Good Evening!

PAMPA — A Pampa Middle School 8th-grader who carried a loaded .22 caliber revolver to school has raised school officials' concern for student safety.

PMS Principal Tim Powers said the juvenile carried the gun to school on three occasions, including the 8th grade picnic on May 12 at Recreation Park.

The incidents came to the attention of school officials after parents overheard students talking about seeing the student with the gun. The parents then contacted a teacher who referred the matter to Powers on Thursday.

Ten students who saw the juvenile with the gun gave statements to the police, and the juvenile admitted to bringing the gun to school, Powers said.

"My biggest concern is several students were aware that the child had the handgun at school and thought they were doing him a favor by not saying anything," Powers said.

The juvenile obtained the gun from his home. Police investigated the incidents Thursday.

Powers said school disciplinary action is pending consultation with attorneys.

PAMPA — Pampa High School graduation will be held at 8 p.m. today in McNeeley Field House. Valedictorian Jennifer Mays, salutatorian Richard Williams and 213 other graduates will be honored at the event.

The ceremony was scheduled to be held at Harvester Stadium, but wet weather conditions caused Principal John Kendall to move the event inside this morning.

Each graduate will be allotted eight tickets for friends and family members. People holding tickets will be allowed in until 7:30 p.m., and the general public will be let in after that.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Thousands of people were startled when an apparent earthquake rattled windows and shook walls.

No injuries or damage resulted from the tremors Thursday, which lasted a few seconds and were felt up to 40 miles away. Seismologists said the rumbling was almost certainly caused by a quake centered outside Buffalo, but they were still studying data, said Ian Buckle of the National Center for Earthquake Engineering Research at the University of Buffalo.

The Geological Survey of Canada pegged the quake at a magnitude of 3.0, Buckle said.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it will fix driver-side air bags on some 1995 Jeep Cherokees and hood latches on 175,000 Dodge Ram pickups.

The air bag needs to be inspected on about 70,000 Cherokees built between June 1994 and early February, Chrysler said Thursday. Some may have been assembled without an arming lever, and the bag will not deploy without it.

The problem was discovered during routine testing by the manufacturer, Breed Technologies Inc. There have been no reports of problems.

Owners of 175,000 late 1994 and early 1995 Dodge Ram pickup trucks are being told to have the secondary hood latch bracket replaced because it may not fasten properly, Chrysler said.

Disaster exercise provides training

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

Fifteen students were alive and well today after not being injured by a bomb that did not explode Thursday, while a boy that suffered a make-believe shot to the head in a hostage situation at Pampa Mall appeared no worse for wear.

The bombing and hostages Thursday afternoon were the result of the Gray County Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) and Local Emergency Planning Committees (LEPC) full scale training exercise to test local emergency officials response.

The scenario, as laid out by the exercise coordinators, began shortly after 1 p.m. Thursday as a local drug lord known as Uncle Billy Bob, played by David Boyd of Lefors, was arrested for running a red light. Arresting officers reportedly found 3,000 pounds of cocaine in his vehicle and took him to the Pampa police station.

Billy Bob's partners decide to break him out of jail, first by trickery, and failing that, by exploding a series of bombs across the city and taking hostages at the Pampa Mall to demand his release.

The organizations tested during the exercise were the Pampa Police Department, American Medical Transport, Pampa Central Dispatch, Pampa Fire Department and Coronado Hospital.

Participating as role players were members of the LEPC and CAER committees, Act I theatrical group, Gray County constables, Texas Department of Public Safety, the Texas Rangers and a variety of volunteers. Some 15 local high school students simulated mass casualty victims at the site of a reported bombing. The students were provided with make-up and plastic strap-on wounds to simulate gashes, tears and broken bones.

The victims were to be treated at the scene for their make-believe wounds by Fire Department and ambulance personnel, then transported to the hospital for emergency treatment.

The exercise almost ended before it started, however, when Billy Bob's henchman, played by Rocky Stewart dressed as a prison guard, showed up at the police department saying he had orders to take Billy Bob.

The scenario called for Stewart to be arrested and jailed with Billy Bob, causing another member of the band, played by DPS Trooper Johnny Carter, to take hostages at the Pampa Mall and call 911 to threaten the hostages and tell police officials that if they didn't release his Uncle Billy Bob, he would set off one of three bombs in the city.

But Chuck Flemings, the chief of police, released Billy Bob to the uniformed Stewart.

Carter called officials anyway to tell them that he set off a bomb at the Fork Stork Manufacturing plant, 822 E. Foster, so emergency personnel from the fire department and ambulance service could respond. Carter then released the hostages he had taken, pretending to shoot one for effect to complicate matters for medical personnel, and headed for the airport to meet Billy Bob, Stewart and the rest of their gang and make their escape in a helicopter. "We figured if he (Boyd) could get out, we'd be gone before anybody knew anything," Carter said. He was right. "From my perspective, it went well," said Ken Hall of Pampa's Office of Emergency Management. "We learned a lot." "We aren't here to criticize how everybody did their job," said Don Thompson, master coordinator of the exercise. "We're here to see if they did it and then look at ways to improve it." See DISASTER, Page 2

Barbecue time again

Kindergartners Hope Coutts and Maggie Hopkins share secrets during the Grandview-Hopkins annual barbeque celebrating the last day of school for the independent school district south of Pampa. Thursday's barbeque is a tradition dating back some 70 years.

GRANDVIEW-HOPKINS — Students at the Grandview Hopkins Independent School District were on their first day of summer vacation today after their annual barbecue dinner at the school on Thursday.

Classes were dismissed at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, according to Norman Baxter, superintendent, following the traditional barbecue dinner that the schools holds each year.

"Ruben Baggerman donates the meat for the barbecue every year," Baxter said, "and the PTO pays Dyer's to cook it."

The tradition dates back about 70 years, the superintendent said. Baggerman's wife, Lora Baggerman, said it began in the 1920s. She said her husband's father and mother began donating the meat in the 1950s and continued the tradition until his mother died in 1985. Her husband has been donating the meat since.

Although Ruben Baggerman was sick Thursday and unable to attend, his wife and son were there slicing the meat.

"It's the first time ever he's missed it," Mrs. Baggerman said. Other families brought covered dishes.

Rain storms continue to bring moisture to area

Rain storms lasting most of the day dumped a total of 1.71 inches on an already wet Pampa Thursday, bringing the month's total to 4.21 inches, according to KGRO-KOMX meteorologist Darrell Sehorn.

That brings the year-to-date total to 8.91 inches, well above the average 6.68 inches through the month of May.

Rain also drenched most of the surrounding area Thursday.

Jody Bradford of the Carson County Extension Office estimated that two inches fell on White Deer, 1.75 inches on Panhandle and about 1.5 inches on Conway.

Estimates from McLean totaled 1.1 inches, according to Shawn Crawford. Chris Brown estimated that one inch fell in Lefors. In Miami, about 1.5 inches was reported by Tania Lunsford.

PEDC to help find land for juvenile girls center

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

The Pampa Economic Development Corporation may be looking for 20 acres on which to build a juvenile detention center for girls.

Gray County Judge Richard Peet told the PEDC board of directors Thursday afternoon the county had been talking with a private company, Corplan, about the possibilities of building a juvenile detention center for girls. Albeft Nichols, Gray County juvenile probation officer, said this would be the first facility of its type for juvenile females.

"All the ones being built now are for boys," Nichols said of the juvenile facilities around the state.

He said he was unaware of any such centers for girls anywhere in the nation.

Nichols said he had sent out letters to the 254 counties in the state of Texas to try to find out which counties might be interested in using such a facility. Interest has come from as far away as Orange in Southeast Texas, he said.

Although it is still in the negotiating stages, Peet said what they had discussed was a 120- to a 140-bed facility costing about $4 million. Once the agreement had been negotiated, he said, company officials told him they would have the facility in operation within 10 months. It would employ 65 to 70 people.

Peet told the PEDC board that he felt the community needed to move rapidly because he had heard that several other counties were being approached.

The economic development board voted unanimously to commit to providing a 20-acre site. Peet had initially inquired about taking 20 acres from a 213 acre tract the PEDC owns next to recreation park, but the board indicated that they would like to keep that separate and find another area. Acreage within the 213 acre tract, however, could be used if no other suitable property could be found, according to Vic

Raymond, board member. In other business, the board discussed the status of payments on the Fork Stork manufacturing plant project. To date, $157,022.21 has been spent on equipment and $88,125.00 has been spent on the building. Under the agreement with the company which manufactures trailers, the money spent on equipment is a loan which will be repaid while the the money spent on the building is a grant.

Bill Waters, president of the PEDC, however, noted that under the agreement the economic development corporation owned part of the building and money put into building improvements could be recaptured at a future date if the property sold.

The PEDC has committed $300,000 to the project.

The board also reviewed an advertisement for Pampa in the May, 1995, issue of Site Selection Magazine. The third page ad cost $1,591.03 per month and will run again in June, August, September and November issues.

By unanimous vote the board renewed the lease on their offices with Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Waters said the lease is $100 per month and includes space, utilities and janitorial services.

Waters told the board that an appraisal on a piece of property west of Pampa on the Borger highway had come in appreciably lower than the price the owner of the property had been asking.

The board had sought the property in connection with moving a prospective company into it.

The land appraised for $233,000. The asking price had been $400,000.

Another company that the PEDC is assisting, Star Jet, a perforating company, was conducting an environmental study on a building at 120 S. Hobart. If suitable, the company would need to be in the building by July.

The board went into executive session to discuss personnel matters.

Firemen carry another make-believe victim out of the Fork Stork Manufacturing building after the bombing incident that shook the building in the mock training exercise Thursday afternoon. Fifteen local high school students simulated mass casualty victims at the site and were provided with make-up and plastic strap-on wounds to simulate gashes, tears and broken bones.

A brief oral critique was held at the site of the reported bombing, Fork Stork Manufacturing, following the exercise Thursday afternoon.

Hall said the different organizations involved would receive written critiques later.

The evaluation teams praised the fire department for not rushing into the building where the bombing was reported and where the 15 students moaned and groaned to add a touch of realism to their make-believe wounds.

They cautiously approached the building and surveyed the damage and began taking the make-believe dead and wounded according to their injuries.

Outside, ambulance personnel and fire fighters began emergency treatment and started transferring the actors to the hospital.

Evaluators at the hospital were praised for their organization and ability to cope with numerous injuries of a massive nature, but pointed out that of three ambulances in Pampa, one was out of town and ambulances from nearby communities that were called in were slow in arriving.

Coordinators said dispatchers handled the situation well, but noted that they also had to continue to do their work and handle the exercise, too.

"Communications is always a problem in any exercise," said Hall. "That's something we're always going to have to watch and work on."

Hall said that the communications between organizations was improved over previous exercises with radio channels that were open to all the emergency personnel.

The only real casualty during the exercise was Lynda Duncan with the Red Cross, who turned her ankle and ended up in the emergency room with a genuine injury.

Even Gray County Justice of the Peace Bob Muns was called to the site of the make-believe bomb to perform his duties as coroner, but as he entered the warehouse where the make-believe injured had been, he was told by one of the coordinators, "Your corpse just walked out of here."

Shamrock woman killed in vehicle collision

SHAMROCK - A Shamrock man and a Wheeler County deputy were in Amarillo hospitals today with injuries suffered in a collision that killed a Shamrock woman Thursday afternoon.

Officers said the accident was still under investigation and that authorities were trying to locate the couple's next of kin.

A 71-year-old Shamrock woman died when the car she was in was in a collision with a Wheeler County sheriff's patrol shortly before 4 p.m. Thursday.

Her 74-year-old husband was reported in stable condition in Shamrock Hospital today with a fractured pelvis.

Wheeler County Deputy Rick Walden was in stable condition at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo today with two broken ankles, a fractured rib and bruised internal organs, officials said.

"The airbag saved his life as far as I'm concerned," said Wheeler County Sheriff Jimmy Adams. Officers said Walden was east bound on Old Route 66 near the Shamrock city limits when the couple pulled out of their driveway.

Shamrock police officials said the 74-year-old man was north bound and making a left turn onto Old Route 66 East in about the 1000 block.

Law enforcement officers said today that Walden was on a call and the switches on his car indicate that his emergency lights were on at the time of the accident.

Dallas, Fort Worth irate over arena bill's demise

DALLAS (AP) — Constitutional questions and a provision to exclude Arlington from its provisions prompted a lawmaker from the Dallas-Fort Worth suburb to try to kill a bill to finance professional sports arenas.

"That bill was ill-drafted, it was untimely and a bad tax bill," said Rep. Kim Brimer, R-Arlington. "And it was unconstitutional because you cannot (under the Texas Constitution) have a special-interest tax bill with statewide application."

Brimer may have fatally delayed the bill by raising a procedural objection Wednesday to its debate by the full Texas House of Representatives. The regular session adjourns at midnight Monday.

The bill's author, Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, says the bill is dead for the session. However, he said he would continue to look for other legislation on which to tack it. It already has been approved by the Senate.

The Legislative Budget Board had projected that the bill could cost state taxpayers as much as $180 million in its first five years.

Furthermore, Brimer and Arlington Mayor Richard Greene said they had warned Dallas for at least two weeks that the bill would be killed unless Dallas lawmakers removed an amendment that disqualified Arlington from its provisions.

"The reaction we got from Dallas and the Dallas lobby was, 'We'll work around you.' As recently as this morning, there has been no attempt by Dallas officials to address Brimer's concerns," Greene said.

Greene called the provision another example of "Dallas arrogance."

The bill would allow cities to create sports enterprise zones with governing authorities empowered to construct or renovate 10 sports facility projects. The authorities would be eligible for rebates of certain state and local taxes for up to 30 years.

Fort Worth officials hoped the measure would help finance work on a new auto speedway at Alliance Airport and renovation of the Will Rogers Memorial auditorium and coliseum.

But Dallas leaders provided much of the push for the bill, relying on the legislation to help finance a $141 million downtown sports arena to keep the Mavericks and Stars in town and out of the suburbs.

Brimer's move drew the wrath of officials in Dallas and Fort Worth.

"I think it's terrible. We had two dogs in that hunt," Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger told The Dallas Morning News on Wednesday.

"It was a sneak attack," Dallas Mayor Steve Bartlett told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Mr. Brimer, for reasons known only to him, essentially declared war on his neighbors."

Arlington is home of the Texas Rangers baseball club, which Dallas once ardently wooed. It is also one of several Dallas suburbs wooing the NBA's Dallas Mavericks and NHL's Dallas Stars with arena proposals of their own.

Greene said Dallas' amendment was geared toward heading off that bid.

Three visitors from India stop in Pampa during Rotary Foundation exchange trip

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS

Three visitors from the land of the Taj Mahal are getting to know West Texas as they travel through Rotary District 5730 in the spirit of goodwill and fellowship which characterizes the Rotary Foundation's group study exchange.

"Most striking is to know about Americans. Unless we come here we never know this much. We have a lot of wrong impressions in our mind," said Rotarian A.K. Bansal of Punjab, India.

Bansal is a tractor dealer and team leader of the group of professionals making the month-long study tour which included a Wednesday stop in Pampa.

"After coming over here, (Americans) are very warm, affectionate, loving and caring ones," said Bansal.

Bansal is impressed by American tractors which boast 300 to 400 horsepower engines and are designed to cover 2,000 to 4,000 acre farms. His tractors have 60 to 65 horsepower engines since the Indian farm, which can produce three crops a year, tends to be very small, Bansal explained.

Parshotam K. Singla practices income tax law in Punjab. West Texas accountants tell him American laws are very similar to Indian laws of taxation, except there is no personal taxation on agriculture income which, he said, is earned by 70 percent of all Indians.

In Texas, independent school districts and hospital districts collect local taxes. In India, that is not the case, Parshotam Singla said. Schools and hospitals are paid for by the state or central government.

Interest on a new car loan is 12 percent for a professionally employed person and interest on a home mortgage is 12 to 15 percent, said Bansal.

Anish Singla markets pharmaceuticals for Cadila Laboratories Limited. It is his view American drugs are "exorbitantly" expensive compared to Indian medications, which comprise a very profitable industry, he said.

Liability in product development and medical treatment is not a significant social issue.

"Nobody's gonna sue anybody," said Bansal. A consumer protection act provides disputes between patients and physicians be resolved through arbitration, said Parshotam Singla.

The men noted Americans are more apt to invest in the stock market than Indians, which in their view stimulates the American economy favorably.

Over 500 study teams comprised of Rotary and non-Rotary members are being exchanged worldwide, said Chuck LaBar.

"As non-Rotarians, we should appreciate Rotary like everything," said Anish Singla, a non-Rotarian. The exchange group has also visited Big Spring, Colorado City, Levelland, Lubbock, Plainview and Amarillo.

Bush signs concealed weapon bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to allow Texans to carry concealed handguns for the first time since the 1870s was signed into law today by Gov. George W. Bush.

"Texas will be a better place because of this law," Bush said.

The legislation permits qualified Texans, beginning Sept. 1, to apply for licenses to carry concealed guns. The licenses would become valid on Jan. 1.

The Legislature gave its final stamp of approval to the bill last week, ending nearly a decade-long movement that gained momentum with the election of Bush, who said during his campaign that he supported the right to carry.

His opponent, Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, vetoed a bill in 1993 that would have allowed Texans to vote on the issue.

Supporters of the legislation have said the election of Bush, a Republican, over Richards shows that Texans want the right to carry concealed guns.

They contend the bill will allow innocent people to protect themselves against criminals, but opponents believe giving citizens the authority to carry guns will cause more violence.

The bill allows Texans who are 21 or older and meet certain requirements to obtain concealed-gun permits.

Applicants have to undergo 10 to 15 hours of training and pass a proficiency exam. A four-year permit costs $140, except for the elderly and indigent, who receive a 50 percent discount.

The carrying of concealed guns will be prohibited in specific places, including bars, athletic events, hospitals and churches.

The Texas Department of Public Safety will oversee the licensing process and already is working to develop the materials and guidelines for trainers, said DPS' spokeswoman Lauren Chernow.

Ms. Chernow said the department has been swamped with requests for information.

One person sent in a check to get on a nonexistent waiting list. The check was returned with a letter telling the applicant, "You jumped the gun, so to speak," Chernow said.

A telephone line will be set up later to answer questions about the law.

"Calling us now is not doing any good," she said.

Gun store owners also have reported a strong demand for the training classes.

Parks board to provide services questionnaire

Pampa residents will soon receive a little something more in their water bill.

The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board Thursday night decided to mail out a questionnaire in the near future with residents' water bills. The questionnaire will poll citizens on the services provided by the Parks and Recreation Department.

In other business, the board decided to scrap a recommendation to the city commission about a long-term plan for the department, and instead decided to draw up their own plan for the future of the department. Board members James Kane, Rodney Springer, Judy Elliott and chairman Rey Cardenas, as well as Parks and Recreation Director Reed Kirkpatrick and Recreation Superintendent Shane Stokes, will serve on the subcommittee.

Kirkpatrick presented his budget request to the board at the meeting as well. Included in the budget proposal is a request for two new Toro Groundsmaster mowers, bringing the total to four in the fleet.

Kirkpatrick cited the greater efficiency of the new mowers and said the department will continue to use two older mowers for heavy work and will transfer two other older models to other city departments.

He also gave a review of the Adopt-A-Park program, saying that since the program started in 1988, vandalism and staff cleaning time have been reduced by almost half.

Kirkpatrick also reported one vandalism this month and said that a new basketball goal and other equipment for Central Park should be here within a month.

Beef essay contest scheduled

CANADIAN — Top of Texas CattleWomen are giving young people a chance to treat their dads to beef for Father's Day.

The club is sponsoring an essay contest, My Dad's the Greatest and Beef Is His Favorite Meal, with entrants writing a short essay describing their dads and his favorite beef dinner, said Bonnie Abraham, group spokeswoman.

Three winners will be chosen, she said, and each will be awarded a $25 beef gift certificate. Beef gift certificates are redeemable anywhere beef is sold including restaurants, grocery stores and meat markets.

The contest is open to youth between 8 and 12 years old. Entries should be mailed to Abraham, HCR 10 box 101, Canadian, TX 79014, and must be received by June 10.

Religious groups want apology from lawmaker

AUSTIN (AP) — Religious conservatives are demanding an apology from state Rep. Dawna Dukes for remarks she made that they say compared the Christian right to Nazis.

The American Family Association says Ms. Dukes, D-Austin, told a meeting at the Jewish Community Center of Austin in January that "the religious right call themselves different things ... These are the same people that cast a vote for Adolf Hitler in the '30s and '40s." Dukes, who described herself as a "religious person," didn't deny making the remarks but told the Austin American Statesman that the association had taken them out of context.

Wyatt Roberts, executive director of the American Family Association of Texas, demanded an apology.

"His accusation that I'm anti-religious or a bigot (is) absolutely ridiculous," Ms. Dukes said.

"I'm a religious person. I'm a Catholic. I believe that religion has a very important role in the views and debate of public policy issues. I truly resent him and that group using me as a tool to raise funds."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on budget plan:

We offer these recommendations for federal budget makers. There are really four basic principles that should be followed:

— Everything has to be on the table, including Social Security and Medicare. Obviously this will take courage on the part of politicians and an ability to explain things to outraged senior citizens, but America - including older Americans - is fooling itself if it thinks there can be meaningful and fair deficit reduction without retired citizens participating in the exercise and sharing the burden. The same goes for corporate America, with its subsidies and tax breaks - both those it already enjoys and those promised in the tax cuts proposed by the House.

Specifically, balancing the budget will mean either slashed benefits or means-testing for those receiving Social Security and Medicare or else taxes on Social Security and some combination of higher deductibles and means-testing in the case of Medicare.

We prefer taxing that part of Social Security that exceeds what an employee paid into the system, plus interest it earned, over blanket reductions in benefits - partly because the tax wouldn't affect retirees with less than $12,000 in income (primarily those depending solely on Social Security) and partly because this would treat Social Security as other pension plans are treated and emphasize that it is not "welfare" and should not be considered as such.

As a point of reference for such a plan, in 1993 the Congressional Research Service said that an average earner and spouse retiring in 1992 would recover the retirement portion of their Social Security taxes, plus interest, in a little more than three years. Those who earned more, and those who retire in later years (having paid more into the system), will take longer to recover these funds.

It must always be remembered that not only elder citizens but also their children benefit from the independence provided by these programs, in terms of retirement income and health care. But all must share in reducing the deficit.

— Next, corporate subsidies and tax loopholes should be axed. Subsidies to those who graze cattle or mine resources on federal lands should be phased out. When it comes to research and international marketing, what big corporations can fund for themselves, they should. Again, everyone benefited from deficits; everyone should be part of budget discipline.

— Next, forget tax cuts until the deficit is reduced to a single-digit figure - not just "planned" to be reduced. This goes for Republican tax cuts and White House tax cuts. Indeed, Congress should consider revenue "enhancements" such as limiting the deduction for mortgage interest.

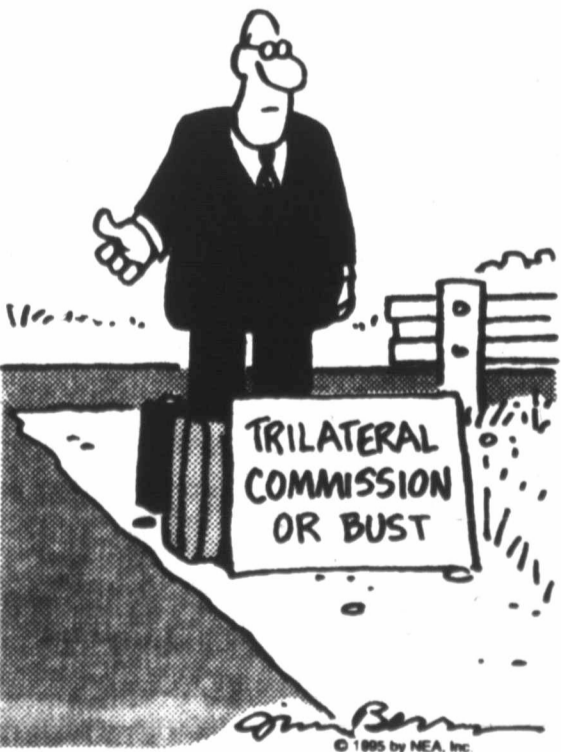

— Finally, the nation should not be shackled to an artificial target date. Mistakes will be made in the name of balancing the budget "by 2002" or any specific date. Set deficit targets and make the timetable fit them, not the other way around. If a recession comes along (one could be caused by too-rapid spending cuts), the pace of deficit reduction may need to be temporarily slowed.

But the goal must remain the same: Get the budget back on the track.

ABC's truth squad versus the GOP

President Clinton makes bizarre claims, suggesting he knows more about agriculture than any previous president and asserting he's reduced the federal government to its smallest size since JFK. In Congress, Democrats debate whether Republicans are comparable to the Nazis or the Oklahoma City bombers - or if they merely live to starve school children. Where, oh, where are the network truth squads?

But we already know the answer. TV "truth squads" exist to rebut Republicans when they get too effective. During the 1992 campaign, Peter Jennings announced that ABC would devote "less attention to staged appearances and sound bites designed exclusively for television" and "focus our coverage more on how the battle for your vote is being fought." What followed was a pattern of denunciation of the Bush campaign, with "wrong" and "false" regularly stamped on GOP ads.

ABC is still doing it. Last month, Peter Jennings unveiled a new segment: "The idea is to identify in Congress what is truth and what is political rhetoric. We're going to call it 'For the Record.'" The first segment featured environmental reporter Ned Potter, one of the most biased reporters on television.

Predictably, Potter focused solely on truth-deprived Republicans: "This story is about stories told in Congress. Like the one about the regulators who wouldn't let kids take their first baby teeth home from the dentist. ... Then, there's the tale of the pineapple pesticide. Congressmen complain every city has to test for it even though it's only used in Hawaii." Potter added a Republican claim that dentists are required to file Occupational Safety and Health Administration reports for the disposal of white-out.

Potter declared: "Stories like those were common in Congress even before the Contract With America. But, for the record, you sometimes find they're not quite true." Potter disclosed that "some agencies feel so under attack that they've formed truth squads, churning out fact sheets and letters to shoot down false stories."

Trouble is, the stories are quite true. National Review shattered ABC's dentist claims in a May 1 story: "OSHA's Blood Borne Pathogen Standard labels bodily tissues as biohazards. Teeth are considered tissue, and technically must therefore be placed in a red bag and picked up by a licensed disposer. Furthermore, because certain brands of white-out contain toluene, OSHA requires the Manufacturers Safety Data Sheets be kept in office files. Dr. Edward Stein, a health scientist at OSHA, says that white-out's levels of toluene are far below those which concern OSHA and that the requirement does not pertain to offices with fewer than 10 people. However, he concedes that if an individual in an office with fewer than 10 people filed a complaint about white-out, OSHA would be free to investigate."

The magazine added: "A dentist in the Northeast refused to return a tooth to a 6-year-old boy because he was concerned about the health regulation. OSHA's unofficial position is that this was unnecessary. However, the regulation does require such action." In other words: 1. These are OSHA regulations. 2. They are asinine. 3. The GOP is correct in denouncing them as such.

But what is ABC's position? 1. OSHA is always right. 2. When the network calls, and OSHA claims its regulations are not to be interpreted literally, OSHA is right again. 3. The GOP is wrong.

As for DBCP, the pineapple pesticide that's "still being found above safety levels in 19 states," Potter failed to distinguish between community wells and private wells. Jonathan Tolman of the Competitive Enterprise Institute explained why: "In 1990, the EPA released its National Pesticide Survey. Not one city well exceeded EPA levels for DBCP. That's why officials are complaining: 'Why should we pay to treat for a pesticide when we keep our wells clean?'"

ABC's posturing against "legislating by anecdote" failed to consider the accuracy of their own environmental reporting, which is often buried in hype. On air quality, Jennings has asserted, "We are literally in the process of choking ourselves to death." On garbage, Potter has reported: "The problem is what makes our life convenient is burying us. ... Is this our fate, to be buried in our own debris?"

ABC's morning and evening reports last year promoted a study by the Alarhoaxmeisters at the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Environmental Working Group, "challenging the drinking water that 14 million people drink every day." Months later, former EPA official Lajuana Wilcher called the study "misleading because 90 percent of the data points were from raw, untreated source water. No one is his right mind would drink water straight from the Mississippi River." While they did warn mothers to use alternative sources of water, ABC never exposed that misleading methodology.

So, if you may permit a bad pun, we have a Potter calling the kettle black. It is this mix of schoolmarmish posturing about the truth and wide-eyed promotion of environmentalist scare-mongering which makes ABC so fun to watch - and so hard to believe.

Liberals discover the vanishing father figure

The crisis of father absence - a joke to the chattering class just three years ago when Vice President Dan Quayle first mentioned it - has been transformed into conventional wisdom so fast that it almost makes your head spin.

Exhibit A: A PBS Frontline program - the fine, but definitely left-of-center documentary series - recently chronicled the damage done to children by divorce. Approaching the subject with the wariness of a scientist handling nitroglycerine, Frontline let researcher Sarah McLanahan do most of the talking.

McLanahan is the scholar who set out a few years ago to prove that children raised by single parents were just as well off as those raised by two parents. The data stopped her cold. Instead, she found that children raised by only one parent were twice as likely to drop out of high school, get pregnant before marriage, have drinking problems and experience a host of other difficulties (including getting divorced themselves) than were children raised by two married parents.

Frontline captured an exchange between McLanahan (herself a single mom) and a room full of women's studies specialists. They received her words with open hostility, betraying their ignorance of scientific method ("How can you possibly hold income constant?" demanded one outraged lady) and their implacable resistance to the traditional family. "If what you say is translated into policy," another remarked, "couldn't it lead to the loss of freedoms that were very hard won?"

To that, McLanahan gave a reply that was simple and elegant. She said yes. Freedom and family commitment are mutually exclusive. You do surrender some of your freedom when you undertake the care of children and promise fidelity to a spouse. She might have added something more - that freedom is just one virtue, it is not the highest virtue.

Frontline is not the only new entrant into the father-crisis field. A consortium of major foundations - Ford, Anne E. Casey, and Danforth - is weighing into the father business with a series of grants to be called "New Expectations: A Framework for Responsible Fatherhood."

At the very least, the appearance of these reports and initiatives from the leftward end of the political spectrum (American foundations are a strong redoubt of liberalism) is gratifying evidence that we seem, at least, to agree on the problem. That is progress over just a few years ago when the social science wisdom was that fathers were irrelevant or worse.

And if these new entrants are looking for ways to ensure that more American children are raised by two married adults (husband and wife), then they deserve every encouragement.

But there are whiffs of trouble in the materials the Ford and other foundations are releasing (the initiative will be formally announced on Father's Day). Though the program is aimed at "affirming the importance of father involvement with children" and developing "strategies to reengage fathers in the lives of their children" there is no mention of marriage and no acknowledgment of the cultural change that must accompany any effort to reengage fathers. Indeed, why call it "New Expectations" at all? Why not "Old Expectations"?

Because the liberal attachment to the new freedoms - that is, to the freedoms that led to the father crisis in the first place - is still at war with their appreciation of the problem. The draft policy statement the consortium developed is therefore chock-full of politically sensitive wording like "low-income non-custodial fathers," "partners" and "co-parenting." Big foundations may have discovered the disappearing father - but they cannot bring themselves to speak the language of husband, wife, commitment and abandonment.

No doubt they would find such talk overly judgmental. But the alternative they seem to be offering (and I would love to be proved wrong about this) - more social workers, more jobs programs for "non-custodial fathers," more "establishment of paternity at birth" and so on - is like treating a cut to the jugular with Band-Aids. It can't hurt, but it doesn't begin to solve the problem.

The aim of strengthening fatherhood is laudatory. But unless all of those now getting interested in the problem recognize that fatherhood cannot be fortified without simultaneously fortifying the traditional family, they will be spinning their wheels.

Defeats for term limits may give the issue political push

As an issue and a symbol, the term limits Congress couldn't approve and the Supreme Court wouldn't sanction could be bolstered politically by those inside-the-Beltway defeats.

It is an idea with a movement behind it, approved, usually by wide margins, in every state that has put it on the ballot. The polls register support at 70 percent and up. And limits in Washington fit the premise of people who are pushing to shake the establishment, congressional newcomers among them.

But the Supreme Court has ruled 5-4 that states cannot limit service in Congress without amending the Constitution.

House and Senate candidates, especially incumbents up for re-election, will have to deal with the question in 1996. And term limits will figure in the campaign for the White House, too. President Clinton opposes them; his most likely Republican challengers are supporters.

The lines already are set. When the term limits amendment was blocked in the Republican House, GOP leaders blamed Democrats, although 40 votes against it came from their side.

Rep. Dick Army of Texas, the majority leader, said people who want term limits ought to elect more Republicans next year. Stretching for an issue, the party chairman, Haley Barbour, noted that Clinton's two Supreme Court appointees sided against term limits. Then again, so did three justices chosen by Republican presidents.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the majority leader and leading GOP presidential hopeful, has promised Senate action on term limits soon, but hasn't said when.

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

Action doesn't mean approval. There's no real prospect that 67 senators are going to line up for a constitutional amendment to set a two-term limit on Senate service.

No matter that the limit is prospective - it wouldn't apply to terms already served. Even if it did, by the time a constitutional amendment could be ratified by 38 states, most of the senior people now in Congress would be gone or ready to go. And many of the new arrivals from the past two elections already have promised to limit their own tenure, some to six, some to 12 years.

In the House, a constitutional amendment that would have imposed a 12-year limit failed, the one feature of the Republican Contract With America to be defeated outright. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., vowed the issue would be back.

That was guaranteed even before the court ruling. Voters in 22 states have approved congressional term limits, and a 23rd just adopted term limits by legislation.

Republicans could manage the majority vote required to pass a law, but a constitutional amendment requires two-thirds - 290 votes in the House, where the vote was 227-204 when limits lost on March 29.

The court ruling puts it up to Congress again, with term limit activists watching and taking names. There are no new arguments on either side. To the opponents of an amendment, elections are the way to limit terms, and capping tenure will only cost experience and savvy. To advocates, limits are the only way back to a citizen legislature in close touch with the voters, the only way to crack the power of incumbency.

Each side has numbers to go with the case it makes. The average House tenure is two years short of the 12 the amendment would set as the ceiling. On the other hand, incumbents who run almost always get new terms. Even in a turnaround election like the 1994 Republican landslide, the re-election rate was 91 percent.

In the Supreme Court ruling, Justice John Paul Stevens noted that the merits of term limits or rotation in office have been debated since the Constitution was written. Debated but never imposed, despite such advocates as President Truman, who once said limits would cure two congressional diseases - seniority and senility.

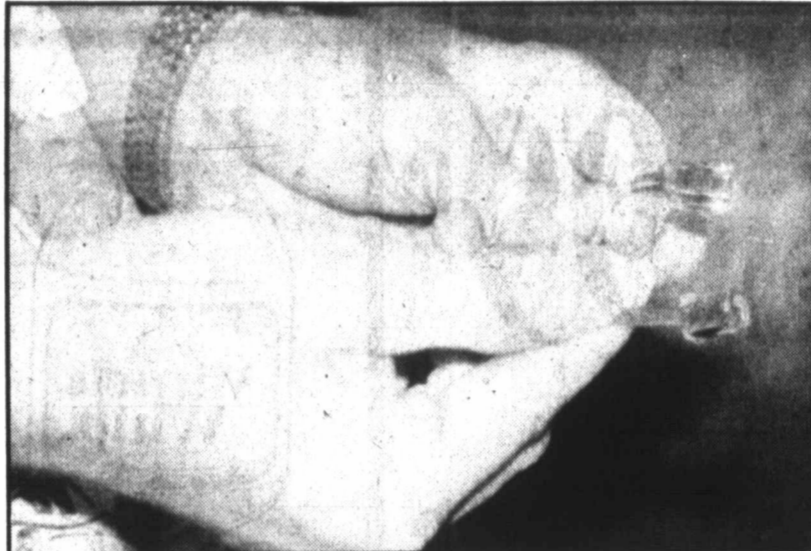

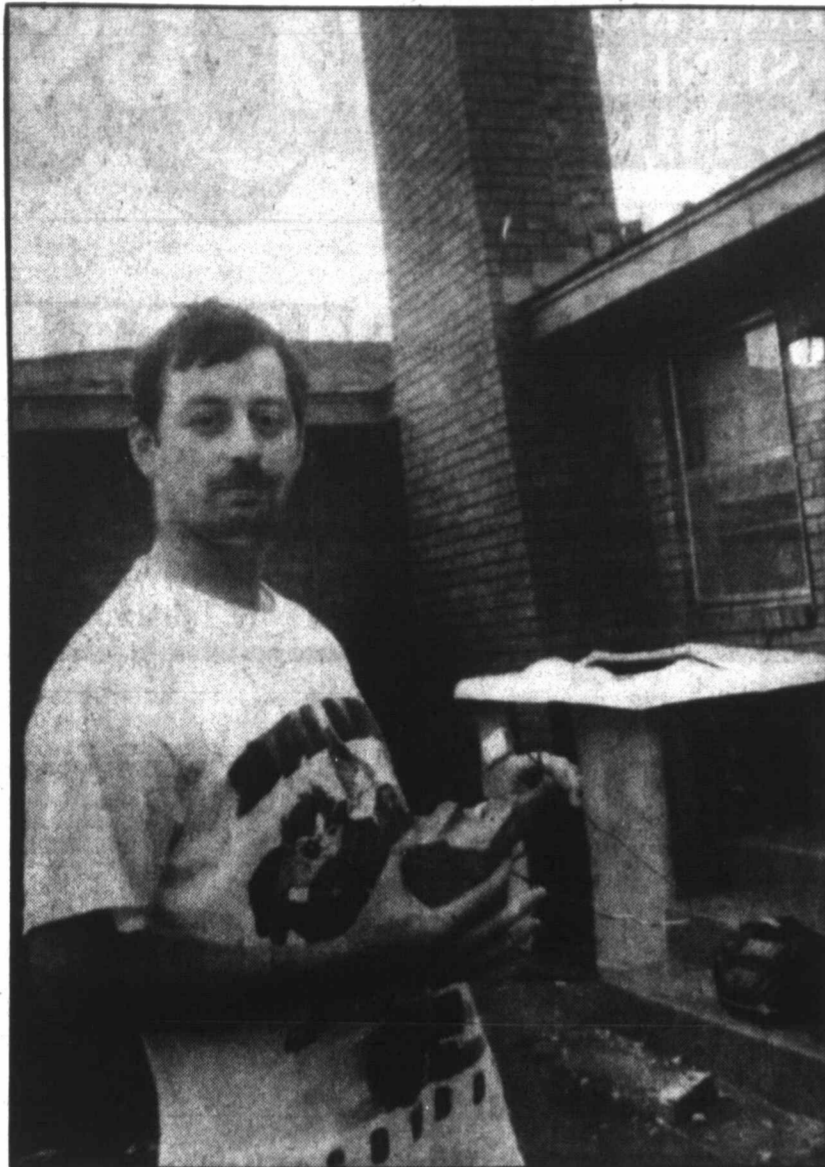

The current campaign to limit tenure really began five years ago with a winning referendum that set the pattern, and spread through the states that allow ballot initiatives. Each of them voted to set limits, but none had applied to Congress. Term limits voted for state legislators and other officials are not affected by the court ruling.

When lightning strikes

Top left: Lightning from Thursday's storm blew bricks apart from the chimney of Darrin Clendennen's house on Grape Street at 1 p.m. In his hand, he holds just one of the pieces that was all over the backyard and rooftop. Clendennen said he and his wife Jodi were watching television when they saw a bright red flash and then heard a booming sound. Both said two of their three children were taking a nap and "slept right through it." One of their neighbors across the street also noticed the bright red flash. The phone lines in the house were burned along with the cable. Clendennen said the stereo, television and phones were also burned by the lightning. The outlets of one of the phones was melted inside and the plugs were blackened. Top right: Clendennen points to one of the burned spots near the wiring on the outside of his house. Bottom right: Clendennen holds the burned ends of one of the phone plugs. He said damage has been estimated to be between $3,500-5,000.

White Deer hotel dedicated as historical landmark

The Recorded Texas Historic Landmark Marker for the "Hotel at White Deer" at 400 Main Street in White Deer was dedicated Saturday afternoon, May 20, by the Carson County Historical Commission.

The dedication ceremony was led by Mogie McCray, Panhandle, Carson County Historical Commission chairman.

The Rev. Calvin Winters, minister of the First Baptist Church of White Deer, gave the invocation.

Mr. John Preston, Childress, a member of the Texas Historical Commission, greeted the group. Mrs. McCray and Mr. C. L. Edwards told the history of the structure which was built prior to 1909 by the White Deer Lands Company to house prospective land buyers.

Mrs. E. L. Colgrove, who has owned and lived in the house since 1944 and her daughters, Mrs. Elten Vance and Mrs. Edwards, unveiled the marker. Recorded Texas Historic Carson County Judge Jay R.

Roselius dedicated the marker, and it was accepted for the City of White Deer by Mayor Tom Stamp.

A reception, hosted by the White Deer Senior Citizens at their Center at 315 Main Street, followed the dedication.

The marker, which is the thirty-sixth for Carson County and the seventh for White Deer, reads: Hotel at White Deer.

The White Deer Land Company, a trustee of court-ordered land sales in this area, established the White Deer demonstration farm in the 1890s.

About 1909, this frame four square structure was built to board prospective land buyers. Marvin Hughes bought the building in 1913, and it became a hotel. Subsequent owners included the Goodner family in 1929, and E. L. Colgrove in 1944.

The structure has served as a boarding house, apartments, and a private residence. Recorded Texas Historic Landmark — 1994.

Reducing risk of diabetes

Major studies have confirmed that men and women who exercise regularly can reduce by one-third their risk for non-insulin-dependent diabetes.

Known as adult-onset or Type 2 diabetes, the disease is believed to affect more than 12 million people in the United States and usually appears after age 40.

The strongest factors predisposing people to Type 2 diabetes are obesity and a family history of the disease.

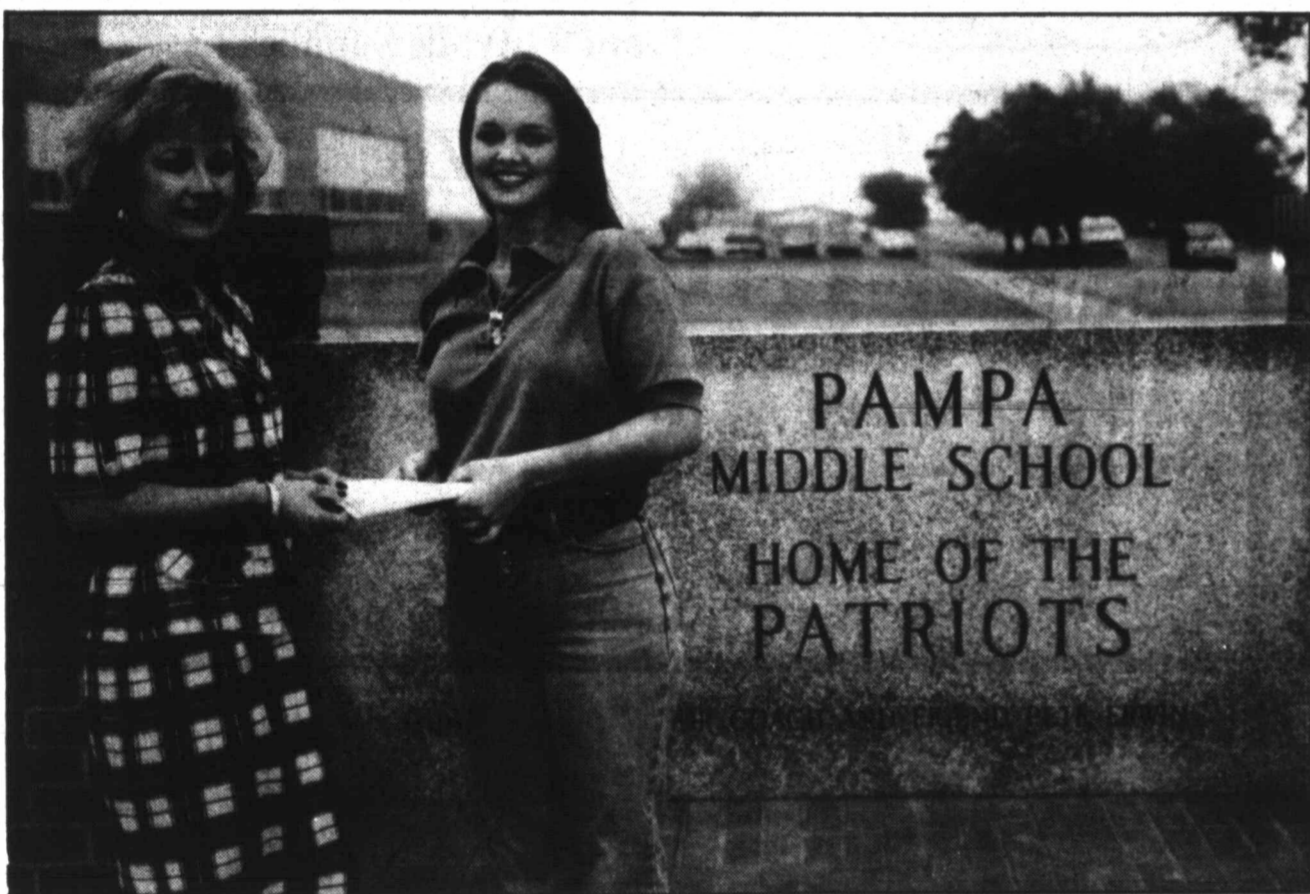

Because elevated blood sugar has a diuretic effect, frequent urination is typically the first symptom of the disease.

Additional symptoms include blurred vision, feeling unusually thirsty and hungry and losing weight despite eating more.

Before embarking on any strenuous physical regimen, people with Type 2 diabetes should undergo a thorough medical examination first.

Others on the committee were Susie Jamison, and Linda Forman.

Container gardening provides garden sites

Small or awkward spaces, poor soil and unsightly objects are all common problems that can easily be transformed into assets through container gardening. A windowsill, patio, balcony or doorstep can provide a productive garden site when you use containers.

Wherever you have space for a container you have a spot for a garden. Though it may not be as ideal as a backyard, a container garden can be every bit as striking as a full sized suburban spread.

The elderly and physically challenged can also enjoy container gardening. Gardening fosters an interest and enthusiasm for the future and improves confidence and self-esteem. Positioning pots on shelves and elevated structures makes plants accessible to those in wheelchairs. With proper modification, the benefits of gardening can be available to everyone.

Your feet will think you spent the day in bed.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE DEMON OF JEALOUSY
IN THE BIBLE, AS IN MODERN TIMES, JEALOUSY HAS BEEN A MOST DESTRUCTIVE FORCE. TAKE THE CASE OF SAUL, FIRST KING OF ISRAEL. SAUL HAD NO REASON TO BE JEALOUS OR WORRIED ABOUT HIS KINGDOM UNTIL HE DISOBEYED THE PROPHET SAMUEL. THE DISOBEDIENCE STEMMED FROM A VICTORY SAUL HAD SECURED OVER A PHILISTINE KING. SAMUEL HAD ORDERED HIM TO WAGE A WAR OF EXTERMINATION AGAINST THESE ENEMIES OF ISRAEL, INCLUDING THEIR KING. BUT SAUL SPARED THE KING. SAMUEL THEN TOLD SAUL (1 SAM. 15:11) THAT HE WAS REJECTED OF GOD---AND THEN THE TROUBLE STARTED! SAUL WENT INTO GREAT FITS OF MELANCHOLY AND DAVID WAS CALLED ON TO PLAY MUSIC UPON THE HARP TO SOOTHE HIM. BUT LO AND BEHOLD, WHEN DAVID SLEW GOLIATH, AND BECAME A NATIONAL HERO, VICIOUS JEALOUSY TOOK POSSESSION OF HIM AND FROM THAT TIME ON HE WAS SUBJECT TO EVEN WORSE FITS OF DEPRESSION AND INSANE BEHAVIOR...UNTIL HIS DYING DAY!

March for Jesus set for Saturday

Pampa's third annual March for Jesus is set for 9:30 a.m. Saturday, beginning in the Alco parking lot at Hobart and Somerville.

The parade, led by a tambourine troupe, will continue southbound on Hobart Street to Hobart Street Park, a 1.2 mile route.

A rally in the park will conclude the march where participants will pray for Pampa, the United States and the world.

The parade will feature an interdenominational choir.

Transportation for those unable to march but wishing to participate will be provided. Shuttles will be available in the park to return marchers to their cars. Concessions will be provided. Marchers may purchase a $1 songbook for use in the parade.

The March for Jesus is not a protest and is not politically motivated, organizers say.

Marchers are expected in 170 nations. An expected 1.5 million people are to march in 500 U.S. cities.

For more information call Darrell Dishner, march coordinator, at 665-3255.

A chaplain offers a supporting hug to a woman at the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, May 6, as family and friends of the victims of the April 19 explosion visit the bomb site. Hundreds of clergy voluntarily put in long hours to comfort rescue workers, the injured and dying, and their families.

In aftermath of bombing, clergy put their needs last

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Rev. Joseph Meinhart, a Roman Catholic priest who worked 14 days at the makeshift morgue for bombing victims, caught a glimpse of hell as rescue workers lifted the body parts of a child from the rubble.

The Rev. Joe Williams, a Southern Baptist who spent 19 straight days at the bomb site, would look at his granddaughter and try not to picture her blown apart.

They are among the hundreds of clergy who were strong in a time of crisis, voluntarily putting in long hours to comfort the injured and dying and offer solace to rescue workers.

Their work continues more than a month after the April 19 bombing with the victims' relatives and friends and a community buffeted by an act of senseless terror. As the strain of coping with the extraordinary tragedy is added to their normal working conditions of long hours at relatively low pay, some psychologists and church officials have turned their attention to a question often overlooked: Who cares for the caregivers?

The answer is no one, even when churches set up counseling programs.

In some denominations, such as the Roman Catholic archdiocese, where the vicar for ministries also has a full-time job running a parish, no formal program for clergy is in place, and officials hope clergy will seek help on their own initiative.

In the United Methodist Church, education and therapy programs for caregivers will be offered for at least two years. When a counseling session for clergy was held recently, only 20 of the 50 chaplains who worked at the bomb site showed up, and that was with the bishop encouraging attendance.

Southern Baptists, the largest religious group in the area, held one meeting for ministers and also offered other counseling.

Williams, head of chaplaincy for the Baptist General Convention of Oklahoma, said another conference for clergy is planned next month with an expert in coping with traumatic situations. But he also is struggling with the problem of how to get clergy to attend.

Dealing with the clergy is like dealing with law enforcement officers, many of whom put on a tough veneer and deny they can be affected by tragedy, said Williams, who also serves as an FBI chaplain.

"You kind of desensitize yourself, because you've got to be strong at the time," he said.

In their personal makeup and theology, ministers also tend to sacrifice themselves for others, and sometimes do not know how to stop giving and accept help, church leaders said.

At the Oklahoma Conference of Churches, Carol Michelson, the head of the new Interfaith Disaster Recovery for Greater Oklahoma City, worked for weeks without taking a day off until she began feeling chest pains one day last week and "finally gave out."

"One thing they told me when I took this on is you've got to take care of yourself," she said. "I thought, 'Nah.'"

If most clergy are used to helping people cope with the loss of loved ones, none were prepared for the destruction wrought April 19.

"It's a different thing altogether when you walk into a place and there are bodies, parts of bodies, and the whole thing is caked under dust and blood," Meinhart said.

How Meinhart coped is to talk about his experiences with other priests and to go out in the country and visit his parents every couple of days. There, Meinhart said, he could get needed sleep. In the neighborhood, he could play and laugh with children, providing a healthy counterbalance to the scene downtown.

Williams, who could not get the images of broken death and bodies out of his mind when he looked at a child, said he underwent therapy when he went to Washington earlier this month for National Police Memorial Week.

"I came back home 100 percent better than when I went," he said.

What Williams and others seeking to help clergy say is that unless ministers deal with their own feelings and experiences about the tragedy, "It's kind of like, pay me now or pay me later."

By being so "strong" they are immune to their own doubts and anger and other emotions about the bombing, clergy also may lose their ability to be sensitive to the people they are serving, some ministers said.

Representatives from Pampa churches practice music especially written for Saturday's March for Jesus. They are led by the Rev. Darrell Dishner, right, and met at Highland Baptist Church.

Religion briefs

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A South Carolina AIDS advocate has received a $100,000 national health care award for his efforts to expand community services for people with the deadly disease.

Peter Lee of Columbia, director of the AIDS Ministry of South Carolina Christian Action Council, recently received the Robert Wood Johnson Community Health Leadership Program Award.

"Mr. Lee exemplifies the kind of community health leader we aim to honor with this award," said Catherine M. Dunham, Community Health Leadership Program director. "He is tenacious, caring and creative in finding ways to reach those not served by the traditional health care system."

Lee's AIDS Ministry oversees AIDS care teams based in church congregations. The teams, in 40 churches with 500 volunteers across nine denominations, provide support services such as food shopping, transportation and companionship.

Lee said he would use the award money to help expand the AIDS Ministry, as well as creating a "healthy communities" foundation to encourage community leaders to assume responsibility for improving health care.

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — A leading opponent believes legislation to authorize casino gambling in West Virginia will not get any further in the 1996 Legislature than in the past.

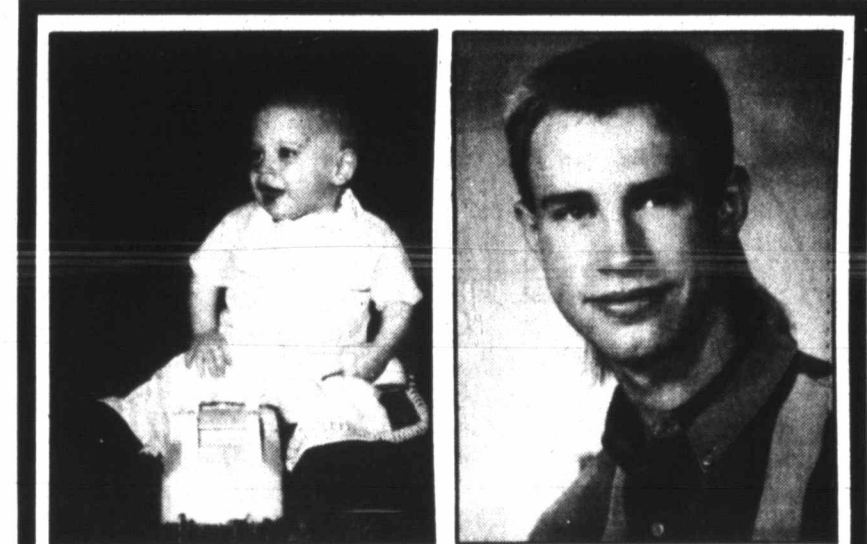

The Rev. Allen Fisher, pastor of the Stone Presbyterian Church in Elm Grove, and a member of the West Virginia Council of Churches, believes that gambling proposals are losing steam.

"It didn't even go as far in 1995 as it did in 1994," Fisher said.

A casino bill passed the House in 1994 before dying in the Senate. This year, the bill was pulled from the House agenda before any vote was taken.

Bill Perry, a Charleston lobbyist who has worked for gambling supporters the past two legislative sessions, last week said another effort will be made in 1996.

Good Husband Picks Up Bad Habit by Chewing Tobacco

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from "St. Paul Wife," whose husband's scratchy beard was her biggest complaint:

I would be glad to change places with her. My husband's newfound habit has definitely put a strain on our marriage. He chews tobacco.

As "St. Paul Wife" stated, "If my husband had had a beard when I first met him, I would not have even considered dating him..." Well, if my husband had been chewing tobacco when I met him, I would not have even spoken to him.

He is a good provider and a good husband and father — which far outweighs his one nasty habit — but I have seriously considered divorce because he is no longer sexually attractive to me.

Beards, I have no problem with, but chewing tobacco is out of the question!

MIXED EMOTIONS
IN FLORIDA

DEAR MIXED EMOTIONS: Please inform your husband that chewing tobacco is as dangerous a health risk as smoking tobacco.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the American Cancer Society, chewing tobacco has been known to cause cancer of the gum, mouth, tongue, jaw, pharynx, larynx and esophagus. And it may also play a role in cardiovascular disease and strokes.

DEAR ABBY: I have been umpiring both men's and women's softball leagues for 20 years, and I have had my share of verbal abuse, but last Saturday I was KO'd by an irate female player.

After a close call at home plate, I called the runner safe. The first basewoman ran up to the plate and began calling me every name in the book. I told her to get out of my face. When she wouldn't let up, I told her she was ejected from the game.

I suddenly found myself lying on the ground. My jaw was numb. A crowd had gathered, and some were daring me to get up and fight! I wasn't fully aware that the woman had hit me until I got back on my feet and saw her standing over me with her dukes up, ready to hit me again. I instinctively raised my hands as if to say "enough" — when she hit me again and broke my nose! Realizing she might seriously injure me if this continued, I said, "I've had enough!"

Incredibly, people — including my best friend — began ridiculing me and calling me a wimp. In my office a few days later, my secretary asked, "Have you tried the battered men's shelter?"

Abby, I am 42 years old, stand 5 foot 8 inches tall and weigh 150 pounds. The female who attacked me stands 6 foot 3 and weighs about 180. She played four years of college basketball on a scholarship. How can I be expected to defend myself against someone 30 pounds heavier, a head taller and 20 years younger — male or female?

I am sick of being ridiculed. Will you please tell my wife and friends that I am not a wimp?

RETIRED UMP IN ATLANTA

DEAR RETIRED UMP, HIS WIFE AND FRIENDS: In a civilized society, men are taught from childhood that men should not hit women. You proved you were a gentleman, not a wimp.

However, you broke the (unwritten) cardinal rule: Never remove your mask during an altercation.

P.S. As for the Amazon who hit you, she should be traded to the Giants.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The results might have been expected. Top-seeded Cal State-Fullerton, No. 2 LSU and No. 3 Rice all won in the first round of the NCAA South Regional.

But all three had to struggle. "That's what you can expect in the tournament," said LSU coach Skip Bertman. Cal State, the No. 1 team in the country, banged out 17 hits in edging Northeast Louisiana, 7-6.

Rice, making its first-ever tournament appearance, came from behind to beat James Madison, 8-7.

LSU got a strong game from pitcher Scott Schultz and a comeback 5-3 victory over Central Michigan.

Joe Fraser stretched a ninth inning single into a double, advanced to third on a passed ball and scored on an error to give Fullerton its victory.

"They keep that offensive pressure on you, and keep it on you and keep it on you," said Northeast coach Smoke Laval. "It's tough to beat them."

Cal State (50-9), which jumped head 2-0 in the first inning, let Northeast (37-19) score in the second inning and then add two runs in the seventh to tie the game 6-6.

Ted Silva (15-1) got the victory for Fullerton. Kelly Jones (3-2) took the loss.

Texas, Oklahoma win regional openers

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The aces performed just as expected for the top three seeds in the Midwest II regional.

Ryan Halla of Auburn, Mark Redman of Oklahoma and J.D. Sharp of Texas all turned in impressive performances Thursday in helping their teams win their first-round games.

Halla threw a two-hitter in the top-seeded Tigers' 2-1 victory over Penn. Redman gave up four hits in seven innings in a 9-6 victory over Indiana State. And Sharp went all the way as No. 3 seed Texas beat Ohio State 10-5.

Oklahoma and Texas will play tonight, weather permitting. The Oklahoma-Indiana State game didn't end until 12:49 a.m. today due to a 2-hour, 17-minute rain delay at the start, and more showers were forecast.

The other scheduled second-round games had Penn and Indiana State meeting in an elimination game, and Auburn going against Ohio State.

The 6-foot-5, 255-pound Halla (16-2) established a school record for victories in a season and pitched his third complete game of the year.

He gave up both hits in the third inning when Penn scored its only run, then he set down 17 of the final 18 batters — the one who did get aboard reached on an error.

Dan Galles (6-5) pitched a complete game for Penn, but didn't get enough help at the plate. The Quakers may have been tired — their flight from Philadelphia was rerouted due to problems with the plane and, after several delays, they didn't arrive in Oklahoma City until 1:30 a.m. Thursday.

Penn took a 1-0 lead in the third on a sacrifice fly by Tim Henwood. Auburn then tied it in the bottom of the inning on a two-out RBI single by Jay Waggoner.

The go-ahead run came in the fourth when Kevin Chabot singled, moved to second on a sacrifice, to third on a fielder's choice and scored when Rob Macrory reached on an error.

Redman (14-2) gave up two first-inning runs before settling down. He walked no one and struck out eight, giving him 138 for the year and breaking the school record of 136 he set last year.

His 14 victories tied the school record set by Steve Peters in 1985 and equaled by Redman last year.

Oklahoma scored three unearned runs in the bottom of the first to take the lead for good, then added three more unearned runs in the fifth.

The big hit in the Sooner first was a two-run double by Javier Flores. It came after first baseman Jim Hill dropped the ball trying to tag Damon Minor on what would have been the final out of the inning.

Ryan Minor's two-run double in the third made it 5-2, then the Sooners scored three in the fifth on a bases-loaded, two-out double by Jesse Zepeda.

Sharp (14-4) allowed nine hits and four earned runs. He worked out of trouble after giving up the lead in the eighth, then his teammates bailed him out in the bottom half of the inning.

The Buckeyes scored twice in the eighth to take a 5-4 lead. One run scored on a sacrifice fly by Brian Mannino and the go-ahead run came across on a throwing error by third baseman Chad Blessing.

Ohio State had the bases loaded when Sharp got Alex Eckelman on a groundout to end the inning.

Buckeye starter Kevan Cannon (8-6) got into trouble in the bottom of the eighth by walking the first two batters. After a sacrifice put runners at second and third, an intentional walk loaded the bases.

Kip Harkrider then drew a walk to force in the tying run. Reliever Bob Spears came on and gave up a sacrifice fly and two straight run-scoring singles as the Longhorns took control.

"Kevan has been my ace all year long and usually he's able to smell the lead and hold onto it," said Ohio State coach Bob Todd. "This time it just didn't happen."

Pampa Pacers honored

Glo-Valve moves into first place in Bambino National League

PAMPA — Glo-Valve Service avenged an earlier defeat by thrashing Curtis Well Service, 17-3, to move into first place in the Optimist Major Bambino National League.

Shawn Strate scattered five hits, allowed no earned runs, struck out eight and did not walk a batter in winning his third game of the season against one loss Wednesday at Optimist Park. He aided his own cause with three hits, three runs scored and three RBIs. Tanner Dyer and Randy Tice had two hits each for Glo-Valve. Tice scored four times and Kyle Keith knocked in four runs for Glo-Valve.

Tice led off the first inning with a single and moved to second on a walk to Keith. Strate forced Keith at second and was allowed to go to second without a throw. Matt Driscoll drilled a single, scoring both runners.

In the second inning, Dyer singled, Matthew Smith walked and Tice was safe on an error to load the bases. Dyer scored on an infield out and Strate brought Smith home with a single. Tice scored on a passed ball and Strate scored the fourth run of the inning on a single by Nathanael Hill.

Glo-Valve opened up a 10-0 lead in the third inning. Aaron Willis was safe on an error and wound up on second base. He took third on a wild pitch and Zach Soto walked and was allowed to advance to second. Tice trickled an infield single to score Willis and was allowed to go to second without a throw. Soto scored on an infield out and Tice came home on a single by Strate. Strate went to second on an infield out, to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Isiah Manzanares.

Curtis Well Service got two runs back in the bottom of the fourth. Michael Campos led off the inning with a single. Schuyler Danner was safe on an error, sending Campos to third. Danner went to second on a fielder's choice. Campos came in on a passed ball and Danner scored when David Sigala was safe on an error.

Glo-Valve put the game away in the top of the sixth inning as they sent 10 batters to the plate and scored seven times. Hill cracked a double to start the inning, but was later out attempting to score on a wild pitch. Taylor Harris walked and took second on a fielder's choice. He went to third on Dyer's second hit of the game. Smith walked a second time to load the bases and Tice forced a run with another walk. Keith unloaded a double scoring two runners. Tice scored on a wild pitch. Keith came in on a single by Strate. A bad throw let Strate move to second and he stole third. Driscoll walked and a double steal plated Strate and left Driscoll at second. Driscoll moved to third on a passed ball and scored on an infield out.

In the bottom of the sixth for Curtis Well Service, Schuyler

Danner singled and was forced at second by Ryan Black. Sigala singled Ryan to second and Ryan scored on an error on a ball hit by Carl Hinds.

Glo-Valve moved into first place in the Major Bambino National League with a 4-1 record. Dunlap Industrial is second at 3-1. Hoechst-Celanese holds down third at 2-1-1 while Curtis Well Service dropped to fourth with a 3-2 record.

Duncan, Fraser and Bridges (DFB) defeated Rotary, 5-3, in an 11-12 year-old Bambino League game Tuesday night.

The game was scoreless until the top of the fifth. Rotary pitcher Corey Fowler walked Reece Watson, who stole second, third and home on wild pitches. DFB pitcher Craig Stout hit the first batter and walked the next two. Shawn Davis, the next batter, hit a ground ball to Stout, who threw to catcher Colby Brazile for the out, then to third baseman Nick Dyer for the double play. With two runners on base, Fowler singled to make the score, 2-1.

In the sixth, Riordan Hill walked and moved to third on passed balls. Jared Spearman got a single that scored Hill. Watson walked and Chase Babcock hit a triple that scored Hill and Watson. Babcock stole home on a wild pitch, making the score, 5-2. In the final at bat for Rotary, Tristan Brown came home on an error.

Rockets making believers out of critics

HOUSTON (AP) — Just a few weeks ago, the Houston Rockets were a disappointment. Now, they've got people believing they might be better than the team that won the NBA title a year ago.

The same people who were grumbling about trading Otis Thorpe for Clyde Drexler are praising Drexler as the catalyst for this late-season surge.

The Rockets are riding a five-game winning streak, the last three on the road, and a victory tonight at home against San Antonio would put them up 3-0 on the Spurs in the Western Conference finals.

The team nobody thought could repeat finds itself fending off the notion that a return trip to the NBA Finals is a foregone conclusion.

Over and over, the Rockets remind people they lost the first two at Phoenix in last year's conference semifinals, then came back to win the series.

Off-season football drills keep Pampa players in shape

PAMPA — As school is ending, the beginning of a new year is just on the horizon.

With a new school year, another Pampa High football team will be placed on the gridiron for what appears to be another season where the Harvesters will compete for the District 1-4A title.

As with many outstanding programs, head coach Dennis Cavalier has had his next team going since November.

"We started with our off-season program the Monday following the Borger game by testing in the bench press, incline press, squats and power clean," Cavalier said.

At that time, the Harvesters recorded 14 athletes squatting over 300 pounds and 17 bench pressing over 200 pounds. The off-season program combines a rigorous five-day lifting schedule with a combination of a running circuit, quarter-mile runs, mat drills or sprints. For the past ten weeks, the emphasis has been placed on football drills.

All of this has added up to big gains for the Harvesters. Those who have squatted over the 300-pound barrier in the last week of off-season were: Jason Benton, Justin Ensey, David Bridges, Steven Willett, Chris Bruce, Clint Lewis, Adam Clark, Floyd White, Seth Heiskel, Todd Finney, Joel Ferland, Victor Roden, Ryan Cook, Tanner Winkler and Jesse Silva; Ryan Gibson, Chad Epperson, Trey McCavit, David Gamblin, Jay Braddock, Ronnie Proby, Derahian Evans, Aaron Hayden, Ross Watkins, Aaron Wiseman, Brandon Mayfield, Ryan Bruce, Logan Stinnett, John Porter, Brian Gwin, Ryan Davis, Burton Jones, Donnie Middleton, Matt Archibald, Brian Phelps, Clint Curtis, Josh Starnes, Willie Shaw, Josh Calfy and Devin Lemons.

Forty athletes were involved. Those who surpassed the 200-pound mark in the bench press were:

"The summer has come and the question now becomes, 'Will all these gains be maintained over the summer?' The summer has come at an optimum time because our athletes and coaches are fatigued. It will be a time to recover and get re-focused for the upcoming season," Cavalier said.

Workouts have been cut to three days a week and gradually build up during the summer, Cavalier said.

O'Neal & Co. take control of Pacers

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — They're young, bold, talented and up 2-0 on Indiana in the Eastern Conference finals.

The Orlando Magic, however, aren't making any brash predictions about the remainder of the best-of-7 series that resumes Saturday in Indianapolis, where the Pacers have to win at least once to avoid elimination.

Shaquille O'Neal & Co.'s impressive performance in Game 2 Thursday night prompted questions about the possibility of a sweep.

"I'm not a maid," the all-star center said after the Magic's 119-114 victory. "I'm not worried about sweeping."

Nevertheless, the Magic clearly is in the driver's seat after getting 39 points from O'Neal and another big night from Dennis Scott, Anfernee Hardaway and Nick Anderson.

This was a team the experts claimed was too young and inexperienced to go this far in the postseason. Now they've got the playoff-seasoned Pacers wondering what it'll take to stop them.

Traditionally in the NBA, you've got to learn from losing. But this team is a team that believes in itself," said Orlando's Jeff Turner. "It's very cocky in what it can do and it shows."

Maybe this team is so young that they don't know they have to pay their dues."

O'Neal scored seven of his 27 second-half points in the last two minutes to keep Orlando ahead until Anderson sealed Indiana's fate with a 3-pointer with 13.9 seconds remaining.

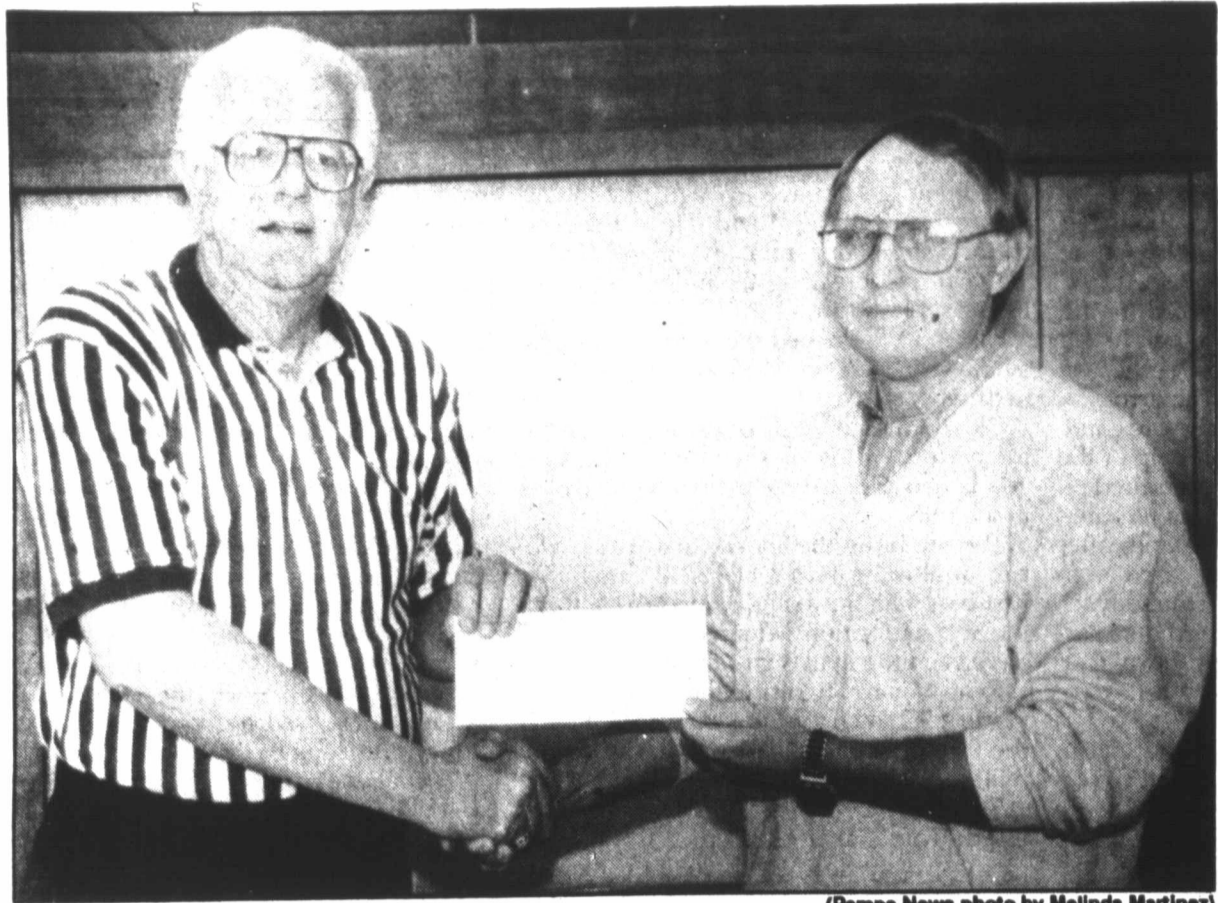

"If he's going to play like that, and make his free throws, they're going to be trouble for everybody," said Indiana coach Larry Brown, adding that one of the keys to getting back into the series will be finding a way to either contain O'Neal or shut off Orlando's outside attack.

Scott (25 points), Hardaway (19 points, 15 assists) and Anderson (17 points) hit 12 3-pointers, while O'Neal (averaging 35.5 in the series) did virtually anything he wanted inside against the Pacers' Rik Smits (19 points) and overmatched power forwards.

"We've got to take one or the other away — inside or outside," said Reggie Miller, who had 37 for the Pacers on 12-for-18 shooting. "They can't have both."

The Magic overwhelmed the Pacers with five 3-pointers in the first quarter, building an 11-point lead, and their perimeter shooters were left open in the second period to hit three more. Orlando's 17 3-point attempts in the first half tied the NBA record set by the Lakers and Seattle in a first-round game last month.

Dennis, Clements share lead in Colonial

FORT WORTH (AP) — Golf's touring pros, who frequently spend weeks, even months at a time on the road, look forward to their time at home. The latest trip home for Clark Dennis has been particularly pleasing. First he got his game in order, then he shot 64 on the course that was his childhood playground, taking a share of the first-round lead in his hometown tournament, the Colonial National Invitation. He shared the top spot with veteran Lennie

Clements, still looking for his first victory in a 15-season career. And Dennis, who missed 10 cuts in 16 previous starts this season, played so well it was almost frightening — at least for Dennis. "Seven birdies on the first 11 holes. That's a start so good I kind of scared myself," he said. It followed a one-week break from competition in which he came home to Fort Worth, worked with his instructor "and found a couple of things," he said.

McLean receives grant to help renovate arena

Monte Joiner, left, president of the McLean Chamber of Commerce, accepts a check for $5,000 from Southwestern Bell Telephone Company area manager Gary Stevens at a luncheon at the Devil's Rope museum Wednesday. The money will be used to fund improvements in the town's rodeo arena. McLean is one of 52 cities in the state to receive such a grant.

"It's truly an historic occasion for McLean," says Monte Joiner, president of the McLean Chamber of Commerce.

Joiner refers to the $5,000 economic excellence grant from Southwestern Bell Telephone Company the town received Wednesday at a joint Chamber/City Council luncheon at the Devil's Rope Museum in McLean.

McLean is one of 52 cities in the state to receive the grant, beating out over 100 other applicants.

Grant recipients may request a minimum of $1,000, but can be awarded the maximum $5,000. With the cooperation of the Texas Rural Development Council and the Texas Economic Development Council, Southwestern Bell provided $240,000 to the 52 cities awarded the grants.

Gary Stevens, area Bell Telephone manager and a former highway patrol department member in the area, presented the check to Joiner at the luncheon.

The Chamber president had kept the news of the grant a surprise to the members of the organization and the City Council, who co-sponsored the application, and those present at the meeting responded with generous applause.

"Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has in the past and will continue in the future to further economic development in the communities which it serves," Stevens said.

"We hope these economic grants will help build better communities and create a brighter future for the state of Texas."

The money from the grant will be used to completely renovate the local rodeo arena, providing all-metal grandstands and new chutes. The project should be completed in about one year.

Changes proposed for child custody

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Senate has approved a rewrite of proposed family law that would recommend joint custody for children of divorce.

The plan passed Thursday encourages the joint custody in future cases and would make it easier for non-custodial parents to gain custody of their children, said the bill's sponsor, state Sen. Chris Harris, R-Arlington.

The changes were in amendments tagged to a bill previously approved by the House. The bill now goes back to the House for approval of the custody changes.

the Senate adopted at Harris' urging.

Current law allows judges to award joint custody, but the family code does not state that such a living arrangement is presumed to be best for the child. Harris' plan would make that statement.

Group checks out guinea drop

AMARILLO (AP) — A cash-scramble planned for next month's National Trails Day celebration in Quitaque has ruffled the feathers of some animal lovers.

An official with the Amarillo-Panhandle Humane Society says the organization will investigate a stunt in which three guineas — with a $100 bill strapped to a leg — will be released June 3.

The birds will be dropped from an airplane flying about 500 feet "over downtown Quitaque, a town about 70 miles southeast of Amarillo."

Whoever catches the guinea gets the cash.

But the Humane Society says the event might be cruel to the birds.

"We're checking into it," said Janice Fielding, office manager for the Humane Society. "It sounds a little strange."

Fielding promised to investigate the possibility the guinea drop is a case of cruelty to animals, a Class A misdemeanor.

But Randy Stark, one organizer of the event, finds no reason for concern.

"I'm more worried about the people running to chase them down," he said.

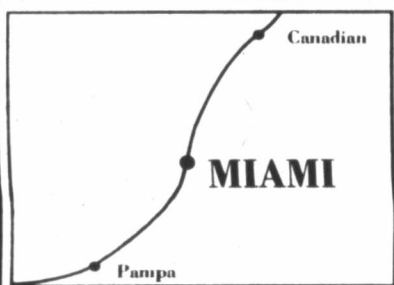

Stark said drop organizers have already released two guineas from an airplane to make sure they would not be harmed.
