Midland-Iran 'arms deal' revealed

A Midland landman who said he stood to gain $7.5 million on an arms sale to Iran acknowledged he acted only as an independent go-between for arms dealers in Houston and Portugal.

Jim Tom Harris, 50, 3321 Neely Ave., told the Reporter-Telegram in an exclusive interview Friday night that FBI investigators have not contacted him concerning the matter.

However, a United Press International story Friday morning said the FBI was investigating a British arms broker and Harris' thwarted plan to ship more than 8,000 antitank missiles — worth $52 million — to the military staging area at a Tehran, Iran, airport.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter declined to comment on the FBI investigation Friday. The UPI story said Painter initially investigated the arms sale and turned the matter over to the FBI, which began its own "classified secret investigation."

The arms sale is in no way related to the current "arms to Iran" crisis currently under investigation by the U.S. Justice Department, Harris said.

"I never heard the name Oliver North or anything about Swiss bank accounts," Harris said.

Harris told the Reporter-Telegram the story began on Jan. 21 while he was in Geneva, Switzerland, working on an oil deal.

"I met Rui Guilherme of the Hallett and Guilherme Ltd. company in Lisbon, Portugal."

Harris said Hallett and Guilherme Ltd. was a small importer of Toto Oil products and "maybe exports a little Portuguese wine."

Rumor had it, Harris said, that an arms sale Guilherme had been arranging had gone bust. Guilherme asked Harris if he could "find any TOW antitank missiles," Harris said.

Harris said it just so happened he had a longtime friend in Houston who was an associate of British businessman, Dr. Ian Smalley, who lived in Houston and owned Red Rock Investments, a company that Harris said was allegedly involved in arms sales.

Smalley was tried and acquitted in 1983 on charges of "trying to sell millions of dollars worth of weapons to Iran and Iraq," the UPI story said.

"I would have made a ton on the finder's fee alone," Harris said of the $2.5 million share he stood to gain had the deal gone through.

"I called this guy (Harris' friend in Houston) and said, 'Can you get some TOWs?', and about two hours later, he called back and said, 'Yes,'" Harris told the Reporter-Telegram.

Harris said the arms that Smalley's associate said he could get for Guilherme were "surplus that Israel had bought...evidently they were these TOW missiles...old ones...BGM71s..."

A telephone conversation cementing initial plans of the arms sale went as scheduled on Jan. 21, Harris said.

"Rui and I flew to Lisbon (from Geneva) and Smalley and he talked on the telephone," Harris told the Reporter-Telegram.

Smalley requested a telex to confirm the telephone conversation in which Smalley had agreed to sell Guilherme 8,300 TOW missiles at $6,500 each, Harris said.

Firefighters hose down a TU-134 jet of the Soviet airliner Aeroflot which crashed Friday in heavy fog while approaching East Berlin's Schoenefeld Airport, killing most of the 81 people aboard. A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in East Berlin said there were no Americans aboard the plane.

Soviet jet crashes, killing most aboard

BERLIN (AP) — A Soviet Aeroflot jetliner crashed in heavy fog while approaching East Berlin's Schoenefeld airport Friday evening, killing most of the 81 people aboard.

The official news agency ADN said 12 survivors were pulled from the wreckage. Earlier the news agency had said there were 17 survivors, but it did not explain the discrepancy.

It said the exact number of victims "was not yet possible to determine."

Most of the people aboard were killed and the identification of the victims was "exceptionally" difficult because the bodies were burned, the news agency said.

ADN said most of the victims were East Germans. The plane was arriving from Minsk, the capital of Soviet Byelorussia about 600 miles to the east.

The news agency said the plane carried 73 passengers and a crew of eight. Initially, it reported that nine crewmembers had been aboard the plane.

There were no Americans aboard the Soviet Tupolev-134 jet, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in East Berlin told The Associated Press by telephone. East German authorities released no immediate information on the passengers' nationalities.

AP photographer Elke Bruhn-Hoffmann drove to within a half-mile of the crash site before being stopped by police. She said the plane appeared to have crashed in a wooded area just beyond East Berlin's city limits about two miles from Schoenefeld.

Ms. Bruhn-Hoffmann said local residents told her the crash occurred at about 5:30 p.m., after nightfall, in heavy fog.

Hundreds of East German police were deployed to restrict access to the crash site to official rescue vehicles arriving from downtown East Berlin, Ms. Bruhn-Hoffmann said.

East German television news said eight survivors were brought to East Berlin's Koepenick Hospital and that two were in critical condition.

The television reports showed the jetliner in pieces, with firemen hosing down smoldering wreckage. A report by the Soviet news agency Tass referred to "flaming debris."

Pieces of the airplane also were scattered among nearby trees.

ADN said a special commission under the leadership of Transport Minister Otto Arndt has been set up to investigate the crash.

West Berlin authorities said they were awaiting official information on the crash.

The Tu-134 is a small passenger jet, similar in size to the Boeing 737. It can carry about 90 passengers.

Most OPEC members agree to cut production by at least 5 percent

GENEVA (AP) — Most OPEC members agreed in principle Friday to cut the cartel's oil production at least 5 percent in hopes of boosting oil prices to $18 a barrel from the current range of $13 to $16, two senior delegates said.

No final accord was reached, however, and the cartel leaders were scheduled to open a third day of talks today, officials said.

Fernando Santos Alvite, the deputy Ecuadoran oil minister, told reporters that Saudi Arabia and some other delegations were consulting with their governments overnight on the proposed production cut, which he said would take effect Jan. 1 if approved.

Libyan Oil Minister Fawzi Shakshuki said that most of OPEC's 13 member countries, including his own, had accepted the proposal.

"This will be confirmed tomorrow," he said without elaborating.

Santos said Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest oil producer, and Kuwait were among the members that withheld immediate support for the proposed cut from OPEC's current output of about 17 million barrels a day.

The prospect of the production cut by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries triggered a sharp rise in prices of oil futures contracts traded on financial markets.

West Texas Intermediate, the main grade of U.S. crude oil, for delivery in January climbed 60 cents to $16.10 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after gaining 37 cents Thursday.

But some analysts said that even if OPEC cuts production by 5 percent to 10 percent as proposed, world oil prices would climb toward $18 a barrel only gradually because of continued ample supplies.

"This kind of proposal will help make sure oil prices will not go down, particularly in the first and second quarters next year," said Bruce Lazier, oil analyst for the investment firm Prescott, Ball & Turben in New York.

"But I see little prospect that this kind of a (production) cut will push up prices rapidly," Lazier said.

Suspended officer in fire

From Staff Reports

A suspended Odessa police officer was released from Medical Center Hospital Friday after fire and ambulance units were called to his home late Thursday.

According to Odessa Police Lt. Terry Lang, Officer Tony Calhoun was suspended recently, but he said his actions leading to the suspension were still under investigation.

An Odessa Fire Department dispatcher said she sent four units to Calhoun's mobile home near the intersection of 38th Street and Golder Avenue about 11 p.m. She described the fire as "major," but had no other information.

A nursing supervisor at Medical Center said Calhoun was transported by ambulance, and was admitted and released from treatment Friday. She said she did not know the nature of his injuries.

MC pre-registration lags behind last year

From Staff Reports

Hoping for better weather, Midland College registrar's office enters its second week of spring semester pre-registration Monday slightly behind last year's figures.

"We're down about a hundred students from the number at the same time last year and think several days of really bad weather conditions kept some people from coming out," said Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar.

There were 924 students signed up the first week, compared with 1,036 at the same time last year. Final enrollment is expected to be more than 3,000 for the spring term.

Pre-registration continues Monday through Friday before the college closes for the Christmas holidays.

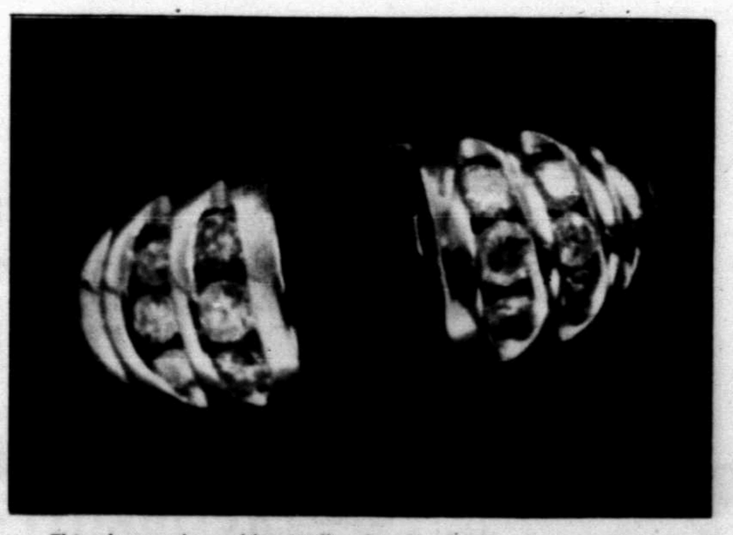

Hours are 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday. Midland College will re-open Monday, Jan. 5, for its final week of pre-registration.

Hours that week are scheduled for 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Registration is set for Jan. 13-14 and classes start Jan. 19.

Those planning to take credit courses this spring should visit the Student Services Office in the Administration Building.

Pre-registration provides students with a specific time permit for registration. Those who don't pre-register are not processed until the final hour of registration, when they may have fewer choices in classes or class times.

Bulletins listing courses offered during the spring semester are available at the college, the Midland County Library, all Midland banks, and the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

This photo released by Midland police Friday shows a ring exactly like the one worn by 24-year-old June Gilkerson of Midland when she disappeared Nov. 8. Police believe the woman's abductor may have sold or given away the ring, and are asking the public's help in locating it.

Police trying to find missing woman's ring

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland police are asking for the public's help to locate a ring worn by a 24-year-old Midland woman who disappeared five weeks ago.

Det. Capt. Billy Ray said late Friday the ring, worn by June Gilkerson when she was abducted Nov. 8, may have been sold or given to someone by her abductor.

The ring is described as a lady's 14-karat yellow gold dome ring. It has four baquette cut sapphires, and 12 round, channel set diamonds. The total weight of diamonds and sapphires is ¼ karat.

Ray said information about the ring would be distributed to area pawn shops.

"Information like this (about the ring) will be given to local pawn shops and dealers," Ray said, adding his hope that discovery of the ring may open up a new lead in the case. "I'm still optimistic that we are on the right track."

Ms. Gilkerson was reported missing Nov. 8, 12 hours after she left her residence for her office. Police found her car at the Best Western motel on Interstate 20, her car keys, purse, and shoes still inside.

Ray said the investigation has not slacked off.

"We are still going to talk to some people," Ray said. "I want people to know too that we have not stopped working on the case."

Wanted: Families who will 'open hearts to children'

By ED MORENO

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Like no other time of the year, the Christmas season means families getting together from far and near.

But as this holiday season opens, there are thousands and thousands of children in New Mexico and around the world who do not have permanent homes and are waiting to be adopted.

"We're always looking for families to open their hearts to children," said Donna Clauss, executive director of Rainbow House International, a private adoption agency in Albuquerque that specializes in foreign children.

The process of finding a home for an unwanted child can be as varied as the children who are looking for permanent parents. However, the spectrum of adoption agencies corresponds generally with three broad types of children needing permanent homes.

Many private agencies, like Chaparral Maternity and Adoption Services in Albuquerque, primarily help pregnant women who cannot or do not want to raise their babies find suitable adoptive parents.

Most of the prospective parents in that category are looking for an infant as much like them as possible, ethnically and physically.

But there are not many such infants available for adoption, said Chaparral supervisor Harriett Stambaugh.

"There are an awful lot of parents who want to adopt a newborn — I'd say seven or eight (couples) to one (baby)," said Ms. Stambaugh. Nationally, the ratio is four to five times as great.

AS A RESULT, parents usually must wait longer for a newborn. Ms. Stambaugh said Chaparral still is placing infants in homes that were approved in 1984.

A second type of adoption agency is Rainbow House, which helps adoptive parents find adoptable children of all ages in foreign countries.

The advantage for prospective parents is that there is a vast supply of children in the Third World. Most of Rainbow House's recent adoptions involve children from South Korea, India and Brazil.

Even though adoption laws in foreign countries can be more strict than those of the United States, the supply of adoptable children accelerates the adoption process.

"It's all done in strict compliance with the laws of the country," said Jeanne Elmhorst, cultural coordinator at Rainbow House. Yet, she said, no parents have had to wait more than a year for a child.

The third type of adoption agency is the traditional service of last resort — the state of New Mexico — which takes custody of children who have been abused or neglected and, if they cannot be returned to their original homes, makes them available for adoption.

Typically, children in state custody are older — some in their teens — of minority and mixed-ethnic backgrounds, and often physically or mentally handicapped. Consequently they are the hardest to place in adoptive homes, said state Social Services Director Corliss Thalley.

"It's very unlikely that the child doesn't have some problems," said Ms. Thalley.

There are other adoption agencies in New Mexico, most of them affiliated with an organized religion. Most are non-denominational, but some deal only with families within the religious community.

THE COMMON element with most agencies is the expressed priority given to the child's best interests. Every adoption procedure begins with extensive briefings, interviews and home studies of the adoptive parents. In cases where a child is voluntarily made available for adoption by its "birth mother," the mother's desires for placement are given considerable weight.

"We feel very strongly that it's their child and they are making a very loving decision to put their child's needs before their own," said Ms. Stambaugh.

Social workers and agencies try to match available children with adoptive parents using a host of objective and subjective criteria.

At Chaparral, a typical match takes into account ethnic background, whether the mother of the household works at home or at an outside job, education levels and other children in the home.

Finally, said Ms. Stambaugh, physical characteristics are matched between the baby and the adoptive parents, who often are biologically unable to have children.

Chaparral has a list of about 70 approved families waiting to adopt infants. The agency places 30 to 40 children a year and the cost is about $6,500, said Ms. Stambaugh.

The most important ingredient for parents wishing to adopt a foreign child or an older child through the state is an overwhelming love of children in general, and specifically of children with special needs.

"My husband and I absolutely adore kids and working with kids," said Mrs. Clauss.

She and her husband, David, have adopted five children from countries around the world, as have Mrs. Elmhorst and her husband, Tom.

RAINBOW House in 1985 placed about 80 foreign children with New Mexico families and probably will handle more adoptions this year. The cost of adopting a foreign child varies widely, but typically ranges from $5,000 to $6,000, said Mrs. Elmhorst.

Ms. Thalley said the process for adopting a child in state custody takes a long time and can be painful because there have to be problems in the child's life and fewer adoptive parents want to adopt older children or those with medical problems.

Before a child in state custody ever is freed for adoption, the child must either be voluntarily relinquished to the state by the birth parents or the state must legally terminate the parents' parental rights.

While the former can be a relatively simple process, the latter often comes after months or years of serious abuse or neglect, legally "reasonable" attempts to keep the child's original family together through counseling or treatment, and placement in one or more foster homes.

Ms. Thalley said the state's priority, "99 percent of the time," is keeping the child's original family together if possible.

"Typically, as long as it's safe and there's some (treatment) activity with the parents, it's OK to keep the child with foster parents," said Ms. Thalley. The problems occur if the child cannot go back home and the parents' rights are terminated.

"If the child is in a foster home for a long time, then the child is too old and not easily adoptable," she said.

BECAUSE state children often require extraordinary commitment on the adoptive parents' part, Ms. Thalley said the screening process also takes longer. But the extensive screening pays off, she said, because few adoptions fail.

The state has 168 children in its custody who are free for adoption, said state Adoption Director Regina Jimenez. The state also has screened and approved about 150 adoptive parents.

About 60 percent of the children are Hispanic, about 30 percent are Anglo, 5 percent are mixed Hispanic and Anglo and 5 percent are all other ethnic groups, including Indian, black and other ethnic mixtures.

"We really need black and Native American families (to adopt children) and Hispanic and Anglo families for children over 9 years old," said Ms. Jimenez.

San Antonio twins tune in to same career slot

By BARBIE ANN MARIE DUNN

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Scanning through the radio dial — static, music, then a velvety voice occupies the airways. Continuing on, an exact replica of the previous voice bellows on the "party line."

He can't be in two places at one time — or can he? He can if "he" is actually "we."

Fraternal twins Jammin' Michael J. from KSJL-AM and Danny B. from KTFM are both disc jockeys, that's true, but what makes them unique is that they are at competing stations in the same time slot in the same city.

The B. comes from the twins' last name, Bocanegra; the J. comes from Michael's first name. They are 22.

"We are twins down to the T," said Danny, who is six minutes older. "We like the same things, do the same things, even think the same things. We can get a thought pattern in our brain..."

"And finish each other's sentences," Michael offered.

"We stick together through thick and thin," Danny said. Born in Los Angeles and reared in Corpus Christi, the boys joined the Boy Scouts together, played in the junior high school band together, played right and left tackle at W.B. Ray High School in Corpus Christi, and even lived together until recently.

Michael Bocanegra, better known as Michael J. on San Antonio radio station KSJL, shares the dial with his twin brother, Danny B., who has the same time slot in the same city.

AP Laserphoto

"We dressed the same until sixth grade," Michael said, "but Danny always wanted to be different. He didn't even want to walk down the hall with me. He would always walk behind. I thought twins were cool."

Danny was the first to be bitten by the radio bug, at the age of 16.

"We were walking down Ocean Drive in Corpus and came to a radio station," he explained. "The DJ at the time was Robert Lopez, now at a local country station KJ97. After looking through the window..."

"Lopez gave us the hand sign to come in," Danny finished. "I was so intrigued with radio — the phones lighting up, playing good music and having a good time — that, every weekend, I would sneak into the station, hiding from the program director to get into a studio to practice."

Lopez critiqued and worked with Danny until he managed to get a job spinning country tunes on another station.

"It was all automated. The only live part was when I recorded the weather...I would torture myself for hours (with the music) just to wait for my voice to come on."

After "flip-flopping from station to station," Danny B. finally found a home in a full-time position at a Top-40 station in Corpus Christi.

"It was a start. But it wasn't what I had pictured; what I had perceived radio to be. I said, 'There's got to be more,' " he remembered.

"But, as every station had a bad moment, the PD (program director) comes in while I'm on the air and replaces all the carts with oldies carts — Perry Como, Frank Sinatra," he said, rolling his eyes. "The phones weren't ringing; I wasn't satisfied."

After a couple more stints at various stations, Danny got "the call." KSJL, at that time brand new, wanted the 19-year-old voice to join the AM crew in San Antonio, the 37th largest radio market.

Meanwhile, Michael was setting up portable DJ equipment in his room and practicing to be like his brother.

"I would listen to the other DJs, write down what they said and say it through the mike real loud. We're twin brothers. Have the same voices; I knew I could do it."

While Michael was working at KEXX-FM in Corpus Christi, Danny called his brother about an opening in late-night at KSJL in San Antonio.

"I would make tapes: 'This is KSJL — the Quiet Storm,' and play them over the phone. Danny would say, 'Softer, softer,' " Michael recalled.

Soon, Michael followed his brother's footsteps to KSJL on a part-time basis.

"I couldn't go full-time because Danny was on the air. Two voices on the same station just wouldn't work."

But then a dispute sent Danny to KTFM and Michael moved into his empty 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. shift.

"It was a big decision. Danny and I are family," Michael said. "But I guess it was about time to show Danny. We're siblings and we're always competing, but it was hard to see my brother out of work," he said, referring to the six months Danny had to sit out because he was still under contract to KSJL.

"Thanks to Bill Thorman who stuck with me for a half a year and kept his word. There are a lot of people trying to get into KTFM, it's the number one station, but he had confidence in me," Danny said.

Michael said, "I monitor Danny's show. I'll pop over to Danny and if he does a bad bit, I'll do it better."

"I don't monitor him," Danny said. "I don't want to depress myself."

The brothers laugh in stereo.

"Whether it's on the AM or the FM, he's at a different frequency across the street in the same city. It gives a feeling of success for both of us."

The twins meet once a week to critique and help each other out without divulging station trade secrets.

"I want to make sure he keeps learning," Danny said with a big smile.

"It's incentive," Michael said of the competition. "That kind of motivation keeps you on your toes. It's not just me and Danny competing, it's me and Danny competing against every other jock in town."

Reagan vows not let crisis hurt him

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan vowed Friday not to let the Iran arms crisis cripple his administration, as the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee angrily accused Reagan's former national security aides of "deserting the country" by refusing to testify about the affair.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan, went on the offensive in a variety of forums, strongly urging the former White House aides to divulge all they know so the Reagan administration won't be paralyzed for months to come.

The White House confirmed, meanwhile, that Reagan met privately last week with two prominent elder statesmen that former aide Michael K. Deaver is said to have recruited in a campaign for the ouster of White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Deaver arranged the meeting in the White House family quarters Dec. 4 between Reagan and his wife, Nancy, and former Democratic National Committee chairman Robert S. Strauss and former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, to discuss the crisis.

Reagan reiterated Friday that "no doubt mistakes were made" in carrying out his decision to secretly sell arms to Iran, and said he would not be satisfied "until all the facts are before the American people."

But, discussing his forthcoming domestic initiatives with a group of newly elected state legislators at the White House, Reagan declared: "We cannot, and we will not, let this stop us from getting on with the business of governing."

It was the refusal to testify by a third White House national security aide, Marine Lt. Col. Robert Earl, that prompted Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., Intelligence Committee chairman, to charge that the three military men, praised as "national heroes" by their supporters, weren't heroes in his book.

"If they're such heroes, then why are they deserting the country when put to the true test?" Durenberger asked.

"Somebody is going to have to define what a national hero is," he added. "A national hero doesn't come in here and stiff the whole country."

Earl refused to testify under the Sixth Amendment, guaranteeing right to legal counsel.

Durenberger made clear that he did not think Earl's and former national security adviser, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter's, and Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's refusal to testify was any reflection on Reagan's pledge to cooperate fully in any investigations. "I think this is a personal decision on the part of an admiral and two Marine officers," he said.

Durenberger said Earl claimed that his one-week notice to testify was insufficient, but "I don't buy it...We've had plenty of witnesses who've had less than a full week to prepare."

The Senate panel also was unsuccessful in efforts to question another witness, Howard Teicher, senior director of the National Security Council for political-military affairs, who claimed he needed more time to find a private attorney. Teicher's testimony was delayed until Tuesday.

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell said in Miami he opposes granting immunity to major figures.

"That would be the worst thing we could do because ultimately the truth will be obtained," said Fascell, a Democrat. "Right now, we are in a preliminary look and if the laws have been violated, you can't prejudice the case (by granting immunity from prosecution)."

The House Armed Services' arms control subcommittee met in closed-door session Friday afternoon to hear Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, discuss administration arms control proposals.

Crowe refused all comment on the Iran-Contra controversy as he emerged from the 90-minute meeting.

In other developments:

— The Swiss government, which last week froze a Credit Suisse account used for Iranian arms payments, has unfrozen the account, which is in North's name, because they had not received required information from the U.S. government, CBS News reported Friday.

— The two key Middle East middlemen in the arms deal, Saudi billionaire Adnan Khashoggi and Iranian representative Manucher Ghorbanifar, said on ABC-TV's "20-20" program that North apparently controlled Swiss bank accounts through which up to $35 million was deposited in the secret Iran weapons transactions that he coordinated.

— Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a potential contender for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988, said in an NBC interview he didn't see why it should take six months to "tell a very simple story." Gephardt said Reagan "has the responsibility to lead and to tell the people the truth and let the chips fall where they may."

— Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., accused the White House of violating the Arms Export Control Act, which requires notifying Congress of any arms shipments valued at more than $14 million. Simon said the replacement cost of the arms shipped to Iran totaled $80.3 million rather than the $12 million figure used by the White House.

— Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said recent testimony indicates the Reagan administration has lost control to "a privatized foreign policy, one in which Asian potentates, Arab arms dealers, Canadian investors and soldiers of fortune of many nationalities are responsible for implementing key aspects of American national security policy."

— In New York, court hearings for 13 people accused of trying to smuggle American-made weapons to Iran were delayed.

— Sources with ties to the Iranian government told The Associated Press that Iran is pressing the United States to turn over nearly $300 million worth of weaponry purchased during the shah's rule but impounded by then-President Jimmy Carter in 1980.

— Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., traveling in the Middle East, said America has "embarrassed" two of its closest allies in the region by its secret arms dealings with Iran.

— A former leader of the Nicaraguan Contras said North recruited him in 1982. "I need to see him closer to really make that confirmation," said Edgar Chamorro, a former member of the directorate of the Contras' Nicaraguan Democratic Force fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government.

Despite the urgings of Deaver and other leading outside advisers, sources said, Reagan has been noncommital when urged to dismiss his chief of staff and may be "digging in," determined to keep his closest aide.

ARMS

The telex from Guilherme read, in part, "We confirm telecom of today and request you to quote us in firm the above material (sic), 8300 units at USD (U.S. dollars) 6500...all procedures on this deal will follow as advised."

Smalley sent a return telex shortly after receiving Guilherme's that read, "We confirm that we have 8300 units...we should be pleased to show you our authorization to sell these units issued by the U.S. government-...following that we confirm that we shall require a deposit...the final stage will be for you to issue a letter of credit in our favor for the full amount...payment under the credit shall be upon presentation of an inspection certificate signed by the customers...immediately after delivery...in their country...all units were manufactured in the USA..."

Harris said Smalley demanded a deposit of $250,000 before he would do further work on the arms sale.

A problem arose, Harris said, when Guilherme said his company could not come up with the $250,000.

Harris said he volunteered to find a financier to put up the deposit. Guilherme promised Harris an additional $5 million in return.

"I came home the first or second of February to find the money. I made some inquiries and found an interest in Amarillo," Harris said, who agreed to put up the $250,000 deposit.

Meanwhile, Guilherme sent a $52 million letter of credit from Industries of National Defense of Portugal (INDEP) — a huge Portuguese arms and weapons dealer — to Smalley, Harris said. INDEP, he said, planned to purchase the arms from Guilherme and sell them to Iran.

Acting as an agent for Guilherme, Harris said he went to Houston on Feb. 3 and "met Smalley for the first time." Harris told the Reporter-Telegram he was going to Houston to finalize plans and sign necessary documents.

All systems were go.

A telex dated Jan. 27 from Smalley to Guilherme had stated, "There will be six deliveries each of 1340 units transported in a B747 cargo aircraft...Red Rock and their supplier government will be solely responsible for delivery...Red Rock will require that the purchaser issues necessary guarantees for the security of the aircrew and aircraft in their country..."

The arms deal began to unravel at the seams, however, when the Amarillo investor learned Smalley was not "an authorized dealer."

"He dropped it. I got scared and I dropped it," Harris told the Reporter-Telegram.

Though Harris said he gave the matter no further thought, he suspected it was the Amarillo businessman who reported details of the aborted sale to Sheriff Painter.

Harris said no one, including the FBI, has attempted to question him.

Efforts to reach Smalley in Houston were unsuccessful.

"I do not have an export company in Lisbon. I have never worked for anybody in Portugal. I have never done business with Smalley — previous, present or past," Harris said, refuting the UPI story that stated Harris owned an export company in Portugal.

Harris, reared in Roswell, N.M., moved to Midland in 1980. He is married and has five grown children.

A successful independent landman during the boom, he said, "I haven't made a nickel in two years."

And plans for a new job that would have begun in January may now be in jeopardy in light of these revelations, he said.

Though he said he sincerely believes he has nothing to hide and is innocent of any wrongdoing, he admitted greed may have played a part in his involvement in the deal.

"I guess I just made too much money in 1981."

OPEC

Sources in Geneva, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said Iraq probably would be excluded from the production cuts. Iraq is not part of OPEC's current production-quota agreement because of irreconcilable differences with its war enemy, Iran.

The current $13-$16 price range for a 42-gallon barrel of oil sold in the open market is about half its year-ago level, and a huge oil glut could push prices lower unless OPEC cuts supplies, economists believe.

OPEC's current system of production limits, which succeeded in boosting oil prices from summertime lows of below $10 a barrel, is due to expire Dec. 31.

Iran, Libya and some other delegations have said they favor a 5 percent cut in the current level of production, to be shared equally among the 13 members. Others, however, have expressed doubt that cuts are needed to boost oil prices, sources said.

Saudi Arabia had not yet made it clear whether it is willing to reduce its own production as part of an OPEC-wide cut, according to sources.

Saudi King Fahd had said in the closing stages of OPEC's last meeting in October that his kingdom could not be expected to cut production. Shortly afterward, he fired the longtime Saudi oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, in a move widely seen as an attempt to accomodate Iran's desire for a quick rise in oil prices.

Iran has strongly advocated a lower level of OPEC production as a means of sharply increasing prices. The Iranian oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, said Thursday that raising prices to $18 should be only a first step toward restoring the $28-a-barrel price that prevailed a year ago.

Yamani had favored a gradual price rise, arguing that OPEC should no longer bear the burden of production cuts that have weakened its hand in the oil markets.

Fahd has not said whether he would consider reversing his stance against Saudi production cuts, but economists say OPEC would stand little chance of boosting prices to $18 without a cut in Saudi output.

The new Saudi oil minister, Hisham Nazer, has refused to discuss Saudi or OPEC oil policy in public since his arrival in Geneva on Tuesday. Published reports said he also had urged the other OPEC oil ministers not to talk with reporters until the meeting ended.

RING

Ray said police believe the woman was abducted shortly after she left her west Midland home between 9:15 a.m. and 9:30 p.m. Nov. 8. She told her husband she was going to the Midland Restitution Center on South Belmont Street, where she was a part-time worker, but employees there said she never arrived.

Ray said the woman probably encountered trouble before she reached the motel.

"I do not believe she was abducted from the Best Western," he said.

Police said the tires on the woman's car were muddied, and there were burrs in the sidewalls. Early in the case, investigators said the entire route from the woman's home on Delmar Drive to the Restitution Center was paved.

Ray said tests were still being run on the car, but he would not elaborate.

This week, a Midland grand jury heard several hours of testimony about the case, and among those testifying was a 40-year-old man police have said is a suspect.

Anyone with any information on the ring is asked to contact the Midland Police Department Detective Division, 683-4281.

High school junior's business keeps patrons rocking

AP Laserphoto

Pace McDonald IV prepares to load his equipment on the way to a stint as a disc jockey in Gilmer recently.

By RICK RIGGINS

PALESTINE (AP) — When Pace McDonald IV goes cruising on Friday nights, his 1982 Ford van rolls off the strip, out of town and down the highway to towns all over East and Central Texas.

For this Palestine High School junior, there is a definite purpose.

When McDonald reaches his destination, it is not unusual for him to be greeted by 400 screaming and yelling high school students, and he says he soon begins screaming and yelling right along with them.

McDonald is a disc jockey whose services are scouted by dance organizers for miles around.

He said he enjoys the work, especially when the crowd is responsive.

"Some nights it just clicks and you know it's right," McDonald said. "The people hit the dance floor and you play a song and then another one that is a little faster. You peak the dance by getting it to its highest level and then you play a slow song, and they just say, 'Whew.'"

"You build the excitement level," McDonald said. "That's the real trick to deejaying dances. People say it's simple and basically it is, but you have to know your music and your crowd.

"You play the best, the most popular, the hottest song right before a slow song," he said.

McDonald said he carries more than 200 records to a dance. His inventory consists of Top 40 hits off the pop and soul charts. He said he also buys country music "because there's always times when you need it."

It all began the summer between the eighth and ninth grades for McDonald, when he met a teacher in Chandler named Dick Stafford. At that time Stafford wes deejaying dances under the business title of STARZ, but this January McDonald bought the equipment from Stafford and kept the name STARZ.

"He asked me to go with him to a dance to help unload equipment and from then on I was his assistant and helped him with every dance," McDonald said. "I owe it all to him."

Stafford is now a drama teacher at Palestine High.

"I had enough money to buy the equipment, but I had to get a loan from First National Bank for the van," he said. "I paid the van off last week."

McDonald's sound system includes an array of speakers, turntables, strobes and spotlights. Combined with his music, special effects and talents at the microphone, he puts on a show that has earned him a busy schedule from the first football dance in September to the last prom in May.

Besides high school dances, McDonald has deejayed for junior highs, business parties, Christmas dances and reunions.

McDonald keeps up with his business by sending mailouts to prospective clients at key points of the year. As he receives calls back, he arranges his schedule.

Sometimes a job is set up no more than a week ahead, but often a dance is set up months ahead of time.

"Most times it's a verbal agreement," McDonald said. "If a client wants a contract, I'll send him one."

"A client will usually call several DJs and get bids from them," he said. "I set my price lower than the Dallas DJs to be more competitive."

McDonald said his charge is flexible according to the resources of the client.

Part of being a DJ is entertaining the crowd. You get excited and the adrenalin gets pumping, he said.

"You can't be a dull person and stand up there and entertain 400 screaming and yelling high school students," he said. "You have to scream and yell right along with them."

McDonald said the most extravagant dance he does each year is at Nacogdoches High School, where he hires someone to display music videos on a 10-by-10 foot screen while the people dance.

Israeli says U.S. government OK'd deal

JERUSALEM (AP) — David Kimche, a central Israeli figure in the shipment of American arms to Iran, broke his silence Friday and said the secret operation was fully coordinated with the highest levels of the U.S. government.

A second Israeli involved in the controversial arms deal, businessman Yaacov Nimrodi, said 500 U.S.-made TOW anti-tank missiles were sent to Iran in payment for the release of Presbyterian minister Benjamin Weir in September 1985.

Kimche, then Foreign Ministry director-general, and Nimrodi spoke on Israel television in the most extensive public comment so far by people involved in the transaction.

Published accounts have portrayed Israel as the middleman in the secret delivery of a half dozen shipments of U.S. weapons to Iran, which are said to have begun in August 1985. Kimche has emerged as Israel's liaison with Robert McFarlane, the former national security adviser, from July to December 1985.

Asked if the arms shipments during that period had top-level U.S. approval, Kimche replied: "Yes, definitely."

"It was for that reason that I was sent to the United States, to clarify this subject and find out whether, and how much, the Americans at the highest level wanted to carry out this operation. And if they said 'no,' we would have said, 'OK,'" Kimche said.

He did not specifically mention the names of American officials. President Reagan has said he approved the deal only in January 1986. Kimche's trip reportedly was six months earlier.

"The smallest thing that we did, at least as long as I dealt with this subject, was in full coordination with the Americans, and they knew every tiny detail of what we did," Kimche said.

Asked if he was told U.S. officials would deny involvement if the arms shipments became known, he replied: "I'd prefer not to answer that question."

Kimche said he was brought into the operation in July 1985, several months after the United States sent a representative to Israel "to ask for our assistance on the Iran affair."

He did not name the American representative, but other reports identified him as Michael Ledeen, a former U.S. National Security Council consultant.

Kimche said both Israel and the United States wanted to make contact with pro-Western factions in Tehran who believed the Soviet Union was Iran's greatest threat. He said shipping weapons was "like a calling card, a kind of demonstration that we had the ability to get things done."

But Kimche said the Iranians proved unreliable.

"We did not get all the hostages, and that's a shame. But we did receive one, and it was highly likely that we would have gotten the rest if certain things had not happened, which I will not talk about," he said.

He may have been referring to reports that Iran was sent a consignment of obsolete Hawk anti-aircraft missiles instead of the later model it had ordered.

Nimrodi, who was interviewed separately, said the Israelis "built a bridge between Americans and Iranians. Also, we succeeded in releasing the priest (Weir) for 500 TOW" missiles.

Nimrodi, a former military attache in Tehran before the 1979 Islamic revolution, was critical of the way the operation was handled after he left it. Shimon Peres, then prime minister, appointed counterterrorism adviser Amiram Nir to head the operation, government officials have told The Associated Press.

"We did it quietly, almost without the Americans. We did the work for them," Nimrodi said of the period during which he was involved.

After he left, he said, "it appears they started doing it on an American scale — planes, helicopters and who

Jet makes emergency landing at Labrador

GOOSE BAY, Labrador (AP) — A jumbo jet with 343 people aboard made an emergency landing here Friday because of a problem that may have been caused by a cargo hatch springing open, a Transport Canada spokesman reported.

Five people suffered bruises or sprains when the passengers left the plane through emergency chutes, said Bruce Reid of the government transportation agency.

Reid said Trans World Airlines Flight 741, a Boeing 747 carrying 328 passengers and 15 crew from Frankfurt, West Germany, to New York, diverted to Labrador after a cockpit light indicated a possible fire in the hold.

He said the pilot turned on the sprinkler system, but the light remained on.

Preliminary investigation indicated there was no fire and "it looks like it might have been a service access hatch in the belly of the aircraft that came loose or open in flight," Reid said.

Passengers from the jumbo jet were taken to British Royal Air Force quarters at Canada's Goose Bay armed forces station.

Shultz: Arms deal facts should 'be on table'

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that Reagan administration officials should "get things out as rapidly as possible" about secret U.S. arms shipments to Iran and diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels.

Shultz told a news conference in winding up a two-day meeting with NATO foreign ministers that he had not found it necessary to rebuild the ministers' confidence in the United States and its handling of foreign policy.

But he said the facts of the weapons purchase and the secret fund should be "set out on the table" for the American public and all the world to see.

The secretary said President Reagan wants full disclosure, and compliance with his wishes would facilitate the conduct of U.S. foreign policy, including the pursuit of agreements with the Soviet Union to reduce nuclear weapons.

"We have a very complicated and difficult task of governing to do, as always, both domestically and internationally," Shultz said. "Let's get at it, and that's the strategy."

He noted that Reagan dismissed Adm. John M. Poindexter as his national security adviser and made other changes. "Basically, the president has said let us handle this by being open and prosecuting when necessary," Shultz said.

Poindexter and Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, a deputy who was also ousted, declined to testify before the Senate Intelligence Committee and House Foreign Affairs Committee, invoking their constitutional protection against self-incrimination.

Shultz said under American law people have the right not to testify against themselves. "That's their decision," he said.

But he added that "I agree very much with the president's strategy and desire to see the facts of the matter set out on the table."

En route to Europe at the beginning of the week, Shultz said Poindexter and Casey had told him in May that the arms shipments had stopped.

CIA spokesmen in Washington have said director William Casey could not recall the conversation.

"I don't claim to remember everything I say, and I don't suppose everyone else does," Shultz responded at the news conference.

On his flight home Friday night, Shultz refused to be drawn out further about the Iran controversy. But, he said, "I stand by everything I said."

Lord Carrington, NATO secretary-general, said at a separate news conference he had found Shultz's description of the Iran-Contra affair in a private report to the foreign ministers "very encouraging."

Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's foreign secretary, observed that democracies "run into periods of turbulence" from time to time.

"What emerges quite clearly," he said, "is that the alliance wwith the leading role being played, as always, by the United States, remains firmly in business, trying to make headway on the arms control agenda."

A final communique by the NATO ministers made no mention of Reagan's proposal to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at their Iceland summit last October for elimination of all U.S. and Soviet ballistic nuclear missiles.

The communique, however, endorsed the pursuit of a 50 percent reduction in U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear bombers, submarines and missiles by 1991 and elimination of intermediate-range missiles in Europe immediately.

After Reykjavik, some allies expressed concern that their defense might be weakened if all ballistic missiles were dismantled.

Shultz said he supported Reagan's proposed ban but suggested a small missile force be retained while the United States works on an anti-missile defense.

Delegates walk out of session

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The United States asked the Helsinki review conference to pay tribute Friday to the late Soviet dissident Anatoly Marchenko, prompting the Soviet and Bulgarian delegations to walk out, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The two delegations left the closed plenary meeting of the 35-nation conference after chief U.S. delegate Warren Zimmermann asked for a minute of silence for Marchenko, U.S. Embassy spokesman John Williams said.

The 48-year-old Marchenko, who has spent more than 20 years in prison and internal exile, died in a Soviet prison, but it is not known when he died.

Williams said the Soviet and Bulgarian delegations left the session for 25 minutes after Zimmerman asked for the minute of silence and stopped speaking.

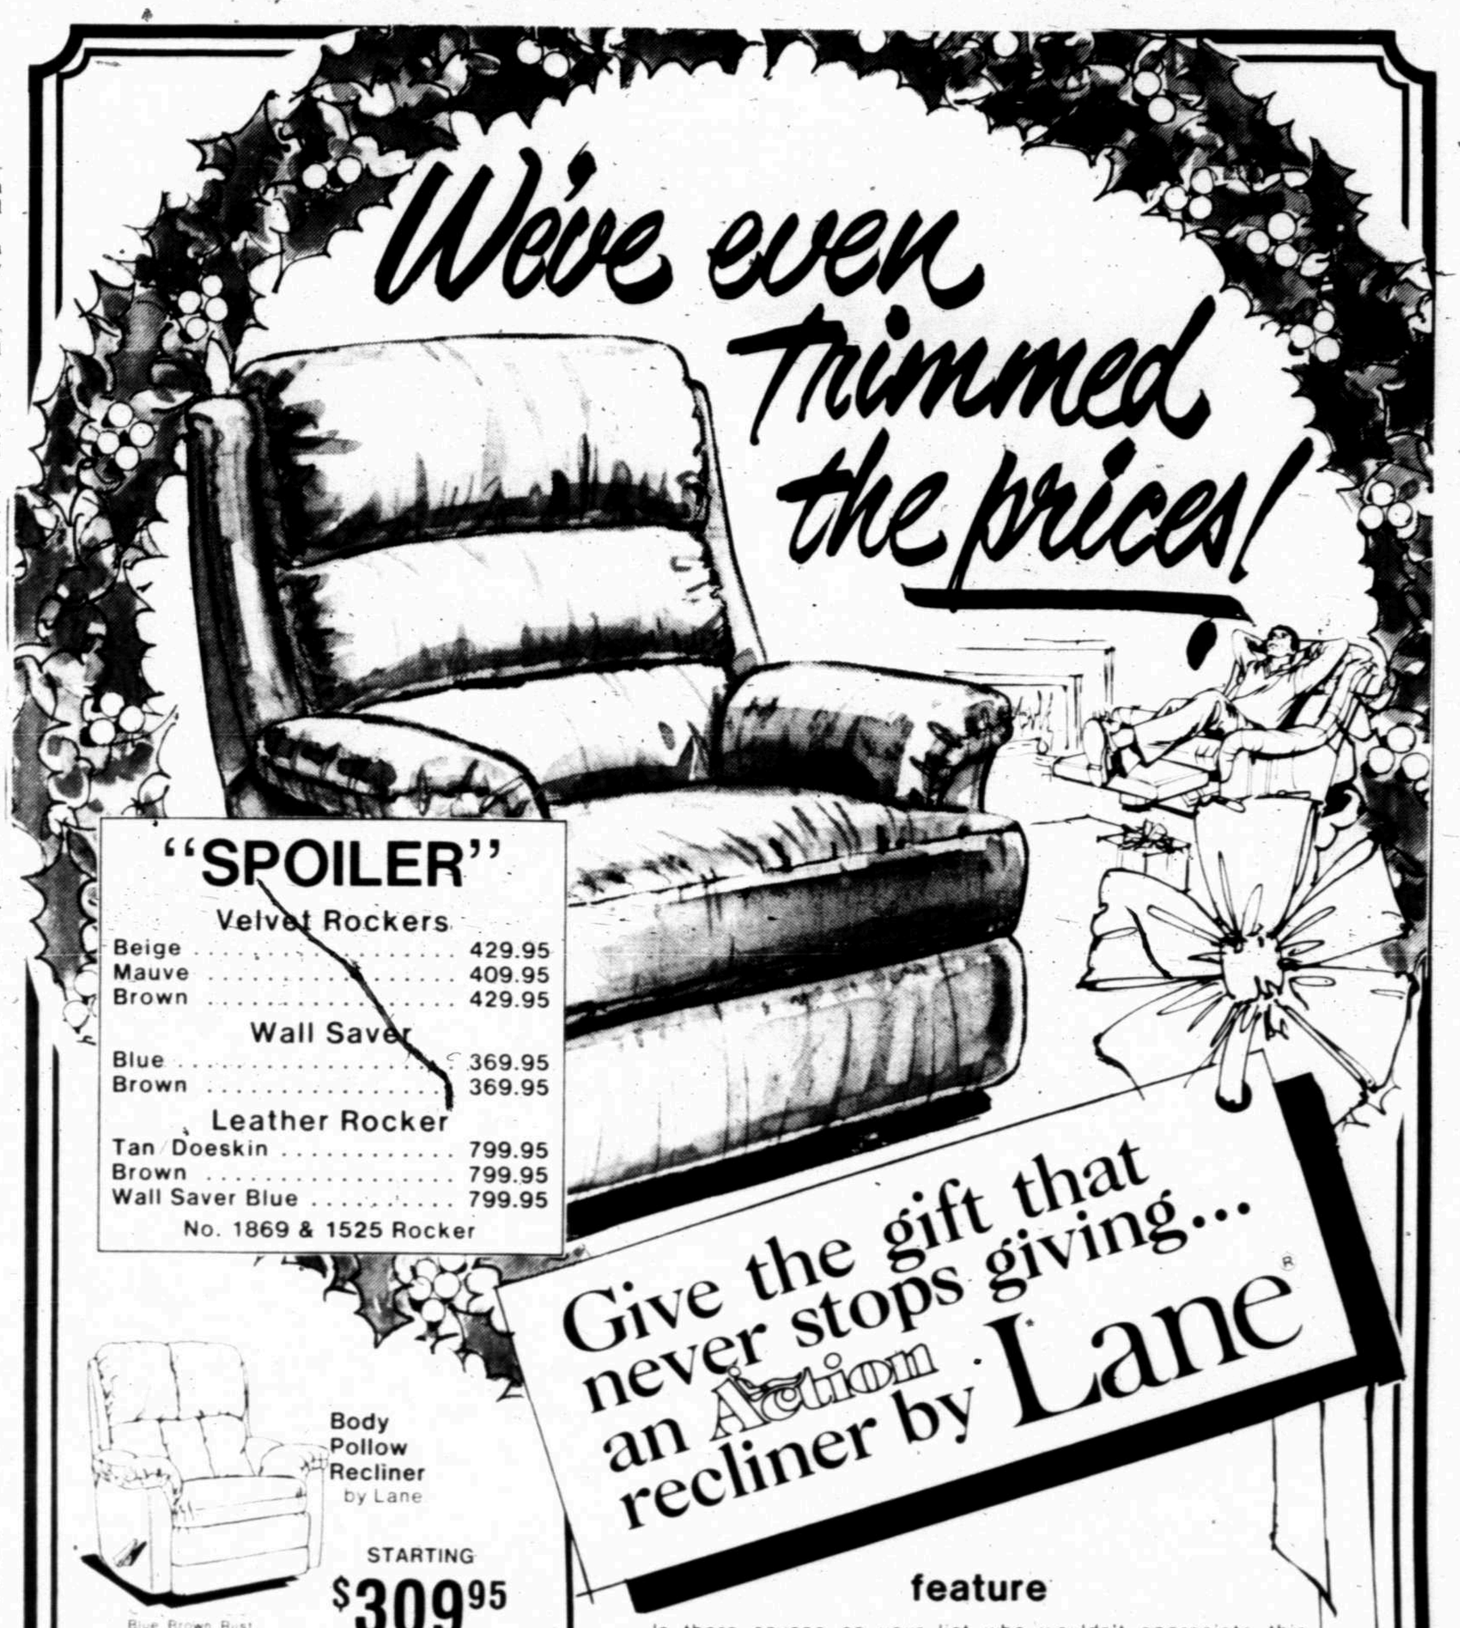

Williams said the Polish delegate who was chairing the session asked Zimmernan to continue speaking, and he said he would after the minute elapsed. The Soviet delegation then left en masse.

They later returned to the session.

IRS issues ruling on what can be deducted in 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service slammed the door Friday on a widely promoted idea for getting around a provision in the new tax-overhaul law.

The IRS issued a notice that it will not permit full deduction on 1986 returns of the cost of prepaid multi-year subscriptions to business or investment publications. Only the portion of the expense that applies to the first year of the subscription will be deductible in the first year, the agency said.

The same principle applies to prepayment of certain other deductible expenses, such as union dues, the IRS said. The agency also strictly limits its deduction of much prepaid interest.

Several publications have been soliciting multi-year subscriptions and renewals before the end of the year with the claim that taxpayers could deduct the full expense on 1986 returns. That would allow subscribers to reap two benefits before the new tax law takes effect:

— The new law reduces tax rates for most people; in 1987, the top individual rate of 50 percent drops to 38.5 percent. For a person in the top tax bracket, deducting $300 for magazine subscriptions on 1986 returns means the government pays $150 of the cost. But if the same $300 deduction were claimed on 1987 returns, the government would pay only $115.50.

— Starting Jan. 1, only those miscellaneous expenses that exceed 2 percent of adjusted gross income may be deducted. These expenses include job-related subscriptions, union and professional dues, tax advice, safe-deposit-box rental and employment agency fees. By writing off the full cost of a multi-year subscription on 1986 returns — which are due by next April 15 — a taxpayer could avoid that 2-percent floor.

NATION

"Permitting a full deduction in 1986 for a prepaid multi-year subscription would distort the taxpayer's 1986 income," the IRS said in announcing its position. In addition, the agency said, "the deductibility of amounts for the remaining life of a multi-year subscription will depend on the federal income-tax deduction rules applicable to the tax years involved."

The announcement is in line with long-held IRS policy on the deductibility of prepaid interest.

IRS Publication 17, the 1986 version of "Your Federal Income Tax," the agency says: "If you pay interest in advance for a period that goes beyond the end of the tax year, you must spread the interest over the tax years to which it applies. You may deduct in each year only the interest for that year."

However, that rule has an exception if the prepaid interest is in the form of points paid on a home loan by a borrower. In general, points may be deducted fully in the year paid if the loan is used to buy or improve a principal home and is secured by a lien on that home.

To illustrate Friday's ruling, the IRS offered the example of a new or renewal three-year business magazine subscription, with the full $720 cost paid in December 1986 for service starting in January 1987.

Only $240 of that sum could be deducted on the 1986 return as a miscellaneous business expense. If the remaining $480 qualified (under the new 2 percent floor) it could be deducted in equal parts in the two following years.

Or, the IRS said, if the $720 prepayment is for a three-year renewal of a subscription due to expire at the end of March 1987, only $180 could be deducted in 1986.

Weinberger says life, liberty, truth suffer in Soviet bloc

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, launching a new rhetorical attack on what he called "Soviet hypocrisy," said Friday the United States could not allow wishful thinking about Russian intentions to undermine its resolve to maintain a strong military.

In a biting, often sarcastic speech, the defense secretary told a group of Republican women he had been astonished by the irony of a recent declaration by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev issued during a visit to India.

Gorbachev called for a nuclear-free and non-violent world, Weinberger noted, endorsing "three major values" — human rights, peace and disarmament — values that, as we all know, the Soviet Union violates every half hour."

Citing a long string of Soviet actions including the invasion of Afghanistan, the shooting down of a Korean jetliner and the murder of Maj. Arthur Nicholson in East Germany, Weinberger declared: "Throughout the Soviet bloc, respect for life and liberty suffers the same fate as Moscow's regard for truth.

"Moscow's aggressions are possible because of the nature of its society and system, so different from ours that many in the West do not understand it or its implications," he continued.

Weinberger's remarks, delivered to a joint meeting of the Republican Women of Capitol Hill and the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, appeared to signal the start of his latest campaign to win budget hikes for the Pentagon from Congress.

"We must ensure that our citizens understand the security threat we face and that they demand that we base our defense spending on that threat, not on short-term fiscal yardsticks," he said.

Weinberger has frequently railed against cuts to his budget made over the past two years, arguing the goal of balancing the national budget cannot be pursued at the expense of a strong military.

On Thursday, in a speech to state legislators, the defense secretary called for a larger defense budget in the course of defending President Reagan's decision to exceed the limits of the unratified SALT II arms accord.

He argued the Soviets had never abided by the accord's terms, and "their ultimate hypocrisy is their recent statement that they will 'continue to observe SALT II's limits,' with their atheistic hands piously raised, proclaiming another Soviet lie."

On Friday, Weinberger switched his attention to other examples of "hypocrisy," citing Gorbachev's calls for peace and disarmament.

"Here you have armed aggression denounced by a regime that not only has accumulated the world's most threatening arsenal, but which also uses it whenever it is convenient," he said. "Are Afghan peasants about to attack Moscow?"

As for disarmament, Weinberger said the Soviet's actions in the field of arms control belied their propaganda claims.

"The Soviets have added more than 7,000 new warheads to their strategic offensive systems since 1967," he said. "In contrast, the U.S. stockpile of strategic offensive, defensive and theater nuclear weapons numbers about 25 percent fewer weapons than it did in 1967."

The recent breakdown of arms talks during the Iceland summit over a demand to curtail "Star Wars" research provides an even more telling example of Soviet duplicity, Weinberger concluded.

Gunman killed by police after he takes three hostages, shoots teen

Trenton, N.J., policeman Richard Infantine, carrying 8-month-old Ebony Gussin, runs for cover during a shootout. Ebony, her mother, Olamae Gussin and brother William Laster, 13, were taken hostage.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A gunman took a 13-year-old boy, his mother and his infant sister hostage in their home Friday and shot the teen-ager to death before police entered the house and killed the assailant, authorities said.

The boy was picked up by officers after he staggered out the back of the dwelling a few doors from the assailant's home, said police Sgt. Robert Orlowski.

The woman and her 6-month old daughter escaped unharmed through an upstairs window during the 35-minute drama, which ended when police returned fire on the gunman.

Police could not determine the gunman's motive. "I have no idea what he was doing," said Orlowski.

The victim, William Laster, suffered a gunshot wound just above the heart, said Orlowski.

The gunman was identified by police as Booker T. Ricks, 39, who Orlowski said had a history of arrests dating back to 1967 for disorderly conduct, shoplifting, assault and possession of marijuana.

The shooting first was reported at 2:15 p.m. and ended about 35 minutes later, said authorities.

"The radio room got a call about a man in a cellar with a gun and we dispatched a car. Police arrived, and shots were fired at them" from a ground-floor window of the three-story house, said Sgt. Robert Tedder.

As police surrounded the house and officers entered the back of the home, the boy's mother and sister made their way upstairs from the ground floor and were led through a window by police, authorities said.

Ricks fired through the ceiling at officers on the second floor and police returned fire, striking him, said Detective Joseph Constance.

The boy and Ricks were declared dead at St. Francis Medical Center, authorities said.

The boy's mother was identified as Olamae Gussin, 28, and his sister was identified as Ebony Scherie Gussin.

Erskine Stafford, who lives across the street, said he first heard one or two shots, later followed by a rapid succession of about 15 shots.

Judge rules lighted cross on state building unconstitutional

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A federal judge Friday ruled the display of a 20-story lighted cross on a state building is unconstitutional, and ordered an end to the nine-year Christmas tradition.

"The display of the cross endorses the Christian religion and is an unconstitutional action," U.S. District Judge William H. Barbour Jr. said in making his ruling. "The fact that the state has added non-secular symbols does not make it constitutional."

The state, seeking to allay concerns it was favoring a religion, also displayed the form of a Christmas tree and the words "joy " and ".peace" on the Walter Sillers building, Gov. Bill Allain had testified earlier Friday.

State officials said after the ruling they had not made a decision whether to continue lighting the other displays.

Attorney General Ed Pittman said he would appeal Barbour's ruling and ask for a trial of the case, but doubted it could be held before the holidays.

"I will abide by the injunction," said Jimmy Palmer, who oversees the lighting of the building as director of the governor's Office of General Services. "We naturally don't agree with the judge's interpretation, but that's what lawsuits are all about."

Hilary Chiz, executive director of the Mississippi ACLU, which filed the suit called the ruling "a victory for any individual in Mississippi or anywhere else that has ever felt isolated because they are in the minority."

During Friday's testimony, a Methodist minister said the cross endorses Christianity because it is so central a symbol of the faith.

"If it does not, then it is being put on the level of much more secularized symbols, like Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer. And that is very offensive to me as a Christian," said the Rev. Lee Reiff, who also is chairman of the department of religion at Millsaps College in Jackson.

Under cross examination by state attorneys, Reiff said the cross actually predates Christianity, but has become a symbol for it over the years.

"It means all that's good about Christianity," he said.

The ACLU contends the cross, which has been lighted on the building every December since 1977, violates separation of church and state.

NATION IN BRIEF

Demonstrators protest spy flights over Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large crowd of demonstrators gathered in front of the American diplomatic mission in Cuba to protest alleged U.S. spy flights over the island, State Department officials said Friday.

The officials said they had seen unconfirmed reports that as many as 100,000 were involved in the Thursday night protest.

Smaller scale demonstrations began Tuesday following the reported spy flight, which the officials refused to confirm or deny.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said school children were bused to the American Interests Section as part of what they maintained was a government-orchestrated protest campaign. There were no reports of violence.

According to the officials, a broadcast over a Cuban government station was heard at a monitoring station Thursday night in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. They said the broadcast gave details of the demonstration.

The Federal Communications Commission said a Cuban station was heard broadcasting music in the Midwest of the United States last week, interfering with several stations.

Explosion cause explored

WASHINGTON (AP) — An aerospace consultant, who conducted an independent analysis of videotapes from the last Challenger launch, has raised the possibility that a leaking rocket booster joint may not have been the only cause of the accident that destroyed the shuttle and killed its crew.

The analysis by Ali F. Abutaha indicates external components of the vehicle's right booster may have broken off 18 seconds before the shuttle began to disintegrate, the magazine Aviation Week and Space Technology says in its Monday issue.

The Rogers Commission, which investigated the Jan. 28 accident, concluded the explosion was caused by a faulty design, coupled with extreme cold, that permitted hot gases to pass O-ring seals on the booster and ignite the adjacent fuel tank.

Aviation Week said its editors agree that Abutaha "has identified what could be interpreted as two debris separations from the area of the right solid rocket booster before the Challenger shuttle system broke up." It said photo interpreters cautioned that the features "could be large cinders expelled from the cold motor."

One question being raised in the analysis is whether the strut linking the tank to the booster could have put excessive loads on the joint during ignition, causing the failure.

Teacher out of classroom

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — A high school teacher charged with providing liquor to minors has been relieved of his classroom duties while the case is pending, officials said Friday.

"Our intention is that he not be in contact with students during this period," Irving Miller, Harlem school district superintendent, said early Friday after a school board meeting.

Patrick Cal, 42, and his 17-year-old son, Michael, a student at Guilford High School, each were charged Wednesday with providing liquor to minors and with contributing to the deliquency of a child during a November party, said Daniel Porter, an assistant state's attorney.

Cal, a social studies teacher at Harlem High School, also was charged with permitting minors to possess or consume liquor at his residence, Porter said.

Cal has called the charges "utterly ridiculous."

Men rally behind Reagan

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Two men said Friday they are launching a national campaign to rally public support for President Reagan.

Randy Gustafson, a speechwriter for former Gov. Al Quie, and Sal DiLeo said they wanted Americans to write letters of support to the president, whose administration is embroiled in controversy about secret U.S. arms shipments to Iran and diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels.

DiLeo, a business consultant, said at a news conference the message to Reagan in their "Come On America" campaign is: "We believe we're not able to judge the (Iran) situation right or wrong. We believe you're a good man."

The two, who have not discussed their plans with any Reagan aides, urged citizens to send the letters of support to the White House.

Salad 'tossed' on interstate

EFFINGHAM, Ill. (AP) — Workers on Friday cleaned up what amounted to a 21-ton tomato salad on Interstate 57 after a truck carrying peanut oil rammed the back of a tomato truck, state police said.

Troopers said 42,000 pounds of fresh tomatoes spilled — along with some peanut oil — when the truck driver hauling the oil fell asleep and the collision occurred.

Carl Osborn, 26, of Drasco, Ark., was charged with driving too fast for conditions and received a motor carrier's safety violation for driving while fatigued, Sgt. Herbert Pinkston said.

Neither Osborn nor the driver of the tomato truck, Rodney Jones, 55, of Vinton, Iowa, was injured.

Northbound lanes of I-57 were closed for a couple of hours, police said.

Lawmaker has surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., underwent successful surgery Friday on his right ankle at Georgetown University Hospital, aides said.

Dingell, who chairs the powerful House Energy and Commerce Committee, was expected to be hospitalized for about a week, and will have to wear a cast for about 12 weeks, his office reported.

Man charged with stealing from nuns

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Texan who allegedly bilked $3,532 from Roman Catholic nuns in Louisiana and Ohio was under police guard Friday in a northern Kentucky hospital and faced charges of aggravated burglary and theft by deception, the authorities said.

Police here said Antonio Garza, 40, of San Antonio, Texas, was arrested Dec. 6 in Covington, Ky., after "wining and dining everybody in town" at the Waterfront Restaurant and tipping waitresses with crisp $20 bills.

He was hospitalized Thursday at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, Covington, suffering from blood clots, Cincinnati police said. Garza was listed in fair condition Friday.

Police said nuns gave the money to Garza because they thought they were helping him transport Central American political refugees to freedom.

"He was the last of the big-time spenders," said Sgt. James Van Pelt of the Cincinnati Police fraud division.

Garza told the nuns from the Sisters of St. Joseph order here that he needed money to transport two vanloads of refugees to asylum in Canada, Van Pelt said. After the nuns gave him some $1,500, police said, Garza went to the Covington restaurant, accompanied by a female companion he had just met, and started spending it. Garza left between $300 and $500 in tips at the bar, police said.

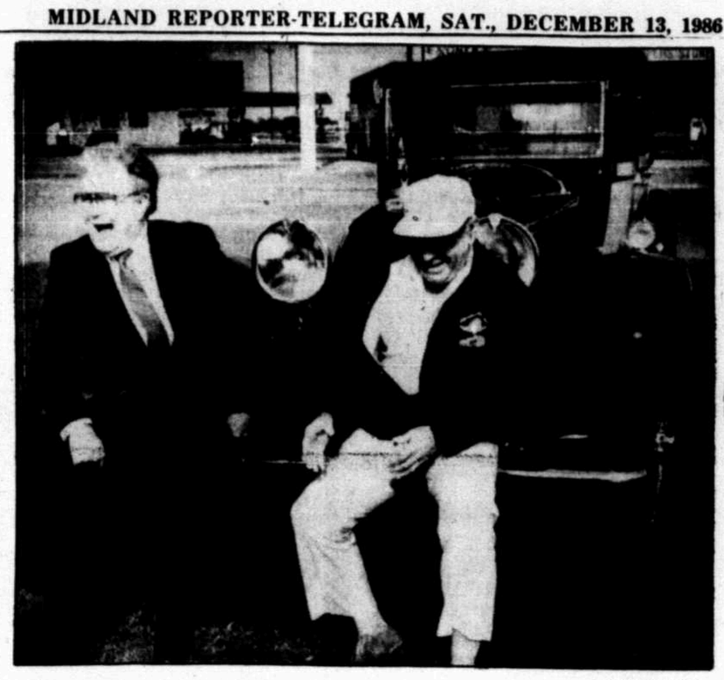

Waitresses became suspicious that the money might be counterfeit and called police. Secret Service agents confirmed the money was authentic, but found that Garza was driving a stolen car.

Garza called one of the local nuns to ask for bail money Sunday. She refused and called police two days later and "somewhat indicated that she'd been had," Van Pelt said.

Sister Julia Sheatzley, head of the local St. Joseph order, declined comment.

"No one conned her (Sister Julia) out of the money," Garza said. "I was involved with some people from the Sanctuary Movement. They were giving me funds to break the law (by transporting refugees). She knew the money was illegal.

"There's no way they can prove I didn't send people to Canada. She'd better get her story straight. She's the one who told me when I came to Cincinnati to stop and see her. She invited me in her house, they fed me soup and milk.

Rare car

George Crocker, president of the Domino's Pizza chain, left, sits on the bumper of a 1931 Bugatti Royal purchased from Jerry Moore, right, of Houston. Moore sold the 22-foot-long car to Thomas Monaghan — founder of Domino's and owner of the Detroit Tigers — for $8 million. Crocker took delivery of the rare French car, which gets about six miles to the gallon.

Committee votes to create regional university

AUSTIN (AP) — The Select Committee on Higher Education voted Friday to create a major regional university for South Texas at Pan American University , instead of Corpus Christi.

The vote was 17-11.

The committee also tabled proposals by its chairman, Larry Temple of Austin, to merge Texas A&I University at Kingsville with Corpus Christi State University.

In another crucial vote on recommendations that will go to the 1987 Legislature, the committee voted to do away with the myriad of governing boards for state colleges and universities by putting them under five boards. The University of Texas and Texas A&M University would retain their current boards.

The regional or comprehensive universities would be governed by two boards of 15 regents each, one in North Texas and the other in South Texas. One system would include Texas Tech, North Texas State, and Texas Woman's University. The second would be for the University of Houston system units, Texas Southern, Lamar University, and Pan American.

Another 15-member board would govern the Texas Senior University System for the 13 other senior colleges. Texas State Technical Institute and community colleges would continue under the state College Coordinating Board.

"A comprehensive university in Corpus Christi would do our Valley students no good because Corpus Christi is 160 miles from Brownsville and no less than 100 miles from any point of our four county areas," said Federal Judge Renaldo Garza who sponsored the motion for Pan American. "If a student has to leave the Valley to go to college it would be just as costly to go to Corpus Christi as it is now to go to San Antonio, Austin or Houston."

Norman Hackerman, committee member and former president of UT-Austin and Rice University, argued that the committee should recommend a comprehensive university for South Texas and let the Legislature say where it would be located.

Clements opposed to giving aliens refuge

McALLEN (AP) — Gov.-elect Bill Clements said Friday that he is opposed to illegal aliens finding sanctuary in Texas.

"I don't like it," Clements said at a rally eight miles from the Texas-Mexico border. "I am opposed to this on the very simple proposition that it is illegal and it's against the law and I'm opposed to it.

"It's just that simple," Clements said in response to a question from Lee Zieger of Brownsville, one of four men who filed suit to prevent the Casa Oscar Romero shelter for Central American refugees from moving into his neighborhood.

Clements also promised Rio Grande Valley supporters he would deliver "a whole new program for the Texas war on drugs" after he is sworn in Jan. 20.

He said he has already discussed the fight against illegal drugs with Vice President George Bush and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, in an attempt to bring more military surveillance equipment into Texas.

The governor-elect also said he sees no reason for an ongoing controversy between some state agencies, including the attorney general, and church-run schools over whether they should be licensed.

"I intend to put forth the kind of legislation that will clear this matter up once and for all," he said.

Clements' visit to McAllen was one of three stops Friday as he travels the state to open "a sense of full communication with the people of Texas," particularly his supporters.

Clements refused to answer questions from the press.

He also kept to himself his plans for meeting a $1 billion deficit in the state's budget over the next eight months.

"I'm in the process of addressing that right now," he said. "I will come forth with the appropriate recommendations to the Legislature after I'm sworn in. I'm not prepared today to show my hand...I'll uncover that card at the appropriate time."

Clements said the chiefs of the state's 13 largest agencies are preparing a list of the services they provide, and the cost, in the order of priority.

Budget cutters will start at the bottom of those lists and will either cut the program, reduce it, or merge it with another program, he said.

State officials believe Texas' revenue collections will remain flat for the next two years, Clements said.

"We're going to cut that cloth to fit that pattern," Clements said, "and we're not going to have any more of these deficits and that's all there is to it."

Garry Mauro says selling limestone mine good deal

AUSTIN (AP) — Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says he made a good deal for the state when he cut in half the state's royalties from an El Paso County limestone mine.

The Austin American-Statesman said in a copyright story Friday the sale was made at the time the mining company owners were donating more than $17,000 to Mauro's re-election campaign.

The land commissioner said he was aware the mine company owners were contributing to his campaign but that the donations had nothing to do with the decision on the royalties and land sale.

The American-Statesman said the state eventually sold the mine land it owned, which contained at least $60 million worth of limestone, to the mining company for $136,000.

The difference between the new and old royalty payments could amount to a $2 million loss for the state over the life of the mine, the American-Statesman said.

The land sale was part of a continuing effort by Mauro to sell off or trade certain state tracts to allow purchase of other tracts deemed potentially more profitable by the General Land Office.

In this case, the mine sale allowed the state to purchase a North Texas tract near Fort Worth with a shopping center on it.

Mauro told the American-Statesman the complex deal, in which the state's mine royalties were cut from a minimum of 25 cents a ton to a flat rate of 12.5 cents a ton, is not a bad one for the state in part because the state gains about $300,000 annual lease income from the shopping center tract.

Land office employees told the American-Statesman the mining division of Mauro's office initially opposed the sale of the mine, which had been leased by the Jobe Concrete Products Inc., since September 1984.

'Face peeler' wanted for not having license

Bennett

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man who has been performing a skin-peeling treatment to reduce signs of aging is wanted by authorities in California for practicing medicine without a license, the Dallas Morning News reported Friday.

In a copyright story, the News said Ronald Bennett, who calls himself a doctor, is also being investigated in Florida.

Investigators from the two states and the U.S. Department of Commerce say Bennett did not attend medical school.

Authorities also allege that Bennett hired a phony doctor in Florida who eventually was imprisoned on a federal firearms charges and left more than $30,000 in unpaid bills on a tiny British West Indies island where he operated a spa.

Bennett's attorney, George Allen of Tampa, Fla., said that whether his client has a medical degree is irrelevant.

"The issue is whether or not what he has been doing...is practicing medicine," he said.

Bennett, along with his wife, continue to promote businesses that have been dissolved by the Florida secretary of state for failing to submit annual reports, say the authorities.

In September, Bennett moved his offices to Dallas, where he said he plans to write and to conduct research, while his wife carries on his dream of building a cruise ship offering a variety of anti-aging treatments.

Bennett's office walls are covered with certificates referring to him as a doctor. He says he has a diploma from a medical school in Venezuela, but officials there said they have never heard of the school.

"Sure it's hard to check out some of my credentials. So what?" Bennett told the newspaper.

Bennett and his attorney say a chemical face peel is not a medical procedure, but experts in the field say it should be performed only by a physician. Bennett said he is no longer teaching or performing face peels.

Pompano Beach, Fla., police detective Gary Egan said police there are trying to determine whether Bennett committed fraud by presenting himself as a doctor to attract students, practiced medicine without a license by administering narcotics or took down payments for face peels he never performed.

Bennett's move to Dallas briefly attracted the attention of the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners. Lloyd McRae, Dallas-Fort Worth investigator for the medical examiners board, said he closed his investigation shortly after it began. "I just wasn't able to get any information about where he was," McRae said.

World Health, a corporation owned by Bennett and his seventh wife, Kathryn, in Anguilla in the British West Indies was liquidated last month. Anguillan officials say the company was liquidated for failure to pay more than $30,000 to local businesses and the island's Social Security Board.

Man arrested in televised bust pleads no contest

HOUSTON (AP) — A man arrested in a nationally televised drug bust received a 30-day jail sentence after pleading no contest to charges of marijuana possession and illegally carrying a weapon.

Eric Alley, 38, was sentenced Thursday by Harris County Criminal Court at Law Judge Don Hendrix. He will serve the sentence in the Harris County Jail.

Hendrix was given credit for 10 days he has already spent in jail since his arrest Dec. 2 by the Harris County Sheriff's Department.

The raid on the Channelview house where Alley was living was televised live on Geraldo Rivera's two-hour program called American Vice: The Doping of a Nation.

Terry Rouse, who was arrested with Alley, had a charge of cocaine possession filed against her dismissed last week after a judge said there was no probable cause to believe she was guilty.

Alley's attorney, Angelica Landa, said her client pleaded no contest because he "just wants to get this behind him."

Elms donated to capitol

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin Chamber of Commerce Friday announced it will donate 36 American elm trees to be planted along the south walk of the State Capitol.

The new trees will replace diseased elms that have been removed. Some of the trees had been in place on the Capitol grtounds since 1903.

As the trees died, there was some debate concerning what type of trees would replace them. The elm and sycamore were the only species that met the State Preservation Board's standards for historical accuracy. The sycamore was disqualified because of its vulnerability to leaf-scorch bacteria.

The new trees are scheduled to be planted by Jan. 20 when Gov-elect Bill Clements takes the oath of office on the Capitol steps.

Project Greenscape officials said the project would cost $50,000, and they are conducting a fund drive to pay for long-term care of the new trees.

Toy helicopter recalled

AUSTIN (AP) — A plastic toy helicopter is being recalled by its manufacturer because it has caused several eye injuries, the Texas Department of Health announced Friday.

The M.S. Kasch Co., of Mequon, Wisc., is recalling the "Flying Copter" toy in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

About 30,000 of the toys have been sold nationwide in the past 30 months, according to the health department. The hand-launched toys are about seven inches long and have three red plastic rotor blades and a green launching handle.

The rotor blades can detach during launching and cause eye injuries and facial cuts, according to Don Sowards of the state health department's product safety program. Some of the injured people have been blinded in one eye, he said.

Consumers are being urged to return the toy to the store where it was purchased.

Postal worker indicted

FORT WORTH (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a postal worker on charges he stole mailed donations to a television ministry.

The indictment against Elbert Taylor, who works at a postal facility in Farmers Branch, accuses him of stealing money intended for Word of Faith World Outreach Center at Farmers Branch. The indictment does not specify the amount.

L.C. Brown, a postal inspector, said envelopes were opened and resealed or destroyed.

Roseann Rueffer, a spokeswoman for Robert Tilton, pastor at the center and host of the nationally televised program "Success in Life," said, "Initially we became aware of it when we noticed a severe dropoff in our mail."

Taylor, a postal employee since 1979, faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine if convicted.

Nicer weather to greet basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures and clear skies will greet Permian Basin residents through the weekend after a cold and snowy week, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Today's high is expected to reach the upper 50s, with southerly winds from 10 to 15 mph expected. Saturday night, skies will be partly cloudy with a low expected in the lower 30s. The high Sunday is expected to reach 60 degrees.

Friday's high temperature of 53 was 26 degrees cooler than the record high of 79 set in 1937. The record low of 14, set just last year, was only eight degrees cooler than Friday's low of 22.

STATE

Snow that covered a wide area of Texas early Friday melted under clear skies as the system that produced the storm moved out of the state.

High pressure was responsble for the mostly sunny skies, however, some scattered high level clouds lingered over the eastern part of Texas and along the middle Rio Grande, the National Weather Service said.

Air flowed clockwise around the high pressure center in Central Texas, producing a south wind at 5 to 10 mph over the western half of the state and a north wind at 5 to 10 mph over East and South Texas.

The clear skies set the stage for a rapid drop in temperatures overnight Friday.

A freeze warning was issued for Friday night and early Saturday for inland portions of southeastern Texas, including Beaumont and Port Arthur.

The forecast was for generally clear skies over much of the state with partly cloudy skies over South Texas, the weather service said.

NATION

A storm dumped up to 6 inches of snow in north-central Texas on Friday, while bitter cold whipped the northern Plains and parts of the Midwest.

Snowshowers were scattered across parts of the middle and lower Missouri Valley and the northern Plateau, and snow and sleet was falling across parts of northern Alabama.

Some snowfall totals from the storm in north-central Texas included 6 inches at Stephenville, 5 inches at Baird, Eula and Silver Valley, and 4 inches at Tuscola and Granbury.

Rain was scattered across the mid-Atlantic Coast and parts of the Tennessee Valley, with showers and thunderstorms scattered over the south Atlantic Coast states.

Happy Holidays, skiers

Snowfall brings ideal conditions

Associated Press

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

"I went skiing yesterday and was thigh deep in powder."

"We have fabulous snow. The best snow in the Rockies and it's so cold that it's not going to change. It's the dry type powder. The best kind for skiing."

The enthusiasm comes from Susan Vernon of the Taos Ski Valley in New Mexico where the storms this week dumped welcome new inches on the steep slopes just in time for the beginning of the holiday rush.

The Taos story is typical of what 's happening at other northern New Mexico and southern Colorado ski resorts. The promise is for the best Christmas-January break skiing in several seasons.

Be prepared for changes this year, depending upon where you go. Some overcrowded areas are introducing detachable lift chairs and gondolas for loading and unloading. The idea is to speed up the lift run times, permitting the moving of more skiers.

One change that never changes is the cost of a lift ticket, which have gone up $9 to $11 since 1980.

More treasured out-of-the-way areas are becoming more accessible as a result of new airports or better service to and from large aerodromes.

Last year Purgatory opened a challenging new area called the Legends. This year Telluride counters with a new mountaining catering to the cruising intermediate.

Wolf Creek, which has talked expansion for years, brags of 465" inches of snow a year, most in Colorado, and is bidding for attention with attractive multi-day packages.

Wolf Creek's Water Fall area will be open daily, weather permitting, for the adventurous skier searching for untouched powder. Lift ticket is $19.

Another interesting development is The Enchanted Circle in northern New Mexico. Angel Fire, Red River and Taos Ski Valley have combined resources to offer three areas at reduced rates. The Circle offers the gamut of skiing experiences, from the gentle slopes at Angel Fire to the intermediate Red River runs and the dramatic TSV plunges.

A Circle Ski Pass offers three lift and three ski school discount coupons, one for each mountain, at $58. The passes will be honored Jan. 3-March 1, except Feb. 14-15 and March 15-21.

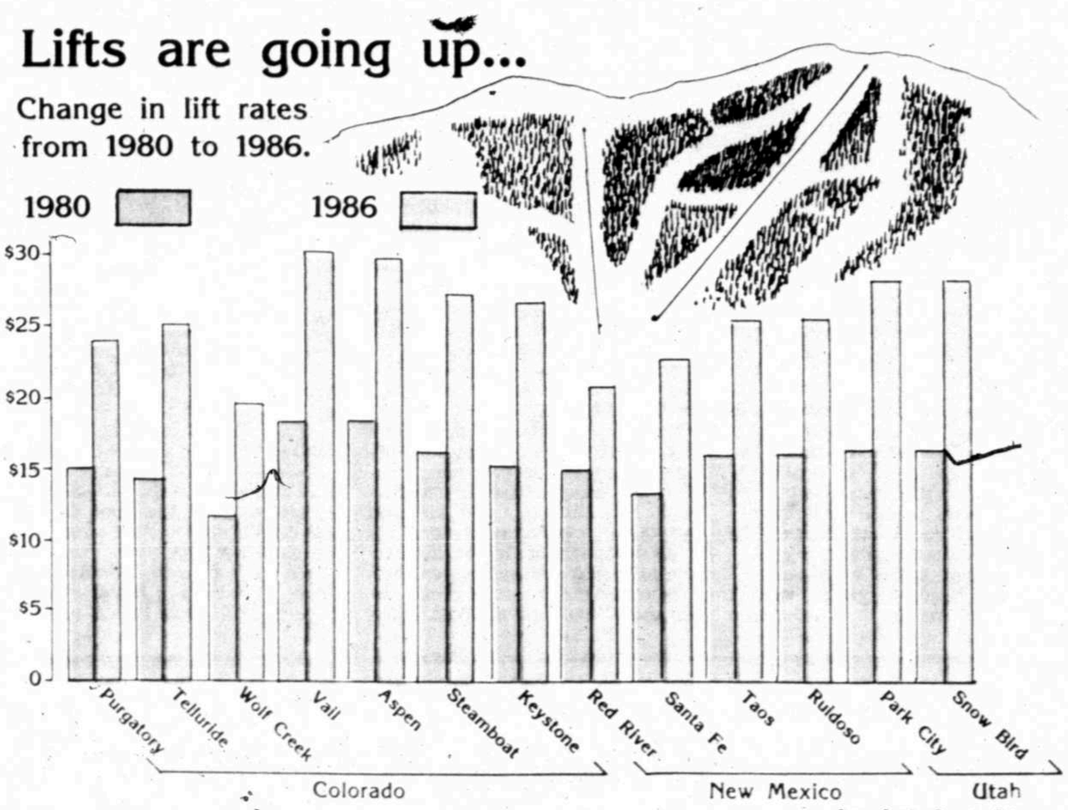

Daily adult lift tickets at TSV are $25, $23 multi-day.

At Ski Apache, formerly Sierra Blanca, where most West Texans ski, Geronimo and Smokey Bear trails have been widened and Screaming Eagle, an advanced trail, has been added. More importantly, 44 fresh inches fell this week. Lift tickets are $25 adult, $15 under 12, $17 half day.

'Dogs unleashed, romp over Hobbs

Correction

Midland High will host Lubbock High in a 5 p.m. game today at the MHS Gym, not on Monday as previously reported. The Bulldogs will host Seminole on Tuesday before traveling to the Optimist Classic in San Antonio, Dec. 18-20.

Midland coach Jack Stephenson couldn't have drawn it up any better if he'd done it on a chalkboard in a pre-game speech.

The heretofore lowly Bulldogs, they of the 1-7 record, the seven-game losing streak and a 30-point blowout in the first game with Hobbs, stripped themselves of all such labels with a convincing 88-81 victory in Friday night's rematch with the Eagles in the MHS Gym.

"In all my years of coaching, I've never seen that kind of effort," Stephenson said. "It's just the way we set it up. I knew if we played up to our capabilities we could beat them. And we did, we played exceptionally well."

The Bulldogs rode wave after wave of emotion in stopping their seven-game skid and reversing an ugly trend that started in the second game of the season. It also brings new life to a program that many had already written off, a full three weeks before district play ever began.

"Everybody had written us off, people in the community, in the school, in the newspaper. Everybody said 'Let's wait until next year. But our kids proved that we've got a fine program going here," Stephenson said.

MHS played a gutty first quarter, finally taking the lead with :50 to go, 16-14 on a Varrick McDonald turnaround jumper.

It was as close as Hobbs would get the rest of the evening as seniors Craig Crawford and David Lujan took over in the second half to stretch the MHS lead to as many as 17 points.

Lujan was dominant on the boards and inside as the 6-5 post grabbed 14 rebounds and was eight of 10 from the floor for a team-high 20 points. Crawford hit for 15 points and Michael Ball added 13 for the 'Dogs.

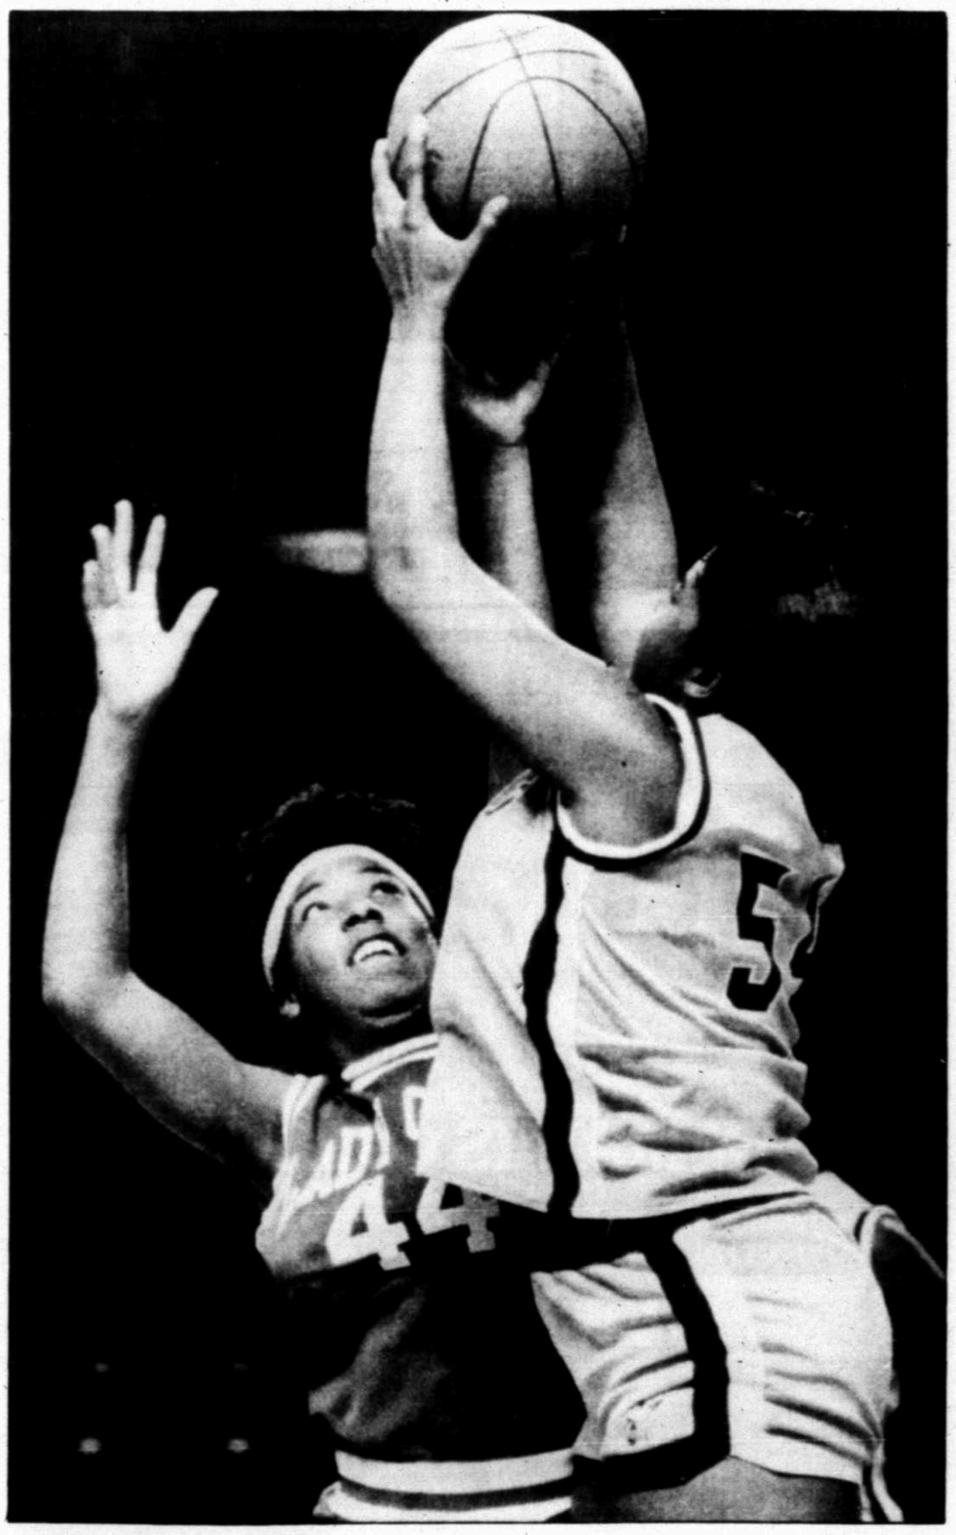

In the third quarter, Crawford lit a fire, smoking an 18-footer from the corner to stop a string of eight straight Hobbs points to give MHS some breathing room, 55-46.

"I haven't played up to my capabilities yet this year, but I hit that first shot and that gave me my confidence back," Crawford said. "Coach has been telling me all year that there's nothing wrong with my shot, but I had no confidence."

His confidence restored, the senior guard then hit his next three shots, Lujan added a pair of free throws and Eric Boyt converted a three-point play as the Bulldogs opened a 15-point bulge.

"I knew all along they could play like that," Stephenson said of Lujan and Crawford, "but they haven't, they haven't, they haven't. The efforts they gave were just incredible, they were just dominating tonight."

Midland Lee's Lavette Wallace goes high for a rebound in Tall City Tournament at Chap Center Friday.

Lee, Midland in semifinals

Tall City Girls

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After first round of action in the Tall City Girls Invitational basketball tournament Friday night at Chaparral Center, two teams from Midland and two teams from El Paso were left in the championship hunt.

Midland High, Midland Lee, El Paso Parkland and El Paso Eastwood all advanced to the championship bracket Friday.

The Midland High girls upped the season record to 6-2 with a 90-27 thumping of the Midland Lee junior varsity, who was filling to in fill out the field at eight teams.

Amy Cumings and Brenda Rodriquez both had 18 points in limited playing time for the Bulldogs while Sebrenia Finch had 16 points. Kim Jackson had 14 points off the bench and every Bulldog scored in the mismatch.

ASKED IF this 90-point effort was a school record, MHS coach Jane Young replied, "I think we busted the clock once when I started coaching, but I try not to do that anymore. I don't know if this is a school record or not."

Young continued, "We're going to try hard next year to see that we have eight varsity teams. I just don't like this kind of game. We did get to play a lot of girls and that was the good side because everyone played well. But it's hard for a varsity to get up for a JV and it's hard for a JV to play against a varsity team."

Lee coach Shirley Stephenson, who coached both Rebel JV and Reb varsity, said, "It was good for our junior varsity. They played two varsity teams in the Andrews tournament and will play three in this tournament. That's five varsity games and that's a lot of experience. Those kids just want to play. Winning and losing isn't the most important thing."

The Lee JV got 11 points from Patricia McMaryien, but the Bulldogs held the juniors to a total of seven points in the second and third quarters.

MHS grabbed a 23-11 first quarter lead and then went through the motions on the way to a 63-point victory.

The Lee varsity, which started the season with a 7-0 mark before losing Tuesday to Greenwood by one point, got back on the winning track with its 61-56 victory over Lovington, N.M., but it wasn't easy.

Lee trailed the Lady Cats 25-24 at the half as Lovington continually beat the Rebel press and got several Lee players in foul trouble.

To add to the complications for Lee, post LaVette Wallace went down with an ankle injury in the first half, leaving the Lady Rebs shorthanded underneath with the Cats using three players at six-foot or better.

Lovington's 6-0 Cathe Crow had a tournament high 26 points, but Lee dropped its press in the second half and exploded to a 46-37 lead at the end of the quarter, outscoring the Cats by a 22-12 margin.

"We didn't move very well and got into foul trouble early and had to come out of our press," said Stephenson. "Fortunately, that worked for us. I'm glad to get that one behind us."

ROZ EADEN and Melissa Hart paced the Rebels with 14 points each.

Lovington was playing only its third game of the year and is going to be a very good basketball team. The Lady Cats already own a victory over District 4-5A's Odessa Permian this year.

El Paso Eastwood joined the winner's bracket with a solid 55-31 victory over Seminole as Annie Carroll led the way with a game high 23 points. Monica Huffman added 10 points.

The Lady Troopers broke the game open in the second period after the two teams had fought to a 20-20 standoff. The Maidens of Seminole scored only 11 points the rest of the game. Starla Kyle led the Maidnes with 15 points.

In the other first round game, El Paso Parkland won a 59-30 mismatch over Del Rio as Parkland had four players score in double figures.

Kim Castillo paced all scorers with 17 points while Stephenie Stevens had 16, Linda Green 11 and Deanna Demeritt 10.

Mark it down, Feb. 9, 1987

Feb. 9, 1987.

"We don't have a very big gym. Maybe about 2,500. The second year Spud Webb was at Midland and they came over, all the seats were gone an hour before the game. Midland College won 101-100. Then last year we played an 88-85 game."

Ron Black was recalling the past and perhaps issuing a warning.

As soon as it was over, New Mexico Junior College's streak-spoiling 75-73 win over Midland College Thursday night, as the fans filed out of the Chap Center they were thinking about the return meeting and revenge, perhaps.

If not revenge, the fans were looking forward to a helluva a basketball game when the teams meet again for that's what this one was. And even though it didn't come out the way it was supposed to, it injected new life...excitement...and maybe some fearful anxiety into a season that was turning into a yawner.

Not only will the Chaps not be joining the ACC in January, they will be fighting for their WJCAC lives after the mid-term break. Not only is the season not over, the Chaps aren't even in first place.

Streaks are nice, but competition is better and that's what we've got in the WJCAC now.

IF COACH Jerry Stone had trouble getting the Chaps attention before, he's got it now.

MC lost and with it went all those streaks built over so long a period. What, however, was most disturbing was the lack of savoir faire down the stretch.

The Chaps' poise fled to the nearest exit. What happened was that the Chaps folded under the pressure, just as all opponents til now had staged a first half disappearing act when MC applied the heat. Still, what could you expect in what had been a season of routs.

MC was guilty of an uncharacteristic number of turnovers under the offensive basket in the second half, opportunities that trickled off the fingers and out of bounds.

If the Chaps are to make it to Hutchinson, Kan., and contend, they can only benefit from more games like this one.

REMEMBER, the 1983 national champions lived on the edge of the cliff all season. It was a team that could open a 30-point lead in a twinkling and lose it in a blink.

Not only were the games close, but you were never sure that the team wouldn't wind up with four players on the floor, they were that shorthanded.

And the team that went to nationals two years ago was one that was short on ability and long on courage when the going got rough. Will you ever forget that game against Laredo and Mt. Everest at Angelo State?

After the game Thursday, NMJC assistant Ray Birmingham was talking about how it was before NMJC left for Midland, "Ron really wanted to win this one. He told the kids before the game, 'Midland College is a well-coached team. They come at you with so many defenses and they always play hard and put so much pressure on you. They are always good and it's never easy. Beat Midland', Black told his players, 'And you've accomplished something. You've beaten the best.'"

Panhandle prepares for opening of pheasant season

By MARK McDONALD
Dallas Times Herald

Motels in Hereford are booked. The cafes in Vega have set up overtime shifts for fry cooks and waitresses. Drive-in grocers are braced for a run on beer. Skycaps at the Lubbock and Amarillo airports are resting up for the flood of visitors.

Christmas rush? A cotton growers' convention? Cattlemen's roundup?

Today it's ringnecked pheasant season, the Mardi Gras of the Texas Panhandle.

Hunting the colorful gamebirds has become so popular in recent years, the opening of the 16-day season running through Dec. 28 virtually splits tiny farming and oil patch communities at the seams. And Panhandle residents don't just greet visiting hunters, they join in the celebration.

The Moose Lodge in Spearman will be crowded with locals and visitors alike when the buffet opens for the this morning hunters' breakfast. Three bucks a plate. And you can bet your last shotgun shell the Dalhart 4-H Club will go all out throwing its barbecue Saturday night.

"The night before opening day," said Phil Evans, a game biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and one of the nation's top authorities on pheasants, "it one big carnival."

So it is.

THE TEXAS Department of Agriculture offers a hunting lease referral system. Chambers of commerce carry listings of landowners willing to grant trespass privileges to the thoughtful sportsman. The going rate is $50 to $75 a day, higher if it includes lodging, guide, dogs, etc.

Resorts such as Bill and Jan McKee's Flying MK near Bonham offer gourmet food and carpet-on-the-floor lodging to go with their hunts on explosive, wild-like birds released in prime upland bird habitat.

The Dumas 4-H Club offered two-day guided hunts in nearby grain fields and filled all 100 openings.

"I've turned down 300 others," said Ken Coffey, who runs the outings for the club. "We're out of room."

This comes as good news for a region struggling to overcome slumping agriculture and petroleum markets. Thousands of sportsmen from Dallas, San Antonio, Austin, Houston and other population centers will bring millions of dollars to the Panhandle during their once-a-year trip.

"The bird makes such a pretty trophy and it's the kind of hunting that can be done in groups," Evans said. "It can get to be quite a social event."

OPENING WEEKEND is especially festive. Evans said field studies show that 90 percent of the estimated 25,000 ringnecks shot all of last season were taken the first Saturday and Sunday.

Evans stops short of predicting a banner season. "You can have a snowstorm or high winds that will hamper hunting," he said. "You can't predict hunting conditions."

But he said the Panhandle birds "got off a good hatch last summer. We had ample precipitation and the cover is plentiful. We figure it will be a good year."

Strangely, census figures taken by field crews in September, then again in October, indicate that sportsmen will do a lot more hunting than finding. From an all-time high of 5.52 birds per mile sighted in 1982, the number dipped to 4.2 in '83 and bottomed out in '84 at 2.2. Last year, the birds rallied to 2.6 per mile and Evans sees more of the same for this year despite surveys that show only 2.16 birds per mile.

"We got a crummy census," said Evans. "I know 2.16 is the number we have to go with in our reports, but it needs to be qualified. There is much more vegetation in the weed patches and playa lakes. Cover was so good our visibility was reduced. We just couldn't see the birds to make effective counts."

BILL LYLES, who lives and hunts in the Muleshoe area, agrees.

"It will be hard to make a whole day's hunt," he said. "If you can't get your limit (two cocks per day) by 10 o'clock something's wrong."

Ken Coffey in Dumas put it this way: "We've got birds running out our ears."

Such was not always the case.

Texas did not hold its first open season until 1958, and that was a two-weekend-only session confined to Dallam County, located where Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico meet on the windswept plains.

"We had a few landowners making local releases of birds they bought, but most of those birds were wandering in from Colorado, Oklahoma or Kansas — or any state that wants to take the credit," Evans said.

By the mid-1960s, though, when Texas farmers began to use new irrigation methods to stimulate their crops south into the Hereford area, ringnecks came with the sprinklers. To stock the eastern half of the Panhandle, especially south of the Canadian River breaks near Pampa, Texas Parks & Wildlife released pheasants they had trapped in the Dalhart area.

"Most of the Panhandle is fairly flat," Evans said. "But the Canadian River is a 40-mile gap in the terrain that we didn't feel the birds could negotiate. We just gave Mother Nature a hand."

Sportsmen have taken it from there, concentrating their efforts on large fields of planted grain crops such as milo.

The birds roost on the ground in clumps of grass or weeds where they share overnight sentinel duties to watch for raccoons, coyotes and other natural enemies. Evans said the birds begin moving from the roost into grain fields about dawn.

THIS IS where hunters get most of their shooting. Tradition calls for half the hunting party to spread out 25 to 50 yards apart and walk up the planted rows. At the end of the field, the other half of the group station themselves as blockers to keep the birds from running out of the end of the field. Opening day is not a good time to break in a new pair of hiking boots.

Shots normally come as the walkers draw within 75 yards of the blockers. Because the birds weigh up to four pounds each, a 12-gauge shotgun is the preferred weapon. Size 6 shot is the most popular size.

Caution in this close-order shooting is advised. Hunters should allow the flushing pheasant to reach a safe height before shooting and hens are off-limits. Shoot only after the distinctive red, white and black markings on the head and tailfeathers can be identified.

By late morning, the birds return to the roost for several hours of "dusting and loafing," Evans said. The last hour of daylight is reserved for another trip to the grain fields before the birds return to the roost at dusk.

As opening day approaches, Evans says Panhandle residents and their prospective visitors have reason for optimism.

"We know we had successful nesting this year," he said. "I think we're looking at a good season."

FOOTBALL— USC has received permission from the Dallas Cowboys to talk with assistant coach Paul Hackett about the Trojan coaching job. Hackett, 39, was a USC assistant under John Robinson for four years in the late 1970s. Hackett prefers to remain in the NFL, but he said he would be foolish not to listen to an offer from USC.

Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon underwent shoulder surgery Friday, and Dr. Frank Jobe, who performed the operation, said the quarterback won't know until summer whether he'll be able to play football again.

DTs Scott Martin and Lindon Lilly, Nevada-Reno, have been suspended from today's NCAA Division I-AA semifinal playoff game after urinalyses showed they used steroids.

Dale T. "Dutch" Baughman, associate commissioner of the SWC will replace Bill Dooley as Virginia Tech AD. Baughman's first job will be to find a football coach to replace Dooley.

TENNIS— For the 10th consecutive year, ABC Sports will provide live coverage of the 1987 Tournament of Champions May 2-10 at the West Side Tennis Club and for the first time in the history of the tournament, a five-set final is scheduled.

YACHTING— Harold Cudmore, the skipper from Britain, where bookmaking is legal, gave some tips on the America's Cup. "New Zealand has the best overall performance, but America II is vulnerable. If there's heavy weather, Stars & Stripes (U.S.A.) and French Kiss (France) are very formidable. The wild combination of (San Francisco's) Tom Blackaller and USA could be like playing poker with a pack of jokers." USA, 7-2 in the crucial third and last round-robin, has a revolutionary bow rudder that works some times better than others.

GOLF— Brian Claar and Jody Rosenthal are Golf Digest-Rolex Watch 1986 Rookies of the Year. Claar earned $117,355 and Rosenthal earned $106,523, 18th on the LPGA list.

SOCCER— English soccer has spent $71.5 million in the last 10 years to combat violence by fans, according to the National Sports Council.

Celts' home streak ends

Associated Press

BOSTON — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 14 of his 26 points in the fourth period as the Los Angeles Lakers rallied from an eight-point deficit and ended the Celtics' 48-game Boston Garden winning streak Friday night with a 117-110 victory over the NBA defending champions.

Magic Johnson scored 31 points and James Worthy added 25 as the Lakers became the first visiting team to win in the Garden since Portland's 121-103 victory over the Celtics on Dec. 6, 1985.

Abdul-Jabbar, who sat out 18 minutes of the first half after picking up three fouls and then spent another four minutes on the bench in the third period after another foul, returned to action in the fourth quarter with Los Angeles trailing 94-88.

Less than two minutes into the period, the Celtics extended the margin to 98-90 before Abdul-Jabbar triggered a 19-6 run by the Lakers with two skyhooks. The spurs gave the Lakers a 109-104 lead with just over four minutes left.

The Celtics, who were led by Larry Bird with 26 points, got within three points before Abdul-Jabbar sank two more baskets on hooks and Johnson hit from the outside to cap the victory.

Nets 123, 76ers 90

Game Of The Week

Cleveland, 10-4, at Cincinnati, 9-5, noon. The Bengals lead the series 17-15 after winning five of the last six. The Bengals lost 24-6 last year at Cleveland. Cincinnati defeated the Browns 30-13 in the first game between the teams this year.

Speaking

"I didn't seek this job. I'm just happy that someone noticed me working in the vineyards." — George Young, general manager of the New York Giants, who was an administrator with Miami when he was offered the Giants' job on Valentine's Day in 1979.

The Long Of It

"What he did in college won't probably help him much. I think every time you have a guy that says, 'I've been in a big game,' he's going to get scared to death and have butterflies the first one he's back in, anyhow, and this is the one he's going to be in." — Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers on quarterback Chuck Long, who is scheduled to make his first NFL start Monday night against Chicago.

Mum's The Word

Atlanta Head Coach Dan Henning has banned players from talking with reporters until after Sunday's game with New Orleans. He said he wanted his players to "make their statement on Sunday."

When offensive tackle Mike Kenn, a nine-year veteran and a players' union vice president, was asked about the clause in players' contracts that requires cooperation with the press, he said: "I regretfully and respectfully decline to answer in accordance with my rights under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution. Sorry."

Henning instituted the ban after last week's 28-23 loss to Indianapolis, the Colts' first victory of the season.

Analogy Of The Week

"You ever see two stray dogs meet each other, look at each other and sniff around? Well, that's the way a new coach and a team approach each other a little bit." — Ron Meyer, who became Indianapolis coach Dec. 1.

Substitute rocks Witherspoon

NEW YORK (AP) — James "Bonecrusher" Smith, who got the fight as a substitute, knocked down Tim Witherspoon three times in the first round and won the World Boxing Association heavyweight championship Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

The shocking first-round victory will send Smith into a March 7 fight against unbeaten Mike Tyson, the World Boxing Council champion.

The third knockdown came with 48 seconds left in the opening round, and when Witherspoon hit the canvas, referee Luis Rivera halted the fight.

Smith, who got his second title chance when Tony Tubbs withdrew, claiming an injured left shoulder, came out firing, and Witherspoon never had a chance to adjust.

Witherspoon had spent several days fighting with promoter Don King and King's son, Carl, who is Witherspoon's manager. Witherspoon's attorney claimed a managerial contract — and also the contract for the fight — were null and void.

But the New York State Athletic Association ruled the contracts were valid.

Smith, who says he is about 31, charged off his stool and hit Witherspoon with a right hand. Smith then flailed away for 30 seconds before he fell down.

Smith stormed back to the attack and landed a right that put Witherspoon down to one knee. Witherspoon got up so quickly that Rivera didn't notice he was down and failed to call it a knockdown.

Smith then scored a knockdown with a left-right to the head.

It was the first time in the history of Madison Square Garden that the heavyweight championship had changed hands.

During the short time the bout lasted Smith landed 28 of 59 punches and Witherspoon, looking heavy, landed only seven punches.

UTA 68, Nicholls State 66

JONESBORO, Ark. — Guard Roderick Ford hit three free throws in the final 27 seconds to lift Texas-Arlington to victory in the first round of the Runnin' Joe Classic.

Texas-Arlington improved its record to 2-5 in advancing to Saturday's championship game. Nicholls State, which fell to 1-2, will play in Saturday's consolation round.

A pair of free throws by Craig Ferguson had put Nicholls State ahead with 56 seconds left before Ford put the game away. Ford, who finished with 17 points, made a free throw with 26 seconds left to tie the game, then hit two with 22 seconds remaining.

The two were certainly too much for the previously unbeaten Eagles, who were played nothing like they did in the first meeting. Steve White scored a game-high 21 points, all but 10 from the free throw line. White was a hard-luck five-of-16 from the floor.

"We changed defenses so many times, they didn't know how to attack it," Stephenson said. "It also shows you how much it means for us to play in the MHS Gymnasium. It's obvious the big advantage we have playing in this gym — we practice here every day."

"Hopefully this will get everybody behind us again, everyone had about given up," said Crawford. "Only the real faithful were here tonight."

For just the second time this season, the Bulldog faithful were rewarded with a real treat.

Morris challenges freeze

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — The World Series champion New York Mets got their man in Kevin McReynolds, while Jack Morris and Andre Dawson made bold moves sto challenge the free-agent freeze.

The Kansas City Royals filled a hole with Danny Tartabull and the Los Angeles Dodgers filled in their pitching staff.

Most of the other teams left the 85th annual baseball winter meetings with nothing more than a suntan. The week-long gathering was the slowest ever, with just seven trades for 21 major-league players.

"There are a lot of reasons. There are no trading deadlines and you're not sure about free agents," Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda said. "Now you call a team about a player and the other team asks you how much he is making and does he have a no-trade contract. It's tough to make a trade."

But, the Mets made it exciting at the end. The most aggressive club on the field last season, they used the same approach Thursday night in completing an eight-player deal with the San Diego Padres that fetched McReynolds.

"This is a team that's won the World Series and can do it again," McReynolds said from his Arkansas home Friday in a conference call.

That's just what the Mets were thinking.

Determined not to suffer the same fate as previous World Series winners, the Mets traded part of their future to solidify their present.

No team that has won the World Series has won its division the following year since the New York Yankees in 1978, and the Mets were well aware of that trend.

Like the Mets, Morris and Dawson were also aggressive this week. The two free-agent All-Stars said through their agent Dick Moss that they would not return to their teams next season — Morris to Detroit and Dawson with Montreal.

In doing so, they will be taking on the owners' recent indifference to the free-agent market. Last year, top free agents like Kirk Gibson said they got no offers from other than their own teams, a practice that resulted in the players' union filing a charge of collusion.

Morris said he wants to play for either the New York Yankees, California, Philadelphia or Minnesota, and Dawson listed his preferences as the Chicago Cubs followed by Atlanta.

Still, it remains to be seen how receptive those targeted teams will be now that they are on the spot to break ranks from the pack. So far, they are showing very lukewarm interest for the proven performers.

Detroit TV station WXYZ reported Friday night that Morris plans to sign with the Minnesota Twins.

Twins Vice President Andy MacPhail tried to avoid talking about Morris, instead commenting, instead, that Moss was "sharp."

Morris, who was 21-8 in 1986, reportedly was offered a two-year contract worth $2.5 million by the Tigers, but had said he wanted a longer term on the pact. Detroit General Manager Bill Lajoie declined to say whether the Tigers would improve their offer.

SMU verdict due Jan. 1

From Wire Reports

DALLAS — SMU hopes to learn from the NCAA by Jan. 1 whether it will be allowed to continue its collegiate football program, interim athletic director Dudley Parker said.

SMU will delay hiring a new head coach until then, Parker said.

Parker said the severity of past punishment makes him hopeful the NCAA won't shut down the football program because it has been penalized so much.

SMU, already serving a 2-year probation because of recruiting violations, fell in danger of NCAA abolition of its program for up to two years because of recent new allegations that led to Collins and Hitch resigning.

WFAA-TV of Dallas reported on Nov. 13 a player's claim that he received money monthly from Henry Lee Parker, an assistant to Hitch, and that the money continued to come for several months after SMU was placed on probation in August of 1985.

A day later, the Dallas Morning News reported that a current member of the team was living rent-free this fall in an apartment provided by an SMU alumnus.

Parker said Henry Lee Parker resigned on Friday. The athletic director said he personally would assume recruiting operations.

Gov.-elect Bill Clements, who is chairman of the SMU board of governors, emerged from a recent board meeting to say the allegations would be investigated carefully and that the board might itself shut down the Mustang football program if it were felt necessary.

Tway-Hulbert lead

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Bob Tway and Mike Hulbert maintained a deft putting touch to produce a 10-under-par 62 Friday and increase their lead to two strokes halfway through the $600,000 Chrysler PGA Team Invitational.

Hulbert scored a 30 on his own ball with six birdies on the back nine, and Tway added four birdies of his own as they ended the round with a best ball of 23-under 121.

The first-time team of Larry Rinker-Danny Briggs made a charge Friday with a 61 to move into second place at 123. Rinker recorded nine of the team's 11 birdies.

Gary Hallberg-Scott Hoch and Gary Koch-Tom Purtzer are at 124. Hallberg-Hoch shot a 63 Friday, while Koch-Purtzer fired a 62.

"The name of the game is to get yourself up for two shots at a birdie," Tway said. "When you have two people putting for birds on every hole there's no strategy to it."

The field of 75 starting duos will be cut to 28 plus ties for Sunday's finale.

New league formed

NEW ORLEANS — Six colleges in Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas on Friday announced formation of the new American South Athletic Conference, which will begin competition next fall.

"We believe that joining together to form this conference are six very, very fine academic institutions. Each has a rich athletic tradition," said Arkansas State University president Eugene Smith.

The conference will be made up of the University of New Orleans, Arkansas State University, Lamar University, Louisiana Tech University, Pan American University and Southwestern Louisiana.

Men's sports will include baseball, basketball, cross country, golf, indoor track and field, outdoor track and field. Women's sports will include basketball, cross country, indoor track and field, outdoor track and field, tennis and volleyball.

Martin apologizes

GREEN BAY, Wis. — An alleged grabbing incident involving Green Bay Packer lineman Charles Martin and a woman in a Green Bay tavern has been settled with an apology and a $500 payment.

The Green Bay Press-Gazette said in a copyright story that the deal was worked out after Packer Coach Forrest Gregg called the woman's brother a day or two following the incident "to find out what the woman wanted out of this."

The newspaper said the information on the case was in a Green Bay police department file which it viewed after filing a formal request under Wisconsin's Open Records Law. The alleged incident occurred in October.

Martin is serving a two-game suspension by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for slamming Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon to the ground after a play during a game Nov. 23 in Chicago.

In addition, the newspaper said, the woman told a reporter that Martin apologized in person to her and in a letter Thursday during a lunch-hour meeting at the Packers' office. The woman said Martin gave her a personal check for $500 to pay for clothing ruined when he threw a drink at her at the tavern.

Martin was accused of grabbing the 26-year-old woman indecently as she walked past him and then throwing his drink at her.

Falcons to vacate

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons will not play in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium after their lease expires in 1990, the team says.

"It is safe to assume that we are not going to be back there," Rankin Smith Jr. said. "It's no secret the Braves (baseball team) are the prime tenants and little is left for us."

The Falcons are sure a $154 million domed stadium will be built in downtown Atlanta, Smith said.

BOWLING BEAT

Jr. Tipton gives Fairmont first league 300

By RANDY ISENBERG

Before the second game in the His N Hers Mixed League one Monday evening at Fairmont Park Lanes, Jr. Tipton's most prized possession was a golf ball he had mounted after a hole in one.

Twelve frames later on Dec. 8, Tipton had another prized possession, a perfect game. Tipton, who has been rolling well all year, rolled his 12 strikes perfectly in the 1-3 pocket, never rolling an errant shot.

His pin point accuracy resulted in X after X being displayed on the Magic Score screen and stirred excitement in Tipton, who normally resembles Tom Landry while on the lanes.

Tipton's 300 was the first ever recorded in league play at Fairmont. George Spencer rolled a 299 game earlier this year. Tipton participates in two leagues, the His N Hers Mixed and the tough Civic Commercial League at Dellwood Lanes. He averages 191 in the Civic League, and 190 in the HNH loop.

In Thanksgiving Tournament activity, Tammy Windham took home the $400 first prize with a win over Ron Richmond who collected $200 for second place. Third went to Mike Boyer, fourth to Paul Cox and fifth to Patsy Cox.

In the World Class Doubles', Carol Miles and Martha Pauley swept first place honors for $350. Patsy Smith and Jerry Mayo were second worth $175. Jan and Bob Wooten took third, Ron Richmond and Tammy Windham were fourth and Weldon Brinkley and Larry White took fifth.

The next World Class Doubles tournament will be at Fairmont Park on Dec. 12-14 starting on Friday evening. Dellwood has slated a tournament for Dec. 26-28.

Dellwood will also be the site of the Walt Renton Memorial Adult-Youth tournament to be held Dec. 20 with squads starting at 10 a.m. and noon. For more information, contact Cory Sprague or Randy Isenberg at 697-7871...

McNeese names Jackson

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Sonny Jackson, who coached Nicholls State to 10 victories this past season, has been named football coach at McNeese State, the university announced Friday.

"We're very pleased to have Sonny Jackson at McNeese," McNeese president-elect Robert Hebert said. "We picked him because he's a winner and will fit in well. I'm confiden: that we've made the right choice.'

John McCann resigned seven games into McNeese's State's recent season, in which the team finished 2-9.

The nine-game losing streak was the longest in a single season for McNeese, which had just two losing seasons the past 16 years, including a 4-6-1 season in 1982.

McCann said when he resigned that he thought it was in the best interest of the program

Purgatory, Colo., 26 miles north of Durango, offers a wide range of trails, more choices than any other in the SW Colorado-NM area. Lift tickets are $19. Air service to Durango is by Mesa, Trans-Colorado from Albuquerque and Denver.

Air service to Telluride is by ground connection from Montrose, Durango, Cortez or Grand Junction. Lift ticket is $25. Fifty percent of the runs are intermediate and 15 per cent expert, but they"ll catch your attention like a late Charles Martin hit.

Santa Fe, 16 miles from the state capitol, replaced the old winding dirt road with hardtop a couple of years ago and improved base facilities last year. Lift tickets are $22.

Despite the yearly increase in lift tickets, they are still lower than those in other areas and without the irritating lines.

At Stowe and Killington in Vermont, lift tickets are in the $28-$30 range. In California, Alpine Meadows and Heavenly at $26 are the highs. In Colorado you'll pay $30 at Beaver Creek, $29 at Aspen, $27 at Steamboat and $30 at Vail.

In many areas, volunteers who offer their services in handling NASTAR races once a week. At Stowe, for example, it's free lift tickets while at Winter Park, help with the NASTAR and weekly special events, and it can bring a season's pass.

The Media piles on New York Giants' bandwagon

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Kenny Hill, the New York Giants' strong safety, walked out of the shower after New York's 24-14 victory in Washington Sunday and could barely push his way through the crowd back to his locker.

"I've never seen so much press in my life," he said.

"The bandwagon jumping has started," commented his teammate, running back Lee Rouson.

It's the secret ingredient in the Giants' 12-2 record this year and it's something the rest of the country can appreciate. Coach Bill Parcells and many of his players are inspired by the media hype — particularly the negative hype —that's surrounds the team.

As wide receiver Phil McConkey puts it: "Until now, the only people who really believed in us were the 45 people in this locker room."

It's basically a New York phenomenon.

NEWSPAPERS in Boston, Chicago, Denver and Dallas may devote more space and do far more analysis of their teams than the New York papers do for either the Jets or Giants. But there's a particularly shrill quality in New York, especially in the city's two tabloids and on the local television stations, that allows for no middle ground — if you win, you're the greatest team the NFL has ever seen; if you lose, you're the worst.

And all of it in shrieking headlines, as in the one, since rescinded because of a three-game losing streak, that four weeks ago proclaimed: "Jets are the Best."

Now, following the victory over Washington Sunday that put the them within a short step of their first NFC East championship, it's the Giants.

On Tuesday, the same tabloid that anointed the Jets devoted four pages to the Giants, including a full page that under a headline proclaiming "Giants Looking Real Super," proceeded to analyze possible Super Bowls between the Giants on the one hand and the Jets, Browns and Broncos on the other.

The newspaper also had scenarios of Super Bowls with the Redskins, Rams, Bears and 49ers representing the NFC, but ... well, you've gotta be a little bit fair, particularly with two regular-season games and the playoff to go.

WHAT the players remember and what motivates them is something different.

They remember the boos that cascaded down on quarterback Phil Simms even as the Giants were winning with rushing and defense early in the streak that grew to seven with the victory in Washington. They attributed that to what they viewed as unfair newspaper criticism of Simms.

After Simms had completed a fourth-and-17 pass that beat Minnesota, Parcells made a point of interrupting his post-game news conference to hug his quarterback as he entered the locker room. Then he turned to the the assembled media and intoned:

"I don't care what you guys say about this man. He's a great quarterback and I love him."

After Sunday's game in Washington, McConkey chose to accentuate the touchdown catch he had made by telling reporters surrounding him:

"I know everyone was writing that we had the worst receivers in the league. Well that was a lot of garbage and we're showing you that now."

IN FACT, Parcells loves that kind of thing because he believes it keeps his players from becoming complacent. His favorite phrase these days in response to questions that assume the Giants are already in Pasadena is "it's a 16-game season."

"We'll savor this victory until Wednesday, then get ready for St. Louis" says linebacker Harry Carson, the team's captain and semi-official spokesman. "I know the next question is will there be a letdown. No indeed. We've worked too hard and too long. Too many things have been said about not being able to win down here or against this team or that team.

"We'll stay mad."

In all-Ohio showcase game, Bengals favored over Browns

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Memo to Sam Wyche.

If you think that guy whose tape recorder you grabbed in Denver was obnoxious, think of the alternative — if your Bengals weren't winning, there wouldn't be anyone around with microphones to grab.

Wyche and the Bengals get the real showcaser Sunday when the Cleveland Browns come to Cincinnati for the game that will probably decide the AFC Central championship. The Browns are 10-4, the Bengals 9-5, but Cincinnati has the advantage of having won 30-13 in Cleveland, giving it a big tiebreaker advantage if it can win.

The Bengals are coming off their best offensive game ever against a good defensive team — 584 yards, including 300 on the ground in a 31-7 win over New England Sunday. The Browns are coming off a typical Cleveland win — a four-pointer over a not-very-good team, in this case Buffalo.

Cincinnati is a genuine offensive power, although New England's long injury list was bound to catch up with it at some point. Cleveland seems to be a genuinely gutty team — the Browns aren't particularly impressive, but they win.

The Bengals are favored by 3½. If their defense can play its occasional big game, which is a big if. ...

BENGALS, 28-24

Pro Picks

Washington (plus 3½) at Denver (Saturday)
Every time the Broncos play a good NFC team, the locals start yelling "Super Bowl Preview." Off last week, both teams better attend to first things first. First thing for the Broncos is home field for the playoffs.
BRONCOS, 20-14

Miami (plus 6½) at Los Angeles Rams
Eric Dickerson against Miami's dismal rushing defense. Dan Marino against the Rams' strong secondary.
RAMS 27-17

San Francisco (minus 2½) at New England
The 49ers caught the Jets in decline last week. The Patriots aren't exactly in decline, but their health is.
49ERS, 17-13

Pittsburgh (plus 6½) at New York Jets (Saturday)
The phrase the Jets keep using about the offense that's scored 16 points in three games is "out of synch." If they keep it up, they'll be out, period.
STEELERS, 21-20

St. Louis (plus 10½) at New York Giants
The Giants may be the NFC East champion by game time and they had their big game last week. But "letdown" doesn't seem to be in their vocabulary.
GIANTS, 24-9

Kansas City (plus 6½) at Raiders
Howie Long blames the artificial turf for the debacle in Seattle. You've gotta blame something. Pride and poise?
RAIDERS, 22-14

Green Bay (minus 4) at Tampa Bay
Does a Vinny loom in the Bucs' future?
PACKERS, 27-16

Buffalo (minus 3½) at Indianapolis
COLTS, 17-16

Chicago (minus 10) at Detroit (Monday Night)
This is getting boring.
BEARS, 13-10

Minnesota (minus 6½) at Houston
If these guys tie, Atlanta has a chance to make the playoffs.
They won't.
VIKINGS, 32-6

Other Games (Home Teams in CAPS)
DALLAS (minus 6½) 21, Philadelphia 16
New Orleans (pick 'em) 24, ATLANTA 16
SAN DIEGO (plus 2) 27, Seattle 20
Last week: 8-6 (spread) 8-6 (straight up)
Season: 100-89-2 (spread) 132-59 straight

Christmas tree of Memorial Christian Church, decorated with "Chrismons" (Christ monograms) made by church members.

Disciples adorn tree

The members of Memorial Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) saw the end results of much work and preparation Sunday when they held a special "Hanging of the Greens" service. Their church Christmas tree was decorated during the service with Chrismons made over the past few months by the church's members.

"Chrismon" is a combination of the words "Christ" and "monogram." Chrismons have been used in various denominations before, according to a church spokesman, but are new to much of the congregation of Memorial Christian Church.

Study of Mormons breaks stereotype

RELIGION

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A study by two Brigham Young University professors of successful Mormon families in Texas and seven other states has produced expected results, but also shattered some stereotypes, the researchers say.

More than 200 families were scrutinized by William G. Dyer and Phillip R. Kunz for their new book, "Effective Mormon Families," which describes several characteristics of a strong Mormon clan.

The families live in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Montana, Utah; Texas and Wyoming. Most follow traditional sex roles with father as provider and mother as full-time homemaker.

Among the shared traits are an atmosphere of love and unity, a strong husband-wife relationship, high church activity, abundant affection, a strong work ethic, and discipline stemming from high expectations and parental example.

"Most studies look at problems — divorce, abuse and so forth. We wanted to look at what makes families work," said Kunz, BYU professor of sociology.

Although the most effective families are faithful churchgoers — almost all of them full tithe payers and all strong believers in accepting every church calling — they don't meet stereotypical expectations in other ways, the authors said.

Only 28 percent said they always or usually read scriptures daily; 29 percent said they always had daily prayer and 66 percent always or usually held family home evening.

Many parents said they wanted to be more consistent in these areas but, with an average of six children, found it very difficult to get all family members together at the same time.

The study also found fewer rules and less strict discipline than might be expected.

"These families have few rules but high expectations. Strictness implies high control and a punishing attitude, and these families just aren't that way," said Dyer, former dean of the school of management at BYU.

Dyer said he also expected to find that most good Mormon families come from a traditional heritage, with the father a returned missionary and both parents products of stable Mormon homes.

"That just wasn't the case," he said. "The majority of fathers, (79 percent), had not gone on a mission and few of the fathers or mothers had graduated from seminary.

Many came from split or inactive families. "The crucial factor in their success is that they made a conscious decision they would be different. They developed their own patterns," the authors said.

The families studied were identified by stake presidents who were asked to choose the 15 best families in their stake. The two researchers specified that the families had to have children still at home and one or more old enough to go on a mission or be married.

"We wanted parents who had worked through the strains of the teen-age years with at least one of their children," the authors said.

For the study, parents answered a long survey that asked such questions as: What goals do you have for your family? Who does which jobs in the home? How do you discipline your children? How much time do you spend with your children?

In all, nearly 500 variables were examined. The authors also conducted several dozen in-depth interviews.

In the future, the team hopes to study effective Mormon families in other cultures as well as look at split families, single-parent families, and young families just starting out.

Order of sisters thriving while others question religious life

ALTON, Ill. (AP) — The 18 young women who took religious vows recently at St. Mary's Church in Alton were the largest group in anyone's memory for the local Sisters of St. Francis of the Martyr St. George.

The order, which has its convent at Saint Anthony's Hospital, is thriving in a time when many people have questioned the religious life.

Ordinarily, the ceremonies are held in the chapel that the convent shares with the hospital. But the large number taking vows and the 300 well-wishers forced the move to the larger church.

The 18 young women taking vows, ranging in age from 21 to 38, and in origin from Nigeria to Montana, make up about a fifth of the entire order in the United States. In addition, there are about 35 in Brazil.

The average age of the sisters in this hemisphere is 31, surprising in view of the well-publicized decline in religious vocations and the increasing number of aging nuns in many orders.

In an era in which women have many choices of vocation, those who choose poverty, chastity and obedience can be expected to have given it a great deal of thought.

A nun who made her final profession of vows at the ceremonies was Sister Eva-Maria Ackerman.

A college graduate in her native Texas, she was a working journalist when she began to believe that God was calling her. Through a Roman Catholic publication, she allowed word of her interest to get out.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

St. Luke's to conduct two Christmas season services

St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas, has two services planned to celebrate the Christmas season on Sunday.

A service of Advent and Christmas music will be presented at the 10:50 a.m. Sunday worship service. The program, presented by the Chancel choir, will include arrangements of familiar carols such as "Away in a Manger," "Silent Night," and "What Child is This." Also included will be ensembles and choruses from "Messiah," "Gloria," "Christmas Oratorio," and "Celebrate Life."

Soloists will be Don McCartney, Tom Savage, Jim Hartman, Nancy Barnhill, Vivian Moss, Tish Deffenbaugh, Carolyn Larson, Jackie Payne, Jill Hawley, Gail Hankinson, Debby Vester Leah Gerhard, and Bert Bostic.

McCartney, Barnhill, and Moss also will be featured as guest conductors. The program will be accompanied by Mona Ruth Dickson, organist, and Debby Vester.

On Sunday evening, more than 100 children in the graded choir program will present another service of Christmas music. Each of the four choirs will make an individual presentation for the program with scriptures read and carols sung by the congregation.

The worship service will conclude with Hal Hopson's mini Christmas musical, "A Night for Dancing." Soloists will be Eric Keathley as Matthew, Nancy Cunningham as Mary, and Wayne Hyde as Joseph.

Christmas program slated

Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course, will be presenting its fifth annual "Sounds of Christmas" program Sunday at 6 p.m.

The public is invited, at no charge, to attend the program to be held on the south lawn of the church, weather permitting. The program will be moved inside if the weather is bad. Rusty Collins, a church spokesman, advises those who plan to attend to dress warmly and bring extra covering.

The presentation will last about one hour and consists of Christmas songs sung by a barber shop quartet, a Christmas carol sing-along, and a puppet program, "The Littlest Shepherd," that tells the story of the birth of Christ.

Refreshments will be served following the program. For further information, call the church at 697-3221.

Church sets Advent concert

An Advent concert will be presented by the sanctuary choir, soloists and chamber orchestra of First Presbyterian Church, 7 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary.

The concert, under the direction of David D. Brensinger, interim director of music, will include Cantata No. 142, "Uns ist ein Kind geboren" (For Us a Child Is Born"), and "Gloria," by Antonio Vivaldi.

Soloists will include William Lucas, William McGavran, Janice Archer and Gloria McGavran.

The Rev. Russ Ritchel, senior minister of the church, said the public is invited to attend the concert.

Word of Life celebrates

Sunday has been designated as the time for the Christmas celebration service of the Word of Life Church by its pastor, Russ Austin. There will be one service only, beginning at 10 a.m. at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, 4300 W. Highway 80, Midland.

The adult choir will present a Christmas musical, "The Sounds of His Love," and Austin will be delivering the message.

The public is invited to attend the service. Child care for children through three years of age will be provided at Word of Life, 3838 W. Wall.

Speaker accents missions

Earl R. Martin

Foreign missions will be the emphasis in the worship services of Alamo Heights Baptist Church Sunday. The guest speaker for the services will be Earl R. Martin, professor of Missions and World Religions at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Martin served as a Southern Baptist missionary for 26 years. His positions during mission service were: Director of the Baptist Community Center in Nairobi, Kenya; professor in a Baptist seminary in Arusha, Tanzania; church development advisor in Kismu, Kenya; and founder and administrator of a Baptist mission in Rwanda.

Martin will present a message on foreign missions at the 11 a.m. service and will make a visual presentation at the 7 p.m. service.

Through the Lottie Moon Christmas offering for foreign missions, Southern Baptists assist in funding the ministries of 3,700 missionaries who serve in 106 countries. The Southern Baptist Convention goal is to raise $75 million through the offering this year. As a participating Southern Baptist church, Alamo Heights has established a monetary goal that will fund the cost of the Foreign Mission Board for approximately 16 minutes. Each minute of the operation of the foreign mission program costs $275.

The public is invited to participate in the services. Nursery facilities are available for children through three years of age.

Candlelight service set

The Choristers of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, under the direction of Darryl Knapp, will present their annual candlelight service Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

"Carols From Around the World" will be the theme of the service. The Burgundian carol "Patapan," performed by flutist Gloria Skeelman and harpist Troy Rodder, will be one of the many carols presented.

Other songs include the Spanish carol "Torches, Torches" and the Ukranian "Carol of the Bells."

In a setting of candlelight, the Choristers will begin the service in procession, chanting "Divinum Mysterium." Harp, flute, and handbell music will begin 30 minutes prior to the service.

The church is located at 1412 W. Illinois. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Crestview choir performs

The 75-voice sanctuary choir of Crestview Baptist Church will present the Christmas musical "Everlasting Light" ("A Christmas Carol for a Dark World") 7 p.m. Sunday.

Written by Claire Cloninger and Mark Heyes, the musical unfolds the story of "Christ, the Light of the World" through narration, drama, and choral presentation, with special lighting effects, and a guest appearance by the combined Young Musicians and Music Makers (approximately 90 children).

Under the direction of Ty Morris Jr., minister of music, the music will include both contemporary selections and familiar carols.

The church is located at 3300 Thomas, at the corner of Thomas and Midkiff. The public is invited to the service.

Youths chosen to college

AUSTIN — Doug Daehling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Del Daehling of Midland, and Mark Schneider, son of Mr. and Mrs. Billie Schneider of Midland, have been chosen as members of "Living Praise at Concordia Lutheran College in Austin.

"Living Praise" is a music and drama group which presents contemporary worship services. Members must possess talent in acting and in vocal and instrumental music.

Sancturary project begins

Construction began this week on a sanctuary, Sunday school and office facility for Our Savior's Lutheran Church. The church is being built on property owned on Neely Street between Midkiff and Lee High School.

The congregation has been worshipping at Grace Day Care Center, 5200 W. Illinois, since being organized in October of 1983. Dave Leonard Construction is the contractor for the 13,000 square foot facility. The interim and permanent financing is being provided by Texas American Bank of Midland. Completion of the project is expected to take about nine months.

Travis Broesche and Ben Boettcher of Brenham have provided the architectural plans for this first unit, and have made a master plan for the use of all three acres of the property.

The congregation was started as a mission by Lutheran Church Of The Risen Lord in Odessa. They supplied the pastoral ministry from their staff that included the Rev. James Otterness, Dr. John V. Halvorson, and the Rev. John Allen. Allen became the resident pastor in July of 1984, and Otterness became the pastor in August of 1985.

The church has over 200 members and also is served by the Rev. David Herman who assists with Bible teaching and preaching. Both pastors serve as volunteers without salary, according to a church spokesman. The spokesman also said the church has been self-supporting since its first service on Ash Wednesday in February of 1983.

The congregation will continue to meet at Grace Day Care Center until the sanctuary is complete.

FUM church choir carols

The Chancel Choir of First United Methodist Church will present "The Many Moods of Christmas" by Robert Shaw and Robert Russell Bennett Sunday as a part of the 10:30 a.m. worhsip service. The choir, accompanied by members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra as well as other local musicians, will be directed by Brad Kisner, director of music ministries. Additional accompaniment will be by Carol Hall, church organist.

"The Many Moods of Christmas" is a collection of eight Christmas carols, 'O Sanctissima," "Joy to the World," "Away in a Manger," "Fum, Fum, Fum," "Good Christian Men Rejoice," "Silent Night," "Patapan," and "O Come, All Ye Faithful."

The public is invited to attend and childcare is provided for all services. The church is located in downtown Midland at the corner of Main and Illinois streets.

Kelview juniors give musical

The Junior Choir of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, composed of children in grades three through six, will present a musical Wednesday evening.

"Little Christmas Lamb" is a musical drama about an orphan girl who only has a used stuffed lamb to give at the Christmas party. "Her lamb was rejected just as the 'Lamb of the World' was 2,000 years ago, even though both were gifts of love," said a church spokesman of the play.

Preceding the program will be a presentation in song by the preschool and first and second grade choirs beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Following the programs will be a church-wide Christmas fellowship.

Lunch Hour series begins

The Ministry of Music at First United Methodist Church is presenting its annual series of Lunch Hour Music for Advent and Christmas.

The programs are offered as the church's Christmas gift to the community, according to Brad Kisner, Minister of Music.

Darryl Knapp will perform organ music from 12:05 to 12:35 p.m. Wednesday.

The first concert was presented by Kevin Riehle of Lubbock. The second concert featured Brad and Jane Kisner, ministers of music at First UMC.

A soup and salad luncheon will be available one half hour before each concert in the fellowship hall.

The concert is free and there is a nominal charge for the lunch. The public is invited.

Grace gives royal banquet

"Imagine yourself in merry olde England, in the royal banquet hall of King Henry the Eighth. His majesty the King has invited you, along with all the other most important lords and ladies of the kingdom to a Christmas feast."

This is how Grace Presbyterian Church in Midland invites the public to its first annual Twelfth Night Madrigal Dinners. The banquet meal will consist of roast beef, russet potatoes, string beans almondine, and other foods. Entertainement will be provided by "jesters of the court," along with dinner music. The highlight of the evening will be a concert of Christmas music provided by the Royal Madrigal Singers.

The special seasonal program is being presented by the Chancel Choir of the church. The program will be offered Jan. 9 and 10 "to avoid the pre-Christmas rush," according to a spokesman of the church. Both performances will begin at 7 p.m. in the fellowship hall of the church.

Reservations will be accepted through Jan. 7 and can be made by calling the church office at 684-6542. Ticket prices are $10 for adults and $7.50 for children under 12 and senior citizens over 65. A free nursery for children under five is available by reservation only.

The Chancel Choir of Grace Presbyterian Church will present the cantata "In the Name of the Lord" Sunday at the 11 a.m. worship service.

Written by the composer lyricist team of Raymond Brown and Ragan Courtney, this work was the first cantata written with all electronic accompaniment, according to a spokesman of the church. Brown and Courtney also composed the musical "Celebrate Life."

Church organist Paul Thoma and UTPB music professor Steve Powell will accompany the choir on analog, digital, and sampling synthesizers for this performance. The work will feature a living nativity scene utilizing the church's youth and will be conducted by Tom Laney, minister of music.

The church is located at 2801 N. Garfield in Midland. The performance will be repeated at 4 p.m. at Trinity Towers on West Illinois.

The Season of Advent at
First Presbyterian Church
Midland, Texas

The Season of Advent is the beginning of the Christian calendar and is observed on the four Sundays before Christmas. The word Advent means "coming." The season is one of preparation and expectant-waiting as we look forward to the celebration of the Lord's coming on Christmas Day. Advent is the season of extending our confidence in "the things that are unseen" and marveling at the mystery of God becoming one of us.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Success depends more on what you do than on how you do it. Be on the lookout for unusual opportunities. An intriguing job offer could suddenly arise. You discover something about your family that you overlooked while you were growing up. A dramatic growth in your savings account is possible. Business travel proves to be a wise investment.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: World War II hero Gen. Jimmy Doolittle, long-time Maine Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, comic Morey Amsterdam, actress Patty Duke, BoSox slugging first baseman Bill Buckner, Hal Williams of "227," actor-dancer Dan Dailey, actress Lee Remick, drummer Charlie Rich, bandleader Spike Jones.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not attempt to conduct any important business today. Others are busy pursuing leisure time activities. You enjoy mixing friends and relatives together at a social affair.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Church activities hold special interest, especially for the parents of small fry. An older person shares his or her experiences, saving you time and money. Show your appreciation in tangible ways.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Catch up on pre-holiday chores. Trim the tree and decorate the house. Romance will be especially glamorous and exciting now. You meet someone who sets your heart racing. Play a waiting game.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Devote as much time as possible to creative work. Your sense of color is excellent. Rely on your intuition when it comes to handling delicate matters. Romance is rewarding. Be a good listener.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A red-letter day so long as you do not overwork or subject yourself to excessive physical strain. Use good judgment. An overly aggressive attitude will draw the wrong kind of attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make "caution" your watchword today. Exercise self-restraint when dealing with difficult people or situations. Loved one is counting on your support. Offer encouragement, not criticism.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep your eyes open and your mind on whatever you are doing. An impulsive remark or move could cause antagonism. Look for an opportunity to mix business with pleasure this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People are not always what they seem. Do not place too much trust in those you have just met. Re-evaluate partnerships -- both marital and business. Trust your intuition in financial dealings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your personal relationships are in the spotlight. Discuss your priorities and dreams with loved ones. Family get-togethers enjoy favorable influences.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you are in a rut, pay more attention to creative ideas. Formulating your own plans lets you move in interesting, new directions. Guard against careless mistakes. The financial outlook is rosy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take time out to discuss your holiday plans with family members. Loved ones need to know what you have in mind. Any reasonable idea receives a fair hearing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Plan ahead and hold discussions. Arguments could upset family harmony. The missing pieces of a puzzle fall into place. Romance begins to heat up.

Phylicia Rashad has daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — Phylicia Rashad, who plays Bill Cosby's wife on "The Cosby Show," has given birth to an 8-pound, 12-ounce girl, NBC announced Friday.

Mrs. Rashad, who plays Claire Huxtable on the hit NBC situation comedy, is married to NBC sportscaster Ahmad Rashad.

"Mother and daughter are doing fine," said an NBC spokesman.

Condola Phylea Rashad was born Thursday about 5:20 p.m. in an unidentified New York hospital. The baby, who was 22¼ inches long, is the Rashads' first child.

Director Jay Sandrich announced the birth over a "squawkbox" during taping of a "Cosby" segment to applause from the studio audience and a beaming Cosby, the spokesman said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Gov. Lamar Alexander, who leaves office next month and plans a six-month holiday in Australia, received some tongue-in-cheek Christmas gifts, including a boomerang.

The boomerang was inscribed, "What goes around comes around." It was presented Thursday during the annual Christmas party for the Capitol press corps.

Alexander also received a movie poster of the current box-office hit, "Crocodile Dundee," with Alexander's face superimposed over that of actor Paul Hogan.

Alexander, who's finishing his second four-year term, will be succeeded by Democrat Ned McWherter. Under state law, Alexander could not seek a third consecutive term.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Clara Peller, the "Where's the Beef?" lady of Wendy's television commercials, and Virginia Christine, who as Mrs. Olson has been pouring Folger's coffee for years, have been inducted into an advertising hall of fame.

Ms. Peller and Ms. Christine are the first humans to join such ad greats as the Jolly Green Giant, Speedy Alka Seltzer and the Pillsbury Doughboy.

The induction ceremonies into the hall of fame established by San Francisco's Museum of Modern Mythology took place Thursday night.

All the Wendy's commercials and more than 300 of the Folger's commercials broadcast in the last 21 years will be kept on file at the museum, said curator Ellen Weis.

BOSTON (AP) — While Boston Mayor Raymond L. Flynn dined on steak and chicken, a tow truck driver hauled off his official car.

"It was not the mayor's fault. It was my driver's fault for picking up his car," said Charles Karakostas, owner of Three Brothers Inc., which has a tow yard in South Boston, not far from Flynn's home.

Flynn's blue station wagon with three-digit license plate is well known to city officials and police. But it apparently did not impress the tow truck driver Thursday night.

Residents of a condominium near the Beacon Hill restaurant where the mayor was eating, it turned out, had called the tow truck to remove the car from the private street.

The car was returned within a half-hour.

"It was a minor mixup," said Flynn spokesman Frank Costello.

The 1987 honorees, who will appear at an awards congress Jan. 17, include Kathryn D. Sullivan, 35, of Houston, a NASA mission specialist, and Harold V. House, 28, mayor of Owensville, Ohio, and a vocational schoolteacher who worked to eliminate drugs from the town.

Others named were

Debra Angel, 27, of Reno, Nev., director of development and community resources for the Reno Salvation Army.

NEW YORK (AP) — Five pages of doodles and notes by Nixon White House aide John D. Ehrlichman, who served 18 months in prison for Watergate offenses, have been auctioned for $2,050.

One sketch, of former Attorney General Richard Kleindienst on the back of a page of notes Ehrlichman took during his trial, went for $300 at the auction Thursday night.

Other sketches were of Nixon on White House stationery; of former Treasury Secretary George Shultz, now secretary of state; and of former U.S. Sen. William Brock, R-Tenn., now labor secretary.

LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corp., which has the largest radio audience in the world, said Friday it will start a worldwide television news service if the government approves funding.

Executives of the state-financed corporation, noting the success of the private U.S. Cable News Network Inc., which broadcasts abroad, are eager for their own English-language foothold in the international television market.

They are asking the government for an extra 8 million pounds ($11.4 million) a year to run World News and contend that the BBC's prestige as the voice of Britain gives it the right to represent the nation on television screens around the world.

"To be broadcasting from London and to be believed around the world is not easily done. It has been achieved against the odds over 50 years," said John Tusa, managing director of BBC External Services.

"We feel we can provide a program of international television news to the world which we think nobody else at the moment is trying to do and nobody else is in a position to do."

Independent Television, a commercial network, says a British world TV service should be put out for bids, not just handed to the BBC.

Costa Ricans fear influx of refugees

By PAULINE JELINEK

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — United Nations employees scouting sites for new camps for Nicaraguan refugees say they sometimes have to drive around in unmarked cars to avoid "generalized panic and protest" from Costa Ricans.

Officials of the Office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees say the process of preparing for the displaced people has been virtually paralyzed for at least seven months because of strong and widespread opposition by the Costa Rican people.

At the same time, the Costa Rican government is bracing for a new wave of refugees it says is sure to come as the United States delivers $100 million in aid to Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government in neighboring Nicaragua.

The U.N. agency says it must return $1 million of its 1986 budget of $8.5 million, because the allotment included estimates for projects it could not start because of the opposition among Costa Ricans.

"It seems like everybody in Costa Rica knows what the UNHCR cars look like," said Jose Maria Mendiluce, director of the U.N. refugee office in Costa Rica.

"When one goes into the rural area, there is generalized panic and protests start."

U.N. and Costa Rican officials say much of the fear is unfounded and they have started an education campaign.

"It's like we are asking to build a jail next door. They immediately think we are bringing lepers, malaria, robbers and Contras," Mendiluce said.

Costa Rica has about 30,000 documented refugees, about 70 percent of them Nicaraguan, 20 percent Salvadoran and the rest from other Latin American countries. But the government loosely estimates there may be as many as 250,000 undocumented Nicaraguans living here.

That would amount to 10 percent of Costa Rica's population of 2.5 million, and it is generally considered an exaggeration.

The U.N. agency says the majority of refugees are women, children, families, old people and poor farm workers who have fled warfare in southern Nicaragua near the Costa Rican border.

But some men in refugee reception camps near the border readily tell visiting reporters they are waiting there until U.S. military supplies are delivered to the Contras and they are called to fight.

The U.N. agency says the reception camps were intended only to process refugees as they arrive. It says it wants to create more permanent camps in areas away from the border and where there is a shortage of Costa Rican laborers.

But people have been left in the border camps for months and in some cases years with no prospect for a regular home or work. The U.N. office says some flee the camps in despair and get into trouble, while others never even present themselves at the camps.

Costa Ricans, with their own problems of debt, employment and housing, say refugees are creating an immense burden on the country's economy.

They fear the deterioration of their education, health and other social service systems — things they have achieved through years of democratic rule while their Central American neighbors often struggled under military governments..

Mendiluce criticized a succession of local newspaper stories in recent months that he said attacked Nicaraguan refugees and "didn't totally correspond to reality."

He noted a case in the spring of a mass murder in which it was widely reported that the killers were Nicaraguans. They turned out to be Costa Ricans.

The Costa Rican Public Security Ministry says there are no figures to support contentions that foreigners create major crime problems.

Mendiluce says a feeling also has been created here that Nicaraguans bring "all types of diseases to the country and that any epidemic of any type comes from them."

The U.N. office agrees that most of a growing number of malaria cases in Costa Rica can be traced to refugees, who sometimes walk as long as a month through mountains and jungle to seek asylum here.

But it maintains that the solution lies in better services for the refugees.

"If this community opposition prevents us...from putting them in a community in a dignified way of life, the refugee will simply escape from the centers or won't present himself at the centers and will look for a solution individually in an uncontrolled way," Mendiluce said.

Horned owl sounds out prey

Remarkable for his hearing ability, the great horned owl has ears set unequally on his head. The left is larger, set lower and opens downward; the right ear, smaller, is set higher on the skull and opens upward.

This arrangement lets the owl receive, interpret and compare sounds and then, by triangulation, pinpoint his prey's exact position.

Alien arrests in Marfa sector 'just stopped'

By JENNIFER DIXON

McALLEN (AP) — The flow of illegal aliens pouring into Texas from Mexico has slowed down since President Reagan signed a new federal immigration bill, but Border Patrol officials say a combination of factors probably is responsible for the reduction.

Arrests in the rugged terrain covered by the Marfa sector "just stopped" in November, said sector chief Hugh Ruston. Arrests in the sector were down 54 percent in November, compared with November 1985, he said.

Elsewhere in Texas, arrests have fallen between 22 percent to 35 percent during the same period.

On Nov. 6, President Reagan signed a new immigration law that includes sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

"The true test of whether the bill is slowing down apprehensions will be in January or February," said Joe Garza, chief of the Laredo sector. "Once the sanctions are in place it will slow down the influx of illegals. That was the cornerstone of the bill."

The employer sanctions do not take effect for another 17 months and as that word spreads the number of illegal aliens entering Texas may once again increase, officials said.

The first six months from the bill's enactment are set aside to educate employers about the sanctions, followed by 12 months when employers will be cited, but not fined, for hiring illegal aliens. After the first 18 months, full sanctions will be in effect, said Jerry Hicks, deputy chief of the McAllen sector.

"We think there is something tied in here with immigration reform," Hicks said. "That's why things have slowed down. Employer sanctions are going to have a heavy impact — people are not going to come over if they can't get a job. If alien smugglers don't think there is going to be a market, entries are going to slow down."

Hicks said arrests of illegal aliens by McAllen sector agents are off 28 percent in November as compared with November 1985.

For the same period, arrests were off 35 percent in the Laredo sector, 24 percent in the Del Rio sector and 22 percent in the El Paso sector, said Border Patrol officials.

Officials said winter weather and the new law may be responsible for the declining number of apprehensions in their territories.

The size of the alien pool may also be down and that also could be a factor, said Tom Leupp, Del Rio deputy sector chief.

Leupp said fewer illegal aliens who live in the interior of the United States may be going back to Mexico for the weekends because of fears about the bill's sanctions. That could lower the number of aliens crossing the border, he said.

Increased Border Patrol personnel in Texas also may be a deterrent, Leupp said.

"I don't feel confident in saying one piece is the reason, but they all add up to the total picture."

Is Justice subverting Voting Rights Act?

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A granite monument honoring black Olympic hero Jesse Owens sits in a remote Oakville, Ala., park because the Lawrence County Commission wouldn't allow it on the courthouse lawn.

Blacks in Pierce County, Ga., still are waiting for the appointment of a black to work at the county courthouse, and wondering if they'll ever get a public pool — since private swimming facilities are only for whites.

County monuments, minority employment and swimming pool construction appear on the surface to be local issues. But black spokesmen in the two counties, and civil rights leaders nationally, view them as part of a growing dispute over the Reagan administration's enforcement of the Voting Rights Act.

"Custom, or tradition, is one of the hardest things to overcome. People are reluctant for change," admits Pierce County, Ga., chairman Forrest Sweat — who has promised the next courthouse job opening will go to a black for the first time.

William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, boasts of a "remarkable success story in ensuring equal voting opportunities" under the act, and calls department enforcement of the law "unprecedented in the protection afforded minority voters throughout the country."

BUT WILLIAM Quigley, general counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union in Louisiana, said the Sept. 19 Justice Department approval of an at-large president for Plaquemines Parish, La., "was devastating to blacks, not only politically, but spiritually." That position, he said, will remain in control of whites.

This is a county where the segregationist political machine of the late Leander H. Perez ruled for 50 years until 1983, when the first black member of the county commission was elected; and where as late as 1980, according to a black who worked there, the county hospital served the races from separate mustard jars.

The Voting Rights Act isn't supposed to cure all these ills. But it is designed to give blacks a chance to share state and local political power, and to end discriminatory voting practices.

One of the historic civil rights statutes of the 1960s, the act was passed in 1965 and re-enacted for 25 years in 1982.

The heart of the law is Section 5, which requires nine states and parts of seven others to obtain Justice Department approval for any changes in voting practices — an alternative to expensive, time-consuming lawsuits.

Changes can include redistricting, annexation, movement of a polling place, and even scheduling bond referendums. A department ruling is required within 60 days.

Subject to the law are Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia; and parts of California, Florida, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina and South Dakota.

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights says the act has been successful, with more than half of the nation's 6,400 black elected officials in jurisdictions subject to the Justice Department clearance procedure.

BUT NOW, the civil rights coalition says, "Having failed in Congress and the Supreme Court to weaken the protections of the Voting Rights Act, the Justice Department is trying again, this time by changing its own Section 5 regulations."

The dispute is complicated, but the bottom line is whether the department is applying a tougher or easier standard toward the submitted voting changes than previous administrations.

Everyone agrees the department must decide whether a proposed change intentionally discriminates against minorities and whether it would make things worse for minority voters.

But civil rights groups and 16 lawmakers from both parties have written Reynolds that Congress in 1982 intended for the department to force jurisdictions to meet an even tougher burden. This is called the "results" test.

This test says the change must not result "in a denial or abridgement of the right...to vote" regardless of the drafters' intentions.

While civil rights groups consider application of this standard crucial to successful enforcement of Section 5, Reynolds has reversed himself on the issue.

In early 1983, Reynolds signed a legal brief that stated, "Congress intended that...preclearance be denied if it is determined that a voting procedure violates" the results test.

Reynolds repeated the view in a September 1983 letter to Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, saying failure to apply the results test "would clearly frustrate the remedial purposes" of the department's approval procedure.

He reversed himself last August, telling the American Political Science Association the department's earlier position was "an incorrect one."

REYNOLDS SAID the test would no longer "be a permissible consideration" in the department's clearance process, because Congress meant for a federal court to make such a determination.

If necessary, he said, the department would approve a voting change and then ask a court to negate the plan on grounds it would result in discrimination. In 1983, however, Reynolds had told Hatch that such a course would be "wasteful and inefficient."

In a recent interview with The Associated Press, Reynolds appeared to return to his 1983 position.

"If you violate (the results standard) we're not going to clear the change," he said.

Reynolds added that except for "very few, extraordinary, bizarre cases," any proposed change that would result in discrimination also would have a discriminatory purpose or worsen conditions for blacks — and would already be objectionable on those grounds.

In the pre-Reagan years of 1965 to 1980, some 2.3 percent of the proposed voting changes were rejected by the Justice Department. The Reagan figure is appromixately 0.7 percent.

But department officials caution that local governments understand the law better now, and their submissions are less flawed than in the past.

WHILE THE legal arguments continue, those living under governmental systems cleared by the department are more concerned with the effect of the voting changes on their daily lives.

In Pierce County, Ga., the Justice Department on June 17 cleared district boundary lines that were already in use by the county school board but opposed by blacks, who never have elected a county commissioner or school board member.

Officers of the county branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said they protested to the Justice Department, receiving no response to their claim that a majority black district could have been created.

A branch vice president, Melvin Johnson, said blacks do not get equal services and cited the swimming pool request as an example.

"The county throws big numbers at us," he said. "The last thing they say is, 'Do you want your taxes to go up?' That is the stopper."

But Sweat, the county commission chairman, said he has obtained $900,000 in grants to rehabilitate homes and sewage systems and to pave roads to the black neighborhood adjoining Blackshear, Ga.

"A lot of whites complained, 'Why don't you do something for us?'" he said.

In Plaquemines Parish, La., where an employment application defamatory to blacks was distributed, Commissioner Luke Petrovich said race was not a factor in the decision to take operating authority of county executive departments away from the nine commissioners and give it to an at-large chairman.

THE OLD system, Petrovich said, "was untenable" because there were always political tradeoffs: "You approve my budget and I'll approve yours; you hire my people, I'll hire yours."

Blacks, who have one member among the nine commissioners, argued that their power would be diluted, because they would never elect the at-large chairman in the predominantly white county. The Justice Department disagreed and approved the plan Sept. 19.

On Oct. 20, the department approved a new system of five districts, including one with a majority of blacks, plus an at-large chairman for Lawrence County, Ala.

The next day, in a separate court case, a federal judge threw out the at-large seat and left only district commissioners, as blacks wanted.

"I don't believe the chairperson-at-large violates anybody's rights," said Lawrence County Commissioner Earl "Sonny" Malcom Jr.

Vietnam veteran's battles continue after war's end

AP Laserphoto

Roy Benavidez, a Green Beret who earned the Congressional Medal of Honor, poses with the Vietnam Memorial in San Antonio.

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — When Roy Benavidez first saw the new Vietnam Memorial in San Antonio he heard echoes of a distant war mixed with memories of his buddies who stood at his side in moments of mortal danger.

The memorial statue is of a kneeling soldier looking toward the sky while holding a fallen friend. For Benavidez, a Green Beret who earned the Congressional Medal of Honor, the sculpted figures recall a time of struggle and pain.

"It was an eery feeling," he said of the statue. "I could hear the rotors of helicopters behind me. It just brings back a lot of memories."

It's been nearly 20 years since Benavidez knew combat in Vietnam, but there is yet a lingering ache from wounds he suffered there. And, also, there's a powerful feeling of kinship for others who also fought in America's longest war and returned to an uncaring nation.

"What keeps me going is wanting to help my buddies, those Vietnam veterans who think society completely neglected them," he said. "I keep getting letters from veterans thanking me for standing up and helping them. I haven't done anything that my buddies would not have done for me."

It was what Benavidez did for his buddies in combat that earned him the nation's highest honor for valor.

On May 2, 1968, near Loc Ninh, Vietnam, enemy fire downed U.S. helicopters and trapped eight soldiers in the wreckage.

With mortar and bullets crackling about him, and enemy closing for hand-to-hand combat, Benavidez pulled the eight from the disabled craft and helped them into a rescue chopper. He was shot in the abdomen, back, thigh, head and arms, and was clubbed by an attacker. But he managed to rescue his buddies.

Benavidez was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for his actions. Friends said it wasn't enough. They urged him to seek the Congessional Medal of Honor.

For 12 years he battled government red tape and searched for soldiers who could confirm the action of that day.

The witnesses came forward and President Reagan in 1981 awarded Benavidez the nation's top medal for combat courage.

Benavidez said he sought the citation because he felt he deserved it.

"Some may say 'He's just a cry baby and wants an award.' Hey, you don't ask for the Medal of Honor. You earn it. You don't win it," Benavidez said.

Then he adds: "The real heroes are the ones who gave their lives for their country. I don't like to be called a hero. I just did what I was trained to do."

Roy Benavidez's battles were not over.

Not long after receiving praise and a medal from President Reagan, the government tightened up on Social Security benefits. Disability payments for Benavidez and for some 350,000 other Americans were cut off.

Benavidez, 50, still carries shrapnel in his chest from that day in Loc Nihn. His body is etched with scars. And his three daughters also feel some of the pain of that long ago war.

"They get bombarded with questions about their dad because (other people) see him on television and see him in newspapers and tell them how lucky they are to have a dad like that and their response is, 'If you only could see my dad when he's hurting from those wounds; if you read the letters that he receives from his buddies' widows, sons and daughters; if you just see the sadness in his face you would not like to have my dad as a dad,' " Benavidez said.

Child's cocaine death shocks town into action

By DORALISA PILARTE

HEREFORD (AP) — Residents here still don't consider their little farming community a drug capital, but the cocaine death of a 9-year-old boy shocked them into action.

On Aug. 17, two weeks before he was to start the third grade, Manuel Saucedo died of a severe allergic reaction to a small amount of cocaine, according to forensic pathologists.

How he got the drug remains a mystery and is still under investigation.

But the fact that such a young child died from drugs has become a focal point for worried parents and school officials.

The school board is seriously considering getting a drug-sniffing dog.

The local Elks Club recently sponsored a drug paraphernalia exhibit at the Hereford Community Center parking lot.

A program showing teachers how to spot drug use among students was started ahead of schedule.

A panel of experts on illegal drugs spoke to a standing-room-only crowd of parents shortly after the cause of Manuel's death was reported.

"And we were competing with Monday night football that night," recalls Mary Johnson, a deputy with the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office.

"This is not the drug capital of the world," said Marc Williamson, assistant superintendent for instruction in the Hereford Independent School District. "I moved here because of the traditional values this community engenders — trustworthiness, respect, honesty."

"But anyone who says we don't have a drug problem is sticking his head in the sand," said Williamson, a native of San Marcos, a town between Austin and San Antonio. "What I think has happened is...(Manuel's death) has helped crystallize efforts. It acts as a catalyst to bring the community together."

Manuel was among the 5,000 children in the school district in Deaf Smith County.

He died from a severe allergic reaction to a minute amount of cocaine, said forensic pathologist Ralph Erdmann, who conducted the autopsy. Erdmann says Manuel must have been exposed to cocaine previously in order for the child's slight body to develop a hypersensitivity to it.

At first, the town wondered how a 9-year-old boy in a town of 18,000 got entangled with drugs in the first place.

Then it became concern that if it could happen to Manuel, it could happen to others.

Jeri Curtis Shire, news editor at the Hereford Brand, didn't wait to find out.

"I don't have any children, but I know a lot of kids through church," she said. "I get tired of the small-town feeling that if we ignore it, it'll go away, the 'not my kids' syndrome. You never know what child it's going to hit.

"We're not going to be affected by that (drugs) as soon as Dallas or Houston, but we'll get it."

Soon after the news of the autopsy report spread around town, Ms. Shire called Deputy Mary Johnson and the two organized the panel of drug experts who spoke to a large group of parents.

"DR. TIM Revell, the one who saw Manuel the night he died, paid us a surprise visit," Ms. Johnson said. "He stood a 9-year-old on a chair before all those people and told them, 'He's alive,' meaning that we could do something. Talk about getting the people's attention."

"That's closing the gate after the cows got out," said Williamson. "But one (dead child) is too many."

But the circumstances of Manuel's death remain shrouded in mystery.

On the night he died, his parents, Hector and Juanita "Janey" Saucedo, were trying to reconcile since their divorce, said Hereford Police Sgt. Sammy Sanchez, who is in charge of the investigation.

Former migrant workers who settled in Hereford, the Saucedos had just moved with their five children — Jerry, 17; Hector Jr. 14; Sandra, 12; Manuel and 3-year-old David — into the Palo Duro Apartments.

Groups of unwashed children and a strong smell of urine in the dark foyer greet visitors to the building, once a pretty house with stucco walls and curlicue moldings whose rooms have been turned into single apartments.

The night before Manuel died, the Saucedos were upstairs in Apartment 14 while Jerry and Manuel watched television in a downstairs unit, said Ms. Saucedo.

"At about 7:30 we heard him shout and Hector ran down to see what was wrong," said Ms. Saucedo, a frail woman whose missing front teeth and deeply lined face make her look older than her 40 years.

Much later, he screamed again, she said, "but by this time he was limp. We threw cold water on him. I put a piece of onion close to his nose to revive him. Then Jerry carried him to the hospital," one block away from the apartments.

Erdmann said Manuel died shortly after he arrived at Deaf Smith County General Hospital.

"WHAT HE had was just traces (of cocaine). He had not taken a large amount. It's called an anaphytactoid response, it's an explosive type of allergic response at the cellular level. He died of slow heart failure, which in a 9-year-old is unusual. Otherwise, he was a healthy 9-year-old."

Ms. Saucedo described Manuel as an independent child and said she doesn't know how he got the cocaine. "He liked to run around with older kids. He was stubborn and rebellious. But I never saw (him with any drugs)."

Investigators are still trying to figure that out.

"The case is not closed," said Sanchez. "It's come to a standstill."

He cited lack of cooperation from the boy's brother, Jerry, who police believe might have information about the case, but who has not been charged with any crime.

Juanita Saucedo is now living with her 69-year-old mother in No. 14 at Tierra Blanca Apartments, a clump of rundown dwellings around a dirt courtyard littered with rusting cans and stray dogs. Jerry Saucedo lives in another unit nearby. The three earn money working in the surrounding corn and sugar beet fields.

Hector Saucedo works at the Holly Sugar refinery, one of the largest employers in town. At night he goes to the county jail. His probation on driving while intoxicated was revoked when he was arrested on an assault charge.

Saucedo's relatives took the rest of the children to Crystal City in South Texas.

Sanchez, himself the son of migrant workers, says the investigation is not closed.

"We're treating it as a homicide," he said. "No information has come in. It may be because it's a 9-year-old and somebody out there is really scared."

New York paper's columnist sets tongues wagging

ENTERTAINMENT

By PAUL ROSENFIELD
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — "Gossip is news running ahead of itself in a red satin dress," says Liz Smith, the latest and loudest practitioner of the fixture of American journalism known as the gossip column.

The gossip star of New York holds what's left of the star columnist torch passed on by Walter Winchell and Dorothy Kilgallen. She's a post-Watergate phenomenon now in her 11th year at the New York Daily News, at the top of the heap of Manhattan gossip columnists. (Ms. Smith also is syndicated in about 60 papers). People who know things want to tell them. Mostly, in Manhattan, they want to tell them to Liz Smith.

If the name Liz Smith means nothing in Peoria, it means much to the powers that be in show business. Her column is pouched on an overnight basis to Hollywood studio chiefs, agents, producers and others. And they react, and overreact.

As David McClintick put it in "Indecent Exposure," Ms. Smith has "redefined gossip and elevated it to a new level of respectability." McClintick defines her column as a "new form of gossip journalism."

Example: Ms. Smith recently printed "the possibility," as she put it, "that Richard Pryor might have AIDS. The rumors were rampant, and not because of homosexuality," Ms. Smith explained. "I printed a list of reasons, praying it wasn't true. But the talk was everywhere. Richard had admittedly been an intravenous drug user, and he'd had a lot of blood transfusions...Well, I was laid to filth by my friend (Paramount production president) Dawn Steel, saying how could I do this? Studio heads see the column faster than anybody."

Ms. Smith has been right — it was she who "kept the drum fires burning" in the David Begelman check-forging scandal and persuaded chief witness Cliff Robertson to break it, and Ms. Smith knows that. She loves to recall the broadcast about Joan Kennedy moving to Boston while Ted Kennedy remained in Virginia. "Rose Kennedy saw it and said: 'Who's Virginia?' " The story is funny every time Ms. Smith tells it. But one can't do four columns a week, two broadcasts a week, four (or more) parties a week, four sessions with a hairdresser a week — and still be Dorothy Parker.

So Ms. Smith doesn't try, and thus the column is considered lively without being stylishly written. Nor is it a pulpit for star making. In "All About Eve," the waspish columnist Addison DeWitt (George Sanders) made something of a star out of Eve Harrington. Ms. Smith isn't above plugging a personality or a project — for example, in recent months she has helped lengthen the run of the Broadway revival of "Arsenic and Old Lace" (against a pan from the New York Times) but she doesn't want to play savior.

Nor is she about to unmake anyone, a la the brutal J.J. Hunsecker (Burt Lancaster) in "Sweet Smell of Success." Instead Ms. Smith has a minimum of enemies (which is not to say she has none). But when insiders say they have troubles with Ms. Smith, they usually mean they can't get through to her.

The reason may be Saint Clair Pugh, a brusque, briskly effective man of indeterminate age who fits Ms. Smith like an argyle sock. At 63 Ms. Smith is herself precisely and undisguisedly "post-menopausal," as she puts it. She hasn't glamoured her image, as has her friend Barbara Walters or her rival Aileen "Suzy" Mehle.

Ms. Smith and Pugh are very much synchronized; they see the column as work-work-work. Going to a party is work. An evening of theater is work. Pugh helps decide which things should and shouldn't be covered. He shouldn't be discounted — and can't be: To crack the ice with Pugh is like cracking a safe at Chase Manhattan. Only after weeks of plea bargaining did he concede that a reporter could see Ms. Smith at work, at home, not just at parties and over the requisite lunch.

"But," he kept insisting, "she doesn't let reporters see her at home, ever." Ms. Smith says of Pugh: "People say he can be a tough guy. And I say, 'Yes, but he's my tough guy!' "

Pugh is more like a major-domo, indispensable at a job nobody really understands.

Example: When writer Dominick Dunne calls, he knows to talk to Pugh and spare Ms. Smith one more call. When a less savvy publicist calls and wants "to talk to Miss Ms. Smith," he or she gets nowhere. ("We only take exclusive items on major stars," Pugh told a major Hollywood publicist recently; the publicist hung up). Knowing Pugh is knowing power.

What Ms. Smith does in reality is so unglamorous it would send broadcast journalism students back to film school. In a robe or a T-shirt, she sits in a 9x12 room facing an unbeautiful one-window slice of Manhattan and she types, using an old Texas Instruments typewriter and an earphone and a stopwatch to time and hea herself.

She chooses the items. She asks Pugh for credits. She wonders what's on the record, and off, but then she just types it all up. And reads it aloud. Not waiting for perfection, or inspiration — but often while waiting for a cab — she snatches time and writes columns.

'Jihad' documents effects of war

By KATHRYN BAKER

NEW YORK (AP) — The documentary "Jihad" opens quietly — a turbaned Afghan sleeps in the dusty sunlight, a voice on an old radio chattering softly in the background. "This is Radio Moscow World Service," it announces matter-of-factly.

Cut to eery, long shots of Soviet helicopter gunships swooping in across the low, rolling hills, while a narrator cites the facts of the 1979 Soviet invasion of Afghanistan — that there are 120,000 Soviet soldiers occupying the country, that most of the middle class who opposed the communists have fled, that only the peasants are left to fight.

These are the rebel soldiers, the mujahedeen. They are waging what they call a holy war — or "Jihad" — against the Soviet invaders.

"Jihad" airs Sunday on WTBS' National Geographic "Explorer" series.

It is not for kids or the faint-hearted:

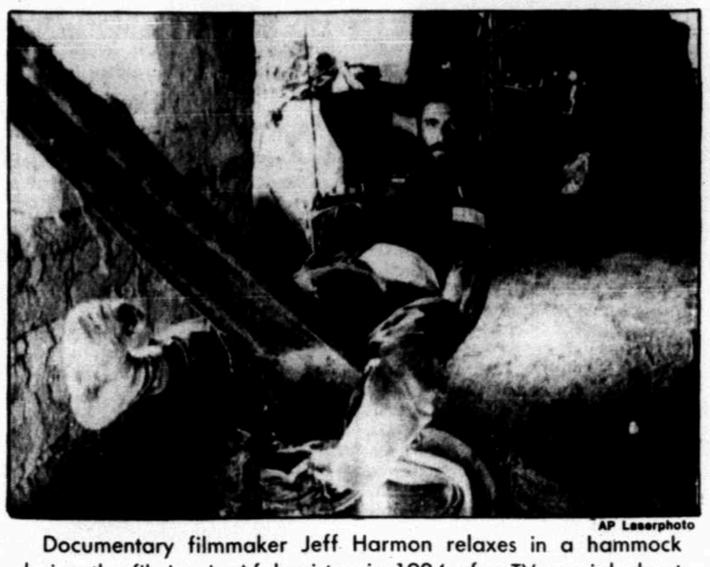

The rebels' executioner demonstrates his head-lopping technique for the camera while recently captured Afghan prisoners watch uneasily.

A 9-year-old boy tells of sneaking through the city streets to assassinate Soviet soldiers.

A rebel shows the camera the grave of a Cuban soldier, his booted foot still protruding from the ground.

Filmmaker Jeff Harmon captured not just the facts of the war during his filming of it in 1984, but the way of life that the war in Afghanistan had become.

"War is good," Ismael, a teenager, says through an interpreter. "Everyday I fight. I like war a lot."

AP Laserphoto

Documentary filmmaker Jeff Harmon relaxes in a hammock during the filming in Afghanistan in 1984 of a TV special about the holy war — or "Jihad" — rebels are waging against Soviet invaders.

Harmon, 32, is originally from Los Angeles, but his speech is stilted and vaguely British.

His documentary on the war in El Salvador, "The Front Line," won the Grand Award at the Houston International Film Festival in 1984.

He talks about picking a war the way a college-bound senior discusses the choice of a university.

"I was originally going to go to Lebanon, but I really got hooked on this idea of 19th-century Islamic holy warriors fighting with archaic weapons against a modern superpower, fighting against seemingly impossible odds. This really intrigued me," he said in an interview.

Harmon said he was particularly intrigued by the charismatic mujahedeen leader, Haji Abdul Latif, the 76-year-old "Lion of Kandahar" — "somebody Anthony Quinn would play in the feature film."

Latif is no sweetheart. The camera shows him shoving aside an elderly woman and later yelling obscenities at an inquisitive child.

"If you want to find saints, you won't find them in a battlefield," says Harmon, who plainly admires the mujahedeen, with whom he lived for several months. Many of them gave their lives for his film, he said.

"The Soviet and Afghan armies found out about me and my cameraman and co-producer Alexander Lindsay and launched an operation to capture and kill us," Harmon said. "In that operation, 27 mujahedeen were killed and 35 were injured. Two mujahedeen next to me were riddled with shapnel from an exploding tank shell. We were forced to hide out for three days and three nights, helicopter gunships searching for us."

Harmon said the last journalist in Kandahar, the Afghanistan city where the fighting is centered, was seized by the Soviets more than a year before Harmon and Lindsay arrived. The French government protested and the journalist was released.

Charles Thornton, a reporter for the Arizona Republic who entered the country after Harmon and Lindsay, was killed in the fighting.

When asked why he makes such dangerous films, Harmon responds almost indignantly.

"Why do anything? Why cross the street in life? You make a commitment in life and you do it. One has to live by an honor code, one has to make a decision in one's life. If one is interested in comfort and one is interested in making money, that's fine. If one is interested in making an impact in one's life, if one is interested in pursuing history, then one has to take risks.

"I accepted my own death a long time ago," he said. "I'm already dead. That's why I'm alive."

Harmon says he "has one or two good wars left in me," but wants to make feature films.

"I've taken so many risks, too many perhaps," he said.

Couple's hot sauce 'Hell on Red'

TELEPHONE, Texas (AP) — When Pat Baugh turned her husband, Thomas, loose in the family kitchen she had no idea what kind of a revolution he was creating.

Today there are two corporations operating in this tiny Texas town by the Red River just because of the cooking expertise of Baugh, a one-time Army cook.

In fact, Baugh's "Hell on Red" hot sauce has created a new cult of fans reminiscent of a certain beer following.

It wasn't too long ago when the press carried stories of people driving cross country to buy Coors beer. Columnists wrote stories about the Coors mystique, seeking to rationalize why people would drive hundreds of miles just to buy Coors beer.

Here in Telephone, there is a similar phenomenon. The Baughs have learned that "Hell on the Red" has no fury like a customer scorned of an opportunity to purchase this sizzling hot sauce. Baugh quit his job of 20 years with General Cable to put his "Hell on the Red" on the road.

Today, when the postman rings at Telephone, there is another stack of letters from new "Hell on the Red" fans who are frustrated when they can't find it in their local grocery stores.

"They are vacationing through some of the seven states where we have distributors and they were able to try a jar. When they get back hme they can't find it so they write," said Mrs. Baugh.

A letter writer from Spokane, Wash., wanted to know where in Washington to buy "Hell on Red." Then, like most others, the writer wanted to know if a case could be shipped directly.

"Best dip we have ever tasted!" wrote a Tennessee woman, seeking to know where she could get more.

"What is its shelf life? We understand we can't buy it where we live and we want to take a supply with us," wrote another Texas visitor who lives in Alabama.

"We just finished our last bottle of "Hell on the Red" that we bought in Texas. Ship us a case," wrote a New Yorker.

"The letters are all the same. They are seeking to find out where they can buy "Hell on the Red" and our related products. The letter writers tell us that they have never found anything to equal our spicy products," Mrs. Baugh said.

Mrs. Baugh says it was tough getting her husband out of the kitchen once he launched production of his hot sauce.

Baugh first added a hot mustard to his hot red sauce line. Then chili fixings, barbecue sauce and a hot cheese dip joined the "Hell on the Red" family.

"Now he has branched off into another line of products he calls "Sandwich Express" and created another corporation to handle this line," Mrs. Baugh said.

The new firm is called Kel-Do Corp. with Baugh as president and his wife as vice president.

"These items are along the line of Hamburger Helper. They are a prepared mix with a 10-week shelf life for tuna salad mix, ham salad mix and chicken salad mix.

"All the customer adds is the tuna, ham or chicken salad," Mrs. Baugh said.

The two corporations are keeping Baugh on the road. In fact, for the first time in the four years "Hell on the Red" has been marketed, the Baughs missed having a booth at the State Fair of Texas.

"We both have been busy with in-store promotions of the new mixes," she said.

Mrs. Baugh says she had more of a role in the recipes used in the three "Sandwich Express" mixes. "My husband simply modified my recipes," she said.

Mrs. Baugh says the growth of their business that turned her husband from an hourly wage earner into a gourmet entrepreneur has put a lot of stress on them both.

"We have contracted out the "Sandwich Express" business. We just didn't feel like expanding too fast. The product is made to our specifications, is packaged and delivered to us. We ship everything out of Telephone," she said.

Let's talk about Real Estate...

As an eternal optimist I am constantly looking for encouraging indicators in the real estate market. Unfortunately after an analysis of MLS figures, the best I can say is that activity on our market has changed very little over the past three years.

Approximately the same number of properties are for sale: 1589 currently, 1465 in December, 1985, and 1594 in 1984. In both 1986 and 1984, approximately 1270 were sold in the first 11 months of the year, and 140 less were sold in the intervening year of 1985. Dollar volume for 1986 is off a minor 5% over 1984, and an encouraging 25% improvement is being experienced in the average number of days a property is on the market before it is sold-from 140 two years ago to 106 currently.

So you can see-news of the market is not discouraging, even though not as wonderfully encouraging as we would all like it to be! Let's look forward to '87!

Joanne Langston.
