Exxon settlement draws opposition

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is nearing an agreement with Exxon Corp. to settle possible criminal charges from the massive Alaskan oil spill, but state officials and environmentalists say the plea bargaining would let the oil company off too easily.

The Justice Department had been expected to announce an agreement with Exxon within days, sources said Thursday.

However, Alaska Attorney General Douglas Baily, speaking Thursday in Juneau, strongly criticized the proposed agreement. He accused the Justice Department of trying to get the state to issue "a hasty endorsement" of an inadequate draft proposal.

"Under the proposed agreement, the federal government would abandon its commitment to Alaska to assist with its civil claims against Exxon," Baily told reporters. He said he hoped the agreement would be revised to make it more acceptable to the state.

"We are being asked to accept a pig in a poke. ... And that pig smells awfully bad," he said.

"From all accounts the Bush administration is giving Exxon a wink and a nod ... a mere slap on the wrist," added Jay Hair, president of the National Wildlife Federation.

NEW YORK (AP) — It's cold, wet and creamy, and sweet on the tongue. It's thicker than top superpremium ice cream brands, and just a little bit harder to scrape with your spoon.

It doesn't taste exactly like Haagen-Dazs or Ben & Jerry's, but what do you expect for a product with half the calories and one-fifteenth the fat?

The company that makes NutraSweet low-cal sweetener said Thursday it had won federal approval for its calorie-cutting fat substitute Simplesse, which it plans to market immediately in frozen dairy desserts.

The Food and Drug Administration affirmed that the substance, which is made from egg whites and milk protein and is free of cholesterol and fat, generally was safe for consumption, according to NutraSweet Co., a subsidiary of Monsanto Co.

Region may get new judgeships

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Texas, which is particularly vulnerable to the onslaught of imported drugs due to its common border with Mexico, may get more federal judges to try the increasing backlog of drug cases if a bill proposed by U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith becomes law.

The need for more judges is the "weakest link in our law-enforcement chain," Smith said recently in announcing his intention to introduce a bill that would create 20 new federal judgeships.

Smith, whose congressional district includes Midland, proposed the bill after U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton of Midland had launched a campaign at home and in Washington, D.C., to bolster the strength of judges in the Western and Southern districts of Texas.

Bunton is presiding judge of the Midland-Odessa Division and the Pecos Division of the federal-court system's Western District of Texas. The Pecos Division, which takes in extension border area, is inundated with drug cases.

Nine of those 20 judgeships possibly would be placed in Texas, which, said U.S. Attorney Ron Ederer of San Antonio, is in urgent need of additional federal judges.

"As far as judges are concerned," Ederer said, "I can back prosecutors up five deep behind every one of the judges trying cases. If we have more judges, we can hit them with more cases. We have to have more judges. There is no choice. It's just a fact of life. We will win this 'War on Drugs,' but we have to have more judges to do it."

Smith said that Bunton's Western District would get three new judges, and the Southern District would receive six.

Sunnier days expected

Staff Report

The departure of a low pressure center will mean a return to sunny skies and warm temperatures today and throughout the weekend, a National Weather Service spokesman said today.

North winds gusting up to 45 miles per hour kicked up dust and reduced visibility in the Permian Basin Thursday as the low pressure cell roared northeastward.

"High winds and some cloudiness were wrapped around on the back side of the low as it was still affecting the area yesterday (Thursday)," said Ron Brown, meteorolgical technician at the Midland International Airport weather service office.

Brown said blowing dust from farmland north of Midland at times reduced visibility to five

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidates Clayton Williams and Kent Hance clashed over making English the state's official language after an English-only group endorsed Hance and slammed Williams.

Roy Ontiveros, executive vice chairman of the American Ethnic Coalition, criticized Williams for campaigning in Spanish. He also said groups like the San Antonio-based "Amigos de Clayton Williams" promote a "foreign mentality" by encouraging people to think of themselves as Mexicans or Hispanics instead of as Texans or Americans.

"We cannot support Clayton Williams because ... he is promoting the downfall of Texas and America by playing into the hands of those who would divide our state and country into squabbling ethnic groups," Ontiveros said in a Thursday news conference.

The group said Hance is the only candidate who supports official English.

"Many of us grassroots Texans with Spanish surnames resent being patronized and pandered to just because we can speak Spanish or have a Spanish surname," Ontiveros said. "We support Kent Hance and admire him for having the courage to support official English."

Mark Sanders, Hance's spokesman, said the candidate is pleased to have the endorsement and backs the concept of English as the official language.

"Kent Hance supports official English primarily because he feels the state has an obligation to make sure that all youngsters grow up speaking English," Sanders said. "If you don't speak English in this country, you're going to have trouble."

But Williams' deputy press secretary Scott Bohnenkamp said Williams "feels that the English-only movement is kind of a racial slur against Hispanics, and that Kent Hance is trying to divide people rather than unite them."

Digging continues at ritual-killing ranch

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Looking for missing loves ones or possibly money or souvenirs, curious people have dug more holes at the ranch where a drug-smuggling cult killed 13 people, authorities said.

U.S. officials say they believe the recent digs were done by grief-stricken Mexicans desperate to find missing loved ones.

"There are lots of people who are missing in Mexico," said Lt. George Gavito of the Cameron County sheriff's department. "They've probably heard about what happened out there and want to go see if their missing relatives are out there."

The body of University of Texas student Mark Kilroy was among the 13 unearthed in a grisly search at the isolated ranch. The victims had been tortured and killed in ritualistic ceremonies.

Gavito, who helped in the initial investigation, said digging for lost relatives makes some people feel better.

"Who would take that away from them? The government's feeling is let them do all the digging they want," he told the Austin American-Statesman.

Brownsville City Commissioner Tony Zavaleta, an anthropology professor at Texas Southmost College, said he was not sure why new digging occurred.

"There were three or four new graves or exhumations out there," said Zavaleta, a folk religion expert consulted by law enforcement officials last year. "You can see those piles of dirt that are a year old have been weathered and eroded and see that they are different from the new ones. It's spooky."

Roughly the size and shape of graves, the new holes were dug within the past several months.

"It's evil," he said. "I won't even go out there anymore. Who knows what came out of those holes."

Trump says splash over split 'good for business'

NEW YORK (AP) — Tycoon Donald Trump, who usually delights in media attention, says he hates the splashy publicity about his breakup with wife Ivana but believes it has a silver lining: It's good for business.

Trump said in an interview Thursday that the screaming tabloid headlines and talk-show jokes about his marital travails actually have benefitted his multibillion-dollar casino, hotel and airline empire.

"The business has never been better," he said, "but because it's a private company most people don't know about it. Unfortunately, for all the wrong reasons, the last two weeks it's been even better yet."

Trump said business has been up at his two hotel-casinos in Atlantic City, N.J., the Plaza Hotel and the Trump Shuttle, which links New York with Washington and Boston, since the breakup.

Still, he said having his name splashed over the media has taken a toll.

miles. Normal visibility in the region is 20 miles, Brown said.

He said a quarter-inch rainfall Tuesday helped keep dust levels down during Thursday's wind storm.

Meanwhile, a high pressure cell centered over Utah will mean spring-like weather for West Texas for the next several days, Brown said.

The weather service is predicting sunny skies today with a high today near 70, up from 61 Thursday. Weekend highs will be in the low 70s, with lows in the 30s. Highs in the 70s also are predicted for Monday and Tuesday.

STATE

Pleasant weather is in store for all of Texas for the weekend with forecasts calling for sunny skies and warmer temperatures.

The pleasant weather is courtesy of a ridge of high pressure that was building southward across Texas today. The high pressure ridge caused a dry air mass to surround the state.

Forecasts called for sunny days and fair skies through Saturday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 30s, ranging from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 40s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Saturday will be in the 50s in the Panhandle and in the 60s and 70s elsewhere.

There were a few clouds from Amarillo to Abilene and San Angelo early today, but the rest of the state had clear skies during the predawn hours.

NATION

Bitter cold began its assault on the eastern half of the nation today, creeping into the upper Great Lakes from Canada. Rain continued, prompting parts of the water-logged South to stack sandbags in preparation for a wet weekend.

An arctic snap was due from Minnesota to Georgia to Maine by Sunday morning with readings as many as 25 degrees below normal.

Tornadoes touched down Thursday along the Gulf Coast of Mississippi and in Alabama, devastating dozens of homes, snapping trees and utility lines and injuring about 30 people.

Wreckage from Thursday's storms littered a 12-county area extending south of Montgomery to the Florida state line and east to the Georgia line.

Carnegie Commission honors heroes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dale Layton wasted no time when he spotted a train bearing down on a man in a wheelchair stuck on railroad tracks.

"I knew if I was going to get there I was going to have to get with it," said Layton, one of 19 Americans and Canadians recognized Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for risking their lives to save others.

Layton, a retired funeral director from Canby, Ore., heard the train's whistle blaring non-stop, and saw the train careening toward Lawrence Supnet, 28, of Portland, stuck in the tracks at a crossing on Nov. 17, 1988.

"I turned and ran just as fast as I could run," Layton said in a telephone interview.

"I just gave the chair one yank and tilted it back. I bet it wasn't five heartbeats from the time I grabbed it and the time the train was there."

Layton and the winners received a medal and $2,500. The commission has honored 7,424 people since its founding in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie.

Five of those honored Thursday died in their rescue attempts.

One recipient, James Stack III — who had recently left prison after serving two years on a rape conviction — was honored for coming to the rescue of a stabbing victim during an attack March 14, 1989, on a bus in Bloomington, Ill.

The others recognized were:

■ Garry W. Proffit, 34, of Hollywood, Md., drowned trying to pull a man from a water storage tank in Lusby, Md., on Sept. 15, 1988.

■ Michael G. Martinez, 40, of Hialeah, Fla., died of a heart attack after saving an unidentified woman from drowning in the Atlantic Ocean at Miami Beach, Fla., May 29, 1989.

■ John K. Aiena, 44, of Beaumont, Texas, died trying to save a man from drowning in a Port Arthur, Texas, marina May 26, 1989.

■ Betty B. Lamb, 69, of Sacramento, Calif., died trying to save her 3-year-old grandson from drowning in the Pacific Ocean July 12, 1989, in Jenner, Calif. The child also died.

■ Keith A. Jensen, 33, of New Denmark, New Brunswick, died trying to save his parents from their burning home Jan. 31, 1988, in New Brunswick.

■ James K. Webb of Fishkill, N.Y., and Richard Gustin of Lagrangeville, N.Y., both 25, helped rescue three men from a burning car in Buchanan, N.Y., on April 11, 1989.

■ Anthony J. Vaca, 23, of Antioch, Calif., pulled three men from two vehicles that caught fire after colliding in Antioch on March 23, 1989.

■ Donald L. Dobson, 31, of Reading, Pa., dragged a woman from a burning apartment in Spring City, Pa., on May 26, 1988.

■ Denise Boczek, 31, of Camarillo, Calif., helped save a 7-year-old boy from drowning in the Pacific Ocean at Oxnard, Calif., on June 22, 1989.

■ David E. Kamerath, 47, of Salt Lake City, Utah, rescued a 6-year-old girl from the second floor of her burning home April 21, 1989.

■ John M. Mattson, 24, of Pickering, Ontario, struggled with a man who stabbed a store owner during a robbery on Aug. 15, 1989.

■ Jeffrey A. Jones, 33, of Cathedral City, Calif., pulled an injured man out of a pickup truck March 4, 1989, as a train approached in Coachella, Calif.

■ Marc Branch, 27, of Paquetville, New Brunswick, rescued a 16-year-old girl from an overturned burning car Oct. 14, 1987.

■ Donald L. Reed, 51, of Moscow, Idaho, saved two women from drowning after their boat sank in the frigid Snake River April 15, 1989, in Pullman, Wash.

■ Karen A. Caylor, 29, of Pittsburgh pulled a woman from a car that was sinking in a canal May 16, 1989, in Naples, Fla.

■ Christopher M. Rumbaugh, 27, of Orlando, Fla., pulled a woman out of a burning car June 8, 1989, in Tavares, Fla.

JUDGES: New posts last created in 1984

(From 1A)

"This is a nationwide crisis," Smith said of the influx of drugs, "but in Texas, we are at the crisis stage."

Congress has not created any new judgeships since 1984, Smith said.

"Texas in particular has suffered from this lack of action," the Texas Congressman said. "An explosion in drug-related cases has put Western and Southern District judges under the greatest workload of all."

The caseload of Western District judges is more than 300 percent above the national average.

Because of its common border — the Rio Grande — with Mexico, Texas is one of the nation's five "high-intensity drug-trafficking areas" identified by President Bush in his "War on Drugs" campaign, Ederer said Thursday.

Those five "high-intensity" areas are New York, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles, and the Southern Border — from Brownsville to San Diego.

"There's approximately 700 miles of it (the border) in the Western District of Texas — from El Paso to Eagle Pass," said Ederer.

Ederer became the chief federal prosecutor in the Western District of Texas on Nov. 6 and already has taken on six additional prosecutors to handle drug cases.

Ederer placed two new prosecutors, David Rosado and Bill Torrey, in the Midland-Odessa Division to bring the prosecutorial force based in Midland to three. Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery of Midland is assigned full-time to the drug-laden Pecos Division.

The other four new assistants were assigned to El Paso, Waco and Austin.

"And we are going to get a lot more," Ederer said Thursday in a telephone interview. Ederer's staff of lawyers handling criminal and civil cases includes 58 full-time attorneys and 29 special assistants.

The 92,000-square-mile Western District takes in 62 counties and ranges from the Waco-Austin-San Antonio area westwardly to El Paso. It is the third largest judicial district in the United States. Only the districts of Alaska and Montana cover more territory, Ederer said.

Cases are heightening, as federal agencies, including the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the Border Patrol and U.S. Customs, are bolstering their investigative and law-enforcement forces in tracking down more drug carriers, dealers and financiers.

"As a result of that, we are going to have many, many more (significant) cases in the Western District of Texas," Ederer said.

"The agents are trying to go after the money men" and not just the physical traffickers.

"The problem is, of course, there are only so many agents," Ederer said. "They are continually working to try to get to the big wheels."

In his campaign for more judges, Bunton said he is "certainly going to work with him (Smith) in any way that I can to see that his bill is passed in the House and considered by the Senate."

In the 10 years Bunton has been on the federal bench, the workload of the Western District judges "has more than doubled," while the number of judgeships in the district has increased to seven from five.

"The caseload on the civil docket has doubled in 10 years and has almost tripled on the criminal side," Bunton said Thursday.

Even so, Bunton said he and his fellow judges are handling as many criminal cases as possible even though that takes "longer hours and more time."

And if the number of drug cases continues to escalate, the federal judges will only have time to try criminal cases. And the civil caseload will continue to build up a backlog.

"All we will have time for is just trying dope cases and sentencing dopers," Bunton said.

The judges in the Western and Southern districts all support Bunton's stance but "some of them more so than others," he said.

Currently, of the 21 federal judges in the Southern and Western districts, five of the judges "for all practical purposes" do "nothing but criminal cases," Bunton said. Of the five, one is in the Western District, and four are in the Southern District.

A Midland-based DEA special agent, who asked not to be identified, noted that "there has been such an increase in criminal narcotic cases as well as other federal violations."

The DEA agent noted that Bunton is "doing the same job he was 10 years ago, but since that time, there has been a tremendous increase in the (criminal) caseload, which has warranted the establishment of three (assistant) U.S. Attorneys here when previously (prior to 1985) we didn't have one" assigned to Midland.

New Fat Substitute

The fat substitute Simplesse is made by cooking and blending egg white and milk protein. The round shape and uniform size of the substitute's tiny particles make a creamy, rich fluid with the texture of fat.

intended to compete with butterfat-rich superpremium ice creams, should be in supermarkets by summer and in Europe by the year's end, said David L. Morley, Simplesse Co. general manager.

FDA spokesman Jeff Nesbit in Washington said NutraSweet would have to seek separate federal approval for other Simplesse products, which could include mayonnaise, salad dressing, sour cream or frozen yogurt.

Simplesse is the first all-natural, low-calorie fat substitute to receive FDA approval. Billed as having the same rich texture and taste as fat, the product is aimed at consumers who want to cut the amount of fat and cholesterol in their diet while satisfying their taste buds.

Its production comes during an age of dieting and health-consciousness that has seen such products as oat bran and spring water gain big markets.

Monsanto shares jumped higher following news of the FDA's approval. The stock finished up $4.37½ at $112.25 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

"Potentially it could help somebody lower their fat intake. But if you're not careful it might have undesirable effects on the diet," said Lisa Lefferts, staff scientist with the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based watchdog organization.

ENGLISH: Language again a Texas campaign issue

(From 1A)

Bohnenkamp said Williams will continue to answer questions asked him in Spanish in the same language, but that he has never campaigned in Spanish.

"Clayton Williams grew up in West Texas where many of his friends spoke Spanish, and to communicate, both sides had to learn to be bilingual," he said. "Clayton is very proud of his bilingual history."

Ethnic coalition founder Lou Zaeske contends that bilingualism in government and education wastes money and could spawn ethnic violence like that occurring in the Soviet Union.

"The Armenians and the Azerbaijanis — what is dividing those people? Their ethnicity," Zaeske said.

"They're thinking of themselves as Armenians and Azerbaijanis and not as members of the Soviet Union," he said. "We have to encourage our citizens to think of themselves as Americans, whatever their ethnic heritage might be."

In addition to Hance, the group endorsed Republican Rob Mosbacher for lieutenant governor, several state representatives running for re-election who the group says support official English, and Zaeske, who is running for state senator.

Mosbacher said he supports putting the English-only issue to the vote in a statewide referendum.

"My official view on that is that personally I oppose it (official English), but I'm willing to let people vote on things," he said.

knowledged that plea bargaining talks were underway with Exxon for some time, but officials declined Thursday to provide details of the draft settlement or characterize the progress in the discussions. Exxon officials could not be reached for comment Thursday night.

Other sources said, however, that the draft agreement calls for Exxon to pay up to $500 million into a natural resources restoration fund over the next seven years and possibly a significantly smaller amount in direct criminal penalties to the U.S. Treasury.

The agreement, if made final, would allow Exxon, whose tanker spilled more than 11 million gallons of oil into Alaska's pristine Prince William Sound in March 1989, to avoid an embarrassing criminal trial and possible criminal prosecution of individual corporate officials.

The criminal laws used by federal prosecutors in oil spill cases allow fines of up to double the cost of the cleanup. Exxon has said it has spent more than $2 billion to clean up the oil spill.

Exxon attorneys, in the negotiations with the Justice Department, have tried to limit the amount of money to be paid to the U.S. Treasury as criminal penalties, preferring to pay most of the money into the restoration fund, sources said.

But one government source suggested that Exxon might have to pay only about $150 million initially, and subsequent annual payments over seven years would be open to Exxon challenges.

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prince Charles makes it plain as the nose on his royal face that he isn't very fond of modern British architecture. What then, an American asked, does he think of Washington's gleaming new skyline of glass and steel?

The 41-year-old heir to the British throne rocked on his heels at the embassy reception Thursday, paused a long moment and smiled mischievously. "I prefer Paris," he said.

His reply foreshadowed the indictment of modern urban design that he delivered a few hours later at a black-tie awards gala of the American Institute of Architects at the National Building Museum, where roast beef was served by candlelight at $250 a plate.

If the 1,200 architects and their guests wanted their dessert laced with princely scorn, Charles didn't disappoint them.

"Much of the commercial building of today bears as much relation to architecture as advertising slogans bear to literature," he said, charging that their designers "ransack history as if it were a wardrobe full of old clothes."

Charles challenged American architects to reverse the trend toward cities that are "the epitome of the throwaway society" — torn down and rebuilt by successive generations — and design buildings of lasting beauty that are fit for human beings.

"It sometimes seems to me that the richer we get, the uglier we tend to make our surroundings," he said. "What is worse, not only do we seem to have mislaid the ability to create beauty, but we also set out to destroy what beauty there is left in the world."

The prince said his invitation to speak was mystifying, considering his criticism of the "Frankenstein monsters" created by some British architects. "Is there an epidemic of masochism sweeping the ranks of the AIA?" he asked. The audience roared.

President Bush, left, shares a laugh with Prince Charles of Britain as the prince departs the White House Thursday. The president and the prince met for lunch. Later, Charles was guest of honor at a $250-plate, American Institute of Architects' dinner.

Charles' speech was the highlight of a one-day Washington visit that also included lunch with President Bush and his top advisers at the White House, a visit to AIA headquarters and a British Embassy reception.

Embassy sources said the prince's luncheon discussion with Bush dealt with environmental concerns and Charles' plan to visit Hungary in early May. One purpose of that trip, they said, will be to explore opportunities for private investments aimed to building a free-market economy in that country.

Outside the banquet hall, about two dozen protesters stood behind police lines silently holding placards demanding withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland.

'Ole Cape Cod wars with Uncle Sam over use of beach as town dump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stop dumping your trash on our national seashore, the federal government is telling the Cape Cod, Mass., community of Provincetown.

Stop playing Big Brother with our land, is the town's response.

What began as a squabble over the future of the Provincetown landfill has escalated to a Cabinet- and congressional-level fight.

On the surface is a dispute over the future of a town dump located on federal property. Underneath, according to some participants, is the latest skirmish in a dispute between a small community and the federal government over one of the nation's most popular seacoast attractions — the Cape Cod National Seashore.

"The seashore has an 'I don't care' attitude," Sandra Turner, Provincetown's public works director, said Thursday. "This is Big Brother — the federal government — and it's picking on this tiny community."

The federal government no longer wants Provincetown to use National Seashore land for its town landfill. Seashore officials have given the community of 3,200 year-round residents on the tip of Cape Cod until October to find another place to dump their trash.

Seashore officials say the landfill threatens the pristine sand dunes and scrub pine forests that form the spectacular landscape on the tip of Cape Cod.

The dump "has adverse impacts on groundwater, wetlands and ponds," said Andrew Ringgold, superintendent of the Cape Cod National Seashore. "There's windblown litter all through adjacent areas ... It's just totally incompatible with the mission of the National Park Service."

The town argues it may use the landfill under an agreement reached in 1961 when the National Park Service established the National Seashore — a move that swallowed up 80 percent of Provincetown's land area.

Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., met with Constance Harriman, an official in the Department of Interior, regarding the landfill dispute.

"Should this decision stand," Studds said, "it would worsen the already strained relationship between the town and the federal agency."

Ringgold said his first responsibility is to the environmental integrity of the seashore. But he conceded that good public relations with the six communities that encompass the seashore are crucial.

"One of my biggest responsibilities is to develop and maintain cooperative working relationships with officials of these communities," Ringgold said.

Reagan's testimony may have damaged Poindexter's defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Reagan's videotaped testimony gives little support to the defense in John M. Poindexter's upcoming Iran-Contra trial and could undermine it in several important ways, observers say.

Reagan steadfastly maintained that Poindexter and other White House aides were not breaking the law when they advised the Nicaraguan Contras during a congressional ban on U.S. aid to the rebels.

The former president said he was in "total agreement" with a letter Poindexter sent to Congress in July 1986 denying that the National Security Council staff was giving the rebels covert military assistance.

"If I had written it myself, I might have used a little profanity," Reagan said of the letter, which prosecutors charge was a false statement to lawmakers by Poindexter.

Former Iran-Contra prosecutor Michael Bromwich said it is the "one line that dramatically helps the defense" during eight hours of testimony.

"The president sees this letter and says it looks fine to him," Bromwich said. "I think it has a psychological effect on the jury."

But Reagan's confusion and lack of knowledge about the participation of Poindexter and White House aide Oliver L. North in the Iran-Contra affair is damaging, said Bromwich, a member of the team of lawyers that successfully prosecuted North last year.

"Reagan seems to have very little idea of what was going on so he certainly didn't authorize or approve of what North or Poindexter was doing based on full knowledge of the facts," said Bromwich, now in private law practice in Washington.

Also damaging are Reagan's statements that he didn't authorize any of the actions Poindexter took that prosecutors allege violated the law, Bromwich said.

"On the ultimate question 'Did you authorize? Did you approve?' the answer is 'No, No, No,'" Bromwich said.

The transcript of Reagan's eight-hour pre-trial deposition, given last week behind closed doors in Los Angeles, was released Thursday by U.S. District Judge Harold Greene.

The public was allowed to view the videotapes of Reagan's testimony in the courtroom where Poindexter is scheduled to go to trial March 5 on charges of obstructing congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair.

Reagan testified he "never had any inkling" that North was providing strategic advice to the Contras.

The former president steadfastly maintained that "no one has proven to me" that profits from the U.S.-Iran arms sales were diverted to buy arms for the rebels.

Nor did he know that North had sought help from arms dealers Albert Hakim and Richard V. Secord, a retired Air Force major general, in arming the Contras. Both have pleaded guilty to charges arising from their roles in the Iran-Contra affair.

Only when prosecutor Dan Webb produced a copy of the report by the Tower Commission, which Reagan appointed to investigate the Iran-Contra affair, did the former president acknowledge that the diversion must have occurred.

"This is the first time that I have ever seen a reference that actually specified there was a diversion," Reagan told Webb.

Asked if he expected Poindexter to report the diversion to the president, Reagan said: "Yes, unless maybe he thought he was protecting me."

In fact, Poindexter told Congress in 1987 that he didn't tell Reagan about the diversion.

Reagan admitted to Webb that he never authorized his former national security adviser to obstruct congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair by destroying documents or making false statements.

This testimony "takes away one of the defenses that Admiral Poindexter was asserting," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., who was a recipient of one of Poindexter's letters when he chaired the House Intelligence Committee.

"That defense was that he was specifically authorized to do what he did," Hamilton said.

Paul Rothstein, a Georgetown University law professor, said Webb may have "made a lot of mileage" by getting Reagan to say he didn't authorize the specific acts by Poindexter that prosecutors say violated the law.

The defense probably will focus on the claim that Reagan's fervent support for the Contras "created a certain environment or climate in the White House that gave the signal or the impression to Admiral Poindexter that he could do what he did," Hamilton said.

Reagan's testimony may give some support here because the former president was so firm in his criticism of Congress for tying his hands when he was trying to help the Contras, Bromwich said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Skipper somber, trooper testifies

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A state trooper who boarded the grounded Exxon Valdez expecting to stop a drunken brawl found instead a dark, quiet ship where "everyone was gazing out the windows."

The trooper, Michael J. Fox, said Thursday he was dispatched by the U.S. Coast Guard in the early morning hours of March 24 to deal with the allegedly drunken skipper, Joseph Hazelwood.

"When I got there I was expecting a brawl," Fox testified, "But it was kind of quiet and dark and everyone was gazing out the windows."

He said Hazelwood, 43, was napping when he arrived about four hours after the tanker hit a reef.

As the prosecution neared the end of its case, there was renewed focus on the still unresolved question of whether the skipper was drunk when his ship rammed Bligh Reef, causing the nation's worst oil spill.

Hazelwood, of Huntington, N.Y., is charged with second-degree criminal mischief, a felony; and three misdemeanors: reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil.

The Exxon Valdez leaked nearly 11 million gallons of Alaska crude oil, blackening hundreds of miles of rocky coastline and killing countless birds, fish and wildlife.

Infant airfare possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air travel for families with young children could become more costly under the airline industry's proposed infant safety seat requirement.

In an unusual step, the Air Transport Association asked the Federal Aviation Administration to set a tougher requirement than the agency itself is considering.

The FAA on Thursday proposed regulations to require airlines to allow passengers to use safety seats if they want to and said it would consider making the seats mandatory after receiving public comment on the issue.

The ATA, which represents major air carriers, wants the seats required for all passengers under 2 years old.

The proposal, if adopted by the FAA, could require thousands of parents to buy tickets for children who now fly free. Airlines, however, still would have the option of offering free rides or reduced fares.

Shuttle delayed again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA prepared again today for the launch of space shuttle Atlantis on a military mission that has been postponed twice because of an ailing astronaut and poor weather.

NASA officials said Thursday that Atlantis commander John O. Creighton, whose sore throat and head congestion forced the postponements, is feeling better. He will be reevaluated by doctors today to see if he is fit for flight.

Atlantis originally had been scheduled for launch early Thursday. NASA rescheduled for early today, but just before noon Thursday again scrubbed the launch until no earlier than Saturday.

'Silly string' is recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is recalling more than a million cans of spray string confetti because the strings that are sprayed as a party ornament are flammable.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said Thursday it recalled the spray string "because of several terrifying accidents that occurred when this type of product was sprayed near lit candles on birthday cakes and burst into flames," said Jacqueline Jones-Smith, who heads the panel.

"I've been in the presence of some great artists and I've been in the presence of some great statesmen, but I've never before been in the presence of a great artist-statesman," Newman said Thursday at a reception for Havel.

The Czechoslovak Parliament elected Havel president a few weeks after a peaceful revolution in December that led to the ouster of a hard-line Communist government. That regime had jailed Havel for five years for his satirical plays and other activism.

On Thursday, Havel received the Spirit of Freedom award from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Havel's caretaker government is preparing for parliamentary elections in June. He was to return home today.

His first taste of the Big Apple in a generation began late Wednesday in lower Manhattan's East Village. His boyhood schoolmate, filmmaker Milos Forman, took him on walks to places Havel visited in 1968.

They dropped in on CBGBs, one of the first punk rock clubs, and rock hangout The Bitter End.

"People were recognizing him in the streets," Forman said. "Their faces were lighting up."

At a concert in Havel's honor Thursday, playwright Arthur Miller said, "I welcome him as the world's first avant-garde president."

Forman, the filmmaker, summed up their sentiments by saying: "If a playwright makes us laugh or cry, ... he's an artist. But if a playwright succeeds to orchestrate the overthrow of a communist dictatorship without one bullet fired, it's a miracle."

Japan needs more than status quo

Japan, which has been so adept at tailoring American customs to suit its economic and political needs, still has much to learn about the virtues of a strong two-party system. That fact was underlined yet again when Japanese voters recently gave the scandal-tainted Liberal Democratic Party another mandate to govern.

Although the LDP suffered a net loss of 20 seats in the lower chamber of parliament, the party will continue to control the legislative agenda and assure Toshiki Kaifu's continuation as prime minister. An angry electorate concluded, in short, that it had little choice but to opt for the prosperous, peaceful status quo.

Since 1955, the conservative LDP has held sway in Japanese politics because it is preferable to the socialist alternative. Except for last July's electoral setback, when the party lost control of the upper house of Parliament, the LDP has been unbeatable.

Many political analysts predicted this would be the year when the party lost its grip on an electorate enraged by a string of scandals involving bribery and sexual indiscretions among top officials. The Socialist Party campaigned hard against the scandals and attacked an unpopular 3 percent sales tax which the LDP forced through parliament. It was widely believed that female voters upset by the regressive tax would rally behind Socialist standard bearer Takako Doi. But Ms. Doi made two crucial mistakes. She failed to consolidate the gains made in the July elections, and her party offered fewer female candidates this time.

All the same, the LDP should view the vote as a wake-up call from voters grown increasingly restive with one-party rule.

There is deep resentment over the inflationary sales tax. The business community is nervous about steadily increasing interest rates. Farmers, who oppose the party's attempts to open Japanese markets to agricultural imports, have cooled on LDP candidates during the last two elections. Meanwhile, the LDP must forge an alliance with opposition parties in order to overcome an obstructionist upper house that is required to approve all legislation except the budget and international treaties.

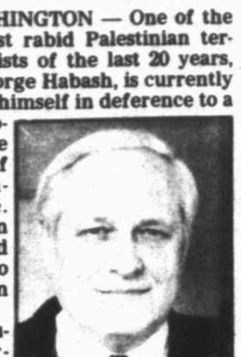
Adding to this volatile mix is the uncertain fate of Prime Minister Kaifu, who has promised political reforms. Snatched from relative obscurity last summer to act as an honest caretaker, he is likely to be replaced this fall by a member of the old guard when the party picks new leaders. If his successor is seen as a tool of the big money interests, which spent an estimated $200 million on LDP candidates, the party's electoral base could be eroded still further.

The LDP's virtual monopoly on power can no longer be taken for granted. That is not necessarily bad if it leads to the emergence of a strong two-party democracy for the first time in postwar Japan.

JACK ANDERSON

Terrorist waiting to renew violence

WASHINGTON — One of the most rabid Palestinian terrorists of the last 20 years, George Habash, is currently restraining himself in deference to a political solution to the question of a Palestinian state. But when we tracked him down to an office in Damascus for an exclusive interview, Habash warned us that his self-imposed truce won't last forever.



Jack Anderson

His followers, members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, are secretly arming themselves on the West Bank. They are waiting for Habash's order to escalate the Palestinian uprising, the intifada, from rock throwing to grenade tossing.

Our own estimate, and that of U.S. intelligence sources and sources inside the PFLP, is that Habash will give his fellow Palestinian, Yasir Arafat, six months to win concessions from Israel. Then Habash will renew the violence.

The historical record shows Habash is not prissy about bloodshed. He formed the PFLP in 1967 after the loss of the West Bank to Israel. Then he mounted a series of spectacular terrorist operations: hijacking three airliners and blowing them up in front of TV cameras (1969); a machine gun attack by hired Japanese Red Army suicide terrorists in the Lod Airport in Tel Aviv killing 27 civilians (1972); hijacking a Japanese airliner to Libya and blowing it up (1973); throwing hand grenades into a crowded Tel Aviv theater, killing three (1974); hijacking an Air France airliner to Entebbe, Uganda, where four civilians were killed during a successful rescue by Israeli soldiers (1976); and hijacking a Lufthansa airliner to Somalia only to have West German commandos storm the plane, rescue the passengers and kill three terrorists (1977).

Since 1984, his group has hijacked or bombed three Israeli buses and stabbed an Israeli student to death on a Jerusalem street.

Age has taken a toll on Habash. His speech, in English, was halting when we met him. One side of his body is paralyzed, and he needs help to walk. He blames a surgeon who botched his brain surgery in Beirut in 1980.

Highly classified Central Intelligence Agency reports reveal that Habash has been near death several times from a heart attack and unidentified illnesses.

The CIA keeps close tabs on Habash's health. He is easily the most important Palestinian leader after Arafat, and he could change the course of the low-key intifada by a simple order to escalate the violence.

Habash has not held back lately because of discretion alone. He was stung by the two defeats — the Israeli paratroopers at Entebbe and the West German commandos in Somalia. He now concentrates on operations inside Israel or from neighboring countries, instead of global terrorism.

It suits Habash's purposes now to pose as a supporter of Arafat. "We are part of the PLO," he told us. "That is why our goal is the goal of the PLO — self-determination for Palestinians, independence, having the right to establish our own state like any other people."

Habash told us he is still a committed Marxist. "I hope it will be a socialist country," he says of the Palestinian state. "I hope to see a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital. And I hope to see a democratic parliament, a Palestinian parliament, holding its session in Jerusalem before I die."

BUDGET GRIDLOCK — The next time you find yourself sitting in a traffic jam, here's something to occupy your mind. Transportation Department analysts say that within the next 15 years, delays on the freeway will increase by 436 percent nationwide. One solution is to expand existing roadways, but that's too expensive. The states and the federal government are running up deficits. The nation's infrastructure needs more than $300 billion in repairs — approximately the cost of the savings and loan bailout. You can bet that the savings and loans will be rescued, but the motorists will not.

CHARLEY REESE

Lawmakers not knowledgeable about defense

The most imminent threat to the Republic is neither the Soviet Union's nuclear might nor the Chinese army. It is Congress

If brains were 90 percent of our body weight, all but a few of the senators and representatives would have to wear anchors, lest they float away. If integrity were oxygen, the halls of Congress would be littered with stiffs with blue faces.

Charley Reese

Let me give you a few more examples. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney recently presented the Fiscal Year '91 budget. This budget had already been agreed to by Congress last year, since they are now operating on a two-year cycle. Because of changes in Eastern Europe, however, the Defense Department has cut about $20 billion out of the budget.

That sounds sensible and simple, but not if you are trying to explain it to senators. Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., who looks and sounds like one of the villains in those movies about the Tennessee sheriff, Buford Pusser, listened to the presentation and then asked a dumb question.

Why, he wanted to know, can't we just put off all of these strategic programs until we know what's going to happen? Because: (1) you can't just shut down production lines and research programs and then start up again instantly; (2) because re-evaluation studies of them are not complete; and (3) if what happens requires them, it would be too late.

Then came the prairie populist, Charles Grassley, R-Iowa. The closest Grassley comes to Abraham Lincoln is that he surely resembles some of the backwoods hayseeds Lincoln represented when he was practicing law. Grassley's questions were not even about the subject being discussed, but rather about a management reorganization plan Cheney had introduced several months ago. Even so, his questions didn't make any sense.

The booby prize, however, goes to Sen. Donald W. Riegle, Jr., of Michigan. Ex-professor and now more famous as the ringleader of the Keating Five, Riegle launches into a tirade about America's economic mess, the fact that it is a debtor nation and has a trade deficit. What don't you bring all the soldiers home from NATO, except for a tripwire token number, and station them here in the U.S., he asks.

This is outrageous for several reasons.

One, Senator Riegle and his colleagues in the House and the Senate, not the Defense Department or the Cold War, are responsible for the deficit, the debtor nation status, and the trade deficit. Defense at its height — and it's been declining for the past four years — was only 30 cents on the federal dollar. It is non-defense spending that has created the deficit. Furthermore, Cheney had just offered a $20 billion cut and explained that Defense was planning a build-down that in five years would put defense spending at its pre-Pearl Harbor level.

Two, to bring the soldiers home from Europe and station them in the U.S. would require building new bases and, in short, increase, not decrease, the defense budget.

Three, as apparently Riegle is unaware, even though he had just listened to a presentation, there are underway negotiations to reduce conventional forces in Europe. If the U.S. unilaterally reduces its forces to zero, the arms talks can end, for there will be nothing left to negotiate. The Soviets have not indicated at all that they intend to disarm unilaterally, and if we are gone, they won't even reduce their forces.

Four, U.S. troops in Europe are there as part of a solemn treaty commitment and any reduction should properly be made only in consultation with our NATO allies.

Five, from a military standpoint, there is no way that many divisions could be airlifted into battle in the event of an attack against Western Europe in time to do anything but get slaughtered.

In other words, Senator Riegle was just posturing and blustering for the TV cameras and saying exactly what we try to avoid stepping in when we visit cow pastures.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Most Georgia Peaches born to go shopping

The world is still reeling from the news that billionaire Donald Trump and his aging wife (she's 41, for Godsakes), Ivana, are nearing a split. Trouble, in other words, in Plazadise.

Lewis Grizzard

On top of that news has come another spicy tidbit inquiring minds also have been drooling over.

There is apparently another woman, and she is of all things, from Cohutta, Ga., (between Stinkrock and Roosterville), 26-year-old model and part time actress, Maria Maples.

If the Trumps do get a divorce, Ivana is expected to walk with a total nearing the French war debt, or what a Colombian drug dealer can expect to bring home per month.

So can we expect in the future the possibility of Donald Trump taking up with Maria Maples full time? If he does, he will have latched onto one of the world's most intriguing characters, the Georgia Peach, bless her heart, and can I have a new Porsche, Daddy, the other one's dirty?

If Mr. T. thinks Ivana could go through a checkbook like grease through a goose, wait until he must deal with his cute little peachette, the former beauty queen, who, if she's like other GPs I have known, can go out in the morning with a credit card and come home at night with the writing worn slap off.

("Slap" is Georgia Peach for "completely.")

I married two Georgia Peaches myself. My third wife was from South Carolina. She was a lot more frugal than the other two. As she often said, "I never buy anything we don't really need."

"Do we really need this diamond-studded toilet seat?" I asked her the time she came home with a diamond toilet seat.

"It was on sale," she explained. "I saved you three hundred dollars."

I asked if I could have the three hundred I saved so I could buy a new set of tires for our car.

"There you go being careless with our money again," she said. "The tires are just as round as the day you bought them three years ago."

My two Georgia Peach ex-wives could shop with anybody. I took one to Greece. She tried to buy the Acropolis.

"Wouldn't it be cute in the back yard," she said.

I took another to Paris. I will never forget the concierge at our hotel saying to my wife as she walked into the lobby after a shopping trip, "Mademoiselle Grizzard would you like for me to store your packages? There's a vacant warehouse two blocks away."

Still, I must admit there is something very special about Georgia Peaches — like the good ones never perspire, they shave their legs everyday, and the sweetness they inherit from their mothers restrains the lion, e.g., D.T.

And if Donald Trump does wind up with Miss Maples, there's a few other things he should know about the little darlings:

The mating call of the Georgia Peach: "Lordy, I'm sooooo drunk."

The three men that the Georgia Peach admires most: 1. Daddy. 2. Daddy. 3. Daddy.

What Georgia Peaches all have in common: They're always cold and they have bladders the size of a white acre pea.

What two things you can always count on the Georgia Peach to know: What day the Dawgs play Clemson and the location of the nearest Neiman-Marcus.

Why God made Georgia Peaches in the first place: To make up for the mistake he made on Joan Rivers.

More on this story as it becomes available, y'all.

MARIANNE MEANS

'Megatrends 2000' not useful guide to future

WASHINGTON — It's just as easy to pick out rosy megatrends that foretell a prosperous, peaceful decade ahead as it is to find gloomy ones that seem to signal economic decline and dangerous new world tensions.

So John Naisbitt and Patricia Aburdene have chosen to see the glass as half full rather than half empty — sometimes even full up — in their second effort to peer into the future and tell us where we're going.

Marianne Means

Their first book eight years ago, "Megatrends," described the shift from an industrial to an information society. It was an enormous best-seller that vaulted the pair to fame as trend forecasters.

Now they have produced a sequel, "Megatrends 2000," in which they predict a global economic boom that will speed up the international integration of commerce while also spawning more cultural nationalism and a new respect for individualism.

If that sounds like having it all ways, that's what this forecast is all about. It envisions the maximum use of mind-boggling new technology to bring us together while insisting upon retaining our own identities. Let us hope.

Not that the authors are unaware of dark forces that could undermine this cheerful scenario. They take note of the nation's deficits and the fact that 13.5 percent of our population lives in poverty. But they are no more worried by those problems than by the likelihood that the world will end at the millennium, as some religious fundamentalists would have it. They are good at taking the obvious and putting an optimistic spin on it.

"By every measure," the authors say, "the United States as a whole is better off financially than it was 20 years ago...No country in the world is better positioned (to compete globally.)."

They describe a world population growing ever more homogeneous in its lifestyle. Already 3 million people fly every day from one place on the planet to another, fiber-optic cables across the Atlantic carry 40,000 telephone calls simultaneously and "Wheel of Fortune" is the most popular television game show in France.

But as we globalize, we're going to fight to keep our individuality. This is possible because computers, cellular phones, videocassettes and fax machines empower people to learn more, express themselves more, live anywhere and operate independently. Governments can no longer control information; there is too much of it.

The authors add that we will cling tenaciously to our deeper values — religion, native language, literature, local customs and tradition. Their evidence for this, as for a lot of claims in this book, is slim. On the one hand, for instance, they find some countries trying to limit the use of English; on the other hand, they foresee English becoming the universal language.

They stick their necks out only when it comes to the way we amuse ourselves. They claim that the arts will replace sports as society's primary leisure activity, although this revolution in taste would seem to require a lobotomy on half of the male population.

They contend that wherever the affluent information economy has spread, the need to re-examine the meaning of life through the arts has followed. "The 1990s will bring forth a modern renaissance in the visual arts, poetry, dance, theater and music throughout the developed world," they say.

Other trends they note are less than startling. They predict that privatization of government social functions, a trend popularized by President Reagan and British Prime Minister Thatcher, will continue. They see the export-driven economies of the Pacific Rim emerging "like a dynamic young America but on a much grander scale."

They see the role of women in the marketplace continuing to expand. By sheer numbers women already dominate the information industry, in which mental tasks have replaced mechanical ones.

They only briefly touch on the controversial area of experimental biotechnology, guessing that the importance of potential breakthroughs for medicine, agriculture and human well-being will outweigh the ethical questions. They believe deciphering of the genetic code — with its instructions for building, running and reproducing bodies — may well prove to be the greatest scientific achievement in this century. "Although biotechnology is technical and sometimes frightening, we can't keep ignoring it," they say.

It is the stated purpose of "Megatrends 2000" to sort through confusing social patterns to identify the shape of the world as the century closes. But it is not very useful as a guide to the future. Mostly it is testimony to the power of positive thinking.

'Flats' reopening pushed back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rocky Flats weapons plant in Colorado, closed indefinitely late last year for safety and management improvements, is unlikely to resume full production until at least July, a senior Energy Department official says.

The plant, situated about 16 miles northwest of Denver, is the sole supplier of plutonium triggers for U.S. nuclear warheads, which are vital to maintaining the nuclear weapons stockpile.

Neither the Energy Department nor the Pentagon has said how long Rocky Flats could remain out of service before the arms stockpile would be jeopardized.

The plant also was closed for a few months in 1988 after a worker was contaminated by radioactivity.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins had said shortly after the latest shutdown that he hoped Rocky Flats would resume production by February, but the contractor that runs the facility says it needs more time to install new safety procedures and retrain workers.

Adm. J.M. Barr, the deputy assistant energy secretary for military application, said this week that one of the key plutonium processing facilities could be ready to resume operation by the end of June.

Barr told the Advisory Committee on Nuclear Facility Safety, which is monitoring progress toward resuming operations, that he would have a more specific target date "very early in April."

Barr stressed that the final decision to resume production rested with Watkins, who in recent weeks has pledged to subject the plant overhaul to a full review by independent observers.

Rocky Flats has been plagued by a variety of operating and waste-handling problems in recent years.

Last year, after an FBI investigation revealed the plant was releasing wastewater into the city of Broomfield's water supply, the state of Colorado threatened action to close Rocky Flats.

Ariane rocket explodes

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — An unmanned Ariane rocket carrying two Japanese communications satellites exploded just after liftoff, prompting the competitor to the U.S. commercial launch industry to suspend future flights.

The Ariane 44-L rocket, powered by four strap-on boosters, blew apart Thursday less than two minutes after takeoff, apparently because of a fire in the propulsion system, Arianespace President Frederic D'Allest said at the launch site late Thursday.

"All Ariane flights are suspended until we discover the reasons of this accident," he said. "We are going to analyze this failure and explain the catastrophe of this flight as rapidly as possible."

It was the first such failure after 17 consecutive successful Ariane launches.

One of the boosters powering the 582-ton vehicle experienced a sudden drop of pressure just 6.2 seconds after the end of the countdown, Arianespace officials said. Two other boosters tried to prevent the rocket from tipping but were unable to stabilize the flight.

At 90 seconds, technicians realized the mission would have to be abandoned, and the explosion took place 11 seconds later, officials said.

Arianespace had planned at least eight more launches this year, but all have been suspended until the fault can be discovered and fixed, D'Allest said. In the meantime, Arianespace will continue to manufacture and prepare rockets to be ready to resume launches.

Arianespace eyes profits, not moon-and-stars visions

PARIS (AP) — Since taking over the commercial end of the Ariane space program 10 years ago, Arianespace has rejected starry visions like the 1960s moon race for the down-to-earth goal of making money.

The 31 successful Ariane launches — five rockets have exploded including Thursday's 44-L launcher — have brought the company more than $2.5 billion in contracts to put 43 satellites in orbit.

Thirty-two more satellites are on the schedule for future launches, worth $2.36 billion.

But luck changed after Arianespace took over commercialization of the program from the European Space Agency in 1980, just as private satellites became a vital link in communications.

Despite three rocket explosions through 1986, Arianespace successfully focused on turning itself into a cheaper alternative than its main competitor, the U.S. space shuttle.

Though the shuttle returned to the skies in 1988, Ariane retains a commanding grip on commercial launch services, holding more than 50 percent of all satellites in the lucrative market.

East Germany calls in soldiers to help battle short food supplies

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Panic-buying by East Germans is emptying store shelves of flour, sugar and meat, but the government promised emergency measures to keep up basic food supplies and called in the army to help with food deliveries.

In East Berlin, Communist Mayor Erhard Krack resigned today, assuming political responsibility for a rigged election in May. He was the latest Communist official to quit under pressure in recent weeks.

Others have defected to the left-wing Social Democratic Party, widely expected to be the dominant political force in East Germany after elections March 18. The party on Thursday opened its first national convention in Leipzig.

Communist Premier Hans Modrow and other East German leaders have called for an end to the hoarding and panic-shopping that have hit the nation's already poorly stocked stores.

"We are in an extraordinary situation in which emergency measures have become necessary," Commerce Minister Manfred Flegel told a news conference Thursday in East Berlin.

He said the government has ordered stepped-up slaughtering of animals for more meat and more shifts in food production. He said it was considering extra imports.

Officials may have to dip into the national emergency food reserves the government keeps on hand in case of a major crisis, Flegel said, but he declined to elaborate.

"The government will maintain a stable food supply under all circumstances," Flegel said. "The army has already had to provide vehicles to help with food deliveries."

Flegel said the government-run food stores were reporting "three to four" times their normal revenue as consumers rush to buy flour, sugar, meat, butter and jam.

Tens of thousands of East Germans also have bought food in neighboring West Germany and West Berlin.

A cut in subsidies for food production has helped to trigger the run on food. East Germans also are concerned about the expected adoption of the West German mark as a first step toward a unified Germany, and the rate at which they will be able to exchange their savings.

Syrian minister pledges his help to free hostages

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa has told the sister of one of the American hostages in Lebanon that he will visit Iran soon to push for a hostage release.

In a meeting late Thursday, Sharaa said Syria has already told Iran's leaders "that it is their interest to work with us in gaining the release of the hostages."

He told Peggy Say, sister of hostage Terry Anderson, that he would "work intensely with the top Iranian leaders" on the hostage issue.

"I hope we will be able to arrive at good results," he said.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest held of the 18 Western hostages in Lebanon. He was abducted March 16, 1985.

Mrs. Say, of Cadiz, Ky., and an Associated Press delegation was in Damascus as part of trip to discuss with world leaders her campaign to free her brother.

The meeting came the same day as an editorial in the English language Tehran Times in Iran said the hostages in Lebanon should be released without conditions. The paper is close to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani.

The hostages' fate is believed linked to a power struggle within the Iranian government. The Times is close to President Hashemi Rafsanjani, who has offered to help free the hostages before but has been criticized for such moves by hardline government factions.

Sharaa called the editorial "a good sign" and Mrs. Say added she found the newspaper's viewpoint "encouraging."

Syria has good ties with Iran. It was the only major Arab country to back Iran in its eight-year war with Iraq, which is ruled by a rival wing of the Arab Baath Socialist party.

Sharaa told her that a hostage release will be difficult until the clashes between various Lebanese factions ends.

Odessa school may be honored as 'drug free'

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A Department of Education team will be here next week to determine whether Crockett Junior High School qualifies as an official "Drug- Free School," Ector County Independent School District officials announced Thursday.

Beverly Barron, Texans' War on Drugs regional coordinator, said that only a handful of schools nationwide qualify for drug-free status.

"Any suggestion that there is any waffling on the issue of zero tolerance would automatically" be grounds for disqualification, Ms. Barron said.

In addition to having "zero tolerance," Ms. Barron said winning schools will:

- Show evidence of parental and community support for anti-drug programs.
- Call police for every drug or alcohol infraction discovered on campus.
- Have a high level of student involvement in anti-drug programs.
- Have a curriculum with "a clear non-use message."
- Train all school staff, including janitors and bus drivers, in drug abuse recognition techniques.

Ms. Barron, a drug-free school site inspector herself, said 122 schools nationwide are in the running.

"If they are to win, we will use them as a model drug program for the rest of the country," Ms. Barron said. Delegations from winning schools will be invited to a White House awards ceremony, she said.

Last year, she said, 41 schools were designated "Drug Free." In the first year of the program, brainchild of then-Education Secretary William Bennett, 30 schools received the distinction.

ECISD Superintendent Gene Buinger said a drug free designation will not mean drug problems do not exist at Crockett.

"It means that we recognize that we have a problem," he said. "You have to admit that you have a problem before you can commit to finding a solution for that problem."

Buinger added that ECISD is addressing the drug issue at all its campuses, not just Crockett.

Robert McCarley, Crockett principal, said he is glad his school's anti-drug efforts have been recognized.

"It's been very rewarding and an exciting experience for our students, parents, faculty and staff," McCarley said. "Once you get something like this going, it just snowballs."

MCHD deficit not alarming, say hospital officials

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District already is $266,000 behind in its 1989-90 budget with more than half the fiscal year remaining, but the funding problem is not alarming, hospital officials said Thursday.

Higher-than-expected indigent care bills among other factors caused costs to exceed revenues, said Jim Kendrick, Midland Memorial Hospital senior vice president and chief financial officer.

"I don't know if I can say there was a single cause," Kendrick said. "There have been several cases where the bill was extremely large. There's not much you can do about that."

During the four-month period from October through January, the district had about $1.95 million in costs and only $1.68 million budgeted. The district also came up $2,705 short in anticipated tax-collection revenues.

Kendrick said the early shortfall "doesn't mean we're going to end up that way at the end of this year."

Administrators have no immediate cost-cutting plans to ensure the hospital ends the 1989-90 fiscal year in the black, he said.

Costs over expenses has forced the district to borrow more than $1 million a year from MMH three of the past four years, Kendrick said.

MMH administrators in September 1989 forgave the district for $2.3 million it had to borrow to pay for indigent care debts accrued over the 1987-88 fiscal year. The hospital had already forgiven the debt for the previous years.

State comptroller candidate advocates 'belt-tightening' policy

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A Texas financier vying with two Certified Public Accountants in the 1990 race for state comptroller Thursday said he would support a "belt-tightening policy" to protect the state's economic interests.

Republican Warren G. Harding Jr. said that as state comptroller, he would take an active role in generating more revenue for state government and reclaiming Texas' AAA bond rating.

"The next state comptroller must take the politics out of the sales and use tax revenue estimates," he said. "These forecasts, used to set the biennium budget for state government must be done conservatively in order to properly reflect the economy of Texas."

The comptroller's office, he added, should "tighten its belt, just like all businesses in Texas are having to do."

Harding plans, if elected, to combine the state comptroller's existing 29 field offices into 10 or 12 district offices, with personnel being given a better education on all aspects of taxation.

The Grand Prairie resident also said more effective tax collection "can be accomplished using existing compliance officers by centralizing their efforts into fewer, better-managed district offices."

Harding is running for state comptroller against Irby Ford and Jon Hall in the March 13 Republican primary.

The winner of that race will go on to face Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp in the November general election. Sharp has no Democratic primary opponent.

Harding, a graduate of Southern Methodist University with a bachelor's degree in business administration, is cofounder and first vice pres-

Bill would establish insurance program for school employees

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — A state senator said this week he is filing legislation authored by the Texas State Teachers' Association to establish a statewide group health insurance program for school employees that could keep some workers from having to choose between buying food or health insurance.

Two years of research by the 95,000-member teachers' association shows that more than one-fourth of the state's nearly 1,000 school districts pay $50 or less per month toward employees' health premiums, TSTA president Olivia Besteiro said.

Those 274 districts employ 60,000 of the state's 400,000 public school workers.

Of these, 109 districts with 11,000 employees offer an optional plan but pay none of the premium, while 85 districts offer no health insurance at all, Ms. Besteiro said in a statement.

She said the lack of employer participation in insurance programs drives up rates while keeping benefits minimal.

"School districts throughout Texas are already expending more than $314 million per year for poor quality coverage for school employees," Ms. Besteiro said. "Many districts are making a maximum effort to offer and pay for a quality health care package but because of the small number of employees within the district, the coverage is minimal."

The Midland Independent School District pays $95 per month per employee for health premiums, MISD Employee Benefits Specialist Marjolaine Lewis said Thursday.

Depending on the deductible, MISD employees pay between $0 and $13.50 a month for health coverage, district figures show. Coverage for dependents and spouses is paid for entirely by employees, Ms. Lewis said.

...(O)ne-fourth of the state's...districts pay $50 or less per month toward employees' health premiums...

MISD spokesman Ted Miller said the district, which is self-insured, offers an adequate benefit plan. He said districts with health plans in place might be unfairly penalized by a statewide insurance system.

"Every teacher should have the right to have coverage," he said. "But what happens to those school districts that already have programs?"

Ms. Besteiro said the legislation, which would offer health coverage under the auspices of the Teacher Retirement System, could help equalize benefits offered by rich and poor school districts and lower the cost of school workers' premiums for taxpayers.

The legislature will convene in special session Tuesday to revamp the state's method of funding public education, which the Texas Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional because it allows disparities between rich and poor districts.

Rosanna Salazar, press secretary for Gov. Bill Clement, said, "I'm certain that the governor would consider" allowing lawmakers to take up Uribe's bill during the upcoming 30-day session.

I-20 in Big Spring closed until March

BIG SPRING (AP) — A heavily traveled section of Interstate 20 will be closed until the middle of March because of a fire-ruined overpass, forcing about 10,000 vehicles a day to take a five-mile detour, officials say.

I-20's eastbound Birdwell Street overpass in Big Spring must be torn down and rebuilt — a process that could take up to a year — because of damage caused when a gasoline tanker truck fell off the westbound overpass and exploded Monday, Texas Highway Department engineer Mike Chetty said.

The full load of 8,551 gallons of gasoline burned when the truck ran off the overpass and plunged 30 feet below. Firefighters let the inferno burn itself out.

The truck fell between the separate overpasses and settled under the eastbound bridge. The westbound overpass was damaged but reparable, but the eastbound overpass was destroyed, Chetty said.

"The burning gasoline deformed the steel beams and damaged the concrete beyond repair," he said. "When concrete is subjected to intense heat, it becomes brittle."

Chetty said he expects the westbound overpass to be repaired and certified safe in two to three weeks. Interstate traffic in both directions then will be routed over the bridge while the eastbound overpass is rebuilt.

In the meantime, motorists will continue taking a five-mile detour over Texas 350 and FM 700 until the westbound overpass is opened. There is no access road along the affected section of highway.

The detour "has the fewest control lights and was seen as the best route for the traffic flow, heavy as it is," Big Spring police Capt. Melvin Fowler said.

The truck's driver, Michael Roy Stovall, 37, of Big Spring, had just filled the tanker to capacity at a Fina refinery in Big Spring and was westbound when he apparently swerved to avoid a slow-moving car, according to the Department of Public Safety. The truck rode up onto the guardrail and then plunged over. Stovall was pronounced dead at the scene.

DPS Sgt. Frank Woodall said the car apparently was going about 50 mph. The speed limit on that section of the interstate is 65 mph, with no minimum speed.

Hamilton files for school board

Staff Report

Hamilton

Ms. Hamilton filed this week to run for the District 4 school board seat held by Jim Builta, who also filed this week.

Ms. Hamilton, 38, said she is "studying" the school finance reform issue and hopes that legislators leave authority in the hands of local districts.

"I think we need more local control on our school boards," Ms. Hamilton said. "I'm a little worried about losing that local control."

A Midland High School graduate, Ms. Hamilton is a life member of the Texas and National PTA, past president of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission, and a member of the Downtown Lioness Club.

She also is involved in suicide prevention and is a member of the Midland Crimestoppers Board of Directors.

The school board election is scheduled for May 5.

Ms. Hamilton lost to Builta in the District 4 race two years ago.

'Crime fighters' honored

Staff Report

The Midland Crime Prevention Commission has honored four Midlanders for their efforts in fighting crime and enhancing public safety.

Recipients of the "Outstanding Crime Prevention Award" at the commission's annual banquet were Ron Sartor of the Midland Police Department, MCPC publicity chairman Claire Frances "Frankie" Hale, KMID-TV anchor Mike Barker and former Reporter-Telegram police-/courts reporter Patrick Crimmins.

Sartor was nominated for recognition of his design of bicycle flags for the hearing impaired.

Mrs. Hale was singled out for "outstanding service to law enforcement" for time she has volunteered to the commission as well as her role in organizing a Neighborhood Watch program for the Valley View Community southeast of Midland.

Crimmins, now of the San Antonio Light, was commended for his award-winning reporting on police and court issues, especially his four-part investigative series on the effectiveness of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

Barker was honored for his "dedication" to the education of the community to the threat of crime.

Pupils from every Midland Independent School District elementary school will participate in the seventh annual MISD Elemenatry Science Fair Saturday at the Midland Park Mall.

The fair, which will feature entries from third- through sixth-graders, will start at 10 a.m. and last until 8 p.m. Judging will begin at 8:30 a.m. and winners will be announced at noon.

About 155 pupils are expected to participate in the fair.

Convicted murderer released

HOUSTON (AP) — A man sentenced to 30 years in prison for his role in the 1979 murders of a Houston couple and their infant son is free after nine years behind bars.

Walter Waldhauser Jr., 36, who earned a bachelor's and master's degree in business administration while in prison, was released Feb. 9 and is living with his father in Houston, Walter Waldhauser Sr. said.

In a deal with prosecutors, the younger Waldhauser was sentenced in 1981 to three concurrent 30-year terms for the murders of John and Diana Wanstrath and their 14-month-old son, Kevin.

Waldhauser told investigators he was present during the killings but another man, Allen Wayne Janecka, did the shooting.

The murders were ordered by Markham Duff-Smith, Diana Wanstrath's adopted brother, who inherited more than half of the Wanstraths' $800,000 estate.

Waldhauser had promised Janecka the two would split $30,000 and later receive up to $14,000 more.

Waldhauser's information led to Duff-Smith being sentenced to death. Janecka also was sentenced to death, although the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals earlier this month granted him a new trial. Duff-Smith remains on death row.

Waldhauser also confessed to having arranged the 1975 murder of Gertrude Zabolio, Duff-Smith's adoptive mother. She was found strangled in her home, and Janecka was also the hit man in that case.

Waldhauser was denied parole four times in the last two years by parole board officers who unanimously cited the seriousness of his crimes. But under Texas law, once a prisoner's time-served and good-time credit adds up to his sentence, he must be released.

Ex-'skinheads' testify they harassed minorities

DALLAS (AP) — Four former white supremacists testified Thursday that members of their group chased, harassed and beat blacks and Hispanics in a Dallas park in 1988 because they believed the park was for whites only.

The Confederate Hammerskins, a Dallas-based neo-Nazi group whose members shave their heads to show solidarity, were patrolling the park because they had heard a rumor that the NAACP was trying to change the park's name, the four testified in federal court.

"We were going to the park to ... make sure there were no minorities — no blacks or Mexicans — in the park," said Kevin Cardosi, 19, a former Memphis, Tenn., skinhead who said he spent a week in Dallas in August 1988 with the Confederate Hammerskins.

A black man who was chased out of a park in August 1988 by a group of so-called "skinheads" testified Thursday in the trial of five avowed white supremacists that the attackers taunted him with racial slurs and he ran for his life.

"I was with a young lady, Fanny Wilson, and we were walking in the park at night. As we approached the Robert E. Lee statue, I heard a shout and one said, 'Nigger, what are you doing in my park?' " Felix Sherrard said.

He said the chant started from behind trees and bushes in the park and eight or nine white youths with closely shaven heads and wearing leather jackets chased the couple across the lawn.

"I was mostly scared for Fanny and myself," Sherrard said of the Aug. 9, 1988 attack. "They (the youths) were going to beat us up pretty bad."

He later called police and Dallas officer Donna K. Lowe, who arrested one youth later that evening, told the jury that Sherrard "in my opinion, appeared to be very terrified."

She said she arrested Troy Holmes for disorderly conduct and said 19-year-old Jon Lance Jordan of Garland and Sean Christian Tarrant, 20, of Dallas, two defendants in the federal conspiracy trial, were in the group she found at the park.

Jordan and Tarrant are on trial along with Daniel Alvis Wood, 20, of Dallas; Michael Lewis Lawrence, 22, of Tulsa, Okla.; and Christopher Barry Greer, 25, of Irving.

They are charged with violating the civil rights of Jews by defacing a synagogue in 1988. Greer, Tarrant and Jordan are also accused of civil rights violations by allegedly chasing blacks and Hispanics from a Dallas park, also in 1988.

Holmes, 19, testified that he met Lawrence in Milwaukee and was persuaded to come to Dallas. He said Tarrant told Hammerskins members at a Dallas-area barbecue earlier on the day of the chase that he (Tarrant) "was going to take us to the park and show us northern boys how it was done."

Holmes, who was arrested after that incident, has agreed to plead guilty and cooperate with the government in exchange for being sentenced as a juvenile.

Astronauts' wives critical of ABC film

HOUSTON (AP) — Two women who lost their astronaut husbands in the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger in 1986 say a TV movie about the nation's worst space disaster is a disaster in itself.

"I asked that this movie not be done, but nobody cared," Jane Smith, widow of astronaut Michael Smith, said. "Nobody cared that I and my family, and all our families, would relive that anguish all over again. We are all trying — I hate to use this word, but it's true — we are trying desperately to get on with our lives. Why can't they leave us our memories?"

"They have disrupted my children's recoveries from the trauma of their father's death and tastelessly exploited a tragedy as prime-time entertainment," added Lorna Onizuka, widow of astronaut Ellison Onizuka. "This producer has made a mockery of my husband's life and the sacrifices he made for the country he loved."

The movie, "Challenger," will air Sunday on ABC. The comments from Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Onizuka, made today in the Houston Chronicle, echo similar statements from relatives of New Hampshire schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, who was among the seven crew members killed when the shuttle blew up 73 seconds after launch.

Writer-producer George Englund has said he knew there would be mixed reactions to the film but has defended it as "sensitive in almost every aspect."

"I was shocked that George Englund made this movie when no one wanted it made," Mrs. Smith said. "I'm very naive, I guess — unwise in the ways of Hollywood."

Mrs. Onizuka, who had protested the use of her family in the film, called it "one of the most laughable productions yet to befall the American public ... part truth and part fabrication, without ever telling the audience which is which ... an amusing yet tragic entertainment in the guise of journalism — but without integrity."

At the Johnson Space Center, where the mission was being controlled when the explosion occurred off the coast of Florida, spokesman Doug Ward said he would not be put in the role of movie critic.

"The public ought to be the final arbiters of what makes it or not, and we try neither to endorse nor reject," Ward said. "I'm sure people here will watch it, and if history is any indicator, they will not be pleased."

Roger Boisjoly, a former Morton-Thiokol engineer who tried to stop the launch and was the lone person to be paid a rights fee for the movie, told the Chronicle from his home in Menlo, Ariz., the film was not what he had in mind.

"With this particular movie, it would have been better not to have made it," he said Thursday after screening the movie.

Mrs. Smith complained her husband came off "shallow, totally unlike himself," and that the movie "trivialized" the crew.

She added that the ending of the movie particularly hurt her.

"We all know they were not launching while they held hands and recited a poem," she said. "I assure you. I have seen the horror of their seats in that crew compartment, and they did not go happily on their way. Mike was awake and alive. It's been proven that he was alive when they hit the Atlantic going over 200 mph. And that's how it really ended.

The Crockett anti-drug program, called C3 for "Crockett Colts Care," includes a student club and enlists the aid of the Odessa Police Department, which sends an officer to the campus every week.

C3 member Jason Pollock, 13, said club participation is up.

"We're getting new people at every meeting," Pollock said. "We want no drugs — zero tolerance. When we have our meetings we stress it, and it gets them to know that if you do what we do, it's a lot better than doing drugs."

Glenn Woods, Midland Independent School District guidance and couseling coordinator, said MISD has good anti-drug programs even though none of its schools are up for national recognition.

"We have in place a curriculum that is taught in all grades and subject areas on drug education and positive decision-making," Woods said.

Other programs include sixth-grade DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) classes, Lions Club Quest programs for seventh- and eighth-graders, All Star leadership classes in ninth grade, and Peer Assistance Leadership (PAL) classes in senior high school, Woods said.

He said Lee Freshman High School was recognized by Texans' War on Drugs last year and the year before, and visited by drug-free schools inspectors two years ago. National recognition did not result, Woods said, but the school's performance shows that MISD drug programs are effective.

"It is community involvement that is helping our program to be a success," Woods said. "I'm in the process now of getting materials together for our presentation for next year."

In other action at Thursday, directors awarded a $1.1 million contract to the Varian medical equipment company of California for a new linear accelerator.

MMH President Ray Branson said the accelerator, which will provide radioactive therapy to MMH patients who have various forms of cancer, will replace a nine-year-old machine.

The old equipment, which often needs repairs, has been used to treat about 30 patients a day, Branson said.

Directors also approved a $120,000 project to turn a 2 North N Street building near MMH into a closed psychiatric unit.

Dr. Harold Rubin, executive vice president of operations, said psychiatric patients have been placed in rooms in the hospital's medicine floor.

The new facility would have 12 beds and allow officials to keep the psychiatric patients separate from the ones there for medical reasons, Rubin said.

"We can address their needs a little more that way," he said of the psychiatric patients.

Willie Nelson raising funds for Hightower

AUSTIN (AP) — Country singer Willie Nelson, who helped raise money for needed farmers with his Farm Aid concerts, now is raising money for Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Hightower, a two-term Democrat seeking re-election, has sent out a four-page fund-raising letter from Nelson which says the commissioner needs money to combat efforts by the Texas Farm Bureau and the chemical lobby to oust him.

"They are trying to get rid of him ... for actually doing what he was elected to do. Namely, help our farmers and ranchers and rural communities," the letter says.

"The Farm Bureau and the chemical lobby are determined to knock him off and replace him with someone who is indebted to them," said Nelson, who last year testified on Hightower's behalf when the Legislature considered turning the commissioner's elected job into an appointed post.

The letter was sent to nearly 20,000 Texans. "The response to it is great," said Jeff Sugerman, Hightower's campaign press secretary.

Forecasters' jobs easier with help of weather observers

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Eighty-year-old Edna Cooley has been waking up at 3 a.m. for nearly 22 years to trudge outside in occasionally bone-chilling cold and record the weather in the sparsely settled high desert of central Nevada.

Some 18½ hours later, Mrs. Cooley makes the last of her six daily weather observations and temperature checks for National Weather Service records on Austin, Nev., population 350, earning $11.10 a day for her troubles.

"Why do I keep doing it? They say you can even get used to hanging if you hang long enough," Mrs. Cooley said. "I've been meaning to quit for two years, but can't find anyone else to do this."

She is among the last of a breed of hands-on recorders of the nation's highs, lows and precipitation amounts. Without the observers, meteorologists and forecasters would have a more difficult time predicting the weather.

"There's a need for live observation," said Gerald Miles, a meterologist in Elko who supervises the weather watchers. "Equipment is reliable, but you need good remarks from observers to go with it. Equipment has its limitations."

Bill Davis, the Salt Lake City-based western regional director of the observation program, said about 50 weather watchers are on the National Weather Service payroll in his jurisdication.

Several hundred others, mostly farmers, voluntarily report climate information to the agency to help keep a historical weather record.

Davis said at-home weather observation stations were set up during World War II "basically wherever they could find someone and where we didn't have a government office."

Meteorology was rapidly developing, and officials found "eyeball-type" information improved their ability to track storms, he said.

The observers must pass a certification test and use weather service equipment to take measurements of temperature, winds, dew point, atmospheric pressure and precipitation. The routine can take 10 to 15 minutes, depending on the weather.

"There's no grand plan to get rid of the weather observers," Davis said. "I think they'll be around for the next decade. But we'll lose some to equipment and because people will retire and the younger generation doesn't want to work that hard for so little money."

Mrs. Cooley said that when she goes on vacation, "there's no weather coming out of Austin. The TV stations just say, 'Oh well, I guess that Edna's out of town again.'"

Debi Gill, who usually reports Nevada's coldest overnight lows at Wildhorse Reservoir just south of the Idaho border, has been an observer for 3½ years.

"Sometimes, I wonder why I keep doing it, especially at 5:30 in the morning," she said.

Mrs. Gill, like other weather observers, gets $2.50 for the first early morning recording, $1.60 for daytime readings and $1.90 for each night observation.

She said the most frightening thing about the job is the late-night readings when near silence fuels the imagination, she said.

"When the lake is frozen over the ice groans and the coyotes are yipping and howling, I just get all nervous," said Mrs. Gill. "It's silly, but I get scared of the bogyman because that's the only one who would be out that time of night."

The good part of the job is closely watching how nature works and stopping to enjoy the surrounding weather, sunrises and sunsets, she said.

"Not many people stop and watch the sky," she said. "The clouds actually grow, puff up right before your eyes. It's wonderful."

Observers must distinguish among three layers of clouds with nine different basic cloud types possible at each level.

Gardeners urged to grow hardier plants

DALLAS (AP) — Texas gardeners are being urged to grow more cold-hardy plants following Thursday's announcement of revamped national climate zones for vegetation.

"Our motto is tough plants for tough times," said Dr. Henry Marc Cathey, director of the U.S. National Arboretum in Washington, D.C., who revealed the new zones.

The realignment, based on winter temperatures averaged over the past 20 years, indicates colder readings are expected deeper into the Lone Star State.

"Texas is showing a much greater variety of form than it ever has before," Cathey said.

However, it doesn't mean winters are getting colder, he said.

"For the first time, the map reveals the effects of elevation," he said. Cathey added that the 21 zones are based on updated weather data from 14,000 reporting stations in North America.

The major regions for Texas are Zone 6 in the Panhandle, Zone 7 in the north, Zone 8 across the middle of the state and Zone 9 in the far south, Cathey said.

"Zone 7 (0-10 degrees average minimum temperatures) is pink in the map from Rhode Island all the way down and across to Texas and up to the Aleutian Straights," he said. It ranges across the state from part of Gray County in the Panhandle to Nacogdoches, Williamson and Edwards counties, the map shows.

"Zone 9, which would be in the very tip of Texas, has shrunk tremendously, just along the border and along the coast," he said.

It used to come up through Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, indicating an average minimum winter temperature of 20-30 degrees Fahrenheit.

In addition to the map, the U.S. National Arboretum is issuing a book of 1,700 outstanding plants and the zones in which they grow best.

The book is based on 10,000 reports from individuals, nurserymen and garden clubs, Cathey said.

Horticulturist Neal Sperry poses with plants that were killed by the freeze. Gardeners are being urged to grow more hardy plants.

Based on the new zones, gardeners in the Dallas-Fort Worth area would be discouraged from planting several species, said horticulturist Neal Sperry.

"We would lose Japanese yew, fatsias (aralias); oleanders would be less achievable," he said.

"Pittosporum would be definitely out — they're a borderline call now. Ligustrums, Japanese ligustrums would become questionable," Sperry said.

Sperry cautioned, though, against depending too much on the zone data because there's always the chance of a record cold snap. Or, he said, a warmer than usual winter might not prepare plants for a sudden drop to seasonal readings.

Progressively colder temperatures are needed for plants to survive the winter. "If you have no prior hardiness, even a plant in Zone 5 would freeze in Zone 7," he said.

Sperry explained that it's like going to the first Friday night football game in September, when it seems chilly at 60 degrees. Then, when the weather warms up to 60 in the spring, everybody is in shirt sleeves.

"I have seen damage this year to plants that didn't get damaged in 1983-84 because we didn't have the hardening," Sperry said.

The revised zones are expected to be a key element in marketing plants in Texas, Sperry said, since hardier new varieties can be introduced.

The zone changes don't surprise landscape architect Paul Rea of Plano, who says the experts are just catching up with what professional gardeners have already learned.

"Pittosporum was real common here; we used them every day," Rea said. "Then every one froze all over town and I haven't used them since."

Rea is looking forward to seeing the new list of recommended plants for North Texas since recent freezes have cost nurseries and consumers a lot of money in replacement plants.

"People are going to be a lot more cautious about what they buy now," he said. And, he said, he doesn't want to have to go back and replace an entire landscape after it's planted.

Computer chips can be used to keep track of cows

Associated Press

A computer chip no larger than a match head can tell dairy farmers more about their best heifer than they probably ever wanted to know.

According to Successful Farming magazine, this new chip, enclosed in glass and implanted at the tailhead or in the ear, can broadcast over an FM frequency her special identification number, temperature, how often she got up and stirred around and even if she is in heat. Farmers could get all this just by holding a hand-held receiver near the chip as the heifer passed through a headchute.

USDA extension specialist Gary Weber, who is responsible for tracking electronic livestock identification systems, says he believes a feedlot operator could begin using computer chips like these within the next year, certainly within the next five years.

Developing a scanning device that can be used more than 2 inches away is one of the biggest technological hurdles to solve.

In the late 1970s, electronic identification of livestock seemed a certainty by the early '80s, but the transfer of USDA research projects to private companies didn't materialize. There are several experts in the electronic identification field who would disagree with widespread application of such developments for at least the near future. Questions remain whether the livestock industry can agree on a standard technology.

The dairy industry has used individual ID systems along with sophisticated computer feeding and milk monitoring systems for several years. But electronic ID in other livestock types has been slow, and nearly nonexistent, says Weber.

All that could change during this next decade, says Weber, because computer chips have become less expensive, more durable and are able to contain much more information than a few years ago.

"The Europeans are developing this technology far faster than U.S. companies, and their farmers are adopting this technology far faster than American farmers," says Weber.

Last year Dutch authorities began testing electronic devices that could be used to identify growing-finishing pigs. This high-tech tool, reason Dutch authorities, would provide a path back to any farm having diseases or sulfa residues.

EARNEST KIKER

Extent of freeze damage may not be evident now

Concerned homeowners need to know that the extent of freeze damage to many of their ornamental plants may not be known for some time. The full extent of injury from cold may not become apparent until this summer. That is why it is important to reduce plant stress and wait until later to prune or fertilize.

Kiker

As a rule of thumb, injury is likely to be more severe on plants whose leaves did not fall off after a hard freeze. Homeowners should take steps now to help reduce the potential injury from cold weather.

■ Keep plants watered adequately. Most areas of the state are short on moisture, and this dry condition could contribute to more losses. Irrigating landscape plants in the winter, particularly broadleaf evergreens, can help lessen effects of freezing temperatures.

■ Although plants may appear to be in poor condition, don't do any pruning until late winter or early spring. Pruning now would stimulate new growth that would be at risk to later freeze damage. Prune and shape ornamentals only after the full extent of damage is known.

■ Don't start fertilizing plants until they have begun active growth. Fertilizer use at this time may stimulate new growth, and the fertilizer salts may cause more injury to already stressed root systems.

■ Look carefully for symptoms of disease and insect problems that might infect the freeze-damaged plant tissue. If problems are evident, contact your local county Extension Service Agent who will help you submit tissue samples to the Plant Disease Diagnostic Laboratory at Texas A&M as quickly as possible for identification and control recommendations. If plant stems appear to be water-soaked, this is an indication of problems.

Remember the average last freeze date for this area is April 4 to April 7.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

DANNY GREER ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

Danny Greer - Independent Businessman
I am endorsing Nick Taylor for District Judge because of his duelistic approach to the crime prevention effort in Midland. From the Judicial perspective, he supports a weekly drug testing program for those on probation. This is a positive approach due to the fact that a recent survey revealed that 90% of Midland's crime is drug-related; much of which is committed by repeat offenders.
From the community level, Nick contributes to and serves many organizations such as the Boy Scouts, in an effort to effect creative alternatives for our youth. Above all, Nick's high moral character is indicative of his dedication to God and of his conscientious obligation to the maintenance of integrity in the District Judges' office. I believe that Nick is thoroughly qualified judicially, conscientiously and morally.

Book focuses on 'zero sex'

By ROB HIAASEN
N.Y. Times News Service

CNS Graphic

The '60s advertised open sex, the '70s were the selfish sex decade and the '80s were about safe sex.

Now come the '90s and the decade of no sex.

To guide you through 10 sexless years, Pamela Pettler and Amy Heckerling have written "The No-Sex Handbook" (Warner Books, $6.95). Lampooning sex manuals, their handbook offers tongue-in-cheek tips on how to not meet people, how to never get asked out and how to achieve zero sex.

"Zero sex is not considered a topic fit for polite society," the authors write. "How long have you secretly wondered about this hidden garden of delight?"

There are advantages to avoiding relationships, the handbook claims. People argue it's a learning opportunity to date and face rejection. "It's an opportunity, of course, to recognize YOU'RE NOT THAT CUTE," the book reports.

By living alone, you "can call up old flames and hang up when they answer ... and watch 'Mr. Ed' reruns without interference."

To achieve zero sex, the authors advocate a makeover to guarantee celibacy, which they call "go yonder look."

To achieve the look, women could wear that yellowish cardigan from eighth grade or the blouse where the gap in the front is hardly noticeable (once you put the safety pin in).

And, in the off chance that you still look good, the authors suggest you let that gray, ratty, bra strap show, or perhaps allow the underarm deodorant shields to peek out.

Men should consider wearing tight jogging pants for that "more than you want to see" look. Or guys can choose their torn and flapping shorts, "accompanied with pensive scratching."

If this fails, you could find yourself out on a date at a restaurant. Don't panic. Celibacy can be maintained by the simplest maneuver, such as ordering unboned fish.

"Not only do you spend the entire dinner picking little spiny things out of your mouth, but at any moment you choke" the handbook says.

For those moments when you're suddenly caught with your pants down there are emergency measures. The handbook suggests exploring the non-erogenous zones:

- "The E Spot" — your elbow, smashing it against the headboard.
- "The S Spot" — exploring areas with sunburn.
- "The B spot" — female knees partner in unusually sensitive masculine spot.

Remember, "bad sex is not just a matter of technique. It's also the spirit and passion you bring to it," the authors say.

They're joking, right?

"It's all in good fun," says co-author Pettler. "These ideas came from bitter experiences. It helps to deal with these things if you're able to laugh at them. The book is about shared vulnerabilities."

Great opening lines:

- "God, don't you just hate bladder infections."
- "I bet you were cute with hair."
- "Is that a midget flashlight in your pocket, or are you just glad to see me?"

Beyond the headache: new and improved medical excuses:

- The bends.
- Narcosis of the deep.
- Torn rotator cuff

Last-minute excuses to not spend the night:

- Cannot use unwaxed dental floss.
- Must drop off overdue videotapes.
- Have to get up early for farm shows in morning.

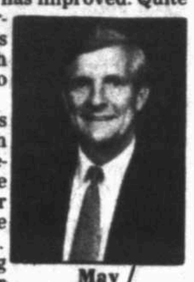
- Answer questions on a game show.
- Do your tax returns.

FAMILY MATTERS

Recovery from alcoholism affects couple's marriage

By JIM MAY, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: About two years ago my wife began her recovery from alcoholism. She has been very successful in her personal recovery and I must admit that our family life (we have three children) has improved. Quite naturally, life had been very hectic and tumultuous during her drinking days and there have been numerous painful incidents. In an effort to change or improve with my wife, I also have attended Al-Anon meetings and also have been through an anger workshop.



May

Since my wife began her recovery, however, there has been very little affection in our relationship and even less intimacy. When we are intimate (which is on a frequency of once every six or seven months) it tends to be a hurry-up obligatory incident. My wife has told me our relationship of 13-plus years must start all over, as the past relationship was not genuine due to her disease.

I have a lot of difficulty with the concept of starting the relationship all over again. I was there with her when the three children were born and we have been through a lot of other difficult times together. She has not been enthusiastic in the least about seeking counseling.

Could you please suggest a method or methods to bring back this part of our relationship (books, support groups or any other suggestions)? This is becoming a very serious problem. I have talked with her about this and have even written letters to her. I have been patient for over two years and can foresee no improvement. I have no wish to live my life as a celibate but I don't want to get divorced until I have exhausted every possibility. — COLD SHOWER

DEAR COLD SHOWER: Recovery from alcoholism is a process, not a single event. Your wife is sharing with you her belief that, since she is sober and different now, she needs to get to know you sober.

This process can be an opportunity to discover (or re-discover) love for another person. The two of you have had 13 years of being together — in the face of an significant obstacle — and three children. The challenge is to build a new and better relationship.

The recovery process focuses precious little on building or repairing intimate relationships. Your wife may have numerous reasons why she no longer feels comfortable having sex with you, now that she is in recovery. Sober sex may be very painful for her — this is common in recovery.

The important thing is to start working on the relationship. I suggest you read Janet Woititz's book, "Struggle for Intimacy," and Harriet Lerner's book, "The Dance of Intimacy," to understand how you and your wife must begin dealing with the emotional issues of an intimate relationship that has been marked by a major dysfunction.

I also encourage you both to seek counseling from a professional knowledgeable in alcoholic issues. Your situation is common and can be changed. Please don't get a divorce without making a real effort at "relationship recovery."

DEAR READERS: The recent tragic deaths of five Midlanders reminds us of how important it is to be available to the families of those men, even if we don't know what to say. Platitudes aren't helpful, but grieving families need to know they are not alone. We must be there after the funerals, too. Grieving is a slow process and trying to hurry it up doesn't help. Keep them in your prayers and thoughts.

Aging creeps up on middle-aged

By DAVID GRIMES
N.Y. Times News Service

I read somewhere that by the year 2040, 25 percent of Americans will be 65 or older.

Clearly, this aging of America will wreak some profound changes in our society. For one thing, the lines for Early Bird dinners will be inconceivably long. For another, the people who come to Florida so they can spend the winter driving slow may be from states other than Michigan and Ohio.

But I am not going to worry about this because I have always felt that old age is simply a state of mind. Unfortunately, many of us, myself included, have allowed our minds to deteriorate so much that we don't know what state they're in.

For us, then, it would be helpful if we had a guide to let us know if we're getting old. For example:

You might be getting old if ...

- You're irritated by people who walk up the escalator while it's moving.
- It takes you more than a year to wear out a pair of sneakers.
- You have a charge account at a home improvement center.
- You refuse to buy a car that doesn't have cruise control.
- You recently bought one of those little carts to roll out your trash cans.
- You can recommend a good periodontist.
- You don't see why manufacturers have to print their product instructions in such small type.
- Beatlemania doesn't seem that long ago.
- You think of U-2 as a spy plane rather than a rock group.
- You remember the summer Roger Maris hit all those home runs.
- You remember using a slide rule in high school chemistry.
- You remember when there wasn't such a thing as instant replays.
- You stopped wearing blue jeans years ago.
- You can't watch a movie without getting up at least once to go to the bathroom.
- A cruise-ship vacation doesn't sound all that bad.
- You think Steve Allen was a better "Tonight Show" host than Johnny Carson.
- You remember buying "Baby Huey" comic books for 10 cents.
- You remember when gasoline sold for 27 cents a gallon, premium was called "ethyl" and there was no such thing as "unleaded."
- You remember the harsh, cruel realities of life in the world B.M. (Before McDonald's).
- You remember when a breakfast of eggs, bacon, buttered toast and milk was considered good for you.
- You remember when mommies stayed home with the kids.

New poll reveals differences in sexes' attitudes toward food

Fewer than three in 10 men responding to a Gallup survey said they feel guilty about eating foods they like; more than four in 10 women reported such feelings.

The poll, released Tuesday, also found men were less worried about chowing down and less conscious of dietary concerns.

Fifty-seven percent of men said they were eating more fiber; among women, that rose to 70 percent. Fewer than four in 10 men sought more calcium; six in ten women did.

Overall, 52 percent of the respondents said they were eating more oat bran, which has been touted recently as an aid in lowering blood cholesterol. Again, considerably fewer men than women said they had made the change.

The survey found fats and oils scarcer at everybody's table: Nearly three-quarters said they were trimming fat from their diets and roughly two-thirds reported cutting out saturated fats, cholesterol and fried foods.

Ski slopes newest place to soci al-climb

Associated Press

The American West has become an area where the sporting elite skis down the slopes and climbs up the social ladder.

The socialites, executives and celebrities that converge on Aspen, Sun Valley and Vail may night club until 2 a.m., according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, but their high-profile, high-energy style in a frigid climate means keeping in shape.

"Now you get in shape to ski, not ski to get in shape," said former top-seeded tennis player Julie Anthony, whose Aspen Club is a workout mecca for Goldie Hawn, Catherine Oxenberg, Jill St. John, Melanie Griffith and Jane Fonda, as well as Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova.

Evert and Navratilova play a couple of hours of tennis a day on the covered courts — and that's after they are done skiing.

To ski elegantly, effortlessly and gracefully, you need strength and suppleness similar to the demands of ballet. So it is not surprising that the Pilates Method, originally designed to rehabilitate injured ballet dancers, has become popular with skiers, including Willow Bay and Melanie Griffith, at the Aspen Club.

High altitude sun and glare, razor-sharp winds, single-digit humidity and freezing cold make dryness a skier's beauty nemesis. On the mountain, skin suffers doubly from exposure and dehydration. Smart skiers apply and reapply sunblocks.

Annie Denver and Julianne Phillips protect themselves with facials and Sally Field and Goldie Hawn keep up with the latest skin protection.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Back in December of 1988, I participated in Operation Dear Abby when I sent a Christmas card along with a request for a pen pal to the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz. On Dec. 29, I received a wonderful letter from Machinist Mate First Class John McLeese of Decatur, Mich.

Van Buren

We corresponded for six months, then arranged to meet in June while he was on leave. It was love at first sight! We spent two wonderful days together and continued to keep in touch.

We were married on Jan. 3, 1990, in his hometown of Decatur, in the First Presbyterian Church where his own parents had been married.

I never expected to get a reply to my first letter, because I stated up front that I was in my 30s, divorced and had two young sons — so if it can happen to me, it can happen to anyone.

I had to write to share the wonderful news because without "Operation Dear Abby," we never would have met. God bless you, Abby. — CHARLENE McLEESE, FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR CHARLENE: Your letter made my day. May you and John have a lifetime of happiness together.

DEAR ABBY: As I look at the faces of my crew members as I walk about the ship these days, I see lots of smiles. One reason is unquestionably the 30,000 Christmas cards, letters and packages these young men received through America Remembers/Operation Dear Abby. This year's campaign was a smashing success.

I cannot thank you enough for the column that inspired this outpouring of support from Americans at home.

Please accept the enclosed ship's plaque as a small token of our appreciation for your continuing support of our Navy men and women worldwide — but especially those of us on the USS Forrestal. If you're ever in our area, the red carpet will be rolled out for you! Many thanks on behalf of my entire crew. — TIM THOMASSY, CAPTAIN, U.S. NAVY

DEAR CAPTAIN: The USS Forrestal plaque is on the wall of my office. It's beautiful, and I thank you.

DEAR ABBY: I am a freedom fighter assigned to the Marine Detachment aboard the USS Enterprise (CVN-65). Being away from home during the holidays is particularly difficult, especially for those servicemen who are married and have small children.

The thousands of letters received as a result of America Remembers/Operation Dear Abby V have been instrumental in reinforcing our pride in being Americans.

The generosity of your readers in extending their holiday wishes to thousands of servicemembers abroad has filled all of us with an overflowing sense of love for our great country and the people back home.

I have never been prouder. Thank you from the bottom of my heart. — STEVEN McCOYNE, LCPL USMC

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Past deeds will bring you new benefits now. You receive a special honor, setting the tone for a very rewarding year. Your social life picks up and could include a lasting romantic alliance. Nail down contracts in July; short-term agreements will be best in September. Vacation in the autumn instead of in summer. Family members finally show you the respect you deserve. Share the spotlight with those closest to your heart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spiritual inspiration comes as you rest or meditate today. Resist the urge to gamble or buy something you cannot afford. Your social life accelerates as your popularity grows. Repay a lovely invitation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family relationships are more rewarding than ever. A sense of humor makes you popular with a member of the opposite sex. You may want to try out a new recipe on company tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Changes work in your favor, especially those that will affect your family. Put on your thinking cap and find new ways to raise funds. Travel gives you an opportunity to solve several problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your personal magnetism helps you stay out in front of the crowd. An unexpected reunion with an old school chum brightens your weekend. Be alert to the tactics of a romantic rival.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Bring new ideas to the attention of higher-ups, but do not expect immediate action. A spontaneous invitation promises to be great fun. Do not pass your responsibilities off onto other busy people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An "impossible" dream may be close to becoming reality. Certainly, you should keep on trying. A conversation with an old friend proves enlightening. A bit of mystery fuels romance to new heights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid discussing touchy subjects with parents who are under pressure today. Regret keeps you from renewing a friendship. Summon up your courage and make that telephone call!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Some gossip concerning a loved one is not worth thinking about. Tension lessens when a parent-child conflict is resolved. Each needs the other's support. Accept your boss's view as gospel now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is up to you to find ways to motivate a child. Financial backing is available from more than one source. It may be hard to concentrate if your neighbors want to party.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take your time when making an important decision. Good luck comes through a loved one. An odd situation arises. Investigate. It could provide new financial solutions. Romance keeps you guessing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Map out a daily routine and stick to it. Give top priority to family projects and financial security. Romantic partner proves more reliable than in the immediate past. You review a recent decision.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A friend could make a confession that embarrasses you. Keep your nose to the grindstone at work. One of the most imaginative people in the world is interested in you. Be receptive.

Rubber bridge is at its most interesting when one side, or both, possesses a partscore. You must be prepared to take risks to prevent the opponents from completing their rubber, or game.

Had there been no partscores, North's overcall would have been considered, at best, dubious. Under the given circumstances, however, it was incumbent on North to enter the fray and it resulted in North-South buying the contract at a feasible level.

In order to prevent declarer from scoring ruffs in dummy, West, Mortimer Selinger of West Palm Beach, Fla, attacked with ace of diamonds and another. To establish a convenient means of communication to the closed hand declarer led a club from the table at trick three. East rose with the king and continued with a club, ruffed by South.

After drawing the last trump declarer led the queen of spades. Had West made the instinctive play of covering declarer would have racked up the contract. West's king of spades would have been allowed to hold, declarer would have won any return and taken a finesse for the jack of spades. When that suit divided evenly declarer would have collected 10 tricks.

All that was foiled by a simple tactic—West refused to cover the queen of spades. As a result, there was no way to set up and cash the spades and declarer had to be satisfied with two tricks in the suit for a total of eight—one fewer than he had contracted for. After this fine defense, it was only fitting that East-West went on to win the rubber on the next deal.

Jury rejects claim Wonder stole 'I Just Called to Say I Love You'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop star Stevie Wonder says justice is sweet following a jury's rejection of a $25 million claim that his Oscar-winner song "I Just Called to Say I Love You" was stolen from another songwriter.

Wonder

The plaintiff, Lloyd Chiate, claimed Wonder's song, part of the movie soundtrack for "Woman in Red," was taken from a song he co-wrote titled, "I Just Called To Say."

"I knew the truth in my heart all along," said Wonder. "I'm very sorry a lot of people had to spend a lot of precious time in this courtroom. But I do appreciate and respect justice."

Wonder, 39, offered to try to smooth over the dispute by writing a song with Chiate and Lee Garrett, co-author of "I Just Called To Say," and donate the proceeds to charity.

"Then we all really win," Wonder said.

Chiate wasn't present when the jury announced its verdict Thursday. His attorney, Herbert Dodell, said his client was wronged by a star-struck jury and a biased judge.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Soviet beauty queen Anna Gorbunova declared her delight at becoming a "true Christian" after her baptism in a Ukrainian Orthodox church here.

Ms. Gorbunova, the Moscow secretary who became the first Miss USSR last year, said she loved Sydney so much she decided to be baptized Thursday during a promotional trip to Australia.

"I was very nervous in the ceremony; I had goose bumps all over myself," Ms. Gorbunova said through an interpreter.

In the Soviet Union, especially in the period before President Mikhail Gorbachev consolidated power, "there have been too many restrictions concerning the practice of religion," said Ms. Gorbunova's manager, Alexander Djamirze.

Harper

"The week I was fired was the same week that Joan Rivers lost her husband. I thought, 'My God, I'm blessed.' Think of people with real problems, who live with illness, with drive-by shootings in their neighborhoods," Harper told USA Weekend magazine in Sunday's edition.

In her new show, "City," Harper appears opposite her old show, "The Hogan Family." She said she had some fears about becoming a Hollywood pariah when she sued producers of "Hogan" following her dismissal.

"There was definitely a buzz around town: 'Has she gone mad?' If I'd been a young actress ... I might have been destroyed," Harper said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Rooney is expected to return to "60 Minutes" before his three-month suspension is up and perhaps as early as March 4, according to reports published today.

Rooney, David Burke, the president of CBS News, and those close to the suspended commentator have held talks for the past two days discussing his return, according to today's editions of New York Newsday and The Wall Street Journal.

Rooney told the Journal that "there was a chance I could have come back on Sunday," but those plans collapsed. Newsday cited unnamed sources as cautioning that CBS was still figuring how and when to lift the Feb. 8 suspension.

The network suspended Rooney without pay for three months for racial remarks he was quoted as making in The Advocate, a gay magazine based in Los Angeles. Rooney has denied making the remarks.

The possible lifting of the suspension coincides with a slight drop in the ratings of "60 Minutes."

The program has fallen from fifth place among network programs when Rooney last appeared three weeks ago, to 10th place two weeks ago and to last week's 11th place ranking, according to figures compiled by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Burke called Rooney earlier this week and arranged a meeting Wednesday at the CBS News Broadcast Center, Newsday said.

Rooney said that he and Burke "had a very pleasant conversation and he conceded that there was nothing personal. I like him fine." Burke declined to comment on Rooney's situation, the Journal said.

Rooney, in anticipation of an early return, prepared a piece on his civil rights record for this Sunday's edition of "60 Minutes," but it was not scheduled to be aired until at least the following week, according to the reports.

CBS has received 5,133 calls relating to Rooney's suspension; 5,061 supported him, according to a CBS News spokesman.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock 'n' roll pioneer Johnnie Ray suffered a complete liver failure and was in a coma at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, a spokesman said.

Ray, 633, was not expected to live, according to a statement issued late Thursday by Alan Eichler Associates, a public relations firm.

Hospital spokesman Ron Wise refused to say what caused Ray's liver failure or when he was admitted.

Ray's first major record release, "Cry," with "The Little White Cloud That Cried" on the flip side provided him the No. 1 and No. 2 songs in the country in 1950.

With the release of his follow-up record, "Please Mr. Sun" and "Brokenhearted," Ray's songs occupied the top four positions in the charts kept by the entertainment newspaper Variety, a feat listed in the Guinness Book of Records, the Eichler release said.

Ray's songs blended rhythm and blues, country and gospel, helping to create rock 'n' roll.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The city wants "Oh! Calcutta!," Broadway's long-running nude revue, to bare all somewhere else.

Officials filed suit Thursday in Hamilton County Chancery Court to block the showing of "Oh! Calcutta!" at the Tivoli Theater on grounds the musical is obscene and lewd.

"Oh! Calcutta!," the second-longest Broadway musical with 5,959 performances, raised eyebrows and was threatened with banning when it opened in 1969, when nudity on stage and screen was still something of a novelty.

Many critics consider "Oh! Calcutta!" a fairly tame show, but its current six-month tour of more than 90 cities has shown the passions it aroused 20 years ago still linger.

Costs of health care cause major concern

By STEVE EDWARDS

Paying for health care for the elderly is a major concern for most older people and their families, and the question of who files the claims is a concern.

Edwards

Medicare claims for covered services from hospitals, skilled nursing homes, home health agencies or hospices are filed directly by the agency. Patients, however, receive notices of such charges and payments on forms marked "Medicare Hospital, Extended Care of Home Health Benefits." The forms have "This is not a bill" written clearly on them. Medicare often takes a long time to process these claims; therefore, the forms may continue to arrive in the mail months after the services were rendered. If concerns about these notices arise, contact the billing office of the agency where the services were performed or the local Social Security office.

Patients do have to file claims for services covered by Medicare Part B insurance. If assignment has been accepted, the physician's office will file the claim and bill the patient for the remaining 20 percent of the approved charge.

Most doctors do not accept Medicare assignment. In these cases, the patient is billed directly and has to pay the doctor's bill in full, then submit a "Request for Medicare Payment" form. Mail this form to the Medicare insurance carrier in the patient's state. Keep a copy of this form for later reference.

These claims are reimbursed at 80 percent of the Medicare approved charge. Some states have passed legislation making patients responsible for a co-payment of only 20 percent of the Medicare-approved charge in all cases. For more information contact the local Social Security office.

Medicare patients and their families should be prepared for the large volume of paperwork that may be necessary to file and track claims. In some areas, organizations are available to assist older people with their claim forms.

If a disagreement arises on the amount Medicare pays on a claim, or a decision on whether the services received are covered by Medicare, an appeal can be filed. To appeal a Part A coverage decision, contact the local Social Security office to request a review.

If the outcome of the review does not satisfy and the amount of the claim is $100 or more, a formal hearing can be requested. If the results of the hearing are disagreed with and the amount of the claim is $1,000 or more, the case can be appealed in a Federal court. However, all court costs are the responsibility of the person who makes the appeal.

To appeal a Part B coverage decision, ask the local Medicare insurance carrier to review the decision. If the review is disagreed with and the appeal is for $100 or more, a hearing by the Medicare agency which handled the claim may be requested. The decision made by the hearing officer is final.

Many communities have advocacy and legal service organizations to assist Medicare patients and their relatives with the appeals process. For more information on these agencies, contact the United Way in that city.

Delegates sought for Texas White House Conference on Aging

From Staff Reports

An executive committe recently was developed in Austin to plan the Texas White House Conference on Aging (TWCOA).

"The Texas White House Conference on Aging will be the last step in a process to take the concerns of older Texans to the President and the Congress for action," said TWHCOA committee chairperson James Roberts of Andrews.

"The first step will be a statewide delegate application process and local forums to determine the concerns of older Texans," Roberts said.

The selection process will be conducted by the Texas Department on Aging's 28 area agencies on aging. There is no age limitation for a person to be elegible to participate, but certain demographic guidelines, including ethnic representation, will be considered. Over 400 delegates will come to Austin when the Texas White House Conference meets Oct. 17-19 to develop the Texas platform. "We want this to be a real grassroots process," Roberts said.

It is uncertain exactly when the White House Conference on Aging will convene in Washington, D.C. The Bush Administration has proposed a budget of $1 million to finance the conference in 1991. If this is approved, the national conference could be as early as next spring. "Regardless of when the national conference is held, we believe Texas should be ready as soon as possible," Roberts said.

Previous White House Conferences, which have been every 10 years since 1961, have led to the development of such national policies and Medicare and Medicaid.

Roberts and other members of the committee predict this conference will address such important issues as long-term care, housing, medical costs (including prescription drugs) and the future of the Social Security system.

Persons interested in applying to be a delegate to the Texas White House Conference on Aging should contact Bill Smith of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at 563-1061 ext. 31, 32 or 33 to obtain information about application forms.

The executive committee in charge of the delegate selection committee will meet in Austin March 14. The selection committee for delegates to attend the Texas White House Conference will be looking for a good cross-section of delegates, according to Smith.

Senior's Spring Fling scheduled

Girls arrive for regional

From Staff Reports

The Region I girls basketball playoff tournament begins at 6 p.m. today at Chaparral Center with two attractive games from four teams fighting for one Austin Final Four berth.

Amarillo Tascosa will face Mansfield at 6 p.m. while Lubbock Monterey will tangle with Lewisville at 7:45 p.m.

Monterey owns a 30-1 record while Lewisville is 29-2 and both are highly regarded in the state. Most feel the winner of this game will have the inside track to Austin. The two Friday winners will square off at 11 a.m. Saturday for the championship final.

Monterey's only loss this year has been to Class 4A power Levelland while Lewisville has lost only twice, both times to unbeaten and defending state champion Duncanville.

Tascosa will carry a 20-12 record into the tournament and that is the worst mark of the Region I survivors, but the Lady Rebels ripped off 83 points in an area victory over El Paso Del Valle at Chaparral Center Tuesday to show that they may be ready for the hunt.

Mansfield, 25-5 on the year, got here with a 66-35 win over Denton Tuesday while Lewisville beat Arlington Sam Houston by a 68-50 margin.

Monterey defeated El Paso Hanks 67-45 Tuesday, also at the Chap, and coach Dale Pectol knows the semifinal meeting with Lewisville is a crucial game.

"We scouted their victory against Arlington Sam Houston Tuesday and I saw them play last week," said Pectol, "and they are a very good team. We will have to play much better than we did Tuesday against Hanks in order to win. But at least, we are in position to take a crack at it. This is where you want to be at this time of year."

Tascosa had eight players to score seven or more points against Del Valle Tuesday, showing good balance. Christina Uzzolino led the way with 14 points. Keisha Chatman and Angie Wilson are also consistent scorers.

Tim Owens of Midland College looks on as Elgin Leslie (32) of Clarendon College hauls down a rebound in MC's home closer Thursday night at the Chaparral Center.

Chaps win over Dogs

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland College Chaparrals completed their 1989-90 home schedule Monday night with another win over another second-division Western Junior College Athletic Conference team.

It was the second time in 10 days that the Chaps failed to crank it and switch to high gear against a team one would expected to be on the receiving end of a ruthless Chaparral lashing.

A blowout wasn't to be had on this night, but neither should gift horses be looked in the mouth.

New Mexico Military hung tight against MC last Monday, and Thursday night, the Clarendon College Bulldogs closed to within six with just nine seconds left, finally succumbing to the Chaps, 95-87, thanks in part to clutch MC free throws.

The Chaps, 26-of-35 from the line for 74 percent, hit 7-of-9 free throws in the last 90 seconds to ensure the win.

MC, evening its conference record at 7-7 and 17-12 overall, broke out of its standard zone defense in the second half, and the Bulldogs cut down their turnovers during the final 20 minutes to make a game out of it.

Baseball owners, players back on speaking terms

"I'm comfortable with where we are," Commissioner Fay Vincent said after Thursday's labor talks took a positive turn. "I'd be more comfortable if we had an agreement."

There's still no settlement on Day 9 of the spring-training lockout and exhibition games are scheduled to start Thursday.

The sides were set to meet again today after the union postponed a planned cross-country trip to brief players. And, for the first time, there was speculation the sides could soon reach an agreement.

"I think the (owners) made a very significant decision to solve this in the near term," Vincent said.

"I'm as confused about the way things have been changing as I'm sure you are," union chief Donald Fehr said. "They've come a substantial way; there's a long way to go."

"I didn't think that yesterday was the end of the world," management negotiator Chuck O'Connor said, "but I'm glad the atmosphere is perceived to be better."

It got that way because the owners dramatically altered their proposals after Wednesday's plan — a product of management hard-liners trying to assert themselves — drew an angry response from the players.

— Contributions to the benefit plan, currently $39 million, would rise to $42.6 million the first year, $43.9 million the second year, $45.4 million the third year and $47.3 million the fourth year.

— Players could become free agents twice within five years if their teams do not offer salary arbitration by November.

The new proposal, however, did not directly address the players' primary demand: lowering from three years to two the eligibility period for salary arbitration.

"I, for one, am not doing cartwheels over this proposal," said Baltimore pitcher Jeff Ballard, a two-year veteran. "It doesn't address the problems of zero-to-three players."

"It's a step in the right direction," Fehr said. "What we have to do tonight is weigh the circumstances and see if we can come back with a response tomorrow."

The sides have met 27 times, but never on a Saturday or Sunday. Vincent, however, said he is prepared for sessions throughout the weekend.

Fehr said the talks will break by Monday night, when he is scheduled to leave for a union executive board meeting in Phoenix the following day.

Even if there is a quick fix, there is little chance the exhibition season could start on time. Four games are scheduled Thursday, including the Oakland-San Francisco World Series rematch to benefit earthquake victims.

From Staff Reports

WACO — Midland Christian's girls basketball team advanced to the Texas Association of Private Schools Class A state championship game Saturday with a 50-34 win over Heritage Christian in semifinal action Thursday at Baylor's Ferrell Sports Center.

All-state Lady Mustang Christy Boles paced the Midland Christian with 30 points in the win, and Kim Jackson, also an all-state selection, scored 13.

Midland Christian led by only two points (14-12) after the first quarter, but turned on the defensive pressure in the last three periods, holding Heritage to single digits in each of the final three quarters.

King sues new champ

King hit the conqueror of Mike Tyson with a breach of contract on Thursday, the day after hotel-casino mogul Steve Wynn filed a suit at Las Vegas to have King's contract with Douglas voided.

Douglas, who won the title on a shocking 10th-round knockout of Tyson on Feb. 11 at Tokyo, has said he will not fight for King and has signed a conditional contract with Wynn's Mirage Hotel in Las Vegas for two fights. The first one probably would be against Evander Holyfield in September. Douglas report-

Rankin bedevils Grady

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Sometimes it's hard for those used to small gyms to keep their composure in a larger facility come playoff time.

Rankin post Michael Ramos showed that the cavernous Chaparral Center was no hindrance to his game. The six-foot senior finished with 20 points and nine rebounds to lead the Red Devils to an 83-60 bi-district win over the Grady Wildcats in Class A playoff action Thursday.

Rankin, 20-2, will face the Fort Hancock-Fort Davis winner in second-round playoff action at a site and time yet to be determined. Fort Hancock and Fort Davis square off tonight in Alpine.

Ramos, who made nine of 14 from the field, helped stake the Devils to a 45-20 halftime lead with 10 points before the intermission mostly on tip-ins and layups.

He said the Red Devils got a lift from playing in the 5,500-seat Chap Center.

Don't tell James Watson that. Rankin's standout wing made only four of 24 shots from the floor after averaging about 20 points a game during the regular season. Watson did contribute nine rebounds, six steals and five assists to the Red Devil cause, however, and the junior helped set up Ramos' big night with several crisp passes underneath.

Even though the Devils never trailed, there were some anxious moments, especially after Grady's Scott Glaze canned a 40-footer at the buzzer to cut Rankin's lead to 54-45 at the end of the third quarter.

Glaze scored 10 of his game-high 26 points to spur a 25-10 Wildcat run after the intermission, but Rankin scored the first six points of the fourth quarter to regain control. Ramos contributed two baskets to that Red Devil spurt.

"We thought we had it won," junior Francisco Gonzales said.

Beaver gnaws away at record book

Associated Press

Senior guard Gary Payton scored 58 points Thursday night, breaking game and career records, as the No. 17 Beavers defeated Southern Cal 98-94 in overtime.

"Everybody was struggling and coach (Jim Anderson) decided to give me the ball more," said Payton, who made 22 of 38 shots. "I was fortunate I was on tonight. I didn't mean to do all that. It just happened. Right now we're just trying to win the Pac-10 title."

Elsewhere, Lionel Simmons scored 27 points to pass the 3,000 mark and move into fourth place on the NCAA career list as No. 14 La Salle won its 16th straight game, 100-60 over Manhattan.

Oregon State (20-4, 13-2 Pac-10) trailed by 22 points in the first half but Payton provided the offensive punch as the Beavers stormed back in the second half. He scored Oregon State's first eight points in overtime and also had six rebounds and four steals.

Payton has 2,080 career points, surpassing the 2,035 that Steve Johnson scored from 1977 to 1981. Payton's 58 was the second-highest total in Pac-10 history, surpassed only by the 61 scored by UCLA's Lew Alcindor against Washington State in 1967.

No. 4 UNLV 99, Cal-Irvine 77

Anderson Hunt scored 25 points, Larry Johnson 23 and David Butler 20 to lead the Runnin' Rebels to their ninth straight victory. UNLV (23-4, 14-1 Big West) saw a 49-34 halftime lead shrink to 60-52 with 13:33 remaining. But Cal-Irvine got no closer and the Rebels pulled away to lead by 23.

Virginia 73, No. 8 Georgia Tech 71

For the second time this season, unranked Virginia knocked off Georgia Tech, this time on Bryant Stith's short jumper at the buzzer. Neither team ever led by more than five points and there were 14 ties and 21 lead changes.

Stith led Virginia with 19 points, Kenny Turner had 17 and Crotty 14. Oliver had 23 and freshman Kenny Anderson 21 for the Yellow Jackets, whose leading scorer, Dennis Scott, made only three of 16 shots and finished with 11 points.

No. 14 La Salle 100, Manhattan 60

Simmons ended the game's only suspense with 12:44 remaining in the first half, hitting the front end of a two-shot foul to become the fifth Division I player to score 3,000 points.

Simmons, who has a career total of 3,024 points, passed Hersey Hawkins' 3,008 with his last basket of the first half, a 3-pointer with 1:51 remaining to cap a 9-1 burst and give La Salle (24-1, 14-0 Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference) a 44-28 lead.

No. 18 Minnesota 68, Wisconsin 67

Jim Shikenjanski scored Minnesota's last five points, including three on free throws in the final 27 seconds. Wisconsin trailed 68-63 but freshman Larry Hisle Jr. made a 3-point basket with 12 seconds left and then hit a free throw with no time remaining to pull the Badgers within one point. But Hisle, who scored 12 points, missed a second free throw that would have sent the game into overtime.

Richard Coffey had 14 points and a season-high 15 rebounds for Minnesota (18-6, 9-5 Big Ten). Willie Burton led Minnesota with 17 points and Willie Simms had 21 for Wisconsin. The Badgers' leading scorer, Danny Jones, was held to four.

No. 19 Xavier, Ohio 74, Detroit 62

Tyrone Hill scored 23 points and Xavier held Detroit scoreless for nearly 10 minutes down the stretch while reeling off 18 consecutive points. Derek Strong added 18 points for Xavier (22-2, 11-1), which won its 10th straight and clinched its third regular-season Midwestern Collegiate Conference championship in five years.

No. 24 New Mexico St. 103, Utah St. 84

James Anderson scored 17 points and Michael New had 14 points and 14 rebounds as six New Mexico State players scored in double figures.

Swimmers fare well

Locals prepare for West Texas meet

From Staff Reports

The City of Midland Swim Team has been busy this past week.

COM "A" team swimmers competed in the Alamo Area Aquatics meet in San Antonio; "B" teamers swam in the Abilene "ABC" Invitational at the Redbud YMCA in Abilene; and "C" teamers swam in the West Texas "C" championships at Pecos.

COM won both the "B" and "C" team meets, while the "A" meet was not scored.

The team will be off this week, but will seek their ninth straight West Texas Championships victory at the Mabee Swim Center. This will be the final home meet of the season for most Midland swimmers, and the last meet before the state championships in Dallas next month.

King's suit claims he had an agreement with Douglas "that King would promote future Douglas bouts." It did not state how many, but King has said he has options for two Douglas fights.

The Mirage and Golden Nugget Inc., the parent company of the $640 million hotel-casino, also were named in the suit as interfering with King's contract with Douglas.

In a brief announcement Wednesday, the Mirage said it had entered into a "conditional contract with Douglas predicated on his ability to enter such an agreement."

By making a conditional deal with the Mirage, Douglas reneged on his contract with King, according to King's suit.

Douglas and his manager, John Johnson, have said they will not fight for King because of his actions following Douglas' win over Tyson. They charge King tried to overturn the result by claiming Douglas got a long count after being knocked down in the eighth round. By protesting, King said, he was merely trying to set up an immediate rematch between Douglas and Tyson.

Lawyers for The Mirage filed suit in district court in Las Vegas on Wednesday. In the suit, the hotel claims King breached the contract by promoting only three of four planned fights for Douglas and for not acting in good faith by disputing Douglas' win over Tyson.

The suit also contends Douglas is protected by a Nevada State Athletic Commission regulation that prohibits a promoter from having multiple options on a boxer's future fights.

Lewisville also has a star scorer in 5-11 senior Mechelle Chambers, who set a school record of 40 points in a game this year.

Monterey has four lethal threats in Amber Simpson, Janice Farris, Diana Kersey and Tabitha Schumake. Farris is averaging 19 points per game, but has been over 20 in both playoff games. Simpson scored 20 Tuesday against Hanks and Schumake had 19. Kersey has been up and down in the playoffs with 17 in one game and two in the next. She is averaging 17 points per outing.

Ewing hot in Knick win

Associated Press

While they were heaping praise on Patrick Ewing, the New York Knicks' center was looking for someone else to take the bows.

"Charles had 19 rebounds. Whew!" Ewing said after glancing at a statistical rendering of the job turned in by Charles Oakley in New York's 119-110 victory Thursday night over the Washington Bullets.

"I'm just trying to help this team win," Ewing said of his second straight 41-point performance. "I was just banging those guys down, post them up deep in the lane. It was effective at times."

"I'll tell you, we didn't go to him that much," Jackson said. "He created his own points. We did not go to him early, but did go to him late.

"That's when he got big on the backboards. ... I thought he was dominating."

Bucks 109, Mavericks 97

Ricky Pierce scored 33 points and Milwaukee used a late 20-3 surge to end a five-game winning streak by Dallas.

Brad Lohaus added 18 points and Greg Anderson and Jay Humphries 16 apiece for the Bucks. Roy Tarpley scored 26 points to tie a season high and Rolando Blackman and Derek Harper added 18 apiece for Dallas, which also had won 12 of its previous 14 games.

Suns 104, Kings 98

Tom Chambers hit a 12-footer with 36 seconds remaining to break a tie at 98, and Phoenix closed it out with four free throws in the last 15 seconds.

Jazz 116, Clippers 102

Karl Malone scored 35 points and Darrell Griffith 12 of his 14 on 3-pointers, including two in the final 71 seconds, as Utah won its fourth straight game.

CHAPS

The Bulldogs' main first-half downfall was turnovers, of which there were 16, several of which were passes out of bounds.

"(Our passes) were going into the crowd," Clarendon head coach Joe Mondragon said. "The crowd paid for their tickets so I thought we'd let 'em play a little.

The game appeared to be almost in slow-motion during the first 10 minutes as MC held a 22-20 lead. But the Chaps then went on a 30-12 burst to close with the 20-point halftime lead.

The two teams play again Saturday at 8 p.m. in Clarendon, a game which was originally scheduled for January 22. A Christmas week cold snap in the Panhandle caused a water pipe to burst at Clarendon's facility, flooded the gym, ruined the floor, and postponed Clarendon's home slate for three weeks, including the MC game.

"You come down here and you're going to give (MC) a 12, 15 point advantage," Mondragon said. "I'm not saying we're going to win (Saturday), even though I feel we can. But I'm not going to give Midland incentive by saying we can."

Franklin added "I told our guys that this game gave (Clarendon) hope for Saturday. If we would've drilled them, they wouldn't be ready for us up there."

CHAP NOTES: The Bulldogs play four games in five days because of the postponements. Thursday's loss will be followed by a game tonight in Clarendon, the Chaps Saturday, and a game Monday night ... Clarendon fell to 1-9 with the loss, 5-14 overall ... The win was the 12th straight for the Chaps over Clarendon ... MC is idle next Monday and will close out the 1989-90 season with a road game at Frank Phillips College ... In other action Thursday, South Plains defeated Odessa at the OC Sports Center, 51-49.

Hyde named Engineer of the Year

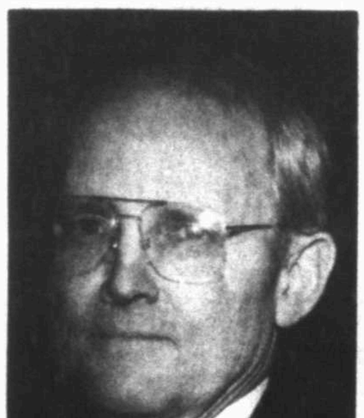
Sen. Bill Ratliff speaks to group

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

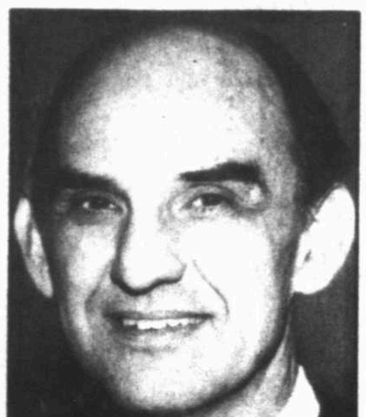
Tom Hyde, PhD, chairman of the Department of Engineering at the University of Texas Permian Basin was named "Engineer of the Year" Thursday at the annual banquet of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

Hyde, a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, was cited for his many contributions to professional engineering groups in the Permian Basin and for his efforts in bringing a Master's degree program in Electrical Engineering to West Texas and for his ongoing efforts to bring a national energy research to the area.

In addition to operating his own engineering consulting firm, Hyde has also served as a director of the Permian Basin Oil Show and the Permian Basin Energy Library.



Ratliff



Hyde

A varsity football player for Navy, Hyde received his M.S. degree in Electrical Engineering and his PhD. in Systems Engineering from the University of Pennsylvania.

Commenting on efforts to bring a national energy research center to the Permian Basin, Hyde said the Department of Energy was preparing to spend $500 million over the next 15 years for research of eight major oil reservoirs in the United States to determine the most effective means of producing mature reservoirs.

"Four of those reservoirs are in the Permian Basin, two in East Texas and two in Oklahoma. I believe the Permian Basin should be the leader in developing recovery research."

Hyde said it was critical that engineering continue to be supported and promoted as a career, because in the ranks were shrinking. "In the next few years America will have 450,000 fewer scientists and 295,000 fewer engineers."

At the same time, Texas State Senator Bill Ratliff, who was keynote speaker at the banquet, called on engineers to become involved in the affairs of the world, calling engineers natural "problem solvers."

Rebound

The Tokyo stock market rebounded slightly on Thursday, a day after its third-largest daily loss in history, but Japanese investors still seemed skittish and wondered whether another plunge could be on the way.

The Nikkei average of 225 stocks rose by 92.51 yen, to 35,826.84, after wild fluctuations all day that took the market up and down by more than 1,000 yen.

Currey

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound bus drivers say they'll walk off the job when their contract expires March 1, but the company already has begun hiring replacements and says it will operate a full schedule by the end of next month.

The Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, which represents 6,300 drivers and 3,075 office and maintenance workers, notified the company Thursday of its decision to go on strike at 12:01 a.m. March 2, Greyhound Lines Inc. spokesman George Gravley said.

No talks in the dispute are currently scheduled, Gravley said. Union officials did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

The two sides met together in Phoenix last Friday and Monday and then held separate meetings with a federal mediator Tuesday, but no agreement could be reached, Gravley said.

The company and union remain far apart, with Greyhound offering a three-year deal worth about $63 million. Gravely said the union initially had sought a pact valued at $561 million, but reduced that to $475 million.

Union membership previously had approved a strike, and Greyhound responded by advertising for permanent replacements. "We have 600 people in school ... and are still taking applications," Gravley said.

"We will ... operate as many schedules as possible on March 2, based on the number of employees who stay on the job and the number of replacements available to us," Greyhound Chairman Fred G. Currey said. "We will build back the service as additional workers become available and as routes are subcontracted.

"We expect to be serving all points on our system before the end of March."

Greyhound says its drivers are the top paid in the industry, "except for one or two small ones in the Northeast," and its offer would boost the average of its 1,500 highest paid drivers from $33,218 last year to $40,725 by 1990.

"It is an excellent offer from a company that lost $20 million over the last three years and it is all this company can afford," Currey said.

"The union has not disputed the fact that we cannot afford to pay more than we have offered," he said. "Instead, union leaders have told us repeatedly that an employer's ability to pay is 'irrelevant.'"

Greyhound said it rejected union suggestions the fares be raised 10 percent to cover the increased cost of their proposal.

Currey led the investment group that paid Phoenix-based Greyhound Corp. $350 million for its bus system in March 1987 and then bought Dallas-based Trailways Lines Inc., the nation's largest Trailways system, four months later for $80 million.

The company lost $2.58 million in 1987 and $17.39 million in 1988, and expects to report a small profit for 1989, about $730,000 on revenues of approximately $1 billion.

Greyhound says its 3,949 buses serve 9,500 locations, and are the only public transportation available in about 9,000 of those areas.

AUSTIN (SWN) — Clint Hackney, Democrat for Railroad Commissioner, called for the random drug testing of truck drivers on Texas highways and roads during a campaign tour of the state.

"I believe that only random and spot testing can realistically make our roads safer for truck drivers and the general public. It is unfortunate but necessary and the only real way to curb the abuse of drugs in the industry. In keeping with my commitment to making Texas the safest state for the transportation of hazardous materials, I support random testing and will work with the legislature during the next session to increase the manpower at the Department of Public Safety to carry out these tests," commented Hackney.

Hackney cited a new National Transportation Safety Board study of fatal truck accidents conducted from October 1987 to September 1988. The survey was taken in eight states, not including Texas.

"These tests were performed on drivers who were killed. That's too little too late. Clint Hackney will test drivers before they get behind the wheel for what could be a last fatal trip down the highway.

"Even though fatigue was discovered to be the number one factor contributing to these accidents, one third of the drivers tested positive for alcohol and drugs. Even more disturbing was the finding that of those fatally injured drivers with a prior history of drug or alcohol

Eastern Europe opening drives up interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investors flocking to take part in tremendous investment opportunities in Eastern Europe are driving up long-term interest rates around the world, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan says.

However, the central bank chairman said the trend probably won't continue.

Greenspan, presenting the central bank's semiannual report to Congress on Thursday, said money is flowing to nations emerging from 40 years of communist rule because "the potential for growth is extraordinary."

The resulting competition is driving up interest rates in the United States and other countries. Long-term rates started heading up in early January, with the 30-year U.S. Treasury bond hitting a nine-month high of 8.66 percent on Tuesday.

"This is an extraordinary change in the nature of world savings and investment and I don't think it has any exact historical precedent," he said.

But Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee rates probably would not continue rising unless some currently unknown need for investment is revealed.

"There is a very general knowledge of the size of the potential investment and I would suspect that most of the information about this is already in the markets. Hence, unless something fundamentally new occurs ... I'm not that concerned that interest rates would just continue up," he said.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., chairman of the committee, said that by relying on foreigners to help finance trade and federal budget deficits, the United States is in danger of losing control over domestic interest rates and of its economy in general.

Eastern, Continental merger not planned

DENVER (AP) — Merging Continental Airlines with bankrupt sister carrier Eastern Airlines makes sense, but is not planned in the foreseeable future, says Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo.

"We have no near-term plans for a merger," Lorenzo said Thursday, during a series of state-of-the-airline addresses to an estimated 1,500 Continental employees at Stapleton International Airport. However, he conceded that "today a merger makes much more sense than it did two years ago."

The Houston-based airline employs nearly 7,000 people in Denver, its third largest hub. Lorenzo said operations at Stapleton probably have stabilized following heavy cutbacks in flights during the past three years.

Continental suffered millions of dollars in losses with the mergers of Frontier Airlines, People Express and New York Air in 1987.

If Eastern's reorganization agreement falters, merger or sale remains the most likely option for Eastern, according to analysts.

"Liquidation is absolutely not an alternative," Lorenzo said, in an interview with The Denver Post, between meetings with employees. "There's no possibility that I can predict; it makes no sense to any of Eastern's creditors."

Meanwhile, on the East Coast, a tentative agreement was reached between Eastern and its unsecured creditors on a plan that could bring the Miami-based carrier out of bankruptcy in June or July.

That pact calls for part of Eastern's debt to unsecured creditors to be paid off with notes issued or guaranteed by Continental, The New York Times said in today's editions.

Eastern has been mired in Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy proceedings since last March. Once Eastern emerges from bankruptcy, parent firm Texas Air would be free to do what it likes with Eastern's employees, aircraft and hub operations.

A merger could make sense for Continental, conceded the head of the nation's largest airline company. Lorenzo cited Eastern's East Coast presence at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta, Washington Dulles and La Guardia Airport in New York as attractive additions to the Continental system. Continental's major domestic hubs now are Houston, Newark, N.J., Denver and Cleveland.

"The employees today are very similar and we have managements that have worked together, some of them at both companies," Lorenzo said.

"The other side of the coin is that mergers do provide some dislocation and in the near-term we want to con-

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices retreated this morning after showing some strength Thursday.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, April contracts for West Texas Intermediate were down 11 cents to $21.64 in midmorning trading.

Analysts said Wednesday's American Petroleum Institute report showing a 3.7 million barrel drop in crude oil stocks to 344.9 million barrels last week helped firm front-month prices.

Otherwise, the April contract would have declined as the market focuses on refinery mainentance slowdowns scheduled for March and April which will reduce refiners' short-term demand for raw oil.

May crude oil closed 13 cents higher at $21.73 and June rose 19 cents to $21.59.

Hill said the narrow spread between the April and May contracts suggests the possibility that the April contract will go lower in coming days.

Refined products futures also rose despite the API data that showed a rise in inventories. March unleaded gasoline increased 0.84 cent to 60.25 cents a gallon, April advanced 0.89 cent to 61.09 cents and May closed 0.86 cent higher at 64.94 cents.

No. 2 heating oil for March delivery gained 0.62 cent to 58.15 cents a gallon, April edged up 0.23 cent to 56.98 cents and May added 0.36 cent to 55.96 cents.

Analysts said cold weather helped lift heating oil prices despite the API data.The API report, released after the close of trading Wednesday, showed that gasoline stocks rose 2.1 million barrels to 240 million barrels and distillate inventories increased 2.6 million barrels to 119.3 million barrels.

Dollar strong against Japanese Yen

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was higher against other major currencies in moderately active trading in Europe late this morning, but traders said the U.S. currency was expected to remain in a narrow range.

Gold prices fell.

The main feature of the foreign exchange market was that the Bank of Japan moved twice to support the yen in Europe through the sale of dollars, selling the dollar at 147 yen, market sources said.

Traders said it appeared the Bank of Japan was trying to force the dollar to hold at or move below 147 yen and might intervene directly or through other central banks throughout the day.

The yen support in Europe follows dollar sales by the Bank of Japan in Tokyo earlier in the day, dealers said.

Reports that Japan's Ministry of Finance has come out against a further rise in the country's discount rate against the judgment of the Bank of Japan had led to dollar buying by investors throughout the Asian day.

In Tokyo, the dollar was up strongly against the Japanese yen, closing at 146.47 yen, up 1.24 yen from Thursday's close. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 147.05 yen.

But traders said the dollar ran into strong resistance as profit-taking set in.

In London, the dollar traded at $1.7081, compared with $1.7145 late Thursday.

Gold opened at $414.50 in London and by midmorning, London's major gold dealers fixed a recommend price of $415 a troy ounce, down from $417.45 bid late Thursday.

Late sell-off sends stocks lower

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed down 8.79 to 2,574.77. At midday it had been up as much as 30 points.

Advancing issues nearly matched declining issues in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 715 up, 753 down and 508 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 184.32 million shares, up from 159.24 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 214.69 million shares.

UAL considers employee buyout

CHICAGO (AP) — UAL Corp. Chairman Stephen Wolf said he is willing to consider an employee buyout proposal despite reports he has turned against the plan because it may include dumping him.

Also Thursday, UAL board members authorized releasing confidential financial information to the three United Airlines labor unions that are developing a proposal for employee control of United's parent company.

"The entire board stands ready to receive a fair and financed offer from the employee groups and will given any such offer prompt consideration," Wolf said a statement released after a UAL board meeting.

Exxon nears Alaskan spill settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department and Exxon Corp. are near agreement on settling possible criminal charges over last year's massive Alaska oil spill, several sources said.

But Alaska officials said late Thursday they would not endorse a tentative agreement outlined by the Justice Department and hoped improvements can still be made that would make it acceptable to the state.

Lawmaker doubts early vote on schools

AUSTIN (AP) — A spokesman for House Speaker Gib Lewis disagreed with a key state lawmaker and a business spokesman who said they don't expect the House to vote on school finance reform before the April 10 runoff elections.

"We categorically deny that is the case. The speaker understands the gravity of the issues to be addressed," Lewis spokesman Tim Conger said Thursday.

Rep. Ric Williamson — vice-chairman of the budget-writing Appropriations Committee and a member of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee — said, "I wouldn't expect that (an early vote), just based on my understanding of where the members are — or where they aren't."

There is no consensus on the best way to address a Texas Supreme Court ruling that the $11 billion-a-year school finance system is unconstitutional, said Williamson, D-Weatherford. Lawmakers will tackle the issue in a 30-day special session beginning Tuesday.

If lawmakers still haven't reached some consensus before the March 13 primary elections and the April 10 run-offs — and if many are involved in runoff elections — Williamson said he wouldn't expect the issue to be put before the full House by then.

Bill Allaway, executive vice president of the business-oriented Texas Association of Taxpayers, said, "The report is that there will be no hard votes until after the runoff election."

The Supreme Court found glaring disparities between property-poor and rich districts and has given the state until May 1 to reform the system, which relies on a combination of local property taxes and state aid. The elections make it politically sensitive to talk about a possible tax increase to help make the system constitutional.

Allaway said Williamson told a group in a speech last week that Lewis had assured the lawmaker there wouldn't be any votes on controversial issues before April 10. But Williamson said he was only giving his opinion, and that he hadn't spoken to Lewis or the speaker's staff about the matter.

"I'm sure Bill thought that's what he heard me say. I'm equally sure that's not what I said," Williamson said. "It's ludicrous to think Gib would even discuss that kind of a thing with anybody."

Conger said the staffs of Lewis, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Gov. Bill Clements are working hard on the school finance problem.

"This is perhaps the most important thing the Legislature is going to do for the next 50 years. Those members who do have opponents in the primary are going to have to recognize that and face those hard votes and be willing to do what is right," he said.

Reward offered for facts about inspector's death

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Customs Commissioner Carol B. Hallett offered a $50,000 reward for information in the death of a Customs inspector who was dragged 300 yards by a vehicle trying to escape a border crossing in El Paso.

The National Treasury Employees Union, meanwhile, claimed the death of Timothy C. McCaghren was due to "wanton disregard by the agency for the safety of its employees."

NTEU President Robert M. Tobias said McCaghren was the second inspector to be injured this week under similar circumstances at the bridge.

"There have been eight to 10 like incidents over the past year. It is outrageous," Tobias said Thursday.

He said he was calling on Congress and the Bush administration to "demand that Customs management immediately meet union demands for employee safety."

Ms. Hallett said the $50,000 reward would be given for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for McCaghren's death.

"The death of Inspector Tim McCaghren reminds us of the risk Customs officers face everyday in an occupation we tend to think of as routine, but which has all too often proven to be just the opposite," Ms. Hallett said.

She said 34 other Customs officers have also died in the line of duty this century.

The El Paso Police Department and special agents of the Custom Service's Office of Internal Affairs are investigating the death. Customs officials said investigators are searching for a suspect who is believed to be the driver of the vehicle that dragged the inspector and caused his fatal injuries.

McCaghren had been with Customs since November 1988.

Tobias said the NTEU has been demanding increased staff and safety measures for two years.

"The Reagan administration kept promising a new bridge with modern facilities, but like many other promises, these failed to materialize," he said. "The Ysleta facility is one of the worst examples of understaffing and safety violations in the service."

Ms. Hallett told the Senate Finance Committee Thursday that the Customs Service would be sending 100 additional officers to the Texas-Mexico border, including 50 for El Paso.

A memorial service for McCaghren is scheduled for today at Fort Bliss, near El Paso. Burial will be Tuesday in Greers Ferry, Ark.

AUSTIN (AP) — About 30 of Texas' toughest convicts have ended a three-day hunger strike in protest of what famed inmate David Ruiz called "sadistic, savage torture and dehumanizing mistreatment" of inmates suspected of being gang members at the state's model prison near Palestine, officials said.

In a related development, Ruiz and 34 other inmates filed a legal complaint against the prison system assailing private attorneys who have represented them in a landmark prison-reform case. The complaint lists Ruiz as lead plaintiff.

Ruiz accused the attorneys of selling out inmates by allowing the state to mistreat those in maximum-security "administrative segregation" cells. He also said the attorneys let the state disregard reforms ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Ruiz filed a lawsuit 18 years ago that set in motion many far-reaching changes in the 40,000-inmate system including a series of anti-crowding agreements and other court orders approved by Justice.

Ruiz contended that he and other inmates at the Michael Unit were improperly classified as gang members to allow their indefinite confinement under the harsh conditions of administrative segregation.

Prison spokesman David Nunnelee said Texas Department of Criminal Justice officials had no immediate comment on Ruiz's motion, but confirmed that the hunger strike involved 32 inmates, including Ruiz.

Stormie taken off respirator

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After being taken off a respirator, the world's first recipient of a heart-liver transplant seemed anxious to start her recovery, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Stormie Jones, 12, of White Settlement, Texas, was in critical but stable condition and breathing on her own Thursday, one day after doctors stopped bleeding from her second transplanted liver.

"She's not a kid who likes to sit still. You can tell she really wants to get around," said Lynn McMahon, spokeswoman for Children's Hospital.

"It's going to take her awhile to gain strength to actually converse," Ms. McMahon said. "She can be understood, though, and she supplements that by writing notes."

Doctors are optimistic about her chances for recovery, and say they'll monitor how Stormie's second transplanted liver is functioning. Ms. McMahon said the girl should start to regain strength soon.

SSC consortium chosen

WASHINGTON AP) — The Energy Department on Thursday chose a three-firm consortium to design and build the super collider in what officials described as the first step of the decade toward construction of the world's largest scientific instrument.

The consortium, led by the firm of Parsons Brinckerhoff Quade & Douglas Inc. of New York City, must still negotiate details of the $1 billion contract. Also on the team are Morrison Knudsen Corp. of Boise, Idaho, and CRSS Inc. of Houston, officials said.

Chosen from three finalist teams of firms, the consortium would be the architect, engineer and construction manager for the high-energy physics particle accelerator and laboratory to be built south of Dallas in Ellis County.

DOE said it will take about 8½ years to design, engineer and built the facilities at the SSC, which will include more than 60 miles of tunnels, four underground halls, and campus complexes on the east and west sides of the ring.

Said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas: "I think it's another tangible sign that we're moving forward. This is another milestone in the project."

Greyhound drivers to strike

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound bus drivers say they'll walk off the job when their contract expires next week, but the company already has begun hiring replacements and says it will operate a full schedule by the end of next month.

The Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, which represents 6,300 drivers and 3,075 office and maintenance workers, notified the company Thursday of its decision to go on strike at 12:01 a.m. March 2, Greyhound Lines Inc. spokesman George Gravley said.

Richards says Mattox planted 'wetback' story'

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards again is accusing opponent Jim Mattox of inciting a controversy over an allegation that she made an ethnic slur — this one 14 years ago.

On Thursday, a Hispanic-oriented newspaper alleged in an article that Ms. Richards referred to undocumented workers as "wetbacks" in a speech written in 1976 during her successful campaign for Travis County commissioner.

Ms. Richards, the state treasurer, denied that she wrote the sentence containing the term and accused Mattox, the state attorney general, of planting the story.

But Mattox press secretary Kelly Fero denied the charge.

"We did not plant this story with anybody. We know nothing about this story. And that's all we have to say about it," Fero said.

Recent polls have shown Ms. Richards leading the Democratic contenders in the March 13 primary and Mattox running third behind former Gov. Mark White.

Ernesto Fraga, publisher of Tiempo, the Waco-based weekly that ran the article, said in a phone interview that he printed the story to show his belief "that she's made these types of gaffes in the past."

Fraga said he was referring to a debate in Houston earlier this month, when Ms. Richards appeared to say, "No legislator, no judge and no bureaucrat has any business in determining whether a white woman has an abortion or not."

Both Mattox and White criticized her for the remark, but Ms. Richards has insisted she was misunderstood during the debate, and that she said "why a woman" not "white woman."

Fraga made available to the AP a facsimile copy of the two-page, handwritten statement on which he based his article but declined to say how he had obtained it. Above the text is what appears to be Ms. Richards' letterhead.

A sentence in the speech text said: "If it takes a man to hire non-union labor, cross picket lines and work wetbacks then I say thank god for a woman or anyone else who is willing to take over."

Shown a copy of the Tiempo story and its reproduction of two sentences from the handwritten text, Ms. Richards said that the opening sentence of the text was her handwriting, but that the sentence containing the word "wetbacks" was not hers.

"This does not look anything like my handwriting here," she said, referring to the "wetbacks" sentence. "God knows what that is."

Ms. Richards added, "I can't tell you any more than what you can see here, that there are obviously two handwritings and that Jim Mattox's supporters put that out."

Because of the apparent differences in handwriting through the text, The AP contacted a California handwriting expert, who testifies as an expert witness in forgery and fraud trials.

Ann Mahony of San Francisco, said she couldn't be certain that the same person wrote the entire letter.

She theorized that the letter writer could have been interrupted and then returned later to finish, accounting for some of the differences.

Hearst News Service

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. intends to go ahead with plans to test market a new cigarette despite growing public furor over reports that it is to be targeted at young, poorly educated women.

The company denied reports that its new cigarette, to carry the brand name "Dakota," is aimed at 18-to 24-year-old women with a high school education or less.

A company marketing plan leaked to several newspapers last week described the target group as women whose favorite pastimes include "cruising" and attending hot rod shows and tractor pulls with their boyfriends. The plan was nicknamed "Project V.F." for "virile female."

At a Senate committee hearing in Washington this week, cigarette companies were lambasted for targeting their advertising at women, minorities and young people. The hearing explored a proposal by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to create a powerful government agency to regulate the tobacco industry and to campaign against smoking.

"I am not only troubled but outraged," said Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis W. Sullivan, a witness before the committee, when asked for his reaction to the alleged marketing plan for the Dakota cigarette.

"Nobody believes the tobacco companies when they say they are not targeting women and young people. Between 80 and 90 percent of adult smokers start as teen-agers," Sullivan said.

Alan Blum, a Houston physician who testified, called plans for Dakota "an obviously smarmy effort to reach women in their childbearing years." Blum is chairman and founder of Doctors Ought to Care, a national anti-smoking group that includes about 5,000 doctors.

Women's rights leaders and smoking opponents vowed to protest any move by Reynolds to bring Dakota to Texas.

"If Reynolds goes through with this 'virile female' campaign, we will certainly protest," said Phyllis Tucker, president of the Texas National Organization for Women.

R.J. Reynolds said the outcry is unwarranted. The published marketing plan is a 9-month-old proposal that the company considered but rejected, said Maura Payne, a company spokeswoman.

Cheney says U.S. will withdraw additional troops from Pacific

By STEWART M. POWELL
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

TOKYO — The United States will withdraw more troops from the Pacific, beyond the 15,000 already due to return home, without waiting for reciprocal cuts by the Soviet Union, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Friday.

The Pentagon chief, at a farewell news conference here, indicated that the Bush administration believes continued unilateral U.S. cuts will encourage similar force reductions by the Kremlin across the region without the cumbersome process of formal arms negotiations.

Cheney, after outlining a series of steps the Bush administration hopes the Soviet Union will take in Asia, noted the possibility that as a result of current trends, "in fact there will be reduction" of the Soviet military presence there.

"Clearly if we see a continuation of the trends of the last few years, I think we can hope that perhaps ultimately there will be improvements in Asia," Cheney said at the Japan National Press Club.

Cheney's remarks appeared to be a broad invitation to the Soviet Union by a senior U.S. official to embark on de facto reciprocal arms reductions.

The Bush administration, citing budget constraints at home and Asian allies' economic ability to shoulder a greater share of their own defenses, has outlined plans to withdraw up to 15,000 of the 120,000 armed forces in Japan, South Korea and the Philippines within three years.

"In the future, if there are solid indications that regional stability will not be threatened, we may in consultation with our allies to make other (force) adjustments that would be appropriate," Cheney said, using the term adjustments to mean cutbacks.

"When we do ultimately adjust our forces, it is worth pointing out that we will do so in full consultation with our allies, without waiting for or demanding a reciprocal Soviet reduction," Cheney said.

"I hope that the Soviets and their friends will recognize the significance of what we are considering and take it into full account in measuring their own security needs."

Cheney said the Bush administration "would welcome" Soviet initiatives that would "contribute genuinely to a reduction of tensions in the Asia-Pacific region."

Among them are restricting Soviet arms to North Korea, forcing North Korean acceptance of international inspections to ensure that it is not producing nuclear weapons, completing Soviet withdrawal from Cam Rahn Bay and returning four islands at the northern end of Japan that were seized at the end of World War II.

The Pentagon already has taken steps that could encourage reciprocal moves by the Soviet Union. Up to 6,000 U.S. troops are to be withdrawn from South Korea and the remaining American forces will adopt only a supportive role.

Nicarguan leaders seek peaceful vote

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leading presidential candidates, top election observers and the Roman Catholic church endorsed efforts to reduce the possibility of violence in Sunday's elections.

"All parties and alliances should let Feb. 25's voting take place without demonstrations or victory celebrations that could provoke violence," said opposition presidential candidate Violeta Barrios de Chamorro.

Mrs. Chamorro's United National Opposition and President Daniel Ortega's Sandinista party have accused each other of planning violence, but their rhetoric has toned down as election day approaches.

Ortega said he believes Mrs. Chamorro is sincere in her wish to avoid violence, but said he was not so certain of others in her 14-party coalition.

"We need to create a climate of reconciliation and speak a language of peace," said Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, Nicaragua's Roman Catholic prelate. "If Nicaragua does not put an end to violence, violence will put an end to Nicaragua."

Joao Baena Soares, the secretary-general of the Organization of American States, addressed a special appeal to "those involved in military activities," which would include the Sandinista army and the U.S.-backed Contra guerrillas.

Baena Soares and other observers said conditions for a fair vote Sunday exist, although Secretary of State James Baker said in Washington that the United States would have to make up its own mind about that.

Baker ruled out normal ties with a Sandinista Nicaragua unless it maintains the democratic opening to the opposition and refrains for a "sustained period" from supporting leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Ortega has struck conciliatory notes toward both the opposition and the United States as he sniffs victory, especially after a massive Wednesday night rally by 300,000 people.

Mandela, opposition leaders meet; First trip abroad slated

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela met today with parliamentary opposition leaders, and aides released details of what will be his first trip abroad since leaving prison — an 18-day, four-nation trip starting next week.

Aides also confirmed that Mandela, who has endorsed the nationalization of South Africa's mines, planned to meet Monday with the chairman of the country's largest mining conglomerate.

Gavin Relly, whose Anglo American Corp. is the world's No. 1 gold producer, accepted an invitation to visit Mandela's house in the black township of Soweto, the company said.

In a demonstration of racial solidarity, hundreds of blacks joined thousands of whites in a march and rally today organized by the main white anti-apartheid party, the Democratic Party.

De Beer was one of three Democratic Party leaders to meet with Mandela earlier today at his home. His party represents anti-apartheid whites in Parliament. Also at the meeting was the Reb. Allan Hendrickse, leader of Parliament's mixed-race chamber.

Mandela's African National Congress has urged boycotts of elections for the mixed-race and Asian chambers of Parliament, saying their creation was part of an effort to entrench the exclusion of blacks. But Hendrickse said after the meeting that the ANC and the Labor Party, which controls the mixed-race chamber, would be able to work together.

Denis Worrall, one of the Democratic Party leaders, said his delegation and Mandela agreed on the need for universal voting rights, but differed over the ANC's support for guerrilla violence, economic sanctions and nationalization.

Since his release Feb. 11 after 27 years in prison, Mandela has reaffirmed his support for the ANC's economic policies, which call for nationalization of mines, banks and monopoly industries.

Mandela, whose last trip abroad began with a clandestine border crossing in 1962 shortly before his imprisonment, plans to fly Tuesday to Lusaka, Zambia. There, he will meet leaders of several African countries and confer with the ANC's exiled leadership.

He then plans to spend three days in Zimbabwe and six days in Tanzania before flying to Sweden on March 12 to visit ANC President Oliver Tambo, who is recovering from a stroke in a Stockholm clinic.

Relly has spoken out frequently against apartheid, and his corporation — although occasionally at odds with black unions over wage disputes — espouses relatively liberal employment policies.

In 1985, when the government was condemning all contact with the ANC, Relly was among a group of South African businessmen that traveled to Lusaka for talks with the movement's leaders. Another member of that delegation, Tony Bloom, also is scheduled to meet Mandela on Monday.

Several business leaders have conceded that some redistribution of wealth is needed but say this can be done better without nationalization.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Cabinet-level talks on trade requested

TOKYO (AP) — Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama today called for urgent Cabinet-level trade talks, saying U.S. demands at lower-level discussions on the U.S.-Japanese trade imbalance were stronger than expected.

American officials criticized Japanese negotiators in the talks, saying they would not go far enough in efforts to reduce Japan's $49 billion trade surplus with the United States.

"We must say we find ourselves frustrated and concerned at this point," Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Linn Williams told reporters after the two-day negotiating session ended today.

"We expected this meeting to be a substantial step forward. But what we heard is not enough to be effective, lasting or credible," he said. "It was mainly a defense of the status quo with prospects of only minimal further action."

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Hundreds of demonstrators clashed with police outside the Vienna State Opera as socialites waltzed inside, and authorities said today that at least 69 people were injured.

The 1,300 demonstrators were demanding that funds raised to finance the annual opera ball be spent for social programs to help the poor and homeless.

The violence outside the opera peaked as President Kurt Waldheim and his wife arrived to attend the event Thursday night. But the nearly 3,000 police officers on hand ushered them and other dignitaries safely inside.

Although two leftist groups received permits for the protest, police said they were not responsible for the violence. Police President Guenter Boegl said the clashes were triggered by right-wing radicals who joined the protest.

Vessels avoid burning tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The U.S. Navy today told vessels to steer at least four miles clear of a burning Kuwaiti tanker while an army of salvage boats worked around the clock to keep its volatile cargo from exploding again.

The U.S.-flagged Surf City was loaded with naphtha and diesel fuel for Italy on Thursday when a blast ripped through it in the Persian Gulf, about 20 miles off the United Arab Emirates coast. The ship was still billowing smoke today.

Its American captain and first mate were killed, but the 23 other sailors, all Americans but one, were rescued by U.S. warships. Four were injured.

Officials ruled out sabotage or Iranian mines as the cause and said a short circuit may have sparked the blast aboard the ship, which was owned by the Kuwaiti Oil Tanker Co. It had been reflagged for U.S. protection during the Iran-Iraq war.

Liberia expelling legislator

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — A legislator has been expelled from Parliament for a drug-trafficking conviction in the United States.

The behavior of Alfred James Verdier was "criminal both under the laws of Liberia and that of the United States of America, and as such was an embarrassment and brought disgrace to the legislature, the government and people of Liberia," said a parliamentary committee statement announcing the expulsion Wednesday.

Verdier, who was elected to Parliament in 1985, was arrested in New York City in June with 22 pounds of heroin, worth nearly $2 million on the street.

LEASE A VOLVO WITH THE MOST ATTRACTIVE TERMS YET. YOUR OWN.

MONTHLY PAYMENTS AS LOW AS $246*

No matter what you're looking for in an automobile lease, look no further than your participating Volvo dealer. Where right now, during our special leasing program, you can choose from a wide variety of options to get the lease that's right for you.

You can lease for two to six years. Lease with no down payment, or put some money down to reduce your monthly costs. You can also lease with the option to buy.

Better still, your dealer is offering especially low monthly payments on every leasing arrangement. Whether you choose the legendary Volvo 240, the luxurious 760, the limited edition 780, or any other Volvo model.

See your participating Volvo dealer soon. Because while his leasing terms are flexible, the deadline for this offer isn't. VOLVO A car you can believe in.

*Offered by participating Volvo dealers to qualified and approved customers through February 28, 1990 in conjunction with Chase Manhattan Services Corporation. Customer must take delivery out of dealer stock by 3/5/90. Price shown based on a 60-month closed-end lease of a 1990 Volvo 240 DL Sedan. Subject to availability. 60 monthly payments equal a total of $14,760.00. Down payment of $2,000 required. First monthly payment required in advance in this example. Customer responsible for taxes, registration and title fees. Excess mileage charges will apply if contracted mileage is exceeded. Purchase option price established at time of lease inception based on projected fair market value of vehicle at full-term maturity. Other conditions and fees may apply. Lessee responsible for maintenance and repairs not covered by warranty. Other lease terms and down payment options available. Individual dealer prices may vary.
