Search for Snyder ISD superintendent underway as trustees prepare wish list

By Wade Warren
SDN Managing Editor

Apparently Snyder citizens feel comfortable about letting the local school board define the type person who will next lead the schools as only one person showed up at a public hearing on the subject Thursday evening.

This non-meeting followed a 1½-hour session by school trustees as they tossed out qualities they want to see in the next Snyder ISD superintendent.

In this meeting, a long-range vision for the district seemed to top the list along with the ability to handle a district that has a declining enrollment and as board president Mark McCormick said, "buildings that have aged and have reached beyond their life expectancy."

Trustee Mike Levens stated that he wants a superintendent that will strive to have the local schools achieve a high academic rating, and one that will not have teachers "teach to the test."

"Snyder has a reputation of being an excellent school system," added Luann Burleson. "We have high expectations for all programs. This will be a good job for someone to have – we have a great staff and great kids."

"This is a wonderful school district but it has not always been that way," added Richard Chambers. "I don't want it to be the way it was 10 years ago.

"We do have deteriorating facilities, and the new superintendent will probably have to have a bond issue," added Chambers.

"I'm looking for someone with strong leadership qualities and who is not looking to stay here three years and then retire," said Glenn Clarady.

"Our facilities are a problem," said Doug Neff. "And I want someone with high morals. "That's very important to me."

That sentiment was repeated by Cathy Peoples as she said the profile definitely has to include someone with high morals. "It's going to have to be someone who can also handle criticism," added Peoples.

Trustees as a whole said the replacement for the retired Gayle Lomax could either be an assistant superintendent or a superintendent presently. "That's not an issue," said McCormick.

"We don't want a politician," said Levens. "But we want one with a good track record and who has been tried by fire."

The board met with Don Killough, director of superintendent search services for the Texas Association of School Boards (TASB), and Kathee Lupton, TASB field service representative.

The pair had met earlier in the day with some two dozen teachers about the profile, and had meetings set this morning with various groups.

Lupton will present the superintendent profile to the board when it meets in regular session Thursday. Killough did tell the board to be prepared to pay more than the $83,000 yearly salary of the former superintendent.

The application deadline is Nov. 1 and the initial interviews start Nov. 12.

Killough stressed the need to keep the names of the applicants confidential.

"The longer you can guarantee confidentiality, the better the pool," said Killough. "The longer the better."

Killough added that he expects to trim the list of candidates to six for the board to interview.

It is not expected that the new superintendent would report to the district until March 1.

MY TURN

by Wade Warren

An office holder never quits campaigning, and probably never should if they want to be re-elected.

However, when a politician/office holder uses the resources of that office to send out obvious campaign material under the guise of a news release – we balk at that practice.

Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander sends out a ton of stuff here and to every other newspaper in the state.

Some information, such as the sales tax rebate to cities, is good, but most of the stuff looks like it was generated with hopes of keeping her name out in public just in case she wants to keep on the taxpayers' payroll.

We received a news release in August from her office that told about the state getting the highest possible ratings from all three of New York's top ratings firms on short-term notes. She went on to explain that high bond ratings mean lower interest rates for short-term notes sold at this time every year.

That's good because Texas apparently will need all the money it can roust up in the next fiscal period.

She also enclosed another release sent out on a weekly basis titled "Keeping an Eye on Texas."

This particular week the subject was on LBJ and the fact that Texas (state employees would have been a better word here) has celebrated President Lyndon Baines Johnson's birthday since 1973 as an official state holiday.

Really don't know the purpose of the comptroller's office sending out information like this as it appears that would be better suited to the tourist agency as the release included a map to the LBJ Ranch.

It also listed the times of the free ranch tours and said the source of the information was Carole Keeton Rylander, Texas Comptroller.

We assumed a comptroller should really do more comptrolling than map-making but that was really not the worst abuse of trying to keep your name in front of the public at tax-payer expense as there was one entire page devoted to Rylander having knee surgery!

We don't know how much this mailing cost, but the report on her knee surgery was one page of a three page report mailed to every newspaper in the state, and probably to untold others.

She could have cut the cost by one-third by not telling us about her arthroscopic surgery so she could again "charge the net playing doubles."

We kept looking for a disclaimer stating that this report was not prepared or mailed at taxpayer expense, but we found none.

But we did learn that she taught government and history while teaching tennis at McCallum High School and later provided free tennis lessons for children who could not afford them.

Sounds like she is appealing for votes from school teachers and the poor.

Like we said, an office holder never quits campaigning. We just wish they would use their own money.

Tropical Storm Fay is threatening Texas coast

HOUSTON (AP) — A disorganized Tropical Storm Fay parked in the Gulf of Mexico off the upper Texas coast today bringing winds and some rain but few immediate serious problems.

A handful of school districts, including Galveston public schools, were closed but road difficulties were minimal and power and water supplies were not affected.

Forecasters from the National Hurricane Center said the storm's poorly defined center made its motion "very problematic" with best estimates that the tropical storm was stationary. However, this morning it began to become more organized.

Movement was expected to the west or northwest although one computer model from the hurricane center suggested the storm could meander in the Gulf of Mexico for up to six days.

The low-pressure system in the Gulf officially became a tropical depression at 4 p.m. Thursday and was upgraded to Tropical Storm Fay about six hours later as winds pushed above 39 mph and neared 60 mph.

It's the first tropical storm to threaten Texas since June of last year, when remnants of Tropical Storm Allison dumped up to three feet of rain on the Houston area, killing 22 and causing an estimated $5 billion in damage.

At midmorning today, maximum sustained winds were near 40 mph, making it a minimal tropical storm, although some strengthening was forecast.

Tropical storm warnings were up for counties from Matagorda, about 75 miles southwest of Galveston, and up the Texas coast into Louisiana to Intracoastal City, La., about 170 miles northeast of Galveston. Seven counties in a 100-mile stretch along the Texas coast were under the tropical storm warning.

Some 4 to 6 inches of rain were predicted with more than 10 inches possible along the coastline.

In addition, a tropical storm wind watch was posted through Saturday for inland counties: Austin, Colorado, Fort Bend, Jackson, Waller and Wharton.

Galveston County officials recommended residents of the west end of the island about 50 miles southeast of Houston leave. Other voluntary evacuations were suggested for the Bolivar Peninsula, across from Galveston, and Surfside Beach, southwest down the coast.

"You can just recommend, ask, beg and borrow and plead," said John Simsen at the Galveston County Office of Emergency Management. "The main reason is that we don't want water to get bad and they get scared and they call us and then we have to send someone out to get them and we don't want to put responders in danger.

"Basically, the rule of thumb is get out while you can. Once you see water on the road, forget it. Turn around and go home."

The National Weather Service said the storm resembled Tropical Storm Frances, which hit the same area in 1998.

Galveston County took the brunt of that storm with punishing tides and torrential rain inflicting an estimated $256 million worth of damage. Nearly 50 homes were destroyed and more than 2,700 sustained major damage. Damage in other areas pushed the total monetary losses to more than $300 million.

Local man gets 9 years for 3rd DWI

A 36-year-old Scurry County man will serve nine years in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice following a guilty plea entered in 132nd District Court.

Jimmy Vaughn Cain of 6711 Camp Springs Road pleaded guilty before District Judge Ernie Armstrong to a July 6 charge of felony driving while intoxicated.

Cain has two previous DWI convictions in Scurry County.

Extension pay plans are available for boll weevil eradication

The Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation is offering payment extension agreements to aid Rolling Plains Central Zone cotton growers who have been affected by adverse weather conditions.

"For those having difficulty paying their assessment, help is available by contacting the assessments department and arranging an extension agreement," said chief financial officer Tina Ballard.

She encourages those who have not made arrangements for an extension agreement to contact foundation headquarters immediately.

The extension agreement allows producers to pay out their assessments over a set period of time. The interest rate on extension agreements is one percent per month.

Those who are delinquent in payment and who do not have an extension agreement are subject to a late penalty of 1.5 percent per month.

To avoid delinquency problems associated with late payment, contact the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation Assessments Department in Abileneat its toll-free number, 1-866-672-2800.

Tattoos are personal memorials to Sept. 11

NEW YORK (AP) — Before Sept. 11, Charlie Ross had three tattoos — Bugs Bunny, a peace sign and a feather design. After the attack, he added a fourth — a design on his forearm with the Sept. 11 date, the tower and floor from which he escaped, and a cross symbolizing four people who died.

Ross, a manager at Bank of America on the 81st floor of the north tower, lost three co-workers and a friend, Steven Strobert, a Cantor Fitzgerald trader, in the attack.

"New Year's Eve, we all toasted to Steve and kissed my arm," said Ross, 32. "I figure one day we'll all be together."

Ross wasn't alone in deciding a tattoo could express his feelings about the attacks. Firefighters, police officers and bereaved relatives all sought solace through memorials inked into their skin.

Like those long favored by military veterans, Sept. 11 tattoos have become a public declaration of loss, defiance and survival.

With business virtually shut down after the attacks, MacDougal Street Tattoo in lower Manhattan offered free tattoos to ground zero recovery workers. Many chose from a selection of patriotic and anti-al-Qaida designs put together by co-owner Joshua Everett.

"We were putting in overtime like the guys downtown were putting in overtime," Everett said. "It is probably the most significant thing I've done in tattoo. It made me feel a part of the community."

The proprietors of Island Tattoo, on Staten Island, say they have decorated more than 300 firefighters with a commemorative design. Half the revenue, they say, goes to a fund for widows and children — $11,500 so far. Gary Lustig, a firefighter who designed the tattoo, said it has been "medicinal" in helping firefighters recover emotionally.

Though most customers asked for simple patriotic symbols like flags and bald eagles, some of the Sept. 11 body art is spectacular.

"Tattooing itself has evolved," said Dr. Enid Schildkrout, curator of the 2000 exhibition "Body Art: Marks of Identity" at the American Museum of Natural History.

Sept. 11 tattoos represent a convergence of body art's growing popularity and the need to acknowledge that life has changed, Schildkrout said.

"It is a way of remembering something that was going to disappear from your life ... of immediately saying this is who I am. I don't want to forget. I don't want anyone else to forget."

Steven Dunbar, 30, had always wanted a tattoo of King Kong. He now has one, showing the famous ape catching the planes and saving the towers. The design, wrapped around his left leg, took 20 hours to apply and 10 days to heal.

"I thought it was painful. But it wasn't nearly as painful as what other people went through that day," Dunbar said.

Sam Cannizzaro, 65, spent six hours under a buzzing needle after his firefighter son, Brian, died in the towers on Sept. 11. The image covering Sam's left calf shows Brian in the title roll of the movie he loved, "The Gladiator" along with a motto from the movie, "Strength and Honor."

"I thought it was a way that he would be part of me," said Sam, himself a 32-year firefighter. "I know that when my time comes we'll be together."

Brian's brother, Craig Cannizzaro, 28, started training this month at the New York City Fire Academy under his brother's and father's badge number. He got a tattoo similar to his father's on his left arm.

"I just know that he'll always be with me," Craig said. "I know I can just look over my shoulder and he's right there."

Four women killed in revenge ambush

DONNA (AP) — Police were searching for three possible suspects in a bloody ambush on six women who were driving home from a local nightclub. Four of the women died in the attack.

Hidalgo County deputies described the early Thursday shootings as "revenge/rage" oriented, saying the primary suspect was a man who, according to witnesses, told the women in Spanish they would "pay for" their decision not to leave Garcia's Place nightclub with him.

Two friends of the man who were at the bar also are considered suspects, authorities said.

Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department spokesman Capt. Roy Quintanilha said the four women "were killed in the most gruesome manner imaginable," shot with one or more semiautomatic pistols or assault-type rifles. More than 50 rifle and bullet casings were recovered at the scene.

Police said the women were attacked as their car pulled up to their trailer home. Four of the women died, and a fifth woman was in stable condition at Valley Baptist Medical Center.

A sixth woman was apparently shielded by one of the victims who had collapsed on top of her, hiding until dawn before turning herself over to investigators.

Their names were not released pending notification of family.

Neighbor Celia Silva, 30, said the women were apparently paid for each drink they got patrons to drink. Bar owner Felix Garcia denied the women worked for him, saying they had been showing up recently at the bar, according to a story in today's Valley Morning Star.

Two of the women had recently moved into the trailer. At least one had children in Mexico, Silva said.

Silva said the shooting went on for at least a minute, punctuated by pauses she imagined were for reloading the weapon. "You could tell they wanted to make sure they were dead," she said.

In the year ahead you may find yourself benefiting from your past experiences by being more flexible and adaptable to your present ones. Now, when you get blocked by certain kinds of obstacles, you'll know how to circumvent them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Leaving things to the last minute could result in a frustrating jumble for you. Allocate your day so that you allow adequate time for taking care of all essential matters. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You have as good a chance as the other guy of winning in competitive involvements today. However, if you go in seeing yourself as the underdog, you may feel it necessary to prove yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — It will be wise not to mix financial transactions with friends today. If things go amiss, a big misunderstanding may arise. Treat all money matters in a businesslike manner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — If your judgment concerning a competitive involvement is a trifle distorted today, there is a very strong chance you could get yourself immersed in something that is way over your head.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You're not going to be in the mood today to put up with an acquaintance who has a domineering personality and who tends to impose his/her will on others. You're liable to knock the chip off the person's shoulder.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Make a point today of not asking too many questions of a close associate who is keeping something to him/herself. Your pal may have valid reasons for not making any disclosures.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Should someone not be in accord with your way of doing things today, because it does not benefit him/her, you can expect this person to cause a problem for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Expecting others to do something perfectly that you yourself aren't able to do is being unrealistic, not to mention demeaning. Lead by example, not by humiliation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Sometimes it is necessary to take a calculated risk, but today it is apt to prove counterproductive. You might take a gamble that goes beyond reasonable probabilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Going to the wrong person for counsel is worst than getting no guidance at all. If you need advice today, talk to an expert, not another pal who may know less than you do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — If you start pointing out the shortcomings of others today, don't expect to be immune from criticism yourself. The responses you get could severely deflate your ego.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — If your mate is presently managing the budget and doing a good job, leave well enough alone. Your ability to handle resources may not be up to par.

DENVER (AP) — A man accused of trying to help Islamic terrorists was injured in a fight with another prisoner at a Virginia jail, officials said.

James Ujaama, 36, and an unidentified inmate got into a fight Wednesday in the jail's gymnasium, Justice Department spokesman Drew Wade said Thursday. He said the men were fighting over a newspaper. Ujaama suffered a lump on his forehead and an abrasion on one cheek, Wade said.

Ujaama family spokesman Leila McDowell said the injuries were serious and required medical attention. "He deserves protection, as someone who is innocent until proven guilty," McDowell said.

Ujaama was not charged. The other inmate faces charges of assault on an inmate, fighting and creating a security disturbance.

In Ujaama's most recent court appearance last week, his lawyer complained a jail guard had referred to him as "bin Laden boy." Ward said Ujaama is "being given the same privileges as any other inmate who is not in solitary confinement."

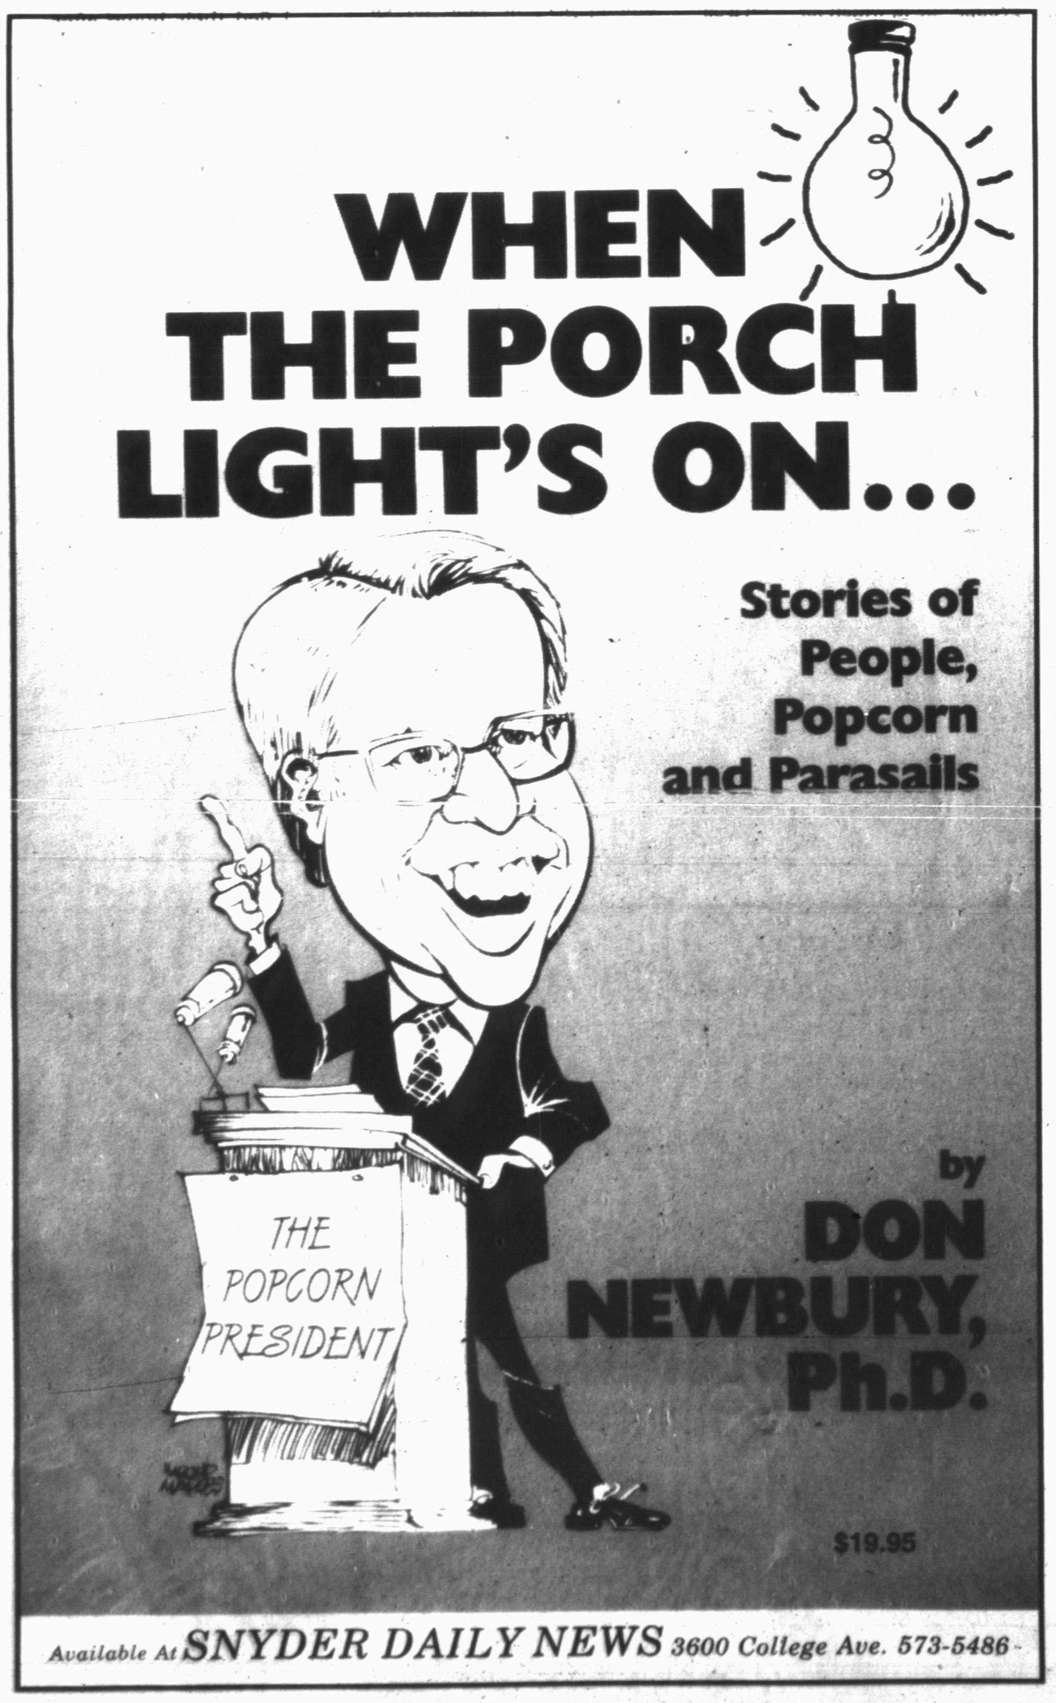

No details have been released about Ujaama's expected transfer to Seattle, where he was indicted by a federal grand jury Aug. 28 for allegedly developing a training camp for Islamic terrorists in rural Oregon.

Plan to arm commercial pilots debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to allow all commercial pilots to carry weapons in the cockpit may be scaled back as the airline industry and the Bush administration raise concerns about safety and training.

The Senate voted overwhelmingly on Thursday to arm pilots after the Bush administration dropped its opposition to the idea.

In a letter to two senators, the White House said only pilots who volunteer to carry weapons and receive extensive training should be armed. It also recommended giving pilots lockboxes for the weapons so they won't be left in the cockpit.

The heads of 21 airlines sent a letter to each senator saying a number of questions must be answered before arming pilots is considered.

"We believe that the public must know what studies or testing have been conducted to determine the effects of an accidental weapon discharge in a pressurized aircraft at altitude," the letter said. The airline executives also questioned where the firearms would be stowed between flights and whether training the pilots would disrupt airline schedules.

The 14,500-member union representing American Airlines pilots supports arming them. Al Aitken, a pilot speaking for the union, said the 87-6 vote meant the Senate recognized that all the security layers the administration is putting into place are still inadequate.

"The people who need the weapons as a last line of defense are the pilots," Aitken said. "They're the only ones they're trying to keep the gun from," he said, adding that thousands of state and federal law enforcement officers travel on planes while armed.

The Senate attached the measure to the bill that would create a new Cabinet agency dedicated to combating terrorism within U.S. borders.

The House passed a bill 310-113 in July to create a program that would train and provide weapons to some pilots who volunteer as special deputies.

To address some of the airlines' concerns, the administration suggested that a "detailed, effective" training program be designed from scratch and tested.

The administration also warned the cost would be significant — $900 million to start and $250 million annually thereafter — and said there is no money now in the Transportation Security Administration budget to cover the expenses.

The letter from TSA chief James Loy was delivered to Sens. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and John McCain, R-Ariz. Hollings is chairman of the Senate Commerce and Transportation Committee; McCain is the committee's ranking Republican.

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., offered the amendment, which would prohibit airlines and the federal government from barring armed pilots.

"We prefer a more comprehensive approach in our amendment, but are grateful for any efforts by the administration to roll the ball down the field," said Smith's spokeswoman, Lisa Harrison.

Smith's amendment also mandated a minimum of 28 hours of self-defense training for flight attendants. Many flight attendants say they haven't been adequately taught to defend themselves or their passengers from terrorists because each airline offers different training for dealing with potential threats.

The Senate also voted Thursday to prohibit corporations that relocate offshore to escape U.S. taxes from getting federal contracts with the proposed Homeland Security Department.

Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., chief sponsor of the tax measure, called offshore relocation "an egregious tax dodge."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, argued that corporations are forced offshore by a burdensome U.S. tax code that puts them at a disadvantage with foreign competitors.

The contracts ban is similar to one approved by the House last month.

Most of the main sticking points in the Homeland Security debate remain unresolved, chiefly the proposal by President Bush for broad powers to hire, fire, reassign and demote the agency's estimated 170,000 workers. The Democrat-written Senate bill does not include that management flexibility and imposes limits on the president's ability to waive union bargaining rights in matters of national security.

At a rally in Louisville, Ky., Bush repeated his insistence for "the flexibility to move people around to address our vulnerabilities."

"The enemy moves quickly, and so should the federal government be able to move quickly," Bush said. "The Senate must hear this."

Jerry Schilling has resigned his position

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Music industry veteran Jerry Schilling, who was a confidante of Elvis Presley, has resigned as president and chief executive officer of the Memphis and Shelby County Music Commission.

His resignation was announced Wednesday. He took the post in 1999.

Schilling, 59, wouldn't discuss the reasons for his departure. But he told The Commercial Appeal, "I think the timing is right for a change — but I'm definitely going to miss it."

In April, the Commission's board retained him by a vote of 11-9.

In the 1960s and '70s, Schilling was Presley's bodyguard and a member of the "Memphis Mafia," a group of men who were the performer's closest friends. He later managed the Sweet Inspirations, Presley's backup singers onstage, and the Beach Boys.

Schilling said he'll look into opportunities in the Memphis area and on the West Coast. He lived for many years in Los Angeles, where he ran Jerry Schilling Management and also worked as a film editor.

Take time to listen and to analyze

By Phillip Alder

William Faulkner wrote, "The artist doesn't have time to listen to the critics. The ones who want to be writers read the reviews; the ones who want to write don't have the time to read reviews."

A person who wants to be a good bridge player, though, must listen to the bidding and read the cards.

In this deal, West leads the club ace against four spades. What should he do next?

North started by bidding four-card suits up the line. Then, when South rebid one spade, North correctly jumped to game. A jump rebid of three spades should be played as invitational, showing only 10-12 support points.

How did the bidding start? Right — declarer opened one diamond. That bid might be made with three diamonds, but only when the hand has exactly 4-4-3-2 shape, in that order. But if South had that distribution, he would have raised hearts on the second round, not rebid one spade. So, South must have at least four diamonds. There are three in the dummy, and West has five. That leaves at most a singleton for East. Therefore, there are three ways for West to win by shifting to a diamond at trick two: East might ruff immediately, or have the singleton diamond ace, or hold an early trump trick.

As you can see, this defense defeats the contract. East wins the first (or second) round of trumps, puts West on lead with the carefully preserved club king, and receives the contract-killing diamond ruff.

Less thoughtful players immediately cash the second club trick, giving the critics more grist for their mills.

Boy, 14, shot and killed by police officer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A 14-year-old boy who said he was possessed by demons went to church for help but was shot by police after pointing what turned out to be a BB gun at officers, authorities said.

Dominic Montoya came to Taylor Ranch Baptist Church looking for prayer, said minister of education Cindy Harrison.

"He said he had been having some struggles all the way up through town and that he was possessed by demons and wanted prayer and needed help," Harrison told The Albuquerque Tribune. "He looked very troubled."

Harrison said the choir director's wife sat down and prayed with Montoya, but then noticed he had a gun. She got the attention of her husband, who was in the church's worship center with their two young children, and he called police.

Detective Jeff Arbogast said when officers arrived, Montoya pointed a BB gun at them and was shot twice in the abdomen. Police said he had earlier threatened his mother, neighbors and church members with the same gun.

"His mindset is really unclear," Arbogast said. "We're trying to understand why he did what he did."

Police had been called earlier by Montoya's mother, who told them she and her 3-year-old child had fled their home after Montoya pointed a BB gun at her and threatened her, Arbogast said.

Update on chronic fatigue syndrome

DEAR READERS: I have recently received a brochure from the Chronic Fatigue Immune Dysfunction Syndrome Society, a legitimate organization dedicated to helping people with chronic fatigue syndrome, an elusive constellation of symptoms that includes (but is not limited to) exhaustion, headache, poor memory, sore throat, achy muscles, painful joints and tender lymph glands.

I term the syndrome "elusive" because the diagnosis is made only by exclusion of more common, treatable ailments, including anemia, cancer, chronic disease of any kind, hidden infection and Lyme disease.

After conventional medical diagnoses have been investigated and discarded, a group of people remain for whom no definitive diagnosis can be made using modern medical skills.

Such patients are said to suffer from chronic fatigue syndrome, which lasts up to six years, tends to be cyclic, leads to no known medical complications and usually frustrates patients and doctors alike.

The syndrome may begin as acute infectious mononucleosis (or similar viral illnesses) and, in fact, many of the symptoms do suggest an ongoing viral infection. On the other hand, a sizeable proportion of patients, primarily women, do exhibit unequivocal evidence of depression, mood disorders, excessive anxiety and extreme reactions to stress. Whether the psychological characteristics are primary or secondary is arguable. The cause of chronic fatigue syndrome is unknown, and no specific treatment exists. Some studies have suggested that the disorder is associated with immunological abnormalities, but conclusive deficiencies have yet to be demonstrated.

No wonder, then, patients perceive they have been shortchanged by the medical profession, the very resource that claims to have miraculous resources for those people in need. As a result, many CFS sufferers have eagerly turned to alternative health practitioners for understanding and assistance and have developed their own nationwide support group.

These patients welcome the voice of sympathetic authority. Consequently, they have frequently been victimized by unscrupulous healers who latch onto any "designer diagnosis" or fad illness - such as chronic candida, hypoglycemia and chronic Epstein-Barr virus infection - none of which has been shown to be the basis of chronic fatigue syndrome, or "yuppie flu," as it is sometimes depreciatingly labeled.

I received the CFIDSS brochure because they thought I might plug the organization. Well, I have. For more information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to CFIDSS, Box 230108, Portland, OR 97223.

However, one of my primary purposes in mentioning chronic fatigue syndrome is to share a concern about CFIDSS and other groups like it, which focus on a single health problem. In the brochure, the organization pledges to help patients find doctors who are "enlightened" about chronic fatigue syndrome. I find this limited view to be both sad and dangerous. Doctors are now being artificially classed into two groups: those who are "enlightened" (read: sympathetic) and those who aren't. There's no mention of objectivity, skill and compassion. I'm concerned that the most "enlightened" practitioners may be the very ones who encourage useless, untested and expensive treatment. Such physicians may not be the best (or even the most appropriate) resource to diagnose and treat the disorder. Unlike religion and philosophy, medical enlightenment often translates into: "Boy, have I just found a gold mine!" Therefore, I encourage patients to search for a rheumatologist or, failing that, an all-around, good, caring physician, not merely an alternative practitioner whose hobby is other people's misfortunes. This is exploitation, not specialization.

The CFIDSS brochure contains a report from the Centers for Disease Control. The experts concluded: "We cannot recommend physicians for referral. Our general recommendation is to consult an infectious disease expert ... ." This approach seems sensible to me because it substitutes capability for enlightenment. We have enough trouble in our complex society without adding to the confusion with "enlightened" doctors, when good diagnosticians are what is needed.

Dear Abby

Woman finds the dating pool is fished out in a small town

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 33-year-old, unattached woman who is extremely shy and lonely. Please don't tell me to look for companionship in church (done that) or clubs, which don't exist in my small town.

The nearest singles group is a 30-mile drive, and the "pickings" there are slim. Most of my friends are married and preoccupied with husbands and busy households. We might meet for coffee or an occasional meal, but not often.

The few single girlfriends I have are romantically involved and do not want to leave their boyfriends even for an hour, so I am stuck every weekend at home by myself. I tried an Internet dating service. All the responses I got were from men 50 and older — even though I requested no one over 37.

I am beginning to doubt myself as a person — fearing that no one will ever want to get close to me. My attitude is starting to affect my job performance.

Abby, am I asking too much to want someone to cuddle up with at night; someone to be there when I've had a rough day; someone to go bike riding with or for a day at the beach?

Can you help me? Please tell me what I can do. My birthday is coming up. All I want in the whole world is to spend it with someone who cares about me. — LONELY IN A SMALL TOWN SOMEWHERE IN VIRGINIA

DEAR LONELY: Any experienced fisherman knows that in order to be successful, you have to row your boat to where the fish are biting.

Take a look at a map and find a medium-to-large city that you think might offer you a chance for employment and the opportunities to mix with interesting people your age. Once there, get involved in activities where "nice people" meet. (Volunteer work is a good choice.)

P.S. If you feel your shyness is limiting your opportunities, I urge you to get counseling. It would be the most valuable birthday present you could give yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-mother-in-law, Thelma Barcal, lived in Sioux City, Iowa and took delight in telling this true story from the 1920s about a pair of young twin girls who lived next door to her on — I believe — Jackson Street.

Thelma took great pride in the flowers she grew in her backyard. Evidently the twins liked them, too. In fact, they liked them so much that one day they picked most of them.

The next thing Thelma knew, her doorbell rang — and there stood the twins at her front door wanting to sell her own flowers back to her!

Those precocious twin girls grew up to be "Dear Abby" and "Ann Landers." Thought you might enjoy this little trip down memory lane. — ALICE MOSES, HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

DEAR ALICE: I did, indeed. I'm not surprised that my mother and my aunt were so enterprising at such a tender age. However, I'm relieved the two "hot petal pushers" decided to devote their talents to something legitimate before they were "busted" for their entrepreneurship. (Both were too short to look good in horizontal stripes!)

Coyotes gun for playoffs

The Borden County Coyotes open the 2002 campaign tonight at Meadow, and Head Coach Bobby Avery sees no reason why this year's squad can't reach the playoffs, or unseat defending district champion Sands.

"I like what I see," he said. "Looking at the schedule, we may win seven or eight games."

The Coyotes will face a stiff challenge in the opener against a Meadow team that moved down from 11-man football following last season.

Avery said Meadow is a bigger club than the Coyotes, and will line up tight to take advantage of their size. "They will probably try to power it through us."

Meadow suffered a major blow in the preseason, when 1,000-yard rusher Clendon Henderson broke his ankle on the first play in the first scrimmage this year.

The Coyotes are built around a nucleus of four seniors, who will try to help the team build on its .500 record from a year ago.

Four-year starter T.J. Sharp is poised for a breakout season at running back after sustaining a dislocated elbow last season that cost him two games.

"T.J. is one of the better running backs in the district, if not the best," Avery said.

Quarterback Brionne Jackson takes over under center from departed starter Jacob Zant, and Avery said the lefty signal-caller has the right tools to get the job done. "He's accurate and has a good arm and a smart head," he said.

Talin Pepper, a three-year varsity starter, will anchor the offensive front at center, and will play cornerback when the Coyote defense takes the field.

Guard Raul Rodriguez will also see time at running back this year. ""He's quick and a good blocker, and he has excellent hands."

Joins Ruth, McGwire and Sosa...

A-Rod tops 50 homers two seasons in a row

BALTIMORE (AP) — After joining Babe Ruth, Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa in the major league record book, Alex Rodriguez brought up a less recognizable name: Rudy Jaramillo.

Rodriguez hit two home runs to become the first player in the majors to reach 50 this season, and three of his teammates also connected as the Texas Rangers cruised past the Baltimore Orioles 11-2 Thursday.

Rodriguez, who hit 52 last year, is the fifth player in major league history to have successive 50-homer seasons. He follows Ruth, McGwire, Sosa and Ken Griffey Jr.

"It's indicative of the hard work I put in — offseason, in season," Rodriguez said. "Rudy Jaramillo, our hitting coach, has been very inspiring to me because he's worked day and night to fix this ugly swing that I have. We work hard."

Rodriguez homered twice against Jason Johnson, hitting a two-run drive in the first inning and a solo shot in the third. It was his ninth multihomer game of the season and the 29th of his career.

The $252 million shortstop managed to get hold of the ball that gave him 50 for the season, working a slick deal with the fan who caught it.

"A ball and a bat. Not bad at all," Rodriguez said. "I'll take that every day."

Rodriguez was even more pleased with his accomplishment, although he wistfully wondered how nice it would have been if the Rangers, last in the AL West, were vying for the playoffs.

"I'm proud of 50 home runs in back-to-back years. It's a thrill," he said. "It's kind of bittersweet because you're doing it in a situation where the team isn't excelling and doing great things. Still, a lot of the preparation and work ethic pays off."

He went 1-for-7 in the first two games of the series, but Orioles manager Mike Hargrove knew it was only a matter of time before Rodriguez heated up.

"The land mine is there. You just hope you don't step on it," Hargrove said. "You can't throw a player like A-Rod up in the zone in the middle of the plate."

Carl Everett, Todd Hollandsworth and Michael Young all homered in a five-run fifth inning to give Texas an 11-1 lead.

Texas has homered in a team-record 23 straight games, two short of the major league record. Rodriguez has accounted for 13 of the Rangers' 47 homers during the streak.

Rodriguez drove in three runs to boost his major league-leading total to 124. The last player to lead the majors in homers and RBIs in the same season was Cecil Fielder in 1991.

Making his 300th career start, Kenny Rogers (13-7) gave up two runs and six hits in seven innings for the Rangers, who took two of three from Baltimore to win the season series 6-3.

Jeff Conine homered for the Orioles, who have lost 11 of 12.

Using Rodriguez's two homers, an RBI single by Everett and a two-run double by Ruben Rivera, Texas built a 6-1 against Johnson (4-12) after three innings.

"Jason was sick to his stomach after the second inning, but he said he was fine to go out in the third," Hargrove said. "His velocity was good, but it was very obvious early that he wasn't all there."

Sampras shooting for Open title

NEW YORK (AP) - As Pete Sampras pumped his fist to celebrate a volley winner that closed the second set, Andy Roddick flashed an admiring thumb's up and then bowed, acknowledging that his idol still has what it takes.

This cross-generational matchup was no match at all.

Smacking aces at over 130 mph, covering every inch of the net, Sampras looked like the younger man Thursday night and dominated an apparently awestruck Roddick 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 to reach the U.S. Open semifinals.

Man charged in player's death

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A man was charged with murder in the shooting death of a University of Minnesota football player Brandon Hall, 19.

Jermaine Octavious Stansberry, 28, of Minneapolis, was charged with second-degree murder. He also was charged with aggravated robbery and felony possession of a firearm.

U.S. basketball loses again

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There will be no medal — gold, silver or bronze — for the United States at the World Championships.

In yet another stunning outcome, Yugoslavia came back from a 10-point deficit in the fourth quarter and defeated the U.S. team 81-78.

After going 58-0 using NBA players in international competitions, the Americans have lost twice in a row. The best they can do now is finish fifth in this topsy-turvy tournament.

Heavyweight champ won't fight Byrd

NEW YORK (AP) — Lennox Lewis will give up one of his heavyweight titles rather than fight mandatory contender Chris Byrd, claiming that Byrd offers him no great challenge and that no one wants to see the fight anyway.

Last second field goal gives 49ers 16-13 win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — What seemed like a dud of a season-opening party for the NFL actually turned into a thriller.

Jose Cortez kicked a 36-yard field goal with :06 to play, giving the San Francicso 49ers a 16-13 victory over the New York Giants in a Thursday night season opener.

Cortez also had field goals of 23 and 33 yards and Garrison Hearst score on a 9-yard pass for the Niners.

Tiki Barber tied the game at 13 with a 1-yard with 1:49 to play, and rookie Matt Bryant made field goals of 29 and 33 yards for the Giants in a mistake-filled game that turned into a nail-biter in the fourth quarter.

The NFL ushered in this season with a special midweek start that included a Manhattan concert. The league said it was celebrating New York's resilience in the wake of the terrorist attacks that claimed the lives of more than 3,000 people.

New York City police officer Daniel Rodriguez sang "God Bless America" as a 40-yard U.S. flag was unfurled by policemen, firefighters, members of the armed services and construction workers who helped clear the rubble of the World Trade Center towers. Following the national anthem, there was a flyover by two Navy helicopters with U.S. flags waving in the breeze.

Snyder JV falls to Abilene Wylie

The Snyder junior varsity football team lost to Abilene Wylie 21-6, but Head Coach Charles Bollinger said the squad is improving. "We played a lot better — our guys really got after it."

He said turnovers and penalties hurt the team, who showed heart and determination in shrinking the lead in the fourth quarter.

Urbano Hernandez scored from six yards out to make it 21-6 late in the game. Snyder got the ball back and Chris Smith and Cade Owen combined for five consecutive passes, before a Wylie interception ended the comeback hopes.

"We get better each week," Bollinger said. "Next game we will be even better."

The junior varsity has an open date next week. The next game will be Sept. 19, when the Tigers host Greenwood.

In freshmen football action, the Tigers fell to Abilene Wylie 30-14.

Jonathan Vasquez scored on runs of 25 yards and 1 yard. Eric Martinez added a two-point conversion to round out the scoring for the team.

The freshmen next play at Lubbock Cooper Thursday at 7 p.m.

Abilene Wylie defeated the 8th Gold team 26-6. Snyder took the kickoff and held the ball for the entire first quarter and two minutes into the second quarter on a 16-play, 89-yard drive that resulted in a 20-yard touchdown pass from Matthew Schoolcraft to Luca Munoz.

The 7th grade Gold squad took care of their Abilene Wylie counterparts, 12-6. Blane Knipe scored both touchdowns for Snyder, and Brooks Gafford recovered a a fumble to help seal the victory. James Simmons was tabbed defensive player of the game.

The 7th and 8th grade Black teams won by scores of 8-0. Fullback Paul Garcia scored for the 7th-graders and tailback Kyle Sanchez punched in the touchdown for the 8th grade squad.

THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

GOP voters urged to cross over for Sanchez

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A group of Texas Republicans and independents, charging that Gov. Rick Perry is partisan and unresponsive, plans to endorse Democratic gubernatorial candidate Tony Sanchez.

The organization called "Republicans and Independents for Tony Sanchez," currently made up of 125 members, will encourage GOP voters to split their tickets and vote Democratic in the governor's race, San Antonio GOP political consultant Anne Whittington said.

"We believe Tony is an independent candidate and understands bipartisanship better than Gov. Perry," said Whittington, a former president of the Bexar County Republican Women. She has been hired by the Sanchez campaign to coordinate the organization.

The Perry campaign blasted the effort and claimed Whittington and San Marcos auto dealer Chuck Nash, who is also leading the group, aren't really Republicans.

Perry spokesman Ray Sullivan called it an "unbelievably weak effort" and charged that both Whittington and Nash are "de facto Democrats" who only occasionally reach out to the GOP.

They both denied that claim.

Sullivan said Nash has financially supported other Democrats, including U.S. Rep. Lloyd Doggett, lieutenant governor candidate John Sharp and attorney general candidate Kirk Watson.

Nash said his anger over many of Perry's vetoes during the last legislative session and his friendship with Sanchez prompted him to the take the step.

"I've always considered myself an independent — I believe in the person, not the party," said Nash, who raised $100,000 in campaign funds for George W. Bush's presidential race in 2000.

Sullivan said Perry has the overwhelming support of Republicans and is making inroads with Democrats and independents. He noted that Perry had a 14-point lead in the latest Texas Poll, released this week.

Key aide departs Kirk's campaign

Tim Warner, who began working in May to help Kirk deliver his political message to voters, has "moved on," said Justin Lonon, a spokesman for Kirk, the former mayor of Dallas.

Lonon wouldn't say if Warner had been fired.
