Tax bill no one wanted awaits Reagan's hand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bill nobody wanted — a measure raising taxes by $98.3 billion over the next three years — is on its way to President Reagan after winning the support of a Congress that overcame election-year jitters.

The bill, which also includes $15.2 billion worth of social-spending cuts and up to 10 weeks' extra federal benefits for unemployed workers in every state, likely will be signed into law by Reagan during his two-week California vacation.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved the bill 52-47 Thursday night on a touch-and-go roll call whose outcome was in doubt until the last minute. Vice President George Bush was on hand in case his vote was needed to break a tie.

Nine Democrats, most of them lured by the extra unemployment benefits, joined 43 Republicans in backing the bill. Eleven Republicans and 36 Democrats opposed it.

In the House, where Democrats are in charge, the final margin was 226-207 — wider than had been expected. The measure drew support from 123 Democrats and 103 Republicans, but many of the conservative GOP members who are among the president's most consistent backers deserted him on the vote.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, of Texas' 21st Congressional District, who voted against the bill, said its passage "is directly attributable to the president's leadership abilities. I salute our president on his victory. Now let's get on with the job of reducing the growth in federal spending so we can achieve lasting economic stability through lower inflation, lower interest rates and increased employment."

The bill will double the federal cigarette tax to 16 cents a pack; triple the 1 percent tax on telephone service; require that 10 percent of most dividends and interest be withheld for taxes; reduce deductions for medical expenses and casualty losses; raise the 5 percent tax on air fares to 8 percent starting Sept. 1; toughen the "minimum tax" on high-income investors and, in an effort to catch some of the $98 billion in taxes that are evaded each year, require better reporting of income from tips, state tax refunds and investment income.

Although the measure leaves intact the across-the-board cut in personal tax rates that was enacted at Reagan's insistence last year, it would wipe out about one-third of the 1981 business tax reductions. The sale of corporate tax benefits through "leasing" arrangements would be repealed at the end of 1983.

See related stories, 5A

Most of the tax increases will take effect next Jan. 1.

After the House vote, Reagan praised those who voted for the bill. "This was a hard choice for many of them, especially in an election year," he said, adding that the vote "is an important milestone" in putting the economy back on course.

Bygones should be bygones, he said of those who voted against the bill. "Let's get on with the nation's business: an economic recovery that will mean more jobs and more opportunity for all our people."

Many Democrats viewed the tax increase as the first step away from Reagan's economic program, which they say has failed. "This bill will not save the nation, but it is a cold splash of economic reality," said Rep. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga.

County tax rate hike possible

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners may slide through a 4 percent hike in the county's tax rate without any public flak if the public turnout for the vote at 5 p.m. Monday matches the turnout for Thursday's public hearing.

Zilch. No one, other than reporters and a political candidate who was observing the scene, showed up for the hearing.

"No complaints," noted Commissioner Durward Wright. "What do you think about that?"

The Commissioners' Court on Monday will vote on increasing the tax rate from the "effective rate" of 17.30 cents per $100 valuation based on the fair-market values to 18.03 cents per $100 valuation to bring in revenue for the county's 1983 budget.

"We're going to set the rates on Monday," said Wright.

Commissioner Charlie Welch indicated he would vote against the proposed 1982 tax rate.

"I'm opposed to any tax increase," he said after County Judge Bill Ahders had adjourned the public hearing.

The proposed tax rate will bring in a projected $6.1 million toward operating the county government next year. Commissioners have budgeted $10.6 million in expenditures in 1983; an additional $4 million-plus is to be brought into the county's treasury by way of fees, fines and other revenue-generating sources.

The current budget is estimated at $8.8 million.

Frances Shuffield, county tax assessor-collector, said that the proposed tax rate would, for example, convert to $90.15 in taxes on a house valued at $50,000. Under the effective tax rate of 17.30 cents, the taxes on that same house would be $86.50, Ms. Shuffield said.

The 1981 tax rate was 34 cents per $100 valuation, but assessed property values then were based on the county's appraised values from the late 1950s. This year, the county is adopting the assessed values of the Midland County Appraisal District and those assessments are based on recent fair-market values and therefore are appreciably higher than the county's old values.

That same hypothetical $50,000 house, Ms. Shuffield noted, might have been on the county's rolls at an appraised $25,000.

"It might have been $20,000 or $10,000," she said. "We don't know."

Mrs. Shuffield noted that increases in taxes would be reflected in the tax-rate hike and, too, in the newly-adopted appraised values.

Long summer's journey

Taking a breather after completing his journey, Craig Jordan of Midland reflects on the 5,800 miles he biked across America this summer. The University of Texas at Austin law school student left El Paso May 22 and travelled through San Francisco, Seattle and Boston before returning to Midland by plane last week.

Reagan announces troops' Mideast role

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today he will send American troops to help evacuate PLO guerrillas from west Beirut. About 800 Marines are expected to play what the president called a "carefully limited noncombatant role."

"In no case will our troops stay longer than 30 days," the president said in a brief statement to reporters in the White House Rose Garden.

Reagan also said the American troops would be removed immediately if shot at.

The Pentagon has disclosed that a five-ship Navy amphibious group, with 1,800 Marines on board, is assembling off the Lebanese coast.

French and Italian troops are also scheduled to participate in the evacuation. The first American troops are not likely to land until four or five days after the operation begins, probably on Saturday.

The president praised the role of U.S. special Ambassador Philip C. Habib in negotiating the withdrawal agreement with the PLO, Israel, Lebanon and Syria.

"Phil never lost hope and, in the end, his spirit and determination carried the day," the president said.

Reagan said he expected the terms of the agreement "to be carried out in good faith and in accordance with the established timetable. Violations by any party would imperil the plan and bring new bloodshed."

The miles taught biker a lot

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

On May 22, 21-year-old Craig Jordan of Midland climbed on his bicycle at El Paso, faced northwestward, and began pedaling.

He didn't stop until 85 days had elapsed and 5,800 miles of America — stretching from El Paso to San Francisco to Seattle to Boston — lay behind him.

It was a bicycle trip of epic proportions, one in which he found the barriers of interpersonal relationships shattered and his awareness for the mile-by-mile topography of the nation heightened.

"Riding long distances on a bike is similar to a car — you're still caught in that go-down-the-road groove," Jordan explained, as he relaxed in his Midland home just prior to leaving for law school at The University of Texas at Austin. "On the other hand, when you're on a bicycle all the barriers fall. When you pull into a gas station on a bicycle, the reaction is not, 'Here's another car gonna pull in for gas'; the reaction is, 'Who is this guy and why is he riding a bike?' It breaks down the barriers between the people you meet. It's not nearly as impersonal — you're not an isolated tourist going through the country here. You're talking to people about something a little bit more than the weather."

THE IDEA FOR the ultra-marathon trek came to Jordan last fall when he was a senior at Austin College in Sherman. "Two guys that graduated the year before had done it that summer, and everyone was talking about them," he recalled. What ensued was a successful and enjoyable 30-mile trial run of their own.

"We thought we could do it all so we decided to give it a shot," he remembered.

Carrying only a sleeping bag, tent, tools, spare parts, water, food and personal items, the four adventurers found the going tough at first. Although averaging more than 88 miles a day throughout the journey, they made but 50 or 60 miles daily the first week as muscles ached and lungs heaved. But they biked themselves into shape as they made their way across the Southwest, camping at rest areas wherever they ended up at dusk.

And, like Woody Guthrie when he

Odessa policeman killed

ODESSA — An Odessa motorcycle policeman lost his life Thursday when a car in a funeral procession the officer was escorting suddenly pulled out of line and attempted to make a left turn in front of him.

Cpl. G.T. Toal, 36, died in Medical Center Hospital's intensive care unit at 6:35 p.m. He suffered massive head and internal injuries when a 1978 Ford Thunderbird driven by 20-year-old Tommy L. McAden of Odessa attempted a left turn onto Eisenhower Street from the 800 block of East 18th Street shortly before 3 p.m., according to police.

Toal, a two-year veteran of the Odessa Police Department and the father of two children, was thrown 77 feet from the point of impact. Both vehicles were eastbound on 18th Street at the time.

He had previously worked five years as a deputy sheriff in Jasper County, Mo. Arrangements are pending at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

McAden was ticketed for failure to yield the right-of-way to an emergency vehicle.

A similar accident killed Midland motorcycle officer B.E. Scoggins April 4, 1961. The Midland police force has since stopped using motorcycles.

Limited para-legal access ruled OK

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Federal Judge Lucius Bunton has ruled that the police department's newly drafted policy limiting para-legal access to federal prisoners housed in the city jail does not infringe on the prisoners' right to legal counsel.

He also ruled, however, that the city has 30 days to "enact and implement a reasonable fire safety plan" and that the city must permit federal detainees "reasonable access to telephones for the purpose of consulting with their counsel."

Bunton signed the five-page order Thursday in response to a suit filed June 25 by former police officer James McFadden and federal prisoner Lewis Eugene Gregg. Gregg was being held in the jail awaiting disposition of a parole violation appeal and has since been transferred to a federal prison.

McFadden was with the police force 16 years and resigned a year ago in a demotion dispute with Chief of Police Wayne Gideon. He has been publicly critical of Gideon's administration of the department and is now a para-legal for the law firm of Lynch, Chappell, Allday and Alsup, the firm which was handling Gregg's case.

The suit was filed after McFadden was denied access to Gregg June 16 on Gideon's orders. It alleged that Gideon's action was "directed primarily at" McFadden and was "being used to unlawfully interfere with his right to earn a living and be free of governmental interference in his chosen pro-

Correction

Due to a typographical error, a story in Thursday's Midland Reporter-Telegram contained an incorrect quote by C. Wallace Craig, a director with the Midland County Appraisal District, concerning the resignation of Virgil Jones Jr., chief appraiser of the district. Craig was quoted as saying: "with out thanks for good service."

The quote should have read: "with our thanks for good service."

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Supervisors take responsibility for death

HOUSTON (AP) — Supervisors of the Houston Police Department's narcotics division say they accept responsibility for a communications foul-up that cost a police officer her life.

"Needless to say, we feel a certain amount of negligence for what happened," Lt. Billy Ripley said Thursday.

Kathleen Schaefer, an undercover officer, was killed in a convenience store parking lot Wednesday night when she tried to help uniformed officers arrest two men suspected of dealing in drugs. Officials said one officer mistook Mrs. Schaefer for a drug suspect as she approached with her pistol drawn.

Assistant Chief B.K. Johnson said supervisors of the narcotics operation failed to alert D.A. Gott, who shot Mrs. Schaefer, and another uniformed officer that the woman might be at the scene and was a police officer.

Ripley said he and 13 other supervisors met late Wednesday to review department procedures in so-called "buy-busts" like the one Mrs. Schaefer, 34, had been involved in.

"The officer didn't have adequate briefing on the operation. He was not aware that a woman undercover officer was involved," said Larry Troutt, public information officer for the Houston Police Department. "It was a mistake."

One person was released after being questioned by police. The other, Bryan Scott Heuer, 24, was charged with possession of a controlled substance and jailed in lieu of $2,000 bond, the district attorney's office said.

Mrs. Schaefer, one of four female officers assigned to the narcotics division, was the first Houston policewoman to die in the line of duty and the fifth officer killed in Houston this year.

Flags flew at half staff at the downtown police headquarters and at City Hall. Fellow officers wore a black band of tape across their shields.

"It (the tape) has almost become part of the uniform," Troutt said.

Mrs. Schaefer and the three undercover officers had arranged Wednesday evening to buy 100 tablets of the barbiturate mandrex. After the drugs were purchased, uniformed officers moved in to help make the arrests.

Mrs. Schaefer, dressed in blue jeans and a blouse, jumped from the unmarked car and approached Gott, Troutt said.

"She had her gun drawn and the uniformed officer, unaware that she was involved, believed she was a suspect," Troutt said.

Capt. B.F. Adams said Gott told her to stop, but "she didn't understand that he was telling her to hold it" and ignored the order, Adams said.

Troutt said, "As she started to put it (the gun) back into the car, the uniformed officer apparently thought she was pointing it at him and that's when he fired."

A rescue team was sent by helicopter to the parking lot where Mrs. Schaefer lay bleeding, but medics could not save her. She died of a single bullet wound to the chest, said J.F. Ebdon of the Harris County Medical Examiner's office.

Gott and the other officers involved in the operation were reassigned to desk duty until investigations into the shooting are completed.

The shooting was being investigated by the homicide and internal affairs divisions and the civil rights division of the district attorney's office, Troutt said.

Drowning an almost perfect crime

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — No foul play was suspected when a University of Texas senior was found drowned in her apartment complex's swimming pool. Authorities, theorizing she tripped over a hose, ruled the death accidental.

But then came a confession from a man who says he killed that woman as well as the 11 Houston-area murder victims he already had claimed responsibility for, officials said.

"It would have been one of those perfect crimes," Travis County Medical Examiner Roberto Bayardo said of the drowning of Linda Tilley on Sept. 5, 1981. "There was no evidence."

After 28-year-old Coral Eugene Watts confessed Monday in Houston to killing Miss Tilley, Austin Homicide Lt. Robert Wisian closed the case.

"If we had found Watts the next day, we couldn't have proved murder," Wisian said.

Bayardo said he was sure the woman had tripped and fallen into the pool — until he learned of Watts' confession.

Bayardo found abrasions on Tilley's face and neck, but said such injuries were not inconsistent with an accidental drowning.

The alcohol level in her blood, which an autopsy showed to be more than twice the legal limit for driving, bolstered his conclusion that she simply stumbled and fell into the water, Bayardo added.

"She was intoxicated, which would have caused the drowning to happen faster," Bayardo said. "It normally takes four minutes to drown, but when the person is intoxicated, it takes only one or two minutes."

Watts told police he held Miss Tilley underwater until she drowned.

Police influence was heavy on slain woman

HOUSTON (AP) — Kathleen Schaefer joined the police department when she was 31, changing careers because she saw opportunities not available to her before.

The daughter of one policeman and wife of another, she died the victim of a bullet from a third policeman Wednesday night.

She was shot to death by an officer who did not realize the armed woman was part of an undercover team trying to help him make arrests at a drug bust.

"She just felt it was something she had to do," her brother, Thomas Cochran, said Thursday. "She could see a lot of horizons in the department. She wanted to go up in the ranks. There were a lot of goals she could see for herself."

Police officials blamed inadequate briefings for her death. Police spokesman Larry Troutt said the officer who shot Mrs. Schaefer "was not aware that a woman undercover officer was involved" in the undercover operation in southeast Houston Wednesday night.

Mrs. Schaefer, dressed in blue jeans and a blouse, stepped out of her car with gun drawn at the scene of the arrest. She apparently did not understand that officer D.A. Gott was speaking to her when he told her to "Hold it," police officials said.

"As she started to put it (the gun) back into the car, the uniformed officer apparently thought she was pointing it at him and that's when he fired," Troutt said.

Mrs. Schaefer, 34, dropped out of high school to marry Wade Schaefer, now a lieutenant in the department's accident division. She passed a high school equivalency test, took some nursing classes and went to work as a doctor's assistant.

She and her husband had two children — Theresa Marie, 11, and Lyndon Wade Jr., 10.

Inspired by her father and her husband, Mrs. Schaefer signed up for the police academy just three years shy of its 34-year age limit.

"She was older than most and not as agile as some of the others, who were younger, so she struggled very hard," her sister-in-law, Carole Pope, said. "She wanted it very much."

Her father, Harry Cochran, died while she was in the academy, Mrs. Schaefer's brother said. Cochran, who retired from the department in the 1960s, had mixed feelings about his daughter's job change.

"He liked it, but then again he didn't like it, because times were changing," her brother said. "Police work was different when he was on the force." He did not elaborate.

Mrs. Schaefer worked in the patrol division for a year, then was transferred to the dispatch desk. She had joined narcotics section only two months before her death, police records show.

Her brother blames fate for Mrs. Schaefer's death.

"She made a mistake and the other officer made a mistake," Cochran said. "It's not anybody's fault. It's just something that happened."

Controversial Texas doctor plans to run for Senate

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A controversial physician who lobbied against the Texas Medical Practices Act last year says he is running for the state Senate on the Libertarian Party ticket.

Dr. Ted Norris, 37, who has been called "Dr. Feelgood" by critics of his "wholistic" approach to treating patients, said he has submitted petitions to run against Sen. Bob Vale, D-San Antonio, in the November general election.

"I think the individual has to take responsibility for himself," Norris said Thursday. "Most doctors don't believe in the ability of the body to heal itself; they believe they heal them."

Norris practices vitamin therapy, nutrition, hypnosis, acupuncture and liberal medicine prescription at his San Antonio Health Clinic. He said he took off six months last year to lobby against the Medical Practices Act in the Texas Legislature.

Although his candidacy has not been certified, Norris said the Libertarian Party has submitted petitions to the secretary of state with 45,188 signatures, nearly twice the 23,900 he said was needed to place his name on the ballot.

"I don't think there's any doubt that we'll get on the ballot," he said.

Teachers unions oppose TSTA tactics

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two non-union teachers' associations want Attorney General Mark White to take the Texas State Teachers Association to court for alleged "deceptive trade practices."

The Texas Classroom Teachers Association and the Association of Texas Professional Educators told a news conference Thursday they had asked White to seek a court injunction to stop the TSTA's recruiting tactics, which the associations said were false and misleading.

Both associations stressed at the news conference they are non-union, compared with TSTA's affiliation with the National Education Association. Both oppose collective bargaining for public school teachers.

"It is extremely hypocritical for the Texas State Teachers Association to call itself a professional association while engaging in such unprofessional and unethical conduct," said Betty Pyle of Odessa, president of TCTA.

"Their union tactics go beyond associational in-fighting and undermine the real efforts of true professionals attempting to achieve quality education," said Sally Wiedemann Vernon, president of ATPE.

Administration's lobbying machine working effectively on latest issue

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congressmen weren't showing off any newly acquired presidential cufflinks this time, but that seemed to be the only ingredient missing from President Reagan's lobbying arsenal for a $98.3 billion tax increase bill.

In fact, the administration's campaign for passage of the election-year tax bill likely was its largest lobbying blitz to date.

After 20 months in office, Reagan has honed his lobbying tactics to a fine art that has paid off in virtually every major test of power with Congress — so far.

National advertising, a presidential speech in prime time, direct mail, favors for congressmen, telephone calls, one-on-one appeals by the president — they're all part of the mix.

This time television spots were purchased for the first time, a measure of the uphill battle the administration faced when it could not depend on even half of the 193 Republicans in the House to vote with their president.

Previous efforts produced come-from-behind victories on massive tax and budget cuts and the contested sale of AWACs surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia.

"This place, when it does focus on one big thing, that one big thing does get accomplished," boasted a high-level Republican strategist.

Reagan, elected on a platform of cutting taxes, said he had to swallow hard to back the tax hike, arguably the largest peacetime tax boost in history. But once convinced it was essential to controlling ballooning budget deficits, he threw himself into the battle.

Upwards of 100 Republican congressmen were invited to the White House to listen to Reagan's arguments. Dozens got telephone calls from the president, and 32 lawmakers were singled out for special red-carpet treatment: a flight to Camp David and lunch at the president's mountaintop retreat.

"I've been in Congress 18 years. I've never been to Camp David before, and I was impressed to be invited and grateful to be invited, may I say," said Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

No matter. Conable already was backing the bill.

By various accounts, Reagan used nothing more than gentle persuasion. "He's not a man who threatens or twists arms in a traditional sense," said Conable.

Enter Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's bare-knuckled political strategist who's never been accused of being overly sweet. Nofziger went into private business earlier this year and initially teamed up with others to oppose the tax hike.

Days later, he made a complete turnabout and signed on to lead the administration's battle — in no small measure because of his unwavering loyalty to Ronald Reagan.

Nofziger sat in on Reagan's meetings with congressmen, watching to see who was wavering and winnable.

"Nofziger's big plus is he knows all the Reagan people out in the states," said the GOP strategist, speaking anonymously. As the strategist explained it, Nofziger calls a congressman's 10 biggest financial backers. They, in turn, call the congressman and tell him they're counting on him to vote with the president.

And Nofziger, himself, called congressmen. "He's almost a bigger-than-life figure, a heavy," the strategist said. "He's firm and everybody knows it."

Reagan and Nofziger weren't alone in the fight.

"We're going to do every single thing that comes to mind to support him," said Bill Greener, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee.

The GOP budgeted $400,000 for the fight, including $250,000 for television commercials in specially selected cities across the country, $100,000 for a blizzard of radio ads and $50,000 for a direct-mail campaign targeted at GOP party officials and major financial backers.

In addition, radio and television outlets were sent spots featuring Nofziger, Vice President George Bush, White House counselor Edwin Meese III, chief of staff James A. Baker III and others. The stations were not paid for the spots, but could use them if they wanted.

The verdict on all these efforts awaited final votes in the House and Senate. But the White House and GOP were convinced they had done their best.

"I think it's the most that has been done for this president," said Greener.

In-, out-patient cataract surgery both successful

Dear Dr. Solomon: I find your column to be a source of very practical information as well as interesting to read, even if an item does not affect me. I have just returned from an extensive trip overseas, and I wonder if you are aware that cataract operations are being done on an outpatient basis in some countries. Is this because they don't have the medical facilities we have in this country, or do they know something that we don't know? — Mr. S.H., Long Beach, N.Y.

Dear Mr. H.: Thank you for the kind words. As far as I know, cataract operations on an outpatient basis have been performed in some of the underdeveloped nations for more than 20 years. Although the practice is not common in the United States, some surgeons here also do the operation as an outpatient procedure.

Dr. Douglas E. Williamson of the Venice (Florida) Eye Clinic has reported that the outpatient surgery for cataracts is as effective as inpatient surgery and involves no increase in postoperative complications. Furthermore, Dr. Williamson says, he has never had a patient for whom the procedure could not be done on an outpatient basis. The success of the operation depends on the skill of the surgeon, not on the setting in which it is performed.

Many of the older patients in whom the surgery is performed benefit from being able to return home immediately after the operation. They eat better than they would in a hospital, recover more rapidly and are less likely to fall because they are familiar with their surroundings.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few years ago there was a lot of talk about the dangers of radiation for women who had X-rays to spot breast cancer. I don't read about this very much any more. Is it a good idea for women to have this kind of examination? — Ms. J.D., Santa Rosa, Calif.

Dear Ms. D.: I would not recommend for or against mammography for a patient I have never seen. With my own patients, I occasionally will recommend such an examination, but I do so on an individual basis and with detailed knowledge not only of the patient's history, but of her family's history as well.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Stough's main concern Reaganomics

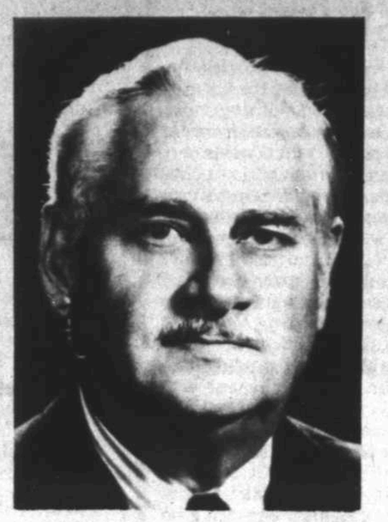

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Charles S. Stough likens politics to a military battle: It's a matter of overcoming numerous obstacles and coming out on top as the winner.

That tactic is the one the former military career man is taking in his campaign against Republican Tom Loeffler for the 21st Congresional District seat. Stough was in Midland Thursday to speak to the Midland County Democratic Women's Club and to introduce himself to local voters. This was his first trip to the Tall City since 1930, he said.

He decided to battle Loeffler for the seat when he discovered the two-term congressman had no opposition. "I don't think any Republican should be able to run without opposition, particularly someone like Loeffler who swallowed Reagan's program whole.

"I think the Reagan program is wrong. It transfers the expense of running government to the backs of the less fortunate. It rewards the corporations and the people with a lot of money," he said.

"I believe some sort of control has to be maintained to avoid a situtation such as we're in now with a glut of oil on the market."
— Charles S. Stough

HIS PRIMARY CONCERN in this campaign is Reaganomics. And while he criticized Loeffler for rubber-stamping Reagan's economic program, the incumbent and challenger took opposite sides of the battlefield again on the president's support of a $98 billion tax increase, or tax reform, bill. Loeffler opposes it; Stough supports it.

"The tax bill is necessary because last year's tax cut was too much," said Stough. "It's obvious to any housewife that you can't cut your income and increase your expenditures and not wind up in a deficit situation. His (Reagan's) tax cut reduced income and yet he wants to increase defense spending."

Stough admitted he finds the bill "distasteful" to some degree. But he believes it closes some loopholes, such as in tax collections.

While Loeffler has opposed the provision to initiate a 10 percent withholding tax on interest and dividends in saving accounts, Stough sees the proposal as a "feasible way of getting money due the U.S." When you cheat the government, you're cheating all of us. It makes our load that much heavier to carry."

CALLING HIMSELF a moderate and in favor of labor, Stough said he is "more for people than for institutions. I was born with an inherent love of the people. I lived through the Depression years as a kid and I saw what mismanagement by the establishment can do."

Recalling that his father was one of the few people on the block that had a job during the Depression, Stough said his mother would cook up beans and rice and invite the out-of-work neighbors over for supper.

The common sight of men selling apples on the street corner to get some money for food won't come back, Stough said. "But it takes a different attitude than what Reagan has. He is an establishment-oriented wealthy man who resents the fact there are poor people in this world."

Born in Decatur, Ill., Stough received a degree in architecture and then entered the military during World War II. He made the Army a career, serving through the Korean Conflict and retiring in 1963 at Fort Sam Houston as a lieutenant colonel.

That background, he claimed, has given him an insight into military spending. "I support a strong and adequate defense, but throwing more money at it doesn't give you a better defense," he said.

"With the current budget limitation we have in the Department of the Army, the cost of operations could be reduced by 15 percent without loss of combat efficiency or effectiveness of military force."

CUTTING MILITARY spending would bring arguments from the Army, he said. "But there's a lot of wasteful spending in the military and ineffective use of funds. I've seen people spend unnecessarily at the end of a program so they can use up all their money and then ask for the same amount or more for the next year.

"We need a stronger control over how the programs are conducted. It could help reduce a lot of waste," said the Boerne resident.

Reagan's handling of the situation in Central America earlier this year was on the "wrong track," he said. Stough's wife comes from the Panama Canal Zone, and the couple lived there from 1969 until 1980.

Problems with the countries' various governments "can't be solved with the military," he said, adding that he has some expertise on Central America after living there more than a decade.

"The oligarchy has control of the country. A few families own the land and control everything. It's the patron system," he explained, adding that the workers become displeased with the system.

"What is often a protest against conditions imposed on the citizens is considered by the oligarchy as being communist-inspired. I'm not denying that there has been communist influence in several Latin American countries. But communists aren't the instigators in all cases; sometimes they just jump in and take advantage of what's already a turmoil."

RECALLING A conversation he had with a Latin American friend, Stough said the resident suggested the U.S. should play a role of Big Brother with Latin America. "Let them do their thing. If they get in trouble, then Big Brother could get them back in line. But it shouldn't be done by the military."

However, Stough didn't support the thought that the U.S. should pull out its influence in Latin America. "The influence of the U.S. in Latin America is a very important part of their lives. The influence of the U.S. shouldn't be minimized," he said.

Stough wasn't impressed with Alexander Haig as secretary of state. "He was very ambitious and egotistical," the candidate said. But Stough "could understand his frustration of being second-guessed at every turn. He was an outsider who didn't have the ear of the president. Haig resented what he considered an inconsistency in foreign policy."

Stough admitted he isn't familiar with the petroleum industry and its problems and noted he doesn't favor complete deregulation.

"I believe some sort of control has to be maintained to avoid a situation such as we're in now with a glut of oil on the market. It has a corresponding effect on other industries, such as shutting down Lone Star Steel in East Texas because there are no requirements for oilfield pipe."

Stating he has "no objections to a Windfall Profit Tax on any industry," Stough said he does object to using that tax money specifically to fund Reagan's New Federalism program.

"I don't think one industry or one state should be required to finance it. I object to the oil industry carrying the brunt of the expense," he said, adding that no one industry should be singled out for such a tax as the WPT.

Noting that the 21st District is varied in geography and philosophy, Stough said he wants to "represent their viewpoints."

Five-thousand-mile trip taught local biker a lot

saw America from the door of a boxcar, Jordan and his companions encountered some memorable personages.

"I MET A VERY, very strange guy 50 miles south of Luna, N.M., who apparently ran over his own cat, either accidently or on purpose — we couldn't really find out," he recalled. "Before he could bury the cat he had to shoot a bird, 'cause he said 'you can't bury no cat without no bird.' He was about 28 or 29 and was a semi-hippie. He lived in a van and just drove around the country."

But when it came down to the bare essentials, the most elemental and unforgettable event occured in Yosemite National Park. Surmounting a 10,000-foot pass, the bikers descended into Yosemite, reaching a campground at dark. Exhausted after the grueling climb over California's highest pass, they bedded down three feet from the trunk of a large tree, which during the night was to contain more than mere shadows.

"In Yosemite you're supposed to put all your food in bear bags, and we didn't," said Jordan. "One of the guys had a sack of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches in his pack on his bike, and at two or three o'clock in the morning we heard this bear. It unzipped his pack, put the sandwiches in his mouth, climbed the tree to eat them and try to get another bear bag — and then started to choke on all the peanut butter."

Snorting, grunting, coughing, the bear made quite a spectacle of himself directly above them — and, obviously, caused quite a stir among the young men sprawled out below. Meanwhile, the remainder of their food was being pilfered.

"A RACCOON came along — I guess they worked as a pair — and he ate what the bear didn't get," he remembered.

The rigors of the trip and stress of sharing every moment with three other persons began to prey on each biker's nerves, and when they reached San Francisco they decided to split into pairs. Thereupon they biked the Great Northwest, skirting fog-shrouded Mount St. Helen's and Mount Rainier before reaching Seattle and switching teams. Having attained the corner of the nation wasn't satisfaction enough, however, and Jordan set his sights on the East Coast.

In Idaho, two of the bikers dropped out due to illness, and when the two remaining marathoners reached Iowa, one headed south to visit relatives in Kentucky while Jordan continued solo. Though the miles had taken eight inches off his mid-section and 20 pounds from his body, Jordan kept his bike headed east and reached Massachusetts Friday the 13th. Only then, with the breadth and width of the nation behind him, did Jordan catch a flight back to Midland.

Despite camping alongside the highway throughout the summer, Jordan and his companions did not encounter any troublemakers. "People were inconsiderate but no one was malicious," he said. "People would drive too close and honk their horn right behind you. Sometimes I heard the car behind me and the honk didn't bother me, but there were times I'd be concentrating on something else...and the sound of the horn ran me off the road."

BUT THROUGHOUT the thousands of miles, Jordan only suffered a spill once — while he was virtually stationary in a driveway.

"I just lost my balance and fell over," he remembered with an embarrassed grin.

Now a veteran of a virtually unprecedented bicycle trip, what does Jordan do for an encore?

"A friend of mine wants to canoe down the Mississippi right after the thaw," he noted. "But I don't think I want to do that. If I get through law school, I think that might be enough."

But when told of one adventurer's plans to hike the length of the Great Wall of China, Jordan's eyes brightened and he straightened himself in his chair. "The Great Wall sounds pretty good," he said, nodding. And then he leaned back in reflection. "I wonder if you could ride a bicycle along the top of it..."

Israel allows food into west Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel allowed the Red Cross to ship food into west Beirut Thursday for the first time in a week, Red Cross officials said.

A convoy carrying three trucks loaded with rations, 25 tons of flour, five tons of dried beans, and medical supplies, said Red Cross spokesman Jean-Jacque Kurz.

The rations consist of 2,050 packages of food, each of which will feed a family of seven for two weeks at a minimal level.

The Israelis also allowed 20 tons of fuel to enter west Beirut to run the generator at American University Hospital, the largest medical facility in the Moslem sector.

The relaxation of the siege did not include restoration of normal electric power to the western sector.

Judge's ruling says limited para-legal access all right

The suit further alleged several adverse health and safety conditions in the jail, including the lack of a fire escape and the lack of an adequate fire evacuation plan.

Following a weeklong series of talks with city officials and legal sources, Gideon changed his original order barring para-legals from the jail just before the suit was filed. He instead drew up a policy stating they could visit inmates from 2 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

In ruling on that aspect of the case Thursday, Bunton noted that his ruling applies only to federal prisoners and said the amended policy poses "no absolute denial of prisoner access to para-legals. The fact that access is limited to certain hours of the day does not prejudice the inmates such as to constitute the irreparable injury (that) is a prerequisite to preliminary injunctive relief," which was sought at a July 22 hearing on the suit.

In commenting on his order requiring the city to institute a fire safety plan in 30 days, Bunton said: "It is self-evident that human lives might be saved by such action, and that would clearly constitute the irreparable injury which is required for preliminary injunctive relief. The Court finds that the public interest would be served by such an undertaking."

On the use of telephones by federal prisoners, Bunton said the practice of allowing social phone calls only on Wednesdays did not threaten "irreparable harm. However, this practice also applies to communications with the detainee's attorney. There is substantial likelihood that a detainee's ability to investigate and prepare his defense is hindered by this practice.

"The Court does not mandate the specifics of telephone consultation with attorneys, but only requires that the regulations pertaining thereto be reasonable."

All other issues raised in the suit were denied.

Neither McFadden nor Gideon could be reached for comment. McFadden's attorneys declined comment because they had not seen Bunton's order.

Two typewriters stolen from business

In complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, two electric typewriters worth a total of $2,070 were reported taken from the Anderson Petroleum Co., 606 N. Baird St., sometime in the past three days.

Christine Marquez of 407 E. Pennsylvania Ave. told officers a $1,000 color TV set was stolen from her residence Thursday. Entry was gained by prying open the front door.

And Charles Krusekopf, 2610 Cimarron, said lawn maintenance equipment valued at $580 was taken from the bed of his pickup truck while the vehicle was parked in his driveway Thursday night.

Odessa woman dies in three-car accident

ODESSA — A three-vehicle chain reaction accident killed an Odessa woman early Thursday night.

Pronounced dead of multiple injuries and cardiac arrest was Marion Murdock Masters, 53. Police said her 1979 Ford pickup truck struck the rear of a car that had stopped in the 400 block of East University Avenue about 7 p.m.

That car in turn hit the rear of another car stopped in front of it. Neither of those drivers was reported to have been injured and police said it could not be determined if the Masters woman suffered the heart attack before or after the accident.

Way cleared for guerrilla evacuation from west Beirut

By The Associated Press

The PLO turned over a captured Israeli pilot, a kidnapped soldier and the bodies of other troops requested by Israel to the International Red Cross today, clearing the way for a guerrilla evacuation from west Beirut beginning Saturday, Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan announced.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib "told me that the Red Cross has informed him that the captured pilot, the kidnapped soldier and the requested bodies have been handed over to the Red Cross," Wazzan said in a nationally televised statement.

Lebanon's state radio said the delivery was made at the Beirut port crossing point between the city's Moslem and Christian sectors.

Wazzan also said Habib handed him a written guarantee that the Reagan administration would seek the release of Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners held by Israel. No figures were given and there was no immediate comment from U.S. officials, but in the past Israel has refused to discuss freeing PLO fighters it holds on grounds they are terrorists held on criminal charges rather than prisoners of war.

Guerrillas packing or carrying suitcases were a common scene in several west Beirut neighborhoods while PLO experts detonated land mines in the streets and on the beachfront to clear the roads for traffic in preparation for the pullout.

Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman Suhail Natour said earlier that the PLO was working on turning over the bodies of nine Israelis, five killed during the current invasion of Lebanon and four during Israel's 1978 offensive.

The Israeli Cabinet approved the PLO withdrawal plan Thursday on condition that the two prisoners — a pilot shot down June 6 and a soldier "kidnapped" by the PLO Wednesday night — be released first.

The vanguard of the multinational peacekeeping force that will oversee the Palestinian withdrawal, 150 French paratroopers, were due in Beirut Saturday morning, and "the Palestinian fighters will begin leaving Beirut Saturday," Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Butros said in a TV appearance.

Informed sources said about 3,000 guerrillas leaving on the first three days of the 14-day evacuation would go by ship to Cyprus for transfer to various Arab countries. Beginning next Wednesday, there will be a three-day deployment of the rest of the 2,100-man peace force — including 650 more French, 800 U.S. Marines and 500 Italians. And on Friday the rest of the guerrillas, estimated to number between 3,000 and 4,000; 1,500 Syrian troops and 2,500 to 3,000 Syrian-commanded troops of the Palestine Liberation Army will begin leaving by bus for Syria.

Last to go will be PLO chief Yasser Arafat and other officials of the PLO and its various factions.

Arafat is expected to go to Tunis, where the Arab League headquarters is now located, PLO and Lebanese sources said.

For the first time in a week, the Israeli forces encircling west Beirut on Thursday allowed a Red Cross food convoy to cross the so-called Green Line dividing the city's Christian and Moslem sectors.

Tougher enforcement of tax laws needed to raise $98 billion revenue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and the Reagan administration are counting on tougher enforcement of the tax laws to produce a big chunk of the $98.3 billion that would be raised over the next three years under a bill awaiting the president's signature.

The most disputed portion of the bill is a compliance measure requiring that 10 percent of most interest and dividends be withheld for tax purposes, just as a part of wages are now withheld.

Withholding would bring in an estimated $10.6 billion over the next three years. During the first year, Treasury officials estimate, two-thirds of the increased collections would represent advance payment of taxes on such income, because the government would have gotten the money anyway at tax time. But in future years, almost all the money would come from people who now are avoiding taxes, because they wouldn't ever had paid without the withholding system.

Withholding would begin July 1, 1983. Accounts earning less than $150 a year would be exempt. No withholding would be required from individuals who paid less than $600 in total tax the previous year or from elderly persons who paid $1,500 or less.

The compliance provisions include tougher penalties and stiffer reporting requirements on such income as state and local tax refunds, capital gains and government securities. Most pensions would be subject to withholding unless the recipient signs a paper opposing it.

RESTAURANTS WITH more than 10 employees would have to provide the Internal Revenue Service with sales figures to help improve tax collections from tips.

Withholding and other compliance measures in the bill would bring in about $21 billion. Another $6.9 billion increase in collections is expected from hiring additional IRS agents.

Other key provisions:

—INDIVIDUAL DEDUCTIONS: Only medical expenses that exceed 5 percent (rather than 3 percent) of gross income could be deducted. The up-to-$150 deduction for half the cost of health insurance, even if no other medical deductions are claimed, would be eliminated. Starting in 1984, all prescription drugs and insulin could be lumped with other expenses in reaching that 5 percent threshold. Over-the-counter drugs could not be deducted.

Present law allows a deduction for all but $100 of uninsured casualty losses, such as from fire. The bill allows a deduction for losses that exceed 10 percent of gross income and after the first $100 is paid.

—CIGARETTES: The federal tax on cigarettes would be doubled to 16 cents a pack; on Oct. 1, 1985, the tax would drop back to eight cents.

—TELEPHONES: The 1-percent tax on phone service would rise to 3 percent in 1983 through 1985 and expire in 1986.

—AIR TAXES: Effective Sept. 1, the 5-percent tax on passenger tickets would rise to 8 percent; passengers leaving on international flights would have to pay an extra $3; a 5-percent tax would be imposed on air freight; the tax of 4 cents per gallon on gasoline for non-commercial aviation would rise to 12 cents; a 14-cent tax would be imposed on non-commercial jet fuel.

—UNEMPLOYMENT TAX: The employer-paid tax that finances unemployment compensation would be raised by about $1.20 a month per worker.

—UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS: Additional federal benefits of up to 10 weeks would be available to jobless workers in every state from Sept. 12 through next March 31. The change would be financed by raising the percentage of unemployment compensation that is subject to federal income tax, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1982.

—SAVINGS BONDS: The Treasury Department would be allowed to adjust interest on Series EE and HH bonds to reflect market conditions, but a minimum rate would be guaranteed.

—FEDERAL WORKERS: Would have to pay 1.3 percent of a base wage (a top tax of about $452 next year) into the Social Security system to finance their Medicare benefits.

—MINIMUM TAX: This special 20-percent levy on upper-income investors would be toughened to ensure some taxes are paid no matter how many big deductions are claimed. This would cost about 280,000 people an average of $4,700 apiece over the next three years.

—PENSIONS: High-earning professionals would lose some of the tax advantage of corporate retirement plans. On the other hand, the $15,000 a year that self-employed persons may set aside tax-free until retirement would rise to $30,000 in 1984.

—LEASING: Benefits made available to businesses under the "safe-harbor leasing" provision enacted last year would be repealed at the end of 1983. The law encourages unprofitable companies to sell their tax benefits to other firms.

—OIL TAXES: U.S. oil companies would no longer be allowed to use foreign tax credits from extraction income to avoid U.S. tax on other income.

—CORPORATE TAXES: The value of some special deductions, such as the oil depletion allowance, used by businesses to cut their taxes would be reduced by 15 percent. Corporations would have to pay 90 percent of their estimated taxes — up from 80 percent — in quarterly installments. Tax treatment of life insurance companies and long-term contractors would be toughened. Major expansions of depreciation deductions scheduled in 1985 and 1986 would be repealed.

Reagan: Bill approval 'important milestone'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House approval of the $98.3 billion tax hike was received with delight Thursday by President Reagan who hailed it "an important milestone." The White House had no comment after the Senate approved the bill later in the day.

Reagan read a statement from behind his desk in the Oval Office just 25 minutes after the measure for which he had lobbied for two weeks cleared the House on a 226-207 vote.

"This was a hard choice for many of them, especially in an election year," Reagan said. "But when it came to the test, a bipartisan majority bit the bullet and voted for the revenue increases and spending cuts we so urgently need to get deficits and interest rates down and Americans back to work."

The Senate's 52-47 approval came about four hours after the House's late afternoon vote. The White House had advised that Reagan would have no comment after the decision by the Senate where Republicans have the majority and passage was considered likely.

In the House, the tax measure had the support of 103 Republicans and 123 Democrats while 89 Republicans opposed it. Many conservative Republicans, normally Reagan's core of support, complained that it was a reversal of the president's economic philosophy.

REAGAN SAID the House vote did not mark the end of the efforts toward economic recovery "but it is an important milestone."

The president also took the occasion to reiterate that the bill did not represent any change in his fundamental economic policy.

"I think there was a perception on the part of some and an alarm that this represented some kind of change in philosophy," Reagan said. "It does not. I still believe in the combination of incentive tax cuts that will increase productivity in this country and reductions in spending."

He said he was not worried about losing conservative support.

"Let me also add a word to those who voted against this measure," Reagan said in a comment that appeared to be aimed at the Republicans who broke ranks. "Honorable men and women can honestly disagree...Let's leave our differences behind us and all of us get on with the nation's business."

With two minutes of voting time remaining, the president left the Oval Office and went into an adjacent aides office to watch the tally on television.

DEPUTY WHITE House press secretary Larry Speakes said "I think there was a scattering of applause and a handshake or two" once victory was in the bag.

The group included Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger; Secretary of State George Shultz; Lyn Nofziger, the former political director who returned as an unpaid consultant to help the lobbying campaign; and Reagan's top three aides — staff chief James A. Baker III, deputy staff chief Michael Deaver and counselor Edwin Meese.

Answering questions from reporters, the president rejected a suggestion that Americans would remember him for boosting the tax on cigarettes by eight cents a pack, one of the provisions of the bill.

"I think that what they're going to see and what they are going to be thinking about is that the economy is going to continue to improve. I think that failure to pass this would have been a setback to the improvement to the economy," he said.

Asked whether he thought the bill would hurt Republicans in the November elections, the president replied: "No, I don't think it's going to hurt anyone in November."

Though he ended up winning by a much larger margin than had been predicted, Reagan insisted he had been surprised.

"RIGHT DOWN to the wire there was no one predicting anything but that it would be that close...There were a great many who very frankly said they were still in the process of making up their minds."

Reagan appeared reluctant to comment on his ability to wrest from Congress all the important legislation he has lobbied intensively for.

"As an old sports announcer I have to tell you that if a no-hitter is being pitched you never mention it during the game or you'll jinx the pitcher," he said with a laugh.

Tax bill spending cuts hit health care services

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $98.3 billion tax hike bill passed by Congress Thursday night includes nearly $15.2 billion in spending cuts over three years, nearly all of it coming from services provided by hospitals, doctors and other providers of health care.

Medicare for the elderly would be cut $12.8 billion, Medicaid for the poor would be cut $1.1 billion and welfare would be cut $1.2 billion.

The Medicare cuts are achieved by increasing the share beneficiaries must pay, limiting reimbursement to health care providers and making a variety of regulatory and other program changes.

Under the new rules, the $12.20 monthly premium that Medicare recipients pay for supplemental insurance covering doctors' fees would rise to $13.70 next July 1 and $15.30 a year later.

Federal civilian employees would be required to pay the hospital insurance portion of the Social Security tax, 1.3 percent of gross income.

New rules also would modify the formulas and limit reimbursements paid to providers of medical care under Medicare.

Beginning Jan.1, employers with more than 25 workers would be required to offer employees aged 65 through 69 and their dependents the same health benefit plan available to younger workers, making Medicare a secondary plan in those instances. However, the affected employees would not be required to enroll in the employer's plan.

For Medicaid, the legislation would allow states to impose a nominal co-payment on any beneficiary — with certain exceptions — for emergency, pregnancy and family planning services and for health care provided to children under 18.

Under current law, states cannot charge co-paymants for mandatory services to the poor, though states may impose a charge of between 50 cents and $3 to people who for are not legally poor but are unable to afford health care.

The Aid to Families with Dependent Children Program, which helps state and local governments finance cash welfare assistance to needy families, would be modified to:

—Round monthly benefits down to the nearest dollar.

—Grant states the option to require AFDC applicants and recipients to participate in job search programs.

—Reduce the portion of a family's AFDC grant for shelter costs if the family shares living quarters with other individuals.

Also included in the bill is a reduction — from 75 percent to 70 percent — in the federal share of an enforcement program that helps AFDC and non-AFDC families locate absent parents, establish paternity and assist in the collection of child support payments.

Unemployment compensation benefits and Supplemental Security Income benefits to the needy aged, blind or disabled also would be rounded down to the nearest dollar.

On top of the spending cuts and tax increases, the bill would cut the federal deficit another $1.9 billion over three years by reducing government borrowing costs.

This would be done by allowing the Treasury Department to permit interest rates on savings bonds to rise and fall with other interest rates. Treasury says this would make those bonds more attractive and require less borrowing through more-expense securities.

Reagan, O'Neill team up to get bill passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Normally, the House of Representatives in mid-afternoon is a quiet place, with only a few members on the floor, the galleries half-empty, and a handful of people in the press gallery.

But on Thursday, there was high drama as an unlikely coalition of President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., joined forces to win narrow approval in the Democratic-controlled House of a $98.3 billion tax increase.

O'Neill, who is usually on the other side of an issue from Reagan, played a pivotal role in passage of the tax bill.

At the end of a long afternoon of lobbying and speech-making, the burly, white-haired speaker ambled up to the podium.

The floor was full of his colleagues and their families, the galleries were packed with lobbyists and congressional aides, and there was standing room only in the press gallery.

Pointing to the Republicans, O'Neill warned them to remember that many of them had ridden to their 1980 victories on Reagan's long coattails.

O'Neill conceded that he and Reagan differed often. But on the need for a tax increase, he said, "The president is right and I ask for this vote."

Minutes later, it was over, and by a 226-207 vote, Reagan had continued his unbroken string of tax and budget victories.

Four hours later, the Senate went along, approving the bill 52-47, on a touch-and-go roll call whose outcome was in doubt until the last minute. Vice President George Bush was on hand in case his vote was needed to break a tie.

Lobbyists swarmed to Capitol Hill in an attempt to influence voting on the tax bill.

As House members arrived Thursday afternoon, they walked up the east steps of the Capitol through dozens of lobbyists trying to pick up a last-minute vote.

Inside the door, there were more lobbyists — three deep in spots. And once members got to the floor, many of them were cajoled by O'Neill or Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

And Reagan, one of the best lobbyists of all, was also hunting votes up to the last minute. As late as Thursday morning, he was still meeting with congressmen in the White House.

Even as the balloting started, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., the leader of the opposition, knew he was beaten.

Texas votes listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how Texas representatives voted in the 226-207 roll call Thursday by which the House approved $98.3 billion in tax increases.

Voting no were 118 Democrats and 89 Republicans.

Radio Marti defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the planned U.S.-sponsored radio broadcasts into Cuba will be provocative to the Cuban government only if it "fears the truth."

The department's deputy spokesman, Alan Romberg, defended the plan to establish Radio Marti in response to a critique written by Wayne Smith, who headed the American diplomatic mission in Havana until last month.

"The more I have heard of the administration's case," Smith wrote in The Washington Post, "the more convinced I have become that it is leading us toward a step that is unnecessary and may be sharply counter-productive."

Meanwhile, Cuban President Fidel Castro warned that his country will start its own broadcasts to the United States if the Reagan administration broadcasts to Cuba on Radio Marti.

"We are not going to interfere, but we are going to broadcast back. I think the Americans are going to be listening to a lot of Cuban music," Castro told the Associated Press.

Romberg said Radio Marti is "intended to be truthful, objective and comprehensive in its coverage. Whether this is unduly provocative from the Cuban perspective would appear to depend on how much the Castro government fears the truth."

Winner's father overjoyed

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Carol Ann Sullivan sped to victory in the junior division of the All-American Soap Box Derby, and her overjoyed father wasn't far behind.

Bob Sullivan hurdled a rope and two railings to get to his 10-year-old daughter and squeeze her in a jubilant bear hug after her 28.64-second finish Saturday in the 954-foot downhill race.

"Ain't nobody going to stop me from coming down here," said Sullivan, from Rochester, N.H.

Carol Ann won a trophy and a set of power tools.

Matt Wolfgang, 12, of Pennsburg, Pa., finished in 28:29 seconds to win the senior division of the 45th annual derby, gaining a trophy and a $5,000 college scholarship.

In the international division, Michael Larocque, 12, of Canada, won the junior division title, and Geoffrey Logan of New Zealand, also 12, won the senior division. Under derby rules, 12-year-olds may enter either division.

Pool-side drink was a big one

WEST BEND, Wis. (AP) — It was a staggering concept: a gin and tonic large enough to satiate the thirstiest drinker.

The large libation, the brainchild of Franz "Bink" Steinbach, owner of the Binker Bar and Restaurant, was concocted in a 15-foot swimming pool.

Steinbach said he was trying for a listing of the world's largest gin and tonic in the Guinness Book of World Records.

The drink took two hours to mix and included four tons of ice and 500 gallons of alcohol, which was dumped in by the case. Tonic was pumped into the pool from a tank truck.

About 250 people gathered to sample the batch from poolside taps.

Steinbach, having said he hoped to attract 1,200 people, later estimated that 10 percent of the drink was consumed. The leftover was pumped out and discarded.

MISD teachers learn methods of creative teaching

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Creativity is an important aspect in the classroom, according to Pat Alexander and Norma Ross of the Midland Independent School District.

Not only does it stimulate the child's fluency of thoughts, flexibility, originality and elaboration, it also increases his or her interest in the classroom.

During workshops on Creative Thinking and Creative Bookmaking Wednesday and Thursday, MISD elementary teachers learned of different ways to stimulate the child's intellect and have fun.

From games with a piece of paper containing six circles with six words on each, where a child throws dice to select a word from each circle to construct into a sentence, to mind-teasers that appear complicated but really are obvious, creativity can be increased.

Hypothesizing and brainstorming with a group of students were introduced to teachers, with the warning that, "anything goes.

"You can't judge," warned Mrs. Ross, a GEM (Gifted Education Midland) teacher. "You have to take anything they throw at you. You want the ideas and the quantity is what counts."

The two suggested throwing out beginnings of imaginative stories to the students: "You and your small group of anthropologists have arrived on the remote island of Patawhatchamacallit, and are observing the primitive islanders trying to solve a problem: the people, barely four feet tall, and without any technological devices such as tape measures, rulers or other equipment usually used, are trying to measure a tall, tall giraffe. While your own equipment is back on the boat, naturally, you do have more than they: clothes and personal items. Brainstorm for ideas which will help the little people to measure their giraffe."

One suggestion was to give the children long pieces of butcher paper with brightly colored crayons to record the method they would use to measure the giraffe.

"The wackier, the better," Ms. Alexander, GEM coordinator, said. "Spelling doesn't count; it's not important in this exercise. The children are encouraged to 'ride piggyback,' add on to each others' ideas."

"You're in for some surprises," Mrs. Ross cautioned. "But that's where you get your best ideas."

The workshops, which included other activities for teaching creative thinking behavior and innovative ideas for teaching story writing and "publishing" books in which to compile the students' stories, were two of several inservice workshops offered this summer throughout the district.

Due to a revised policy approved by the school board last spring, effective June 1, teachers with three or more years of service in the MISD may get their inservice hours accomplished during the summer and use inservice days during the school year as extra holidays.

Walkers honoring Polish, Mexican figures

ELMENDORF, Texas (AP) — The Polish madonna and Mexico's patron saint are being jointly honored in a 50-mile, four-day pilgrimage from San Antonio to Cestohowa in Karnes County.

The walk is scheduled to end Sunday with Cardinal John Krol, archibishop of Philadelphia, saying an open-air mass in celebration of the 600th anniversary of Our Lady of Czestochowa.

The celebration honoring the Polish madonna also includes a tribute to Our Lady of Guadalupe on the 451st anniversary of her appearance to Juan Diego at Tepeyac Hill in Mexico City in 1531.

A statue of Our Lady of Guadalupe will be blessed Sunday in Panna Maria, the oldest Polish settlement in America, then will be carried in procession to Cestohowa and enshrined there in the parish grotto beside an image of Our Lady of Czestochowa, organizers of the pilgrimage said.

The spellings of Czestochowa in Poland and Cestohowa in Texas differ because the name of the Karnes County city has been Anglicized, the organizers said. The Polish madonna was named for the Polish city.

The march, led by San Antonio Archbishop Patrick Flores, began Thursday at the Shrine of Our Lady of Czestochowa in Southeast San Antonio and proceeded 15 miles to this suburb south of San Antonio for the night.

Today's walk will be nearly 15 more miles from Elmendorf to Floresville, and Saturday's trek will be 15 miles from Floresville to Falls City.

Krol, born in Cleveland and elevated to cardinal in 1967 by Pope Paul VI, was scheduled to accompany Pope John Paul II in Poland for the celebration, but agreed to come to Texas after political problems resulted in the cancellation of the pope's visit to Poland.

The image of Our Lady of Czestochowa, reputedly painted by St. Luke the Evangelist, was brought to Poland in 1382 by Duke Walter of Opole, Poland. Some 100 families from the Opole region of Poland immigrated to Texas and established Panna Maria in 1854 and Cestohowa in 1873.

Dozens of families and parishioners from South Texas Polish communities were participating in the four-day pilgrimage, based on an annual walk in Poland in honor of the madonna.

Japanese soldiers receive missile training at Fort Bliss

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — When dawn broke in the McGregor firing range 20 miles north of El Paso, the Japanese soldiers checking equipment at Site 8 nervously were watching the dark cloudy sky.

They had waited 12 months for their once-a-year chance to fire a live missile.

If visibility worsened, the launch would be canceled.

By the time all equipment and battle stations were geared to go, the weather had cooperated as well.

The men in 304 Battery, 1st Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group would be able to return to Chitose, Japan, full of pride. They had successfully fired a live missile.

The narrow width and population distribution of Japan, about the size and shape of California, prevents the country from having enough isolated space for its own missile range.

So a select number of Japanese army and air force missile crews journey to Fort Bliss each year for their live fire experience.

Between now and December, more than 1,600 soldiers and airmen representing 42 Japanese army and air force air defense units will train at Fort Bliss. Arriving on a rotation schedule, each group spends one to two weeks at the range. Army soldiers will fire 28 Hawk missiles and nine improved Hawk missiles, while the air force members will fire 19 Nike Hercules missiles.

Col. Matsuo Fueta, Japanese Army liaison officer at Fort Bliss, said commanders have a dilemma in choosing soldiers for the annual service practice — ASP — in El Paso.

"The commander wants to take the best crew members to ASP, " Fueta said. "But the commander also wants as many people as possible who've never been to the States before. It promotes morale."

Col. Muneharu Nishikawa, group commander, watched Wednesday's launch from a couple of miles away at the control tower. Fifteen years ago, he was at the same firing range as a crew member in the first Hawk unit organized in Japan.

Because of that experience, Nishikawa understood his soldiers' anxiety before the launch and their joy afterwards.

"We killed the target!" a soldier shouted in English after the successful hit on the seven-foot-long tow target pulled by a remote-controlled aircraft.

"Time for 7-Up," said Maj. Mikio Nakagawa, battery commander.

Seven-Up? Is this a code word or does he really mean the soft drink?

"We celebrate with 7-Up," Nakagawa said, referring to the soft drink. "In Japan, we usually celebrate with sake. But it's not allowed at the (McGregor) range."

Stockman airs views on tax hike

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Budget Director David Stockman Tuesday defended conservative Republican congressmen who oppose President Reagan's $98.3 billion tax hike, saying they "do not feel they ought to be made to walk the plank in an election year."

He also maintained that Democratic support for the president's program, which couples budget cuts with increased taxation, will not inhibit Republicans from campaigning against Democratic candidates this fall on the issue of big spending.

While he predicted it would be a "pretty severe blow" to the financial markets and the economy in general if Reagan's plan were defeated, the budget director conceded that the legislation is "no miracle cure."

Although Stockman, a former GOP congressman from Michigan, claimed he would vote for the president's tax hike if he still were in the House, he also said he could understand why many GOP members were reluctant to do so.

They were sent to Congress to reduce spending and taxes, he contended, and now are being asked to boost taxes — to do "a very difficult thing three months before an election" — to compensate for the refusal of Democrats to pare the budget.

He also voiced his opposition to a Senate Democratic inititative to pressure the Federal Reserve Board into lowering interest rates. Stating that he supports the Fed's policies "in a general way," the budget director accused the Senate Democrats, led by Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, of choosing "easy money" over "tough choices."

Stockman's remarks, made at a session with a small group of reporters, were considerably more partisan than those spoken by Reagan Monday night in his television appeal for passage of the tax measure.

Immediately following Reagan's speech, House Democratic Whip Thomas Foley of Washington announced that many Democrats in the House would support the president on the tax issue. Foley, who represents a conservative constituency, said he backed the revenue bill because "it is fair and because it brings some long-overdue moderation to the administration's economic program."

It has become increasingly apparent that Reagan, faced with a bitter division within the GOP, must depend heavily upon Democratic votes if he is to win passage of his program in the House.

But when Stockman was asked how, given the imperative of Democratic support for the president's program, Republicans could campaign against the Democrats, he responded, "quite easily."

He asserted that "in the main" the Democrats bear a greater responsibility for the current economic situation than the Republicans because they refused to cut spending.

From 1957 until early in the 1970s, the Italian Blue Team reigned supreme as world champions. Then they retired from the scene, and as a result of a scandal involving some taped telephone conversations, some of their players retired from top level play. But the Blue Team is back, and to judge from the drubbing they inflicted on World Olympiad champions, France, Messrs. Belladonna, Forquet, Garozzo and Pabis-Ticci might once again become a dominant force in world bridge.

In this hand from the Italy-France encounter, both teams reached a contract of four spades, and both declarers were faced with the lead of the king of diamonds. The French declarer won in hand and took the heart finesse, which lost to Belladonna's king. He returned the queen of diamonds. Pabis-Ticci carefully ruffed his partner's trick and returned a heart, which Belladonna ruffed. The king of spades subsequently took the setting trick.

At the other table Garozzo was the declarer. He won the king of diamonds and immediately returned a diamond. This thoughtful play shattered the defenders' communications. West, in the actual play, ruffed the second diamond and shifted to a heart. Declarer finessed, East won the king but he had no good return. He tried a trump, but declarer rose with the ace and led another trump, and he could later claim his contract with the help of a club finesse.

Actually, East's best return was a third diamond. But declarer could handle that by sluffing a heart from his hand and taking the ruff in dummy.

The Italians won 13 International Match Points on this hand. They won the 100-board match by 225 IMPS-164.

Saluting the volunteers

Volunteers make their presence felt in many Midland organizations and institutions. The contribution of their time and talent really makes a difference in the effectiveness of those organizations and institutions.

Nowhere is the presence of the volunteers felt stronger than in Midland's public school system where last year more than 2,300 VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools) helped smooth the way for the education of Midland children. VIPS, begun in 1977 under the name Midland Alliance, has expanded its participation in the school system each year since.

This year as in years past the VIPS impact will be felt throughout the school system. Last year volunteers contributed between 17,000 and 18,000 hours of time to the school district. That time makes a difference by freeing teachers to spend their time teaching. The volunteers also help in countless other ways.

The importance of the volunteers is only increased by the fact that Midland still is encountering tremendous growth. That growth means even more children will be enrolling in the public schools within the next few days, which will place additional demands on teachers and other school district officials. The volunteers literally are providing a service that money cannot buy. They are providing a way of ensuring that our children are exposed to the best education possible.

Every Midlander owes the volunteers in our public schools heartfelt thanks. They are individuals who care enough about their community and its future to take an active role in shaping that future. We join all Midlanders in saying thank you to these hundreds of volunteers who give of themselves for the educational benefit of our young people.

Mexico's bitter pill

The recent devaluation of the Mexican peso, the second this year, might be likened to an especially bitter medicine — beneficial in the long run but distasteful all the same.

In the short run, a rapidly weakening peso is likely to mean slower economic growth, more unemployment, a higher inflation rate, and less confidence in the administration of outgoing Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

But allowing the peso to find its own value on international money markets will boost exports and tourism, both acutely sensitive to currency exchange rates. Then too, the devaluation will ease pressure on Mexico's dwindling foreign currency reserves.

Until the last devaluation, Mexico's central bank was dipping into these reserves to support the peso. Specifically, the Banco de Mexico was using dollars to buy up pesos in an effort to hold the line at no more than 49 pesos to the dollar. The bank ran out of dollars, however, and the peso has dropped in value to about 90 to the dollar.

The actual value of the peso on the free market will be determined when the Mexican currency stabilizes sometime in the next week or so. Until then, exchange rates will continue to fluctuate as traders attempt, in effect, to guess the peso's real worth.

For poorer Mexicans who purchase few if any imported products, a hemorrhaging peso may be unsettling but it portends no immediate or drastic drop in their standards of living. But Mexico's politically influential middle classes are being hit hard by the plummeting value of their currency.

Along the border, this will translate to fewer shopping trips to the United States by other than the most affluent Mexicans. In Mexico, it may translate to a deepening political alienation among the very citizens who have benefited the most from the economic boom fueled by oil.

Whatever the short-term economic and political costs, however, the outgoing Lopez Portillo government had no choice but to float the peso. Indeed, devaluation now should soften the hard choices facing incoming President Miguel de la Madrid.

And, provided Mr. Lopez Portillo resists pressures for higher wages and other measures that would undercut the reinvigorating consequences of devaluation in the long run, today's falling peso could seem less of a curse a year or two hence.

Another View:

Wallace's 'mistake'

For former Alabama Gov. George Wallace to address the 25th annual national convention of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Birmingham and admit that he made a mistake in fighting desegregation was historic, symbolic and ironic.

Of all the names associated with the civil rights movement of the 1960s, those of George Wallace, Birmingham and its public safety commissioner, Eugene "Bull" Connor, and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and his Southern Christian Leadership Conference have pivotal significance.

It was only 19 years ago that King led black men, women and children in street marches in Birmingham to demonstrate for civil rights and jobs. Most historians feel that those demonstrations, which Connor confronted with fire hoses, police dogs and nightsticks in a display of police violence that shocked the nation, provided the catalytic effect that led to the enactment of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

During that dreadful time in Birmingham, King was jailed, but emerged as the symbol of non-violent resistance and the leader of a movement that sensitized the consciousness of the entire nation.

In that same year Wallace, then serving his first of two terms as governor, stood in a door at the University of Alabama to block the court-ordered admission of the institution's first black students. He failed in that purpose but became the symbol of the old South and the defender of segregation. His demagogic rhetoric perpetuated racial bigotry and violence.

Wallace again is a candidate for governor of Alabama. He is the leading candidate among the Democratic contenders, has support of black voters and was invited with other gubernatorial candidates to speak at the SCLC convention.

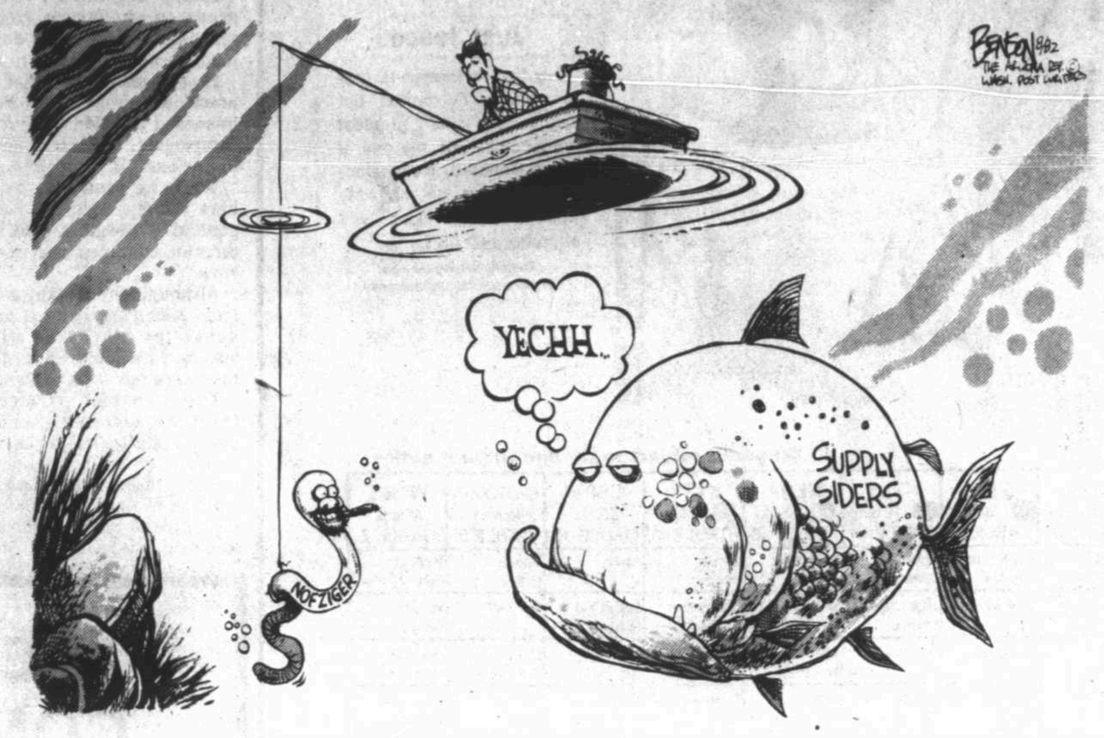

Given the historical background, the irony of his appearance before the SCLC has many meanings and implications. To some, it was the move of a skillful politician. To others, the act of a hypocrite.

Still others will note that Wallace's speech before the SCLC points to many changes that have occurred in the South, particularly in Alabama, that can be traced directly to the Birmingham demonstrations. For one, Birmingham and several other cities in the state have black mayors.

One thing that is clear to everyone is that 25 years ago, during the SCLC's first convention, blacks, repressed by widespread official and systematic discrimination, did not even have the right to vote in Alabama. With that right, they have humbled a man who once led the forces of repression and have altered his actions and his rhetoric.

It is highly significant that George Wallace, who once vowed "segregation now, segregation forever," now says "I made a mistake." It is to his credit that he did so before the SCLC and it is to the SCLC's credit that it invited him to speak.

Torture added to horror of Lebanon's war

BEIRUT — At this writing, the first rays of peace have broken through the war clouds over Beirut.

The PLO chieftain, Yassir Arafat, first told me he would fight to the death in Beirut. Now an aide says Arafat has offered to take the PLO out of Lebanon.

Jack Anderson

This would remove the incendiary from where the powder kegs are kept. Perhaps the more cautious elements on both sides can now control the delicate triggers and somehow muddle through without more carnage.

War is the most spectacular event that men produce. But behind the sound and the fury, war is ugly and evil. Even in Lebanon, a land inured to catastrophe, the bombardment of Beirut was a horror beyond endurance. Grief turned to anger, and anger to bitterness, as the civilians dug the corpses from the rubble.

The horror, however, has been all on one side. I have seen ghastly evidence of atrocities committed by the PLO.

Witnesses told how squads of PLO irregulars had appeared on the beaches of the seaside city of Damur and bombarded the defenseless Christian settlement. Then at gunpoint, survivors were dragged from their homes. They allegedly were taunted, tortured and killed, without mercy.

I heard of no such massacres by the Israelis. But the Israeli troops were not gentle with their prisoners. I spoke to PLO prisoners who told of being pummeled with fists, beaten with sticks and burned with cigarettes.

Volunteer hospital workers were seized by the Israelis who accused them of running a PLO hospital. Hundreds of prisoners, including medical personnel whose skills were desperately needed, were interrogated in the stifling heat for days. According to eyewitness accounts, some were beaten and threatened by their Israeli captors.

A young Canadian surgeon, Dr. Chris Giannou, flew to Washington to complain about the mistreatment of detainees. He was joined by two Norwegian health workers. Dr. Steinar Berge and Oyvind Moeller.

My associates Jack Mitchell and Indy Badhwar interviewed them separately. Berge and Moeller confirmed the accounts of Israeli beatings. They swore that they had personally been forced to sit motionless for 36 hours, surrounded by armored cars and personnel carriers.

The Israelis put out the story that all three were "suspected" of connections to an unnamed European terrorist group. This has brought howls of protest from Canadian and Norwegian authorities.

I went to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, meanwhile, with the stories of Israeli brutality. I found him in shirtsleeves in his Jerusalem office. He listened intently to the allegations. Outwardly, he appeared calm enough. But I felt a tenseness in him, sometimes a sense of beleaguerment.

He told me that he had already heard reports of prisoner abuse and had summoned the subordinate responsible for the treatment of prisoners. "I told him, 'I am your prime minister. I want you to look me in the eye and tell me whether prisoners have been mistreated,'" related Begin.

The prime minister was told that there had been no known atrocities but some prisoners had been slapped around a little. Begin then said: "I told him that such treatment is not tolerable and that I absolutely forbid it."

Begin wrote down the names of the prisoners who told me they had been abused and promised an official investigation. A PLO spokesman, meanwhile, insisted that the stories of PLO atrocities were "Zionist propaganda."

FOOTNOTES OF WAR: In a Palestinian refugee camp that had been slightly damaged by the passing Israelis, an ancient woman, wrinkled and toothless, asked me in Arabic to fix her roof. Flying Israeli shrapnel had left a hole in it. "It is no problem now," she said patiently, "but when it rains, it will be a problem."

— On the eve of the Israeli surge into Lebanon, the PLO let loose a barrage of Katyuska rockets against the Gashe Azim kibbutz near the Lebanese border. One rocket ruined the decor at a nearby restaurant in the luxurious seaside resort, Club Med. Another rocket burst in a banana grove and splattered bananas over the landscape. No one was hurt.

— Israeli defense minister Ariel Sharon is a bulldozer of a man, a one-man blitzkrieg. His beautiful dark-haired wife is as delicate as he is bruising. Theirs was, she told me, a happy marriage. Her secret: "We never argue. He is home so little that I am just good all the time."

— I spent an evening with the Sharons at their ranch on the edge of the Negev desert. The defense minister had a telephone that kept in instant touch with the battlefield. During our talk, he was interrupted by a call on his "hot line." He negotiated a cease-fire on the spot. He recalled that he had tried to phone Prime Minister Menachem Begin from the Beirut battlefront. The call was patched through immediately to Begin while he was visiting President Reagan in the White House.

— Americans are accustomed to wars that last for years; all past Israeli wars have lasted only a few days. This may explain why Sharon referred to the brief Lebanon incursion as "a long war."

INSIDE REPORT:

Shultz performs without any theatrics

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz affirmed his quiet side at a National Security Council (NSC) meeting Aug. 9 when he informed President Reagan and the NSC that he had an "unconfirmed report" that a U.S. helicopter flying into Beirut had been "buzzed" by U.S.-made Israeli jets.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Shultz delivered no critical judgment. He did not raise his voice or endow the incident with theatrics, as his predecessor, Alexander Haig, might have done. But the mere recital of the incident in Shultz's flat, unemotional tone resurrected memories of the unprovoked 1967 Israeli air and sea attack on the U.S.S. Liberty, killing 34 American sailors. Reagan raised his eyebrows and shook his head; Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger bowed his head between his hands.

Without ad hoc commentary, Shultz had made his point. Laid-back and reserved, his inner emotions invisible beneath a seamless carapace, Shultz is quietly making a case with Reagan for belated alterations in the U.S.-Israeli connection. It is a silent revolution against the Haig regime both in policy and process.

Shultz's inner confidence frees him from the need to disprove any personal bias in the Arab-Israeli struggle to counter charges of Arab favoritism made by the Israeli lobby here. Shultz's mandate from Reagan is not to prove some artificial "even-handedness" in the Middle East. It is to enforce the supremacy of American interests over all others, including Israel's.

In private, unpublished letters to heads of Arab states worried about Israel's lengthening military reach and forgotten promises to the Palestinians, Shultz has pledged that the Reagan administration will take "full account of their (the Palestinians') legitimate rights" on the West Bank. From Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who has been dangerously exposed to anti-American Arab nationalism by the siege of Beirut, Shultz has received no fewer than five letters asking the U.S. to enforce the "full autonomy" pledge. Shultz's reply: Please be patient and give us a little more time.

Shultz knows how little time is left. A secret intelligence report now under study at highest administration levels documents the systematic Israeli absorption of the Palestinian West Bank: preferential housing subsidies (courtesy partly of American taxpayers) for Jewish occupants of new Israeli settlements; Israel's takeover of the West Bank electric power grid; a dozen, others.

Shultz will soon go public on these Israeli political moves taken under cover of the Lebanon invasion. But he will do so with the same understatement and lack of drama with which he informed Reagan about the Israeli buzzing of the American helicopter. It was Shultz, backed by national security assistant William P. Clark and Weinberger, who informed Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon that he was not welcome in Washington last week at the very time of Israel's efforts to sabotage U.S. envoy Philip Habib.

Reagan's new secretary of state tells intimates that ending Israel's occupation of Lebanon — which Jerusalem wants to do only after imposing a made-in-Israel treaty — will be much more difficult for Reagan than evacuation of PLO guerrillas from Beirut. After that, Shultz will move on West Bank autonomy.

The strength of Shultz's hand is totally dependent on Reagan's cards. Nearly two months after succeeding Haig, Shultz has reason to believe that Reagan will give him a strong hand to play — and he means to play it quietly.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

Though Midland and Tyler are hundreds of miles apart, the matter I'll discuss in this letter concerns the people of Midland as much as the people of Tyler, so maybe you will print my views of the subject.

My subject is "Flat Rate Tax." As a seventy-one-year-old man, I'm scared sleepless by that threat. It is a threat, because it is a rich man's scheme to get much of his income tax load shifted to the working poor, the elderly poor or just any place Congress can put it. The most likely victims of the plan would be the more than 15,000,000 elderly people whose income is not enough now to need to file a return.

We hear all kinds of tales designed to disarm us. One is a $15,000 exemption for everybody. Anyone who has examined income tax statistics knows that can't be done, at least not without ruining the economy with a deficit or perhaps saddling all of us with a big federal sales tax. How would you like to pay a "value added tax" of about five cents on the dollar for everything you buy just to replace the revenue lost in giving the rich a tax break? Another tale we hear is "Flat Rate" can be accomplished by abolishing the rich man's tax shelters. Maybe that is so, if we want to all pay about 25 percent of our taxable income, I say that because revenue lost through "loopholes" is not nearly as high as many people imagine. That man who exploits loopholes would gladly trade them for flat tax, because he will pay even less then.

Congressmen are desperate to "do something" perhaps because they can point to little they have done the last two years. Let's ask them not to panic into supporting this most radical, most dangerous scheme. Otherwise, we elderly might be wise to practice going hungry and hot in the summer and hungry and cold in the winter. We will need to know how to cope with those things when we start paying a lot of income tax again.

Another route?

To The Editor:

Regarding Midland's one-way streets: After 25 years in Midland, I wonder who the "college degreed brains" are that figured out the "one-way streets" in Midland. I thought the principle behind this was to conserve energy (gasoline) and wear and tear on Midland streets. Here is my example of how conservative it is.

I had to go to town on business last week to these three places in this order: 1st National drive-in, Gibraltar drive-in, post office. Leaving my house, I turned south on Big Spring to Michigan where I turned east to Colorado and then south to 1st National drive-in. Leaving there, I had to go back west to Colorado, then south on Colorado to Texas, then east on Texas to Main, north on Main to Illinois, then west on Illinois to the alley, that leads south to Gibraltar's drive-in window. (and that alley was so blocked with cars I could barely turn into the teller window)

From there I came out on Texas facing west and followed their lane to Loraine where I had to turn back north to Illinois, then I had to go west on Illinois to Colorado, south on Colorado to Missouri, east on Missouri to Main, north on Main to the post office. Coming from the post office wasn't so bad as, thank God, Wall and Big Spring are still two-way streets.

If anyone can show me a shorter route than I had to take, I would appreciate it.

New fire trucks

To The Editor:

The recent news article in the paper showing pictures of the accident with the fire truck the brakes failed on makes me wonder why the city of Midland cares so little for the fire department, the lives of the firemen and the public, that they would continue to use a vehicle over twenty-four years old, especially when they had been made aware of the fact that the brakes were no good.

Surely Midland can afford to spend some of the money they use in other useless ways to maintain a department that is so vital to the well being of the city, or do they care so little for the lives of the men that work in that department?

To send an old truck in for repairs and a new paint job to make it last another five years does not make it new on the inside or less dangerous. Perhaps changing the color may fool the public, but not the men that man the vehicles.

I say lets get our fire department decent trucks and equipment to do their job in. They deserve it. If Odessa can buy new fire trucks why can't Midland?

PLO frees captured Israeli pilot, kidnapped soldier

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization today freed a captured Israeli pilot and a kidnapped soldier, clearing the way for a U.S.-guaranteed PLO evacuation from west Beirut to start Saturday, Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan announced.

Wazzan said in a nationally televised statement that the remains of Israeli soldiers requested by Israel were also delivered by the PLO to the International Red Cross in the Lebanese capital.

Israel had demanded the return of the two Israeli prisoners and the remains of soldiers killed in Lebanon before the start of the evacuation of an estimated 7,000 guerrillas could begin under a plan the Israeli Cabinet endorsed on Thursday.

Israeli forces prepare for new round of fighting in Bekka Valley

JOUB JANNINE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli armored forces are readying for a possible new explosion of fighting in the Bekaa Valley in the aftermath of the Palestinian pullout from Beirut.

Artillery and small-arms fire continues to echo across the southern part of the broad green valley in eastern Lebanon where Israeli and Syrian units are dug in among the corn and bean fields of the country's richest farmland. Israeli news reports say 10 PLO guerrillas and four Israeli soldiers have been killed since Aug. 1.

Many of the recent clashes have involved Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas trying to infiltrate Israeli lines from Syrian-held territory, the Israeli military command reports.

The Israeli government said Thursday it would hold the Syrians responsible for these guerrilla operations.

Some in Israel and elsewhere expect Defense Minister Ariel Sharon to launch a new drive to push the Syrian army and the rest of the PLO out of Lebanon once the Beirut evacuation is completed.

"The defense minister might exploit any hostile act against Israel's presence in Lebanon as an excuse and explanation for Israeli military action...in north Lebanon, in the Bekaa on the Syrian border, and in general," said Mordechai Gur, a former military chief of staff and a member of the Israeli Parliament from the the opposition Labor Party, in a newspaper interview.

The Israelis say they fear that some of the thousands of PLO guerrillas leaving Beirut for Syria will drop out of their convoys on the way and join their comrades in the Bekaa.

"After they leave Beirut, we think they will step up their activity here, to show they're still alive," said Maj. Shmuel, the deputy commander of Israeli forces in the dusty foothills of Mount Aarbi, overlooking the valley. Conforming to regulations, he would identify himself only by his first name.

WAFA, the Palestinian news agency, claims that the Israelis are reinforcing their troops in the Bekaa and sent in an armored battalion recently. Western diplomats in Beirut reported this week that a large number of Israeli troops had moved into the mountains overlooking the valley farther north.

The Israelis say the Syrians have two armored divisions in the Bekaa — possibly 30,000 men — and the PLO has 4,000 to 5,000 guerrillas, many of whom retreated there from southern Lebanon.

Israeli tanks punched into the southern part of the valley June 10 after four days of heavy fighting against the Syrians, who intervened in the Lebanese civil war in 1976 and have been there ever since. The Israelis established a front line running from the Syrian border westward across the valley, then northwest over Lebanon's central mountain range and into the Beirut area.

In the Bekaa, small Israeli units are dug in every few hundred yards, often amid fields where Lebanese farmers continue their work. The Syrian-PLO lines are about a mile away.

One or two shellings or other incidents are reported each day. On Wednesday, the Israeli command said, its troops killed two guerrillas and captured two others trying to slip into Israeli territory near Aamiq, five miles across the valley from Joub Jannine.

NATO allies participate in exercise

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Troops from the United States and five other NATO allies will take part in "Cold Fire 82," a joint land and air exercise in southern West Germany Sept. 9-24, the alliance announced Friday.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) said forces from Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, West Germany, Great Britain and the United States will participate in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization maneuvers.

"Cold Fire 82" will involve "extensive flying operations" at various altitudes by day and, at times, by night, SHAPE said in a statement.

The maneuver "will exercise the Central European Command tactical air forces and army formations in joint land-air and autonomous operations," SHAPE said.

"Cold Fire 82" is part of NATO's annual fall maneuvers extending from northern Norway to Turkey's eastern borders.

First-time jitters recalled by night club's one-timers

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Benatar, David Brenner, Billy Crystal, Robin Williams, Andy Kaufman and other singers and comedians who nurtured their early careers at Catch A Rising Star haven't forgotten the New York nightclub.

They celebrated its 10th anniversary this week, recalling the pre-fame days when they performed to an audience hoping to see a star on the rise.

"I always felt the audiences at the club were a little like the people who go to stock-car races," said Miss Benatar, now one of the world's most successful female rock stars. "They come in looking for winners, but they've also got their eye out for accidents, for the bomb."

The reunion was taped Wednesday and Thursday nights for a cable TV special to be shown in October.

Crystal compares the club to a gymnasium. "The way to use a club is not to do the same thing every night, not to be afraid to bomb," he said.

Rodney Dangerfield, who lives a few blocks from the club, frequently drops in to try out new material. John Belushi used to wander in to do his Joe Cocker imitation. Steve Martin and Dan Aykroyd shaped one of their swinging bachelor routines for "Saturday Night Live" at the club.

For Brenner, the club serves as a typewriter: "I write on stage," he said. "...if I'm really cooking, I'll get 15 minutes of new material."

Miss Benatar, however, prefers the big time. "I wish I could say I missed it, but I don't," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — A cartoonists' show opening here today had an entry from someone not known for his artwork — Ronald Reagan.

"A doodle sheet that President Reagan was pleased to do for your exhibit," the White House wrote in submitting seven little cartoons, all on 8½-by-11-inch White House memorandum paper.

The doodles include the head of a dour man with glasses, center-parted hair and wearing a shirt and tie.

The others include a horse's head, a man with a long, bent nose and a man with a sideswept pompadour hairdo who looks a bit like Reagan himself.

For three weeks, comic artists affiliated with the New York-based Newspaper Comics Council Inc. will entertain,, draw and discuss their work for lunch-hour passers-by.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Former astronaut James Irwin, a member of the Apollo 15 crew that landed on the moon, is climbing Mount Ararat, the legendary site of Noah's ark.

Irwin, 52, of Colorado Springs, Colo., accompanied by an 11-member team, was nearing the peak of 16,946-foot mountain in extreme eastern Turkey, officials said Thursday.

Irwin, according to local officials, will study the spot where Noah's ark supposedly came to rest on the north slope 18 miles from Turkey's heavily guarded frontier with the Soviet Union.

Irwin, a former lieutenant colonel in the Air Force, and astronaut David R. Scott made the fourth moon landing on July 30, 1971. The crew was the first to use the lunar rover vehicle.

Several Mount Ararat climbs in the past drew criticism from Soviet officials, who claimed the expeditions included spies.

U.S. Embassy sources in Ankara said Irwin and his team obtained Turkish approval after a detailed study of the climbers' backgrounds and their planned routes on the mountain.

According to past climbers, the remnants of the ark reportedly are located between the 13,000-foot and 14,000-foot levels on a ledge carved out of the north face.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Mayor Vincent C. Schoemehl was returning from Kansas City for a breakfast meeting when his car broke down, so he opted for a free-wheeling method of transportation: hitchhiking.

Three businessmen from Columbia, Mo., were driving east on Interstate 70 early Wednesday when they picked up the mayor near Kingdom City.

To show his gratitude, Schoemehl promised the men — Martin P. Tudor, Ralph Gates and Dennis Markham — six free tickets to a Cardinals-Phillies baseball game and to the World Series, if the Cardinals get there.

Captive baby condor doing just great, researcher says

SAN PASQUAL, Calif. (AP) — A rare condor chick nabbed from its nest by the U.S. Fish and Game Service is eating heartily and dancing happily, but its parents are wondering where their baby went.

The giant black birds returned to their home a day after their chick was taken from the Condor Research Center in Ventura County.

"It's a good nest cave, dark and deep with a soft bottom," research biologist Noel Snyder said. "They entered the nest and searched for the chick the day after we took it.

"Then they wandered off, and one came back the following day. We expect that they will hang around for another week or so, then leave."

Snyder and his colleagues keep out of sight because "we didn't want them to associate us with the loss of the chick," he said Thursday.

The chick was taken from the nest in the Sespe Condor Sanctuary, which is within the research center, because the parents were away and had failed to feed it properly, Snyder said. Only one other condor chick is known to exist, and is under observation at a nest in Santa Barbara County.

The California Fish and Game Commission, which gave permission for wildlife workers to take one California condor chick in hopes of developing a captive population, believes the species is almost extinct. About 30 of the birds live in the mountains of southern San Joaquin Valley.

Since arriving a week ago today at the San Diego Wild Animal Park, the chick has been eating about 50 skinned mice on alternate days.

The condor's keeper, Bill Toone, keeps out of its sight when he leaves the mice. Park workers don't want the bird to associate food with humans, Toone said, noting, "he's eating entirely on his own."

QE2 returns to cruise duty

NEW YORK (AP) — The Queen Elizabeth 2, refitted as a cruise ship after a recent tour of duty as a British troop carrier in the Falklands war, has left New York City on a three-day "Cruise to Nowhere."

The last of the great luxury liners on the North Atlantic run arrived Thursday, greeted by helicopters whirling overhead and a salute from a flotilla of boats.

The QE2 left England Aug. 14 carrying 1,700 passengers for the five-day crossing to America and is expected to begin the return voyage Sunday.

In the meantime, after its U.S.-bound passengers disembarked, the 66,000-ton floating city took on 1,700 new passengers for the three-day "Cruise to Nowhere," a tour along the Long Island coast and into Long Island Sound.

Capt. Peter Jackson, the Cunard liner's skipper, was reluctant to discuss the QE2's tour of duty in the Falkland Islands at length. He called the episode "a most harrowing and worrying experience."

Referring to the British campaign to recapture the islands from Argentina, he said, "Without this ship the whole venture would not have been possible."

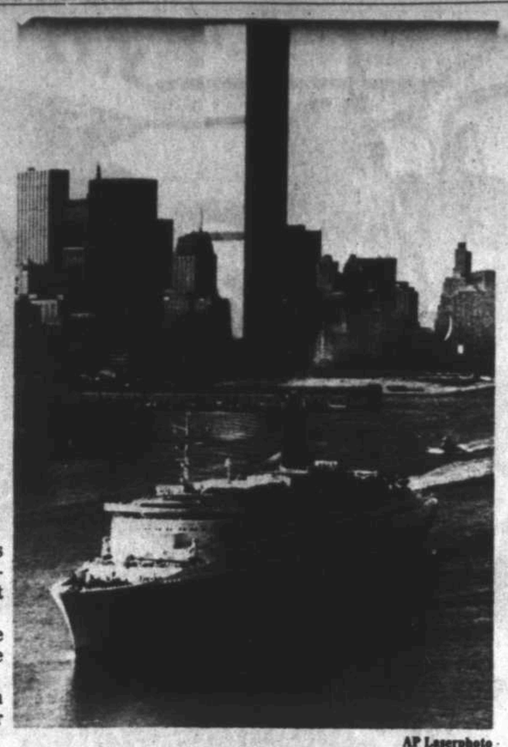

"This ship was in the greatest possible danger when she was in the hostile area because we had no air cover and no escort." Jackson said.

The luxury liner was called to war May 3 at the start of the trans-Atlantic crossing season. Cunard lost 10 of the 24 trans-Atlantic crossings scheduled this year during the three months the QE2 was at war or in port for refitting.

The vessel has been painted gray and white, instead of black — but is keeping the old orange funnel with black stripes.

As the liner passed the Battery at the southern tip of Manhattan Island for the three-day cruise, it was greeted with a rousing salute of fireworks and swing music.

When the government requisitioned the QE2, Cunard said it meant an immediate loss of $3.5 million from one canceled cruise and threatened to wipe out a projected $8 million in profits of the trans-Atlantic season.

Tigers being watched closely

CINCINNATI (AP) — Three rare, white Bengal tigers born at the Cincinnati Zoo are being watched by personnel 24 hours a day.

The births bring to 22 the total born at the park, which has nearly half of the more than 50 tigers that have been born in the world's zoos.

Two other tiger cubs were born last November to a differnt mother, said spokeswoman Janet Ross.

Florida catfish 'crawling' north

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Crawling "much like a GI on his belly," walking catfish have been inching their way north in Florida since a dozen of them escaped from a collection of exotic fish 15 years ago.

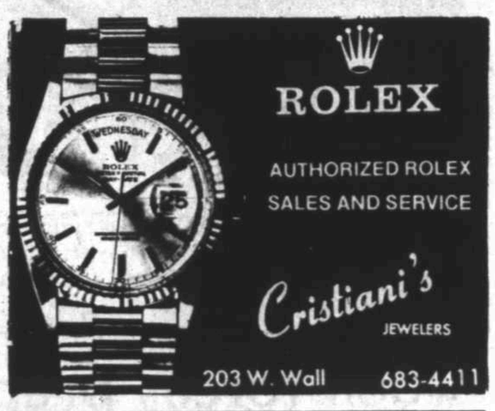

They're not particularly palatable; they've been known to terrorize dogs, and their stiff spines are so sharp they can puncture a tire. They also reproduce quickly and their population is estimated to be around 10 million.

Their talents are limited, though. They "don't climb trees or tap-dance," says state fish researcher Paul Shafland. "They crawl much like a GI on his belly with a rifle, using his elbows.

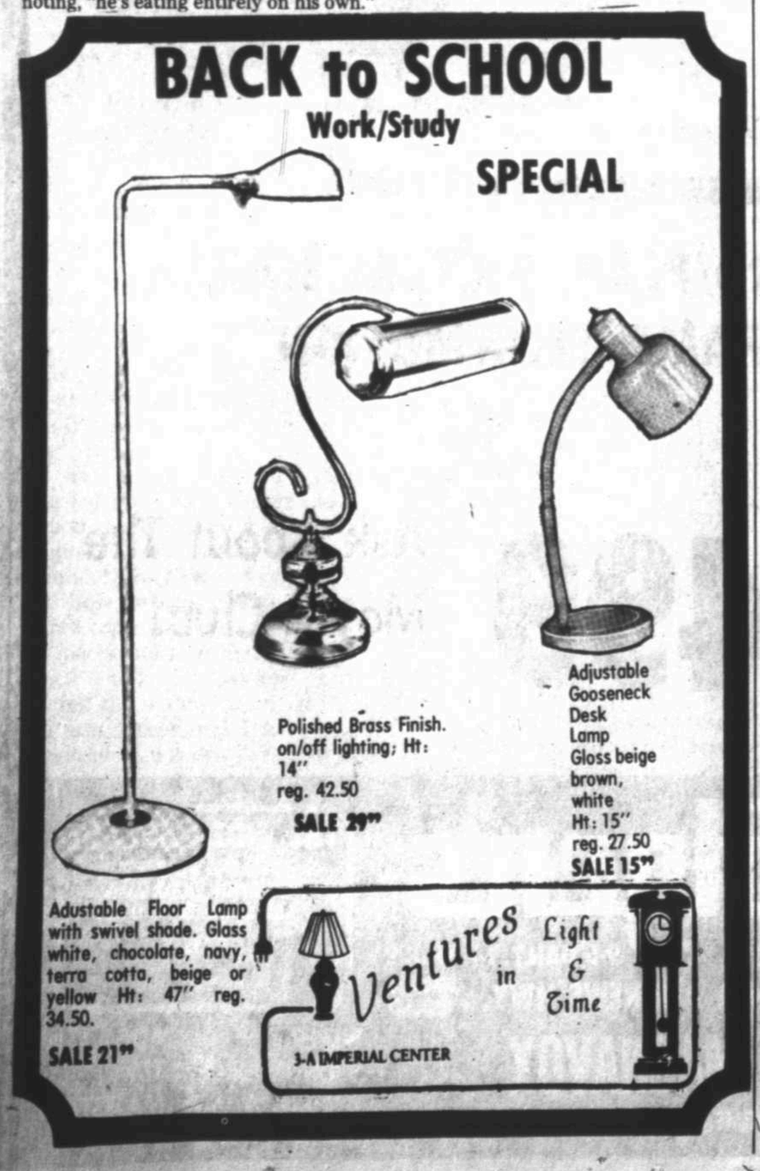

The species, native to Africa and Asia, is about 60 million to 70 million years old, said Dr. Walter Courtenay, who heads fish research at Florida Atlantic University. The fish, living in drying-out lakes in the distant past, was forced to develop an air bladder near its head for breathing both in and out of water, he said.

In laboratory tests they have lived as long as 85 days out of water, as long as they were kept moist.

And they can be a nuisance. Fish farmers must fence them out to protect their food base, said Shafland, who heads the Non-Native Fish Research Laboratory here for the state game commission.

Dilemma: Should lawyer serve public or client?

By SCOTT WINOKUR
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — When a convicted California drug dealer was caught in New Mexico with an alleged half-ton of marijuana, the arrest posed a moral question for his attorney, Ron Minkin.

Minkin asked himself if he should remain a steadfast champion for his client, Ernest Lee Pemberton, or act on the public's behalf to the accused man's detriment. He decided to put Pemberton first.

In a court document, the attorney admitted allowing a Los Angeles Superior Court judge to believe in 1978 that Pemberton had been an exemplary probationer deserving a shortened probationary period. He didn't say Pemberton had been arrested a few months earlier. Minkin also attempted to mislead New Mexico officials as to his client's true name.

In the Minkin-Pemberton case, officials in both states and the Bar of California quickly learned what happened. The court recommended Minkin's suspension for 30 days, holding that he should have ended his relationship with Pemberton, who eventually jumped bail. The state Supreme Court agreed.

Rocked in the last decade by political and corporate scandals and prodded by reformers, the nation's 550,000-member legal profession finds itself divided on whom it ultimately serves — individual clients or the public as a whole.

Like Minkin, many lawyers are emphatically reaffirming their dedication to clients. Less orthodox lawyers maintain that their primary duty is to truth and justice, and they have stirred an impassioned history-making discussion within the 280,000-member American Bar Association, the world's largest professional organization.

The ABA's Commission on Evaluation of Professional Standards has presented the 387-member House of Delegates with answers to questions like Minkin's. One stands out: Under certain circumstances, the Kutak Commission says, lawyers ought to report their clients to law-enforcement authorities.

Key confidentiality rules offered by the panel would give attorneys the "discretion" to reveal otherwise privileged information about clients in order to prevent crimes and frauds likely to cause death, substantial bodily harm and financial injury, to prevent crimes furthered by the lawyer's services and to defend themselves against criminal charges or disciplinary actions.

The proposed rules also forbid lawyers to knowingly lie to judges, to offer false evidence and to fail to disclose facts necessary to prevent further crimes by their clients.

"The new rules will help concientious lawyers to practice law well. If accepted, they will signify that the legal profession is not just a closed and private operation," commission Chairman Robert Kutak, an Omaha securities lawyer, said.

Acording to Kutak, the decision to scrap the current 48-page code of ethics, passed in 1969, emerged in 1977. The code was modeled after a 1908 code, divided into nine broad "canons," 132 "ethical considerations" and 41 "disciplinary rules," and based on "an individual lawyer with a real, live client whose problem would be solved in a courthouse, particularly a trial," Kutak said.

"Trade unions, fiduciary trusts, partnerships and corporations monopolize the life of the law today, but they are not focused upon in the current code, which goes back to a time when there were no corporations to represent." As a result, Kutak said, lawyers today lack clear direction when they struggle with confusing and possibly momentous confidentiality questions.

"The new code spells out options, including seeking reconsideration of the matter, telling clients to seek separate legal opinions, going to a higher authority, and if all have been exhausted, at that point and only at that point may a lawyer have the discretion to take whatever action is reasonably believed necessary."

The most powerful opposition to the critical confidentiality provisions of the Kutak proposal, which the commission already has watered down, comes from the prestigious American College of Trial Lawyers and the California and New York State Bar Associations.

"Blowing the whistle on your client is verboten in our view, except where life and death is oncerned. It would destroy the effectiveness of lawyers, whose offices should have the sanctity of the confessional," Bridgeport, Conn., trial lawyer Theodore Koskoff asserted.

Koskoff, chairman of the Commission on Professional Responsbility of the 43,000-member Association of Trial Lawyers of America, warned that redefining the lawyer's role along the lines of the Kutak report would tend to subvert the constitutional system.

Consumers will not benefit from surplus Michigan crop

By SARAH FRITSCHNER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Michigan cherry growers cannot tell a lie. The huge supply of Michigan sour cherries — the biggest crop in 18 years — probably will not result in any cost benefit to the consumer.

Still, Michigan cherry growers appeal to the public to Buy More Cherries — and brought this appeal to Capitol Hill last week where they threw an ice cream social for congressmen and their staffs.

MACMA, the marketing division of the Michigan Farm Bureau, came to town with 600 pounds of surplus sweet and sour cherries, a bundle of recipes (printed on cherry-red cards) and sang the praises of the federal marketing orders that keep cherry production stable.

The marketing order concerning cherries allows the growers to withhold 20 percent of their crop from the market. The government reimburses the farmers for these cherries, and the farmers get higher prices for the cherries that do come to market. But the Office of Management and Budget vetoed this year's support two weeks into harvest — particularly bad timing, said Harry Foster, of the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Subsequently, the entire crop is going to market — all 250 million pounds of sour cherries; all 70 million pounds of sweet, dark cherries. Michigan cherry growers produce 85 percent of the nation's fruit, and this year's crop is selling for 9 or 10 cents a pound, compared with last year's 45 cents. Virtually all of these cherries, said Foster, will be used in processing such things as canned cherries, pie filling and cheesecake topping.

So they came to Washington, "to get rid of some cherries and to publicize the plight of the cherry farmer," said Bill Pichurski, a Michigan lobbyist. They got rid of some of the cherries by topping 600 pounds of vanilla ice cream with sweet cherries, sour cherries, cherries in rum sauce and cherry pie filling. In addition, order blanks were distributed to attendees that allowed them to order 10 pounds of individually quick frozen cherries (sweet or sour) for 62 cents a pound.

Washington is one stop on the public relations circuit. Here MACMA representatives approached large federal agencies — the departments of Agriculture and Army, for example — asking them to use cherries in their massive feeding programs in hopes of increasing the demand, helping the growers on small farms remain solvent.

Mother's milk bank saves babies

By GRACE O'CONNOR
Hearst Feature Service

GREENVILLE, N.Y. — Maria Mathisen and Milk for Life Inc. were ready when the call came from a family in rural Oklahoma whose year-old child could digest only mother's milk. Within hours, Mathisen put a supply of frozen mother's milk on a flight to Dallas.

There, a volunteer pilot from Air Lifeline — a network of private plane owners in Texas — picked up the package and flew it to a small airport near the child's Milburne, Okla., home. Because of the shipment from Milk for Life, Lacie Smith is alive.

Milk for Life covers 14 states and is one of only two milk banks in the country which deliver outside their immediate areas, said Mathisen, who is the director. The other is the Central Massachusetts Milk Bank in Worcester.

In its three-year existence, Milk for Life has provided mother's milk to 36 infants nationwide. In addition to Lacie, Milk for Life now is delivering milk to one child in Massachusetts, one in Florida and five in California.

"We know of 20 other milk banks across the country, but often they are dry, closed or have only a minuscule amount to offer," Mathisen said. Milk for Life runs that risk too, she said. Lacie, for example, requires 90 to 120 ounces a day and will need shipments for two more years.

The little girl comes from a family with a history of allergies and milk intolerance. Nine children in two generations have died and doctors decided only mother's milk would save her. But because her mother is on medication for allergies and kidney problems, Lacie could not be breastfed. An Oklahoma hospital supplied 3,000 ounces of milk, but it wasn't enough.

"The Massachusetts Milk Bank put us in touch with Maria," Lacie's mother said. Since then the two banks have alternated in shipping milk to Lacie.

Milk for Life was conceived shortly after the birth of Mathisen's first baby, now 9. Three weeks after delivery, Mathisen required surgery. She fed the infant "by pumping my milk in the hospital, freezing it and sending it home."

When her third child, now 3 1/2, was born, Mathisen had extra milk and froze it. In the back of her mind was the memory of an article she'd read about parents in Texas "going insane trying to keep their baby in mother's milk." She was sure that one day some child might benefit from the milk she was freezing. Then the first call came.

"My sister heard an appeal for mother's milk and called me," she said. "I called the state troopers and within three hours they had picked up my milk and delivered it to a baby in Long Island."

Today, shipments start with volunteer donors. The milk lasts up to two years at subzero temperatures in the bank's freezer but because of the demand, packages seldom are around for longer than three months.

The price is nominal, Mathisen said. "Most milk banks charge $2 an ounce; we charge families 50 cents an ounce for shipping and processing.

Congressman says pregnancy drug warning is not enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drug used for "morning sickness" in pregnancy is scheduled to carry a revised warning linking its use in high doses to animal birth defects, but a congressman who has studied the product says the warning is insufficient.

The Food and Drug Administration approved a revision of the prescribing instructions for the drug Bendectin last month to show that one preliminary study linked the drug to bone deformities and diaphram hernias in rats and another study linked it to heart defects in monkeys.

Merrell Dow Pharmaceutical, manufacturer of Bendectin, is printing the revised prescribing instructions and will supply them to physicians and others at an unspecified date.

But Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., said Wednesday the revision isn't likely to catch the attention of physicians who have been prescribing the drug for years.

"This is the most abused drug there is that is taken during pregnancy," said Walgren, a member of the Science and Technology Committee who has researched Bendectin.

He said that although the drug should only be taken in a very small number of cases, "hundreds of thousands of women use it as a convenience" instead of taking non-drug measures such as eating dry toast or drinking or cold liquids.

Walgren said many doctors are not aware that there could be a problem with it.

But Dr. Robert Temple, acting head of the FDA's office of new drug evalutation, defended the labeling revision. He said it is adequate considering the FDA is "quite uncertain as to how meaningful (the hernia study) is," the Washington Post reported in Thursday's editons

DEAR ABBY

Folks next door flunk good-neighbor test

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is a letter I would like my neighbors to see. Perhaps your column will reach them:

"Dear Neighbors,

"I am reminiscing today over the 25 years that we have been your neighbors. When we moved here from out of state, we waited for you to welcome us. You never did.

"We are a decent, respectable family. Maybe our children were a little noisy at times, and our grass was uncut once in a while, and our religion was different from yours — so you ignored us.

"Events in our lives — births, graduations, weddings, deaths — came and went with no acknowledgments from you.

"Now that we are all old and the children are gone from the street, shall we be hypocritical and mourn your deaths, or regret your moving away?

"I think not. We are all poorer for having ignored one another, but we survived. May our children extend the hand of friendship to THEIR neighbors." — AGNES IN CULVER CITY, CALIF.

DEAR AGNES: What's done is done, but times have changed. Neighbors need each other today for security as well as for the sake of old-fashioned friendship.

This is a plea for people to reach out and offer their friendship to the newcomers in the neighborhood. And if the welcome is slow in coming, the newcomers should initiate the dialogue.

Nothing separates like silence.

DEAR ABBY: One of my relatives intimidates me every time I use the word "supper" — as though it is a long-outdated word used only by uneducated peasants.

Abby, if you had invited guests to a large, heavy meal on Sunday around noon, how would you feel if they said, "Thanks for the 'lunch'"? And if you served soup and crackers for an evening meal, should you be thanked for "dinner"?

Just what is the correct name for the heaviest meal of the day if it is served at noon? And what would you call the lightest meal of the day if it is served at night? Thank you. — CONFUSED IN PASADENA

DEAR CONFUSED: "Dinner" is the principal meal of the day. "Lunch" is a light meal — usually eaten at noon. And "supper" is the evening meal when dinner is taken at noon.

If I'm in error, I'll eat my Webster's dictionary for "supper" because I've already had "dinner." You're welcome.

DEAR ABBY: I am a man with a problem I've never seen in your column: the terrible curse of being a redhead! I'm 32 years old, and I can't get a girl because of my red hair. All my relatives tell me I'm good-looking, but they probably feel sorry for me.

I hate feeling like a freak. Is there a club for redheaded men I could join? When people with the same problem get together, they tend to help each other, and I sure do need help. Thanks. — BETTER DEAD THAN RED

DEAR RED: I know of no club for redheads, but I know a lot of men who would be happy to have a head full of hair — regardless of the color.

There are many good-looking, successful redheaded men: Red Buttons, Red Skelton, and that heart-breaker of all times, Van Johnson! Cheer up, Red! You don't have a problem. It's all in your head.

Genes influence heart attack severity

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors examining the way heart trouble is inherited have found that two genes seem to help determine whether heart attacks will cause serious damage.

They found that people with a particular combination of these two genes are more likely to have damaging or fatal injury if they suffer heart attacks.

"A genetic influence may play a part in determining the outcome of myocardial infarction (heart attack)," the doctors concluded.

The doctors focused on the genes that control the production of a blood protein called haptoglobin. There are two kinds of these genes, and everybody has a pair of them — either two identical genes or one of each type.

The study, directed by Dr. Jean-Paul Chapelle at the University of Liege in Belgium, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The two kinds of genes are labeled Hp1 and Hp2. The doctors found that people who have two Hp2 genes are likely to suffer the worst heart attacks. But even though their attacks are more severe, they are no more prone to having heart attacks than other people are.

People with two Hp2 genes are more likely to die from their heart attacks, they learned. In the first six months after the seizures, 19 percent of them died, compared with 13 percent of the other people.

Other studies have suggested that people with two Hp1 genes are more susceptible to cancer.

Carny life: Miss Peggy finds more than fat chance

By BRUCE BOYLE
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — "It takes four men to hugger anna boxcar to lugger."

The speakers blare the message over and over. The dim light comes through the canvas tent wall and turns a sallow, jaundiced color.

Miss Peggy sits in a soft, deep armchair for 10 hours a day, occasionally reaching into a cardboard box to stroke three sleeping puppies.

She smokes cigarettes one after the other. She has blond hair, parted simply, and blue-gray eyes that look right into yours. Her cheeks are heavily rouged and her lips bright red. The colors look too gay in the dusty, yellow light.

Her sundress is in vivid horizontal stripes. Her feet are encased in ankle-high thermal slippers.

She weighs 558 pounds. The flesh billows over the joints at elbow and knee.

When she moves, it is with that slow and ponderous grace peculiar to fat people and tall ships under full sail.

"You talk to her an' she'll talk to you," the speaker shouts.

They pay 50 cents each at the county fair to stare at, and speak to, Miss Peggy. She shakes hands. It is a small, delicate hand, soft as a child's.

Her voice is hoarse from the cigarettes and answering the questions. After three years as the fat lady in fairs in California and Arizona, Miss Peggy, 30, has heard most of them before.

"They want to know how much I weigh. They want to know how I got so fat, stuff like that," she says.

In the parade before her this day there are two towheaded boys who stand there looking at her, then at the ground, and back again.

A young couple in look-alike clothes come in arm-in-arm. The woman does not ask a question. The man asks three. "How much do you weigh?" "Is it easy for you to walk around?" "Do you feel all right?"

She answers, smiling and polite. She weighs 558 pounds. It's no problem getting around. Her feet hurt sometimes.

One of the towheads asks, "How'd you get so, uh, heavy?"

"It's just my own body metabolism. I eat and just never burn it up. I don't eat that much, really," she answered.

She has always been heavy, since she was a child in Sacramento, Calif. Her only other job was working in a program for the handicapped in Sacramento, making wind chimes.

Her mother, brother and sister still live there.

"My brother encouraged me in this. My mother accepts it. I don't really know how my sister feels.

"No, they don't come to see me," she says.

There are questions that bother her. "Sometimes they get too personal. Some people want to know everything — I mean everything," she says.

"And when she dances she shakes like a bowl of jelly," cries the speaker.

Dental school applications decline again

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Applications for dental school this fall were down for the eighth consecutive year, with students increasingly concerned that the recession has made the profession less profitable.

While final figures aren't available yet, a spot check of the nation's 60 private and public dental school shows that fewer students competed for fewer spots in this fall's class.

The American Association of Dental Schools in Washington says applications for the 1981-82 school year were 8,852, a bit more than half the 1975 total of 15,734. Enrollments also fell, from a peak of 6,301 in 1978 to 5,855.

High tuition is an added drag on enrollments. At private dental schools annual tuition averages $8,702, and $2,244 at public schools, but costs can run as high as $13,500 — at New York University and Boston University, for instance.

School officials add that the recession is bad news for dentistry generally, since that's one kind of health care the public readily postpones when family budgets tighten.

"There is not as much demand for dental care, apparently," says Richard Mumma, dean of NYU's dental school.

For those reasons, say dental school administrators, many math and science-oriented students who once would have considered dentistry are instead choosing engineering schools, training for a field with far brighter job prospects.

"In talking with students, I'd say the cost of education and the problems of borrowing money are real problems. And they're also perceiving that dentists aren't doing as well as they used to financially," says Dr. Robert Thye, director of admissions at the University of California in Los Angeles.

He says applications at UCLA dental school have dropped about 10 percent a year since 1979. Eight hundred applicants competed for 96 spots this fall, compared with about 900 applicants last school year.

UCLA and other schools such as University of Michigan, are shrinking the size of their classes at least partly because of the elimination last year of a 19-year-old federal subsidy created when Congress believed the nation faced a shortage of dentists.

More women delay motherhood

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women in their early 30s became first-time mothers at a record rate in the 1970s, the government reported today.

"It is evident that large numbers of women have postponed marriage and motherhood to an unprecedented extent since the post-Depression years of the 1930s," a study from the National Center for Health Statistics said.

"The desire of many women to complete their education and become established in a career appears to be an important factor in accounting for the high levels of postponed childbearing," it said.

While first births to women aged 25 to 39 increased steadily throughout the 1970s, the largest increases were among women aged 30 to 34. This group experienced a first-birth rate surge of 66 percent between 1970 and 1979, from 7.3 first births per 1,000 to 12.1 per 1,000.

The study, called "Trends in First Births to Older Mothers, 1970 to 1979," said the trend in delayed childbearing was strong among women with at least four years of college.

Nearly 50 percent of the first-time mothers aged 30 to 34 had completed four years of college in 1979, compared with 28 percent in 1970.

More than 115,000 births in 1979 were to women in their 30s who were having a first child. The figure in 1970 was 54,108.

The report said the steady increase in first-birth rates for women in their 30s was occurring at a time when birth rates for women of younger ages fell. It is based on information reported on birth certificates filed in the states.

Birth rates for teenagers dropped steadily throughout the decade. Those for women aged 20 to 24 fell steeply in the early 1970s and then stabilized.

The best educated women in the age group of 25 to 29 are continuing to postpone motherhood, the report said. The birth rate for women with four years or more of college declined 14 percent, from 80.3 per 1,000 in 1970 to 69.1 per 1,000 in 1979.

Women in their 30s face a higher risk than younger women of having babies with birth defects.

Young children contemplate suicide

By JOSEPH CAREY
Hearst Feature Service

Within a 24-hour period, a 4-year-old youngster — let's call him Erik — wrapped himself in a blanket and set it afire twice. When his mother asked him why, he replied: "Because I have to do it because there will be no more Erik."

Interviewed by a psychiatrist, Erik said he was a sad, bad boy and, therefore, "has to die."

During some of his therapy sessions, Erik continually hurled himself from elevated places and frequently walked into walls, bruising his forehead.

After three years of therapy, Erik's potentially life-threatening behavior has subsided, but stress still upsets him.

Most parents — perhaps because they may see it as a reflection on them — would like to believe that actions like Erik's are really accidents. But a growing number of psychiatrists have a different explanation. They call this type of behavior in young children "intentional death-seeking."

"I'm sure it's happening everywhere," says Dr. Perhihan Rosenthal, a child psychiatrist at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center. She documented 16 such cases involving children under age 5.

Rosenthal and others cast a skeptical eye on the figures compiled by the National Safety Council in 1978 for the leading causes of accidental death among children aged 1 to 4: car accidents, 1,287; fires and burns, 742; drownings, 630; ingestion of food or objects, 167; falls, 121; and others, 557. In addition, poison control centers report about 73,000 annual lethal and non-lethal poisonings of children under age 5.

Dr. Derek Miller, a psychiatrist at Northwestern University, says that probably five times as many suicides occur as are reported and that there are 10 times as many attempts as completed acts. A rough estimate puts the number of suicide attempts per year at 25,500 for adolescents and young adults.

Traditionally, it was believed that young children could not, by definition, commit suicide because they had not yet reached the age of reason — about 7 or 8. But studies of older children indicate a child's concept of death may influence the risk of suicidal behavior at almost any age.

At a young age, a child may believe that he can return from death. "These are so-called atypical kids who frequently have magical beliefs, who wander out of windows and do dangerous things, with the belief that they are protected," says Dr. Bruce Hauptman, a staff psychiatrist at the children's unit of the Massachusetts Mental Health Center.

Surgery may give new hope to stroke victims

By JOANN RODGERS
Science Writer, Hearst Feature Service

HANOVER, N.H. — When plastic surgeons need new skin to cover burns or wounds, they often place healthy skin flaps across the bare spots. Eventually the flaps "take" and knit more tissue.

Following a similar strategy, a surgeon at Dartmouth Medical School is using the blood-rich fold of "skin" that lines the abdomen to heal and rescue areas of the brain damaged by stroke.

Called omental transposition (omentum is the medical term for the abdominal membrane), the operation is still experimental, but it is winning interest and converts and could become a major weapon against paralysis and other crippling effects of stroke, according to Dr. Harry Goldsmith, professor of surgery at Dartmouth.

Goldsmith claims some 100 patients worldwide have safely undergone the procedure. Reports from surgeons at a two-day conference in Boston in May were "exciting and encouraging," he says, and the Journal of the American Medical Association devoted four pages to the subject in a summer issue.

"The rich supply of blood vessels found in the omentum makes it perfect for supplying nutrients to oxygen-starved brain cells that are injured but not completely destroyed by stroke," Goldsmith says.

When a stroke occurs, blood vessels in the brain are either choked off by clots or ruptured. Many brain cells die, but some on the edges of the attack can be saved if blood supply is restored.

The problem has always been how to restore it. There are drugs that open nearby blood vessels and increase flow, but they do nothing to repair blocked or damaged vessels.

Microsurgeons are able to bypass certain clots and rebuild blood channels around some brain-damaged areas. But this operation is lengthy, risky and of value only to patients with recent strokes and no serious brain injury.

If further studies confirm results, omental transposition may provide one of the safest and surest methods of treating strokes. It also may have value in preventing brain damage among patients who have had brief and temporary "warning" cutoffs of blood supply to the brain, but not outright strokes.

In the operation, surgeons open the abdomen, free the omentum from its attachments and lengthen it by carefully peeling and layering its bulk. The membrane, still in one piece, is then threaded under the skin along the chest and neck and brought out through the skin behind the ear.

Meanwhile, a second surgeon has exposed the brain through an opening in the skull. The omentum is then placed on the brain surface, where it lends its nourishing blood supply to the brain.

Goldsmith first developed omental transposition to treat the painful swelling of the arms in women after radical masectomy. He used the omentum to resupply the arm area with tissues that drained fluid and relieved the pain and tissue damage swelling can cause. The operation helped in half the cases and also proved the omentum could be moved to other areas of the body and still function normally.

Experiments on dogs in the late 1960s suggested to Goldsmith that the omentum might serve as a perfect substitute for blood vessels. During stints at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Institute in New York and Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, Goldsmith proposed omental surgery to save arms and legs at risk of amputation because of gangrene and blood vessel disease.

He estimates that a third of the 100,000 amputations a year in the U.S. could be prevented with omental transposition. The procedure gained some popularity abroad, but has never been adopted here, a fact Goldsmith accepts with the classic shrug of the experimentalist.

His plan for stroke victims look more like a winner.

"We reasoned that if the omentum can work on limbs, it can work on brains. We have no trouble stretching both the omentum and the concept that far," he says.

Experiments on monkeys led to surgery on four humans in 1978 and 1979. The early cases all had paralysis three months to five years after their strokes.

Do-it-yourself is popular

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Of the 2.3 million people in the United States who buy new ceilings each year, nearly three-quarters (74 percent) put up the ceiling themselves, according to a "do-it-yourself" focus group interview conducted by a manufacturer of residential home products.

"The survey found a number of psychological rewards in do-it-yourself projects, such as a sense of pride and accomplishment, release of frustration, contribution to the family and opportunity to engage in therapeutic physical activity," says Harry Hill, market manager for the Residential Ceilings Division of Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp.

Baker tries to warn colleagues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker has been saying for days that the Senate has a lot of work left this summer. But no one seems to be taking him seriously.

So the other day Baker, R-Tenn., offered colleagues a present wrapped in a threat:

The Senate could recess on today and take two weeks off for Labor Day, just like the House plans to do, instead of recessing on Aug. 27 as scheduled — if senators would just buckle down and do some work in the meantime.

"Today I would like to share with my colleagues one of my 18 reasons for the Senate to recess on Aug. 20. Reason No. 7: August is a sticky, humid, miserable month," Baker told the Senate.

"Cars overheat, tempers flare, air-conditioners break. The only way to deal with it is to spend as much time as possible in one's home state, with one's family and friends.

"An extra week of legislative aggravation instead of an extra week of liberty seems almost too unnecessary; but, then again, the whole schedule is in our hands, and we will not have to look too far to place the blame."

So, after warning earlier in the day that late-night and weekend sessions might be necessary, Baker apologetically had to recess the Senate in midafternoon for want of anything to do.

Long-lost dad, daughter finally find one another

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Glen Phagan married two more times and raised four other children, but he never forgot the daughter he fathered in Australia in a wartime marriage.

On Wednesday, in tears, the 61-year-old Phagan cried, "That's her! That's her!" as 38-year-old Shirley Lawson stepped off a plane here to meet him.

"He looks just like I thought. I recognized him right away," said Mrs. Lawson, of Melbourne, Australia.

Phagan, who owns a used-furniture store here, said he had tried over the years to contact his daughter, but his letters were returned unopened. He gave up.

She tried to reach him, without success, until finally finding a Phagan — who turned out to be a cousin — in the Tampa telephone directory.

While a Marine during World War II, Phagan spent nearly a year in Australia, recuperating from wounds suffered during the Battle of Guadalcanal.

He fell in love with a woman named Catherine, married her and was called back to action soon after she became pregnant.

Phagan promised to send for wife and daughter after he returned to the United States, but Catherine refused to move. She eventually asked for a divorce, which he granted.

Mrs. Lawson's mother remarried, too.

"Thirty-eight years," sighed Mrs. Lawson, studying her father's weathered face. "Somehow, deep down, I always felt one day I'd meet him. I don't know why. When I was young, I wondered why he didn't come to me or didn't want me. My mother kept it from me for a long time that he was my father."

She, too, was suffering. Her siblings were much younger and had dark complexions, while she was blond and fair. She overheard arguments in which her stepfather said things like, "You should have sent your daughter to whom she belongs."

In her teens, she went snooping around the house and discovered a box of old pictures and documents. A marriage certificate and divorce papers had Phagan's name on them. Finally, her mother told her the story.

She tried to reach her American father several times, always without success. But in recent months, she kept having a dream urging her to try again.

An official at the U.S. embassy recommended looking through telephone books, and she found her cousin in a Tampa directory kept at the Melbourne phone company office.

Two days later, she phoned her father, saying, "I'm your daughter Shirley."

Phagan had just finished a costly divorce and couldn't afford the trip. Mrs. Lawson and her husband ended up selling furniture to pay her $3,400 air fare.

Anti-religious campaign charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua is waging a systematic campaign against religion in that country, the Reagan administration has charged.

The State Department said Wednesday that an incident last week involving a Roman Catholic church official, Father Bismarck Carballo, "marked a new low in the repressive tactics and violence of the Sandinista government."

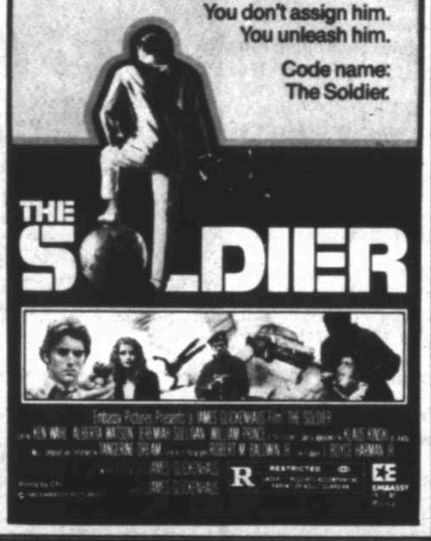

Carballo, who is the church spokesman in Nicaragua, was reportedly seized at a private residence, beaten, stripped and then paraded naked in front of a jeering mob as photographers took pictures.

Script of 'Wind' written for today

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — The characters in "Born to the Wind" mouth a script written for today rather than the American Indian West of the mid-19th century, and that kind of silliness detracts from an otherwise worthy production.

Perhaps screenwriters — and, consequently, viewers — have been pre-conditioned for Lon Chaney Jr.'s monosyllabic Chingachgook and simply aren't ready for Indians who speak in present-day idiom. It is nonetheless distracting, especially when great care obviously has been taken to provide a realistic earth-color environment for the limited series.

NBC will broadcast the first of four episodes of "Born to the Wind" tonight, with subsequent hour-long installments Aug. 22 and 29 and Sept. 5.

"Born to the Wind" reunites A Martinez and Rose Portillo, lead players in an acclaimed public TV production called "Seguin," broadcast in January. A Martinez plays Lone Wolf in the short-run series, and Miss Portillo is Star Fire, his romantic interest.

In the first program, "Night Eyes," Lone Wolf and a companion come across human handprints near a buffalo carcass. They return to the scene with warriors from their village and find a snarling boy, whom they surmise has been raised by wolves.

They bind the boy and carry him to their camp. But that night, their horses are attacked by wolves, and there is disagreement among the tribal elders on wether to release their captive or attempt to care for him themselves.

— "Maybe it's time for us, the animals who walk upright, to take him into our arms," White Bull suggests. But there are those who think the wolves may actually be demons sent to harass the tribe, and they demand that the boy be sent away.

Lone Wolf asks for a little time. He wants to communicate with the wolves — his spiritual brothers. That night, clothed as a wolf, he walks into the hills and, when he returns, the howling animals have disappeared.

Painted Bear's dilemma over the wolf-boy is complicated by a run-in with Cold Maker, who sneaks buffalo meat for his family despite a tribal ban on the scarce food.

Succeeding episodes are self-contained stories, with several of the characters — Paintedear, Low Wolf, Star Fire, White Bull — appearing through the entire run.

Marriage, maternity new fads for fall TV

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Romance, marriage, maternity wards and new characters are coming to episodic television this fall as writers work desperately to pump new life into aging series. After they've taken their characters through familiar situations in a hundred scripts, they've got to try something new. No network has more changes of marital status and family sizes than ABC.

In "The Greatest American Hero" Ralph crash-lands his flying suit long enough to tie the knot with his long-suffering girlfriend, Pam Davidson. Whether agent Maxwell will be the best man has not yet been determined.

"Too Close for Comfort" has been cashing in on Muriel's pregnancy for months. Series star Ted Knight, for all his apparent witlessness on camera, is a practical man who has said he wishes the pregnancy would last for years. But even on television there is a limit to gestation periods and Muriel's baby will arrive at the end of the season opener. Even ABC is wondering if it will be a boy, girl or twins.

Few blacks work in TV — on screen or off

By DEBORAH BELGUM

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The fact that few blacks work in television comes as no surprise to Winnie Hervey, who may be the only black female story editor currently working on a TV series.

"It is very hard because unfortunately a lot of people think that because you are black, you can only write for black people," says the 27-year-old Ms. Hervey, who works as a story editor on "The New Odd Couple" — the black version of the hit show of the mid-1970s that starred Tony Randall and Jack Klugman.

"They only call you when they have black projects," she says, "and there aren't that many black projects."

"The New Odd Couple" premieres this fall on ABC in a Friday night timeslot. The show stars Ron Glass, from ABC's recently discontinued "Barney Miller," as Felix Unger, the fussy photographer, and Demond Wilson, a leading player in NBC's "Sanford and Son" through the mid-'70s, as the sloppy sportswriter, Oscar Madison.

Garry Marshall, whose credits include the original "Odd Couple," broadcast 1970-75, along with "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," is executive producer of the new series.

AS STORY EDITOR, Ms. Hervey is responsible for assisting staff writers in the development of story ideas, rewriting scripts before and after production, and making sure there is character continuity from one show to another. The position is one step above staff writer.

"There aren't that many black writers," says Ms. Hervey, who worked previously as a staff writer on "Mork & Mindy" and "Laverne and Shirley."

Of the 6,000 writers who belong to the West Coast chapter of the Writers Guild, only 100 are black, says Robert Price, president of the Black Writers Committee. Price says he has never been able to find more than four black staff writers and-or story editors working in television at the same time.

Ms. Hervey says the answer to the problem is not the creation of all-black television shows.

"You don't have to have a black show with only black people because we interact with all different people," she says. "And that's what television should reflect."

MS. HERVEY, WHO grew up in Southern California listening to the roar of rockets taking off from Vandenberg Air Force Base, where her father was stationed, graduated in 1977 from Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles with a bachelor's degree in communications.

A short time later, she attended a television writing workshop organized by Warner Bros. for women and other minority aspirants. In that workshop, she wrote a script that became, in her words, her "showpiece."

It was two years before she landed a job as an apprentice writer on a television series called "The Six O'Clock Follies," a comedy set in Vietnam during the war, which lasted only six weeks.

From there, it was another dry spell before Ms. Hervey got a job in 1980 as an apprentice writer on "Laverne and Shirley." Since then, she has been employed almost all of the time.

While Ms. Hervey's climb toward success has been relatively painless, she says the work has not been as rewarding for many other blacks.

AND THE INDUSTRY, she says, is hurting itself by not employing more blacks. "They don't say, 'Let's get some different feedback. Let's get some different people in here.' It can only enhance whatever you do," she says.

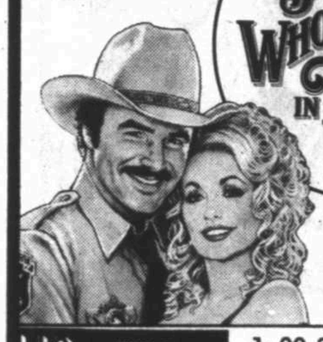

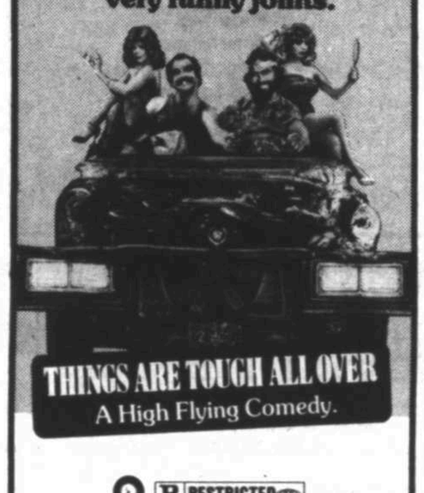

Ms. Hervey says she agrees with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that the only way to get the networks to hire more blacks is to exert some economic pressure.

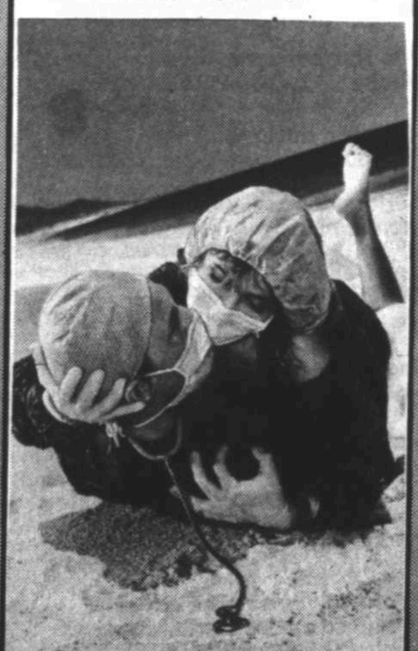

The NAACP says it will target major film studios for possible boycotts and extend its equal employment campaign to the networks if more blacks aren't hired to work on movies and TV programs.

"I feel the black people I know working in the industry are good people for the most," Ms. Hervey says. "I think they'll be recognized and that will open the doors for other people. It's a matter of showing that if we are writers we can write everything or else we're not writers. We just need a chance to show that."

Jose Ferrer thrilled to see 'Stanley and Babe' on stage

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Two luminaries whose paths had somehow never previously crossed, Jose Ferrer and Victor Mature, were introduced before playing golf. As they shook hands, Ferrer said: "I'm thrilled to meet a real movie star, which I never was."

Mature returned the compliment: "And I'm thrilled to meet a real actor, which I never was!"

A real actor. The words suggest somber intensity, the sonorities of Shakespeare, the tensions of Tennessee Williams. One thinks of the powerhouse Iago that Ferrer once played, dazzling the critics and the populace, the melancholy Cyrano, the tragic Toulouse-Lautrec, all the serious roles.

But the past is a long and twisty road, as Satchel Paige used to say, and Jose Ferrer, being the compleat real actor, started his Broadway career by cavorting in a becoming frock in "Charley's Aunt."

Ferrer can give you the Bard or he can (and even prefers to) romp more boisterously in sock and buskin. Jose Ferrer is, moreover, a Laurel and Hardy buff.

"Laurel and Hardy! How I love them, Stanley and Babe," Joe Ferrer said in those majestic tones of his. "I saw them on the stage in London somewhere in the early 1950s. There they were, at the end of a glorious career."

David Begelman's saga chronicled in book

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "'I'm the only one I really have to fear. I can't accept success. Right on the brink of success, something within me says that I don't deserve it, and I snatch it away from myself by committing crimes.'"

Sound like a paragraph from a Harold Robbins novel about raw power in the movie world? Guess again. The speaker is David Begelman as quoted in David McClintock's new book, "Indecent Exposure."

How the book will sell in Peoria remains to be seen, but bookstores in Beverly Hills and Hollywood can hardly keep it in stock. The Los Angeles Times listed it last Sunday as No.4 and rising on the local bestseller list. It is the talk of every cocktail party in Bel-Air and Malibu.

David McClintock covered the Begelman story for the Wall Street Journal, then launched an exhaustive investigation of how it happened and what happened afterward. It all started, as does the book, when Cliff Robertson's secretary showed him an IRS form indicating he had been paid $10,000 in 1976 by Columbia Pictures. The actor said he hadn't worked for Columbia in 1976.

What had happened was that David Begelman, the sleek, highly successful production chief of Columbia, had forged Robertson's name on the check and cashed it. He had also forged three other checks for a total of $61,008. But all that wasn't revealed until the press, after a slow start, finally penetrated a Watergate-like coverup.

'City that saved itself' fights economic ruination

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Twenty thousand volunteers and a million sandbags stopped the spring floods in Fort Wayne. Now the volunteers and sandbags are out again in "The City That Saved Itself."

A new threat faces this northern Indiana city of 180,000, where the three rivers that chased thousands from their homes in March are now peaceful summertime brooks.

International Harvester is in trouble, and that means big trouble for Fort Wayne, where 6,000 Harvester workers have lost their jobs in the past four years. In jeopardy are the remaining 4,000 Harvester jobs here.

Harvester, one of the nation's largest truck and farm implement makers, reported a third-quarter loss of $129.8 million Thursday and expects the year's losses to exceed $900 million.

The company is in the midst of negotiations with bankers holding $4.2 billion in loans. Officials say that in order to stay afloat, they must shut either the truck plant here or the one in Springfield, Ohio. A plant in Canada is expected to remain open.

Harvester officials are expected to decide in the next two weeks on which plant to keep. It all hinges on which town comes up with the best financial package.

Fort Wayne has traded sandbags for a letter-writing campaign and is working with the state to hammer out a deal that will satisfy Harvester. Springfield, about 100 miles southeast, is doing the same.

More than 101,000 letters have been collected in the Fort Wayne campaign. They have been wrapped symbolically in sandbags.

"It's incredible how this city has risen to the challenge," said Richard Clark, Chamber of Commerce president. "One woman came up to me and asked if she could sign her dead husband's name. She said he used to work at Harvester, and would sign it if he was alive."

If Harvester closes, "it would create a depression," says Mark Angel, the mayoral assistant coordinating the city's efforts. "Local economists predict an unemployment rate above 20 percent. It now stands at 12.6 percent."

Harvester's payroll — with benefits — totals $160.8 million, and two local college economists estimate the plant contributes as much as $300 million to the area's economy.

In addition to the Harvester jobs, the ripple effect of the plant's closing would cost 6,000 related jobs. If Harvester stays, as many as 6,000 new jobs would open up, cutting unemployment to 8.2 percent, Angel said.

Fort Wayne's $19 million package includes $4 million from the state, $2.2 million from Allen County, $6.5 million from a federal loan to the city and another $6.5 million from the City Light Lease Fund.

On Thursday, Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr presented Harvester officials a formal "offer of assistance." He refused to reveal the numbers, but suggested the aid package was more than the $19 million already offered by Fort Wayne and Allen County.

A local financier has agreed to buy a local Harvester parts distribution center for $9.5 million and lease it back to the company, while the county redevelopment agency is buying an idled Scout plant for $3.5 million.

Springfield has countered with a $30 million package — $20 million in bank loans, $10 million of it guaranteed by the state of Ohio, and a $10 million state loan at 2 percent interest.

Fort Wayne area governments, which would lose $3.3 million in property taxes if the plant closes, aren't putting all their eggs in one basket, though. "Obviously, one of the communities will lose," said Clark.

Springfield never forgot big Christmas layoff

By DALE LEACH
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-five years ago, the plant where Collier's magazine was published suddenly shut its doors, and 2,000 people lost their jobs two weeks before Christmas. Springfield never forgot.

From time to time, folks would cast a wary eye at the International Harvester plant, which survived as the foundation of so many lives in this southwestern Ohio city of 73,000, wondering if it could happen again.

"It's sort of been a sword hanging over our head for a generation," said Mayor Roger L. Baker, whose administration depends on the Harvester plant for 2,200 jobs and $1 million in municipal tax revenues.

The sword is beginning to move. Springfield has found itself — and its future — caught up in a battle with Fort Wayne, Ind., to keep the truck and farm implement manufacturer's plant open.

Harvester, which is struggling to stay afloat and facing a projected $900 million loss this year, has announced it will close one of its three North American truck plants by the end of 1983.

Because of a U.S.-Canadian trade agreement that would penalize the company financially if it closed its plant in Chatham, Ont., community leaders in Springfield and Fort Wayne, about 100 miles northeast, believe they are fighting a bidding war.

Baker says he tries not to view Fort Wayne as a rival, but as a city — like his own — struggling to adapt its economy in a post-industrial society.

"I feel sorry for almost all cities," Baker said. "The only cities I don't feel sorry for are places like Houston and Flagstaff (Ariz.) — cities that are already so wealthy and getting Northern tax dollars to boot."

Springfield has put up a fight to keep Harvester. The city has come up with a $30 million financing package — $20 million in bank loans, $10 million of it guaranteed by the state of Ohio, and a $10 million state loan at 2 percent interest.

The money is to be used by the Springfield Community Improvement Corp. to buy Harvester's truck assembly plant, which would then be leased back to the company. All the loans have been approved by the banks and the state, and only legal details remain.

Fort Wayne and Allen County have put together a $19 million aid package, but on Thursday Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr made an "offer of assistance" to Harvester officials that he suggested was worth a higher sum. He declined to reveal the amount, however.

City Manager Thomas M. Bay estimates the closing of the plant would cost Springfield at least $1 million a year in lost income tax revenues — about 5 percent of the city's general revenue fund.

That and the county's 13 percent unemployment rate have combined to make the possibility of a shutdown big news here.

Daily newspaper stories chronicle Harvester's financial ups and downs, and Springfield News-Sun readers get a regular taste of how the competition — Fort Wayne — is doing.

No one, however, seems to have a clear picture of which community is winning. Harvester, if it has an opinion, isn't saying.

"Personally, I feel if the $30 million deal goes through, then I would be optimistic," Bay said last week.

But workers at the truck assembly plant seem uncertain.

Eating lunch outside the plant, workers said they considered the choice between the two plants a tossup. While Springfield's plant is newer, they said, it would require retooling to produce some trucks already made in Fort Wayne.

Harvester's employees, the highest paid factory workers in the area, are worried about the prospect of sudden unemployment.

"I'm glad I got out," said one retiree at United Auto Workers Local 402 headquarters, who would not give his name. "These guys don't know what to do. They're afraid to buy — they're afraid to do anything."

Communications, banking hit by winds of change

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final article in a three-part series.

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The first gusts of change are buffeting banking and communications, a prelude to the storm winds of deregulation that swept through the airline industry and interstate trucking.

Having let loose free-market forces to determine prices, routes, even who succeeds or fails in transportation, the forces for deregulation are focusing on other areas long regulated for the "public good."

The Federal Communications Commission is busily opening up telephone services, broadcasting and other types of communications to competition. The various agencies regulating banks, savings and loans, the securities industry and other financial services are trying to reach a consensus on how to loosen the reins by the mid 1980s.

As with airlines and trucking, the intention is to use free-market competition to increase efficiency and benefit the public. For the companies that fail, goes the rationale, it is proof they were weak and ill-managed.

But many analysts warn that few of the organizations in "banking" — commercial banks, savings and loans, savings banks and credit unions — are planning seriously for the coming changes.

Donald Waite, who heads the banking unit at the management consulting firm McKinsey & Co. of New York, says some banks, but only the "very few money center banks," are getting ready for deregulation.

Irwin O. Hockaday Jr., president of Kansas City Southern Lines, a railroad that also deals in electronic services for the financial industry, says many bankers are ignoring the coming changes. He views the situation from the double perspective of having experienced the deregulation of the railroads and dealing with bankers.

"We can see what's happening to these banks," Hockaday says. "It's amazing. Those guys, it does seem to me, many of them have a lot of homework to do."

They may not have much more time to do it.

Although only the first steps have been taken to cut away banking regulations, the pace of change is picking up speed as the nation's money managers jockey for position in the competition for savings dollars. The lines dividing various segments of the financial community are blurring.

High-interest savings instruments have proliferated at banks and savings and loans, allowing them to compete with the money-market mutual funds, which have attracted more than $200 billion. Savings and loans and credit unions have been allowed to offer checking accounts.

In the first six months of this year, 281 troubled savings and loan associations were merged into stronger institutions or with one another, with a few of the deals crossing state lines. And bankers are pressing for an end to the prohibition against interstate banking.

More and more stock brokerages are copying the all-purpose personal finance account pioneered by Merrill Lynch & Co. in 1977, offering credit card, money market fund, stocks and even check-writing privileges. Last month, savings and loans won federal permission to set up brokerage services, and some banks are looking to do the same.

American Express Co. added to its credit card and insurance business by acquiring Shearson Loeb Rhoades, the nation's second largest stock brokerage after Merrill Lynch. Prudential Insurance Co. bought Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, the No. 5 brokerage. Even Sears, Roebuck & Co. is in the game, having purchased Dean Witter Reynolds, the No. 4 brokerage, and Coldwell, Banker & Co., a leading real estate firm.

The newcomers are important to remember, says Joel Bleeke, an analyst at McKinsey. He says he reminds his bank clients time and again that their new competition may not necessarily be the bank across the street, or even a Merrill Lynch, but rather an unanticipated source.

Who became the leading air freight company after the airlines were deregulated in 1978? Not an existing firm, but Federal Express, which had the revolutionary idea ffice and then return with overnight deliveries.

Whether it is a trucking company watched over by the Interstate Commerce Commission, an airline by the Civil Aeronautics Board, or a bank by the Controller of the Currency, "regulated companies have regulated awareness," says Bleeke, "and deregulated companies must have a marketplace awareness."

An even more spectacular transformation is under way in communications.

Both the Congress and the FCC are moving decisively to deregulate industries including broadcasting, cable television, satellite and telex communications and telephone service.

Most of Congress' attention has been focused on telephone deregulation and AT&T over the past three years, an effort that has yet to be concluded. The Justice Department has been active, too, agreeing with AT&T last January that the world's largest company could compete in new fields in return for shedding its regulated local phone monopolies. The proposal is still before the courts.

The House and Senate have found time, however, to extend the license terms for radio and TV stations from three years to seven for radio stations and five for TV. Congress has also backed the FCC by mandating competition in the telex and telegraph industry.

The Senate, meantime, has voted to begin deregulating the television industry and is now trying to do the same for the cable TV industry.

At the FCC, the effort "to rely on the marketplace" has gone under different names, starting with "reregulation," then "deregulation"and now "unregulation." Regardless of what it is called, the thrust has been to relax restrictions that either govern who can offer a service or that divide an industry into segments.

Armed with congressional authority, for example, the FCC has authorized firms that specialize in carrying telex and data traffic overseas to enter the domestic market, which for decades has been a monopoly for Western Union Telegraph Co. And on Aug. 5, the agency authorized Western Union to begin competing for international traffic.

Tom Casey, former deputy chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau, notes Western Union will enter the international market with lower rates than the five companies that originally controlled the market.

In other areas as well, "we are beginning to see some of the results of competitive rates," adds Casey, now a Washington lawyer. He cites the companies offering discount long-distance telephone service and the bidding now going on for space on commercial satellites by which information, typically television programming, is beamed to outer space and back to earth.

The FCC has proposed to allow Western Union and any other international carrier to compete with AT&T for overseas telephone calls, while allowing AT&T to compete for telex traffic.

Over the past three years, the commission has repealed regulations governing the cable television and radio industries, unleashed AT&T to enter new unregulated businesses such as data processing and freed private radio firms to build futuristic telephone paging or portable computer communication systems.

The FCC has proposed the deregulation of the pay TV industry, tentatively agreed to allow the major TV networks and local TV stations to own cable systems and recommended that Congress repeal the equal time and fairness doctrine laws to provide full First Amendment rights to broadcasters.

The commission also dropped guidelines requiring a minimum amount of news and information provided by radio stations, no matter what their format or target audience.

There are two other trends as well. The FCC has begun authorizing new types of services without trying to protect existing ones. For example, it recently authorized the creation of satellite-to-home TV systems, even though the broadcast industry opposed the move as a threat to locally based service.

Donoghue's MONEY FUND AVERAGE(TM)
-(Averages for all 202 taxable funds)		37	11.4	11.9

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (x) - average term to next rate adjustment date. Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (TM) of Holliston, MA 01746. 617-429-5930.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 202 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (TM) of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $3.5 billion to $220.85 billion for the week ending August 18, 1982.

The money funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 11.38 percent from 11.52 percent. The funds' 30-day average yield fell to 11.85 percent from 12.23 percent.

The funds' Average Maturity figure increased one day to 37 days.

Publisher William E. Donoghue says, "Despite the stock market rally, money fund assets will increase in the next few weeks as investors see the probable drop in money fund yields lag behind short-term interest rates.

With corporate liquidity at an all time low, it is not a prudent time to invest in the stock market. I would advise investors to stay liquid.

Because the funds' average maturity continued increasing this week, fund managers expect short-term interest rates to fall."

As nation becomes 'older' work force becomes 'younger'

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans 65 and older continues to increase as a share of the total population. In 1980, one in nine — or 24 million — Americans were 65 or older, compared to one in twelve in 1950. By 2030, nearly one in five — or almost 56 million people — will be 65 or older.

At the same time, the number of older persons in the labor force is declining. Between 1950 and 1980, the portion of those 65 or older in the workforce fell from 24 percent to 13 percent, primarily as a result of increased retirement by elderly men. Since 1970, the labor force participation rate of persons 55 to 64 has also fallen slightly — from 62 percent to 56 percent.

The latest Congressional Budget Office (CBO) study tells us, however, that the situation could change in the future since many older persons will not be able to retire early because of the effects of inflation on their income and because of continued demand for experienced older workers.

Nonetheless, the Congress's fiscal watchdog warned in its study, "Work and Retirement," that even if the portion of elderly persons in the work force does not change from its 1980 level, by 2030 almost 16 percent of the population — or 49 million persons — will be over 64 and not employed.

The study was prepared at the request of the Senate Finance Committee which is looking into the effects of present and future elderly population on the labor market, the economy and the federal budget.

It suggests that the ever-increasing numbers of non-working older persons could reduce the amount of goods and services produced in the economy and cut into the personal incomes of senior citizens. This decreased production could also put upward pressure on prices and increase inflation. The smaller labor force of older workers probably would reduce overall unemployment, however, because many jobs not taken by older persons would go to younger ones.

The study said that as the number of non-working older persons grows, the federal budget could also be affected by increased spending for retirement programs and decreased income and payroll tax revenues.

Why? The answer is simple. When a person stops working and begins collecting Social Security benefits, annual outlays to cover the worker's Social Security benefits cost the treasury about $4,800. In addition, the Treasury no longer collects the roughly $2,000 the retiree had contributed annually in Social Security and income taxes.

The nation's financial situation will get worse if the trend toward early retirement continues, the study said.

It pointed out that federal spending on retirement income for persons 65 or older already represents 19 percent of the budget — or over $130 billion in fiscal 1982 — and that spending for their health care amounts to over $48 billion, or seven percent.

The huge increase in spending in recent years is attributed to the growth in the size of the elderly population as well as increased benefits and earlier retirements.

The CBO suggested that the federal government's incentives to retire early – and too few policies to facilitate continued employment – are to blame for the early retirement trend.

The CBO urged Congress to consider policy changes that would encourage older persons to continue in, or reenter, the workforce.

The largest gains in employment — and the sharpest drop in federal spending — the CBO said, probably would result from congressional enactment of provisons that penalize retirement.

This is one of the areas which is being looked at by a special presidential panel on Social Security which is expected to suggest next December dramatic reforms of the financially ailing system.

The panel is looking into proposals offering incentives to those who retire at 72 and penalizing those who quit at 62, reducing benefits whose total income exceeds a certain amount of money and eliminating mandatory retirement because of age.

The budget panel suggested that Congress take a close look at proposals to offer employers a wage subsidy for hiring certain older persons or assisting older persons to acquire skills valuable in expanding areas of the economy.

CBO also proposed that the federal government should inexperienced workers in gaining skills for entry level jobs by providing work-experience and job search assistance.

NATIONAL GUARD DUTY

Employers are being reminded by the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve that they must allow employees time off from work for military duty. The committee warns that once an employee completes training the employer must reinstate him or her. It declares that employers can "neither fire, demote nor deny promotion to or benefits to employees based on their military membership" and and that they must grant employees earned vacation time in addition to military leave. For more details, call toll-free 800-336-4590.

FEDERAL PROCUREMENT POLICY

The Reagan administration has ordered the Department of Defense, the General Services Administration and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to complete their four-year joint effort to write simple, concise regulations guiding their conduct in doing business with business.

The Office of Federal Procurement Policy said a system of government-wide uniform procurement regulations was recommended 10 years ago and it thinks this was enough time to finish writing these regulations.

SMALL BUSINESS

A special task force of 13 small business owners and representatives has begun examining possible chanes in the Social Security System and the effect of such changes on small companies.

The task force, organized by the Small Business Administration (SBA), also is examining the present system and its impact on small business costs and employees.

The SBA also plans to help America's veterans in getting started or in operating an existing business by offering a special training seminar this fall in five cities.

One of the seminars will be held in San Francisco and will teach veterans how to go about starting a business and what sort of financial assistance is available for them.

SPECIAL DISTRICT GOVERNMENTS

Since each unit of government costs business money, you will be interested to know that the number of special district governments in the nation rose 11 percent during the last five years to a new high of 28,733, according to the Census Bureau. Special districts are independent, limited-purpose governmental units dealing with functions such as drainage and flood control, irrigation, soil and conservation, fire protection, housing and community development, and water supply. Currently, American taxpayers support a total of 82,688 governmental units.

CUT THE BUDGET

The 1983 federal budget should be cut by more than $200 billion, according to a new study by the Cato Institute.

In a line-by-line analysis of the budget, the conservative think tank identifies 166 specific programs to be cut, producing a total savings of $209.4 billion in non-defense spending.

The analysis, written by Cato Vice President David Boaz, insists "Reagonomics" does not exist and the budgetary process taking place in Washington represents a "new style of rhetoric, a lot of talk about tax cuts, getting the government off our backs, reducing the size of government. But it is all talk. The rhetoric is different. The policies are the same."

Specifically, the recommended cuts include business subsidies such as Economic Development Administration, the Export-Import Bank, research services as well as housing subsidies, land use regulation, transportation, regulatory agencies, government publishing and broadcasting, federal employee pay increases, etc.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The Census Bureau has published an analytical report entitled "Wage and Salary Data from the Income Survey Development Program: 1979." The agency wants $4.75 per copy . . . Banking industry representatives will be discussing such interesting subjects as deregulation of the airline industry, what are the qualifications necessary to be ranked among the best corporations in the nation and what lies ahead in government equal employment opportunity regulations at American Bankers Association conference Sept. 12 - 15 in Atlanta . . . The U.S. Air Force Military Airlift Command has awarded World Airways a $36.4 million military charter contract for international transportation . . . Richard W. Heldridge, a former president of the California Commerce Bank of San Jose, is now serving as a director of the Export-Import Bank . . . A coalition of organizations representing senior citizens, consumer, religious, community, industry, labor, and low income groups are planning a massive lobbying campaign against cuts in the federal low income energy program funded at $1.8 billion last year . . . House Education and Labor Committee is taking a close look at a bill to establish a national commission to study the issue of national service and find ways of increasing volunteer service by the nation's youth. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., cleared the Subcommittee on Select Education. It is similar to a Senate bill enacted last year . . . The National Park Service and Forest Service are planning to set forest fires in the Big Bend National Park this fall that will consume about 100 acres of prime woodlands. A park spokesman said the controlled burn is needed to prevent a larger, accidental fire in the Chisos Basin, a hollow in the Chisos Mountains . . . Cash receipts from farm maketing in Texas reached $10 billion last year, placing the state behind California and Iowa in total cash receipts, according to the Texas Agriculture Department. California led with $14 billion and Iowa was second with $10.7 billion.

Japanese oilmen have money troubles

HOUSTON — Japanese oil companies are having trouble raising sufficient capital for investment in exploration outside Japan, Petroleum Information International reports in its August 16 issue.

Information International reports in its August 16 issue.

The companies' cash flows, their principal source of exploration capital, have declined because of a slump in domestic demand for petroleum products, their inability to raise prices in a weak market and foreign exchange losses.

PI International says the companies' problems could affect their own exploration plan as well as those of their foreign partners.

Japanese oil companies have been especially frugal, the publication says, because the Japanese government, faced with mounting budget deficits, isn't able to satisfy their credit needs.

The government has played a major role in financing the companies' worldwide exploration investments. It works principally through Japan National Oil Co., a government-owned company that in the 15 years since its founding has provided $2.64 billion in equity capital and $1.76 billion in loan guarantees to Japanese oil companies, principally for investment abroad.

In the fiscal year ending March 31, 1983, Japan National Oil plans to provide up to $700 million to the companies.

Midland brokers report busy but 'choppy' trading Thursday

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Midland stock brokers reported another busy, but "choppy," day of trading activity Thursday, as the stock market continued to figure the meaning of Wednesday's 100 million plus volume.

Local investors waited to see what interest rates would do, if Mexico would default on its loans owed to the United States, and if Congress would pass the President's $98.3 billion tax bill.

Both houses of Congress passed the tax bill late Thursday.

Analysts said passage of the bill yesterday was critical to a national recovery and could help the bull market rally sustain itself a while longer.

Thursday's market was up about $9 on heavy volume, although trading was not as frantic as it had been Tuesday and Wednesday, when all-time highs were reached.

"We've been busier than usual all week, more so now," said Landrum Henderson, Merrill Lynch vice president here. "The first part of the week caught people by surprise. But, based on our average commission volume, the last three days were at least double the normal volume, and one day of the last three was almost triple."

Consumer-oriented stocks lead the market rise, while energy stocks were "the laggards," said William J. Hill, vice president of Howard Weil Labouisse Friedrichs Inc.

"There's still some more nervousness, and possibly more bad news to come out of the energy group," Henderson said.

"They are getting very close to the bottom though. Those stocks should participate in the tail end of this rally."

Talk Thursday that the Federal Reserve Board would further reduce the discount interest rate, possibly as early as Friday, and certainly by the end of August, also fueled some of the market gain.

Local brokers said again that interest rates are still the key factor for a sustained recovery; with lower rates leading to the long-awaited consumer spending upturn.

Rumors played a critical part in the fluctuations the market experienced Thursday, Hill said. Earlier in the day, it was rumored the Mexican government might default on its loans owed American banks. "This later proved to be false," he said, but wild fluctuations in the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials still occurred.

The Dow average varied Thursday from one to 16 points above Wednesday's closing figure of 829.43, he said.

More small investors traded in the market Thursday, following the lead of large institutional ones such as pension funds. This was a move applauded by local brokers.

"To keep it going you have to have both big and small investors," Henderson said.

The individual investor wasn't participating too much here yet, Hill said, but his office has had lots of calls and inquiries, showing perhaps that Midland investors are looking before they leap.

Merril Lynch's Henderson was optimistic, however, and said he thinks the market will go higher in the current rally, "by another 30 or 40 points, but a lot of things have to happen to sustain this."

He cited technical factors such as more good economic news from the government, announcements of corporate after-tax profits, and interest rates dropping further.

"In my opinion, we've seen the bottom for the Dow Jones. We've seen the lows for this year," he added.

Local brokers said that as interest rates drop, there has been a movement of money from money market funds into the equity market of common and preferrred stocks.

Debt securities or bonds have had unusual activity also, they said, with both corporate and municpal bonds doing well in recent weeks.

"It's all keyed to interest rates, if you single out one thing," Hill said. "If interest rates come down, there'll be a flow of monies from the money market to the equity/stocks market."

"The correction we had yesterday, where we lost some of the gains we had made, is not bad. It was a healthy consolidation."

Auto makers reporting more workers laid off

DETROIT (AP) — The five major domestic carmakers report indefinite layoffs among U.S. autoworkers this week stand at 216,697, up from 214,295 last week and due mostly to more layoffs at General Motors Corp.

Also Thursday, officials at GM and the United Auto Workers union said more furloughs will take effect in the coming weeks as GM assembly plant adjustments for the 1983 models prompt shutdowns or cuts in component plants.

Meanwhile, an industry trade journal reported U.S. car production this week will be up 11.7 percent to 72,547 from last week's 64,954.

The automakers said temporary layoffs this week fell to 39,100 from last week's 56,750 as some model changeovers were completed.

"We will be seeing an additional impact in some component plants" as GM delays or cuts production of new models in four U.S. assembly plants because of poor sales, said GM spokesman Bill Winters.

The indefinite closing of facilities in Framingham, Mass., and Lakewood, Ga., and elimination of shifts at North Tarrytown, N.Y., and Leeds, Mo., affecting 9,100 employees, were announced Monday.

But neither Winters nor Karl Mantyla, UAW spokesman, would say how many component plant workers might be affected or when the layoffs might begin.

GM reported 128,000 U.S. autoworkers on indefinite layoff this week, up from 125,000 last week because of the closing of a Pontiac Division assembly plant and companion Fisher Body facility in Pontiac, Mich.

Temporary layoffs totaled 20,750, down from last week's 37,450 as some plants finished model changeovers. Plants still closed for changeover are at: Oklahoma City, Framingham, Janesville, Wis., Leeds, Wilmington, Del., Detroit and Pontiac, GM said.

Ford Motor Co. reported 43,747 autoworkers on indefinite layoff, up from 43,645 last week because of scattered people added to the rolls. Temporary layoffs rose to 7,750 from last week's 5,000. Ford said plants in Chicago and Atlanta remained closed for model changeover, and a shift was dropped at the Lorain, Ohio, plant. A plant in Louisville, Ky., is down for inventory adjustment, the automaker said.

Chrysler Corp. said it had 40,500 autoworkers on indefinite layoff, down from 40,600 last week. Temporary layoffs dipped to 7,300 from last week's 10,800 as some components plants resumed work. Assembly facilities in Belvidere, Ill., and Newark, Del., are down for model changeover, Chrysler said.

American Motors Corp. said it had 3,050 autoworkers on indefinite layoff, down from 3,650 last week as workers were called back at Kenosha, Wis. Temporary layoffs were unchanged at zero.

Volkswagen of America Inc. indefinite layoffs were 1,400, unchanged. Temporary layoffs fell to 3,300 from 3,500 last week as the South Charleston, W. Va., plant resumes work.

Parallel proposing acquisition

(SWN) — Parallel Petroleum Corporation announced Thursday it is proposing to acquire non-operating working interests in certain oil and gas properties that the Company operates. Frank S. Delay, President, said that the proposed acquisition would be conducted through a privately placed exchange offer in which the Company would pay cash and issue shares of Common Stock in exchange for the working interests.

An independent petroleum consultant has estimated that on an unescalated basis the reserves attributable to the working interests proposed to be acquired are 117,793 barrels of oil and 4,491 MCF of gas for the proved developed properties, plus 150,456 barrels of oil for the proved undeveloped properties.

The present value of the unescalated future net revenues for the working interests subject to the exchange offer discounted at 10 percent is $1,667,737 for the proved developed properties, plus $1,154,186 for the proved undeveloped properties.

The estimated reserves on an escalated basis attributable to the working interest are 115,306 barrels of oil and 4,491 MCF of gas for the proved developed properties, plus 147,157 barrels of oil for the proved undeveloped properties. The present value of the escalated future net revenues for the proved developed properties subject to the exchange offer discounted at 15 percent is $1,701,542, plus $1,232,245 for the proved undeveloped properties.

Based in Midland, Parallel Petroleum Corporation is an independent oil and gas company. The company's shares are traded over-the-counter. NASDAQ symbols are: Common shares (PLLLV) and warrants (PLLWV).

Maximum allowables set

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas oil production rate was set at 100 percent of market demand this month, the 67th month in a row for the ceiling rate.

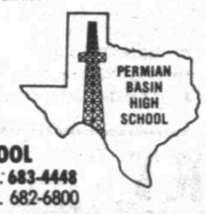

Thursday was the 123rd time the monthly maximum production rate was set since the commission first went to the ceiling level in April 1972.

The maximum statewide allowable was ordered after Commissioners Mack Wallace and Buddy Temple received requests from major buyers of Texas crude for 2,464,388 barrels in September, a decrease of 8,948 barrels from August. In September 1981, the nominations totaled 2,514,719 barrels.

The maximum rate applies to all but 10 fields in Texas that are assigned lower rates of flow for conservation purposes.

RRC OKs pipelines

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent has announced that 31 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in July.

Through the first seven months of this year, the Commission has issued 102 permits to operate new lines. For the same period last year, 97 permits were approved.

Twelve of the permits in July were for gathering pipelines, nine were for truck transmission lines, and three were for gas plants. Seven were for nulti-purpose or other lines.

Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while a trunk transmission line is a larger diameter line into which smaller lines connect. At gas plants, natural gas is stripped of the liquid hydrocarbons usually present in wellhead gas.

Twenty-nine of the newly-permitted lines will transport gas, while one will move petroleum products ane another will transport crude oil.

Private pipelines accounted for 18 permits last month, while 13 were for gas utilities.

In July, 10 permits were granted for lines in deep South Texas, six in West Central Texas, four in the Refugio area, three in the San Angelo area, two each in Southeast Texas and the Panhandle, and one each in East Central Texas, North Texas, and the Lubbock and Midland areas.

Gathering lines approved:

John May Inc., Brownwood, gas, Brown and Coleman Counties; Sun Exploration and Production, Houston, gas, Nueces County; Clover Gathering Corp.

Pipe seminar planned

HOUSTON — "Users of pipe inspection service must have a deeper understanding of what they are buying to maximize the benefits", said Thomas P. Grant, Exectuve Director of the International Pipe Inspectors Assn. (IPIA).

To help its customer, IPIA will hold a two-day seminar for users of inspection services September 21 and 22, in Houston, Texas.

"Technology is changing at such a pace, we feel it is important for the consumers to have an overview so they can work with the inspection service companies to tailor the services available to their specific needs," he added.

Subjects to be discussed at the seminar and reservations may be obtained from the International Pipe Inspectors Association, P. O. Box 42821, Houston, Texas 77042, or by calling 713/491-5066.

Subway fever is stopped by Clark, Thompson

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Runs raced across the plate in the first three innings as though it was rush hour in the subway and the last thing anyone expected was that a one-run lead would stand up for six innings.

But it did, thanks to gutty relief pitching by Randy Clark and Mike Thompson and a strike thrown from left field by Joe Carter, as Midland's Cubs nudged Amarillo's Gold Sox, 6-5, before 1,011 fans at Cubs Stadium Thursday night.

It was Midland's sixth straight win, their longest winning streak of the season, and it was a game Midland could ill afford to lose, since El Paso beat San Antonio, 9-2. That left the Cubs and Diablos neck-and-neck in the Texas League West pennant race.

MIDLAND JUMPED out in front 6-1 after two innings and then Amarillo rallied for four in the third, driving starter Ed Moore to shelter. That made it 6-5 and even Manager Brian Murphy didn't think one run would be enough.

Bill Long, 11-9, who survived the early Midland cannonading, settled down to limit Midland to one hit after the second inning.

"I knew if we didn't get him early, we wouldn't get much," Murphy said of Long. "He is one of the best we've faced in the league."

But the relief pitching, where the Cubs have been spotting this season, was pleasing to Murphy. "It seems like the pressure is off and we are going out after it. Before it was as though we were sitting back, waiting for something bad to happen."

CLARK scattered five hits over 5⅓ innings before needing an assist from lefthander Mike Thompson, who slammed the door in the final two innings for his fourth save. Thompson got the final out in the eighth with runners on first and second and then got two strikeouts in retiring the side in order in the ninth.

But, it was Carter's throw in the eighth that preserved the win. Jimmy Thomas had reached first on an error, moved to second on a sacrifice and after Bill Quinones walked, tried to score on Randy Kaczmarski's single to left.

"It was a slow ground ball to left, but not that deep," related Carter. "My main worry was that it would skip by Mike (catcher Mike Diaz)." But Mike gloved it and tagged the sliding Thomas for the second out. That's when Murphy made his move to Thompson.

A walk to Luis Quinones, a stolen base and single to left by former University of Arkansas star Kevin Reynolds gave the Sox a 1-0 lead in the first. Midland struck back for five, with all the scoring after two were out. Henry Cotto singled and with two out Carmelo Martinez doubled, Fritz Connally singled in another run, Diaz singled in another, Carlos Lezcano doubled in another and finally Javier Fierro blooped a single to right for two more.

FOR THE uninitiated, it looked like Amarillo Manager Glenn Ezell might be conceding the game by preventing Long from taking a shower.

Martinez doubled home what proved to be the winning run in the second after Mike Kelley extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a single. After Connally reached on an error, Long faced the minimum number of batters the rest of the way.

The Sox exploded for four runs in the third with Jeff Ronk's first of two doubles accounting for two of the tallies.

Clark got the final two outs of the inning and found himself in some ticklish spots, but held the fort.

"Mike mixed it up pretty well," Diaz reported. "His fast ball was sinking. Now that he's out of the starting rotation, I think he will be a great asset in the stretch."

Randy started the season in relief and compiled an 0.69 ERA in relief, which will be lowered by Thursday's no-run effort. As a starter, his ERA is over 6.70.

"I know, I know... I've done well in relief," says Clark, "but I'd still rather start. Most of all, though, I just want to pitch."

Thompson crossed up the Gold Sox. Normally, an off-speed teaser, Mike challenged the hitters with his fast ball. "He kept it inside and the batters were off stride," Diaz said.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Carlos Gil, 5-6, goes for Midland against Neil Bryant, 5-7, in tonight's 7:30 p.m. game....The series concludes with games Saturday and Sunday...On streaks, Cotto reached seven, and Diaz seven, but Dave Owen was stopped at seven...Before the game, Diaz revealed a plot to steal the Green Weenie Flag from the P.A. booth at El Paso's Dudley Field. "Whenever we get a rally going, he waves that thing," complains Mike. "And what's really bad, it works. It stops the rally every time, without fail," adds Carter....

McDonald ignites Browns over Rams

CLEVELAND (AP) — When asked about his battle for the Cleveland Browns' quarterbacking job, Paul McDonald acts unconcerned.

But the blood dripping down his face after the Browns' 26-23 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Thursday night told a different story.

McDonald completed 16 of 25 passes for 245 yards, all in the second half, rallying the Browns from a 13-6 halftime deficit.

"This was a patented Browns' finish," said McDonald, a third-year pro hoping to unseat Brian Sipe as Cleveland's starter. "I'm playing well, and I saw coverages and defenses more clearly than I did against Detroit last week."

McDonald threw a 25-yard scoring pass to Dan Fulton with 1:54 left in the game to tie it 23-23, then hit Dino Hall with a 31-yarder to set up Matt Bahr's game-winning 34-yard field goal with three seconds remaining.

Sipe completed seven of 15 passes for 69 yards with two interceptions in the first half.

"Having two like that (Sipe and McDonald) just makes us a better team," said Browns' Coach Sam Rutigliano.

McDonald needed two stitches in his face after the game, the result of a hit by Rams' lineman Jack Youngblood.

"He apologized. He asked if I was all right," McDonald said.

Bahr's winning field goal was his fourth of the night and capped a 51-yard drive that started when Rams' running back Robert Alexander fumbled at Cleveland's 32-yard line.

"I was coming out of a spin when I was hit, and that's when I lost the ball," said Alexander, who returned seven kickoffs for 148 yards. "We didn't win and I had the fumble, so all I did in the previous times didn't matter."

Bahr connected on field goals of 44 and 47 yards in the first half, but the Rams held a 13-6 halftime edge thanks to 1-yard touchdown runs by Wendell Tyler and Mike Guman.

A 27-yarder by Bahr pulled Cleveland within 13-9 early in the third quarter. Los Angeles' Mike Lansford responded with a 34-yard kick to make it 16-9.

David Green scooted 9 yards on a draw play late in the period as the Browns tied it 16-16, but Green's fumble at his own 1-yard line midway through the final quarter set up the Rams' final touchdown, a 1-yard run by Jewerl Thomas.

"Overall, we played some pretty good football," said Rams' Coach Ray Malavasi. "Our first defensive unit made some big plays — like the two interceptions — and we moved the ball well offensively."

THE RAMS' starting quarterback, Bert Jones, completed six of eight first-half passes for 73 yards. Vince Ferragamo, returning to Los Angeles from the Canadian Football League, played the second half and hit on eight of 17 passes for 87 yards.

The Browns' victory kicked off the second full week of NFL exhibition play.

Tonight, New England will be at Philadelphia, while Cincinnati travels to Milwaukee to take on the Green Bay Packers.

Saturday's games have Chicago at Buffalo, Dallas at San Francisco, Kansas City at New Orleans, Miami at Denver, the Los Angeles Raiders at Detroit, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants, St. Louis at San Francisco, Seattle at Minnesota, Washington at Tampa Bay and Atlanta vs. Baltimore at Tempe, Ariz.

The New York Jets and the Houston Oilers round out the schedule with a game Sunday afternoon at the Houston Astrodome.

Bowie hasn't jumped — yet

SAN DIEGO (AP) — He stood on the terrace of his hotel suite, gazing across San Diego Bay and watching the boats pass. And the hours passed slowly for Bowie Kuhn as baseball's owners labored 12 stories below on a compromise to save his job as commissioner of America's game.

"I wasn't thinking of jumping, I assure you," Kuhn said. "I had sort of a sense of amused wonderment at what was going on below," he said. "I was sad because nothing was resolved. It was not a very splendid day for baseball."

TWO DAYS of frustrating, confusing meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday failed to produce the compromise between Kuhn's supporters and antagonists. A vote on Kuhn's re-election was put off until Nov. 1.

"There was a lot of laughter up here, too," said Kuhn, who has ruled over major league baseball for the past 14 years. "I wasn't alone too much. People drifted in and out.

"My wife (Luisa) was here, too. She doesn't always travel with me but this was a critical time. It's times like these that you need your wife with you."

As those agonizing hours dragged on, Kuhn received supportive calls from his mother and his children.

"There was a distinctively family side to this," Kuhn said. "The children called to say hello and my 84-year-old mother called. Once a woman turns 80, it's all right to mention her age."

Kuhn's contract expires Aug. 1, 1983 but owners must vote on re-election at least six months before that time.

Under the age-old rules of baseball, Kuhn needs a three-quarters majority in each league to keep his job. Four votes in the National League or five in the American could block re-election.

National League opponents appear to have the four votes they seek, but backers — who comprise the great majority of owners — have manuevered to block a vote in an effort to reach a compromise that would save Kuhn's job.

That's where it becomes complicated. At the center of the impasse seems to be the powers of a proposed super administraitor to handle baseball's business. The administraior has been assigned the acronym cooba (Chief Operating Officer of Business Affairs). Chief opponents want cooba on a ground equal to or higher than the commissioner. Kuhn and his supporters refuse to accept such a situation.

"I think I'm equipped to handle to business problems of baseball. However, if we can enhance our ability by bringing in new personnel, I'm for that," Kuhn said.

"I think we can find a fellow to help maximize our business operation, and I'm sure I can work with such a person," Kuhn said.

WHILE REFUSING to be specific about the type of compromise he could accept, Kuhn says the primary concern of baseball and its commissioner must be to preserve the game's integrity.

"I want to be remembered for two things," Kuhn said. "I want it to be remembered that I was commissioner during a time of tremendous growth in the popularity of baseball, and that it was a time in which no one could question the integrity of the game.

"We may bewilder the public by the way we behave sometimes, but there never has been a doubt of the game's integrity," Kuhn said.

When Kuhn replaced Gen. William Eckert as commissioner on Feb. 4, 1969, the game was mired in an attempt to restructure. There was a grand plan to combine league offices, streamline the game's bureaucracy and bring baseball into the second half of the 20th century.

Restructuring failed then, but every indication is that it will succeed this time.

"Not enough people perceived baseball to have the problems warranting that kind of a change then," Kuhn said. "Now everyone can perceive them. That's the big difference."

Another big change in the office has come in the man himself.

"You can't be commissioner for 14 years and not change, for better or for worse," Kuhn said. "I hope I've changed for the better. I've become more philosophical.

"You've got to develop a sense of humor. You have to be able to stand back and laugh. That's invaluable, or you're apt to go slightly balmy."

THIS HAS not been Kuhn's first battle for office. In 1975, then-Oakland A's owner Charlie O. Finley led a "dump Bowie" campaign that nearly succeeded. This time, the campaign has been led by owners Nelson Doubleday of the New York Mets, John McMullen of the Houston Astros and August Busch of the St. Louis Cardinals. Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner joined the triumverate during the past week's meetings.

"There was a day when Charlie Finley would say those nasty things about me, and I'd get upset," Kuhn said of the man who once called him "the village idiot."

"Now, I feel more of a sense of pity and sorrow for him. Finley was mean and vicious. These men (Doubleday and company) are not. This is a matter of honest disagreement.

All West Texas selection Clay Lindsey will return to play split end and defensive safety for McCamey in 1982. The senior averaged more than 30 yards per reception for the Badgers last season.

Can McCamey pull off another title?

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Since Larry Nabors became the head mentor at McCamey High School four years ago, the Badgers have compiled a 26-5-2 overall record and have won three consecutive district titles.

They finished the 1981 campaign with some impressive statistics, including a district title and a 9-1-1 record. So why aren't the Badgers one of the favorites in their new 8-AA district?

Well, the answer is twofold.

First, the Badgers lost 11 starters to graduation, and secondly and possibly most important, the new district includes a stronger set of foes, including Stanton, Reagan County and Wall.

"The new alignment puts us in a district that is tougher than previous ones," Nabors said. "But that should help us if we make the playoffs."

THE BADGERS have eight returning starters, five on defense, and three on offense including two all-district performers.

Clay Lindsey will return to his wide reciever position where he was an All-West Texas selection. The 158-pound senior averaged 31.5 yards in twelve receptions and scored three touchdowns. Lindsey, who will also play defensive safety, is one of five players scheduled to go both ways for the Badgers.

Bucky Watson will be hard to move from his offensive guard position where he was an All-District preformer last year. The 245-pound senior will be just as tough in the defensive line where he will anchor down a tackle slot.

A MAJOR rebuilding will be needed to match last year's offensive barrage that saw the Badgers average 367 yards per game. The only returing backfield starter on offense is Jodee Stephens at right halfback. Last year Stephens averaged 5.1 yards per carry.

Fullback Robert Day and quarterback Ray Zarate will join Stephens in a backfield that helped the Badgers average 33 points per game in 1981. The left halfback position in the multiple whishbone is still for grabs according to Nabors.

Things are looking better on the defensive side of the line where the Badgers have five returning starters in their 29-even defense, a variation of the 4-3-4.

TWO OF the returners are cousins, Jodee and David Stephens, who will fill two of the linebacker positions. Paul Goodwin, back for his senior year, will join Lindsey in the defensive backfield.

Kermit transfer Paul Wilson may break into the defensive secondary as a posible starter.

Coach Nabors says his club has only one strenghth, aggresiveness. And if his analysis of the team's weaknesses are accurate, the Badgers will have a hard time winning a game.

"We have no depth, we lack speed, we're inexperienced and our weight could be a drawback," he said.

THAT COULD explain why McCamey is picked to finish fourth in district play.

The Badgers pre-district schedule is a mixed blessing with two Class A opponents, two AAA foes and a game against the Midland High JV.

Even in a district as tough as 8-AA, one of McCamey's biggest games is the Upton County shootout against Rankin.

With the lack of depth and loss of 13 seniors, the winning tradition would seem to be in jeopardy at McCamey. But with Nabors' credentials, Badger fans can have faith that McCamey will be in the thick of the district 8-AA title chase.

Sept. 3 — Iraan (H), Sept. 10 — Midland JV (H), Sept. 17 — Rankin (A), Sept. 24 — Ozona (A), Oct. 1 — Crane (H), Oct. 8 — Reagan County (A), Oct. 15 — Wall (H), Oct. 22 — Miles (A), Oct. 29 — Eldorado (A), Nov. 5 — Stanton (H).

Angry callers want probation revoked

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — More than 400 angry callers have urged District Judge Mike Machado to revoke the probation of and imprison teen-aged boxing sensation Tony "Torito" Ayala Jr., a court spokesman says.

"Only one of the people gave his name, but they all wanted to see Ayala go to prison," said Ronnie Waiters, coordinator of the 227th District Court.

WAITERS SAID the calls poured in after radio commentator Alan Dale broadcast the court's telephone number on WOAI Radio and suggested people telephone Machado to vent their ire over Ayala's recent arrest.

Ayala, 19, the World Boxing Association No. 3-ranked junior middlweight, is scheduled to receive $750,000 for fighting former world champion Roberto Duran here Nov. 19.

But that fight would have to be cancelled if Machado decided to revoke the probated sentence he gave Ayala two years ago for beating up a girl and rupturing her bladder in what the 17-year-old victim described as a rape attempt. The attack took place in the women's restroom of a drive-in theater when Ayala was 16 years old and at a time he claimed he was drunk.

Ayala's attorney, Alan Brown, maintains that Ayala also was intoxicated last Sunday night when the prizefighter was arrested inside a house and charged with burglary.

BROWN CONTENDS that authorities are "making a mountain out of a mole hill" in the situation because his client simply got "drunk as hell" and wandered into the wrong house in a new neighborhood where Ayala recently moved. Ayala is free on bonds totalling $20,000 on the burglary and revocation of probation charges.

The outrage expressed by some people was enhanced by reports that Ayala has received 19 traffic tickets over the past 18 months and got most of them dismissed or was found innocent in city court, not paying a single fine.

Ayala's driver's license was suspended when some of the tickets — ranging from driving 45 mph in a school zone to negligent collision — were issued, a city councilman charged.

Councilman Van Henry Archer, a regular critic of muncipal judges' handling of traffic violators, said three policemen who ticketed Ayala never were called to testify against the boxer.

Ayala was cited one time for driving 90 mph in a 45-mph zone, and in that case Judge Albert Pena found Ayala innocent because the policeman had not checked the speedometer of his patrol car recently, Archer said.

"I DON'T think they were giving Ayala favored treatment," Archer said. "They do the same thing for everyone who goes before them, but what can you expect from the intellectual midgets we have on the court benches?"

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Machado's court said that the judge had not scheduled a show-cause hearing on whether to revoke Ayala's hearing because the complaining witness still had not been located.

Jim Carpentier and his two sisters, residents of the house where Ayala was arrested, have been sought for further questioning. Neighbors said they had not been home since Monday.

Cook cooks Buick field with 65

In desperation, Cook turned to retired pro Ken Venturi and together they began pointing Cook's formidable talents back in the right direction.

It all paid off on a windswept summer day in Michigan as Cook crafted a 35-30—65 to take the first-round lead in the $350,000 Buick Open, a tournament that will pay $63,000 to the winner.

"Ken Venturi worked with me for a long time on the physical part of my game, but he probably helped me even more mentally," Cook said after his superb round Thursday. "He had kind of an up-and-down career and he told me how to cope with it."

Cook's only tour victory came in the 1981 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. He later finished fourth in the Kemper Open and tied for fourth in the 1981 U.S. Open.

Then the bottom fell out; he suddenly and mysteriously — as so many golfers do in this delicate game — lost his swing.

"No matter how much talent you have, you can't play well if you're not swinging well," Cook explained. "You find youself digging a hole, not only with your golf game but with your life as well.

Cook admitted that today could be a big day for him; seeing if he can handle it two days in a row. If his performance on the back nine Thursday is any indication, however, he ought to do just fine — whether he maintains the lead or not.

Cook birdied the first hole at the 7,001-yard, par-72 layout at Warwick Hills, then played even par the rest of the front side to make the turn at 1-under, giving no indication of what was to come.

On the back nine, Cook birdied six holes, including four in a row from 14 through 17 and just missed another bird on 18. The key, however, was the 185-yard, par-3 No. 17 where he had to snake in a 40-foot uphiller with about an eight-foot break.

"I was kind of keeping an eye on myself to see how I would handle the last couple of holes, after I knew I had it going," Cook said. "Your mind plays funny tricks. That putt at 17 just made my whole day."

One stroke behind Cook at the start of today's play were Lanny Wadkins and Curtis Strange, both at 66. Bob Eastwood was alone at 67. A relative newcomer on the tour, 25-year-old Payne Stewart, was tied at 68 with John Adams.

Masters champion Craig Stadler was in a five-way tie with Victor Regalado, Scott Simpson, Don Halldorson and Mike Smith at 69 while defending Buick Open champion Hale Irwin was in a group of 15 golfers at 2-under 70.

Carner's nerves are just fine

CLEVELAND (AP) — JoAnne Carner says it's too early to worry about the pressure surrounding her bid to join the LPGA Hall of Fame with a victory in the Chevrolet World Championship of Women's Golf.

"My nerves are fine," she said Thursday after opening with a par 72 to tie Hollis Stacy for the lead in this event, which brings together the game's 12 best players annually. "Wait until Saturday, though," she warned.

Carner has admitted that she constantly fights butterflies in her quest for her 35th victory, which would make her the 10th player to qualify for the sports shrine.

Strangely, Stacy fought a case of nerves early in the first round over the Shaker Heights Country Club course.

"I was quite nervous," said Stacy, a three-time winner already this season. "I hadn't played in eight days, and I hadn't played a great course like this in a long time."

The two golfers' routes to the lead were vastly different.

Carner bunched five bogeys, three birdies and one eagle. Stacy offset three bogeys with three birdies.

"It was not a boring 72. It's hard to get birdies on this golf course. Eagles are a snap," Carner said in jest.

Stacy said of her performance: "It was just a solid round, nothing exciting, nothing great. I made a few clutch putts at the beginning that kept me in contention.

"These greens are incredible," she added. "I've never seen quicker ones. My first priority over the ball is try to get the right speed to the hole. Then I worry about my aim."

Gura blocks pain to record 15th win

By The Associated Press

Larry Gura didn't take the easy road to become the first 15-game winner in the American League this season.

The box score of the White Sox-Royals game looks routine enough, with Gura allowing five hits in seven shutout innings. But what the record books won't show is that the Kansas City left-hander pitched almost the entire game with a groin muscle pull.

Royals Manager Dick Howser nervously watched the veteran left-hander work in pain for seven innings before calling on Dan Quisenberry to get the last two outs of Kansas City's 3-0 victory Thursday night.

"I could see him grimace on some pitches," Howser said. "He wanted to stay in the game, but we can't afford to lose him. You don't want to take a chance injuring his arm because he was changing his style."

Gura, 15-8, who hasn't allowed a run in his last 17 innings of pitching, outdueled LaMarr Hoyt, who also had 14 victories going into the game.

"I really should have come out in the second, but I wanted to pitch," Gura said. "I couldn't push off and it was affecting me."

Hoyt, 14-11, was nicked for single runs in the second, fourth and seventh as the White Sox, who have rallied in the past month to get in the AL West race, lost their third straight game.

Doubles got the Royals started in each of those innings.

Willie Aikens led off the second with a double and came around on groundouts by Jerry Martin and Frank White. Martin doubled in the fourth and scored on a single by White, who led off the seventh with another two-base hit and went to third when John Wathan singled to chase Hoyt.

Salome Barojas almost got out of the jam, coaxing a double play grounder from Greg Pryor, while White held at third. Second baseman Tony Bernazard then made a good play on Willie Wilson's sharp grounder, but threw wildly to first, allowing White to score on what was ruled an infield hit.

"He pitched good enough to give us a chance to win it," White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa said of Hoyt. "The other guy just pitched better. We had our chances throughout the game. We had guys on second base with less than two outs a couple of times and couldn't score."

Brewers 10, A's 6

Fred Stanley hit his first homer in three years for Oakland, but Milwaukee bats were hot again as the Brewers snapped a four-game losing streak to increase their East Division lead to four games.

Ben Oglivie's three-run homer gave Milwaukee a 7-2 lead as it scored four unearned runs in the fifth inning. Paul Molitor contributed four hits, scored three runs and knocked in two.

Pete Vuckovich, 14-4, got the victory despite allowing nine hits, including six for extra bases, in six innings. Matt Keough, 10-16, took the loss but only three of the eight runs he allowed were earned.

Rickey Henderson of the A's stole his 111th base of the season, pulling to within seven of Lou Brock's major league record. Tony Armas hit his 20th homer for Oakland.

Twins 9, Orioles 3

Tom Brunansky, Gary Ward and Gary Gaetti slugged homers as Minnesota started the game with six straight hits to blister Baltimore.

The Twins took a 6-0 first-inning lead with the homers, all of which carried over 400 feet in the Minneapolis Metrodome.

Bobby Castillo, 7-9, had a four-hitter going into the ninth inning, but he gave up a two-run homer to Eddie Murray and a solo shot to John Lowenstein to ruin the shutout bid. He also struck out a career-high 10 batters.

Loser Scott McGregor, 12-12, failed to retire a batter in the first, giving up the first five runs.

Angels 8, Red Sox 5

California scored five runs after two were out in the seventh inning to beat Boston and stay in sole possession of first place in the West, one game ahead of the Royals.

Don Baylor singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh, which started with the Red Sox ahead 5-3.

The Angels loaded the bases with two out off loser Mark Clear, 9-6, before Fred Lynn greeted reliever Tom Burgmeier with a two-run single to tie the score.

Baylor followed with his RBI single and the Angels added two more runs when third baseman Carney Lansford misplayed Ron Jackson's grounder, enabling Lynn to score, and Tim Foli singled to drive in Baylor.

Bruce Kison, 7-4, blanked Boston on three hits after relieving Angels starter Steve Renko with none out in the fourth inning.

Four players leave Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech football coach Jerry Moore said Thursday that four players, including a junior college transfer who had finished the spring as the No. 1 noseguard, have left the team for personal reasons.

Moore said the four are noseguard Will Reyneveld, defensive back Wymon Bolton, and linemen Bobby James and Tim Baxley.

The team opened practice Thursday with more than 150 players.

Louie Kelcher now unretired

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Defensive tackle Louie Kelcher ended his 18-day "retirement" from professional football Thursday and worked out again with the San Diego Chargers.

The three-time Pro Bowl player told a news conference later that "I wasn't ready for it (retirement). I did some soul-searching and talked to some people who were influential in my life growing up."

"I got away for four or five days all by myself," said Kelcher, whose weight reportedly figured in his unexpected decision Aug. 1 to quit football at the age of 28.

ALTHOUGH HIS weight is listed at 282 in the Chargers' new media guidebook, reporters guessed that Kelcher returned at about 340 pounds. But he said he regained the proper mental approach to football.

"I've got the right perspective of the game now," said the ex-Southern Methodist standout who has started 83 of 84 games snce being drafted by San Diego in 1975.

"I did some fishing ... I came to the conclusion after I got home that I'm still young. I enjoy a lot of things involved with football. I really missed it."

A spokesman for the Chargers said Kelcher's return was "great news" even though Kelcher will sit out their National Football League preseason game at home Saturday night with the Dallas Cowboys.

Kelcher's 29th birthday is next Monday.

Baseball power faces shift

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

By doing nothing immediately on the commissioner issue this week in San Diego, baseball spoke in a loud voice. It's a new world. The old game "ain't gonna be what she used to be."

It isn't exactly a promising prospect for Bowie Kuhn, seeking to continue the 14 years he's served as the top administrator, but it isn't a death knell necessarily, either.

He still has a chance to hang on in a reduced capacity if his supporters, a large majority of the 26 owners, can accept one of the various compromises proposed by the hard-core National Leaguers who want his scalp.

That's what hung the jury at San Diego. The Kuhn men were reluctant to accept a watered down role for the man who has occupied the commissioner's office since 1969.

BUT IF the Kuhn forces persist in trying to preserve even the semblance of power that the office is supposed to entail (actually a myth), they are apt to lose their man.

The determination of the dissidents –the New York Mets, Houston Astros, St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds – can be expected to harden in the interim instead of softening under lobbying pressure.

In fact, the bloc's strength might be expected to grow with the addition of the Atlanta Braves, Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Phillies, reported wavering on the issue. Only four negative votes in the National League are needed to block reelection. The anti-Kuhns have four solid and three possible. The American League is backing the commissioner, but has two or three weak links.

The next vote is set for Nov. 1.

Personally, we think Bowie Kuhn deserves the best treatment from baseball, whether it be extension of his contract or a new role. A Princeton graduate who got his law degree at the University of Virginia, he has served the game with dignity and a high regard for ethics.

No one can accuse him of any self-serving acts. He has been even-handed in protecting what he thought were the "best interests of baseball." He suspended such influential owners as George Steinbrenner and Ted Turner and fined hamburger king Ray Kroc of San Diego and Charles O. Finley, formerly owner of the Oakland A's. He invited the wrath of fans everywhere by forcing the popular Willie Mays out of baseball because of Willie's connection (involving community affairs) with a gambling establishment in Atlantic City.

Some of these moves were not so discreet –particularly in the case of Mays, whose offense was miniscule, and in the excessive $100,000 fine against Kroc for off-handedly telling a reporter he would like to have a couple of ballplayers belonging to another club.

You could question Kuhn's logic, but not his honesty. His guilt lay in too strict an interpretion of the law, omitting the human element. He also should have risked the ire of his employers and injected himself into the 1981 baseball strike, proving he was commissioner of the players and fans as well as the owners.

In the line of the game's commissioners of the past, Kuhn emerges as one of the two best, possibly exceeded only by the fearless Happy Chandler.

The first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, a tough judge brought in after the 1919 Black Sox scandal, had menacing eyebrows and an aura of authority but he never faced up to the game's basic issues –free agency and segregation.

IT TOOK his successor, Chandler, to defy a majority of the owners and let Jackie Robinson break the color barrier, for which he was summarily fired. Ford Frick, a former sports writer, and Gen. William Eckert were little more than office clerks for the owners. Neither made a historical decision.

Kuhn has presided over the game during a period of its greatest growth, prosperity and change. But it's the drastic change in an inflated economic climate that has put his job in present jeopardy.

With its vast TV exposure, merchandising potential and multi-million-dollar player contracts, the game has become more business and entertainment than sport. It is a multi-headed monster that demands a different kind of person at the helm –an astute business man, public relations expert and impresario such as the National Football League's Pete Rozelle or Ray Volpe, who modernized and commercialized the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

But baseball always should have a place for Bowie, a man who sincerely treasures the game.

Braves finally win a game

Phil Niekro puts Atlanta back on right track

By The Associated Press

Pascual Perez got lost trying to drive his way to the ballpark, but Phil Niekro was able to put the Atlanta Braves back on the right track.

"I never expected to pitch tonight," said Niekro after filling in for the AWOL Perez and pitching the Braves to a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos Thursday night. "I felt a litle more tired than I usually do — but sometimes when they catch you off-guard, it's good."

Niekro was thrown into the breach when Perez, a relative newcomer to Atlanta, got lost when he rented a car and drove himself to Atlanta Stadium for the first time. He finally arrived in the first inning, and got slapped with a $100 fine for his tardiness.

"Sometimes you've got to get lost to find yourself," said Atlanta first baseman Bob Watson, obviously alluding to the Braves' recent losing streak more than Perez's logistical problems.

Before Thursday night, the Braves had lost 19 of their last 21 games, and dropped into second place in the NL West after losing a seemingly insurmountable 9-game lead in less than three weeks.

Claudell Washington was the hitting hero for Atlanta, smashing a two-run homer and then a run-scoring single in the seventh for the winning run.

"I've been looking for that for about the last four weeks," said Washington, who has been in a slump both at bat and in the field. "Hopefully, I'm on my way again."

Washington said that the Braves' tailspin was "the worst slump I've ever seen a ballclub go through and I've been on some bad ballclubs before. The pity of the thing is all of the games have been close for the most part."

The Braves were losing 4-3 when they rallied to win with two runs in the seventh off reliever Woodie Fryman, 7-3, on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Royster and Washington's RBI single. Niekro, 11-3, allowed only three hits while pitching seven innings and Gene Garber worked the final two innings to gain his 21st save.

Cubs 8, Dodgers 2

Bill Buckner whacked four hits, including a double and a homer, and Jay Johnstone also homered, leading a 17-hit Chicago attack as the Cubs pounded Los Angeles.

Ferguson Jenkins, 8-13, checked the NL West-leading Dodgers on four hits, walked three and struck out four in eight innings in gaining the 272nd victory of his major league career. Dick Tidrow pitched the ninth inning for the Cubs, allowing two hits.

Bob Welch, 14-8, who had won his previous five games, was the loser.

"I'm always motivated when it comes to hitting," said Buckner, brushing off questions about trying harder against his former teammates.

Pirates 6, Giants 1

Jason Thompson slammed two singles and drove in two runs and John Candelaria scattered seven hits in seven innings as Pittsburgh defeated San Francisco. Tony Pena also hit a solo homer for the Pirates, his seventh, in the sixth inning.

Candelaria, 10-5, struck out five and walked two in seven innings before he was removed because of a blister on his left foot. Loser Rich Gale, 6-12, lasted only four innings, giving up four of the Pirates' five runs and seven hits.

Astros 7, Phillies 6

Denny Walling's RBI single with one out in the 11th inning paced Houston to a comeback victory over Philadelphia. Danny Heep drew a walk from loser Sid Monge, 5-1, to lead off the 11th. Heep was sacrificed to second by Dickie Thon, setting the stage for Walling's game-winner.

Dave Smith, 2-4, pitched one-hit relief over the final three innings for the win.

The Astros had rallied from a 6-2 deficit to tie the score with three runs in the fifth and one in the eighth off Steve Carlton, who pitched 10 innings for the Phillies.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

St. Louis right fielder George Hendrick's two-base error opened the gates for a three-run third inning and rookie left-hander Dave Dravecky scattered seven hits in 8 1-3 innings as San Diego beat the Cardinals.

Dravecky, 4-1, gave up three runs, including Gene Tenace's two-run homer in the ninth, before getting relief from Luis DeLeon, who gained his 11th save.

Loser John Stuper, 5-3, hurt his own cause by walking Tim Flannery and Tony Gwynn around a sacrifice bunt by Dravecky in the third.

Garry Templeton then hit a low liner to right for a single which eluded Hendrick, who tried for a shoe-string catch. Gwynn scored and Templeton, who reached third, then scored on Gene Tenace's passed ball to make it 3-0.

Reds 3, Mets 1

Ron Oester's two-run homer in the 10th inning lifted Cincinnati over New York and extended the Reds' winning streak to four games, their longest of the season.

The Reds had rallied with two out in the ninth to tie the score 1-1 on Larry Biittner's RBI single. Mike Vail led off the 10th with a double off reliever Tom Hausman, 1-1, who came on for starter Craig Swan. Oester then followed with his fourth homer, into the right-field stands at Riverfront Stadium.

In the ninth, the Reds had tied the game on Larry Biittner's RBI single.

Miami faces task to stage 9-2 mark

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Howard Schnellenberger admits his 1982 Miami Hurricanes face a difficult task in topping last season's 9-2 record against one of the most formidable schedules in the country.

But the fourth-year coach says his players have developed confidence in themselves which could enable them not only to improve upon their No. 8 ranking in the final Associated Press poll, but give them a shot at the national championship as well.

"Our program will hopefully enter a third level of development this year," says Schnellenberger, who has often described his program's resurgence as the "journey toward our ultimate destination" — the national crown.

"First we had to find out what it took to win when we hadn't been winning before. Then we had to win when we were expected to. Now we must work to become consistent enough to win all the time."

Thirteen starters are gone from the 1981 team that rattled off four straight victories after Miami was slapped at midseason with NCAA probation for recruiting violations.

The Hurricanes were barred from postseason bowls, but a sanction limiting Miami to 20 new scholarships for 1982 didn't hurt recruiting because Schnellenberger had only 18 to offer anyway.

"What the probation did was cost us $1 million in bowl revenues. But the sanctions didn't destroy, didn't hurt and didn't set back the program," says Schnellenberger. "It made us a little poorer, but we were able to go out and recruit this year with the expectation of playing on television and in a bowl game. It's all behind us now."

Offensively, Schnellenberger has a veteran unit despite the loss of running backs Smokey Roan and Chris Hobbs, both three-year starters.

The hub of a pro-style offense again will be quarterback Jim Kelly, a 6-3, 210-pound senior who threw for 2,403 yards in 1981, and is being touted locally as a Heisman Trophy candidate.

"I'm confident that Georgia would be a great football team with or without Herschel Walker and I'm just as confident that Pitt would be a great team with or without (Dan) Marino," the coach says.

"But I know that our team would not be the type of team that has won 20 games and lost five under the direction of Jim Kelly if he were not our quarterback."

Senior Mark Rush and juniors Speedy Neal and Keith Griffin — brother of the Ohio State Griffins — figure prominently in Schnellenberger's ground game. Wide receivers Rocky Belk, Keith Cleveland and Lawrence Thompson, as well as Glenn Dennison, will be counted on to replace Mike Rodrigue and Larry Brodsky as Kelly's targets.

White Shoes is back in NFL

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, attempting a National Football League comeback after a year in Canada, hopes his experience and his quickness will gain him a position with the Atlanta Falcons.

The punt return specialist dazzled his way to three Pro Bowl appearances — in 1975, 1976 and 1977 — during seven years with the Houston Oilers before going down with knee injuries.

With Houston, Johnson set an NFL record for career average punt returns at more than 13 yards a return. And he tied a league record in 1975 when he returned three punts for touchdowns and scored another on a kickoff return.

Following knee surgery in 1978 and 1979, Johnson went to the Canadian Football League. With Montreal last season, Johnson ranked third in pass receiving and punt returns but "the administration there was falling apart, everything was helter-skelter and they wanted me to take a pay cut, so I opted to come back to the NFL," he said.

"He has been a pleasant surprise," Falcons Coach Leeman Bennett said of the 29-year-old Johnson.

"One of our primary reasons for signing him was for his punt return ability," said Bennett. "He's also got playing ability at wide receiver. Many people said he no longer could do it as a receiver, but that's inaccurate, he can still play.

"He's still got great quickness. There was an image painted of him as sort of a hot dog. From what I've seen, that's totally inaccurate. He's been all class since he's been here. I've seen nothing negative about him," said Bennett, whose club lacks a speedster at the punt return position.

"The knee injuries haven't bothered me at all," said the 5-foot-9, 170-pound Johnson. "I just have to continue to work hard on them. I can't afford to take it easy."

He said he was clocked at 4.4 seconds for the 40-yard dash as a rookie out of Widener (Pa.) College in 1974 and ran a 4.53 recently.

"To tell you the truth, if I run 4.5 or 4.6, I'm happy. The biggest thing is my quickness and I've still got that," said Johnson.

"Another thing, I'm an experienced ball player. I don't think you can beat experience. It has proven itself time and time again, there's no substitute for experience," he said in a recent interview at the Falcons' training camp here.

Several NFL teams were interested in his services, Johnson said, but "Atlanta seemed to be the right spot. I like the intensity they play with and they like to throw the ball, always using three or four receivers."

Higheasterjet leads field for Ruidoso's Gold Cup

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — Former All-American Futurity winner Higheasterjet and the outstanding mares Rule The Deck and Baby Hold On head the field for Sunday's inaugural running at Ruidoso Downs of the $980,730 All-American Gold Cup race for older quarter horses.

The race, with $490,365 going to the winner, is the first of the track's three richest races, all of which will be run in the final three weeks of the season. On Sunday, the $1 million All-American Derby will be run, and the track closes its season with the $2.5 million All-American Futurity, which this year guarantees the winning owner $1 million.

The Gold Cup is for 4-year-olds with the derby featuring 3-year-olds and the futurity limited to 2-year-olds.

The field for the Gold Cup was determined from trials held earlier this month and Rule The Deck and Baby Hold On, two of the seven mares in the race, posted the top qualifying times.

Rule The Deck, owned by Dirk Jones of Lubbock, Texas, has won five of six races this season, including an awesome four length win in the Gold Cup trials. In her only loss, Rule The Deck actually finished first in the World's Championship Classic at Ruidoso Downs on Aug. 1 but was disqualified and placed third.

The past two years, Rule The Deck has won 13 of 19 races and has earned more than $271,000. Her top qualifying time in the trials for the 440-yard distance was 22.02 seconds.

Baby Hold On has campaigned both on the West Coast and New Mexico during most of her career. The brilliant speedster rarely has been outrun and has finished in the money in 16 of her 22 races the past two seasons.

Ransom helps Mets beat Caps

By The Associated Press

Catcher Jeff Ransom belted a three-run homer in the first inning to lead the Shreveport Captains to a 4-3 win over the Jackson Mets in Texas League play.

In other Texas League baseball action Thursday night, the El Paso Diablos kept pace with Midland atop the Western division by beating the San Antonio Dodgers 9-2 in San Antonio.

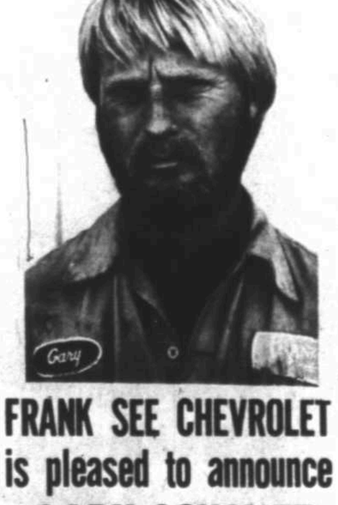

Ransom, who drove in two runs the previous night, lofted his seventh homer of the year off losing pitcher Jeff Bittiger, 11-5. Shreveport added another run in the third inning when a Dave Wabeke double was misplayed by Jackson left-fielder Sergio Beltre to allow a run to score.

Jackson came back in the eighth inning to score three runs, two on Mike Aniciche's 22nd homerun of the season. Scott Garrelts, 9-10, recorded the win for the Captains.

Tulsa's Brett Bonza knocked in three runs to help the Drillers to a 10-3 victory over the Arkansas Travelers. The Drillers, now 37-18, widened their Eastern Division lead to 7 games over Arkansas.

Odds are against Clemson repeating as national champs

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Will there be another surprise national champion this fall, like Clemson a year ago, or will one of the traditional powers reclaim the college football throne?

"There have been only eight repeat national champions in the AP poll since they have been doing it (1936), so it is obviously difficult to win it a second time in a row," says Clemson Coach Danny Ford. "Everyone thought it was impossible for us to win it a first time, but we did."

It's not impossible for Clemson to repeat, but the Tigers must first beat out North Carolina, the preseason favorite in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

North Carolina has tailback Kelvin Bryant and quarterback Rod Elkins operating behind a stout offensive led by guards David Drechsler and Ron Spruill. Tackle William Fuller heads the defense. Clemson returns 13 starters, including quarterback Homer Jordan and All-American free safety Terry Kinard.

However, both teams will be tested right off the bat in rugged road openers. Clemson visits Georgia, the 1980 national champion, while North Carolina is at Pitt, one of the 1982 favorites.

Elsewhere, much of the headlines are centered on Pitt and Penn State in the East; Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi State in the Southeastern Conference; Miami of Florida among the Southern independents; Ohio State, Michigan and Illinois in the Big Ten; Notre Dame among the Midwest independents; Nebraska and Oklahoma in the Big Eight; Southern Methodist, Arkansas and Texas in the Southwest Conference; Washington and Southern California in the Pacific-10 and Brigham Young, Wyoming and Hawaii in the Western Athletic Conference.

Without a bruiser at fullback and an offensive line that must be restructured, Joe Paterno is changing Penn State's image from a grind-it-out to a big-play team. The skill people include quarterback Todd Blackledge, running back Curt Warner and wide receiver Kenny Jackson.

Pitt also has plenty of firepower in quarterback Dan Marino, wideouts Julius Dawkins and Dwight Collins and running back Bryan Thomas behind a superb pair of offensive tackles in Jimbo Covert and Bill Fralic.

Once again, the top names in the SEC are Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant and Georgia tailback Herschel Walker. Last year, Bryant became college football's winningest coach with 315 victories and he is expected to add a lot more this season.

Alabama and Georgia don't meet during the regular season. Florida has never won the SEC title, but the Gators are getting a lot of support and their Nov. 6 meeting with Georgia will be crucial. Walker makes Georgia a power and he will be joined by a super freshmen class.

Miami lost heavily to graduation, but quarterback Jim Kelly makes the Hurricanes a threat.

In the Big Ten, Iowa ended the Michigan-Ohio State domination by going to the Rose Bowl. The Hawkeyes must replace most of their rugged defense and Illinois is given a real shot at joining the elite this year led by record-breaking Tony Eason at quarterback.

Ohio State lost quarterback Art Schlichter, but almost everyone else is back. Michigan returns its aerial duo of quarterback Steve Smith and wide receiver Anthony Carter.

At Notre Dame, the Fighting Irish will try to rebound from their first losing campaign in 18 years against a schedule which includes Michigan, Miami, Pitt, Penn State and Southern Cal.

Oklanoma is smarting from an unaccustomed 7-4-1 season and the loss of its Big Eight crown to Nebraska. The Sooners are counting on their usual horde of running backs and better things from a defense led by tackle Rick Bryan and linebackers Thomas Benson and Jackie Shipp.

Nebraska's hopes rest on quarterback Turner Gill's recovery from a foot injury that kept him out of the Orange Bowl loss to Clemson. Indications are that Gill will be okay, joining tailbacks Mike Rozier and Roger Craig behind All-American center Dave Rimington.

Texas, which lost heavily to graduation, went to the Cotton Bowl even though it finished behind SMU in the SWC. The Mustangs, who were on probation last year, have a new coach in Bobby Collins and the same impressive set of tailbacks in Eric Dickerson and Craig James. Arkansas has a 1-2 quarterback punch in Tom Jones and Brad Taylor and a defense led by All-American end Billy Ray Smith.

The big story in the Southwest, however, is Jackie Sherrill, who left Pitt for Texas A&M and the richest contract in coaching history.

Agents say Martin not part of drug investigation

DALLAS (AP) — Federal agents say Dallas Cowboys lineman Harvey Martin is not involved in an extensive drug investigation here, though they seized nine photographs in which he posed with a key suspect.

Martin acknowledged knowing the Highland Park hair stylist, Danny Stone, but denied any involvement in an alleged drug ring and said he knew him only as his barber.

Drug Enforcement Administration agents said that Martin is "not a target" of the investigation. And at least one agent was angry that information about the pictures was released.

The barber, Danny Stone, is being held in the Dallas County Jail on a $500,000 bond and is one of 34 people indicted by a federal grand jury Aug. 5. The photographs were listed among items seized from a hutch in the breakfast room of Stone's house.

Stone's live-in girlfriend, Becky L. Patton, who also was indicted in the drug case, said Martin was "a friend of ours, has been for a long time."

She confirmed that Stone cut Martin's hair and said she took the pictures of them last winter as they played backgammon in Stone's rented Highland Park home.

But reached at the Cowboys' Thousand Oaks, Calif., training camp, Martin replied, "God, no," when asked if Stone was a friend of his.

"The guy is a barber," Martin said. "He cuts my hair. I get asked to take pictures with a lot of people. One of the biggest things people ask is to have their picture taken with me.

"I'll bet I've done it a thousand times. I can't help it if someone has a picture of me and I don't understand what they're trying to do."

U.S. Attorney James A. Rolfe would neither confirm nor deny Wednesday whether Martin or any other Cowboys players are under investigation.

Asked whether his refusal Wednesday to comment contradicted his earlier statement, Rolfe replied, "I can't eat that (earlier statement). That's already been said."

Cactus Jack dies in home Thursday

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Jack Curtice, who emphasized a passing game in his 40 years of football coaching that included a stint as as head coach at Stanford and the University of Utah, died in his home Thursday.

His wife, Margaret, summoned emergency help, but Curtice, 75, was dead. A funeral home spokesman said it appeared he died of a heart attack.

Curtice was known as "Cactus Jack" for much of his career. He was known as a direct and simple taskmaster who stressed discipline. He was the last head football coach at the University of California at Santa Barbara from 1963-1969 before the school abandoned the sport.

Curtice was president of the American Football Coaches Association in 1961 and had been chairman of its Football Rules Committee. He was head coach at West Texas State College in 1940 and 1941 at Texas Western College from 1942-1950, at Utah 1951-1957 and Stanford 58-62. His record was 102-85-7.

He was the 1957-1958 head coach of the west team at the Shrine All-Star football team.

Georgia faces 'testy year'

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Coach Vince Dooley says the 1982 football season "can be a testy year" for Georgia.

Despite the return of two-time All-America tailback Herschel Walker and 15 other starters, including two kickers, Dooley is worried about replacing quarterback Buck Belue, who led the Dogs to a 22-2 record and a national championship in the last two seasons, and Lindsay Scott, one of the top receivers in the Southeastern Conference.

"We've probably got extremes in assets and liabilities," said Dooley, citing the lack of an experienced quarterback and wide receiver as the major liabilities.

"A real asset is Herschel, and we'll have a better offensive line because it is more experienced." Dooley said.

He also expects another strong defense led by end Freddie Gilbert and tackle Jimmy Payne, a pair who, Dooley says, "might give us the best pass-rush duo since (Bill) Stanfil and (George) Patton" — All-Americans during the 1960s.

Linebacker Tommy Thurson remains a question mark. He was diagnosed as suffering from a slipped disc last winter.

"A lot will depend on Thurson," Dooley said. "We won't know until after he hits."

John Lastinger, a gifted junior, will be the new quarterback.

"Lastinger has made some improvement, some progress," Dooley said. "But the dropoff from where we've been the last two years to where we are now is a big gap. He only played one year of high school at quarterback, and played very little at Georgia."

Lastinger also backed up Belue at Valdosta High, a school that also produced Mississippi State's starting quarterback, John Bond.

The Bulldogs will be gunning for their third consecutive SEC title and a berth among the nation's elite for the third year in a row. Georgia won the 1980 national crown and finished sixth in last year's poll after dropping a regular-season game to national champion Clemson and the Sugar Bowl to second-ranked Pittsburgh.

"I think we've got a tighter situation than I can ever remember it," Dooley said of the SEC race. He cites Alabama as a solid contender and says "Florida has the greatest chances it's ever had to win the championship this year and next year." Mississippi State and Auburn also could figure in the race "and I'd like to think we'll be up in there somewhere," he added.

As to Georgia's chance at a second national title in three years, Dooley said, "It would have to be one of those real outside shots with everything falling into place. I think we've got too many shortcomings."

Walker, a 222-pound junior, has set NCAA rushing records for his class in each of his first two seasons — 1,616 yards as a freshman, when he was third in the Heisman Trophy voting, and 1,891 last year, when he placed second in balloting for the trophy.

Walker, who decided not to challenge the National Football League rule prohibiting teams from signing collegians before their class graduated, has established 15 schools, eight SEC and six NCAA records.

The offensive line features tight ends Norris Brown and Clarence Kay, and veterans at other positions. Kevin Butler, who set a conference kick-scoring record as a freshman last year, will provide extra punch.

Sherrill to work flatlands

SWC Preview Series
By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — As head football coach at Pittsburgh, Jackie Sherrill liked to put human mountains in the offensive line and laugh at opposing defenses trying to climb over to the quarterback.

Then he came to Texas A&M last spring and found mostly flatlands.

Although the Aggies return eight starters on offense, including highly regarded quarterback Gary Kubiak, Sherrill is most concerned about improvement in the offensive line. Among his first orders were for the offensive linemen to muscle up.

"The offensive linemen have done an excellent job of getting on the weights and getting stronger," Sherrill said. "You don't see any teams winning without strong offensive and defensive lines. SMU and Houston were good examples last year."

Sherrill likes to start his lineman shopping list at 6-5 but he'll have to settle for considerably less this season.

"There have been 6-2 linemen who have played for me but they have to be very strong and physical," Sherrill said. "You like to be able to rattle off 15 names of offensive linemen who can play but we don't have them."

Sherrill has been pleased with the weight work of starting left tackle Bryan Dasin and left guard Greg Porter, who are now at the 250-mark.

They'll be joined by center Matt Darwin, 6-4, 252, guard Tim Ward, 6-5, 275 and tackle Tommy Robisn, 6-4, 275, along the offensive line.

The Aggies spent spring training trying to digest Sherrill's complicated multiple offensive scheme, and Sherrill says he's pleased with the progress of Kubiak, who set a Southwest Conference record of six touchdown passes against Rice last season.

"Gary is a player with the intelligence factor and athletic ability to adapt to our philosophy" Sherrill said. "He's got a quick release and he can run the option. The only thing he doesn't have is a cannon."

Kubiak will get his plays from the sidelines but "he'll have the option to audible at the line," Sherrill said. "We'll give him a lot of freedom to call the plays. He'll direct about 85 percent of the game."

Running backs Johnny Hector and Earnest Jackson also return along with flanker Jimmie Williams. Jimmy Teal will replace graduated split end Mike Whitwell.

The defense also is loaded with eight returning starters with only end Keith Baldwin, linebacker Mike Little and cornerback Dan Davis missing from the 1981 starters.

Tackles Keith Guthrie and Ray Childress will anchor the defensive line while safeties Billy Cannon and Jeff Fuller and cornerback Greg Williams lend experience to the secondary.

Haas takes Senior lead

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — During 32 years on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, Freddie Haas was generally an unsung journeyman in the long shadow cast by golf's immortals.

Now that he — and some of the immortals — are senior citizens, he still isn't overconfident.

Haas, 66, shot a 2-under-par 69 Thursday to grab the first-round lead in the $150,000 Greater Syracuse Seniors Golf Classic. Asked if he would be surprised to be in the same position when the 72-hole event ends Sunday, he replied, "I sure would. My record doesn't indicate that I will, but I'm going to try to be there."

Haas played with a fine consistency, hitting 16 greens in regulation and using just 32 putts. He finished with a flourish, birdieing three of the last five holes to grab a one-stroke advantage on Bob Goalby and Peter Thomson.

Guy Wolstenholme, Harvey Johnson, Paul Harney and Art Wall were deadlocked at even-par 71 two shots off the pace, with Don January, Gene Littler, George Bayer and Bob Erickson 1-over in the event for players over 50 years old.

Hynosis as stress reducer

Paid Advertisement

In today's fast-paced world, stress and the accompanying physical problems associated with it are becoming a major problem in our society. Many businesses and organizations have recognized that it is imperative to help employees reduce stress, whether job-related or not.

Clinical Hypnosis and Behavior Modification director Dr. Marie Moore and her associate, Frank McFarlin, are bringing a program of stress reduction to area businesses in an effort to help combat this problem.

Moore is now booking seminars for the fall which deal with stress reduction. These seminars are geared to the larger institutions and businesses in the area, with the ideal class size being between 40 and 50 people. Each seminar lasts five weeks, with one meeting each week either during the day, or if preferred, the evening. If your company is interested in helping your employees reduce stress, call 683-4235 for information about these seminars.

In addition to the stress reduction seminars, Moore and McFarlin are offering sales training seminars, in which hypnosis is used as a method of helping employees increase their sales potential. These seminars will also begin in the Fall.

Both Moore and McFarlin have a wide range of experience dealing with a variety of problems. Both are trained hypnotherapists and use hypnotheraphy as a form of behavior modification. Moore, also a psycologist, says this method teaches the individual to make full use of their own natural resources and this results in helping them solve their problem.

Hypnotheraphy, explains Moore, is a self-induced altered state of conciousness which can lead to ultimately correcting, eliminating or controlling a variety of personal disorders. For example, some of the problems tackled by Moore and McFarlin during their years in practice include obesity, smoking, poor memory, social and marital problems, sexual problems, bed-wetting, nailbiting and stuttering. McFarlin says he has even used hypnotheraphy to control allergies and pain. Moore says she has had excellent results with clients who wish to lose weight or stop smoking.

McFarlin, a hypnotheraphist-master hypnotist certified by the American Council of Hypnotist Examiners, has worked extensively during the past 15 years with chemical dependency problems such as drug and alcohol abuse.

McFarlin says there are always common questions concerning alcohol abuse, the most common being, "How does one know if they have an alcohol problem?"

McFarlin answers that one with a favorite anecdote of his; "I have a friend, a former racing driver who lives in a mountainous area of California. Riding with him over the mountain roads is quite an experience, for he likes to drive fast. If a passenger asks him, however, if he isn't driving too fast, his reply is invariably, 'If I'm making you nervous, then I must be', and he slows down to accommodate his passenger.

Be physically fit this fall

If you're interested in becoming more physically fit, and in having the kind of healthy body that will make you look and feel your best, then a fitness program at Midland Fitness Center is for you.

Midland Fitness Center, located in the Northland Shopping Center, North "A" St. and Scharbauer Dr., offers the opportunity to acieve a high level of fitness, inch loss, body toning and weight loss, plus the fun of group dance routines.

An orientation lesson is suggested before you begin a fitness program at Midland Fitness Center which covers body positioning, class composition, pulse rate monitoring, measurements, exercises and general facts about aerobic conditioning. There is no charge for this service.

The instructors at Midland Fitness are well trained and experienced, and are required by the management to have CPR training. There is also a licensed physical therapist on the staff.

Classes include Beginners, Body Toning, Aerobic Workout, Fit for All, Pre-Natal, Post-Partum and Men's Aerobic Calisthenics. Country & Western dance classes are scheduled from time to time. Call the Midland Fitness Center at 682-6134 for more information about those classes and their starting times.

To sign up, go by the Center 15 minutes before class time, register and receive a punch card good for either 12 classes for $30 or 20 classes for $50. The card may be used at your discretion, any day, any time; there is no penalty for missing a class.

Wear appropriate clothing such as leotards and tights, T-shirts and shorts; anything that is comfortable and loose. Tennis or running shoes are required. The Center's shop sells leotards, tights, Midland Fitness Center shirts and shorts.

A nursery is provided for the care of young children while the parent exercises; this is free.

The handy Northland Shopping Center location, along with an impressive variety of classes and service, make Midland Fitness Center the perfect place to begin your physical fitness program.

For further information contact the instructors at the Center to find out which class will be best for your needs.

These are some of the instructors at Midland Fitness Center in the Northland Shopping Center, North "A" and Scharbauer Dr. who are ready to help you achieve your fitness goal. For construction site clean-up, lot clearing, debris removal and many other professional cleaning jobs, call on the trained staff at "Pro-Clean". Professional Commercial Cleaning, Inc. Pro-Clean stresses quality in all their work. For more information, call owner Debe Vandenberg at 699-5565.

Pro-Clean for quality job

Paid Advertisement

For the finest in construction site cleaning, debris removal of any kind, dirt removal, hauling, leveling small buildings and cleaning lots, check with "Pro-Clean" Professional Commercial Cleaning, Inc. They can do it all!

Pro-Clean handles all types of commercial or residential cleaning jobs, with a thorough, professional approach. The staff is trained in every phase of clean-up operations and can prepare a building for occupancy after the final construction phase prior to move-in, or can prepare a site for construction. Whatever the job, Pro-Clean will do the job quickly and thoroughly.

Debe K. Vandenberg, owner, says, "Our motto, 'Quality of Service, Satisfaction of Customers', really sums up our attitude toward our customers. After all, they are the reason we stay in business."

Ms. Vandenberg says that although job-site cleaning is fast becoming Pro-Clean's specialty, another area of expertise is in the floor care division. Using specially trained employees, Pro-Clean cleans, seals and waxes any type of flooring, including marble, terrazzo, Mexican tile, brick pavers, wood floors and cement.

According to Ms. Vandenberg, Pro-Clean is no longer a janitorial service, but a top-quality, white-glove cleaning service. She says Pro-Clean is the Rolls-Royce of the professional cleaning industry in Midland.

Ms. Vandenberg was a secretary when she formed Pro-Clean as a result of observing the slap-dash, inadequate cleaning of the office where she worked. As she says, "That kind of performance is totally unacceptable to me. Mediocrity is something I cannot abide. I know I expect the best for my money, and so do my customers."

Employee training is stressed with Pro-Clean and an employee is throughly trained in all facets of their particular job before being placed on the job. Employees work both full and part-time, and Ms. Vandenberg is always happy to discuss employment opportunities with anyone who would enjoy the variety of work and good pay that Pro-Clean offers.

Even though job-site cleaning, hauling, debris removal and lot cleaning have grown to make up the bulk of Pro-Clean's work, Vandenberg still has crews available for commercial building cleaning and will be glad to talk to you about individually prepared contracts which are geared to the customer's particular needs.

Call Debe Vandenberg of "Pro-Clean" Professional Commercial Cleaning, Inc. for an estimate of your professional cleaning needs at 699-5565.

No, this isn't a scene from the latest high-tech horror film. Rather, it's the computer room at Comshare, Inc., an international computer software and services firm in Ann Arbor, Mich. Engineer Tim Armentrout operates in a crawl space beneath the false floor, tracking down cables attached to computers to make room for new machines the company is installing.

Crop failures spell ruin for migrants

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — Crop failures in the High Plains have spelled ruin not only for cotton and vegetable farmers, but for the thousands of migrant workers who journey here each year to make a living.

As the three-month migrant season draws to a close, government officials and private charitable organizations estimate 6,000 to 8,000 migrants don't have enough money to return to their homes.

The summer harvest earnings normally help migrants pay the winter's utility bills and get the children ready for the school year.

But this year, many migrants say they haven't been able to make enough to buy the gasoline to get back to their homes in the Rio Grande Valley.

"We are just praying to God that something comes up. We are just hoping there will be a week's work before we have to go back, so we can have enough money to go back," said Maria Palacios, who drove with her husband and six children from Laredo to Hereford for the vegetable harvest.

Heavy rains and hail in late June destroyed more than half of Texas' 3.9 million-acre cotton crop and devastated the onion and cucumber crops, leaving half of the migrants out of work or able to find field jobs for only a few hours a week.

Migrant families who normally earn from $2,000 to $6,000 over the summer say they are accustomed to a meager existence, but this year they have had to survive on food stamps.

The Palacios family spent $100 to get to Hereford, but has been able to find work for only a few days each week. They have earned $140 over the past three weeks, Ms. Palacios said.

The family pays $15 a week to live in a small apartment in Hereford. Most other families are staying in dilapidated frame structures in federal housing camps, such as the ones in Hereford, Dimmitt and Plainview. Parked nearby are the battered station wagons and pickups the migrants use for the 12-hour drive from the Valley.

Sulema Luera of Edinburg, who came to the High Plains two months ago from Edinburg with her husband and three children, said her family has been able to work only part time, earning about $125 a week in the onion fields.

After spending half a day clipping onions, she washes the family's clothes over a tub. Because work was "muy despacio" — very slow — she could not spare the coins to use a washing machine, she said.

Asked if her family had earned the $100 it will take to get home, she laughed and asked, "From where?"

Cotton farmer Louis Pyle said he couldn't have warned migrant workers even if he wanted to.

"I don't hire the same bunch every year, so I didn't think about trying to contact them. They didn't contact us, they just moved up here. Now some of them are trying to hold us responsible," Pyle said.

"There is a bunch of them that are saying, 'You have to help us get home.' We felt like they would have known (about the cotton crop). It is terrible. I know it is tough on them," he added, saying he had hired only five workers this year, instead of the 30 he has employed most years.

Victoria Perez, who with her husband, Ausencio, and their seven children migrated first to New Mexico and then to Hereford in search of work, said the family had heard about the crop damage, but didn't believe it could be this bad.

Cleo Whittle, a Floydada cotton farmer, said still more workers will be out of work during the cotton-ginning season, which usually begins in September. His gin probably will not even open this year, he said, since there is almost nothing to process.

U.S. searches for end to Palestinian problem

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — The imminent departure of the PLO guerrillas from west Beirut — a triumph of U.S. diplomacy — still leaves the Reagan administration with an infinitely more formidable task: finding a long-term solution to the Palestinian problem.

Having taken on the burden of restoring peace to the Lebanese capital, the United States now will play a key role in negotiating the removal of all foreign forces, including those of Israel, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, from the rest of the country.

Once reluctant to intervene directly in the Arab-Israeli conflict, the Reagan administration is being driven by events and its mediation efforts in Lebanon to grapple with the two principal issues in the Middle East: the future of the Palestinians and Israel's uncertain niche in the Arab world.

The obstacles in the path of U.S. diplomacy range from a virtually dormant Camp David peace process to Israel's tightening grip on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

The PLO exodus may help. It removes the threat of terrorism from the Galilee and gives Israel more security and confidence.

"THIS MAJOR DECREASE in the immediate threat to Israel's security also means there is a new opportunity," an official observed last week as U.S. mediator Phlip C. Habib's evacuation plan began to jell.

That's the optimistic side.

Israel is stronger, and the reconstruction of Lebanon as a potential peacemaker can begin.

But the fundamental obstacles are untouched by the PLO dispersal.

Even if Israel were emboldened to strike a deal on the Palestinians' future, the other players are not showing much interest.

Egypt seems to be escalating its demands for a Palestinian homeland as President Hosni Mubarak leads his country back into the Arab camp.

Jordan, once Israel's most logical negotiating partner, has opted out of the Palestinian dilemma.

And except for sending uncertain signals about a willingness to accept Israel, leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization are counting on world public opinion — instead of some initiative of their own — to provide a Palestinian homeland.

IN THE MEANTIME, the experiment in self-rule, offered to the Palestinians in the 1978 Camp David agreement, remains untested while Israel proceeds with its own plans for the troubled West Bank.

Group's display of Disneyana — just Mickey Mouse stuff

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — One might say it was a real Mickey Mouse group, exhibiting some truly Mickey Mouse stuff. But the participants say the Mickey Mouse convention just shows how the ageless rodent has weaseled his way into the American vernacular.

The convention is the first held by the Mouse Group, an organization dedicated to collecting and documenting Mickey Mouse and Disney character memorabilia — watches, figurines, posters, wind-up toys, linens, clocks, stuffed animals, original films and more.

They call this melange of collectible stuff Disneyana.

The three-day convention ending today is the world's largest and most elaborate display of Disneyana, said Ed Levin, who owns a memorabilia shop in Sherman Oaks and began the group three years ago.

The event, at a hotel just a squeak away from Disneyland, was open only to the 200 to 300 members of the Mouse Group, attracting Disneyana buffs from about 15 states, and foreign countries such as France and Japan, Levin said Thursday.

"It's fascinating that one of the first words kids learn in any country is Mickey Mouse," Levin said. "He's international."

However, the Mouse Group does not have official sanction from the Disney organization.

Due to the lack of copyright, the group's logo depicts a mouse with a paper bag over its head and body, and two slightly familiar feet protruding.

But Disney Studios does cooperate with the group's members, Levin said. The convention featured a tour of Disney facilities and after-hours perusal of its archives. Highlights included talks and films offered by animators involved in the creation of Mickey and Co. including Ward Kimble, one of the "nine old men" credited with the early Disney animation projects.

Disney himself created Mickey in 1927 on a train from New York to Los Angeles, but the mouse, originally named Mortimer, wasn't officially "born" until his debut in "Steamboat Willie" at a New York theater on Oct. 28, 1928.

The "nine old men," as Disney dubbed them, came to the studio in the 1930s, some with degrees in architecture and art, all unable to find jobs because of the Depression. Over the years, Disney recruited hundreds of young cartoonists, most of whom eventually left the studio. But the nine remained for decades, and most did not leave the studio until after Disney's death in 1966.

The convention includes scheduled silent and standard auctions, table displays, a Disneyland tour, and lectures on the evolution of Mickey, Minnie, Goofy and other characters.

"We're not in it for the profit. It's a labor of love. If you don't love this stuff, forget it," Levin said. "If you don't know what you're doing, stay away from this. It's for people knowledgeable of Disneyana."

Levin closed the event to the public. Those attending, he said, were serious collectors.

"If I had wanted to make a profit, I'd have opened the thing to the public," he said. "We could have had thousands of people here."

Casino, amusement park, Caribbean island for sale at billionaires' flea market

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Recession-weary tycoons came from all over North America looking for a deal, and they may have found what they were looking for in Brian Lovig's billion-dollar flea market.

A casino, an amusement park and a Caribbean island were among the items for sale or trade at the high-stakes swap meet on Thursday. And Lovig, a fast-talking former auctioneer and Canadian real estate magnate, offered up his own Lear jet.

"I've accomplished more here in two hours than I have in the last two months," Lovig said during his two-day "Sales and Trade Purchase International" at the MGM Grand Hotel. "I've traded my Lear jet for some real estate, and I've got a couple of other deals I'm working on."

However, Lovig said he was disappointed in the turnout — about 75 people, compared with the 500 he had expected.

But there was general agreement that Lovig had the right idea at the right time: a buyers' and sellers' free-for-all amid a recession.

"In a recession it's tough to do business," said Roy Wilson, who came with what he figured to be $1 billion in property to sell.

Wilson, president of Carma, Ltd., of Calgary, Alberta, was sitting in a booth surrounded by portfolios describing the property his company had for sale or trade — apartment buildings, hotels, a health club and residential subdivisions.

For a $5,000 admission fee, delegates not only met others with something to buy or sell, but also were treated to speeches by economist Arthur Laffer and syndicated columnist Joseph Kraft and entertainment by Bob Hope.

Lovig, 32, said he arranged the gathering out of frustration for traditional ways of doing business. "I was having extreme difficulty finding qualified buyers," he said. "The times are bad."

Bringing together other entrepreneurs for some intense wheeling and dealing seemed like a natural way to speed up the process, he said.

"They represent a lot of money and corporate power," he said. "One guy's got $10 million worth of property in his briefcase."

Although few deals actually were consummated on the first day, most of the delegates said they got and made more than one offer each.

An exception was Rick Courtney of St. Paul, Minn., vice president of Anga Enterprises Inc. He was trying to sell a manufacturing company and an airplane repair service, but he said most delegates appeared interested in real estate.

"It would have been thrilling if 15 people had come over and made offers," said Courtney, sitting alone in his booth surrounded by a bustle of activity. "Because none have, I think it would be pretty difficult to say that I'm optimistic and overjoyed."

But Los Angeles real estate broker Tom Thompson, hoping to sell a 420-acre Caribbean island for $2.9 million, called the swap mart "a great idea."

Thompson blamed the low attendance on people who were interested but timid about trying something new. "In (future) years," he said, "I think it's really going to grow."

NORTHGATE $75,200

$673.30 Per Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.
