Leaver or leader?

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — The White House spent more than three hours Saturday figuring out how to react to Mikhail Gorbachev's quitting as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party. But minutes after it produced a terse statement Saturday evening welcoming the news, it had to correct the announcement. The White House statement, issued under press secretary Marlin Fitzwater's name, initially said, "It has been announced that President Gorbachev has resigned from the Communist Party. ..." The corrected version noted Gorbachev had resigned as party leader, rather than leaving the party. It welcomed the news as "another step forward in the reform process."

Naughty no more

NEW YORK — At 50, actor Nick Nolte says he's curbed a few old habits. "I am perfectly capable of enjoying a human being without sleeping with them," he said in the September issue of Connoisseur. "Of course, I have slept with some leading ladies, but the necessity is pretty much out of my system," he said. Nolte said he doesn't drink as much, either. "I got over 40 and couldn't do that anymore," he said.

The party's over

Gorbachev 'decapitates' Communism

■ Moves signal a virtually complete surrender to liberal and democratic forces.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev resigned Saturday as head of the Communist Party, disbanded its leadership and in effect banned the once monolithic party from any role in ruling the vast country over which it had held iron control for more than seven decades.

■ Related stories/3A

With Communism under brutal assault across the Soviet Union and his own leadership in disorder in the aftermath of a coup attempt, Gorbachev abandoned his efforts to defend party leaders who obviously had collaborated in the putsch and finally dealt the party a fatal blow.

By doing so, Gorbachev seemed to be seeking some way of remaining a credible political force, something that would have been impossible if he had not repudiated the party.

In a series of terse statements and decrees read on the evening television program Vremya, the president also ordered the Cabinet of Ministers, the inner government council, to resign.

He then created a committee headed by the premier of the Russian federated republic, Ivan Silayev, a close aide of the republic's president, Boris N. Yeltsin, to take charge of the national economy.

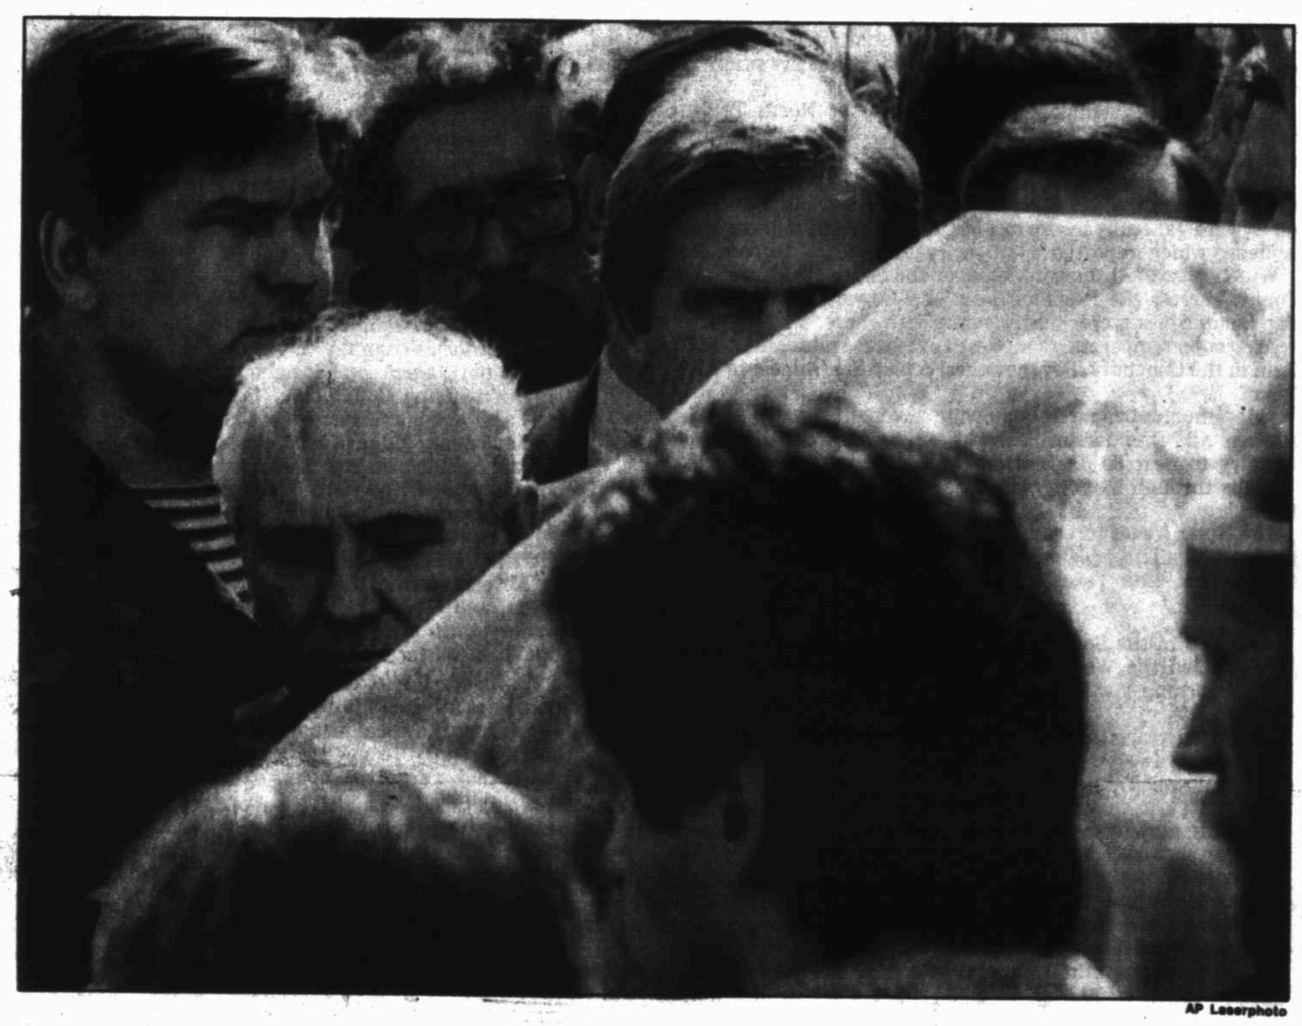

This was part of an arrangement worked out by Yeltsin, who has emerged as the country's leading political figure in the aftermath of the failed coup.

The committee includes Grigory V. Yavlinsky, a leading advocate of radical economic change in the country, auguring the long-awaited introduction of a sharp turn to a free-market economy.

Other members of the committee are Arkady Volsky, head of an association of private and state-owned enterprise, and Yuri Luzhkov, a supporter of fundamental change who is head of the Moscow city council.

The moves, announced at the end of another day filled with emotional and fast-paced developments arising from the coup, signaled a virtually complete

Coup's genesis, failure a nostalgic spasm

By Bill Keller
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — The abortive coup that finally broke the Communist Party's grip on the Soviet Union was a spasm of desperate nostalgia by a committee of men who saw themselves as patriots of an endangered order.

In its genesis and failure, it was the most Soviet of coups, the scheme of a gray collective against the new politics of the popular hero.

The conspirators were so tuned to the plodding rhythms of the Five Year Plan that they thought to order 250,000 pairs of handcuffs from a factory in Pskov and pre-print stacks of blank arrest orders, but neglected to detain the man — Boris N. Yeltsin — who would inspire the resistance.

They failed because their bland collective offered neither the charismatic leadership of a Yeltsin nor the single-minded brutality of a Stalin.

Yeltsin asserted on Saturday that the collaborators had prepared a list of 12 men to be assassinated in the first half-hour of the takeover. Soviet newspapers, citing military sources, said that airborne troops had been poised to assault Yeltsin's government stronghold at 2

Veteran lawman comes to defense of 'stings'

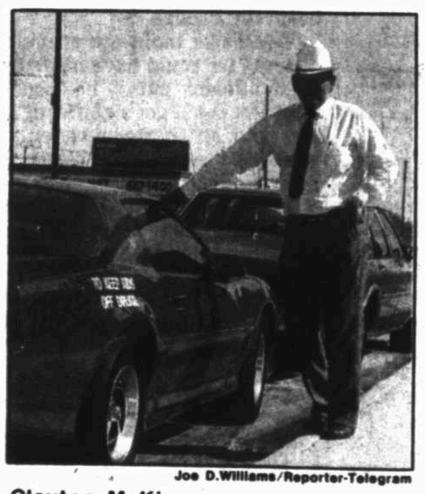

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

From a lawman's viewpoint, the Aug. 12 confining order which the Midland County Commissioners' Court placed on Sheriff Gary Painter has dampened the spirits of his deputies and may hinder effective law enforcement especially in sting operations.

"I'm sure that all of this hullabaloo that we are going through is going to affect it," said Captain Clayton McKinney, the 51-year-old ex-Texas Ranger.

'Cheerleader hitman' trial begins for mom

By Susan Fahlgren
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — While cheerleaders work on routines to usher in a new season in football-crazed Texas, a Houston-area woman heads for trial, accused of trying to arrange a murder so her daughter could win a place on a high school cheerleading squad.

Tape recordings of conversations with Wanda Webb Holloway, her former brother-in-law and an undercover police officer were expected to be key evidence in the murder-for-hire and attempted kidnapping case.

Mrs. Holloway, 37, described by police as "the ultimate stage mother," is accused of plotting the murder of Verna Heath, 38, the mother of her daughter's chief rival for a spot on the Channelview High School cheerleading squad. She has pleaded innocent and remains free on $10,000 bond.

The case comes before State District Judge George Godwin on Monday.

"She's been indicted for solicitation of capital murder as well as solicitation of aggravated kidnapping," said Troy McKinney, Mrs. Holloway's attorney. "The significance of that is that the prosecutors don't think they can get a conviction on murder charges.

"I don't expect their case to be anywhere near as strong as they portray it to the media. What we will do is present the truth. It doesn't take a lot of different ways to figure out how to portray the truth."

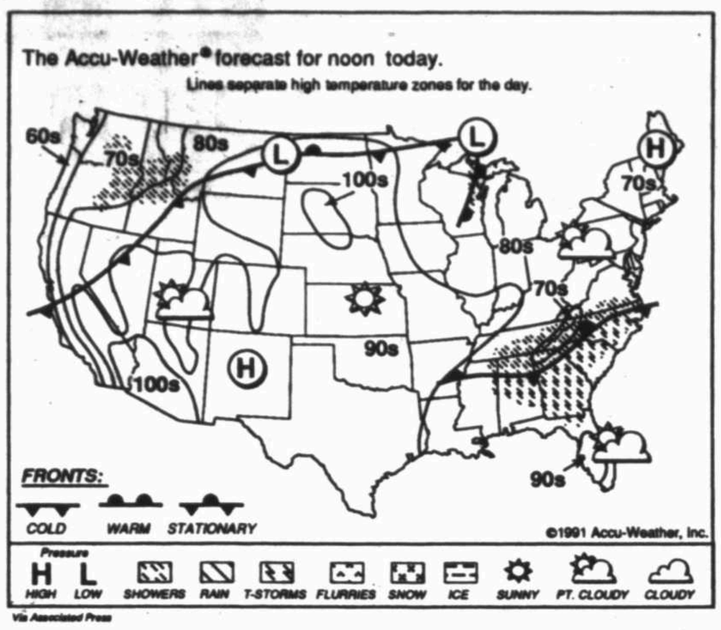

"Hopefully we'll get a running start on it on Monday and the case will last a week to 10 days," Assistant District Attorney Mike Anderson said.

Although Anderson would not reveal the contents of the tapes, which were made in January, prosecutors have contended the tapes will show Mrs. Holloway asked her former brother-in-law, Terry Lynn Harper, to find

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

Some clouds, near 90 on tap

Today's forecast calls for patchy, low morning cloudiness becoming partly cloudy with a high near 90, according to the National Weather Service of Midland. Winds should be southeasterly at 5 to 15 miles per hour.

Tonight should be mostly fair with lows in the mid-60s. Monday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high about 90 degrees.

Saturday's high was 88, compared with the record high for that date of 103 degrees in 1936. The record low for Saturday's date was 58 degrees in 1970.

STATE

Thunderstorms dampened western parts of North Texas between Stephenville and San Angelo. Partly cloudy skies prevailed across the rest of the area.

The storm system formed along a band of low level moisture that extended from the Rio Grande Valley into the Hill Country. Temperatures were generally in the low 90s, except for in rain-cooled areas like Abilene, which reported a 3 p.m. reading of 77 degrees.

Widely scattered showers fell over the South Plains and western Big Country across the Permian Basin and Edwards Plateau and into the Big Bend. Skies were mostly sunny elsewhere.

Afternoon temperatures in West Texas were mostly in the 80s and 90s. Rain in the Concho Valley, however, cooled San Angelo to 74 degrees at 3 p.m.

Skies should be partly statewide through Monday with scattered showers and thunderstorms. Lows will range from the 60s in the Hill Country to near 80 degrees on the coast.

Highs through Monday will be near 100 degrees on the Rio Grand Plains.

The North Texas forecast calls for fair nights and partly cloudy days through Monday. Isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms are forecast for West Texas.

NATION

Rain fell in the Southeast on Saturday and crisp morning temperatures cooled the West.

The morning low in the Lower 48 state was 33 degrees in Truckee, Calif.

At midday, rain and thunderstorms fell in eastern Virginia across Florida, southwest Alabama, the Mississippi coast, southeast Louisiana and the lower Texas Gulf coast.

Central Texas, eastern North Dakota, west-central through east-central Minnesota, northwest Wisconsin and the western portion of upper Michigan also received rain.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included an inch in Duluth, Minn., and nearly an inch in Jacksonville, Fla.

Storms dumped rain over most of southeast Arizona this afternoon. Winds clocked at 50 mph knocked down three trailer homes in the Tucson area.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

STINGS: Directive dampens deputies spirits

(From 1A)

The order, though temporary until a Texas court of law decides its validity, virtually imposes a halt to the McKinney-engineered "reverse-sting" operations that have brought both notoriety and praise for the sheriff and which have enriched the Midland County treasury by more than $1 million since 1985 through lawful seizures of drug money.

McKinney joined the Midland County Sheriff's Office in 1985, which was Painter's first year as sheriff.

The controlling aspects of the order have miffed the sheriff, McKinney and many of their troopers.

In his initial reaction to the swiftness of the order, the sheriff said he, though reluctantly, would abide by the order. Later, he eschewed it just as he had done the similarly spirited July 23 directive signed by Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer.

Then on Aug. 21, a day after the sheriff had lodged a lawsuit against the Commissioners' Court, the sheriff said he would abide by the order to avoid contempt-of-court citations.

Meanwhile, County Attorney Mark H. Dettman is seeking an opinion by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales on the sheriff's jurisdiction within Texas but outside Midland County and into other states.

The Commissioners' Court ordered that no county agent — elected, appointed or hired — may, while on duty, leave the confines of Midland County "without the express prior approval of the Commissioners' Court."

In effect, the order sought to restrict the sheriff's activities due to the county's budgetary restraints and due to the "substantially greater risks of liability and financial loss" incurred in the sheriff or any county agent operating outside of Midland County.

The 43-year-old Seltzer, who was elected county judge in 1990, earlier said neither he nor the four commissioners, Durward Wright, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia and Win Brown, want to control the sheriff or his office.

"No one on the Commissioners' Court, and especially not myself, wants to be sheriff of Midland County," Seltzer said.

However, the Commissioners' Court has its "constitutional duty" as the county's fiscal management and budgetary team "to protect the taxpayer's pocketbook."

In limiting the sheriff's out-of-county operations, the Commissioners' Court is trying "to shield the taxpayers of Midland County from what we believe to be unauthorized and illegal out-of-county operations," Seltzer said.

"The county taxpayers and county government will be required to pay damages in a lawsuit in the event that one of these deputies commits some unfortunate act," Seltzer said.

"We are trying to raise a liability shield between the county government and the local taxpayer and the unauthorized extra-jurisdictional act of the Sheriff's Office when he's engaged in some of these operations which occur out of county and, also, out of state.

"It is our opinion his (the sheriff's) jurisdiction ends at the county line," Seltzer said.

The Commissioners' Court's Aug. 12 order "is very broad" and carries a "great deal of flexibility," Seltzer said.

Since 1985, noted McKinney, sheriff's deputies have engaged in three out-of-state operations (in Indiana, Illinois, Oklahoma) — which consumed 16 work days — and have conducted approximately 20 similar operations within Texas but outside of Midland County.

The operations had a common feature, noted McKinney.

"Everyone of them has started in Midland County."

One reason for that, he said, is because the Midland-Odessa area is "known as a distribution point for narcotics."

Drug busts, often arranged through the aid of paid underground informants, and interceptions of drug dealers and "mules," who haul contraband for hire, occasionally lead the sheriff's undercover deputies to bigger "dope" dealers in other areas of Texas and in other states, McKinney said.

McKinney may assign up to eight agents, two narcotics officers and six criminal investigators, on a sting operation. Other deputies in the Operations Division are assigned to patrol duty and to crisis intervention in helping victims of crimes.

The sheriff's celebrated "Indiana case" in October of 1990 originated in Midland after a "big-time" California drug dealer named "Durbin" had contacted a Midland County sheriff's informant about buying what turned out to be $350,000 worth of marijuana, McKinney said. In turn, the informant told one of McKinney's narcotics agents about the "deal." McKinney then dispatched an undercover agent to play the role of a "crook" and to provide "dope" to the dealer.

McKinney tells what happens next:

The dealer, Durbin, comes to Midland, checks out a sample of the "dope" shown him by the undercover agent, leaves town, and later sends to Midland a Ford van, equipped with hidden compartments, and carrying the "mule," the driver, and a "lawyer."

The "lawyer," who weighs and grades the marijuana, and the "mule," the driver of the van, meet the Midland undercover agent in Sweetwater.

The trip is cut short.

The "crooks" are busted and the $350,000 is confiscated.

The "mule" agrees to cooperate with lawmen to snare drug dealers in Indiana — the crooks' original destination — in exchange for probation.

McKinney then calls the Indiana State Police and arranges a setup.

Indiana lawmen welcome the Texas contingency, which includes the "bad guy," two Midland County deputies, an investigator from Monahans, and the Nolan County sheriff.

Once in Indiana, the police there provide the "imported" marijuana to "sell" to drug dealers there.

"And they bust the people that received it," said McKinney, who noted that the United States Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) joined in the operation.

Federal and Indiana agents made the arrests, McKinney said.

"We have never made an arrest outside of this county on one of these reverse stings," he said. "We never have. We (undercover agents) get 'arrested.' Whenever they (the host agency or agencies) bust the people, they bust us, too."

"We have never gone any place in the United States that we weren't operating under the authority of the agency that's there."

The Midland County Sheriff's Office has "never claimed that we had authority outside of this (Midland) County," McKinney said. "What we do claim is that we have an obligation to the people of this county and the people of every other county. If we can assist in stopping this stuff (the flow of drugs in the United States), we're going to do it."

Further, said McKinney, Texas law-enforcement officers "are bound by statute to enforce the law in any county we're in if we're in the state of Texas."

McKinney estimated that 80 to 85 percent of burglaries are drug-related.

"Most of the time, it's much easier to catch a junkie for his habit with narcotics than it is to catch him for his burglaries."

Despite the arrests via reverse stings, the nation is losing "ground" in its 'war on drugs,'" McKinney said. "And we can't depend on the federal government to protect us."

Ultimately, the Midland County Sheriff's Office's participation in the Indiana case resulted in the arrest of the "big-time" drugger, Durbin, who was sentenced to 15 years in prison and who paid a $350,000 fine to Midland County under the drug-forfeiture laws; the arrest of several people in Indiana and the confiscation of $67,000 of which Midland County's "cut" was $16,000 and out of which the informant was paid; the seizure of $350,000 in drug money in Sweetwater; the federal seizure of up to $5 million in dope; and the finding secreted marijuana and $100,000 in drug money hidden in a cave in Arizona.

The cost of Midland County was minimal, McKinney said.

"The crook paid all their (the agents') expenses up there and back with the exception of maybe a meal or two."

Of the $1 million in seized drug money and fines coming into Midland County since 1985, about $500,000 of the non-tax money has been spent on radios, firearms, oilfield investigations, vehicles, helicopter maintenance and modifications, and, among other things, a firearms-training system, sheriff's officials said.

If sting operations are carried out properly and if the undercover agent holds the trust of the "crook" until the sting can be carried out, "Everything works like a saddle on a rooster," McKinney said.

In the pursuit of wary drug dealers, lawmen cannot afford to "dillydally around" and go through bureaucratic red tape, such as seeking permission of the Midland County Commissioners' Court to investigate crimes or to execute sting operations outside Midland County, McKinney said.

"You've got to move."

Meanwhile, he said, morale in the Sheriff's Office is dropping due to the court order's limitations. "Whenever morale drops, production of any outfit goes to hell," McKinney said.

And, McKinney said, Midland citizens surely would appreciate outside law-enforcement agencies coming into Midland County and, in cooperation with Midland lawmen, rounding up drug dealers known to outside undercover agents but not to Midland lawmen.

Midlanders, McKinney said, would not appreciate it if the Commissioners' Court of another county were to prohibit their deputies from helping Midland root out crime.

"I don't think the citizens of Midland County would be very proud of a rule that kept those people from coming up here and helping us" in curtailing crime. "Just reverse the situation."

COUNCIL: Budget is expected to be approved

(From 1A)

With some dissent and a few minor changes, the city of Midland's $73 million 1991-92 budget is expected to be approved by the City Council Tuesday.

The preliminary budget totals $73,610,237 in planned expenditures, with $32 million in the general fund, which is supported in part by ad valorem tax revenues. The setting of a tax rate and approval of the budget on first reading are included on the council agenda.

Opposition to the budget is expected to come from J.D. Faircloth, at-large councilman. He said he will oppose passage of the preliminary budget because it has not been cut enough.

"I feel like there are a number of areas we could have made fairly significant cuts," he said. "I think we could get significant savings and not have impacted services that much. ... We've not been tough enough."

City Manager Fred Poe is expected to propose some changes to the latest budget draft, but city officials said they expected only minor alterations.

The tax rate is expected to be 65.87 cents per $100 of valuation, approximately the effective rate. Councilmen have said they would support a tax rate no higher than the effective rate, the rate that would generate the same amount of revenue as in 1990-91.

The current tax rate is 64.82 cents.

Faircloth also expressed opposition to the proposed tax rate, saying the rate should be set at 99 percent or 98 percent of the effective rate to offset some decreased property values.

Valuations for 70 percent of homeowners remained the same, although 20 percent increased in the latest tax appraisal, according to city figures. Commerical property valuations, for the most part, decreased, according to city records.

"Although we're not (proposing to) raise the tax rate, if a person's property value fell, he may have a one-cent or so actual increase," Faircloth said. "I think this way, the average homeowner's going to pay more in taxes."

Among those supporting the proposed budget is At-large Councilman John Castro.

"My concern is that now we're in the black," he said. "There's not a lot of surplus money to do anything extravagant with, but we're in the black."

City spokesman Rick Menchaca said the amount of projected revenues and expenditures included in the proposed budget is equal. Although expenses are expected to be about $1.7 millon higher than in the current fiscal year, cuts in personnel, franchise fee increases and additional sales tax revenues are planned to make up the difference, Menchaca said.

"We've eliminated 13 and a half positions," he said. Most of those were lost due to retirement or other factors and simply not filled, Menchaca said, while some departments were restructured, and employees offered new jobs in different areas.

Some additional revenue will be generated by an increase in franchise fees for the electric, cable and telephone companies. A renegotiated contract with Southwestern Bell is expected to result in a more than $300,000 increase in its fee, said Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe.

"In the past, the franchise fee has been based on gross receipts," she said. "But it has been renegotiated, unrelated to gross receipts ... to guarantee certain revenues for the city."

The company's fee, which totaled $275,000 this fiscal year, will be $652,000 — $550,000 of which will be paid during the new fiscal year, Ms. Thorpe said.

Sales taxes are another form of income expected to increase in 1991-92. The city has estimated it will receive $9 million in revenues, based on the current year's actual total of $8.9 million.

Faircloth said difficult budget cuts must be made on every level of government.

"If we can't do it on a local level, no wonder we can't do it on a state and national level," he said.

Castro said he doesn't want to see any additional cuts to the city budget.

"We've made some good cuts, but I think there's a point you're going to lose some services," he said.

someone either to kidnap or to kill Mrs. Heath.

They also say she hoped Mrs. Heath's daughter, Amber, would be so distraught she would withdraw from cheerleading competitions.

Shanna Harper, Mrs. Holloway's 13-year-old daughter, had lost out to Amber for two years on the junior high's nine-girl squad in the blue-collar community outside of Houston.

The first year Shanna didn't make the tryouts. In the second year, she was disqualified for unfairly campaigning for the student vote.

In February, the two eighth-graders were to try out for the high school's Falcons cheerleading squad.

Prosecutors say Mrs. Holloway, who has no criminal record, wanted to guarantee her daughter a spot on the squad by having both Mrs. Heath and Amber Heath killed. They say she later decided she only could afford to pay the $2,500 to kill the mother.

Harper, who has a previous felony conviction, contacted authorities about the deal and an undercover officer posed as the hitman. Harper later gave the officer a pair of diamond earrings valued at $1,500 that he said Mrs. Holloway wanted to use as a down payment for the slaying.

If convicted on the murder-for-hire charge, Mrs. Holloway could be sentenced to life in prison. The attempted aggravated kidnapping charge carries a jail term of up to 20 years.

SOVIET: Gorbachev resigns as party head

surrender by Gorbachev to the liberal and democratic forces who had defied the coup and rescued him.

Gorbachev also ordered the Soviet Parliament to take all Communist Party property into custody until its future was decided "in strict compliance with Soviet and republican law."

Gorbachev did not disband the Communist party, nor did he say he was resigning from the party himself.

But in sweeping out its leadership, handing its vast properties to the mercies of democratically elected parliaments and thrusting it out of all federal government and security organs, he in effect decapitated the 15-million-member organization and left it to find its own place in the new order.

The dramatic gesture followed a broad campaign against the party that had already seen its headquarters sealed in Moscow and across the entire country, its major newspapers closed and its organization banned entirely in Moldavia and the Baltic republics.

Leningrad had sealed off the party headquarters at the Smolny Institute, a site charged with symbolism as the place where Lenin had his first headquarters.

On another front, the Parliament of the Ukraine, the second-largest republic, declared its independence and set a referendum for Dec. 1 to endorse it.

And in Moscow, Yeltsin, the acknowledged leader of the liberal and democratic forces now in ascendance, issued a new decree sealing the papers of the KGB, the Interior Ministry and the military.

Gorbachev's actions also came after an emotion-charged day in which tens of thousands of Muscovites turned out to bury three men killed in the coup, The nationally televised ceremonies often seemed almost a funeral for the old order.

Against this background, Gorbachev's announcement, read by a newsreader on the evening television news, had the quality of a full surrender by the old order.

In the statement read over television after reportedly meeting with the party leadership for several hours in an undisclosed location, since the Central Committee building was now not in his hands, Gorbachev based his actions on the party leadership's complicity or silence during the coup.

"The Secretariat, the Politburo and the Communist Party's Central Committee did not take a stand against the coup d'etat," the statement began. "The Central Committee did not manage to take a firm position of condemnation and opposition, it did not inspire Communists to fight against the trampling of constitutional law.

SOVIET CRISIS

Muscovites approve Gorbachev's break with party

By Francis X. Clines
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's final turn against the Communist Party received repeated approval Saturday night from residents of the capital, who said they had long ago tired of the party yoke.

"All our lives, all our reality, has led to this moment," said one Muscovite, who stood stunned at first, then almost serene as he adjusted to the news on a moonlit night.

"As a politician Mikhail Sergeyevich had outlived himself. He had become a political corpse," said the pedestrian, who identified himself only as Valentin Sergeyevich, without giving his last name. "A greater gift to us would have been if he had quit as head of the country and not just the party."

Even among those who expressed sympathy for Gorbachev, there seemed to be agreement that his power had begun evaporating with the coup, even though he survived it, and that the announcement Saturday night was nothing more than an attempt to survive.

"To see him before the Russian Parliament yesterday, he was so tortured," said Ali Sulemon, 22, a journalism student. "It was painful to see, and I have respect for him."

Yet a dominant argument was that Gorbachev's act was almost irrelevant. "Well I ask you back: What was the use of the party in the first place?" said a bookkeeper who gave her name only as Natasha. "We are so deep in this crisis that all this business about leaving the party, not leaving the party — that will never get us out."

Many people took a visceral view of the week's events, from the frightening coup Monday to the party's unravelling in a matter of days.

"It was horrible to hear those tanks roll by our house Tuesday night," said Irina Doromotina, 28, a mother of three small children who lives the city's main ring road.

"I went out on the balcony trembling and there they were trying to frighten us," she said. "I could hear children from all over the building crying in the night. This is what the party has brought us."

The resentment of witnessing years of party privilege was palpable in the night air as people pondered Gorbachev's divorce from the party that has been the vehicle for the career he is now fighting to keep alive.

"There couldn't be a better time to stop feeding the bellies of the party bigwigs," Olga Alimova sneered. "That was what the problem came to down to, you know."

"A well-fed person does not understand a hungry one," she said. "Now we have this, but so what? What was really solved tonight?"

The last six days have been an endurance test for a city that was worn and demoralized long before the Communist Party finally went into its death throes. Muscovites accordingly showed more of a forensic curiosity about the news than unguarded jubilation.

But she said it was an open question whether that would be enough to guarantee his survival.

Many Muscovites quickly lapsed into a roundelay of complaints about the hypocrisy of the party members they know — how they had the best schools and hospitals, and how they argued nobly in public against the privatization of land as a blow to common people while cutting private deals to buy their vacation cottages for token sums.

2nd-largest Soviet republic declares its independence

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lawmakers in the Ukraine, the Soviet Union's second largest republic, declared independence Saturday and scheduled a referendum to ratify their decision.

The resolution would put the Ukraine on the same footing as the three independence-seeking Baltic republics and Georgia. It could deal a severe blow to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's hopes of passing a new Union Treaty to hold the nation together.

Demonstrators rallying outside the parliament cheered after the resolution was passed, then carried a huge blue-and-yellow Ukrainian nationalist flag inside and triumphantly draped it over the rostrum.

The decision must be confirmed by the referendum set for Dec. 1, the same day the republic has scheduled presidential elections, according to the independent Ukrainian Information Service and the nationalist group Rukh.

Lawmakers voted 321-2 to approve the document, with support from both the reformist minority and the Communist majority in the parliament, Rukh said. Thirty-one deputies did not vote and six abstained.

The resolution — which goes beyond a declaration of sovereignty passed earlier — calls for nationalization of all state-owned enterprises, the printing of Ukrainian currency, and creation of a separate armed forces, said Maxim Myakinky of the independent Ukrainian Information Service.

The absence of the Ukraine from the Soviet Union would severely weaken the country. The republic of 50 million people is at the heart of the ancient Slavic nation as well being a major agricultural and industrial region.

Simultaneously, its assets also give it a good chance of becoming a self-sustaining, independent country.

The decision, adopted at an emotional parliamentary meeting in the capital, Kiev, appeared to be a reaction to the failure of the coup by Soviet Communist Party hardliners against Gorbachev.

COUP: Gray collective schemes against new politics

(From 1A)

2 a.m. on Wednesday. But like decades of Soviet plans, these went unfulfilled, because of indecisiveness and internal division.

The coup was foreshadowed by a year of intrigues, threats, and premonitions, including a January assault on the separatist government of little Lithuania that looks, in hindsight, like a dress rehearsal for last week's events.

Incredibly, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, when he was interrupted at his Crimean dacha by the emissaries of the plot, had been working with another writer on a speculative article that included just such a situation. He told reporters after his rescue that it involved the very conspirators who turned against him.

But to Gorbachev, trusting in the men he had chosen and believing in the ultimate reasonableness of human behavior, it was merely a scenario, not a clear and present danger.

"My argument was that this would lead to the destruction of society," said Gorbachev, seeming more bemused by the shortsightedness of his captors than by their treachery. "This would be a dead end."

Muscovites, who thrive on conspiracy, have been smitten by the theory that Gorbachev helped organize his own overthrow, calculating that either it would succeed and he would return as a dictator, or it would fail and he would come home a hero.

Members of the Russian delegation that flew to the Crimea to bring Gorbachev back after the coup collapsed said that their suspicions had dissolved when they had seen the stricken looks on the faces of the Soviet leader and his family.

Gorbachev's sin, they said, was not complicity but almost willful misjudgment of the men around him, whom he trusted more than his own public.

Vitaly Tretyakov, editor of the independent Moscow newspaper Nyezavisimaya Gazeta, said that after what he called the "putsch of fools," Gorbachev has been pushed to the periphery of his own revolution, a symbol of the legal power that was rescued by others.

"Evidently, during the days of the putsch, he was a victim, and, for a time, the halo of a victim will keep him on the surface," Tretyakov wrote on Saturday. "But today we need him only to personify the resurrection of our consitution order."

It is not known when the conspirators set their plan into motion, but it seems likely that things began to move around Aug. 6. On that day, Gorbachev's spokesman announced Aug. 20 as the date for signing the new union treaty, which promised a radical decentralization of power to the republics.

Confident in his new partnership with Yeltsin, Gorbachev had left the previous weekend for his vacation home in the Crimea.

By Friday, Aug. 16, the plan was unfolding. Komsomolskaya Pravda reported on Saturday that on that day a secret memorandum went out to KGB field offices signed by Kryuchkov. It announced that all KGB agents would have their pay immediately doubled. Two subsequent cables put the KGB bureaus on alert, and directed them to begin destroying documents.

On Sunday, United States intelligence officials said, the defense minister, Marshal Dmitri T. Yazov, flew to the Crimea, evidently to oversee security arrangements to detain Gorbachev. Even if true — it has not been confirmed in Moscow — the defense minister did not join the delegation that confronted Gorbachev.

At 10 minutes to 5 that afternoon, Gorbachev says, he was told of unexpected visitors. When he picked up his phones to inquire, he discovered that all communications were cut off.

Gorbachev said the emissaries from the junta were Yuri S. Plekhanov, the chief of security for the KGB, and Valery Boldin, the chief of Gorbachev's staff at the Communist Party Central Committee. Saying later that he indignantly rebuffed their demand that he voluntarily sign over emergency powers to the junta, Gorbachev began 72 hours of anxious isolation, accompanied by his family and loyal bodyguards.

On Monday morning, somber announcements on television and radio informed Soviet citizens that they were under "new leadership." Anatoly I. Lukyanov, the speaker of Parliament, released a statement fiercely critizing the union treaty and urging that it be postponed.

With apparent ease, the conspirators managed to enlist, or silence, most of central Soviet officialdom.

When Prime Minister Valentin S. Pavlov assembled the Cabinet on Monday night to solicit their approval, only three among the dozens of ministers present expressed reservations, according to notes kept by the liberal environment minister, Nikolai N. Vorontsev.

His minutes record a typical reaction from Vladimir Gusev, head of the state committee on chemistry and biotechnology: "If we step back even an iota, we will sacrifice our jobs, our lives. We will not have another chance."

The execution of the coup was limited to Moscow, Leningrad, and the Baltics. From the outset, it showed signs of disorganization.

"The first rule of a coup is isolate and control," said an American intelligence analyst who monitored the takeover from Washington. But this was not happening, he said. KGB units designated for cutting key communications centers were not being deployed.

Another mystifying mistake was the failure to detain Yeltsin, who flew back on Sunday from a trip to Kazakhstan and could have been easily detained at the airport.

On Monday, military armor shuttled back and forth through Moscow, with no clear sign of an objective.

Almost by sheer force of will, Yeltsin rallied the resistance. On Monday morning, he stepped from his building — as aides scanned neighboring buildings anxiously for snipers — and climbed atop a hostile tank to declare his defiance for a gathering crowd of Muscovites.

By the end of the day, three units sent to surround Yeltsin's "White House," as it is called, had defected to the Russian government, including a battalion from the Tamanskaya Tank Division whose imposing armor now pointed in defense.

The Russian Parliament building became a hive of resistance, with a war room, a ham radio center, a printing press.

There are conflicting versions of why the storming of the Russian Parliament House never took place. Gorbachev suggested that the KGB officers refused, but provided no details. Two members of Gorbachev's National Security Council, Yevgeny Primakov and Vadim Bakatin — now the post-coup KGB chief — asserted that the assault was stopped when they intervened with Gen. Mikhail A. Moiseyev, the chief of the general staff.

From that point, the coup unraveled quickly.

Weight Loss Surprises Researchers

WASHINGTON --A nutrition organization was hopeful that a nutritionally complete "hi-tech" food tablet would help erase world hunger problems, until a study revealed that one of the ingredients could cause significant weight loss.

Although other studies and scientists may not agree, researchers in Europe found that the ingredient, a natural plant colloid, actually caused people to lose weight, even though specifically instructed not to alter normal eating patterns, according to one study published in the prestigious British Journal of Nutrition. Researchers in an earlier study had speculated that the weight loss was due to a decrease in the intestinal absorption of calories.

While the development of the product called Food Source One, a project of National Dietary Research, would not be used to successfully fulfill its original goal, the formula which has since been improved with other natural colloids has been a windfall for some overweight people. A Daytona Beach, Florida woman fighting a weight battle for 12 years used the product on the recommendation of her physician and lost 30 pounds. She stated, "Not only have I lost 30 pounds but my cholesterol has dropped from 232 to 143. I have two closets full of clothes which have not fit me in two years that I can now wear." In a separate report, a telephone interview revealed that a Wilmington, North Carolina pharmacist lost 14 pounds in 3 weeks on the product and was never hungry.

Food Source One tablets are part of National Dietary Research's comprehensive plan to bring a rapid end to obesity in this country. A variety of nutritionally sound diet plans, specially prepared by NDR, accompany each bottle and provide a natural, drug free alternative for confronting the problem of obesity.

Iranian: Hostages may be swapped

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An Iranian source said Saturday that Lebanese kidnappers could free American hostage Terry Anderson or British church envoy Terry Waite if Israel released a jailed Shiite Muslim cleric.

Israel responded it was willing to free Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, but only in a broader swap that includes the Western hostages and seven Israeli servicemen missing in Lebanon.

In Beirut, the office of the highest Shiite Muslim leader in Lebanon said that reports quoting him as saying seven missing Israelis were dead were not accurate. The office of Mohammed Mehdi Shamseddine, the ranking official on the Shiite Supreme Council, said he did not know which of the seven were alive or dead, but urged details to be made public so the hostage issue could be resolved.

Hopes of freeing the remaining hostages believed held captive by pro-Iranian groups have been raised by intensified talks and the release earlier this month of American hostage Edward Tracy and British journalist John McCarthy.

Iran's president, Hashemi Rafsanjani, on Saturday accused the United States of failing to pressure Israel to make a swap that would include the Western hostages.

Israel and its militia ally in south Lebanon hold 300-400 prisoners whose release is sought by Hezbollah, the Iranian-backed Lebanese group believed to be responsible for the hostage holders.

The Iranian source, close to the negotiations, said the kidnappers would be ready to exchange either Anderson or Waite for Obeid, a Hezbollah spiritual leader abducted by Israeli commandos from his home in south Lebanon in 1989. Obeid's release has been the prime demand of the Shiite Muslim Hezbollah.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Lebanese kidnappers consider Anderson and Waite to be prize hostages.

Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman Dan Naveh, responding to the Iranian source, said: "All I can say is that Israel is ready to release Lebanese prisoners, including Obeid, in a deal that would include the release of Western hostages and the Israeli MIAs and POWs."

Anderson

Waite

Israel has said it is willing to make a gesture that could include freeing detainees once it gets solid information on its missing in Lebanon.

"In the first stage we want information, but the bottom line is the release of the Israeli soldiers," Naveh said.

Israel radio, meanwhile, reported Saturday that Giandomenico Picco, the envoy of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, visited Israel this week to continue talks on the hostage issue started in Geneva this month.

Israel television reported Saturday that Picco met with the Israeli hostage negotiating team, Uri Lubrani, Ori Slonim and Yochanan Bein, and is now apparently traveling to Syria or Iran.

Picco did not bring Israel any new significant information on the fate of the missing Israelis, the report added.

President orders arrest of democracy activists

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Police searched the offices of former Vice President Oginga Odinga on Saturday, one day after President Daniel arap Moi ordered the arrest of Odinga and five other pro-democracy activists.

By late Saturday, no arrests had apparently been made.

Moi has remained adamantly opposed to calls for multiparty democracy. He is one of the few African leaders to have resisted the continent-wide campaign for political pluralism that followed the collapse of communism in Eastern Europe.

He claims pluralism would quickly degenerate into conflict among Kenya's approximately 40 tribes. Moi has arrested those critical of his leadership throughout his 13-year rule.

On Friday, he targeted the six-member Forum for the Restoration of Democracy, or FORD, which was launched in early August.

Ahmed Salim Bamahriz, a former Mombasa city councilor and a FORD member, said he had talked with most of the group's members and none had been picked up.

However, six plainclothes police officers spent three hours searching the Nairobi offices of former Vice President Odinga, whom Moi described as FORD's leader, and took away some documents. They also reportedly detained Jalang'o Odhiambo, an office assistant, according to a building security guard. That could not be confirmed.

Odinga, who has actively campaigned for the legalization of a second political party in this one-party state, is at his home in the western trading town of Kisumu on Lake Victoria and said he had not been bothered by security forces.

Odinga, Bamahriz and the others are all prominent Kenyans who have criticized Moi's government as undemocratic and corrupt. In early August, they launched FORD to promote democracy and fight what they saw as political evils —tribalism, nepotism, corruption, embezzlement of public funds and land grabbing.

Odinga, 80, was Kenya's first vice president at the country's independence from Britain in 1963. He served until 1966, when he formed the Kenya People's Union party. It was banned three years later and Kenya remained a de facto one-party state.

Gunmen kill mayor, brother

BOVA, Italy (AP) — Hooded gunmen killed a long-time mayor of this southern town and his brother on Saturday, in an apparent Mafia settling of accounts, officials said.

The gunmen fired over a wall as Pasquale Foti; his brother, Francesco; and eight friends were leaving a farmhouse where they had had dinner, the Italian news agency ANSA quoted police as saying.

After the brothers rushed to hide behind their car, one gunman leaped over the wall and shot them, police said. One of the brothers' friends was wounded by a bullet when he attempted to go to their rescue.

Foti, 59, had been mayor of the small town in the toe of the Italian 'boot' for 30 years, ANSA said.

Police said the killing appeared to be related to a feud between different clans of the region's Mafia.

■ Trucks carrying Iraqi munitions explode

KUWAIT CITY — At least four trucks carrying abandoned Iraqi munitions exploded Saturday at a military base in Kuwait City. An Interior Ministry official said there were casualties, but would not say how many.

Nearby residents said the explosions continued for about 20 to 25 minutes, and fire trucks and ambulances rushed to the scene. The residents said traffic was diverted for several hours from the area, part of a sprawling military complex that includes the Ministry of Defense and police departments.

The official said it was not immediately clear precisely what caused the explosions, which took place on at least four of 21 parked trucks in the Military Academy on the western edge of the city. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

■ Fights erupt in Greece; 13 injured

XANTHI, Greece — Shopkeepers clashed today with Muslims who refused to move a religious protest from a business district in northeast Greece, the center of the Muslim minority in this predominately Christian nation.

At least 13 people were slightly injured, and two Christians were arrested for allegedly instigating the clashes, the Athens News Agency reported.

The agency said the fights erupted after about 800 Muslims refused to move their street sit-in to protest the recent appointment of a new religious leader, or mufti.

About 300 Christian shopkeepers said the demonstrators were obstructing their businesses in Xanthi, about 225 miles from Athens, the agency said.

The protesters demanded they elect their mufti rather than have him appointed. They also claim government discrimination against the estimated 120,000 Greek Muslims, half of whom are ethnic Turks.

Turkey protested the clash, but Greece claimed its neighbor was interfering in Greek affairs.

■ Prospector finds 36-pound black opal

PERTH, Australia — A prospector became a multi-millionaire after finding a giant black opal in western Australia, his agent said Saturday.

Peter Milic, 49, found the 36-pound gem at an area where he has been working for two years, said John McDonald, executive director of Opal Investments of Australia. The opal was valued at $4.7 million.

It was the first large black opal found in Western Australia state, McDonald said.

Milic had earlier discovered an opal weighing 10 pounds, McDonald said. An estimate of the stone's value was not immediately disclosed.

■ Quake strikes near Mexican coast

OAXACA, Mexico — An earthquake measuring 4.9 on the Richter scale shook southern Mexico, but caused no damage or injuries, the government's Notimex news agency reported Saturday.

The earthquake Friday morning was centered near the Pacific coast of Oaxaca state, according to the National Seismological Service, and shook the region for 22 seconds.

Croatia military warns of attacks

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — With Croatian forces losing ground to army-backed Serb militiamen, the breakaway republic's military chief warned Saturday he would order all Croats to arm themselves unless a cease-fire is restored.

Escalating ethnic fighting in Croatia claimed 10 more lives Saturday and church leaders met to discuss efforts to halt the violence between Croats and ethnic Serbs who oppose secession.

More than 250 people have been killed in Croatia since independence was declared June 25.

German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher also threatened to officially recognize Croatia and neighboring Slovenia as sovereign nations if fighting persists. Slovenia also declared independence June 25, but has been under a cease-fire since early July following battles with federal troops.

Genscher met with Yugoslavia's ambassador to Germany, Boris Frlec, and demanded federal troops in Croatia be pulled back to barracks, said a German government spokesman in Bonn.

Croatia accuses the Serb-led army of siding with Croatia's 600,000 ethnic Serbs, about 12 percent of the republic's population. The federal military, however, says it is trying to act as a buffer between the warring groups.

Fighting has increased this week following the collapse of a cease-fire arranged by the nation's eight-member federal presidency. Serbian forces have made advances, backed by army air power and artillery, and at least 70 people have been killed since the Aug. 7 truce.

On Saturday, ethnic Serb units closed in on the embattled town of Osijek, a Croatian stronghold of 130,000 people. Serbian forces were virtually surrounding the town.

Radio Zagreb said air force jets also strafed several villages near Vukovar and claimed that one plane was downed by Croatian forces. There was no immediate army comment.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman met with his military commanders to discuss "preparations for the defense of Croatia," Radio Zagreb said.

Croatian Defense Minister Luka Bebic said Croatia would proclaim a general mobilization if the federal army failed to return to its barracks by Aug. 31, as demanded by the secessionist republic.

"We will call upon the entire Croatian people at home and abroad to rise in the defense of its only homeland," Bebic told a meeting of Croatian officers.

Arab stabs three Israelis waiting for bus

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Arab shouting "God is great!" on Saturday stabbed three Israelis waiting for a bus in a Jerusalem neighborhood, police said.

A young woman, a soldier and his girlfriend were standing at a bus stop in Jerusalem's Ramat Eshkol neighborhood when they were attacked, Jerusalem police spokesman Shmuel Ben Ruby said.

Sharon Asar, who was not in uniform, was stabbed in his shoulder and his girlfriend Sigalit Ben Yehuda was slightly injured in her hand. The two were taken by ambulance to the Ein Karem Hadassah hospital.

The third victim, Irit Cohen, 25, was stabbed in the stomach with the five-inch knife, Ben Ruby said.

Ms. Cohen stopped a taxi that took her to the Mt. Scopus Hadassah Hospital, where she immediately underwent surgery, Israel radio and Ben Ruby said.

Police detained four Arab suspects for questioning. Ben Ruby said police assumed the assailant had political motives.

Arab assailants have stabbed to death six Jews and injured another 16 this year, mostly in random attacks. The wave of stabbings began last October after police dispersing rioters shot and killed 17 Palestinians outside Jerusalem's main mosque.

In the east Jerusalem neighborhood of Beit Hanina, meanwhile, a Palestinian-American family filed a complaint with police after police raided their home Friday, Israel television said.

The Aiyadeh family claimed the police didn't show a search warrant, and that jewelry and $10,000 in cash was missing after the incident, the television report said.

Shaida Aiyadeh, who was alone at home when the police searched the home, said about 20 people barged into the house.

Cambodia turns over remains of possible MIA

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia has turned over the remains of a possible American MIA and promised to cooperate closely with the United States in resolving the issue of the missing men, a report said Saturday.

Army Col. William H. Jordan, who heads a U.S. team of experts visiting Cambodia, received the remains Friday in Phnom Penh from Deputy Foreign Minister Long Visalo, the official Cambodian news agency SPK said.

The U.S. team flew into Phnom Penh last Thursday to discuss the status of 83 American servicemen and civilians listed as missing in action during the Indochina War.

Some of the missing were American newsmen captured by the Khmer Rouge during the 1970-75 war between the U.S.-backed Lon Nol government and the Communist guerrillas.

The Cambodian agency said Jordan also met with Deputy Interior Minister Khim Pon, who heads the MIA Commission of the State of Cambodia.

Khim Pen was quoted as saying his government was "always ready to closely cooperate with the U.S. government in solving this humanitarian issue."

The Vietnamese-backed Communist government in Cambodia has shown a greater willingness to cooperate with Washington on the issue. Last month, U.S. personnel made the first investigation ever of alleged MIA sightings in Cambodia. They concluded that some photographs purportedly showing American prisoners were fraudulent.

Typhoon kills 55 in Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — At least 55 people were reported killed Saturday after a typhoon struck the southern tip of the Korean Peninsula on Friday night.

Dozens were reported missing and more than 30,000 people were driven from their homes, South Korean news reports said.

Typhoon Gladys brought winds of 45 mph to the southeast, the government's meteorological agency said. But the storm dumped record rains, causing severe flooding at homes, businesses and thousands of acres of farmland and $11 million in damage.

Officals said most of the deaths were caused by landslides, collapsing buildings and rain-swollen rivers.

Relief agencies opened schools and other public buildings to house the homeless, and South Korean and U.S. military units joined the rescue effort, officials said.

Sharon accuses U.S. of backtracking on promise

By Alan Cowell
N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Ariel Sharon, Israel's hard-line housing minister, sought Saturday to raise new objections to a planned Middle East peace conference, accusing the United States of backtracking on a promise to provide Israel with advance guarantees about the discussions.

"We expected a memorandum of understanding," Sharon told the army radio. "I know from foreign sources that the United States has already given a negative answer and does not intend to sign a memorandum of understanding with Israel."

Most of the Israeli Cabinet agreed this month that Israel should attend a Middle East peace conference under joint Soviet and American auspices provided that the neither the Palestine Liberation Organization nor Arabs from Israeli-annexed East Jerusalem represent the Palestinians.

Israel calls the PLO a terrorist organization and does not acknowledge East Jerusalem, with its predominantly Arab population, as a part of any Palestinian entity.

The conference is tentatively set to open in October, but many Israeli analysts and officials say it may be delayed by the turmoil in the Soviet Union. Sharon was one of three Cabinet members to oppose the talks.

'We expected a memorandum of understanding. I know from foreign sources that the United States has already given a negative answer and does not intend to sign a memorandum of understanding with Israel.'

— Ariel Sharon
Israel Housing Minister

In recent Middle East diplomacy, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said letters of assurance would be sent to the parties that have agreed to attend, including Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Israel.

Israeli officials publicly interpreted the Baker offer of assurances as meaning a memorandum of understanding signed by both sides, since a letter of assurances carried less weight.

Officials said Saturday night that discussions were continuing with the United States on the nature of the assurances Israel was seeking. Some Israeli commentators have suggested that Washington is reluctant to offer memoranda of understanding so as to avoid yet more difficulties over who should sign on behalf of Palestinian delegates.

In his radio interview Saturday, Sharon seemed to imply that Israel was seeking an American commitment to walk out of the talks if Palestinian representatives proclaimed themselves to be representing the PLO once the talks got under way. Moreover, he said, the United States did not believe the Israelis should walk out either if that happened. This meant Washington had already reneged on a key promise, he said.

The issue of who should represent Palestinians at the talks is still unresolved. Several PLO officials arrived in Amman, Jordan, on Saturday to prepare for a visit by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat to discuss Jordan's proposal that the Palestinians be represented by a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

In a separate development, as the U.N. secretary general prepared to return to Geneva on Sunday, Israeli officials said they were hoping that he would soon receive news on Israeli servicemen missing in Lebanon and thus advance the negotiations for freeing Western hostages there.

Cardinal apologizes for Auschwitz comments

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The leader of Poland's Roman Catholic church has apologized for suggesting Jewish protesters in 1989 wished to hurt nuns at a convent near the former Nazi Auschwitz death camp.

Cardinal Jozef Glemp's apology, in a letter to Archbishop Adam J. Maida of Detroit, was a possible attempt to defuse Jewish outrage ahead of his visit to the United States.

The controversy over his Auschwitz comments prompted strong criticism from Jewish communities abroad and forced him to cancel a planned 1989 visit to the United States.

In the letter released Friday by Glemp's office, he called anti-Semitism "an evil" and contrary to the spirit of the Gospel.

"I am not anti-Semitic, and I have expressed publicly my negative attitude to anti-Semitism," he wrote.

Glemp has come under strong criticism from Jewish communities abroad as a result of his comments made in August 1989 during a controversy that erupted after seven Jews staged a sit-in at the Carmelite convent in Auschwitz.

Glemp referred to Polish-Jewish relations in a sermon after the incident, and his remarks caused offense when he suggested Jews have easy access to the mass media and that the protesters wanted to harm the nuns.

"If we had talked to each other more in the past and got to know each other better, such pitiful conflicts like those in 1989 ... would never have happened," Glemp said in his letter to Maida.

Referring to his 1989 sermon, Glemp said he now believes the protesters did not want to "cause death or destroy the convent."

"We are entering new times," Glemp said. "We must build those times together, in mutual understanding and friendliness."

Many Jews view the convent as an offensive intrusion of Christian symbols at a place built to exterminate Jews. More than 90 percent of the 1.5 million people killed at Auschwitz between 1940 and 1944 were Jews.

The Vatican has instructed the nuns to move out by October 1992.

Glemp is scheduled to visit more than a dozen cities during his tour of the United States from Sept. 19 to Oct. 8.

Black protesters march through Brooklyn streets

NEW YORK (NYT) — The Rev. Al Sharpton led some 400 shouting, chanting black protesters through the heart of the Hasidic section of Crown Heights in Brooklyn on Saturday as a blue wall of police officers made sure that the march went off without serious incident.

The police vastly outnumbered the black marchers, flanking them with a double column of officers marching alongside and with motorcycle patrols. A helicopter circled overhead.

About 40 bearded, black-clad Hasidim watched from the porch of the Lubavitcher headquarters on Eastern Parkway as the marchers passed, chanting "Whose streets? Our streets!" "No justice, no peace" and scattered obscenities.

Three busloads of Sharpton's followers joined about 200 protesters already gathered around the intersection of Eastern Parkway and Utica Avenue, stepping off at 2:15 p.m.

After passing the Lubavitcher headquarters, they turned north into the Bedford-Stuyvesant section, winding up at Junior High School 258 where an African cultural rally was under way.

At the school, several of the protesters were heard grumbling that "Sharpton sold us out."

"We were supposed to be marching up Kingston so we could confront the Jews," one said. "I don't understand why we ended up back at the school."

Tensions had been high after four nights of rock- and bottle-throwing clashes, sparked by a traffic accident on Monday night in which a driver in the entourage of the Lubavitcher Rebbe Menacham Schneerson killed a black child.

Long-simmering resentments at what blacks in the neighborhood consider preferential treatment of the Hasidim by the police and city officials exploded in a rampage in which a Hasidic man was stabbed to death.

Small groups of young men from the Jewish Defense League and other organizations were in the neighborhood Saturday, as they have been for the last several days. One real worry for the police is the possibility of retaliatory attacks between Jews and blacks.

For three tense hours on Friday night Mayor David N. Dinkins met with Sharpton and other protest leaders in Bedford-Stuyvesant but failed to talk them out of staging the march.

Wearing the baseball hat with an "X" — for Malcolm X — -popular with black youths this summer and a Le Coq Sportif jogging suit, the mayor tried again to calm tensions Saturday morning. He went to Crown Heights with Police Commissioner Lee P. Brown, stopping at a McDonald's restaurant on Utica and Eastern Parkway to chat with the predominantly black crowd, waving to passers-by and kissing babies.

Jury selection becomes key problem for Noriega defense

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Noriega's fate once generated fierce debate in the Oval Office and the halls of Congress, and bloodshed on the battlefields of Panama — but soon it will rest in the hands of a Miami jury.

And judging from answers in 1,200 questionnaires the court mailed to prospective jurors, the deposed Panamanian ruler has an uphill struggle when his drug and racketeering trial begins Sept. 4.

The 27-page questionnaire asked whether respondents prefer "60 Minutes" or "America's Most Wanted" on television, get their news from The New York Times or radio talk shows, have heard of George Bush, Oliver North and Fidel Castro, can fly a plane or think drugs should be legalized.

But among the 82 questions, the most fundamental is whether the juror can give Noriega a fair trial.

"It's going to be tough to pick a jury," lead defense attorney Frank Rubino said after skimming the answers. "By and large, the responses do not appear very favorable. And I'm not talking about somebody saying 'I love him' — I'm talking about somebody saying 'I can be fair and impartial."

A pool of hardhearted jurors could spell disaster for Noriega, some experts think.

Dr. Robert Minick, a psychologist who heads the New York office of the legal research company Litigation Sciences Inc., believes the case will be won or lost during jury selection.

"It may be the only chance that the defendant has," Minick says. "People walk into the trial ... with a framework that predisposes them to one story or another about the case."

He said prosecutors generally favor jurors with what researchers call authoritarian profiles, people who feel they have a stake in the system — a postal supervisor or a doctor, for instance.

By contrast, the defense wants someone who will identify with the defendant, such as those who feel they are disenfranchised or abused by the government, Minick said. Noriega's defense may prefer Latin immigrants on the theory they will identify more readily with Noriega's cultural background and poor upbringing, he said.

But some attitudes can be surprising, he cautions, and the highly political and public nature of the Noriega case could alter the equation.

Former Chief Deputy U.S. Attorney Richard Gregorie, the man who brought Noriega's case before the federal grand jury, says he knows what jurors he would want if he were trying the case.

Officer defends contact with Dahmer, Laotian boy

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A police officer suspended for returning a 14-year-old Laotian boy to alleged mutilation-killer Jeffrey L. Dahmer said he's agonized over how he might have prevented the boy's death.

"God as my witness, I just didn't dump a little boy in the hands of a murderer. That's not what happened," Joseph T. Gabrish told The Milwaukee Journal in a story published Sunday.

On May 27, neighbors reported seeing a naked and bleeding boy run from Dahmer's apartment building. Gabrish and two fellow officers accepted Dahmer's explanation the youth was his adult homosexual lover and that he was drunk. They went with Dahmer and the boy to Dahmer's apartment.

Dahmer, 31, told police he strangled the boy, Konerak Sinthasomphone, soon after police left, dismembered the body and kept the skull. He told police the body of another victim was in a bedroom on that day.

Police say Dahmer killed four more times after the brush with the officers. News of the encounter led to angry protests by people who said police fouled up a chance to stop Dahmer. Others accused the officers of racism and homophobia.

Gabrish, 28, a patrolman for seven years, said he and the other officers believed there was a caring relationship between Dahmer and the boy and saw no reason to intervene.

"We're trained to be observant and spot things. There was just nothing that stood out, or we would have seen it. I've been doing this for a while, and usually if something stands out, you'll spot it. There just wasn't anything there," Gabrish said.

"I run this thing through my mind, I wish there would have been. There just wasn't," he said.

Gabrish was accompanied by two police union attorneys when he was interviewed.

Dahmer was arrested last month after a man in handcuffs fled his apartment and alerted police. Officers found the mutilated body parts of 11 men in the apartment.

Dahmer told police he lured the men to his apartment with the promise of sex and dismembered them — sometimes eating their remains. He is charged with 15 killings and has confessed to killing and butchering 17 men since 1978.

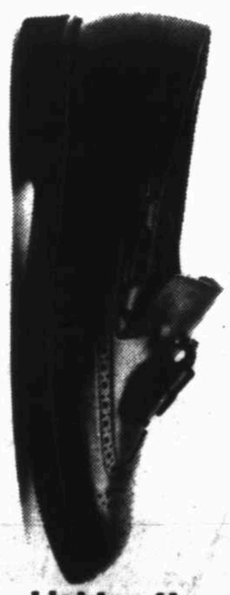

Neighbors claimed the Asian boy wasn't removed by the white officers because Dahmer was white and the witnesses were black.

Gabrish said he had worked in Milwaukee's inner city for most of his career, sometimes with black officers, and was shocked that he and the other officers were accused of racism and homophobia.

Pro-choice demonstrators take turn in Wichita

AP Laserphoto

Pro-choice supporters wave flags and sunflowers during a rally in downtown Wichita, Kan., Saturday. More than 5,000 attended the event.

N.Y. Times News Service

WICHITA, Kansas — For six weeks, the words and deeds of a militant anti-abortion group have cast a shadow over this city and dominated the national debate about abortion.

Saturday, the other side stepped out of that shadow.

Waving tiny American flags and lofting banners, declaring, among other things, "Republicans For Choice," thousands of supporters of a woman's right to an abortion came from around the country for a rally in downtown Wichita.

And here along the banks of the Big Arkansas River, speaker after speaker vowed, "We won't go back" to the status of abortions before the Supreme Court made them legal in 1973.

"One of the most important issues of our time is the right to choose," Kate Michelman, the president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, told the crowd. "If we lose this right, America is lost."

The 90-minute rally and a daylong series of seminars was the first large-scale response to the weeks of anti-abortion protests that began here on July 15 and have resulted in more than 2,600 arrests, including 84 on Friday.

"We should have done this weeks ago," the president of the Fund for the Feminist Majority, Eleanor Smeal, said Saturday in an interview before the rally. "We should face them down and not allow this to happen."

Earlier, Ms. Michelman said the group will work to defeat anti-abortion politicians, including Gov. Joan Finney of Kansas, who has spoken warmly of the efforts here of the militant anti-abortion group Operation Rescue.

Ms. Michelman also said her organization would provide financial support for the local abortion rights group, the ProChoice Action League.

The group had been reluctant to seek out-of-town help for fear of confrontations with the abortion opponents.

The protesters have been trying to shut down the city's three abortion clinics by blocking the gates with their bodies even after a federal judge issued an injunction against doing so.

"We were invited here because it's been six weeks of this terrorism and these people aren't leaving," Ms. Michelman said before the rally. "This has been the most sustained period of assault on women going into these clinics ever. We have to take a more pro-active approach for gearing up for these assaults."

A police spokesman, Lt. Don Deckert, estimated Saturday's crowd at 5,000. Rally organizers said it was at least 6,000.

On Sunday, thousands of abortion opponents are expected here for their own rally in a football stadium. Rally organizers say the speakers will include the Rev. Pat Robertson, who sought the Republican nomination for president in 1988.

Some here had feared that the weekend of rallies could be the most volatile 48 hours of the summer in Wichita. But Saturday, in part because of a large police presence, there was no significant trouble.

The most serious incident occurred as the rally was winding down and an air conditioner repairman from Denver, 38-year-old Leon Gonzales, waded into the crowd, chanting "Pro-life, pro-life."

He was soon surrounded by people from the rally who shouted, "Go home! Go home!"

The police quickly moved in and escorted Gonzales to the edge of the park where a half-dozen other opponents of abortion stood holding a large banner that read, "Real Live Babies Being Killed! Rescue."

'One of the most important issues of our time is the right to choose. If we lose this right, America is lost.'

— Kate Michelman

"I wish you'd fold it up," a weary police officer told one of the men holding the banner. "We're getting a whole crowd."

Other abortion opponents walked in and out of the rally with no trouble.

Don Brenneman, a 52-year-old contractor from Lafayette, Ind., who had driven to Wichita for Sunday's rally, said he had come to the park Saturday to see "what the other side looked like."

"Pro-choice are dead people," Brenneman said. "They're not living by the spirit of God. I didn't know there were that many irresponsible Americans."

The rally drew people from around the country. Many, like Dana Long, 18, of Detroit, drove here with a carful of friends.

Virgina Clark, 65, rode on a bus for 10 hours to get here from Denver. "I have three married daughters and one grandchild," she said. "It's very important to me that my grandchild can make decisions for herself."

Pat Ranson, the coordinator for Kansas Republicans for Choice, said that since the anti-abortion protests began her group had received dozens of calls from Republicans seeking ways to support the clinics.

Democrats play risky by foregoing race

Al Gore. Jay Rockefeller. Dick Gephardt. All decided in recent weeks to forego the 1992 presidential race. At first glance, it would seem they had good reason: President Bush looks nearly impossible to beat next year.

And if there's safety in numbers, it would appear that Senators Rockefeller and Gore and House Majority Leader Gephardt have little to worry about.

Except each other. Definitely Bill Clinton. And maybe Bob Kerrey and Dave McCurdy and a few other young Democrats, too.

By sitting out 1992, Gephardt, Gore, Rockefeller risk being eclipsed by Arkansas Gov. Clinton, who appears likely to enter next year's race, as the Democratic star of their generation.

And even if Clinton suddenly opts out of the 1992 race or runs and falters, Gore, Rockefeller and Gephardt will have passed up an opportunity to stake sole claim to the party's leadership, and find themselves seeking it instead in a tougher 1996 contest, when the ambitions of a half-dozen or more young Democrats seem bound to collide.

"By skipping 1992, these young Democrats have made tragic, tragic mistakes for their political careers," says GOP pollster Bill McInturff. "Any young, middle-aged Democrat who runs in 1992 talking about new ideas and the 21st century would be the obvious nominee for that party in 1996."

Many Democratic analysts share McInturff's assessment.

"This window of opportunity may never open up again," said Bob Beckel, who managed Walter Mondale's 1984 campaign. "In 1992 you're going to have to run hard for only seven months, money is not as big a factor, and if you're the nominee you don't necessarily have to win, just exceed expectations against Bush and you're the clear favorite for the nomination in '96."

Beckel, while acknowledging Bush's strength, is at a loss to explain the reluctance of Democrats. "Has somebody told everybody if you run you're going to be assassinated?"

For Gephardt and Gore the decision to forego the 1992 race was more complicated than for Rockefeller. They ran in 1988 and were also-rans — their stock would fall dramatically if they ran again and failed to win the nomination.

■ Phone service to Iraq back in service

DETROIT — The United States and Iraq have restored telephone contact, enabling many Iraqi-Americans to talk to relatives and friends back home for the first time since the Persian Gulf War.

Long-distance telephone carrier MCI and the Iraqi government worked together over the last two weeks to link up service between the two countries, said Larry Codacovi, vice president of international services at Washington-based MCI Communications Corp.

MCI was authorized to activate satellite circuits with Iraq by the Federal Communications Commission and the State Department, so "we're not violating any sanctions," Codacovi said Friday.

He said Iraq had approached MCI about restoring the service.

As a result, Jihan Daman was awakened by a ringing telephone at 5 a.m. last Wednesday and spoke to Iraqi relatives she hadn't been able to hear from since mid-January.

"We immediately thought it was Baghdad," said Daman, 24, a student at Wayne State University. "We were happy to hear their voices, but at the same time we were depressed.

"People are fighting to survive," she said.

An estimated 250,000 Arab-Americans live in the Detroit area.

■ Repentant thief returns $500 to theater

FOREST CITY, N.C. — A repentant thief returned $500 he said he stole from a movie theater in 1983, but authorities aren't ready to forgive him.

Monday's mail at Cinema IV contained a letter with a $500 money order attached. Postmarked Tacoma, Wash., the message was brief and to the point:

"Dear Sirs: On a night in early 1984 or late 1983, the Forest City cinema was robbed of approximately $500. I was involved in this robbery and I am trying to put my life in order now. I hope you will accept this money order for $500 along with my sincere apologies."

Police Chief Tom McDevitt said the robbery occurred in this town in western North Carolina on Nov. 11, 1983. Someone apparently hid in the theater until it was locked up for the night.

Receipt of the missing money reopens the case, he said.

"It's mighty nice that they sent the money back," McDevitt said. "But if they really want to get even, they owe them $11.54 more."

Furthermore, prosecutors say the thief risks conviction though nearly eight years have passed.

■ Mayor to step down after eight decades

MCCALL, Idaho — This town's 91-year-old mayor says he's grown tired after a political career spanning eight decades and will step down in January.

Residents of this central Idaho resort community of 2,000 say Mayor John McCall, who will be 92 in November, is the nation's oldest mayor.

"I'm too old to enjoy it; I'd like to stay at home for a while," said Allen, a former California congressman and Eisenhower administration official. "The city is in good shape, and it is time for someone else to take over."

Allen was elected mayor four years ago.

Allen won his first political race at 23 — a 1922 election to the school board in Oakland, Calif. He spent years in the U.S. House of Representatives in the 1940s and '50s — the last Republican congressman to represent Oakland and Berkeley.

After losing the seat in 1958, he served as undersecretary of commerce for transportation in the Eisenhower administration.

■ Tower design looks like tree with wings

LOS ANGELES — The architects who designed a new control tower at Los Angeles International Airport say they were trying to combine the spirit of Los Angeles with the spirit of flight.

So they designed a control tower that looks something like a palm tree with wings.

"This is sort of the ultimate high-tech tree house," said Kate Diamond of Siegel Diamond Architects of Santa Monica. "The idea was that these struts and these wings become very much like the form of a palm tree, and that it's so Los Angeles."

Officials meet with inmates, hostages

N.Y. Times News Service

TALLADEGA, Ala. — For the second time since 121 Cuban prisoners here took over a cellblock and seized 10 hostages on Wednesday, negotiators came face to face with some of the inmates and some of the hostages Saturday when medical workers were allowed to provide routine medications.

Roger Scott, warden of the 909-inmate Talladega Federal Correctional Institution, said that medical workers saw six of the hostages and "several of the Cuban detainees" and added, "There are no signs that any of the hostages seen by the medical staff have been harmed."

The first face-to-face contact came Thursday night when negotiators provided medical assistance and medication to three of the hostages and two of the prisoners.

Throughout the standoff, officials of the Bureau of Prison have refused to provide any details about what was happening inside, and following that policy they would not disclose what sort of medical problem was being addressed or what medication was involved.

They would say only that it did not involve anything life threatening.

Asked about any demands from the prisoners, Scott suggested that the medical treatment had been among the items under discussion.

"The medical treatment is the only thing that we have managed to agree on at this point," he said, adding that the cellblock where the uprising took place was calm and that the negotiations were continuing.

Food for the inmates and the hostages appeared to be a subject of negotiation early in the takeover, but officials have said that since Thursday night food had not been an issue.

Daniel R. Dunne, deputy public affairs officer for the Bureau of Prisons, said that negotiators were now speculating that the prisoners had obtained food from the prison commissary in the days before the takeover and "may have stored it in anticipation of this action."

He said negotiators believed that it was "being rationed out" and shared with the hostages.

Some of the discussion between prisoners and officials are being conducted over walkie-talkies and some of the radio transmissions have been intercepted by news organizations with scanning receivers, raising questions similar to those that arose four years ago during uprisings by Cubans at federal prisons in Atlanta and Oakdale, La.

Then news organizations frequently reported what was being said by unnamed people supposedly speaking for prisoners.

Trial depicts two sides of Gorman

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Marvin Gorman painted himself as a preacher who fell from grace because other men's wives fell upon him. The women whose names were linked with Gorman's told a far different story last week.

Jurors in Gorman's $90 million defamation suit against fellow television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart heard about counseling mixed with embraces longer and kisses deeper than Gorman's public shows of evangelical affection.

"He grabbed me. He kissed me passionately with a French kiss," Jane Talbot said Thursday, describing her first such encounter. From another woman, they heard of a 2½-year mixture of Christian counseling and motel trysts.

Mrs. Talbot's testimony resumes Monday with cross-examination by Hunter Lundy, Gorman's attorney.

Defense attorneys said there also would be testimony, either videotaped or in person, from a woman who says Gorman, 58, threatened to expose her as a lesbian unless she had sex with him.

Gorman claims Swaggart felt threatened by his much smaller but rapidly growing ministry and masterminded a campaign of rumors that ruined him.

He resigned from the First Assembly of God in New Orleans in 1986 after confessing to behavior unbecoming a minister, and was expelled from the denomination a few days later. But continuing reports that he was an unrepentant womanizer forced him into bankruptcy in 1987, Gorman said.

Women who testified last week told of guilt-stricken attempts to end the sexual side of their relationships with Gorman.

Cheryl McConnell, an inarticulate, willowy blonde who saw Gorman from 1978 through 1981, said she told him several times that the hug and kiss with which he began each session made her feel bad.

"One time he said I wasn't getting any younger," said Mrs. McConnell, 47. Did he say anything else? "We all had desires. Needs. ... One time he said something to the effect that things were all right with him."

Lynda Savage, the one woman with whom Gorman acknowledges having sexual intercourse, said she tried many times to end a 2½-year affair with him.

The first time they petted, she said, was in Gorman's room at a camp meeting to which he had invited her and her husband, minister at another Assemblies of God church, for counseling.

Mrs. Savage said she and Gorman committed adultery seven or eight times over 2½ years, ending at her insistence in December 1981.

Chairman finds racial bias on bases

WASHINGTON — After touring six American military bases in Germany, the chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said he found evidence of pervasive racial discrimination.

The chairman, Arthur A. Fletcher, told senior Pentagon officials Friday that the discrimination was occurring in the promotion of enlisted personnel and in the hiring and promotion of civilian defense employees. He also said racial discrimination was endemic in the schools for employees' children.

Fletcher said blacks at many levels were afraid to complain about discrimination, fearing retaliation.

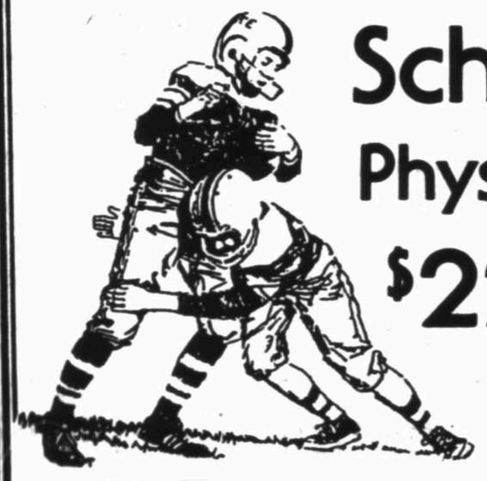

"Lo and behold, when I got over there I found complaint after complaint," the chairman said Saturday in a telephone interview. "I was surprised."

Fletcher's conclusions, which were first reported in The Washington Post on Saturday, come at a time when the military is being widely celebrated as one of the least discriminatory institutions in American life. A recent cover story in The New Republic magazine, for instance, sought to explain "Why the military is the only truly integrated institution in America."

Despite his findings, Fletcher said, "There is reason to believe that blacks do better in the military than they do in civilian life."

But he added "I also find that the glass is half empty. There's a lot more work to be done."

Sam Brown of Lewisville sits beside one of his chalk drawings on a Denton sidewalk. He got a $215 ticket from police for drawing on a Dallas sidewalk recently.

Police ticket sidewalk artist

DALLAS (AP) — For the second time in three years, artist Sam Brown has been ticketed for defacing sidewalks.

He hopes he is as successful in fighting a $215 ticket from Dallas police as he was in challenging a citation from Denton police while he was an art major at the University of North Texas.

Like this one, that ticket was for sidewalk chalk drawings.

He was cited in October 1988 for defacing sidewalks. A city ordinance prohibited painting signs, pictures "or other advertisements" on city sidewalks.

But a Denton city judge decided that Brown's work was art, not advertising and acquitted him. The Denton City Council said prosecuting him was unnecessary and ordered a clarification of the ordinance.

Brown, who lives in Lewisville, is now allowed to practice his sidewalk chalk art in Denton.

But in Dallas, Brown and some friends were drawing on the sidewalk outside a design studio in the artsy Deep Ellum section of Dallas in the early morning hours of July 6. He was just beginning a white chalk geometric design when two Dallas police officers approached.

"They told us that they thought what we were doing was against the law. I couldn't believe it. I said, 'Gimme a break.' I felt it was a matter of reasonable judgment. It was not anything that was anti-social," Brown said.

City ordinance 43.22 reads: "No person shall deface by placing upon a sidewalk in the city any marks or signs by stencils or otherwise of any nature or character whatsoever."

Brown said he has been using sidewalks of Deep Ellum as his canvas for about a year. His sidewalk creations are more of a hobby than a profession, he said.

"I really don't think sidewalk chalk drawings is against the law. It's not mischievous, and I'm not a criminal," he said.

"I tried to convince the officers that it was art, not vandalism. I told them it's only chalk, it washes away. I told them the drawing would be gone in five days. But they were adamant that they were going to give me a ticket."

Jane Corley, Brown's attorney, said the ordinance is intended to fight graffiti, not art.

"It is not something that would offend most viewers. This is not the kind of thing the statute is designed to stop," she said.

State investigates missing marijuana

DALLAS (AP) — State troopers who are looking into the disappearance of a trash bag stuffed with marijuana from a sheriff's evidence closet say an audit of the South Texas department raises new questions about the case.

However, Zapata County Sheriff Romeo R. Ramirez called the missing bag of drugs "a minor thing" that does not warrant an outside investigation.

"I don't believe the marijuana ever existed," he said.

The trash bag was one of 10 that investigators found crammed with 258 pounds of marijuana after they responded to an anonymous tip in Zapata, a city south of Laredo. The drugs had been stashed in a wooden shed.

The missing bag contained about 20 pounds of marijuana, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

Joe Rubio, district attorney for Webb and Zapata counties, said he also called in the FBI last month. Other law enforcement officials said it was the third case in 2½ years involving discrepancies in handling of marijuana seized in Zapata County.

An audit by Lt. George Olivo, supervisor of the DPS narcotics office in Laredo, was completed last Friday on the sheriff's department narcotics evidence room.

Boerne ISD trustees ban earrings

BOERNE (AP) — Ten students sporting earrings have until next week to remove them and another dozen youths got haircuts on educators' orders, but one teen decided to study at home rather than comply with the dress code.

Jeremy Toth's mother has been fighting the code, which contains a prohibition on boys wearing hair below the collar of a regular dress shirt.

But Boerne School District trustees voted last week to continue the long-hair ban.

"There have been no problems. We sent home about 12 boys to get haircuts, and all of them complied," said Dr. Joe Doenges, district superintendent.

Administrators said another 10 were given until Monday to remove their earrings.

Toth, a 16-year-old junior, refused to cut his hair after about 40 students were sent home to get trims last year. He received instruction in an alternative classroom separate from his fellow students.

"I might go back to school the last six weeks, but not if they don't change the dress code. It is more or less a matter of principle now," he said Friday.

Doenges said the school's enrollment of 820 is the largest in its history, and he was surprised at adverse reaction to the dress-code enforcement.

"We had to discipline no one," Doenges said.

Bullock, Lewis hope session ends today

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis said Saturday they hope to end this special session today, its seventh day.

"That's our plan," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth. "We're going to stay in as late as we can and finish everything up and go home tomorrow night, if we can."

Bullock said he thought that senators could complete work on redistricting and prison issues Sunday, then adjourn.

"As far as I'm concerned, that concludes the Senate's business," he said. Bullock said no senator had informed him of plans to filibuster.

Adjournment could leave some issues hanging, including legislation to continue the state's purchasing department and to create a state workers' compensation fund to provide coverage to employers rejected by private insurers.

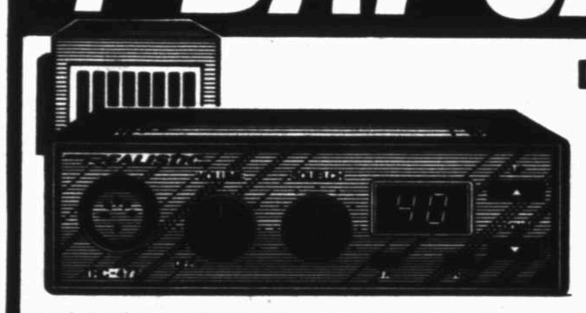

"Sure doesn't hang me up," Bullock said of those issues. "The longer we stay around, the more issues will be coming up. We can please some of the people some of the time, as the old saying goes, but we cannot please everybody on everything that someone would like done in this special session."

"The people of Texas have about had enough of our business, I think," Bullock said.

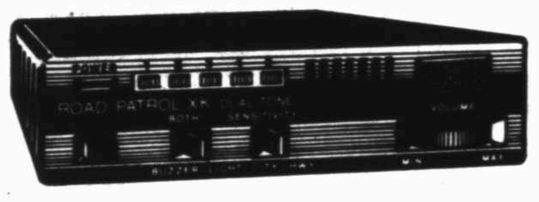

Lewis said lawmakers still were trying to salvage those other issues.

Lawmakers met in regular session for 140 days earlier this year. On Aug. 13, they concluded a 30-day special session by passing a state budget and tax increase.

Prison panel weighs flogging, mutilations

AUSTIN (AP) — Flogging and mutilations for convicted criminals are among the penalties to be explored by a panel that would be created under the $1.1 billion prison bill passed by the Texas House.

The bill passed Friday would include a commission to recommend revisions to the state's criminal laws. The panel would study the feasibility of instituting corporal punishment, such as flogging and chopping off fingers.

Rep. Al Edwards has often pushed for such punishments.

"Whether it's the electric chair, needle, lashings, chopping a finger, whatever it takes, they (criminals) need to know they are going to be punished," said Edwards, D-Houston.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where Sen. John Montford said many of the House amendments could be removed to ensure passage of the basic bill.

"You start loading this thing up, you jeopardize the whole package," said Montford, D-Lubbock. "Those may be popular ideas, but again this is not the time and place to barrage the bill."

The corporal punishment study commission is only part of the massive bill designed to settle county jail overcrowding lawsuits against the state and build some 25,000 new prison beds.

Of those 25,000 new prison beds, 12,000 would be set aside for drug and alcohol treatment. Construction depends on voters, who will be asked to approve bonds Nov. 5 for the project.

Lawmakers are in special session trying to resolve lawsuits of 13 counties that successfully sued the state for payment for caring for the backlog of state inmates in their jails.

Another amendment added to the bill would allow counties, through a referendum, to raise their sales tax by one-quarter cent and dedicate that money for criminal justice needs.

The effectiveness of attempts to ease inmate overcrowding may have been blunted by a provision that will deny parole to criminals sentenced for offenses where a weapon was used.

Under the proposal by Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, a person convicted of using a weapon in a crime, such as a robbery, rape or kidnapping, would have to serve the entire sentence. Currently, such an inmate would be eligible for parole after serving one-fourth of the sentence.

"These people are the most dangerous predators out there," Ms. Danburg said.

But other lawmakers accused her of pushing a politically popular amendment that wasn't practical given the fact that thousands of inmates already are backed up in county jails awaiting transfer to the overcrowded state prison system.

An earlier deal to settle all the county lawsuits failed when Harris County, the state's largest, wouldn't go along.

Under the latest proposed jail settlement, if all the counties agree to drop their lawsuits, the state in 1995 would take responsibility for accepting all felons within 45 days of their sentencing.

Bo rained out

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The first performance of the Bo Road Show was a no-go.

Bo Jackson's first step back toward the major leagues was delayed a day when rain posponed Saturday night's Florida State League game between the Sarasota White Sox and Charlotte Rangers.

Jackson, under contract with the Chicago White Sox but sidelined all season with a severe hip injury, was to begin serving a two-day rehabilitation assignment as a designated hitter for Sarasota.

The rainout was rescheduled for Sunday as part of a day-night doubleheader.

Angels win in extra innings

■ Midland's division lead goes back up to two games, as the Haloes pull out a 9-8 win.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Don Barbara punched out a single with one out in the bottom of the 11th to lead the Midland Angels to a 9-8 win over the San Antonio Missions Saturday night at Angels Stadium.

The Angel win, combined with Wichita's 6-5 loss to El Paso gives Midland (32-27) a two-game lead atop the Texas League West Division standings. The Diablos and Wranglers are tied for second, both with 30-29 records.

Barbara, the muscular Angel first baseman, fouled off the first two pitches to fall behind in the count before hitting his sharp grounder just past the reach of the San Antonio shortstop. Barbara's single scored Mark Howie, who had reached earlier on a single.

The Angels had the bases juiced in the 11th and final frame before Barbara stepped to the plate for the game winner.

Hector Berrios, the fifth Angel pitcher of the night, picked up the win to move his record to 2-1. Ray Calhoun took the loss to fall to 0-3.

Midland pitcher Dave Shotkoski grimaces in pain as Angel trainer Scott Sowell treats him after being hit by a hard bouncer from Adam Brown.

Angel starter Dave Shotkoski was smoothly gliding along in the second when, with one out, Mission designated hitter Adam Brown hit a hard bouncer back to the mound. Shotkoski, struck in the right shoulder, fell to the turf briefly, regained his footing to make a late throw to first and then fell to the ground again in obvious pain. After several moments, Shotkoski walked back to the mound, struck out the next batter and retired the final Mission on a fly out to right before being pulled from the game for good at the end of the inning.

Angel pitching coach Kernan Ronan said after the game X-rays will be taken of Shotkoski's pitching shoulder today.

Shotkoski was relieved by Clemente Acosta, who had his problems, giving up eight hits and seven runs in four innings.

The win for the Angels was another comebacker. Over half of the Angels' second half wins have come after Midland has fallen behind. The win was also Midland's fourth in extra innings this

Seminoles preseason No. 1 pick

Associated Press

Florida State, which has never finished first in college football, is starting on top in 1991.

The Seminoles, who have come close to winning a national title the last four years, are No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason poll. They were the overwhelming choice, getting 49 of 60 first-place votes and 1,483 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

"It really doesn't surprise me because everyone seems to be picking us No. 1," said coach Bobby Bowden, who has 17 starters back from last year's 10-2 team that finished fourth in the nation.

"But I still say there are eight or 10 teams that you can put in a hat that have as much a chance to be up there as we do."

One of those teams is No. 2 Michigan, which plays Florida State in Ann Arbor on Sept. 28. The Wolverines got five first-place votes and 1,384 points.

Miami, which has won three national championships since 1983, is No. 3 with two first-place votes and 1,276 points. Washington is next with one first-place ballot and 1,252 points, followed by Florida with one first-place vote and 1,150 points.

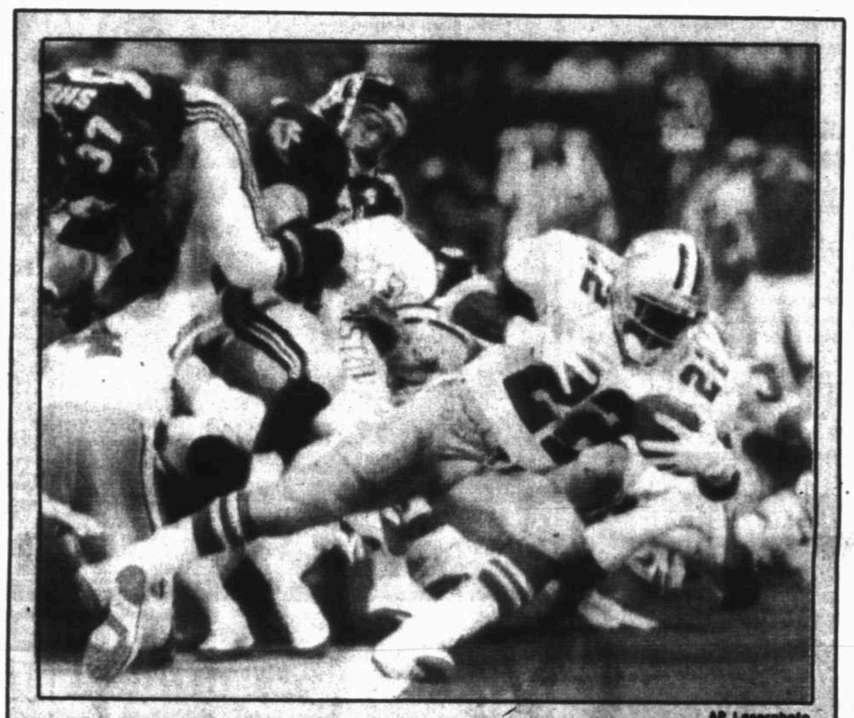

Rounding out the Top 10 are Notre Dame, Penn State, Georgia Tech, Clemson and Oklahoma. Tennessee is 11th, followed by Houston, Colorado, Texas, Nebraska, Southern Cal, Auburn, Iowa, BYU, Michigan State, Texas A&M, Alabama, Ohio State, UCLA and Syracuse.

Clemson and Houston each received one first-place vote.

With three schools in the Top 5, Florida is clearly the dominant state in college football. It's the first time in the 55-year history of the AP poll that one state has placed three schools in the Top 5.

"We're starting the year as the No. 3 team in Florida, and this is one state where that's not all bad," said Florida coach Steve Spurrier. "One of our primary goals is to become the top program in the state. If we can achieve that each year, we will be a nationally ranked team."

This is the second time Florida State has been ranked No. 1 in the preseason poll. The Seminoles also were No. 1 in 1988, but didn't hold onto the top spot very long. After Deion Sanders and several teammates made a video to celebrate their status, they went out and lost their opener to Miami 31-0.

Cowboys emerge mostly unscathed

■ Jimmy Johnson is happy his Dallas Cowboys stayed healthy for next Sunday's season opener in Cleveland.

Associated Press

IRVING — Jimmy Johnson was elated. Not because his Dallas Cowboys defeated the Atlanta Falcons 20-17 in overtime on Friday night but because nobody got hurt.

"It was the kind of game you didn't want to get anybody hurt," Johnson said. "I got Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith out of there early and our backup players were in there most of the second half. They were sucking some deep wind at the end."

Atlanta rallied from a 17-0 deficit to tie the game but missed a victory because Rich Karlis missed a 34-yard field goal with seconds left.

Ken Willis kicked a 38-yard field goal with 2:35 elapsed in overtime to beat the Falcons. Both teams finished the exhibition season with 2-2 records.

Atlanta went with its first team most of the game. Starting quarterback Chris Miller played all four quarters and almost pulled out a victory. He passed for 253 yards and had one interception.

"We didn't want a game like this to go into overtime but it's always nice to end the preseason with a win," Johnson said. "Now we can get on with the real thing."

Dallas opens the regular season at Cleveland while Atlanta is at Kansas City.

Atlanta coach Jerry Glanville said he still has confidence in Karlis.

"I've played musical kickers before and there is not much future in that," Glanville said. "Somewhere down the line I look for him to step up and make the big kick to win the football game."

Johnson was happy his team came away with only bumps and bruises.

"Emmitt Smith sprained an ankle but could have played," Johnson said. "We're ready to work on Cleveland now. We wanted to win at the end but after all it's only a preseason game."

It was the first preseason meeting between the two franchises.

Rebels shine at Sonora

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

SONORA — An amazing thing happened here Saturday morning. Midland Lee's football Rebels looked good in a preseason scrimmage.

For the past three years, Lee has fumbled and stumbled its way to the season opener. Saturday the Rebs put a shotgun to the head of San Antonio Clark and pulled the trigger, winning by a 4-1 margin.

What makes this so surprising is the fact that Lee went into this scrimmage without some key starters and Clark may own the biggest offensive line in the state with the "smallest" starter weighing in at 242 pounds.

"We lost a 1,000 pounds in guards in the last two weeks," noted Lee offensive line coach Ronnie Stephens. "I was proud of the way the ones we had left played."

The Lee offense moved almost at will as Clark couldn't solve Lee's Wishbone option sweep. Clark is big, but speed burns them if a back gets into the secondary. That was the Lee success.

The under-sold stock of Lee quarterback Jimmy Patton should see a marked rise in price after this scrimmage. The senior, who had one yard rushing in two carries last year, rushed for 115 yards and a touchdown. He also completed two short passes to tight ends Ryan Tucker and Jeb Honeyman in four attempts.

Patton's TD run came on the second play of the scrimmage, covering 69 yards after breaking a tackle in his own backfield. If confidence is all that Patton needs to become a good quarterback, then he got a big jolt of it Saturday.

New offensive coordinator Mike Quimby seemed to have the Rebels striking from long distance just like the trademark of old Lee teams. Besides Patton's sideline option romp, non-starters Sherman Dedrick, Phillip Sims and Marlon Henry also scored on long runs.

Dedrick broke a TD for 46 yards; Sims had one of 65 and Henry was untouched for 25 yards. Lee also drove to Clark's eight-yard line on another series before the 10-play limit ran out.

Clark's only score came deep into the scrimmage with Lee leading 3-0. Quarter-

Lewis runs wind-aided 9.8 at world meet

Associated Press

TOKYO — Carl Lewis, a man on a mission, showed Saturday that his mission is not impossible.

Lewis' first goal at the World Track and Field Championships is to win his third straight world title in the 100-meter dash and break Leroy Burrell's world record of 9.90 seconds.

Aided by a wind of 4.3 meters per second in a second-round heat, Lewis blazed to victory in 9.80 seconds — the third-fastest ever run under any conditions. But because of the wind — well over the allowable 2.0 meters per second — Lewis' time cannot be recognized as a record.

It could, however, be a strong message to Burrell that Lewis is ready for his usual big-meet performance in Sunday night's final.

"Today is not that important," Lewis said. "It doesn't matter. Tomorrow is THE race.

"I've run faster than that before with more wind."

Lewis' faster race came during the 1988 U.S. Olympic Trials at Indianapolis, where he ran 9.78 with a wind of 5.2 meters per second. The only other time faster than Lewis' 9.80 was the 9.79 by Canadian Ben Johnson in the 1988 Olympic final at Seoul. Johnson later was stripped of his world record and gold medal after testing positive for a performance-enhancing drug.

After his spectacular race Saturday, Lewis was gloating and ecstatic.

"All year long, people have tried to count me out," he said. "I have yet to run my best race.

"I had two good ones today. Now they are in the memory bank. I wish I could take this second race into the final."

Lewis also had the fastest time, 10.12, in the first-round heats.

The two races were in sharp contrast. In the first, he was out of the blocks quickly and maintained his momentum throughout most of the race, before easing toward the finish. In the second, he was slower at the start, before accelerating brilliantly in midrace and zooming across the finish line, after taking a sideways glance at Britain's Linford Christie, the Olympic silver medalist.

Lewis said he had been experiencing mechanical difficulties this season, but corrected them in the past week during workouts at National Stadium, site of the World Championships.

KC pounds Ryan, Rangers

Associated Press

AL Roundup

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Nolan Ryan had his shortest outing in more than a year and Mike Boddicker increased his record against Texas to 15-4 as the Royals beat the Rangers 8-1 Saturday night.

Ryan, making his second start since coming off the disabled left Monday, allowed four runs and six hits in 1 2-3 innings and walked three. It was his shortest start since May 8, 1990, when he got just two outs against the Royals.

Boddicker (11-8) gave up eight hits and one run in eight innings, struck out six and walked two. He is 3-0 against Texas this year.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 5

TORONTO — The Blue Jays lost their lead in the AL East and dropped into a first-place tie with Detroit, falling to the Yankees as Steve Sax singled to key a sixth-inning rally.

Toronto, which had held sole possession of first place since June 23, lost for the 11th time in 16 games. The Blue Jays led the division by eight games on July 15.

Indians 2, White Sox 1

CLEVELAND — Charles Nagy won for the first time since July 27, beating Jack McDowell as the Indians prevailed, handing the White Sox their fifth straight defeat.

Nagy (7-11), with an 11.00 ERA in his previous four starts, struck out six and walked four in eight innings, allowing one run and five hits. Steve Olin pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Tigers 7, Mariners 2

DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit his major league-leading 36th homer and drove in three runs as the Tigers beat the Mariners for their fifth straight victory.

Seattle lost its fifth in a row.

Frank Tanana (11-8) shut out the Mariners until the seventh inning, and allowed just two runs on eight hits through eight innings.

Randy Johnson (12-9), who no-hit Detroit last season, gave up six runs on six hits and five walks in three-plus innings.

Brewers 7, Athletics 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bill Wegman won for the first time at the Oakland Coliseum and Greg Vaughn and Bill Spiers homered as the Brewers routed the Athletics.

Wegman (9-6) scattered nine hits for his third career shutout and first since he beat Oakland at home on May 18, 1990.

Twins 5, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Dan Gladden's bases-loaded triple capped a four-run rally in the ninth inning that enabled the Twins to beat the Orioles.

Shane Mack homered in the seventh for Minnesota's first run and hit an RBI single in the ninth that made it 2-all. The Twins, who have won seven of nine, have come from behind to win 32 times.

Angels 1, Red Sox 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Greenwell and rookie Mo Vaughn engaged in a brief brawl during batting practice, then the Red Sox lost to the Angels 1-0.

Kirk McCaskill (10-16) allowed three hits in eight innings for the Angels and Dave Winfield homered in the eighth.

Rijo shuts Mets out

Associated Press

NL Roundup

NEW YORK — Jose Rijo pitched his second career two-hitter as the Reds tore up the Mets 7-0 Saturday before a national TV audience and a restless crowd.

Rijo (10-4) retired the first 14 Mets before Gregg Jefferies grounded a six-hop single to right field in the fifth, bringing on a sarcastic cheer from the crowd of 39,986.

Last season's World Series MVP struck out nine and issued his only walk with two outs in the ninth inning. Rijo has won nine of his last 11 decisions.

Expos 5, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Pinch-hitter Tom Foley hit a three-run double as the Expos rallied for five runs in the eighth inning.

Bret Barberie led off the eighth with a double off Mark Portugal (9-6) and took third on Gilberto Reyes' single. Delino DeShields tied the game with a single off Al Osuna.

Cardinals 7, Dodgers 3

ST. LOUIS — Omar Olivares and two relievers combined for a seven-hitter as the Cardinals beat Los Angeles and kept the Dodgers' NL West lead at one game over the Braves.

Milt Thompson and Ray Lankford homered and Todd Zeile hit a two-run single for St. Louis, which closed within five games of first-place Pittsburgh in the NL East.

Phillies 6, Braves 5

ATLANTA — Charlie Hayes hit a solo home run in the ninth inning and the Phillies beat the Braves, disappointing Atlanta's largest crowd in more than four years.

The Braves, who began the day one game behind Los Angeles in the NL West, drew 45,679 fans, the biggest attendance at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium since July 3, 1987. Philadelphia ended Atlanta's four-game winning streak and also tied the Mets for fourth place in the NL East.

Padres 4, Cubs 1

CHICAGO — Andy Benes won his fifth straight decision and the Padres stopped a four-game losing streak.

Benes (9-10) pitched seven innings and gave up three hits, including Andre Dawson's 22nd home run leading off the Chicago fifth. He struck out four and walked none.

Giants 5, Pirates 1

PITTSBURGH — Giants starter Trevor Wilson won his fifth decision in a row, turning three Pittsburgh errors and his own two-run single into a victory over the division-leading Pirates.

The Pirates' fourth loss in five games continued their unsuccessful search to find a No. 5 starter to replace the injured Bob Walk. His four replacement starters — Hector Fajardo, Paul Miller, Rick Reed, and Neal Heaton — are 1-4 and have surrendered 20 runs in 19 2-3 innings since Walk went on the disabled list July 27.

ANGELS: Flora has four-hit night season, compared with four extra-inning losses.

After scoring four runs in the first inning, Angel sticks were held virtually silent for the next 4⅓ innings. During that span, San Antonio starter Albert Bustillos allowed just three Midland hits and only one run. In the meantime, the Missions' offense had cranked up, scoring four in the third and three in the fourth to take a 7-5 lead with the game entering the bottom of the sixth.

Angel catcher Larry Gonzales had a solo homer in the sixth to draw the Angels to within one, 7-6.

San Antonio scored another run in its half of the ninth to go up 8-6. Midland's Walt McConnell then tied things up in the bottom of the ninth with a two-run single to force the extra innings.

Walt McConnell's one-out single scored Reggie Williams and Kevin Flora to tie the game at 8-8.

Flora, incidentally, was 4-for-6 with two runs scored for his first four-hit performance of the season.

Fili Martinez (4-4) throws for the Angels tonight. Gametime is 6 p.m. The Famous Chicken will be on hand for his final local performance of the season.

Pruitt leads PGA World Series of Golf

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Dillard Pruitt, the longshot leader of the World Series of Golf, has one fond hope going into Sunday's final round.

"It's a long, tough golf course," Pruitt said of the 7,149-yard Firestone layout.

"I just hope I can get out of here tomorrow without it getting me," Pruitt said after he opened an extra length of daylight with an 18th-hole birdie to close out Saturday's third round.

At one time or another over the first three rounds, tough old Firestone got almost everyone else in the elite, 48-man winners-only field from around the world.

Only Pruitt and Tom Purtzer were able to beat its grudging par of 210 for 54 holes; Pruitt with a third-round 68 and a 205 total, and Purtzer with a 67 for 208.

And Purtzer — the only man within five strokes of Pruitt — was less than completely confident about his chances.

"I wish I was playing a little bit better. I wish I felt a little bit better about my game," Purtzer said.

On the surface, their head-to-head pairing in the last group for Sunday's final round would appear to favor Purtzer. He's a 39-year-old veteran in his 17th season on the PGA Tour, recognized as one of the game's long hitters and playing one of the tour's longer courses.

Pruitt, on the other hand, is in only his third season on the tour. He's won only once — capturing the Chattanooga Classic last month while most of the game's greats were playing in the British Open.

Cards' Rosenbach out for season

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Phoenix Cardinals quarterback Timm Rosenbach said Saturday he will undergo knee surgery and miss the 1991 NFL season.

Rosenbach told a news conference he made the decision after consulting with orthopedic specialists Russell Chick, the team physician, and Steve Lombardo of the Kerlan-Jobe clinic in Inglewood, Calif.

Rosenbach threw for 3,098 yards in 1990 and rushed for 470.

Trevino controls Sunwest

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Lee Trevino has found a cure for what ailed him.

Trevino, coming off a two-week rest that included skipping the PGA Championship, methodically birdied his way to a 7-under-par 65 Saturday and a two-shot lead over 61-year-old super senior Don January at the Sunwest Bank Senior Classic.

Trevino's 36-hole total of 131 was 13-under on the par-72 6,722-yard Four Hills Country Club course.

January, trying to become the first super senior (60 and over) to win a Senior Tour event, stayed close with a 66 that included five birdies on the back nine.

But he could not match Trevino's pace. After bogeying the 456-yard, par-4 ninth hole, Trevino birdied four of next six holes. He held off January's charge by making a 35-foot birdie putt on the par-5 15th and finished the round with a 15-foot birdie on No. 18.

Jack Kiefer, with a second-round 66, Don Massengale, with a 67, and first-round co-leader Babe Hiskey, who matched par with a 72, were five shots in back of Trevino heading into the final 18 holes on Sunday.

Defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez was at 137 along with Tom Shaw, Jim Dent, Al Geiberger and Don Bies.

Bies, whose opening-round 64 on Friday gave him a share of the lead with Hiskey, shot a 73 on Saturday.

Monaghan in front at Shootout

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Kris Monaghan celebrated her 31st birthday Saturday by firing a course record-tying 7-under-par 65 that moved her from three shots off the pace into the lead of the $425,000 LPGA-Chicago Sun-Times Shootout.

Monaghan had eight birdies and a single bogey on the sunny, breezy afternoon and completed the third round with an 11-under 205 total. That's three shots better than Tina Barrett, whose 3-under 69 gave her sole possession of second place at 208.

"My golf has been good lately and I think I'm due," said Monaghan, who sank four 20-foot putts, including three for birdies. "I've hit the ball well yesterday and Thursday. And today — well, it's destiny."

Monaghan, a native of Spokane, Wash., who now lives in Albuquerque, N.M., won last year's Inamori Classic for her only victory since joining the tour in 1984. She is 54th on this year's money list.

Nine golfers will start Sunday's final round at the 6,231-yard Oak Brook Golf Club within six shots of the lead.

Bears romp over Bills, 30-13

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mark Green caught Chicago's first touchdown pass of the preseason and ran 6 yards for another score as the Bears downed the Bills 30-13 Saturday night in the NFL's final exhibition game.

Green caught a 4-yard pass from backup quarterback Peter Tom Willis to cap a 77-yard drive in the third quarter, then recovered a fumbled kickoff to set up his second touchdown with 1:55 remaining in the game.

Neal Anderson and Jim Harbaugh also scored touchdowns and Kevin Butler kicked a 38-yard field goal for the Bears (2-3). Scott Norwood had a pair of 21-yard field goals for the Bills (2-3) before Gale Gilbert hit Brad Lamb with a 55-yard touchdown pass on the game's final play.

NFL Preseason

Both teams sat out key players because of injuries. Buffalo was without quarterback Jim Kelly and defensive end Bruce Smith. Missing for the Bears included fullback Brad Muster, linebacker Mike Singletary and defensive end Trace Armstrong.

Patriots 24, Giants 3

FOXBORO, Mass. — Leonard Russell ran for 122 yards and one touchdown and Tommy Hodson passed for another score as the New England Patriots snapped a 17-game losing streak with an exhibition victory over the Giants.

The Patriots, whose last victory of any kind was a 16-14 triumph over Indianapolis in the second game of the 1990 season, had lost 25 of their last 26 games going back to the final three games of 1989.

Bengals 19, Packers 16 (OT)

MILWAUKEE — Jim Breech kicked a game-tying 31-yard field goal with three seconds left in regulation and a 43-yarder with 8:40 left in the overtime to lift the Bengals over the Packers.

Cincinnati (2-2) also won in overtime on a Breech field goal last week, when it rallied from a 14-3 deficit to beat Minnesota 27-24.

Jets 13, Redskins 9

Dolphins 28, Saints 24

MIAMI — New Orleans shut out $25 million quarterback Dan Marino but couldn't keep Miami's defense and special teams out of the end zone as Paul Lankford recovered a blocked punt for a touchdown with 2:20 remaining to give the Dolphins the victory.

MHS spikers storm Monahans

Staff Report

MONAHANS — Midland High's varsity and junior varsity volleyball teams competed in the Monahans Tournament here Friday and Saturday.

The MHS varsity went 3-3 in pool play, tying for second place in the pool but not qualifying for Saturday's finals because of a points tie-breaker.

Because of the format, all matches playing within the pool do not count in the Lady 'Dogs' 1-0 season record.

After beating Snyder Friday, the Lady 'Dog j.v. came away with wins over Presidio and Pecos Saturday, then fell to Monahans in the championship.

"I'm pleased with the whole team's performance. Jodie Strain who came in and served beautifully in the semifinals and kept us in the match. Also, Lisa Koss and Casi Madison played well," said Susan Nix, MHS j.v. coach.

Another new day dawns for USSR

Mikhail Gorbachev's resignation from the Soviet Communist Party and his call for the party hierarchy to consider disbanding the organization was the inevitable end Saturday to a week of surprising and fast-moving events. In effect Gorbachev was saying to the party's leaders that it had failed, that it should be relegated to the dustbin of Soviet history.

He's correct. It should be disbanded and a new system of government, one based on individual liberties and human rights, put into place.

Within the next few days, the party's Central Committee could well take that action, since over the last few years Gorbachev effectively stripped the Communists of authority and built up the independent post of president. That could be a dangerous development since it could be movement toward a dictatorship, which analysts have noted in the past. But to lead to a dictatorship, Gorbachev or any would-be dictator would have to garner the support of the army and after last week's coup attempt was thwarted by protesters seeking democratic reform, such a development is extremely unlikely.

Over the past six years Gorbachev has carefully led the Soviet Union through democratic reforms although on many occasions maneuvering the changes past the old guard in the Communist Party apparatus proved difficult. Now, with his resignation from the party and with the hard-line faction that led last week's coup effectively countered, Gorbachev is in position to move the Soviet Union forward.

It isn't going to be easy; the Soviets have 74 years of evil and stagnation to overcome. Evolving into a political system that fulfills the hopes and dreams of the people of the Soviet Union is the goal. Gorbachev has said he favors a reformed version of the Communist Party. "I believe that democratic-minded Communists loyal to constitutional lawfulness, to the course of renewal of society, will call for the setting up of a party on a new foundation," he said.

One thing is certain: to lead the Soviet Union through this "new day" it will need visionary leaders, individuals who can recognize when their on the wrong track and that a change needs to be made.

Both Mikhail Gorbachev and, particularly, Boris N. Yeltsin, president of the Russian Federation, have shown that they possess such vision. It was Gorbachev's vision that brought the changes to the Soviet Union that, in effect, permitted last week's coup reversal to occur — glasnost and perestroika. It is Yeltsin, however, who has led the Russian Federation in the direction of democratic reform and who undoubtedly will be a major figure shaping the Soviet Union's "new day."

Make safe driving a Midland tradition

Yes, it's only the 25th of August and, yes, those lazy, hazy, crazy days of summer are still proceeding onward toward that distant — and traditional — launching pad into fall known as Labor Day, but all that aside it's still time once again for whom the bell tolls. The school bell, that is.

And, yes, it's early for school to be starting, but many old traditions are falling to the wayside as the Texas Legislature looks for ways to legislate a better-educated populace, a goal we should all support.

There is one tradition, however, that should not be slighted as the school year begins: traffic safety.

The start of school is an exciting time for youngsters and as a result they may not be watching vehicles on city streets as carefully as they should; motorists in Midland should make an extra effort over the next couple of weeks to watch out for youngsters crossing streets in crosswalks or darting from behind parked cars. It would be tragic to mar the start of this school year with an accident that could have been prevented.

Of course, the start of school — which arrived last Monday in Greenwood and will come this Monday in Midland — also ushers in heightened business and social activity as the year begins to wind down. It's an exciting, enjoyable, and challenging time. But that does not mean that safety on city streets is not as vital as ever.

A safe start to the fall season will help make this a memorable year for all concerned.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 25, 1944, Allied forces liberated Paris, ending four years of German occupation. The surrender of Maj. Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz — who had disobeyed Adolf Hitler's order to level the French capital — set off wild celebrations in the streets.

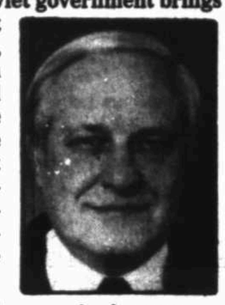

One year ago: The United Nations gave the world's navies the right to use force to stop vessels trading with Iraq.

Thought for today: "Quarrel with a friend — and you are both wrong." — Lao-Tzu, Chinese philosopher (570 B.C.-490 B.C.)

JACK ANDERSON

Coup d'etat just makes things worse

WASHINGTON — The KGB-engineered coup of the Soviet government brings to mind what Nikita Khrushchev, himself a victim of an overthrow, once said about nuclear war: The survivors will envy the dead. In this case, it may be the political victors who envy the political dead, the overthrowers who envy the overthrown.

Anderson

And, it would be no small measure of poetic justice. The epic economic, social and political disrepair that is the legacy of a half-century of Marxist maladministration is now back on the doorstep of its authors. The deposed reformer's only crime was to try to clean up the mess inherited from the crowd that is again calling the shots.

On Aug. 19, 1991, the Soviet hardliners took over an entirely different country from the one they turned over to Mikhail Gorbachev in 1985. The Baltic states are no longer willing to be a supermarket for the Soviet Union. The Russian Republic has had a whiff of fresh air and likes the smell. The Muslim republics are restive. The countries that were once Soviet satellites are no longer willing to spin cooperatively around the motherland. The Soviet army is unsure whether it is still a military superpower.

Tunne Kelma, the chairman of the ruling Council of Estonia, once told us that the Soviet Union was like a drowning man and that the Baltic republics, tied to it, were also drowning. "People who are in the process of drowning cannot wait very long," he said.

Who will throw a lifesaver to the sinking Soviet economy now that it is back in old hands?

Not the United States. Although the Bush administration had become skeptical about Gorbachev's ability to create capitalism out of communism, the dream was far from dead in Washington. The Soviet Union needs money, but Bush, who would not hand over cash even to his friend Gorbachev, is not likely to open his tight fist for the new regime.

Not Eastern Europe. The former satellites have economic troubles of their own, and while that is not new, their ability to say "no" to the Soviet Union is.

Not the Baltic republics, who have proved they can swim alone. They have come too far to slip back into sullen acquiescence while Moscow sucks their resources for the good of the union. As Lithuanian President Vytautus Landsbergis told us, "Iron will melt to wax and water will turn to stone before we retreat."

Not the remaining outposts of the failed Marxist experiment — notable among them, Cuba. Fidel Castro was one of the few heads of state to cheer the overthrow of Mikhail Gorbachev, who had been slowly squeezing Cuba out of its allowance. Now, Castro, a chronic welfare case, will be the first to reach out to Moscow for a handout.

Gorbachev did not intend to put his country on the rocks. One of his many fatal flaws was that he did not understand the consequences of his actions. He did not expect that his campaign of reform and openness would eventually dismantle communism. And he had no plan to keep the Soviet economy chugging forward when that happened. In fact, perhaps the only thing that didn't catch Gorbachev by surprise during his term was a coup.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

GEORGE WILL

WASHINGTON — Too bad the coup, the final flaring of a political faith now nearly extinguished, did not end with the plotters fleeing Russia by train from St. Petersburg's Finland Station, where Lenin arrived in 1917. The plotters were (in Lenin's phrase) useful idiots. Because of what they did, Gorbachev cannot again be what he was, a retrograde force temporizing with a bankrupt system and retarding the advance toward democratization and economic rationality.

Will

Gorbachev now has the prominence of a ship's figurehead. Yeltsin is on the ship's bridge.

Tanks are so telegenic, scant attention was paid to the plotters' initial proclamation. The detested word "communism" did not appear; but communism's faintly flickering spirit did: "The chaotic spontaneous slide toward a market provoked an explosion of egoism." Eroticism, too, drew the plotters' denunciation of "the propaganda of sex" and "glaring immorality."

The plotters hoped to rally popular support by saying: "Whereas only yesterday a Soviet person finding himself abroad felt himself a worthy citizen of an influential and respected state, now he is often a second-rate foreigner." For almost all Soviet citizens, finding food, not finding themselves abroad, is the infuriating problem.

Capitalism, according to Marxism, is the transitional stage from feudalism to socialism. Under Gorbachev, socialism has taken society back toward feudalism. The Wall Street Journal says many Soviet manufacturers no longer accept rubles, preferring to barter products. "This," says one, "is how it was in feudal times."

Think about it. A regime responsible for one-sixth of the Earth's landmass has only a ghost of a currency. While the Soviet Union slides into a primitive barter system, what does Gorbachev do? When Yeltsin, Russia's elected president, recently banished communist apparatchiks from their traditional posts in workplaces, Gorbachev, who holds no office by direct election, vowed implacable resistance to Yeltsin's order.

Gorbachev has made clear that he seeks only change that is compatible with the party's primacy. His barren strategy is to try to improve the centralized command economy with commands from the center.

But the center, Moscow, can no longer preen as the Vatican City of an entity, the Soviet Union, defined by a political faith. So Moscow must revert to being the capital of a sovereign nation, Russia.

The coup occurred on the eve of, and may have been intended to prevent, the signing of the new union "treaty." Think about that. The Soviet Union's constituent republics are to have between them a treaty relationship, the sort that usually obtains between sovereign nations. The treaty-as-constitution contains provisions that are, to anyone familiar with American history, promises of disintegrative disputes.

A constitutional court will mediate disputes between the national government and the republics. While appealing to the court, the republics can suspend national laws they consider contrary to the treaty while appealing to the court. This resembles the "doctrine of interposition" and the theory of the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions authored in 1798 by Madison and Jefferson respectively. They argued that states could declare null and void laws they considered unconstitutional.

Furthermore, under the union treaty the Soviet republics can conduct their own diplomatic and commercial relations with other countries. Finally, the republics retain the right to secede. This is a recipe for an association much looser than that of the Articles of Confederation that proved so problematic in America 1781-1789. Americans eventually chose more centralization but Americans felt American.

Soviet constitutional disputes will occur between republics — nations, really — defined in large measure by mutual animosities. And the national government's sovereignty will be so severely attenuated that the new arrangement will make probable what U.S. interests make desirable: the end of the Soviet Union.

Alms for stacked corpses, junked human legs

We are watching wholesale butchery being committed by Grant and Lee on public television: corpses stacked like winter's woodpiles. Doctors sawing off shattered arms, legs. It is great television. It is the kind of television you get only on public television.

Russell Baker

Abruptly, the slaughter halts so tireless beggars can tell us so — "This is the kind of television you get only on public television" — while browbeating us with demands for money until we sob for mercy.

"This is the kind of television you get only on public television, you deadbeats," they say, and say, and say, and say. "So make your pledge right now by —"

No, they never say "you deadbeats" aloud, but the accusation is thunderous in their warnings that we can easily be deprived of shows like this history of a nation's self-hatred. Their manner owes a lot to 1940s Hollywood evil-Nazi movies. "So you are surprised, eh, that the good folk of public television have ways of making you pay?"

In the viewing room, we silently hate the tirelessness of these tireless beggars. Five minutes, ten minutes, fifteen minutes — still their smiles try to tell us they are our friends, even as they subject us to the death of the thousand cuts.

Just when we are taking air to scream, "This is terrible television!" they leave. The majestic flow of gore resumes.

"This is great television," someone murmurs while we are looking at a photograph of poor doomed Lincoln. They don't make 'em like Lincoln anymore. If Lincoln were president today he'd have his speeches ghostwritten, or at least edited by market analysts who know what the people want to hear.

"Come on now, Mr. Lincoln, you know you can't say 'the better angels of our nature' without offending every religious group in the Union that denies the existence of angels. As for 'mystic chords of memory,' it'll make you sound like those guys in sheets who panhandle people in airports."

There's Shelby Foote again! Everybody sits up alertly for Shelby Foote, even the woman on the sofa who falls asleep every time they play "Ashoken Farewell." "If you don't make that pledge, you'll be missing great television," they tell her.

She merely smiles, the enigmatic Mona Lisa smile of a woman harboring the deliciously secret knowledge that she will never have to take another sleeping pill as long as "Ashoken Farewell" exists.

She awakes, though, for Shelby Foote. In the room you can feel a powerful impulse to call him "the great Shelby Foote," but nobody succumbs to this coarseness. Veteran televiewers all, we realize that Shelby Foote is such an elegant new ornament to the tube that it might destroy him to be branded with show business' favorite adjective for the ordinary: "great."

Another series of slaughters begins: Fredericksburg. Chancellorsville. Fields covered with putrid bodies. Is this really the kind of equality feminists want when they say it's sexist and discriminatory to deny women a crack at combat? A cowardly male sexist swine starts to frame the question for the feminist on the sofa, but "Ashoken Farewell" has started up again, bringing its blissful slumber. Until —

"Wake up, everybody! This is great television, the kind of television you get only on public television, so pick up your phone and pledge. . ."

Thus we struggled once; thus we struggle now.

Commissioners' Court vs. Sheriff Painter

Solve Verna Peace murder first, sheriff

This letter is written regarding Sheriff Painter's policy of conducting criminal investigations outside the jurisdictional limits of Midland County. As sheriff of Midland County from 1977 to 1985, I found that all our personnel, equipment and resources were utilized in working criminal investigations here in Midland County.

When I left the office of sheriff in January 1985, I had 71 employees, 28 vehicles, and a budget of $2.3 million; Sheriff Painter now has 160 employees, 64 vehicles and a budget of $4.86 million for fiscal year 1991. When I became aware of criminal information outside of our jurisdiction, we passed the information on to the appropriate law enforcement agency depending on whether it was another city, state or federal law enforcement agency.

Despite their best efforts, all law enforcement agencies have pending cases that have not been solved.

For instance, Sheriff Painter's investigation of the Sept. 4, 1987, robbery and murder of Town-and-Country Food Stores clerk, Verna Peace, has not been solved.

Therefore, I think it is more appropriate for Sheriff Painter to use all his available resources to solve all his unsolved cases — here in Midland County.

He should not even consider using the county's resources outside its boundaries, let alone beyond the state line.

My experience tells me there is more than enough criminal activity occurring in Midland County; current news releases indicated that this is still the case.

Why, then, is Sheriff Painter using valuable local resources and personnel to investigate out-of- county and out-of-state criminal investigations and then leaving the citizens of Midland County — like Verna Peace — unprotected?

I have written this letter as a concerned taxpayer and citizen of Midland County.

And contrary to Sheriff Painter's numerous innuendos, I have no plans to seek the office of sheriff nor have I been contacted or approached for that purpose.

Dallas L. Smith Jr.
Midland

Why punish sheriff for upholding law?

In times when our cities are flooded with drugs and drug-related crime, and so many law enforcement agencies are struggling to cope with rising crime rates, I am appalled that anyone would object to Sheriff Painter's aggressive and effective approach.

The sheriff's department becomes involved in investigations outside the county for one reason: At some point, these criminals enter our community. When possible, these cases are turned over to agencies outside the county for continuation, however, this is not always an option.

Money seized by the department goes into a special account (monitored by the county) and is used to purchase needed equipment for our law enforcement agencies. This is money that does not have to be allocated out of taxpayers' funds.

County Judge Seltzer should not punish Sheriff Painter for doing nothing less than upholding his oath to the citizens of Midland County.

Anne Sparks
Midland

Might a vote best resolve the issue?

When is enough — enough? The imbedded differences between commissioners and Sheriff Painter continue to be banded about like a "shuttlecock" across a badminton net. Some means of resolving the issues should be addressed.

Last Saturday, during the —Crimestoppers program interview on radio station KJBC, a deputy sheriff disclosed that "sting-operations" had produced funds from which computer equipment was purchased to enhance networking activities. Has a work force been established here to oversee duties beyond Midland County on a permanent basis?

The deputy went on to assert that Midland was on the way to becoming a center of organized crime. This could strike a chord of fear in many law-abiding citizens. Is the sheriff simply positioning his department to better cope with pending crime, or instead building an empire?

To me, the above queries merit review and consideration as to motives involved. It would be a naive idea to assume that "sting-operations" alone would be adequate to produce income required to sustain a permanent work force engaged in networking activities.

At some point in the process I believe the citizens (voters) must be called upon to decide "when enough is — enough."

Painter spites us with his 'lawsuit'

As a longtime Midland resident, and one who voted for Sheriff Gary Painter, I detest the fact that my tax dollars are being used to defend what I consider to be a frivolous, self-serving lawsuit filed by Sheriff Painter.

I helped elect a sheriff to protect and to serve Midland County, and I resent the sheriff's department's escapades outside not only the county but even the state. If an investigation leads outside Midland County, I believe the sheriff's department should let law enforcement in that jurisdiction follow up on their own end. I further believe that all monies collected through seizures or anything else should go into the county's general fund. If Sheriff Painter feels a need for additional equipment, then let him include it in his budget and go through the funding process just like every other department.

I trust the commissioners' court's judgment and feel if the need is truly justified they will work to fund it for you. In short, tend to Midland County and quit wasting my tax dollars on petty, self-serving vindictiveness.

Seltzer obviously jealous of Painter

The Midland Reporter-Telegram editorial endorsing County Judge "Bro" Seltzer's attempts to throttle Sheriff Gary Painter's law enforcement activities repeats the county commissioners' position that (1) our sheriff has no "business" outside our county, and (2) Midland County residents face greater threat of liability judgments from operations out of the county. The restrictions proposed are justified as saving county funds.

It is fine that the Reporter-Telegram chooses to endorse the commissioners' position, but the arguments are after-the-fact specious distortions of truth, which should be obvious to anyone who can ignore the personalities involved: A) drug sting operations often require agents from other law enforcement agencies. An undercover "New York buyer" compiling evidence against Texas drug suppliers had better be from New York; a Midland "connection" dealing with a West Coast supplier needs to actually speak "Texas." If Seltzer can repeal this natural law, he should explain his alternate methods; B) it is baffling how anyone can claim that our operatives are more likely to grossly mis-perform their duties, or carelessly cause damage or injury, in a location across the county line than within the county. What they do, they do every day wherever they are.

"Saving taxpayers money" is a great phrase, but perhaps an explanation of exactly how forcing the sheriff's personnel to work their shifts within the county line is vastly cheaper than working elsewhere. Are per diem car expenses and housing costs what the court is attempting to save? The agency with whom our operatives are working would pay these expenses, I suspect, but in any event Sheriff Painter has demonstrated that his successful operations against out-of-county "big-fish" result in hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines actually paid to his department. Local enforcement results in small, usually unpaid, fines against street scum.

It is clear that the new county judge is concerned that the sheriff is not totally under his control, and that the large fines paid to the sheriff's department give him entirely too much independence. Why can't Seltzer simply announce that he is jealous of Painter, and intends to show him who is top dog in his backyard?

Joe Hathaway
Midland

What it all boils down to is cents

Midland County voters realize, I believe, that Sheriff Gary Painter is conscientious in his work. His supporters, such as I am, appreciate his disposition toward fair, hard-nosed law enforcement. His record, however, suggests to more careful observers a tendency to over-zealousness in function and an attitude of "the cost be damned" toward the conduct of his office and its affairs. Such, he should realize, is the cause of his present confrontation with the county commissioners court.

The sheriff is correct in his contention that he works for and serves the voters and taxpayers of Midland County, but he does not answer to them except on election days which may be in some circumstances too far apart. The commissioners court is the county's governing body, and particularly the legal arbiter of budget and finance between elections (that used to be covered in eighth grade civics).

Now, in reading the commissioners' "order" to the sheriff in the Reporter-Telegram of Aug. 15, his typical supporter is not going to find anything unreasonable. As taxpayers we want budget cuts across the board. This means the sheriff's office too. As appreciative as we are of his work at law enforcement in Midland County we think there is plenty to keep him busy here and he will be counter productive in attempting to help the state and feds enforce the law in the other 251 counties in Texas. Between now and the next election he will be well advised to accept the authority of the judge and commissioners where it comes to the matter of spending his constituents' tax money!

Taxation meeting's a must to attend

It is great to see that there are more and more voters waking up to their responsibilities and becoming a part of the governmental process. In the Aug. 18 edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram there were 14 letters on the opinion page and only two were written by active, dues- paying, card-carrying members of CATA.

Our hospital makes substantial profits and spends it on real estate, advertising, and overstaffing. These expenditures have nothing to do with "quality care."

Please make it a point to be at the public hearing on Aug. 26 at 5:30 p.m. at Midland Memorial Hospital. This is your opportunity to have your say on the tax rate to be proposed by the hospital district board.

How can R-T justify publishing letter?

Regarding a letter published in your paper Aug. 12, signed by Charles Neely, I cannot imagine how the Midland Reporter-Telegram could justify printing such a silly, stupid, insensitive, insipid, arrogant, condescending opinion that was just a general put-down to anyone's intelligence.

A suggestion only: perhaps there is a distinct possibility that if Charles Neely placed his head in a large tub of water, filled his ears with dough and stuffed his mouth with manure pellets it would improve his I.Q.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

SAN SIMEON — We have just passed through one of the most dramatic and important events in world history.

The courage of the Russian Republic's president, Boris Yeltsin, and the life-risking bravery of Moscow's populace achieved a historic victory for freedom that has averted renewal of the Cold War and the potential danger of a nuclear conflict.

Hearst

President Bush's handling of the crisis has virtually assured his re-election next year. By organizing an international coalition as he did in the Persian Gulf conflict, the president gained support for tough economic sanctions and pressure from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization against the hardline Communist coup leaders, which encouraged the citizens of Moscow to defy overwhelming military might. President Bush also served notice he would not recognize or have any dealings with the coup regime as the government of the Soviet Union.

The free world's support enabled Yeltsin to rally the citizens of Moscow to pack the square in front of the Russian parliament building and cause collapse of the Stalinist coup regime within three days of its takeover of the Kremlin. President Bush described Yeltsin's victory as a "gigantic leap forward" for democracy. That triumph gave rise to jubilation in Moscow that 74 years of Communist Party rule was ending.

Two hours after midnight Wednesday, a politically weakened Gorbachev was back in Moscow from house arrest in the Crimea to resume the presidency. There was no fanfare. It was obvious he now faces a balance-of-power struggle with Yeltsin, the most popular man in the Soviet Union and probably a challenger for the presidency next year.

By the time of the arrival of the man who changed the world with his support for liberation of Eastern Europe and his promotion of the greatest political and economic reform movement in Russia's history, four of the eight coup leaders were under arrest, another was in the hospital and the fate of the three others unknown. All of the military forces had withdrawn from the streets of Moscow. All the repressive Communist coup decrees had been nullified by the Soviet national parliament, ending well over half a century of communist totalitarian dictatorship.

Thursday, however, came stunning declarations from Gorbachev in his first Moscow press conference after being rescued from mortal danger and confinement in the Crimea. Lacking the vigorous and confident image he had projected before the coup, Gorbachev made clear he intended to strive for continuation of the Soviet Communist Party as a strongly influential, if not dominant, force in the Soviet Union.

This, I believe, could have been the death knell of his political career. But Saturday he resigned as head of the party and recommended dissolution of its policy-setting Central Committee. He thus avoided a showdown with Yeltsin, which I am confident he could not have won.

I was shocked on Thursday as I listened to Gorbachev defend Lenin's October 1917 brutal revolution, which marked the beginning of communist tyranny in Russia. Gorbachev declared it was wrong to say it was a catastrophe. Lenin, in fact, started the catastrophe by overthrowing the moderate post-czarist Kerensky government and imposing a most brutal repression, second only to that of Stalin's terror.

The only possible explanation I could see for Gorbachev's astounding statements is that he thought he needed the Communist Party as a constituency to support him in a political contest with Yeltsin for leadership of the Soviet Union. Obviously, Gorbachev later saw how wrong he had been.

Meanwhile, Yeltsin, a crusader for democracy, has become the most popular man in the Soviet Union for his courage and inspirational leadership of the Russian people. If, as I think likely, he runs against Gorbachev in the presidential elections next year, I predict he will win.

Having achieved one of history's greatest victories for democratic freedom, this remarkable man is a world hero who I think deserves the Nobel Peace Prize. Without his victory, Bush's hope to create a new world order of security would have been doomed.

School's back in session and in the excitement of the new school year, many school-age children, especially the young ones, may forget to look both ways when crossing the street or exiting the school bus.

That leaves it up to you as a driver, to be extra careful around schoolyards, neighborhood play areas, and departing school buses.

So remember...when you see yellow, be sure to see red - as in red alert. Let's all slow down and give our children the chance they deserve.

Teacher salary plan offers $1,140 raise

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The proposed salary schedule for Midland public school teachers will reward educators who go back to school to further their education.

The Midland school district's proposed salary schedule will give all teachers a minimum raise of $1,140. Teachers with 14 years or less will receive an additional $300 in equity pay.

The equity pay will keep the school district competitive with other districts in the lower salary range which is necessary to recruit new teachers, according to Ted Miller, spokesperson for Midland Independent School District.

Salaries also increase with years of experience, or steps on the schedule.

"Then, in between the steps there are additional classifications," Miller said.

The classifications add additional stipends for each level of education achieved above a bachelor's degree. The classifications include a bachelor's degree plus 18 hours toward a master's degree, a master's degree, a master's degree plus 30 hours, and a doctorate.

This year's salary schedule differs from last year's in that the bachelor's degree plus 18 hours is a new classification.

Teachers who accrue the 18 hours will receive a $500 stipend providing they meet the stipulations of having earned hours which aren't random hours, but those which count toward a specific degree, and the hours are recent — having been earned in the past five or six years.

Electronic breakthrough

Midland firm develops remote call-forwarding device

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A Midland company that attracted national attention earlier this year with a new breakthrough in consumer electronics has done it again with a unique device that permits remote call-forwarding.

KES Communications General Manager of U.S. Operations, Lek Chieng "L.C." Thiang says that his company's Follow Me product which was debuted at the Chicago Summer Consumer Electronics Show will probably outsell its Friends Only call monitoring device which debuts at the Las Vegas Winter Show.

"Follow Me, which allows individuals with call forwarding service to remotely change the forwarding number, has a very defined user," said Thiang. It is, he said, for people on the move, with busy lifestyles — executives, salesmen, repairmen and even mothers.

Said Thiang: "It allows individuals to have their calls forwarded wherever they go. An executive expecting an important call could have his office calls forwarded to his mobile phone, then once home he could dial the office, access Follow Me and have the forwarding number changed to his home. If he leaves home he can call again and have calls transferred to a restaurant, club or friends."

He added, however, that Follow Me is merely an attachment that enhances call forwarding, that users must still purchase call forwarding from the local telephone company.

Janice Harissis, manufacturing and marketing coordinator for the Midland-based company, said the response to the device at the Chicago show was overwhelming because of its wide application and possibilities. "The name Follow Me was a natural. Your phone calls follow you wherever you go. Follow me, which works an answering machine, will even forward calls to a beeper."

"This is the second successful product we have launched this year and puts us squarely in the consumer electronics market," said Ms. Harissis. "We are having a hard time keeping them in stock. Our first manufacturing run is already sold out."

Thiang said the new product is already in the hands of 40 distributors. He said KES Communications hoped to have the device in 2,000 stores nationwide by the end of the year and was projecting $2 million in sales for the year. "We are very encouraged by the reorders," said Thiang.

Sales plans call for a concentration on the West Coast first, to be followed by intense sales efforts in Texas and the Southwest and then the Northeast. Ms. Harissis said Follow Me had also been approved for a number of catalog companies, including Spiegel.

The device, which retails for $129, is sold at the Telephone Store in the Courtyard. About the size of a small paperback book, it can be installed in less than a minute, company officials said.

The firm's first product Friends Only was a telephone attachment that provided an unlisted number at the push of a button. When Friends Only was in operation, only those callers (or friends) with a three digit access code could ring through on the line. The product was featured throughout the U.S. in a number of newspapers and consumer magazines, including Fortune Magazine. KES Communications is now hoping Follow Me will attract the same attention.

Houston doctor to be speaker at graduation

Staff Report

A Houston physician who has garnered achievements in her profession and for her volunteer work will be the guest speaker for the graduates of Project Blueprint's 10th Board Institute on Monday evening.

The event will be held at DeZavala Elementary School and is open to the public. A reception will begin at 6 p.m. and the graduation is set for 7 p.m.

Craven

Judith Craven, M.D., who will be the speaker, serves as dean of the University of Texas School of Allied Health Sciences at Houston and as vice president for minority affairs.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, she earned her doctor of medicine degree from Baylor University and a master of public health degree from the University of Texas School of Public Health.

She has been instrumental in developing several health and social policies and initiatives to improve the quality of life for Texans. When she served as medical director for all maternal, child health and family planning clinics for the city of Houston, she instituted teen clinics specializing in the needs of pregnant teen-agers.

Ms. Craven has served on numerous local, state and national committees and boards including the United Way of Texas, trustee of United Way of Texas Gulf Coast, member of the Texas Health and Human Services Coordinating Council, vice chair of the Texas Department of Human Resources School-Age Pregnancy Advisory Committee, member of TDHS Inter-Agency Advisory Committee on Teen-age Pregnancy and trustee of the American Red Cross in Houston.

Project Blueprint was initiated by United Way of Midland almost three years ago through a matching grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation to recruit, train, and place minority volunteers in leadership roles within the United Way and affiliated agencies.

Staff Report

The Midland County Hospital District's board of directors will hold a public hearing at 5:30 p.m. Monday on a proposal to increase hospital tax revenue by increasing the property tax rate 8 percent over the effective tax rate.

An 8 percent tax hike is the highest allowed by Texas law without inviting a possible rollback election.

The hearing will be held in the Medical Staff Conference Room of Midland's Memorial Hospital at 2200 W. Illinois Ave.

The hospital district's 1990 tax rate is 16.6 cents per $100 valuation.

The proposed hike represents a 6.74 percent increase over 1990's actual tax rate and 6.75 percent more than the 1990 effective tax rate.

One year's effective tax rate represents a rate needed to bring in the same amount of revenue from the previous year.

At 5:30 p.m. Thursday, the hospital board is to convene to adopt the tax rate and the hospital's budget.

Meanwhile, at 2 p.m. Wednesday, the board is to hold its regularly monthly meeting in the hospital.

GARY OTT

College is the best place to feast at buffet of ideas

The two people participating in the conversation were a boy and a girl.

Ott

Both appeared to be in their late teens. The boy had longish hair and he was wearing a pair of cutoffs and a T-shirt that sported a pro-America message dating back to the Persian Gulf War.

The girl had on some tight-fitting jeans and a golf shirt with an alligator on the pocket. Her hair was pulled back in a ponytail and her sunglasses rested on top of her head.

They were standing in the check-out line at a local grocery store.

Both were talking furiously, often interrupting one another as they attempted to make their points.

The topic: going off to college.

Each was getting ready to begin their freshman years. The boy was going to attend Texas Tech. The girl was headed for Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

Their excitement was obvious, and with good reason. Few things in a young person's life are as important as going off to school for the first time. It makes them feel like they have entered the big time. A whole new world is about to unfold before their very eyes and they are going to be a part of it.

It doesn't get any better than that.

For a brief and fleeting moment I wanted to be an older brother and offer some sage advice. But I refrained. It wasn't my place. Instead, I glanced out of the corner of my eye at the latest National Enquirer in an attempt to stay abreast (pun fully intended) of Dolly Parton's personal life.

Still, for the past couple of days my mind has danced back to that conversation in the grocery store. The kids were so full of joy and happiness. There was a hint of apprehension in their words, too, but it was far overshadowed by the almost-childlike anticipation that beamed from their young faces.

It was that unique combination of hope and fear that so dominates the minds of teen-agers as they begin realizing for the first time that there is more to life than high school football games and Saturday night dates.

Yeah, in hindsight, I should have spoken up and offered my words of wisdom. There was much insight I could have provided.

But perhaps it is not too late. Maybe I can preach my little sermon right now.

Yes. I think I will.

If you are preparing to enter college for the first time, listen up. I've got some things to say.

Foremost, consider yourself lucky. Play your cards right and this will be the most exciting time in your life. But before it can happen, you must have an open mind. Keep your old moral standards, but, at the same time, be willing to take a chance, to experience new ideas. Don't cast aside anything, no matter how bizarre it may seem, just because it is different.

The college years are a time to be vulnerable. Later in life you will reflect on these "worldly" thoughts and beliefs and no doubt laugh at your naivete on such matters. That's fine. Indeed, that is to be expected. But don't cheat yourself out of the experiences. They are too precious. If nothing else, they will become memories that will remain with you for the rest of your life.

Turn your mind into a vacuum cleaner. Let it suck in knowledge from every direction. There will be plenty of time later on to sort through the information and separate the good from the bad, the right from the wrong. That is what we call maturity. It comes with age.

But delay the process as long as you can. Once you enter that phase of your life, there is no turning back. Suddenly, you will be expected to exercise restraint and caution. Wild-eyed dreams will be replaced by a heavy dose of reality. Cynicism will become your most trusted friend.

It sounds harsh, I know, but, unfortunately, it is the truth.

Put it off. Don't surrender your idealism until you absolutely must.

The college years are a time to expand your mind. Read everything you can get your hands on. Listen to the guest speakers who visit your campus. Ponder their arguments. Get excited. Indeed, go overboard. Stay up into the wee hours of the morning discussing radical politics with roommates. Don't be embarrassed to express yourself. No viewpoint is too outlandish.

Just remember to always be thinking. Absorb it all. And enjoy it while you're at it.

In fact, consider your college experience to be a giant buffet dinner, elegantly displayed and featuring exotic foods from all over the world.

Mrs. Wayland died Saturday at a local hospital.

She was born Feb. 1, 1932, in Mexia. She married Harry Earl Wayland Jr. June 19, 1949, in Nocona and was a housewife as well as a member of the Baptist Church. A 31-year resident of Jal, Mrs. Wayland was an active member of the Jal Ladies' Golf Association.

Survivors include her husband, Harry Earl Wayland Jr. of Jal; one son Larry Wayland of Brownfield; three daughters, Sue Barnes of Midland, Padgett Alexander of Hobbs, N.M., and Frankie Griggs of Liberal, Kan.; one brother, W.H. Padgett; three sisters, Aleene Lee of Andrews, Francis Beason of Columbus, Ga., and Johnnie Bennett of Big Spring; and six grandchildren.

Caroline Dyrdahl

Memorial services for Caroline A. Dyrdahl of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Monday in the Christian Church of Midland. The Rev. Bobby Duncan will officiate. Arrangements are with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Dyrdahl died Friday at a local nursing home.

Luara Self

Services for Laura Smith Self, 88, of Midland, are set for 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Ellis Chapel. The Rev. J.B. Stewart of First United Methodist Church will officiate. Interment will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Self

Mrs. Self died Friday night in a local hospital.

She was born July 29, 1903, in Seclusion, Texas and moved to Midland at an early age. She attended schools here and graduated in 1919. She married the late Henry Self in 1924 in Midland. They lived in Odessa 12 years before moving to Midland in 1940.

She worked for Stubbeman, McRae and Sealy law firm for seven years as a legal secretary. She then worked for Sun Oil Co. from 1945 to 1955. After that she worked for the Midland City Manager for five years.

She was a member of the First United Methodist Church, was a charter member of the Boone Bible Class and was a member of DAR and Eastern Star chapter of Midland.

Survivors include one son, Henry Self of Hobbs, N.M.; one daughter, Nella Self Strickland of Stanton; a sister, Elva Minear Chalfnat of Albuquerque, N.M.; seven grandchildren; 16 great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Elston Ford

Services will be at 10 a.m. Monday at Westover Baptist Church with the Rev. Terry Wright officiating. Burial will follow at Monahans Cemetery with Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He was born Feb. 20, 1933, in Logan County, Okla. He married Marie Watkins Oct. 15, 1954 in Monahans.

Ford moved to Odessa in 1952. He was a driller for Southwestern Portland Cement Co. for 24½ years. He was founder of the Odessa Volunteer Fire Department and served as its fire chief for 10 years.

He was a member of Westover Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Vance Ford of Odessa; one brother, Buford Ford of Edmund, Okla.; one sister, Helen Lois King of Seward, Okla.; and two grandchildren.

W.O. Pigman Jr.

PECOS — Memorial services for W.O. "Bill" Pigman Jr., are set for 3 p.m. Monday in the Reeves County Civic Center in Pecos with the Rev. Clark Ford of Memorial Christian Church in Midland and the Rev. Alan Abraham of First Christian Church in Pecos officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home and Pecos Funeral Home.

He died Friday at a Midland hospital.

Pigman

He was born Sept. 1, 1925, in Barstow and was a lifelong resident of the Trans-Pecos area and of Pecos for more than 40 years. He graduated from Monahans High School and attended Texas Christian University in Fort Worth before serving with the U.S. Navy Seabees during World War II.

He completed his education at Sul Ross State University in Alpine and moved to Pecos in 1948. He was associated with Texas Life Insurance since 1965. From the late '70s until 1989 he also was a partner in Producers Insurance Agency.

Pigman served as Pecos city councilman for six years and was mayor for four years; municipal court judge for five years; 15 years as a member of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission; and 13 years as Reeves County judge before retiring Jan. 1 of this year.

He was a member and leader of many civic organizations, including the Volunteer Fire Department for 17 years; Pecos Rotary Club for 20 years and the Judge Roy Bean Shrine Club.

Survivors include his wife, Reecia Pigman of Pecos; four daughters, Belinda Presley and Marilyn McGibboney, both of Lewisville, Rex Ann Pigman of San Angelo and Carolyn Redwine of Colorado City; one stepson, Bobby Knox, formerly of Midland, now of San Ramon, Calif.; one brother, Rex Pigman of Kermit; 10 grandchildren and two nieces.

SALARY: MISD proposes pay scale doctorate degree.

The proposed schedule with the additional classification "will encourage teachers to get additional college hours," according to Midland school board trustee Jack Hightower. "The school board wants to award teachers as much as possible," he said.

"If you compare this schedule with last year's, then it's not that big a raise," Hightower said. "I haven't studied the new proposal yet, it appears there is going to be a five percent overall increase."

School board trustee Jackie Hamilton said, "I think a five percent raise is good encouragement for teachers."

Texas teachers received an average pay increase of 5.3 percent in 1990-91, according to information from the Texas Association of School Boards. The average raise teachers in Midland Independent School District received in 1991 was 5 percent.

Base starting salary for MISD teachers with a bachelor's degree and no experience was $21,000 in 1990-91. It is $22,000 on the 1991-92 proposed schedule.

The statewide average teacher salary in 1990 was $27,706, according to Benchmarks, the Texas Research League's annual study.

MISD's average teacher salary was $27,356, slightly less than the state average. MISD's average salary, however, was higher than other West Texas school districts, including Ector County ISD's $25,916; San Angelo ISD's $25,829; Lubbock ISD's $25,507; and Amarillo ISD's $26,107.

The proposed teacher salary plan is expected to be discussed at Tuesday's board meeting, but final action is not anticipated until the 1991-92 budget is formally adopted.

School district personnel other than teachers, such as teacher aides and auxiliary personnel, would receive a 5 percent raise beginning at midpoint of the salary schedule, MISD officials said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Fan fire

Staff Report

ODESSA — An early morning fire believed started by a malfunctioning attic fan destroyed an Odessa barbecue restaurant, authorities said.

The Odessa Fire Department responded to the call about 3:30 a.m. Saturday. Corkey's Bar-B-Que, located at 6705 Andrews Hwy., was heavily damaged by the blaze.

Authorities said they believe the fire began in the building's attic, caused by an electric fan that apparently malfunctioned.

Man arrested

A 26-year-old man was arrested late Friday for possession of cocaine, police said.

The man, found staggering down Terrell Street, was originally arrested for public intoxication, police said. During a booking search, officers discovered several small white bags containing a white powder later determined to be cocaine. He was also found in possession of a syringe, police said.

He was being held in Midland County Central Detention Facility on $7,500 bond Saturday awaiting arraignment on the charge.

County to review budget

Staff Report

The Midland County Commissioners' Court is to continue its study on the county's 1992 proposed budget following the court's 9 a.m. Monday regular meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

Among other items of business, the court is to consider a request by Midland County property owners to bring Midland County into the Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District in the Nov. 5 general election.

The water district, which originally was formed as the Martin County Underground Water Conservation District, is headquartered in Stanton and currently takes in Martin County and the northwest part of Howard County.

The Commissioners' Court is to consider reports from Sheriff Gary Painter on the "parole-in-absentia" program of the Institutional Division (formerly, the Texas Department of Corrections) of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice and on a personal-recognizance bond program to help reduce the overcrowding of the two Midland County jails.

College slates womens' class

Staff Report

For many women, there are times when changes create emotional or financial problems which may be difficult to handle. A four-week course at Midland College about "Women In Transition" addresses many of those concerns.

The forum "will cover topics for women learning to take control of their lives, including building confidence, ability to make changes, take charge of their finances, time, and emotions," said Joyce Miller, who will serve as moderator.

The seminar is scheduled on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m. beginning Sept. 10 and ending Oct. 1. Cost is $17.

Ms. Miller dealt with becoming a widow ten years ago. As an investment broker and financial consultant, she has learned about money and its management.

Among those presenters will be Theresa "Sam" Guyton, a Licensed Professional Counselor, on taking control of your situations; Ms. Miller on money management and investments; Carol Reinert, CPA, on today's taxes; Kristi N. Elsom, attorney, on retirement and estate planning; Jewel Brewer, on Social Security and retirement; Ann Abbey, senior vice president of Texas Commerce Bank, on banking and Berth Brimer about business ownership.

Registration is through the Continuing Education office in the Administration Building. More information is available by calling 685-4518.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College set for start of classes

By H.A. Tuck

Tuck

Students who haven't enrolled have one final chance before the semester begins. Wednesday is registration day, with most of the day already taken up by those who obtained time permits. Persons who didn't obtain time permits will be registered from 6-8 p.m. on Wednesday in the Student Center.

Late registration, which begins with the first day of classes on Sept. 3, also requires an additional fee so it's less expensive to come in on Wednesday.

If you wish to know about entrance requirements, visit the Student Services area in the Student Center Monday or Tuesday, or call 685-4501.

Administrative offices return to their five-day, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. schedule this week. Student Services, Learning Resource Center, Continuing Education, and Bookstore hours are longer Monday through Thursday during the fall and spring semesters.

David Daniel, the new college president, has his first official meeting with the faculty on Monday morning. The traditional President's Breakfast starts the in-service day. Following is a time when Dr. Daniel talks with the faculty and staff. Other meetings take the remainder of the day. Standing committee meetings, Division meetings, and orientations of both new students and new faculty also are scheduled during the week.

The college will be closed next Monday, Sept. 2, in observance of Labor Day.

A meeting of the Board of Trustees at 4 p.m. Tuesday likely will include approval of the 1991-92 operating budget. Administrators have been busily trying to put the finishing touches on the proposed budget which was put into its final form only after the state Legislature approved an appropriations bill on Aug. 13. A tentative budget had been drafted and submitted to the Trustees in June, but it was based mostly on conjecture at that point.

Jess Parrish, who retires officially Saturday after serving ten years and one month as the second president of MC, likely will make one of his last appearances Monday morning at the faculty-staff breakfast and at the Tuesday meeting of the Trustees.

His service has been marked by the continued growth of the college, both in enrollment and programs. Through his service as Chairman of the Presidents' Academy of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges and as a long-time member and chair of the Legislative Committee of the Texas Public Community-/Junior College Association, he has increased the stature of the community college educational role both in the state and in the nation. Parrish served as president of the AACJC just prior to coming to Midland College and Daniel serves as its current president.

We wish the best for Parrish and his wife, Norma, who will remain in Midland following his retirement.

Fall GED (General Equivalency Diploma) classes at both Midland College's Adult Learning Center and at Casa de Amigos start Sept. 3. These are programs which are free and may be entered at any time during the fall semester. After students gain knowledge and learn about the tests, they may take the exams which lead to certificates equivalent to high school diplomas.

The GED classes at Casa de Amigos are scheduled on Monday and Wednesday either from 12:30-2:30 p.m. or 7-9 p.m. At the college, the GED study programs are conducted from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday and Wednesday or 8 a.m.-9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. You don't have to stay that long, if you come to the college. Those are the hours that the Adult Learning Center is open each day.

ESL (English as a Second Language) classes meet at specific times in Levels I, II, and III. ESL placement testing is scheduled Sept. 9-12 from 8 a.m.-12 noon and 1-4 p.m. in Room 134 of the Occupational-Technical Building on the MC campus. Students will be placed in classes according to the placement exams. ESL classes start Sept. 16 and end Dec. 12. Casa de Amigos will have ESL classes on Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 p.m. At the campus, there will be ESL classes Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m.-11 a.m. and on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7-9 p.m.

College schedules nursing workshop

Staff Report

A workshop on "Issues in Nursing — Professional Autonomy and Accountability" has been planned for Midland College Sept. 27.

The workshop is being held in conjunction with a meeting of the Texas Board of Nurse Examiners, which will be holding its only meeting this year outside Austin.

"The Board of Nurse Examiners will meet to conduct routine business on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday (Sept. 24-26) and then is to participate in part of the nursing workshop on Friday," said Dr. Eileen Piwetz, chair of the Midland College Health Sciences Division and president of the Board of Nurse Examiners for 1990-91.

The nine-member board will meet in the Chaparral Room, Student Center, on the Midland College campus. The Board of Nurse Examiners is appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. Its primary mission is protecting and promoting the welfare of the people of Texas by assuring that professional nurses are competent practitioners.

The BNE meets every other month, with at least one meeting each year outside Austin.

All persons interested in the professional growth of nursing are invited to attend the workshop. Registration fees are $40 for non-members, $30 for TNA members or three or more employees of the same agency, and $15 for students.

The workshop, which begins at 8 a.m. and ends at 4 p.m., begins with a Mock Disciplinary Court with Dr. Piwitz and two staff members of the Board of Nurse Examiners participating.

"Shared Governance" is the topic of an afternoon program which is being presented by Beth Mancini, RB, MSN, CNA, vice president of nursing administration at Parkland Hospital, Dallas.

Deadline for registration is Sept. 20. Persons interested in attending should contact Sarah Shellenberger, P. O. 30411, Midland, Texas 79712, or call Dr. Piwetz at Midland College, 685-4600.

Seminar addresses home wastes

Staff Report

Hazardous waste may be lurking under your kitchen sink, in your bathroom cabinet, or on a shelf in your garage. Still more might be hiding in your company's storeroom.

All those create potential problems for both the homeowner and the small business owner/operator. Such commonplace dangers will be addressed at a free seminar at Midland College Sept. 5.

The program, "Hazardous Waste in the Home and Business", will be held in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. While admission is free, persons interested are asked to register in advance by calling 685-4518 not later than 5 p.m. Sept. 5.

The seminar is being co-sponsored by the Midland College Continuing Education Department, Keep Midland Beautiful, and the Midland League of Women Voters.

Two films produced by the League of Women Voters will be shown during the seminar. "Cleaning Up Toxics in Business" shows small companies using innovative techniques to reduce pollution and to comply with tough new environmental regulations. The other film, "Cleaning Up Toxics at Home", shows simple, practical steps which can be taken to protect residents from the toxic chemicals in their homes. Included will be suggestions on safer alternatives which can be used in place of hazardous products.

Those attending also will receive information about an environmental shopping tour to be conducted by the League of Women Voters and Keep Midland Beautiful.

SHERIFF'S NOTICE OF SALE
THE STATE OF TEXAS
COUNTY OF MIDLAND

WHEREAS By virtue of Writ of Execution issued out of the 142nd Judicial District Court of Midland County, Texas, on the 28th day of May 1991, in Cause No. T-6786, where Midland Central Appraisal District was/were Plaintiff, and Sid Lennox, et al was/were Defendant, on a judgment rendered in said Court against Defendant and in favor of the said Plaintiff, for the sum of Two hundred eighty seven DOLLARS, with interest thereon at the rate of 0(none) per cent per annum, from date of judgment, together with all costs of suit; I did on the 29th day of July, 1991, at 10:00 o'clock A.M., levy upon the following described lots, tracts and parcels of land situated in Midland County, Texas, as the property of Sid Lennox, et al to-wit:

BEING the north Fifty feet (N/50') of Lot Four (4), Block Thirteen (13), HALEY HEIGHTS ADDITION, an addition to the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, according to the map or plat thereof of record in the office of the County Clerk of Midland County, Texas

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the above described premises, together with all and singular the rights and appurtenances thereto in anywise belonging, unto the said grantee, his heirs and assigns forever; and we do hereby bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators to WARRANT AND FOREVER DEFEND all and singular the said premises unto the said grantee, his heirs and assigns, against every person whomsoever lawfully claiming or to claim the same or any part thereof.

and on the 3rd day of September, 1991, being the first Tuesday of said month, between the hours of 10 o'clock A.M. and 4 o'clock P.M. on said day, at the courthouse door of said County, and I will offer for sale and sell at public auction, for cash to the highest bidder, all the right, title and interest of Sid Lennox, et al in and to said above described property.

Witness my hand this the 29th day of July, 1991.

CITATION

TO: C & M OILFIELD CONSTRUCTION BY SERVING ITS REGISTERED AGENT JACK CRUSE, DEFENDANTS IN THE CAUSE HEREIN DESCRIBED.

You are hereby commanded to appear and answer before the County Court at Law of Midland County, Texas, by filing a written answer to the DEFENDANT CHEVRON U.S.A. INC.'S ANSWER AND COUNTERCLAIM FOR INTERPLEADER AND DECLARATORY RELIEF and CHEVRON U.S.A. INC.'S MOTION TO DEPOSIT FUNDS INTO THE REGISTRY OF THE COURT AND ORDER of plaintiff at or before 10 o'clock a.m. of the Monday next after the expiration of forty-two days (42) after the date of issurance hereof, in cause number 6576, styled: CHAPARRAL INDUSTRIES, Plaintiff, vs. CHEVRON U.S.A. INC., Defendant, filed in said court on the 22nd day of April, 1991. The said Answer discloses that the nature of said suit is as follows:

The counter-plaintiff, Chevron, is engaged in the business of the exploration, production, manufacture and sale of minerals and petroleum in the State of Texas.

In the course and scope of business, Chevron accepted and approved a bid by Glenn Rex Inc. on December 1, 1988, to refurbish piping and emergency pits at the HSA lease Brine Station No. 2 in Ward, County, Texas. Glenn Rex completed this contract in May 1989.

Sometime in late May 1989, Chevron received Notice of Claims from several subcontractors who had not been paid for work performed on the project. Chevron made immediate inquiries and discovered that Glenn Rex had not paid counter-defendant and other defendants in a timely fashion.

Chevron is prepared to pay into the Registry of the Court the balance owed to Glenn Rex, Inc. This fund is being deposited with the Court for the benefit of counter-defendant and defendants herein conditioned upon an appropriate order of interpleader being issued by this court and the court's ruling as to who may be entitled to these funds.

ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND THE SEAL OF SAID COURT ON the 7th day of August, 1991, at Midland, Midland County, Texas.

First, National cars are backed by the industry's first "Buy Back Guarantee". If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with a car you buy from us, bring it back within 30 days or 1000 miles and we'll exchange it or buy it back.

Second, we sell only late model cars, and because we display the price on the window of each car, there's none of the usual haggling over the price.

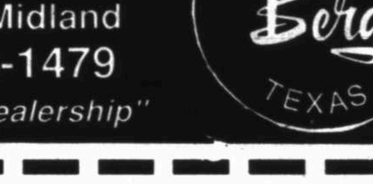

Third, we have a wide variety of cars to choose from. National currently has cars available to sell that were manufactured by General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, Nissan, Honda & Toyota.

Additionally as an added convenience National accepts trade-ins and can arrange financing.

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in additionto the regular monthly route profits. The route is in the Washington Park area.

As with all newspaper distributorships, this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town, you must arrange a substitute for your self) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/ mothers, senior citizens, college students, or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".

Daivd Odom - 688-2700

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

"Being a Christian, I am excited that Glenwood is adding an additional program for the community, the Rapha Treatment Program."

"Having a career in psychiatric nursing, I have been in a position to appreciate the programs at Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital. Two years ago, I left Lubbock to accept a position here. Being a Christian, I am excited that Glenwood is adding an additional program for the community, the Rapha Treatment Program. I am presently looking forward to the opportunity of serving as a supportive staff member of Rapha. Rapha offers it's patients a unique blend of clinical competence and biblical truth that leads to emotional and spiritual healing. Rapha not only represents professional excellence, but shares a personal commitment to Jesus Christ as well.

If you have a nursing background and share in my commitment, I invite you to give Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital a call."

Splash into sophisticated style

Located on a corner lot in Crestgate in Northwest Midland, this four bedroom home boasts many exceptional amenities.

The landscaping will appeal to those who prefer little or no yard work and the beautiful in-ground pool provides hours of fun and relaxation.

A large circle drive and slabs of exposed aggregate, flanked by flowerbeds and evergreen plants compose the attractive front yard. No lawn mower needed here. Most of the back yard is pool and patio area.

Meanwhile, the interior is designed for easy living as well. The tiled entry way opens into a spacious living area with a high beamed ceiling. Built-in bookshelves flank the brick fireplace. Brick pillars between the living area and formal dining area add a rustic touch.

Sliding glass doors open onto the large covered patio and pool area. A serving window from the beautiful wet bar opens onto the patio for graceful outdoor entertaining. Inside, the bar faces the informal living area.

A delightful, functional kitchen with an abundance of oak cabinets and drawers as well as a built-in oven, microwave and indoor grill, will please the cooks in the family. An island with a cooktop is conveniently located in the center of the kitchen. Easy care Armstrong flooring coordinates with wall covering and appliances. Adjacent to the kitchen is the spacious informal dining or breakfast area with two windows facing the front yard.

The cozy family room is located adjacent to the other end of the kitchen. Here, large windows offer a view of the lovely back yard and pool. An atrium door opens onto the patio.

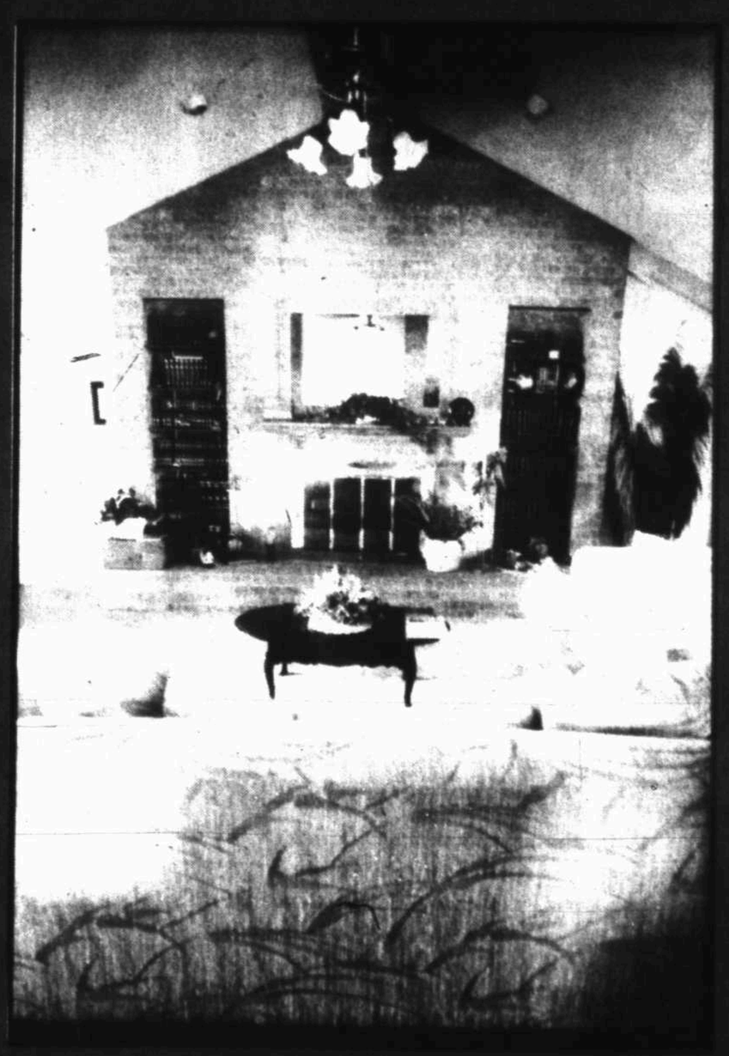

A large utility room with a window and lots of oak cabinets is located just off the kitchen area. Plenty of room id provided for a sewing machine or a freezer.

Decorator touches of wall paper and custom window coverings throughout give the home a serene, comfortable charm. Nine ceiling fans, including one on the patio, not only contribute to the decor, but also are energy efficient.

The sequestered master bedroom has his and her vanities and dressing areas. It also has its own private entrance to the patio. Large walk-in closets offer more than ample wardrobe space.

This home is offered by Re/Max of Midland for $119,000. For your private showing or more information please call Marilyn Jo Smith or Linda Eubank.

Breakfast Of Champions honors top associates

We really appreciated the opportunity to say "thank you' last week at our biannual Breakfast of Champions honoring our top 10 listing and selling associates for the first and second quarters.

Joining us was our good friend and new Midlander Richard "Ish" Ingram, Executive Director of the Confederate Air Force Inc. Ish's comments on the CAF's history, it's goals and purposes, it's selection of Midland for it's new headquarters, and the contributions it will be making to the community was valuable information shared with individuals who, in many cases, will be the first person to introduce a newcomer to the

Langston

CAF. Ish cited the need for as many as 1000 volunteers to assist the organization in it's resettlement and ongoing programs.

The top 10 agents in listings for the first quarter were Sarah Collins, Nonnie Buller, Jerry Holt, Roberta Aldridge, Jana Tucker, Gloria Lott, Laura Manulik, Joan Noel, Needa Faught and Pat Paxton.

During the second quarter, the top 10 listing agents were Jerry Holt, Tish Duncan, Pat Paxton, Needa Faught, Nona Orr, Laura Manulik, Kaye Horchler, Melissa Herndon, Nonnie Buller and Roberta Aldridge.

Agents sending the most referrals were Jerry Holt for the first quarter and Sarah Collins for the second quarter.

While the "Champion" associates were especially commended for their outstanding production, we are ever mindful that the contributions and support of all of our 43 - soon to be 45 - active agents have made possible our second office, our growth in market share and our position in real estate. Thanks to each of you!

Relo Network sells over $60 Billion

DENE KELLY REALTORS is a member of the RELO network, headquartered in Chicago. The RELO network has approximately 1,400-member companies and provides transfer-related real estate services, including home marketing, homefinding, rental services and commercial real estate services to meet the relocation needs of transferees and their corporations in the U.S., Canada and other countries. RELO members are full-service real estate companies.

Ms. Kelly also says that a recent survey of RELO members indicates that lower interest rates and home prices in many areas of the country are fueling optimism and signalling an improving real estate market ahead.

"Our company and RELO members across the country anticipate over the next few months a steady recovery in the first-time "Move-up" and corporate relocation segments of the real estate market," Ms Kellys says.

Responding RELO members in the recent survey according to Ms. Kelly, noted that transferees coming to a new community are often renting in order to obtain a better understanding of home values and financing in their new communities prior to an eventual home purchase.

In response to the changing real estate market and transferee needs. Ms. Kelly adds that the RELO network formed a rental division in late 1990 to assist transferees with rental housing in their new communities.

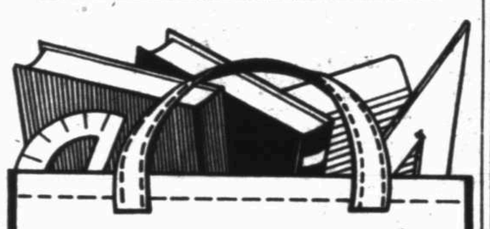

The RELO network also has formed a commercial division to provide it's members with the opportunity to expand activities with commercial properties, she notes.

BRIEFING

The rig count in the Permian Basin was down 5 to 95, while the U.S. rig count was up 1 to 797. A year ago the Permian Basin count was 102 and the U.S. 992.

Brown bags

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum has announced two noon brown bag lecture series for the fall. On Thursday, September 12, Susan Williams with the Texas Energy Resources Center will discuss Alternative Energy Resources.

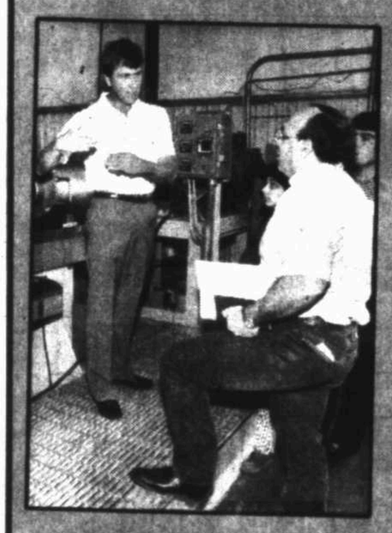

On October 10th, Tom Zapatka of Marathon Oil will lecture on the Texon Revegetation project.

A special presentation on Oil Spill Containment has been scheduled for August 24, September 14 and October 5.

Leak watched

CARLSBAD — Environmentalists and state officials continue to keep a close look on a 1.5 million gallon oil leak at Marathon's Indian Basin Plant near Carlsbad to determine what threat if any it poses to ground water. Marathon so far has spent $1.5 million trying to determine the extent of the spill, which was first spotted in April.

Marathon and state officials estimate the leak is moving underground at the rate of six inches to a foo a day, but say it poses no immediate threat to residents in the area, and that it could be decades before the oil reaches one of the drinking wells.

Waterflood offers horizontal hope

■ A proposed waterflood in Jones County could open horizontal applications for Basin.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

If and when the horizontal boom hits the Permian Basin it may be with the drilling of horizontal injection wells, says a Midland oil company.

Horizontal drilling has won high praises for its prolific wells brought about by long lateral well bores that intersect oil rich fractures, but Win Energy of Midland predicts that the yet-to-be-found application just may be long horizontal injection laterals which will bring a cleaner sweep to maturing waterfloods, producing more oil.

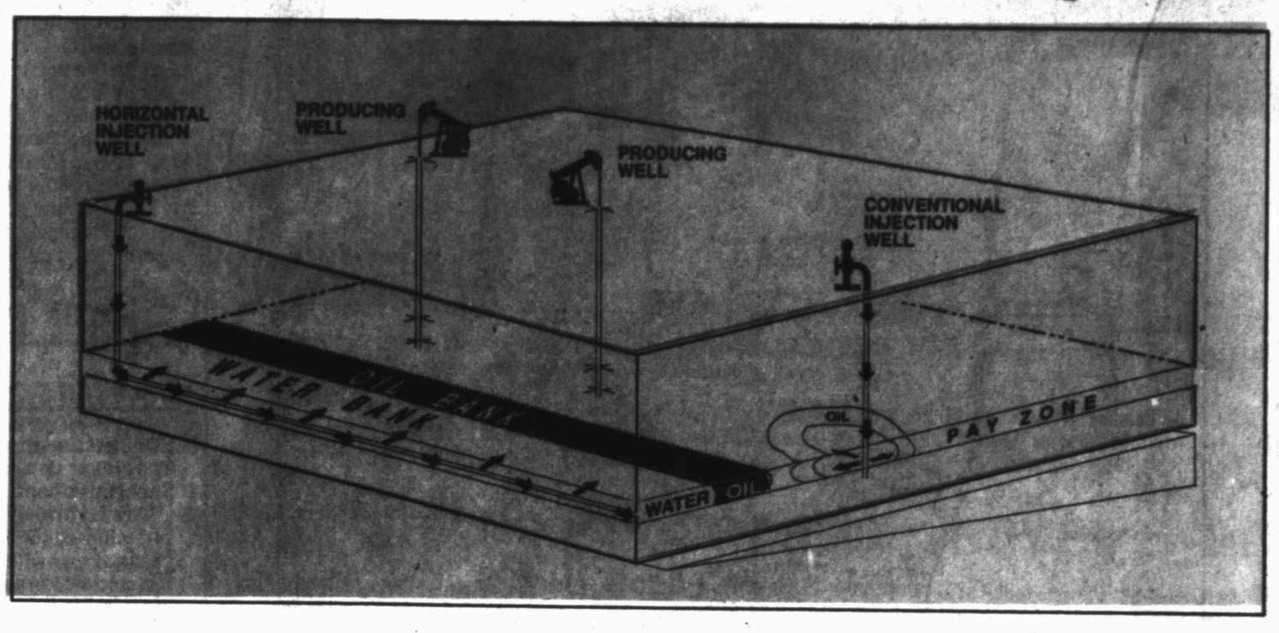

"It could add an entirely new generation of recovery to maturing waterfloods, by more effectively pushing by-passed oil into producing wells," said John Whiteside Jr., president of Win Energy, who estimates that up to 20 percent more can be claimed from older waterfloods with horizontal laterals.

Win Energy, a small father-son oil company is presently marketing a horizontal waterflood prospect in Jones County, which Whiteside says could demonstrate the viability of such floods. He hopes publicity about the proposed project will not only make his prospect easier to sell, but also call the attention of other Permian Basin operators to the possibility.

In a press release sent out recently, Win Energy reported that the project would be the first true horizontal waterflood project in the lower 48. Prudhoe Bay has utilized some directional wells as injectors, but they were not true horizontal injectors.

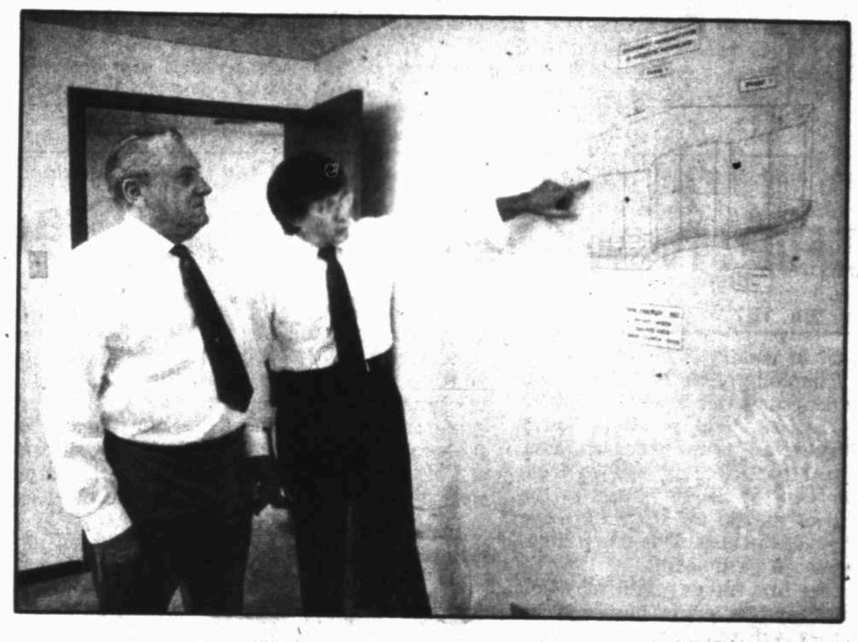

In a two-phase project in the Bullard and Propst-Anson fields, Win is proposing to drill horizontal laterals downdip in the strategraphic field to form a unified water bank that will push the oil updip

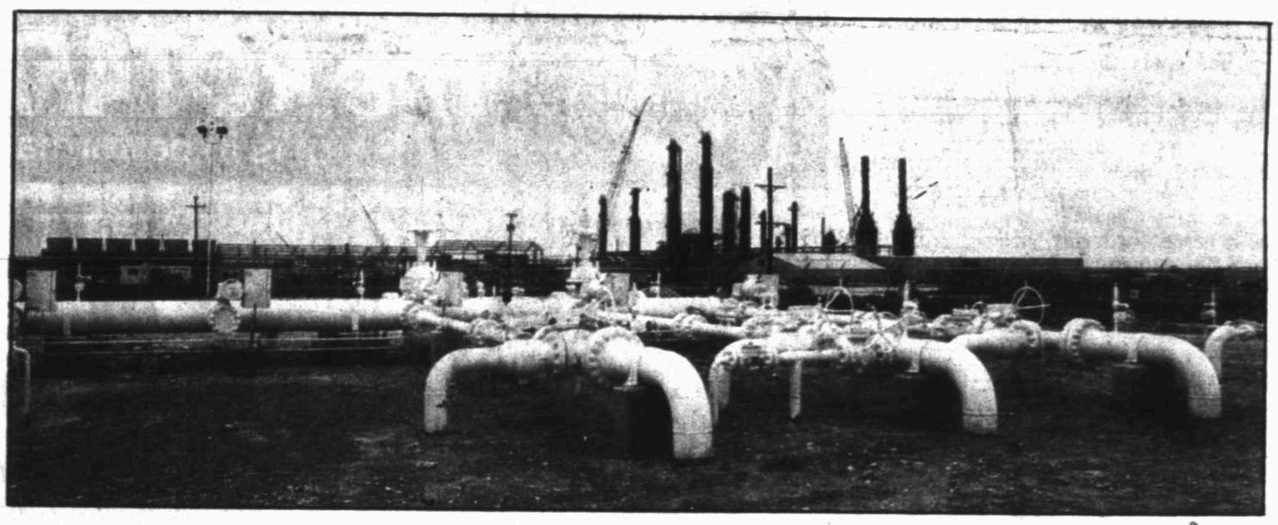

Please see FLOOD/7E

The graphic above, indicates how horizontal injectors will be used to push a bank of water and by-passed oil updip in the reservoir toward a porosity pinchout and producing wells. Right John Whiteside and John Whiteside Jr. look at a reservoir graphic of the Jones County prospect they feel will demonstrate the viability of horizontal injection in the Permian Basin waterfloods.

Denver Unit expansion at halfway point

■ Expansion and modification is expected to significantly expand the life of Shell's Denver Unit.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A $100 million expansion projects now underway at Shell's Denver Unit, at Denver City, has now reached the half way point and should be complete by early 1992, according to Shell.

Shell Western E&P Inc. says that when expansion is completed in its Denver Unit CO_2 flood that production will eventually increase to 48,000 barrels from the present 37,000. Involved in the expansion is modification of the present flood plan and westward expansion into the city limits of Denver City.

At the same time, the CO_2 Recovery Plant in the unit is being expanded to double in capacity from 180 million cubic feet daily to 290 million cubic feet.

The plant expansion which got underway in 1990 includes: replacing and expanding the hydrogen sulfide treating capacity with installation of Shell's SulFerox process and by removal of CO_2 bottlenecks within the plan.

The major engineering and construction contract for the plant was awarded to the Pritchard Corp. of Kansas City with Ref-Chem Corp. of Odessa and Kelley Coppedge Inc. of Fort Worth serving as construction partners. Shell notes that over 300 workers have been involved in the expansion effort.

In modifying the present carbon dioxide flood, Shell is switching to a "Hybrid WAG," which incorporates fea-

New Mexico geological outing set

By Melia McEwen

SOCORRO, N.M. — What has become a tradition for geologists, students, retirees and outdoor lovers, the New Mexico Geological Society's Field Conference, is set for October.

The society's 42nd annual field conference will be October 9-12, with headquarters for the three trip legs wil be Inn of the Mountain Gods on the Mescalero Apache Reservaton south of Ruidoso.

George Austin, co-general chairman of the field trip, said it was instigated by Vince Kelly in 1950 along with other New Mexico university professors, principally professors at the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque.

Since the first field trip, it has developed a reputation that has attracted attendees from such distant states as Florida and Washington, according to Austin.

"It gives people a look at a different part of country," he explained.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Pitts

What are the possibilities for U.S. oil companies in the Soviet Union following the ill-fated coup of this week.

If anything they are probably better. Much uncertainty has been cleared with the passing of an ominous cloud. The worse — a right wing attempt to takeover the government and take the U.S.S.R. back into the dark ages of economic and political repression has been attempted and failed.

The process of economic and political reform will apparently continue, perhaps at at faster pace, and with it more joint ventures between U.S. oil companies and the Soviet Union. Unchanged is the enormous problems in the Soviet oil industry which translate to enormous possibilities for U.S. firms.

The opportunities for oil and gas enterprises in the Soviet Union are enough to boggle the mind when one considers the vast proven reserves, untapped reserves and problems to be overcome. Development partnerships in which the U.S. brings expertise and equipment to the table and the Soviets production are to be had everywhere, while exploration targets abound from the South Caspian Sea to Siberia. The deeper zones throughout the Soviet Union are virtually untouched and present a most attractive target.

Deal-making with the Soviets has been difficult to say the least, because of the inherent differences in the systems. On one hand you had an army of U.S. lawyers armed with a wagon-load of contracts and documents and on the other hand a communist bureaucracy with little understanding of free enterprise and even less understanding of the ways of lawyers.

One company that can attest to the difficulty of deal-making is Chevron. Chevron had hammered out a deal with the bureaucrats to participate in development of the Tenzig oil field near the Caspian sea, only to have the rug pulled from under them by unfavorable stories planted in the Soviet press. The Moscow News called it the "deal of the century."

But despite the polarity, the embryonic formation of a working relationship was already underway, spurred on by problems in the oil industry which threaten to escalate from crisis to chaos. Since 1988, the Soviet Union has seen production decline by 1.9 million barrels daily, an amount which exceeds the amount of Kuwaiti production wiped out by the Iraqi invasion.

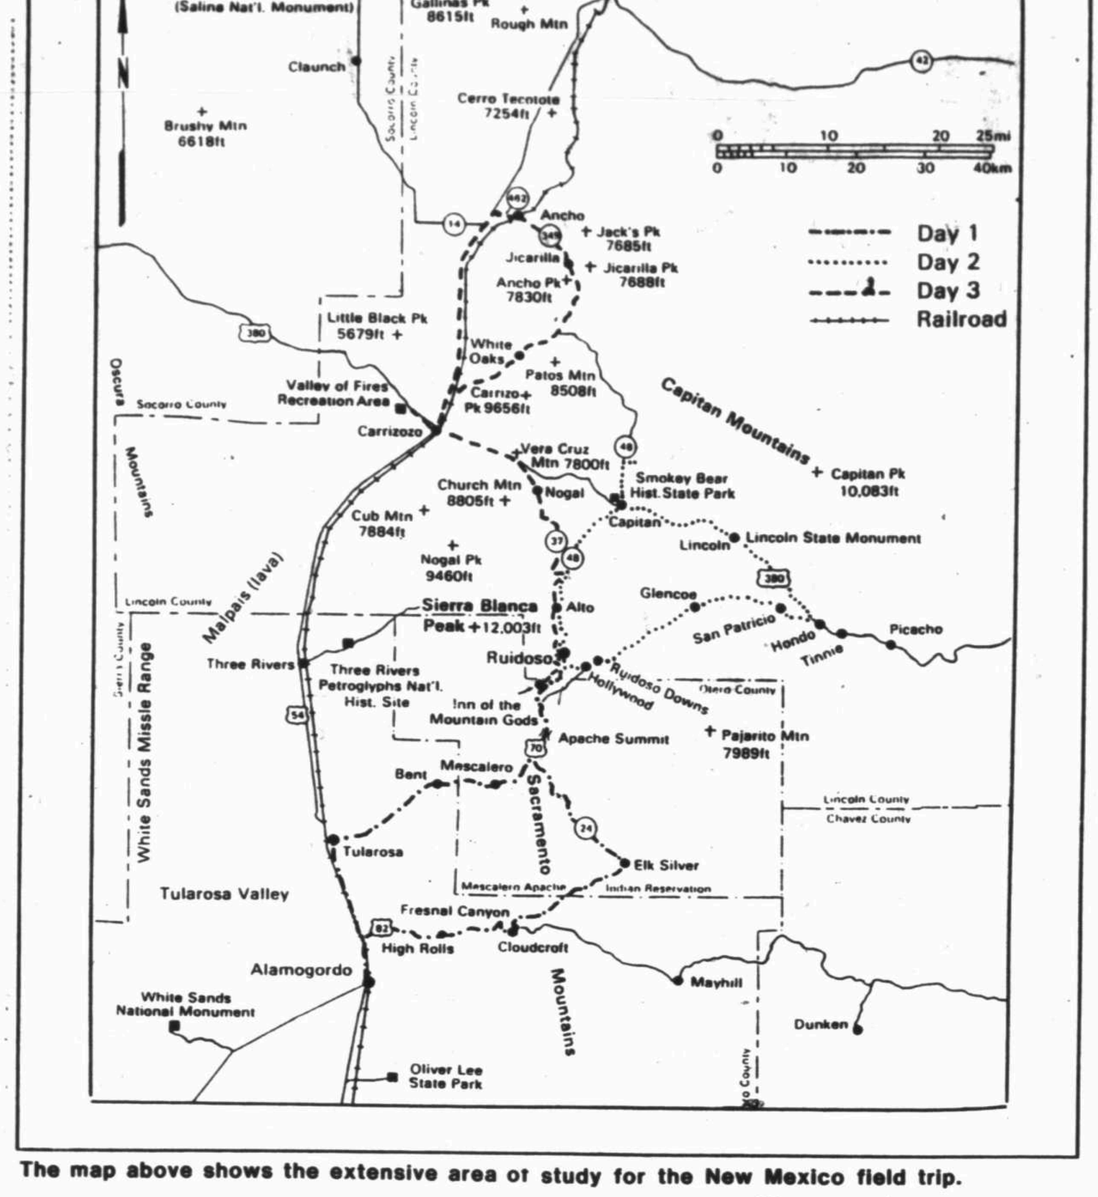

And, while there was much focus on the confrontation between Moscow and Chevron, there were many more joint ventures on the table that seemed to be on their way toward working and must work if the Soviet oil industry is to survive. In June, the Oil & Gas Journal reported that over 2000 joint ventures between the Soviet Union and American firms were in the works.

The proposed ventures were diverse, covering a wide spectrum of the energy industry.

Conoco had agreed to supply pipeline equipment for a 400-mile pipeline that would carry oil south from the Timan-Pechora basin for export and do-

Horizontal permits up slightly

AUSTIN — Aug. 14, The Railroad Commission granted a total of 71 new permits for horizontal wells in July, reflecting a slight increase in applications to drill the advanced technology wells statewide.

By comparison, the Commission issued 67 permits for horizontal statewide in June, 87 in May, 76 in Apr., 83 in Mar., 92 in Feb., and 95 during Jan., 1991.

So far, operators have applied for 571 permits to drill horizontal wells in Texas during the first seven months of 1991.

In all, the Railroad Commission has issued a grand total of 1,869 permits for horizontal wells, some 1,669 of which have been granted since January 1, 1990.

While the Pearsall Field southwest of San Antonio remains the nation's premier hub for horizontal drilling, new permit activity remained sluggish in July. Eighteen permits were granted for horizontal projects in that portion of the Austin Chalk geologic formation last month, compared to 19 in June and 36 in May.

Despite the downturn, the vast majority of all horizontal projects planned or underway in Texas are located in Frio County. A total of 572 permits for horizontal wells have now been issued there, while 418 of those wells have been completed.

Meantime, Zavala and Dimmit Countries are tied for second in the Pearsall Field with 158 horizontal permits issued through July 31, followed by LaSalle County with 136.

In all, 1,024 of the 1,869 permits for horizontal wells issued in Texas since 1984 have been granted to operators in the Pearsall Field. Some 724 of those wells have now been completed.

Meanwhile, the Commission has issued 405 permits for horizontal wells in the Giddings (Austin Chalk) Field through July 31. Burleson County leads the horizontal race there with 253, followed by Fayette County with 96, Lee County with 47, and Washington County with nine. As of July 31, 218 horizontal wells had been completed in the Gidding Field.

A total of 153 horizontal wells were completed in Texas during July, raising the statewide total to 1,130. The completetions-to-drilling-applications ratio now stands at 60.4 percent.

Overall, operators in 67 Texas counties have now received Railroad Commission permits to drill horizontal wells. Besides the counties previously noted, 166 permits for horizontal wells have been granted to operators in Gonzales County, 52 have been issued for horizontal projects in Wilson County, while another 47 permits have been granted to operators drilling horizontal holes in Brazos County.

tures from two commonly used CO_2 injection methods, says Brian Truelove, Wasson Production Superintendent.

The Hybrid WAG calls for the injection of CO_2 for four to six years, then switching an alternating water-alternating-gas process. Since fewer water injection wells will be needed in the expansion, Shell is converting 122 water injectors to CO_2 injectors.

Says Truelove: "The initial CO_2 flood was started in 1984 and has been an outstanding success. But since then careful surveillance aided by improved methods of computer reservoir modeling have prompted recommendations for a significant flood modification that will further increase the amount of recoverable oil."

Covering 28,750 acres (43 square miles) of the giant 68,000 acre Wasson field, the Denver Unit has 750 producing wells, 190 water injection wells and 200 CO_2 injection wells. Daily production includes: over 37,000 barrels of oil; 195 million cubic feet of gas (including recovered CO_2) and 207,000 barrels of water. To maintain production and reservoir pressures, Shell has been injecting 140,000 barrels of water and 440 Mmcfd of CO_2 daily.

Shell has been active in the field since 1939 and stated a waterflood in the Wasson field in 1964. Peak production was reached in 1975 at 151,000 barrels daily.

mestic consumption. The pipeline would have speeded development of the basin and Conoco was exploring plans to share in the development.

BP was contemplating a well in Siberia.

Texaco has opened a computer center in Moscow for the purpose of using seismic data to identify drilling prospects.

Now that the coup has passed. Perhaps a large portion of those 2,000 deals on the table will get off dead center. At least two of the deals on the table include participation proposals by Permian Basin independents.

The conference begins at noon Wednesday, Oct. 9, with an optional half-day trip to study Sierra Blanca, an extint volcanic mass. Those participating will go from the base of Sierra Blanca to the top of the ski lift for a birds-eye view of the area. This trip is limited to 30 participants.

The first full day, Thursday Oct. 10, attendees will be bussed to Tularosa and Alamogordo, returning to Ruidoso via High Rolls and Cloudcroft. Highlights include fossiliferous marine strata and mounds formed by fossil algae along the face of the Sacramento Mountains.

The second leg of the trip, Friday, Oct. 11, consists of a bus trip down the Rio Ruidoso Valley to Hondo with return via Lincoln and Capitan. Sights include outcrops of the San Andres formation, the Lincoln Folds in the valley of Rio Bonito near Lincoln; the Smokey mine, a source of magnetite, and Capitan Mountain, once molten rock that solidified beneath the surface and now is exposed by erosion.

The day concludes with a banquet featuring a keynote address by Dr. Charles Mankin, director, Oklahoma Survey.

The final leg of the trip will be Saturday, Oct. 12, when participants will travel in personal vehicles northwest towards Carrizozo, through the historic Nogal and White Oaks Mining districts and then across the Jicarilla Mountains to Ancho, a once-thriving brick-manufacturing center. The conference will end after a tour of the geologically recent lava flow at Valley of Fires recreation area west of Carrizozo.

Austin and the other co-chairman, Jim Barker, have arranged for different people to lead each leg, while the final leg of the conference will be led by two people, he said. Each trip will include four to six stops where the leaders, and participants, will speak, make presentations and study the rocks.

Registration for the three-day conference is limited to 200. As Austin noted, "Last year we had 198, so it's quite possible we'll have 200 this year." He estimated that 20 percent of those who attend are students, 40 percent working geologists with the remaining 40 percent retirees and lay people.

Cost is $180 for society members. The price includes the conference, two bus trips, the Friday evening banquet, barbecues, lunches and a 365-page hardbound guidebook that contains a road log.

There are scholarships available for students, according to Austin, primarily for New Mexico students, but there are one to two available for El Paso students.

Crane contractor named AOSC officer

CRANE — Steve Holifield, president of R&H Well Service, Inc., of Crane, Texas has been named second vice president of the Association of Oilwell Service Contractors in the new slate of officer.

Other national officers installed for the 1991-92 year were First Vice President William Myers, group vice president of U.S. operations, Pool Energy Services Company, Houston, and William L. Hubbell, president of J.W. Gibson Well Service, Englewood, Colo. who will continue his three-year term as the association's treasurer.

Williams, a graduate of California State College at Bakerfield, has been involved in the well servicing industry for nearly 20 years and has been an active member of the AOSC since 1978. He was elected second vice president in 1990.

Williams served as chairman of the California chapter of the AOSC, durig which time the chapter made aggressive efforts to improve the oil-well servicing industry by establishing a substance abuse program, enhancing contractor relations and significantly expanding chapter participation.

The Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors is a national trade organization which represents well servicing contactors who operate workover/well servicing rigs.

ROTAFLEX

The ROTAFLEX*
Proof is in performance

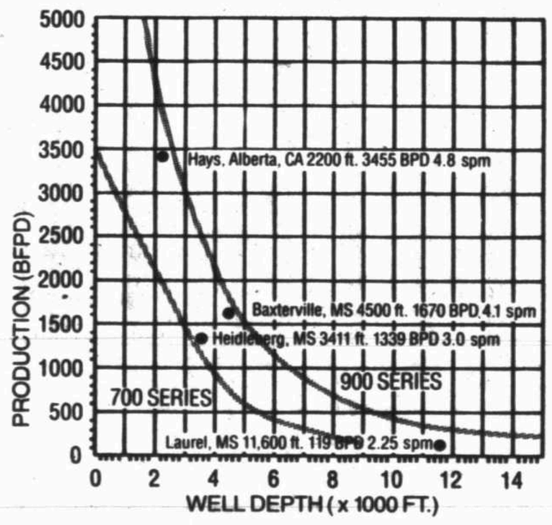

COHO RESOURCES, Laurel, MS.

The first proven application of 100% mechanical, long, slow stroke pumping technology. And from actual well performance data, the ROTAFLEX proves high volumes of fluid can be rod pumped from shallow wells and efficiently pumped from deep wells.

In a typical ROTAFLEX installation, torque demand reduces from 1,230,000 inch pounds of a 1280 sized conventional unit, to 190,000 inch pounds. And at 2 to 5 strokes per minute, the ROTAFLEX will prove you can produce more fluid from a wider range of wells, and lower equipment and long term work-over costs.

But the real proof of the ROTAFLEX is how well it can perform for you. Send us your well conditions and let's run a computer predictive. We know the ROTAFLEX can take you where no rod pump has gone before.

MEETINGS

'New UTPB' topic of API chapter meeting

The Permian Basin chapter, American Petroleum Institute, will meet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning with social hour at 6 p.m. Dinner will be at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Warren Gardner, who will speak on "The New UTPB" and discuss the expansion of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin to a four-year university and the addition of petroleum-related classes to the curriculum

Cost is $15 per dinner, $25 for API membership and dinner. Reservations can be made by calling 368-3101.

Coastal unit, IPL plan transportation system

Staff Report

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. announced that its subsidiary, ANR Pipeline Company, has entered into a letter of intent with Interprovincial Pipe Line Inc. (IPL) to establish a major, new natural gas transportation system. Subject to receiving regulatory approvals in both Canada and the United States, the proposed system will be known as InterCoastal Pipeline.

The InterCoastal system will be designed to meet the growing need for natural gas service to eastern Canada–Ontario and Quebec– and to the northeastern United States. Sources of gas supply could be from both Canadian and United States gas fields.

InterCoastal will have a peak capacity of approximately 400 million cubic feet per day and will consist of pipeline segments in Canada and the United States which will be operated on an integrated basis. When the new pipeline system is combined with ANR's existing underground storage in Michigan, InterCoastal shippers will be able to purchase gas during periods of low demand, for use at times of high consumption.

"This project will provide significant benefits to gas producers and to consumers and will ensure IPL's long-term use of a currently inactive asset," says Brian F. MacNeill, president and chief executive officer of IPL.

The Canadian segment of the InterCoastoal system will require the conversion of IPL's 517-mile, 30-inch Sarnia-Montreal (Line 9) crude oil pipeline. Shipments of western Canadian crude to Monteal via this line ceased in July 1991. Additional requirements in Canada include the construction of approximately seven miles of 30-inch diameter pipeline connecting IPL's Line 9 to a new United States segment and the addition of compressors.

The proposed InterCoastal United States segment will include approximately 40 miles of new 30-inch diameter pipeline, in St. Clair County, Michigan, which will connect ANR's existing facilities to the Canadian segment.

"With timely regulatory approvals from the appropriate agencies, the InterCoastal Pipeline could be in service for initial deliveries during the 1993 heating season," says James R. Paul, president and chief executive of The Coastal Corporation.

Interprovincial Pipe Line Inc., headquartered in Edmonton, Alberta, and its wholly owned U.S. subsidiary, Lakehead Pipe Line Company, Inc., own and operate the longest petroleum pipeline system in the world.

Centrilift unveils horizontal test bench

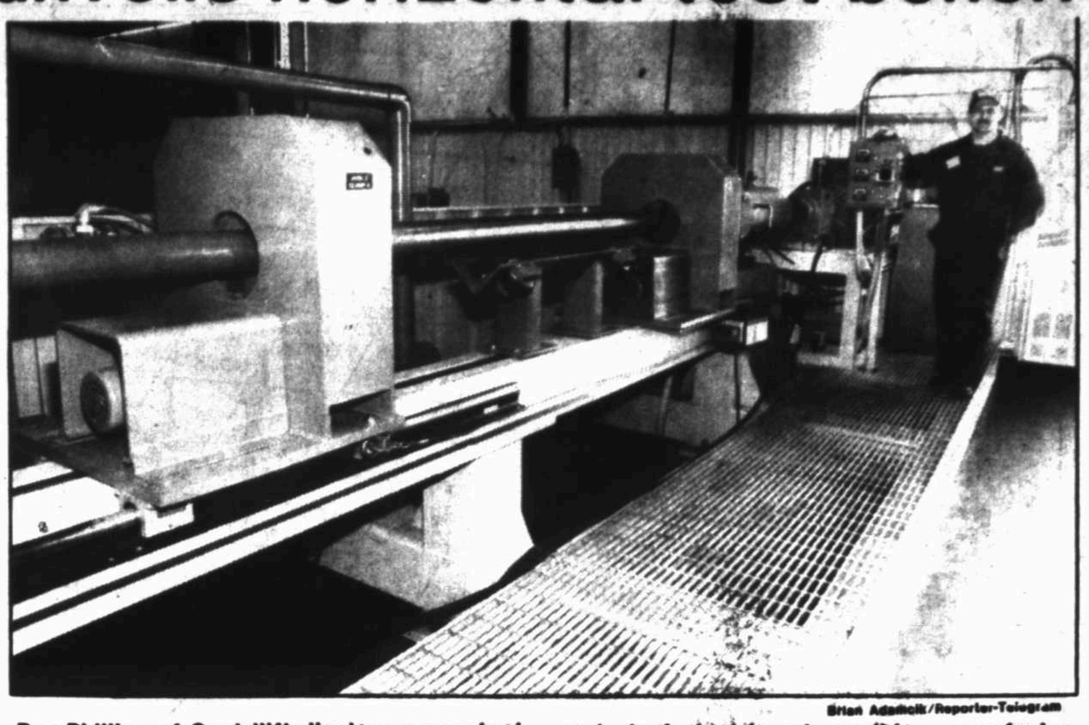

Staff Report

Centrilift has unveiled a new horizontal test bench at its facilities at 2065 Market St. that will enable the company to better test electric submersible pumps.

According to Sam Meeks, area marketing manager, the test facility will allow Centrilift to test pumps faster and easier than the old method which involved placing the pumps in a 30-foot deep test hole. He noted that the new system would also be more environmentally sound, since it would prevent fluid spills and leaks.

The new test bench, called a CAT (Centrilift Automatic Testing) 2001, utilizes clamps to hold the pump in place, a quick connect system and a series of manifolds and pumps that pumps fluid through the submersible pump under exact field conditions. Operators are able to select a wide range of rpm and performance levels, says Clarence Hall, senior technical advisor for Centrilift.

Hall, who built the test facility, noted that the entire test process is monitored by computer which provides a print out of performance curves.

Brian Addicott/Reporter-Telegram

Ray Phillips of Centrilift displays a new horizontal test bench that will enable the company to test electric submersible pumps faster and easier.

Meeks noted that of the 100,000 wells in the Permian Basin, about 5,000 are currently electrical submersible and that more would fall into that category as many waterfloods begin to mature and it becomes necessary to move large volumes of fluid.

Conoco to start selling propane in Denver area

N.Y. Times News Service

DENVER — Conoco says it start selling propane at some of its stations in the Denver area, in a push to promote a cleaner fuel and capture a big share of a new market. Propane burns much more cleanly than gasoline, but demand for it is so low that much of it is used as a chemical feedstock. About 500,000 vehicles in this country use propane, most of them in truck and car fleets, according to the National Propane Gas Association.

Propane suffers from the same chicken-and-egg problem as all alternative fuels: expansion of the number of users is hampered by lack of widespread availability of the fuel, which is in turn held down by the small size of the market. The Conoco program is an attempt to begin to break out of that cycle.

Conoco plans to open propane pumps Tuesday at a station in Denver and one in Colorado Springs, and in at least six more stations in the Denver area by the end of the year, as well as at company-operated stations in Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

Because of severe pollution from carbon monoxide, the city and county of Denver are requiring many commercial fleet vehicles to convert from gasoline to an alternative fuel by the end of next year.

Conoco, a subsidiary of E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., said it would be the first big oil company to sell propane at the service islands of its stations. Stations around the United States sell propane, but mostly at separate fueling locations, for use in barbecue-grill tanks or other such equipment.

"The key to making an environmental fuel acceptable is to make it convenient and practical," said a Conoco spokesman, John H. Bennitt.

Cars can be converted to operate on propane only, or to use either propane or gasoline, for a price between $1,800 and $3,000, he said.

Conoco says that a car or truck running on propane will perform the same as one running on gasoline, while emitting 70 to 80 percent less carbon monoxide.

"Widespread use of propane could be a significant contributor to cleaner air, especially in cities such as Denver where carbon monoxide is a significant issue," said Rick Hamm, Conoco's national marketing manager.

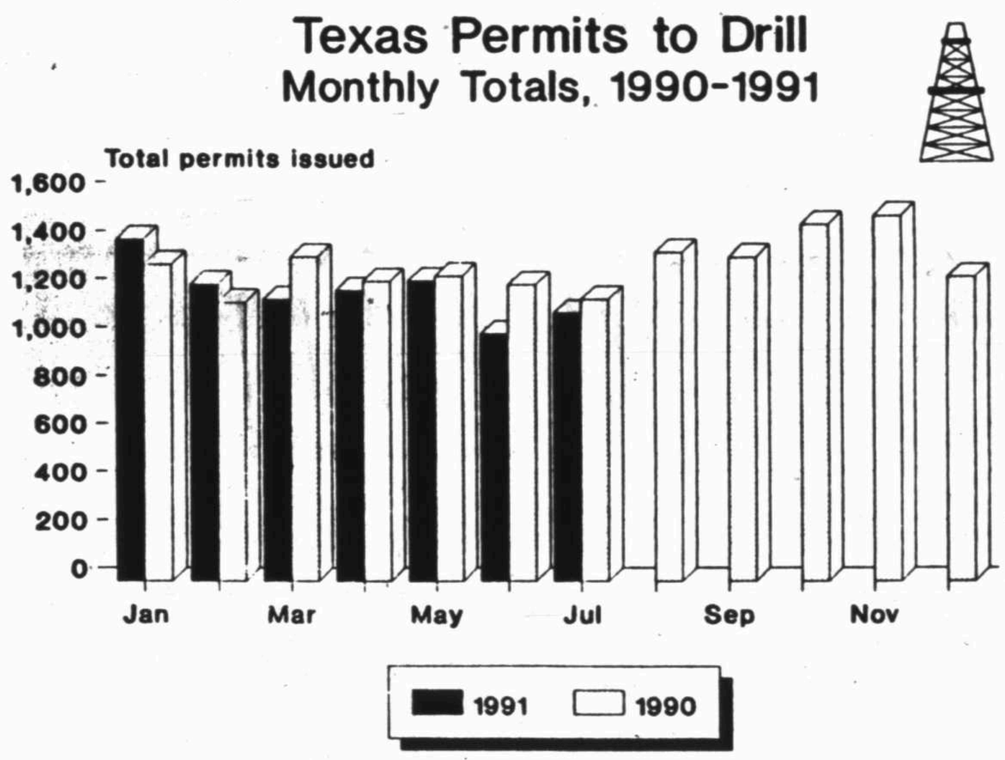

Others, though, are skeptical that propane will ever fill more than a small niche in the transportation fuel market.

"I don't think you could ever propose it as an alternative to gasoline nationwide," said Prof. John J. Thomas of the Florida Institute of Technology, who is a proponent of a different alternative, methanol. "It's probably environmentally advantageous, but it's just no real alternative on a large scale." He said the biggest problem was inadequate supply.

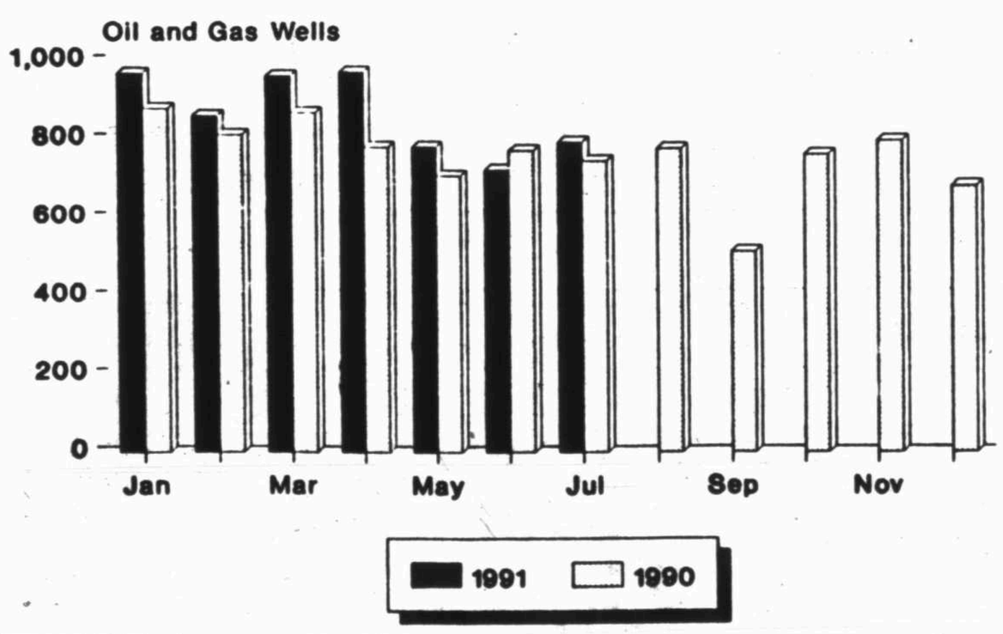

National demand for propane last year was about 16 billion gallons, with domestic use for space heating and water heating, plus petrochemical use, accounting for more than half the consumption. Gasoline demand exceeded 100 billion gallons.

About two-thirds of propane is produced from wells that also produce natural gas. Propane can also be made in refineries.

Drilling permits, completions up

Staff Report

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission reports that it issued 1,111 drilling permits during July, up from June's total of 1,025, but down slightly from July 1990's total of 1,166.

The July total included 627 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 45 to reenter existing well bores, 50 to deepen existing holes, 146 to plugback existing holes and 97 for otehr wells.

The permits included 66 in the Midland area, 83 in the San Angelo area and 49 in the Lubbock area.

For the first seven months of the year, the commission has issued 8,397 drilling permits, down 4 percent from the 8,712 issued during the same period in 1990.

The commission also reports there wee 267 gas and 468 oil completions in July, up from the 247 gas and 440 oil completions reported in June. In July 1990, there were 260 gas and 437 oil completions.

In the Midland area, there were 11 gas completions and 84 oil completions.

In the first seven months of the year, the commission has recorded 4,722 well completions, up 9 percent from the 4,332 recorded in the same period of 1990.

Silurian discovery flows 518 barrels

Staff Report

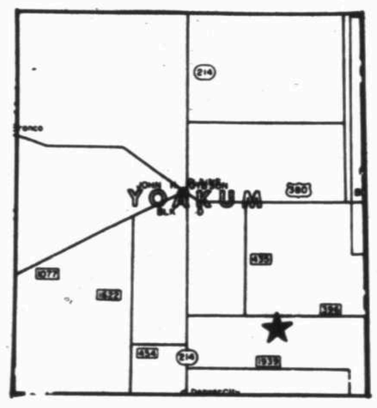

A Silurian discovery has been completed in Yoakum County, east of the Mary Two field.

EP OPERATING CO. potentialed the No. 1 A.T. Carter to flow 518 barrels of 34.9 gravity crude and 71 barrels of water on a 12/64 inch choke from open hole interval 13,100 to 13,108 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 15:1.

Permitted as a 13,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 13,120 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 13,108 ft.

The well topped the Atoka at 11,707 ft., Woodford at 13,020, and Silurian at 13,100 ft. Pay was topped at 13,100 ft.

Yoakum strike

EP Operating Co. has completed a Silurian find in Yoakum County, east of the Mary Two field.

Gaines explorer tested in Clearfork formation

Gaines County has yielded a Clearfork discovery, east of the Penrose field.

PRIMERO OPERATING INC., Roswell, N.M., completed the No. 1 Branex-America to pump 138 barrels of 36.2 gravity crude and 35 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 6,459 to 6,480 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio was 188:1.

Permitted as a 7,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,200 ft. and plugged back to 6,685 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,747 ft.

The well topped the Lovington Sand at 4,615 ft., Glorieta at 5,919 and Upper Clearfork at 6,398 ft. on ground elevation of 3,557 ft.

Location is 2,310 ft. from south and west lines of Section 2, Block A-10, PSl survey, 8.5 miles east of Hobbs.

Irion County gains 190 barrel discovery

TUCKER DRILLING CO. INC., San Angelo, has recorded a Wolfcamp discovery in Irion County, 3/4-miles southeast of the Zan Zan (Middle Canyon) field.

On potential test, the No. 3 Brooks pumped 190.03 barrels of 30.3 gravity crude and nine barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 4,929 to 4,951 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,668:1.

The well was drilled to 6,350 ft. and plugged back to 6,170 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,349 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,298 ft. include the Clearfork at 2,910 ft., Middle Canyon at 6,218 and Wolfcamp at 4,818 ft.

Dallas operator finals Runnels County find

A Dallas operator has completed a Capps Lime discovery in Runnels County, a half-mile west of the Sanford North (Fry) field, two miles north of Wingate.

JAMES K. ANDERSON INC. finaled the No. 1 Wade White to pump 15 barrels of 39 gravity crude and 240 barrels of water from perforations 4,511 to 4,514 ft. The interval was acidized with 300 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,667:1.

The well was drilled to 5,100 ft. and plugged back to 4,582 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,630 ft.

The well topped the Capps Lime at 4,509 ft., Jennings Sand at 4,830, and Gardner Sand at 4,954 ft. on ground elevation of 2,038 ft.

Rank wildcat tests as Penn discovery

A rank Pennsylvanian discovery has been recorded in Chaves County, N.M., north of the Newmill field.

ROBERT J. MANNES tested the No. 1 State "35" to flow 240 Mcfd on a 3/16 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 351 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,350 to 6,372 ft., which had been acidized with 4,00 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid.

Drilled to 6,940 ft., the well was plugged back to 6,768 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,927 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,089 ft., include the Yates at 542 ft., Seven Rivers at 613, Queen at 1,070, San Andres 1,451, Glorieta 2,592, Tubb at 4,118, Abo at 4,684, Cisco at 6,079, Mississippian at 6,702, and Montoya at 6,822 ft. Pay was topped at 6,350 ft.

Cambrian reopened in Coke County field

GLG ENERGY L.P. has reopened Cambrian production in the Hendry Point field of Coke County with completion of the No. 01 Hendry Point Unit, located 5/8-mile southwest of the original opener, 10 miles north of Bronte.

The well tested to pump 53 barrels of 47.5 gravity crude and 280 barrels of water. Production was natural from perforations 5,713 to 5,725 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 283:1.

Drilled to 6,315 ft., the well was plugged back to 6,150 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,305 ft.

The well topped the Cambrian at 5,713 ft. on ground elevation of 2,004 ft.

Texas ready to use more natural gas

By Suzanne Gamboa

SOCORRO, Texas (AP) — Three years ago the idea seemed somewhat farfetched: Wean the oil-producing Lone Star State off gasoline and get it hooked on natural gas.

But by this year, at least five school districts have begun or already completed converting their bus fleets to run on compressed natural gas. Monday, the property-poor Socorro Independent School District announced it would convert its 57-bus fleet to natural gas by the end of the fall.

Schools that haven't made the switch won't have much choice after the first of the month. Beginning Sept. 1, school districts with fleets of 50 or more buses are prohibited from purchasing buses that cannot operate on an alternative fuel, preferably Texas natural gas. The measure stems from legislation approved in 1989.

"We probably have about 95 school districts affected by the legislation," Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Monday after an El Paso news conference. "What's interesting is the school districts with the biggest fleets are the ones that are converting first."

He said 50,000 buses are being converted, about half by the end of this year.

Socorro was able to convert its buses through a $420,000 investment from Southern Union Gas Co. of El Paso. The money pays for conversion of the buses' engines and tanks, a compressor at the district's bus yard and a dispensing system, said Robert Orrantia, Southern Union energy utilities engineer.

Orrantia said the school district will pay back the money over seven years through cost savings from fuel prices.

The district currently pays $1.08 a gallon of diesel and will pay 50 cents per gallon equivalent of compressed natural gas.

"We're trying to clean up the air in El Paso and also it makes good economic sense for the school district," said Orrantia. He said Southern Union currently is in negotiations to convert the Ysleta Independent School District's 157-bus fleet.

"I congratulate the Socorro Independent School District and the Southern Union Gas Co. for taking a major step forward on the path that will help clean up our air, help get the bigger bang for the education buck, and help stimulate the Texas economy as a whole," Mauro said.

Mauro said most school districts had been able to convert their fleets through similar arrangements with gas companies.

"Lone Star (Gas Co. in Dallas) and Southern Union have offered every school district in their area similar financial projects," Mauro said. "It's a great public-private partnership."

Dave Roberts, a spokesman for Mauro, said last year, for the first time in the history of the Permanent School Fund, natural gas royalties from drilling rigs on state land contributed more to the fund than oil.

Lease sale goes on despite protests

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — High bids totalled more than $62.6 million Wednesday when the federal government sold oil and gas leases on millions of acres of waterbottoms on the Outer Continental Shelf in the western Gulf of Mexico.

Officials with the Interior Department's Minerals Management Service said 55 companies offered 182 bids on 142 of the offered tracts. More than 23.5 million acres covering 4,287 tracts were up for bid.

Highest bidder on a single tract was a combine of MGPL Petroleum and Tatham Oil Co., said Barney Congdon, MMS spokesman. Their bid was $3.7 million for a tract identified as Garden Banks Block 72.

Congdon said this year's sale drew less interest than the last offering of Western Gulf waterbottoms, which are primarily gas producing tracts.

"In comparison to the last western sale, it's lower ... It caught us in a year when gas prices are relatively low," Congdon said.

The sale went off as usual Wednesday after an unsuccessful court challenge by Louisiana officials.

Louisiana officials have contended that the state deserves some of the estimated $35 billion from development of the Outer Continental Shelf to compensate for damage offshore development does to the coast.

They sought an injunction to stop Wednesday's sale but lost in court last week.

U.S. District Judge Peter Beer said the state presented strong evidence of environmental damage, but should have begun its case much sooner.

While lawyers for the state said they would not appeal Beer's decision on the injunction, they said the matter of payment for the state is likely to be pursued in later court action.

"We understand Louisiana's interest in obtaining federal money to provide impact assistance," Minerals Management Service director Scott Sewell said last week. "But impact assistance isn't something we can grant administratively. The U.S. Congress has to pass a new law before we can enact any program of this type. I spoke to Gov. Roemer and offered to meet with him as soon as possible to try and address his concerns."

The water bottoms are in the western Gulf anywhere from nine miles to 220 miles offshore at depths of anywhere from eight meters to 3,000 meters.

While the sale is defined as a Texas sale and the area is largely off the Texas coast, some of the area for sale is south of Louisiana and development there could affect the state, officials said.

The Win Energy project could stimulate interest in implementing such waterflood techniques.

FLOOD: Has promise

toward a porosity pinchout and into producing wells. Any water coning and channeling problems, says the elder Whiteside, will be handled in the tranditional method with polymer slugs.

"There are a number of advantages to horizontal flooding over conventional flooding," says John Whiteside Sr.

Time is one big advantage. With an average of 10 feet of net pay, in the Flippen Limestone reservoir at 2540 feet, each horizontal injection well, which will have 1500 feet of displacement, and will allow the formation to take 1500 barrels of water per day, as opposed to 200 barrels per day for a conventional injection well. While a conventional waterflood would take two years to fill the reservoir, the Whitesides say horizontal injection will take only three to four months.

This in turn will allow a faster sweep of the formation. While a conventional waterflood may take ten to 15 years to get maximum sweep, a horizontal flood should take only three to four years, Win predicts.

Sweep efficiency is another advantage. A conventional flood is expected to yield only 30-50 percent of the oil in place, but Win estimates that a horizontal flood could yield 50-70 percent of the oil. The Bullard Propst-Anson fields has made 2.2 million barrels cumulative, and Win anticipates recovering an additional 1.5 with the horizontal injectin technique.

In its prospect, which John Whiteside Jr. says has been on the market for only two weeks, Win is projecting the project will return three-to-one on investor money in three to four years, as opposed to three-to-one on money in 10 years for a conventional flood.

"If this works," says the younger Whiteside, a petroleum landman, "It could mean a great deal to the Permian Basin. It may mean that some of the old abandoned fields could be redrilled and flooded horizontally, and it may mean that nearly all current waterfloods could be extended with horizontal injection wells."

He said the technique of using horizontal injection wells to give more efficient sweep could work in all reservoirs including structural anticlines, faults and stratigraphic traps. He added that it could also be used in conventional five-spot patterns to provide the ultimate squeeze into producing wells.

BRIEFS

Chevron expands Basin training school

MIDLAND — Chevron U.S.A. Inc.'s Permian Basin Production Business Unit announced expansion Tuesday of its Training Center located north of Highway 191 on FM 1788 between Midland and Odessa. The expansion will provide job safety, and environmental training for some 500 Chevron Operations and Maintenance personnel in the Permian Basin area. When completed, the new facility will consist of a full size, fully operational tank battery, numerous training aids, and a building with a large shop area and various classrooms.

Oryx Energy announces Gulf gas strike

DALLAS — Oryx Energy Co. has announced gas production of 34 million cubic feet per day from its new Gulf of Mexico platform on High Island Block 384 and additional production from a subsea well on Garden Banks Block 224. Both blocks are in federal waters about 130 miles south of Sabine Pass, Tx..

Daily production at High Island Block 384 is from six completions in five wells and includes 150 barrels of condensate along with the 34 MMcf/D. Start-up is several months ahead of schedule because the wells were pre-drilled through a specially designed seafloor template during platform fabrication.

U.S., U.S.S.R. sign oil research accord

WASHINGTON — An accord signed by Department of Energy's Deputy Secretary W. Henson Moore and the U.S.S.R.'s First Deputy Chairman of the State Fuels and Energy Commission, Rantik Margulov, could mean a new era of cooperation in the oil and gas industry between the countries. The accord marked the conclusion of a recent eight-day U.S.-U.S.S.R. Fossil Energy Workshop at DOE's headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Moore said objectives of the workshop were to establish a framework for possible U.S.-U.S.S.R. energy and fuels technology cooperation and to examine the expanding commercial opportunities between the U.S. private sector and the U.S.S.R. all-union, republic and local enterprises.

Texas Inferno Snuffers head for Kuwait

COLLEGE STATION — Inferno Snuffers, Inc. of College Station, says it may begin moving personnel and its new chemical gel compound called "Uni-Snuff" to Kuwait for the purpose of distinguishing oil well fires that were started during the Gulf War.

Uni-Snuff mixes and surround oil molecules, completely preventing any possibility of reignition. It will replace 200 times or more of its volume of water under many circumstances. This feature is one of its most significant advantages for locations such as Kuwait, where water availability is minimal or nonexistent.

Transco names new president, CEO

HOUSTON — Transco Energy Co. has named John P. DesBarres of Los Angeles president and chief executive officer of the Houston-based petroleum company, effective October 1.

DesBarres, 52, will succeed W.J. Bowen, who has served as temporary chairman and CEO since March. Bowen, 69, will remain chairman until his retirement from the board next year as he reaches the mandatory retirement age of 70. He previously led the company from 1974 to 1987.

Floyd buys interest in Cochran County wells

Staff Report

Floyd Oil Co. has acquired from several undisclosed sellers an average 41 percent working interest in 15 wells in the Slaughter field of Cochran County for $1 million. Production is from the San Andres formation at about 5,000 feet. Total proved reserves acquired are estimated at 311,000 barrels of oil and 577 million cubic feet of gas.

Floyd also acquired for $1.3 million an average 8 percent working interest in 22 wells, an average 16 percent working interest in four wells and additional small royalty interests from two undisclosed sellers. The acquired properties are in Upshur County in the Rosewood field and produce from the Upper and Lower Cotton Valley sands between 9,000 and 11,000 feet. Proved reserves acquired total 5.4 billion cubic feet of gas and 57,000 barrels of oil.

Looking up to the stars

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Star gazing has been a pastime for as long as man has walked the earth. And, on a clear, dark night, away from city lights, a person can see approximately 3,000 stars.

The largest, which look like tiny dots, have a diameter around 1,000 times as large as the sun's, which would more than fill the space between the sun and the Earth.

Others are smaller than the Earth.

When this year's Septemberfest opens the second weekend of the month, area residents will discover that local space watching at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium has been updated and modernized.

The planetarium, which is part of the Museum of the Southwest complex, has been closed throughout the summer for the installation of a Minolta Viewlex Series IV planetarium instrument/projector and accompanying automation and special-effects equipment.

"I'm extremely pleased," said Mark Hartman, planetarium director. "It's even exceeded my expectations. The machine is exquisite, and it performs great."

The Minolta replaces the smaller Spitz projector which has served the planetarium since its opening in 1973.

"It (the Minolta) probably weighs close to a ton. It's larger than the old machine and that causes some minor problems with some of our seats. It's in the way for a few of the seats because of its size.

"I was initially concerned about the size. Now, I'm not concerned at all. The proportion of this instrument to our planetarium dome is much closer to what I'm used to," said Hartman, who came to Midland after receiving a master's of fine arts degree from Texas Tech University. He holds an undergraduate degree from Hastings College in Hastings, Neb., and has done graduate work at Kearney State College in Nebraska.

Using the new projector, "the sky's more realistic," Hartman said. "It projects almost three times as many stars. And, from the standpoint of the viewer, the star-field looks basically the same from most any seat in the theater. With the old machine, if you were sitting too close to one side of the dome or the other, the stars were blurry by the walls you were sitting next to, and it diminished the effect."

When those familiar with the planetarium walk into the facility, the Minolta projector will command their attention from its vantage point in the center of the auditorium. But, that's not the only change.

"The changes that the viewer will notice most are those from the multi-image system," Hartman said. "We've got a new video projector, and the image that it projects covers a good portion of the front of the planetarium. And it's already wowed some of us who have been in the theater looking at it. It was better than most of us thought it would be.

"I thought with standard NTSC (National Telecommunications) Video that the image, when projected that large, would not be of very good quality. But it's actually sharper and brighter than I anticipated. And, we've got the capabilities to do some of our own video editing, which is going to make it a versatile instrument for us. It'll replace a lot of special effects that we would have purchased individually.

"Along with that, we've got the capability to run 36 slide projectors in different configurations and formations much like are used in some corporate multi-image trade shows. We have computerized special effects, a new panorama system and single image all-sky projector.

"When you put it all together, it means that our capabilities as a planetarium are going to be more than adequate to handle the types of shows that are being produced these days."

"The machine's star field in our initial test is excellent — the way they look. We haven't aligned all of the instrument's functions yet. There's a lot of things to do on it. We literally spent a week getting it installed and getting the basic functions running, and now we're calibrating things and double-checking things. So far, everything's working great."

The museum hired Hartman in the fall of 1990 as its first full-time planetarium director. In addition to spending spending the summer helping install the updated equipment, he is developing sky shows for use with the Minolta equipment and is designing Midland Independent School District science curriculum programming for local and regional groups.

The projector will give the planetarium, "A solid foundation for our astronomy education," Hartman said. "And I think it's a more effective teaching instrument."

Throughout its history, the planetarium and MISD have worked together to insure that school children have an opportunity to visit the planetarium once a year.

Starting in September 1991, Hartman said, "the planetarium is going to broaden its base to area schools while still maintaining our commitment to MISD. There will be some changes we are focusing on some grade levels while leaving other grade levels to the discretion of the school principals as to whether they visit or not. And, we're going to try a more flexible scheduling program for teachers."

The project cost approximately $100,000. The Museum of the Southwest received a $20,000 grant from the J.M. West Corp., which also helped to fund the construction of the planetarium.

Hartman attributes the successful installation of the equipment to quality help from Joe Hopkins of Joe Hopkins Engineering in Brandenton, Fla., and to HyBon Engineering.

"They literally constructed a device to lift the heaviest portion of the machine into place," Hartman said. "Then they provided assistance for us to lift it into place."

Hopkins, a designer of electronic multi-image systems, installed the planetarium's new computer-controlled, multi-image slide and video system and the Minolta projector. Hopkins has installed systems in 650 planetariums across the United States, Hartman said.

During Septemberfest Hartman will present short programs which utilize the video projector and multi-image sys-

Las Manos' Septemberfest

Septemberfest '91 is set for Sept. 7 and 8 on the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The annual event, sponsored by Las Manos, the museum's auxiliary organization, includes Kinderfest, Artfest, Musicfest, Foodfest, Carfest — a new car show — and Travelfest — featuring two travel packages courtesy of American Airlines and International Travel and Cruise.

The preview party will run from 7 to 11 p.m. Sept. 6 and includes a preview of the works of the 60-plus participating artists, a catered meal and music by the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale. A posted bid auction will take place throughout the evening to benefit the museum.

The Septemberfest Guest Artist is Doug Hyde.

Activities Sept. 7 begin with the 11th annual Septemberfest Run for Fun, sponsored by the Midland Jaycees. For more information on the Run call 683-4362 or 697-7021.

tem. The programs will be similar to those presented last Septemberfest, yet, Hartman said, "more complicated in the sense of the number of visuals and the pace of the show."

Public sky shows will resume on Sunday afternoon and Tuesday evenings after Septemberfest.

"On Wings," written and produced by Hartman, will be the first full-length presentation with the upgraded equipment. It will open around Sept. 15 and was planned in conjunction with the Flight Exhibition at the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, which opened this month. The sound track was put together by Joseph Brunelle while he was serving his master in residency at the museum.

"Had it not been for the Confederate Air Force, we probably would not be doing a program on flight," said Hartman, who taught undergraduate astronomy at Hastings College and was assistant director of the Hastings College Observatory where he produced original multi-image shows and implemented classes and viewing sessions for astronomical events including Halley's Comet in 1986.

"It ('On Wings') represents our first effort here as a production facility to produce some of our own planet shows. It'll be about 35 to 40 minutes in length. Almost all of it will be from local talent, associated with the museum primarily."

"On Wings" begins with the history of flight with excerpts about Leonardo Da Vinci and some of his flying machines, Hartman said. It includes tower jumpers, early aviation pioneers such as Otto Lilienthal, a survey of 20th century items related to flight and aerodynamics. The program will end with the space shuttle and future space missions.

'Had it not been for the Confederate Air Force, we probably would not be doing a program on flight...'

— Mark Hartman

"That's not to say that we think space flight is the end all of flight," Hartman said. "It's just one direction that we're interested in pursuing."

Planetarium work allows Hartman to merge his interests.

"I obviously have an interest in astronomy and science, but I also have what I consider to be more than an interest in art. I feel like the planetarium is a place both of these things come together. We're concerned with educating people about science, but at the same time we have to do that in such a way that it's not boring.

"Planetarium shows merge visual entertainment with education. That is why I'm here. I do as much on my job to create, as I do to educate, and it's a good blend.

"I find that it adequately satisfies my need to create, and it provides a very real sense of accomplishment. Like any teacher, I am rewarded by passing on information and thoughts and ideas to the people that come through my classroom, and I think the planetarium is a wonderful classroom."

Joe Hopkins, above, who installed the planetarium's new computer-controlled, multi-image slide and video system and the Minolta projector, shows Mark Hartman, director of the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, the controls in the projection booth. Greg Hughes, right, who works for Hopkins, solders "patch boy" that connects switches to projector.

Cowboy discovers he likes poetry

By Robert Burnson

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Clay Lindley wasn't real impressed the first time he heard a cowboy reading poetry.

He was riding herd at the time on a ranch in northern New Mexico.

In the evenings, he and the other cowboys would sit around the fire and talk.

"And there was simply nothing to do," recalls Lindley, a 31-year-old cowboy and soil conservation agent who lives in Van Horn, Texas.

"Well, one night one of the guys brought out a poem he had written and read it. And I thought to myself, that's about the sissiest thing a person could do.

"Well, it wasn't a week later that I was sitting in the tepee (where the cowboys slept) and I just scribbled down this poem about a horse."

So began the career of Clay Lindley, cowboy poet.

Lindley wrote a few more poems during his four months on the ranch. But camp life claimed his work — the poems got rained on.

"Later on, I did write a few and managed to keep them," says Lindley, part of the recent New Mexico Festival of Cowboy Poets in Silver City.

Then, in 1989, he attended a cowboy poetry gathering in Alpine, Texas.

"I went to that gathering to see some old friends I hadn't seen for a few years. But the master of ceremonies was a friend of mine. And they didn't have enough people to read. So he said to me, 'Come on up here and read one of yours.'

"Well, I didn't want to, but he kept after me so I got up."

He read "The Cowboy Nerd," a humorous poem he had penned about tenderfoot cowboys.

The crowd loved it. Word spread about Lindley. And soon, poetry gatherings all over the West were paying him to recite at their festivals.

Last year, Lindley appeared in about 25 poetry gatherings, including the granddaddy of them all, the Elko, Nev., gathering.

This year, the 5-foot-9, 165-pound cowboy expects to appear in 30 to 40 gatherings.

"Every weekend since the first of March, I've recited somewhere," says Lindley, who sports a reddish handlebar mustache. "And it's getting more and more and more.

"I'm having a ball doing this. I like it more than anything else."

"He sings some of his songs with me playing the harmonica and acting like an idiot and then I do a couple of my poems," says Lindley, a Del Rio, Texas, native who attended high school in Silver City.

"Sooner or later, (cowboy poetry) will peak and then it will decline some," says Lindley. "But for now on, it will be part of the heritage."

Lindley, who titled a book of poems "The Cowboy Nerd," and writes humorous poems, often plays the fool.

"I am the Cowboy Nerd in my little circle of friends," he says.

He attributes this to his decision in 1987 to take a regular job as a range conservationist with the U.S. Soil and Conservation Service.

As a range conservationist, Lindley spent his days in the field advising ranchers on range management issues.

'Tex-Mex' Gala chairman has faith in her abilities

AP Laserphoto

Faith Martinez, 26, is the chairwoman of the Anita N. Martinez Ballet Folklorico de Dallas 1991's "Tex-Mex" Gala to be held Sept. 14 in Dallas. Ms. Martinez says the organization has gotten bigger every year anf they continue to try and make the community aware of the region's Hispanic heritage.

By Dick Hitt

DALLAS (AP) — Here is a story of Faith, hope and choreography. And of these, the most recent is Faith.

Faith Martinez is 26, tender years indeed to be at the helm of an event like the approaching gala that caps the 1991 season of the Anita N. Martinez Ballet Folklorico de Dallas, some of whose dance rituals are as old as the Aztecs.

"We're not related," Anita Martinez says of Faith Martinez, "but we're sure kindred spirits." The former two-term Dallas city councilwoman and Hispanic-affairs civic leaders says of her younger colleague, "Faith has brought a talent, energy and enthusiasm to this job that has given us an entirely new momentum."

As chairwoman of the 1991 "Tex-Mex" Gala on Sept. 14 in the Great Hall of the Apparel Mart, Faith hopes charity will continue its traditional ways in Dallas. "Our organization has gotten bigger every year. We're trying to get the community aware of our region's Hispanic heritage."

There are few ways to do that with more plumage and verve than with a performance of the homegrown folk-dance troupe, which unabashedly patterns its format and even its name after the world-famous company of Amalia Hernandez's Ballet Folklorico de Mexico, which has entertained millions over the decades both on the road and from its home stage at Mexico City's Museum of Fine Arts.

Like the original, Dallas' Ballet Folklorico presents a pageantry of elaborate costumes and distinctive dances from various, and quite musically different, regions of Mexico. The Dallas troupe began 16 years ago when Anita Martinez first set up city-sponsored dance classes in a West Dallas recreation center that bears her name. The evolved Ballet Folklorico de Dallas, which became a professional company in 1990, uses its revenues to underwrite three levels of dance instruction in Dallas schools, and in helping Hispanic students "to build their confidence and self-esteem by learning more about their culture," in the words of Anita Martinez. "It helps us keep children off the streets and on the dance floor."

'Through the grace of my parents. I'm running a company. I've seen the benefits of hard work from watching my parents, and I think I've done a lot to continue what they started here. We've worked very hard and we're doing very well.'

— Faith Martinez

When the company changed from amateur personnel to a professional dance troupe, a blue-ribbon spectrum of Dallas lawyers, bankers, brokers and corporate heads joined to lead a membership drive to raise the money for a virtually doubled budget. The troupe's concert programs and mailers are studded with an all-star assortment of company logos: NCNB, Bank One, Pepsi, Mobil Foundation.

With such stakes ahead, Faith Martinez is riding a tiger of on-the-job training as a civic leader, apparently with the aplomb of one who is already successful as a company president just five years out of the University of Texas at Austin.

The company is Martinez Florist, a North Dallas business begun by her parents, Henry and Gloria, as an investment back when Faith was still a college student. Faith was part of the investment, too.

"Oh, yes, it was a good investment," says Henry Martinez, a partner in the Dallas graphic arts firm of Ackley Martinez. "Her mother is a very creative person, but Faith has a talent for management and for being able to work with people. That was about the only advice I remember being able to give her when she was younger — that if you can work with people, you can do just about anything. Our store happens to be a florist shop, but I think she could run just about anything. She was always so self-reliant and independent, as a father I'd usually have to go find her to give her any advice. She rarely came to us.

"She's still a very independent young lady," he says.

It was through the floral connection that she first started working as a Ballet Folklorico volunteer. "I started out doing the centerpieces for the gala," she says. "Then I gradually became more involved, and in 1989 I was put in charge of decorations. Last year I was given the chair for the whole gala.

"Through the grace of my parents," she says, "I'm running a company. I've seen the benefits of hard work from watching my parents, and I think I've done a lot to continue what they started here. We've worked very hard and we're doing very well."

She thinks chairing the gala has been a lot like running the business. "This year's gala is our most ambitious. There have been contracts to work out — we arranged to bring in Vicki Carr as our first celebrity entertainer, and there are lots of details to see after, accommodations for her band, the staging, the lighting. This year there's been a silent auction and a committee in charge of soliciting items to be sold in it. It's taken a lot of people a lot of time. But right now the hard work is just beginning — the planning's over, and now it's time for the work.

"I know I'm very young to be doing this, but the organization is young, too, and there was a lot I felt I could do to help it grow."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Youths to perform

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Co. of the Permian Playhouse opens its 22nd theater season Saturday with "Livin' de Life!"

The Kaleidoscope Co. is the youth resident company of the Permian Playhouse. For 22 years, the company has produced plays for the children of the Permian Playhouse. This season includes "Livin' de Life!" "Beauty and the Beast" and "Puss In Boots."

"Living' de Life!" is a play about the dramatized stories of Joel Harris. The stories come from a group of folk stories from 1880 and include the Uncle Remus stories and the characters of Br'er Rabbit, Br'er Fox and Br'er Bear.

The productions will be presented in matinee performances on Saturdays and Sundays. A season tickets to the plays is $5 for adults or children. If an adult brings a child 6 years old or younger, the child must have a ticket and the adult is admitted free.

Members receive advance notice of all productions and have preferential choices in making reservations, when reservations are made prior to the opening performances.

For more information or to make reservations call 1-362-2329 Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

■ Musicians attend fest

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc., has announced that several musicians were selected to perform in the Northwood Orchestra as part of Northwood Institute's summer Music Fest in northern Michigan.

Outdoor concerts are held for three weeks each summer at the Tent, Black Forest Hall, Harbor Springs, and at the Barn at Dunmaglas in Charlevoix. The musicians selected from the Midland-Odessa area were Patrick Hund, Jennifer Leshnower, Jim Logan, Elizabeth Tonorsky, Mary Ann Fairlie, Dorothy Knowles, Tim Young and Sharon Hickox.

The Northwood Orchestra is a 50-piece professional orchestra composed of first chair and principal musicians from throughout the United States and Canada. Since its establishment in 1979 as the resident orchestra for the Northwood Institute Music Fest, the Northwood Orchestra has expanded its scope to include performances in major cities such as Dallas, Houston and Palm Springs.

From its conception, the Northwood Orchestra has been conducted by Don Th. Jaeger, music director of the MOSC.

Houstonian drives off with $2,000 first prize at demolition derby

Staff Report

The largest crowd in Twin Cities Speedway history watched Aug. 17 as drivers from Houston and Midland walked away with the money in the 1991 National Demolition Derby, sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions club.

First place in the derby went to Wendell Urbernosky of Houston, who walked away with &2,000 and a trophy.

Others in the money included Johnny Patke, Houston, second, $300; Clifford Loveday, Hot Springs, Ark., third, $200; John Talley, Las Vegas, Nev., fourth, $100; Lefty Smith, Odessa, fifth, $500; Kenneth Imler, Odessa, sixth, $100; "Bad" Bob Jones, Odessa, seventh, $100; Mike Martin, Midland, eighth, $100; John Fisher, Midland, ninth, $100; and Thomas Wakeland, Midland, tenth, $1,000. All 10 places received trophies and race jackets.

In addition, the "Best Looking Car" Award went to Jumburrito. The $100 cash prize to the car towed the farthest distance went to Rick Talley of Las Vegas, Nev., who lives farther away from the speedway than his brother, John Talley, also of Las Vegas.

Also, Keith Montgomery, disc jockey on KNFM, received the "Most Daring Daredevil" Award. Montgomery was the only disc jockey entered in the derby.

The 1992 National Demolition Derby, again sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club, has been set for Aug. 15. Total purse will be $10,000 with $5,000 going to first place.

In 1992, the first 50 cars pre-entered that come from more than 100 miles away from the speedway will receive a free motel room, and the first 100 that pre-enter and drive in the derby will receive a free race jacket.

This year, the annual event also featured a KPEJ TV-24 Kids Day Great Bicycle Race, radio control racing cars, auto racing and spectator drags.

Recipient of the large trophy from KPEJ TV was 6-year-old Brandon Milligan. Also, Jack Mack Wand and Steven Bale won the two pedal funny cars from Castrol.

The best two out of three races in the "Grudge Match" went to Rick Wilson's Chevrolet. The spectator drag was won by a Mitsubishi.

Twin Cities Speedway is west of Midland International Airport, between Highway 80 and Interstate 20. For more information on this special event at the three-eighths mile asphalt oval track call 683-8541 or 563-5456. For the rest of the season, races will be held Saturday nights.

Buckley stars in 'A Little Night Music'

Tickets range from $15 to $20 and are available through the box office, 1-817-332-6221, and at all rainbow-TicketMaster locations.

Laurelled with Tony Awards for Best Musical of the season, its book by Hugh Wheeler and its score and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, "A Little Night Music" is a version of the memorable film "Smiles of a Summer Night" by Ingmar Bergman.

Ms. Buckley, who played Abby Bradford in the television series "Eight is Enough" and won a Tony Award for her portrayal of Grizabella in Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Cats," will portray Desiree, in the story of the illusions and disillusions of love.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, AUGUST 25, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: With your conservative nature, it pays to follow the "tried-and-true" in business. By late fall, family influence and new contacts will bring you a splendid career opportunity. Those who are between jobs will get back on track by Christmas. Diplomacy will help you win relatives over to your side early in the new year. Striking a better balance between work and home will strengthen a romantic alliance next spring. Choose a mate who understands your tremendous drive to get ahead.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Sean Connery and Mel Ferrer, musician Elvis Costello, game show host Monty Hall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Rise early to exercise before church. You need to be very diplomatic when dealing with combative people. Widen your social circle by attending a party or neighborhood meeting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do a favor for your loved ones. A small outlay of cash may be involved. You can well afford it! Use a positive approach to heal an old wound. Avoid mentioning the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Happiness fills your day! Touch base with old friends or former neighbors. A shopping trip could produce some real bargains. In the evening, relax with a book or your favorite music.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Changes are especially delightful for those who are single. An unexpected invitation could be the start of something great! Buy a small gift to take to a nursing home resident.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The emphasis today is on enlarging your circle of friends. Your obvious intelligence makes you especially attractive to a member of the opposite sex. Loved ones welcome your recreational suggestions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put aside your usual routine to tend to the needs of an ailing relative or friend. An infatuation could blind you to the truth. Postpone making a commitment to someone you hardly know.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Refuse to dwell on past mistakes! The future can be as rewarding as you choose to make it. Set some new priorities and then stick to them. Mate is a source of inspiration.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Real spiritual growth is possible today. A new sense of commitment will help preserve an important relationship. Turn to those who have proved loyal to you in the past. Joint ventures are favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If the weather permits, get some fresh air. Dining outdoors will sharpen appetites. Close ties deepen when you share your hopes and dreams. Do your share of listening, too.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Family affairs move in a direction that pleases you. A chance encounter could lead to a romantic interlude. Put your best foot forward. A telephone call leaves you wondering.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to rearrange your schedule to accommodate a friend in need. A candid conversation with your partner will reveal secrets that should be shared. Become a better listener when with your offspring.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Diplomacy can help you avoid a confrontation today. Take the initiative in patching up a quarrel. Mental powers will compensate for a physical disadvantage. Romance is the source of great joy.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

Don't complacently settle for the obvious approach. More often than not, a bridge hand will offer an alternate line that can be combined with your primary chance.

Hands where most of your values are concentrated in a short suit are notoriously difficult to bid, and the North hand was no exception. North finally decided to jump to two no trump despite the fact the club stopper was tenuous in the extreme—at least that bid described the strength and shape of the hand. Since there rated to be some wasted values in diamonds, South didn't even think of looking for slam.

West led the top of the diamond sequence and declarer happily counted 10 "sure" tricks. Just in case, declarer covered the queen with dummy's king. East produced the ace, declarer ruffed and led a trump to the king. When West discarded a club on this trick, declarer's 10 tricks had shrivelled to nine.

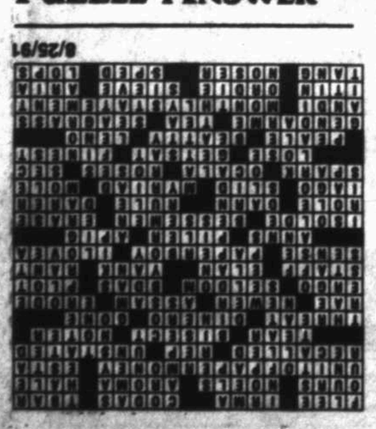

Declarer drew another trump, then tried the club finesse. That lost, so the net result was a one-trick shortfall.

A most unlucky hand, but good players make their own luck. There was one additional chance that declarer had failed to test—the possibility of setting up a heart trick for a club discard. When West does not follow to the first trump, declarer should immediately go after hearts by playing ace, king and another heart. If nothing favorable happens, declarer can still fall back on the club finesse.

However, if the hand is distributed as above, a long heart is set up in dummy while there is still a high trump to serve as an entry. Declarer eventually will win a side-suit trick, cross to the table's trump and discard a club loser on the 13th heart while East ruffs with a natural trump winner.

Group not in 'Days of Future Passed'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Moody Blues, who first made their mark in the late '60s and early '70s, have released an album and are out touring — which shows the British band is not locked in days of future past.

"Every few weeks, people are popping up with incredible schemes we should do," said vocalist-guitarist Justin Hayward. "A prince wants us for his daughter's birthday. We've got to go to Tibet and play on top a mountain. People fantasize."

Many of the wild ideas never get to them because their management company acts "like a huge coffee filter in the sky," said bassist John Lodge.

"Before we became concerned with managers and agents, we would take everything that came our way," Hayward said, recalling what happened when they met Grace Slick and Jefferson Airplane during their first U.S. trip in 1968.

"She said: 'We've got this truck where you can let the side down and you can put your equipment on it and you can turn up in a field and play. We announce at a concert in three days time we're going to turn up in a park and play. Why don't you come with us and do it?'" recounted Hayward.

Lodge remembered: "We were with them at Elysian Park in Los Angeles, with 20,000 people. I've never been there since."

It's 23 years later, and the Moody Blues are back in the United States, touring around the nation till Sept. 10. The group's newest album is "Keys of the Kingdom" on Polydor.

"Next year, Granada TV wants to do a special of one big concert with us and the Halle Orchestra in Manchester," Hayward said. "It would be orchestral versions of Moody Blues songs with new material and spoken word. A lot of people think we've done that, but we never have."

Lodge calls it "a 1990s 'Days of Future Passed.'"

He's referring, of course, to the 1967 album made with the London Festival Orchestra because Decca Records wanted to showcase a new sound system. It was the Moodies' third album, the first after Hayward and Lodge joined.

A single from that album, "Nights in White Satin," shot the group to fame.

"We just received another cover of it, in Chinese," Hayward said. "Every country has its own mega, megastar. The publisher says this is the man for China; it's going to sell 500,000 copies. It was very emotional, very good, actually."

The song was a hit for the Moodies again in 1972 but Hayward said a lot of people coming to Moody Blues concerts are too young to go back to that or to the 1973 hit, "I'm Just a Singer in a Rock and Roll Band."

"A lot of people start with 'Your Wildest Dreams' in 1986," Hayward said.

For a new video, "Legend of a Band," Hayward went by helicopter to the Isle of Wight where the Moody Blues played in 1969. In fact, they played in all three big rock festivals there.

"It's an island off the south coast of England," Hayward said. "You can only get there by small ferry. One concert was Bob Dylan, Leonard Cohen topping the bill, Joan Baez, Jimi Hendrix. ...

"There was much more camaraderie then. All the musicians knew each other. We played with each other, I think. All the groups were underground or progressive, which meant you didn't get paid very much. They could afford to have lots of incredible people on the bill."

The Moody Blues started with five people. Original member Mike Pinder, a vocalist-keyboardist, left during making of "Octave," in 1978, the album that brought the Moodies together after a six-year breakup. Former Yes keyboardist Patrick Moraz replaced him in 1979.

Moraz, on the last tour in 1988, isn't on this one. "He moved to Los Angeles. He decided he wanted to concentrate on sound tracks," Hayward said.

The lineup now is Hayward, Lodge and two original members — flutist Ray Thomas and drummer Graeme Edge. On stage, they have two keyboardists, Bias Bochell and Chris Neil, and two female backup singers.

Abell-Hanger, Hearst make MCT donations

Midland Community Theatre has received grants from the Abell-Hanger Foundation, ARCO and the Hearst Foundation, according to Linda Bond.

Ms. Bond is director of development and marketing for MCT.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation and ARCO are committed to the theater's REACH OUT! performances. Tickets for the productions are available for people who are disadvantaged or handicapped and a person who transports them to the theater. One performance of each show is designated as REACH OUT!

Abell-Hanger Foundation has given the theater $25,000 for the program and ARCO committed $10,000.

"We are very pleased to be able to expand this highly successful program," Ms. Bond said. "These two major grants allow us to make a difference to many people who love theater but have found it inaccessible in the past. It is gratifying that both a large corporation and a major foundation care so much about people who are often forgotten."

The Hearst Foundation has awarded MCT $15,000 for its operating endowment. According to Bill Pomeroy, campaign co-chairman, the Hearst contribution will be utilized to ensure a strong future for MCT.

"We are grateful that the Hearst Foundation recognizes the need to build for the future," Pomeroy said. "Our goal for the operating endowment is $500,000. The endowment will be a hedge against natural fluctuations in the operating budget. Like any endowment, a portion of the interest can be utilized annually, but the corpus will never be touched. We appreciate Hearst's commitment to keeping the theater strong through the years."

Posters on display

Staff Report

An exhibition of 50 original lithographs called "Posters of Paris: 1880-1900" is on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through Sept. 8.

Also, the exhibition, "Five Centuries of Italian Paintings: 1300-1800," scheduled to close today, has been held over through Sept. 1.

The "Posters of Paris: 1880-1890" exhibition, sponsored in part by Mary and Henri de Compiegne Jr. of Midland, is from the Terry and Louis L. Silver Collection and features posters by 15 artists including Toulouse-Lautrec, Cheret, Bonnard, Mucha and Steinlen.

Poster art was created by some of the most talented artists of France during the last 20 years of the 20th century, called in France La Belle Epoque — The Beautiful Age.

Poster art, one of the first art forms to grow outside the formal academics of the time, was the first commercial art and the first art to be mass produced, said a release from the museum. Cafe society, stage performers, theaters, department stores and products such as lamp oil, hats, cigarette papers, liquor and bicycles were advertised by posters. These are the forerunners of billboards and modern advertising.

In addition, the exhibition "Five Centuries of Italian Paintings: 1300-1800" will remain at the museum through Sept. 1.

"Fortunately for the museum and its visitors, a scheduling change has meant this outstanding exhibition can be seen by more people in the Permian Basin," said Gary Hood, curator of art at the museum.

The exhibition, from the collection of the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation of Houston, displays 48 paintings by "old master" Italian artists.

Following the close of "Italian Paintings," works by Karl Bodmer and Edward Curtis from the museum's collections will be displayed in the turner Mansion galleries from Sept. 7 through Oct. 6. Sept. 7 marks the public opening of Septemberfest at the museum.

Library shelves unpublished works

By Michael Tighe

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Todd Lockwood walked out of a movie theater two years ago and knew: If he built it, they would write.

Now, almost 200 volumes line the shelves of what may be America's only library of unpublished writing. The Brautigan Library — named for counterculture author Richard Brautigan — is a place where amateur authors find an audience for their works.

"It's a diamond in a world of coal," Lockwood said. "If you waste too much time trying to find the practical in this, you'll miss the real inner beauty."

Set in a former used-book store behind a massage therapy institute, it's a "foster home" for books written as outlets, not as commodities, Lockwood said. Those books include an autobiography about "a nobody," and a novel about a talking dog.

"We're appealing more to the non-writer writer," Lockwood said. "This is very naked stuff. It hasn't been filtered and polished."

There's only one rule for inclusion on the shelves: The work must not have been commercially published.

"The Brautigan Library is not about publishing," Lockwood said. "It's about telling your story."

The Brautigan Library was spawned from Brautigan's novel "The Abortion: An Historical Romance 1966." The book describes a library in San Francisco where unpublished authors can send their volumes.

"This library came into being because of an overwhelming need and desire for such a place," Brautigan wrote. "There just simply had to be a library like this."

Lockwood, an avid Brautigan fan, agreed with that when he first read the novel two decades ago. The notion of starting the library stuck with him since.

"I kept saying, 'When is somebody going to do this?' " Lockwood said. "Then it turned into, 'When am I going to do this?' "

The 40-year-old Lockwood said he was "clubbed over the head" by seeing the 1989 movie "Field of Dreams" in which the Kevin Costner character is told, "If you build it, he will come."

(That meant Costner should build a field for Shoeless Joe Jackson, who was banned from baseball after the 1919 Black Sox scandal, and for his father.)

"For me, the movie was about building the Brautigan Library," Lockwood said.

The movie was based on W.P. Kinsella's book "Shoeless Joe." Kinsella himself is a Brautigan fan, having dedicated a book to him.

Lockwood took a break from his recording studio business to work on starting the library. Kinsella welcomed Lockwood's invitation to be a library adviser.

"It's a wonderful, zany idea. That's why I was fascinated by it," Kinsella said.

He also said Brautigan, who had a drinking problem and committed suicide in 1984, would have enjoyed the library.

"He had such a sad life it's nice to see something positive come from that," Kinsella said.

But others were not so enthused. "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau's rejection letter told Lockwood, "Don't quit your day job." Kurt Vonnegut's agent "burst out laughing," Lockwood said.

He persisted and the library eventually opened April 21, 1990. Brautigan's daughter, who said her father "would have loved this place," put the first book on the shelves.

The first work catalogued at the Brautigan Library was a collection of letters to newspaper editors by a Burlington man.

Since then, the shelves have become home to such works as a comic book spoof of Geraldo Rivera "in search of missing socks;" a man's recollection of his 1936 stint in Wyoming as a cowboy; and a novel about a womanizing newsman caught up in deadly games of love.

Lockwood said a new book arrives every three days. One author from Massachusetts has submitted about 20 works.

"A lot of what is in here wasn't even intended to be commercially published," Lockwood said. "It's being written just to 'tell.' "

The library operation itself is very Brautigan. No two reading chairs can match. Volunteer librarians are urged to spend their time reading. The walls contain such mementos as an envelope from East Meadow, N.Y., addressed to "Library For People With Tales To Tell, Burlington, Vermont."

The works are classified using the Mayonnaise System, named for a chapter in Brautigan's "Trout Fishing In America." The system uses categories such as street life, war and peace, meaning of life, and "all the rest."

The books are kept standing on the shelves by mayonnaise jars. The mayonnaise in the jars is used for the annual Brautigan Potato Salad Jamboree. The library's seal is a shiny mayonnaise jar.

The books are catalogued by computer,, bound in hardcover and shelved. The library's operation is financed by a $50 submission fee for authors and membership fees for supporters.

Since its opening, the Brautigan Library has received a blitz of publicity around the world.

The current space can handle about 5,000 volumes. Lockwood hopes to someday expand the library.

If the collection becomes too big for the space, several storage plans are in the works. One involves putting the books in caves; another would put them in 13-story high, abandoned nuclear missile silos in Vermont and Plattsburgh, N.Y.

Michener evident in main character

■ A Review

By Mario Szichman
Associated Press

After more than four decades of writing, James A. Michener has decided to take a look at the craft he knows best.

Using as his main characters a novelist, an editor, a critic and a reader, he attempts to give his loyal followers an inside look at the tricks of the trade. The result is an uneven novel. It is marred in part by the figures of a critic, Karl Streibert, and a two-dimensional reader, Jane Garland, but is enhanced by two of the characters — the writer, Lukas Yoder, and, to a greater degree, the shrewd and ruthless editor, Yvonne Marmelle — if the reader overlooks the startling change of her last name at the end of a very successful career.

Set in the bucolic Pennsylvania Dutch country and in New York, "The Novel" tells the story of Yoder's struggle to achieve a a best seller.

It is curious that the parts of the novel in which Yoder and Marmelle explain their work, and Marmelle her affair with a would-be writer, seem more interesting than the investigation of a homicide that appears toward the book's end.

When Yoder discloses how he handles a manuscript, it is real fun, the same fun a reader can feel when, for instance, Robinson Crusoe reveals his technique for making bread.

It is not surprising that several of Michener's biographical features are evident in Yoder. Michener seems to know very well his merits and shortcomings, as when he compares his work with that of a very credible and obnoxious character, Benno Rattner. Rattner is an aspiring writer who is unable to transform his oral brilliance into written words and complete a novel.

Yoder-Michener evidently knows how to complete a novel. Maybe this one is not perfect, but at least it's the work of an honest craftsman.

Wynette celebrates 25 years as singer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It sounds like show business hype. But it's all true.

Tammy Wynette has been poor, rich, bankrupt, kidnapped. She has been dependent on drugs and married five times. She's been a waitress, a doctor's receptionist, a barmaid and a factory worker.

She has picked cotton and sung six times at the White House.

And Burt Reynolds nearly drowned in her bathtub.

The 49-year-old country singer has lived through romance, illness and controversy.

In nearly 25 years, she's enjoyed enough celebrity to earn the title "the first lady of country music." And in June, country fans voted her a living legend.

Even that award was not without a trace of melancholy for her. George Richey, her husband, was in the hospital at the time for open-heart surgery. He came through fine, but a month later her mother died.

The whole scenario seemed typical of her up-and-down life that has captivated country music fans and made her one of the most intriguing personalities in show business.

"I've been blessed tremendously," Wynette said.

She sat on President Reagan's lap as the song wound down and planted a kiss on his cheek. Subsequent news stories reported Nancy Reagan was upset.

"I kind of liked it and he seemed comfortable with it," Wynette recalled. "If it wasn't proper protocol, I think someone would have jerked me off the seat. I worked for him four times after that, so I don't think there was any problem."

Then there was the incident with Reynolds, which occurred at her Florida home in 1976 when the two were dating. She found him unconscious in her filled bathtub and pulled him out just before he drowned. He was later diagnosed as having low blood sugar.

"It was very frightening," she said. "I was scared to death."

The two have remained good friends and he directed her 1990 music video, "Let's Call It a Day (Today)."

One of the mysteries of her life remains her 1978 abduction. She was kidnapped while returning to her car at a Nashville shopping center and driven 80 miles by her armed abductor. He beat her up, fled and was never caught.

She prefers to dwell on more positive memories: the millions of miles she has traveled, sales of 30 million records, three honors as the Country Music Association's female vocalist of the year, performances for the last four presidents.

She's been hospitalized for various ailments dozens of times, and has admitted to being dependent on painkillers.

She's no longer a headliner, giving way to newer singers like Randy Travis. Some quick math shows that Travis was 7 when she broke into the music business.

"I've always laughed and told him I'm old enough to be his momma," Wynette said.

Regardless of the billing, she's still much in demand. A six-week tour of Europe is set for October. Seven weeks are scheduled in Australia next spring. And Neil Diamond called recently, inquiring about a possible duet.

It's a heady atmosphere for someone born into poverty on a Mississippi cotton farm. As recently as the mid-1960s, she had no indoor plumbing, no running water and no stove.

She's been meeting over the summer with Sony executives to make plans for an album, her 53rd, marking her 25th anniversary as a recording artist.

"We want it to be special. I'm proud to have been in the business that long."

Scouts learn, play at Philmont

By Richard Benke

CIMARRON, N.M. (AP) — On these rugged rangelands west of Cimarron, the Utes, Apaches, Comanches and Kiowas battled each other and the white man. Here ranchers fought the homesteaders in a bloody range war.

Here the buffalo roamed.

But in the past half-century this wilderness has been the playground and testing ground for a half-million youths who come by the thousands each summer for two weeks of rigorous outdoor adventures at the world's largest Boy Scout camp, the 214-square-mile Philmont Scout Ranch. Some 18,000 are expected this summer.

"Probably thousands of parents have said, 'They went out there a boy and came back a man,' " says C.M. "Chuck" Buenger, general manager of the ranch, which is celebrting its 50th anniversary this year.

For more than 20 years, Philmont also has extended its Scouting opportunities to girls. Based on past years, the ranch anticipates about 360 girls this year.

This year also marks the 150th anniversary of the Maxwell Land Grant, a vast expanse of New Mexico granted by Mexico to Carlos Beaubien and Guadalupe Miranda in 1841. Lucien B. Maxwell, Beaubien's son-in-law, acquired Miranda's share in 1864.

Observing the anniversary, the Scouts are restoring Rayada Ranch, the first settlement on Maxwell land. It's now Philmont land.

The Philmont ranch was part of a larger piece of Maxwell land purchased by oil man Waite Phillips in 1922. Phillips gave a small part of it to the Boy Scouts of America in 1938. When he saw how well they did with it, he donated more than 127,000 additional acres and its mansion, the Villa Philmonte, 50 years ago this December.

"It's the largest camp for Scouts in the world," Buenger says.

On its rolling ranges and pastures are about 550 cattle, 250 horses, 100 buffalo, 100 pack burros and 45 antelope, Buenger says. Seasonally, there are also hundreds of mule deer and scores of bear.

The buffalo and the range they call home were used in the television epic "Lonesome Dove," Buenger said during a recent four-wheel-drive tour of the ranch.

The Scouts arrive 300 a day for 60 days every summer. After orientation, Day 1, each picks one of 24 different 10-day itineraries. Activities, in varying combinations, include mountain climbing to 12,441 feet, fishing, hiking, horseback riding, gold panning, arrowhead making, black-powder rifle shooting, blacksmithing, sweat lodges, corn grinding, burro racing, environmental awareness instruction, Western lore, archaeology and camping at the more than 80 backcountry camps.

The 12-day visit culminates with a day of closing ceremonies at which those who have completed the rigorous hiking program receive the Philmont Arrowhead award, a badge of honor among Scouts.

Whatever they do, they learn to do it together.

"We get a lot of comments that they find out about working together, that everybody's got some strengths and some weaknesses and that, working together, we get it all done," Buenger says.

He says Scouts acknowledge learning "about the vastness and greatness of the universe, the sense that there is a design, along with a heightened sense of self-esteem and confidence."

Parents say their children come home "more self-assured, knowing who they are, and with more humility, more tolerance for other people," he says.

The camp has been here long enough that many alumni are sending their children. For example, FBI Director William Sessions camped here in 1947 when he was 14. His son, Pete, attended in 1989 and Sessions returned that summer for a surprise visit.

Humans have been here, off and on, at least since 400 A.D. Indian petroglyphs are found in North Ponil Canyon, which was abandoned by 1400.

The Jicarilla Apache arrived in the 1600s, hunting buffalo on horseback. In time, the Jicarilla were pushed north by Kiowas, Comanches and Utes vying for buffalo.

"The Kiowas and the Comanches kept the Jicarilla and the Utes in the mountains," says Stephen Zimmer, director of the Philmont Museum and author of books on Philmont.

Kit Carson was sent to subdue the Kiowas in 1864. Zimmer says Carson failed — but declared victory anyway. This summer the museum features a Kiowa display.

In 1864, with Beaubien's death and the Miranda acquisitions, Maxwell consolidated 1.7 million acres. He sold out to the Maxwell Land Grant and Railroad Co. for $1.35 million in 1870, but it took another 17 years of courtroom wrangling and a range war to complete the deal.

The Colfax County War erupted when settlers tried to homestead Maxwell land they claimed was in the public domain.

Phillips decided it might make good Boy Scout country after his son, Elliott "Chope" Phillips, brought school pals to the ranch for summers of riding and roping, his son says.

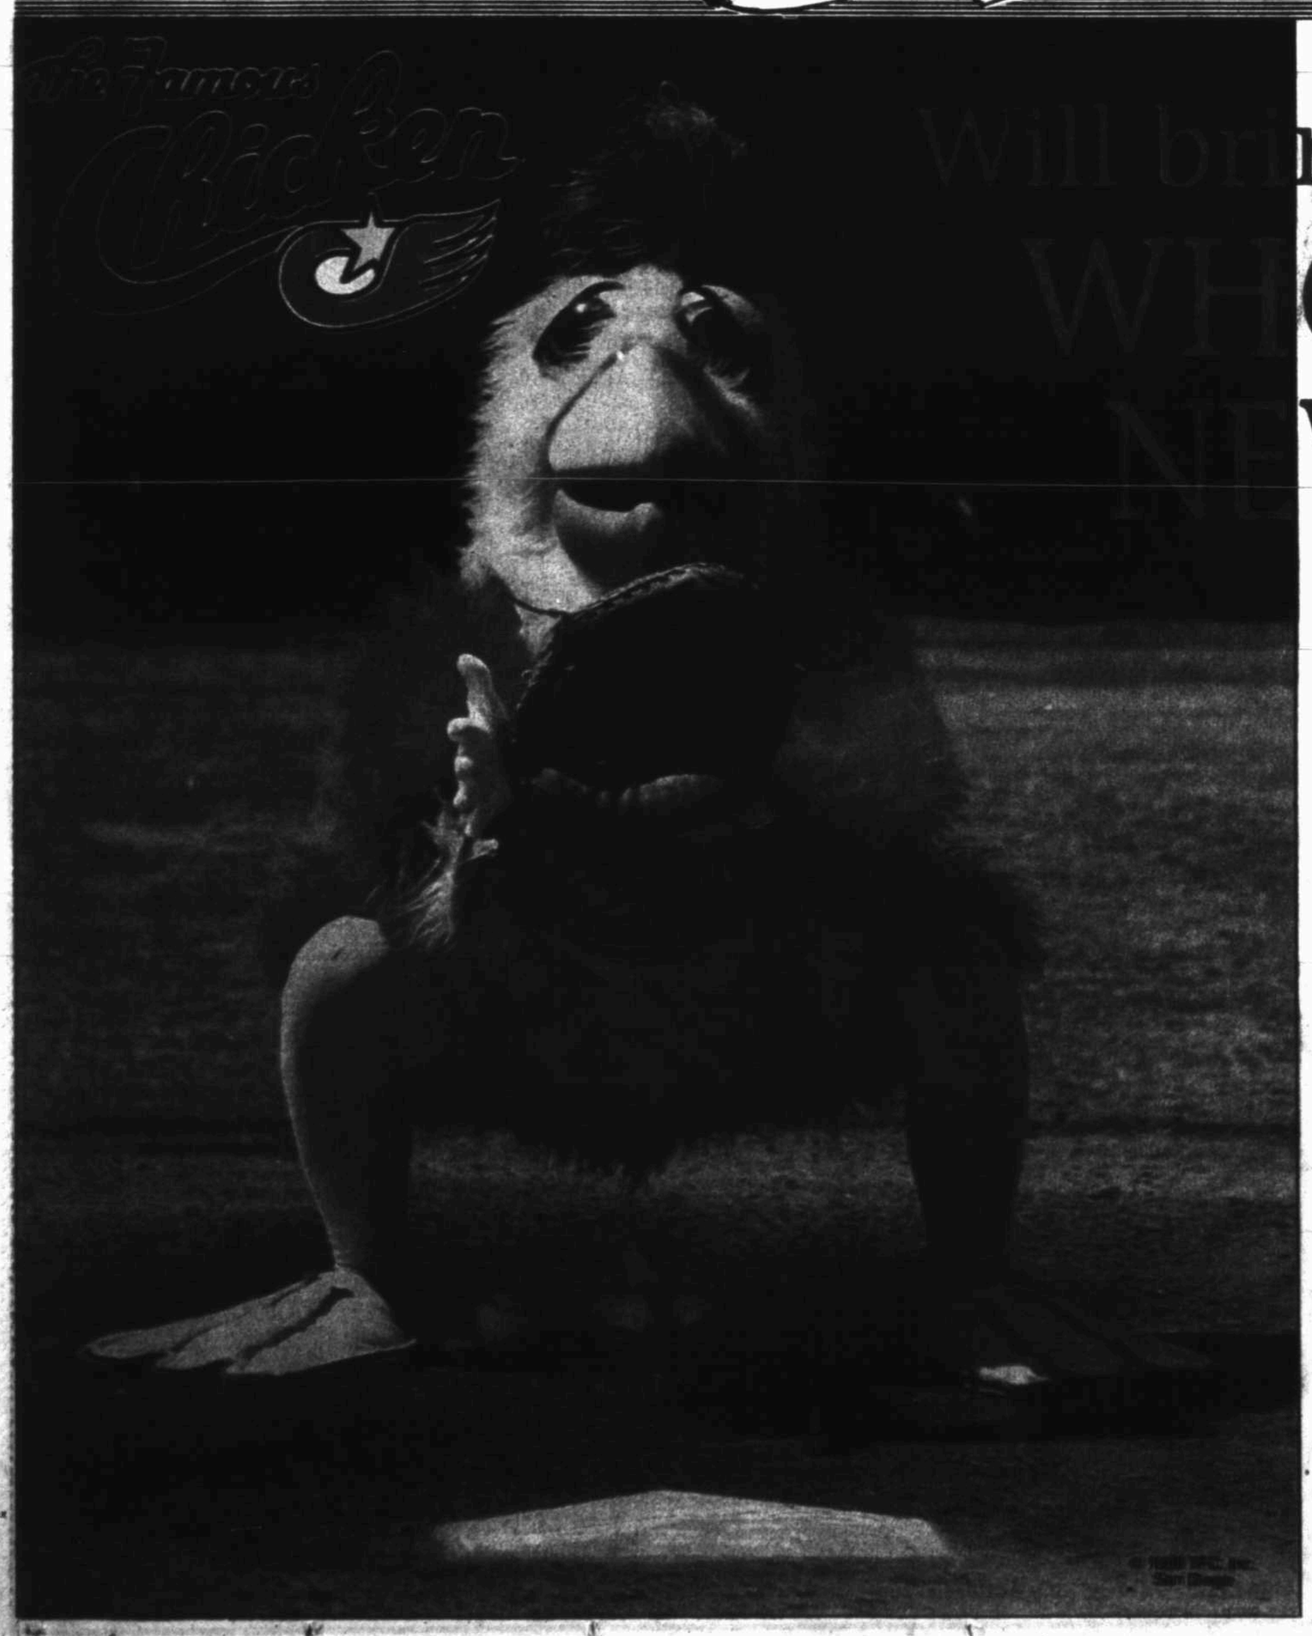

"That ranch was a big part of me," Chope Phillips says. "I got hooked on cowboys when I was 8. I'm a cowboy, and I've been a cowboy all my life."

Waite Phillips traveled the world, but his son says: "I wanted to be out on the ranch. I didn't give a damn about going to Europe."

For teaching parents:

No place like home

Text by Linda Anderson

Education professionals advise that the quality of a child's education depends on the quality of his or her parents' involvement in the education process.

Members of Midland Association of Christian Home Educators (MACHE) have taken that advice to heart — and to home. They have chosen to become totally involved in the education process and teach their children at home, rather than send them outside the home to school.

Terri and Tim Dunn of Midland are the parents of six children, five of whom are school age. They also teach a Sunday school class of about 40 sixth graders at First Baptist Church.

"This is my eighth year of home teaching, because my oldest will be in the seventh grade," Mrs. Dunn said.

The Dunns are not alone. Last year, MACHE had members from 70-75 families, Mrs. Dunn said, which includes about 200 children.

Cheryl Barker, mother of four, is about to start her sixth year of home teaching for her two school-age children. "We sent the oldest one to public school for the second and third grades," but other than those years, her children have always been taught at home, she said.

"My oldest was about 3 when I first heard of home schooling," she said. "It was like music to my ears. I wanted to be with them (her children).

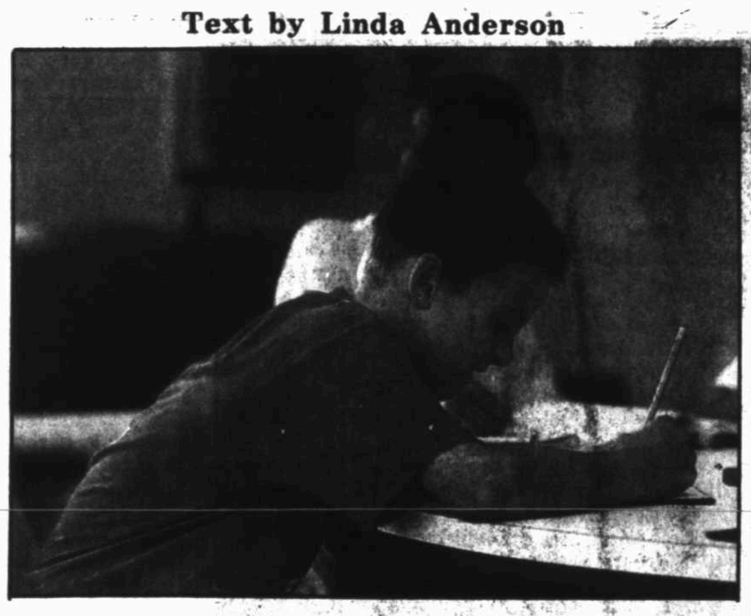

"One advantage to home schooling is that my kids are not worried about what anybody else is thinking or doing," Mrs. Barker said. "They are just excited about learning."

Scott and Amy Ryburn (who have four children), Hope Espinosa (mother of four) and Cindy Tower (mother of five, two of whom are old enough for school) have all have found that home teaching works best for their families.

Mrs. Ryburn has been teaching her children at home since her oldest, who will be in fourth grade this fall, started kindergarten. "I wasn't ready to send my kid outside the door," she said. "I wasn't ready to part with her for 13 years."

Her husband, Scott, also is involved in their children's education. He said teaching the children at home "provided us an opportunity to continue to be very involved in influencing our kids in their early development. Regardless of the form of education, parents should be involved in that process."

Mrs. Espinosa has been teaching her four daughters at home since her oldest, who is now 11, started kindergarten. She first heard of home teaching through a radio program on the benefits of teaching your children at home. The idea interested her. "I got a lot of literature" on home schooling, she said. "The more I read, the more excited I became. I became more and more committed, and more convinced that we are doing what is right for us."

Mrs. Tower, whose youngest child is only a few months old, is still committed to home schooling for her older children even though newborn babies require a tremendous amount of care. This fall will mark the start of her fifth year of teaching at home, she said.

Parents who are home teachers do a lot of learning, too, according to many of the parents in the group.

"I've had to learn everything," Mrs. Barker said. "I was an A-B student in school, and I've had to re-learn everything" in order to home teach her children.

"In a formal classroom, you have a start time and an end time, and you fill in that time," Dunn said. "If a group of students does not understand something, the rest have to sit and wait for that group to catch up.

"In the system I went to, you memorized what was served," he said. "In this system (home school) you never try what you don't understand."

The parents who teach their children at home make sure the children understand something before going on to something else. "In home school, you can spend five minutes on something, or several days," Mrs. Barker said. "You don't want to go on until you get it down."

"You instill in kids a desire to learn, rather than just storing information," Ryburn said.

"It makes them think, to be problem solvers," agreed Mrs. Barker.

"That's what real life is about," Mrs. Dunn said.

None of these parents have college degrees in teaching, but they said that had never caused them problems. "We've been to seminars and read a lot of books on our own," Mrs. Barker said. "We have found some really good curriculum" that is ideal for home teaching. "It's step-by-step. Everything is explained. It has a ton of really fun games and so many things you can do to make math fun."

And even though most of the home teachers are mothers, the fathers get involved too. Some of the mothers jokingly referred to their husbands as "guest lecturers." Mrs. Barker said her husband often is an alternate teacher for her children, and Mrs. Dunn said her husband frequently takes over in the classroom. "This year, he's going to teach science," she said.

"I've learned a lot myself" through teaching the children at home, Dunn said. "Real science is just fascinating. ... You do something and then explain the principle (involved)."

Prenuptial parties given for couple

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

The wedding of Hallye Page and Kraig Knight Saturday evening in the First Baptist Church was preceded by several parties.

McKnight-Harrison

The festivities began in May with a mother-daughter tea in the home of Louise (Mrs. Clint) Kuzmich. The other hostesses were Lynda (Mrs. Carty) Beal, Janice (Mrs. Bobby) Henry, Nadine (Mrs. Tom) Craddick, Margaret (Mrs. Charlie) Semple, Sally (Mrs. Steve) Meltzer, Sue (Mrs. Ed) Harris and Sarilyn (Mrs. Bill) Black.

A display shower was held in the home of Cherry (Mrs. Bob) Crawford. Other hostesses included Betty (Mrs. Bill) Sewell, Roxie (Mrs. Bill) Judd, Gloria (Mrs. Willie) DuBose, Yvaughn (Mrs. Leon) Taylor, Gwyn (Mrs. Don) Sparks, Lu (Mrs. Gerry) Calhoun, Shari Laidley and Dinah (Mrs. Tex) Paris.

Later that evening, a Christmas ornament shower and Mexican dinner was hosted by the Howbert clan and held in the home of Joan and Mark Pace. The other family members hosting the party were Paula and Chuck Howert, Jill and Jerry Hancock and Doris and Van Howbert. Also enjoying the fun of hosting were Lauren and Sarah Pace and Heather Howbert.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted Friday evening by the groom's parents, Susie and Bill Knight of Crockett, at Venezia Restaurant.

A bridesmaids brunch at the Midland Hilton on the wedding day was given by Hallye's grandmother, Flo Clary; her aunt, Jane Lewellen, and her maid of honor and cousin, Paige Lewellen, all of Plainview.

A luncheon for the wedding party and out-of-town guests was hosted Saturday by Kay and Paul Thorpe, Sallie and Don Kidwell, Georgia and Carroll Thomas, Carol Ann and Lynn Hunt, Judy and Deon Christensen, Sally and Bill Stella and Donna and Donnie Hewett in the First Baptist Church Activities Building.

That afternoon, a manicure party was hosted at Backstage by Polly (Mrs. Ferrell) Davis, Kay (Mrs. Ralph) Arrell, Donna (Mrs. Ted) Fergeson, Brenda (Mrs. Bryant) Williams, Sharla (Mrs. Bart) Hotchkiss, Donna (Mrs. Bob) Landreth and Jan (Mrs. Andy) Reed.

A light supper was provided at the church prior to the ceremony for the wedding party by Barbara (Mrs. Jack) Young, Kay (Mrs. Bob) Bivens and June (Mrs. Paul) Harris.

Marilyn and Mike Pollard are entertaining with a brunch in their home today for the out-of-town guests and families of Kraig and Hallye.

Out-of-town parties included a lingerie shower in Waco, with Midlander Sharla Houck among the hostesses of college friends and bridesmaids; a Fourth of July dinner honoring the couple in the groom's hometown of Crockett and hosted by longtime friends of his parents, and a bridal tea in Dallas.

FIVE GENERATIONS of the Ochoa family (descendants of the late Arturo Ochoa and Policarpia Parras) will gather in Midland this coming weekend for a reunion at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Families will be arriving from California, New Mexico, Mexico City and El Paso for the event, which will begin with a Mass at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Other events will include a talent show with each family branch participating, a picnic, a dance, and most importantly, much fun and fellowship and the opportunity to get acquainted with the newest family members.

PRE-NUPTIAL FESTIVITIES for Stacy Powell and Ken Cooper began in March with an announcement party hosted by Stacy's parents, Linda and Frank Powell, at their home.

The couple were united in marriage Staruday evening in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, with a reception afterwards at Midland Country Club.

Other social gatherings for the couple included a cocktail party hosted by Pat and Lloyd Innerarity and Celeste and Murray Fasken in the Innerarity home and a kitchen shower in Midland Country Club's Garden Room given by Mary Alice Knox, Sudy (Mrs. H.G.) Bedford, Iona (Mrs. Vic) Vasicek and Diana (Mrs. Roy) Serpa.

In addition, there was a "Honey-Do" party at the home of Carly and Art Custer. Also hosting were Karen and Ron King, Polly and Ferrell Davis, Shannon and Dick Oldham, Donna and Ted Fergeson, Susie and Gary Burnett, Kathy Long and Norma Tuttle.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted Friday evening by the groom's parents, Barbara and Don Cooper of Plano, at the Plaza Club.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was held poolside Saturday at the Powell home. Today, Linda and Frank are hosting a brunch at their home for relatives and other out-of-town guests.

SCHOOL: Parents teach children at home

(From 1G)

Many people think that home schooling is somehow illegal, but it's not, the parents said. "Basically it's the same relationship as private school has with public school," Dunn said. As long as certain required classes are taught, a home school is considered a private school, the parents added.

Like any other school, a home school is conducted around a certain routine. However, unlike most other schools, the daily routine can be much more flexible. Parents who teach their children at home can use "whatever works for our family," Mrs. Espinosa said.

And while for the most part a home school year follows the public school year, some families prefer a slightly different schedule. "Several (families) like to start earlier and take December off, or stop in April," Mrs. Ryburn said. Other families might take every fourth week off, the parents added.

Class scheduling can be more flexible too. Mrs. Dunn said her daily classroom routine is "basically a tutorial system." After getting up in the morning, having breakfast and doing chores, "the kids are supposed to start (school) by 9 a.m., and have their math work done by 9:30 a.m." Then they study such courses as reading, language, spelling, history and science, and the Bible. "The kids try to be finished by 1 p.m.," she said. "Then they can do enjoyable reading" or science projects or learn cooking skills and other activities.

THE CHILDREN'S age difference doesn't pose a major problem either, she said. "I try to combine the age groups together. When I need to get to something a little more advanced, the younger ones can leave. The older ones can do their reading to the younger ones."

Children 'must have (1) love and physical expression of affection, and (2) respect for authority and control. If a child doesn't have respect for authority, I don't care where they are, they aren't going to learn anything.'

— Tim Dunn
parent of home-taught children

And because her classroom only contains five or six children, "the book work does not take as much time," Mrs. Dunn added. "It doesn't take nearly as much time" as the same amount of book work in a classroom of 20 or 30 children.

MACHE provides opportunities for home schooled children to have extracurricular activities too, the parents said, including science club, literary club, choir, sports, special parties during major holidays, newsletter, Book-It sponsored by Pizza Hut and even class pictures. The children also are taken on field trips to such places as the Petroleum Museum, the ostrich farm in Odessa, Mabee Ranch cattle round-up and branding, Cerebral Palsy Center, Sibley Learning Center, the post office, Haley Library, the Presidential Museum and the fire department. "Every year there are a few more opportunities for the kids," Mrs. Barker said.

Some parents, teach their children at home until the children are old enough for college; others choose to mix home school and public or private school, the parents said.

WHEN A CHILD is ready to graduate from home school, he or she takes the GED (General Equivalency Diploma) test, they said. If the student wants to attend college, he or she — like any other college-bound student — takes a college-entrance exam such as the SAT.

"I think I'm the one (in MACHE) who's taught at home the longest now," Mrs. Dunn said. "We do have older kids in our group, but they must have been in public school somewhere along the way."

"On balance, people tend to funnel their kids into the school system at some point," her husband added. The Dunns said their oldest child, who will be in seventh grade this year, was allowed to choose whether or not he wanted to attend school outside his home this year. He chose to continue his home schooling.

Home schooling requires a major commitment on the part of the parents — one of whom must stay home to teach the children. "One reason for continuing to do this is to develop leadership in our kids," Dunn said. "By 'leadership,' I mean doing what is right regardless of what everyone else is doing."

He said after his own experience with the school system — memorization followed by testing followed by forgetting what was memorized — "the thing that appealed to me was a chance not to go through that wasted time" with his children's education. "I had to reach a crisis in college before I had to learn to think."

Dunn said he believes two things are essential before any education can take place: Children "must have (1) love and physical expression of affection, and (2) respect for authority and control. If a child doesn't have respect for authority, I don't care where they are, they aren't going to learn anything."

BECAUSE THEIR children's education is of primary importance to these parents, none of them took the decision to establish home schools lightly. "You have to do a lot of research," Dunn said.

Parents who might be interested in starting their own home schools are encouraged to research the process thoroughly. Some sources for information recommended by the home school parents follow:

- H.O.P.E. For Texas, P.O. Box 43887, Austin, Texas 78745-0018 (512) 280-HOPE
- "How to Home School: A Practical Seminar" by Gayle Graham, 10404 Huntsmoor Drive, Richmond, Va. 23233
- "The Christian Home School," by Gregg Harris
- "School Can Wait," by Raymond S. and Dorothy N. Moore et al
- "Home Grown Kids," by Raymond S. and Dorothy N. Moore
- "Home Style Teaching," by Raymond S. and Dorothy N. Moore

The parents said the above-listed books should be available through area Christian bookstores and general bookstores.

Riding horses helpful to disabled children

JAMESTOWN, N.D. (AP) — Jamie Rybasky is sitting tall in the saddle at the Anne Carlsen School, where equestrian training is physical therapy for disabled youngsters.

Jamie, a 14-year-old cerebral palsy patient from Argyle, Minn., can hardly contain his excitement. While he waits his turn at the stables, he taps out "cowboy" on the keyboard he uses to communicate and, "I want ride horse, please."

Finally, he is wheeled up a ramp, strapped into a riding helmet and lifted astride Jethro, a 9-year-old Arabian show horse.

Occupational therapist Sue Erickson devises activities to meet goals prescribed by Jamie's doctor. They might work on improving his reach or increasing his coordination.

Hippotherapy is centuries old, though fairly new to this country.

In Ancient Greece, riding was used to help injured soldiers regain their strength. It enjoyed a revival in Europe during the 1950s, after Danish horsewoman Liz Hartel learned to ride as a polio victim and went on to win an Olympic silver medal.

The North American Riding for the Handicapped Association in Broomfield, Colo., estimates some 25,000 therapy patients are enrolled in 405 riding programs in the United States and Canada.

"To a rider, the rhythmic gait of a horse duplicates the walking motion of an able-bodied human," NARHA program coordinator Yvette Arceneaux said. "Like walking, the therapeutic benefits of riding are limitless."

At Anne Carlsen, riders have cerebral palsy, autism, speech disorders and other problems. It has also been successful therapy for stroke patients at MedCenter One hospital in Bismarck.

Arceneaux said any breed of horse can be used.

"They don't have to be old and slow with no pep," she said. "But they must be trained to be calm and patient."

Jamie smiles broadly as a therapist and two spotters lead him around an indoor arena, and he manages a loving stroke to the horse's mane. His leg muscles are so contracted it takes a while before his feet can reach the stirrups, but his rapport with the animal is immediate.

Today, Jamie rides around the paddock until he spots a small plastic cow Erickson has placed on the fence. This is a game of concentration. As he rides, Jamie has to remember what he's looking for and where. Once he finds it, he signals and returns triumphantly to the center of the arena.

"It's a lot like athletic training," Erickson said. "You start out with calisthenics, go on to jogging. Next it gets more technical, and you put the game together."

MedCenter physical therapist Leon Keller said he was surprised to find riding eased his chronic back problems and so impressed that he decided to try it on his patients. "The movement of a horse helps patients to get a better sense of their bodies," Keller said.

The Cheff Center in Augusta, Mich., was the nation's first riding therapy program in 1970, and with 250 patients it is still the largest.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Leaf margin burn is problem

By Deborah A. Benge

Brown leaves. Almost everywhere you look, you can see brown leaves. What's the matter with the crape myrtle, the maple, the walnut, and roses? Leaf margin burn is a problem often seen in the Permian Basin on many ornamental plants.

Benge

Leaf margin burn is what happens to many drought and salt sensitive plants. Plants that are sensitive to these conditions show it by having a leaf margin that is crispy brown. The most sensitive plants begin to show dry, brown tissue at the leaf tip followed by the leaf margin in about June of each year. As the summer progresses the browning progresses taking in more and more leaf area. As it advances it can continue into the intervienal areas of the leaf.

Leaf margin burn can be due to one factor — salt accumulation. But in many cases this is compounded by drought, extreme heat, low humidity, high winds and sensitive plants.

There are many plants that suffer from a salt sensitivity. Just to list a few: roses, sycamores, maples, walnuts, crape myrtles, pecans and even American elms.

One of the basic needs of a plant is water. Water is needed in the process of making food (photosynthesis) and it is needed in the cooling process of the plant (transpirational flow). As a plant takes up water through the root system, it also takes up dissolved salt ions in the water. Salts come from the water we irrigate with, from our soils and they can come from the fertilizers we use. But the salt is taken up along with the uptake of water.

When it is hot, dry and windy a plant can lose water through its leaf surfaces very rapidly and this water needs to be replaced just as rapidly or wilt, damage and death can occur. As the water is taken into the plant to replace water lost to the atmosphere, the dissolved salts are carried up into the leaves along with the water and are deposited along the leaf margin — thus the leaf margin burn shows up in some plants.

Other factors can complicate this, like the size of the leaf. The larger the leaf the more surface area exposed to the elements for there to be water lost through. If you will notice, many drought tolerant plants will have very small leaves that reduce the amount of surface area in which to lose water through, for example the mesquite. Another example of native plant adaptation is the Texas Sage. It has a leaf that is covered in a soft fuzz, this slows the loss of water from the leaf because water vapor gets trapped in the hairs and slows the water movement out of the leaf. So sycamore and English walnuts have these huge leaf surfaces hanging out in the hot, dry, windy air and you can see how it would be subject to drying out.

Some leaf margin burn can be reduced by having good watering practices. First of all you need to meet the water needs of the plant, by giving it enough and not too much. And secondly you need to use large volumes of water to leach salts that accumulate in the soil surface down past the root system.

Some gardeners tend to water frequently and lightly, only compounding the salt accumulation problem. Salt moves on the wetting front of the water as it moves through the soil. If you water frequently and lightly, salt is never moved down deep in the soil profile, it is deposited in the upper inches of soil — where the pinat roots are.

By watering in large quantities and infrequently, you can leach salt out of the root zone. Also this type of watering will encourage plants to develop extensive root systems and become hardier plants.

Recent generous rains have done a wonderful job of leaching harmful salts from our soils. At this late date you will not see a reversal of the damage, but next spring things should get off to a good start with a less salt laden soil.

Remember, these principles also apply to your containerized plants. Be sure to leach them periodically with lots of good quality water. Catching rain water for this purpose and for the regular watering of your containerized plants is a good move.

Containers bring more space to dorms rooms

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

College students arriving on campus are put to the test even before they crack a book — they have to figure out how to cram into their dorm room all the stuff they brought from home.

Not only do many rent a small fridge, they bring TV sets, computers, stereos, answering machines, telephones, corn poppers and coffee makers.

"So they need lots of storage space," says Lee Slaton, advertising director of The Container Store, a Dallas-based retail chain and mail order house.

Even without the paraphernalia considered essential for an education these days, it would be a challenge to make the typical college room liveable, Slaton says.

She should know. She surveyed dormitory living at 24 schools in Texas and Georgia, gathering material for a free guide to room arrangement. Few of the schools she surveyed have additional storage facilities. So everything — including a roommate — must fit into a room rarely larger than 12 feet square.

The typical dorm room comes with two single beds, two desks and chairs and two small chests of drawers. There's usually one bare window and one "skinny" closet. Ideally, but not always, the beds can be stacked into bunks, freeing space along one wall.

"Most schools prohibit fasteners that make holes in the walls or ceilings and adhesives that might take the paint off the walls," Slaton says. "And they allow only tension or spring curtain rods."

To help students cope, there is a variety of storage aids — from hooks that fit over a closet door to clothes rod extenders that double hanger space. Furniture ranges from inexpensive plastic cubes to wood structures that create floor space by raising the bed to loft status.

The Container Store has set up decorator dorm rooms using these products at schools such as Georgia Tech and Southern Methodist University. Most cities have storage specialty shops or discount stores where similar products can be bought.

Though furnishings can get pretty complex, the most essential storage items remain the laundry bag and a hook to hang it on, Slaton says. If there's a communal bath down the hall, a towel bar and a tote with drainage holes — plastic sand pails used to suffice — also are musts.

To make better use of dorm room space, Slaton suggests rearranging the furniture, if allowed, and making the beds into bunks.

Most students, however, use the furniture as is and add a few accessories and storage cubes, Slaton says.

Among tips in the store's booklet:

- Make spare keys for trunk, room and car. Mark items with your name or initials. An etching gun available at police stations and some libraries can be used to identify appliances, VCRs and computers.
- Bring a small tool kit, sewing kit and first-aid kit, as well as extra hooks and grids which can be used to turn walls and doors into useful storage space.

For a free copy of the 11-page "Guide for College Bound Students," call The Container Store at 1-800-733-3532 between 8 a.m to 6 p.m., Central time.

Toys designed to promote ecology

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Letha Dawson wants to teach people how to recycle. Michael Stusser wants the public to learn the importance of the rain forest.

The two are hoping to get their ideas across on board games. "What better way can people learn, but by playing a game," said Stusser, co-inventor of Earthalert Board Game.

As it has in almost every aspect of society, the green movement has hit the toy industry. Stores now carry such environmentally conscious toys as recyclable wooden trucks, toy figures that promote a clean planet and a chemistry lab to test the environment.

"We saw quite a few of them at the toy fair earlier this year," said Jodi Levin, spokesman for Toy Manufacturers of America. "They seem to be the thing now."

As far as sales go, Levin doesn't know how well the toys will do come Christmas time.

"I think it's a trend," she said. "Sure people are more aware of the environment, but the toy industry is about dolls, Teddy bears and puzzles and things like that."

Environmental groups are not endorsing any games, although they support the concept.

"The idea to teach people this way isn't a bad one," said Beth Stein, spokeswoman for Friends of the Earth, a Washington, D.C.-based environmental organization.

Deepak Pateriya, spokesman for the U.S. Students Association, a political organization for college students that gets involved in environmental issues, said he can't see anything but good coming out environmentally conscious toys.

"The point is that the environment gets the exposure," he said. "If youngsters start to see it in their toys and games, it's going to have some impact."

Dillard's

Dillard's and Anne Klein II hosted a Fall fashion wardrobe building seminar on Wednesday, August 21, 1991, at Dillard's Midland Park Mall. Anne Klein II is helping the women of today go from work to weekend activities in a fun easy manner. Anne Klein II is offering sweaters as an option over jackets for working women who want a soft femine look, but still professional. Jackets are still being offered and are a classic item in a womens "investment dressing". Hounds tooth jackets, earth tone prints, decorative sweaters, and knee length pleated skirts are Anne Kleins key novelty items for Fall. Knit with novelties, such as pearls or embroidery, are very important for Fall, as stated by Gretchen Kaufman, Dillard's Anne Klein representative. In our climate, knit is practical for our consumer as as well as easy to maintain. Dillard's and Anne Klein II have just the right look to make your transition to fall stylish and fun.

Test measures capacity for relationships

By Steve Rubenstein
N.Y. Times News Service

Ronald Mann knows my love capacity. It's 80 percent.

"That's high," he said. "Not as high as mine, but it's high."

Numbers, said Mann, don't lie.

Mann is a psychologist from Grass Valley, Calif., and he has developed a new test called the Love Factor. You punch the answers to 124 questions into a computer, and the machine tells you whether you're sweetheart material.

"Measure your capacity to engage in intimate personal relationships," said the brochures that the doc was handing out from his booth at the big psychology convention in San Francisco.

Do you feel passion in life? Are you in touch with your soul? Are you afraid to open your heart? Do you like to perspire? Do you respect your mother?

Shrinks are always asking about mom. There's something about the woman.

I punched in the answers. The doc stood over my shoulder, peeking.

Yes, yes, no, yes, yes.

Can you stand the sight of blood? Can you see the higher meaning reflected in a moment? Do you like the act of making love?

Some questions are tougher than others.

The machine chewed over my answers for several seconds before spitting out six pages of analysis, single spaced, which is a lot of analysis for $12.50.

"You are a reasonably compassionate person," said the analysis. "You have a full capacity for love."

And down at the bottom was my love percentile. An 80. Higher marks than just about any other test I ever took, and I hadn't even crammed.

The doc said I had a right to be proud.

"You're a pretty good guy," he said, looking up at me from the test sheet. "A solid human being."

More than a few people would beg to differ, doc.

"This test is extremely accurate," he said. "If it says you're a good guy, you are."

Mann, a 20-year veteran of the ink blot wars, spent four years developing the love test. Thousands of love struck guinea pigs have already taken it. It is not possible, he said, to fool the computer. Many have tried, but the computer has a "faking" scale that sniffs out lowlifes who pretend to be more ardent than they are.

"We have some built-in safeguards," he said. "I don't want to say what they are, but we can spot a phony."

A score of 80, Mann said, is better than most people get. But it is not as high as those of certain other people.

Who, for instance?

"Me," said Mann. "I got a 99."

Not only did Mann ace his own test, but so did his fiancee. He administered it to her before popping the question and, fortunately for her, she came through with an 85. The doc says this indicates they will be very happy together.

Had she flunked, would Mann have dumped her?

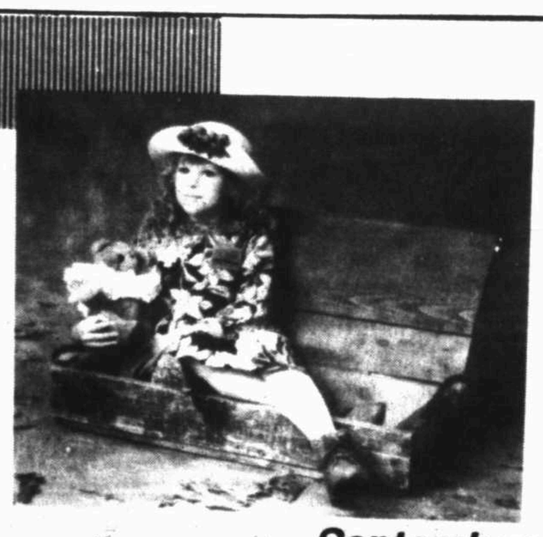

It was a tough question, not among the 124 on the test.

The doc thought it over for at least as long as the computer had thought about me.

"No," he said at last. "The number isn't everything. I would say other things are important, too."

DEAR ABBY

Love means more than sex to native American Indians

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When a reader asked you if Indian men were superior to white men in the art of lovemaking, you suggested that he contact the Bureau of Indian Affairs or the American Indian Movement.

Van Buren

As the executive director of the American Indian Movement, I feel it is my duty to respond.

For the Indian, "love" does not begin when the lights go out or when pot or liquor is consumed, and it is not confined to the bedroom or any other hidden place.

The way in which the Indian treats his wife throughout the marriage is the key to making him a superior lover. His daily acts of kindness, consideration and respect for her demonstrate his love.

While we recognize that the sex act may send man's mind afloat for a few fleeting moments, it is but a minute part of the overall act of love.

The above code of behavior plus the Indian's respect for women have been passed down from father to son. I personally have 15 children and am an Ojibway Indian.

Very truly yours, DENNIS J. BANKS

DEAR ABBY: May I answer "Ed in East Illinois," who asked: "Is it true that closely guarded tribal secrets on how to please a woman are passed down from father to son, making Indians better lovers than white men?"

First the white man took all the Indian's land and some of his women. Now they want the Indian's "love secrets." No way! The Indian needs something to call his own. — HALF-BLOODED INDIAN

DEAR ABBY: Now I know why the Lone Ranger never got the girl. They all ended up with Jay Silverheels, that good-looking Indian who played Tonto. — SEMINOLE IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Ed," "Yes, there are many closely guarded, secret Indian lovemaking tricks." You will notice that divorce is very rare among Indians. That's because they know how to please their women.

Secrets like the "Apache grip" and the "Kickapoo twist" will never be sold or given away by a true Indian. — MIKE WHITEFEATHER IN SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Ed in East Illinois": I have lived with a Mandan Indian for five years, and I wouldn't trade him for FIVE white lovers. He is the greatest! — LINDA IN MARYLAND

DEAR ABBY: I am one-half Indian and have had two Indian squaws, who both ran off with white men. Apparently the "closely guarded secrets" of lovemaking from the Indian side of my family were not passed on to me. — LONELY WOLF IN HOUSTON

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WILLIE IN WACO": Yes, there are plenty of dangers. Sometimes just the thought of getting into hot water keeps a guy clean.

Rules set by first-grade teachers haunt us for life

By Erma Bombeck

All of our lives we live by rules. There are "rules of the house," rules of sportsmanship and rules of social behavior.

Bombeck

Most of them are like bubble gum. You can play with them, stretch them into different shapes, make noises with them or spit 'em out.

But the rules set down by your first teacher are absolute. They are commandments set in stone, never to be questioned or challenged and never to be broken. My first-grade teacher, Miss Reist, laid these rules on me a couple of decades ago. They were accompanied alternately by rumblings of thunder and flashes of lightning. To this day, I have never had the courage to break one of them.

I always have a sharpened pencil. And when I don't, I never sharpen it while someone else is talking.

I always have the correct change for milk — even when I'm not drinking it.

When I go to the restroom, I do it quickly and quietly and usually hold onto someone's hand.

Whenever I'm watching a film and the projector doesn't function, I remain in my seat and occupy my time constructively until repairs are made and the film starts again.

If an emergency arises, I do not disrupt those around me, but go straight to the restroom.

When I am in a group and the speaker finds it necessary to leave us by ourselves, I do not run around the room like a chicken with his head cut off, but sit quietly and busy myself with studying and conduct myself in a mature manner until the speaker returns.

I never call people embarrassing names like "dim bulb" or "pea brain" because it would hurt their feelings.

Never do I borrow paper from anyone. It's a nasty habit.

If I wear boots, I allow myself plenty of time to take them off before I begin my day. It's unhealthy to sit around in boots all day.

Whenever I enter a crowded room, I always aim for the first row because I am short.

Although I used to enjoy sucking on pens, it is something I haven't done since teacher said "black tongues are unappetizing."

I don't want to be dramatic, but the rules Miss Reist set down made me what I am today. So all of you entering school for the first time this fall, sit up straight, don't pick your nose, and heed rule No. 1: You can't learn with gum in your mouth.

Americans drawn to legend of Camelot

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Mark Twain's Connecticut Yankee wasn't the only American to have a thing about King Arthur's court. Arthurian lore and legend still fascinate Americans, according to a medievalist at the University of Rochester. References like "Camelot" or "Excalibur" appear in the names of motels, restaurants and even nursing homes, says Alan Lupack.

Why? "The ideals and values people crave are embedded in these stories," he says. "They have helped shape our values of honor, justice and charity, and our relationships between men and women."

The legend, he adds, allows us "at least to dream of a world where men can live in harmony."

Video gives advice from educators

By Andrew Mollison
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — To help your child succeed in school, you should treat schoolwork as more important than television, music and videos, say 95 percent of the nation's elementary and middle school principals.

But first, they'd like you to watch their new 15-minute video.

Packed with charming children and caring adults, it dramatizes several how-to tips for parents too rushed or too TV-oriented to read them in a 17-page booklet that was released along with the video.

The tips in "The Little Things Make a Big Difference" are based on results of a survey of nearly 10,000 elementary and middle school principals. The advice is far from exotic.

Three examples:

■ When you children ask a question, answer it right away.

■ Display their artwork and school triumphs on the refrigerator.

■ Try a new sport or hobby. Take a class. Show your children that learning isn't something you just do in school. Show it's okay to make mistakes.

"I see our welcome-to-school sessions using it. I see our teen parenting programs using this video," said Lillian M. Brinkley of Norfolk, Va., president of the National Association of Elementary School Principals. Her group worked with World Book Educational Products to apply the survey results in the $19.95 video and free booklet.

Only one-fourth of the principals surveyed said most of their current students were prepared at home for success at school. If the tips are followed by parents, 41 percent of the principals said the effect would be "dramatic," 47 percent said "very significant," and 10 percent said, "significant." The other two percent were pessimists.

"This is one of the greatest videos I've ever seen," said Pat Henry of Lawton, Okla., president of the National PTA, which decided to urge its 28,000 local affiliates to order and help distribute the material. "Every family in America should see it."

"All of the tips and activity ideas in the video and booklet involve changing family focus, rather than investing additional time and money," said Frank. J. Gagliardi, president of the World Book firm.

That too was based on research. Studies have shown that today's parents are more likely than their own parents to be teenagers, to be raising a child alone, to be working fulltime or to feel rushed when dealing with their offspring.

Alvin Granowski, a reading specialist at World Book, said that in an effort to reach parents or caretakers who are unlikely to join PTAs, the material will be distributed through such agencies as food-stamp providers and well-baby clinics. The video will be available for free borrowing and copying at 1,700 Blockbuster video rental outlets.

Asked if the advice is too simple, Granowski said: "Didn't you ever hear a kid ask a question in a store, and the parent shouts 'Shut up, don't bother me!'? Well that parent knows better. But people get tired, they get rushed, they forget. We all need reminders now and again."

Principals' suggestions listed

N.Y. Times News Service

Nearly 10,000 elementary and middle school principals were asked whether activities were essential, highly desirable, desirable, not really necessary, or not necessary at all.

More than 90 percent said these were essential or highly desirable:

■ Listen and talk with your children, paying consistent attention to questions and feelings. 98 percent.

■ Show pride in your children's academic growth and accomplishments.

■ Instill a strong work ethic in children. 96 percent.

■ Help children see themselves as capable problem solvers. 96 percent.

■ Give priority to schoolwork, reading and other academic activities over non-academic activities like television, music, videos and recreation. 95 percent.

Emphasize regular, planned use of time in the home for studying, playing and eating meals. 94 percent.

■ Read aloud to your children, and have them read to you. 93 percent.

■ Set standards and expectations for your children. 92 percent.

■ Get to know your child's current schoolwork and school activities. 92 percent.

■ Help with homework when needed. 92 percent.

■ Have regular discussions with your children and find opportunities to enlarge vocabulary and sentence patterns. 91 percent.

Parents help children learn

N.Y. Times News Service

Here are several tips for parents. They come from "Little Things Make a Big Difference," a booklet based on a survey of nearly 10,000 elementary and middle school principals.

■ Say "good job" and "I knew you could do it."

■ Ask "what do you think?" — and really listen to their answers.

■ It's time to study. Set a daily routine for schoolwork, meals, and bedtime.

■ Beat the clock. Let your children know you and others appreciate it when they're on time.

■ Turn off the television. By limiting TV time, you'll open more time for other activities.

■ Say "tell me about it." Learn what your children are doing in school. Encourage them to explain their assignments.

■ Beat the "why do I need to learn this?" blues. Show children how their schoolwork applies to their lives.

■ Get the library habit. Libraries hold a world of information. Make a trip to the local library a weekly routine.

■ Talk, talk, talk ... with your children as you go about your daily routines.

■ Make story time a regular part of the day.

■ Set high but realistic standards. Recognize that each child is different.

■ Give them a pat on the back for a job well done.

For a single free copy of the booklet, send a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to World Book Educational Products, Station 9/NAESP, Elk Grove Village, Ill. 60007.

Copies of the booklet are sold in batches of 25 for 25 cents each. For an order form, write to National Association of Elementary School Principals, Educational Products, 1615 Duke Street, Alexandria, Va. 22314.

Overcoming negative self-image takes time, patience

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Helping individuals change the way they feel about themselves is a complex process requiring time and patience as well as other variables, some of which are still at the frontiers of research by mental health professionals.

Those of us involved in counseling have found that one of the first hurdles is trying to help the individual see himself or herself in an objective and realistic manner. This is difficult, because seeing ourselves as we really are is often painful and produces anxiety.

Most individuals use complex defensive mechanisms, such as rationalization and denial, to prevent them from confronting their imperfections and shortcomings.

Eventually, these distorted thinking patterns become their frame of reference for dealing with almost everybody and everything.

Some mental health professionals and researchers believe that there may be an inherent, biological predisposition to distort reality. In the extreme form, individuals may truly believe that everyone is against them, that they have some special talent which enables them to read other people's minds, or that voices of unseen persons are telling them what to do.

In a much less extreme form, many individuals have a chronically pessimistic outlook on life. They view things in a negative, unhappy way that often influences negative outcomes.

By contrast, one has only to examine the outlook of someone like Helen Keller or Betty Ford to appreciate an alternate outlook on life.

Self-perceptions can be changed. The following methods have been found effective:

■ Decide that healthy self-esteem is possible to achieve. Begin by discarding the "Yes, buts."

■ Seek the help of someone who will help you see your stronger and more positive characteristics.

■ Target some areas of self-improvement. Set reasonable goals in accomplishing these challenges. Recognize and give yourself credit for successes when they come.

■ Get involved in helping those less fortunate. The reward of helping others reinforces positive self-concepts.

■ Begin developing an awareness of irrational thought processes that perpetuate negative thinking. Watch out for "shoulds" and "oughts" in your vocabulary that lead to unrealistic and unreasonable expectations. Remember, you can't please everyone.

Changing one's self-concept is not an easy or rapidly accomplishable task, but it is one that pays many dividends in terms of quality of life.

TRAVEL

See Europe on 'a shoestring'

By Carolyn Huffman and Robbie Sherwood

CNS Photo
Passengers in the train that travels between Zurich and Scuol in Switzerland can catch glimpses of scenic villages nestling among the towering Alps.

At the top of the white spiral staircase was a set of glass doors. A sign read, "Sauna. Solarium. Tanning Beds." in several languages. Beneath the words was a drawing of a swimsuit — circled, with a line slashing through it.

We peered through the glass. Inside were several men and women on lounges, entering or exiting the three saunas, dipping into the cold pool or chatting.

A few people carried towels, and some people wore them, but nobody seemed to be wearing anything else.

"Well," we said, gulping, "this must be Europe."

The sauna of the Caracalla Thermal Baths in Baden-Baden, Germany, was just one of many eye-opening surprises we found as budget travelers in Europe. The best surprise was discovering that, even with today's inflated prices and high cost of living, affordable travel is still available and rewarding.

THE DAYS of college kids backpacking on a shoestring haven't disappeared entirely. Today, senior citizens and families are doing the budget thing around the continent and Great Britain.

Besides being economical, budget travel is a great way to meet hordes of other penny-pinchers from around the world.

Budget travel also lets you experience a range of lifestyles, from extremely humble (for instance, forgoing your morning shower or sleeping on the floor of a boat) to relative luxury (relaxing in a glass-enclosed Jacuzzi on the deck of an ocean liner.)

Getting around once you're there will cost a serious amount of money. But it can be affordable, and planning is part of the fun.

We would backpack, stay at hostels and travel with Eurail passes. Following are some of the things we learned:

To start, think about the places you've always wanted to see. Write them down. Check out some books from the library, too, and ask everyone you know if they've been to Europe and what they liked.

You'll need to figure out how long a vacation you want to take and how much you can afford to spend. By following budget tips, you'll average $30 a day in spending money while in Europe. The amount may be higher if you spend more time in Scandinavia and the north of the continent, and it may be lower if you stick around Greece, Italy and the south.

AFTER DOING some research, you can decide the main places you want to visit and pick a central airport.

Ticket prices are high right now. The easiest thing to do is make periodic checks with a travel agent you trust.

Prices vary enormously depending on when you travel; summer, of course, is most expensive. Off-season trips can be hundreds of dollars less. For instance, in February one agent quoted a $338 round-trip price from Phoenix to Frankfurt, Germany, if the traveling was finished by May 1. If you wait for specials, you probably can expect to pay between $450 and $800 for a late spring/early summer trip.

After you've decided on an airport and where you generally want to go, pick up a current copy of "Let's Go Europe." The book bills itself as "the budget traveler's bible," and justifiably so.

You can find it at most libraries or buy one for $14. It gives important details on most locations in Europe, such as local transportation, places to stay, things to see and do, where to find help and where to find the nearest place to do laundry.

Once in Europe, train travel is the way to go. Eurail passes are available only to non-Europeans and offer various discounts. Several packages can be chosen to fit your travel plans, whether you want just a few train days or an entire month of unlimited travel. Pass prices are the same everywhere.

A travel agent should be able to give you a current brochure and price list; the various packages run from $230 to $1,042 this year. We did all the traveling we needed with the "Youth Flexi" pass, which cost $340.

TRAIN TRAVEL is an adventure in itself. It can double as mealtime, sleeping quarters, a way to meet interesting travelers, or sightseeing or research time. The best book we found for tips on railway savvy is "Europe Through the Back Door" by Rick Steves. Besides being chock full of good information, it's hilarious reading. Steves tells it like it is, right down to a whole section on European toilets.

Speeding along in a comfortable train, watching the Belgian scenery slip past while you munch on a picnic lunch can be a pleasant and peaceful time. Europeans definitely have this mass transportation thing down pat.

Your other major concern, besides transportation, is shelter. Hostels, the hallmark of hardy backpackers, are everywhere in Europe, and most are no longer restricted to youths (except in parts of Bavaria, Germany).

Many hostels offer comfortable bunks in dorm-like rooms that sleep four to 10 people. Some offer double rooms at a higher cost. Hostel prices run $7 to $15 per night; most are about $10.

"Let's Go Europe" lists most major European hostels. The International Youth Hostel Federation's official guide lists all 2,000 of them.

No two hostels are alike. Some are institutional and antiseptic. Others, like the slightly seedy youth motels of Amsterdam's red-light district, are more laid back.

And others are simply too good to be true. The a.f. Chapman, a gleaming white 1888 sailing ship docked near the old section of Stockholm, Sweden, is one of Europe's premier hostels. But try getting in there on short notice. The Chapman's cramped but quaint cabins are booked months ahead, a practice that bumps out free-wheeling backpackers in favor of itinerary-toting gold-card holders.

For those who like that impregnable feeling, Germany's Rhineland has the best fortress youth hostels in the world.

THE COLOSSAL hilltop fortress Ehrenbreitstein strategically overlooks the Rhine/Mosel town of Koblenz. Now, instead of keeping out invading Frenchmen, the fort's yard-thick walls protect a restaurant, two museums, a youth hostel and an incredible view.

Word to the wise: Get there before 5 p.m. or risk missing the chairlift ride to the top. Either that or take a taxi. The hike up is no fun and may ruin a beautiful friendship.

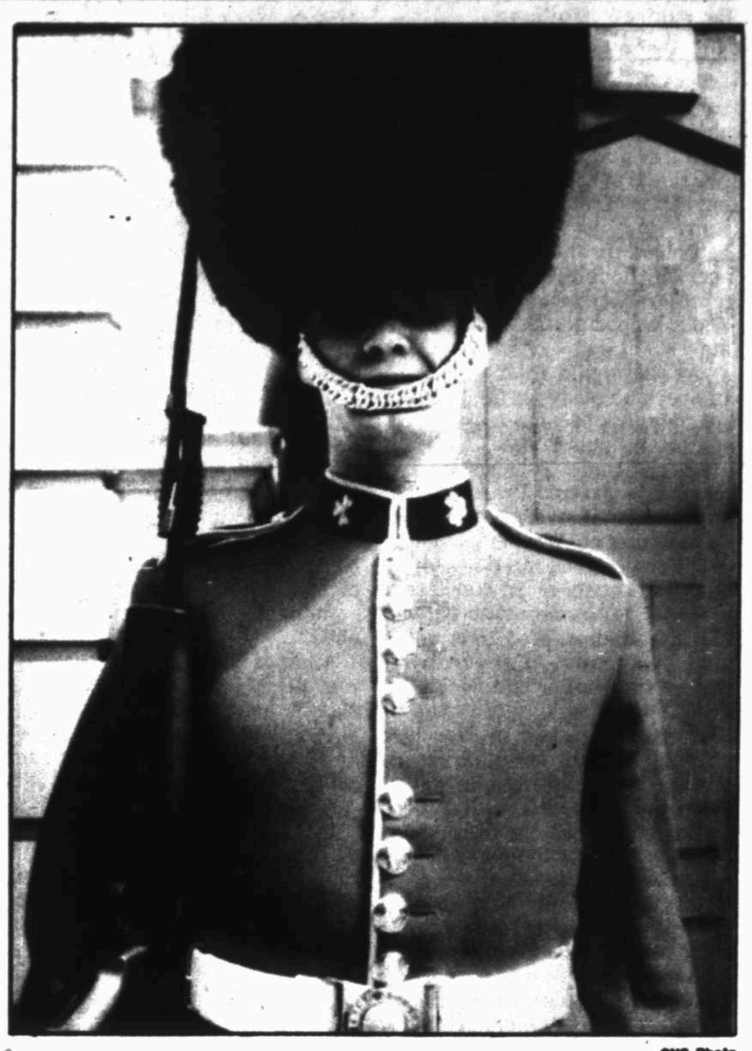

Eurail covers the boat (or train) ride up the Rhine to scenic Bacharach, home of a hostel-in-a-castle complete with turrets. Cost for both of these hostels is less that $10 per night.

No doubt you'll be doing some eating during your travels. The budget traveler's modus operandi is to seek out a grocery story ("Let's Go" often lists some) and buy fixings for picnic meals: bread, a little cheese and meat or jam, fruit, bottled water, etc. Bring a plastic jar of peanut butter with you from home. A good shopping trip will last you through a few meals and shouldn't load you down too much. Picnicking definitely is called for on long train rides; the restaurant cars are not priced for the budget types.

Most hostels have one or two meals available. Some include free breakfast, especially in Germany. When you want (or need) a real meal, "Let's Go," other travelers or your hostel staff are great for recommending good local eateries. When eating out, the rule seems to be to dine at the places locals choose. If you head for the McDonald's or the huge cafe that proclaims "American Express accepted here," you're probably going to pay much more. They know how to trap a tourist.

EATING ON a budget can mean taking advantage of opportunities that present themselves. We met three happy-go-lucky Canadians youths, fresh out of high school, on a 12-hour ferry crossing that offered a free breakfast buffet. The young men, who were really eating on a shoestring, each attended breakfast a few times, equipped with baggy jackets. The spread they accumulated by 8:30 a.m. truly was impressive.

Westfest, annual fundraiser, set for Labor Day weekend

Staff Report

WEST — Westfest, the annual Labor Day weekend event with a Czechoslovakian flair, will be presented next weekend in West. Since its first presentation in 1976, Westfest has drawn thousands of visitors each year, who join in the family event that is a blend of food, culture and dance. Westfest, a non-profit organization, was organized to perserve the Czechoslovakian heritage of the community and to raise funds for community projects, such as purchasing land for future development, construction a ball park and building a community center for senior citizens. Westfest has donated funds to such organizations as Special Olympics, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Czech Folk Dancers and Westfest Scholarship Program.

Westfest begins Friday night with a country/western dance at 6 p.m. Miss Westfest will be crowned at 7 p.m. Grounds will open until midnight.

Other events will be Westfest parade 10:30 a.m. Saturday; arts and crafts; ethnic dancing; polka and waltz music; food booths; horseshoe pitching contest; Kolache 5000 Meter Run; kolache baking contest; and events for children, such as games, rides and petting zoo.

Admission is $4 for adults, $2 for children aged 6-12, and free for children younger than 6 when accompanied by an adult. Free shuttle buses provide transportation from the downtown area to the festival ground. Parking at the grounds is limited and costs $1 per car. Hours are 11:30 a.m.-12:30 a.m. each day.

West is located 15 miles north of Waco on I-35.

Study shows while mom learns children learn too

By Andrew Mollison
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Low-income mothers taking part in literacy, basic-skills or job-finding programs in nine cities reported that two-thirds of their children are doing better in school, according to a study released Aug. 15.

"Dollars spent on such programs perform double duty," said Cynthia Marano, executive director of Wider Opportunities for Women, Inc.

"As they build their own skills and become ready for the job market, mothers become more aware of the influence they have on their children's performance in school," suggested Irene Natividad, chair of WOW's National Commission on Working Women.

The researchers interviewed 563 mothers, ranging in age from teenagers to women over 40, who had 926 children aged 15 or younger, according to the report, "Teach the Mother and Reach the Child."

They were asked in late 1990 and early 1991 about areas in which their children improved since the mothers enrolled.

Among the 598 children whose mothers were willing to answer, improvements mentioned included liking school, 54 percent; grades, 45 percent; tests, 42 percent; reading, 42 percent, and attendance, 37 percent.

At least one positive effect was reported by a mother for about two-thirds of the children whose performance was described.

Follow-up checks were made with the children and their teachers in 60 selected cases to find out if the mothers were exaggerating. Instead, researchers had similar results.

WOW, a Washington-based national nonprofit group, and Applied Behavioral & Cognitive Sciences, Inc., directed the study with advice from academics and staff members from the programs. The John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation funded the study.

The survey had two major limits. No data were gathered for similar mothers who hadn't enrolled, to see if they also saw their children improving during that period. And many of the women who declined to talk about their children's performance may have been avoiding the need to give a negative response.

However, few significant differences were found when researchers followed up with in-depth case studies of 48 mothers and their 60 children in their homes and interviewed the teachers of 58 of the children at their schools.

In those cases, the mothers reported that 41 of the 60 children had improved in at least one area, and the teachers reported signs of improvement in 40 of the 58 children whom they taught.

Another sign that the responses were valid was the range of descriptions mothers used when asked how well their children were doing in school. About 33 percent were said to be doing "very well" or "above average," and 28 percent said "not well" or "poorly," with the rest rated as "high average" or "low average."

One Dallas teacher said a boy told her he was glad his mother was going to school because "she read me and my sisters stories and showed us words in books." The boy's mother said she hardly ever did that before because "it didn't seem as important then as it does now."

Another Dallas mother reported that after she stopped attending classes, her son's grades dropped and he told her he didn't want to go to school. Shocked, she re-enrolled and her son's grades returned to normal.

In Chicago, a mother said she thought her child's school performance was hurt because she helped her child "too much" with homework now. However, the child's teacher stated that the child's "assessment scores had increased by 10 percent" and that both "reading and writing had improved."

Most of the children were in grade or high school.

In two cases where they were in day care, one teacher said a girl's ability to "pay attention while the teacher reads" had improved, but the teacher of another child said she felt it "was not possible to measure changes" caused by a mother's program because preschoolers adjust to day care at unpredictable rates.

More than 40 percent of the mothers hadn't finished high school, about double the national rate. Each was enrolled in one of a variety of literacy, basic skills and job preparation programs in nine cities — Washington, Dallas, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and the smaller communities of Nashua, N.H., Idaho Falls, Idaho; Portland, Ore., and Niceville, Fla.

"In no way should these findings mitigate the importance of direct investments in the education of children," said Natividad. "Instead, the findings should be used to argue for additional support for programs targeting adults — especially mothers."

Old school house gets new life as home

By Enid Nemy
N.Y. Times News Service

SALISBURY, Conn. — John Funt went for a drive five years ago and fell in love. The object of his affection was 90 years old, had had a face lift of sorts and numerous instances of minor surgery, but the ravages of time and neglect had still taken their toll.

What Funt saw as he wound in and around the verdant landscape of Litchfield County was a lonely school house, deserted first by children and later by adults and reaching out for rescue.

"It talked to me," he said, and the voice was so eloquent that he sold the country house he already had, moved in with his new love and set about rejuvenating her.

The limestone and cedar-shingle schoolhouse talks to visitors too, with a few words of advice once directed at pupils. "Hear Instruction and Be Wise" is the homily carved on the aged board above the front door, framed by carefully restored wooden crests, one the Connecticut seal and the other Old Glory.

Funt's schoolhouse, which was converted to a residence in the 1940s, offers a clue to its character immediately inside the front door: steps leading to two large classrooms that are now the living room and library.

This is a house of stairs — of varying heights, each set highly individualistic: one to the large eat-in kitchen from a pantry that probably began life as a student cloakroom; another to the bedrooms, in three sections, each pointed at a different angle; between the two main bedroom areas is a stile with five steps on each side, and another long flight is at the back, from the kitchen down to the garden.

"There's an eccentricity about me and this place," said Mr. Funt, a party designer and a display consultant to Tiffany's, where he worked until 1988. "But it's something I can wear. I don't mind it."

The 38-year-old designer, whose father, Allen Funt, created "Candid Camera," has planned parties for the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art as well as the decor for the Carnegie Hall Centennial this year, and he was involved in the presentation of inaugural balls for both the Reagan and Bush administrations.

His house was empty for several years and correspondingly decrepit before he bought it in 1986. It had acquired a number of unusual features, among them a door about 20 feet above ground, opening not to steps but to a hazardous drop.

The house also wheezed, creaked and rattled, the result of thinning plaster and wiring, heating and water systems in need of repair or replacement.

In making major alterations, including to the kitchen, which was added about 1970, Funt was his own architect. An amateur architect, he hastened to point out, quickly amending that to "arts and crafts person."

The major physical change was the conversion of the attic into four bedrooms. Funt describes the result as "still pretty dicey because you have to duck a 70-foot-long low beam to get into some of the bedrooms."

But the beam, the multi-directional steps leading to the area and the stile are at ease in the second-floor's ambiance of deliberate and unabashed sparseness. There are no walls separating the bedrooms.

The divisions, such as they are, are accomplished by panels of painted and stained glass that have the effect of indoor windows; the same type of glass is on the real windows.

There is, too, another division, this one nonstructural. There are, he said, "toastier, warmer-in-winter" rooms, and "breezier-in-summer" rooms, which make Funt's sleeping habits as unusual as his quarters. He moves from one room to the other as mood and weather dictate.

The principal rooms of the house — an oak-paneled living room and a warm rose-colored library, the former classrooms — required nothing more than staining, polishing, burnishing and furnishing.

Now that the house is basically done, other than the "very light, cool, lots-of-potential" ground-level basement, which he believes was once a playroom, Funt is changing the direction of his interests. "I'm more interested in the outside now, in gardening," he said.

"I started out as an artist, and this house is sort of a sandbox for me," he said. "This experience is like falling in love, because just falling in love is not enough. You have to settle down and make it work. You have to gradually get used to each other."

When the saying "Go west, young man" by John Babsone Lane Soule was first published in the Terre Haute (Indiana) Express in 1851 and later served as the inspiration for an editorial by Horace Greely in the New York Tribune, it is doubtful that either of the men invisioned that advice still being valuable in 1991. But for fall fashion, going west is where it's at, and Western styling is not just for young men or cowboys.

(From 1H)

All ages are taking advantage of the style and tailored fit that is associated with Western wear. And many designers are taking advantage of the creative options it has to offer. From the cowboys at the ranch to the high fashion models walking the runways of Dallas, New York and Paris, Western-inspired clothing is back in the saddle.

Part of the resurgence of Western fashions has been attributed to the entertainment industry. The fashionable trail of Western-related television productions such as "Lonesome Dove," "Young Riders" and "Guns of Paradise," and movie productions including "Dances with Wolves," "Young Guns" and "Young Guns II," and the most recently released "City Slickers" have put western garb in front of the public eye.

Another aspect that has made Western wear popular is its durability. Most people are looking for the best buy, and Western wear has been made to last.

Looking back on how the West was worn, the image of the Old West is being brought back with modification and modernizations for the modern-day cowboy as well as the city slicker. Western inspiration can be seen in everything from the shoe boot and designer-styled western boot to blouse yokes and leather fringe.

Although nothing will replace the basic jeans and shirts, such as those found at Sammie's Western Wear, 3211 W. Wadley, other aspects of the Old West have long created an air of excitment and adventure. Seeing the Western fashions on the television and movie screens has sent many fashion-conscious folk galloping to their nearest stores in search of real cowboy duds.

By "real" cowboy duds, this means that the styles for fall '91 are not a repeat of the glitzy garb that bombarded the fashion scene during the early '80s with the release of John Travolta and Debra Winger two-stepping through Gilley's in the movie "Urban Cowboy." Instead, fall '91 features basic Western wear for work and play. But those who consider their tastes more in the realm of high fashion than the rustic outdoors won't be disappointed by the variety of the styles available.

LEATHER AND SUEDE SUITS, skirts, jackets and dresses with Western fitting and detailing can be found at Western stores and high fashion boutiques alike. Designers such as Karl Langerfeld and Calvin Klein and brands such as DKNY and Guess? have put a fashion twist to the Western look.

"I don't think people know that Western style is a part of a lot of the clothes they wear, that the idea (of many designer clothes) originated with western wear," said Sandra Wells, co-owner of Wells Boot City, 805 S. Midkiff, with her husband Jakie Wells. "The tuxedo shirt was in our (Western wear) stores long before the boutiques had them. Of course, the fashion designers came up with hand-painting them and decorating them, but Western stores have had them for a long time."

"I think Western flair has crossed over into high fashion designs more than high fashion has come back into Western wear," said Larry Luskey, manager of Luskey's Western Wear, 2310 W. Michigan, but added that there has been some high fashion ideas used in the new Western looks. In fact, many of the stylish leather jackets and skirts in stock at Luskey's were not from Western wear manufacturers, he said.

Not only has some of the styling of Western wear etched it's way into high fashion designs, but people are beginning to mix and match Western wear with designer clothes for a whole new look, Mrs. Wells said.

"For instance, a lot of the younger girls and the (Country-Western) stars are wearing cowboy boots with the leggings. Well, you won't find the leggings in our store, but you'll find plenty of boots. But that's one of the ways people are mixing fashion styles with the Western," Mrs. Wells said.

Some of the crossover between high fashion and Western wear can be seen in the fringed, Western-cut jackets made from brightly-colored leathers and suedes. Fashion fabrics used for Western-styled clothing, or vice versa, also is a popular crossover medium.

For instance, denim has long been considered the fabric of Western flavor. But what started out as a durable fabric for jeans and overalls has become a fabric with sex appeal and style. Karl Lagerfeld has even trimmed a traditional Chanel suit in demin and created a short, fringed denim skirt for Chanel's fall collection.

DEMIN CLOTHING IS BEING adorned with paint, studs, beads, pearls, sequins and rhinestones, and paired with chiffon, leather and lace for almost any type of style a person wishes to create.

And denim isn't just blue anymore either. It comes in black, gray, white and almost any other color of the rainbow. It can be stone washed, acid washed, fire washed or stay-dyed to hold its original deep shade of color with little fading.

Although the basic Levi's 501s and Wrangler's blue denim jeans will never be replaced, Mrs. Wells said the men's pleated Wranglers and the colored cowboy cut Wranglers are gaining popularity.

For women, a variety of jean's styles from Rocky Mountain, Roper and Silverlake by Wrangler top the fashion list. Many of the Western styles, such as the chaps jeans and single chaps jeans, have been made from designer fabrics and found their way to designer fashion stores. Mrs. Wells added that many of the blouse styles seen in designer shops also originate from western styles. "Just look at how many blouses have yokes or capes on them," she said.

For West Texans, cowboy boots have been a staple in dressing for many years, and a good pair of black cherry goat, ostrich or lizard skins cowboy boots are a common sight with a three-piece suit in these parts.

For women, cowboy boots also are popular, but women are looking for boots with 14- to 16-inch tops instead of the 13-inch traditional top, so they can wear them with skirts as well as pants, Mrs. Wells said. The heels on these boots are a little taller as well, ranging from 1¾-inches to 2-inches high. The range of colors for women's boots is also growing as women buy boots to coordinate with outfits.

For the younger set, Ropers top the list, and the newer lace-up Ropers are gathering a crowd of fans as well. Ropers come in colors ranging from basic brown, black and gray to fashion shades of yellow, aqua and hot pink.

THE FALL FAVORITES FOR men's Western apparel are Wranger's Painted Desert and Brush Popper shirts, Luskey said. The Painted Desert style comes in jewel-toned colors and lend themselves to dress wear with button-down collars and yokeless fronts. The Brush Popper shirts are made of a heavier material which Wrangler advertises as water repellant and wind resistant. They are generally brighter in color and come in solids as well as two new looks for fall, one with chest stripes and the other with an inset, Mrs. Wells said.

"Colors are big for fall. Primary, bright colors and high contrast will be the biggest item for men," Luskey said. Mrs. Wells said she expects shades of jade, teal, turquoise and purple to be popular.

But both agree that the basic color for fall, whether for women or men, is black.

"Black is a big color; it goes with everything," Mrs. Wells said. "Even most of the prints have some black in them."

"Black sells. It's slimming and everything goes with it," Luskey said. "Prints are probably the hottest item going for men right now."

"We're seeing a little action in the 'Lonesome Dove' look," Mrs. Wells said, "such as the mandarin collars for men and the peplum skirts and more lace for women; kind of an 1890s look with more defined tailoring and sophistication. It's usually worn for dress wear and special occasions and it works well as a crossover for office wear, especially for women."

"Women have got to get double-duty from their clothes. They can't spend $200 on one outfit that they can't mix and match and wear elsewhere," she said.

"The Western jacket has a longer drop than the tradition suit coat. The coat on a Western suit has a 7-inch drop instead of the 5-inch drop of the traditional suit. That gives a man's silhouette the look of larger shoulders and smaller waist and hips, and they like that," Mrs. Wells said.

"The basic tailoring that goes into a Western fit has not changed, the colors and the fabrics have changed some, but not the fit," Mrs. Wells said.

"I want to see people make western wear a lifestyle. We wear it everyday, everywhere. It's not a fad, it's here to stay. The Western fit is comfortable. If you don't feel confident in the way you look, you can't convince someone else to have confidence in you. Here in West Texas, we are comfortable and confident in Western tailored clothes," Mrs. Wells said.

'Real,' functional cowboy fashion pointers offered

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

Forget the rhinestones, super-pointy cowboy boots and the torn-up jeans. Real cowboys have a look that's as functional as it is fashionable, said John Neal, head of the rodeo department at Wrangler, the North Carolina western-wear manufacturer.

Neal has studied real cowboy fashion and offered these pointers:

■ Shirts: Buttons or snaps are equally acceptable. They must have a back yoke. Long sleeves are a must; wear them rolled up in the summer. Sleeves are worn at least an inch longer to cover wrists when roping or doing the two-step. Shirttail must be extra long for similar reasons.

■ Boots: The authentic cowboy wears all-leather boots, with rounded, not the pointy "roach killer," toes. The shaft that covers the lower leg is black or brown, but the foot portion is calfskin or an exotic skin such as ostrich.

■ Belts: Most match the boots. Locally, buckles are the U-shaped kind with a "keeper" that matches the buckle design.

■ Hat: Black Stetson cowboy hats are the thing for urban cowboys, but Resistall brand hats are preferred by rodeo riders. In the summer, it's shantung or Panama straw. For felt hats, 80 percent are black. Hats are not decorated with big feathers or hat pins.

■ Jeans: Wrangler, of course, said the vast majority of real rodeo riders wear the cowboy cut, stock number 13MWZ, blue denim jean. Prewashed and black jeans are gaining acceptance.

Button covers transform shirts

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

When is a shirt not just something to hide under a jacket? When it's gussied up with fancy buttons that transform it into an important article of clothing.

But not to worry. The buttons won't get mangled in the laundry if they are the latest fad: button covers that clip onto a shirt's basic plastic buttons.

They take a variety of forms, including hearts, flowers, coins, colored stones and mirrors, cameos, cat faces and, of course, pearls. They are sold in matched or mismatched sets of six and cost from about $24 to $48.

Macy's has sold the buttons for a couple of years, but they really took off this spring, thanks to the emphasis on jewelry-like buttons by Chanel, Christian Lacroix, Todd Oldham, Gemma Kahng and Zang Toi. The set shown here, by Nony, includes a mesh rosette, a pearl in a golden frame, a heart, a cameo and a miniature of the Mona Lisa. It is $32 at Macy's.

Men's fall fashions glance backward for future

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Were he to wake up from a 20-year sleep today, even Rip Van Winkle wouldn't look terribly out of style.

For this fall particularly, menswear glances backward as much as it looks forward. With three-button jackets, vests, traditional plaids and wide ties, '90s fashions are more derivative than creative. Even the '70s get a shot at reincarnation with the return of the CPO, or chief petty officer, jacket in the same earthy-colored plaids that covered everything 20 years ago.

"It's become stylish to put clothes from different decades together," said national trend watcher Paul Glick of Paul Glick Inc. Image and Style Consultants in Chicago.

"And right now, there is a strong American and Mother Earth influence. Precious clothes — the silks, the flimsy rayons, the things that had a woman kind of sexiness to them — are not so popular," Glick said while in Los Angeles for a men's fashion review.

The consciousness about the environment has spun a new kind of enthusiasm for outdoorsman clothing, Glick said. It's the kind of clothing that might grace a Cabela's sporting-goods catalog or look at home in Santa Fe.

THE MOST IMPORTANT collar color this season is blue. It's the season for macho working-man fashion, with looks copied from lumberjack plaids, engineer's overalls and the thick-sole shoes and boots of electricians and factory workers. Functional fabrics, such as chambray, denim, sail cloth and canvas come in sporty and dressy clothes, said Chip Tolbert, fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association.

Jackets especially take clues from TV's "Northern Exposure" and "Twin Peaks." Corduroy-trimmed collars on long, canvas jackets that were last seen in a duck blind are the rage. Patch pockets, to keep your shells and flies, are a must. The outdoorsman jacket is a key look at places like J. Crew and the Gap.

All this great outdoors stuff goes with corduroy trousers and trim, chukka boots, checked and plaid button-down shirts and lots of denim. If you haven't already purchased a denim dress shirt, you can still get a season's wear out of it.

Even city slickers take cues from the country's outdoorsmen. Ducks and fishing flies are popular patterns on shirts, vests and ties, and they often are mixed with plaids, particularly jackets.

But classic men's fashions haven't fallen off the runway or the closet. Blazers remain the key element of a man's fall wardrobe, said Colby McWilliams, the men's fashion director at Neiman Marcus. This season it's appropriate to graduate from navy to, perhaps, yellow, green or blue.

FOR A CHANGE this fall, the three-button jacket, in an elongated silhouette, comes in check, plaids and solids and is worn with a variety of patterned shirts.

Pattern mixing is here to stay, and it's getting even more complex. Alexander Julian puts a duck-patterned jacquard lapel vest with a leaf print tie, olive cotton shirt and a multi-colored check jacket. Joseph Abboud's JAII label shows windowpane plaid jackets with paisley ties, a mini-windowpane jacket, striped shirt and leaf-patterned jacquard tie.

Business suits are, however, still suits. And businessmen are wise to ignore fashion and pick the colors and cut that are most appropriate for their coloring and their profession, Glick said.

However, many suits come in a new spice tones, said June Rau, fashion director of Nordstrom. The colors are olive, curry, sage, paprika and eggplant. A man could also make a concession to fashion with a new pair of brown leather braces, Rau said.

Some manufacturers are showing light-colored jackets paired with dress shirts in deep, solid colors, Rau said.

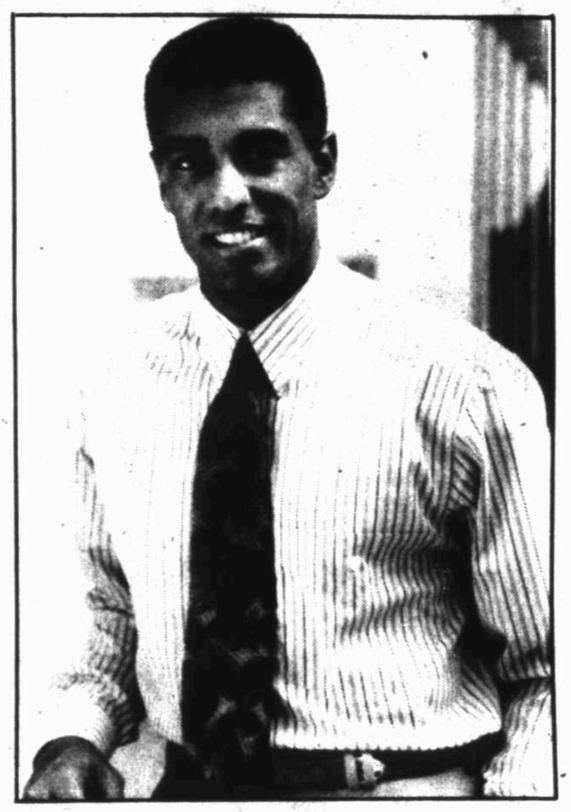

Ties stay wide and bright this season. And to accommodate the width, jacket lapels stretch to near extremes. But businessmen should not be tempted by the seductively colorful ties, especially if he is in a "life issue" business such as investment banking or insurance.

A brown polyester/cotton microfiber duffle coat, wool/Lycra chenille abstract floral roll-neck pullover, multi-color wool plaid three-button blazer and taupe wool/rayon triple-pleated pants are fall dressing options from the Falke Group.

Golfers may feel like they have scored a hole-in-one with this khaki/multi-color cotton sweater and cotton corduroy shirt worn underneath by Hathaway.

Men show individuality in dressing

Associated Press

What's new in men's fashions for the fall season? As usual, it depends on who you ask, but there seems to be agreement on color choice and comfortable fabrics.

According to a Liz Claiborne representative, "Fall is defined by a dynamic combination of texture, tone and well tailored pieces."

Another fashion observer says fall's best looks reflect an earthier way of dressing, combined with European savior-faire, but when asked for the rule of thumb for the season, replies: "There isn't one — but look for checks, softness and more jeweled tones."

Designer Marcos Ergas agrees. He believes men have begun to express a desire for more individuality in dressing.

"Fabrics, innovation and colors have all been discovered by men," Ergas says. "As life gets busier, men are looking for clothes which reflect a modern sense of style, which hinges on pure, understated sophistication."

In fall colors, Ergas is enthusiastic about gray, declaring "charcoal will never look drab again. Today's version is heathered tones which will awaken any men's wardrobe creating an utterly sophisticated statement."

"Functional, warm-looking, comfortable clothes are what men want right now coupled with the added sophistication of international touches in detailing," notes Charles Cantrell, brand development manager for J.C. Penney Co.

"They want fashion value for their dollar and comfort in their closet. It is a simple concept — comfortable clothes just make you feel good."

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Something new isn't always better than something old. With bottles that look as if they belong on your grandparents' dressing table, France's oldest parfumeur is entering the U.S. market with scents it developed nearly a century ago for men and women.

Starting this month, L.T. Piver, founded 217 years ago in France, will introduce to the U.S. market two women's fragrances, Floramye and Esperys, and two for men, Cuir de Russie and Un Parfum d'Aventure.

While the bottles and labels are duplicates of the originals designs, the fragrances have been reworked slightly with modern ingredients, said former San Fernando Valley resident Philippe LeClerc, chief executive officer of L.T. Piver Inc.

The women's line will include an eau de parfum spray and splash, body lotion, bath gel and perfumed soap. A 3.3-ounce bottle of Floramye costs $34; Esperys, $54. The men's line will include three sizes of eau de toilette spray and splash and a perfumed soap and standard-sizes bottles of fragrance cost $38.

To maintain the exclusivity of the fragrance, only 35 stores nationwide will carry the scents, including select I. Magnin and Bloomingdale's locations.

"It's an old-time feel with all the amenities of a new-time fragrance," LeClerc said.

Italian winter look is tailored, classical fashions

AP LaserPhoto

By Daniela Petroff

ROME (AP) - While most Italians are at the beach working on their tans, shop owners linger on in the cities, trying to get rid of the last of their summer merchandise to make room for fall-winter fashion in September.

It has not been a great season for the "made in Italy" label. The Gulf crisis, a recession in the United States and a weak dollar abroad, as well as a shifting of fashion focus from Milan to Paris, has left stores full of unsold clothes and designers wary of innovative styles.

The inspiration is the 1960s with its neat suits, pretty A-line dresses, loose swing coats, and the all-purpose trench coat.

However, the look has been shortened and tightened to give it 1990s life, a direct result of the Gianni Versace above-the-thigh microskirt, which rocked the fashion world several seasons ago, and the body-clinging styles which went with it.

The basic winter silhouette starts with a second-skin catsuit or leggings onto which designers put everything from a miniskirt or short shorts to a classic blazer or long sweater.

To go with the leggy look, the most popular revival item is the thigh boot, which comes either in shiny patent leather or suede and is often cuffed or embroidered at the top.

WHILE DERRIERE-HUGGING styles are out, sexy front views are in. The fall-winter collections abound with plunging necklines and brassiere tops, as well as strategic slits in evening gowns.

Hemlines still tend to shun the knee, although loose A-line dresses or wide skating skirts make thigh-baring more wholesome.

The bright side of the new winter look comes in the color scheme, a palette of lively shades ranging from every hue of pink to flourescent green and yellow, to electric blue and fiery orange.

Women might have a hard time adjusting to such glowing fashion, but after over a decade of drab browns and grays it might be just the right antidote to the present fashion funk.

Black and white in blocks or checks is another winter favorite taken right out of the 1960s fashion book.

The favorite "fabric" is patent leather, used not only for shoes and boots, but jackets and even dresses. Wool jersey makes a big comeback, and black chiffon is de rigeur for evening. Zippers everywhere replace the multiplicity of buttons used in the past several seasons.

Bouffant hairstyles, peroxide bleaching, and obvious makeup are further signs that current fashion is looking back 30 years for inspiration.

AS ITALIAN ready-to-wear style created in Milan in the 1970s struggles to keep its autonomy from Paris — which threatens to become the fashion capital of a united Europe in 1992 — two names and two schools of dress emerge as leaders of the Moda Milanese: sexy flamboyant Gianni Versace and boyish conservative Giorgio Armani.

Versace approaches winter fashion with bold colors, thigh-high boots, micro hemlines and second-skin catsuits in Byzantine prints worthy of the showiest of his Hollywood clients.

At the other end of the fashion spectrum, Armani offers the epitome of Milan elegance in pretty pastel-colored suits with short skirts peering out under long soft jackets, princess-line coats and tie striped sequined evening jackets. Underneath the jacket is nothing but a strategically placed open ascot in matching fabric.

FOLLOWING ARE some tips of where to look for what in the best of the "made in Italy" label:

■ Armani. There is no one else who can make a prettier, softer suit in mouth-watering fruit shades.

■ Biagiotti. They don't call her "queen of cashmere" for nothing — this time in plaids and tartans.

■ Fendi. Radical poor furs where fur and fabric mingle, so only the wearer knows for sure.

■ Ferre. Extravagant outerwear — a red patent leather trench coat or feather parka.

■ Ferragamo. Classical and yet sexy, with cut-out necklines on otherwise conservative styles.

■ Gucci. All that was good in traditional 1960s sportswear and the welcome return of the bamboo-handled purse.

■ Krizia. The best for the basic black cocktail hour and debutante dancing in tapestry fabric mini-ballgowns.

■ Missoni. The king of the knitting needles strikes again, this season in big cozy sweaters in naive woodscape prints.

■ Moschino. For those who don't take themselves or fashion too seriously. How about a fringed witch's cape perfect for Halloween and every winter night thereafter?

■ Versace. Hollywood couldn't do without his jewel-encrusted mini A-line dresses and his hand-painted catsuits.

Paris offers creative hodge-podge

By Suzy Patterson

PARIS (AP) - Forget the era when fashion-watchers doted on Paris for sartorial diktats. The bad old days of fashion fascism are over.

But ideas are still around in profusion. The Paris style scene for the '90s looks like a cheerful hodge-podge labeled "creativity."

Sometimes the strained results seen on runways look just like gimcrack gimmickry. At other times coordinated silhouettes or startling separates really do look like hot items ready to take off.

But some shoppers would appreciate suggestions of how to choose when it comes to forking over $1,000 or so for a little number from the "capital of fashion."

What's a girl to do?

Look in the mirror and choose your style. Some winning or losing ideas from the latest luxury ready-to-wear, depending on your mood and where you live:

Prefacing Chanel, in his own collection, Karl Lagerfeld put a whole raft of Goldfinger models into slinky gold lycra. Pussy Galore might have applauded the bodysuits worn with their chunky jewelry.

But Coco Chanel might have fainted dead away at this season's offerings by Lagerfeld for that venerable old house. He draped the Lagerfeld-Goldfinger girl with heavy, chained bracelets and dangling chain belts.

He also brought out nymphets in new jeans-at-Chanel denim styles which looked uncomfortably too street-wise to merit the high prices charged here, well into the thousands.

However, Chanel also offers beautifully wearable blouses and crafted, fitted jackets.

Emanuel Ungaro drops many hemlines (though not all), a guidepost to the future. He also keeps up his penchant for colorful fabric mixes in both his ready-to-wear and couture collections for the fall.

Yves Saint Laurent, remaining a leader, is showing several lengths, apparently going with what his clients want. His roller-coaster show of luxury ready-to-wear for next winter emphasized that really anything goes — from sexy numbers with daring decolletes to the most attractive little Scottish lassies in their kilts.

Both Saint Laurent and Philip Waghorne at Nina Ricci opt for tartan revivals, and anybody who loves the Highlands look will love this stuff for winter. As shown by clever designers, it comes out in pretty new and soft fabrics, sometimes in vibrant jewel colors.

Look to Claude Montana for truly modern tailoring. This whiz (who also designs haute couture for Lanvin) nearly always gets it right in his architectural silhouettes, this time with zig-zag touches of asymmetry.

Montana's trapeze coats and jackets are still big winners for chic, especially in fabulous shades of California turquoise or mandarin orange over long legs displayed in contrasting tights and bootees.

AP LaserPhoto

The Scottish look by Yves Saint Laurent is a cartridge-ruffled plaid, topped with a quilted silk cape.

His striped tights and amusingly-draped handkerchief skirts should be popular with those who want to go to the disco looking like Jane Avril.

The only thing most designers agree on these days is that the hulking power shoulder is out. Even Saint Laurent has softened up his suits considerably. Alternatives to man-tailored or notched collars now include cowl, funnel, shawl or jewel-neckline collars.

As Japanese designers are tripping lightly into the vein of truly Western-style clothes (as done so nicely by Hanae Mori), the heavily-layered and folded clothes they once advocated are mostly out.

Even Japanese Rei Kawakubo at Comme des Garcons has gone the way of all fashions with her normal-looking suits and puff-skirted, painted ball gowns.

She also offers plastic-piped numbers harking back to the 1960s. This is a little trend to watch, with the return of Andre Courreges to the fashion scene and a yearning for the heyday of Jackie Kennedy and Audrey Hepburn.

Women's fashions this season show diversity

Associated Press

Some picks for women from the marketplace this fall:

■ Outsized shirts worn with body-hugging leggings or short skirts, done up with Parisian flavor, at Express. The stores also have jackets of all sorts — dark, rich color blocks or the ubiquitous houndstooth checks — unconventionally paired with sarongs or miniskirts in floral prints.

■ A two-toned blazer of herringbone and black wool flannel, paired with side-zip shorts, in the Georges Marciano Boutiques.

Fashion is 'sew' easy

Associated Press

The season's signature looks — the miniskirted suit, the short topper coat, the shaped dress — are represented in patterns for women who sew.

Detailed and curved seaming on a shawl-collared raglan jacket from McCall's (5638) tops an asymmetrical knee-length skirt that drapes and buttons over one hip. A tapered blouse and soft pants pegged with darts at the ankles also are included with this suit pattern.

A coat offered by McCalls (5610) is an easy-going, oversized kimono that's finished without a lining. It has a shaped hem, welt pockets, and asymmetic front opening. It can be done up with or without buttons and with a choice of hood, scarf and shirt-band neckline.

Pattern companies say that quality is a stronger motivator than cost among women who sew. The sewer can pick good fabrics, pair them with patterns of her choice, then properly fit garments as she makes them, points out Cindy Rose, Vogue Patterns' fashion director. "Quality of fabric is only the beginning."

Fall fashion flavored by Highland flair

By Karin Davies

LONDON (AP) — Britain's big fashion exports this autumn are its tartans and tweeds. They sparkle and shine, are beaded and embroidered, and stretch for form-fitting styles.

Oscar de la Renta did a shimmering evening skirt with a fuchsia-and-black tartan, topped with a short black velvet jacket. He used a bigger and bolder tartan for a blanket-fringed coat that clung at the bodice and waist and flared at the hips.

Yves Saint Laurent applied his elegant touch to a kilt. Valentino used a red-and-black window-box plaid for a striking bell-shaped suit.

And in London, Catherine Walker's Chelsea Design Co. is doing tartans embellished with embroidery and jet beads and wrapping them all up in fringed shawls. Emerald green, burgundy and wine are her favored colors.

But even the traditional looks have a twist.

The fabrics of Scottish kilts and 1960s back-to-school wear have been updated with "a new-wave weave," according to the fashion bible, British Vogue.

"For seasons, designers from Vivienne Westwood to Oscar de la Renta have shown tartan. Yet, in spite of this never-ending Highland fling, tartan is going to be haute and hot this winter," said Elle magazine.

They're woven as silks, satins and wools; beaded and embroidered. Fun and flashy tartans and tweeds are worn everywhere from the office to a glamorous fete.

The source of many of the inspired fabrics is Linton Tweeds of Scotland. The mill, with a workforce of 50 and an annual turnover of 2.5 million pounds (about $4.2 million), recently received Queen Elizabeth II's award as exporter of the year for 1990.

While the woollen industry overall is depressed, Linton has flourished by working with designers and developing new blended fibers, says Robert Irvine, design sales director.

"We get quite a conglomeration of ideas," Irvine says.

In addition to changing colors and patterns with the season, the mill updates the yarns it uses to achieve new looks. It is a blending of traditional textiles with technology, he says.

"It's fantasy," he says of the new fabrics. "The French call it fantasy and so do we."

Linton has worked with Chanel for 50 years, and Lagerfeld regularly brings his sketchbook of ideas to the mill for execution, Irvine says.

"Chanel thinks the Lycra makes it easier to work with," Irvine says.

With the additional stretch, wools have taken on new shapes. No longer are designers restricted to simply taking a tuck or adding pleat or slashing a skirt to make it work. With the new woolens, they can make it cling.

Chanel's fall fashion parade unveiled a dazzling tweed, which Irvine says was achieved by shooting a nylon thread through the wool to make it glisten.

Looking ahead to the fall collections for 1993, Irvine says the French will be featuring more somber colors, while American designers will stick with flashier hues.

School clothes are 'trendy' basics

By Trish Donnally
N.Y. Times News Service

As kids stream back to school this fall, don't be surprised to see many of them in classic clothes.

Credit the teens on the hit TV series "Beverly Hills, 90210," or more precisely, their costume designer, Dianne Kennedy, with inspiring the trend.

"I don't use fad clothing at all. I don't use overalls, because they're unflattering on camera and they remind me of gangs," Kennedy says.

"I don't use anything really identifiable."

This means no Pucci prints, long flowered dresses or anything else that looks late-'60s. "If the show goes into reruns, it would be outdated."

What she does use are mix-and-match basics. Jeans, T-shirts, long jackets, cowboy boots and small, delicate earrings are staples.

"We use a lot of jeans. We use 501 Levis, and then we taper the leg on it. Just about everybody wears 501 Levis, except Luke Perry."

He wears unaltered Guess jeans with vintage '50s-style shirts.

Kennedy uses colors from pale pastels to hot pink. "Basic doesn't mean it has to be dull," she says.

"SO MANY teenagers dress like fashion victims that we really don't want that look on the show. We want them to look great. We've found staying with basics helps," says Kennedy.

"It's really a lesson for everybody. I remember when I was growing up, my mother used to preach that into my head. But like every teenager, I fought her. Of course, she was right."

Not every character on "Beverly Hills, 90210" is a classic-clothing clone.

"Brian Green, who plays David, is the geek. He's the deejay of the school. We dress him with humor and have a lot of fun with him.

"He does wear a lot of clothing that has a rapper look." He's the most avant-garde character in the cast.

For kids who prefer avant-garde clothes, choices abound. Watch for T-shirts that change colors, long or short overalls, leggings and sheer fabrics.

Among the best-selling items in children's wear this season are Generra's Hypercolor clothes. The dye in these T-shirts, tank tops, shorts and jeans changes color depending on body temperature and the environment.

For example, a teal garment might change to pink or green, green to pink or yellow, purple to pink or magenta. Some shades simply turn to white.

"YOU CAN literally put your hand on it and watch it change in 10 to 15 seconds," says Macy's vice president Kurt Buchholz. Skitzo Color by Fast Clothes is another heat-sensitive collection that has just hit the shelves.

"We're looking at light-sensitive T-shirts going forward," says Buchholz. These will react when they contact ultraviolet light.

The premiere fall collection called Barbie for Girls includes cheerleader-style skating skirts, cardigans, leggings and T-shirts, and a line of metallic-trimmed dresses.

"It's the essence of Barbie, lots of pink, glitter, lace and fun Barbie graphics," says Donna Gibbs, Mattel's director of media relations. Don't worry. These are clothes designed for little girls — no Barbie glamour gowns.

A new line of clothing for boys and girls is Crayola Kids, which has colors straight from the crayon box. Dandelion, cerulean, fuchsia and magenta are among the shades used.

In addition to clothes, the Crayola Kids collection includes purses, backpacks, bracelets and socks. It's available through the Spiegel catalog.

Despite what works on television, overalls, short or long, are so popular, says Buchholz, they're almost a unisex uniform. The strongest fall colors are honey and olive.

Printed denim, especially small florals against a black or slate background, is popular among girls ages 4 to 14.

SHORTS ARE an important item for most sizes, says Buchholz. "Slouch shorts," which are knee-length and baggy, are a big hit. Five-pocket "dirty-dancing" shorts, which are to-the-knee and worn rolled up, are trendy, too.

Printed leggings paired with oversized sweaters or novelty tops are a prevalent fall look for girls, especially in plaid, geometric or floral patterns. Stirrup pants will often be worn by teenage girls with black leather motorcycle jackets.

Sheer fabrics such as printed chiffons are used for trim on jackets, as sleeves on blouses, or as wispy, move-with-the-wind, lined skirts.

Plaid is one of the strongest trends for fall regardless of age or sex.

Plaid hair bows and handbags are among the styles in store. Watch for tartan tights, checked collars and cuffs, and plaid baseball caps, too.

The tartan trend spans the sexes. Boys will find flannel plaid pants or khaki twill pants with plaid at the cuffs. Talbots lines kids' rain slickers with plaid flannel.

ALSO SUGGESTING traditional togs is Storybook Heirlooms, a California mail-order company. This catalog has timeless clothes for boys and girls from Jessica McClintock, Biscotti, and Plum Pudding, among others.

"We're trying to kind of turn back time a little bit. A lot of us are kind of frustrated with all the trendy things in our society," says Jerry Machado, president and founder of Storybook Heirlooms.

"It's kind of like an anti-Madonna thing. A lot of our customers are requesting things that remind them of when they were children."

Jeans are still mainstay fashions for youngsters. The Ruffle Back Rider and Snap Back Rider by Lee are pale blue with a slight violet tint.

For back-to-school wear students still want denim

Associated Press

Form-fitting leggings or tights in brilliant colors and prints, topped by T-shirts, tunics and even dresses are this season's trends for girls.

But denims are still a mainstay for youngsters, done up in novel ways and colors.

Paisleys, plaids, polka dots, bell bottoms, lace knickers and stirrups are featured in a new line of leggings for young girls from HUE, the same company that markets trendsetting legwear to women. These can be layered with lace-up sweat socks or lace crochet anklets in colors. The leggings or tights sometimes are worn as pants and can be paired with over-sized sweaters, jackets, big shirts, or under short skirts, jumpers and dresses. They come in one size for girls from 5 through 12.

Dressy, sophisticated variations are the Panne line from Baryshnikov for Kids, featuring footless tank unitards, high-waisted stirrup tights, footless tights and three-quarter sleeve tops in black stretch velvet. Bright prints in florals and abstracts also are featured in the Baryshnikov line, as they are in the Marika Kids' Fitness Apparel collections.

Prints also have found their way into the denim scene, with animals, cars, and bows on baggy pants and bib overalls from OshKosh B'Gosh. The line features coordinating tops and shirts for these as well as plain and plaid classics for both boys and girls.

Classic jeans with subtle variations — such as a light blue denim with a violet cast — are featured in the Lee Kids Collections. The company assembled a student board of fourth graders to help them identify likely preferences, and found that girls like the violet tinted blue, called original indigo, in the Ruffle Back Rider and Snap Back Rider, both with ankle detailing. Boys' preferences were for non-restricting comfort, like the baggy Jock Jean with its sweat pant cut, available in black ice stripe, indigo ice and grafitti ice print, on acid indigo.

"I like the baggy black ones because I can wear them after school when my brother and I play catch out back and my mom doesn't make me change my clothes," says Bobby Smith, 9, one of the board members.

Fashionable purses are miniatures

By Suzy Patterson

PARIS (AP) — A new wave of chic handbags is sweeping this city.

"Hand" is the clue. They have little to do with those roomy shoulder-bags, almost overnight-bag size, which so many of us are used to wearing.

It was a pleasant surprise a couple of seasons ago when fashionable mannequins at Christian Lacroix came tripping out with the most adorable hand-held bags.

In their shapes of heart, oval, feedbag and other clever outlines, nailheaded or studded with metal motifs, the bags and clutches became fashion items for the cognoscenti.

Now it seems that everybody is hopping on the smaller, shapely and/or hand-held bagwagon. They are also adding color to the bag-wardrobe. Fashionable Princess Diana goes for colorful, geometric envelope clutches.

Hermes has staged a comeback of the so-called Kelly bag. This trapezoid shape fastened with a couple of leather straps, hand-held, was so named because it was a favorite of Grace Kelly.

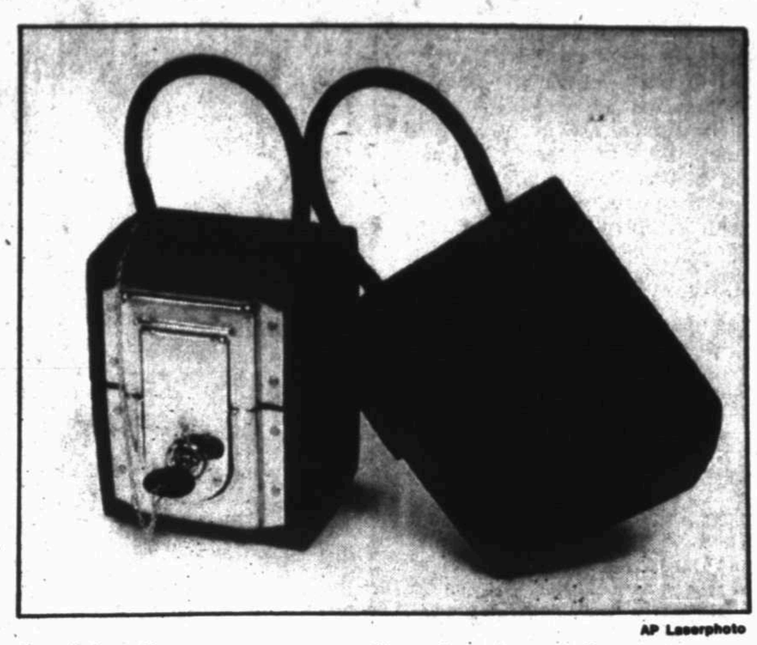

Little "pop" bags in lunch box shapes, purses with cane or bamboo handles dangling from the arm, also tend to add to this '60s revival.

They reinforce the current fashion fad harking back to the starring years of Jackie Kennedy and Audrey Hepburn.

BUT HERMES is adding a shoulder strap option to the "Kelly" for today's wearer.

Chanel's newest bags (still usually quilted) are tiny and very, very cute. They look hardly big enough to hold a key, much less mad money.

But that doesn't mean women are condemned to itty-bitty fashion pieces, now that travelers and careerists are used to stuffing everything but the kitchen sink into their totes.

AP Laserphoto

Small handbags are conversation pieces as well as accessories. These two goatskin boxes, including one fitted out like a miniature safe, are from La Bagagerie.

Even at Chanel, customers are still buying larger bags. On a recent sale day, "invited" clients were paying around 5,000 francs (upwards of $800), or about 40 percent less than usual, for fairly roomy quilted bags with the crossed "C" logo.

Many designers and manufacturers are showing shoulder or hand-held bags large enough for practicality, and the search for novelty also means inventive use of color.

At Louis Vuitton, they're branching out from the familiar brown-beige monogram style into bright colors via a striated leather called "epi," a Vuitton texture revived from the 1920s.

Vuitton's new bags go several ways, in sack or feedbag shapes, with some long straps, some short handles. The ominipresent LV initial does pop up, a feature that seems to be essential to label-conscious fans like the Japanese.

Both color and sobriety feature in bags by Yves Saint Laurent. Arabesques and saddle-stitched welt-seamed bags come in lovely forms to carry on the shoulder, in sizes large enough to contain more than a penny and a lipstick.

THE NEWEST looks are in a nail-studded "Y" (for status-symbol lovers) or Oriental arabesques in colorful models, some in fake lizard. Prices here are in the $300-500 category, considered reasonable for a big-name item.

Like her mentor Saint Laurent, Paloma Picasso also goes in for fancy studding on her sober but beautifully-finished handbags, in buttery-smooth leather, or satins for evening.

Many Picasso models have chain shoulder straps. And as she hires the best artisans to make her goods (and pays for expensive advertising), her bags do not come cheap. They are in the $500-800 category, right up there with Hermes.

Frederic Castet offers several sizes and shapes of smaller bags in brilliant new shades of ruby, emerald, and tobacco brown ostrich skin, an ecologically acceptable leather with a new-looking grain.

Well down the price scale, La Bagagerie sells finely crafted bags for all seasons. They have several shops in Paris, a few in the Far East and two in New York City.

Those who want to pay less for high quality look to La Bagagerie, whose prices start in the $40 price range but are usually about $140 or so for medium-sized, high-quality leather bags.

Their main Left Bank Paris shop is an Ali Baba's cave of great handbag models in all sizes.

"We don't think women are ready to give up their big bags yet," says spokeswoman Jacqueline LeRoy, who admits that as a working woman she does heft around everything she can in her trendy Bagagerie carryall.

BESIDES VERY practical designs with several thief-proof zips, the Bagagerie has come up with some funny ideas. A whole range of box-like bags sport metal doors and padlocks to become veritable little "safes."

Other shapes surface in soft suedes or geometric calfskin — some of the newest and sleekest in hot bicolors for winter or summer.

The Bagagerie shapes and details are designed by a father-son team named Marchaix, who believe in keeping their eye on not just one trend, but all needs for carrying women's (and to a lesser degree men's) essentials and nonessentials.

For those of us who lack a bodyguard, it's best to keep at least one practical shoulder or sling-bag to hug near the waist to discourage potential bag-snatchers.

Experts: 'The hairdo' is back in fashion

Associated Press

Perhaps the drip-dry permanents got too casual, or maybe it was just time for a change. Whatever the reason, the hairdo is back, say stylists.

The new styles are reminiscent of the full-bodied 1960s look, but without the elaborate teasing and sticky lacquering of sprays, says Younghee Kim, art director of the new Vidal Sassoon Salon in New York City.

Kim says his creative staff is using a new cutting technique that leaves more space inside the shape and helps boost height at the crown. The styles must move and swing and have a naturally full look, he says. "Look for more height created by the construction of the cut, unique perm techniques and color illusion."

It's part of the back-to-glamour trend in fashion, says Christopher Downs, a hairdresser who serves as consultant to Alberto-Culver, the hair products company. "It's still touchable hair, but highly polished and styled," he says. "Hair 'dressing' is definitely back for the '90s."

Dramatic, longer hair with body and anything from waves to ringlets will give hairdos more definite form, says Downs. The styles will be more polished, with soft textures. Women will be pulling their steam rollers and curling irons out of storage and using light sprays and conditioners.

He recommends a fresh trim every four to six weeks, along with conditioning products. A hot oil treatment for hair that has been damaged by summer sun is a good idea, too.

Kim says the Sassoon stylists are using these techniques to create soft volume:

- Blow dry until hair is almost dry. Then lift small sections away from the head and use hairspray inside the cut. Finish blow drying, then spray all over in a circular motion, taking care not to focus spray in one place.
- While diffusing textured or curly hair, work with the palm or fingertips to gently manipulate roots in a circular motion. Why dry, spray twice.
- For glamorous upswept hairdos, spray the comb and move it through style hair to smooth down stray ends.

Sassoon has introduced a new hairspray product, AirSpray, which uses a natural air pump.

Alberto is marketing its Moisturizing Mousse and Moisturizing Spray Gel to build hold and shape into the hairdo.

New York shop to offer French chic

By Suzy Patterson

PARIS (AP) — Why do Frenchwomen have such an aura of chic? The little scarf, the amusing color combinations, the "je ne sais quoi" that gives them style.

Find out all, and shop as the Frenchwomen do, at the Galeries Lafayette store, Manhattan edition. It opens at New York's tourist-magnetic Trump Tower at 57th Street and Fifth Avenue (occupying the former site of Bonwit Teller) toward the end of September.

"We're even training salespersons in the ways Frenchwomen put their outfits together," says the Galeries Lafayette's fashion director for New York, Marianne Millies-Lacroix, returning from a stateside reconnaissance tour.

The Galeries Lafayette, France's premier department store, founded from a hole-in-the-wall selling feathers in 1895, now has 20 branches in Europe and the Far East.

It is considered second only to Harrods in worldwide prestige and sales.

They are aiming high: To bring a new kind of French-style upmarket fashion shopping for women to America.

It takes nerve to wade in with a huge investment just now, as retailers all over the United States and Europe are wringing their hands during the recession.

"We will concentrate on women's fashion and accessories to sell on five floors in New York," says Mme. Millies-Lacroix.

UNDER ITS FAMED Belle Epoque dome, the Paris-based Galeries Lafayette contains a huge space selling every kind of dry goods, including home furnishings. But fashion has proved its forte.

Mme. Millies-Lacroix explains that the Galeries searched for new angles. "We had to find something original," she says.

She says the Galeries Lafayette has adopted a dynamic merchandising strategy to offer something with Parisian cachet, yet different from French labels offered at Bergdorf Goodman, Bloomingdale's and Saks.

"We're looking for an image of true mode, or fashion," says Mme. Millies-Lacroix. "That means we'll eliminate all I call 'basic,' such as regulation T-shirts, or 'classico,' meaning simply a man-tailored jacket for a woman's suit."

The clothes will have a little something extra, she says, perhaps a longer, more fitted jacket, a neckline with a more original shape than just notched lapels.

Designers showcased in the new Galeries will include Angelo Tarlazzi, Jean-Charles de Castelbajac, and Chantal Thomass.

All are less well-known by Americans than, say, Yves Saint Laurent. But Saint Laurent will be represented by his Variations line, less expensive than his luxury ready-to-wear label, Rive Gauche, with its own boutique in New York for some 20 years now.

CHANEL WILL be in the Galeries Lafayette in cosmetics and perfumes only.

Some new names in the Galeries roster of avant-garde designers will include Claude Pierlot, Corinne Cobson, Michel Klein and Isabelle Camard.

Georges Meyer, chairman and CEO of Galeries Lafayette, says that he is thrilled to have found the ideal retail outlet location in New York.

"We can bring the point of view of the streets of Paris to New York," he says.

But other countries will be represented as well, according to Mme. Millies-Lacroix. She cites clothes created by designer/manufacturers such as Max Mara of Italy or the Laurel label from Germany.

"We will also be marketing clothes made in the U.S.A. — American-manufactured clothes will be chosen by Galeries Lafayette and sold under our exclusive label," she says.

The Galeries Lafayette managers cross their fingers. But Mme. Millies-Lacroix and her staff of buyers hope the New York store will purvey total French chic to Americans.

"I FEEL American women are geared to thinking everything should match," says Mme. Millies-Lacroix. "They do not feel sure of themselves unless everything goes together perfectly.

"Frenchwomen like to be a bit more daring, combine non-allied shades and even shapes for an individual look. They throw a big-name jacket in with a skirt by an unknown, and it's fine." she says.

Separates, right? "Exactly," says Mme. Millies-Lacroix.

Politics, fashion make impression

By Francine Parnes

DENVER (AP) — For Natalie Meyer, winning the role means dressing the part. "The first impression is your last," says Meyer, Colorado's thrice-elected secretary of state. "And that depends a whole lot on fashion."

In politics, she explains, "You have to get 51 percent of the vote, and to do that you have to be recognized. "Most successful elected officials — particularly women — have presence. When they walk into a room people know they're there. And a whole lot of having presence depends on how you look. So how I look is very important to me."

It would be hard to miss the commanding image of this statuesque 61-year old, who stands out anywhere at 5 feet 11 inches with soft silver hair, her head held high. Typically turned out in a Diane Freis calf-length multicolor silk floral dress, Meyer is not likely to be mistaken for a wallflower. But even with her height, the effect isn't automatic.

"Taller women have a unique challenge. It's easier to have presence if you're tall, but you have to be very careful. For example, we have real difficulty wearing very short skirts. I have as much leg as some short women have body. If you're trying to communicate or work on a deal and you're showing four inches of leg from the knee up, men are unsure if you're there to proposition them or conduct a business deal."

FOR THAT REASON you won't find any miniskirts in Meyer's closet. "Designers need to recognize there's a whole group of professional women who can't buy their suits because they're offering wonderful jackets with skirts that are way too short."

Most designers haven't recognized that the American woman is getting taller, says Meyer. "The tall women shops simply make the clothes longer but wider. And there's nothing more uncomfortable than a short-waisted dress."

Plunging necklines likewise rate a no-no for their come-hither effect. "If you're attempting to sell your body, that's what you wear," she says with a chuckle. "But I'm attempting to sell my whole self — not my body — to give a message. If you confuse that message in any way due to a low-cut blouse, the person you're attempting to persuade hasn't heard your message."

If you really want to get across, remove your glasses, says Meyer. "I'm very much an eye person. When I'm giving a speech I inevitably take off my glasses. Successful women have developed confidence to look directly at the person they're talking to. It's the ability to have very good eye contact, which is important when you're trying to sell yourself.

"IN POLITICS you have to sell yourself before your ideas are purchased. I have to convince people I'm worth buying, worth voting for. That presence is necessary to get your foot in the door."

A former Colorado teacher and principal who fell in love with grassroots politics, Meyer thrives in her role as a politician. In 1982, her 20 years of political management experience helped her win election as secretary of state, and she has been twice re-elected.

Even if miniskirts and revealing necklines get a thumbs-down, Meyer says "Vive la difference" on the subject of the sexes. Floppy bowties and mannish suits just aren't her speed. "As women have matured in the professional field, they've come way past the time when they felt they had to dress to replicate men — in suits with high-necked, stiff, starched shirts.

"IF OUR fashion looks exactly the same as a man's, it says we don't have anything additional to offer the workplace. And that's not true. There's plenty of room for both men and women in the workplace. Women tend to be consensus workers, tend to work for win-win situations instead of confrontational situations. They bring a different element of caring, maybe from the role of raising children.

"If you dress exactly like a man, your body language says upfront, 'I'm not sure who I am. I'm trying to be you.' "

Meyer strives to instill a positive self-image in her three adult daughters. "That helps them learn how to put themselves together in the morning to present themselves to the world."

WOMEN HAVE many more elements of their attire to consider to make a favorable impression, she says. "Men don't have to think about earrings or whether they're wearing a suit or dress. Women spend longer getting ready. If you don't, you don't feel comfortable through the day. If you don't have the full picture, somewhere along the line you've glitched your presence."

What to do? "Be yourself but be sure you're proper and feminine."

For Meyer, being herself means developing her own personal style. She acknowledges that she's "too big to wear a lot of frillies and ruffles," but can wear bright, cheerful, colorful dresses. "And some are pretty dramatic."

Creating your own personal style means being pragmatic. Like paring away non-essentials. "I've done away totally with a purse, and my briefcase serves as my bag," says Meyer, who's often on the run. "I don't want to have a handbag, briefcase and carry-on bag. Then you can't navigate your way through the airport, and by the time you get on the plane, you can't move either arm. And rest assured, nobody will ever stop to ask if your briefcase matches your clothes."

Similarly, Meyer gives high heels the boot. "They're too hard on the feet when walking between appointments." She relies on shoes with comfortable low heels. Her shoe of choice is a "very standard" red Ferragamo flat with a bow.

"I have wonderful heels gathering dust in my closet," she admits. "I've given up on that portion of being as well dressed as I could be, just for the sake of comfort."

EVER THE pragmatist, when packing for a trip Meyer makes sure all her clothes match black, navy or red shoes. The favorite color of this fiercely flamboyant official is red. "Red and navy are really power clothes. They're dramatic, show you have enough self-confidence to to wear dramatic clothes. If you're very timid about what you wear, it says something about yourself.

"What I want to convey is this: I'm a person used to letting the buck stop here, calling the bottom line. And that's what people want in their politicians. One who can make decisions. You set fashion by example."

Suit up in style with color, texture

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Once women proved they didn't have to look like a man to think like a professional, they bagged the business suit and took up with dresses and separates.

Even Norma Kamali's sleek dark pants suits with fedoras and oxfords look sexy.

But if you're buying only one suit this fall, the color to have is red or fuschia, says LaVelle Olexa, senior VP of fashion merchandising at Lord & Taylor. Add insurance and make it plaid. "A traditional tartan or newly colored in fuschia and green," she suggests.

Texture is tremendously important, too, according to Peggy Kaufman, senior vice president at Ann Taylor. "Tartans, tweeds, boucles — they all have a 3-D look and feel."

Jackets and skirts, sold as a unit or as matching separates, offer variety. Many of the jackets are long and lean, but other styles range from traditional blazers to peplums and couture-inspired cardigans with the requisite gold buttons and contrast binding.

Skirts can be skinny, pleated or flared; long or short. But style and length must be in proportion to the jacket.

Length depends on style.

"A pleated skirt that grazes the knee can take a longer, bigger jacket," Kaufman says. "On the other hand, a longer flared skirt — say, mid-calf — takes a shorter jacket. It's a question of balance. A customer must never feel that the outfit is wearing her."

For more mileage, try separates.

"The concept of separates is to create versatility," says David Tharp, a vice president at Brooks Brothers. "They work great, for instance, if you're a size 10 bottom and size 8 top."

The plaid suit wanders far afield of the traditional gray glen plaid of yore. Like, how about one in leather? Or houndstooth printed on suede? If that's a bit too avant garde, go for wool with details such as zippers and buttons for a here-and-now look.

Buttons are news, too. Look for them as a bonus on a nifty new suit or haunt flea markets and side street shops in search of some to update last year's buy.

Shoemakers reveal what's afoot for fall

Associated Press

Shoemakers are finding that comfort sells, and new lines are being specifically marketed with emphases on construction and fit.

While women have had the worst of foot discomfort from narrow, stilted shoes, men have had to contend with stiff classic shoes with hard soles, points out Dexter, a company which makes dress shoes with innards it says rivals those of sneakers. The shoes are made with soft, ventilated flexible insoles and anatomical heel cups over shock-absorbing footbeds bonded with an insulating sheet. Styles include wingtips, kiltie tassel slip-ons and cap toe shoes in soft leather.

Hand-making their classic bucs and nubuc Oxfords is what makes them comfortable, according to the Geo. E. Keith Company, manufacturers of Walk-Overs. The company now has a line of dress shoes — wingtips, kiltie loafers and cap toes — along with its buckskins, with uppers hand-welted onto the inner soles and left on the last for five days for stretching and shape retention.

Athletic-style liners also appear in dress shoes for women. Easy Spirit was one of the first companies to market these, and Naturalizer is offering its NaturalSport walking pumps with similar construction.

Walk-Overs and Rockport comfort lines are available for both men and women, and Johnston & Murphy have a similar line for men.
