Oil price gains should hold, analysts say

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

After taking a brutal, 18-month beating on oil prices, Midland producers are now reaping the benefits of a tight crude oil market with a new improved posted price and some of the highest bonuses in years.

Crude oil futures prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange closed Monday at $20.52 a barrel, up about 65 percent from $12.34 a barrel at the beginning of the year. The Monday posted price was $17.75, but with bonuses paid by crude oil buyers sometimes hitting $2 per barrel, the price for a barrel of oil in Midland and in Cushing, Okla., is nearing the futures price.

"The Midland and Cushing markets are as good as I have seen it in three to four years," said Jack Bartles, a crude oil marketing consultant for Producers Marketing Group. "Better still," said Bartles, a former executive for the former Schurlock-Permian, "prices appear to be good until the end of the year."

Some Permian oil producers report they are receiving the highest bonuses in two years, with Spraberry producers seeing bonuses of $2 above the posted price.

"When you start to see bonuses that high," said Robert Shaeffer, crude oil purchaser for Black Hills Energy Resources, "it means crude oil is in short supply, and independents are getting a much-deserved break." He noted, however, that it was not so good for crude oil purchasers like him who are now working on margins that barely cover overhead. "It is getting hard to buy oil in Midland, Texas," said Shaeffer. "I have never seen anything like it."

In a story by Bloomberg News Service, John Toalster, head oil analyst for SG Securities, said the crude oil glut should be over by the third quarter. "We could see oil prices at $22 to $24 per barrel if OPEC holds with present energy cuts."

Nine energy analysts polled by Bloomberg News Service predict that oil prices will be $21 by the end of the year.

Shaeffer said OPEC was now about 95 percent in compliance with its cuts and would likely maintain them as long as oil prices continue upward. He said the OPEC cuts plus the 500,000 barrels a day knocked out of the U.S. market by low oil prices were impacting U.S. refiners, prompting them to pay higher bonuses.

"U.S. producers should be getting more confident about oil prices about now," Bartles said. "There is plenty of trading evidence to support higher prices for at least six months out." He said the NYMEX futures price was $20.53 for September but warned that prices can change overnight based on the statements or actions of OPEC producers.

"That's the problem when you have producers who can swing the price with a single statement," said Morris Burns, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "Venezuela announced last week that if prices continued to increase, it might be time to increase production again. Prices immediately dropped $1. Venezuela recanted the statement, and prices immediately increased."

He noted, however, that OPEC was now at a higher level of compliance than at anytime since the

Talks spawn hopes for two YMCAs

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

A meeting spearheaded by the city and YMCA officials Monday brought hope to the possibility of keeping two Midland YMCAs from shutting their doors for good.

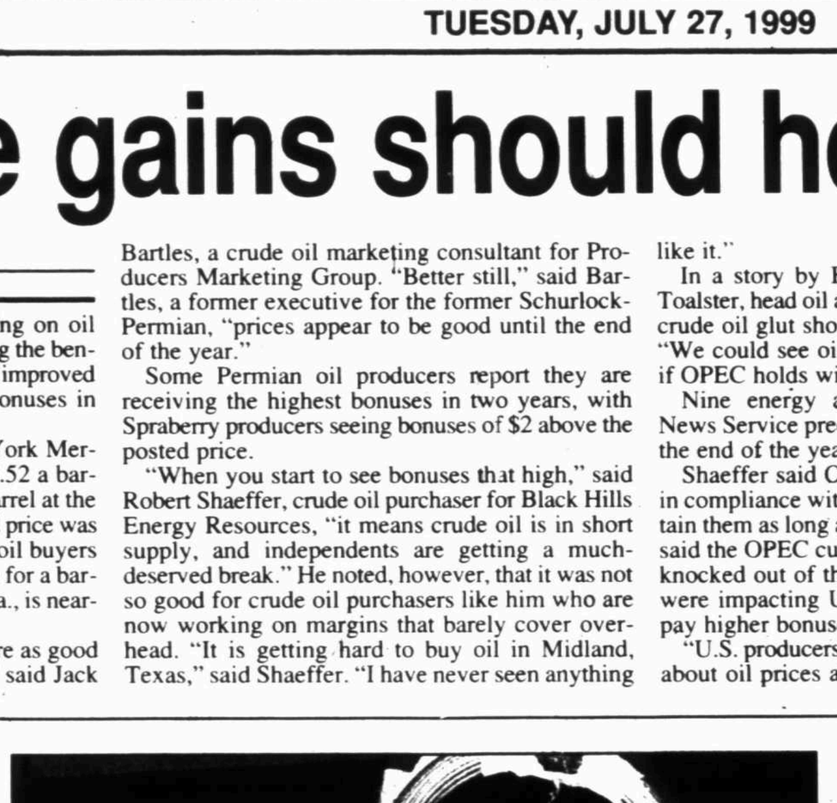

City Council member Jose Cuevas said he thought the meeting left options open about the future of the Alamo and Northeast YMCAs.

"We were able to lay out some opinions from both sides, and I think we can hash out a field of options," Cuevas said. "Something can be done; nothing is wrapped up yet, but we are all on the same page. We all want to see them stay open."

Cuevas said the immediate goal is to find a way to extend the closing deadline. The two buildings are scheduled to close on Aug. 30. However, Cuevas said he would like to find a way to keep the buildings open for a year while the group works on a more permanent answer to the problems the YMCAs are having.

"The big concern at the meeting was that they (the YMCAs) keep their doors open and the city ends up not supporting them," Cuevas said. "They had been 'Band-Aiding'

Grand jury rules MISD violated open meetings law at session last May

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The long-awaited results are finally in and it appears Midland Independent School District did indeed violate open meetings laws, according to a grand jury report released to MISD Monday.

"The grand jury concluded that it was a violation of the Open Meetings Act for the board to vote on the disciplinary matter in a closed session," the report states.

However, the grand jury believed that board members may not have been aware that the public had been excluded from entering after the executive session was over. Additionally, the panel didn't think an indictment was warranted.

The grand jury was asked to investigate allegations of open meetings violations in connection with a regular May 11 school board meeting in which a student's discipline appeal was denied.

Casey Gold Riggan, now a Midland High School graduate, was challenging a disciplinary decision made by his principal, Neil Richmond.

Witnesses claimed the vote rejecting Riggan's appeal occurred in a closed meeting.

142nd GRAND JURY REPORT

RE: MISD Board Meeting
May 11, 1999
Student Disciplinary Hearing

On June 23, 1999, the Grand Jury took under consideration an alleged violation of the Open Meetings Act (Government Code, Chapter 551) by the MISD Board of Trustees on May 11, 1999. The Grand Jury heard the testimony of an MISD representative and the Board's attorney and reviewed the pertinent parts of the official video recording of the Board's meeting. Additionally, the Grand Jury heard testimony from two citizens who were present at the May 11, 1999, Board meeting.

The Grand Jury believes that the Board members themselves may not have been aware that an MISD representative had excluded the public from entry, and that the MISD representative was acting upon the advice of the Board's legal counsel. The Board Attorney's interpretation was that the Open Meetings Act is superceded by 20 USCA section 1232q requiring confidentiality of

Schools edge out RockHounds stadium in survey

By Jennifer Cherry

The nearly 1,000 respondents in the Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond survey have indicated they want to see new school construction. But they were less than enthusiastic about funding a new ballpark for the Midland RockHounds.

Education surfaced as a hot topic in the survey responses, said Warren Gardner of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, who coordinated the overall survey.

Support was strong for a new Midland High School, winning almost 60 percent of the vote. Meanwhile, 44.5 percent of Midlanders also favored extensive renovations and expansion to Lee High School.

Midland School Board President Becky Oekerman said the survey results send a clear message that the community is ready to move forward with renovating the schools.

"I think (the school board) will take this very seriously," she said.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said the revival of the oil industry could give school officials the confidence to approach voters with a school referendum within the coming year. He suggested a referendum would ask for renovations at Lee High School as well as construction of a new Midland High School.

"We will try to include the two together," he said. "We will be pursuing the matter this fall given that oil prices are coming back."

He even ventured that Midlanders could see a bond initiative on the May ballot, if the economy continues to revive itself.

The survey also brought out a "thumbs up" for a new high school athletic facility, while survey participants were not as supportive of a new Midland RockHounds stadium.

Out of the 990 surveys returned, 47.2 percent disagreed that Midland needed a "new sports complex that would accommodate high school and professional sports."

However, when asked about the need for a new high school athletic stadium, approximately 50 percent of Midlanders were for it and 40 percent against it.

Although Gardner cautioned that the survey results were unscientific, he warned that stadium proponents ought to take this information as a "serious" warning.

Bill Williams, one of the leaders in the campaign for a sports complex, said the Vision 2000 survey results will not deter him from meeting his ultimate

City of Champions
City Council to recognize Sanchez at meeting

By Jennifer Cherry

At a time when most would consider retiring, Ciro Sanchez, 76, is still going strong. The World War II veteran, who is fulfilling his dream of creating a memorial to local Hispanic veterans, is the latest person to be awarded the City of Champions Award.

During this morning's City Council meeting, Sanchez will receive the monthly award that recognizes people in the community who, according to city officials, do not receive the recognition they deserve.

Sanchez came to Midland in 1942 as a migrant worker and his first opportunity in the business world was as a salesman for CJM Packing.

Sanchez established a real estate company in 1963 and two years ago began to fulfill his dream to build a memorial honoring Hispanic war veterans.

The dream is soon to become a reality.

"We would like to have it built by Sept. 15, 1999," said Sanchez, who traveled back to France five years ago to tour the area where he was station[illegible] during World War II.

He and several other war veterans have been working to compile a list of Hispanic veterans who lived in Midland before going off to fight. So far, Sanchez has come up with 123 names for the memorial.

The city donated land for the memorial that will be located near Unity Park at South Street and Lamesa Road.

"The memorial is where we lived," Sanchez said. "It is in our old barrio."

Sanchez said he read an article about

OIL: Tight crude market benefiting producers

(From 1A)

1970s. He said it seems to be easier for them when the price is going up, but they tend to scatter and cheat when the price goes down.

The Centre for Global Energy Studies, a London consulting group, said world inventories of crude oil are down 3 percent and still sliding. The American Petroleum Institute notes that oil inventories in the United States have also declined 3 percent. The Centre estimates that there are now 88 days of stored petroleum supplies worldwide. "If inventories drop to 82 percent, says the Centre, the oil glut is over." That's what inventories were in November of 1997, when oil prices were almost $20 per barrel.

"Supply and demand seem to be near even," Burns said. "We get wild price fluctuations when supply or demand runs ahead of the other."

Not everyone, however, agrees that inventories are low or the glut is over. According to Bloomberg reports, some oilmen feel the statistics lie and that companies are understating inventories to fuel the perception of lower prices and prop up oil prices.

"It's out-and-out fraud," said Jim Stewart, director of the Gulf Coast Business Unit for Plains Resources Inc., one of the largest crude oil storage companies in Cushing. "Cushing inventories are brimming. The numbers, in our opinion, are not accurate."

Cushing and Midland are the two key trading locations for West Texas Intermediate.

indirectly affect our schoolchildren," said Board President Becky Oekerman Monday. "There is no doubt we will heed the grand jury's report and continue to act in a pragmatic manner conducive to such governing bodies."

The school board's escape from indictment marks a successful clearance of just its first legal hurdle.

Riggan has filed a lawsuit against the school district and Richmond, claiming his rights to due process and freedom of speech were violated by punishment administered by Richmond and enforced by MISD.

For possessing two photos of Richmond's car parked on a public street outside a female teacher's house, Riggan was suspended for three days, put in an alternative education program for five days and ordered to write two letters of apology for "disrespect to an adult."

Riggan appealed his case to Joe Cummins, executive director of administrative services, who upheld Richmond's decision.

Riggan then appealed to the board, which also upheld Richmond's decision.

According to Board Member George Lara — whose inaugural meeting was the night in question — James Fuller moved to rescind the decision, but the motion failed 4-3.

student records, identity, etc.

The Grand Jury concluded that it was a violation of the Open Meetings Act for the Board to vote on the disciplinary matter in a closed session. The Grand Jury finds that it is the responsibility of each MISD Trustee to ensure compliance with the Open Meetings Act and should be held responsible for any future violations, intentional or unintentional.

It is the Grand Jury's recommendation that any conflict between the Open Meetings Act and 20 USCA section 1232q be researched and a position taken by the MISD Board of Trustees as to how they will govern themselves. In addition, the Trustees should be requested to have formal instruction covering Texas Law that applies to the Board. The services of an attorney knowledgeable in laws that govern school board meetings should be retained.

It is the hope of the Grand Jury that the MISD Board of Trustees will follow these recommendations to avoid future violations. The Grand Jury finds that no indictment is warranted.

The Grand Jury requests that this report be forwarded to the Board members and representatives of the media.

Submitted by the 142nd Grand Jury.

states that an MISD representative, who did not allow the public back in, was acting on the advice of the board's attorney Ted Kerr of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson.

Rick Strange, who represented MISD in the case, claimed the Open Meetings Act was superseded by Riggan's right to privacy — 20 United States Code Annotated section 1232q, which "requires confidentiality of student records, identity, etc."

"Acting on legal advice," however, won't be a sufficient defense in the future.

"The grand jury finds that it is the responsibility of each MISD trustee to ensure compliance with the Open Meetings Act and should be held responsible for any future violations, intentional or unintentional," the report states.

The jury also made a suggestion that the board retain, "an attorney knowledgeable in laws that govern school board meetings."

The district currently retains Cotton, Bledsoe, but Lara interpreted the suggestion to mean that the board get its own representation.

"Someone that would work for MISD trustees. They (Cotton, Bledsoe) basically work for the district itself."

Ms. Oekerman said, however, that she thought the district's current representation is qualified to advise the board on all matters.

"Mr. Kerr was a school board member and I have every confidence that he is giving us appropriate advice," she said.

Ms. Oekerman added that the board does and will make every effort to follow the law.

"I don't think anyone — board members, the administration or our lawyers — ever set out to intentionally deprive this young man of his legal rights."

One other allegation in the case involved then-board president Martha Manulik. Though not mentioned in the report, the grand jury did not find sufficient evidence that Ms. Manulik did anything wrong.

She had been accused of speaking to other board members before the meeting and trying to gain their support for upholding Richmond's and Cummins' decisions.

Ms. Manulik claimed she did not do that. And according to open meetings laws, it is not illegal for board members to speak to one another unless there is a quorum of four or more.

"She has not committed any inappropriate action as related to her board duties," said Ms. Oekerman.

SURVEY: Midlanders want new high school stadium goal of seeing the sports complex referendum welcomed by voters in November.

Thus far, the sports complex supporters have gathered 2,200 signatures on petitions in support of the plan, which would be funded by a sales tax increase.

"Obviously when we see numbers unfavorable, it concerns us, but we are not going to stop," Williams said.

Although Vision 2000 survey results would suggest that a high school sports facility might fare better on the ballot if offered independently of the Rock-Hounds stadium, Williams said that won't happen. The wording on the petitions prevents the two issues from being put before voters as separate initiatives.

With football season drawing near, Williams is counting on enthusiasm to build for the sports complex ballot initiative.

"People who utilize the stadium every Friday night will be aware of pitfalls of the old stadium," he said. "Hopefully those people will support it."

Among other findings in the Vision 2000 survey:

■ Eighty percent of those surveyed agreed that Midland needs transportation for the elderly. Almost as many also agreed that Midland should position itself as a major regional health-care provider.

■ Preservation of historical structures in Midland was supported by 85 percent of those surveyed.

■ Results also showed strong discontent with the existing cluster system in the public schools. Sixty-seven percent of respondents said they were unhappy with the cluster system.

■ The survey indicated strong support for a skateboard park.

Vision 2000 task forces are expected to have preliminary reports turned in to the steering committee by Aug. 15. Citizens will be able to give more input in meetings across the city on Sept. 28. By December, a document containing all recommended plans for the next decade will be released to the public.

SANCHEZ: Award to be given today

a Hispanic group in another state that had a street named after its war veterans.

Being a veteran himself, he got the idea to honor Midland's Hispanic veterans in a similar manner.

The project will cost a total of $25,000 to build. Thanks to donations from the community, he needs only about $2,500 more, said Sanchez, who hopes to add to the list of names on the memorial.

City Council member Jose Cuevas said Sanchez is trying to tell people not to forget fallen heroes and commended Sanchez on the short amount of time it took to raise the needed funds.

"Once the memorial is built, we will keep it up," Sanchez said.

It is this devotion to the Midland Hispanic community that Cuevas found appealing about Sanchez.

"Ciro is kind of my mentor," Cuevas said.

When Cuevas first came to Midland, he said Sanchez was the first Hispanic person he met who was involved in business.

"He showed me that a Hispanic-American could be successful in this community," Cuevas said.

Before Cuevas owned his own business, he said he worked at the Hilton hotel. With the help and coaching that Sanchez provided, Cuevas opened his first Jumburrito nine months later.

Cuevas said Sanchez taught him some valuable lessons about life and business.

During Sanchez's 57 years in Midland, he has contributed his time to a number of charitable organizations, including Lion's Club. He said he was the first president of the Eastside Lion's Club in 1956.

Sanchez is a current member of the Midland Board of Realtors, the Downtown Lion's Club and Midland Vision 2000 and Beyond.

The Mexico native said he contributes to the community because, "We need to be optimistic about the future."

Sanchez also was a member of Objectives for Midland about 35 years ago. He is founder and charter member of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. He donated one of the more than 60 buildings he owned to be used as the first office for MHCC in 1988.

Sanchez has not only built a business in Midland, but also a family. He and his wife, Bertha, have been married for 35 years. They have four children, seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

"He might have been born in Mexico, but I would say he is a real American," Cuevas said.

Cuevas added that although Sanchez came from humble beginnings, his "pull- yourself-up-by-the-bootstrap" mentality has made him a success.

The wall behind his office desk is covered with numerous plaques commemorating each time Sanchez gave to the community.

"There is so much stuff," Sanchez said in reference to the plaques.

Sanchez said he doubts he would undertake a major job like the Hispanic veteran's memorial again.

"I'm too old," he said.

The award Sanchez will receive was inspired by the state champion teams at Midland and Lee high schools. He is the fifth recipient of the City of Champion Award.

The committee tries to "find people who contributed to the city over a long period of time," according to City Council member Don Washburn.

After the first 10 or 12 recipients, the award might be given quarterly or as earned, Washburn said.

As for Sanchez, he said retirement is still a long way away for him — he is not into sports and would always rather be doing something in the office.

He plans to stay in Midland and remain in real estate as long as he can — from there, "God knows," he said.

He has stayed in Midland because he has enjoyed it.

"I think Midland is a good city for anyone," Sanchez said.

it to get by for a long time now. Some repair work has been neglected in order to save money in the past. We assured them that once we were a player in this we would not back down from it."

Cuevas said this issue was much like the city swimming pools. He said they may not make back the money they put into it, but the pools serve the community, much like the YMCA does.

"These buildings shutting down affects children's programs and seniors' program," Cuevas said. "If it provides a service to the community, then I think it is worth our effort to keep them open."

YMCA board member Tevis Herd agreed with Cuevas' assessment. He said the talks are to give some hope to keeping the two facilities open. Although it is too early to say what will happen, Herd said the group had a good meeting and hope they can find an answer.

"The city folks were very interested in helping us," Herd said. "They want us to stay open; the board wants to keep the two open until we can work something out."

The answer lies in money, according to Herd. He said the financial need for both facilities remains the same and the two groups will meet sometime next week to see if the city will be able to provide the funds.

Russians live in hatred amid Kosovo Albanians

MALISEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Ethnic Albanians glare at the three Russian soldiers, one smoking a cigarette, as they walk quickly Monday through the dusty main street of war-ruined Malisevo. No greetings, no smiles, no handshakes.

In the mainly Serb Kosovo town of Polje, about 20 miles away, Russian soldiers drink and carouse with local Serbs, flashing the three-fingered Serb salute despised by ethnic Albanians, British troops, aid workers and locals say.

It has been nearly six weeks since Russia's first troops moved into Kosovo from Bosnia, creating a confrontation with NATO later resolved by incorporating the contingent into the peace force.

Now, the troops are encountering mistrust and hatred from Kosovo Albanians, gratitude from the dwindling Serb population and raised eyebrows from some fellow peacekeepers who question their military discipline.

The Russian presence is a delicate issue for the Western nations that intervened in the Yugoslav province. The mainly Muslim ethnic Albanians equate the Serbs and Russians, both Orthodox Christians, as common enemies.

Russians had been patrolling and manning checkpoints here in tandem with German forces until last week, when they went solo. The Russians will begin patrolling their second sector, Kamenica in the American zone east of Pristina, on Wednesday.

Their main logistics base in the province is opposite a milk factory in the cradle of Serb nationalism, Kosovo Polje, where a Serb defeat against the Turks in a 600-year-old battle became glorified into a touchstone of Serb identity. About 700 Russians lodge at a barracks at the nearby airport, which they have partial responsibility for running. About 1,400 Russians are in the province, a spokesman for the NATO peacekeepers said. The total is expected to reach 3,600.

German troops, who operate in the Malisevo area, have sympathy for the Russians, a notoriously underpaid and ill-equipped army.

Others are less charitable.

Capt. Adam Fairbrother of Britain's Irish Guards, who control the Kosovo Polje area, said the Russians "drink vodka at the (base) gates and sing songs loudly" with Serbs who gather there, and sit in cafes in town. The Russians frequently pass through to do food shopping.

"They are less disciplined than the British or American forces in the area," he said.

Out near the airport, British military police say the Russians lack bottled water, and depend on them for handouts.

But in Kosovo Polje, the Russians are welcomed. They have set up a field hospital next to a Serb-run clinic. A Russian doctor, who declined to give his name, said he treats 20-30 people a day, including a few Albanians. Serbs, local officials say, are too scared to make the 15-minute drive to Pristina's ethnic Albanian-run hospital.

Indonesian election results delayed another week

AP Photo

An Indonesian riot police officer holds a yellow rose given to him by demonstrators as a gesture of peace near the General Election Commission office in Jakarta, Indonesia, Monday. Allegations of irregularities threw Indonesia's electoral commission into confusion Monday and further delayed the release of long-awaited general election results.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A group of tiny parties refused to certify Indonesia's election results Monday, forcing another delay in the long-awaited final tally of the June 7 parliamentary vote.

Electoral officials had planned to announce the final results, but 27 out of 48 parties failed to sign off on the results, saying the election was unfair.

They have cited about 100,000 irregularities, which must now be addressed by an electoral watchdog body. Senior officials are split over whether the complaints are justified.

The election was the first free ballot in Indonesia in 44 years. The result, already delayed by painfully slow procedures as well as bureaucratic bungling and bickering, is regarded as crucial to the democratic transformation of the world's fourth-most populous nation after decades of authoritarian rule.

Monday's delay has thrown Indonesia's electoral process into disarray. It could postpone the formation of the new parliament as well as an electoral college that is scheduled to pick the next president.

The final figures are expected to closely mirror previously released unofficial tallies that gave Megawati Sukarnoputri's Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle a clear lead with 34 percent of the vote. The ruling Golkar Party, which underpinned the 32-year autocratic rule of ex-President Suharto and now backs his hand-picked successor, President B.J. Habibie, came in second with 22 percent.

A two-thirds majority of the 53-member General Election Commission must endorse the final results.

The commission's head, retired Gen. Rudini, later met with Habibie in an attempt to break the deadlock. Rudini, like many Indonesians, uses one name.

Habibie referred the matter to Indonesian Supervisory Electoral Committee, which has one week to rule whether the allegations of irregularities hold any substance.

All five major parties, which won 93 percent of the 105 million votes cast, endorsed the result as fair, Rudini said.

Rudini was among those who refused to sign in his capacity as a representative of a small party.

"They have justified reasons especially on (whether it was a) just and honest election," Rudini said after his meeting with Habibie.

Other electoral officials disagreed.

Indria Samego, an analyst at the Indonesian Institute of Science accused small party leaders of trying to derail the electoral process.

"They will lose face in defeat. So they are now trying to sabotage the election," he said.

More headway reported in talks on Ethiopia war

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — In a further indication of a breakthrough in peace efforts, Ethiopia and Eritrea have agreed to send delegations to Algeria to finalize arrangements to end their 14-month border war, the Organization of African Unity said Monday.

The OAU announcement followed a week of mediation efforts by Algerian Premier Ahmed Ouyahia and U.S. envoy Anthony Lake.

The two Horn of Africa nations have been entrenched in a bloody war since May 1998 over disputed areas along their 620-mile border that has claimed tens of thousands of lives and driven almost half a million people from their homes.

The OAU said Monday it had arranged to bring delegations from both nations to Algiers to work out the details of a framework peace agreement. The group did not say when the meeting would take place.

Salt-Ex reduces salt, boosts plant growth

Stop killing your yard and your garden

Over most summers in this area it seems that no matter how much you water your yard, it still gets brown spots, or generally looks weak. Even with a huge water bill, your yard and garden can still look thirsty. While we've had some rain recently, your yard may not be as lush and green as you'd like it to be.

"The problem is salty tap water," says Eric Selinger of Salt-Ex. "City water averages 1280 parts-per-million (PPM) of salt. Most plants grow best at 600-900 PPM Above that, growth could be stunted."

High soil salinity keeps plants from extracting water from the soil. It also leads to the accumulation of elements toxic to plants. While Bermuda grass is somewhat salt tolerant, most garden vegetables and fruit trees have a much lower salt tolerance. That's why they often have brown leaves, stunted growth and low yield.

The answer is not more fertilizer—that just adds more salts to the soil.

So, what can you do? The answer is bioremediation, which means using microbes to "eat up" the salt in the ground.

Salt-Ex is a completely natural, ionically modified catalyst that, when applied with selected aerobic microbes, successfully treats excessive mineral salt contamination.

They have to absorb free sodium ions from the soil—removing sodium's harmful effects from your thirsty plants' roots. Because soil moisture will be more available to your plants, you'll likely water significantly less, reducing your water bill.

One of many Salt-Ex tests Eric has done began on May 12 at a local tennis club. The chart shows the drastic reductions in soil salinity levels achieved after the Salt-Ex application.

How salty is your own soil? Eric offers free soil salinity testing through the end of August.

Prices start at $15 for deep-root treatment of trees. Grass treatments cost $20 per thousand square feet. Eric typically recommends two treatments a year—not six or eight.

Don't watch your yard suffer this August. Call Eric Selinger and cut your water bills while keeping your grass healthy!

Salt-Ex is locally owned by Eric Selinger. Call 683-SALT (7258) for a free estimate or literature with more information on how Salt-Ex works. Member of the BBB Care program.

Salt-Ex Test Results

	Salt PPM
Location	5/12/99	5/25/99	6/11/99	6/28/99
1	4480	1408	960	704
2	2560	1600	512	960
3	2240	1024	960	768

These three flower beds were treated with Salt-Ex on May 12. As you follow each location across to the right, you see drastic reductions in salt levels over the 45 days of the test. Well water being used on the plants tests at 3200 ppm of salt.

Salt-Ex offers results you can see. The only difference between these two trees is that the one on the left was treated with Salt-Ex to reduce soil salinity and help the plant absorb more moisture.

Ceil-Clean helps building owners five ways

Over time, acoustical ceilings collect dirt, dust, grease and other particles that make them dingy. Should you replace the tiles, paint them or have them cleaned by Westex Ceil-Clean ? Here are some advantages to having them cleaned.

Improves appearance. Clean tiles reflect light better, brightening the whole room.

Saves money. Ceilings can be cleaned for a third of the cost of painting and less than a fifth the cost of replacement. Ceilings can be cleaned many times.

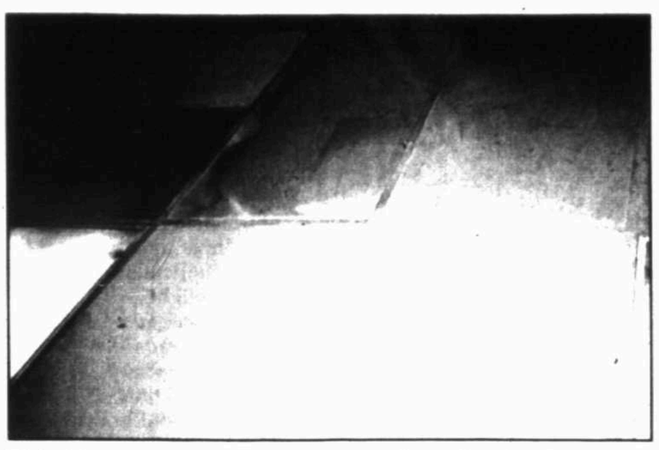

Doesn't disrupt business as much. Ceilings can be cleaned after hours with no business interruptions. A 2,000 square foot building can be cleaned in as little as one hour, whereas replacing the tiles could take three days.

Does not harm acoustical value. Painting destroys acoustical value by clogging the sound-absorbing pores. Cleaning improves it by removing dirt from the pores.

Disinfects and deodorizes. The Ceil-Clean formula neutralizes odors and bacteria trapped in dirty tiles.

Call Westex Ceil-Clean owner Barry Carter today for a free estimate.

Westex Ceil-Clean is locally owned and operated by Barry Carter. Call him at 522-5298 for a free estimate and a list of references.

This "in-progress" photo shows dirty tiles (top) and clean ones at a local restaurant. Ceil-Clean can brighten your restaurant, office building or residence quickly and for much less than the cost of replacing or painting those tiles.

Let Sera-Tec help with back-to-school expenses

An extra $100 would help with buying school supplies and clothes, wouldn't it? If you could earn that money while helping meet the health care needs of other people, that would be even better.

You can earn $100 in your first two weeks of donating plasma at Sera-Tec, if you become a qualified donor. At your first visit, bring the coupon on this page. They'll give you a thorough checkup and health history, to see if you are qualified to donate. If you are, and you donate four times in the first 14 days after you sign up, you'll receive a total of $100, a $40 bonus. You'll be paid in cash every time you donate.

If you bring a friend, you can qualify for the $10 buddy bonus. Once you become a qualified donor, bring a friend, family member or co-worker, and tell the friendly Sera-Tec technician they're with you. After the second time your "buddy" donates, you'll receive your $10 bonus.

You don't have to be buying school supplies for someone else in order to get a bonus. A first-time donor with a student ID from either a high school or college within a 125-mile radius of Midland can earn an extra five dollars at their first donation. Regular donors can earn up to $140 per month.

Plasma is the clear, yellowish fluid portion of your blood, which transports water and nutrients all over your body. You can donate plasma more often than whole blood because plasma is replenished much faster.

Plasma is used by pharmaceutical companies like Bayer to make a variety of life-saving products.

Sera-Tec donors receive cash each time they donate plasma.

Albumin and plasma fraction are used to restore plasma in patients who have suffered shock, trauma, surgery or severe burns. Antihemophilic factor concentrate is used in prevention and treatment of hemophilia A or B bleeding episodes. Immune globulin and Rh factors are also used in important health treatments.

If you've never donated plasma before, the friendly staff at Sera-Tec will answer any questions you may have. First-time donors are given a blood test and a physical, along with a list of health questions to answer. This is all part of Sera-Tec's procedures for assuring a clean blood supply. If you are qualified to donate based on these procedures, a Sera-Tec staff member will take you to the donor room and carefully insert the IV into your arm. Your blood will pass through a machine which will remove the plasma and return the rest of your blood to your body.

Donation typically takes 30-45 minutes for women and 50-60 minutes for men. While donating you may read, talk or watch a movie.

Sera-Tec pays you because they know your time is valuable. This is a great way to help pay for summer expenses (even vacations) while helping others with an essential element.

Sera-Tec Plasma Center is located in Northland Shopping Center at A and Scharbauer. Hours are 9-7 Tuesday and Thursday, 9-5:30 Wednesday and Friday, 9-1 Monday and 9-5 Saturday, closed Sunday. The phone number is 570-6093. Sera-Tec also has a facility at 1413 E. 8th in Odessa.

U.S., Russia set up new hot line, work to heal rift

SINGAPORE (AP) — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and her Russian counterpart announced Monday they will install a second Washington-Moscow "hot line" to help avoid misunderstandings like those that developed over Kosovo.

The two diplomats pronounced the rift between the two countries on the mend.

"We have turned the corner," said Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov, saying the U.S.-Russian relationship must proceed without "any deviations or surprises." Recent developments "demonstrate the need for having a continuously operating and reliable communication," he said.

U.S.-Russian tension was triggered by NATO's 78-day bombing of Yugoslavia — which its historical Russian ally strongly opposed — and exacerbated by such incidents as Russian tanks beating NATO peacekeepers into Kosovo.

While stressing that serious differences remain, Albright and Ivanov were upbeat at a joint news conference, focusing on future cooperation on numerous issues including peacekeeping and reconstruction in the Balkans.

"The Russian-U.S. relationship was so important and so broad that it could not be damaged by the Kosovo situation," Albright declared. She and Ivanov met for 2 1/2 hours at a working dinner during an annual forum on Southeast Asia.

The reconciliation effort was under way in Washington as well. Russian Prime Minister Sergei Stepashin planned to meet briefly with President Clinton on Tuesday and to hold lengthy sessions with Vice President Al Gore.

Albright has been working the sidelines of the annual meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and its Asian and Pacific partners to try to mend fences with both Russia and China.

Over their dinner, Albright and Ivanov also discussed the upcoming heads-of-state conference to be held Friday in Sarajevo, Bosnia, concerning Balkans reconstruction.

A senior Clinton administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, suggested that Russia and the United States remained at odds on the formula for aid, particularly aid to Serbia, as leaders head for the Sarajevo conference.

"We're still in the middle of that discussion and it's still ongoing," said the official. Clinton has said he will support nothing but humanitarian aid to Serbia so long as President Slobodan Milosevic remains in power.

Searchers look for spy plane; White House plugs military aid

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Washington's top anti-drug official pushed for increased military aid Monday to counter rebels in Colombia, where rescuers tried to reach what might be the wreckage of a U.S. spy plane lost on an anti-narcotics mission.

Visiting the world's No. 1 cocaine-producing country, Barry McCaffrey said peace talks to end the nation's 35-year conflict would only work if Colombia's security forces were strengthened against the threat of "narco-guerrillas."

"The United States has paid inadequate attention to a serious and growing emergency," he told reporters after meeting with President Andres Pastrana.

America should provide more battle helicopters and training for Colombian military and police units, he said.

The missing de Havilland RC-7 plane, packed with sophisticated radar and eavesdropping equipment, apparently slammed into an uncharted mountain in bad weather, likely killing the five American soldiers and two Colombian air force officers on board, McCaffrey said. It was reported missing Friday.

The names of the three American officers and two enlisted men based at Fort Bliss, in El Paso, Texas, have not been released.

Low cloud cover and rugged terrain have prevented searchers from reaching the site in southern Putumayo province.

"It's extreme terrain," said Steve Lucas, a spokesman for the Southern Command in Miami. Lucas said specially trained searchers could jump from aircraft, be lowered down by ropes, or hike up to the wreckage lodged high on a mountainside.

The plane dropped off radar screens as it circled over Putumayo, a major drug-cultivation area dominated by the rebel Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC. It was gathering intelligence on a "routine" counter-narcotics mission, the Army said.

The United States uses satellites, radar installations and overflights to collect data on illegal coca and opium plots and traffickers' movements — part of an aid program valued at nearly $300 million this year. Much of the aid has provided crop-dusting planes and the armed helicopters that escort them on fumigation missions.

Despite record spraying, those crops have doubled since 1996, with the most explosive growth coming in areas where the FARC presence has limited operations. The 15,000-member rebel group partly finances itself by taxing drug production and protecting traffickers' laboratories and airstrips.

Good planning assured Midland of water supply

While Midland has never suffered from the extreme shortages of water that have plagued some other cities in the Southwest, the fact that city officials have drafted a drought contingency plan still makes good sense.

That is responsible government: Have a plan in hand and hope that you don't ever need to use it.

In fact, Deputy City Manager Rick Menchaca noted recently that under a measure passed by the Texas Legislature in 1997 all cities and water districts in the state must have such a plan in place. That should only be considered a reasonable requirement in a semi-arid land where drought is a more common companion than wet years.

Throughout its history, lack of a steady supply of water has not hampered Midland's growth — thanks primarily to the planning by far-sighted city and county leaders who have worked tirelessly to ensure that the community would always have an ample supply of water. Often the water supply proves perplexing to newcomers to Midland who do not know where the city gets its water. After all, there are no lakes or rivers near Midland.

Rather, the city relies on water it purchases from Lake Ivie at Robert Lee and obtains from two well fields, the Paul Davis Well Field north of Midland and the McMillen Well Field west of the city.

But to their credit, city officials have not merely rested on their laurels in regard to the city's water supply. Officials have purchased water rights in both Loving and Winkler Counties and will develop those fields in future years as the water is needed. Those fields are Midland's "ace in the hole."

That good planning means Midland can grow without being concerned too greatly about its supply of water. After all, there's nothing more important to a city's existence than an abundance of cool, clear water.

Medicare solution still much needed

When it comes to Medicare, what Americans need — and Bill Clinton still fails to deliver — is a market-oriented, new Medicare in which providers compete for customers who're rewarded for shopping for the best health care buy that meets their needs.

As a start Congress should lift caps on the number of medical savings accounts (MSAs) allowed by federal law. MSA's would provide seniors a base benefit with which to purchase catastrophic health insurance and to build up savings for other health care needs.

Washington then should resume the dialog started by the reform commission to bring Medicare closer to a real long-term solution.

All of this would be easier if Clinton would stop playing politics with a volatile and important public policy issue.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 27, the 208th day of 1999. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 27, 1953, the Korean War armistice was signed at Panmunjom, ending three years of fighting.

On this date:

In 1694, the Bank of England received a royal charter as a commercial institution.

In 1789, Congress established the Department of Foreign Affairs, the forerunner of the Department of State.

In 1866, Cyrus W. Field finally succeeded, after two failures, in laying the first underwater telegraph cable between North America and Europe.

In 1940, Bugs Bunny made his "official" debut in the Warner Bros. animated cartoon "A Wild Hare."

In 1967, in the wake of urban rioting, President Johnson appointed the Kerner Commission to assess the causes of the violence, the same day black militant H. Rap Brown said in Washington that violence was "as American as cherry pie."

One year ago: President Clinton held a town meeting in Albuquerque, N.M., on the future of Social Security, during which he expressed skepticism about proposals to privatize part of the Social Security trust fund. Monica Lewinsky was interviewed for five hours by prosecutors in New York in a possible prelude to an immunity deal.

Blamelessness next to godliness in no-fault era

WASHINGTON — We have stumbled into the era of no-fault government. Blamelessness is next to godliness; nobody in authority is held responsible for blunders, no matter how costly.

Safire

Take last week's case of the cell biologist at a Berkeley, Calif., lab who was found to have faked his research findings — supposedly linking electric power to cancer — to win his lab $3.3 million from three federal agencies.

A whistle-blower alerted the Office of Research Integrity, which found him "falsifying and fabricating data." The swinging scientist, Robert Liburdy, avoids prosecution by not contesting these findings, though he admits nothing.

Is the lab being forced to return the money to taxpayers? No. Its lawyer tells William Broad of The Times that the unused portion is "being used for other science."

What of those at the Departments of Defense and Energy and the NIH who ladled out the money and now make no effort to recover it? No letter of reprimand for nonfeasance is being placed in anybody's personnel file.

That's typical of no-fault government. I'm not talking about prosecution for criminal wrongdoing — only the absence of penalty for failure to do one's job.

Another case: The Times' Tim Weiner reported that House Appropriations discovered the Air Force illegally diverting untold millions to a secret "black program." Congress has secure procedures for financing secret operations, but here a Pentagon clique apparently resisted. With unwitting irony, the Pentagon spokesman brushed it off as "an oversight."

Did successive A.F. chiefs of staff know of this misuse of funds? Did Senate Armed Services ask the acting secretary, Whitten Peters, about this during confirmation? If those in command were in the dark, shouldn't they be publicly reprimanded, if only as an example to other easily duped administrators?

But that would be "finger-pointing," now a bureaucratic no-no. Only institutions may be chastised in this blame-free society — not those individuals wrapped in anonymity who make the costly mistakes.

Remember that cruise missile President Clinton launched to take out a suspected terrorist target in Khartoum in Sudan? The pharmaceutical plant, Al Shifa, was destroyed with great precision.

But it turns out somebody goofed. The plant really was making medicines and we are now quietly paying the Sudanese compensation. We can presume no evil intent — not even a presidential attempt to change the subject — only a disastrous misjudgment.

How should you assign blame when identification of those responsible might endanger their lives? In that case, Richard Clarke, who is Samuel Berger's counterterrorism chief at the National Security Council, should come forward to say:

"An outside task force has examined mistakes made both in collection and evaluation of evidence. Its top-secret report has been made to the intelligence committees of the House and Senate, which can make their own judgments. We have also spelled out the procedures newly designed to avoid any repeat of this failure."

That would make certain that those responsible know exactly what they did wrong, and know that a repeat of the mistake will result in transfer to a less dangerous line of work. Such corrective is necessary training; its avoidance promotes incompetence.

The same approach should apply to the sequence of breakdowns in collection of intelligence and command decision-making that led to the mistaken bombing of the Chinese embassy in Belgrade.

As of now, some sort of explanation has been provided to Beijing as part of our groveling process. But Chinese intelligence, which lost three of its best operatives (under journalistic cover) in the bombing, guiltily suspects we wanted to close down its secret operation that may have been aiding the Serbs. That fitted neatly into Beijing's need to whip up nationalist fervor against the West to divert its people's minds from deflation and the spiritual pull of Falun Gong.

For the sake of improvement of our own military intelligence — and not to prolong the kowtowing — the NSC should lay the facts before congressional overseers. Bumbling is forgivable only if it leads to specific acknowledgment of error, even if in secret.

Enough of this evasion of accountability as "the blame game" and airy dismissal of responsibility as "who-shot-John." Finding fault now averts greater fault later.

Manor Park coverage was overly sensationalized

I was saddened by the manner in which your paper ran, in such bold print, the lead story in your paper July 8 concerning Manor Park. It made it appear that the caregivers and all Manor Park employees are incompetent people.

In any worthwhile endeavor some mistakes are inevitable. We live in an imperfect world. All of the employees, administrative personnel and board members are crushed and regret deeply the tragic incident that happened to the elderly woman at the center. This does not mean that they are all criminals. All of the other complaints have long since been corrected.

I have read several articles in your paper touting Midland as the ideal retirement center. A lawsuit of this nature is of public record and people should have their day in court, but this could have been reported in a more civil manner.

Manor Park Healthcare Center is one of the great success stories in our community and is the supreme model of what life can be for elderly and retired people. One only needs to visit Manor Park to know what a happy and wonderful group of people live there. It is a home that is the envy of all health care centers and should be a model to be followed by all nursing and retirement centers. Let's all encourage the directors and all personnel involved with Manor Park Healthcare Center to continue the super work they are doing.

The strong statements made in the paper were unwarranted. It is too bad that sensationalism is the style of the media. All of the people involved in any way at Manor Park are dedicated Christian people. It is unfortunate that the employee in question had changed his name several times which made it difficult to evaluate his credibility. It is regrettable this person found his way into the health center, but Manor Park should not be reprimanded in such a demeaning and degrading manner.

Mrs. Merwin H. Haag

Story short on facts about historical organizations

Please correct the article on Page 3B where I am quoted (Midland Reporter-Telegram, July 22). There is not one correct statement in that entire paragraph, save one: There are 10 Official Texas Historical Markers in downtown Midland.

I am president (not chair) of the Midland County Historical Society and chairwoman of the Midland County Historical Commission. Members of the commission are appointed by the county commissioners at the request of the governor of the state of Texas to serve the Texas Historical Commission.

I am not aware of any organization called Texas Historical Society. The Texas Historical Commission does not direct the refurbishing of a building. Further the building at the corner of Illinois and Main is not and never has been a project of the Midland County Historical Society or the commission. I do not know and have no way of knowing whether there are buildings in Midland that are completely vacant, and never made a statement to that effect.

The Wall Street Bar & Grill, the joining barber shop and the portion of the building now vacant have not been preserved by the Midland County Historical Society or the Commission nor have we ever taken any steps in preserving the old building across the street from the courthouse on Wall.

Proposals to ban handguns nothing new

The more you know about the past, the more you realize there has been a great deal less change that some folks think. Take the year, 1925. Guess what? People were proposing to ban handguns to reduce crime.

Reese

The proposal came from a magazine called The Nation. This magazine is still published. It came during alcohol prohibition.

Our current ban-the-devil-firearm proposals are occurring during drug prohibition. Trying to ban alcohol produced the following effects: a product dirt cheap to make became expensive on the black market; huge crime organizations grew wealthy; bribery and corruption became rampant; there grew a general contempt for the law. Perhaps that sounds familiar.

At any rate, in 1925, H. L. Mencken, one of America's greatest and most libertarian journalists, was writing columns for the Baltimore Evening Sun. The proposal to ban handguns produced this from Mencken: "The new law that it (the magazine) advocated, indeed, is one of the most absurd specimens of jackass legislation ever heard of, even in this paradise of legislative donkeyism. Its single and sole effect would be to exaggerate enormously all of the evils it proposes to put down. It would not take pistols out of the hands of rogues and fools; it would simply take them out of the hands of honest men."

Mencken even points out that prohibition agents cannot stop liquor coming in by the shipload of bulky cases and they certainly will not be able to stop something as small a pistol.

In our own times, a government unable to keep out drugs by the tons and illegal aliens by the hundreds of thousands will certainly play heck trying to stop firearms should Congress ever be silly enough to ban them. And they may be seized by such an attack of silliness.

Outbreaks of legislative silliness seem to be occurring with greater frequency. If Mencken thought his era was a time of legislative donkeyism, he should look down from heaven and see what nonsense consumes our public servants.

Mencken says in his column that he owns two pistols and his brother has six, and that they would certainly sell them on the black market rather than let the government seize them.

The point is that human nature never changes. There are always people who think you can legislate paradise on earth. There are always people unwilling to allow others to be free, if what they want to do with their freedom (drink or snort or own a firearm) doesn't meet the do-gooder's high standards for OPB — other people's behavior.

Freedom means living with warts and risks, so to speak. But free people just deal with the warts and risks on an individual basis. They know you cannot legislate warts and risks out of existence.

But people won't change, and maybe that's an argument for knowing nothing about the past. At least then you wouldn't realize how repetitious it all is.

Clinton urges Assad to use chance to negotiate with Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is urging Syrian President Hafez Assad to "seize the moment of opportunity" for peace negotiations with Israel.

In a letter sent over the weekend, Clinton told Assad he had confidence Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak was willing to hold peace talks after a three-year stalemate.

Clinton also invited Assad to stay in touch with him.

A U.S. official, speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said Clinton also told the Syrian leader about the four days of talks he held here with Barak.

The president told Assad "this is a moment of opportunity to be taken advantage of," the official said.

Syria's price for peace is return of the Golan Heights enclave along the border. Israel captured the strategic territory in the 1967 Mideast war, effectively shutting down a corridor used by Syrian tanks to move against Israel.

Barak, as Israel's military chief of staff, publicly called for retaining the Golan Heights. But then he took the post of foreign minister in a Labor government willing to return most, if not all, of the land.

In his visit here, Barak spoke of a readiness to make a "painful compromise" for peace.

Clinton and Barak held talks in Morocco on Sunday with several Arab leaders who were with them at King Hassan's funeral.

As the momentum for peacemaking grew, Jordan's King Abdullah II made an unannounced visit to Damascus on Monday to brief Assad on his discussions with Clinton and Barak at the funeral.

Clinton is sending Secretary of State Madeleine Albright to the Mideast in mid-August. She is expected to make Damascus one of her stops.

The official said Clinton offered no incentives to Assad to hold peace talks with Israel.

Syria is listed as a sponsor of terrorism, and by law cannot receive U.S. military and economic assistance. There are controls on the export of material that could have military application. And tax incentives are not given to U.S. businesses that invest in listed countries.

Peacemaking with Israel can be lucrative. Egypt and Jordan have been rewarded with U.S. aid for making peace with Israel, while Barak was promised a boost in U.S. military aid during his talks here.

Assistant Secretary of State Martin Indyk said last month that Assad "leads us to believe he is keen on engaging Syria" in renewed peace talks.

Syrian officials have stressed publicly that their country intends to recover the entire Golan Heights as its price for peace. Israel captured the strategic enclave as it defeated Syria, Egypt, Jordan and other Arab states in the 1967 war.

After negotiations broke down three years ago, Syria claimed it had been assured by Israeli negotiators it could recover all of the Golan Heights for the right peace terms.

Handyman confesses to all four killings

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — A motel handyman suspected of decapitating a naturalist and killing three Yosemite sightseers has confessed to the four slayings, law enforcement sources told The Associated Press on Monday.

Cary Stayner confessed to last week's beheading of naturalist Joie Ruth Armstrong, according to an FBI affidavit. He provided details about the killing that only police knew about, the affidavit said.

Stayner is also the prime suspect in the killings of sightseers Carole Sund, her daughter Juli and family friend Silvina Pelosso, whose bodies were found earlier this year, police said. Law enforcement sources speaking on the condition of anonymity said Stayner confessed to those killings also.

Many were relieved to hear of the Saturday arrest.

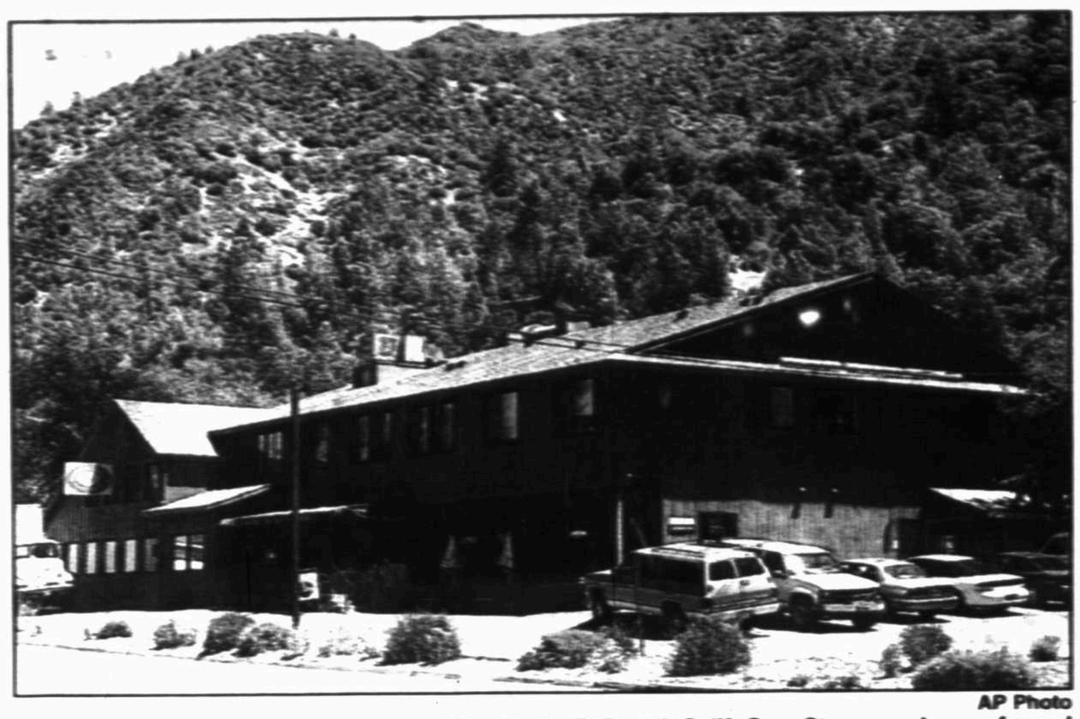

"It's unbelievable that they can be connected and in such a beautiful place and under such tragic circumstances," said Kim Petersen, a volunteer for a foundation set up in memory of one of the sightseers.

"It's horrible and I just hope that this is the end of it for all of them. That this can't happen anymore," Petersen said.

Stayner, 37, said nothing at a court appearance Monday in Sacramento, where a federal magistrate ordered him held pending arraignment in Fresno on Aug. 6. Dressed in an orange jumpsuit, husky and clean-cut, Stayner nodded when asked if he understood the FBI's complaint. The magistrate ordered a public defender appointed.

Stayner had been questioned months ago in the death of the sightseers but was ruled out as a suspect. An investigator acknowledged that the arrest had made him question whether Ms. Armstrong's murder could have been prevented.

"I struggled with that issue for the last 24 hours and I continue to do so," said James Maddock, agent in charge of the FBI office in Sacramento. "I'm confident we've done everything that reasonably could have been done."

AP Photo

This is a view of the Cedar Lodge seen Monday in El Portal, Calif. Cary Stayner, who confessed to the murder of Yosemite Park naturalist Joie Ruth Armstrong, was renting a room in the lodge.

Stayner worked and lived outside the park in El Portal at the Cedar Lodge where the sightseers were last seen and Ms. Armstrong was an occasional visitor.

He came under suspicion in Ms. Armstrong's death because his sport utility vehicle was spotted near her remote cabin an hour after she was last seen alive there Wednesday night.

Twice Thursday, park rangers and sheriff's deputies questioned Stayner and searched his car. Once, they grabbed his backpack to look for Ms. Armstrong's head, the FBI affidavit said. Nothing turned up — Ms. Armstrong's head was later found near her body — and Stayner was let go.

After Stayner failed to show up for work Friday — his first absence in a year and a half — FBI agents looked for him again. He was tracked down Saturday at Laguna del Sol, a nudist colony near Sacramento, after someone there recognized him from news reports and called authorities.

Stayner then confessed to the agents, the FBI said.

Maddock said that agents now believe there is a connection between the murders, with one possible tie being the way one of the sightseers was killed.

Juli Sund's throat was cut so deeply that she was nearly decapitated, The Modesto Bee reported Monday, citing law enforcement sources.

Last week, after Ms. Armstrong's body was found along a stream near her home, authorities said they did not believe there was a connection to the February slayings of the three sightseers. Maddock said at the time that he believed most of those responsible for the sightseers' deaths were behind bars on unrelated charges.

The Stayner name already is indelibly etched in the annals of California crime.

His younger brother Steven Stayner was kidnapped off a Merced street in 1972 and raised for seven years by a man who sexually abused him. Steven finally escaped and was reunited with his family. The story inspired a TV miniseries but had a tragic ending: In 1989 he died at age 24 in a hit-and-run motorcycle accident.

Hot weather scalds eastern part of country; 23 deaths reported

Associated Press

Scorching heat gripped the eastern third of the country on Monday, continuing a hot spell that has been blamed for at least 23 deaths — including an elderly Illinois woman found inside her 102-degree home.

Heat advisories were posted Monday from Kansas eastward through the Ohio Valley, and over parts of the Southeast. Temperatures throughout the region hit the 90s and reached triple digits with the heat index.

The weather was blamed on seven deaths in Cincinnati over the weekend, 11 deaths in Illinois in the past week and five in Missouri. The heat has also increased demand for air conditioning and tightened supplies of electricity.

The utility Cinergy, parent of PSI Energy which serves 655,000 customers in central and southern Indiana, said it would interrupt electrical service on Monday to certain large-volume customers under special contracts to reduce electricity loads.

Forecasts say there's no immediate relief in sight.

Astronauts winding up short yet unexpectedly tough flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Eager to come home, space shuttle Columbia's astronauts Monday began winding up a flight that proved to be more demanding than expected, right from the start.

Engineers are anxious to get their hands on Columbia, due back Tuesday night. They want to know whether hydrogen fuel was leaking from an engine during liftoff, as photographs suggest, and what caused a short circuit five seconds into the flight.

Air Force Col. Eileen Collins, the first woman to command a U.S. space flight, had one last challenge ahead of her: a tricky nighttime landing. Space shuttles have landed in darkness only 11 times out of 94 flights.

NASA said neither equipment problem will affect Columbia's return.

"I can't wait to get home and get back to a normal life again," Collins said in a TV interview that linked her with her airline-pilot husband. "We do like to travel and I think being up here in the shuttle is the ultimate travel. It's a lot of work, though. I wouldn't exactly call it a vacation."

Pat Youngs told his wife that their 3 1/2-year-old daughter, Bridget, missed her

"She's had enough time with Dad," he said.

If the five-day mission ends late Tuesday as planned, it will be the shortest shuttle flight in nine years, excluding one cut short in 1997 by defective equipment.

That's all the time Collins and her crew needed to drop off the Chandra X-ray Observatory, with a few days left over in case of any problems with the telescope.

Chandra's release on Friday went smoothly, and the $1.5 billion telescope was in excellent condition in an orbit up to tens of thousands of miles high.

Columbia's launch, by contrast, was delayed twice and then marred by more problems. The shuttle and five astronauts made it safely to orbit, though a slightly lower one, possibly because of leaking fuel.

Engineers suspect hydrogen fuel may have been seeping from one of Columbia's three main engines throughout Friday's 8 1/2-minute climb to orbit. If the leak had grown, the engine could have shut down, forcing an unprecedented emergency landing in Florida or West Africa.

"The crew would have been ready to do whatever would have been needed," said Collins, 42, a former test pilot.

Judge rules tapes made by Cisneros mistress admissible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recordings secretly made by former Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros' ex-mistress may be used at his upcoming conspiracy trial, a federal judge ruled Monday, sweeping aside defense arguments that the tapes constitute "phony" evidence.

The tapes are at the heart of the independent counsel's case that Cisneros, while under consideration for a Cabinet post in the Clinton administration, conspired with one-time paramour Linda Jones to conceal details of his more than $250,000 in payments to her.

In his ruling, U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin rejected the defense's extensive effort to throw out the tapes, which captured conversations in which Cisneros and Ms. Jones discussed the payments.

The decision, permitting Independent Counsel David Barrett to use 22 tapes in their entirety and portions of four others, settles the last major issue remaining before Cisneros' September trial on conspiracy and obstruction of justice charges. He has pleaded innocent.

Sporkin's ruling follows a 13-day pretrial hearing on the tapes' admissibility, during which prosecutors, who initially pressed to use 34 of the 88 tapes that Ms. Jones recorded, scaled back their request to 26.

"The court finds that the vast majority of the tapes contain reliable and accurate representations of the conversations that occurred between (Ms. Jones) and Cisneros between April 1990 and December 1993," the judge wrote.

Cisneros "has presented no direct evidence that the voice on the tapes is not his, nor that the statements attributed to him are inaccurate," Sporkin added.

While allowing prosecutors the leeway to use 22 tapes in their entirety, Sporkin limited the use of four others, saying they bore signs of "obvious alteration."

During four days on the witness stand, Ms. Jones testified that she edited as many as 10 of the 88 tapes of her phone conversations with Cisneros that she later turned over to federal investigators.

She said she performed the editing — and destroyed all 88 originals — because she feared legal repercussions if she didn't delete passages in which she threatened to reveal their financial arrangement if Cisneros stopped paying her.

Treasury secretary urges global debt relief program for this fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — International financial leaders should agree in September on a program to provide debt relief to the world's poorest nations, Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers said Monday.

He said nothing, however, about selling some of the International Monetary Fund's gold reserves to help finance the effort, an idea running into mounting opposition in Congress and elsewhere.

In a speech to a development conference at the IMF, Summers said the world's wealthiest nations had to find "an appropriate way to finance this relief that would win broad international support."

Last month in Cologne, Germany, President Clinton and fellow world leaders unveiled an initiative to help ease the crushing debt burdens of the world's poorest countries, most of them in sub-Sahara Africa.

"What is important now is that we take the extra momentum that the Cologne commitments afford — to strengthen and accelerate these efforts and integrate them into a single package by the fall," Summers said in a speech to a development conference at the IMF.

"We believe that the international community ought to reach agreement on such a program at the annual meetings" of the 182-nation IMF and its sister organization, the World Bank, at the end of September.

City Council to lower property taxes

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council plans to lower taxes today at its twice-monthly meeting.

The city staff is recommending lowering ad valorem taxes from $0.654 to $0.652. Midland citizens, however, won't notice much difference.

The action will keep Midlanders from paying more taxes because of increased property values.

According to Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall of the Midland Appraisal District, property values in the city of Midland improved more than $100 million, compared to more than $100 million in lost property value for Midland County.

"Everybody but the city lost value," said Stegall. "The reason the city didn't lose any value is because they don't have very much mineral value."

The increased property values would have caused city property owners to pay more in ad valorem taxes because on average, property values increased by 3 percent. To counteract that, the city is proposing lowering the tax rate to collect about the same amount.

"The general parameters we received from the council was to hold the line on expenditures and to reduce the property tax where possible ... as long as we can do that without sacrificing city services," said Deputy City Manager Glen Hackler.

The city will receive an estimated $17,580,000 from 1999 property taxes. Hackler said the end result of improved property values and a lower tax rate will be a slight improvement in revenue. The proposed ad valorem tax collection for next year is $17,688,500 — $108,500 more than this year.

If the rate reduction is reduced, it would mark the fifth such in as many years.

In 1993, the city's ad valorem tax rate was $0.6793.

"It's gone down nearly three cents per $100 valuation in the last seven years," Hackler said. "This reflects a long-standing financial policy of the city to be fiscally responsible."

Midland property owners pay a total of $2.7242 per $100 valuation in property taxes. Of that, the Midland Independent School District gets $1.5287; the city, $0.654; Midland County, $0.2275; Midland College, $0.1633 and the Midland County Hospital District, $0.1507.

The City Council will meet at 10 a.m. today at City Hall.

Howard College may raise its tax rate to help teachers

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Howard College may raise its tax rate for the coming year.

"We must become competitive in faculty salaries," college President Cheri Sparks told the board at its Monday meeting. "Of the 50 community colleges in the state of Texas, we rank at the bottom or near the bottom in entrance- level salaries and salaries paid to our longtime faculty.

The board approved a $13 million preliminary budget that would allow pay raises for the college. In order to provide the funds for the new budget, it appears that the tax rate will increase three or four cents per $100 valuation. On a home valued at $40,000, it would mean an increase of about $18 a year. On a home valued at $100,000 it translates to about $38 in new annual taxes.

Board members pointed out in their discussion of the possible tax increase that the board has been hesitant to raise taxes in the past few years and this has caused the college to fall behind other colleges competing for teachers and administrators.

The Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf is, by legislative mandate, a part of Howard College. Its budget for the coming year has been raised from $2.336 million to $3.229 million for the 1999-2000 school year. There is no tax money involved in the SWCID budget; all funds come

How does your garden grow?

Garden honors wildflower buffs, illustrates 'water-wise' landscaping

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

There is beauty all around, even among the blooming weeds, which may not be that at all.

"Weeds are anything that's growing where you don't want it to be," said Kathleen Fields, president of the Llano Estacado (Staked Plains) chapter of the Native Plant Society of Texas. "A rose bush could be a weed, you know. Yes, a beautiful weed."

What to some folks may be weeds, undesirables in a field of roses, in concert may become a rainbow of flowering native plants proven vigorous in semi-arid West Texas.

Evidence of that is the local chapter's Jean and Aubrey Reid Garden at the Sibley Environmental Learning Center operated by the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District.

Flowers uplift the human spirit, said Jean Reid. With her husband of 55 years, she co-founded the 100-member Llano Estacado chapter, formerly known as the Midland Chapter of the Native Plant Society of Texas.

"I can get my religious experience by seeing a field of wildflowers," Mrs. Reid said.

The chapter's Reid garden features flowering plants that fare well in West Texas's semi-arid climate. The garden's plants, accustomed to the dry climate, include Indian blanket flower, the mealy-blue sage, the yellow-petaled chocolate daisy or brooch flower (which has a scent of chocolate), the coreopsis and the purple-cone flower.

The plants, all in harmony, are products of xeriscaping, which is a term derived from the Greek word "xero" meaning dry or dryness. Xeric refers to plants adapted to a dry climate. However, Mrs. Fields said that she had rather use the term "water-wise" because it is more to the point.

"People either don't know how to spell it (xeriscape), or they pronounce it incorrectly," figured Mrs. Fields, a master gardener who is chairman of the Water Conservation Task Force committee, designed to promote water conservation. That committee sprang out of the Permian Basin Master Gardeners program that is affiliated with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Any time you love something and are enthusiastic about it and share that with others, then you automatically are going to draw to you those people that are interested," Mrs. Fields said of her interest in native plants.

Mrs. Reid, who grew up amid flowers in the suburbs of Manhattan, N.Y., said that her family "always had real pretty flowers in the back yard and that sort of thing. Then I married a farmer," Aubrey Reid, who raised certified milo (grain sorghum) seed in Martin County.

"We learned everything together" about wildflowers and other native plants, she said.

Of their interest in xeriscaping, Mrs. Reid said, "We are concerned here in West Texas about the water playing out and we have got to conserve water, and natives take less water."

Reid recalled that his "mother liked

WCS is looking for New Mexico disposal site

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Although officially dismissed as only a rumor by a company spokeswoman, a company official confirmed Monday that Andrews-based Waste Control Specialists is looking for a New Mexico disposal site.

Susie Chase, spokeswoman for the radioactive waste company, claimed the stories about WCS looking for a disposal site in New Mexico are simply rumor.

However, Lea County Manager Dennis Holmberg and Mark Turnbough, contract consultant for WCS, both said the project has already been proposed to the Lea County Commission and is under consideration.

Holmberg said that Turnbough made a presentation at the commission's July 20 meeting in Lovington, N.M.

"If approved the site will be built on the Texas-New Mexico state line," Holmberg said. "It will be active for 100 years and employ 35 or 40 people."

When he learned that some WCS officials were claiming the bid was rumor, he said he would be willing to provide the official minutes as soon as they are approved.

Turnbough explained why WCS' intentions are in New Mexico and why the company is looking to that state to host a disposal site.

"We are a Texas-based company and we would like to stay in Texas," Turnbough said. "This legislative session we tried get a law passed that would allow us to take waste from private industry, but were not able to get that going. Rather than waiting till 2001, we are just exploring some other options."

If the waste site is approved, Turnbough said the site will take all three grades of low-level waste, mixed grades

Midland County Housing Authority to ponder case of former client

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Housing Authority is to consider reinstating a former client — who may be homeless at the end of the month — into the federally subsidized housing program.

Reneé Martin, 34, the disabled mother of two sons, Michael, 15, and Christopher, 13, had left the program earlier this year after she said she was unable to find an affordable two-bedroom house. Under guidelines set by MCHA and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, she had to move from her three-bedroom house because her circumstances had changed.

"I don't care if I have to live in a truck," Ms. Martin said on Monday. "My kids have to have a home. "

Martha Mize, who has a background in subsidized-housing administration, pleaded for Ms. Martin's reinstatement in the program at Monday's meeting of the MCHA board.

"I know she was treated (unfairly)," Ms. Mize said later. "I know for a fact she was. Her case was not handled properly. My understanding was that she was verbally terminated from the housing authority because she could not find a suitable unit under the FMR (fair market rent)."

Barring intervention, Ms. Martin will be "homeless at the end of this month, and that is our biggest concern for her and her children," Ms. Mize said.

Ms. Mize formerly was MCHA assistant director under the administration of Jerrie Ann Westmoreland and later was interim director. She said she had headed up a comparable HUD program in El Paso.

Medferd Owen, a Midland lawyer who is MCHA board chairman, said that Ms. Martin's files would be reviewed and would be open to her attorney, Midland lawyer Alan Moravcik, and to Ms. Mize.

"We don't destroy files; we don't destroy records," Owen assured Ms. Martin, who was represented by Moravcik and Ms. Mize and accompanied by Rose McGraw, a former MCHA housing inspector. "We will do what the (HUD) regulations" dictate.

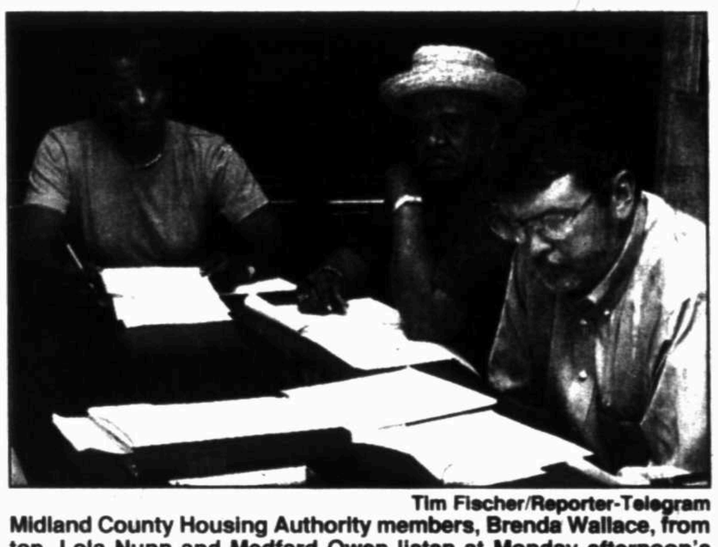

Any reinstatement would be governed by the rules and regulations of HUD, which funds the $2.2 million MCHA subsidized-housing program for about 427 low-income households.

Ms. Martin, a divorcee, was ordered to move to a two-bedroom house after her household number was reduced from four to three following the death in 1998 of her 8-year-old daughter, Amanda, who died following a swing-set accident.

"They did not give her an extension" to locate an affordable two-bedroom house, Ms. McGraw said. "And they should have."

Dressing just like Marilyn Manson is not an expression of individuality

By Emily Baker

People have always accused me of having no common sense. I never thought "Seinfeld" was funny. I have never seen the movie "Scream." I don't like Taco Bell.

Baker

But shall we consider other examples to determine what the lack of common sense could be?

The newest trend among my peers is establishing the good ol' individuality. What cracks me up is the fact that establishing individuality is trendy. If it's trendy, everybody is doing it, and if everybody is doing it, it isn't that individual.

But to me what is even more ironic is the fact that establishing individuality looks the same on most everybody.

I was bored one morning and was going through the channels on television. It was around lunch time and I have never much been a fan of soap operas. Nothing was on but soap operas and "Maury Povich."

The theme of the show was scary dressers and each one claimed they were establishing their individuality. Funny how each one looked the same and how each one said they modeled themselves after Marilyn Manson. If one is to model one's self after another person, it is mimicry, copying, replication, repetition, imitation, and mockery. In other words, if it's somebody else's idea, it isn't individual.

I am an advocate of individuality and consider myself to be rather individual. I was ridiculed by many all through my childhood because I was a bit different. But I would like somebody to explain to me how dressing exactly like somebody else establishes individuality.

The other types of people I can't understand are those who are responsible for car sun shades having labels that say, "Remove before driving."

Americans' common sense is on the decline. No decline, you say? Try this one on for size. I found a label on a chocolate box that says, "To best enjoy creamy centers, bite in half."

Here are a few more labels that have to come from the decline of American common sense: "contents might be hot after microwaving" found on popcorn bags; miniature toy labels that say, "might contain small parts;" "do not use while sleeping" label that was once found on a hair dryer; and one of my favorites is the "do not consume" labels on the silicon baggies found inside shoes and wallets. How many of us have ever had the desire to eat something we found in a shoe?

But perhaps to prove that American common sense is on the decline, I have an example that nothing can beat. This is a bit disgusting, but, this is a true story.

Not too long ago, a man treated some Russian tourists to a tour of a zoo. The man decided to show the Russians some American marvels and chose Crazy Glue as one of those marvels. To prove how well the glue worked, the man affixed his hands with the glue to a rhinoceros' behind. (When I first heard this story, I started to raise my eyebrows here, but it gets better.) About the time the man glued his hands to the rhino's rump, a laxative that the ill rhino had been given began to work, and the man was buried in some 30 gallons of rhino diarrhea. Zoo workers had to dig the man a breathing hole in order to keep him from suffocating until a solvent could be used to detach his hands from the rhino.

All I have to say is, "Yikes!" Oh, and by the way, the Russians decided not to bring home any Crazy Glue.

Blood service needs type O-negative

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — United Blood Service officials said the summer is having a rather vampirish effect on their current blood supply, especially type O-negative.

The reserve of type O-negative blood is quickly becoming depleting, said officials of the San Angelo-based organization.

"There are a number of things that can cause a sudden shortage of a particular blood type, especially when that type is a rather rare one," UBS Technician Daniel Maciel Jr. said Saturday during a blood drive.

"One of the main reasons can be a serious illness in one of the local hospitals, and the patient requires a large amount over a short period of time.

"Just last week, we had a patient in one of the hospitals that we supply use more than 40 units of type O-negative blood in the course of a weekend. That basically means 40 people had to donate just for that one case."

Maciel said a shortage of O-negative blood doesn't just endanger patients with that particular blood type.

"A lot of people aren't aware of this, but type O-negative blood is the only blood type doctors can give newborn infants. It's rather complicated to explain why, but what it all boils down to is the fact that type O is the purest blood type there is. Enzymes that can be harmful to newborns simply aren't present in that blood type, and giving an infant anything else can put their lives in jeopardy early on."

Maciel said that while O-negative is among the rarest blood types, it is also one of the highest in demand.

"Between patients who can only have O-negative blood and the newborns who have to have it, it's in pretty high demand. We simply don't have enough to cover all of the hospitals in our service area right now. People generally give blood less in the summer, mainly because they go off on vacation, or they just don't think about it, but this is the time of the year that we need it most."

Maciel said many residents who don't donate may be hanging their fate on a hinge that is less than reliable.

"It sounds pretty grim, but if you get into an accident or need blood, and you haven't donated yourself, there is always the chance that it won't be there when you need t most. If no one with type O-negative blood is coming out to donate, then that hour that you saved out of your day by not donating may turn into a three-hour wait when you need it."

UBS blood drives are scheduled for 9:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Wednesday at Scenic Mountain Medical Center and 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Thursday at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

UBS officials suggest making an appointment to keep waiting to a minimum. To make an appointment for the Scenic Mountain blood drive, call (915) 268-4960; and for the VAMC drive, call (915) 264-4824.

For more information call the UBS at (800) 756-0024.

HOUSE: Landlord would not fix hole in ceiling, gas leak

gram, Ms. Martin has been living in a mobile home on which she cannot pay rent, Ms. McGraw said.

Ms. McGraw said that she is eager for Ms. Martin and her sons "to be OK again. That's pretty much it."

Don Hellinghausen, a former MCHA board member, presented the MCHA board with photographs depicting the state of the three bedroom house where Ms. Martin had lived for the past four years until the end of May.

"I used to be on the board," Hellinghausen said. "And I just couldn't understand why" repairs were not made to the house by the landlord even after Ms. Martin had complained to the MCHA, Hellinghausen said.

"The responsibility lies with the housing authority," Hellinghausen said, to ensure that substandard features of any house in the program are corrected by the landlord. "The house had so many deficiencies."

The photographs he represented to the MCHA board depicted a hole in the living-room ceiling and a dangling thermostat.

Ms. Mize said that there was a natural-gas leak in the house.

"She had no heat all last winter," Hellinghausen said, except for burners on a cook stove. The Midland Fire Department had cut off gas to the oven from which the deadly carbon monoxide had been emanating, he said.

Ms. Martin — a former waitress, motel clerk, and grocery-story sacker who dropped out of school at age 15 to take care of her grandmother — cannot work, she said earlier this year, because of an ailing back. The pain interferes with her studying to complete her high-school education, she said.

The family survives, she said then, on the $500 monthly Supplemental Security Income (SSI) afforded her oldest son, who is dealing with attention-deficit syndrome.

Of that $500, she paid $173 that was her share of the former $600 rent, Ms. Martin said. What's left was mostly for food and other necessities.

The remainder of the rent was paid by HUD money to the landlord. The rent included fees for water, gas and electricity, she said.

Of the five-member MCHA board, present at the Monday meeting were Owen, Vice Chairman Lola Nunn, and Brenda Wallace. Not present were Raul Benavides and Dr. John Martinez.

On the MCHA staff are Sharon Nieto, executive director; Margo Ruiz, deputy director; John McAfee and Vanessa Gujardo, housing counselors and inspectors; Lana Dortch, financial director, and Valerie Ramirez, receptionist and waiting-list manager.

Ms. Nieto noted that Ms. Gujardo, Ms. Ruiz and Ms. Dortch were rehired in the reorganization of the housing authority. McAfee, retired school principal, and Ms. Ramirez were recently hired.

Early in the Monday session, Ms. Mize, who cited her credentials, said that she was "not even considered for an interview" for the deputy-director position, "and I want to know why," she said. "And with my qualifications, I was not even afforded an interview."

Owen noted that the MCHA board could not discuss or take action on anything, including Ms. Martin's case and Ms. Mize's complaint, that was not on the posted agenda in conforming with the Texas Opening Meetings Act.

In his nearly four years on the MCHA board, Owen said, "There has never been a time since I've been on the board that the people in the Midland County Housing Authority haven't been working as hard as they can work."

from the state.

Ms. Sparks reiterated that this preliminary budget was just that — preliminary. A public hearing on the budget is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Monday; it will be followed by a meeting of the board of trustees.

In other board business, trustees voted to continue the "Kids Night Out" program, which provides affordable child care for students at Howard College.

The board voted to contribute $15,000 in school funds to continue the program this year. Ms. Sparks told trustees that next year Howard College hopes to have grant funds for a full-fledged child care center.

The new center's name would be, The Educare Center. Not only would it provide affordable child care for students' children, it would also be used as a training facility for the various child care programs offered by the college.

Action on the college's financial participation in the demolition of the Permian Building in downtown Big Spring was tabled until next meeting.

GARDEN: Native plants can withstand dry heat of area summers to grow flowers all around the house" but that the "first time I noticed wildflowers was taking a hike on the Cap Rock" many years ago. "I was wanting to know the names of these flowers," said Reid, who consulted Frances Williams, a Midland naturalist, bird-watcher, and wildflower buff. "She was the first woman I met who knew anything about wildflowers," Reid said. "She told me the name of them."

Pat Adams, vice president of the society's local chapter, said that she "got my interest in native plants from Jean Reid.

"My husband (Ken Adams) and I had planted garden after garden, and everything was dying," she said. "We saw this article in the newspaper about Jean Reid and native plants eight or 10 years ago" about when the local chapter was organized in Midland. And through Mrs. Reid and the society, Mrs. Adams got "hooked on natives.

"I can put it (a native plant) into the ground, and it is going to live," Mrs. Adams said. "It is not going to die. We had a hot summer last summer; all of my plants are still living even though we went through the drought. That's what sold me on natives."

Among her favorite "water-wise" or xeriscape plants, of which there are "so many," are the lantana and the red yucca, which is "not really a yucca," she said. "I love the daisies (too). I do love pansies," which are not native to West Texas. "I do plant non-native things, but I make sure it's things that I know are well-adapted to this area."

Mrs. Fields, who said that she has "grown up all over the United States" and Canada since her father was in the military and has traveled in the Orient, said that "I have seen so many wonderful things in my life.

"And I just have a natural curiosity for everything, just everything that I find beautiful, and plants to me are beautiful," Mrs. Fields said.

Architect's vision seeking buyer looking for a change of perspective

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — John Anton Lang has a deal for someone truly looking for a change of perspective.

Lang, 61, is giving up his three-level, 570-square-foot office tucked away on wooded lot in Jacksonville in East Texas.

What makes it unique is that it's a cube that rests on one of its corners.

"I really don't have a use for it anymore," he explains. "I like to look at it, but to me it's just a big piece of sculpture."

Lang, who lived for two years in the building, says it would make a great home or studio for an artist or "anyone with a little imagination." He'd like to see the office moved to a more visible site so it could do for itself something it never quite did for his arthitecture business: attract customers.

Lang decided to sell the place after his job as a designer at NASA's National Scientific Balloon Facility in Palestine relegated architectural pursuits to a back burner.

When Lang erected his "wood sculpture" in 1977, it was his way of announcing his eclectic vision, honed in Houston (where he studied at the University of Houston) and imported back to his hometown.

Standing like a UFO landing pod amid a quiet, middle-class neighborhood, the office beckoned rubberneckers and curiosity-seekers, if few paying clients.

"To this day people stop out front and take photographs," he says. "Some of them are brave enough to come up and knock on the door."

The place features skylights, polished pine floor, hide-away drafting tables, blueprint storage, a counter-weighted trap door ramp and built-in portraits of silent film actress Theda Barr.

His real estate agent, Vicki Powell, says that while there's been no lack of callers seeking tours of the mysterious structure, she has yet to find a buyer. Ms. Powell admits it will take a rather unique person to purchase such a unique property, which has been listed at $35,000.

"He (Lang) is just a little ahead of his time when it comes to design," she says.

Ms. Powell's remark is certainly meant as a compliment. Lang designed her home, which she calls "one of the finest in Jacksonville."

It was Lang's reputation and technical skills that helped him eek out a living in the Piney Woods, an area where traditional architecture predominates. During his 20 or so years of self-employment, Lang created numerous residences, offices, shopping centers and even airplane hangars. But few of those projects reflected his ambitions and aesthetics the way his diamond-shaped office-sculpture did.

Luck, carefully calculated decisions aid Bush's journey

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — In a lightning-fast emergence as the clear leader for the Republican presidential nomination, Texas Gov. George W. Bush has benefited from a series of events — some pure luck, others carefully calculated.

The first — and most basic — was to stay out of the fray at a time when others rushed in last year. Bush said he had to stay at home — first to campaign for re-election as Texas governor and then, after a landslide victory in November, to keep watch while the Texas Legislature was in session. He said he would not start campaigning until this summer, though the hustings were crowded in important early states like Iowa and New Hampshire.

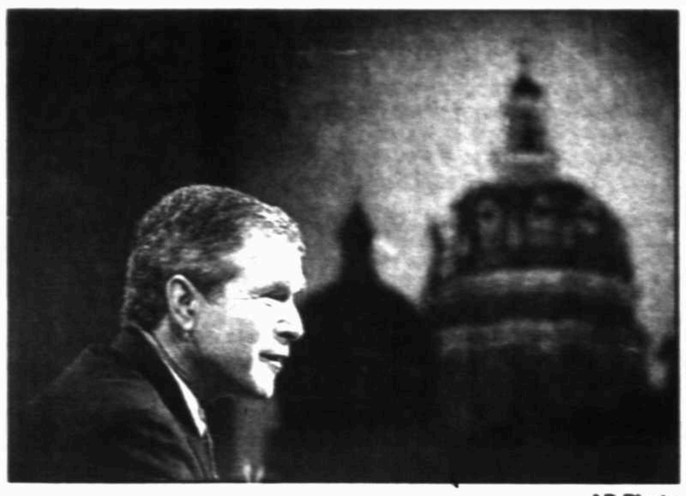

"There is a sense in presidential politics that familiarity breeds contempt," said consultant Ralph Reed, architect of much of Bush's strategy. "There is a time and a place to pet the pigs and kiss the babies, but that comes a little bit later."

While Bush sat on the sidelines marking time, no other GOP candidate was able to catch fire and momentum. That would have put pressure on Bush to move.

"There was a time when Elizabeth Dole was ahead in New Hampshire, but she didn't do anything to push the envelope," said Lee Miringoff, director of the Marist Institute for Public Opinion.

In polling, in money and in backing from the Republican establishment, Bush has built a near-overwhelming edge for the GOP nomination, and early polls show him well ahead of Vice President Al Gore, the Democratic front-runner.

"He seems to be sort of all things to all people," said Larry Hugick, director of political and media polls for Princeton Survey Research. "Everybody can find something in him they like."

AP Photo

Texas Gov. George W. Bush speaks during the taping of the "Iowa Press" show at the Iowa Public Television studios July 23. Bush has made a lightening-fast ascent to become the leader for the Republican presidential nomination.

He said Bush was able to seize on a national mood, coming from outside Washington at a time when the country was weary of Beltway scandals such as President Clinton's affair with White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

"Maybe to some degree George W. Bush is the right guy to follow in the wake of Monicagate," Hugick said. "Even though he's got the name, he isn't a Washington insider."

Bush capitalized on a second trend from last fall's elections, when the GOP lost seats in Congress but 31 governors, a solid majority, were Republicans.

"Really what's happened is there is a shift in visibility and recognition based on performance of the governors who have been able to accomplish things," said Montana Gov. Marc Racicot, an early Bush backer.

Bush skillfully parlayed his ties to the governors into an important cornerstone of his campaign.

Not coincidentally, the 1998 elections also led to the resignation of then-Speaker Newt Gingrich, a potential rival who probably could have matched Bush's prodigious fundraising skills.

With congressional Republicans in retreat, the power brokers of the Republican Party began looking outside Washington for hope. With his high poll standings, Bush was an obvious first choice.

"I think right now with the Republican rank and file, and many conservatives, there's an incredible desire and in some cases a zeal to win," said Greg Mueller, a consultant allied with publisher Steve Forbes. "The pure fact that he's beating Al Gore in all the polls is propping up his campaign."

Bush also is running a different kind of campaign. While building campaign organizations in states which hold important early tests, Bush also is spending time developing networks throughout the country.

Governors have been key to that, and Michigan Gov. John Engler headed an effort to bring them into the fray.

"A lot of governors don't have national recognition but they have in their respective states ... great credibility," said Engler. "These are key swing states and there's a base to build on."

Engler aide John Truscott described a recent Bush trip to Detroit.

"They basically turned the organization over to us," Truscott said. "We chose the event, we chose the location, we chose the people. They turn it over to the governors because the governors know how to win."

Bush is No. 1 in fund raising. His $37 million is double Gore's take for the first half of the year, and 10 times more than his nearest GOP rival.

"His ability to take the whole Republican fund-raising establishment and to deny it to everyone else is what is unique," said Brian Kennedy, who runs Alexander's campaign.

That is key, given the compressed campaign schedule.

"With the new schedule you're forced to have a king's ransom in the bank to be competitive," said Notre Dame political scientist Robert Schmuhl. Bush's "king's ransom" is $30 million in the bank, dwarfing all others.

His rivals say things will change as Bush gets greater exposure.

"People who are for him are really soft," said consultant John Maxwell, allied with Forbes. "He's still in the honeymoon period."

Study: Antitheft systems appear safe for people using heart devices

DALLAS (AP) — People with implanted defibrillators can walk through antitheft systems like those at stores and libraries without fear of getting an extra shock to the heart — if they don't linger, a study found.

The research follows last year's warning by the Food and Drug Administration that electromagnetic fields emitted by metal detectors and antitheft systems can in rare instances interfere with implanted devices such as defibrillators and pacemakers.

The new study looked only at defibrillators and antitheft systems, not metal detectors.

"There is absolutely no danger from a slow stroll through the gates, even if it takes 10 or 15 seconds," said Dr. Douglas Zipes, a professor of medicine at the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis.

However, if a person with a defibrillator takes longer, he or she could experience an unnecessary electric shock to the heart.

"Our advice: Don't lean, don't linger, don't worry," Zipes said.

The findings were published in Tuesday's issue of Circulation, a journal of the American Heart Association.

The research was funded in part by a grant from an electronics company that makes antitheft systems.

Implanted defibrillators, which cost about $25,000 each, send electrical impulses to slow down or speed up a patient's heart, depending on what's needed. Pacemakers, at about $5,000 each, strictly speed up slow-beating hearts.

> 'Our advice: Don't lean, don't linger, don't worry'
> — Dr. Douglas Zipes, professor of medicine at the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis

Researchers looked at 169 patients with implanted defibrillators and found no problems with a normal walk through the security gates.

But when patients stood within 6 inches of the antitheft systems for two minutes, seven of the 169 experienced problems with their implants that indicated they had or might have gotten an unnecessary shock.

An estimated 400,000 people have implanted defibrillators.

An expert not involved in the study, Dr. Lewis A. Lipsitz of Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged at Harvard Medical School, said: "It's reassuring and comforting that (defibrillators) will not be falsely triggered by common security devices that people walk through every day."

Woman becomes missing children advocate after granddaughter was kidnapped

SAGINAW (AP) — Four months ago, Audrey Sanderford didn't own a computer. Strangers didn't pay her telephone bill. She didn't attend funerals for children she didn't know.

Today, the 62-year-old grandmother organizes support groups. She visits crime scenes so distraught parents can cry on her shoulder. She listens to callers from across the country concerned about missing children.

Mostly, though, she looks for her 6-year-old granddaughter, Opal Jo Jennings, who was kidnapped from the front yard of the family's modest house in this town of 12,000 people.

Thick pink ribbons and bows knotted around trees and attached to the front of the house sway in the warm summer breeze, a reminder of the bouncy, blue-eyed kindergartner. A man sporting a ponytail and driving a dark car snatched Opal on March 26 while she and her playmates messed with an ant hill near the curb.

A sign posted on the Sanderford lawn reads "We love you Opal." A Little Tikes coupe sits idle in the grass along with a red wagon and a tricycle. Children's crayon drawings of sunshine, flowers and the girl's name cover the front door.

Inside, yellow crime scene tape hangs over Opal's bedroom door. Only recently did police let the family into the room where investigators collected hair samples and fingerprints and tried to preserve the girl's scent for tracking dogs. Stuffed animals — many from well-wishers — fill the shelves of a tall, plastic bookcase. A pint-sized rocking chair and play kitchen sit near the walls.

"We'll move stuff off her bed when she gets here," said Mrs. Sanderford who with her husband became Opal's legal guardians last fall.

"I still think she's alive, and unless somebody brings me a body or some DNA or something, honestly, there's no way I can bury her," Mrs. Sanderford said. "I'm not going to give up on her. How would she feel if she came home, even years from now, and I said, 'Well, we thought you were dead, so we buried you.' 'You can't do that.'"

Since her nightmare began, Mrs. Sanderford has undergone a transformation — from a nurse who retired to watch Opal and two other grandchildren to a media savvy advocate for missing children.

"Now that I know there's so many of them, I have to try to find them," she said.

The change is not unusual for parents whose children have been kidnapped or murdered.

John Walsh has waged a high-profile anti-crime campaign since the abduction and murder of his 6-year-old son, Adam, in 1981. Walsh hosts the television series "America's Most Wanted."

Marc Klaas founded the Polly Klaas Foundation after his 12-year-old daughter was snatched from her Petaluma, Calif., home in October 1993.

Colleen Nick started the Morgan Nick Foundation after her 6-year-old daughter was abducted from a ballpark in Alma, Ark., in June 1995.

Both foundations work with families of missing children, disseminate safety information to build safer communities and support legislative changes to protect children.

"Some people are able to get up and fight back, and other people don't. There's no right or wrong answer to your reaction or what you choose to do if your child is missing," said Mrs. Nick, a Justice Department consultant who speaks at law enforcement seminars about child abduction.

Mrs. Sanderford, who helped search for Morgan when she lived about 30 miles from where the girl was kidnapped, contacted Mrs. Nick after Opal's abduction. They've since spent many nights together on the telephone.

"You can talk to people who love you and care, but they don't know what you're going through," Mrs. Nick said of the pain, frustration and guilt.

Since Opal disappeared, Mrs. Sanderford has been to Washington for National Missing Children's Day. She plans to write part of a book on missing kids. And she'll travel to help establish a support group and explain the Amber Plan, a kidnapping alert used by television and radio stations in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and named for a 9-year-old Arlington girl who was abducted and murdered in January 1996.

She spends hours each month on the telephone seeking help and helping others in similar situations, racking up hefty bills that are paid from a fund Saginaw residents set up at a local bank to aid in Opal's recovery.

She uses a donated computer to get Opal's picture on the Internet, has distributed hundreds of flyers about Opal's disappearance and has landed her granddaughter's face on cash register receipts from the H-E-B Grocery chain, which has 257 stores in Texas.

"If I get her picture out there enough, one of these days somebody's going to see it and say, 'Hey, that kid lives down the street or in an apartment across the way. That kid is in my class,'" said Mrs. Sanderford, who wears a yellow button with Opal's picture under the word "Abducted."

"Or maybe Opal herself will say, 'That's me,' because some of these people brainwash these kids. They don't know who they are."

Mrs. Sanderford's thick Southern accent also has reached national audiences, from "Good Morning America" and "America's Most Wanted" to tabloid and syndicated talk shows.

Shortly after Mrs. Sanderford returned on an evening flight from a taping of the Sally Jessy Raphael show, she stayed up through the night to comfort a family in nearby Blue Mound whose 2-year-old daughter was missing and later found drowned in the backyard pool.

Days later, she attended the toddler's funeral and grieved with the family at a small memorial service.

"I get my grounding, I suppose you'd say, or stability, going out there trying to help other people, by focusing what I'm doing to something positive," she said minutes after the observance. "I can't allow myself to just sit and concentrate on the negative aspect in all this. If I did, I'd probably end up committing suicide, because it's so, on the surface, so hopeless. But there are recoveries made."

Her husband, Robert, also remains optimistic. Sometimes he considers leaving work to search for his granddaughter, although he admittedly doesn't know where to look.

"It just seems like she vanished in thin air," he said. "Seems like there's no clues or nothing."

Police and federal investigators have received more than 2,300 tips. Saginaw detective James Neale said he still has a "large stack" of tips to review and is looking for the one that will provide the break.

"We owe it to Opal to maintain a positive attitude," he said.

Whatever the outcome, Mrs. Sanderford wants Opal home.

"Worse than death is not knowing — never knowing," she said.

CASA DE AMIGOS 35th Anniversary

Nancy Jordon

I first became involved at Casa de Amigos in the early seventies with Action Line, a volunteer information and referral service funded by the Midland Association of Churches. Casa's Executive Director, Evangeline Rodriguez Catano agreed to house the program at the agency' s facility at 921 N. Dallas. We answered calls only on week day mornings and Casa was not open until afternoon at that time. We averaged about 30 calls per week. The Salvation Army and later the Human Relations Council and the Volunteer Center of Midland started providing this service and Action Line was disbanded.

Now, almost thirty years later, Casa houses INFORMATION AND REFERRAL MIDLAND, a phone help line staffed by a certified I&R Specialist, Juanita Castilleja. It was placed at Casa in 1993 after a community program review conducted by United Way of Midland. Over 3,000 calls are received annually with housing, utilities and food being the top three requests. Considered a "hub" by the Governor's I&R Task Force in 1993, the program is now part of the Texas I&R Network Task Force and is considered an Area Information Center. Exploration is currently underway to serve needs throughout the Permian Basin by making the database available to customers at the One Stop Centers of the Workforce Development Board.

My involvement with Action Line led to my serving on the Board of Directors of Casa de Amigos beginning in 1979. I served as president in 1983-84 when the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation funded our first expansion at our Garden Lane facility making it possible for Casa to house the Junior League's Children's Dental Program; was acting director in 1987 while Lael Cordes-Pitts the Executive Director was on maternity leave and chairman of the architect committee during the second major expansion of the facilities thanks to another gift from the Mabee Foundation. Now employed part time as Administrative Assistant, I continue to enjoy being involved in this dynamic agency.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, July 27, 1999:

You'll find this a welcome, easy year. Enjoy the rewards of living, rather than creating more news or happenings. Work and day-to-day life become even more important. Look at the quality of your life, then design it accordingly. Travel plays a big role in your choices. If you are single, you might like your life just as it is! Pick and choose partners and friends as you wish. You might be drawn to someone quite exotic. If attached, get into your relationship. Enjoy what life offers you, as a couple. CAPRICORN is diligent and always helpful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Others have a lot of opinions that you would actually prefer not to hear, but listen you will! Unfortunately, what is established today will simply need to be done one more time. Don't waste your efforts!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Some news certainly piques your interest, but how logical and precise your source is may be a different issue! Whatever you hear, consider it gossip, for the moment. Maintain a perspective. More information will be revealed, given time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your tiff with a partner or associate might seem to be in the process of resolving itself. However, you'll need more solid agreement before this matter comes to its true conclusion. You may not be as sure of yourself as you think.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Don't let others shake you up or interfere with your present course of action. Right now, there is an element of instability that makes others change their minds later. It might be difficult to grasp all the information given to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Get as much work done as possible; soon, you won't want to do anything but play. An even pace helps you accomplish your "to do" list. Make things simple; don't tackle anything too difficult. At the moment, a lot might need to be done over.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Allow your fun side to come out. Handling serious matters ultimately won't work. You might need to redo a project if you attempt anything heavy. Allow your creativity to flourish. Join friends and loved ones. The good times roll, as long as you don't have a set agenda.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Family and a loved one need your time. Loosen up and allow more laughter into your life. Not everyone sees events the same way you do. Trying to convince another to think like you do is a futile act.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Make calls; leave messages. Do whatever you want, as long as it doesn't have too serious a purpose. Do more for fun. Allow more friskiness and joy into your life. Conversations lead you in another direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Expenses go out of whack. This isn't the first or the last time. Resolutions and decisions just won't stick right now. Don't worry — simply handle the problem in question. Others have a lot to share; listen to their "war stories."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Mellow is the way to go. Don't let issues or people worry you. Take a break and lighten up. Consider possibilities. Sincerity and directness demonstrate that you are coming from an honest place. Others respond in kind. Do what you need to make this day light and easy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Take a break; if you can, take a personal day. Indulge yourself in some dreaming and thinking. Caring abounds among friends, especially if you share your vulnerabilities. Discussions are animated and direct. Think about a decision, but don't make it right now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Friends surround you. Take advantage of the moment and attention. The pace is hectic, but make time for enjoying life. Make plans, but don't take action just yet. Your ability to think through decisions isn't all there right now.

Opening lead: Four of ♡ Treat this hand as a play problem. Cover the East-West cards and decide how you would play five clubs after the lead of the four of hearts.

We do not know whether North intended two spades as a psychic bid or as a help-suit trial bid. Regardless of its intent, South should have rebid two no-trump to show the heart stopper and the best game would have been reached without further ado. When South elected to drone on in clubs, however, the pair landed in the inelegant minor-suit game, but received a reprieve when West made the normal lead of partner's suit. Can you take advantage of this to make 11 tricks?

First, you need to establish and cash a long diamond, so you need three entries to dummy. Next, you will have to ruff a loser on the table, so a 2-2 trump split is also necessary. Win the ace of hearts, cash the ace and king of diamonds, discarding a spade from hand, then ruff a diamond high, both defenders following. Now lead a club and finesse the eight!

When this succeeds, you are almost home. Ruff another diamond high, cross to the ace of clubs and, when the suit breaks evenly, you can claim 11 tricks. Discard another spade on the good diamond, concede a heart and, since you can ruff your remaining heart on the table, you lose only one trick in each major.

What if the trump finesse were to fail? Then you go down several tricks, but it is a small price to pay for a chance to make your contract — and to be written up in the bridge columns.

Prince William puts the 'pedal to the metal'

HIGHGROVE, England — Prince William showed off his new driving skills Monday, braking just in time in front of photographers assembled on the gravel driveway of his father's country estate.

William reached the minimum age for getting a driving license — 17 — last month, received a car from his father, Prince Charles, as a birthday present, and hopes to pass his driving test this summer.

The son of Princess Diana drove a borrowed Ford Focus car for the photo session, and a police driving instructor sat in the passenger seat.

For security reasons, the family has not disclosed what kind of car he got as a gift.

"He's going very well," Prince Charles said. Then he acknowledged, "I haven't actually had the experience of being driven by him."

LOS ANGELES — "Odd Couple" and "Grumpy Old Men" star Walter Matthau, hospitalized 2 1/2 months ago with pneumonia, should be back home soon, his agent says.

The 78-year-old actor was taken to an undisclosed Los Angeles-area hospital on May 16.

"I saw him yesterday and he's fine," Leonard Hershan said Monday. "He's recuperating. He should be going home very soon."

He recently completed work on the movie "Hanging Up," starring Diane Keaton, Meg Ryan and Lisa Kudrow.

Walter Matthau's agent says the actor should be home soon.

LOS ANGELES — Ike Turner wants to set the record straight.

The rhythm-and-blues entertainer has written a book, "Takin' Back My Name," that is his rebuttal of ex-wife Tina Turner's book and movie "What's Love Got to Do With It?" Ms. Turner's book accused him of abuse.

"That movie gave me high notoriety. It did me no good," Turner said. "Now people see Tina as a woman scorned. Women, when they get mad, they turn on you. They might say anything or do anything."

Turner's book, due out in September, offers graphic accounts of drug abuse and obsessive sexual activity that started when he was 6.

Turner, who was one-half of the Ike and Tina Turner Revue in the 1960s, said: "I'm not denying things, just telling my side of the story."

LOS ANGELES — Former "Melrose Place" stars Josie Bissett and Rob Estes are new parents.

Bissett, 28, gave birth to the couple's first child, Mason Tru Estes, on July 21 at a Los Angeles hospital, publicist Nancy Iannios said Monday.

Ms. Bissett is on the latest cover of Fit Pregnancy Magazine and serves as a spokeswoman for Neutrogena cosmetics. Since "Melrose" was canceled, Estes has been working with the WB network to develop his own series and has finished work in an independent movie, "Nostradamus."

The couple have been married since 1992.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — A year after a devastating fire at the Thomas Wolfe house, restorers are trying to make it possible to go home again.

"This is far from being a total loss," said Joe Oppermann, an architect with the firm Phillips and Oppermann of Winston-Salem, which is handling the restoration.

Some of the burned and soot-covered artifacts retrieved from the house have already been restored. Some things, like the front door with its scars from the firefighter's ax, will always wear reminders of the fire.

An arson fire raced through the home, made famous in Wolfe's 1929 novel, "Look Homeward, Angel," on July 24, 1998.

No arrests have been made.

LOS ANGELES — Richard Gere gave a hand, and foot, to Hollywood.

The star of "Pretty Woman," "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "American Gigolo" stuck hands and feet in wet concrete Monday in the courtyard of Mann's Chinese Theatre.

Hundreds of cheering fans crowded 20-people deep behind barricades on Hollywood Boulevard to catch a glimpse of the actor.

Gere's new movie, "Runaway Bride," opens Friday. In it, he is reunited with his "Pretty Woman" co-star, Julia Roberts.

Lawsuit seeks to unravel mystery of long-lost rocket belt

HOUSTON (AP) — In 1995, a test pilot with a rocket contraption strapped to his back shot into the air and flew over the Houston Ship Channel like Buck Rogers for 28 seconds. The crowd went wild.

After the demonstration, one of the developers of the rocket belt put it in his trailer and drove off.

The rocket belt hasn't been seen since.

The demonstration was the first and last public flight of the RB-2000 rocket belt, one of only three such devices operational in the world.

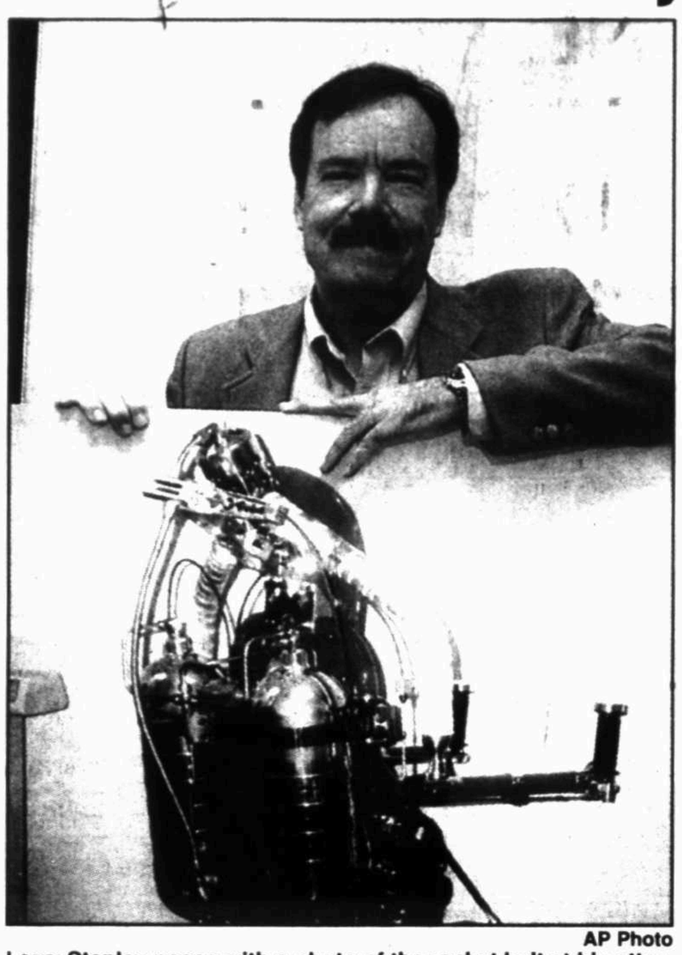

Four years later, accusations of murder and assault envelop the three men who collaborated to build the device.

One is dead, while another is a suspect in his slaying and faces a trial this week in a lawsuit brought by the third partner accusing him of absconding with their invention to keep the profits to himself.

In the midst of it all, the question remains: What happened to the rocket belt?

In the 1965 movie "Thunderball," James Bond straps on a rocket belt and quips that "no well-dressed man should be without one." It was the entertainment world's first glimpse of a real such gadget, which later appeared in dozens of commercials, movies and at special events such as the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

The size of a bulky backpack and weighing 120 pounds when fueled, the belt has two tanks filled with hydrogen peroxide and a third containing nitrogen. When the throttle is opened, a high-pressure stream blasts out two nozzles, providing the lifting thrust.

AP Photo

Larry Stanley poses with a photo of the rocket belt at his attorney's office in Houston Wednesday, May 12, 1999. The first and last public flight of the RB-2000 rocket belt occured in 1995. The belt has been missing since.

Bell Aircraft first developed the device in the early 1960s for the Defense Department, which wanted a rocket to improve soldiers' mobility. But is fuel capacity allowed for only a 20-second flight, making it impractical.

But others were intrigued and dreamed of building their own rocket machine. One such person was Brad Barker.

In 1991, Barker was working in Florida helping to maintain a rocket belt owned by a stunt man who flew the contraption at Disney World. Later that year, he contacted an old acquaintance, pilot and aeronautics buff Larry Stanley, about teaming up to build a belt.

As Stanley tells it, both men borrowed thousands from their mothers to buy the parts. Barker, he says, purchased the machinery, while Stanley worked to put it all together.

Joe Wright, a friend of Barker's who owned a car audio shop in Houston, offered them space at his business to build the belt. The rent was to be paid later, according to Stanley, after the belt was operational and making money.

In November 1994, that moment was near. The belt was ready for test flights. But suspicion already hung over the project.

Stanley believed Barker had been charging him at least twice what the parts and machinery cost and pocketing whatever money was left over.

Stanley confronted Barker. A fight broke out, and Barker beat his partner with a 4-pound hammer. Both men were charged with assault, though the charges against Stanley were dropped. Barker was convicted and placed on probation.

The partnership was over.

Wright quickly placed a lien on the rocket belt, claiming Stanley owed him back rent. Stanley never saw the belt again, and the last time anyone saw it publicly was at a 1995 National Basketball Association event in Houston, when Barker put it in his trailer and drove away.

In 1995, Stanley sued Barker and Wright, accusing them of conspiring to seize the belt "for their own personal use, benefit and monetary gain."

The case finally was set for trial last July. In a last-ditch effort to settle his part of the case, Wright agreed a few weeks before trial to contact Barker and try to learn the whereabouts of the rocket belt, according to Wright's former attorney, Ronald Bass.

A few days later, Wright was bludgeoned to death in his home.

Authorities questioned Barker but never charged him. Harris County sheriff's officials say he remains a suspect along with one other unidentified person.

Barker maintains his innocence and insists he has phone records proving he was out of state when Wright was killed.

"The sheriff's department has gone out of its way to try to associate the rocket belt with this murder," Barker says, "and it's got nothing to do with it whatsoever."

As for the rocket belt, Barker refuses to discuss its whereabouts. When asked whether he had it, he replied: "I could tell you yes, I could tell you no."

Stanley's lawsuit finally went to trial on Monday. But attorneys for he other side weren't there to present a defense, meaning a default judgment against them is likely after the judge hears Stanley's side.

Stanley is seeking reimbursement for the rental value of the rocket belt since December 1994 — an estimated $500,000 a year.

But Stanley says all he really wants is the rocket belt back.

"The only things that carry you through life are persistence and determination. So if I'm persistent and determined, I will recover that rocket belt," he says. "It has been four years, and I'm not anywhere close to giving up on it. (Barker) is going to have to bury it."

State unveils latest version of the FBI's Violent Criminal Apprehension Program

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials unveiled an updated FBI computer program Monday meant to allow law enforcement from across the nation to share evidence and analysis on violent crimes.

The state has been using the old Violent Criminal Apprehension Program for 10 years, and recently used it to link suspected serial killer Angel Maturino Resendiz to three murders, said Mike Scott, chief of criminal law enforcement for DPS.

"It's a great tool in not only identifying a common suspect but common cases. It was very beneficial in the Resendiz case," Scott said. "Even though we had the suspect, it started to bring in other cases that he may have been involved with."

Maturino Resendiz was indicted last week on a capital murder charge for the slaying of a Houston-area physician at her home last December. He remains jailed without bond.

The VICAP database compares violent crimes not only by possible forensic evidence but by similar characteristics such as the type of weapons and crime scenes.

The computer program has been significantly improved, including more sophisticated comparative capabilities, Scott said.

"What we have here is a new more user friendly system that has better databases in it," he said. "It's just an updated version with new technology and we're going to leverage that technology against the criminals."

The updated program has been significantly redesigned and can now also be utilized for case management and administration, said Robert Grant, FBI assistant special agent in charge in San Antonio.

The Department of Public Safety and the Austin Police Department are the first Texas agencies to receive the updated program, which state officials say could eventually be set up in police departments across the state.

"The cooperation of all law enforcement, working with tools such as the new VICAP, is the community's most effective strategy in holding violent criminals accountable and bringing them to the bar of justice," said Austin Police Department Chief of Police Stanley Knee.

DEAR ABBY

New family on block flunks neighborhood neatness test

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing on behalf of the residents in my development. We're middle-class citizens who take care of our homes. Our lawns are neat and trimmed and our flower beds are weeded. Our "stuff" is kept in garages, sheds or in our homes.

Van Buren

Last summer a new family moved into our neighborhood. They bought the first house you see when you enter our main street. Abby, the place is a mess! "Stuff" is all over the place (piles of junk left out over the winter). To their credit, a shed was started, but it was blown down after a few days and now the lumber just lies there.

Since their property backs up to the main road, they don't bother driving around the block to park - they drive through the yard! The tire ruts are now evident, and it detracts from our well-kept lawns. We can only imagine what has happened to property values. Any suggestions would be greatly appreciated. - DUMPED ON IN DELAWARE

DEAR DUMPED ON: I agree that if their property has become an eyesore, it could affect the value of other homes in the neighborhood. Inquire at City Hall whether or not there are codes or ordinances in place that restrict homeowners from leaving junk on their lawns. Then ask the offenders if they might like some help in cleaning up their yard, and offer to lend a hand. Perhaps some of the other neighbors would also like to help.

If that doesn't work, you and the rest of the property owners should consider starting a neighborhood association that will have some clout. And, of course, consult a lawyer who specializes in real estate law.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Jewish in Cincinnati," who offered a litany of ways in which Christians broadcast their religious beliefs.

He or she should move to metropolitan New York where entire malls are closed every Sunday because of "blue laws," and stores are closed on Saturdays because of strict Jewish beliefs. I give all of the aforementioned credit for honoring God. However, when "Jewish in Cincinnati" complains about Christmas music blaring from October to January, let's not confuse Christianity with consumerism. Half those offending stores and malls may not even be owned by Christians.

I grew up in an inner-city neighborhood in a small stretch of houses situated between a synagogue and a Jewish school. Every one of our neighbors had a strong sense of tolerance and caring. My grandma traded her Italian pastries with our Jewish neighbor for her delicious cheesecake. We manned the candy store, without thought of repayment, on high holy days for our Jewish neighbor. On Friday nights, my dad always turned off the lights at the synagogue.

It seems to me that we were more understanding and tolerant in years past. What are we really learning from Kosovo, or even Littleton, Colo.? So a comedian or celebrity needs to tell people he's Jewish. So what? It's his shtick! In the meantime, if you're traveling through Hashbrouck Heights, N.J., at Christmastime, you'll see my Roman Catholic church decorated with a nativity scene and a menorah. I think that's what makes America great! ROMAN CATHOLIC IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR ROMAN CATHOLIC: I agree, and it harkens back to a gentler time when America pictured itself more a melting pot and less a patchwork quilt. The world would be a more hospitable place if attitudes were more inclusive and less exclusive. I'm reminded of the song lyric, "What the world needs now is love." (End of sermon.)

Plano's Cory Landmark slides in safely under Midland Northern catcher Miles Walker to tie the game 2-2 in the fifth inning. Midland Northern went on to win the game 3-2 and advance to the 9-10 year-old Little League state tournament in Waco.

Midland Northern survives shootout against Plano National for state berth

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

While you are sitting around trying to pick out a hero, just let it be known that the Midland Northern All-Stars are headed for the 9-10 year-old Little League State Tournament in Waco Friday.

Northern survived a 3-2 shootout with Plano National at Butler Park Monday night in the Section I final by keeping Plano from scoring with the bases loaded and only one out in the bottom of the sixth and final inning of play.

But picking your hero might be even tougher than sitting through the gut-wrenching sixth inning.

One vote has to go to Robert Brosig, who gave Northern the 3-2 lead in the top of the sixth with a sacrifice fly to right field to score Reid Redman with what proved to be the winning run.

"I was hoping I could get a hit (with Redman on third base)," Brosig said. "I guess the fly ball was good enough."

But that was only the beginning of clutch play. In the bottom of the sixth, Northern relief pitcher Brandon Williamson loaded the bases with only one out. That's when it got interesting.

That brings us to Hero No. 2. Plano's Bobby Paulk lined a screaming shot to left field where Chad Jordan was residing. If the ball gets past him, Northern probably loses. If he makes the catch, Plano doesn't score because he isn't playing deep. Jordan, of course, did what a hero does. He amazingly caught the screamer for the second out.

"I guess I just got lucky," Jordan said. "I knew if I didn't catch it, we might lose the game."

And then Williamson became Hero No. 3 by striking out Cory Landmark for the third out and the state berth. Landmark had previously singled off Williamson and had two hits in the game. Bases loaded, dangerous hitter, no sweat here. But that isn't the way Williamson saw it.

"When the bases were loaded (and only one out) and I saw that ball hit (by Landmark), I thought we were out of it," Williamson said. "Thank goodness Chad (Jordan) was there. He made the play."

Northern is now 9-1 in All-Star play and coach Dale Redman

No Tatum-type night at All-Star hoops contest

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

FORT WORTH — Charles Tatum didn't need the statistics to tell the story of his night at the Southwestern Bell High School Coaches All-Star Game Monday night at Wilkerson-Greines Coliseum. He needed just a few words.

"It was not a typical Charles Tatum night," admitted Tatum.

Playing with some of the best players in the state and in front of his future coach (University of Arkansas head coach Nolan Richardson), Tatum, an all-state guard and 1998 state tournament MVP, scored nine points to go with five steals, two assists, one rebound and seven turnovers as his North team defeated the South All-Stars 99-92.

"I wasn't the guard he recruited tonight," Tatum said.

Tatum expected more out of himself on this night as did most high school basketball fans. Tatum spent three seasons tormenting some of the best players in the state at Midland High. Monday night, that wasn't the case. However, Richardson isn't putting much stock on what he saw in Tatum's 21 minutes of action. Richardson, who has coached a National Championship team at Arkansas, has a good idea of what is coming his way.

"His high school credentials speak for itself," Richardson said. "I don't look at this. I go to all-star games to support my kids. Most games, whoever shoots it first, anyway.

COWBOYS TRAINING CAMP '99

Jones plays hardball with draft picks

By Jaime Aron

WICHITA FALLS— Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones once thought he was beating the system by signing rookies before the draft was even over. Now he's going to the other extreme.

The Cowboys opened training camp Monday without having signed their top two picks and a sixth-round selection. Three other rookies agreed to deals Monday and late Sunday.

Jones became rather animated as he detailed his new strategy during opening remarks of a kickoff news conference at Midwestern State University. He brought up the subject himself, asked his own questions and by the end was unconsciously rapping his knuckles on a table for emphasis.

"We want to drive this process; we don't want to be driven," said Jones, explaining that those mid-draft negotiations of yesteryear ended up costing the team dollars against the salary cap. "We deliberately set it up so we'd be in the position we're in now."

The unsigned players are defensive lineman Ebenezer Ekuban, offensive lineman Solomon Page and receiver Mar Tay Jenkins. Last-minute deals were struck with linebacker Dat Nguyen, receiver Wane McGarity and defensive lineman Peppi Zellner. Seventh-round pick Mike Lucky, a tight end, was the only early bird, signing last week.

"It seriously hurts a rookie not to be in training camp the very first practice and not to be here for the very first meeting," Jones said. "You say, 'Doesn't it hurt the team?' Yes it does, but not as much as if we gave them what the agent for the rookie wanted us to be giving him."

While Jones is normally a trendsetter in NFL business moves, he's joining the crowd on this one. Ekuban, the 20th overall pick, was one of 20 first-rounders without contracts as of early Monday. His market value is still being determined as the picks closest to him who have signed were Nos. 18 and 25.

Dallas reportedly is offering Page a four-year deal with a $780,000 signing bonus; he'd like $50,000 to $100,000 more or a

Canada wins wild baseball game against Americans

By Rick Gano

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Who needs major leaguers when you get excitement, controversy and an incredible ending?

After a 30-minute delay over a rulings dispute, Canada scored four runs in the bottom of the 11th inning Monday to stun the United States 7-6 in baseball at the Pan American Games. The winning run scored when former Texas Tech Red Raider Stubby Clapp's routine popup with the bases loaded and two outs fell in short left field because of a miscommunication between American fielders.

"It's hard to lose any time when you feel like you played hard all game long, you go up by three and go two outs," said U.S. manager Buddy Bell, whose team of minor league players was not made available to comment after the loss.

"You just pretty much figure things will work out the way you want them to.

"But I have been in this game long enough to know better than that. We are quite disappointed at this point, but we will get over it."

Shortstop Travis Dawkins seemed to be under the ball when left fielder Shawn Gilbert called him off. But Gilbert couldn't reach the ball, and the Canadian team had a critical victory in the tournament that serves as a qualifier for the 2000 Olympics.

Canada tied it on a three-run homer by Andy Stewart off U.S. pitcher Scott Stewart earlier in the 11th.

Canadian manager Ernie Whitt was ejected in the top of the inning during a lengthy argument over rules.

After the U.S. team went ahead 6-3 on Jason Hardtke's two-run homer, Whitt walked to the mound to talk

Baseball umps sue leagues

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Less than two weeks after saying they would quit en masse, umpires turned around and sued baseball Monday for the right to withdraw their resignations.

In a 14-page complaint filed in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, the Major League Umpires Association also accused the American League and the commissioner's office of saying they intend to withhold termination pay of up to $400,000 per umpire.

Umpires, whose resignations are set to take effect Sept. 2, also claimed baseball has offered them up to $2 million in future gains if they join a dissident group in the union that is trying to fire its negotiator, Richie Phillips.

They also said several baseball officials are spreading "false and misleading statements to umpires about deadlines to accept resignations, deadlines to offer rescissions of resignations and deadlines to reject rescissions of resignations."

Umpires chose the resignation tactic because their current labor deal has a no-strike clause, and they fear owners would lock them out after it expires.

However, their position has been weakened by the decisions of 23 of 32 AL umpires who say they will stay on. Only three of their 36 NL counterparts say they will remain.

Owners have hired more than 20 new umpires from the minor leagues as of Sept. 1. The Triple-A umpires had been working as vacation fill-ins in the major leagues.

While no additional withdrawals of resignations were received Monday, one baseball official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said several NL umpires had called baseball to say they were considering reversing course and staying on.

"We're partially divided right now and hopefully we can all come together at some point," said NL umpire Bruce Froemming, a union board member. "But as far as what

Record-breaking Piatt leads 'Hounds to victory vs. Caps

Staff Report

SHREVEPORT, La. — Record chasing Adam Piatt put up some more big numbers here Monday night as the Midland RockHounds outlasted the Shreveport Captains, 11-9.

Piatt

Piatt was 3-for-4 with a two-out grand slam home run and an RBI double that made him the Midland Double-A all-time franchise leader in extra base hits with 71.

Piatt breaks the mark of 70 set only last year by Keith Luuloa of the Midland Angels.

His homer broke his own single season record with his 33rd of the year. His five RBIs moved him into third place on the all-time franchise record with 109. Piatt is shooting for the 123-RBI mark and he still has 36 games left to play.

And while home runs are tough to come by in Shreveport, where pitching usually dominates, Midland also got a solo homer from Cody McKay, who was 3-for-4 and Jeff DaVanon, who was 3-for-5, hit a two-run shot.

Also, Shreveport went out of the yard four times in a long ball race. Damon Minor hit two home runs while the Caps got two more from Guiseppe Chiaramonte and Chris Magruder.

While the two batting lineups where finding the fence, the key to the win for the 'Hounds probably came from Luis Vizcaino, who pitched 3 2/3 innings in relief, giving up only one run, a home run shot to Minor.

Vizcaino, normally a starter for Midland, got into the game as a reliever after returning to the team after a one-game stint with the Oakland Athletics. He has had four consecutive strong outings for Midland. Andy Kimball got his second save of the year. Edwin Corps (4-4), who gave up the grand slam to Piatt, took the loss.

Midland and Shreveport do not play each other again this season. They split both six-game series and stand 6-6 for the season against each other.

Midland has two days off for the Texas League All-Star break. The All-Star game is in Tulsa tonight. Representing Midland are Piatt, T.R. Marcinczyk, Josue Espada and DaVanon.

Mieske's blast key in Astros' win

DENVER (AP) — Matt Mieske's second homer of the game keyed a four-run, ninth-inning rally that carried the Houston Astros to their 12th win in 14 games, 8-5 over the Colorado Rockies on Monday night.

Mieske, who also hit a solo homer in the fifth inning, led off the ninth against Dave Veres (2-3) with his fourth homer of the season, tying the game at 5. Veres had converted 11 straight save chances before giving up Mieske's homer.

It got much worse quickly for Veres and the Rockies. Derek Bell singled to second and one out later Tim Bogar walked. Daryle Ward hit an RBI single to right giving the Astros a 6-5 lead.

Veres then threw a wild pitch, scoring Bogar and Craig Biggio, who went 4-for-4, hit an RBI double to end the scoring. The Astros (60-40) have their best record ever after 100 games.

Brian Williams (1-1) pitched a perfect eighth for the win and Billy Wagner pitched a perfect ninth for his 26th save in 28 opportunities.

Mieske went 4-for-5 with three RBIs. It was his second career multihomer game and first four-hit game.

The Rockies fell 11 games under .500 for the first time this year.

Dante Bichette and Jeff Barry hit back-to-back solo homers in the seventh to give Colorado a 5-3 lead. Biggio's 10th homer in the eighth inning made it a one-run game.

Houston starter and Colorado native Scott Elarton failed to record his first win as a starter. He allowed seven hits and three runs in six innings. He did get his first major league hit.

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on an RBI single by Mieske and a run-scoring double by Bell.

Rangers beat Royals in Hall of Fame game

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — There was no doubt about this called shot.

Doing his best Babe Ruth imitation, Gregg Zaun playfully pointed his bat toward right field, then cleared that wall on the next pitch Monday in the Hall of Fame game.

Zaun's home run highlighted the Texas Rangers' 11-9 win over the Kansas City Royals in the annual exhibition. The teams combined for a record-tying 10 homers in a game called after eight innings because of rain.

Zaun, a Rangers backup catcher who has not homered in 68 at-bats this season, became a fan favorite the instant he came on the field. When he entered to play right field in the fourth inning, he sprinted along the short fence and high-fived everyone he could reach.

And when Zaun came to bat in the fifth, the sellout crowd of 9,773 started chanting, "Call your shot! Call your shot!"

After a taking a pitch, he did. Zaun stepped out of the batter's box and aimed his bat. A moment later, he picked on a fastball from minor leaguer Jeff Austin and launched a line drive into the bleachers for a solo homer, causing the crowd to go crazy.

"I can't believe I did it," Zaun said. "I just hope the guys on the other side didn't think I was trying to embarrass anybody."

"I think he threw it right down the middle for me," he said.

Austin, tagged for six home runs in six innings and the loss, didn't really say whether he grooved a pitch.

"I threw a fastball and he hit it," said the Royals' top pick in the 1998 draft.

McGwire hits 36th

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mark McGwire hit a three-run homer in the second inning of the St. Louis Cardinals' game Monday night against the San Francisco Giants, tying Sammy Sosa for the major league lead with 36 homers this season.

McGwire's ninth homer in his last 12 games tied him with Lou Gehrig for 16th place on the career list with 493 home runs. The shot went over the bleachers in left field.

"It's a gorgeous ballpark, a great town," Zaun said. "Other than playing in the World Series, this was the best baseball experience of my life. That's what it's all about."

Texas hit a record seven homers.

UMPS: 4 minor league umpires hired happened in Philly today. I have not talked to anybody and am as confused as anybody."

The case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Edmund V. Ludwig, who three years ago issued a court order that prevented umpires from striking in the postseason. Umpires threatened a strike after Roberto Alomar spit at umpire John Hirschbeck and was given just a five-game suspension.

This time, umpires want a court order that gives them until Sept. 2 to withdraw their resignations. They also want Ludwig to declare that owners have engaged "in numerous and serious unfair labor practices" and to declare that mass resignations are a legal strike.

Thus far, 14 of the 56 umpires who resigned have withdrawn their resignations. The baseball official said the sport would continue to accept withdrawals, but only until all vacancies are filled.

At least four more minor league umpires were hired Monday, another baseball official said.

In an unusual twist, umpires accused owners of wrongfully agreeing to give Larry Barnett more termination pay than the labor contract requires.

Barnett, who with 31 years of service is baseball's senior umpire, agreed to retire after this season for $550,000 — $150,000 more than the AL was required to give him.

The AL also has been negotiating for the retirements of Dale Ford, Ted Hendry, Ken Kaiser and Durwood Merrill, the suit said.

The current labor agreement is set to expire Dec. 31. Umpires asked the court to declare that the current labor agreement was abandoned by the AL and NL because commissioner Bud Selig is trying to shift supervision of umpires from the leagues to Sandy Alderson in the commissioner's office.

Phillips declined comment, as did Selig.

Ludwig, however, did not immediately set a date for a hearing.

CANADA: U.S. wins gymnastics gold with pitcher Chad Ricketts. But because he had exceeded the number of free trips allowed in a game, Whitt was told that Ricketts must leave.

A 20-minute discussion ensued, turned heated and Whitt was ejected.

Whitt protested and after the umpires consulted with international baseball officials, a meeting was held under the grandstands. The protest was disallowed.

"I guess they make the rules as they go," Whitt said. "Needless to say I am still upset about it, but it's nice to come back to win."

U.S. men's track and field coach Ralph Lindeman was sent home to Colorado Springs at the advice of doctors after being hospitalized with chest pains.

Lindeman was held for observation Saturday night and Sunday in Victoria Hospital, then advised to leave.

"This is not life threatening," said Lindeman, 48, the track coach at the Air Force Academy. "It's precautionary."

Assistant Harvey Glance took over as head coach.

The United States claimed the gold and bronze medals in individual all-around women's gymnastics to help ease the sting of a disappointing second-place finish to Canada in Saturday's team competition.

Morgan White, 16, one of the youngest members of the entire U.S. delegation, took the gold with a score of 37.649, edging Canada's Michelle Conway by .031 points. Jennie Thompson won the bronze despite falling off the balance beam.

In third place heading into the final rotation, White scored a 9.525 on the uneven bars to jump into the lead. Conway, who had been leading, managed only a 9.156 in her final event, the vault.

The American women survived a rugged water polo match with Cuba, winning 10-5 but emerging from the pool with bruises, scratches and torn bathing suits. Maureen O'Toole had a hat trick.

"It was a very physical game," Heather Moody said. "We didn't notice that in their play when we watched them two days ago, but they really took it out on us."

Mexico finished 1-2 in both race walks. Bernardo Segura, who was disqualified during the 1995 games, beat Daniel Garcia in the men's 20-kilometer event. Graciela Mendoza beat Maria Sanchez for the women's gold, with Michelle Rohl, the U.S. champion and 1995 Pan Ams silver medalist, third.

STATE: Northern advances to Waco may still be sweating.

"I'm speechless," Redman said as the cheering continued long after the tense game. "The kids did everything we asked of them."

But was he worried when he was facing bases loaded while watching Paulk's screamer head for Jordan in left?

"Actually, I was thinking that this thing might go extra innings and Williamson was out of innings. I was thinking more about our pitching situation than anything else."

This game was a competitive affair from stop to finish and was as superb baseball as it was ugly on Sunday afternoon when Plano thrashed Midland 16-4 to force this game.

Northern took a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Jordan's towering double scored Williamson and Garrett Smith's single plated Jordan.

Plano got a run of Midland starter Carson Smith in the third when Jake Bidelman scored Dallas Bush with a single. Plano tied the game in the fifth at 2-2 off of Williamson when David Harris drove in Cory Landmark.

Williamson, who started the game at third base, was also sterling in the field. He snagged two hot shot line drives and made a circus throw to nail a runner at first base. Midland right fielder Brian Scherer also caught a sinking line drive off the bat of Plano's Ryan Morgan in the second inning with a runner on base to end the inning.

TATUM: Chris Ogden scores seven

(From 1C)

"A guy can have a tremendous night here and once the (college) season starts he is sitting on the pine. Then you say what happened to him. I thought he played good considering it wasn't his team."

Tatum did have his moments. With 33 seconds left in the game, he made two free throws to expand the North lead to 95-90.

"Even when I struggle when the game is on the line, I want to be the one to be on the line to shoot free throws," Tatum said, "no matter what kind of game I had."

He ended the game with an NBA 3-pointer at the buzzer to make the score 99-92.

"I was just getting warmed up," joked Tatum, who finished second in 3-point shooting contest at halftime.

Tatum wasn't the only West Texas standout who has seen better days. Seminole's Chris Ogden, who was named Texas' Mr. Basketball by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, scored seven points, committed two turnovers and registered four fouls.

"You tend to press in games like this," said Ogden, a 6-foot-8-inch standout who will play basketball at the University of Texas. "Throw in the foul trouble with the pressing and it made for a long night."

It wasn't the best night for the players from the Permian Basin, but at least there will be games to look forward to in the future.

"I'm not one to make excuses. The ball just didn't fall tonight," Tatum said. "It happens to some of the best."

That was the case Monday.

THSCA NOTES: Wichita Falls High School post Bingo Merriex, who scored 17 points and won the 3-point contest, was the North MVP. George Williams, who scored 18 points, was the South MVP. B.J. Pratt of Converse Judson scored a game-high 22... The football game, which will involve Midland Lee's Rex Richards and the Midland Lee coaching staff on the North team, takes place at 7:30 p.m. today at Amon Carter Stadium. Fox Sports will be carrying the game...

Elliot: Report that brother is a match is false

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Spurs forward Sean Elliott said Monday that a member of his family is a possibility for a match to provide him with a kidney transplant, although it is still too early to know for sure.

Elliott said in a statement released by the Spurs that more tests are necessary, and at this point it's premature to make predictions as to whether a match will be found.

KSAT-TV reported earlier Monday that one of Elliott's two brothers had a compatible kidney.

The San Antonio television station quoted a source close to Elliott for the story. The station did not report which brother, Noel or Robert, was the match.

Elliott, 31, headed to Mexico on vacation after last week's announcement that he needs a kidney transplant to avoid dialysis. His disease, focal segmental glomerular sclerosis, is one of a variety of kidney ailments that result in severe, prolonged loss of protein into the urine. The cause is not clear.

Elliott, a starter on the Spurs' NBA championship team who hit a memorable 3-pointer at the buzzer of a playoff game to beat Portland, also thanked everyone who has offered support since he revealed his health problems.

"My family and I would like to thank everyone for making us a part of their prayers. But at the same time, this is a difficult situation for my family and I ask the media covering this story to please respect my family's privacy," he said.

The San Antonio Express-News reported blood samples were taken from Elliott's two brothers and his mother, Odiemae.

"I drew the blood and packaged it myself last Monday," said Sean's father, Robert Elliott, a medical technician for Canna medical group in Tucson, Ariz.

Elliott's father was not a candidate to provide a kidney because he is diabetic.

49ers ink troubled Phillips

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

STOCKTON, Calif. — Putting their needs on the field ahead of his history of trouble, the San Francisco 49ers on Monday signed running back Lawrence Phillips.

"Our hope is that his deep troubles are behind him," general manager Bill Walsh said in announcing the signing at the University of the Pacific, where the team opened its training camp. "Lawrence will come to the 49ers with a clean slate, as far as football is concerned. I expect him to do quite well here. I think you'll find him to be very pleasant."

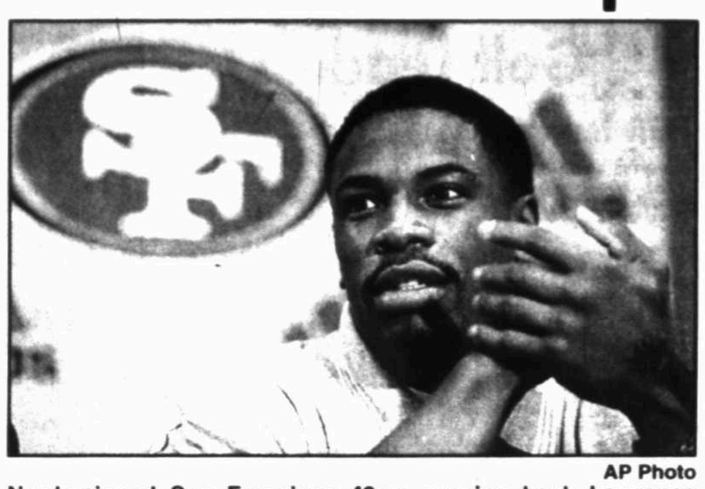

Phillips was signed to two-year deal worth $1.75 million, including a $425,000 signing bonus. He can earn more through incentives.

At least some of that money will be going to the league to pay a fine for violating the NFL's violent crime policy. Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, in a meeting with Phillips two weeks ago, cleared him to play, but told him he would be subject to the fine.

Said Phillips: "This is a great opportunity. I don't intend to screw it up."

Walsh conceded the 49ers were taking a chance on a player whose career is in jeopardy after he was released by two NFL teams in less than a year. But he denied it was a panic move by a team that lost its top running back, Garrison Hearst, to a potentially career-threatening injury.

"Is this a desperate move? Hardly," Walsh said. "It's a business move, one we've thoroughly researched."

AP Photo

Newly-signed San Francisco 49ers running back Lawrence Phillips speaks at a news conference at training camp in Stockton, Calif., Monday.

He added that he believes he's a risk worth taking.

"I would sign myself, yes," said Phillips when asked to put himself in an NFL general manager's shoes. "I don't see this as a risk."

To those who continue to believe he'll only bring problems, Phillips said, "All you can do is try to prove them wrong."

The rap sheet on Phillips is long and disturbing, however.

Phillips pleaded no-contest to assaulting a former girlfriend in college, was arrested three times during 19 months with the St. Louis Rams and was released by the Miami Dolphins four weeks after a woman claimed he struck her when she refused to dance with him in a nightclub.

But Phillips' strong performance in NFL Europe sparked renewed interest, and the 49ers edged Buffalo in bidding for him. Some teams in need of running backs, Cleveland and Baltimore among them, were leery and chose to not pursue him.

Walsh said he thinks the 49ers can provide a good environment for Phillips. But he also said he has warned Phillips he will be cut at the first sign of trouble.

The 24-year-old running back will try to fill the void left by the loss of Hearst. Hearst had surgery Saturday to treat circulatory complications following a broken left ankle.

Hearst was San Francisco's most dynamic threat last season, rushing for a team-record 1,570 yards. He was hurt on the first play during last January's playoff loss at Atlanta.

The 49ers hope Hearst can return in early December, but coach Steve Mariucci said the team must be prepared to play this season without him.

CAMP: A&M's Nguyen signs deal

(From 1C)

three-year deal.

Jenkins will likely have to settle for whatever the cap-strapped Cowboys have left.

"We have to make a decision: is the short-term benefit of having (a player) in camp worth what we gave up that we didn't feel we had to give up?" Jones said. "The bottom line is you can get every rookie in you want. We just don't want to pay that high a price."

Before he got rolling on that subject, Jones proclaimed this past offseason the most productive in his 11 years as the team's owner and general manager.

The highlights included signing veteran starters at receiver (Rocket Ismail), offensive line (Mark Stepnoski) and linebacker (Quentin Coryatt), plus trading for receiver James McKnight.

"We believe we have made tremendous progress in acquiring talent at positions where we really wanted to fill a need," Jones said. "We were very aggressive, probably the most aggressive we've been.

"I like this team and the exciting year that lies ahead."

Although veterans aren't due until Thursday, several will be around Tuesday and Wednesday. They're expected to work out on the side while coaches dedicate their attention to the youngsters and other newcomers.

"It makes it a cleaner practice when you don't have to say to your older guys 'Step out of the way and let these younger guys take some reps,'" second-year coach Chan Gailey said.

Leon Lett and Deion Sanders, the anchors of Dallas' defense, won't be taking part in two-a-days any time soon. Lett is suspended indefinitely and Sanders has a mysterious toe injury that's slow to heal.

Jones said he hopes commissioner Paul Tagliabue will announce early in camp when Lett can return, but he doesn't know when a decision will be made.

Sanders has been running on machines that help him safely distribute his weight. He will soon begin straight-ahead running without technology.

"He's progressing," Jones said. "I'm told we won't know anything really definitive until he starts pushing off, cutting, getting into football situations and reacting accordingly."

Cowboys Camp

IRVING (AP) — A look at Dallas Cowboys training camp, which began Monday.

WHEN, WHERE: Rookies and most veterans checked in at Midwestern State University in Wichita Falls on Monday and began two-a-day workouts Tuesday. The rest of the veterans are due Thursday afternoon. The final workout is Aug. 25.

EXHIBITION GAMES: The Cowboys play the Cleveland Browns in the Hall of Fame Game on Monday, Aug. 9, in Canton, Ohio; face the Oakland Raiders on Sunday, Aug. 15, in Oakland; and go to New England to play the Patriots on Saturday, Aug. 21. After camp breaks, they'll play host to Denver on Sunday, Aug. 29, and Jacksonville on Thursday, Sept. 2.

SAY HELLO TO ...: C Mark Stepnoski, WRs Raghib "Rocket" Ismail and James McKnight, DL Ebenezer Ekuban and LBs Quentin Coryatt and Dat Nguyen.

UNSEEN, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN: Deion Sanders' toe injury almost definitely will keep him out of preseason action. An indefinite suspension for substance abuse will definitely keep Leon Lett away.

QUOTE, UNQUOTE: "I don't think we need to live up or down to anything that's happened before. We need to make our own identity in this 1999-2000 season," second-year coach Chan Gailey said.

Nailon's agent says his client will be vindicated from drug charge

By Joel Anderson
Associated Press Writer

FOREST HILL (AP) — The agent of former Texas Christian basketball star Lee Nailon said Monday his client is innocent of drug possession and evading arrest charges.

Larry Fox said the 24-year-old Nailon simply was in the wrong place at the wrong time when he was arrested Saturday at a suburban Fort Worth hotel.

"I think the case is being blown out of proportion," Fox said. "Lee wasn't smoking anything. All they're basically saying is that Lee was there. There isn't much meat on the bones here."

Nailon, the Charlotte Hornets' second-round draft pick this year, was with TCU's probable starting running back LaDainian Tomlinson and another friend, Leroy Nesbitt III, at a Comfort Inn in Forest Hill.

Police arrested the three after finding between two and four ounces of marijuana and other paraphernalia in their second-floor room. They were released Sunday after posting $1,500 bond each.

Ken Link, an attorney representing all three men, was unavailable for comment.

The marijuana charge is a Class A misdemeanor with possible penalties of a year in jail and a fine of up to $4,000. The charge of evading arrest could be a misdemeanor or a felony, depending on the circumstances, Forest Hill police Detective Chris Hebert said.

Officers arrested the three men around 5 p.m. Saturday while investigating a robbery of three hotel employees that took place earlier in the day, Hebert said.

During the investigation, one of the employees said he noticed a suspect wore a ring that was similar to one worn by a hotel guest who had checked into two rooms, Hebert said. Another employee said he saw cut-open cigars and drug paraphernalia when he changed the towels in the rooms.

Police went to the rooms and smelled marijuana coming from inside, but the occupants refused to open the door. The three men escaped through a back window but were caught seconds later getting into a green Chevrolet Suburban in the hotel parking lot, Hebert said.

Police later found the drugs and the paraphernalia in their room. Hebert said police doubt there is a connection between the robbery and the three men.

Nailon, a 6-foot-9 power forward, averaged 23.9 points during his two-year career at TCU and garnered first-team All-Western Athletic Conference honors in both seasons. The Hornets drafted him June 30 as the 43rd pick overall.

Fox said the latest accusations should not affect Nailon's standing with the Hornets.

"I'm sure a first-class organization like the Hornets isn't going to jump to any conclusions," he said. "But I'm sure they cringed a little bit."

Former NFL player killed by police

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Demetrius DuBose, a former football player for Tampa Bay and Notre Dame who fell on hard times, was fatally shot by police who chased him down after he fled a burglary scene, police officials said Monday.

Dubose, 28, a former linebacker for the Buccaneers, was shot several times Saturday. Officers said he charged them while waving their nunchukas, a weapon that consists of two wooden sticks joined at the ends by a short chain or rope.

DuBose fled when officers tried to question him outside a Mission Beach home that had been burglarized. Officers said they tried to stop him by spraying him with mace, but he ran. They caught him, scuffled and he got away again.

When they caught him a second time, they struggled with him. He grabbed the weapons of both officers and started swinging the nunchukas, Lt. Glenn Breitenstein said.

"The officers believed that they were about to be assaulted in a dangerous manner with weapons that could kill them, and they fired," Breitenstein said.

Police said DuBose seemed drunk or drugged. An autopsy was conducted Monday. Results of toxicology tests were not expected for a few weeks, Breitenstein said.

The two officers who shot DuBose were removed from field work pending an investigation, Lt. Tom Orden said.

NEW YORK (AP) — September crude fell 11 cents to $20.52 a barrel; September heating oil fell 0.31 cent to 51.92 cents a gallon; September unleaded gasoline fell 0.36 cent to 60.95 cents a gallon.

In London, North Sea Brent Blend crude oil for delivery in September fell 17 cents to $19.36 a barrel at the International Petroleum Exchange.

Natural gas futures rose a fourth session on the New York Mercantile Exchange as hot weather across the eastern half of the country forced utilities to generate more power for consumer air conditioning and fans.

Stocks slide

NEW YORK (AP) — The continued threat of higher interest rates pushed stocks lower Monday in the second quietest session of the year. Highly priced technology shares fell most steeply.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 47.80 to close at 10,863.16. After a few sluggish moves into positive territory at midday, the blue-chip index fell back and extended the losses of last week, when the Dow dropped 298.88 points, or 2.7 percent.

Broader stock indicators were lower as well. The Standard & Poor's 500 slipped 9.18 to 1,347.76, and the Nasdaq composite index, dominated by technology stocks, fell 72.71 to 2,619.19.

Nervous investors have begun to believe that the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates as early as next month in an effort to hold off inflation. Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan will address a Senate panel on Wednesday, and analysts said it's unlikely that stocks will muster much strength before then.

Later this week, the government will release the latest statistics on employment costs and on the gross domestic product, which could provide a clearer indication of whether inflation has encroached on the economy.

Euro up vs. dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — The euro surged to a 10-week high against the dollar on Monday, continuing a rally set off last week amid signs of an economic recovery in Europe.

The dollar also was quoted at 116.61 Japanese yen, up from 116.55.

Monday's climb was helped by comments from the future president of the Deutsche Bundesbank, Ernst Welteke, who said there had been "good economic reasons" for the euro's fall in recent months, but now "signs of an economic pickup in Europe are visible."

Also boosting the euro was a 0.5 percent rise in German consumer prices in June. That sparked speculation that the European Central Bank may soon boost interest rates to ward off inflationary pressures.

Existing-home sales hit record

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans pushed existing home sales to a record high last month as they scrambled to lock in the best deals to beat slowly advancing mortgage rates.

June sales of existing single-family homes jumped 10.6 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.53 million units, the highest level ever, the National Association of Realtors reported Monday. All parts of the country saw sizable gains.

June's performance followed two consecutive months of sales declines and exceeded many analysts' expectations.

Many economists said they expect the most sales ever of existing homes in 1999, but they believe June's showing marked a peak, with a slowdown in housing activity in the offing in the coming months.

Last month's big gain in used-home sales was attributed largely to consumer fears that mortgage rates will continue their upward climb, association officials and economists said.

"Home buyers were rushing to purchase in June before mortgage rates rise even higher," said Lynn Reaser, an economist with Bank of America Private Bank.

"When buyers saw interest rates moving up this spring, they jumped off the fence and into the market," said Sharon Millett, the association's president.

But other factors also contributed. Consumers are feeling confident because the nation's economy is strong, unemployment is at a 29-year low, and the stock market has been posting record gains, economists said. And more financing options are available to lower-income people than existed just two or three years ago, they said.

Mortgage rates have been creeping up over the last couple of months. The average rate on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage was 7.55 percent in June, up from 7.15 percent in May, according to Freddie Mac, the mortgage company. The rate was 7 percent in June 1998. So far this year, mortgage rates have hit a low of 6.74 percent set at the end of January to a high of 7.71 percent set at the beginning of Jul[illegible].

With mortgage rates up and mortgage loan applications down, some economists said they expect a slowdown in housing activity in the coming months.

"We believe that home sales have peaked," said Merrill Lynch economist Gerald Cohen. "The backup in interest rates has caused a significant decline in mortgage applications."

David Lereah, chief economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, agrees. "The pipeline has dried up somewhat," he said, "and when you look at home sales today, as we speak, they're slowing down."

The big June jump in sales broke a two-month decline. In May, existing-home sales fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5 million units, a little worse than the 5.04 million units the association previously estimated.

And sales dropped in April to 5.25 million units from what was then a record 5.42 million units in March.

In June, the biggest gains in sales were in the Northeast, rising 11.1 percent to an annual rate of 700,000 units.

The Midwest followed with a 10.9 percent increase to a rate of 1.22 million units. Sales in the South rose 10.2 percent to a rate of 2.16 million, and in the West 9.9 percent to a rate of 1.45 million units.

Greenwood High School graduate Jay Henson, 27, recently won $1 million in a contest sponsored by Blockbuster Video.

Family 'stunned' by GHS grad's $1 million prize

By Matt Josefy

For the son of a Midland couple, a $9 investment in an evening of entertainment resulted in a $1 million return.

Jay Henson, 27, a 1990 Greenwood High School graduate who now lives in Dallas, received a phone call mid-July from a representative of Blockbuster Video informing him that he had won a major prize in the store's contest.

There were three possible prizes: the weekly prize of a big-screen TV, $1 million or the $17 million jackpot.

He called his parents, Midlanders Joe and Judy Henson, who decided that they wanted to go to Dallas to see their son receive his prize on July 19.

He dreamed of the multi-million dollar possibility, but he said he knew he would be lucky no matter what he received.

"I'd still be walking out with something that I didn't have before. If I got the TV, we would have gone home and watched TV that night."

Instead, he'll receive $50,000 a year for the next 20 years. He had rented two movies and two Sony Playstation games on July 13 — the day his name was chosen at random from a Blockbuster database.

Mrs. Henson said that this is a "wonderful opportunity for two newlyweds starting their lives out. When we heard (that he had won a major award) we were on vacation, and we were just speechless, stunned."

The contest is set up to award prizes at random to individuals who use their Blockbuster cards on the day that their names are chosen, or who have entered via mail. If the card is scanned at a randomly picked specific hour, then the jackpot prize is awarded.

Others prizes include minivans, speaker systems and trips to Las Vegas.

Henson was the fifth $1 million winner in the contest that ends Monday.

Stephen Bitolas, a Midland store manager, said that business has peaked because of the contest. "People are asking about it all the time."

Steven Viera, another Midland store manager, has set up a big poster board about the contests. He said that the promotional event has not drastically improved business.

Henson, who is getting married Sept. 25, is planning for the future. His fiancee, Ashly Hickman, has an uncle who is a financial advisor and he has already counseled Henson.

Despite his $1 million windfall, Henson doesn't plan on quitting his job. He hopes to "turn good fortune into a large fortune" through investments in mutual funds over the next 10 years.

Currently, the graduate of Tarleton State University, is an electrician's apprentice for Walker Engineering. Ms. Hickman works for Xerox.

He said his fiancee has settled down from her initial reaction that included tears and jumping up and down, and now the two are going house shopping.

"We hadn't planned on getting a house, because we didn't think we could afford it, but now I guess we can," Henson said, laughing.

He said the incident cancels out the frustration he previously felt about his chances of getting rich quick. "One time I took $80 of an income tax return and bought scratch-off lottery tickets — I only got $30 back.

Now, he simply has to deal with the attention, including a Dallas radio station that wants an on-air interview, and then he can return to his normal life, with the exception of a queasy feeling every time he rents a movie.

Saturn treats car owners to 'homecoming'

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Saturn car owners got a taste of West Texas Monday on their way to the second Saturn Homecoming celebration in Spring Hill, Tenn.

Saturn of the Permian Basin hosted an estimated 60 drivers who started off in southern California. Brisket sandwiches, chips and drinks were served and "Howling Harry" Wolf provided live entertainment as the caravan took a break en route to Abilene, where the group will spend the night. The caravan will then head to Dallas, where Saturn dealers have rented Billy Bob's for the group.

Chris Robin, general manager of Saturn of the Permian Basin, said he expected two or three local Saturn owners to join the caravan, and that more than 60,000 are expected to attend the Tennessee celebration this weekend, where singers Tim McGraw and Faith Hill and the group Hootie and the Blowfish are scheduled to perform.

The celebration "isn't for any reason but to show appreciation for our customers," Robin said. "Our motto is 'We're a different kind of car company,' and this shows those aren't just words."

Among the first of the southwestern caravan to arrive at the dealership were Gen and Joe Gunderson of Westminster, Calif.

Mrs. Gunderson noted that she and her husband helped form the first Saturn owners club, The Rings, and purchased their car from the first Saturn dealer to officially open in the United States, in Santa Anna, Calif.

Arriving with them were Steve and Linda Bell of Orange County, Calif. Bell, the present leader of The Rings, said the monthly outings have taken him places in southern California he might otherwise never have seen, and they have formed close friendships with a diverse group of people whose only bond is owning a Saturn.

He said the car has been an excellent performer and gets great gas mileage, "but mostly it's the way they treat us. From the day you go into the showroom, there's no pressure. They're not trying to sell you, just answer questions. The car sells itself."

The local dealership has been open only three months, Robin noted, and continues to exceed expectations. Expectations were to sell 50 cars a month, and Robin said the dealership has sold 60 the last two months and is on target to sell the same number for a third month. Its permanent building is currently under construction, with completion expected in late September or early October.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investing for children requires information, planning

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am a 78-year-old male with annual income from Social Security and a state pension plan of approximately $25,000, which is more than adequate at this time. I have four children — ages 43 through 49 — to whom I hope to leave some retirement money. I am presently in the Schwab MarketManager Growth fund with $118,000, S&P 500 index fund with $202,000, Cisco stock with $17,000, Alliance Technology fund with $56,000 and Washington Mutual fund with $12,600, and I'm about to come into an additional $50,000. In view of the time that will elapse utill the kids reach retirement age, would you have any thoughts as to any changes I would be wise to make in order to not only safeguard, but grow these sums?

Tyson

A: Given your adult children's ages, I would normally recommend that they have at least 20 percent to 30 percent invested in bonds. Given that your goal is to "safeguard" as well as "grow" their future inheritance, having all of your money invested in stock funds seems too aggressive. You also appear to have too much invested in larger-company U.S. stocks. While such stocks have done well in recent years, that trend won't last forever.

To better diversify, I would recommend that you consider making the following changes: Put about one-quarter of your portfolio into bonds, one-quarter into foreign stocks and one-quarter into small company stocks.

You didn't mention if you hold your funds outside of a tax-sheltered retirement account and, if so, how long you've held them. Please be sure you understand the tax consequences of selling before you do so.

Of the funds you current own, I am least enamored of the Schwab MarketManager Growth fund. This fund of funds charges a 0.5 percent annual operating fee on top of the fees levied by the funds in which it invests. This fund invests in large-company stocks and has lagged the benchmark Standard & Poors' 500 index by about 10 percent over the past year. Since you already have significant exposure to large-company stocks through your S&P 500 index fund, I don't see the value in holding this relatively high-cost, poorly performing Schwab fund.

The Alliance Technology fund, which has a fairly high operating expense ratio of 1.65 percent, does have a good long-term track record. However, in recent years it has slightly lagged the index for its peer group. I've never been a fan of sector funds, but if you wanted to hold this fund, I wouldn't greatly-object.

The Washington Mutual fund invests in large-company U.S. stocks that you already have plenty of. That said, this fund has reasonable operating fees and a good track record.

Q: I'm thinking about investing in mutual funds for my grandchildren for college or whatever. Should the plan be in my name or the child's?

A: As I have written about many times in the past, it's generally a bad idea to place money in a child's name for college. First, it may reduce the child's ability to receive financial aid. Secondly, when the child reaches the age of 18 or 21 (varies by state), the money in a custodial account is legally theirs to do with as they please.

It is far better to keep the money in your name or to give the money to the child's parents to hold and invest. This keeps more of the child's financial aid options open and better ensures the money will be used for the desired purpose.
