Reagan ready for interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, preparing for the first interview in almost 25 years between an American president and Soviet journalists, was expecting to be grilled about the summit and superpower relations but was confident he would not be tricked by hard-nosed questions, officials said.

In a half-hour session in the Oval Office today, Reagan was to answer questions posed by four Moscow journalists who are experts on the United States and international affairs.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the interview will be published in the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia, probably on Sunday, 16 days before the opening of Reagan's two-day summit in Geneva with Soviet chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

Alexander Shalnev, the Washington-based correspondent of the Soviet news agency Tass, who helped arrange the interview, said Izvestia would print the full text. Speakes said the Soviets were free to "report it as they wish to report it."

Two White House officials, speaking privately, said they did not expect the Soviet journalists to be too hard on Reagan.

"I think they'll be very respectful. They don't have the tradition of pushing government officials hard," said one official who specializes in foreign policy.

Another official said Reagan had reflected so much on the summit and prepared himself so well that "they're not going to ask him anything he hasn't thought of."

The official said the United States and Soviet Union both want the summit to succeed. "I simply find it impossible to believe that the Soviets would send anyone over here to do anything that might really jeopardize the atmosphere and poison the climate in the run up to the summit," the official said. "I don't think they put any trick plays in there."

In other summit-related developments:

—Speakes said Reagan will address a joint session of Congress at 9 p.m. EST on Nov. 21, immediately upon his return from Geneva. On his way back to Washington, Reagan will stop off for two hours in Brussels to report to allied leaders at NATO headquarters on the summit.

— In an interview with Britain's BBC radio, Reagan said he was "personally hopeful" and "striving" to present a counteroffer to a recent arms proposal from Moscow, which calls for a 50 percent reduction in strategic nuclear weapons.

Landowners draw battle lines over sewage

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A 10-year battle between Monahans Draw landowners and Odessa may be building up again with residents starting a petition and considering a class action legal suit against sewage dumping in the draw.

"We're going to get organized because they just won't listen to an individual," said Louise Gay, whose two barns and several trucks are submerged in a small lake that once was pasture land.

The landowners say they're tired of the draw overflowing with Odessa's sewage water and damaging their property.

Mrs. Gay along with her brother, Ronnie Tumlinson, and Allen Manning are gathering signatures on a petition that they say may result in group legal suit against Odessa.

The petition requests that Odessa stop dumping its sewage into Monahans Draw and asks compensation for flooding damages.

The signatures will be presented to the Midland County Commissioners' Court, which in turn is to hand the petition over to the the Ector County Commissioners to voice residents' complaints, Manning said.

"We're going to get organized because they just won't listen to an individual."
— Louise Gay, Monahans Draw resident

A Texas Water Commission permit allows Odessa to dump treated sewage water into Monahans Draw, which runs through farmland south of Midland.

Individuals have filed suits for damages against Odessa, but nothing has come out of it, Mrs. Gay said.

"People have to get together and join as a unit and get something done about this," she said.

Mrs. Gay said about 100 acres of pasture land is submerged under treated sewage water overflowing from Monahans Draw. She estimates $100,000 damages to her property and land from water that is 6½-feet deep in some places.

But property owners along the draw are not the only ones paying, Mrs. Gay said. All county residents pay for the constant road repairs needed when the draw periodically overflows, she noted.

Suing the city of Odessa might be the only effective thing the county residents can do, said County Commissioner Wally Craig of Precinct 2.

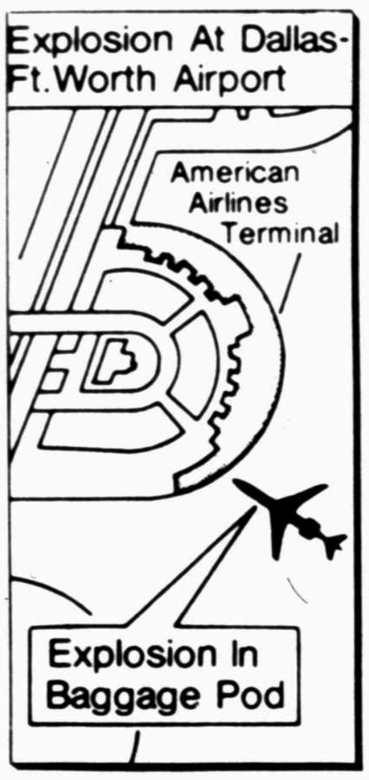

He said the county commissioners would listen to residents' complaints, but there's nothing else the county can do.

"We did our best to get the water commission to change the permit," Craig said.

In July 1984 the water commission reissued Odessa's dumping permit despite efforts by the Midland County Commission to get it denied.

Man questioned about baggage blast

A black-powder device detonated in the luggage compartment of an American Airlines 727 shortly after its arrival Wednesday at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Authorities have questioned a man in Austin they think checked a bag that later exploded into the luggage department of an American Airlines jet that was carrying his family, it was reported today.

The man's wife and three children were aboard the jet when an explosion went off moments after landing at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Wednesday, the Dallas Times Herald reported. No one was injured.

The man's family was flying to D-FW to catch a connecting flight to Des Moines, Iowa, the newspaper said, adding that the woman was also questioned and released.

FBI and airport authorities would neither confirm nor deny the Times Herald report this morning, which quoted unnamed sources as saying no motive has been found and no there are no firm suspects.

The Paris (Texas) News also reported today that authorities questioned a San Marcos man whose wife's luggage was next to the cosmetic bag.

Albert Thielman was questioned Wednesday along with his wife, Mary, about the incident, Thielman's father, Eugene Thielman, told the newspaper.

The elder Thielman called the questioning routine and said that only Mary Thielman and the couple's three children were on their way to Des Moines, Iowa, and were on board the jet Wednesday when the incident occurred.

FBI agent Dave Gillis told The Associated Press today that he could not confirm or deny if anyone had been questioned because it could jeopardize the investigation. He would not say whether the Times Herald and Paris News were talking about the same couples.

"This is being investigated as the offense of destruction of an aircraft, which ia a federal offense," FBI agent Byron Sage said. "Obviously, it's a very serious allegation."

Cummins Beaty, assistant agent in charge for the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Dallas, said Wednesday the investigation is "centered both here and in Austin."

Three killed in crash of Navy helicopter

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Navy helicopter that crashed on a training mission, killing three crew members, appeared to be making practice dives along with another chopper when it hit a marsh, witnesses said.

Rick Andrews and his wife, Linda, of nearby Port Aransas were on their way home about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday when they saw two helicopters practicing diving maneuvers about one-half mile off Texas Highway 53.

Moments later, Andrews said, his wife yelled, "Oh my God. He crashed!"

Three other Navy crew members were injured in the crash of the UH-1N helicopter on Mustang Island, between Corpus Christi and Port Aransas, a spokesman for the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station said.

Ensign Terry Reese, public affairs officer for the Naval station, said identities of the dead and injured would be released today.

Petty Officer Gwen Newman said the three survivors were taken to the base hospital, but she did not know the extent of their injuries.

The UH-1N is used for search and rescue missions.

The helicopters were on routine maneuvers at the time of the crash, Reese said. Officials had no statement to release concerning a cause for the accident.

Mrs. Andrews said it appeared that, just before the crash, the rotor of one of the helicopters had stopped.

"The blades weren't blurry. I could see them very clearly and they didn't seem to be moving," she said.

Fear need not haunt holiday, experts say

By GEORGE KAOUGH
Associated Press Writer

The meanest spirits abroad tonight may be adults who are taking the fun out of Halloween for children, say a sociologist afraid that the holiday was being changed for the worse and a dentist who rose to the defense of candy.

A naturalist in Maryland, meanwhile, tried to convince the easily spooked that bats, those familiar symbols of this scariest of nights, are actually friendly, furry creatures that see well and wouldn't hurt a soul.

An Alabama couple planned to celebrate their wedding in a coffin-festooned ceremony amid witches and warlocks, and in Wisconsin, a couple who live with a teetotaling ghost planned to raise a glass or two to him tonight.

The fear was real in Detroit, however, where nearly 200 fires raged Wednesday and early today in what has become an arsonist's tradition called Devil's Night.

Clint Sanders, an associate professor of sociology at the University of Connecticut said adults have altered Halloween for children and it is now, like Christmas, "dominated by rituals centered around consumer consumption."

Many businesses are cashing in on Halloween horror stories by advertising safe alternatives to candy collection, Sanders said, and hospitals are X-raying candy.

Dr. Heber Simmons Jr., a children's dentist and president-elect of the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry, says parents shouldn't have nightmares about all the candy their children may end up eating.

His views were echoed by Dr. Stephen J. Moss, chairman of the Department of Pediatric Dentistry at New York University, who said all types of sugars are found in virtually every food and do not make a difference in cavity-causing potential.

Ecologist Arnold W. Norden with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources came to the defense of another much-maligned hobgoblin.

Bats, included with black cats and ghosts in Halloween folklore, are in more danger from people than the reverse, according to Norden, who said that development is threatening their natural habitat.

Woman charged in shopping mall shootings

SPRINGFIELD, Pa. (AP) — A 25-year-old woman accused of killing two people and wounding eight others in a shooting rampage through a crowded shopping mall urged a judge to "kill me on the spot" during arraignment on murder charges.

Police said Sylvia Seegrist, wearing military fatigues and carrying a .22-caliber semiautomatic rifle, drove up to the main entrance of the crowded Springfield Mall on Wednesday, got out and opened fire on passersby.

She then entered the mall, walking quickly and firing from the hip at random until a 24-year-old college student, thinking it was a prank, walked directly into her line of fire, wrested the gun from her and held her until guards arrived, police said.

The rampage killed a 2-year-old boy and a 64-year-old man, police said. Among the wounded were a 9-year-old girl, a 10-year-old boy, two teen-agers and a 67-year-old man who was in critical condition with gunshot wounds to the head and abdomen, a 27-year-old woman in serious condition, and a 50-year-old woman in fair condition. There were no details on the eighth person.

Ms. Seegrist's mother, Ruth, said her daughter had been in and out of psychiatric hospitals 12 times in the past 10 years and once tried to strangle her. Her pastor said she had stabbed someone at a halfway house four years ago.

At her arraignment before District Justice Joseph L. DiPietro at the Springfield police station, Ms. Seegrist was barefoot, handcuffed and wearing new blue jeans and a denim jacket.

While answering the judge's questions about her age and address, she spouted profanity and nonsense.

"Like, hurry up, man; you know I'm guilty, shoot and kill me on the spot," she said.

She accused her parents of beating her and said police wouldn't help her. "I'd rather not been bored — born," she said.

Some customers and employees at the mall thought at first that the gunfire was a day-before-Halloween prank.

Tropical Storm Juan finally moves away from coast

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tropical Storm Juan, apparently picking up strength, moved away from Louisiana today after haunting the coast for five straight days with high tides and torrential rains that caused more than $1 billion in damages and flooded thousands of people out of their homes.

The erratic storm's toll included seven people dead and eight missing since Saturday, when Juan developed as a tropical depression in the Western Gulf of Mexico.

The National Weather Service said Juan passed over the mouth of the Mississippi River at daybreak and accelerated toward the northeast at 15-20 mph, a path that could take it across the Alabama and northwestern Florida coasts by afternoon.

There were signs the storm was strengthening, and winds neared hurricane force in squalls around its center, the weather service said.

At 7 a.m. CET, the center of the storm was near latitude 29.4 north, longitude 88.8 west, or about 100 miles southwest of Mobile, Ala.

As it moved out, water receded in some parts of Louisiana.

"That water's going down real good with that northwest wind," said Terrebonne Parish Deputy Ray Hebert. "It went down at least four to five feet ... just overnight.

"The water was five feet over the road. Now it's down to where they can pass," he said. "We're starting to let people go back to their home to check damage."

After quickly graduating to a hurricane on Sunday, Juan skipped north Monday toward the Texas-Louisiana border, veered back east Tuesday to slosh ashore near Morgan City, and was downgraded to a tropical storm as it loitered near Lafayette.

On Wednesday, Juan suddenly turned back to the southeast and reentered the Gulf near Morgan City, due south of New Orleans. "It's either sit and cry or laugh about it. And I guess it's better to laugh," said Donna Vaughn, whose family was flooded out of its home this week at LaPlace, 20 miles west of New Orleans.

She and her husband, Leroy, said they had no flood insurance.

"I might have to go paddling around in my boat to get some (Halloween) candy," said Bubba, 9, one of the Vaughns' four sons.

Flooding was rampant in several parishes. The big Mississippi River levees protecting New Orleans were holding steady, but authorities reported some crumbling and considerable strain on smaller levees protecting the city's west bank suburbs and smaller communities in the east, west and south.

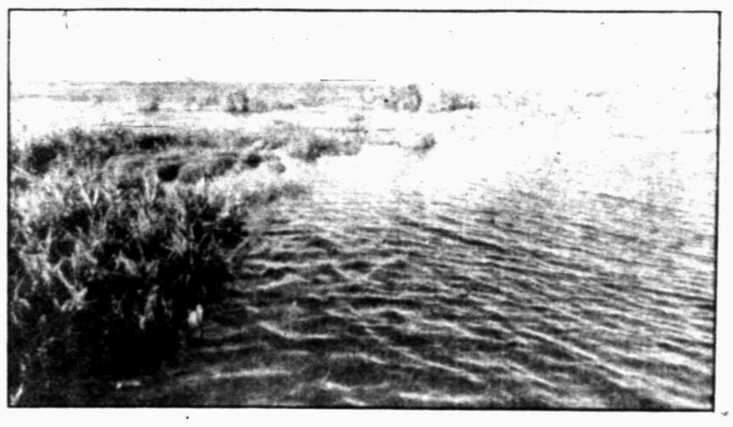

Gov. Edwin Edwards estimated that more than 50,000 homes had been flooded and the Red Cross said about 3,000 people had moved into the 23 shelters it opened in as many parishes.

Edwards estimated about $1 billion in damage on land, $110 million of that to ready-to-harvest sugar cane and soybean crops.

"There's nothing I or anyone else can do to change the permit," he said.

"It's out of our hands, really."

However, State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, said the landowners deserve a hearing from the water commission. Sims said he advised the residents to get organized, but is leery about immediate legal action.

He said the landowners need to try all avenues before suits are brought against Odessa.

Sims said another hearing is needed on the 10-year-old problem because, "there's a lot of water where it's never been before."

"To me it's a disgrace. It's really bad the people have to suffer like this," he said.

Commissioner named for PUC

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a surprise announcement today, Gov. Mark White named Jo Campbell of Austin to a vacant spot on the Public Utility Commission.

Ms. Campbell, an attorney, will fill the slot PUC chairman Phil Ricketts vacated Oct. 7. She will join commissioners Peggy Rosson and Dennis Thomas on the three-member panel which regulates electric, telephone and water utility rates throughout the state.

Ms. Campbell has worked for the last two years as an assistant attorney general in the energy division. She defended both the PUC and the Texas Railroad Commission in appeals. Before joining the Attorney General's office, she worked for five years as a hearings examiner in the gas and utilities division of the Railroad Commission.

"I am convinced that Jo Campbell is knowledgeable in utility law and can meet the challenge of seeing that Texas consumers spend not one penny more than is absolutely necessary for adequate, reliable utility service," White said at his weekly press conference.

Ms. Campbell said the appointment came as a complete surprise, adding that she had not sought the job. She said she will support Peggy Rosson to replace Ricketts as chairman of the PUC.

State consumer lawyer Jim Boyle, who represents residential and small commerical ratepayers at the commission, said Campbell will be "tough but fair."

Rodeo not trivial in Pecos

PECOS (AP) — A cult trivia game's question involving rodeo is no trivial matter to residents of this West Texas city, whose greatest claim to fame is the world's oldest rodeo.

The object of their ire is the "orange" query found on card 415 in the Genus II edition of the popular Trivial Pursuit game.

"What rough-and-tumble western sport was first formalized in Prescott, Ariz.?" reads the question, which game authors answer on the reverse side as "rodeo."

"The first practice of rodeo as we know it today — that is, cowboy events contested for money — happened about a block and a half from our courthouse on July 4, 1883," said John Wojtkun, director of the Pecos Department of Tourism and Development.

"You might say that I'm more than mildly miffed," Wojtkun told the Odessa American.

"If Prescott has any claim at all, it's for the longest-running rodeo," he said Tuesday. "Theirs has been running continuously, while ours had a break."

And while the Pecos Rodeo celebrated it's centennial year in 1983, the Prescott rodeo centennial is scheduled for 1988, he pointed out.

The Pecos residents are prepared to support their claims against the game's New York manufacturer, Selchow and Righter Inc., according to a letter to the company from a Pecos attorney.

Reeves County Attorney Scott Johnson, in his letter sent Tuesday, cites three encylopedia references — including one from the respected "Encyclopedia Britannica" — to convince the company of Pecos' claim.

"Litigation is our last resort," Johnson wrote. "But I would emphasize that we at Pecos take our rodeo seriously."

A Selchow and Righter spokeswoman Tuesday directed questions on the problem to the game's authors, a trio of Canadians residing in St. Catharines, Ontario.

While none of the three were available for comment, spokesman Randy Gillen said that challenges to the game's questions are not unusual.

He mentioned in particular a challenge from the city of Martinez, Calif., which claims the martini cocktail was first mixed within its city limit — not in San Francisco as the game indicates.

"There are occasions when we have bowed to other authorities," Gillen added. "With 42,000 questions in seven editions, I think you'll find our record for accuracy remarkable."

Still, Gillen acknowledged, "We don't claim to be the be-all and end-all in terms of authorities."

REAGAN

Reagan said the Soviet proposal contains both "seeds to nurture" as well as "some things that we believe are so disadvantageous to us that they should be negotiated and some changes made."

The last time a U.S. president was interviewed by a Soviet journalist was on Nov. 25, 1961, when then-President John F. Kennedy was questioned in the living room of his home in Hyannisport, Mass. That session, conducted in the Cold War era, turned into a something of a debate between Kennedy and the journalist over Cuba, nuclear testing, arms control and human rights.

For Reagan, today's interview offers a unique chance to explain his views directly to the Soviet people, in their own publications.

For the Soviets, it offers an opportunity to be perceived as fair and balanced, since Gorbachev consented to an interview with Time magazine.

White House officials say Soviet citizens probably will be surprised by the Reagan interview, if for no other reason because it is so unusual in a country with a state-run press.

"To the Russians, I would think this would be rather puzzling to read this in their own publication, where they're used to seeing just a party line, party line, party line," the official added. "They're probably going to wonder what exactly is going on themselves."

Speakes described the interview as "a unique and historic opportunity for the president to communicate directly with the people of the Soviet Union. We hope it is a sign of a new and more open information policy on the part of the Soviet Union."

The questions will be posed to Reagan in Russian, and translated into English by an interpeter.

Beaty described the woman who owned the bag as "just an average person with no criminal background. We don't know of any prior problems that she's had."

Beaty also speculated that the explosive device was activated by a timing device because it didn't appear to have been set off by the plane's landing or takeoff.

American Airlines officials say they will study beefed-up screening of luggage as the result of the explosion.

No one was injured in the explosion about 8 a.m. Wednesday aboard Flight 203, en route from Austin to San Francisco. Airline officials said 147 passengers and seven crew members were quickly removed from the 727 jet after smoke was found inside a baggage compartment.

Joe Dealey, a spokesman for the airport, said ATF agents took custody of the remains of the device, which "includes a military-style ammunition can, some clock workings, and a battery."

The fragments were to be analyzed at the ATF laboratory in San Francisco, authorities said.

Dealey said the device was contained in a cosmetic case inside a baggage pod used to transport luggage to and from the plane. The bag did have some identification on it, but it was damaged and may be impossible to decipher, he said.

"The force of the explosion and intensity of heat and flames was such that the cosmetic case was pretty well destroyed," Dealey said.

"There was a large explosion. We thought at that time that probably it was a ground vehicle that had run into the airplane," said Thomas W. Glass, a passenger from Austin. He and his wife, Jean, heard the explosion after the plane had been at the gate for about 30 seconds, Glass said.

Once inside, "she began firing at everybody and anybody who got in her path," said Springfield Township Police Chief George Hill.

The first shots, which missed, were aimed at a woman at an automatic bank machine, then Ms. Seegrist turned on a man emerging from the store and missed again, police said.

Police said she then fired at a group of small children outside a restaurant, hitting Recife Cosmen of Minquadale, Del., in the chest. The child was pronounced dead at Metropolitan Hospital.

The Philadelphia man killed near a shoe store was not identified. His wife suffered a heart attack and was hospitalized in good condition, police said.

"I heard shots, a lot of screaming, a lot of panic," said Lisa Scrabut, 19, of Ridley Township. "There was this lady screaming and screaming and screaming. And there was this guy lying on the floor, and the woman was screaming, 'Help him, please, help him.' "

Sylvia Seegrist

Jack Laufer, a student, said he saw Ms. Seegrist approaching across the mall but thought she was firing blanks as a prank. As she approached, she pointed the gun at him.

"You could see the muzzle flash and the spent casings being ejected out of the rifle," he said. "I closed right in on her, she was still pointing directly at me from about 10 yards and firing. She hit a lady behind us. I got close enough to grab her, grabbed the gun first, wrestled that away from her."

Mall guards handcuffed her and held her for police.

Laufer, a volunteer firefighter, and his companion, nurse Victoria Loring, 24, attended to the wounded until ambulances arrived.

Hill said Ms. Seegrist had several unused ammunition clips and credited Laufer with saving lives. "He's a hero," Hill said.

Ms. Seegrist, who said she lived in nearby Crum Lynne, was arraigned on charges of murder, attempted murder, aggravated assault and weapons charges and faces a preliminary hearing Nov. 7. She was taken to Delaware County Prison, where she was being held without bond.

Botha's party loses one seat to far-right candidate

WORLD

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Several thousand white voters deserted the ruling National Party in mid-term parliamentary elections to cast ballots for candidates calling for an entrenchment of apartheid, but the governing party retained four of five seats.

President P.W. Botha had said the election would be a test of white support for his limited moves away from apartheid, and his party had predicted it would retain all five seats.

However, Botha's party lost a race Wednesday in Sasolburg, a conservative town south of Johannesburg, by 367 votes out of a total of nearly 13,000. It won another election by only 749 votes and the other three races by more comfortable margins.

The Nationalists' vote totals decreased in the three districts in which they previously have been challenged by conservatives. Far-right candidates challeged the governing party for the first time in two districts.

The government's response to more than a year of anti-apartheid rioting and an economic crisis worsened by international doubts about South Africa's stability also were major issues in the mid-term elections, in which governing parties often lose ground.

All of the Nationalists' opponents said the government has mishandled the past 14 months of black rioting.

The elections, restricted to white voters, were for the white chamber in South Africa's three-house Parliament. People classified as Asians and those of mixed race have separate chambers of Parliament, but the whites have the final say.

All five elections were in conservative areas dominated up to now by the National Party, which has been in power since 1948. It was challenged in each district by the far-right and in two districts by candidates calling for an end to apartheid.

In Sasolburg, Louis Stofberg of the far-right Reformed National Party narrowly defeated the National Party candidate.

Stofberg's victory was the first parliamentary seat won by his party since it broke from the National Party 16 years ago when the Nationalists suggested allowing racial integration on athletic fields.

One National Party victory came in Port Natal, near Durban, where Home Minister Stoffel Botha received 4,307 votes and won easily. But the Progressive Federal Party, which says the government is moving too slowly to dismantle apartheid, also made a strong showing. Its candidate, Warren Burne, received 2,102 votes and finished ahead of a far-right candidate.

The Nationalists won narrowly in Springs, a depressed blue-collar town east of Johannesburg that had been solidly with the governing party. The Progessive Federal Party also fielded a candidate there, but did poorly.

The government's candidate, former journalist P.W. Coetzer, 38, defeated the Conservative Party candidate by only 749 votes out of nearly 10,000 cast.

In Bethlehem, a farming center in the Orange Free State, the Nationalist candidate won against a Conservative.

The last district to report was the conservative and rural northern Cape Province area of Vryburg, where the government candidate, J.H.L. Scheepers, collected 4,605 votes against 3,417 for A. Beyers of the white-supremacist Conservative Party.

South African blacks offered scholarships

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. colleges and universities are opening another front in the battle against apartheid besides just selling off South African-related stock holdings: providing scholarships to South African blacks wishing to attend multiracial universities.

That is among the ideas being discussed by leaders of 13 top U.S. universities and five foundations who are exploring ways to form partnerships with non-discriminatory South African universities to provide educational opportunities for that country's blacks.

The group, which includes the presidents of Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Stanford and Brown universities as well as the heads of the Ford Foundation, the Carnegie Corporation and the Rockefeller Foundation, met here on Oct. 16 to hear ideas from leaders of South African universities on how American universities and foundations might help ease the plight of that nation's blacks.

Stuart Saunders, vice chancellor and principal of the University of Cape Town, told the presidents in remarks made available to The Associated Press that "funds are needed to ensure a steady increase in the number of black South Africans attending South African universities as undergraduates and postgraduates."

He said each student would need about $2,500 to attend the university in 1986.

The group also heard suggestions from Jakes Gerwel, vice chancellor-designate of the University of the Western Cape.

None of the American officials attending the meeting committed their schools or foundations to any specific actions on behalf of South African blacks. But the gathering signaled apparent growing enthusiasm for providing scholarship funds for South African blacks.

The idea could provide an attractive means for colleges who have resisted selling their South African-related stockholdings to nonetheless take a strong stand against apartheid. More than 60 schools have divested themselves of some or all of such holdings, but that's just a small fraction of the more than 3,000 U.S. colleges and universities.

The University of Illinois, the University of Colorado, the University of Minnesota and the New England Board of Higher Education are among those that have recently established scholarship funds for South African blacks.

The University of Colorado, for instance, will make scholarships for up to 35 black South African students a year available starting next spring. Most will attend schools in their own country, but a handful will receive scholarships to attend Colorado.

WORLD in brief

Gandhi honors mother; Sikhs glorify assassin

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi led more than a million people in chanting "Indira Gandhi is immortal" today as India paid homage to the prime minister's mother and predecessor, assassinated by Sikhs one year ago.

"She was not only my mother but the mother of every poor Indian," Gandhi told a heavily guarded rally dominated by a 90-foot figure of a smiling, sari-clad Mrs. Gandhi.

Almost 80,000 police were deployed in the capital to prevent Sikh terrorist attacks. Air force helicopters hovered over capital lawns and the rally site, while thousands of commandos and sharpshooters were stationed in the area.

In Amritsar, Punjab, more than 35,000 Sikh militants streamed into the Golden Temple complex to glorify Mrs. Gandhi's slain Sikh assassin.

The militants poured cash donations into sacks, shouted slogans for a separate Sikh nation and hoisted banners saying, "Sikhs are slaves in India."

Argentina 'under siege'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Raul Alfonsin, explaining a nationwide state of siege in a nationwide address, said "professionals of violence" are trying to take over the country, but that the armed forces as a whole are not to blame.

Alfonsin made the remarks in a televised speech Wednesday, the second anniversary of elections that restored civilian rule.

The president apparently was attempting to reassure civilians that the 60-day state of siege he imposed was not intended to suppress them, and to assuage discontent in the armed forces.

Alfonsin declared the state of siege last Friday to allow the arrest of 12 alleged right-wing subversives — six military officials and six civilians — who are accused of involvement in a recent rash of bombings and telephone threats.

Horowitz returns to Paris

PARIS (AP) — It's been 34 years since Vladimir Horowitz set foot on a Paris stage. Miffed by the sarcasm of a leading French music critic, the celebrated pianist announced, "If I don't play well enough for Paris, you won't see me here again."

The 81-year-old Russian-born pianist is now back. He gave the first of two recitals on Oct. 26 and received the Legion of Honor award from President Francois Mitterrand three days later.

"I'm playing well again, and I want the world to know it," said an ebullient Horowitz after the first recital, which had the audience of 2,000 at the Theatre des Champs Elysees on its feet throughout most of the 90-minute concert.

Horowitz had reason to be happy. The brilliant but erratic career that he began at age 17 has been punctuated by long periods during which he did not play in public: 1936-38, 1953-65 and 1967-74.

Soviets' release praised

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami today lauded the release of kidnapped Soviet embassy employees in west Beirut and said the government was working to free American, French and British kidnap victims.

The three Soviet embassy employees, missing for a month, were released by their kidnappers in Moslem west Beirut late Wednesday.

A Soviet Embassy employee, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the three were in "relatively good condition."

U.S. plans second summit with Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz plans to confer with Soviet officials in Moscow next week about setting up a second U.S.-Soviet summit meeting even as preparations proceed for the first Reagan-Gorbachev summit next month, according to administration officials.

The idea would be to make the Nov. 19-20 summit in Geneva, Switzerland, "the start of a dialogue" between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, according to an official who spoke Wednesday only on condition of anonymity.

Meanwhile, it was reported today by NBC-TV that the United States has sent a new arms control proposal to Moscow to counter the Soviet call for a 50-percent cut in nuclear warheads.

As to a follow-up session to this month's summit, the idea has long been the U.S. intention and "preliminary discussions" with the Soviets through diplomatic channels are under way, the official told The Associated Press.

Another U.S. official, also insisting on anonymity, said a second summit meeting was "under active consideration."

The conversations have not yet focused on a time or a place for a second meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev. It would give the two sides a new deadline to aim for in what have been slow moving negotiations to curb nuclear weapons.

ON CAPITOL HILL, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., who was part of a congressional delegation that met Gorbachev in Moscow earlier this year, said he expected Reagan and the Soviet leader to seek a "general understanding" on new instructions to arms control negotiators for the two sides to take back to the bargaining table.

In addition, Warner said he expected another summit meeting "within 18 months."

And William Hyland, a Soviet expert who held key posts in both the Ford and Nixon administrations, also has said that, at a minimum, he expects Reagan and Gorbachev to agree to meet again following their November summit.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., who also met with Gorbachev in Moscow last spring, likened the upcoming meeting between the two leaders to "two heavyweight boxers feeling each other out."

Shultz was to be questioned about the situation at a late afternoon news conference today. He takes off for Moscow early Saturday, stopping first in Helsinki, Finland, for a weekend of relaxation.

NBC said today that the reported U.S. counterproposal accepts the Soviet call for a 50 percent cut in nuclear warheads but uses different definitions of what will be included. The proposal, according to NBC, calls for a cut in the Soviets' 8,900 nuclear warheads to 4,500, a separate 3,000-warhead limit on land-based warheads. The United States rejects the Soviet inclusion of U.S. medium-range missiles stationed in Europe as strategic weapons to be counted against the total limits.

THE CURRENT ROUND of arms talks in Geneva ends this week, but could be extended.

Kenneth Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said any new U.S. treaty proposal would emphasize a need for deep reductions in existing arsenals and "tough" verification procedures to guard against cheating.

But Adelman, in an interview, stressed that arms control was part of a bigger picture. "The most likely pathway to war is through regional controversies," he said.

Before Geneva was chosen as the site for next month's summit, New York had been considered a likely place for Reagan and Gorbachev to meet if the Soviet leader decided to attend the United Nations' 40th anniversary celebration.

However, the summit was scheduled for the Swiss city and Gorbachev did not appear before the U.N. General Assembly. Reagan did, and sharply criticized Soviet policies while also calling for a "fresh start" in superpower relations.

The last summit in 1979, also was held on neutral ground in Vienna, Austria. The two preceding ones, both in 1974, were in Moscow and Vladivostok. Not since June 1973, when former President Richard Nixon and the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev conferred at Camp David, Md., and in San Clemente, Calif., has a summit meeting been held in the United States.

At the Geneva summit, the two sides remain far apart on ways to curb the nuclear arms race. While considering a new U.S. proposal, Reagan has shown no inclination to include the "Star Wars" antimissile research program in the bargaining.

The Soviets, meanwhile, apparently are intent on blocking the development of a U.S. missile defense system.

Pentagon budget pits Senate against House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has voted to freeze Pentagon spending, placing it on a possible collision course with the Senate over total military outlays and on such controversial items as "Star Wars" research and chemical weapons.

The House gave 359-67 approval Wednesday to a bill that, along with other related measures, appropriates a $292 billion defense budget for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

At about the same time, the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee gave voice vote approval to its version of the defense budget. The measure, headed for a full committee vote next week and likely floor action later in the year, provides a Pentagon budget of $302 billion.

President Reagan originally sought to increase Pentagon spending from last year's $292 billion level to about $320 billion.

He has reluctantly approved the $302 billion Senate level, which would permit defense spending to rise at the expected inflation rate.

Any differences between the bills voted by the Democratic-controlled House and Republican-run Senate will be resolved later by a conference committee.

Two major differences involve chemical weapons, and "Star Wars," Reagan's antimissile research program known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The House bill appropriates $2.5 billion for SDI research, compared to last year's $1.4 billion, while the Senate subcommittee would spend $2.9 billion. Reagan originally asked for $3.7 billion.

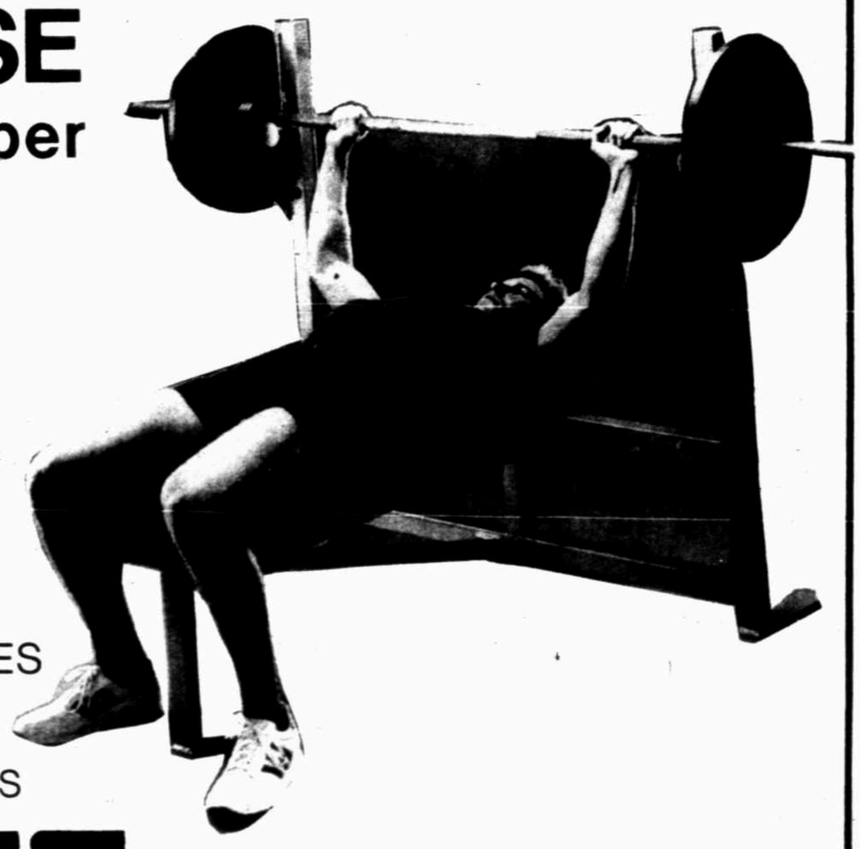

The Senate proposal also provides $163 million for nerve gas weapons, which the United States hasn't built since 1969, while the House bill knocked out all money for chemicals for a fourth straight year.

Nation's 'business'

Education is big business, in terms of dollars spent and the number of people involved.

In fact, it is estimated that in the school year that just began at least $260 billion will be spent to grease the wheels of schools and colleges. That includes the entire spectrum of costs, from salaries to food services, from transportation to building maintenance. If wisely spent, those who want American youth to be the best educated in the world will not resent a penny of it. Americans place a premium on the education of their children — from elementary school right through the university level. Historically, education played a major role in the founding of this country and remains today a primary concern of the populace.

Between now and next June about 56 million junior citizens will be students, some starting on the pre-elementary level, others attending elementary and secondary schools, and more than 12 million studying in colleges and universities. These millions of learners need a substantial battery of teachers and administrators to attend to their educational needs. The attention is being given by about 6 million in these two groups in 1985-86.

That's fortunate because the education of the nation's young people should take priority. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt once said: "The ultimate victory of tomorrow is democracy, and through democracy with education, for, no people in all the world can be kept eternally ignorant or eternally enslaved."

The education of the American people ensures the way to future freedom and the hope for liberty for people throughout the world. It's understandable, therefore, that Americans would make the educational system "big business."

Journalism in space

Hey, now, NASA is about to whoosh a journalist into space — something a lot of readers have been wanting to do to newspaper writers since Ottmar Merganthaler invented the Linotype typesetting machine in 1884.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says a journalist-spaceflier will be selected in April from eight regional candidates. The selectee will go into orbit in the space shuttle in September.

We can anticipate the result — the first story back from way out there as written by a real, honest-to-goodness newspaper person.

Sports writer: Watta sight. The world hung on the horizon like a big pelota. The skipper handled the first 200,000 miles in a record 14:10.2.

Religion writer: "Crummy invaders," God muttered, on observing our spaceship. Then he retreated another 500 million light-years into eternity.

Social columnist: Blue is definitely the color this season. Our spaceship was surrounded with blue, accented with the tiny dots of silver from the stars.

Editorial writer: The pomposity of man, invading the heavens, merging himself with the stars in their courses. Was the right decision made? Only time will tell.

Science writer: Leaving the atmosphere and injecting ourselves in the lower regions of cislunar space dropped the exterior temperature readings to -20 Celsius. The hypergol was holding well.

Editor (on earth): This piece is trash, but cut it by a third and we'll use it. It'll run Saturday, and nobody will read it, anyway.

Our impoverished children

A huge new class of poor Americans is quietly developing. It is made up of the most politically powerless, vulnerable and dependent of the nation's citizens. And the social and political consequences of the formation of this new impoverished class can only be imagined. We are talking about America's children.

A few statistics from a recent survey by The New York Times are sufficient to describe this growing group. Twenty-two percent of those under 18 — or about 13.8 million people — live below the poverty line, which the federal government now defines as a yearly income of $10,650 for a family of four. In 1969-1970, that percentage stood at 14.3 percent. The percentage of black children living in poverty has grown in that period to 48 from 39.6. (In black female-headed households, the figure approaches 70 percent!) About 2.5 million children are impoverished despite the fact that at least one adult in the family holds a full-time job.

Many factors a contributing to the growth of the phenomenon. They include the Reagan administration's massive cuts in social welfare spending, retrenchments that have been made even sharper by inflation; the rise in the number of single-parent families; and the startling increase in the birthrate among unwed teenagers. Moreover, as a percentage of their income, the amount of money paid in taxes by poor people has increased.

It is easy to see why the class has developed so insidiously. Poor children are not usually heads of households, and thus their plight is concealed within the larger problem of impoverished families. Not being voters, they possess no political power to catch the attention of lawmakers — as do the elderly who have successfully pressured Congress to keep improving the Social Security benefits that for many are a hedge against poverty. Hence, little government effort is being focused on the problem of the growing number of poor children.

If the problem has grown insidiously, it also almost certainly will be even more impervious to efforts to eradicate it. It is far easier for poor adults to escape poverty than poor children. The former may well be trainable or have job skills or work experience. Teenagers are less likely to have any of these advantages, and if the teenager also is an unwed mother, the chances of her being mired in poverty are even greater.

But sooner or later, children are old enough to vote — or to take to the streets in direct action. What vision of America will inform their social and political philosophy? What future will the nation have if millions upon millions of its children grow to adulthood mired in poverty — with neither the tools to escape it nor the hope that will lead them to try?

These are questions that few in government are even raising today. Yet unless they are confronted, the consequences for the American democracy could easily be disastrous.

— The St. Louis Post-Dispatch

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

One year ago — on Oct. 31, 1984 — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, a dominant figure in Indian politics for nearly two decades, was assassinated near her residence by two Sikh security guards. The attack was in revenge for the June army assault ordered by Mrs. Gandhi on the Golden Temple, the Sikh shrine located in Punjab state.

On this date:

In 1517, Martin Luther posted the 95 Theses on the door of the Wittenberg Palace church, marking the start of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

In 1864, Nevada became the 36th state.

Thought for today: "Martyrdom does not end something; it is only the beginning." — Indira Gandhi (1917-1984), in a speech to the Indian Parliament, August 12, 1971.

JACK ANDERSON

Nature survey called a waste

WASHINGTON — Have you watched any clams lately? Listened to any mussels? If you have, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wants to know all the fascinating details.

Jack Anderson

The agency proposes to spend $9 million on a nationwide survey to determine Americans' wildlife observation habits, if any. Beginning next January, Census Bureau interviewers will telephone 158,000 possible nature lovers and ask them such questions as:

"Were there any occasions when you enjoyed seeing or hearing wildlife while on a trip? Did these include turtles, frogs, lizards and snakes? Insects and spiders — crabs, clams, mussels, etc.?"

The 75-page questionnaire doesn't go into the technique of clam-watching. Presumably it is akin to watching grass grow — which is outside the Fish and Wildlife Service's purview.

Although the agency isn't interested in wildlife observations that occur on trips of less than a mile, or on the way to and from work or school, the questionnaire does give stay-at-homes a chance to participate, saying: "A person may enjoy the presence of birds while doing yard work. Did you enjoy this kind of opportunity in 1985?"

Didn't anyone object to the clam-watchers survey? Certainly. But a fat lot of good it did.

When flabbergasted cost-cutters at the Office of Management and Budget protested strongly that the survey was a dreadful waste of time and money, they were overruled.

The budget cutters tried every way they could to spike the project. OMB analysts said the survey was too long and that it violated the Paperwork Reduction Act. They argued that the $9 million, which is to come from excise taxes on hunting and fishing equipment, should be returned to the states instead. One budget analyst, Dave Allen, told our associate Corky Johnson he doubts that there's proper legal authority to spend the excise tax funds on such a survey.

Budget policy official Gail Coad wrote to Interior Department officials: "We have now concluded that the survey is far too long and contains numerous questions of little or dubious value."

She recommended "alternative approaches that might yield more reliable data," and added: "We think the accuracy of responses, especially those which depend on respondents' recall of year-old events, it sufficiently suspect as to cast serious doubt on the reliability of the survey."

What she was too polite to mention was the widespread feeling among the Budget Office staff that the survey was just plain silly. "You can't believe how people here were laughing about this," a Budget Office analyst said.

But Ms. Coad's decision to kill the project was overruled by her boss, Robert Bedell, after he got a letter from Fish and Wildlife Director Bill Horn. The survey also had the support of a review panel that included officials of the Agriculture Department and the Environmental Protection Agency.

The review panel brushed aside the budget-cutters' complaint that the questionnaire was too long, saying the respondents will "probably enjoy 'reliving' experiences" and thus wouldn't mind the hour or so it will take to recall their adventures with clams and mussels. Besides, the panel noted, the Fish and Wildlife staff had put forth a "tremendous" effort on the questionnaire, and it would be a shame to have it go to waste.

Agency officials point out the questionnaire gives them valuable information on hunting and fishing habits. They also say the survey is nothing new. Similar surveys have been conducted every five years since 1955.

AIDS & INSURANCE: Victims of AIDS may soon have to worry about insurance coverage for the staggering cost of their disease. Some insurance companies are pressuring state governments to share the results of the new AIDS blood tests so they can identify high-risk customers. Those with positive test results would then be charged higher premiums or have their policies canceled. The only other solution, insurance officials say, would be to raise rates for single males or deny coverage to known homosexuals. The problem with using the tests, of course, is that they identify only about one in 10 of those who will contract AIDS.

MINI-EDITORIAL: The painstaking detail with which President Reagan's colon cancer was reported was justifiable. After all, he is the most important single official in the Western world and his health is a legitimate matter of public concern. But does this apply to the president's wife as well? We think not. Surely Mrs. Reagan is entitled to a modicum of privacy when she goes to the doctor. Yet every technical detail of her recent examination was duly reported in the press.

GEORGE F. WILL

No fresh starts in game of chess

WASHINGTON — It is paradoxical. It also is true. The conservatives' task is to pull this conservative President, and U.S. diplomacy generally, out of the 19th century and into the 20th. This conclusion is compelled by President Reagan's peculiar and opaque rhetoric about a "fresh start" in U.S.-Soviet relations.

George F. Will

This conclusion is paradoxical because conservatives have a retrospective cast of mind. Their cardinal virtue, prudence, involves mining the past for instructive precedents and proven institutions and procedures. Furthermore, the greatest figures of 19th-century diplomacy — Metternich, Wellington, Bismarck, Disraeli — are in the conservatives' pantheon.

Nevertheless, the conservatives' problem today is that President Reagan, although a definer of contemporary conservatism, subscribes to a model of diplomacy that reflects the 18th-century liberal mind. This is so even though the model was adopted, not unreasonably, by those 19th-century conservatives.

The problem is the radical newness of a kind of 20th-century regime, and the depressing oldness of rhetoric about a "fresh start." What did Reagan mean by that? Indeed, what could he mean?

He is painfully fond of the least-conservative sentiment conceivable, a statement taken from an anti-conservative, Thomas Paine: "We have it in our power to begin the world over again." Any time, any place, that is nonsense. But that may have been how things looked in 18th-century America, on the thinly populated fringe of an unexplored continent, or in revolutionary France, in the first flush of upheaval.

Many people then believed in "fresh starts" because society was not planted thick with institutions, or old institutions suddenly seemed fragile. They believed that people everywhere were similar, essentially good and easily educable. "The present age," said Paine, "will hereafter merit to be called the Age of Reason, and the present generation will appear to the future as the Adam of a new world." Some people also believed, with Paine, that the "science of government" is "of all thing the least mysterious and the most easy to be understood," because "men have but to think and they will neither act wrong nor be misled."

Reagan has repeatedly used Paine's words about beginning the world "over again" concerning domestic policy. One result of his sincere belief in "fresh starts" is the deficit. The theory was that we would cut taxes and then compensate for the lost revenues by cutting spending. We would start "over again," making a "fresh start" in defining federal social roles, as though the New Deal and Great Society never happened. But it is, it seems, impossible to start over again at even, say, 1965 levels of social spending. It is not even possible to make a "fresh start" without Amtrak.

Applied to domestic policy, the idea of a "fresh start" has produced fiscal problems. Applied to foreign policy, it can produce disaster.

Americans believe in "fresh starts," meaning limitless possibility, because they think all people, and all regimes, think "economically," rationally calculating how to enhance their essentially similar interests. That assumption would be true, or true enough, were the world as Paine thought it was. He said there were just two types of government: those "by election and representation" and those "by hereditary succession." He predicted that all governments soon would be representative and then "nations will become acquainted, and prejudices fomented by the intrigues and artifices of courts will cease."

The 19th century was not that serene, but it was relatively tranquil. Irving Kristol, writing in "The National Interest," a new foreign-policy quarterly of conservative bent, says that 19th-century diplomats represented regimes that regarded one another as permanent presences. They defined national interests in limited and familiar ways that allowed conflicts to be resolved by splitting differences. Sometimes the splitting was done after wars — but they were limited wars. Governments maneuvered to alter, but not obliterate, the "equilibrium" among powers. The rules of that game of nations allowed for time-outs, and fresh starts.

The rules changed radically with the eruption in this century of totalitarian regimes whose foreign policies reflect domestic arrangements resting on lies and terror. Regimes that derive their claims to legitimacy from ideologies that legitimize limitless violence are not interested in the 19th-century ideal of "equilibrium."

Today's synonym for "equilibrium" is "stability." We seek a "stable" relationship in strategic arms and "stability" in regional conflicts. The Soviet Union derides stability in theory and assails it in practice.

America is a nation of poker players. Poker is a game of fresh starts — play a hand, shuffle the deck, deal again. The Soviet Union plays chess and pursues endgame.

ART BUCHWALD

Officials say send money!

A friend I know, who earns a living trying to persuade Congress to help protect the Singles Bar Industry, told me that political fund-raising is getting out of hand on The Hill.

Art Buchwald

He said, "Senator Doublechin called last week and asked me to contribute to his election campaign. I sent over a check by messenger. This morning he phoned again and wanted more money. Enough's enough."

"Is it possible he forgot he called last week?"

"He didn't forget. He's holding me up because he thinks I need him."

"Do you?"

"Perhaps. But he doesn't have to be greedy about it. I have other senators to feed as well."

"Suppose you don't send him any more money? What then?"

"He won't answer my calls."

"Would that be so bad?"

"It isn't just the calls. It means that he won't see me, and if he refuses to let me in his office how can I persuade him the government has to subsidize singles bars? When you donate money to politicians you're not buying their votes — you're purchasing access to power so you can lay out your case," he said. "How does a senator know how to vote when I can't tell him?"

"He has to see you. You're a U.S. citizen."

"Senators and congressmen can only talk to so many people a day. They have no choice but to see the people who gave to their campaigns, as opposed to those who didn't."

"It sounds reasonable. But you told me that you already gave to Doublechin's election. Would he punish you because you didn't give twice?"

"That isn't the way Doublechin sees it. He claims he's in a neck-and-neck fight, and if I want to protect my first investment I have to give again. He intimated that if I didn't he would lose and then the Singles Bar Industry would never have a friend in the Senate again."

"Did you send the money over?"

"I was about to when Congressman Jingo called and asked me to make a donation to his campaign."

"When it comes to giving political money doesn't a senator outrank a congressman?" I asked.

"No sir. Congressman Jingo is chairman of the House Subcommittee on Singles Bars."

"Does he tilt toward your industry?"

"Not yet. But the fact he called and asked for such a heavy contribution indicates he's not tilting the other way. I sent him the check without fear or favor."

"It's hard to believe our system of government depends on senators and congressmen stooping to plead for money over the phone."

"I've taken 250 calls this year. What happens is the legislator sets aside four hours a day and goes down a list his aides give him of every potential donor. They always call me because I control a political action committee fund. The singles bar owners forward the PAC money to me and I dispense it to our 'friends.'"

"Don't you feel bad about subverting the democratic process?"

"Not really. There wouldn't be a democratic process if we special interests didn't fund it. Every elected official I get out of the hole swears to uphold the Constitution of the United States, as well as say a few nice words about singles bars."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 7 p.m. Thursday

Temperatures get cooler

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fall has finally hit Midland with cool day and night temperatures.

Tonight's low is expected to be near 40 with increasing cloudiness and cooler weather. Less than a 20 percent chance of isolated showers is predicted for any given location, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal says.

Tonight's winds will shift from east to northeast at 10 to 20 mph.

Friday is expected to be cloudy and colder with a 20 percent chance of showers. The high will be near 60 with winds northeast at 10 to 20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 63 degrees missed the record mark by 25 degrees. The record high for Wednesday's date was 88 degrees set in 1963. Today's low of 42 degrees was 10 degrees away from setting a record. The record low for today's date is 32 degrees set in 1949.

STATE

Tropical Storm Juan continued to move away from Texas early today, reducing the once-heavy rainfall over Southeast Texas and eastern sections of the state to light drizzle and occasional light rain.

But there was something new added to Texas forecasts for tonight. There's the chance of some light snow mixed with some scattered showers expected over portions of West Texas. No accumulation is expected.

Juan, the former hurricane, was drifting slowly eastward early today, just off the Louisiana coast. It was located at dawn just west of the mouthe of the Mississippi River, forecasters said.

NATION

Rain spread from the Atlantic Coast to Texas and Oklahoma today, and Tropical Storm Juan whipped up gale-force winds, prompting flood watches along the Gulf of Mexico.

Showers stretched from the Carolinas across northern Florida, the Tennessee Valley, the Gulf region and the lower Mississippi Valley through eastern Texas and Oklahoma.

Juan was near the mouth of the Mississippi River early today, and gale-force wind warnings extended from Apalachicola, Fla., to Port O'Conner, Texas.

Flood watches were in effect over extreme southern Mississippi and a coastal flood warning was posted from near Clearwater, Fla., to Cape Sable, Fla.

Today's forecast called for rain from southern Michigan across the lower Ohio Valley and from the lower Mississippi Valley and southeastern Missouri across the Atlantic Coast from Georgia through Maryland.

Holiday Bowl dilemma: Can Air Force be had?

By WAYEN LOCLWOOD
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Like a philandering husband, the Holiday Bowl may have appreciated too late the joys of wedded bliss.

In this year of trial separation from the Western Athletic Conference, local bowl-game officials find themselves in the somewhat awkward position of having to woo that which once was theirs.

What do they say after they've said they're sorry? We love you, Air Force.

This is an "open year" in the contract between the Holiday Bowl and the WAC, which means a team from that conference may or may not be invited to compete and may or may not choose to accept the invitation.

The intent was to sever the umbilical cord linking the bowl and Brigham Young University, a bond that had grown increasingly restrictive to both parties.

The Cougars were eager to breathe the heady air of New Year's Day, for a change.

The Holiday Bowl, while appreciative of BYU's excellence and loyal following, was uncomfortable with a contestant that had appeared here seven years in a row.

So the deed was done. Just to make sure, the game was scheduled for Dec. 22, a Sunday. BYU will not play on the sabbath.

All well and good, except for one thing. BYU chose this year not to win the WAC, at least not outright.

After last week's shocking loss to Texas-El Paso, the Cougars slipped out of the lead and out of the wire services' top 10.

The WAC leader? Undefeated Air Force, which has advanced to a No. 7 ranking in the AP poll and is rated No. 6 in the land by UPI.

The Holiday Bowl would love to have Air Force. But though the Falcons would have been contractually obligated to appear here in any other season, they must be courted and won in 1985.

"In all honesty," says Holiday Bowl executive John Reid, "the one team we would covet most highly right now — and they might be too good for us — is Air Force.

"We're not supposed to say that. But it's probably pretty obvious."

One thing working in the Holiday Bowl's favor is Air Force's schedule. After this week's date with San Diego State, the Falcons must face once-beaten Army, which defeated them last season, and then travel to Provo for a date with BYU.

The Holiday Bowl is in the position of having to hope Air Force loses ... but not too much.

One loss, and the Falcons are still an attractive, and perhaps available, bowl team. Two losses, and they probably fall out of the top 20.

"If BYU wins, I think we've got a shot at Air Force. I really do," says Reid.

If not, who knows?

Whatever happens, Reid feels his group did what it had to do in moving toward an open bowl this season.

"I've probably been asked that 97 times already," he said, "but, no, I don't regret it. There may be some individuals in our group who are second-guessing themselves, but it hasn't been made known to me.

"In the history of bowl games, there's never been a team appear seven times in a row in the same game. We just really had to have some variety.

"I guess if we had known last year — with the benefit of 20-20 hindsight — that we weren't going to get a network contract (the game will be syndicated by Lorimar Productions), we might have tried to delay the open year and used it as a bargaining chip with the networks later. But we had to do it sooner or later.

"The positive side of it is that our ticket buyers, sponsors and so forth seem genuinely enthused about it. The other side of it is that without BYU, we don't have the slam-dunk ticket sale they provided."

To generate enthusiasm to compensate for that, the Holiday Bowl must come up with an attractive matchup, with or without Air Force.

"Its no secret that we've had a great affinity for Pac-10 and Big Ten teams in the past," says Reid.

"The problem right now is that things haven't sorted themselves in either league. The Pac-10 has five teams with one loss. The Big Ten has one undefeated team (Iowa) and four others with one loss.

"We might get an Ohio State, or they might go to the Rose Bowl. We might get Washington or USC, or they might go to the Rose Bowl."

What the Holiday Bowl will not have is Ohio State and USC. No bowl game except the Rose is permitted to match Big Ten and Pac-10 teams.

"That goes back to the Bluebonnet Bowl a few years ago when Michigan played UCLA," Reid recalls.

"There was all kinds of promotion coming out of Houston about the 'real Rose Bowl.' That got their dander up a little bit in Pasadena. They got a rule passed."

In addition to the more obvious bowl possibilities, Reid is intrigued by such teams as Tennessee and Minnesota.

"Tennessee has a lot of appeal because they've done well (tied UCLA, defeated Auburn and Alabama) and they have crazy fans who will travel anywhere," Reid says. "Of course, losing (injured quarterback Tony) Robinson could hurt them the rest of the way.

"Minnesota has a large following and the Cinderella factor." Long a Big Ten doormat, the Gophers are 5-2, and both losses have come at the hands of top 10 teams (Oklahoma, 13-7, and Ohio State, 23-19).

Minnesota's final two games are against Michigan and Iowa, however.

"Of course, if we get them, we lose our color announcer," Reid says. Gophers coach Lou Holtz is tentatively scheduled for that role at the Holiday Bowl, should his team not be invited to any postseason competition.

Crane, Ballinger in 7-3A title fight

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

While the battle goes on in District 8-2A, it's easy to overlook the jockeying for position going on in Crane's District 7-3A.

The Cranes, now 3-0, 7-1, have quietly marched toward Friday's head-to-head encounter with Ballinger, the only other undefeated team in the district. As quietly, that is, as anyone can score 110 points in two ballgames.

This week, however, coach Rickey White expects to make a little noise as he takes his Cranes into Ballinger's packed stadium. He also expects anything but a runaway against the defending champions.

"Ballinger is a very strong football team, always has been. Of course we've played 'em the last four years and haven't beaten 'em though we tied them down there (13-13 in 1983) the year we went to the playoffs," White said.

What White and the Cranes are looking for of course, is a return to the playoffs, a win Friday would assure that.

"We're all excited. The kids are excited, the staff is excited, this is just a good ol' high school football game. They sit about 3-4,000 down there and then they pack 'em in 10 deep around the sides," White said. "This is what high school football is all about."

The Cranes, a physically big team with several multi-talented players, have been showing the rest of the district what running the football is all about.

Tailback Gerald Mitchell is one of the area's premier backs as a junior. Already he's passed the 1,000-yard barrier, picking up 211 in a 56-6 rout of Ozona to go to 1,018 on the season. His backfield mate, senior fullback Cliff Wilson has provided the inside punch to keep defenses honest with 275 yards in three district games.

And if Ballinger is able to control the running game at the line of scrimmage, something only McCamey has been able to do on the Cranes, look for White to turn to quarterback Abel Sena.

Sena, also a senior, has thrown a total of 10 touchdown passes, though he hasn't been called on to throw nearly as much in district play.

Italy has 1A defense down to A-1 science

ITALY, Texas (AP) — The Italy High School football team has devised a simple, but highly effective strategy for winning. The Gladiators don't allow their opponents to score. Not at all.

What's more, no team has even pushed inside Italy's 20-yard-line yet. The closest thing to a score was when Frost recovered a fumble at the Italy 25 last Friday, but couldn't move and then missed a field goal attempt.

In eight games, Italy has outscored its opponents 361-0 while running its record to 8-0 and rising to No. 4 among Class 1A schools statewide in the Associated Press high school football poll.

"Shutting out everyone is a goal we set at the beginning of the year, but you never realistically believe it will happen," head football coach W.E. (Willie) Roten said.

As sterling as the string of eight shutouts is, the offense is potent, too. The 361 points is the highest total of any team in North Texas this year. The next closest is Denison, a Class 4-A school, which has 305 points.

There's no jealousy at Italy among offensive starters about publicity the defense gets, or vice versa, however.

That's because when you talk about the defense, you're also talking about the offense. At Italy, as with most other schools in Class A, most players end up playing both offense and defense.

"Eight of our offensive starters are also starters on defense," Roten said. Of 22 varsity players, 13 are seniors and have played together since elementary school. The line, averaging almost 200 pounds, is very large for a Class A school.

Much of Italy's success on offense this season can be attributed to the field position it enjoyed because of the stingy defense, Roten said.

"It's kind of been a situation where they defense played well and the offense hadn't had to go very far, a lot of times," Roten said.

Quarterback Kyle Holley directs the Italy offense, but the emphasis has been on a ground game spearheaded by fullback Steve Copeland and two players who have alternated at tailback, Charles Davis and Clint Riddle.

Italy opened the season with a 34-0 victory over Whitney and followed by beating Itasca 46-0, Grandview 41-0, Cayuga 48-0, Trinidad 42-0, Cross Roads 57-0, Scurry-Rosser 44-0 and Frost 49-0.

Equestrian show opens two-day Midland run

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Annie Anderson Koonce and "Clockwork" go over a jump under the watchful eye of Betty Mendell, who heads this week's horse show competition, which will include jumping and dressage Saturday and Sunday.

From Staff Reports

What could be more spectacular than the combined talents of a horse and its rider as they participate in one of the largest equestrian shows of its kind in the country?

This is what West Texans will have the opportunity to see when the West Texas Dressage and Combined Training Association, along with the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center Parents Association, present the third annual benefit Horse Trials.

The two-day event, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, will be free to the public, although proceeds derived from the sponsors and concessions will benefit both of the associations.

The first day's events will be held at Staley Farm in north Midland and will include dressage and stadium-jumping phases of the trials. On the second day, the event will consist of the cross-country phase and will be held 1.6 miles south of Midland on Farm Road 714.

Horses and riders from all over the Southwest will be in attendance, since the Horse Trials are one of many shows needed for Area Awards points.

All three competitions began as a test used in determining calvary officer's mounts and their ability to perform special missions. Each mount was judged on its ability to withstand long pursuits across the country, as well as their ability to overcome any obstacles they might encounter. From this the competition of cross country and stadium jumping evolved.

"Dressage" means training; and the competition itself is based on a series of routines that the horse and rider must perform accurately. The years of skill and talent of a rider combined with the training of a horse exhibit a seemingly effortless production of grace and beauty in this competition.

THE TRIALS will exhibit two divisions of competition. Novice and Open training, each being graded according to the horse's ability.

The Cerebral Palsy Parent's Association's primary functions are to promote health, happiness and welfare to children benefiting from the C.P. Center, to use and apply gifts or endowments in behalf of the Association and to provide a support group for the parents.

According to Marsha Childers, president of the Parents Association, the proceeds will be applied to the newly-founded lending library at the CPC. The library consists of therapy, equipment, books and materials, which can be borrowed by the parents of the children attending the CPC.

The parent's group also helped to establish a permanent therapeutic horseback riding program at the center. According to occupational therapist Debbie Newcum, riding increases strength and mobility in children and handicaps. Horses are used to accentuate body movements in order to facilitate those movements the children need every day.

Nets rally from 19 back to tip Pacers

Associated Press

Let this be a warning to any National Basketball Association team that leads the New Jersey Nets by 19 points in the third quarter.

You could be in for a long night.

The Nets got a remarkable all-around performance from guard Micheal Ray Richardson Wednesday night as he scored a career-high 38 points and added 11 rebounds, 11 assists and nine steals in a 147-138 triple-overtime victory over the Indiana Pacers. The Nets trailed 91-72 late in the third quarter before rallying.

On opening night last Friday, New Jersey also trailed by 19 points in the third period before beating the Boston Celtics in double overtime.

"We showed our pride when we came back," said Richardson, whose previous high-point total was 36 against New York last year. "Once I got my second wind in the fourth quarter I felt I couldn't miss. I was in the right places at both ends of the court."

After losing to the Pacers 119-92 on Saturday, Richardson vowed he would get even in Wednesday's rematch. It took him a while, but he finally did it, with help from Otis Birdsong, Darryl Dawkins and Buck Williams.

Birdsong scored 28 points, Dawkins hit 10 of 12 field goals and scored 25 points, and Williams had 20 points and 23 rebounds as New Jersey set a team record with 65 rebounds, one more than the previous high.

"Pride was the difference," Nets Coach Dave Wohl said. "It was more mental toughness than anything else. Sugar (Richardson) was great. He took over when the game was in the balance and did what he had to do."

NBA Roundup

Jazz 102, Spurs 100

Utah, which lost to San Antonio 124-112 on Tuesday night in Texas, returned home to turn the tables on the Spurs.

San Antonio had a 97-88 lead with 6:40 left in the game, but the Spurs scored only three points the rest of the way.

Adrian Dantley led the Jazz with 33 points, while Artis Gilmore and Mike Mitchell had 20 each for San Antonio. Spurs forward David Greenwood was 8-for-10 from the field and scored 17 points.

"We didn't get the ball in to Artis and Greenwood enough," Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "It was always in the hands of the guards. We needed to get it inside more."

Celtics 117, Bucks 106

Kevin McHale, Dennis Johnson, Larry Bird and Robert Parish each scored 20 or more points to lead Boston over Milwaukee.

Bird, who made only 10 of 31 field goal attempts in the Celtics' first two games, was 7-for-8 from the field and scored 22 points, 16 of them in the second quarter to help Boston take a 62-51 halftime lead.

The Celtics increased the margin to 17 points early in the second half, but with Bird on the bench with foul trouble the Bucks cut the deficit to three points at three different times in the fourth period.

But Johnson, who had 24 points, scored seven in a two-minute span to help the Celtics pull ahead 105-94.

McHale led Boston with 25 points, while Parish added 20. Ricky Pierce paced Milwaukee with 26.

76ers 132, Pistons 125

Moses Malone had 31 points and 14 rebounds to carry Philadelphia past Detroit.

A free throw by Rick Mahorn, who had 19 points and 16 rebounds, brought the Pistons to within 121-118 with 1:30 left in overtime, but a layup and free throw by Malone with 1:14 to go sealed the victory for the 76ers.

Julius Erving, whose free throw with 16 seconds left in regulation tied the game 113-113 and forced the extra period, had 24 points and rookie Terry Catledge had 19 points and 14 rebounds for the 76ers. Vinnie Johnson had 26 points and Kelly Tripucka 20 for Detroit.

An unexpected good time

The 1985 World Series was kind of like one of those parties you don't want to go to, you try to get out of – and then you go and have the time of your life. You wind up at 2 a.m. singing "Mother Machree" on top of the piano with your arms around guys you never saw before in your life swearing they're the greatest bunch of guys you ever met up with and why don't we do this more often?

The Series started out as the most silent Series this side of Mack Sennett but then the calliope started up and they sent in the clowns and everybody kicked off their shoes and began to have a ball.

It's strange how two 11-0 final games, which normally you would expect to send the audience home snoring, can produce some of the most talked-about moments in Series history.

The last 11-0 finale in the annual classic was in 1934. Dizzy Dean pitched a six-hit shutout for the St. Louis Cardinals over Detroit but no one remembers that. All anyone recalls is that Cardinal left fielder Joe "Ducky" Medwick had to be ejected from the game by the commissioner of baseball for circumstances beyond his control.

Ducky was batting .379 and having a great Series with a homer and a triple when he slid hard into third base with his three-bagger in the sixth inning of Game 7 in Detroit.

The score at the time was Cardinals 9, Detroit 0, and the mood of the autoworkers in the seats ranged from ugly to homicidal.

The slide into third was apparently hard but legal, only third baseman Marvin Owen was having one of those World Series you scream about. A .317 batter during the regular season, he was 2 for 29 in the Series or .069 at the plate. He didn't even want to see Medwick much less get bumped by him.

When Medwick went to the outfield, he got pelted with everything but transmissions and hubcaps and Commissioner K. M. Landis had no recourse but to remove him from the game under police escort.

So you think ballplayers have changed?

Come with me then to the fifth inning of Game 7 last Sunday night in Kansas City. Once again, one team is down, 9-0, in the final game and you could cut the frustration in the losing dugout with a knife.

There are two outs and a man on first and third and four runs across the plate when out of the bullpen comes Joaquin (Don't Blame Me) Andujar, one tough Dominican.

Now, Joaquin is nobody's mop-up pitcher. Joaquin is a 21-game winner with 110 major league victories. But, Joaquin is having a poor-to-terrible World Series and Joaquin does not suffer adversity in the way, say, a St. Francis of Assissi might be expected to. Joaquin, in short, is looking for somebody to blame.

At least one member of the media, longtime Joaquin-watcher Randy Youngman, thinks this combination of circumstances was well-known to Joaquin's manager, Whitey Herzog. Whitey, some feel, knew he was ordering a volcano to the scene at that juncture, and that it was just a question of a pitch or so before baseball's Vesuvius would be in fine furious eruption.

You see, the home-plate umpire was one Don Denkinger. Don is a pretty good umpire but he might have blown a call Saturday night that cost Whitey Herzog a World Series is all.

It's debatable, but the point is, Whitey had delivered himself of a white paper on the subject in post-game interviews Saturday night and the matter may have come to the attention of Joaquin, his terrible tempered pitcher.

Joaquin, you see, takes things personally. Joaquin could not have taken too kindly to being called into a 9-0 game in the fifth inning with the count 2 and 0 on the batter. As the Fench General Gamelin said when he was flown over the German breakthrough in World War II, "They have handed me a disaster." Joaquin not only had a disaster, he was behind on the count.

He was shortly to be further behind when, after Frank White singled, Umpire Denkinger called ball three on a pitch Andujar rather liked on the inside part of the plate.

Joaquin began to wave his fingers wildly in the general direction of home plate where these gestures either had to be directed at Denkinger or his catcher, Darrell Porter. Whitey Herzog then came out to keep Andujar from getting tossed out and in the process was tossed himself.

When Denkinger called ball four a moment later, all ambiguity was removed. Joaquin charged home plate like a kamikaze pilot swooping down the smokestack of a battleship with all guns blazing.

Kronimo never looked more ferocious. A molten lava of words poured down Joaquin's chin and rained down on poor Denkinger who was doing his best not to look frightened.

It was not baseball's finest hour. Herzog came running back out of the dugout. Like his pitcher, he appeared to be frothing at the mouth. Just why is unclear. Because the pitch that Denkinger had just called ball four was so obviously ball four that everyone, including Herzog's catcher, knew it was. In any case, what is the sense of arguing about a single pitch or even a pair of them in a 10-0 game?

Andujar is a talented pitcher. But he had just given up a hit and a walk in a Series in which he had given up 10 hits and 4 runs in just 4 innings and his ERA was a nice round 9.00 and he was mopping up in relief like some kind of sore-armed junk thrower and he was hopping mad.

The proposition in some quarters is that all this was abundantly clear to his manager Sunday night and that Herzog knew he was delivering a bomb in a suitcase to the proceedings when he sent Joaquin to the mound. Diplomats call this a "provocation."

I hope it was not Whitey's intention. I hope for baseball's sake it is above such ugly reprisals but I do know this: 20 years from now more people are going to remember the World Series of 1985 for that incident, for what Joaquin Andujar, Whitey Herzog and Don Denkinger did, rather than for what Bret Saberhagen or George Brett did. If you don't think so, just ask some old-timer what he remembers of the 1934 World Series. Bet me it ain't Dizzy Dean's shutout. It's Ducky Medwick's throwout.

If that isn't enough, White also has perhaps the best defensive prospect in West Texas in 6-4, 210-pound Kenny Walker at defensive end. Walker is both an intimidator and a tackler and no one has found a way to stop him yet.

"We'll try to do what we do best, and that is run the football," White says. "But we're certainly not afraid to throw. Maybe if they shut us off, we'll throw it more, but we're going to make them stop our inside game.

"Besides we want to play ball control. Ballinger is a big play team, they can score from anywhere on the field. I'd like to keep the ball away from them."

Should all that firepower still not be enough to stop Ballinger, Crane can still look forward to another chance for the final playoff berth. The following week, the Cranes return home to play Colorado City, a 38-7 loser to Ballinger last week, and the only other contender in the district.

FBI finds no reason to continue Cowboy probe

MIAMI (AP) — An internal FBI probe has concluded there was no reason to investigate allegations that five members of the Dallas Cowboys fixed games in the early 1980s in exchange for cocaine, the former chief of the Dallas FBI office said.

"It's a non-issue. It's over with," Thomas Kelly, the former Dallas agent-in-charge, told The Miami News in an article published Wednesday.

The allegations against the National Football League team were forwarded to the FBI in Dallas in February 1983 by a former agent in Miami who has since pleaded guilty to drug-related charges.

The inquiry was strictly an internal FBI matter and neither the Cowboy organization nor any players was subjects in a criminal investigation, the FBI said.

The internal FBI investigation, begun earlier this month, cleared officials for not looking into the drug report when it was received.

"The findings were that there was no coverup by anyone nor any basis for an investigation in the first place," said Kelly, who gave FBI investigators a lengthy sworn statement on the matter.

In Dallas, Cowboys President Tex Schramm told The Associated Press that "unfortunately that (Kelly's statement) won't be in headlines across the country. The earlier stories still left the impression that there was grounds for an investigation. That points out unfairness of that type of story."

The NFL also was looking into the allegations, brought by former agent Dan Mitrione. NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Tuesday the inquiry was ongoing.

Browne said if the FBI probe is indeed over, "we're obviously pleased."

FBI officials in Washington, D.C., had no comment on Kelly's statement, saying no information is released on internal investigation reports.

At the time he made the allegations, Mitrione was an agent in good standing working on a Fort Lauderdale-based drug probe. His report was addressed to Kelly but never reached him.

FBI Supervisory Agent Jim Siano has confirmed the account by Kelly, who recently was nominated by U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese to be deputy administrator of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Siano said he didn't investigate Mitrione's report because it was too vague to be useful.

Mitrione admitted becoming corrupted during the drug operation and pleaded guilty in March to charges of bribery, conspiracy and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute.

Hagler-Mugabi fight called off

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — While Marvelous Marvin Hagler, beset by a back problem and a broken nose, won't be defending his middleweight title against John Mugabi on Nov. 14, talks are apparently underway in an effort to save the rest of the Las Vegas boxing show.

Hagler, it was revealed Wednesday, suffered a broken nose a day earlier in a sparring session. And during an examination later in the day, symptoms of a ruptured disc in his back were found.

The injuries will shelve the undisputed middleweight champion for five to six weeks. But the show may go on without him.

A source who requested anonymity said talks were being held between Top Rank Inc., the fight promoter, and Home Box Office, a cable-television network, to televise a bout from the Hagler undercard involving former World Boxing Council junior middleweight champion Thomas Hearns. But the source said that HBO wants Hearns to fight Mugabi instead of his current scheduled opponent, James Shuler.

Earlier, Caesar's Palace spokeswoman Debbie Munch had said that "there will be no boxing at Caesar's Palace on Nov. 14."

A head butt during the second round of a sparring session Tuesday with Zachary Hewitt left Hagler with his broken nose. Both Hewitt, a 22-year-old junior middleweight with a 21-3 record and 14 knockouts, and Hagler were surprised by the injury.

"I thought it was my blood," Hewitt said of the small amount of blood resulting from the head butt.

"I'm very disappointed," the 31-year-old Hagler said. "I was just getting into my training program and then this happened. I felt really good going into yesterday's workout, and then I got butted. I've heard of this happening to other fighters, but this is the first time it's ever happened to me."

Hagler finished the sparring round with Hewitt, then completed the workout with some shadow boxing. Several hours later, Hagler realized the severity of the injury and requested treatment.

Red Wings finally notch mark in victory column, 6-3

Associated Press

The Quebec Nordiques lost a hockey game. That's news. The Detroit Red Wings won one. That's big news.

The Red Wings, winless in the National Hockey League since an opening-night tie with Minnesota, got three goals from Danny Gare and closed the ledger Wednesday night at 1-8-1 after a 6-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

"I think we got mad at them instead of at ourselves," a relieved Gare said after Detroit's nine-game winless streak was history. "You say to yourself, 'We got to stop this thing.' There's a lot of young players on this team and you don't want them to get down."

Meanwhile, in Hartford, the best laid plans of high-flying Quebec went up in smoke when the Whalers, getting two goals from Sylvain Turgeon, came away with a 6-4 victory to hand the Nordiques only their second loss of the season.

The Nordiques had Richard Sevigny, who had lost just once in 13 career appearances against Hartford, in the net. They outshot Hartford 41-26, but converted just one of six power plays.

"We had the lead but made some bad plays on our own," said Quebec associate coach Simon Nolet. "Give Hartford credit . . . they worked."

Red Wings 6, Penguins 3

Gare's goals — giving him four for the season — came in the first period, and Czechoslovak defector Petr Klima snapped a second-period tie with his third goal of the season.

Klima, who joined the Red Wings in September, beat Pittsburgh's Roberto Romano on a wrist shot from a sharp angle with 1:05 remaining in the second period to put Detroit ahead 4-3.

"There's been a lot of changes on this club," Gare said. "We have five or six rookies, a new coach . . . it's going to take time."

Dwight Foster and Ron Duguay had the other Detroit goals, while Moe Mantha, Mike Blaisdell and Willy Lindstrom scored for Pittsburgh against Greg Stefan.

NHL Roundup

Whalers 6, Nordiques 4

Turgeon, who had two third-period assists the previous night, scored twice on assists by Ron Francis within a 2:11 span in the final period to give Hartford its victory.

"We're working hard and pushing each other," said Turgeon, who also had an assist.

He deflected home a centering pass from Francis to tie the game at 1:56, and scored on a rebound of a shot by Francis on a Whaler power play for the winner at 4:07.

Dave Tippett added two goals for Hartford. Ray Neufeld and Ray Ferraro had the others.

Wayne Babych, Michel Goulet, John Anderson and Dale Hunter scored for Quebec.

Oilers 7, Jets 3

Wayne Gretzky picked up three assists in just 77 seconds late in the second period to propel Edmonton over Winnipeg.

Gretzky made perfect passes to Glenn Anderson at 14:23 and Jari Kurri at 15:13 and 15:40 against goaltender Brian Hayward.

Paul Coffey, Mark Messier, Mike Krushelnyski and Craig MacTavish also scored for the Oilers. Scott Arniel, Randy Carlyle and Thomas Steen countered for the Jets, who had beaten the two-time defending Stanley Cup champions 9-3 last week.

Flyers 5, Canadiens 4

Brian Propp scored his second goal of the night just 65 seconds after Rich Sutter had tied the game for Philadelphia as the Flyers padded their Patrick Division lead to four points over the idle New York Rangers.

Tim Kerr also scored twice for Philadelphia.

Propp beat Doug Soetaert, starting in the Montreal goal for the first time this season, at 12:29 of the third period, on a pass from Dave Poulin.

Sutter had tied the game at 11:24 when he took Rick Tocchet's pass from behind the net and beat Soetaert.

Ryan Walter, Bob Gainey, Chris Chelios and Bobby Smith scored for the Canadiens — last in the Adams Division — against Pelle Lindbergh.

Black Hawks 6, North Stars 5

Chicago's Denis Savard, who also had two assists, beat Minnesota's Don Beaupre on a 40-foot shot with 2:16 remaining as the Black Hawks knocked the North Stars out of first place in the Norris Division.

The Black Hawks, who led 3-1 after a period, eventually found themselves behind 5-4. But a shot by Curt Fraser, who had two goals, hit the stick of Minnesota's Bob Rouse and went into the net to tie the game at 13:46 of the third period.

Al Secord, Doug Wilson and Bill Gardner had the other Chicago goals.

Brian Bellows scored two goals and Kent Nilsson, Craig Hartsburg and Tom McCarthy also beat Chicago's Murray Bannerman.

Flames 4, Sabres 2

Calgary goaltender Marc D'Amour, making his first start at home, kicked out 34 shots to hand Buffalo its first road loss in four games.

Calgary, nursing a 2-1 lead, scored twice within 22 seconds to put the game away in the third period.

Lanny McDonald tipped a goalmouth pass from Jim Peplinski behind goaltender Tom Barrasso at 7:31. Then Dan Quinn took a pass from defenseman Steve Konroyd and scored on a breakaway at 7:53.

Colin Patterson and Steve Bozek also scored for the Flames.

Hannu Virta and Gates Orlando had goals for the Sabres.

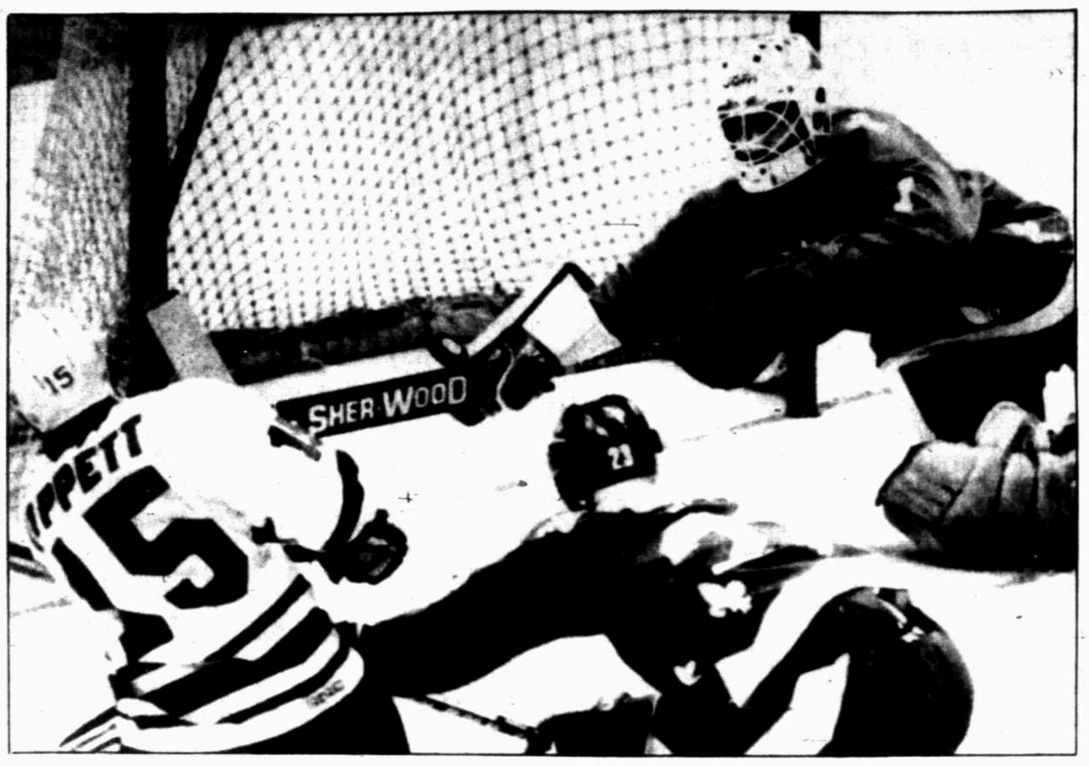

Canucks 5, Maple Leafs 3

Tony Tanti, who had tied the game at 3-3 in the final minute of the second period, scored the game-winning goal — his eighth of the season — midway through the third period.

The loss was Toronto's eighth in nine games. In this one, the Maple Leafs had a 2-0 lead in the first period.

Patrik Sundstrom, Jiri Bubla and Moe Lemay also scored for Vancouver.

Rookie Wendel Clark scored two goals and Rick Vaive added another for the Leafs, who managed just 20 shots on Richard Brodeur.

ITALY

Ahead of Italy in the Associated Press Top 10 rankings for Class 1A are No. 1 Munday, No. 2 Goldthwaite and No. 3 Wheeler, all of which are 8-0. Roten said he has no feeling about how his team would fare against any of them.

"We don't know anything at all about them. We just want to do as well as we can and play as long as we can. We're aware we're in the Top 10, but we don't talk about it," Roten said.

"The fact we haven't been scored on is nice, but we're concerned about winning as many we can and just getting into the playoffs first," Roten said.

The Gladiators play Mildred on Friday night and finish the regular season the following week against Maypearl.

Roten is in his 10th year at Italy. The Gladiators also won their first eight games during Roten's first two seasons with the school. Italy advanced to the quarterfinals in Roten's first year here and were tied in bi-district of the second year, losing on penetrations.

The state and national record for shutouts in a season is 14 by Class 3-A Daingerfield in 1983. That team also set the record for consecutive shutouts with 13.

The longer that Italy remains undefeated in football, the slower start the basketball team will get off to, however.

"Just about all of our kids play basketball and run track, and we feel like we'll do well in those sports, too," Roten said.

Buoniconti set for surgery to stabilize neck injury

MIAMI (AP) — The son of former Miami Dolphins linebacker Nick Buoniconti is scheduled for surgery next week to stabilize a neck injury that paralyzed him during a football game last weekend, hospital officials said Wednesday.

Marc Buoniconti, 19, is alert and conscious, although still in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Jackson Memorial Hospital, officials said.

But, "it's too early for a long-term prognosis," hospital administrator Bruce Fresko said.

Buoniconti, a linebacker for The Citadel, was injured Saturday in a game against East Tennessee State and suffered a dislocation between his second and third cervical vertebrae that severely crushed his spinal cord. He was transported to Miami by a Learjet air ambulance early Tuesday from Johnson City, Tenn., Medical Center.

Asked whether there was any hope Buoniconti would regain the use of his arms and legs, Dr. Barth Green, an associate professor of neurological surgery at the University of Miami, was not optimistic.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose slightly against most major currencies in quiet early European trading today. Gold prices were down.

Dealers in Frankfurt said that expectations of poor U.S. economic indicators due for release later today were putting downward pressure on the dollar.

Dealers added, however, that the market was still heavily influenced by the threat of central bank intervention which could distort the impact of economic news.

The American currency's steady showing in Europe came after its four-day plunge against the Japanese yen ended on the Tokyo foreign exchange market.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 211.80 yen, up from Wednesday's close of 211.67 yen, its lowest level in 4½ years.

In London, the American currency was unchanged against the British pound, trading early today at $1.443.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

—2.6155 West German marks, up from 2.614.

—2.14625 Swiss francs, up from 2.1442.

—7.9775 French francs, up from 7.9625.

—2.9553 Dutch guilders, up from 2.9493.

The metal opened in London at a bid price of $325.80 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $326. At midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $325.75.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest gold market, the bid price at noon was $325.70, down from $326.50 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 77 cents to close at a bid $326.78.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.13 a troy ounce, down from Wednesday's $6.15.

Wall Street, bond market score further gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average, riding a crest of investor euphoria, closed at a record high and bond prices continued their advance as speculation spread that interest rates may be dropping.

The financial community was cheered earlier this week when Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker said the central bank has maintained a fairly "accommodative" credit policy. The remark gave rise to conjectures that the Fed may ease credit in a bid to enliven the lethargic economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.84 to close at 1,375.57 Wednesday, eclipsing the previous closing high of 1,369.29 reached on Oct. 17.

Bond prices climbed further Wednesday, extending gains made during a rally the previous session.

In a piece of encouraging news, a survey by a private group showed a gain in help-wanted ads in newspapers around the country.

The government, meanwhile, delivered a downbeat report. The departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development released a joint report showing buyers did not flock to buy homes in September, even though mortgage rates were the most attractive in years.

On Capitol Hill, Democratic senators unveiled a five-point package to set up a Cabinet-level trade council and give Congress a greater voice in world trade talks.

And the Census Bureau, in a new survey, shed some light on the ratio between working Americans and those receiving pensions. A bureau report showed there are about three Americans in the nation's labor force for every one pension recipient.

The monthly survey by the privately funded group, the Conference Board, indicated want-ad volume increased by three points over August on the board's own index, but was two points lower than in January.

"This suggests that employers remain convinced that production schedules can be met without significantly stepping up new hiring and that employment gains are likely to remain relatively modest in the coming months," said Ken Goldstein, the Conference Board economist responsible for the survey.

The government housing report showed sales of newly built single-family homes dropped to an annual rate of 681,000 units last month, 2.6 percent lower than in August.

Several anlysts linked the decline to the unfavorable impact of slow personal income growth and heavy consumer debt burdens. They predicted the downturn in the housing business could dampen overall economic activity.

The housing sales figures are especially discouraging, analysts said, because mortgage interest rates have been in retreat. Fixed-rate mortgages can be had in many parts of the country for about 12.25 percent, down from a high a year ago of 15.2 percent and the lowest rate in five years.

Parallel names new board chairman

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business Oil Editor

Amarillo oilman Thomas R. Cambridge has been elected President and Chairman of the Board of Parallel Petroleum Corp., Midland, following the resignation of Frank S. Delay. President, Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and co-founder of the firm.

Delay, who remains the firm's largest individual shareholder with 375,000 shares or 4.2 percent ownership, says he is resigning voluntarily to pursue personal interests, and that he leaves the firm on good terms.

It was not a matter of differences that prompted this resignation," said Delay. "Actually, I have been thinking about it since last January. No power struggle was involved. I leave Parallel on friendly terms, and will continue to have friendly relations with the company."

Parallel was founded in November 1979 by Delay and Larry C. Oldham with only $10,000 cash and a concept to form a public exploration and production company. In its initial offering, Parallel was able to raise $1 million. Since then it has raised $4.5 million in equity and $20 million in drilling money.

In 1984 Cambridge & Nail, along with the Amarillo partnerships of Geologist Danny Conklin, and Landman Harry Phillips, Philcon Development, James Franklin, landman, and Paul Buckthal, geologist, of Bucklin Corp., merged approximately $4 million in producing oil and gas properties into Parallel for a 45 percent stock ownership position in the company, resulting in control of the board of directors by the Amarillo partners.

The resignation of Delay and the layoff of one member of the geological department, as well as contraction of office space, is expected to substantially improve the overhead position of Parallel, which Larry Oldham, vice president and manager, said had been a major concern to the firm in recent months.

The net cash flow of the firm, or the difference between oil and gas sales and actual field costs, had been almost totally consumed by overhead this year, leaving little or no cash to generate new prospects.

The staff of Parallel has now been trimmed to one geologist, a geotechnician, an accountant, land secretary and Oldham, who will serve as general manager. Cambridge, the new chairman and president, has agreed to serve without salary.

Thomas R. Cambridge

Cambridge, a 1959 graduate of the University of Nebraska with Master of Science degree in Geology, has been a petroleum geologist for the past 25 years in the Amarillo area. He has said he has no intention of moving the headquarters of Parallel to the Amarillo area.

Analysts split over economic growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy has managed to show sparks of new life in recent months, but some analysts are warning that the country's trade woes will continue to be a drag on growth in the future.

While the Reagan administration is confidently predicting faster growth next year, some analysts believe 1986 could be a depressing replay of 1985.

As an example, the government reported Wednesday that sales of new single-gamily homes fell to an annual rate of 680,000 units last month, following a 5.4 percent drop in August.

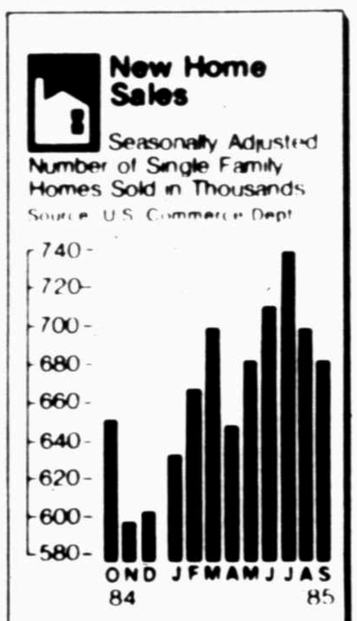

The 2.6 percent decline in home sales in September was probably caused by slow personal income growth and high consumer debt burdens, analysts said.

The declines came despite a decline in fixed-rate mortgages to about 12.25 percent in many parts of the country from a high a year ago of 15.2 percent.

More will be known about the future course of the economy today when the government releases its main forecasting gauge, the Index of Leading Indicators, for September.

In addition, the government will provide the latest accounting of the country's trade deficit — the difference between imports and exports — with details on the September imbalance.

The country is headed for its worst trading year ever, an expected $150 billion deficit that has sapped economic growth all year long as U.S. manufacturers have continued to lose sales to foreign competitors.

The huge trade imbalance has been blamed for a loss of 340,000 manufacturing jobs since January and many analysts believe that the worst is not yet over.

The Index of Leading Indicators rose 0.7 percent in August, matching the July gain, with both months posting the best performance since last February.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., said he expected the September gain would be a slightly smaller 0.5 percent advance with the index pushed up by widespread positive readings in the different business barometers that are measured.

While this would be the fifth consecutive advance, Wyss termed the increases only moderate and said they are not signaling any sharp upturn in economic activity.

He predicted economic growth in the final three months of this year would be around 2 percent to 2.5 percent, down slightly from the 3.3 percent growth rate turned in from July through September.

While the third quarter represented a sharp rebound from an anemic 1.1 percent growth rate posted in the first six months of the year, it was still far below the 5 percent growth being forecast for the second half of the year by the Reagan administration.

Wyss said growth next year is likely to do little better than 2.25 percent, with a sluggish first half followed by a pickup in activity in the final six months.

"We expect a weak first half followed by a moderately strong second half, similar to what we had this year," he said.

Rockwell agrees to pay $1.2 million in fines for overcharges

DALLAS (AP) — Rockwell International Corp., the nation's second-largest defense contractor, has agreed to pay up to $1.2 million in fines for overcharging the government in what one prosecutor said was a company effort to "inflate bids on spare parts."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Eddins said Wednesday a two-year federal probe uncovered $480,000 in mischarges by the company, which included falsified time cards, padded travel expenses, materials and discount prices not passed on to the government.

Investigations by the company and the Justice Department failed to find any evidence that company managers participated in the offenses or knew about them, Rockwell spokesman Jim Vallela said in Pittsburgh.

But Eddins said, "The employees don't get anything. They follow the system set up there. The company is the one that gains the money."

The agreement with Rockwell filed in U.S. District Court in Dallas Wednesday does not bar the government from pursuing charges against any individuals with the company.

Eddins said any future probe is up to the Department of Justice in Washington. "It's in their hands ... they're looking at it."

Rockwell agreed to pay $1 million in a settlement for double the amount of mischarges and the government's investigation costs, plus up to $200,000 in fines.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer set sentencing for 2 p.m. Dec. 13. At that time he will determine the amount of the possible $200,000 fine, according to a spokeswoman for U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins.

The guilty plea was entered in a federal information, which named no individuals, but Vallela confirmed that six employees were involved.

The government charged that the employees falsified 20 time cards from April to June, 1982.

The plea agreement said the overcharges involved a spare parts deal related to a $3.6 million contract to provide 13 automated data processing systems for Air Force EC-135 Flying Command Post Aircraft. The spare parts contract was with the Collins Communication Systems Division in Dallas, a major Rockwell electronics unit.

Eddins said the falsified time cards involved charging the government for work the employees had actually done on other contracts.

After completing its investigation a year ago, Rockwell disciplined the workers and issued a credit of $290,839, Eddins said, reducing the $480,000 total in mischarges.

According to the criminal information filed in court, Rockwell agreed that any employee involved in the overcharges will be barred from working on projects involving federal contracts.

A statement from the U.S. Attorney's Office said Rockwell also agreed to pay attorneys' fees and accountants' fees related to the case and not to charge them against other government contracts.

The government agreed not to pursue any further charges against the corporation that might arise from the case, although it may seek charges against individuals.

The U.S. attorney said it is up to the defense department to decide any possible suspension of future Rockwell contracts.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Mexico ups light oil price, drops heavy oil

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, the biggest single supplier of oil to the United States, announced Wednesday it is raising the price of light crude by an average of 60 cents a barrel.

The price of heavy crude will fall an average of 40 cents.

A press release by the state petroleum monopoly, PEMEX, said the new prices will take effect Friday and were approved by a special Cabinet-level Petroleum Foreign Trade Committee.

PEMEX said light-type Isthmus oil will go up from $26.25 to $26.75 a barrel for European points, from $26.50 to $26.90 for Far Eastern points, and from $26.75 to $27.50 for American points.

Heavy-type Maya oil will drop from $22.50 to $22.10 for European points, from $23 to $22.60 for Far Eastern points, and from $23.50 to $23.10 for American points.

"The new prices of Mexican crude respond to a strengthening of the market for light crudes, such as Isthmus, and a relative weakening of heavy crudes, like Maya," the PEMEX press release said.

PEMEX said Mexico's volume of exports from July to October averaged more than 1.525 million barrels a day.

It said the country plans to export 1.55 million barrels a day in November, about half to the United States.

The country produces an average of 2.75 million barrels a day.

Attorney general seeks SBI decision delay

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday he will ask the State Board of Insurance to postpone for at least 30 days any decision on a new policy for commercial general liability insurance.

Mattox said the insurance industry had asked the board to allow insurance companies to deny liability for any claims not made within the policy period.

Some insurance companies are seeking protection against job conditions that could cause illness that does not show up for many years.

The new form also would exclude any liability for pollution damages, Mattox said.

Houston company gets first methane permit

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's first permit to recover methane gas from a landfill for waste products has been issued to Getty Synthetic Fuels Inc., the Texas Department of Health said on Wednesday.

Dr. Robert Bernstein said he signed a permit granting Getty permission to recover methane from the Browning-Ferris McCarty Road landfill in Houston.

Methane gas is produced in landfills as the result of the decomposition of cellulose in the absence of oxygen.

The Getty application estimated the landfill was capable of producing 6 million cubic feet of gas per day from a series of about 50 wells drilled into the buried waste.

Dover Resources okays merger plan, move

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Dover Resources, Inc., a Utah-based corporation, at a special shareholders meeting October 29, approved a merger plan that would move the company to Nevada and change its name to First Houston Capital Resources, Inc.

Based on board recommendations, shareholders approved the name change effective immediately and authorized the board to conclude the merger at the earliest possible date.

Among other actions, the shareholders approved the formation of a wholly owned subsidiary, First Houston Energy Corporation of Nevada, and established a new division, First Houston Funding. First Houston Energy Corporation of Nevada will carry out exploration and drilling, workover programs and purchase production in addition to providing a source of funds for energy-related projects.

AMC calling in Jeeps for fuel line checks

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. says it is recalling 14,800 1986-model Jeep vehicles to check for possible fuel line and brake fluid problems.

About 14,600 Jeep Cherokee, Wagoneer and Comanche models with fuel-injected, 2.5-liter, 4-cylinder engines may have improperly connected fuel line fittings, the company said Tuesday in a statement.

About 200 Jeep Grand Wagoneers, J-10 and J-20 trucks may have contaminated brake fluid, the automaker said.

AMC learned of the defects from factory inspections and reports from dealers, spokesman Ben Dunn said. No accidents or injuries have been reported as a result of either defect, AMC said.

Jeep dealers will make the inspections and repairs at no cost to owners, the company said.

Second well added to Rocky Mesa field

KELLY H. BAXTER, Midland, added a Queen producer to the Rocky Mesa field of Pecos County with completion of the No. 1 Walter Augustine.

On potential test, the well pumped eight barrels of crude and 52 barrels of water from perforations 2,401 to 2,481 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 5,790 gallons of oil, 16,500 lbs. 20/40 sand and 6,000 lbs. 12/20 sand.

Drilled to 2,481 ft., the well was plugged back to 2,470 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 2,400 ft.

The well topped the Queen formation at 2,408 ft. on ground elevation of 2,968 ft. Pay was topped at 2,426 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and west lines of Section 83, Block 2, CCSD&RGNG survey, 20 miles southeast of Bakersfield.

Chevron U.S.A., Inc. had completed a second well in the field, the No. 1 H.Q. Lyles Estate, in November of 1984, but the well was plugged and abandoned.

Big Three reports quarterly sales

HOUSTON — Big Three Industries, Inc. of Houston recently reported consolidated net sales of $211.1 million for the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1985 — a 7.5 percent increase over the same period in 1984.

Consolidated net earnings for the quarter — before the recently recorded write-down — totaled $13.8 million, or 36 cents a share, slightly higher than in 1984.

For the first nine months of 1985, consolidated net sales were $617.9 million, up 7.2 percent over the $576.4 million sales recorded in the year-ago period.

"On Oct. 8, the board of directors authorized a $78.3 million write-down, primarily to recognize a reduction in the economic value of certain oilfield equipment and inventories in the Energy Related Group," explained Harry K. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer of Big Three.

Amoco reports earnings

CHICAGO — Amoco Corp. reported estimated third-quarter 1985 consolidated net earnings of $490 million, down 18 percent from the $600 million earned in 1984's third quarter.

Earnings on a per-share basis decreased 13 percent to $1.87 from $2.14 in the same quarter last year. The smaller percentage decline in earnings per share reflects the impact of the company's programs to repurchase its common stock. Revenues for the quarter totaled $7.2 billion, compared with $7.1 billion in the corresponding prior-year period.

Richard M. Morrow, chairman and chief executive officer, said that the lower 1985 third-quarter earnings level was due primarily to the effects of lower crude oil prices and greater foreign currency translation losses. Partially mitigating these adverse factors were improved results from downstream petroleum operations, as gasoline margins continued strong for most of the quarter. Morrow noted that comparative results were also impacted by the absence of 1984's third-quarter gain from the sale of Australian refining and marketing operations.

Earnings for the first nine months of 1985 totaled $1,563 million, down 9 percent from the $1,718 million earned in the same period of 1984. Per-share earnings were $5.91, compared with $5.98 for the first three quarters of 1984. Year-to-date revenues totaled $21.5 billion vs. $22 billion for the like 1984 period.

For the 12-month period ending September 30, 1985, return on average shareholders' equity and return on average capital employed were 16.8 and 14.6 percent for the 12 months ending September 30, 1984.

Amoco's capital and exploration spending during the first nine months of 1985 totaled $3.4 billion, up form the $3.1 billion spent for the same 1984 period. During the first nine months of 1985, 85 percent of Amoco's capital and exploration spending was for worldwide exploration and production programs.

Amoco's total direct tax bill was $2.8 billion for the first nine months of 1985, inlcuding $341 million for domestic crude oil excise taxes. This compares with $3.1 billion in the corresponding 1984 period, of which $453 million was due to domestic crude oil excise taxes.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

It's stock broker's responsibility to send certificates

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I bought 100 shares of stock, at $50 a share, plus commission, several weeks ago. At that time, newspaper stock tables had two listings for that stock. One was for 50, the price I paid. The other, with the initials "wi," was for 25. The stock has since been split, two for one.

I have received only one 100-share stock certificate from my broker. Who is responsible for delivering to me a certificate for an additional 100 shares?

I bought the stock through a discount broker, who only executes trades. I assume I cannot get this information from him.

Doyle

A. The stock's transfer agent — usually a bank — issues stock certificates. But it's the responsibility of the broker through whom you buy stock to see to it that the correct certificates are delivered to you.

Some discount brokers provide almost as many customer services as the big "full service" brokerage firms. But some, evidently including the one with which you deal, do nothing except handle buy and sell orders.

Discount brokers, of course, charge lower commissions than full service firms. As a rough rule of thumb, the less service, the lower the commission.

However, even a "bare bones" or "pipe rack" discount firm should see to it that you get your certificates.

When a stock is about to be split, the presplit stock trades at a higher price and the split stock trades at a lower price. Even before the split takes place, the split stock trades on a "when issued" basis. Hence, the initials "wi."

After the split takes place, trading stops in the presplit shares and continues in the split shares. Because you bought 100 presplit shares, the two-for-one split made you the owner of 200 split shares.

If your buy order was executed in time for your name to be on the books of the company and the transfer agent before the ex-distribution date for the split, you should have received a 100-share certificate from the broker and a 100-share certificate from the transfer agent.

However, if your name, as the owner of 100 shares, went on those books after that date, the transfer agent had no way of knowing you are entitled to 200 shares. In that case, the transfer agent naturally delivered a 100-share certificate to the broker, who sent it to you.

Assuming that's what happened, your broker now should get things squared away and obtain another 100-share certificate for you.

• • •

Q. My wife and I bought some stock more than two months ago. We received a statement from the broker confirming our purchase and sent him a check. The check has already cleared our bank and has been returned to us with a monthly statement.

But we still have not received the stock certificate. It never took this long before. Is something funny going on?

A. While it's not amusing, it's doubtful there's any hanky-panky kind of funny business involved. "Normal" time for receipt of a stock certificate after the purchase date runs about three weeks or a bit longer. Sometime, it can be a great deal longer.

When you buy stock traded in the market, the seller sends his or her certificate to his or her broker, who sends it to the transfer agent to be canceled. The transfer agent issues a new certificate in your name, sends it to your broker, who delivers it to you.

There can be delays along the line — by the seller, the seller's broker and/or your broker. The process sometimes is speeded, if the seller has left his or her stocks with a broker.

• • •

Q. After waiting months for a stock certificate, I called the broker and demanded an explanation. He said, "I didn't know you wanted the certificate. You didn't instruct me to have it delivered." Who does he think he's kidding?

A. Probably, nobody. Many investors leave their securities with brokers. Some keep their stocks and bonds in "street name" — registered in brokerage firms' names. Others have the securities registered in the owner's names but with the brokerage houses for safekeeping.

Fred Calhoun "gives life" to Mr. Pumpkin during the bewitching hours of Halloween.

Talking pumpkin treats children

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

If Halloween was canceled this year, many youngsters would be disappointed, but Midlanders Ruthie and Fred Calhoun would be devastated.

"There's been years when we've been scared we wouldn't have any kids. If we didn't have any kids, we'd be sitting in here and crying," Mrs. Calhoun said.

The Calhouns love Halloween and costumed kids. To attract youngsters, they began operating a talking pumpkin about 10 years ago, and ever since their porch at 4727 Leisure has seen a steady stream of traffic on All Hallows Eve.

The grandparents of seven said they were not ready to give up on Halloween fun when their five kids grew up. So they started the yearly ritual of bringing a carved pumpkin to life.

"We get more enjoyment out of it, I think, than the kids do. But they're hilarious," Mrs. Calhoun said.

The pumpkin "talks" through a hidden microphone set underneath it. Calhoun talks to the youngsters through the pumpkin, while concealed behind a nearby bedroom window. And sometimes he connects lines from his bedroom to rotate the pumpkin head.

The pumpkin asks youngsters about everything from their costume design to their behavior.

Calhoun said he asked one trick-or- treater if he'd been good, and the kid told him yes, but began to tattle on his brother.

The younger kids are startled at first by questions from a pumpkin, but most end up talking to it, the Calhouns said. And some are reluctant to leave the talking pumpkin, the couple say.

"They'll just talk to that pumpkin," Mrs. Calhoun said. "They want to believe in these things," she said.

Many teens bring their younger brothers and sisters back to see the speaking pumpkin they remember from years past, and some kids who have moved out of the neighborhood continue to come back every year, Mrs. Calhoun said.

To preserve the many memories they have, the Calhouns said they are going to film their porch ritual this year.

The Calhouns said they are saddened by the danger many parents feel Halloween holds for children and they hope their pumpkin will put some fun back into the holiday.

"Halloween is for kids. I really hate that it's turned out like this," Mrs. Calhoun said.

Child automobile safety law has saved lives, figures indicate

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

In February, Wyndee Kalisek took her baby home from the hospital in an infant seat, a practice that saved her daughter's life in an auto accident several months later.

"I got the seat when she was born because of the new law," said Ms. Kalisek, 23, of Midland. "Without it, I think she would have been killed."

The "law" was the child automobile safety law, passed by the Texas Legislature one year ago today, which requires that all children under the age of 4 be restrained by safety seats or seat belts while traveling in passenger cars or light trucks.

Ms. Kalisek credits wearing a seat belt with saving her life as well, but admits that she never wore one until a similar law was passed Sept. 1 requiring all front-seat passengers to buckle up.

The accident, which happened shortly after the newest law was passed, made the new mother a believer in auto restraining devices.

"I NEVER realized how dangerous a 30 mph accident could be," said Ms. Kalisek. "If Valerie had not been in the infant seat, she would have gone straight through the windshield."

Ms. Kalisek added that even at the slow rate of speed at which the accident occurred, she still "got a few bruises" from hitting her knee on the steering column and her chest on the steering wheel.

"My head might have gone through the windshield if I hadn't been buckled up though," she said.

The accident left her car destroyed, but her baby safe.

Similar stories have been told since the law went into effect Oct. 31, 1984, according to Carol Kendall, with the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary's car seat loan program.

"We've had about four accidents involving our rental seats in which the child would have suffered injury had they not been buckled up," said Ms. Kendall. "We always ask the parents when they return the seats if there has been an accident, because we don't keep the seats once they have been in one."

"A car seat involved in an accident must not be used again," she said. "It can be stressed in ways that you can not see."

Ms. Kendall, who recently attended a National Highway Safety Conference in San Antonio and a child safety conference in Austin, stated the use of car seats do not always guarantee safety.

"According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 65 percent of all car seats are used incorrectly," she said. "A lot of people ask which car seats are the best and we say the ones that are used correctly every time."

"ONE CHILD was killed because they were facing forward in the car seat in the front seat, close to the dashboard," she said. "The seat belt holding the car seat in was too loose and didn't keep the seat in place.

"If the seatbelt is not tight, the car seat may not stay in the position that you would like in the event of a crash," she continued. "Not all car seats fit in all cars correctly because of the vehicle seatbelt hardware and the car seat frame. You have to choose the correct seat for your car."

Still another problem is the use of "inertia belts" for car seats, said Ms. Kendall.

"Those belts are designed for adults," she said. "They lock up only in an accident and are difficult to tighten and may not hold the seat in place."

Car seats which are merely placed in the back seat without the use of the safety belt are another common misunderstanding which can have tragic results, she said.

"There was one case of a child in Austin who was killed when the child went through the windshield," she said. "If the car seat is not buckled in, then the child is sitting up too high and it could be even more dangerous than if they were not even in the seat. The car seat then becomes a launching pad from which the child may be thrown."

"We've had about four accidents involving our rental seats in which the child would have suffered injury had they not been buckled up. We always ask the parents when they return the seats if there has been an accident, because we don't keep the seats once they have been in one."
— Carol Kendall, MMH Auxiliary

While few people doubt the car seats' abilities to keep the child in place, state figures on deaths and injuries since the inception of the new law are confusing.

According to Tonna Polk of the Department of Public Safety in Austin, the number of infant deaths have declined since the law was passed, but the number of injuries have increased.

"Part of that may be because prior to the new law, the forms used in reports did not require the officer to state whether a restraint was used or not, so the figures could be misleading," she said.

THE DPS SHOWED 37 deaths for children under 4 years of age from January to July 1984. Only five of those deaths involved children who were in car seats. In the same period in 1985, 25 deaths were reported — only three of them involving restrained passengers.

Injuries for the 1984 period amounted to 2,834, with 2,070 blamed on the failure to use a seat restraint. Injuries involving children in car safety seats numbered 479 while 285 cases were unknown.

In 1985, however, the number of injuries increased for children in car safety seats — 1,272. Injuries among those who were unrestrained numbered 1,683 and 181 cases were unknown.

Ms. Polk said the DPS is aggressively enforcing the law, listing more than 4,577 citations from January to June 1985.

Locally, the Midland Police Department has issued 414 citations since the inception of the law, according to Municipal Court records.

Shops that sell the safety seats for children say that usage has increased.

"Right after the law went into effect, there was big rush by parents to buy the seats," said Fan Mowles, assistant manager for Upstairs Downstairs — Next Door, an infants' shop. "It has leveled off though."

Other stores reported "some increase" in the sale of car seats.

MMH Auxiliary's car seat loan program, however, remains an economical and convenient source of child restraint devices for new parents.

The program, originally started in April 1981 by Sue Alford and Sharon Kohout and taken over in 1984 by the Auxiliary, offers both infant and toddler seats for rent.

Infant seats, according to Ms. Kendall, require a $25 deposit plus $1.50 per month. The toddlers' seats require a $60 deposit plus $1 per week. All deposits are refunded when the seats are returned, she added.

Area programs may lose funds if Title X not re-authorized

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Failure by Congress to re-authorize the national family planning program could cost Midland-Odessa area programs $210,000 in funds, a local family planning official said.

Charles W. Seltzer, president of the Board of Directors of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, reported Title X of the Public Health Service Act is facing an "unprecedented crisis and is in serious danger of dying and being defunded if the Congress does not act to re-authorize the program by Nov. 15."

Seltzer made the remarks Wednesday during a press conference at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission offices. Two PPPB officials were to travel to Washington D.C. to lobby on behalf of the agency immediately following the media event.

Title X authorizes federal funds which are used by various agencies to provide birth control and contraceptive services, infertility diagnosis and counseling, testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases, and pelvic and breast examinations for millions of low income and poverty level women throughout the nation. Funding to the programs in local areas is provided through the Texas Department of Health.

According to Peggy Romberg, executive director of the Texas Family Planning Association, more than 100,000 women and teen-agers in Texas receive Title X family planning services from some 30 health care providers.

Those services will be eliminated if Congress doesn't re-authorize the program or provide for continued funding by Nov. 15.

"Anti-abortion members of Congress have been leading the fight to kill or cripple the family planning program," Ms. Romberg said, "which is the single government program which prevents abortion by preventing unwanted pregnancies."

Seltzer said, PPPB is "particularly concerned" about Texas Congressmen Larry Combest and Charles Stenholm who have "repeatedly voiced their anti-abortion views," but "continually voted against Title X, thus demonstrating their unwillingness to help eliminate the unwanted and unplanned pregnancies which lead economically disadvantage women to elect to have an abortion."

Shooting breeze like blowing into the wind

Whenever I try to ponder the meaning of life, I get lost. I fall into a snowbank, into an unplotted forest, into huge swells and drift.

But like anybody else, aside from the classical thinkers and philosophers, who wonders about life, I've come up with a few aphorisms. They revolve about such ideas as serving mankind, doing the best you can, glorifying God, having a good time, lessening ignorance through knowledge, finding a good woman other than my Mother, playing a piano, flying an airplane, savoring good food and drink, fellowshipping with friends and others of common spiritual bond, and shooting the breeze.

I love to chew the fat.

But the problem with that is this: Shooting the breeze is like blowing into the wind. You don't get anywhere. It's most enjoyable and is a pastime I've relished since my boyhood days when I'd walk over to Jay Gentry's country store at Pacio in East Texas and listen to the old-timers ramble. I've forgotten exactly what they said, but it must have been interesting and somewhat entertaining.

They'd sit on the porch — on soft-drink cases or on the edge of the plank porch in favorable weather. In the wintertime, they'd gather about the wood-burning stove, shovel the ashes, stir the coals, add more firewood, roll cigarettes and light up smoking pipes, and discuss things. Sometimes they didn't say anything at all. Occasionally, they'd light into me, call me "cotton head," "sissy," other names I've forgotten and, if they got formal or stern, they'd call me James Edwin. I always enjoyed the attention.

I can't recall their conversations. Wish I could. But I remember their talking about hunting and shooting, butchering the hogs, farming in that stubborn black land, milking the cows, putting up the sausage, sharpening knives. I faintly can recall, or imagine, conversations about death and dying, problems at the school, who was preaching where and with the most shouts, when the canning season was starting, how the cotton ginning was going, and how the young chicks — as fowls in coops — were faring, and how good the women folks could cook, sew, garden and raise families.

I remember Dad, who was great on pranks and joshing folks, suddenly would become serious and would delve into philosophical discussions. He always whetted my interest in life. By his questioning, I knew even then that there was more to life than just existing: going to school, filling up at the dinner table, listening to the radio, trying to avoid the razor strap when I erred and either got "told on" or caught, working in the fields, fishing for crawfish and anticipating what I'd be like when I grew up. I'm still wondering.

Why?

Why is life life? An epic poet, Larry D. Griffin, expounds a view worth pondering:

A poem can be made of anything:
A life can only be made of itself.

Life is an adventure; that's certain. So, why not raise the sails and strike out?

Traffic mishap

Two 20-year-old Midland women were treated for minor injuries and released from Midland Memorial Hospital after a 9:45 p.m. accident Wednesday, according to hospital and police reports. Mary Clarkson, 4400 N. Holiday Hill Road, was eastbound on Wadley Avenue in this 1984 Honda Civic when she tried to turn left onto Garfield Street, swung too far and hit a traffic-signal pole. She and her passenger, Whitney Dodson, 516 N. Loop 250, were taken to the hospital, but later released.

Commission to study ways agencies can reduce costs

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A new commission charged with helping state government run more efficiently will begin its work by examining two agencies under federal court orders to spend more money.

The Texas Commission on Economy and Efficiency in State Government, created during the past legislative session, met for the first time in Austin Wednesday. The panel, composed of businessmen, attorneys and legislators, will conduct in-depth reviews of major state agencies and identify ways to eliminate waste and reduce costs. Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis each appointed five members to the commission, which will present its recommendations to the 70th Legislature in January 1987.

White named Joe Christie, president of an Austin oil and gas exploration firm, as chairman of the commission. Christie, 52, is credited with cutting waste and reducing health care costs to consumers during his four-year tenure as chairman of the State Board of Insurance. He also served six years in the state Senate.

"Look at the goals we have set for state government," White told the panel. "Look at the mission of it's agencies...and tell us how we can enhance the management of state government as a whole."

Christie told reporters that 37 different agencies and legislative committees are now studying many of the issues the commission will examine. One of the panel's first undertakings will be to evaluate the findings of those studies to determine just what the commission will do.

He said the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and the Texas Department of Corrections are the first two state agencies the commission will review. Both of those agencies are under federal order to reduce over-crowded conditions and increase staffing. Next on the list, Christie said, will be the Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The panel is modeled after the Grace Commission President Reagan appointed to examine similar issues on the federal level. The Grace Commission produced a detailed report which included specific recommendations of how to save billions of dollars. Few of those recomendations have been implemented, however, because of what critics charge are "sacred cows."

Wednesday, Christie said the Texas version of the panel will try to put a little more punch into its recommendations.

"We're going to get the cooperation and support — or at least ask for it — from agency heads, and try to convince them that we're there to help them do their job more efficiently," he said. "Our attitude, approach and philosophy is totally different than the Grace Commission."

The Texas-style commission will "try as hard as we can to keep from politicizing our efforts," Christie added, "because I think that would diminish our effectiveness."

Hobby, noting what he called a "national concern about government at every level," suggested the commission examine the prospect of private-sector employees providing services the state now supplies. The LBJ School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas is already studying that possibility, Hobby added, under the direction of UT Professor Terrell Blodgett.

Fifteen of Blodgett's graduate students will study the feasibility of contracting services from workers not on the state payroll. Next April, the class will submit a written report to the panel on their findings.

"Privatization is a complex subject," Hobby said. "I would urge this committee to proceed into this area with caution. We must ask the appropriate questions to evaluate the up-front and the down-the-line costs."

George Beto, director of the criminal justice institute at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, stressed that privatization of services will not solve the state's woes.

"I submit that whenever you contract for state services it indicates poor management," Beto asserted. "Don't let this commission get bogged down with privatization because that's not going to be a panacea for all our problems."

Christie said the commission will study the efforts of the newly created Select Committee on Higher Education only after that panel has completed its work.

"If we do look at higher education, it's going to be down the line," he said.

From Staff Reports

A 31-year-old Midland man critically injured Monday in a motorcycle accident has been upgraded to fair condition, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said this morning.

John E. Duppenthaler, 3600 N. Loop 250, was injured about 12:58 p.m. when he lost control of his cycle while entering a Loop 250 offramp near West Highway 80, according to police reports.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, five guns worth more than $2,000 were taken in one of several burglaries reported to Midland police.

Gary R. Schmitt, 105 Sprayberry, reported the loss of a $750 20-gauge shotgun, a $600 30.06 rifle, a $460 semi-automatic shotgun, and two rifles worth a total of $300 in a burglary which occurred sometime between Oct. 22 and Sunday, reports said.

Jewelry worth $600 was reported stolen by James Shepherd, 5201 Brazos, in a Tuesday burglary. Also taken was a $200 revolver and two knives worth a total of $50, reports said.

Joe T. Milam, 4732 W. Dengar, reported the loss of an $850 ham radio from his vehicle while it was parked at 309 W. Pine.

Midland man held on charge of possession of heroin

From Staff Reports

A 27-year-old Midland man was being held in county jail on a $75,000 bond this morning after being charged Wednesday with possession of heroin with intent to distribute.

But Juan Perez was the only one of seven people arrested Tuesday in a raid at 1303 South Street to actually be charged; three other men and three women were reluctantly released by Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

"There were three that were in the alley outside the fence — We feel like they were there for a reason, but they didn't have any narcotics on them so we had to turn them loose," Painter said. Another man captured in the yard and a man and two women who were inside the house were released because "they weren't in the room where the heroin was. The District Attorney's Office recommended that they be released and no charges filed."

Painter said a syringe taken from one man was being tested for a possible trace of heroin, in which case he would be charged with possession. Other charges may later be brought to the attention of a grand jury, but for now the case against the suspects isn't strong enough. "If we can't get a conviction on somebody then I don't want them in the jail."

Despite his disappointment, Painter said Perez was the main target of the raid, which was conducted by the Sheriff's Office tactical team backed up by uniformed deputies.

Perez' arrest shut down a major heroin distribution center on the east side of town, according to Painter.

About $4,000 worth of heroin and two loaded guns were seized in the raid, Painter said.

Drop of peso value hurts Texas community

HIDALGO (AP) — Dramatic drops in the value of the Mexican peso have businessmen along the U.S.-Mexico border worried again, especially in this South Texas community where 95 percent of the retail business is dependent on Mexican shoppers.

"Business is really dead. People are not coming across," Joe Vera III, executive vice president of the Hidalgo Chamber of Commerce, said Wednesday. "We can't blame them. They just can't afford it now."

In the past month, the peso has dropped from 350 to $1 to between 475 and 490 pesos to $1 in the Rio Grande Valley on Wednesday. The peso was fluctuating between 490-495 to $1 from Laredo to El Paso.

"I think we all expected it to drop in value after the earthquake," said Yolanda Walker, a vice president in the international division at Brownsville National Bank. "Mexico already has problems and they're going to have more. But the peso held for a long time and improved after the earthquake, so it was kind of confusing."

Border towns are dependent on each other for, among other things, retail trade. But several shop owners said business is dead.

"I'm taking the peso at 399," said Aurora Mijangos of Wise Fashions in Hidalgo. "We were taking it yesterday at 470. We didn't have any business at all and we started out at 399 this morning and we still don't have any business. "Business is bad," she added. "As soon as you tell them its 470, 490 it's too much for them."

Vera of the chamber of commerce said Hidalgo is smaller than most border towns.

"About 95 percent of our retail business comes from Mexico," he said. "Business is really bad. It's been gradually going down, but overall, from talking to merchants, it's been declining, but now it's just about halted."

He said cities like Brownsville, Laredo, Del Rio and El Paso can balance out their retail trade with their own shoppers, but that Hidalgo is very dependent on shoppers from its sister city, Reynosa, Mexico.

Last summer, the peso dropped from about 240 to 260 in less than a week and slowly declined. Three weeks ago along the border, the peso was about 340. Last week it went over 420 pesos to $1.

"I think people are panicking a little bit," Ms. Walker, the Brownsville banker, said. "People need the dollars to buy certain things and they have to go to the market and get dollars."

She said the economic situation probably will get worse before it gets better.

"I don't think the country, in this case Mexico, realized the economic crisis brought about by the earthquake and I don't think they still know. I think we're just digesting that," Ms. Walker said.

Ms. Mijangos said she sells many dresses and shoes to Mexican shoppers, but they gradually have stopped coming to her store and others in the area.

"They're all the same way. They don't have any shoppers," she said. "(Mexicans) like the things we have, but they don't have any money to buy it. There's nothing they can do about it."

Vera said American shoppers will try to get some bargains in Mexico because of the fluctuation, but eventually inflation will bring prices back to a proportional level.

"It will be just as expensive for Mexicans over there as it is here," he said. "The peso will not be worth as much here and not worth as much over there because the prices go up."

Vera and Ms. Mijangos said businessmen are keeping their fingers crossed for the holiday season.

"I think business will pick up with the holiday season," Vera said. "During the holidays, people are going to find the money to spend."

Campaign fund-raiser held for congressional candidate

From Staff Reports

About 250 persons attended a reception Tuesday evening for Republican congressional candidate Lamar Smith of San Antonio. The event was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Watson LaForce and raised about $10,000, according to a spokesman with the campaign.

"One of the greatest threats we face today as a nation is the threat of terrorist acts against American citizens," Smith said in remarks to the crowd. "Criminal nations push us around, they bomb us, kidnap us and execute us." But America has the power that could cause the world to gasp at our strength. What we need is the resolve and courage to act instead of react."

Smith is seeking the Republican nomination to the 21st Congressional District seat being vacated by Tom Loeffler. Also seeking the GOP nomination are Jeff Wentworth and Van Archer. Filing period begins Feb. 1, 1986, the primary will be held in May.

Patrons paid $500 to host the event for Smith; sponsors paid $250. The spokesman said Smith's campaign has raised $175,000 from 850 contributors. "October has been a good month for us," said the spokesman.

Another fundraiser is planned Nov. 7 from 6 to 8 p.m. at La Mansion del Norte. It is a party recalling the 1939 film "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and is hosted by 210 Smith supporters. Hosts will pay $100 per couple and other persons will pay $25.

PROGRAMS

He added, "Even if Title X should be reauthorized and refunded, these anti-abortion legislators intend to offer numerous amendments which will cripple and defeat the intent of Title X and thereby close the door on a substantial portion, if not all, of the women entitled to birth control and contraceptive services."

Among the amendments are those requiring parental notification, income requirements for teens, and funding to separate abortion facilities and family planning offices.

None of the Title X programs in Texas provide abortions, but all provide "counseling and referrals" as part of their services, Ms. Romberg said. "The health, social and economic consequences will be devastating" for "poor women and teens" in Texas if the program isn't reauthorized.

Jury debating punishment in murder

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 161st District Court jury this morning began hearing evidence in the punishment phase of the attempted murder trial of a 67-year-old man who was found guilty Wednesday of a 1983 shooting incident.

Willie Holbert, 407 Wabash Ave., was found guilty of the July 1983 shooting of 53-year-old Paul Perry, who was shot in the neck during an incident that resulted in the death of 55-year-old Charlie E. Baker. The three men reportedly had been drinking together before the shooting occurred.

Holbert was initially arrested and arraigned in municipal court on charges of murder and attempted murder. However, the murder charge against Holbert was never presented to the grand jury and was finally dismissed because he was not brought to trial within 120 days as required by the state's Speedy Trial Act.

Jurors could sentence Holbert to as much as 20 years in prison.

Sexual assault trial set to begin

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The trial of a 41-year-old Ector County man, accused of one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child and 10 charges of indecency with a child, began in 244th District Court this morning.

Abel Carrasco Castillo, Route 12, Box 3214, was first arrested Aug. 9 by Ector County sheriff's deputies Roy Gladden and Troy Davis at his home on a charge of indecency with a child involving a 12-year-old girl. Bond was set at $15,000.

Castillo was additionally charged on Aug. 14 with the aggravated sexual assault of a 9-year-old boy. Bond was set at $25,000. He was also charged on nine counts of indecency with a child, involving three girls, ages 9, 10 and 12. Bonds totaling $45,000 were set on the nine indecency charges.

According to Gladden, Castillo has been free on bonds totaling $85,000 pending trial.

Death Row inmate says he doesn't believe in U.S. government

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A former meat cutter scheduled to be executed next month for the stabbing death of an Amarillo woman says he does not believe in the U.S. government and wishes he could leave the country.

"I don't have faith in the system," convicted killer Jay Kelly Pinkerton, 23, said during an interview Wednesday on Death Row.

A state judge last week set a Nov. 26 execution date for Pinkerton, who was convicted in the rape-slaying Sarah Donn Lawrence at her Amarillo home in 1979. Authorities say Pinkerton stabbed the woman as many as 50 times during a burglary of her home.

He came within 26 minutes of execution Aug. 14, when the U.S. Supreme Court issued a stay. But the high court rejected his appeal earlier this month after reviewing the case.

"I believe God is responsible for my stay," Pinkerton said.

Pinkerton said the new execution date — his third — should not have been set because he still has motions pending before the Supreme Court, according to Pinkerton.

STATE

"I've got to remain optimistic and I am," he said. "I believe the trial court erred and I'm anticipating the Supreme Court will go along with this argument."

He said he accepts Iran's ayatollah as his leader and would leave the United States if he could.

"I don't accept this government. I don't accept this country any more," Pinkerton said. "I revoke it. If I had a chance to leave it I would and never come back."

He said he has found experts to refute trial testimony from an FBI agent who identified Pinkerton's palm print on the victim. But he says attorneys, including those who defended him and filed his appeals, have been inadequate.

"It's just frustrating they have not made good with the opportunities they've been given by the courts," he said.

Pinkerton said he's also upset that judges have given him death dates when other convicts have been on Death Row much longer.

"It's not right to execute certain people and allow others to live," he said. "What gives them that right? What right do they have to play God? There's no equality in this justice — no consistency.

"They're playing bingo games with us, and all we are are bingo cards."

Six prisoners have been given lethal injection this year in Texas.

Pinkerton and John Henry Selvage, convicted of killing a sheriff's deputy in 1979 during a Houston jewelry store robbery, are the only two with execution dates.

Retired Gen. William Westmoreland, center, joined a group of Vietnam veterans Wednesday as they marched along a Texas highway. The Dallas San Antonio march, billed as "A Journey to Remember — The Last Patrol," is to remind the public of those still missing in action.

Westmoreland joins veterans in 'Last Patrol'

AUSTIN (AP) — In a reunion of people who had never met, retired Gen. William Westmoreland marched five miles along a Texas highway with veterans who had been under his command in Vietnam.

Rush-hour motorists honked, waved and yelled their support as "The Last Patrol" marched Wednesday on the Interstate 35 frontage road.

Westmoreland, who flew to Austin to join the 20 or so marchers, was in front.

"It's great pride for me to be with them again. I've been with them before on the battlefield," Westmoreland said.

The 300-mile Dallas-San Antonio march is billed as "A Journey to Remember — The Last Patrol," and is aimed at calling attention to Vietnam veterans and to remind the public of those still listed as missing in action.

Tim Holiday of Dallas, a march organizer, told Westmoreland that Vietnam veterans are suffering through a variety of problems. But the retired general said Vietnam veterans overall are doing well.

"They actually have less problems as a group. But there are a number of Vietnam veterans who have problems, as there are veterans that have problems after every war," he said later in an interview.

"The Vietnam veteran is doing very well in society. He's moving to positions of leadership, but there are veterans who need help and the public must understand that," Westmoreland added.

The marchers planned a Capitol rally today.

Westmoreland, carrying the patrol's torch for the final few hundred yards, Wednesday led the marchers to a Veterans of Foreign Wars post where they spent the night.

"Better late than never," he said of the warm reception for the veterans. "What you see here today is typical of what's going on around the country. There's been a tremendous turnaround in the attitude of the Vietnam veteran toward himself and the attitude of the American public toward the Vietnam veteran."

The march began in Dallas Oct. 19. It is scheduled to end in San Antonio Nov. 7. About 20 marchers are participating, but other Vietnam veterans — such as Westmoreland — join for portions of the walk.

As he stopped to re-bandage his feet, marcher Gregory Smith of Dallas said he joined the Last Patrol to keep America from forgetting Vietnam veterans like himself.

"We'll all just die out and it will fade away. Somebody's got to care," said Smith, 37, a business systems analyst.

He said he was glad Westmoreland joined the march.

"He's got a heavy burden to carry. We've got our own. He did what he thought he had to do," said Smith.

Of the Texans who served in Vietnam, 3,244 were killed and 161 still are listed as missing.

Westmoreland said there is "circumstantial evidence" indicating there are American prisoners of war still in Southeast Asia.

It's reasonable to assume that there are some," he said.

And he told several marchers, "Every soldier goes through hell in war. You fellows had it doubled-edged. You had it at home, too."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, November 1, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A relationship that is going nowhere will soon end. Buck up! Do not waste time mourning what might have been. A happier, more rewarding union lies ahead. Expand your circle of friends and business contacts. A change in lifestyle proves very beneficial. You find the strength to do something you have been postponing. Look into an intriguing employment offer. Travel enhances romance. Be careful not to marry on the rebound.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: baseball's Fernando Valenzuela, columnist James J. Kilpatrick, actress Barbara Bosson (Fay Furillo on "Hill Street Blues"), Anna Stuart of "Another World," golf's Gary Player, country singer Bill Anderson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be cautious when borrowing or lending money. Make sure you understand the terms you are offered. Intimate get-togethers prove more enjoyable than gala parties.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sign papers only if you fully understand them. A former flame could get in touch. Be sure of your own feelings before returning his or her call. Show more initiative at work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sympathetic friends may be more helpful than your family right now. A charming and eloquent newcomer could change your life in a positive way. Look forward to a rewarding weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is time to settle down and realize your potential. Although the financial picture looks brighter, you must still reduce spending. Ask an expert how to showcase your special talents.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The romantic outlook is more promising than in the recent past. Keep any secrets to yourself. Revealing too much too soon would be a mistake. This is not the time to wear your heart on your sleeve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Postpone signing legal papers as long as possible. The delay will work to your advantage. Have faith that justice will prevail. A new beginning is possible at place of employment. Show initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A financial problem will not solve itself. The sooner you seek an expert's advice, the sooner you will have peace of mind. Move forward with confidence. Travel and romance go hand-in-hand.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A decision you make today gives you new strength. A sibling becomes your best friend again. If your career is stalled, seek advice from those who have travelled the same road.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is time to make a major career decision. Unless you pursue your goals with vigor, the competition will soon leap ahead of you. Let romance develop at its own pace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Concern over a new project is unfounded. Have confidence in those who love you. Do what you know is right, even if it will alienate someone. Extra cash will soon be available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A hectic work schedule will eventually pay off. Be willing to make temporary sacrifices for future benefits. New communication skills help you strike the right note with difficult co-workers or customers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Inject the same excitement into your work that you expect from romance. Finding something you really enjoy doing is the key to job satisfaction. You have more resources than you think!

BE 'RUFF ON THE PARTNER

Neither vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ 8 5 3 ♡ Q J 10 7 ◇ A 7 3 2 ♣ K 9
WEST ♠ K J 9 4 ♡ Void ◇ Q J 10 ♣ J 7 6 4 3 2		EAST ♠ 10 7 2 ♡ K 9 6 5 3 ◇ 9 6 ♣ 10 8 5
	SOUTH ♠ A Q 6 ♡ A 8 4 2 ◇ K 8 5 4 ♣ A Q

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

Good defense involves being aware of partner's problems. Look what happened on this hand from a team championship.

North's response of two clubs was the Drury Convention, inquiring about the strength of South's third-hand one heart opening bid. South's jump to three no trump showed a hand stronger than a one no trump opening bid, and North naturally corrected to hearts.

The contract and the opening lead in the two rooms was identical. Declarer won in dummy and led the queen of hearts, covered by the king and won by the ace as West sluffed a club.

Declarer cashed the ace of clubs, overtook the queen with dummy's king and led a diamond to his king. Then he exited with a diamond.

At one table West won the queen and had no safe exit. A club would yield a ruff and sluff, and a spade would be into declarer's tenace. Either way, declarer could maneuver, by end playing East in trumps, to hold his losers to one spade, one diamond and one trump. Despite the 5-0 trump break, the contract came home.

At the other table East realized that, if he allowed his partner to win the third diamond, West would be end played. To prevent that, he ruffed his partner's winning diamond and then made the excellent shift to the ten of spades. That ensured two spade tricks for the defenders, and declarer eventually had to lose another trump for down one.

Note that it would not have been good enough for East to shift to a low spade after ruffing the diamond. Declarer simply plays a low spade from hand and West is forced to win the spade. He is now subject to the same end play that he would have been a trick earlier had his partner not ruffed.

Comedian Murray wins UCLA honor for his 'excellence in entertainment'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Bill Murray, who uttered the immortal line "I've been slimed" in his role as a laid-back ghost exterminator in the hit movie "Ghostbusters," is the latest recipient of UCLA's Jack Benny Award for Excellence in Entertainment.

A capacity crowd of 1,800 jammed Royce Hall at the University of California at Los Angeles to see Wednesday's presentation ceremony.

Murray, 35, struck a serious note when asked about comedian John Belushi, a previous Jack Benny Award-winner who died of a drug overdose in 1982. He said he still misses Belushi, who appeared with him on television's "Saturday Night Live" and in several movies.

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter, known to be a handy carpenter and accomplished chair-maker, can add Sherpa dancing to his list of talents.

Carter

Carter, who ended a two-week tour of Nepal on Wednesday, said the most memorable part of his trip was "my relationship with the Sherpas," the Himalayan mountain people known for their climbing skills.

He and his wife Rosalynn stayed in Sherpa homes, and one night after an hour of talking and drinking millet beer, "we joined the Sherpa men and women for traditional Sherpa dances," Carter said. "So I became an accomplished dancer."

The couple also rode elephants through the Himalayan jungles and trekked around Mount Everest, the world's tallest mountain. Carter, 60, said he scaled Mount Kalapatar, more than 18,500 feet high, and "never had the slightest trouble with altitude sickness."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Mary Tyler Moore, comedians Steve Allen and Jackie Gleason, and the late Walt Disney were among seven inductees into the Television Academy of Arts and Sciences' Hall of Fame.

Other winners announced Wednesday were Burr Tillstrom, puppeteer of "Kukla, Fran and Ollie," Frank Stanton, president emeritus of CBS, and the late Fred Coe, a prolific producer in the 1950s.

They will be inducted at a black-tie gala at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium on March 23, to be telecast on NBC on April 21. Posthumous presentations will be made on behalf of Coe and Disney.

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Suntanned, with hair flowing, former Beatle George Harrison reminisced about his last visit to this city two decades before on a tour with the Fab Four.

Harrison

"It's great to be back," said Harrison, who flew in Wednesday for Australia's first Formula One Grand Prix race this weekend. He was accompanied by his close friend, three-time world champion Grand Prix driver Jackie Stewart.

"I remember the last time I was here, the balcony, all those crowds and the drive through the city in open-top cars," Harrison said. "That was 20 years ago, but let's not tell anyone about that."

Harrison, 42, said he looked forward to seeing the sights as a private person, in contrast to the heady days of the 1964 tour.

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Heart transplant patient Anthony Mandia has developed a potentially fatal inflamed pancreas, a medical spokesman says.

Mandia, who received a human heart Monday after 11 days of life with a Penn State artificial heart implanted in his body, was listed in critical and unstable condition Wednesday night, said Dr. John W. Burnside, a spokesman for Milton S. Hershey Medical Center.

Burnside said in a telephone interview that doctors don't know why Mandia developed pancreatitis.

"It's very serious; it's unexpected," he said, adding that the condition is potentially fatal and "we have to treat it with respect."

Burnside said he didn't know how far the condition had progressed, but noted there has been no sign of the usual symptoms of nausea and vomiting.

He said he couldn't recall any of the medical center's other 25 heart transplant patients developing pancreas problems.

Mandia, 44, is on a respirator, and was placed for a time on kidney dialysis Wednesday because of diminished urine output and elevated potassium levels in his body, doctors said.

Grant

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Kirby Grant, who starred as a wealthy rancher-pilot in the 1950s television series "Sky King," was killed Wednesday in a traffic accident. He was 73.

Grant played leads in Westerns and other action pictures, often as a Canadian Mountie. Among his movies were "Trail of The Yukon," "Call of the Klondike," "Northwest Territory," "Yukon Gold" and "Northern Patrol."

Grant starred in the 1953-54 ABC-TV series "Sky King." He bought a circus in 1965 and often took leading parts in local theatrical productions. Since 1979, Grant served as a good-will ambassador for Sea World of Orlando.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cher wows millions of movie fans, but she can't dial a long-distance number. Olympic decathlon champion Bruce Jenner was "absolutely terrified" of reading in front of his classmates. Richard Strauss is a wealthy Dallas real estate developer, but he can barely read or write.

All three are dyslexics, victims of a little-understood neurological disorder that scrambles their brain messages, much like a telephone switchboard with loose wires that short-circuits incoming and outgoing calls.

Dyslexic children have a lot of trouble learning to read, write, spell and perform simple arithmetic. When they write "brown dog," it might come out "bowrn god." They frequently cannot tell the left hand from the right, forget directions and feel overwhelmed when information comes at them too fast.

Others pursue non-academic interests in which they can excel. Jenner says that's why he entered athletics. That's how Robert Rauschenberg became a pre-eminent American artist, and how Tom Cruise embarked on a movie career that made him a teen-age idol.

Those five people, plus Wall Street investment banker G. Chris Andersen, were honored Wednesday night as winners of the "Outstanding Learning Disabled Achiever Awards" from the Lab School of Washington, a private, federally supported institution specializing in educating dyslexic children and adults.

Welch raises $69,105 day after his 'shoot the queers' remark

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayoral candidate Louie Welch, who said on live television that the way to control AIDS was to "to shoot the queers," raised $69,105 in one day after making the comment, financial records show.

Welch later apologized for the "unfortunate remark," broadcast Oct. 24 when a technician accidentally turned up the candidate's microphone.

But Welch said he was in good company, pointing to President Reagan's well-publicized comment during a microphone test about bombing Russia.

Welch campaign treasurer James Franklin said the faux pas had provided a "burst of energy and activity" to fund-raising efforts.

"The truth is getting out to people," Franklin said.

According to campaign finance reports filed Tuesday, Welch has raised about $1.5 million since he entered the race, including $678,000 in the 30-day period that ended Friday. Contributions totaled $69,105 last Friday alone, the day after Welch made the remark.

Welch will face incumbent Mayor Kathy Whitmire in the Nov. 5 election. Mrs. Whitmire, 39, reported contributions of almost $1.4 million, records showed.

Mrs. Whitmire raised about $350,000 in contributions in the 30-day period that ended Friday.

Sheila Rushlo, a mayoral spokeswoman, said specific figures for Friday's contributions were not available.

Welch, 66, is a former five-term mayor who recently introduced the prevention of acquired immune deficiency syndrome as a campaign issue in the race.

Mrs. Whitmire is seeking her third term, and received the support of the homosexual community in her previous bids.

Local gay political leaders said they were not amused by Welch's comment.

"It's a sick joke — if it's a joke," said Sue Lovell, president of Houston's Gay Political Caucus.

Mothers of transplant patients share burden with one another

HOUSTON (AP) — The organ transplants of three teen-agers at Houston's Methodist Hospital have created a bond between their mothers who say they share shoulders for support.

The mothers of Tracy Lynn Baird, 17; Nona White, 13, and Kenny McLaughlin, 16, have become friends since their children underwent transplants at the hospital.

"It helps to sit and talk to each other," said Gwen Baird, whose daughter underwent a heart-lung transplant Sunday. "We're all going through the same thing."

Not only are the mothers worrying about their children but they are also doing the worrying alone — all are single parents.

"It would be easier if I had a husband here to lean on," said Lisa White of Clovis, N.M., whose daughter received a new heart on her 13th birthday Sept. 7.

Ms. Baird of Mansfield, agreed. "It's hard to make the decisions alone," she said.

In all three cases, the teen-agers' illnesses were sudden.

"There never was a sign before," said Ms. White. It wasn't until she took her daughter to the doctor in March that X-rays detected an enlarged heart.

"When they told me she had an enlarged heart, I couldn't believe it," she said. "She had always done everything every other kid does."

For her, the burden is even heavier because Nona's twin sister, Dawn, has the same ailment.

"She may not ever have to have a transplant but they aren't ruling it out," Ms. White said of Dawn.

Doctors are keeping her on medication and closely monitoring her, she said.

Mary Jo McLaughlin said she never suspected anything either until her son decided to play high school football and then he started having problems with his skin.

Three mothers, from left, Gwen Baird, Mary Jo McLaughlin and Lisa White, discuss the fears they have about their children's survival after transplant surgery.

Kenny underwent a heart lung transplant Oct. 24. His kidneys failed Tuesday, forcing doctors to put him on a dialysis machine. But his mother is still hopeful.

IRVING (AP) — Winston Lee should be in West Palm Beach, Fla., this week celebrating his fifth wedding anniversary.

Instead, he is sitting nervously through a weeklong series of National Transportation Safety Board hearings into the Aug. 2 air disaster that killed his wife.

Alyson Lee, 31, was a flight attendant aboard Delta Air Lines Flight 191 that day when it flew through a violent — and unforecast — windstorm, crashed and exploded in a ball of flame at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

"I just want to know exactly what happened," said Lee, a 32-year-old landscape architect. "I thought people would learn from these kinds of crashes and that the (Reagan) administration would release funds for research.

"But it angers me to see that nothing has changed," he said Wednesday during the second day of hearings. "There's just lots of tail-covering and finger-pointing. No one seems to have learned from this."

Mrs. Lee had just recovered from an obscure illness and needed only one more medical test to clear the way for the Lees to start a family, he said. She had always wanted to be a Delta flight attendant and came from a family of pilots and stewardesses.

She chose Delta's Flight 191 because it stopped in Dallas.

STATE in brief

Trucker held in shootings

BEAUMONT (AP) — Jefferson County authorities were holding a 31-year-old truck driver charged in the shootings of two women — one of whom died — in lieu of $5 million bond.

Johnny James had been in the Chambers County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond since Oct. 23, when he was charged with armed robbery in the holdup of a Winnie convenience store.

A clerk at the store, Agnes Marie Harmon, identifed James as the man who allegedly shot her and fatally wounded Barbara Harrington Mayfield, 47, a High Island tavern owner, after the holdup, authorities said.

Authorities said Ms. Harmon, 23, of Stowell, told investigators a gunman entered the store the night of Oct. 22 and ordered her to put cash in a paper bag. He then drove the store clerk to the isolated road where he shot her and Ms. Mayfield, who had been locked in the trunk, in the head.

Death sentence upheld

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Wednesday upheld the death sentence of a man convicted of "coolly" killing a doughnut shop worker.

Joseph Paul Turner was found guilty of capital murder in the Oct. 7, 1980, strangulation of Kathleen Wilson in El Paso. His initial appeal was affirmed by the Court of Criminal Appeals, which Wednesday turned down his motion for rehearing.

Turner "coolly carried out his crime. He sat down, drank coffee and chatted with the deceased prior to robbing her and killing her," Judge Bill White said in his opinion for the court.

The victim was bound with an apron and strangled with a rope, according to court records.

White said Turner "showed no remorse for robbing and killing the baker at the Winchell's store. After murdering his victim, (he), in his own words, went home and went to sleep."

Ammonia leaks from plant

KNOX CITY (AP) — Ammonia leaking from an industrial fertilizer plant forced the evacuation of about 25 to 30 residents Wednesday night from their homes in the northwestern edge of this West Texas community, authorities said.

A shelter was set up at the high school cafeteria, but residents were allowed to return to their homes less than two hours later, Knox County Sheriff Gene Nix said.

Nix said an ammonia cloud, looking like a low-hanging fog, covered downtown Knox City, northwest of the intersection of U.S. Highway 222 and Texas Highway 6.

A fireman reported seeing the ammonia spewing about 7:15 p.m. from a two-story ammonia storage tank at Benjamin Fertilizer, Nix said. The area was sealed off, and traffic was rerouted on both highways.

Firemen sealed off the leak in a valve seal on top the large ammonia storage tank, and the all-clear was given at 8:55 p.m. for the evacuated to return to their homes, the sheriff said.

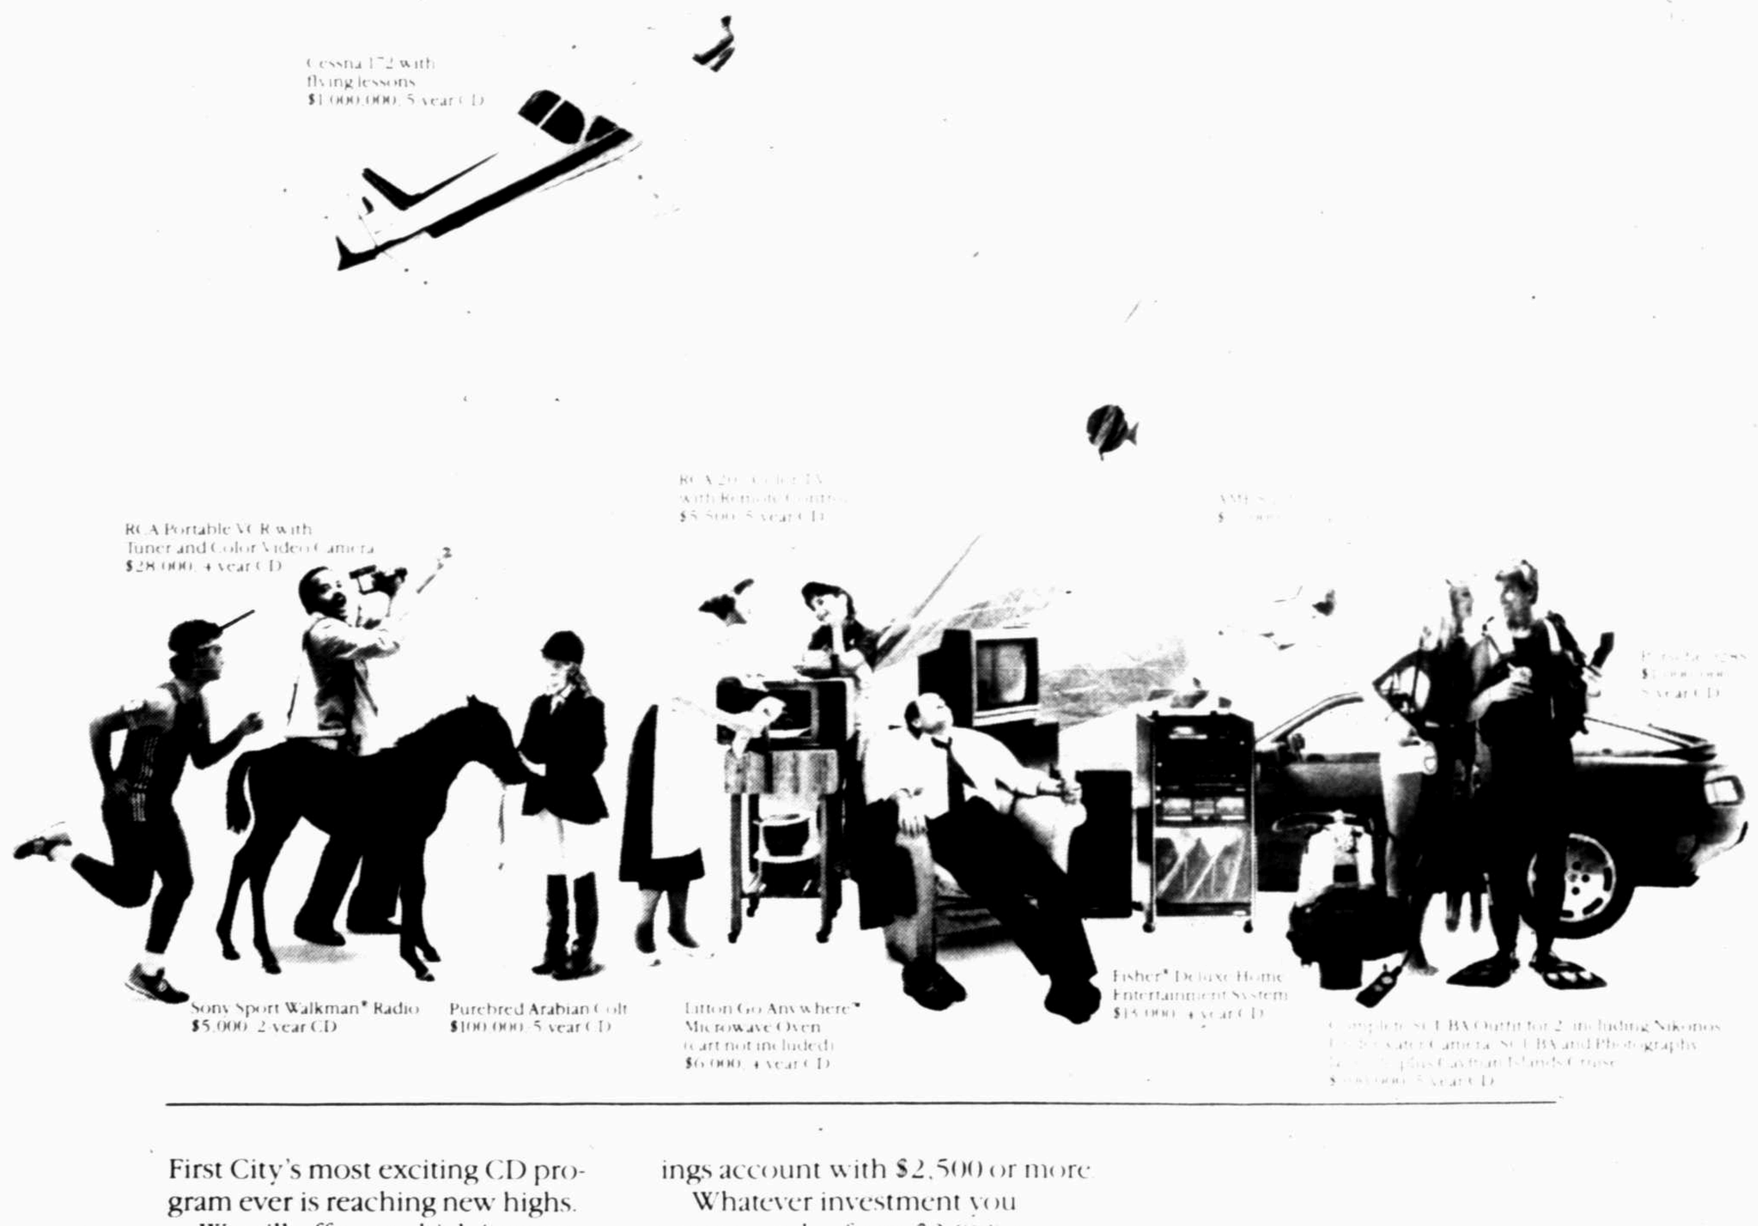

Lubbock bingo hall closed

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock said Wednesday he had closed down a Lubbock bingo hall because the two groups using it did not donate enough money to charity.

Bullock said that AA Today had gross receipts of $452,016 the past four quarters but gave only 1.9 percent, or $8,650, to charity. He said the Lubbock Humane Society reported gross receipts of $366,957 with 3.4 percent or $12,500 given to charity.

Bullock said the state bingo law requires the quarterly reports to show that bingo operators distributed a minimum of 35 pecent of their adjusted gross receipts to charity.

Shuttle crew rides test sled, launches satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts interrupted their lab work today to launch a small experimental satellite to test a system for tracking Soviet missile-firing submarines under the Arctic ice pack.

The 150-pound payload sprang out of a canister mounted outside the Spacelab workshop where crew members were riding on a one-man sled in a medical test and conducting basic research in metals processing, biology, life sciences and navigation. Spacelab is in the cargo bay.

Meanwhile, the eight-person crew, the largest ever sent into space, was settling into its two-shift round-the-clock operation of science research in the 23-foot Spacelab, whose operation is being controlled by West German scientists from a center in Oberpfaffenhofen, near Munich.

"GLOMR is deployed, no problems," reported pilot Steve Nagel.

GLOMR is an acronym for Global Low Orbiting Message Relay and was launched for the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency. It is designed to send on-off commands to small remote sensors dropped off by ship or aircraft in remote or hostile areas.

The sensors could track submarines lurking under the ice and relay that information to the satellite. U.S. satellites have photographed Soviet submarines breaking through Arctic ice. GLOMR also could collect weather data from far-flung ocean buoys.

The satellite will not fly over the Arctic on this flight, but future shuttle military missions launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., will pass over the poles and be able to drop such payloads into polar orbit. If the satellite-sensor test works, the Pentagon will consider developing an operational system.

GLOMR originally was to have been launched during an April shuttle flight, but the effort was scrubbed when the canister door did not open fully.

There are five Americans, two West Germans and a Dutchman aboard Challenger, which vaulted into space Wednesday to begin a seven-day flight. West Germany is paying the National Aeronautics and Space Administration $64 million to fly Spacelab and its experiments.

Reinhard Furrer, one of the two Germans, took the first ride on the sled designed to test human balance reflexes in weightlessness and told scientists in Oberpfaffenhofen: "It seemed not to be too hard on the crewman."

The sled, running on 12-foot-long rails inside the laboratory, affects the inner ear's balance mechanism by applying acceleration forces equal to Earth's gravity on four of the astronauts. Data from the experiments could help determine why about half of all astronauts suffer spells of motion sickness early in space flights.

Wubbo Ockels, the Dutch astronaut named to the flight by the European Space station, said after his run on the sled, "The visual stimulation is not very provocative. It is not noticeably different than on the ground." For the test, he wore a bubble-like helmet in which a revolving device stimulated his eyes.

Space-bound teacher Christa McAuliffe of Concorde, N.H., set for a ride into space in January 1986, smiles as she watches the launch of the Space Shuttle Challenger Wednesday at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Gene-spliced bacteria may be tested in field

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is likely to allow agricultural testing of a man-made copy of a naturally occurring bacterium that opponents fear could alter the environment once released from the laboratory.

Using the bacterium on a strawberry patch to prevent freezing of the plants' leaves would be the first agricultural test outside the lab of the new techniques of gene-splicing.

Opponents fear environmental damage could result from possible uncontrolled growth of such new organisms, which they claim might even alter rain patterns.

A bioengineering company, Advanced Genetic Sciences Inc. of Oakland, Calif., is seeking EPA approval to apply a strain of the bacterium Pseudomonas syringae to leaves of strawberry plants in a one-tenth acre test plot.

"In all likelihood the experimental use permit will be granted," EPA spokesman Dave Cohen said Wednesday.

The bacterium in question is found on all plant leaves — about 10 billion on a corn leaf, said Tom Dyotte, president of Advanced Genetic Sciences.

When water cools, ice forms by crystalization of water around microscopic particles. On plant leaves, these particles often are a protein produced by P. syringae.

But 0.1 percent of these bacteria are a form that does not produce the protein, Dyotte said. It is this form that Advanced Genetic Sciences has learned to produce by excising from the DNA molecule the genes that direct the cell to assemble the protein.

Field test of the same organism was blocked by a decision of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on the grounds that the National Institutes of Health, which oversees university research in the field, had to prepare an environmental impact statement before it could permit a researcher from the University of California at Berkeley to undertake a field test.

But in administering federal pesticide law, EPA does not have to prepare environmental impact statements. In this case, the pest is frost.

Dyotte said greenhouse tests showed P. syringae can protect strawberry leaves down to 22 degrees Fahrenheit, 10 degrees below the normal freezing point of water.

Jeremy Rifkin, who heads the Foundation on Economic Trends, filed the lawsuit that stopped the National Institutes of Health. He said Wednesday he was undecided on trying to stop the Oakland company.

Rifkin has argued that great harm could result from the release of man-made organisms into the environment. He cites earlier examples of man-made environmental tinkering such as the rapid spread of the kudzu vine following its introduction into the South and the hordes of starlings that developed in the United States following their importation from Europe.

The P. syringae bacterium, Rifkin said, provides many of the nuclei in the atmosphere on which raindrops coalesce. He fears rainfall patterns could be altered if the ice-minus form becomes so prevalent that fewer of the ice-plus proteins get into the atmosphere.

"If this (ice-minus form) develops a niche, the consequences could be important," he said.

EPA, he complained, does not plan to require monitoring of how much of the micro-organism is released into the atmosphere-and what happens to it there.

Test proponents say nature itself produces countless mutations all the time, and plant and animal breeders have been practicing a more primitive form of "genetic engineering" for centuries without harm.

Dyotte said there would be trouble only if the ice-minus form developed "super characteristics" that would make it the dominant form. That won't happen, he claimed.

"Our data suggest that the dominant (ice-plus) form overwhelms it," and one problem the company faces is getting the ice-minus form to survive long enough — two to four weeks — to be useful in the field, Dyotte said.

If all goes well, his company could market a product in two to three years, he said.

Another company, Monsanto Corp., has a pending application at EPA for field tests on a genetically engineered bacterium to protect corn roots against worms.

Two genetically engineered products already have been approved by other agencies, but in both cases the altered organisms stay in the factory. Eli Lilly & Co. is selling human insulin and Genentech Inc. has received Food and Drug Administration approval to sell human growth hormone.

Put her in a pumpkin shell?

Peter, Peter Pumpkin Eater, of nursery rhyme fame, could very well have kept his wife in the shell of this 330-pound pumpkin grown by Thomas Borchard of Salinas, Calif., who is saving the seeds for an even bigger growing effort next year.

Fires light 'Devil's Night'

DETROIT (AP) — Thousands of firefighters and volunteers were holding the line today against arsonists who sparked nearly 200 fires across the nation's sixth-largest city in an annual spree called "Devil's Night," officials said.

Blazes began in homes, garages, vehicles and apartment buildings as darkness fell Wednesday, and 194 fires were reported by 1 a.m. EST today, 28 percent fewer than the 269 blazes set by the same time last year, said Mayor Coleman Young.

Three men, whose identities were not released, were arrested on arson charges, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

Young said the city was meeting its objective of a 25 percent reduction from the two-day total of 559 fires last year on Devil's Night and Halloween.

Huddling with law enforcement officials at downtown police headquarters, Young praised the work of 4,400 volunteers who patrolled city neighborhoods to curb destruction. Off-duty officers, firefighters, meter maids and political appointees were pressed into service.

"We have a lot of volunteers out there performing citizen heroics," Young said. "I expect that we turned the corner on this. I think it has been a success."

But elsewhere, residents described their horror at watching homes and belongings burn to the ground.

Aliya Palmer, clad in a housecoat, sat on a neighbor's porch with her 10-year-old son, Charlie, and two puppies as flames raced through her home across the street.

"The edge of the roof was burning, but it took the fire department 30 minutes, maybe 35 minutes to get here," Palmer said. "It must have been some kids playing with fire. Adults wouldn't do this.

"I'm just hoping they put it out so I can go in and try to save something."

Shirley Jones, who lives near an abandoned garage that was set afire, said she extinguished the blaze before it spread.

Devil's Night, traditionally the night before Halloween, usually is associated with soaped windows and egg-caked stoops. But those relatively harmless activities turned serious in 1983, when firefighters answered calls on 553 blazes in which one person died.

"It ain't like it used to be," said Michael Clark, 31, who put out a fire near his home on the city's east side.

"We used to call this garbage can night. We go around and turn over garbage cans, throw eggs, soap up windows, stuff like that. When you start burning up houses and garages, it's crazy," he said.

Last year, Young said the city would enforce a 10 p.m. curfew for juveniles to stem the arson, but the fires grew so intense that neighboring community battalions were summoned to help extinguish the fires.

As part of his strategy to combat Devil's Night publicity this year, Young issued a gag order to police and fire officials and called a meeting of local newspaper and radio executives, hoping to control reports.

Young said the local news media were cooperative in keeping past Devil's Night exploits off the front page this week. But he criticized The Wall Street Journal for an article that said Detroit would try "to keep its people from burning the place down."

Halloween tradition has roots in blood-thirsty ritual

WASHINGTON (AP) — Youngsters happily setting forth to collect treats on Halloween unknowingly continue a tradition with roots stretching to the harvest festivals of ancient Rome, the blood-thirsty rites of the Druids and the civilizing efforts of the medieval church.

While the treats are reminiscent of the Roman celebrations marking harvestime, the children's garb of ghouls and witches recalls Druid ceremonies marking the coming of the darkness and cold of winter.

Today, Halloween, is the eve of All Saints Day, a celebration established in medieval times when the Christian church was seeking to spread its influence by arranging festivals to coincide with those of more ancient beliefs.

Indeed, the current name, Halloween, stems from the Christian title All Hallows Eve — the ancient Celts having called the holiday Samhain, "Summer's End."

After the Romans conquered Gaul their November harvest festival honoring Pomona, goddess of fruit, blended with Samhain.

That helped introduce the current emphasis on fruits and nuts that still prevails in the celebrations.

But the bloody Druid rites live on in the youthful emphasis on ghosts and spirits.

Samhain marked the end of the Celtic year, and priests celebrated a joint festival of the Lord of the Sun and Lord of the Dead as a mark of transition of the year.

Giant bonfires were lighted on hilltops to honor the sun god and frighten away evil spirits — and each householder extinguished the hearth fire that had burned all year, to restart it with embers from the bonfire.

This blessed flame, which helped drive off the ghosts lurking on Samhain, was to protect the home from danger for the year.

The Druid priests built the protective bonfires because it was believed that the souls of all who had died during the year assembled on Samhain, some being allowed a brief visit to their families, others playing tricks on the living.

In addition to the fires, the priests sought to appease the sun god by sacrificing animals and, often, people too — usually criminals and prisoners of war. That practice gave the blazes their names, literally "bonefires."

Hoping to offset residual paganism and increase the influence of the church, Pope Gregory IV placed All Saints Day on Nov. 1 during the eighth century.

But the Christianizing influence has taken considerable time, and in many countries old traditions continue — with some Europeans continuing to believe that on the night of All Saints Day visitors to a cemetery can hear in the wind the names of people who are to die in the coming year.

As the Middle Ages progressed, the church hardened its attitude toward witches' cults, which continued to grow during that time.

Though witchery was at first considered a form of delusion, the church later said the craft existed and condemned contact with the practice. By the end of the 15th century it had adopted a policy of punishing witches — and during the next two centuries thousands of people were accused of witchcraft, tortured into confessing and burned.

The persecution reached America in the 17th century, culminating in the great Salem witch trials. And as recently as 1720 a woman in Scotland was sentenced to die for sorcery.

Today laws against witchcraft are gone and few claim to practice the craft seriously, although the annual bonfires and spooky traditions remain in many places.

Halloween parties and the telling of scary tales also have their origin in the Druid times when spirits were believed to be abroad in the land.

No one wanted to face the ghosts alone, so people gathered in groups about the bonfires — telling stories and talking to pass the time since no one dared relax and sleep on this night.

Bonfires continue to be popular and the images of ghosts and spirits abroad in the land remain — albeit taken less seriously today by most Americans than in the past.

Today the holiday is primarily for children, and for the most part is less sinister. Pranks are usually less dangerous than early in this century when outhouses were overturned, snakes placed in teachers' desks and buggies hoisted onto roofs.

Festivals, children's parties and harmless collections of treats are now more common — with only the costumes reflecting the sinister past of the occasion.

Reagan faces post-summit 'all-nighter'

An Analysis

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, who has suffered embarrassment in the past for incidents later blamed on a grueling schedule, will end his six-day trip to Europe for the U.S.-Soviet summit meeting with a day to remember.

The 74-year-old Reagan, whose travel schedule has intensified dramatically since he underwent surgery for colon cancer in July, will function at a measured pace in the days leading up to his two days of talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Geneva, Switzerland, on Nov. 19 and 20.

But on the day of his departure, he is expected to bid the Soviets farewell in the morning, have a quiet lunch in Geneva, then fly to Brussels, Belgium, to report to the allies at NATO headquarters, cross the Atlantic and — taking advantage of the six-hour time change — go straight up to Capitol Hill to report to Congress and the American people on prime time television before going home to the White House for the night.

It is a day reminiscent of the four-city European jaunt he made in 1982 on the day he was photographed nodding off during his meeting with Pope John Paul I.

His wife, Nancy, maintained it was the intensive briefing and rehearsal schedule that tired her husband and cost him dearly in his first campaign debate with Democrat Walter Mondale last year.

And Reagan was dogged for months by the off-hand comment of an adviser who acknowledged the president sometimes fell asleep in Cabinet meetings.

"The president can travel well," said one White House aide, speaking about the post-summit plan only if promised anonymity. "He can have a light dinner leaving Brussels, get into his p.j.'s and catch four or five hours sleep on the plane."

Reagan does have a sleeping cabin aboard Air Force One, but there are those who will wonder how he will be able to stand before a joint session of Congress and deliver an important speech at what — to his body clock — will be about 3 a.m. And that day will crown two days of the most intensive, most critical meetings of his career.

The last day apparently became jammed by two unrelated events that disrupted weeks of meticulous planning designed to present Reagan to Gorbachev in his best fighting trim and bring him home in time to relax for a few days before flying to California for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The decision to add the address to Congress was based in part on precedent and in part on a desire to get the U.S. side of the summit story out as soon as possible after the event, sources said. And the night of Reagan's return was the last night the House could be called into session without many members being on their way home for Thanksgiving.

Although the president could have pressed for a delay until Friday, he would have sacrificed his large television audience, either by making the speech in the morning while the members were still in town or waiting until Friday evening, when millions of viewers are away from their sets.

Sources said Reagan himself was so pleased with his consultations last week with allied leaders at the United Nations that he volunteered to give them a personal briefing on the summit talks if they would meet him in Brussels. Normally, the report to the allies would have been delivered by Secretary of State George Shultz.

It is understood Reagan's European schedule has been approved not only by the president, who tends to take the advice of his aides on scheduling matters, but by Mrs. Reagan as well, who is known — and feared — around the White House for her strong protective instincts.

For the upcoming trip, Reagan's advisers consulted numerous experts, including his doctors and a Canadian air force study of jet lag before deciding on a morning departure, getting him into Geneva late that night and ready for a full night's sleep. That also gives him two full days on the ground in Geneva to rest, prepare and acclimate himself to the time difference before he meets Gorbachev.

Although the meeting schedule is intense — two hours each morning and two each afternoon — preceded by staff meetings and interrupted by working lunches, aides have set aside several hours each afternoon to give the president time to rest, read or nap if he wants to before going out to dinner — and less formal talk — with Gorbachev each evening.

"We've been very conscious of the scheduling," one aide said. "But he's a horse, he's stronger than either you or I. You watch, he'll get up there before Congress while the juices are still up from talking to the Russians, and he'll be great."

Soviets rush to polish their image for summit

An Analysis

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — By allowing Yelena Bonner and other Soviet dissidents to leave for the West, the Kremlin is making a conspicuous effort to improve its human rights image in time for the summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"It's incredibly cynical, and they shouldn't get any credit for what they should have done a long time ago," said William Hyland, a Soviet expert who held key posts in both the Ford and Nixon administrations.

But cynicism aside, Hyland and others see it as one more indication that Moscow wants a successful summit, just as most think Reagan also wants a productive summit. The two leaders will meet Nov. 19-20 in Geneva.

Mrs. Bonner's daughter, Tatyana Yankelevich, who is in the United States, said Wednesday night on the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" television show that by freeing her mother, the Soviets were trying to "move one of the human rights cases off the agenda" for the summit.

"I think things are beginning to fall into place," says Hyland, who cites among other things the considerable speculation that the two leaders will issue a statement of principles pointing to a new arms control agreement.

Paul Cook, the recently retired top Kremlinologist at the State Department, said, "Instead of looking for things to argue about, they are looking for things to agree about."

The decision by Reagan to grant an interview to Soviet journalists today is probably part of a "tit-for-tat" exchange that will result in Gorbachev being interviewed by American television networks, Cook said.

There are these recent developments that point to a readiness by both sides to do business:

— Gorbachev's recent arms control proposal to slash strategic nuclear weapons by 50 percent and the American response. Reagan said Wednesday there are "seeds to nurture" in the proposal, and Vice President George Bush has said it contains "positive steps."

— An expression of a Soviet willingness to negotiate a separate agreement on intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe, with a freeze on missile deployment by both sides. Paul Nitze, Reagan's chief arms control adviser, said the proposal is useful although not yet sufficient.

— Moscow's decision to allow Mrs. Bonner, ailing wife of exiled Soviet physicist Andrei Sakharov, to seek medical treatment in the West, which it previously had refused to do. It released another dissident, Irina Grivnina and her family, this week. There are some indications that Sakharov himself might be allowed to leave soon.

— The Soviet offer to stop construction on its controversial Krasnoyarsk radar, which Washington said violates the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty, in exchange for an agreement by the United States to halt improvements on two existing radar systems.

Farm bail-out called funding 'fleet of Titanics'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The financially creaky Farm Credit System is asking Congress to provide up to $6 billion in a massive bail-out to help keep thousands of farmers afloat.

But some members of Congress are looking hard at the proposal, and at least one national farm organization says the rescue effort needs more study.

Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., said the system isn't the only institution in financial trouble.

"I see a whole fleet of Titanics" out there, Weaver said. "If we start by bailing out the Farm Credit System, where does it stop?"

The American Farm Bureau Federation, which was to testify today at a House Agriculture Committee hearing, says credit is a prime issue among farmers.

But federation president Robert B. Delano said in his hearing statement that "the debt problem in agriculture is much wider than just the Farm Credit System." Any assistance program should be balanced among all lenders, not just the system, he said.

"We want to make sure that any solution maintains the delicate competitive balance that exists among all farm lenders," Delano said. "Farmers surely want to avoid becoming dependent on one source of credit."

The bail-out proposal was made Wednesday by Ray Moss Tucker, chairman of the Farm Credit Council, the system's lobbying arm. It asked for up to $6 billion.

"Our request for federal assistance today is one of the most difficult decisions which we have ever made as an organization, but frankly speaking, we have no other choice," Tucker told the committee.

Some members of the committee warmed to the idea, but others expressed skepticism and sought explanations of how the system got so deeply in trouble.

Recent financial reports have shown that the 37-bank system, the nation's largest farm lender with $70 billion in outstanding loans, has $13 billion in problem loans. The system suffered losses of $622 million in the third quarter of this year, and more losses are expected.

Donald E. Wilkinson, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, an independent federal agency that oversees the system, blamed its financial troubles on "a confluence of events and circumstances, many of which are beyond anyone's control." High interest rates, declining farm income and large drops in land values were cited.

"Any prospects for near-term improvement or even cessation in the unrelenting economic decline in agriculture have disappeared," Wilkinson said.

Many of the system's loans are for farm mortgages, and the collateral which supports those loans has eroded severely as farmland values dropped along with the profit potential of farming.

Wilkinson said that between 1981 and 1985, farm real estate values dropped about $151 billion, with more than $100 billion of it occurring in the past year.

NATION IN BRIEF

Rajneesh's hearing today

Rajneesh

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh is used to robes and receiving the respect of followers as he drives by in one of his commune's 90 Rolls-Royces, but these days he's wearing prison clothes and and receiving the attentions of prison staff.

"He laughs and smiles, says he's never been dressed like this before," said Mecklenburg County Sheriff C.W. Kidd. "He's all right."

Rajneesh, who was arrested Monday on immigration charges after a flight from his 64,000-acre commune in Oregon, was set to appear in court today for a bond, detention, probable cause and identification hearing. The hearing was expected to determine whether the guru and six followers would return to Oregon to face charges.

"I have complaints about the conditions but not about the people," Rajneesh told The Charlotte Observer. "The nurses and other employees have treated me lovingly, humanely and respectfully."

Rajneesh, 53, ate foods including pea soup and yogurt Wednesday, but drew the line at grits, the Southern dish made of hominy.

Democrats offer 'consensus'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are offering a five-point, "consensus" trade package designed to avert wrangling over tariffs and quotas and focus instead on moderate steps that could win broad support.

"This does not do as much as I would like to see us do in the trade area," Sen. Russell Long, D-La., told a news conference Wednesday. But he said "it does a lot and everything it does is in the right direction."

The outline unveiled by the Democrats joins an array of omnibus packages placed before Congress in recent months as concerns increase over the nation's projected $150 billion trade deficit.

It would create a Cabinet-level National Trade Council in the White House and spur the Reagan administration to consult with Congress before embarking on a new round of talks involving the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Trick-or-treat by daylight?

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's Halloween, the witches' sabbath, and there's a band of people in Congress who want to turn trick-or-treating into a daylight activity by extending daylight-saving time an extra month.

Not only that, the Senate Commerce Committee has even chosen Halloween for a hearing on legislation that would force all little ghosts, goblins and their cohorts to wait an hour longer for a Halloween sunset. Such a measure already has been approved by the House.

And to really rub it in on the denizens of the netherworld, one of the chief proponents of the idea, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, is jokingly calling the legislation "the Ghost and Goblins Protection Act of 1985."

Under a law passed in 1966, daylight-saving time begins the last Sunday in April and ends the final Sunday in October. But under the extension plan, clocks would be set ahead on the first Sunday in April and returned to standard time the first Sunday in November, guaranteeing daylight-saving time Halloweens.

'Humphrey' may be pregnant

RIO VISTA, Calif. (AP) — Humphrey, the 45-ton whale whose exploits in the Sacramento River have hit the headlines for a week, may really be a Wanda, and she may be pregnant and in the river looking for a place to give birth, says a state emergency official.

Bev Passerello, spokeswoman for the state Office of Emergency Services, suggested Wednesday that Humphrey may be a female looking for comforting warm water to deliver an offspring.

Real vanilla more costly than 'imitation vanilla flavor'

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I want to know what the difference is between real vanilla and imitation vanilla flavor. My friend uses nothing but the real flavoring and says she can taste the difference. H Kassman, Nyssa, Ore.

A. Imitation vanilla flavor (vanillin) is a combination of chemicals designed in laboratories to taste like real vanilla. According to Michael Jacobson, author of "Eater's Digest," "Vanillin has a similar taste but is not quite as good as the real thing, because natural vanilla contains a multitude of minor constituents that modify and perfect the flavor."

Growing vanilla beans is a costly, delicate and time-consuming process. The plant is a member of the orchid family and grows like a vine, trailing around trees in few tropical areas of the world.

Attempts to plant vanilla elsewhere were unsuccessful until it was discovered in the last century that only certain varieties of hummingbirds and bees could pollinate the flowers. Now on large vanilla farms the plants are pollinated by hand.

There is only about as much real vanilla in the world to flavor the vanilla ice cream in the U.S. for one year. Since vanilla flavoring is used in so many products such as chocolate, cakes, cookies and candy, vanillin was developed. It is considerably less expensive than real vanilla.

Q. Years ago we had abalone steak in California restaurant and never forgot how good it was. Although we eat out a lot in seafood restaurants, we have never seen it on a menu since then. Why is it so difficult to get? Is it sold in seafood markets anywhere? M. Hull, Riverside, Conn.

A. Abalone is a mollusk with one shell that clings to rocks along the shore of California, Mexico, Japan and Australia. Some species can be found elsewhere, but the tastiest abalone comes from the Pacific coast.

Abalone is highly prized not only by man but also by otters, and since there are more otters than ever before along the Pacific coast, the supply of abalone is ever decreasing. It is now illegal to ship fresh, frozen or canned abalone out of the state of California, and the gathering of this mollusk is well regulated.

Some specialty stores carry canned abalone which originates in Japan. The last time I saw abalone on a California menu, it was priced at $36. In a restaurant in any other state, abalone might be just as expensive, but you can be sure it would be frozen and imported.

One of these days all will change, however, as experiments are currently being conducted to cultivate this shellfood on aquafarms.

Q. Some ice cream I had for months in the back of the freezer tasted little sour. My husband says this is impossible because anything frozen can't get sour. I maintain that it was, and would like to know how this could happen. R. Vesta, Stamford, Conn.

A. "Ice cream kept in the freezer," says David Roycroft, a spokesperson for Kraft, Inc., "may develop an off-flavor due to freezer burn. Ice cream will acquire an off-flavor even before it reaches code date if the container is opened and not properly resealed. However, ice cream will remain fresh in the freezer until the code date if it is left unopened. I suggest that your reader place the ice cream in a freezer bag with a twist tie after it is opened. This will help prevent ice crystals and off-flavors from developing."

Q. Every time I get ready to buy a microwave oven, someone tells me about some negative story about microwaves. For instance, someone just told me that dogs won't eat food cooked in microwave ovens. Could you please investigate? Ann Lockhart, Linwood, N.J.

A. I don't have a microwave oven nor do I have a dog, so I consulted with a veterinarian who happens to have both, L.E. Carmichael, Ph.D., with the James Baker Institute for Animal Health at the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine.

Although not an expert in the field of microwave ovens, Dr. Carmichael states, "I find New York dog owners do, indeed, occasionally prepare food for dogs with a microwave cooking and the dogs seem to thrive. I seized upon the occasion to cook for my own dog in our microwave, and my Corgi relished the dish! The animal usually received dry dog food plus a little Alpo, and seemed pleased with the change."

Professor Gertrude Armbruster of Cornell's department of nutrition believes that microwave ovens are not only safe appliances for the home, but also the nutritional value of foods cooked in microwaves is higher than when cooked by other methods. Fewer nutrients are lost or damaged during the shortened cooking time.

Reader feedback: M. Hayden, Hawley, Pa.: "Here' is a thought I would like to share with you and your readers. I will henceforth not put any merchandise in my shopping cart with multiple price labels tacked one over the other. I will buy the products I need only after asking the clerk or stocker to give me the latest shelf item received, with just a single fresh price label. That way I know I will be receiving the best, and not the oldest, item for that increased price."

Tips for trick-or-treating suggested

By MARIAN FARR

Halloween treats may seem more like "tricks" to parents who want to keep their children from filling up on candy. Below are some suggestions on how to keep the holiday treats safe and curb your child's urge to overeat sugary foods.

- Let children trick-or-treat only in familiar areas and neighborhoods.
- Make sure children eat before going out and don't eat anything out of their bags before coming home.
- After trick-or-treating, share the fun by letting the children show you their treats. Throw away any unwrapped items or those with torn wrappers. Wash fruit and it cut into small pieces to make sure nothing has been placed inside.
- Encourage your children to save some candy by suggesting that they eat one or two pieces a day, at snack time and as a dessert following a meal.
- Along with the sweet treat at snack time or dessert, offer the child some milk or juice to drink.
- Suggest alternate snacks such as fruit, sandwiches or cheese to the children instead of sweets.

Even if you rarely allow your children to have sweets, try to take a casual approach to having them around during this holiday. Your relaxed attitude will help keep your child's attention from being focused on having sweets to eat.

DEAR ABBY

No divorce equals bigamy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I know in some states there is such a thing as "common-law marriage," which means people are as good as married if they live together as husband and wife for a certain length of time.

How about "common-law divorce"? I have a relative (I'll call him Earl) who drove his wife ("Myrtle") and their two children to Texas to visit her parents in 1975, and he never went back to get them.

In the meantime, Earl (who lives in Ohio) took up with a lady, and they are now living together just like married folks. Myrtle and the kids seem happy in Texas, although they haven't had any contact with Earl since he left them there.

Earl is now making plans to marry his ladyfriend, saying that after 10 years of separation, he has a "common-law divorce," so he can get married without any hassle.

Is this right? I've never heard of a common-law divorce, have you? — INTERESTED RELATIVE

DEAR INTERESTED: No. But I have heard of "bigamy," which is what Earl can be charged with if he gets married to his ladyfriend while he's married to Myrtle.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice, "Never pick up a hitchhiker," supported by a column filled with horror stories, infuriated me.

I am well aware of the violent crimes taking place today, but I refuse to live in a self-made prison, double-locking all doors, putting bars on all windows, assuming that everyone out there is a potential robber, rapist or murderer. And I DO pick up hitchhikers because the majority of them are good people who want only transportation.

I think your attitude ("even if one in 10,000 is a bad apple, the odds are too high") is mean and selfish. Sign me — MORE GENEROUS THAN YOU

DEAR MORE GENEROUS: You are also more courageous. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Mad in Minnesota" on the danger of hitchhiking was exactly correct. Our son was one of those who loved to hitchhike to meet those "wonderful people." He hitchhiked all over the United States and southern Africa, even though he had plenty of money to travel by other means.

In the summer of 1984, at the age of 28, our son was apparently picked up by a "wonderful person" in Nebraska as he was returning to graduate school in Iowa. His decomposed body was found along the side of the freeway two weeks later with two bullets in it.

His mother had continually warned him not to hitchhike, but he wouldn't listen. I only hope that this story may help prevent the needless loss of life and the indescribable pain of grief for the families of other prospective hitchhikers. — STILL GRIEVING IN TEXAS

Frozen Chinese foods exotic fare

By LINDA ANDERSON

In the '50s and '60s, ethnic foods were, for the most part, confined to certain geographical areas in this country. Those of us who grew up in the West Texas area were connoisseurs of enchiladas, tacos, fried chicken, biscuits and gravy, but had very limited knowledge of chow mein or pizza. And those reared in the Northeast had never tasted chicken fried steak, refried beans or Dr. Pepper.

Now all that has changed. Ethnic foods in a rainbow of flavors are available at restaurants in nearly every American city with a population of more than 50,000. And for diners in smaller cities — or for those who would rather stay home and eat — many companies are marketing frozen ethnic foods in supermarkets.

Benihana restaurants have achieved a highly-respected reputation among Oriental food lovers. Now the company has developed its own line of frozen Oriental foods, available in many major supermarkets.

The adult, teen and children tasters all (even the little kids) love Chinese food, so we couldn't resist trying Benihana's frozen food. One of the participating adults has been to Benihana restaurants, but for the rest of us this was our first taste of this famous cuisine.

We tested Benihana frozen sweet and sour chicken against Chun King sweet and sour pork (the most similar available dish) for taste, texture, price and advertising accuracy. Both products are marketed in boilable bags.

Benihana sweet and sour chicken is packaged in 11-ounce, single serving boxes, including a packet of rice and a packet of chicken in sauce, and costs $2.49. The Chun King pork (10-ounce, single serving) is also packaged in two bags — one of rice, one of meat and sauce — and is priced at $1.96. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising on the Benihana box linked the product to the "world-famous Benihana Restaurants, where millions of Americans have enjoyed a unique dining experience." It also claimed Rocky Aoki, founder/owner of the restaurant chain, is "an Olympic wrestler, an A.A.U. champion, a world class offshore powerboat racer, backgammon champion" and "history-making balloonist," though what all that has to do with marketing Oriental food has yet to be discovered.

The label advertising on the Chun King product was a little less flamboyant: "use only the finest ingredients ... distinctive sauces and seasonings add that special Oriental flavor ... tender chunks of pork with pineapple, green peppers, onions, carrots and sweet red peppers in a delectable sweet and sour sauce."

However, the Chun King label did include nutrition information. The product is claimed to contain 360 calories, 14g protein, 61g carbohydrate and 7g fat. Which means it has a respectable amount of carbohydrates and very little fat. And comparatively few calories, if used as the main meal of the day.

The taste-testers agreed in their choice. In both products the vegetables were slightly mushy and the meat too chewy (well, tough). The Chun King dish had smaller chunks of vegetables, but in general tasted better. The Benihana sweet and sour chicken had bigger chunks of vegetables (including mushrooms, my favorite), but was almost all sweet and no sour.

The differences in the two meats were almost indistinguishable — in fact, one or two of the testers thought the chicken was the pork, or vice versa.

The testers were surprised at their own choices, having heard how wonderful the restaurant food is. We still plan to dine at a Benihana restaurant, however, the next time we are in the Big City. But we'll stay away from sweet and sour anything.

Multiple-shopping common

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — It's true that some people consider them strange, even eccentric. But they don't care. Their position is that if other people want to run around constantly searching and shopping, let them. They know better. When they see something they like, they not only grab it, they grab them. They are the men and women who buy in quantity when they find a style they like.

Why? It's primarily a matter of love: a dress, a sweater, a shirt, a tie or a pair of shoes that looks good, feels comfortable and can go on almost forever. They know that if they don't stock up, chances are when they go to replace it, it will be out of stock or superseded by something new.

There are other reasons. Some of the people who buy in multiples do it to save time, some have several homes and like almost identical wardrobes in all of them, some hate shopping, some hate change. But all are convinced that their method of shopping is the only logical one.

"You're talking to Miss Multiple," said Jill Krementz, the photographer and author, who is married to another writer, Kurt Vonnegut.

KREMENTZ'S WORKING uniform is loose coveralls, which she wears with a blouse and tie shoes. The coveralls are made by Laura Ashley and she has 14 pairs in the same style, in different colors and varying fabrics from corduroy and cotton to chintz. The five blouses she wears with them are identical, as are her four pairs of working shoes. Other duplicates in her wardrobe include a Norma Kamali turtleneck dress, in white, green, olive and black.

"I buy everything in quantity," she said. "When I find a lipstick color I like, I buy six of them, for the bathroom, my handbag, the summer house, my camera case and I can't remember where else, but I use them all."

Joan Graham runs a medical office for her husband, Dr. Jack Graham, an orthopedic surgeon. She is also an expert on and collector of majolica, glazed pottery in brilliant colors. Her theory about why she frequently buys in multiples is somewhat offbeat.

"People who are collectors have a particular personality," she said. "If they find something wonderful, they want more of it, and the same trait applies to clothes."

WHEN GRAHAM finds a pair of shoes that looks good and fits well, she buys the same style in every color carried by the store. Bras are ordered by the dozen, frequently several of them in the same color, because "they keep changing the styles," and her purchase of shirts follows the same pattern.

"It's a feeling you have about something that makes you feel good," she said. "If I find a sweater that is cozy and nice to wear, I'll get it in several colors, too."

Anyone who thinks that buying in multiples is frivolous is dead wrong, according to Kasper, the designer. It has nothing to do with affluence, he said, although it obviously requires an initial investment that is not possible for everyone.

"Basically, people who buy several things in the same style spend money more carefully," he said. "And in my own case, there's another thing: I don't shop a lot."

"I like certain basics that work with everything," he said. "For example, I love knitted gloves, which I used to get at Harrods in London, then they stopped carrying them. When I found something similar, I bought several pair immediately. I think it's a more intelligent way to shop."

NORMAN LEAR, the television producer responsible for such programs as "All in the Family" and "Maude," confessed that he, too, occasionally succumbs to buying more than one of something he likes.

"It's not a way of living with me but I sometimes do it if I like something or to simplify life," he said. "I bought a sweater I liked in a number of different colors and I love it — now I'm sorry I didn't buy more."

The one multiple purchase that was a way of life, Lear said, was shoes.

"That's because I wear only one style," he said.

"I do it but it makes me sound so boring," said Arnold Jurdem when asked if he ever bought more than one of something. "I'm a creature of habit. I don't like change. I'm the type who likes the same restaurant and can go back to it three times a week. Even with traveling — I could go to London, Paris, Rome and nowhere else."

Jurdem said his wife, Anne, was quite different, and therefore he cannot always indulge his passion for sameness. But when it comes to his wardrobe, his conservatism prevails.

"I like striped shirts," he said. "I buy the same style in all kinds of colors. I like pin-striped suits. I buy the same style in blue, black and gray. I've worn the same style of shoes for 10 years. I get them in brown and black, and the only time I ever change is to buy moccasins in the summer."

As for socks, Jurdem, a public-relations executive, said he bought them a dozen at a time, argyle for day wear and black silk for evening.

THE JURDEMS SPEND a good part of the summer season on Long Island, where a blazer is the evening uniform for men. Many of the men enliven their wardrobes with blazers of varying colors and style. Not Jurdem.

"I buy two blazers at a time, same color — navy — and same style," he said firmly.

Jewell Jackson McCabe walks out of a store with four or five blouses in the same style because she tends to wear dramatic clothes and prefers simple accessories.

"There was one blouse I particularly loved because it draped so beautifully," she said. "I bought it in every color they had. Then I went out and found a seamstress to copy it."

McCABE, WHO IS president of the Coalition of 100 Black Women, said she had a high-heeled classic Charles Jourdan pump in red, beige, white, burgundy, black patent and black kid.

"I wouldn't buy more than two handbags or nightgowns of the same style but I buy panty hose by the dozen," she said.

Company develops new SIDS monitor

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Florida firm has developed a new mattress-imbedded monitor that could prove a "godsend" for parents of babies at risk of sudden infant death syndrome, a company spokeswoman says.

The new computerized monitor, known as "Lifewatch," requires no wires or tape-attached electrodes to the infant's body.

The mattress monitor sends signals to a remote microprocessor that keeps track of the infant's condition, said Anne Callison, spokeswoman for Emergent Technology Corp. in Boca Raton, Fla.

If the baby stops breathing or his heart stops, the computerized unit sets off an alarm.

It also gives voice directions on what emergency steps to take, Ms. Callison said.

The monitor was displayed at the American Academy of Pediatrics convention in San Antonio this week.

"For mothers who know their babies are predisposed to SIDS, this is really going to be a godsend," Ms. Callison said.

Sudden infant death syndrome is a condition in babies in which breathing stops for about 20 seconds. Infants at one month to a year old are at highest risk.

About 6,000 infants die each year of the disease in the United States.

Infants who are underweight at birth, are premature, are born to drug-dependent mothers or who are born with respiratory or heart problems also would benefit from the new monitor, Ms. Callison said.

Lifewatch also records medical data that can be transmitted through a home modem to a doctor's office, saving a parent a visit.

Lifewatch is awaiting Food and Drug Administration approval and would be available on a prescription basis only, Ms. Callison said.

Training for parents in cardiopulmonary resuscitation would be required with use of the monitor.

The equipment, to be leased for about $250 a month, would be available in three sizes — crib, playpen and bassinet.

Purchasing new car requires patience, strategy

Associated Press

Whether you feel compelled to be the first on your block to have a new car or plan to do your shopping later, plot your strategy now for getting the best deal, says Changing Times magazine.

With a flood of imports coming this fall and winter, bargains will abound, but they won't drop in your lap.

Perhaps the most important steps in buying a new car are determining the dealer's cost and deciding how much you are willing to pay. The final price should fall somewhere between dealer (invoice) cost and suggested retail price. Remember the dealer probably didn't pay as much as the stated invoice cost, because the manufacturer usually gives an additional cut later.

You'll find a comprehensive list of car prices and options in "Edmund's New Car Prices" ($2.95 on newsstands), or you can get a printout on a single car for $6.95 from Nationwide Auto Brokers or for $18 from CarPuter. The December issue of Changing Times magazine will carry a listing of all of the 1986 cars, including dealer cost and sticker prices, as well as many other prices and specifications.

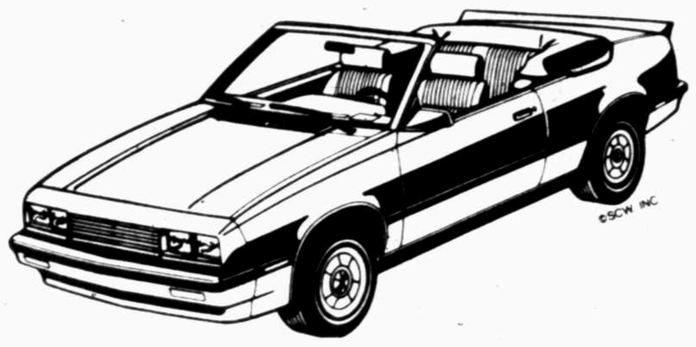

IN DETERMINING what you're willing to pay, aim for $50 to $100 over the dealer cost for a subcompact, $100 to $150 for an intermediate, $150 to $200 for a full-size car and $200 to $300 for a luxury car. If you're after a popular imported model that is still selling above sticker price, your goal is to limit the added dealer markup as best you can.

Now try to find a dealership willing to meet your target price. Always negotiate the price first, separately from the financing, keeping in mind you don't have to close the deal if the finance rate doesn't suit your budget.

The salesperson may go along with the price you offer but then try to raise that "lowball" concession in a variety of ways.

Some dealerships will try to wear down your resistance by turning you over to a more experienced negotiator, the sales manager. Don't go along with that. Insist on dealing with one person. Throughout the attempts to get you to pay more, remember that you can walk out if the dealership fails to meet your terms.

The dealer may pack the car with extras in order to increase the profit. That could leave you faced with purchasing such inflated aftermarket items as undercoating, paint sealant and pinstriping at prices as much as 300 percent above what they cost the dealer to install.

IF THE DEALERSHIP insists you buy a car equipped with extras you don't want, try to get a lower price, order a different car or head for another dealership. Don't hesitate to continue your search out in the boondocks. Dealers on the fringe of a metropolitan area are often ready to strike a better deal.

If you will be financing your car, check the rates at any banks where you have a working relationship. Banks often will finance a customer's loan at a lower rate than they would a stranger's.

Financing through a dealership can sometimes yield lower terms than you can get from a bank. But before you take the dealership's financing, be certain you know the prevailing bank interest rate. A dealer who offers you a loan below the going rate, "a buydown," will undoubtedly attempt to recoup the difference by charging a higher price for the car or packing it with a lot of extras. That's why you should get the price and options pinned down before you talk about financing.

It's usually better to sell your car yourself after determining its fair resale value from price guides such as the "Kelley Blue Book" or the "NADA Official Used Car Guide." You will probably get something closer to the full retail price, not the lower wholesale price the dealership will offer on a trade-in.

DO NOT PURCHASE optional credit life insurance with your car loan. If you die, it will pay off to the lender, not to your heirs. It is an expensive form of life insurance, costing possibly $400 on a four-year, $8,000 loan. If your regular life insurance is adequate, you don't need credit life insurance.

In the coming months, as sales promotions surface to move out higher volumes of cars, exercise a bit of skepticism. In most cases the manufacturer's rebate is straightforward enough; it may be mailed directly to you from the carmaker. But some rebates involve the participation of the dealership, in which case you must be on guard against attempts to raise the price of the car. And be sure the dealer's part of the rebate is deducted from the price of the car before taxes are calculated and added on.

Promotions featuring reduced financing — such as the recent 8.8 percent deals — have become a favorite way to bring in customers. Such promotions should be ~~foolproof~~ either you get the rate or you don't. The danger is the dealership will engage in "bait and switch" — by backing away from an advertised offer and trying to talk you into a substitute.

People who haven't the desire or the ability to haggle over the price may find that a buying service can prevent them from overspending for a car. Nevertheless, you have to exercise the same precautions with the service that you would with a dealership — that is, make sure all the documentation is correct and that you aren't bamboozled into paying for more than you need.

THE TYPICAL BUYING service arranges delivery of automobiles at prices that are $200 or so above the dealer's cost. There are some drawbacks, though. You must decide exactly what car and options you want before you place the order. Also, you may have to take delivery from a dealer far from your home. Three of the biggest buying services are Nationwide Auto Brokers (17517 W. Ten Mile Rd., Southfield, MI 48075; 800 521-7257), CarPuter (1603 Bushwick Ave., Brooklyn, NY 11207; 718 455-2500) and United Buying Service (215 Lexington Ave., New York, NY 10016; 212 686-7668).

An alternative is to hire a consultant, especially if you intend to purchase a luxury car. Most consultants offer a wide range of services, from a brief consultation all the way to closing out the deal for you and delivering the car to your home. Prices for such services average $145 for a luxury car. Some consultants, such as Automotive Search (5515 Security Lane, Rockville, MD 20852; 301 231-7100) or Automotive Consultants (1807 Springdale Rd., Cherry Hill, NJ 08003; 609 488-9188), generally prefer to serve a local clientele through their own dealer sources.

Better car bargains may be available soon

Associated Press

If you're thinking of buying one of the newly introduced 1986 cars, think about waiting a few months, advises Changing Times magazine.

Thanks to the relaxation in April of the so-called voluntary restraints on shipments to the United States, a flood of Japanese cars should bring bargains for many car buyers.

Dealer prices have already been cut on some late-summer shipments of 1985 cars. The initial interest in '86s may make good deals harder to come by in the fall, but that will change after a few months.

"Come January, we're going to see a lot heavier price competition in the small-car end of the market, and by the middle of next year the battle moves upstream to the larger, middle-market automobiles," says Dave Power, president of the marketing research firm J.D. Power & Associates.

With the influx of 450,000 Japanese automobiles on top of the 1,849,600 already scheduled, dealers will be trying to step up their sales to all-time highs. More sales in the 1986 season will assure that they get a high allotment from the manufacturer in the next model year. Into the fray will also come a bevy of cars from Korea and Yugoslavia and the product of a joint venture between Toyota and Chevrolet called the Nova.

The buyer's bargaining power is boosted further by the requirement that American manufacturers meet the federal fuel standards with more fuel-efficient small cars. John Hammond, director of automotive services for Data Resources Inc., an economic forecasting firm, thinks American manufacturers are going to be very aggressive in selling their own small cars because the cars they bring in from Japan can't be averaged into the fuel-economy calculation.

The overall effect of the increased competition should be lower prices on actual sales, despite official manufacturers' price hikes on the 1986s ranging from 2 percent to 4 percent. The $1,500 to $2,500 premium above sticker price that many buyers of Japanese cars have been willing to pay could disappear by the end of calendar year 1986. Power envisions a time when Japanese imports will routinely sell for less than sticker price.

At first, the best deals should come from the smaller foreign manufacturers attempting to build their sales. (Among Japanese manufacturers, the low-volume ones are getting the biggest percentage hike in their import quotas.) Included will be cars from Mitsubishi, such as the Mirage and Tredia models, and those from Isuzu, such as the I-Mark models.

Upscale buyers can look for more competitive pricing to reach the Toyota Camry, Mazda 626 and Honda Accord in mid-1986, when those companies step up shipments in an attempt to strengthen their foothold in that market.

Reading operating guide may answer electronic questions

Hearst News Service

The first thing you should do before you call a service technician for your color television set or video-cassette recorder is read the operating guide, says an electronic specialist.

That may sound like very elementary advice, but one of every five service calls could be avoided if owners would read their guide, said Richard Wilson, national service manager of Zenith Electronics Corp.

Moreover, Wilson said, operating guides also contain a common-sense checklist for new owners, with suggestions to follow before calling for service. Wilson offered this advice to TV set and VCR owners on avoiding unnecessary service calls:

- Make sure the power cords are plugged in and the antenna hookup is complete. Moving the set to dust or vacuum may pull the plug from the AC outlet or disconnect the antenna.
- If your TV set or VCR does not operate after turning it on in the normal manner, or if one (or both) of them suddenly goes off during operation, turn both the receiver and VCR off and wait a few minutes.
- If the TV sound is OK, but no picture appears, switch to another channel. That station may be the problem and not the set or VCR.
- If the VCR is playing a tape poorly or not at all, check the connection between the VCR and receiver. Make sure the TV set is tuned to the proper channel for your VCR. If the tape still plays poorly, check a local station. If the picture is OK, the problem may be in the tape itself.
- If you have any other electronic devices (such as a cable converter or home computer) hooked up to the TV set, make sure the hookup is properly done.

Dayton favored for new product testing

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Shoes on springs and a new alcoholic drink are the latest products to be test marketed in Dayton, a city which some companies believe is a good place to sample tastes.

That image tickles Bruce Pearson, president of the Dayton Development Council, the economic office of the Dayton Area Chamber of Commerce.

Being a test market doesn't happen as much as we'd like, for it to, quite frankly, Pearson said. When it does, it helps local retailers, advertisers and the public because everybody gets to try new products.

Adolph Coors Co. began test marketing Colorado Chiller, a beverage, in the Dayton-Springfield area in July.

Domino's Pizza tried home delivery of a quiche-like breakfast called Bake-Up in a six-month test ending last spring.

Third World Miami Valley Consortium Inc. is promoting Kangaroo Jumping Shoes in Dayton. Passersby saw the shoes, which operate like little pogo sticks, at a lunchtime demonstration at Courthouse Square, a popular downtown outdoor lunch spot.

Why choose Dayton as a test market?

"We wanted to select a market that was representative of a cross section of population of the United States. It was in one of the areas where we had recently introduced Coors products," said Cinde Dolphin, a corporate communications representative for Coors. The firm also is testing the beverage in restaurants, taverns and liquor stores in San Diego, Orlando, Charlotte, Lubbock and Spokane.

"We have a good 90-minute (driving distance) market around here," said Ayo Ogunduyile, vice president of international operations for the consortium promoting the jumping shoes. "We pressed for these shoes to promote them around here. We believe Dayton has always been the beginning of everything, the Wright Brothers and situations like that."

Generally, fads head from California to New York and then to the Midwest.

"We decided to change that around this time," Ogunduyile said.

The shoes have been available in California since December, and will soon be available in New York. The hightop tennis shoes, obtainable in Europe for more than a year, are attached to four coil springs fastened to a rubber and plastic base. Developed in Taiwan, the shoes are promoted as a way to channel children's energy, in addition to appealing to the adult exercise market.

Becky Meixner, special events coordinator for Courthouse Square, says promotions are held about twice a month for the estimated 3,000 people who pass through the square during lunchtime. Some involve test marketing, and some involve new products such as soda pop.

No time outs

There are no time outs in business.

When an advertising opportunity pops up, you have to act quickly... or somebody else will.

Newspapers are the medium of choice when you have to move fast. You can prepare newspaper advertising quickly. There's rarely any problem with space availability because newspapers are expandable. Finally, timing of message delivery is precise, so you reach your targets when you want to.

Next time there's no time to lose, remember the timely medium.
