Two Vehicles Hit This Morning

Six persons are dead and two others injured as a result of a two-vehicle accident about nine miles south of Memphis on Highway 287.

The accident occurred about 8 a. m. today when a station wagon from Amarillo collided with an automobile from Florida.

In the Florida automobile were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith of 2205 Southwest 20th St. of Miami, Fla. Mr. Smith is in a local hospital in critical condition. Mrs. Anne Smith, 58, was killed in the accident.

Mr. Lindsey was employed by the Homer G. Maxey Co. of Amarillo, and the family was on their way to Dallas when the accident occurred.

Also in the station wagon with the Lindseys were Judy Vendrick, 16, and Jimmy Vendrick, 8, children of a neighbor. They were both killed in the accident.

The Lindseys were traveling south on Highway 287 south of Memphis when the right rear tire of the vehicle apparently blew out. The station wagon swerved over to the left into the path of the oncoming Smith vehicle. The Smith car hit the station wagon almost broadside.

The services for the victims had not been announced at press time, and the bodies were at Spicer Funeral Home.

IOOF To Present Musical Program Saturday Night

THE WILLS FAMILY

The Wills Family Quartet of Fort Worth will be featured here in a Gospel Concert on Saturday evening, June 2, at 8 o'clock in the High School auditorium. The concert is being sponsored by the Memphis IOOF Lodge.

A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend. Proceeds from the concert will be used to send two local girls to the United Nations Pilgrimage in New York this summer. Alvin Phillips, chairman of the local Pilgrimage committee, said.

One of the outstanding quartets of the state, the Wills Family is known to many area residents, having appeared here before. They traveled over 60,000 miles giving concerts last year; so are much in demand as entertainers. In addition to their concert work, they also appear each Sunday morning over a TV station in Fort Worth.

An added attraction with the group this year will be the Junior Quartet, made up of a third generation of Wills singers, Mr. Phillips said.

This is the third consecutive year the local lodge has participated in the United Nations Pilgrimage, according to Phillips. The first year the lodge sent Miss Elaine Snowden as a delegate and last year Miss Shirley Kennon. Both girls have appeared before various civic groups and clubs, giving accounts of their trips.

Delegates this year will be Misses Jo Ann Stanley and Carolene Kennon. The girls will leave early in June and be in New York on June 11.

The United Nations Pilgrimage is a national project sponsored by the Odd Fellows Lodges throughout the United States, Phillips said.

Soil and Water Stewardship — Everyone's Responsibility

This week all over the nation, "Soil Stewardship Week" is being observed. Farm and city people alike, are being asked to join together in this observance. For this is a week set aside each year in which special emphasis is placed upon the importance of soil and water in the lives of us all. It's a time in which we pause to offer thanks to our Creator, for these precious resources he made available to us for our use. It should also be a time when we remind ourselves of the continuing responsibility that rests upon each of us in wisely using and conserving our soil and water resources.

This year the emphasis is upon water. Water is one of the greatest resources of all, and is one of the most important basic necessities of life. No substitute has ever been found for it. Without it no living thing can survive.

Many of us feel we are far removed from the land. We feel that the responsibilities of conserving our land and water rests entirely upon the farmer and rancher. Even though it is primarily the responsibility of the farmer and rancher, it is also the responsibility of us all, regardless of our occupation or profession. God expects all of us to be good stewards of his resources.

Many of us think of water only as something we drink or use to cook with. However water plays a very important role in the society of man. Even the first primitive gatherings of man centered around water. It brought man together. It later became a major transportation. Great trading centers, and later great cities, developed near water. Water furnished the first power for manufacturing. Today water still remains as important as ever. Without it our industries would die. Cities must have. Transportation is dependent upon it. It's a vital source of recreation for many. Crops depend upon it for growth.

One of the greatest factors that contribute to the greatness of our nation is the abundant supply of water. However the supply is distributed quite unevenly. Many areas are faced with shortages; other areas with an excess in form of floods. Some areas are suffering from pollution problems, while other areas are faced with the problem of poor quality water.

In the past 20 years water consumption in the United States has doubled. We now use 300 billion gallons daily. This is about 1100 gallons per person daily. Of this amount, 150 gallons is for domestic use, and the remainder is used by industries. It is expected that in 20 more years our consumption will be double that of today. Where will this extra water come from?

At present we are only holding about 10 percent of the water that falls on the land. The other is lost through runoff and evaporation. If we are to continue to have a plentiful supply of water for our use, we must hold it more effectively; harness it for power, and develop it for recreation.

Water is one of the great gifts of man. It's the responsibility of us all to conserve it. There's only so much water. The earth's supply remains constant. There will be plenty for future generations, only if we use it with wisdom, and manage it with care.

Estes Under Two Flags

During the past several months the Billie Sol Estes case has turned out to be a problem for the Department of Agriculture officials under the Democratic administration, but now it seems that the case may be expanded to include the Republican party as well.

Seems as though someone began thinking and realized that the situation actually developed during the Eisenhower administration and he began asking questions. It now turns out that two men who were high in the Commodity Credit Corporation under Eisenhower are also directors of a New York chemical firm, which did considerable business with Mr. Estes.

Republican Senators, who called for a quick investigation of the Estes case, don't seem too happy about this turn of events.

Old and New in San Antonio

San Antonio, one of South Texas' leading and most exciting cities, is known to all for a combination of both the old and the new.

Best known of the old is, of course, the Alamo and the many missions.

Best known of new elements is perhaps the numerous military establishments surrounding the historic city.

There also is a little known distinction held by San Antonio that combines both the old and the new. This is the distinction of being host to a modern manufacturing enterprise making one of the oldest instruments known to man — the flute.

These San Antonio-made flutes are used worldwide. There are only five other flute manufacturers in the nation.

Another Big-D Spectacular

Few tourists notice a town's municipal auditorium. No so in Dallas, Texas.

Dallas' new and truly modern municipal auditorium is imposing enough to catch anybody's eye. It's where you can see it, and use it too.

Rather than heading to the suburbs with their public facility expansions "Big-D" built its $8,000,000 circular spectacular within walking distance of the famed downtown Dallas shopping district.

The Dallas auditorium is spanned by a domed roof 300 feet in diameter. Main auditorium seats some 10,000 persons. Attached lyceum, or little theater, seats another 1,750. There are 23 acres reserved for parking.

What Other Editors Say

Accident Season

If some expert military authorities were to predict that current U. S. military operations in South Asia would result in the deaths of 10,000 American soldiers by the end of summer, the entire nation would be in an uproar.

Important personages would be called to make an explanation to the public and heads would roll. And if the prediction came true, the country would know it had been in a full-scale war.

Yet, more than 10,000 Americans will die — violently — between now and September. The slaughter will begin, officially, over the Memorial Day weekend, although the killing is a day-in and day-out thing, the year round.

The battleground is the nation's highways.

This figure — actually, it is 10,500 — is just a statistical prediction. It is nice and rounded. It is just a number, meaningless right now.

There are no names involved, for no one knows which 10,500 individual Americans will be killed in traffic accidents during this period. Yet there is an inevitability about this number. Past experience shows that somewhere, somehow, 10,500 persons, of all walks of life, all ages, both sexes, will have a rendezvous with screeching tires, rending metal and violent death.

Yet again, the figure is just a statistic. It need not come true. Logically, there need not be a single traffic death. For even in the small percentages of cases where car failure is to blame, that failure is preventable.

This is perhaps asking for too much. There will be deaths, of course, a great many. But Americans should revolt against this smug, fat, inevitable 10,500. It should be cut in half; it should be cut in nine-tenths. Americans should make fools of the traffic experts.

They could, if they really believe that one of those 10,500 numbers might have their name on it.

Ten-thousand five-hundred is not a thing. It does not exist yet. It need not come to be.

Democrats, Don't Forget!

Although the fervor of the primary campaign has lessened as there are just a few offices for which it is necessary to have a run-off election, Democrats should remember that it is just as important to help your party pick its candidate still in the run-off as it was to vote for him in the first primary.

For those whose candidates did not make the run-off election, pick the man you feel will best represent your party's views and have the best chance to win for your party in November.

Carson County Democrats have a record of which any political group could well be proud, turning out more than 1,600 voters for a primary election, more than voted Democrat in the general election two years ago.

Despite the fewer races, those whose views are in accord with the Democratic Party should be sure to go vote in the run-off June 2.

The Man Who Didn't See God... Russian Cosmonaut Gherman S. Titov, during his recent visit to the United States, said he did not see God in his trips around the earth in his Vostok II spaceship. He said he looked for God but that He was not in space. Titov said he did not believe in God because He was not to be seen and that he believed only in what he could see. He said he believed in man.

The atheist Titov is typically Russian and typically insincere. He is the product of an insidious movement and form of government that has squeezed men's lives to a strong dry pulp. Titov's eyes are blinded to all but the things he has been told to see.

Titov believes many things he cannot see. He knows that his own ears can hear the whisper of a child on the other side of the world. He can see the instrument that transmits and the instrument that receives the sound, but he cannot see the waves that carry the sound. He can see the blades of grass that are bent by the wind, but he cannot see the wind. Surely, he must believe it exists. He can see the miracle of reproduction when a seed bursts and springs from the earth. Man did not make the earth, nor the soil, nor the seas, nor the stars.

Titov would have been more honest if he had said: "I do not believe the truth. It is an invention of the capitalists. God, truth honest government. They wanted a progressive Texas, but they wanted their money spent wisely. We have no suggestions to make as to voting in the run-off. We came out of the campaign on good, friendly terms with all other gubernatorial candidates. I consider them all my friends. Texans who were intelligent enough to vote for us, are more than intelligent enough to vote wisely in the run-off campaign without my suggestions or recommendations. I do urge everyone to vote.

We carried 54 counties. We were second in many more. Our voters were proud voters and did not have to apologize to anyone for their vote.

Again, I want to express my thanks for all that you have done—for without your help, your contributions, and your prayers I could not have begun to do the task was before us.

God bless you and your's.

Soil Conservation

This week is "Soil Stewardship Week." It's a week set aside each year in which special emphasis is placed upon the importance that soil and water have upon the lives of every American. Whether we live in town or on the farm, we all share in the responsibility that this week emphasizes.

The observance of this special week began sixteen years ago, when it was decided by a group of religious leaders working in cooperation with Farm and Ranch Magazine, to set aside the 5th Sunday after Easter as Rural Life Sunday. This was to be a day in which religious leaders would remind their congregations of Man's obligation to his Creator as Stewards of the land. And that God placed the responsibility of caring for the natural resources in the hands of man. And to remind us all that we were made stewards of them. It became so successful, it was decided to continue the observance for a week each year, following Rural Life Sunday.

This year special emphasis is being placed upon water, and its importance in the lives of each of us. Water is one of the supreme gifts of God. It was given to man to quench his thirst, and the thirst of all living things. Water is the universal liquid of life. Without it, there can be no life, for no substitute has ever been found for it.

Probably to many of us, water means only something we drink, bathe in, or cook with. Yet its role in our lives is much greater than this. Without water our cities and industries would die. Crops and plants must have water for growth. Transportation on water is important to the economy of the nation. Many depend upon water as a source of recreation.

M. Sgt. Orville Jones Retires From U. S. Air Force

M. Sgt. Orville E. Jones, former Memphis resident, retired from the U. S. Air Force in April after 21 years of service.

Jones is the son of Mrs. Stella Jones and a brother of Mrs. Billy J. Hall.

For the last several years Jones had been serving as crew chief on the flight line at Perrin AFB at Denison.

He plans to make his home at Denison.

Junior Boy's Choir Visits Pan Fork Camp

The Junior Boys Choir of the First Baptist Church enjoyed an overnight camping trip to Pan Fork last Friday night.

Adults accompanying the boys were Billy Ray Jones, Kenneth Dale and the director, Cliff Pedersen.

Boys making the trip were Otis Ray Jones, J. C. Jay Cee, Joe Ed Godfrey, Smoky Bell, Randy Dale, Timothy Fowler and Stephen Johnson.

Therefore we must all be concerned with its use, development, and wise management.

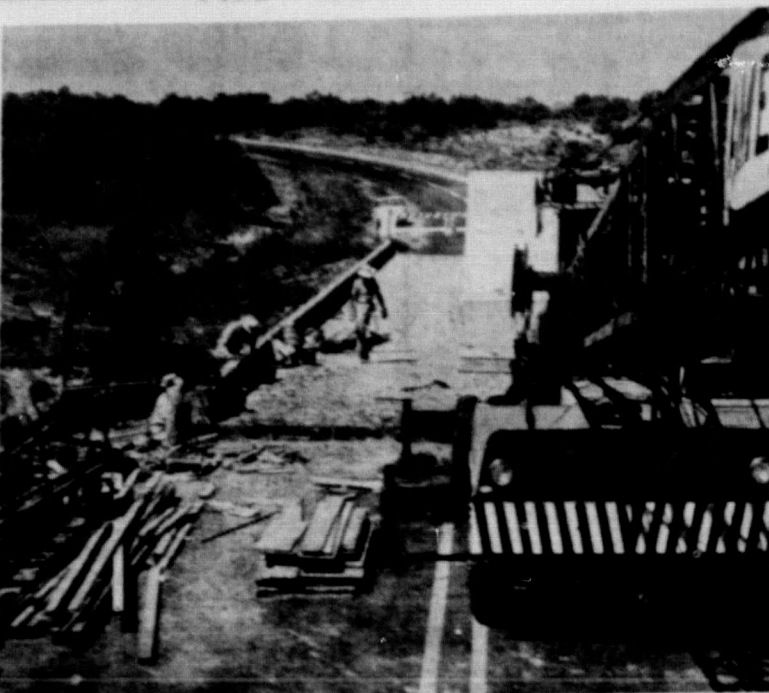

Daily consumption of water in the U. S. will stagger the imagination. About 300 billion gallons are used daily; much of it wastefully. In 20 years from now, the demands will be double what they are at present. Where will it come from? Many areas are already suffering from shortages.

Almost every community has a water problem. Either a shortage, poor quality, pollution, threat of flooding from an over abundance, or a combination of these. Fortunately many communities have recognized these problems, and are planning and working to solve them. Some of the greatest opportunities for cooperative projects of man are those in which people join together to solve their water problems. Flood waters have been harnessed through cooperative watershed projects. Dams have been built to relieve water stress, to control flooding, and to provide recreation.

Our nation has been blessed with a bountiful supply of water. It is a miraculous gift of God, given to us for our refreshment and endless uses. Our neglect can waste it; our misuse can turn it into sewers of pollution. If we are to continue to have a plentiful supply for our use, we must learn to hold it more effectively; build new reservoirs for its storage; use it without waste; keep it free of pollution; harness it for power and develop it for recreation.

There is only so much water. The earth's supply remains constant. There will continue to be enough for the years ahead if we stop the waste of pollution, excessive evaporation, and needless flooding. If we don't the supply will not meet our future needs. We can either use it with wisdom, or with shameful neglect. Which is it going to be?

The local Soil Conservation District is encouraging each person of the community to be mindful of this vital subject, not only this week, but each week of the year.

New Variety Of Peanuts Has Been Developed

Hybrid is a word that has come to mean a great deal to crop producers. But a true variety, not a hybrid, developed by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, is the subject of much discussion among Texas peanut growers these days.

The performance of the Starr peanut variety in statewide Experiment Station and on-farm demonstration tests during 1961 has literally put it in orbit, says Ben Spears, agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. In 18 Experiment Station tests with three other varieties, Spantex, Argentine and Dixie Spanish, Starr produced 72 more pounds of shelled kernels per acre than the next best producer, Spantex. Its per acre value in 14 tests was $131.45 compared to $117.89 for Argentine, its closest competitor. Starr also has desirable kernel characteristics, Spears points out.

In 63 farm demonstration comparisons, including all peanut areas of the state, Starr again showed its superiority by outyielding all comparison varieties on an average of about 20 percent, Spears said. The average difference in value per acre was as much as $30, he added.

Starr was developed from a cross between Spantex and a variety from South America made by Superintendent B. C. Langley at the Stephenville substation in 1949. It was released for certified seed production in 1961 and named for W. B. Starr of Cisco in recognition of his many years of civic and farm leadership in that peanut growing area.

All fields cannot be planted to Starr in 1962 because there just isn't enough seed available, points out Spears. The seed which are available are certified and when purchases are made, the agronomist advises buyers to look for the blue certification tag on the bag. Since the seed supply is limited, Spears suggests that growers use certified seed of Spantex, Argentine or Dixie Spanish. All have yield and cash return records superior to the common Spanish variety.

Today's old guns are those involved in some period of history, or which were owned by men who made that history. This is the story of Henry Stowers on gun collectors in the April issue of "Texas Game and Fish" magazine.

In this article the author presents the pictures and the history of some of these guns. He deals specifically with a gun collector who owns a buffalo gun with a value of $4500.

"Fake antiques are the bane of both dealers and collectors," Stowers writes.

One of the first things a collector should learn is to evaluate the gun's condition. He cites the set of standards adopted by the National Rifle Association.

Many collectors have found their hobby profitable. Some spend time on restoring them to their original finish. Others find their guns more valuable left in the condition in which they are found.

The article is illustrated with a number of pictures of valuable guns from the collection of guns now owned by Col. Leon Jackson, Dallas gun collector and appraiser.

Voting

Voting is the keystone of democracy. Unless one conscientiously exercises this right of franchise, a full and complete expression of the electorate is absent. If less than a majority exercise this right, the result of the election is not a mandate of the people, but a mandate of a majority of a minority. As has occurred on several occasions in our history, a controlled and influenced minority can wield great power. In fact, it can thwart the will of a disorganized majority. It could be argued successfully that there are times when the best interest of the country can be served if such a minority, influenced by good, can prevent great damage and danger to an uninformed majority. All of which points up the fact that the best interests of this country will be most fully served if the electorate is informed and if the electorate votes.

In recent years, there has been much controversy as to the electoral college method of electing U. S. Presidents. As a matter of fact, during Senate hearings this year, the observation was made by one Senator:

"Originally adopted as a compromise, the electoral college resulted from a distrust of the people and conditions of geography and communications which no longer exist. Despite its confusion and uncertainty, by sheer luck it has managed in most instances to elect a President who reasonably reflected the choice of the majority of the people. But this good fortune has lulled us into inaction after each election and the system has continued from one election to the next. Every 4 years the electoral college is a loaded pistol pointed at our system of government. Its continued existence is a game of Russian roulette. Once its antiquated procedures trigger a loaded cylinder, it may be too late for the needed corrections.

"We cannot assume that U.S. Presidents for the space age can continue to go into office in the exact form furnished by the electoral college."

This would indicate to some that the Senator referred to was not exactly happy with the electoral college system. However, this particular Senator has been quite controversial on several subjects.

It should be pointed out that there are 14 separate resolutions sponsored by 26 Senators which would change in some way the Constitutional method of electing the President. The Subcommittee on Constitutional Amendments of the U. S. Senate divided these into four basic plans: (1) direct national election, (2) the proportional system, (3) the district system, and (4) perfection of present system.

(1) Direct National Election — This proposal would completely abolish the electoral college. Under it, the President would be elected directly by nation-wide popular vote. A majority of the total popular vote would be required. This means that if any one candidate did not get a majority of all the votes cast in the first instance, a run-off election would be held between the two top aspirants. This proposal has been defeated three times in the Senate. In 1934 by a vote of 59-29; in 1946 by a vote of 43-23; and in 1954 by a vote of 64-17.

(2) Proportional System — This system would retain electoral votes but divide each state's electoral votes among the candidates in proportion to their share of its total popular vote. Presidential electors would not be listed on the ballot. The people in each State would vote directly for candidates for President. There are several variations on this proposal. One of these provides that a plurality of electoral votes would be sufficient for election. Another would provide for nominations in primary elections. Another would provide that the elections in each State would be regulated by its legislature but authorize Congress by law to make or alter such regulations. Another would require a division or proportion of a State's votes only if the minority candidate received at least one-third of the popular vote. Other variations include qualifications for voting, regulations of elections, provisions for the District of Columbia, and so forth.

(3) District System — The district system retains the electoral college but changes the method of choosing electors. Two electors from each State are to be elected by a plurality of the popular vote from the State at large. All further electors are to be elected from single-elector districts. The original district system proposal did not anticipate that the electoral districts would be the same as Congressional districts. However, in recent years other proposals have been made which would require that the electoral districts correspond to the Congressional districts. Under either system, a majority of the votes in that district would determine the winner of the electoral vote. A majority of electoral votes would be required to elect a President. Otherwise, election would be by joint session of the House and the Senate.

(4) Perfection of Present System — Under this system, the individual presidential electors would be eliminated and the people would vote directly for President and Vice President. Electoral votes in each State would be awarded automatically to the candidate winning a plurality of its popular vote. Other resolutions have differences. Under one, only 35 per cent of the total electoral vote would be required for election. If no candidate received 35 per cent, election of both President and Vice President would be by a majority of the House of Representatives.

The number of different types of proposals plus the lack of a firm solution to date indicate that the problem is a tough one and is continuing. Let us hope our generation will produce statesmen of stature equal to those who met the same types of challenges in another day.

lemons you make lemonade and don't try to make orange juice. In other words, use what you have at hand to the maximum before you go across the road to look for something else. We have grain, oil, gas, cattle, sheep, wool, cotton, space, climate, recreational areas and so forth—let's use them locally from the raw material to the finished product. We must realize the population growth in Texas and some of our neighboring states is rapidly moving us up the scale as a market oriented economy, not just the producer of the raw materials.

"I believe the most important requirement for successful growth of a community, business, or an area, is the attitude of the people involved. We are in an area of rapid change, and I wonder if we are adjusting our thinking to such changes. The various segments of the economy in our area will become more independent, that is, having a much greater dependence on each other."

"This requires understanding, not misunderstanding, but it certainly does not preclude good honest disagreement."

Our sympathy goes to Mrs. J. J. Hunter in the death of her brother.

Minister Kenneth Rhodes was a Sunday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Watson.

Mrs. Gurvis Kennard spent Thursday afternoon with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Kennard.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hunter visited Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Watson.

Several from this community attended the "open house" of Mr. and Mrs. Lee M. Robertson Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. M. D. Kennard and Mrs. John Linley went to Amarillo Thursday to bring their daughters home for the weekend.

Mrs. Peggy Toleferro and children of Springtown, Tex., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Proffitt.

Those visiting Mr. and Mrs. Tom Scoggins and Nannie Thursday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Kennard and Francis Kennard.

Mrs. J. B. Adams, Mrs. C. A. Adams, Mrs. Dora Booth and Mrs. Sam Foxhall visited with Nannie and Katie Scoggins recently.

That canyon is really nice. Running water (in the creek), nice sand blown scenery, nice people at the entrance gate (if you got your 40 cents). I'll tell you how we made out in the continued issue next week. In the meantime go to church somewhere Sunday. We know, there might be a Mrs. H. B. Neal in your community who will invite you out to dinner after services. We really enjoyed shifting ourselves last Sunday. I may preach against drinking, smoking, gambling, running around, etc., but I come to a screeching halt and never hit upon the subject of gluttony. This would make too many of my preacher buddies down on me and stamp on my toes too hard! Until next week, God bless all!

We were down a few folks in both of our services, but the spirit held her own and we can all say, "It was good to have been in the House of the Lord." We had 43 in Sunday School and 23 in Training Union. This is another busy week since our Vacation Bible School began last Monday and will conclude on the day you read this paper. "I'll be a big fibber if you get the paper before Friday." I know what some "daddies" will get for "Father's Day" since the junior boys and girls are making shoe-shine kits for their V. B. S. projects. Wednesday night we met in our overalls and Monday go-plowing britches and really did a bang up job with hammers; and you might say that we really cleaned up the Lesley Baptist Church house with mop and broom. Thanks to all who helped in this needy chore! Friday afternoon all the Beginner and Primary age children will go to the City

MINUTE MEDITATION

Kindness is understood and appreciated even by dumb animals. This should make us see the value of the principle in human relationships.

Jesus Christ was the kindest man who ever walked upon the face of God's green earth. A whole book might be written about the many acts of kindness which he showed to people of his day. He said to a woman who was taking in an act of sin, "Neither do I condemn thee, but go thy way and sin no more." To a man who was sick in bed, he said, "Thy sins be forgiven," making him whole in body and spirit. Jesus worked a miracle to provide bread and fish to feed a hungry multitude. He walked upon the waves into a blustering storm to rescue his disciples who were in fear and anguish.

Jesus saw the good even in the worst of people. Would this old world be better if all of us would say to the people we meet, "I know something good about you. And then treat them just that way. Yes, it would be fine and dandy if each handclasp carried this assurance, 'I know something good about you.' Life would be so much happier if the good that is in us all were the things the others love to recall. Let us all practice that fine way of thinking and acting by praising the good in people we meet.

H. C. Mears once said, "Kindness has converted more sinners than zeal, eloquence, or learning."

Remember to show kindness to your friends, and also your enemies, if you have any.

for more and more medical care.
In fact, it was modern medical care that was largely responsible for the amazing longevity that has developed in the past 25 or 30 years.

However, the person who can see through Kennedy's shallow sales talk isn't necessarily the modern day Scrooge that a lot of critics would make him. He's just using his head.

The administration proposes to finance its program for medical care for the aged through the Social Security program. If you hadn't guessed, that will mean a bigger bite in taxes. The program is already scheduled to take a six per cent bite out of your gross (repeat, gross) income in the next few years. Where it will go from that point is a disturbing question.
Nobody has offered answers yet.

This country is on an enforced do-good kick. By voting more medical care we are, supposedly, relieving our collective consciences.
Only it doesn't work this way. Our responsibilities to our loved ones and needy neighbors are not discharged by pocketing laws and assessing our pocketbooks.

Getting down to fundamentals, I would like to point out that the medical care (as are all other socialistic wealth-distributive programs) is goodness by FORCE. It means that, under the program, you or I will be forcibly separated from our livelihood, and the monies derived therefrom will be distributed as the bureaucrats see fit.

You or I have no choice in the matter; no choice as to whether we wish to participate and no choice as to the distribution of the monies. Force — in the form of Wild Stock Will Highlight Texas Cowboy Reunion

Scandalous John Selmon, Stamford, Cowhand Arena Director of the Texas Cowboy Reunion for over 30 years, today announced a special lot of bulls and wild stock for the July 2-3 & 4 Cowboy Reunion in Stamford.

"For several years, said Scandalous John, We have leased Wild Stock from Adrian Parker of St.
Joe, Texas — and this year he has promised us a very special remuda — with a lotta broncs that never beed rode — an a lotta good cowhands can shore count on gittin' throwed."

The Cowboy Reunion is very careful to see that only actual cowboys off the range take part — and professional riders are barred. Thus the Cowboy Reunion in Stamford is the largest true cowboy show in the world and over 600 cowhands are expected to compete in Stamford July 2-3 & 4.

established governmental authority, the detention systems of the land and ultimately the police power of the civil and military branches—leave us no alternative.

So, in reality, our "good" government programs are good only superficially. They are made workable by force. Any goodness accomplished under threat of imprisonment is done by reason of fear and not out of the heart.

Approximately 116 students are enrolled in the Vacation Bible School now in progress at the First Baptist Church, Cliff Pedersen, director, said this week.

"We are most pleased with the interest that is being manifested," he said.

The school will close Wednesday night, June 6, with Parents' Night, Pedersen said.

Slides of the various departments in the school will be shown, and a cordial invitation is extended to parents of the students to attend.

Bacterial Blight Is Subject Of Publication

Last year 11,348 Texans died from the effects of malignant neoplasms, the statistical designation for all forms of cancer. For many years now, cancer has been the second ranking cause of death in Texas—and in the rest of the United States.

The only disease that ranks ahead of cancer, is heart disease and its associated vascular conditions.

Latest evaluations on the effectiveness of cancer treatment indicates that one out of every three persons discovered with the disease is cured.

But, using the conservative estimates which characterize the medical profession, half of all cancer victims could be saved if the disease were discovered early enough.

Cancer can attack almost any part of the human body. Experts in the cancer research field say that for early every different body tissue there is probably a separate type of cancer cell.

The leading body sites of death-dealing cancer, listed in order, are: digestive organs and the peritoneum, respiratory system (male), breast (female), genital organs, urinary organs, leukemia, and the baccal cavity (mouth) and pharynx in the male.

Men fall victim to the disease more often than women. Explanations of why this situation is true range from men smoking more to men visiting doctors less often than women.

How effective is modern diagnosis?

As a cast in point—an explanation of the famous "Pap" test for uterine cancer is conclusive evidence of its value.

The "Pap" test is simple, inexpensive, and absolutely reliable. It involves the physician taking a uterine smear which is carefully analyzed by a pathologist. Uterine cancer could be almost completely eliminated if adult women have a "test at least once a year during a thorough physical examination.

There's no doubt about it, a yearly physical examination could save thousands of lives every year.

The girl friend asked him if he liked moving pictures; then invited him to help clean out the attic.

A Texas oil man divorced his wife because she kissed him only when she asked for money. Gosh, isn't that often enough!

Odom To Open Restaurant Soon

Adrian Odom stated this week that construction was virtually completed on the new restaurant he plans to open on Highway 287.

The business will be opened the first part of next week, and a formal opening will be scheduled some time in the near future.

Mrs. M. M. Pounds Breaks Hip In Fall Monday

Mrs. M. M. Pounds, 84, who has operated the Pounds Hotel on the southeast corner of the square for many years, fell early Monday morning and broke her hip.

Mrs. Pounds had gotten out of bed to turn the lights off downstairs in the lobby, around 4 a. m. She accidentally fell, breaking her hip. Her two sisters, Mrs. R. E. Duncan and Miss Lena McLearn, both of whom heard her, immediately rushed to her aid.

Mrs. Pounds was carried to a bone specialist in Amarillo. She may have to undergo surgery the latter part of the week.

CARD OF THANKS

May we take this opportunity to thank everyone who came to us at a time when we needed you most.

Thank you again for your prayers, floral offerings, food, and most of all for your love.

Mrs. Evelyn Gayne and the family of Carolyn Hood
