exception as the the San Antonio Dodgers used the strength of six runs in the third inning for a 9-6 victory.

With two runs already across home plate, erasing a 1-0 Midland lead, Dodger third baseman Franklin Stubbs drove in three more runs when he rocketed a Doug Welenc pitch over the right field fence for his fourth home run of the year.

San Antonio picked up a final run in the inning when Tom Beyers, after walking, scored on Larry See's sacrifice fly for a 6-1 advantage.

"We outhit them and they had three errors and they still beat us," said Cubs manager Tom Harmon. "They beat us with the long ball and the big inning. Giving up six runs, you can't afford it. We haven't avoided them (big innings this season) and they've killed us. When you give up five, six or seven runs in an inning, you can't make it up."

Stubbs' home run wasn't the only "long ball" that hurt the Cubs. Dodger designated hitter Stu Pederson increased his hitting streak to 15 games and picked up triples four and five of the Midland series.

"He's our regular left fielder but we had him at DH tonight because he's got the flu," said Dodger manager Terry Collins. "He hit two triples (3-for-5 on the night). He's a fine hitter."

After giving up back-to-back hits in the fourth inning, Harmon decided to go with reliever Tim Milner. The right hander produced the only effective pitching the Cubs had in the game. In 5⅔ innings of relief duty, Milner allowed only two runs on two hits before being pulled in the bottom of the ninth in favor of left hander Ray Soff who struck out Stubbs to end the frame.

"He did a good job," said Harmon about Milner. "That's two times in a row he's had a good outing. It's what a middle reliever is supposed to do, hold them close. We won two games in a row to start the series but lost the last three and we had a chance to win two of those. Our starting pitching has to buckle down and get the job done. That's the main thing."

But, close wasn't enough. Though the Cubs collected 12 hits, there weren't enough of them with runners in scoring position. Eight were stranded.

"In the last three games we've left 33 runners on base," said Harmon. "We had chances to score (Friday) in the seventh, eighth and nitnh but didn't. We didn't get the hits we needed.

Midland managed one semi-big inning, the third, when Don Hyman scored on Rick Baker's single to right followed by Baker and Jim Walsh on Trey Brooks' double down the third base line.

The Cubs looked to be rising to the challenge in each of the seventh and ninth innings. Two San Antonio double plays held them off.

"This club (Midland) doesn't give up," said Collins. "They keep coming at you. Every time I looked up it seemed like they had a guy on base."

CUB NOTES: The Cubs leave Midland with a 4-6 record from their home stand and 6-8 record overall. Tonight they begin a five-game series against the Beaumont Gators and follow with five games in San Antonio before returning to Midland to host El Paso on May 3...Friday night's game was the season's best in attendance with 1,440.

Phillies foil Ryan's K bid

HOUSTON — Bobby Molinaro's sixth-inning sacrifice fly capped a two-run burst that helped the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-3 victory over the Houston Astros and fireballer Nolan Ryan, who failed to set a major league strikeout record.

Ryan, who needed eight strikeouts to break Walter Johnson's 55-year-old record of 3,508 career strikeouts, fanned only three Phillies in six innings before being replaced by Vern Ruhle. His next scheduled start is Wednesday in Montreal.

Ryan, whose records including five career no-hitters, 383 strikeouts in one season and 1,932 career walks, finished with six walks in the game. The only Phils to strike out were Ruthven in the first, Joe Morgan in the fifth and Bo Diaz in the sixth.

CHICAGO — Gary Woods, Leon Durham and Jody Davis slugged home runs Friday to lead Fergie Jenkins and the Chicago Cubs to a 7-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Sutton shares 1st on eagle

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) -Hal Sutton holed a bunker shot for the only eagle of the tournament, shot a 2-under-par 70 and moved into a 3-way tie for the lead Friday in the second round of the $400,000 MONY-Tournament of Champions.

Sutton, winner of the TPC, had a 36-hole 137, seven under par, and was tied with defending title-holder Lanny Wadkins and Jack Nicklaus.

Wadkins once chipped in for par to salvage a 70 and Nicklaus, the first round leader and 5-times the champion of this event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the last 12 months, matched par 72 despite an unusual experience in which he had to take three swings from the tee.

Nicklaus, a 5-time winner of this event and holder of a record 17 major professional titles, hit an overhead utility wire with his drive from the fifth tee. The rules require him to replay the shot with no penalty.

"I put the tee back in the same hole," Nicklaus said. "I hit the same shot. The ball hit the same wire, about 110 yards out. And the ball dropped down right beside the other one.

"Now, what's the odds on that? It was amazing to me."

Carner shares lead

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — JoAnne Carner fired a 6-under-par 66 Friday to tie Janet Coles for the first after 36 holes of the LPGA S&H Golf Classic.

Carner, a two-time winner of this event, started the day three shots behind first-round leaders Beth Daniel and Laura Baugh Cole and carved an eight-birdie, one-double bogey round to give her a 36-hole total of 9-under-par 135.

Coles, meanwhile, fueled her bid for her first tour victory in five years with a 68 that featured five birdies and one bogey on the 6,023-yard Pasadena Golf Club course.

Defending champion Hollis Stacey, who had an opening-round 70, carded a 66 Friday and was one shot behind the leaders midway through the second-oldest tournament on the LPGA tour.

Tampa Bay loses Reaves for Feds

Tampa Bay quarterback John Reaves broke his right wrist Monday in a loss to Los Angeles and will not play against Washington Sunday in USFL action.

Arizona's Wranglers, 3-4, host Denver tonight in a USFL game at Tempe and hope to cut down on the turnovers. Coach Doug Shively said, "We've probably been our own worst enemy. We're still making a lot of mistakes, some the average eye doesn't see. It's the failure maybe of our guys placing the helmet in the wrong spot when trying to tackle somebody ... little things that end up being big things."

Three of the USFL's top 10 quarterbacks will be in action when Michigan, 4-3, plays Los Angeles, 3-4, tonight. Mike Rae and Tom Ramsey of LA rank fourth and 10th in passing while the Panthers' Bobby Herbert is No. 6.

Houston's Oilers plan to pick SMU's Eric Dickerson first in Tuesday's NFL draft, if they do not trade the pick. Coach Ed Biles says, "Definitely, he's too good to pass up." But the idea does not thrill Dickerson. Dickerson would like to play in the same backfield with Earl Campbell but only under the right conditions, meaning an improved offensive line. "If Earl couldn't run behind them, I don't know if I can either. Earl's not washed up, believe me."

Basketball

Akeem Olajuwon fears rumors about his jumping to the NBA from the University of Houston may hurt his status if the NCAA investigates. "Most schools in the (Southwest Conference) conference don't want me to come back anyway. They won't put any pressure on now because they think I might go pro. But then next year, they'll say I can't play."

"I'm powerless." Olajuwon denies reports saying he would jump to the NBA if he could play for the Rockets.

Golf

Sandy Lyle led the Madrid Open Friday pending completion of the second round by 44 other players who were unable to finish the round because of rain. Defending champion Seve Ballesteros was among those still on the course.

Tennis

Unseeded Stefan Edberg, playing in his first-ever Grand Prix quarterfinal round, upset No. 5 seed Balazx Tarcozy 5-7, 7-6, 6-3 to gain then Bournemouth, Eng., semifinals against Jose Higueras. Tomas Smid Victor Pecci meet in the other.

Horse Racing

Sid Watters Jr., a trainer whose Derby Dreams shattered with Hoist the Flag's leg in 1971, will take a shot at both $150,000-added divisions of the Wood Memorial today with Slewpy and Slew O'Gold. two sons of 1977 Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew. Slewpy is a 3-1 favorite in in the first division and Slew O'Gold is one of eight Derby eligibles in the second section with Chas Conerly is the 3-1 favorite.

General

Canda defeated Finland, 5-1 in World Hockey play to take over third place.

Rangers win

ARLINGTON— Texas Rangers right-hander Danny Darwin, pitching against the one team he says he can beat, continued his mastery over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night with his first complete game victory since 1981.

Darwin, who was hospitalized by ulcer problems earlier in the spring, scattered seven hits as the Rangers nipped the Brewers 3-2.

"Every pitcher has one team it can beat and I guess Milwaukee is mine," said Darwin, who has a 5-1 lifetime record against the Brewers. "It was great to finally go nine innings. It was a test for me, for sure."

Darwin, 1-1, struck out three and walked three.

Texas Manager Doug Rader said, "That really gives our team a lift to see Danny go the route. He scared us in spring training but now he has his strength back."

Islanders expel arch rivals, 5-2

By The Associated Press

The three-time National Hockey League champion New York Islanders ended the upset hopes of the New York Rangers with a three-goal third period, but the Buffalo Sabres overpowered the Boston Bruins to even up their second-round series in Friday night's playoff action.

Butch Goring scored his first two goals of the playoffs and added an assist to lead the Islanders into the Wales Conference finals with a 5-2 victory over the Rangers at New York's Madison Square Garden, while rookie defenseman Phil Housley scored two goals in Buffalo to power the Sabres to a 5-3 victory over the Bruins and force a decisive seventh game in their series.

Goring, the Most Valuable Player in the 1981 Stanley Cup playoffs, snapped a 2-2 tie 5:21 into the third period when he sent a pass from Bob Nystrom into the net. Brent Sutter came up with his fourth postseason goal at 8:09 and defenseman Ken Morrow added a goal six minutes later to clinch the Islanders' 4-2 series victory.

Cummings undergoes heart check

CHICAGO (AP) — San Diego Clippers star rookie Terry Cummings underwent his first day of testing for a heart disorder Friday and will remain hospitalized over the weekend while examinations continue, hospital officials said.

Cummings was admitted Thursday to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for tests to determine the cause of irregular heart rhythms.

After the first round of cardiac testing Friday, Cummings' physician, Dr. Richard Kehoe, transferred him to the intermediate coronary care unit to allow continuous monitoring of his condition, spokesman Curt Thompson said.

The transfer was "planned as part of his testing and was not of an emergency nature," Thompson said.

Kehoe said Cummings continued to be in good condition and will remain in Northwestern over the weekend for more testing.

Cummings underwent a heart catheterization, in which a tube is inserted into a groin artery and threaded through the aortic valve into the heart. The coronary arteries are X-rayed with dye, the heart's electronic impulses are studied by tiny electrodes on the catheter, and a piece of heart muscle is extracted to determine if it is diseased.

Cummings, who starred with DePaul before turning pro after his junior year, fainted during a game in Salt Lake City on Dec. 15 and has since complained of fatigue, shortness of breath and dizziness.

Wealthy families concerned about extra pounds

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Bulging wallets and slender shapes may fit together like caviar and diet crackers, say researchers who found that daughters in wealthy families are more likely to try to lose weight — even if they're already slim.

Most teen-age girls are unhappy with the body fat that typically accompanies sexual maturation, according to the Stanford University research. But thin girls from higher-income families are more apt to want to drop weight than their low-income counterparts.

The findings were released Thursday and announced by Professor Sanford M. Dornbusch at a meeting in Detroit of the Society for Research in Child Development.

The 19th-century ideal of the thin female — once described as the mark of elite status — seems to have survived despite predictions to the contrary, said Dornbusch.

Dornbusch, a professor of human biology, sociology and education, launched the analysis to test the hypothesis of an American sociologist who in 1899 linked the leisure class to female desire for thinness.

Sociologist Thorstein Veblen's book "The Theory of the Leisure Class" described the preferred body shape for wives of the wealthy and said that "conspicuous leisure" would require an ideal woman to have "delicate and diminutive hands and feet and a slender waist."

In contrast, those without wealth might be described as having a "sturdy peasant build."

But analyzing data on more than 3,123 girls aged 12 to 17, Dornbusch and six Stanford colleagues found that the thinner the girl, the more her social class influenced her desire for thinness.

"Our results indicate a surprising persistence of the standard that Veblen thought was doomed by industrialization," Dornbusch reported.

Among higher-income families, one in nine girls who measured among the thinnest of those sampled wanted to be still thinner.

Man's toys teach world history

SEATTLE (AP) — If by some sorcery all the toy soldiers, model airplanes and military games in Mike Edwards' hobby shop became real, it would be World War III.

Gladiators, GIs and Viet Cong would come marching out of the store and battle door-to-door down the storefronts of Seattle's Greenwood area.

There are more than 78,600 items, including 22,000 toy soldier figures, in Edwards' American Eagles Military Hobbies shop. He says it's the largest hobby shop in Seattle and one of only a few such shops in the country that specialize in military models and war games.

He reports total sales of $350,000 in 1982. Edwards says only 10 percent of his customers are children.

Edwards, 46, is a former Hungarian air force pilot who escaped across a minefield during the 1956 uprising against Soviet authority.

War games and toys teach military history, says Edwards, who studied the subject in Budapest and the University of Michigan.

"If you educate people right, you won't have any problems. If you understand history and see the mistakes, then maybe you won't repeat."

The inventory of model planes includes all of aviation history from Kitty Hawk to the Space Shuttle. Model tanks and trucks are available for builders putting together dioramas, whole scenes of battle action.

He also sells assembled models of Soviet craft to the Army at Fort Lewis and McChord Air Force Base, both near Tacoma. The models are used in training, he says.

Miniatures — tin tanks the size of a toenail and battleships the size of a tie clasp — are popular for their affordability and mobility.

Of surprising popularity are the games — board games, war games which recreate battles.

The store, draped with colorful flags and military insignia, also sells replica weapons. Alongside the machine guns are combat weapons of the Middle Ages — battle axes and maces, chained balls with spikes. Edwards says most are bought by members of the Society for Creative Anachronism, who like to dress up like knights.

Edwards started American Eagles in 1969 in the basement of his home. The business fits into his beliefs on military education.

He does not believe war games and toys have a bad effect on children. "It's what you make of it," he says.

One expert who personally dislikes war games and toys says there is little scientific evidence they do any harm.

"If you take away all (toy) guns, kids will still point their fingers," says psychologist Nancy M. Robinson, a University of Washington professor of psychiatry and behaviorial sciences.

Goulet pleads innocent to charges

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Singer Robert Goulet pleaded innocent through his attorney Friday to charges of drunken driving, hit-and-run driving, and assaulting a police officer.

Goulet, 49, did not appear in Culver City Municipal Court and the plea was entered by attorney Thomas Byrne.

Municipal Court Judge Harold Cherness set a May 20 pre-trial hearing on the misdemeanor charges.

Goulet was arrested March 18 in the Marina del Rey area, half a mile from where witnesses said his 1974 Stutz Blackhawk hit one parked car and then bumped into a second.

The entertainer was arrested by California Highway Patrol officers. He reportedly refused to take a blood alcohol test and was later released on $1,000 bail.

While he was being arrested, Goulet attempted to strike a deputy but missed, District Attorney's spokesman Al Albergate said Friday.

The Canadian baritone, who was married to his third wife last October, divides his time between his home in Las Vegas and his 71-foot cabin cruiser in Marina del Rey.

Goulet's voice won him acclaim in the 1960s after he played Lancelot in Broadway's musical "Camelot," but his star faded in the 1970s amid drinking problems and a divorce from singer-actress Carol Lawrence. He made a comeback at the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas last year, with critics praising the return of his warm voice.

In an interview with The Associated Press last September, Goulet attributed his comeback to "a lack of vodka."

"The booze was contributing to my downfall in the 1970s," he said. "When that drinking stopped, things began to turn around."

Man wants photo

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — A Boston police officer has made a public appeal for the return of a lost wallet — not for the $18 it contained, but for the memento of a "perfect marriage."

The wallet contained a wedding picture of Bill Moore, 60, and his late wife. It disappeared while he was being treated in Milton Hospital last month.

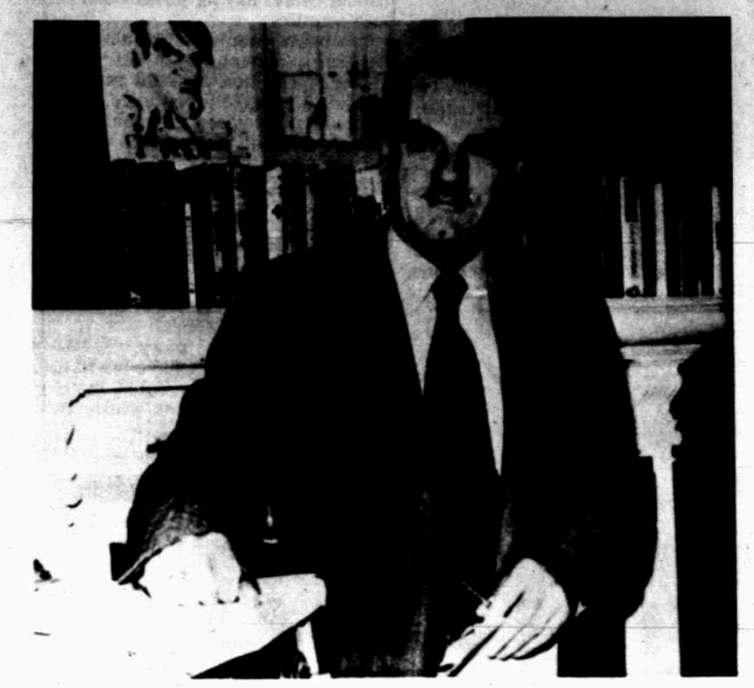
Book reveals Hitler's neurotic dependence on drugs



AP Laserphoto

David Irving, who is writing a book about Hitler's physician, poses in his London home recently.

NEW YORK (AP) — Adolf Hitler took 75 different medications, including strychnine and belladonna, during the four years before the end of World War II.

And to get rid of a ringing in his ears, he allowed his personal physician, Dr. Theodor Morell, to use leeches.

According to a new book by David Irving, the British author who contends that Hitler has been treated unfairly by historians, Morell sometimes administered 10 shots a day. Most were glucose solutions and vitamin mixtures. Some contained liver extract and testosterone, a male sex hormone.

According to Morell's diaries, Hitler was injected with cocaine and adrenaline for conjunctivitis and belladonna and strychnine for gas. He was given 10 different painkillers and sedatives, including Eukodal, a synthetic morphine derivative.

By 1944, Morell had trouble injecting Hitler because he couldn't find areas without needle scars.

"THE SECRET Diaries of Hitler's Doctor" will be published June 15 by the Macmillan Publishing Co. It is based on the diaries and reports of the German doctor who attended Hitler from 1937-45.

"What doctors will find quite interesting is that in the last two weeks of Adolf Hitler's life, he was subject to a terrible tremor in his arms and legs and doctors have long squabbled about the cause," Irving said in a telephone interview from London.

"During those last two weeks, he was given Homburg 680 in rapidly increasing amounts and Harmin. Those are indicated for Parkinson's disease. It doesn't mean Hitler had it."

Dr. Leonard Heston, a University of Minnesota psychiatrist, concluded in a 1979 study that Hitler's trembling was a toxic reaction to amphetamines he was getting from Morell.

Irving studied physics and mathematics at London University. He worked in the German steel industry because he wanted to learn the language, and later worked for the U.S. Strategic Air Command in Spain. His first book, "The Destruction of Dresden," was published in 1963.

IN "HITLER'S WAR," published in 1977, Irving wrote that Hitler did not order the massacre of Jews. He said Hitler did not even know that 6 million Jews were being exterminated until very late in the war.

Of his latest work, Irving said, "I was very astonished to see a man of such intelligence submit to medication on a grand scale and experiment with things like leeches at this most important time in his life.

"This book will reopen the controversy as to whether Morell was advanced for his time or was a charlatan and quack. He had a patient on his hands who had acute hypochondria. He gives him injections as a kind of placebo.

"Hitler didn't want a no-nonsense doctor. He wanted a doctor fussing over him. He was rather child-like in that way. But whenever a serious crisis was indicated, like the coronary sclerosis, Morell turned to an expert."

Heart disease was diagnosed in August 1941, according to the book. Morell was summoned to Hitler one day and found his face "deathly white." The dictator complained of a ringing in his ears. Morell ordered leeches, and made a small incision under the ear.

"THE FUHRER himself shook the leeches out of the jar," Morell wrote. "I had to apply them with my fingers, as they slithered out of the forceps."

The buzzing in the ear abated. Days later, Morell ordered an electrocardiogram, and called in a heart specialist who diagnosed coronary sclerosis — a potentially lethal defect that could produce the chest pains of angina pectoris or an embolism.

"This explains why Hitler developed this frantic haste to get things done," Irving said. "He knew he might suffer an angina and blot out."

In 1944, Morell told Hitler that if he had been attended by a 'normal' doctor he "would have been off the job for so long that the Reich would have gone to the dogs because of it."

"I have had to go right to the limits of the permissible," Morell told his patient, "even though I might be condemned by many of my colleagues for so doing."

Morell, whose diaries are now in the National Archives in Washington, had served as a battalion medic during World War I and then later as an army doctor in a prison camp. He married a wealthy actress, Johanna Moller.

IN 1936, HIS movie contacts introduced him to Hitler's personal photographer. Morell cured the photographer of a venereal disease and soon developed a relationship with Hitler.

When Morell first began to treat him, Hitler had stomach problems and eczema.

West German weekly to publish Hitler diaries

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's weekly Stern magazine has acquired 60 volumes of Adolf Hitler's personal diaries, and will begin publishing them next week, a spokesman for the publication said Friday.

"After an analysis of these diaries, Hitler's biography must be rewritten in large part," Stern said in announcing the series.

The handwritten diaries, some up to 100 pages, run from June 1932 to April 1945, according to Stern.

Stern spokesman Hannalore Gauster said they were the first Hitler diaries ever unearthed.

The 17 years encompassed the period Hitler led the Third Reich.

The magazine said the diaries were authenticated by a team of historians and handwriting analysts, but refused to give further details.

"There is nothing more I can tell you now," Stern News Editor Gunther Schoenfeld said in a telephone interview. "Further details will be given at our press conference on Monday."

Stern editors also adamantly refused to reveal how they acquired the diaries, reportedly found in their original form.

Schoenfeld said the magazine will begin publishing the series on Monday, three days earlier than Stern usually hits the newsstands in West Germany.

London gallery empties basement for exhibit

LONDON (AP) — Sir Michael Levey, who has been in charge of London's National Gallery in Trafalgar Square for 10 years, has rummaged around the basement for something different to show the two million people who visit each year.

He has hauled up 25 paintings for an exhibition and taken their labels off.

"You are asked first to look, and only afterwards to read," he said in an interview.

"You will make up your mind whether you like a painting or not, without knowing who painted it. Too often, visitors look at the label first to see if this is someone they should like. I want to encourage them to make a decision of their own."

"An art gallery should mean something more than groping from label to label."

The exhibition, running until May 31, is called "The Neglected National Gallery," because the works come from the unfashionable part of Britain's great state art collection.

The gallery has about 2,200 pictures, all on show — they say it's the only major art museum in the world which does that — but several hundred hang on what is officially the lower floor, crowded together. These are the so-called "secondary" paintings, ignored by most visitors.

Sir Michael said he wants to encourage an awareness of the lower floor and help visitors appreciate the qualities of paintings in general, regardless of attributions and labels.

The paintings in his selection include a portrait of Napoleon in the Waterloo year of 1815, by Horace Vernet; a scene titled "Itinerant Entertainers in a Brothel," attributed to Jan van Amstel; and the gallery's only painting by a Danish artist — Jens Juel's portrait of an English merchant-captain.

"The information we have will be there near the painting, but you will have to bend down to read it," Sir Michael said.

Why should some paintings be relegated downstairs at all?

"It's a physical thing, we lack space to hang them all in the main rooms," the director said.

"Even so, a large gallery presents severe problems to visitors. There is a sense of too much to see, so we try to present an idea of the main collection which gives a very good survey of Western European painting. If all the Florentine paintings were hung together, quality would be diluted and the visitor exhausted."

Some of the pictures do rotate between upstairs and downstairs but downstairs can mean relegation because of changes in taste.

Guido Reni's religious works, for example, were highly esteemed in the 17th and 18th centuries, then he was neglected.

"Nowadays we are much more cautious," Sir Michael said.

"The thing that runs in tandem with taste is knowledge. The growth of art history means that more people are careful to look into a painting and see why it was done, than say 'I don't like it.'

"A director's difficulty is to balance these two things.

"The paintings downstairs may not in themselves be very great but they are interesting in other ways. There is more of a sense of looking for yourself if you go down there, a bargain basement element. The hope is that if this exhibition excites visitors, they will march downstairs to see the rest.

"Visitors to an art gallery can be nervous and feel someone is looking over their shoulder and remarking on their taste. I don't want them to feel they have got to be on aesthetically good behavior.

Filipino political prisoner jailed in plush cell

CEBU, Philippines (AP) — Ribomapil Holganza sits on a soft chair next to a table with goods from a supermarket and a desk with a typewriter. Nearby is a shelf of books. His son is with him.

They are in jail — prisoners of the Philippine military.

The 47-year-old father, his son Ribomapil Jr., 21, and four others were arrested last Christmas Day on orders of President Ferdinand E. Marcos and charged with rebellion and murder.

Task Force Detainees, a Manila-based human rights group, says the Holganzas are among nearly 1,000 people it classifies as political prisoners in the Philippines. The government says it is holding 539 "public order violators" but denies they are political prisoners.

Not all are treated as well as the Holganzas. Some have complained of torture and inhuman conditions.

Holganza, interviewed in his cell, said he is allowed to paint, furnish and stock his cell at his own expense.

In the daytime, he unlatches the barred door to let in visitors for chats.

Recently, visitors were limited to lawyers and immediate family members, but Holganza said his captors have so far not been strict in enforcing that.

A modern lamp sits in the corner and a 1983 Philippine National Bank calendar hangs on the wall.

Holganza give this brief account of his arrest: Plainclothes goverment agents seized him, his son, a prominent doctor and two others as they were going to visit a sick man who was also arrested and accused of being a communist rebel.

Cebu's medical community has appealed for the doctor's release.

Holganza, regional director of the year-old Filipino Democratic Party, said the government is worried about the party's successes among the poor.

"We monitor grievances, the legitimate complaints of the people. We go to the urban poor who have problems, and the military thinks it's anti-government activity," he said.

"But being arrested is not the worst thing that could happen. My wife could be a widow and my six children fatherless."

Holganza — his first name, Ribomapil, comes from the first letters in the names of Filipino national heroes Rizal, Bonifacio, Mabini and Del Pilar — maintains that his arrest belies what Marcos told President Reagan during a visit to Washington in September about the Philippines government's respect for human rights.

"I am an exhibition after his magnificent showing in the States, to disprove what he's been mouthing," Holganza said.

Cebu City prosecutor Jufelinito Pareja said the government has agreed to reinvestigate the charges against the Holganzas and the others at a hearing March 4.

He said they are charged with plotting to assassinate government officials in Cebu and with being involved in the killing of a man who refused to join the Communist New People's Army, which has been staging attacks on the nearby island of Mindanao.

After the hearing, Pareja will decide whether to pursue the charges. The Holganzas are to be represented by a battery of 29 lawyers, including former Sen. Jose Diokno.

Diokno, himself a Marcos prisoner for two years, said prominent detainees are often treated well by the military. But he said the treatment is not consistent and he and other leaders were at times put in solitary confinement.

Chinese honor dead with video

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Paper money, tiny palaces and miniature replicas of Mercedes Benz cars went up in smoke recently as Chinese residents offered prayers to the dead, with a 1980s offering added — video equipment.

Cheng Beng day, roughly equivalent to Christianity's All Souls Day, is when the Chinese visit graves and burn offerings to serve their dead in the next world.

The Star newspaper said the producers of the colored paper, cane and wood replicas introduced a new item this year, which is in great demand — video equipment.

A complete "system" of color TV, video recorder and two video cassettes can be bought for the equivalent of $4.80, with a choice of "brands" ranging from Sony to Philips.

Drugs may be linked to poor family life

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — An epidemic of illicit drug use in the United States may be linked to the nation's soaring divorce rate and changes in child rearing, a psychiatrist affiliated with Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital believes.

In an article published Wednesday in the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Armand M. Nicholi Jr. proposed that exploring the relationship between these trends might eventually lead to ways of stemming the widespread use of marijuana, cocaine, PCP, anphetamines, barbiturates, inhalants, heroin and other psychoactive drugs.

"The accelerating divorce rate in the United States has closely paralleled the rise in drug use," Nicholi wrote. "Moreover, poor academic performance, susceptibility to peer influences and delinquent behavior (all characteristic of drug users) ... have been found to be more pronounced among children from homes with one or both parents missing or frequently absent.

"A vast body of research has shown that the absence of a parent through death, divorce, or a time-demanding job contributes to many forms of emotional disorder, especially the anger, rebelliousness, low self-esteem, depression and antisocial behavior that characterize drug users," he wrote. "Changes in child-rearing practices and family stability in the United States, beganning several years before the drug culture evolved, have shifted child care from parents to other agencies."

"I think we need to give a lot of attention to children growing up in one-parent homes and find out ways of providing the emotional resources for them that are often unavailable," he said in a telephone interview.

Recent research suggests that drug users have limited tolerence for coping with psychological stress, Nicholi said. They take drugs to fill a moral and spiritual void, escape reality and meet intense emotional needs.

"They tend to use whatever they can find that will allieviate that stress."

Reviewing extensive drug research and data published in recent years, Nicholi wrote, "Recent findings indicate that drug users — a small percentage of our population 15 years ago and now a large segment of it — differ markedly from the rest of the population."

These differences are found in greater vulnerability to certain kinds of emotional disorders, in attitudes, values, personality traits such as rebelliousness and aggressiveness, in home and school environment and in relations with parents and friends.

Marijuana is the most widely used of the psychoactive drugs. The article estimated that one-fourth of the entire U.S. population has tried it and 20 million people use it daily.

In the past decade, cocaine has become the second most used drug, and the rate of increase since 1972 for all age groups has been higher than the rate for marijuana. The article estimated that 10 million Americans have used cocaine.

Sims sponsors bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo is supporting three bills on topics ranging from water to courts.

One bill he sponsored would create the Sterling County Underground Water Conservation District. Senate Bill 590 states powers of the water conservtion district in Sterling County would include making and enforcing rules to carry out "conservation, preservation, protection, recharge and prevention of waste" of underground reservoirs. The district would be required to issue permits for drilling and equipping wells, according to the measure.

SB 1224 provides for the establishment of a juvenile board in Culberson and Hudspeth counties, consisting of the judges of county and district courts having jurisdiction in both counties.

The board would hold quarterly meetings, according to SB 1224. Duties of the board would include creating a juvenile probation department and employing personnel.

These two bills were passed on the senate's uncontested calendar.

In addition, Sims introduced legislation that would allow the 3rd District Court of Appeals to hold court within any of the 24 counties within its boundaries.

Sims said SB 1318 would allow the court to ease docket loads in West Texas and rural counties.

Under the bill, all cases originating in Travis County will be heard in Austin; however, the court could convene at county seats within its district if necessary.

Woodcarver makes toys — and living

By JIM SLOAN

WADENA, Minn. (AP) — A few years ago, Kent Scheer made a discovery, a simple truth that some people never stumble on.

"I discovered that it's possible for a person to do exactly what he wants to do and make a living. Maybe not get rich, but get by," Scheer said.

Scheer, who lives on the Wadena farm that has been in the family for more than 50 years, has been a woodcarver for eight years and a toymaker for the last year.

He came to woodcarving in a roundabout way.

After studying anthropology at the University of Minnesota — and finding no jobs available in the field when he graduated — Scheer began working as a handyman near Itasca State Park in 1973.

"I was driving 60 miles a day and I knew I couldn't keep doing that," he said. "The only people I knew who could make a living in their own homes were craftspeople. And since I was surrounded by trees, I started woodcarving."

Starting out as "three-quarters carpenter and one-quarter craftsman," Scheer did architectural carving — relief carvings in banisters and fireplace mantles.

The evolution to toymaking came naturally.

"I thought, what could be more fun than being a woodcarver, and that was being a toymaker," Scheer said.

Scheer, as Paradise Toys, makes toys for adults, detailed woodcarvings of court jesters, dolls and other figures from the Elizabethan era.

He does not, he emphasizes, make toy trucks.

"What I'm trying to do is make one-of-a-kind things with something of me in them, with personality," Scheer said. "They are basically sculpture, but not as artsy as sculpture, not as stoic. They are the things that wind up over the mantle, or in dad's den."

Scheer carves his dolls and figures by hand, with little machine work.

His Elizabethan dolls are popular, he says, for the same reason that science fiction films are — escapism.

"I think my things provide escape. You can feel what it's like to be a Victorian child, all the things that come from the good old days."

While some of his work ends up in retail shops, much of it is sold to collectors, or is custom made on commission.

Scheer says his income as a toymaker is modest, but "it doesn't bother me."

Mural of actress displeases owner

Nastassia Kinski

SANGER, Calif. (AP) — A newly painted 15-foot mural of actress Nastassia Kinski might come down because a co-owner of the building it adorns is "not particularly pleased" with the idea.

The mural, on a wall at Tops bar in downtown Sanger, a rural community 200 miles north of Los Angeles, was the brainchild of Jose Maroa, a 30-year-old unemployed teacher. Maroa and three friends painted the striking portrait of the star of "Cat People" and "Tess" April 10 with the permission of Isais Diaz, one of the owners of the building.

But no one checked with James Walton, an attorney who also owns the building.

"I was not particularly pleased. I came driving down the street and saw it," said Walton, who says he may paint over the mural and send the bill to Diaz.

"It's really rather well done," Walton conceded. "It's not that I object to the artistry, it's a question of whether you want it on a building in downtown Sanger."

The artist defended his work, saying, "It's not cluttered. I don't like cluttered things like the traditional walls I've seen. It's very basic, very simple."

Prince Edward

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — The Prince and Princess of Wales, continuing their tour here, got something of a shock when they met up with Prince Charles' younger brother, Prince Edward, Friday.

The young prince, who has been tutoring at Wanganui Collegiate School, met his brother and sister-in-law clad in a traditional Maori feather cloak.

The cloak was especialy made for Prince Edward by two Maori tribes in the area. The natives also made the prince an honorary tribesmen.

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — With legislators and paintings of seminude women as witnesses, a young Milwaukee couple was wedded Thursday by Nevada's chief justice in a 124-year-old rustic bar.

Randy LeBeau and Judi Krenke said they hadn't planned to get married when they came to visit LeBeau's mother in Carson City a few days ago. LeBeau, 24, said his mother suggested the wedding at Jack's Bar and contacted a friend who set up the ceremony with some of Nevada's political bigwigs.

The lieutenant governor and Assembly speaker signed the marriage certificate, and a scad of lawmakers, lobbyists and governor's staff members cheered as the couple embraced under flickering neon beer signs and stuffed deer heads.

Miss Krenke, 21, said the couple had dated about a year before Thursday's ceremony. The bride pointed out that the setting was appropriate, because the couple had met in a bar.

Besides, LeBeau said, "It's the Milwaukee tradition."

Abbie Hoffman

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Former Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman suffered a case of generation lag when he arrived at the University of Oklahoma Thursday.

A 1971 speech at the campus resulted in Hoffman's arrest on a charge of interstate travel to incite a riot.

After a year in prison on a cocaine charge and 15 years after the Chicago Seven trial, Hoffman is again touring campuses.

At 46, the man whose motto used to be "don't trust anyone over 30" says he's changed his mind.

"Don't trust anyone under 30," he said.

The college students show him the respect of an elder rather than regard as a rabblerouser of yesteryear, he said. "It's tough to be an outlaw and have people call you mister," he said.

At one school, he said, he was approached by a second-generation fan. "The kid said 'It's nice to meet you. My father was a Yippie,'" Hoffman said.

Celebrities converge to dedicate university's center of performing arts

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Celebrities from across the country, including actor Gregory Peck, conductor Leonard Bernstein and former President Gerald Ford, converged here Friday to help dedicate the $10.2 million Roger L. Stevens Center for the Performing Arts.

"Everything is hectic, but going along nicely," said Michelle Francesconi, public affairs director for the North Carolina School of the Arts. "We're excited that so many celebrities could be here with us for the dedication."

A Friday night gala performance with Peck as master of ceremonies was to include a tribute to producer Roger L. Stevens, for whom the center was named. Stevens, chairman of the board of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, has produced more than 125 Broadway shows.

Other performers taking part in the festivities included choreographer Agnes deMille, dancer Mel Tomlinson and actress Zoe Caldwell.

The black-tie, $250-a-ticket event attracted a mostly out-of-town audience. Two-thirds of the $10.2 million raised for the center came from national sources.

The elegant Stevens Center, with its black wrought iron and glass awnings, gold and green carpet and marble floors, is housed in the old Carolina Theater building.

When the theater closed in 1975, the School of the Arts commissioned studies to determine if renovations could turn the facility into an arts center.

Correspondent honored

NEW YORK (AP) — A soldier's tribute, the Purple Heart, will be awarded today in honor of combat correspondent Ernie Pyle, who followed U.S. soldiers through Africa, Europe and the Pacific.

Pyle, a Scripps-Howard columnist, was killed by a Japanese sniper on a tiny Pacific island.

The medal will be presented at Fort Totten in Queens, in a ceremony dedicating the nation's largest U.S. Army Reserve Center in Pyle's memory.

The Purple Heart is rarely presented to a civilian, but Army regulations permit it and the service felt Pyle deserved it, said Lt. William Gauger, administrative officer of the 77th U.S. Army Reserve Command.

Maj. Gen. Lyle Barker, the Department of the Army's chief of public affairs, will present the medal to Esther Campbell of Dana, Ind., a cousin of Pyle.

Known as "the little guy," the 110-pound reporter's stories concentrated on other "little guys" of the war, saying he wanted everyone to "fully appreciate the front-line soldier."

Ruling puts DeLorean in better financial state

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Automaker John Z. De Lorean won an easing of the terms of his $5 million bail Friday with a ruling that half the amount could remain unsecured — a development his attorney said puts him "in a better position" financially.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Takasugi ruled on the bail motion after morning testimony and heated arguments by the attorneys. The prosecution called De Lorean dishonest and De Lorean's lawyer accused the prosecution of character assassination.

The judge, who asked many questions about De Lorean's financial situation, issued his terse ruling from the bench.

"The bail in this matter will remain at $5 million," Takasugi said. "Two-point-five ($2.5) million will be secured by the San Diego property. Two-point-five ($2.5) million will be unsecured."

The ruling means that De Lorean could withdraw from court possession the deed to his Bedminster, N.J., farm, which is worth several million dollars. De Lorean's attorney said he would probably try to get a second mortgage or other financing on that property to obtain immediate cash.

De Lorean, his wife and two children live on the farm.

Defense attorney Howard Weitzman, who had argued that De Lorean was on the brink of financial ruin, said, "We can now decide where or when we can seek additional financing. It puts us in a better position."

Assistant U.S. Attorney James P. Walsh Jr. declined comment on the impact of the development.

Summit will have historical flavor

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — When the bewigged Patrick Henry stands up in the House of Burgesses to rail against the "pusillanimous" British Stamp Act that imposed taxes without representation on America's principal English colony, Margaret Thatcher may feel moved to inject a word or two in her own nation's defense.

A dramatic re-enactment of the debate that sparked the revolutionary war is only one of the unusual events that will mark the May 28 to May 30 economic summit here, which President Reagan will host for the leaders of the world's seven largest industrial democracies.

The seven leaders will be encouraged to stand up in the rotunda of the 18th century Capitol, where the House of Burgesses met, and argue the case against Patrick Henry, as the general public does every Friday night. A visiting member of Britain's House of Commons recently took on Henry and almost won the debate.

"Here's a lead for you — Colonial Williamsburg will have women working the streets," said Thomas Schlesinger, the director of news services there. The "women" also are part of the "living history" dramatizations that bring this eighteenth-century colony to life in a remarkably convincing way.

They are part of a troupe of 50 actors who regularly use Williamsburg as their open stage. Most of the characters are based on actual tavern owners, indentured servants, slaves, store clerks, footmen and ship captains who lived in the colony in 1770.

"Most people who come here picture silk pants patriots so we do very few of those," said Harvey Credle, head of the troupe that will perform for Reagan and the leaders of Great Britain, Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, France, Japan and the European Economic Community (Common Market).

Apart from the re-enactment of the crucial Stamp Act debate, most of the theater takes place on the streets. As a result, Credle explained only actors experienced in improvisation are hired for the Williamsburg company. "It's the most intimate kind of theater you can do. I liken it to vaudeville."

Meanwhile, preparations for the summit, which will cost American taxpayers between $6 and $8 million, are only beginning to disturb the serenity of this Rockefeller restoration.

"I told the Secret Service. I don't care if he is from the White House," the guide said in a lilting southern drawl. "Nobody goes through here (Bassett Hall) without a reservation for the tour." She was protecting the restored home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. (still used by members of the Rockefeller family).

The Secret Service has other headaches as well.

One of them is the estimated 6,000 journalists who are expected to converge on Williamsburg. They won't be allowed into the area, Schlesinger explained, until the last day of the Memorial Day weekend summit.

All the newsmen will be herded into the Cascades Information Center complex, half a mile from the restored area, and the campus of the college of William and Mary. "The Secret Service calls it a goat herd," commented Al Louer, director of the Press Bureau.

But the off-limits restored area, where the foreign leaders will be able to roam to their heart's delight, will be putting on its finest. "What you smell is manure," Schlesinger explained. "The town has 10 tons of it just for the summit. It will never be greener."

The purpose of all this, of course, is to enable these powerful latter-day historical figures to have a once-a-year informal tete-a-tete without the pressure of having to issue formal communiques or even necessarily agree on anything.

There was so much public pressure on the leaders to agree at last year's Versailles summit that most observers believe nothing that happened could have lived up to expectations. So this year the Reagan administration wants to avoid any predictions of success.

Instead it is worrying about protocol matters, such as who will get to stay where. This is more important than it may sound. In addition to the elegantly restored private homes, there is the imposing Williamsburg Inn, a graceful and large brick structure that is in a commanding location.

Maureen McKelvey, daughter of Michaelyn Renfrow of 2613 Terrace, and Katherine Boyle, daughter of William J. Boyle of 3318 Neely Avenue, are recipients of scholarships from Midland Rotary Club. Miss McKelvey, a senior at Midland High School, is active in National Honor Society, French Club, student council and MHS band. She was selected for All-City and All-Region bands and was a member of the flag corp. She is the recipient of two academic awards and an English department award. She was an exchange student in France for one year. Miss Boyle, a senior at Lee High School, is active in varsity track, Thespian Society, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, gymnastics, Pep Club, Spanish Club, French Club, JETS and National Honor Society. She is student council representative, a distinguished member of the National Forensic League and a photographer for the yearbook.

MOTHER LOOKED OUT WINDOWS

For many of us that's why our lives have been broad and rich and full.

Mother thought about that world outside which we must be ready for.

She saw the challenges and opportunities we would encounter . . . tried to prepare us for them.

She turned her own eyes to the Light that brightens life. She sought to share with us her beliefs, her faith.

On Mother's Day we're having our Family Reunion in church. We're grateful to God for the windows He has provided, and for a Mother on whom their Light was never wasted.

'Music can worm through armor'

RELIGION

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a heavily secularized world, churches are revitalizing a way to break through barriers to faith, says singer Jane Murphy. She says it's being done with song.

"Music can worm its way through armor," she says, adding that this subtle yet potent means is particularly necessary in a technologically obsessed age which tends to deaden the sense of spiritual realities.

A "numbness," she calls the effect. She says apt music can penetrate that crust and "touch those levels that we need but that we're out of touch with most of the time."

Those depths remain present, even when covered over, she says. "We're not really fooled down inside. There's a tremendous, deep-down yearning for the transcendent."

The evidence of it, and its rise to the surface, is something she has observed many times in parish "renewal" gatherings that she and a priest-evangelist have conducted in many communities.

AFTER THE PRIEST, the Rev. Owen Lally of Chelsea, N.Y., gives a talk on some theological concept, such as God's constant love for every person, then she will gently reinforce the message in poignant song.

Softly strumming her guitar, her clear, wistful soprano appeals for that greater friendship. "Father, it's one of your children again," she sings; "asking that you would hear. I've only a few simple words to speak. I guess you might call it a prayer."

Typically, by the time she's finished, the eyes of listeners are wet with tears.

"People cry a lot," she says. "Music intrinsically is more intimate. They feel way beyond what they feel with spoken words."

Touching that emotional chord is relatively new for Roman Catholics and some liturgically formal Protestants, but it's essential in a mentally secularized time, Mrs. Murphy said in an interview.

"It brings into play one element of our spirituality that we haven't engaged before — our emotions," she said. That aspect, she said, must be integrated and balanced with the intellectual, devotional side.

"Just 'jump and holler' affairs lack comprehensiveness," she said, but the "feeling" element, conveyed in tender, tasteful song, reaches into "that little corner" clogged by modern thought-patterns and unreachable by mere words.

"The church is finding its voice musically. It's forging a new one, an amalgamation of all that is best, the contemporary taking its place alongside the ancient hymns and chants we grew up with."
—Jane Murphy

MRS. MURPHY, a warmly vibrant Roman Catholic who is regular soloist at Our Lady of Fatima Church of Port Washington, N.Y., also is engaged widely at various Catholic and Protestant churches, schools and civic organizations.

"A depersonalization has crept over people's lives," she said. "But music can reach over and around their defenses."

At schools and some other civic settings, the specifically religious notes have to be omitted. "You have to be very circumspect about that," she said. "Recently in our society, any mention of God or faith has become a faux pas.

"A kind of idolatry has put man in the position of God so that expressing relationship to any higher authority is considered immature. It has circumscribed our thinking."

In the secular arenas, where her songs are especially for children to help them express inner feelings, she said the numbers are usually of a humorous, give-and-take nature, but underlaid with Christian principles.

MRS. MURPHY, with a melting, golden voice, also has issued an album, "Magnificat," of contemporary-style religious songs about hope, faith and biblical imagery.

A one-time teacher, married and the mother of two, she said that in Roman Catholicism a "whole new phenomenon in church music" has opened up, sometimes still with its rough edges but now more skillfully incorporating contemporary musical forms.

"It touches people in a way the grand old stuff never could," she said, noting that what used to be called "folk Masses" — with string and wind instruments — have been refined into an increasingly regular part of liturgy.

"The church is finding its voice musically. It's forging a new one, an amalgamation of all that is best, the contemporary taking its place alongside the ancient hymns and chants we grew up with."

Protestant churches also have shared in the trend with several denominations issuing or working on new hymnals, including Episcopalians, Lutherans and Presbyterians, both of old and new songs.

Mrs. Murphy, ecumenically at home across denominational lines, calls her religious songs "almost archetypical, going to the core of people's hearts. Anyone gets this kind of music.

"There's a yearning for spiritual contact and music serves to spark it when it can't be done by spoken words."

The Newspaper BIBLE

THAT'S A GOOD QUESTION!

Here are some of the story-illustrations Jesus used in His sermons: "What good is it for one blind man to lead another? He will fall into a ditch and pull the other down with him.

"How can a student know more than his teacher? But if he works hard, he may learn as much...

"And why quibble about the speck in someone else's eye--his little fault--when a board is in your own?

"How can you think of saying to him, 'Brother, let me help you get rid of that speck in your eye,' when you can't see past the board in yours? Hypocrite! First get rid of the board, and then perhaps you can see well enough to deal with his speck!

"A tree from good stock doesn't produce scrub fruit nor do trees from poor stock produce choice fruit. A tree is identified by the kind of fruit it produces. Figs never grow on thorns, or grapes on bramble bushes!

"A good man produces good deeds from a good heart. And an evil man produces evil deeds from his hidden wickedness. Whatever is in the heart overflows into speech.

"So why do you call Me 'Lord' when you won't obey Me?

"But all those who come and listen and obey Me are like a man who builds a house on a strong foundation laid upon the underlying rock. When the floodwaters rise and break against the house, it stands firm, for it is strongly built.

"But those who listen and don't obey are like a man who builds a house without a foundation. When the floods sweep down against that house, it crumbles into a heap of ruins."

NCC chief voices regret over action

NEW YORK (AP) — The chief executive officer of the National Council of Churches has voiced "regret" that Russian Orthodox Patriarch Pimen criticized President Reagan without consulting with U.S. church leaders.

The disapproving telegram was sent by Claire Randall, the NCC's general secretary, to the patriarch in Moscow after he criticized Reagan in an open letter published in a New York Times advertisment.

Pimen accused Reagan of sowing "seeds of hatred" and "taking a great sin upon your soul" by calling the Soviet Union "an evil empire" and speaking of a "horrible Soviet threat" when there is "no such threat."

Expressing regret at the patriarch's action, Randall affirmed the value of relationship between churches of the two countries.

'Baptists look over 'SBC Today'

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — About 40,000 Southern Baptists are getting their first look at "SBC Today," an independent newspaper whose first edition tells of controversy in the denomination under this headline: "Will the Convention Split?"

The non-profit monthly tabloid was launched by editor Walker Knight, who retired March 1 as director of editorial services for the denomination's Home Mission Board.

Knight said the first issue's lengthy report on conflict between Southern Baptist fundamentalists and moderates over the "inerrancy" of the Bible was needed to present the issue to pastors and members.

Natural gas industry restrictions haunt Loeffler

By SARAH MCCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, — The restrictions on the natural gas industry written into law as national policy in 1978 to curtail profits of the so-called "robber barons" of Texas have come home to haunt the U.S. Congress, says Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt.

"The restrictions have caused such high prices for consumers that now many sitting members of Congress fear that the wrath of their urban constituents will defeat them at the next election," added Loeffler, deputy "whip" of the House of Representatives.

He is considered to be the most knowledgeable man in the Congress of either party on the gas issue, which he studied for years in private industry and at government levels at the White House and Congress before he became a member of the House.

Loeffler points out that the consumers are howling for relief, but at the same time other opponents of the gas industry's attempt to deregulate itself are causing another powerful lobby, the Environmentalists, to scream that "deregulation" or "regulation," as this effort is sometimes called, may force even higher prices, under their economic analysis.

"This will make it very difficult to write a new gas law," he added. "I give the gas bill only a 50-50 chance of passage this year and if it does not pass this year, we will not have a chance of passing one next year during an election period, I feel."

Loeffler said one of the hitches in writing the bill can be seen from the strategy worked out in the Senate Energy Committee under chairman James McClure, who wants to produce a bill. The word 'decontrol' may be left out entirely. Also, we now expect a relief provision to be voted on in a tie. That would prevent every one from being blamed or praised for what some constituent groups might seize upon for attack. Ordinarily in the Senate, a tie vote means defeat of a measure, but a plan has been adopted in the Senate committee (which is now engaged in the tedious task of writing a final draft) whereby a tie vote this time will be considered as passing the provision.

"In the House, we expect to have committee action delayed until after the Senate Republican majority works over the bill. We expect a mild proposal in the House not to pass the committee. We think that the House may then work on a proposal that will eventually go to conference with the Senate where we hope to bring out a final draft of an acceptable gas bill. I cannot say now what will be in it.

"If we do not get this bill through Congress before members get ready to go on their summer recess in the latter part of the summer, I do not think we will be able to pass it later in the fall," said Loeffler, whose business it is to count votes on the House floor and who has done it accurately before on President Ronald Reagan's proposals.

Loeffler is watching closely the developments of an attempt by Columbia Gas Company to get out of contracts with supplying gas companies requiring Columbia to take more gas than it needs for supplies for consumers at present.

At the same time, Loeffler points out that the competing interests in the gas industry have various factions eyeing each other closely in the Senate mark-up of the bill and on the market.

"If we do not pass a gas bill it will be extremely disadvantageous for the Midland independents and others throughout the country," he said. "What helps the independent is not always what helps the petro-chemical area of the Houston and Gulf coast area. The majors are lined up against the independents. The intra-state people are watching the interstate market.

"Senate Lloyd Bentsen, D., and John G. Tower, R-Texas have such divergent interests among their constituents that no one wants to quoted about the gas situation or the bill's prospects except that all agree we may not get a gas bill this year."

Church head, pilots sentenced for tax fraud

FORT WORTH (AP) — The president of the Basic Bible Church of American and seven former Braniff International pilots were sentenced Friday for their convictions of conspiring to defraud the Internal Revenue Service of more than $1 million through a church scheme.

Jerome Daly, president of the church, was sentenced to 16 years in prison and fined $95,000.

U.S. District Judge David O. Belew Jr. sentenced ex-pilots Wayne Chermack, Daniel P. Hulsey and Gerald Ross to 2-to-4 years each and Alfred Breath, Stanley Klir Jr., Costen Lee Whatley and Mathus Wilson to two years each, after permitting Daly to read a 14-page statement into the record.

The basic facts in the case were never in dispute — the pivotal question was whether Daly and the others had criminal intent to violate the law when they joined forces to create local chapers of the Basic Bible Church.

Daley and the pilots, who lost their jobs last May when Braniff declared bankruptcy, joined the church in the mid-1970s and paid Daly up to $1,250 to be ordained as Basic Bible ministers.

They took vows of poverty and established Religious Orders of Almighty God for which they opened bank accounts. They transferred their assets to the orders and deposited their paychecks in the orders' accounts, drawing out funds for living expenses, and claimed on income tax returns that they were as one-man churches exempt from taxation.

Their defense was that they sincerely believed, at least at the time, that their actions were not criminal.

In his statement, Daly blamed his conviction on prosecutor Joseph Jones, saying that if Jones had prosecuted Jesus' 12 disciples "there would have been 12 more crosses on Calvary Hill."

Countered Belew: "The U.S. government did not prosecute any of you for your religion. They prosecuted you for using religion to not pay income taxes. There was no question that that was done."

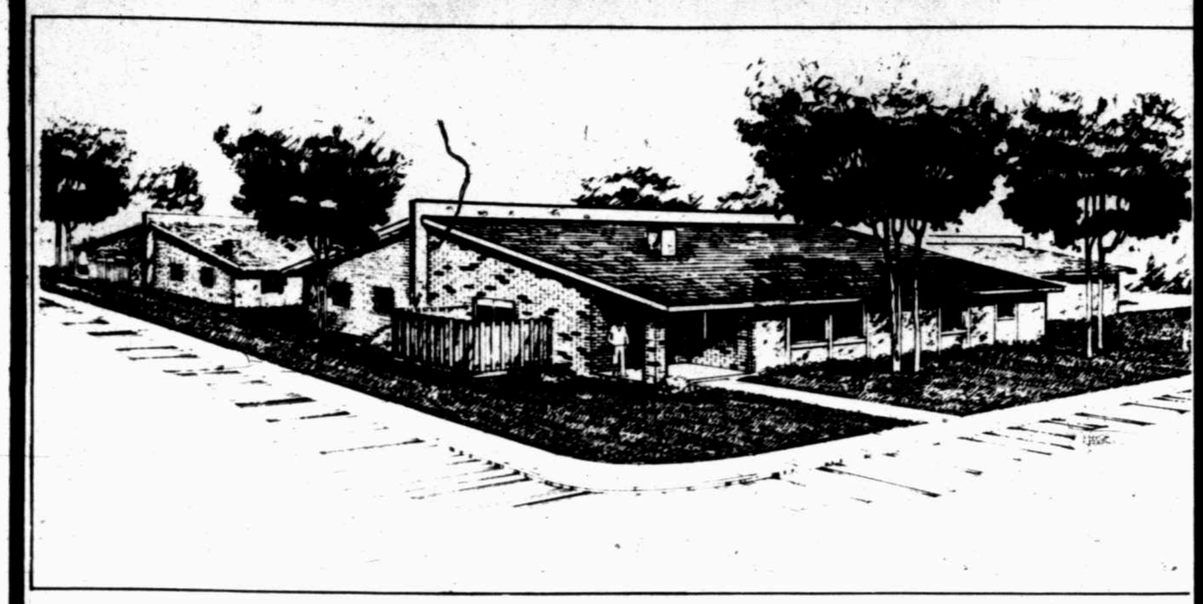
LIVE-IN TAX SHELTER



LUXURY FAIRGATE TOWNHOMES FOR $92,500

If you're like most renters, the tax man's got you down and you're ready to cry uncle. You have no interest to write off, and, to make matters worse, you don't own a home. Each month those rent dollars go out the window with no hope of retrieval.

DISTINCTIVE 2 & 3 BEDROOM FLOORPLANS

Besides saving you money, at Fairgate you'll get some great extra features as standards. A fireplace. Appliances. Ceiling fans. And much more.

To visit Fairgate in northwest Midland, take Wadley Avenue west to Midland Drive; then north to Fairgate and the models.

LIVE-IN TAX SHELTER

At Fairgate you'll enjoy a beautiful home and tax relief. You can deduct a considerable amount of interest expense from your income tax, and because our homes are priced below market value but presently sell for $92,500, you have built-in equity.
