The Rev. Lawrence Jenco of Jolliet, Ill., is embraced by U.S. Ambassador to West Germany, Richard Burt, at the U.S. airbase at Frankfurt, as Burt's wife looks on. Jenco was released Saturday after being held captive for 19 months by a Shiite extremist group in Lebanon.

Jenco reunited with family

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Jenco spent six months in chains in solitary confinement and then shared a small room for a year with other American hostages in Lebanon, he told relatives today in a reunion of hugs, kisses and tears.

The 51-year-old Roman Catholic clergyman was freed Saturday after nearly 19 months in captivity, and 10 of his relatives — three brothers, three sisters, a nephew and three in-laws — flew to West Germany for a joyful reunion.

Jenco, of Joliet, Ill., described his captivity to family members who met him at the U.S. Air Force Hospital in Wiesbaden, where he was flown from Damascus, Syria, where he was taken after being released in east Lebanon.

The priest, speaking in a voice choked with emotion, told reporters from the Wiesbaden hospital balcony: "I'm not too sure it's true, it's a dream come true. It's great to be back, to be loved again, to be back with the family."

Jenco also called for the release of the other Americans.

"When Terry Anderson, Thomas Sutherland and David Jacobsen come back again, that will be my great day of joy," Jenco said.

"Terry Anderson is one of you," Jenco called down to journalists, referring to Anderson's post as chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. "Don't forget Terry Anderson, and David Jacobsen,... and Tom Sutherland. There are people waiting for them, too."

Beirut car bomb kills at least 32 people

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb devastated a densely populated area of Christian east Beirut during morning rush hour today, and police said the blast killed at least 32 people, wounded 140 and trapped others in blazing buildings.

Firefighters scaled mobile ladders to the upper floors of seven apartment houses set on fire by the explosion and rescued more than 40 people who screamed from balconies and rooftops for help.

Rescuers hunted for at least seven people feared buried in buildings toppled by the blast's concussion.

"My brothers, my two brothers!" screamed Josiane Azar as rescuers pulled two bodies out of the rubble of a clothing shop her brothers owned. She then fainted.

Many victims were charred beyond recognition.

"It was a mad scene," said Nawal Ghattas, an east Beirut resident. "People screamed. Motorists raced away, honking their horns, and the wail of ambulance sirens was deafening."

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the car bombing, the sixth and deadliest in east Beirut this year.

Public Health Minister Joseph Hashem, a Christian, was in tears when he inspected the damage. "Words are too weak a vehicle to express the adequate condemnation of such a barbaric crime," he said.

A huge black cloud of smoke hung over the area after the 8:28 a.m. explosion, which gouged a 6-foot-deep crater in Wadih Naim street near the Star cinema in Ein Rummaneh's Snoubra neighborhood.

Police said the car, a white Mercedes-Benz parked near the movie theater, had an estimated 440 pounds of TNT.

Firefighters brought the flames under control several hours after the explosion. Police were unable to say how many people were still trapped inside buildings.

Three apartment buildings were gutted. Many balconies were blown off their smoke-blackened fronts. About 30 buildings were pronounced uninhabitable and 20 shops were completely destroyed. About 50 cars were destroyed.

Chopped-off power cables dangled into the water that filled the street as firefighters fought to put out the blaze.

Civil Defense rescue teams, fire engines and ambulances crowded the scene of the blast. Christian radio stations broadcast urgent appeals for blood donations.

"I was ironing family clothes when it happened," Mrs. Ghattas said in a telephone interview. "I felt as if my eardrums were split as window glass shards fell all around me."

OPEC begins talks aimed at cutting oil production

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC ministers today began talks on a proposal aimed at cutting oil production to shore up falling oil prices, and the initial response was positive, the cartel's spokesman said.

The opening session adjourned after 90 minutes. Spokesman James Audu said ministers would hold informal talks later today and return for a full session on Tuesday.

Delegates of the 13-member Organization of Oil Exporting Countries last met in June on the Yugoslav island of Brioni, where a majority agreed to establish an average daily production ceiling of 17.6 million barrels for the entire cartel this year.

Ministers today presented their governments' responses to that plan, which would require lower national output quotas. Audu said the responses were "very positive."

Saudi Arabia's powerful oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, asked before today's meeting if there were divisions within the cartel on the proposal, told reporters: "We'll see."

But Mana Saeed Otaiba, the United Arab Emirates' oil minister, said he still thought the conference faced an "impossible task" in trying to gain the cooperation of oil producers inside and outside OPEC to prop up oil prices.

The conference, held in the tightly guarded Intercontinental hotel, opened without Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, who was scheduled to arrive in Geneva later in the day. Members of Iran's delegation attended the opening session.

An OPEC accord on production quotas was believed to be the only way to restore stability to the international oil market and raise prices.

OPEC has a self-imposed production ceiling of 16 million barrels a day. But the free-for-all policies of some member states have raised the cartel's current production to more than 19 million barrels a day, glutting the market.

Oil prices on the spot market have dropped to around $9 to $10 a barrel from about $32 a barrel in December.

The falling prices have seriously hurt the economies of some OPEC nations. Some have increased their output to make up for lost revenue, flooding an already saturated market.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti warned last week that oil prices may fall further if OPEC ministers fail to agree on new national production quotas.

The problem has been compounded by overproduction and the lower prices offered by some non-OPEC oil producers.

Couple decides to die together

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas (AP) — Don and Betty Morris were a joyful couple who loved fishing, the outdoors and romance, and after 50 years of marriage decided to die together rather than die slowly apart, their children say.

Morris, a semi-retired psychiatrist, and his wife, a retired psychologist, both 76, were found dead by police in the bedroom of their home last Monday after the Southwestern Medical School received a letter explaining that they had taken lethal doses of Nembutal, a depressant.

After their long, blissful marriage and successful medical careers, the couple couldn't bear the thought of being separated or finishing out their lives in a nursing home, their children say.

Two suicide notes were found in the small bedroom of their modestly furnished home. In a note to his three surviving children, Morris said he feared that as his heart condition grew worse, he would be hospitalized, to die slowly instead of in a "decent and respectable manner."

Don Morris Jr., 49, a California archaeologist, said, "The two of them together could function well, but not alone. If Dad had another heart attack, that would have put Mom in a nursing home. They didn't want that. They had seen too many friends who had been placed in nursing homes."

Ralph Morris, 38, described his parents as "a geriatric Romeo and Juliet," but said when Morris suffered a string of heart attacks in the 1970s, their lives "began to grow smaller."

Changes in state's education system 'inevitable'

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Changes in Texas' college and university system are inevitable because education is always changing, says the director of a blue-ribbon panel examining state institutions.

Earlier this month, much to the relief of officials and supporters at universities in Alpine, Odessa, Galveston and Commerce, that panel unanimously voted to maintain state funds for Sul Ross State University, the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Texas A&M University in Galveston and East Texas State University, respectively.

However, the Select Committee on Higher Education, which Vic Arnold directs, is still considering a variety of other options that could affect the current makeup of the state's institutions of higher education.

Whether those changes will include the merger or conversion of state-supported schools remains to be seen.

One thing is clear, however: in the months to come, members of the select committee will be taking a long and hard look at how the state's colleges and universities are run.

"Ultimately — next year, the year after, five years from now — we're going to have to be consumed with interest to answer the question: how best can we educate the citizens of Texas?" Arnold says.

"In my mind, that question is not answered yet. And as long as it remains unanswered, I think we ought to provide some alternatives to find out what's the best way to give the best education we can possibly afford."

The committee is charged with developing a comprehensive study of the state's senior universities, health science centers and junior colleges.

In the wake of an estimated $3 billion budget deficit, the panel also is studying the efficiency of the organizational structure of many institutions.

Paralegal makes lawyer's job more efficient

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

There's something exciting that has evolved from lawyers and their legal secretaries.

It's a relatively new but flourishing career cast from molds of the lawyer and the legal secretary. The career is that of the paralegal — the legal assistant.

Often times, paralegals do the more routine work — from research to drafting documents — normally performed by lawyers.

Their tasks free up lawyers to be more productive, to interview more clients, to try more cases, to be more efficient, to be more creative, and to save the client money even while the law firm may be more profitable.

Paralegals also are cost-effective.

"They allow us to work more cheaply," said Midland lawyer Smith Ray. "There are a lot of routine documents and documentations that require training and skill and which can be done by legal assistants — subject to review by the lawyer."

And for the same work which the lawyer might charge $100 to $125 an hour, the paralegal — through the supervising lawyer — would bill the client at $50 an hour.

"So, you're doing the work more efficiently," said attorney Gary Douglas.

The paralegal is less likely to be interrupted in research than would be the lawyer, he said.

As a result, the turn-around time is faster. Douglas said that the legal profession is under a similar pressure now facing the medical field — to lower costs.

In a case, the lawyer will put "the skeleton together," the legal assistant will "flush it out" and expand, and the lawyer will review and revise the work.

Scobee's daughter reflects: 'Dad was always my hero'

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — The daughter of the man who commanded the doomed space shuttle Challenger says not an hour or day goes by that she doesn't think about her father and the way he was taken away.

"The public will always think of him as a hero, because he died on a shuttle mission. I don't think they'll ever forget any of the men and women — they were all heroes," Kathy Krause said.

"Dad was always my hero, even when he wasn't an astronaut."

Shuttle commander Francis "Dick" Scobee and six other American astronauts died Jan. 28 when the shuttle exploded during liftoff from Cape Kennedy.

Mrs. Krause, 25, who lives at Fort Hood in Killeen with her husband, U.S. Army Capt. Lee Krause, and their 17-month-old son, Justin, reflected on the Challenger tragedy and of her father in an interview with the Killeen Daily Herald.

The intense publicity given the shuttle mishap was difficult to handle, but at the same time "the knowledge that the public mourned with us helped a lot," she said.

"When the glare (of publicity) was the hottest, I was so overwhelmed with missing Daddy. It's hard to grieve for someone, much less with the whole world watching," she said.

Six months after the national tragedy, she said although she understands the public nature of her father's death, the publicity still bothers her.

"All the attention makes it uncomfortable. I don't get it as bad as my mom does because she has been on television more, or my brother, who of course has the same last name," she said.

"The attention I get I don't like — 'Oh, you're the Kathy Krause whose father was killed.' That's enough to hurt anyone.

"Being a journalist, I know the need for information and the public's right to know for historical purposes, but from a personal view, (interviews) make you live it all over again," she told the Herald.

The astronauts and their families might be out of the public's eye momentarily, she added, "but in a year or two, when the next shuttle goes up, the press will be back."

New hepatitis vaccine to be available by January

Serum first genetically engineered vaccine

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The first genetically engineered vaccine, approved by the Food and Drug Administration last Wednesday and to be on the market by January, will be used to protect against the hepatitis B virus.

Developed by the ChironCorp. of Emeryville, Calif., and scientists at the University of California at San Francisco, the new vaccine, called Recombivax HB, is designed to protect healthy individuals against infection by the hepatitis B virus, a major cause of liver disease throughout the world.

About 200,000 new cases of Hepatitis B, also called serum hepatitis, are reported each year in the United States with about 250 a year dying from it.

Texas Department of Health statistics for 1983-1985 reveal that 95 of the 4,291 Texans who had Hepatitis B died as a result, though none of the 23 cases in Midland County or 19 cases in Ector County in that two-year period resulted in death.

Jeff Taylor of the health department's epidemiology office said an increase in cases has been seen in Texas since the late '70s, but said he couldn't say why.

The virus can be carried in body fluids, blood products used for transfusion or by the use of unsterile needles and instruments, Dr. Tulsi Singh, a Midland family practitioner said.

"A conventional form of the vaccine which has been available since 1982 — Heptovax-B — is produced from the human plasma of those infected with Hepatitis B," Singh said.

However, many have expressed fear that any vaccine derived from human blood may inadvertently contain diseases such as AIDS, despite the heat and chemical treatments designed to purify it.

The fear is heightened by the fact that homosexuals and intravenous drug abusers are in the high risk group for Hepatitis B as well as acquired immune deficiency (AIDS).

But Singh says there is no evidence to support the claim that AIDS or any other disease has been transmitted through the Heptovax-B vaccine.

Others who face a high risk situation include dental and medical workers, newborn children of infected women and travelers to parts of the world where Hepatitis B is rampant, such as southeast Asia, sub-Saharan Africa and parts of the Middle East.

The production of Recombivax B avoids the use of human plasma. It is made by inserting a gene from the hepatitis B virus into yeast cells, causing those cells to produce a surface protein from the virus which, when incorporated into a vaccine, can trigger immunity.

The Recombiant DNA, or gene-splicing, technology from which the new vaccine was created, could be applied to many diseases for which there are now no preventative vaccines, such as AIDS, Singh said.

Viral hepatitis is an acute infection of the liver, caused by one of the three hepatitis viruses, A, B, or non-A,non-B.

There are no preventative vaccines for Hepatitis A or Hepatitis non-A, non-B, although some recommend the Gamma Globulin vaccine, used to treat Hepatitis A, as a preventative measure for Hepatitis non-A, non-B, although its success rate is questionable, Singh said.

How the disease is caught, how fast it grows and the results of the illness vary with the kind of virus, but the symptoms of the disease and its treatment are the same.

Severe infection, especially with hepatitis B virus, may last a long time and result in tissue destruction, liver disease (cirrhosis) and chronic hepatitis or in coma and death, Singh said.

The condition may be caused by several factors including viral infection, alcohol, drugs, poison or transfusion of the wrong type of blood, Singh said.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

PARALEGALS

Paralegals are relatively new to the law profession.

They virtually were unheard of as late as 1970. The more versatile and industrious legal secretaries historically have been "two-hatters" who performed both secretarial duties and lower-echelon duties now performed by paralegals and lawyers who elect to do without paralegal assistance.

At the outset, most paralegals were legal secretaries who took on additional responsibilities. Most were, and still are, women.

Paralegal Denise Holden said, "There's virtually not any limit to what we do. It's up to the lawyer."

But the paralegal, since he or she is not a licensed attorney, ethically is prohibited from performing certain duties which are the lawyers' bailiwicks.

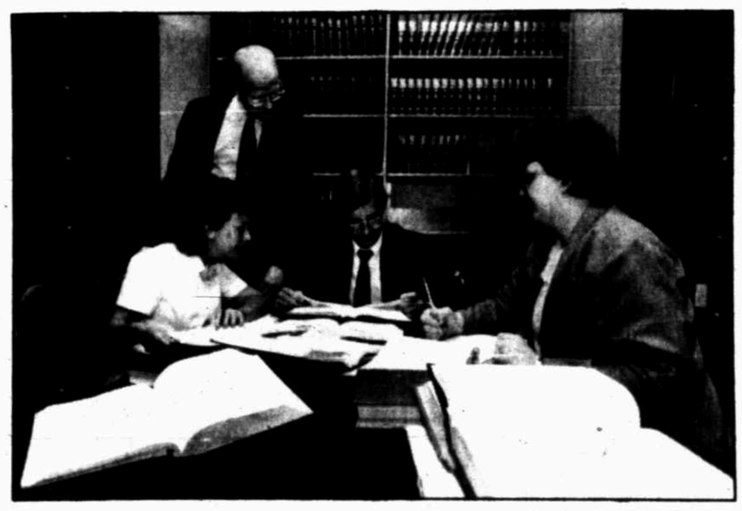

The paralegal:

- Cannot accept cases.
- Cannot set fees.
- Cannot give legal advice.
- Cannot appear in court for a client.

For a paralegal to give advice would be practising law, noted Ms. Holden, and that is taboo.

"We can discuss with a client factual data," Ms. Holden said, "but we cannot give advice."

"The whys and whats are not the kind of questions we should answer," said Ms. Holden, who is past president of the Legal Assistants Association/Permian Basin (LAA/PB) and is a certified legal assistant (CLA).

Ms. Holden specializes in banking and corporate work for Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, Inc., Midland's largest law firm, which has a staff of 40 lawyers, five paralegals and 28 secretaries.

"A lot of times, legal assistants can perform certain tasks just as well as attorneys," she said. "A client is going to be a lot happier getting a $500 bill than a $2,000 bill for the same work."

The work of paralegals may include researching the law; drafting documents, pleadings and letters; checking courthouse records; filing pleadings and other documents, and assisting lawyers in trials.

By using paralegals, the lawyer theoretically is able to practice his "higher skill levels" and allows the paralegal to accomplish those tasks that require a "lesser amount of legal skills," Ray said. "There's more bang for the buck."

"I think it definitely improves the quality," said Ray. "I think we (lawyers) spend more time in making legal decisions and conclusions."

When paralegals first emerged, they initially were the butt of some resentment from legal secretaries, who, ironically, gave rise to the paralegal career.

"As the concept became better understood in the work relations, acceptance followed," said Douglas.

"We had secretaries who were functioning more than just stenographers and typists," noted Ray, and became de facto paralegals.

Said legal secretary Becky Kinsey: "I work for lawyers but work with paralegals. We operate under a team-type arrangement. The paralegals are responsible for certain duties, and the legal secretaries are responsible for certain duties. We work together."

Paralegal Elizabeth Mashburn's duties in a one-lawyer office include doing administrative work, updating the library, maintaining correspondence with clients, and summarizing depositions.

To paralegal Carolyn Benson, being a legal assistant challenges her "to the full extent of my capabilities as long as I am willing to learn."

Ms. Benson, a CLA, is LAA/PB president.

"I feel like when I quit learning, it's time for me to die," she said. "There's always opportunity to achieve greater expertise in any given field."

Mrs. Krause has a degree in journalism and was the former editor of The Wifeline, the newsletter of the Officers Wives Club.

"They showed the tape of the disaster over and over again, and it seemed that a day didn't go by that they didn't show it again and I was watching my father die yet again.

"What has changed my life is that I am kinder to people, because you never know who is walking around and carrying some grief with them," she said.

Mrs. Krause and the rest of the family viewed the launch from a rooftop next to the rocket assembly building, away from the public and cameras.

She recalled that some of the family of Christa McAuliffe, the first teacher to fly on the shuttle, also were with her when disaster struck.

She credited her husband with getting her through the ordeal.

"He was strong; he helped out with the baby if I needed to go cry or do something. We have lots of pictures of Justin wrestling on the floor with Dad. He was a regular grandpa. I don't want Justin's vision clouded about him...I want him to remember Dad as the loving, modest man he was."

Scobee was selected for NASA astronaut training in 1978, when Mrs. Krause was already in high school.

"So it's not as though I grew up as an astronaut's daughter — but as a pilot's daughter, which I thought was just as risky and daring as being an astronaut.

"We were all thrilled when he was selected for the program," she said.

She said that the space program doesn't play as much a part in her life now.

"Several people who work there are close family friends and we visit them when we are in Houston. They didn't abandon us at all. The accident was hard on our astronaut friends — they have fears and hesitations now, I'm sure," she said.

Bitterness against NASA for the accident is not her way, Mrs. Krause said.

"I'm not bitter against anyone. No amount of bitterness will bring Daddy back. I have no direction to vent my anger. I'm just angry that it happened.

"They need to fix the problem and see that it will never happen again. It won't help to be angry, but I am determined that they should fix it."

Her mother, June Scobee, is establishing the Children's Challenger Center in Houston, a hands-on science museum "so kids can climb in and do things, rather than looking at them from afar," he said.

COUPLE

Their daughter, Beth Eichenberg, 46, of Houston, said, "For 50 years, it was adolescent first love."

Last Sunday, on their last night together, the couple prepared a meal of all the things they had been forbidden to eat — scrambled eggs with cheese, lots of bacon, ice cream, and corn chips.

Then the couple went to their bedroom, sipped their favorite sherry, and lay down in each other's arms, waiting for the poison to take effect.

Along with the suicide notes, police said they also found a note with a menu of the couple's last meal and a list of poems reflecting on death.

"The problem of many deteriorating old people is obviously a new one — everybody used to die too soon," Morris wrote. "Therefore, as a society, we have not learned to deal with it in a decent and respectable manner."

The children said their parents told them they would eventually commit suicide. But in his suicide note, Morris said he regretted taking his life "surreptitiously...under cover of darkness."

On Friday, a small group of family and friends gathered at the Morris home, toasting the couple with some of the pair's favorite vices: champagne, sherry and popcorn.

Morris requested that the bodies be donated for research to the Southwestern Medical School, where he was a faculty member, and that the children scatter the couple's ashes along Turtle Creek — their favorite outdoor spot in Dallas.

Morris, of Illinois, and Betty Dozier, born in Alabama, met in the early 1930s while attending graduate school at Yale University. The couple moved to Highland Park, an affluent suburb surrounded by Dallas, and established successful medical practices.

OPEC

On Sunday, the ministers met for 2½ hours as OPEC's Long-Term Strategy Committee, then spent the rest of the day in private discussions.

Absent from that meeting were the delegations from Libya and Gabon. Those two countries, along with Iran and Algeria, opposed the new ceiling proposed at Brioni, urging a bigger slash in output in an attempt to shore up prices faster.

Libya's oil minister, Fawzi Shakshuki, delayed his arrival in Geneva to stop in Saudi Arabia and deliver a message from Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi to Saudi King Fahd. The contents of the letter were unknown.

Saudi Arabia's Yamani, whose country is the largest OPEC producer, chaired Sunday's meeting and said later that the talks were useful.

Asked if OPEC ministers could reach definite agreement to cut aggregate production and reduce their national output quotas, Yamani told reporters, "We have to move (in that direction)." He declined to elaborate.

Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, who was the principal architect of the proposal agreed to at the Brioni conference, said after Sunday's talks that he was optimistic.

"I am always optimistic. There is some movement," Subroto said, but also declined to elaborate.

JENCO

Peggy Say, Anderson's sister, arrived in Cyprus today after nine days in Syria, where she worked for the release of her brother and the other hostages.

Islamic Jihad, a group of Shiite Moslems, claimed responsibility for kidnapping five Americans, including Jenco. The group has said it killed U.S. diplomat William Buckley, 58, but no body has been found.

The other missing Americans are Anderson, 38; Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut; and Jacobsen, 55, director of the university hospital.

Jenco was abducted Jan. 8, 1985, in Beirut, where he directed Catholic Relief Services operations that served both Christians and Moslems.

The relatives, speaking at a hotel near the hospital, said the reunion was charged with happiness. "It was a very emotional 10 minutes of hugs, kisses and a lot of tears" at the beginning of the two-hour reunion, said Andrew Mihelich, a nephew. "It was a very exciting time for the family."

The priest told his family about his captivity.

"He was never beaten, he was never brainwashed, he was treated with respect. But in the first several months until July 2, he was chained around his ankle and to the wall, and he had three feet to walk. He did not get too much exercise. He did not see light," the priest's brother, John Jenco, said.

Jenco and three other American hostages were kept together in a small room since July 2, 1985, and spent time reading and joked with their captors, John Jenco said. They did not know where they were being held and were blindfolded when their captors were present.

Relatives quoted Jenco as saying he never saw Buckley.

"The captors said, 'Is there anything that you would like, Father?' He and the other hostages would respond, 'a taxicab,' " Mihelich said.

John Jenco said the captors gave the priest a Bible.

"He continuously read the Psalms, and he sang to himself," John Jenco said. "Then he said the rosary. He said 15 million Our Fathers and Hail Marys. After tiring of that, he finally started taking up exercise."

The former hostage is "a very tired and a very fragile man, but he responded quite well considering the ordeal he went through," Mihelich said.

The hostages' diet consisted primarily of rice, cheese, beans, bread and jam, Mihelich quoted his uncle as saying.

One brother told a television reporter that Jenco looked healthier than they expected, and that he told them he was kept in a room with "steel plates on the doors and windows, no air circulating."

John Jenco said his brother had only two pairs of undershorts for the entire time he was held hostage, but was allowed to bathe once a day. He was moved seven times.

Joe Jenco, another brother, said the family hopes to meet with Pope John Paul II on Thursday or Friday. The pontiff called Jenco at the hospital Sunday.

Among the items the relatives brought with them from the United States were the priest's favorite snack, popcorn; clean clothes, and gin for a special martini. John Jenco said his brother's recipe is "just straight gin with his apostolic blessing on it."

Jenco will undergo medical tests in Wiesbaden before returning home to Illinois. His captors said in a statement that they released him because of his deteriorating health.

Hospital administrator Col. Robert Gilmore said initial tests showed Jenco had an "ongoing heart disease."

"His overall medical condition is satisfactory, considering his detention...his age of 51 and the fact he hasn't slept for three days," Gilmore told a news conference Sunday.

Jenco brought a videotaped message from Jacobsen who said he and the other hostages would be killed if the Reagan administration did not negotiate with their captors.

Islamic Jihad demands the release of 17 Shiites imprisoned in Kuwait for the 1983 bombings of the French and U.S. embassies. Kuwait has refused. Islamic Jihad is believed linked to Iran. Kuwait supports Iraq in a six-year-old war with Iran.

BOMB

Police said at least 32 people were killed and 140 wounded, the highest casualty toll in a car bombing this year. A car bomb blast on Jan. 21 killed 30 people and wounded 133.

Ein Rummaneh was hit earlier this year by a car bombing. A blast on Feb. 12 near the district office of President Amin Gemayel's rightist Christian Phalange party killed two people and wounded 15.

It was the sixth car bombing in east Beirut this year. A total of 63 people were killed and 405 wounded in the previous explosions, according to police. Christian spokesmen blamed the past car bombings on Syria's secret service, saying the attacks were part of a campaign to force Maronite Catholic President Amin Gemayel to step down.

Syria has rejected the charge. It has been at odds with Gemayel since January, when he scuttled a peace pact the Syrians mediated among the principal militias warring in Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war.

COLLEGES

The projected deficit has nothing to do with the inevitability of the committee's pursuit, Arnold says, adding it's simply "random coincidence" that the two issues have surfaced at once.

Arnold deliberately did not calculate the overall impact of the options the select committee is considering.

"I don't want anyone to ever infer that we subscribe to any or all of those actions," he says, "because we don't."

Among other things, the committee is considering the conversion of six universities into "study centers."

Under that arrangement, student enrollments would not be reduced and academic programs would remain the same, Arnold says.

"By converting these six campuses to study centers rather than independently funded and operated campuses, cost savings would result with no reduction in educational services to students."

The state would save about $3.5 million annually by converting all six universities into study centers.

Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, a member of the select committee and chairman of the Senate Education Committee, claims the conversion is really a "downgrading" of the campuses.

"Your statement that programs would continue without lessoning is ludicrous," Parker told Arnold last week during a committee meeting.

The panel also is considering the merger of several universities with junior colleges, including UTPB with Midland College and Odessa College.

Advantages to such mergers include: better academic course planning and coordination of a single university setting, a new funding mechanism which would allow the local ad valorem taxes to be used exclusively for the maintenance and additional construction costs, Arnold's staff reports.

Disadvantages of such mergers would be a dilution of vocational and technical training, continuing education and remedial courses.

The panel is also looking into a possible merger of Texas Tech University in Lubbock with UTPB, West Texas State University in Canyon, Midwestern University in Wichita Falls and Sul Ross.

The state would save about $2.1 million a year by merging Tech with UTPB, $212,704 a year by merging Tech with WTSU, $324,185 annually by merging Tech with Midwestern and $685,689 a year by merging Tech with Sul Ross.

Austin Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, also a member of the select committee and chairwoman of the House Higher Education Committee, agrees it is time for education officials to reexamine the structure of Texas universities and colleges.

Thus far, she is unconvinced that the merger or conversion of universities into "study centers" is the answer.

"I think it's perfectly legitimate for the state" to examine the structure and efficiency of the state's universities and colleges, Ms. Delco says.

"It's (mergers or downgrading) of institutions, not in the interest of Texas. You can always go in and chop money off, you can always cut back on things, but it diminishes educational opportunity."

— Sen. Carl Parker

"But whether or not looking into it ought to lead to the automatic conclusion that we're spending too much or that we should close some of our schools or change them dramatically is something else again."

In any case, Ms. Delco adds, each option regarding the conversion or merger of universities should be considered individually.

"If I had to guess...I doubt very seriously that we're going to completely erase the identity of any campuses, but I do think there will be some efforts made to look at the goverance" of institutions.

Parker agrees.

"If I had to bet, I'd bet that they end up not recommending any mergers or downgrading" of institutions, he says. In any case, he does not see that as a viable way to save the state money.

"It's not in the interest of Texas," he says. "You can always go in and chop money off, you can always cut back on things, but it diminishes educational opportunity."

Colleges and universities, Parker adds, thrive on tradition and pride. Once state government begins to toy with the structure of those schools, it "runs the risk of disturbing that, particularly in institutions that have good academic records."

Parker and Ms. Delco agree the committee should take a close look at the formula funding system in which the College and University System Coordinating Board determines allocations for state-supported schools.

The formulas are designed to bring fairness into state financing of higher education by basing appropriations on such criteria as student body size, number of graduate degree programs and complexity of the institutions' organization.

"I think it's time for us to look at that again," Ms. Delco says, "and review whether (institutions) have added things that are legitimate, or just to generate warm bodies that make the program look bigger than it actually is.

If discussions of that kind lead to the redesignation or tightening up of the role and purpose of an institution, so be it, Delco says.

"If, for example, we're really saying that the important thing is a good, undergraduate liberal arts education, and we want to emphasize teaching as being of value...then we ought to start building in some rewards for teaching."

Parker puts it more simply.

"We're sending the wrong signal," he says.

"We reward colleges based on how many graduate programs they have and how many students they have. And that's it."

He says doesn't recommend doing away with the head count criteria altogether, but says the formula funding system could stand some improvement.

For example, if a university wanted to limit its enrollment, the board should reward it for providing what the institution does best.

"If they got more money," Parker says, "then they could establish a cadre of highly capable and recognized faculty. Maybe that would stop the deluge of institutions running to the coordinating board every time you turn around asking for another graduate degree program."

The select committee will report its recommendations to the 70th Legislature when it convenes in regular session next year.

The committee has commissioned the firm of Coopers & Lybrand, Inc., to prepare an exhaustive management audit of of the state's colleges and universities.

That report should be ready for the committee's review by the end of October.

When asked what he expects the audit to tell members of the panel, Arnold says he has no preconceived conclusions.

"All I'm doing is telling (Coopers & Lybrand) to be objective. 'Go where it takes you and let us know what happens,' " he says. "I'd like to think that we can deliberate public policy objectively, based on the facts."

Relatives of remaining hostages want U.S. to do more to free them

Associated Press

Relatives of American hostages in Lebanon expressed hope for their safety after the release of the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, but endorsed another captive's plea that the Reagan administration do more to win the Americans' freedom.

Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest, arrived in West Germany on Sunday with a videotaped message from hostage David Jacobsen, who said he felt he had been forgotten by the U.S. government.

Jacobsen, 55, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut, also said that if the U.S. government does not negotiate with the captors of the five Americans believed missing in Lebanon, "our release will be death."

"I would like to see the prisoners released...,but I don't think the Reagan administration is going to budge on their policy of not negotiating with terrorists," Jacobsen's son, Paul, said in an interview Sunday. "I think you have to open up a dialogue."

Joan Sutherland, daughter of captive Thomas Sutherland, said the Reagan administration should reconsider its position of refusing to negotiate with the terrorists.

"It's kind of a difficult situation because we don't want to give in to terrorist demands, but I have a personal interest in it with my father's being held," she said on the ABC News program "This Week With David Brinkley."

"I think there could be some way of negotiating...I feel that there should be something that is done, not just to turn our backs and say, 'Well, that's what they want, and we can't give it to them, so that's that.' "

Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Middle Eastern affairs, said Sunday, "We have always said we would be willing to talk about safety and release but would not negotiate or compromise with terrorists. There is no change in that."

The shadowy Iranian-allied group Islamic Jihad says it is holding the Americans and wants the release of 17 Shiite Moslems held in Kuwaiti jails before it will free the hostages. Kuwait has refused.

With Jenco's return this weekend, the Americans still missing in Lebanon are Jacobsen; Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut; Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; and William Buckley, 58, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

Islamic Jihad claims to have killed Buckley last year, but no body has been found.

Sutherland's wife, Jean, commented on Jenco's release in a telephone interview from her home at the university in Beirut: "I do think that this is a positive step. It does mean that there is movement and that release is possible."

"We don't know how, why or what or all the ins and outs of the freeing," she told Fort Collins, Colo., radio station KCOL. "I'm not a political person, so I just have to kind of go with it. I don't have any word what this means for Tom."

Jacobsen, 27, of Upland, Calif., remarked on his father's changed appearance on the tape.

"He certainly looks different with a beard and a mustache, and his hair is much longer. He's obviously lost some weight, but he doesn't look unhealthy to me, and that's very encouraging."

However, he emphasized: "I don't think we want to underestimate the danger that these men are in. We see Rev. Jenco in good health and in good spirits, and we see my father looking in relatively good health, and I think it's easy for us to, well — they're in the same position as the hostages in Iran. It's just a matter of waiting."

Titanic researchers return to port with videotapes, photos of vessel

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Researchers who explored the Titanic in its grave 2½ miles below the ocean surface returned to port today with a treasure trove of videotapes and pictures from inside the sunken vessel.

The scientists, led by Robert Ballard, were met by about 100 people as they returned to Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution after nearly two weeks of dives in which they used an experimental, lawnmower-sized submarine to explore the ocean liner.

The crowd — mostly reporters, Woods Hole workers and relatives of the crew — was subdued, in contrast to a boisterous, banner-waving reception last September for the expedition that discovered the Titanic. About 300 people turned out for that homecoming.

Colleagues at the institution, which cosponsored the expedition with the Navy, hoped to keep the return of the Atlantis II low key and focus attention on a reception Wednesday at the National Geographic Society in Washington.

Aboard the Atlantis II were "thousands and thousands of photos and hours and hours of videos" of the luxury liner which sank 450 miles southeast of Newfoundland, said Anne I. Rabushka, spokeswoman for Woods Hole.

Twelve color slides and a three-minute, 10-second videotape of the expedition were flown ashore and released July 18, but none of the new material will be released until Wednesday, she said.

The pictures were taken from the tiny, robot submarine Jason Jr., and from a three-man sub called the Alvin.

The Alvin, equipped with three video cameras and two still cameras, and Jason Jr. with one of each, shot continually during 11 four-hour dives.

The robot was controlled via a 250-foot-long cord, which twice became entangled in Titanic wreckage. The Jason Jr. also was idled two days after water seeped into the motor compartment, but researchers said such problems are expected on a test-run.

"I'd say (Jason Jr.) is a smashing success," said Stewart E. Harris, a research specialist at the institution's Deep Submergence Laboratory. "It went out and did what we advertised it would do."

No other explorations are planned at the site where 1,513 people were killed when the Titanic struck an iceberg the night of April 14, 1912, on its maiden voyage from England to New York and sank on April 15.

But the Atlantis II and the midget submarine Alvin get no time off, Ms. Rabushka said. "The ship will have to get unloaded immediately because there's another trip on Saturday. Alvin is the only active research submarine capable of diving into deep sea. It's in demand constantly."

The ship and mini-sub, booked solid for the next year, are scheduled for a voyage Saturday back to explore underwater mudslides from a 1929 earthquake at a site not far from where the Titanic sank, she said.

Titanic photographs' beauty lies in eyes of scientific beholders

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — To the casual photographer, color slides and videotape of the Titanic might not have lived up to their billing as spectacular footage.

But to deep-sea scientists fighting the pitch black of the ocean bottom and fog-like conditions created by lights reflecting off particles in the water, the shots were nothing less than works of art.

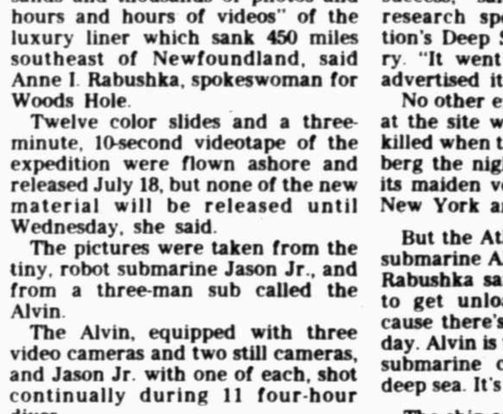

"They're the best pictures you can get underwater," said Stewart E. Harris, a research specialist at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution who has worked on the problems of deep-sea photography.

Trying to get panoramic shots of the ocean liner posed the most difficult photographic problem for the researchers 2½ miles under the ocean's surface, Harris said.

Light cutting through water produces "back-scatter," the same phenomenon a motorist experiences when driving through fog at night. Light reflects off particles in the water and back into the camera in the same way light off fog shines back into the eyes of a motorist, Harris said.

To combat the problem, the lights are moved as far away from the camera as possible, illuminating the object to be photographed from an angle. That way, there is less light-reflecting area for the camera to cut through.

The Titanic researchers, using a three-man submarine and a smaller, unmanned sled for its distance shooting, stationed the lights and cameras at opposite ends of the respective machines.

The vision of the Titanic mission came from human explorers, but the eyes belonged to Jason Jr., a miniature mechanical marvel, shown in this undated photo.

AP Laserphoto

Despite the powerful series of lights used to illuminate the area, the researchers still needed extremely light-sensitive film. The 200,000 ASA black and white videotape was about 1,000 times more sensitive than film commonly used by home photographers.

Scientists also used clusters of lights instead of just one to get more uniform lighting to offset distortions. And they sometimes turned various lights on and off to get the best results.

With all that, Harris said, the research team still could not take shots farther than 140 feet away, but, he said it was incredible they could take any shots from that distance so deep under the sea.

Because it is impossible to take photos from a greater distance, the Woods Hole research team tried to take enough shots so they can create a mosaic to show a complete Titanic.

The close-up color views taken by the remote-controlled robot, Jason Jr., provide much clearer photos and video, but they, too, have problems unique to deep-sea photography.

Undersea currents often kick up floor sediment, obscuring shots, and lighting may affect clarity.

The Alvin submarine, equipped with three video cameras and two still cameras, and the Jason Jr. with one of each, shot continually during 11, four-hour long visits to the wreck.

At night, researchers sent out the Angus sled, which would cruise the area for 12 more hours.

Jenco has 'high hopes' for other hostages' release

By ED BLANCHE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, released after 19 months as a captive of Shiite Moslem extremists, says he has high hopes that three other American hostages in Lebanon will be freed.

Jenco did not say why he feels optimistic. His release came as Syria moved to end the anarchy that has gripped neighboring Lebanon for more than 11 years. But as far as is known, the rules in the macabre bargaining over the hostages have not changed.

When Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest, was freed Saturday in east Lebanon, he reportedly carried the kidnappers' demands for the release of three other Americans with whom he was held for the past year.

The kidnappers of the fundamentalist Islamic Jihad group stressed in a statement issued before Jenco's release that it would be their "last gesture." They warned of "grave consequences" if their demands were not met.

The remaining captives are Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, 55, director of Beirut's American University Hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, 55, the university's dean of agriculture.

Islamic Jihad claimed last October that it killed a fourth American, diplomat William Buckley. No body was found, but the other hostages have said in letters they believe Buckley is dead.

Syria is regarded as the main power broker in Lebanon, and its leaders have said that President Hafez Assad is making a big effort to win the hostages' release. Assad told U.S. Congressman Robert Dornan, R-Calif., several weeks ago there would be "good news very soon" about the hostages.

The Syrian government, dominated by Islam's minority Alawite sect, has repeatedly stressed it has no direct control over the Shiite kidnappers.

But now Damascus is trying to restore order in Lebanon's unruly Moslem-controlled regions where it is believed the hostages are held.

The Syrians have 25,000 troops in north and east Lebanon, including the Bekaa Valley, where the Shiites have a stronghold and where Jenco was freed. They recently moved several hundred troops into lawless Moslem west Beirut.

A high-ranking Syrian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said last week that Syria plans to extend its security operation into Beirut's southern suburbs, where the Shiites dominate.

It is not clear whether the Syrian move is directly linked to any effort to free the Americans. It could put pressure on Islamic Jihad.

So far, the kidnappers have ignored appeals, even from Shiite spiritual leaders, to free their captives.

However, Syria is the main Arab ally of Iran in that country's nearly six-year-old war with Iraq. Islamic Jihad is loyal to Iran, although Iran's leaders deny they control Lebanon's Shiite factions.

The group holding the Americans is believed linked to Al Daawa, a movement of Iraqi dissidents based in Tehran, the capital of Iran. They claimed responsibility for bombing, among other targets, the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in December 1983.

As far as is known, Islamic Jihad's only demand for freeing the American hostages is that Kuwait release 17 people convicted in the bombings.

Kuwait, which backs Iraq and fears being swamped by Iran's Islamic revolution, has refused. Last month authorities there rounded up more suspected Al Daawa members after oil installations were bombed.

On the face of it, Kuwait's refusal leaves little room to bargain for the Americans' release.

Jenco brought out of Lebanon a videotape in which fellow hostage Jacobsen warned, "Our release will be death if the (U.S.) government doesn't act now."

In what may have been a reference to Syria, Jacobsen stressed, "Pressure by other governments on our captors, or the use of force, just will not work."

Bitterly critical of President Reagan's refusal to negotiate and his policy of "quiet diplomacy," Jacobsen said: "The time to negotiate is now. The danger is real.

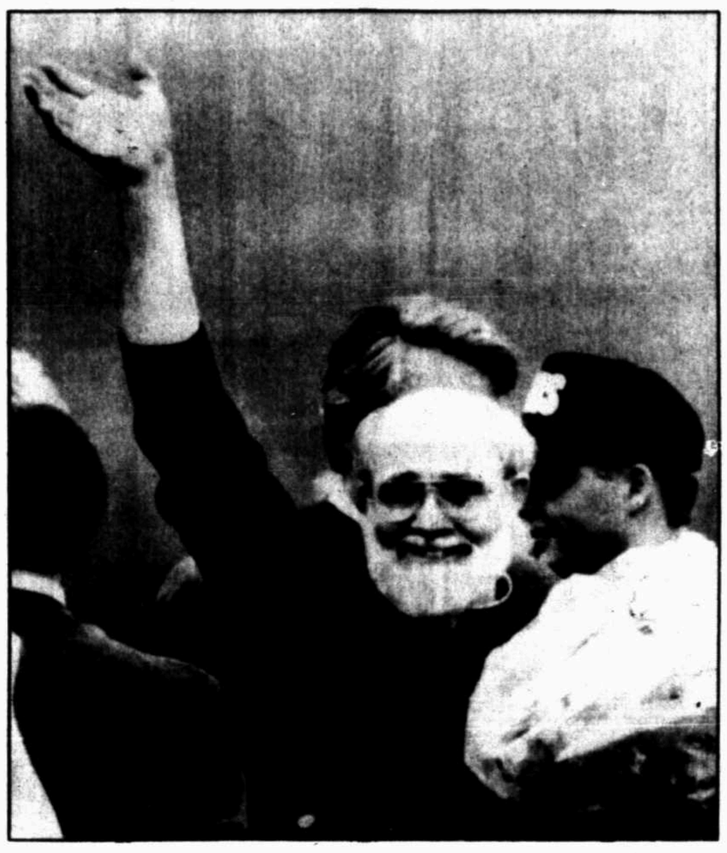

"In this game of life we're in the overtime period and ties are not permitted to end this game. Please act now without further delay."

The French succeeded in getting two of their kidnapped nationals freed in June. A third allegedly was rescued in April by what the Syrians claimed were their intelligence operatives in the Bekaa.

But the French have more flexibility than the Americans. The factions holding the Frenchmen have demanded Paris stop supplying weapons to Iraq, return a $1 billion loan made by Iran's late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and expel Iranian dissidents.

The French pressured leading Iranian dissident Massoud Rajavi to leave Paris, and are negotiating on the loan. They stress that these moves are not linked to the hostage issue.

U.S. officials say they are exploring several options in their efforts to free the hostages. But they appear to have little room to maneuver.

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 51, of Jolliet, Ill., waves to the crowd at the U.S. Airbase near Frankfurt, West Germany, upon his arrival from Syria Sunday afternoon. The American priest, held hostage for 19 months by a group of Shiite extremests, was released Saturday.

An Analysis

U.S. officials willing to contact Shiites believed holding hostages

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — U.S. officials are willing to contact Shiite Moslems believed to be holding at least three Americans captive in Lebanon, but make a distinction "between contacts and concessions," a U.S. diplomat said.

Robert Oakley, American ambassador-at-large for counterterrorism, spoke at a news conference at the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden Sunday after arriving with the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest who was released by his Lebanese kidnappers on Saturday.

Jenco, 51, of Joliet, Ill., was freed in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley after nearly 19 months in captivity.

Oakley said the United States would "work for the release of all hostages in Lebanon. We will not be satisfied until everyone is released."

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite extremist group believed to have ties to Iran, has claimed responsibility for kidnapping five Americans, including Jenco. The group said it has killed hostage William Buckley, but no body has been found.

The kidnappers demand the release of 17 Shiites imprisoned in Kuwait for the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassies there. Kuwait has rejected the demand.

Asked if the Reagan administration would make concessions to secure the release of the hostages, Oakley said: "We've always said in the past that we're prepared to make contacts, but we have tried to make a distinction between contacts and concessions."

Terry Waite, special envoy of the Archbishop of Canterbury, also appeared at the news conference after accompanying Jenco to West Germany, and said the three American hostages known to still be in captivity are "fine."

"Naturally they want to be free, but they are being looked after as well as one can expect under the circumstances," said Waite, who has visited Lebanon several times seeking the hostages' release.

He added, "I do not think it is in the interest of their security," to elaborate on the conditions of their captivity.

Waite quoted Jenco as saying his release was a "gesture of love," and that he hoped it would encourage "efforts to seek reconciliation between Christians and Moslems in Lebanon."

Waite said that "if it's appropriate," he would go to Lebanon again.

"If people want a satisfactory outcome of the problems in Lebanon, it's in everyone's interest to free innocent people," he said.

"There are those in Lebanon with legitimate grievances," Waite said, but added that did not justify the kidnapping of innocent people.

Still missing in Lebanon are Terry A. Anderson, 38, of Lorain, Ohio, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif., director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; Thomas Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collins, Colo., the university's acting dean of agriculture; and William Buckley, 58, of Medford, Mass., a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Castro: U.S. troops in Bolivia rehearsal for intervention

Castro

SANCTI SPIRITUS, CUBA (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro says the dispatch of U.S. troops and helicopters to Bolivia may be only a dress rehearsal for a more ambitious American military intervention there in the future.

Castro ridiculed the notion that the use of military forces in Bolivia will have an impact on U.S. drug consumption, saying that narcotics smuggling will disappear only when there is no longer a demand for drugs.

Speaking Saturday night to a gathering that Cuban officials estimated at 100,000, Castro said the U.S. military action in Bolivia had the earmarks of "an interventionist preparation" in that country.

Castro cited the U.S. drug problem in suggesting that the United States has entered a period of moral and political decline.

Increased drug use, he said, suggests a "failure of U.S. society to practice virtue."

In contrast, Castro boasted that Cuba is not only drug-free but also is beginning to overtake the United States in health and education.

"We're going to leave them behind," Castro said, contending that some areas of Cuba have lower infant mortality and illiteracy rates than does the United States.

Globally, Castro said, the United States is on the defensive in many third-world countries including Nicaragua, El Salvador and Angola.

He said the United States was becoming "impotent" in the face of "the people's struggle" against imperialist domination.

By refusing to impose punitive sanctions against South Africa, Castro said President Reagan had aligned the United States with the "Nazi-fascist-racist" regime of Pretoria.

The occasion for the speech was the 33rd anniversary of Castro's debut as a guerrilla fighter when he led an attack against a military barracks of the rightist dictatorship that he eventually ousted in 1959.

Against a background of the Escambray Mountains, Castro spoke for almost 2½ hours, speaking extemporaneously for the most part and showing little signs of his advancing age. He turns 60 next month.

In most of Castro's recent speeches, he has vigorously criticized "neo-capitalists" who have begun to emerge in Cuban society and he has exhorted Cubans to show more diligence in the work place.

"There is no work discipline," Castro told the committee. "I think it's the worst problem of the revolution today. Don't people understand that the number-one responsibility of a revolutionary is to work?"

Bush tours Jerusalem's walled Old City

Vice president also visits immigrant center

Bush

JERUSALEM (AP) — Vice President George Bush toured Jerusalem today, visiting a center for new immigrants and religious sites in the historic walled Old City.

Bush, accompanied by Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek and hundreds of soldiers and policemen, walked around the alleys of the predominantly Palestinian-populated area.

The Old City, considered holy by Christians, Jews and Moslems, was captured from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war and annexed by Israel the same year. The United States does not recognize the annexation.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, talked with several residents of a center set up to help immigrants adjust to their new homeland. The Bushes visited a Hebrew class for adults, a kindergarten and a community hall.

"We ask the American government to activate now all of its forces to aid Soviet Jews," said Mark Drachinsky, a member of a Soviet immigrant family with whom the Bushes lunched, in a letter to the vice president distributed to journalists.

Bush did not comment directly on the letter, but told Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Sunday that the United States would "continue to speak out" on the issue of human rights in the Soviet Union, according to Bush's press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush is scheduled to meet with a group of moderate Palestinian representatives on Tuesday in Jerusalem.

Some Palestinians who support the Palestine Liberation Organization have called for a boycott of the Bush reception, but others said such a meeting would be useful.

Fitzwater said Bush discussed the possibility of adding Morocco to the itinerary of his 10-day Middle East tour with Israeli leaders but no decision was reached. Bush is scheduled to visit Jordan and Egypt.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres held a two-day summit with Moroccan King Hassan II last week.

Peres has said he believes his visit made progress toward an Arab-Israeli peace and is worth following up with other meetings. Hassan has also expressed hope for further dialogue, but said he saw no progress in the talks.

The English language Jerusalem Post reported that Peres and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak may meet in 10 days to sign, with Bush, an agreement resolving their dispute over the border resort of Taba on the Gulf of Aqaba.

The prime minister's office declined to comment on the report.

U.S. and Israeli officials said no summit could be expected until a Taba accord was reached and Egypt returned its ambassador to Israel, who was withdrawn in 1982 in protest of the Jewish state's invasion of Lebanon.

Britain's Howe to meet with leader of Zulus

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe met today with black homeland leader Enos Mabuza, resuming efforts to encourage talks between South Africa's government and the nation's black majority.

A spokesman for the British Embassy in Pretoria confirmed that the talks had begun. Howe was scheduled to meet Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, leader of South Africa's 7 million Zulus, later in the day.

The sessions with Mabuza and Buthelezi were the closest Howe has come to meeting South African black activists on his week-long trip which also took him to Zambia, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland.

Prominent anti-apartheid leaders in South Africa, including Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, have refused to see Howe, and have described his tour as an attempt to delay Western decisions on whether to impose economic sanctions on South Africa.

Howe is traveling on behalf of the 12-nation European Common Market, but his findings were expected to have a major effect on British policy toward its South African investments.

Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and President Reagan oppose economic sanctions as a means to end apartheid, the system of racial segregation under which South Africa's 5 million whites dominate the country's 24 million blacks.

Mabuza, although chief minister of KazNgwana homeland and thus part of the South African system of government, has taken an independent stand toward black militants. He has called for a removal of the ban on the African National Congress, the exiled black nationalist guerrilla movement, and visited Zambia this year to confer with ANC leaders.

Buthelezi, chief minister of the KwaZulu homeland, has declared his opposition to apartheid, but says blacks will fail in any attempt to oppose the government of President P.W. Botha with violence.

He has demanded the release of Nelson Mandela, the ANC leader now serving a life sentence for plotting against South Africa's government.

Around the country, black students were scheduled to return to school today after a prolonged holiday.

The Department of Education and Training, the government agency that manages black education, had sought to control dissidence in the schools by requiring students last week to re-register for classes.

The department said it expected about 1.3 million students in schools today, a drop from 1.7 million because about 350,000 students had not re-registered by Friday, a deadline set by the government.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Unidentified attackers blow hole in Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) — Unidentified attackers in West Berlin blasted a hole early today in the Berlin Wall separating the Western sector of the city from the Communist East, police said.

A West Berlin police spokesman, speaking in a telephone interview with The Associated Press, said the hole was a little larger than one square yard and blew out windows in several nearby buildings. Investigators were trying to determine what type of explosives was used.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast, which apparently caused no injuries, the police spokesman said.

The explosion took place near Checkpoint Charlie, the best known transit point between the two sectors of Berlin, the spokesman said.

Communist East Germany began erecting the 29-mile-long wall nearly 25 years ago, on Aug. 13, 1961, to halt the flow of refugees to the West.

Bridge protests continue

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Opposition party supporters blockaded an international bridge in this border city for the fourth consecutive day to protest alleged election fraud.

About 700 loaded trucks and 400 empty ones normally pass daily over the Bridge of the Americas with produce and parts for assembly plants in Juarez and the United States, said Nicholas Goldstein, Customs supervisory inspector for cargo.

Since the blockade, which started Thursday night, only about 10 percent of the daily average number of trucks have been able to cross the border using two other bridges designated as alternate routes, said Bob Young, a customs supervisor.

Leaders of the National Action Party, or PAN, have vowed not to leave the bridge until the Mexican government grants new elections in the state of Chihuahua. The government Institutional Revolutionary Party has denied fraud.

PAN and other political leaders have arrived during the blockade to map strategy for more widespread protests. They have said more crossings between the United States and Mexico will be taken over.

Soviet soldiers to withdraw

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today announced that six Soviet army regiments will be withdrawn from Afghanistan this year as a gesture aimed at speeding up Afghan peace talks.

"By taking this step, the U.S.S.R. is striving to speed up political settlement and give it another impetus," he said.

Gorbachev said a schedule for full Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan had been worked out with the Marxist government in Kabul, but would not be put into effect until a "political settlement" was reached.

Such a settlement, he repeated, must include a guarantee that the Moslem rebels fighting in Afghanistan with U.S. and Pakistani backing will lay down their arms.

PEKING (AP) — China had 200 million bicycles at the end of last year, or about one for every five of the country's 1.05 billion people, the official Xinhua News Agency said today.

Xinhua quoted an official of China's State Economic Commission as saying there were 160 bicycles for every 100 urban families and 80 bicycles for every 100 rural families.

Jenco has 'high hopes' for other hostages' release

By ED BLANCHE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, released after 19 months as a captive of Shiite Moslem extremists, says he has high hopes that three other American hostages in Lebanon will be freed.

Jenco did not say why he feels optimistic. His release came as Syria moved to end the anarchy that has gripped neighboring Lebanon for more than 11 years. But as far as is known, the rules in the macabre bargaining over the hostages have not changed.

When Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest, was freed Saturday in east Lebanon, he reportedly carried the kidnappers' demands for the release of three other Americans with whom he was held for the past year.

The kidnappers of the fundamentalist Islamic Jihad group stressed in a statement issued before Jenco's release that it would be their "last gesture." They warned of "grave consequences" if their demands were not met.

The remaining captives are Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, 55, director of Beirut's American University Hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, 55, the university's dean of agriculture.

Islamic Jihad claimed last October that it killed a fourth American, diplomat William Buckley. No body was found, but the other hostages have said in letters they believe Buckley is dead.

Syria is regarded as the main power broker in Lebanon, and its leaders have said that President Hafez Assad is making a big effort to win the hostages' release. Assad told U.S. Congressman Robert Dornan, R-Calif., several weeks ago there would be "good news very soon" about the hostages.

The Syrian government, dominated by Islam's minority Alawite sect, has repeatedly stressed it has no direct control over the Shiite kidnappers.

But now Damascus is trying to restore order in Lebanon's unruly Moslem-controlled regions where it is believed the hostages are held.

The Syrians have 25,000 troops in north and east Lebanon, including the Bekaa Valley, where the Shiites have a stronghold and where Jenco was freed. They recently moved several hundred troops into lawless Moslem west Beirut.

A high-ranking Syrian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said last week that Syria plans to extend its security operation into Beirut's southern suburbs, where the Shiites dominate.

It is not clear whether the Syrian move is directly linked to any effort to free the Americans. It could put pressure on Islamic Jihad.

So far, the kidnappers have ignored appeals, even from Shiite spiritual leaders, to free their captives.

However, Syria is the main Arab ally of Iran in that country's nearly six-year-old war with Iraq. Islamic Jihad is loyal to Iran, although Iran's leaders deny they control Lebanon's Shiite factions.

The group holding the Americans is believed linked to Al Daawa, a movement of Iraqi dissidents based in Tehran, the capital of Iran. They claimed responsibility for bombing, among other targets, the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in December 1983.

As far as is known, Islamic Jihad's only demand for freeing the American hostages is that Kuwait release 17 people convicted in the bombings.

Kuwait, which backs Iraq and fears being swamped by Iran's Islamic revolution, has refused. Last month authorities there rounded up more suspected Al Daawa members after oil installations were bombed.

On the face of it, Kuwait's refusal leaves little room to bargain for the Americans' release.

Jenco brought out of Lebanon a videotape in which fellow hostage Jacobsen warned, "Our release will be death if the (U.S.) government doesn't act now."

In what may have been a reference to Syria, Jacobsen stressed, "Pressure by other governments on our captors, or the use of force, just will not work."

Bitterly critical of President Reagan's refusal to negotiate and his policy of "quiet diplomacy," Jacobsen said: "The time to negotiate is now. The danger is real.

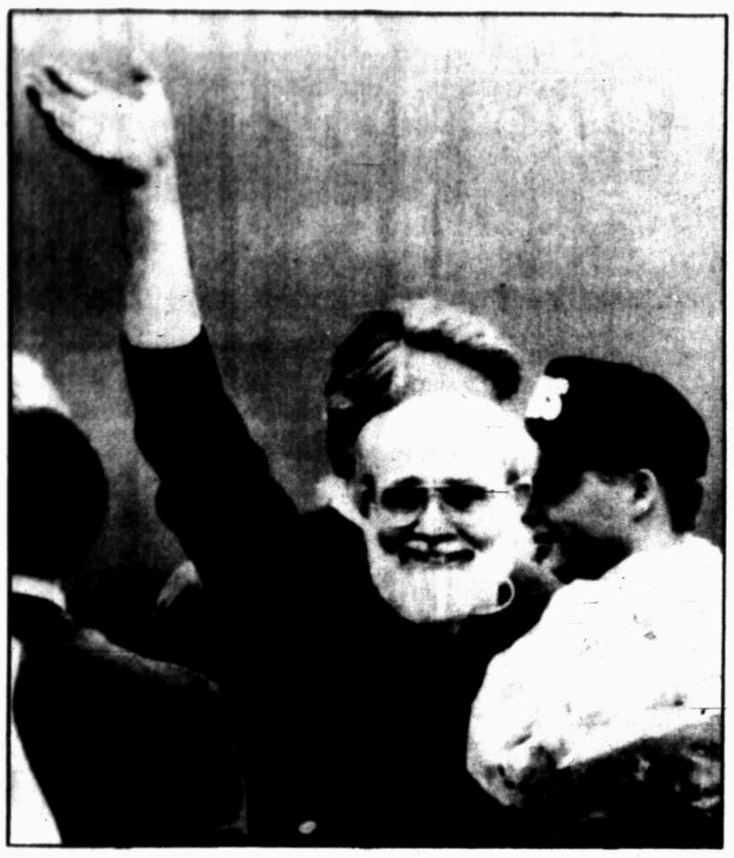

"In this game of life we're in the overtime period and ties are not permitted to end this game. Please act now without further delay."

The French succeeded in getting two of their kidnapped nationals freed in June. A third allegedly was rescued in April by what the Syrians claimed were their intelligence operatives in the Bekaa.

But the French have more flexibility than the Americans. The factions holding the Frenchmen have demanded Paris stop supplying weapons to Iraq, return a $1 billion loan made by Iran's late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and expel Iranian dissidents.

The French pressured leading Iranian dissident Massoud Rajavi to leave Paris, and are negotiating on the loan. They stress that these moves are not linked to the hostage issue.

U.S. officials say they are exploring several options in their efforts to free the hostages. But they appear to have little room to maneuver.

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 51, of Jolliet, Ill., waves to the crowd at the U.S. Airbase near Frankfurt, West Germany, upon his arrival from Syria Sunday afternoon. The American priest, held hostage for 19 months by a group of Shiite extremests, was released Saturday.

An Analysis

U.S. officials willing to contact Shiites believed holding hostages

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — U.S. officials are willing to contact Shiite Moslems believed to be holding at least three Americans captive in Lebanon, but make a distinction "between contacts and concessions," a U.S. diplomat said.

Robert Oakley, American ambassador-at-large for counterterrorism, spoke at a news conference at the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden Sunday after arriving with the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest who was released by his Lebanese kidnappers on Saturday.

Jenco, 51, of Joliet, Ill., was freed in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley after nearly 19 months in captivity.

Oakley said the United States would "work for the release of all hostages in Lebanon. We will not be satisfied until everyone is released."

Islamic Jihad, a Shiite extremist group believed to have ties to Iran, has claimed responsibility for kidnapping five Americans, including Jenco. The group said it has killed hostage William Buckley, but no body has been found.

The kidnappers demand the release of 17 Shiites imprisoned in Kuwait for the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassies there. Kuwait has rejected the demand.

Asked if the Reagan administration would make concessions to secure the release of the hostages, Oakley said: "We've always said in the past that we're prepared to make contacts, but we have tried to make a distinction between contacts and concessions."

Terry Waite, special envoy of the Archbishop of Canterbury, also appeared at the news conference after accompanying Jenco to West Germany, and said the three American hostages known to still be in captivity are "fine."

"Naturally they want to be free, but they are being looked after as well as one can expect under the circumstances," said Waite, who has visited Lebanon several times seeking the hostages' release.

He added, "I do not think it is in the interest of their security," to elaborate on the conditions of their captivity.

Waite quoted Jenco as saying his release was a "gesture of love," and that he hoped it would encourage "efforts to seek reconciliation between Christians and Moslems in Lebanon."

Waite said that "if it's appropriate," he would go to Lebanon again.

"If people want a satisfactory outcome of the problems in Lebanon, it's in everyone's interest to free innocent people," he said.

"There are those in Lebanon with legitimate grievances," Waite said, but added that did not justify the kidnapping of innocent people.

Still missing in Lebanon are Terry A. Anderson, 38, of Lorain, Ohio, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif., director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; Thomas Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collins, Colo., the university's acting dean of agriculture; and William Buckley, 58, of Medford, Mass., a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Castro: U.S. troops in Bolivia rehearsal for intervention

Castro

SANCTI SPIRITUS, CUBA (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro says the dispatch of U.S. troops and helicopters to Bolivia may be only a dress rehearsal for a more ambitious American military intervention there in the future.

Castro ridiculed the notion that the use of military forces in Bolivia will have an impact on U.S. drug consumption, saying that narcotics smuggling will disappear only when there is no longer a demand for drugs.

Speaking Saturday night to a gathering that Cuban officials estimated at 100,000, Castro said the U.S. military action in Bolivia had the earmarks of "an interventionist preparation" in that country.

Castro cited the U.S. drug problem in suggesting that the United States has entered a period of moral and political decline.

Increased drug use, he said, suggests a "failure of U.S. society to practice virtue."

In contrast, Castro boasted that Cuba is not only drug-free but also is beginning to overtake the United States in health and education.

"We're going to leave them behind," Castro said, contending that some areas of Cuba have lower infant mortality and illiteracy rates than does the United States.

Globally, Castro said, the United States is on the defensive in many third-world countries including Nicaragua, El Salvador and Angola.

He said the United States was becoming "impotent" in the face of "the people's struggle" against imperialist domination.

By refusing to impose punitive sanctions against South Africa, Castro said President Reagan had aligned the United States with the "Nazi-fascist-racist" regime of Pretoria.

The occasion for the speech was the 33rd anniversary of Castro's debut as a guerrilla fighter when he led an attack against a military barracks of the rightist dictatorship that he eventually ousted in 1959.

Against a background of the Escambray Mountains, Castro spoke for almost 2½ hours, speaking extemporaneously for the most part and showing little signs of his advancing age. He turns 60 next month.

In most of Castro's recent speeches, he has vigorously criticized "neo-capitalists" who have begun to emerge in Cuban society and he has exhorted Cubans to show more diligence in the work place.

"There is no work discipline," Castro told the committee. "I think it's the worst problem of the revolution today. Don't people understand that the number-one responsibility of a revolutionary is to work?"

Bush tours Jerusalem's walled Old City

Vice president also visits immigrant center

Bush

JERUSALEM (AP) — Vice President George Bush toured Jerusalem today, visiting a center for new immigrants and religious sites in the historic walled Old City.

Bush, accompanied by Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek and hundreds of soldiers and policemen, walked around the alleys of the predominantly Palestinian-populated area.

The Old City, considered holy by Christians, Jews and Moslems, was captured from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war and annexed by Israel the same year. The United States does not recognize the annexation.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, talked with several residents of a center set up to help immigrants adjust to their new homeland. The Bushes visited a Hebrew class for adults, a kindergarten and a community hall.

"We ask the American government to activate now all of its forces to aid Soviet Jews," said Mark Drachinsky, a member of a Soviet immigrant family with whom the Bushes lunched, in a letter to the vice president distributed to journalists.

Bush did not comment directly on the letter, but told Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Sunday that the United States would "continue to speak out" on the issue of human rights in the Soviet Union, according to Bush's press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush is scheduled to meet with a group of moderate Palestinian representatives on Tuesday in Jerusalem.

Some Palestinians who support the Palestine Liberation Organization have called for a boycott of the Bush reception, but others said such a meeting would be useful.

Fitzwater said Bush discussed the possibility of adding Morocco to the itinerary of his 10-day Middle East tour with Israeli leaders but no decision was reached. Bush is scheduled to visit Jordan and Egypt.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres held a two-day summit with Moroccan King Hassan II last week.

Peres has said he believes his visit made progress toward an Arab-Israeli peace and is worth following up with other meetings. Hassan has also expressed hope for further dialogue, but said he saw no progress in the talks.

The English language Jerusalem Post reported that Peres and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak may meet in 10 days to sign, with Bush, an agreement resolving their dispute over the border resort of Taba on the Gulf of Aqaba.

The prime minister's office declined to comment on the report.

U.S. and Israeli officials said no summit could be expected until a Taba accord was reached and Egypt returned its ambassador to Israel, who was withdrawn in 1982 in protest of the Jewish state's invasion of Lebanon.

Britain's Howe to meet with leader of Zulus

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe met today with black homeland leader Enos Mabuza, resuming efforts to encourage talks between South Africa's government and the nation's black majority.

A spokesman for the British Embassy in Pretoria confirmed that the talks had begun. Howe was scheduled to meet Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, leader of South Africa's 7 million Zulus, later in the day.

The sessions with Mabuza and Buthelezi were the closest Howe has come to meeting South African black activists on his week-long trip which also took him to Zambia, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland.

Prominent anti-apartheid leaders in South Africa, including Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, have refused to see Howe, and have described his tour as an attempt to delay Western decisions on whether to impose economic sanctions on South Africa.

Howe is traveling on behalf of the 12-nation European Common Market, but his findings were expected to have a major effect on British policy toward its South African investments.

Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and President Reagan oppose economic sanctions as a means to end apartheid, the system of racial segregation under which South Africa's 5 million whites dominate the country's 24 million blacks.

Mabuza, although chief minister of KazNgwana homeland and thus part of the South African system of government, has taken an independent stand toward black militants. He has called for a removal of the ban on the African National Congress, the exiled black nationalist guerrilla movement, and visited Zambia this year to confer with ANC leaders.

Buthelezi, chief minister of the KwaZulu homeland, has declared his opposition to apartheid, but says blacks will fail in any attempt to oppose the government of President P.W. Botha with violence.

He has demanded the release of Nelson Mandela, the ANC leader now serving a life sentence for plotting against South Africa's government.

Around the country, black students were scheduled to return to school today after a prolonged holiday.

The Department of Education and Training, the government agency that manages black education, had sought to control dissidence in the schools by requiring students last week to re-register for classes.

The department said it expected about 1.3 million students in schools today, a drop from 1.7 million because about 350,000 students had not re-registered by Friday, a deadline set by the government.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Unidentified attackers blow hole in Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) — Unidentified attackers in West Berlin blasted a hole early today in the Berlin Wall separating the Western sector of the city from the Communist East, police said.

A West Berlin police spokesman, speaking in a telephone interview with The Associated Press, said the hole was a little larger than one square yard and blew out windows in several nearby buildings. Investigators were trying to determine what type of explosives was used.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast, which apparently caused no injuries, the police spokesman said.

The explosion took place near Checkpoint Charlie, the best known transit point between the two sectors of Berlin, the spokesman said.

Communist East Germany began erecting the 28-mile-long wall nearly 25 years ago, on Aug. 13, 1961, to halt the flow of refugees to the West.

Bridge protests continue

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Opposition party supporters blockaded an international bridge in this border city for the fourth consecutive day to protest alleged election fraud.

About 700 loaded trucks and 400 empty ones normally pass daily over the Bridge of the Americas with produce and parts for assembly plants in Juarez and the United States, said Nicholas Goldstein, Customs supervisory inspector for cargo.

Since the blockade, which started Thursday night, only about 10 percent of the daily average number of trucks have been able to cross the border using two other bridges designated as alternate routes, said Bob Young, a customs supervisor.

Leaders of the National Action Party, or PAN, have vowed not to leave the bridge until the Mexican government grants new elections in the state of Chihuahua. The government Institutional Revolutionary Party has denied fraud.

PAN and other political leaders have arrived during the blockade to map strategy for more widespread protests. They have said more crossings between the United States and Mexico will be taken over.

Soviet soldiers to withdraw

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today announced that six Soviet army regiments will be withdrawn from Afghanistan this year as a gesture aimed at speeding up Afghan peace talks.

"By taking this step, the U.S.S.R. is striving to speed up political settlement and give it another impetus," he said.

Gorbachev said a schedule for full Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan had been worked out with the Marxist government in Kabul, but would not be put into effect until a "political settlement" was reached.

Such a settlement, he repeated, must include a guarantee that the Moslem rebels fighting in Afghanistan with U.S. and Pakistani backing will lay down their arms.

China has 200 milion bikes

PEKING (AP) — China had 200 million bicycles at the end of last year, or about one for every five of the country's 1.05 billion people, the official Xinhua News Agency said today.

Xinhua quoted an official of China's State Economic Commission as saying there were 160 bicycles for every 100 urban families and 80 bicycles for every 100 rural families.

Looking to save

Privatization" has been a part of the American vocabulary for several years, but the concept to which it refers — government utilizing the services of private industry — gained significant popularity since Ronald Reagan took office and began publicly advocating the practice.

During last week's Midland City Council meeting, council members requested a study from the city staff aimed at determining whether Midland can save money and still obtain at least comparable quality by utilizing private firms to operate fleet services and the Midland Regional Airport parking lot. The primary object, of course, is to save money, a goal elected officials should always pursue.

Saving tax dollars took on added import this year locally as a direct result of the slowdown in the oil industry and the resulting impact on the economy. Midland city officials already have demonstrated their desire to cut corners where possible, preferably without affecting services too severely. That's commendable.

As noted editorially several years ago, "privatization" offers cities a viable alternative to providing some services at lower cost and with greater efficiency than can be achieved with salaried city employees.

That doesn't apply to every city department, of course, and in some instances cities do receive better, cheaper or at least comparable services using city personnel instead of a private contractor. In those instances, it makes more sense for the city to use its own employees.

The two areas the city staff is now looking at for possible "privatization" — fleet services and the parking lot at Midland Regional — appear to be reasonable possibilities for contracting out services. But the council is correct to investigate the matter thoroughly before taking this additional step. The city already contracts out a number of services.

As officials already have indicated, the cutting edge should be (1) saving tax money and (2) obtaining comparable or improved services for taxpayers.

Without those benefits, changing service-providers would be folly.

Another View:

Don't destroy SDI

Opponents of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, which proposes to develop an anti-missile defense that would make nuclear missiles "impotent and obsolete," are moving strongly on two fronts to undermine the program.

Certain White House Staff members and officials in the State Department reportedly are attempting to persuade the president to use SDI as a bargaining chip in arms control negotiations with the Soviets. Undoubtedly, it would be easy enough for the president to get a piece of paper calling for reductions on both sides of offensive nuclear weapons in return for the scrapping of SDI, a course of action strongly urged on him by congressional liberals and the Soviets. The thinking is that Mr. Reagan, eager to leave his mark as a peacemaker, would like to see significant progress on arms control even though his best instincts tell him the process is a sham.

As yet, though, the president is far from taking that position. However, some reports say he is sending signals to Gorbachev indicating an ABM treaty extension is a definite possibility.

Until the president speaks out strongly to squelch this new campaign to bargain away the SDI, the rumors will continue to raise questions about a possible reversal. These include speculation in recent weeks that Mikhail Gorbachev's latest overtures, all calling for the end of SDI, would be accepted.

On the congressional front, opponents on the Senate Armed Services Committee — in addition to cutting the president's SDI request from $4.8 billion to $3.6 billion — struck a serious blow to SDI by approving, 10-9, a report that would drastically alter the concept of SDI. The report strongly implies that Mr. Reagan's goal of developing an anti-missile system that renders enemy nuclear missiles useless is impossible. Instead, the committee recommended greater emphasis on more limited defenses such as protecting U.S. nuclear retaliatory forces from surprise nuclear attack. This attempt to alter and weaken SDI was coauthored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine. Cohen's vote allowed Democrats on the committee to push through this anti-SDI report.

The SDI also would be effectively throttled if Mr. Reagan were to agree to a long extension of the 1972 anti-ABM treaty that the Soviets have exploited to gain a tremendous advantage in missile defense. Some observers see a 15-year extension as a possibility. If such a pact prohibited deployment of a space-based defense, as well as a land-based system, it could mean the end of the program to protect Americans from Soviet missiles. We would be permanently defenseless against an enemy missile attack, and could not even shoot down a missile that might be fired at this country accidentally or as the result of an unauthorized launching.

Mr. Reagan should renounce the useless ABM treaty as quickly as possible, and ensure that this misbegotten exercise in national self-deception does not present an obstacle to effective missile defense.

The fact that Gorbachev is so eager to bring SDI to an end is all the more reason for Mr. Reagan not to do so. Tax reform and the rest of the Reagan agenda notwithstanding, the 21st century is likely to judge the success of this administration primarily on whether it put an effective missile defense into place. The president has said many times that the needs of national security take precedence over all other policy considerations — a statement that should be, but unfortunately is not, a commonplace. Mr. Reagan needs to back that statement up with strong support for the most important defense initiative in decades.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 28, the 209th day of 1986. There are 156 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 28, 1945, the U.S. Senate ratified the United Nations Charter by a vote of 89-2.

On this date:

In 1540, King Henry VIII's chief minister, Thomas Cromwell, was executed.

In 1750, composer Johann Sebastian Bach died.

In 1821, Peru declared its independence from Spain.

In 1868, the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, guaranteeing due process of law, was declared in effect.

In 1932, Federal troops dispersed the so-called "Bonus Army" of World War I veterans who had gathered in Washington since May, demanding money they were scheduled to receive.

In 1945, disaster struck New York's Empire State Building when a U.S. Army bomber crashed into the 79th floor, killing 14 people.

In 1959, Hawaiians participated in their first election since statehood, voting to send the first Asian-Americans to Congress.

In 1965, the Los Angeles Summer Olympic Games opened, minus 15 nations who stayed away in a Soviet-led withdrawal.

Reagan officials offend Jews again

WASHINGTON — No administration has tried harder to court the Jewish community than Ronald Reagan's — with less success. Every time the White House tries to patch things up it seems to do the wrong thing, with the result that relations between the administration and American Jewish leaders is now at rock bottom.

Jack Anderson

The latest affront to Jewish sensitivity is a pip: The White House office of liaison with Jewish groups has been downgraded. What's worse, in the eyes of some Jews, is that the current White House "Jewish affairs" man, Max Green, is actually subordinate to Linas Kojelis, a Lithuanian-American who has offended Jewish leaders.

Kojelis is a strong advocate of Eastern European ethnic groups that have urged the dissolution of the Justice Department's Nazi-hunting Office of Special Investigations. They charge that the office is a dupe of the Soviet KGB in the prosecution of naturalized Americans accused of participating in the Nazi Holocaust of World War II.

It didn't used to be this way. Green's predecessor as Jewish liaison, Marshall Breger, held the title of special assistant to the president. Kojelis was then at a lower level in the White House pecking order as associate director of the Public Liaison Office in charge of ethnic groups.

Then last year, the liaison office chief, Linda Chavez, reorganized the setup to eliminate all ethnic representatives, including Breger. He and Kojelis were named co-chairmen of the new Foreign Affairs/Defense Division. In practice, each continued to handle liaison duties as they had previously, Breger for Jews, Kojelis for other ethnics.

But Breger's aggressive tactics were not appreciated by certain elements in the White House staff that resented the special status accorded Jewish leaders and their advice. Chief among these was communications director Patrick Buchanan. During the controversy over President Reagan's wreath-laying visit last year at a West German cemetery containing graves of SS men, Buchanan scribbled on a notepad: "Too much Jewish pressure."

Buchanan and Chief of Staff Donald Regan decided to eliminate the Jewish affairs office. To their surprise, they got support from several Jewish leaders and the Israeli Embassy.

No less than Gerald Kraft, president of B'nai B'rith International, sent President Reagan a blunt letter urging that the Jewish liaison office "be abolished and not filled." He explained that the Jewish community "is not a monolith" and contended that the office was "counterproductive and, occasionally, damaging."

But other Jewish leaders objected when Breger was kicked upstairs and out of the White House. Vice President Bush insisted on keeping the Jewish office, and Regan and Buchanan backed down.

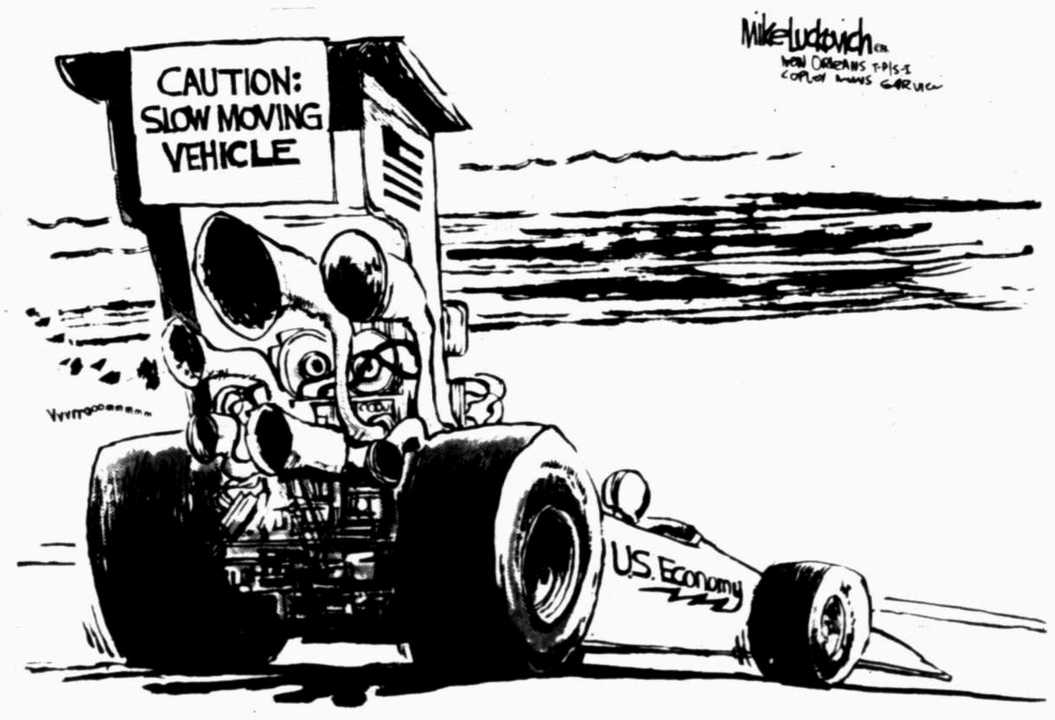

But Buchanan, who has publicly denounced the prosecution of alleged Nazi war criminals as "Orwellian and Kafkaesque," was determined to downgrade the Jewish liaison office and enhance the liaison with the other ethnic groups.

So with Buchanan as his "rabbi," Kojelis was made director of the Foreign Affairs/Defense Division last fall. When Chavez left to run for the Senate nomination in Maryland, Kojelis became acting director of the Public Liaison Office. He was given the title once held by the Jewish liaison officer: special assistant to the president. Green is his subordinate.

Faced with the growing influence of Kojelis at the White House, Jewish leaders — even those who had welcomed the idea of abolishing the Jewish liaison office — are dismayed. There is no evidence that Kojelis himself is anti-Semitic, but he has provided entree to the highest circles of the Reagan administration for Eastern European refugee groups that have been tainted by anti-Semitism.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Navy spends $10 million on its anti-submarine warfare system, but has no way of knowing if it would work in an actual combat situation. General Accounting Office investigators reported that the underwater tests run by the Navy in Hawaii and the Bahamas have used fixed test ranges with no diversity. This gives the tests all the warlike reality of a carnival shooting gallery. What's needed, the GAO pointed out, is a simulated "threat environment" akin to combat, but mobile underwater targets have been low on Navy budget priorities.

EVANS & NOVAK

South African speech touched 11th hour

WASHINGTON — At 11 a.m., just three hours before President Reagan's South African speech, White House communications director Patrick Buchanan convinced chief of staff Donald T. Regan that it should contain a line indicating disapproval of the African National Congress (ANC).

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The line said South Africa's white regime need not negotiate with "any organization" supporting communism and using "terrorist tactics" — meaning the ANC. Regan at the last moment agreed that reflected the opinion of the president, who added "violence" to the indictment.

Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker had insisted no such language should appear in Reagan's speech. It was omitted in Secretary George Shultz's Senate testimony the next day, which called for talks with the ANC.

REAGAN'S VATICAN MAN

Former broadcasting executive Frank Shakespeare, a key backstage figure in conservative politics, is about to get one of the juiciest diplomatic plums: nomination as ambassador to the Vatican.

Shakespeare, who is Catholic, was named ambassador to Portugal last year. He will replace William A. Wilson, a former member of President Reagan's "kitchen Cabinet" who got himself in trouble by conducting a personal negotiation with Libya's strongman, Col. Muammar Gadhafi.

A longtime lieutenant of Richard M. Nixon and head of the U.S. Information Agency in his administration, Shakespeare has been an intimate adviser of Rep. Jack Kemp for the past decade. He is thought by conservatives to have his eye on becoming secretary of state. The Vatican mission could be a step in that direction.

FBI PLUMBERS

Stringent secrecy measures surrounding President Reagan's arms control reply to Soviet ruler Mikhail Gorbachev resulted in an order for a full-scale FBI probe of a page-one story in the July 17 New York Times outlining an alleged new bargaining ploy.

The dispatch, by Times reporter Michael R. Gordon, concerning possible linkage of future nuclear testing to reduction of offensive missiles, was couched in extremely vague terms. Nevertheless, White House aides say it angered President Reagan himself.

Defense and State Department officials were immediately put on notice that they could be subjected to lie detector tests. As of this weekend, however, the probe had produced no one to accuse.

LOSING A PERLE

Close friends say Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle will resign this winter to write his novelistic memoir of life in Washington, a departure that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger fears could gravely harm the Reagan arms control efforts.

Perle's departure would cost Weinberger his right arm in incessant struggles with the State Department. Moreover, Perle might be more critical of Reagan's future concessions to the Russians outside the Pentagon than inside.

Weinberger will mount a campaign to change his mind when Perle returns from his current vacation in Southern France. But friends say Perle is adamant and never did intend to stay for eight years. Moreover, the Defense Department's public order a few months ago forbidding him to sign a contract for his memoir before he leaves government still rankles.

KEMP'S NEW RIGHTIST

Fund-raiser Richard Viguerie has privately signed on as a volunteer supporter of Rep. Jack Kemp's presidential campaign, reassuring the congressman's strategists who worry about weakness with the New Right.

New Right operative Paul Weyrich clearly prefers television evangelist Pat Robertson to Kemp. Weyrich is particularly hostile to Charley Black, probable national campaign chairman of the Kemp campaign, on grounds he will play down social issues.

Consequently, Black is delighted to sign up Viguerie, who rivals Weyrich as a New Right founding father. Viguerie's firm has done some fund-raising for Kemp's non-profit foundation, but it has not been determined whether he will be hired by the presidential campaign.

Human race needs hefty dose of humility

Human beings, as a whole, are a lot dumber than human beings, as a whole, like to admit.

One reason is general ignorance of history. People simply don't know how old most of the new ideas they discover actually are. Another is the tendency to mistake technological refinements for innovative ideas.

Charley Reese

A nuclear submarine, for example, is a refinement of the steam engine. The only thing the nuclear reactor does is provide a heat source to make the steam. The modern rocket is a refinement of the ancient Chinese rocket. It took a genius, or a lucky accident, to create the first rocket by attaching the chemical energy source to the projectile. It's taken centuries for people to find practical applications for this breakthrough.

Roads, buildings and bridges are still built fundamentally the same way they've been built for a couple of thousand years or more. The materials have changed but the basic principles haven't.

Probably only one or two percent of each generation have the capacity for innovative thinking and in many generations they never get a chance to use it. They may get killed off by accidents, diseases, or their fellow humans or they may be born in poverty or isolation.

There are a number of lessons to be drawn from this, one of which is humility. A humble person who doesn't think he already knows everything can learn something. A humble person who doesn't think he has all the answers is a safe person to be around. Nearly all of the killing is done by people who are dead certain they're right. The reason the meek will probably inherit the earth is because the arrogant will have killed each other off.

Another lesson is re-learning the value of laissez faire. If we recognize that we are, as a whole, not very bright, then it follows that creating large and powerful institutions to be run by not very bright humans is in itself not very bright. If you're forced to place a loaded gun in the hands of a child, it is better to give it a single-shot .22 than a machine gun. The value of laissez faire is damage control.

We have seen in this century what enormous carnage not very bright people can create when they command gigantic institutions and bureaucracies equipped with modern technology. Human beings just aren't equipped to handle the enormous power that resides in modern institutions. Few can even remember why people wearing silly costumes started World War I much less come close to justifying the 10 million lives it cost.

People in this century have not been any more evil or bloodthirsty than people in previous centuries but their capacity to do evil has been greatly magnified by the physical sciences. It took Tamerlane's soldiers quite some time to build a mountain of 600,000 human heads. Several governments now have the capacity to create over 100 million corpses in less than an hour.

I used to believe the theory that the American Revolution was the product of an unusual and lucky collection of geniuses at one place at the same time. The more I've studied, however, the more plain it is that, with the possible exception of Tom Jefferson, the leaders of the American Revolution were not geniuses.

What really distinguishes them from contemporary American politicians is their realistic view of human nature. They had no illusions that human beings were just suddenly going to be perfect. They knew how fallible and imperfect people were, including themselves, and they set out to design a system workable by fallible human beings. They had realistic expectations. I've never seen any instance where they promised to eliminate hunger, hardship or danger. They spoke of opportunities and possibilities and they were forever invoking God's blessings and praying for God's help. They were humble.

That's in stark contrast to the silly utopianism that underlies claims of today's social engineers who are always launching crusades to end war, to end hunger, to end poverty, to end pollution, and to make everything hunky-dory peachy-creamy.

The only thing such arrogant characters may actually end is the human race itself.

Couple use skulls in western art

By ARLENE TURKEL

MAURICEVILLE (AP) — It's impossible to ignore the strangely masklike art of Donna and Randy Duplechin.

"Call it skull art," one viewer suggested at a recent exhibition of the couple's work. Using skulls of dead cows, the Duplechins paint bold Sioux designs and western pictures.

"Sioux designs are the only ones we can find," Mrs. Duplechin says. The couple sticks to authentic designs. "Indians told us if we change a design it can bring bad luck," Mrs. Duplechin says. "I'm not taking any chances. They believe that, and I'm not going to knock it."

Finding skulls is the most difficult part, so sometimes they trade skulls for their artistic products. They find other skulls on fields and beaches. "We get the higher-priced registered Longhorns only when a cow dies," Mrs. Duplechin says.

"We have five real Longhorns from the Rocking "G" Ranch in Beaumont, and traded a sign for (ranch owner) Ramey Griffin's heads," says Mrs. Duplechin, a professional signpainter in business with her husband. "The rest are crossbreeds and whatever we find."

They bleach some heavily stained skulls before applying paint, and leave others in a natural state. "Natural ones turn green when it rains on them. When it's dry, they turn white again," she says.

They scrape some cow horns with glass for a pretty shine and leave others untouched for a rough look.

"People that know cows can tell their age by rings on the horns," Mrs. Duplechin says. "I can't." The Duplechins use lettering enamel — their regular sign paint — on the skulls.

"This dries real fast, and we can use a lot of colors at once," she says. Painting on animal skulls is really nothing new, she explains. "Years and years ago, Indians used buffalo heads to write messgages. That's how they communicated."

Plans for a powwow for seven tribes were spread through a Camp Circle design, for example. This seven-point design told each tribe where to camp. Each triangle around the circle represented a camping spot, and signified authority of the elite warrior designating specific spots, she says.

They also paint ceremonial skull designs "representing the blue sky and powerful forces in it like sun and rain..."

The Thunderbird design evokes the mighty thunderbird — a powerful force that could cause lightning.

The Peace Star is another favorite. All of its directions join harmoniously at the center. Legend says the design was instrumental at ending conflict to create peace. Another design of the Black War Bonnet Society of the Lakota Culture uses black as the dominant "war medicine" color.

"Black meant danger and death," Mrs. Duplechin says. The fiercest warrior carried this design to prevent death.

White on the design represents life after death. The message is that its owner won't die until the proper time, she says.

Duplechin studied art in college, and his wife is the product of an artistic environment.

"My mother, Bettie Williams of Lumberton, is an artist — and real good," Mrs. Duplechin says. All three of her children, Ryan, Tammy and James Whatley, have won art awards.

The Duplechins work as a team painting signs.

"But we don't work on the same word, because you can tell our different styles. "And on something this small," she says, fingering a skull, "we work separately because you can see the difference, too."

"We've painted on everything from wood shingles, to saws and bumpy alligator heads — but I've never painted on a canvas.

"Randy is better at fine detail, and I'm best at intensive shading," she says.

Toymaker converts aluminum cans into miniature chairs

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If Santa Claus needed a helper in the Dade-Broward area of Florida, he'd probably select Pat DiStasi, a little old toymaker with an artistic touch and an innovative mind.

With bits of wood, plastic, wire — even with worn-out disposable pens — this 85-year-old cherub labors day and night among toys, knickknacks and trinkets that delight young and old alike.

When not making toys, DiStasi uses a rare artistic talent by converting throwaway beer and soda cans into decorative miniature chairs.

And, with a perennial spirit of Christmas, DiStasi gives it all away.

"The world needs more like him," says Metro-Dade Mayor Steve Clark, a longtime friend. "He's kept a lot of people happy ... he's a tremendous guy."

"I can make anything," says the affable DeStasi as he wields a heavy pair of cutting pliers to sever the miniature spring in a used disposable pen. The spring halves will help a miniature plastic monkey shimmy down a tensile piece of wire mounted in a decorative wooden base.

"What I make you'll never see on the market," he adds, using a lit candle to heat the spring end so it will adhere to a tiny plastic washer he got somewhere. Much of the material he works with has been discarded by others, donated by friends and acquaintances, or is something he's traded for.

Waiting for glue to dry on some toys he's making, DiStasi takes an empty beer can, cuts the top off with a power saw and, using tin shears, cuts the can into a ribbon of aluminum 25 feet long.

With some 30 special tools he's made for his hobby, he bends, cuts and shapes the metal band into a tiny chair, complete with star designs. Clips holding the pieces together are also made from the can.

DiStasi's workshop is wherever he happens to be. His two-bedroom home looks like Santa's summer factory.

Partially constructed toys line the living room floor, the kitchen table is covered with boxes and jars filled with things most visitors would describe as useless; a small table near the stove is crammed with tools, drawers in the kitchen area hold more toy parts than cooking utensils and an attached one-car garage hasn't held a vehicle in years. It's so packed, the pull-down door won't close.

When DeStasi runs out of work space, he packs a few bags with his toys and art and heads for the local supermarket or Sal Campagna's beauty salon a few blocks away. This friendly sprite, short, stocky and a little bent over, with cropped white hair, gives his work away.

"I wouldn't take a million dollars for those chairs," says Campagna, who displays DeStasi's creations prominently in his shop.

New ideas sometimes come to DiStasi while he's asleep. "When I dream of something to make, I get up and do it before I forget," he says. He's particularly proud of a ferris wheel he's made from cans. Another choice piece is a Renaissance chair that was a two-gallon automobile oil can.

The Union soldiers fire upon the Confederates during the reenactment of the First Battle of Bull Run in Centerville, Va. The reenactment of the Civil War battle, originally fought in Manassas, commemorates the 125th anniversary of the fight.

Uniformed men stage reenactment to celebrate Bull Run anniversary

MANASSAS, Va. — Nature was cooperative. When North and South met here 125 years ago, the temperature was over 100. Last week, when that meeting was re-enacted, it was only a few degrees cooler.

The battle fought in that broiling heat in 1861 was First Bull Run — or Manassas, if you favor the Southern cause. Both the Union and the Confederate leaders believed that the issue would be settled in that one encounter. The war that followed would last for five years.

The anniversary of the battle was July 21. But Sundays are always a better day for spectacles, and last Sunday's contest was just that — 5,000 men in a rainbow of authentic uniforms met on a field five miles from the battle site in what was probably the largest Civil War reenactment ever.

The weather, like the uniforms, was authentic. About 300 of the more than 20,000 spectators required medical attention because of the heat. The make-believe soldiers fared better, but one of them became the only serious casualty of the day when his horse fell on him and broke his hip. A delighted crowd thought it was part of the act until three ambulances shrieked onto the battlefield.

It was a partisan audience, who cheered and applauded at each Union reverse.

The 2½-hour re-enactment didn't begin until 1 p.m. EDT, but the camp was alive with preparations at dawn. On the 150-acre stage where the battle would be refought, two peak-roofed plywood structures represented the Henry House and the Stone House, two strategic spots in the original battle.

It was at Henry House that Confederate Gen. Barnard E. Bee pointed to a then-unknown colonel from Virginia named Thomas J. Jackson. Bee shouted to his demoralized troops, "There stands Jackson like a stone wall. Rally behind the Virginians." The name would stick.

The mock Henry House, like the original, was supposed to have been blown up, but a Union officer observed grimly after the re-enactment, "We had to cooperate with the insurance company." Sunday, the Henry House stood.

But King Hernandez, a television special-effects specialist from Culver City, Calif., oversaw the placement of 50 ground-mortar and 160 aerial explosions to simulate the result of artillery fire. Hernandez said that he was doing it as a favor for a friend who was one of the organizers of the re-enactment, which was sponsored by the American Civil War Commemorative Committee of Alexandria, Va.

On the day of the original battle, it had taken Union Brigidair Gen. Irvin McDowell two days to march his 35,000 green troops down from Washington. Waiting for him behind a sluggish stream called Bull Run were 22,000 Southern troops under Gen. Pierre G. T. Beauregard. He would soon be joined by 10,000 more rebels under the command of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston.

McDowell hoped to outflank Beauregard's army on its left wing, and destroy the rebels. The plan didn't work. McDowell's flanking movement was spotted. The Confederates reinforced their left wing. The battle swayed back and forth for a while, but the Union soldiers were routed.

Boys find message from French sailor in bottle

SEA BRIGHT, N.J. (AP) — Two boys are writing to a French mariner after finding a message in a plastic mineral water bottle that was written on the back of a computer printout.

Ryan Duffy, 11, of Middletown and John Gilligan, 10, of Little Silver were combing the beach at the Ship Ahoy Beach Club last week when they spotted the bottle bobbing in the waves.

The sealed, empty bottle contained a note that apparently was thrown overboard by a French seaman some 400 miles east-northeast of Boston.

The note had a handwritten message on one side of a computer printout that appeared to be from a ship's navigational log. At the top of the log were written the words Atlantic Cartier, apparently the ship's name.

The message and the log entries were in French, but the boys found a translator. The note contains geographic references, sea conditions and weather information.

The log was dated July 7 and the geographic coordinates, latitude 42.20 north, longitude 65.57 west, referred to a point at sea about 200 miles south of Nova Scotia.

Highs Tuesday 99 to 103 from the Panhandle southward and 95 to 108 southwest mountains to lower valleys of the Big Bend. Lows tonight near 60 southwest mountains, otherwise upper 60s Panhandle to mid 70s extreme south.

Hot weather to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

"Continued hot" is the forecast given by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport for Tuesday. The NWS is callng for a high near 101 degrees with sunny skies.

Fair skies and a low near 70 are in the forecast for tonight. Winds will be out of the south at five to 10 mph tonight, shifting to the southeast at five to 15 mph on Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 100 was six degrees below the record high set for the date in 1954. This morning's low was seven degrees above the record low of 61 set for this date in 1933.

STATE

Early today persistent high pressure produced clear skies over almost the entire state, while some scattered high-level clouds were observed over the middle and lower Texas coastal plains and over far West Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Early morning state temperatures were generally in the low 80s and 70s. The 4 a.m. temperature extremes were a low of 59 degrees at Marfa and a high of 83 degrees at Dallas-Fort Worth.

The weather service was predicting some of the hottest weather of the year with readings over 100 degrees across much of the state.

South Texas should see clear to partly cloudy skies with some isolated thundershowers Tuesday along the coast and highs ranging from near 90 to 105 with lows in the 70s to 80s.

The West Texas forecast called for hot sunny days with highs from 95 to 108 and lows near 60 in the mountains to 70s elsewhere.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Midwest today and sections of the drought-parched Southeast got more rain after weekend drenchings.

Thunderstorms ranged across northeast Missouri, west central and northern Illinois, southern and eastern Wisconsin, central North Dakota, the Mississippi Delta and the central Atlantic Coast region.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted this morning for sections of central and eastern Missouri and central and southern Illinois.

Columbus, Ga., which had received no rain in 47 days, was hit by a severe thunderstorm with winds exceeding 60 mph Sunday, and had nearly 2½ inches of rain.

A series of summer storms that hit South Carolina gave much-needed moisture to the parched soil, but accompanying high winds and lightning caused scattered damage.

Midland's Bobby Hillin youngest NASCAR winner

By MIKE HARRIS

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Bobby Hillin Jr. graduated Sunday from "the school of hard knocks."

His diploma came in the form of a winner's check for $60,055 in the aftermath of his first NASCAR stock car victory.

Hillin, 22, became the youngest winner ever in the series by surviving the heat and attrition of Sunday's Talladega 500 at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

The youngster from Midland, Texas, came right out of the short tracks in his home state to race on NASCAR's premier circuit as a 17-year-old high school senior.

It was his grandfather, R.N. Hillin, and his father, Bobby, who helped him get his start.

"I grew up with my father running sprint cars and Indy car teams and my granddad sponsored me in my first (Winston Cup) race in 1982. Without them, there's no way I'd be here.

"My father called it the school of hard knocks," Hillin said. "He and my granddad told me how tough it would be, but I had the desire to begin with. I truly wanted to excel."

He took the lead from red-hot Tim Richmond — winner of two straight races and three of the last four — just nine laps from the end of the 188-lap, 500-mile race at Alabama International Motor Speedway, then held on to win by about one-half car-length.

"I was weaving all over the track to try to keep the guys behind me out of my draft. But when the (last) green flag came out (on lap 175), I never had to take my foot off the floor," said Hillin, who gave the team operated by New Jersey businessmen Mickey and Bill Stavola only its second victory. "The pedal was getting so hot it burned my foot a little."

When the race did end, the excited Hillin missed the entrance to Victory Lane and drove nearly to the end of the pit road before noticing his jubilant crew signalling to him in his rearview mirror.

"I always remember seeing the winning crew running out on pit road to get the winner," Hillin said, smiling. "I thought maybe I didn't win at that point."

Bobby Allison, 48, Hillin's teammate and the winner of the Winston 500 here in May — ironically becoming the oldest driver to win a NASCAR event — ignited a six-car wreck at the start of the last lap as he tried to catch the leaders.

With Hillin driving his Buick LeSabre faultlessly to the finish line on the 2.66-mile, high-banked tri-oval, Allison skidded up the banking and ran into Rick Wilson. Cars driven by Joe Ruttman, Kyle Petty, Davey Allison and Jim Sauter also became involved.

Thirteen of the 17 cars running prior to that crash were on the lead lap in the heated event.

The race was one of the most competitive in NASCAR history, with 48 lead changes and a record 26 different drivers holding leads. The previous record was 18, set in this race in 1975 and tied in the 1982 Southern 500 at Darlington, S.C.

Hillin beat Richmond to the finish line by half a car-length, while Rusty Wallace, driving in relief of flu-ridden Ricky Rudd, took third, Sterling Marlin fourth and Benny Parsons fifth.

Terry Labonte was the previous youngest NASCAR winner. He was 1 year and 8 months older than Hillin when he won the Southern 500 in 1980.

Hillin, whose best previous finish was third in the Firecracker 400 at Daytona Beach, Fla., on July 4, picked up $60,055 from the total purse of $516,550.

He averaged 151.552 mph in the race slowed by nine caution flags for a total of 45 laps.

He became the 12th different winner this season, tying the NASCAR record set in 1983 and tied in 1984.

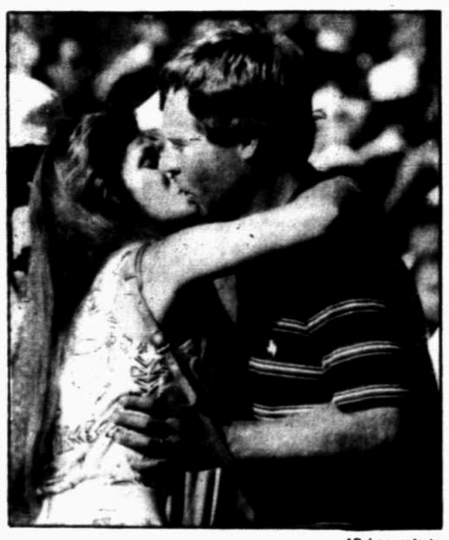

Forty cars started the race, but oppressive heat — near 100 degrees — and humidity, crashes and the close competition took a heavy toll.

The worst accident of the race came moments after the field got the green flag on lap 160 following the seventh caution period.

Harry Gant, who was leading for the first time in the race, tangled with Phil Parsons and hit the wall.

Ben Crenshaw
...a hug for the winner

Crenshaw in form

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Ben Crenshaw, showing he is fully recovered from an illness that almost ended his pro golf career, shot a final-round 68—270 to win the $500,000 Buick Open. Crenshaw, who hadn't won since the 1984 Masters, finished one stroke ahead of hard-charging J.C. Snead and Doug Tewell to earn $90,000 and use of a Buick automobile for one year.

It was the 11th PGA Tour victory for "Gentle Ben" and established him as a threat to challenge British Open champion Greg Norman at the PGA Championship in nearby Toledo, Ohio, in two weeks. Crenshaw suffered a hyperactive thyroid condition that caused him to lose 18 pounds and weakened him to the point where he could play only 23 tournaments in 1985, when he failed to record a single top 10 finish.

Tour de France

PARIS — Greg Lemond of the U.S. won the 73rd Tour de France cycling classic Sunday, the first time a non-European has ever captured world's premier cycling race. Lemond took a solid lead into the 23rd and final leg of the grueling race, and sprinted to victory down the most glamorous avenue in France, the Champs Elysee. The last leg, over a 158-mile course from Cosne to Paris, was won by Guido Bontempi. Jorge Liekens of Belguim finished second and Eric Vanderaerden, Belgium, was third.

Lemond's teammate, Bernard Hinault of France, finished fourth on Sunday and in second place overall, failing to win what would have been a record sixth Tour de France.

Severiano Ballesteros won the Dutch Open for the second time with a 68-271 Sunday, 10 year after his first international victory in the same event...

Bradley wins playoff

WOODBRIDGE, Ontario — Pat Bradley sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole to defeat Ayako Okamoto in the $353,000 LPGA-du Maurier. Bradley birdied five of the first six holes and finished at 66-276, but she had to sink a birdie on the final hole to force the playoff.

Okamoto, who began the final round two shots behind Bradley and three shots behind third-round leader Chris Johnson, shot a tourney low round of 64.

"So that's extremely exciting," she said. "I just wish the (U.S.) Open was in August." Bradley was alluding to the one Grand Slam event on the tour that eluded her this year. She won the Dinah Shore Classic and the LPGA Championship before finishing fifth in the U.S. Open. The du Maurier was the fourth and final LPGA Grand Slam tournament.

Jackson Mets silence Angels batting attack

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss. — Jackson's Mets squared their Texas League series with the Midland Angels here Sunday with a 5-1 victory before 1,349 fans as starter Regie Dobey combined with two relievers to hold Midland to four hits.

Don Timberlake, 5-6, goes for the Angels against Bill Fultz, 3-3, in tonight's 7 p.m. game.

Home runs accounted for all the Met runs, but Shawn Abner, baseball's No. 1 draft pick a year ago, did in the Angels, and starter Sherman Corbett, with a three-run homer in the fourth to make it 4-1. Kevin Elster started the rally with a single and then a walk set up Abner's 11th homer over the left field fence.

Keith Miller hit his fourth homer of the year in the second for the Mets and Jason Felice jacked out his 12th in the eighth.

Midland's only run came off relief pitcher Jim Adamzek in the seventh when James Randall propelled his 20th homer over the right field wall.

Jeff Ennis came on in the ninth to gain his 17th save, tops in the Texas League, for the season.

Robey retired with arm stiffness after six innings and the 9-7 righthander was working on a one-hitter at the time.

Dodgers win 10th in row

Associated Press

Pitching his first shutout of the season, Robert Hamilton led the San Antonio Dodgers to their 10th consecutive victory by blasting the Arkansas Travelers 6-0 before a standing-room-only San Antonio crowd.

Hamilton, 9-3, lasted nine innings and scattered only six hits in picking up his second consecutive win of this homestand before 4,239 fans Sunday night.

In other Texas League play Sunday, El Paso beat Shreveport 10-2, Beaumont squeezed by Tulsa 3-2, and Jackson defeated Midland 5-1.

Texas League

In San Antonio,left fielder Chris Gwynn and second baseman Ken Harvey took care of the hitting category.

Gwynn, who went 3-for-4 with three RBIs, and Harvey, who watched his first home run of the season sail over the left-field fence, gave the Dodgers breathing room throughout the game.

The Dodgers jumped out to an early lead against Arkansas starter Steve Peters, 2-3, who allowed Harvey's home run with one out.

Workouts pay off for skier LeMond

New York Times News Service

PARIS — When he was growing up in Nevada, Greg LeMond was a skier — first downhill, then freestyle.

"A freestyle skier I admired rode a bike for training and I began doing it, too, when I was 14, in the fall," he recalls. "That winter there was a drought, absolutely no snow in Nevada or California, so I rode the bike all December and January instead of skiing.

"I finished second in a club race and then won the first official race I entered and I got hooked. I read every magazine about bicycle racing I could and six months later decided I wanted to turn pro someday."

FIVE YEARS after that decision, LeMond did turn professional. At 19, he signed with the Renault team in France and became one of the few Americans to ride full time in Europe, where bicycle road racing is a major sport.

Sunday, just a month past his 25th birthday, Gregory James LeMond became the first American to win the Tour de France, the world's longest, biggest, richest and most important bicycle race.

LeMond, who rides for the French Vie Claire team, has won important races before, including the world road race championship in 1983, but nothing compares with victory in the Tour de France. His victory wave on the Champs-Elysees appeared on television throughout Europe and by relay to North America, South America and Asia. His photograph will appear on the front page of many of Europe's newspapers Monday.

THE ROAD that brought him to the podium was considerably bumpier than the 2,500 miles the Tour de France covered in 24 days.

"Sometimes you get run down and you don't know the reason why," LeMond has said. "There might be periods of a month where you're racing poorly. You try to give yourself enough rest, enough work and training, trying to do that fine line where you maintain your body at peak form and it doesn't get too worn down. And you never know. You might crash in a race in April and break a collarbone."

LeMond came to the notice of his first European team because of his temper. As a member of the United States Olympic team, he came to France in 1979 for training and won a professional-amateur race, the Circuit de la Sarthe, and finished third in the Circuit des Ardennes, winning a daily stage.

"I was chasing three Russians on a breakaway and I was 10 seconds from them and moving up fast when I punctured," he recalls. "It took the team car five minutes to get to me and the race was lost and I was so mad you wouldn't believe it."

TEAM CARS are usually no more than 30 seconds behind a breakaway rider. LeMond reacted to the delay by throwing his bicycle at the car. When he was told that he had to continue riding, "for the good of the team," he threw his bicycle off the road. The display of temper convinced the Renault team that he had "character," a virtue in cycling.

Courteous, softspoken and low-key off his bicycle, he can be exceedingly militant on it. "When I race," he says, "my mind completely changes. I get much more aggressive."

This change has brought him wealth and glory as a racer, starting with the world junior title in 1979. He still remembers how little attention Americans paid to his victory. He received early support from his father, who traveled along with this year's Tour.

"I was racing in intermediates, about 15 and a half, and we drove each weekend three, four hours to races in the San Francisco area," LeMond remembers. "I was lucky my dad was involved in it, too, at the time."

LEMOND'S FATHER, Bob, is a Realtor in Reno. Seven years after the birth of his son on June 26, 1961, in the Lakewood section of Los Angeles, the elder LeMond moved his family, "just to get us out of the smog there," his son says. The family, which included LeMond's mother, Bertha, and two sisters, went first to Lake Tahoe, Nev., and then to "between Reno and Carson City" three years later. "We lived in the Washoe Valley, to give the place a name," LeMond says.

Now LeMond lives with his wife, the former Kathy Morris of La Crosse, Wis., and their 2½-year-old son Geoffrey, in the Belgian town of Markke during the cycling season, which runs from late February to mid-October. During the offseason, they live near Sacramento, Calif., where LeMond operates a bicycle training camp.

Cycling is his work but not his only sport. "I played football and baseball as a kid, sure," says LeMond, 5 feet 10 and 150 pounds. "But then I got crazy about cycling. I didn't want to do anything but that. I just kind of fell in love with it."

He has also become an obsessive golfer, even playing for relaxation shortly before the Tour de France began instead of entering training races as his teammates did.

WITH A four-year, $1.4 million contract with the Vie Claire team in France and some lucrative endorsements in the United States, LeMond is well off financially and always interested in investments. "That's all handled for me by my father," he says.

He regards himself as something of an expert about haute cuisine and likes to talk about his hopes of owning a restaurant when he retires.

"My dad and I would go into it together," he explains. "An inn maybe, with French cuisine, some place where they need a good restaurant, like in Minnesota, with 15 rooms where you could spend the night. Something small but classy. You'd need a million dollars to get started."

Festival skaters melt Houston ice

By BARRY WILNER

HOUSTON (AP) — As the temperatures climbed toward 100 degrees outside of the Summit and Sam Houston Coliseum, the skaters inside those arenas were hot enough to melt the ice they were performing on.

The U.S. Olympic Festival resembled an ice carnival Sunday as speedskater Bonnie Blair set a record for gold and total medals won by an athlete, a pair of Soviet ice dancers charmed an enthralled crowd and America's brightest figure skaters entered their names in the 1988 Olympic sweepstakes.

Blair, who won five gold medals at Baton Rouge, La., last year, earned her third and fourth of this competition with wins in the women's 1,000 meters and the 3,000-meter relay at Sam Houston Coliseum. That gave her 10 golds and 16 overall Festival medals — speedskater Gloria Bogacki won nine golds and gymnast Kelly Garrison collected 15 medals overall. Garrison is competing here.

Blair insisted she won't let all that success change her.

"I'm just the same old person," said the 22-year-old indoor world champion from Champaign, Ill. "Because there are so few of us, we're kind of like a big family. You always want the other people to do well, too. And if someone else comes along and breaks my medals record, then more power to them."

Power and grace were most evident in the performance of Soviet ice dancers Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomarenko. When they skated in an exhibition at The Summit Sunday, the 1984 Olympic bronze medalists and two-time runners-up in the World Championships became the first foreigners to appear at the Festival.

Festival

"We are in very serious preparations this season," said Klimova, who celebrated her 20th birthday Sunday and was presented with a birthday cake on the ice by Natalie and Wayne Seybold, the Festival pairs champions. "It is like a big holiday for for us to come to Houston."

Their exhibition of three numbers brought long ovations from the crowd.

"We're very touched by the way the public has greeted us," Klimova said. "It is very nice."

The exhibition, in which several other Soviet skaters were scheduled to participate before they withdrew, is part of the Accord of Mutual Understanding and Cooperation in Sport between the U.S. Olympic Committee and the National Olympic Committee of the USSR. Soviet boxers and cyclists also will appear here and compete against Festival champions later in the competition.

National champions Renee Roca and Donald Adair won the ice dancing, finishing first on all seven judges' cards in the long program.

With the United States' biggest individual figure skating stars absent, teenagers swept the titles here. Christopher Bowman, 19, of Van Nuys, Calif., took the men's crown in his first meet since a broken leg bone forced him out of the U.S. Championships in February. Bowman had 2.8 factoral placements after a strong freestyle program in which he placed first with all seven judges.

"I tried not to think about how the leg was," Bowman said. "I tried instead to concentrate on my skating. It went well and gave me confidence."

Jill Trenary, 17, of Colorado Springs, Colo., won the women's title with a solid final program. The 1985 national junior champion beat the '86 junior queen, Cindy Bortz of Tarzana, Calif.

Burns gets Vikes' '86 ejection seat

Associated Press

The Minnesota Vikings head coach's chair has been more like an ejector seat the last three seasons, but former offensive coordinator Jerry Burns will take his seat there Monday when the club becomes the last of the 28 NFL teams to open training camp.

The 59-year-old Burns is the third oldest coach in the NFL and replaces Bud Grant, who retired for the second time after coming out of retirement for one year. Grant coached the 1985 Vikings to a 7-9 showing after Les Steckel's 1984 squad went 3-13.

But after being in a subordinate position for 18 years, Burns has not been able to define for himself what exactly he is to do as head coach.

"My position now, to be honest, is to try to find out what my job is," Burns said.

"My job will be from an organizational standpoint," Burns said last May during the club's mini-camp. "I've got to have a total awareness of the offense and defense. I've got to know all the stuff. If we end up in the outhouse, it's the same old thing ... the buck stops here."

It may be a new guard, but many of the Vikings' traditions endure. Burns has kept Grant's trademark of having the latest starting date in the league, leaving only 13 days before the team's preseason opener against Miami on Aug. 9.

Bengals

Punter Pat McInally, a 10-year veteran who averaged 42.3 yards on 56 punts last season, announced his retirement.

McInally was not forced to leave, according to Paul Brown, Bengals vice president and general manager.

"Pat has made this decision on his own," Brown said. "He's leaving the game on his own; we're not pushing him out.

McInally also played wide receiver. He caught 57 passes for 809 yards, four touchdowns, and a 14.1-yard average during his career.

Jets

Second-round draft pick Doug Williams signed a series of one-year contracts and reported to camp for drills, making him the last rookie to come to terms with New York.

NFL Camps

Colts

Tight end Pat Beach signed for his fourth season with the NFL team.

The 6-foot-4, 244-pound Washington State alumnus was the Colts' sixth round draft pick in 1982. Linebacker Cliff Odom and offensive guard Ben Utt are the only Colts veterans still unsigned and out of training camp at Anderson College.

Steelers

Frank Pollard, nursing his second preseason injury in as many years, says within a week he will be running on his right knee that required arthroscopic surgery earlier this month.

Steelers' doctors had predicted Pollard, who missed the entire preseason last year with a broken hand, would miss three to four weeks of training camp.

Dolphins

An eye injury will probably keep defensive tackle Mike Charles out of all four of Miami's exhibition games.

Charles will not be playing or practicing for at least the next month because of the injury he suffered when he was poked in the right eye by a teammate's finger during a Saturday afternoon drill.

Bears

Speculation that Chicago will abandon Soldier Field was fueled by the announcement that the team has received permission from the Chicago Cubs to play in Wrigley Field.

49ers

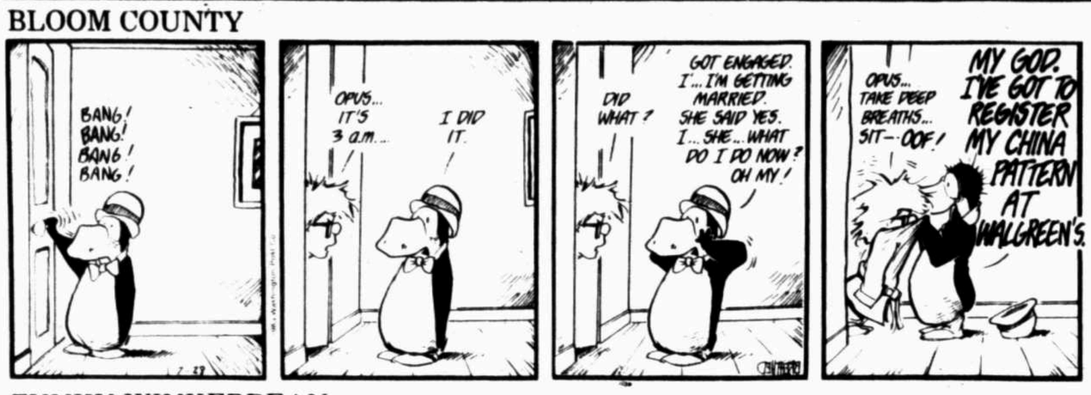

Starting left tackle Bubba Paris has disappointed head coach Bill Walsh by showing up 26 pounds over a 295-pound level he was ordered to weigh before summer camp began.

Seahawks

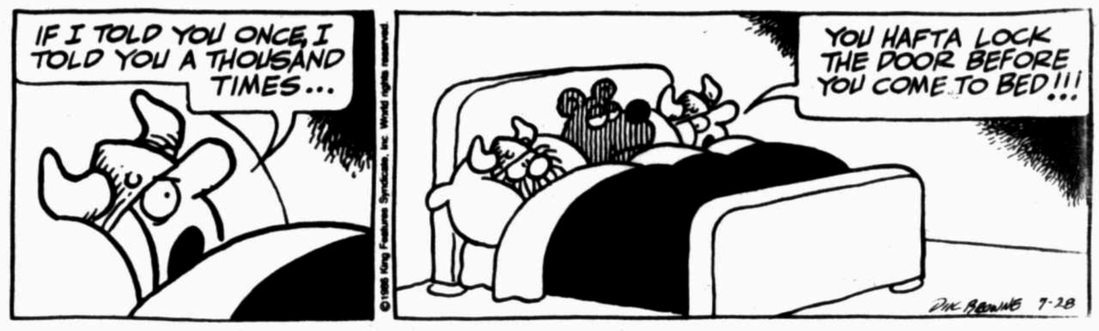

Player representative Michael Jackson warned that it's going to be tough for NFL players and owners to come up with a new collective bargaining agreement next year.

Jackson said team owners are attempting to roll back salaries this season and added that the large number of holdouts in taining camps this season is a result.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will not be disappointed by that someone you have been counting on. Try your hand at creative writing. It could lead to extra income or a new career. The future looks brighter than it did. Do not close your mind to the idea of changing your residence. Romance takes on a more positive tone.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor Richard Egan, Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole, Lisa Pelusa of "Search for Tomorrow," baseball pitcher Dave LaPoint, U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammerskjold, San Francisco Giant Greg Minton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): High-tech options are not the answer to human problems. Do not let them use you. They are to be utilized to ease burdens. Resort to methods you know will work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ask for a favor and it is likely to be granted. Be on your best behavior at a business meeting. You will take competitors by surprise and put them at a disadvantage.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you are feeling under the weather or are dealing with a number of pressure situations, put important decisions off. Travel could open doors to new resources or sales.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pick up the telephone if you have a question that needs an answer. Worry and loneliness could have you feeling sorry for yourself. You deserve a break from the daily routine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A telephone call brightens your day. Gossip will lead to no good, even if it is interesting. Just be a spectator, not a participant. An impulsive romantic mood could set off fireworks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stretch your imagination and things could fall into place for you. Break through the shyness barrier and show your spunk. Love settles into a more rhythmic pattern.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Advance your career by staying on your toes and concentrating on the details. Prepare yourself for a leadership position. An exciting business proposition is very near.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial obligations must be handled in a responsible way. Unexpected help puts a rosy glow on your job chances. Be on time for a date. Check your appearance before an important meeting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Deal with personal problems alone and without fanfare. You may need a change and not know it. Do not let business associates or co-worker fence you in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A new opportunity becomes a labor of love. Reviewing an idea whose time has come will make you extra money. Children could be involved. Romance should not affect the decision you must make now.

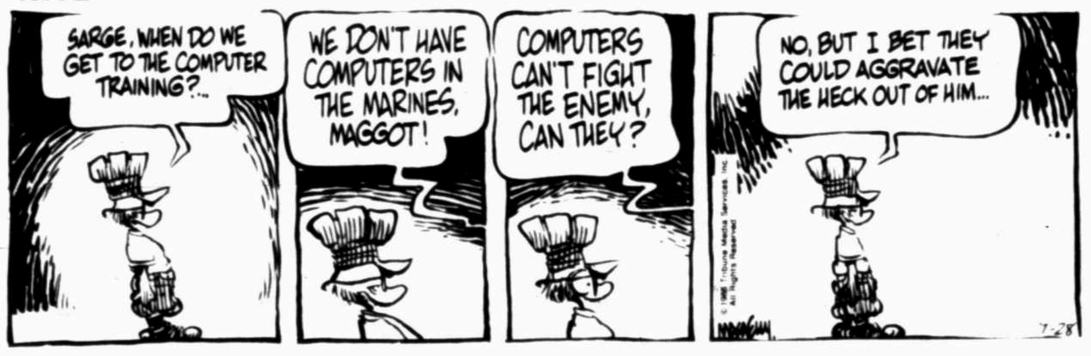

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You should take a second look at a proposition you are seriously considering. Distance helps you get the perspective you need. A heart-to-heart talk will put romance back on the right track.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep a smile on your face and positive thoughts in your head and you will improve your chances for success today. Think carefully about whether you can afford to make a large purchase.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ1073 ♡652 ◇7 ♣A862
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ◇	3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—At this vulnerability, your partner should have a good hand and a respectable suit to act at the three-level in the direct seat. Therefore, you should be thinking slam. Your trump support is more than adequate, and your two aces and singleton diamond are gold. Cue-bid four diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A874 ♡J952 ◇83 ♣AK3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	East	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	2 ♠	Dble

What action do you take?
A.—Where would you like to go? Partner surely has five-card support for his raise to two clubs, since even if you play four-card majors he will be wary of the possibility that you were employing a prepared club opening. If he has the right values, you won't fare badly even if trumps are stacked against you. Pass.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡KQ6 ◇AJ102 ♣Q984
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't consider three no trump—if that's what partner wanted, he would have bid it himself. Show your heart support by bidding four hearts. Since you didn't raise hearts immediately, partner knows you can't have four of them.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ7 ♡95 ◇K1063 ♣QJ85
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	1 NT	?

What action do you take?
A.—If partner has sound values for his double, your opponents are already over their heads. The way to tell partner of this is to double. If his action was based on shape rather than high cards, he will move to a safe haven.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ7 ♡K8 ◇J72 ♣AQ965
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	3 ♠	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—It might seem that you are safe to double, but is that really so? If you could guarantee the opponents (and your partner) will stay there, fine. But if East has a long suit and runs, you have no guarantee you will defeat him. Take your certain profit and pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ93 ♡KJ6542 ◇A ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Even if you and your partner use five-card majors, this sequence does not guarantee a six-card heart suit. Nevertheless, we don't think you should bid again. Partner's diamond rebid shows a sub-minimum two-over-one response with long diamonds, so we don't think this hand is going anywhere. Pass.

Letterman uncomfortable with ratings

Letterman

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman, the late-night NBC funnyman, is on a roll, but between wisecracks admits things are a bit uncomfortable at the top.

The Nielsen ratings for the 39-year-old Hoosier-born entertainer's "Late Night with David Letterman" have never been higher.

"It's like a tap on the shoulder from some ominous unknown force," he told The New York Times in an interview published Sunday. "To me, that's the position you don't want to find yourself in, the one you can't sustain. Now that the ratings are good, I feel a different kind of fear."

But he's taking his new problem in stride. "It's like a warning that I've got to do better, and keep doing better, or the ratings will go down and I'll be left a lonely broken shell of a human — like I am now," he said.

Sinatra

NEW YORK (AP) — New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean says he didn't have a run-in with Frank Sinatra, but adds that Old Blue Eyes is "not one I'd want to cross."

Kean, appearing on WNBC TV's "News4orum" Sunday, described events of July 3 at Governors Island after Liberty Weekend opening ceremonies.

"So, as we were getting onto our boat, there was Frank Sinatra, standing sort of with his arms folded like this, sort of tapping his foot, and saying, 'Where's my boat?'

"I complimented him on his performance...and he sort of looked at me and said, 'Come on! Hurry up! I want to get my boat in,'" Kean said, laughing.

Kean said Sinatra was impatient, but not discourteous, and made "it clear that he wanted to get off the island, and he didn't really want anybody in the way. But that's characteristic, I guess, of Frank Sinatra.

"I would never want to have a confrontation with Frank Sinatra. I think he's a great entertainer, but he's not one I'd want to cross."

Fitzgerald

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Singer Ella Fitzgerald was in fair condition today after being admitted to a hospital for treatment of congestive heart failure, officials said.

Miss Fitzgerald, 68, was taken to Niagara Falls Medical Center after becoming ill Sunday morning in her hotel room, said hospital spokeswoman Annie Chapman.

She said the hospital was issuing no comment or confirmation on the patient's condition, on the order of doctors. However, officials speaking on condition of anonymity said Miss Fitzgerald was diagnosed as having congestive heart failure and that she was expected to spend several days in the hospital.

Congestive heart failure occurs when the heart had been weakened and can no longer pump blood properly. It does not mean the heart has stopped, but that its efficiency has been lowered.

Hospital spokesman Ray Smith said today that further details of Miss Fitzgerald's health would be released after blood tests are completed.

Miss Fitzgerald's manager, Pete Cavello, denied the singer had suffered a congestive heart failure. "It's a respiratory problem," he said. "Her breathing is not what it should be."

Earlier, Ms. Chapman said the problem was apparently heat exhaustion.

PRAGUE, Czecholovakia (AP) — Martina Navratilova savored her Federation Cup victory and said so in English and Czech.

She led the American team to victory Sunday in her first return to her homeland since defecting in 1975.

Navratilova was speaking in English after the victory to emphasize her American citizenship, but was interrupted by the audience yelling "Cesky" — "Say it in Czech."

She answered "Dobret," or "OK," and switched to her native tongue.

"I would like to thank all of you who came to watch me and give me such a reception," she said. "I had been somewhat apprehensive how I shall be received and I hope we shall see each other sooner than in 11 years."

Her opponent on the home team, Hana Mandlikova, said the fans should give more support to the Czech team. "The public did not fully appreciate our efforts," she said.

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — Private services will be held for Vincente Minnelli, who directed such movie classics as "Brigadoon," "An American in Paris" and "Gigi."

Minnelli's family requested that no information about services be released, Lillian Lonnon, spokeswoman for Forest Lawn Memorial Park, said Sunday.

Minnelli, 83, died Friday after he failed to awaken from his usual after-dinner nap, said his wife, Lee.

The director had spent the day with his daughter, singer-actress Liza Minnelli, whose mother was the late Judy Garland.

Minnelli made some of Hollywood's most outstanding musicals, including "The Band Wagon," "Meet Me in St. Louis" and "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," but he also directed such divergent movies as "Father of the Bride," its sequel "Father's Little Dividend," both with Elizabeth Taylor, and "The Bad and the Beautiful" with Lana Turner.

Minnelli's "Gigi" won 10 Academy Awards. "An American in Paris" won five and "Lust for Life," the story of painter Vincent Van Gogh, garnered one. He was honored as best director, however, only once — for "Gigi."

His 1943 movie "Cabin in the Sky," starring Lena Horne and Ethel Waters, was the first Hollywood production featuring an all-black cast.

He directed 35 motion pictures over 33 years. Miss Garland appeared under his tutelage in "Meet Me in St. Louis" in 1944, a year before they married. The marriage ended in divorce after seven years.

He also was married previously to Georgette Magnani and Denise Gigante.

In addition to his wife and Miss Minnelli, the director is survived by another daughter, Christina Miro of Mexico, and two grandchildren.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Negotiators representing more than 90,000 actors hope a vote that authorizes a strike will provide the leverage to avert a walkout that could stop production of feature films and prime-time television programs.

Negotiations toward a three-year contract covering most major movie and prime-time television productions were to resume this afternoon, a spokeswoman for the producers said.

More than 26,000 members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists approved a walkout and more than 4,000 voted against it, guild spokesman Mark Locher said Sunday. No strike deadline was set.

A strike would postpone the 1986-87 television season and motion picture production and could cost the entertainment industry millions of dollars, industry officials have said. A 10-week SAG-AFTRA walkout in 1980 cost the industry about $40 million and delayed the start of the prime-time television season for two months.

Ryan, Lopez combine to beat Phils for Astros, 3-2

Associated Press

Nolan Ryan's tender right elbow is helping to lift the Houston Astros.

The 39-year-old Ryan departed after five innings Sunday afternoon after striking out 10 Phillies and giving up two hits, two walks and two runs.

Auerlio Lopez did not allow a hit in relief, and the Astros defeated Philadelphia, 3-2.

Ryan, 7-7, left because of some soreness in his elbow, which has been a problem most of the season. He spent three weeks on the disabled list because of the injury but since returning on June 24 has been extremely effective.

"It's a matter of how many pitches I can throw," said Ryan. "I haven't been sound all year. Some days I can throw longer than others."

Asked about whether he will take his regular turn on the mound, Ryan replied, "If I'm capable of starting my next turn I will, but it felt a little worst today than the last time I pitched."

Houston Manager Hal Lanier is also hoping the problem is not a serious one.

"Hopefully it's just a little tender. We've been watching him and keeping track of the pitches. He's been throwing the ball, extremely well."

Phillies manager John Felske thought his team might rally after Ryan left the game so early. "You have to be thinking positive when a pitcher like Ryan goes out, but we got nothing off Aurelio Lopez. He was throwing a lot of different pitches and kept us off balance."

Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, struck out 10 or more in a game for the 160th time, extending his record.

Lopez allowed only a walk in his four innings for his fourth save of the season. He struck out one batter.

Phillies starter Kevin Gross, 6-8, pitched eight innings and allowed only four hits. He retired 15 of the last 16 batters he faced, not allowing a hit after the third inning, before leaving for a pinch-hitter.

The Astros, who had lost two straight after a seven-game winning streak, trailed 1-0 in the top of the second when Craig Reynolds hit his fifth home run of the season. It was his first base hit on the road since June 22, ending an 0-for-22 slump.

The Astros added two runs in the third. Bill Doran walked, stole second and moved to third on catcher John Russell's throwing error. Billy Sample doubled in Doran and scored on a single by Kevin Bass.

The Phillies had taken a 1-0 lead in the first when Juan Samuel walked with two outs, stole second, went to third on catcher John Mizerock's bad throw, and scored on Mike Schmidt's infield single.

The Majors

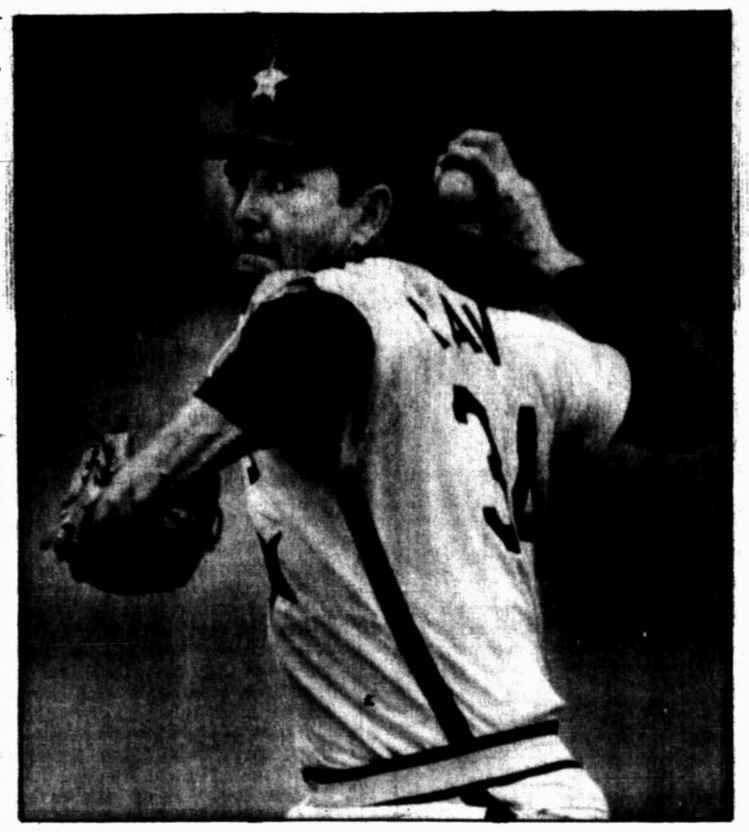

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Mets 5, Braves 1

Consecutive home runs by Gary Carter, Darryl Strawberry and Kevin Mitchell in a five-run third inning backed Rick Aguilera, 4-3, who won his fourth straight game. It was the fourth time three Mets have homered consecutively in an inning and the first time since 1974. Rick Mahler, 10-10, dropped his fifth straight decision as Atlanta lost for the 15th time in 19 games.

Pirates 7, Giants 0

Pittsburgh's Sid Bream had a two-run double and a two-run single, and Rick Rhoden and Don Robinson combined on an eight-hit shutout as the Pirates ended a five-game losing streak. Jim Morrison, who was 4-for-4, hit his 12th homer. Robinson replaced Rhoden, 10-6, with two on and two out in the seventh and allowed two hits over 2 1-3 innings for his fifth save.

Nolan Ryan recorded 10 strikeouts in five innings before being forced out of the game by shoulder soreness.

Cardinals 3, Padres 2

St. Louis won its sixth straight game to match its longest streak of the season on the strength of Andy Van Slyke's two-run single that capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning. The Cardinals had been blanked on four hits by Lance McCullers, 5-5, until the seventh. John Tudor, 9-5, was the winner, with Todd Worrell, the fourth pitcher, picking up his 20th save.

Reds 9, Expos 7

A two-out bases-loaded single by Eric Davis in the eighth inning capped Cincinnati's comeback from a 7-2 deficit. The Reds got back in the game with a four-run seventh. Then Nick Esasky led off the eighth with a homer off Jeff Reardon, 6-6, to tie the game. Rob Murphy, 1-0, was the winner, with John Franco earning his 16th save.

Dodgers 13, Cubs 11

Los Angeles, which outhit Chicago 21-13, rallied for four runs in the ninth inning, with Mike Scioscia's two-run single the game-winning hit. The teams combined to score 11 runs in the last two innings. Trailing 8-5, the Dodgers rallied for a 9-8 lead in the eighth when Len Matuszek hit a three-run homer. But the Cubs scored three times for a 11-9 edge in the bottom of the inning. Leon Durham had a homer and three RBI for Chicago.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Knuckleballer Tom Candiotti scattered nine hits in seven innings Sunday night and earned his 10th victory as the Cleveland Indians broke a three-game losing streak with an 8-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Candiotti, who has lost seven, struck out five and didn't walk a batter.

Correa walked Tony Bernazard to open the game, and he came around to score on a groundout and Joe Carter's RBI single, which extended his hitting streak to 13 games. Carter stole second and scored from there later in the inning when Texas first baseman Pete O'Brien dropped a pickoff attempt.

The Indians scored in the third on a single, a stolen base and Mel Hall's RBI single, and added two runs in the fourth on a double by Brett Butler. They added one in the sixth on an RBI single by Julio Franco and two more in the seventh.

Orioles 11 White Sox 3

BALTIMORE — Rookie Jim Traber hit a grand slam, and Juan Bonilla and John Shelby drove in two runs apiece, as the Baltimore Orioles scored nine runs in the fourth inning against the Chicago White Sox.

Angels 3, Red Sox 0

Boston lost for the 11th time in 13 games as California's Don Sutton pitched six scoreless innings to defeat Tom Seaver in a rare matchup of 300-game winners. The Red Sox have not won in 13 games except for the two games Roger Clemens has started. The loss reduced Boston's lead over the New York Yankees to three games in the American League East. Sutton, 9-7, got support from Bobby Grich, whose homer broke a scoreless tie in the fourth.

Yankees 4, Twins 1

New York's Ron Guidry, 5-8, celebrated his return from the disabled list by striking out nine Minnesota batters in five innings, including the first five he faced. Dave Righetti, who got his 23rd save, and Rod Scurry, combined to add four more strikeouts in addition to retiring the last 11 Twins. Claudell Washington's two-run homer off Bert Blyleven, 9-10, broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth.

Royals 5, Tigers 4

Steve Balboni singled in Willie Wilson with two outs in the top of the ninth inning as Kansas City's Cy Young Award winner Bret Saberhagen won in his first relief appearance since 1984. Willie Hernandez, 6-5, walked Wilson with one out. George Brett flied out, but Jorge Orta singled Wilson to second and Balboni followed with bloop to center field, which Chet Lemon dived for, but couldn't catch.

Brewers 8, Mariners 1

Milwaukee's Tim Leary pitched a seven-hitter over eight innings, and Bill Schroeder hit a two-run homer to cap a six-run third inning.

This Day in Baseball

1958 — For the sixth time, Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees hit one home run left-handed and the other right-handed in the same game. He would do it four more times.

1971 — Sixteen-time Gold Glove winner Brooks Robinson of Baltimore committed three errors in the sixth inning against the Oakland A's. Frank Robinson's three-run homer in the ninth won the game for the Orioles.

1976 — John Odom (five innings) and Francisco Barrios (four innings) combined on a no-hitter as the Chicago White Sox beat the Oakland A's, 2-1.

1979 — Dave Kingman of the Chicago Cubs belted three home runs in a game for the second time of the year and became the sixth player in major league history to accomplish the feat. Kingman's homers weren't enough as the Cubs lost to the New York Mets 6-4.

Parsons became airborne and cars began diving in all directions. Before it was through, Cale Yarborough and Geoff Bodine, who both had been running near the front, and Darrell Waltrip and Buddy Baker all were involved. Only Parsons was was able to continue.

"Anytime you have an accident like that on the backstretch and take out so many potential winners, I'll guarantee somebody made a mistake somewhere," Yarborough said.

On lap 170, Alan Kulwicki and Ken Ragan crashed in turn two, bringing out the ninth caution flag of the race.

None of the drivers in any of the accidents was injured.

A combination of the heat and the speed of the lineup, with 39 of the 40 cars qualifying over 200 mph, prompted NASCAR officials to schedule a pit stop for a tire check following the 20th lap.

The leaders averaged a race record 200.754 mph before that first caution flag came out, but there were no reports of serious tire problems before or after that stop.

Labonte, the 1984 Winston Cup champion, was leading when that first caution came. But he was penalized to the back of the lead pack during the caution period for failing to slow down soon enough when the yellow flag came out.

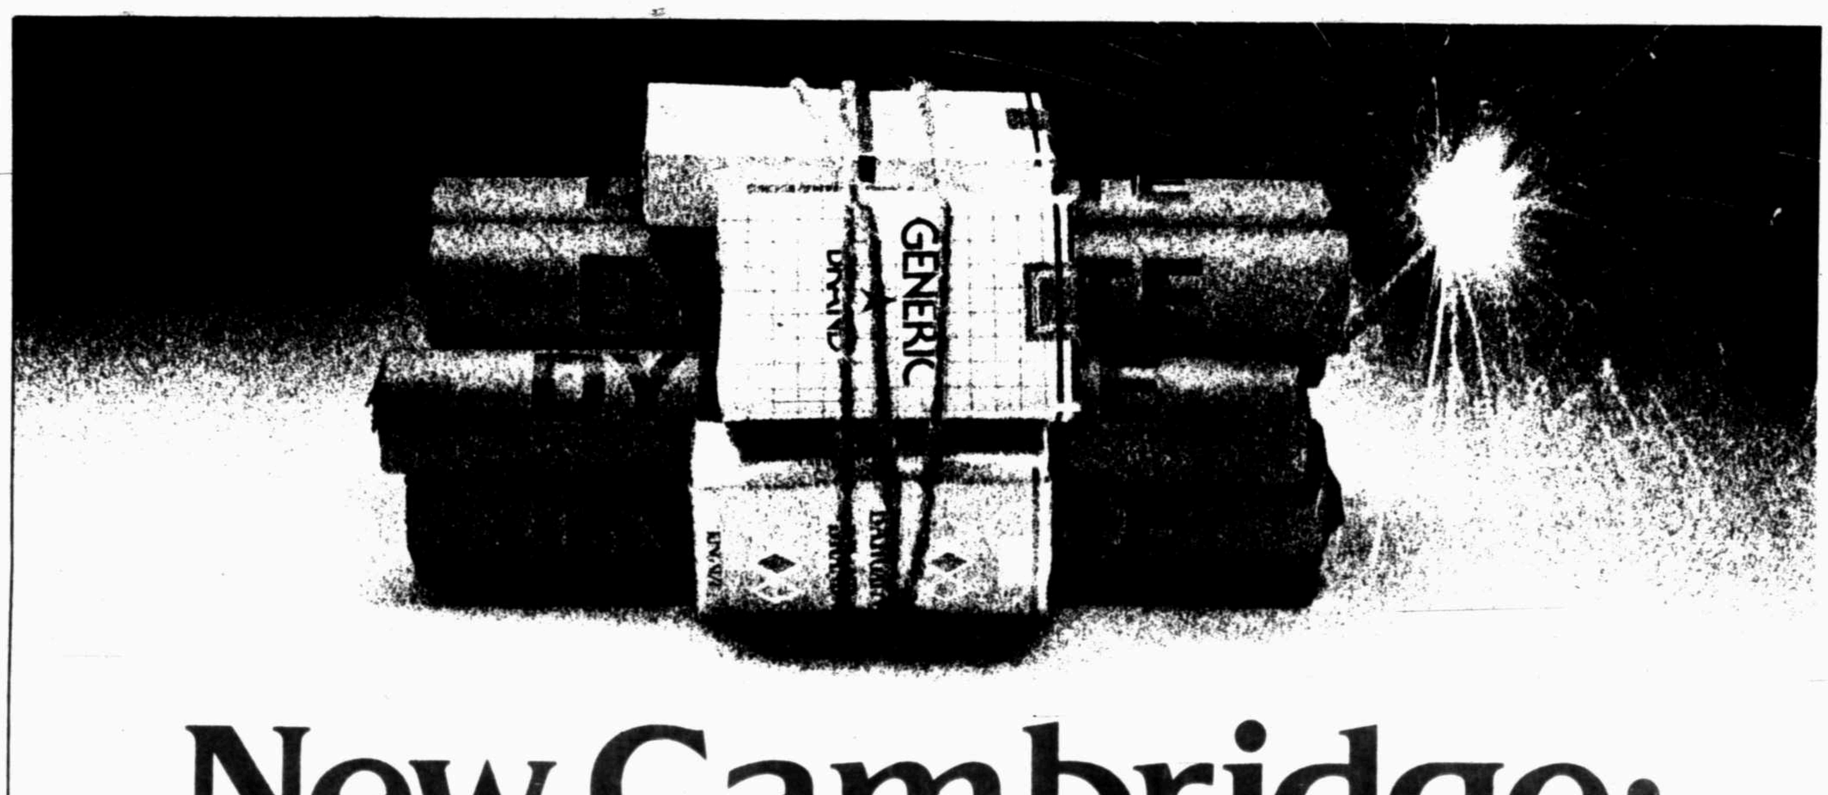

Labonte wound up the first of the big names out of the race when a deflating tire blew on lap 39, tearing out his oil lines and nearly putting his car in the wall.

Seven-time series champion Richard Petty brought out a caution flag on lap 51 when his engine blew and he got sideways in the midst of a pack of cars nearing the finish line. Petty slid off the track into the grass, spun twice, tagged an infield retaining wall and stopped. He was not injured.

Bill Elliott, the record-setting pole-winner, lost the lead to Sterling Marlin at the start and fell back into the pack until after Petty's accident.

Elliott then came on strong, moving through the traffic and into the lead on lap 64. Dale Earnhardt got past him on lap 69 and he again slid back into the pack, this time losing one lap when he ran out of gas on lap 83 and another lap when his right-front tire went flat on lap 86. He eventually went out of the race with engine problems.

Series point leader Earnhardt ran up front most of the way, leading as late as lap 150.

SWAT team member Dale Walker takes his position on the roof of Mr. Gatti's restaurant, just west of the Gibson's Department store where the hostages were taken.

Sgt. Jim Newsom, chief negotiator, at right, listens as the kidnappers holding several hostages at gunpoint make their initial demands. A woman and two children, bottom right photo, are watched by a terrorist armed with a machine gun shortly before they were released. Special Weapons and Tactical teams from the Midland Police Department and Midland County Sheriff's Department stormed Gibson's Department store near the intersection of Andrews Highway and Cuthbert early on the morning of July 19, rescuing one hostage, capturing one kidnapper and killing her three accomplices.

The final frontal assault was not real, however.

It culminated a week-long series of training exercises, led by a former member of the U.S. Army's elite Delta Force, that severely tested the mettle and methods of the officers.

In the exercise scenario, the three other terrorists, the bandanas they wore as masks still around their necks, were shot to death about 3:30 a.m. following Midland's first known act of terrorism.

"We were trying to plan an assault the whole time — we knew we had to do it," said Lt. Clayton McKinney, operations officer for the exercise, following a debriefing. "I thought at the time it looked good, but we screwed up pretty bad. It showed us where we were weak and what we can improve.

"One of the things we found out was that the Sheriff's Office doesn't have enough people, and the police doesn't have enough people, but together we have a pretty good unit."

The week's training was conducted by Frederick Lewis, executive vice-president of Rhyolite Management Systems, a security consulting firm which specializes in "low visibility operations."

Couple claims parents can raise children's IQ

By DONNA GEHRKE

HOUSTON (AP) — Any mother and father can raise a child with a high IQ if they provide a loving, orderly home and encourage learning, two Houston authors contend.

"Every parent who has tried has raised a child with at least an IQ of 140," said William Maxwell, president of the Houston-based IQ Foundation and co-author of "52 Ways to Raise the IQ of a Child" with his wife, Mary.

Less than 2 percent of Americans qualify as geniuses according to their IQs.

"No one's IQ is ever fixed," Maxwell said.

However, a Houston educational psychologist disputed the Maxwells' theories, saying learning to take IQ tests improves scores.

To increase a child's intelligence scores, the Maxwells, who studied children's development in the United States and other countries, recommend a blend of the traditional and the unorthodox.

The father should enforce discipline and, if economically possible, the mother stay home until the child is school age, the Maxwells said. Both parents should maintain a tidy home and treat the child to a variety of games, puzzles, books and music to stimulate learning.

"The home should be like a greenhouse producing the perfect flower," said Mrs. Maxwell, a registered nurse.

The couple also call on mothers and fathers to maintain a gentle, loving relationship with their children and avoid hitting them.

Violence and stress can cause a loss in a child's IQ, they say. A divorce provokes an average loss of 20 IQ points in children tested, Maxwell says.

From their observations of child rearing in Nigeria, South Korea, the United Kingdom, Switzerland and Fiji, the two also recommend Americans borrow customs from other cultures.

For example, mothers should squat to give birth, like many Korean women do, to avoid brain damage caused by improper use of forceps, the Maxwells contend.

"It was only after the Western medical practice began treating pregnancy and childbirth as 'illnesses' that mothers assumed the prone position," the Maxwells write in their book.

They also recommend other unorthodox practices such as the mother and father sleeping with the infant to keep the baby emotionally secure.

"What is the use of a high IQ in an emotionally unstable person?" they say.

Their book has won praise from the publisher-editor of Spiritual Mothering, a 6-year-old magazine written for new parents.

"The Maxwells present a parenting philosophy that is sensitive, nurturing and child-centered," Rene Knight-Weiler wrote in the spring issue. "But they lift their suggestions out of the realm of mere sentiment (where we usually find such ideas) and place them firmly in the context of concrete and scientific reasoning."

However, Michael Brady, a professor of educational psychology at the University of Houston, challenged the Maxwells' idea that parents can help their child improve their IQ scores. Learning to take tests improves scores, he said.

He also says IQ scores are not a valid indicator for most people who are in the average range of intelligence.

The Maxwells agree that IQ testing is flawed but contend it is the best barometer of intelligence available.

They predict Americans will improve their mental capacity much in the same way as athletes have whittled away world records.

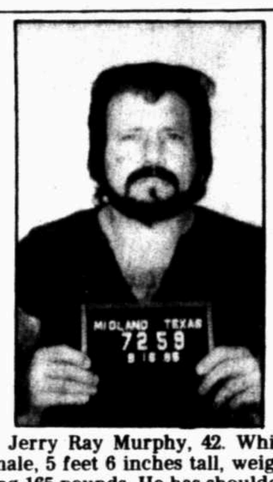

"The species hasn't changed but we've simply decided to be better," Maxwell said.

The couple is childless.

TV evangelist says he's not discouraged by negative poll

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Television evangelist Pat Robertson says he will announce in September whether he will seek the Republican nomination for president.

Robertson said he first wants to see how he does in an Aug. 5 Republican primary in Michigan, where a recent poll by The Detroit News showed 74 percent of voters oppose his unofficial bid for the GOP nomination.

Robertson, president of the Christian Broadcasting Network in Virginia Beach, said he wasn't discouraged by the findings of the poll, which surveyed 800 voters.

"It's just too early. Polls in 1986 don't mean that much," he told the Texas Daily Newspaper Association Saturday night.

Robertson noted that when Jimmy Carter started his bid for the presidency only 3 percent of the people knew who he was.

Robertson also told the publishers that the federal government has grown too large.

"Government has attempted to do things that only God Almighty can do," he said.

Robertson said the states should have more power and the Supreme Court less.

"The Supreme Court was never intended to rule this nation," he said.

Robertson painted a bleak picture of an America with poorly educated students, wasteful defense spending and a growing drug problem.

His CBN news crew interviewed University of Maryland students who could not name recent presidents, the states adjoining California or the United States' enemies in World War II, he said.

"American education is in crisis," he said.

The answer is a return to teaching the basics, not spending more money on education, he said.

Robertson said the U.S. military should spend less on costly high technology weapons that require expensive spare parts.

"We've got to have strong defense, but we're not getting enough for our money," he said.

Calling drug abuse a major problem, Robertson questioned whether the United States should continue sending aid to countries that produce illegal drugs, such as Mexico and Bolivia.

Steelworkers local continues strike against LTV

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (AP) — Members of a United Steelworkers local continued their strike against LTV Corp. today in protest of a required cutoff of health and life insurance benefits to retired workers.

Pickets remained at the gates to LTV Steel's Indiana Harbor Works for the third day Sunday, and local union officials vowed to continue the strike until the benefits were restored.

Company officials, however, said the strike was illegal.

David H. Hoag, LTV president and chief executive officer, issued a statement Friday saying the strike is illegal, violates the no-strike clause of the labor agreement and "will severely jeopardize the long-term security of all company employees."

The Indiana Harbor Works, which produces flat rolled steel, employs about 4,400 union workers and about 1,000 management employees, said Jack Walter, the company's director of public relations.

The strike began Friday when retirees demonstrating outside the plant urged workers to stay off the job, police said.

Early Friday, police detained two LTV Corp. retirees who allegedly attempted to block the gates at the steel plant during a demonstration, authorities said.

Another four demonstrators were detained Friday afternoon, but none was charged, authorities said.

The Dallas-based LTV Corp. suspended health, medical and life insurance benefits for pensioners July 17 when the company filed for protection from creditors in federal bankruptcy court. LTV said the suspension of benefits was imposed by the court.

Hoag said the benefits issue is a legal dispute which should be resolved in federal bankruptcy court rather than "through an illegal strike which adversely impacts on employees."

Hoag said that "both the company and the union must endeavor to maintain customer and supplier confidence during the reorganization process in order to emerge as a profitable company capable of providing a dependable source of quality steel."

On Saturday, two striking workers were hit by a swerving truck while picketing, but East Chicago police said that was a traffic accident rather than a confrontation-related incident. No one was seriously hurt and no charges were filed, police and company officials said.

In other weekend developments, a blast furnace that had been banked because of the strike began operating at a low level Saturday to protect it from future maintenance trouble, Walter said.

He said the union had been informed of the action.

Officials from the United Steelworkers of America, District 31, could not be reached for comment Sunday by the Associated Press.

Walter said that as far as he knew, there were no negotiations scheduled.

Shotgun-wielding man sought in robberies

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police and Ector County sheriff's deputies today are seeking a shotgun-wielding man believed to have held up a restaurant and two convenience stores during about a two hour period early today.

Police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon said a Hispanic male in his late to mid-20s, armed with a sawed-off double-barreled shotgun, entered Godfather's Pizza, 1300 W. University Blvd., about 12:10 a.m. today and fled on foot with several bags of money.

According to Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, a man of the same general description entered the Stop & Go convenience store at West Loop 338 and West University about two hours later and fled on foot with about $60.

Less than 30 minutes later, a man fitting the same description entered the Stop & Go store at West 16th Street and FM 1936, held up the clerk on duty and fled on foot with about $60.

McAhon said manager Dwayne A. Williford and two employees were in the rear of Godfather's Pizza when the man entered and demanded all the money they had.

Williford told investigating officers he reached into the restaurant's safe, took out several bags of money containing an estimated $500 and gave them to the shotgun-armed man, who fled on foot.

He described the man as being Hispanic, about 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds, in his mid-to-late 20s.

The robbery of the Stop & Go at Loop 338 and West University occurred about 2:09 a.m. today and the Stop & Go at West 16th and FM 1936 was robbed about 2:29 a.m.

Kloss speculated that, although the man left the two stores on foot, the gunman must have had a car somewhere in the vicinity.

Kloss also said it appears the same man might be responsible for the armed robbery of George's Liquor Store at the Kermit Highway and West Loop 338 about two weeks ago in which an undetermined amount of money was taken.

According to Kloss, the description of the holdup man, including the double-barreled, sawed-off shotgun, is very close to the same from all witnesses.

Man critical after cycle mishap

From Staff Reports

A 65-year-old Midlander is in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital after he ran his motorcycle off the road, the Department of Public Safety reports.

Pete Tucker, 907 North Fort Worth, received head, facial and a possible spinal injury after he ran his 1978 Harley Davidson off of State Highway 191, DPS said.

Reports said Tucker was driving eastbound on Highway 191 about 11:48 p.m. Saturday when he ran off the road into a bar ditch on the southside of the roadway and "layed the vehicle over."

Tucker was not wearing a helmet, DPS said.

Police Roundup

In other law enforcement reports, a $200 battery was taken from United Oil Services, Box 81299, located on south CR 1220, says the Sheriff's Department.

The business told Sheriff's Officers that between Friday and Saturday the thieves forced open the yard gate with a vehicle and took the battery from an oil rig doghouse.

Rural Bastrop residents without water for week

BASTROP (AP) — About 80 families in the Meadowlake Heights subdivision in rural Bastrop County say they have been without water for a week.

Bastrop officials asked the Artesian Oaks Volunteer Fire Department to deliver water during the weekend for bathing and flushing commodes.

The fire department said more than 1,600 gallons were delivered.

"This is no way for people to live," said retired Air Force maintenance man Max McConnaughey: "I'm paying $15 a month for something I'm not receiving.

"Then the water company had the unmitigated gall to send me a notice that they're going to have to start rationing water," he said.

Odessa apartment occupancy rate declines

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The occupancy rate of major apartments decreased about 9.4 percent from January through July of this year and rents have decreased about 5.2 percent during the same period, according to the latest survey by the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Division.

Lily Tercero, technical specialist, said some 114 apartment complexes were surveyed in the latest study.

The survey showed the average apartment rental rate in July was $294 monthly, which is 5.5 percent lower than a year ago.

A breakdown of available apartments show the following average monthly rental rates: efficiencies, $212; one-bedroom, $245; two-bedroom, $340; three-bedroom, $471.

The survey is done semi-annually by the Odessa chamber's Economic Development Division.

According to the survey, the occupancy rate of Odessa area apartments since January 1985 has declined a total 12.6 percent from the reported 90 percent occupancy rate at that time.

From July 1985 to January 1986, study figures show apartment occupancy rates decreased only 2.5 percent.

Ms. Tercero speculated the increase in vacancies may be partly attributable to people taking advantage of decreased real estate prices and lower interest rate and buying homes rather than continuing to rent.

SWAT

Lewis, 30, is an acknowledged expert in anti-terrorism. He spent eight years in the Army, the last 4½ with the Delta Force. He was trained for the mission, later canceled, to rescue the American hostages from Iran in 1979.

"This was an exercise," Lewis said. "It was designed to bring out mistakes. It was a very difficult exercise, extremely complex, because of the type of coordination and planning required."

The exercise began when two women, and two men, all heavily armed with Colt AR-15s and .357-caliber Magnum revolvers, took three women and seven children hostage in the store about 7:30 p.m. Friday.

By the time the SWAT team arrived, the kidnappers had killed one of the hostages, 19-year-old Rory McKinney. He was found shot in the back of the head.

The terrorists, all Americans belonging to an extremist group known as "Black Remember," told chief negotiator Sgt. Jim Newsom of the sheriff's office that they wanted $10 million, a bus, and a Boeing 727 for their getaway.

The 18 members of the joint force were deployed in three assault groups of four members each, and one four-man group of observers/snipers.

A command post was set up across the street from Gibson's in the nursery room of the Memorial Christian Church. From there, McKinney and Sheriff's Office Investigator Fred Stubbs, ground tactical commander, and Sgt. Ed Nicks of the police department, who was actually in charge of the teams, could relay and receive messages via phone hookup.

Throughout the tense night, kidnappers executed two hostages; the other five were released at various times in exchange for food, drinks and other concessions.

At the command post, officers paced, some smoking, most drinking coffee or soft drinks.

Finally, a stalemate was reached, and the decision was made to storm the building long before first light.

Woman convicted in notorious 1972 case jailed for drunkenness

GALVESTON (AP) — A woman convicted in connection with the 1972 slaying of Houston plastic surgeon John Hill faces a $75 fine following her arrest on charges she was drunk in public, authorities say.

Marcia McKittrick, 36, who listed a Dallas address, was arrested by Galveston police at a convenience store Friday night. She remained in the Galveston County Jail on Sunday in lieu of $250 bond or the fine, sheriff's deputy K. Frigie said.

Ms. McKittrick said she was not drunk when she was arrested and that she had escaped from an acquaintance who had tried to shoot her.

"I was mad, I was not drunk," she said in a telephone call from the jail. "I was already hurt and then the police arrested me."

Ms. McKittrick was convicted in 1973 of providing a gun and driving the getaway car in Hill's death. She received a 10-year prison sentence and was paroled in 1978.

Fire's cause being investigated

From Staff Reports

Investigation is continuing today to determine the cause of a Sunday afternoon apartment fire, says the Midland Fire Department.

The fire that began about 1:30 p.m. at the Windscape Apartments, 3609 Caldera, began in a bedroom of an apartment, said Lon Dominguez, a Midland arson investigator.

There were no injuries in the blaze.

Dominguez said he has ruled out an electrical cause for the fire, but he said he was not sure what started the fire.

The contents of the apartment were destroyed and an adjacent apartment was damaged by heat, Dominguez said.

No damage estimate was available.

The two occupants of both apartments were relocated to other Windscape and Windtree apartments, said Kathleen Habliston, manager of the complex.

Small urban airports no threat, officials say

DALLAS (AP) — In the past 14 years, more than a dozen small plane crashes have occurred near houses and other buildings here, but airport and federal officials say there is no cause for alarm.

Despite a number of very close calls, there have been few injuries.

The latest accident was a July 19 crash of a private plane that went down just off a heavily traveled street in a densely developed area of far north Dallas.

Officials at suburban Addison Airport, where the plane had just taken off, said it was lucky the plane went down in one of the few vacant fields around.

The accident killed all four people aboard the plane but injured no one else and did no damage to other property.

"It (the Addison accident) was a very tragic thing," said Hugh Lyon, manager of the FAA's southwest region airport division in Fort Worth. "But we don't feel that the public needs to worry about airplanes landing on them. Statistically, it is not something that people need to worry about."

The airport, in the north Dallas suburb of Addison, is one of three urban airports serving the Dallas area. The others are the heavily trafficked Love Field and the smaller Red Bird Airport in southwest Dallas.

When the airports were built, the regions around them were relatively free of development, Lyon noted. But by nature, the airports attract development, he said.

"Airports attract businesses — they attract people who want to use those businesses. In my opinion, (city officials) are trying their best to protect airports — but it is getting tougher to do."

Among the close calls:

At Red Bird Airport in April 1972, a plane approaching the airport crashed into a house occupied by four people. One person was slightly injured.

In December 1973, a house near Love Field was severely damaged when a plane crashed in the back yard, setting the house afire and causing the ceiling to collapse. Although 10 people were inside, only one required hospitalization.

In June 1981, a small plane crash-landed on a Dallas street during morning rush hour and skidded to a halt less than a few hundred feet from houses and businesses. No one was injured.

In December 1979, a small plane crashed into a school playground, but the school was closed for Christmas holidays and thus no one on the ground was hurt.

In October 1982, two small planes — one from Addison Airport and the other headed for Love Field — collided over the suburb of Carrollton, killing the four people aboard the planes and strewing wreckage over a two-mile residential area. The collision occurred near a school, but no children were hurt.

In February 1983, 75 Addison warehouse workers barely escaped injury when a small plane headed for the airport clipped a power line, burst into flames and skidded across a street, stopping just short of the warehouse.

Last April, a single-engine plane crashed two miles from the Addison Airport in the front yard of a mansion, killing the pilot but injuring no one else.

Addison Mayor Jerry Redding said all new construction in his city, which is home to the large Galleria shopping mall and numerous other developments, must comply with FAA regulations.

High school's alumni gather in dying town

Delbert and Darlene Duncan kiss at their high school's 50th reunion in Phillips. The Duncans traveled from St. Louis, Mo., to attend the reunion.

PHILLIPS (AP) — When the oil business boomed during the mid-1950s, this community's population swelled to more than 6,000, the Phillips High School Blackhawks captured the state football championship and the graduating class numbered almost 500.

This year, fewer than 150 homeowners remain in the town named after its oil company landlord, Phillips Petroleum Co. The high school graduating class had 19 members.

One by one, residents in the Panhandle community have left after receiving eviction notices from Phillips. The Oklahoma-based company purchased the land bearing 430 homes for future growth of its refinery and chemical operations nearby.

The residents, who had leased the land from the previous owner, MM Cattle Co., must move, though some are fighting eviction in court.

But over the weekend, students from Phillips High School's 50 graduating classes forgot their hometown's impending doom and spilled into the hallways of their alma mater for what might be the last reunion held at the school.

"I think the only reason the school isn't closed already is because of this reunion," said Betty Dunston Irwin, 63, who was the school's first queen in 1940.

"It's horrible to drive down the street and see where you used to live with a big hole in its place. It's a sad thing to see your hometown destroyed."

— Delbert Duncan, Phillips High alumnus

Many of the students at the three-day reunion looked for old acquaintances and relived memories with friends. Former residents recalled the barbershop, theater, restaurant and grocery store that used to be across the street from the school.

And briefly, they rejuvenated this nearly faceless community now down to less than 2,500 residents.

"Just knowing the spirit is still alive is what's wonderful," said Lotus Love Cowell, 42. "When I graduated from here in 1956, it was the best place in the world. It was the best situation you could ever raise a family in. It was safe here."

A lot of the younger graduates who returned for the reunion spent the weekend helping parents move their belongings from a town now marked with potholes, vacant lots and untended flower beds.

"It's horrible to drive down the street and see where you used to live with a big hole in its place," said Delbert Duncan, 42, who now lives in St. Louis. "It's a sad thing to see your hometown destroyed."

When temperatures soared past 100, the graduates were unable to seek refuge under the town's once abundant elm trees. Most of the trees were uprooted last year to clear a path for more than 100 homes that have been moved to nearby lots and towns.

But J.I. Kimmins, principal of the school for 34 years, reminded graduates that Phillips Petroleum was only taking what it had given.

"If Phillips Petroleum Co. hadn't footed the bill, we wouldn't have had all this," he said.

Campaign contributors granted leases on lands

DALLAS (AP) — Gulf Coast developers who got leases on state land from the land commissioner's office have donated thousands of dollars to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's re-election campaign.

Three Gulf Coast developments were granted lease options from the state in recent months — allowing development of the land, while producing money for the state. In each case, Mauro got campaign money from the developers, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Mauro denied any preferential treatment and said all final decisions on lease options are made by the three-member School Land Board, which includes him and two other members.

"I did not seek contributions because they were doing business with the land office," Mauro said. "And I did not seek preferential treatment for anybody from either my staff, the governor or the other two appointees on that board."

But the matter has drawn criticism from some.

"Any time someone makes a donation they expect something in return," said Mary Lou Campbell, a Sierra Club leader in the Gulf Coast town of Port Isabel.

"They very seldom give them just because they want to be good guys. That is not being cynical. That's just being practical," she said.

The projects receiving approval were:

— The Playa Del Rio, an $8 billion super-resort, which required a lease of 416 acres of state land located right in the middle of the planned 12,500-acre resort city near Brownsville.

Under the deal, the state collects revenue from land that had been sitting idle.

Developer Art Nelson approached Mauro about the lease option last September, the Morning News said. About three months later, Nelson and his partner Porchie Grady donated $10,000 to Mauro's re-election campaign, according to campaign finance records in the secretary of state's office.

Two months after that, on Feb. 5, lease options were granted on the land.

Both Mauro and the developers deny any connection between the money and the lease.

The Playa Del Rio has drawn protests from environmentalists who claim it threatens plant and animal life.

— The Island Harbor project of Corpus Christi got a two-year lease option on March 14 to develop 654 acres of state land at Port Aransas on Mustang Island.

Gary Chatham, president of Island Harbor Development Corp. of Corpus Christi and Ken Williams, executive vice president, each gave $1,000 to Mauro, and investors in the project have donated at least another $9,000.

— Island Development Corp. of Corpus Christi, which received a two-year lease option on Sept. 30 on about 60 acres of land on North Padre Island for a sea park as part of a 500-acre development to include hotels, restaurants and shops.

Project partners Ralph Durden and Joe Fulton have given $1,000 to the Mauro campaign.

Mauro said his staff handled much of the work on the projects, which then were approved by the School Land Board without his intervention.

He said such developments can make millions of dollars for the state, which is facing a projected budget deficit of $3.5 billion.

Mauro, a Democrat, has raised $694,000 in his bid for a second term in which he is opposed by Republican M.D. Anderson of Seven Points.

In denying any connection between the lease options and contributions, Mauro's aides said he has received donations from numerous other executives whose projects have been sued or audited by the land commissioner.

Mother thinks cards belong in garbage

DUNCANVILLE (AP) — Liberty Libby is the Statue of Liberty, standing on a trash can, holding a leaky sack of garbage instead of a torch.

Curly Carla has wiry snakes coming out of her head.

Kayo'd Cody is a runny-nose kid with a black eye, bumpy head and a bloody mouth.

They are Garbage Pail Kids — a new craze in chewing-gum trading cards among children ages 8 to 10.

But despite their popularity, some schools and parents around the country consider the cards tasteless and seek to ban them.

Add Duncanville mother Betsy Jarvis, 31, to the list.

"I don't want things in the store that teach my kids or any child that it's OK to beat up on kids, bad-mouth their parents or not mind their principal," said Mrs. Jarvis, who has 5-year-old twin girls.

She said she has already collected 250 signatures on a petition to remove the trading cards from local 7-Eleven and Toys R Us stores and halt their manufacture by Topps Chewing Gum Inc. of Brooklyn, N.Y.

She hopes to collect 1,000 signatures by Sept. 1, when she will present the petition to the three companies.

Some of the peel-off cards have "wanted" posters on the flip side charging parents with "aggravated assault" or the school principal with "brain washing." Some cards serve as puzzle pieces for a larger poster of a bruised and bleeding kid, she said.

Parental discretion is not enough, she said.

"Kids aren't old enough to decide what is good or bad for them, and once one child on the block has them others can see them and want them," Mrs. Jarvis said.

Officials with Toys R Us and Dallas-based Southland Corp., which owns 7-Eleven convenience stores, said they can't stock their stores fast enough to keep up with the demand for the 25-cent packs that include gum and five cards.

"It's pretty much one of our more popular items," said Karen Raskopf, public relations manager for Southland's North Texas area.

Eight people have called or written about Garbage Pail Kids, she said.

"We feel that everyone is entitled to their opinion," she said. "But we also have a responsibility to provide the products that our customers want."

John Suozzo, area general manager for Toys R Us, declined comment.

Norman Liss, a spokesman for Topps, said the company sees nothing wrong with the cards and neither do the kids.

"The demand is incredible — more than we can keep up with," Liss said. "And we wouldn't put it out if we thought it was bad."

But the Garbage Pail Kids have drawn the ire of parents in other parts of the country as well. In Charleston, W.Va., some state officials are seeking a statewide ban of the trading cards.

"Some say kids are just kids and they like gross things, but these cards are more than that — they are anti-family, anti-society, anti-morals," she said.

Council must decide which is lesser of two evils

SAN ANGELO (AP) — The pastor of the Living Faith Foursquare Church says pornography is evil, and the owner of a bookstore says the same about censorship.

Both have had their say, and now it's up to the San Angelo City Council to decide in two weeks whether to approve a proposed zoning ordinance that would impose stiffer standards upon adult entertainment, literature and merchandise in this West Texas city of 85,000.

Charles Hall, a bespectacled 58-year-old bookstore owner, says he can't understand what all the fuss is about. He sells sexually explicit books, but notes that they are kept in a couple of cardboard boxes in the rear of the store.

Customers, he said, aren't confronted with the material.

"The books are wrapped and sealed. I don't advertise them...I'm committed to the belief that you and I have the right to read what we want — and to reject what we want," Hall said.

"The books are wrapped and sealed. I don't advertise them...I'm committed to the belief that you and I have the right to read what we want — and to reject what we want."

— Charles Hall, bookstore owner

Hall said he doesn't want his own standards safeguarded by someone else.

"I think it's ridiculous. I think adults should be able to read what books they want to," he says.

On the other side of the battle are a group of ministers, the chief spokesman of whom has been the Rev. Don Jackson, a trim, athletic-looking 38-year-old preacher, who says "We're playing Russian roulette with pornography."

Jackson suggests, "You're loading the gun with the bullet of pornography and somebody can get hurt."

The proposed ordinance, offered to the City Council a week ago, would ban the showing of adult movies and the sale of sexually explicit books and films within 1,000 feet of residential areas, churches and parks and within one mile of a school.

The ordinance would cover not only movie theaters, bookstores and clubs with topless dancing, but also hotels that show adult movies on cable television.

Both Hall and Jackson say they are reluctant figures in the anti-pornography war.

"I tend to stir these people up for some reason, and I don't know why," Hall says. "I really can't see what all the hullaballoo's about."

Jackson says he doesn't expect the anti-porn drive to consume a lifetime.

"I'm not going to spend my life fighting this," Jackson says. "My job is to be a gospel ministry. I'm not a crusader."

But he exudes a fervor when talking about his cause. "We're trying to maintain a high standard of morality," he says.

Jackson says he especially wants to keep pornography out of the reach and sight of children.

Four people die in house fire

BEAUMONT (AP) — A house fire killed four people early today, including three children, authorities said.

The dead were a 26-year-old woman and her two daughters, aged 4 and 8, and her 14-year-old niece, said Justice of the Peace Harold Engstrom. He said the names were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The mother and daughters were found huddled in the home's hallway, apparently trying to escape the billowing smoke, Engstrom said.

"They probably had been disoriented by the smoke," he said. "There was a lot of smoke."

The niece, who also apparently had tried to get out of the house, was found beside her bed, the justice of the peace said.

The fire, in a sparsely populated area in the northwest part of the city, was reported just before 3 a.m. and had been smoldering for a long time, Engstrom said. Firefighters were able to control it 20 minutes after the report, Fire Capt. Michael Hall said.

Officials were investigating the cause, he said.

Now your child can master algebra. With help from Sylvan Learning Center.

When problems with algebra threaten to hold your child back, you need to find a solution. Fast. Because the longer you wait, the further behind your child will fall.

Sylvan Learning Center can help. We'll teach your child to conquer the basics of algebra—and give him or her a better start toward a successful future.

The first step: An appraisal of your child's current abilities.
We begin by pinpointing your child's strengths and weaknesses in numeration, fractions, multiplication, time and measurement. We test for auditory discrimination and vision, as well.

Then, based on the test results, we tailor an algebra program to meet your child's needs.

The duration of the program varies. Your child may need to review and reinforce basic math skills before proceeding to the algebra phase.

A proven effective program.
The algebra program consists of pre-identified skills arranged in sequential order, on computer disks specially designed by Sylvan.

Your child's lessons begin at the level we know he or she can handle. And they progress at a pace that will be challenging, but not overwhelming.

The program is directed by a fully certified teacher along with specially trained instructors. There are never any more than three students per teacher, so your child is guaranteed personal attention whenever answers, support, praise or encouragement is needed.

You'll be kept informed. Your child will be rewarded.
You and your child's regular classroom teacher will be kept regularly informed of your child's progress in algebra.

When a lesson is done right or a tough problem is finally overcome, your child's achievement will be rewarded with a token, good toward gifts from the Sylvan Store. Students can redeem the tokens right away or save for things they want.

'Cause for Paws' fundraiser benefits Midland's SPCA

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

The grounds of Midland's Racquet Club were "catusally" decked out in jungle attire Friday during Cause for Paws.

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

The great West Texas outdoors provided the backdrop Friday night for the Cause for Paws fund-raiser benefiting Midland's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The grounds of the Racquet Club were "catsually" decked out in a jungle theme, with animal cutouts surrounding the guest area, small topiary animals as centerpieces on sponsor tables and floating animal rafts in the swimming pool. The trees were laced with colored streamers and joined with lanterns.

Jeanette Probandt, SPCA projects chairman and board president, said about 375 people were estimated to attend, "maybe more." Last year's fund-raiser brought in about $20,000 for the SPCA, she said, and this year's Cause for Paws is expected to raise about the same amount.

Dalton Byerly, director of the local SPCA, said money raised by the event would be used to cover operating expenses.

"We have about 100 animals at all times" in the society's animal shelter said. "The animals we have are given up by their owners." The SPCA tries to find new homes for these animals through an "adoption" process.

In addition to this service, the organization does "all the cruelty (to animals) investigations in the county and ... education programs. "We deal with all kinds of animals — cruelty investigations on horses, cows ... In housing, we don't deal with any but horses, dogs and cats," Byerly said.

The celebrity guest for Cause for Paws this year was Dan Haggerty, better known to millions of television viewers as Grizzly Adams.

Haggerty began his career as an animal trainer and has maintained a love of and concern for animals of all kinds throughout his life.

Music for listening and for dancing was provided by The Bill Tillman Band from Dallas, led by Bill Tillman, former member of Blood, Sweat and Tears. Other band members were Mike Gurciullo, Jeff Taylor, Kim Kassira, Debbie Tickle, Terry Anglin, Dan Bradford, Ross Hansen, Eddie Parker and Charlie Ferguson.

A silent auction of gifts, clothing and accessories donated by area merchants was featured during the evening, and a runway style show was conducted to such melodies as "Talk to the Animals" and "Theme from Pink Panther."

A fajita dinner complete with refried beans and guacamole was served.

Mrs. Probandt was projects chairman for the event, assisted by Janet Allison as co-chairman. The invitation listed "Tiger ... A Most Courageous Cat" as 1986 honorary chairman.

'Grizzly Adams' star attends fund-raiser

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Grizzly Adams was a real 19th-century American who, after causing the death of his wife's lover in a fight, sought refuge in the mountains.

In this century, Grizzly Adams is better known as the title character of a 1970s television series based on his life — a series that shot its star Dan Haggerty into national prominence.

Haggerty — who was a celebrity guest this weekend at the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' Cause for Paws benefit — discussed both Adam's life and his own.

Adams lived many years in his mountains, Haggerty said, befriended by grizzly bears who actually carried his packs for him. He eventually became Barnum and Bailey's first animal trainer.

Haggerty, too, is an animal trainer — "I got my first lion when I was 19," he said — and, in fact, began his Hollywood career training animals.

His acting career began by accidently, Haggerty said. "I never set out to be an actor." While working as animal trainer and stuntman for a film called "Snow Tiger," he so impressed the people financing the movie that they asked him to become Grizzly Adams.

Haggerty is not just an actor, however. Always concerned with the needs of both animals and children, he is currently working on restoration of a crystal merry-go-round that he plans to donate to abused and battered children.

He also uses his skills to restore other vehicles. "We restore classic cars," he said. "I do the metalwork. Nature gave me real good hands."

Working with his hands has led him into other fields, too. "I had my own leather shop," Haggerty said. "I made all Clint's clothes for 'Fistful of Dollars.'"

Like Grizzly Adams, Haggerty has adventure in his life. Grizzly Racing is another of his endeavors. "My partner and I build cars. We have dragsters and go to all the meets."

Haggerty has several new television projects underway, he said, but one coming attraction is not the broadcast kind. He is working on the establishment of a chain of "Haggerty's Country Kitchen" restaurants which will serve only homemade and healthy foods, including homemade mayonnaise and buffalo meat. "The first will be opened in Las Vegas," he said.

Although Haggerty attended St. John's Military Academy in California and Valley College, he said most of his education has been either self taught or acquired by learning from experts in his various fields.

All has not been perfect in Haggerty's life, however. On July 12, 1985, a motorcycle accident almost caused the loss of his leg. He still bears heavy scars and a metal rod inside his left leg, and sometimes walks with a limp; but he walks on his own legs.

He also underwent the nightmare of drug charges a couple of years ago — charges he claimed were an attempt to frame him into becoming a "snitch" on the industry.

The charges are no longer hanging over his head and, according to Haggerty, his career has not suffered.

Through all the ups and downs, Haggerty has maintained his interest in working for and with animals and children. In fact, he trained "Ben," the bear who co-starred with him in his television series — although Ben's real name is Bozo and he's a she.

"I raised her from a cub," Haggerty said. "She was a real clown when she was a cub." The bear is now 18 years old and lives on Haggerty's ranch with her family.

The father of four and grandfather of one, Haggerty believes in the need for more quality children's television programming.

"Strengthen the backbone of tomorrow with the children of today," he said. "If you ever want the truth, look in the eyes of a child."

Educating the public on responsible animal care is one of his major concerns.

"Wild animals are terrific while they are young, but you have to remember they do grow up and we can't hold on to them for our own selfish purposes."

Wild animals have special dietary needs that must be met for them to stay healthy, Haggerty said. "Wild animals are wonderful in the right environment.

"An eagle should fly."

DEAR ABBY: I just read that letter signed "Not Sure in Louisiana," and I can't believe you took that letter seriously. I don't know what the socks smelled like, but that letter sure smelled like a phony to me.

I've been reading your column for at least 20 years in the St. Louis Globe Democrat, and if you believe that letter was for real, there's a bridge in Brooklyn I'd like to sell you. — FROM MISSOURI: SHOW ME

DEAR FROM: The following letter was received the same day yours arrived. I telephoned the sender to verify it, and he gave me permission to use his letter and his name:

DEAR ABBY: I think you owe me an apology for having caused the postponement of my marriage.

I am in the U.S. Army and just returned from two years in England to learn that my fiancee refuses to marry me until I receive some professional counseling. It seems that she wrote to you for advice after having received 203 pairs of dirty socks that I had shipped to her with the rest of my belongings. She wondered if she would be expected to do all the dirty work.

Let me explain: When I shipped the socks, they were clean. As cartons pass through certain countries, the customs people spray them with pesticides. This makes them smell "funny" and sometimes ruins the contents — an accepted hazard to us in the military. I had so many pairs of socks because when a foot soldier spends months at a time in the field, fresh socks are the only way to save his feet.

It was a great hardship being separated from those I love for such a long time. I served my country faithfully, and now I return home to find that you have alluded to me as a male chauvinist in need of counseling.

Having been raised by a divorced, struggling mother and three older sisters, I am well aware that every man must pull his own weight in order to have a successful home. Now I must wait even longer for happiness because of your support of my fiancee's misunderstanding. I am hurt! — GLENN SCOTT, HAUGHTON, LA.

P.S. Please respond quickly as I may be sent overseas again soon. I might even volunteer.

DEAR GLENN: Please accept my apologies for any distress I might have caused you, but it's not every day I receive a letter from a woman asking if she should marry a man who ships her 203 pairs of dirty socks to launder.

But be fair, Glenn — I did not say you were a "male chauvinist"; neither did I suggest that you needed counseling. My answer to your fiancee's letter was as follows:

"Dear Not Sure: I advise you to cancel the wedding plans until you know him better. Maybe your fiance just doesn't like to wash his socks, which is evidence that he's lazy — or a bit of a slob. But to assume that he's a male chauvinist who will expect you to do all the dirty work may be unfair. So don't sock it to him until you're sure."

Please write again, Glenn, and let me know how you and your fiancee have resolved your problem, and thank you for allowing me to reveal your name in order to set the record straight.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Dogs suffer 'separation anxiety'

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — "Separation anxiety," the distress caused by being left alone, is a common problem among dogs, according to an animal behavior specialist at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine.

Just as some children scream and run after a departing parent, some dogs howl incessantly and dig at the door when an owner leaves home, says Dr. Victoria Voith.

"Dogs may also urinate or defecate inside the house" after the departure, Voith says. But, contrary to what owners think, the animals are not acting out of spite or attempting to get even. "They are simply experiencing anxiety similar to that experienced by small children," says Voith.

Doctor specializes in cancer treatments for dogs, cats

FOUNTAIN VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — What would happen if your Chihuahua came down with breast cancer? If the police department's prized drug-sniffing dog was diagnosed as having leukemia? Your mother's kitty had skin cancer?

Chances are, despite the fact that increasing numbers of pets are afflicted with cancer, your veterinarian would be unable to offer treatment, recommending instead that the animal be put out of its misery.

Besides, even if there were a veterinarian who would treat cancer, who would want to plunk down as much as $2,000 to save a 13-year-old mutt?

Dr. Justin Quecke has found that plenty of pet owners in Southern California would — and do.

Spurred by a frightening bout seven years ago with melanoma, a deadly form of skin cancer that required surgery on his arm, the 25-year veterinary science veteran opened what he believes is the nation's first private practice dedicated exclusively to the costly treatment of cancer in dogs and cats.

"It sounds corny, but I thought the technology and capability exist. Why not use it to help these animals?" he said.

Animal rights activists may take heart that animals, which have been unwitting guinea pigs for cancer research for decades, are finally reaping the benefits.

Quecke, who employs 25 staff members, offers diagnostic screenings for $35 and a variety of treatments including surgery, radiation and chemotherapy.

The doctor has seen 200 animal patients and treated about 50 since opening the California Veterinary Oncology Group in Fountain Valley, about 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

Most fellow animal doctors have shied away from opening a cancer-treatment practice for animals because of the high cost of equipment.

Quecke (pronounced "quick") has invested more than $1 million in sophisticated equipment usually reserved for humans: A CAT scanner, a cobalt machine for radiation treatment and a sensitive X-ray device known as an orthovoltage machine.

The veterinarian tells of a Laguna Hills couple who paid $1,400 to save their 13-year-old Chihuahua afflicted with breast cancer and a Seal Beach woman who paid $1,000 in savings to have a cancerous growth removed from her aging cat.

Quecke donated his services to treat Anaheim's drug-sniffing police dog, Cliff, for leukemia. The canine sleuth had needed about $2,000 in treatment.

"Cancer is a disease of older animals," he said. "Animals are living longer and as a result, we're seeing more cancer."

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was sharply down in early trading in Europe today, losing ground against all major currencies except the British pound. Gold prices were lower.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar, reflecting a rise on the New York exchange, closed at 157.20 yen, up from Friday's 157.10 yen. But later, in London, it was quoted down at 157 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Friday:

2.1365 West German marks, down from 2.1525.

1.7230 Swiss francs, down from 1.7340.

6.9055 French francs, down from 6.9545.

2.4080 Dutch guilders, down from 2.4230.

1,461.00 Italian lire, down from 1,477.50.

1.387.00 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

In London, the British pound, depressed by falling oil prices, was quoted at $1.4715, cheaper than $1.4840 Friday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $348.20 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $349. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $350.80.

In Zurich, the bid price was $348.40, down from Friday's close of $349.50. Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of $1.15 a troy ounce, to close at a bid price of $348.29.

Silver was quoted in London Monday at a bid price of $5 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $5.02.

Low oil prices affecting Iran war chest

EDITOR'S NOTE — Oil has been the key bankroller for Iran in its war with Iraq, now nearly six years old. But with oil prices falling, the Islamic republic is looking elsewhere to fill its war chest. This dispatch, by a correspondent who formerly reported from Iran and now follows developments there from Cyprus, is one of a continuing series of articles on the impact of falling world oil prices.

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — With its oil revenues falling, Iran is counting on other exports — from Persian rugs to pistachio nuts — to help bring in the $7 billion a year it needs to carry on its war with Iraq.

Some non-oil exports have increased by as much as 30 percent in the last year, but Middle East economic experts here on Cyprus believe the Iranians will still be strapped as the war drags on.

The Gulf War, as it is called, began Sept. 20, 1980, and shows no sign of ending soon.

A country whose oil wealth was once the envy of others, Iran must depend on exporting fruit, goat skins and copper bars, as well as rugs and pistachio nuts, to fill in for the losses that have resulted from the sharp drop in world oil prices.

The Islamic government in Tehran is encouraging Iranian businesses to increase exports to bring in foreign currency and discouraging some imports.

For example, the import of pens is to be banned next year in favor of locally made pens. According to official Iranian statistics, the country now produces 100 million pens a year.

Iranian officials contend the drop in oil income will eventually help the economy.

"The reduction in the price of oil will not defeat the Islamic Republic of Iran, but will open a new chapter in the country's economy, leading it towards self sufficiency," Prime Minister Hussein Musavi declared in June.

The Iranian statistics indicate that Iran's non-oil exports totalled $67 million in May, twice April's figures. The average monthly total last year was $25 million.

Persian rugs, highly prized in the West, last year earned $100 million, according to the Iranian figures. Pistachio nuts earned $42 million. They once were sold extensively in the United States, but now West Germany is a main market.

Such traditional exports as caviar and cotton have declined, however.

European importers blame the drop in caviar exports on a decline in management efficiency since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution in 1979.

Thousands of acres of cotton fields in the Gorgan area north of Tehran have been abandoned by Turkoman tribesmen because they refuse to sell their crops to the government.

Natural gas is potentially the most valuable of Iran's exports.

Safeway agrees to $4 billion merger

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Safeway Stores Inc., the nation's largest supermarket chain, said it has agreed to a $4 billion merger with a holding company formed by a New York partnership.

Safeway has been trying to fend off a takeover bid from Dart Group Corp.

The merger agreement provides for SSI Holdings Corp. to pay $69 a share for up to 45 million shares, about 73 percent of Safeway's stock, according to a statement released Sunday by Safeway. The Dart Group had offered $64 a share.

SSI Holdings was formed by the partnership Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co., which specializes in takeovers.

The deal is subject to a minimum of 41.56 million shares being sold under the offer. The tender offer would be followed by a merger of Safeway and an SSI subsidiary, in which Safeway's remaining shareholders would receive $61.60 a share and one warrant to purchase common stock in the holding company.

Safeway, which operates more than 2,300 supermarkets, said the deal was unanimously approved by its board and is subject to the approval of two-thirds of the holders of Safeway's outstanding stock. Safeway said it has about 61 million shares outstanding.

The Oakland-based chain has been trying to fend off a $64-a-share, or $3.9 billion, bid from the Dart Group, a discount retailer based in Landover, Md., that already owns 4.9 percent of Safeway's stock. Dart's offer is scheduled to expire Aug. 5.

The Safeway statement said Bankers Trust Co. of New York has agreed to form a syndicate of banks to provide $3 billion in financing for the acquisition.

Safeway stock closed at $61.875 Friday.

Dart on Friday accused Safeway of violating federal securities laws by taking "collusive action" with an unknown third party in trying to thwart Dart's bid.

"We are outraged," Dart lawyer Robert Hirsch said Friday, threatening legal action if Safeway's board sold the company to a third party.

There was no answer at Dart's Landover office Sunday. Dart chairman Herbert Haft did not immediately return a message left at his home.

Kohlberg, Kravis, which earlier this year bought the Beatrice Cos. for $6.2 billion in a leveraged buyout, received a $15 million fee from Safeway in connection with the merger agreement, and will get an additional $45 million if the deal is called off under certain undisclosed circumstances, Safeway's statement said.

Gas shows lowest price decline yet

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices plunged nearly nearly 8½ cents a gallon in the past month, the steepest drop this year, and the decline should continue, an oil industry analyst said.

"This was so unpredicted. It was expected to rise after the Fourth of July," said Dan Lundberg, who surveys more than 15,000 gas stations across the nation every two weeks.

The new survey found the average price for all grades of gasoline including taxes was 87.96 cents a gallon, compared with 91.74 cents two weeks ago and 96.38 cents a month ago, Lundberg said Sunday.

"That is the steepest fall in a series of price drops," he said of the four-week drop. "The decline in the price of gasoline is accelerating."

The per-gallon price already has dropped 33.5 cents this year and Lundberg predicted a new decrease of as much as 5 cents a gallon by the end of the summer.

At self-serve pumps, the survey showed motorists are paying 74.72 cents for regular leaded, 80.13 cents for regular unleaded and 95.01 cents for premium unleaded. The average self-serve price for all grades was 81 cents, compared with just over $1.19 a year ago.

The last time motorists paid 81 cents a gallon for gasoline was in 1979, he said, and a year ago the self-serve average was nearly 40 cents higher.

Motorists who take on gasoline at full-service pumps are paying almost 30 cents a gallon more for fuel, Lundberg said. Regular leaded gas at full-serve pumps is $1.0402 a gallon, unleaded is $1.0994.

Colonel will do more than chicken right

Major change expected under Pepsico

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp. will do all kinds of chicken — not just fried — right once the company is formally taken over by Pepsico Inc., analysts predict.

That's because Pepsico, which will become one of the world's largest restaurateurs through the $850 million cash acquisition announced Thursday, already is extremely aggressive about introducing products, whether they are new Pizza Hut or Taco Bell dishes, Pepsi-Cola soft drinks or Frito-Lay snacks.

Pepsico, the nation's second-largest soft drink maker, also probably will speed up a plan to add seating and drive-up windows to Kentucky Fried Chicken outlets, and eventually may offer home delivery service, the analysts said.

And it should step up Kentucky Fried Chicken's advertising and promotion, applying the marketing muscle it already uses in its existing businesses.

The predicted result will be a U.S. fast-food industry dominated by Pepsico and by McDonald's Corp., which will have greater restaurant sales than Pepsico but fewer outlets.

Additionally, McDonald's and the other hamburger chains are expected to try to sell more chicken products, intensifying competition in the already fiercely competitive fast-food business that has been suffering from sluggish sales.

"This is clearly a major event for the restaurant business," said Charles Glovsky, an analyst with the investment firm Alex. Brown & Sons Inc. in Baltimore.

Pepsico, based in Purchase, N.Y., is buying Kentucky Fried Chicken from RJR Nabisco Inc.

In addition to expanding its share in the domestic fast food business, Pepsico will gain significant opportunities outside North America, where Kentucky Fried Chicken is the largest chain with 1,800 outlets.

Pepsico also plans to sell its Pepsi-Cola soft drinks in more than the 1,000 Kentucky Fried Chicken outlets that currently offer them. The company, while emphasizing that this was not the reason for the acquisition, says it will push to convert the franchises that now sell Coca-Cola Co. products.

"It's a wonderful fit because Pepsi already knows restaurants," said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst with Montgomery Securities in San Francisco.

"When Pepsi gets its claws into Kentucky Fried Chicken, you will see a significant broadening of the menu," Goldman said.

"You have three choices at Kentucky Fried Chicken: original fried chicken, spicy fried chicken and nuggets. The common thread: fried. That's go-

Armco to decide fate of LTV firm

CLEVELAND (AP) — Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich says the fate of the Reserve Mining Co. apparently will be decided by Armco Inc., since co-owner LTV Steel Co. is pulling out of the iron ore mine.

Perpich traveled to Cleveland on Thursday to meet with officials of LTV Steel about the future of its iron ore mines in Minnesota because of the bankruptcy reorganization filing by LTV Corp., the Dallas-based parent company of LTV Steel.

During the meeting, LTV Steel officials said the company no longer would be involved with Reserve but would continue to operate two other mines, according to the governor.

LTV Steel, the nation's No.2 steelmaker, owns Erie Mining Co. in Hoyt Lakes, Minn., and the McKinley ore mine near Aurora, Minn., in addition to its half interest in Reserve in Silver Bay, Minn. Erie and McKinley have 1,750 hourly and salaried employees.

Israeli firm sells $50 million in swimsuits

Gottex sells to Elizabeth Taylor, Princess Diana, among others

NEW YORK (AP) — It's summertime and American women are lounging around pools and strolling along beaches, showing off this year's hot-selling bathing suits. But Miriam Ruzow has little time for that.

The 43-year-old president of the U.S. arm of Gottex, the Israeli swimsuit maker, is working on the 1987 collection of high-priced, sexy, fashion suits.

"They say it's the best line we've ever made," says Mrs. Ruzow, the first of two children of the company's founders, Leah and Armin Gottlieb. "Compared to the year before, it should be your best."

Mrs. Ruzow believes in trying to surpass herself, and succeeding.

Several models pop in and out of her chic office in New York's garment district. They slip off their cover-ups, and reveal large polka dots, zebra stripes, vibrant colors, sequins, silver shimmerings, snakeskin patterns, high necks and cut-out backs. They twist, twirl.

Mrs. Ruzow, a small woman who speaks English with an Israeli accent, provides a stream of this kind of commentary: "Everything today is shape and seams," and "The animal thing is very strong this year."

She also mentions the names for the groups of suits: "Sculpture," "Yachting," "Tahiti," "Hollywood," "African Jewels" ....

She laughs, and says: "We sit in Tel Aviv and make up names."

WHAT IT COMES down to is developing clever ideas.

"You can get an idea from anything. When you go to a show or listen to an opera .... It can come from being in a museum," Mrs. Ruzow said. "After we finish a collection, we rest for a few months. Then, in October, we start looking, looking at everything."

The Gottlieb family has been looking hard for 30 years.

Armin Gottlieb, now 75, was a rainwear manufacturer in Budapest, Hungary, where Mrs. Ruzow was born, until World War II, when he was sent to a Nazi labor camp. The rest of the family went into hiding.

In 1949, when Mrs. Ruzow was six, the reunited family emigrated to Tel Aviv.

At first, the Gottliebs tried to rebuild the rainwear business but, Mrs. Ruzow said, "My mother observed that the weather wasn't very rainy."

So in 1956, Leah Gottlieb, now 67 and still the company's principal designer, produced a line of swimsuits and the couple started building the business, whose name comes from the combination of the family's name and the word textiles.

Mrs. Ruzow, meanwhile, served her mandatory two years in the Israeli army, obtained a business degree from the University of Jerusalem, and studied fashion at the Ecole Guerre Lavigne in Paris.

She wasn't wild about joining Gottex — she dabbled in designing lingerie — but her parents pressed her and she agreed to work for them, but only in the United States.

IN 1966, MRS. Ruzow arrived in New York to tackle the large and highly competitive American market.

"I learned very fast. I always say it was the very best schooling," Mrs. Ruzow said.

Her military training helped, she added.

Mrs. Ruzow attributes her success to providing fashion and high quality.

"The stores took a strong stand on our merchandise," Mrs. Ruzow said. "They don't come to you because you're Israeli."

Gottex takes credit for these industry innovations over the years: matching cover-ups, the strapless maillot, Lycra spandex suits, Lycra lace, and suits threaded with gold.

Its suits have twice made the cover of Sports Illustrated's annual swimsuit issue, which some readers have objected to as sexist and inappropriate.

But what has helped Gottex in the U.S. market, Mrs. Ruzow said, is that: "American people are far more open to more from Europe, more influence from Europe."

Among celebrities, American and not, who wear Gottex suits are Elizabeth Taylor, Nancy Kissinger and Princess Diana.

Gottex sells 1.5 million pieces a year in 62 countries. It even sells suits in Israel's Arab neighbors Jordan and Lebanon, but without the labels.

THE U.S. MARKET is Gottex's largest, representing almost 45 percent of its $50 million in annual worldwide sales.

The privately held company doesn't disclose its profit but Mrs. Ruzow confirmed reports that that Gottex has been profitable for 15 years and made $4 million in 1984.

Mrs. Ruzow, who speaks six languages and is an Israeli citizen, travels to Gottex's offices in Milan once a month from October through March to meet her mother and 40-year-old sister, Judith Gottfried, to choose fabrics for the coming season. Mrs. Gottfried runs the company's operations in Israel.

Gottex's vivid and playful prints are its forte. For example, one African-theme fabric for next year is a print depicting leather belts.

Mrs. Ruzow confesses she has grown tired of the year's prints and sunbathes in one of her 10, solid-colored bikinis.

The new fabrics, once chosen, are shipped to Israel, where they are fashioned into suits and produced at one of Gottex's plants or by outside contractors.

Headquartered in Tel Aviv, Gottex employs about 1,250 people.

"Israel needs all the money they can get. This is a way we can do something for Israel as a country," she said.

But not everybody there in enthusiastic about Gottex.

Ultra-religious Jews have strongly objected to its bus-stop advertisements that depict scantily clad women.

"WE ARE VERY respectful of religious people," Mrs. Ruzow said, adding that the company refrains from running the ads in neighborhoods where many ultra-religious Jews live.

In this country, Gottex starts delivering hundreds of styles of suits and cover-ups to fancy department and specialty stores in October and finishes the following June.

They retail from $40 to $250 each.

This past year, Gottex introduced a more moderately priced and funkier collection called Viewpoint, aimed at the younger American market.

Gottex also has licensed its name for use on sheets, towels and eyeglasses.

But the company isn't keen to go public.

"It's very different being a family-owned company. You have the freedom to create," Mrs. Ruzow said.

She wants her three children to join the family business eventually. Her eldest, a 20-year-old daughter, is working for a department store selling suits this summer. Mrs. Ruzow has a son, 15, and a 10-year-old daughter.

Her husband, Steve Ruzow, serves as vice chairman of the company.

Although swimsuit maker Miriam Ruzow depends on people catching rays and swimming in her product, she finds little time for those activities herself.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Administration trims national growth forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in a preliminary review of the economy at mid-year, scaled down its growth estimate for 1986 but substantially boosted projections for economic activity next year.

The administration's 1986 growth forecast, as measured by the gross national product, was trimmed to 2.6 percent, down from its February estimate of 3.4 percent growth. For 1987, it predicted the economy will rebound at an annual rate of 4.5 percent.

The forecast will be revised before being issued, officials say.

Sales, median price of existing homes slump

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sales pace of existing homes and the median price of a single-family homes declined slightly last month, the National Association of Realtors said.

The trade group blamed a slight increase in mortgage interest rates for the 1.2 percent decline in the seasonally adjusted annual rate of home sales to 3.41 million units.

The slower sales pace was accompanied by a $900 decrease — to $82,300 — in the median price of an existing home between May and June.

Richest households controlling more wealth

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's "super-rich" families have gotten even richer in the past two decades, controlling a record 35 percent of the country's total wealth and each holding average assets of $8.9 million, Democratic researchers said.

Their study said the 420,000 wealthiest households saw their share of the wealth grow from slightly more than 25 percent in 1963 to 35 percent in 1983, an increase of 38 percent.

Cattle inventory at lowest level in 13 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A midyear inventory of cattle showed that 112.2 million head were on the nation's farms and ranches, 4 percent fewer than a year ago and 8 percent fewer than two years ago, the Agriculture Department said.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said that the July 1 tally was the smallest since USDA began keeping mid-year cattle figures in 1973.

Hard times in agriculture, including the cattle business, have forced many producers to liquidate breeding herds or to cut back sharply.

Mobil to divest CCA packaging subsidiary

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp. said it agreed to sell its Container Corp. of America (CCA) packaging unit for $700 million to a new company jointly owned by Jefferson Smurfit Corp. and the investment firm Morgan Stanley & Co.

Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil company behind Exxon Corp., said it would take a $150 million after-tax loss on the sale that would be applied to its third-quarter results.

Under the sale agreement, the new company, JSC-MS Holdings Inc., would pay Mobil about $700 million cash and assume about $457 million of Chicago-based CCA's debt, lifting the total value of the deal to $1.16 billion.

ing to change," Goldman said.

He listed as possibilities a non-breaded chicken sandwich and roasted chicken with a sauce. The company might even introduce a non-chicken product in the next few years, Glovsky said.

But Kentucky Fried Chicken won't get into hamburgers, the analysts said.

Pepsico has a reputation for being a wizard with new products. Among its hugely successful product introductions are Slice soft drinks, which contain 10 percent fruit juice, O'Gradys extra thick and crunchy potato chips and Pizza Hut's Pan Pizza.

Kentucky Fried Chicken already had been developing some new products, such as the chicken nuggets, and upgrading its outlets on its own.

Bill introduced seeking action on oil imports

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Wyoming Sen. Malcolm Wallop has introduced a bill that will require the president take action whenever petroleum imports exceed 50 percent of the nation's petroleum consumption.

The Energy Policy and Security Act of 1986, would require the president to develop a foreign petroleum dependence prevention plan, which Wallop said could include any combination of production incentives for domestic producers, energy conservation measures, expansion of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, or an oil import tax.

Wallop is co-sponsoring the bill with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who also has been Wallop's co-sponsor on a proposals to establish an oil import tax and require that the Strategic Petroleum Reserve be filled with domestic oil.

"The country is already back up to relying on imported oil for well over 30 percent of our energy needs," Wallop said in introducing the energy policy bill Wednesday.

"Quite frankly, I wouldn't mind broadening the import category to include coal, natural gas and even electricity in addtion to foreign oil and petroleum products," Wallop said. "But at a time when long-term energy policy doesn't even exist, even a more limited approach is a good first step."

As examples of the far reaching effects of the cheap foreign oil being imported, Wallop said the number of active oil drilling rigs in Wyoming has dropped to less than 26, compared to about 190 five years ago, and Marathon, Questar, Amoco and Chevron all have laid off workers in the state in the past two months.

He also noted exploration for new natural gas fields has stopped, only a single uranium mine is still operating and 12 banks in the state have failed during the past four years.

Sen. Alan Simpson also has joined the call for development of a sound national energy policy.

"We don't know what the (Reagan administration's) energy policy is," Simpson said. "We never have."

He said the energy producing states' calls for help are going unheeded and there is no chance the president will veto a proposed tax reform package on the grounds that it does not include provisions needed by the energy industry.

IRAN

But developing this sector has been held up because a pipeline to the neighboring Soviet Union, built during Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's reign, was diverted for domestic use after the revolution.

"The Iranians would like to talk about exporting to the Soviets, but the crucial factor is the price," said a Middle East economic specialist based in Cyprus, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

Iran now produces about 2 million barrels of oil a day, with about 1.5 million barrels exported. Some economists estimate that its oil income has dropped to $20 million or less a day, or about half last year's daily average.

In the last eight months, the price of a barrel of oil has plunged from $32 to around $12.

But another Cyprus-based economist specializing in Iranian oil, also speaking only on the basis of anonymity, said those figures can be misleading in Iran's case, meaning they could be lower.

"There's a lot of hidden discounting," he explained. "Because of the Gulf War, foreign tankers cannot lift oil from Kharg Island, Iran's main Gulf terminal which has been repeatedly bombed by the Iraqis."

Most oil exports now have to be shuttled 400 miles south to Sirri Island in the Persian Gulf to be pumped aboard tankers, out of the normal range of Iraqi warplanes. The Iranians have to pay the shuttle costs.

"On top of this," the oil specialist added, "Iran is offering $2 insurance and transportation on every barrel it exports. So it's impossible for the country's official budget to be met."

Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh of Iran has said, however, that the loss of oil income will have no effect on the war effort.

"Defense has an unlimited allocation," he added.

"The government has set a ceiling of about $10 billion as a revenue target this year. That includes non-oil export income and oil revenue."

Iran's parliament, the Majlis, has set an official war budget of $7.1 billion for this year. But the economists say they cannot see how this can be met along with other hidden war expenditure while the country still has to pay for essential imports. These averaged $12.5 billion in the 12 months ending last March.

An Iranian Economy Ministry official told The Associated Press by telephone from Tehran: "The fall in oil prices may be a good opportunity in the long run to put pressure on certain sectors of the economy to try to produce goods which would make us more self-sufficient."

ATTENTION GEOLOGISTS

Cambe Geological Services is pleased to announce the beginning of a new membership in its Midland Data Library. On August 1 you will be able to join Cambe's library in Midland for only $75.00 per month. For this small monthly fee you get complete access to Cambe's complete data base. You pull your own scout tickets, production figures (Dwight's), paleo records, etc., copy them and give a list of the logs you need (30 day limit) to our log department. We pull the logs, run the copy if necessary and check them out to you for 30 days. You must pick up all the data at our office. If you need to buy logs you get the special membership price of $6.00 per log.

In these difficult times Cambe is making it cheaper to operate. Our $6.00 logs and $75.00 membership dues are the lowest prices available anywhere. Since 1933 Cambe has provided the industry quality data at a reasonable cost. Call Marianne Lamkin or Rita Cone at 687-1053.

Stock Market Loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost ground today amid some uneasiness over rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 14.49 to 1,795.55 by noontime on Wall Street.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 2 to 1 in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders were generally hopeful that the market was recovering from its sharp setback early this month. But they also said nothing much had happened to stir up any new wave of enthusiasm for stocks.

Interest rates rose in the credit markets this morning, sending prices of long-term government bonds down more than $5 for every $1,000 in face value.

Safeway Stores jumped 4¾ to 66⅝. The company agreed to be bought out by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. for $69 a share in cash and securities, countering Dart Group's $64-a-share proposal.

Hammermill Paper rose 1 to 54¾ on top of a 5⅝ gain Friday. A group led by investor Paul Bilzerian announced a $52-a-share tender offer for the company late Thursday.

Hammermill is said to be looking for another buyer.

The rise in interest rates prompted profit-taking in the electric utility sector, which hit record highs last week. Southern Co. slipped ⅛ to 25¾; American Electric Power ¼ to 29⅝, and Middle South Utilities ⅜ to 13.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .81 to 137.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .44 at 265.87.

Volume on the Big Board came to 66.37 million shares at noontime, against 55.07 million at the same point Friday.

Cotton

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were lower in midday dealings today.

The average price for strict low mid-dling 1 & 1-16 inch spot cotton was un-changed at 65.88 cents a pound Friday for the eight markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were 65 cents to $7.80 a bale lower than the previous close. Oct 31.50, Dec 32.52, Mar 33.40, May 33.80, Jul 34.88, Oct 35.70 and Dec 36.65.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Dividend checks from joint stocks should be endorsed by both parties

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband and I bought 10 different stocks, all registered in my name "and" his name "as joint tenants with right of survivorship." He passed away three years ago.

When I get dividend checks from these stocks, I deposit them in my bank account. Sometimes, I sign only my name on the checks. I also cash some and sign only my name.

Is it necessary to send all the certificates to the companies and have my husband's name removed? To me, "survivorship" means I own the stocks.

Doyle

A. You're very right about that last part. Those stocks now belong only to you. But you are handling everything else all wrong. Those stocks should be transferred into your name alone.

The dividend checks from jointly owned stocks are supposed to be endorsed by both owners. Sooner or later, someone at your bank or the banks issuing those checks is going to wake up to the fact that you have been endorsing them improperly.

You have to send each certificate to the transfer agent of the stock involved. You'll find the name and correct address of the transfer agent in the annual stockholder report each company sends you.

The assignment form on the back of the certificate should be filled out, with your signature there guaranteed by a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company.

You must also send a notarized affidavit of domicile, giving your husband's legal residence at the time of his death and a copy of his death certificate. In many states, an inheritance tax waiver is required. You can obtain these at your county courthouse.

If you're bewildered by the paperwork, ask your bank or a brokerage firm to handle things. For that service, you should expect to pay a fee, which can vary from bank to bank and brokerage to brokerage.

If you take it on as a do-it-yourself project, send the certificates and other papers by registered mail, return receipt requested.

After everything is squared away, the transfer agents will destroy the old certificates and issue new certificates in your name only.

• • •

Q. In registering stock, I recognize single ownership, which means one person receives the dividends and has the right to sell the stock. However, on the back of my stock certificates, I find other possible forms of ownership listed. These are "JT TEN," "TEN ENT" and "TEN COM." Can you explain what those letters mean?

A. They are abbreviations for the three forms of registration in which two or more people can own stocks and other property.

JT TEN stands for "joint tenants with right of survivorship." When one owner — a "tenant" — dies the surviving owners automatically own the property.

TEN ENT means "tenants by the entirety," a form of joint tenancy that can be used only by a husband and wife — no one else. Again, when one dies, the surviving spouse owns the property.

TEN COM is the abbreviation for "tenants in common," a form in which each tenant has a specified percentage of ownership, which might or might not be 50-50. When one owner dies, the surviving owners do not automatically own the property. Instead, the dead tenant's share of ownership becomes part of his or her estate.

• • •

Q. In the past, when I have sold stock, I have signed the certificate and sent it to the broker by registered mail, return receipt requested.

The brokerage firm with which I now deal advises that I should sign a "stock power" form and mail it and the unsigned stock certificate in separate envelopes via certified or registered mail. Is this a better method?

A. Yes. It adds a measure of safety. The signed stock power serves the same purpose as the assignment form on the back of the stock certificate. It authorizes the broker to sell the stock.

In the unlikely event the envelope with the unsigned certificate is stolen, the shares represented by that certificate will not be transferable and could not be sold.

New England's economy fared well in past year as others suffered woes

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — In the past year, New England has registered the highest per capita income, the greatest increase in sales and the lowest unemployment rate of any region of the United States.

The region's per capita personal income rose 6.6 percent to $15,387 in 1985 to exceed the national average by nearly $2,000. Its jobless rate fell to 4.7 percent, compared with a U.S. average of 7.3 percent.

Business boomed. From March 1985 to March 1986, the region's retail sales leaped 11.1 percent, more than triple the 3.5 percent gain for the United States as a whole.

This came in a region that a few decades ago was thought by many to be receding into the shadows of a glorious industrial past, to be replaced by newer areas with newer industries, newer plants and newer attitudes.

The sun shines on New England today, offering hope to depressed regions and reminding any observer of two fundamental observations about the American economy:

1. The U.S. economy is made up of many regional economies that may or may not have similar experiences at the same time, and whose separate experiences are hidden by bland national figures, which essentially are averages.

2. In an economy as vital, entrepreneurial and changing as that of the United States, regions can recover from depressing experiences that cause "experts" to write them off as economic forces. Unfortunately, the reverse also is also true.

• • •

A summary of regional economies by Ranji Bonnie Ohri of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce shows how vastly varied they are.

New England is relatively sound, due to high-technology, research, defense, services, manufacturing, securities and banking. Its old red brick factories now house electronics companies. It is a hothouse of new ventures.

The Middle Atlantic states of Delaware, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania are doing better than the national average. In some areeas, the spread of high-tech is offsetting weaknesses in the old smokestack industries.

The South Atlantic region — Washington D.C., Florida, Georgia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia — is generally faring well. Florida and Georgia are big gainers in jobs, sales and income growth.

The East North-Central states — Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio — already have made "Rust Belt" a misnomer. They are making a comeback, with Michigan, perhaps the worst affected by the recession, leading the way.

The East South-Central states of Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee are weakened, although with bright spots. At 9.4 percent, the region's jobless rate is one of the nation's highest. But it has attracted the automotive industry, and Nashville, Tenn., has become a hub of airline activity.

The West South-Central region — the oil patch of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas — is hurting. At 13 percent, Louisiana's jobless rate is the nation's highest. But high-tech in some sections may offset lost oil dollars.

The West North-Central region — Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota — also is hurting badly. Despite an increasingly diverse industrial base, farm problems remain depressing.

So vast is the Mountain region that it has trends within itself. Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah are experiencing rapid growth in services, high technology and fine manufacturing. Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, which depend heavily on mining, forest products and agriculture, are troubled.

The Pacific states of Alaska, California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington are banking on continued growth in electronic, aerospace and defense, although each of these industries has weaknesses too. Strongest are aerospace and defense.

• • •

The fortunes of regional economies shift, as demonstrated by New England's good times and the quick recovery of large areas of the Rust Belt. At the other extreme, some areas of the vaunted Sun Belt have hit bad times.

Change has been accelerated, partly by state and regional economic officials who recognize that their economies no longer can stand pat. Diversification is sought. High-tech sprouts beside farms and factories.

Moreover, states recognize that they are part not just of a regional and national economy, but of a global economy. Many now seek foreign plants and foreign trade. More than half the states have trade offices in Europe and Japan.

Teen expert: Committees should eagerly committ summer jobs, resources to teens

NEW YORK (AP) — Communities need to be more aggressive in committing their resources to teen-agers, including summer jobs and other programs and services that are sensitive to adolescents, says teen expert Lois Akner.

"Our ultimate challenge both to families and to society is to provide an environment that has structure, where teens feel safe and cared for, and one that also allows them the freedom to express themselves and to actualize their potential," she said.

Akner, director of Teen Services at the 92nd Street YM-YWHA here, is a specialist in the treatment of adolescents and their families. She is responsible for a number of community programs for teens including a Teen-Age Suicide Prevention Conference. She is on the board for Jobs for Youth, a community agency that deals with unemployment for minority youth.

Akner explains that adolescence is a transition — like crossing a bridge — and society and families must provide the siderails to that bridge so that teens don't fall off.

"The key is knowing when to rescue a teenager and knowing when to let them feel the consequences of what they do," she said.

"Going from adolescence to adulthood is not a direct path. It's full of new experiences and exposure to new ideas. Families have to expand their boundaries to allow for that: the independence one day, the babyishness the next. It may take several trips around the block to get where they're going, and we have to make their trip reasonably safe."

In her work Akner sometimes requires a written contract between the parents, the adolescent, and her organization. This contract lists certain unacceptable behaviors — such as those involving drugs, alcohol and cigarettes — and then spells out the consequences of such unacceptable behaviors, consequences that are strictly enforced.

Another key to helping adolescents approach adulthood is the availability of role models, other than parents, to give teens a sense of the possibilities of success, she pointed out.

"Who doesn't know about a teacher, a relative or a coach who hasn't turned a teen around?" she said.

Heavy rain answers Georgians' prayers

Associated Press

More than 3 inches of rain in Georgia was an answer to prayers for relief from a record drought, and a forecaster says a shift in weather patterns could ease the dry conditions that have cost farmers $1.9 billion.

Meanwhile, relief of another kind — 1,800 tons of hay for livestock in South Carolina — left Indiana on Sunday.

Columbus, Ga., which had not had rain in 47 days, was hit by a severe thunderstorm with winds exceeding 60 mph Sunday, the day Gov. Joe Frank Harris had set aside for prayers to end the drought.

The storm dumped nearly 2½ inches of rain on Columbus, knocked out electricity to more than 5,000 homes, and caused minor damage. At nearby Ellerslie, 3.4 inches of rain fell, said National Weather Service meteorologist Jim Helms. About 2 inches was recorded near downtown Greenville, S.C., on Sunday, and the same amount fell overnight in Macon, Ga.

Officials said the scattered thunderstorms of the past week across the Southeast had not ended the drought, but a high-pressure system known as the Bermuda High may be establishing itself in its normal position, near Bermuda instead of 500 miles west, over the southeastern United States. The shift could herald the beginning of better weather for the Southeast.

"It might just be setting itself up in the position where it normally should be," said Bob Drummond, a forecaster in North Carolina.

During the months it hovered over the Southeast, the high pressure system blocked the normal flow of warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico.

Forecaster Mike Sabones said scientists do not know how the shift will affect weather in the long term.

"It's still difficult to put a finger on what this is going to do in the next couple of days," he said. "We simply hope that it is going to become a trend."

In Georgia, Harris had issued a proclamation last week calling for residents to set aside time Sunday to "join together as a state in lifting up to God our prayers for rain, which will replenish our water supply and nourish our land."

The Columbia, S.C., Ministerial Association planned a 30-minute prayer service for today, and Bob Jones Jr., the chancellor of Bob Jones University in Greenville, urged listeners in a radio broadcast Sunday to pray for rain.

"It's the Lord who turns the rain on and off," Jones said Sunday. "Sometimes God has to do things like this (drought) to shake people up. It could be a reminder that God's on the throne."

Agricultural losses throughout the Southeast are estimated at up to $1.9 billion and the deaths of 48 people there and in the Midwest have been blamed on an accompanying heat wave, which continues to produce highs in the 90s after two weeks around 100.

Farmers elsewhere across the country, aided by corporate contributions, continued to respond to the plight of those in the Southeast.

In Indianapolis, volunteers finished loading about 1,800 tons of hay worth an estimated $145,000 Sunday on an 80-boxcar CSX Corp. train. The "Hoosier Hay Express" was headed for Columbia, S.C., today with donations from 128 farmers in 50 Indiana counties.

"This is what happens when people are victims of things they can't control. It brings people together," Indiana Lt. Gov. John Mutz said before the train pulled out.

Peggy Say says Syria 'making serious effort' to free hostages

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Peggy Say, sister of American hostage Terry Anderson, said today after a nine-day visit to Damascus she believes Syria is "making a serious effort" to free him and other Americans held by Moslem extremists in Lebanon.

"I want the U.S. government to stop tap-dancing around the word 'negotiate,'" Mrs. Say said in an interview. "I want them to get out there and do it, like they did for other American hostages."

Mrs. Say, 45, of Batavia, N.Y., went to Damascus, the Syrian capital, seeking help in her crusade to get the hostages freed.

She said when she arrived today at Larnaca airport, on her way back to New York: "I feel I made some impact in Syria. I met a lot of people and I feel I did all I could there. I just hope it bears fruit."

Mrs. Say said she was more optimistic her brother will be released by the Shiite Moslems who kidnapped him in Beirut on March 16, 1985.

Anderson, 38, is chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press.

Mrs. Say was in Damascus when kidnappers from the Islamic Jihad freed one of the hostages, the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 51, after 19 months.

She said she "was overjoyed that Father Jenco was released. I was so happy that at least one of them has gotten out."

"Yet at the same time there was a sadness because I know he was such a good friend to Terry in captivity and now Terry doesn't have him any more," she added.

Mrs. Say wore a "Free the Hostages" badge on her white shirt and a wrist bracelet engraved "Terry Anderson, March 16, 1985."

She said Jenco told her before he was flown to a U.S. military hospital in West Germany on Sunday that Anderson and two other hostages, Thomas Sutherland and David Jacobsen, are being held together at a hideout in Lebanon and are in "reasonably good shape."

Sutherland, 55, dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut, was kidnapped in Beirut on June 9, 1985. Jacobsen, 55, director of the university's hospital, was seized May 28, 1985.

Islamic Jihad said last October it killed another hostage, U.S. diplomat William Buckley, then 57, but no body has been found. Islamic Jihad is believed to have links with Iran.

Jenco was held with the other hostages for about a year before he was freed. Islamic Jihad said it released Jenco as a "last gesture" and warned of "grave consequences" if its demands were not met.

The kidnappers demand freedom for 17 comrades imprisoned in Kuwait for 1983 bombings. Kuwait refuses, and Washington has said it will not negotiate with kidnappers.

"I hope this isn't going to be like Ben Weir's release last September, a long time before anything happens," Mrs. Say said.

The Rev. Benjamin Weir, another hostage, was released Sept. 16 to convey the kidnappers' demands to Washington.

Mrs. Say said Jenco told her Anderson still does not know his father and a brother died of cancer this year.

In Damascus, Mrs. Say met Syrian government leaders, Lebanese politicians and Palestinian representatives.

NATION IN BRIEF

Postal inspectors probe firm

CLEVELAND (AP) — Postal inspectors have interviewed management of a suburban company within the past month as part of a probe of how the Postal Service has dealt with equipment contracts, according to a published report.

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer reported Sunday that the scheme that allegedly involved the Readak Corp. of Woodmere had as its key players figures already implicated in a kickback scheme to steer a multimillion-dollar Postal Service equipment contract to a Texas company.

The newspaper said among the figures offering to help Readak win a $25 million contract was John R. Gnau Jr., chairman of President Reagan's 1976 campaign for president in Michigan.

The newspaper said Gnau bragged of high-level connections in Washington when he offered in June 1984 to make Readak a contender for dozens of lucrative federal contracts in exchange for 15 percent of its stock plus 3 percent of its sales.

Readak had been disqualified from bidding by the Postal Service in 1983 because it was too small and inexperienced, the paper said.

Saltwater fish moving upstream

DARIEN, Ga. (AP) — Anglers are catching sharks and other saltwater fish in the Altamaha River, more the 20 miles from the Atlantic Ocean, because drought has weakened the river's current and increased its salinity.

"They are catching blue crabs up here this summer," said Donald Yawn, who manages a fishing store at Altamaha Park, 28 miles upriver from the ocean. "The freshwater fish aren't biting, and business is down because of it."

Fishermen also are hauling in small sand sharks, saltwater catfish and stingrays as far upriver as Lewis Creek, an Altamaha tributary 22 miles from the Atlantic and 10 miles west of U.S. 17, the coastal highway, said Ralph "Chip" Croft, who manages the Two-Way Fish Camp on the South Altamaha.

"Normally, there are no sharks caught west of Highway 17," he said. "There's more salinity farther upriver this year than most people can ever remember."

Falwell: Tutu should return prize

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa should return his Nobel Peace Prize for telling the West to go to hell.

Falwell, founder of the Moral Majority, also told his Thomas Road Baptist Church congregation Sunday he is reconsidering the apology he issued last year for calling Tutu a phony.

Tutu condemned the West last week after President Reagan outlined a South African policy that called for Congress and U.S. allies to resist cries for economic sanctions against South Africa.

"I think the West, for my part, can go to hell," Tutu said.

Falwell told his congregation that Tutu should return the peace prize and apologize to Reagan and the West.

"It is tragic when this man of God and Nobel Peace Prize winner would wish people to suffer in hell," said Falwell.

"One year ago, when I said that Bishop Tutu was a phony if he purported to speak for a majority of non-whites of South Africa, there was a clamor from the media for an apology from me. I extended that apology in a two-page clarification telegram to the bishop.

"If the bishop does not now apologize, then perhaps I should recall mine. Perhaps I wasn't wrong," Falwell said.

Nicaraguan head condemns administration

NEW YORK (NYT) — President Daniel Ortega Saavedra of Nicaragua, taking his case against the United States to a Brooklyn church, condemned the Reagan administration Sunday for choosing to ignore a ruling of the International Court of Justice against American support for anti-Sandinista rebels.

Speaking through a translator at the Park Slope Methodist Church, Ortega asked a standing-room only audience whether "the American people are going to accept that their own president violates the law."

"International public opinion does have a role up to a point, but what Mr. Reagan must take into account is the opinion of American people themselves," Ortega said, whose remarks met with a thunderous ovation and shouts of "Viva Nicaragua libre!"

Ortega, who will speak before the United Nations Security Council on Tuesday when it considers the World Court ruling, criticized American unwillingness to take part in the court's proceedings.

"If Mr. Reagan is so sure he had peace and justice on his side, why is he so afraid of going to court?" he asked.

The court's ruling came on June 27 after 26 months of litigation.

Before formally withdrawing from the case, the United States argued that its actions against Nicaragua were "collective self-defense" against Nicaraguan support of leftist guerrillas in El Salvador and elsewhere.

Dressed in a tan suit and surrounded by Secret Service agents and Nicaraguan security men, Ortega devoted much of his speech to defending Nicaragua's crackdown on opponents of the Sandinista government, including the shutdown of the newspaper La Prensa and the expulsion of Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega.

R$_x$ for Flu or Chicken Pox: Kindness

Be good to yourself when you've got the flu or chicken pox. Take it easy. Get plenty of rest.

Viral illnesses such as these are usually self-limiting. Time will cure them.

Check with your doctor about using medications to treat flu or chicken pox. For children — including teenagers — medications such as aspirin and aspirin-containing products may not be a good idea. A rare but dangerous condition called Reye syndrome may develop in young people just when they appear to be recovering. Studies suggest a link between the development of Reye and the use of aspirin to treat the flu or chicken pox.

So, treat yourself right when you've got the flu.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

HOT WEATHER TIPS FOR YOUR FAMILY CAR

July and August can be unhappy months for many cars & their owners. There are a few simple things you can do to prevent your car from overheating.

Here are some hot weather tips that can help...

1) Be sure your radiator is checked and contains the proper coolant. Don't just add water...pure water boils at a lower temperature than water mixed with anti-freeze (ethylene glycol). If you top off the radiator, be sure to use a 50/50 mix of water and anti-freeze to keep that boiling point as high as possible and carry a gallon or two in the trunk (just in case).

2) Blast bugs off the radiator with a garden hose (a stiff stream of water). Clean them out with a stiff bristled brush. Proper air flow for your radiator not only keeps your engine cool but also cools the transmission oil.

3) Be sure the transmission oil is at the proper level. If it's a brown color and smells burnt, change it. Have the bands in your automatic transmission adjusted before you go on any long trips. The weight of a trailer could be just enough to cause the bands to slip and leave you stranded on your vacation.

4) Inspect fan belts to check if they are glazed or cracked. If a belt breaks or slips badly on a hot day, your coolant won't circulate properly and you are sure to overheat. Your battery and air conditioner will suffer too. While you're at it, inspect the hoses. Are they cracked or mushy? If you have any doubt, replace the belts and hose before you start. They always fail at the worst possible times, so replace them before the trouble starts!

5) turn off air conditioning if the engine is overheating. Air conditioning puts a big load on your cooling system.

6) Be careful! Wait until the engine cools to take the radiator cap off. The radiator is full of super heated water under pressure which can explode in you face if you try to take the cap off too soon.

7) Change your oil regularly. You should start thinking about oil changes every 3,000 miles no matter what your car manual says. As engine oil gets dirty, it losses lubricating power; high friction means a hot engine. Change your oil before you go on a long trip...it's cheap insurance for your engine. Always use a high quality oil (in the summertime, the higher viscosity grades are better). Change the filter too. It contains a quart of filthy oil (no sense in mixing that in with new clean oil).

8) Use an oil additive such as Tufoil* at each oil change. Tufoil is a friction modifier that makes all engines run cooler. It helps your engine start easier when it's hot and has been shut off after a long drive. Engine parts expand and pinch together when they are overheated. Tufoil's super low friction helps get things moving with less strain on the battery and less wear and tear on the starting motor.

*Tufoil is available at participating K-Mart and True Value stores.
