WICHITA FALLS PASSES QUIET AND NORMAL THANKSGIVING

Ideal Day Observed In Varied Form by This Community

MANY AT CHURCH

Shriners Furnish Flashes Of Color in Fall Ceremonial

Wichita Falls, mindful of its progress through a year of blessings and prosperity, paused Thursday to pay tribute and give thanks.

As in the past, this city closed up shop almost in entirely during the day and with business at a standstill devoted itself to pursuit of the average holiday pastimes. It was simply a typical Thanksgiving period with nothing especially unusual, nothing out-of-the-ordinary transpiring to establish it as a memoriable one.

It was a varied civic menu of which the city partook, though. A little bit of everything—sport, fun, religion, rest and recreation entering into it. The Shriners provided the color for the day with their brilliant parade and comic antics; a union Thanksgiving service at the First Christian church offered spiritual sustenance for those who wished it; the ball park and newspaper telegraph wires which brought in detailed accounts of important football games supplied all the sporting material necessary.

The weather man could not have been in a more agreeable mood. The day was bright and clear with a fresh north wind sweeping in to give the needed autumn tang. At no time, though, was it unduly chill and Wichitans took full advantage of the occasion by utilizing automobiles and inviting country highways to the limit. Despite the heavy traffic, however, no serious mishaps were reported last night.

A full account of Dr. Johnson's sermon will be found on page 10 of this issue.

Church Is Filled

A crowd that filled the auditorium of the First Christian church to capacity was on hand Thursday morning for the union Thanksgiving services held under the auspices of the Wichita Falls Ministerial Alliance. The meeting was presided over by Rev. S. A. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church and president of the alliance. The principal address was given by Walter J. Johnson, pastor of the First Methodist church, south, who was assisted in the service by ministers of other participating churches. Rev. Q. L. Powers, of the First Baptist, Rev. N. F. Grafton of the First Presbyterian, Rev. Milo Atkinson of the First Christian and Rev. Leslie Miller of the Grace Methodist took various parts on the program.

Music for the occasion was under the direction of Alva Wilgus and was furnished in addition to Mr. Wilgus by Paul von Allman, Mrs. T. C. Brownell, Miss Dorothy Burkes, Mrs. O. E. Maer, Mayor and Mrs. R. E. Shepherd, Mrs. R. E. Strange, Miss Katherine Kilander, Mrs. Joe Crouch and Mrs. Paul Rutledge.

Shriners Play.

Red fez, flamboyant symbols of the Masonic Shrine, flashed throughout the streets all day—and most of all night Thursday. In the morning impromptu vaudeville acts were offered in profusion on the downtown corners where candidates for the Shrine diamond ring went through high-powered campaign stunts under the direction of determined groups of friends. In the afternoon the big street parade was viewed by thousands, and at night the Shriners, their vengeance wreaked on a big class of novices, danced the closing hours away at a carnival ball in the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club.

Reichstag Passes Locarno Treaties

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Reichstag passed the second reading of the Locarno treaties bill, including the paragraph pertaining to Germany's entry into the League of Nations today. The vote was 271 to 150.

The final stage of the bill is scheduled for tomorrow.

THE WEATHER

"I don't know why, but I almost always need bein' thumped on days when Mamma has one of her headaches."

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch.
Line's Busy.

Each morn at half-past-eight or-nine
She strangle-holds a party line.
And matters of both life and death
Must wait till she gets out of breath.
She does not call some woman friend
To promise she will come and spend
A day with her if things allow—
She calls her up and spends it now.

Once, I remember, Jean was sick;
We wanted Dr. Buswell quick,
I hurried to the telephone,
The one some woman thinks her own,
And there she was, and talking still.
I cried, "Our little girl is ill.
Please let me get the doctor, do!"
She said, "You can—when I get through."

Just yesterday from ten to three
A fellow tried to talke to me,
But when he got the line at last
The chance to make the deal was past.
He cried, "I see I've lost a sale.
By gosh, I'd gladly go to jail
If I could take that woman's life!"
I said, "All right—it was your wife."

MASKAT GIVES CITY ITS USUAL COLORFUL SHOW

Annual Fall Ceremonial a Gaudy Eyefull for Onlookers

Masket Temple, as is its custom, gave Wichita Falls an eyefull of color Thursday when it splashed the city with myriad crimson fezzes and carried on all the lively antics usually attending a big shrine ceremonial.

Yesterday's annual fall affair in which a class of approximately 75 novices were admitted into the mysteries of shrinedom after they had trod the burning sands of the desert was about what everybody expected; and yet it, like all the others, was a little out of the ordinary, a little more gaudy and a little more entertaining than any of its predecessors. It brought out one of the largest Masonic gatherings ever seen here; developed one of the longest and most entertaining parades ever staged in the city and produced for the edification of the proletariate a series of comedy antics about as enlightening as any the community has seen.

Candidates Show Off.

Most of the fun, of course, was had at the expense of half-a-dozen or so aspirants for the big shrine ring that is given away with each ceremonial. These gentry, attired in all manner of costume or lack of it, used the corner of Eighth and Scott as a sort of all-inclusive stage and put on their acts. These can't be described very well, but they were appreciated by all who looked on.

The afternoon parade was a pretentious affair in which Lester Boardman, marshal, ran a long and colorful procession down the main business streets. The divan, band, patrol, drum corps, DeMolay, novices, nobles, even the fire and police departments took a part.

Novices caught their's good and plenty in the secret initiatory services at Call Field, and after that all the nobles and ladies dance dthe evening away in a brilliant carnival ball at the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club.

Briand Seeking To Form Cabinet

PARIS, Nov. 26. (AP)—Aristide Briand, former premier, tonight was making his second effort of the week to constitute a cabinet to succeed the Painleve ministry which resigned Sunday.

The failure of former Premier Herriot to form a cabinet, made known to President Doumergue this afternoon, brought the crisis back to the point where it was at the beginning of the week. The president, before seeking a fourth cabinet maker, conferred again with the parliamentary leaders and then appealed to M. Briand to step into the breach again and prevent the situation from going from bad to worse.

FARMER TRIBE RUNS WILD IN TURKEY GAME

Texas U. Gets Worst Drubbing in Years From Old Foes

BALDWIN IS STAR

Wichita Falls Boy Is Only Longhorn That Aggie Line Can't Stop

KYLE FIELD, COLLEGE STATION, Nov. 26—(AP)—A fighting farmer team trampled Texas university by a score of 28 to 0, and walked away with the southwest conference championship. This is the largest count ever scored by an Aggie machine against the university.

Estimates place the number of spectators at more than 25,000, the largest crowd that has ever witnessed a conference struggle in Texas. The game was one of thrills, the biggest of the day coming when Sykes, Aggie end, snatched a Texas pass and ran 92 yards for a touchdown, Joel Hunt, playing his first year on the Aggie machine, was easily one of the stars of the game. The speedy farmer half tore through and around the Texas line for long gains, in addition to his ground gaining activities he booted every try for point.

The entire Aggie backfield played stellar roles in the win. Outstanding stars of the Longhorn team were Baldwin, Saxon and Joe King. Saxon, who was piloting the Orange and White offense from a half back position, saved Texas from being scored on at least twice more.

The first Aggie touchdown came after a steady march down the field in the first quarter, Captain Wilson plunging over from the five yard line. The second score came as a result of a break. A Texas back fumbled and Dansby, speedy farmer guard snatched it fro mthe ground and ran 15 yards for a touchdown.

The other two scores came as a result of breaks, coupled with a spectaccular pass and running attack.

Berry snatched a pass from Hunt, leaping high in the air to take the Suit Over Texts Now a Probability

DALLAS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A text book suit involving more than half a million dollars growing out of the recent award of a contract to the American Book company is a possibility, it became known here today with arrival of school teachers and book men for the Texas State Teachers' convention opening tomorrow.

S. M. N. Marrs, state school superintendent, said he would follow advice of the attorney general in the matter of sending out lists of books approved.

ENGLAND CONVICTS 12 REDS IN OLD BAILEY

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The trial of twelve communist leaders which ended in Old Bailey today with sentence of imprisonment of twelve months for the five principal prisoners against whom previous convictions had been proven and six months for the seven others, against whom no previous convictions were recorded is the greatest blow the communist party has yet experienced in this country.

Mennonites En Route To Mexico Camp

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 26—(AP)—A special train bearing about 250 Mennonites from Saskatchewan, Canada, to Torreon, Mexico, stopped in the Southern Pacific yard about an hour this morning for a special Thanksgiving service. The train consisted of 34 special cars and coaches.

The Mexican government under President Obregon's administration made substantial concessions for the area they will occupy in Torreon, giving them assurances of protecting them in their unique and unusual customs of living and worship.

IRON WORKER IS KILLED

WHY IS A BACHELOR?

Lady Astor Gives Praise

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Lady Astor paid tribute to the old maid and expressed sympathy for the bachelor in her remarks as presiding officer at the final session of the social insurance conference today.

"The bachelor is the most helpful creature that ever was," Lady Astor declared. "He is the one thing making matrimony possible. If married women look at a bachelor they get a little more reconciled to their own husbands."

Lady Astor said she couldn't say the equivalent about the old maids. They carried on the work of the world, whereas the bachelors got crotchety and narrower as they got older.

"Old maids expand; old bachelors concentrate," she added. "Old maiden ladies usually become more beautiful as they grow older, while man—the poor, lonely animal—the older he gets the lonlier he becomes."

"Clean-Up" Work In Chest Campaign To Be Started Friday

With something like $3.000 yet to be raised but with this amount easily in sight, a "clean-up" committee will start this morning to bring in sufficient funds to put Wichita Falls' 1926 community chest campaign definitely and finally "over the top."

Thanksgiving day passed, of course, with little or no work done on the chest fund. It was planned previously, however, to make Friday a day of activity for campaign executives and with these plans unaltered work will begin early in the morning on canvassing the comparatively few Wichita Falls men and institutions who have not yet had opportunity to show the world "they care." Every business man who has not been called on by some team member, it has been announced, will be sought and asked to subscribe to the $55,000 community chest fund. Every man who has been out of town the past week while the big drive was under way will be greeted on his return by a worker with a pledge card. A number of institutions that have not been approached will be visited.

It developed Thursday that the total amount already raised is almost at the $52,000 mark. A figure of $51,230 was added up Wednesday night when final reports had been made by team captains. To this Thursday were added several other substantial contributions, one of $200 from the local Elks lodge, $100 from the Masonic lodge No. 635, $93.81 from the free-will offering taken at the union Thanksgiving service, and approximately $100 in miscellaneous subscriptions sent into the chamber of commerce offices during the day.

FUNERAL FOR QUEEN MOTHER IS STARTED

First Stage of Transfer Of Body to London Begins Thursday

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The first stage of the transfer of the body of the late Queen Mother Alexandra from her country home at Sandringham to the last resting place of the body at Windsor was observed today. After a short service this morning in the Sandringham church where the body had lain since the queen mother's death, the coffin was placed on a gun carriage drawn by four horses for the journey of Queen Alexandra and other ladies ton railway station. King George, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Prince Henry and a few of the other male relatives of the late queen walked behind the gun carriage.

They were followed by carriages contianing Queen Mary, the daughter of ueen Alexandra and other laides of the royal entourage.

Upon the arrival of the body at the Wolforton station the coffin was placed on board a train which bore it and the attending royal party to London.

MA'S THRONE UNEASY SEAT OVER WEEK-END

Crisis Looms as Travis County Grand Jury Awaits Report

AUSTIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson will return to the capital tonight from College Station where she saw the University of Texas humbled by Texas A. & M. college in the annual football clash, to confront anti-administrationists and their demands for a special session of the legislature to investigate the highway and other departments.

Lee Satterwhite, speaker of the house of representatices, who has announced that he will call a special session December 15 in case the governor does not by December 10, to convene by January 4, 1926. was in San Antonio today and the political pot of Texas did not simmer.

Saturday Important.

However. Friday is considered as the eve of the end of the most hectic week in the woman executive's administration, as Saturday the Travis county grand jury must report or it will be illegal as the term of court expires at midnight.

In event the governor does not call a special session, and she has repeatedly stated that there is no necessity for such and that the movement is being made by "political enemies" and "left over" from the ku klux klan, the 58 legislators who have placed their names on the petition to Satterwhite, undoubtedly will be called on by the public to force the special session.

Some Folks Don't Even Know The Name Of Their Own Governor, But That Doesn't Apply to Texas Now

DALLAS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Lack of education for citizenship in America was scored as "monumental ignorance" by John J. Tigert, U. S. commissioner of education in an address here tonight before the Texas State Teachers' association. He declared that not 100 persons in the United States know what is in or what is not in the United States constitution and that a great majority of citizens do not know who is the United States senator from their own district.

He described instances of Americans visiting Washington who did not know what Washington's monument was, and declared there are thousands who do not know the name of the governor of their own state, "though of course this does not apply to Texas at present," he added.

He recalled a college professor, who, he said, had insisted that the statement "all men are created free and equal" is in the preamble of the United States constitution and another educated man who declared that while he didn't know everything that was in the constitution, he was certain the document contained one thing that should be eliminated and that was the Volstead law. He pleaded for some system of education that would teach the citizens of a republic their responsibility as citizens.

NORTH TEXAS ON HAND FOR SEYMOUR FETE

New Hotel Formally Opened With Banquet Thursday

IS ONE OF FINEST

$100,000 Structure Managed by Well Known Hotel Man of State

SEYMOUR, Nov. 26.—Seymour realized its day of Thanksgiving in a material way tonight with formal opening of the new Seymour hotel, hostlery of brick construction, three stories, with fifty-two rooms and modern in every way under the ownership and personal management of one of Texas' best known hotel operators, E. A. Newman.

To dedicate the new hotel a reception and banquet sponsored by the Seymour chamber of commerce witnessed the presence of 180 guests—a banquet unsurpassed in bounty of its board and a delightful program which concluded a late evening under the strains of a Wichita Falls orchestra.

Many Wichitans.

Throughout the day invited guests from this section of the state, including a large number from Wichita Falls arrived in Seymour for the opening of the new hotel. Inclued in the list of guests from Wichita Falls was state senator J. D. Parnell.

Time of the banquet, six o'clock, witnessed a crowded lobby, which in itself is among the finest of any hotel west of Wichita Falls. In the receiving line were Messrs and Mesdames C. Caldwell, R. R. Kellum, J. A. Brittain and F. Bunkley.

The program which followed the six o'clock dinner included an address by Hon J. O. Newton, prominent attorney of the law firm of Dickson, Newton and Dickson; the serial part of the progra mincluded a reading by Miss Adelel Newman; a solo by Mrs. H. J. Houser; a reading by Mrs. O. C. Harrison; and "Salamagundi," by O. P. Caldwell.

The pride with which Seymour citizens dedicated the new hotel building is amply reflected in the structure itself, and Seymour is counting itself especially fortunate in having secured Mr. Newman's entrance into the business of this city. By reason of the fact that he comes from a family of successful hotel men in this state, his father already owning and operating hostelries at Waxahachie, Bonham and Hillsboro. Mr. Newman formerly owned a hotel at Quanah.

As noted above of the new building which fronts on Washington Avenue is spacious in its design, finished in latset style of hotel lobbies and the scheme of spaciousness is carried immediately back into an after-lobby or lounging room, which in turn opens into a spacious dining room and banquet hall. The chamber of commerce under the leadership of the president, Mr. Caldwell and secretary R. R. Kellum was responsible in originally interesting the Newman family in the business possibilities of Seymour. The chamber got Mr. Newman a $12,500 bonus for the establishment of the new hotel here and figures on construction of the building show its completoin involved a total cost of close to $100,000. One point of interest is the fact that C. H. Mothes, prominent contractor of Seymour, had complete charge of construction of the building and chamber of commerce officials say he has made an excellent job of it.

"The rapid growth of Seymour demanded the new hotel," stated secretary Nellum, "and it will fill a long felt want not only for the social, but the business life of our city."

Making Self-Defense Plea He Says He Had Visions and Warning

All Evidence Completed Thursday at Archer City, Arguments of Counsel Start At 9 Today

ARCHER CITY, Nov. 26.—Stories of warnings he was given, of visions he had seen and of dangers he believed confronted him as a result of the part he played in Herbert Griffin's drama of life and death were told here Friday afternoon by Lige Griffith, Dundee farmer, when he took the witness stand to defend himself on a charge of murdering Griffin.

Griffith's trial, it appeared tonight, will be concluded by noon Friday. All testimony was completed Thursday afternoon and court adjourned at 4:30 to give Judge H. R. Wilson time to prepare his charge. This be given at 9 o'clock Friday morning and arguments of attorneys will begin immediately afterward. Court observers predict that the case would be in the hands of the jury by 12 o'clock.

Thursday's developments in the case were marked chiefly by the testimony of Griffith himself. He was the only witness of importance to be called and was on the stand undergoing direct and cross examination from 10 o'clock in the morning until about 2:30 in the afternoon. During that time he gave as his reason for having shot Griffin the fact that he feared for his own life and fired "in self defense."

Self Defense.

"I shot him," Griffith testified after relating his approach to the First State bank corner in Dundee on Oct. 17, "when I thought he reached for something in the bottom of the car in which he was sitting. I though he was going after a gun and I fired in self defense."

This declaration on Griffith's part was the subject of a terrific attack from state's attorneys when cross-examination was started. District Attorney Ben Allred who took a statement from Griffith a few hours after Griffin was shot carried the witness back to his remarks at that time and asked him if he had said anything then about seeing Griffin reach for a gun in the bottom of the car. The witness said he didn't remember whether he had or not. A little later he also said he could not remember whether or not he had told Allred he shot Griffin because the latter had "run over him long enough". He did not deny that he had not made this statement.

The same thing was true of the statement he was alleged to have made to Allred concerning Griffin having "made me and my wife out as liars around Dundee." This statement was included in the story he told Allred after the shooting, the district attorney brought out, and on the stand the witness said he did

SIAMESE KING, DISAPPOINTED, DIES THURSDAY

Royal Ruler Broken-Hearted At Brides' Failure To Bear Son

BANGKOK, Siam, Nov. 26. (AP) Rama VI, king of Siam for 15 years, died today about a month after he had divorced his queen and taken another wife in the hope of having an heir to thine throne.

His hopes were not realized ,and his younger brother, Prince Praja Dhipok, succeeds to the throne. A daughter was born yesterday to the new queen.

Rama VI, who was 45 years old, recently underwent an operation for an abdominal abscess from which he did not recover. Prior to the operation he had suffered acute gastritis.

Educated at Oxford, Rama on his marriage in 1922 to Princess Lakshmi Lavan, abjured polygamy and abolished the harem which his father had maintained.

In 1910 it was decided that until King Rama had made issue the succession should be through the queen mother's son.

Last month Rama deposed his queen on the ground that she had not carried out her duties toward King and country "in a satisfactory manner."

The daughter born yesterday to the king and the new queen, Choa Chom Suvadana, was the first child to be born to a king of Siam for 32 years, the last being Prince Praja Dhipok, who now succeeds to the throne.

Another Queen.

When King Rama last month raised Lady Suvadana to the rank of royal consort in place of the childless Queen Lakshim the following proclamation was issued:

"The king has observed that the new queen has served him with faithfulness and love, and it is fitting therefore that she should be raised to high estate in order to support the rank of the child she will bear his majesty in the near future."

Spanish Duke To Face Deportation

FORT WORTH, Nov. 26.—"I would rather go to the penitentiary than be deported and this doesn't mean I wish to go to the pen," the "Marquis Emelio de Pombo said Wednesday when notified that his five year sentence for forgery had just been affirmed by the court of criminal appeals at Austin.

On the representation that he was a member of a noble family of Spain, de Pombo was feted and entertained by a society circle, and at his trial three young women appeared as character witnesses for him. He was convicted of forgery by altering a $10 check which was raised to $910 while he was a stenographer at the Bewley Mills.

At the county jail de Pombo has composed love lyrics and has written a book which, he says, has been submitted to an eastern publisher.

Proceedings to deport him on the ground of his having slipped into this country through Mexico have been instituted against de Pombo by Immigration Inspector Smith.

House Painter to Reap Big Fortune

SAN FANCISCO, Nov. 26. (AP) After waiting eleven years Blake F. Hopkins, San Francisco house painter and inventor of a paint spraying machine, was made potentially wealthy in a decision handed down by Judge Frank H. Kerrigan in the United States district court.

Eleven years ago Hopkins invented a paint spraying machine and soon after without permission, it is alleged, several manufacturing companies throughout the United States converted it to their own use. It is alleged that they made and sold thousands of the machines at huge profits and Hopkins, despite his patent, was unable to collect a cent.

Judge Kerrigan's decision yesterday not only validated the patent and ordered an injunction against the companies named, but ordered that "matters be referred to United States Commissioner Krull for ascertainment of damages."

The decision will enable Hopkins to collect damages from every manufacturer who has infringed on his patent.

BULGARIANS ARE KILLED

Frontier Trouble Costs Two More Lives.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A Sofia dispatch to La Liberte reports a frontier incident on the Bulgarian-Jugo Slavia border in which two men, believed to be Jugo-Slavs, and one Bulgarian soldier were killed.

The dispatch says a party of four armed men attempted to penetrate Bulgar territory between the villages of Galaborithe and Gourgouliath, coming from Jugo-Slav territory. Shots were exchanged with a Bulgarian frontier post, two Bulgarian soldier being wounded in addition to the one killed. The two unwounded assailants retreated to Jugo-Slav soil.

BOMB GANG CAPTURED.

Chicago Cops Catch Party After Store Is Wrecked.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Two men and a girl were captured and another man was believed to have been killed today when scores of policemen ambushed a gang just as a bomb exploded and wrecked a hardware store.

Miss Lee McClellan, Columbus, Ohio; Fred Walmquist and Joseph Avengi were arrested. The men were shot about the head in the chase that followed the explosion. The supposed dead man believed to have been thrown from the bombers' automobile before it was overtaken by pursuing detectives.

Here and There

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson today sought relief from the charged atmosphere of the Texas capital in the gala abandon of College Station where Texas University and Texas A. & M. college football teams play for the southwestern conference title.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Thanksgiving Day was largely a quiet, home keeping day for President Coolidge and members of his cabinet, with all government activities in suspension for the holiday.

Attendance at morning services at the First Congregational church and the traditional turkey dinner at the white house were the only fixtures on the day's, program for the president and Mrs. Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Washington's swelling crime wave recognized no Thanksgiving holiday.

Early this morning two men walked into the taxi office of the fashionable Mayflower hotel and took from the taxi manager and his assistant all the money they had, upwards of $1,000.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Having regained much of his usual vigor since his recent series of heart attacks Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president, sat down to an old fashioned New England Thanksgiving dinner today.

Turkey was absent from the table, although Vermont produces many turkeys. Chicken holds favor in this region now.

BERLIN, Nov. 26—(AP)—Thanksgiving was celebrated here by services in the American church at which Ambassador Schurman read President Coolidge's Thanksgiving proclamation.

AUSTIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Literally and figuratively the Texas capital is quiet this Thanksgiving day.

With all departments closed at the state house, the governor attending the Texas University vs Texas A. & M. college game at College Station, and with an exodus of more than 10,000 university students and Austin people to see the game, there is little activity here today.

Nearly all business houses were closed.

MURKY HAZE DENOTES COAL STRIKE TO N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov 25.—(AP)—A murky haze similar to that which haunts train sheets, daily hangs over New York City now that soft coal is being burned on a large scale and the smoke ban is lifted.

A 75,000 ton shipment of Welsh anthracite arrived in the harbor yesterday.

New York Girl Defends Cabarets

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Ellin Mackay, 21-year-old daughter of Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph company, and cousin of Alice Duer Miller, the novelist, broke into print today defending visits to cabarets by the young smart set.

In the New Yorker, a magazine, she writes that paradoxically the younger generation of the smart set prefers the privacy of public cabarets to rubbing elbows with the hoi polloi at exclusive dances given by their anxious and solicitious parents.

Miss Mackay's first article to be paid for at space rates declares that "our elders attribute to us sins too gaudy to be true. The trouble is that our elders are a trifle gullible: they have swallowed too much of Mr. Scott Fitzgerald and Miss Gertrude Atherton."

Better Than Whiskey For Colds and Flu

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonsful. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—Adv.

STORY FACES NEW CHARGE IN DENTON COURT

Burglary Complaint Is Lodged Against Man

DENTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—An additional charge of burglary was filed here last night against Yancey Story in connection with the alleged burglarizing of J. H. Kerbow, resident of Krum, in December, 1925. The state demands an examining trial. Justice of the Peace J. G. Boyd has set the hearing for Saturday.

Late Wednesday Judge Hal Leitimer of Fort Worth, sitting as special judge here, had ordered approval of bonds aggregating $48,000 in 26 cases pending against Story subject to approval in Collin county of bonds totalling $6,000 in four cases against him transferredto Collin county from Denton on a change of venue early this year.

loss and dashed across the Texas goal line.

In turning in their overwhelming 28 to 0 defeat the Longhorns were outplayed as they have never been outplayed since Notre Dame brought that great team to Texas back in 1915. The victory of the fighting Farmers of today stunned the great gathering of fans, but at the close there was one of the greatest demonstrations of loyalty on the part of Longhorn rooter section in the history of relations between the two schools. As the cadets in ecstactic glee surged on the field to hail the conquerors and pay tribute to that fighting aggregation which raised the Aggie standard to the must-head for the first time in six years. Loyal Texas students remained standing, cheering and recheering their weeping depressed team. It was a splendid sample of sportsmanship which the 25,000 fans highly appreciated.

Overwhelming Score.

The overwhelming score exceeded the fondest hopes of the most optimistic Aggie supporters. Four touchdowns did the Aggies score, and four goals did Joel Hunt boot through the crossbars. It was the first time since 1908 that as many as 28 points were scored by either team in a Texas-A. & M. conflict. And while the score does much to tell of the merits of the two clubs as they played today, it might have been more if it had not been for fact that several senior Aggie players, eating their hearts away on the side lines, got the best of the sympathy of Dana Bible and were rushed in the game in the final period in order that they might close their respective careers on the field of battle against the Aggies traditional rivals and in future years point with pardonable pride to the fact that they participated in the game which saw the defeat of the Texas team. Kishi, the Jap star, did not start. He was unable to do so due to injuries but they did let him hobble in during the last ten minutes of play, while his entire face beamed with gratitude.

It was the Aggies game from the moment Mack Saxon fumbled the Aggies kickoff on the Texas 30 yard line which was recovered by the ever alert Joel Hunt, until the final shot in the last quarter which saw Texas trying desperately to score by use of the aerial attack.

Mack Saxon did absolutely nothing of special merit in carrying the ball but was nevertheless Texas' outstanding star of the game considering his work as a whole.

The Aggies did not stop Leo Baldwin. The Wichita Falls raugy youth was the surprise of the game. He tore off the longest run of the battle when from a punt formation he swept around Bonties wing for a gain of 37 yards. He made other appreciable gains but as the game waned the Aggies rushed him more consistantly and also stopped him. From an offensive stand-point, however, he was Texas' only star. While Pfannkuche made vicious tackles at times, his passes were very poor and for the entire game he was roundly out-played by Watt, who did not make a bad pass and who played remarkably well on both offensive and defensive.

The line-up and summary:

Texas	Position	A. & M.
Newell	Left End	Sykes
Higgins	Left Tackle	Rieterich
Sewell	Left Guard	Octerbeck
Pfannkuche	Guard	Watts
Homan	Right Guard	Dansby
T. Thompson	Right Tackle	Irvin
Shearer	Right End	Beutel
Wright (c)	Quarter	Berry
Saxon	Right Half	Hunt
R. King	Fullback	McGuire

Officials: Raup, referee, Cincinnati university; Tipton, umpire, Missouri university; Braun, head linesman, Sewanee.

Substitutes: Aggies—Speed for Octerbeck; Rektorick for Dansby; Spratt for Irvin; Woodman for McGuire; Brazellton for Watts; Kishi for Wilson; Eitt for Brazellton; Curry for Rektorick. Longhorns: Penney for Sewell; Baldwin for Stallter; Olle for Shearer; Moore for Thompson; Thompson for Moore; Moore for Homan; Estes for Wright; Shearer for Newell; Homan for Thompson; Gooch for Higgins; J. King for Saxon; F. Thompson for R. King; Stallter for Shearer.

Scoring touchdonws: Wilson, Berry, Dansby, and Sykes.

Goal after touchdown: Hunt four. Field goals: Hunt missed 1. First downs: Aggies 9, Texas 11.

Passing stastistics: A. & M. attempted ten passes, completing three for a total of 71 yards, had five incomplete, and 2 intercepted. Texas attempted 24, had nine completed for a total of 95 yards; had 13 incomplete, and 2 intercepted, one for a touchdown.

Penalties: Aggie 4 times for forty yards, Texas three times for 15 yards.

Scoring by quarters:

Aggies	7	0	14	7

Punts: Wilson punted nine times for an average of 42 yards. Wright punted six times for 47 yards; Hunt punted once for forty yards, and Baldwin once for twenty yards.

GRIFFITH

not remember having said it. He did not deny, however, that this was also was not made. He admitted he was pretty nervous and excited after he had shot Griffin.

Tells of Warnings.

Alleged warnings he had received after Herbert Griffin shot and killed Hugh Reilly, a neighboring ranchman in the spring of of 1924 were recounted in some detail by the witness. Griffith was an important witness for the state in both trials when Griffin was brought before a bar of justice for the murder of Reilly. In the first case Griffin was convicted and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, but on an appeal his case was remanded and the second trial resulted in his acquittal. Griffith, alleged to have been the only real eye-witness to the Reilly shooting, gave damaging testimony against Griffin in both instances.

One of the warnings Griffith said he received was in the form of a cardboard sheet tacked up on the door of his barn and which, in addition to a message saying "you better leave here," also carried a crude sketch of a skull and cross-bones. This was found a month or so after Reilly had been shot. It was produced in court by former Sheriff Ed Goodwin of Archer county.

The other "warnings" of which Griffith related was in the form of "a chunk of wood" which he and his wife found in a road not far from their home after Griffin's first conviction. He said he construed it as a word of caution to himself, but he admitted he knew Griffin was in jail at the time and could have had nothing to do with placing it there.

This "warning" and his references to it were rather vague, as were his stories of the "vision" he had had. He said he had seen two of these things after all the trouble between himself and Griffin came up but he was asked only to relate one of them. His recital was one involving a dream of a hazy shape that appeared before him while he was asleep in bed one night. There was a reference to "God's blinding fire" and the figure "tripped in a ditch."

Varous references were made by Griffith to the fear he felt for Griffin. He said that on one occasion after Griffin's acquittal he passed him in the roadway near his home and that Griffin "looked very hard" at him. He also told of how one night when and his family saw Griffin coming toward their house they all went in doors and turned out the lights; of how he once saw Griffin go into a clufp of bushes not far from his (Griffith's) home and remain there for about an hour while he (Griffith) stayed indoors until he saw Griffin come out and leave.

The witness told of one instance that transpired shortly after Griffin's 25-year sentence was remanded and he was released from jail on bond pending his second trial. Griffith declared that one afternoon Griffin and two other men whom he did not know at the time drove past his house in a Cadillac car and all three "looked hard at it." He said he later learned the two strangers with Griffin were C. C. McDonald and B. Y. Cummings, Wichita Falls attorneys who successfully defended Griffin in his second case. Judge Cummins is a special prosecutor in the present hearing.

Other Witnesses.

When Griffith left the stand the defense called J. N. Burkett, Wallace Drumwright and Alec Allbright, all of Dundee, who testified that Herbert Griffin was "a dangerous man." T. B. Wilson of Archer City and two residents of Cook county, Griffith's former home, were also called by the defense to testify to the good character and reputation of the defendant. With these the defense rested and the state Called Charlie McDaniel of Dundee to offer rebuttal testimony. He stated that prior to the trouble with Hugh Reilly came to a tragic close: Griffin bore a good reputation around Dundee and was honored and respected as a law-abiding citizen. This closed the testimony and court was adjourned until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

It was announced that District Attorney Ben Allred would open the arguments for the state and would be followed by W. E. Forgay of Archer City, defense counsel. E. W. Napier, chief of defense counsel for Griffith will close for the defense and the state's case will be concluded by Judge B. Y. Cummings of Wichita Falls, special prosecutor in the case.

BALL STAR NOT HURT

FORT WORTH, Nov. 26.—Though their car overturned yesterday near San Angelo, Clyde Milan, ex-Washington outfielder and now manager of the Memphis Southern league club, with Robert Benningfield and Dr. C. C. Scaff, all of Clarksville, turned it right side up again and drove into Fort Worth last night.

Other than being shaken up, none were hurt badly.

WIFE OF M. E. EVANGELIST IS KILLED IN CAR

Mrs. Alonzo Monk Jr. a Victim of Accident Near Cleburne

FORT WORTH, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Alonzo Monk, Jr., wife of the general evangelist of the Methodist church, central conference, was killed at 10:30 this morning in an automobile accident between here and Cleburne. Her daughter, Mary, was injured so seriously that she is expected to die. The body of Mrs. Monk was taken to Cleburne an dthe child is in a Cleburne hospital.

James Monk, 14, driver of the car was only slightly injured. He declared the car suddenly left the road and was overturned. He was unable to account for the accident, though he said the car was going at a fairly rapid rate. They were en route to Decatur to spend Thanksiving with Mrs. Monk's mother.

Miss Monk sustained probable internal injuries, a broken leg and an injury to her back, the extent of which is yet undetermined.

The accident happened two and one half miles north of Cleburne.

Reception To Be Given Today For Majestic Kiddies

A special informal reception for children will be held after the matinee this afternoon at the Majestic Theatre by Miss Mildred Livingstone, versatile star of "Cinderbella."

All children in the audience will be welcomed upon the stage by Miss Livingstone and her company in an informal reception. "Cinderbella," is a modern day version of the children's favorite "Cinderella." It has delighted all who have seen the act—young and old alike.

"I want to extend a special invitation to all children to attend this matinee," said O. H. Rahl, manager of the Majestic yesterday. Seldom do we have an act with the appeal to childhood that this act contains and I feel sure that every youngster in the city will want to see the act and meet the winsome Miss Livingstone in person on the stage."

The matinee begins at 4:00 p. m. Friday.

NYE OF NORTH DAKOTA

Gearld P. Nye of North Dakota has been appointed a United States senator by Governor A. G. Sorlie. Sorlie is a non-partisan. Senator George F. Ladd died. He was a non-partisan. Sorlie at first refused to make an appointment. Then he reconsidered.

Nye is only 33. He is the publisher of a weekly newspaper. He has been a non-partisan since the non-partisan party was organized in North Dakota. He supported La Follette for president. He gave as a reason that La Follette was the only Lincoln republican before the American people candidate for high office.

Will Nye be seated? Administration senators say that he will be shut out. Bloc senators say that Nye will be seated. If he is kept out of the senate, North Dakota will be represented by one senator when the people of the state are entitled to two senators.

Governor Sorlie is a fence builder. He will be a candidate for re-election next year. If he holds all the non-partisans, he may go over again. Nye is popular with the non-partisans. He will be a candidate for senate in the June primary of 1926.

Sorlie will support him; Nye will support Sorlie. Politics is a great game, and the non-partisans of North Dakota, despite many reverses, are playing the game just as vigorously as when A. C. Townsley was their Moses not many years ago. Conditions are improving in North Dakota. Many banks are reopening their doors. Frozen assets are becoming liquid assets. There is a demand for wheat at a fancy price.

When prosperity is in their midst, North Dakota farmers vote the straight republican ticket; when poverty is at their door, North Dakota farmers desert the republican reservation. They may be back on the reservation next year and then the Coolidge republicans may capture the state.

TEXAS AND ITS PRIZE WINNERS

"Make 1926 a Banner Producing Year in Central Texas." This must be the slogan that has awakened the interest of thousands of the men who plow, sow and reap for a livlihood. More than a thousand dollars has been offered in prizes. A greater crop yield is the aim of the Austin chamber of commerce which sponsors the plan. Of course, the blue ribbon farmers of seven counties will get the cash money, and a tremendous campaign to produce more live stock and bigger crops is under way.

Diversified farming is a winner wherever given the acid test. There doesn't appear to be a place for the one crop man and that one crop cotton. Rotation of crops is the rule of the hour in the most successful agricultural communities of the states. The Austin American offered a prize in connection with the contest and $50 goes to the author of the most catchy farm prosperity slogan.

Hundreds of slogans have been received, the contest will close December 20, and long before the date of closing, it is predicted that the largest crop of slogans ever harvested in Texas will be ready for the counters. Speaking of the Texas of today and the Texas of the future, Congressman Tom Connally made this forecast:

"Though agriculture is gradually breaking up the big ranches and slowly driving the shepherd before the plow and tractor, she remains that through stock farming will remain, one of the leading cattle states, and packing plants within her borders will continue to prepare the product of the table of America and Europe. In 1923 the aggregate value of manufactured product of the state was $949,867,000 or about three-fourths of the total value of farm products for one year. In 1923 the value of cotton manufatcures alone was $17,596,000. Textile manufacturing is turning its course in our direction. It is attracting more and more the capital and interprise of Texas people. Here is the raw cotton. Texas spindles and Texas labor will some day transform into the finished fabric."

There are seven counties included in the prize winning area sponsored by the Austin chamber of commerce and the Austin American. Williamson county in other years was the banner producing county of Texas. Indeed, the county of the Yazoo, in Mississippi, was about the nearest rival to Williamson as a top notch producer in the past. In 1926 Williamson county will again take its place as the banner cotton producing county of the Lone Star state, and in other counties in central Texas if the conditions are normal, and they should be with the fall rains in the ground, the yields of all crops should be as great, if not greater, than in the fat years of the past.

This is a splendid opportunity for the farmers and livestock growers of central Texas to place their section first in productivity and in value of the crop picked or harvested. This was the foreword or opening slogan of the contest, "Make 1926 a Banner Producing Year in Central Texas." It can be done. There is a centralized and concentrated campaign on and thousands have enlisted for the work.

It is absence, not distance that makes the heart grow fonder.

Distance has been a barrier between the races, a hurdle in the race for knowledge of the planet.

We look up at Areturns at night, and know that in our life time, and probably in the life time of the world itself shall we ever span those millions of miles, or come close enough to that great sun to know whether worlds like our world travel around it as we travel around our own sun.

So men once stood on the edge of the sea, and tried to pierce the distance between them and a shore that lay perhaps a few thousand, perhaps a few hundred miles away.

But ships soon conquered the shorter earthly distances.

Presently sails instead of oars were spread, and then first one great sea was crossed and then another, till at last Magellan's ship had voyaged around the world, although its brave captain was left behind.

Afterward come the steamship, and more distance had been abolished.

Then the cable, and distance as far as communication was concerned had disappeared, altogether.

Soon man will be able to cross the oceans on wings in thirty-six hours or less. More distance overcome; closer communication, easier travel, and better understanding between peoples.

It was not so long ago that the miners in California were obliged to wait for news from home until ships had brought t thousands of miles around Cape Horn.

Then came the stage coach, and then the pony express.

Then the railroad, then the telegraph, and last of all the long distance telephone.

Not long ago sitting in New York, I heard the voice of a singer I once knew. He was singing in San Francisco, and his voice came over the radio, without wires.

A few nights latr, from the same room. I heard a concert given by the dance orchestra in the Hotel Savoy in London.

A neighbor across the street has talked to Honolulu through a wireless apparatus he built himself.

* * * *

The "distance devouring chariots" of the Greeks devoured distance at the rate of perhaps ten miles an hour.

The telegraph and the cable and the radio dispose of it in an interval of time too brief for us to measure.

This steady destruction of distance is certain to be of great benefit to the world.

It may mean in time a universal language—perhaps a standardization of national customs.

And after that people will bgin to think alike, and they will see the folly of killing one another.

The spiritual progress of the world has been greatly helped by its physical progress.

True religion owes a vast debt to science, which is merely applied knowledge.

FRENCH MONEY ON THE JUMP

French lawmakers made a threat of a capital levy and then the expected happened. Huge sums in French money and security were transferred across the frontier into Swiss banks. Capital knows how to take care of itself. Capital has the wings to make a get-away. Swiss lawmakers invite capital from all the countries. Swiss lawmakers are not greedy. They never kill the goose that lays golden eggs.

Two million Frenchmen died on the battlefield to save the money bags of France from the greedy claws of a German kaiser. Now the owners of the money bags are willing to pay a capital tax and are moving across the borders of an alien country.

Money bags in England pay the tax. Money bags in the United States pay the tax. Money bags in Belgium pay the tax. Money bags in Italy are going to do their best to pay the tax. Now why not the money bags in France.

They were saved by the heroism of the young men of France who were not the possessors of money or securities. In France when is a hero a hero? When is a money bag a patriot?

BUTLER ON THE ROAD AGAIN.

General Smedly M. Butler of Philadelphia has changed front again. Now he is going to retire from the office of chief rum pulverizer before the end of the year, he is going to return to the marines, he said he was glad of it, and he never expects to be drafted for public office again.

On the side, he says, the best people of Philadelphia gave him no support, the politicians roughhoused him, the courts were not responsive to his demands, the newspapers did not back him up and the great bosses of the dominant party gave him the cold shoulder.

For all this he is going to retire and permit the rum-runners and rum-makers to go the limit. With all the best people against him, all the political bosses, all the newspapers and a large majority of the voters, what could the poor devil do, but get out and return to the marines?

ONE LAW FOR ALL.

President Coolidge has notified the federal district attorney in and for the southern district of New York, that there is one prohibition law for all, and that the little fellows as well as the big fellows must be brought to justice and prosecuted.

And, for the aforesaid district attorney, in an interview which he handed to the press, says it is impossible to get all the little fellows in the great city of New York, and that it would take a thousand judges and the Lord knows how many prosecutors and detectives to round up and jail all the little fellows. Why not shut the stop-off at the source of supply?

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

SOMETHING TO SNEEZE AT.

"Ker-Choo!"

Peter staggered backward, almost blown off his feet. The sound was echoed from a great rock not far off, just where the Great Woods began. The boy's heart did a quickstep. What was the matter? He glanced at Growly, ready to take to his heels if the shaggy fellow so much as growled at him, but Growly was not even looking his way. Sitting up straight upon his haunches, the Bear was furiously rubbing his nose.

"Ker-Choo!"

This time Peter was out of the breeze and, far from being scared, he chuckled until the tears rolled down his cheeks. Such a rumpus, and 'twas nothing but Bear, sneezing. Just then Growly looked up and caught him.

"It's no laughing matter, Two Legs. I wish your nose itched like mine does; then you would sympathize with, not laugh at me!" Peter saw there were tears in his companion's eyes. "Ker-choo! There I go again. Ugh! Ugh! It all comes of my being too greedy! It happened on my last lap."

"What happened?" demanded the Boy, who couldn't imagine what the Bear was grumbling about.

"A Bee flew up my nose!" mumbled Growly between sneezes. "And she is there yet and using her sharp stingers to take revenge upon me for what I did to her hive and her people!"

"What did you do?" Peter's curiosity was growing.

"I ate up her home and her honey!"

"Then I don't blame her for stinging you!" cried Peter before he thought. But the Bear only grinned, as he shook his head to dislodge Bee from her stronghold.

"I don't blame her myself!" grunted he. "But even if I was sure she'd play this trick on me I'd do the same thing over again. I couldn't help it! You'd understand better if you were a Bear, but I'll try to explain matters to you. I was walking along, minding my own business when all of a sudden I heard a buzzing.

"'Growly, Growly, here comes Growly,' droned a group of Bees by the roadside. Now if they hadn't made such a fuss I shouldn't have noticed them, but when I saw the little brown creatures flying in circles about my head of course I looked up to see what the matter could be. And I spied a hive hanging high up in a tree. And right then I smelled honey. Umm! How sweet it was. Of course I had to have some. So up that tree I started. Bees never desert their home and they all swarmed out of the front door when they heard I was coming, and flew at me trying to jab me with their stingers. But my hide is thick. And I shut my eyes and blew them out o my nose and they couldn't hurt me. Then they tried to smother me. But I shook them off, easily, and up the tree I went. At last I reached the limb where the honey hung. One stroke of my big paw, and the hive trembled. Two strikes, and it hung by a hair. Three strokes and it tumbled to the ground. Then I scrambled down and ate it up. That's all there is to it!"

"I should say it was enough!" began Peter, but he got no farther. A sneeze louder than any that had gone before interrupted him. The poor Bear, well punished for what he had done, buried his nose in his paws. Another sneeze shook his shaggy body. He growled.

Just as Peter was growing really anxious about him, fearing he was suffering and sorry for his friend even if he did deserve to, Growly looked up, his mouth wide open, his red tongue showing between his white teeth. And Growly was smiling, a happy Bear smile.

"Blew the little tormentor out that time!" growled he. "I shall take pains never to let a Bee up my nose again if I can help it! Thank goodness she's gone! Now at last and for the first time since my feast of honey I can be comfortable!"

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore was to have announced her engagement last night but stole away from her Aunt Celimena's Connecticut home. After hours of wild adventure she found herself at the farmhouse of David Lacy, on Long Island. Here Bing Carrington, who had pursued her, and unwittingly mixed up with rum-runners, has discovered her. He has renewed his suit but is interrupted by Lacy, who professes his own love for the girl. Connemara is non-committal and plays for time.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

"I dug a hole in the sand and buried it over there by that piece of timber," she cried, breathlessly, her heart throbbing furiously.

"Tell me, have you ever thought of me since——"

"And I marked the spot with three clam shells. Yes—here they are."

She was down on her knees, scooping at the sand with nervous, eager hands.

He stood over her, looking down, not at the hole she was making, but at a small curl of soft auburn hair that had escaped from the bandeau's rigid custody. Suddenly Connemara uttered a little cry, and lifted a very white young face.

"Oh, Mr. Lacy! The—the money isn't here! It's gone!"

CHAPTER XVII

By Gerald Mygatt

The cold muzzle of a revolver pressed against the aristocratic neck of Mr. Saltonstall Cabot

His one controlling thought was to avoid another wallop over the bean.

Adams. A gruff voice spoke harshly.

"Now you count slow," it menaced. "You count all the way to five hundred, one count at a time, and if you know what's healthy for you you'll tick 'em off as slow as one of them there grandfather's clocks. Slower'n that, even. You just try to hurry the count and you'll earn yourself another nice wallop over the bean. D'ya want another? I'm askin' you."

Salt's head moved painfully in profound negation.

"A'right, then. You play the game, and when you get to five hundred you're your own boss. Get me? You can take that there bandage off your lamps and beat it."

"But the others?" Adams protested dully. "I tell you I can't leave them. How do I know——?"

"A lot of books could be wrote about what you don't know," snarled the voice. "But to ease your mind, if you got any, I'll slip you the straight dope. The others, if you mean the skinny dame and the pint-size old geezer, is entirely O. K. They ain't goin' to be hurt any more than you are—that's providin' you count that five hundred. You do what we say, and don't worry about no others. Get me? A'right—let's hear you start countin'."

Salt did exactly as he was bid. He strove to recall the leisurely measure of his own great-great-grandfather's timepiece, designed for an Adams by an Adam, and having recalled it he began, in a manner of speaking, to tick. It never occurred to him that this was an undignified procedure for a Saltonstall. His one controlling thought was a deep desire to avoid what Mr. Pooch had characterized as another nice wallop over the bean. He had had enough of being walloped over the bean. It had proved a form of massage of a most unsatisfactory nature.

In his boyhood Salt had many times rattled off five hundred by fives in gay games of hide and seek. Now he solemnly intoned his five hundred by ones; and when he reached the half-thousand mark it occurred to him to add another stately hundred for good measure. There are times when it pays to be on the safe side.

At last he cleared his throat. Gingerly he reached for the bandage that darkened his vision. He lifted it almost timidly, for well he knew that Pooch's threats of wallops on the bean were not empty nothingnesses. For a moment he blinked dazedly at the sudden brightness of the sunlight. Then, still blinking, he made out that he was standing alone in what seemed to be the center of an interminable forest of scrub oak, one of those endless pancake stretches of inhospitable trees, too large to mow and too small to hew, which the real-estate prospectuses of Long Island always tactfully ignore. Salt blinked some more; then he began to think.

It was still morning, of course. It must have been about dawn when he was blindfolded and marched away from that terrible boat. Since then he had been prodded, so it seemed, for many miles. Pooch had been one of the gang that so rudely jostled him; Pooch and Doc and the one they called Swede and two or three others. Now and then he had sensed the hard surface of a highway underfoot, and twice cars had actually brushed by him. He had thought of calling out, but had recollected in time the ceremony of the wallop on the bean. Silence, he had learned, was a golden thing. He had been wheeled around with his back to each passing car. Perhaps that was why the drivers had not noticed his blindfold and suspected something queer. Well, that didn't matter.

If it was still morning, as it must be, then the sun was in the east. He faced it. To the left somewhere must lie the Sound. He must bear north.

He started forcing his way through the brush. A ragged branch whipped his face and stung him. He put his hand instinctively to his cheek and winced at the touch.

In ducking under the next branch he happened to glance at his feet. He jerked upright, stared at them. Merciful heavens! And he had totally forgotten it! The shoes he saw were not shoes at all; certainly they were not the type of footwear a gentleman would or could properly wear on a cross-country tour of a Long Island briar patch. They were soft and they were long and they were pointed, but most of all, in spite of the mud that caked them, they were of a glorious cardinal red. His eyes crawled in horror up his legs. They were snugly encased in bright red tights, silk tights, somewhat torn and also mud-stained, but glaringly, unmistakably red. The eyes of Saltonstall Cabot Adams widened in horror; his jaw sagged limp. Here he was in the middle of uncharted Long Island, without a penny—for he had no pocket—and without a friend, dressed for the day in the doublet and hose of an Elizabethan courtier, doublet and hose torn and mud-smeared, but recognizable as even the most untutored eye as the garments either of an escaped lunatic or of a fancy dress ball gone very wrong indeed.

Salt sat down weakly just where he was. Then he felt something bulky inside his shirt, fumbled for it with suddenly trembling hands, and slowly pulled out into the sunlight the long, shimmering coil of hair that had once graced the head of Connemara. He dangled it in front of him, looking at it unsteadily. He had kept that, at least, through all the fighting. His eye brightened, but his teeth closed together grimly. Find Connemara! That was it. What did anything else matter? He must find Connemara.

He leaped to his feet and started plunging through the brush, the long lock of auburn hair clutched in his right hand. He came upon the road so suddenly that he was halfway across it before he realized it was there. Even as he checked himself he saw a motorcycle coming toward him. He watched it fascinated. Then suddenly he recognized the broad-brimmed hat, the dark gray shirt, and the bright purple necktie of a trooper of the New York State Police.

HOW IT STARTED

"Ill-Starred."

"My ill-starred life!" were the words of a poet whose days are known to have been indeed a succession of miseries and misfortunes, misfortunes from without and the miseries of inner conflicts, the mastery of which he never was able to achieve.

"Ill-starred!" It is a term that smacks of olden times, of the mystery and superstition tenanted days when men were as children in their beliefs and fears. Those were the palmy days of astrology, the science of predicting the fortunes of men by a study of the planets or stars.

According to this ancient belief, it was from the planet under which one was born that we received our characteristics of temperament and disposition. When one's planet or "star" was in the ascendency fortune smiles, and so a connection was drawn between almost every situation in life and one's "star." Consequently we can easily comprehend how a man who's life was checkered with misfortune should have referred to his fate as "ill-starred," and also the frequent similar uses of the term in modern speech.

DOROTHY DIX ADVICE

A Happy Marriage Is What Every Human Heart Craves, and While Few May Be Lucky Enough to Find Theri Ideal Mate, Yet Imperfection and the Consolation Prize of Children Are Worth the Gamble

"If you want to be happy, is it better to marry or stay single?" asks a correspondent.

To marry.

In spite of the fact that marriage has in it the potentialities of heaven or hell, and that one marriage out of every twelve ends in divorce, the risks are worth taking.

There is no other happiness in the world to be compared with that of the man and woman who are really mated, who find in each other a satisfying comradeship; who know that between them exists a love that will endure while life lasts and who give to each other a perfect loyalty and tenderness and sympathy and understanding.

This is what every heart craves. It is what every man and woman seeks, and a few are lucky enough to find. It is because the capital prize in the matrimonial lottery is so great and rich that it makes it worthwhile to take a chance in the greatest gamble on earth.

But even those whose matches were not made in heaven, even those who get a pretty poor sort of makeshift, husbands and wives are, as a rule, happier than they would be single. The creator, looking upon the bachelor, saw that it was not good for man to be alone. Paradise was not for him unless there was a woman in it, and so Adam was given a wife equipped with all the faults and virtues that have characterized wives ever since.

She lost the man his garden of Eden home, and yet he was happier working and earning his bread by the sweat of his brow and blaming all of their troubles on her than he was as a rich and carefree single man living a lonely life of luxurious ease.

And that state of affairs is tyuical still of the old maid and the old bachelor. The men and women who do not marry play safe. They take no risk getting uncongenial husbands and wives. Their freedom is absolute. No nagging wife nor tyrannical husband can raise ructions about their comings and goings. They go spend their money in gratifying their own desires, instead of having it go for the support of a family.

On the other hand, however they know the loneliness of those who have no ties. They are free because nobody cares whether they live or die. They have no obligations to others, but they neither love nor are loved. They have their cake, but it has no flavor because they are forced to eat it alone.

No selfish, self-centered person ever is happy. No matter how much we worship ourselves, it is not enough. We must have human ties, we must have love the interest of others, and we must love and be interested in other people. Our soul's satisfaction demands it, and that is why men and women are happier married than single, even if they have failed in getting their heart's desire in their wives and husbands.

And there are the consolation prizes in the children. The woman who has her baby's head upon her breast, the man who gets the thrill of clinging little arms about his neck, have tasted a joy that the old maid and the bachelor never know. Many a marriage that is a failure, so far as bringing the individual husband and wife happiness, is a grand and glorious success in the children it gives them, and they get a joy out of their splendid boys and girls that nothing else in the world could have brought them.

Marriage is an education in the humanities. The unmarried know only the outside of life, but the married pierce it to it center. Marriage brings out all that is best and worst in people, and only husbands and wives know the heights of nobility to which human nature can reach and the depths of depravity to which it can fall.

Under the stress of matrimony the cowards and the weaklings turn quitters, but in those of stronger fiber it develops all that is best in their characters. It is the fibre that burns out the dross and leaves the fine gold. The sacrifices it demands: the unselfishness, the langor, the patience and the borbearance it enforces makes fine porcelain out of common clay and often turns ordinary people into saints and martyrs.

The men and women who have endured thirty or forty years of unhappy wedlock, who have borne with peevish, fretful, complaining wives or surly, stingy, abusive husbands may not have had a happy life, but they are heroes whose courage puts that of any bemedaled soldier to shame, and they will have stars in their crown in heaven that will make those of the old maid and the old bachelor philanthropist look like tin-pan haloes.

Kipling says "they travel the fastest who travel alone" toward the goal of success. This is true for women, but not for men. The woman who wishes to succeed should not marry because husbands and homes and babies are not compatible. Marriage handicaps woman, but it is a spur in the side of a man.

Many a man who has little ambition for himself strives for power and place in order to give it to the woman he loves. Many a man is driven on to make the effort that carries him to fortune by the necessities of his family and his desire to give his wife and children the best of everything.

Call the roster of great men and you will find that nearly all of them are married. So, taking it by and large, married people are happier and more successful than single ones.

Marriage is worth trying once, anyway.

SUB ROSA BY MIMI

RUDENESS ISN'T WIT

Repartee is in fashion, nowadays. The girl who can toss a smart answer to the boys when they are chaffing her is regarded as a "darn cute kid."

In the give and take of ordinary conversation between boys and girls, those members of our sex who hold their own are looked on with considerable admiration by the men.

And so of course every aspiring maiden yearns to be the possessor of a ready tongue—longs to be right there with the flip answer and the quick retort.

So she does her best, poor thing, often with disastrous results. For more often than not, if she is not really witty, her repartee consists of a few rude personal remarks which do nothing to raise her in the boys esteem.

Haven't you heard the would-be humorist at her dealy work? Some boy tells her in a joking way that he's always tried to make a hit with her and failed.

She, wishing to answer him in the proper spirit, remarks brightly "Well, with a funny face like yours, what can you expect?"

This she considers a quick, clever, bright answer—and she wonders why it doesn't raise a big laugh from the other members of the group.

She really doesn't mean to be unkind or rude—it's just a desperate effort on her part to give the appearance of being up to the minute: and breezy.

After each clever remark of this kind she gives a self-conscious forced giggle intended to convey the idea that she is only fooling.

But usually, no amount of giggling helps her out with the man whom she's tried to impress with her wit. He gives her a long, sad look, shakes his head dolefully and decides that she's a hopeless case.

One of her favorite tricks is to accept a compliment with the words: "Oh, applesauce. You can't pull that sort of line on me."

Here again her object is to make the boy realize that she knows what's what—that her days in the backwoods are over.

But she leaves a disagreeable taste in the mouth—and the people whom she most wants to attract, steer clear of her with the remark: "That girl's got too sharp a tongue. You can't say anything to her without getting a nasty crack in return."

If you're not a witty person, naturally—if the easy and snappy retort doesn't come readily to your mind, don't struggle to make yourself a humorist.

It simply can't be done. And you're rather apt to fall into the error of thinking yourself funny, when you're merely catty.

The next time you are about to make a peppy answer ask yourself: "Is this going to be clever or just rude?"

If your intended quip has no outstanding quality besides rudeness, save your breath—and keep your friends.

(Mimi will be glad to answer any inquiries directed to this paper provided a stamped adressed envelope is enclosed. Also she will be glad to send Food for Conversation and How to Overcome Self-Consciousness.)

No more RHEUMATISM

IT'S GONE! That awful agony! Rheumatism can't stand the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build.

But rheumatism will bring pain and misery to your joints and muscles just as long as you are without plenty of rich, red blood in your system.

It's the red-blood-cells that S. S. S. helps Nature build that drive out of your system the impurities that cause rheumatism. And until you do build up your blood to where it is pure and rich and red, you simply can't get rid of rheumatism.

And S. S. S. is the thing. Red blood conquers rheumatism. Every body knows that.

S. S. S. means millions of red blood-cells—means health all over. No more rheumatism. Nights of rest — days of joy, filled with the happiness of accomplishment—made possible by a body brimful of red blooded life, energy and vitality.

That's what the end of rheumatism means—that's what S. S. S. brings to you. Get S. S. S. from your druggist. The larger bottle is more economical.

Through a Woman's Eyes

"WHAT SHALL WE HAVE FOR DINNER?"

"What shall we have for dinner, dear?"

Do you ask your husband that when he leaves the breakfast table? And when he says impatiently, "Oh, anything!" do you answer exasperatedly:

"But if I give you ANYTHING you wouldn't like it."

That's perfectly logical of course: he wouldn't like it. But it is not he who is unreasonable in answering testily, but you who ask a man who has just dispatched one meal what he wants for the next! If you think back far enough, perhaps you can remember yourself being abused that way. There may have been a time when, as you were leaving the house in the morning, your mother would inquire amiably:

"What shall I get for dinner?" Perhaps, rather than argue, you would say:

"Oh—lamb." And then to be told: "But lamb is out of season, and I noted yesterday they have a very nice cut of veal!"

You see, she simply wanted to discuss dinner—to get suggestions, as it were. Your mistake in taking her literally when she said "What shall I get for dinner?"

That is what men hate—to discuss what they are going to have for the next meal. Why? For the same reason that you like to go to a hotel in the summer time, rather than take a bungalow. You say, "Let someone else worry about the perennial question of what to get for lunch and what to get for dinner."

At home, of course, that is your job—and your husband feels that when you ask him you are lying down on the job! You know what he likes, he thinks, or should by this time, so you know what he wants. Of course, if it should happen that you plan a special treat of roast duck with apple dressing, and, with the air of "See what's under my hat!" have it placed on the table, only to hear him say, "Duck. Oh, I had that for lunch—with apple dressing," it isn't so good.

Should he phone from the office every day to tell you what he had for lunch? He thinks probably that it would be more efficient for you to tell him, before he goes in the morning, what you are going to have for dinner. But at that time you are just beginning to wonder about it. And, anyway, if you told him right on top of his bacon and eggs and tost and coffee he would probably say "Food again! I don't want to know!"

Some women have tried keeping a schedule, a la boarding house, with the same menu on the same day every week, so their husbands would know, without their saying anything, just what they would have for dinner any night. But there is no kick in such cut-and-dried proceedings—none at all. And, then, what about the days there are leftovers! It would be just the day that he would have hash for lunch that he would say scathingly, "When a man makes a schedule he sticks to it!"

It's a great life. The first hundred years are the hardest!

Two Armed Men Hunted by Posse

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Nov. 26. (AP)—Officers today were scouring southern Missouri and northern Arkansas for two armed men who late Tuesday night held up the bank of Wilford, Ark., and escaped with $4,700 of the bank's funds.

The men overpowered O. V. Morris, cashier, who was working on the bank's books, bound and gagged him and then placed him in the vault. He was released by a brother after being almost suffocated.

The LOST WORLD

"I leaned forward toward this strange beautiful creature when a high whickering cry—the call of some great animal with a weird human note—rang out in the darkness. We had just time to scramble into the cave when there came a great crashing of branches directly above where we had been standing."—Ed Malone's Diary.

Did a Prehistoric Dinosaur Tempt Eve With the Apple?

Sensational Film Leads To National Controversy

"The Lost World," a picturization of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel of prehistoric monsters and modern lovers, which is to be shown at the Olympic theatre beginning Saturday, has aroused national comment as to the possibilities of man's origin.

The photodrama, in which Bessie Love, Lewis Stone, Wallace Beery and Lloyd Hughes are co-featured, presupposes that there is a lost inner-continent near the upper reaches of the Amazon river which Time has forgotten.

Doyle penned the story, monsters of the Jurassic Age, ten million years ago, continue to live, to battle each other and to terrorize the area.

Man is unknown there until the party of adventurers, bent upon proving the existence of prehistoric monsters still on earth, arrive on the magic plateau. After witnessing dead-to duels between the strange monsters of the past ages—the allosaurus, brontosaurus, tryannosaurus triceratops, pterodactyl, stegosaurus and others—they finally capture a brontosaurus, bigger than a dozen elephants, and raft him back to London. Their objective is to prove to doubting scientists of the English metropolis that they have finally discovered a lost world.

The monster, however, escapes from his steel cage and after wrecking a portion of London's downtown district, finally crashes through London Bridge and is last seen swimming down the Thames toward the Atlantic.

Seven years of tedious work were required to film the strange picture. Watterson R. Rothacker, owner of film laboratories in Chicago and Los Angeles, launched the endeavor, and finally joined hands with First National in its completion.

The reincarnation of the monsters is accurate, according to scientific findings dug from prehistoric formations of the Rocky Mountains. These excavations revealed not alone the size of the monsters but their gigantic figures, as well. It was upon these discoveries that the great beasts of the picture were brought back to life, after a sleep of a hundred thousand centuries.

The accuracy of their reincarnation, based upon scientific facts, has given rise to disputes between ministers, scientists and laymen of scientific leanings throughout the country. Some claim the monsters' existence refutes the Biblical theory that a serpent, as it is now known, handed Eve the apple. Others claim the tragedy of Eden was started by a cousin of the dinosaur such as is brought to life in "The Lost World."

One of the strongest proponents of the latter theory is the Rev. E. Burton, of Los Angeles. After a private view of the picture, he issued the following statement to the newspapers:

"It may have been a cousin of a dinosaur, and not a snake, which handed the apple to Eve.

"It may have been that in the last few thousand years a misinterpretation has been given to the drama of Eden, because of the assumption that the word serpent to the modern mind means snake.

"Further support of the theory that in the Eden drama a dinocaur [dinosaur] ancestant is meant instead of a snake is found toward the end of the curse in the verse of Genesis that reads:

"And the Lord God said unto the serpent, 'because thou hast done this, cursed are thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life.'

"The playwright of the Eden drama could not say more plainly that the apple incident the serpent [dinosaur]—which most certainly might be likened unto him a reptilian descendant of the ancient dinosaur, which was the largest reptile that ever stalked the earth."

"The serpent" referred to in the Eden drama may have been the dinosaur in the final stage of evolution before the dinosaur descendant—in that verse where he cast off the last remaining indication of legs.

I recommend this verse to the consideration of students and preachers who are seeking to reconcile the Bible with evolution. May it not be that the writer who wrote the Eden drama hid in this verse a hidden key revealing one of the greatest epochs in evolution?"

On the contrary, the Rev. Carlyle Haynes, author, minister and lecturer of New York City, maintains that the picture proves it was neither dinosaur's cousin nor a snake which handed Eve the apple. After viewing "The Lost World," at First National New York studio, he issued this statement:

"It was neither a dinosaur's cousin nor a snake that handed Eve the apple.

"It was a most beautiful reptile, because of its connection with the fall of our first parents, has developed into the reptile we now know as the snake.

"There is nothing now on earth very similar to the serpent which was used by the enemy of all truth to tempt Adam and Eve. It was then one of the wisest and most beautiful creatures on the earth. It had wings, and presented a most dazzling appearance as it flew through the air. Even the coloring and brilliancy of its burnished gold. It would fly from tree to tree, regaling itself with the delicious fruits of the garden.

"This is the significance of the expression in the Bible, 'And the Lord God said unto the serpent, 'Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life."

"When it is considered that the serpent originally had wings, the full significance of the expression, 'upon thy belly shalt thou go,' is easily seen. The curse that fell upon the serpent transformed it from a flying animal to a crawling one.

"That the original serpents had wings can be learned both from the Bible and from secular history. In Isaiah, 14-29, and Isaiah 36, 'flying serpents' are spoken of.

"Both Herodotus and Plutarch, the ancient historians, mention flying serpents as among the animal life of certain Eastern countries.

"In the symbolical pictures and sculptures of Egypt, also, these flying serpents are very common.

"It was not the serpent itself which spoke to Mother Eve. It merely happened to be this reptile which Satan chose as his mouthpiece and through which he spoke the words which constituted the original temptation of man. It was merely the original manifestation of spirit mediumship. Fallen angels used the body and faculties of an animal. Fallen angels are doing exactly the same thing now with men, speaking through human lips as at first they used the mouth of the serpent."

Dr. Charles Francis otter, of New York, internationally known for his preachments on the evolution of man, issued this statement, after viewing "The Lost World:"

"Every preacher who still believes the world is only 6,000 years old and that God created man out of dust should see 'The Lost World.'

"To see this picture may give them an increased reverence—a greater appreciation—of their Deity.

"I hold that to have evolved this present earth of plentitude and comparative peace out of the place of horror and terror it used to be is a far greater testimonial to a Great Intelligence than to have created the earth in one act.

"I hold that to have evolved man, in all the power of his personality, from tiny flurry creatures not unlike guinea pigs is a far greater testimonial to a Great Power than the instantaneous creation described in Genesis.

"The afternoon I saw this photodrama will ever be one of the most memorable of my life.

"I saw a mighty prehistoric dinosaur, as big, perhaps as seven or eight elephants, with teeth that looked a foot long and other parts in proportion, moving about in amazingly life-like fashion.

"I could scarcely believe my eyes when I saw a giant flying reptile—the pterodactyl—swoop low over the film actors, looking for breakfast. But there it was actually before my eyes, a winged horror transplanted from the Jurassic Age of 10,000,000 years ago onto a 1925 picture screen.

"My amazement increased when I beheld the fights between the allosaurus and the trachodon; another battle between the tyrannosaurus and the brontosaurus, and still another duel to death between the stegosaurus and the triceratops. Creatures of one hundred thousand centuries ago living and breathing, fighting and killing, on the movie screen! To my mind the giving of screen life to these mighty monsters is without any doubt the greatest feat in film history. I was not surprised after the showing when I heard that it required over seven years to produce this one picture.

"Progressive theologians long ago pointed out that the glory and the majesty and the power of God were in nowise dimmed by the discovery that He chose to bring the universe into being by a gradual process of development instead of by an act of creation finished at once. Indeed, it seems more wonderful, a greater revelation of the sublimity of the Divine Power that this universe should be a living, growing thing, than that it should have been hewn out, block fashion, to remain always the same."

Prehistoric Monsters Re-Live In Big Love Drama

When Sir Arthur Conan Doyle penned his great novel, "The Lost World," he never dreamed that the prehistoric monsters he described as still alive in an unexplored region of South America would be brought to life to battle each other and wreck London. But here they are as they live in the sensational First National-Watterson R. Rothacker movie drama, "The Lost World," coming to the Olympic theatre Saturday.

Pandem-Humphreys Opens New Pool

W. H. Portwood, a veteran resident of Seymour, in former days one of the prominent cattlemen of that territory, has added valuable oil production territory to his extensive landholdings in southeast Baylor and Throckmorton counties through the recent opening up of an new oil pool in the Loggins survey. Bringing in of the Pandem-Humphreys wildcat well there Wednesday seems to assure an extensive development play there in the immediate future.

Mr. Portwood is one of the best known of Seymour's pioneers, having been there for more than 25 years.

The Pandem-Humphreys well which has been shut down since being brought in with an estimated initial production of 75 barrels will be opened up again Friday. It has been drilled in only two feet.

Dedication Service Held for Church

NOW DOES ALL HER WORK

Has No Backache, No Bad Feelings Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Drove Her Illness Away

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"I was in a badly run-down condition and I would get weak spells and terrible headaches. I felt so badly last year that I could not do any housecleaning. The minute I would lift or stoop it seemed as if I was going to fall to pieces. I told a neighbor how I felt and she said that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was surely the right thing for me. I took four bottles then and in the fall of the year I took three. I had been treated by a doctor but he gave me an iron tonic and that did not help me. It seemed that the tonic did not have in it what the Vegetable Compound did. That gave me the strength and ambition I needed and I have gained in weight. This year before I started to clean house I got four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and am taking it right along. I tell all my friends about it and how much good it does me. They can notice it because I have gained in weight. I weigh 118 now and do all my work myself again."—Mrs. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG, 651 37th Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

"Love Bound In Wichita Falls"

As Written for the Record News By the Flapper Wife

READ THIS FIRST:

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. Both of them work for the Dexter Oil company.

Flossie helps keep the files under MISS MacFARLANE. Mary Rose is secretary to the sales-manager, JOHN MANNERS, with whom she is in love. But Manners is engaged to NORIS HINIG, a girl of wealth.

Mary Rose discovers that Flossie is carrying on a rather frantic flirtation with the president of the company, HILARY DEXTER, a married man with grown children. And when she begs Flossie to give him up, Flossie threatens to go to live with her enemy, ALICE JAMES.

Flossie stays out with Dexter till midnight two or three nights a week, and is too sleepy to go to work the next day. But she doesn't worry about losing her job, as long as Dexter cares for her as he does.

In the meantime Flossie carries on another love affair with SAM JESSUP, who is Mr. Dexter's secretary. The mother of the girls, MRS. MIDDLETON, doesn't approve of Sam, because of his poverty.

Mary Rose points out to Flossie that nothing but misery can come to her through her affair with Dexter. But Flossie says she can take care of herself and the affair goes merrily on.

Mary Rose does everything she can to break it up. She asks Sam and Flossie t ogo picnicking with her and TOM FITZROY, a young doctor who's in love with her. But Flossie refuses to ride with Sam in his old car "the Wheezer," and goes with Tom, telling Tom that Mary Rose didn't want to ride with him. Flossie never scorns to use a lie for her own purposes.

One rainy night John Manners brings Mary Rose home from work, and as he stands at the door of the house, suddenly proposes that they go out for supper together.

"Mother, you haven't any right to knock Sam the way you do," Mary Rose said to Mrs. Middleton as he ran up the steps and Flossie went to meet him. "What if his car is old and rickety? He's saving up to buy Flossie a little house."

"Yes and I'll bet it'll be a little one!" Mrs. Middleton answered in her gentle voice. "Two rooms'll be about the extent of Sam's pocketbook!"

From the porch they heard Flossie greeting him. "Hello, Samuel," she was saying. "I'm going to ride out in Tom's car. Mary Rose asked me to." And she walked calmly past him, and climbed into the great, glossy black roadster where Tom was waiting for his own lady love.

Mary Rose saw the look of disappointment on his face, as Flossie without so much as a by-your-leave climbed in beside him.

She turned to her mother. "Did you hear what she told him—that I asked her to ride with him? Why, the little fibber!" she exclaimed.

Mrs. Middleton smiled in her innocence. "Well, I'm glad of it," she said mildly. "I don't want her to see any more of Sam than is absolutely necessary. I don't want her to throw herself away on him! I'm not money mad, but I know that Flossie will never make a poor man's wife."

"That's where you're wrong," the girl answered. She picked up two thermos bottles, and followed her mother down to Sam's "Wheezer."

The picnic, beginning as it did, was not a success.

Tom was plainly angry because Mary Rose had not driven out to the picnic grounds with him. And Flossie, in a queer mood, refused to look or to speak to Sam, who followed her around with the sick, puzzled eyes of a wounded animal.

She was unnaturally gay, and secretly pleased that she was spoiling the day for everybody . . for Sam in particular.

"Ooh! looky at the cake! Chocolick all over it!" she bubbled, unwrapping packages. "I went on another picnic one day this week and we had chocolate cake, and the best fried chicken you ever put in your mouth!"

Mary Rose darted a swift glance at her. What picnic was she talking about, she wondered. And then, with a sinking of her heart, she remembered the day when both Flossie and Hilary Dexter had taken an afternoon off.

"You seem to have a lot of dates that I don't know anything about," she heard Sam say to Flossie as they wandered off after lunch.

And Flossie looked up at him impudently and said, "I do, you simp!"

When it began to rain, a little after four o'clock, everyone seemed relieved. They scrambled into the two cars, and Flossie again rode with Tom.

When she and her mother got back to the house with Sam in his wheezer, Flossie stood, alone on the front porch, surrounded by the empty baskets.

"Tom wouldn't wait. He said he had to make round at General Hospital," she said to Mary Rose, as the four of them trooped into the little house. "I guess he was peeved because you didn't ride with him. That's what I guess."

Mary Rose made no answer until the two girls were alone in their room, taking off their hats and "freshening up."

"I hope you explained to Tom that the reason I didn't ride with him was because you wouldn't get in Sam's 'Wheezer,'" she said, questioningly.

Flossie raised her arched eyebrows, and leaned close to the mirror as she dabbed red paste on her smiling mouth. "I did nothing of the kind," she said cheerfully. "Let him think you don't want to be with him all the time, Mary Rose! Make him lie down, and then walk all over him. That's the way to treat the men, if you want to get their goat!"

"I don't want to get Tom's goat, as you call it," Mary Rose answered. "And I'll thank you not to tell him any more lies, Flossie Middleton!"

She tried to telephone Tom at General Hospital, but he had just left, so they said.

Sam stayed for supper and Mrs. Middleton and Mary Rose left them and went upstairs to bed, soon afterward.

Toward midnight, Mary Rose woke up. In the dimness of the little room she saw that Flossie was not in her bed. She tiptoed out into the hall. There was no light downstairs.

She went down to the landing and then she saw Flossie and Sam. They were outlined darkly against the glass panel of the front door, locked together in a close embrace, so that they looked like one figure standing there. Then Sam's head was raised for a moment from the girl's lips.

"If you don't marry me, I swear I'll leave this town and never come back!" he was saying, with all the intensity of twenty-five in the throes of passion. "I'll kill myself!"

"Don't be silly, Sam," Flossie's voice was thick and drowsy. Mary Rose saw her put up her hands and draw his head down to hers.

The door slammed a moment later, and Flossie came into the room, stopping to switch on the lights as she came.

"I just gave old Sam the shock of his life," she said, gigling as she began to unbutton her clothes. "Smoked a cigaret in front of him . . . and I wish you'd heard him rave! You'd have thought I'd committed one of the seven deadly sins!"

"That's because he's crazy about you," Mary Rose answered, gravely. "His ideal girl is a girl who wouldnt smoke . . and you're his ideal girl."

"Any old day I am!" sneered Flossie. "His ideal girl is still wearing corsets, and going to church twice on Sunday!"

The rain that had ended the picnic kept on all night, and all the next day. At five-thirty when she was putting on her hat to leave for the day, John Manners asked Mary Rose if she'd like to ride home with him.

"It's such rotten weather," he explained, with an embarrassed smile.

As Mary Rose sat beside him in his little closed car, she was too happy to talk. It seemed a wonderful thing to her that she should be sitting beside him, in his own car, rolling along through the silvery, rain-strung twilight.

"Any Girl Can Marry Any Man She Wants," Said Flossie

"I wonder if he knows that these are the happiest moments of my whole life," she thought. "And the saddest, too, in a way—because I'll probably never be here with him again."

He went up the brick walk to the door of the shabby little house with her. He stood there for a moment, holding her hand, while the raindrops splashed down on him from the blossoming lilac tree. . . Mary Rose had always known that his handclasp would be like this, firm and warm and friendly.

"Good night," she tried to say, and then realized in a dream that he was asking her not to go into the house.

"If you're not doing anything tonight, let's go and have some supper, somewhere," he said.

CHAPTER XII

Mary Rose looked down at her shabby serge suit and scuffed shoes, and then up into John Manners' face. Her eyes were shadowy with longing.

"Oh, I'd love to go with you!" she said eagerly. "You know I would!"

"Well, then, come along!" He laid one of his hands in its pigskin glove on her arm. "There's nothing to stop you, is there? No other date?"

She shook her head. "No other date!"

But still she hung back. "Only I shouldn't go with you, should I? You—you're engaged to that Miss Hinig, aren't you?"

"Oh, fiddlesticks!" His tone was impatient, for he wanted very much, somehow, to be alone with Mary Rose Middleton. Some place where they could talk. "Dorry goes out with other people, and so do I. That's only natural."

"But you are engaged to her," the girl went on with a little break in her voice. "And if I were engaged to you—I mean, if I were engaged to a man, it would break my heart if he trotted around with another girl. And I can't imagine even wanting to go out with anyone else, if I were engaged to you!"

Something in her voice made him look sharply at her. A note of heartbreak. But her face was only a white blur in the thickening darkness.

They stood there together for a long moment, with the warm rain beating into their faces, and the scent of the wet lilacs all around them. Mary Rose never smelled lilacs again without thinking of that moment—

"You don't want to go with me, then?" he asked harshly, and turned to go.

She caught her breath. "I'd rather go with you than anything else in the world," she answered. "But I wouldn't! It wouldn't be fair to—to the girl you're going to marry."

The door of the house closed behind her, leaving him standing alone in the darkness. "Well, I'll be darned!" he said under his breath.

Mary Rose carried her dripping umbrella into the kitchen and stood it in the sink.

"Why, you're crying!" Mrs. Middleton exclaimed, looking up from the meatballs she was frying. "What's happened? You lost your job?"

The girl shook her head. "I just feel—terrible," she sobbed. She put her hands over her face, and stood there, in the middle of the cheerful little room, crying as if her heart would break.

Her mother came close to her, and laid her hand on her shaking shoulder. "Can't you tell Mother what it is, Mary Rose?" she asked. "I feel sure that Mother could help you."

Mary Rose looked at her, through her tears, and smiled bitterly.

"No one can help me, Mother," she said, with a long sigh. "No one."

The little ageing woman was full of a feeling of helplessness that sometimes swept over her when she looked at Flossie and Mary Rose. There was so much of their lives that she knew nothing about. She felt exactly like the hen in the fairy-tale—the hen that hatched ducks.

"Well, you just run upstairs and wash your face, dearie," she said. "And supper'll be ready when you come down. We've some nice meatballs, and I creamed some potatoes."

Mary Rose turned in the doorway. "Isn't Flossie coming home for supper?" she asked. Mrs. Middleton shook her head.

"No, dearie. Not 'til late. She's working overtime tonight. She 'phoned a little while ago to tell me so."

While Mary Rose and her mother were doing up the dishes a knock came at the back door.

When Mrs. Middleton opened it, their neighbor, Aunt Henny Blair, stepped into the room, bringing a gust of wet wind with her.

"Good night for ducks!" panted Aunt Henny. "Well, how are you folks tonight?"

She looked around the kitchen and peered into the darkened dining-room.

"Ain't Flossie home a night like this?" she asked sinking down into the rocking chair that stood by the center table.

"No. She's working late," answered Mrs. Middleton as she rinsed out her dish cloth and hung it over the pan.

Mary Rose looked at Aunt Henny curiously. She knew that never on a night like this would Aunt Henny have stepped out of her comfortable house unless she had some gossip to tell . . or had something on her mind that she wanted to ask about.

For Aunt Henny was the gossip. She lived all alone with her only son, Leonard, who was on the police force. And she had no other living relatives, although everyone in the neighborhood called her "Aunt Henny."

It was plain to Mary Rose that she was fairly bursting with news, at the present moment. Every time Mrs. Middleton's back was turned she began to make signs at the girl.

At last, when all the dishes were put away, Mrs. Middleton left the room for a minute or two to go upstairs for her mending basket. "I may as well sit here and sew while I visit," she said, disappearing.

Aunt Henny dragged her rocker close to Mary Rose. "Where did you say Flossie was?" she asked in a stage whisper.

"Mother told you she was working late, down at the office," the girl answered coldly. "And I suppose that's where she is."

(Miss Pansy Stanfill)

Aunt Henny folded her fat hands on her mountainous lap. "Well, she ain't!" she said, nodding her head.

Mary Rose whitened to the lips. "Where—where is she, then?"

Mrs. Blair rocked for several seconds before she answered. "Well, I can't say just where she is at this instant, but I know where she was a while ago, when my Lennie arrested her—"

"Arrested her?" Mary Rose caught at the edge of the sink to steady herself.

"That's what I said, Mary Rose. You must have heard me the first time. . . I said it loud enough." Aunt Henny wagged her head. "She was tearing along down town in a big blue car, thirty-five miles an hour. And my Lennie arrested her for speeding!"

Mary Rose couldn't find her voice. She just stood and stared at the woman.

"Of course, if Lennie had known it was Flossie, he would have let her go . . but he didn't until it was too late," Aunt Henny went on, "and even then, he would have let her go, but he knew he should do his duty."

"Was she alone?" Mary Rose asked, scarcely above a whisper.

The woman shook her head. "I guess you know who was with her, without my telling you, Mary Rose," she said. "I guess you know who's been bringing her home at all hours of the day and night in that big blue car! If you don't know it, it's because you're more near-sighted than everybody else on the street is! Everybody else knows that it's this Mr. Dexter of the works, that's tagging around after her!"

Mary Rose shrank away from her as she stood up, and put her shawl

(Mrs. O. H. Kellogg)

around her broad, plumb shoulders. "Well, I'm going now. I didn't want to tell your ma all this, knowing how weak her heart is an' all. But I thought that somebody in this house should know what Flossie's up to. I tell you, Mary Rose, that girl may be your sister, but she's a bad egg!"

Mary Rose opened the door for her, and stood leaning against it, as it closed.

As she stood there, sick and dizzy, she heard the front door open and shut. And then Flossie stood in the doorway.

She did not look like a girl who has just been arrested. Her eyes were bright, and she smiled jauntily.

"Have you had supper, already?" she asked gayly. "Didn't you put any away for me? . Well, that slays me! Here I work overtime, and come home to find the cupboard bare!"

Mary Rose opened her eyes, so that they shone like winter stars.

"You can save yourself the trouble of lying to me, Flossie," she answered. "I know you haven't been down at the office. I know that Lennie Blair arrested you for speeding in Mr. Dexter's car a while ago!"

Flossie giggled. "Yes, and a lot of good it did him!" she said. "I went down to the police station, and baby-eyed the man down there . . and he let me go, after a few kind words."

Without stopping to take off her hat and coat, she opened the ice-box and took from it a plate of cold meatballs. She set them down on the corner of the kitchen table, and began to eat them, as if they were sandwiches.

Mary Rose Had Always Known His Handclasp Would Be Like This—Firm and Warm and Friendly

"Believe me, I'm going to tell that Lennie what I think of him next time I see him," she began, and suddenly stopped. An expression of fear spread itself over her face.

"Jiminy! what if it should get into the paper! My being arrested—?"

Then, carelessly, she laughed. "Oh, I guess it won't. Mr. Dexter will see to that!" she comforted herself. "And, anyway, I always have wanted to see my name in print!"

When Mrs. Middleton came back into the kitchen, she found the two girls amiably discussing the new spring styles.

"You ought to doll up more around the office, Mary Rose," Flossie was saying. "John Manners never will look at you, if you hang around in those awful looking duds. A marcel wave and a pair of high heels would do wonders for you, sweet patootie!"

Mary Rose flushed. "I don't want him to look at me," she answered.

Flossie laughed. "You tell 'im to Will Hays!" she giggled. "Anyone with half an eye can see that you're off your side of the road, when it comes to the Honorable Johnny! And listen to me! Any girl can get any man she wants if she only knows how to go at it!"

She got up from the table and opened the back door.

"I just want to run over to Blairs' for a sec," she said, and was gone into the rainy darkness.

Aunt Henny was alone in the kitchen cutting recipes from the woman's page of the paper. She looked up in surprise to see Flossie Middleton standing in the doorway.

"I'd like to see Lennie—alone, for a minute, if you don't mind," she said curtly.

Aunt Henny went out of the kitchen, shutting the door behind her. A half-minute later Lennie Blair opened it. He and Flossie stood facing each other, for an instant, taking each other's measure. The girl spoke first.

"Why did you do it?" she asked.

"You know why I did it!" the big blond giant answered. "I've seen that guy bring you home in that big blue car of his, and drop you half way down the street, too many times. I didn't mind your giving me the icy hand, Flossie. But I do object to your running around with a man who's married! And besides, you were breaking the law—I had to arrest you!"

Flossie looked at him sadly, letting her silver-white lips droop over her eyes.

"Lennie," she sighed, "you don't like me the way you used to, do you? I think, sometimes, of the nice times we had together, you and I. We never have them any more, do we?"

"That's your fault, and you know it," he said shortly. "You know I've always been crazy about you. . . I don't get over it!"

She went out and crossed the wet back yards to her own back door, lost in thought. "I should have kept him dangling a bit," she thought. "You never can tell when you need a friend at court—at police court!"

Dog Shows Up Her Husband a Beggar, She Divorces Him

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 26.—(AP)—John Sheldon's dog cost him his wife. In superior court yesterday, Mrs. Ida May Sheldon testified she firmly believed her husband was a prosperous business man until one day she took his dog out for a walk and the animal went into hysterics of joy at sight of a white bearded street beggar. The dog's joy aroused her suspicion, she said, and underneath the beggar's false beard she found her husband. She was granted a divorce.

New Mexico Man Accused in Court

ALBEMARLE, N. C., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Stories of how negro convicts were "beaten so unmercifully" that they died within a few hours are featuring the trial here of M. C. Cranford, Stanley county convict superintendent.

Eight witnesses testified yesterday of "known cruelties" of Cranford, extending over a period of several years.

Some of the witnesses, white convicts, testified to having seen Cranford whip two negroes on an afternoon and that both men died that night.

RISE OF THIS SWEDE IS OUTSTANDING IN WORLD

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Twenty-five years ago an errand boy about a country grocery store, in southern Sweden and today the most powerful political leader in the country is the phenomenal record of Per Albin Hansson, Sweden's minister of national defense. At the age of 40 he has been elected head of the government social-democratic party as successor to Hjalmar Branting and Frederik V. Thorsson.

HEARSES BY MOTOR

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The westernization of Turkey has touched even its funeral rites, the motor hearse has been introduced in Constantinople.

New Lamp Burns 94% Air

Beats Electric or Gas

A new lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air 6% common kerosene (coal oil.)

The inventor, J. T. Johnson, 609 West Lake street, Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

YOUTHFUL HUNTER KILLED

Missouri Boys Use Gun For Ball; One Is Shot

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Newlin English, 18, of Bellville, near here, was fatally shot today when a shot gun was accidentally discharged as he tossed it to a cousin, Clyde English, 19. The full charge of shot penetrated a thick army jacket and struck in the region of the heart. He died within a few minutes. The youths had started hunting.

Mrs. Electra Waggoner Wharton of Ft. Worth Dies In N. Y. Home

NEW YORK, Nov. 26. (AP)—Mrs. Electra Waggoner Wharton of Fort Worth, Texas, whose illness caused her brother, Guy Waggoner, to make a trip by special train died today in a hospital from a complication of diseases.

Mr. Waggoner, a wealthy oil man in Fort Worth, had been constantly at the bedside since his arrival here on November 16. Missing connections at St. Louis he hired a special train to New York for $5,607 and it broke records.

Mrs. Wharton was 45 years old and had been married three times. Her first husband was Thomas Wharton, her second Weldon Bailey and her third James A. Gilmore.

The body is to be sent to Fort Worth.

DEATHS

E. L. ELLIS.

The body of E. L. Ellis, aged 25, who died at 11 o'clock Thursday morning in the general hospital after an illness of several years, was sent Friday morning by the Hines mortuary to Paducha, Texas, his old home for burial.

Military Telephone Line on Block

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Interest is manifest here in reports that the old military telephone line from Laredo to Rio Grande City, constructed in 1892 to afford communication between Fort McIntosh and Fort Ringgold, will soon pass from government control to either the Southwestern Bell Telephone company or the Rio Grande Railway company. The latter has recently completed its line into Rio Grande City from Samfordyce.

BATTLING SIKI AGAIN RUNS AFOUL; FIGHTS CHAUFFEUR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Battling Siki, the Senegaleze pugilist has again run afoul of the law, this time as a result of an altercation today with a taxi driver after a long tour of Harlem. He was booked on a disorderly conduct charge, but subsequently a compromise was effected with the chauffeur and Siki was given a suspended sentence.

Treasury to Start New Finance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP) The treasury tomorrow will attempt for the first time in modern financing the experiment of dealing directly with the holders of government security in making purchases of bonds for retirement from the sinking fund.

Between tomorrow and December 10, the treasury announced today, it will buy bonds of the third liberty loan up to fifty million dollars as the first step in determining the feasibility of an arrangement between government security holders and the government itself.

CHAPMAN IS FIGHTING.

Notorious Bandit Continues His Battle To Escape Noose.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Every detail necessary to give Gerald Chapman, bandit and mail robber, at least three more months of life now has been completed with the exception of the signature of Gov. John H. Trumbull to a second reprieve.

That detail, the governor announced, will be given his attention tomorrow when he will take the necessary step to stay the execution of the prisoner until March 3, 1926. Chapman had been sentenced to die on the gallows December 3, next, for the murder of a New Britain, Conn., policeman.

BOMB FATAL FOR BOY

Indianapolis Youth Torn to Pieces By an Explosion.

HOUSTON, Nov. 26.—Francis Murray, 15-year-old Indianapolis youth, was fatally injured here today by the explosion of a fire works bomb contained in an old pair of overalls. The boy was rummaging about the fair grounds where a carnival company is showing and picked up the garment.

The bomb tore away both hands and inflicted serious injuries in the youth's stomach and legs.

POST OFFICE ROBBED

Village of Addison Entered by Burglars Wednesday Night.

DALLAS, Nov. 26. —(AP)—The post office at Addison, 13 miles south of Dallas, was entered by burglars last night who rifled several sacks of mail and robbed the A. R. Atkins store, in which the post office is located, of merchandise valued at $400. Mail was found scattered over the floor and it was not determined today whether any was actually missing. No arrests had been made.

PROPOSE STOCK PLAN

Fisk Rubber Company Directors Offer New Idea.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Directors of the Fisk Rubber company today submitted to stockholders a plan for payment of accumulated preferred stock dividends and recommendations to provide additional working capital.

Stockholders will vote on the proposal on Dec. 11 and at the same time will be asked to authorize the issuance of $10,000,000 in short term notes.

In Everything Give Thanks

I Thess. 5:18

Below is reproduced in full the address delivered Thursday morning by Dr. Walter J. Johnson, pastor of the First Methodist church, south, who was the principal speaker at the union Thanksgiving services held in the First Christian church.

Dr. Johnson gave an inspiring Thanksgiving message to his hearers who thronged the church.

In this there seems to be decided flavor of the impossible. The heights to which it points seem rugged and difficult to scale. So much is this true that some seem not to regard this seriously. But the Apostle exhortation. He believed it possible to make every day a Thanksgiving day. He did not hold this conviction simply as a theory. It was his experience. As you survey his life, you find him in many trying situations. At times you find him without his cloak, at times without his books and his parchment. You even find him without his friends and his freedom, but never once do you find him without his song of Thanksgiving.

"In everything give thanks." This is something more than a piece of good advice. It is a command that is binding. It brings in its hands the sanction of an infinite authority. So we see then that gratitude is not a matter that is purely optional. You cannot be a Christian and be grateful or ungrateful just as it suits you. To refuse to be thankful is to refuse obedience, and to refuse to be obedient is to refuse to be a Christian at all. A thankless man cannot be a follower of Jesus Christ.

A Wide Scope.

Notice the wide scope of this command "In everything give thanks." It looks utterly impossible. It is, except we receive help from above. God is constantly calling upon us to do the impossible. It was impossible for the paralyzed man to walk, but as he was willing, Christ made the impossible to become the possible; and so God will do in this instance if we will allow Him.

"In everything give thanks." I wonder if we have ever been serious and in earnest in this command. Notice what it says "in everything." In the joy things and in the sorrow things, in the tearful things, in the things bright with morning and the things dark with night. "In everything give thanks." Now that means we are to be thankful when we succeed, in the moments of prosperity and victory. It means also that we are to be thankful when we fail. In the midst of our defeat and of our humiliation, our hearts still must overflow with gratitude. We are to be thankful when these bodies of ours are athrill with vigor of life. We are, also, to be thankful when the destroying hand of disease is upon us and we feel ourselves slipping inch by inch into the grave. "Thankful in everything"—truly it is a broad command. We are to be grateful when friends are kind, when they throw bouquets at us, when they eclasp our hands and tell us how much they appreciate us. We should be thankful when friends seem unkind and throw brickbats at us instead of bouquets, when they pass us by in forgetfulness and cold neglect. We are to be thankful beside the cradle aflicker with life. We are, also, to be thankful beside the grave, gloomy with death.

This is indeed a high standard that our Lord sets for us through His inspired apostle, but it is a possible standard. He never calls us to do that which through His grace we cannot do.

Always Some Adversity.

How can we reach that mountain height where we will really be able to in every thing give thanks? How did Paul reach it? Not by getting into circumstances that were altogether favorable, nor will we. There will never come a time in our lives when everything will come to us right side up. We are going to have to pass through sorrows and loss, struggles and perplexities. How dry our cheeks are today. One day they are going to be wet with tears. So if we never expect to be thankful until everything gets to be entirely to our liking, then we will never fulfill this command at all.

But this gratitude is not a child of circumstances. Gratitude is never born purely of our circumstances. For instance, the most grateful people are not the people who have the most. They are not the people who are blessed with good health and sound minds and with beautiful homes and with high social circles. The most grateful people are often the ones who, as far as the world can see, have the least. Read the letters of Paul. He was always breaking out into the gladdest praise. They ring with triumphant hallelujah's. This is true not because Paul had everything. He was being shipwrecked, stoned, hounded, whipped, and imprisoned. At last they killed him, but they never killed his gratitude.

How then is this amazing possibility to be realized? It is to be realized through faith in God. Gratitude is a child of faith. If you ever get to the place where you can really give thanks in everything you have got to have a very real and very vital grip on God. You have got to believe that Paul speaks the truth when he says, "All things work together for good to them that love God." There will be many times, of course, when you do not see how the trials and defeats that come upon you can be for good, times when you cannot understand. It is only necessary to believe.

When Bunyan was shut up in Bedford jail, he could not understand just how this could be best, but God wanted him to preach not simply to the men of his day, but to the men of all time; and so He locked in jail Bunyan's body that his soul might be out piloting the pilgrims over the eventful road from the City of Destruction to Mt. Zion.

Illustration—Sculptor and the block of marble.

Our unbelieving eyes looked out the other day and saw only the black clouds and the pouring rain and soggy streets and the muddy roads and the water soaked fields. Faith looked out and thanked God and sang:

"It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining daffodils;
In every dimpled drop I see
Wild flowers upon the hills.
"A cloud of gray engulfs the day
And overwhelms the town;
It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining roses down.
"It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining clover bloom;
Where any buccaneering bee
Can find a bed and room.
"So a health to him who's happy,
And a fig to him who frets;
It isn't raining rain to me,
It's raining violets."

But while gratitude is a child of faith, is also a child that we must watch and train and develop. Gratitude, as all other fine graces, must be cultivated. It must be tended and watered and watched over, or it will die. "In everything give thanks." Do not think that Paul reached this high point without a struggle. Do not expect to do so yourself. You are not going to do so easily. You are not going to do so lazily and half asleep. It requires conscious effort.

How can we help ourselves in the cultivation of this rare and winsome flower called gratitude? In the first place, if you are going to be thankful in everything, you cannot ignore the blessings of life which we are accustomed to call common place, and yet that is what most of us have a great tendency to do.

Out of the great cornucopia of the skies there comes to us innumerable blessings through every passing day. Do we ever stop to think of our environment? Of what we have today as contrasted with the temporal blessings enjoyed by our forefathers?

The new continent gave our Pilgrim fathers but cold welcome, for the Mayflower entered Plymouth Harbor amidst a driving snow storm. Wading ashore through treacherous surf, men cleared away the drifts and erected rude log cabins, but exposure told heavily upon the pioneers already exhausted by a voyage long and tempestuous and six of the heroes died during December, eight in January, 17 in February, 13 in March. When the last snow fell, it lay like a soft white blanket upon the graves of half of the immortal company. If the first summer was propitious, the second refused rain, while autumn sent an early frost. When the harvest had failed in the fields, the game departed from the forests. What was worse, the Indians now became unfriendly. Because winter and starvation threatened the remainder of the intrepid band, Governor Bradford appointed a day of fasting and prayer, but when the appointed day arrived, the colonists awakened one morning to find that during the night a good ship from home had dropped anchor in the harbor, bringing letters, food and medicine for the sick, seeds and roots for renewed sowing, bringing also friends and new colonists. Never was deliverance more dramatic, so the day appointed for fasting was changed to a day of feating and Thanksgiving.

Home Life Portrayed.

Fortunately our scholars have fully portrayed for us the home life, manners and morals of a hundred years ago, so that we know what our father did, though suffered, and enjoyed. Pessimists often make much of the good old times of the fathers but by way of contrast, those were the bad old times and ours are the good new times. Today, we read out of the published notebooks and journals of individuals of a hundred years ago.

In one of these biographies a noble youth and his bride in 1790 left the old home near Pittsburg and made a new home in the forests of Kentucky. Their wealth was represented by one axe, one gun and a small sack of garden seed. Their wagon had wheels made by sawing off the round end of a log. harness was made of rope. There were without bridges. Coming to the stream, the travelers broke the ice and breasted the cold current. Leather was so dear that in the morning, the young man rolled up his trousers and waded barefoot through the wet grass toward his grazing steeds. Struck with fever, the only remedies were the bitter herbs found in the forests. Building the house, the windows were made with paper rubbed with bear's oil. If he neglected to cover the coals at night on the hearth, he had a job to start a fire next morning. His food was wild crabapples of the forest and sour grapes that grew in the swamps, with wild berries and roots until new planted crops should appear.

What hath God wrought since this far off day? Under the influence of Christianity and progress of truth, we have a glorious civilization with its financial culture, its equipment in our homes so that we only have to press a button, turn a faucet. What is our lot as compared with the children of the forests? The wealth of that day was not in gold and silver but in a few rude implements for the cultivation of the soil, in the flint lock gun for the procuring of meat for the table. The historian has portrayed Washington or Adams as sitting down to a breakfast of boiled corned beef and potatoes in a room without gas, lamp, stoves, carpet, without coal in winter or ice in summer, without any of the innumerable little comforts thake life worth living.

An Early Day.

What wonderful strides in education. If we go back to the era represented in "The Scarlet Letter," we find that but few persons in Boston were fortunate enough to own a book. One hundred years ago Henry Clay learned to write by filling a box with sand and tracing letters with a pointed stick. Young Daniel Webster plucked his pen out of the wings of his mother's pet goose. He made ink out of the soot scraped from the fireplace. Having no maps, no charts, no reading books, no lesson helps, the school teachers depended upon the road as the inspiration of all learning. John Quincy Adams tells us that when he learned to spell a word, the teacher clinched it in his memory by a whack over the shoulders. Unknown one hundred years ago, were the modern sciences named geology, botany, electricity and sociology. The ordinary home included four books—the Bible, "Pilgrim's Progress," a spelling book and an almanac that told the farmer what the weather was to be a year in advance. To lose this almanac was a great misfortune for the husbandman, for then he had to take the weather just as it came.

In 1770 there were but forty-three newspapers published in this country, and these were so small that the entire number would make up about ten pages of a modern morning journal. The editorial page was unknonw. A man who could read and write in those days was a striking figure.

The increase in wisdom makes ours seem like another world. Knowledge now has become a contagion. Intelligence is so diffused that in a sense every man is his own teacher, doctor, lawyer, minister. The very complexity of modern life is making illiteracy impossible.

News travelled slowly a hundred years ago. Not until February of 1812 did the people of Kentucky know that Madison was elected the previous November. When Benjamin Franklin first took the coach from Philadelphia to New York he spent four days upon the journey. He tells us that as the old driver jogged along, he spent his time knitting stockings. When our first foreign minister went to London, he received word from the captain of the sailing vessel in the New York harbor to come abroad immediately. Hastily buying a sack of flour, three hams, and a bag of potatoes, he hurried on the ship to arrange with some sailor to cook his meals, not knowing but that the ship might sail any hour. Five weeks passed before the boat left the harbor. After six weeks at sea, the traveller at last beheld the outlines of the coast of old England.

There were scarcely any tools or worthwhile inventions. The Eighteenth century gave us the cotton gin, the Fifteenth the printing press; the Fourteenth, the mariner's compass, but the Nineteenth alone includes among its gifts the railway uniting distant cities; the steam ship uniting the distant nations; the telegraph, the cable, the telephone tying together the world in a net work; the phonograph lending immortality to the voices; the reaper standing for a thousand and one new tools; the sewing machine standing for a thousand new tools lending leisure and power to woman; the automobile, the areoplane, the radio that enables the voices to girdle the globe.

What an advance we have experienced in the realm of medicine. In formed eras, when the soldier lost his arm in battle, the bleeding stump was plunged into hot pitch to stay the merorrage. Now many amuptations are performed without the loss of a single drop of blood. Once when a man would enter a dentist's office to have a nerve killed, he would be seated in a rawhide bottomed chair. The dentist would heat the needle red hot and apply it to the exposed nerve. Every time he killed a nerve, they had to rebottom the chair. When Dr. Hall, who married Jackson's daughter, fell ill, he tells us that he first applied to his heart a powerful plaster made of six ingredients and another to his spine made of five. He then took a draught made of seven strong herbs, after which he says he was able to take meat, being delivered from death.

The celebrated Dr. Rush of Philadelphia tells of a physician who, finding his patient overcome with fainting, drew two ounces of blood. As the obstinate faintness continued, he drew off 20 ounces more; and as the stubborn symptoms refused to disappear, he drew off another 30. Two days later, when the clergyman held the funeral services, he said, "My serious providence has grievously afflicted our community."

Even in John Adams' time the shotgun prescription, combining 40 substances in one remedy in the hope that one of the many might hit and slay the disease, still prevailed.

When Washington was inaugurated, every fifth person that witnessed the ceremony was horribly disfigured by small pox. Now that disease is comparatively infrequent.

By comparison, there has also been a wonderful advancement in morals. Most of the authors whose books have come down from early centuries have to be expurgated by reason of their coarseness and vulgarity. As to drunkenness, early in the last century, a prominent pastor in New England was part owner in a distillery. Being an extravagant liver, he became involved in financial difficulties. His creditors threw him in jail. In order not to interfere with his ministerial labors, we are told the limits of the jail were made to include the parsonage and the church so that he could go in and out before his people.

Prison Conditions.

The prisons were awful in that time. The darkness was intense. The cases which were used for prisons reeked with filth, vermin abounded. Water oozed from the sides of the cavern. The feet of the prisoners were made fast to iron bars, their necks were chained to beams in the roof. In the darkness and filth, the clothing on the prisoners grew moldy and rotted away. Some of the prisoners had cropped ears. Others were covered with scars of the branding iron. At Philadelphia in the year 1801, white salves went through the streets with iron collars and chains about their necks and with the initials of the master branded upon the forehead.

One by one the vices and sins that, like huge serpents, have left their slime upon man's pathway have been slain. The mere statement that eight of the 11 social sins that Gibbon mentions as destroying Rome have been exterminated. Poverty, intemperance and the social evil alone remain, although growing era when happiness and virtue will be all but universal. Chiefly is Thanksgiving encouraged by the new and increasing faith as the religion of sympathy, service and self sacrifice spreads. As never before the people feel that the secret of progress is the secret of Jesus Christ. Indeed, Christianity has been called a beautiful civilization. Setting forth from Bethelhem, it has journeyed across the continents. Its breath is summer, its presence warmth, its footprints harvests. Today Christianity does not stand upon the corners of the streets blowing a trumpet before it. It is entering softly into the human heart, rebuking coarseness and vice, and stealing away sorrow and sin. That gentle one whose soft touch once fell upon the fevered heads of little children, who opened His arms to shelter publican and prodigal, doth now enfold in His wide sympathy a civilization and a world.

Looking back over past history, seeing what the fathers endured, generation after generation contributing something to the ongoing of civilization, it is at no small cost that we are the possessors of such a boasted civilisation and should, therefore be grateful for the commonplace so-called, which has been purchased at such infinite cost.

No Sun Shine.

Did you ever hear of that morning when the sun did not rise? One day, but it was not day. The o'clock came and no rose bloomed in that far garden of the east. Seven o'clock came and still no sun and no ray of light, then eight, then nine, then ten, then noon; and at noon, it was as black as midnight. At noon no birds sang. There was only a hoot of the owl and flight of the bat. The world lay black and silent. Then came the black hours of the afternoon. There was no sunset because there was no sunrise, and there was no retiring to bed and there was no sleep, the sleep that knits up the ravelled edge of care. Instead people remained wide awake. Some wept. Some rung their hands in anguish. Every church was thronged to its doors with people upon their knees. Thus they remained the whole night through, and the millions of eager and tear wet faces were turned toward the east. When the sky began to glow red and the sun looked up once more, there went up a shout of great joy that was fairly echoed from star to star. Now one hundred million lips said, "Bless the Lord, O my soul."

Why were these people so thankful? It is the strangest reason in the world. They were thankful that it had failed to rise for one whole day, and thus the very constancy of God's blessings sometimes seems to kill our gratitude.

We are so like little children. Take your child a toy every day when you go home, and it will not be two weeks before he will cease to appreciate it, will even feel himself wronged if it fails in a single instance to come.

Cultivate the fine habit of being thankful for life's daily blessings. Appreciate the sunrises and the sunsets, the spring times and the autumn times, the comforts of home, the hand clasp of friends, the confidence of associates, the clinging love of the inner circle. Appreciate the open Bible, the church with its welcome, the constant invitation to the place of prayer and the wide open gateway into the Father's House. If we do this, we must fling away our pride and self sufficiency and conceit. Did you ever notice how prone we are to blame others for our misfortune and to thank ourselves for our good fortune?

If you are going to be thankful in everything, you must refuse to allow the blessings of others make you despise your own. It is strange that we should be so foolish and so wicked as to do this; and yet we often are. Saul appreciated the praise that was given to him until he found that David had greater praise. You appreciated the little daisy that was put into your hand until you saw that a friend of yours had an American beauty rose. You enjoyed your Ford until your friend began to ride in a Packard. Oh, you will never be grateful in that way.

If you are going to be thankful in everything, you must cultivate the habit of giving expression to your thanks. That is what Paul did. He was forever telling his Lord and telling his friends how thankful he was. And the more he gave expression, the more thankful he became. We become rich in the fine wealth of gratitude just in proportion as we give it away. There are some people who will go an act of kindness say, "Thank you." Others cut off the "you." Others merely give grunts. God desires that we give thanks. How many starved hearts there are in the world because we fail to give expression to our gratitude, and how many of us allow our gratitude to become weak and sickly and often utterly dead because we fail to give expression to it.

One time a most wonderful preacher visited a certain village. In that village there were ten men who were dying of a loathsome disease. Tehree wretched men formed themselves into a committee and asked this preacher for help. The heart of the preacher was tender and his power great, so he responded to this committee of politeness by healing them every one. This time nine of them said, "He knows how grateful I am." Having so said, they hurried away and ceased to be grateful at all. The tenth man came and fell down at his Savior's feet, giving Him thanks; and when he arose, he had tenfold more gratitude than he had when he came. Therefore, I urge let the redeemed of the Lord say so.

Now, that is the good of being grateful in everything give thanks? Why? The apostle gives just one big reason. This is the will of God. That is reason enough, is it not? You should be thankful in everything because God wants you to be. That is the way and the only way to please him. Why does our gratitude please God first, because it is a mark of Christian growth in ourselves. Gratitude is a test of character. No baby is grateful. Now, we do not blame the baby, because it is a baby; but to continue to be ungrateful is always be an infant.

To be a thankful Christian is pleasing to God in the next place because to be grateful is one of the roadways to usefulness. Gratitude makes you helpful. It makes you helpful, because it begets gratitude in others. Did you ever go away from seeing some sick body who has neither health nor money nor social position, and yet was full of gratitude; and you said to yourself, "Just look what I have. How thankful I ought to be." And you were helped toward gratitude by the gratitude of another.

Then we are helpful in other ways. How a little gratitude strengthens us sometimes. How much better we work when we know we are appreciated. Yes, I fancy that all the machinery would run with greater smoothness if we would just oil it now and then with the fine oil of appreciation. We think lovely things, we say lovely things when friends are dead, but the trouble is we so often keep them secret while they are alive. One day you look over the way and see crepe on the door of your friend. You hurry over to where he lies asleep and there spill a thousand grateful words into his dear but now not responsive ear, a heart that is no helped; but how much you might have helped if you had been in time.

That was the fine thing about Mary. She gave expression to her appreciation and she did it on time. She came sweet time, to sit at the Master. That is Mary with love's intuition, saw death coming in the distance, and she said, "I will boast death to Him," and she did. So, when death touched His forehead, it made even his old frozen fingers smell of perfume. This because Mary had been on time in giving expression to her gratitude.

"If I should die tonight,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting-place,
And deem that death had left almost fair,
And laying snow-white flowers upon my hair,
Would smooth it down with longing caress—
Poor hands, so empty and so cold tonight!

"If I should die tonight,
My friends would call me kind, with loving thought,
Some kindly deed the icy hand had wrought,
Some gentle word the frozen lips had said—
Errands on which the willing feet had sped;
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words, would all be put aside,
And so I should be loved and mourned tonight.

"O friends, I pray tonight,
Keep not your kisses for my dead cold brow,
The way is lonely; let me feel them now.
Think gently of me; I am travel-worn,
My faltering feet are pierced with many a thorn.
Forgive! O hearts estranged, forgive, I plead!
When ceaseless bliss is mine I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long tonight.

Then gratitude is pleasing to God because God is love, and love always wants to be appreciated. Undoubtedly, love will live without it, but it lives in grief and pain and disappointment. If you love anybody, the keenest wound that they can inflict upon you is the wound of ingratitude. The highwater mark of English tragedy is "King Lear." And what is the climax of this tragedy? It is the father learning "how sharper than a serpent's tooth, it is to have a thankless child."

Did you ever read of how those that feared the Lord spoke about it and how a book of remembrance was kept? I wonder if the recording angel will be able to write your name and mine, this morning, in the gilded volume of those who are thankful? believe me, you can bring no greater joy to your Lord than the fulfilling of this command: "In everything give thanks."

More Truth Than Poetry

"NOW I AM PERFECTLY SURE I HAVE NONE"

Long years ago my doctor said
That if I'd make my daily diet
Of milk and eggs and meat and bread,
I certainly would profit by it.
He said that rich and costly food
Engendered ailments most distressful,
And those who fancy fare eschewed,
Were always happy and successful.

And so I took my dinners plain,
And trusted that the mental tonic
I got thereby would make my brain
Exceedingly Napoleonic.
But as the dreary days dragged by,
Instead of growing bright and clever
I found within a year that I
Was just as sad and dumb as ever.

Another doctor tells me now
That eating often and intensely,
Although he doesn't just know how
Will help the intellect immensely.
Rich men, he says, desire rich fare—
On dietary rules they trample,
And if I want to get somewhere
I'd better follow their example.

This man's advice I'm going to heed,
But not because I am persuaded
That if like wise rich men I feed
I may grow wise and rich as they did.
But when I'm told to eat a steak
With truffles, peas and mushrooms bordered,
If only for my stomach's sake—
I'll do just what the doctor ordered!

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE PUMPKIN PIE PRINCESS--XI

by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

ONCE THE PUMPKIN HOUSE OF A TINY LITTLE GIRL FELL TO THE MOON AND BROKE, AND THE MOON KING ASKED THE LITTLE GIRL, ESMERELDA, TO TEACH HIS COOK HOW TO MAKE A PUMPKIN PIE, WHICH NOBODY IN THE MOON HAD EVER TASTED. SOON THE COOK HAD HIS PANS, GRATERS, SIFTERS AND CANS OF SPICES STAKED LIKE GUARDS ABOUT ESMERELDA, AND SET BUSILY TO WORK TO MAKE THE PIE.

THE COOK WORKED SO FAST UNDER ESMERELDA'S ORDERS THAT HE SOON HAD EVERYTHING READY.

THE TINY FURNITURE HAD BEEN CAREFULLY PLACED ON A CORNER OF THE TABLE WHERE IT WOULD BE SAFE, BUT THE PUMPKIN HOUSE WAS GONE. HOWEVER, IT MADE SUCH A BEAUTIFUL PIE THAT ESMERELDA WAS NOT HALF AS SORRY AS SHE THOUGHT SHE WOULD BE.

IT WAS SLIPPED IN THE OVEN AND IN A SHORT TIME THAT WONDERFUL PUMPKIN-PIE PERFUME BEGAN TO FILL THE KITCHEN. IT WAS ALMOST TOO MUCH FOR THE KING AND A DOZEN TIMES HE ASKED ESMERELDA IF SHE DIDN'T THINK THE PIE WAS READY.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

IT SEEMED AGES BEFORE SHE FINALLY ALLOWED THE COOK TO TAKE IT OUT OF THE OVEN AND IT WAS AS PERFECT A PUMPKIN PIE AS EVER YOUR OWN GRANDMOTHER MADE AND YOU KNOW HOW ABSOLUTELY PERFECT THAT IS.

TOMORROW—THE KING SAMPLES THE PIE.

LIONS WORRY ALONG BEHIND MOST OF WAY BUT REAR UP TO BEAT OAK CLIFF, 27-14

Crouch, Williams, Roy Key, Turn In Best Games of Their Careers, Lion Fans Say

VERNON, Nov. 26.—Entering the game the under dog, Vernon Lions fought valiantly on, although trailing the Oak Cliff Leopards at the end of the half and emerged from the gruelling contest victorious over the vaunted Blue eleven, winning by a 27-14 score. Coach Baggett's men entered the game unhampered by injuries for the first time since early in the season and eleven men went the entire route.

Both elevens resorted to the air often. The Leopards tossed thirty passes, but completed only four. Four others were intercepted. Vernon tossed seventeen, and completed eight. Two were intercepted. The Lions scored first when Ryan kicked a field goal from the 22 yard line after Gelhausen had recovered Lumpkins fumble on the forty yard fine and the ball had been carried down to the 22 yard line by a pass and an end run by Gelhausen.

Leopards Score On Pass.

Oak Cliff made the first touchdown when a pass, Lumpkin to Hopper, and a run following it netted 38 yards and the touchdown. In the third quarter Ryau passed 22 yards to Gelhausen who fell over the goal line. The Lions next touchdown was scored a few minutes later when Ryan received Lumpkins fumble and raced 45 yards for a touchdown. Crouch blocked a Leopard punt early in the fourth quarter on the Leopard's five yard line and Newth recovered and went over the goal line.

Ryan booted a field goal a few minutes later after Crouch intercepted a Leopard pass and ran 33 yards to the 12 yard line.

Oak Cliff scored the final touchdown of the game near the middle of the fourth quarter with a bewildering pass, Clements to Hopper over the line of scrimmage, then the ball was arounded to Lumpkin who raced 51 yards for the final touchdown.

Three men, Crouch, Williams, and Roy Key turned in what fans proclai mthe best games of their careers, and were chiefly responsible for the Lion victory. Crouch and R. Key were everywhere when the Leopards attempted to pass.

Breaks played an important part in the Lion victory, as both clubs made eleven first downs. Baggett's charges were always ready to cover loose balls.

The line up:

Oak Cliff	Position	Vernon
Morris	Left End	Newths
Allen	Left Guard	Koontz
J. Higgins	Center	Parker
Hood	Right Guard	R. Key
Armstrong	Right Tackle	Burrows
Carver	Right End	T. Key
F. Higgins	Quarter	Ryan
Lumpkin	Left Half	Williams
Clements	Right Half	Crouch
Hooper	Fullback	Gelhausen

Sooners Wallop Aggies, 35 to 0, In Valley Contest

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 26.—(AP) Oklahoma university trounced its farmer brothers today in their first football game since the Aggies were admitted to the Missouri Valley conference, 35 to 0. More than 7,000 persons watched the game, which was played under ideal weather conditions.

Gathering momentum as the game progressed, the Sooners put across one touchdown in the first quarter, one in the third and three in the last period.

Six minutes after the opening whistle, Hill passed to Slough for a 51-yard gain. Slough was stopped at the Aggie nine-yard line and Lamb crashed center for the first touchdown after an exchange of fumbles had given Oklahoma the ball.

The aggies' only threat during the encounter was in the second quarter when their aerial attack pushed the pigskin to the Oklahoma 12-yard line. The Sooners took the ball when Bennett fumbled on an attempted place kick and Lamb punted out of danger.

Lamb intercepted McCoy's pass and raced 55 yards through an open field for a touchdown in the third period. Oklahoma made its three touchdowns in the closing quarter on straight line bucking tactics. Bowman, Aggie fullback, was carried off the field in the last quarter, apparently seriously injured.

Captain Brockman's unerring placement kicks added five points to the Sooner score.

Walters Heaves Way To Victory

The Walters Purple Devils passed their way to victory over the Polytechnic high school football team of Fort Worth in a 16 to 14 victory, the deciding points of the game were made in the last few minutes of the game.

CORNHUSKERS SMASH NOTRE DAME, 17 TO 0

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 26. (AP)—The University of Nebraska defeated Notre Dame 17 to 0 today before a football crowd of 43,000 spectators.

The Cornhuskers opened a brilliant offensive in the early minutes of play and Rhodes, Nebraska fullback, scored after a kick by Roach had gone out of bounds on the six yard line. The second score came soon after when a pass to A. Mandery, Nebraska half, by Brown, quarterback, netted 32 yards and a touchdown. Captain Ed Weir added the extra points and in the third period booted over a placekick for the final three counters.

Nebraska's victory today evened the count for the 11 contests between the two teams, each having won five victories and with one game a tie.

The Notre Dame offensive failed to pierce the Nebraska line and the Cornhuskers were never seriously in danger during the game. Nebraska missed two chances to score in the late periods of the contest when placekicks by Captain Weir went wide of the bars.

Coach Knute Rockne started his second string backfield but replaced them by O'Boyle, Hearndon and Enright after Nebraska had scored in the first period. The Rockne men were unable to show consistent gains as the Nebraska linemen charged through and dropped the Notre Dame backs.

BIG DAM WINS

CISCO, Texas, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Big Dam Loboes wo nall class championship of district Three, defeating the Colorado Wolves, class B, bi-district champs, 70 to 0 here. Colorado came five hundred strong with Gold Medal band on special train. Loboes will meet Amarillo or Cleburne in bi-district championship games.

WEST VIRGINIA WINS.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 26.—(AP)—West Virginia university defeated Washington and Jefferson, 19 to 0, in their annual Thanksgiving Day football game here today. The Mountaineers scored two touchdowns in the second period and another in the final quarter.

COLGATE TIES WITH BROWN

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Colgate closed its 1925 season without a defeat when Captain Eddie Tryon, leading scorer of the east, led his victorious eleven in an uphill fight to tie Brown today, 14 to 14. In his final appearance in the Maroon uniform Tryon added eight points to his season total when he scored one touchdown and kicked for two points after touchdown. The Colgate captain figured in almost every play, but was closely covered by the Brown tacklers.

ST. LOUIS VICTORIOUS

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 26. (AP)—St. Louis University ended its rather illfated football season in a blaze of glory by scoring a brilliant 7 to 0 victory over Vermont University here today. A blocked punt and a successful line plunge by O'Reilly gave St. Louis its only touchdown and victory.

Play By Play Account of Longhorn-Farmer Encounter

COLLEGE STATION, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A Texas Aggie machine this afternoon matched down Kyle field for four touchdowns to win over Doc Stewart's Texas Longhorns by a score of 28 to 0.

This is the largest number of points that an Aggies team has ever scored against a Texas squad.

The game was repleted with thrills, the biggest coming when Sykes snatched a Texas pass and ran 92 yards for a touchdown, shaking off Johnny Estes, Texas safety man.

In the last period the Longhorns opened up with a flashy forward pass attack, but failed to score.

The southwest conference championship hinged on the outcome of this game. It is rumored at the school that A. & M. will receive a challenge from the University of Southern California to play in the Rose Bowl on New Year's day.

FROGS SWAMP KANGAROOS BY 21-0 COUNTER

Christians March up And Down Field Almost Unhindered

FORT WORTH, Nov. 26.—(AP) Completely outplaying their rivals from Austin college in every department of the game, the T. C. U. Horned Frogs won their final gridiron appearance for this season 21 to 0.

T. C. U. not only showed superior power in the running game, its backs ripping the Austin college line or circling end at will but used the aerial atack at which their rivals are accounted adept, with telling effect. nGins by forward passes put T. C. U. in the lead with formations with Johnny Washmon back n kicking position.

Pass Scores One.

An almost uninterrupted march down the field in the second period, climaxed by a successful forward pass from Frazee to Word brought the second touchdown. Washmon kicked both goals.

Austin college got its overhead game to working in the latter part of the second quarter and almost scored, T. C. U. knocking down the forward pass which the Kangaroos' final bid for a score at this time on the goal line itself. Passes from Keeling to Lingo had put the Kangarobs in scoring distance at this time.

Teh Kangaroo defense stiffened after the rest of the half, and the third period was scoreless with the teams playing almost on even terms. In the fourth period, however, the T. C. U. attack again got under way and the Horned Frogs scored their final touchdown when Clark sifted through the line and ran 35 yards for a touchdown, Washmon again kicking goal.

Austin Threatens.

The Kangaroos made another threat just before the end of the game, chiefly as the result of a 25-yard return of a T. C. U. punt by Allred followed soon after by another 25-yard gain as the result of a one-handed catch of a forward pass by Lingo who played a sensational game at end for the Kangaroos throughout the day. This chance ended, however, just before the final whistle when N. Clark for T. C. U. intercepted a Kangaroo forward pass.

Grange Makes Debut As Professional, But Fails to Cross Goal Line

RED'S ELEVEN PLAYS CARDS TO 0-0 SCORE

Illini Flash Stopped With Six Yards Best From Scrimmage

CHICAGO, Nov. 26. (AP)—Harold "Red" Grange today stepped from a college hero into business life, as a professional football player, gained the hearty applause of a crowd of more than 40,000, some $20,000 as his share of the receipts and a black eye. His team, the Chicago Bears, played a scoreless tie with the Chicago Cardinals, their bitter rivals of the South Side.

"I never played against a more expert team of football players," said Grange after the game. "I don't remember how I got the black eye, but I never saw a bit of intentional roughness, and I enjoyed my first professional game immensely. I did my best, but was able to practice with the team only a few days."

The Cardinals made every effort to keep their punts out of Grange's hands, but he managed to get hold of three which he ran back for 14, 25 and 30 yards. His longest gain from formation was but six yards and that was the next to the longest of the game for either side. He made one of the two first downs for his team. Joe Sternaman, also a former University of Illinois player made the other.

Red Makes One Tackle.

Paddy Driscoll, former Northwestern star, made the only first down for the Cardinals and the famous red head stopped him then with a five yard gain, Grange's only tackle of the game. The Cardinals only tried that one time around Grange's end. Driscoll once attempted a 43 yard drop kick, the ball sailing into a goal post. Later from the 64 yard line his attempt was blocked.

Grange rested for a few minutes near the close of the second period and the start of the third but rushd back into the game when the Cardinals reached he 19-yard line in time to intercept a pass under the goal posts and head off a touchdown. The Bears only goal chance for a score came later in the third period but Sternaman fumbled on the 12 yard line in a dive through guard and the Cardinals recovered.

Grange opened up with passes in the last few minutes of the game, but all were knocked down by the Cardinals.

In 14 plays, Grange gained a net of 40 yards and added 69 more in running back three punts. He was sweeping around the end in one of his characteristic runs when the pistol cracked, ending the game, at midfield.

Thousands swarmed on the field to reach him, but police rescued him and later formed outside the dressing room door to control the crowd.

He Gets Away Once.

Officials of the teams refused to give out the total attendance and receipts, but the paid attendance ran over the 40,000 mark, and the receipts around $80,000 according to estimates. Grange's share was 40 per cent of the receipts it was understood, his own net income being 45 per cent of the 40 per cent.

Johnny Layden, one of the "four horsemen" of Notre Dame's 1924 team, was to have been in the back field of the Cardinals but his father dissuaded him. One of Layden's predecessors, Johnny Mohardt played in Grange's place while he was out.

Most of the Cardinal plays spilled harmlessly against Fleckenstein, former Iowa guard, Healy, former Dartmouth tackle and McMillen who as a guard preceded Grange in the captaincy of the Illinois eleven by two years.

Hanny of Indiana punted the play deep into Cardinal territory most of the time. Driscoll's efforts to keep his punts out of Grange's hands were obvious to the crowd, which gave a resounding groan at every Cardinal punt. In the middle of the fourth period, after little of the spectacular had been vouchsafed the packed stands, Grange got loose with a punt on his 40 yard line and sprinted diagonally across the field. The crowd let out a tremendous yell, but Grange was stopped after a net advance of 25 yards.

Valley Race All Over With Tiger Resting On Top

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 26. (AP)—The closing of the Missouri Valley conference football season today brought a general shake-up in the standing of the teams and witnessed the triumph of the University of Nebraska over Coach Knute Rockne's Notre Dame eleven.

Missouri's hold on the mythical conference championship for the second successive year was not affected, the Tigers having closed the year last Saturday in undisputed possession of the tile, notwithstanding a defeat at the hands of Kansas in the final game.

The positions of the other teams were shifted today, however, Drake displacing Iowa State as the runner-up as the result of Iowa State's defeat by the Kansas Aggies, 12 to 7. The Aggies and Ames ended up in a tie for third place.

Oklahoma improved its place in the standings by overwhelming Oklahoma A. & M. college 35 to 0, leaving the latter institution at the bottom of the list without a single victory in its first year of competition in the conference.

Washington pulled out of last place by a 3 to 0 victory over Grinnell. This left Oklahoma, Nebraska and Grinnell bounced ahead of the university of Kansas with Washington and Oklahoma A. & M. college trailing.

Nebraska's turning back of Notre Dame crowned a season which otherwise has verged on disaster for the conference record shows two defeats and one tie against the Cornhuskers.

Drake, playing outside the conference, lost to Southern Methodist university at Dallas, 21 to 0.

Tulane Defeats Centenary, 14-0

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Waging their strongest battle of the season the Centenary Gentlemen let the mighty green wave of Tulane university down with two touchdowns and two points after touchdown here Thursday in the closing game of the season that was to decide the championship of Louisiana. The score was 14 to 0 but in the early part of play the locals outplayed the visitors and only fumbles and a bad pass from Centenary kept them down. The punting of Peggy Flournoy was the biggest handicap for the Gents and kept them with their backs against the wall.

After Tulane had made two unsuccessful attempts in the second half to plow through the Gents line and had lost the ball on downs they came back and by the virtue of a five yard penalty put over the first score. It was ten yards and goal to go when the Gents were punished for being offside and it took four downs for the wave to make the five yards to score. In the last half Irish Levy recovered a fumble on the 30 yard line and after a try at the line failed, Lautenschlager passed behind the goal to Wilson for six points. Flournoy scored two points with his kicking.

Ten thousand persons saw the game.

ELECTRA CREW DEFEATS BURK IN HARD GAME

Scrappy Little Bulldogs Go Down Before Tigers 9 to 0

ELECTRA, Texas, Nov. 26.—The Electra Tigers, with the backfield showing their best form of the season, slashed their way to a 9-0 victory over the scrappy little Bulldog crew from Burkburnett, in an hard-fought battle here this afternoon to close the grid season for Jim Reese's study athletes. A field goal in the third quarter by Bob More followed by a sensational fifty-yard return of a punt for the only touchdown of the fray by Vincent Trammill, stellar Tiger fullback, completed the scoring for this afternoon. The Bulldogs never gave up fighting however, and they came back in the last quarter to wage an aerial attack that all but sent them home with victory. The Tiger's defense stiffened, on each occasion, however, when the Burk lads brought the oval in scoring distance and the visitors were never able to cross the white line.

Threaten But Fail

The Tiger backs brought the ball in scoring distance on several occasions throughout the fray, only to see their scoring chances go glimmering through penalties that were inflicted against them. For the Tigers, Bob More and Vincent Trammill were the outstanding ground gainers, as they plowed the opposing line or circled the ends for gain after gain. Both of these lads reeled off several beautiful end runs. Trammill's returning of kicks was nothing short of sensational. John Louie Wright, sturdy Tiger half, also came through with a number of nice gains, as did Johnson Lebus at quarter. In the line Toots Gilger, Ralph "Budley" Aven, Roy Cooledge and Mike Brown shined both on the offense and defense. For the visitors Johnnie McDonnald was the outstanding ground gainer, circling the Tiger ends and plowing the line for numerous long gains. Gene Buckner, Bulldog quarter also showed up with several nice gains as well as playing a great defensive game.

Gilmore on Defense

Rex Gilmore, visiting wingman, proved the Bulldog's best bet on the defense. This lad broke through the Tiger forward wall on numerous occasions to get his man for a loss. Jim Barker at tackle and Hickman, center, also played well, although the latter was carried from the field late in the third quarter with injuries.

Score by quarters:

Electra	0	0	9	0

Electra	Position	Burkburnett
Brown	Left end	Hall

Substitutes: Burkburnett, Patterson for Hall; Van Cleave for Woods; Hall for atterson; Phillips for Van Cleave; Herd for Hall; Hood for Herd; Woods for Gilchris . Electra, Buzzy Smith for Brewer; Smith Sargent for Aven; Kent for Wright.

KANSAS AGGIES BEAT IOWA STATE, 12 TO 7.

AMES, Ia., Nov. 26. (AP)—Staging a desperate fight throughout the game the Kansas Aggie football team won over Iowa State here today in the closing two minutes of play, emerging with a 12 to 7 victory. The teams are tied for fourth place in the Missouri valley standings.

GRINNELL LOSES

St. LOUIS, Nov. 26. (AP)—A field goal by Captain Levy from his 30 yard line in the final moments of play enabled Washington University to defeat the powerful Grinnell team, 3 to 0, and register its first Missouri Valley conference victory in two years.

RICE MACHINE FIGHTS BEARS EVEN-STEPHEN

Owls Tabulate First Then Baylor Knots it At 7-7 Score

HOUSTON, Nov. 26.—The Rice Institute Owls, playing their greatest game of the year, outplayed and outfought the Baylor Bears here this afternoon to a 7-7 tie.

The Owl defense was superb, and the attack missed by inches of defeating the Baylorites.

With only a few seconds of play remaining before time was up, Captain Underwood of Rice heaved a forward pass to Herting, who caught the ball on the field of play. He was tackled, however, so vic.ously by Strickland that he fumbled the pigskin, the ball rolling over the goal line, where a Baylor player fell on the ball for a touchback and victory, which had been so near, was denied the Riceonians. At the time the stands were in an uproar, as it looked as if the play had given Rice a score.

Break Helps Out.

The institute team after playing a heady game for the first quarter came back strong in the earlier stages of the second period, and took the lead. The two clubs after getting an even break for the first portion of the game, went into the second quarter with all they had, but an exceptional kick by Underwood of Rice, and a correspondingly poor one by Bennie Strickland of Baylor gave the local school a break which was well taken advantage of.

Strickland, standing on his own goal line, punted the oval outside on his own 25 yard line, from which place Underwood passed to Smiley who was downed on the Baylor 13 yard line. The pass was for 12 yards. Murray, who was playing on an infected leg, then scampered through the Bear forward defense for 12 yards, placing the ball on the one yard line. He then plunged the remaining distance for the coveted touchdown. Herting kicked goal.

Tied In Final.

Baylor knotted the tally in the fourth quarter, which was a beautiful pass for 13 yards from Strickland fell into the outstretched arms of Sam Coates who was waiting behind the Owl goal line. A poor punt by the Rice captain gave the Bears the ball on the Owl 30 yard line, from which place the ball was worked down the field to the point from which the scoring pass was made. Morris added the extra point and tied the score.

Fighting with conservative abandon the Instituters began a march down the field in the closing minutes of play which all but resulted in a score which would have won the game. Winston, end, figured prominently in this march when he caught a pass from Underwood, netting a gain of 35 yards. The game ended just as Baylor had made one play after getting the ball at the end of the Owl's last onslaught.

Zuppke Still For Mr. Red Grange

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Robert Zuppke, University of Illinois football coach, in a statement of his attitude on the entrance of Harold Grange into professional football, denied that he said that he did not want any more $100,000 football players like Grange in his address at the Illini football banquet.

"I never said that I did not want any more $100,000 players like Grange," the statement says. "In a jocular manner I said that if I ever had any more players who make $100,000 runs I would like to get in on it. This was a joke, of course. Whatever I said to Grange was to give him wholesome advice. I have only the sincerest wishes for his success and happiness.

"I never have criticised Grange's entrance into professional football, but I have felt that no matter how alluring offers were made to him in the long run perhaps he would be better off financially if he stayed out of professionel football and capitalized his fame in some other manner.

"But I have repeatedly said that it was Grange's own business what he did in life I did regret that he dropped out of the university immediately after the football season because our universities do not exist to train football players and this gave the foes of intercollegiate athletics something to attack."

IGNORES KLAN RUMPUS.

British Columbia Legislature Washes Hands of Trouble.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The British Columbia legislature has washed its hands of an impending ku klux klan controversy.

Putting an end to debate on a resolution which asked federal authorities to bar the klan from Canada, the house by a vote of 24 to 20 yesterday killed the resolution by an amendment.

Cotton is the most rapidly developing as well as the most valuable of East African products and is entirely grown on small garden plots.

Pittsburgh Pours It On Penn State

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Riding roughshod over the Penn State college eleven this afternoon the University of Pittsburgh gridders closed their 1925 season with a dazzling 23 to 7 victory. Their record for the year shows only one defeat. State excelled in only one department—forward passing.

Pitt with Big Andy Gustafson in the star role started the scoring early. A patch of mud, 30 yards from the State goal line, aided Pitt to make its first touchdown in the opening period. Roepke, in position for a punt, slipped in the mire, the ball striking him in the face. Salata, a Pittsburgh guard, scooped it up and ran 25 yards for the score. Gustafson added the point. A moment later, Pittsburgh halfback got around the State right end for sixty yards and Gustafson booted a 33 yard field goal.

COLORADO AGGIES WIN

FORT COLLINS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Colorado Aggies today won the Rocky Mountain conference championship by defeating Wyoming university 40 to 0 while the Utah university team lost to the Utah Aggies at Salt Lake City. The Aggies piled up most of their score in the first half when Wyoming seemed dazzled by their swift offensive.

SAINTS SLAM TEACHERS FOR 46-6 VICTORY

AUSTIN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Flashing a brilliant overhead game, mixed with a driving line attack, Jack Meagher's St. Edwards' university eleven ran away with the Sam Houston Teachers college for a 46 to 6 victory today at the University of Texas Memorial stadium.

Young Sammy Dyer, freshman brother of Eddie Dyer, was on the throwing end of the Saints' aerial attack, with Marvin Durrenberger doing most of the receiving. Chinski, Saint quarterback, also comes in for some of the glory of the passing game. It was his toss to Durrenberger, form his 12 yard line over the goal that gave the Saints their first touchdown. He then kicked goal, making the score 7 to 0.

Almost the same play at the beginning of the second half netted another touchdown, this time Dyer passing to Durrenberger. But before this play, late in the first quarter, Dyer returned a kick-off fo 65 yards just before the quarter ended. Several plays later he carried the ball over for the Saints' second touchdwn.

Mayfield, Smith and Lockey played the best game for the Teachers, uncorking an air attack late in the game that brought a touchdown after Meagher had run in a large number of substitutes. Linn, substitute for the Teachers, snatched the pass that enabled the Teachers to score shortly before the final whistle.

HOUSTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Fighting a battle that was a treat to witness, and exhibiting the best form the team has shown so far this season, the Rice Institute Owls fought the Baylor Bears to a standstill and achieved a 7-7 tie in the annual Turkey day meeting of the two football clubs. The contest was watched by some 6,000 people on Rice Field.

MUSTANGS GET ON DRAKE FOR 12-8 SETBACK

DALLAS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Southern Methodist University Mustangs upheld the prestige of the Southwestern conference by smothering the Drake University Bulldogs from Des Moines, Iowa, 21 to 8, in a fast gridiron engagement that ended the season for both clubs. It was the most spectacular intersectional clash of the season at Fair Park stadium. The Crimson Mustang horde deluged the air with passes. The Bulldogs were bewildered by the crimson thunderbolt. Ted Sloane, brilliant Drake end, threw himself into the maelstrom in a supreme effort to stem the tide, but the Mustangs swept over the blue invaders as though they were so much chaff.

Gerald Mann, quarterback, and Ox Kay starred for the Mustangs. Drake scored first, a few minutes after the first period opened, but the Mustangs struck back with a savage thrust. For eight minutes of the first period the Bulldogs outplayed S. M. U., and for the remainder of the afternoon the Mustangs were in control. Drake's other score was on a safety.

The Mustangs, scoreless in the first period, had a string of counter with goal kicks during the last three periods.

McCallum's Club Ties Burk Elks

Brown McCallum's Wichita Falls All-Stars battled the Burkburnett Elks eleven to a scoreless tie Thursday afternoon on the Spudder gridiron.

The contest was a stiffly fought affair throughout, and a number of pretty plays were enacted by the veteran gridsters. Both teams were composed of former university and high school stars.

Brown McCallum, playin gin the Wichita Falls line, was the outstanding performer of the engagement.

The Wichita Falls Black Coyotes defeated the Gainesville Black Terrors in a preliminary encounter, 25 to 0.

B. Y. P. U. Meeting Convenes in Waco

WACO, Texas, Nov. 26.—Approximately 3,000 young people from every portion of the state, including both delegates and visitors, assembled here this morning for the opening session of the State B. Y. P. U. convention.

Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president of the Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth, sounded the keynote of the convention in an address on "Utilizing your youth in bringing souls to Christ." President Robert Jolly of Houston called the convention to order. Singing was led by Paul Harper of Corsicana.

COL. MITCHELL'S TRIAL DRAWING NEAR AN END

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The army court martial trying Col. William Mitchell for publicity assailing war and navy air service management turned late today into its final stretch, timing the movement precisely with the passing of the fourth week of its existence.

Trinity Smacks Eagles, 16 to 6

HOUSTON, Nov. 26. (AP)—Trinity University defeated North Texas State Teachers college Eagles here this afternoon, 16 to 6. The first half was scoreless, but in the last part of the third quarter Lowe made a 48 yard run for a touchdown that failed to kick goal for point. After a series of line plunges Whitaker made another touchdown for Trinity and Lowe kicked goal, making the score 16 to 0, for the Tigers.

During the last few minutes of play the Eagles started an aerial attack that resulted in carrying the ball to the Trinity line and Sportsman went over for a counter. An effort to kick goal failed.

PENNSYLVANIA NIPS CORNELL BY 7-0 COUNT

Rogers Grabs Fumble And Runs 45 Yards To Touchdown

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Before a crowd of 60,000, the greatest that ever witnessed their annual holiday classic, Pennsylvania conquered Cornell today, 7 to 0, in a spectacular battle.

The Quakers, out rushed nearly two to one and outplayed for the greater part of the game won by capitalizing the only "break" in their favor, a fumble by Tilton, Cornell halfback, in the final period, which Charley Rogers, fleet Pennsylvania ball carrier, plucked out of the scrimmage and converted into the only touchdown of the game, with a 45-yard dash.

This sudden turn of fortune decided the game but Pennsylvania's stonewall defense within its own ten-yard line saved it for the big red machine, constantly threatening, was checked three times inside that mark, losing the ball on downs each time with a touchdown seeming in their grasp. Cornell gained almost twice as many yards as Pennsylvania, 275 to 147 and registered 15 first downs to nine for the Quakers, but in the final analysis it was the lack of decisive punch when within sight of Pennsylvania's goal line that cost the Ithicans a triumph.

Two of Cornell's big drives were stopped in the final quarter after Rogers scored for Pennsylvania. A sustained march of 63 yards in which off tackle smashes were mixed with several short passes came to naught, on the five-yard mark when Pennsylvania held for downs. Shartly afterwards another Cornell attack in which two passes gained 31 yards, was halted on the eight-yard line and the last big opportunity of the Ithicans was gone.

Syracuse Steps On Columbia, 16-5

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Syracuse scored its fourth victory over Columbia 16 to 5, at the Polo Grounds today in the fifth annual contest between the two institutions.

The Orange offensive, aided by a dry field, scored two touchdowns and a field goal. Columbia scored its five points on a field goal and a Syracuse safety.

Brilliant broken field running by Harlan Carr and Captain Foley while the excellent judgment displayed in the use of the air game gave the Orange its two touchdowns. Columbia, using a deceptive air attack, threatened the Syracuse goal twice but was unable to muster the power to penetrate the line near the goal and kicked a field goal on one occasion and lost the ball on downs on the other.

Frisco Lang Is Making Money on Dry Law Ruling

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Examiner says it has been reported to the authorities that a gang of men representing themselves as revenue and prohibition agents has been making a systematic canvass of households taking advantage of the home made wine clause in revenue regulations and has been collecting the government tax of 16 cents a gallon on home made wine in excess of 200 gallons.

The gang was reported to have collected thousands of dollars in San Francisco and Marine counties, the newspaper says, after measuring the wine and demanding immediate cash settlement under threat of arrest of the wine maker and confiscation of his products.
