MC could lose tax revenue

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland College can expect to lose as much as $400,000 in local tax revenue in 1987 if property values decline this year by an anticipated 12 percent.

Roland Wilkinson, chief appraiser with the Midland Central Appraisal District, told MC trustees during a regular meeting on Tuesday that he expects the appraised value of Midland County property to drop by 12 percent overall in 1986. Mineral values — which constitute about 16 percent of the county valuation — are expected to decline by 20 percent overall.

Wilkinson said the decline could result in a loss to Midland College of about $360,000 to $400,000 in local revenues.

Trustees, who will begin work on the 1986-87 fiscal budget next month, already are searching for ways to cut spending in the wake of an estimated $1.3 billion shortfall in state revenues. The cost saving measures include implementing salary, promotion and hiring freezes, travel restrictions and fewer program offerings.

MC president Dr. Jess Parrish said the Texas Public Junior College Association will recommend a six percent cut in state appropriations during the 1988-89 fiscal years. However, he predicted that the state will cut appropriations by seven to nine percent.

The Legislature appropriated about $10 million to the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees for the 1986 and 1987 fiscal years based on its enrollment. However, those funds can be used only for instructional programs and instruction-related services.

Free gasoline offered to unemployed

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The Bright Side

Five thousand gallons of free gasoline worth about $4,500 will be given away to the unemployed in Midland/Odessa beginning at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Dunkles Chevron at Wadley and Garfield in Midland and E.E. Hensley & Son Gulf Station at 912 W. County Road in Odessa will give away 2,500 gallons of gas each. The event is sponsored by the gas stations, Chevron/Gulf and KUFO radio.

The gas give-away idea sprang up after an unemployed man at the Midland pep rally told one organizer that he had missed a job interview because he didn't have money for gas.

"It just clicked in my mind. We've got unemployed people in town and here's a guy who can't get to an interview because he has no gas," said one gas give-away organizer, Charles Campbell, vice president of KUFO radio.

Between 500 to 600 people are expected to fill their tanks on Thursday. The unemployed will be allowed a 10-gallon limit or a full tank.

People filling up with gas will not have to prove they are unemployed, because organizers are expecting most people to be honest, Campbell said.

"There are, I'm sure a few people who will try to jump in and get a free tank of gasoline. However, it's so low, it's something we're not concerned about. We're relying on the honesty of the people of Midland and Odessa."

However, names and addresses of people receiving gas will be recorded to form an employment clearing house list. Organizers will attempt to match up the names with potential employers.

Mayor Thane Atkins, along with members of the Midland Angels baseball team and the presidents of both city's Chamber of Commerces will be among the local celebrities pumping gas.

Rainbo Baking Co. will be giving away loaves of bread at the gas stations and milk and beverages may also be passed out, Campbell said.

Reagan asks repeal of windfall tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, coming to the aid of America's beleaguered oil industry, is campaigning for repeal of the windfall profits tax that was imposed in the days of skyrocketing prices and gasoline shortages.

Now, with the oil industry reeling from a worldwide production glut and collapsing prices, the windfall profits tax produces virtually no revenue for the Treasury but is a source of irritation for petroleum producers.

Repeal of the tax would be welcome news in energy-producing states, particularly in Texas, which accounts for about one-third of the U.S. production and is a key battleground in presidential races.

Reagan's decision to work for repeal of the tax and to win deregulation of the natural gas industry was announced Tuesday following meetings with oil state congressmen and governors.

Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., said the windfall profits tax — which would kick in again if oil prices increase — "fundamentally discourages people from taking risks that go with exploration for oil and gas.

■ Texans appear pleased by effort — 4A

"Now, while the price is down (it's) a good opportunity for us to clear away some of the underbrush that would otherwise serve as a disincentive to the kind of investment we're going to have to have," Cheney added.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, said the tax, while producing no revenue, "places a very large administrative burden on the industry, a cost which could be used to develop and find more energy."

As a candidate in 1980, Reagan had opposed the windfall profits tax, but as president he had not worked for its repeal.

Announcing Reagan's decision, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "While the president remains concerned about our energy security, he reaffirmed his belief that lower energy prices are of great overall benefit to the American economy."

Democratic Govs. George Nigh of Oklahoma and Ed Herschler of Wyoming said Reagan had agreed with all but one of the proposals that had been formulated by oil-state governors at an "energy summit" in Dallas last week. The president did not support their call for a temporary, variable fee on imported oil.

Unemployment climbs to record 8.3 percent

By ALLEN HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Unemployment in Midland reached a record high of 8.3 percent in March, a one-half percent increase over February's 7.8 percent jobless rate, according to Bob Burke, office manager for the Texas Employment Commission (TEC) in Midland. The 8.3 percent level is the highest since the TEC adopted its current reporting methodology in 1974.

Double-digit unemployment has arrived in the Permian Basin, as the jobless rate in Odessa climbed to 10.4 percent during March, up from 9.2 percent the preceding month and 6.5 percent a year ago. Employment in Odessa totaled 53,700 out of a civilian work force of 59,900, leaving 6,200 unemployed. Since last year, the labor force in Odessa has shrunk by 3,000 workers.

Although Midland's total employment grew by 100 during the month, to 47,200, 400 new job seekers entered the labor force, pushing the jobless count from 4,000 to 4,300 — 8.3 percent of the 51,500 total civilian labor force in the city. A year ago the unemployment rate stood at 5.7 percent, with only 3,100 of 54,300 workers unable to find employment.

Burke attributes growth in the labor force during March to additional members of existing households entering the job market as primary wage earners are laid off, in addition to a slight seasonal increase in the work force.

"It seems that the continuing erosion of employment is due almost solely to the low price of oil. As long as crude prices remain low, we will continue to see historically high levels of unemployment," Burke said.

Burke added that new unemployment claims, which have jumped dramatically since the first of the year, seem to be leveling off.

Classroom Crisis?

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a five-part series on changes taking place in Texas public schools and how they are affecting teachers, administrators, students and the educational process.

AUSTIN — It was Wednesday, June 27, 1984. Ten men had worked very late the night before preparing the final report. Twenty-three brutal days of work had ended. Compromise had arrived.

And then, the Texas State Teachers Association bailed out. TSTA President Becky Brooks' words still ring in the ears of state leaders who felt betrayed.

"Even a dog knows the difference between being stumbled over and being kicked," Brooks said. "As House Bill 72 stands in its final form, Texas teachers are being kicked and the Texas State Teachers Association cannot support it."

"The treatment of teachers and other school employees by this bill — in terms of salary, in terms of involvement in decision-making, and in terms of personal and professional dignity — is so damaging that TSTA, in good conscience and as a responsible representative of teachers and school employees, cannot lend our support to it even though it contains a number of reforms that we do support."

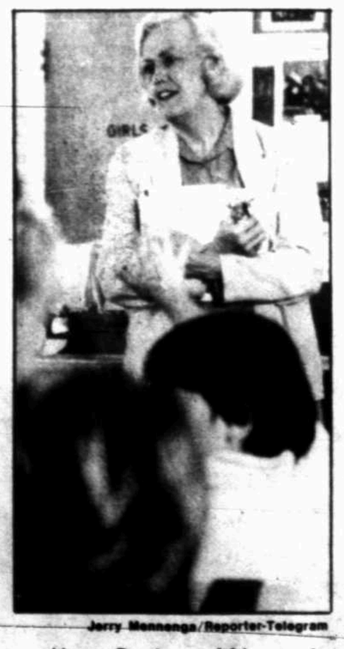

With that message, the TSTA jumped off the education reform boxcar and onto the tracks before the onrushing train. The Association of Texas Professional Educators and the Texas Classroom Teachers Association joined the exodus.

And the train — with more than enough accumulated momentum to do without the teachers — rolled right over them. John Cole, president of the rival Texas Federation of Teachers, waived from the caboose.

Nearly two years have passed since that day, and the ostracized leaders of TSTA, TCTA and ATPE have found their groups more and more at odds with Gov. Mark White and the HB 72 reforms. Cole and his AFL-CIO-affiliated TFT have taken on the role of defender, both of White and the reforms.

The TSTA made the most headlines by suing the state over the TECAT, the reading-and-writing skills test all certified teachers and administrators had to pass to keep their jobs. TSTA lawyers argued that the state had no right to take away teachers' lifetime certificates with a test. An Austin district judge ruled against the group, and the test went on as planned March 10. An appeal is pending.

After 20 years, Mary Davis is packing up her chalk and slides and lesson plans. She won't be back. At least not in Texas.

A fifth-grade social studies teacher at Sam Houston Elementary School here, Ms. Davis sealed her fate March 10 when she didn't come to school. No, her principal didn't can her for absenteeism. Mary Davis just didn't take THE test.

Most of her colleagues, her principal, her superintendent, trooped to school that day while the children stayed home and played. The teachers and administrators took the TECAT — the reading-and-writing exam they must pass to keep their jobs.

New South African residence rules would end hated pass laws

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government today pledged to abolish restrictions on freedom of movement based on race, and said South Africans instead would be required to have an approved residence if they wish to move to an urban area.

The new policy, once it is approved in Parliament, will mean an end to the hated pass laws which for decades barred blacks without permits from living and working in white areas. Parliament is dominated by the governing National Party.

Enforcement of the pass laws was halted today in conjunction with the release of the government's statement of its new policy. The government also said it would release all prisoners detained for pass law violations.

Unofficial estimates of the number of prisoners ranged from several hundred to more than 3,000.

A government statement described the pass laws as "a relic of the past," and said the they would be replaced by planned urbanization. It said "fundamental rights should be protected and ... discrimination on the grounds of race or color is not acceptable."

However, the new policy will continue to bar integration of residential neighborhoods, and makes no specific mention of any plans to give blacks voting rights.

When they announced the impending moratorium on pass-law enforcement last week, officials hailed it as proof that the government is moving to end apartheid, the official policy of racial segregation under which 5 million whites dominated 24 million voteless blacks.

Many black leaders say ending the pass laws is "too little, too late," and that they will accept nothing less than a full share of political power. Opponents of apartheid had long demanded repeal of the pass laws.

The anti-apartheid United Democratic Front said the initiative amounted only to "political posturing" unless it was followed by moves to give blacks political power.

The government said has accepted the principle of freedom of movement, but would require that people moving to urban areas obtain approved accommodations or living sites.

That could be a major obstacle for blacks seeking to move to urban centers, since there is a shortage of urban land available to blacks and a long list of applicants seeking to live black urban townships. Some blacks trying to move to Soweto, Johannesburg's largest black township, have been on a waiting list for nine years.

The government statement said the requirement of approved housing "conformed to the civilized norm that people could be permitted to settle indiscriminantly."

It said approved housing would encompass hostels, hotels, apartments and "informal housing," suggesting that even improvised shacks would be permitted if they were built on a site authorized by the government.

The government accepts the fact that blacks are permanent residents of South Africa and would no longer pursue the goal of moving them to 10 self-governing tribal homelands, it said.

However, it said the 6 million blacks in the four homelands that have been granted independence by Pretoria but are not recognized by other countries would be considered foreign citizens pending negotiations on possible dual citizenship.

The statement made clear that the government would continue enforcing prohibitions on illegal squatter settlements, saying that these laws would simply be revised to apply to all races.

Another component of the government initiative is the planned introduction of a uniform identity document for all South Africans, regardless of race. President P.W. Botha, in announcing the impending pass-law moratorium, urged blacks to keep their pass books to serve as a temporary identity document until new ones are issued later this year.

The number of pass-law arrests was 132,000 last year, down from 262,000 in 1983. Most convicted offenders served only a few weeks in prison.

Although some form of pass laws have been on the statute books for almost a century, two laws adopted in 1952 formed the backbone of influx control, the policy that restricts blacks without permits.

Ireland's Protestant leaders look at power-sharing deal

By MARCUS ELIASON

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant leaders recognize they are getting nowhere with their campaign against the Anglo-Irish agreement on Northern Ireland.

They have come around to a belief that the only way to get rid of the pact is some form of power-sharing deal with the Roman Catholic minority.

The Protestant leaders remain implacably opposed to the agreement signed Nov. 15 by Britain and the Republic of Ireland because they still see it as selling out their centuries-old bond with Britain and opening the door to making them a part of the southern republic.

But they also have seen their calls for civil disobedience degenerate into ugly street violence, dangerously alienating British public opinion while barely denting Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's resolve to see the agreement through.

Many Protestant leaders say they now realize that power-sharing with the Catholic minority is inevitable. They don't agree on how far-reaching it should be, but they accept it as the price if it eliminates the consultative role Dublin now has in Northern Ireland, as the agreement provides.

"The painful truth is that Mrs. Thatcher has not bought the unionist (Protestant) diagnosis of the problem and will not prescribe a purely unionist panacea," says Frank Millar, secretary-general of the Official Unionist Party, the largest Protestant faction.

Protestants, he says, "must face the fact that Mrs. Thatcher will only be persuaded to set the Anglo-Irish agreement aside if we can come up with a better alternative agreement."

One noticeable change is that leading Protestants no longer insist on scrapping the agreement altogether, but talk of suspending it while Protestant and Catholic leaders negotiate a separate accord.

British officials here say Protestant leaders all recognize that the agreement has broken the mold of Northern Ireland politics, and that even if they succeed in bringing down the agreement, the days are gone when Protestants, with their 3-2 majority over Catholics, could run the province as they saw fit.

Even hard-liner Peter Robinson, deputy leader of the Democratic Unionist Party and one of the most influential Protestant politicians, says he accepts that Mrs. Thatcher is not about to scrap the agreement.

Instead, he said, she should "put it on ice, freeze it, non-implementation — whatever she wants to do, as long as it is a mechanism whereby the Anglo-Irish agreement will not be in operation during the period that discussions between the parties are taking place."

Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald's fragile coalition in the Irish republic, however, would be hard put to water down the accord, having risked its prestige against opposition claims that the pact sells out the dream of uniting Ireland.

Whatever response the Protestants get to their distress signals, there is no doubting their misgivings over the firebombing of Catholic homes and churches and the attacks on policemen and their families.

Andy Tyrie, chairman of the Protestant paramilitary Ulster Defense Association which has come under suspicion, calls the violence "absolutely wrong," although he tries to explain it by saying, "There are people here who feel they are fighting for their lives."

President sees no evidence Waldheim knew of deportations

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Documents indicate that former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim must have known about German reprisals against Yugoslav civilians during World War II, the Austrian president said in a rare televised address.

But Rudolf Kirchschlaeger, who examined documents from the World Jewish Congress and the U.N. War Crimes Commission, said late Tuesday that he saw no evidence Waldheim knew that Jews were being deported to concentration camps from the Balkans, where Waldheim served as a German army officer.

Kirchschlaeger said that because Yugoslavia never took legal action against Waldheim, "If I were transferred to the function of a prosecutor, on the basis of the evidence presented to me.... I would not dare to file an indictment."

Kirchschlaeger said World Jewish Congress papers placed Waldheim as an adjutant officer in a position to know of troop movements and other details of the military situation in the Balkans after Dec. 1, 1943.

"The knowledge of revenge measures in the partisan war, known as 'measures of retaliation' by the German authorities, must be accepted as a given fact," Kirchschlaeger said.

He added the U.N. documents included a report that Waldheim "as a counterintelligence officer of the...General Staff of Army Group E, in the period from April 1944 to May 1945, was involved in revenge measures of the German army against the Yugoslav population."

Waldheim said he served in Army Group E, but was an adjutant and translator who had no part in the atrocities.

"Finally, though — and this seems to me decisive — the Federal Socialist Republic of Yugoslavia, as plaintiff at the time, apparently took no steps toward an actual prosecution" of Waldheim, Kirchschlaeger said.

Waldheim is the leading candidate for the mainly ceremonial post of president in a May 4 election. Kirchschlaeger's address marked the first time a post-war president has spoken nationwide during an election campaign. Kirchschlaeger is not seeking re-election.

In a television interview from Salzburg after Kirchschlaeger's 26-minute address, Waldheim said, "There is no sort of evidence submitted that in any way would confirm my guilt. Quite the contrary, the whole thing has collapsed, and I am glad that with it things are finally cleared up."

He described Kirchschlaeger's presentation as "very objective, very correct."

There has been no indication why the allegations of Waldheim's involvement in war crimes was not followed up by Yugoslavia, especially when Waldheim was a candidate for the U.N. post in the early 1970s. He served as secretary-general from 1972-1981.

Simon Wiesenthal, head of Vienna's Jewish Documentation Center, told The Associated Press that Yugoslavia should be asked why it did not pursue the matter.

"You can't brand someone as a war criminal 40 years ago and then deposit the papers at the U.N. for 40 years and do nothing...." Wiesenthal said. "I still believe that Waldheim, due to his position, knew about everything, even, although the president didn't say it, about the deportations of Jews."

Waldheim has denied allegations he was involved in war crimes between 1942 and 1945.

Waldheim's supporters claim the New York-based World Jewish Congress launched the campaign against him because of the position he took on some Israeli-Palestinian issues while serving as U.N. chief.

Kirchschlaeger said the World Jewish Congress had presented two German army documents dealing with internment or deportation of Jews from the area of Waldheim's army post near Salonika, Greece.

"In both cases, a connection with ... Dr. Waldheim on the basis of the presented documents could not be established, since for this period there are no documents about Dr. Waldheim's service activity," Kirchschlaeger said.

Austria's presidential candidates may be supported by political parties, but once in office they are bound by the constitution to be nonpartisan.

Yugoslavian killings still affect living

By LARRY GERBER

JASENOVAC, Yugoslavia (AP) — For many, the killing that raged across Yugoslavia during World War II was merely a sideshow to the great campaigns in the Pacific, Russia and western Europe.

But it still affects the lives of thousands, from a former United Nations secretary general to an old man on trial for his life.

Official documents say 1.7 million Yugoslavs, 10 percent of the population at the time, were killed after the German invasion on April 6, 1941. Many Yugoslavs fought Germans, Italians and each other until victory by the partisans under Josip Broz Tito, the communist leader.

Former U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, running for Austrian president in a May 4 election, has acknowledged serving in a German unit that carried out a merciless campaign against the partisans.

He has denied any wrongdoing, but Austria's election campaign has turned into a bitter debate about his role.

Many victims did not die fighting, but in retaliation massacres or concentration camps.

This quiet Croatian village was home to the country's biggest concentration camp, where, according to official estimates, 700,000 Serbs, Jews, Gypsies and political opponents were slaughtered by Croatian fascists known as the Ustashas.

The technology of death was not as advanced here as in the larger German-run camps of northern Europe. People were killed by axes, knives, spikes, hammers, starvation and drowning in the nearby Sava River.

Corpses, bound together by wires, floated downstream more than 150 miles to Belgrade, where the Sava joins the Danube.

Little remains of the camp complex today. A hardwood forest across the river is dotted with 160 acres of mass graves holding an estmated 300,000 bodies.

A huge flower-shaped monument and a small museum mark the site of the main camp, which was razed by the Ustashas to destroy evidence of it at the end of the war.

As interior minister of the Nazi puppet state of Croatia, Andrija Artukovic was nominal head of the police and camps.

He was extradited in February from the United States at age 86 and is on trial for war crimes in the Croatian capital of Zagreb. He faces the death penalty if convicted.

The government accuses him of taking part in four specific massacres of civilians and captured prisoners, but the indictment also says that he ordered people sent here and to other camps, and ordered the deaths of thousands.

Artukovic denies any knowledge of what went on in the camps. But the government has published documents and quoted eyewitness accounts which, if true, leave no doubt of his involvement.

Much of Croatia's Roman Catholic hierarchy supported the Ustashas, and museum visitors here see photographs of priests taking part in mass forced conversions of Orthodox Serbs and Moslems.

That involvement poisoned relations between Yugoslavia and the church, and although the officially atheist government now has diplomatic relations with the Holy See, priests are sometimes detained or jailed for preaching Croatian nationalism.

The 4.5 million Croatians, whose republic includes practically all of the Adriatic coast and much of north-central Yugoslavia, are overwhelmingly Catholic.

There are fears that Artukovic's trial could stir up the old ethnic hatreds between Croats and Serbs. Economic problems have already strained relations between the six Yugoslav republics, with richer ones such as Croatia reluctant to spread the wealth among their poorer partners in Serbia and elsewhere.

"It seems to me that the trial will warm up some passions that have already reached an unpleasant state," defense attorney Srdjan Popovic, a Serb, has said.

The World Jewish Congress and newspapers in Zagreb and Belgrade have published documents purporting to show that Waldheim was decorated by the Ustasha government and was active in anti-partisan operations.

Waldheim has acknowledged serving as a lieutenant in German Army Group E, commanded by Gen. Alexander Loehr, who was executed in 1947 for war crimes.

Waldheim has repeatedly said he did not know of deportations of Jews from Greece, where his unit also served. He has never been accused of involvement in concentration camps.

Foreign journalists expected to leave Libya

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The information minister said today that all 250 foreign journalists who arrived after the U.S. bombing raids had completed their mission and were expected to leave Libya by week's end.

The minister, Mohammed Sharafeddin, told reporters in the Al Kabir Hotel, the headquarters for the foreign media, that they were not being expelled. But he said the government needed their hotel rooms and they would not be taken on any more escorted tours.

The journalists have been largely prevented from leaving the hotel unescorted.

"Your mission is over," Sharafeddin said.

Earlier today, Libyan officials said journalists representing media in the United States and the 12 Common Market nations should pack their bags immediately and board buses for the airport.

The move appeared to be in response to West European sanctions against Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, including Britain's decision to expel 21 Libyan students.

The officials originally said East bloc, Canadian and Japanese journalists could stay, as well as reporters from Sweden, Norway, Finland, Switzerland and Austria, which are not members of the Common Market.

However, the new order appeared to apply to all foreign journalists.

Libyan officials said Tuesday that the foreign correspondents had taken all the tours the government had authorized.

After receiving the initial order to leave, the lobby of the Al Kabir Hotel was jammed with journalists trying to pay their bills, having to pay cash because the hotel does not accept credit cards.

A busload of 60 to 70 reporters, photographers and television crews was driven to the airport and another was ready to go at mid-afternoon. But at least one American reporter who paid his hotel bill later reversed course and checked back in without being stopped by officials.

Twenty reporters later arrived in Rome after the flight from Libya.

By late afternoon, dozens of reporters remained at the hotel, confused about their status.

On Monday, the Common Market imposed diplomatic sanctions on Libya for its alleged involvement in international terrorism, the same reason given by the United States for its April 15 bombing raid on Libya.

The sanctions include reduction of staffs at Libyan embassies, restrictions on movements of remaining Libyan diplomats, tightening of visa reqirements for Libyans and the banning of any Libyan expelled by one country from entering another.

At a news conference Tuesday in Tripoli, Sharafeddin accused the United States of having pressured the Europeans into adopting the sanctions.

Meanwhile, Libyan radio said Tuesday night that vessels of the Soviet navy are visiting Libyan ports, in what is the first military display of Soviet support for the North African country since the U.S. air strikes.

Libyan television also showed film late Tuesday of what it said was wreckage of an aircraft shot down by Libyan air defenses, apparently in the U.S. air raid.

But there was no way to determine from the film whether the three pieces of gray metal with red paint were from an aircraft, and if so, from which country. The report said the wreckage was found near Sidi Zayd, about 80 miles west of Tripoli.

U.S. officials say one F-111 fighter-bomber was lost in the raid.

A Soviet naval ship appeared in Tripoli harbor Tuesday. The vessel appeared to be a frigate, bristling with radar and communications antennas and anti-aircraft guns.

Reporters confined to the Al Kabir Hotel about a quarter-mile from the harbor could not see its name, but it clearly was flying the Soviet flag.

The Soviet vessel would have had to pass through surveillance by the U.S. 6th Fleet, which is believed to be keeping watch on Libya from the Mediterranean.

After the U.S. raid, Moscow said it reserved the right to maintain military links with Libya, and the Soviet ambassador was said to have met repeatedly with Khadafy.

Khadafy may be sharing Libyan power with officers

By KEVIN COSTELLOE

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Western diplomats say the strength of Col. Moammar Khadafy's grip on the government is uncertain following U.S. air strikes last week, but a published report said today that Khadafy apparently has been forced to share power with other military officers.

Libyan officials assert Khadafy is in full control. Western diplomats in Tripoli say they don't know whether the April 15 U.S. air strike hurt Khadafy's hold on power, and that even Libya's Arab neighbors probably don't have a clear idea.

One Western diplomat in Tripoli, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, said it is possible Khadafy reasserted his control following the attack, or that there has been a major shift of power.

"One thing is sure — the last chapter hasn't been written," the diplomat told The Associated Press. "This is a time of great uncertainty."

The London Times reported today that Libya appears now to be ruled by a junta that includes Khadafy and four other military officers.

"A five-man junta of military officers appears to be governing Libya in the aftermath of the American air raid — a collective leadership which includes Col. Khadafy as the nation's nominal leader but which has divested him of his exclusive control over the country," it said.

The report by Robert Fisk from Tripoli said, "Col. Khadafy now performs the tasks of a figurehead rather than the sole political and military leader."

The Times said the four other members of the reported junta were Khadafy's deputy staff major, Abdul-Salam Jalloud; Commandant Hweldi al-Hamedi, the deputy chief-of-staff; the commander-in-chief of the army, Abu Boke, and the inspector general of the army, Mustafa Karroubi.

Jalloud, and not Khadafy, gave the first official high-level news conference following the U.S. bombing raid. Jalloud has been the No.2 man in Libya's government.

The mystery has been compounded by reports from Washington and by exile groups that there is internal unrest in Libya and that Khadafy may have fled the country briefly after the U.S. attack.

U.S. warplanes dropped bombs on targets in Tripoli and Benghazi during last week's air raid. President Reagan claimed the two cities were the sites of installations for the training of terrorists.

London's Daily Telegraph newspaper on Tuesday quoted exiles and intelligence sources as saying Libya's head of internal security, Omar Latif, was fired 48 hours after the raids because he failed to take control in the absence of Khadafy.

The conservative daily also said there are persistent reports Khadafy flew to Marxist-governed South Yemen after the raid to get Soviet backing for his regime and returned 24 hours later. But the paper said he has not returned to his damaged home at Tripoli's Bab al-Aziyah barracks.

RETIRE

Mary Davis didn't. She's retiring at the end of the year. Thanks, in no small part, to the test.

"I would be compromising my values," she says with anger. "I have two degrees, three degrees, and I just feel like that was an insult to my intelligence."

Ms. Davis isn't alone. A physical education teacher at an elementary school in Laredo says she's not certain what she'll do next fall.

"In April, I'm going to decide whether to sign my contract or be something else," she says. "I'm very disappointed. I wish this year were over. The pressure, the tension. The pay's not that great."

Robbie Reed Hogan spent 18 years teaching junior high science in Denver City. She resigned "as an active member of a proud group of people" after the 1984-85 school year.

"The confusion was more than I was willing to handle," Ms. Hogan says. "I found my dedication was slipping with the implementation of House Bill 72. No one should go to work after having a good cry in the car because she doesn't know what to expect from day to day."

Bonnie Burrow, a seventh- and eighth-grade English teacher in Warren, is resisting the temptation.

"If it weren't for the overwhelming fact that I love working with kids, I would kiss this crazy, mixed-up job goodbye," she says. "Right now the children are the only things that are making sense in our school system."

The Teacher Retirement System of Texas expects a record 7,000 of its members to retire this year. After staying relatively stable through 1983, the retirement numbers have increased steadily for the last three years. The retirees comprise an ever-growing percentage of the system's membership.

Those members include public school and college teachers, administrators and support personnel. Randy Mercer, director of member benefits, says the system has no way of determining which of the retirees are classroom teachers. He also does not know why they're ending their careers, whether they've simply reached retirement age, are just fed up with the massive changes or have rejected the insult of a test.

Ms. Davis has already taken and passed the National Teachers' Exam, the Graduate Record Exam and numerous college tests. "I will not take a test to teach in Texas," she adds emphatically.

Spurred by the "Johnny Can't Read" reports, Ms. Davis began work on her masters of education degree 20 years ago. Sitting in her very first class, Davis asked, "Why."

"Why can't Johnny read?" Her instructor and classmates — mostly veteran teachers working towards and advanced degree — chided Ms. Davis for her concern. She learned to keep her feelings in. She kept a journal of her thoughts.

Recently Ms. Davis returned to that journal. "What my comments were 20 years ago and what my concerns are today — they're the same," she says.

The ideal teacher, in Ms. Davis' eyes, would hold a liberal arts degree from college and learn about education from master teachers working in the classroom across the hall. "Forget about the Mickey Mouse education courses," she says.

But education policymakers — school boards, the Legislature, Gov. Mark White — haven't listened to Mary Davis. They didn't during the "Johnny Can't Read" crisis, and they didn't during the 'Nation at Risk' crisis."

And that's really why fifth-graders at Sam Houston Elementary School won't learn social studies from Mary Davis next year.

"I've never had to teach, I don't have to teach," Ms. Davis says. "I've enjoyed teaching up until this year. Now I hate it. I don't like someone peeking over my shoulder."

The general public — her students' parents — don't help the situation. Ms. Davis' students didn't know she wasn't going to take the TECAT, and on the last school day before the test they filed out wishing her luck. Except for one, who muttered, "It's about time."

"Obviously, things like that they learn at home."

So Mary Davis won't be back.

"I love the children," she says. "I frankly feel it's their loss. I have a lot to offer."

GROUPS

The TCTA and ATPE grudgingly urged their members to take the test and ballyhooed the review courses they offered. They've taken repeated shots at White — particularly over the governor's suggestion that suspicious teachers should undergo drug tests — and the groups' leaders have called for his ouster.

The TFT, while still grousing about the TECAT, has tried to use its position as the lone teacher group supporting the reforms to gain a moral advantage over the others, particularly TSTA. Cole called a news conference earlier this year to rebut former Gov. Bill Clements' campaign claim that he raised teachers' salaries 49 percent while in office.

If you believe their figures — "We're all guilty of inflated numbers, I guess," said Cole — all four groups have picked up members since HB 72 passed. Disgruntled teachers, they say, are flocking to organize for protection.

That the organizations are growing is no surprise to Plainview High School principal Jerry Don George.

"This has drawn the teachers closer together," George said. "I'm against teacher unionization, but if anything is going to bring teachers into unions, this is."

Steve Levine heads up the Reporter-Telegram's Austin Bureau staff.

TSTA President Charles Beard claimed 96,000 members and said that represents an increase of "several thousand" over pre-HB 72 days. When reminded that TSTA has been using the 96,000 figure for several years, Beard said a change in the way the organization counts its lifetime and associate members accounts for the discrepancy.

"We're the best game in town," he said. "The teachers perceive us as trying to protect their rights."

ATPE Executive Director Mike Morrow said that group has picked up about 4,000 members in the last two years and now represents nearly 44,000 teachers. Along with generalized teacher dissatisfaction, Morrow said new members seek out ATPE because — unlike the National-Education-Association-affiliated TSTA and the AFL-CIO-linked TFT — it is independent.

"The fact (is) that we are a state association and have been able to maintain a philosophy of state control, that we do not have a national lobby directing us," he said.

TCTA Executive Director Jeri Stone said her group has grown from about 21,000 before HB 72 to nearly 25,000 this year. "There's a sense that there's so much changing, so fast, that I think they feel very ill equipped to deal with what's occurring," Ms. Stone said.

"We've noticed a lot of our teachers joining simply on the basis that they're not receiving the information they need from the districts to deal adequately with the changes."

At TFT, Cole said his group has picked up about 1,000 new members, with teachers joining in traditionally conservative cities such as Abilene, Lubbock, Tyler, Waco and Plano. The union's lone stance in support of HB 72 has spurred that growth, he said.

"People realize that we weren't the only group that backed the reforms so much as it was were the only group that didn't double-cross the Legislature and the state leaders," Cole said, referring to a document all four signed pledging support for the changes. "They reneged on a deal, and that helped us."

Some teachers, however, feel all four organizations let them down.

"We need to pitch 'em all out and get us (just) one," said Mary Sample, a fifth-grade teacher in Midland. "We need a union. That's the only way we're going to get anything done."

Fifty miles down the road in Monahans, teachers have started a new group whose first act was a vocal anti-White rally on the steps of the Capitol in February. That rally, said first-grade teacher Martha Coursey, "brought more support and attention to the plight of the teacher than any organization I've been a part of."

Ms. Coursey doesn't think much of her TCTA membership. "All that I have received is my guarantee of liability insurance," she said. "All else has been lip service and a feeling of helplessness."

Across the state in East Texas, Warren Junior High School teacher Bonnie Burrow said TSTA lets her "relieve my anxieties and frustrations" and helps her get through otherwise unbearable days.

"TSTA gives us positive support that we desperately need right now, plus wonderful training sessions by dedicated professionals who are careful to care," she said. "Through our political action group we get the feeling that we do have some control over what happens to us."

White says oil states need more than repeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's call for repeal of the windfall profits tax on the oil industry is better than nothing but more steps are needed to help oil-producing states, Gov. Mark White said.

"There is no profit right now, windfall or otherwise," White said Tuesday after Reagan's position became public following a meetig with congressmen.

White sponsored an oil summit among governors of energy-producing states last week but was snubbed by the White House when it came to inviting a delegation to meet with Reagan Tuesday.

"I'm glad the the president now recognizes the threat that the oil market decline poses to our national security and has promised to support at least some measures," said White, who remained in Austin.

White, who has long advocated repeal of the windfall profits tax, also has pushed for some sort of tariff on imported oil.

"We need action now," he said.

Reagan's repeal effort may have a chance in the Senate but the House may be another matter, according to members of the Texas congressional delegation.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, one of five Republican congressmen who met with Reagan and other top-level administration officials about the oil issue on Tuesday, has introduced legislation to repeal the levy, but he said he feared House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill would block such a bill.

"I think it's the kind of issue that could be subject to demagoguery on the part of some of my colleagues," said Archer, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, which writes tax legislation.

"It will not come easily, in my opinion, over here in the House," he said. "I think it will be easier in the (Republican-controlled) Senate."

"I would say chances for repeal at this point are pretty good, especially with the president's support," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who has opposed the tax since it was enacted in 1980 to counter soaring oil prices.

After meeting with the Republican congressmen, Reagan met with the governors of Oklahoma and Wyoming, representing energy-producing states. The West Virginia governor was also invited, but declined.

White, a Democrat running for reelection, had asked to be included to make a pitch for an oil import fee, which Reagan opposes. White was not invited because, a White House aide said, he has taken a "political" approach to the issue.

Rep. Jack Fields, R-Humble, who also attended the congressmen's meeting, said White deserved to be left out.

"I think the president has finally had enough of Mark White," Fields said. "I think his attitude of constantly attacking President Reagan has finally caught up with him and that certainly doesn't help the people in the state of Texas."

The windfall profits tax is a variable levy on increases above 1980 crude oil price levels and thus has dwindled with oil prices, which have dropped by as much as two-thirds from last year's levels due to a glut of oil induced by OPEC's lifting of production controls.

Archer said in addition to agreeing on repeal of the tax, Reagan also "agreed with us that we need to find some kind of incentive" for low-production "stripper" wells, mostly operated by independents and providing about 14 percent of domestic oil.

Archer said Reagan also agreed to consider a proposal to increase the fill rate for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve with purchases of domestic oil, after Reagan's position on the windfall tax become public.

Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said, "I am absolutely pleased with the White House decision."

Sen. Phil Gramm also welcomed the president's support, a spokesman said. Legislation Gramm introduced several weeks ago included repeal of the windfall profits tax and the administration's announcement should give it a boost.

"I'm all for the repeal," Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, said, "but my point is that it adds no incentives now."

Boulter has introduced legislation eliminating the transfer rule of the tax code in hopes of stirring domestic production out of its present slump.

Under current law, independent oil and gas producers must pay higher taxes on wells they purchase from major producers then on the wells they develop.

These higher tax provisions apply both to the windfall profits tax and the percentage depletion.

"At a time when oil prices are plummeting and exploration is off, we need to set in place a system of incentives that will encourage domestic production, not inhibit it," Boulter said.

JOBLESS

New claim data for the first three weeks of the month indicates that the April figure will be comparable to the March rate of 951 filings.

Midland's 8.3 percent jobless figure pales in comparison to the state's highest, 21.9 percent in McAllen, while Dallas shows Texas lowest rate, with 5.4 percent unemployment.

11-year-old girl rescues younger swimmer

AMARILLO (AP) — An 11-year-old girl dived into a pool at a church-sponsored swimming party and saved the life of a boy who had sunk to the bottom.

Matt Chamberlain, 6, doesn't remember what happened after he went down the pool slide Monday night, but Cheller Roach saw him lying motionless under water and pulled him to safety.

"I just saw a person at the bottom of the pool and when I tried to pick him up he looked dead," Cheller said. "When I picked him up I got really scared."

Matt and Cheller were with 30 young people at a Coulter Road Baptist Church swimming party at a southwest Amarillo residence when the incident occurred.

Church youth minister Jeff Hooten credits Cheller's quick thinking for averting a tragedy.

"Had she dismissed seeing the body and turned around and started playing again it could have been worse," Hooten said.

REAGAN

On the other hand, Reagan reiterated support for maintaining the status quo in tax benefits for the oil industry, such as the depletion allowance and provisions on intangible drilling costs, and endorsed legislation allowing utilities free choice of energy sources.

In addition, the president "will look at any viable way to save stripper wells across this country," Nigh said. These wells, also known as marginal production wells, produce 10 barrels of oil or less each day.

Stripper wells in particular have been hurt by the plunge in prices to between $11 and $13 a barrel, less than half the level of just four months ago.

Gus Ensz, a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, said, "The elimination of the windfall profits tax would be a sensible action for the government to take and would provide greater incentives for the exploration for future domestic oil. It would, however, not address the short-term problem of enabling oil producers to develop marginal properties."

The windfall profits tax, imposed in 1980 as oil prices shot up, is not really a tax on profits. Instead, it is a tax on the increase in the price of crude oil above 1980 levels. Tax rates vary according to a variety of factors, such as the type of oil and where it is produced.

At its peak in 1981, the tax produced $23.4 billion for the Treasury, according to figures released by Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla.

Since then, revenues have been declining steadily, dropping to $9.1 billion in 1984. The tax was projected to produce $6.4 billion in 1985 and $4.2 billion in 1986, but those estimates were based on oil selling at $24 a barrel.

Under current law, the tax is to be phased out over 33 months, beginning in January 1991. In its original tax overhaul plan last year, the Treasury Department proposed repealing the tax.

MC

The college receives an average 51 percent of its funds from the state, Parrish has said. MC also receives money from local taxes, tuition, student fees, federal funds and private sources.

Wilkinson told trustees that his office will complete a full reappraisal of all Midland County property due to the downturn in the local economy.

In other action, trustees approved the resignation of former Midland College president Dr. Al G. Langford from the college's Foundation Board.

Langford, who earlier this month waged an unsuccessful campaign for a seat on the board of trustees, told the Reporter-Telegram this morning "the mandate of the people told me they wanted me to stay away from the college."

Langford, who served as Midland College president from 1969 to 1980, said he was disappointed by his overwhelming defeat to attorney Steve Kiser in the April 5 trustee election, but expressed best wishes for the college and the board.

However, he said he will "no longer be associated with the college in any shape, form or fashion."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Gromyko reportedly ill

Gromyko

MOSCOW (DPA) — Soviet President Andrei Gromyko, 76, taken to a hospital with a "high fever" last Wednesday, appears to be seriously ill, observers said Tuesday.

Official Soviet sources only reported Gromyko's hospitalization, and there was no information about the exaxt nature of his illness.

Gromyko was not present Tuesday at the traditional Kremlin ceremony to mark the 116th birthday of the founder of the Soviet state, Vladimir Lenin.

Bonn to expel Libyans

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Cabinet today decided to expel at least 20 of the 41 Libyans accredited to the radical Arab nation's embassy in Bonn and place restrictions on the rest, government sources said.

The expulsion order resulted from Monday's resolution by the 12-nation Common Market to reduce the size of Libyan embassies in response to suspected Libyan involvement in international terrorism.

Speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, the sources said the government also decided to reduce the number of West German embassy staffers in the Libyan capital from 22 to 19.

The Libyan embassy in Bonn, which Libya calls the People's Bureau, has 41 staffers, including 11 diplomats.

It was not immediately known how many of those ordered to leave are diplomats.

Letter bomb dismantled

LONDON (AP) — Police said security officers at the headquarters of state-owned British Steel discovered a letter bomb, and that it was dismantled by explosives experts without incident.

Security officers discovered the bomb Tuesday in a a brown envelope addressed simply to "the chairman," police said.

No one claimed responsibility for sending the bomb, but Scotland Yard said the device was believed to have been sent by the Scottish National Liberation Army, an extremist group seeking independence for Scotland.

The group was blamed for sending a similar letter bomb last Friday to Scottish Secretary Malcolm Rifkind at his office in the House of Commons. That device also was dismantled.

Tunisian leader jailed

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — The leader of Tunisia's main opposition party was found guilty of organizing an illegal demonstration and sentenced to four months in jail.

Officials said Ahmed Mestiri, secretary-general of the small Tunisian Social Democratic Party, was arrested last Wednesday after leading a protest against the U.S. air raids on neighboring Libya.

Defense lawyers for the 61-year-old Mestiri, who also is a lawyer, argued Tuesday that the charges had no basis in Tunisian law. But prosecutors said he failed to obtain a government permit required for all gatherings in public places.

The North African nation of Tunisia is considered one of the most moderate and pro-Western countries in the Arab world. But only a few token opposition political parties are tolerated.

The real power lies in the Destourian Socialist Party headed by ailing 83-year-old President-for-Life Habib Bourguiba.

Floods claim at least 11

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — At least 11 people have been killed and two children are missing in mudslides and flooding caused by 36 hours of torrential rains in northeast Brazil, police say.

Sgt. Joao Evangelista Gomes said Tuesday that floods and mudslides hit the towns of Mombaca, Procoto and Cavalos in a remote section of Pernambuco state. Forecasters said more rain was expected.

"Eleven bodies have been buried so far, and rescue workers are looking for two children who are missing," Gomes said in a telephone interview from Civil Defense headquarters in Recife, 1500 miles northeast of Rio de Janeiro.

Was order violated?

PARIS (AP) — A weekly newspaper today quoted French military officers as saying they believe U.S. aircraft flew over French and Spanish territory en route to attack Libya last week.

The satirical-political weekly Le Canard Enchaine said the officers think the U.S. warplanes flew over the Pyrenees Mountains, which form the border between France and Spain, despite both countries' refusal to grant permission for the planes to fly over their territory.

But Defense Minister Andre Giraud said he was certain the American aircraft did not fly over French territory.

"I am certain that French radars work," Giraud said, indicating he believed any such flights by U.S. planes would have been detected.

U.S. officials have said that the British-based warplanes flew around Spain and France, over the Strait of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean Sea to Libya. They say the planes were refueled in flight along that route.

Israel aware of plan?

JERUSALEM (AP) — A retired Israeli general who was arrested for alleged involvement in a plan to sell $2 billion of U.S. arms to Iran was quoted today as saying Israeli authorities were aware of the plan.

But the Foreign and Defense ministries, in a joint statement, flatly denied Israel knew anything about the plan.

Seventeen people, including Avraham Bar-Am, the retired general, were charged Tuesday with conspiring to violate U.S. arms laws. Five men, including Bar-Am, were arrested in Bermuda, and four others were seized in New York. The eight others were still at large.

Rebels claim car bomb

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — South African-backed rebels in Mozambique claimed responsibility Tuesday for a car bomb in the capital of Maputo that injured dozens of people.

The rebels also claimed their attacks between April 13 and April 17 killed more than 1,000 Mozambican, Zimbabwean and Tanzanian troops. Neither of the claims could be verified.

Supreme Court hears Gramm-Rudman

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to balance the federal budget, a major headache for Congress and the White House, is sparking a constitutional confrontation in the Supreme Court.

The court was to hear arguments today over the validity of a law — the Gramm-Rudman Act — that mandates a balanced budget by 1991.

Four senators, including the act's sponsors, and 16 House members reserved seats in the packed courtroom as the justices began sorting out the issues in the important conflict over the powers of the executive and legislative branches.

The court, expediting consideration of the dispute, is expected to announce its decision by early July.

On Feb. 7, a special three-judge court agreed with the Reagan administration and other challengers to the law and struck down a key provision that would force automatic cuts in the federal deficit.

But the law remains in effect pending the Supreme Court's ruling, and Congress also continues to struggle with balancing the budget.

Despite White House opposition, the Republican-led Senate moved ahead Tuesday on a budget blueprint to sharply pare President Reagan's military spending request and ignore his opposition to a tax increase.

The Supreme Court scheduled two hours of arguments today, twice the usual length.

It is examining an issue involving separation of government powers that may be chiefly of interest to constitutional scholars. But the consequences of the case are immediate and far-reaching.

The first $11.7 billion in spending cuts required by the law took effect March 1, unaffected by the decision of the three-judge panel, which suspended its own ruling pending the Supreme Court review.

The law calls for deeper cuts until all red ink in the federal budget is eliminated by 1991.

The deficit stands now at around $208 billion, although some in Congress hope favorable economic developments will reduce it. The Gramm-Rudman law requires the figure to be $144 billion for the next fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

To reach that goal, the law would force across-the-board cuts, with half the money slashed from military spending and half from domestic programs.

The special three-judge court invalidated a provision that empowers the comptroller general — the head of Congress' General Accounting Office — to order automatic deficit reductions.

The GAO is a watchdog agency that audits federal programs. The comptroller general is appointed by the president to a 15-year term and can be removed only by Congress.

The three-judge court ruled that the Gramm-Rudman Act breaches the separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches because of the comptroller general's role. The panel said the law, in effect, empowers an officer of Congress to perform an executive function.

If the Supreme Court agrees, the provision for automatic budget cuts would be eliminated.

But the Gramm-Rudman Act has a fallback plan that would permit Congress itself to vote on a deficit-reduction package. The question then would be whether the legislators would be able to reach agreement or be paralyzed over the politically explosive issue.

There are fears that without concerted action, the national debt will continue to spiral. The debt recently passed the $2 trillion mark, more than twice what it was when Reagan took office in 1981. The interest alone that American taxpayers owe this year on the debt is $196.1 billion.

The Gramm-Rudman law was challenged by the administration, by 12 members of Congress and by the National Treasury Employees Union representing retired federal workers.

Shultz: Common market creating havoc in world

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz accused the European Common Market of "creating havoc" in world markets with subsidies designed to fence out lower-priced agricultural products.

"It's a major, major problem," Shultz said Tuesday. "Somehow the other countries of the world have to get at it."

He said Portugal and Spain had compounded the problem by moving to keep out $1 billion of U.S. farm sales. "We are objecting very strenuously to that," Shultz said in a Voice of America interview.

The two countries entered the Common Market at the start of the year with U.S. support. But, Shultz said, "we always said it should happen, but not at our expense."

He said the trade issue would be discussed during next month's economic summit meeting in Tokyo. Leaders of the European Community as well as Japan, Britain, Canada, France, Italy and West Germany are attending along with President Reagan and Shultz.

Senior European and American trade officials indicated recently that the administration would start placing unspecified new restrictions on European exports to the United States in retaliation for lost American food sales to Portugal and Spain.

Efforts to resolve the dispute failed last week in Paris. The issue will come up in trade and tariff talks next month as well as at the Tokyo summit.

"We have a potential, very serious problem in the field of agriculture," Shultz said, "and you can see it, in part, as a result of the enlargement of the European community."

He said the steps taken by Portugal and Spain were "only a symptom of the agricultural problems we have in the world." Shultz said the 12-nation European Community "is in considerable part responsible" with its "gigantic system of subsidies."

Cuomo talks of candidacy, poverty to publisher group

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo took a jab at Richard Nixon for calling him "more poetry than prose" and at newspaper publishers who gave him a more lukewarm response than they gave the former president.

Cuomo, who said he will decide in the next few weeks whether to seek re-election or run for president, spoke Tuesday about poverty in America to 2,000 publishers and their spouses at the 100th annual American Newspaper Publishers Association convention.

He said the country needs a "coherent social policy" and must make "effective social investments" to fight the growing gap between the rich and poor. But the publishers gave him only brief, polite applause. On Monday, the same group gave Nixon a 45-second standing ovation.

"I'm glad they didn't throw stale rolls, frankly," Cuomo said later. "The publishers are business people, who incidentally are doing extremely well. They're riding around in yachts. They're doing very well. But they were very kind to me.

"The waiters all liked it. The people who are working with their hands like it. They understand. They're very smart people. The top is getting richer and richer and narrower and narrower. Of course it makes the people at the top uneasy."

> Cuomo acknowledged in his speech that poverty is "not the kind of story that makes easy headlines or even listening."

Cuomo acknowledged in his speech that poverty is "not the kind of story that makes easy headlines, or even easy listening."

But, he said, "I believe the urgency of the matter requires that we deal with it."

Cuomo also jabbed back at Nixon, who called Cuomo "more poetry than prose" compared with Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and predicted either Democrat would lose to Vice President George Bush if they ran for president in 1988.

Cuomo praised Nixon for his "great intellect, unique experience and extraordinary political wisdom" and said he hoped Nixon would "continue to offer us his counsel for many years to come."

Then he drew a loud laugh by adding:

"That does not mean he's right about the next election or knows anything at all about poetry and prose."

Telephone bill cuts sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. wants Congress to abolish a monthly $1 charge paid by most Americans for their home telephone, a charge that is scheduled to increase to $2 a month on June 1.

The Tennessee Democrat planned to introduce legislation today to do away with the fee. The bill also would allow the seven regional Bell telephone companies to manufacture equipment.

The $1 monthly "subscriber line charge" is designed to pay part of the cost of the wire that runs from each telephone to the phone company's central office.

That cost previously had been built into charges for long-distance calls.

Long-distance rates were reduced when the monthly charge went into effect last June. Another rate reduction is planned for June 1.

Businesses pay up to $6 a month for each line.

However, in a letter seeking their support for the legislation, Gore told his colleagues, "The FCC (Federal Communications Commission) theory is that local customers, whether or not they make long-distance calls, should pay an increasing share of the cost of providing long-distance service access to the competing long-distance companies."

After seeing a draft of the letter Albert Halprin, head of the FCC bureau that regulates telephones, said, "That is totally incorrect. Not one penny of the cost of providing equal access goes on anybody except those who make long-distance calls."

In implementing the charge, the FCC said long-distance rates no longer could be used to subsidize the local connections because too many big users would install their own lines and bypass the phone system, eventually meaning residential customers would have to pay more of the costs of running the phone system.

But Gore said, "There is no evidence that the federally mandated access charges have reduced bypass at all."

Gore's bill is one of several introduced to give the local companies authority to build phone systems.

Soviet airline gets OK to resume U.S. flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet airline Aeroflot can resume its flights to the United States, the government says, putting into effect an agreement between the two countries reached five months ago.

Aeroflot's last scheduled commercial service, a weekly flight to Washington, was ended in late 1981 by President Reagan after martial law was imposed in Poland.

On Tuesday, the Transportation Department said Aeroflot can begin serving New York and Washington immediately. Intermediate stops will be permitted in Europe and Canada as well, the department said.

The United States suspended regular commercial service between the two countries in late 1979, after Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan.

After ending the last weekly flight in 1981, Reagan took further action against Aeroflot in September 1983, when he ordered its New York and Washington offices closed after the Soviets shot down a Korean Air Lines jet with 269 people aboard.

Last February, Aeroflot ticket sales in the United States resumed, but regularly scheduled flights into the country were still prohibited.

During the last four years, however, Aeroflot aircraft have continued to fly into the United States, carrying diplomatic personnel and supplies for various Soviet embassies and consulates.

Soviet officials had been pushing for the resumption of direct regularly scheduled flights to the U.S. for at least three years. The two countries reached an agreement in November to resume the flights.

At the time, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole called the pact "an immediate step" to fulfill hopes for closer contacts between Soviets and Americans raised by the Geneva summit meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Negotiations on the agreement had been slowed down by a dispute over Pan American World Airways' share of revenue from its flights to Moscow and Leningrad.

Pan Am halted its direct flights to the Soviet Union in 1978, saying they were unprofitable. The newly scheduled Pan Am flights include a stopover and aircraft change in Frankfurt, West Germany.

A Pan Am spokesman said last year that under the new agreement "we are confident we can operate on a sound economic basis."

Last month, the agreement was sealed by U.S. and Soviet officials.

House votes income cap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, without public hearings or debate, has lifted a cap on outside income that could allow members to make as much as $7,510 a year more for making speeches to special-interest groups.

The move occurred Tuesday in the blink of an eye when House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. declared the measure passed in a nearly empty chamber. There was no formal vote on the resolution, offered by Rep. John P. Murtha, D-Pa., which was adopted within minutes after it was introduced.

The change in House rules was made under a procedure in which the presiding officer decrees that a measure has won approval unless objections are raised. It needs no further action to take effect.

Under the previous House rule, members could make no more than 30 percent of their $75,100 salaries — or $22,530 — in outside income from all sources, including speaking and writing honoraria and money from law partnerships and other businesses.

Murtha's resolution removed that limit, meaning the only constraint now on outside income for House members is a law that applies to honoraria only and limits such payments to 40 percent of a lawmaker's salary. The law also limits honoraria to no more than $2,000 per speech.

The change means an effective boost of at least $7,510 a year in outside earnings capacity, to $30,040, and possibly more from non-honoraria sources.

Income from honoraria is always a sensitive issue because it gives lobbyists and interest groups a way to legally funnel cash to members of Congress for their personal use.

John Davison, a spokesman for the House Ethics Committee, said committee attorneys were studying the changes and had advised him not to comment on the effect of the Murtha resolution.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, justified the move as putting House members on par with senators.

"The dignity of the House needs to be on an absolute parity with the Senate," he said.

The Senate has been operating under the 40 percent cap on honoraria income since it was passed as part of a supplemental appropriations bill last year.

Another House member, Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., said there was a legitimate need for financial help for lawmakers, many of whom maintain two houses — in Washington and in their home districts.

But he said increasing the chance for earnings through speaking fees helps relatively few House members, because not all receive numerous invitations to speak.

"There's a potentially corrupting element in outside income," he said. "Because people could be tempted to give or receive in ways that could influence legislation."

Trivia trove ranks cities

NEW YORK (AP) — What is the No. 1 city in the world?

It depends.

Melbourne, Australia boasts the highest egg prices — $1.64 a dozen. Brussels has the most physicians, one for every 139 people. Moscow has the most books in its public libraries, 49,991,000.

"It depends on who you are," said John Tepper Marlin, co-author of the new "Book of World City Rankings," published by the Free Press.

"If you're looking for a good job, the bigger the city the better. For example, if you're in the auto industry, you probably want to be in Detroit. In retirement other factors come into play."

Marlin, Immanuel Ness and Stephen T. Collins worked for the Council on Municipal Performance, which collects and evaluates information o cities and their management. They compared 1984 statistics from 105 cities in 80 categories, but did not combine them into a single ranking.

The book is a trivia trove:

—Washington has the most telephones per 100 residents (173), while Mexico City has the least (2).

—The cost of furnishing a home with appliances is highest in Bogota, Columbia ($3,944), and lowest in Istanbul, Turkey ($1,168).

—St. Louis topped the homicide list with 58.5 per 100,000 people, while Marseille, France, had only 0.2.

—The average annual temperature was highest in Bangkok, Thailand, 83.1 degrees, and lowest in Winnipeg, Canada, 36.5 degrees.

—Helsinki, Finland, is 55.5 percent female. Bombay, India, is 56.4 percent male.

Shuttle families launch center

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families of the seven astronauts who died in the space shuttle Challenger explosion announced plans for a children's center in the memory of the astronauts and received the endorsement of Vice President George Bush.

June Scobee, widow of Challenger commander Dick Scobee, said Tuesday the proposed center would be established at the Johnson Space Center in Houston by the Houston-based Children's Challenger Center Foundation.

Mrs. Scobee said the center would be "dedicated to helping children of all ages experience the excitement of learning about space and related sciences through the challenging, hands-on activities associated with space exploration."

Mrs. Scobee and four other family members met with Bush, who issued a statement saying: "This project has my full support. I hope others will join forces by lending their ideas and energy to efforts designed to help young people reach out to explore new fields in science and industry."

Sunbelt states form institution

WASHINGTON – The Sunbelt states decided Tuesday to emulate the Northeastern and Midwestern states by forming the Sunbelt Institute to prevent their northern neighbors from taking too large a slice of of the federal money pie.

The move constituted an all-out counterattack in escalating regional warfare that has raged in Congress for the past few years, with Sunbelt legislators trying to fend off what they felt was the negative flow of federal funds from their region to the Northeastern and Midwestern states.

In 1976, 18 northeastern and midwestern states formed a bipartisan congressional coalition to protect their economic interests, and a year later founded an institute, whose annual budget is now $1 million, to provide them with up-to-date and detailed information on how national policies would affect their area.

The institute each year has concentrated on the presidential budget and given congressmen and senators data attempting to show how the budget was skewed in favor of the South and West.

It also showed the congressional coalition members – who currently number 196 – how to profit from tax measures and how to aggressively pursue military contracts.

The Sunbelt Institute, a privately funded research center, would give Sunbelt members of Congress and officials that same kind of information and statistics on regional implications of the budget and other national policy matters.

The new Institute is not the South and Southwest's first effort to stem the Frostbelt's rising tide in Congress. More than 90 House members from those regions formed the Sunbelt Council in 1981 for the same reason. After five years and several attempts, they are getting an institute off the ground.

Rep. Kenneth Mackay, D-Fla., chairman of the Sunbelt Council Task Force, said it was often embarrassing to debate a congressman with an opposing point of view and see him haul out reams of computer printouts with up to date statistics, provided by the Northeastern-Midwestern Institute, showing how every township in his district would be affected by a policy.

Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., said the Northeast Midwest coalition had gotten the largest amount of federal money for their region, and had affected many law changes that were beneficial to them, but not necessarily to others.

"They are very effective at the subcommittee and committee level," Neal said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga, said the Institute would help find ways to shore up ailing energy industries and provide jobs. Nunn sounded a note of caution, though, saying, "We're not trying to get more than our share."

"We need to have some creative thinking," to get back lost jobs, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, R-La, said. Job training has been a major focus of the Northeast-Midwest Coalition, which has backed several job training programs.

Mackay has mustered corporate sponsors and academic leaders from the Sunbelt to support the Institute.

More than $300,000 has been pledged by 13 corporations, including the Enron Corporation, Florida Progress, NCNB Corporation in Florida, SunTrust Banks in Florida and Georgia and Burlington Northern in Texas, as well as Bell South.

The Institute will serve Texas, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Bipartisan House and Senate steering committees, which include three Texas and two Florida representatives as well as Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., will help pick an institute research staff of not more than 10.

State offices here analyze local repercussions of national policies and provide them to their delegation.

The directors of the Florida and Texas state offices here said in interviews that they are delighted with the creation of a Sunbelt Institute, which they say will provide them with an opportunity to add their findings to a bigger, regional picture.

Steve Sauls, Florida State Office Director, said the Institute "helps us to be a partner, not just a lobby in the system."

John Hanson, Texas State Office Director, said state delegations would still value their findings because they were Texas specific and "the office had been around for a long time."

The Southern Governors' Association, the Southern Growth Policies Board and the Southern Legislative Conference have endorsed the Sunbelt Institute.

Couple open home to Cambodian refugees

HOUSTON (AP) — Bert and Beverly Striegler's home is a haven for many Cambodians — a place they can go to when things get rough.

Since the fall of Phnom Penh in 1975, the Strieglers have had at least 50 Cambodians come to their home — some just for a meal or an overnight stay.

"At one time, every Cambodian in Houston — and there weren't that many — had our phone number in their wallet," said Mrs. Striegler. "All of the Cambodians are just an extension of our own family."

Their humanitarian efforts began with Sun Cheng, who arrived at their home in August 1975 carrying his possessions in a shoe box under his arm. He was 46.

The Strieglers found out about Cheng from another Cambodian who was being sponsored by a couple they knew.

"When we were talking about it, I guess we were as broke as we've ever been," Mrs. Striegler said. "But we had an empty bedroom and could give him a roof and something to eat. And we knew we could provide him with more than what he had in the (refugee) camp. We didn't know it would go on and on and change our lives the way it has."

In 1979, Cheng learned his wife and six of his eight children were alive living under the rule of the Khmer Rouge. The Strieglers gave him $7,000 to get his family smuggled out of Cambodia.

The Strieglers consider it one of the best investments they ever made.

"See what a bargain we got for our money?" Striegler said pointing to a pile of scrapbooks documenting the family's life in Houston after their arrival in August 1982.

Cheng's two oldest daughters, Pon and Pi, now live at the Striegler home, and the rest of his family live in a home they bought in Houston.

Interest up in studying Russian

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The school uniform is normal: Blue jeans, rock 'n' roll T-shirts and cowboy boots. But something doesn't sound right here.

"Ahtkooda vwee?" asks teacher Laurie Nesrala.

"Ya eez Grapevine," 18 teenagers respond in unison.

Sure doesn't sound like Grapevine. But here in semirural Texas, students at the town's only high school are learning to speak Russian.

The class, which began last fall, is one of six Russian high school language programs in the state and part of a modest new wave of enthusiasm for Russian studies across the across the country.

For nearly two decades, the number of students studying Russian in American high schools slipped dramatically. National enrollment between 1965 and 1982 dropped from 26,716 to 5,702.

And yet, as U.S.-Soviet relations have improved during the last three years and the government has provided initiatives to encourage the study of Russian and other "critical" languages, the trend appears to be reversing. Since 1982, experts estimate enrollment in Russian has increased to more than 7,000.

Students in Grapevine, like those taking the course elsewhere, give a variety of reasons for what is considered the most complex of modern languages: Some are preparing for military careers; some are attracted by the mystique of the culture; others believe it could slow the arms race.

"Being aware of their culture is a lot more important for world peace than building bombs," says Nathan Wallace, a 15-year-old sophomore.

Wallace's 17-year-old classmate, Matt Hill, is more pragmatic. "If we ever get in a war, the language will come in handy," said Hill, who plans to enter the Air Force after high school.

Among Texas high school students, Wallace, Hill and their classmates are a distinct minority. About 140 students take Russian in Texas. By contrast, the most popular language in Texas is Spanish, which this year attracted 142,000 high school students.

Educators say the Russian rebound is tied to national and international events, such as the federal government's offer of grants to teachers who will teach the language and the culture or the call by President Reagan for more teacher and student exchange programs with the Soviet Union.

"Russian, more than any other language, follows political change," says Michael Katz, the University of Texas department chairman for Slavic languages. "Since Reagan has been re-elected and started changing his tune, the spirit of Geneva is everywhere. There's a new interest in learning Russian."

Richard Bod, director of foreign language programs for the Modern Language Association, said that in recent years Russian studies have "become more prestigious, a little more chic."

Chic? In a town where the culture is rooted in agriculture, rodeo and country music?

You bet.

When she walked into the class for the first time last fall, Ms. Nesrala's roster was full. Her students study Russian culture from cuisine to classical music, and it has captured the imaginations of many students, like Jerry Garrett, a 17-year-old senior who says one day he may open a Russian restaurant.

"Right now there's only one Ukranian restaurant in Dallas," said Garrett, who works part time as a shift manager in a hamburger restaurant. "Russian food is very fancy, very appetizing. I think I could make a lot of money off it."

The enthusiasm shown for the program in Grapevine is not universal among high schools offering Russian. Teachers at Skyline in Dallas, Southwest in Fort Worth and Sam Houston in Arlington all say prejudice has hurt enrollment for years.

"There's been a lot of prejudice and ignorance about studying Russian," says Joel Langvardt, a former Army language specialist in Russian and a Southwest High Russian teacher for the past eight years. "Many of my students tell me they took the class in spite of the fear that they would be labeled pro-communist."

"At my church they talk a lot about how Russia is evil," said Aimee Roebuck, a 15-year-old Skyline sophomore.

Sunbelt states form institution

WASHINGTON – The Sunbelt states decided Tuesday to emulate the Northeastern and Midwestern states by forming the Sunbelt Institute to prevent their northern neighbors from taking too large a slice of of the federal money pie.

The move constituted an all-out counterattack in escalating regional warfare that has raged in Congress for the past few years, with Sunbelt legislators trying to fend off what they felt was the negative flow of federal funds from their region to the Northeastern and Midwestern states.

In 1976, 18 northeastern and midwestern states formed a bipartisan congressional coalition to protect their economic interests, and a year later founded an institute, whose annual budget is now $1 million, to provide them with up-to-date and detailed information on how national policies would affect their area.

The institute each year has concentrated on the presidential budget and given congressmen and senators data attempting to show how the budget was skewed in favor of the South and West.

It also showed the congressional coalition members – who currently number 196 – how to profit from tax measures and how to aggressively pursue military contracts.

The Sunbelt Institute, a privately funded research center, would give Sunbelt members of Congress and officials that same kind of information and statistics on regional implications of the budget and other national policy matters.

The new Institute is not the South and Southwest's first effort to stem the Frostbelt's rising tide in Congress. More than 90 House members from those regions formed the Sunbelt Council in 1981 for the same reason. After five years and several attempts, they are getting an institute off the ground.

Rep. Kenneth Mackay, D-Fla., chairman of the Sunbelt Council Task Force, said it was often embarrassing to debate a congressman with an opposing point of view and see him haul out reams of computer printouts with up to date statistics, provided by the Northeastern-Midwestern Institute, showing how every township in his district would be affected by a policy.

Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., said the Northeast Midwest coalition had gotten the largest amount of federal money for their region, and had affected many law changes that were beneficial to them, but not necessarily to others.

"They are very effective at the subcommittee and committee level," Neal said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga, said the Institute would help find ways to shore up ailing energy industries and provide jobs. Nunn sounded a note of caution, though, saying, "We're not trying to get more than our share."

"We need to have some creative thinking," to get back lost jobs, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, R-La, said. Job training has been a major focus of the Northeast-Midwest Coalition, which has backed several job training programs.

Mackay has mustered corporate sponsors and academic leaders from the Sunbelt to support the Institute.

More than $300,000 has been pledged by 13 corporations, including the Enron Corporation, Florida Progress, NCNB Corporation in Florida, SunTrust Banks in Florida and Georgia and Burlington Northern in Texas, as well as Bell South.

The Institute will serve Texas, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Bipartisan House and Senate steering committees, which include three Texas and two Florida representatives as well as Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., will help pick an institute research staff of not more than 10.

State offices here analyze local repercussions of national policies and provide them to their delegation.

The directors of the Florida and Texas state offices here said in interviews that they are delighted with the creation of a Sunbelt Institute, which they say will provide them with an opportunity to add their findings to a bigger, regional picture.

Steve Sauls, Florida State Office Director, said the Institute "helps us to be a partner, not just a lobby in the system."

John Hanson, Texas State Office Director, said state delegations would still value their findings because they were Texas specific and "the office had been around for a long time."

The Southern Governors' Association, the Southern Growth Policies Board and the Southern Legislative Conference have endorsed the Sunbelt Institute.

Victims awareness

Tedda McAnear, victim-witness coordinator for the Midland County District Attorney's Office, says victims of crime still do not get a fair shake in the overall criminal justice system. But it's better than it used to be and that is a start.

Chances are most Midlanders will be hearing about crime victims and their rights in the next few days. To a large degree that's a result of last week being observed as Crime Victim's Awareness Week and this week being Crime Victim's Rights Week. But in no small way it's also directly attributable to the growing general recognition on the part of the public of crime victims and their role in the system of criminal justice.

Although a few years ago there was little visible concern for the victims of crime, today 39 states, the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands have established state victim compensation programs and attempt to bring the victims of crimes more into the realm of activity in the criminal justice system.

Those who work with crime victims are even taking the case to the schools to make young people aware that if they are victimized by crime, they, too, have rights.

Victims of any crime, but particularly the victims of violent crimes, may not be fully aware of the rights they have. Ms. McAnear notes that victims have the right to be protected from being intimidated, to ask for higher bonds against the criminals in their cases and to be notified of the bond and the reasons for it being set at the level at which it was placed.

"The most basic right," says Ms. McAnear, "is the right to be informed," and in that regard she works closely with crime victims in the local district attorney's office.

"I still don't think victims have any justice," Ms. McAnear noted. "I think we've still got a long, long way to go."

It's because of the heightened awareness that the criminal justice system is not only here to mete out punishment to criminals, but also to see that justice is truly affirmed that crime victims organizations have become increasingly popular in recent years.

That's good because justice cannot be meaningful if it only addresses the criminal and pushes aside the victims of crime.

Bombs aren't the solution

Once upon a time there was a nation that felt outraged by acts of violence committed against some of its citizens living or traveling abroad. This nation believed itself morally justified in returning violence with violence. The hatred and outrage on both sides intensified. Both sides became even more convinced they were acting righteously and in self-defense. Violence begat more violence. Many more names were added to the list of innocent dead. How did (or will) this madness finally end?

President Reagan has said that bombing terrorist bases in Libya was our last remaining alternative in self-defense against terrorism, all other means having been exhausted. If I may be so bold, I have a few suggestions for other non-violent alternatives.

First, assuming the United States does indeed have incontrovertible evidence that Libya and other countries support terrorist activities, this evidence should be presented to the United Nations and the World Court for proper action. The purpose of these international bodies is to resolve these kinds of disputes among member nations.

Second, the United States should convene or participate in a conference of nations that would examine ways of dealing with international terrorism. Hopefully the nations that are the principal targets of terrorism, such as the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Greece, Israel, Spain, and West Germany, could coordinate a defense against terrorism that would be in the best interests of all parties concerned. This would return the United States to the international community and reverse its image as a galloping vigilante.

Third, we the citizens of the United States should seriously attempt to understand the underlying causes of international terrorism. By and large, terrorists are not thugs, mad dogs, or mindless brutes. Rather, they are sane but desperate individuals motivated by a sense of outrage against perceived injustices committed against their peoples. In saying this I do not in any way condone these acts of violence. However, if we ever hope to solve the problem of international terrorism, we must elect public officials who will attempt to correct the social and political injustices that give rise to terrorism. More bombs are not the solution.

High-tech here at home

I just got back from the OIME open house where they exhibited their new Homopolar generator. For those who can appreciate fine machinery and didn't get a chance to attend, I've got to report you would have really been impressed. The machine tips the scales at 10 tons but is machined throughout like a Swiss watch.

Here is the highest of high-tech being built from scratch in our own backyard. Heck, today any idiot can make a transistor, but only a team of real professionals can build something like that generator.

Errors caused chagrin

Imagine my chagrin when I read the Midland Reporter-Telegram April 23rd and saw my letter in print with two obvious errors, Auschwitz and Jonestown in the wrong countries!

Thanks to Mr. Considine's letter on Sunday, April 30, the mistake has been corrected.

I will now place Mr. Considine's name on the list with the only perfect man I have read about; only, this man was crucified.

JACK ANDERSON

Reagan's opinion of Carter same

WASHINGTON — Animosity between successive occupants of the Oval Office is a fairly common feature of Washington life. The hostility between President Reagan and former President Jimmy Carter may be more acerbic than most because of the deep differences in political philosophy that divide the two men.

Jack Anderson

Occasionally, the barely submerged antipathy bobs to the surface — usually when Reagan charges that Carter had failed to do something during his term and Carter denies the charge. There was great bristling in October 1983, for example, when Reagan blamed the suicide bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut on Carter policies that Reagan claimed had weakened the CIA and other intelligence-gathering agencies.

In typewritten notes given to us by Carter's office recently, the former president indignantly recalled "when President Reagan attempted to blame the tragic loss of more than 200 U.S. Marines in Lebanon on Presidents Nixon, Ford and me, claiming that we had weakened the intelligence agencies so badly that he could not obtain adequate information."

Carter added in his notes: "When I made a public statement denying the truth of this allegation, he called me to say that his explanation had been misinterpreted by the press. I replied that I had observed his statement on television and had not relied on press interpretations."

Carter continued: "I asked him to check the Pentagon records and he would ascertain the error of his frequent statement that only he had increased defense spending. He admitted his mistake and promised not to make it again. However, he has continued to make this claim, obviously knowing that it is not true."

In fact, Reagan criticized Carter's defense decisions as recently as February in a television speech — and again drew a protest from Carter.

With this background in mind, we asked the president recently if he had softened any of his opinions on his predecessor. The short answer is that he has not.

Reagan's normally pleasant face hardened noticeably when we asked — remembering his harsh criticism of Carter in the 1980 campaign: "Has there been an evolution in your thinking about him as you've faced ... some of the same problems?"

Reagan prefaced his reply by explaining why he had not criticized Carter on some national security issues and other sensitive areas: "I have said that there are some things that you have to realize only the president knows. He's the only one that has all the information on something. Therefore, you can't criticize him on those things unless and until you know what that information is."

One reason he said he wasn't surprised by the burdens of the presidency — and thus more sympathetic to Carter — was that there isn't such a vast difference between his job as governor of California and as president.

"Over the years we've forgotten that once upon a time the ranks of the governors were where you found presidents," Reagan went on. "Because the governors, the 50 governors, have the jobs that are closest to approximating this job of any position in the country. Certainly much more so than anyone from a legislative branch."

Bringing him back to his views toward Carter since 1980, we asked: "So there hasn't necessarily been an evolution in your thinking?"

"No," the president replied.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: U.S. intelligence analysts have picked up signs of dissent within the Soviet Union about the long and bloody war in Afghanistan. Even the strictly controlled Russian press has been reporting Soviet casualties on a more frequent basis, though it tends to stress awards of medals for battlefield valor. The real clue to growing unpopularity with the war is the "samizdat," or underground press. These privately written, unauthorized manuscripts, passed from hand to hand despite the KGB's vigilance, are showing increased criticism of the war and sympathy with the Afghan rebels. War veterans are sometimes quoted.

ONE MORE BURDEN: Should taxpayers foot the bill for legal costs and judgments against a company that publishes aeronautical charts based on government data, when faulty information on the charts results in a plane crash? Much to the chagrin of the Justice Department, legislation that recently passed Congress makes the federal government responsible for such judgments. The only firm that distributes these charts, Jeppesen Co. of Denver, defends the buck-passing law because Jeppesen not only relies on information provided by the Federal Aviation Administration, but is forbidden by law to alter the data even when it's known to be wrong.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Bluestockings are on the march, and they have recruited powerful allies in the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography. We hold no brief for smut merchants, but we hope the commission deep-sixes one extreme staff recommendation that would enlist an army of "citizen action groups" to cleanse the marketplace — and private homes — of material they disapprove of. Government censorship is ominous enough, but vigilantism is worse. The idea of turning the protection of our morals over to a possy of priggish zealots is downright scary. The commission should cool the moralistic fervor of its staff.

JAMES RESTON

Public opinion dangerous guide

WASHINGTON — There's a popular notion, almost a rule in Washington, that you can criticize anybody or anything except the American people. They would know what to do on earth or even in outer space.

Thomas Jefferson thought this was a silly idea but after a while he was followed by George Gallup and Lou Harris, who measured public opinion and convinced most politicians that what was popular was right, or anyway, got votes.

James Reston

Thus, it's allowed that Speaker O'Neill in the Capitol and even President Reagan downtown in the White House, may be questioned. But the voice of the people, it's said, cannot be challenged without casting doubt on the democratic principle that the people know best.

Consider the recent events in Libya. At no time in recent memory has the United States been condemned by informed opinion across the world as it has been for this bombing raid on the Libyan capital. Yet public opinion at home has encouraged the president to pronounce the raid as a great success in the American fight against international terrorism.

For example, after the raid, The New York Times-CBS News Poll indicated that 77 percent of the American people approved the strike, and the same poll registered increased support for Reagan's handling of the nation's foreign policy in general — from 51 percent last week to 71 percent following the attack.

At the same time, another poll, while supporting the president's decision, indicated that the perception was that the raid would probably not reduce the terror, but increase it.

This contradiction, however, was no surprise. Whenever the president takes bold military action abroad, the people rally to his side.

Even President Kennedy's adventure against Castro in the Bay of Pigs was popular at the beginning, when he thought he could do it on the cheap, but disastrous at the end.

And the people supported President Johnson in Vietnam when he said he wasn't going to be the first U.S. president to lose a war. But he lost it, and the people finally ran him out of town.

This is now Reagan's problem. He is supported by public opinion but not by informed opinion either at home or abroad, and has to deal with the consequences.

Nobody doubts his objective — to terrorize the terrorists — but will it work? He consulted the allies in advance about his military invasion, but the Mediterranean allies disagreed and refused to let his planes fly over their airspace.

He didn't really "consult" with the leaders of the Congress about the wisdom of his invasion, but merely informed them that the bombers were on their way. He said this was an act of self-defense, justified by Article 51 of the United Nations Charter, but with the exception of Britain, nobody agreed that his bombers were a "proportionate" response by a major nation to this posturing sawdust dictator in Tripoli.

Did the president, for instance, consider the possible loss of life of his own pilots and bombardiers in their long journey from Britain, refueling their planes around France, Spain and Portugal into the Mediterranean, or the loss of life after they hit their target?

Or maybe more important, even if they hit the target and killed Colonel Khadafy, what would Reagan do if Libya invited the Russians to establish a naval base at Tripoli, which is precisely what the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the Pentagon have been trying to avoid for a generation?

So the Russians are delighted by this Reagan adventure. It has diverted world opinion from Moscow's military aggression to Washington's.

They have canceled the foreign ministers' meeting with the United States about another Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting., But that should not be taken seriously, for they will not confuse Khadafy with arms control, but will eventually set up another summit meeting with Reagan to discuss the central question of nuclear arms control.

Meanwhile, the president, glorying in his bombing "success" and the support of the American people, will have to try to work things out with the Congress and the allies, and wonder if public opinion, as measured by the polls, is a reliable guide.

"We must adopt the habit of thinking as plainly about the sovereign people," Walter Lippmann wrote 50 years ago, "as we do about the politicians they elect.

"It will not do to think poorly about the politicians, and to talk with bated breath about the voters. No more than kings before them should the people be hedged with divinity. Like all princes and rulers, like all sovereigns, they are ill-served by flattery and adulation ..."

ART BUCHWALD

Everybody wants to be an author!

It was Monday afternoon and everyone in the White House was bent over his desk hard at work — on his book. David Stockman had inspired the entire administration to pursue writing careers.

Art Buchwald

Harlequin looked up from his typewriter, "What's the Vice President's first name?" he yelled above the din.

"I think it's Harry — no, it's George," Stretcher said. "I envy you. I'm not even up to how we took Grenada."

"My publisher said to start with Libya and work backwards. Did you have any luck with the paperback rights yet?"

Stretcher shook his head. "No but CBS wants to see a typed manuscript. They're thinking of doing 'Behind Closed Doors II.'"

"Will you guys shut up?" Beerbaum said. "I'm writing the definitive chapter on Mike Deaver."

Harlequin was flabbergasted. "What right do you have to write about Deaver? You hardly knew the guy."

"I knew him well enough to buy a BMW from him."

Harlequin was red in the face. "Deaver belongs to me. I taught him everything he knows about acid rain."

"Okay, I'll give you Deaver for your book if you give me Meese for mine," Beerbaum said.

Harlequin thought it over and then said, "It's a deal. But from now on I'm going to write about anybody in the White House I want to."

The phone rang and Stretcher picked it up. "Aw gee, Mr. Regan, I'd love to do it but I'm working on my book 'Why Reagan's Roses Failed.' Is it really important?.... It's for the President to read to a joint session of Congress before we go into Nicaragua.... Wow, this is a moment in history. Can you tell me who exactly was in the Oval Office when the President decided?.... Don't yell, don't yell. I'll write the damn speech."

Stretcher hung up. "Wait until I do my observations on Regan. He'll be sorry he talked to me like that."

Dumbarton, who had been correcting galleys, looked up and said, "Was Bob McFarlane National Security Adviser before Al Haig or after him?"

"Haig was never Security Adviser. McFarlane took over from Clark who replaced Richard Allen. Haig was Secretary of State and he was succeeded by George Shultz."

"You're making a mistake including facts," Stretcher said. "The publishers don't want history. They want reputations wrecked, character assassinations and cutthroating of the first order. That's why they're offering us such large sums of money."

Harlequin said, "Have you been offered a large sum of money?"

"Not yet, but my agent tells me when they see my chapter on Pat Buchanan's tantrums I'm a sure 'Book of the Month.'"

The phone rang again. This time Beerbaum answered. "Yes, Mr. President. You would like to redo your entire fiscal budget?.... Yes sir, it can be done, but could it wait until tomorrow? You see I'm researching the upstairs-downstairs part of my book, and I've set up an interview this afternoon with the chef. While I've got you on the line, Mr. President, what do you eat for breakfast?.... Yessir, Mr. President, I'll get on the new fiscal policy right away."

Beerbaum said, "Was he burned up! I thought he was going to jump into the receiver with both feet."

Harlequin said, "You lucky dog. You can now write an entire chapter on how you were personally chewed out by Ronald Reagan."

"I wish he had fired me," Beerbaum said. "When you get canned by the President you sell a lot more books."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

April 23, 1564, is generally regarded as the birthdate of the English poet and dramatist William Shakespeare. He died on the same date 52 years later.

On this date:

In 1791, James Buchanan, 15th president of the United States, was born in Franklin County, Pa.

In 1896, the Vitascope system for projecting movies onto a screen was demonstrated at a music hall in New York City.

In 1940, about 200 people died in a dance hall fire in Natchez, Miss.

Thought for Today:

"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts..."
— From "As You Like It," by William Shakespeare

NATION IN BRIEF

Storm hits Idaho forest

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — High winds blasted the Boise National Forest, leveling enough trees to load 1,000 logging trucks, said officials who were trying to figure out whether to blame tornadoes for the damage.

High gusts hit Ada and Boise counties Tuesday evening, cutting through 1,500 acres of forest, pitching a trailer, injuring two people and leaving thousands without electricity.

More than 10,000 Idaho Power Co. customers in Boise were left without power, said company spokesman Larry Taylor. He said power was being restored but at least 500 customers would be without power until sometime today.

The National Forest Service planned an aerial survey today of the forest.

The National Weather Service planned to examine how trees fell trees to determine whether a tornado struck, said spokesman Gerry Burdwell.

The winds felled 6 million board feet of timber, estimated Dale Dufour, public affairs officer for the Boise National Forest. One logging truck hauls 5,000 to 6,000 board feet, he said.

Death row reforms sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer who says his client lost his sanity while on Florida's death row urged the Supreme Court on Tuesday to rule that the Constitution bars executions of all mentally incompetent people.

Public defender Richard Burr III of West Palm Beach, Fla., said such executions violate the Constitution's protections against cruel and unusual punishment.

All states, including Florida, have a policy against executing mentally incompetent people, but the court never has said such a policy is constitutionally required.

Also at issue is the validity of Florida's method for determining whether a condemned person is mentally competent.

Burr, representing Alvin Ford, said the constitutional right he wants the Supreme Court to recognize springs from "centuries of common law" that shielded from execution those people incapable of "facing up to the terror of death." Rehnquist.

Burr said everyone deserves enough time to reconcile their impending death.

Florida law "does not provide a sufficiently reliable process to judge competency," he said, adding that the state policy and the Constitution require such reliability.

Poll shows donors wary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans like the idea of donating organs at death, at least if it's someone else's organs and someone else's death, a new Gallup poll suggests.

Actually, a healthy 61 percent say they wouldn't mind if, unbeknownst to them, their organs were put to further use helping others after they, the original owners, had died.

But results of the poll, published Tuesday, indicated people don't really like to contemplate their own benevolence in advance — at least on this subject.

"Researchers say this reflects a natural tendency to avoid confronting one's own mortality," the sponsors said, adding that people with more formal education and higher income were most likely to want their own organs donated.
en't sure.

For the survey, the polling company said it interviewed a nationally representative sample of 1,560 adults between Feb. 21 and March 6. Potential sampling error was estimated at plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Passover 'hotline' offered

CHICAGO (AP) — Hundreds of Jews each year keep the unofficial Passover hotline at the Chicago Rabbinical Council ringing with questions on everything from Jean Nate bath oil to kosher cat chow.

With Passover beginning tonight, Rabbi Benjamin Shandolov said, calls to his office increase by the hundreds from people wanting to know what's kosher and what's not.

"I had one guy call me from L.A. wanting to know what to feed his cat," Shandolov said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "I told him to put him on a table-food diet — whatever food he has on the table that day and hope the cat likes it."

The holiday, which begins at sundown today and lasts eight days, celebrates the deliverance of the Jews from Egypt in Old Testament days.

Baptists seek support

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist conservatives, calling liberal teaching of the Bible "slop," rallied among pastors and church members to gain support heading into the denomination's convention this year.

Leaders of the conservative wing urged area Southern Baptist ministers at a luncheon Tuesday to call their Baptist friends to explain the issues facing the denomination and work to ensure that their churches send as many delegates to the June convention in Atlanta as they are allotted.

The leaders called for grass-roots support later Tuesday at a rally attended by nearly 300 people.

The two gatherings were the latest events in a seven-year squabble between liberals, usually called moderates, and conservatives, who are fighting for control of the 14.4 million-member denomination.

Soviet spy admits affair

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Soviet spy whose love affair with former FBI agent Richard W. Miller led to espionage charges broke her long silence, testifying that she also had an affair with another FBI agent who was never indicted.

Svetlana Ogorodnikov, telling her story for the first time in public, sighed frequently Tuesday and seemed to be fighting back tears as she named agent John Hunt as her former lover and denounced him as a liar.

Under questioning by defense attorney Joel Levine, Mrs. Ogorodnikov insisted she didn't help the Soviet Union through her affair with Hunt and said Hunt exaggerated her importance as an informant so his superiors would allow him to continue their liaisons.

Medicare changes could prove costly, warns GAO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Medicare claims are being paid more slowly under a Reagan administration strategy to save money, but the General Accounting Office warns that the delays hurt elderly recipients and could prove costly.

Under a long-range plan to reduce administrative costs, the Health Care Financing Administration increased the average time to process a Part B doctor's claim from 12.3 days in 1984 to 20.3 days this year, a GAO official told a House panel Tuesday.

The average backlog of unprocessed bills increased from 7.7 million to 13.7 million claims during the same period, Michael Zimmerman told the Ways and Means health subcommittee.

At the same time, administration officials told the panel they plan to increase the processing time for all Medicare claims to 30 days by Oct. 1. It took an average 15.6 days to process Part A claims for hospitalization at the end of the 1985 fiscal year.

"Given the fact that 6 percent of the Medicare Trust Fund revenues come from interest, moving to a 30-day cycle earns the trust fund approximately $130 million per year," said Kevin Moley, HCFA's acting administrator for operations.

Agency steps to save money "such as increasing the payment cycle, are sound financial management initiatives that should be continued even in a less constrained budget environment," he said.

But Zimmerman and representatives of insurance companies that process Medicare claims argued that increasing backlogs could produce some unexpected costs.

"Large backlogs and slower claims payment can increase program administrative costs because they can generate more beneficiary and provider inquiries as well as more claim resubmissions," he said. "This in turn, increases contractor workloads and can further exacerbate backlogs and slow down claims payments."

Luther E. Carter, vice president for Medicare administration for the Travelers Insurance Co., presented results of an insurance industry study of seven large companies that process Part B claims.

Lengthening the processing time to 18 days would produce a one-time savings of $5.8 million but would be offset by an annual cost of $18.2 million in extra processing expenses, he said.

Carter noted that the processing time as calculated by Medicare officials does not take into account the time doctors or recipients wait to be paid.

"With a 20-day backlog, you are talking about 38 to 40 days it actually takes to pay the claim," he said. With a 30-day processing period, "you're really talking 50 days it is going to take from the time that claim is mailed and payment is received," Carter said.

Zimmerman told the panel that bigger processing backlogs "could be particularly damaging to beneficiaries and providers when backlogs are already high." Bigger backlogs will also result in more erroneous claims payments, he added.

The low-pressure trough produced gusty south winds from 15 to 25 mph across the Panhandle, south plains and the western part of North Texas. Elsewhere in North Texas, winds were southeast to south at 5 to 15 mph and light and variable in the far west and Big Bend.

The National Weather Service said it should be windy with some blowing dust over the high plains this evening. Isolated thunderstorms were expected in the Panhandle and west part of North Texas tonight.

NATION

Snow fell in the East today while temperatures dipped to record lows in the South and the Midwest.

A high-pressure system over Indiana pushed early-morning temperatures into the 20s and 30s from the Great Lakes across the Ohio and Tennessee valleys to portions of the mid-Atlantic Coast.

Warm, southerly winds behind the high-pressure system warmed the Plains into the 50s to 60s.

Light snow was falling from southeastern New York state to eastern Pennsylvania and over the central Appalachians. As much as 3 inches covered parts of northeast Pennsylvania and about an inch of snow made travel hazardous in northwest New Jersey, prompting a travelers' advisory.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across southern New England and the mid-Atlantic Coast.

'Dogs licking chops as playoff berth clinched

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

When Robert Malacara pulled off his nifty six-to-three double play to seal Midland High's 6-5 victory over Odessa Permian Tuesday, the Bulldogs celebrated as though they'd clinched a playoff berth.

Little did they know, by the end of Tuesday's District 4-5A action, the 'Dogs would have the berth clinched, thanks to a 7-1 upset win by Abilene High over Big Spring.

With Permian and Big Spring losing, both third place teams are two games behind MHS with one to play. The Bulldogs play two games, one today at Abilene Cooper, then Saturday against Midland Lee.

Now MHS and coach Tim Whalen, assured of at least second place and the first playoff berth in Whalen's seven-season tenure, can travel to District 4-5A leading Abilene Cooper today with a chance to tie for the district title.

News of the Steers loss left the normally verbose Whalen at a loss for words — but not for long.

"I'm so happy I can't believe it. I just can't think of anything to say," said an elated Whalen. "I guess I'll have to go to the library and find some cute quips to say when you get to the playoffs... Or maybe I'll call (Midlnd Lee coach) Ernie Johnson, he's been to the playoffs enough.

"I guess that takes a little heat off us going to Abilene now. I'm just going to tell 'em to relax and play."

THE BULLDOGS played their part in the playoff-clinching afternoon in fine come-from-behind fashion, rallying from 3-1 and 4-3 deficits with playoff type clutch hitting and gutsy pitching from Kenny De La Garza.

Designated hitter Jaime Salazar came through with a pair of RBI hits, one in the first inning as MHS jumped out on top 1-0, then again in the fifth to key a three-run outburst to take the lead for good.

Whalen got some clutch hitting from unusual sources as well. Sophomore Eric Boyt came through with a two-out, two-run base hit in the fourth inning. Boyt's bounding single skipped through the box and into center field scoring Anthony Deande and Ricky Castaneda who had both singled to knot the game at three.

Permian, playing over the fact that it has now dropped five of six games in the second half of the season, rallied back to take the lead once again in its own half of the fourth inning.

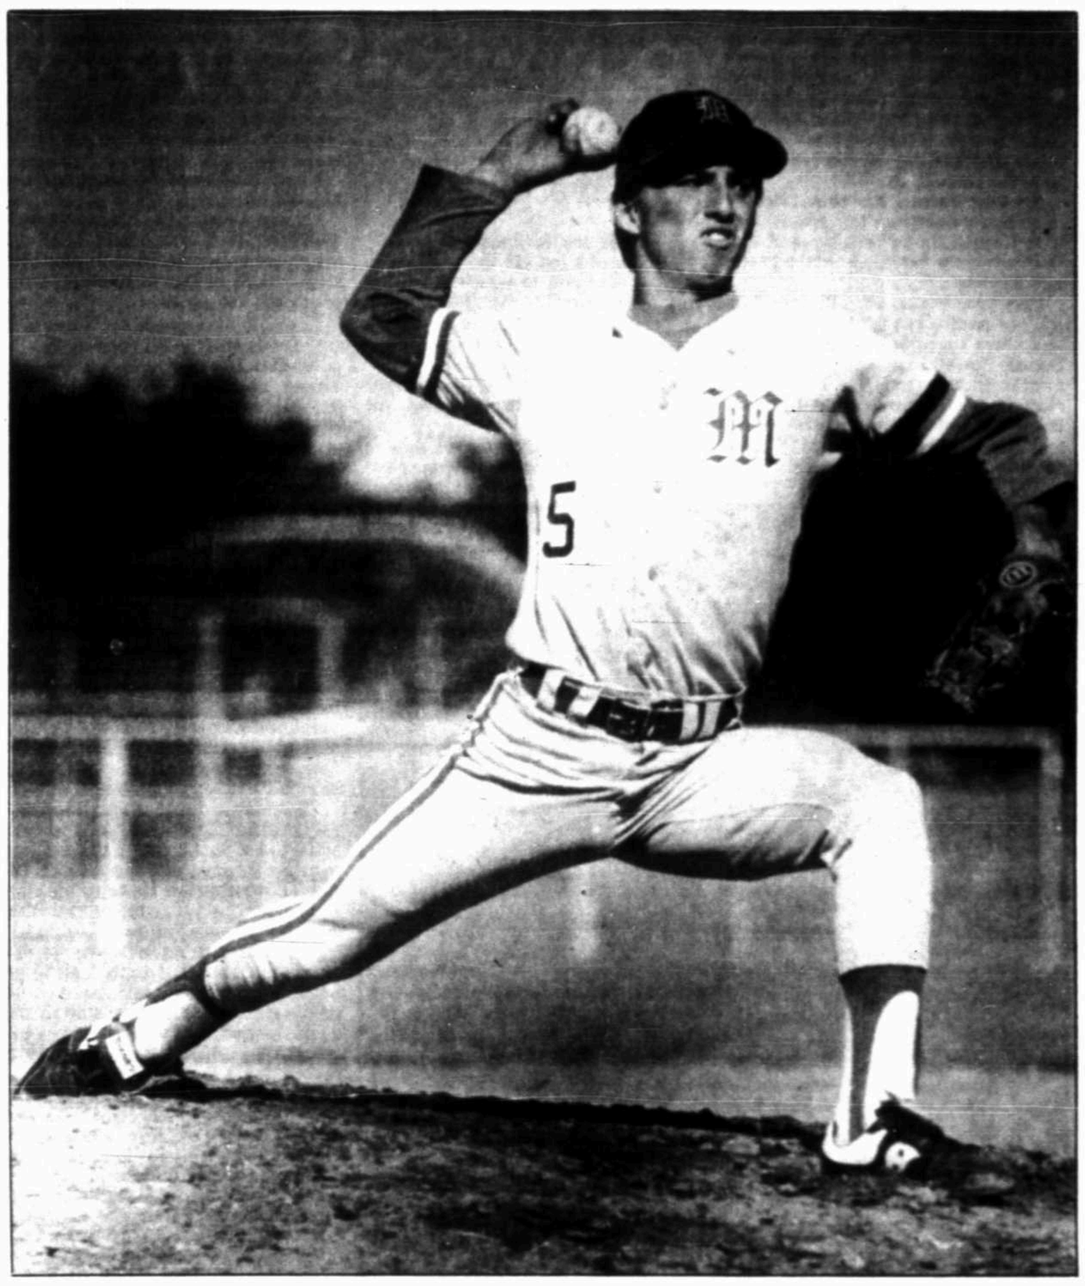

IN HIS first start of the district season, designated hitter Parker Hager ripped a double to the left field fence scoring Jeff Mudd for a 4-3 PHS lead. Parker was the Panthers' hitting star, knocking in three runs with a pair of sacrifice flies to go with his RBI-double.

The Bulldogs wasted no time in putting together the final, game-winning rally in their next at bat however. In the fifth, MHS' Tommy Yorkman touched starter and loser Brad Cornett for an infield hit and Jim Werner then battled Cornett for a walk before Permian coach Jimmy Davis had seen enough.

Reliever Larry Hill came on to retire De La Garza but not before both runners had advanced a base on a double steal. Then Salazar, the Bulldogs' version of Mr. Clutch, big-hopped a two-strike double down the line in left field plating the tying and go-ahead runs. with the three RBI, Salazar has now batted in 19 on the season.

"I was a little mad because I thought the second pitch was outside," Salazar said. "I knew I'd have to concentrate with two strikes on me. The next one was right on the outside corner so I had to swing. I didn't hit it very good but I concentrated, I think that was the key."

Numbers show Angels a different club in '86

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It's a new ballgame out at Angels Stadium this season, and manager Joe Maddon has the numbers to prove it.

For starters, the Angels, who make the turn on their 10-game homestand with five games with Beaumont beginning tonight at 7 p.m., are in first place at 9-6. Not for one game in the first year of the Angels' tenure in Midland could Maddon say that.

But wins are not the only numbers that have changed for Maddon's marauders in 1986.

A large turnover of players from one season to the next is always expected in Class AA minor league ball. Prospects move on, non-prospects are weeded out. But the 1986 Angels have developed a margin of stability, something that was missing when the club switched AA leagues from the Eastern (in Waterbury, Ct.) to the Tall City.

"We were kind of caught in-between pitcher-wise, last season," Maddon said. "Especially in pitching. The California club kept a lot of young arms that they thought were ready. It caught us in between."

While only six players on the roster today are holdovers from 1985's opening day roster, there are 10 that spent time with Midland in '85.

More importantly, 19 of the 1986 Angels (including two on the DL) have played organized ball at the AA level or higher. Subtract the injured players, and from a roster of 22, 77 percent have played at this level previously. Compare that to six in 1985, a measly 27 percent.

"We could have been caught in-between player-wise this season. But the Angels organization showed they're not averse to going outside of the organization for talent," Maddon continued.

With the release or optioning out of six of last season's pitching staff, it is easy to see that the organization is not averse to ridding itself of excess baggage either.

Gone are Scott Suehr, Spiro Psaltis, Doug McKenzie, Byron Kemmerling, Eddie Delzer and Scott Cannon. In their stead are new names like Dwayne Buice (Mexican League), Terry Clark (Arkansas of the Texas League), Vance Lovelace (San Antonio of the Texas League) and Rafael Pimental (Mexican League).

"These guys aren't just here as fillers," Maddon warns. "These are guys with talent that just did not have the opportunity to advance in other organizations. The Angels feel that these guys can all develop into players that can help them."

Hark! These Angels are truly heavenly

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Are these the same Angels who we have come to know and somewhat fear over the past year?

Even though many of the names are the same, this band of halo wearers look like strangers lost in a West Texas dust storm. Just assess the facts and ask if we know this heavenly crew.

Fact: The Angels defeated the Border City Devils by an 11-6 margin at Angel Stadium Tuesday night.

Fact: The Angels erased a five-run El Paso lead to turn the trick.

Fact: The bullpen pitched 3⅓ innings of scoreless relief.

Fact: The Angels win the series against El Paso by a 4-1 margin.

THEY SAY you can prove anything by facts and figures, but these are hard facts to ignore. A year ago the scenario would have been to erase a five-run deficit before losing 11-6. And just beating the Diablos once in a homestand was news to shout to the world. Did the Angels win four games against the Diablos all last year? Do we really have a baseball team on our hands?

This is only April, but this Midland crew owns a four-game winning streak. That was the longest streak of the year in 1985.

"Hopefully, this is a team that can have this kind of performance a lot this year," said first baseman James "Sap" Randall after delivering a single, homer, sacrifice fly and four RBI. "We have a lot of quality people on this team and I'm hoping that we can do this sort of thing a lot. We learned last year that you can never say die in this league."

Left fielder Brian Brady, whose fifth inning three-run homer tied the game at 6-6, said, "I think this is a very strong team. There is experience and talent here.

It would sound like a broken record if you go down the roster, but Midland manager Joe Maddon likes what he is seeing.

"I certainly hope this trend continues. Last year, we didn't have trouble scoring runs, but we couldn't stop the other team from scoring.

Pitching is the difference. When the pitching staff keeps us close, we have a chance," said Maddon.

Lee pounds out 12-3 win over OHS

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels won back a little of the respect they'd lost this season, taking out their frustrations on Odessa High for a 12-3 District 4-5A victory Tuesday at Lee Field.

The Rebels, after going to sleep for a few brief seconds in the top of the first inning, played strong defense behind starting pitcher Tuey Rankin and reliever Terry Baxter.

The offensive attack contributed its part with 14 hits for the 12 runs while Rankin and Baxter were pitching about as well as they have at any time this season.

In going 4⅓ innings, Rankin picked up his second victory of the season, allowing four hits, two walks and two runs (one earned) while striking out nine Bronchos.

Except for an infield hit in the top of the first, which turned into an unearned run when Jason Logi bounced a pickoff throw into center field and center fielder Billy Wagner let it sneak by to allow Paul Chavez to score, Rankin was untouchable the first three innings.

The senior righthander concluded the final home field start of his athletic career by striking out eight of the first 10 Bronchos he faced, including a stretch of six-in-a-row.

"MY PITCHING was better than I thought it would be this year," said Rankin, who has been Lee's most consistent Lee hurler. His one big problem has been a lack of time on the mound which has effected his stamina.

"It seems like whenever I throw around 80 pitches I start to wear out," said Rankin. "I threw 82 today."

Tuesday, Baxter was there to pick up where Rankin left off, also in strike 'em out fashion.

After giving up a homer to Joe Ray Jacques in the top of the sixth, Baxter struck out five straight and didn't allow another base runner.

Relieving is the role Baxter prefers when on the mound "because I know how the hitters are hitting during the game."

At least most of the hitters.

"I didn't know he was a curve ball hitter," said Baxter of the one bad pitch he threw, a hanging curve ball that Jacques crunched for a solo home run.

LEE COACH Ernie Johnson was happy with his pitchers' performances but admitted he was a bit surprised with 14 strikeouts.

"The pitchers were throwing hard but I don't know why they got so many strikeouts. But, the way they were pitching, it makes it easy to play defense. Our infield only had one assist. The pitchers either got the batter to hit in the air, over the fence or to srikeout."

ODESSA—Odessa College head basketball coach and former Midland College assistant Archie Myers resigned Tuesday amid rumors of improprieties in his handling of athletic funds.

'Kid brother' Giants pick on Dodgers

Associated Press

The little brother from San Francisco is beginning to resemble Lefty Grove and Walter Johnson. The big brother from Los Angeles is starting to look like a punching bag.

The Giants scored seven runs before the Dodgers could record an out in the first inning Tuesday en route to a 10-3 romp which kept San Francisco in firs. place in the National League West. The Dodgers, winners of the West last year, are last at 4-11.

"It's kind of like slapping your big brother in the face," Giants pitcher Krukow said. "I think this is showing other teams in our division that they have to respect us."

Krukow earned his third victory in as many decisions this season, but it was the Giants' hitting and the Dodgers' poor pitching that was the key Tuesday.

"Let's put it this way, I'm not happy, not happy at all," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said after starter Dennis Powell allowed four hits and a walk in the first five batters, including a two-run double by Chili Davis. "We're making every pitcher look like Lefty Grove and Walter Johnson."

NL Roundup

Comparing every pitcher to Hall-of-Famers Grove and Johnson may be an exaggeration, but Lasorda's anger is well placed. The Dodgers are batting .200 as a team.

Carlos Diaz wasn't anything like Grove or Johnson in relief of Powell, 0-3. He allowed three hits and walked one before Dan Gladden — the 10th batter in the inning — hit into a run-scoring force out for the Giants first out of the game.

The Giants collected seven hits, walked twice and capitalized on two Dodgers errors in the seven-run inning.

Astros 3, Braves 2

Alan Ashby led off the ninth with a solo home run to win it for Houston. Ashby hit a 2-2 pitch from reliever Duane Ward, 0-1, over the right field fence for his third homer of the season.

A two-run double by Craig Reynolds in the seventh had tied the game.

Mets 7, Pirates 1

On a night suited for indoor sports but certainly not for baseball, the Mets and Pirates sloshed through a steady rain. The Mets were better at it, winning behind Bob Ojeda's first National League victory. Gary Carter and Keith Hernandez had two RBI apiece and Ray Knight homered for host New York.

Ojeda joined the Mets in the off-season in a trade with the Boston Red Sox.

"Ojeda was just outstanding," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "He hadn't thrown that many pitches, but with the 50-minute rain delay and once he had lost the shutout, I wasn't concerned with him finishing."

Roger McDowell did that for the Mets.

"It was a miserable night," Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said. "But the umpires made a decision to play and stayed with it. It was miserable for everyone all night."

Expos 8, Phillies 2

Andre Dawson hit his fourth homer in his last four games, and Tim Raines had a solo shot as Montreal sent the Phillies to their fifth straight loss.

Dawson homered in the third inning to tie the game 2-2. Hubie Brooks led off the Expo fourth with a double and was doubled home by Tim Wallach, who moved to third when Luis Aguayo booted Vance Law's ground ball, and scored on Raines' single to right. Mitch Webster then singled for a 5-2 lead to finish Philadelphia starter Charles Hudson.

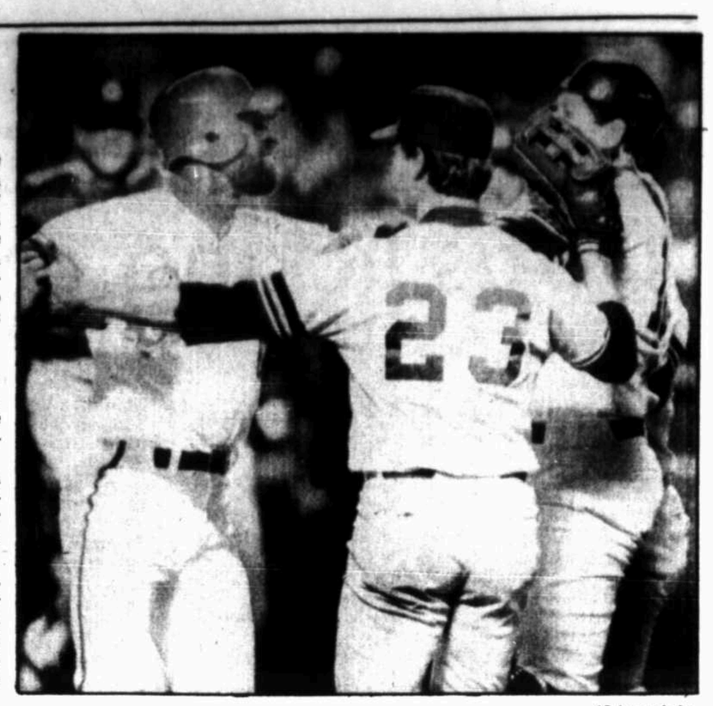

Cubs 3, Cardinals 2

After the Cardinals tied the game with a pair of runs with two out in the ninth, the host Cubs won it in the bottom half on Ryne Sandberg's sacrifice fly.

Clint Hurdle's pinch-hit two-run triple tied it and took St. Louis starter John Tudor off the hook. Tudor has won 14 straight regular-season games.

Pat Perry, who relieved Tudor, walked Bob Dernier to start the bottom of the ninth and wild-pitched him to second. With Todd Worrell pitching, Manny Trillo bunted, but Dernier beat catcher Mike Heath's throw to third.

Pinch-hitter Thad Bosley was intentionally walked, Dernier was forced at the plate on Davey Lopes' grounder to shortstop, then Sandberg lifted a fly to center to win it.

Witt heats up cold Toronto night

Associated Press

TORONTO (AP) — Once he'd beaten the elements, silenced the Toronto Blue Jays' bats and watched his teammates score 10 runs, rookie Texas right-hander Bobby Witt had a firm grip on his first professional baseball victory.

"Without a doubt, that's the coldest weather I've ever pitched in," Witt said after hurling a three-hitter over six innings in bone-chilling, 34-degree weather en route to his first pro victory, a 10-1 rout of the Blue Jays on Tuesday night.

"It's easy to pitch when you're ahead like that, but I still had to go out and prove to myself that I could throw strikes," said Witt, who threw a club-record four wild pitches in his last outing but also struck out 10, a record for a Ranger rookie.

Witt, 1-0, overcame four walks and one wild pitch (he had four in his last game) to strike out five. The 21-year-old Witt was winless in 13 previous pro appearances and 10 starts.

"Maybe now people will stop asking me when it's going to happen," said Witt, invited to spring training this year as a non-roster player after posting an 0-6 record with Class AA Tulsa of the Texas League in 1985. "It's just a real good feeling.

"Now I can go out and concentrate on my next start."

Texas pounded out 12 hits against Toronto starter Jim Clancy, 1-1, and reliever Steve Davis, but rookie right-hander Don Gordon pitched three hitless innings for Toronto to provide the only bright spot for the club.

The Rangers' attack was led by Gary Ward, who drove in four runs with a two-run single and a two-run homer. Pete Incaviglia, with his third of the year, Steve Buechele with his fourth and Pete O'Brien with his fourth also homered.

AL Roundup

Twins 7, Mariners 1

At Seattle, Mark Salas hit a bases-loaded triple in the seventh inning and a home run in the ninth as Minnesota sent Seattle to its sixth consecutive defeat.

Mike Smithson, 2-2, allowed just four hits, walked one, and struck out seven as he picked up his third complete game in four starts for the Twins.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 4

Detroit lost right fielder Kirk Gibson for four to six weeks with a severe ligament sprain then they they dropped a 6-4 decision to the Boston Red Sox as Don Baylor, Rich Gedman and Tony Armas hit homers off Jack Morris, 2-2, at Fenway Park.

In the second inning Gibson walked and was about to try a steal when Roger Clemens, 3-0, tried to pick him off first.

He got back to the base safely then fell to the infield dirt.

Dr. David Collon, the team's orthopedic consultant, said Gibson would be sidelined from four to six weeks.

The Tigers planned to put Gibson on the disabled list, but Manager Sparky Anderson said there was no rush to replace him on the roster because the team has a day off Thursday after playing Boston tonight.

Yankees 5, Royals 1

At Kansas City, New York rookie Bob Tewksbury allowed five hits over 7 1-3 innings as the Yankees defeated Kansas City in a game interrupted by an eighth-inning brawl. Tewksbury, 2-1, had three strikeouts and only one walk in pitching the Yankees to their ninth victory in 13 games, their best start since 1976.

The right-hander was leading 5-1 with one out in the Royal eighth. Jorge Orta, following an RBI triple, was on third when Tewksbury hit Willie Wilson on the right elbow. Wilson, waving his arms as if to ask "why me?", walked toward the mound, but was intercepted by Yankee catcher Ron Hassey. Wilson and Hassey jawed for a moment, then began pushing and shoving and the infield suddenly was a mass of Yankees and Royals.

Orioles 5, Indians 2

At Cleveland, Cal Ripken and Larry Sheets homered off Phil Niekro, and Ken Dixon scattered seven hits over 8 1-3 innings in near-freezing temperatures as Baltimore defeated Cleveland.

The right-handed Dixon, 2-0, struck out seven and walk one. Don Aase came on in the ninth to earn his fourth save. Niekro fell to 1-2 since joining the Indians on waivers from the Yankees on April 3.

"One good thing about the cold weather is I don't get sore after I pitch," Dixon said. "Your muscles don't stretch out as much, so you don't get as stiff the next day."

White Sox 5, Brewers 4

At Milwaukee, Harold Baines hit a three-run homer with two outs in the seventh inning to lift Chicago over Milwaukee. The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for the White Sox.

Baines' homer came off reliever Danny Darwin, who allowed 34 homers last season to tie for the AL lead.

"He's as good a hitter as anyone in the league," Chicago Manager Tony La Russa said of Baines. "It's not an ideal weather to hit (42 degrees at game time), but look what he did."

Angels 5, A's 1

At Anaheim, Doug DeCinces' two-run homer and solo shots by Dick Schofield and Wally Joyner backed Kirk McCaskill's two-hitter and 12 strikeouts as California defeated Oakland. In halting Oakland's four-game winning streak, the Angels moved past the A's atop the AL West standings and lead by a half-game.

"I don't think I'm a 12-strikeout pitcher every time, but it shows me that if I can get my three pitches over the plate, I can strike some people out," McCaskill said.

lege (Aug. 24). Due to the time element involved, it has not been determined if any misappropration of funds has occurred."

A statement read by Myers' lawyer, Marc May, said, "This resignation is not to be construed as an admission of misappropriation of funds. There has been a disagreement between Odessa College and Mr. Myers concerning expenditure of funds. As a result, Mr. Myers feels a loss of confidence and felt it in his best interest to resign."

OC officials said a search for a replacement would begin immediately.

Several of Myers' players have said confidentially that Myers had the players sign over to him meal checks during holiday breaks.

Shreveport wins 17-inning affair

Associated Press

Shreveport's Charlie Hayes batted a three-run homer to help the Captains end a 17-inning marathon with a 7-5 victory over Tulsa in Texas League baseball action.

Alan Cockrell singled in the bottom of the inning and was sacrificed to second by Steve Miller. Deron McCue was then hit with a pitch and Hayes hit his homer to end the 5-hour, 20-minute contest.

In other league play Tuesday, Beaumont whipped San Antonio 6-3, Midland defeated El Paso 11-6 and Jackson edged Arkansas 6-4.

Combined with the Arkansas loss, Shreveport pulled one-and-a-half games in front of Arkansas in the Eastern Division race at 10-3.

Tulsa scored in the top of the 17th on a two-out RBI single by Tony Triplett to break a 4-4 deadlock before Hayes lashed his game-winning homer.

Stuart Tate, 2-0, was credited with the win as the fourth Captains' pitcher. Bill Couchee, 0-1, was the loser for the Drillers.

Golden Gators pitcher Mike McClain allowed one run and five hits over seven innings. McClain drove in three runs on a double and a single off Dodgers' starter and loser Barry Wohler, 1-2.

It was San Antonio's third straight loss to Beaumont. The win improved McClain's season mark to 2-1.

San Antonio, trailing 5-1 going into the eighth inning, scored two runs after Dodgers' first baseman Chris Chapman drove in Alonzo Tellez and Mike Devereaux with a triple.

The Gators called in relief pitcher Rusty Ford, who worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the eighth and struck out the side in the ninth to earn his fifth save of the seasn.

The Gators, who begin a five-game stand in Midland tonight, are one game behind the Western Division leading Angels at 8-7.

In Jackson, the Mets' Paul Hertzler cracked a three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to give Jackson the victory.

Mike Santiago, 2-0, was the winner and Jim Adamzcazk was credited with his second save. Joe Magrane, 2-1, took the loss.

The Mets had nine hits and committed four errors. The Travelers got 10 hits and committed one error.

For the slow starting Mets it was just their fourth win of the season, moving them five-and-a-half games behind Shreveport.

Robidoux lives up to big league name

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Many rookies are burdened with living up to comparisons. Milwaukee first baseman Billy Jo Robidoux must live up to his name.

Public address announcer Bob Betts says it using an unmistakable cadence, slowly rolling the syllables and stretching the "oh" until it reverberates in Milwaukee County Stadium.

Sports writers couldn't wait to use it in their stories when the stocky player joined the Brewers last September.

"That's a big league name, a major league name," said Dan Duquette, the Brewers' scouting coordinator. "That's what everybody liked about him when we drafted him" in 1982.

The Brewers also liked Robidoux's hitting, enough to jump him from their Texas League Class AA club in El Pasoto the big time.

Asked what impressed him most about the 22-year-old, farm director Bruce Manno said, "His swing. He's very consistent. He doesn't change his swing."

AND SO far, the Brewers haven't changed their mind about Billy Jo.

"He's doing everything I thought he could," Manager George Bamberger said.

"He's doing a helluva job," said Brewers batting coach Frank Howard. "He has all the prerequisites to be a big-league hitter. He has good balance, a short swing. He knows the strike zone."

Robidoux was batting .351, with 13 hits and eight runs batted in through the first 11 games of the season.

"His style, basically, is line drive," Howard said. "But as he gets stronger, older, I can see him conceivably hitting 20 home runs in the big leagues some day."

Just being a big leaguer is a kick in itself for the left-handed hitter from the western Massachusetts mill town of Ware.

"Millions and millions of kids dream of playing in the big leagues," he said. "I was one of those millions. I dreamed of playing in the big leagues and things like that and now, I finally get my chance.

"The only thing I can hope for is that I stay a long time and be consistent," he said.

LAST SEASON at El Paso, Robidoux led the Texas League in batting average (.342), hits (176), doubles (46) and RBI (132). He was named the league's most valuable player.

"I always had a good average," he said. "I don't strike out a lot. Most of the time, (the pitchers) are going to make one mistake."

In the Brewers' front office, talk of Robidoux's hitting precedes discussion of his fielding.

He had two errors in starting the Brewers' first 11 games at first base. Robidoux likely will stay there at least until veteran Cecil Cooper, currently a designated hitter, fully recovers from off-season elbow surgery.

"I think he's going to be adequate," Manno said. "I think he will improve as he plays it."

Scout Tom Bourque saw Robidoux's hitting ability early, while the youngster played third base at Ware High School.

HIS SCOUTING report was remarkably accurate.

Bourque described a quick bat driven by powerful forearms and legs, which also helped Robidoux on the football field and basketball court.

"I can see him in a major league uniform without too much imagination," Bourque wrote.

But Robidoux wasn't swamped with offers and didn't get picked until the fifth round of the June 1982 free-agent draft.

"He didn't get a lot of exposure," Duquette said. "Not a lot of people scouted him."

NBA Roundup

Winning in the playoffs, when teams play each other in consecutive games instead of sporadically, often becomes a matter of problem-solving.

The Boston Celtics' problem was Michael Jordan, the Milwaukee Bucks' problem was 73 first-half points by the New Jersey Nets and the Denver Nuggets problem was an injury to center Wayne Cooper. All three teams found the solutions they needed Tuesday night, and joined Philadelphia, Houston and Detroit in the victory column.

Boston, which won the first two games of the best-of-five series against Chicago despite 49 and a playoff-record 63 points by Jordan, held him to 19 in Game 3, while Kevin McHale scored 31 in a 122-104 Celtics victory that moved them into the second round.

New Jersey shot 65 percent from the field and surpassed its playoff scoring record for a half in taking a 73-55 lead at halftime, but Milwaukee held New Jersey to 40 points and 36.1 percent shooting in the second half. The Bucks' 118-113 victory also completed a series sweep.

Blair Rasmussen, starting in place of Cooper, scored a career-high 26 points, 11 more than his previous best, leading the Nuggets to a 115-104 victory over Portland, giving Denver a 2-1 lead.

Tonight, Los Angeles is at San Antonio and Dallas at Utah. The Mavericks and Lakers both lead 2-0.

Rockets 113, Kings 98

Ralph Sampson and Lewis Lloyd scored 25 points each, leading Houston into the second round with a victory over Sacramento.

The Kings, who had won 11 consecutive games at home on Tuesday nights, wasted a 33-point performance by Eddie Johnson.

Sacramento led briefly in the first half until a 10-foot jumper by Lloyd put the Rockets up 29-28 with 10:30 left in the second quarter, and Houston never trailed again.

Sampson scored 11 of the Rockets' 17 points during a rally that gave them a 40-32 lead with 7:57 left in the first half. The Rockets shot 88.9 percent from the floor, while the Kings hit 33.8 percent during the run.

Celtics 122, Bulls 104

Boston, which never trailed, got 23 points from McHale in building a 66-52 at the half before Chicago cut the deficit to 72-61. The Celtics responded with 15 consecutive points to turn the game into a rout.

The outcome was decided long before Jordan, who scored just five points after the first quarter, fouled out with 5½ minutes left. He received a standing ovation from the Chicago Stadium crowd.

"It seemed like every time I got the ball, before I could make a move, they would send someone else at me," Jordan said of the Celtics' double-teaming tactics.

"Our game plan was to minimize his scoring opportunities and the best way to do it was to double up on Jordan and push the ball up court," Celtics Coach K. C. Jones said.

Bird, who scored 19 for the Celtics, said he never thought one man could beat a team in the NBA, but "Michael nearly did. We didn't want him to get 40 or 50 points so that they could get back into the game."

Danny Ainge finished with 20 points for the Celtics, while John Paxson and Dave Corzine led Chicago with 23 and 22 points, respectively.

Bucks 118, Nets 113

Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, after watching New Jersey shoot 44.4 percent in the first two games of the series, couldn't believe what happened in the first half of Game 3.

"It didn't look good for us," Nelson said of the 18-point halftime deficit. "I was shocked. I thought we would come out like tigers, but it just shows you can't read your team."

Milwaukee outscored the Nets 36-22 in the third period to draw within 95-91, then took the lead down the stretch behind key plays from Terry Cummings and Paul Pressey.

"Defense was really the key for us," said Pressey, who scored 22 points. "We got back in the game in the third period, but we didn't anticipate making up that much ground that fast."

After drawing within a point of the lead six times in the fourth quarter, Milwaukee took a 112-110 lead with 2:28 to play when Pressey converted a steal into a layup and free throw. New Jersey got even on two free throws before Cummings, who had 23 points and 11 rebounds, put the Bucks on top to stay with a baseline jumper with 52 seconds left.

Otis Birdsong paced the Nets with 28 points and Buck Williams had 25. Each scored 18 points in the first half as New Jersey surpassed its previous first-half playoff scoring mark of 69 points.

Nuggets 115, Trail Blazers 104

Rasmussen, who averaged three points per game during the season and played fewer minutes than any other first-round draft pick, was the difference for Denver against Portland.

"They weren't too worried about me as a scorer because I really haven't done anything all year," the 7-foot Rasmussen said. "I guess I was just in the right place at the right time."

The Nuggets led by as many as 12 points in the third period, but the Trail Blazers rallied to tie the score. Rasmussen then hit a three-point play to put Denver on top for good at 94-91 with 4:34 to play.

Alex English added 24 points for the Nuggets, while Kiki Vandeweghe topped Portland with 24.

Pistons 106, Hawks 97

Kelly Tripucka scored a game-high 33 points as Detroit stayed alive with a home victory after the Hawks won the first two games in Atlanta.

Tripucka hit 10 points during a 13-4 streak as the Pistons built a 31-22 advantage after one quarter. They pulled away to lead by as many as 18 before the Hawks cut into the deficit.

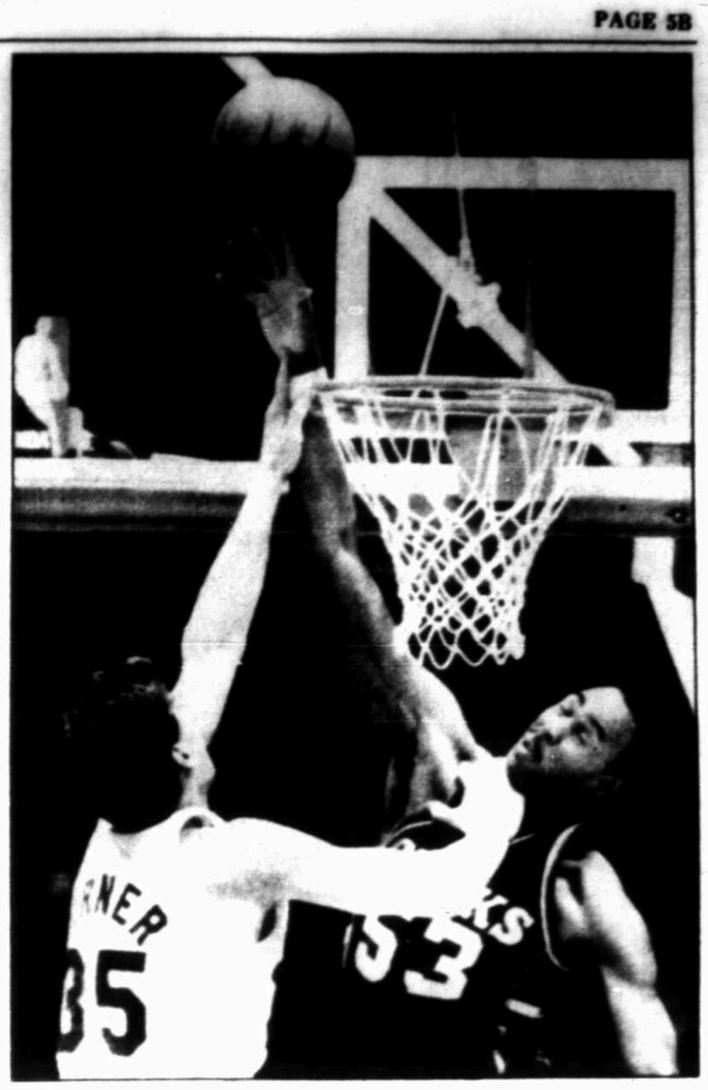

Dominique Wilkins, who scored 50 points in Atlanta's second-game victory, was held to 21 Tuesday night. Glenn Rivers had 20 points for the Hawks and Isiah Thomas added 20 points for the Pistons.

76ers 91, Bullets 86

Sedale Threatt scored eight points and Julius Erving and Bobby Jones added six apiece during a 26-6 streak that helped Philadelphia overcome a 13-point Washington lead.

The Bullets, who overcame a 17-point deficit with an 18-0 streak in Game 1, cut a 10-point deficit to 89-86 with 16 seconds remaining with a 7-0 streak, five of them by Gus Williams, who finished with 28 points. But Erving sank two free throws with 11 seconds left to blunt the comeback.

Erving finished with 22 points, Maurice Cheeks 21 and Threatt 16.

Capitals 'role player' trips NY Rangers, 6-3

NHL Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — As a "role player," John Barrett is thoroughly enjoying his part with the Washington Capitals these days.

Not normally accustomed to scoring goals from his defensive position, Barrett had two in Monday night's 6-3 victory that gave the Capitals a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Patrick Division final over the New York Rangers. Game 4 will be played tonight in Madison Square Garden, one of two Stanley Cup playoff games on tap. In the other, Montreal plays at Hartford holding a 2-1 lead in the Adams Division final.

Just last month, Barrett was in a "depressed situation" as a member of the Detroit Red Wings, a team with the worst record in the league that was obviously going nowhere.

But he was acquired by Washington in a trade along with Greg Smith that turned his career in a new direction.

SMYTHE DIVISION
Flames 3, Oilers 2

At Calgary, Joel Otto scored the go-ahead goal at 7:32 of the third period to lead Calgary past Edmonton, the two-time Stanley Cup champion. The Flames now lead the best of seven series, 2-1.

Otto passed to Jamie Macoun and then took the puck back in front of Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr before scoring the game-winner.

The Flames began the third period with a 2-1 lead, but lost it when Glenn Anderson's backhand shot beat rookie Calgary goalie Mike Vernon.

In the first period, Paul Reinhart scored first for Calgary and then Wayne Gratzky countered for Edmonton, both on power-play goals. Calgary went ahead midway through the second period on Colin Patterson's goal.

NORRIS DIVISION
Maple Leafs 5, Blues 2

At Toronto, Wendel Clark, Rick Vaive and Russ Courtnall all scored within one minute and 42 seconds late in the third period to lead the Maple Leafs over the Blues. Toronto holds a 2-1 edge in the best of seven series.

The game was tied 1-1 after one period on goals by Doug Gilmour for St. Louis and Vaive for Toronto. Greg Paslawski put the Blues on top with the only goal of the second period, then Toronto's Tom Fergus tied it 2-2 with a power-play goal 40 seconds into the third period.

Clark then jammed the puck behind Blues goaltender Rick Wamsley at 13:49 of the third period to give the Maple Leafs their first lead of the night.

Without Dantley, Jazz still must go on

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah scoring star Adrian Dantley remained hospitalized with back spasms today as the Jazz, down 2-0 in their best-of-five NBA series with Dallas, host the Mavericks tonight in the Salt Palace.

Despite Dantley's absence, the Jazz played well in the first two games, said Utah Coach Frank Layden.

"We came up short, but we certainly played very good basketball compared to some of the other games in the playoffs," Layden said during a rally at a downtown mall Tuesday in which the coach led his players in a ceremonial ripping of Mavericks' towels.

If Dallas wins tonight, the Mavericks will schedule a series with the winner of the San Antonio-Los Angeles Lakers series. If Utah wins, the Jazz will host Dallas again Friday. Another Jazz victory would force a fifth game Sunday in Dallas.

Without Dantley, who finished the regular season as the second-leading scorer in the NBA to Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, averaging 29.8 points a game, Utah forward Karl Malone, a strong candidate for rookie of the year, has come through with a 27-point average, 12 points above his regular season total.

"I wouldn't say they're depending on me, but if the opportunity presents itself I'll take it," Malone said of Dantley's absence. "Someone has to step forward and take up the scoring slack, and they (his shots) have all been falling in all right."

MALONE, NAMED Tuesday to the NBA's All-Rookie team, said of tonight's game: "We know if we lose we pack our suits, we put 'em in mothballs for the next year. So everybody's going to come out fired up and ready to play."

Layden said that filling in for Dantley and keeping the suits out of mothballs for a while would take a team effort, not just Malone's.

"I don't think he can take Dantley's place. Everyone on the team has to take up a little bit of the slack. There's no question we're losing 30 points a game without Dantley, he said.

Nevertheless, Layden said he was not displeased with his club's playoff performance, and he had praise for Dallas, which posted wins of 101-93 last Friday and 113-106 on Sunday.

"I think they're playing very well, but we had two games down to the wire. I feel we're playing very well, too," he said.

Layden said he expected few changes for tonight's game.

"We can't change at this stage. It's just too late. We have to play solid basketball — rebounds, shot selection, good defense, the whole thing," he said.

NOR WOULD Layden speculate about a different outcome in the first two games had Dantley been healthy. "I can't answer that. I don't know. I think it wouldn't be fair. We don't know what they (the Mavericks) would've done differently," he said.

In the first two games Dallas was outscored from the field by 21 points, but the Mavericks made 65 free throws to 29 for Utah in 89 percent shooting from the line.

As for Utah's chances for winning three in a row, Layden acknowledged the odds were heavily against the Jazz.

ANGELS

The Angels got off to a rough start as El Paso touched Midland starter Don Timberlake for four runs, two of which were unearned. The big blow was a two-run homer from Jesus Alfaro, who wishes he could bat against Timberlake every day.

Alfaro has 10 hits in 15 at bats in his career against Timberlake and eight RBI. He got three of those hits Tuesday and drove home three runs.

"On the surface, it may look like Timber didn't have a good outing because he gave up the homer, but he also had a couple of errors behind him. He settled down and kept us in the game, despite the fact that he worked up an awesome blister under a finger nail on his pitching hand.

"Then (Vance) Lovelace comes in and gets us out of a jam in the sixth with the score tied. I think that was the turning point of the night."

OTHERS MIGHT say that Midland's five-run fifth was the turning point. Randall had hit his second homer of the year in the fourth to cut the margin to 5-1, but El Paso answered with a run in the top of the fifth for another five-run lead.

The Angels answered by loading the bases off of El Paso starter Tim Crews with Randall at the plate. Another homer? A possible grand slam?

"I was thinking about a slam and got some good pitches that I didn't come up with," said Randall. "I was fortunate to get one run home on the fly ball, but it turned out like a grand slam."

That's because Brady followed with his first extra base hit of the year, a three-run rocket to right field.

"The El Paso pitchers were trying to pitch the lefties inside with the wind blowing out to left. I just got hold of one," said Brady.

Maddon answered, "Brian is one of the hardest workers we have. He had a good spring training and was hitting the ball hard. Then he was injured for a while, but that shot he hit in the fifth was a real jolt. I don't think we hit a homer to right all last year with the wind blowing out to left. That was right in the teeth of the wind."

The victory came in the seventh when Raul Tovar doubled to left center and scored on Billie Merrifield's single to left. Merrifield had another three-hit night and has hit safely in all but one of the Angels' games this year.

Icing was put on the cake with four unearned runs in the eighth inning off of reliever Dave Stapleton. Mark McLemore, Tovar and Randall all drove in runs after a couple of El Paso errors paved the way.

That gave Midland reliever Dwayne Buice his second victory of the year. Buice pitched 2⅓ innings of scoreless relief. He did walk three batters, but he also had three strikeouts and an impossible catch by Tover against the boards in center to keep Alfaro from notching his fourth hit of the night.

McLemore, Tovar and Merrifield all had three hits in the 14-hit attack. Only designated hitter Kevin King and right fielder Glen Walker failed to get a safety.

ANGEL DUST: Midland pitcher Julian Gonzales, who has been on the disabled list, is to be activated today and sent to AAA Edmonton...The Angels begin a five-game stand with Beaumont at Angel Stadium today at 7 p.m. with Terry Clark (1-0) scheduled to be on the mound for Midland...One obvious improvement for the Angels this year is Brady in left field. He made three sliding, shoe-string stabs against El Paso Tuesday. The Angels used a lot of players in left field last year...Tovar's catch of Alfaro's blast in the ninth inning would have made any Baseball Week flim...Tuesday's victory gives the Angels a 9-6 record and a one game lead in the Texas League West over Beaumont. After 15 games a year ago, the Angels were already buried in last place...

VETS

Also signed as free agents were Kevin King, Glen Walker and Raul Tovar.

Joining Midland veterans Mark McLemore, Sap Randall, Billie Merrifield and catchers David Heath and Doug Davis, it is an experienced nucleus.

"It's a different feeling around the clubhouse this year," Maddon admitted. "It's kind of an intangible thing, but these guys aren't going to be intimidated or discouraged."

So far, that clubhouse atmosphere has translated into on the field performance, something Maddon hopes can continue for the rest of the summer.

LEE

Also, Durian Jenkins, Danny Jordan and Lance McClure collected a pair of hits with McClure's two-RBI single in the first providing the game winning RBI.

Rankin, who has been in a long slump, went 1 for 2 to end the dry spell with a line drive to right field.

"I finally broke out of my slump," said Rankin after the game. He also commented on his lack of infield hits this season. "Last year I beat out a bunch of infield hits but this year it seems I'm hitting the ball hard right at people."

Rankin was also victimized by a home run, giving up a solo shot to Jeff Wright in the fifth inning.

At the plate, the Rebels were led by the hitting of Logi with a 3-for-4 performance for a double, two RBI and two runs scored.

WITH THE win, Lee improves to 12-12 overall, 5-8 in 4-5A play and needs a victory Saturday over Midland High to break .500 on the year.

Midland High, on the other hand, would like to use Lee as a spring board into the playoffs, a berth the Bulldogs clinched Tuesday with a 6-5 win over Odessa Permian combined with a 7-1 Abilene High win over Big Spring.

But, all reasoning aside, it's still Midland Lee vs. Midland High and that almost always means a tough day at the ball park.

"It's all we've got left to play for now," said Rankin. "There's not much else you can say about it. It's probably the game that will stick in our minds later on."

"It's always a tough game," added Baxter. "They're always tough for us. Any one of their players can control the game."

And, from Johnson, who will likely start a heavy senior lineup, "They'll be awfully hard to beat but I've got a feeling we're going to play some pretty good ball against them. We may not win, but we'll keep it close."

Eagles upend Steers; playoff dream is over

From Staff Reports

4-5A Roundup

Abilene High pitcher Victor Rodriquez struck out 11 Steers Tuesday, gave up four hits and went on to dash the playoff hopes of Big Spring with a 7-1 District 4-5A victory.

Rodriquez went the distance in recording the victory and allowed Big Spring's only run in the third inning.

Meanwhile, the Eagle bats drove in solo runs in the first, third and fourth innings and two runs in the second and seventh to build a comfortable lead.

The AHS victory left the Steers with no chance to catch second place Midland High in the battle for the second and final playoff berth. The Bulldogs knocked off Odessa Permian Tuesday, 6-5, to oust the only other playoff contender.

Abilene Cooper still leads the league with a 10-2 record while MHS follows at 9-3 and Permian and Big Spring at 7-6.

FOR COOPER, it was a tough time at home against San Angelo as the Cougars had to duke it out for an 8-6 win over the Bobcats.

San Angelo jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the top of the second inning only to trail 6-4 going into the third. The Bobcats pulled within one run in the third and fourth frames but gave the tally back in the bottom of each inning to keep the two-run Cooper lead intact.

David Tollison, the winning pitcher with a 9-2 record, helped his own cause with a grand slam home run in the bottom of the second.

Chris Moore also hit a homer for the Cougars while losing pitcher Jim Childress connected for one for San Angelo.

The Cooper and Midland High wins set up a big rainout makeup game today in Abilene. Midland High is the only team that can keep Cooper from claiming its third straight 4-5A title.

BULLDOGS

DE LA GARZA, WHO went the distance to go 10-4, 8-2 in district, struggled all afternoon with the Panther hitters, but managed to come through with the right pitches at the right times. De La Garza had been ill all Monday with an upset stomach and was still not fully recovered.

But the crafty righthander was able to spread seven hits and five walks carefully enough to avoid serious trouble.

"That was a great performance by Kenny today," Whalen boasted. "I had to send home early yesterday he was feeling so bad. He usually does settle down in later innings when he gets in a groove and feels more comfortable.

"He's one of the best pitchers I've had here, not because he throws that great, but because he's such a great competitor."

BULLDOG NOTES: Taking a peek up north for possible playoff opponents for the Bulldogs, Lubbock Monterey is once again the front runner in District 3-5A. The Plainsmen have not dropped a game since the Tournament of Champions and have moved into the top 10 in the state.

Monterey is 11-0, 20-3, with five district games yet to play. Monterey lost twice in the TofC, to MHS and to Midland Lee. Lee also beat them in pre-district play.

Also in the race in 3-5A is Amarillo High at 9-2, 17-2, and Hereford, 6-5, 13-8....

Midland High, don't forget, has knocked off three of the state's top 10 teams in No. 9 Monterey, No. 6 Abilene Cooper and No. 5 Thomas Jefferson....

ACES WIN ONCE AT MOST

Neither vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dble	Pass	2 ♠	3 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♢

One of the faults of an inexperienced player is a tendency to waste aces "on air." Average players, on the other hand, err in the opposite direction; they are reluctant to win tricks when they should.

The bidding was a model of accuracy. After South's weak two-bid was passed round to him, East elected to make a balancing double. West judged well that his side was unlikely to make nine tricks and his defensive prospects were good, so he passed. It required foresight and good defense to vindicate his judgment.

West led the king of diamonds and East signalled encouragement with the nine. Before playing on, West took time to review his side's prospects. His doubleton heart was ominous—it looked as if there were not going to be any trump tricks for the defenders. The king of spades and ace-king of clubs in dummy made it look as if there was at most one trick available in the black suits to go with three diamond tricks. The setting trick would have to come from a trump promotion.

That required some care. The first thing West did was to cash the ace of spades. Then he continued with the queen of diamonds. East overtook with the ace, cashed the jack and simply continued with the 13th diamond, and West's queen of hearts was promoted.

Noted that it was essential for West to cash the ace of spades before continuing with diamonds. Had he failed to do so, declarer would have got home. When East gained the lead with the third round of diamonds, he could not attack spades for he had no entry back to his hand to lead the last diamonds. And if he continued with the diamond, declarer would have sluffed his spade loser while West ruffed, and would have held his losers to three diamond tricks and the ruff.

Director Otto Preminger dies

Otto Preminger

NEW YORK (AP) — Otto Preminger, the autocratic director whose 39 films included such innovative standards as "Anatomy of a Murder," and "The Man With The Golden Arm," died early today. He was 80 and had cancer.

Preminger died at 12:42 a.m. in bed at his apartment, with his wife, Hope, and a nurse at his side, said police spokesman Sgt. Ron Severin.

Preminger was born Dec. 5, 1906, in Vienna, Austria, and earned a law degree there in 1928. He came to the United States in 1935 and the following year made his first U.S. film, "Under Your Spell."

He also was on the faculty at Yale Drama School until 1940, and then became a stage director in New York, winning the Critics Choice Award and Full Circle Award for Broadway productions.

Preminger was known as an innovator, challenging the film industry's taboos in films like the 1953 "The Moon is Blue," the 1954 "Carmen Jones," a modern-day adaptation of Bizet's opera with an all-black cast; and 1956's "The Man With the Golden Arm," which starred Frank Sinatra and was Hollywood's first depiction of narcotics use.

He also appeared in four films, including "Stalag 17," in which he portrayed the dictatorial commandant of a German prisoner-of-war camp.

"The Moon is Blue," an adaptation of the Broadway bedroom comedy, ran without the Motion Picture Production Code seal of approval because its screenplay contained the words "virgin" and "pregnant." The Catholic Church gave it a "Condemned" rating.

Preminger's autocratic style as director caused some actors to rebel.

He got headlines in 1959 with "Anatomy of a Murder," a courtroom drama starring James Stewart and film newcomer George C. Scott, and was to include Lana Turner, who walked off the set in a dispute with the director.

Preminger claimed she didn't like her costumes. According to "Inside Oscar," the actress said she left because "it was simply impossible to deal with Mr. Preminger's unpredictable temper."

"I'll get an unknown and make her a star," Preminger vowed, according to the book. He cast Lee Remick as the woman who claims to have been raped by the man her husband is accused of murdering.

The film was nominated for the Academy Award for best picture, but the honor went to "Ben-Hur." Preminger never won an Oscar.

Preminger also provoked outrage when he announced that the writer of his next movie would be Dalton Trumbo, one of the blacklisted Hollywood Ten.

He worked with top Hollywood names and made an unknown Iowa girl, Jean Seberg, into a star in "St. Joan" in 1957.

Perhaps his most enduring film was the haunting 1944 murder mystery, "Laura," with starred Dana Andrews, Gene Tierney, Clifton Webb, and Vincent Price.

Other movies directed by Preminger included "Forever Amber," 1947, "Exodus," 1960; "Advise and Consent," 1961, and "The Cardinal," 1963.

His later films, such as "Skiddoo," with Jackie Gleason and Carol Channing, in 1968, were unsuccessful. His last major film was "Hurry Sundown," with Jane Fonda and Michael Caine in 1967.

NEW YORK (AP) — A set of doodles sketched and signed by President Reagan sold for $10,000 and two lithographs by the late Henry Fonda went for $1,600 apiece during a benefit auction.

An unidentified private collector offered the sale's highest bid for the presidential artwork, which featured eight sketches on a sheet of White House stationery, said David Carey, a spokesman for the charity, Very Special Arts.

The doodles, which Reagan drew for the benefit, depicted a cowboy, the head of a horse, an Oriental man with a large moustache, a man with a large nose and other themes.

In addition to the auctioned Fonda lithographs, titled "Rear Window" and "Blue Denim," about 350 auction-goers viewed an exhibit of paintings he did on movie sets.

Fonda's wife, Shirlee, was joined at Tuesday's event by Andy Williams, Ethel Kennedy, Patricia Kennedy Lawford, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, Edward Kennedy Jr., Courtney and Kara Kennedy and actresses Cicely Tyson and Janet Leigh.

Other highlights included a pair of autographed ballet shoes donated by Mikhail Baryshnikov, which sold for $900; and a 1982 Academy Award program, autographed by "On Golden Pond" stars Henry Fonda, Jane Fonda, Katharine Hepburn and the film's author, Ernest Thompson, which sold for $1,000.

Other winning bids included $1,400 for a walk-on part in any Woody Allen movie made within the next two years; $600 to attend a taping of the television show "Kate and Allie" and cocktails with actress Susan St. James; and $500 for a one-hour body building session with Arnold Schwarzenegger.

All proceeds went to Very Special Arts, a Washington-based organization that promotes arts for the handicapped.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sex therapist Ruth Westheimer says uncharacteristically that she's "going to keep my big mouth shut" about giving advice about marriage to her daughter, who's about to tie the knot.

"But," Dr. Ruth adds, "I am looking forward to grandchildren. I've already started nudging."

Dr. Ruth made her comments after being named Tuesday as a winner of the 1986 Outstanding Mother's Award.

The National Mother's Day Committee also selected actress Janet Leigh; Olympic gold medalist Valerie Brisco-Hooks; Beatrice Coleman, president and chief executive officer of Maidenform Inc., dancer Carmen De Lavallade; opera star Marilyn Horne; television correspondents Judy Licht and Marjorie Margolies; golf champion Nancy Lopez; and TWA flight attendant Uli Derickson.

Mark Phillips

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — Capt. Mark Phillips, husband of Britain's Princess Anne, toasted trans-Atlantic cooperation during a visit to open a British horse trailer company's plant.

"It's refreshing to see the officials from these two countries stand behind each other — especially in this time of need," Phillips said Tuesday, referring to the cooperation between the United States and Britain in last week's bombing of Libya.

Phillips, aided by Lt. Gov. Joseph Curran, snipped a yellow ribbon at Rice Trailer Ltd.'s western Maryland plant.

The Leicestershire-based company hopes to produce about 150 trailers in its first full year of production at the facility, selected for its proximity to the port of Baltimore and Washington.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell for the third straight day today to a new post World War II low against the Japanese yen, and fluctuated against European currencies. Gold was up.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 167.85 yen from Tuesday's 169.35. Later, in London, it was quoted at 167.75 yen.

The dollar has lost eight yen in three days, following a cut in U.S. interest rates.

Market sources reported small-scale Japanese Central Bank buying of dollars to prop up the U.S. currency, whose fall is hurting Japanese exports by making them more expensive in the United States.

In Europe, the dollar gained slightly from profit-taking transactions, but the changes were marginal. Dealers said the market anticipated no immediate large-scale intervention to strengthen the dollar,"and were not keen to invest in it.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:
—2.1885 West German marks, down from 2.19
—1.8355 Swiss francs, up from 1.8335
—6.9875 French francs, unchanged
—2.477 Dutch guilders, up from 2.471
—1,506.50 Italian lire, up from 1,503
—1.3927 Canadian dollars, up from 1.388

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.5235, compared with $1.5125 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $346.80 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $345.60. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $347.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $347.30, up from $345.50 late Tuesday.

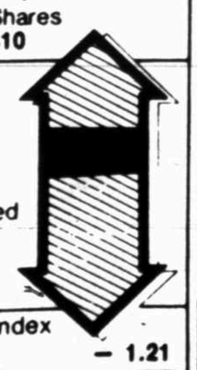

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $3.11 to close at a bid $346.47.

In New York Tuesday, gold rose $3.40 to close at $346.80.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.16 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $5.11.

Petroleum companies report quarterly earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp., the nation's second-largest oil company after Exxon Corp., said Tuesday that its first-quarter earnings rose 38 percent to $440 million.

Joining Mobil in reporting higher earnings, Ashland Oil Co., the 14th-largest oil company, said its profit for its latest quarter more than doubled.

Ashland Oil Inc., with headquarters in Ashland, Ky., said net income for its fiscal second quarter ended March 31 came to $39 million, or $1.12 a share, compared with $14 million, or 22 cents a share, in the same period a year ago.

Diamond Shamrock Corp., a Dallas-based integrated gas and oil company, said it suffered a $10 million quarterly loss, as compared to a $59.1 million gain, or 44 cents a share, in the same period of 1985.

For the same period, Amoco Corp., the nation's fifth-largest oil concern, said Monday it posted a drop of 30 percent, attributing it to plummeting oil prices.

Amoco's revenue fell 15.7 percent to $5.9 billion from $7 billion.

Richard M. Morrow, chairman and chief executive officer, said the erosion in earnings was due to the plummeting price of crude oil and a decline in the volume of petroleum sales.

The nation's biggest oilfield services company, Schlumberger Ltd., reported its first-quarter profit dropped 51 percent from a year ago because of a general decline in business.

Mobil's net income between January and March worked out to $1.08 a share, as opposed to 78 cents a share on earnings of $320 million during the same period last year.

Its revenue was $14.1 billion, down from 1985's first-quarter revenue of $15.1 billion, company officials said.

Diamond Shamrock, which reported total 1985 revenue of $4.1 billion, is far smaller than Mobil, which reported $60.4 billion, and Exxon, which reported $93.2 billion in revenue.

Amoco, which is based in Chicago, said its net earnings for the three months ended March 31 came to $331 million, or $1.28 a share, compared with $473 million, or $1.76 a share, in the same period a year ago.

New York-based Schlumberger said its first-quarter net income came to $148 million, or 51 cents a share, compared with $303.5 million, or $1.01 a share, a year earlier.

Schlumberger's revenue fell 5.9 percent to $1.59 billion from $1.69 billion.

Chairman Michel Vaillaud said the drop in net income was due primarily to a general decline in oilfield services activity and to continuing losses at its Fairchild Semiconductor unit.

As the plunge of crude oil and gas prices picked up momentum, Mobil's quarterly worldwide earnings from petroleum production dropped by $196 million from the same period in 1985, the company said.

But other factors more than offset the decline, according to Mobil Chairman Allen E. Murray.

These included a $39 million increase in chemical operations earnings and a combined gain of $269 million from world refining, marketing and transportation operations, he said.

But he warned that current crude and gas prices and earnings are lower than they were in the first quarter, on average, while marketing and refining margins are dropping. Accordingly, Mobil's future earnings will likely be "sharply lower," unless crude and gas prices rebound, he said.

In Dallas, Diamond Shamrock officials said the company's quarterly sales of $950.3 million were essentially unchanged from $954.7 million for the similiar period a year ago.

William Bricker, chairman and chief executive officer, said the company's loss came from a devaluation of the company's inventory of about $82 million in refined crude, partially offset by some $22 million in oil reserves.

"Rather than spreading the inventory adjustments through upcoming quarters, we are taking the charge now," Bricker said.

Warren Shimmerlik, an oil industry analyst in New York with Merrill Lynch & Co., said Amoco's performance was expected.

Shimmerlik noted that the price of crude oil is about half what it was at the start of the quarter.

"For a company to be able to get through that in decent shape is a tribute to the long-term management," he said. "Not many of us could survive that kind of a haircut."

However, a profit of $72 million from Amoco's chemical division was a 45 percent increase from the year earlier period, and Shimmerlik said the company may not be able to sustain that performance.

Ashland's revenue was flat at $1.8 billion.

For the first six months of its year, net income totaled $88 million, or $2.54 a share, vs. $40 million, or $85 cents a share, a year earlier.

Half-year revenue dipped to $3.8 billion vs. $3.9 billion.

"These results are due in large part to an excellent performance by Ashland's petroleum refining and marketing operations, despite turbulent conditions in the petroleum industry," said John Hall, chairman and chief executive.

UTPB head tells oilmen crisis offers challenge

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

At a kickoff breakfast for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association annual meeting, Dr. Duane Leach, president University of Texas Permian Basin, told members of the Permian Basin oil industry, meeting today at Midland Hilton, that the current crisis in the oil industry could become an opportunity for diversification if we only have imagination.

Leach said practically every eastern and northern newspaper in the country had been to UTPB, anxious to do an autopsy on the Permian Basin, but they were wasting their time.

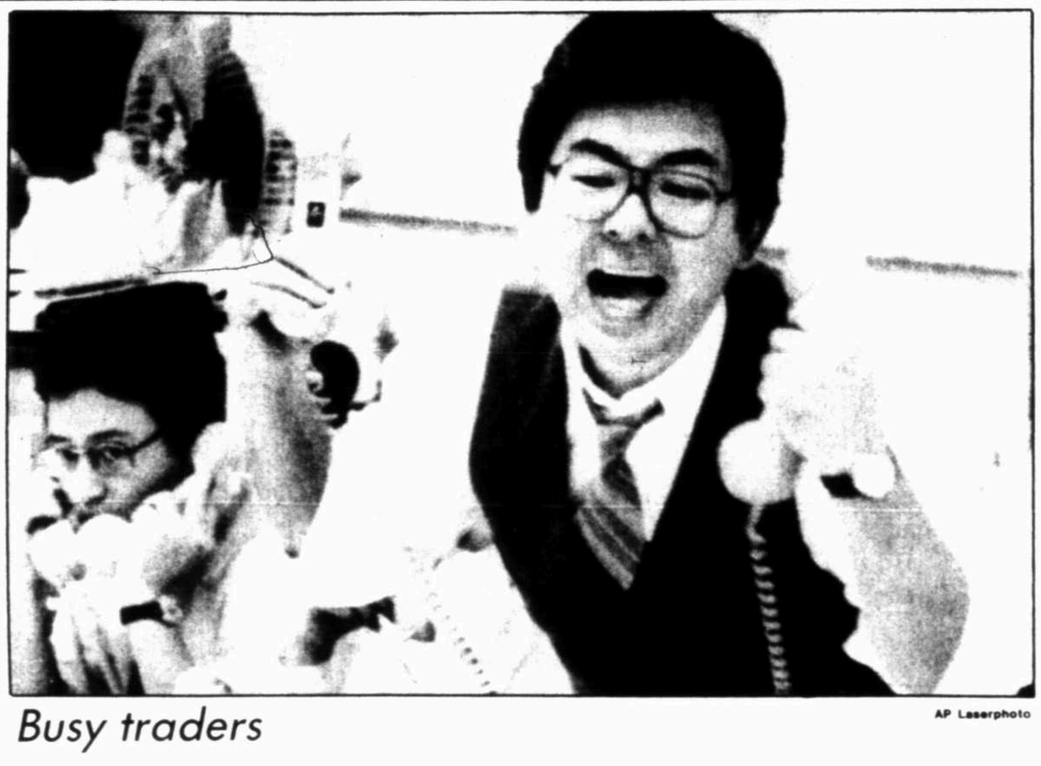

"It's not the depth of the problem that counts," said Leach. "It's the quality of the response."

He said the Center of Energy Research and Economic Diversification, which was approved in December 1985 could play a vital role in helping the Permian Basin oil industry turn the current crisis into an opportunity.

"We can sieze upon the talent, expertise, experience and imagination of the entrepreneurs and producers of this area to spin-off new industry. The University of Texas system has made a committment to the research facility that every part of it should bring growth," said Leach. He added that the Center, which will be located between Midland and Odessa would engage in applied reseach aimed at bringing a direct, immediate benefit, rather than exotic and original researh. He offered as an example the wine industry located near Fort Stockton, where University land that once leased for $1 an acre was now leasing for $1,000 an acre.

Said Leach: "The areas of this country which are now florishing, are those where government, business and universities have formed partnerships to make things happen. The Permian Basin could join Austin, San Antonio, California and other areas in such a venture."

He warned that we should sieze the opportunity of crisis to become "shapers of what might be, rather than servants of what is." Said Leach: "Paths to the future are not found, they are made."

Analysts encouraged by price outlook

By ALLEN HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Although overall reaction toward energy stocks on Wall Street remains cool, a small but growing group of investors are showing renewed interest in certain sectors of the oil and gas industry, states John F. Ryan Jr., vice president and senior energy analyst for the Dallas-based brokerage firm Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc. The key to regaining investor confidence is a perception that prices have bottomed out, according to Ryan and two other of the regional brokerage's energy staff. The trio spoke with the Reporter-Telegram in an interview prior to their appearance at an Texas American Bank oil and gas seminar.

Even without evidence of a short-term upswing in prices, a perception of stability at current levels is permitting a ray of hope for some energy stock prices. Lower interest rates on other investments are enabling some oil company stocks to compete favorably by offering attractive dividend yields. Companies with relatively low debt loads and sufficient flexibility in cutting shortterm capital expenditures are faring well in the market recently, Ryan noted.

"Once support for the top tier of major companies is solidified, there will be a degree of confidence returning for well-managed, efficient oil and gas finders among the independent companies as well," predicts David Bradshaw, vice president and energy analyst for the company.

Ryan says changes in the world petroleum outlook since the first of the year could make OPEC's 'non-decision' agreement to cut production last weekend "easier to live with" when the cartel reconvenes in June to discuss allocation of production quotas. Revisions for increases in global oil demand and deductions from estimates of non-OPEC production during the year combine to point toward a 700,000 barrel per day increase in the worldwide demand for OPEC oil as opposed to a similar sized decrease being predicted earlier in the year.

An increase in the demand remaining for OPEC producers to 16.8 million barrels per day and current daily production from those countries of 17.5 million barrels through the first four months of the year puts the cartel "within spitting distance of bringing the market back into balance" with production cuts to only 16.4 million barrels per day — a level very near the Saudi production target during the most recent conference, Ryan explained.

With indicators pointing toward stability, or possible slight upward movement in prices through the summer, Rauscher Pierce director of research Lawrence A. Crowley says a very small, but growing, minority of investors are "bottom fishing" for undervalued stocks in the energy sector which could be bargains with good investment potential.

The three energy experts agree that investors are growing more sophisticated and are more discriminating in their choices of energy stock investments. Distinctions within stock groups are being made on the basis of per share cash flow data and relative debt positions, Ryan explains.

Investors continue to turn their backs on the oilfield service and contract drilling stock sectors, with little chance of improvement soon, according to Crowley. "Even with stability in oil prices there is little hope for a dramatic enough upturn to rejuvenate drilling budgets, and thus the fortunes of service and contractor outlooks."

Union Texas reduces staff at Midland office

From Staff Reports

Union Texas Petroleum has announced the reduction of its Midland staff from 105 to 27 employees.

According to company spokesperson Carol Cox, the company is implementing organizational changes and a reduction in its work force. She said some of the functions handled in the Midland office are being consolidated into the Houston office, with 27 Midlanders being offered transfers to Houston. At the same time, the company is eliminating 51 positions in the Midland office.

"Like the rest of the petroleum industry, our company has suffered from the steep decline in oil prices," Cox stated.

Regional Manager, John Freeman, said the elimination of jobs and consolidation to the Houston office was the direct result of a downturn in oil prices. "We are hopeful the consolidation will make Union Texas Petroleum more efficient in the face of falling oil prices."

The firm formerly maintained two regional offices in Midland and Houston, with the Midland Region handling the Permian Basin, Rocky Mountains and Mid Continent areas. With the reorganization, there will be only a single domestic division headquartered in Houston. Freeman, who has resided in Midland for the past 9 years, said he would be transferring to Houston.

He said Midland would become a production office and would be staffed by the 27 remaining employees. Union Texas is the major tenant in the Union Texas Petroleum Plaza building, and the departure of 78 employees will undoubtedly leave some space to rent, but Freeman said he expected Union Texas to remain the major tenant.

There has been a boom in the popularity of renting videos for home viewing. Taking part in that boom is the new Midland store, VIDEO ONE.

Located in the North Park shopping center next door to Vista Savings, the store opened about two weeks ago, and offers movie rental and sales and video equipment rental, according to co-owner Gus Ganze. He said the store also has an in-house system of transferring photographs, 35 mm slides, 8, super 8 or 16 mm film to videotape.

The store is a branch of the Video One in Odessa, and Midlanders seem to have received the store well, Ganze commented.

Movies are $2.49 during weekdays, $3.49 on weekends, with children's movies $2 all the time. Rent 9 movies and the tenth movie is free. A tape player rents for $2.99 during the week and $4.99 on weekends, and the video camera is $29.95 per day. Video One also offers a membership plan for $9.95, which includes the first three movie rentals. However, all that's needed to rent a movie is the right amount of money, a local address and valid identification.

Jodi McGee has opened ADVANCED ELECTROLYSIS at 3610 W. Wall, Suite 105.

The only method of permanent hair removal, the method is approved by the American Medical Association. McGee had a shop in Odessa for six year, and has been an electrologist for six and a half years, she said.

Prices range from $24 for a half hour to $40 for a full hour, and she noted that her clientele is more women than men "now that beards are in." Her biggest business is doing bikini lines, now that it's swimwear season.

McGee has worked with dermatologists, gynecologists and plastic surgeons. "I consider myself in the health field. Excess hair affects women's attitudes about themselves, and I find it a challenge to to me to make them feel good about themselves as soon as possible."

Kyle Womack, vice president and manager of the Midland office of the engineering firm of PARKHILL, SMITH & COOPER, INC., reports the expansion of the firm's Midland offices at 5214 Thomason.

The expansion - a 1,440 square ft. addition that represents a more than 50 percent increase in the building's size, coincides with the seventh anniversary of the building's opening. When the expansion is completed, the building will have a total area of 3,700 square ft. The addition will provide more engineering office space, expansion of the firm's drafting facilities and extra storage facilities.

HOUSTON (SWN) Mesa Royalty Trust announced the Trust income distribution for the month of April, 1986. Unit holders of record on April 30, 1986 will receive a distribution amounting to $220,298.04 or $.118211 per unit payable on July 31, 1986.

Noble Affiliates declares cash dividend

Ardmore, OK (SWN) The board of directors of Noble Affiliates, Inc. declared a quarterly cash dividend of three cents per common share, payable May 19, 1986 to shareholders of record on May 5, 1986.

Noble Affiliates, Inc. is an independent energy company with exploration and production operations throughout major basins in the U.S., including the Gulf of Mexico and offshore California as well as Canada, Tunisia and Indonesia.

Hughes reports $247 million in net sales

HOUSTON (SWN) Hughes Tool Co. reported net sales of $247.0 million for the quarter ended March 31, 1986, down 15.9 percent from the $293.8 million reported in the first quarter of 1985. The company reported a net loss of $20.2 million, or $.36 per share, for the three months, compared with net income of $0.6 million, or $.01 per share, for the same period last year.

Gross margin rate for the three months was 11.3 percent, compared with 24.3 percent for the first quarter of 1985.

"Drilling activity in the U.S. at the end of the first quarter had plunged to 1,034 rigs, its lowest level since 1973," said W. A. Kistler, Jr., president and chief executive officer. "That was a drop of 46 percent from the 1,898 rigs running the last week in December. This decline in U.S. drilling activity is a result not only of low oil prices, but also of political barriers such as uncertainties regarding tax legislation and natural gas regulation and pricing. Even when oil prices are stabilized, the recovery of the U.S. drilling industry is going to require the restoration of normal business incentives by the Federal government."

Diamond Shamrock reports $10 million loss

DALLAS (AP) — Diamond Shamrock Corp. reported a first quarter loss of $10 million, or 12 cents per share, which the company said reflected the rapid fall in oil prices, forcing it to devalue its inventory of refined crude.

The loss compared with earnings of $59.1 million, or 44 cents per share, in the first quarter of 1985.

Quarterly sales of $950.3 million were essentially unchanged from $954.7 million for the similiar period a year ago.

William Bricker, chairman and chief executive officer, said the loss came from a devaluation of the company's inventory of about $82 million in refined crude, partially offset by some $22 million in oil reserves.

"Rather than spreading the inventory adjustments through upcoming quarters, we are taking the charge now," Bricker said.

He said that in January, the company's posted price for West Texas Intermediate was $27.75 per barrel but had dropped to $13.50 per barrel by the quarter's end.

"When crude oil prices stabilize, refining and wholesale margins should equal or exceed last year's strong performance," Bricker said.

SEISMIC CREW COUNT

(The leading indicator of oil and gas exploration activity.)

The number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters during March declined by fifty-five crews from the February total — the largest decrease since the Society began the survey in May, 1974. The land crew total decreased by forty-four and the marine crew decreased by eleven crews. The last time the total number of crews fell below 240 was ten years ago.

Dow plans expansion

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — Dow Chemical Co. said it will expand its Freeport, Texas, polycarbonate plant, more than doubling its 30-million-pound production capacity.

The addition will begin making Calibre polycarbonate resins in late 1987 or early 1988, Dow said.

"Our first polycarbonate facility, onstream since April of 1985, has proved we have a state-of-the-art manufacturing process, and the marketplace acceptance of Calibre resins demands additional capacity by 1988," said Fred C. Corson, general manager of the Engineering Thermoplastics Department of Dow Chemical U.S.A.

Pete G. Ferrarese, Dow spokesman in Midland, said the addition would not add jobs to Dow's Texas division.

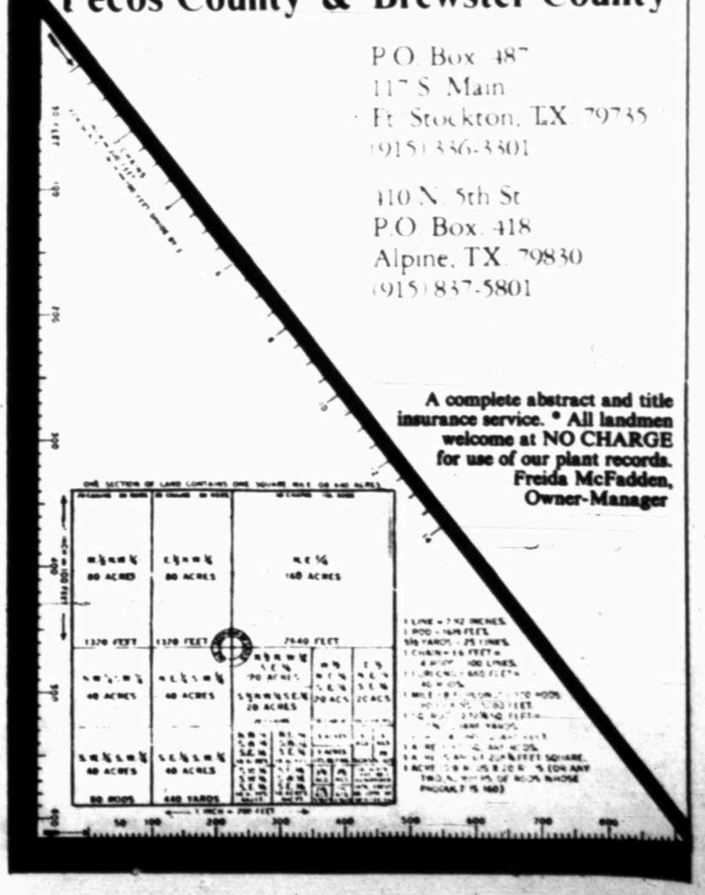

The company declined to say how many people are employed at the plant.

Passover Foods

By LEA B. KERR
Copley News Service

Jewish families will gather tonight at the Seder, marking the start of the eight-day festival of Passover.

A child at the table will ask: "Why is this night different from all other nights?"

The person retelling the story of Passover will answer, as fathers for more than 3,000 years have answered, "On all other nights we eat bread or matzo. On this night we eat only matzo."

Matzo, a flat, thin, unleavened bread, is a reminder of the flight from Egypt and slavery to freedom. The events related occurred in the year 1336 before Christ. The Seder is believed to have been the meal eaten at the Last Supper of Jesus, who was a Jew.

While all Jewish children learn the story of Passover from the time of understanding, a project in Highland Park, Ill., by Rabbi Yosef Schanowitz has added meaningful understanding to those who visit his miniature "Matzo Factory."

They learn that special flour and water is used and the matzo dough must be kneaded, rolled, perforated and baked in no more than 18 minutes from the time water first touches the flour.

"Rabbis have calculated that as the time the matzo would begin to ferment (raise)," he said.

The visitors range in from 3-year-olds to teenagers.

Before the "students" make a matzo, they see a slide presentation on how matzos are processed and baked in rectangular shapes in large factories for world-wide distribution. Those matzos differ in shape from the handmade ones, which are oval or round. Handmade ones prepared in factories cost about $8 or $9 a pound compared to the $1 to $2 for those made by machine. This is because additional manpower is required to prepare them within the 18 minutes, he says.

"The flour is watched from the time it is harvested and ground until ready for use to make certain no moisture has come in contact to cause fermenting and make it become leaven," he adds.

THE CHILDREN watch intently as he explains the mixing process and kneads the dough. Each child is given a piece of dough and a rolling pin to make a matzo and experience the haste with which the dough must be worked.

The rolled out form is perforated with a special tool to remove air pockets and prevent leavening during baking. The matzo is placed over long wooden rods. From the rods they are rolled into the 700 F oven and baked for one or two minutes.

Schanowitz is a member of the orthodox Lubavitcher Chasidic group of Jews with headquarters in Bronx, N.Y. It is frequently referred to as the Chabad. The name comes from the first letters of three Hebrew words — ch (from chocham, the word for wisdom), bi (from binah, understanding) and d (from da'as, knowledge).

"We are known for our outer education work," he said. "Much of our emphasis is projecting Judaism to children in a positive way."

In their visit to the matzo factory, the children also are reminded about the Passover story.

The name Passover comes from events surrounding the final plague upon the Egyptians when God commanded Moses to lead the Israelites out of bondage. Moses ordered the Hebrews to sacrifice the paschal lamb, sacred to the Egyptians, on the evening before they left, when the angel of Death passed over the Hebrew houses. The lamb's blood had been smeared on the doorposts and lintels. The angel slew the firstborn of every Egyptian household, but spared the homes consecrated by the blood.

Symbolically, the Passover refers to the passing over from slavery to freedom.

Matzo is the most important symbol. It is a reminder that the Israelites fled in such haste that the bread they had prepared did not have time to rise as it baked on sun-warmed desert rocks during the flight.

Matzo is a symbol also of affliction and poverty.

"It is the bread our ancestors ate as slaves in the land of Egypt to remind us of hardships they suffered and cruelty they endured," says the Passover story. ... "To all who are hungry we say 'come and join us in our abundance.' We understand the plight of the poor. We know what it is to suffer (because of our history). ... We pray with them and for them and that the coming year will bring with it the promise of a better life."

AT THE service, a plate with the Passover symbols centers the table. A roasted lamb or shank bone signifies the paschal lamb. A sprig of parsley is symbolic of spring and new growth. It is dipped in salt water, symbolic of the tears Hebrew mothers shed when their sons were taken from them at birth by the Egyptians to be put to death.

A piece of horseradish root recalls the bitterness of slavery.

"Charoses," a mixture of chopped apples, walnuts and cinnamon, moistened with wine, depicts mortar used in the forced labor of making bricks for the pyramids.

There is a roasted hardboiled egg, significant to the special sacrifice made on all holidays. Its oval shape, denoting no beginning and no end, symbolizes eternal life.

Each person's wine cup is filled four times during the Seder as a reminder of the Lord's promise. "I will bring you out. I will deliver you. I will redeem you. I will take you to Me for a people."

An extra cup of wine is at the table. It is a hope that Elijah, the prophet who is to precede the coming Messiah, will return.

He is supposed to have fought the forces of paganism and did not die but was lifted to heaven in a flaming chariot. It is said his return will mark the advent of an age of harmony, peace and understanding among all people and nations.

Passover recipes international

By JIM WOOD
Copley News Service

Passover is a combination of two ancient Jewish holidays, Hag Ha'Pesach, a festival at which the first lamb of the season was sacrificed, and Hag Ha'Matzot at which the bread from the preceding harvest was discarded. The two festivals merged into one, which early Jews traveled from all over Israel to Jerusalem to attend.

Here, from the "Jewish Holiday Cookbook" by Gloria Kaufer Greene, are a couple of Passover recipes from far-flung lands:

MOROCCAN-STYLE HAROSET

2 cups walnut pieces
1 cup blanched slivered or whole almonds
25 pitted dates
10 large, brown (calimyrna) dried figs
20 dried apricots
10 large, pitted prunes
½ cup shelled pistachios (optional)
¼ cup sweet red Pesado wine, or as needed
Ground cinnamon (optional)

Put all the nuts and dried fruit through the fine blade of a food grinder or finely grind them together in a food processor fitted with the steel blade. Stir in just enough wine to make a smooth paste that is soft and malleable. Form the mixture into 1-inch balls.

If desired, sprinkle the balls lightly with cinnamon. Store the balls in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator for up to 2 weeks. For best flavor, let them come to room temperature before serving.

Makes 6 dozen 1-inch balls or 3 cups haroset.

YEMENITE-STYLE HAROSET

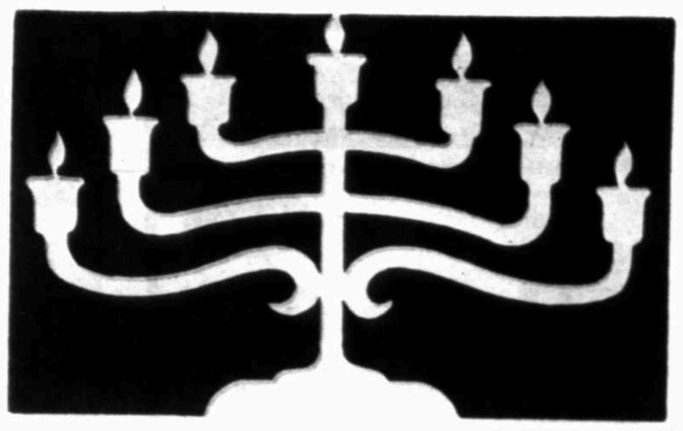

6 large brown (calimyrna) dried figs
6 pitted dates
2 tablespoons sesame seeds (optional)
About 1 teaspoon honey, or to taste
½ tespoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground coriander seeds
Pinch of cayenne pepper (optional)

Put the figs and dates through the fine blade of a food grinder, or finely grind them together in a food processor fitted with the steel blade, to make a very firm, sticky paste.

Mix in the sesame seeds, honey and spices, adjusting the latter to taste.

Store the haroset in the refrigerator, tightly covered for up to 2 weeks. For best flavor, let it come to room temperature before serving.

Makes ⅔ cup.

Traditional customs leave fond memories

Copley News Service

Gila Berkowitz of Palo Alto, Calif., author of "The New Jewish Cuisine," recalls that as a child her Orthodox Hasidic household took the Passover laws very seriously.

"It started a month before Passover," she recalls. "An aura of sacredness took over. There was an excitement of getting ready that was supreme."

She remembers the handmade shmura matzot that to this day remain special to her at Passover. And she recalls the pungent taste of fresh horseradish.

The family conducted a ceremonial hunt, scouring the house from top to bottom to make sure it contained no leavened bread.

The children even turned out their pockets to be certain they contained no forgotten crumbs.

Ms. Berkowitz recalls that her family would distribute 10 bits of bread to the children who hid them around the house. The lights were turned off and the parents, armed with a candle, a wooden spoon and a feather would hunt out the bread, wrap it in the wooden spoon and burn it.

The custom, she says, is still an adventure to her children, aged 6 and 2.

Because of the wide geographic dispersion of the Jews since ancient times, a number of different customs have grown up surrounding the Passover.

"One of the things that's happened in the past few years that I think is very nice," says Ms. Berkowitz, "is the wide variety of people, many of them not Jews, who attend seder. It gives a whole new perspective."

Microwave modernizes Seder

By DESIREE VIVEA

There are a number of foods associated with Passover and Seder (the first two evenings of the holiday), as well as foods which are not allowed.

But, while tradition governs the choice of foods for Passover, there is room for experimentation and creativity. Zell J. Schulman's new "Something Different for Passover" offers new dishes and old. (A conversion chart lists substitutions for foods not eaten at Passover.)

"We observe the traditional customs, but thanks to new technology, Passover food preparation is so much easier," writes Schulman.

While the majority of recipes offered are prepared conventionally, the author gives food processor and microwave instructions wherever applicable. Several pages of microwave tips are also included.

Schulman is a food columnist and cooking instructor.

The following recipe is taken from "Something Different for Passover," available at major booksellers. Or write to Triad Publishing Co., 1110 N.W. 8th Avenue, Suite C, Gainesville, FL 32601 (paperback, $9.95).

BRUSSELS SPROUTS WITH MOCK HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

1-to-1½ lbs. brussels sprouts
¼ tsp. ground nutmeg
Salt and pepper to taste

Microwave oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power):

Pull off wilted leaves and trim botom of each sprout. Soak for about 10 minutes in cold water to which a little salt has been added. Remove and wash with cold water. Cut an "X" in each stem end.

Place in a 2-quart microwave-safe baking dish, add ¼-cup water, and cover with vented plastic wrap. Microwave 10 to 12 minutes.

Season with nutmeg, salt and pepper. Pour Mock Hollandaise Sauce over sprouts.

Mock Hollandaise Sauce:

1 cup mayonnaise
¼ cup non-dairy creamer
Juice of 1 lemon (about one-third cup)
½ tsp. sugar
Dash of red pepper

Combine all ingredients in blender or food processor (using metal blade) fo 30 seconds or beat with wire whisk.

Heat in small saucepan over hot water or microwave in covered microwave-safe container for 1 minute on HIGH setting. Makes about 1½ cups.

DEAR ABBY

Guilt is burden

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my 2-year-old son died in a tragic way. His death was a great shock to me. I expected to go through the normal grieving process, and I did. However, something unexpected happened. I started to steal. I had no use for anything I took, but I was helpless to stop. Even more disturbing, I stole from people I love and am very close to. This started soon after the death of my son and stopped a few months ago.

The death of my son and the terrible guilt I felt over stealing nearly drove me to suicide twice.

I want very much to return the items I took and apologize to the owners, but I am afraid they will probably say they "understand," but they'll never trust me in their homes again.

Please don't tell me to seek professional help because my compulsion to steal seems to have left me as quickly as it came.

I need some answers. I've never stolen anything in my life before this. Why did I steal — especially from people I'm close to? The guilt and confusion are weighing me down. Please help me. I want to make everything better, but I don't know how. — CONFUSED AND GUILTY

DEAR CONFUSED: Your compulsion to steal (transitory kleptomania) was triggered by your tragic loss. You unconsciously tried to compensate for your loss by taking from others because something had been taken from you. You stole from those close to you because you unconsciously envied and resented them for not having had to suffer the way you did.

You need more help than I can give you in a letter. You seem to be a fine and decent person who was temporarily destabilized by a terrible loss. You stole to "equalize" things. It was sick behavior, and sickness is no crime. Forgive yourself, my friend. Please see a therapist and a clergyperson — if you have one. You need absolution and counseling. Write again soon and let me know how you are doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I met a beautiful girl last year and fell head over heels in love with her. I am 23 and she's 19. We are both college students. She attends Montana State University, and I attend the University of Idaho. We plan to marry after I graduate.

I will begin my senior year in August. Now my dilemma: I have asked her to transfer to the University of Idaho so we can be together. She refused, although her credits are transferable. I have even offered to pay her out-of-state tuition. She says, "It took me too long to find friends where I'm at."

Abby, I cannot transfer to Montana State. What should I do? — PERPLEXED AT U.I.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Your "dilemma" could be a blessing in disguise. The separation will give your love time to mature, which will benefit both of you. For now, don't pressure her.

If your love doesn't survive the separation, rejoice. It was not meant to be.

DEAR ABBY: In defense of mules and jackasses: If a mule or jackass gets loose in a barn and gets into the feed, he will eat only as much as he needs, then quit. A horse will eat until he's so overfed that he's sick.

You can hitch a mule or jackass to an oversized load and he will pull his maximum, then quit before he overexerts himself. A horse will push himself to the point of physical exhaustion because he doesn't have sense enough to quit.

If anyone tells you that you have the brains of a jackass, take it as a compliment, but if you're told you have "horse sense," it's an insult. — WEP IN MINNESOTA

DEAR WEP: You could have fooled me. I always thought that horse sense could be found in a stable mind, and at the racetrack I've wondered if the jackasses were running or betting.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Americans discover young lamb is tender, low-calorie

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

The lamb in today's market is young, tender, and low in calories. No wonder so many Americans are discovering this tasty meat.

"Spring" lamb means baby lamb — and most of the lamb marketed in the United States today is under 8 months of age, so almost all cuts are very tender. Even less expensive cuts can be cooked up moist and juicy in the microwave.

LAMB MEATBALLS

1½ pounds ground lamb
2 tablespoons dried mint leaves, crumbled
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon ground cumin
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon flour
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons white wine
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes, or 2 tablespoons fresh, chopped parsley
1 teaspoon turmeric
¼ teaspoon chili powder

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

In small mixing bowl combine lamb, int, salt, pepper and cumin. Scoop out by tablespoons and shape into small meatballs. Arrange meatballs in 2½-quart glass casserole. Microwave 5 to 7 minutes, stirring gently several times, until meat is no longer pink. Drain and set aside.

Combine butter, onion and garlic in 1½-quart glass casserole. Cover and microwave 3 to 4 minutes, stirring once or twice, until onion is tender. Blend in flour, then stir in remaining ingredients. Microwave 2½ to 3½ minutes, until sauce is heated through, stirring twice.

Stir in meatballs and microwave 2 to 3 minutes longer, to reheat meatballs. Serve over hot, cooked rice or noodles.

Prunes in Port used to accent roast chicken

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Prunes and meat have been recognized as a delicious twosome by at least two cuisines.

In Scandinavia, a favorite main dish is made by inserting prunes into a loin of pork before cooking on top of the range or in the oven.

In Jewish cookery, a popular main dish is made with pot-roasted beef plus onion, carrot and seasonings to which prunes are added.

In my own household I often serve roast chicken with a go-along of Prunes in Port. The combination works well.

PRUNES IN PORT

1¼ cups tawny port
½ cup water
2 tablespoons honey
12-ounce package pitted prunes
1 tablespoon orange juice
Membrane-free orange sections

In a 2-quart saucepan over low heat stir together port, water and honey. Stir in prunes; bring to a boil, simmer until prunes are tender but not soft — about 15 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove prunes.

Over medium heat, bring liquid in saucepan to a boil; boil until reduced by one-third. Off heat, stir in orange juice; pour over prunes. Cool, cover and chill.

Prunes may be stored in the refrigerator for several weeks. Serve as an accompaniment to poultry or pork.

Lamb prepared in microwave provides easy, flavorful alternative

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Looking for something easy and different for dinner? Why not try lamb?

Microwave lamb roasts at MEDIUM-LOW or DEFROST setting (about 200 watts, or 30 percent power). This cooks the meat more slowly, more evenly and results in less shrinkage. (Lamb should be completely thawed before cooking.)

For a rare roast, allow 14 to 17 minutes per pound; for medium, allow 18 to 21 minutes and for well-done 22 to 26 minutes per pound. Larger roasts should be cooked, uncovered, on a microwave-safe roasting rack. Rotate for even cooking.

A meat thermometer is the most accurate measure for doneness. For a leg of lamb, insert thermometer probe into meaty area under joint. For a boneless rolled roast, insert into cut end so that probe is in center of roast.

Thermometer should register 165 degrees when meat is removed from oven. Cover with foil and let stand until thermometer registers 180 degrees, to complete cooking.

Lamb chops may be browned for several minutes on a preheated browning skillet, then finish cooking on MEDIUM-LOW setting for about half an hour.

Mint jelly is the classic accompaniment to roasted lamb. Favorite herbs and seasonings include rosemary, thyme, basil, curry powder, cracked pepper, garlic and lemon. If you think you aren't too wild about lamb, give today's no-hassle microwave recipes a try. You might just discover you're a lamb-lover after all.

PEASANT'S LAMB CASSEROLE

2 tabelspoons butter or margarine
1½ pounds boneless lamb, cut in ¾-inch cubes
2 large onions, peeled and cut in chunks
¼ cup flour
2¼ cups water
¼ cup white wine
½ teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon thyme
3 medium potatoes, peeled and cut in small, uniform chunks
1 large carrot cut in small, uniform chunks

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)/MEDIUM (50 percent power)

Place buter in 3-quart glass casserole. Microwave at HIGH setting 30 seconds to 1 minute, until melted. Add lamb and onions. Sprinkle with flour, stirring to coat, then stir in water, wine, bouillon, salt, pepper and thyme.

Cover and microwave 5 minutes on HIGH. Stir in potatoes and carrots. Reduce setting to MEDIUM and microwave, covered, 30 to 35 minutes longer, until meat and vegetables are tender. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

WHAT'S COOKING

Chef cooks fluently in Chinese

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Wayne Scott, executive chef at Midland Country Club, has been "cooking ever since I've been working." His first job, at age 15, was in a Chinese restaurant. "I have had the position of chef about five years."

Scott, who grew up in New York City and lived over a Chinese laundry, said his residence gave him "early experience with Chinese culture and cooking style" because the proprietors of the laundry treated him to their friendship and their cuisine.

A few years spent in Florida gave him a "healthy respect for fresh seafood."

His natural enthusiasm for Chinese food — which is traditionally high in vegetable content, low in fat and calories and easy to prepare — and fresh fish, combined with a growing public awareness of healthier eating habits, has made a difference in the meals Midland Country Club diners have been choosing.

When Scott became executive chef at the country club about a year ago, "90 percent of our business was steak or red meat. Now about 30 percent is red meat-oriented," he said.

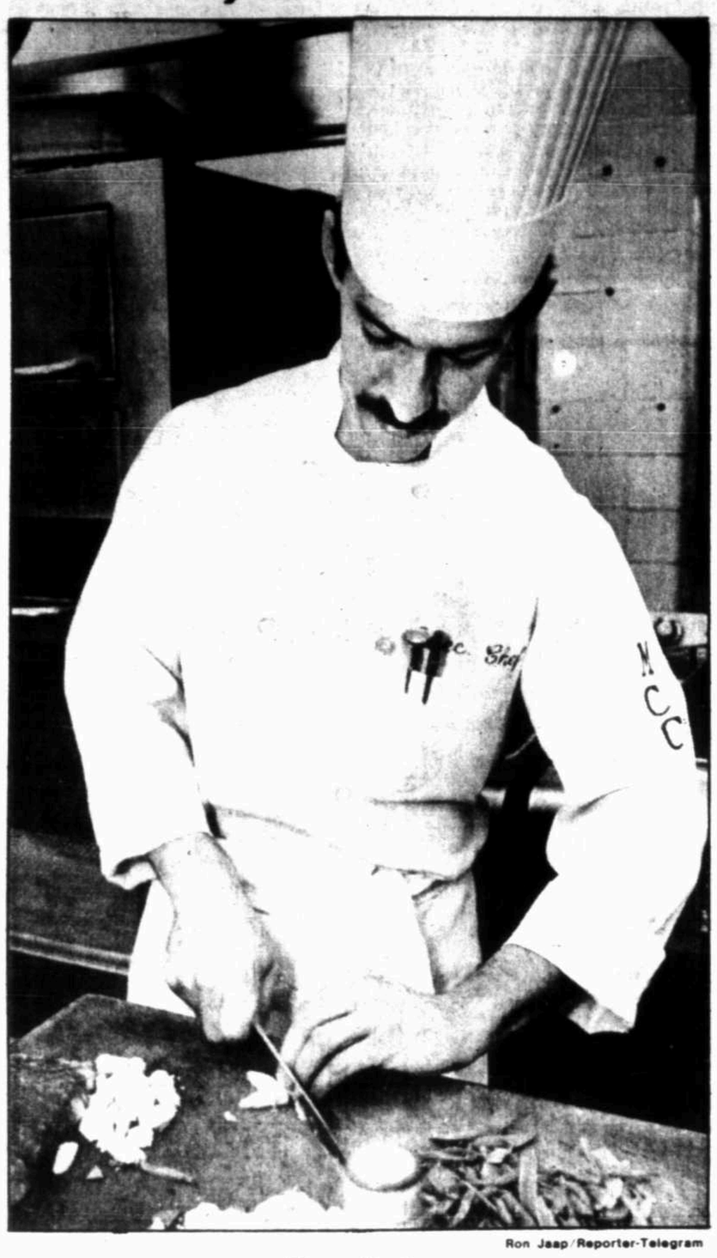

Lunch crowds at the country club average about 60-70 people going through the buffet line, 60-70 in the grill room and about 50 in the men's tavern, Scott said. The dinner crowd is usually smaller, and about 350 people attend the Sunday buffet.

Scott enjoys sculpting in edible media, such as bread and candy, and the Sunday buffet often boasts a centerpiece of his work. Some of his recent creations have included a tropical island made of sugar, complete with marzipan fish; a bread frog; and a bread octopus wearing glasses and sipping a drink. He said he was working on a Fred Flintstone and Barney Rubble centerpiece for the buffet. "A lot of kids come through the buffet line."

A self-taught sculptor, Scott said the only problem he finds with his medium is that it is "not permanent. It gets eaten or it breaks down."

After cooking all day, Scott said he also does most of the cooking at home. He prefers light and simple foods. "I don't get too ornate unless we have people coming over." Because he does spend 8-10 hours a day cooking on the job, "when I go home and cook I like to spend 20 minutes in the kitchen, maximum."

The following recipes are some of his favorite at-home meals, and also are similar to dishes he prepares at work.

SLICED BEEF
"HUEI'S LAUNDRY"

This stir-fry dish, named after the laundry Scott lived above in New York City, is a quick and easy meal for two to four people, he said.

Start with ½ pound very thin sliced beef. Mix with 1 tablespoon sherry, 2 tablespoons soy sauce and 1 tablespoon cornstarch.

Heat ½ cup oil in large skillet or wok. Add meat; cook until ¾ done. Remove meat, pour off excess oil. Lower heat. Add 1 coarsely chopped green onion, ½ teaspoon chopped fresh ginger; increase heat.

Add 1 cup cleaned snowpeas, ⅓ cup sliced mushrooms and cook 3 minutes. Add beef. Toss with 1½ tablespoons oyster sauce, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 1 tablespoon sherry, dash sesame oil and black pepper.

Thicken if necessary with 1 teaspoon cornstarch in 1 tablespoon water.

FILET OF FISH
"YANKEE BEACH BUM"

2 fillets of fresh fish, 6 to 8 ounces each (grouper, snapper or mahi mahi)
4 ounces macadamia nuts, chopped fine
¼ cup flour
1 egg
Juice of 1 lime
⅛ cup chopped parsley
About ¼ cup butter and 2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Mix flour and nuts; set aside. Mix egg and ½ the lime juice. Beat well.

In large skillet melt 2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons vegetable oil over medium heat. Lightly salt and pepper fillets; dip into egg mixture and then press into flour-nut mixture.

Place fillets into hot pan; cook 3 to 4 minutes on each side for most ¾-inch thick fillets. Be careful not to burn coating.

Remove fillets to serving platter. Pour off frying fat. Add 4 tablespoons fresh butter; melt slowly. Add rest of lime juice, parsley and pour over fillets.

Rabbis keep fowl kosher

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WANGO, Md. — In this obscure country corner on the Delmarva peninsula, where chicken farms are everywhere and processing plants are automated, a handful of men take special pains to "make a nice killing."

In their view, the chickens and turkeys they hand-kill at a rate of 1,800 and 360 an hour, respectively, should feel no pain.

"God want you don't make ... pain for any animal," said one of the men. "Kill him nicely."

Their locks and curls protruding from under construction-worker-type hard hats, their black garments hidden under blood-stained white coats, they are the six Hasidic "killing rabbis," or shochets, of Jarmco, Maryland's only kosher poultry plant, where birds are processed under rabbinical supervision to ensure that all Jewish dietary laws are observed.

Three more rabbis, known as mashgiachs, supervise the salting and disemboweling of the birds. A chief rabbi oversees the kosher operation and, after work, acts as spiritual leader and Old Testament teacher to the group.

"My understanding is there's levels of kosher kill," said plant manager Jack Nelson, 53, who used to work for Delmarva chicken king Frank Perdue and is not Jewish. "Supposedly, we're a high level of kosher kill."

The rabbis work side by side with 125 local residents, mostly women, who earn up to $4.65 an hour as salters, eviscerators, cutters and deboners. Because of the ritualistic hand-killing, the pace is slower than at non-kosher plants.

"That's why I stay," said one 52-year-old woman who commutes almost 80 miles each day from Pocomoke City, Md., farther down the shore. "It's slow work."

The 10 bearded rabbis commute for four hours by van from Brooklyn's Borough Park, arriving Sunday night and leaving Thursday after work, in time to be home for the Jewish Sabbath, which begins Friday at sundown. Here, they live in a small trailer park.

They sleep in three trailers and worship and cook in one. In the middle of the courtyard is a single picnic table. There is no radio or television, by design.

"You see things you are not allowed to see," explained Ahrom Herskowitz, 27, who supervises the salting of the birds. "Make the men very wild."

What also makes men "very wild," the rabbi explains, is blood in the bird. That is why the poultry is salted and soaked, to drain the blood. "You eat wild animals, the men get also wild," he said.

TEXAS ★ CELEBRITY ★ RECIPE

"I named this spaghetti sauce 'Spacey' because I wish I had some of it to eat on the moon when I walked there in 1969. Texas is a state with people who think like adventurous souls. I believe Sam Houston, Davy Crockett and just about any Texan you can think of would love this sauce." — Alan L. Bean, Astronaut

SPACEY SPAGHETTI SAUCE

2 large cans whole tomatoes
3 small cans tomato paste
3 large cans tomato sauce
½ teaspoon soda (to remove acid)
¼ cup olive oil
3 onions, finely chopped
11 large garlic cloves, finely chopped
2 to 3 green peppers, chopped
2 pork ribs, wrapped in cheesecloth for easy removal
2 beef ribs, wrapped in cheesecloth for easy removal
2 teaspoons Italian herb seasoning
2 teaspoons sweet basil
1 teaspoon thyme
2 teaspoons oregano
½ bunch fresh parsley, chopped
2 bay leaves
3 teaspoons black pepper
3 teaspoons salt
4 teaspoons sugar
½ cup freshly grated Romano or Parmesan cheese

Into a large crockpot, pour tomatoes, paste and sauce. Add soda and stir well. In a frying pan, place olive oil, onions, garlic, green peppers and meat. When all these are slightly browned, pour contents into crockpot. Cover, place on low setting and simmer for 6 to 8 hours. Then remove the meat, add herbs, seasonings, sugar and cheese. Cover and continue to simmer on low setting until sauce reaches desired consistency.

Burger King ruffles feathers

ATLANTA (UPI) — Chick-fil-A restaurants, its feathers a bit ruffled, did a little squawking last week in taking exception to recent advertising that suggests Burger King sells the only unprocessed chicken finger fast-food.

Chick-fil-A officials launched a public campaign against the claims, saying they were a "bit irritated" their "nuggets" were overlooked in advertisements for Burger King's new "Chicken Tenders."

"They've either ignored us or did not recognize there were other products out there that are not processed," said Don Perry, a spokesman for Chick-fil-A, a fast-food chain of 330 restaurants in 31 states.

Chick-fil-A officials said they have been selling "Chick-fil-A Nuggets" for several years that are made of 100-percent breast meat — the same as Burger King's "Chicken Tenders."

In television commercials, Burger King states its chicken tenders, strips of deep-fried breast meat, are "not processed like nuggets." The tenders are "not chicken nuggets ... (but) real chicken fillet," one advertisement said.

Most observers figured the Burger King advertisements were targeted at McDonalds, the No. 1 fast-food chain, and its "Chicken McNuggets." But Burger King officials said that is not necessarily the case.

"We really were trying to aim the campaign at no one in particular," said Joyce Myers, a spokeswoman at Burger King headquarters in Miami. "In our research, we found most nuggets were made from parts of the chicken, not 100 percent breast as our 'Tenders' are. We just wanted to say to American consumers ... that most nuggets are made out of processed chunks."

Some fast-food chains have acknowledged processing chicken finger food by using a mixture of white and dark or machine-formed meat.

But Chick-fil-A officials complained the ads unfairly used an overly broad brush to paint a negative picture.

"We are concerned with what Burger King is saying in its advertising because it could lead consumers to believe 'Chicken Tenders' are the only unprocessed chicken finger food available," said Steve Robinson, vice president of marketing.

"In fact, Chick-fil-A was the first to introduce nuggets nationally, and we've been serving all-breast meat nuggets since their national introduction in 1982," Robinson said.

Chick-fil-A officials said they did not want to start a public war of words with the fast-food giant — Burger King has 4,600 restaurants worldwide — but merely wanted "to set the record straight."

Chef in training for 'Olympics'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jim Hughes is in serious training to compete for a chance at the 1988 Culinary Olympics in Frankfurt, Germany — working especially hard on his Loin of Lamb With Rosemary Sauce.

That recipe and a handful of others created by the executive chef at the J.W. Marriott Hotel in Washington won him honors recently at the Delaware Valley Chefs Association Culinary Arts Salon in Philadelphia.

The salon is the largest culinary show in the East, with more than 200 professional entries from New Jersey to Ann Arbor, Mich.

LOIN OF LAMB WITH ROSEMARY SAUCE

1½ pounds lamb loin, deboned
¾ cup plus 2 Tbsp rosemary
3 cloves garlic
2¼ cups oil
2 tbsp. clarified butter
2½-3 pounds lamb bones
2 tbsp. shallots

Marinate the lamb loin in 2 tablespoons rosemary, garlic and 2 cups oil for about 2 hours. Drain and saute in clarified butter over moderate heat for 30 minutes. Finish in a 325-degree oven for 45 minutes, until medium.

For the rosemary sauce, take all the trimmings and bones and saute in one-quarter cup of oil and 2 tablespoons shallots until brown, about 30 minutes. Pour off excess oil.

Cover with 2 ½ cups water and let reduce down to dry, about 30 minutes. Add 2 cups water to cover and simmer for 45 minutes. Add three-quarters cup rosemary and reduce by two thirds. Strain and serve over sliced loin. Makes 4 servings.

THE BUTCHER

Meat facts studied

By MERLE ELLIS

By golly, we got us some real research now — The National Consumer Retail Beef Study.

"Research results critical to the future profitability of cattlemen, packers and retailers were revealed in a new study conducted by the beef industry," I read.

No longer do butchers have to rely on non-scientific over-the-counter comments from customers and common sense to know what it is customers want, like we used to do back in the olden days. No, sir! We got us some real research now.

I wish my dad was alive to see it. He'd be pleased. So much of what he told me, when he was teaching me the trade, turns out to be true.

The new study, coordinated by the Texas Agricultural Experimental Station at Texas A&M University, along with the USDA, discovered that "different consumer segments prefer different kinds of beef."

It's just like Dad used to say: "Son," he used to say to me, "not all of our customers want the same kind of beef." He used to call folks "customers," and he said the word with a certain respect that doesn't seem to be there these days when I hear talk of "consumer segments."

Maybe that's another study.

"TAKE MRS. Beacom," Dad told me. "She's always on some kind of diet. She wants everything as lean as you got. She'll have you digging through a display looking for the leanest steak, the leanest roast, the leanest anything.

"So what you do is this: Save some good lean cuts when you run across them, but don't put them on top of the display. If they're on top she'll have you digging clear through the display to find something just a little bit leaner. What you do is put them underneath.

"Then when Mrs. Beacom comes in and says 'Have you got some real nice lean ones, Merle?' Then you reach underneath and take out the ones you were saving for her. She'll be happy as can be!

"Now Doc Graham, he's different. He knows his meat. When he comes in here for steaks on Saturday you make sure he gets the best we've got. He doesn't mind paying for them, but he wants the best. Well aged and nicely marbled; but you trim them up good."

There are a couple of other things Dad knew — most good butchers did I guess — that this new study proves. Dad used to say: "Fat is where the flavor is in the meat. It takes a little marbling to make a good steak."

Sure enough, the results of the study show that "on the average, consumers give higher palatability ratings to steaks with more marbling."

SECONDLY, THE survey says, "the industry can enhance beef sales and the overall image of beef by removing excess trimmable fat from retail cuts before sale." It's just like Dad said, "you trim them up good, like you would if you were going to take them home. Folks don't mind paying the price, but they don't want to pay for a lot of fat."

According to industry leaders: "One of the most significant findings from this study is that the consumer's perception of leaner beef is better trimmed, not necessarily less marbled beef. This fact combined with the results showing a definite segmentation with a market for differing types of beef among beef consumers has important implications for our beef merchandising practices."

Now that we know for a fact every fact we ever knew about beef quality, I wonder how those facts will affect the beef in the market place?

Maybe now cattlemen will begin crossbreeding for quality and not just for size.

Maybe, but I doubt it!

Maybe now cattlemen will send their beef to market when it's ready to go to market instead of holding animals until they're over-fat waiting for the price to go up, which they know won't happen until the supply goes down.

Maybe, but I doubt it!

Maybe now meat cutters will trim beef and treat beef the way they would if they were going to take it home themselves instead of throwing it in the display case like so much expensive garbage, "take it or leave it."

Maybe that will happen, but I doubt it!

Maybe you'll see the return of meatmen like my dad, who knew even before they started studying such things that different customers had different wants and needs that needed to be catered to. Maybe? No chance!

Know what we really need? A new study to determine what to do with this new study!

MISD trustees favor new boundary plan

At right is a map signifying the MISD's plan to redraw high school boundaries. Students residing in the shaded areas of the city limits will attend Lee High School while the remainder are assigned to Midland High School. The above map of approved changes in rural high school boundaries, assigns students residing in the shaded areas to LHS; the remainder are assigned to MHS.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees has paved the way for the first change in high school boundaries since 1975, voting six-to-one in favor of a staff-prepared plan to balance Midland and Lee High Schools. At the same time, trustees delayed closing the high school campuses until the district can afford the estimated $600,000 needed to construct additional parking facilities.

After studying data on total and ethnic enrollment and student achievement, the board on Tuesday approved on first reading a plan that would assign to Lee High School students living within the city limits and west of a line formed by Midland Drive, North Loop 250, Midkiff Road, West Wall Street, Thomason Drive, West Loop 250, State Highway 80, and Rankin Highway. Also included are students living in the area bounded by North Loop 250, Fairgrounds Road, Highway 80, Illinois Avenue, Big Spring Street, East Golf Course Road, and Lamesa Highway. The remainder of the students living within the city limits would attend Midland High School.

The board also approved recommended changes in rural boundaries assigning those students who live in an area bounded by the city limits, Rankin Highway, the extension of County Road 260, the extension of Holiday Hill Road, Warren Road and County Roads 1788 and 868 to Lee High School. The remainder of those rural students would be assigned to Midland High School.

The plan, according to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, balances within 4 percent the two high schools in the areas of black, Hispanic, rural and total enrollment, and in student ability and achievement. About 3,000 of the 10,820 students currently in kindergarten through sixth grade would be directly affected.

Baressi said the plan would eliminate the potential for disparities under the present boundary scheme by assigning 5,412 students to Lee High School and 5,408 students to Midland High School.

He said the plan also would eliminate possible disparities in ethnic breakdown. Of the total student population at Lee High School, about 61 percent would be Anglo, 27 Hispanic and 10 percent black. At Midland High School, about 61 percent of the total student population would be Anglo, 29 percent Hispanic and 9 percent black. The difference in rural student enrollment would be balanced within three students with 598 being assigned to Lee High School and 595 to Midland High School.

At Lee High School, the average student achievement scores would be about 60 percent while the Midland High School average would be about 59 percent. The staff arrived at those percentages using average California Achievement Test scores for students currently in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, Baressi said.

Joe Reed, who cast the lone dissenting vote, said the plan balances numbers, but seriously erodes at the socio-economic profile. The Emerson Elementary School neighborhood — a longtime Lee High School feeder area — has yielded consistent parental leadership, he said, and the shift of that neighborhood to Midland High School would have a negative effect on Lee High School. Reed resides at 1710 Cessna Drive, one of the areas affected by the boundary change.

In other action, trustee K. Michael Conaway asked and received support from the board to study the possibility of implementing a grandfather clause that would allow students affected by the boundary change to choose between one of the two high schools if they have older siblings enrolled there. The study will be presented to trustees on May 13.

The board will hear citizen input on the boundary matter during a public hearing at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Sam Houston Elementary School cafeteria, 2000 W. Louisiana Ave. Speakers will have three minutes to present factual information only. To reserve time, call the superintendent's office at 682-8611.

Trustees in an unexpected move agreed the cost of closing the high school campuses was too great to justify the expense next year.

Midlanders ask council's help with burglary problem

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

More than 20 burglaries in a 16-block area in three months.

Security doors destroyed.

Footprints left on doors and walls.

A feeling of no followup by the Police Department.

This has led to a panic epidemic in a neighborhood in northeast Midland, according to several of the residents who have been burglarized. Willie Barber, representing those residents, presented a petition signed by 84 residents in a four block-by-four block area asking the City Council for help on the problem.

The council, during its regular meeting Tuesday at City Hall, said they would encourage the Police Department to make some efforts to stay on top of the situation, but the residents also need to watch and report "things not in the ordinary."

Between February and early April, said Barber, burglaries have occurred at the following addresses: 1603 E. Pecan, 1800 E. Oak, 1609 E. Oak, 1608 E. Oak, 1812 E. Oak, 2102 N. Benton, 1724 E. Pine, 1302 E. Oak, 1801 E. Oak, 1723 E. Maple, 1608 E. Hickory, 200 E. Shandon, 1901 N. Benton, 209 E. Spruce, 1311 E. Magnolia, 1405 E. Oak, 1400 E. Parker, 1725 E. Oak and 1725 E. Maple.

"My major complaint is we feel the local police department isn't doing anything we know of to stop these burglaries," said Barber. A Neighborhood Watch program has been set up in one area, but the burglaries have continued, he noted.

"In over 50 percent of these cases, no one was sent out to investigate for fingerprints and footprints. Out my back door there's some footprints," Barber said of the evidence remaining from a burglary at his home, 1311 E. Magnolia.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon said the number of burglary cases for the first three months of the year totaled 655, which is an increase of 80 over the same period last year. To date, the Police Department has cleared 23 percent and made 69 arrests, he said.

"We're looking at the economic difficulties people are beginning to experience" as one reason for the increase in burglaries, said Gideon. He acknowledged there has been a "severe" problem in Barber's area and more manpower has been put out. Eight arrests have been made in connection with burglaries in that area, including two on Monday afternoon.

Gideon also said each burglary report is assigned to a detective, who then is required to contact the victim.

But one woman said she had a $500 security door on the back of her house and it was pried open during a March 13 burglary. She's had no contact from a police officer.

Betty Johnson said she still has footprints "that long," her hands spread at least a foot apart, on her back door. "There were footprints all under a window. The house was so torn up I couldn't tell what I was missing.

"You get paranoid — afraid of going into your house. You're so scared you just pray there's nothing gone when you get home," she said.

Another woman added: "I think it's something that's got us in a panic. Our teen-age kids are scared. We need extra protection for a while."

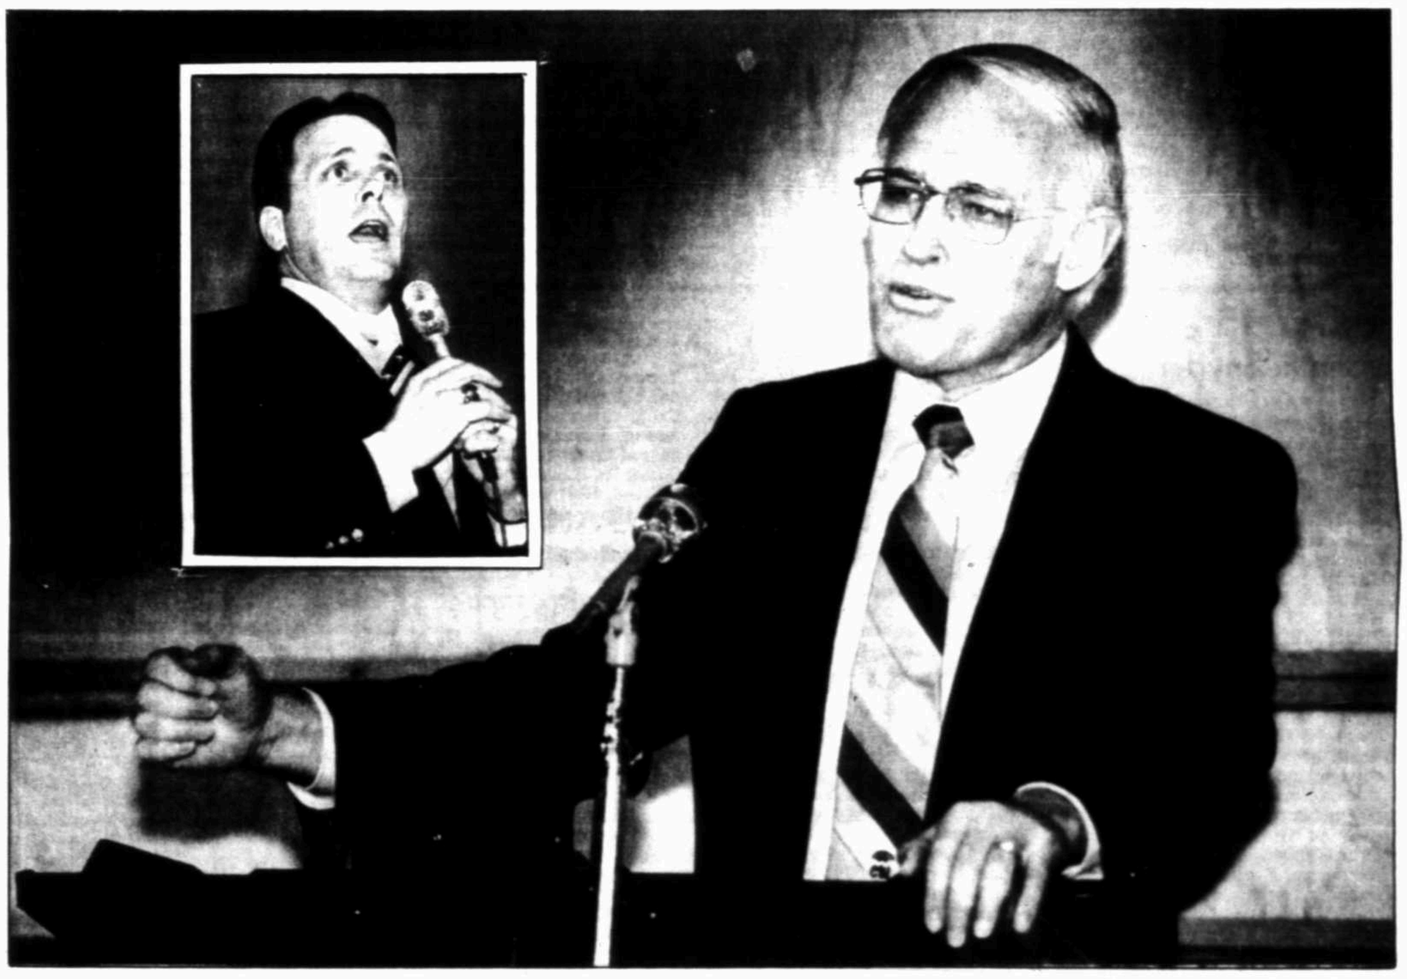

But Mayor G. Thane Akins said, "You can double or triple the number of police and it won't stop burglars. I've been burglarized twice and I'm at the point I hope I do walk in on one of them one day. It sounds like someone in the neighborhood who's doing this...someone who knows when you're gone."

Councilman Steve Davidson said his home also has been burglarized, but he advised the group that the best prevention is Neighborhood Watch. "Regardless of the situation, the Neighborhood Watch signs are a deterrent. Also, mark your property. That will help more than by taking footprints or fingerprints."

But one woman noted that Neighborhood Watch signs don't always work. "Booker Chandler has a Neighborhood Watch sign on the corner at his house," she said, and Chandler's house is among the list of those burglarized.

At the conclusion of the session, the mayor said the council could encourage the Police Department to stay on top of the situation but advised the residents also to watch the neighborhood.

Judge to rule Friday for mistrial motion

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A ruling is expected Friday on a motion for a mistrial in the second attempted-sexual-assault trial of Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry, according to defense attorney John W. Smith.

Judge James H. Clack has set a hearing for 10 a.m. in Midland's 142nd District courtroom, Smith said Tuesday. If Clack denies the mistrial motion, he will then hear testimony on punishment.

Sprayberry, 45, was convicted Thursday in Abilene of attempting to force his former secretary to perform oral sex while they were riding in his car on April 26, 1984.

But Smith asked for a mistrial after it was learned two of the jurors had left the jury room during deliberations to get soft drinks. Jurors are not supposed to separate after they start discussing a case.

If Clack lets the conviction stand, he will decide punishment himself. Attempted sexual assault is a third-degree felony with a penalty range of two to 10 years in prison and an optional fine up to $5,000, but Sprayberry also would be eligible for probation.

Sprayberry has refused several prosecution offers to drop the charges in exchange for his resignation.

According to Robert Flowers, executive director of the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct, Sprayberry would not be automatically removed from office Friday if Clack were to let the conviction stand.

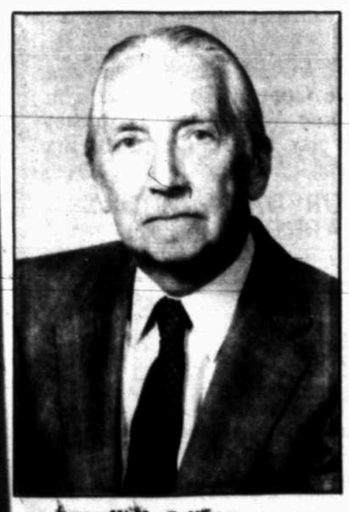

Smith has already said Sprayberry will appeal a conviction, and the Midland magistrate could not be formally suspended until that appeal is exhausted, Flowers said this morning by telephone from Austin.

"Such an appeal shall have the effect of superseding such judgment" unless the judge decides it's in the public interest to suspend him, said Flowers, quoting from Texas law statutes.

Sprayberry took an unpaid leave of absence after being indicted in November. His formal removal from office could only be done by the Judicial Conduct Commission or a district judge, Flowers said.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

W.H. "Bill" Collyns, who is lauded as "a man of rare ability and esteem," received The Exchange Club's Golden Deeds Award on Tuesday night and today was to receive the Midland Downtown Lions Club's Ray Gwyn Humanitarian Award.

Collyns, 77, is a veteran Midland civic leader and was editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram from 1946 to 1979.

He received The Golden Deeds Award from The Exchange Club, a service organization, at the Midland Country Club.

"It's one of the greatest honors that has ever come my way in my 50 years in Midland," Collyns said today of the Golden Deeds Awards. "It recognizes my efforts in volunteer community service."

The Lions Club's Humanitarian Awards was to recognize Collyns as "a man of rare ability and esteem," noted Gwyn, a real-estate broker who in 1984 was the first recipient of the award. The 1985 award went to Jno. P. Butler, retired senior chairman of the board and consultant to the president of RepublicBank/First National Midland. Collyns, Gwyn and Butler are past presidents of the Midland Downtown Lions Club, which is the largest Lions Club in the United States.

Gwyn today noted that Collyns is variously known as "Mr. Midland," "The Good Windmill Man," "President," "Editor," "Soldier," "Mr. West Texas," and "A-1 Lion."

The Golden Deeds Award was presented to Collyns by Dan Moriarty, president of The Exchange Club. Joe Kloesel, former president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, paid tribute to Collyns "in a most magnificent way," Collyns said.

"I'm just delighted at the recognition and appreciate it," Collyns said, "and feel very humble. It is one of the most meaningful things that has occurred in my life."

John F. McGuigan, treasurer of The Exchange Club, noted that Collyns is an "outstanding" citizen. "He is extremely well known and is much admired," McGuigan said.

In 1943 at age 34, Collyns was named as the Midland Junior Chamber of Commerce (now, Midland Jaycees) "Outstanding Young Man."

Collyns, who has lived in Midland since 1935, said his role and helping and observing Midland "grow up" from a town of 5,000 people in 1935 to a city of about 100,000 people in 1986 has been a "most rewarding experience."

Collyns was born Nov. 11, 1908, in San Angelo, moved from McCamey to Midland in 1935 with Humble Oil & Refining Co. (now, Exxon), and served as manager of the Midland Chamber of Commerce from 1936 until 1946 except for a two-year leave-of-absence for overseas duty with the U.S. Army in World War II.

He edited the Midland newspaper from 1946 until 1979, when he retired as editor emeritus. In the ensuing two years, he served for two years as a consultant on community affairs with The First National Bank of Midland.

Collyns, who is still active in community life, is president of the West Texas Chamber Foundation.

Collyns is past president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, the Texas State Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Downtown Lions Club, Junior Achievement of Midland, the Chamber of Commerce Managers Association of West Texas, the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors, the West Texas Press Association, and the Texas Editorial Association.

At present, he is servingsas secretary of the Industrial Foundation of Midland and the Midland Industrial Development Corporation. He is a member of the Midland Centennial and Sesquicentennial Commission, is secretary of the Board of Executors of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library & Hall of Fame, is a member of the executive committee of the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers, and is elder emeritus and trustee of the First Presbyterian Church of Midland.

Collyns serves on the boards of directors of Community and Senior Services of Midland, Presbyterian Homes (Trinity Towers/Manor Park), Texas Good Roads/Transportation Association.

Among other honors Collyns has received was being named as a "Centennial Citizens" in 1985 by Leadership Midland Alumni and the Midland Centennial Commission.

MCH wants re-survey to resolve Medicare eligibility issue

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital officials are confident a re-survey of the facility for Medicare certification will resolve questions of eligibility.

On April 16 MCH officials were notified by the federal Health Care Finance Administration in Dallas that the county-owned hospital would lose its Medicare payment eligibility May 3 because of "several deficiencies" found by a five-member Texas Department of Health licenses and certification team.

Loss of Medicare eligibility would mean MCH would be deprived of about 39.1 percent of its budgeted funds, roughly $1.5 million monthly.

Carol Peters, a program specialist with the Texas Department of Human Resources Indigent Care Project in Austin Friday said, loss of Medicare payment eligibility by MCH would also probably mean the Odessa hospital would lose its state Medicaid eligibility because both programs are subject to the same guidelines.

The loss of as much as 42 percent of its revenues would seriously jeopardize the operation of MCH, according to Ector County Fiscal Services Director Tom Pace. The MCH budget for the 1985-86 fiscal year is $59.2 million, according to Kathy Porter, MCH public information officer.

Loss of Medicare eligibility would also mean Medicare recipients would have to travel to other area hospitals, in Midland, Andrews or Monahans, to receive medical care. According to Ms. Porter, patients eligible for Medicare, most of them elderly, would not be eligible for indigent care at MCH because of their Medicare eligibility.

MCH officials, however, are confident a re-survey of the Odessa medical facility, probably in the next week or so, by the state health department will find deficiencies cited in the earlier survey have been corrected.

The deficiencies cited by the state health department survey team included: failure of MCH personnel to record patient temperatures every 30 minutes; delinquency of doctors in completing patient records; and failure of the MCH transfusion committee to hold monthly meetings.

Survey findings were submitted to the federal Health Care Finance Administration and MCH was subsequently notified it would lose its Medicare eligibility as of May 3.

MCH administrator Sam Glenney says he has "strong feelings" the survey was not fairly conducted, that the hospital should have been given an opportunity to "formally complain or rebut the allegations." Glenney indicated he doesn't understand how MCH could pass a March-April inspection by the Joint Commission of Hospital Accreditation and then be cited by the state health department a couple of weeks later.

Following notification of the loss of Medicare certification effective May 3, Glenney asked that a re-survey be conducted prior to that date. Tuesday, Ms. Porter said that, while she understood there would be another survey, MCH officials have received no word as to when it will take place.

Smith calls for district to work together to solve problems

From Staff Reports

Lamar Smith, Republican candidate for the 21st Congressional District seat, on Tuesday held a news conference in front of Angels Stadium to stress that while Midland and San Antonio compete in Texas League baseball, they are united by hopes for the future and concerns for the oil and gas industry.

"It may be a temptation to play one part of the district off against another," said Smith. "This is a disservice and counterproductive to all the people of the 21st District."

Also competing with Smith for the Republican nomination in the May 3 primary are Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, Henry Gandy of Kerrville, and Jeff Wentworth, Van Archer and Duke Embs, all of San Antonio.

He called for the district to work together to solve the problems that face the domestic oil industry in the face of unstable oil prices.

Smith also renewed his call for a temporary oil import fee, pointing out the recent events in Libya show the need to keep the domestic industry running. "We, as a nation, must be prepared to act decisively in times of crisis. If we become dependent on foreign oil for the fuel that it takes for the Navy to sail and for the Air Force to fly, we will not have the ability to defend our citizens or our interests at home or abroad. America will be at the mercy of oil-producing states in the Middle East."

The candidate has proposed a temporary oil import fee and cited a Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll which showed over half of those interviewed supported an oil import fee.

"Without a temporary import fee, there won't be many independent producers or much of the service side of the industry left for a comprehensive energy policy to assist," he said. "And without the wildcatter and service companies, America will lose thousands of barrels of production of oil."

Arizona man injured in accident

From Staff Reports

A 61-year-old Tucson, Ariz., man was listed in serious but stable condition in a local hospital this morning after a Tuesday traffic accident, according to hospital and police reports.

Howard Martin was driving his 1976 Volkswagon Bus east on Front Street about 5:20 p.m. when the van collided with a 1985 Chevrolet Suburban in the intersection of Front and Terrell streets, reports said.

Junior Fitts, 1724 S. Harrison, was northbound on Terrell in the Suburban when the accident occurred, according to reports. He was unhurt.

Martin suffered multiple fractures, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman. His passenger, Connie Hanson, was treated for minor injuries and released, the spokeswoman said.

After the collision, the van overturned and burned. It was considered a total loss, according to the Midland Fire Department.

In other fire reports, a vacant house at 301 E. Parker sustained slight damage after a storage shed caught fire Tuesday.

The fire caused heavy damage to the shed and a fence. The house owned by Adobe Realtors sustained minor damage to its trim, and slight smoke damage, reports said. The cause of the fire was undetermined.

MISD

Architect committee chairman Ron Britton spoke on behalf of the board, saying the district would need about $600,000 to build new parking facilities at both high schools to control traffic and enforce the close campuses.

"This does not mean that the issue is dead," said Britton, "It's strictly a delay until the budget can afford this expenditure."

COUNCIL

In other action, the council decided to leave the traffic signal at I Street and Wadley Avenue in operation, but they will move the school crossing to a location west of I Street.

Public Works Director Fred Baker said a study showed that with the amount of traffic at that location, a traffic signal operated by pedestrians when they needed to cross would be sufficient and meet state standards.

Representing opponents of the idea from Hillander School and the neighborhood south of Wadley was Randall Kirk, who said the new light would cause confusion.

Three Midlanders were commended for their work. Vic White, aviation director, was accepted as a member of the American Association of Airport Executives. Dr. Weldon Horton received a commendation for his work on the City Secretary's Advisory Committee on organizing city records. And Bobby Trimble was cited for his years of work on the Christmas in April program since it was started in 1973.

The council approved an ordinance that will allow the city to file a lien against the property for delinquent accounts of the owners, with the bottom limit set at $50. Finance Director Troy Gifford said this proposal is "plowing new ground" but the city had experienced a "sizeable write-off" of bad accounts last month. "This is one more avenue of protecting ourselves."

The council deferred action on a contract between the city and Midland YMCA involving the Y's use of Community Development funds to build a new facility in northeast Midland. The land on which it will be located was renamed to Martin Luther King Jr. Park.

And the council approved a resolution refunding $27 million in Airport Revenue Bonds that had been obtained in late 1984 to construct a new Air Park and additions at Midland Regional Air Terminal. The decision to shelve the projects and repay those "loans" was made by the council at its April 8 meeting.

SPRAYBERRY—

Flowers would not comment on any specific inquiry regarding Sprayberry, but he did say the commission is almost always involved when a judge or magistrate is indicted.

"The commission can start removal proceedings totally independently of a criminal investigation," said Flowers. "We do investigate all complaints, and where there is an indictment, the commission is involved."

Sprayberry was also indicted for three misdemeanor counts of telephone harassment and two misdemeanor counts of barratry, or improperly soliciting cases for an attorney. These cases were to be tried after the felony charge was disposed.

Man dies, four injured in gas plant explosion

BRYAN'S MILL (AP) — An explosion and fire in the sulphur unit of a gas processing plant killed one man and injured four others, authorities said.

Fred Brackman, 64, died about nine hours after the 8:15 a.m. explosion Tuesday at the plant run by Shell Western E&P Inc., a subsidiary of Shell Oil Co., a spokeswoman at the University Hospital in Little Rock said.

Brackman, a Jett Welding Co. employee, had been flown by helicopter from a Texarkana hospital after suffering burns over nearly 95 percent of his body, the spokeswoman said.

A second victim was in critical but stable condition late Tuesday in the burn center at Arkansas Children's Hospital. Spokeswoman Barbara Mueth said Jerry Gibson, 31, suffered burns over 58 percent of his body, half of which were third-degree.

Three other people were injured, two of them critically, when fire erupted at the plant that had been closed for maintenance, said John Wright, a Shell spokesman in New Orleans.

He said the injured included four Shell employees and Brackman, a contract worker.

The men were performing routine maintenance when the explosion occurred, but Shell spokesman Bill Scrimpshire said officials don't know yet what caused it. He added that a Shell team was conducting an investigation.

"I did smell the gas when I got here," said paramedic Ricky Wagstaff, who was the first rescuer on the scene. "The flames had dissipated just before we got here — the smoke and all."

Two burn victims — John Penny, 53, of Linden and Donald W. Banks, 55, of Atlanta — were transferred to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, said a hospital spokeswoman who asked not to be identified.

A fifth person, Tommy Watson, 27, of Marietta, Texas, was transferred to Schumpert Medical Center in Shreveport, La.

Travel agency urges boycott against nations which didn't support U.S.

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas travel agency is urging its customers against a European sojourn because no continental country supported the U.S. retaliatory strikes against Libya.

"There are many wonderful places to visit elsewhere in the world and Prestonwood Travel will be happy to send you there," the agency said in a newspaper ad. "But not Europe. Let's spend our tourist dollars with our friends."

Jim Mills, Prestonwood Travel's owner, ran the advertisement over the weekend calling for a boycott against countries that "refused to support America's fight against Libyan terrorism."

Betsy Pickett, assistant manager for Prestonwood Travel, said several people have called supporting the boycott.

"We strongly feel what the United States did was right, and if countries aren't going to support us, then we should only give our support to the ones that helped us out," she said.

She said the agency will encourage travel to Britain, which allowed the United States to use one of its air bases to launch the April 15 strike.

Meanwhile, other Dallas travel agents say the threat of terrorism isn't necessarily reducing European travel, but it is dampening enthusiasm for a summer vacation on the continent.

Customers are "a little apprehensive, but so far, they're going," said Dee Owen, an agent with Eagle Trav- saying don't travel Europe. We just tell them what the situation is. It's up to them then."

"People are going to different locations," said Cindy Hays, a travel consultant with Metro Travel Inc. "I think a lot of Americans have decided there's a lot here in America they haven't seen."

Clarice Muehlenthal, owner of World Wide Travel Service, agreed there is more interest in domestic travel.

"I think Alaska and Hawaii are going to sink from the sheer number of people going there," she said. "With the number of people going to Alaska, you're going to be able to walk there from deck to deck on the cruise ships."

Thinking about a heat pump?

Bob Lilly for Energas

Don't let 'em mess with your furnace!

Winter may be the last thing on your mind when you. air conditioner is broken.

But if you replace your air conditioner with an electric heat pump, they have to hook it up to your furnace. That's because a heat pump is so inefficient in our West Texas winter, it won't keep your house warm.

So along with a heat pump, you get all this stuff stuck on your furnace:

- a non-cycling reverse valve
- a defroster control unit
- a thermostatic expansion valve
- an outdoor thermostat and, a control box to run it all.

Now how can your furnace work better with all that on it? So if you need a new air conditioner, get a new air conditioner. And leave your reliable gas furnace alone.

ACU to terminate its geology department

ABILENE (AP) — Abilene Christian University's board of trustees will be asked next month to close the school's geology department in a move to battle an operating deficit, department head Dr. Charles Felix says.

Dr. C.G. Gray, vice president for academic affairs, will recommend the measure to the trustees effective this fall, Felix said.

A university source told the Abilene Reporter-News that the move is an attempt at austerity in light of an operating deficit of about $1 million this school year.

ACU's honors program and its learning assistance center also are to be terminated, the source said.

Trustees of Abilene Christian, an affiliate of the Churches of Christ, will be asked to take up the austerity proposal on May 10, Felix said.

Felix said he is to be reassigned to the biology department, and that ACU is laying off two other geology professors.

The geology department was founded in 1981.

Abilene oilman and energy magnate Jack V. McGlothlin, whose family has ties to the university, said the closing is indicative of tough times in the oil patch.

Teen arrested in shooting

ABILENE (AP) — A 16-year-old boy was arrested Tuesday in connection with the shooting death of a Wylie High School football player, police said.

The youth, an Abilene High School student, was arrested at 5:15 p.m. at his home after police received a tip from police in another city.

David Harvey was shot in the face Sunday shortly after midnight with a small handgun following a verbal confrontation with four Hispanic men, Sgt. Roger Dickey said.

"We believe the youth in custody was responsible for the shooting," Dickey said.

Harvey was shot after he and four friends argued with three men and a youth in another car. A fistfight started among some of the occupants of the two cars after both drivers stopped their vehicles in a parking lot.

A passenger got out of the car containing the Hispanic men and fired four shots into Harvey's vehicle, police said. A bullet through an open window struck Harvey in the right cheek.

TECAT results expected

AUSTIN (AP) — Results of the statewide competency test for teachers and school administrators will be mailed out to individuals during the week of May 5, the Texas Education Agency said Tuesday.

Agency officials said the statewide results will be reported at the State Board of Education meeting beginning May 8.

A total of 201,000 educators took the exam on March 10. Officials had estimated that 95 percent would pass.

The TEA also announced Tuesday that a new competency test will be offered to teachers and school administrators who took the state-required test last month at three sites in Arlington where the exams were collected before everyone finished.

The TEA said the exams of approximately 300 people who were tested at the Arlington sites have been graded, and less than 5 percent will need to take it again.

Agents seize cocaine

BEAUMONT (AP) — Federal agents have grabbed more than 1,000 pounds of Colombian cocaine valued at $15 million in what is being called one of the biggest drug seizures in the state's history.

The arrests of three men Monday were the result of a six-week investigation involving the DEA, U.S. Customs, the Texas Department of Public Safety and authorities in Panama and Columbia.

About 1,072 pounds of cocaine was seized at the Hardin County airport near Beaumont, according to John Bott, spokesman for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in Houston.

Three men, including a Colombian national and a U.S. naturalized citizen from Colombia, were arrested without incident at the scene, Bott said.

One of the men arrested is believed to be the brother of a "fairly high-level violator, trafficker" of cocaine in Colombia, Bott said.

Judge sets execution date

CORSICANA (AP) — A judge ordered a May 23 execution date for Jose Moses Guzman, convicted of killing a Fort Worth man while stealing his car two years ago.

Guzman, 22, was found guilty of capital murder in the Feb. 4, 1984, death of Henry Spencer Finch, 62.

Finch was shot once in the chest as he attempted to stop three men from stealing his car at a service station near Corsicana, authorities said.

State District Judge Kenneth Douglas set the execution date Monday. The U.S. Supreme Court recently refused to hear Guzman's appeal of his 1984 conviction.

Strake may quit post as GOP chairman

Associated Press

State Republican Party Chairman George Strake is reconsidering his decision to step down in June, his spokeswoman says.

Strake had announced late last year that he would not seek re-election as chairman so he could devote more time to his family and his Houston oil business.

But Tuesday, Karen Parfitt Hughes, Strake's spokeswoman, said, "He is reconsidering and will make a final decision and an announcement at the end of the week."

Strake told The Associated Press Tuesday night he has scheduled a press conference Thursday in Austin and would not announce his plans until then.

In other Texas political developments Tuesday, Railroad Commission candidate John Pouland laid out his "hard ball" policy to stabilize oil prices, and gubernatorial candidate Bobby Locke released tax proposals to raise nearly $10 billion in new revenue.

"It means an import tariff that will make it worthwhile to maintain our domestic production," Pouland said. "It also means that if a country doesn't allow Americans to do business there, we shouldn't allow that country or its companies to do business here."

Pouland, a Democrat, said if Congress and the Texas Legislature fail to to change the situation, he would vote as a railroad commissioner to deny drilling, operating and transmission permits "to companies owned by countries that don't allow us the same privileges."

Locke, also a Democrat, proposed adding 50 cents to each restaurant bill for food containing preservatives, white flour or grease. He said this would raise $2.77 billion.

Locke, a San Antonio contractor, suggested a $50,000 annual license fee to be paid by banks for each "automatic money" machine, and said the state should get $2 on each returned check, with banks getting nothing. This would raise $2.315 billion, he said.

A 50-cent charge per credit card transaction would bring in $2.5 billion, Locke said.

In other developments, some prominent Austin Democrats are unhappy to find they are helping finance the campaign of a Republican candidate for Congress.

Last week, former Austin mayor Carole Rylander, who recently switched to the Republican party, revealed she had transferred money contributed to her old political account, when she was a Democrat mayor, to her present GOP campaign.

She seeks the seat now held by U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, a Democrat.

"I certainly didn't give her any money to run against Jake Pickle," said State District Judge Bob Perkins, who gave $100 in 1982 to the mayor's fund.

"A lot of people thought it was a questionable ethics call," said former mayor Roy Butler, who gave the Friends of the Mayor $250 in 1982. He is a Pickle backer now.

Jim Pyle, an Austin accountant, who prepared Mrs. Rylander's financial report, said the mayoral contributors were sent a memorandum on April 14 informing them their names would be included in the campaign report.

Mrs. Rylander said the transfer of funds was clearly legal and the attention was bring drawn to them merely as a campaign diversion.

Also Tuesday, a group of Abilene Republicans say they will support Democrat Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez in this year's general election.

A group of local Republicans and Democrats gave Gonzalez a reception Tuesday morning in support of his bid to win a full term in this year's election.

One of the organizers of reception was Abilene lawyer Dave Haigler, who has been very active in the county Republican Party the past few years.

Two Republicans and three Democrats are running for the Texas Supreme Court seat to which Gonzalez was appointed by Texas Gov. Mark White.

"He (Gonzalez) is a man of integrity," said Haigler.

"I'm going to take some flak and take some heat by backing a Democrat," he said. "We (the group of Republicans) just think this is just the best man for the job."

Haigler said there are a number of other Abilene Republicans who support Gonzalez but can't do so publicly.

Gonzalez said, "I'm the only thing (former GOP Gov. Bill) Clements and (Gov. Mark) White agree on."

Teen found dead on brother's grave

LAREDO (AP) — Cornelius Allen Trevino was a "happy-go-lucky" 14-year-old who ran track and played football and was looking forward to the upcoming school prom.

When he told friends he planned to kill himself, no one believed him.

They were horrified and bewildered when he was found shot in the heart lying on the grave of an older brother who died of a drug overdose in 1984.

"Apparently he went around Sunday and told his friends goodbye. They asked 'Where are you going?' and he said he was going to kill himself," brother Charlie Trevino said Tuesday as relatives and friends gathered for today's wake for the teen-ager.

"Twenty-one people have come up to us and said they knew. I wished they would have said something," Trevino, 21, said. "I don't know why he went to my brother's plot."

Cornelius, known as "Corny" to those close to him, went to L.J. Christen Junior High School. Charlie, who was eighth-grade class president there seven years ago, said he last saw his brother Saturday and that there didn't appear to be any problems. Cornelius left his grandmother's home Saturday night and never returned.

Cornelius' girfriend was the last to see him alive, his brother said.

"She came over here, but she was too broken up. She said she wished she was gone too," Charlie said Tuesday outside the funeral chapel. "We're afraid for her and some of his friends because whenever something like this happens it causes other people to feel guilty."

A City Cemetery caretaker found the teen-ager's body Monday morning sprawled on the grave of his older brother, Alejandro Trevino Jr., who overdosed at his home in May 1984 at the age of 21.

A .25-caliber pistol was found at the gravesite along with several bullets. The letters "D" and "P" and the outline of a heart were found on the grave, investigators said.

Webb County Justice of the Peace Albino Walker has not ruled officially on the death and said the investigation is continuing.

"I did get a report from the doctor who said the bullet went right through his heart," Walker said.

On Tuesday, Charlie Trevino, a student in Dallas, returned to the middle school to collect his brother's books and talk to friends and teacher.

"He was well-liked by all the students. He was very popular," said math teacher Frances Wawroski.

At L.J. Christen the motto is "Where Everybody is Somebody Special," and teachers said he fit that title.

"He was a happy-go-lucky student," said social studies teacher Rodolfo Martinez. "He laughed. He talked. He always was with some boys and girls. This all took us by surprise."

Some students could not concentrate on their classes because of the death.

"I had a class this morning that was pretty bad. It was very, very hard. They couldn't believe it," math teacher Alicia Pena said, struggling to hold back tears. "It just tore me up to see the boys like that. The girls crying I could understand."

Cornelius was the youngest of six children born to Alejandro and Thelma Trevino, who later divorced. The children's grandmother, Trinidad G. Trevino, raised the children and she was Cornelius' guardian, Charlie Trevino said.

"We all took care of him a lot," Charlie said. "We all wanted the best for him. He was the baby."

Mattox's office files suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday his office had filed suit against an Orange County man and his company for allegedly marketing and selling manufactured homes without being registered with the Texas Department of Labor and Standards.

Mattox's lawsuit names Keith J. Jannise, doing business as Keith's Mobile Homes Movers of Mauriceville, as defendant.

The suit was filed in state district court in Orange County late Monday.
