Startling New Evidence May Upset Snyder-Gray Conviction

A Real Boost—

John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power and Light company, visited Wichita Falls recently and had much to say about the possibilities of this section. He returned to his headquarters in Dallas and then wrote J. A. Kemp a letter, putting down in black and white his confidence in Wichita's great future. This letter, published in the Sunday paper, should be read by every Wichita Falls resident. It should be an inspiration to every person here to renewed confidence in this city's power to grow and to prosper.

* * *

Mr. Carpenter had more to say than words of praise. He had advice, and this advice was that Wichita Falls should go forth and advertise its possibilities to the world. The power and light president is a hard-headed business man. He backed up his advice with the declaration that when such an advertising campaign is started, his company as represented here by the Texas Electric Service company, will be found among the first to do its full share. That's a spirit for the rest of us to try to match.

M. L. Mulligan, manager of the Nafziger baking company here, carried the writer through the new $200,000 plant of the Nafziger company Saturday. If you have never seen the interior of a modern bread manufacturing plant, then you have a treat in store for you at the formal opening which Mr. Mulligan is planning. The writer had the idea that even the most modern bakeries still did a good portion of their work by hand. The Nafziger plant is constructed to turn out 20,000 or 25,000 loaves a day, the product being untouched by hands from the time the first flour is emptied from sacks into the first sifting or mixing bin, until the wrapped loaf is delivered to its truck. The plant can easily be increased to a capacity of 60,000 loaves a day, is two stories in height and cover about half a block of ground.

According to the Nafziger manager, more than $100,000 of the $200,000 investment in the plant was expended in Wichita Falls. All labor, materials, etc., were secured here, and even local architects drew the plans. Only the intricate machinery was purchased outside Wichita Falls. This speaks well of the builders and artisans in this city, and of the company's loyalty to home enterprises.

A Stockdale merchant sold three truck loads of turkeys to a shipper for $1,150. Two of the turkeys, raised this year, weighed a few ounces over 75 pounds, bringing $19.93 for the two. Price paid for the lot was 26 1-2 cents per pound. Train loads of dressed turkeys have been shipped to the northern market and train loads will continue to be shipped to supply the demand. There are housewives in Texas, "way down on the farm," who have realized more money from turkey sales than their husbands realized this year from the sale of cotton.

* * *

Cotton production this year was 12,785,000 equivalent to 500 pound bales. This the federal department of agriculture announced is its final estimate of the season. A month ago the crop was estimated by the department at 12,842,000 bales. This led Secretary Jardine to let loose his second bolt which paralyzed the cotton growers of the United States. Texas farmers are credited with having ginned and picked 4,230,900 bales of cotton in 1927. Two states, Texas and Oklahoma, picked and ginned a total of 5,270,000 bales of cotton this year. That's where almost half of the money from the cotton crop came.

ATTORNEY FOR RUTH SNYDER TRAILING CLUES

Plot to Kill Editor May Involve Another Man Not Identified

RUTH TAKES CHEER

Convicted Woman Clings To Her Hope to Escape Death Chair

OSSINING, N. Y., Dec. 11.—Important new evidence which may save Mrs. Ruth Snyder from the electric chair was unearthed today by her attorneys. Mrs. Snyder and her lover, Henry Judd Gray, are scheduled to die in the Sing Sing death house on January 12.

A new figure in the person of David Chambers has stepped into the case. Chambers, who has written a letter to state officials claims that a master mind played a part in directing the plot that cost Albert W. Snyder his life in Queens Village, L. I.

Chambers lives in New York. He refused to be interviewed today, but, through counsel for Mrs. Snyder, it was disclosed that Chambers has followed clues which lead to the possibility that a man living in the western part of New York state may have been deeply involved in a conspiracy to murder Mrs. Snyder's husband.

Greatly excited by the news, Mrs. Snyder admitted in her cell today that she hopes to prove that the second man, named by Chambers, worked in harmony with Gray. It was learned, however, that she confessed to prison attaches that this was a wholly unexpected turn of affairs. She has had no previous notion that Gray had been influenced by somebody else to murder Albert Snyder.

While their attorneys are making desperate efforts to save the lives of the doomed pair, Ruth and Judd were forbidden the use of a radio in their cells last night. They looked forward all day, it was said at the prison, to the broadcasting of a prison inmates' performance of "The Sweet Little Devil." Warden Lawes issued orders that the entertainment be upheld from condemned prisoners for the present.

Mrs. Josephine Brown, mother of Ruth Snyder, stated in an interview today that she believed Mrs. Snyder "never had a chance."

"Everyone believes that Gray was dominated by Ruth. If the real truth ever comes out," wept Mrs. Brown, "you will see that it was my daughter who was the unfortunate victim in the entire affair.

"There must be organizations against capital punishment which would help to save Ruth. Yet I have not had a word of sympathy from such groups. I'm getting so tired of struggling alone."

NEGRO TO DIE AS ATTACKER

Lynching of Defendant In Court Narrowly Averted

GOLDSBORO, N. C., Dec. 11. (AP)—Halted temporarily by irate spectators who threatened a lynching and necessitated the firing of warning shots and the calling out of national guardsmen, the first Sunday court trial in North Carolina came to a dramatic end here today with the sentencing to death of Larry Newsome, 23-year-old negro, for the murder of Buela Tedder, 15-year-old daughter of a tenant farmer.

The sentence, coming barely 60 hours after the body of the young girl was found in a cotton field near here with her throat cut, was pronounced only after a near panic in the courtroom and as the presiding judge, Henry A. Grady, sat with a huge automatic pistol at his side ready to squelch any further disorder.

Father Seizes Negro.

The trouble began about five minutes after court convened when Eric Tedder, father of the dead girl and William Tedder, his brother advanced through the packed and stuffy little room toward the negro, each taking an arm of the prisoner. They lifted the negro half way out of his chair as shouts of "get him" and "take him" broke from a dozen throats in the crowd and others surged toward the prisoner.

A general stampede followed with many breaking for the exits and court attaches and newspapermen taking cover under tables and behind the jury box. Tables, chairs, and cuspidors were knocked topsy turvy and one man jumped through the glass pane of a door.

Officers quickly surrounded the prisoner and beat off his assailants. With his shirt nearly torn from his back the negro was taken to an adjacent room and a guard placed about him. Sheriff W. D. Grant placed his back to the door and fired two shots into the ceiling as a warning.

Two Men Arrested.

William and Eric Tedder were seized, and the former being forced to sit through the remainder of the trial handcuffed to two officers, while the latter sat unshackled but under guard.

Meantime battery A of the 113th field artillery, national guard, was called and with side arms, sat about Newsome during the rest of the trial.

After hearing evidence for three hours the jury retired and brought in its verdict in 15 minutes. Newsome was rushed by automobile under troop escort to Raleigh where he will die in the electric chair January 13.

MEXICO BRIBE PROBE GIVES U. S. ANXIETY

Hearst Accuses Calles Of Attempt to Create U. S. Discord

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. (AP)—Three of the subpoenas reported to have been issued by the special senate committee named to investigate the Mexican-United States senatorial charges in the Hearst newspapers were understood from information emanating from committee quarters tonight to have been for William Randolph Hearst, Arturo M. Elias, Mexican consul-general at New York, and Victor Watson, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, a Hearst newspaper.

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A tug-o-war between the United States senate and the Mexican Embassy was in prospect today over the appearance of Arturo M. Elias, Mexican Consul General at New York, before the special senatorial committee named to investigate documentary evidence, published by the Hearst newspapers, of a $1,215,000 fund provided by the Mexican government to influence four senators.

The State Department is considerably concerned over the impending clash.

The intimation of Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican ambassador, that Elias would stand on his rights of immunity under international law to dodge the senate subpoena, sent senators digging into musty precedents in such matters. Some of the most eminent international authorities in the senate reached the conclusion that Elias is not exempt and that his appearance can be compelled.

Elias Star Witness.

The Mexican Consul General is wanted as the "star" witness in the inquiry ordered by the senate after Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, brought the astounding disclosures of the Hearst newspapers to the attention of the body. The official documents revealed correspondence between President Calles of Mexico and Elias, his half brother, relative to the forwarding of the huge sum of money for payment to the four legislators, whose names have not been made public.

In view of the fact that the Mexican Embassy has made two formal denials of the authenticity of the documents published by the Hearst newspapers, senators were somewhat at a loss to account for the reluctance of the Embassy to allow Elias to testify. It was suggested in quarters close to the Embassy that Mexican pride was the chief obstacle. It also was intimated that this pride may eventually be overcome and that Elias will appear when the committee holds its first public hearing on Thursday.

Hearst Bares Data.

While the primary object of the investigation is directed at the revelations of projected bribery of four senators, contained in the documents, it was indicated that before the inquiry ends the committee will delve into all of the activities of the Mexican Government disclosed in the senatorial series published by the Hearst newspapers.

The first step of the committee will be to establish beyond all doubt the authenticity of the documents reproduced in the Hearst series. While the State Department has announced informally that it has no information bearing on that question, secretary Kellok has assured the committee of complete co-operation and will furnish experts and papers necessary for the purpose.

To Authenticate Papers.

Once the authenticity of the documents has been settled, the committee is expected to branch out into the broad field of Mexican propaganda in this country, which has been a constant source of irritation to the State Department. Because of the extreme delicacy of the situation, in all probability some of the sessions of the committee will be held behind closed doors.

Meanwhile, Senator Reed and other members of the Committee refused to disclose the names of the witnesses subpoenaed and speculation as to the identity of the four senators mentioned was rife.

BECKY ROGERS WILL TESTIFY

Girl Accused As Bandit To Take Stand

LAGRANGE, Texas, Dec. 11.—In order to bolster up statements that the pretty defendant is insane, it was probable today that Rebecca Bradley Rogers, alleged robber of the Farmers' National bank of Buda, would join the big parade of additional defense witnesses waiting to testify in her trial before Judge M. C. Jeffrey.

Belief that Mrs. Rogers will take the stand in her own behalf was strengthened because of previous statements made by Judge R. E. Cofer of the defense, to the effect that "Becky would make a good witness."

Interest in proceedings following the week-end recess were heightened with this prospect of Becky taking the stand. Everyone seemed eager to hear the story from the demure college girl's lips.

Since the beginning of its testimony, the defense counsel has worked toward the one end of showing the alleged eccentricities of Mrs. Rogers.

Seven persons, including a former state official and her family physician, have testified so far. C. A. Wheeler, former assistant attorney general and the defendant's former employer, cited several instances in which Becky's actions constituted those of a person of unsound mind. The family physician, Dr. W. C. Lackey, has testified to her spells of moodiness, which he described as "mental depressions."

Nearly a score of additional witnesses are on hand for tomorrow's inning in the trial, which began a week ago.

Kidwell To Be Star Witness In Trial Of Sinclair and Burns For Contempt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. (AP)—Edward J. Kidwell Jr., the juror in the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial who is alleged in affidavits to have talked too freely regarding the proceedings continued today to hold chief interest in the criminal contempt hearing against Harry F. Sinclair, William J. Burns, and their associates as attorneys waited to start the third week of the case.

Kidwell, alleged by Don K. King, a newspaper reporter, and J. Ray Akers, a former street car conductor, to have said he got on the oil jury because he was "too smart for the lawyers," made a fresh statement to the district attorney's office Friday. Representatives of the district attorney said they were elated over the statement which they characterized as important and that Kidwell would be called as a witness in the contempt proceedings.

The juror, under present plans, however, probably will not take the stand until late in the week.

Kidwell has attempted repeatedly but without success, to get his denial of the King-Akers charges before Justice Frederick L. Siddons in the District of Columbia supreme court. He filed one petition asking that King and Akers be cited for contempt of court for talking with him. In appearing as a government witness he will have opportunity to get some of his side of the case before the court for the first time.

Charles G. Ruddy, Philadelphia manager for the Burns detective agency, who had charge of the shadowing of the Fall-Sinclair jury, out of which grew the mistrial and contempt proceedings, will resume the stand tomorrow. His direct examination regarding the activities of the detectives is expected to be completed by noon.

Frank J. O'Reilly, assistant to Ruddy in the jury surveillance, is expected to be called by the government after Ruddy steps down. O'Reilly reported that he had talked with Kidwell's father, whom he reported as "the brother" of the juror "in whom we are interested."

REMUS TO FACE FIRE OF STATE

Rebuttal Will Question Insanity Evidence

CINCINNATI, Dec. 11. (AP)—The testimony of jailers and deputy sheriffs from Dayton and Troy, Ohio, was outlined tonight by Prosecutor Charles P. Taft, II, as the state's next step in its effort to send George Remus to the electric chair for slaying his wife, Imogene, here two months ago.

George Conners, lieutenant-in-chief to Remus, when the former Chicago lawyer was head of the illicit liquor activities, which gained him the title of "king of the bootleggers" testified at length concerning insane outbursts by Remus while he served a sentence in the Dayton and Troy jails after he had been released from the Atlanta, Ga., federal penitentiary.

Testimony Against Remus.

Tomorrow's witnesses, said Mr. Taft, would be expected to assert that Remus acted in entirely normal fashion, while he was incarcerated in the two Ohio jails.

The prosecutor adhered to his expressed intention to present Ruth Remus, daughter of the slain woman, Harry Brown, brother of Mrs. Remus, and Franklin L. Dodge Jr., as rebuttal witnesses, but said their appearances was not imminent.

Dodge, former federal department of justice agent, who obtained the conviction which sent Remus to the penitentiary, har been in Cincinnati a month awaiting to be called to the witness stand.

Remus' plea of transitory manlacal insanity, was based largely upon his assertion that during and after his incarcertion at Atlanta dodge and Mrs. Remus carried on an association which drove him mad.

To Arraign Berger.

Tomorrow also will bring the arraignment of John S. Berger, Los Angeles exposition promoter, who was indicted yesterday for perjury. Berger, self-styled "star witness" for Remus and boyhood friend of the defendant, denied during his witness stand appearance a week ago that he had tried to obtain $25,000 from Mrs. Remus for Remus or that he had been convicted of a state offense.

STATE BOARD HEAD ACCUSED AFTER PROBE

Governor Johnston Already Named By Quizzers In 5 Charges

CORDELL IS ACCUSED

Agriculture Board Chief Faces Three Charges By Solons

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 11. (AP)—Three impeachment charges were voted against Harry B. Cordell, president of the Oklahoma state board of agriculture, today by the investigating committee of the self-convened house of representatives, H. Tom Knight, chairman, announced.

As in the investigation of Governor Henry S. Johnson, the nature of the charges were withheld by Mr. Knight, who announced that the committee had "just preferred three charges against the president of the state board of agriculture."

"The charges will be submitted to the house of representatives at 10 o'clock Monday morning, along with the five charges voted against Governor Johnston Saturday," Knight said.

The investigating committee was said to have heard a number of witnesses as sessionists' headquarters in a downtown hotel Sunday.

Cordell Hears Charge.

Mr. Cordell was in the lobby of the hotel when the charges were announced at sessionists' headquarters. He declared he had heard a rumor to the effect that charges were to be made against him by the committee.

"If the house votes the charges against me, I am going to demand that they be carried to the senate for trial," Cordell said.

"I want to be given a chance to prove my innocence," he said. "They will not have any trouble getting me to go before the senate.

"And if the senate hears the case and finds me guilty, I will not question the legality of the legislative session. If I'm convicted, I'll resign at once."

Mr. Cordell said he was not given a chance to go before the committee. He said he had told Mr. Kight that he wanted to go before the senate immediately. If any charges were made against him.

Court In Senate.

Date of the senate court meeting remained in doubt tonight. Mac Q. Williamson, president pro tempore, reiterated the statement that no call would be made until formal charges of the house are placed before him.

Then the call will be made, but just how soon the court can meet remains problematical, he said.

A number of senators were in Oklahoma City Sunday.

Mrs. Horton's condition, complicated by approaching motherhood, was declared to be serious. She had just prepared dinner against her husband's return, when she heard the shot, and the following commotion. Looking out of the window, she saw neighbors carrying out the body of a man.

Not until later did she learn that it was the body of her own husband.

CHINESE BABE GIVEN HONOR

First of Race Christened In London Cathedral

By Universal Service.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—East met west in the sanctuary of St. Paul's cathedral here today when a stoic son, aged three months, of the Orient, received the Christian name of Paul. The infant was the first child of Chinese parents ever christened in the famous cathedral.

The full name given to the child was Paul Kinyuan Ma. The holy water for the christening was brought from the River Jordan. The mystic air of the Orient mingled with the drab realism of the west in the ceremony.

The child's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Nan Fai Ma. They wore the conventional garb of educated westerners at the cathedral service, afterward appearing in native attire of the east at a reception held in a restaurant near St. Paul's. Favors given the guests at the reception comprised a hard-boiled egg and a piece of crystallized ginger.

Orientals mingled with Europeans at the christening at St. Paul's. Canon Hopkins officiated, while Sir Albert Spicer and Sir Arthur Yapp acted as god fathers. Dame Ada Pitts was god mother. Baby Paul bore up in the ceremony with true stoic fortitude. Wearing a long flowing embroidered gown with a lace trimmed bonnet, he was carried in the arms of a nurse and refrained from uttering a single cry of protest throughout the entire proceeding.

Afterward, however, young Paul, bawled out in the familiar style of young westerners. Mr. and Mrs. Ma, both Christians since childhood, were married at St. Paul's in Hong Kong. Ma represents a firm of eastern merchants in London.

Dorothy Dix—A Daily Feature Of Interest To Women

The Trouble With Many Parents: 'Flaming Youth' Gets 'em In Panic

"The Trouble With Your Parents," Says Dorothy Dix, "Is That You've Gotten in a Panic About Flaming Youth. But Times Have Changed, and the 'Stern-Parent' Method of Dealing With Daughters Went Out With Bustles."

I get hundreds of letters from girls who write: "I am 18 years old, but my parents do not permit me to have any boy friends, or to have any dates with boys, nor will they let boys come to the house." Or they write: "My parents will not let me go to any place of amusement with a boy." Or they write: "My parents require me to be at home at 10 o'clock or 11 o'clock." And now and then one of the poor little Cinderellas will add: "And if I get in even a few minutes late my father beats me until I am black and blue."

Here you have the answer to the question of why girls leave home. They leave it because their parents make of home a prison out of which any girl with a particle of spirit in her would break if she possibly could. Also, you have the reason why so many girls go wrong. It is because mothers and fathers by their tyranny, and their lack of understanding and sympathy with youth, drive their daughters away from them, and deprive them of the guidance and protection that they should give their girls at the time of life when they need it most.

And the pity of it is that these parents, who are wrecking their daughters' lives are trying in a blundering, mistaken way to save them. They are not willfully pushing them over the precipice. They are desperately trying to hold them back, and with the best intentions in the world they are doing more harm than malice itself could invent.

The trouble with so many fathers and mothers is that they have got in a panic, and lost their heads. They have read so many lurid stories about flaming youth, and heard so many diatribes thundered against the younger generation that they have got into a blue funk where they jumped at every shadow, and see dangers where none exist.

They imagine that every boy is a Don Juan; that every party is an orgy; that every girl would be a wild woman if she got the chance. Therefore, in order to protect their daughters, they forbid them all companionship with the opposite sex, and deprive them of all the pleasures that belong to their time of life. Which is the most disasterous thing they could do, and brings the catastrophe they are trying to avoid.

For there never was a girl yet who wouldn't climb out of a window to meet a boy if you locked her in, nor one who wasn't clever enough to outwit her parents and do the things behind their backs that she was forbidden to do before their faces. Nor can you bottle up the energy and high spirits of youth without their exploding and blowing things to smithereens.

It is right that parents should keep a watchful eye upon their daughters and try to guard and protect them, That is their bounden duty, but in order to do this effectively they must recognize the fact that they can no more use the parents used in dealing with their parents use din dealing with their daughters a quarter of a century ago than they could use the same methods in business.

All life has changed since then. Everything has been speeded up. There are new rules of conduct. New standards of etiquett. New conventions. And especially has the status of women been changed, and all of this bears upon the problem of dealing with girls.

In mother's day virtually all girls stayed at home and helped a little with the housework, or did nothing. They were financially dependend upon their parents. They were unsophistocated, ignorant of the world. They were not permitted to read books, or go to see plays that had not been carefully censored, and that were not considered innocuous and proper for the young person to see.

Virtually all of the young girls of today are earning their own living. They work shoulder to shoulder with men on equal terms. There is nothing that they do not see, nor hear, nor read, and so the girl of 18 or 19 is far more worldly wise and better able to take care of herself than her mother was at 25. Many a flapper is older and more hard-boiled than her mother ever gets to be.

Therefore, it is ridiculous for parents to treat these economically independent, sophisticated girls as if they were mere children. The fact that they are self-supporting gives them a right to a large measure of personal liberty, because any girl who has intelligence enough to hold down a good job in these days of fierce competition in business has got sense enough to take care of herself.

Likewise, parents must consider that the right or wrong of many things is determined by custom. In mother's time woman who painted her face publicly proclaimed herself as no better than she should be, and if a woman had worn a knee-length skirt she would have been run in by the police. Today it makes a woman conspicuous not to use cosmetics, and we consider a person vulgar-minded to even notice legs.

Also, in mother's and father's time parties started at 7 o'clock and ended at 11 or 12, so young people who stayed out after midnight were hitting it up, but now parties don't start until late, and it is an utter impossibility for those who attend them to get home in time to put the chickens to roost.

Automobiles are no more immoral than buggies. It is no more sinful to go to a party at 7 and get back at 12 than it is to go at 10 and get bak at 2. There was just as much spooning on the sofa in the old back parlor as there is on the back seats of parked cars. And boys and girls went straight or crooked then, as now, according to the principles their parents had bred in them—not because of parents' ukases.

Finally, these stern parents, who are so strict with their girls, had as well face this truth, that whether they like it or not, whether they forbid it or not, their daughters are going to go with boys, openly and honestly if they can, stealthily if they are driven to it.

They will have their company at home if their parents make it pleasant for them. They will meet boys on the street if they are driven to it. They will be truthful and honest with their parents if they are permitted to. They will lie to them and deceive them if necessity demands it.

In the on ecase the parents can know what sort of boys their girls are associating with. They can throw about them the dignity and protection of a home. They can know where their girls go. In the other case they drive their daughters to keeping rendezvous with their pik-ups at corner drug stores, and send them to publi cdance halls for pleasure. And when a girl can't talk over her fun with her mother, she is on the downward path.

Think of these things, parents, and deal with the modern girl according to modern methods. It is teh only way.

Sometime ago The Record News published the picture of Henry Pope Hodge, and promised to have Henry's small brother, Billie Bob, at some later date.

Both youngsters are so handsome that The Record News is having some difficulty in making a decision on the merits of their beauty. So Mrs. Hodge has been appointed the sole judge. Up to date she has not rendered a decision.

Billie Bob is a blond, displaying pretty blue eyes and light hair, while Henry is dark-eyed and has a musical complex. Billie Bob likes to accompany Daddy to Sunday school. Mother says he is too young to have manifested any other talent to date.

Billie Bob is the youngest member of the H. P. Hodge family, 1601 Monroe.

Back In the Fold

WISCONSIN bolters are back in the republican fold. Wisconsin bolters are the congressional representatives who followed the fortunes of the elder LaFollette in the presidential campaign of 1924. They dominated the republican party of Wisconsin. LaFollette was their political God. They broke away from the party of the Elephant and followed the LaFollette flag.

Young LaFollette became a senator. Perhaps the mantle of his father is too big for him to carry. In 1926 the anti-LaFollette republicans elected one of their tribe governor of Wisconsin. They defeated the choice of the followers of young LaFollette. Just the other day they captured two members of the national committee from Wisconsin. Engdahl were elected. Regulars who voted the straight republican ticket in the campaign when the elder LaFollette carried a presidential banner.

Republicans organized the house. They re-elected Nick Longworth speaker. Nick will not be a contender for the presidential nomination. He holds the most important position next to the presidency in the government frame work. All the LaFollette republican representatives returned to the republican reservation and cast their ballots for Nick. After it was over, Nick embraced them. If he had been a Frenchman he would have kissed them. As he is a Buckeye, he just hugged them, and thanked God that they had returned to the hand vaques of the grand old party.

Victor Berger, socialist from Wisconsin, continues to walk alone. He is the only socialist on the congressional roster. Victor did not have a candidate for speaker. There are two farm labor representatives. They just registered present and not voting; but the main point is, the LaFollette congressmen from Wisconsin are back in the fold. There was a time the Wisconsin democrats had a virile organization. They had distinguished leaders. Now the party has a skeleton organization, and if there are leaders in the Badger state they never come to the surface.

This is interesting because the American people are on the eve of the most important presidential campaign in their history. Wisconsin voters for the most part are growers of things. They are not affiliating with the democratic party. Their leaders are under the wing of Speaker Nick Longworth, with two notable exceptions—Senators LaFollette and Blaine. The two senators say they are going it alone, but the republican regulars may capture the delegates to the national convention next year, this in a commonwealth where the elder LaFollette ruled as king and dictator for three decades.

He was a warrior. He never asked for quarter. He never gave quarter. He fought for his convictions, the people believed in him and they followed him until death stilled his mighty brain and silenced his eloquent tongue.

Big Refinery On Gulf Coast

A REFINERY with a daily capacity of 5,000 barrels is to be built at Ingleside, across Corpus Christi Bay from Corpus Christi, by the Humble Oil and Refining company. President William R. Farish of the Humble Corporation has let it be known that construction of the project will start this month.

Speaking of oil and oil companies, the Standard Oil company and fifty other oil companies have not violated the Sherman anti-trust law, as charged in a suit instituted by the Coolidge administration three years ago. Charles Martindale of Indiana was appointed special master and chancellor to make an investigation.

His report is to the effect that there was no evidence that there existed a conspiracy in restraint of trade, maintenance of a monopoly, price fixing or pooling of patent rights. He recommended a dismissal of the suit for one of equity.

Defendants included all the Standard Oil companies and their offshoots, the Texas Company the Humble Oil and Refining company, the White Eagle Oil company and the Roxana Petroleum corporation.

Special master Martindale has given all the defendants a clean bill of health. Texas is a great oil producing state and Texans, directly or indirectly interested in the oil industry are reminded by Martindale that the methods of the oil kings are above reproach.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON BASORE

NEW YORK, Dec. 12. — They tell this funny one on the grandsons of the mammoth Pennsylvania hotel. The manager one day observed a large, weary looking family of six, file into the gargantuan lobby, all in hiking clothes. The father disposed the cooking utensils to good effect, took a hitch in his hiking trousers and sat down. The other members of the family, all in disheveled hiking kit, did likewise. At this point, the startled official thought it time to investigate. He approached the group and inquired: "Are you waiting for someone?" It's Milne said no, just waiting for the train for Grand Rapids. And it was a rather relieved hotel man who hustled them on their way through the underground passage to the Pennsylvania station across the street. They might still be packed on the hotel carpet if he hadn't asked the question.

The audiences at Max Reinhardt's presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Century are large and varied. The German element is present, the butcher-baker-delicatessen-dealer, and their pinafored frau. And their next mates are, like as not, the elect of the city, high-hatted and opera-cloaked, a trifle bored at the intricacies of the Reinhardt extravaganza, but determined not to do anything bizarre or worth while. The Century theater, by the way, is a place not to be visited without recalling the epithet hurled gaily at it by James Whitcomb, former New York dramatic critic. Whitcomb called the Century "a mausoleum," and the Shuberts thereafter barred him from all their theaters, so affronted were they at the writer's pallbury, innocently aimed.

Time was when Fifty-first street was way up town.

Some good women have got together and decided that some poor working girl can manage to dress well and "look chic" on a yearly allowance of $250. The clothing budget includes only six pairs, a number at which my wife frankly sniffs. She does not believe, nor do I, that the girl who works can slide by and still have self respecting heels to show to the world, on such a sock allowance. There is no warm cloth dream mentioned in the budget, and since the girl has just ancellinary, in fact rather cheap winter coat, she must have such a frock in her wardrobe. Or freeze to death. I suppose that many of the brave, smart little creatures dashing up and down the cross streets early in the morning do manage to keep heels and soles together on such a skimpy allowance, but I wonder how they do it. The lady who compiled the figures also discovered that "less than half of these girls wear either cotton or wool stockings." And that one out of five had a fur coat, either a gift, or purchased on part-time payment." The long faced moralist might make something out of that "gift" explanation, but I am glad the poor little cuties get their fur coats, no matter how.

People in show business are saying, out of the corners of their mouths, that Lee Tracy, who plays the hoofer in "Broadway" is now doing a tenth copy of his original version of the part. I saw the play the other night for the second time, and I think the wise crackers are all wrong. This boy Tracy seems indeed to have been born in the role. So far as I am concerned, he is as satisfactory as the first night he put on his false fronted shirt and slapped into his comic manners. He makes his hoofer more actual than any real one I've ever known on the other side of the footlights. "Burlesque," the other behind-the-scenes play now showing in the Times Square district, seems to me only a feeble imitation, in atmosphere at least, of "Broadway." And while Hal Skelly is himself a hoofer in reality, he is not nearly so convincing as Mr. Tracy, who impersonates the type.

Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of "SALLY'S SHOULDERS" "HONEY LOU" "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

RILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled only daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS who live far beyond their means. Her mother's fondest dreams are realized when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor older than herself. The day after its progress she goes down town to meet her chum, SUE CAIN, and sees a man watching her through the crowd. She is oddly attracted by him before she sees that he is a taxi driver. Then she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY DETHERSON. However, he intends to sell it, he says, to finance a piston ring invention of his.

Getting out of the cab, Lily takes his chauffeur's card out of its place because it has a picture of him on it. She begins to realize, as days go by, that she is in love with him. But about the time she makes up her mind not to marry Staley, her mother announces their engagement and she resigns herself to it. The wedding date is set for the tenth of June.

And about the tenth of May Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur, and when he comes he is Pat France! From the minute she sees him she knows she never can marry Staley and actually asks Pat to marry her. But he points out to her that she was not made for a poor man's wife. One morning they take the car without asking Mrs. Lexington's permission and go for a picnic. On the way Pat shows Lily his parents' little house and their grocery store, with his mother standing in the doorway. He tells Lily that his own wife would probably have to work as his mother has, and she has brought up her children, as well as helped in the store all her life. Lily says she wouldn't mind housework as soon as she learned how to do it. She never has done a day's work in her life.

Then Pat introduces her to his friends, the Roy Dethersons, and Lily instantly detests the wife, SADIE, because of her loud clothes and because she is a friend of ELIZABETH KRUZ, with whom Pat has been going around. On their way home from the picnic they pass Mrs. Lexington and Sue Cain's mother, who see them. Reaching home, Lily finds Carrie, her mother's maid, looking at the chauffeur's card with Pat's picture on it. She snatches it from her, knowing that Carrie is in love with Pat and resenting it.

JOIN US ON WITH THE STORY.

Chapter XXI.

Lily glared at Carrie, and Carrie glared back at her. Then all at once she shrugged her shoulders and laughed.

"No wonder you want it, Miss Lily," she said, looking at the rugged, soiled card in Lily's hands. "Your mother would be proud and happy to find Pat's picture in your room, wouldn't she?"

Without a word Lily tore the card into tiny bits and tossed them into the rose-trimmed waste basket under her dressing table.

"Maybe she'd understand why you and Pat disappeared with the car this morning without saying a word to anybody so that she had to ask Mrs. Cain to take her to the church luncheon this noon," Carrie's voice ran on maliciously. "I told her you had asked me to pack a lunch for two and had gone away with just Pat—with just the chauffeur. And I told the same thing to Mr. Drummond when he stopped in to ask about you and your headache. . . . Your headache!—Huh!"

Lily tried hard to keep her temper. Mrs. Lexington had taught her never to quarrel with anyone who was working in the house.

But anger flashed in her gray eyes and her voice trembled with fury when she answered the little housemaid. "Carrie," she said, "you've worked in this family two many years. I think you'd be happier if you went up to your room and packed your trunk. We'll send it to you tomorrow—or wherever you find a new place to work."

Carrie tossed her head. "I'll be finding a new place to work when your mother asks me to leave this house, and not before. I'm not taking orders from you," she snapped.

"And I guess your mother won't be letting me go in a hurry, either. Not while she's owing me six week's salary!" And with that she flounced out of the bedroom, leaving everything in wild disorder behind her—dust pan in the middle of the floor, the bed covered with the contents of the dresser drawers, the bottle of flour polish standing in a corner beside the mop.

A minute later Lily heard her talking cheerfully and loudly to Pat in the back yard.

She ran to the hall window and looked out. Carrie was sitting in the hammock couch beside Pat, the starched pink skirt of her house dress ballooning out around her. Her chestnut hair shone in the sunlight, and her round cheeks were very pink. Lily hated her, but she had to own that she was a pretty little woman.

She threw the hall window up, and called to Pat: "Will you please come up here, Pat, and do some work for me?"

Then she slammed down the window.

Pat stood on the threshold of the room, almost as if he were afraid to enter it.

"My shoes are muddy," she said, his eyes going over the flowered carpet, the white beaurain rug beside the bed, the big puffy cushions of rainbow silks that were piled on the satin sofa drawn up before the empty grate.

"Never mind . . . I want you to put those drawers into the dressing table for me," Lily told him, and he stepped gingerly into the dainty, perfumed place as if he were walking on eggs or thin ice.

He stepped for a minute before the little powder table between the north windows. It was littered with powder puffs, with perfume bottles, with scented hair oil, with boxes of powder, and jars of cream.

"Gosh, what do you do with all that stuff?" he asked. "It looks like the shelf in a barber shop—that little table." He held one of his straight blunt fingers on a gold-capped bottle.

"That's a powder table," Lily told him, laughing. "And I use all that 'stuff,' as you call it, on my face, Mr. Pat France! Cream and perfume and powder and lipstick. The oil in that bottle you're touching is for my hair . . . It smells like a lemon grove."

She pulled out the gold stopper and sniffed at it. "That's what makes my hair so nice and sweet," she said, smiling up at him. "And all the rest of this makes me nice to look at—for my Pat to look at."

Pat grinned aloud. He had picked up a scent bottle of black glass and was looking at the price-mark pasted upon the bottom of it.

"Eighteen dollars! Whew!" He whistled. "It would take me three days of hard work to earn that one bottle of perfume for you, Lily." He set it down. His face drawn into lines of discouragement and hopelessness.

But Lily laughed at him. "Then I'd have to get along without perfume—or use vanilla instead. Wouldn't I Pat?" she asked. She swayed toward him an inch or two, and was where she wanted to be—in his arms.

And then it was that Carrie came upon them, a few minutes later, as she passed the open door on her way upstairs to her own room—one figure, their arms clasped around each other, their lips locked, deaf and blind to everyone but themselves.

They did not see her or hear her, and she went on up the stairs. She locked her door and began to pack her yellow tin trunk. . . . She had changed her mind about staying with the Lexingtons until Mrs. Lexington discharged her, after all. What was there in staying, she asked herself, when the only man she had taken a fancy to in years had fallen in love with the daughter of the house?

A half hour later she walked out of the side door, leaving behind her the tin trunk and the six weeks' back pay, together with a note asking Mrs. Lexington to send both of them to her brother's house in Appleton court, on the west side of town.

Pat saw her go from the window of his room above the garage and thought nothing of it.

Lily saw her too, and knew why she had gone. She ran downstairs and found the note she had left for Mrs. Lexington. She tore it open to find out if carrie had written anything about herself and Pat in it. She had. . . . She had written everything she knew about them!

"Dear Mrs. Lexington," she had written, in her neat, round hand. "Miss Lily has just told me to leave the house, and I am going. She is jealous of me because Pat, the chauffeur, likes me too well to suit her.

"Please send my trunk and the $96 you owe me right away to my brother's house, where I am going. His name is Charlie Petrie, and his address is—"

Lily read no more.

She slipped the note into the pocket of her dress and carried it upstairs to her own room. She locked the door and carefully wrote another note in Carrie's neat hand, leaving out the bit about Pat and herself.

Then she sealed it and took it downstairs to her mother's desk. It did not occur to her that she was doing a dishonest thing—committing a forgery—writing a lie.

She smiled to herself at her own cleverness as she laid it down upon a pile of bills for her own wedding clothes—for princess slips of apple-blossom pink and robin's egg blue—for silk stockings, satin slippers, paste buckles — for gloves and dresses and hats. All of it raiment for Staley Drummond's bride!

"If I marry Pat I'll have enough clothes for a while, anyway," she said gaily to herself, pausing at the hall window to look at the garage in the back yard. It had become a place of dreams and enchantment—that plain and ugly little building—because it housed Pat.

* * *

Mrs. Lexington came home from her luncheon at church at 5 o'clock.

She came home all primed and ready to discharge France, the chauffeur, and changed her mind almost the minute she set foot in the house.

"For Agnes, the fat and placid cook who had been with the Lexingtons for a long time, met her at the door with the bad news that Carrie had left—and left for good.

"And what with a wedddin' comin' on and all, I don't know what we're going to do without her," said Agnes. "She was so nice and handy for answering the door and setting the table and keeping the downstairs dusted and the like—now, wasn't she, Mrs. Lexington, ma'm?"

Mrs. Lexington collapsed in a chair and kicked off the black satin pumps that had been torturing her all afternoon. She was always taking off her slippers in picture shows or theaters or the minute she got into her own house after parties and shopping trips.

"Well, Agnes," she said, "there's nothing for us to do but to turn Carrie's work over to Pat for a few days, is there? We've got to have some help in the house—especially now, with wall paper cleaners coming tomorrow and the sewing woman coming on Friday to make over some things for me."

She read Carrie's note—or rather the note that Lily had written and signed with Carrie's name.

Then she tore it up. "The ungrateful girl!" she sighed, pitying herself, "to walk out of the house like that, after all I've done for her! I taught her everything she knows about housework, and even paid her expenses at the hospital two years ago when she had her tonsils out—and this is the thanks I get!"

She was in a fine rage by the time she had changed her dress, put on a pair of big comfortable shoes, and knocked on the locked door of her daughter's room.

Lily had been making up the sleep she had lost that morning by getting up so early. One side of her face was rosy and crumpled where she had pressed it onto the embroidered pillow. Her kimona—a brilliant silk thing that had cost more than the amount of Carrie's back wages—was wrinkled, too, and she was rubbing her dreamy, sleepy eyes.

"Hello, Mother," she yawned. "Where were you and Mrs. Cain going today when Pat and I passed you on the road?"

She knew perfectly well where they had been going.

"'Pat and I'," repeated Mrs. Lexington, furiously. "What do you mean by sitting up in the driver's seat with him? Your head on his shoulder, too! Lily, I could cry when I think of it! You, engaged to a man like Staley Drummond and carrying on with a chauffeur."

"Oh, Mother, but he's so nice—and, anyway, are you awfully, awfully sure that my head was on his shoulder? You were going pretty fast, you know, and so were we?" She laughed lightly and put out a hand to wipe some powder from her mother's large and handsome nose.

But Mrs. Lexington pushed the hand aside. Her eyelids glimmered. Her lips were pressed so tight together that they almost disappeared.

"Aren't you ashamed to notice that he's good looking, when you're all but married to another man, Lily Lexington?" Her voice quivered with anger. "You've a common streak in you, my girl, that's what!"

And she shook her. But Lily only went on laughing.

"Don't take it so hard, Mother," she said cheerfully. "I may as well tell you that I've practically proposed marriage to Pat, and he wouldn't have me on a bet!"

"Don't talk like a little fool, even if you are one," her mother told her. "I'll get rid of that fellow just as soon as I can without starting any gossip."

"He's going on Saturday in any case," said Lily. "It's killing me to think of it—but he is." She said it in a banter, light way, as if she were joking.

Japanese Dolls on Way

The 51 Japanese friendship dolls which are to be sent to the United States are to leave Japan in time to arrive before Christmas. They have just completed a farewell tour of the schools of that country. Pupils who gave the funds for the making and dressing of the dolls, added many other gifts during the tour and also wrote letters of friendship which will accompany the mute travelers. Fifty of the dolls are two and one-half feet high. The other, made for the first daughter of the Emperor, is one inch taller. Each has a complete equipment of wardrobe, secondary wardrobe, bedding container, sewing box, toilet paraphernalia, desk and stationery. The dolls' silk kimonos are of luxurious silk and the designs are all different, bearing different family crests. One has a sash of gold brocade.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy, who can be addressed in care of this paper.

MEALTIMES

When shall we eat? The simple answer to this question is: When you are hungry—at no other time. Most of you would have to wait a good many days if you observed this rule to the letter. This is because you are probably overstuffed at the moment you are reading this article.

If no food is taken until normal hunger presents itself, you would be surprised how long you would be forced to wait. This is due to the long-continued habit of eating whatever you desire at regular mealtimes whether you are hungry or not.

Of course, you usually have an appetite after you start eating, but this must not be confused with real hunger. A pickle always tastes good, and will excite the taste buds in the mouth, but this is purely an irritation of an artificial nature and has nothing in common with the body's desire for nourishment with which to repair and develop the tissues.

The natural craving for food is no doubt the greatest at the moment of awakening in the morning. If you are one who is never hungry in the morning it is because you are in the habit of eating too much at the evening meal. If the body is at any time ready for more food, it should be after fasting for twelve hours, as you do at night. However, if you are not eager for food at this time because of former dietetic indiscretions, by all means wait until noon, at least, before you take any kind of food. Wash out your tired stomach with a pint of water at the ordinary temperature of faucet water, and continue using only water until you have developed a wholesome desire for some plain food. This desire may develop by lunch time, or perhaps not until time for the evening meal.

One sensible meal, each evening, for a few days may be all that is necessary to allow the system an opportunity to develop normal hunger. On the other hand, if breakfast is relished, you will often find that you are not eager for a heavy lunch. A glass of orange juice or some other kind of fruit will be easily digested, and thus more may will be given to the evening meal. I believe that this meal at the end of the day should be the most carefully selected of the three.

If you are tired after a day of mental overwork, the best plan is to refresh yourself with a bath and lie down for a few moments of complete relaxation before attempting to digest even the best of food. Then be sure to not overeat. If you feel sleepy an hour or two after this meal, it is usually a sign that you have eaten more food than your body has energy to digest. Resolve that the next night you will reduce the amount of food considerably, and continue reducing after dinner without the accustomed feeling of hunger. You can spend several hours each evening after dinner without missing the quantity each day until most people expect after a hearty meal. If you do this, you will be surprised and delighted to awaken each morning with an eagerness for breakfast you have not experienced in many years.

But remember, a strong desire for wholesome food will not be possible unless you exercise your body each day, and encourage your muscles to call for more nourishment. Mental exercise alone is not sufficient to give you that normal hunger you enjoyed as an active youngster.

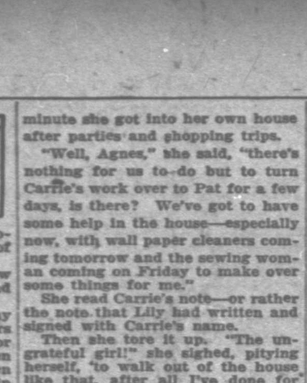

QUESTION: B. A. asks: "What causes a subnormal temperature of from one to two degrees? It runs from two degrees in the morning to one below in the afternoon. My blood pressure is low and I am cold all the time. What would be the causes of these different conditions?"

ANSWER: A subnormal temperature, with low blood pressure, shows that you are greatly enervated and require a very definite course in physical culture to bring your strength back to normal. Besides regulating your diet carefully, the one thought for you to keep in mind, and to practice in principle, is to increase your exercises each day, both by taking calisthenic exercises and by long walks.

"Electricity!—
The Foe of Drudgery"

Says Mrs. John D. Sherman
President, General Federation of Women's Clubs

"Electrically equipped homes mean happier and more healthful homes. The cost of electrically operated labor-reduction devices is offset many times by the saving, the increased efficiency, the protection to health and the contribution to the general well-being of the family of such devices."

THE constructive efforts of the forward-looking electric power companies of the United States have released an ever-increasing number of women from the exacting duties of the household to more congenial and interesting pursuits of life.

Every new electrical invention finds an abundance of power ready to serve it. Through the enterprise of these companies, inspired by individual initiative, electric power plants and service facilities are being constructed five years in advance of consumer demand. Since 1900, the capacity of these plants has been doubled every five years.

Keenly alert to their social obligations, these electric power companies have not been content to rest on the expansion of their facilities. The most expert, highly skilled and highly trained technical personnel in the whole field of industry is working for the betterment of electrical service.

As a result of this sense of trusteeship, theaverage home today enjoys the comforts and conveniences of electricity at a cost of only a few cents per day.

Operating under the American principle of individual initiative, and working in the interest of the public, these specialists in science, engineering, finance and administration constitute one of society's greatest forces in the promotion of a freer, more enlightened and abundant life.

In the continued support of this principle lies America's assurance of all that makes for progress, prosperity and cultural opoprtunity.

STEPPING STONES TO CHARM By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Learn Your Faults and Try Your Best to Correct Them

By Beatrice Fairfax
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

SUCH pathetic appeals reach me every day from girls who wish to be popular, charming and loved. I am sure there is not a girl who is utterly without charm. But I dare say, also, that every girl would like to be more charming than she is.

How I wish I could suggest a magic formula, a sort of "open sesame," which would enable each of you to win instantly this intangible, elusive quality and, of course, the Prince Charming whom you wish to charm most of all.

According to the old-fashioned theory about charm, you are born with it or without it, and in either case there is nothing to be done about it.

Sir James Barrie sums up this rather discouraging theory in his play, "What Every Woman Knows," when he says of charm: "Oh, it's—it's not of a blessed lot o' use to a woman, if you herself, you don't need to have anything else. And if you don't have it, it doesn't matter what else you have. Since women—the few—have charm for all, most have charm but are, but some have charm for some."

The new theory is that each of us has an inborn gift of individual charm which can be cultivated and made to unfold and bloom. Perhaps the time will come when every school will teach a thorough, practical course in charm.

Do not become discouraged, dear girls, even though you feel that nobody loves you and life is a wholly failure.

For there are certain definite findings which lead to charm, and you can find and follow them.

It may be you will not achieve the popularity which makes you the most sought-after girl in every ball room, the magnetic centre of every group. That particular variety of charm is a gift which costs its possessor no effort, and is not granted to all. But you can, if you wish, become attractive, interesting, loving and lovable, a charming woman.

A certain fascinating lady once told me of her method of cultivating a charming individuality. Take each year six boys whose friend, in whose judgment she trusts, to watch her closely and report frankly faults of appearance, dress and deportment, manner and disposition, such as an awkward walk, an easy-going attitude, abruptness of manner, smallness in the point of truthfulness.

My friend is wise enough to accept this honest criticism gratefully and profit by it. A sister or brother can usually be trusted to tell the whole truth, when it comes to frank criticism. Knowing just what is wrong with yourself will make it easy to improve.

An acquaintance I shall call Betty adopted the typically modern method of a questionnaire as first step of a charm-course. She asked herself such questions as the following and answered them accurately:

1. Are my dreams and thoughts centered entirely on myself?
2. Do I like people?
3. Do I like doing favors for people?
4. Do I ask many favors?
5. Am I envious and, if so, how do I express this feeling?
6. Do I pout?
7. Would I like myself as a best friend?
8. Would I like to invite myself to a dinner-party?
9. Am I dainty in every way?
10. Am I neat in dress and orderly in my habits?
11. Do I always try to have my own way and hate others?
12. What is my secret ambition?

Betty learned all sorts of uncomplimentary things about herself by means of this questionnaire. She found she was an envious sort of girls who were pretty and popular; that she hated them and never failed to make unpretty, catty remarks about them. She found she was dowdy and nine-tenths dainty. She was nonchalant and fat. But she faced the issue squarely. And by the time she was well on the way to checking up and correcting her defects in charm, Bill, the nicest young man she knew, had changed in his attitude from indifference to wholly attentive. Now Bill and Betty are planning to be married at Christmas time.

While charm is not a calculated result of following formulas, yet certain definite rules of conduct and behavior are the stepping stones that lead to this desired goal. And if you learn to take each step as carefully as an infant learns to walk, in time charm of winning ways will become easy and natural to you—part of you. So, watch your step! For isn't it worth your while to cultivate grace and graciousness, an attractive appearance and lovable character, which will enable you to win and hold the interest and love of the finest man?

XMAS COOKIES

By Hannah Wing

GINGERBREAD is always popular with children, and for Christmas the gingerbread may be baked in thin sheets and made into entrancing Santa Claus cakes. If you do not have a Santa Claus cutter, just cut out a pattern from waxed paper and place it on the dough, and then, with a sharp knife, cut it out. The fur around the cap, cuffs, boots and mittens may be made with plain white frosting, generously sprinkled over with cocoanut, or softened marshmallows may be used by cutting them into strips. The cap, belt, boots, bag and big straps, if you have included them in your pattern, may be of red frosting, and the rest of the body should be covered with melted sweet chocolate. This Santa Claus is most edible, as also are the delightful little Christmas trees made out of the same dough.

Cut the dough in the shape of a pine tree. A heart-shaped cooky cutter may be used, the pointed part of the heart forming the tree top, and a strip of dough attached to the curved part for the stem. First cover the entire tree with melted sweet chocolate in green syrup, and then dry in the oven. This represents the pine needles. Put it on as soon as the leaves will show through the limbs, and leave the stem brown. Frost in a candy star at the top of the tree and decorate the tree with tiny red and silver candies that can be obtained at a confectionery store.

Delightful Christmas wreaths may be formed by cutting a single unbaked cooky dough out with a jumbo cutter, or a doughnut cutter may be used, making the hole larger. Ice with a white or yellow frosting, and cut out green gum drops or angelica to form the leaves, and use tiny red candies for the berries, or the berries may be put on with red icing. Star-shaped cookies iced in yellow are nice, too.

Fashion Fads and Fancies

READY to wear, ear or ear are the cunning little silver animals used to ornament large envelope purses of black velvet or powder suit. Some of these little beasts are enameled, others studded in brilliant stones and still others of the finely striped silver. The tiny rings of silver bit add a smart finishing touch to these handbags.

Gloving wools are not nearly so dusky as they would, for the shades are of crystal and the handles of silver set with pearls. These small purses are used either as dress gifts or for ornaments.

Sliding examples of the season's mode in evening wraps show silver metal cloths trimmed with white fur, and gold metallic fabrics trimmed in brown pelts. While many capes are shown, the coat types are more generally favored.

Running wild is what the flowers, foliage and fruit motifs appear to be doing in the newest multi-colored printed silks. These all-over patterns are so crowded as to be unrecognizably untold "jungle designs."

Silk Ensemble for Southland are beginning to appear, for the advance fashions indicate that satin coats, with frocks of the same fabric, will be conspicuously chic at Southern resorts this Winter.

Knowing but the maiden, the satin or velvet evening slipper, trimmed in gilt, silver or rhinestones, is the nice shade as the frock with which it is worn. Thus, every costume demands its own particular footwear, for each pair of slippers is loyal to but one gown to which it obviously belongs. An opposing style when prices are as high as heels.

Following a zigzag line, sports wear consistently features this effect in stripes. Stitching, skirt and blouse yokes, are innumerable other expressions of the zigzag influence. Not only in knitwear but also in fabric manipulation in this rage strikingly developed in sports frocks, sweaters, skirts and blouses as well as wraps.

Posh Permanently Posited in trailing jewelry fashions, but gun metal pearls are now being preferred for daytime wear to those of silver or lush tint. Much of the new costume jewelry features these gray pearls, either alone or in combination with some more brightly colored stones.

THE frock at the left is one of the prettiest afternoon frocks of the season. It is of very blue lace over flesh chiffon, with a belt of blue featured in front with a pearl buckle.

The second afternoon frock is of a new jade gray-green called luca. The top part is of gray and silver lame and the rest of crepe de chine.

Interlacing strips of crepe de chine form the trimming of the third frock. It is of black crepe.

HER HUSBAND'S SECRETARY

By William Almon Wolff

John Apologizes.

IT seemed to Ellen MacVeagh in the weeks just growing, as they did, into months that following that first real quarrel she had had with John, that she was marking time. Life slowly, gradually, but with a deadly surenss ceased to have its old meaning for her.

That quarrel, to be sure, was patched up. John, ashamed of his outbreak, of the way he had lost his temper, came back full of contrition; that night they seemed to dance together than they had been at any time since they had come to New York.

"I'm sorry, honey," he said, coming into her room as she sat dressing before her dressing table.

She turned to him, tried to smile.

"Darling, I'm sorry, too," she said. "I—oh, I don't know why they don't like me! I've done my best—I've tried to be nice to them——"

"You're worth the whole lot and boiling of them," he said. He came over, drew her up, caught her in his arms and kissed her. "It's true—I suppose that's why I hit on the way I did."

"No," she said. "You're disappointed in me, John. I'll rather have you say it than just think it. I've failed you here."

"No," he said. "It—that's not the way to put it, honey. Only—well—I don't know—other people get along. They establish themselves here in less than two years. We've been here. And they're no more important, they have no more money."

"I know." Ellen nodded. "There's something—it's me. I can see that. I don't seem to be able to talk to these women you like——"

"Oh, Ruth—I don't like them particularly," he said. "We just—well, we can't alter the structure of things here, and if you're going to be anybody and amount to anything here you've got to get in right with certain people who can make you or break you. That's always true in any town in a business way and I'm getting to see that it's just as true socially."

"It sounds pretty horrid, you know," said Ellen. She gave a bitter little laugh. "If anyone had ever told me that you'd ever be a climber——"

"What!" He turned on her furiously. "I'm nothing of the kind! I don't give a rap about society and social standing except as they're—except as amounting to something socially in a place like New York is a business asset. Can't you get that through your head?"

"Oh, yes," she said. "I suppose everyone who wants to get ahead socially has some reason like that, though, John. And, anyway, it doesn't matter—I want to do what you want and do what I can to make our life the sort of life you want to live. But I tell discouraged—I don't know where I've gone wrong, you see. If I did it could do something about it."

"You're too much of a shrinking violet," he said. "That sort of thing doesn't go here. You've got to push yourself if you want to get anywhere in New York. We've got to quit here—make a splash. I can see that it'll have to take a hand myself."

"Of course, I think these people are simply ill-bred, if you ask me," said Ellen. "They show it in over so many ways, John. And there's no excuse in the world for snubbing an invitation and then inviting out at the last minute, the way they've all done today."

"Oh, of course they're ill-bred—if you look at it in an old-fashioned way," said John, impatiently. "Times have changed. We've got to change with them."

"Some things don't change," said Ellen distinctly.

"Well, anyway, we've got to take these people as we find them," he said. "It's a cinch they're not going to change their ways because we don't approve of them. And if I'm going to live in New York I'm going to be on top of the heap—I'm going to know the right people, and I'm going to know them well. I don't care how big the public is—I'm not going to be a little frog in it."

He got up and walked restlessly up and down the room.

"Come on," he said. "Put on your dress and we'll go out and have a party all by ourselves."

She hesitated.

"I wonder if that's really a good idea—tonight!" she said.

"Why not?"

She laughed, faintly.

"Well—I was just thinking—suppose we run into some of our dinner guests? Don't you think it might embarrass them?"

"A lot I'd care!" he said. His mouth fell into the grim line she had come to know so well in the last strenuous weeks at home. "I haven't got the upper hand here yet—but I'll have it some day! And when I do some of these people that were too high and mighty to come here tonight are going to be standing around first on one foot and then on the other worrying about whether they'll be asked to be among those present when Mr. and Mrs. John MacVeagh are entertaining!"

Ellen laughed again. She couldn't stay angry or hurt with John very long. He was just a little boy, after all. She loved him. She loved that vain-glorious, bossing streak in him; it was a part of his magnificent strength, his superb audacity.

"You run along and get dressed," she said. "I'll be ready before you are. And—I just hope we do meet the Fosters somewhere, so that she'll know she hasn't put anything over on us."

So they went out, and they had their party. And they did, at various times, see the Fosters and some of the others. But this time Ellen had John to herself all through their wanderings, from dinner to theatre, from theatre to night clubs. Not since her first night in New York had she had so good a time.

"I wish we went out oftener like this," she said, as they reached home. "Just you and I. It's been marvelous, John."

"You bet," he said. "We'll do it again soon—mighty soon."

She thought of that promise many times in the next weeks. The time came when she had to think of it to help herself to get through the lonely hours. But not for worlds would she have reminded.

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

ABOUT this time, when every mind,
With thoughts of love is filled;
When all our dreams are sweet and kind,
Our petty hates are stilled,
How doubly dear are those we prize,
The restless, boisterous crew
Of children with their laughing eyes,
Their spotless souls and true!
About this time may all who tread
The pleasant paths of earth,
Find means on sombre lives to shed
A share of Christmas mirth.
When candles gleam across the snow,
And bells of Christmas chime,
May every child's sweet spirit glow
With joy, about this time!

Some Practical Suggestions on How NOT to Feed Baby

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOUR problems in feeding your children, particularly your baby, may be very bothersome. This is because children differ widely in their tastes, inclinations and actual food requirements. When these characteristics are very pronounced in an individual child you should consult your physician as to the best way to meet the situation. Take it by and large, however, the general food habits of an average intelligent people are the best guides for the diet of that people. In obedience to the natural laws of evolution, particularly to the law of adjustment to environment, people in general eat what they ought to eat. There is, however, much to say about what one ought not to do in the matter of one's diet, and especially in the baby's diet.

Many ill-balanced special foods happen to do well for some babies because the babies in question have something peculiar the matter with them. For instance, an infant who has had milk with too much cream in it and has become intolerant to fat may do very well for a time on a malted milk containing practically no fat but a very large amount of malt sugar. Much trouble is caused by people supposing that similar good results will follow its use with every baby.

Animal experiments have taught us much. They have demonstrated especially that the results of faulty feeding may take years, sometimes generations, to show themselves.

The human organism has wonderful powers of compensation. It will resist the effects of bad feeding for a long time, but not forever. Unfortunately, a baby does not always hoist the danger signal at once. It does not show the symptoms of scurvy for three or four months after a diet deficient in vitamin C has been commenced.

A prevalent and indefensible habit with many mothers is to delay giving fruit juice until after the third month. If there is one period more than another in which an infant, especially a premature infant, requires fruit juice, it is during the first three months.

Children fed on whole milk or unmodified dried milk sometimes appear to do well, but they all too generally acquire the habit of secreting an immense amount of acid in the stomach in order to deal with the heavy curd thrown down by cow's milk, and suffer in after life from this upset of digestive balance.

Food is not simply fuel. A machine requires, in addition to fuel, cleaning, lubricating, igniting, carburation and many other processes. The food of the human body must have in it the material with which analagous processes can be performed.

In milk, which is a complete and perfect food, for most infants and grown-ups, there are not only three different classes of fuel but at least thirty-seven other elements. All of them are of equal importance. Among them are iodine, lecithin, cholesterol and iron. It is legitimate to infer that the balance of these elements which is suitable for a calf will not be suitable for a baby. It is possible to modify the fuel part of cow's milk to make it practically identical with the fuel part of breast milk, but it is impossible to do more. This is an explanation of some of the shortcomings of modified cow's milk in infant feeding. Many mothers and all infant welfare workers know now that the indigestible curd must be watered down to the point of tolerance. The fuel factors (protein, fat and carbohydrate) must be balanced up to correspond with human milk. They know, too, that vitamins must be added. But they make a mistake in thinking that when this has been done a perfect food has been provided for any baby.

There is so much to these "don't" that I must continue them tomorrow.

Concrete Lessons for Slow Child

By L. Lamar Matthews

AS long as Dunham was in the first three grades at school he did fairly well. There were pictures and blocks and charts and all kinds of small devices for teaching little children "the three R's."

But after he entered the intermediate grades he seemed so stupid that the boys began calling him "Duncy."

LAMAR MATTHEWS

After many months of that rating the boy became discouraged, sullen, disorderly and quarrelsome. Neither his parents nor his teacher knew that he regarded them as tormentors, or that his ugly disposition was the result of his own humiliation and failure. And so they continued to worry about him; and he grew steadily worse in every way.

Then, one day Dunham was placed in a class that was arranged for "exceptional pupils." He did not know whether they were supposed to be exceptionally good or exceptionally bad. Anyway, he was accustomed to being impelled along, and he didn't care what sort of class he entered. They were all the same to him.

But it was only a few days before Dunham was taking an interest in his school work; furthermore, he seemed to be doing about as well as the rest of the class.

For the arithmetic lessons there were apples and matches and bits of cardboard that could be divided and put back together again. It was easy to understand fractions when the pupils did them that way. Then they drew lines or figures on the blackboard that explained things. Sometimes they played store, and it was really fun to figure out the price, take the money and give back the change.

Dunham could understand concrete lessons. It was betract ideas that bothered him. He couldn't grasp the abstract.

In geography lessons they built mountains and peninsulas and capes and continents with sand on a table. Powdered chalk was used to indicate the rivers, lakes, gulfs, bays and oceans. Another thing he liked was putting the United States together with blocks carved in the shape of the various states.

Dunham never had been able to tell latitude from longitude until his teacher let him take a big black and white map and color the up and down lines with red and the across lines with blue. After that he made a little paper ship and let it move so many degrees this way or that. Then longitude or latitude meant something definite in his mind.

Every subject was presented to those pupils in some concrete way. Dunham could understand them, and he became interested in his studies. Slowly the reserve and hostility and hang-dog attitude that had become part of his nature began melting away.

Many pupils can grasp abstract ideas without difficulty. Children of superior intelligence receive and profit by such instruction. But a large number of pupils with average intelligence fail miserably when only rules, theories or principles are presented.

The minds of all children are not alike. The approach to one child's mind may not answer for another. More often than otherwise, children who fail at school are the victims of their elders' failure to find the right approach to their young minds.

There are very few children who are hopeless dullards. There are many who are considered so. Teachers and parents should be on the lookout to find some aptitude which will open the door to the child's mind and heart.

Household Hints

Pound up an onion with a quarter of a pound of shredded white soap. Castile for preference. Add half a pint of vinegar and two ounces of Fuller's earth, the rough sort. Boil the mixture up for ten minutes and strain it before bottling it for use when wanted. Spread a little of this over the scorch mark and let it dry into the linen or other fabric. Then brush it out, but if the mark should still show, repeat the process and wash the fabric in the usual way.

When hands are stained through peeling apples or potatoes, rub them with a mixture of vinegar and salt.

Correct Forms and Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Double Xmas Gift.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) Would it be proper to give the young lady to whom one is engaged an engagement ring as a Christmas gift?

(2) Is it proper for a gentleman to take a lady's arm in crossing a street?

(3) When a young man is the junior of a family—that is, John Joseph Doe, Jr., but doesn't care to go by that name—would it be proper to print on his calling and Christmas cards, J. Joseph Doe?

(4) When a gentleman has been introduced to a lady, and shortly afterward they part, is it proper for the gentleman to tell the lady that he is glad to have met her? I have been told that it is proper, but fail to see how it can be, when it is the lady who has met the gentleman.

(5) When at a dinner where wine is served, is it proper for a "teetotaler" to turn his glass down?

AN APPRECIATIVE READER.

YES, proper and a very charming thing to do.

(2) He may help her, or guide her, across the street, by putting his hand on her elbow, but he may not take her arm. The best way is for him to offer his arm to the lady, saying, for instance, "Won't you take my arm going across this crowded street?"

The rule is that it is never proper for the gentleman to take a lady's arm.

(3) I suppose that this might be done, since it is our privilege to see the form of our names that is pleasant and agreeable to us, but it would not be conventional.

(4) It is proper for either the lady or the gentleman to tell the other that he or she is glad to have met him or her. That sounds a bit complicated—doesn't it—with all that excellent grammar. What I mean is that the lady may tell the gentleman that she is "very glad to have met" him, or the gentleman may tell the lady that he is "very glad to have met" her. There is no reason why this gracious acknowledgment of pleasure in the introduction should not be said by either a lady or a gentleman. Why shouldn't it be said by any one who feels honestly urged to say it?

(5) No, it is not proper to turn the glass down. When the wine is served, the teetotaler-diner indicates that he doesn't wish any wine by telling the one who is serving the wine that he does not wish any, or by holding his hand over the glass as the wine is offered. He doesn't need to grasp the top of the glass with this gesture or make it at all awkward. He simply holds his hand above the glass. If he pushes his glass a bit away from his plate, too, the waitress or whoever is pouring the wine will understand that he probably does not wish to be served wine.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

SPORTING NEWS — THE RECORD NEWS — FIRST ACCURATE COMPLETE

Ed Hughes' Column

BY ED HUGHES.

The status of Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., golfer extraordinary, is just now commanding the attention of the entire Anglo-Saxon race. Far across the sea the news of Bobby's acceptance of a $50,000 cash gift comes in the nature of a bomb shell explosion of the seniority of British golf—for Bobby has played a rather significant role in the drama of the Royal and Ancient links.

Bobby Jones may "get away" with the acceptance of the "fifty grand," leaving his "amateur" standing unbesmirched, so far as the U. S. A. G. A. is concerned. However, Britain is a trifle more scrupulous with respect to the line of demarcation between the amateur and the professional. It may be that Jones and the U. S. G. A. will be obliged to suffer the humiliation of a "showdown" precipitated by the "strict-laced" sentinels of Royal and Ancient amateurism.

This is not pleasant to behold, but it's almost certain to develop in case Jones decides to try for the British amateur trophy next year. The Manchester Guardian has already hinted that the Royal and Ancient committee may find itself in a position where it will have to reject the entry of Jones in the amateur championship. It went on to explain that if such a thing (Jones' acceptance of the $50,000) had happened in British golf, the beneficiary of the gift would instantly find himself barred from the amateur ranks. There is a Royal and Ancient amateur clause prohibiting any golfer profiting either directly or indirectly from his golfing skill.

What is the U. S. G. A. going to do about the case of Bobby Jones? That is the question anxiously bandied about goldom at the current moment. Since that day in 1916 when this now jewel from "Jawgia" drove and putted his affectionate way into the hearts of millions who trudged the fairways of Christendom, he has been "Bobby the Amateur," unquestioned and without price.

Jones Hangs Like Mahomet's Coffin, In Mid-Air.

Today it is hardly an exaggeration to state that he is hanging like Mahomet's coffin, suspended in mid-air. The guardians of the peace of our amateur world are each one waiting for the other to first view the "corpus delecti." A wierd, and not a comforting picture, to say the least.

From across the high seas the cables have already brought the press comments of Mr. Jones' recent debacle. And stunned Britain has yet to get its golfing breath over the situation. Johnny Bull, who for 500 years has stood on the first toes of Britain and turned thumbs down on those amateurs whose talents for wood and iron had become tainted and tarnished with gold, is vexed. He stands with furrowed brow and puzzled look at the case of our Bobby.

Lest the writer be misunderstood, let it be said that these remarks are not set down in malice. Nor is there the hope that injury may come to young Mr. Jones for any act of his in his chosen profession. The true facts follow briefly:

Up until one year ago Bobby Jones was known everywhere as the perfect amateur. He was the man who had turned a deaf ear to every proposition, and there were reported thousands that had to do with the making of money out of the game he played so phenomenally. It has been currently reported that Walter Hagen, one of our far-seeing professionals, had offered to team with Jones on a country-wide tour. He proposed to pay Jones $150,000 for one year. The comment of the wise boys was that Hagen would make money. Jones, it was estimated, would draw a $10,000 gate in 25 cities alone. With Walter, super-showman, in the cast, the pair would be a "sell out."

However, Bobby couldn't see it. More than that, he made some rather caustic comment on the question of his ever becoming anything but an amateur. Still Bobby was no longer a boy. He had become both a husband and a father of two children. The husband, father-golfer had the problem of a family to support.

Torts and Briefs Wait on Signed Articles for Public Prints.

This talented young man had to his credit a degree from the Georgia Tech, as well as a sheepskin from dear old Harvard. Further, he had looked on the calling of the law, and he saw that it was good. So he turned his eyes to Emery college, seeking to walk the studious closters there. Nevertheless, instead of writing torts for the teachers and briefs for the pedagogues he had the happy idea of conjuring forth from the ink well of his golfing career signed articles of the game.

O. B. Keller joined hands in the literary enterprises of Mr. Jones and a book immediately bounded from the press by Jones and Keeler.

The signed articles that appear in the daily journals were calculated to net Mr. Jones $20,000 in 1927. The book by Jones and Keeler added another $15,000 to the bankroll.

GIBSON CERTAIN OF BEAR POST

Big Leagues Waive Frank To San Antonio

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 11.—Frank Gibson will manage the San Antonio Bears.

Harry Ables is so sure of it that he has "quit worrying" about a manager, he said today on his return from the National Minor League Baseball convention at Dallas.

Gibson, who has agreed to terms and is anxious to make the job here, has been waived out of the major leagues and the O. K. will be placed on his release by Boston to San Antonio at the National league convention the coming week, Ables expects to get final and definite notice Wednesday.

"I had to talk three hours to the president of the club that wanted Gibson and refused to waive him out of the big leagues," Ables said. "But I finally won him over and he promised to turn Frank over to us officially next Wednesday.

"We need another outfielder to play safe," Ables said. "I'll get him in the spring when the major leagues begin cutting down as they head north, outside of that, we are set for the season."

Ables, besides getting Infielder Dusty Boggess in trade from Waco for Harry Brown and Pitcher Jack Robertson from Beaumont for Joe Klein, secured three young pitchers while at Dallas, he disclosed Saturday. One of these is Leslie Cox, former ace of the Texas university staff, who played in class C leagues in Texas for a year after leaving school and last summer was farmed out to Petersburg in the Virginia State league by the Chicago White Sox. Young Cox hit his stride in '27 and included among his pitching accomplishments a perfect game—no runs, no hits, nobody reaching first base.

He is a right hander.

Two left-handers were secured, Hinkle from Albany of the Eastern league and Trader from Wheeling, W. Va., in the Mid-Atlantic league.

> LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 11. (AP)—Sale of Ray Grimes, first baseman for the Little Rock club of the Southern association to the San Antonio club of the Texas league was announced today by R. G. Allen, president of the local club upon his return from the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues held at Dallas. Grimes finished last season with a batting average of .358 and led the association until illness forced him out of the lineup. He came to Little Rock last spring from the American association.

Steadman Stars At All Cage Jobs

T. C. U. Basketball Captain Versatile Player

Special to The Record News.

FORT WORTH, Dec. 11.—In Oran "Slim" Steadman, captain of this year's T. C. U. basketball team, Coach Madison Bell has an athlete who can play any position on the floor with grace. However, "Slim" is more particularly a forward than anything else and likely will be used at that position.

Steadman calls Abilene home now but was a resident of Fort Worth for a long time. He is a graduate of Central High school of this city where he starred in three sports, football, basketball and baseball. He has lettered in these same sports since entering T. C. U.

"Slim" is one of T. C. U.'s most able all-round athletes. He received honorable mention for all-conference honor as an end this year in football and was a dependable outfielder in the circuit last year in baseball. He played forward last year on the Horned Frog quintet, teamed with the versatile Frank Cantelmi.

This year Steadman is the only veteran forward on the Frog squad and Bell faces the problem of discovering another point-maker to work with the captain. Steadman is expected to step into the limelight in the conference this year. He hit a stride last year that showed promise of him becoming a leading scorer. "Slim" can hit goals from any angle when he is right and barring unlooked-for injuries, he should come into his own this season.

Loughran Takes On J. Slattery

NEW YORK, Dec. 11. — A new light-heavyweight champion will be crowned in Madison Square Square Garden tomorrow night, when Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, and Jimmy Slattery, of Boston, two of the foremost challengers, come together in a 15-round rumpus to determine the rightful successor to Jack Delaney, who voluntarily surrendered the honors to associate with the bigger and more important boys.

At present both Loughran and Slattery are half owners of the bauble, each holding a leg on the trophy by virtue of romping off with their respective elimination bouts. Tom won the right to the left leg by soundly trouncing Jowld Michael McTigue, while Slattery grabbed hold of the other pedestal by eliminating Maxie Rosenbloom.

What had every indication of a long and bitter war between the local boxing commission and the national boxing commission was averted only by the men agreeing to battle it out for the supremacy. The local board which has its own ideas as to who is who fistically, promptly awarded the championship to Loughran when he decisively defeated McTigue, to who it had awarded Delaney's title.

In order to be different, Tom Donohue, head of the N. B. A., refused to concur with the empire state edict, and ordered a jam between Slats and Rosenbloom for the N. B. A. title.

Both men are exceptionally clever artists and also very rough ones, if they care to be

Registrations For State High School Basketball Race Due On December 15

After December 15, Fines Will Be Assessed With January 19 Set As Final Date For Enrollment

AUSTIN, Dec. 11.—The eighth annual state basketball tournament of the Interscholastic league will be played in Austin March 9 and 10, according to Roy B. Henderson, athletic director of the league bureau of the University of Texas. All schools intending to compete for league honors should register with the Interscholastic League bureau before December 15, Mr. Henderson said. After that date a penalty of one dollar will be assessed in addition to the regular fee until January 15, which is the closing date for all registrations.

Round Robin Schedule

In county competitions, this date for the tournament, which is a week later than that of previous tournaments, makes possible a round robin schedule on a home and home basis, according to Mr. Henderson. The county champions will be qualified for play toward the district championships, which must be decided by the tournament method not later than February 25. After the district champions are decided, bi-district games will be arranged by the state to select the teams to compete in the state tournament.

Under the rules of the league, the county committees may divide the schools into classes A and B so that schools of the same class may compete among themselves.

1200 Teams In 1926-27

More than 1200 teams from all parts of the state competed for the championship last season. This, Mr. Henderson said, was the largest high school basketball tournament held anywhere from the standpoint of the territory involved and the number of teams and individuals taking an active part.

Peltzer's Style On Track Novel

Running Star Interests American Fans

By LEWIS BURTON
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—John Jones came back to competition here Saturday. It was not the Jones in person, but a perfect replica in running style and an excellent substitute named Dr. Otto Peltzer.

After the lasting impressions of odd but efficient form left by Paavo Nurmi and Edvin Wide, athletes on these shores believed that all foreign distance men have something new to offer. When Peltzer, the holder of four world's records, came here he was expected to be as vitally different from any American as were the erect-running Nurmi and the high-stepping Wide.

What the old-timers saw when they got their first glimpse of the German middle-distancer in action at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory was a highly efficient long-striding athlete, who was almost as much like John Paul Jones was himself. From his loose, easy manner of walking to his unusually "low" running Peltzer resembles Jones.

Although these two are a pair of the greatest runners the world has ever seen, their style hardly could commend itself for adoption by aspiring newcomers. Both being in the neighborhood of six feet in height, long-limbed and lean, their method was made to fit an unusual case. It so happened that it succeeded admirably both times.

Jones, before he hung up his running shoes upon graduating from Cornell, set a world's record of 4:14 2-5 for a mile, and no doubt could have gone much faster if he wanted. It is said of him that he could have raced a mile in 4:10 had he ever cared. Peltzer's 1500-meter record of 3:51 and his half-mile mark of 1:51 3-5 are two of the best world's standards ever made.

Major Loops To Fight For Draft

Moguls Mobilize Forces For Showdown

BY CHARLES SEGAR.
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Major leagues are mobilizing their forces and preparing for their first attack in their war with the Minor leagues over the draft.

What may develop is difficult to say at this time. Major league officials will not admit that they are fearful of the result. The Minors have issued their ultimatum, but thus far the Major leaguers have not taken them seriously, for it is believed that they will be good children when force is used.

This week the Majors will meet on four separate days. The officials will go into session at the Roosevelt hotel tomorrow where the steering committees of the National and American leagues meet. Tuesday the National league will convene at the Waldorf, while wednesday the American league meets at the Belmont. The joint meeting of the leagues will be held Thursday at the Roosevelt with Commissioner Landis sitting in the Driver's chair.

The draft question, of course, will be the important problem of the meeting. The Majors don't want any difficulty with the Minors.

Ernest Barnard, president of the American league, has a new draft plan. The Minors wouldn't listen to it during the convention at Dallas. The Majors are hopeful that they will recede from that position soon and listen to reason.

While the moguls are chewing up a lot of cigars and debating the draft, the managers will occupy the lobbies of the various hotels around town trying to make some trades.

Colonel Lindbergh Plans To Start Non-Stop Hop To Mexico City On Wednesday

ATLANTIC ACE MAKES PLANS

Hop to Mexico Will Be Via Texas

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will hop off in his historic plane "Spirit of St. Louis" Wednesday on his flight from this city to Mexico City, it was definitely made known today.

Only adverse weather conditions will prevent his start on that day, Lindbergh told officials at Bolling Field after being assured that his trim monoplane will be "rarin' to go" by that date.

The Lone Eagle of the air spent the afternoon at the field, going over the plane with army experts and checking every strut and stay. Beginning tomorrow he will spend his entire time at the field, in order that preparations for the flight can be rushed to a conclusion.

Today "Lindy" gave his famous whirlwind motor his undivided attention. It is the same bit of mechanism that carried him to France in his epochal flight, and then around the United States without a falter.

The motor has already been "okayed" and needs but a final turning up for the 2,000 mile Journey.

Lindbergh will make the flight entirely overland. He estimated today, as he studied maps of the route, that he will reach Mexico City in from 20 to 24 hours after the hop-off depending upon wind currents.

There has been no announcement as yet, whether the flight will be attempted as a non-stop trip. This will probably depend upon weather conditions. The impression at Bolling field was that Lindbergh will take on enough gas for the entire trip and if the weather is right, will keep his plane roaring southward until he lands in the Mexican capital.

From Washington he will swing over the southern states to Texas, then point the nose of his ship straight for Mexico City and keep going.

MEXICO PREPARES TO WELCOME LINDBERGH

By Universal Service.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 11.—In the event that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh follows the course line on his proposed non-stop flight between Washington and Mexico City, he will fly over an established airline between Brownsville, Texas, and the capital.

It was at first believed that the trans-Atlantic flier would cross into the vicinity of Nuevo Laredo and army engineers were preparing a map of that region for him when dispatches from Washington indicated that Lindbergh would follow the coastline as far south as Tampico and then cut across the state of Hidalgo to the capital.

If Lindy takes this route, his course to Mexico City will not be a difficult one to follow. At present there is an established airline between Brownsville, Tampico, Vera Cruz and Mexico City, planes leaving each terminal tri-weekly.

The Brownsville to Tampico line is the most widely traveled one, according to the department of the interior and bureau of communications. Oil men desiring to return quickly to the oil fields from the states prefer the air route to the longer rail journey to Monterrey and thence to Tampico.

Several of the large Tampico oil companies operate their own planes on regular schedules to Matamoros, a border city just across the Rio Grande river from Brownsville. In addition to carrying passengers, these company planes carry considerable freight.

There are no beacons on the route but land guides have been erected, and as a recent bulletin issued by the bureau of communications said, "the route is as easy to follow as a paved highway."

From Tampico, Lindy will undoubtedly fly in a southwesterly direction, skirting the eastern border of the state of San Luis Potosi to the state of Hidalgo. In Hidalgo, Lindy will encounter two high mountain ranges but after these are safely put behind, the remainder of the flight will be easy sailing.

Every possible assistance will be given the flier by the government. A squadron of planes will probably meet Lindy at Tampico and escort him to the capital. First plans called for the escort to him the lone flier at San Luis Potosi, 200 miles north of the capital and about a third of the way between the capital and Nuevo Laredo.

A rousing reception is being planned by the government and the American colony. The American ambassador, Dwight Morrow, who induced Lindbergh to attempt the flight, will be host to the flier during his stay in the republic.

MODISH MITZI— Mitzi and Dad Select Toys For Children By JAY V. JAY

Mitzi and Dad have a long list of Christmas gifts for the small nephews, nieces and cousins—children who have not hesitated to name on paper what they wish Santa Claus to give them. Not one of them mentioned the plush penguin. Perhaps thy didn't know that penguins are the rage in Paris.

Funny that Bobby or Dick didn't list an automobile like this, it's a copy of an English racin gcar. Dad watches it win the automobile race right on the counter. Why it's perfect. Jove, it's just the thing every boy should own. That settles it, he'll buy it.

Funny that not one of the children mentioned a doll. Mitzi wonders if they know that the new dolls are dressed in leopard skin coats and have tam o'shanter hats? She can't imagine why every child wouldn't want this doll to make modern clothes for. She'd dress it in a transparent velvet robe de style.

None of the things that Dad and Mitzi bought in the toy department were on the children's list. They can't imagine how it happened. Who did they have in mind when they bought these toys? Dad wonders if he is actually in a toy department—or in his second childhood!

'Speed' Bradford to Test Whippet

Speed Bradford is making preparations Monday for his famous "second gear" speed test which is to start Thursday through Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma.

The test is being made in a Whippet "collegian," stock model roadster with all stock, and no extra equipment, according to announcements. It will be taken directly from the stock of Knight-Whippet, Inc.

The run will be made all the way with the Whippet in second gear. C. T. Boone, general manager of Knight-Whippet, Inc., says he is confident the Whippet will withstand the test, and that the car will finish on scheduled time, breaking previous records claimed by any and all other four-cylinder cars. Bradford is now selecting the gas, oil, battery and tires to be used during the entire run.

A large map in front of the Knight Whippet showrooms here will keep the public constantly informed as to the exact location of the car as reports by wire and telephone will be sent in at regular intervals from points visited.

The trip will start at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning from the Knight-Whippet agency, and the following agents and cities will be visited:

P. G. Williamson, Burkburnett, Texas.

SERMON DEALS ON MARRIAGE

Dr. Pat Moreland Defines Matrimonial Idea

Only a campaign of Christian education and a removal of the "Curtain of darkness on sex" can bring about a betterment of the marital relations in America, declared the Rev. Patrick D. Moreland of the Grant Street Methodist church Sunday night in a sermon on "Companionate Marriage; Solution or Symptom."

Companionate marriage as advocated by Judge Ben B. Lindsey will not be the end-all to broken-up homes in this country, the Rev. Moreland said.

"Judge Lindsey," the minister declared, "Is a very earnest man in his efforts to find some solution of this problem and he seems utterly sincere in his advocation of the so-called companionate marriage. And back of his earnestness is 20 years of experience in examining and healing the troubles of thousands of young people. Undoubtedly he is fully qualified to discuss the subject. But when a man advances a theory his earnestness soon blinds him to its faults. This perhaps is true of Judge Lindsey. But I would not have you think I censure him. The heart of every human is too troubled to be also loaded with the censure of his fellow man."

"Perhaps the main trouble with Judge Lindsey is that he has had in mind too much of the physical side of man and not enough of the spiritual."

The very fact that physical attraction soon passes away would tend to wreck the theory that Judge Lindsey advocates, the speaker declared.

"It is not the human being that has changed," he continued, "but the environment of that human. Lewd stories of sex corruption of the confession type—stories that the United States government will not permit to pass through its mails—and picture shows which portray plots around sex triangles, where a man, the hero of the picture, may break up a second man's home and somehow be spared the hurt of conscience and some way be justified on the screen; these are some of the things that have brought about hasty marriages and the resultant unhappy homes.

"But far worse than these things is the conduct of the fathers and mothers themselves, who have for ages avoided mention of these things of which their children should be told, shrouding with a curtain of darkness all matters of sex.

"We have progressed in many ways and in many things. We can build more beautiful houses today than ever before, but the only way to make a home has remained forever the same. There must be a man who loves and a woman who loves.

"There has been an avoidance of the issue of life. School, home and church has entirely passed over life's martial problem and have been the direct cause of present conditions—where in this country one out of every six marriages ends in a broken home.

The solution is not, as Judge Lindsey advocates, to be found in making marriage easier, in removing it from the jurisdiction of the church, but in bringing the church in closer contact with married life. The old-fashioned religion coupled with sympathy of the parents in young people's problems and an educational campaign which will teach our boys and girls how to live morally and physically clean alone can bring about the desired change.

100,000 to March To Virgin's Shrine

By Universal Service.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 11.—More than 100,000 devout Catholics from all parts of the republic tonight were converging on the small town of Guadalupe for the religious festival tomorrow at the historic shrine of the virgin of Guadalupe.

For the second time in 400 years, the pilgrims were nearing the shrine of their country's patron saint under the leadership of laymen and laywomen.

No priests were among the pilgrims. In past years every band was led by a priest and at the shrine the ceremonial was conducted by a prelate of the church. Only once before, according to Catholic leaders, has the pilgrimage been made without priestly guidance.

American Dies at Home Of Estranged Bride

By Universal Service.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The American colony in Paris was stirred today by the mysterious shooting of Paul Billetdoux, the young American son of a professor of the Sorbonne Medical school, now lecturing at Columbia Medical school in New York.

Billetdoux was found last night with a bullet through his head in the apartment of his wife with whom he is reported to have been having marital difficulties for some time.

Wife Not Present

Billetdoux was shot in the presence of Madame Vidal, his mother-in-law and Maurice Vidal, his brother-in-law, after a quarrel with them. The wife was not present at the time of the tragedy.

The mother-in-law and brother-in-law declare that Billetdoux committed suicide after they criticized him for being a coward.

The police declare that Billetdoux was murdered and have arrested Maurice Vidal, charging him with the crime.

The police state that the body was dragged about and placed in such a position as to make it appear a suicide.

Billetdoux called his wife to ask for his passport in order to rejoin his father in New York. He found only his mother-in-law and brother-in-law in the apartment.

Separated From Bride.

Billetdoux was separated from his wife, who, it is understood, intended to institute divorce proceedings shortly. She was three years his senior and the mother of his two children.

AUSTIN, Dec. 11. (AP)—A new office building to house the state department of education, water board, industrial accident board, board of control and board of health will be sought of the next legislature by Representative W. T. Williams of Travis county.

Mr. Williams said he will urge need of the structure to care for the present overflow in the capitol. Some departments are very crowded for space. The banking department, for instance, has rented a portion of an adjacent rooming house for its legal department quarters. Branches of other departments function in legislative committee rooms. The entire motor bus division of the railroad commission is located in two connecting committee rooms of the house.

LOWDEN NOT OUT OF RACE

He "Chooses" to Run If Friends Want Him

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. (AP)—Still declining to make an out and out declaration that he is a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, Frank O. Lowden let it be known today, however, that he would not interfere with the efforts of his friends in his behalf.

The former governor of Illinois declared himself to be still in mystery as to the exact nature of his status regarding the nomination, but he smilingly gave the assurance that "whatever that status is there is little likelihood of it being changed."

Adhering to the opinion that he formed on August 2 when President Coolidge issued his "do not choose" statement in the Black Hills, Lowden said he believed Mr. Coolidge never intended to be a candidate in 1928 and that his recent amplification was unnecessary to convince him that the president had been entirely eliminated.

In Mr. Lowden's opinion, the most important issue in the next campaign is to bring agriculture on an equal footing with industry and labor, and he said this could be brought about by the enactment of a farm relief bill with an equalization fee to defray the cost of controlling surpluses.

Two Are Seriously Ill In Hospital at Electra

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Dec. 11.—A young woman and a child are in a local hospital at the point of death following operations for appendicitis.

Esther Lee Wilson of North Electra street, was operated on Saturday night. She was taken ill Tuesday but felt better after the first attack. She then became rapidly worse and was operated on Saturday.

The six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wilson, who live four miles northeast of here on the Red River lease, was brought to the hospital Saturday night with a ruptured appendix. An operation was performed.

Latest reports are that both patients are in a serious condition.

Chicago Will Be Dry Place On New Year's

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—It will be an arid New Year's for Chicago would-be celebrants, according to the outlook here tonight, based on plans to plug the leaks in the embargo against Canadian rum runners.

An organized campaign to preclude liquor shipments to Chicago has been completed by Federal Prohibition Director E. C. Yellowley.

Crews of Two Ships Are Brought Ashore

By Universal Service.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Dec. 11.—After battling death for three days the crew of the freighter Agawa, wrecked in a storm that swept the Great Lakes Wednesday night, was taken to shore early today. The crew of the steamer Oglebay, also wrecked in the storm, has been rescued, as has the crew of the Atlafoc, another vessel that was stranded and is pounding to pieces.

SUNFISH BATTLES SIX MEN

Six fishermen battled with a sunfish, weighing nearly 300 pounds, before they landed it off the West Coast of Scotland recently. While fishing, the crew of the Aberdeen Line fishing steamer Daniel Stroude saw two sunfish floating near the steamer. A boat hook was dug into the larger of the fish, which immediately commenced to struggle violently. With various appliances the six tried to secure the finny fighter, which increased its struggles as its chances for freedom lessened. At times it nearly pulled the men overboard, and it continued its struggles after it was landed on the deck so had to be dispatched.

He Returns, Finds More Gold.

Returing to the spot where he had won gold 20 years before, James Rowan, at 81, unearthed a nugget which may mean longsought riches for him. Rowan went from Victoria to Kalgoorlie, Australia, recently to attend a "Back to the Goldfields" celebration. Inspired by the enthusiasm of the event he decided to return to the field near Boulder where he had found gold a score of years ago. Prospecting in Slug Hill, once noted for its riches in the early days, he found within a short time a nugget weighing more than 26 ounces and contining nearly $300 worth of gold. He is continuing his search and believes that he has prospects for a valuable mine.

Girl Described As Having Split Mind

Wife Who Slew Husband Was Dance Mad

By Universal Service.

PAINESVILLE, O., Dec. 11.—Velma West, "split mind slayer," will appear before Judge Marvin H. Helter in municipal court tomorrow to plead to the charge of having battered her grid-star husband to death with a clawhammer.

"No, I am not sorry," the 21-year-old girl wife kept repeating stolidly in her jail cell today. "He struck me. And when anyone does that you strike back, don't you?"

For an instant—softened, and she added:

"I didn't know I was hitting him with a hammer—and, and—when I went to Cleveland I bought some handkerchiefs for him, thinking, perhaps, he wasn't dead."

She will be arraigned on a charge of murder in the first degree, but her counsel hope to have this reduced to murder in the second degree, and, perhaps, even manslaughter.

"I kept hitting him, though I didn't know I had the hammer in my hand, and then I went to the card party," she is reported to have told Sheriff Edward Rasmussen.

"Yes," she added, "I went."

Rasmussen asked the girl:

"And you aren't sorry you killed him?"

She pondered, then replied:

"No."

The monosyllable terminated the talk in which the dance-mad wife from the big city told how, in a moment of pique, because he had derided her friends and had objected to taking her to a party, she had hammered to death her husband, Thomas Edward West.

They have called Velma a girl with a split brain and young West a husband with a fireside complex. They have described her as a pleasure-loving girl and him as a studious, home-loving type.

Two years ago, West then 25, quiet and large of stature, met 19-year-old Velma Van Woert at a dance five miles from his father's horticultural farm at Perry.

Fourteen months ago the pair eloped to Ripley, Ky. They kept this marriage a secret a week, then divulged it. The girl's parents donated a roadster. West's folks gave them a tiny bungalow near the West farm at Perry. They sought happiness and didn't find it.

Deaths

JACK HINDMAN

The body of Jack Hindman, 44, resident of Wichita Falls a week, who was found in bed in his room at 1005 Seventeenth street Saturday night with his throat slit and a blood covered knife at his side, was shipped by the Merkle Undertaking company to McLean, Texas, Sunday afternoon. Funeral services will be held there Monday afternoon at the home of his mother, Mrs. J. R. Hindman.

Survivors are a wife, one son, Robert and his mother. All were in the home at the time of his death.

A. L. GENTRY

Funeral arrangements for A. L. Gentry, 52, prominent Thornberry farmer, who was found dead in the back seat of his automobile in the garage at his home with a discharged 12-gauge shotgun at his side, are pending the arrival of a daughter from California, who has wired that she will reach Wichita Falls at 11 o'clock Monday morning.

Mr. Gentry was found by a searching party organized by his wife who was alarmed at the unexplained absence of her husband. Ill health was the reason assigned for his act by a note found on the body, according to Judge O. L. Gibbs, justice of the peace, who held the inquest. He is survived by his widow and nine children.

M. H. WILSON

M. H. Wilson, for almost 20 years a resident of Burkburnett, died at 10 o'clock Sunday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Salter after a long illness. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the Burkburnett Baptist church with Rev. M. B. Hayes officiating.

Mr. Wilson, who came to Burkburnett from Wills Point in 1908, became interested in the retail grocery business here, from which he retired a few months prior to his death on account of ill health.

Surviving Mr. Wilson are four daughters, Mrs. Salter and Mrs. Hyde Park of Burkburnett, Mrs. J. O. Fanning of Duval, Okla., and Miss Annie Wilson of Dallas, and two sons, L. E. Wilson of Dallas and J. Z. Wilson of Burkburnett.

Pallbearers will be O. L. Clark, Earl Carley, Glen Kincaid, Al Lohoefener, Roy Carnes and Irving Blum. Honorary pallbearers are August Lohoefener, J. G. Hardin, W. R. Hill, Louis Blum, F. R. Knauth, Dr. W. B. Adams, J. R. Sullivan and George Hughes.

CREW BROUGHT TO SAFETY

HOUGHTON, Mich., Dec. 11. (AP) The remaining 21 members of the crew of the stranded steamer Altadoc, on the rocks off Keweepaw point, Mich., were rescued late today by the coast guard cutter Crawford after a thrilling battle in high seas jammed with ice formations.

CONGRESS HAS BUSY PROGRAM

Thousands of Bills In Solons' Hopper

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. (AP)—With its first week behind it, the seventieth congress will finish up its organization this week and its committees will begin work on the great raft of legislation senators and representatives have dumped upon them in several thousand bills.

Both houses worked with dispatch during the first six days of the session, the senate temporarily disposing of the Smith and Vare cases and the house passing the first deficiency bill and beginning work on the tax revision measure.

Two inquiries of importance are to get under way during the week before senate committees, one dealing with charges in the Hearst newspapers that a fund of $1,200,000 was created by Mexico for four United States senators and the other dealing with the Smith and Vare primary and general elections.

Flood Relief Hearing.

On the house side committees will continue flood relief hearings and begin conferences on farm relief legislation, Muscle Shoals and the Boulder Canyon dam proposal. In addition an elections committee probably will take up the case of James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, whose right to a house seat has been challenged on the ground that he was not a legal resident of the state when elected last November.

Republican leaders hope to reorganize the senate early in the week with the election of a president pro tempore, a secretary and a sergeant-at-arms and the approval of the committee assignments made by the republican and democratic committees on committees. Little difficulty in organization is anticipated by the leaders, but they are prepared to see a fight made against the re-election of David S. Barry, of Rhode Island, as sergeant-at-arms.

House Slates Ready.

House committee slates have been completed and the majority leaders in that body hope to obtain formal approval for them early in the week so that all may get to work sorting out the hundreds of bills which have been referred to them and begin consideration of the more important.

The first deficiency bill, covering most of them items were in the measure that failed in the filibuster at the end of last session, now is being considered by the senate appropriations committee and Chairman Warren expects to have it ready for action within a few days.

One measure ready for a senate vote is that reaffirming the authority of the special campaign funds committee. This resolution was offered Friday by Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, chairman of the committee, but its consideration then was objected to by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania.

Reed to Call Up Vote.

Reed, of Missouri, will call the measure up tomorrow and his committee will make no move in the Smith and Vare cases until the senate has adopted the resolution as the committee members hold that they should not start work until all possibility of doubt as to its authority has been removed.

Another resolution waiting senate action is that adopted by the house Saturday awarding a congressional medal of honor to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his New York to Paris flight. Anonimous approval of the measure is forecast.

Winston Churchill's Record Reveals Him To Be Political Chameleon

By Universal Service.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Is Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, planning to turn socialist in order to retain office when the present conservative government goes out of power?

Political theorists were discussing this question tonight as a result of a debate on socialism which was held before the Hardwicke society at Lincoln's Inn. The debaters were former Premier Ramsay McDonald, for socialism, and Winston Churchill, against.

Churchill's assault on socialism, while of a condemnatory nature, was admittedly luke warm. The Chancellor of the Exchequer replying to the former Premier declared that the Laborite Chief had already stated his self-same ideas regarding the uplifting of the masses, and said: "We are all out for a higher organized society."

Continuing his remarks Churchill refrained from using the flail on socialism, but when questioned he voiced wonder as to what socialism could actually accomplish.

The concensus of politicians of all parties seems to be that the socialists will succeed the conservatives at the next general elections. Churchill in his political career has been a Unionist, Liberal and Conservative.

KAY TALKS TO BIG AUDIENCE

Subjects Are Taken From Daily Events

Taking his subjects where he found them in the daily events of life, Judge John C. Kay addressed 164 persons in the Strand theater meeting of the Kay Bible class Sunday.

Text of Judge Kay's address:

Taking the Risk.

"For a little topical subject this morning, I want to call attention to a little event that happened in Washington, D. C. some two or three weeks since. An extremely old gentleman up there named Mr. Justice Holmes made a few remarks that are important to you and to me about driving up on these railroad crossings. We have got to pick out some new form of suicide in this country. This gentleman put it very modestly. They don't use big, loud words. He said: "It seems to us that a man who drives up in front of a train assumes the risk," and it has got to seem that way to you, too, from now on, and to me. That ought to have come along 30 years ago.

"I want to talk to you a moment about the English Bible. The greatest publishing house in the world, is England, is devoted to publishing Bibles. The Bible sort-sells any book in the world and always has, and its sales are increasing more rapidly than any book, and, on the cornerstone of that great building where it is set, in letters of gold, is this phrase: 'Heaven and earth shall pass away but my word shall not pass away.'

There are a lot of reds and radicals and half-baked philosophers these days attacking the Bible—more so than ever before, I think. But, one of these gave it up and got out a book recently and said they had fallen down and failed altogether. The reason for that is not far to seek. The English Bible is in the blood stream of the people. The stories in the Bible have become the lares and penates of our fireside and a part of our bright inheritance. Who among us now questions the story of Adam and Eve? Who among us now questions Jacob wrestling with the angels on the road as he went to see his uncle?

"Who among us doesn't know of the sale of Joseph by his brothers into Egypt and his history and dealings with Pharaoh? None. Who now will shear the locks of Sampson? Who now will deny that David picked up the five smooth stones from the brook and slew Goliah? Who is it that hasn't heard this and doesn't know about it as part of his family blood? None. This has been done by the church, by education of the church, by the preachings, by the Sunday school, by the day schools, and by the combined efforts of every good man and every good woman.

"Now, the lesson this morning is in the Book of Isaiah and is a prayer made by Hezekiah, the king. I want you sometimes to give a little thought and some attention to the prayers that are in the Bible. There is not a great, long, rambling, scattering prayer in the Bible. Some of this praying that we have in the churches, and elsewhere scatters too much and covers too much and, true to nature, we want too much and ask too much. Like down at the colored meeting, they prayed for every sin and every passion, and every want, and, finally, they said: 'Brother John' you will now pray for the people on the uninhabited parts of the earth.' No such praying as that in the Bible. When the Lord came to one old king and said: 'Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die and not live.' The doctor is going to say that to you and to me some of these days. A terrible thing to say to a man and, yet, it must be said to every man. And, this old king was a good man and he made a prayer. Now, he knew what he wanted and said so. He said: 'Lord, now remember how I have walked before Thee in righteousness with a perfect heart.'

"Poor, old blind Sampson, after the Philistines had put out his eyes, got loose from grinding the mill over there where they had him hitched up like a horse, goes out to where they are holding a big meeting in a temple, and said little boy: 'Put my right hand on one of these pillars of this temple and put my left hand on another pillar. Now, what does he pray for?

"Not for everything in the world; not for this and that and the other, but he said: 'Lord, strengthen me this one time.' And, that's all. 'Right now is the only time that I am ever going to want anything and need it. I want strength right now.' That's all he said. And, down came this mighty temple on the heads of his enemies.

The Grief of Christ

"And, finally, more and most of all, the Savior in the bitter grief of Gethsemane, said: 'If it be possible, let this cup pass from me.' So that every one and each one in the Bible that prayed knew what he wanted and asked for it. It was so with this old king that prayed here in this lesson. He wasn't afraid of the great might of Egypt, with its military power coming up from the South. He wasn't afraid of Assyria on the East and Southeast, and when he made this prayer, a million men were camped out in front of Jerusalem. And, after he made the prayer, in the exquisite language of Lord Byron:

The angel of death spread his wings on the blast
And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed;
And the eyes of the sleeper waxed deadly and chill,
Their hearts but once heaved and forever grew still.

And in answer to prayer, an army is smitten in one night.

"There is another secret about these prayers in the Bible. Don't forget that. Every time, it was a good man that made the prayer. I heard a great preacher, one time, say that a sinner couldn't pray for anything but forgiveness. I don't know whether that is so or not. Sounds like a harsh doctrine. But I heard a great man say it. The Bible don't say that every man's prayer will be answered. It don't say that every man can pray effectively and successfully. What does it say?

"You know, there is not much foolishness in the Bible. 'The fervent, effective prayer of a righteous man availeth much.' That cuts the ground from under a good many of us. That's the reason that much of the prayer is but an empty sound.

"Now, it don't say that the big, loud prayer of anybody, no matter how he has been living, or what he has been doing, or what he has been thinking about, avails anything, but, the prayer of a righteous man. It says, somewhere over there, that the right kind of a prayer, by the right kind of a man, with the right kind of faith, would remove mountains. I believe that.

Secret Prayer

I believe in secret prayer. I believe your whole life ought to be a prayer, every step and every breath, but, above all, the secret prayer is the one that is the most important. Why is that? Why did the Savior say that 'When thou hast entered into thy closet and shut the door' 'the Father who seeth in secret will reward thee openly.' Now, why do they do that? Certainly heaven is as approachable in one place as in another. Why is that put in there? Oh, it is put in there in grounds of common honesty. No man is going off by himself and shut the door of his closet and pray unless he is honest about it; no eye to see him; no ear to hear him; among all the people he is not known and he is not going to do it at all except from honest motives.

"What do we pray for? Do we pray for the things that we need? Right there has been the weakest joint in my harness all my life. I never could distinguish between the things that I needed and the things I wanted. Can you? Because, the things that I want make a finer exhibit. They look better. They make a better display. You could start a state fair on the things that I want. But, the things that I need, food, clothing, shelter, and a few of these great primary wants of men, I have never been able to satisfy myself with these, and only these. Can you?

"Now, the next time we pray, let's pray for something we need the most, and the worst, and, in few words, say, like Sampson: 'Lord, strengthen me this one time.'"

KAYGRAMS

It seems to us that a man who drives up in front of a train assumes a risk.

The greatest publishing house in the world, in England, is devoted to publishing bibles.

There is not a great, long, rambling, scattering prayer in the Bible.

The fervent, effective prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

I believe your whole life ought to be a prayer, every step and every breath, but, above all, the secret prayer is the one that is most important.

Episcopal Vestry Votes Resolution Of Respect To Late Rev. F. T. Datson

Rev. Frederick T. Datson, deceased rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, was characterized as a builder of constructive force, a counsellor and a friend, in a resolution passed by the vestry of the church in its first regular meeting since the death of the Rev. Datson.

The resolution outlined the activities of the Rev. Datson since coming to Wichita Falls 13 years ago, and told of how he had built up a large church from the mere handful found under his charge then. A copy of the resolution was tendered the family of the Rev. Datson.

"Resolution passed by the vestry of the Episcopal church of the Good Shepherd upon the decrease of Rev. Frederick T. Datson.

"This being the first regular meeting of the Vestry of the Church of the Good Shepherd since the decease of our rector, Rev. Fred T. Datson, it is directed that there be placed upon the records of this meeting an expression of personal sorrow and sense of loss felt by this vestry.

"Whereas, being deeply sensible of the loss sustained in the decease of Rev. Fred T. Datson, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, we realize that there has been lost to the Episcopal church, to the diocese of Dallas, to this parish, and to this city, a man of scholarly intellect, a builder of constructive force, a counsellor and friend to this vestry, and one of the foremost citizens of this city.

"Coming to Wichita Falls 13 years ago when the membership of this church was a mere handful, housed in a small wooden structure, the present handsome church edifice and parish house are due to his unflagging and indominitable spirit. Diligent in his work, unlifting in his sermons, he contributed much to the spiritual and civic development of Wichita Falls—a man of faith, consecration, ideals, vision, and energy. A great constructive spiritual leader and teacher has passed and this vestry feels the personal loss of their friend, who by his wise counsel proved himself of great value to the vestry and to this parish. Therefore be it,

"Resolved, that the vestry of the Church of the Good Shepherd shall and it hereby does note in its records this tribute to the life and work of Rev. Fred T. Datson and its appreciation of his noble character and the eminent services he has rendered to his church and to humanity; and, be it further,

"Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be tendered to his bereaved family.

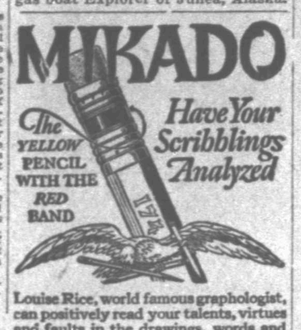

"Meeting of the vestry of the Church of the Good Shepherd this 3rd day of December, A. D., 1927, at Wichita Falls, Texas.

"Vestry of the Church of the Good Shepherd.
"By HARWOOD STACY,
"J. H. ALLISON,
"E. C. DeMONTEL,
"Resolution Committee.

"Attest: E. C. Jordan, secretary."
