LONDON — The name is Brosnan, Pierce Brosnan, and he's finally got a license to kill. The former star of TV's "Remington Steele" was anointed the new James Bond on Wednesday, the fifth actor to play 007 since Sean Connery donned a dinner jacket for "Dr. No" in 1962./5A

Study on calcium

BETHESDA, Md. — Half of America's adults are not getting enough calcium, and that's contributing to a plague of brittle bones and fractures that costs the health care system $10 billion a year, a federal committee said Wednesday. A committee of experts assembled by the National Institutes of Health said the current recommended daily allowance for calcium is too low, leading to weakened bones for children, adults and, especially, for elderly women./8A

Puts bite into dog

CHICAGO — Federal researchers say they've collared some evidence about which kinds of dogs are most likely to bite. Some animal experts say they're barking up the wrong tree: They say human ignorance of dog behavior, such as a child running up to and hugging a dog, often is to blame for dog bites./3D

Incumbents escape primaries, but voters send warning shots

Associated Press

Only one incumbent fell in the major contests of an eight-state primary day, but several suffered bruises that suggest tougher going in November. The warmups over, California's costly campaigns for governor and Senate quickly turned prickly.

Stung by conservative defections even as he won his primary, California Gov. Pete Wilson moved immediately to woo that critical constituency with new ads touting tough positions on welfare and crime.

Challenger Kathleen Brown was unrelenting as she opened a victory tour, saying Wilson has "left us deficits: a budget deficit, a jobs deficit and a vision deficit."

Wilson and Brown were victors in the biggest contest Tuesday night, and their new salvos Wednesday reflected the stakes

Violent juvenile crime soars in Texas; cities eye curfews

DALLAS (AP) — Gangs and drugs are fueling a steady increase in violent crime among Texas juveniles, an alarming trend that has a number of cities adopting or considering teen curfews.

Homicides, robberies and other violent youth offenses rose 165 percent in the four years before 1993. And there are no signs of a slowdown this year.

The Texas Juvenile Probation Commission said that in the first three months of 1994 — the most recent state figures available — delinquent conduct cases totaled 24,847, compared with 43,988 for the first six months of 1993.

"Gang activity is a big factor," said Susan Dow, a spokeswoman for the agency in Austin. "In 1987 and 1988 is when we started seeing a jump in juvenile violent crime. That was also about the time that crack cocaine hit the streets. So drugs are also a

Sizzling '94? State sweats 3-digit hints

Associated Press

Just how hot is it?

Air conditioners in South Texas blasted to an energy-consumption record Tuesday. The Edwards Aquifer dropped almost 2 feet because so much water was used in one day. And San Angelo claimed the nation's hottest reading: 107 degrees.

The calendar doesn't make summer official for two weeks yet, but triple-digit temperatures across the state already have sent warning signs that Summer '94 could be a scorcher.

"Too soon to tell, but it's not a good start," National Weather Service meteorologist Matthew Sena said Wednesday.

Sena said San Angelo's 107 degrees on Tuesday broke the record high 104, set in 1963. The forecast called for 102 degrees Wednesday.

Normal temperatures for this time in San Angelo are in the low 90s, he said.

"If you don't have to be out in it, don't," Sena warned of the heat. "Drink plenty of fluids, rest often, wear light and loose clothes."

Fourteen Texas cities — most of them in the west and south parts of the state — broke 100 degrees Tuesday.

"We get a lot more customers coming in," said Eshe-Rae Adams, who scoops ice cream for Baskin-Robbins in San Angelo. "Most of the time they say, 'Ooh, feels good in here.' "

Forecasters were predicting possible relief for the northern half of Texas thanks to thunderstorms and a weak cool front Wednesday night.

But that didn't help much in the afternoon, as temperatures were in the 90s and heat indexes were in the 100s all over North Texas. Mineral Wells had a heat index of 110.

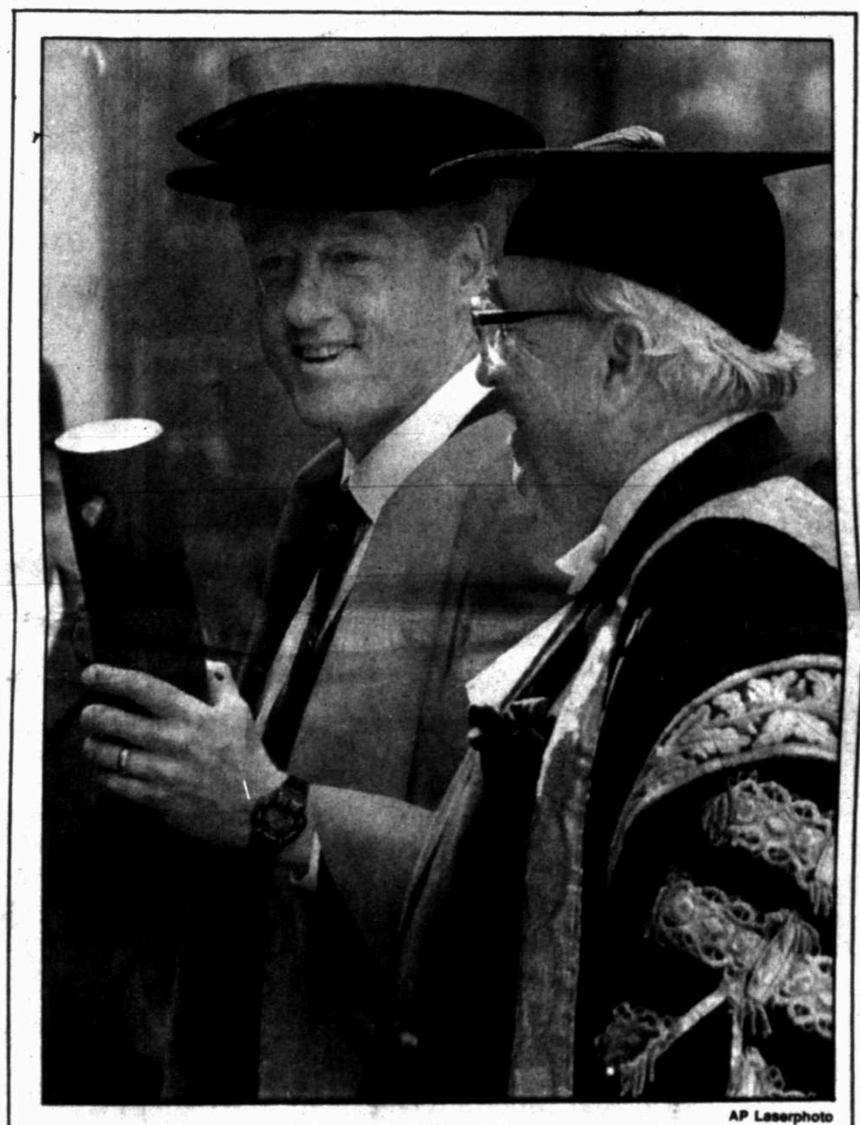

In the meantime, though, air conditioners were strained.

The Houston District Office of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service announced it would close until Friday because its cooling systems and computers crashed.

John Young, owner of Central Air Co. in Dallas, says his phone has been ringing almost non-stop with demands for President Clinton carries his scroll while walking with Lord Jenkins, chancellor of Oxford University, after receiving an honorary degree Wednesday.

A matter of degree

Whereas, Clinton's an old boy, honor him

By Maureen Dowd
N.Y. Times News Service

OXFORD, England — President Clinton returned Wednesday for a sentimental journey to the university where he didn't inhale, didn't get drafted and didn't get a degree.

The last got rectified by Oxford University in a ceremony conducted by men in black gowns speaking Latin in a 325-year-old stone building designed by Christopher Wren. Clinton, who studied politics at University College as a Rhodes Scholar from the fall of 1968 to the spring of 1970, was awarded an honorary doctorate in civil law.

At the gilded Sheldonian Theater, the university chancellor, Lord Jenkins of Hillhead, read the text of the degree in Latin, featuring eight clauses beginning with Whereas, one Therefore and one Witness Whereof.

Jenkins said Clinton was honored for being "a doughty and tireless champion of the cause of world peace," for having "a powerful collaborator in his wife," and for winning "general applause for his achievement of resolving the gridlock which prevented an agreed budget."

Wearing a red gown, beneath a high ceiling painted with cavorting cherubs, Clinton recalled for the au-

2 teens' soccer display wins World Cup window

By Gary Shanks

A prize-winning window display is one Midland teen's ticket to San Francisco and the World Cup soccer competition.

Sean Parnell, 17, and his brother, Tim, 13, won a nationwide contest for window displays of soccer equipment sponsored by a San Francisco wholesaler.

The teens — who handle the display at their father's store, Soccer Etc., 712 W. Scharbauer Drive — beat out professional window trimmers from larger stores across the country in a contest sponsored by Patrick USA. The wholesaler is a division of a French company that specializes in soccer and rugby equipment, said Steve Parnell, the boys' father.

Grizzard widow stirs gossip like a 'slit skirt draws stares'

By Jim Auchmutey
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — The porch swing is empty. Packing boxes are propped against the window. The front door is wide open, framing the silhouette of a woman at the end of a long hall. She motions to come in.

More boxes inside, stacks of publicity photos, battered old typewriters sitting in chairs. The woman stands in a blindingly white kitchen, the counter strewn with bills and statements. She wears shorts and a Braves T-shirt topped by a tangle of light brown hair. There's a cordless phone in one hand.

"Yes, I had a question about one of Mr. Grizzard's bills."

A minute later, she clicks off the phone and turns to her unexpected visitor, a reporter. "I understand you've been talk-

'Buffering' town houses take edge off zoning controversy

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A town meeting Tuesday evening may have ironed out some wrinkles of opposition to a controversial zone-change request off Loop 250 that has epitomized a re-occurring residents vs. development debate in Midland.

But Tuesday's City Council public hearing for the zone-change request is to be the ultimate test of whether some concerns were resolved.

The center of debate is whether the land between Ward Street and Whitmire Avenue off Loop 250 should be rezoned from allowing apartments to permitting retail businesses.

Last summer, Wisconsin-based developer David Shea was denied a zone change to permit a Best Buy consumer

Japan resists sanctions on N. Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (NYT) Clinton administration's plan to impose new global sanctions against North Korea for its defiance of nuclear inspectors has run into strong resistance from Japan, throwing into question the effort to impose strict financial sanctions on North Korea.

The Japanese, concerned about North Korea's reaction, are balking at a quick cutoff of the hundreds of millions of dollars that Koreans living in Japan send to North Korea.

Combined with China's reluctance to exert greater pressure on North Korea, the sharp debate between Tokyo and Washington threatens to greatly reduce the pain inflicted on the government of Kim Il-sung.

Japan has said it would abide by any sanctions imposed. But in private, officials say, Tokyo has been arguing against Washington's plan, which would set a deadline for North Korea to open its nuclear complex to U.N. inspectors, and halt financial transfers if the North refused to comply. Instead, Japan wants to issue another warning and another vague threat of sanctions.

"We are in agreement on the overall goal of bringing the North Koreans back to the negotiating table," a senior Japanese official said on Wednesday night. "But stopping the remittances of funds is a very heavy sanction. Our differences are over the weight of the sanctions and the timing."

The Japanese are worried about North Korea's threat to launch a war against South Korea if sanctions are imposed, as well as possible uprisings or terrorism by the 250,000 Koreans in Japan who have links to the North — mostly the descendants of Koreans brought to Japan as slave labor during its occupation of the Korean Peninsula from 1910 to 1945.

Japanese officials also fear that a halt in the North's biggest supply of hard currency could trigger widespread suffering among the people.

"We look at the funds differently than the United States does," a senior Japanese official said last week. "They see this money as something that props up the North Korean government. We see it as largely something from Koreans in Japan who want to help their families."

Though estimates vary greatly, intelligence agencies believe that Koreans in Japan send $600 million to $1.8 billion to North Korea every year, a huge figure in a country whose gross domestic product is only about $20 billion a year.

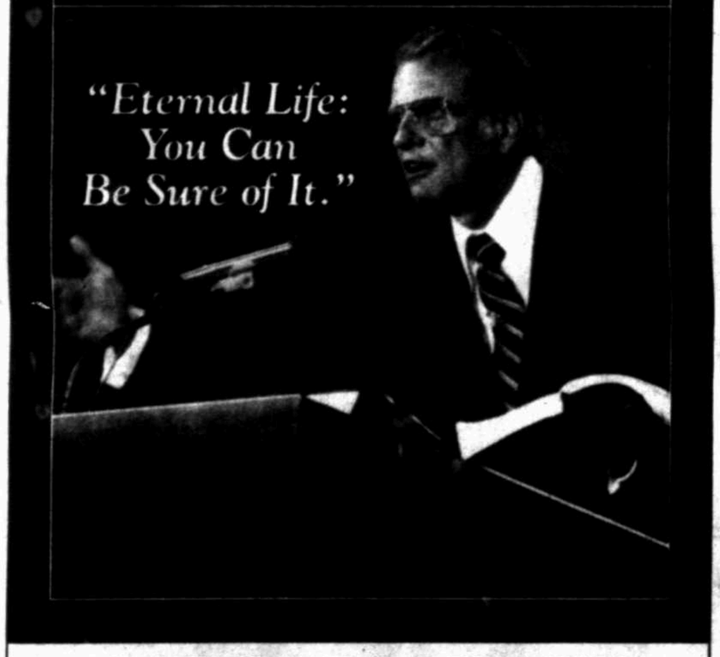

The Koreans in Japan say the money is intended to help their relatives, but intelligence officials say almost all of it winds up in the government Treasury or in the pockets of government officials.

Ever since North Korea began unloading spent fuel rods from its 25-megawatt nuclear reactor last month, yielding a supply of plutonium that could produce four or five nuclear weapons, the U.S. coordinator of North Korean policy, Robert L. Gallucci, has sought a U.N. Security Council resolution that would get Pyongyang's attention. Cutting off the financial transfers has been crucial to that strategy.

Japanese officials have said that even if the Security Council votes to block the financial transfers, they doubt it is possible to stop all of them.

Much of the money is reportedly cash carried by hand by Korean-Japanese with North Korean passports. They visit North Korea via a ship that runs between Niigata, Japan, and ports in North Korea, or by plane through Beijing.

Bosnian factions OK month-long cease-fire

GENEVA (AP) — U.N. mediators wrung a grudging promise Wednesday from Bosnia's warring factions to silence their guns for a month, in the hope that this truce will differ from dozens of others and lead to an end of the war.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic downplayed the significance of the agreement, which takes effect today, calling it "very modest."

Karadzic pointed out there have been numerous cease-fires in the 26-month-old war and "none of them worked." But he promised the Serbs would abide by the latest accord.

The last nationwide truce was before Christmas and held for only a few hours.

Ejup Ganic, vice president of the Muslim-led government, resisted U.N. pressure for a longer-term, more comprehensive agreement. Anything longer might permit the Serbs to keep territories they purged of rival ethnic groups, he argued.

The pact also calls for an exchange of prisoners and information on the missing.

U.N. envoy Yasushi Akashi said hostilities and distrust remains so strong that the two delegations were never in the same room and he had to carry the accord from one to the other for signatures.

"We have to rely on the sides to implement this agreement in good faith," said Akashi when asked what guarantees he had that this agreement would be respected any more than the dozens of others.

Bosnian Serbs originally demanded a one-year truce. U.N. officials were reluctant to consider anything shorter than four months.

But the Bosnian government, strengthened by its recent alliance with the republic's Croats, has made modest advances after two years on the defensive. It is reluctant to let the Serbs cement their military gains with a long-term truce unless a political settlement is reached too.

Each side pledged to refrain from "any offensive military operations or other provocative actions of any kind" and to work through the Red Cross to exchange all prisoners and information on the thousands of people who have vanished.

Haitian police, armed civilians accost U.N. teams

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Police and armed civilians stopped two cars carrying U.N. observers, smashed their radios and seized a handgun, U.N. officials said Wednesday. It was one of the worst confrontations since the observers arrived in 1991.

The chief of the United Nations' human rights observer mission in Haiti protested to army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras.

Hours before the incident Tuesday night, the army-installed government threatened to arrest Premier Robert Malval, who was appointed by ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. Aristide, Haiti's first democratically elected president, was overthrown in a military coup in September 1991.

The U.N. observers arrived in Haiti following the coup.

The incident at a border checkpoint near Port-au-Prince follows a strengthening of U.N. sanctions intended to pressure the coup leaders to step down and allow Aristide to return.

The United States hasn't ruled out military intervention to restore Aristide to power and stop a flow of Haitian boat people toward U.S. shores.

Shouting epithets against international observers, about 20 armed Haitians stopped a U.N. vehicle carrying two security officers from Zaire and Ghana on the road from suburban Petionville to the capital, U.N. spokesman Eric Falt told The Associated Press.

Another U.N. vehicle carrying Haitian U.N. employees was stopped minutes later.

GOSSIP: Columnist Grizzard's widow hears the whispers

ing to Lewis's card- playing buddies." Her brown eyes are flashing fire. "All those so-called friends who were always trying to borrow money from him." Her glare begins to moisten. "Well, I want you to know something." She dabs an eye with a sleeve of her T-shirt. "I did not marry Lewis Grizzard for his money."

Dedra Grizzard hears the whispers.

It's been two months since she married the legendary newspaper columnist in a poignant, 11th-hour ceremony at Emory University Hospital. After much confusion about whether the wedding would occur, Grizzard, given slim odds to survive his fourth heart operation, went ahead and married the woman to whom he had been engaged for more than a year. The groom, sitting in a wheelchair, croaked "I do," posed for some photos, then collapsed in chills, says Dudley Stamps, a childhood friend who helped carry Grizzard back to his room. Four days later, after surgery, the 47-year-old humorist died. His 33-year-old wife, who was by his side when they turned off the respirator, started moving into his Ansley Park house.

Since then, the newlywed widow has drawn gossip like a slit skirt draws stares.

Did she pressure Grizzard into marrying her? Why was his will changed after the ceremony? And what about the snug red dress and gold shoes she wore to the funeral?

It galls Mrs. Grizzard to have to deal with such questions. "All this makes me hyperventilate," she says, pointing out that her life is complicated enough with managing the estate, overseeing her husband's business affairs and coping with grief — hers and her 5½-year-old daughter's.

But, then, gossip was always part of life with Lewis. Controversy was as much a part of Grizzard as old Dawgs, sweet young things and country music rhymes.

The future Mrs. Grizzard started raising eyebrows months before the wedding. Tongues were wagging last year when she, already engaged, appeared in a picture book of ostensibly eligible lovelies called "Atlanta's Most Beautiful Women." Readers could call a 900 number and listen to a message from each woman.

"I didn't realize it was going to look like a solicitation for dates," says Mrs. Grizzard, adding that she never recorded a message. "A friend told me about the book, and I thought it was an honor. I asked Lewis about it, and he said, 'Sure, honey, go for it.'"

Then there's the way she dresses. The widow Grizzard favors provocative clothes such as the lacy, low-cut black outfit she wore at her husband's wake. She acknowledges that her attire has been known to agitate relatives on both sides of the family.

One encounter, retold several times by Grizzard during his last week, has already passed into Lewis lore. When he informed his aunts that he wanted to marry, Grizzard told visitors, one of them cracked: "Lewis, I hope you tell her to keep her breasts covered up so the preacher won't be looking at them."

His aunts were worried about more than racy attire. Like many of his family and friends, they were concerned about him handling the emotional stress of marriage at a time when he had to marshal strength for life-or-death surgery. "I tried to talk him into waiting until after the operation," Grizzard's aunt Jessie Norman says. Failing, she refused to attend the service.

Her attitude reflects a widespread feeling among Grizzard's loved ones that the wedding — however much Lewis loved Dedra — was somehow tainted by circumstance.

"You don't marry on your deathbed," says Una Coutee, another of Grizzard's aunts. She pauses a minute before thinking to add: "Dedra's a very sweet girl and we like her a lot."

In a way, it's fitting that Grizzard's last love affair should come to such a dramatic end. His relationships were anything but dull.

"To be perfectly honest," he wrote in 1982, "I've always gotten along better with dogs than with women."

Grizzard's female troubles are well chronicled, mostly by himself. To put it in baseball terms, he wore a size-three collar at the altar, divorcing three times by the age of 37. In the Buckhead bars where he met many women, he was such a familiar figure they named drinks after him.

After his third divorce in 1983, Grizzard regarded holy matrimony as if it were a Communist plot. Yet even during a decade of defiant bachelorhood, he mused about getting married again.

B.A. Anderson, an Athens businessman who knew Grizzard for years, remembers how the subject often came up. "He'd have a few drinks with a woman and tell her he loved her and wanted her to have his babies. One girl told me he'd said that to her. I told her not to take it too seriously, he told me that the other night. He might tell you anything with a few cocktails in him."

Grizzard's final relationship started the way many others had.

They met at Chops, a posh Buckhead steakhouse. Dedra, there with a girlfriend, was standing at the bar. Lewis spotted her while he was waiting for his date to come back from the restroom. He described the scene in his last book.

"I walked along the bar, and suddenly, I was standing behind all the hair on earth. 'I must see,' I said to myself, 'just what and who is on the other side of that hair.' ... My date likely was flushing now. I had to work fast."

Having just turned 30 and recently divorced, she says, she was happy just to be asked out.

Dedra Michelle Kyle was Grizzard's type. Small-town Southern background, Methodist, politically conservative, lively sense of humor. She's a former homecoming queen, yet her good looks, combined with Grizzard's well-known fondness for adult nightclubs, has led to some unkind speculation about her resume.

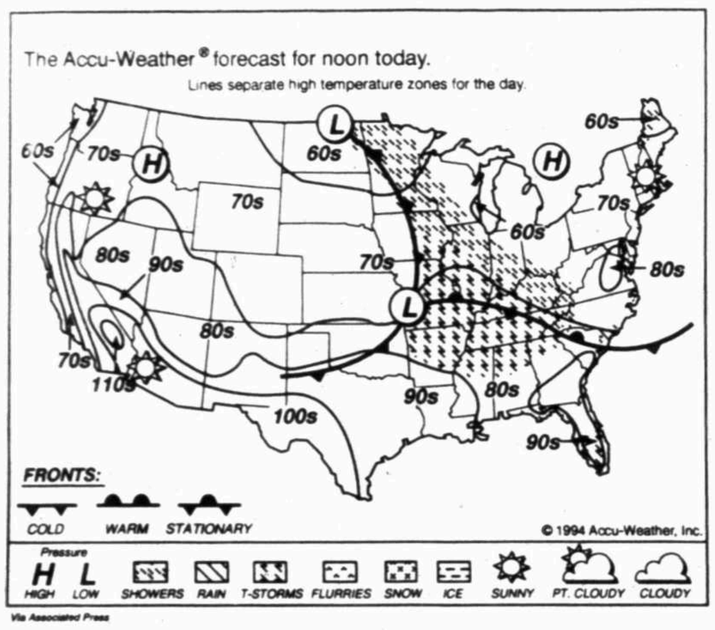

"No, I've never been a stripper," Mrs. Grizzard volunteers.

The young divorcee was visiting a friend in Atlanta when Grizzard picked her out at the bar. They started dating, and within a few months, he sent a moving van to Auburn for her. She took an apartment in Buckhead.

Lewis and Dedra clicked despite their not having much in common. She didn't like sports. He didn't like antiques. She didn't like eating country-fried steak and mashed potatoes three times a week. He didn't like her "ini," food, as he called linguine, fettuccine and other pasta.

What the couple had in common, friends say, was a feisty playfulness, a constant kidding.

National Weather Service forecasters are predicting a 30 percent chance for rain today, with skies remaining partly cloudy all day. The high will reach into the mid-90s and winds will be south at 5-15, becoming northeast at 15-20 mph in the afternoon.

Tonight will continue to be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the upper 60s.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the lower 90s.

Wednesday's overnight low was 77, compared to the record low of 55 set in 1955.

SHOTS: Many winners face tough campaign

in the nation's biggest state.

Elswhere, South Dakota Gov. Walter Miller accepted his primary defeat with grace. "Somebody has to lose, somebody has to win, and this was our time to lose," Miller said.

He was the only incumbent of note ousted, and his loss could hardly be attributed to incumbency: he was elevated to the job just a year ago, and lost to former two-term Gov. William Janklow.

Four other governors survived primaries: Wilson, New Mexico's Bruce King, Iowa's Terry Branstad and Alabama's Jim Folsom. But only Folsom escaped without a warning.

As voters set the lineups for five Senate contests and more than 80 House races, there were no big surprises, and no incumbents defeated. So far, only two House incumbents have lost primaries, compared to 11 at this stage in 1992.

That is hardly a sudden embrace of incumbents: 1992 was the first election after redistricting, and many lawmakers got less friendly districts. And this year, "a lot of the most vulnerable incumbents smartly took themselves out of play and retired," Democratic pollster Geoffrey Garin said

Two years after he spent more than $5 million of his own money to topple a GOP incumbent and win a House seat, Michael Huffington spent nearly $7 million more to win California's GOP Senate nomination.

That trophy in hand, Huffington cast Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein as tax happy.

She eagerly returned fire.

"I've been a moderate. I've been pro-business. ... I've been tough on crime," Feinstein said Wednesday. "He has no record. What has he done for crime? What has he done to help business in California?"

DEGREE: Clinton visits old haunts at Oxford

(From 1A)

dience at the Sheldonian how he had felt, as a young man fresh from Arkansas, a sense of nagging inadequacy at Oxford, the oldest university in the English-speaking world, a place of musty glamour once described by Henry James as "a kind of dim and sacred ideal of the Western intellect."

Looking at the British dons, men in flowing robes and mortarboards, the president said:

"I always felt a mixture of elation and wariness, bordering on intimidation, in your presence. I thought if there was one place in the world I could come and give a speech in the proper language, it was here, and then I heard the degree ceremony. And sure enough, once again at Oxford I was another Yank a half-step behind."

Clinton said he was honored by the degree and the honorary fellowship, adding wryly: "I must say that, as my wife pointed out, I could have gotten neither one of these things on my own. I had to be elected president to do it."

The mood at the ceremony, on the last day of the president's weeklong European tour, was good-natured. And even the sounds drifting in from the chanting students outside, protesting increases in housing and food fees, were the cause of an amused comment by the president, who was once an anti-establishment demonstrator himself, on the Vietnam War.

"Just listen outside here," Clinton said, remarking, "Everything from disputes over the nature of the Italian government to the character of the word 'skinhead' is being debated even as we are here."

At a lunch before the ceremony, Clinton saw the men who were his tutor and porter, and was given some confidential information from his first-year reports on his progress: his teachers had said he was a "satisfactory" student who was "doing well," and said they were "confident we'll see even more improvement in his writing."

Hillary Rodham Clinton was given a claret jug with a Latin inscription hailing her as "the Lady in charge of Universal Health."

After leaving Rhodes House, the president walked to Blackwell's book store. On the way, some students unfurled a sign reading, "Inhale Next Time, Bill."

CURFEWS: Juvenile crime rises 165 percent

Delinquent conduct includes homicide, sexual and aggravated assault, robbery, burglary, theft, motor vehicle theft, weapons violations and drug and other offenses.

Violent crimes — homicide, sexual assault, robbery and aggravated assault — totaled 8,533 last year, an increase from 7,217 in 1992. State records show 6,146 juveniles were involved in violent crimes in 1991, with 5,002 the previous year.

By contrast, only 2,762 were reported in 1985.

Those rising numbers helped spur officials from Panhandle cities like Dimmitt, Floydada and Plainview to Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Dallas to enact ordinances that, generally, prohibit teen-agers from being on the streets unescorted after 11 p.m. or midnight.

Fort Worth had a curfew, but repealed it when Dallas lost a federal court challenge of a similar ordinance. An appeals court overturned that ruling, action that was upheld last month by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Fort Worth City Council expects to revive its curfew as early as next week in the wake of a 321 percent increase in the number of Tarrant County juveniles accused of violent crimes over the past four years.

"The majority of the kids that are violent are gang members," said Assistant District Attorney Kenneth Mullin, head of the juvenile section. "We get drive-by shootings, walk-by robberies for shoes, and robberies for jackets. And we keep seeing more and more of them."

In 1989, juvenile authorities referred 287 youths younger than 17 to the Tarrant County District Attorney's Office in investigations of violent offenses. By 1993, that number had grown to 1,210.

"Curfews make a difference. Around the state, residents are starting to reclaim their neighborhoods," Ms. Dow said.

In Odessa, where police records show 1,999 juvenile arrests last year, the Mayor's Drug and Crime Task Force is beginning statistical research that could clear the way for a curfew.

WINDOW: Award-winner is World Cup ticket

(From 1A)

The window display — which showcased a new line of equipment released by Patrick-USA in conjunction with the 1994 World Cup — won the teens a four-day, three-night trip to San Francisco and tickets to see Switzerland play Colombia.

Since the brothers are both minors, a parent or guardian must accompany them on the trip. Therefore, Sean and his father will be going to California, while Tim takes a separate congratulatory vacation to Branson, Mo., to see a few of his favorite performers, Parnell said.

Both young men are accomplished soccer players, Parnell said. Tim has played in England and Sean has played throughout Scandanavia.

"Both boys have been overseas to play. They're very good at what they do," Parnell said.

Because Sean has a mixture of European and American Indian heritage, he has dark hair and skin that stands out against the light-complexioned Scandanavians.

Before one game against a Swedish team, Sean found a feather, afixed it to his headband and engaged in an imitation of an Indian war dance, with his teammates providing percussion accompaniment. Parnell said this completely unnerved the Swedish team. "They went into shock and didn't come out of it until half time."

Sean's goal is to one day become an architectural engineer, but not before making the most of the growing U.S. interest in soccer.

He plans to continue his soccer career and hopes for a scholarship to a university in Evansville, Ind. But because of the great number of schools offering soccer scholarships, these plans could change.

Sean said there are more soccer scholarships in the United States than there are football scholarships. "You can fund a soccer team for a pittance of what it costs to field a football team," Parnell said.

Sean has played varsity soccer with Midland High School since his sophomore year and will continue next year as a senior, he said.

Young Tim already is cultivating a reputation as a demon in the goal-keeper's position. He has a list of dueling scars, including a concussion and broken ankle in what is supposed to be a non-contact sport, Tim said.

"It takes a special breed of cat to be a goal keeper — they take all the blame and get none of the credit," Parnell said.

Tim — who is to attend San Jacinto Junior High School next year — is preparing for a goal-keeper's camp at Texas Christian University, which will feature workshops with internationally renowned soccer coaches.

EDGE: City still expects opposition electronics store at the site. The City Council unanimously sided with vocal area residents.

Shea once again seeks a zone change. If successful, there are plans for Olive Garden and Black-Eyed Pea restaurants — and a Best Buy consumer electronics store.

What's different are plans to build a strip of town houses behind the proposed businesses on the loop and between the neighborhood south of Lanham Street.

City Council representative Pat Schneider, District 1, said many residents seemed more receptive to development with the town houses acting as a buffer zone.

"I think the majority of the people there (at the town meeting) were in favor of it," she said.

Still, there does remain some residents in opposition. Many are concerned about increased traffic and devaluation of homes due to retail development nearby.

Neighbors were concerned about traffic, especially in light of two nearby schools: Emerson Elementary and Goddard Junior High.

Traffic flow and the location of business entrances were discussed.

In addition to Ms. Schneider, those attending Tuesday's town meeting were planning, engineering and traffic representatives from the city, Shea, and about 80 interested individuals, most from the adjacent neighborhood.

Despite the apparent strides in reaching a more comfortable middle ground between residents and developers, city officials still expect opposition at Tuesday's public hearing.

"It's hit, hasn't it," Young asked. "I've turned down about 20 calls today."

Larry Jones, representative for Central Power & Light, said customers in 44 South Texas counties used 3,531 megawatts of electricity by 4 p.m. Tuesday. The previous record was 3,518 megawatts, set Aug. 25.

"It's not unusual to set a new record, but normally that record is set later on in the summer," Jones said. "It's indicative of a new hot summer ahead of us."

"We normally hit summer demand at the end of July," concurred John Hardesty of Texas Utilities Electric in Dallas. "This seems like an early start on a hot month and high usage."

Ex-'Remington Steele' to be new James Bond

LONDON (AP) — The name is Brosnan, Pierce Brosnan, and he's finally got a license to kill.

The former star of TV's "Remington Steele" was anointed the new James Bond on Wednesday, the fifth actor to play 007 since Sean Connery donned a white dinner jacket for "Dr. No" in 1962.

Devotees of political correctness will have to deal with the return of 007's suave, sexist ways in "Goldeneye," the first Bond film since 1989.

"You're dealing with fantasy, so political correctness has to be eased up a little," Brosnan told reporters at the Regent Hotel.

"You can't take it so much on the nose."

Brosnan was first approached seven years ago to play the film world's most famous British spy, but had to turn it down because of his TV contract. Welsh actor Timothy Dalton got the part.

This time, the 43-year-old Brosnan said, "I'm a little older, a little wiser."

Roger Moore and George Lazenby are the two other actors to fill Bond's impeccably tailored dinner jackets. David Niven also portrayed Bond in the 1967 spoof of the Bond movies, "Casino Royale."

Brosnan's aim is to portray a Bond who is "more flinty, with a little more humor. We want to see beneath the surface of Bond and also what Ian Fleming (author of the Bond novels) has portrayed. You can't stray away from that."

"Goldeneye" will again feature Bond, his Aston Martin and an exotic leading lady — in this case, a Russian, since two-thirds of this saga of arms dealing is set there. That role has yet to be cast.

Directed by Martin Campbell, "Goldeneye" is expected to begin a 20-week shoot in October and be released in the United States in July 1995. In addition to Russia, locations include the Caribbean, Mexico, and Monte Carlo.

Co-producer Michael G. Wilson would not discuss the budget for the first Bond movie since "Licence To Kill" in 1989. Thirty-two years ago, "Dr. No" was filmed for $850,000.

Is there still life in the Bond formula?

"I sincerely hope so; otherwise, I'll be out of a job," said co-producer Barbara Broccoli, daughter of Albert R. (Cubby) Broccoli, who will be producing his 17th Bond film.

Six-month drought leaves Puerto Rico parched

Capital's reservoir is expected to reach critical level in late June.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Many residents of this tropical island find the sight of the vast turquoise sea incongruous when their water taps run dry every other day in an effort to conserve water.

A 6-month drought has left Puerto Rico parched while the water level of the aging reservoir that serves the San Juan metropolitan area each day falls closer to the critical stage.

A desperate water authority this week started dredging Lake Carraizo, trying to wring a little more water out of the reservoir's mud and make supplies to the city last until mid-July.

No one wants to think about what will happen after that.

Water dominates newspaper headlines, with more than half the island's 3.6 million residents under rationing.

Since May 7, most households in the San Juan metropolitan area have been going without water for 16-hour stretches, from 1 p.m. until 5 a.m., every other day.

People now have to plan their activities around taking showers, stocking up on bottled water and filling sinks and buckets for dishes and toilets.

Cars are going unwashed and plants are wilting, but the reservoir's water level inexorably sinks closer to the critical point.

According to the San Juan Star, the water in Lake Carraizo was 117.4 feet deep Wednesday, down from 118.8 feet a week earlier. Water authorities estimated the lake would reach the critical level of 95.1 feet in late June. It's capable of holding 134.5 feet of water.

But the 31-year-old reservoir is so filled with silt that 65 percent of that capacity is unusable.

The Aqueduct and Sewer Authority has been studying the problem for years, but has not yet initiated the arduous overhaul process, according to authority technician Juan Morel.

Gov. Pedro Rossello on Wednesday blasted the water authority for "many years of neglect.

Oil industry's quest is vital for NAFTA

It was good to hear U.S. Ambassador to Mexico James R. Jones telling oilmen in San Antonio earlier this week that the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) holds great potential for the U.S. oil and gas industry. Over the next several years, the relationship between the oil industry in Mexico and the U.S. is likely to change significantly due in no small part to NAFTA.

So, as Jones put it, the new relationship offers an outstanding opportunity for oilmen in this nation to play an integral role in the future development of oil and gas in Mexico. Jones even speculated that Mexico will look to the oil industry in the United States for expertise. That's wise because the oil industry in this country has the leading experts in the world in drilling for and developing oil and gas reserves.

Jones also told the oilmen that it is essential to make the commercial side of the NAFTA pact work before getting involved in the agreement's social or environmental aspects. That almost goes without saying, but he's absolutely correct. Nothing is more foolhardy than for government to attempt to bring about social or ecological change if there is not a profit margin in the endeavor to justify the expenditure of both time and money on the part of business. To do so violates the basic premise of business, which is to make a profit.

We think the trade agreement truly does offer great opportunities to domestic oilmen and if it does, oilmen will respond by pursuing business prospects with Mexico. Oilmen are by nature willing to take risks and to go to great lengths to achieve success. That is one characteristic of the oil industry that sets it apart from many others.

In business, the primary motivation is the quest for a profit. If the money is not there, oilmen will not stay involved in a project. They're realistic where the bottom line is concerned.

No doubt that realism will show through in the domestic oil industry's dealings with Mexico under NAFTA.

GEORGE WILL
N. Korea may be threat to bright future

WASHINGTON — While the president has been in a retrospective frame of mind in recent days, ongoing history has been showing its teeth, still sharp.

Six Junes after D-Day confirmed the United States as the century's only superpower on civilization's side, aggression on the Korean peninsula became the first test of U.S. resolve in that role.

North Korea's dash to manufacture nuclear weapons for its ballistic missiles, and probably for export, may be a decisive event for the 21st century. If North Korea causes the entire nuclear non-proliferation structure to collapse, the next century may be even more dangerously anarchic than this one has been.

The undiscourageable Clinton administration, with its endless and painfully ingenuous offers to chat with North Korea, is revealing that its mentality is like that of the last Democratic administration — Cyrus Vance Redux. President Carter's secretary of state (whose aides included the man now secretary of state) was (like the current secretary) a corporate lawyer with the blinkered liberalism of people who believe that life is a setting of agreed-upon rules and splittable differences.

The Clinton administration, with a learning curve as flat as Kansas, cannot wrap its mind around the thought that Kim Il Sung does not aspire to domesticity within the "community of nations." He has different dreams and aspirations.

There is no reason to suppose any effectiveness from economic sanctions designed to "isolate" a regime that relishes isolation from the world's contaminants, such as freedom. And if Kim Il Sung were bothered by the privations of his people, he would not be a communist.

His goal is the preservation and independence of the state he founded. Nuclear weapons — perhaps only nuclear weapons — can serve that end, as weapons and export commodities.

The administration should communicate to North Korea two thoughts. First, if it attacks south there will be no "Saddam solution" — no endgame with the regime intact. Second, the administration believes it has viable military options regarding the nuclear weapons program, as noted in Sen. John McCain's speech of May 24.

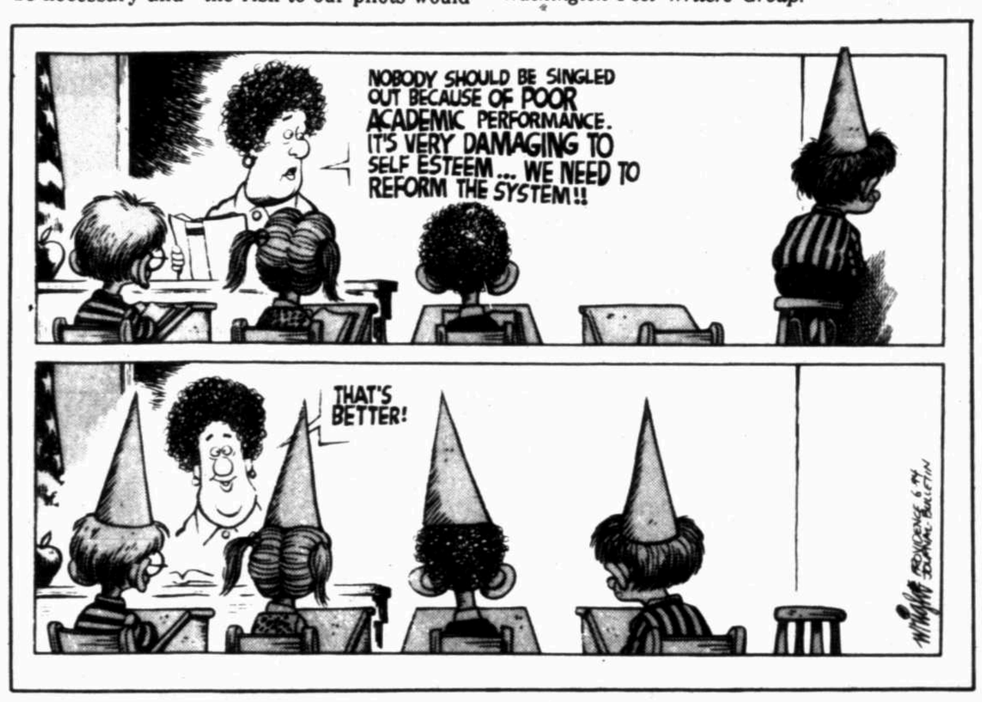

McCain (R-Ariz.), a former Navy pilot and current member of the Armed Services Committee, has paid war's price (in wounds, and in more than five years as a POW) in a lost war, so he knows the terrors of war and the limits to what force can achieve. And he does not call for military measures "immediately."

But McCain says North Korea's nuclear ambitions may be "the defining crisis of the post-Cold War period" because if these ambitions are realized, the result may be the exponential growth of nuclear-armed regimes.

Because the targets are hardened and defended, manned attacks, says McCain, would be necessary and "the risk to our pilots would be considerable." That fact must be considered in the context of the Clinton administration. Wobbly about everything except the imperative need for a new entitlement program (health care), this administration may not be sturdy enough to undertake a high-stakes military operation.

But President Clinton, having delivered all those recent speeches about the good done by military measures in the 1940s, should remember this as he considers the high-stakes science of primitive North Korea: The Second World War, which began with mounted cavalry and ended with a clap of nuclear thunder, showed what mighty shoves science can give to events when in the service of determined regimes, both good and bad.

Mob finds Rostenkowski guilty before trial

Slats Grobnik hoisted his glass and cheerfully said: "How's about a toast to Big Danny, a hometown kid who made good in the big time and done us all proud."

Uh, which Big Danny are you talking about?

"What 'ya, stupid? There's only one Big Danny from Chicago. The top pierogi, the big kielbasa."

Royko

I gather, then, that you are referring to Dan Rostenkowski?

"You betcha. To the rest of the country, Big Dan is now Mr. Chicagah, and there ain't nobody more entitled to that great honor."

Wait a minute. He has just been indicted for all sorts of financial mischief. And as a Chicagoan, that makes you proud?

"Sure. He's the talk of the country: All day on CNN, they been yapping about Danny. Every radio talk show, it's Danny. All the networks, it's Danny."

Well, they may be talking about him from coast to coast and border to border. But what they are talking about are the allegations that he has been tapping the till. In other words, they are saying he is a monumental crook.

"Yeah, that's what I mean. Would they get that excited if he was from Iowa or San Francisco? Nah. But he's from Chicagah, so to all the rubes that means he's got to be a crook."

But Rostenkowski has been accused of some rather serious violations of the law, for which he could be sent to prison.

"No, he ain't just been accused. He's already been tried and convicted."

Nonsense. The trial hasn't even started.

"Hey, there are three trials. First, there's the trial where the yuppie scalp-hunter lawyers in the Justice Department leak everything to their pals at The New York Times and the Washington Post."

Yes, there have been some rather blatant violations of legal ethics.

"Right. And next there's the trial on TV, in the newspapers, on the radio talk shows. Now, if you been watching or listening or reading, you know he's already guilty."

But Rostenkowski will have his day in court.

"Sure. And if he beats the rap, about half the people in this country will think it was fixed anyway. And if you ask them what he was supposed to have did, they won't know. And if you ask them who their own congressman is, they won't know that, either. But the one thing they know is they are better than Danny."

I am shocked that you would defend a politician accused of improper behavior.

"Lemme ask you. How long has he been in Congress?"

More than 30 years.

"Who put him there?"

The voters in his district.

"Did they ever think Danny was an Eagle Scout?"

Hardly!

Graduates look forward to fat-free, lotto world

To the graduating class of 1994 — I salute you.

You are the future and will carry on the work our generation has started.

Buchwald

This is what we have to offer you: We are the only country on earth that can give you a "fat-free" world.

Not to mention the myriad of diet drinks with all the necessary vitamins to make you healthy and alert.

When you leave this university you will have a choice of thousands of shampoos, moisturizers, overnight skin creams, sunscreens, and perfumes so powerful that you will become irresistible to the opposite sex.

Wait, there's more. At this very moment, you can purchase the car of your choice with no money down and 48 months to pay, not including tags, taxes and delivery charges.

As you walk around this great nation of ours you will notice store after store window painted white with large signs reading "For Lease" or "For Rent." We are leaving you all of them. Other stores carry equally large signs which say "Going Out of Business."

Everybody declaring bankruptcy looks to your generation to bail them out with taxpayers' money.

What else do we have for you? Go to any department store or shopping mall and we will give you a 50 percent discount plus 25 percent off the price marked on the tag. This offer is good until Saturday.

The sale has nothing to do with big D-Day reductions on refrigerators, television sets and Nintendo games.

We are offering you something that no other generation has ever had — you can now win $40 million in the state lottery. All you have to do is pick the right seven numbers, which should not be a problem, particularly if you are good at math.

Wait, there's more. Because we believe in you, we will provide health insurance to you at a price you can afford — with a $5,000 deductible.

If you choose to go into government service we will guarantee you legal advice in case you have to give testimony before a special prosecutor.

And speaking of sexual harassment — I urge you never to enter a room (any room) in an office building without witnesses. There are not enough lawyers graduating today to handle all the cases being filed by members of one sex or another who feel that they had been wronged.

Our generation is so proud of what your generation has accomplished. If you hadn't bought CDs with our money, God knows where the American music industry would be today. Your devotion to rock music and concerts is the difference between a stagnant and thriving economy.

So the moment has come. As you accept your diploma remember that more than ever before your success depends on whether you wear Nikes or Reeboks.

My biggest hope for you this morning is that, when you are out in the cold world on your own, the person who delivers your Domino's pizza takes more than 30 minutes, so that you will not have to pay for it.

I also pray that whatever headache relief you take will act twice as fast as the one you took in the past.

Good luck. God bless and, if you have thank-you notes to write for your graduation gifts, do it fast before the U.S. postage rates go up.

Area gas stations 'gouge' public

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the owners of the gasoline stations in Midland that raised their prices from around $1.06/gallon to $1.15/gallon (regular unleaded price). Seeing this must have been a relief to the veterans who this holiday was supposed to honor, to know that capitalism and the free market were being preserved right here in Midland.

Now I am sure that this paper will receive a reply from the owners of these stations saying how that they are barely scraping by, and this price gouging, oops, I mean hike, was necessary to make adjustments for some new tax requirement, or just a vain attempt to keep up with those escalating oil prices on the international market. The most I ever remember paying for gas was around $1.32/gallon and that was when the price of oil was in the mid- to high-$40 range. I am sure that there must be some formula where the square root of pi is equal to the circumference of a perfect circle that will explain to me why we in West Texas pay more for the gasoline that is produced and refined in our own backyards than almost everywhere else in the state, or country for that matter.

Needless to say, at this increased price I could not afford the gasoline to drive around town and accurately survey which stations were taking part in this effort, but I did notice that the Chevron stations seemed particularly susceptible to these price hiking/gouging/equalization efforts, although they were by no means the only stations to do so. In closing, I would like to ask the owners of these stations to think of the people in this area who have lost their jobs due to the downturn in the oil and gas industry. It is ironic that someone who received a pink slip last week now has the added financial burden of paying six to eight cents more for a gallon of gas.

Reader targets tobacco, alcohol

On the letter from Linda Hamil: yes, you can walk away from a smoker and you can walk away from alcohol. There are people that do die from smoking, not by their own but from someone else's. There should be stiffer laws on the cigarette makers.

There should be stiffer laws on the people that sell the alcohol also. Families hurt from both of these, but are they going to make stiffer laws on those who get and sell the drugs to our children? Sending a person to jail doesn't help. They need to be put to work so they can help their families stay off welfare.

Alamo musicians, teacher shine

On the evening of May 26, I attended the Alamo Junior High School Bands' annual spring concert. The concert consisted of selections played, first by beginning seventh graders and second, by advanced eighth graders.

In the past, I have attended other similar school functions, which amounted to the very ordinary performances you would expect from beginning seventh and eight graders. This performance, however, exceeded my highest expectations, as the youngsters involved displayed talents of a much more experienced group. Each group consisted of well over a hundred participants. Their musical aptitude, competence and professionalism were absolutely amazing.

A large part of the credit for this performance, of course, must be given to the student participation. However, there had to be a director who possessed the skill, inspiration and devotion necessary to bring a group of raw musicians to this point of excellence. Rick Villarreal, Alamo's band director, is one of those teachers who will be remembered, by his students, as a person who touched their lives, during the course of their education. It is apparent, from the quality of their performance, that he has instilled in each student, enthusiasm, love and appreciation for good music.

Officials: China may defy moratorium, detonate bomb soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — In defiance of an international moratorium, China is ready to conduct an underground nuclear test, possibly within days, Clinton administration officials said Wednesday.

The Chinese have lowered a nuclear device into a testing hole at the Lop Nor site in Xinjiang Province and have been sealing it with concrete, one official said. Once that process is complete, the test can proceed.

"It's about to happen," said a senior official, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

There was speculation earlier this year that the Chinese test might take place in May. But that timing would have resulted in the test coinciding with the U.S. debate over whether to renew China's most-favored nation trading status.

Several members of Congress suggested in April that although absence of nuclear testing was not a condition for renewal of MFN, a test in May would have strengthened the opposition to allowing China to continue sending its products to the United States under the lowest possible tariff rates.

President Clinton ordered renewal of MFN and directed it no longer be conditioned on China's human rights record.

Ignoring appeals from the United States and other countries, the Chinese conducted an underground nuclear test last October and made clear their intention to go ahead with additional tests.

The Chinese have pledged to support enactment of a comprehensive test ban by 1996, but would continue their test program until the agreement is in place.

Within hours of the test last October, Clinton ordered the Energy Department to prepare for possible resumption of U.S. nuclear tests.

He said the United States "deeply regrets" the Chinese action and urged Beijing to "refrain from further nuclear tests and to join other nuclear powers in a global moratorium."

The Chinese said their nuclear program is "entirely for the purpose of self-defense."

Employer mandate health legislation gains steam in D.C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite opposition from lawmakers in both parties, Democratic-controlled committees pushed ahead Wednesday with requirements for employers to provide health insurance coverage for their workers.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee voted largely along party lines to approve a so-called employer mandate as it labored to complete a comprehensive health-reform bill by week's end. The panel softened the burden on small businesses.

Across the Capitol, Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee met privately to review draft legislation that also relies on employer-financed coverage as the means of moving toward President Clinton's goal of universal health care. A public committee session is set for today, and the acting chairman of the committee, Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., said he hoped to move the bill towards the floor by the end of the month.

The issue of mandates has emerged as one of the most controversial in the health-care debate, and is partially responsible for the delay all five House and Senate committees have experienced in trying to send a bill to the floor.

In a further reflection of the difficulties facing health care legislation, the Senate committee voted narrowly to uphold one of the principal cost control measures in the bill, a so-called premium cap that would give a government board the power to limit what insurance companies could charge for coverage.

Sen. David Durenberger's attempt to remove the provision failed, 9-8. Two Democrats, Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland and Chris Dodd of Connecticut, which is home to several insurance companies, sided with Durenberger and the other Republicans on the committee.

The vote in the Senate committee came amid fresh evidence of the opposition among Republicans and some moderate to conservative Democrats to coverage mandates.

Review: Whitewater checking account regularly overdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $100,000 in Whitewater Development Co. checks were written with the company's account overdrawn, then were covered with deposits from firms controlled by President and Mrs. Clinton's business partner, a review of the land venture's finances indicates.

An Associated Press examination of Whitewater records found that it sometimes took upward of two weeks to correct Whitewater's overdrafts in the mid-1980s, with money coming from at least eight firms controlled by James McDougal.

Nearly all the companies — including Whitewater — had their accounts at Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, which McDougal owned. Madison's later failure cost taxpayers $47 million and eventually triggered the investigation of Whitewater and Clinton finances by special counsel Robert Fiske.

The AP review showed no Whitewater checks written by either of the Clintons.

It identified 18 McDougal deposits totaling $107,856 over a 21-month period starting in September 1984.

These deposits are a key to S&L investigators' allegations that Whitewater was used as part of a scheme, known as a check kiting, in which money was drained from Madison to McDougal companies through a string of revolving bad checks.

The allegations were turned over to Fiske in the form of 10 criminal referrals.

The Clintons were equal partners in Whitewater with McDougal and his then-wife, Susan.

In a statement, Clinton attorney David Kendall said the "Clintons were not involved in the operation and management of Whitewater Development Co. and did not keep its records."

When McDougal was felled by a stroke and depression in the late 1980s, Kendall said, Hillary Rodham Clinton "took certain limited but necessary steps to wrap up and wind down the company's affairs properly."

Panel: Fifty percent of U.S. adults suffer from calcium deficiency

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Half of America's adults are not getting enough calcium, and that's contributing to a plague of brittle bones and fractures that costs the health-care system $10 billion a year, a federal committee said Wednesday.

A committee of experts assembled by the National Institutes of Health said the current recommended daily allowance for calcium is too low, leading to weakened bones for children, adults and, especially, for elderly women.

"Calcium is an essential nutrient for developing and maintaining strong bones," the committee said.

And, yet, said Dr. John P. Bilezikian, a professor of medicine at Columbia University and chairman of the committee, most Americans are calcium poor.

"Recent nutrition surveys have shown that the average diet of Americans has a calcium intake considerably below the recommended daily allowance," said Bilezikian at a news conference.

Without proper levels of calcium, the panel said, children enter adulthood with a weakened skeleton, increasing their risk later for osteoporosis, the brittle bone disease. Inadequate calcium in later years further aggravates the problem.

Osteoporosis affects more than 25 million Americans, causing an estimated 1.5 million fractures and leading to medical costs of about $10 billion, said Bilezikian.

New studies, the committee found, show that recommended levels of calcium now carried on most food labels are far below what nature requires for strong bones.

In its report, the panel recommended these levels of calcium, with the currently recommended daily allowance in parenthesis:

Children and young adults, ages 11 through 24: 1,200 to 1,500 milligrams (1,200 mg).

Women, age 25 to 50: 1,000 mg. (800 mg).

Men, age 25 and older: 1,000 mg. (800 mg).

Postmenopausal women: 1,000 to 1,500 mg. (800 mg).

Women over age 65: 1,500 mg. (800 mg).

For very young children, the committee endorsed the current recommended levels of 400 mgs daily for the first half year of life, 600 mg from age six months to one year, and 800 mg to age 10.

Bone absorption occurs in women for up to eight years after menopause due to the drop in levels of the hormone estrogen, the panel said. Increased calcium does little to reduce this bone loss, but it can be controlled with hormone therapy. A boost in calcium levels to 1,500 mg after age 65, however, "may reduce the rates of bone loss in selected areas of the skeleton, such as the . . . neck."

The panel said that during the adolescent growth spurt, calcium can accumulate in bones at the rate of 400 to 500 mg a day.

"Peak adult bone mass. . .is largely achieved by age 20 years, although important additional bone mass may accumulate.

Scientists warn of major Bay Area quake

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — The chances of the Bay Area being clobbered by a major earthquake in the next 30 years have gone from a worrisome possibility to a near-certainty, experts say.

Growing evidence indicates some Bay Area faults are deadlier than anyone guessed four years ago, when the U.S. Geological Survey officially forecast a 67 percent chance of another Loma Prieta-type killer quake by the year 2020. One of the agency's top experts, David Schwartz, said Tuesday that the likelihood may approach 90 percent.

Since the October 1989 quake, researchers have found that some faults are slipping faster than originally suspected. Also, they have found new faults or suspected faults, including two in the southern half of San Francisco Bay that run under or ominously close to San Francisco International Airport, Candlestick

■ More national news/3D

Park and the San Mateo Bridge.

Taken as a whole, these findings indicate the likelihood of another Loma Prieta-type quake — one with a magnitude around 7.0 on the Richter scale — in the next three decades should be "substantially higher" than 67 percent, Schwartz said at a USGS conference on Treasure Island. "A 90 percent likelihood is probably not an unreasonable number."

Worse, whereas the Loma Prieta quake was centered in the sparsely populated Santa Cruz Mountains, the next quake's epicenter will probably hit crowded areas. It's more likely to happen on the Peninsula segment of the San Andreas Fault, or the Hayward Fault in the East Bay, or the Rodgers (CQ) Creek (fault in Sonoma County).

Mourners file out of the Memorial services, held for Oralia Corrales, Friday, June 3, 1994, after they paid their last respects to one of Midland's "First Citizens".

Recollections of Oralia

"Assembled by the staff of Nueva Vista"

On Friday, June 3rd, when Oralia Corrales was laid to rest in Midland's Resthaven Memorial Park, Reverend Richard F. Spencer - a friend and spiritual co-worker of Corrales' for many years - reiterated a point he had made earlier that day at a memorial service where hundreds gathered to pay their last respects to one of the community's "First Citizens".

While Corrales' body was being laid to rest, said Spencer, her spirit would live on, not only in the heaven to which all Christian spirits will go, but in her children and grandchildren, in the causes she had championed over the years to make Midland a better place to live for all it's citizens. And most of all, in the memories and recollections of those who had been fortunate enough to know Corrales, and whose lives - as Spencer pointed out - were richer for having known her.

Many of those recollections came to the

Recuerdos de Oralia

El viernes, 3 de junio, cuando se apostaron los restos para el descanso de Oralia Corrales en el Parque Conmemorativo Resthaven de Midland, el Reverendo Richard F. Spencer- un amigo y co-trabajador espiritual de Corrales por muchos años- reiteró un ese día en un servicio conmemorativo donde centenares se reunieron a pagar sus respetos a una de las "Primeras Ciudadanas" de la comunidad .

Mientras el cuerpo de Corrrales descansa, dijo Spencer, su espíritu vivirá, no sólo en el cielo al que todos los espíritus Cristianos irán, pero en sus niños y nietos, en las causas en la que ella fue campeona sobre los años en que hizo de Midland un lugar mejor para vivir para todo los ciudadanos. Y más que todo, en las memorias y recolecciones de esos quienes fueron lo bastante afortunados en conocer a Corrales, y cuyas vidas - como Spencer señaló - fueron mejores por haberla conocido.

Muchas de esas recolecciones aparecieron en la superficie el martes, 31 de mayo, cuándo se escuchó la noticia de que Corrales había fallecido difundiendose a través de la comunidad, y a través del sudoeste. Esas memorias dan alguna indicación del impacto que Corrales tenía en Midland cuando tocaron sobre asuntos, políticos, desarrollo de la comunidad, religión, y familia.

"Ella fue la segunda persona que conocí cuándo llegué a Midland," recordó Elvia Hernandez, ex-directora ejecutiva de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland. "La razón que la conocí, fue porque ella fue la agente de seguros de mi hijo. Y dijo, 'Mamá, usted necesita hablar con Oralia.' "

" Y tuvimos un almuerzo juntas, y había traído mi resume, y lo miró. Y ella fue maravillosa! Tuvimos el almuerzo, y entonces fuimos a su oficina, y al día siguiente fuimos a ver a Roger Robles. Y no paso mucho tiempo cuando ya estaba trabajando. "

"Education/Educacion"

Master Teachers at Odessa College

By Jeffrey McDonald

West Texas was well represented when the National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development presented it's annual awards of excellence in Austin.

Eleven members of the Odessa College faculty were among those from across the state who were recognized as "Master Teachers" for their outstanding contributions to education. But even before the awards are announced, these candidates must first be nominated by their peers, by fellow members of the faculty.

"We do this annually, where we pick eight to ten of our faculty to recognize," explained Dr. Bernard Sedate, vice president for instruction at Odessa College. "They are selected by the instructional and administrative staff. They are recommended by their peers, and then the supervisors select from that list."

"There are some criteria that we do ask these people to meet. Their use of technology in the teaching profession, their mastery of the subject matter, their enthusiasm, and their commitment to the overall quality of education."

Maestro de Maestros de la Universidad de Odessa

Por Jeffrey McDonald

El Oeste de Tejas estuvo bien representado cuándo el Instituto Nacional por Empleados y Desarrollo Organizacional presentó sus premios anuales de excelencia en Austin.

Once miembros de la facultad de la Universidad de Odessa fueron entre esos que a través del estado reconocieron como "Maestros de Maestros" por sus contribuciones sobresalientes a la educación. Pero aun antes que se anuncien los premios, estos candidatos deben de ser nombrados primero por sus compañeros, por los miembros de la academia de la facultad.

"Hacemos esto anualmente, donde escogemos de ocho a diez de nuestra facultad para reconocer," explicó Dr. Bernard Sedate, presidente suplente de enseñanza en la Universidad de Odessa-"se seleccionan por el personal técnico istruccional y administrativo. Se recomiendan por sus compañeros, y entonces los supervisores seleccionan de esa lista. "

"Hay alguna criterio que preguntamos a esta gente. Su uso de tecnología en la profesión de la enseñanza, su dominio de la materia, su entusiasmo, y su compromiso a la calidad de la educación. "

Una nativa de Lima, Peru, Rosana Maldonado ha sido maestra en la Universidad de Odessa por tres años. Antes de eso, daba clases en la Universidad Tejas Tech mientras obtenia su título de Maestría. Antes de eso, enseñó en Peru.

"Me siento muy orgullosa y muy satisfecha con mi trabajo," dijo Maldonado. "Y pienso que es una manera muy agradable de decir a los maestros que aprecian nuestro trabajo, y lo qué hacemos por nuestros estudiantes.

Maldonado explicó que mide su éxito en la educación por la realización y desarrollo de sus estudiantes. "Cuándo veo el progreso de mis estudiantes, y lo que les he enseñado, lo han apren-

Small business breaking down barriers

Contrary to popular perception, recent studies show that Latinos, including immigrants, greatly stimulate the economy through their high rate of job-producing businesses.

A federal commission, established after the 1986 immigration reform law to study the economic impact of immigrants, as well as an Urban Institute study released last week, affirm this.

Linda Wong, general counsel for Rebuild Los Angeles (created after the 1992 Los Angeles disturbances), says that Latino immigrants, both documented and undocumented, bring with them an entrepreneurial spirit. "Instead of blaming immigrants," she says, "government should harness that spirit."

California's anti-immigrant atmosphere is costing the state business. In 1993, Mexico did $6.5 billion dollars' worth of business with California but more than $18.5 billion with Texas, says Fernando Oaxaca, a Los Angeles businessman. "The difference is in the attitudes of Texas Gov. Ann Richards and Calif. Gov. Pete Wilson."

A study recently conducted by the Latino Futures Research Group (LFRG) in Los Angeles found that in Los Angeles County the percentage increase in Latino-owned businesses outpace those of white, black, or Asian businesses. LFRG estimated that Latinos own 33 percent of Los Angeles County's firms. But add the underground economy and the number jumps to 42 percent.

A recent national study by Hispanic Business magazine shows that since 1979, the number of Hispanic-owned firms has grown from 225,000 to 524,000. The number may already be as high as 800,000, points out Hector Cantu, its managing editor. And, he says, much of that growth is attributable to first-generation Hispanic business owners.

In New York City, Dominicans, the vast majority of whom are recent immigrants, are the major force in the food industry. While they represent 40 percent of the Latino population, they own 70 percent of the Latino-owned businesses and provide the bulk of the employment opportunities for Dominicans. "We have done it through hard work and without any support from government," says Agustin Garcia, president of the Dominican Chamber of Commerce in New York.

As a result of their success, Dominicans send $2 billion annually to the Dominican Republic and a good portion goes to business formation there, says Garcia. Through matching grants, the governments of Mexico and Central America should facilitate similar practices, thus easing immigration pressures, says Linda Wong, noting that $5 billion is remitted annually to Mexico.

Daniel Rodriguez, president of Denver's Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, says much of the growth of Latino-owned businesses in the border states as well as in other states such as Colorado and Illinois is attributable to entrepreneurial Mexican immigrants.

It is these same business owners who are becoming instrumental in the deconstruction of economic and cultural barriers along our southern border.

When the Border Patrol proposed constructing a steel wall in the El Paso/Juarez area this past December, the El Paso chambers of commerce led a vociferous and successful opposition. Many attribute the bridging of borders to globalization and the North American Free Trade Agreement, but Milton Duran, president of the El Paso Hispanic Chamber of Commerce says of the border area: "It's a borderless region."

As a result of NAFTA, Mexico City and Washington, D.C. are finally treating both sides of the border as one region. The first of many new joint infrastructure projects is a water treatment and sewage plant for El Paso and Juarez. In this respect, government is playing catch-up with residents, small businesses, environmentalists, and human-rights groups.

The El Paso Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has proposed pushing back the U.S. border checkpoint 25 miles in the El Paso/Juarez area, arguing it would create a better business environment and foster better relations. It has also suggested the expansion of work permits for workers from Mexico.

Hispanic chambers of commerce throughout the country have had reciprocal trade missions and numerous cooperative ventures for many years. In fact, when NAFTA passed, a large trade delegation from Mexico celebrated with the Fort Worth Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

As a result of NAFTA, we can expect other similar ventures in Latin America. Says Cantu: "We'll see a domino effect."

This year's nominees were George Brewer, associate professor of mathematics; Terry Gouley, assistant professor of culinary arts; Don Jacobs, instructor of psychology; Wayne Johnson, assistant professor of English; Rosana Maldonado, instructor of mathematics; Robert Mu~noz, instructor of management; Joel Smith, associate professor of clinical laboratory sciences, Dr. Glynna Strait, professor of mathematics; Dr. Robert Sturges, professor of history; Dr. Charlotte Whitaker, associate professor of music; and Greg Williams, associate professor of psychology.

A native of Lima, Peru, Rosana Maldonado has been an instructor at Odessa College for three years. Before that, she was teaching at Texas Tech University while earning her master's degree. Before that, she taught in Peru.

"I feel very proud of myself, and very satisfied with my job," said Maldonado. "And I think it's a very nice way of telling the teachers that they appreciate our work, and what we do for our students.

Maldonado explained that she also measures her success in education by the achievement and development of her students.

"When I see my students progress, and that what I have taught them, they have learned it and use it later on," she said. "When I see that they are progressing and achieving their goals. That is something."

"The students' success is my success. That is how I see it."

Robert Mu~noz began as a part-time instructor at Odessa College in 1986. He became a full-time instructor in 1992, and now serves as the chairman of the management department at Odessa College.

"I was truly honored to represent Odessa College," said Mu~noz. "And I was especially honored to be recognized by my peers."

For Mu~noz, one of the greatest benefits of teaching comes from sharing knowledge with his students - and not just the knowledge of the textbook, either.

"It's the interaction with the students," he explained. "Our department prides itself on bringing 'real world' experience into the classroom."

"Our instructors have that experience in the real world, which they bring into the classroom. That, along with the textbook information, is what we have to offer to our students."

"El éxito del estudiante es mi éxito. Así es cómo lo veo." Robert Muñoz empezó como un maestro de jornada incompleta en la Universidad de Odessa en 1986. El a llegado a ser un maestro de jornada completa en 1992, y ahora sirve como el presidente de la sección de administración en la Universidad de Odessa.

"Estoy en verdad honrado en representar la Universidad de Odessa Universidad," dijo Muñoz. "Y especialmente por mis compañeros."

Para Muñoz, uno de los beneficios más grandes de enseñar viene el de compartir conocimier to.

"Es la interacción con los estudiantes," explicó. "Nuestro departamento se enorgullese al traer experiencia al salon de clase."

"Nuestros maestros tienen esa experiencia en el mundo real, que traen al aula de estudios. Eso, junto con la información del libro de texto, es lo qué tenemos que ofrecer nuestros estudiantes."

Community / Comunidad

RECUERDO: "Asi es cómo la voy a recordar siempre"

continua de la pagina 1

"Ella realmente cuidó por la comunidad, por Midland, de veras ella lo hizo. Me ayudó mucho, realmente lo hizo.

" La Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland fue una de las muchas vías en que Corrales en que fue participaria activa de la comunidad, y un patrón de esos quien compartió su compromiso al servicio de la comunidad.

Oralia Corrales

"Oralia era una esposa dedicada, una madre que apoyaba, una mujer de negocios fuerte, y una voluntaria entregada," recordó Charlene Romero Wurtz, quien es la actual directora ejecutiva de la Cámara Hispana. "Fui presentada a ella por Elvia. Esto fue cuándo yo por primera vez me envolví en la cámara.

Ella fue una defensora muy fuerte de la cámara. Y me siento realmente afortunada porque ella me apoyo en el papel de directora ejecutiva, y continuó apoyandome hasta el fin. " "Ella siempre estaba, pienso, para apoyar en la manera nosotros- los jovenes, la juventud de nuestra comunidad- se hizo activa en la comunidad, asegurandose que todos nos envolvieramos en organizaciones diferentes, y estar seguros que cada uno de nosotros demos un poco de nosotros a la comunidad de esa manera"

"Ella sólo tomó varios de nosotros bajo sus alas, y nos promovió."

Por supuesto, la influencia de Corrales se sintió por ambos jovenes y viejos, y su defensa por las personas de Midland, especialmente esos del este de Midland y margenes del sur, fue especialmente sobresaliente en los primeros años , cuándo las puertas de la oportunidad en Midland se abrían primero a todos los ciudadanos.

"Bien, sí, la Señorita Corrales ejerceció mucha influencia en el desarrollo de Midland, y su corazón trataba siempre de estar en la orilla del este de la ciudad" dijo Roger Robles Bienes y Raíces de Midland. "Y fue una gran protectora de personas. Siempre tomó todo en su corazón. Y ella nunca tuvo motivos de seguna intención. Ella solo lo hacía porque quiso ayudar a todos. " "nos mostró que si no hablamos en voz alta y fuerte sobre nuestras inquietudes, entonces no se haría nada. Y ella siempre fue nuestra voz. Hizo nuestras contemplaciones saber al concilio de la ciudad, y lo qué decía no era siempre muy bien recibido, pero venía del corazón. Nosotros trabajamos en muchos proyectos diferentes juntos, y ella siempre estaba allí. Fuer por sus esfuerzos que pudimos obtener los fondos para desarrollar el Camino Lamesa. "

"Ella sentía qué Midland era una comunidad, y no podíamos dividirla en, norte, sur, este y oeste. Y hacía eso para el bienestar de todos. "

Cuándo se volvió en area de desarrollo la orilla del este de Midland, Corrales puso el ejemplo, operando su exitoso negocio de seguros en la Calle Lamesa y alentando a otros a seguir ese ejemplo.

"Todos los que conocieron a Oralia tiene grandes recuerdos de ella como ser alguien quien cuidó de las personas Mexicanas," recordó el hombre de negocios y conocido por mucho tiempo Ciro Sanchez. "Ella siempre estaba lista para luchar, o tratar de hacer algo para ayudar. Una cosa acerca de Oralia- podía expresar su mente! "

"Me sobresalté, usted sabe, cuándo oí lo qué había ocurrido. Y hay gente que todavía no lo puede creer. Pero Oralia fue muy luchadora , fue alguien que estaba en el momento cuándo era necesario. "

Como lo manifestamos al principio, Corrales abrió muchas puertas de oportunidades en Midland que habían sido cerradas previamente a las minorías. Como la primera de la minoría elegida para servir en el Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland, había acometido muchas preocupaciones a lo qué amigos describen como "tenacidad de bulldog", habló en nombre de esos que ella representó.

"Bien, siempre me impresionó Oralia. Ustedes saben, aun cuándo se ausentó del concilio, continuó trabajando por el distrito dos y la comunidad, "dijo el ex Alcalde de Midland J. D. Faircloth, quien fue uno de los tres ex alcaldes en el acompañamiento del servicio conmemorativo de Corrales. "Estuve con ella aquí hace solo tres o cuatro semanas, donde estaba trabajando, tratando de solucionar el graffiti y problemas de pandilla en nuestra comunidad."

"Así que ella siempre trabajaba duro y activamente para la comunidad, aun cuándo no tenía que. Cuándo otros tomaron su lugar en el concilio, ella todavía trabajaba duro por la comunidad, y trabajaba duro por esas cosas que creía en. "

"Era una dama notable, y seguramente esta comunidad lamentará su muerte. Y tendremos que trabajar más duro para tomar su lugar. Pero fue una dama destacada. "

Como estas contemplaciones se compartieron por muchos quienes conocieron a Corrales en el area política, incluso esos quien fueron pioneros en esa área. "Bien, les diré, Oralia era una mujer buena, y hacía mucho por el este de Midland," dijo la Comisionado del Condado de Midland Luisa Valencia. "Ella se dedicó a eso, a hacer de nuestra cultura Hispana visible y atractiva, y lo hizo."

"Una de las cosas que debemos estar realmente orgullosos fue el Proyecto del Camino Lamesa Camino, y cómo comenzó. Y fue una de las primeras minorías en servir en el concilio de la ciudad. Eso había llegado a ser posible a causa del redistrito Y su esfuerzo en el redistrito fue realmente lo que ayudó a Midland. Ayudó a la Ciudad de Midland, ayudó al Condado de Midland, y ayudó a la comunidad Hispana. "

Fue en el area política que Valencia conoció a Corrales. Como la primera mujer Hispana electa a la Corte de Comisionados del Condado de Midland, Valencia apreció los desafíos que Corrales encaró en su oferta por un lugar en el concilio de la ciudad.

"La conocí cuándo estaba por primera vez compitiendo para el concilio de la ciudad, y estaba afuera trabajando. Y estaba trabajando tan duro, que contribuí con dinero a su campaña, aunque no sabía todavía quien era ella, "recordó Valencia. "Pero me impresionó cómo trabajaba duro, y que nos probaba que los Hispanos podían distinguirse en política. Ella trabajo para hacer que las personas se registraran. Y hacía a trabajadores afuera de personas, para que salieran y hacer de otros para que se registraran. "

"Y eso es una batalla, hacer que los Hispanos voten. Pero ella fue la que nos hizo , Si Oralia puede hacerlo, entonces todos nosotros podemos hacerlo! ' "

Y había esos quien continúan probando eso a este día, dueños del negocio exitosos y poseedores de oficina políticos quien se inspiraron en un punto u otro por Corrales y los ejemplos

Farewell and Godspeed, my Friend

By Jeffrey McDonald

Having once worked as the public service director for a local television station, I met Oralia Corrales many, many times as we worked on a wide variety of projects. She was that kind of woman, committed to serving the community in so many ways - through government, through her church, through education, through the chamber of commerce.

That working relationship, and our friendship, continued after my departure from television, when I joined Nueva Vista as a freelance writer more than two years ago. Oralia figured prominently in many of my articles, either as the actual subject of the article or as someone who then referred me to someone else, saying, "Well, you know who you need to talk to!"

And in the course of writing those articles, I learned a great deal about the community, and the people who kept that community alive and growing.

I learned about the barriers that Oralia and others like her had to break in order to take active roles of leadership in our government, and the fight to keep those doors of opportunity open. I learned about the challenges of owning and operating your own successful business, and the rewards of raising a family. And I learned that trends of neighborhood decay and abandonment can be reversed through commitment to beautification and business development, and how the struggle continued to make sure that all parts of the city - not just the north and the west - would benefit from that commitment.

And the lessons went beyond Midland, and beyond Texas. Last year, as Nueva Vista marked the passing of labor organizer Caesar Chavez, it was Oralia who shared her recollections of the seasons she spent in the agricultural fields of California, working with Chavez and others as they laid the foundations for what ultimately became the United Farm Workers. For a poor, young Yankee like myself, those lessons were invaluable.

While health problems may have slowed Oralia in recent months, her commitment to the community was unchanged. She still had her concerns, and there was still the need to prod the leaders of city and county government, to have those concerns addressed. I would still visit with her often, or she would telephone me with her concerns. "Well, Jeff," she would say, "here's something they need to know." It might be whether or not proper recognition was being paid to an outstanding teacher, or low Hispanic participation in elections, or chronic flooding of eastside neighborhoods due to poor city engineering. And inevitably, with each visit, we would finish with "business" and turn to stories and photographs of our families. That was something that was always important to Oralia.

My last interview with Oralia was for an article that honored the anniversary of her insurance business, which is now operated by her family. We talked business, we talked politics, we talked history, and we talked grandchildren - all in all, it was a typical interview with Oralia.

And now my friend - one of the best friends the community of Midland ever had - is gone. I shall miss her.

Vaya con dios, my friend, and thank you.

This talented group of young people will be serving as musical ambassadors from West Texas to the world when the Satin Strings Orchestra of Odessa-Permian High School travels to France to participate in an international musical salute

Musical ambassadors to the world

"It's called the Allied Musical Salute to the 50th Anniversary of D-Day and the Liberation of France", said Kathy Fishburn, director of orchestras at Odessa-Permian High School, and the conductor of the Satin Strings. "We are one of two high school groups from the state of Texas that will perform. The Rockport High School Choir will be the vocal group from Texas, and we will be the instrumental."

"We will perform three concerts, two in Paris and one at the Omaha Beach Memorial."

The musical salute will be part of a wide variety of activities taking place in France this week, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the "D-Day" invasion, which took place on June 6, 1944. It was this invasion, on the beaches of Normandy, France, which ultimately led to the defeat of Nazi Germany, and the liberation of Europe, which had been occupied by the Axis powers for nearly five years.

Interviews for this article were conducted as the orchestra was making final preparations for their trip overseas, and everyone involved was naturally excited about the prospect of travelling and performing in France.

"I'm very excited," said Adrianna Herrera, who is a first-year violist with the orchestra. "We just got our itinerary yesterday, and I got to see what we'll be doing. And it's just a week-and-a-half away, and there is so much to do. So, yes, I'm, getting excited!"

The trip is the culmination of months of planning and fundraising by orchestra members and their families.

"We raffled a car, a '94 Plymouth Duster," said Herrera, who is the daughter of Griselda Herrera, of Odessa. "And we sold tickets at Walmart, and K-mart, and the grocery stores, just about anywhere. Our parents sold tickets, and raffled off that car."

"We asked for donations from companies to help us on the trip as company sponsors. But we raised 81,000 dollars total."

Now that the trip to France has become a reality, students are making preparations for what they would like to see an do while overseas.

"I guess just kind of look around and stuff," said Herrera. "And see the Eiffel Tower, and the Louvres [the national art museum of France] and the Mona Lisa and all that stuff."

According to Herrera, these plans have also included preparing for the language of France. And this is another area where the orchestra has been assisted by other members of the Odessa-Permian student body.

"Well. we have a lot of kids in the orchestra that are in 'French One', or 'Two' or even 'Three'," she said. "One of the French classes came in the other day, and helped us with words and phrases in French."

It has also been a time for the young people to recall their 20th-century history lessons. Lessons they have learned not only from their textbooks, but also from older members of the community who were a part of these history-making events.

"In our history classes, we just studied those years," said Herrera "A lot of the people that we have played for, some of those people were there. One of my best friends, her grandfather, he flew a plane at D-Day."

The sounds that will be heard over the beaches of Normandy this week, will be very different from those heard by the tens-of-thousands of men who fought their way ashore more than fifty years ago. Today's sounds will be those of music and peace, thanks to the courage and sacrifice of yesterday's soldiers, and to the talent and commitment of today's musical ambassadors to the world.

Nuevas regulaciones aplicadas a insuficencia cardiovascular

Nuevas regulaciones afectan la manera en que el Seguro Social evalúa las incapacidades que provienen de lesiones cardiovasculares en adultos y niños. Las nuevas reglas reflejan los últimos descubrimientos en ciencia médica y tecnología.

Entre los cambios más importantes en la lista de lesiones cardiovasculares se encuentran:

• Poner menos énfasis en los diagnósticos y más en la evaluación práctica del impacto de la enfermedad en la habilidad del individuo para funcionar;

• Poner al dia las reglas para reflejar el conocimiento y práctica médica actuales como, por ejemplo, agregar el trasplante de corazón a la lista de lesiones incapacitantes, y requerir más información sobre los efectos de largo término en las funciones de un individuo con anormalidades que ya no se consideran invariablemente incapacitantes como, por ejemplo, ciertos ataques cardíacos.

• Dar más guia respecto a cómo documentar la severidad de la condición, la parte del tratamiento, y los exámenes de diagnóstico y otras pruebas médicas; y

• Expandir las reglas para niños, de modo de dar la misma atención a la enfermedad en la niñez que antes se daba solamente a las enfermedades de adultos.

El Seguro Social paga beneficios de incapacidad por medio de dos programas: el de su Seguro de Incapacidad (DI) y el de Seguridad de Ingreso Suplementario (SSI). Los beneficios en el programa de DI, se pagan a trabajadores incapacitados, sus viudas o viudos incapacitados, sus cónyuges divorciados sobrevivientes, y sus hijos incapacitados antes de la edad de 22. En el programa de SSI se pagan beneficios a personas de 65 años o más, o ciegas o incapacitadas cuyos ingresos y recursos son limitados. Los pagos mensuales de SSI también se hacen a niños incapacitados o ciegos.

El Seguro Social tiene una lista de incapacidades que ayuda a indentificar las más severas lesiones en los individuos. La lista contiene ejemplos de condiciones incapacitantes que se ven frecuentemente en los programas de Seguro Social para incapacidad. Cualquier persona que no esté trabajando y cuya incapacidad esté descrita en la lista, o sea igual en severidad a una descrita en la lista, se considera incapacitada de acuerdo con los criterios de la agencia.

La lista nunca es usada como base para una denegación. Si un individuo tiene una incapacidad que no iguala la severidad de cualquiera en la lista, el Seguro Social considera lo que la persona aún es capaz de hacer a pesar de su condición y su edad, educación y experiencia en trabajos anteriores a su incapacidad. Todo esto se tiene en cuenta para decidir si la persona puede o no puede trabajar.

En el caso de un niño que solicita pagos de SSI, la agencia observa la habilidad del niño para realizar tareas que otros niños de su misma edad pueden hacer — por ejemplo, vestirse o alimentarse por si mismo — antes de hacer una decisión.

Un nuevo programa de voluntarios para nuestros ancianos

Community and Senior Services anuncia el programa " Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP)."

Sobre este programa nuestros ancianos o personas de 55 anos o mayor podrán usar sus talentos y experiencia para ayudar ha varias agencias locales.

Muchas personas piensan que ser un voluntario requiere un tipo de persona de valor o de mucha educación. No es cierto cada uno de nosotros tenemos algo de valor. Que es ese valor? Bueno eso depende de la persona. Para muchos, es su tiempo y su cariño .

Se estima que 25 porciento de personas 55 anos o mayor son voluntarios. Otro 44 porciento avisan que les gustaría ser voluntarios pero por razones personales no lo hacen.

Esa información demuestra que, " el deseo para contribuyir no tiene edad," dice Kelly Ives, directora ejecutiva de Community and Senior Services.

El titulo " Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP)" fue construido en 1971 con el intento de poder aprovechar de los talentos de nuestra gente de edad mayor. El programa recibe fondos nacional del Nacional Senior Volunteer Corp y local del Community and Senior Services.

RSVP ha tenido mucho excito en los ultimos 23 anos en ciudades como; San Angelo, Big Spring, Lubbock, Amarillo, y en El Paso. Por eso estamos tan contentos de poder traer a Midland este hermoso programa.

Ser voluntario y poder ayudar demuestra una calidad muy hermosa. Y cada uno de nosotros en algun tiempo a extendido su mano para ayudar a su pariente, amigo, o tal ves su vecino. Bueno por que no pensar en las agencias locales de servicio como un amigo, o vecino. Por ejemplo agencias como Casa De Amigos, Midland Senior Center, y el S.E. Senior Center son lugares que ofrecen varios servicios a nuestra comunidad.

Organizadores del programa comentan que nuestros ancianos solo necesitan alguien que les pregunte por su ayuda. Solo hay que preguntarles dice Carla Curtner, directora de programa RSVP. La Sra. Curtner explica que la necesidad en nuestra comunidad sigue creciendo y en Midland la población de ancianos es bastante grande. Agencias están necesitando interpretes, jardineros, maestros de cocina, ejercicios, curiosidades, voluntarios que visiten personas solas y mucho mas.

Saul Herrera, asistente del RSVP comenta que hay mas de 30 agencias locales que han solicitado voluntarios y con el esfuerso de nuestra comunidad anciana podremos hacerlo posible. El Sr. Herrera también comenta que nuestros ancianos tienen mucho que ofrecer ya que han experimentado toda una vida por delante. Para mas información tocante este por favor de llamar a nuestra oficina de RSVP al numero 689-6103, se habla espanol.

"Básicamente, lo qué recuerdo acerca de Oralia fue el primer día que la conocí en Jumburrito," recordó el concejal de la Ciudad de Midland y restaurantero Jose Cuevas, Hijo "Y aquí estaba ésta sobresaliente mujer, llena de fe, presentandose como Oralia Corrales. Y me decía que vendía seguros, y que estaba muy feliz que habíamos empezado un negocio en la Calle Lamesa. "

"Y luego fue mi vecina un año mas tarde, cuándo me mudé al barrio. Y recuerdo tan sólo la fuerza que tenía y cómo la veía en TELEVISIÓN, y que tan bien se encontraba y que sentimiento, y cómo era de emocional. Y realmente quería lo mejor para cada uno. "

Esa emoción, ese sentimiento de cuidado y compromiso que se sentía por todos esos quienes entraron en contacto con ella.

"Es una grande pérdida a la comunidad. Ella fue una persona destacada quien cuidó mucho de la comunidad, especialmente la comunidad Hispana. Y siempre dió a conocer de sus sentimientos a cualquier agencia de gobierno, "dijo Felipa Lara, una organizadora por el capítulo de Midland de LULAC, la Liga de Ciudadanos latinoamericano Unidos. "siempre podías hablar con Oralia de cualquier preocupación que tuberías, o sólo para hablar con alguien y obtenías consejo, y ella ayudaría de cualquiera manera que podía."

"No puedo imaginar que nosotros perdimos a Oralia. Ya la extraño. Fue una gran amiga, una amiga verdadera. Sólo quiero recordar su sonrisa, y cómo cuidaba de otros.

Asi es cómo la voy a recordar siempre. "

RECOLLECTIONS: How I shall always remember her

surface on Tuesday, May 31st, when word of Corrales' death spread across the community, and across the southwest. Those recollections give some indication of the impact Corrales had upon Midland as they touched upon business, politics, community development, religion, and family.

"She was the second person I met in Midland when I arrived," recalled Elvia Hernandez, a former executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "The reason I met her was, she was my son's insurance agent. And he said, 'Mom, you need to talk to Oralia.'"

"And we had lunch together, and I had brought along my resume, and she looked at it. She was wonderful! We had lunch, and then we went to her office, and the next day we went over to see Roger Robles. And it wasn't long before I was hard at work."

"She really cared for the community, for Midland, she really did. She helped me a lot, she really did."

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce was one of many ways in which Corrales was an active supporter of the community, and a patron of those who shared her commitment to community service.

"Oralia was a devoted wife, a very supportive mother, a strong business woman, and a committed volunteer," recalled Charlene Romero Wurtz, who is the present executive director of the Hispanic Chamber. "I was introduced to her by Elvia. It was when I first got involved in the chamber. She was a very strong supporter for the chamber. And I feel real fortunate because she was very supportive of me in the role of executive director, and continued to support me to the end."

"She was always, I guess, real supportive in the way we - the young, the youth of our community - became active in the community, making sure we all got involved in different organizations, and making sure that each of us gave a little of ourselves to the community in that way."

"She just took several of us under her wing, and nurtured us."

Of course, Corrales' influence was felt by both young and old, and her advocacy for the people of Midland, especially those of Midland's east and south sides, was especially prominent in the early years, when doors of opportunity in Midland were first being opened to all it's citizens.

"Well, yes, Miss Corrales was very, very influential in the development of Midland, and her heart was always trying to look out for the city's east side" said Midland Realtor Roger Robles. "She was a great, caring person, always took everything to heart. She had no ulterior motives. She just did it because she wanted to help everybody."

"She showed us that if we didn't speak up and voice our concerns, then nothing would be done. She was the spokesperson. Made our views known to the city council, and what she said was not always very well received, but it came from the heart. We worked on many different projects together, and she was always there. It was through her efforts that we were able to get the funding to develop Lamesa Road."

"She felt that Midland is one community, and we can't divide it into north, south, east and west. And she did that for everybody's well-being."

When it came to developing areas like Midland's east side, Corrales led by example, operating her own successful insurance business from offices on Lamesa Road, and encouraging others to follow that example.

"Everybody that knew Oralia has great memories of her as being someone who cared for the Mexican people," recalled Midland businessman and longtime acquaintance Ciro Sanchez. "She was always ready to put up a fight, or try to do something to help. One thing about Oralia - she could speak her mind!"

"I was shocked, you know, when I heard what had happened. And people are still in shock, they are. But Oralia was a trooper, she was somebody that would put out when necessary."

As we stated earlier, Corrales had opened many doors of opportunity in Midland that had been previously closed to minorities. As the first minority elected to serve on the Midland City Council, she had tackled many concerns with what friends describe as "bulldog tenacity", speaking her mind on behalf of those she represented.

"Well, I was always impressed with Oralia. You know, even when she went off the council, she continued to work for district two and the community," said former Midland Mayor J. D. Faircloth, who was one of three former or current mayors in attendance at Corrales' memorial service. "I was with here just three or four weeks ago, where she was working diligently, trying to solve the graffiti and gang problems in our community."

"So she always worked hard and diligently for the community, even when she didn't have to. When others had taken her place on the council, she was still working hard for the community, and working hard for those things she believed in."

"She was an outstanding lady, and certainly this community will be poorer for her passing. And we will have to work harder to take her place. But she was an outstanding lady."

It was views like these that were shared by many who came to know Corrales in the political arena, including those who themselves were pioneers in that area.

"Well, I'll tell you, Oralia was a good woman, and she did a lot for the east side of Midland," said Midland County Commissioner Luisa Valencia. "She dedicated herself to that, to making our Hispanic culture visible and attractive, and she got it done."

"One of the things that we should be really proud of was the Lamesa Road Project, and how she got that started. And she was one of the first minorities to serve on the city council. That had become possible because of the redistricting. Her input into redistricting was what really helped Midland. It helped the City of Midland, it helped Midland County, and it helped the Hispanic community."

It was in the political arena that Valencia first met Corrales. As the first Hispanic woman elected to the Midland County Commissioners Court, Valencia appreciated the challenges that Corrales faced in her bid for a seat on the city council.

"I met her when she was first running for city council, and she was out working. She was working so hard, that I contributed money to her campaign, even though I did not know her real well yet," recalled Valencia. "But I was impressed with how hard she was working, and that she was proving to us that Hispanics could excel at politics. She's worked to get people to register. She'd make workers out of people, so they'd go out and get others to register."

"And that's a battle, getting Hispanics to the polls. But she was the one who got us to think, 'If Oralia could do it, then we all could do it!'"

There were those who continue to prove that to this day, successful business owners and political office holders who were inspired at one point or another by Corrales and the examples she set.

"Basically, what I remember about Oralia was the very first day I met her at Jumburrito," recalled Midland City Councilman and restaurateur Jose Cuevas, Jr. "Here was this towering woman, full of confidence, introducing herself as Oralia Corrales. Telling me that she sold insurance, and that she was very happy that we had started a business on Lamesa Road."

"Then she was my neighbor about a year later, when I moved into the neighborhood. I remember just how powerful she was, and how I would watch her on TV, and how well she came across, and how feeling, and how emotional she was. And she really wanted the best for everyone."

That emotion, that sense of caring and commitment was felt by all those who came in contact with her.

"It's a great loss to the community. She was such an outstanding person who cared so much about the community, especially the Hispanic community. And she was always willing to make her feelings known to any government agency," said Felipa Lara, an organizer for the Midland chapter of LULAC, the League of United Latin American Citizens. "You could always call Oralia on any concern you had, or just to talk to someone and get advice, and she would help you in any way she could."

"I couldn't imagine that we had lost Oralia. I miss her already. She was a great friend, a true friend. I just want to remember her smile, and how caring she was. That is how I shall always remember her."

PARTE II: El lugar para ir este verano

Water Wonderland

Por Edwin Sotomayor

Puede usted compartir con Nueva Vista sus metas para mejorar la comunidad en Midland y Odessa?

"Por medio de una encuesta hecha hace pocos años por las cámaras e instituciones privadas, este parque produce al menos un ingreso extra (para la Hoya Pérmica, Midland, Odessa, etc.) de alrededor de 5 millones de dólares en el verano. La gente compra trusas de baño, loción bronceadora, van a comer a sitios públicos cuando llegan de las comunidades vecinas, también compran toallas, sandalias, lentes para el sol, helados, refrescos y otras bebidas, etc. Todo ello tiene un gran impacto comercial en toda el área. Por lo que esperamos que el resto de la comunidad de negocios comprenda cuán importante es el parque de agua en el verano, y nos apoye un poco más de lo que ha hecho en el pasado. Nosotros entendemos sus razones, han estado esperando bastante para que el parque se abriera y no se abría, pero ahora es distinto, está abierto otra vez y esta vez será por mucho tiempo."

Cuántos acres de diversión tiene Water Wonderland?

"Tenemos 22 acres y eso es todo por ahora. Tenemos aproximadamente 13 diferentes atracciones, desde diminutos paseos de agua para los más pequeñitos hasta los más movidos para los adultos. Con el programa de expansión compramos ya 42 acres más en la parte de atrás."

Midland y Odessa están en el medio de un desierto, ¿qué clase de tecnología ó sistema usan ustedes para proveerse de agua?

"Bien, de vez en cuando, en tiempo de crisis, trabajamos con la municipalidad de Odessa y Midland. Pero, normalmente, el parque y su autoservicio emplean 13 diferentes pozos de agua. Esta es una de las razones por la cual esta clase de agua fue escogida en los 80, ya que este vasto suplemento de agua no interfiere con el servicio de agua de otros residentes ó negocios de la comunidad. El agua de la ciudad la usaríamos solamente para llenar las piscinas, y siempre hay algo de agua que retorna cuando esta operación se realiza. Los pozos tienen (probablemente) entre 90 y 120 pies de profundidad. Además contamos con 2 tanques de almacenamiento de agua que mantenemos permanentemente. Los tenemos llenos todos los días."

Así como es en Six Flags (un conocido parque de agua en Miami, Florida), ¿Será en Water Wonderland el tobogán la principal atracción?

"Somos pequeños aún, así que vamos a mantener bastantes nuevas atracciones pero sobre pequeñas bases, antes que ofrecer gigantescos paseos de agua que implicarán grandes préstamos a devolver. Estamos mejor ofreciendo juegos para la familia y cambiándolos cada dos años, para que las cosas luzcan diferentes."

Hay mapas que describan las instalaciones del parque?

"Sí, tenemos un montón de folletos y mapas para entregar a todo el que venga ó se interese en el parque. Hay igualmente un hermoso mural mostrando las distracciones del parque.

Las ciudades grandes que tienen bastantes centros de entretenimiento parece que hubieran dejado a un lado la candidez, el calor humano, la bondad, la amistad y el toque familiar. ¿Qué van a hacer Uds. para que Midland y el resto de ciudades vecinas sigan siendo un lugar para la familia y el sano entretenimiento?

"Bien, esa es la razón por la cual siempre tratamos de trabajar en unión de ambas cámaras de comercio y organizaciones no lucrativas como las de JC y otras más. También tomamos en cuenta a los niños desvalidos. Estos niños tienen derechos especiales y

El viajar con la familia puede ser muy divertido

HOUSTON—(Junio 1994)—Cuando uno esta a de viaje con los niños este verano, no se debe olvidar la bolsa mas importante- la bolsa de los bocados.

"El viajar con la familia puede ser muy divertido. Hay muchas cosas que hacer, y comer es uno de ellos." dijo la Dra. Corinne Montandon, una nutricionista del Centro de Investigacion de la Nutricion de los Niños del Departamento de Agricultura y profesora asistente de pediatria del Baylor College of Medicine. "Solamente asegurase de ofrecer bocados nutritivos," agrego Montandon.

Los kilometros pueden pasar rápidamente comiendo fruta fresca, nueces, palomitas, cereal seco, y pedazos de apio o zanahoria. (No se deben ofrecer nueces, uvas enteras o palomitas a niños mas jóvenes de 5 anos de edad porque pueden atorarse.)

El queso blanco, paquetes de fruta seca, una variedad de panes, aderezos, cajas pequeñas de pasas, galletas "Graham," galletas de animales, "pretzels" bajas en sal, y sandwiches de mantequilla de cacahuate y mermelada pueden calmar a los pequenos viajeros inquietos.

Para una comida mas completa, prepare un almuerzo tipo "picnic" y cómalo en un parque junto al camino.

Un enfriador con hielo permite que el viajero empaque una mayor variedad de comidas.

Los sandwiches pueden contener carne de res o pollo a la barbacoa, carnes frías bajas en grasa, o atún. Almacene los rellenos para los sandwiches, la lechuga y los tomates, y los aderezos en recipientes que se cierren herméticamente o en bolsas de plástico para almacenar las comidas. Prepare los sandwiches justamente antes de servirlos para mantener el pan fresco.

Montandon también recomienda que los padres lleven bastantes bebidas de fruta, un litro de leche y una botella de agua enfriadas.

Acuerdese de incluir servilletas de colores vivos, platos de papel, tenedores y cuchillos de plástico, y vasos de papel dijo Montandon.

Despues de "Tengo hambre," lo que los padres oyen con mas frecuencia es "Estoy aburrido." Montandon sugiere juegos que enfocan en la participación de toda la familia.

El contar vacas o carteleros, juegos de palabras, lectura de mapas, cantos, y acertijos proporcionan horas de entretenimiento.

Los niños también se divierten con una bolsa de viaje especial llena de juegos de video pequenos, naipes, y otros juegos. A los niños pequenos les gustan las munecas, los libros, las figuras de plástico y libros para colorear.

Montandon les recuerda a los padres de hacer paradas frecuentes para que los niños puedan estirar las piernas y usar el baño.

Con un poco de planificacion, paciencia y muchos regalitos para el viaje, las familias pueden hacer su viaje en auto muy memorable.

Traveling as a family can be a lot of fun

HOUSTON—(June, 1994)—When traveling with children this summer do not forget to pack the most important bag: the "snack" bag.

"Traveling as a family can be a lot of fun. There are lots of things to do, and eating is one of them," said Dr. Corinne Montandon, a nutritionist at the USDA's Children's Nutrition Research Center and an assistant professor of pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine. "Just make sure you offer nutritious treats," she added.

Mobile munchers can wile away the miles crunching on fresh fruit, nuts, popcorn, dry cereal, celery sticks, and carrot sticks. (Nuts, whole grapes or popcorn should not be given to tots younger than 5 because they could choke.)

String cheese, packaged fruit snacks, a variety of breads, spreads, small boxes of raisins, Graham crackers, animal crackers, low-salt pretzels, and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches also appease restless riders.

For heartier fare, have a picnic lunch prepared and stop at a convenient roadside park, Montandon said.

A cooler with ice or commercial ice pack allows travelers to pack a wider range of items.

Sandwiches might include sliced barbecue beef or chicken,lean luncheon meats or tuna. Pack sandwich fillings, lettuce and tomatoes, and condiments separately in clean airtight containers or clear plastic food-storage bags. Assemble sandwiches just before serving to keep the bread fresh.

Montandon also encourages parents to ice down plenty of single-serve cartons of fruit juice, a quart of milk and a bottle of water.

Remember to tuck in some colorful napkins, sturdy paper plates, plastic forks and knives, and paper cups, she said.

Next to "I'm hungry," parents most often hear "I'm bored." Montandon suggests games that focus on family participation.

Counting cows or billboards, rhyming games, map reading, singalongs, and riddles provide hours of entertainment.

Children also enjoy a special travel bag filled with books, hand-held videos, a deck of cards, and mini-puzzles. Toddlers and preschoolers like dolls, books, plastic cartoon figures, and coloring books.

Montandon reminds parents to make frequent stops so children can stretch their legs and use the Restroom.

With a bit of planning, patience and plenty of travel treats, families can make this summer's vacation a road trip worth repeating.

Accidentes de la Niñez: Un asesino que usted puede prevenir

Muchos padres se preocupan por las drogas, la violencia y las enfermedades, pero en Estados Unidos, el asesino numero uno de los niños menores de 14 años son los accidentes.

Accidentes evitables

De acuerdo a la Campaña Nacional de Seguridad para Niños, mas niños mueren cada año de accidentes no intencionados que por cualquier otra enfermedad de la niñez. Anualmente, mas de 8,000 niños menores de 14 años mueren y al menos 50,000 quedan permanentemente incapacitados.

Cuales son las causas mayores? Accidentes en y por automóviles, quemaduras, ahogamientos, envenenamientos, y caidas.

Sin embargo, algunos expertos no creen en "accidentes." Ellos creen que con precauciones apropiadas, algunos daños pueden ser prevenidos. Estas precauciones incluyen el educarse usted y su esposo(a), como también a sus niños acerca del peligro de los accidentes y como evitarlos.

Algunas veces, no es fácil saber cuando va a ocurrir un accidente. Cuando los niños duermen, existe también peligro porque pueden asfixiarse debido a varias causas. Un folleto de la Campaña de Seguridad para Niños llamado Niños Seguros no son Accidentes menciona estos ejemplos.

Sabia usted que:

¿Que los niños se pueden ahogar en menos de una pulgada de agua en unos segundos? Un ahogo puede ocurrir en el tiempo que se toma para contestar el telefono.

¿Algunos niños innecesariamente se queman porque ellos creen que sus ropas los protegen de las llamas?

¿Si un niño ingiere un astringente (mouthwash) puede sufrir un estado de coma producido por el alcohol?

¿Un niño puede caerse por una ventana que este abierta solo cinco pulgadas?

¿En un accidente automovilistico, un niño que no lleva puesto el cinturón de seguridad puede golpearse contra el tablero del carro con mucha fuerza como si cayera de un edificio de tres pisos aun cuando el carro vaya a 30 m.p.h.?

Estos ejemplos que muestran que los niños pueden lastimarse o aún morir en accidentes es sobreacogedor y nos llena de miedo. Después de todo, como padre, no puede predecir lo que el niño puede hacer en determinado momento.

Hay algunas medidas de seguridad que le pueden ayudar a proveer un medio ambiente seguro y ayudarle a reaccionar de una manera "segura" cuando ocurran los accidentes.

Un folleto informativo de Baylor College of Medicine "Pensamos en Tí" titulado Prevención de Accidentes: Una Guía Familiar para la Seguridad de los Niños, incluye cinco pasos simples:

Trate de prevenir accidentes eliminando sus causas cuando sea posible. Es mejor y mas sencillo tomar medidas preventivas en su casa para proteger a los niños que decirles "no" todo el tiempo.

Nunca deje a sus niños sin supervision.

Tome una clase de Respiración Artificial (CPR) y recomiende que la persona que cuida a sus niños y los abuelos tomen esta clase también.

Enseñe a sus niños unas medidas de seguridad, y deles un buen ejemplo usando estas reglas.

Trate de mantenerse calmado en caso de una emergencia. Use el telefono para pedir ayuda. Quédese en el telefono y siga las instrucciones de la operadora o su despachador médico.

El folleto Pensamos en Tí es gratis y esta disponible mandando un sobre con un sello postal a: Preventiones de Accidentes (ES), Baylor College of Medicine, One Baylor Plaza, Houston, TX 77030. El folleto también le ayuda a dirigirse o ponerse en contacto con otras organizaciones como El Concilio Nacional de Seguridad, y la Administración Nacional de Tráfico de Carreteras que también pueden tener disponible información adicional.

Es poco realista pensar que usted pueda "proteger" completamente a sus niños de accidentes, pero si se pueden tomar medidas que provean un ambiente mas seguro para su familia.

Por favor tome el tiempo para proveer un ambiente mas seguro.

NuevaVista

PART II: The place to be this summer

By Edwin Sotomayor

Can you share with NuevaVista your goals to improve the community in Midland and Odessa?

"Through a survey done a couple of years ago by the chambers and private institutions, this park produces at least an extra revenue (for the Permian Basin, Midland, Odessa, etc.) of about 5 million dollars in the summer. People are buying swimsuits, suntan oil, they are eating in public places when they are visiting from all the surroundings communities, they also buy towels, sandals, sunglasses, ice cream, sodas and other beverages, etc. This has a lot of commercial impact on the whole area. So we hope that the rest of the business community realizes how important the water park is econmically. Because we understand their reasons, it is kind of "it's going to reopen and then it's not", but now it really is open again and we're going to be functioning for the long term."

How many acres of fun has Water Wonderland?

"We've 22 acres, this is all right now. We've approximately 13 different attractions, from little kidde rides all the way up to the stout hearted adults. For an expansion program we have 42 acres to the north of the present park."

Midland and Odessa are in the middle of the desert, what kind of technology or system do you use to provide water?

"Well, from time to time, in time of crisis, we work with the cities of Odessa and Midland. But the park and its self service is provided by 13 different water wells. This is one of the reasons this kind of water was chosen back in the early 80's , because the ample water supply doesn't pull down on any other community residents or businesses because we only use it to fill the pools and there is just a little bit of return water used as an operation takes place. The wells are (probably) 90 to 120 feet deep. We also have 2 storage tanks that we keep permanently. We fill them continually."

As it is in Six Flags (a well known water park in Miami, Florida),will the water toboggan be the main attraction?

"We're going to try to keep a lot of new attractions going on a regular basis, rather than to give gigantic rides that have to pay for themselves over the long haul. We're better off putting in the new smaller version rides for the families, every other year. So they have a different look at the time."

Is there any map describing the park installations?

"Yes, we've a lot of brochures and maps to deliver to everyone interested in coming to the park. And there's also a beautiful wall mural showing off all of the park installations.

Every big city that has a certain amount of places for entertainment seems to have lost its naiveness, warmth, kindness, the friendly and family touch. What are you going to do to keep Midland, Odessa and the rest of the areas as a place for the family and sound entertainment?

"Well, that is why we always try to work in conjunction with both chambers of commerce and non profit organizations as the JCs and sevice clubs. We take everything into consideration such as under priveleged children. These children have special rights and we work for their sake. We open the park for the community. Let them know we're here, this is a family park, a family theme park. That is our goal to bring them in. As you know, we're one of the safest parks in the USA. We gone 13 years without any serious accidents or a drowning. So the family, specially the women's first concern is: "My kids are going to drown!". No, that's not going to happen, we've double the amount of life guards that's mandated on duty all the time, to make sure that when the families come in, this is a good, clean, wholesome, family fun."

Are you going to offer to the families in Water Wonderland just group rates? What about individual rates ?

"We have both rates. Individual rate is $45.00. We have a special family pass for $125.00. Five immediate family members can join the park for the whole summer, that's all it would cost them. And we're this year instituting a Thursday family night. The parents leave their work places at 5 or 6 PM, they can come out here and we'll keep the park open until 9 o'clock, so they can come out and share the fun with their kids."

What are you going to do about solving the problem of lodging for the visitors? If they are going to stay over night, are there enough places for them to spend the night at?

"Okay, we usually have no problem with the groups. We receive help from some organizations like churches. They sponsor them (the visitors) , they house them in their facilities or they offer their homes open to them. Until now, people that are coming in as tourists are aware that there are certain motels in Odessa, Midland, etc., who offer, as well, special discounts that have worked in the past. We're working on that right now, too."

"The President and General Manager of the park, has some real dynamic ideas, he is a very foresighted type of individual and he loves children. He can remember back when he worked in a park and held those great values and morals with which you can work and dream. He knows what will take place in the next 10 years. What will be coming from him will be very inspirational and will do a great service to the community."

Final thought, do you have any advice for the community?

"No other than just: COME HERE WITH THE ATTITUDE THAT THIS IS A GOOD CLEAN PARK AND A FAMILY FUN PLACE, AND IT'S ALSO A VERY SAFE ATMOSPHERE. Don't forget that this " wonderland" was built to have fun, create entertainment and be a party for everyone. Kids will be always watched by us! Come out here and feel real comfortable."

Well, we just must say, CONGRATULATIONS TO THE WATER WONDERLAND TEAM! Go, "dudes", go!

VERANO: Una diversión familiar sana, segur y limpia trabajamos por ellos. Tenemos el parque abierto para toda la comunidad. Hagamos conocer a todos que aquí hay un lugar para todas las familias. Esa es una meta nuestra, atraer a todos a un parque sano como el nuestro. Siendo este parque uno de los más seguros, aquí en 13 años no ha habido ningún accidente serio. La primera idea de las madres es la de que su niño se va a caer. Eso no va a pasar aquí. Tenemos una doble cantidad de guardias salvavidas de la requerida, y siempre están trabajando, haciendo de este lugar una diversión familiar sana, segura, limpia, buena."

¿Van a ofrecer solamente juegos para grupos?, ¿Qué de los juegos individuales?

"Tenemos de ambos. Diversión para grupos y juegos de video para personas solas. Tenemos además un pase de familia por $125. Gracias al mismo 5 miembros más de la familia pueden unirse al grupo y acudir al parque todo el verano. Igualmente vamos a instituir la noche familiar el jueves. Los padres dejan el trabajo a las 5 ó 6 PM, ahora ellos podrán venir al parque y quedarse con sus niños hasta las 9PM, y así disfrutar juntos."

¿Qué va hacer usted para resolver el problema de alojamiento de los visitantes, en el caso de que decidan pernoctar? ¿Hay suficiente lugares para ellos?

"Vea usted, usualmente no tenemos problemas con los grupos. Recibimos ayuda de algunas organizaciones como las iglesias. Ellas patrocinan a los visitantes, les dan alojamiento en sus edificios y les ofrecen sus hogares. Hasta ahora la gente que ha venido como turista sabe que hay cierta cantidad de moteles en Odessa, Midland, etc., que ofrecen a ellos descuentos especiales que han dado resultado en el pasado. Estamos trabajando en esto ahora."

"El Presidente y Gerente General del parque, tiene algunas ideas realmente dinámicas, él es un tipo de individuo con miras al futuro que ama a los niños. El recuerda cuando trabajó en un parque y mantuvo aquellos grandes valores y principios morales que hacen que uno pueda trabajar y soñar. El sabe lo que va a pasar en los próximos 10 años. Lo que provenga de él será ejémplar con miras a dar servicio a la comunidad."

Su pensamiento final, ¿Qué consejo tiene para la comunidad?

"Ninguno otro más que: VENGAN AQUI CON LA ACTITUD DE QUE ESTE ES UN ESTABLECIMIENTO BUENO Y LIMPIO, UN LUGAR DE DIVERSIÓN FAMILIAR, Y QUE ES ADEMAS UNA ATMÓSFERA MUY SEGURA. No olviden que este es"wonderland", ¡Fue construido para tener esparcimiento y dar fiesta a cada uno. Los niños serán siempre vigilados y cuidados por nosotros. ¡Vengan aquí y siéntanse realmente confortables!"

Por ahora, solamente nos queda decir, ¡FELICITACIONES PARA TODOS Y EL RESTO DEL GRUPO CLASE A-1! ¡Adelante, "muchachos", adelante!

THURSDAY

DAY WATCH

Special session

ODESSA — Odessa College Board of Trustees will meet in special session at 5:15 p.m. today to seek a district court judge's approval for the college to issue revenue bonds. The board will meet in the Community Room on the second floor of the Student Union Building to authorize filing the validation lawsuit in district court for the bond issue. Ray Hutchison, a Dallas bond attorney representing the college, said at the May 24 board meeting that the college would seek approval from an Ector County district court judge for the college's plan to deal with cash flow difficulties resulting from investments that were not liquid. As part of that plan, the college planned to raise money by issuing a bond through First Southwest Co. That bond would be sold to investors and the college would repay the money over a period of years, he said.

Vogler faces city's major issues

Ed Vogler

■ New council member looks at zoning, airport terminal and other economic development issues.

Staff Writer

Ed Vogler has received several calls and inquiries from constituents since being elected in May to represent District 3 on the City Council.

"I, as I pledged in my campaign, welcome input," he said.

On Monday, Vogler was sworn into office. He replaces L.D. "Buddy" Sipes, who did not seek re-election.

Vogler's service to the city will be a continuation of his longtime interest in civic and cultural affairs in Midland.

"I've always been involved since arriving in Midland" 45 years ago, he said.

"I think if people see a job they can do, don't look for someone else to do it if you have the time and the ability," Vogler said. "That's why Midland is so well known as a volunteer city."

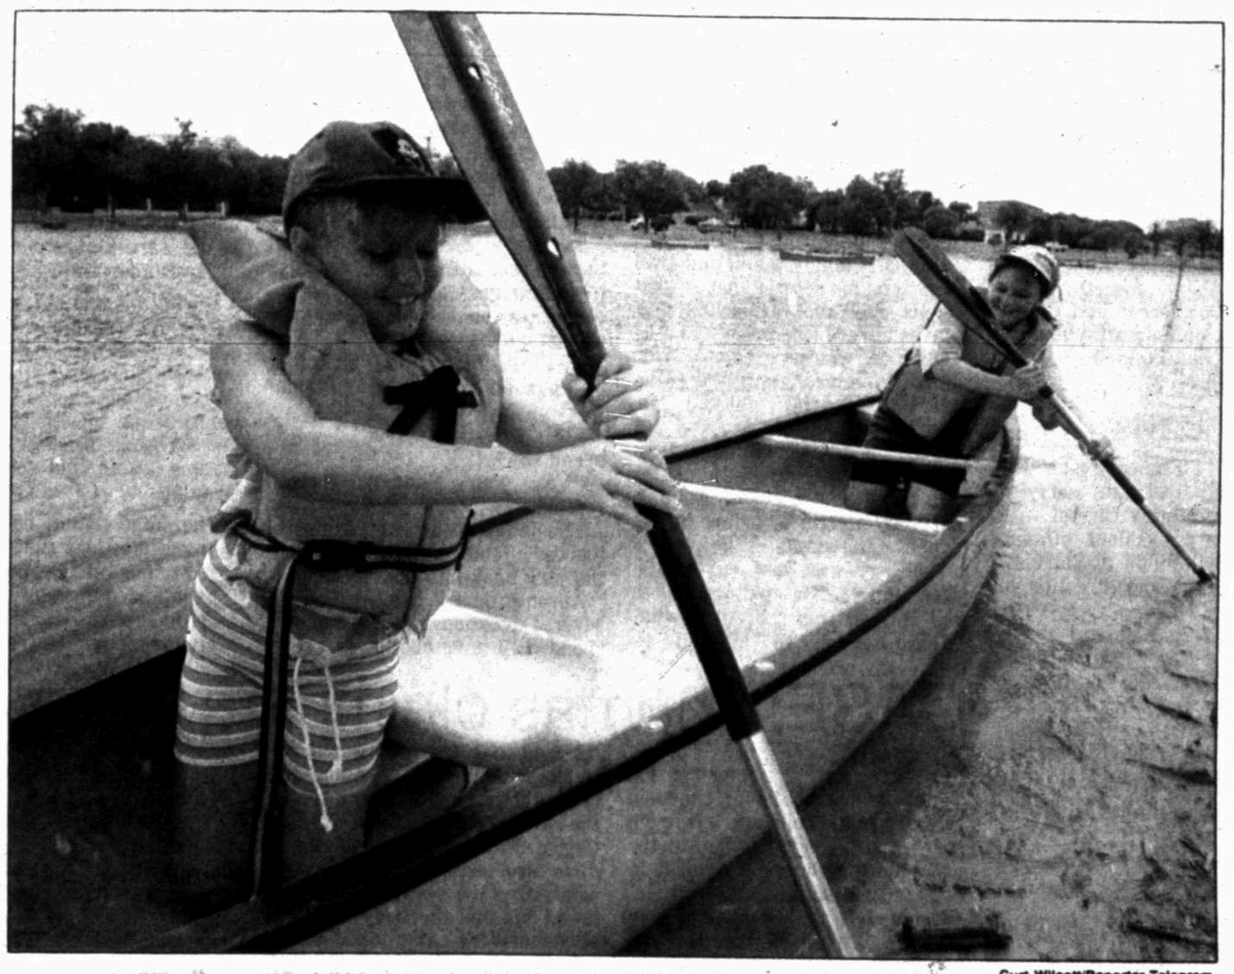

And so Vogler sought the council seat, which pays $25 a month.

After the election, Vogler soon began to hear from the people, he said.

One recent call came from a group of residents near Wadley-Barron Park concerned about city services in the neighborhood. Vogler met with the group Tuesday evening. "It went very well," he said.

As a result of that meeting, the city will evaluate some of the residents' concerns, and implement some requests — including sweeping 'A' Street after rains that cause debris and flooding

Michael Scott Thomas told jurors Wednesday he assisted Ramsey Blake Harrell in cleaning up blood and dumping the body of Tommy Musick because he was scared of what Harrell would do to him if he didn't cooperate.

Thomas, 20, is on trial on charges of capital murder for the 1993 shooting death of the local hairdresser.

Trial updates can be heard daily on The NowLine. For the latest reports at the completion of each day's testimony, call Cityline at 560-2400, and enter category 1213.

Thomas is the second man to be tried for the April 14, 1993, shooting death of Musick, 48.

Judge finds Harrell in contempt of court

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

Convicted murderer Ramsey Blake Harrell was found in contempt of court Wednesday when he refused to testify during the capital murder trial of Michael Scott Thomas.

Harrell, 18, was convicted on Feb. 14 and sentenced to 12 years in prison for the murder of Tommy Edward Musick, 48, of Midland.

Thomas, 20, is on trial in the death of Musick, who was shot four times in the back of the head and left to die on a county road on April 14, 1993. He died in the early morning hours of April 15 at an Odessa hospital.

During his trial in February, Harrell confessed to being the trigger-man. He had been charged with capital murder, but the jury found him guilty of a lesser charge of murder.

Program allows students to enjoy summer writing

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

School hasn't been out for a whole week yet, but no doubt, some youngsters are already getting restless. Project Bluebird — a reading program that allows potential young authors to write and publish their own books — may just fill the bill for chasing away summer boredom.

The free program is available at 12 campuses. The school libraries will be open for participating students.

"Project Bluebird is an extension and reading enrichment program that puts kids of several ages together to work on writing, conferencing and helping each other to publish books," said Lucinda Windsor, language-arts coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

"We had wonderful participation last year in this summer library program, and we have a librarian and a language-arts teacher on each of the (participating) campuses to help with reading and writing skills," she said.

The program, which is in its third year, it being offered to pupils who have completed kindergarten up to students who have completed the sixth grade. Pre-kindergarten children, however, may attend the program at Bunche Early Childhood Center.

Participants may check out books, write and publish a book and take home a free book. Books to take home have been donated by Parker & Parsley, Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club, and Epsilon Eta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.

Project Bluebird meets 12:30-2:30 p.m. The days are as

The American West: May it always remain wild

There is something quite romantic and appealingly frightening about the wild American West: It's vast, rustic and intriguing.

Todd

There's a lot of country out there the farther you get away from the city. And it's hard country, especially if you are not viewing the territory from the vantage of a movie reel, a National Geographic magazine, promotional brochures or inside the air-conditioned comfort of an automobile traveling on a Western route.

There is mystery, always, in the mountains, valleys and plains called wilderness and wild country. For those who venture in, there is risk and, hence, appeal.

It can get mighty hot and plenty cold depending on the season, time and place. You can do a lot of sweating, and had better, on hot-as-blazes days when you're loaded up with water — cool, lukewarm, or steamy. When you're thirsty, you don't mind if the water comes from a canteen, spring or livestock tank. If it's keeping the cattle, predators and other wildlife alive, the water probably will do the same for a thirsty walker, hiker, backpacker or horseman, as in cowboy or cowgirl, out on the trail.

And there may be surprises out there both to neophytic and seasoned wanderers and travelers: the pitch-black, warlike-looking scorpion, the fascinating vinegarroon; rumbling wild boars heading for cover; cats stalking in the night; antlered creatures such as deer and antelope; jackrabbits scampering around, and soaring birds, hawks to turkey vultures, looking for a square meal.

Sojourners to the relative wilds ought to be aware of certain things, mainly themselves, who, as humans, are prone to stumbling, forgetfulness and the invincibility complex.

It's all too easy to be your No. 1 enemy. And if, indeed, you are, you can find a ready scapegoat in the gremlins, who are no longer confined to World War II's mechanical failures in aircraft. The gremlins have landed and are all about.

The dreaded gremlins, who always are around whenever humans are present, can foul up anything mechanical, including the wrist and ankle should you fall after getting tripped up on a rock, log, hole in the ground or direction.

Most of all, be aware of human failings, such as and securing trash containers in the park.

Some calls to Vogler have been outside the city's control, such as concerns about why gasoline prices recently jumped almost simultaneously across the city, and why local television stations replace some nationally syndicated programs with paid programming.

In addition to getting a head start on listening to Midlanders' concerns, Vogler has examined items that will be coming before the City Council in the near future, as well as some ongoing larger issues.

"The major issue facing the city is economic development and diversification where possible," he said.

That concern has been ongoing. A substantial amount of past and present construction in Midland demonstrates the former council's encouragement of economic development, Vogler said.

"I'm ready to put my shoulder to the wheel in joining the makeup of the present council in the economic development program under way at this time," he said.

Vogler cautioned that in the quest for economic development and in light of zoning and re-zoning considerations, the city must not approach the issue with tunnel vision. In re-zoning requests, the council must not forget the integrity of property owners adjacent to proposed development.

Vogler praised council members Pat Schneider and Claudia Egan for recently meeting with residents and developers concerning a controversial re-zoning request to permit two restaurants off Loop 250 between Ward Street and Whitmire Avenue.

The City Council will decide the fate of that request at their meeting on June 14, the first council meeting with new members Vogler and Mayor Bobby Burns.

In a broader outlook of economic development, Vogler said such prosperity is closely linked to availability of transportation, education facilities, medical facilities and arts and recreation.

As a result, the planned new air terminal "is the No. 1 issue facing Midland in economic development," he said.

Impressions of the airport by individuals and business representatives make a difference, said Vogler, a former airport advisory board chairman.

Aside from leaving good impressions, a new terminal is simply needed, he said.

The gateways are outdated making replacement parts hard to obtain, the cost of changes to make the current terminal comply with Americans with Disabilities Act would be about $700,000 and a new terminal would lower the overall cost of operations for airlines and help attract new carriers, Vogler said.

The planned new terminal — already given the go-ahead by the City Council — won't use any local tax dollars, he said.

"As I have mentioned numerous times, the airport is self-sustaining and does not cost the Midland taxpayers to operate," Vogler said.

As for opposition to the planned terminal, that remains relatively small, Vogler said.

"I think the results of the recent election conveyed to me the majority of people are supportive of constructing the new terminal," he said.

His opponent in the council race was Tom Dollahite, who campaigned as representing those who opposed a new terminal.

TESTIFY: Judge finds Harrell in contempt

(From 1B)

Harrell's appearance has changed from the time of his trial, when he dressed in a dark suit and wore thick glasses. On Wednesday he sported the "skinhead" look with a large tattoo on his left arm. He was not wearing his glasses.

Harrell's highly publicized trial focused on his defense that he shot Musick for making sexual advances toward Thomas.

Defense attorney Glen Aaron called Harrell to testify. When he took the stand he refused to answer the first questions.

385th District Court Judge John Hyde allowed Harrell to confer with his attorneys — Jim Eubank and Vern Martin — before he returned to the stand.

The jury was sent out of the room and Martin told the judge that Harrell was scared of what might happen to him if he testified.

Hyde explained later that fear is not a legal reason to refuse to testify. He said a number of valid reasons are legal, but because there are no pending charges against Harrell he has no basis for his refusal to cooperate.

The judge explained to Harrell that he has no privilege to refuse to answer questions and failing to cooperate could result in a charge of contempt.

He also explained that contempt could result in fines or additional jail time.

"Do you understand?" Hyde asked Harrell.

"Yes your Honor," Harrell replied.

The judge then ordered him to answer all the questions and called the jury back into the courtroom.

Aaron proceeded to ask Harrell several questions. To each he responded "I have nothing to say."

Each time he refused to answer the questions Hyde instructed him to answer; he still refused.

Toward the end of the questioning, Harrell wouldn't say anything at all.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre and Aaron both asked Harrell questions regarding his testimony from his trial.

During his trial, Harrell sobbed during his testimony and that of several other witnesses. However, while he was on the stand Wednesday he did not shed a tear despite being asked questions related to his shooting Musick and events leading up to and following the shooting.

The judge said he counted more than 20 questions that Harrell refused to answer. He asked Harrell if he intended to answer questions. Harrell replied "no sir."

Hyde then told Harrell he was in contempt.

After the jury was dismissed for the afternoon, bailiffs returned Harrell to the courtroom.

Hyde again told Harrell that his murder conviction is final with no appeals pending and he is not entitled to any privilege that would excuse him from testifying.

"The questions asked of you were relevant to this trial and your conduct interrupted court hearings," Hyde said.

He also told Harrell his refusal was disruptive and obstructive. Each question he refused to answer is considered a separate act of contempt and could be punished by up to six months in jail for each count.

Hyde said a jury will be selected at a later date to assess his punishment.

CASE: Thomas claims he was scared of Harrell

Musick was shot four times in the back of the head and left to die on a county road. He died in the early morning hours of April 15 in an Odessa hospital.

Thomas is the co-defendant in the case. Harrell, 18, the other co-defendant, was convicted of murder on Feb. 14 and sentenced to 12 years in prison. Harrell confessed to being the trigger-man.

The second day of testimony ended after Thomas testified in his own behalf.

Thomas testified Harrell was the only friend he had who was close to his age. He described Harrell as selfish, domineering and wanting everything done his way.

Thomas said he didn't know why Harrell shot Musick and that he was in shock after it happened. He testified that Harrell ordered him to help clean up the blood and move the body to the back seat of the car in which the three were sitting at the time of the shooting.

He also testified it was Harrell who drove the car to the remote area, dumped the body and then abandoned the car.

During Harrell's trial, Harrell testified Thomas ordered him to help clean up and move the body after he shot Musick. Harrell testified Thomas drove the car and abandoned it.

Thomas also said Harrell was the one to dump Musick's money bag and their bloody clothes in a field.

Thomas said he tried to go home but Harrell wouldn't let him.

He also testified Harrell was the one who came up with the idea to return to Musick's house and ask his roommate why Musick never picked them up.

At his trial, Harrell said Thomas formulated that alibi.

The defendant said he was "ashamed and hurt" and called the shooting a "nightmare."

Thomas said that after the shooting Harrell was "looking at his tattoos and flexing his muscles and acting real macho."

He testified that Harrell came up with the story claiming Musick made a sexual advance toward Thomas and that was why Harrell shot him.

After his arrest, Thomas confessed to the crime and told officers Musick grabbed his crotch.

A week later he recanted that story and told officers he didn't know why Musick had been shot.

Thomas testified that the reason he lied initially was because he was scared he would go to prison. He said Harrell told him they could probably get away with killing a homosexual, which Musick was.

"I was very ashamed and very frightened. Ramsey told me to say that (story) or I was going to prison for the rest of my life," Thomas said.

"After I just seen what he'd done to Tommy I was afraid of him," he said.

Thomas testified he did whatever Harrell told him because he was scared of him, although Harrell never actually threatened him.

Thomas is on trial for capital murder, robbery and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. He remains free on a $25,000 bond he posted in August. He is under "house arrest."

Testimony is expected to conclude today and be turned over to the jury.

RUSTIC: Romance of West is in beauty of its being running out of drinking water, getting tripped up on your own two feet, falling out of the saddle, not knowing where you are, not putting out every burning cinder in the campfire, not bringing a knife and folding shovel and not packing out what you packed in.

Any soul who is so fortunate as to roam the wilderness ought to leave it as pure and as pristine as Nature will allow.

Even old working hands on a ranch live and work within the laws of Nature.

It's hard and futile to do otherwise.

They let a flash flood or a dust storm pass on by and fix up what can be mended. They tend to a wayward dogie and find the calf another mother. More than money-in-the bank at market time, the dogie is a tender creature entrusting its life to the hired hand, who, chances are, is a sentimental soul in a tough hide.

And old cowboys, like weathered campers, abide by Murphy's Law, which says that if something is mechanical, something is bound to go wrong. That's why the Good Lord created windmill cowboys to fix broken rigs.

And an old camper, if times get really rough, can draw water out of the air or out of cactus.

At sunset and in the still of the night, you can enjoy the yipping and howling of wild critters, mainly the cunning and elusive coyote, and the curiosity of deer, antelope and other roaming creatures.

It's wise to be safe in a brave-sort-of-way, such as bedding down in a secure tent and having a light source, flashlight or lantern, handy. A sturdy tent may not keep lightning or Bigfoot out, but neither would a Sherman tank. Just do the best you can and live on.

The West: May it always retain its wildness and wilderness, its natural form unadulterated by cement mixers, asphalt machines, fast-food restaurants, cable television, high-rise buildings, landfills, pollution, bureaucracy and confusion.

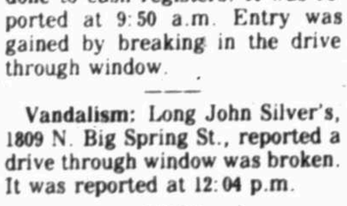

The romance of the West is in the beauty of its very being.

MINISTER: Director talks of visit to Russian prisons

ed Methodist Church — spent 10 days in May in Russia and during her visit toured three prisons, one of which houses female prisoners.

"The women are permitted and encouraged to personalize their bed area, and many of the women have embroidered on their pillow cases and have made little cloths for their table," said Ms. Barrett, a speaker at the 85th annual session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the UMC.

"They have decorated the walls with hand work, mostly embroidery and lace, some macrame. There are paintings of mothers and children all over the place. The walls also have adages mostly relating to love between mothers and children.

"Every dormitory has a dayroom with a television set, and prisoners are responsible for decorating that and keeping it clean. In every dormitory there is a staff person, rather like a house mother," she said.

"Women are permitted to keep their children with them — if they give birth while they are in prison — until the children are 4 years old. The children all live in a large house or dormitory kind of building where they have play rooms and dining rooms and a playground."

Ms. Barrett and her group — three other Americans and two Russians — spent a day with the women. They spoke with individual prisoners and worshiped with as many as wanted to attend the service in the auditorium.

The central region of Russia where they visited has 22 prisons. They were told only one is for women.

"When I first started working in (U.S.) prisons, women were a very small minority of the prisoner population," Ms. Barrett said.

"I don't know where women stand now. The United States has the highest per capita incarceration rate in the world. I can remember when it used to be we were third to the Soviet Union and South Africa."

The Russian prisons Ms. Barrett's group visited were run by uniformed military, and had numbers rather than names.

"At Prison 13, which is a men's prison, we visited in the unit where prisoners have family visits. The rooms are about the size of a standard hotel room. A prisoner can spend up to three days with family members in a contact visit. They do their own cooking and have all of their time together."

The day the group visited, they met a woman and child visiting her husband and a mother and father visiting their son.

"The mother asked me if we have this kind of thing in America and spoke about how much it meant to her to be able to have this opportunity to spend time with her son as a family. I was really impressed with her."

She asked prison personnel and prisoners about the history of this practice.

"As far as I could tell, this has been the practice for quite some time. It seemed to me — and this was at Prison 13 — that there was an attempt to provide in the prison a normal environment where family relationships could be sustained, physical exercise could be maintained, and every prison that we visited, had an auditorium for concerts and programs. And it all seemed to be taken for granted."

The purpose of the group's mission to Russia was to share its expertise and to listen to the concerns of prisoners and church officials involved in establishing a prison ministry.

"Our intention was to open up possibilities and not to duplicate programs which are indigenous to another culture," said Ms. Barrett. "Part of what we wanted to do is to say we can work together."

Ms. Barrett — a graduate of Drew University and Drew Theological School — began her ministry at the Morris County (N.J.) jail, where she developed a community-based program using volunteers in counseling, education and post-release programs.

She has been involved with a number of international pastoral care organizations specializing in ministry in prisons, hospitals, and the armed forces.

She came back from Russia feeling positive about the opportunities available to the Russians.

"If we're lucky, both the prison and the church are going to be unencumbered by old ways of doing things. They are going to be able to create something of their own, and that's very exciting to me."

Ms. Barrett's Russian trip began last fall at the annual meeting of the general board of higher education and ministry.

"The United Methodist Church is a global church, and I think that's very important to remember, and the United Methodist Church is in Russia along with a lot of other places in the world.

"We have a bishop in Russia — Bishop Rudiegor Minor. He spoke with me about some work that a congregation in Yekerimburg has been doing with prisons, and asked if I would come over with a team to assist them in developing that work."

Although Ms. Barrett left Russia with positive feelings about the opportunities there for successfully establishing congregations inside prisons, she also recognized the challenges that Russians face.

"Everywhere we were in Russia, there was evidence of significant infrastructure decay, and this is true in the prisons as well. They really are struggling with the shifting economic systems. Resources are at a premium and we were told that staff are not paid on a regular basis. They have a real challenge."

Sections of nation's crops wither under drought conditions

SPUR (AP) — Dry weather is pulling the wheat belt a few notches tighter this spring, withering winter crops in many fields.

One year after record flooding inundated crops and towns in the upper Midwest, and after a winter of record snowfall in the East and Northeast, farming patches around the nation are suffering from drought.

It's probably not going to show up on your grocery bill, but it's going to be rough on some farmers.

Agriculture officials in Texas, the nation's fifth-leading wheat producer, are predicting a winter wheat harvest of 87 million bushels, a 26 percent drop from last year.

"Texas is probably worst off as hard winter wheat states go," said Vaughn Siegenthaler, U.S. Department of Agriculture statistician.

In neighboring Oklahoma, statisticians expect a wheat crop down less than 1 percent, to 153 million bushels.

The West's prolonged drought of the 1980s was eased in the 1992-93 wet season, but dry conditions returned to the West Coast and the Southeast this winter. California received only 65 percent of its normal rain and snowfall during the past rainy season.

Nationally, as of May 10, the USDA projected a national winter wheat harvest of 1.66 billion bushels, 6 percent less than last year.

That won't be enough to have a significant effect on the nationwide wheat business or on the price of wheat products at the supermarket, said Gregg Doud, a market analyst for U.S. Wheat Associates in Washington, D.C.

But it hits hard on some farmers, and not just because of the grain loss.

Eddie Clark and other wheat growers around Spur, about 60 miles southeast of Lubbock in west Texas, plant winter wheat to provide early grazing for their cattle.

But from September, when Clark planted his wheat, until March, he got less than 1 inch of rain. Average Lubbock rainfall for that period is 7.70 inches.

Clark's cattle grazed on wheat for just six weeks this spring.

"It just didn't grow," he said. "A cow got one bite, and that was the end of it for that plant."

He had to sell 130 calves in January at about 700 pounds each, instead of waiting until spring when they would have weighed about 900 pounds. He didn't say how much he lost on the sale.

Heavy rain in May broke Texas' dry spell, enabling farmers to plant cotton. But damage already was done to the wheat.

Some farmers plowed the wimpy wheat under to conserve precious moisture and stop messing with a crop worth less than its cost to harvest.

"This was wheat right here," said Dickens County extension agent Robert Herrington, pointing to a barren field near Spur. "And let me tell you, that's not good. That's not good at all."

Dry conditions actually helped in some areas, said USDA statistician Greg Preston, especially in parts of the Midwest where fields last fall were still soggy from floods.

It was too dry in parts of Indiana, as much as 6 inches behind normal rainfall this spring. Rain fell this week, staving off crop damage, but weekly rain is needed, agriculture officials said.

In the Southeast, Georgia has had its driest spring in eight years, putting this year's cotton crop at risk.

Agriculture statisticians in South Carolina last month reported 98 percent of the state's farmland as short or very short of moisture. That could portend a repeat of last summer, the driest in the state since record-keeping began a century ago. Crop losses in South Carolina exceeded $264 million last year.

Nebraska's wheat and sugar beets also are suffering from dry weather, but thunderstorms bring a risk of too much of a good thing.

Heavy rain and hail Tuesday in Nebraska flattened some crops.

Hepatitis B infects patients at center

HOUSTON (AP) — One-third of the patients at a newly opened kidney dialysis center have been infected with hepatitis B.

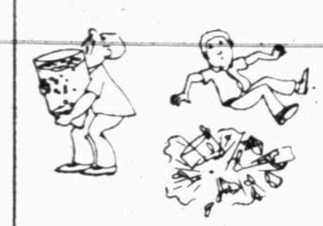

The outbreak could threaten the Texas Dialysis Kidney Center's Medicare certification. The center opened its doors five months ago.

Inspectors from the federal Centers for Disease Control found that 14 of the center's 43 patients had become infected with hepatitis B, a viral disease that attacks the liver. It is most often spread through contact with infected blood.

The U.S. Healthcare Financing Administration, which pays for continuous kidney dialysis for most patients who need it, informed Texas Dialysis it will terminate the facility's Medicare contract unless it complies with regulations by Saturday.

CHRISTIAN: Missionary speaks at United Methodist Conference

ference of the United Methodist Church. The conference closes at noon today at First UMC.

"Christians in the West need to be educated about what's happening to their brothers and sisters in the Holy Land," Awad said in an interview. "As I travel in the United States, I learn that very few Christians realize that there is a church in the Holy Land and that this church is made up of Palestinian Christians of all denominations. Not only is there a church, but that church is dying.

"In 1948, when Israel became a state, the Christian population in Jerusalem was one-third of the total population of the city. Today, it is less than 2 percent. So, there has been a drastic decline in Christian presence and influence in the Holy Land. For me, this is very sad because Christianity has survived in Jerusalem since the first church, and it's hard to see it die in our day and time."

One way U.S. Christians can support Palestinian Christians, Awad told the conference, is by being "willing to stand in solidarity with the church in Jerusalem.

"Many Christians visit the Holy Land. They go and visit the shrines, the places where Jesus was born, died, performed miracles. The tour guides will show them the stones, but most tourists never stop to see the living church, the people in the Holy Land who are still committed to Christ and have kept this commitment for the last 19 centuries."

Awad's personal odyssey began in 1948 when the Arab-Israeli War made refugees of those Palestinians living in West Jerusalem. His mother, he said, was "forced to relocate" with her eight children and did so in East Jerusalem, which remained Palestinian and became part of Jordan.

"In 1967, another war took place in the Middle East, we call it the Six Day War," Awad said. "At that time, I was a student in Switzerland, and I was not able to return home because my home became occupied by Israelis who looked at the Palestinian people as enemies."

Awad came to the United States. Then, in 1979, he returned to the West Bank and started missionary work in Bethlehem. He was accompanied by his wife, Brenda. In 1987, the Israeli government asked them to leave the country.

"I am a Palestinian, but I was in my country as an American citizen, and the Israeli government told me that my visa was expired. One less Palestinian means one more Jew. This is a policy of the state of Israel, to bring as many Jews to the state as possible. To make room for them, they have to clear out the Palestinians."

Partly due to the efforts of the Methodist Federation for Social Action lobbying on his behalf, Awad said the Israeli government lifted the ban on his return. He was able to return to his homeland last Christmas on a tourist visa issued by the Israeli government. In July he and his wife will return to Israel where they will teach at Bethlehem Bible College.

"The Israeli government, for a long time, felt I may be a threat to the security of the state of Israel," Awad said. He said the reasons for this were threefold: "I am a Palestinian. I am a Christian. I'm educated. I speak out, and I love my people."

Who are the Palestinians?

"There are no simple answers. There were many groups living in ancient Palestine. And the land we call Palestine was invaded by many kinds of people. The Palestinians of today are made up of all the people that invaded Palestine and intermarried with the local population from the ancient times of the Canaanites until today. There is no such thing as pure ethnic Jews or pure ethnic Arabs.

"Most Americans think of it this way — the Arabs are descendants of Ishmael, and the Jews are descendants of Isaac. And it is so simplistic. To say that the Arabs are the descendants of Ishmael is like saying the American people are the descendants of George Washington. That would be a ridiculous thing to think."

For the past four years, Awad has spoken about Palestinian Christians and Palestinian human rights.

"Many of the Palestinians who left in 1948 are still in refugee camps," Awab said. "They have never been repatriated and this is part of the tension in the Middle East. You can't force 1 million people out of their homes and crowd them in refugee camps and expect everything will be fine and dandy."

When the United Nations partitioned Jerusalem in 1948, Awad said, it gave the Palestinians less than half of the land although the population broke down "one-third Palestinian Christian, one-third Palestinian Moslem and one-third Jew."

The situation arose out of guilt, Awad said.

"People in the United Nations had the guilt of the Holocaust, and they wanted to solve the Jewish problem, which was the most pressing problem in Europe after the Second World War. And none of the European countries were willing to give a chunk of their land to the Jews, so it was convenient to give them Palestinian land. First, because the Jews wanted it.

"The Jews have a historical connection with the Holy Land that goes back before the Romans destroyed the Jewish nation in 70 A.D. and in 125 A.D.

"The Jews, the religious among them, have always felt that the Holy Land belonged to them. The non-religious Jews were running from persecution and they thought the Holy Land would be the logical place more for political and cultural reasons. It's the land of their prophets and fathers and heroes.

"From the Palestinian point of view, after living in a country 2,000 years, nobody can come and say, 'This is not your country. Get out of it.' The Palestinians have roots in the Holy Land, some of them that go back 5,000 years. So, some of them have been there before the Jews came to the Holy Land with Joshua — I'm talking about Biblical times now. The Jews came and left and the Palestinians continued to be there."

For 18 years, until around 1964 or 1966, Awad said, "The Palestinians waited for the United Nations or the super powers to help bring them back to their homes. But both failed.

"Then, the Palestinians began the liberation organization, which is called the PLO. The purpose of the PLO to start with was to bring justice to the Palestinians by helping them to retrieve their homes and their belongings. Out of frustration, some Palestinian factions used terrorism to achieve their goals.

"But the majority of Palestinian people were non-violent people and were hoping for a political settlement. But, until today, there is no political settlement for the Palestinians.

"And right now there is a peace process going on which is giving many Israelis and Palestinians hope that there will be a final settlement."

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Those who are creatively inclined should have a good idea as to how to proceed today. Outside distractions may interfere with your efforts to meet a work deadline.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Events will work to your advantage if you are willing to take a calculated risk. Major relationship developments are in the offing. Use your influence to benefit others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Bold ideas will prevail on the business front. Forget any feelings of self-importance and treat others as equals. You have an excellent chance of finding a partner you will be very comfortable with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is time to forgive and forget. Brooding over an old disappointment only hampers your efforts to move ahead. You will have to invest more effort in a romantic relationship to make it work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A new teacher could have a tremendous impact on your life. Develop your mind to its fullest potential but do not try to force your ideas on others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let someone else take the lead today. A compromise will help you preserve the family peace. Make a point of being fair with your friends and relatives at all times.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are born explorers, curious about their surroundings and very mobile. Although family ties are important to them, these Gemini may strike out on their own at a fairly early age.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠!

By and large, it pays to lead from your longest suit against a no-trump contract. If you decide to follow a hunch and it goes wrong, your partner won't be thrilled. But when you turn out to be right.... This hand is from the recent European Mixed Teams event in Barclona.

The auction shown occurred in the Poland-France match. The Polish North-South reached three no trump on an unremarkable auction and, after a normal spade lead, declarer would have collected nine or 10 tricks, depending on the defense.

For France, Catherine Saul decided declarer was probably prepared for a lead in the unbid major. With her near-worthless hand, therefore, she found a lead of pure genius—the queen of clubs!

Systematically, the lead could have been from a strong holding headed by the king-queen-ten, so declarer took the ace of clubs. The king of diamonds was cashed and, to protect against the possibility of East having started with Q J x x in the suit, declarer crossed to dummy with the ace of spades to lead a diamond. When East produced the jack declarer won with the ace and continued with a diamond to West's queen.

That was not a great success. West reverted clubs and four tricks in that suit plus the ace of hearts meant down two.

At the other table the French bid ultra-conservatively to two diamonds and—a little undeservedly—gained 7 International Match Points on the hand.

Fans vote Johnny Cash prime award on country-music radio

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Johnny Cash, somewhat of a forgotten man on radio the past 15 years, got a prime spot on a country music broadcast thanks to his fans.

Country fans vote Johnny Cash the Legend Award.

Cash was presented the Legend Award on Tuesday for "timeless influence and his continued impact on the sounds of country music today." The honor was one of nine popularity awards on a show syndicated by the Entertainment Radio Network.

Radio station program directors and music industry executives nominated artists and results were based on about 250,000 calls to toll-free numbers advertised over the 260 participating stations.

"When I was a little boy, I always wanted to sing hillbilly music, gospel music, on the radio," Cash told listeners.

Singer Marty Stuart, a former Cash band member, presented the award.

"The reason country music is so popular is the doors you opened so many years ago," Stuart said.

The show also honored Reba McEntire as entertainer of the year and best female artist, Alan Jackson as best male artist and Tim McGraw as best new artist.

NEW YORK — His well-chronicled stay at the Betty Ford Clinic behind him, Mickey Mantle is back in the public eye.

Baseball great Mickey Mantle is back in the public eye.

Hundreds of Mantle fans stood patiently in line for up to three hours Wednesday, waiting for the 62-year-old baseball Hall of Famer to sign copies of his autobiography, "All My Octobers."

Mantle sat beside a tall bottle of water as fans young and old poured into the B. Dalton Bookseller on Fifth Avenue.

Mantle, who detailed his alcoholism in a television interview with Bob Costas and a first-person piece in Sports Illustrated, did not speak with reporters at the book signing.

He checked into the rehabilitation clinic in January after four decades of drinking.

LOS ANGELES — Bodybuilder-turned-movie director Franco Columbu got a special award from the president of Italy during ceremonies that included praise from his best friend Arnold Schwarzenegger.

"I'll say a few words about the man we honor. He is a family man, admired by millions of youngsters all over the world. Well, enough about myself," said Schwarzenegger, bringing grins from the Biltmore Hotel crowd.

"Franco and I know each other almost 30 years," Schwarzenegger continued. "I know him better than anyone. He didn't want to just lie around on the beach. He went on and got his doctor of chiropractic degree.

"Now, he's gotten into show business. He inspires kids to stay away from tobacco. He is a loyal and great friend."

During the June 3 ceremony, Columbu received the Cavaliere Ufficiale of the Order of Merit of the Republic of Italy. The consul general of Italy presented the award, saying it was given to those who bring recognition to Italy.

NEW YORK — Skater Dorothy Hamill and her husband have sold the Ice Capades to the entertainment company headed by religious broadcaster Pat Robertson.

Hamill, who won the gold medal for women's figure skating at the 1976 Olympics, said the deal would enable her to produce more skating programs for TV.

International Family Entertainment Inc., which owns The Family Channel cable network, would not say how much it paid for the touring skating show. Robertson's son Tim, president of the Virginia Beach, Va.-based company, said the deal was part of the company's goal of supplying high-quality family entertainment.

Hamill and her husband, Dr. Kenneth Forsythe, who acquired the Ice Capades name in June 1993, agreed to stay on with the company for at least five years.

It's war

CINCINNATI — Baseball owners voted unanimously Wednesday to require a three-quarters majority to approve a labor agreement during a strike, giving both large- and small-market clubs the ability to block a settlement.

Owners hailed the step, with at least one saying it will increase their unity. Donald Fehr, head of the Major League Baseball Players Association, called the development "ominous" and "extraordinarily negative."

"It would allow eight owners to perpetuate a dispute," Fehr said from Washington. "That is not a step in the right direction. It's a direction of people preparing for war."

Tickets due

People who ordered World Cup tickets should receive them by Friday at the latest, the chief U.S. organizer said Wednesday.

Alan Rothenberg, speaking during a telephone conference call, said additional tickets had been held back by organizers to deal with problems. He downplayed reports of complaints, saying it was less than one-half of one percent.

"By the end of the week, by Friday, we should have delivered every single order," Rothenberg said. "Anybody who has not received an order by Federal Express should call (310) 277-9494 so we can trace it for them."

Lowery cut

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Nick Lowery, the most accurate kicker in NFL history, was released today by the Kansas City Chiefs, who hope to re-sign him later.

Lowery, 38, will be asked to take a cut from his scheduled base salary of $675,000 to help the Chiefs get under the NFL salary cap.

"Nick Lowery has been outstanding for the Chiefs both on and off the field," said Chiefs president Carl Peterson. "It is our sincere hope that we will be able to work something out and have him return as a Chief once he's had the opportunity to pursue the free agent marketplace."

"I would be lying if I said it didn't hurt me," Lowery told The Kansas City Star. "If you had asked me about this five weeks ago, I would have said it really shocked me."

1994 NBA FINALS

Hey, lend me a point

■ The Houston Rockets win Game 1 in the NBA Finals over the New York Knicks, but both teams search for points.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets won the opener of the NBA Finals 85-78 Wednesday night in the kind of game the New York Knicks wanted.

The low-scoring game featured plenty of defense and that caused poor shooting and the Rockets, who had been off for eight days, were able to hold the scrappy Knicks who couldn't pull off another playoff comeback.

The Rockets had a 77-65 lead with 8:53 left and that dwindled to three with 2:13 remaining. But a free throw by Hakeem Olajuwon, who had 28 points, and a dunk by Othis Thorpe, who had 16 rebounds, built the lead to 82-76 with 1:02 remaining.

Patrick Ewing led the Knicks, who closed out a tough seven-game Eastern Conference final against Indiana on Sunday, with 23 points and Charles Oakley had 12.

The second half was the lowest scoring half in finals history as the Knicks outscored Houston 32-31. The previous low was 69 by Syracuse and Fort Wayne in 1955.

"I'm just so happy. That's one step toward the right direction," Olajuwon said.

Game 2 of the best-of-7 series is Friday night in Houston with New York scheduled to play host to the next three games.

The Knicks cut into the Rockets' lead as Ewing stayed in the game after getting his fifth personal foul with 5:19 to play. His basket with 4:31 to go cut the lead to 79-73. Houston's Robert Horry missed two free throws and Anthony Mason came up with a three-point play for the Knicks to make it 79-76.

The early part of the game was played by two teams that looked like they were playing in the first finals in quite some time. The Rockets last made an appearance in 1986 and the Knicks were last in the finals in 1973.

The Rockets started slowly, missing their first four shots, as New York took a 5-0 lead. Houston caught up with 4:19 left when Thorpe converted an offensive rebound to tie the game 16-16.

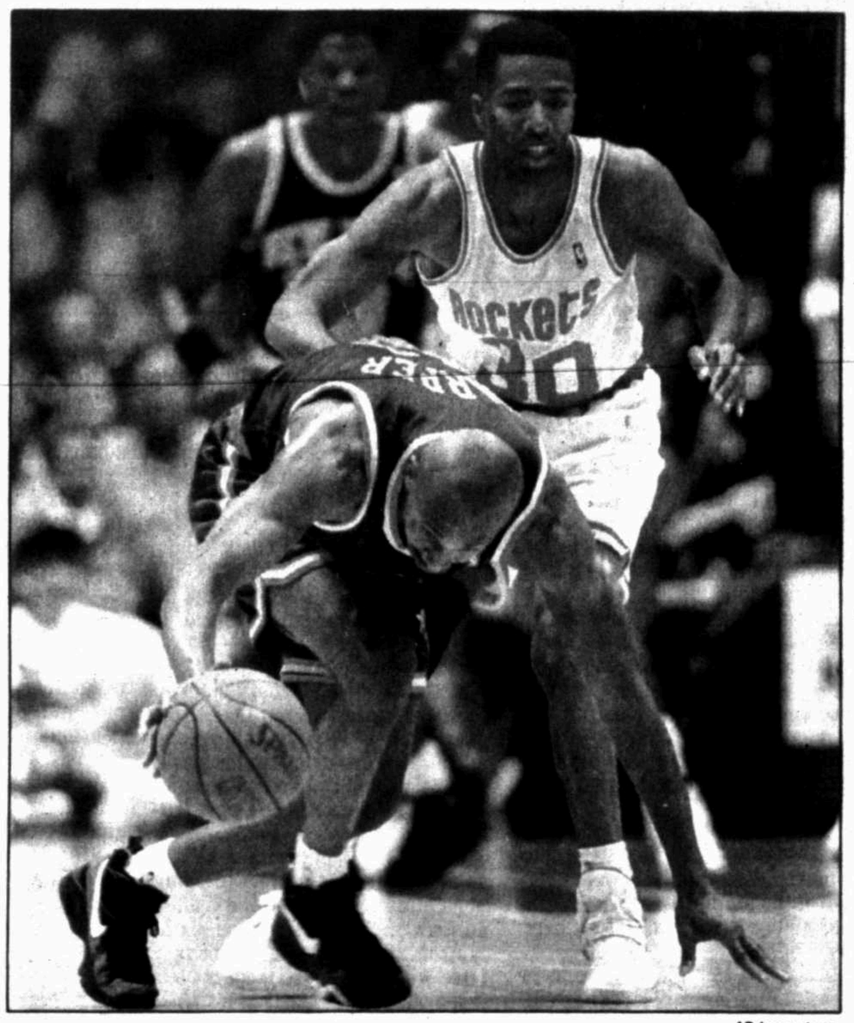

The Rockets stretched a 26-24 lead after one quarter to 54-46 at halftime as Olajuwon outscored Ewing 19-12. But it was Carl Herrera who gave Houston n unexpected boost off the bench.

Herrera, who missed the last seven playoff games with a dislocated shoulder, had eight points in the half after averaging just 4.7 in the regular season.

The 54 points were the most in the first half against the Knicks in 12 games.

Capitalizing on strong rebounding and poor New York shooting, the Rockets led 72-63 after three quarters. The Knicks went just 6-for-26 in the third period and were hitting 37 percent for the game. Houston, behind Thorpe's 13 rebounds, held a 39-28 advantage on the boards.

With the score 65-60, Houston got the next six points on a layup by Thorpe, Sam Cassell's jumper and Thorpe's two free throws with 59 seconds left in the quarter.

■ Midland College stays in third place, but loses ground in quest to gain second national golf title.

Staff Report

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Midland College maintained its hold on third place here Wednesday at Regal McCormick Ranch in the National Junior College Golf Tournament, but lost ground in its quest to win the school's second national championship.

Midland fired a team score of 290 Wednesday, but Scottsdale Community College had a 286 to add four strokes to its margin over MC and two more strokes over second place Central Alabama Community College. Scottsdale has a two round score of 578 while Central Alabama stands at 582 and MC 588, 10 full strokes off the pace at the halfway mark.

Odessa College is in sixth place at 594 while New Mexico Junior College, both in the same conference as the Chaparrals, is in seventh place with 595.

Kicker faces hurdle

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Midland's Tim Stanley recently got through what he thought would be his biggest hurdle in making the Tai Kwon Do World Championships team. What he didn't realize was that getting to the site of the tournament, Malaysia, would present a bigger problem than actually qualifying for the team.

Stanley, who finished first in the first degree men's black belt competition April 9-10 in Denver to qualify for the team, has yet to raise enough money for the flight from Midland to Malaysia. But Jimenez

Big Spring takes on Cubs in 4A

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — The way Brenham Cub coach Earl Hathaway talks about his team's pitching, you'd think the Cubs were lucky to be playing Big Spring in the state baseball tournament today.

But the record shows Hathaway's low assesment of his young arms might be because he's a bit spoiled.

Brenham (32-3) and Big Spring (27-6) play the first Class 4A state semifinal at noon at Austin's Disch-Falk Field.

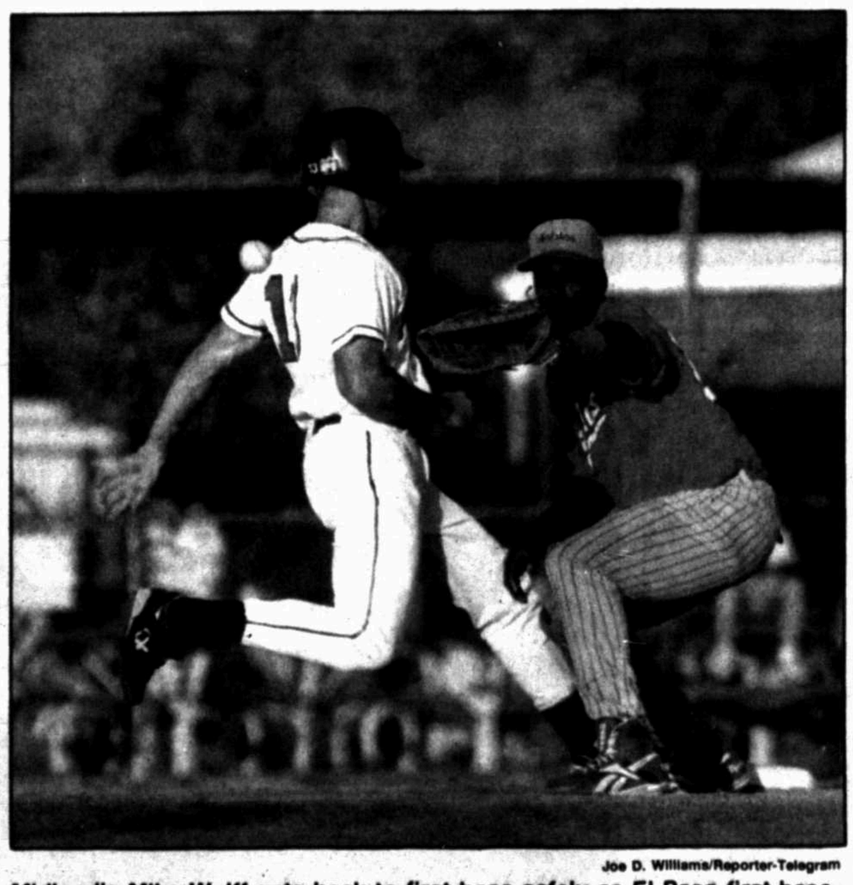

The Region III champion Cubs have had some exceptional pitchers over the years, including Jon Peters, who garnered national attention five years ago when he won 53 straight games.

So it's not that Brenham's current staff throws poorly. It just pales a bit compared to past Cub starters.

"We don't have good pitching," Hathaway said. "As a matter of fact, there probably won't be a team in the state tournament we can pitch for. I don't have that outstanding stopper we're used to around here."

But they do have an outstanding team, one that has been ranked in the

El Paso wins West's first half title

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

The El Paso Diablos literally had champagne chilling in the lockerroom. While it may have taken a few more buckets of ice than originally planned, the El Paso Diablos were finally able to break out the corkscrews.

In devil-like conditions, with temperatures well over 100 degrees for much of the game, the El Paso Diablos melted the Midland Angels bullpen for nine runs in the last three innings for a come-from-behind 15-10 win at Christensen Stadium to take the first half pennant of the Texas League Western Division.

El Paso, which has won the past four divisional halves, is assured of a spot in a season-ending post-season playoffs with the win. Midland, which has lost two of three games to El Paso so far this series, drops to 28-31 on the year and in second place in the Texas League's Western Division. The Texas League has reverted back to the league rule of two years ago, stating if the Diablos should win the second half title, then there would be no Western Division playoffs.

In Midland's four wins over El Paso this season, the Angels have averaged 11 runs per game, so the Halos knew that offensive production would be a must in taking one from the Diablos.

Midland started out quickly with Mark Sweeney driving his third home run of the week, a three-run shot off starter Francisco Gamez, to give Midland an early 3-0 lead in the bottom of the first. Sweeney, who was 5-for-11 with 10 RBI and two home runs prior to Wednesday, went 1-for-4 with three RBI.

El Paso, however, stormed back to score six runs in the fifth after chasing starter Dom Johnson. The Diablos took advantage of four hits and a costly error by second baseman Jeff Barns in what could have been an inning ending double play. Instead, shortstop Mark Loretta reached base and loaded the bases with one out. Danny Perez, who finished the 4-for-6 with two RBI, stroked a two-run double to pull El Paso to within 3-2. MONTREAL — Jeff Bagwell hit two home runs and pitcher Brian Williams went 2-for-4 and drove in the deciding runs Wednesday night as the Houston Astros snapped Montreal's six-game winning streak with a 7-2 victory and moved back into first place in the NL Central.

■ NL Roundup

Williams, a career .136 hitter before this season, broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth with a two-out, two-run single to left on an 0-2 pitch from Jeff Fassero.

The RBIs were the first of the season for Williams (3-2), who singled in the third and is now 4-for-10 on the season and 10-for-54 in his career with six RBIs.

Bagwell's home runs, a three-run shot off reliever Brian Looney in the seventh and a solo homer off Fassero (4-4) in the fourth, were his 14th and 15th of the season.

Rockies 5, Mets 4

DENVER — Dante Bichette and Joe Girardi had RBI singles in the eighth inning, rallying Colorado past New York.

The Rockies, scoring the winning runs in the eighth for the second straight day, beat Bret Saberhagen (6-3), who overcame an early 3-0 deficit and held a 4-3 lead entering the eighth.

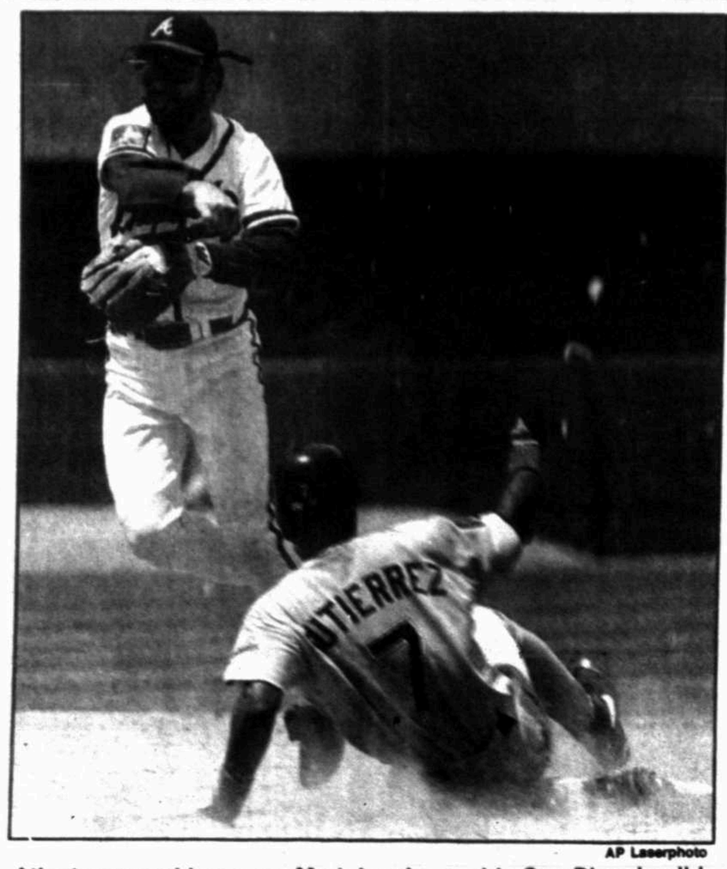

Mike Kingery led off with a double down the left-field line. After a strikeout, Andres Galarraga was hit by a pitch. Bichette then singled to center for the tying run. Saberhagen fanned Charlie Hayes, but Girardi singled on the first pitch for the go-ahead run.

Marlins 5, Dodgers 4

MIAMI — Matias Carrillo capped a three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth with a two-out single, giving Florida a victory over Los Angeles.

It was the 15th blown save in 24 opportunites for the Dodgers' bullpen. This time, the culprit was Todd Worrell (3-3), who blew a save for the fifth time in seven chances this season.

Rookie pinch-hitter Jesus Tavarez tied the game with a two-out, two-run single, driving in Kurt Abbott and Chuck Carr. Tavarez made it to second on the play, then raced home on Carrillo's line-drive hit off Al Osuna, sliding in head-first when Brett Butler's throw was wide.

Atlanta second baseman Mark Lemke avoids San Digeo's sliding Ricky Gutierrez to complete a double play.

Cardinals 8, Reds 2

ST. LOUIS — Terry McGriff drove in three runs and Allen Watson won his second consecutive start as St. Louis used a 14-hit attack to beat Cincinnati.

McGriff, the Cardinals' backup catcher, had a two-run double off John Smiley (4-8) in the second and an RBI groundout in the sixth. He's 6-for-14 with five doubles and seven of his nine RBIs against left-handers.

Watson (4-3) left with a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand after walking Jerome Walton on four pitches to start the sixth. Watson allowed two runs on four hits with three strikeouts and three walks.

Braves 5, Padres 2

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton — battling one of the worst slumps of his career — had three hits and three RBIs as Tom Glavine and Atlanta beat San Diego.

The victory was Atlanta's eighth in nine games, increased baseball's best record to 37-19 and improved the Braves' mark to 20-2 against the National League West.

Glavine (7-5) allowed a run on six hits and struck out seven before leaving for a pinch hitter after seven innings. He increased his career reeord to 13-7 against the Padres.

Pirates 3, Giants 1

PITTSBURGH — Denny Neagle of Pittsburgh pitched his first complete game in 124 major-league appearances, shutting down San Francisco on four hits.

Andy Van Slyke, back in the lineup after a slump-induced two-game benching, tripled in a run as the Pirates beat the Giants for the first time in six tries this season.

Phillies 3, Cubs 0

PHILADELPHIA — David West pitched seven strong innings and Philadelphia sent Chicago to its ninth straight loss.

The Cubs' losing streak is their longest since a nine-game skid in June 1991. Philadelphia swept the three-game series and has won six in a row against Chicago this season.

West (2-5) allowed three hits, struck out five and walked two.

Rangers reach .500

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Dean Palmer hit a two-run double and scored during a sixth-inning rally Wednesday night that gave the Texas Rangers a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees and their first .500 record of the year.

The Rangers (28-28) broke even with their fourth win in five games. They lost in their seven previous chances of reaching .500.

■ AL Roundup

Darren Oliver relieved for Texas with the bases loaded and no outs in the ninth with a 6-4 lead. He got Gerald Williams to ground into a run-scoring double play on the first pitch, then retired Bob Melvin on a foul pop for his first major-league save.

Dan Smith (1-0), called up Monday night, earned his first major-league victory by pitching 1⅓ scoreless innings. He relieved Hurst with one out and two on in the sixth. Smith got out of that jam and left the bases loaded in the seventh.

New York jumped out to a 4-0 lead after three innings behind two RBIs from streaking Bernie Williams and a two-run homer by Mike Stanley.

Angels 5, Twins 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Bo Jackson and Spike Owen homered in the first inning to help Mark Langston end his four-game losing streak as California beat Minnesota.

The victory was only the Angels' second in their last 10 games.

Langston (3-4) allowed two runs, four hits and two walks over seven innings while tying his season-high with seven strikeouts. Mike Butcher and Joe Grahe each worked an inning in relief, with Grahe earning his ninth save.

Owen hit Jim Deshaies' fourth pitch of the game to left for his first homer since last June 19. After Chad Curtis singled, Jackson hit his seventh home run with two out for a 3-0 lead.

White Sox 3, Blue Jays 2

CHICAGO — Mike LaValliere singled home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as Chicago rallied to beat Toronto.

With Chicago trailing 2-1, Julio Franco opened the inning with a single off reliever Darren Hall. Pinch-runner Joey Cora took third on a single by Robin Ventura and scored on Darren Jackson's single to tie the game.

Lance Johnson struck out before LaValliere singled up the middle, scoring Ventura with the winning run. Hall (1-2) allowed four hits in just a third of an inning.

Tigers 14, Red Sox 5

DETROIT — Rookie Chris Gomez broke out of a 1-for-17 slump with three hits and four RBIs, and Detroit used a 10-run fifth inning to rout Boston.

Bill Gullickson (4-4) allowed three runs and four hits over five innings, struck out two and walked one in his second straight victory.

Boston rookie Gar Finnvold, making his fifth career start, couldn't hold a three-run lead and remains in search of his first major-league win.

Orioles 6, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY — Cal Ripken homered for the second straight game and later ignited a three-run seventh inning that carried Baltimore over Kansas City.

Ripken hit his sixth homer in the third off former teammate Bob Milacki, giving the Orioles a 3-1 lead. After Mike Macfarlane's RBI triple helped give the Royals a 4-3 lead in the sixth, Baltimore regained the lead off three pitchers in the seventh.

Ripken's two-out single sent Mark McLemore to third, then Billy Brewer replaced Milacki (0-1) and gave up an RBI single to Rafael Palmeiro. After Harold Baines' RBI single, Leo Gomez greeted reliever Rusty Meacham with a run-scoring double for a 6-4 lead.

Alan Mills (1-2) relieved with two out in the sixth and got his first victory since last Sept. 21 against Cleveland.

Rangers' misery close to ending

NEW YORK (AP) — Japan bombed Pearl Harbor. Elvis was a hunk-a hunk-a burnin' love. JFK was shot. Watergate toppled a presidency. America cheered Sam and Diane. The Soviet Union came unglued.

So much has happened since the New York Rangers last won the Stanley Cup. If the Rangers beat the Vancouver Canucks in Game 5 of the finals Thursday night, more than five decades of misery will end for the Broadway Blues and their fanatic faithful.

What will it be like in Madison Square Garden if the Rangers win?

"Since the day I came here, I've asked myself that question," general manager Neil Smith said. "I don't know if there are words enough to describe the euphoria, the insanity."

"The place," coach Mike Keenan said, "will be a madhouse."

"I don't know," said John Davidson, the goalie on the New York team that lost to Montreal in the 1979 finals and now a television analyst. "What does 54 years of passion feel like?"

Jay Wells doesn't know about 54 years. But the Rangers' 35-year-old defenseman has his own storeroom full of passion.

"I have 15 years of emotion bottled up into one game," he said.

He paused for a moment and added: "But it hasn't happened yet. And I'll look at my career a lot differently if we don't win this thing."

Good point. While New Yorkers are going ga-ga over the Rangers' first NHL title since 1940, the fact is that they haven't won anything yet.

It still takes four victories to win a best-of-7 series.

"We're still far away," Esa Tikkanen said. "The fourth one is the hard one."

The Canucks are trying to keep from getting too down on themselves.

After winning the first game of the series, they have lost three straight — including the last two at home.

Following a Kevin Castleberry walk to reload the bases, Mike Harris hit a triple to right field over an outstretched Chris Pritchett to score Perez and Castleberry to make the score 5-3. Duane Singleton singled to right field, scoring Harris for a 6-3 lead.

As in the first two games of the series, Midland rallied back to take a 9-6 in the sixth, highlighted by a Mike Wolff double off the right field wall.

El Paso scored four runs in the seventh and eighth innings and one run in the ninth to seal the win. Singleton hit a three-run shot off reliever and loser Julian Heredia in the eighth. Heredia, who was 0-0 with a 8.22 ERA in his last five appearances prior to Wednesday, allowed five earned runs in one inning pitched.

Greg Bicknell (1-3) came on in relief to pick up his first win of the year.

Tonight, the Angels will put Pete Janicki (2-5, 5.40) on the mound to face Scott Karl (0-0, 0.00) for El Paso.

ANGEL NOTES: Relief pitcher David Holdridge saw his first action since May 27 after suffering from a bout of chicken pox ... With Wednesday's win, El Paso has won nine of 13 games against the Angels this season.

Cowboys sign line coach to contract

IRVING (AP) — Dallas offensive line coach Hudson Houck has signed a four-year contract with the Cowboys, making him the first assistant to commit to a long-term deal since Jimmy Johnson's departure.

All but one of the Dallas assistants were hired by Johnson.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Wednesday that Houck's contract makes him one of the highest-paid offensive line coaches in the National Football League.

"This is an indication of things to come because there will be others," Jones said.

McGee has surgery

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — San Francisco Giants right fielder Willie McGee underwent surgery Wednesday to repair a torn left Achilles tendon and will probably miss the rest of the season.

McGee, a four-time All-Star hitting .282 with five homers and 23 RBIs, was injured Tuesday night at Pittsburgh. He jammed his foot into the wall and crashed to the ground while trying to make a running catch of Orlando Merced's sixth-inning triple.

McGee returned Wednesday to San Francisco and was examined by team physician Dr. Warren King, who later performed surgery at Stanford Medical Center to reattach McGee's tendon.

"The surgery went well and he will be in recovery at the hospital for two days," Giants spokeswoman Robin Carr Locke said.

The injury likely finished McGee's season.

STEERS: State 4A berths common

(From 1C)

state's top five in 4A.

The Cubs breezed through the playoffs, outscoring opponents 66-10. They've won 19 straight, with their last loss coming before district play.

"We're scoring runs and playing pretty good defense," is Hathaway's explanation.

The only team that gave the Cubs any kind of a run in postseason was Clearbrook, which lost a one-game playoff to the District 17-4A champs, 8-5. The Cubs had two impressive wins in pre-district play, 11-5 over 4A state semifinalist Belton and 8-6 over 5A state semifinalist Corpus Christi Moody.

Brenham has tradition on its side, having won six state titles, made 11 state tournaments and earned 29 playoff appearances. But Big Spring has the most recent state tournament experience, losing to Robstown, 8-4, in a 1992 semifinal.

Big Spring coach Bobby Doe thinks this year's Steers, many of whom have have played in the Steers' 12 playoff contests of the last three seasons, are better than '92's bunch.

"It's a more experienced team. It's a team that can hit the alleys and the gaps," Doe said. "Back then (in '92), most of them were just sophomores and just singles hitters. Our pitching is more consistent. Defensively it's about the same."

Big Spring took eight sophomores to Austin in '92. Seven of those players are still with the team.

"Our chances are better being that some of our players have been there," Doe said. "They know what it's like and can relay to the other guys what it's like."

In '92, the Steers fell behind to eventual state champion Robstown, 8-0, before coming back in the last inning for four runs.

"They were just sitting there in awe of the stadium and all those people," Doe said. "We didn't wake up until about the fourth or fifth inning and start playing."

Hathaway will start senior Brad Glaesmann (9-0) or Graig Harrison (8-1). Doe hasn't named a starter. Frankie Martinez (10-3) has been Big Spring's most consistent pitcher, but Doe might go with Luis Bustamante if he thinks the Cubs could have trouble with Bustamante's favored off-speed stuff.

The Cubs best average hitter is senior left fielder Miles Studhalter (.441). Glaesmann leads the team in RBIs with 30.

The 4A championship game is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Friday at Disch-Falk. If the Steers aren't in it, they may be more disappointed than they were losing a semifinal two years ago.

PLAYOFF NOTES: Doe is 9-3 in the playoffs in his three seasons as head coach ... Hathaway's seven-year record at Brenham is 187-33-3 ... The Cubs won state titles in '70, '75, '76, '86, '87, and '88 ... Brenham third baseman Ryan Metzger is the son of former Houston Astro Roger Metzger ... The other 4A semifinal has Carthage (28-5) playing Belton (33-6) at 2:30 p.m. today at Disch-Falk.

STANLEY: Tai Kwon Do growing

(From 1C)

Tai Kwon Do, where the recent Midland Lee graduate has trained for 4½ years, hopes to be halfway there with candy sales by the school's students.

Oscar Jimenez, the owner of Jimenez Tai Kwon Do, said he thought it would take about $3,000 to send Stanley to the World Championships.

"I hope we can fund it," Jimenez said. "We hope to bring in about $1,500 with the candy sales so we'll be halfway there."

Luckily for 17 year-old Stanley, all the financial concerns have been taken off his shoulders by Jimenez. All Stanely has to concentrate on is getting ready for the meet, which features teams from about 40 countries including Korea, the originator of what Jimenez says has become the most popular martial art in recent years.

"I didn't know what to expect from nationals," said Stanley, when asked about the huge international meet. "I've been training about four nights a week and going over patterns."

Jimenez said the world championships are only held every two years. "It will be a little bit like a small Olympics," he said.

Stanley will compete in various events along with other first degree black belts. There are a total of nine degrees of black belt, nine being the highest. Only first through fourth degree belts compete. Jimenez, who has been a Tai Kwon Do student for 20 years, recently earned a fifth degree belt when he tested for the "father of Tai Kwon Do" — Gen. Choi Hong Hi.

Jimenez said he teaches the "true art" of the sport under the International Tai Kwon Do Federation governing body, which was organized by Gen. Choi Hong Hi.

In January, Stanley qualified at the Region IV tournament in Odessa, one of 12 regional meets in the country. Region IV includes competitors from Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma. The City of Odessa qualified six people to the World Championships while Stanley is the only Midlander on the team.

There are several components to Tai Kwon Do, not just the traditional sparring many people associate with a martial art. Along with sparring, which can range from no contact to light contact, there are two other non-competitive components.

First is patterns, or forms, where the competitors perform anywhere from 19 to 72 individual movements which make up a pattern. It is perhaps closest to dance with its intricate hand, arm and leg movements.

There is also breaking where the competitor uses his feet or hands in various movements to break wooden planks. A competitor can either stand and kick or punch, or there are various jumping kicks employed. The competitor's skill is determined by number of boards broken or how high he or she can kick to break the board.

Stanley said the martial arts always fascinated him but he chose Tai Kwon Do when he and his family moved to Midland.

"This is something I've always wanted to do since I was little," he said. After the tournament, Stanley said he wants to join the Army and continue training and teaching Tai Kwon Do. He said that a lot of the training in the military is martial arts oriented.

Tai Kwon Do is a growing sport and was first introduced to the Olympics as a demonstration sport in 1988 when the Games were hosted by Seoul, Korea. Because of this popularity, Jimenez says the sport is growing in the Permian Basin. But he would like to see Stanley go to Malaysia and bring Midland a little closer to the ideals associated with Tai Kwon Do.

"It teaches discipline, self-esteem, confidence and learning how to deal with problems," Jimenez said. "It's good for all ages. We always have a lot of kids, but I've had students up to 65 years old."

And Jimenez thinks this is a cause the people of Midland could feel good about supporting.

"You always hear people giving money to help people in need. Like if they're house burns down or something terrible like that and you don't get feedback on the good their help does. And those things are important," he said.

"But we've got something positive going on here and all those people will be able to know what they are supporting."

FCC rolls on mobile phone numbers

■ Commission is expected to adopt revised licensing plan today.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FCC is moving ahead this week with a plan crucial to bringing consumers the next generation of mobile communications — a personal, portable phone number.

Dubbed the next generation of mobile telephone, numbers would be assigned to a person, rather than a place, making users always reachable.

Development of the service, called the broad band personal communications service, had been delayed while federal regulators considered how to distribute licenses for it.

The Federal Communications Commission is expected to adopt a revised licensing plan today. On June 29, the FCC will adopt rules for auctioning off the licenses, probably this fall. The auction is expected to add billions of dollars to the federal Treasury.

The new phones are not expected to be available until 1995 at the earliest.

The new plan is not dramatically different from the licensing rules that the FCC adopted last year. But it does attempt to address critics' concerns that the original configuration could make it difficult, if not impossible, for some companies to operate viable businesses because they would have portions of the airwaves that were too small or too widely separated from one another.

A license entitles a company to operate on a sliver of the public airwaves and to provide service to designated geographic areas. The new plan would allow six licensees in each geographic market, whereas the old plan would have allowed seven. Three licensees would be assigned to major slices of the airways and to large geographic areas. Three other licensees would be assigned to smaller slices of the airways and to small geographic areas.

Details of the new plan were discussed by industry executives and confirmed by an FCC official, all speaking on condition of anonymity.

There are more than 400 smaller metropolitan areas and 51 major areas, and the specter of a multibillion-dollar business has attracted the attention of established players — from cable, telephone and cellular companies — to entrepreneurs.

By 2004, between 17 million and 29 million people are expected to subscribe to the new service, according to analysts' and consultants' estimates.

Prices surge

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures finished sharply higher in a late-session rally fed by news of tighter domestic supplies and escalated fighting in Yemen.

July delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $18.34 per barrel, up 59 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 50 cents to $17 a barrel.

The American Petroleum Institute on Tuesday reported domestic supplies dropped more than 4 million barrels last week. Many had been expecting an increase.

News of more fighting in Yemen, particularly reports of firing on oil fields and a missile attack on a tanker in international waters, also contributed to the price rise.

A jet missile attack on a tanker off the Yemeni coast raised the prospect of higher shipping costs in the Middle East as insurers consider seeking higher premiums.

Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in July settling at $2.087 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 6.5 cents.

Desk and Derrick

The Midland Desk and Derrick Club will meet this evening at the Petroleum Club beginning with social hour at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Kristi Elsom, who will speak on "Estate Planning Techniques."

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed in global foreign exchange trading Wednesday, but weakened against the Japanese yen after U.S. officials said the government won't rule out trade sanctions as a means to force open Japanese markets.

Gold prices were higher. On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for current delivery rose 60 cents a troy ounce to $381.70.

In New York, the dollar closed at 103.95 yen, down from 104.20 late Tuesday.

The British pound closed in London at $1.5105, up from 1.5095 late Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Tuesday: 1.6695 marks, up from 1.6660, 1.4135 Siwss francs, up from 1.4130, 1.3753 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3723; 5.6840 French francs, up from 5.6816, 1,616 lire, up from 1,615.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — A sagging technology sector weighed down Wall Street Wednesday as stocks retreated in tandem with the bond market.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which meandered at modestly lower levels for most of the session, sank in afternoon trading before managing to bob back up to close well above its lowest point of the day. It ended off 6.46 at 3,749.45.

Firms would ax frequent-flier perks to drop air ticket prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the nation's biggest companies are pushing a plan for lower air fares in exchange for letting airlines drop frequent-flier perks for employees who travel on business.

The 15 companies, which include General Motors, Merck and Bell Atlantic, want to strip from their ticket prices the cost of travel agent commissions, frequent-flier programs and other marketing efforts. They want the fares they pay to be based on mileage instead.

By dropping frequent-flier awards for business travelers, the plan could save the airlines some money. The companies believe it could also get more work out of some employees who might be taking circuitous routes to rack up more frequent-flier miles.

American, United and Delta said they hadn't seen details of the proposal and didn't know if they would support it.

American and United also said their top marketing people hadn't been approached by the companies, which are working through a suburban Philadelphia firm called Business Travel Contractors Corp. Delta said its top marketing executive had been approached.

Business Travel Contractors President Kevin Mitchell said the company is also seeking antitrust clearance from the Justice Department.

The plan is similar to one IBM proposed offering deep discounts in exchange for making employees ineligible for frequent-flier awards when they travel for work. IBM said it is not involved in this plan.

The airlines rejected the IBM offer because frequent-flier programs, although costly, instill customer loyalty and allow airlines to track the habits of their best customers.

The Business Travel Contractors plan is much broader and includes more companies, but by cutting costs for a portion of air travelers it risks forcing airlines to shift costs to other passengers.

"We're all for a simpler fare structure, but it also needs to be a completely fair structure," American Airlines spokesman John Hotard said Wednesday.

Mitchell said any costs shifted to other passengers would be barely noticeable and more than made up with added revenues from business travelers who would buy vacation tickets rather than cash in frequent-flier miles.

One way the plan seeks to cut costs is by changing the way travel agents are paid.

Currently the airlines pay agent commissions. If the companies paid the commissions, they believe they would be in a stronger position to negotiate discounts.

President of Exxon to be featured speaker at 1994 chamber meeting

Staff Report

Longwell

Harry J. Longwell, president of Exxon Co. U.S.A., will be the featured speaker at the annual meeting of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. The meeting is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Sept. 28 at the Midland Center.

Nadine Craddick, chairman of the Midland Chamber, said that "Major oil companies have had a tremendous impact on the vitality of our community. We are indeed fortunate to have Mr. Longwell address the members of the chamber."

Longwell joined Exxon in 1963 as a drilling engineer in the company's Southeastern Production Division in New Orleans. After a number of engineering and supervisory assignments in Louisiana, California and Texas, he was named operations manger of the South Texas Division in 1974. He later served as division manager of the Western Production Division in Los Angeles.

From 1980 to 1983, he worked as operations manager and then vice president in Houston. In 1986, he moved to London to serve as vice president of exploration and production for Esso Europe Inc. He returned to the U.S. and held several executive positions with Exxon Corp. and Exxon Co. International before being named to his present position in February 1992.

Tickets for the annual meeting will go on sale in July. The chamber is presently seeking corporate sponsorships.

Wal-Mart to sell Western Merchandisers

AMARILLO (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. has agreed to sell its Amarillo-based Western Merchandisers Inc. subsidiary to Anderson News Corp. of Knoxville, Tenn.

Both companies are Wal-Mart suppliers and distributors of printed material. Anderson News focuses more on magazines, books and collectors cards, while Western Merchandisers is more heavily into pre-recorded music and video, said Charlie Anderson, president and chief executive officer of Anderson News.

When the sale is completed at the end of this month, Western Merchandisers will become a wholly owned subsidiary of Anderson News. Western Merchandisers' headquarters will remain in Amarillo.

"This acquisition is a major step for us in strengthening our vendor-partner relationship with Wal-Mart by becoming their principal vendor for entertainment media," Anderson said in a prepared statement.

Under the new arrangement, Western Merchandisers management will remain intact, but John Marmaduke will step down as president and become one of nine company directors.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Full cashed-in CD amount is taxable income

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have just reached age 59½ and want to start cashing in four individual retirement accounts, each of which I opened years ago by obtaining a $2,000 certificate of deposit. The first IRA CD will mature at the end of this year, at which time I plan to redeem it. With interest added, that CD has grown to $3,400.

Doyle

When making out my 1994 income tax return, do I declare the entire $3,400 as income or only the $1,400 interest earned?

Also, what do I declare next year, when the other three IRA CDs expire and I cash them?

A: Report the entire $3,400 — or whatever the CD is worth when you redeem it — on Line 16b of your 1994 Form 1040 federal income tax return. It will all be taxable income unless you made nondeductible IRA contributions — which is unlikely because nondeductible contributions have been permitted only since 1987.

Do the same thing when you redeem the other three IRA CDs. Assuming you took $2,000 tax deductions each year when you made IRA contributions, that money and the interest it earned remains deferred from income tax until you withdraw it. When you take it out, the Internal Revenue Service gets its bite.

Ages 59½ through 70½ have been called the IRA "golden years," during which you can withdraw money and pay only regular tax. If money is taken out of your IRA before you are 59½, dead or disabled, there usually is a 10 percent tax penalty in addition to the regular tax.

There can be an exception to that general rule. If you are younger than 59½ and set up withdrawals based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary for five years or until you reach 70½, whichever comes first, you beat the 10 percent penalty. But you do have to pay the regular tax.

After you are 70½, you are required to make withdrawals in line with life expectancy. If you withdraw too little, you're subject to a tax penalty equal to 50 percent of the amount you should have taken out.

Q: Being past 70½, I am required to make IRA withdrawals. I have two IRAs, one at a bank and one at a brokerage firm. Each year, I add together the values of the two, as of year-end, and divide by the appropriate divisor — from the life-expectancy table in IRS Publication 590 — and come up with the minimum amount I must withdraw for the new year. Then, I make sure my withdrawal exceeds that minimum figure.

But how does the IRS know the values of my IRAs?

A: Each of your IRA sponsors mails you a Form 5498 every year. Among other things, that "information return" lists the value of your account. Copies of Form 5498 and all other information returns go to the IRS in "machine-readable form" and are entered into the revenooers' nationwide computer system headquartered in Martinsburg, W.Va.

If the IRA withdrawal you report on your annual tax return does not jibe with the amount you were required to withdraw based on your IRA's values, as shown on your Forms 5498, the Martinsburg Monster goes tilt and you hear from the IRS.

Having two or more IRAs doesn't let you off the hook. The computer lumps them together by Social Security number or other taxpayer identification number.

Q: I just started taking required distributions from my IRA. I have multiple IRA beneficiaries — my three children. After I am gone, can that continue, so all three receive the distributions?

A: Yes. The pertinent regulation says, "Any undistributed amounts at the IRA owner's death must be distributed at least as rapidly as the method being used at the owner's death."

After you join the choir silent, each of your children will receive distributions from that IRA equal to the proportion you designated him or her as beneficiary. For example, if you named them as equal beneficiaries, each would get one-third of every required distribution.

American League unanimously names Gene Budig as new president

CINCINNATI (AP) — Gene Budig has an impressive baseball collection. He was once promised a tryout by Bill Veeck. One of his early jobs was covering baseball games as a journalist.

After nearly three intervening decades in academia, Budig is moving towards a new challenge and an old love. Budig, 55, was unanimously approved Wednesday as the American League's seventh president, succeeding Bobby Brown.

He has been a college director for 22 years — the last 13 as chancellor at Kansas — and a member of the Kansas City Royals' board of directors for one year and one day. The bespectacled, gap-toothed professor will begin a five-year term as AL president Aug. 1.

"At age 55, it's time to do something new and different," Budig said. "I love this game. It's a real honor to be associated with it.

"I believe the owners want an individual who can make a difference. I believe they want an individual who has ideas."

The ideas he shared Wednesday dovetail with the league's direction in recent years.

— He likes the designated hitter, which "has enlivened the game and extended the careers of some of baseball's greatest hitters."

— He thinks realignment was "the right thing to do. It may need to be fine-tuned."

— He believes baseball must do a better job marketing its stars.

— He'd like to crack down on on-field brawls, which give the "wrong impression" to young fans.

And he likes to hobnob with fans and sports writers. He promised to get suggestions from both.

"I'm accessible, especially to journalists," he told a room of writers at a downtown hotel where major league owners were meeting. "I'll seek you out if you don't seek me out."

He got into baseball because the Royals sought him out.

Budig, a native of McCook, Neb., never made it far as a player. He was 12 when Veeck, then owner of the St. Louis Browns, agreed to give him a tryout. Veeck told him to come back when he was 18.

Instead, Budig became an English major and went into journalism. He was a reporter for The Lincoln Star, Lincoln Journal and Sunday Journal-Star from 1959-64.

Within the past 30 years, he has headed three state universities — West Virginia, Illinois State and Kansas. His most recent job brought him into contact with Ewing Kauffman, the Royals' owner who died last year.

"Several years ago, Mr. Kauffman encouraged my interest in baseball," Budig said. "He was a good friend and mentor. He encouraged me towards the game, not a specific position. He later talked to the owners about me."

Metallics are great, but don't sink

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Silver is summer's shining color but, just like the noonday sun, a little goes a long way.

Mix it with white to ice up a summer day, with black to dazzle by night.

Follow the lead of designers such as Todd Oldham, who showed funky, futuristic tinfoil color go-go boots on the spring runway; Anna Sui, who offered silver leather mini kilts and hot pants; or Norma Kamali, who charged up her new OMO GYM wear with silver jackets, leggings and unitards and a racer-back tank suit that can double as a bodysuit for evening.

Donna Karan's collection beams into the metallic mode with fabrics that glow in the dark and twinkle in the light, such as liquid metal taffeta, reflective triacetate and silk cellophane and chiffon.

Don't go too heavy on the metal, though.

"Metallics are meant to be teamed with some other contrasting fabric or color," says Alice Vickers, fashion director for Saks Fifth Avenue in Denver. "If you wore a silver top, skirt and jacket, you'd look like Barbarella."

Shauna Stein, co-owner of Shauna Stein boutique in Los Angeles, advises against anything that even hints of high voltage.

"If it's going to shine, it has to be understated," she says.

So start with accessories — a silver leather handbag or mini backpack; clogs, combat boots, sneakers or sandals; shimmering hosiery, a belt or even a great piece of silver jewelry. When you're ready to take the plunge into silver clothing, make sure you don't sink.

"A matte piece here and there can look very tasteful," Stein says.

Some of the best looks come from Donna Karan: her metallic stretch knit bodysuit, fiberglass-coated trench coats and sporty parkas, matching hip-slung skirts, tank dresses and cardigans embellished with micalike sequins. All the shades have space-age names such as mercury, carbon, moonstone, petroleum and quartz.

'Metallics are meant to be teamed with some other contrasting fabric or color. If you wore a silver top, skirt and jacket, you'd look like Barbarella.'

— Alice Vickers
fashion director
Saks Fifth Avenue

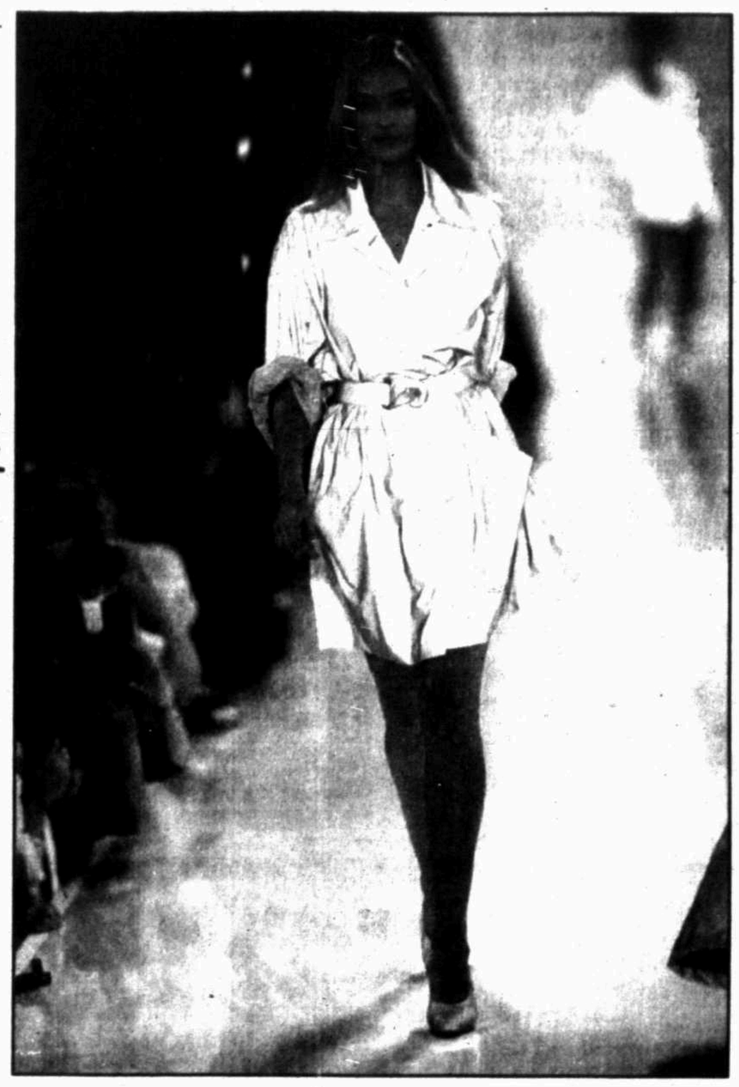

"There's a reason for these clothes," says Patti Cohen, Donna Karan's vice president of public relations. "For Donna, it's modern dressing, it's about illumination, weightlessness, all the things that remind you of going into the future. They protect you against the rain, and they light you up in the evening."

Naturally there's a treasure trove of opulent evening options, including rhinestone-studded metallic baby-doll dresses and luminescent beaded column gowns, but the news is in daytime dressing.

"Metallics are a daytime streetwear story," says Hope Brick, fashion director for Foley's in Houston. "Anything in woven metallic leather footwear is selling. It's the new neutral."

In small doses, metallics are ideal neutrals. But even a flash of silver goes a long way.

"The days of the blatant, futuristic costume are over," Stein says. "Instead, my client is combining metallics with something more subdued, such as textured linens or burlapy cottons in a neutral shade."

AP Laserphotc

Silver is on the money as a fashion forward look for summer. This metallic, cool with white, is showing up at the beach, on city streets and, of course, at night. Silver reflective balmacaan with matching wrap skirt and silver stretch body suit are all from Donna Karan.

Hair styles for summer reflect shine, shimmer

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

Silver, patent leather and gleaming vinyl are must-haves for the I'll-do-anything-to-be-in-fashion set. Now the shine is going to their heads. The latest look for hair is a wet-looking shimmer.

"It's not really wet, though, and not flat or greasy, but shiny and bouncy," said Vartan Geudelekian, owner of the Vartali salon. "The shine is the finishing touch to any hair style."

To add the sheen, he suggests using Hair Foundation Jell by Meros ($20), to be patted on dry hair, or L'Oreal's Iridiance Dual Action Shield ($12), which comes in a spray. Both products are sold in his salon at 48 East 57th Street.

Peter Coppola, whose salon recently moved to 746 Madison Avenue, at 64th Street, prefers applying a shine-producing product to wet hair and letting it dry naturally. For straight hair, he suggests Senscience Energel ($10); for curly hair, Aveda's Brilliant Humectant Pomade ($13) adds gloss and hold.

Gabrielle's stylish 'look' makes fashionable waves

By Amy M. Spindler
N.Y. Times News Service

When Gabrielle began singing in London clubs in 1990, she was one of a kind: hair marcelled like Josephine Baker's, a sequin-encrusted eyepatch over one eye, 1940s-style glamorous dresses and chunky sneakers.

But recently her brother went dancing in London and saw Gabrielles everywhere.

"He said, 'Why didn't you tell me you were going to be in town,' before he realized it wasn't me," recounted Gabrielle, who uses only her first name. "There's loads of Gabrielles walking around London."

They were walking on the catwalk at Xuly-Bet in Paris last season as well, slinkily dressed models, eyepatches, marcelled hair and all.

Barneys New York, never a store to miss a trend, co-sponsored, with Vibe Magazine, a concert in its Mad 61 restaurant recently, the first of a series at the restaurant that will concentrate on style-setting acts.

"Gabrielle's look is part homegirl, part Brassai, who photographed women in the 1930s in Paris," said Simon Doonan, Barney's senior vice president of advertising and display.

When Gabrielle's first single, "Dreams," was released in June 1993 in England, it entered the charts at No. 2, a record for a debut, and her style became inescapable.

Gabrielle credits her look to her fashion stylist, Jane How; her hair stylist, Junior Parry; and her mother, Patricia, who began making her daughter sequined eyepatches to cover a lazy eyelid.

"Now, I don't need it," she said, because she has since had surgery.

"But people don't know me without it. The first time I walked into the club with an eyepatch, I realized it caused serious attention. There wasn't a pair of eyes that hadn't looked at me, and looked again."

Taking daughter to work is risky business for mother

By Erma Bombeck

A couple of weeks ago I brought my daughter to work with me to bolster her self-esteem as a woman. Ever since, she has been very depressed.

Bombeck

I don't understand it. I showed her my home office, my pencil jar, carbon paper and my IBM. "This is where it all happens," I said proudly.

"When did you stop chiseling the column on stone tablets?" she asked dryly. "Have you ever thought of updating this office to the 20th century?"

"It works," I said. "Excuse me, I'm going to put a load of laundry in the wash. I'll be right back."

When I returned she said, "Want me to check your voice mail?"

"I don't have voice mail," I said.

"And I suppose you don't have a portable phone," she asked.

"Why would I want a portable phone with more of a social life than I have?"

I had her observe me while I put a piece of paper in the typewriter and slugged it with a date. Then I said, "What do you want for lunch?"

"I don't care. Where are we going?"

"To the kitchen. Your father knocks off about this time every day. Yell down the hall and see if tuna is OK with him."

After I put the remains of lunch away, we returned to the office, where I put down a few lines. The doorbell rang, and I was busy for the next half-hour telling the roofer where it leaked during the last rainstorm. When I returned, my daughter was trying to bring order to my desk.

I wrote solid nonstop for five minutes, then remembered I hadn't taken anything from the freezer to defrost for dinner.

"Do you want me to open the mail while you're in the kitchen?" she asked.

"If you do, it will take away every positive feeling you've ever had about yourself."

Her father dropped by and remarked on how well-dressed she was, as though she were going to an office or something. "Your mother hasn't worn hose in the daytime for 20 years," he said. "You may have noticed, we have no dress code."

At 4:30 I pushed away from the typewriter and said, "'Jeopardy's' on. We're finished for the day."

Later, I heard my daughter telling a friend on the phone, "No wonder Mom doesn't have any self-esteem. She's still a kitchen drudge. It's too bad she never had a real career. She's a pretty good typist."

DEAR ABBY

Expressions of sympathy need to be acknowledged

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know I will never see this in print, but I have to get it out of my system.

Van Buren

I taught all of my children to write thank-you notes as soon as they were able to print, and I was always very prompt with my own. However, I have buried two children. One was 20 and the other was 21, and you and a hundred etiquette experts will never convince me that I should have sent thank-you notes to everyone who sent flowers.

For months, I didn't even feel like getting out of bed in the morning, and there were days when I didn't know night from day. Sometimes now, more than 20 years later, I am still not sure.

Abby, there is absolutely nothing you can say that will make me believe that all those people who sent flowers and cards expected a thank-you note. — STILL GRIEVING

DEAR STILL GRIEVING: You have experienced every parent's worst nightmare twice, which is more than the human spirit should be expected to endure. Every parent who has buried a child of any age will sympathize with you.

However, those who sent flowers and cards deserve some kind of acknowledgment. Family members and close friends usually volunteer to handle the task of getting out the thank-you notes. Printed expressions of gratitude for all occasions are available in stationery shops — and there are printers who specialize in personalized thank-you cards. Of course, a handwritten note is better, but failing to acknowledge expressions of sympathy at all is worse.

DEAR ABBY: A few more words on the subject of iguanas:

Because of my allergy to dog and cat dander, we had to be content with reptiles as pets. Lizza, who grew to be 4 feet long, was a popular "show and tell" feature at school. He also did entertaining things at home, such as trying to fight with his own image in a mirror.

Turned loose, he was excellent at sending guests home on time! Some all but climbed up on the chandelier.

We had to give Lizza to the Houston Zoo. He spent his last years in the company of his own kind, in a beautiful little jungle. When we visited, he nodded at us. We are convinced that he knew us. — LOUISE WYROSTEK, HEBRON, KY.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to a letter you published from someone who could not understand why the manager of a fast-food restaurant asked him to eat outside with his pet iguana.

I have had many reptiles as pets. They come in all sizes and have varying temperaments. A 6-foot-long iguana can injure someone with one swish of its tail, claws or even a nip.

Just because an iguana can be trained to walk on a leash doesn't mean it can be taken everywhere one would take a dog. Although they are one of the most popular pets available, they do not make the best pets.

If you take an iguana out in public, you should never force your presence on anyone — let them come to you.

In most states, there are herpetological clubs where reptile owners exchange information, swap creatures, and even put on shows that allow their pets to be displayed for the public.

We in Georgia are putting on our Ninth Annual Herp Show at Stone Mountain; it is the best tool to educate people about our beloved creatures. People have been taught to fear reptiles — and many have had nightmarish experiences with them.

I think it was tacky and stupid of that writer to take his reptile into an eating establishment. — LAURA IN MARIETTA, GA.

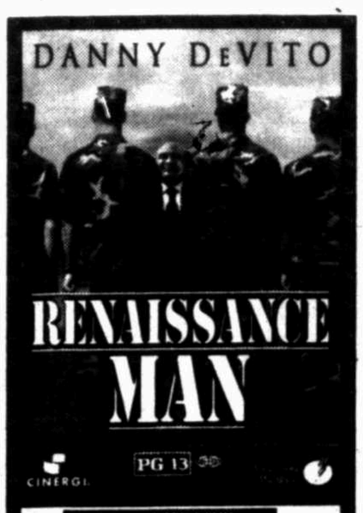

DEAR LAURA: Your interesting letter made some good points, as does the following letter, which explains another reason why iguanas should not be taken into eating establishments:

DEAR ABBY: We read the letter about taking an iguana into a restaurant, and we think lizards should not be in areas where food is being prepared or served.

Your readers should know that people can get salmonella food poisoning by eating undercooked eggs, undercooked poultry, or other foods that may be contaminated with bacterium. Also, almost all lizards harbor salmonella. Lizards, including iguanas, are a well-documented source of salmonella infections in humans — especially in children. When infected, children typically get severe diarrhea; some even require hospitalization and treatment with intravenous antibiotics for bloodstream infection.

If a lizard has contact with your food, or if you touch a lizard or its cage and then put your fingers to your mouth before washing them, you may find yourself with a whopping case of diarrhea, or worse. — PAUL R. CIESLAK, M.D.; FREDERICK H. ANGULO, D.V.M., PH.D.; DAVID L. SWERDLOW, M.D.; CENTERS FOR DISEASE CONTROL, ATLANTA

Which dogs bite most becomes study topic

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal researchers say they've collared some evidence about which kinds of dogs are most likely to bite.

Some animal experts say they're barking up the wrong tree: They say human ignorance of dog behavior, such as a child running up to and hugging a dog, often is to blame for dog bites.

A study by researchers with the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that German shepherds and chow chows were more likely to bite than other breeds.

Also risky were male or unneutered dogs, and — to a smaller degree — dogs belonging to a household with children and those chained in a yard, the researchers reported in the June issue of Pediatrics.

They said their study is one of few to look primarily at traits of dogs, rather than victims, in connection with bites, which kill 20 Americans each year and injure 585,000.

The study involved 178 first-time biters and 178 nonbiting dogs from the same Denver neighborhoods. Most victims were children under 13.

The study considered only bites of nonhousehold members because they are most common and most likely to be reported. The work was done in Denver because the lead author, Dr. Kenneth A. Gershman, was there at the time.

Shepherds accounted for 34 of the biters, but only 13 of the nonbiters. There were 31 chow chows among the biters and only nine in the nonbiting group.

Another breed substantially more likely to be a biter was the collie; eight collies were among biters and only one was among the nonbiters.

Safest breeds were golden retrievers and standard poodles. Only two goldens were among biters, while 13 were among nonbiters. Four poodles were among nonbiters, while 14 nonbiters belonged to the breed.

There was only one pit bull in the study and it was a nonbiter. New ownership of pit bulls was banned in Denver County in 1989.

Curtis Bradley, director of the Denver Municipal Animal Shelter, questioned the researchers' decision to ignore human behavior. He said that's a factor in almost every dog bite.

"When a child runs up and throws his arms around a dog to hug him, to the dog, it's a dominance message. To the child, it's 'I love you,' " Bradley said.

A dog reacts with a snap to show it won't be dominated, which can seriously injure a child.

Dr. Jeffrey J. Sacks, a CDC epidemiologist who participated in the study, agreed that human behavior is important but said it is difficult to control.

If a dog's traits could be chosen to minimize the risk of biting, that could significantly reduce the number of serious bites, he said.

The American Kennel Club said it had no figures to compare to those in the study.

Peter F. Poholik, Chicago's animal control director and board Welfare Administrators, said the study is probably too small for meaningful results and needs to be done in more cities.

He believes, however, that no big dog should be considered safe around a baby, no matter how gentle or well trained the dog.

Some supplements may spur stamina, alertness

WASHINGTON — During times of stress, a person's physical stamina and mental alertness may be enhanced by dietary supplements such as caffeine and sugar, a committee of the National Academy of Sciences has reported.

The committee of nutritionists, pharmacologists and physicians who reviewed recent scientific studies at the request of the Army urged continued research on ways diet can help soldiers better deal with such stresses as cold, fatigue, boredom and sleep deprivation.

The report dealt specifically with seven dietary supplements: choline, caffeine, tyrosine, carnitine, carbohydrates, and certain fats.

It recommended immediate steps to make caffeine and carbohydrates more accessible in soldiers' diets.

Although the findings were directed at the effect the dietary supplements might have on military performance, its findings have "widespread implications for individuals in any job setting," said committee chairman Robert O. Nesheim, a Salinas, Calif., nutritionist.

However, he added that further research is needed to define safe limits and define conditions in which diet supplementation would be effective.

The committee's recommendations included:

■ Tyrosine, an amino acid that is normally present in all protein-containing foods, is important in forming chemicals that transmit nerve impulses to the brain. It may improve vigilance and decrease anxiety in people exposed to stress. The committee urged the Army to expand its "exciting" research on tyrosine, with emphasis on determining effective doses and safety.

■ Choline, a constituent of lecithin, is a major component of acetylcholine, which is critical for sending nerve signals to various tissues. In one study, choline supplements improved performance during a 20-mile run by five minutes. The committee recommended carefully controlled laboratory studies with human subjects.

■ Caffeine tends to delay sleep and reduce deterioration of performance associated with fatigue, boredom and sleep deprivation. The equivalent of three to six cups of coffee for a 154-pound person will achieve desired results, the committee said.

■ Carnitine, found in meat and dairy products, acts as a storehouse of high-energy compounds and is believed to enhance muscle performance, but the committee said there is too little evidence that it actually works.

■ Structured lipids, the kind of fats commonly found in whole milk, palm oil and coconut oil, might supplement the energy-releasing effect of glucose stores during exercise, some researchers have suggested. But the committee concluded that their potential for enhancing performance is low.

■ Carbohydrates are a good source of energy, and supplements to provide a quick extra 100 or 200 grams during stressful periods.

'Barney' dinosaur's song dispute may be resolved

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — How about a great big hug and a kiss from me to you? Now Barney can sing he loves you, too — without worrying they're going to sue.

Or maybe he can't.

Representatives for Everett music publisher Jean Warren said she and the purple dinosaur's owners reached a tentative settlement Monday to Warren's federal lawsuit claiming copyright infringement. Terms weren't disclosed.

"You can just say that Jean is very pleased with the settlement," said Deborah Hocking, who handles public relations for Warren Publishing. "It happened quickly. That's all I can say. No details."

But a spokesman for Barney's owners, the Lyons Group of Dallas, said no agreement had been reached.

"The corporate people that I talked with said there is no agreement, period," Russell Mack said Wednesday. On Tuesday he had said there was a settlement.

Warren Publishing House Inc. claimed it obtained rights to the "I Love You" song in 1983, when Lee Bernstein of Schererville, Ind., submitted it for publication in a songbook.

For those who don't know anybody under age 4, the lyrics of "I Love You," sung to the tune of "This Old Man" are: "I love you, you love me, we're a happy family, with a great big hug and a kiss from me to you. Won't you say you love me, too?"

One of Barney's co-creators heard the song in a class her child attended in Texas during the mid-1980s. Barney's owners, the Lyons Group of Dallas, said a copyright search turned up nothing.

Then Bernstein approached them, claiming she had sold only one-time rights and asking for payment. In her lawsuit, Warren said she bought all rights.

Lyons reached an agreement with Bernstein last year but initially rejected Warren's claim.

Video Week magazine said the "Barney and Friends" show has generated hundreds of millions of dollars in related product sales and $50 million in licensing revenues for the Lyons Group.

A new Barney series is being developed for the Public Broadcasting System.

"I expect we'll use the song again," Mack said Tuesday. "Certainly there's no reason why it shouldn't be included."

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
A small deposit is required.
