Replacement Picked Out...

Changes In Foreign Policy Operation Could Oust Allen

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, planning "a pretty wide shakeup" of his foreign policy operation, will give his national security adviser more authority in a move that could lead to the ouster of Richard V. Allen, White House officials say.

Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark, one of the most senior members of the Reagan inner circle, is said by one top White House official to be the unanimous choice of the president's top advisers to replace Allen in the upgraded job.

Allen remains on a paid leave of absence pending completion of a review of whether his contacts with former Japanese business associates and omissions from his financial disclosure form violated a White House code of conduct. The Justice Department has cleared Allen of any illegal wrongdoing in connection with those actions.

In two separate interviews Friday, Allen told reporters no one has told him he will be replaced.

"This is a decision that the president is to make, and I'm sure that when the appropriate White House review is done and the conclusions are drawn, that he'll be in a position to make a decision," he said.

The president was meeting this afternoon with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who, like Reagan, is spending the New Year's holiday at the desert resort of Palm Springs.

Haig, who feuded with Allen throughout the first year of the Reagan administration, planned to confer with the president on the visit to Washington next Tuesday of West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

But other topics, including the Polish crisis and the contemplated shift in the White House national security operation, could be added to the agenda.

"I would guess that there would be a pretty wide shakeup," said one official, adding that it would deal with both personnel and the procedures by which foreign policy decisions are reached.

Asking that he not be identified by name, the official said the decision could be made as early as next week. Asked about the likelihood that Allen would leave, another aide said, "There's got to be some contingency planning."

But presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said no final decisions were made.

Reading from prepared notes, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said: "The president has before him a number of recommendations on the operation of the office of assistant to the president for national security affairs. The objective is to improve the process of communication and coordination."

He said Meese was making recommendations to the president on the basis of an informal study.

Meese has overall responsibility for coordinating national security operations and domestic policy operations.

Clark, who, with Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger were guests with Reagan at a New Year's Eve party given by publisher Walter Annenberg, had no formal meeting planned with the president, Speakes said. But he said Clark and Reagan had seen each other socially while in Palm Springs.

The president and his wife, Nancy, arrived in Palm Springs Wednesday afternoon and will return to Washington Sunday. As they have been for more than 10 years, they were New Year's guests at Annenberg's 200-acre compound.

Friday was a day for watching college football bowl games on television and Reagan's only venture outside the lush, irrigated desert estate was to a private dinner.

He also was said to have set aside time for work on his State of the Union address expected to be given Jan. 26 and on preparations for his meeting with Schmidt.

On New Year's Eve, according to assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg, the president and Mrs. Reagan joined approximately 80 guests of the Annenbergs in dancing and in singing "Auld Lang Syne" and did not retire to their quarters until 1:15 a.m.

When Reagan returns to Washington, one of the first items on his agenda is likely to be Meese's recommendations.

Dozier Friends Offer Reward For Information

VERONA (AP) — Friends of kidnapped U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier have offered a $2 million reward for information leading to his release, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

A spokesman at the NATO headquarters here, where Dozier was the highest-ranking American Army officer, refused to confirm or deny the ANSA report.

U.S. and Italian officials denied earlier reports that their governments were offering rewards. Both governments have refused to negotiate with the Red Brigades terrorists who abducted Dozier from his home in this northern Italian city Dec. 17.

The radical leftist urban guerrillas have yet to make known any terms for Dozier's release.

U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb delivered New Year's messages Friday to Dozier's wife, Judith, from President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Rabb said the messages "expressed great concern and sympathy and hope that in this new year the hopes of Mrs. Dozier about her husband are realized."

More than 400 police are searching for Dozier and his captors. But house-to-house searches, roadblocks and identity checks in heavy rain Friday turned up no fresh clues.

Polish Workers Given Privileges

Associated Press

In an apparent effort to spur production and boost Poland's crippled economy, the martial law government is holding out the promise of early retirement and increased disability pay for more than 2 million workers.

The official PAP news agency Friday quoted a Council of Ministers decree promising extra benefits to those "who perform tasks hazardous to health, work in conditions causing rapid physicical exhaustion, run a high degree of occupational risks and do work requiring special physical and mental efficiency."

PAP said these workers may retire at 55 instead of 60 and will get a 5 percent hike in disability pensions.

The report did not link the decree to Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's declaration of martial law Dec. 13 that banned the independent Solidarity union and suspended most civil liberties. But the new privileges appeared aimed at undermining worker resistance to the military crackdown.

Leading the PAP list of recipients of the new benefits are coal miners who provide the government's chief source of foreign currency and are among the nation's most militant pro-unionists. Other recipients include chemical workers, drivers, teachers, communication workers, fishermen, meatpackers and others with taxing jobs, PAP said.

The SDN Column

A new topic is due to bid for attention in Congress late this month.

Back in 1978, the Surface Transportation Assistance Act was adopted, and among other things, it mandated a "cost allocation study" to determine the share of the tax burden that should be allocated to various classes of vehicles for highway construction and maintenance.

The purpose of the study is to lay the groundwork for assigning federal highway costs to various groups of users, which, in turn, would provide a basis for devising equitable highway user charges.

The study has been conducted by the Department of Transportation, with assistance from the Congressional Budget Office.

Although the report is not due until Jan. 15, some of its contents are being circulated in the form of a "working paper," which reportedly reveals that actual cost responsibilities in the base period (1977) were larger than user tax payments, which indicates that current highway user taxes are not producing enough revenue to support the federal highway aid program. Deterioration and tardy maintenance on major federal thoroughfares tend to confirm this.

Paradoxically, however, the Highway Trust Fund continues to hold a healthy balance.

Another "bottom line" conclusion of the report is said to be that light trucks are paying more than their share of highway costs, while heavy trucks are not paying enough, and automobiles, vans and pickups are just about matching the costs assigned to them.

So, look for some lively dialogue on this subject after the study report is presented.

Anyway it will be a change of pace.

A Snyderite was involved when Vice President and Mrs. George Bush welcomed twin granddaughters the day before Thanksgiving.

The Bush's daughter-in-law, Mrs. George W. Bush of Midland, was referred by her doctor in Midland to Baylor Medical Center in Dallas and Dr. James Boyd, a neonatal specialist, because she was considered a high-risk pregnancy.

Dr. Boyd, born and raised in Snyder, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Boyd. He delivered the twins by Caesarian section.

School To End Holidays

The Christmas-New Year holidays will come to an end Monday for public school teachers and pupils.

Classes are scheduled to resume on their regular hours Monday morning.

Although offices will reopen at Western Texas College, registration for the spring term there will not begin until Jan. 18 and classes will begin on Jan. 20.

Next holidays for Snyder Public Schools are set for the week of March 8 when spring vacation is scheduled.

Q.—Who started the football bowl games?

A.—Blame it on (or credit it to) those Californians. They started the Rose Bowl in 1902, and it was the only one for 31 years. The Floridians got in on the act by inaugurating the Orange Bowl in 1933, Louisiana started the Sugar Bowl in 1935, Texas joined the crowd with the Sun Bowl in 1936 and the Cotton Bowl in 1937. The others are "Johnny-come-latelies."

More Candidates Seek Scurry County Offices

The New Year brought out more candidates for public offices in Scurry County.

Five more incumbents serving in offices to be filled in the 1982 election announced that they would seek re-election.

Making their announcements this weekend were Polly Underwood, district clerk; Beverly Ainsworth, county clerk; Eloise Morgan, county tax collector; Earl "Hassie" Sneed, county commissioner in Precinct No. 2; and Ted Billingsley, county commissioner in Precinct No. 4.

All are candidates in the Democratic Primary.

The primary elections are scheduled for May 1 this year and the general election will be held in on Nov. 2.

The filing deadline for the primaries is Feb. 1.

Voters will fill approximately half of the county and state offices in this year's election, including the office of governor. Also on the ballot will be the office of Congressman, and this year, Texas voters will fill a seat in the U. S. Senate. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is completing a six-year term.

Candidates have already announced for all offices to be filled this in Scurry County, except two justices of the peace and four constables.

Dan Callaway, justice of the peace in Precinct No. 1; (Snyder) and T. E. Shelburne, justice of the peace in Precinct No. 4 (Hermleigh), have both announced for re-election. The other justice precincts are No. 2 (Fluvanna) and No. 3 (Ira). All four justice precincts also include the office of constable. However, some of the constable's positions have not been filled in recent years.

County Judge Preston Wilson and County Treasurer Billy Wayne Thompson announced for re-election last Thursday.

Weekend update

New Child Labor Law

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Child actors can work until midnight — unless there's school the next day — under an updated Reconstruction-era law scheduled to go into effect today.

The new Texas Child Labor Law regulates employment of children 14 through 17 years of age and specifically includes child actors, Texas Department of Labor and Standards Commissioner Lias B. "Bubba" Steen said.

It was unclear exactly what age children were covered in what occupations under the old law, originally passed by the 9th Legislature in 1865. The law was amended in 1925 to conform with a new federal child labor statute and has been changed periodically since.

But the law's language retained the marks of earlier eras.

One section made it a crime punishable by a jail term to allow children under 17 years of age to go to "any disorderly house, bawdy house, assignation house or place of amusement conducted for immoral purposes."

Coffee Is Drugged

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — A man remained jailed Friday pending formal charges after 10 factory workers in this Dallas suburb suffered hallucinations induced by drug-laced coffee, police said.

The man, who was held for investigation of aggravated assault, was suspected of putting a drug in the employees' coffee pot at International Power Machines, investigators said.

Police declined to identify the man, pending the filing of formal charges.

The employees were treated at local hospitals and three were hospitalized briefly, authorities said. All were described as being in good condition.

Mother Faces Charges

PLANO, Texas (AP) — Police planned to file formal charges against a 22-year-old woman in connection with a Christmas Eve fire that killed two of her sons, police said.

Authorities said the woman padlocked the front door of the family's small frame house and went grocery shopping, leaving the three children trapped when fire erupted and engulfed the structure.

Victor Reyes, 2, and David Reyes, 4, were killed in the blaze. Another brother, 4-year-old Urbano, suffered severe burns, but survived, authorities said.

The woman, who was jailed in lieu of $30,000 bond, faces two counts of involuntary manslaughter and one count of injury to a child, police said.

Search Given Up

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Air Force on Friday suspended its search for a pilot missing since his jet went down in the Atlantic on Dec. 18.

The co-pilot was rescued after six days in a life raft.

However, the Air Force is still taking tips from anyone who might have anything to report about the Phantom F4-E jet that went down off Wilmington, said Capt. Pat Osborn.

Lt. Michael Mattson, 24, disappeared in the crash of the jet he was flying on a routine training mission from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base. Co-pilot Lt. Thomas Tiller, 26, of Houston was rescued six days later.

Girl Dies In Fire

KNOWLTON-LANDING, Quebec (AP) — A New Year's Day fire gutted a small resort hotel, leaving a 10-year-old girl dead and seven guests injured, police said.

For most of the day, authorities feared that a family of four that had checked into the hotel had also died in the blaze at the 12-room Wood Acres Hotel, a three-story structure that caught fire at about 2:45 a.m. The family was found safe Friday night at home in suburban Montreal, 65 miles west of this village.

China Unearths Bronze Chariots

SIAN, China (AP) — China has unearthed two bronze chariots, complete with eight horses and two charioteers, close to the tomb of its first emperor, Chin Shih-huang ti.

The discovery has sent a thrill of excitement through this ancient Chinese capital, comparable to that of 1974 when peasants came across the shadowy underground pottery army created to guard the emperor in death as real armies had done in his turbulent lifetime.

Builder of the Great Wall, burner of books, and first unifier of China, Chin died 2,191 years ago.

"It is one of the most exciting discoveries in recent years," says Ma Kesun, deputy director of the Bureau of Cultural Relics here.

Word of the discovery has trickled out in bits and pieces. Ma and Bureau Division Chief Chen Mengdong gave hitherto undisclosed details.

"The horses, chariots and warriors are half life-size," says Ma. "Funerary objects in bronze of this size have never been found before. In addition, they are very beautiful. The horses are running and each charioteer is sitting as he handles the bronze reins of his four-horse team. The ornaments on the horses are of gold and silver."

Chinese archeologists are trying to piece together whether the bronze chariots are part of the life-size pottery army, estimated at 7,500 pieces. They are on the eastern side of the tomb complex, while the bronze chariots are on the west.

"Like the pottery figures, the bronze chariot sets were painted in different colors," says Ma. "The two charioteers are mustached, dressed in short gowns and wear caps. They wear no armor but carry twoedged swords slung on their backs."

Like the pottery figures, the charioteers are identifiably different in dress, hair style and facial expression. Their attitude is one of intent seriousness. When discovered by archeological workers, the sets — which weigh 1.1 tons each — were lying loosely 23 feet deep in the earth. The pottery figures were 16½ feet down.

Perhaps one reason why the find has been surrounded in secrecy — the area has been sealed off — is that the sets were not intact.

"Though basically perfect, they were in about 1,000 small pieces," says Ma. "They are being assembled by 10 people in special workshops. Also, there are many problems still to be solved. While we work on them, the digging has stopped. We now are making a survey of the entire area."

Digging has also halted under the huge vaulted museum which houses the pottery army. More than 2.5 million people, many from abroad, have visited the vast complex since it opened in 1979. About 600 of the 1,200 figures so far brought to light stand in erect solemnity, still faithful after two milleniums of vigilance.

The others are being put together in eight workshops while savants ponder the mystery of it all. Their conclusions on the life of military men in the Chin dynasty will be published in 1983.

"We have enough work here to last us a hundred years," says the museum's chief archeologist, Yuan Zongyi, gesturing toward the tomb complex. "In the past year or so alone we have made four major discoveries."

He listed these as the graves of conscripts forced to work on the tomb, a yard where the stones for the tomb were cut, a brick kiln and a massive dike to protect the tomb from underground flood waters.

"It is said that Chin mobilized 200,000 men to construct his tomb, many of them criminals from other Chinese states," says Yuan. "Until now there was no material evidence to back up this assumption. Thus, the conscript graves are of great historical importance."

Republicans Want New Senate Lines Drawn Up

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Republicans are asking State District Judge Herman Jones to do what an expert on legislative redistricting claims a state judge has never done before — draw new state Senate district boundary lines.

The expert, Austin lawyer Steve Bickerstaff, has been hired by Attorney General Mark White to help defend the plan adopted by the Legislative Redistricting Board.

A hearing is scheduled Tuesday on a suit by state GOP chairman Chester Upham and six Republican senators that challenges the plan.

"A state court has never before drawn legislative districts," Bickerstaff said.

As an indication of how political redistricting is, two of the GOP senators are seeking statewide office, and apparently all five Democrats on the redistricting board will be running statewide in 1982.

Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, is seeking the GOP nomination for U.S. senator, and Sen. Bill Meier, R-Euless, has announced for attorney general.

Board members White and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong have announced for the Democratic nomination for governor; Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Comptroller Bob Bullock are seeking re-election; and House Speaker Bill Clayton is expected to announce for land commissioner this month.

Republican Gov. Bill Clements stated, "I have said when the time comes I will make an issue of this in the various campaigns of the individuals involved. There is a price that is going to be paid by the people who advocated that plan."

The board adopted the Hobby plan, 4-1, and the lieutenant governor called it "fine from a legal point of view."

The House Study Group said the "best estimate" is that Republicans would lose three of their eight Senate seats. State Democratic Party chairman Bob Slagle said, however, the GOP could lose four seats.

Clements vetoed the new Senate districts approved by the Legislature. That veto gave the board the job of drawing districts for 1982 elections.

"The one that I vetoed was tragic. The one put forward (by the board) is tragic," said Clements.

The board also drew new districts for state representatives after the Texas Supreme Court had invalidated the Legislature's House plan.

House and Senate plans are being challenged in a federal suit set for trial Jan. 18 before a three-judge panel in Dallas. That lawsuit, also filed by Republicans, consolidates a suit in San Antonio against the House plan and a Dallas suit against the Senate plan.

A ruling is expected this month on yet another redistricting suit, which seeks to throw out the Legislature's plan for new U.S. House districts. The suit was heard by three federal judges in Austin.

Jim George, an Austin lawyer representing the Texas Republican Party, contends in the GOP's class-action suit that the Senate plan ignores the state constitutional requirement that Senate districts be drawn on the basis of "qualified electors," not total population.

He also argues that the plan already is outdated because it failed to take into account population shifts.

"By the time of the first election to be held under this plan in 1982, the districts will already be unequal and by 1990 some districts will have twice as many people as others," George told the board. "For example, by 1990 there will be 889,203 people in Senate District 7 and only 450,964 in District 9. That plan simply cannot satisfy the requirement of one man, one vote. Indeed, a person's vote in District 9 will count nearly twice as much as a vote in District 7 in the 1990 election."

Address To Be Mailed

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. Fob James' unprecedented "Address to the People of Alabama," scheduled to be mailed with state income tax forms next week, may show a governor some citizens won't recognize.

State convicts have been busy for weeks stapling the printed reports to tax forms, and some have penciled in some extra facial hair on the report's picture of James. The balding governor has a moustache in some versions, a beard in others.

Jim Bradshaw, head of the state's Income Tax Division, says he's not sure if any of the "decorated" reports were stapled to the tax forms or were drawn simply as a prank.

Villager Finds Necklace

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A Pakistani villager has found a 4,481-year-old sapphire necklace in a pile of rubble left by visiting archeologists who apparently overlooked it.

Salma Sultana, custodian of the Moenjadro ruins, said the archeologists failed to find any relics of ancient civilization during their excavations at the site in Sind province, western Pakistan.

The necklace, which dates from 2,500 B.C., is on display in the Moenjadro museum, she said.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Too few female hormones?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 48-year-old married woman and my main problem is the menopause. For the past five months hot flashes have made me quite uncomfortable, particularly at night. My thrashing about, throwing the blanket off and on again and the heat I throw off during a flash has disturbed my husband's rest, as well as mine. Now I know why twin beds are often bought by middle-aged couples. It has more to do with lack of sleep than lack of ardor.

I can't take estrogen therapy because of fibroids so I take Bellergal-S, which has helped some but I still have the problem. An alarming side effect was a loss of libido. After a few weeks of "frigidity" I realized that my marriage might suffer.

I read that dolomite powder might help. The article mentioned that calcium absorption might be impeded because of the phosphorous content in the American diet. My diet does not include many dairy products because I am trying to control my weight. Will dolomite powder help or hurt or do nothing? Are there other ways to cope with the menopause?

DEAR READER — Your loss of libido may be from a further decrease in female hormone production. I understand your problem in taking estrogen but perhaps your doctor would like to try progesterone, the other main female hormone which does work to control hot flashes in some women and doesn't pose the same risks of estrogen. And if things are too bad you might take a small dose of estrogen and if your fibroids do show an increase in size or cause a problem you could have them removed. Fibroids are not cancer but they seem to involute when estrogen sources in the body diminish, hence they may decrease after the menopause.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, to aid in your understanding of this change. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Vitamin E has been claimed to help some women with hot flashes, perhaps because it has some estrogenic action itself. And Inderal, commonly used for high blood pressure, heart irregularities and headaches also helps some women. I am doubtful on dolomite. You need calcium but there are better sources, including a balanced diet. And the major source of increased phosphorous in the American diet is meat. Meat protein actually enhances the absorption of calcium.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you mentioned enzymes in the treatment of milk intolerance. I am acetic. Can the inability to digest gluten be due to the lack of a specific enzyme? If so, is there a place where I can obtain it?

DEAR READER — No, the two conditions are entirely different. Celiac sprue is thought to be due to an allergic type response to gluten, found in all cereals except rice and corn. If you consume any gluten-containing foods or even foods such as ice cream that contain flour (which means gluten) you may develop severe diarrhea. At present the best approach to celiac disease is to avoid all sources of gluten. That means avoiding commercially prepared foods such as cream soups, hot dogs and many other common foods that may contain flour or other cereals containing gluten.

Committees To Cut Back Now

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Seven Texas House committees have been warned to slow down their spending in 1982.

All committee chairmen have received letters reminding them they have to make $60,000 last until the 1983 session. Some committee leaders got letters saying the $60,000 isn't going to last if spending continues at present rates.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, chairman of the subcommittee on committee operations, said Wednesday the letters were intended to be a reminder of the spending limit for the 16-month interim between sessions.

"Nobody has been threatened," he said. "This is merely a statement of status."

Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said the budgets are "an effort to try to establish some new accounting and bookkeeping procedures." He indicated the budgets are somewhat less than committees have had to spend in the past.

Committee spending records were released by Speaker Bill Clayton's office after Austin reporters filed an Open Records Act request.

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen's Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts has been the top spender.

That committee, which has been involved in litigation on redistricting, spent $36,502 during the first three months of the interim.

Rep. Craig Washington's Human Services Committee, spent $20,205 for the first three months.

The only chairman The Associated Press was able to contact Wednesday was Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, chairman of Intergovernmental Affairs. The committee has spent $13,328 through the first three months.

Lewis, a candidate for speaker during the 1983 session, said he had not received the letter.

"That's news to me. If anyone ever gave me a budget I was supposed to stay in for three months I don't know about it," he said.

Lewis said his committee handles more legislation than most committees.

The U.S. Congress outlawed dueling in 1839.

The law of large numbers is of great significance setting insurance premium rates. It states that actual results tend to equal expected results as the number of happenings increases. It is only occasionally that insurance is concerned with a particular event. It is more often concerned with the number of times an event may be expected to happen over a period of time. Certain happenings that appear to be the result of pure chance, when isolated instances are considered, occur with surprising regularity when a large number of circumstances have been observed.

Dog To Star In Broadway Musicals

DALLAS (AP) — What hairy-chested movie star has worked with Omar Sharif and Chevy Chase, has plans for Broadway musicals and a Saturday morning television show and exudes a kind of, well, animal magnetism?

No, it's not Rin Tin Tin or Lassie.

It's Benji, canine lead of his own comic strip, television specials and films such as "Benji," "For the Love of Benji" and "Oh, Heavenly Dog."

The lovable mutt's career is mapped out by Joe Camp, the founder and head of Mulberry Square Productions, the decade-old Dallas studio behind the Benji pictures.

Camp's company operates leagues from the Los Angeles-New York axis that controls filmdom, but Camp said he wouldn't have it any other way.

Letters in children's handwriting pour into Mulberry's office daily. Sent in return are photos, pins, and iron-on transfers. Benji's expressive face adorns purses, shirts, a multitude of merchandise.

"People knew Lassie," Camp said, "but people love Benji."

Camp penned the story for the first Benji picture in 1968. But it wasn't until 1974 that the picture was completed and premiered.

"I kept trying to sell it," he said, "but the reaction was always, 'Oh, that's cute.'"

That first film now has earned $45 million worldwide.

The nucleus of the Benji phenomenon germinated from a Disney film, whose mentor — Walt Disney — Camp said he would like to emulate.

"I saw a clip from 'The Lady and the Tramp,' and thought, 'I wonder if it would be possible to do with real dogs what Disney did with amination?' Then I thought, 'No, our dog couldn't talk.'

"I played with our dog and suddenly thought, 'You know, dogs can talk to us — with their eyes, their actions.'"

Naturally, Benji doesn't interpolate great hunks of dialogue. But those who have seen his pictures swear that the dog outacts his two-legged co-stars.

Critics have dubbed the mutt the Laurence Olivier of the dog world and called his emoting reminiscent of such silent-screen stars as Charles Chaplin.

Camp agreed with all the critic's dogma.

"The people are props in a Benji movie," he said. "The dog is three-dimensional."

Collaring the perfect Benji to go with his initial script almost stymied Camp in the early 1970s.

"I talked to all the major animal trainers in Hollywood. They all said it was impossible," he said.

Then Camp met veteran trainer Frank Inn, who happened to have a dog named Higgins who was perfect — a dog he originally had picked up in a Burbank, Calif., animal shelter.

The dog had compiled quite a resume as a thespian, too, on the television show, 'Petticoat Junction." Higgins became the first Benji. He retired then died, and his daughter has taken his place. But she is called Benji, and referred to as 'he.' That's show biz.

Benji has gone Hollywood only to the extent that he lives with Inn in California, travels first class, prefers filet mignon on the road and pockets $10,000 per personal appearance.

His television specials have been nominated for Emmys, and one of the movies' songs — 'I Feel Love" — won a Golden Globe award and was nominated for an Academy Award. He was the second animal to be inducted into the American Humane Society's Animal Actors Hall of Fame — right behind Lassie. He has presented an Emmy, wearing a formal black bow tie, of course. He and Camp traveled to the Cannes (France) Film Festival.

Camp safeguards the Benji image, approving all merchandising contracts and overseeing the creative content of the comic strips and Benji productions.

Failure rate is high for smaller studios struggling to make it in the shadow cast by the film industry's established giants. But not for Camp's Mulberry.

He spearheaded the entire marketing and promotional strategy for the first film, after major distributors wanted to kiss it off as a "G-rated dog picture." Camp, Inn and Benji circuited 110 cities to promote the movie. It was a hit.

Mulberry now is expanding into every realm of the entertainment business, with the Saturday morning TV show set for fall 1982 and the Broadway show in the works. The comic strip kicked off in October 1981.

"There are feelings and emotions attached to that little dog," Camp said. "When you make contact — that emotional rapport of living someone's life with him — it's hard not to feel something. That's what they feel about Benji."

Goat Stars In Program; Also Finds Happy Home

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, England (AP) — Djali, the 5-month old goat who became pet of the set at the filming of a new television version of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," was pulled out of the stewing pan into the spotlight only a few short weeks before production started here at Pinewood Studios.

The latest version of the Victor Hugo classic, starring Anthony Hopkins as the hunchbacked bellringer Quasimodo; Derek Jacobi as the evil Archbishop of Notre Dame, and Lesley-Anne Down as Esmeralda the gypsy dancer, was produced for telecast on the CBS network early in February as a Hallmark Hall of Fame special.

The young kid, on sale at a London auction, was about to be purchased by a Pakistani family for their Sunday dinner, according to associate producer Malcolm Christopher.

A shabbily dressed elderly woman, learning of the goat's impending fate, outbid the would-be diners. But then, unable to afford its keep, she presented Djali to a local branch of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the hope they could find it a good home.

Three days later, Christopher, seeking animals to appear in big crowd sequences for the new film, visited the RSPCA and was immediately impressed by the perfect snowwhite features and intelligence of the little goat.

Djali was subsequently hired for a significant role in "The Hunchback." He is Esmeralda's inseparable companion, even accompanying her to the bridal chamber on her wedding night. He watches while she dances in front of the great Cathedral of Notre Dame during the annual Festival of Fools. He also has the uncanny ability to count, she claims, by scratching the earth with his hoof.

In Hugo's tale, goats were believed to possess demoniac powers, and because of Djali Esmeralda is accused of being a witch when she is implicated in the murder of her sweetheart, Phoebus, captain of the royal archers. At her trial, before she is subjected to torture to force confession of her alleged guilt, the goat is presented as evidence to prove she is indeed a witch.

After completion of the production, Djali was returned to the RSPCA, which did find the little goat a happy home with a family where the three young children dote on their "retired TV star."

Sailors Jump Ship

RIO GRANDE, Brazil (AP) — Three Polish sailors jumped ship in this southern Brazilian port and sought asylum in this South American country, federal police said.

Acting Police Chief Joao Fernando Bonczinski said the three left the freighter "Ziemia Wielkopolska" late Tuesday while it was waiting to load soy meal bound for Poland.

Brazilian Writes For Fifty Years

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Jorge Amado, the Brazilian novelist who with his pen and typewriter has spread the charms and intrigue of Bahia — along with the reality of serious Third World political and social problems — to dozens of lands around the globe, is celebrating the 50th anniversary of his professional career.

In Salvador, the voodoo-enchanted capital of Amado's native Bahia state, on the northeastern Brazilian coast, cultural organizations have sponsored a biographical display of the writer's 27 major books, which have been translated into 42 languages.

"This is the contribution of an author who comes from the people," Amado, 69, told a local reporter at the exposition.

Amado's bookwriting career started in 1931 with the release of "O Paiz do Carnaval," which means "The Land of Carnival," in Portuguese, Brazil's national language.

There followed a series of novels concentrating on the exploitation of poor and oppressed Brazilians. As he matured, Amado started giving his novels and fictional characters wider appeal. Brazilian critics agree that Amado slowly turned from a "political writer" into a firstrate storyteller.

Later successes such as "Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands" and "Gabriela, Clove and Cinnamon" attest to Amado's skill at describing the color and flavor of Bahian life.

Amado's works are routinely translated into major languages such as English, French, Spanish, German and Italian. But Jorge Amado has also gone to the rest of the world in SerboCroatian, Farsi, Mongolian, Japanese, Thai and Yiddish. And his "Mar Morto," or "Dead Sea," is said to be the only Latin American novel ever translated into Icelandic.

"Dona Flor" has been made into a movie that was a boxoffice success throughout the Western Hemisphere and was recently adapted as a Broadway play, "Sarava."

Amado, who likes to relax surrounded by old friends in Bahia — where he has become as "oba," or spirit master, in a local voodoo-linked cult called Candomble — says he is working on his 28th book but that he doesn't know yet what the title will be.

Dear Abby

Nurse Finds Prayer Power Stronger Than Pill Power

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I started taking diet pills two years ago. They killed my hunger and made me feel great. Too great — that was the trouble. By nighttime I was overstimulated and couldn't sleep, so I started taking sleeping pills. Then more diet pills the next day. I soon found myself so hooked I couldn't stop. (As a registered nurse, I should have known better.)

Finally my nerves were shot from all the highs and lows, and I knew something had to be done. Even though I'm not a religious person, I did something I hadn't done in years. I prayed. And by God (literally) I somehow found the strength to take all those pills and flush them down the toilet!

I'd be lying if I said the next few weeks were easy. I've never had two more difficult weeks in all my life. More than once I was tempted to get more pills, but I prayed for the strength to keep me from it, and miraculously the strength came to me!

It's been five months since I've taken a pill, and I feel like a new person. I'm "high" on being free from artificial stimulation, which always ends in depression.

I know all of this is too long for your column, Abby, but I hope you'll find space to print part of it. I'm sure there are others out there who are hooked as much as I was, and if I could kick the habit with prayer, so can they. Sign me...

FREE IN TUCSON

DEAR FREE: Your inspiring message is well worth the space in this column. Thanks for confirming that the power of prayer can move mountains.

DEAR ABBY: Your flippant answer to "For Natural Family Planning" reflects the pill-pushing, mechanical-solution mentality of Planned Parenthood. It also puts down women by implying that the majority of us are not intelligent enough to read clear signals from our own bodies.

Certainly some abstinence and self-control are necessary for natural family planning to succeed, but implying that this is such a great hardship reduces humans to little more than animals in heat. Besides, Abby, a little "Abstinence makes the heart grow fonder."

ALSO FOR NATURAL FAMILY PLANNING

DEAR ALSO: The Planned Parenthood people wrote me to ask that I recommend natural family planning as a safe, effective alternative to other methods of birth control.

DEAR ABBY: Your evaluation of teachers who get crushes on their students ("They are immature — the same as students who get crushes on their teachers.") was not shallow despite the few objections you received!

It is dangerous and unethical for teachers to become romantically involved with their students, who are usually naive children in a very confused period of their lives. The fact that occasionally these involvements produce long-lived relationships does not excuse the lack of ethics inherent in such conduct. Don't back down, Abby. You were right the first time.

TOM SMITH (MY REAL NAME)

DEAR TOM: Thanks. I needed that.

Banished From The Language

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — The phrases "first time ever" and "revenue enhancement" have been banished from the English language by order of the Unicorn Hunters.

The Lake Superior State College group, which annually bans words and phrases for overuse, misuse or general uselessness, issued this year's banishments Friday after receiving 2,000 nominating letters from as far away as Paris and Tokyo, according to archivist W.T. Rabe.

In its New Year's Dishonour List of Words Banished from the Queen's English, the Unicorn Hunters ordered Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. to "speak only classical Latin for a probationary period of six months."

"Haig's misuse and abuse of the language is chronic, perhaps irreversable," said Peter Thomas, senior herald of the Unicorn Hunters. "There seemed a period when he might have been in remission, but he has now broken out again. Even a simple 'getting old' becomes 'maturation' in Haig language."

Ask Gun Sales Be Stalled

CHICAGO (AP) — After state legislators said they didn't realize a new state law would permit the sale of machine guns to the public, Gov. James R. Thompson asked that sales of the weapons be stalled until the law can be reviewed.

Although Thompson signed the measure that goes into effect Friday, he said it was not his aim to legalize possession of machine guns, sawed-off shotguns and other weapons except for people who need them in their jobs. The law would permit the sale of automatic weapons to anyone who could obtain a federal permit.

On Tuesday, Chicago's City Council outlawed the sale of automatic weapons in response to the new state law.

Guerrillas Kill Soldiers

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas said in a year-end broadcast over their shortwave station "Radio Venceremos" that they have killed more than 2,000 government security forces since July.

They also said 1982 "will be definitive in achieving a government of popular power" in El Salvador. The message was broadcast Thursday.

Military spokesmen were unavailable for comment, but reliable sources said the claim is probably accurate. The military has admitted about 800 casualties since July but refuse to specify how many soldiers were killed.

The guerrillas said 160 rebels have died. They are fighting to topple a civilian-military junta that came to power after an October 1979 coup.

Houston's First Woman Mayor Sworn In Saturday

HOUSTON (AP) — It may seem to the casual observer that voters of Houston made a strange choice indeed when they elected a mayor, someone to lead them in battle against traffic jams, pollution, crime and other problems threatening this city's explosive growth.

They spurned incumbent Jim McConn, a businessman with the experience of two terms in office. They rejected tough-talking Sheriff Jack Heard, who stressed his ability to lead men and fight crime.

Instead, voters chose a person who was not a member of the established political machinery and in any case could never be called a "good ol' boy." They elected a reserved, bespectacled bookkeeper who used neither charismatic speeches nor political wheeling and dealing to court votes.

But their choice, Kathy Jean Whitmire, 35, who was sworn in Saturday as Houston's first woman mayor, is a magna cum laude certified public accountant who proved while serving as city controller that she could reduce wasteful spending and stand up to pressure.

Voters apparently decided it was not strange at all to give the job to a person — man or woman, old or young, traditional or not — who promised to bring the same common-sense, businesslike approach to the rest of city government.

"If managers within the city know what is expected of them and have goals and know they are going to have to be answerable for meeting those goals, that creates that same kind of motivation (that exists) in the private sector," Mrs. Whitmire said in an interview with The Associated Press before she took office.

The statement and Mrs. Whitmire's reputation for trying to get rid of "deadwood" could make some city workers nervous, but she said as controller she was unfairly portrayed as a boss too eager to fire employes, especially men.

"There was really only one person who has been fired in the four years that I've been controller. It's built up like there were a lot more than that because there were some others that I persuaded to leave, men and women both," she said.

She said she does not necessarily prefer working with women, although at one point the four top positions in the controller's office were held by women.

"I do think there are a lot of women who have a lot to offer and deserve to be given a chance," said Mrs. Whitmire.

She said her own sex wasn't a factor in winning the mayor's race. Nevertheless, to her irritation, being a young woman and being a widow — and the other things about her private life she considers irrelevant to her job — have suddenly become matters of public concern.

"I found out very quickly that the difference between being controller and being mayor is dramatic — it is really dramatic," she said. "This is a new experience for me to have so much prying into what I'm doing with my life and where I'm buying my clothes and all that kind of stuff.

"It's an irritation but it isn't the biggest problem in the world. Everything you do has a down side and that happens to be the down side to holding a high-level political office."

She got a taste of being in the public spotlight during her tenure as controller when she was continually making headlines by withholding funds approved by the City Council when she did not agree with the expenditures.

Without the controller's signature, the funds legally could not be released.

Occasionally, like the time she balked at releasing $50,000 to hire consultants to redraw City Council district lines, she later gave in and released the money. That's why she refuses to place a dollar amount on how much she saved taxpayers during her four years in office.

"Even if we were not successful in turning around the Council we made the point that the system was wrong and got public sentiment on our side," she said.

During those years she won the reputation as a strict guardian of public funds that she used a springboard to the mayor's office. Today she insists "I do not intend to run for anything else" and says after she leaves the mayor's office she'll "go back into the private sector, I would expect."

But she confesses her No. 1 hobby is, after all, politics.

"I don't guess I ever considered it as a career. When I first considered running for office was seven or eight years ago. My husband ran for office and his brother (John Whitmire) is in the state Legislature, and so I've been through all those campaigns," she said.

Her husband, Jim Whitmire, who twice ran unsuccessfully for a City Council seat, died in 1976 from complications of diabetes after a long illness. They had been married 10 years.

"I considered him my mentor," Mrs. Whitmire said. "He was the one who always encouraged me and got me to do things if I didn't have the nerve." The Whitmires had no children.

Her sister-in-law, Linda Niederhofer, said Mrs. Whitmire "continues to talk about how wonderful her marriage was. They were extremely close."

Mrs. Niederhofer said when Whitmire's illness caused him to go blind, Mrs. Whitmire changed jobs so she could drive him to work.

A couple of years ago a possible romantic link between Mrs. Whitmire and a man who was a municipal judge at the time surfaced in newspaper columns. It was not front page news back then, but today she says she must consider a much more intense public interest in such matters.

The ideal evening out "would be hard to define because anytime I go out anymore everybody knows who I am," she said. She did not rule out accepting a date with a man, but she said, "being mayor is very demanding and it does require a commitment of virtually all of your time."

Mrs. Whitmire, an attractive, 5-foot-tall woman who projects a humorless, no-nonsense image in public but laughs easily in private, claims she was not popular as a student at San Jacinto High School although she did play the oboe in the band and was chosen majorette. Her main achievement was making good grades.

She was offered an academic scholarship to Rice but went to Southern Methodist instead "because I thought it would be more exciting to move to Dallas." After one year she moved back home and finished her education at the University of Houston, where she earned a master's degree in accounting in 1970.

Her parents, Karl and Ida Niederhofer, still live here. Niederhofer, 71, is an electric contractor. Mrs. Whitmire and her brother, Tom, jointly own a duplex in Houston's Montrose neighborhood, and she lives in the upper half.

The duplex has a hot tub and a heated swimming pool, where Mrs. Whitmire says she likes to relax. "But I don't do that much anymore because I'm too busy," she said.

So why — in addition to the $81,000 annual salary — did a shy accountant who cherishes her private life want to be mayor of a city with such complicated and controversial problems?

"For the opportunity to do something that would make a difference in the long run — the opportunity to accomplish something for the overall good of the city that would change the course and improve the future of this city," she said.

"Once you get in on the fringes of politics, you begin to see how badly it is all run and what kind of people are doing those jobs and how inept many of them are and how little attention they give to what really needs to be accomplished.

"That's when you start feeling like, well, 'this is terrible — I ought to be in there doing that.'"

Message Says To Withdraw

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — President Nicolae Ceausescu used his New Year's message to reiterate calls for withdrawal of U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe, the official Romanian news agency Agerpres said.

"We must do our best to stop the deployment of medium-range missiles in Europe, for the withdrawal of those already in place, for a passage to arms reduction and the achievemnt of a nuclear-free Europe," Ceausescu said in his text, which was carried by the agency.

Ceausescu also told Romanians they "will have to cope with many difficulties" in 1982. The Romanian economy is struggling with food shortages, a serious energy shortage and foreign debts.

2 Climbers Bodies Found

MENDOZA, Argentina (AP) — Bodies of two American climbers who died a year ago on the slopes of 22,964-foot Mount Aconcagua have been found by German mountaineers, the newspaper Los Andes says.

The report in Thursday's editions could not be confirmed with the U.S. or West Germany embassies because they were closed for New Year's.

The paper said a mountaineering club identified the Americans as CHARLES T. Bludworth, 26, of Kansas, and Guy M. Andews; 20, of California.

Longhorns Win Cotton...

Texas Upends Alabama In 4th Quarter, 14-12

DALLAS (AP) - Texas Coach Fred Akers has been criticized for being dull personally and having an offense twice as boring.

But he mapped the proper strategy in an exchange of chess moves with legendary Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant in the Cotton Bowl Classic Friday and it was Akers who prevailed in their first meeting 14-12.

The Longhorns overcame a 10-0 deficit with two touchdowns in the fourth quarter, then gave the Crimson Tide an intentional safety before weathering a counter-charge.

Not only did the victory by Texas keep alive a Longhorns jinx of never having lost to Alabama, but it kept Bryant from winning an NCAA record seventh consecutive bowl game in seven years.

"Coach Akers did everything he needed to do to win the game," said Bryant. "His (taking a safety in the final minute) had to be a great call because it worked."

Bryant added, "I don't think there is a Texas whammy on Alabama. Their players and coaches beat us - not a whammy."

Quarterback Walter Lewis' 6-yard touchdown pass to Jesse Bendross and Peter Kim's 10-yard field goal gave the Longhorns a big fourth quarter hill to climb.

Texas quarterback Robert Brewer, starting only his fourth game for the Longhorns, romped 30 yards for a touchdown on a tricky draw play.

After a punt, he whipped the Longhorns 80 yards in 11 plays climaxed by Terry Orr's 8-yard touchdown run. Included in the drive was a 37-yard completion to tight end Lawrence Sampleton on a third-and-10 play.

Joey Jones returned the ensuing kickoff a Cotton Bowl record 61 yards, but cornerback William Graham intercepted Lewis on the next play at the Texas 1.

Then the game of mental checkers started.

Akers ordered punter John Goodson to take a safety with less than a minute to play. And Texas held Alabama after it got a free punt from its own 20.

"We knew we had several options but we just wanted to keep them as far away from our goal as possible," said Akers. "The eight seconds Goodson wasted running around in the end zone seemed like an eternity."

He added, "It was the greatest victory of my coaching career. You will not find a classier man or program than Bear Bryant and Alabama."

The win raised Texas' record to 10-1-1, while the loss dropped Alabama to 9-2-1.

The victory was a big one for Akers' career at Texas. He had been under heavy heat from some Longhorn alumni going into the season and even into the Cotton Bowl game.

Brewer was named the offensive most valuable player and Alabama linebacker Robbie Jones, who had 14 tackles, was the defensive MVP.

No. 1 Tigers Whip Nebraska...

Clemson Keeps Lock On National Ranking

MIAMI (AP) - And so, after four zany months of what may have been college football's most cockeyed season, the race for the national championship finally seems to be in focus.

Top-ranked Clemson, the seventh team to make it to the top in 1981, put some sanity back into the overall picture Friday night with a convincing 22-15 Orange Bowl triumph over self-destructive Nebraska.

The much-maligned Tigers from the basketball-crazy Atlantic Coast Conference don't have to take a back seat to anyone any longer. The national champion for 1981 won't be announced until The Associated Press poll is released at 5:30 p.m. CST tonight, but Clemson would appear to have clear sailing.

The Tigers did what no other major team in the nation could do. They whipped every one of their 12 opponents, completing the best campaign in the school's 86 years of football. And when runnerup Georgia and third-ranked Alabama - and, of course, No. 4 Nebraska - lost their bowl games, the final chapter appeared to have been written in Clemson's remarkable rags-to-riches story.

"Are we No. 1? Are we the best team in the country?" Coach Danny Ford shouted outside his team's uproarious locker room.

They took care of Nebraska the way they handled almost all of their other opponents - a stubborn defense that bent but rarely broke, plus an opportunistic offense and a strong kicking game.

Donald Igwebuike kicked a 41-yard field goal and Cliff Austin swept around right end for a 2-yard touchdown - both after Nebraska coughed up the football inside its own 30-yard line - as Clemson built a 12-7 halftime lead.

Igwebuike, a Nigerian transfer student who also played on Clemson's nationally ranked soccer team, added field goals from 37 and 36 yards, while Homer Jordan flipped a 13-yard scoring pass to Perry Tuttle that put the game out of reach in the third period.

Nebraska's explosive rushing attack, ranked No.2 in the country at 330.5 yards a game, was held to 193. And the Cornhuskers' deadly 1-2 tailback punch of Roger Craig and Mike Rozier was fairly well contained - Craig had 87 yards on 10 carries, Rozier 75 on 15 - even though Rozier lofted a 25-yard option pass to Anthony Steels for Nebraska's first touchdown and Craig rambled 26 yards for the other.

In fact, Clemson outgained the Huskers 289-256 in total offense and the Tigers, all year long one of the nation's most opportunistic teams, took advantage of both Nebraska turnovers.

With more than 20,000 of its frenzied orange-clad fans among the crowd of 72,748, Clemson finally notched the victory that seems certain to earn them the national respect for which they have long yearned, plus recognition as a major power.

The loss was a bitter pill for Nebraska to swallow, especially with Georgia and Alabama losing. The Cornhuskers, who had national championsip dreams of their own, got the help they needed, but they couldn't help themselves.

"This is probably the most disappointing loss I've ever had," Osborne said. "We had a chance to take it all. We had it in our hands and we let it slip away."

Rose Bowl Shutout...

Huskies Shock Iowa!

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - The Pacific-10 Conference needed a victory to avert being shut out in bowl games this season, and the Washington Huskies supplied it.

They did it with a shutout Friday - the first whitewash in the Rose Bowl since 1953 when the University of Southern California stopped Wisconsin 7-0.

Led by freshman speedster Jacque Robinson's two touchdowns, the Huskies salvaged the Pac-10's pride with a 28-0 victory over Iowa, Big Ten Conference co-champion.

"I'm not a savior," Washington Coach Don James said with a smile, "but I'm happy we won."

The Huskies, 2½-point underdogs at game time and big losers to Michigan in the 1981 Rose Bowl, won on a day when the Pac-10's perennial football superpower, Southern Cal, lost to Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

UCLA fell to Michigan in the Bluebonnet Bowl Thursday night and Washington State earlier lost to Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl.

But New Year's Day in Pasadena belonged strictly to the Huskies.

"You just witnessed an old-fashioned end kicking," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry admitted to reporters. "Washington really put it to us in every area of the game, including coaching.

"They were impressive on offense and devastating on defense. That was the worst game we played, but the Huskies were the reason why."

Robinson, a 5-foot-11, 204-pound tailback from San Jose, Calif., rushed for 142 yards on 20 carries and was named Player of the Game, despite the fact that Ron "Cookie" Jackson started the game at tailback and Robinson played only in the second and fourth quarters.

Robinson scored on a 1-yard run early in the second quarter for a 7-0 Washington lead. He added a nifty 34-yard scoring dash early in the fourth period to run the lead to 21-0.

Washington's second touchdown came 19 seconds before halftime at the end of a 60-yard, eight-play drive that began with just 1:35 left in the second quarter.

Fullback Vince Coby, playing in his first Rose Bowl after watching two from the sidelines because of injuries, scored on a 1-yard run for Washington.

The Huskies, who finished the season at 10-2, scored their final touchdown just 2:34 after Robinson's second scoring run.

Defensive tackle Lynn Madsen recovered a fumble by Iowa quarterback Gordy Bohannon, who also lost another fumble and had two passes intercepted. The Huskies quickly moved in from the Iowa 18-yard line, with reserve quarterback Tim Cowan scoring on a 3-yard run.

Ballesteros Holds Lead In Sun City Tourney

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) - Seve Ballesteros said he faces more pressures than the others in the elite field chasing the biggest prize in the history of golf.

"I need the money more than they do," Ballesteros insisted with a straight face after he had stretched his lead to three strokes Friday at the halfway point of the $1-million Sun City Golf challenge.

The other four in the invitational field - Jack Nicklaus, host Gary Player, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino - all rank high on the all-time list of golf's money-winners.

"Seve is going to be a hard man to catch," Trevino said after Ballesteros had built his lead with a blistering, 5-under-par 31 on the back nine Friday, finishing off a 68 that gave him a 137 total, 7-under-par on the 7,693-yard Gary Player Country Club course.

Nicklaus, with another 70, and Miller, with a second round 68, shared second place at 140.

Trevino missed eight greens in the second round and said he "was fortunate to shoot 74," a figure that put him at par 144 and seven strokes off the pace. Player was three more strokes behind at 147 after a 77 on the course he designed in the crater of an extinct volcano and adjacent to this $100-million resort complex some 100 miles from Johannesburg.

Nittany Lions Plug USC In Fiesta Bowl

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) - Although the pollsters may disagree, Penn State Coach Joe Paterno says his seventh-ranked Nittany Lions should be voted the nation's No.1 college football team after their Fiesta Bowl victory here over No.8 Southern Cal.

"I felt going into this game that the winner would be the best team in the country," Paterno said after Penn State's 26-10 victory Friday. "We feel we could probably beat any team in the country right now."

Entering the game as slight underdogs, the Nittany Lions upset the Trojans with a swarming defense and a deliberate offense. Penn State, led by linebacker Chet Parlavecchio and defensive tackle Leo Wisniewski, held USC's Heisman Trophy-winning tailback Marcus Allen to 85 yards on 30 carries and forced him to fumble twice.

For Allen, who rushed for an NCAA-record 2,342 yards this season, it was his worst game "since I don't know when."

"No excuses, but I don't think we were ready to play," Allen said. "We came out flat."

USC Coach John Robinson, whose four-game winning streak in bowls was broken, said his Trojans "didn't play with intensity.

"We were outplayed in about every way. We didn't have it in us. We made plenty of mistakes, but I thought we could work them out of our system."

Penn State junior tailback Curt Warner overshadowed Allen by gaining 145 yards and two touchdowns on 26 carries.

He scored from 17 yards out just 15 seconds into the game following a Penn State recovery of an Allen fumble. Warner's other touchdown run - a 21-yarder - gave the Nittany Lions a 24-7 advantage early in the third quarter.

Penn State's other points came on a 52-yard pass from quarterback Todd Blackledge to split end Gregg Garrity, a 21-yard field goal by Brian Franco in the second period and a third-quarter safety when Dave Paffenroth blocked a USC punt attempt and the ball rolled out of the end zone.

Southern Cal had tied the game 7-7 late in the first quarter when linebacker Chip Banks returned an interception of a Blackledge pass 20 yards for a touchdown. A 32-yard field goal by Frank Jordan in the third quarter closed out USC's scoring.

Blackledge, a sophomore who completed 11 of 24 passes for 175 yards, said Paterno told his team not to let up with a 17-7 halftime lead.

"He said USC had been in this situation many times before," Blackledge recalled. "We proved we're the best team in the country. People just don't give us enough respect, but they might now."

The victory closed Penn State's season at 10-2 while USC finished 9-3.

Georgia Falls To Pitt As Sugar Time Expires

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Tight end John Brown said he didn't get nervous about catching the winning touchdown pass for Pittsburgh in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's night, but the impromptu victory celebration in the end zone almost did him in.

With 35 seconds left on the clock and 10th-ranked Pittsburgh trailing second-ranked Georgia 20-17, quarterback Dan Marino hit Brown with a 33-yard scoring pass.

The pass gave Pittsburgh a 24-20 victory and dashed Georgia's hopes that it could repeat last year's national title. Top-ranked Clemson downed fourth-ranked Nebraska 22-15 in the Orange Bowl in another New Year's night game.

Following the winning touchdown in the Sugar Bowl, Brown's teammates mobbed him, burying him beneath their bodies in the end zone.

Brown said that while the ball was in the air, he heard nothing and saw nothing but the football.

"The feeling - when you realize what you did - comes as soon as you touch the ball," he said.

Then he looked up and saw his teammates coming to celebrate with him.

"I wanted to run," he said. "I panicked under that pile - claustrophobia."

It was Brown's second touchdown reception of the final quarter. He gave Pittsburgh a brief 17-13 lead four minutes into the final period.

Other Pittsburgh scores came on a 41-yard field goal by Raymond Everett in the second quarter and a 30-yard pass from Marino to wide receiver Julius Dawkins in the third quarter.

Georgia got two touchdowns from stellar sophomore running back Herschel Walker - an 8-yard scoring burst in the second quarter and a 10-yard dash in the third quarter.

Georgia quarterback Buck Belue hit wide receiver Clarence Kay with a 6-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter, six minutes after Brown's first touchdown.

Marino was named the game's Most Valuable Player after hitting 26 of 41 attempts for 261 yards.

Pittsburgh's ground attack was led by tailback Bryan Thomas, who got 129 yards on 26 carries.

The Panther defense held Georgia's Walker - who ran for 1,891 yards this year - to 84 yards on 25 attempts.

Giants, Bills Try To Follow Oakland Footsteps

by The Associated Press

Cinderella stepped into the glass slipper with no trouble at all a year ago when the Oakland Raiders became the first wild card team in National Football League history to win the Super Bowl.

Now the New York Giants and Buffalo Bills are trying to make that small-sized miracle happen again.

The Giants and Bills, this year's wild-card qualifiers, advanced through the first round of playoffs last Sunday and that earned them tickets for this weekend's divisional games.

Their tasks remain tougher than other playoff teams simply because they are wild cards. First, since they had to play last weekend, they did not enjoy the week's rest following the regular season that the other six clubs in the playoffs had. And, by winning, they qualified to play the teams with the best records in their conferences — San Francisco in the National Conference and Cincinnati in the American Conference — this week and those games, like any others the wild cards play in the postseason, will be on the road.

But those were the same obstacles facing the Raiders a year ago and the Giants and Bills are quite aware of how much Oakland made of its opportunity.

New York, 9-7 during the regular season, goes to San Francisco to face the 13-3 49ers in the NFC semifinal, while Buffalo, 10-6, takes on the 12-4 Cincinnati Bengals in the AFC. Both games will be played on Sunday.

In the other half of the divisional playoffs, Tampa Bay, 9-7 and champions of the NFC Midwest Division, visited East champion Dallas, 12-4, and Miami's AFC East champion Dolphins, 11-4-1, hosted San Diego, 10-6, and winners in the AFC West, Saturday afternoon.

The four weekend winners advance to the Conference championship games on Jan. 10 and the survivors of those contests will play in Super Bowl XVI at Pontiac, Mich., on Jan. 24.

The Giants and Bills had similiar types of victories in their playoff openers. Both built big early leads and held off frantic comebacks. The Giants eliminated defending NFC champion Philadelphia 27-21 after rushing to a 20-0 first period lead. Buffalo downed the New York Jets 31-27, holding off a rally that nearly erased an early 24-0 lead.

Both wild cards come into Sunday's games with sizzling offensive weapons.

Running back Rob Carpenter of the Giants rushed 33 times for 161 yards against the Eagles, carrying the ball on 16 of his team's 20 offensive plays in the second half. Acquired from Houston early in the season, Carpenter gained 822 yards and provided the Giants with a running game which the team has lacked in recent years.

For the Bills, flanker Frank Lewis was the main weapon against the Jets, grabbing seven passes for 158 yards. Lewis set club records with 70 catches for 1,144 yards during the regular season.

It stands to reason then, that the 49ers will be trying to stop Carpenter and the Bengals must contain Lewis.

"If they're going to watch for me all the time, they're going to get buried," said Carpenter. "If they start to overplay the run, that's OK with me."

Buffalo will be playing Cincinnati for the second time this season. The Bills blew a 21-10 fourth quarter lead and bowed in overtime 27-24 last September. Many of the players said the Jets' furious comeback last week reminded them of that early encounter with the Bengals.

Defensive end Sherman White said he thought the big leads had made the Bills satisfied and left them vulnerable to rallies. "But I'll tell you, we've got to play a 60-minute game against Cincinnati," he said. "They have much better talent than the Jets."

Snyderite Tops Lift Record

Capt. Sammy Harrison of Snyder recently took top honors in the USAREUR Powerlifting Championships in Germany.

His squat lift of 440 pounds broke the old record of 435 pounds and his bench press of 240 pounds and deadlift of 460 pounds enabled him to defeat eight others in the 148-pound weight class.

Capt. Harrison, the son of Mrs. Dolly Harrison of Snyder, graduated from Snyder High School in 1972 and from Prairie View A&M in 1976.

DRILLING FLUIDS REPRESENTATIVES

A Position That Adds Up To Responsibility and Challenge

Our IMCO sales and service representatives are known as Mud Engineers in the oilfield. Their job responsibilities include on-site well testing and analysis of drilling fluid preparation and maintenance. They are trained to respond to any drilling complications and recommend appropriate steps to take. It's a demanding job and the demand for Mud Engineers is growing all the time.

We have an immediate need for individuals interested in a career in this field. Qualified candidates should ideally have a college degree and rig experience as well as a desire to work outdoors. A HS diploma is required.

At IMCO, you will have a starting salary of $18,000 per year, a company car, a year-end performance bonus, plus a comprehensive benefits package. Upon completion of an 8-week training program, you will be relocated at company expense to one of our field locations within the continental 48 states.

We at IMCO are concerned about the future of talented college graduates as well as individuals presently considering a career change. If you would like further information about career opportunities with us, please send your resume including salary history to:

Excitement and Economy

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

Excitement, atmosphere and spaciousness are usually costly, but this house provides all three, plus an exceptional amount of versatility, yet is surprisingly inexpensive to build.

Model B863 A-frame styling and imaginative interior design deserve credit for this accomplishment. The plan has 864 square feet of building area (not to be confused with living area).

Note carefully how the open space arrangement of entry, living room, dining room and kitchen contribute to the spaciousness of each, permitting greater freedom of movement and decor and, as a bonus, cutting interior finishing costs.

Note, also, the large and well organized storage area and the kitchen, bath and laundry arrangement, utilizing backed up plumbing for maximum economy.

A basement plan is available with the staircase entering at the entry closet near the kitchen - living room wall.

Upstairs are two spacious bedrooms, both with the drama of beamed ceilings. The front bedroom also has its own private balcony which echoes the lines of the porch beneath, adding symmetry to the front elevation and sheltering the main entrance.

It is just such combinations of practicality and styling excitement that make this a most noteworthy design.

Legislative Assistant Is Shot

CLEVELAND (AP) — As he lay in the back seat of the car, paralyzed from a bullet wound and trying to ward off an abductor's beatings, Paul J. Komlosi realized he had a frightening decision to make.

If he stayed awake, he probably would face a lifetime of paralysis. Or he could, he said, just "keel over and die."

Komlosi decided to call for help. As he did, the legislative assistant to U.S. Rep. Dennis E. Eckart reconciled himself to being paralyzed.

"I've resigned myself to it. I resigned myself to it that night," Komlosi, 25, said in an interview with The Plain Dealer published Friday.

The abduction occurred Dec. 19 when Komlosi went outside his Washington, D.C., home to test a stereo cassette tape deck he had bought his girlfriend for Christmas.

Two men, neither of whom have been arrested, shoved him into his girlfriend's car and drove around for a while, saying they wanted to go to Maryland. One of the men held a handgun on him, he said.

"All of a sudden, he shot me," Komlosi said. "He didn't say anything first. He just shot me."

One Man Seriously Hurt

One man received serious injuries in a one vehicle accident about 15 miles northwest of Snyder on U. S. 84, about 12:15 a.m. Saturday morning.

The driver of the 1976 Chevrolet pickup was transported to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by units of Scurry County EMS.

According to local Highway Patrol officers, the man was a Mexican male and was carrying no identification at the time of the accident.

The driver reportedly suffered a broken nose and other injuries in the mishap. He was only semi-concious when transported to the hospital and was unable to identify himself to officers.

Cotton Module Fire Put Out

Snyder firemen answered a call to a location approxamatly 10 miles southwest of Snyder, around 5:30 Friday evening.

Upon their arrival, firemen extinguished a fire in a cotton module owned by Leland McCarty. No injuries or major property damage was reported in the incident.

Officers Investigate Mishap

Snyder police officers investigated one minor traffic mishap and one theft report on an otherwise quiet Friday.

At 4:30 p.m., Guy Allen of Guy Allen Motors reported the theft of four wheel centers from a Z-28 Camero parked on his lot. No value was estimated for the missing items.

Around 11:30 a.m., Friday morning, officers went to the 2200 block of 40th St. where they investigated a minor hit and run accident. A parked 1976 Ford pickup owned by Eddie Joe McAnally was struck by an unidentified vehicle which fled the scene of the mishap. Damage was reported as minor.

In other routine Friday night action, local officers made two arrests for DWI and picked up four subjects on charges of public intoxication.

3 Sentenced In County Court

Three persons were sentenced in Judge Preston Wilson's Scurry County Court last week.

Joel Wayne Griffin Jr. entered a plea of guilty to charges of possession of marijuana, less than two oz.. He was sentenced to serve 180 days in the county jail for this offense.

Richard Roy Bertrand was fined $300 and sentenced to 3 days in jail after pleading nolo contendre to charges of driving while intoxicated.

The judge fined Jeffery Dale Fredrick $100, after he entered a guilty plea to charges of carrying a prohibited weapon.

Increase In Women's Work Force Predicted

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of working women will increase from today's 43 million to 84 million by 1990, predicts an article in Working Woman magazine.

Promising fields for them to enter, it suggests, include chemistry, accounting, engineering, computers and the stock market. The magazine calls computers "the career choice for the 1980s."

Household Items Useful In Travel Emergencies

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A special emergency car care kit made from common household items can be used temporarily until proper repairs are made, according to a manufacturer of automotive parts.

"Used correctly, they can provide emergency solutions to roadside breakdowns," says Dave Bowman, technical services manager for Fram Corp. "While you would not be able to drive long distances with these tools, they will be enough to get you off the road and to the nearest service station. Just remember that these are temporary solutions," he adds.

Bowman suggests keeping these items in the trunk to help get your car from the road to the garage or out of a "sticky" situation:

—Scarf or handkerchief. If a leaky or broken hose causes your cooling system to overheat, a scarf or handkerchief can remedy the problem long enough to get you to a station. Wrap the cloth tightly around the hose where it is cut or leaking. Then secure it with a belt. This will slow the leak down.

—Coat hanger. If your tail pipe or any part of your exhaust system drops, a coat hanger can help. Unravel the hanger and wrap one end around the tail pipe. Fasten the other end to the underside of your rear bumper. This will prevent the muffler from falling off and avoid leaving a shower of sparks as your exhaust system drags.

—Pantyhose. A broken fan belt can be temporarily replaced with a pair of pantyhose. Wrap them tightly around the pulleys where the belt was located and tie them in a knot. This will keep the engine going until you get to a garage.

—Shower curtain. If your car breaks down and you have to get under the vehicle to work, use a shower curtain as a ground cloth to spread under your car so you won't get dirty.

—Litter box filler. This is helpful when you are stuck on snow or ice. Spread the litter under the spinning tire for additional traction. Also, the extra weight of a sack of litter box filler in your trunk can prevent the rear end of your car from skidding on slippery surfaces.

—Newspapers or burlap sacks. When you are stuck in sand or mud, slide newspapers or a burlap sack under the stuck tire for traction.

—Funnel. Keep a funnel in your trunk in case you need to add fluids to the engine.

—Rags. When your defroster isn't working, use the rags to wipe the inside of your windshield clean.

"Also, some standard items that should always be in an emergency car care kit," adds Bowman, "are a screwdriver, pliers, a fire extinguisher; an address book containing emergency phone numbers; old gloves to protect your hands while working under the hood; a white handkerchief to use as a distress signal, small change for emergency calls and a pencil and paper for taking down important information."

"Flag For Sunrise"

A Gripping, Moving Story

A FLAG FOR SUNRISE. By Robert Stone. Knopf. 439 Pages. $13.95.

If you read only one book this year, consider "A Flag for Sunrise" by National Book Award winner Robert Stone. It is a gripping and powerfully moving novel.

The story is set in the small Central American country of Tecan. Revolution is brewing. The U.S. government knows about it, and wants to know more.

Frank Holliwell is an American anthropologist who cooperated with the CIA during the Vietnam War. When Holliwell is invited to lecture in a country bordering Tecan, he is asked by an old friend to dig up some information. Initially, Holliwell refuses. But he is sucked steadily closer and closer into the center of the action, and so is everyone else in this book.

It is difficult to decide which character is the most fascinating. There is Pablo Tabor, a U.S. Coast Guard dropout who lives on speed and who is a self-styled soldier of fortune. He signs on board a boat that is smuggling weapons into Tecan.

Lieutenant Campos is a Tecanecan military officer. He murders a young woman, puts her body in a food freezer and then calls on an American priest, Father Egan, to get rid of the frozen cadaver.

Sister Justin Feeney works with Father Egan. Their church has ordered its mission in Tecan closed, but Sister Feeney and Father Egan are not eager to leave the country. Sister Feeney, searching for a larger purpose in life, agrees to help the Tecanecan revolutionaries. She is first seduced, then betrayed, by Holliwell, and then compromised.

"A Flag for Sunrise" is filled with sinister events and menacing characters. The revolution is brief — but the aftershocks are devastating. All of the characters seem twisted and turned. All seem unable to escape their fate, which is not a pleasant one. "A Flag for Sunrise" reaches a level of quality and excellence in storytelling that few recent novels have been able to attain.

The direct and indirect impact of diabetes on the nation's economy is currently estimated at more than $5 billion a year--even without considering the costs of complications, according to the American Diabetes Association. The figure is more than double what it was was eight years ago.

Sandra O'Connor Isn't Taking Sides

By Kevin Costelloe
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Senate pondered Sandra Day O'Connor's nomination to the Supreme Court, Sen. Joseph Biden told his colleagues that "all bets are off" once a justice takes the oath of office.

The Delaware Democrat was right on target in his reminder last September that no one in the Senate can predict how a new member of the nation's highest court will vote once he or she "dons that robe and walks into that sanctum across the way."

After three months on the court, Mrs. O'Connor shows no signs of aligning herself with either its liberal or conservative bloc.

She told the Senate last summer that her job would be "one of interpreting and applying the law, not making it."

That philosophy has led the high court's first woman member on occasion to side with the court's liberals, its conservatives and sometimes mixtures of both.

Since she was sworn in Sept. 25, Mrs. O'Connor:

—Joined three of the court's more conservative members in dissenting from part of a decision allowing most confidential secretaries and other workers with access to an employer's confidential information to join labor unions.

—Joined Justice John Paul Stevens and liberal Justices Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan in dissenting from a decision barring federal courts from hearing virtually all lawsuits seeking money damages because of allegedly discriminatory property tax assessments.

—Joined overwhelming majorities — made up of both liberals and conservatives — in several decisions since the court term opened on Oct. 5.

For example, Mrs. O'Connor was among the 8-1 majority in votes that state colleges must allow student groups to conduct religious worship and study sessions in campus facilities; that the city of Berkeley, Calif., cannot impose a $250 limit on each contribution to support or oppose ballot measures; and that county-employed public defenders cannot be sued by their indigent clients under federal civil rights law.

She dissented, along with Stevens and Brennan, from a decision making it easier for young criminals sentenced under the federal Youth Corrections Act to lose their special privileges.

On Dec. 14, Mrs. O'Connor said the court should decide whether to create a new branch of "federal common law" to allow Vietnam veterans to sue the manufacturers of the defoliant Agent Orange. Only Justice Harry A. Blackmun voted with her.

In fact, the 51-year-old jurist from Arizona shows no signs of holding strong ideological positions that will lead her to a particular outcome on a case.

She shares with a majority of her Supreme Court colleagues the conviction that judges operate within somewhat restricted limits.

In her three months on the high court, Mrs. O'Connor has given few personal glimpses of her new job — or how she views her eight brethren.

She did not respond to requests for an interview.

Kubena, Picciano Married In Midland

Jo Ellen Kubena and Michael Christopher Picciano were married November 14 at four in the afternoon at Saint Ann's Catholic Church in Midland. The double ring ceremony was officiated by Clifford Blackburn.

The bride is the daughter of R. J. and Leona Kubena of Hermleigh and the groom's parents are Chester J. Picciano of San Diego, California and Christel Picciano of El Paso.

The altar was decorated with two 15-branch candelabra with palm leaves, old English ivy and white votive candles. Family pews were marked with ivory satin bows and roses.

Suzanne Mitchell of Midland was organist and soloists were Cindy Turner Marlar of Midland and Gayle Kubena of Hermleigh. Mrs. Marlar sang "Evergreen" and "The Lord's Prayer" and Mrs. Kubena sang "The Wedding Song" and "If."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal ivory gown of knit silk Venice and Rachel lace. The molded bodice featured an old-fashioned V-yoke of English net edged with silk Venice lace and a high lace collar. The bishop sleeves were of chiffon and cuffed with lace and the A-line pleated skirt was edged with a ruffle of lace ending in a chapel train. A satin bow at the waist had long lace edged streamers down the back. She wore a small lace covered hat with rolled roses at the back and a fingertip veil and carried a cascade of one dozen ivory roses surrounded by baby's breath, stephanotis, and old English ivy.

Patricia Ann Dean of Willow Park served her sister as matron of honor. She was attired in a frost pink knit dress edged with silk Venice lace with a V-yoke and high neckline. She carried an ivory lace fan with burgundy and mauve silk roses. Her headpiece was a halo of ivory, burgundy and mauve roses with baby's breath.

Christel Picciano of Midland, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Her burgundy dress was fashioned like that of the matron of honor.

Kristina Kubena of Midland and Alicia Kubena of Hermleigh, both nieces of the bride, were flower girls. They wore ivory lace blouses and burgundy velvet skirts and carried baskets of flower petals.

Terry L. Kubena of Hermleigh served as best man and Don Kubena of Hermleigh was groomsman. Ushers were Bill Kubena of Midland and Randy Kubena of Hermleigh. All are brothers of the bride. Brandon Kubena of Midland, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. The all wore gray ascots with black pin-striped pants.

Joanna Chambers registered guests as they arrived at the church.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the home of the bride's brother, Bill Kubena.

The bride's table was covered with an ivory linen tablecloth edged with lace. The table was accented with three silver candelabra decorated with an assortment of cut flowers, baby's breath and greenery. The three-tiered, light pink cake was decorated with cupids and bells and topped with silk flowers with burgundy ribbons streaming to four heart-shaped cakes. It was designed by Marsha Kubena of Hermleigh, sister-in-law of the bride. There were silver platters of finger sandwiches, fruit, heart-shaped cheese rolls, crackers, and sliced vegetables. Joanna Chambers of Houston served the cake and Kathy Burson of Midland poured punch.

The groom's table was covered with a burgundy linen cloth overlaid with an ivory crocheted cloth. It held a German chocolate cake which was made by the bride's mother and two silver platters of finger sandwiches and miniature quiches. Terry Kubena of Hermleigh, sister-in-law of the bride, presided.

Champagne was served from a silver champagne fountain.

The registry table at the reception held a memory candle and a single, long-stemmed burgundy rose.

Pat Kubena, sister-in-law of the bride, cooridinated the tables.

Following the reception, Jiletta and Brooke Kubena, nieces of the bride, passed out rice bags. They wore matching burgundy dresses.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and attended Texas A&M, Midland College, and is employed at the U.S. Post Office in Midland.

The groom graduated from Parkland High School in El Paso, attended the University of Texas at El Paso and served two years in the United States Army. He is also a post office employe.

Out of town guests were from El Paso, Arlington, Houston, Hermleigh, Snyder, Odessa, Weatherford, and Abilene.

The groom's family hosted a rehearsal dinner in Midland at CC's Steakhouse.

Karn trophy winners

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Back in 1931, the late Willard S. Karn gave a trophy for a Life Masters Individual Tournament limited to 36 players. The first seven winners were Karn (the trophy donor), Howard Schenken, David Burnstine, Elinor Murdoch, Oswald Jacoby, Waldemar von Zedtwitz and B.J. Becker.

The event was discontinued in 1960, but the winners read almost like a who's who of bridge, except that until Silvia Stein of Detroit won in 1958 no other woman managed to win. Elinor still lives in Birmingham where she still occasionally plays in tournaments.

Here is one of the hands that helped her win the 1934 individual. The bidding was what might be expected from a 1934 individual and poor South.

diamonds.

Dummy's ace of clubs won the first trick. Elinor saw that she needed to make all eight trumps separately in order to come to 13. She thanked the gods of chance for not having inspired West to lead a trump and proceeded to use perfect cross-ruff technique by cashing all her top spades and the club and heart aces.

Then she ruffed a heart with dummy's deuce of trumps and was able to claim the last seven tricks since her trumps were high and could be scored separately.

Former McAllen Policemen...

Police Brutality Trial Slated To Open This Week

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — One of five former police officers indicted on charges of abusing prisoners has asked that his trial — scheduled to begin this week — be moved outside South Texas because of "prejudicial" publicity.

"For the past two years, all areas of South Texas have been consistently bombarded with newspaper stories, television news stories and radio reports of lawsuits filed against the McAllen Police Department," said a motion for a change of venue filed on behalf of Roberto Ramos, a former police sergeant.

"A public hostility has been generated that is such that this defendant will be prejudiced and it will be impossible to obtain a fair and impartial trial within the Brownsville division of the Southern District of Texas and indeed, the (entire) Southern District of Texas," said Ramos' lawyer, Buck Pettitt, in a sworn statement.

Ramos is accused of ordering subordinate officers to beat Rene Escamilla during an arrest Sept. 24, 1977. Ramos and four others are charged with criminal civil rights violations, punishable by up to one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela will consider that request and others Monday in a pre-trial hearing on the case. Jury selection is scheduled for Wednesday.

The case gained national attention after television networks broadcast videotape recordings of officers allegedly abusing prisoners in the booking desk area over several years.

The tape recordings were made by a monitoring system installed to protect officers from harassment suits.

Federal prosecutors say they will oppose the request to move the trial and have asked Vela to allow use of the tape recordings as evidence against certain officers. The incident in which Ramos is accused allegedly took place outside the booking desk area and is not on tape.

In one instance, prisoner Pedro Dennett was seen being kicked, shoved against the wall and slammed into the booking desk by several officers on Oct. 23, 1978. Dennett had been arrested for driving while intoxicated.

Three former policemen — Tom Carter, Jaime Contreras and Alfredo Saldana — were indicted in connection with the Dennett arrest.

"The videotape of the beating and kicking of Pedro Dennett constitutes the best evidence of the deprivation of constitutional rights charged in the indictment," said Ross Connealy, a U.S. Justice Department lawyer from Washington who will handle the case.

Juan J. Hinojosa, lawyer for Contreras, said the videotape seen on national television was edited and does not show the full sequence of events.

"The question is: What force was necessary to control and subdue a prisoner?" said Hinojosa.

One defendant in the Dennett episode, Carter, has asked to be tried before a U.S. magistrate instead of a federal district judge and jury. Hinojosa said his client and Saldana may join in that request.

The fifth defendant, Isidro Ybanez, is accused of assaulting Joseph Allen Smith on May 20, 1979.

Prosecutors have said they intend to bring up other incidents of alleged police brutality involving defendants Ybanez and Ramos.

On July 16, 1979, prosecutors allege in court papers that Ybanez and another officer verbally and physically abused a handcuffed juvenile who had been arrested on public intoxication charges. Ybanez later was suspended for two days as a result of the incident, government lawyers said.

Connealy said he plans to bring up three "extrinsic offenses" involving Ramos.

The first purportedly occurred Aug. 19, 1977, when Ramos stopped Jose Rivera as the man drove away from the area of an alleged burglary, court papers said. Two other officers arrived.

"Ramos kneed Rivera several times in the groin and stomach, knocking down both him and the other officers," the document claims. "Ramos then kneedropped Mr. Rivera twice in the back."

Ramos also allegedly beat a man July 28, 1976, and on Aug. 28, 1976, he allegedly beat a man arrested for disorderly conduct in a bar. The prisoner required medical attention but Ramos beat him "without reason" as other officers prepared to take him to a hospital, Connealy alleged.

Allegations of police brutality among officers on McAllen's late-night shift first surfaced during a series of civil suits filed against officers, the police department and city officials.

Most of the alleged victims were Hispanics but the officers were both Anglo and Hispanic. Approximately 75 percent of [illegible] population is Hispanic.

The city of McAllen has agreed to out-of-court settlements totaling approximately $400,000 in several civil suits.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda has ordered changes in the [illegible] internal complaint procedures.

The brutality controversy caused two police chiefs — Jack Caldwell and Roy Eckhardt — to resign in two years' time.

Wrong Person Is Interviewed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Eric Jones the music student did a good job when awakened on the first day of his honeymoon in San Diego for a live radio interview about the human colonization of space.

He talked for about eight minutes on the chances of humanity someday migrating to space platforms or homesteading on the moon. After all, he had taken an astronomy course at Brigham Young University.

Meanwhile, in another room at the same hotel, Eric Jones the vacationing astronomer from Los Alamos, N.M., was waiting in vain for his prearranged call from radio station WEAN in Providence, R.I.

An unsuspecting interviewer, John Martin, said Jones the music student seemed a little reluctant at first, but eventually warmed to the topic.

"He sounded OK to me," said Martin, who conducts daily telephone interviews as host of the station's "Midday" program. "At first he was kind of slow, but that's not unusual. Sometimes you have to draw people out. You have to consider, too, that it was 8 a.m. his time and he was on his honeymoon.

"Like a lot of people, I guess he'd been exposed in some way or other to theories about colonizing space, so he just went ahead and talked about it," Martin said.

Because the WESTAR II satellite will be used to provide service to KDBC-TV in El Paso, more than 250 cable systems with earth receiving stations will be invited to carry the program as a public service.

The telethon will again feature an auction board with donated items open to telephone bids during the show. Among the items to be sold inlcude a Rolex watch valued at $5,000, a pair of crocodile boots valued at $2,500, diamonds valued at $17,000, horse and farm trailers, Tony Lama boots and Bailey felt hats.

Handmade quilts have also been donated to be auctioned.

The Rehab '82 telethon marks the beginning of the West Texas Rehabilitation Center's year-long funding program. The 1982 budget will be near the $4 million mark in order to provide services without charge to more than 10,000 handicapped children and adults. WTRC campuses are in Abilene, San Angelo and Snyder, and outreach services extend to 43 counties.

Services offered by the West Texas Rehabiliation Center include physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech and language pathology, audiology, education, adaptive equipment and bracing, psychology, social services and work evaluation and recreation.

Sun Gas Acquires History In Deal

DALLAS—When Sun Gas acquired Texas Pacific Oil Co.'s gas properties last summer, it got some Texas history along with the natural gas. The files include an original land grant dated Sept. 1, 1860, signed by Gov. Sam Houston.

The document granted to John C. Lowe "320 acres of land in Palo Pinto County about 17.5 miles from the town of Palo Pinto....on the waters of Barton's Creek. Gov. Sam Houston granted to Lowe and his heirs the rights and title to land that originlly had been issued by the "adjutant general" of Texas in 1855.

Sun now holds the mineral lease and is taking care to preserve the historic document.

"It's unusual to have an original document like this," said Judy Harding, senior contract-lease consultant who spotted the 121-year-old grant. "We usually just have certified copies of the original papers."

Many of the Texas Pacific lease contracts were acquired in the 19th century when the company operated under the name of Texas Pacific Coal Co.

LEAA To Be Shut Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the main elements of the Nixon administration's anti-crime program, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, will be shut down as of April 15, says the Justice Department.

"The Reagan administration feels that new approaches to bolstering the criminal justice system have to be tried," Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults said Wednesday.

The Justice Department said that from 1969 to 1980 the LEAA gave $7.7 billion to local law enforcement agencies. The LEAA grants gave local governments money for new equipment and facilities for police, prisons and courts.

Ralston Co. Is Indicted

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Ralston Purina Co., indicted on four federal counts stemming from sewer explosions earlier this year, has always had a policy of "attempting to comply fully with all laws, including environmental laws," a company statement says.

Laredo, Texas...

Border Sales Boom; But Wages Stay Depressed

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — This is a boom town for some, a bust town for others. And a paradise for smugglers.

It is a boom town because Laredo leads all metropolitan areas of Texas with $20,149 in retail sales per household, second only to town Casper, Wyo., in all of the United States.

At the same time, it is a bust town for many because its work force ranks second from the bottom in Texas in per capita income at $5,109.

The disparity can be explained by the volume of sales made to both rich and poor Mexicans who jam the downtown area and malls daily to purchase goods, which are shipped legally or smuggled by various methods into Mexico.

Businesses in Laredo, across the river from Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, like those in other border cities, are enjoying an economic boom linked to new-found prosperity in Mexico, while at the same time many of its 93,000 residents live in depressed conditions.

Mexicans come by plane, train, car, bus, bicycle and on foot to pack millions of dollars worth of goods across the Rio Grande, creating a dichotomy of wealth and poverty.

Each morning, streets and malls are littered with discarded sacks, boxes and labels where Mexicans have bought new clothing, stripped out the brand tags and worn them back across the bridge — some with as many as a half dozen sets of clothing on at one time — to avoid paying any taxes when they cross the bridge.

Some Mexicans can be seen donning new shoes and purposely scuffing them to make them look worn, or stuffing clothing into empty suitcases they bring. Others simply pay a bribe to Mexican customs officials to look the other way when they cross with U.S. products.

Other impoverished Mexicans can be seen at used clothing stores picking through six-foot tall piles of tatters looking for something suitable to wear.

While so many Mexicans come to shop that parking and walking space is at a premium on the narrow streets of Laredo, others cross the Rio Grande each day to work at minimum wage throughout the city, helping depress wages.

It all has to do with supply and demand. There's a short supply of affordable goods for people in Mexico, which has a 30 percent inflation rate. And there's an overabundance of people looking for work, because unemployment ranges up to 50 percent in some areas of Mexico.

Smugglers profit in such an environment.

Each night five or six converted military cargo planes ladened with television sets, stereos and other goods destined for Mexico fly out of the Laredo International Airport. The planes are back again the next day, empty.

"They (smugglers) are moving Japan to Mexico," said a local U.S. Customs official, who asked that his name not be used. But the U.S. Customs Department says it is the responsibility of Mexicans — not Americans — to stop the smuggling.

Raul Gonzalez Galarza, the Mexican Consul General in San Antonio, said it's illegal to export electronic equipment into his country.

"The importation of television sets is prohibited by the (Mexican) Department of Commerce," Gonzalez Galarza said. "That is the reason the price in Mexico is higher than in the United States. Knowing the difference in price, they take advantage of the situation and they smuggle not only televisions, but all kinds of electronic equipment."

He said his government has stepped up efforts to curtail electronics smuggling and maintains such illegal importations are down 30 to 40 percent this year, "but still smuggling is a big problem."

Merchants in Laredo have come to rely heavily on sales to Mexicans.

Without them (Mexican shoppers), we wouldn't have bread and butter," said Amelia Cervera, manager of a women's clothing store in River Side Mall. "If something happened between our two governments, I don't know what we would do."

"I'd say 85 to 90 percent of our customers are from Mexico," said Alex Becerra at a record shop. "They buy top 100 albums, and I'd say 90 percent of them pay cash."

"Practically everybody who comes in here is from Mexico," said Federico de la Garza, a clerk at a shoe store. "They buy big boots, shoes and clothes. They don't buy anything in Mexico because of higher taxes there and higher quality here. Everyone's from Monterrey. We don't get hardly anyone from Nuevo Laredo."

Laredo's business boom began about four years ago when newly discovered massive petroleum reserves. Since then Laredo's population has increased by nearly 10 percent.

From 1977 to 1979, according to Chamber of Commerce figures, Laredo's retail sales increased by 41 percent — the highest increase in the state. During the same period, automobile sales increased nearly 35 percent at a time other areas reported drastically reduced sales.

The boom was enhanced by the discovery of a mammoth natural gas field in Webb County that saw a 280 percent increase in production of from 39 million thousand cubic feet in 1974 to nearly 113 million thousand cubic feet by 1978.

Laredo, founded in 1755 is the busiest U.S. port of entry on the Mexican border and is a conduit for 26 percent of all trade between the two countries, said Lee Gardner of the Chamber of Commerce.

A recent survey of 802 Texas cities by state Comptroller Bob Bullock showed that border cities like Laredo are running away from other Texas cities in retail sales and sales taxes collected.

Laredo's one percent sales tax produced $6,884,210 during 1981, up 32.4 percent from the year before, twice the state average.

Sales taxes also were up in the border cities of McAllen, 36.96 percent; Pharr, 32.32 percent; Mission, 19.25 percent; Hidalgo, 27.24 percent, Brownsville, 31.4 percent; and Eagle Pass, 31.06 percent, Bullock's survey showed.

At the same time, McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg reported the lowest per capita income in Texas at $5,024, Laredo was second lowest with $5,106 and Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito was third with $5,731. This compared with a statewide per capita income level of $9,513.

Mayor Aldo Tatangelo said he is optimistic that the retail prosperity in Laredo will continue, but at the same time he is pessimistic that anything will happen soon to change the depressed wage structure because of the city's proximity to Mexico's cheap labor supply.

"Mexicans are our biggest customers, 70 percent," the mayor said. "Downtown, especially, all of the stores are programmed for the Mexican buyer. I'm very optimistic about Laredo. We have tremendous potential because of georgraphy. We are the main gateway on the border, the direct route of the old Pan American Highway. We are the lifeline of distribution for Mexico."

Tatangelo said as long as there is a great difference in wages in Mexico and the United States, Mexicans will seek and find work in his city.

"They make $60 a week in Mexico and $130 minimum here. It puts the employer in a position to choose his employes. The only extra effort Mexicans have to make is to cross that bridge each day. I don't see that much change will prevail in a long, long time because of simply economics, the supply of labor is higher than the demand."

Court Rejects Murder Appeal

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An appeals court has rejected an appeal for a new trial by Gregory Arthur Ott, who was convicted of murdering a Texas Ranger during a 1978 drug raid.

A Denton County jury sentenced Ott to life imprisonment for the murder of Ranger Bobby Paul Doherty in a gun battle at Ott's home near Argyle. Doherty and five other officers planned to purchase marijuana, then arrest Ott and seize his supply.

In denying the appeal, the Fort Worth Court of Appeals Wednesday criticized prosecutors in the trial for failing to return notes to Ott immediately after they were found in a car that was transferring him from the courtroom to a jail cell.

Justice Walter Jordan, who wrote a 22-page opinion, said the trial judge should have insisted that the prosecutors return the notes. But he added that Ott was not entitled to a new trial because the notes were not returned. He said there was no evidence the notes helped the prosecution.

J. E. Jumonville Enjoys Natural Gas Bonanza

VENTRESS, La. (AP) — Still in his blue pajamas in the afternoon sun, J.E. Jumonville Sr. leans against the door of one of his three Rolls-Royces and gazes out over his 5,000 acres.

"The best real-estate deal since the Indians sold Manhattan," says Jumonville.

And from his office, behind the live oaks and porticoes of the family's 18th-century house, a maid serves coffee from a silver service. The Parlange's first well blew out in 1977 and had to be abandoned. A second well now produces 10.6 million cubic feet of gas a day.

"We've always been independently well off," comments Parlange, a cultured bachelor in his 50s who favors Western-style hats.

"There's been no change in our status; gas was a little lagniappe," a small bonus.

Gas has made a bigger difference to the middle class in Pointe Coupee.

Edmond LeBlanc retired to his small farm in Morganza in May 1980, after 37 years as a government survey technician. To supplement his pension of $925 a month, LeBlanc went to work for a private contractor two days after he left the government. Meanwhile, the Hess Co. was drilling a wildcat well several hundred yards from LeBlanc's farm.

"We didn't know exactly whether the well was going to come in or not," recalls LeBlanc.

"The night they were going to test the well, we all went out there, and iced our beer down, and waited and waited.

"Finally, at 9 p.m. they turned the gas on, and it lit. Partner, it shot up just like the well was blowing out: a beautiful blue flame."

An instant millionaire, LeBlanc quit his survey job immediately, and persuaded his wife, Celina, to retire as well. The LeBlancs traded in their Buick for a new Cadillac, bought a four-wheel drive Bronco, and embarked on a vigorous retirement program of skiing, cruising, golfing, and big game hunting. "Let's face it: it's helped a lot," says Celina LeBlanc.

The signs of gas money are obvious throughout the parish. Per capita income doubled from $3,290 in 1974 to $6,619 in 1979. Deposits in the Bank of New Roads are growing by 25 percent per year.

Morganza, a tiny farming village huddled against the Mississippi River levee, boasts one new bank and a second under construction. "If there was any property available, they'd build another bank on it," jokes Clarence Wells, the butcher at HM&W Market. White Cadillacs and Lincolns crowd the parking lots of the new Hospital Road shopping center.

Thirty years ago, 83 percent of the houses in Pointe Coupee were classed by the government as substandard, because they were either dilapidated or lacked indoor toilets. Today, comfortable air-conditioned brick houses line both sides of Highway 1, the main road from Baton Rouge to the county seat of New Roads.

The gas boom in Pointe Coupee has enriched a good many ordinary working people without drastically changing their way of life.

Albert Landry is a short, paunchy farmer with a tattered shirt and a perpetual smile. Like many of the older residents of Pointe Coupee, both black and white, Landry's first language was French. In a heavy Cajun accent, Landry recalls how he struggled during the 1930s.

Like other local tenant farmers, Landry plowed behind a mule or cut sugar cane 15 hours a day for a wage of 60 cents. Once he acquired his own land, he did a little better. "I used to grow potatoes, cotton, and cane, but I couldn't get nothing for it," he laughs.

In 1980, Albert Landry leased a portion of his farm for $86,625 a year, but sudden wealth hasn't changed him very much.

It takes time to acquire expensive tastes, and like many local small farmers, Landry has a lifetime of simple living behind him.

The low wages and long hours drove most of the young farmers out of Pointe Coupee Parish after the Depression. Landry, 73, is typical of those who remained. Chickens still forage in the garage where he parks his new Oldsmobile. The living room furniture shines with wear.

"I was raised on a farm, and that's about all I know," says Landry, who keeps busy repairing electric fans for neighbors and tending a small herd of cattle.

Pointe Coupee's black landowners also have reaped the benefits of the gas boom. Near the Jumonville ranch in Ventress, black farmers have raised cotton, pecans, and cattle for years.

"We just didn't have any idea, all those years we were picking pecans on the field, that the gas wells would come to us," says Dorselline Battley Nelson, whose father owned 34 acres in Ventress. "Sometimes I lie in bed at night, and I can't believe it's really true," she smiles, looking past the rusty tractor to the gleaming silver pipes of L.H. Battley Well No. 1.

L.H. Battley died in 1965 at the age of 87, long before gas was discovered on his plot. "Somehow in his grave he knows something about it," speculates his daughter.

"We never had a lot of money," remembers her brother, Felman, a soft-spoken man in his 50s with a mild French accent. "But we never suffered: we had a decent life." In 1975, Felman Battley was growing cotton on the spot where the well now stands.

"You'd be lucky if you'd get $3,500 a year. We were just getting by, just making it; wasn't enough to save." Last October, the 11 Battleys who own the land began drawing royalties of $20,000 a month. As usual, the money hasn't affected the older members of the family. "My life hasn't changed," insists Mrs. Celestine Battley, 84. "You can't take it with you."

Felman Battley still does construction work for $9.50 an hour at a nearby nuclear plant. He has bought a new Oldsmobile, and thinks about retiring early, but otherwise he seems unaffected by the sudden riches. "I'm just myself," he says.

New Year To Arrive Early

SINGAPORE (AP) — The new year will arrive a half-hour early in Singapore and neighboring west Malaysia.

Clocks in both countries are supposed to be set ahead 30 minutes at 11:30 p.m. — 11 a.m. EST — today.

Officials in Kuala Lumpur took the lead earlier this month in announcing that peninsular Malaysia or west Malaysia would move its clocks ahead to match the time in east Malaysia. Sabah and Sarawak in northern Borneo are the east Malaysian states separated from the peninsula by the South China Sea.

Deputy Prime Minister Musa Hitam described the move as "a positive step toward national integration."

By Texas Republicans...

1982 Elections Will Determine Depth Of Gains

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas politicians spent most of 1981 getting ready for 1982.

[illegible] highlighted by Gov. Bill Clements' re-election drive, will determine the depth of Republican gains with Texas voters that was that was first signaled by Clements' win in 1978, followed by Ronald Reagan's sweep of Texas in the 1980 presidential election.

Although labeled an "off political year," with no primary or presidential elections, 1981 had plenty of political happenings.

These included:

— Reshaping congressional and legislative districts as dictated by the 1980 census and at the same time satisfying current and would-be candidates.

— A voters' decision on seven proposed state constitution changes that turned largely into a political argument.

— A late 1981 scramble to announce for the 1982 races.

The redistricting efforts of the 1981 Legislature are still in federal and state courts, contested by Republicans and minorities. Whether they will be settled by the Feb. 1 filing deadline is questionable. Some suits may be appealed to higher courts.

The Texas Republican Party's challenge of state senatorial redistricting goes before a state district judge in Austin on Tuesday.

A federal court test over legislative redistricting, both Senate and House, is set for trial Jan. 18 in Dallas.

Results of an Austin federal court trial on congressional districts have not been announced.

Under the congressional redistricting plan, first approved by the Legislature, Republicans expected to pick up four more seats making a total of nine GOP congressmen from Texas, which now has a total of 27.

There are estimates the 1983 Legislature will include about 50 new Senate and House members, much of the change caused by redistricting. The normal turnover is about 30 or 35 in the House and only a few in the Senate.

Numerous other political changes were proposed to the 1981 Legislature but only one major act passed.

The successful bill, by Speaker Bill Clayton, would tighten statutes concerning contributions to political candidates. A candidate would have to report any contribution of more than $50 cash or check.

For a while it appeared there would be a big legislative fight over changing primary election dates from May and June to July and August. State Democratic leaders approved the change but the Republican state committee voted it down and Clements said he would veto it if passed.

Clements recommended a bill that would allow a five-state regional primary in the 1984 presidential election but neither the House or Senate approved.

A bill to allow a candidate's name on more [illegible] party's ballot was quickly killed by the state Democratic committee.

Another bill that failed to get a vote in either house was one to allow non-partisan election of state judges.

And there was no enthusiasm for a move that elections be held on Sundays, as is done in some Northeast states.

The big interest issue in the Nov. 3 constitutional amendments referendum was one that would allow half of the state's surplus revenue to be earmarked for future water projects. It was originated by Clayton and supported by Clements.

Opponents called the proposal "funny money" and "pay now-plan later." Voters defeated it decisively.

Another amendment would let the governor and top legislative leaders exercise more control over budgets set for state agencies by the Legislature. It also failed by a wide margin.

Even before the November election, would-be candidates got itchy feet and many declared themselves into the 1982 races.

At the end of the year, it appeared Clements would be challenged in November of 1982 by the winner of a hot Democratic primary race featuring at least three well-known officials — Attorney General Mark White, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Sen. Peyton McKnight of Tyler.

Texas Republicans will get a chance to select their nominee for U.S. Senate from a three-man primary race to face Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Other late 1981 announcements indicate hot Democratic races for agriculture commissioner, land commissioner and attorney general.

checks for the dead

We heard last October that $60 million in Social Security checks had been mailed to dead persons—and cashed by their relatives or friends. We also have heard reports of relatives who attempted to stop checks addressed to dead persons, but to no avail.

Now comes word that checks for $18 million in benefits for black lung disease have been sent to coal miners who have died.

Why can't the government work out a system to keep track o whether the beneficiaries of its programs are dead or alive? Or healthy.

It can take up to two years for the government to discover that a person drawing disability benefits has recovered and gone back to work.

These stories from auditors and investigators suggest that somewhere there is a government check writing apparatus so vast and intricate that when given a command to stop, it takes months or years for it to respond. It is hard to estimate what this lethargy is costing the taxpayer.

The same kind of slow-motion is evident when the government tries to collect its debts. Edwin L. Harper, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, says there is a surprising $34 billion outstanding in delinquent loans and taxes owed to the government—enough to cut the current year's federal budget deficit almost in half.

For all its computers and platoons of federal employees who tend them, the government has been unable to keep up with the demands for information and record-keeping created by its own programs. Americans do not want a big Brother computer collecting information about their personal affairs, but somewhere between that extreme and the shortcomings of the present system there must be a better way for the government to keep its books.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "When you were 20, life was a lark; after 40, it appears to be more like a hungry vulture."

We received another letter from our anonymous friend from Dunn. We believe the wisdom in this letter certainly qualifies him to make the race for mayor of that city.

Dear sir:

I heard a Congressman use a phrase the other day on television that caught my attention.

Faced with the fact that he's a strong advocate of tax cuts and a balanced budget and the fact that it's not working, that the budget may be more out of balance than ever before, he said he is now in favor of "revenue enhancement."

It sure sounds better than raising taxes.

And it has wider use. If the telephone company ups your phone bill $2 a month, it hasn't raised your rate, it has just enchanced it.

I tried to enhance the price of a steer I had for sale, but the people who control the cattle market had a limited vocabulary and apparently had never heard of the word. They paid me 42 cents a pound instead of the 60 cents I was trying to encharice it to.

Another word that's come into use by politicians is "goal." If a candidate solemnly promises to balance the budget and gets in office and finds it's impossible, he explains it wasn't a promise, just a goal.

This too should have wider use. If a promissory note you signed at the bank comes due, go in and explain repayment wasn't a promise, it was just a goal.

By the way, speaking of revenue enhancement, did you notice that of all the federal offices shut down for one day when the government ran out of money recently, one in particular remained opened.

It was the tax collecting office.

Have a good New Year!

Yours truly,

A friend of ours recently returned from the White House Conference on Aging. He came back with a story that's worth repeating.

President Reagan told the story about the days when he was governor of California and the students on the campuses of major universities were marching and demonstrating daily. It was impossible for the governor to visit any university campus in the state.

He wanted desperately to establish some line of communication with the students and when an opportunity came to meet with student leaders of seven universities in the state–Reagan eagerly accepted.

Following a strained lunch with the seven students, one of them, who had been chosen as spokesman, arose and told the governor in no uncertain terms that it was impossible for Reagan to relate to the students' world.

"Governor, your generation simply cannot relate to our world of atomic energy, to space missiles, to sophisticated computers, to heart transplants, to polio vaccine, to the supersonic jet."

"Well, son, maybe we couldn't except for one thing you're overlooking–all those things you mentioned were invented by my generation.!"

commentary

donald f. graff

There are reactions and then there are reactions to Poland's agony.

Ah especially interesting one surfaced the other day in a Wall Street Journal report concerning the impact on the businesses to which the Poles are in hock for all those billions.

"Most bankers think authoritarian governments are good because they impose discipline," an unidentified American executive was quoted as observing. "Everytime there's a coup d'etat in Latin America, there's much rejoicing and knocking at the door offering credit."

As reactions go, that has to take the hard-nosed prize. But coming from a business that can't afford to be governed by emotion and sentiment in responding to the world's crises, it at least represents honesty.

As honesty, however, that is not only in striking contract to the righteous indigination with which the spokesman of the West, in governments and the media, have been responding to this crisis.

Poland's generals and the men in the Kremlin presumed to be behind tham and have denounced in the strongest terms for the suppression of a nation's desire for freedom. After being solemnly warned against the use of force, they have used it.

In retaliation, the West–although with something considerably short of unanimity–has threatened them with an array of economic and financial countermeasures. The editoriaiists, meanwhile, exhort us to do "eveything possible" to assist the Poles.

In all this denouncing and exhorting, however, it is notable that no one is seriously discussing, let alone advocating, the ultimate sanction.

No one is suggesting that December of 1981 should be a replay of September of 1939. No one is proposing that the West or any part of it put itself on the line for Poland now, as Britain and France so reluctantly did then.

No one is even calling for precautionary mobilization of the West's undermanned divisions or revving up the transports of the emegency strike forces, just in case.

And because no one is doing any of this, there is a quality of frustration about the West's righteous indignation, a desire to sound like something is being done because it is recognized that the crucial decision has already been made, instantly and instinctly: World War III will not begin in Poland in December of 1981.

Much of what is being said to make us feel better may be true.

Poland--as Czecholsovakia and Hungary before it--tellingly demonstrates the bankruptcy of communism and exposes the system in Eastern Europe for what it is, a Soviet empire based on bayonets. An empire that in the long run is more of a threat to than a guarantee of Soviet security.

Further, the Soviet Union itself is, if anything, is in fundamentally worse shape than its vassals, including prostrate Poland. Its ponderously inefficient economy is incapable of meeting the needs of its people, its frozen society incapable of accomodating the change essential to the syetem's survival.

It may be true that in the end, the Soviets will be the losers.

All that said, however, Poland remains uner military occupation, by Polish generals acting on their own or at Soviet behest, whatever the true case may be. Elsewhere, troops remain in their barracks and missiles remain in silos.

And no one is saying it should be otherwise.

The leadership of nations, to be honest about it, is a business in which neither sentiment nor righteous indignation ultimately determines reactions.

Politics and prudence do.

Injunction Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is seeking an injunction to prevent the U.S. Postal Service from starting a new computerized mail service on Monday.

The department filed a suit in U.S. District Court Wednesday asking for a temporary restraining order and a permanent order requiring a hearing by the Postal Rate Commission.

at wits end

by erma bombeck

Last week, I began shivering uncontrollably. My mouth became dry. I could not concentrate. My nerves were like a cavity exposed to an ice cube.

Then I realized why. I had gone through an entire day without seeing Brooke Shields. The withdrawl symptoms were predictable.

It brought back memories of an overdose of Farrah Fawcett in 1978, and of 1979, when I picked up a magazine that did not have John Travolta on it and I couldn't stop crying.

Every year, the media blitz in on someone and we are saturated with all there is to know about them. In some instances, the depth of the person deserves no longer than 15 minutes, yet week in and week out they create a supply of facts for which there is no demand.

For eight months once I followed closely the dating habits of Princess Caroline of Monaco. I knew what time Caroline got up in the morning, who she was with, what they did and what they were charged with. I should have known so much about my own daughter.

At one time, I kept pace with every move of Jacqueline Onassis. She didn't floss without my knowing about it. Then it was Marie Osmond who dominated my life and last year, the face that made pork a four-letter word: Miss Piggy.

For awhile, I didn't think I could survive Miss Piggy. She had her own TV show, wrote books, guested on talk shows, appeared on the cover of Time and every other major publication while her likeness was reproduced on glasses, pillows, sheets, cocktail napkins, toothbrushes, stationery, posters, T-shirts, ashtrays, banks, bookends, beach towels and bumper stickers. I was a full-grown woman who couldn't face the morning news without coffee from a mug with a pig in a blonde wig, for God's sake.

I know more about Brooke that any person has a right to know. People have entered a marriage knowing a lot less. I thought a long time before we planned a trip to South America for a vacation. What if they had never heard of Brooke Shields? How could I handle ten no-dimple-no-Calvin-Klein days?

Over Rio, my palms began to sweat and itch. I needed a drink of water. I felt lightheaded. Then I saw a man next to me thumbing through a Portuguese newspaper. I saw a small face surrounded hair and said out loud, "Thanks, I needed that."

I could make it through the night now.

January 3, 1982

Your eyes will be opened to new vistas in the year ahead. A number of revealing happenings will lead you to seek fresh avenues for satisfying your desires.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is not the day to start things where you may either lack the time or the means to complete them satisfactorily. Unfinished projects will cause frustrations. Find out more of what lies ahead in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be very careful today that you don't unintentionally let something slip that was told to you in the strictest confidence.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Continue to be extremely prudent in your financial affairs today. Don't spend now for something which could be painful to pay off at a later date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Usually you're not the type who puts things off, but today you could make excuses and create unnecessary delays affecting several people who are depending on you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Use your common sense today in health matters. Don't eat or drink things you know are not good for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be very selective of your companions for fun involvements today. Sourpusses could put a damper on activities that should be enjoyable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful today that you don't take an unpopular position on something the majority opposes. You could waste emotions defending a stance not worthy of debate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Persons to whom you assign tasks today will work better if they feel they are not being too closely supervised. Issue your directives, then back off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Continue to be cautious in joint ventures of a financial nature. Misunderstanding could cause serious problems which would be hard to unravel.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Companions will find you annoying today if you behave too indecisively. Don't change your mind at the last minute and mess up everyone's plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Beware of tendencies today to turn what should be relatively easy tasks into something difficult and complex. Use simple methods, not tedious ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today, avoid pals who are hard to find when the check arrives. Involve yourself instead with friends who never take advantage of your generosity.

January 4, 1982

Members of the opposite sex are likely to prove extremely helpful this coming year in matters relating to your work or career. Strive to maintain good relationships.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you're rather good at getting proper mileage from your dollars, but today you could be a poor bargain hunter. Predictions of what's in store for you in each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your new Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, try to keep as few irons in the fire as possible. You may be a better starter than a finisher. Restrict your efforts to important projects.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Make it a point today to underplay your accomplishments, rather than magnifying them. Boasting or exaggerating will turn off your audience.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take care today that you're not jockeyed into a position where you might have to pay for others' mistakes. Each must be accountable for his or her own actions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When it comes to decisionmaking, you are usually rather independent about arriving at conclusions. However, today you could be swayed by less logical associates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Subdue tendencies today to rationalize away or postpone duties requiring immediate attention. They won't be easier to handle later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are trying to keep your budget in check, this is not a good day to pal around with extravagant friends. You could go on a big spending spree.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be extremely susceptible to flattery today. One who is aware of this may try to manipulate you to serve his or her interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Tasks normally very easy for you should not be taken for granted today. A careless or indifferent attitude could cause you to make mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Protect your interests today if you're involved in a joint venture where money is concerned. There's a chance that losses will fall back on you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Treat others fairly today, but don't make unreasonable concessions that could hurt you in the long run. Compromises should be equitable and fair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A bit more self-discipline than usual may be required if you hope to be productive today. There's a possibility you might look for easy outs, and dodge responsibilities.
