Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA — Pampa police were looking for a small, late model stationwagon today in connection with the theft of almost $900 in cash and jewelry.

Officers said Lester Martin Woodruff, 28, of 1031 N. Sumner, reported that $861 worth of jewelry and cash were taken from him about a month ago. Authorities said Woodruff reported the theft Monday.

Law enforcement officers said Woodruff apparently let two women in his apartment about a month ago, then went into another room. When he returned, they were gone and several items were missing.

Officers said the women were reported to have been driving a small stationwagon.

LEFORS — The district tax roll will top the agenda for the Lefors school board meeting tonight.

The board of education of the Lefors Independent School District is expected to approve the school tax roll for the 1994-95 academic year in its meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. today at the Lefors Elementary School library.

According to the agenda, trustees are to vote on accepting bids on city lots, discuss the fire department use of school facilities and discuss facilities for the handicapped.

The board is also expected to nominate their representative to the Gray County Appraisal Board, according to school officials.

PANHANDLE — An audit report and election judges will be among the items discussed at this week's Carson County Commissioners Court meeting.

Brown-Graham Company is scheduled to present the audit report during the commission's meeting at 10 a.m. Friday in the Carson County courthouse.

Commissioners are also scheduled to discuss the selection of election judges for early voting, county officials said.

Among other things on the commissioners' agenda for Friday's meeting are right-of-way and easements discussions, indigent care and roads, labor and machinery.

PAMPA — Police today were investigating two unrelated reports of criminal mischief.

Officers said Daniel D. Snider, director of Lovett Library, reported damage to a hand rail at the library, and Israel Silva Ulloa, a City of Pampa employee, reported damage to restroom facilities in Central Park over the weekend.

Authorities said Snider reported that a hand rail at the library was apparently damaged between 5 p.m. Saturday and 11:45 a.m. Monday.

Ulloa reported graffiti had been spray painted on the walls of the public restrooms in Central Park between Friday afternoon and Monday morning.

PAMPA — Pampa police were searching for a blue and silver pickup in connection with a reported water balloon assault that damaged the car of a Gray County justice of the peace.

Bob Muns, 55, of 1920 N. Lynn, Gray County Justice of the Peace for Precinct 1, told officers that what appeared to be a water balloon was thrown at his car about 2:30 p.m. Monday on 23rd Street between Nelson and Wells.

Officers said a lens covering a light on Muns' car was broken.

Authorities said they were searching for a 1989 Dodge pickup truck in connection with the incident.

PAMPA — Pampa police today were investigating the reported theft of tools from the back of a pickup.

Daniel Robert Stokes, 20, of 1107 S. Hobart, told police about $350 worth of tools were taken from the back of his 1984 white Ford pickup between 6:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Monday.

Officers said the pickup was parked on the street near the intersection of Russell and Cook.

Clinton: Iraq still moving toward Kuwait

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Refusing to take Saddam Hussein at his word, President Clinton vowed today to "stay on course" with bolstered U.S. firepower despite claims from Baghdad that it pulled back from the border of oil-rich Kuwait.

In a brief statement before making a political trip to Michigan, Clinton said there was no evidence of an Iraqi withdrawal. His foreign policy advisers said Iraqi troops were still moving south toward Kuwait.

"There has been no change in the pattern of Iraqi activity from yesterday, so we will continue with our deployment," Clinton said. "We will just simply stay on course and judge what we should do as events unfold."

Several administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, cautioned against making a judgement on Iraq's intentions before more details were available later today. One senior aide said no new Iraqi units were on the move and Iraqi's movements southward today "are not completely unexpected." He said the United States realizes "there's a certain momentum to military units and I'm not surprised about this."

Said Clinton, "I'm quite encouraged about the direction of events."

Iraq's ambassador to the U.N., Nizar Hamdoun, said all Iraqi troops have moved to the north except for two regiments that will leave in the next 24 hours.

"I don't know why the U.S. administration is really trying to cover up on this Iraqi withdrawal," he told CNN. "In 24 hours, there will be nothing left."

Defense Secretary William Perry predicted Monday night that Iraq would withdraw its troops. Looking ahead, U.S. officials were considering asking the United Nations to make a wide zone near the Kuwaiti border off-limits.

Madeleine Albright, ambassador to the United Nations, told CBS it is imperative that steps be taken to ensure that Saddam "cannot continue to mess with us all the time." She did not elaborate.

Clinton, who has talked to several world leaders in the last 24 hours, said Britain has promised more troops and planes. He did not elaborate.

"We received strong support from the international community," he said.

His comments came just hours after he doubled U.S. airpower in the Gulf and told

Americans in a prime-time address that Iraqi leader Saddam "cannot be trusted."

Albright said that Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili told her today "there is in fact evidence they are still moving from north to south with reinforcements, and no evidence that they are moving from south to north."

She said there was some indication of a reduced level of alert for those Iraqi forces near the border "but there is no movement away from the border."

Albright, appearing on CNN, said Iraq's claims of a pull out were indicative of Iraq's habit of saying one thing and doing something else. "This was the pattern in 1990," she said.

Clinton said Monday night that he is doubling U.S. air power in the Persian Gulf despite Iraq's promise to withdraw its troops shadowing Kuwait. He declared sternly, "We're interested in facts, not promises."

"Saddam Hussein has shown the world before ... that he cannot be trusted," Clinton said.

Responding to Iraq's complaints about punishing U.N. sanctions, Clinton said Saddam knows what he must do to get his oil on the world market again: "Full compliance, not reckless provocation."

Clinton's seven-minute speech came hours after Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations said Iraqi forces would abandon their positions near the border of oil-rich Kuwait.

But with no immediate proof of a withdrawal, Clinton added 350 warplanes to his Persian Gulf arsenal in hopes of forcing Saddam from the brink. The aircraft, including B-52 bombers and advanced fighter jets, will supplement a force of 70,000 U.S. service personnel already summoned against the threat posed by 80,000 Iraqis massed near Kuwait.

Clinton spoke as 300 U.S. soldiers arrived in Kuwait City on Monday.

He said the U.S. was interested in "deeds, not words" from Iraq.

Perry, saying U.S. soldiers "will not be pinned down" in the Gulf for long, refused to rule out a pre-emptive strike on Baghdad.

Interviewed later on ABC's Nightline, Perry said in response to a question that another option would be to expand the present no-fly zone in southern Iraq to include ground forces.

However, Perry said he thought Saddam would pull back his troops soon, adding: "I believe it will be a reflection of the deterrent effect of this very large military force we've put over there."

U.S. backing Aristide with assistance programs

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After three years in exile, President Jean-Bertrand Aristide is returning to Haiti this weekend and U.S. officials are planning an array of assistance programs to help him restore democracy.

President Clinton announced in an Oval Office address Monday evening that Aristide will return to his homeland Saturday — as scheduled — to assume his "rightful place" as Haiti's first democratically elected leader.

Aristide was overthrown by a military coup in September 1991 after only seven months in office, and restoring him to power achieves the stated purpose of the U.S. occupation of Haiti.

U.S. officials said Aristide may be accompanied to Haiti by Secretary of State Warren Christopher, underscoring support for the populist Roman Catholic priest despite his frequent criticism of administration policy.

Under terms of an agreement brokered by former President Jimmy Carter that headed off a full-scale U.S. invasion, Oct. 15 was the deadline for Aristide to return and Haiti's three military rulers to resign.

Clinton noted that the two remaining junta members — military commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and army chief of staff Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby — had resigned. Port-au-Prince police chief Michel Francois, the third junta member, fled last week to the neighboring Dominican Republic.

Cedras' announcement Monday presumably could have enabled Aristide to return before the deadline, but officials said the Aristide camp had been preparing for an Oct. 15 return date. Aristide has spent most of his exile in Washington.

Ticking off successes of the U.S. occupation, Clinton said that since the troops arrived three weeks ago, the level of violence has declined, refugees have been returning and Parliament has resumed work.

Clinton, who spoke to the nation about both Iraq and Haiti, credited American troops for "keeping America's commitment to restore democracy."

"They are performing their mission very, very well, with firmness and fairness, and all Americans are proud of them," Clinton said.

But he said "the job in Haiti remains difficult and dangerous," with the potential for violence from both right-wing extremists opposed to Aristide and from among supporters seeking revenge against their oppressors.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said Aristide's return should be viewed as an opportunity to pull American troops out of Haiti.

"The president's right in complimenting our armed forces," Dole said on CNN's Larry King Live program Monday night.

"They're doing the best they can, but they were never trained to be the sheriffs of Haiti. And my view is that Aristide walks in, we ought to walk out."

The United States, with an eye on Aristide's return, has been sending food to Haiti for feeding programs and equipment for a jobs program that is expected to employ 50,000 Haitians by early next year.

The United States has been feeding large numbers of Haitians for years. Officials said the expanded program being considered will reach 1.3 million Haitian children under 5, women and the elderly. Fuel also is being sent to compensate for shortages resulting from the international trade embargo against Haiti.

All international sanctions against Haiti will be officially removed once Aristide returns.

Dozens of American technical experts will be flying to Haiti in the coming days to assist with the transition. Also, the International Office of Migration is expected to play a key role in resettling internally displaced Haitians and those who have been returning from safe havens at the U.S. naval base in Cuba. The Haitian population at the Guantanamo base has been dropping sharply in recent days.

Last Friday, representatives from 15 donor countries pledged $77 million in contributions that will clear virtually all of the overdue debts Haiti has with international financial institutions.

New trial date to be set for murder case

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

A new trial date is set in two weeks for a capital murder defendant originally scheduled to face a Fort Worth jury Thursday.

District Judge Kent Sims Monday granted a defense motion to postpone the capital murder trial of defendant Henry Watkins Skinner because his attorneys claim five expert witnesses need more time to prepare their reports.

Skinner is accused of the New Year's bludgeoning death of Twila Busby and stabbing deaths of her sons, Randolph Busby Jr. and Elwin Caler, in their Campbell Street home.

Jury selection was slated to begin Thursday in Tarrant County courthouse.

District Attorney John Mann objected to the postponement, calling the motion "smoke and mirrors."

Sims said he would set a date 30 days before trial date to consider further pretrial issues.

The judge also said he plans to consult with prosecution and defense attorneys plus Gray County Sheriff Randy Stubblefield about whether Skinner will remain in Gray County jail to be transported to Tarrant County.

Robbers pose as policemen for penthouse heist

NEW YORK (AP) — An antique jewelry collector who opened his penthouse door to bandits posing as police officers thinks he was set up by a woman he dated.

The robbers demanded cash and jewelry, but escaped with four empty jewelry boxes valued at $200,000 instead. Steven Greenberg had just returned valuable pieces of his art-deco jewelry collection to a bank vault.

"The only people who knew that there was jewelry in this apartment were women I have gone out with," Greenberg said. "I'm sure this was an inside job."

He said he had shown the jewelry to eight women whom he had dated over several weeks.

Greenberg, a financier, said two men showed the doorman of his Park Avenue building gold badges early Monday, then knocked on his door wearing jackets emblazoned with the word "police." They claimed to have a search warrant. When he let them in, he said they pulled a gun.

Greenberg said they took two art deco jewelry boxes by Cartier and two by Jean Goulden, then fled down 21 flights of stairs.

Band fund raiser

Canadian High School band member Rebekah Lee, left, examines a television set that she could win if she sells enough magazine subscriptions. Jim Woltz, a sales representative with QSP, a subsidiary of The Reader's Digest Association, explains what she'll need to do to win the set or one of a number of other prizes in the magazine sale the band uses for an annual fund raiser. The money raised from the sale of magazine subscriptions goes to buy supplies for Canadian High School's Wild Cat Band and cover the costs of any trips they take, according to assistant band director Jennifer Willison. The sales contest will last for two weeks. (Pampa News photo by David Bowser)

Shuttle lands safely in California

By JANE E. ALLEN
AP Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Endeavour landed in the California desert today after thick, dark clouds in Florida foiled plans to end the shuttle's 11-day Earth-mapping mission at its home base.

Commander Michael Baker set the shuttle down on a concrete runway at Edwards Air Force Base at 10:02 a.m. PDT. The weather at the Mojave Desert landing strip was perfect, with clear sky and just a slight breeze.

Clouds hanging over the Kennedy Space Center precluded a late-morning attempt to land there, and the forecast called for the weather to worsen this afternoon.

NASA prefers landing shuttles in Florida to save about $1 million and the week it takes to ferry the space-ships across the country atop a cushion jet.

The final portion of Endeavour's 4.7 million-mile journey had it passing over Alaska's southern tip, across the Pacific Ocean and down over Oregon and along the Nevada-California border into Edwards. The detour added 23,000 miles to Endeavour's odometer.

Earlier today, astronauts switched off Endeavour's powerful radar, which gathered detailed 3-D images of mountains, oceans, deserts and forests during the mission.

Researchers said all objectives for the flight were accomplished, despite trouble with a shuttle steering jet that stalled radar observations last week and the failure of a radar-data recorder over the weekend.

"We've had a phenomenally successful mission," said project scientist Diane Evans. She said data collected by Monday would fill 67 miles of magnetic tape.

Endeavour orbited at an unusually low altitude — as low as 127 miles — for the radar study. Its path stretched from the Aleutian Islands in the north to near the Antarctic Circle to cover as much area as possible.

Scientists set out to map nearly 600 sites with the $366 million instrument, which bounced microwaves off the ground in three frequencies to give images a 3-D quality.

In one experiment, German oceanographers dumped more than 130 gallons of diesel oil and algae byproducts into the North Sea. They wanted to know whether the radar could detect oil slicks and distinguish between oil and naturally occurring algae film. The answer to both questions was yes.

The bulk of radar work focused on more traditional uses: surveying forests, oceans, rivers and mountains for hints of global change.

The Klyuchevsky Volcano in Russia's Far East erupted just after Endeavour's Sept. 30 launch, providing a rare opportunity to gather radar images of an active volcano.

An Indonesian volcano was the final target today before astronauts turned off the instruments.

"We're sorry to put them to bed, but we're excited to bring all the data home," astronaut Tom Jones said.

Endeavour took the same orbital path three days in a row so scientists could create detailed topographical maps capable of revealing changes in terrain as small as half an inch.

U.S. ship visit draws protest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A militant anti-nuclear group today opposed the visit of U.S. Navy ships as part of the 50th anniversary of the landing of Allied forces to liberate the Philippines during World War II.

In a statement, the Nuclear-Free Philippines Coalition decried "this wanton assault of the Philippine constitution by U.S. nuclear armed vessels."

The group also claimed the port calls encourage prostitution.

"We feel ashamed that our territory and women are being offered for the sexual appetites — en masse — of thousands of American visiting servicemen," the statement said.

Fires

The Pampa Fire Department reported the following call for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

MONDAY, Oct. 10
1:22 p.m. — One unit and two personnel responded to a dumpster fire at 436 Crest Dr.

Richards, Bush argue over SEC investigation

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards' campaign and Republican challenger George W. Bush are arguing over a federal investigation into Bush's 1990 sale of stock in an oil company.

Richards' campaign said Bush should release all documents into the Securities and Exchange Commission probe.

Bush said the SEC cleared him and that he has released records on the transaction.

"I believe that this is an attempt to try and make it look like I'm the kind of person trying to skirt the law. And I'm not," Bush said.

The SEC investigated Bush's June 22, 1990, sale of $848,560 of stock in Harken Energy, The Houston Post reported Sunday.

SEC records indicate Bush didn't file the required form intended to protect against insider trading until eight months after the federal deadline, according to previous news reports. Bush sold the stock at $4 per share. Within the next couple of months, the stock plummeted to nearly half that value.

But Bush said he did file on time the document that told the SEC of his stock sale. A subsequent form, which Bush said was not as important, may have been lost by the SEC, he said.

Bush said the SEC was looking into whether he took advantage of insider knowledge in the sale. Despite sitting on Harken's board, audit committee and a panel looking at corporate restructuring, Bush maintains he didn't know when he sold his stock that the company was about to report a $21 million quarterly loss.

He notes that about one year after he sold his stock, it doubled in price to $8 per share.

"Did George Bush sell his stock within the confines of SEC law? The answer was ultimately yes. The proof of the pudding was that the purchaser of the stock saw it double within 13 months' time," Bush said.

On Oct. 18, 1993, weeks before announcing his bid for governor, the SEC wrote a letter saying that the investigation into Bush had been concluded and "no enforcement action is contemplated with respect to him."

Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for Richards, said Bush should make public the documents of the investigation.

"Mr. Bush tells us that the investigation absolves him of illegal insider trading, but he refuses to release the investigative file," McDonald said.

Bush said he has released documents relating to the stock sale.

Robert Jordan, an attorney who represents Bush and Harken, agreed, but said that Harken would challenge any attempt to force the SEC to release documents about the company. He said the SEC requested information from Harken that is privileged.

In other developments Monday: — Armed with an opinion poll showing public support for environmental protection, environmental groups said politicians should heed the message.

"Many politicians have been running scared from protecting our natural resources. Despite what a small group led by land speculators are saying, an overwhelming number of Texans want to preserve our natural heritage," said Tom Smith of the group Public Citizen.

The survey found 80 percent of respondents saying they agree there is a "moral obligation to future generations to protect the diversity of wildlife from pollution and extinction."

It was released at a time when a growing property-rights movement has surfaced and attracted the attention of several top politicians.

Gene Hall of the Texas Farm Bureau said the property rights movement is growing rapidly because both citizens and politicians support it. "A number of politicians — both Democrats and Republicans alike — are trying to get ahead of the property rights issue," Hall said. "It's very clear how Texans feel about it."

Elsie's doing great

Elsie Hall stands behind a sign placed on her fence at 324 Henry by her neighbors in honor of her 88th birthday on Monday, with balloons attached at her front door. The sign reads, "Elsie's doing great at 88." Hall was born at home in Pampa in 1906, delivered by Dr. V.E. von Brunow. She is the last of 10 children. She graduated from Pampa High School in 1925. Playing piano by ear, Hall has played for Jeanne Willingham, Senior Citizens Center and the Salvation Army. She never goes anywhere about town without a hat or a cap, something she has been doing ever since she was a girl, when she always wore hats to church. Hall often won the Charleston dance contests in Pampa when she was a young woman. (Pampa News photo by Darlene Holmes)

Social Security cutting work force

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under orders from the White House, Social Security is planning deep cuts in its work force, and critics say that means more busy signals, longer waits and less attention to finding fraud.

The Social Security Administration, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press, intends to pare its payroll by nearly 5,000 employees over the next five years, with the deepest cuts occurring after the 1996 presidential elections.

Agency officials say they are under orders to cut the work force as part of President Clinton's drive to streamline government by eliminating 272,000 federal jobs.

But congressional officials say Social Security's plan undermines government because it won't have enough staff to find abuses and recover the millions of dollars being paid to people on disability who have recovered or obtained their benefits fraudulently.

According to the agency's blueprint, Social Security would lose 7 percent of its workers — from 65,231 to 60,472 — between now and 1999.

Commissioner Shirley Chater says the cuts will come from management and supervisory staff — not the field office employees who work with the public — and that automation and streamlining will allow the agency to do more with less.

"These initiatives will empower front-line employees by providing them with the tools required to maintain, and in many cases, improve SSA's customer service despite continually growing workloads for the agency," she said.

The agency's plan to speed up decisions on claims for disability benefits, the centerpiece of its streamlining, will take five years to implement. Court tests and the need for congressional approval could further delay reform.

The General Accounting Office, meanwhile, is skeptical about Social Security's automation effort. GAO, the congressional watchdog agency, said in a new report that the improvements hold no guarantee that employees will be able to process all future workloads and improve service to the public.

The agency's last round of cuts occurred in the 1980s, with disastrous results. The work force slipped from almost 80,000 workers to 62,703, telephone lines to local offices were disconnected, callers could not get through on its toll-free line and the ill and injured began waiting months for their first disability check.

Today, according to congressional testimony, many applicants for disability benefits must wait a year for a final decision on their cases, and some have died or gone on welfare. Callers to the agency still get frequent busy signals or no answer at all, and few cases are checked for fraud.

Rep. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., said he does not believe Social Security can trim its staff again and still answer its phones, fight fraud, speed up decisions for disability benefits and impose new rules on drug addicts and alcoholics.

Jacobs, the chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, said it is "penny-wise and pound-stupid" to treat Social Security's administrative budget like the rest of government. The retirement system is funded through payroll taxes and runs a huge surplus that masks the size of the federal deficit.

Former state school cashier indicted for theft

RICHMOND (AP) — A Rosenberg woman has been indicted on a theft charge accusing her of stealing $68,000 in wages earned by mentally and physically impaired residents at the Richmond State School.

The second-degree felony theft indictment accuses Sonya Balderas, 25, of stealing money that was earned by residents for such jobs as assembling plastic cup lids, filling one-pound boxes with nails, putting together fishing leaders and working in the campus laundry.

"This is a sad and unfortunate case. It is an example of the strong picking on the weak," said Fort Bend County prosecutor Kathy Holton.

Ms. Balderas faces a maximum punishment of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if she is convicted, the prosecutor said.

Last week, Balderas told a Houston Chronicle reporter that she took the money from about 85 residents between April 1993 through last July. She said she used the money to pay her family's bills and support a family member's cocaine habit.

The woman also said she wants to pay the money back, but Ms. Holton said that even if Ms. Balderas is placed on 10 years probation, that would be a lot of money to pay back each year.

It is unconstitutional to revoke someone's probation for inability to pay restitution, the prosecutor said.

State law does not allow victimized residents to be reimbursed through the state's general revenue fund.

Officials of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation are checking on whether state crime victims' funds can be used.

Fort Bend County sheriff's Detective Tom Honeycutt said last week that he still has questions regarding the handling of client funds at the state school. He is now investigating to see if additional school employees may have stolen money from other resident's accounts.

Cancer diagnostic test developed

BALTIMORE (AP) — Researchers have developed a new test for cancer that they hope will save lives by detecting the deadly disease in its earliest and most treatable stages.

The test identifies replication errors in DNA, known as clonal markers, that occur frequently in cancer, the researchers reported in today's issue of Proceedings of the National Academy of Science.

The researchers compared markers from several types of cancer with cells found in tissue, body fluids or secretions from a suspected cancer site. If the markers match, they said, there is a strong indication that the patient has cancer.

Researchers believe they will be able to identify cancers before they are detectable using X-rays or direct examinations, the study's principal investigator, Dr. David Sidransky of the Johns Hopkins Oncology Center, said in today's New York Times.

People at high risk of bladder and cervical cancer could begin using the test within a year, Sidransky said. He said the test also could be used to detect lung, breast, colon, prostate and other cancers.

However, Sidransky said the test is still in its experimental phase and must be validated through a series of larger trials, which could take years to complete. Further trials also are needed to verify that the test can identify cancer earlier than standard methods.

The researchers tested urine, tissue and sputum samples from patients who had been diagnosed with three types of cancer — lung, bladder, and head and neck — using standard methods.

"Although we have demonstrated the error in only three types of cancer, we firmly believe that all different kinds of cancer can be screened by this test," Sidransky told the Times.

Sidransky said the test is expected to cost about $50.

Dr. Samuel Broder, head of the National Cancer Institute, called the development "science at its very best."

But, Broder added, "We have to be cautious about talking about a universal screening test being just around the corner." He also pointed out that even early diagnosis does not necessarily mean a longer life for cancer patients.

The Hopkins research was partially funded by Oncor, Inc., which has been licensed to sell the test if it is approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Mayor convicted in credit card misuse

HOUSTON (AP) — The mayor of a Gulf coast city has left home too often with the wrong credit cards, and they have proven to be his undoing.

Jurors on Monday convicted League City Mayor Joe Lamb of two felony charges that he had used municipal credit cards for personal expenses.

The sentencing phase of Lamb's trial was scheduled to begin today. He was accused of charging as much as $9,000 from March 1991 to May 1993 on the city's American Express and Hertz credit cards.

The charges included renting a van to visit Lamb's daughters in Lubbock and renting a car for one of them, investigators said.

Also, Lamb used the city card to charge such expenses as hotel stays, family dinners, a television set for his home, men's suits, a tuxedo, air conditioning and heater work at his home, doctors' visits and a Las Vegas trip for him and his wife, Linda.

Records showed he also charged women's clothing, a plane ticket for his wife and a train trip to Atlantic City from Washington.

Galveston County District Attorney Mike Guarino told jurors Lamb used the city credit cards because he was having personal financial problems during the 26 months in which he was accused of abusing the city's money.

Although Lamb had at least four other credit cards, Guarino said they were charged to the limit and some were later canceled for lack of payment.

The jury in state District Judge Henry Dalchite's court deliberated five hours over two days before finding the 56-year-old Lamb guilty of official misconduct.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the covenanted commandment.

Opinion

Survey may actually show some good news

Even in our survey-driven political culture, sometimes the most telling findings are overlooked by the very pollsters themselves. Maybe these experts are too close to the proverbial forest — or maybe their findings just don't support their preconceptions.

A particularly enlightening example is a new survey by the eminent Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press, which concluded in media accounts recently that Americans are more cynical and less compassionate than they used to be. One Associated Press report referred to the survey findings as a "mostly discouraging snapshot of the national mood." That was echoed by poll director Andrew Kohut's observation that, "It's not a pretty picture. The trends have a negative cast."

The source of such gloom and doom is survey data showing a dramatic drop in the percentage of people who think government should take care of those who can't take care of themselves. As recently as 1987, Times Mirror had found, it was 71 percent. Now, it's just 57 percent. And only 41 percent of the current sampling said government should help the needy even if it meant going into debt. In previous such surveys, a majority felt that way.

So, what's going on here? To hear those like Kohut (and the reporters who didn't even bother to question his basic premise), these survey respondents are in an inexplicably ugly mood. The results are all the more mystifying to Kohut given the current economic stability: "Generally, when things are better, people are more altruistic. But that doesn't seem to be the case here."

Are we an increasingly self-centered, even stingy nation as Kohut implies?

What is odd is that he doesn't weigh the alternative, considering that the crucial survey questions focused on "government."

Perhaps people — whether selfish or generous, cruel or compassionate — simply no longer believe government can solve basic social woes like poverty. Perhaps, some 14 years after Ronald Reagan weighed in on this subject on the presidential campaign trail, his words are now more widely accepted than ever: Washington isn't the answer to the problem; Washington is the problem.

That is hardly cause for despair; it's just a healthy appreciation of reality.

Damage of the divorce revolution

Editor's Note: Stephen Chapman was ill recently. The following column was originally published in April 1992.

Marriage is, among other things, a contract between two people, and when one person violates a contract, the courts normally require him to compensate the person he has hurt. But in 1976, a Pennsylvania court examined a law allowing such damages to be imposed on a husband or wife who commits adultery, and it recoiled in disgust. "It is no longer in the state's interest," declared the court, "to impose upon a married person's right to natural and voluntary sexual relations with other persons."

Some old fogies assume that giving up the right to have sex with other people is sort of basic to marriage. But a lot of people know better than to actually believe those antiquated vows about "forsaking all others" until "death do you part."

Over the past generation, American laws and customs on marriage and divorce have undergone a radical metamorphosis. The law used to treat marriage as a permanent bond, to be dissolved only when one partner had been seriously betrayed. It now treats such unions as a brief convenience for two incurably fickle people.

This transformation brings to mind Ambrose Bierce's definition of revolution as "an abrupt change in the form of misgovernment." Under the old divorce rules, one spouse had to show that the other had committed some grave offense — adultery, physical abuse, mental cruelty. The resulting litigation was often so ugly and hypocritical that most people assumed any change would be for the better. We've spent the last quarter century proving that assumption wrong.

Marital breakdown has become the norm, not the extreme; appalling numbers of children grow up fatherless and poor; countless innocent spouses have been discarded by unfaithful mates. The law exudes majestic indifference to these outcomes. When we established "no-fault" divorce, writes Harvard law professor Mary Ann Glendon, we got no-responsibility divorce as well.

Stephen

Now there is a movement to restore some measure of obligation and commitment to marriage. One important problem is that while wedlock is a legal agreement between two people, it is no longer enforced as other contracts are. Bryce Christensen, director of the Rockford Institute's Center on the Family in America, notes dryly that in recent years, it has become much harder to get rid of an unwanted employee but much easier to get rid of an unwanted spouse. While an employer must have a good reason to take away your job, a mate needs no reason at all to deprive you of your family.

Courts normally penalize someone who reneges on a deal, but the point of no-fault divorce was to avoid wrangling about tedious questions of blame. The change has been a blessing in cases where both people want out of a hopeless marriage. But it's also been a boon to the unscrupulous, who have gotten a license to do wrong without fear of punishment. Women in particular have far less leverage to get alimony or adequate child support when they are deserted.

By making marriage a relationship that can be ended by either spouse, the law cheats those who want something more solid. Under a proposal offered by the conservative Free Congress Foundation, couples applying for a marriage license could choose a "no-fault" approach, making divorce easy. Or they could select a traditional arrangement, barring dissolution unless one spouse has seriously wronged the other — in which case, the settlement would tilt strongly in favor of the injured partner.

Some protection is also needed for the people most often overlooked in divorce proceedings: the children. A million American kids endure family breakup every year, and a disproportionate number end up mired in poverty, poor health and delinquency as a result.

Keeping couples together solely for the good of the children may not be wise, but making divorce harder to get when kids are involved might preserve some marriages that aren't beyond saving. And when divorces are granted, courts need to take greater care to assure that the children are provided for, even if that means hardship for the departing parent.

There are limits, unfortunately, to what the law can do. Due to modern sexual mores, men and women today can abandon their spouses and happily pursue their own desires even without legally ending the marriage. If divorce laws become stricter, some people won't bother getting a divorce.

But rolling back the divorce revolution would impose some healthy costs on irresponsible behavior. It might even curb the epidemic of marital disintegration, which endangers innocent bystanders as well as dissatisfied partners. All of us would benefit from forcefully communicating the message that the obligations assumed at the altar endure even if the marriage doesn't.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 11, the 284th day of 1994. There are 81 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 11, 1968, Apollo VII, the first manned Apollo mission, was launched with astronauts Wally Schirra, Donn Fulton Eisele and R. Walter Cunningham aboard.

On this date:

In 1776, the first naval battle of Lake Champlain was fought during the American Revolution. American forces led by Gen. Benedict Arnold suffered heavy losses, but managed to stall the British.

In 1779, Polish nobleman Casimir Pulaski was killed while fighting for American independence during the Revolutionary War Battle of Savannah, Ga.

In 1884, Eleanor Roosevelt was born in New York City.

In 1890, the Daughters of the American Revolution was founded.

GATT surrenders independence

GATT — the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, Uruguay Round — is the latest assault on U.S. independence.

President Clinton has decided to push Congress to ratify GATT prior to the October recess. It is on the fast track, which means once introduced, Congress has 60 days to vote yes or nay and may not amend it.

It's time to think about American independence or, if you prefer the fancier word, sovereignty. The American Revolution was about that issue. The colonies were generally prosperous, not really overtaxed and protected by the British army and the British navy.

But an increasing number of the colonists, whom we now refer to as "our country's forefathers," thought that people ought to be able to decide matters for themselves, that it was not right that a parliament sitting in London should decide matters for people living in North America.

So they revolted. They fought a war. And they won independence. And the issue driving it all was simply the right to govern themselves.

It seems inconceivable to me, a very traditional kind of guy, that Americans in 1994 would be apathetic about, much less in favor of, surrendering any portion of American independence. But that is precisely what GATT is all about.

The tariffs part is not so much the issue, though

Charley Reese

GATT will reduce U.S. revenue by $12 billion. If foreigners don't have to pay this $12 billion in duties to sell their stuff in the United States, guess who will make up the revenue? The American taxpayers, of course, either by new taxes or cuts in domestic programs or both.

But tariff schedules can be argued back and forth, and as long as we the people, through our elected representatives, decide what they will be, the independence of our country is not an issue.

The rat in GATT is the World Trade Organization, an international bureaucracy to be headquartered in Europe that, once GATT is approved, will have authority to decide trade disputes. That's a loss of our independence. WTO, not us, will have final authority over U.S. trade matters. It would also have authority over U.S. environmental, worker safety and other purely domestic issues and laws because any of these can be construed as "unfair trade practice."

We should oppose such interference, and if GATT has to be killed, it's well worth it. Trade will not cease. New agreements will be made, and until then, world trade will continue based on the previous GATT rules.

The internationalists tried this gambit once before, when GATT first got started after World War II, but Americans were so sensible and Congress was so opposed, that the Truman administration didn't even submit the proposal to Congress in 1947. Then it was to be called the International Trade Organization.

It's curious that, 47 years later, Clinton thinks he can easily push it through Congress, and maybe he can. I hope not. It's true, though, that Americans have been subjected to 47 years of internationalist propaganda. There are fewer backbones in the House and Senate. The press, which has always been corporate, is now almost solidly internationalist because that's the corporate trend.

The issue is the same as it was in the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), which was a sort of baby GATT, and Clinton won that. The Clinton administration also crowed about its alleged success, though falsely, considering much of the big surge of exports to Mexico is stuff to build factories or assembly for re-export back to the United States.

At any rate, the issue is self-government, not business profits. Do you or do you not believe that Americans, acting through their elected representatives, should set their own trade policy? If the answer is yes, then you must oppose GATT.

Forget Harvard, go for Trenton State

I love television. Entertaining, informative and uplifting, but mostly entertaining.

Most Americans share my affection for this ubiquitously seductive medium, whose mesmerizing power can generate more controversy in a week than Bill Clinton has in two years.

But what Fred Allen called "chewing gum for the eyes" is, paradoxically, an enriching part of our lives. We watch it in a robotic trance. And we enjoy it.

One thing television can never do, however, is get your child into college. But if you read the appropriate magazines or newspapers, they can facilitate your child's admission into higher education.

If the recent issue of Money Guide and the Sept. 26 issue of U.S. News and World Report are not on your newstand now, run to your nearest library and check them out, especially if you have kids who are getting ready to enter college and you want to help them make a decision that comports with your financial means, their intellectual prowess or both.

These issues represent one of the most productive public services ever published, even if their academic emphases differ.

The U.S. News and World Report survey, in a heuristic display of editorial arrogance, is titled, "America's Best Colleges." Money Guide's survey, concerned about more academic bang for the accountable buck, is titled, "Your Best College Buys Now."

As a parent, you have questions about your child's college intentions.

Which colleges are the best buys for the money?

Chuck
Stone

Which ones have the highest SAT/ACT scores for entering freshmen? Which ones are the most selective or have the highest SQ (snob quotient)?

Which ones have the highest percentage of freshmen in the top 10 percent of their high school graduating class? Which ones are ranked overall as the best? Which are the best women's colleges?

That last question reflects an audacious change in perception among college-bound women. Continued dehumanizing behavior among male students is fueling enrollment increases among women's colleges, even though women's colleges account for only 2.5 percent of the female undergraduates.

In the classroom's adversarial intensity, women tend to respond differently from men, according to Deborah Tannen's gender-defining You Just Don't Understand: Men and Women in Conversation. Women who attend single-sex schools also have higher achievement levels.

While there are few surprises in U.S. News and World Report's survey (pre-existing perceptions of higher education's best are confirmed), Money Guide does offer more practical criteria for judging where your son or daughter should attend college.

Money Guide's top 10 uses a "value approach" that offers your child the highest quality education for the tuition charged and a high degree of the students' academic and social satisfaction.

As a result, Money Guide comes up with some surprises. Relatively obscure Trenton State College in New Jersey is ranked No. 3 ($6,287 for out-of-state students), vis-a-vis, nationally prestigious California Institute of Technology ranked No. 8 ($16,905 for all students).

Probably the biggest surprises in Money Guide's rankings are New College of the University of South Florida as No. 1 and Spelman College for black women as No. 9. But it is in the top 25 of the two magazine surveys that divergence really soars. Only Cal Tech, Rice and Yale made the top 10 in both surveys.

To some extent, this divergence reflects a growing trend of parental demand for more pedagogical accountability from higher education. They are asking more questions about their children's educational outcomes in relation to professors' salaries and research distinctions.

All of us crave prestige. To be No. 1 is an American obsession. But if only millionaires can attend the academic best, the middle American parents must find the college whose superior academic reputation is balanced by its budgetary prudence.

Lifestyles

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband works as a security guard full time on the midnight shift. He makes $5.50 an hour. I also work full time, on an afternoon shift, making almost three times as much as he does. We are working these shifts so we don't need outside day care for our children. We have a baby together, and he has a son by a previous marriage who lives with us.

My problem is that he has been on the midnight shift for more than two years, and I have been getting very depressed as times goes by. I would like him to find a daytime job, and I will continue working afternoons. That way we still won't need day care, but we could at least sleep together at night. He knows how miserable I am, but he doesn't even look for a job.

Abby, we are newlyweds of just over a year. This is putting a strain on our relationship because I feel he doesn't care enough to do something about it. On the weekends, he needs to catch up on his sleep and spend more time with the kids, and I feel like a third wheel. We have to be quiet around the house during the day so he can sleep.

I miss my husband so much, but I guess he just doesn't feel the same. He reads Dear Abby, so I hope he sees this. Please tell me what is wrong with him - or me.

THIRD WHEEL

DEAR THIRD WHEEL: No amount of money will compensate for the time you spend away from each other.

This is much too serious a problem to hope he reads about it in the Dear Abby column. Collar him and insist that you see a marriage counselor together.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns treating all adult children equally. Three of our children have borrowed money from us. Two have paid us back promptly. The third has not repaid one dime. True, she is not as well off as the others, but she is managing quite well.

We have always tried to treat our children equally, and our estates will be divided equally among them.

To be fair, should we instruct our executor to subtract our daughter's debt from her inheritance?

I have a cousin — a widow — now in her 70s, and comfortably well off. She still resents a bachelor uncle who left instructions to subtract the amount of money she owed him for the inheritance he left her.

MOTHER OF FOUR

DEAR MOTHER: In some families, not all children deserve to be treated equally, but in order to keep peace in the family, they should be.

If you want to be absolutely fair, subtract the amount of money your daughter owes you from her inheritance.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column about the dangers of being locked in the trunk of a car, you made an appeal for Detroit and Japan to install a safety latch in the trunk.

Abby, I own a 1991 Honda Accord, which came with a latch that will release the locked backseat.

I don't know when they started putting them in, but I'm sure glad they did.

How to select appropriate roofing material

By POPULAR MECHANICS
For AP Special Features

Today there's a wide choice of roofing materials available. While all are durable, each has its own advantages and trade-offs.

In this column, we'll take a close look at two popular choices: asphalt shingles and cementitious roof tiles.

Asphalt shingles are the most common roofing material, and they come in two broad categories — organic based and fiberglass.

Organic base means that the shingles are made of a cellulose mat saturated with asphalt and covered with mineral granules. Fiberglass shingles have a mat of woven glass fiber saturated with asphalt and covered with mineral granules.

Organic shingles have a Class C fire rating while fiberglass shingles have a Class A rating.

An important difference between the two types of shingles is that organic types are more flexible in cold weather than fiberglass types. A good deal of controversy surrounds the installation of fiberglass shingles in cold climates.

Some roofers refuse to install them, while others don't install them in cold weather. These roofers cite the shingles' premature failure due to their stiffness. Manufacturers, however, say that a properly installed fiberglass shingle is as good as any.

The two most common types of asphalt shingle are three-tab (also called a strip shingle) and architectural (also called a laminate shingle).

A three-tab shingle is a rectangular mat with two slots cut in its front edge. The slots provide stress relief as the shingle expands and contracts with the weather. An architectural shingle has a heavy base mat and another mat or sections of mat applied on top of it.

Aside from making the shingle heavier and more durable, this construction gives the roof shadow lines and character like a tile or wood roof.

A standard three-tab shingle can be organic or fiberglass based. Most architectural shingles have a fiberglass mat, although some are organic.

Finally, there are regional and specialized forms of asphalt roofing, such as a highly wind-resistant shingle called a T-lock. This is a slotted T-shaped shingle that locks to the shingle below and to the shingle above.

Cementitious roof tiles offer traditional looks combined with the benefit of modern materials. These products are made from cellulose fiber-reinforced portland cement or concrete. They are available in red, black, white, green and gray, and they can be molded to look like wood shingles, barrel-shaped tiles or slate.

The strong suit of cementitious roofing tiles is their durability. Because they are a masonry material, they resist weathering, insects and fire. Their nearly impenetrable surface also resists the formation of fungus, and because they are heavy, they resist wind uplift.

Club News

The Pampa Art Club met recently at the Fletcher Ranch near McLean.

Presiding at the meeting was Pat Youngblood, president. Alice Raymon, secretary, read the minutes, called the roll and gave the treasurer's report.

Youngblood gave a report on the outdoor mosaic being prepared for the outdoor art walls southeast of M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center. She said the mosaic is finished and ready for installation. The club plans to start another one soon.

During the meeting, members sketched or painted with oils and acrylics, with one member working on stained glass.

Twelve club members attended.

The next meeting is scheduled for Oct. 18 at 10:30 a.m. at the Pampa Community Building, with Muri Reeves to serve as hostess.

The Gray County Family and Education Council recently with Janice Carter, chairman, presiding over four clubs represented.

Plans were discussed for the upcoming Flea Market and Craft Fair scheduled Oct. 29-30 at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion at Recreation Park. Booth spaces will rent for $20 each.

FCE clubs will be serving beans and cornbread Saturday and Frito pies and nachos Sunday afternoon. A "Best Chocolate Cake" contest will be held Saturday afternoon, and prizes will be awarded. "Christmas Favorite's" cookbooks will be available.

Council officers for 1995 were elected. They are: Virginia Horton, chairman; Rene Staut, vice chairman; Betty Lash, secretary; Betty Baxter, treasurer; and Janice Carter, TAFCE chairman.

Madelyn Grawthrop and Carter reported on the TAFCE meeting held in Lubbock Sept. 13-15.

The Roberts County Museum will have its annual Mexican Fiesta Dinner on Sunday, Oct. 16 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Miami School cafeteria. Proceeds raised from the lunch will go into the building fund for a restroom in the museum. An art show featuring the work of Len Slesick, pictured above, is also set to be presented in the museum's art gallery. Slesick of Amarillo, has worked and studied in a variety of art forms which has helped develop his style which is said to be "sensitive to the rich color of the Southwest." Slesick also teaches and holds workshops. (Courtesy photo)

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Socializing and being around others could be fun today as long as you don't spend too much time with them. Your social graces might not last long. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might have a short fuse today. Woe unto those who anger you! The probabilities for misinterpreting intentions is very high.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Have the courage of your convictions today where your ideas are concerned. Don't be intimidated by a know-it-all who might try to discount your perfectly valid ideas in front of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Instead of using funds for new endeavors or merchandise, it might be wise at this time to use some of your money to pay off old obligations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It'll be easy to get along well with almost everyone today except for someone you've exchanged cross words with recently. If you sense storm signals, avoid this person like the plague.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you expect others to do things for you today that you can easily do for yourself, you could be disappointed. Your friends aren't going to be in the mood to be used.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In conversations with friends today, be careful not to impose your views on them. You might win the debate in the opening round, but you could end up alienating your pals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) From your vantage point today, you may see ways to help your family by making some changes. However, if you don't explain your reasons well enough, you may not win their support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Persons with whom you're involved might have better ideas than you do today. Convincing you of that, however, could prove an impossible task. Don't let your ego cloud your judgment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will have very constructive advice on the ways someone else should manage his/her affairs today, yet, in your own dealings, you might not draw upon your own wisdom.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Beware of the inclination today to treat light situations solemnly. Try not to take yourself or the world too seriously. You don't need tummy trouble or headaches.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take care of tasks that require know-how and concentration early in the day. Time might not be on your side today, and as the clock ticks on, temperament and talents could become dulled.

HARVESTER HOMECOMING

PAMPA — Pampa hosts Amarillo Caprock at 7:30 Friday night in the annual football homecoming game at Harvester Stadium.

The Harvesters have a 4-1 record for the season and are 1-0 in district play. Caprock is 1-5 overall and 0-2 in district.

Pampa, which had an open date last week, kicked off district action last week with a 28-7 win over Canyon. Caprock's only win came against Tulia (20-7) two weeks ago. The Longhorns lost to Canyon, 34-13, last Friday night.

The Harvesters have the district's best defense, allowing 179 yards per game. Pampa is fourth in offense, averaging 296.4 yards per game.

Caprock is last in both offensive and defensive categories, averaging 203.8 yards per game and giving up 343.8 yards per game.

TIGER LEAGUE FOOTBALL

PAMPA — Roberts Cowboys shut out Bowers Ranch Raiders, 18-0, last weekend in Tiger League football action.

The Cowboys had scoring runs by Heath Keeton (45 yards), Aaron Heiskell (40 yards) and Jason Burklow (2 yards).

On defense the Cowboys had two interceptions by Aaron Heiskell and Carlos Solis Jr., and recovered two Raider fumbles.

The Raiders got into Cowboys' territory just once during the game.

The Cowboys have a 2-2 record.

KEMP SIGNS

SEATTLE (AP) — Shawn Kemp showed up for his first workout of the season three days late, 25 pounds heavier and $20 million richer.

Kemp missed the first three days of practice with the Seattle SuperSonics before agreeing Sunday to an extension that made his contract worth about $46 million over nine years.

"Anytime you can first of all do a job and be happy with it, you got to be satisfied," the 6-foot-10, All-Star forward said after Monday's workout. "I'm doing that just playing ball ... and then making money on top of that definitely is a blessing."

Kemp has eight years remaining on his contract, worth more than $26 million. The latest negotiations produced a 1-year extension that includes a "balloon payment" of about $20 million for the 2002-03 season.

That big payoff is expected to balance out this year's $800,000 salary that was part of Kemp's original six-year deal, signed in 1989. The $800,000 is significantly less than Kemp's current market value.

Kemp, 24, led the Sonics to a franchise-best 63-19 record last season. He averaged 18.1 points, 10.8 rebounds, and 2.1 blocked shots last season.

Kemp said he held out on the advice of his agents.

"Anytime that you hold out, it's difficult. That's something that I never thought would happen to me, but basically I hired the people to take care of the job and (sitting out) was on their behalf," he said.

"It was unfortunate that it took so long. I was hoping it could've been done by the start (of practice)," he said.

Coach George Karl said Kemp would be putting in extra time to make up for the missed days.

"We're not having practice tonight, but he will practice tonight," Karl said Monday afternoon, stressing the word "he." Kemp will also be fined $1,200 — $300 for each day of training camp missed.

In his required physical, Kemp weighed in at 270 pounds — 25 pounds heavier than his listed weight last season.

While he expects to lose a few pounds from daily practice, Kemp said he's been weightlifting more this summer and intends to keep it up.

Kemp denied he held out in part because he was miffed about a near-trade to Chicago for Scottie Pippen in June.

He said he talked things over with Sonics owner Barry Ackerley, president Wally Walker and Karl, and has accepted that management had the team's best interests in mind.

"Regardless of whether they're trying to improve the team with another player, or regardless of whether they think the team's going to be better with me coming back, I'm here now and I have to face that fact. I can't think about it," Kemp said.

Walker told The Seattle Times the team and Kemp reached an agreement in principle on Thursday, but working out the details took up most of the next three days.

"Philosophically, a guy was under contract; he should have been playing," Walker said. "But all the heavy lifting was done before camp and we were in the homestretch of a contract negotiation."

TEAMS FOR SALE

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though the Pittsburgh Pirates, Oakland Athletics and San Diego Padres are for sale, lawyers for owners and players predict no teams will change owners until there is a new labor agreement.

Two management lawyers, both speaking on condition of anonymity, said Monday they couldn't foresee any deals closing.

Tom Reich, an agent for many players, said, "Anyone who buys a team until there's an agreement is a moron unless there's an indemnification." Reich said no buyer would close a deal unless he is protected against damages from lawsuits filed by the players union.

"The buyer will weigh that. I don't think there's any concern," Pittsburgh Pirates president Mark Sauer said.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig, however, said he didn't think any sales would be delayed.

"Each deal will have to be worked out differently," he said.

Since 1922, professional baseball has been protected by an antitrust exemption, but the Florida Supreme Court ruled last week that the exemption applies only to baseball's reserve system. The means players may be able to file an antitrust suit in that state against all 28 teams.

"If they don't get a settlement, this dispute raises all kinds of potential problems," Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos said.

Mackovic hopes Cotton is in Texas' future

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — As the 12th-ranked Texas Longhorns enter the Southwest Conference race, coach John Mackovic says he isn't worried about his team being overconfident.

Although Texas (4-1) has defeated Pittsburgh, Louisville, Texas Christian and No. 22 Oklahoma — losing only on a last-second field goal to No. 4 Colorado — the Longhorns have won only one game (TCU) decisively. The rest have come down to the final minute.

"We haven't dominated anybody yet," Mackovic said Monday. "We have mostly hung in there."

Texas, 1-0 in the SWC, faces Rice (2-2, 1-0) in a televised game Sunday night.

"Where we are now is on the threshold of a six-game season to see if we can get to the Cotton Bowl," Mackovic said.

"Every week it appears we have played a little better football and have risen to the occasion. I would expect that our team is gaining maturity to understand that we must continue that trend."

After steering the Longhorns through NCAA infractions involving star wide receivers Mike

Adams and Lovell Pinkney and then enduring enough injuries to open a MASH unit at Memorial Stadium, Mackovic finally has a problem other coaches would accept gladly.

It's a mild quarterback controversy that evolved after a strong showing by backup James Brown in a 17-10 victory against the Sooners on Saturday.

Brown, a redshirt freshman, played with the savvy of a senior in one of the nation's most heated rivalries. He hadn't thrown a college pass and had only taken 11 snaps in a game for Texas before dismantling the Sooners. He completed 17 of 22 passes for 148 yards, including a touchdown, and scrambled for 30 yards, including a 9-yard score.

"I was very pleased with his poise," Mackovic said. "He just went out there on that first series and took charge."

Mackovic said Morenz is expected to work out this week and, if healthy, will start against Rice.

When asked if Brown would see any playing time once Morenz is healthy, Mackovic said, "Possibly. I haven't mapped out any future exactly. It's good to know that if we ever have to turn to him, he's ready and can do some things for us. But I would expect Shea to start this week."

Mackovic said Adams, who strained ligaments in his right knee against TCU, is questionable for Sunday's game. Adams, who was suspended from the season opener along with Pinkney for violating NCAA rules by accepting the free use of a rental car, missed the Colorado and Oklahoma games because of the knee injury.

At least six offensive players and five defensive players have missed game time with injuries.

Vikings stun Giants, 27-10

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — There's usually an obvious difference between a quarterback playing in his 17th professional season and one making the fifth start of his career.

It's the mistakes they make.

Warren Moon limited his in passing for 299 yards and a touchdown, while Minnesota cornerback Anthony Parker returned a mistake by Dave Brown 44 yards for a touchdown as the Vikings stole the momentum in the third quarter and defeated the New York Giants 27-10 Monday night.

The win kept the Vikings (4-2) tied for first place with Chicago in the NFC Central with a bye on tap. New York lost its second in a row after opening the season with three straight wins.

One play decided this game for all practical purposes: Parker's interception on the fourth play of the third quarter. It snapped a 10-10 tie and really deflated the Giants after they gained momentum by driving 94 yards for a game-tying touchdown on a 3-yard run by Brown just before intermission.

"That's two weeks in a row now for me," said Brown, who has been learning the hard way the last two games.

He had an interception returned for a touchdown by New Orleans just before halftime last week and then had Parker step in front of Mike Sherrard in the right flat Monday.

"Giants quarterbacks or any quarterbacks can't make the mistakes that I've made," said Brown, who was 19 of 36 for 226 yards and two interceptions, both of which led to Vikings touchdowns. "They are always going to hurt the team."

Moon didn't hurt his team at all. He was 23 of 34 for 299 yards, including a controversial 20-yard touchdown pass to Chris Carter late in the third quarter that put the Vikings in command, 24-10.

Moon did throw a late interception and botched a handoff on a first-and-goal on the Vikings' opening drive, but for the most part he picked apart the Giants defense, which tried to confuse him with an assortment of defenses.

"He read everything really well," Giants defensive end Mike Strahan said. "He is one of those guys who, if you give him time, he'll pick you apart. And we gave him too much time."

Moon downplayed his own performance and pointed to the interception by Parker, who used to play at Giants Stadium as a member of the New York-New Jersey Knights of the World Football League.

"I think the interception took the wind out of their sails," Moon said.

The call was a quick out to Sherrard on a play in which the Vikings had nine men near the line of scrimmage. Parker had one-on-one coverage.

"We had seven guys in the box, so I knew he (Brown) would have to check off to a run or quick pass," Parker said. "He was looking at his receiver and threw the ball a little behind him, just enough for me to step in and get it."

Parker took the pass in full stride and scored untouched.

"When we were 3-0, everything was going great," Brown said. "I'd be stupid to think we could cruise along like that. We knew there would be rough times. We've hit some bumps. We're not playing well as a team and I haven't made the right decisions lately. We'll address that this week."

Minnesota, taking advantage of the wind in the first quarter, took a 3-0 lead on a 44-yard field goal by Fuad Reveiz, who added a 24-yarder in the fourth quarter. David Treadwell tied the score early in the second quarter on a 22-yard field goal.

Vencie Glenn helped put Minnesota ahead 10-3 by picking off a tipped pass midway through the second quarter. Moon hit Terry Allen for 31 yards, and Allen eventually scored from the 1.

Brown, showing some of the promise of a future star, led New York on a nine-play, 94-yard march just before the half, hitting six of eight passes for 91 yards.

Then came the Parker's interception and Moon's scoring pass to Carter, which at first was ruled out of bounds by the officials. They huddled and reversed the call saying safety Jesse Campbell pushed Carter out.

Giants coach Dan Reeves didn't blame the officials.

"We got beat," he said. "We got beat good. They did an excellent job. They beat us in almost every phase you can think of."

Pro Bowl halfback Rodney Hampton returned to the lineup after missing two games with a back injury, but he was limited to 27 yards on 13 carries. New York gained 37 yards rushing.

Minnesota carried 103 yards rushing, with Allen picking 21 times for 75 yards.

The loss put a damper on the night the Giants retired Lawrence Taylor's No. 56 jersey.

Pampa native is new coach at Caprock High

Terry Ferguson is certain to set and reach other goals during his coaching career, but his crowning achievement to date came last July. That's when the Pampa native was named head coach of the Amarillo Caprock boys' basketball program.

"My goal was to be a head coach by the time I was 30. I turned 30 just the other day, so I just made it," Ferguson said. "I feel very fortunate to be coaching at the 4A level. I figured I would have to start at a lower level."

As a player, Ferguson helped carry on the winning Harvester basketball tradition. He was the point guard on Pampa's 1981-82 state semi-finalists and the 1982-83 regional finalists.

With Caprock in the same District 1-4A as Pampa, Ferguson won't let sentiment stand in the way of his coaching when the two teams tip off against each other this season.

"I will try and beat the Harvesters every time out. I love Pampa, but love can carry you only so far," he laughed.

Ferguson was the varsity assistant coach last season at Mount Pleasant where the team compiled a

Ferguson

30-2 mark. He also served as assistant basketball and football coach at Amarillo Tascosa for three years.

Ferguson succeeds Chester Dunavin, who coached Caprock the last four seasons, amassing a 63-62 record.

"I feel like we're going to be competitive this season. We won't have much size, but we'll have a lot of quickness. We'll go out and try to control the tempo of the game," Ferguson said.

Ferguson played college basketball one year at Southwestern in Weatherford, Okla., before transferring to the University of Oklahoma where he earned his degree.

Ferguson's parents, John and Mary Ferguson, still live in Pampa.

Richardson to start for Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Bucky Richardson is about to put his popularity to the test.

Richardson, a fan favorite and perennial benchwarmer before being pressed into action this season because of injuries to Cody Carlson, will start Thursday night against the Cleveland Browns.

"From the first play of the game, I know I'll have to play well," Richardson said. "As a backup, you never know when your shot is going to be and you don't have much time to think about when you get to the game."

Richardson said he expects the slumping Oilers to bounce back from their 1-4 start and revive their stagnant offense.

"It happens every week in the NFL, somebody shows up and beats somebody they aren't supposed to beat," Richardson said. "But if you don't show up and play and do the things it takes to win, you get beat."

"That's as simple as I can put it. If you mosey around all week and show up on Sunday and expect to beat somebody's butt, it just doesn't happen."

Unbeaten Alabama looking for respect in the rankings

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — They have the reputation. They have the record. What the Alabama Crimson Tide doesn't have is much respect in the rankings.

With a 6-0 record, the six-time national champions would figure to be right in the thick of the race for a seventh. Instead, Alabama finds itself behind a roadblock at No. 10 — trailing three teams that already have lost.

"I heard something about us winning ugly," defensive tackle Shannon Brown said Monday. "I don't understand that term. What's the name of the game anyway? Winning and losing. All the stats in the world don't mean a thing. The bottom of the line is whether you win or lose."

OK, that's a point well taken. On the other hand, it's hard to find fault with poll voters who have been unwilling to overlook Alabama's opponents.

In five victories over Division I-A teams (the season opener was a 42-13 rout of I-AA Tennessee-Chattanooga), Alabama has won by an average margin of just seven points.

And those teams aren't exactly the Fearsome Fivesome. Vanderbilt, Arkansas, Tulane, Georgia and Southern Mississippi boast a cumulative record of 11-17.

"We have yet to have a good 60 minutes of football," safety Willie Gaston said. "Until we do that, we're never going to move up in the polls."

Coach Gene Stallings insisted there's no sense of urgency on the team, no need to start worrying about the rankings — even though Alabama was ranked fourth at this point in 1992, when the Tide went on to capture its most recent national championship.

"I'm not concerned about that. I guess I should be," Stallings said. "I'm just trying to win the game. We haven't been very impressive in some of our wins. That's probably the reason we're where we are (in the polls)."

Backup quarterback Brian Burdick, who could see playing time this week against Tennessee with starter Jay Barker nursing a sore right shoulder, can't help but take a glance at the rankings.

"Sure, we look at the polls," he said. "We want to win the national championship, and that's how you win it. We want to win our games here at the end of the season so we can be in position to win it."

That's what happened two years ago, when the Tide steadily moved up and found itself ranked No. 2 at the end of the regular season.

Alabama then beat Florida in the Southeastern Conference title game and top-ranked Miami in the Orange Bowl to win it all.

"I think the polls are a bunch of ... hogwash," said Brown, searching for a printable word. "If we go out and win every week, that will take care of itself and we'll be where we want to be."

Not at this rate. Alabama was 12th in The Associated Press preseason poll and jumped to 11th without playing a game. Now, after six victories, the Tide has moved up only one more spot.

Alabama, ranked sixth in the coaches' poll, is No. 8 in the bowl coalition rankings, just behind Miami. If the Hurricanes won the remainder of their games, it's conceivable they could play Big 8 winner Nebraska or Colorado in the Orange Bowl for a possible national championship.

In addition to Tennessee this week, Alabama has a couple of prime late-season opportunities to impress the pollsters. No. 6 Auburn visits Birmingham on Nov. 19, and the Tide is on track to meet No. 1 Florida for the third straight year in the SEC title game in Atlanta.

None of that will matter if the Tide doesn't turn.

"We keep hanging on, hanging on ... that's the way it's been all season long," Brown said. "We can't keep doing that, especially against Tennessee this week. If we do, they'll embarrass us, embarrass us real bad."

Barker returned to practice Monday despite his sore shoulder, but his status for the Tennessee game is still in doubt.

It appears Barker will at least get some playing time, based on his recovery so far from the severe bruise he received on his throwing shoulder against Southern Mississippi.

An MRI showed no major damage, and Barker said the injury felt better Monday than it did the day before.

"He was able to practice a little bit," Stallings said. "Hopefully, he'll be close to full speed by Wednesday. He was a little better than we anticipated him being. He didn't throw hard but he threw fairly well. The test is how sore he is (today)."

Barker is 29-1-1 in four years as the starting quarterback. Two weeks ago, he threw for a career-high 396 yards in a come-from-behind win over Georgia.

After he was injured early in the third quarter Saturday, the Tide managed only two more first downs the rest of the game with Burdick running the show.

Harding ready for return to spotlight

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Proclaiming herself "really happy" nine months after the attack on rival figure skater Nancy Kerrigan, Tonya Harding is preparing for a return to the public spotlight.

Harding's agent says he's working on skating exhibitions for Harding in Greece and Japan. Such trips would require the approval of Harding's probation officer, since her travel is restricted to Oregon, Washington and California.

Harding spoke with a television station and a newspaper reporter after practice Monday.

She declined to talk about the Kerrigan case or the others who were convicted for their roles in it. Harding is serving three years' probation after pleading guilty to conspiracy to hinder prosecution in the Kerrigan case. Harding also was ordered to pay $160,000 in fines and fees and is doing 500 hours of community service.

"I'm trying to put things back together," Harding told KGW-TV. "When something like that happens, you can't just forget about it. I do see a psychiatrist to try and help me through it because it was a tragedy what has happened."

She is ineligible for all amateur and some professional competitions because she has been banned for life by the U.S. Figure Skating Association. The USFSA also stripped her of the national championship she won in January.

"It's really different but it's different for the good," she said of her life since the Kerrigan case wound down. "It's really sad what happened, but I'm looking forward to my future, my life. I'm really happy."

Harding now has a doubles partner and hopes to appear in exhibitions soon.

"It would be really fun if I could do some appearances," Harding said. "I love skating and I always will. It keeps me in shape and gives the people what they want to see."

Harding's ex-husband Jeff Gillooly, her would-be bodyguard Shawn Eckardt and two others are serving prison terms for their part in the attack on Kerrigan.

Harding said she cherishes her Olympic appearance, even though she had to go to court to ensure her right to compete in Lillehammer, Norway, and wound up finishing eighth.

"My dream came true to be able to go for a second time," she said. "I did my best and it's OK that I didn't win."

'Specialist' debuts atop box office

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone's action film The Specialist knocked The River Wild out of top spot at the weekend box office as it opened with $14.3 million in ticket sales.

The romantic comedy Only You, the only other new film in wide release, premiered in third with a moderate gross of $5.7 million, Monday figures showed.

Forrest Gump and Jason's Lyric were both popular and The Shawshank Redemption played strongly in limited release.

The top 15 movies at U.S. and Canadian theaters over the weekend, as compiled by Entertainment Data Inc. and Exhibitor Relations Co. from actual returns and studio estimates:

1. The Specialist, Warner Bros., $14.3 million, 2,522 locations, $5,677 per location, $14.3 million, one week.
2. The River Wild, Universal, $7.1 million, 2,116 locations, $3,360 per location, $20.3 million, two weeks.

Amarillo man falls to death over cliff

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — An Amarillo, Texas, man died when he fell over a 350- to 400-foot cliff while hiking with a friend in the Sacramento Mountains near Alamogordo, officials said.

William Andrews, 22, died Friday at the base of the cliff in Mule Canyon, said Mark Klaene, New Mexico State Police field coordinator.

Andrews and a friend drove from Dog Canyon to the base of Arrow Canyon, five to six miles north of Dog Canyon in the foothills of the Sacramento Mountains, Klaene said.

Dog Canyon, where Andrews and his wife were visiting friends, is about 10 miles south of Alamogordo, he said.

"They went up the canyon in the foothills, basically intended for a day hike, got to the top and decided to head home," Klaene said.

They started down and ended up in Mule Canyon, one canyon north of Arrow Canyon, he said.

"They ran into a cliff face that they obviously did not know much about," Klaene said.

They saw a small vertical drop to a ledge "and decided that was something they could attempt to do," he said.

They used a piece of one-quarter-inch diameter nylon rope to lower down their backpacks, then Andrews tried to lower himself hand-over-hand using the same rope, Klaene said.

"He got a few feet down, slipped and fell on the ledge then fell the remainder of the way to the bottom of the cliff," Klaene said. "His buddy saw him hit the ledge then fall out of site."

Andrews' friend hiked to a house and notified authorities, Klaene said.

A helicopter from the 571st Medical Company Military Assistance Air Ambulance from Fort Bliss, Texas, located the body Friday evening, Klaene said.

About 30 search and rescue team members spent 12 hours removing the body Saturday, he said.

The foothills, dotted with desert-type vegetation, has a lot of loose rock, steep slopes and cliffs ranging from 50 feet to 400 feet, Klaene said.

Two Americans, German win Nobel Prize in economics

By THOMAS GINSBERG
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two Americans and a German won the Nobel Prize in economics today for their groundbreaking study of theories used in such games as chess and poker to help explain economic interactions.

The winners named by the Swedish Academy were Hungarian-born John C. Harsanyi of the University of California at Berkeley; John F. Nash of Princeton University; and Reinhard Selten of the University of Bonn.

The researchers will share the $930,000 prize. They were honored for their pioneering analysis of equilibria, using games to advance the theory of economic behavior, the Royal Swedish Academy said.

Their work used strategies applied in such common games as chess and poker to make predictions about the interaction between companies and how the market reacts.

"Everyone knows that in these games, players have to think ahead — devise a strategy based on expected countermoves from the other player(s)," the academy said in a statement.

"Such strategic interaction also characterizes many economic situations, and game theory has therefore proved to be very useful in economic analysis," it said.

The researchers focused on the concept of equilibrium, a formula in which players in games — or executives in companies — are given optimal information about each other's positions to form their own strategies.

It was borrowed in part from the biological concept of natural selection. Their research has been applied to everything from the study of environment to analysis of foreign trade and information, the statement said.

"It applies to a chess or poker player as well as to a finance minister," said Assar Lindbeck of the Swedish Academy. "Originally the theory has its basis in chess or poker. Nash used poker as example in (his) thesis."

Nash was singled out for refining the "Nash Equilibrium," a formula in which players are given optimal information about each other's positions to form their own strategies.

"The Nash Equilibrium has become a standard tool in almost all areas of economic theory in order to improve our understanding of complex strategic interaction," the academy said.

Harsanyi, a naturalized American who has taught at Berkeley since 1964, was lauded for showing how games of incomplete information can be analyzed. The academy praised him as well for "significant contributions to the foundations of welfare economics."

Selten, who co-wrote a book with Harsanyi on equilibrium selection in games, was the first to refine the Nash Equilibrium concept and applied these to analyses of competition with only a few sellers, the academy said.

Selten, 64, said today: "Game theory is concerned with conflict cooperation. A game is a model of such a situation, a mathematical model. It has some similarity with parlor games, which are used in models."

Model analyses provide "insight into the nature of such game situations. You understand much better why people do some things in certain situations. It makes it easier for you to understand a lot of strategic interaction."

As the only Nobel award not created by the industrialist Alfred Nobel, the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science was first awarded by Sweden's Central Bank in 1969 in recognition of the field's growing importance in the world.

Americans have dominated the winners' circle, and the University of Chicago has stood at the center. Of the 34 people honored since the prize was instituted, 21 have been from the United States, and one-third of those worked at the university.

Nine suspended in inmate's death

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Nine corrections employees were suspended Monday after an inmate died and two others were hurt in disturbances over the weekend at the Terrell prison near Livingston.

Unauthorized and excessive use of force may have been used by employees during attempts by inmates to overpower prison guards in a recreational area, said Andy Collins, executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Charges were expected to be filed against both inmates and prison staffers, Collins said.

Michael McCoy, 30, serving a six-year term for burglary and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in Galveston County, died late Sunday at the prison hospital in Galveston.

The prison system, in a statement, said McCoy was taken to the hospital Friday night after he was found unconscious in his cell.

The cause of death was not immediately released.
