Big Spring ISD would gain with compromise plan

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — More than $10 million would be poured into the Big Spring Independent School District in the next five years if a recent compromise state school refinancing plan is passed. It would require a 1.4-cent sales tax increase plus added "sin" taxes.

Coahoma ISD would also get increased funds if the $4 billion to $6.2 billion plan is voted into law by legislators when they go into a fourth special session Monday at 2 p.m., said Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring.

Rich school districts like Forsan ISD and the larger Dallas ISD and Houston ISD would not see any additional funds but would not lose any either.

The compromise, reached Friday by Gov. Bill Clements and legislative leaders, follows efforts since Feb. 27 to comply with a Texas Supreme Court order to revamp the school finance system, ruled in October to be unfair to poorer school districts.

With two gubernatorial vetoes of bills requiring 1/2-cent sales tax increases, legislators already missed a court-set deadline of May 1 and an extended deadline of June 1 to pass a bill.

As a result, a court-appointed special master unveiled an alternative "Robin Hood" plan on Fri-

Gorbachev, Bush differ on Germany

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

CAMP DAVID, Md. — President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev wrestled over differences on Germany in a final full day of summitry at this mountain hideaway Saturday. Despite disagreements, Bush said, "I see this glass not half empty but half full — and more."

Gorbachev described the talks as instructive but said there were "real problems" the leaders would not "turn a blind eye to."

The leaders met in the relaxed setting of this rustic presidential retreat, accompanied by Barbara Bush and Raisa Gorbachev. The two presidents stripped off their coats and ties for discussions that led Gorbachev to conclude, "It's been a big day."

On a sunny spring day, the Gorbachevs also strolled the paths lacing this sprawling compound and pitched horseshoes. Bush, an aficionado, said Gorbachev had never played horseshoes and yet "literally threw a ringer the first time."

The day-long session of informal talks all but ended the four-day summit. The last act was to be a wrapup news conference Sunday, and then Gorbachev was heading for stops in Minneapolis and San Francisco.

Festival draws bigger crowd

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — This year's Heart of the City Festival drew an estimated 5,000-6,000 people to downtown Big Spring Saturday, an organizer said.

The 6-year-old event turned out to be bigger than last year, said Beverly Franklin, downtown coordinator for Big Spring Main Street Inc.

"We've had bigger crowds, we've got more booths," she said.

There were 69 booths set up near the courthouse for the 10 a.m. to midnight festival, which is designed to showcase the downtown area and raise funds for its improvement, Franklin said. Last year there were about 60 booths.

She estimated this year's event drew about 1,000 to 1,500 people from out of town. "That's plus dollars for Big Spring," she said.

The attractions included five different musical performances ranging from jazz to country music, and booths featuring varied events, from instant computer T-shirts, dunk-a-cop and face painting. There was even a pet-the-donkey — or goat, sheep, rabbit, or calf — booth.

As people milled and lounged in the shade of trees and tarps eating and drinking, a band played or an auctioneer rattled off bids for an assortment of items ranging from jewelry to a tool box. Meanwhile the sun shone on, with higher than 90 degree temperatures under a brilliant, clear sky.

Of course, there was food, all the normal stuff like dogs, burgers, barbecue, tacos, sno-cones and cotton candy. The harder-to-please could also find things like Kurlis Fries and burritos de tripas.

Day care would help unwed mothers

BIG SPRING — Teen-age mother Chrissie Cochran decided to drop out of high school when caring for her son Phillip Matthew, born in December, made attending school difficult to arrange. If the high school receives funding it is seeking from a vocational grant, mothers like Cochran may be able to keep their kids in day care and go to school.

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Staff Writer

Big Spring High School teacher Suzy Combs said most of her students could have been better served if a day care center was made available for their children. A school administrator said there may be more help on the way for teen-aged parents.

Combs, a veteran teacher in the school district, was the home-bound teacher this year. It was her first year in the program, which offers an educational alternative for students who are medically excused from attending school for four to six weeks.

Out of 12 students she taught in their homes this year, 10 were pregnant or had recently had a baby, Combs said. The girls' circumstances made it difficult to fulfill her main goal — keeping them caught up with school work until they could go back to regular classes.

Several found it so difficult to stay on top of studies and a newborn baby that they dropped out, Combs said.

Sixteen-year-old Chrissie Cochran of Big Spring is one of those. When she had her baby in December, it changed every aspect of her life, she said.

A crib, baby pictures, clothes and toys took over all available space in her room in the family home. The high school sophomore had to learn quickly how to handle feeding, changing and bathing a baby. Now, Cochran said, she has to learn how to be a mother.

Cochran was one of Combs' students for about four months this year. She dropped out a few weeks before the end of school when taking care of a baby became more work than she had expected, and she fell behind in her studies, she said.

"A baby is like having a 24-hour-a-day job. I have to watch him all the time unless he's sleeping," Cochran said. "Then I have time to myself. I want to get back in school but I don't know if I'll be able to."

The issue of teen pregnancy was raised by the Big Spring High School newspaper, The Corral, in January of this year. The article by Theresa Ray chronicled the changes in the lives of young parents Connie Solley-Booth and Donny Booth, a sophomore and senior.

The young married couple's advice to other teen-age parents included the importance of staying in school, and an awareness of the responsibility that comes with having a child. The article stated that the two moved in with Donny's brother, who helps out when work, school and the baby become difficult to manage.

Cochran, like many other young mothers, faces the fears and trials of parenthood unmarried and living with her family. Going to high school would mean she had to leave five-month-old Phillip Matthew with a babysitter, a prospect she said is "a little scary."

"I don't want to leave him with just anybody. I would want to be sure that he was okay if I was going to school all day."

Cochran said the ideal solution would be a day care center at the high school. Between classes, she and other teen-age mothers could visit their babies, possibly even learn something about caring for them. Though such a program seems improbable, an alternative plan is in the works now.

Court allows damages for fetal death

HOUSTON (AP) — A state appellate court has reversed a lower court's decision and ruled that a couple may collect damages for the death of an unborn fetus in a decision seen as important for defining rights of unborn children.

The case was watched closely by pro- and anti-abortionists, but appellate judges said their decision has nothing to do with defining when life begins.

In the decision Thursday, the 9th Court of Appeals ruled that an unborn child who died after his mother was involved in a traffic accident near Conroe in 1983 was a person and that his parents are due damages under the state's wrongful deaths act.

The judges said barring damages for the death of unborn but viable fetuses violated the Texas Constitution's guarantee of equal access to the justice system.

South Texas College of Law Associate Dean T. Gerald Treece, who represented the parents in the appeal, said the ruling is important because it helps establish the rights of unborn children. He said it is consistent with the policy in 38 other states.

The judges cautioned against reading too much into the ruling.

"We do not attempt in any manner in this opinion to determine or pronounce when life begins," the court ruled. "That question is not before us; we do not reach it. Nothing in this opinion is to be construed as being pro-abortion, pro-choice or pro-life. None of those thorny issues are before us."

In the original case, a Montgomery County district judge ruled that Alice Foxworth Langford and Mark Edward Langford Sr. could not recover damages from the driver of another vehicle from the child's death.

Mrs. Langford, 30, and her son, Mark Langford Jr., 7, were injured in a head-on collision near Conroe in 1983 with a car driven by Terry Lee Blackman of Conroe.

Tornado kills two, injures 19 others

By The Associated Press

Residents of two West Texas towns tried to bring life back to normal Saturday following the area's first tornado on record, a twister that killed two motorists and injured 19 others as it churned across ranchland and a highway, picking up cars and trucks and leaving "dead animals everywhere."

The tornado that swept across Farm Road 305 between Iraan and McCamey late Friday damaged 20 homes, destroyed a farm co-op building and knocked over 85 oil field pump jacks, said Laureen Chernow, a spokesman for the Texas Division of Emergency Management.

The twister caused car accidents that killed two people and damaged nearby homes and businesses over a 20-mile-long, 3-mile-wide stretch between the two towns.

Many of the injured were motorists hurt in nine car accidents. The injured included two state troopers cut by flying glass when the twister picked up their patrol car and spun it around, disintegrating its windows on the road 230 miles northwest of San Antonio.

Mike Cox, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, on Saturday identified the two killed as Robert Musick, 70, of Canyon Lake, and Pat Dingler, of Del Rio. Cox said he did not know Dingler's age.

Both men were driving pickups on 305. Both were pronounced dead at the scene, Cox said.

Jimmy McClure, McCamey municipal judge, said about 12 families remained out of their homes Saturday and were staying with relatives or friends, or at a temporary shelter set up by the First United Methodist Church.

He said local residents had donated restaurant meals, hotels, clothing and jugs of water to workers and tornado victims, and the "all homes were opened up to people that needed it."

"Everybody's been taken care of as far as food and shelter," he said, adding that the Red Cross and

Salvation Army joined in the relief.

Several cattle, sheep, horses and other animals perished from the twister, McClure said. He said he didn't have a figure, but that the number was high because the twister struck in a ranching and farming area.

"They found a lot of them with broken or shattered legs, so they had to take care of that. It was really bad for the area," he said. "All I know is people just saw them everywhere — there were dead animals everywhere."

Ms. Chernow said she also had reports of dead livestock, but no count.

The city of McCamey rationed water because of damage done to the city water pump system. Laundromats closed their doors voluntarily, and hospitals were sending their laundry to Odessa, more than 50 miles away.

Iraan, a community of 1,200, is located in northern Pecos County. McCamey is in southern Upton County and has about 2,400 residents.

Seven counties in Northeast Texas were under a tornado watch late Saturday afternoon. The National Weather Service reported a line of thunderstorms was moving toward the region from Southeast Oklahoma, bringing possible heavy rains, strong gusty surface winds, dangerous lightning and perhaps some large hail.

The tornado watch extended from extreme Northeast Texas over much of Arkansas and across a small part of Northwest and North Central Louisiana.

Study: Quality lags at VA hospitals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Quality standards at VA medical centers generally lagged behind those of other hospitals in a survey made by a national accrediting group, officials confirmed Saturday.

Veterans Affairs Department officials said Saturday they were concerned about the results of the survey by the group that accredits most of the nation's hospitals and will move quickly to make changes where problems can be remedied.

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organizations, based in Oakbrook Terrace, Ill., studied 116 of the 172 VA centers that provide medical care to 3.5 million veterans annually.

It found the centers at least 20 percent more likely than other hospitals to fall below quality standards in the areas of emergency services, special care services, surgery and anesthesia services, surgical case review, alcohol and drug treatment planning, and fire safety. It did not name any centers.

On a system with a maximum score of 100 the average for the veterans centers was 69.8 while that of the average of 5,182 other hospitals was 77. Hospitals are surveyed every three years for accreditation purposes.

Blue Cross insists on party

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — What seemed like a good idea to Genevieve McLaughlin — donating the $1,200 her retirement party would cost to charity — failed to go over with a committee appointed by her employer, Independence Blue Cross.

Spokesman Dick Mendenhall announced the panel's decision Friday, saying the non-profit health insurance company would not donate the money but will continue to pick up the tab for retirement lunches at a fancy hotel for employees of a decade or more.

The $1,200 lunches are complete with flowers, photographs and a $100 gift certificate. The guest of honor can invite up to 35 co-workers, and a handful of managers attend.

Ms. McLaughlin thought a better use for the money would be donations to her favorite charities: St. John's Hospice and her grandson's Little League team.

Rex Harrison dead at 82

REX HARRISON

NEW YORK (AP) — Sir Rex Harrison, the English actor whose charm graced plays and films for half a century and made him the quintessential Henry Higgins in the musical "My Fair Lady," died today at age 82.

Attorney Harold Schiff said the actor died of pancreatic cancer in his sleep about 4:45 a.m. at his Manhattan residence.

Knighted only last summer and still at work on Broadway three weeks before his death, Harrison was hailed as one of the most gifted comedians of his time. "He's the best light comedy actor in the world," Noel Coward once said, "next to me."

Harrison created the role of Henry Higgins in the Broadway premiere of "My Fair Lady" in 1956, invented a style of half-talking, half-singing called "soft singing" and won a Tony award as best actor. He won an Academy Award for the same role in the 1964 film version.

Mothballed fleet

FORT EUSTIS, Va. — Rusting ships, part of the 331-ship National Defense Reserve Fleet, sit at anchor on the James River near Norfolk, Va., last week. A congressional hearing, scheduled for June 4, will determine if continuing to save the fleet is a waste of taxpayers' money.

Soviets produce few goods the U.S. wants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S.-Soviet trade agreement offers the potential of billions of dollars in economic benefits for both countries, but trade experts said Saturday that the Soviets now produce precious little that interests Americans.

The exceptions are well known — vodka, caviar and luxury furs — and for those items prices are expected to drop. That will give American consumers their very own perestroika dividend, once Congress gets around to ratifying the pact and a companion measure granting the Soviets most-favored-nation trade status.

For now, trade analysts see the agreement as a badly needed public relations boost for Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, bestowing on him the economic prize he had most sought from his summit with President Bush.

Gorbachev wanted the accord to demonstrate that, despite his problems at home, he still could negotiate economic concessions from the West.

In some respects, Gorbachev's U.S. trip could be viewed as an extended trade mission. His stops from Washington to Minnesota and California were planned to afford him a chance to court potential

U.S. business investors.

But analysts said daunting problems remain before either the number of U.S. companies doing business in the Soviet Union or the modest U.S.-Soviet trade increases to any great extent.

"If you look at the structure of their imports, they really don't have a lot of things that we want to buy," said Donald Bowles, an expert on the Soviet economy at American University.

"They are still heavily dependent on raw materials exports," Bowles said. "They are only able to sell manufactured goods in the Third World, which is willing to settle for less quality."

The Soviet Union is one of the few countries with which the United States, beset with its own trade problems, is running a trade surplus. Last year, it amounted to $3.57 billion. The United States exported $4.27 billion worth of goods, primarily grain, to the Soviet Union. That was offset by a small $703 million in Soviet sales here.

Duties on Soviet products are as much as 10 times higher than imports from other countries.

With the most-favored-nation tariffs, the price of a bottle of vodka is expected to drop by about $1.10.

Party supporters protest freeze

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Thousands of supporters of the old Communist Party demonstrated in the East German capital Saturday to protest the government's decision to take control of party assets.

The peaceful protest in the city center drew about 10,000 people, the government news agency ADN said.

The group was protesting Thursday's decision by Parliament to freeze the party's vast holdings pending investigation of their value and ownership.

The former Communists amassed perhaps billions of dollars in houses, businesses and property during four decades in power. The regime was ousted in October, but its members and affiliated organizations still have vast holdings.

Lawmaker Gregor Gysi — leader of the former Communist faction that holds 66 seats in the 400-member, democratically elected Parliament — has accused the government of seeking to eliminate his party by seizing its assets.

Saudi Arabia welcomes pilgrims

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The government said Saturday that Iranians are welcome to take part in this year's Islamic pilgrimage to Mecca but they would not be allowed to demonstrate.

Saudi Arabia broke off diplomatic ties with Iran in April 1988 after Iranian pilgrims clashed with this kingdom's police during the preceding year's pilgrimage. The battles killed 402 people, mostly Iranians.

The Iranians boycotted the 1988 and 1989 pilgrimages, and some Iranian officials have said they were boycotting the 1990 season. Iran has also claimed Saudi officials were preventing Iranians from taking part this year.

However, Saudi Arabian authorities stressed Saturday they are welcoming Iranians to this year's pilgrimage, known as the hajj.

The late Iranian spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, accused the Saudi Arabians of being unfit as keepers of Islam's holy sites. About 2 million Muslims from around the world gather for the annual rites that culminate this year in early July.

Mandela begins world tour

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, hospitalized for the removal of a benign cyst, said today he felt fine, and prepared for a six-week tour of Europe, the United States and Africa.

Mandela, 71, looking tired after seven days at Johannesburg's Park Lane Clinic, held a brief news conference with his surgeon to discuss the removal of a non-malignant cyst related to his bladder.

He begins his tour of African, European and American nations on Monday. The trip includes stops in the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Canada, Ireland, Italy, Botswana, Ethiopia, Uganda, Kenya and Mozambique.

Mandela said he would use the trip to thank the international community for helping secure his release in February after 27 years in prison for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the government. His release came under political reforms implemented by President F.W. de Klerk.

For 1990 grads — a changing world

Graduates, unite. Your potential is limited only by the boundaries you allow to slow your progress.

Reading the lists of graduates this week from across Crossroads Country, one can almost become dizzied as the names go whizzing by. Each one, however, represents determined parents willing to dream, sacrifice and help another youth develop into a maturing young adult. The graduates are only beginning to realize how vast his or her potential can be.

And what type of world do these graduates face as they leave the relative safety of high school classrooms and continue on the next step of life's path?

A changing world, to be sure.

It's hard to imagine just how different things are for these graduates compared to those of 20 years ago — or even a decade ago. Ponder, for a moment, how different a world we face compared to even 12 months ago — when the peaceful efforts for democracy in China turned ugly; when the democratic ideal swept through Eastern Europe to an extent hardly anyone could fathom.

It leaves this world in a state of change we've not seen in decades, with promise for more change and more unsettling times. What a time for beginning your adult life!

And changes are not limited to the world-wide level alone; there are changes afoot in Crossroads Country, as people proceed with their lives while working to improve their world. Attitudes in Big Spring — typified by the success of the sales tax vote to improve this community's economic stature — are challenged. There is an excitement in the air as people realize the opportunities that exist to help shape their own destiny.

These 1990 graduates are evidence of the potential for this world, as well as potential beneficiaries of the efforts to strengthen the position of West Texas as a player in the future of this state.

So, a salute to all the grads of 1990; let us look forward to the changes you help create and the success of those efforts. Bring on the future!

Limit the appeals

Prisoners on Death Row should not be executed if any reasonable doubt remains as to their guilt. But that principle has been stretched to the breaking point by the protracted death-penalty appeal system in this country. The U.S. Senate should stick by its vote to limit such appeals — a step urged by Chief Justice William Rehnquist — and the House should concur.

In the average death-penalty case, there's a lag of seven to eight years between sentencing and execution — a form of torture for the victims' families, the public and perhaps even the condemned. A key reason for the delays is abuse of a legal procedure known as habeas corpus, meant to protect prisoners from arbitrary punishment.

In a habeas corpus petition, a prisoner challenges the constitutionality of the conviction or the sentence. The law that permits federal courts to hear these petitions from state prison inmates sets no limit on the number of habeas corpus petitions that each inmate can file, or on the filing period.

Activist lawyers admit to papering courthouse walls with habeas corpus petitions in hopes of bogging down the system. Appeals head first to the state courts, then through the federal system, then down and back in a seemingly endless process in which legal issue after issue, genuine or fanciful, is raised.

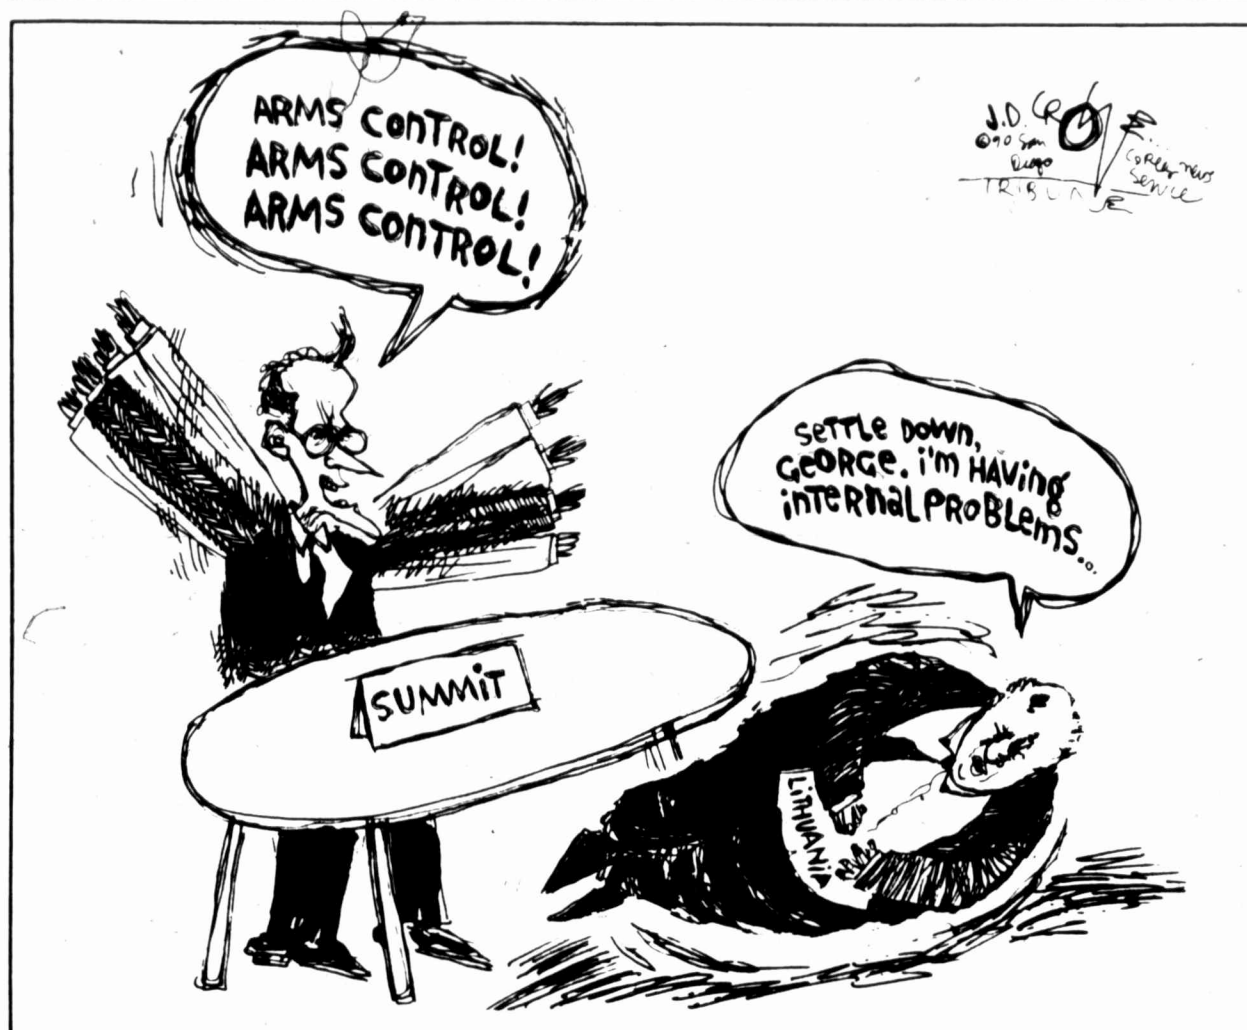

Chief Justice Rehnquist wants to reform the process. Last year, he appointed a panel of judges headed by ex-Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell that called for limiting the appeals. In their place would be two rounds of review, one each in the state and federal courts, provided that the defendants are represented by competent lawyers.

The proposed reforms — the impetus for an amendment last week to an omnibus anti-crime bill now before the Senate — would include important protections for defendants. For example, the federal limit of one habeas corpus petition would apply only in states that agree to provide free legal counsel for inmates in state habeas corpus petitions.

Moreover, successive petitions would be permitted if there were reason to doubt that an inmate was guilty. Nevertheless, Rehnquist was denounced by some persons in the justice system and the media when he urged approval of appeals-limiting legislation as favoring an "execution express."

Many who oppose limiting death-penalty appeals should be more candid about their primary objection, which is to the death penalty itself. They are thus at odds with a large majority of Americans who see it as justified and necessary punishment. The Rehnquist-Powell reforms are sorely needed.

Holiday flags show recognition, pride for sacrifices

To the editor:

Truett and I wish to express our appreciation and gratitude to the persons or organization who were responsible for the placing of the American flags on Gregg Street on May 28, Memorial Day.

This showed recognition and pride for the sacrifices made in all wars by the sons and daughters who fought for this flag to keep flying. We must never forget that there is no greater sacrifice than to lay down one's life for others.

The flags on the graves of both cemeteries, the Avenue of Flags at the Veterans Administration Medical Center, and the Gregg Street flags surely emphasized the tribute and pride we, as Big Spring citizens, have for those who fought and died for our country.

We want to express our gratitude to Ret. Col. Sonny Choate for his talk on Memorial Day Sunday, May 27. It was very timely to memorialize those whose names are listed on the Wall Memorial on the courthouse lawn.

As Truett and I reminisced of the 22 years since Coy's death, we could not help but wonder what Coy would say if he could come back today and see the display of flags — as well as the way some people show disrespect for it. He fought and gave his life for his country so that all men might enjoy a freedom that he believed was right.

'Robin Hood' poor phrase

By JESSE TREVINO

Too often, the press, for lack of better judgment, picks up and uses simple but erroneous phrases to describe and report events. Splattered across the newspapers and news reports of this state, the term "Robin Hood" is being used misleadingly to describe the proposed education finance plans, which are the subject of so much controversy in Austin today.

Most of the plans would redistribute state aid from property-rich school districts to property-poor districts. But in no way do the plans give money to districts individuals that do not have a right to it.

To infer that wealthier school districts are losing something that did not constitutionally belong to them in the first place is being disingenuous or betrays a superficial comprehension of last October's unanimous Supreme Court public school finance decision. In its very essence, the decision holds that the state's education system is a statewide system supported by a state education fund being unequally distributed.

To continue to use this phrase is incorrect. It also does disservice to the individuals who won their right to equal state aid for their schools. Six years ago, the plaintiffs in the Edgewood vs. Kirby lawsuit complained to the news media that we not use the phrase to describe their case.

They pointed out, correctly, that their lawsuit was not asking for money from the rich school districts. They believed the available education fund was a pool of monies all Texans pay for the schooling of all students in Texas.

But this year, when the special master appointed by State District Judge F. Scott McCown said he might even consider taking local property taxes from wealthy districts to give to the poor ones in a plan to equalize funding, the phrase Robin Hood legitimately cropped up and was used appropriately to define the master's thoughts.

In a practice repeated all too often in print and television newsrooms, a simple phrase became stock vocabulary in reporting or discussing the education finance case. That in turn gives rise to misinformed public debate on the issue and triggers emotional reactions from uninformed voters.

Both sectors of the industry try to avoid this kind of simplistic jargon, but are not always successful. In this case, the term Robin Hood has stuck like chewing gum on a shoe: pick at it all you want, you'll never get it all off.

Users of the term either do not understand the concept of the principles of the Supreme Court decision or they seek to attach a pejorative word to the case being pleaded by the poor districts. The use of the phrase implies the poor are seeking welfare for their schools.

Minority groups and the Anglo, rural poor districts that won the case object mightily to this phrase. They should. The $555-million plan most recently under consideration, in fact, would have been supported by a proposed increase in the state sales tax by all the citizens. The proceeds of that tax hike would have gone to expand the available state fund made up by the tax contributions of all the state's citizens.

Another stumbling block in the jargon surrounding Edgewood that often gets misconstrued and misunderstood involves the word "efficiency." Much has been made, by those who would rather not see the system changed, of the court's use of the word.

They suggest the Supreme Court decision simply directs the state to make its state's public school finance system "efficient." By doing so, the system would become constitutional. By this reasoning, they defend making the state's funds equally accessible — but to only 95 percent of the state's students.

This approach risks another rebuke from the Supreme Court, as it would then be acceptable to create an efficient but bad system with the same inequitable results cropping up over time.

State Sen. Hector Uribe of Brownsville believes that even a plan that allows 95 percent of all of the state's students to have equal access to funds is unconstitutional. He, with State Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, led the fight to push the share of students' with equal access from the original 82 to 95 percent.

But Uribe agrees correctly that equity among 100 percent of the students — not some bland concept addressing "efficiency" — is the crux of the matter.

The idea that as much as 18 or as few as 5 percent of the state's students could somehow remain outside a public school finance system seems contradictory to the state's constitution and does violence to the Supreme Court's decision.

So does the use of the phrase Robin Hood to describe attempts to make unconstitutional practices constitutional.

Truth? What a concept

By ROBERT WERNSMAN

Thank goodness for creative people.

Those of us who are of a simpler bent might never have known the joys of pet rocks had it not been for the creative genius of mankind; likewise, could our lives have been full and complete had we never known the delights of hula hoops?

Of course, folks with such talents have grown up some now, and are advancing to computer technology, facsimile machines, and now something really valuable, called Phoney Excuses.

Phoney Excuses? That's right. Been plagued by that late-night telephone caller who wouldn't let you go? Somebody calls you at your office and you can't shake them? Have a prying parent who calls you day and night and won't allow you your space?

Phoney Excuses sounds like it may be just your answer.

This hand-held device, I'm told, has five buttons, one for almost any occasion. Here's how it works: The "Static" button creates some background noise you claim a bad connection, promise to call later and hang up. The "Nasal Secretary" button produces the voice of a very nasal-sounding woman saying "you have a call on line four." Of course, you claim to be expecting that call, promise to call later and hang up.

The "Busy Office" emits the sounds of a flurry of activity and telephones ringing, causing a need for you to — you guessed it — promise to call later and hang up. There's also a "Doorbell" button (of course, you must answer the door, so you promise to call later and hang up) and, finally, the "Garage" button that issues noise such as a service station repair area creates. "They're fixing my car and have to send out for parts. I've got to take care of this." So, you promise to call later and hang up.

Incredible, isn't it, that you've gotten this far in life without having had such a device on your side before. How have you made it to this point without such electronic wizardry?

It might make you wonder in the future, whenever you hear such sounds on someone else's phone, whether they really have to run or they're just pulling your leg. But nobody you call would ever stoop so low, would they?

So, let's suppose you go ahead and get one of these creative escape tools, and you find yourself without a problem when it comes to leaving a dreary telephone conversation behind. What happens when you have battery failure and you're faced with the need to deal with the situation unarmed?

Will you be capable of handling the truth and simply telling a caller that now is not the best time for this conversation? And, if so, why not avoid all this foolishness and just tell them the truth in the first place? It might seem pretty radical at first, but it isn't all that bad — and you needn't worry about the batteries wearing out.

A Washington, D.C. gent got his name in the news recently, as he was apparently caught helping himself to a bit of copper.

An acquaintance tells me that it's frightening how bold copper thieves are these days, stepping forward in the dead of night and cutting away, inches or less from danger.

For Wendell Edmondson, 36, such a temptation may never seem too strong again.

Believed to be scavenging for copper, he was in critical condition last week after suffering electrical burns at an Amtrak substation. Edmondson dangled upside down for several hours as rescuers waited to make sure the power was off.

It probably didn't mean much to him, considering the circumstances, but he had the further indignation of dangling 15 feet off the ground naked, his clothing apparently burned off by his contact with high voltage.

How much did you say that scavenged copper was worth? Not enough.

A field day

messages will be created on the last activity day. Arts and crafts, movies and a coloring contest will be part of the activities, too.

Certificates, prizes, a costume contest and refreshments will be featured at the Closing Party July 19. Only those who have completed 10 books during the six weeks program will be eligible to attend. Children who read books over 100 pages will be given credit for reading two books, over 200 pages, three books, etc.

There is a separate Read-To-Me Club for younger children who can read on their own or who are read to. The theme for the younger children is "Make Friends With Books." Read-To-Me Club members are invited to attend the Wednesday morning Storytime from 10 to 10:45 when stories, movies and arts and crafts will be featured. There will be a Closing Party held for the Club July 18 when certificates and prizes will be awarded.

The Friends of the Library and local merchants have provided a lot of support to make the Summer Reading Program more fun and interesting for the children. They include: McDonald's, The Rodeo Association, Gale's Cakes & Cookies, Aladdin's Castle, the YMCA, the Ritz Cinema Theaters and Athletic Supply of Big Spring.

Frog fails to turn into a princess

CANTON (AP) — Band director Randy Veazey isn't eager to be "honored" again by students at Canton Junior High School.

Veazey won a popularity contest sponsored by the school's cheerleaders as a fund-raiser.

The "honor" accorded Veazey was that he got to kiss a frog at an assembly on the last day of school Thursday.

But his "date" died before the assembly was held.

"We had a live frog all ready Thursday morning, but evidently the humidity got to it," said Dracy Vincent, faculty sponsor for the cheerleaders.

So they substituted a pickled frog from the school's biology lab.

Veazey agreed to go through with the kiss.

"It tasted like formaldehyde. I didn't linger, but I've kissed worse," said Veazey, who is single.

It could have been worse for Veazey. Last year's contest winner got to kiss a pig.

Beach debris Texas-sized problem

AUSTIN (AP) — There's more plastic trash on Texas beaches than on any others in the United States, according to a new report.

Texas, for instance, leads the nation in the number of "six-pack" rings and plastic boating trash found on the coastline.

The state also ranks highest in international garbage that washes up from the world's shipping fleet, according to a study by the Center for Marine Conservation. The report was released Thursday.

The non-profit center released a 310-page report, its second, based on information compiled from 65,000 volunteers who picked up debris on the nation's beaches during one three-hour period.

They counted 35,090 six-pack rings. Texas accounted for almost a third of that: 11,406.

But the volunteers found more.

The list included a hubcap, a mattress, a toilet brush and a television set," said Linda Maraniss, regional director for the center's Gulf Coast office.

"Volunteers found trash items from 33 foreign countries. Clearly, people are abusing the marine environment, but people can also stop that behavior," Ms. Maraniss said.

The center said thousands of marine animals die annually from eating plastic bags and pieces of plastic, and from becoming entangled in plastic ropes and nets. Coastal states also spend millions of dollars cleaning beaches, Ms. Maraniss said.

According to the study, the Texas beach trash was 69.23 percent plastic, 10.74 percent glass, 8.4 percent metal, 6.69 percent paper, 2.17 percent wood, 1.86 percent rubber and 1.18 percent cloth.

The beach debris list included plastic pieces, plastic caps and lids, pieces of glass, foamed plastic pieces, plastic trash bags, glass bottles, plastic rope and plastic cups, the report said.

Texas had the greatest amount of boating and fishing waste, as well, including 2,918 nets, 6,044 light sticks, 1,304 floats and lures, 3,103 rubber gloves and 1,022 buoys, the report said.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who leads a state "adopt-a-beach" cleanup program, said many people are responsible for the debris.

Whether the debris originates with beachgoers, offshore drilling platforms, oceangoing ships, small pleasure craft, or runoff from our freshwater streams, we have got to reduce the sheer volume of solid waste in the Gulf," Mauro said.

"The people of Texas want clean beaches and clean oceans. They want a Gulf of Mexico that doesn't endanger marine life and wildlife with floating plastic debris."

BSHS Class of '90 graduates

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Graduating seniors of Big Spring High School received their diplomas Friday night in commencement exercises at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The 225 graduating members of the Class of 1990 were reminded by Senior Class President Chase Fraser that Friday was the last time they would be together as a group.

The group will disperse, each to follow his own dreams, said Fraser. "No matter which road we choose to follow, we must always remember the friends we laughed with, played with, and even cried with during our high school years," he said.

After a performance by the Meistersingers, Salutatorian Marilyn Corwin told her fellow students to expect drastic changes in the years ahead.

"We will accomplish great things and make great mistakes," she said. "But we will all live and grow through our experiences."

Corwin urged classmates to remember the three D's: Desire, dedication, devotion and determination as they strive to meet their goals in life.

"If we apply ourselves, we will win our goals and find true happiness," she promised.

Valedictorian Marc Schwarz reminded the class that after the evening they would no longer be sheltered children.

"Just starting on our journey (on the paths of life) we are fresh and strong." But he reminded students, "Life doesn't always play by rules, or perhaps more correctly, life doesn't have any rules."

"Great men and women choose the hazardous roads in life," he said, illustrating his point with examples from the life of Winston Churchill. "They take more risks. You must not fear or avoid risks."

The world is yours, he said, advising his classmates to travel, "but to stop sometimes and talk to your fellow travelers. The interstate may be the fastest road on your travels, but the narrow country road may be the most satisfying."

"Never look back," he said. "Life is too short. Turn your face to the road ahead. Life is the great adventure — live it as best you can."

The graduating class of 1990 included following students:

Court finds Caller ID illegal

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A state court has denied Bell of Pennsylvania the right to install telephone devices that flash the numbers of incoming callers, saying the feature invades privacy and violates wiretap laws.

The 4-1 ruling Wednesday by Commonwealth Court reversed a November order by the Public Utility Commission allowing Bell to offer the service.

Caller ID lets people know who is calling before they pick up the receiver. The caller's number flashes on a small device attached to the telephone.

The American Civil Liberties Union, the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence and others sued to block the service. Some argued it would threaten battered spouses and children by revealing their location.

Bell offered blocking devices to domestic-violence shelters and law enforcement agencies to prevent their numbers from being revealed to users of Caller ID, and Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr. contended in court papers that the service did not violate Pennsylvania's wiretap law.

But the court disagreed, and said Caller ID is unacceptable even if offered with a blocking device.

"In the framework of a democratic society, the privacy rights concept is much too fundamental to be compromised or abridged by permitting Caller ID," the court said.

Bill Harrah, Bell vice president of external affairs, said the company may appeal.

"Because of this decision, Pennsylvanians are being denied a service they eagerly want and badly need — a weapon against unwanted, harassing, threatening or obscene calls," he said.

The service could be vital to emergency dispatchers, allowing them to locate people who call for help even if the caller hangs up, Rabe said.

Bell spokesman Eric Rabe said about 1,000 people had registered for the service. The company had proposed charging $6.50 per month.

Caller identification is offered in parts of New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, according to Bell Atlantic, the corporate parent of Bell of Pennsylvania. They are under review in Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Peter Pan, Peke get censured

WASHINGTON (AP) — One census form came back with tooth marks on it. Another included a note asking for money. A third simply included the response "none of your business."

When you send questionnaires out to count a quarter-billion Americans, chances are not all the responses will be what was expected.

"For wanting to know how many people live in the U.S., you people are all nosy," wrote one woman on her census form.

"I thought this was a Census, not a history quiz," replied another.

And one man methodically wrote "none of your business" in response to each question on his form.

The census is continuing and people who don't provide information will likely get a call from their local census enumerator.

So far, officials say, just more than 80 percent of American households have been counted, either in the mail-back portion of the count or by workers going door-to-door. The effort is expected to continue for at least several weeks.

Some enumerators have even resorted to rowboats in flooded areas of Texas, reported Census spokesman Jim Wilson in Dallas.

Many of the people filling out forms are going beyond the limits of the form's square boxes, however, to express more personal thoughts about the census and themselves.

Wilson has been collecting some of the census responses from across the nation that go beyond the bureaucratic expectations. His collection includes:

A census form with a large chunk missing and teeth marks over the remainder, with a note saying that the family's golden retriever had chomped it, and asking for a new form.

"The census sounds like an autobiography, not a head count."

"I answered the questions the best I know how, we are two old people."

"Brad, study and no science questions, notes on bugs, dad can help." (Wilson suggests this note, scrawled on the envelope, may not have been intended for the Census Bureau.)

"I am 74, I own this property, that is all I intend to say."

One woman listed her two Pekingeses, with a note saying that, to her, "these are people, these are not dogs." Their language spoken was listed as Pekingeses.

One man listed his state of residence as "confusion."

A man answering the question on commuting to work said his wife traveled by broom.

One respondent included Tinker Bell and Peter Pan as sharing the household.

And a man called a census office to ask if he had been sent a long form at the instigation of his estranged wife, who was trying to find out about his live-in girlfriend.

Third-grade students want more recycling

By KIM LABBE
Staff Writer

1809 Thorp

Jo Ann Bonnington's third grade class at St. Mary's Episcopal School recently studied about pollution and recycling different materials.

Bonnington wanted her students to "learn some responsibility for the environment. I wanted them to learn that Americans create the biggest part of waste that's in the world today."

"We must protect our environment or there won't be any environment left," she concluded.

Bonnington said she scheduled her unit on pollution to coincide with Earth Day. She felt the unit on environment fit in well. Her students were hearing quite a bit about it from radio and television, she said.

Bonnington feels that students are more aware of the environment and recycling than they were a few years ago. "There is so much on television and in magazines today, like in National Geographic for Kids, and Ranger Rick," Bonnington said. "It's being stressed in a lot more areas in their life now."

Bonnington's students watched a video on Earth Day, made reports on different kinds of pollution, and made posters. They also brought trash to school and sorted it into biodegradable and non-biodegradable material.

Students became excited and began to wonder where they could take their sorted trash. The students discovered there was no place to take materials, except for aluminum cans, Bonnington said.

"I suggested that they could all write letters to the editor," Bonnington said, adding that she felt it was a good starting place.

Sieglinde Robinson, one of the third graders, says "we should recycle more." She suggests people recycle paper and cardboard. "It hurts us when we pollute the air," Sieglinde said.

Daniel White found the unit to be interesting. He says "we should build more places to recycle stuff. We should make more stuff that you can recycle." Daniel also suggested that manufacturers "not make styrofoam."

Cheri Lindell learned quite a lot about pollution and the environment. "It hurts our earth and if we pollute it too bad we might not be able to live," Cheri said. "When we have kids they might not be able to have things like water or clean air. It (air pollution) could get on the crops we eat, and we might not be able to eat clean food."

Lindell suggests stopping pollution by "making a law that we shouldn't litter or throw trash into the lakes and rivers."

Bonnington's students also wrote letters to their congressman concerning dangerous pesticides, the teacher said.

The following letters were written by the class to the Big Spring Herald:

Dear editor,
My third grade class at St. Mary's school just got through studying about pollution. Why don't we have a place where we can recycle newspapers, styrofoam, milk cartons, cardboard, and other stuff? We can only recycle aluminum cans. Where else would the people in Big Spring put their trash? I want the world to be a clean place to live.

Your friend,
Casey Cowley

Dear editor:

My third grade class at St. Mary's Episcopal School has been studying about recycling trash. I was concerned about where the nearest recycling place is. I want the Earth to be clean when I grow up. I think we should recycle bottles, styrofoam, cardboard, milk cartons, paper and newspapers. I want to recycle all trash. We shouldn't pollute our environment. We should not make or buy styrofoam things.

Please recycle!!!

Thank you.
Jennifer McLaughlin
706 Edwards

Dear editor:

The third grade class at St. Mary's has been studying about pollution and how we pollute our planet. We should build more places to recycle things. Fast food stores should not use styrofoam. They should use cardboard. Lots of people are dying because of the pollution. We should not litter either. We should tear down buildings that people don't go to very much and make them recycling places.

Yours truly,
Cheri Lindell

Dear editor:

My third grade class at St. Mary's just finished studying about Earth Day. Now I want to help the earth. Where is a good place to recycle?

The earth is the only place to live. I want to grow up and have a good place to live.

Your friend,

Dear editor:

The third grade class at St. Mary's has been studying about recycling. How come there isn't any place for paper, styrofoam, and other stuff to be recycled? Why aren't the people concerned about all of this? I want the world to be a good place when I grow up.

Your friend,
Daniel White

Dear editor,

We just finished studying about recycling trash. My class is the third grade at St. Mary's School. We want the city to know how the dump's are getting full. But the city does not really care about the city because they will not put out recycling centers. All of the pollution is from the waste left over. That why I think the government should help us by making recycling centers.

Your friend,
Amy Currie
819 W. 18th Street

Dear editor,

I go to St. Mary's School and I'm in the third grade. Why don't we have a place to recycle things? We need recycling plants because we need to start recycling things like bottles, paper, and newspapers. Most important of all, we must not buy styrofoam because we can't recycle it. I want the world to be a good place to live.

In 13 years, senior never misses a day

BECKLEY, W. Va. (AP) — Tracey A. Stewart will be missed when she graduates from high school Sunday. After all, teachers and students in Raleigh County have seen her in class every day for the past 13 years.

"Some times when I think about it, I think I must have been crazy," said Ms. Stewart, a senior at Liberty Raleigh High School. "I can't believe I did all this for a certificate."

Ms. Stewart said she has no secret formula for perfect attendance.

"I don't think it's a big deal," she said. "My parents go to work, so I would rather go to school than be at home by myself." But she also said she'd probably not keep up the perfect record if she had it to do over again.

Ann Stewart, Tracey's mother, said she remembers plenty of times when her daughter dragged herself from a sickbed to attend classes.

"There were times when I tried to get her to stay home from school, but she wouldn't do it," Mrs. Stewart said.

Stanton High School commencement exercises held Friday

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

STANTON — The Stanton High School Class of 1990 was congratulated on their achievements and reminded that their education was not complete — during commencement exercises at the high school auditorium Friday night.

Led by valedictorian Brent Swink and salutatorian George Sanchez, the 51 seniors were certified for graduation by SISD Superintendent Wayne Mitchell.

The featured speaker of the evening, James Johnson of the Stanton Church of Christ, spoke of the graduates' sacrifices and the rewards they would draw from those sacrifices.

"You have sacrificed two-thirds of your life for education," Johnson said. "Yes, you were pushed, but you were pushed for a purpose. Never let that purpose escape you."

One of those purposes, Johnson went on to state, was knowledge — more specifically, the pursuit of knowledge.

Stating Socrates' assertion that the pursuit of knowledge may be greater than actual knowledge, Johnson urged the graduates to continue learning, "not so that you'll know, but so you'll be able to find."

That continual pursuit, Johnson stated, would help prepare the seniors to become better leaders in the future.

"Adults have always been concerned about turning the keys to the world over to the next generation," he said. "Your world is already shaping up different from mine. Your world is waiting for you to stand up to it — and stand up for it."

Johnson urged the grads to remember their teachers, friends and families, and to remember the sacrifices those people made for them.

"As you leave high school, realize the sacrifices others made for you," he said. "They too expect a reward. When your goals seem lost, remember those sacrifices."

"Yes, you've been pushed, and you'll continue to be pushed," Johnson concluded. "Not so you'll be placed on an altar of education, but to make the most out of your life." Before the presentation of the diplomas, High School Principal Bill Young noted some of the accomplishments of the graduating class, among them district-winning football and girls' golf teams and the state champion concert band.

Young also recognized the five students who will receive scholarships and grants from colleges: Swink, Robbie Wilson, Stephanie Cox, Mike Graham and Erycka Johnson.

Clouds threaten Colorado City graduates

COLORADO CITY — Colorado High School seniors received their diplomas Thursday night in Wolf Stadium under threatening skies, cool breezes and the customary optimistic speeches to students about to embark on the rest of their lives.

Superintendent Jim Ramsey, in a promised short speech, reminded students that their future accomplishments and failings lies in their own hands.

"By the time you meet again in the year 2,000, I hope all have gone down the road of success and not fallen down the road of excuses," he said before handing out diplomas. "Again, congratulations for hanging in there and reaching this goal that many have failed to achieve."

There were 84 seniors who graduated this year. Giving the valedictorian address was Melinda Beth Conner. The salutatorian was Tammy D'Ann Loving.

Other honor graduates are: Dane Hoover, Kendra Ritchey, Brittany Bridgford, Debbie Gardner, Tracy McElvaney, Danny Luera, Sunnye Biggs and Edward Flores.

Midland museum censors kite

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Midland museum removed a controversial kite from a San Antonio artist's exhibit because museum officials said they found the kite — made from women's underwear — offensive, a newspaper reported.

Artist Pat Hammond used a 1930s corset and nylon stockings to make the kite, which she calls "Of Corset Flies — But Will It Last Under Wear?"

It was part of a larger kite exhibit displayed in the children's section of the Museum of the Southwest in Midland.

Several days after setting up her exhibit last month, Ms. Hammond heard that one of the kites had been censored, the San Antonio Light reported in a column Thursday.

Ms. Hammond said museum curator Gary Hood told her he removed the corset kite from the art show because it was "inappropriate."

"It's ladies' underwear," Hood told The Light. "Ladies' underwear is not appropriate for a children's museum."

day, in which rich districts like Forsan ISD would lose funding while poorer districts would gain funds.

That plan, which does not require a tax increase, is supposed to be filed in state court on June 21. A legislative plan is also subject to approval in state court.

But Fraser said he expects the legislative plan to be passed into law by either Tuesday or Wednesday. "We will likely vote on it Tuesday, probably Wednesday at the latest," he said Saturday.

He gives credit for the Friday compromise to a threat of funding losses outlined in the special master's plan. "They had a gun to their heads and that's the only reason they would be willing to vote for this," he said.

Fraser hailed the compromise plan because it does not take away any funding from richer districts but it does pump money into other school districts, especially rural ones.

"What we're passing now is a big victory for rural areas and West Texas," he said. "We have been cheated out of about 25 percent of our state funding for years."

Taking money from other districts is not the answer, he said. "We did not want to level down. We wanted to increase the quality of education by leveling up," he said. "We also wanted to change the disparity."

Fraser said the compromise plan, which would increase state school finance spending by $528 million next year, would add $1.2 million-$1.7 million in funding to Big Spring ISD for the first year, according to estimates he had heard. About $2.5 million would then be added each year for the next four years.

He said he did not hear any estimates on Coahoma ISD but knows that Forsan ISD would be given a "hold harmless."

"They would see no increase of funding but also will not lose any," he said.

School districts like Dallas ISD and Houston ISD would also be given a "hold harmless," he said. They would have to raise their tax rates up to the state average of 95 cents per $100 valuation during the next five years in order to maximize state funding. Dallas ISD's tax rate is 84 cents and Houston ISD's rate is 80 cents.

Forsan ISD's tax rate is $1.15 per $100 valuation. Big Spring ISD's rate is $1.06 and Coahoma ISD's rate is $1.54.

In comparison, under the special master plan, Forsan ISD would lose $328,792 next year. "That is 100 percent of their (state) funding," Fraser said.

Dallas ISD would lose $98,745,789 and Houston ISD would lose $69,821,961 under that plan. "Both these numbers are a real indication of how far out of line the (present) system is," Fraser said.

Under the same plan, Big Spring ISD would gain $528,599 and Coahoma ISD would gain $566,022. "We still do a lot better under the master plan," Fraser said of many rural schools.

Bringing up other points in the compromise plan, Fraser said it will not include forced consolidation of smaller school districts and more local control will be allowed for districts which do well on student achievement tests. He added that a reshuffling of the state budget will not include a raid on teacher retirement funds.

According to wire reports, about 97.7 million would be trimmed from other parts of the state budget to finance the compromise plan.

Raising the sales tax from six cents to 6 1/4 cents would raise $298.9 million. Boosting the 26-cent per pack cigarette tax by 15 cents would bring in $193.5 million. A two percent levy on alcoholic mixed drinks would raise $25.7 million.

Fees for overweight trucks and lost drivers' licenses plus money raised from debt service on state bonds for the Superconducting Super Collider Project would bring in $17.5 million.

About $100 million of that funding package would also be used to bail out financially strapped social service programs.

Permian Building to close on June 15

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — The absentee owners of the beleaguered Permian Building have announced they are working to sell the structure and that it will be closed June 15.

The building's manager said she was contacted by Flato Realty Investment of San Antonio on Thursday. Johnnie Lou Avery said Flato's liaison to Big Spring, John Wright, told her representatives of the company won't be able to review first hand problems with the building for some time. Tenants have been moving out of the building since a series of recent water pipe breaks flooded the building and a fire prompted the Fire Department to cut off all electricity to the building.

The company has issued a statement Avery said, which reads:

"Flato Realty Investment representatives are not able to come to Big Spring for several weeks. In the meantime, they are hoping to have offers from prospective buyers to remodel and continue building operations.

"Flato Realty Investments has other projects on the drawing board right now that are taking all of our time, money and attention, and if new owners are not found, the building will be closed and boarded up. All tenants' property is expected to be out of the Permian Building by June 15.

"For any information about the building, call locally Johnnie Lou Avery."

Avery said she plans to talk to local real estate agents and list the building for sale. Avery said she also plans to pursue the possibility of Big Spring Main Street Inc., taking over the building. The Main Street group recently was deeded a building vacated for several years by Southwestern Bell.

Avery said most of the building's tenants have cleared their property from the building or are in the process.

"As far as I can tell we've got four offices who still have things in their offices," she said. "Of course, there's nobody trying to do business here."

'Gorby Special' on menu

DALLAS (AP) — Two Texas restaurateurs are planning to offer Dallas diners a "Gorby special" the week after they serve this Sunday's luncheon to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Minnesota Governor Rudy Perpich.

Those who order the dinner at the Baby Ruth restaurant owned by John Dayton and Stephan Pyles not only will be served the same food that will be served Sunday in Minnesota, but will get a copy of the menu from the real luncheon.

Although he did not elaborate on menu items, Dayton told The Dallas Morning News in jest that it will be a real Soviet special: "You have to stand in line to get it, it gets more expensive every day, and there probably won't be any more once you get in."

Daycare

Vocational administrator Loren Spencer said he is applying for a federal grant which would allow the school to aid students with babies. Money would be available to pay for day care while the parents are in school.

The grant would come from the Carl Perkins Vocational Funding program. Parents would be required to enroll in a vocational course to learn a skill, Spencer said. The school would contract with an area day care center to take care of the child during the school day, he said.

"We feel there's a need for something like this. It's not a judgemental program, it's set up to help the students who otherwise would not be able to stay in school."

Principal Kent Bowerman said he thinks the program would be a worthwhile addition to the school curriculum. "Anytime we're able to keep the kids in school, the program is worthwhile."

Combs said her job has made her much more aware of the problems a teen-age mother alone faces. Helping them with school work often meant simply giving them a break from motherhood, she said.

"I usually would end up taking care of the baby while they did their school work. I enjoyed it so much. I really came to care about those girls, and now I would like to see the school do whatever it can to help."

School counselor Rue Ann Cox said her job includes working with pregnant students to assist in solving schedule problems. She also organizes a voluntary support group which meets after school. "There are some things available for them (pregnant students) at school, but this is still a public education system and these are students with different circumstances."

What they seem to need most, Cox said, is encouragement. She said she is not sure how successful a program of day care assistance in exchange for vocational classwork would be. "To really get it functioning there are so many things — scheduling, classes, teachers, the mothers themselves — to coordinate."

Pregnancy at the high school level is not an ignored issue, Cox said. "We have some successes. We have girls who have had a baby and come back to finish."

Cox said her programs deal mainly with young mothers. Her experience of the situation, like that of Combs, is a view mainly from the girl's side. Teen-aged fathers who accept the responsibility for the child could participate in the vocational program as well, Spencer said.

For Cochran and other young parents, if the grant is received and money is made available this summer, the new program may offer a second chance to get the important high school diploma.

Cochran said though her family plans to move from Big Spring in a few weeks, she may remain in town and go back to high school in the fall. A friend, also a young mother, would share a home with her, Cochran said.

"I'd like to be able to go to school, work and take care of him. I guess that's a lot to do at once."

Festival

"We've got the best food you could find anywhere in Big Spring right now," Frank said Saturday as she was pointing out different booths.

And business, at least for some, was good.

"Oh! Better than ever," said Octavio Loya, who has set up a booth every year for the event to sell hamburgers and burritos. "This is the first year I've done this good," he said.

Besides eating, there were other openings for entrepreneurs to take advantage of.

Painting small bright designs on customers willing to sit still while someone meticulously dotted over their cheek was just one example of a lucrative venture in the menagerie of services and goods offered.

The festival could become a waiting area for a crowd of curious onlookers and potential customers. Her son, Wayne Pollard, said it was the second year his mother has painted faces at the festival.

"She said she's doing better this year," he said.

"She's been busy all day long," Pollard's wife, Cheryl, said.

It was the variety that attracted people like Jana Tompkins, who brought her 8-year-old daughter Ashley to the festival. The mix of people is what intrigued her.

"It's kind of neat seeing all the different kinds of people that come out," she said. Was she having a hot time? "It's fun. It's just hot," she said. "It's fun and hot."

during morning talks but the changing face of Europe emerged as a subject before day's end.

Asserting that the Soviet Union has a voice in the unification of Germany, Gorbachev declared, "We must remember that we are all part of this process."

Standing alongside Gorbachev, Bush defended his decision to sign a trade treaty with Gorbachev even though Moscow had not eased its economic pressure on Lithuania.

"I look at the overall relationship," he said, referring to the trade accord as "in the interest of the United States."

"Somebody wants to argue with me, fine, we'll take him on," he said.

There were hints of a Bush visit to Moscow.

He is survived by a daughter-in-law, Venice Cawthron, Big Spring, one sister, Neely Hudson, Tucumcari, N.M.; five grandchildren: Larry Tolson, Houston, Debra Wasson and Cheryl Shults, both of Big Spring, and Joe Tolson, Amarillo; and nine great-grandchildren.

It could be a long year for Texas teams

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Some colleagues and I like to gather in the break room every now and then to solve the world's problems.

Some days, the topic will be inflation; sometimes, it'll be U.S.-U.S.S.R. relations. More often than not, however, the subject of our discussions will be one that is of major concern to most Texans.

Third and long

Just what the heck is wrong with the Rangers and Astros?

Now, as subjects go, this might not rank with nuclear disarmament, but I think a solution to the state school finance problem would be easier to find than discovering a way for the Stros and Strangers to win.

Well, let me rephrase that a bit.

With Texas, the problem is simple enough. It's an injury-plagued team playing in the toughest division in baseball.

Check the walking wounded: Nolan Ryan, disabled list; Ruben Sierra, hamstring problems; Steve Buechele, disabled list; Julio Franco, on and off the disabled list; Jeff Russell, disabled list; ad infinitum, ad nauseum.

When they are healthy, the Rangers have one of the best starting nines in the majors, complemented by a pitching staff that combines seasoned veterans like Ryan and Charlie Hough with some promising youngsters like Kevin Brown, Bobby Witt, Brian Bohanon and Jamie Moyers — not to mention ace reliever Russell.

Too bad they're not healthy. What the rash of injuries has done is that it's revealed the Rangers' weakness: lack of depth. Texas simply does not have enough quality players on the bench that can step in when one of the regulars goes down with an injury.

Add to all this, rough starts by Hough, Witt, Russell and a few other pitchers, and you have a team that is probably waiting for next season already.

Now, about the Astros. There really could be any number of reasons why Houston is trailing the NL West as we speak — injuries, bad luck, fate, bad karma — but to find what's wrong with the 'Stros, you have to look at what was good about them a few years ago.

Pitching. Specifically, starting pitching. It's not as if Houston has a bad starting staff. Anytime you have Mike Scott, Jim Deshaies and Danny Darwin in the starting rotation, you have the making of a really decent group.

The problem is, they're not as good as they were a few years ago, and with an anemic-hitting team with the Astros — and playing in the cavern known as the Astrodome — you darned better have an outstanding pitching corps if you want to challenge for the league title.

And the Astros' pitching, while not bad, is certainly not up to the standard that's been set the past few years. The hitting has been, quite simply, atrocious. Houston's always been a below-average team on offense, but it's been even more so this year. The Astros' one bona fide power hitter, Glen Davis, is still trying to shake himself from a slump, which spells major trouble for the rest of the attack.

And everybody wonders why manager Art Howe is bald.

Stanton football outlook bright

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

STANTON — Coming off an 8-2-1 football season, one expects for the Buffalos to have a rebuilding year. But seventh year head coach Dale Ruth is expecting Stanton to be in the hunt for their third district crown in as many years.

With five returning offensive starters and five on defense, the Buffs are going to need talent to come from last year's junior varsity.

"We have 13 returning lettermen from last year's squad. If we have any weaknesses, our depth is not as strong as we would like to have," said Ruth. "But we will have a number of sophomores from last year's JV that can do the job."

"We are really working hard on our weight program. For the last four years, we've concentrated on building our program, because we feel that's how we can win ballgames."

Ruth may have found the key to success as his teams have compiled a 27-15-1 record and two district championships in his last four years with his program intact.

"We feel that this year's team will have more strength than any other year. We already have 12 players that can press 230 pounds or more," Ruth explained.

Along with strength, Ruth has something to smile about due to the fact that senior running backs John Paul Barry and Garry Thompson will combine to give his ballclub the one-two punch they need in the backfield.

Barry, an all-district running back last year, will look to the outside with his 4.9 40-yard dash speed. While the defense is looking stop Barry from going wide, Thompson can break through the line with his speed. Thompson has been clocked in 4.6.

"John Paul is a very smart player, and he is also very quick. He can cut very fast, and Garry will just flat outrun you. We will also be very tough at the linebacker spot with Barry, Allen Prough and Thompson," said

STANTON — Stanton Buffalo players catch their breath after doing some running exercises during offseason workouts last week at the Stanton High School track. Stanton head football coach Dale Ruth Ruth.

"Our real weakness is at quarterback. We have two young kids that are coming off the JVs. John Wyckoff and Jeremy Stallings are the top two fighting for the spot. Jeremy is extremely quick and smart. John on the otherhand is very tall and also very confident. He is the ideal quarterback to have, but both will have to work on their upper body strength. That's where our main test will be this year," said Ruth.

Ruth named several key players that will be back from last year's squad, they are: Lance Hall, Prough, Kenny McCalister, Allan Carby, Selestino Hernandez and Rick Posey. Hall, Prough and McCalister will be going both ways.

Hall, who made honorable mention tackle last year, will be moving to guard and defensive end. Prough will play strong tackle and linebacker, and McCalister will play split end and safety.

Other key players are Joe will welcome 13 lettermen from last year's 8-2-1 district championship squad.

Cazares, Edward Armendarez, Carlos Diaz, Rene Frausto, Jim Bob Kelly, Jim Decker and Craig Brooks. Cazares, Armendarez, Decker, Diaz and Brooks will be on the line, while Kelly will be at wingback.

Next year the District 6-2A will consist of Coahoma, McCamey, Forsan, Wall, Eldorado, Iraan and Ozona.

"The teams to beat will be Wall and Coahoma. Ozona and McCamey lost 15 seniors, but they always be tough along with Forsan, Iraan and Eldorado. Iraan has a tough runner by the name of Riley Malone so we're looking to stop him as well," said Ruth.

Ruth, along with his coaching staff of Don Barry, Keyv Allred and Rob Young will be in for a tough season.

But if things go like they have for the past four seasons, the Buffalos will probably be in the hunt for a district crown.

Will Mr. Jordan finally lead to promised land?

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Forget all those brilliant All-Star games. Forget the slam dunk contests. Those are mere sideshows.

Michael Jordan now is one game away from the NBA Finals, an event he has coveted since helping North Carolina win an NCAA championship in 1982.

But first, Jordan's Chicago Bulls must eliminate the defending NBA champion Detroit Pistons on Sunday at The Palace. The winner meets the Portland Trail Blazers, Western Conference champions.

For all of Jordan's greatness, though, the Bulls have never played in the finals.

"It feels good looking forward to the challenge," said Jordan, who scored 18 third-quarter points to spark the Bulls to a 109-91 victory in Friday's sixth game. "But we still have to go through Detroit."

"Once you get to the final series, you realize we might not get there again. We played well at home all season long. Detroit has been our nemesis."

The Pistons were 4-1 against the Bulls during the regular season (2-0 at home, 2-1 in Chicago). But the playoffs have been another matter altogether, with each team winning three games on its home court.

"Whatever is left for the seventh game, we have to throw it out on the floor," Jordan said. "In the seventh game, it must be a whole dedicated effort."

Jordan — and the home court — have been the key to every game. He has averaged 25.3 points in the three games in Detroit, down from 39.3 in the three games at rowdy Chicago Stadium.

He hopes that will change.

"It is the same court and the same dimensions," Jordan said. "We just have to block out the surroundings playing on their home

CHICAGO — Chicago Bulls Michael Jordan (right) shouts as Detroit Pistons' Joe Dumars goes up for a shot in game six of their NBA playoff series Friday. Chicago's Scottie Pippen (left) and Horace Grant (54) watch. The winner of today's game will meet the Portland Trail Blazers for the NBA crown.

Chicago has lost its last seven in Detroit, dating back to Game 1 of last year's conference finals.

If the Bulls win Sunday, they would be the fifth club in NBA history to overcome a 2-0 deficit and win a seven-game series. Portland was the last, beating Philadelphia in the 1977 NBA Finals.

Chicago's comeback began in Game 3, as Detroit squandered a 14-point lead — a game the Pistons have come to rue.

"It shouldn't have come to this," said Detroit's Dennis Rodman.

Ironman Neel still burning 'em up at age 48

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — In basketball circles Kareem Abdul Jabbar proved to be the ultimate ironman by playing 21 years in the National Basketball Association. Move over Kareem, make room for Ben Neel.

Neel isn't an NBA player, and never was. But he's 48-years-old, six years older than Jabbar, and still going strong on the basketball court during the early morning sessions at the YMCA.

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning at 6, Neel and eight to 11 of his buddies meet together for some competitive basketball. Teams are chosen and some very intense games take place. Usually Neel is one of the first ones chosen because he is so good.

All of his fellow players agree — Neel can do it all. He can get up and down the court, play defense, jump and shoot the ball. His offensive arsenal includes a deadly jumper, or a number of drives which usually results in hook shots with either hand, and reverse layups.

And when he draws a double-team, which he often does, he spots the open man easily, sometimes making passes Magic Johnson would be proud of.

But Neel seems almost embarrassed about his talent. When one likens him to Jabbar as far as longevity on the court goes, he quickly defends Jabbar. "It's that pro game, it's so fast, plus it's harder on somebody that tall to get up and down the court," said Neel. "You could really start to tell Kareem was starting to lose a step his last two years. He can still play a halfcourt game though."

One thing Neel's YMCA comrades agree on — the elder statesman of the YMCA can still play a fullcourt game.

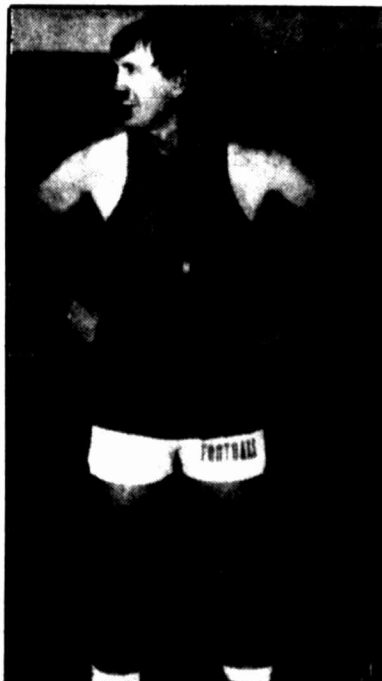

Russ McEwen is a charter member of the YMCA morning league, having played the last 15 years. At 41-years-old McEwen is no slouch himself, possessing a mean outside shot. McEwen says he hasn't noticed a change in Neel's play in the eight years Neel has played morning hoops.

"Ben hasn't lost anything. He's playing as well now as when he was when he first started," said McEwen. "I don't know what he looked like when he was 18 years old, but I'm telling you, he hasn't lost anything from when I first saw him play."

At 18, Neel was a freshman from Fort Worth playing basketball at Hardin-Simmons University. In his college days the 6-foot-2-inch guard weighed 172 pounds. Almost three decades later, he's gained only eight pounds.

"I was lucky to ever see the floor in college. I really didn't get to play that much," said Neel. "My sophomore year we played Arizona State, and they were ranked No. 9 in the nation. We got beat 131-76. I got to play a lot that game," he laughed.

After college, Neel, who is also a pastor at Salem Baptist Church in Sand Springs, got his first teaching and coaching job in Big Spring, where he has been every since. He is currently at Runnels. He says he got out of coaching for five years, but started missing it.

BIG SPRING — Ben Neel has been playing basketball at the YMCA for the past 25 years, the last eight in the mornings. At 48 years old, Neel can still play with the best of them.

What is the key to a pastor teacher, coach and father of three staying in such good physical health?

"I have the same body type as my dad. My dad is 6-foot-7 and I have a brother 6-foot-4," said Neel. "I eat everything I like. I have Dr. Pepper and chocolate almond ice cream almost every night."

In addition to playing basketball about nine months of the year, Neel says he lifts weights. • Ironman page 2 B

Jones rolls hole-in-one; takes three stroke Kemper lead

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Steve Jones rode a hole-in-one to a 6-under-par 65 Saturday and a three-stroke lead over four players after three rounds of the Kemper Open.

Jones, seeking his first victory of year, completed three trips over the 6,917-yard TPC at Avenel course at 11-under-par 202.

He used an 8-iron to ace the 162-yard, par-3 ninth hole, then reeled off three birdies over the next four holes. After four straight pars, he closed his round with a birdie at 18.

"It just happened to be my day today," he said. "We'll just find out if it's my day tomorrow."

Clark Burroughs, Joel Edwards, Scott Hoch and second-round leader Gil Morgan shared second at 205. Hale Irwin, who shot 65, and 1987 champion Tom Kite were among five players at six under.

Burroughs eagled two holes and birdied three others, but also had two bogeys on the back nine for a 66.

Burroughs opened the round with a birdie and then eagled No. 2, a 622-yard, par-5. After three straight pars, he eagled the par-5 6th, then made three pars to turn at 8-under.

Birdied at Nos. 10 and 13 were negated by bogeys on 12 and 16. He missed a two-footer for par on 16 before closing the round with pars.

"I'm playing with new clubs and a new putter. ... Maybe I should do that more often," he said.

Edwards tied a course record with a 64. After starting the day tied for 27th, he put together eight birdies against a lone bogey.

"I was hitting it well and putting it well," he said. "It was one of those days when you get it going and the holes starts looking a little bit bigger as you go along."

Edwards, who joined the PGA Tour last year, has never finished better than eighth. He admitted that he would be a bit tense vying for the lead on the final day.

"I'll be nervous, but it's going to be fun. It's going to come out good no matter what," he said.

Jones, who won three tournaments last year, has finished second and third this season. He was disqualified from last week's BellSouth Atlanta tournament for playing the wrong ball.

"My game isn't where it was last year," he admitted. "The season's 10 months long, and I'm trying to be patient."

Astros lose heartbreaker

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Newcomer Mike Kingery's two-out single in the bottom of the 10th inning lifted the San Francisco Giants to a 5-4 victory Saturday over the Houston Astros and stirred up memories of 1989.

While winning the National League pennant last season, the Giants were known for their rallies, coming from behind to win 40 games. Those kind of victories have been hard to come by in 1990.

But the Giants roared back to defeat the Astros 6-5 in 11 innings Friday night, and they trailed 3-0 entering the bottom of the ninth Saturday when Kingery entered the game as a pinch-hitter.

Kingery, promoted from Triple A Phoenix this week hit a run-scoring single in a three-run rally that created a 3-3 tie. It gave him his first hit and first RBI in the National League.

"This was special today because you always want to get your first hit out of the way," Kingery said.

Of the game-winning hit off Danny Darwin (1-1), Kingery said, "It was a fastball inside and I didn't hit it that good."

The Astros had taken the lead in the top of the 10th inning on Franklin Stubbs' run-scoring double off Steve Bedrosian (2-3) before the Giants rallied against Darwin.

Kevin Mitchell started the 10th with a walk and took third on Terry Kennedy's one-out single. Robby Thompson lofted a bunt over first baseman Stubbs' head, scoring Mitchell to tie the game. Pitcher Scott Garrelts pinch ran for Kennedy at second base and scored on Kingery's hit to center.

Stubbs entered the game in the eighth when Glenn Davis, who earlier homered for the fourth time in two days to set a club record and take the league lead, had to leave with a strained left calf muscle. Stubbs doubled off Bedrosian to score Craig Biggio, aboard with a one-out single.

Bill Gullickson was three outs away from his first shutout since 1987 after earlier pitching out of four two-out situations when he gave up a leadoff single in the ninth to Kennedy. That brought on Dave Smith, seeking his 11th save in 12 chances.

With one out, consecutive singles by Jose Uribe, Kingery and Brett Butler made it 3-2. Rick Parker hit into a fielder's choice for the second out, and Will Clark, who had struck out with two on and none out in the eighth, doubled in the tying run.

Right fielder Glenn Wilson easily threw out Parker trying to score the winning run, and the game went into extra innings.

Davis hit his 14th homer, off Bob Knepper with one out in the sixth inning.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Biggio hit his third home run. Rafael Ramirez drove in a ninth-inning run with a single.

Notes: Glenn Davis sustained his injury running the bases in the top of the eighth inning and his condition is regarded as day-to-day. Davis who hit three homers Friday night tied a record held by Jimmy Wynn (1967) and Doug Rader (1973). For the first time this season, a runner Dave Smith inherited scored. He previously inherited seven runners. The Giants entered to game with an 0-23 record trailing after eight innings.

California jumper breaks triple jump mark

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — California's Sheila Hudson fulfilled a promise by smashing her American record in the triple jump and Wisconsin's Suzy Favor capped an illustrious career by winning a record ninth NCAA track title Saturday night.

Hudson, in her final college meet, leaped 46 feet, three-quarters of an inch in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

After winning the long jump Friday night, Hudson had said that she would take a serious shot at breaking her triple jump mark of 45-5 1/2, set in 1987 at San Jose, Calif.

She made good on her promise twice. On her second attempt, she sailed 47-3 1/2, improving the record by 2 1/2 inches.

Hudson made it a moot point when, on the fifth of six jumps, she became the first American to jump 46 feet. It was the best jump in the world this year.

The record jump tied Hudson for fourth on the all-time outdoor performance list. The world record of DURHAM, N.C. — Suzy Favor (791) from the University of Wisconsin, beats the field to the finish line to win the 800 meter run at the NCAA Track and Field Championships. It was Favor's eighth career NCAA title.

47-7 3/4 was set last year by Galina Chistyakova of the Soviet Union.

The triple jump title was Hudson's third in the outdoor championships. She redshirted last year to concentrate on her studies and graduated last month with a degree in architecture.

She won the long jump title Friday night at 22-1, best by an American this year and her career best.

Favor, a senior with a cross-country season of eligibility remaining, swept to an unprecedented fourth straight title in the outdoor 1,500 meters. She pulled away down the final straightaway for a seven-meter victory over Tennessee's Jasmin Jones in 4 minutes, 8.26 seconds, the fastest by a collegian this year.

The remarkable Favor, who never has lost in the NCAA Championships, won her first outdoor 800-meter title Friday night. She also has won three NCAA indoor titles in the mile and one at 3,000 meters.

In four years at Wisconsin she won 54 of 56 races against college competition, including the last 40.

In the 1,500, Favor, normally a frontrunner, was content to let George Mason's Lauretta Miller set the pace for 800 meters. Favor took over then and held off a strong challenge by Jones for the next 600 meters before running away in the final 100.

Meanwhile, 1988 Olympic 400-meter gold medalist Steve Lewis of UCLA won his first NCAA title in 45.19, and Houston's Leroy Burrell took the 100 meters in a wind-aided 9.94.

It was the third time Burrell was clocked in 9.94. The first was a legal clocking last year in the national championships, the other was wind-aided two weeks ago in the Southwest Conference championships.

The women's 100-meter high hurdles also was wind-aided, as 1988 champion Lynda Tolbert regained the title in 12.84.

Louisiana State collected 19 points in the hurdles, as Cinnamon Sheffield finished second.

Neel

Larry McLellan is a bruising rebounder who's been at it six years in the early morning session. McLellan, who's nine years younger than Neel, says the best single word to describe Neel is "amazing." "He's super active for his age, and he's a great player," said McLellan.

"He can endure as much as anyone else, and he's got his shot and inside moves. He plays almost every day, and most of us are 10 years younger than he is, but he doesn't lose anything to us. My dream is to be able to play at Ben's age."

Like McLellan, Tim Yeats is a strong competitor inside. At 33-years-old, Yeats is one of the "young men on the block." In his five years of early morning ball, Yeats says Neel has been very impressive.

"Ben is probably the best all-around ball player out there. He's also one of the most competitive," said Yeats. "He can match up with anyone out there. I wish I could play as well as Ben Neel."

Neel admits that the competitive drive is what keeps him going, and confesses that he doesn't want to get shown up by younger players. "That's what makes it fun, when you get mad enough to get even. In other words the competitiveness. Everyone out there has that competitive edge. We get some pretty good rivalries going," said Neel.

Neel says he's had some ligit trouble in his right knee, and doesn't know how long he'll continue to play.

"It's just age catching up with me. I probably won't play very much longer. Sometimes I think I ought to hang it up."

Whenever that day arrives, you can be sure Ben Neel's aura will still haunt the YMCA gym.

World Cup

United States soccer team has been in waiting four decades

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

For 40 years, they've been waiting to get back, hoping for the chance to dribble and pass and maybe even score with the best.

The last nine times soccer's elite gathered for the World Cup, the United States watched from a distance. This time, with some help from Mexico and Paul Caligiuri's left foot, the Americans will be out on the world stage.

"I feel it getting in my system," Caligiuri said. "I feel it getting in my blood."

And so, June 10 at Comunale Stadium in Florence, the United States will walk onto the field for its first World Cup game since a 5-2 loss to Chile on July 2, 1950. Not much is expected from the Americans. Many U.S. sports fans don't realize the team exists.

"The thing about being in this country is you don't hear things about the World Cup every day," midfielder, Tab Ramos said. "Nobody even knows about it."

For a week in early May, the team practiced at Princeton. Students walked by the field in the middle of the campus as if the players were just a pickup team, not the best in the nation.

Elsewhere, World Cup players are heroes. In the United States, they're just another group of guys.

"We need to feel that," Caligiuri said of the adulation. "We need to expose soccer and give today's kids those dreams and opportunities."

Caligiuri's 30-yard goal Nov. 19 in Port of Spain, Trinidad, gave the United States a 1-0 victory and the long-awaited spot among the world's best. The Paul Caligiuri (left) of the United States, and Russell Letapy of Trinidad and Tobago, fight for control of the ball as Letapy's teammate Philbert Jones heads to the action during soccer competition in Port-of-Spain last November. Caligiuri scored the game's only goal to help the United States advance to the World Cup finals for the first time in 40 years.

Americans got there with a first-round bye, a second-round victory over Jamaica and a second-place finish behind Costa Rica in the final round of qualifying from the North and Central American and Caribbean region.

It helped that Mexico was kicked out of the tournament on June 30, 1988, for using overage players in qualifying for the Under-20 world championship. Now, the Americans must play Czechoslovakia in Rome on June 14 and Austria in Florence on June 19. A trip to the 1987 second round is the goal.

"It's a great achievement just to get there," said Carlos Bilardo, coach of defending champion Argentina. "And the important thing is that they're there and they will be there and get the experience for the next World Cup."

Which will be in the United States for the first time.

Four years ago, Bulgaria and Uruguay advanced to the second round with 0-1-2 records, so it doesn't take all that much.

"I think we can make the second round if we play well enough," said sweeper Michael Windischmann, the U.S. captain. "We're trying to put soccer on the map here."

Windischmann, who has appeared in more international games than any other player in U.S. history, anchors a defense that includes Desmond Armstrong, Steve Trittschuh, Jimmy Banks, Paul Krumpke and Marcelo Balboa.

Ramos, the most-talented player on the team, is in the center of the midfield and Caligiuri has been playing a defensive role. John Harkes is there for offense and Brian Bliss sometimes fills that spot, too.

But the star of the midfield could be John Stollmeyer, a tough tackler who played on consecutive college champions with Indiana University in 1982-83.

Then there are the forwards, the most criticized part of the team. The United States scored just six goals in eight World Cup qualifying matches in 1989 and hasn't done a whole lot better in international games this year.

Peter Vermes of the Netherlands' FC Volendam and Chris Sullivan of Hungary's Raba Eto rejoined the team in early May after their club seasons.

Bruce Murray has been the steadiest of the forwards and Eric Wynalda, a 20-year-old from San Diego State, burst on the scene in January with four goals in his first 10 matches.

Holyfield closer to title shot

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Evander Holyfield is on the brink of a title shot against James "Buster" Douglas, while two former champions appear headed for a big-money match against each other.

"The WBA will conduct purse bids Sunday, June 10 at 4 p.m. at the Plaza Hotel" in New York, James Binns, counsel for the World Boxing Association, said after Holyfield stopped Seamus McDonagh in the fourth round Friday night.

That's because Douglas now is in a position where he must make a mandatory defense for the WBA.

Douglas has not fought since upsetting Mike Tyson Feb. 11 at Tokyo and currently is in litigation trying to break his promotional agreement with Don King.

A Douglas-Holyfield fight would take place in September. Meanwhile, King is expected to announce a fall match between Tyson and George Foreman, if Tyson beats Henry Tillman and Foreman defeats Adilson Rodrigues on the same card June 16 at Las Vegas.

Many boxing people think Tyson and Foreman is the biggest money match on the horizon.

There has been speculation that the title might be split because of political wheelings and dealings that are so much a part of boxing.

Capriati a shining star on center court

PARIS (AP) — So much for stage fright.

Walking onto center court in a Grand Slam tournament for the first time Saturday, 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati knew she had made the big time.

She walked off with a spot in the record books.

"I couldn't believe they put me on center court," the Florida eighth-grader said. "I was really happy about it. I thought, 'This is where all the great champions have been.'"

Capriati showed she was worthy of the honor, beating 12th seeded Judith Wiesner of Austria 6-4, 6-4, to lead a quintet of teenagers into the fourth round of the French Open.

Capriati, who turned 14 on March 28, became the youngest woman to reach the round of 16 in a Grand Slam tournament. The previous mark was held by American Kathy Rinaldi, who was four days older when she reached the quarterfinals here in 1981.

"She doesn't seem like 14," Wiesner said. "She seems physically grown up. Ability-wise, she's in the top 10."

Wiesner was the first of two seeds eliminated Saturday. Aaron Krickstein, the men's fifth seed, was upset 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, by unseeded Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

Krickstein saved two match points in the 10th game of the fourth set but dropped five straight points in the tiebreaker to lose it 7-2. That left three Americans in the round of 16: No. 3 Andre Agassi, defending champion and No. 11 Michael Chang and No. 13 Jim Courier.

Capriati, who will reach at least No. 17 in the next world rankings, is just one member of the women's teen brigade charging through this year's field.

Also advancing were 16-year-old Monica Seles, 18-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez and 19-year-olds Natalia Zvereva and Ann Grossman. Conchita Martinez, 18, reached the round of 16 on Friday.

Seles, the second seed, struggled against Leila Meskhi of the Soviet Union and escaped with a 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (7-4) victory, her 28th straight win.

No. 7 Fernandez downed Isabel Cueto of West Germany 7-6 (7-3), 6-2, No. 10 Zvereva beat Stacy Martin 6-4, 6-1 and the unseeded Grossman beat Kirrily Sharpe of Australia 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

Top-seeded Steffi Graf, a veteran at the age of 20, won her third consecutive straight-set match, downing Sandra Cecchini of Italy 6-2, 6-3. Other women advancing Saturday were Mercedes Paz of Argentina and No. 6 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria.

In the men's field, No. 7 Thomas Muster, No. 10 Martin Jaite, No. 14 Magnus Gustafsson and No. 15 Guillermo Perez-Roldan all advanced. Perez-Roldan knocked out Parisian favorite Yannick Noah, the 1983 French Open champion.

It was gray, windy and cool when Capriati and Wiesner came out for the opening match on center court. For awhile things looked bleak for Capriati, too, as she lost her serve in the first game with four errors and soon found herself trailing 1-3.

"I was a little bit nervous, I have to admit," she said. "I felt a little tight at the beginning."

Nothing to fret about, though. With a little bit of luck — two let-serve winners — Capriati broke for 3-3.

"I thought I got really lucky on those," she said. "I loosened up a little after that."

After another exchange of breaks, Capriati held to go up 5-4. She broke Wiesner in the next game to take the set.

Slugging her groundstrokes from side to side and coming to net for simple putaways, Capriati cruised to a 5-2 lead in the second set. But Wiesner closed to 4-5 and went up 30-0 on her own serve.

"I thought, 'Oh no, don't let her come back. I don't want to go three sets. I want to close it out now,'" Capriati said.

Capriati won the next four points to close out the match.

"She keeps going for every shot," Wiesner said. "There's not one shot she's not hitting. She's really different from other players that way. When I hit hard, she hit harder."

Graf, who made numerous errors, said she was encouraged that the allergy and sinus problems which forced her to pull out of the doubles had improved.

Seles, meanwhile, is looking for a cure for her slumping game. She barely edged Helen Kelesi in three sets in the second round, and Saturday squandered a 5-2 lead and a match point before winning.

Seles' next opponent is Laura Gildemeister, the last player to beat her. That was 2½ months ago.

"I'll go out with nothing to lose," Seles said. "I'll go for all my shots. I know pretty much what I did wrong the last time."

Novacek could say the same thing about Krickstein, who won the last meeting between the two at the Italian Open last month.

Novacek dominated the first two sets, lost the third, and was ahead 4-5, 15-40 in the fourth. Krickstein held off two match points to force the tiebreaker, but with the score tied 2-2, Novacek ran off five straight points for the victory.

"I couldn't get fired up," said Krickstein. "Mentally I wasn't into it because of my sore elbow."

All three remaining American men are due to play fourth-round matches Sunday. Agassi plays Courier, with Chang meeting Javier Sanchez.

Controversy continues over drug for horses

NEW YORK (AP) — When Summer Squall crossed the finish line first at the Preakness it was to a chorus of "Just Say No" by those who think Lasix has no place in horse racing.

The constant controversy over the diuretic used to control respiratory bleeding is louder this year because of a study that said the drug may not control bleeding but may enhance performance, and because Summer Squall will not run in the Belmont Stakes, where all medication is banned.

Summer Squall, who bled during a workout in February, has raced on Lasix in all five of his starts this year. The disorder is known as exercise-induced pulmonary hemorrhage.

Horses can race on Lasix in the Preakness and on Lasix and the analgesic Butazolidin in the Kentucky Derby. In New York, however, horses are not allowed to race on any type medication.

The decision to not start Summer Squall in the June 9 Belmont Stakes was made after he finished second to Unbridled in the Derby.

"Belmont Being Bled Dry," was the headline reaction of the New York Daily News to the absence of Summer Squall.

When the Triple Crown is not at stake, the selling point for the Belmont is a potential duel between the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner.

If Lasix was allowed in New York, Cot Campbell, who manages the partnership that owns the colt, said, "We might have made a different decision. I just don't know. The decision wouldn't have been as clear cut. We wouldn't have made it after the Derby."

Unbridled, who bled after a 2-year-old race in October, also races on Lasix. Should he win the Belmont, it would raise questions whether he had to race on Lasix in the first place. Should he lose, it will renew charges that performances of medicated horses are enhanced.

"Summer Squall Wins, But Racing Loses," was the headline in a rare editorial in the Daily Racing

BALTIMORE — Summer Squall, shown here being ridden by jockey Patrick Day, on their way to winning the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Stakes two weeks ago. Summer Squall won't compete in the Form.

Summer Squall's owners are not to blame, the editorial stated, but there is a logic-defying lack of uniformity in the conditions of the race that now borders on the intolerable.

In the light of the recent Lasix study commissioned by The Jockey Club, perhaps a uniform rule should be adopted prohibiting Lasix in all of the Triple Crown events and in other major races as well.

The study, the first to test the effect of Lasix on the performance of non-bleeders, is a matter of controversy in American racing. It was conducted by three veterinarians at the University of Pennsylvania and was published in the May issue of the American Journal of Veterinary Research.

The study concluded that Lasix, whose generic name is furosemide, improves the performances of horses who do not suffer from bleeding. The biggest improvement was among geldings and the least was among colts.

The study also found that Lasix does not always stop bleeding.

"I would guarantee Lasix has kept Summer Squall racing and prevented him from bleeding in racing," Campbell said.

"I would stake my life that it has not improved his performance. It has enabled him to perform Lasix prevents some horses from bleeding."

Summer Squall won all five of his 2-year-old starts without Lasix. Since using the medication, he has finished second by one length to top sprinter Housebuster in the seven-furlong Swale, won the 1 1/8-mile Jim Beam and 1 1/8-mile Blue Grass, finished second in the 1 1/4-mile Kentucky Derby and won the 1 3/16-mile Preakness.

Campbell and trainer Neil

Howard have said they do not want to risk running Summer Squall without Lasix after a hard campaign of five races in 11 weeks. The colt will return to racing in the fall, and if he starts in the Breeders' Cup Classic Oct. 27 at Belmont Park, he will have to run without Lasix. Campbell noted that if he does that, Summer Squall will then have the winter to rest.

Carl Nafzger, the trainer of Unbridled, feels he can get his colt ready for one race without Lasix.

"I've done it before in New York," he said.

Nafzger said he would gradually dehydrate Unbridled 24 hours before the race, withholding food and water entirely for the last 12 hours and administering potassium to compensate for lost fluids.

Alysheba, who won the 1987 Kentucky Derby and Preakness on Lasix, finished fourth in the Belmont Stakes, although some observers believe a poorly judged ride by Chris McCarron cost the colt second place. Alysheba returned to Belmont Park to win the Woodward in the fall of his 4-year-old career and concluded his career by winning the Breeders' Cup Classic at Churchill Downs without Lasix, although the medication was allowed.

This will be the fourth time in eight years either the Derby or Preakness winner or both have not appeared in the Belmont Stakes.

Sunny's Halo, a Lasix colt who won the Derby and finished sixth in the Preakness, skipped the Belmont in 1983. Snow Chief, who was on Lasix, was the 11th-place finisher as the favorite in the 1986 Derby and won the Preakness. He did not start the Belmont.

In 1985, Derby winner Spend a Buck and Preakness winner Tank's Prospect both missed the Belmont.

Spend a Buck was sent to the Jersey Derby where he was eligible for a $1 million bonus, which he won. There was no Triple Crown bonus at the time.

Tank's Prospect, who raced without medication, broke down after the Preakness.

Mister Frisky facing life-threatening condition

CLARKSBURG, N.J. (AP) — Kentucky Derby favorite Mister Frisky, unable to eat because of a grapefruit-sized lump in his throat, was being treated with antibiotics Saturday to combat a life-threatening condition, veterinarians said.

"It's a situation where there won't be any rapid improvement or decline, hopefully," said Dr. Scott

E. Palmer, surgeon at the New Jersey Equine Clinic.

Mister Frisky, who had won his first 16 lifetime starts, finished eighth in the Derby, then ran a tired third in the Preakness. His condition probably affected his performance, and he has lost 100 pounds since it was diagnosed, Belmont Park veterinarian Dr. Robert Fritz said.

"The prognosis is guarded, and it remains guarded until further notice," Fritz said. "This is a very complex condition. It is life-threatening. The horse remains in serious condition."

Mister Frisky arrived at the clinic in western Monmouth County early Thursday morning after Fritz determined the horse needed more care than he could provide at the track barn, Palmer said.

Mister Frisky was slated to start in the Belmont Stakes on Saturday until he became ill. Trainer Laz Barrera announced last week that the horse would not run in the last of the Triple Crown races.

Although a Louisville-based veterinarian detected an elevated white blood count before the Kentucky Derby on May 5, Fritz said no doctor would have been able to identify the illness at that time.

"The horse didn't run to his true ability," Fritz said.

Fritz said he believes the growth "started out very small before the Kentucky Derby and continued to grow. On Tuesday night, it was the size of a grapefruit."

Fritz, whose office is at Belmont Park, said he was hired by trainer

Laz Barrera after Mister Frisky arrived in New York on May 21 and developed a fever.

Two days earlier, the horse finished third in the Preakness.

Fritz declined to estimate the value of the horse, but said Mister Frisky's insurance coverage "runs into millions." He said a news conference on the horse's condition is scheduled for Wednesday.

Local fishing reports

A brisk cool front, plus high winds, put a damper on fishing results over the holiday weekend.

There were no substantial reports from Lake Spence, and nearly the same from Lake Thomas. However, the Thomas report showed Howard Thompson, Snyder, with a 6 1/2-lb. black bass caught on a jig. Chuck James, Stanton reeled in a 5 1/4-lb. black bass using worms for bait in two to four feet of water.

Surface temperature at Thomas was 76 degrees. Black bass fishermen were having fairly good results in the shallows and yellow catfish on trotlines with Ben Floyd, Snyder, boating one at 32 lbs. Channel catfish were hitting bait from off banks, but other types of fishing yielded poor results.

Although results were meagre at Lake Spence, there was a large holiday turnout.

Tips for safe boating

People who hunt or fish from boats have one of the highest boat fatality rates. More die from falling off boats 16 feet and smaller than larger boats, and most boats are anchored at the time.

● Be weather wise. Sudden wind shifts, lightning flashes and choppy water all can mean a storm is brewing. Bring a portable radio to regularly check weather reports.

● Bring extra gear you may need. A flashlight, extra batteries, matches, a map of where you are, flares, sun tan lotion, first aid kit, extra sunglasses. Put those that need to be protected in a water-tight pouch or a container that floats.

● Tell someone where you're going, who is with you, and how long you'll be away. Then check your boat, equipment, boat balance, engine and fuel supply before leaving.

● Ventilate after fueling. Open hatches, run blower, and most important, carefully sniff for gasoline fumes in the fuel and engine areas before starting your engine.

● Stay dry and warm. Wear several layers of light clothing, bring rainproof covering. Never wear hip waders in a small boat.

● Keep fishing and hunting gear clean and well packed. A loose fish hook can cause a lot of pain and ruin a great outing. Bring an extra length of line to secure boat or equipment.

● When changing seats, stay low and near center line of a small boat.

● Be ready for trouble when a powerboat passes you in a narrow channel. As the lead boat (which always has the right of way) stay on your side of the channel and maintain a steady speed so that the overtaking vessel can pass you safely. Use your radio to discuss this with the passing boat.

● Anchor from bow, not stern. Use anchor line length at least five times longer than water depth.

● Take a safe boating course. As an extra benefit, you may earn lower boat insurance costs.

Net fishing ban postponed until '91

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks & Wildlife Commission has postponed a proposed ban on freshwater net fishing in Lake Wright Patman and some portions of Texas rivers until September 1991.

The decision followed pleas from a state representative and net fishermen from Lake Wright Patman in northeast Texas, who said the ban would hurt low-income residents around the lake. The ban had been proposed for September of this year.

"The overwhelming majority of net fishermen and commercial fishermen are honest citizens that are using (nets) to make a living," said state Rep. Barry Telford, D-DeKalb, on Thursday.

Matching the hatch usually good advice

"Match the Hatch" is a phrase that is most often associated with trout fishing. However, I feel it's a productive method of fishing for everything from Bream to Bass!

It seems that the older I get and the more I fish, the more I've come to learn that it's the basics that catch fish, no matter what species you're after. Ten years ago if you told me that you caught a boat load of fish by soaking old rags in Windex for 48 hours and then tied them to the back of the boat to "call in the hawks," I probably would have tried it. But no more!

The problem faced by most anglers is that they have more lures and gimmicks in their tackleboxes than they'd use if they fished 365 days a year.

Match the Hatch, with a couple of exceptions, is the best way to consistently catch fish. The best way to describe this method of lure and color selection is to first ask yourself what the fish feed on.

Let's take bass for example. Crayfish, bream, frogs, shad, and snakes make up the diet of most bass throughout the country. Now that is certainly not to say that is all they eat. A couple of years ago I was cleaning a 2 lb. bass and discovered 37 yellow jackets in its stomach. So obviously bass feed on a wide variety of insects too.

Before we talk about the obvious "match the hatch" choices for lure colors, let me quickly point out one color that is productive in worms, crankbaits, spinnerbaits, and other lures that doesn't fit into this theory. If you haven't already guessed, it's chartreuse. In all my hours on the water I have yet to see the first chartreuse baitfish, snake, frog, or crayfish pass in front of me. But for reasons known only to bass (and possibly Dr. Loren Hill, inventor of the Color-C-Lector), they do seem to attack a chartreuse lure.

Fishing with Mark

Now back to the basics. When choosing a crankbait stick primarily with the "match the hatch" colors. My 1st choices include a crayfish pattern (brown and orange), a bream of "perch" pattern (primarily green and orange), and a shad color (white, silver, or grayish). These 3 colors along with a "Firetiger" color (chartreuse) will catch bass in most waters throughout the country.

Remember that worms are made to basically imitate snakes, baitfish, and crayfish. This is why my 1st choices include Green Shad to imitate snakes, frogs, and baitfish, brown/orange to imitate crayfish and black to imitate snakes.

Keep in mind that a spinnerbait is used often to imitate schooling baitfish and accordingly white and white/green combinations are excellent choices for matching color with live minnows, shad, and bream.

Now I know a lot of you are asking how I'd explain the phenomenal success of the hot color "Pumpkinseed." Easy. Pumpkinseed is probably the closest color I've seen to the actual color of a crayfish!

Remember that these lure colors are only the basics. They represent a good place to start if you are just beginning fishing or going to a new lake for the first time. I've caught plenty of fish on purple worms with a red tail and other colors not really found in nature. But I do believe that if you stick to the basics your chances of success will increase dramatically. God bless you and thanks for going Fishing with Mark Weaver.

Bear sightings increase

ALPINE — Sightings of black bears have increased during the past three years in the rugged Trans-Pecos region of West Texas, according to participants in a recent workshop on the species.

Wildlife biologist Rick Taylor of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) said the meeting, billed as the "First Texas Black Bear Workshop," was organized to exchange information among the various agencies and universities concerning conservation and management of the bears which are listed as endangered in Texas.

Diana Doan, a black bear researcher, said increased sightings in the Trans-Pecos probably resulted from recent increases in the reproductive rates of black bears in Northern Mexico. "The Lower Trans-Pecos is a natural corridor for these bears to travel northward, so Texas is probably seeing a spill-over effect from Mexican bear populations," she said.

Frequency of sightings has increased during the past three years on the department's Black Gap Wildlife Management Area in Brewster County and also at Big Bend National Park to the west.

Billie Pat McKinney, a wildlife technician at the Black Gap, said bears have been observed frequently there since 1980, and the animals have been regular inhabitants since 1985. He estimated that there presently are about three bears on the area.

Rick LoBello of the Big Bend Natural History Association said bear sightings by Big Bend park personnel and visitors have increased from an average of less than three per year during 1980-87, to 21 sightings in 1988 and 27 in 1989.

A research paper presented by Dr. Eric Hellgren of Texas A&I discussed the potential problems and benefits of black bears. "Benefits would be both economic and philosophical," Hellgren said in the paper. "To some, knowing the black bear has returned to Texas would be benefit enough."

Hellgren noted that bear predation on livestock probably represents the largest potential bear-human problem in the region. Predation on sheep is likely to be more severe than on cattle because of the smaller size of sheep and the type of range grazed by sheep, he said.

Market closing in on 3,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a broad gain today as traders responded to new evidence of a weaker-than-expected economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 11.69 to 2,888.35 in the first half hour of the session.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 777 up, 279 down and 463 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 32.47 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Labor Department this morning reported a rise of 164,000 in nonfarm payroll employment during May, attributing the increase almost entirely to temporary hiring for the Census.

Job figures for April were revised to show a decrease rather than the small gain reported earlier.

Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said no job growth at all has been registered in the private sector of the economy over the last three months.

While that news did not bode well for corporate profits in the near future, analysts said it was welcomed on Wall Street as a possible portent of further declines in interest rates and an easing in the Federal Reserve's credit policy.

Neiman Marcus reports increase

DALLAS (AP) — Increased revenues and a slight drop in operating earnings have been reported by Neiman Marcus Group Inc., which also projected a loss exceeding $3.2 million for the fourth quarter ending in July.

The parent company of Dallas-based specialty retailer reported Thursday that for the 13 weeks ended May 5, the company had revenues of $376.8 million, up 8.2 percent from $342.6 million in the 13 week period a year ago.

Operating earnings were $19.2 million, compared with $19.3 million the previous year. Net earnings were $4.0 million in the 1990 quarter, down from $4.7 million a year ago.

After preferred dividends, Neiman Marcus Group had a loss on common shares of six cents per share for the current quarter, compared with a loss of four cents per share in last year's quarter.

The revenue gain reflected a 5.5 percent increase in comparable sales and the inclusion of the results from one new Neiman Marcus store and nine new Contempo Casuals stores, according to Richard A. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer.

The Neiman Marcus division, which accounts for nearly 75 percent of the firm's total revenues, had higher revenues and slightly higher operating earnings in the current year quarter.

Union floats buyout idea

DALLAS (AP) — A financial advisor hired by striking bus drivers has asked to meet with Greyhound Lines Inc. to discuss a possible employee buyout of the struggling bus company.

In a letter dated May 29 to Greyhound management and creditors, Brian Freeman said he believed "100 percent employee ownership of all transportation operating and related assets, together with a significant creditor restructuring — is the best solution to the company's troubles."

Freeman, also an advisor in the proposed $4.54 billion employee buyout of UAL Corp., said Thursday a price for the Greyhound buyout had not been determined, and no financing had been arranged although he said money "should be available."

Although suggesting the buyout, Freeman said the union also is willing to discuss other alternatives.

"Within the short-term, I intend to make a specific proposal, and begin to press aggressively toward a resolution," wrote Freeman, hired by the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions.

Wellness Center to have open house today

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Howard College's new Davis Wellness Center is ready for the public, said Director of Personnel Jan Foresyth.

An open house is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. today at the facility on the Howard College campus.

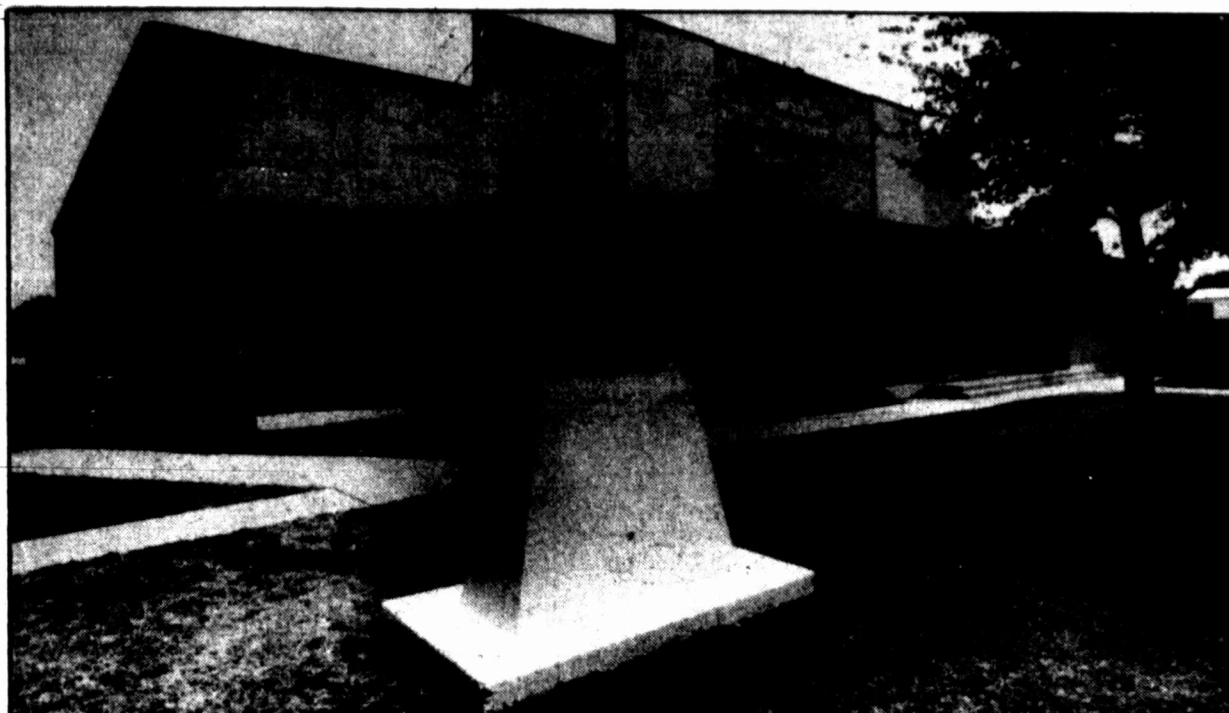

The center, which was planned as a benefit for employees at the college, has grown to include the possibility of several corporate memberships as well as the general public, Foresyth said. Big Spring Independent School District, Western Container and other local companies and organizations have been approached about joining the class, she said.

A membership requires taking a one-credit class, available only to persons eligible for admission to college. A high school student, for example, would have to be approved for early admission.

Though credited as a course, there is no set time for participation. Members can work out whenever they like between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m.

A member must register for the 16-week program three times a year, paying the $64 registration fee each time, Foresyth said.

At least an average of 40 visits is required in a three-month period if one wants the course credit, she said.

The center's foremost feature, Foresyth said, is the 28-station "Super Circuit," a combination of machines designed for optimum toning and cardiovascular fitness. A basketball court and walking track are available, and classes in aerobics and nutrition are planned.

One of two full-time staff members will be on hand to monitor workouts and promote safety. Consultant Guy Owen will offer his expertise in such courses as nutrition, weight loss and quitting smoking.

A big plus, Foresyth said, is the savings a group can gain on its insurance rates if the members are healthy. She said she envisions the place as a lunch-hour workout where members can come in, complete the circuit and get back to work in about an hour.

"We hope the community will take part in this," Foresyth said. "I think it's the neatest thing that's ever happened out here."

For Howard College employees, the program started with a concern over rising insurance costs. After a screening of 115 people, 36 were found to need a visit to the doctor for such problems as high blood pressure and cholesterol levels.

Walking was the first mass fitness plan, Foresyth said, but as cold weather approached, purchase of two exercise bikes was planned. The two bikes soon became a system of machines, dressing rooms and a full-scale wellness plan involving lab tests, cardiac screening and nutrition courses.

The cardiac tests, Foresyth said, are primarily to discover health problems which could make working out dangerous. The costs would be included in a corporate membership but not the individual.

So far the response has been overwhelming, she said, especially since advertising has been only word-of-mouth.

The need for such a program, Foresyth said, is undeniable. "I think with our way of life, people are so busy that health is not a concern until they have a problem." Staying well is prevention, she said.

WASHINGTON — The government's main economic forecasting gauge fell in April for the second time in three months, a sign analysts said portends continued sluggish growth with pockets of weakness in construction and manufacturing.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators, designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance, fell 0.2 percent in April — due in large measure to the third straight monthly drop in building permits.

*** — New home sales plummeted in April to their lowest level since the nation's economy emerged from the 1981-82 recession, the government said.

Analysts attributed the fifth consecutive monthly decline to continued double-digit mortgage rates.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that new home sales totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 546,000 units in April, the smallest number since 521,000 units were sold in December 1982.

*** — NEW YORK — With the return of bull-market enthusiasm that has carried stock prices to new highs in the past few weeks, Wall Street is setting its sights on a lofty target — the 3,000 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

In less than five weeks from April 27 through the close Wednesday, the "Dow" — the oldest and best known measure of trends in stock prices — surged up 233.51 points, or 8.8 percent. From Wednesday's record reading of 2,878.56, it needed only a 4.2 percent advance to reach 3,000.

*** — TOKYO — The Japanese government has approved the sale of audio tape decks that can make direct digital recordings of compact discs, a move expected to aid marketing and sales of the expensive devices.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry's approval Wednesday was timed to allow Japanese manufacturers to introduce the machines at the Consumer Electronics Show, which opens Saturday in Chicago, industrial officials said.

The new decks' ability to make virtually perfect copies of CDs is expected to boost sales for the much-debated recording medium, the officials said.

*** — NEW YORK — "Draconian" clean-air proposals under debate in Congress threaten the U.S. steel industry's recovery from its severe slump of the early 1980s, industry leaders said as they gathered for their annual meeting.

Also threatening the industry's health are the high cost of capital in the United States and foreign competition, leaders of major U.S. steel companies said Wednesday at the American Iron and Steel Institute meeting.

*** — NEW YORK — Ivan Boesky's chief trader testified that John Mulheren Jr. temporarily held large blocks of securities for Boesky in 1985 in an alleged scheme to help his former friend avoid taxes and securities rules.

Michael Davidoff, testifying Wednesday at Mulheren's trial in U.S. District Court, offered a trade-by-trade breakdown of an alleged pact with Boesky's Seemala Corp. that forms the heart of government's case against Mulheren.

The government has said Mulheren entered into the trades with Boesky in exchange for information about pending corporate takeovers. Mulheren is charged with 41 counts of conspiracy, mail and securities fraud, and record-keeping violations.

*** — WASHINGTON — After a more than 40-year lull, stocks and bonds could be traded again in Warsaw this year if necessary legislation is approved, two visiting Polish officials said.

The pair, winding up a two-day meeting with U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission officials, said Wednesday they are drafting Poland's first securities regulations since the Communists took power after World War II.

*** — PARIS — U.S. and European officials failed to break a deadlock over government payments to farmers, throwing further doubt over ambitious plans to overhaul the world trading system.

Airline official to meet prosecutors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bankruptcy trustee for Eastern Airlines was to meet today with a federal prosecutor to try to head off possible indictments on charges of falsifying maintenance records, according to The Washington Post.

The trustee, Martin R. Shugrue, will meet with Andrew K. Maloney, U.S. attorney for the eastern district of New York, to discuss a grand jury investigation of the airline's maintenance operations in New York, Atlanta and Miami, said today's editions of the Post.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources in Miami and New York.

The Federal Aviation Administration last year fined Eastern $839,000 for alleged maintenance violations, primarily for what the agency said were fraudulent entries in records at Kennedy International Airport in New York. The company surrendered its federal license to maintain aircraft there.

One former Eastern official at another airport said mechanics were routinely certifying that they had tested for water in fuel tanks when they had not done so. Large amounts of water in a fuel tank could cause an engine to stall.

The FAA referred the case to the Justice Department.

The newspaper said no current Eastern official had been informed that he or she was a target of the grand jury investigation.

Asked about the Post report, Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said: "We aren't specifying why he (Shugrue) went to New York."

BUSINESS REVIEW

City Finance makes small loans

"For those sudden, unexpected cash shortages, we fill a real community need," says Debbie Walling, manager of City Finance, 206½ Main Street.

Money to pay bills, take a vacation, pay for car repairs, buy new school clothes — even to pay for college books and tuition — are among the reasons people turn to City Finance, she says.

"We've had record months recently," Debbie says. "We've been sending out mailings and doing a lot of phoning to let people know we want their business."

The loan limit has recently been raised by the State of Texas to $340, Debbie says. All that is required is for the customer to fill out an application, have a permanent income and pass credit approval.

The business is state regulated, with the state setting the interest rate and payment schedule, and the state specifies that the borrower must have the means to pay back the loan. State auditors check the firm's books annually.

Another important use of a small loan is to establish credit. For example, a customer will bring in a son or daughter or friend. The borrower then makes regular payments and thus establishes a credit rating.

A LOAN FOR ALL SEASONS — In business in Big Spring for more than 30 years, City Finance specializes in small loans up to $330. The friendly staff consists of Debbie Walling, (right) manager, and Pat Cypert.

Debbie and her associate, Pat Cypert, try to provide a friendly, comfortable atmosphere that puts customers at their ease. To improve services to customers, City Finance is continuously refurbishing, and has recently added new customer service counter and newly furnished waiting area.

City Finance has been in business in Big Spring more than 30 years. Debbie has been with the firm 11 years, with Pat on the staff 6 years. Doing business in the downtown area, both Pat and Debbie are supporters of the downtown renovation now underway. "We feel that more people will be coming down and getting acquainted with us," Debbie says.

Business hours are 9:00 to 5:30 Monday through Friday (including the lunch hour) and 9:00 to noon Saturday.

Area briefs

Drinking and boating dangerous

AUSTIN — The combination of crowded lakes and drinking boat operators can be a deadly one on the weekend.

Boater education officials of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said many of the 29 water-related fatalities were caused by "improper lookout" when operating a boat, and half of all boating accidents are alcohol-related.

"Alcohol impairs a person's balance, vision and judgment," said Jack Nasworthy, boater education coordinator. "This impairment is compounded when you add the stress of noise, sun, wind and glare to alcohol consumption."

Operating a boat is at least as complicated as driving a car, and a boating accident can be just as dangerous as an automobile accident, Nasworthy said. "Yet, many people who would never drive a car while drinking think it's safe to operate their boat while drinking. It is illegal and dangerous."

A conviction of boating while intoxicated can mean fines of up to $2,000 and as much as one year in jail.

For further information about boating safety, contact Nasworthy at the TPWD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744, or call toll-free 1-800-792-1112, or (512) 389-4372.

Brotherly love

By CHRISTINA FERCHALK

My two sons were born 10 years apart. While I didn't expect them to be mirror images of each other, I did think there would be some indication that they came from the same genetic pool.

Both sons have dark hair and dark eyes; that's where the similarity ends.

No. 1 son has aristocratic facial features. The chubby cheeks of No. 2 son are splattered with freckles. No. 1 son is tall, lean and graceful. No. 2 son is built like a Pittsburgh Steeler linebacker and has been known, on occasion, to trip over the pattern in a carpet.

No. 1 son walked early, talked early and requested to be toilet trained. No. 2 son climbed long before he could walk, talked only when absolutely necessary and considered a potty chair to be an instrument of the devil.

In his spare time, No. 1 son would read. No. 2 son spent every free minute fishing, playing sports or roaming the woods collecting wildlife. On wash days, I'd be terrified to empty the pockets of his jeans. Heaven only knew what specimen from the bottom rung of the food chain would be lying in wait.

Neighbors would often call me to compliment No. 1 son. "Such a well brought up child," "So polite," "You can be proud of that one."

No. 2 son prompted a few phone calls of his own. "What would possess a kid to stuff my gas tank with dandelions? Why would he do that in my flower bed?"

No. 1 son always looked clean. No. 2 son got dirty climbing out of the bathtub.

No. 1 son loved the academic climate. At the school's open house, teachers would sing his praises and I'd bask in the glow. "How nice to finally meet you, Mrs. Ferchalk. You're son is such a jewel."

No. 2 son was dragged, kicking and screaming through the education system. At his open house, I'd sneak in the back door, but his teachers would nail me all the same. "You can't hide in the bathroom forever, Mrs. Ferchalk. We have to talk. That kid of yours is a real gem!"

No. 1 son was intellectual, artistic and creative. No. 2 son was none of those things. He was just a grubby, lovable little kid who would gladly give you the shirt off his back.

My two opposites didn't attract, they repelled. There was no common ground. It seemed the only thing they shared was a bedroom. No. 1 son would be in the top bunk, engrossed in a book, while No. 2 son, in the bottom bunk, would giggle, pass gas and drive his brother to distraction. Many times, when checking on them late at night, I'd find they had fallen asleep in the same bed, their little hands still gripping at each other's throats.

The day No. 1 son was due to leave for the Navy, his sisters showered him with goodbye kisses and hugs, but little brother was nowhere to be seen. I found him in the kitchen, hiding beside the stove. His hands, balled into fists, were pressed against his eyes. His shoulders shook with sobs. "Der was just me and him, Mommy. We was de only boys. Now it's gonna be just me and all dem gulls, and I hate dem gulls!"

I know when I'm out of my league. Some situations aren't meant to be handled by a "gull." I called in big brother. When the two boys came out of the kitchen, big brother had his arm around little brother's shoulder.

I was never told the details of the kitchen summit, but apparently my two sons came to a meeting of the minds. They discovered they share considerably more than just a bedroom.

Since his brother left the nest, there haven't been any dramatic changes in No. 2 son. He's still the nemesis of his sisters, but there is an understanding in his eyes that wasn't there before. He's still too young to fully appreciate the joys of growing up with his siblings. That understanding will come years from now, when it's all just a memory. But he has realized a terrible truth: Nothing stays the same forever.

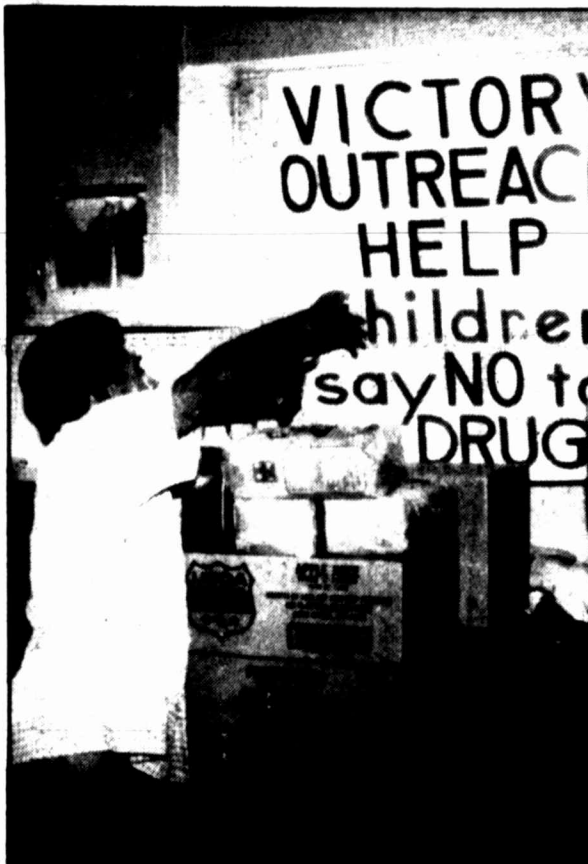

He doesn't know it yet but there is another terrible truth waiting for him around the next bend. There will come a time when he realizes he not only loves his brother, but deep down inside he even loves "dem gulls."

Victory Outreach

Center offers hope for addicts

Victory Outreach, Lamesa, is a Christian home for drug addicts and alcoholics.

government. In the photo at right, are the bunks where the reforming addicts sleep.

Ramiro Mendez mows the lawn at the home where he hopes to open a drop-in center for drug addicts and alcoholics.

Ramiro Mendez, pastor of Victory Outreach, Lamesa, shares his story of alcoholism and salvation.

By LYNN HAYES
Lifestyle Editor

LAMESA — Sitting on a couch in a former medical clinic, Ramiro Mendez excitedly tells his story of alcoholism, rebellion and salvation.

Hanging on a wall in the sparsely furnished building is a sign that reads "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." Romans 8:28. A sign, which Mendez believes with all his heart.

After years of fighting alcoholism, Mendez gave his life to Christ after realizing he needed help to kick his addiction.

The pastor of Victory Temple, Lamesa, Mendez runs Victory Outreach, a Christian home for drug addicts and alcoholics.

A native of San Angelo, Mendez sought help after realizing his life was a living hell. "I was going through a divorce. I saw my brother stabbed, and I was an alcoholic," he explained.

Mendez, like a lot of alcoholics and drug addicts who want help, couldn't afford a treatment center. However, that didn't stop him from trying.

Late one night while sitting in a San Angelo night club, he decided he'd had enough. "I was sitting there drinking. I just got up from the table and headed to Lubbock. I went to three halfway houses before they told me about Victory Outreach," he explained.

"I came to seek help," he said. However, when he arrived he wasn't prepared for the center's strict rules, and above all, he wasn't anxious to follow its Christian teachings. "I said I didn't need a Christian ministry. But then I came to this home and I accepted Jesus Christ as my savior," he said with a smile.

After several days at the center Mendez changed his mind. "They encouraged us to read and study the Bible. I got so excited. I wanted to call everyone. I wanted them to see what I was reading."

Eight years have passed since Mendez gave his life to Christ. He now helps those who come to the 24-hour Lamesa center.

When a person comes into the home Mendez tells them right away there are rules to be followed. Telephone privileges are taken away for 30 days, they can't have visitors, and they're not allowed to smoke cigarettes, he said. "Brothers" or "sisters," as participants are called, are strictly supervised.

No medications are given to the suffering addict. The only help he's given is prayer, Mendez said. "The person that really wants a way out will humble himself and be obedient."

Although the government does supply food commodities, the center is run mostly on donations from the community. "My wife helps out, too. She makes tamales and we sell them around town," Mendez explained. "I've even sold candy apples," he said with a laugh.

Mendez said the free Christian program has proved successful. "You could go to counselors, and through drug programs, but without Christ in your heart, you won't be cured. 60 percent are cured. But the cure is 100 percent," he explained.

A former heroin addict, Jessie Salestino found his way to the center. "I was on heroin for 20 years. I shoplifted to support my habit," he explained.

Tired of his life, Jessie decided he needed a rest. "I came to the center to rest for four days. But, God had other plans for me. I've been here nearly five years," he said.

Mendez, who hopes to open a Victory Outreach facility in Big Spring one day, already has a home in which to operate. Salestino, who leads Bible studies and serves as a counselor at the Lamesa facility, might run the Big Spring center. "A woman has donated the use of a home in Big Spring. There's a need for this there. I met three men the other day who said they wanted to come," Mendez explained.

The local facility will be a short-term resting place for drug addicts and alcoholics who want someone to talk to. "We want to be there for them. We'll offer them a cup of coffee and some food, and if they need a place to stay for one or two days, they're welcome. We want them to know there's hope and that someone does care about them," Mendez said.

Before the local facility can begin operating it's in need of some repair work, Mendez said. "We need people to help us with little repairs, we need donations to keep it going."

If a person is in need of long-term help, he is welcome to stay at the Lamesa center.

"We want to tell them about the center in Lamesa, and encourage them to come if they need help. Some people only need a few words of encouragement — most are told there's no hope," Mendez explained.

The Victory Outreach program is run by thankful volunteers who care about addicts and alcoholics. "I'm grateful for what God has done in my life," Mendez said. "We don't get paid. We're doing it out of the heart."

Victory Outreach, a nationwide program, was initiated in Texas several years ago by Freddie and Ninfa Garcia, co-authors of "Outcry in the Barrio."

Freddie, who was sick and desperate because of his addiction, surrendered his life to God. Ninfa soon followed. They began their ministry by opening their homes, and later a church, to addicts in need of rehabilitation.

Through their efforts, several centers have been founded in Texas, giving hope and salvation to addicts, Mendez said.

Victory Outreach receives referrals from various agencies. Wilbur Ray, chief adult probation officer for the 106th Judicial District, said he believes the program works. "It's a good program. When people go to Victory Outreach, we see better long-term results compared to a 30-day program," he said.

Ray said he likes the idea of a Christian-centered rehabilitation program. "People need something they can hang on to. They need something they can take with them when they leave."

Melvin Lawson, substance abuse counselor at Crossroads, said although he's never heard of the program, he agrees prayer helps. "Prayer is a part of it (rehabilitation)," he said. "But, it takes a lot of counseling."

Although it's possible to kick the habit without medication, Lawson said, "... it could be dangerous for someone who has been drinking for 20 or 30 years."

Needlepoint inspires contemporary design

(AP) — Exquisite fragments of needlepoint have been found in Egyptian tombs and fine silk-on-silk examples were stitched in 14th-century China, but of all the civilizations that practiced needlepoint through the ages none executed it more beautifully than the English. According to Traditional Home magazine, their needlepoint works continue to inspire contemporary designs.

The English were smitten by needlepoint 500 years ago. By the time of Queen Elizabeth I, it had become all the rage among the royals. Elizabeth was reportedly so fond of the intricate stitchery that she often wore waistcoats made of it and filled her palace with tapestries and rugs, bed curtains and bellpulls, and furniture fashioned from needlepoint.

They got such a kick out of their reunion last October, some Big Spring High School exes voted to keep the fun going.

"We hope to have an outing once a month," says Pat Simmons, who chaired the combined reunion of the classes of 1943-44-45-46 last year. The outings will draw exes from Big Spring, Coahoma, Midland and Odessa, says Pat.

Midland's Red Lobster restaurant was picked for the inaugural event.

Making the trip from Big Spring were Horace and Jewell Tubb, Bill and Bonnie Mims, John and Helen Stanley, Bill and Millie McMahon, Boyce Patton, LaVerne Lewis, Frances Eden, Colleen Slaughter and Pat.

Bill and Montez Bunn went from Coahoma. And the group was joined by exes from Midland — Bobby and Marilyn Pritchett, the Harlan Morgans, Bill Clanton and John McIntosh.

Exes now living in Odessa will be hosts in October, says Pat.

"I've been busy baking pies and cookies, and tidying the house and yard," says Opal McDaniel. "But today I'm just sitting here in the chair resting."

Opal is getting ready for a family reunion at her home June 9. "It's the first time we've all been able to get together in a long time."

Opal's children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren — 25 in all — are coming to see her granddaughter Dana and Kevin Fossett off to Nairobi, Kenya, where Kevin has a three-year assignment with the U.S. government.

Kevin and Dana will be coming from San Antonio with his parents, Luther Boyd and Joyce (Anderson) McDaniel, former Big Spring residents.

Luther Boyd will retire from civil service July 1, says Opal. "I told him I thought it was about time he retired so he can come see his mother more often," Opal quipped.

Former resident Charlene Eudy Brasher was one of the artists featured at a Memorial Day festival at the Gazebo Shopping Center in Ruidoso, N.M.

Charlene, who grew up in Big Spring and graduated from Big Spring High School in 1956, has gained quite a reputation for her hand-painted Southwest clothing. She now fills orders from five states.

At the age of 8, Charlene began her art studies here with Mary Raley.

Pinky and Quincy Kelley returned this week from two weeks in the cool (32 degrees one night!) mountains of Ruidoso.

Pinky's aunt, Jett Kelley, Austin, made the trip with them.

Highlight of the vacation was the big Memorial Day horserace at Ruidoso Downs. The Kelleys made several bets — and one of Pinky's horses came in!

"It paid $46 on a $2 ticket," Pinky said. "But I lost the ticket!"

Tom Angel, Chuck Patrick and Ricky Scott will provide the music for a sing-a-long at the Cannibal Draw Reunion Saturday at La Posada.

It's the 13th annual convention of those who grew up in Big Spring's old east side prior to 1930.

Folks will be coming from all over Texas and other states as well. There's still time to make reservations; call Mack Underwood, perennial Cannibal Draw Reunion chairman, at 263-0915.

30 years of teaching proves entertaining

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Bernard Rains of Denison taught school 30 years. He saved some of his more enjoyable comments and answers from students. In one class, I was talking about the war of 1812," says Bernard, "and how the British marched in and burned Washington. With no prompting or anything, one of the girls in the class said, 'well I didn't know that's how he died.'"

Once in an eighth grade history class, a boy who usually didn't get his homework was the only one in class fully prepared. It was about Columbus," says Bernard, "and I asked the student if he remembered when Columbus discovered America. The boy answered, '1492.' I just bragged on him. I liked the opportunity to give him some status with his fellow students and friends. Then I asked him what month? He said 'October.' I told him he was right again and congratulated him. I asked him if he knew the day. He paused and I could tell he was concentrating. He asked me, 'was it a Tuesday?'"

Bernard stressed the importance of everyone in class handing in a paper when it was due. "One class of mine had 27 students. I got 27 papers. Two of them were exactly alike, including the name. One boy had copied his friend's paper, name and all."

One time the topic was Henry the VIII. Bernard had lectured the students all week on Henry the VIII's influence on England and he was in hopes they had retained a little of what he had been talking about. One girl's paper read, "Henry the Ape. I don't know who gave him that name, but it was a funny one."

Bernard had some unusual answers as to what started and ended the depression of the thirties. "One girl said the cause of the depression was the fact that there just wasn't enough love in the world. Another student said the depression finally ended by the coming of the railroad. The trains brought needed supplies."

Once Bernard was staging a mock trial for his eighth grade history class. One 14-year-old boy, acting as prosecuting attorney, was asked by the judge if he would like to examine the witness, who happened to be a beautiful 14-year-old girl. "You bet I would!" came the reply.

Bernard Rains keeps all his school memorabilia in a folder he takes with him when he travels in his motor home. He says it's always a good conversation starter.

His folder also contains some drawings done by his students. One shows a turkey with four feet. Another shows a bow and arrow with the point of the arrow pointed toward the person pulling the bow.

"I had some good students during my 30 years of teaching," says Bernard. But these are my special ones."

I once read an article about student bloopers. Here are some examples. In the first book of the Bible, Guinness, Adam and Eve were created from an apple tree. The Greeks had myths. A myth is a female moth. Socrates died from an overdose of wedlock. Julius Caesar extinguished himself by being murdered by the ideas of March. Sir Francis Drake circumscribed the world with a 100-foot clipper. Queen Elizabeth's Navy went out and defeated the Spanish armadillo. Miguel Cervantes wrote Donkey Hotey. Beethoven was so deaf he wrote loud music. Queen Victoria sat on a thorn for 63 years. Thomas Jefferson, a Virgin, died and is still dead.

Happy summer vacation, teachers and students.

Viewers see more than they like

DEAR ABBY: It happened again last night. It must be "the place" to meet and talk on several otherwise excellent TV shows. I'm referring to the men's restroom. The most of-fense show in this respect is "L.A. Law," and now the premiere of "Capital News," too. I am very uncomfortable and offended while watching TV with friends and/or young people when men are filmed literally going through the motions of using the urinal as they talk to one another.

On "L.A. Law" last week, two men in two stalls dropped their pants and tossed toilet paper between stalls — all the while the camera photographed this from the floor. Is this really an acceptable area for filming? I find it very embarrassing to have to share in such a private (or it should be) act.

Abby, you have more clout than viewers boycotting advertised products. What is your opinion? I don't think I'm a prude; I just believe this is in extremely poor taste. — MIDWEST R.N. AND MOM

DEAR MIDWEST R.N.: I agree with you, and I don't consider myself a prude either. Perhaps we're lucky. It could have been worse.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help concerning something that happened to me many years ago. I am now 23 years old and have a very good memory. The trouble started when I was about 3 or 4 years old. My grandfather would pick me up and put me on his lap; then after a while, he would put his hand under my dress and rub me in a private place. With a little girl's mind, and because I was so fond of him, I never thought he would do anything wrong. I would tolerate it as long as I could, then I'd get down. This went on until I was about 7 years old. I remember trying to stay off his lap because it made me feel uncomfortable and ashamed.

When I was 10, my grandfather died. I kept remembering what he had done to me, and I couldn't bring myself to feel sad. Meanwhile, my mother loved her father very much and cried for a long time every time his name was mentioned. Once she asked me if I ever thought of Grandpa and if I missed him. That really got to me, Abby, because I remember what a terrible thing he did to me, and I was glad I didn't have to sit on his lap.

Should I tell my mother what happened and destroy the good memories she has of her father, or keep it to myself since he is now dead? He doesn't deserve to be well thought of after violating my body as a child, but I don't want to hurt my mother.

What should I do? — BITTER MEMORIES

DEAR BITTER MEMORIES: Call the toll-free National Child Abuse Hotline, (800) 422-4453. In addition to information and referral services, telephone crisis counseling is provided to child abuse victims, abusers and others closely involved in such situations. Your local mental health society can recommend a therapist who specializes in counseling adults who have been molested as very young children and still harbor the bitter memories of sexual abuse.

Counseling will help you work through these painful memories, so that you can finally put them to rest. No good purpose would be served in telling your mother.

DEAR ABBY: My family and I have recently undergone nine weeks of home hospice care for my terminally ill mother. Words cannot describe the marvelous care she received from this wonderful kind of service, as well as the emotional support and direction we, her caregivers, received.

My sister and I, and my mother's sister, were the primary caregivers and, as such, we learned a great deal about home hospice care behavior for visitors and relatives alike. You would do your readers a big favor if you print the following information for the benefit of patients under home hospice care:

1. Remember, the patient is terminally ill and will not recover, so do not say, "I hope you get well soon," or, "Are you feeling better today?" Say instead, "I am so glad that you are able to visit with us for a while."

2. Do not overstay your visit. Five or 10 minutes is all that most weakened patients can tolerate.

3. Do not expect coffee, refreshments or entertainment. Remember that the caregivers are already exhausted from giving 24-hour-a-day care.

4. Do not bring unsolicited food or plants. The patient may feel guilty for not joyfully responding to either. Instead, send appropriate greeting cards and short notes, which can be leisurely read to the patient.

5. If possible, use a restroom before coming to visit. The patient's bathroom is usually loaded with wet laundry and/or necessary medical supplies, and may be an embarrassment to the household.

6. Do not telephone for daily reports — there is no secretary available for phone answering service. Once or twice a week is sufficient.

Home hospice care is a wonderful arrangement for those patients (and families) who fit the criteria and who wish for death to occur at home. But, it is still a "hospital situation," and visitors should respect the wishes of the patient and caregivers.

Thanks for lending an ear. — EUGENIA B. MURRAY, R.N., STATEN ISLAND, N.Y.

This Is A Newspaper Ad About Newspaper Ads.

It's an advertisement for advertisements.

This newspaper ad will tell you how effective newspaper ads can be for your business.

At this very moment, you're reading and enjoying while you get information and entertainment. Your concentration and attention are focused on this ad.

And this ad alone.

That concentration, very simply, is the power of newspaper.

Radio and television wish they could command that kind of attention from their listeners. But, too many times, radio and television commercials become little more than background noise.

When people turn to their paper, they turn there with interest. Which means that's where your advertising message needs to be.

With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.

But everything becomes a little simpler when you remember one rule.
