Prison site selection team to visit Snyder Wednesday

Snyder will again be putting its best foot forward Wednesday as a site selection team from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice makes an official visit.

Development Corporation of Snyder officials were notified Thursday that a six or seven-person team from Huntsville will arrive at Winston Field at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday.

The team will be headed by Bill Barry, site planning and special projects director with the TDCJ. Barry said his delegation will include a person from construction and design, utilities, waste water, environmental, and security and operations.

Snyder's application for expansion of the Price Daniel Unit arrived in Huntsville Tuesday, the deadline for some 18 communities to submit proposals for eight 660 cells to be built at existing locations.

The informal request for proposals from communities put heavy emphasis on availability of utilities and ease of construction.

Following site visits, TDCJ staff will make recommendations to the full board during the Nov. 16-17 meeting to be held in Dallas.

Alan B. Polunsky of San Antonio, chairman of the criminal justice board, said that "economy of construction and efficiency of operations dictates the new units to be co-located with existing units."

The new high-security cells will be designed for use either as single cells or can potentially be double-bunked for a possible capacity of 1,320. Some of the ancillary facilities, such as laundry and food service, will not be duplicated.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Everybody's self-made, but only the rich admit it."

Dr. Roger Anderson, president of Adirondak Community College, offered "100 Tips for Managers" in a recent Rotary Club publication.

While some of his tips were standard things like " praise in public and criticize in private," he also had some unique suggestions.

Here's a few of his tips for success:

--Remember that change is a door that can only be opened from the inside.

--Success is getting up just one more time than you fall down.

--Don't ask someone to do something you wouldn't do yourself.

--Get your own coffee.

--Place your own telephone calls.

--Remember, friends come and go, but enemies accumulate.

--Be decisive. Avoid the ready aim, aim, aim...snydrome.

--Encourage risk-taking. Have the courage to let go of the familiar.

--Recognize the reality that perception is everything.

--Take your job seriously, but not yourself.

--Answer questions, question answers.

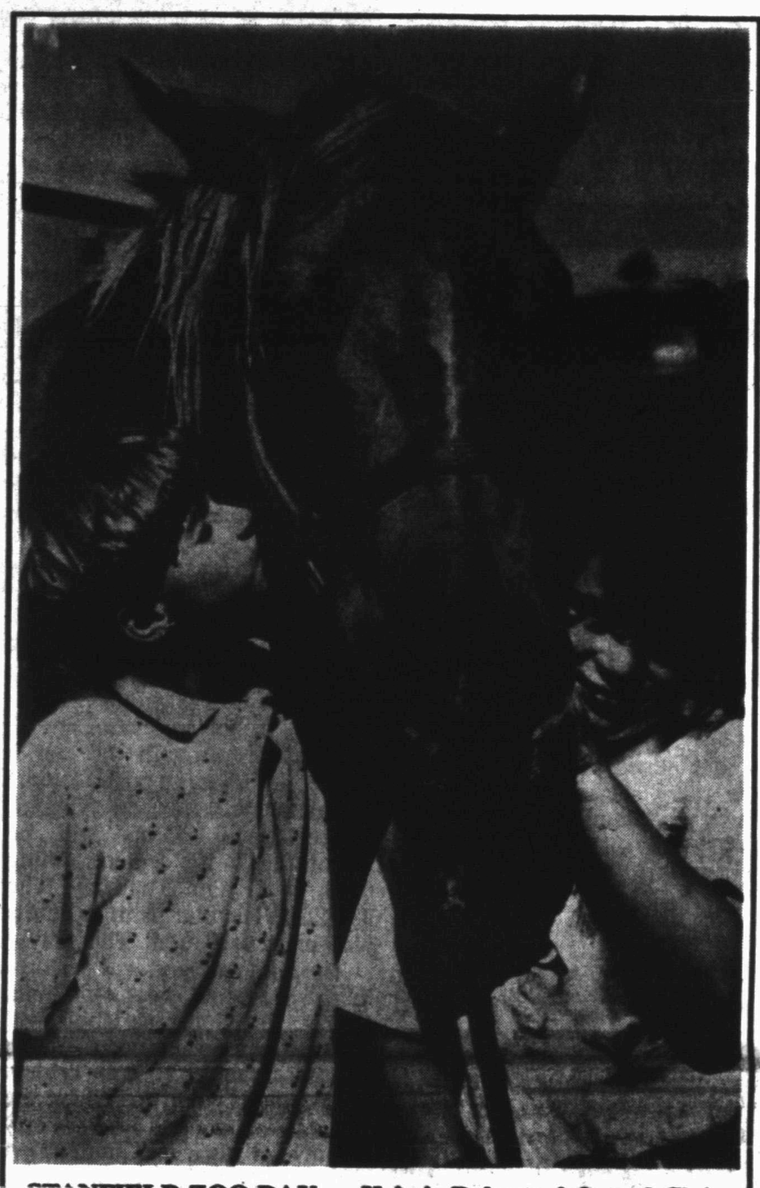

--Be proactive. Don't wait for your ship to come in. Swim out to it.

--Look out for number 1. Watch out for number 2, too.

--Accept that some days you're the pigeon, some days you're the statue.

Billy Graham summed it up this way:

"There is nothing wrong with men possessing riches. The wrong comes when riches possess men."

Short agenda facing county

Scurry County commissioners have a short agenda to consider when they meet Monday morning at 10.

Commissioners will consider monthly reports from the Scurry County Welfare Board, the county extension offices and the minutes of the October meeting of the Scurry County Library Board.

County Treasurer Charlie Bell will present the quarterly report from his office and the court will also consider retirement buy-back options for a county employee.

Other agenda items are a budget amendment, line-item transfers and the payment of bills.

Commissioners challenge WTC Lady Westerners

Scurry County Commissioners — and Friends — have challenged the Lady Westerners in a benefit basketball game to be held Oct. 23.

After making the challenge, Coach Jerry Gannway said his team may need lots of friends after sizing up the WTC competition.

The game is set for 7:30 p.m. in the WTC Gym, and the public is invited.

Coach Gannaway, Precinct 4 commissioner, says he'll personally suit up only if everybody else fouls out or runs out of breath, which ever comes first.

Gannaway is optimistic however and claims to have some hidden talent to go up against Coach Brenda Nichols' charges, namely Too Tall Gray and Rambling Ralph Trevey. Rowdy Roy Idom and Remarkable Ricky Fritz have also held a basketball.

"We've got a ringer we can run in, too," Gannaway said. "County Clerk Frances Billingsley made two points in high school."

At Monday's commissioners court meeting, Coach Gannaway is thinking about a temporary lifting of the hiring freeze. "We need to hire a couple of lanky (and young) maintainer operators."

Devienne Trio to perform here

7:30 p.m. Monday on Western Texas College campus

The Devienne Trio from Texas Tech University will perform at the Fine Arts Theatre on the Western Texas College campus Monday evening.

There is no charge for the event, which will begin at 7:30.

The Devienne Trio, a Texas Tech music faculty group, is composed of of flutist Michael Stoune, bassoonist Richard Meek and pianist Jane Ann Wilson.

The trip has been performing for more than 10 years and took its name from the composer Francois Devienne, whose work inspired the creation of the group.

The Devienne Trio has performed extensively in the Southwest. They have appeared at national music conferences as well as the Texas Music Education's Association in San Antonio.

This marks the trio's first visit to Snyder.

Monday, they will perform Trio Sonata in G minor by George Philipp Telemann; Six Miniatures for Three Players by David Ashley White; and Piano Trio No. 3 for Flute and Bassoon by Robert Baksa.

After a brief intermissi the trio will perform Portrait (Colorado) by Ann K. Gebuhr. This work will be accompanied by a slide show of scenes from the Rocky Mountain state taken by its composer.

Michael Stoune is a professor of flute and fine arts at Texas Tech. He holds the bachelor and master of music degrees from the University of Texas, as well as the doctor of musical arts degree from the University of Michigan.

He has performed as soloist with several orchestras, and has had a large number of compositions written for him.

In addition to the Devienne Trio, Richard Meek performs with the Mariah Winds and the Texas Tech Baroque Ensemble.

He holds the bachelor of music from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, the Performer's Certificate and the master of arts from the Eastman School of Music.

He has performed at numerous annual meetings of the International Double Reed Society both here and abroad. He has appeared as soloist with several orchestras and premiered a number of solo works written for him.

Jane Ann Wilson is a native of Lubbock. She received her bachelor of music degree from Texas Tech with piano and violoncello as principal instruments.

She received the master of music in piano performance and the doctor of music in piano pedagogy, performance and literature degrees from Indiana University.

Active as a cellist as well, she performs with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra and with chamber groups.

SISD agrees to contract with Borden

Snyder public schools trustees agreed to the sale of weighted average daily attendance (WADA) figures to the Borden County ISD Saturday morning in a special meeting of the board.

This will mean as much as little as $60,000 or as much as $110,000 to the local district, said business manager Lee McNair.

Borden County is considered a property rich school district and its income averages over the state maximum of $280,000 per student, Snyder ISD is considered a property poor district and Borden County can designate the local district to be the recepient of their excess funds.

If Borden County did not designate which district it wanted their funds to go to, then the money would have to be turned back to the state and be distributed without any input from Borden County.

Snyder ISD Supt. Gayle Lomax said at least 50 percent of the money is designated for extended year programs such as summer school.

Following this action item on the agenda, Snyder trustees began their annual goal-setting session.

All board members were present Saturday morning.

Trial testimony reveals...

Dying Selena clutched ring in hand

HOUSTON (AP) — As she lay dying from a gunshot wound, Selena clutched in her right fist a ring that had been a gift from the woman now on trial for her murder.

Paramedics who worked feverishly to save her on the way to a [illegible] they opened the hand [illegible] no singing star.

"It was covered with blood," paramedic Richard Fredrickson testified Friday in the murder trial of Yolanda Saldivar.

The 14-karat gold and diamond ring, topped with a white-gold egg, had been a gift from Selena's boutique employees and the woman she trusted to manage her two clothing boutiques, Ms. Saldivar.

According to earlier reports, Ms. Saldivar had demanded the ring back in a meeting with Selena in a motel room. But the 23-year-old singer, whose full name was Selena Quintanilla Perez, was shot before she had a chance to return it.

After the shooting, Ms. Saldivar tried to race away from the motel in Corpus Christi but was [illegible] by police cars, so she veered her red pickup truck into a parking space, witnesses said.

When confronted by police, Ms. Saldivar first denied she was involved in the shooting, then put a gun to her head and said, "I want to kill myself," officer Bernardo Torres testified.

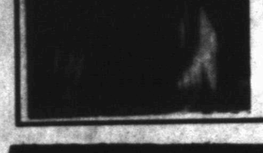

That began a 9½-hour standoff with police that ended in Ms. Saldivar's arrest and confession, police said.

Ms. Saldivar, 35, who rose from a zealous fan to store manager, is charged with murder in the March 31 slaying of the popular singer. If [illegible] to life in prison.

The defense claims Ms. Saldivar was hysterical and shot the Grammy winner by accident while waving a .38-caliber revolver.

Prosecutors contend the slaying was deliberate and took place after Selena went to the Days Inn to fire Ms. Saldivar for allegedly embezzling $30,000 from the boutiques.

Selena had gone to the motel room to retrieve business records from Ms. Saldivar and to fire her, her employees said. She was shot in the room, ran outside and collapsed in the lobby.

Her hair is still long and the color, somehow, is "still" blonde. She still has the same smile and long legs that just won't stay still. Her husband has threatened the ole "Trade Her For Two 20's Act."

Man bites wolf in fight for his life in Finland

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — When Olavi Veikanmaa was attacked by a wolf, he bit back.

Veikanmaa, 33, was heating a carpenter's workshop Tuesday morning at Seipajarvi, 560 miles north of Helsinki, when he heard a clanging in the yard.

He came upon a large male wolf near the garbage cans. The intruder, trapped between a wall and Veikanmaa, lunged at his throat, but Veikanmaa managed to grab its head and they wrestled for about 10 minutes.

"I was fighting for my life," Veikanmaa told The Associated Press Friday.

Obese man's diet nets jail time

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — At 505 pounds, a former toning salon operator is being sent to jail for not being able to resist non-diet soda and cream-filled cookies.

Arthur Younkin had told the judge he couldn't afford to pay $11,333 in restitution on a forgery conviction because his weight made it impossible for him to get a job.

Sedgwick County District Judge Clark Owens ordered Younkin to slim down to an employable size.

Younkin lost 70 pounds over four months, then regained about 78 pounds.

The judge had had enough, and on Friday he sentenced Younkin to 93 days in jail for violating probation.

Younkin's lawyer, Mike Manna, called the order and the sentence cruel.

What people choose to eat and weigh is a constitutionally protected right of privacy, he said.

U.S. Senate tax bill includes tax credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans are supporting a permanent $500-per-child tax credit as part of legislation that also expands eligibility for Individual Retirement Accounts and cuts taxes on capital gains.

The decision at a closed meeting Friday of the Finance Committee, clears the way for formal committee action next week and by the full Senate the week after.

Although the per-child credit would be permanent, it would not be retroactive as Republican senators had hoped. They had wanted to put the money in voters' pockets before next year's election. But, under the proposal, taxpayers would not reap the benefits until they filed their 1996 returns.

Single taxpayers earning up to $75,000 and couples earning up to $110,000 would be eligible for the full credit. Many others would get a partial credit, depending on how many children they have.

A bill already passed by the House would award a full credit to families earning up to $200,000 and partial credit up to $250,000.

"We've wrapped up, at least from the Republican side, a tax package that keeps our word to the American people," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

However, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., denounced the package as "voodoo economics all over again."

"Every American should be suspicious about the tax deals Republicans are cutting behind closed doors," he said.

The decision to make the credit permanent averts a potentially nasty showdown between Dole and his chief rival for the GOP presidential nomination, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas.

As senators struggled to shrink the $354 billion House tax cut down to the $245 billion permitted in Congress' plan to balance the budget in seven years, Dole had held out as a possible compromise making all or part of the tax package temporary.

But Gramm called a temporary tax cut "phony." After the agreement was reached Friday, he jubilantly told reporters, "We won," and promised to support the package vigorously.

Soviets reportedly wanted someone close to Roosevelt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trude Lash doesn't recall Russians ever trying to use her to influence Eleanor Roosevelt. And she wonders why they referred to her as Gertrude, a name she didn't use.

"They were very interested, of course, in my husband-to-be, Joseph Lash," she said Friday. "I didn't particularly interest anybody."

But the top Soviet KGB agent in New York, Vassily Zubilin, told his bosses in Moscow in 1943 that the woman he knew as Gertrude Pratt was a "great friend" of the president's wife.

The cable was one of scores of documents declassified and made public by the National Security Agency.

To this day, large segments of individual documents defy decoders.

The 1943 cable began, "For processing Captain's wife we (section undecipherable) her great friend Gertrude Pratt, wife of the well-known wealthy Elliot Pratt."

"Captain" was Soviet code for Franklin D. Roosevelt. "Processing" meant recruiting, according to NSA spokesman Ed Rockstein.

Mrs. Lash was a good choice if the Soviets were looking for someone close to Mrs. Roosevelt. She often stayed at the White House and eventually divorced Pratt and married Lash, an Eleanor Roosevelt confidant who lived in the family quarters.

"I don't know what this might mean," Mrs. Lash said in a telephone interview from her home in New York. "The only connection I ever had with the Soviet Union was that I was in charge of an international student meeting."

She also said that "no one ever referred to me as Gertrude. I was Trude."

Doris Kearns Goodwin, author of "No Ordinary Time," a Pulitzer Prize-winning study of the Roosevelts during World War II, said she never knew Mrs. Lash's real first name was Gertrude. She said she only knew her as Trude.

Mrs. Lash recalled the student meeting was in 1941 or 1942 in Washington and "we managed to get some young Russians to the assembly."

By then, Germany had invaded the Soviet Union and there was considerable sympathy for the Russians in the United States.

She said she then arranged for three Russian students to join Americans and others on a tour of the United States "but that's the only connection I had."

To the KGB, she was someone who "displays great interest in life in the USSR."

"I'm interested in the life everywhere," she said when told of that passage.

Looking back on that time, Mrs. Lash said, "You had a feeling that the things you were doing meant something. You don't always have that feeling now."

Thank You

We would like to express our sincere thanks to all of the wonderful friends who showed our family such sincere kindness. Our loved one, Charles Leonard Collins was such a caring person, and one who was always concerned about the well-being of others, that everytime you expressed acts of kindness you reminded us of his great spirit. This was a somewhat difficult time for our family, but with God's help we are confident that we are going to make it.

We are so thankful for friends
Who always think to step in
When we did not have hands
Our friends were willing to lend
When in sorrow our eyes would not dry
Our friends supplied the strength to help us get by.
During this game of life many things will pass us by
Some of them so devastating we don't understand why,
But the God we serve that sits upon high,
Sends great people like each of you to help us get by!!

Thanks for all your great concern and soothing sympathy.

Court clearing way to cut oak tree down

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — The Friendship Oak appears doomed.

Little more than a seedling when the first colonists came to Georgia in 1733, the live oak has held out its gnarled branches for 500 years.

intersection, causing traffic jams for motorists traveling to and from jobs in Georgia's fifth largest city and blocking a road-widening project.

Now it is likely to be cut down, despite a three-year campaign to save it.

The Georgia Supreme Court on Friday lifted a stay, paving the way for the tree's removal.

Supporters immediately began an around-the-clock vigil at the tree, which is festooned with a U.S. flag and red, yellow and green ribbons.

"If I have to sit in it, they're not getting that tree down," Amelia Apperson said.

"I had a feeling about today. It's Friday the 13th," said Russell Hassenstab.

The court's action means the [illegible]

Deen Hayman, division manager for Reeves Construction Co., which has the contract to widen the road, said it will probably be cut down next week.

"Basically we've got a job to do," he said. "Our way of making a living is building roads."

The tree is on the state Register of Historical Landmarks. It got the name "Friendship Oak" because it stood in the middle of an Army camp where veterans of the Spanish-American war were discharged almost 100 years ago.

How do those TV detectives always manage to win their cases? The answer can be summed up in one word: research.

Individuals should approach investing with the same thoroughness as a TV detective. With the wide array of investments available, proper research is a must before you invest.

Take mutual funds, for example. Today, investors can choose from nearly 5,000 different funds with a wide range of objectives, management styles and performance histories. How do you pick the one that's right for you?

Some investors rely on advertisements, ratings in financial magazines or advice-by-mail services. However, the best mutual fund research available to the average investor is offered by Morningstar or Value Line mutual fund surveys. Both of these should be available through your local library.

While the amount of information provided in these surveys may seem overwhelming, you only have to focus on a few areas.

1. What is the objective of the fund? Funds are available to meet a wide variety of objectives. What are you looking for? Growth of capital, high current income, a tax-free yield? Determine your own investment objectives, and look for funds that will invest your money to meet these goals.

2. What is the risk? Morningstar and Value Line rate risk on a scale of 1 (lowest risk) to 5 (highest risk) and provide an analysis explaining the reason for the rating. The risk ratings take into consideration such factors as the type and quality of securities in a fund's portfolio, how well-diversified the portfolio is, and much more. All of this is vital risk information, updated regularly, that you need to know.

3. What is the monthly income, and how reliable is it? An easy-to-read chart shows the annual dividends-per-share paid by each fund since 1980 (or the fund's inception if more recent).

While objective, risk, income and dependability are immediate concerns, you also want information on the fund's management, costs and expenses. All this and more are clearly covered in these reports. They are designed to provide nothig but accurate data, including a fair analysis of each fund's strong and weak points.

A good detective can see through hype and puffery. When you're evaluating mutual funds, be like Sgt. Joe Friday of "Dragnet": Demand "just the facts."

What's the connection?

If you think the world economy doesn't affect your financial goals, think again. Today, global economic changes matter to you as a consumer, as a worker, and as an investor. If you want to learn how these changes could work for you, please join me as I host a free seminar on international investing. Call today for reservations - and start to make the connections.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Friend Looking for Support Gets Cold Shoulder Instead

DEAR ABBY: My best friend, "Roberta," is a very hard-headed, outspoken person. She is considered by some to be very self-centered.

For a very long time, people have told me that Roberta takes advantage of me. I've always stood up for her and tried to accommodate her. Until recently, I didn't think twice about helping her. But recently I have been under enormous stress, with much unhappiness in my life. In trying to resolve my problems, I have ignored Roberta.

When I went to her for the kind of support and the shoulder I had always given her, I received instead a lecture from her on "growing up," and how I had brought these problems on myself. It was a slap in the face, and one that hurt much worse than a physical blow.

Abby, I feel hurt and betrayed. We have been best friends for 15 years. In all this time, I have never asked for emotional support from her, and the one time I did, I ended up feeling like dirt. She has now stopped calling, saying she has enough to worry about without having to deal with the problems of others.

What can I do to let her know she has hurt me? I love Roberta and don't want to end our friendship.

HURTING FRIEND

DEAR HURTING: Share your feelings in a letter to Roberta — then put it aside. Read it two days later, and if you still feel the same — mail it!

DEAR ABBY: The very day your letter about failure to return overdue library books ran in your column in the Cincinnati Enquirer, a news item appeared headlined, "Kentucky Mother Spends Night in Jail for Son's Overdue Library Book."

What a coincidence. I couldn't believe my eyes!

EVELYN SEARS, CINCINNATI

DEAR EVELYN: Thanks for sending the two newspaper clips. Although it sounds funny, Tanya Goetz failed to see the humor in it.

This 37-year-old mother of two spent a night in jail after having been handcuffed and arrested by Edgewood police.

It seems that "Chaz," her 14-year-old son, failed to return an overdue American history book he had checked out using his mother's library card. (Chaz had checked the book out in October 1993.)

Twenty-two months later, after several court summons had been issued and ignored, an Edgewood policeman appeared on Tanya's doorstep, charging her with theft by deception and contempt of court. After one night in jail, she was released on a reduced bond.

P.S. It doesn't say what happened to Chaz.

DEAR ABBY: My father was killed in Vietnam in 1974. I was only 4 years old and don't remember much about him, but my mother kept his memory alive through stories and photos. They were childhood sweethearts, and after he died, she never remarried.

Recently I lost my dear mother. As I was putting away her things, I found this poem, written in her hand, among a box of keepsakes:

Remember the day I borrowed your brand-new car,
And I dented it?
I thought you'd kill me,
But you didn't.

And remember the time I dragged you to the beach,
And you said it would rain, and it did?
I thought you'd say, "I told you so,"
But you didn't.

Do you remember the time I flirted with all the guys to make you jealous?
And you were?
I thought you'd leave me,
But you didn't.

Do you remember the time I spilled strawberry pie all over the rug in your new car?
I thought you'd hit me,
But you didn't.

And remember the time I forgot to tell you the dance was formal,
And you showed up in jeans?
I thought you'd drop me,
But you didn't.

Yes, there were lots of things you didn't do,
But you put up with me, and you loved me, and you protected me.
There were lots of things I wanted to make up to you
When you returned from Vietnam,
But you didn't.

Abby, my mom never wrote anything in her life, but this piece seems to describe my parents so perfectly I'm wondering how it could have come from anyone else. Can you help me? Have you ever seen it before, and do you know if there is an author? I will treasure it no matter what.

FASCCINATED IN FALLBROOK

DEAR FASCINATED: It is indeed a treasure. It is titled "The Things You Didn't Do," and appears in a book titled "Living, Loving and Learning" by Leo Buscaglia, Ph.D., professor of education at the University of Southern California.

It was written by one of Dr. Buscaglia's female students who wished to remain anonymous.

DEAR ABBY: Recently at a party, I was approached by an acquaintance and my mind went blank. I could not remember his name!

I was with two other friends and was hoping that everyone would introduce themselves, but their silence indicated they were depending on me to make the introductions.

Finally, not wanting to appear rude any longer, I had to admit that I couldn't remember the man's name. He acted insulted. I was so embarrased I could have crawled into a hole. Abby, what would you have done in this situation?

SANTA MONICA READER

DEAR READER: No need for you to have been embarrassed; it's happened to all of us occasionally.

I would have said, 'These are my friends, 'Mimi' and 'Rhonda,' and you are ... (short pause)?" at which point, he would have provided his name. Try it; it never fails.

Surgeon can sue makers of implants as consumer

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has ruled that a plastic surgeon can proceed with a lawsuit against the makers of breast implants on the grounds that doctors, like their patients, are consumers.

The ruling Wednesday by state Supreme Court Judge John Leone is the first in which a judge has found that a doctor, like a consumer, is covered under the 1976 Medical Device Amendments Act, attorney David A. Green said Friday.

The act requires manufacturers to disclose safety information about a product to the Food and Drug Administration, and allows anyone who was injured as a result of a violation to sue.

Green filed the lawsuit on behalf of Dr. Robert V. Vitolo against Dow Corning Corp. and Bristol-Myers Squibb Co.

Dow Corning attorney Sheila Birnbaum was out of the office Friday and could not be reached for comment. A Bristol-Myers spokeswoman had no comment.

Vitolo claims the manufacturers knew about problems with rupturing silicone implants, but didn't tell doctors.

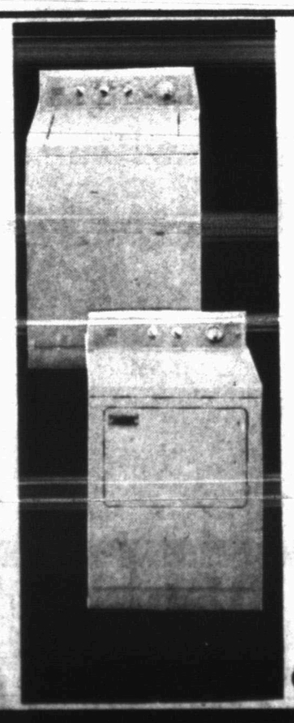

"I was misled by these manufacturers who did not provide proper test results, and as a result I sustained economic losses to my practice and I also sustained a loss to my reputation," he said Friday.

Vitolo said he performed about 1,800 implant operations between 1978 and 1992, when the FDA banned silicone implants, and they accounted for about 30 percent of his practice.

He said he has lost more than $500,000 from malpractice cases brought against him as a result of faulty implants, but protecting himself against further lawsuits was not the point of his case.

"My reputation has been tarnished by this through no fault of my own ... and it took me 20 years to build it," Vitolo said.

Last week, three manufacturers offered to settle lawsuits brought by thousands of women, limiting their combined claims to $3 billion.

YOU CAN LIVE FOREVER!

Jesus is the source of abundant life in this world (John 10:10), and He is the "author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him" (Hebrews 5:9). The Christian believes in life eternal. Jesus promised His disciples, "There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time and in the world to come life everlasting" (Luke 18:29-30). Jesus promised, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you to Myself; that where I am, there you may be also...I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one comes to the Father, but through Me" (John 14:2-3, 6).

Come Sunday and learn more of Christ, the way to eternal life!

Astro-graph By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sunday, Oct. 15, 1995

awakened in you in the year ahead. They will be unrelated to your past interests and new friends might help bring them into being.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Family members or relatives might present you with opportunities of a material nature today. Listen attentively when a relative starts talking about his big ideas. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Some good news you've been hoping for is trying to break through to you at this time. There is a strong possibility you might even hear it today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Take time today to analyze your circumstances from every angle. There is a possibility you've overlooked two significant opportunities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your leadership qualities might be very pronounced today. Your authority will seem obvious and you're not apt to be challenged if you step in and take charge of situations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today will be a good day to reclaim something of value that you loaned a friend. Asking for what is justifiably yours won't offend your pal.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unique benefits could come to you today through two contacts in distant places. If your sources don't get in touch with you, get in touch with them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not lower today. Anything realistic that you desire strongly enough will be achievable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Get in sync with your mate today if he or she has something enterprising in mind. It is doable, but will require equal efforts from both to pull it off successfully.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A new channel might suddenly open up today to provide you with increased income. You might have to work harder, however, to garner rewards from this source.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even if it requires adjustments in your social plans today, try to include a friend in your activities who recently did you a special favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Personally supervise any work or repairs done on or around your house today. Even if you called in professionals, make sure they're doing it properly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In fun, competitive activities with friends today, all eyes might be on you. If you win, do so graciously, if you lose, be equally gracious. Either scenario will help your image.

Your Birthday

Monday, Oct. 16, 1995

In the year ahead, stick to the course of action already successfully under way. Rewards will be forthcoming, but they'll require time to mature.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The competition might be much stiffer than you anticipated when it comes down to [illegible] some heat. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There might not be any takers for what you're espousing today, so it would be better not to impose your philosophy or opinions on associates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you've fallen a bit behind, you can maintain your credit standing by keeping current on obligations now due. Acknowledge what you owe today with minimum payments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A relationship could be jeopardized today if you break your word regarding something you promised to do. Honor your commitment, even if it hurts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might impair your efficiency and productivity today by trying to do more than you can comfortably manage. Take some of the irons out of the fire.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be very careful regarding involvements in speculative enterprises today. Someone might make a profit, but chances are, it won't be you.

[illegible] cooperate today, but there's no reason to pander to persons or bend to pressures that do not serve your best interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sticking to outmoded plans or ideas that aren't pertinent to your immediate needs could be counterproductive today. Revise your thinking and utilize your time more efficiently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If buying, selling or trading today, be cognizant of all the ramifications, even the small ones. Oversights could cost you big.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Owing to the impositions and demands of others on your time today, you might not be able to operate as independently as you'd like. Try not to make yourself too available.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Constant diligence is required today to prevent losing control of a matter that requires delicate management. Stay cognizant of every move.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Too much emphasis on pleasurable pursuits could cause you to neglect your duties today. Stick to business or you might have to pay the price.

No more gender-based pricing in California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — To California Gov. Pete Wilson, the issue is cut and dried: Women shouldn't have to dig deeper into their pockets than men to pay for a haircut, dry cleaning or clothing alterations.

Wilson signed into law Friday a bill that does away with gender-based prices for different services.

"At long last, women are free from the wrinkles of discrimination in the marketplace," said the bill's author, Assemblywoman Jackie Speier, D-Burlingame.

As of Jan. 1, it will be illegal for businesses to price their services based solely whether the customer is male or female. Violators will pay the consumer at least $1,000, or up to three times the amount of actual damages and attorney's fees.

A business can charge a different price if the time, difficulty or cost of the service is not the same for men and women. The bill also is limited to services and does not include products.

The Republican governor, who vetoed the bill last year, approved it after those modifications were added.

Tigers escape with 1 point win over Lobos

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

How important are extra points? Ask the Levelland Lobos.

Friday the 13th turned out to be a lucky day for the Snyder Tigers as they used two first-half touchdowns and a huge defensive stand in the fourth quarter to outlast Levelland, 14-13, in football action Friday night.

The game marked the start of District 5-4A action for both teams.

"That was a real good win for us," said Snyder High School Head Coach David Baugh, following the game. "We needed to win it."

Levelland had a chance to tie the game following a touchdown with 8:05 to play in the third quarter, but the extra point was blocked by the Tigers' Wayne Braziel. Instead of tying the game, Levelland was almost down by three points with the majority of the second half still to play. Snyder's Marlowe Riggins picked up the loose ball and raced to the Levelland two-yard line before the Lobos' Justin Guajardo caught him and pulled him down.

The Tigers got on the scoreboard first when quarterback Matt Parker found a wide open Wayne Braziel on a 32-yard pass play. Parker kicked the extra point to give Snyder a 7-0 lead with 1:29 to play in the opening quarter.

The touchdown topped off a seven play, 72-yard drive.

Snyder was driving again in the second quarter when Levelland's Tyler Hayes stepped in front of a Parker pass and scurried 65-yards to the end zone for the six points. Russ Alexander came and converted the extra point to tie the game, 7-7, with 6:58 to play before halftime.

On the ensuing kickoff, Braziel took the ball from the dealer on the star burst and scampered down the right side of the field for 52 yards. Snyder set up shop on the Levelland 47-yard line with 6:45 to play in the second.

Eight plays later, Parker hit his second touchdown pass of the night. This time, he found Riggins near the sideline. Riggins made a spectacular catch with two defenders hanging on to him and broke loose to complete a 34-yard scoring play.

Parker converted the kick-after to give Snyder what turned out to be the winning point, a 14-7 lead with 2:19 left before halftime.

The Lobos did move back down the field and set up for a 39-yard field goal with :29 left in the quarter, however, Alexander's kick went to the right and the score remained 14-7 at intermission.

The Lobo's took advantage of another Tiger miscue at the start of the third quarter. The Lobo's recovered a Tiger fumble and started in Tiger territory on the 41-yard line.

Four plays later, Michael Franklin ran from 12-yards out to make it a 14-13 game and then disaster struck the Lobos with Braziel dashing in to block the extra point.

Though the Tigers didn't put up any points in the second half, a hard-working run offense kept the ball out of the Lobos' hands much of the time.

Levelland had one last chance when the Lobos took over on the Snyder 47 following a second Tiger fumble. The Lobos put together a seven-play drive and were facing a fourth and eight from the Snyder 16-yard line. Alexander came on to attempt what would have been a go-ahead field goal into a strong north wind from 33 yards. The kick fell short of the cross-bar and Snyder took over with 5:36 to play.

Snyder ran off 4½ minutes before facing a fourth and one from the Levelland 47.

"I asked Coach Granato what he wanted to do," said Baugh. "If you gamble and miss it (a first down), you give them the ball on their 47. As it turned out, Parker got a good punt, but they made a good return."

Levelland's Derek Waters returned Parker's 42-yard punt 15 yards to set up Levelland on its own 22. But facing a stiff wind and an upset-minded defense, the Lobos couldn't pull out a miracle. After four unsuccessful Lobo passes, Snyder took over and ran out the clock to preserve the win.

Riggins had another good game as he carried the ball 17 times for 62 yards. L.S. McClain had 52 yards on 10 carries.

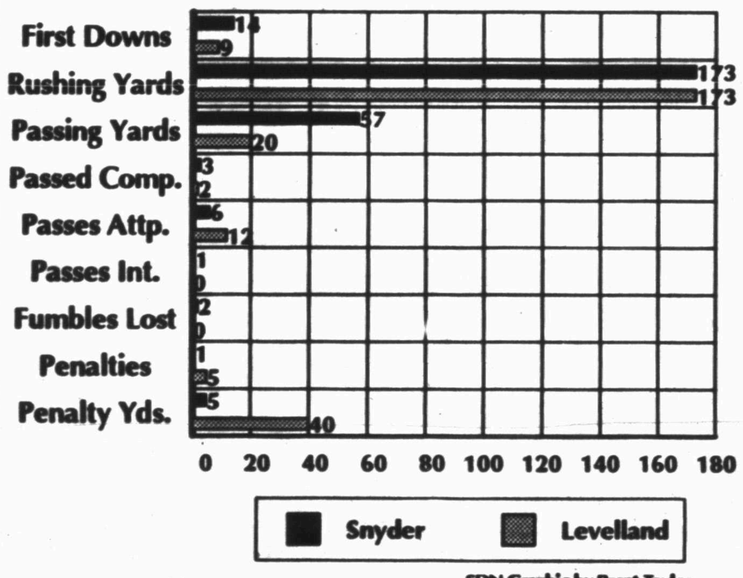

For the Lobos, Michael Franklin gained 108 yards on 18 carries.

Snyder will hit the road next week to take on the other Tigers...Frenship. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Wolforth. Frenship also got off to a good start Friday, kicking Lamesa 49-0. In other district action, Sweetwater beat Lubbock Estacado, 27-15.

PUNT RETURN—Levelland's Derek Waters (10) tightropes the sideline late in the game Friday night following a Snyder punt. He was pushed out of bounds by Snyder's Russell Riggan (11). Snyder held on to a 14-13 win over the Lobos to go 1-0 in district play. (Photo by Maria Quiros)

Alvin Harper may be gone, but Pokes don't miss a beat

By KEVIN LYONS
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — The Cowboys' preseason fear was that the offense would miss a step with Alvin Harper's high-flying act in Tampa Bay. But the only thing the Cowboys have appeared to miss are Harper's celebratory slam dunks over goal posts.

The Cowboys' Big Three — Troy Aikman, Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin — have made up for Harper's departure via free agency with career-best starts. Although deep-ball attempts are down, Aikman and company have methodically driven opposing coordinators crazy by first down, by first down, by first down.

The Cowboys are on pace to become the most systematic offense in NFL history. With a league-best 143 first downs, the Cowboys need to average 24.5 first downs during their final 10 games to break the record of 387 first downs in a season set by the 1984 Miami Dolphins.

The trivial pursuit reflects the patience of offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese, who played bombs-away as offensive coordinator of the point-a-minute Chargers in the 1980s.

"We've made an attempt to get the ball to Michael, Jay (Novacek) and Emmitt more, and so far, we've done pretty well," Zampese said. "We haven't thrown the ball deep quite as much, but we're still pushing the ball upfield."

Harper was the league's best deep threat last season, averaging 24.9 yards per reception. While waiting for Harper's replacement, Kevin Williams, to adjust to the offense, the Cowboys have taken a more deliberate approach.

Zampese's forbearance has yielded the top-ranked offense in pro football, averaging 408.3 yards per game. Behind what Cowboys coaches and players say is their best offensive line in some time, Smith, the rushing leader with 744 yards, has a league-best 46 first downs, giving the Cowboys a sure way to keep the chains moving.

"It takes a while to establish the running game — four quarters sometimes," said Cowboys coach Barry Switzer, who saw Smith average less than 2 yards per carry in the first quarter Sunday against the Green Bay Packers, and more than 6 yards per carry in the fourth quarter.

"You just have to keep hammering away, like a prize fight," Switzer said. "The blows, after 12 rounds, take their toll. It's important that you keep pumping Emmitt to them and finally, things happen. That has to be our approach."

The approach has opened two options, and Aikman, with his NFC-best 104.7 passing rating, has had no problems finding them: Irvin and Novacek.

Irvin's 100-yard days are becoming as routine as Smith's.

VERNON - Hereford cowgirl Chasity Rickman is leading the Western Texas College Rodeo Team in the Vernon Regional Jr. College NIRA Rodeo as she was in first place in goat tying after Friday night's action with a time of 8.4 seconds.

The finals are scheduled for Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Tona Wright was in fourth place in barrel racing with a time of 17.0 while Chasity Rickman stood in seventh place with a time of 17.22. Wright was also in fifth place in breakaway roping with a time of 3.2 seconds.

KayCee Plugge was in sixth place in goat tying with a mark of 9.5 seconds.

Pete Ellis was in third place going into the finals of the saddle bronc riding event with a time of 7.4.

Todd Loesch was in fifth place in the calf roping event with a time of 12.9 while Greg Benson was in eighth place in bareback bronc riding with a time of 6.2 seconds.

Brent Harvey was in seventh place in the steer wrestling event with a time of 7.8 seconds.

The top 10 individuals in each event advance to the finals.

NFL roundup

Jacksonville seeking 3rd win

By The Associated Press

The academy defines expansion as enlargement. In the NFL, the word usually means lousy football.

So which is the expansion team here? Jacksonville has played six games in its brief history, yet will be going for its third straight [illegible] go (3-2). Victory would push the Jaguars within a half-game of the AFC Central lead shared at 3-3 by idle Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

Carolina is 0-5 as a league member but three of its losses were by a touchdown or less. Redemption could be on the way Sunday when the Panthers play host to the New York Jets, an established franchise only playing like an expansion team. The Jets' lone victory was over Jacksonville; they've been outscored by an average 33-12 in their five defeats.

In other Sunday games, it is Seattle (2-3) at Buffalo (4-1), New England (1-4) at Kansas City (5-1), Philadelphia (3-3) at the New York Giants (2-4), Detroit (2-3) at Green Bay (3-2), Minnesota (3-2) at Tampa Bay (4-2), San Francisco (4-1) at Indianapolis (3-2), Miami (4-1) at New Orleans (0-5), Washington (2-4) at Arizona (1-5) and Dallas (5-1) at San Diego (3-3).

Oakland (5-1) is at Denver (3-3) Monday night.

Cincinnati (2-4), Cleveland (3-3), Houston (2-4) and Pittsburgh (3-3) are idle. St. Louis (5-1) beat Atlanta (4-2) 21-19 Thursday night.

Jacksonville started 0-3 before breaking into the victory column with a 17-16 defeat of Houston, then raised a lot of eyebrows with a 20-16 victory over Pittsburgh, a team that played for the AFC title last season.

"But you know what's even funnier?" Jaguars cornerback Vinnie Clark said. "A few weeks ago, people were saying we wouldn't win a game. That's funny."

Tom Coughlin certainly doesn't sound like the coach of an expansion team. Rather than be happy over two victories, he's looking for more.

"When the game is on the line, the offense is going to have to learn to pick it up," Coughlin said. And as for handling Chicago's offense, "We must get pressure on Eric Kramer."

Running back Derrick Moore of Carolina predicts the Jets-Panthers game will feature "guys flying around that football trying to make plays. If we make more positive plays than the Jets, then we can win the game. We're just going to get the chicken by the jugular and take care of business."

The Jets are further handicapped by being on the road and going without starting quarterback Boomer Esiason, literally knocked out last week by Buffalo's Bruce Smith.

"We really are not worried about them, but about ourselves," said Bubby Brister, who'll replace Esiason. "Being the first to lose to the expansion team has not crossed any minds. There is so much we need to improve and deal with ourselves."

Tampa Bay suffered expansion woes for, oh, a couple decades before suddenly acting like a football team this season. A victory over Minnesota would keep the Bucs alone atop the NFC Central standings.

If things fall right, the AFC West could be reduced to a two-team blood feud between Kansas City and Oakland.

RUN BLOCKING—The offensive line opened up big holes for the Snyder running game Friday night. The Tigers picked up 173 yards rushing. Snyder's Matt Parker (3) runs behind the offensive line made up of Jeff Hobbs (85), Chris Denson (63) Joey Medley (76), Heath Porter (54), Chris Post (75), Donnie Durst (79) and Teddy Murray (83). Highland Hornets sting Hermleigh Cardinals

The Highland Hornets stung the Hermleigh Cardinals, 46-8, Friday night in Highland.

Highland scored seven times by five different players. Cody Munsee scored on a 20-yard run and a 26-yard run. He also recovered a fumble in the end zone for a touchdown.

Juan Rodriguez scored on a one-yard run, Michael Rogers on a seven-yard run, Scott Etherdge to Jeff Borders on a two-yard pass and Carl Way on a fumble recovery in the end zone.

The Cardinals' touchdown came on a 54-yard pass play with 7:28 left in the game from Larry Lambarren to Joey Sanchez. Sanchez was good on the extra point.

"We need to come together as a team," said Coach David Rogers. "We need to have good practices and play together as a team."

Hermleigh will play host to Borden County next week.

If you ordered tickets to the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta, you should have them. Ticket confirmations were mailed Sept. 22, and 87 percent of customers were awarded tickets and received an average of nine of the 17 tickets they ordered.

Request for the tickets broke the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games record. The Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games (ACOG) sold over 2.7 million tickets in the first phase with request from more than 314,000 people.

If you forgot to order your tickets, never fear, tickets for the sports sessions and the Olympic Arts Festival are now sold on a first-come, first-serve basis by mail order.

Last Saturday's Texas Tech win over A&M was a very satisfying win for Tech fans, which I am one of. Since we did not have tickets to the game, the wife, kid and I took off for Dallas to the state fair, which we had never been to.

We listened to the game all the way, switching the radio from one station to the next to keep a good signal. We even had to listen to the A&M broadcast, whose announcers were not very happy.

After the game was over, I let my wife take the wheel and I settled in to take a nap. (Yes she is a pretty good driver most of the time) Before I dozed off, we came upon a car with an Aggie Alumni sticker on the back window and a maroon A&M hat on the back dash.

As we passed the car, I gave the "guns up" sign. I did not look at the car or the people inside, but my wife started laughing and said someone in the car was scrambling to get to the back to take down the hat. I don't know if they got the sticker off or not.

Mark your calendar for Tuesday night. That is the night the Snyder Lady Tigers will host the Lamesa Golden Tors in volleyball action.

If everything holds ture, a Snyder win will force a playoff for first and second place at the end of the season. It took three games, but Lamesa won the first match in Lamesa.

If you have not been to a volleyball game this year, this is the game to go see. I know you will enjoy the excitement surrounding the game. See ya there.

Wives' tale worth considering

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please print the cure for fever blisters. When you first feel the hot sensation of a fever blister beginning, dampen a regular (unlit) kitchen match and rub the hot area with it. This will sting for a few seconds but the blister will go away. This is an old wives' tale that really works, without medication.

DEAR READER: I've heard that the compounds (primarily sulfur) in a match may abort fever blisters. Although I've never tried it myself, the practice you describe sounds harmless, and certainly may be an improvement over standard therapy such as over-the-counter preparations, which are not particularly effective.

Thus, without any endorsement, I am passing on your suggestion. Thanks for writing.

Progressing from wives' tales to natural remedies, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Fads II: Herbs and Other Healing Fads." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill station, New York, NY 10150. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an underactive thyroid gland. A recent article I read indicates opposite symptoms from those that I have. Can you give me information on this condition?

DEAR READER: Thyroid hormone governs the body's metabolic rate. Thus, too much thyroid causes tremor, weight loss, rapid pulse, and other symptoms. This condition is diagnosed by blood tests.

Conversely, too little hormone (hypothyroidism) leads to a slowing of the metabolism, with symptoms of lassitude, coarse skin and hair, constipation, depression, slow pulse, and others. Thyroid deficiency, which is also confirmed by blood tests, is easily treated with hormone replacement pills, such as Synthroid.

If your symptoms are inconsistent with your diagnosis, either the article you read was misleading or you don't have hypothyroidism. Ask your doctor to solve this dilemma with a simple set of blood tests, called a thyroid profile.

DEAR DR. GOTT: [illegible] is long overdue. I want to thank you for your past article on food allergies. I wrote to the address of the Food Allergy Network in Fairfax, Va., and, for a small fee, was able to obtain a wallet-size laminated card that lists the ingredients to avoid for allergic foods. It is very helpful. Your articles have helped many people understand or confirm their problems. Keep up the good work.

DEAR READER: Thank you for the compliment. I appreciate your writing. The Food Allergy Network, 4744 Holly Ave., Fairfax, VA 22030 (1-800-929-4040) will supply a laminated card, for $1, to allergy sufferers.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A couple of years ago a close friend confided in me regarding her 5-year-old son. She was concerned about his choice of toys. He preferred girls' toys and always wore bows and barrettes in his hair. I suggested it was probably a phase. When my grandson recently visited him, he returned home indicating that "Bobby was weird and acted like a girl." Bobby is now 7, very intelligent, talented and happy. Still, he continues to show feminine tendencies and is making remarks like "he hates himself" and at times appears withdrawn and not really happy. His parents are very disturbed about the way he is developing.

Is it true that a child can sometimes be born with unbalanced hormones? If so, can a problem like this be nipped in the bud with hormone therapy? I feel so sorry for my friend and even more so for her son. He's a dear little boy.

I read your column every day and respect your advice. Hopefully you'll be able to shed some light on my questions or direct me to someone who can.

DEAR READER: Your friend should definitely take Bobby to his pediatrician.

Although most children go through periods when they rebel against gender issues — or are simply more interested in toys and clothing of the other sex — these phases rarely last, as the youngsters learn from their parents and other adults how to adopt the mannerisms and tastes consistent with their biological roles. Even so, girls who are tomboys — and boys who are more interested in "feminine" things — provide welcome relief from sex-role stereotypes, proving that variation may be one of the strongest human qualities.

Therefore, I am not as concerned about Bobby's apparent orientation as I am about his provocative statement that "he hates himself." The use of the third person and the meaning of that remark suggest to me that the child is losing a dangerous struggle with himself.

In my view, counseling could at least help Bobby resolve some of this conflict; at best, it might enable him to avoid a life of depression and self-hate.

I judge from your comments that there is an adult concern that the youngster may be homosexual. Maybe he was even "born" this way, and perhaps hormone therapy might somehow reverse this disturbing trend.

These are not important issues, in my opinion. If he is gay, so be it. The scientific community understands precious little about what governs sexual orientation. Hormones, at the age of 7, don't play a role. Rather, Bobby needs to accept himself as he is, regardless of gender preference, with all his flaws and fears. To do less for him would be inhumane and would destroy a child who is perceived as being intelligent and talented.

Bobby's pediatrician is a logical first step in the journey toward helping the boy become a happy and well-adjusted adolescent.

Convicted extortionist freed from federal prison Friday

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — A leading suspect in the 1982 tainted Tylenol killings was freed from federal prison Friday after serving more than 12 years.

Seven people were killed by cyanide-tainted Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules purchased from drug stores and groceries in the Chicago area in 1982. The killer was never identified.

James W. Lewis, an out-of-work accountant, was a prime suspect but never was charged with the deaths, which prompted dramatic changes in the way almost all food and medical products are packaged.

He was sentenced to 10 years in prison in June 1983 for demanding $1 million from Johnson & Johnson, parent of Tylenol manufacturer McNeil Consumer Products Co., "to stop the killing." He also served more than two years of a 10-year sentence for an unrelated tax-fraud charge.

Lewis arrived at Boston's Logan International Airport on Friday evening, wearing a purple sweatsuit and sporting the same full beard he had when he began his sentence. He was accompanied by his wife and an unidentified woman.

He appeared frail and shaken, but stared straight ahead and remained silent despite a half-dozen TV cameras and a barrage of questions from reporters, then got into a gray four-door car driven by an unidentified man.

Earlier, Leon Crawford, a spokesman for the Federal Correctional Institution in El Reno, would not confirm that Lewis, 49, had been released, saying only that he was scheduled to be freed Friday. Lewis also had been serving another 10-year sentence for tax fraud.

Lewis told The Associated Press in 1992 that he planned to live on the East Coast with his wife, Leanne, once he was released.

Lewis was arrested in December 1982 at a New York library after a two-month manhunt.

He gave investigators a detailed account of how the killer might have operated, describing how someone could tamper with capsules in stores, obtain cyanide from stores, use a special method to add cyanide to the capsules and then return them to store shelves.

"I was doing like I would have done for a corporate client, making a list of possible scenarios," Lewis said in the 1992 AP interview.

He admitting sending the letter that demanded the money, but said he never meant to collect it. He said he wanted to embarrass his wife's former employer by having the money sent to the employer's bank account.

'ER' overwhelms 'Murder One' in first contest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Murder One" may need medical attention after its first head-to-head confrontation with "ER."

The ABC show managed only an 8.3 rating and 14 share Thursday, compared with the 24.7 rating and 40 share posted by "ER" on NBC, according to the networks.

"ER," in fact, slightly bettered its 24.4 average rating for the previous three episodes. It is the season's top-ranked show and caps NBC's powerhouse Thursday line-up.

In third place was "48 Hours" on CBS with a 6.6 rating and 11 share.

A single ratings point equals 959,000 households, or 1 percent of the nation's 95.9 million TV homes estimated by Nielsen Media Research. Share is the percentage of TV sets in use at any one time tuned to a particular broadcast.

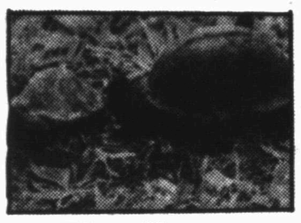

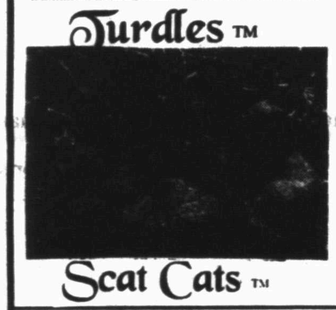

"Murder One" had been on Tuesday since its debut Sept. 19. The critically acclaimed legal drama earned a 15.5 rating, 26 share, the first week.

Hope to perform

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Opal may have battered Bob Hope Village — but it hasn't beaten Bob Hope.

The entertainer still plans to perform with Tony Bennett at a benefit show Wednesday for the Air Force Widows' and Dependents' Foundation in nearby Shalimar.

SS cuts possible

White House eyes its 'whole card'

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was once an unthinkable notion — a Democratic president signing on to Social Security cuts. But White House advisers are keeping the option open as a possible way to break [illegible] Republican-run Congress.

The Clinton administration is closely watching the public's reaction to reports that key Democrats and Republicans want to adjust the Consumer Price Index downward.

The action would slice cost-of-living increases for 43 million Americans, most of them elderly, angering a potent political force that supported President Clinton in the 1992 election.

White House budget hawks, particularly chief of staff Leon Panetta, are trying to push politics aside and telling reporters that many economists feel the CPI overstates consumer inflation and needs adjustment.

These aides argue that the money raised by lowering the CPI may be needed to bridge the gap between Republican and Democratic budget philosophies, sort of a high-stakes hole card that Clinton can play at the negotiation's eleventh hour.

"The CPI will very likely figure in the equation," said a senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity. The money, aides said, could protect education, environment and other social programs from dire GOP cuts.

But Clinton political aides devoted to the re-election effort worry that tampering with Social Security could spell trouble in 1996, particularly in Florida — a leading retirement state whose electoral votes the president hopes to take back from Republicans in 1996.

The topic has not prompted internal bickering, with even political aides ticking off a list of reasons Clinton — and Republicans — could approve the reductions without suffering at the polls. And both White House factions still believe they may strike a budget deal on Capitol Hill without involving themselves or Clinton in the CPI debate.

But the fact that a Democratic president is even considering a move that would take money from the elderly shows just how much the political landscape has changed since Republicans captured Congress last year.

"They don't want to mess with this one," said one Clinton political adviser outside the White House. "But that's quite a lot of money."

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, the Senate Finance Committee's senior Democrat, says his proposal to reduce the CPI by one percentage point would cost the average retiree $7 a month and save $281 billion over seven years.

Police kept busy Friday

Six people were arrested at 11:42 p.m. Friday on misdemeanor drug and alcohol related charges.

Arrested in the 2200 block of 42nd Street were a 19-year-old male for possession of marijuana, an 18-year-old male for possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia and a 24-year-old male for possession of marijuana and making alcohol available to minors.

Three juveniles were also taken into custody. Two of the juveniles, one male and one female, were arrested for minor in possession of alcohol while a male juvenile was arrested for consumption of alcohol by a minor.

At 2:26 a.m. Saturday, officers arrested a 17-year-old male for public intoxication.

In other activity Friday, a deputy was requested at Rip Griffin's in reference to a theft. An offense report for Class B theft was submitted.

Deputies were requested at the Willow Park Inn at 4:40 p.m. in reference to theft of service.

At 10:18 p.m. Saturday, officers were notified of an assault. A 37-year-old female was transported to Cogdell Hospital by Snyder EMS where she was admitted. Her condition was listed as stable Saturday morning.

TxDOT safe driving awards reported for Scurry County

ABILENE — Eleven Scurry County maintenance section employees along with seven Snyder area office personnel were among 212 Texas Department of Transportation workers in the Abilene district recognized recently for earned safe driving awards. These 18 employees achieved a combined total of 196 years of safe driving.

Scurry County employees earning awards were: Jimmy Suarez, 23 years; Ben Olibas Jr., 16 years; George Larralde, 15 years; Johnny Arellano, 14 years; Art White and Dennis Reynolds, 13 years; former employee Paul Lawson, ten years; Gerald Thompson and Terry McCright, eight years; Jack Talley, section supervisor, six years; and Noah Bilano, one year.

Taking awards in the Snyder area office were: Billy Tarter, 23 years; Jerry Beard, 20 years; Tom Rowe III, ten years; Cheryl Jones, eight years; Ben Streiff, five years; Joe Jones, two years; and Cathey Crowder, one year.

The highest award in the Abilene district was presented to now retired Tom Jones from the Jones County maintenance section. He had completed 32 years of driving without an accident.

To be eligible for an award, employees must have completed one year of accident free driving.

An awards banquet to recognize the district achievers was held at the coliseum annex in Sweetwater. There, honorees received a Certificate of Appreciation, or a plaque if their safe driving record was 22 years or more. Those reaching the 15, 20 and 25 year mark also received an additional gift.

The combined total of safe driving years for all district employees was 2,625 years.

Presenting the awards was Maribel P. Chavez, P.E., Abilene District engineer.

Guest speaker was humorist Maurice Beckham of Austin.

Billing himself as "The Country Boy," Beckham kept the audience's attention with his good clean humor and hilarious, indentifiably real-life examples designed as a springboard in promoting self-satisfaction and success with everyday life. He is the former chief administrative officer for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Prosecutor calls Simpson 'just another murderer'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutor Bill Hodgman had a different image of O.J. Simpson the sports hero as he examined the mound of evidence against him: "He became just another murderer in my mind."

Hodgman and fellow prosecutors Hank Goldberg, Brian Kelberg and Woody Clarke appeared on CNN's "Larry King Live" and for the first time Friday discussed the issues that were raised during Simpson's murder trial.

"There are a lot of issues that this case raised regarding celebrity status, regarding race, that are very important in our country, that have not been resolved," Goldberg said. "And I think that this has brought those discussions to the fore."

Simpson was acquitted Oct. 3 of killing ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

"I admired Simpson and when I first heard about this case, when I first heard about some of the evidence in the case, it was like a switch went off for me," Hodgman said. "He became just another murderer in my mind."

Hodgman said jurors responded to race issues.

"It's indicative of some type of problem that ... we appear to have the evidence viewed through two different prisms. A black prism, if you will, and a white prism, and we came to very divergent opinions," Hodgman said.

Times Mirror Magazines to cut some jobs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Times Mirror Magazines plans to cut about 125 jobs, mainly from corporate departments, by the end of 1995 to lower costs.

The decision announced this week was one in a series of recent cuts at Times Mirror Corp., the big media company whose flagship is the Los Angeles Times.

Times Mirror said the move at its New York-based magazine group will decentralize business functions, giving more autonomy to each magazine.

The staff reductions include jobs eliminated since August, when the company began restructuring. Times Mirror's magazines now have 611 full-time employees.

The magazines include Popular Science, Field & Stream, Golf Magazine, Ski, Yachting and Outdoor Life.

James L. Kopper, executive vice president, group publisher for Times Mirror Magazines, has taken on the new role of executive director for the company, Times Mirror said.

Kopper will focus on advertiser and agency relations, working directly with Efrem Zimbalist III, chief executive of Times Mirror Magazines.

Two dead, 37 injured in bus accident

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A chartered bus carrying high school football fans home from a game rolled over early Saturday, killing a pregnant woman and a boy and injuring 37 people. The fetus did not survive.

The bus rolled onto the driver's side as it rounded the curve of an exit ramp off Interstate 70 about 12:30 a.m., state Trooper Dave Bursten said.

The bus then slid 50 feet before coming to a stop on an embankment.

"We don't know if it was equipment failure or if it was driver error or inattention to the curve," Bursten said.

The driver, John Luther Flie Sr., showed no signs of impairment, but police took a blood and urine sample from him, Bursten said. Flie, 49, of Calumet City, Ill., works for Hammond-based Indianapolis Yellow Line Coach.

In addition to Flie, the bus was carrying 38 students and parents who support the North Central High School football team, which had played Jeffersonville High School, about 100 miles south of Indianapolis. North Central is Indiana's largest high school.

The crash killed Julia Sombol, 30, who was six months pregnant, and Henry Thomas Rush, 9 years old, Bursten said. Both victims had been partially ejected from the bus and were crushed under it, he said.

Twenty-seven of the injured were treated and released by area hospitals, though six people were still being evaluated this morning. Details on the remaining injured were not immediately available. None of the injuries were described as serious.

Truck-hayride crash: 1 dead, 19 hurt

GLOCESTER, R.I. (AP) — A pickup truck crashed into a horse-drawn hayride on a straight stretch of lighted highway Friday night, killing a woman and injuring all 19 others involved.

"There were people all over the street and the side of the road, hay everywhere," police Lt. Jamie Hainsworth said.

The truck rear-ended the wooden wagon pulled by two horses in the slow lane about 20 miles west of Providence, Hainsworth said. The hayride was carrying 18 passengers, mostly adults, and a driver; the truck driver was alone.

Roger Leveillee came out of St. Eugene's Roman Catholic Church just after the accident: "I saw the hay. I could see (people) lying on the ground moaning and groaning."

A woman, whose name was not released, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Three people were airlifted to Massachusetts hospitals with multiple injuries and three people were in critical condition at hospitals in Rhode Island.

At least two other hospitals admitted patients, mostly in fair or stable condition. Five people were treated and released.

The horses were not injured.

Roxanne regaining hurricane strength; heads for Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Tropical storm Roxanne gathered strength over warm Gulf waters Friday, threatening to return to hurricane force as it headed toward the eastern coast of Mexico.

Five people have died since Roxanne hit the Yucatan peninsula as a hurricane on Tuesday, knocking down trees, forcing tens of thousands into shelters, flooding towns and ruining crops.

The hurricane weakened over land and was downgraded to a tropical storm after entering the Gulf of Mexico at midweek. But on Friday, maximum sustained winds strengthened from 50 mph to 60 mph.

"If it doesn't pick up speed it could sit out there until it does strengthen," said forecaster Tricia Wallace at the U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami. "Possibly, possibly, it could make hurricane again."

Roxanne was the Atlantic storm season's 10th hurricane when it crashed ashore.

A 28-year-old Mexican woman and her 1½-year-old daughter drowned Tuesday after their sailboat capsized off a Yucatan beach as Roxanne approached, a government official in Quintano Roo said.

Authorities on Friday reported the drowning of an unidentified 50-year-old man in Ciudad del Carmen, a coastal city on the southern Gulf of Mexico.

A worker was drowned while measuring rainfall during Roxanne's passage, authorities said, and a man was electrocuted while repairing a storm-damaged home, according to the independent news agency Excelsior.

A tropical storm warning and a hurricane watch have been posted for most of the Mexican Gulf coast up to La Pesca.

Bombing grand jurors reportedly spoke to reporters, lawyers claim

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — At least one member of the grand jury investigating the Oklahoma City bombing spoke to reporters from The Daily Oklahoman and a monthly magazine, lawyers for Timothy McVeigh charge.

The lawyers made the claim in a motion filed Friday asking that the indictment against McVeigh be dismissed because grand jurors are forbidden by law from disclosing testimony.

The defense motion also said some of the grand jurors were convinced the bombing plot was larger than McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the only two people charged in the April 19 bombing that killed 169 people and injured at least 500.

But prosecutors "purposely did not bring to the grand jury evidence which would establish the role of others or a larger conspiracy ... (because it) was under intense pressure for a quick indictment," the motion said.

The defense accused the prosecution of withholding information the grand jury wanted on John Doe No. 2, the man depicted in sketches after the bombing as a possible suspect. He later was revealed to be an Army private who had no role in the crime.

The grand jurors had wanted to meet the artist who drew the composite sketches of John Doe No. 2 and question him concerning the drawings, the motion said.

Defense lawyers learned of jurors' complaints from tapes of an interview one grand jury member gave to "Media Bypass," a monthly magazine promoted as one that covers stories the mainstream media ignores.

Derailment letter calling for feds to police law enforcement agencies

HYDER, Ariz. (AP) — A letter left at the scene of a fatal Amtrak derailment is unusual for its contention that the solution to government run amok is more government, militia watchers say.

"This is not necessarily a philosophy that you would find embraced by the rank-and-file militia groups," said Clinton Van Zandt, a former FBI analyst who is now a private consultant.

The letter does not claim responsibility for Monday's derailment of the Sunset Limited in a remote desert stream bed, though several copies were found at the scene of the wreck that killed one person and injured 78.

The track had been loosened just ahead of a 30-foot-deep gulch. The tampering went unnoticed because a wire had been installed to bypass an electrical system that would have warned the crew of a break.

The letter, signed "Sons of the Gestapo," begins with a narrative of the federal raid on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas, that ended in an inferno in which sect leader David Koresh and 80 followers died.

"Before dawn the women awoke to say their morning prayers," the letter begins. It goes on to suggest that some unidentified official purposely directed tanks to crash through the compound's walls in such a way as to knock over kerosene lanterns and start the fire.

The letter rails at abuses by federal law enforcement agencies.

Site visit

TDCJ has said estimated cost of a proposed site is $25 million. The facility will require 200 additional employees with an estimated annual payroll of $25 million.

In locating new units, TDCJ is requiring communities to provide infrastructure without cost to the state, including access to electric, water and sewer services.

Local officials will meet the site team at the airport and will take them to the Price Daniel Unit. If time permits during the two-hour visit, the team will also see the TDCJ warehouse and correctional wing at Cogdell Hospital.

Columbia's engines fine, but weather threatens Sunday morning launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After inspecting crucial engine welds, NASA Saturday cleared space shuttle Columbia for launch despite an increasingly dismal weather forecast.

Columbia is due to blast off Sunday morning — launch try No. 6.

A crack in a test engine prompted NASA to delay Saturday's scheduled liftoff so workers could check the main engines for possible defects.

Liquid oxygen leaked from a 2-inch crack on the high-pressure discharge duct of an engine being tested earlier this week at Stennis Space Center in Mississippi.

Engineers discovered an unacceptably thin wall near a weld on this pipe and recommended that ultrasonic tests be conducted on Columbia's ducts to determine wall thickness.

Shuttle test director Bill Dowdell said the ultrasonic tests, completed this morning, showed that all but one of the 21 suspect welds on Columbia were well within the limit. The exception was barely within that limit and engine maker Rocketdyne determined it was acceptable to fly, he said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration wanted to make sure Columbia's three main engines are safe before trying to send the shuttle on the 16-day laboratory-research mission. An oxygen leak of this sort could be catastrophic.

Technicians also had to replace one of Columbia's primary computers on Friday night.

Columbia was supposed to soar Sept. 28, but was grounded by a leaking engine valve. Subsequent delays were caused by sluggish hydraulics, a failed computer-signal relay unit and Hurricane Opal.

One more delay for this mission ties the record for shuttle launch scrubs, set by Columbia — NASA's oldest shuttle — in January 1986.

"It's not time to retire and it's definitely not a jinxed spacecraft," Dowdell said of Columbia. "I think most of the folks that fly Columbia will tell you sometimes it's hard to get off the ground but it performs very well once it's on orbit.

"We've had some hardware problems and we've had some weather problems ... we may have more weather problems," he said. "We'll fly when it's ready to fly and we'll fly when the weather permits us to fly."

Love, kindness, care transform woman's life

Scurry County Folks
by Shirley A. Gorman
THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

Sometimes, fairy tales do come true.

Today, Betty Lue Leak, 66, shares a well-furnished room at Snyder Healthcare Center with her mother, Vera Dryden, 85, who is blind.

She sleeps in a warm, comfortable bed, eats three hot meals a day, participates in a variety of activities, watches TV and even has a small monthly stipend for candy and Cokes. Happy and contented, she is wrapped in the bosom of a caring staff who welcomed her with open arms last January when she literally had nowhere else to go.

Betty loves the "Motel Bunkhouse," as she affectionately refers to the nursing home. Secure in her surroundings, she helps take care of her mother and visits fellow residents who are "shut-ins."

The room Betty shares with her mother is dotted with new furnishings, a lean-back rocker and portable television with remote control which she enjoys clicking. "Wheel of Fortune" is her favorite program.

She has been able to buy new clothes — enough outfits for daily changes — and even makeup. She enjoys new friends and rediscovered an old one, Adell Holdren, a former schoolmate who also resides in the nursing home.

Part of Betty's days are filled with organized activities such as bingo and Bible trivia, which begin at 10:30 a.m. Occasionally she treats herself to candy and Cokes purchased from the nursing home's Candy Corner.

Sometimes, MHMR representatives or other Snyder residents treat her to lunch at a local restaurant or some other activity. Betty has also received much needed medical and dental attention, including false teeth, cataract surgery and a new pair of eyeglasses.

But life has not always been this good for the woman who once lived very much like a "bag lady."

For years, the Snyder woman wandered local streets, clad in a long coat regardless of the weather, sometimes clutching a small plastic bag of groceries.

She shared a ramshackled home — a house without common amenities like water or utilities — with her mother and brother, Don Dryden.

In time, her mother had to move into a room at the nursing home. Devoted to each other and alone then, Betty and Don faced what seemed to them a fearful and hostile world.

Extremely wary of strangers, they had built an invisible wall cutting them off almost completely from the rest of the world.

But their plight did not go unnoticed. Sharon and Marvin Applin of Gentle Dove Ministries spearheaded an effort to improve life for Snyder's almost-forgotten siblings.

Through diligence and patience, Sharon and Marvin invested months earning their trust, one act of kindness at a time. Gradually, they began to accept the food and clothing that the Applins brought with them.

Gentle Dove Ministries wanted to move Betty and Don into a more livable home, but the brother and sister were reluctant to leave since they owned the land their home was located on.

That dilemma was remedied by the late Loyd Angel, who donated a home for their use, one with running water and utilities. Betty and Don settled into a new way of life, continuing to get by on the donations of food and clothing which Sharon and Marvin placed on their porch or kitchen table. The Senior Citizens Center's home delivered meals program also provided one hot meal a day during the week.

But no matter what her life was like, Betty always walked daily to the nursing home to spend the day with her mother.

Then the unthinkable happened — Don died unexpectantly on Jan. 2 of this year, and Betty's fragile world was torn apart.

The loss of her brother left a bewildered Betty in shock — so much so that after riding in the ambulance to the emergency room of Cogdell Memorial Hospital, she wandered off to another part of the hospital.

After Gentle Dove Ministries was notified that Don had died, Sharon and Marvin went to the hospital where Sharon located and comforted the frail woman before arranging for Snyder Healthcare Center to let Betty spend the night in her mother's room.

Fortunately for Betty, the stay has become permanent. While trying to secure help for the woman, Sharon discovered that Betty was entitled to Social Security widow's benefits.

Though it took about six or seven months to work through all the red tape, the funds have allowed Betty to purchase clothes and furnishings for the room she shares with another woman. It also paid for the much-needed medical, dental and eye care she has received recently. In addition, it also pays Betty's nursing home expenses.

Sharon Applin, who first met Betty when she (Sharon) was a child, has been appointed Betty's guardian.

As Betty's life has been transformed these past few months, she has gained far more than she ever thought possible. But she has lost something too — her fear of the night and the impenetrable, often frightening darkness it brings. Snug and secure in her cozy environment, Betty no longer fears the cold or what the next day may bring.

Hagman ready to work again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — J.R. is eager to get back in the saddle.

Two months after a liver transplant, Larry Hagman says he's ready to start acting and directing again.

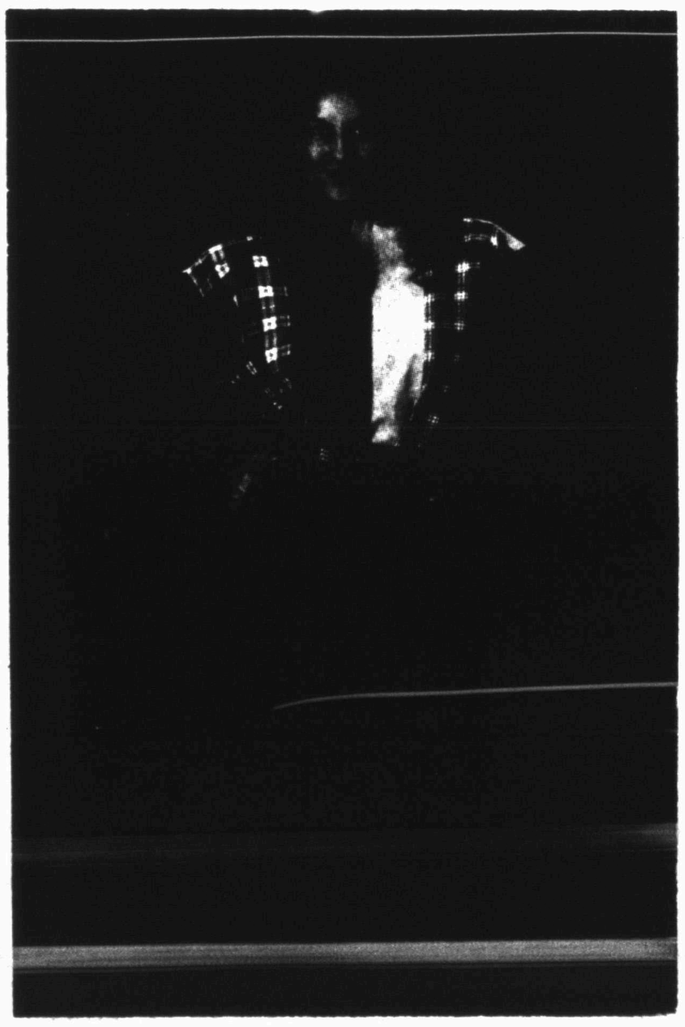

"We've been talking about doing a movie of 'Dallas,' the reunion," Hagman said in an interview to be broadcast Monday on "Entertainment Tonight."

Hagman, once a heavy drinker, was diagnosed in 1992 with cirrhosis. In July 1995 a malignant tumor was discovered on his liver and he was placed on a transplant waiting list.

Hagman, 64, said he does not know who his donor was.

"I sure do thank him or her," Hagman said. "It's a perfect liver, though, because it sure has attached well and taken off."

Fiennes splits from his wife

NEW YORK (AP) — To split or not to split: That is question facing Ralph Fiennes.

The star of "Hamlet" on Broadway and "Strange Days" on screen is taking a break from his decade-long relationship from his wife, Alex Kingston, a respected stage and television actress in Great Britain.

That's not to say it's over — yet.

"They are leading separate lives," is all Leslee Dart, a spokeswoman for Fiennes, would say Friday. She would not elaborate on whether they were legally separated or whether a divorce was imminent.

Fiennes, 32, refused to discuss his marriage in an interview in November's Vanity Fair magazine.

Local genealogical society sets seminar

Scurry County Genealogical Society will sponsor a mini-genealogy seminar Monday, Oct. 23, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Senior Center located at 2612 Ave. W.

Ron Bremer from Salt Lake City will present the program titled," "The World of Genealogy," and will be informative for both the beginner and the advanced.

Bremer was born and reared in southern California, but now has an office near the Family History Library in Salt Lake City. He authored "The Compendium of Historical Sources" and has visited the major genealogical record centers in every state and province in North American.

His travels from the audience makes his seminars more personal. He averages five seminars a week and travels about sixty-thousand miles a year.

There is no charge for the seminar, and those attending are encouraged to go prepared to discuss their genealogical research problems, audio and video recordings are welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Ellington celebrated golden anniversary with family dinner

Bennie and Ruth Ellington of Snyder were married 50 years on Oct. 4 and celebrated with their children by having dinner at a local restaurant on Sept. 30.

Their children are Cathey Landon of San Angelo, Dan Ellington of Midland, Benny Ellington, Odessa and Kay Ellington of Bakersfield, Calif.

Ellington was born on Aug. 15, 1918 in Hugo, Okla., and Mrs. Ellington was born on Aug. 1, 1925 in Yantis, Tex. They met at Yantis when Ruth was 10 and Bennie was 17, attending a one-room school together.

They married in Sulpher Springs and lived one year in Rotan, moving to Snyder where Ellington farmed until 1985. After retirement, he now works at Wal-Mart. Mrs. Ellington is a homemaker. Members of Morningside Baptist Church, the Ellingtons have eight grandchildren.

Bennie & Ruth Ellington

Dear Mama & Daddy,

When we look back at our life, no matter when or where, at every age and step or stage of our lives...our folks were always there.

When times were good and fun filled our home and laughter filled the air... our folks were there.

When times were bad and life seemed so hard and unfair...their words of encouragement and support would get us through it...our folks were always there.

Even today, when we have news to celebrate or hopes and dreams to share, their pride in us is very evident...our folks are always there.

Today as we celebrate your life together and all you have done for us and so many others...we want to say "Thank You"...for all your love and support...and for always being there.

With love and appreciation,
Cathey, Danny, Benny & Kay

Did South misplay this contract?

By Phillip Alder

The world is full of pismrints [sic], some funny, some unfortunate. Last August, an advertisement for a pharmacy not a million miles from where I live proclaimed: Free bag of sugar with any purchase of diabetic supplies.

That should have been sugar-free candy, apparently. I wonder what they pay for proofreaders.

In today's deal, South made a misplay, then claimed, as players do, that the light was bad.

Opposite a passed partner, South decided that a slam was out of reach. So he bid what he hoped he could make.

West led the heart 10. After declarer called for dummy's eight, East guessed well that his partner hadn't led a singleton. Withholding his ace, East signaled encouragement with the seven.

South won with the king, drew trumps and played his club to dummy's queen. After winning with the ace, East switched to the diamond jack. West captured South's queen with his ace and returned his second heart, East taking two tricks in the suit to defeat the contract.

Declarer made his fatal error at trick one. If only he had played dummy's heart queen, the contract would have been safe. He could have finessed East out of his heart jack and held his losers to one in each side suit. (If necessary, South uses dummy's spade eight as an entry.)

Charles Schulz, in his Peanuts cartoons, has given Lucy many great excuses for missing routine fly balls in their Little League baseball games. My favorite is that light from the moons of Saturn had got in her eyes.

In East Side Church of Christ...

Birk, Myers say vows

Rebecca Dawn Birk of Cortez, Colo., and Thad Ray Myers of Snyder pledged nuptials vows in a double-ring ceremony on June 24 at 1 p.m. in the East Side Church of Christ. Tom Holcomb, minister of the church, officiated.

E.A. and Shirley Birk of Cortez, Colo., are the bride's parents and the groom's parents are Ray and Gloria Myers of Snyder.

With satin bows marking the pews, the altar area of the church was decorated with an arch candelabrum between two spiraling candelabras, flanked by flowering green plants. Flowers and decorations were arranged by Roscoe Flower Shop.

Lighting candles were Heather Griffith, wearing a navy blue dress, and Douglas Ince wearing a navy blue tuxedo. They are both from Roscoe, and cousins of the groom.

Taped music was played as the mothers and grandmothers were escorted to their seats. Also, the bride entered to a tape of the "Wedding March." The new Mr. and Mrs. Myers exited the church to taped music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white bridal satin and sheer white chiffon, designed by her mother. It featured leg-of-mutton sleeves with cut-away appliques, a heart-shaped back opening crossed with strands of seed pearls. The full skirt which extended to a chapel length train, also featured matching appliques and a cut-lace border.

Her headpiece of white silk roses and lilies of the valley held her elbow-length veil and her bouquet was a cascade of two dozen roses, surrounded with green leaves and baby's breath.

Maid of honor was Brenda Knox of Durant, Okla. She wore a princess style burgundy satin ankle-length dress and dyed to match pumps. She carried a single long-stemmed pink rose with satin ribbons.

Bridesmaids, Misty Myers of Lubbock, sister of the groom, Chiarra Aguilar of Lubbock, and Melissa Myers of Snyder, sister of the groom, wore princess style navy blue satin ankle-length dresses lide the maid of honor's and matching pumps.

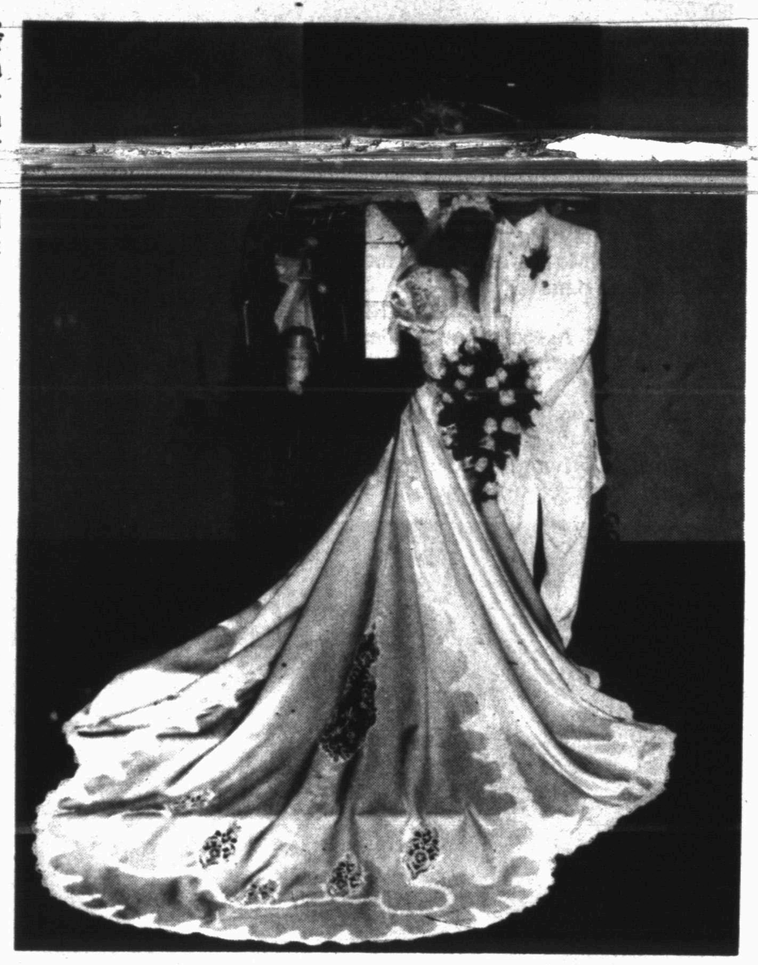

The groom wore a white tuxedo with tails, white shoes, and were completed with a red boutonniere. Father of the groom served as best man. He wore a white tuxedo jacket and black tuxedo slacks.

Groomsmen were Philip Ridley of Lubbock, James Lewis from Christoval, Daniel Birk from Cortez, brother of the bride. They wore white tuxedo jackets and black slacks.

Ushers Jarud Griffith and Heath Ince, cousins of the groom from Roscoe, wore navy blue tuxedos.

Ginger Smith from College Station registered guests. Special guests included Louise Birk of Warren, the bride's grandmother, James and Blanche Ince of Roscoe, and Clara Hoskins of Hermleigh, the groom's grandparents.

The reception, held at the multi-purpose building, featured the bride's table covered with a burgundy Battenburg lace tablecloth topped by a white lace cloth and held a five-layer spiral white cake with white icing. Jack Meares of Roscoe decorated the cake with fresh flowers and navy blue and burgundy satin bows with ribbons hanging from the bows. Mints and nuts were served from crystal serving dishes.

The groom's table had a navy blue Battenburg lace cloth, topped with a white lace cloth. Coffee and chocolate cake with chocolate icing, decorated with a Texas Tech Double "T" and the Red Raider emblem on top. Coffee was served from a silver service.

Keetha Dickerson from Cortez, and Jan Norton from Andrews served at the bride's table and Rhonda Vaught of Lubbock and Ramona Barrera from Carrollton served at the groom's table.

Members of the houseparty included Charlotte Griffith and Belinda Ince, aunts of the groom, Mary Jo Lewis, Velma Lewis and Katie Dickerson. Also helping at the reception were Roy Lewis, Tom Griffith, Tim Ince, Herb Barrera and Donnie Vaught.

The groom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner the evening before the wedding at Reta's Cake Shop and Texas Barbecue.

On June 28th, the bride's parents hosted a reception for the couple in Cortez.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of Montezuma-Cortez High School and attended Texas Tech for two years. The groom is a 1990 Snyder High School graduate and a 1995 Texas Tech graduate. He is employed by Brice Foods as a production supervisor in Carrollton. After a wedding trip to Santa Fe, N.M., the couple made their home in Dallas.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I have a sterling silver religious medal and chain that I have been wearing for 22 years. I have a constant problem with it turning as black as coal. Occasionally, I clean it with baking soda and a lot of scrubbing with a toothbrush. This will remove most of the blackness, but it still leaves it with a very dull finish. Do you have some idea of a solution I can use to clean and polish this thing without buying a big container of silver polish that would never be used for anything else and would last me several lifetimes? I'm not cheap, just frugal. — CHARLES T. LEACH, Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR CHARLES: Take a little toothpaste and a dab it on your medal and chain. Then scrub it with a toothbrush or a damp rag or both. Rinse it well and rub it with a soft dry cloth. It should be clean as a whistle and shiny too!

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Do you know of any store or catalog that still sells a man's smoking jacket? My husband's is 15 years old and faded badly. I've looked at local men's stores but they only carry bathrobes. The jacket he has now is made of heavy terry cloth and he loves it. My last resort is to make one for him, but to be honest I'm not good at sewing. — CLAIRE WHALEN, Ocala, Fla.

DEAR CLAIRE: The only smoking jackets we've ever seen are either made out of wool or something fancy like satin or brocade. We've never seen a terry cloth one. Since you don't like to sew, you could buy a terry cloth robe, cut it off, hem it and you'll have a jacket.

You could also look in your local paper for a seamstress who could make a smoking jacket for your husband.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: Do you have access to an herb company that deals in floral fragrances and essences? — EVELYN PONSSHOCK, Covina, Calif.

DEAR EVELYN: The Body Shop carries a line of floral and aromatherapy essences. Some of the scents are: rose, lavender, geranium, juniper, bergamot and neroli. They cost $3.95 to $9.95.

To receive their catalog, call 1-800-541-2535.

Landes home included in tour

The home of Gary and Kathy Landes, 1605 Augusta Dr., will be in the Martha Ann Woman's Club Parade of Homes set for Oct. 22, 2 to 4 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Landes and their two sons, Ryan and Nickolas, moved into their two-story home several months ago. Tickets are $10 per person and proceeds are designated for roofing the woman's club.

Other homes on the tour include those of Darryl and Tina Calley, 6044 Chapparal Dr.; Scott and Robin Morris, 1604 Preston Trail; Dale and Penny Redman, 2501 33rd; and Thomas and Vina Strayhorn, 3101 Beaumont.

All members of Martha Ann Woman's Club will have tickets to sell or they will be available at Landes Home Furnishing, The Hair Station and Nancy's Art Style.

Mediation helps during divorces

Is there a way to control the damage caused by bitter divorces and nasty custody battles?

Across America a growing number of people are using a process called "mediation" to turn potentially expensive and emotional family proceedings into a successful effort at resolving problems.

Mediation is a voluntary settlement process that provides an alternative to the costly courtroom battle — and it gives decisive control back to the principal parties.

The Academy of Family Mediators offers the following answers to questions most commonly asked by people considering mediation:

Q. What does a mediator do?

A. A mediator is an impartial person who helps people in conflict work together to make practical, informed decisions about the future.

Most mediators have previous professional experience as lawyers, social workers or psychologists. They also have special training and experience in family mediation.

Q. How expensive is it?

A. Mediation is less costly — both emotionally and financially — than most traditional adversarial processes. it also helps reduce the backlog of cases waiting to be processed by the courts.

Q. How does mediation differ from litigation?

A. Mediation does not set up a win-lose situation or try to fix blame on any party. It is a process designed to help find solutio us that satisfy everyone involv ed through communication, information sharing, brainstorming and reality testing.

Q. What are the main areas where mediation can help in family matters?

A. Mediation has successes in divorce, child visitation, financial support, division of assets and debts, adoption, custody matters, property and inheritance disputes, and cases regarding care of the elderly.

For more information about mediation and the names of family mediators near you, call toll-free 1-800-292-4AFM.

Seniors learn how to apply for college

Snyder High School senior English teachers Beth Bowen and Betty Henderson devoted class time last week to help students fill out college admission and scholarship applications, and to write essays required with the applications.

This was part of a three-step procedure to help students as they prepare for post-secondary education and training beyond high school. Teachers also assisted students with registration materials for college entrance examinations. Preceding these activities, seniors attended College Day at Western Texas College and had the opportunity to visit with more than 30 college recruiters. The English teachers required students to talk to recruiters and to pick up college applications.

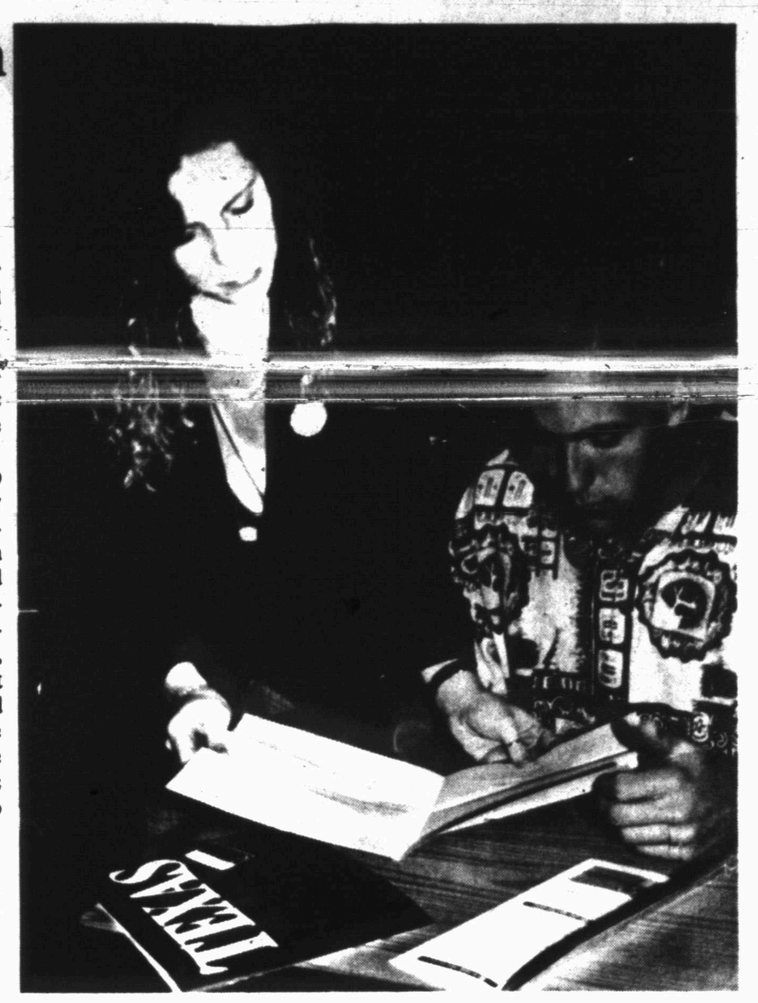

Prior to College Day, SHS counselors Debbie Phillips and Charlene Light spoke to seniors about college admission requirements, majors, financial aid and meeting important deadlines.

Throughout the year SHS English teachers, counselors and teachers write recommendation letters and assist students with applications. Also, Jamie Hall and Cindy Herridge are currently teaching math and English tutoring classes, with plans to offer these classes again during the spring semester.

For additional help, students are encouraged to make appointments with counselors before or after school and during the lunch period.

Hand salute

Before the 19th century, British soldiers saluted by tipping their hats. Hand raising as a formal greeting originated among cave dwellers to prove they carried no weapons. In feudal times, an armored knight raised his right arm to lift his helmet visor and to show his friendship by keeping his hand away from weapons. The gesture developed into the military salute.

Simpson's juice gets him off

JOSEPH PERKINS

O.J. Simpson has proven himself deserving of his moniker "the Juice." In South Central Los Angeles, home to most of the black Simpson trial jurors, it means someone who has power. And by beating a double-murder rap, Simpson proved that he truly

If Simpson were an ordinary brother from the 'hood, he'd probably be doing 25 years to life right about now. But because he had the juice to hire the best defense that money could buy, he's back at his Brentwood mansion sipping champagne.

The Simpson case has laid bare for all to see the reality of criminal justice in America: If you are rich enough and famous enough, you very well can get away with murder.

We have seen this more-than-equal justice play out in celebrated cases involving such well-heeled white defendants as John De Lorean, Clause von Bulow, William Kennedy Smith and Lyle and Eric Menendez. And now O.J. Simpson has proven that rich black guys can also benefit from platinum justice.

There are several other lessons that may be drawn from the trial and verdict of the century:

—Cameras corrupt. A murder trial is supposed to be a solemn proceeding, but the omnipresence of the television camera transformed the Simpson trial into a surreal spectacle.

In the wake of O.J., judges throughout the country are starting to look askance at cameras in the courtroom. That's why the judge in the Susan Smith baby-killing trial barred live televised coverage. That's why the judges in the Menendez brothers retrial have followed suit and judges in the Polly Klass murder case are expected to.

—Imbalanced scales. Most Americans were shocked, shocked (in the wake of the Simpson verdict) to find that justice really is not blind. That juries don't always decide cases strictly on the merits of the evidence presented at trial.

This phenomenon is known, in legal circles, as "jury nullification." And it's been going on since the first colonies formed in the country. One of the first examples, according to historians, was the 1670 trial of William Penn, who was charged with unlawful assembly for organizing Quaker meetings. The jurors were told that they faced a jail sentence themselves if they failed to convict. But they acquitted anyway.

In more recent history, black Americans have often been on the wrong side of jury nullification. During the Jim Crow era, for instance, Southern white juries rarely would convict white defendants accused of lynching blacks. Racial hegemony took precedence over justice.

Now, black juries are practicing nullification. Indeed, a front-page [illegible] cited two examples of how majority black juries in Baltimore and Washington, D.C., acquitted black defendants of serious violent crimes, though the jurors were all but certain that the men were guilty.

Many blacks consider this the "big payback" to the white criminal justice system of the injustice that blacks have suffered at the hands of bigoted whites. But jury nullification is wrong, whether it is practiced by racially motivated whites or blacks.

—Selective outrage. Three-quarters of blacks were unconvinced that Simpson killed his ex-wife Nicole and Ronald Goldman, and most were elated by the former gridiron star's acquittal by the mostly black jury.

But imagine if the complexious were different. Say Simpson stood accused of killing his first ex-wife (who happened to be black) and a black male acquaintance. And say the prosecution presented the same seemingly incriminating evidence.

It is doubtful that three-quarters of blacks would have thought that Simpson was innocent. And it's equally doubtful that blacks throughout the country would have greeted the jury's not-guilty verdict with giddy celebration.

There's another race angle that bears mention. Two young black children are without a mother because she was brutally murdered. In most circumstances, the black community would demand that police mount a manhunt to track down her killer and that the full weight of the law be brought against him.

But the black leadership in Los Angeles has yet to issue such a call on behalf of these two motherless black children. That's because they were less concerned that the man who killed the mother of Sydney and Justin Simpson pay for his crimes, than they were that O.J. Simpson be set free.

Country Life

DEANIE FRANCIS MILLS

I should have known a child would have the answer.

This whole past week, I've brooded around the house, thinking cynical thoughts and muttering to myself every time some commentator or other showed his or her face on TV. Everyone, it seems, no matter what their views on recent current events, is touchy and a bit irritable.

For example, my teen-age daughter and I visited another city for a little mall-hopping and to take in a couple of movies which haven't shown yet in Snyder, and when we got turned around in one of the corridors, I started making snorting noises, clowning around, and a black lady in front of me turned and scowled. I was horrified. I wanted to shout, "Wait a minute! I'm not a racist! I wasn't referring to you! I didn't even see you! Wait! Come back!"

And then I got angry all over again because we ARE all so much on the defensive, it seems, these days. We're frustrated and sometimes we may even wonder if it might be more peaceful overall if we just lived someplace else.

And then my new "Newsweek" magazine arrived in the mail. (The October 9 issue. You'll never guess who's on the cover.) While flipping through, determined not to read ONE MORE ARTICLE on you-know-who, I came to the "My Turn" essay, which is open to any subject and anybody who's got something to say. Entitled, "An Alien in Suburbia," it was written by, of all things, an 11-year-old boy, a Pakistani named Fuad Faridi.

Fuad arrived in this country with his parents at the age of five. Though his parents were well-educated, (his dad's an international banker), Fuad spoke no English. They settled in Atlanta and Fuad enrolled in a suburban school.

The first thing this bright, observant little boy noticed was "the dichotomy that exists in American culture between the official and political rhetoric and the behavoir of individual citizens toward immigrants." Fuad went on to explain that, if you watch the news, it would seem that Americans are fed up with immigrants and want no more. Based on that impression, he and his nervous parents expected to be ignored by their neighbors, rejected by co-workers and fellow students, and cast aside as unwelcome intruders.

But the family found just the opposite to be the case. "We were welcomed by our neighbors," Fuad writes, "with cake and flowers and offers of help...I made many friends (at school) quickly and easily and soon became an old hand at birthday parties and sleepovers." Even when, after four years, the Faridi's moved to Connecticut, "I was welcomed as the kid with the Southern drawl and was soon accepted in my new school as the class authority on all matters of the South."

This great little guy then went on to enumerate the three things, each beginning with the letter "O," that he has observed about our country.

The openness, he said, was the first thing he noticed: "Not only is the landscape vast and unlimited, but the people themselves are open and free." He spoke of strangers smiling, striking up conversations on trains and buses, and laughing easily. "There are no fences around their persons or their houses."

He spoke of American optimism. He said that, no matter how tough life gets for so many people that he met, "all of them carried with them the notion that things would improve...and would get better."

And this immigrant from Pakistan wrote of all the opportunities available in this great land. "You need not belong to a certain group, have certain credentials, or a certain educaiton to make it here," he said. "Anyone can aspire to anything.

"This country and its people share their resources and wealth with citizens from every other nation," he says. And it is this very generosity, he adds, which "often goes unappreciated."

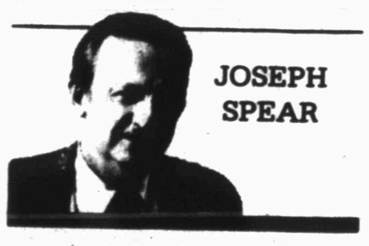

"There are many countries around the world that do not allow a foreigner to own a business or property or to travel from city to city without proper documentation," Fuad points out. America, says this "alien" child, "is the only country in the world where the pursuit of happiness is a constitutional right."

Young Fuad has noticed "increasing signs of segmentation and cynicism...fanned by the political tone of the '90s." He adds that he hopes "this division does not grow and this country never loses its innocence."

Soon after he wrote this essay, Fuad Faridi's family returned to Pakistan, where his father had a new assignment. He attends the American school there and plays basketball. Fuad, who says he never once felt like an alien, adds, "I hope I may return some day and in some small measure give back all that was generously given to me."

There is something about the wisdom of a child that humbles us all. It took a little Pakistani boy to remind me how magnificent this nation really is, and to be thankful to be here, no matter what. As far as I'm concerned, he's already given back the greatest of all gifts.

Make an ASP out of someone

JOSEPH SPEAR

The Seventh Annual Outreageous Personage of the Year contest is off to a rip-roaring start.

It hasn't even been officially open until now, and already a score of nominations have come in. We at the Spear Foundation, which co-sponsors the competition with the Association of Sagacious Pundits, are fairly generous in our interpretation of some of the rules, so all nominations which were postmarked Jan. 1 or after will be accepted.

We continue to thank our muses, moreover, that we thought up a contest which is fueled by such an inexhaustible resource as Outrageous Personages. OPs are like pokeweed, when you think about it. The stuff grows faster than you can cut it down.

As a service for new readers and as a reminder for regulars, bless their tenacious souls, here are the rules:

1. The Outrageous Personage contest seeks to cast the spotlight upon the most absurd, asinine, goofy, inane, preposterous or ridiculous individuals to strut across the public stage in a given year. The judging is done by the SF, a tiny but tough think tank that struggles to stay competitive with its much larger counterparts in Washington. The prizes, hand-some statues of small snakes, are provided by ASP. That is why the OP contest is sometimes referred to as the ASP Awards.

In the interest of full disclosure, I acknowlege that I, Joseph Spear, am the founder and executive director of both organizations, which explains why I must decline all nominations of myself. it just isn't seemly to accept your own award.

2. Nominees are accepted for their specific outrageous acts, not their general behavior. You don't like Bill Clinton's approach to Medicare, I donticare. You think Andre Agassi looks like he's been working on a chain gang, I say go climb a ylang-ylang. We need particulars.

3. No foreign nations, please. We are awash in domestic OPs. No need to send our ASPs abroad.

4. Groups are not eligible. if they were, I'd give the OP to the media who covered O.J. and declare the contest over.

5. OPs from all walks of life — famous, infamous and unfamous — are eligible. We admit we are biased toward well-known personalities because it's more fun to poke fun at people we all know something about. But please don't let that stop you.

6. This is Joe's game and Joe writes the rules. No guff, please, about what's fair or whatever. You don't like it, I'm sure there's a low-rent OP contest in Bora Bora or someplace that will let you dictate the procedure. Go play in that one.

So who has been nominated so far? The list is full of familiar names, people who have popped up on our charts many times in the past seven years and a few who have won before.

They include: Bill Clinton (3rd place winner in 1993, fifth place in 1994); Newt Gingrich (4th place in 1991, fifth place tie in 1992, third place in 1994); Parson Pat Robertson (3rd place in 1992, Obnoxious ASP co-winner in 1994); and Jesse Helms (Obnoxious ASP in 1993, OP of the Year in 1994).

Other nominees for the current contest include:

—Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., for writing to the White House and demanding to know, "as a member of the new Committee on Government Reform and Oversight," whether stamps used for First Cat Socks'-mail were being paid for with public funds.

—House Majority Leader Dick Armey, for referring to homosexual Congressman Barney Frank as a "fag" and then blaming his "stumbled word" on the cup of coffee he missed that morning.

—Johnnie Cochran, O.J. Simpson's black attorney, for his disgusting exploitation of the race card in Simpson's defense.

—Mark Fuhrman, the former Los Angeles police detective and star witness in the O.J. trial, for his disgusting racism and for lying under oath. If I were an L.A. taxpayer, I'd try to get a lawsuit going to annul his retirement benefits.

Send your nominations to me, care of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, 200 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10016.

Letters to the Editor

Support was great

Dear Editor:

We would like to say thanks to the community for the support of the Pride of the West Snyder High School Marching Band in the recent White Buffalo Festival through the Buffalo Kid/Calico Cutie contest.

A very special thanks to the businesses for the voting board space and advertising; to the parents of the kids who allowed their cuties to be included; and to the entire community for the support by voting with your money.

We really appreciate your support!

Doing a great job

Dear Editor

I would just like to comment on the new program broadcasting from KSNY. Classic Rock AM 1450 is doing a great job of reviving the oldies and the favorites. It seems like Snyder, at least the radio station, is beginning to open up to a little bit of change and catch up to the 90s by going back to the 50s, 60s and 70s.

Sherie Stone and Bolo James are fantastic deejays and are doing a great job. It's great that someone finally recognized that there are people in this town that don't like country western music. Thank you KSNY for noticing and please keep it up!

Sincerely,
Carrie Keith
Snyder

Thanks, volunteers!

Dear Editor:

To the 6 mile volunteers:

My thanks go out to the people who helped make this first race a success. There are many facets that go unnoticed to everyone, except me, and I know how much work was done.

My hat is off to the people that did music, registration, motorcycle leading, food, finish line tagging and any other function I may have forgotten.

Thanks to the city employees and police who assisted in making the race safe.

If I have forgotten anyone, you have my heart-felt gratitude.

Sincerely,
Dalton Walton

Read the new paper

Dear Editor:

Day is done and night has popped in,
This time is MINE, mine to choose.
Settled in my chair, feet on the stool,
Tonight I'm reading the Snyder Daily News.

I read about Mexico and their debt to us
Bosnia agrees to cease - fire.
There's an Irish poet who has won THE prize
And Mr. David Kerr who must be a live wire.

There's Elmer Kelton, a long-time writer
Who went to school with my friend.
The feller on Deep Creek over in the corner
I think he has done it again!

A pancake mix that says "Good Morning?"
Well, that's another one for Dr. Prof.
My Doc has one that says, "Go back to bed.
Cut the syrup and leave the butter off."

"Ask Us" talks about the next election
And the forecast talks about the sun.
Today's thought is wise and awsome.
That concludes the Front Page one.

Not many papers have two front pages.
It's a great place to print the obits,
Honor our dead, pictures on the Front Page!
It's their last hurrah, their last final bit.

I read from Dear Abby and about visitors here.
Appearances at the Ritz, old pictures on loan
Teens targeted by tobacco companies
And "Berry's World" with a political tone.

I'm a "Leo" in my excellent cycle.
The county court is grinning big,
Dr. Gott stares and smiles and
The Banks announce a holiday jig.

Don't need anything in the classifieds.
I notice a few people are sick.
The market report isn't very thrilling.
The livestock virus takes its pick.

I get real excited when I get to page four.
I've always enjoyed the comic strips.
I am addicted to the crossword puzzle
But I could do without the Sports page trip.

South Texas teacher says...

Parental involvement key to saving school dropouts

By LARRY ROWE
Valley Morning Star

HARLINGEN — On a rural road in northern Cameron County, Edna Tamayo used to ring the iron bell outside a school no bigger than a house.

In one of two classrooms she taught grades 1 through 3, sweeping up the wood floors at the end of the day.

Her big sister Sylvia taught the older grades, doubling as principal and bus driver. At sunrise, Sylvia would drive a yellow-painted station wagon into cotton farms and ranches to pick up the children of laborers.

"We had a job to do and we just did it," Edna said, remembering her first teaching job at the Hardin Ranch School more than 30 years ago. "It did more for me than all my education courses at the university, because it was common-sense teaching and it came from trial and error."

It was also the beginning of a career that changed education in Harlingen and inspired school programs across the Rio Grande Valley.

She has been named the Valley Morning Star's Hispanic Woman of the Year.

Seven years ago, after years of teaching, Mrs. Tamayo became the head of parental involvement and dropout prevention for the Harlingen school district.

The district's implementation of her ideas — favoring human contact over written manuals and pulling parents into schools — is credited for cutting the dropout rate from 15 percent in 1989 to 2.6 percent in 1993.

Besides keeping hundreds of more students in school, the achievement earned the district national recognition among educators.

"I think Edna was 99 percent responsible in providing the leadership to reduce the dropout rate," said James Smith, the former Harlingen superintendent who put Mrs. Tamayo in charge of the programs.

Smith came to the Harlingen school district in 1987. "One of the really glaring problems that was so obvious was the dropout rate. I mean, it was just terrible," he said. When he asked Mrs. Tamayo to lead the fight against it, "she just took that and ran with it."

Mrs. Tamayo, 57, doesn't like to see the program through numbers — "I don't deal in statistics" — but the impact that a good parental involvement had in Harlingen should sound a wake-up call, she said.

Many schools follow the same philosophy, but few have been as persistent and innovative as her program.

She recruited former gang members, for example, to warn children about gangs and lecture teachers about youth problems.

She set up full-time havens for parents on school campuses, and "family learning centers" in the housing projects to give children a place to study with older students after school.

She tapped into a generous resource at Texas State Technical College by recruiting mentors there for struggling teen-agers.

And almost two years ago, she took her program out of its conventional setting to aid a distressed community. Families in the Las Palmas colonia had beseeched her for help in controlling violent gangs of children. Some were too afraid to talk to her in public.

"We didn't tell them we had an answer on a silver platter," Mrs. Tamayo said. "We just went on this assumption: Positive activity will make negative activity decline."

She and her staff worked with the families to give the children activities and older role models in their neighborhood. She insisted on police patrols and helped neighbors clean up a vacant lot for sporting events.

"She's a great lady," said Amos Gonzalez, a Harlingen attendance officer who took on the Las Palmas project. "She knows what she's doing and she has a big heart for the community, especially the Hispanic community."

Mrs. Tamayo gives credit to the staff, who come up with many of the dropout program's innovative ideas. "It takes special people to implement a program," she said. "This isn't a program that can be implemented from a handbook."

Gonzalez, for example, suggested teaming up the Las Palmas children with the Rio Grande Valley WhiteWings. Before home games, the kids help prepare the stadium and hang out with the players. Delinquency, meanwhile, has all but vanished in the colonia, he said.

Mrs. Tamayo also credits her husband, banker Ed Tamayo, who taught her about management and frequently volunteered. And the program would have caved without the backing of the school board and the Harlingen Area Education Foundation, she said.

But it was Mrs. Tamayo's ambition that brought the programs to life.

Her guidelines weren't very academic: Get the parents to school. Go to their homes to make them come. Go back if they stop coming and find out why. When they come, help them improve their lives. And when their children stop coming to class, use the same persistence to find out why.

When parents get involved in school and improve their self-esteem, their children don't drop out, Mrs. Tamayo said.

"The key here is to listen to the people that you're serving," she said. "If you're working with parents, listen to them. They know what they need. If you're working with students, listen to them. ... The mistake we make is that we think we know what people need because we think we're smart."

Years before Mrs. Tamayo was in charge of the parental involvement effort, the ideas were already churning in her head. They were inspired first by her family.

Edna Garza Gonzales grew up in the 1940s on a ranch east of Rio Hondo. She was the youngest of seven, and her late parents, Manuel F. Gonzales and Lucila Garza Gonzales, taught young Edna their admiration for teachers.

Parental involvement was taken for granted. The whole family got involved, especially with 4-H activities. And Edna watched and learned from her big sister Marcela, a young teacher near Los Indios.

"Marcela would bring some of her students to the farm to stay with us on weekends," she said, "and look what I've done. I bring students that I work with here to my home. I lived it. ... A lot of what I've done — it's because I saw it."

After two years at Texas Southmost College, Mrs. Tamayo got an emergency certificate to teach at the Hardin Ranch School, part of the old Cameron County school system.

She and her sister Sylvia often visited their pupils' families at home after school. "We didn't realize we were doing parental involvement, but that's what we were doing," she said.

Later, Mrs. Tamayo drew on these early experiences. It was a time before standardized testing, curriculum manuals and "at-risk" labels.

"I hate that label because it gives you the impression there's something wrong with the child. These are potential successes. I don't see them as potential failures," Mrs. Tamayo said.

The only risk that "at-risk" children face is that adults might use the label as an excuse for failure, she said.

"The easy way out is to label kids to say they aren't going to be successful, and therefore I don't have to worry because they're going to fail anyway."

It's also too easy to assume that parents aren't getting involved because they don't care, Mrs. Tamayo said.

When she started the program, she found that many parents felt intimidated by schools. They remembered failing as children, or being punished for speaking Spanish, so they shied away from school events as parents. "What if they ask me to do something I don't know how to do?" Mrs. Tamayo remembered them telling her.

With persistent prodding, parents change and their children follow, she said.

The crux of Mrs. Tamayo's program was the parent center — a safe haven on each campus where parents can visit from time to time or volunteer for a day. They evolved into places of learning,

Family Focus

By James C. Dobson, Ph.D.

Q. Nothing bothers me as much as the fighting and bickering that occurs from morning until night between my two boys. Do all parents struggle with sibling conflict, or does it result from our failure?

A. If mothers were asked to indicate the most irritating feature of child rearing, I'm convinced sibling rivalry would receive their unanimous vote. Little children (and older ones, too) are not content just to dislike each other in private. They attack one another like miniature warriors, mobilizing their troops and probing for a weakness in the defensive line.

Children argue, hit, kick, scream, grab toys, taunt, tattle and sabotage the opposing forces. I knew one child who deeply resented being sick with a cold while his older sibling was healthy, so he secretly blew his nose on the mouthpiece of his brother's musical instrument!

The big loser from such combat, of course, is the harassed mother, who must listen to the noise of the battlefield and then patch up the wounded. If she requires peace and tranquillity (and most women do), she may suffer under the barrage of cannonfire.

Columnist Ann Landers once asked her readers to respond to the question, "If you had known then what you know now, would you have had children?" Of the 10,000 women who answered, 70 percent said "No"! A subsequent survey by Good Housekeeping magazine posed the same question, and 95 percent of the respondents answered "Yes."

It's impossible to explain the contradictory results from these two surveys, although the accompanying comments were enlightening. One woman wrote, "Would I have children again? A thousand times no! My children have completely destroyed my life, my marriage and my identity as a person. There are no joys. Prayers don't help--nothing stops a screaming kid."

It's my contention that something will stop a screaming child, or even a dozen of them. It is not necessary--or healthy--to allow children to destroy each other and make life miserable for the adults around them. Sibling rivalry is difficult to "cure," but it can certainly be treated by a parent who wants to make a difference.

Q. How can I teach my children the right attitudes toward possessions and money?

A. This is accomplished not only with words, but also by the way you handle your own resources. It is my belief that excessive materialism in parents has the power to inflict enormous damage on our sons and daughters. If they perceive that we care more about things than people . . . if they perceive that we have sought to buy their love as a guilt reducer . . . the result is often cynicism and disbelief.

And more important, when they observe Dad working 15 hours a day to capture ever more of this world's goods, they know where his treasure is. Seeing is believing.

Q. At times I feel I am overreacting to insignificant issues, and at other times I fail to respond to an act of deliberate defiance. How can I know when to ignore a misbehavior and when to confront my child?

A. The ability to "read" your child's thoughts and feelings is a skill that can be learned by parents who take the time to study the behavior of their kids. Ultimately, the key to competent parenthood is in being able to get behind the eyes of your child, seeing what he sees and feeling what he feels.

When he is lonely, he needs your company. When he is defiant, he needs your help in controlling his impulses. When he is afraid, he needs the security of your embrace. When he is curious, he needs your patient instruction. When he is happy, he needs to share his joy with those he loves.

Thus, the parent who learns to comprehend his child's feelings is in a position to respond appropriately and meet the needs that are apparent.

Consumer advocate: geographic split cheaper

AUSTIN (AP) — Telephone customers in Dallas and Harris counties would save time and money if state regulators geographically divided the counties to accommodate new area codes, a consumer expert says.

The alternative, sought by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., would overlay a new area code number in each region.

A Public Utility Commission hearing on the issue is expected to end next week, with the three-member panel making a decision in December.

Questioned Thursday by a Bell attorney, consumer expert Mark Cooper testified that geographically splitting the two regions for new area codes would allow more customers to continue local dialing with seven digits rather than the 10 digits that would be needed under the Bell plan.

United States Marine Band will perform in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — The United States Marine Corps Band will perform Monday, Oct. 23, at 7:30 p.m. in the Municipal Auditorium in Big Spring.

For more information, call the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce at 263-7641.

On July 11, 1798, President John Adams approved a bill that officially brought the Marine Corps and the United States Marine Band into being, making the Marine Band America's oldest professional musical organization.

The band consisted of a drum major, fife major and 32 drums and fifes. Some of these "Musics," as they were called, were sent on recruiting duty, some were killed while serving aboard warships from 1798 to 1801 in the French Naval War. Still others were retained in Philadelphia, then the nation's capitol, to form a military band of Marines under Major William Farr, the first official leader of the band.

The Marine Band's headquarters remained in Philadelphia until the capital was moved to Washington. One of the band's last concerts in Philadelphia was the Independence Day celebration of 1800.

Later that month, the Marine Band moved to Washington with the government and the president. The band camped for a few months in Georgetown on a hill overlooking the Potomac near the future site of the Lincoln Memorial.

The band played some of Washington's first public concerts at the hillside encampment. The first hill concert by the band was performed on Aug. 21, 1800. Following the summer concerts, the band grew increasingly popular with President Adams and Vice President Thomas Jefferson. New New Year's Day, 1801, President Adams called upon the band to make its White House debut.

Thomas Jefferson, an avid music lover and amateur violinist, took great interest in the Marine Band and is credited with giving the Marine Band the title "The President's Own."

In March, 1801, the band performed for Jefferson's inauguration and has performed for every president since that time.

In 1908, the band moved to its present home at Marine Barracks. 8th and I Streets, S.E., Washington, D.C. The Marine Band is also the oldest continuously active unit in the Marine Corps.

John Philip Sousa directed the band from 1880-1892. During his tenure as leader of the Marine Band, Sousa began to write the marches that were to earn him the title of "The March King." Sousa also organized the band's first concert tour in 1891. The musicians toured for five weeks performing throughout the New England and the Midwest.

The band's tour became an annual event, interrupted only by the Spanish American War and World Wars I and II. During these periods, the band played many additional performances in Washington and at the White House, boosting morale during wartime.

The Marine Band was one of the first musical ensembles to be immortalized on Thomas Edison's revolutionary invention, the phonographs.

Beginning in the 1890s, the band recorded dozens of cylinders featuring waltzes, polkas, and, of course, the marches of John Philip Sousa.

From the turn of the century, the Marine Band grew in size and reputation. Radio was still in its infancy in 1922 when the nation became more familiar with the Marine Band through its radio broadcast.

In the mid-1950s, the band's busy schedule made it necessary to discontinue such broadcasts. At that time, the band had the oldest sustaining program on network radio.

Since 1798, the Marine Band's primary mission has remained to provide music for the president and the U.S. and the commandant of the Marine Corps.

The Marine Band currently performs over 600 committments

2 state agencies join forces in immunization program

AUSTIN — State officials announced an unprecedented interagency project between the Texas Department of Health (TDH) and the Texas Department of Human Services (DHS) targeting children's immunizations. The announcement by TDH Commissioner David R. Smith, M.D., and DHS Commissioner Burton F. Raiford detailed programs designed to assure full immunization for children receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits. Parents who do not immunize their children face financial sanctions as a result of a new law.

The goal of the partnership is to assure that by December 1996, at least 90 percent of AFDC children under the age of 6 are current on their immunizations. Strategies include developing an automated system to track immunizations; providing written and videotaped educational materials for AFDC parents; improving access to immunizations through on-site services in some AFDC offices and a referral system for other sites; and providing immunization training to DHS staff.

These new measures are in response to a 1994 TDH statewide household survey, which indicated that only 46 percent of children between 3 and 24 months old receiving AFDC benefits were current on their immunizations. This is 9 percent lower than the statewide average immunization rate for all children this age.

Implemented Oct. 1, DHS estimates that this program will benefit an estimated 210,000 children under the age of 6 the first year. "The quality and depth of cooperation betwen management and front-line staff of both agencies are unparalleled," said TDH Commissioner Smith. "And as parents learn more about immunizations from their caseworkers, they are supportive of this project because they want to do the right thing for their children. With cooperation like this, I have every confidence we will reach our immunization goals."

An important aspect of the new program is that, as of Oct. 1, immunization is now an eligibility requirement for AFDC benefits. DHS caseworkers will review the immunization status of children in the program. Parents have six months to get a child needed immunizations before sanctions are assessed against AFDC benefits. For this reason, TDH and DHS are working together to make free or low-cost immunizations available to everyone. Noncompliant parents will be fined $25 per month for each child until progress is shown.

Since immunization rates in the past were not adequate for reducing the risk of disease for children, concerned DHS board members voted in 1994 to require immunizations for AFDC benefits. "We talked to AFDC program staff in other states who are mandating immunizations for AFDC eligibility," said Commissioner Raiford. "Those states report a significant increase in immunization rates. This is a proven strategy that gets results."

The 74th Texas Legislature passed a bill that requires parents receiving AFDC benefits to show proof that their children under the age of 6 either are fully immunized, are currently getting the series of shots, or are legally exempt from this requirement. The new mandate is a provision of House Bill 1863, sponsored by Rep. Harvey Hilderbran (R-Kerrville) and Sen. Judith Zaffirini (D-Laredo). "Immunizations are a basic need that all Texas children must have fulfilled," said Rep. Hilderbran.

Likewise, Sen. Zaffirini emphasized the importance of viewing the interagency project in perspective. "These are necessary 'catch-up' strategies to make sure the immunization rate of targeted groups of children will rise rapidly to national goal levels," she said. "I am optimistic, however, that changes now being made in the Medicaid system toward managed health care will improve access to primary and preventive care for families on AFDC. Children who regularly receive primary health care not only routinely get immunized on time, but also receive a host of other health care services necessary for their optimal physical and mental development."

Are you a smart shopper? Do you search for the best bargain? Is saving money important to you? Then you should be aware of the hidden costs of college.

College is one of the best investments you will ever make. Going to college is investing in yourself and gaining a return of confidence, knowledge and wisdom. It also paves the road to greater income capacity. But why spend more than you need to in order to gain a college education?

A smart college shopper is aware that the costs of the same college course at two different educational institutions can vary drastically. A three-semester-hour U.S. history course at Western Texas College carries the same amount of credit as the same class at the University of Texas in Austin and at Angelo State University. However, it costs $346 to take the course at UT, $209 to take the course at ASU, but only $87 to take it at WTC. What's the difference? Fees!

UT tacks on the most fees, including a general use fee, a health services building fee, an information technology fee, an international education fee, a Martin Luther King Jr. statue fee, a medical services fee, a recreational sports fee, a registration fee, a student services fee, a writing center fee, and a student union fee. ASU charges a general use fee, a computer access fee, a publications fee, a student services fee, and a student union fee. WTC only requires a building use fee, a registration fee, and a student services fee. Tuition also varies. Scurry County residents will pay $20 a semester hour at WTC, $26 a semester hour at ASU, and $30 a semester hour at UT.

Getting your basics at WTC is a good move in other ways as well. At WTC you are guaranteed small classes and individual attention. No graduate students teach courses at WTC. The campus is small, faculty and staff are friendly, and most of our courses transfer on to a four-year college or university. WTC also offers one-and-two-year vocational programs for those of you who want career training.

Invest in your future by signing up for classes at WTC during the next registration period. Take advantage of WTC. It is the best bargain in education around.

Obesity higher in Louisiana

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — It is official: A lot of Louisianans are fat.

The percentage of overweight adults in Louisiana is greater than the percentage of overweight adults in every other state, except Mississippi.

A study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has found that 30.4 percent of Louisiana adults were overweight while 30.7 percent of Mississippi adults were overweight in 1991 to 1992.

Colorado, the state with the fewest fat adults, had 18.4 percent counted as overweight.

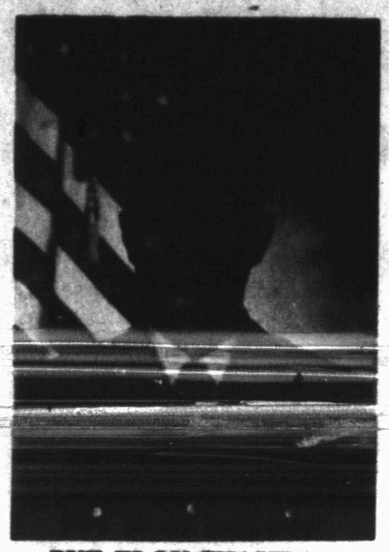

And as if the 1992 study wasn't bad enough, researchers estimate even more Louisianans are overweight today — and getting sick because of those extra pounds.

Dr. Donna Ryan, associate executive director at Pennington Biomedical Research Center, estimates that about 36 percent of Louisiana adults are overweight today.

"We've got a special problem in Louisiana. Obesity is prevalent not because our genes have changed. Our lifestyles have changed. It's what we're eating, how we're eating and our physical activity," said Ryan.

Louisiana leads the country in deaths from heart disease because of its lifestyle, Ryan said.

About 600 researchers and scientists, are meeting in Baton Rouge for an international convention discussing obesity and treatments for it.

Ex-grads complete advanced training

Two Snyder High School graduates have completed basic training and advanced individual training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. Pv2s Eloy Chavez and Corey Bert Chester, both graduates of Snyder High School, joined the local unit of the Texas Army National Guard in June of 1994.

Each received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid and Army history and traditions.

They also underwent strenuous training in combat engineering skills.

Chavez will be pursuing a career as an art teacher. He will begin his education at Western Texas College in the spring and plans to contine his education at Texas Tech. He will be attending with the assistance of an art scholarship and the G.I. Bill.

Chester is currently looking for employment and plans to enroll at WTC in the spring, with the assistance of the G.I. Bill.

annually, with over 200 of these at the White House.

These performances range from a solo pianist or harpist to the full concert band. The Marine Band has a number of performing ensembles including the concert and marching bands, chamber orchestra, string ensembles, dance band and Dixieland Band.

Members of the band may play in several or all of these ensembles, making versatility an important requirement for each member.

In addition to the performing members of the Marine Band, there are support personnel to staff the band's operation section, library, recording lab, instrument repair shop and public affairs office.

where parents can practice English or prepare for the General Equivalency Degree test.

In the process, parents and school administrators learn to understand each other better, she said.

"If you have parents come to the parent center, do you think children are going to be home?" Mrs. Tamayo asked. "They're going to be in school."

Last year, shortly after superintendent James Smith left for the Alief school district in Houston, Mrs. Tamayo submitted her resignation.

Retirement turned out to be not quite her style. She wound up contracting for Smith in Alief and returning part-time to her office in Harlingen. She also continues her role as an appointed member of the Texas Youth Commission.

Smith asked Mrs. Tamayo to duplicate her program in Houston but decided not to ask for her full-time service. "I just think too much of Harlingen to try to steal her away," he said.

Mrs. Tamayo spends more time at home now, and for the first time she's noticed the hummingbirds and orioles that visit her back yard north of Harlingen. In an abandoned orchard that covers an acre behind her home, she's cleared a path through the thick vegetation to visit with the birds.

"They've always been there. You just haven't seen them," her housekeeper told her when she marveled at the flying creatures.

"I think that's such a beautiful quote," Mrs. Tamayo said. "So I intend to see the birds."

Lotto winner claims prize

AUSTIN (AP) — A generous Friendswood man Friday claimed the $3.9 million Lotto Texas prize drawn Oct. 4.

Millard "Leroy" Skaggs plans to use some of the money to help co-workers at the chemical processing company Montell USA.

Skaggs said that 1½ years ago, he and a buddy promised to buy each other something special if either won the lotto. Skaggs said he promised to buy his friend a 1962 Corvette. He also has promised a colleague that he'll pay off her mortgage.

"My greatest joy, aside from what I can do for my kids, will be to help these two people," he said.

Government says RSVP for a flu shot

ATLANTA (AP) — Medicare recipients are more likely to get their annual flu shots when the government asks them to, a pilot study released Thursday found.

The study, reported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, is one of the latest efforts to get more Medicare recipients vaccinated against the two leading causes of death that are preventable through vaccines, influenza and pneumonia. More than 52,000 Americans — most of them elderly — die every year from those diseases.

The government has paid for Medicare recipients to get flu shots since 1993 and for pneumonia vaccines since 1981. But despite public awareness campaigns by numerous health organizations, most of the 37 million recipients don't get the free shots, the CDC said.

Just 38 percent of Medicare recipients got flu shots last year, and only about a quarter of the elderly have ever gotten the shot against the pneumococcal bacteria, which protects against the deadly pneumonia that often develops from the flu, according to the CDC.

Many people don't get vaccinated because they don't think they'll get sick or they wrongly think the vaccines are unsafe, the CDC said. Also, doctors often don't encourage patients to get the shots or they miss opportunities to give the shots when they see patients for another illness.

The CDC thinks that the personal touch may help Medicare reach its goal of getting at least 60 percent of the elderly vaccinated.

The pilot study found that sending personal invitations or even form letters to Medicare recipients increased flu vaccinations by about 10 percent in Montana and about 50 percent in Wyoming, said Dr. Ray Strikas of the CDC's National Immunization Program. The Wyoming program was more successful because fewer residents there had previously gotten the vaccine, he said.

The letters were sent in September 1994 to 41,400 Medicare recipients in the two states.

Mailing information to patients and doctors can also boost the number of those getting the pneumococcal vaccination, a second study reported by the CDC showed. A public awareness campaign conducted in 1993 by a national health-care alliance increased the number of elderly patients who got the shots from 27 percent to 44 percent.

That project, conducted by VHA Inc., based in Irving, Texas, sent information about the vaccine to 288,000 patients, doctors and health-care workers at its hospitals, nursing homes, rehabilitation centers and doctors' offices, and to public health clinics.

The CDC recommends that people get a flu shot by mid-November for the best protection during the flu season, which runs from October through May. Pneumococcal vaccinations are often given along with the flu shot, but can be given at any time, Strikas said.

Groups at risk for flu

Gingrich asks GOP leaders about running for president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concerned about Bob Dole's standing and the prospect of Colin Powell winning the GOP nomination, House Speaker Newt Gingrich recently asked several leading Republicans whether he should enter the 1996 presidential race, party sources say.

Two Republican sources familiar with the discussions over the past week said they believed the end result was that Gingrich was still unlikely to enter the race. Gingrich has said he will decide by November.

GOP Govs. Steve Merrill of New Hampshire and John Engler of Michigan were among those consulted by Gingrich, according to the GOP sources, who spoke Thursday on grounds they not be identified further. One said Massachusetts Gov. William Weld also spoke with Gingrich; the second could not confirm this.

Gingrich, they said, made the calls because a combination of recent developments left him uneasy about the status of the GOP race.

For starters, Gingrich was dismayed when Dole, in a weekend television interview 10 days ago, left open the possibility that the Senate would not go along with the House in passing a $245 billion, seven-year tax cut this year.

Gingrich also voiced concern with recent polls showing that Dole has lost his lead over President Clinton in trial runs of a potential 1996 match-up, those familiar with the conversations said.

At the same time, Gingrich told the governors and other top advisers he was worried that, given Dole's slip in the polls, Powell could make a late entry into the GOP field and sweep to the nomination, the sources said.

They said such a prospect worries Gingrich because he believes Powell is not committed to his House GOP agenda and would try to lead the Republican Party away from Gingrich's conservatism, particularly on social issues.

Powell, in interviews related to his book tour, has said he supports abortion rights, affirmative action and gun control, and has criticized the Republican Party for being insensitive to racial issues and too quick to make immigrants and welfare recipients scapegoats for social problems.

Yet Powell has said that if he decides to run for president, the most likely route would be as a Republican, and his economic views are largely in sync with GOP policy. Polls have suggested Powell immediately would become the top challenger to Dole, the Senate majority leader.

Since the TV comment that disturbed Gingrich, Dole has made several public statements committing himself to the $245 billion tax cut. Dole and Gingrich also appeared together Thursday to announce a House-Senate steering committee to work on a balanced budget plan.

Believing a smooth relationship with Gingrich is critical to his presidential bid, Dole has repeatedly instructed aides not to criticize the House or Gingrich personally. And he long ago tapped campaign manager Scott Reed to work with Gingrich adviser Joseph Gaylord in hopes of maintaining a smooth relationship.

But the relationship took a sour turn after Dole's apparent wavering on tax cuts, one source said. However, both this source and a Dole adviser, also speaking on the condition of anonymity, said they believed things had improved significantly in recent days.

Gingrich is not the first Republican to worry about the prospect of a Powell candidacy and its potential impact on the GOP.
