Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

That Wichita Falls is not without artistic aspiration is attested by almost two pages of advertisements of teachers and schools of music, dancing, expression and painting appearing in last Sunday's paper, for these teachers and schools would not be here if this aspiration was not manifest in many of our people.

And it may be said of Wichita Falls' teachers and schools that in the scope and quality of their work they are the equal of the best in the Southwest.

John Erskine, himself, one of the country's greatest musicians and the author of fiction, contributes an article on "The Amateur Music Maker" in the current issue of the Woman's Home Companion, urges everybody to attempt to follow their urge to sing, or dance or paint, tells how they may obtain instruction, especially in vocal music, and urges that our schools give proper credit for music instruction and that our institutions of higher learning make some provision for actual training and practice in the finer arts.

"The average man and woman," says Mr Erskine "would like to sing or play or dance or paint—not as a profession but as a pleasant and beautiful way of enriching their lives." It is far easier, he says, to satisfy this ambition than most of us in our modesty are ready to believe. He then points out that there is hardly a community in the country that is without someone capable of giving instruction.

And if we cannot or will not attempt to train ourselves to sing or play we can, at least, develop our appreciation of music through the phonograph or radio.

"We are often told," writes Mr. Erskine, "that the benefit of education in literature and in the arts should be an improvement in our taste. Taste, as I understand it, is a cultivated ability to discriminate between what is fine and less fine. Music will develop our taste only if we train ourselves from the first to find something that is always new. The perpetual urge to observe more closely, to listen more attentively, is what in the end develops taste and makes the enjoyment of the art rich. If in your singing or playing you give one performance which satisfies you and another which does not, find out the reason in terms of technique. If one disc on your phonograph gives you a deeper pleasure than another, don't stop with your preference but ask yourself the reason for it. It is amazing what rich spiritual results come merely from asking the right question."

And here's a thought for patrons, pupils and teachers: "In singing or playing certain physical principles are involved which must be mastered by all performers. Beyond these principles every person is an individual case. The incompetent teacher may have studied with a wise instructor who taught him some procedure which he and no one else needed. If he now tries to force this procedure upon you, as a secret method which will make the art easy, you can be pretty sure he is wasting your time. The principles of correct playing and correct singing are no more secret than gravitation. Beware the teacher who won't admit it."

The International Typographical convention will convene in Houston next week. This will be the first time the printers have held their national convention in Texas. It will draw to Texas delegates from every state in the union and Canada.

The International Typographical Union is one of the greatest of the labor organizations. It has a leadership and an influence in the labor world far beyond its comparative numbers. Able and far seeing leaders have been at its head. Its course generally has been one of conservative progress rather than of radical action. It is respected by publishers and employers in the printing industry who are often glad to give voluntary cooperation in progressive movements inaugurated by the union.

W. A. Bachman, for many years employed in the composing room of the Times Publishing company, will represent the local union at the convention.

Coste to Take Off For Texas Hop Early Thursday

NEW YORK, Sept. 3. (AP)—Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte announced through their manager tonight they will take off at 5 a. m., (eastern standard time) tomorrow on their nonstop flight to Dallas, Texas, instead of at 8 a. m., (eastern standard time) as previously announced. They said the plane was in excellent condition.

DALLAS, Sept. 3. (UP)—Dallas residents were confident tonight that another dusk would bring as guests of the city, Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, conquerors of the Atlantic in the first Paris-New York flight.

Coste, master of the French plane Question Mark which landed in New York Tuesday evening after a successful flight from Paris, announced that he and his companion intended to start for Dallas and 7 a. m. (central standard time) Thursday. Estimates of the time required for a New York-Dallas flight indicated that the airmen would arrive here early in the evening.

Officials began plans for a tremendous welcome. Col. William E. Easterwood, who contracted the Frenchmen for a flight to Texas and deposited $25,000 to be paid as a prize when they complete the trip, now is in Europe. His personal representative, George J. Smith, Snyder, Texas, publisher, has announced that he will be on hand to greet the fliers.

Moody Invited

J. Ben Critz, general manager of the chamber of commerce, expressed fear tonight that the fliers might reach here after dark and said he intended to ask them to set the hour of their departure ahead a few hours.

Gov. Dan Moody has been asked to come to Dallas and greet the fliers in the name of Texas when they land at Love field. Mayor J. Waddy Tate and representatives of civic bodies will form a reception committee.

Coste and Bellonte plan to fly in almost a direct line from New York to Dallas, it was announced. The proposed route would carry them over Little Rock, Ark., and across the Texas line near Texarkana. The distance is estimated at 1,500 miles. Flying at the rate of 150

Fight Over Tolls May Explain Blast

GARLAND CITY, Ark., Sept. 3. (UP)—Either labor trouble or controversy between the state highway department and citizens was blamed by officials tonight for the bombing of the new $500,000 bridge across the Red river here today.

Damage was estimated at $250,000. The two middle spans of the structure, ready for dedication tomorrow, were destroyed by the blast, declared by Police Chief W. H. Scott to have been intentional.

Chief Scott said either labor trouble, incurred during erection of the bridge or bitterness of citizens following the state's decision to charge tolls, led to the dynamiting.

Negro Given Week To Prepare for Death

AUSTIN, Sept. 3. (UP)—Jesse Washington, negro sentenced to death for the murder of Mrs. Henry Vaughan, of Shamrock, was granted an additional week of life today by Governor Moody. Execution, which was set for Friday, was delayed a week to give the negro a chance to prepare mentally and spiritually to meet death, the governor said.

Devastating Hurricane Moves Toward Cuba From Demolished Haitian Cities

HAVANA, Sept. 3. (AP)—The Belen observatory tonight said reports received there indicated the hurricane now in the Caribbean sea would sweep over the Bahamas, and probably would do considerable damage in Cuba.

The observatory said the storm center was moving at a speed of only 16 miles per hour, but that the winds blowing toward the center were of a velocity of more than 100 miles per hour.

Rev. Father Gutierrez Lanza, director of the observatory, predicted hundreds of thousands of dollars property loss and probably a great loss of human life from the storm.

HAVANA, Sept. 3. (US)—Reports from the Dominican republic tonight said that the hurricane had cut a path of destruction across the province, leaving the cities of Boca, Chica, Guaracanes, Hatomayer and Victoria almost destroyed in its wake.

No details of the loss of life and property were available. It was considered probable, however, that a heavy toll of life would be exacted, as well as property damage running into the millions.

Dispatches received from Haiti by way of Santiago said that the gale is passing unabated through Azua and Haiti.

This city became deeply concerned tonight with the possibility that the westward course of the hurricane might be changed to a more northerly direction and strike the Cuban capital.

The Dominican republic occupies the easterly two-thirds of Haiti, with an area of 19,300 square miles and a population of more than one million people.

Sheldon Enters Finals Of Golf Tourney By Defeating Burns In 25-Hole Battle

Staging the most thrilling and sensational rally ever seen in tournament play on a local golf course L. R. Sheldon, medalist, defeated L. T. (Bobby) Burns one up on the 25th hole Wednesday to win his way to the finals in the third annual invitation tournament of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club.

In the other semi-final match Morris Norton of Wichita Falls beat Bob Alexander of Munday 3 and 2. Norton and Sheldon will play a 36-hole championship match Thursday. The first 18 holes will start at 9 a. m. and the second round at 2 p. m.

Sheldon Rallies

Burns had Sheldon four down at the 13th hole. Burns appeared to have an easy win on the 14th hole but missed his putt and Sheldon took the hole. Sheldon won the 15th and 16th holes, halved the 17th and won the 18th to tie the match.

The two men halved the next six holes in one over par and Sheldon won the match by taking the 25th in par after Burns had missed a seven-foot putt.

After starting his rally from what appeared to be certain defeat the medalist consistently outdrove Burns but the later caught up with beautiful approach shots.

On the 19th hole Burns' iron was at the edge of the green while Sheldon's ball rolled across the green and into a deep trap. Taking a putter Sheldon laid his ball out of the trap and within six inches

After the start Edison surrendered the controls to Joseph Cole, veteran engineer.

DeMolays Solve City's Problems In Series of Quick Decisions

More than a little complacent over the new and colorful life they had injected into the dull business of guiding the city's affairs through the day, members of Hope chapter, DeMolay, Wednesday night leaned back in their official chairs with a new slant on municipal responsibilities and 24-hour old political ambitions.

Even though Alton N. Parker, member of Byrd's polar expeditions, carelessly left the airport an hour before Mayor Phil Kouri arrived with his official welcome, the city's spokesman found the job much to his liking and pocketed his speech for future reference.

"A most entertaining post," the mayor told interviewers. "I'll put it on my list."

Odell Ballew at the city manager's desk, tabled the water problem in favor of ordering ice cream for all the newsboys, served at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at The

Newly Found Diary Gives Andree's Dying Story of Arctic Expedition

Dauntless Leader Took Grim Pains to Preserve Record As Death Drew Near

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 3. (US)—Thirty-three years ago, almost to the day, Salomon Auguste Andree, leader of the first expedition by air to the north pole, strapped his diary to his back after burying his two companions, and calmly lay down on the polar ice of the great white silence to await certain death.

The veil of mystery which for more than three decades shrouded the fate of that fantastic and daring attempt to reach the north pole by balloon was drawn aside today when the carefully placed and preserved diary was found hidden under Andree's skeleton.

Andree was last of the three to die, after being compelled to bury his two companions, Knut Fraenkel was first to die, the diary reveals. Fraenkel perished on the long 300-mile march from the spot where the balloon crashed—less than 500 miles from the pole—to White island.

Fraenkel's remains have not yet been found. The Scandinavian expert commission studying relics today has officially stated that the skeletons brought back from White island by Dr. Gunnar Horn aboard the Bratvaag are those of Andree and Dr. Nils Strindberg, his assistant.

Buried Companions

Strindberg died on White island and was buried by Andree. The bones found in the expedition's canvas boat have finally been identi-

RENO, Nev., Sept. 3. (UP)—Gov. Fred B. Balzar's nomination as Republican candidate for re-election was conceded today as his majority over E. E. Roberts, his nearest opponent, mounted to more than 4,000 votes. Approximately 90 per cent of the state returns were received.

His opponent in the general election Nov. 4 will be Charles Richards, Reno attorney, Democrat, whose victory over Horace A. Agee was also conceded today.

CO-OPS OFFER DROUTH AID

Texas Committee to Take Plea to Hoover

AUSTIN, Sept. 3. (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, in a long distance telephone conversation, informed Gov. Dan Moody today that production credits were available to Texas farmers from the federal farm board through cooperative organizations.

It was understood here that to secure the credits entails membership in cooperatives which function under the farm board. Production credits are funds advanced to producers against future crops for the purchase of seed and feed.

Hyde also told the governor that Texas had been given the benefit of inter-state freight rate reductions on cattle and feedstuffs.

The only federal money available for immediate relief work, he said, was a residue in the flood relief bill passed about three years ago. Unfortunately, Hyde said, Texas was not named in the bill, although Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas and Louisiana were named; hence Texas cannot benefit from it.

As a result of his conversation, the governor said he believed the best chance for obtaining federal aid was for farmers to become members of cooperatives and participate in the production credits.

Tentative Budget of $75,000 Voted By Community Chest Committee

Temporary cuts in the allotments granted three "character building" organizations in the community chest in order to apply the amount of the reductions to those agencies which provide actual help for the unemployed and needy and a tentative decision setting $75,000 as the goal for the 1931 chest fund were the two most important items taken up Wednesday at the first fall meeting of the new budget, endorsement and campaign committee of the chest.

The Boy Scouts were given an allowance of $3,000, the Camp Fire Girls $1,300 and the Y. W. C. A. $3,000, representing a 50 per cent reduction in the first two appropriations and more than 50 per cent in the last. It was explained, however, that the cuts are only temporary and that a meeting will be held Saturday, at which protests to the committee's action will be heard and considered. The reductions resulted in an increase of $7,500 in the allotment for the Family Relief society, and a decision that if the entire budget is not raised in the

GIANT FLAME VISIBLE FOR EIGHT MILES

Workers Escape Injury When Blast Wrecks Vapor Tower

BLAZE CONQUERED

Refinery Crews Stick To Posts as Fire Licks Gas Lines

A vapor treating tower in the refining plant of the Continental Oil company on the Burkburnett highway north of the city was wrecked by a terrific explosion early Wednesday evening, the blast sending an immense column of fire and explosive gas hundreds of feet into the skies. The explosion was accompanied by a deafening detonation. Loss from the explosion and resultant fire was estimated at $20,000 by D. H. Hyler, refinery superintendent, following a brief survey of the damaged sections of the plant Wednesday night.

Miraculously, no one was seriously injured.

Superintendent Hyler said a more thorough examination of the damage Thursday may reduce or add to the estimated loss. Workmen were detailed to keep watch at the plant Wednesday night, although another explosion was not likely, he said.

Workmen Escape

The explosion appeared at first to have included several other towers, but Frank E. Record, chief clerk at the refinery, explained that inflammable liquid from inside the tower showered over other portions of the net-work of steel structure, criss-crossing pipes and towers and made the actual center of the blaze appear larger than it really was. The flaming shower soon burned out and fire fighters were able to concentrate their attention on the blazing control room and the exploded tower.

A fire door at the control room, Mr. Record said later, was almost bent double by the force of the blast, despite the fact the door was of extra-thick metal construction. Four refinery workmen were near the scene of the blast shortly before the tongue of flame leaped

Bellevue Struck By Wind Storm

Special to The Record News.

BELLEVUE, Texas, Sept. 3.—A five-minute wind storm which struck Bellevue early Wednesday afternoon played havoc with small buildings, windows and power lines, resulting in several hundred dollars damage to property here. No one was injured during the storm, which was followed by a violent rain, the first heavy precipitation here since June.

The wind came from the east, and blew violently for less than 10 minutes. Several garages and other small buildings were overturned, houses unroofed, windows of stores smashed, and power lines blown down. The rain was heavy within a radius of five miles of the town.

Argentine President Asked for Resignation

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 3. (US)—President Hipolito Irigoyen was this morning called upon to resign, according to a report in official circles tonight. His political supporters are said to be falling from him.

The request is said to have been made by a group of radical party leaders, the political organization that was responsible for his installation in office and which the president nominally heads. Irigoyen is said to have refused the request with the answer: "I prefer to await developments."

Oyster Crop Damaged By Prolonged Drouth

AUSTIN, Sept. 3. (UP)—While farmers still are suffering from damage done to their crops by the current drouth, fishermen along the Gulf of Mexico also have a just complaint.

The drouth has retarded the growth of oysters.

High salinity of gulf waters, caused by lack of fresh water from inland streams, has reduced the oyster crop materially, the state game and fish commission reported today.

Crop Failure Leads To Murder and Suicide

FAYETTEVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 3. (UP)—A farmer, believed driven insane by failure of his crops, today shot and killed two of his neighbors, perhaps fatally wounded a third and then committed suicide.

Wesley Stevenson, 57, ran amuck and chased his neighbors down a road with a shotgun. He killed A. L. Norman, 43, and George Petty, 40, farmers.

R. S. Stevenson, a nephew, was critically wounded. The maniac then killed himself.

DALLAS GREETS FLIERS TODAY

Question Mark to Arrive Before Dusk

miles an hour and gaining two hours in the difference in time, they possibly will land by 5 p. m.

Daylight Landing

Sunset here is about 6:45 p. m., and there will be a bright moon Thursday night during the early part of the evening. Under these conditions the fliers will have ample time for a landing at Love field under good conditions.

A squadron of six planes, furnished by the Southern Air Transport company, will serve as an escort from the Texas line to Dallas and will land with the Frenchmen.

A tri-motored plane, equipped with a short wave radio transmitting and receiving set, will serve as a press plane and join the escort ships at the Texas line. Short wave messages will be broadcast on the progress of the Question Mark.

Parade Planned

National guardsmen probably will be asked to assist police in handling the crowds at the airport.

It is planned to parade the fliers through the business district in an open top automobile upon their landing. Escorting cars will be decorated with French emblems.

Efforts to communicate with Colonel Easterwood in Europe by Dallas newspapers today were futile. It was learned, however, that the $25,000 prize money is on deposit at a Dallas bank and will be paid by Smith at the Easterwood offices here. Smith was due to arrive in Dallas tonight and arrange final details for greeting the fliers.

Depart Saturday

Coste and Bellonte are scheduled to be in Washington Monday for an official reception at the national capital. It is expected that they will leave Dallas Saturday.

Paris, thriving East Texas City, remembering that it was named after the capital of France, has asked Coste and Bellonte to travel over that city on their way to Dallas. Other Texas cities are making overtures to have the newest heroes of the air visit them before departing again for the East.

NEW YORK HONORS AIRMEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 3. (AP)—Two little men of modest manner were hailed by all New York today as the latest giants of aviation.

At a luncheon in their honor, on a ride around the harbor, in a parade through the streets, and at city hall Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte were given tumultuous greeting that might have turned any head.

But it didn't turn theirs. They smiled. They waved. They said they were having a grand time. But quite evidently they remained from their own viewpoint just a couple of fellows who had tackled a tough job and had the good fortune to succeed.

Perhaps the most impressive of the day's ceremonies was the official welcome at city hall, for there they were reminded that their flight, the first ever to be made non-stop from Paris to New York, compensated—insofar as possible—for the loss of Charles Nungesser and Francois Coli, the first to make the attempt.

Besieged by Press

"You may be especially proud," Mayor Walker told the fliers, "that your great achievement is not only a wonderful accomplishment in itself but also is the final justification of the ill-fated attempt of your countrymen, Nungesser and Coli."

The luncheon was in the Advertising club, but even before that the fliers had by no means had a quiet morning. For reporters and cameramen were camped in their hotel, anxious for pictures and details of the non-stop flight to Dallas for a $25,000 prize tomorrow and the aviators were almost continuously under fire. They gave interviews, posed for pictures, and made a little speech for the sound reels which reached its climax with the customary salutation, and exchange of hearty kisses on both cheeks.

Coste spoke briefly at the luncheon, expressing in French his appreciation of the welcome the city had extended to him and his companion, and he spoke again at city hall. Bellonte begged off at the luncheon but Mayor Walker, knowing that he spoke English as well as his own language, insisted that he say a few words.

Microphone Shy

Coste, having had experience with receptions before, was perfectly at ease before the microphones that carried his words all over the country but Bellonte was plainly stricken with overpowering stage fright. He started, a sentence, hesitated, tried to finish it, forgot what he had meant to say, and retired blushing as the crowd thunderously applauded in approval of his modesty.

The fliers were taken to city hall by a tortuous route so that they might be given the same reception that has been tendered other ocean fliers. Taken aboard a yacht at an east river pier they were ferried around the foot of the island to a landing at the Battery. Though it was mid-afternoon, Broadway was packed with crowds on both sides from curb to building line and as the procession moved up the heroes' trail between the skyscrapers of the financial district, ticker tape and torn paper snowed down and the fliers were soon garlanded with floating streamers.

Inspect Ship

After the mayor had delivered his welcome and congratulated them on turning the North Atlantic from a one-way street into a two-way thoroughfare, the procession proceeded uptown and along Fifth avenue to the fliers' hotel. Resting but a few moments they left again for Valley Stream to inspect their scarlet Sesquiplane and make sure that it was ready for an early start on its long flight tomorrow.

For the evening their only engagement was attendance at a dinner given by the German-American alliance for Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, the German flier who with two companions preceded Coste and Bellonte in the westward crossing, taking another route however and making several stops along the way.

After the Texas flight, Coste announced today, his famous flying Question Mark will be flown back to France by Paul Codos, who holds jointly with him several world records for distance flying.

Hoover to Receive Texas Drouth Plea

ah; N. T. Gaines, Bellevue, J. M. Edwards, Turkey and Robert Hall, Electra, named a committee to be headed by Gov. Dan Moody to go to Washington early next week and appear personally before the president with a request for a special session of congress to deal with the emergency created by the drouth in the group of counties named by the conference held in Wichita Falls last Friday.

The committee includes Charles Combs, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Stamford; A. P. Pierce, Quanah; W. H. Fuqua, Amarillo; Clifford Jones, Spur; Dr. T. O. Walton, president of the Texas A. & M. college; Orville Bullington, Wichita Falls; Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard and all members of the congressional delegation from Texas.

Will Survey Area

The committee while in Washington will also petition the interstate commerce commission to act immediately on all railroad building projects pending in West Texas at this time and speed up construction work to provide employment for the jobless in this stricken section. Congressman Marvin Jones of this district, in which a majority of the drouth stricken counties are located, will make a personal inspection of conditions in this immediate territory Friday of this week.

Over long distance telephone, Governor Moody, this afternoon promised to accompany the committee to Washington and appeal to the government for aid in the form of a liberal financial loan on liberal terms.

Conference Friday

O. B. Martin, director of extension department of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, and Mr. Bandeen will confer with Governor Moody in Austin Friday in connection with the request for Red Cross aid for stricken farmers and with the Texas railroad commission in behalf of the freight rate reduction requested for the drouth area.

W. H. Fuqua, Amarillo banker, member of the Texas committee recently created by Governor Moody, conferred with the committee in session here today and discussed the intermediate credit bank associations as a possible solution of the aid problems. The committee decided to delve further into the credit association plan.

Hyde Discouraging

The committee also will communicate with authorities in each county of the drouth stricken area enquiring to what extent aid is necessary, outlining the relief measure, with a view to ascertaining the true situation in each county.

Mr. Martin, who talked with Governor Moody over long distance, said the governor had just had a telephone conversation with Secretary Arthur M. Hyde, of the national department of agriculture, and the cabinet member advised that no federal money was available for immediate Texas drouth relief, but the committee will make its appeal before President Hoover, in view of action by the committee and the seriouness of the association as developed in the Wichita Falls meeting last Friday.

COMMISSION CUTS FREIGHT RATES

DALLAS, Sept. 3. (UP)—A reduction in freight rates on livestock, livestock feed and hay and straw to and from drouth stricken areas was ordered by the state railroad commission in session at Austin today, as a drouth relief measure.

The new rate, fixed at two-thirds of the current rate, was made effective from Aug. 28.

Meanwhile George B. Terrell, state commissioner of agriculture, urged that immediate aid be received from the Red Cross.

"The government is not going to donate anything to anybody," he said. "Good security must be put up to get federal aid and local sources can offer aid on the same basis. The greatest need is to find work for our unemployed."

$20 Worth $2,500

TOLEDO, Ohio.—After walking around for several months with a $20 gold piece minted in 1847 in his pocket, Clark La Bounty decided he'd look up the coin in a catalog and see how much it was worth. Imagine his astonishment when he found it to be worth $2,500. This was due to a peculiar thickness of the design.

NEW ANDREE DIARY FOUND

Record Describes Fate Of Expedition

fied as those of an ice bear probably killed by Strindberg and Andree for food.

An entry in the diary found under Andree indicates that the daring leader perished shortly after Sept. 5, 1897, not many days after he and Strindberg arrived at White island (Vitoen), and shortly after the time he buried Strindberg.

Andree, realizing that death was about to come, took grim pains to preserve the precious diary. Wrapping it in straw which he took from the straw shoes used inside his polar boots, the Swede placed the record of the tragic expedition inside a woolen jersey.

With even greater care, the jersey was placed in a wax cloth, and the bundle tied round Andree's back. He realized, apparently that if he died on his back, wandering animals that might attack his body would not so quickly destroy the diary.

With stoicism typical of the explorer, Andree then bundled himself up, pulling his overcoat mostly about the upper part of his body, and piling on himself as much clothing as he could. Then he waited for death.

Tells of Wreck

The diary reveals that the balloon was wrecked within a short time after the start from Dane's island, Spitzbergen, on July 11, 1897. It crashed somewhere on the 83rd degree north latitude, and perhaps in the vicinity of 30 degrees east longitude.

It is apparent from entries in the diary to reconstruct the tragic scene, Andree's balloon suffered the same fate as Gen. Umberto Nobile's dirigible, Italia—being weighted by ice and forced down.

When the balloon reached the ice, the three men were able to cut the ropes of the basket, thus saving not only food, ammunition and rifles, but instruments and maps.

After that, the expedition started the march back to civilization which the bodies of two were to reach 33 years later. They took a southeasterly course.

Fraenkel was the first to give up, dying of exhaustion on the march that lasted almost two months, and covered 300 miles.

Then Strindberg was defeated by the arctic cold, and was buried by the leader.

Foresaw Death

But Andree knew he would never reach civilization, and in that knowledge, wrote his final report and sought his last sleep. His last report is dramatically headed:

"Observation book on march south."

The first church services in memory of Andree and his companions will be held on Saturday. Government officials will attend the service, which will be followed by a school children's parade and a torchlight procession through Tromsoe's streets. After this, the coffins will be placed aboard the Swedish gunboat, Svenskund for transportation to Stockholm.

Dr. Horn will make his official report of the discovery of the Andree relics, together with the complete contents of the diaries to the geographical society at Stockholm on Sept. 19.

Professors Hedren and Lithberg, members of the expert commission which is investigating the Andree finds, stated tonight that the valuable diaries will be turned over to the Swedish government, which will decide on the time and place of publication.

Lawton Fair Exhibits Declared Best Ever

Special to The Record News.

LAWTON, Okla., Sept. 3.—The Lawton fair opened today with the largest stock exhibit being presented in the history of the fair. Agricultural exhibits were of a quantity and variety totally unexpected considering the drouth. The first day's attendance was very gratifying. Twelve was the least number of horses entered in the four races. There are more and better horses here this year than ever before. Four outdoor acts entertain in front of the grandstand.

Indications are the fair will be as successful as usual. Thursday is Lawton day and all Lawton places of business will be closed during the afternoon. Saturday is Military day and crowds will come from long distances to attend the military event which includes a horse show. Four officers, formerly of the Olympic team, will participate in the jumping contests.

School opens soon. Why not rent your bedroom or apartment to teachers or students? A small want ad in the Times and Record News may bring results.—Adv.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 3. (UP)—Mrs. Ann Crawford Sharp, 80, Oklahoma City, brought suit in district court today against five of her children to set aside a mineral deed to oil property which she claimed has a value of more than $150,000.

Mrs. Sharp alleged the mineral deed to one-fourth of her property was made when her children threatened to kill her husband, E. L. Sharp, to whom she was married last July 25.

She also alleged that when her husband's life was threatened she sold 10 acres of her property and distributed the money to her children.

TEXANS PLAN PARTY PLANKS

Democrats and G. O. P. To Meet Next Week

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 3.—Republicans and Democrats will meet next week to formulate their respective platforms for the impending general state election next November. The Republicans in state convention at San Angelo and the Democrats at Galveston do not anticipate any contentious controversies over what should constitute policies of the respective parties.

Nominations made in the recent primaries will be ratified and in addition new state executive committees will be named.

Dr. George W. Butte of Austin, now an assistant United States attorney general, has been selected to carry the Republican gubernatorial banner in opposition to Ross S. Sterling of Houston, the Democratic choice.

Nominee Is Uncertain

There have been reports that although Dr. Butte accepted the nomination of his party he has been considering the advisability of his leaving his federal position to make the campaign.

The Democrats are anticipating a colorless meeting at Galveston compare with some of the hard fights in conventions of other days. It was believed that Sterling would dictate the platform planks and virtually have his own way with them with friendly counsel from his friend, Gov. Dan Moody and other leaders of the party.

Indications were the Sterling forces would be in complete control of the convention, naming their temporary and permanent officers without opposition. Also, his friends were confident the personnel of the new state executive committee would be of men who had been his political partisans in the late runoff fracas with former Governor James E. Ferguson.

Maury Hughes of Dallas, member of the outgoing executive committee, has called on "good Democrats" to see that only loyal members of the party are placed on the state committee, advising particularly against permitting persons who followed State Senator Thomas B. Love and other leaders in the 1928 revolt against the party nominee for president, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Dallas Group Bolts

Hughes and a group bolted the Dallas county convention last month and held a meeting of their own, choosing delegates to the state convention. The other group named a delegation headed by George C. Purl, nominee for state senator to succeed Senator Love, who was an unsuccessful candidate for governor. Senator Love issued a statement giving notice that if necessary he would resort to the courts to force the state convention to seat the Purl delegation.

So far as known this will be the only contest to come before the convention, a bolting delegation at Fort Worth having announced it would not ry for seats since the defeat of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson for governor.

Differences which may exist on proposed declarations of state policies such as penitentiary reformation, tax system alterations and how strong to make the prohibition enforcement declaration were expected to be adjusted in pre-convention conferences.

WOMEN DEMOS CALLED IN SESSION

HOUSTON, Sept. 3. (AP)—A call for the members of the Texas Woman's Democratic association to meet in Galveston on the afternoon of Sept. 8 on the eve of the main session of the state Democratic convention was issued today by Mrs. Edward Hodges of Houston, first vice president and chairman of membership.

"It will be of the utmost importance for women interested in the next platform to attend the meeting," Mrs. Hodges said.

"This hurried or late call is being sent out because it originally was planned to hold no meeting. The gathering will be of especial interest to those interested in the prohibition question."

Mrs. Larry Mills of Dallas is president of the association.

Morgan's Guests Make Merry as Palatial Yacht Perches Atop Rock

ISLESBORO, Maine, Sept. 3. (INS)—J. P. Morgan's $2,500,000 yacht, Corsair, the largest and most palatial pleasure craft in the world, today rested on Lobster Rock, half out of water at low tide.

Aboard the Corsair, which struck a sunken ledge between Kellogg Island and the Gilkey harbor jetty last evening as she was entering the harbor were Junius Morgan, son of the owner, his wife, and half a dozen guests. All had refused to leave the new craft when it was learned she was in no danger.

Meanwhile, plans were made to attempt to refloat the Corsair at high water.

Kellogg island is owned by Frederick R. Kellogg of Morristown, N. J., and is opposite the large island estate of Charles Dana Gibson, the artist. The two islands, with the shoreline, form one entrance to Gilkey's harbor. Apparently, it was stated here, the skipper of the Corsair went slowly to the wrong side of the buoy in the heavy fog and brought up on the submerged ledge off Kellogg island.

Although no one from the scores of small craft which hovered about the Corsair was allowed to go aboard and no information, including the names of the yacht's guests, was forthcoming, it was apparent that those aboard took their experience lightly. Music was heard late in the night and those on small boats saw people dancing on the stranded yacht.

KANSAS BANK REORGANIZED

Bondholders Given Chance To Liquidate

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 3. (UP)—Bondholders in the defunct Kansas City Joint Stock and Land bank were offered a chance to liquidate their holdings today with the announcement of plans for complete reorganization of the institution.

Under the plan as announced by W. S. McLucas, chairman of the bondholders' committee, the reorganized bank would be under indirect control of the Pacific Coast Joint Stock Land bank and the Bank of Italy.

The Kansas City bank went into receivership when Walter Cravens, president, and five other officers and directors, were indicted for making alleged false entries, fraudulent loans to youths and indigent negroes, and conspiracy to defraud. The bank had been chartered by congress to aid financially pressed southwestern farmers by loaning money at low interest rates.

Under the reorganization plan, A. O. Stewart, head of the Pacific Coast Joint Stock Land bank, which is financed by the Bank of Italy will take over active management of the Kansas City institution.

Legge Enters Plea For Wheat Cut

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 3. (UP)—Chairman Alexander Legge of the federal farm board today carried his plea for reduced crop acreage into New York state in an address before the meeting of the state grange here.

Legge cited overproduction in sheep and potatoes as examples of clogged markets which were costly to the farmer, but he placed particular emphasis on wheat, saying American farmers should get out of the wheat export business. The chairman said he thought federal subsidy of wheat exportation would evoke application of stringent anti-dumping laws in foreign countries where the subsidized wheat would be offered for sale.

Free Bridge Over Rio Grande Asked

LAREDO, Texas, Sept. 3. (AP)—Despite the fact that one of the finest concrete bridges along the Texas-Mexican border, costing $500,000, connects Laredo, Texas, and Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, a movement is on foot in the Mexican City to have constructed another bridge over which no tolls would be charged.

The idea had its inception in Nuevo Laredo and has gained a foothold. The plan is to build a bridge that would probably cost not more than $10,000, possibly a pontoon bridge, with the two Laredos cooperating. The construction of such a bridge, it was claimed would prove a great saving of expense to the heavy traffic that crossed the international bridge by the saving of the tolls now charged.

Careless Mr. Gerard Forgets the Scientists Buying Your Way In Making Booze in Jail

By EMILE GAUVREAU

Ex-Ambassador Gerard's list of American rulers will have to go through a great deal of revision before it is even half way acceptable. His roster limits itself almost exclusively to bankers and business men. Preachers, scientists, educators, writers are as completely ignored as though they had no existence.

The single invention of a single scientist may exercise a greater influence on the thoughts, acts and professions of men than the turnover of billions. Radio is one instance. The steamboat, automobile, electric light, telephone, talking pictures, are other instances. The modern business man of the type of Ford, Schwab, John J. Raskob, Daniel Guggenheim, would have been impossible without the inventor. They owe, in fact, their eminence and fortune to him.

The irony of New York's Ewald graft probe is that the ambitious magistrate, now under suspicion of having secured his nomination through a $12,000 bribe, aspired once to the governorship.

If Ewald thought he could rise to the highest executive office in the state by a succession of bribes, he was not grievously mistaken. There have been presidents who got to the White House through dubious ways. And more than one governor in more than one state has been exposed as a grafter and accomplice of grafters.

A cynical observer, writing to this column about the situation in the metropolis, sums it up like this: "Honesty should have a good chance in New York politics. It has very little competition."

Psychologists will tell you that the best place to kill a man is right in front of police headquarters. So, too, the best place to make "hooch" is in a prison cell. This has just come to light through an investigation of the state prison at Trenton, N. J. A deputy keeper, George L. Selby, declares that wine-making and distilling are "flourishing cell industries at the Trenton jail." A good place, by the way, for developing bootleggers and their ilk.

Honest little citizens who carefully make out their income tax and pay Uncle Sam religiously, though many cannot afford to do so, will wonder what will happen to Mr. Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader, who has been earning $7,500 a year as a deputy commissioner. During the years 1927, 1928 and 1929 he put nearly $100,000 in the bank. No record of this can be found at the income tax bureau. Perhaps it was too much of a problem of higher mathematics for Mr. Healy to explain how he could deposit $100,000 in three years on his salary.

Traveling by way of the Faroe islands, Iceland, Greenland and Labrador, Baron Wolfgang von Gronau crosses by air from Europe to the North American mainland in a veteran flying boat with three companions. The Germans describe the feat as merely a feature of a course of the baron's aviation school. Yet they have marked out what will undoubtedly be in a few years to come the safest air course to Europe and return.

For the first time in 43 years the women's national tennis championship leaves the United States. A 19-year-old English girl, Miss Betty Nuthall, takes it home with her. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, vacating the championship throne, made it easy for Miss Nuthall. Mrs. Moody, it is said, is retiring to have a baby, which is more important than tennis titles.

The Texas game commission has begun a campaign to save the white-wing dove, prize game bird of the Rio Grande valley.

A feller 'll smoke a cigar that smells like an ignited horse an' then complain if he gits a punkiny cantaloupe. "Oh, fer the ole panic o' 73 when ther wuz nothin' to cut out or economize on but a trip to Niagary Falls," said Tell Binkley, today.

In Mississippi, folk are sometimes said to refer to moonshine as "leopard sweat." Perhaps they'll go so far as to say the imbiber can get quite a jaguar on.

If you would avoid being soaked, advises the office philosopher, keep away from watered stock.

A Labor Day Sermon

A MICHIGAN senator celebrated his 58th birthday. He is said to be the possessor of a fortune having a value of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000. He is a Canadian by birth. In his youth he deserted Canada for Michigan to better his economic fortune and according to the record, he has been eminently successful. His name? James Couzens. On his birthday anniversary he recalled an instance 16 years ago when he was a partner of Henry Ford and a chieftain of the Ford industry. He said this incident converted him to the principles which caused his political opponents to call him "radical and irresponsible." This is the Couzens confession of faith:

"I confess there was a time when I was not so keen about the rights and interests of the working man. I recall a winter day in 1914 when, with a stroke of the pen, I ordered the discharge of several thousands of workers of the Ford Motor company, of which I was then general manager. I stood in the office window and saw these men milling outside the gate. It was bitterly cold and under these conditions I saw the hose turned on them. I got converted right there. After 48 hours of discussion, Henry Ford agreed to a raise of wages from $2.30 a day to $5.00 in the hope that such men as we could retain might save something out of the increased wages for any contingency of lay-off in the future."

James Couzens began his labor career in the service of Henry Ford at a salary of $300 a month. Now he is 58. He is serving his second term as senior United States senator from Michigan and this little story of his conversion to the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man gospel of humanity is passed on to all classes and conditions. Labor day orators will find in it food for thought as well as a reminder that the family of mankind is ever marching onward and upward and the gospel of brotherhood has more followers today, in all walks of life, then ever before in the history of the world.

Under Southern Skies

SENATOR PAT HARRISON was given another term of six years by the Mississippi Democrats and all eight Democratic congressmen were successful in winning the indorsement of a Democratic people. In Mississippi the primary is the thing. A nomination is equivalent to an election.

Senator Cole Blease of South Carolina faces a run-off. He failed to get a majority over all his rivals. Now the runner-up is former Congressman James J. Byrne, who was defeated by Blease in 1924. Byrne is classified as an aristocrat. In bygone years he served six terms as a member of the house. Blease is the idol of the hill-billies in upper South Carolina; he held all the local offices in his home county before he became governor and senator; he is the most unique individual in the history of South Carolina that has ever graced a senatorial toga; his fame as a criminal lawyer is nation-wide; he runs alone and is one of the best copy makers on the banks of the Potomac.

In the Yellow Hammer state the Republican leaders are in behind Senator J. T. Heflin and his candidates for state office named by the Jeffersonian party organization and the regulars led by John B. Bankhead are preparing for a regular bear fight until the finish on November election day. If Heflin escapes the tommyhawk of the regulars, there will be one survivor of the southern leaders who bolted to the Hoover camp in the not remote past.

Verdict of a Newspaper

WASHINGTON is the capital of the nation and Washingtonians, regardless of political affiliation, read the Texas verdict. All this brought a lively comment from the Post of that city. "Texas is tired of amusing the country with political nonsense. It has highways to build and industrial and agricultural problems to solve."

All American commonwealths have highways to build and industrial and economic problems to solve. There is a time for all things, even for political nonsense, but the big thing is for Americans, regardless of political affiliation, to get down to hard work and real business and rid themselves of their mental depression malady. If in doubt, adopt Henry Ford's favorite maxim: "The farther back you go, the farther you can see ahead." Those who know the past and look to the future know that "the worst never happens." They know that it is possible to kick aside the barriers, pierce the clouds and win the warmth of the rising sun.

The Eagle's Clear Field

SENATOR WILLIAM A. BORAH of Idaho is a political son of destiny. He has been renominated by the Republicans of Idaho and the Democrats decided to give him a clear field. Borah's nomination failed acclamation by the vote of one county. Lest we forget, the Idaho Republicans have deserted the primary system of nomination. Borah opposed the revolutionary change, but the stand pat leaders of the party scorned his protest and returned to the ancient system. Then they named him their choice for United States senator for a term of six years. Strong with the people of Idaho, Borah has ever been at outs with the practical politicians who direct the machinery of the Republican organization.

Georgia for a Conference

GOV. L. G. HARDMAN of Georgia, in a wire to Governor Moody of Texas, suggested a conference of governors of southern states and business men and farmers to discuss the cotton situation. He favors some plan that would give to the farmer a better price for his cotton, but he thinks 15 cents is too low. However, the Georgia executive will be glad to cooperate in any plan designed to aid cotton growers of Georgia and the South. Removal from the market and storing 5,000,000 bales for an indefinite period, along the lines suggested by Governor Moody, would be placing the surplus of 1930 where it would do the least harm until there is brisk demand for cotton in the markets of the world.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

The Big Idea is to amount to something. . . . All their letters pack the same theme. . . . They all want to be Somebodies. . . . It doesn't matter what, simply Somebody. . . . To entice nods from the other Somebodies. . . . Or respect from those who once belittled or snubbed them. . . . To be able to crack the whip at their antagonists and Make Them Like It. . . . Power, they want. . . . From power comes Prestige. . . . Power and Prestige bring Coin. . . . From these come Happiness, they imagine. . . . Heheheh. . . . Happiness. . . . Jimmy Walker has power, prestige and coin. . . . Jimmy is a Somebody. . . . Oh, yes—they say if you are Mayor of New York it is almost as important as being President. . . . "How does it feel to be a Somebody?" I asked him. . . . "When the glitter wears off," Jimmy said, "it still is a lousy job!" . . . Jimmy has Power, Prestige and Plenty. . . . So has Texas Guinan—in her asylum. . . . Texas is happy somewhat. . . . Jimmy isn't that happy. . . . He wants to live, he says. . . . But not the life his friends want him to live. . . "It must be great," Jimmy said, "to live your own life!" . . . It is, I said.

Jimmy then unfolded the classic about the Bethlehem Steel executive. . . . He had power, prestige and plenty, too. . . . After serving the firm and sweating for it for twenty years he took his first alcoholiday. . . . In Yurrup. . . . He gambled at Monte Carlo. . . . He drank heavily. . . . He liked young things around him—lots of young, clutchable things, with sweet-smelling skin, and contagious eyes, teeth, lips, ankles, toes, fingers and so on. . . . Some fun. . . . "Love, alone makes us ridiculous." . . . When he returned to his desk they sent for him. . . . Schwab and Gary. . . . "It is difficult," said Gary, "to tell you—but you are through here" . . . "Why?" asked the Man Who Had Taken His First Holiday. . . . "Because your conduct isn't good for our business. You must have gone mad over there the way you carried on" . . . "But," replied the discharged executive, "I thought that was the way to do it—out in the open—instead of hiding in a corner in dark cabarets. I took my ladies where the crowds were thickest, where the lights were brightest. I'm not much different from the others—who do their stuff behind closed doors!" . . . "Listen to me and don't forget it," thundered Gary, "doors were made to be closed!"

Now there's that Belle Livingstone woman. . . . Belle has a sort of power or prestige in the gay life of the town. . . . Belle has Lived. . . . Belle is a sort of a Somebody. . . . Belle amounts to something. . . . When she has an exclusive speakeasy, that is. . . . You gotta have influence with Belle to get into her exclusive salon. . . . Oh, yes. . . . So Belle has a sort of power—a sort of prestige. . . . And she has pelf. . . . And she has had, oh, so many husbands some of whom were hers. . . . The papers just told how her young intended groom eloped with her daughter. . . . "How come you still can laugh loud?" I asked Belle in the foyer of a sin-den the other 4 o'clock. . . . "Because it is all so comical," Belle replied. "I picked up my party line at our country place and overheard them plotting things. . . . We've got to be careful, my daughter said, 'or the buzzard won't give us any do'.' And he said: 'Yeah, and if she heard this maybe she would drop dead from shock and we'd get it all, eh?' . . . That's why I can still laugh loud," said Belle, who has a sort of power, prestige and pelf, all of which brings Happiness they say.

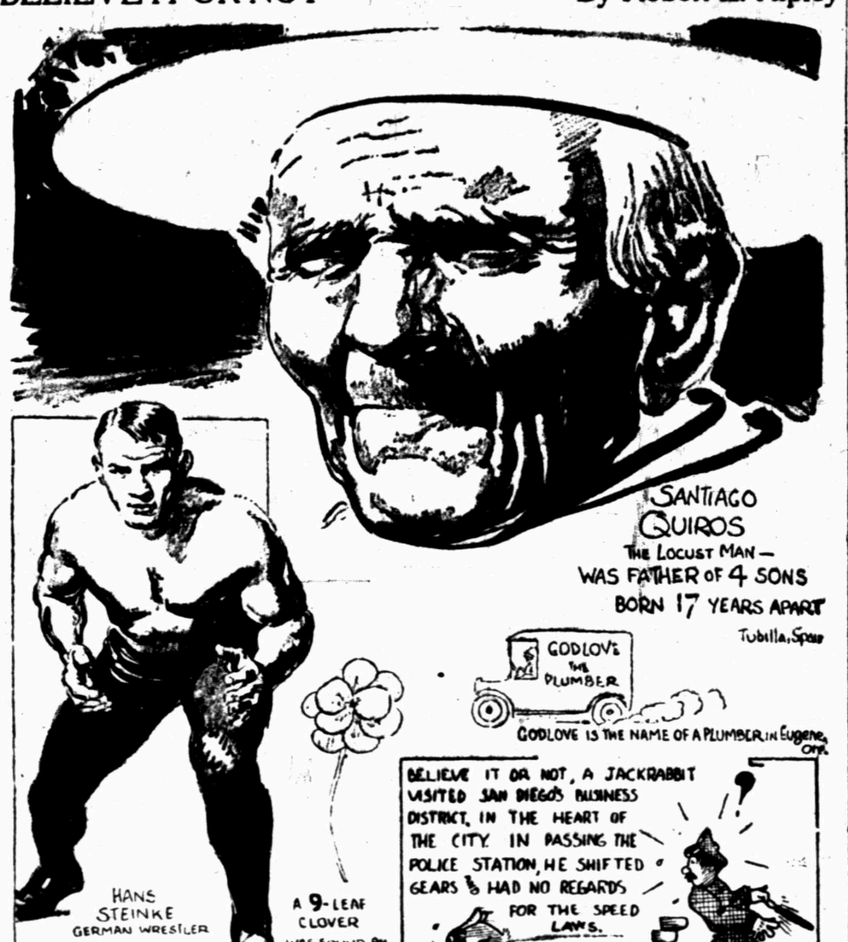

Hallam Keep Williams, perhaps, could answer some of the letters that come to my desk. . . . Hallam has had his power—prestige—and pelf. . . . He still has it, in a way. . . . Hallam Keep Williams lost his prestige after the Ann Murdock divorce or something. . . . Ruth Anderson of the Ziegfeld choir was more important at the time, however. . . . Hallam defied the Social Register which jerked his name out of that funny book. . . . Hallam defied all of them. . . . The hell with them, he thundered. . . . There is nothing greater than the bond between a Man and a Woman! . . . This was Happiness, by golly! . . . and so they were married and they lived so unhappily ever after . . . Hallam and Ruth are back in the Social Register, though . . . Yes, sir! . . . Prestige—power! . . . His $150,000 is in trust, however . . . No can touch a penny of it until long time from now . . . Good God! . . . 150 Grand in trust and listed in the Social Register! . . . Power, prestige and pelf! . . . The other night they were ejected from their second-rate Broadway hotel because they couldn't pay the rent . . . Somebodies!

Funny things—people . . . There's that night-loafing lawyer, frixample . . . Because I wrote: "Wonder if those lawyers who stagger out of night clubs at six in the yawning ever win their legal tilts?" the most guilty of the Consciences went crazy . . . And squawked his head off—and what he was going to do about it . . . The lawyer who inspired the line, and who knew it would be written made no complaint at all! . . . The loud-mouth, however, was sure it was directed at him! . . . Hehsheh . . . If the shoe fits . . . Glenn Condon, the most patient and tolerant of the bosses, was a good tutor . . . Ten years ago his first lesson in colyuming was: "If you want to be read always remember this: Jot down your own faults and nine times out of 10 you will hit the other fellow between the eyes!" . . . Alex Woollcott's lesson was good, too: "There is nothing," said the smartest of the Alecks, "so interesting as a fact—and nothing so readable as a name!" . . . The Big Idea, however, is to keep raising hell!

Heheheh . . . Very funny . . . My name must mean something . . . Maybe I'm a Somebody, after all . . . There's that Harry A. Ferrari, Ph. D., frinstance . . . He writes articles for newspapers about the meanings of people's names . . . "The family name of Winchell," says De Ferrari (Ph. D.), "may be traced back to several possible sources. It is probable that in many cases this name is derived from the Middle English wenchel (Old English wencel), meaning small child, weakling and orphan. The corresponding adjectival form in Old English is wancol, meaning unsteady, tottering and weak" . . . All of which is interesting and true . . . I am a child and a weakling . . . In fact I was so weak yesterday I couldn't lift a gag.

I miss Duke Ellington at the Cotton club, but I go for that "Cab" Calloway guy in a Huge Way . . . What a honey of a delivery . . . And how he St. Jameses that Infirmary! . . . Her name, she said, is Clyde Ellis . . . And she's from Atlanta, Jo-Ja! . . . Pretty, too . . . "How come they named you Clyde?" Harold Ross asked her . . . "Ah wuz named after the Clyde Line," she Southern'd . . . "Named after a boat?" Harold asked . . . "No, sir," the four-months-on-Broadway pretty-pretty dialected, "they awl tho't ah would be a boy, you see" . . . Four months on Broadway! . . . Refreshing and girlish . . . Ah! but 14 months on Broadway! Ah-hah! . . . "Mah only worreh," she said, "is that ah won't make good here. You all have so many beautiful girls in New Yawk" . . . "Oh, I wouldn't worry about that," said Ross with his Poker Face, "there's always room. We use up a lot of beautiful girls in a year here" . . . City Slicker vs. Girl From The Country . . . A year hence she will know All The Answers . . . A is Peggy Joyce . . . Who is flooding the town with post cards from Paris which read: "Miss you so, wish you were here."

"STEP-CHILD"

BY ROB EDEN

CHAPTER XLVIII

Neither of the girls had an appetite, but Edith insisted they should try to eat. She ordered dinner for Kay, over protest, and made her take a few bites. It was not a pleasant meal, however, for both Kay and Edith were thinking of Larry Nettleton and wondering what Dr. Raleigh could say to him to dissuade him from his purpose.

Kay put down her coffee cup and turned to Edith.

"I suppose I'll have to go—"

"Where?"

"With Larry."

Edith was silent. She hated to think of Kay going away with Larry. She detested him, and she had barely met him. To live with him . . . when he had knocked at the door—she had just come in and hadn't had time to remove her cloak—she had instinctively disliked him. His blustering, bullying attitude. Bursting in and announcing he would wait, when she didn't even know who he was. Even when he told her, she couldn't believe it. Even now, it didn't seem true. Poor Kay! No wonder she had run away in terror . . .

"You haven't answered me, Edith."

"I don't know, Kay. We'll wait until we hear what Dr. Raleigh says. He'll know what is best."

They gathere up their purses, paid their checks and left. Kay's footsteps dragged. She hated to return to the apartment. Larry would be there. She wanted to delay seeing him again as long as she could. What if Dr. Raleigh told her she'd have to go with Larry?

No—she couldn't! He knew she didn't want to go. Couldn't go. Dr. Raleigh trying to reason with Larry, the unreasonable . . .

She tried to think of Dane, but the effort was a failure. Always the insistent figure of Larry intervened. Julie had faded from the picture as a menace to her happiness. Now Larry! The past she had been afraid of knowing lately, ever since she had met Jim Whalen. Fearful of what it would be. If only, somehow, Larry wasn't in it!

They neared the apartment house, the door she lacked the courage to Kay still lagging behind Edith. At step in. A little more time! Appealingly, she turned to Edith and the nurse went out on the sidewalk and waited for her.

"I can't go in, Edith."

"You shouldn't let fear get the best of you. There's always divorce, Kay. You've thought of that?"

"Larry would never divorce me—"

"And you? Wouldn't you divorce him?"

"What grounds have I?"

Then she took heart and opened the door. They were in the hall. A faint odor of cooking hung about it as always. Clinging to the dark walls. Up the stairs, Key, engrossed in her thoughts, stumbled over a step. Larry might get nasty . . . What was he saying to Dr. Raleigh?

"How long have we been gone, Edith? Perhaps we've come back too soon."

"It's a quarter past nine. I think it's all right, dear."

The feeling of dread when they reached the door. Holding Edith back when she took out her key. Taking a deep breath, as if she were about to plunge into an abyss from which she never could get out.

The click of Edith's key in the lock. Blindly, Kay followed her. The room was stifling hot to her.

Why—Dr. Raleigh was alone!

Edith's excited voice asking the doctor for Mr. Nettleton.

"He's gone!"

The relief of knowing she wouldn't have to face Larry yet. Kay dropped into a chair. Her knees were weak. It was only postponing the meeting, however. She'd have to face him.

Anxiously, she scanned Dr. Raleigh's face. He was smiling at her.

"Where's Larry?" she managed to ask.

"I said he had gone."

"I know, but where? Is he coming back tonight?"

Dr. Raleigh drew up a chair. "What did he say? Did you tell him?"

"Please, Kay. I'll tell you all about our conversation if you'll only listen. Nettleton was inclined to be huffy, at first. I think he's accustomed to having his own way. Yes, he was a bit angry, but he soon got over it. I told him you refused to go back to him, and the only thing you would consent to was an annulment."

"An annulment?"

"Yes. You're never been his wife—never have lived with him. It will be very easy."

"Did he—"

"Wait a minute. Was that all right to tell him?"

"Oh! Yes, yes."

"Well, then, we'll start action immediately."

"But Larry didn't say he wouldn't consent to it?"

"He did. When I explained, of course. It took quite a bit of explaining. But he left of his own volition because he didn't want to see you again. Said I could handle the whole matter."

"Then—I'm free?"

"Not yet, child, until the court frees you. But it's a simple matter when there has been no consummation of marriage vows. I'll take care of everything for you. You needn't worry."

"I'm free!" Kay repeated. The wonder of it! She couldn't believe it. There must be some mistake.

"I'll call Dane—" she started up.

"I've already taken the liberty. He's on his way." Dr. Raleigh's eyes were twinkling.

"Why have you been so good to me, doctor?" she asked. Grateful eyes, glistening with happy tears, turned toward him.

"Because I'd like to have you happy, child. It will do you good," he answered, simply. "You deserve happiness."

"I thought I'd have to go back to Larry—I didn't want to come in and see him—" Kay stammered. "I had no idea you could do all this—"

"It's nothing, Kay. But someone had to talk to Nettleton like an uncle, and I was the one. He saw my point, of course. He bullied you into marriage in the first place. He took advantage of your grief over your father. And I think he knows now that you don't love him. You've told him and so have I. And I've explained your peculiarly sensitive nature. In fact, I told him it would be positively dangerous for you to go with him. I emphasized the point. Our nerves are delicate things to play with, and yours have had enough strain. They can't stand any more. He won't fight the court action. Indeed, he's leaving tonight for New Orleans. He told me you should write if you need money. He left some for you—" the doctor took some bills from his pocket.

"I don't want it. Please send it back to him." She wouldn't take a cent of his money. Not if she were starving.

Dr. Raleigh returned the money to his pocket. The subject was closed so far as he was concerned. Tomorrow, he would mail it to New Orleans.

A patient was waiting, now. He had to leave. As he walked down the hall he whistled a little. It was unusual for Dr. Raleigh to whistle. But he was quite well satisfied with himself. He wouldn't want to go through again what he had with Larry Nettleton. In reality it had been a hard job, but Dr. Raleigh always felt jubilant when he had tackled a hard job and mastered it.

A man running up the steps three at a time collided with him. He muttered something and was about to go on, when Dr. Raleigh caught him by the coat sleeve.

"So! It's you, is it?"

"Oh! I'm sorry. Didn't see you." Dane Talbot stopped, impatiently.

"Thought you weren't even going to apologize?"

"Well, I wasn't—"

"On your way upstairs?"

"No," Dane grinned. "I'm going downstairs. That's how I bumped into you."

"Well, don't let me keep you." The doctor turned away, chuckling and Dane dashed on.

Raleigh paused. There was the sound of a door opening and slamming shut.

Somewhere in the building a radio was playing a new love song.

THE END.

Hurley Inspects Powerful Towboat

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Sept. 3. (INS)—Secretary of War Hurley today inspected the latest thing in river boats, the towboat Herbert Hoover, under construction here. To be completed next spring, it will be the most powerful craft operating on any river in the world.

The craft will be a radical departure from the old paddlewheel type in that it will be driven by twin "tunnel screws" so imbedded in the bottom of the vessel as to allow navigation in shallow water. The Herbert Hoover will have an overall length of 215 feet with 42-foot beam and will cost $475,000.

Mrs. Hoover will be invited to launch the boat and Mrs. Hurley will be asked to christen it.

Engineers say that boats of the Herbert Hoover type will be able to tow 10,000 tons of cargo upstream and 18,000 downstream. Two McIntosh Diesel engines developing from 2,200 to 2,600 horsepower are to be used for propulsion.

From Dubuque Secretary Hurley and his party proceeded downstream toward Clinton, Iowa, where the war department chief will inspect the site for a proposed river terminal designed to link river traffic with lines of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad.

George Bronn of Randalia, Iowa, has been a member of the Masonic lodge 62 years. He is 87 years old.

Answers to Questions

By FREDERIC J HASKIN

Many readers send in questions signed only with initials, asking that the answers appear in the newspaper. The space is limited and would not accommodate a fraction of such requests. The answers published are ones that may interest many readers, rather than the one who asks the question only. All questions should be accompanied by the writer's name and address and two cents in coin or stamps for reply. Send your question to The Record News Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, director, Washington, D. C.

Q.—How do Brazil nuts grow?—G. M.

A.—The Brazil nut grows in a heavy shell like a cocoanut shell except that it is smooth, and the meat of the nut is arranged within the shell like the parts of an orange.

Q.—What proportion of the cultivated land in Brazil is given over to coffee?—R. S.

A.—One-third. In Sao Paulo about 56 per cent is under coffee. Sao Paulo has become the richest and most powerful politically of all the Brazilian states.

Q.—Where is Southeastern university?—J. T.

A.—It is in Washington, D. C. The corporate name of the Young Men's Christian Association college of the District of Columbia has recently been changed to Southeastern university.

Q.—How many rural mail routes are there?—C. C. P.

A.—There were in operation on June 30, 1929, 43,840 mail routes which were served by 43,724 carriers.

Q.—Where is the apostrophe placed in the phrase "Neds and Marys house"?—A. H. N.

A.—It is correctly expressed "Ned and Mary's house." If each has a house the phrase would read Ned's and Mary's houses.

Q.—Will a concrete road blow up under intense heat from the sun?—E. W. G.

A.—The bureau of standards says that concrete does not blow up. Concrete, however, as well as practically every other material, expands with an increase in temperature. On a very hot day, under a sun with no clouds in the sky, concrete roads will become very warm and expand to a considerable extent. If means are not taken in the design of the road to accommodate this expansion the road will "heave," as it is called, frequently breaking at the point where it has been raised in the air. The more cement that has been used per unit volume of concrete the greater will be the expansion. Concrete also changes its volume due to changes in water content. Drying out causes shrinkage and wetting causes expansion. Well built roads provide for this expansion and contraction.

Q.—Was Disraeli a Jew?—P. J. D.

A.—Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, and prime minister of England, was of Jewish birth. His father, however, Isaac Disraeli, left the synagogue during the early childhood of his illustrious son and Benjamin Disraeli from his early youth was a devout member of the English church.

Q.—What was Germany's loss in men during the world war?—M. C.

A.—Germany lost 1,611,104 soldiers by death during the world war. The total number of German casualties including wounded, prisoners, and missing was 8,066,769, out of a total mobilization of 11,000,000.

Q.—How are navel oranges propagated?—C. S.

A.—The original seedless oranges were produced in Brazil by means of budding and the orange trees of this type in the United States are all descended from two imported Brazilian trees. Buds or budding sticks are taken from seedless orange trees in spring or fall and inserted in two-year old seedling orange trees of ordinary type. When the buds send out shoots the seedlings are cut back so that only the budding portions develop.

Q.—Why is the water level higher than usual in Lake Ontario, when the country is suffering from drouth?—F. C. M.

A.—The army engineer corps says that the water level of Lake Ontario is considerably higher than usual this summer on account of heavy precipitation in Lakes Superior and Huron last year and the year before. It ordinarily takes from one to two years for the surplus water in the upper lakes to reach Lake Ontario.

Q.—Who said "God reigns and the government at Washington still lives"?—M. F.

A.—James A. Garfield used this expression in addressing a crowd from the balcony of the New York customs house, following the death of Abraham Lincoln.

Q.—What is the population of India?—N. A. B.

A.—It is 340,000,000. This almost equals the combined population of North America, South America, and Africa.

The Record News Offers A Booklet on Rats And Mice

Losses from depredations of house rats amount to many millions of dollars yearly—to more, in fact, than those from all other injurious mammals combined. The common house mouse and the brown rat, too familiar to need description, are pests in nearly all parts of the country; while two other kinds of house rats, the black rat and the roof rat, are found within our borders.

Rats and mice are practically omnivorous, feeding upon all kinds of animal and vegetable matter, and they multiply at an almost incredible rate.

Send for a copy of the government publication on Rats and Mice and prepare to do your share toward suppressing these pests. Use this coupon.

Thrift Exchange Requests Prompt Donations For Boys

With approximately 150 children waiting for clothing, 73 of the number were fully clad in preparation for the opening of school at the Thrift Exchange, in the Memorial auditorium Wednesday morning. Tickets have been already issued to a number of well recommended pupils, but all boys clothing, shirts, overalls and shoes are gone. Donations of these garments are particularly requested.

Procedure planned to assure the wisdom of outfitting is that principals of different schools will check the names handed to them by the Thrift Exchange and if all children are not enrolled by the second day, an investigation will follow.

Working with Mrs. R. P. Willis Wednesday morning were Mesdames Al Bedinghaus, Carter, J. T. Cumley, R. L. Underwood, W. C. Krauss, J. D. Bright and Misses Marjorie Bright and Marie Krauss.

The exchange will be open Thursday morning but by all indications, there will not be clothing enough on hand Friday to warrant opening. Mrs. McHam is working in conjunction with the Thrift Exchange and will accept gifts for the room at any time.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

If people were all alike, no one who likes variety would care to live. But if one gets outside of home, she rubs against all types.

So far as that goes, one rubs against all varieties in the home; the only difference there, is that having chosen your lot, you love your own folk even if they have faults. And it is a strange thing that if one member of a family is prone to stray from what the others really believe the straight and narrow path, each other member has a deeper feeling for the wanderer.

But the thought that brought the unlikeness of people into our mind was the memory of the different people who have applied at our door recently asking for work.

A large and seemingly well fed man wished to cut our lawn. He had no lawn mower and we had none and we had moreover engaged a negro at the beginning of the season to cut that lawn at a minimum price. We explained all this to the man and he went away muttering about people who would rather help negroes than whites. He had three children.

An old man came with pencils to sell. We felt it was helping him to buy his pencils—and nothing else. They were so hard and the lead so rotten that they were useless to us. But he was an old man.

A woman came to our kitchen door and asked for anything to do. She said she had been walking all the morning. We asked her if she could sew and she said only very plain sewing. She had four children.

Another woman, (both these were white women), came to our front door and asked for work. She was large and fleshy and strident in voice. She announced she had been walking since 6 a. m. (we were at the lunch table), and had not been given one bit of work or money. She had, she said, three children. We could only give her money.

It seems to us that cases like these are good arguments for the much argued question of birth control. People who are too ignorant or too feeble to work should not be allowed to bring children into the world.

People with feeble intellect should not be allowed to bring children into the world. Too many babies are saddled with a handicap they cannot overcome when parents who have had no education, who could not even take an education, bring them into a world that is not ready to care for them.

Thrill Seeking Modern Curse, Says Miss Dix

The curse of this generation is its demand to be perpetually thrilled. It is not content with placid happiness and well being. It does not want to walk along a smooth, well-paved highway. It scorns the success that comes as the reward of years of intelligent labor. What it craves is the spectacular, the bizarre. It yearns for the adventurous, the dangerous, the risky. It wants always something that crisps the nerves and sends shivers along the spine, and raises the hair on the scalp.

So we see on every hand young people who change from place to place, and occupation to occupation because they are hunting a job that will always have a thrill in it. We see people marrying for thrills, and divorcing perfectly good husbands and wives for no other reason than that they have ceased to thrill them. We have even had the gruesome spectacle of boys committing murder because they wanted the thrill of seeing their victims die.

Now the pitiful part about all this is that the search for the unending thrill is as vain as the search for the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. It can never be found because the very essence of a thrill is novelty and surprise, and the moment that you repeat it it vanishes into thin air. There never can be a first time but once to anything on earth, whether it be a first kiss, a first going up in an airplane, a first pay envelope, or a first baby.

After that everything is the usual, the habitual. We have seen how the works go around. We know that the conjurer has the cards up his sleeve and the rabbit in his pocket, and we no longer sit tense on the edges of our chairs watching with bated breath to see what is going to happen. We know, because we have seen it before, and so we yawn and are bored with old stuff and go looking for something with a fresh kick to it.

Of course there are plenty of thrills in life. It would be an unsupportably dull and flat affair if there were not but we have to put them there ourselves. We have to send ourselves our own surprise packages, as it were, and this is something that the youngsters have not found out. And this is why there are so many aimless, footless young men and women who are failures at everything that they undertake.

They start out with high-pressure enthusiasm at law, or medicine, or interior decorating, or writing advertisements, or selling groceries, or whatnot, and for a little while they are on their tiptoes, and they are going to do great things and become rich and famous almost overnight. Then, in a little while, they begin to simmer down and slack up, and the next thing we know they have given up the law or medicine or grocery trade and are trying something else.

"What is the matter?" you ask. "Oh, I got bored," will be the reply. "You can't get any kick out of trying cases of petty larceny, or doctoring old women with the neuralgia or babies with the stomach ache or selling canned goods. I want to get into some kind of work that is thrilling and interesting.

Probably every boy who works with his eye on the clock and does just as little and as bad work as he can get by with, is thinking what a wonder he would be as an air pilot. Probably every little stenographer who misspells half of her words, and every saleagirl who languishes behind her counter and is too much occupied talking about last night's party to her fellow clerks and telling what he said, and what she said, to bother with the wants of a mere customer, is sure that she wouldn't mind working if she could do something thrilling such as being a motion-picture actress.

But Lindbergh could tell the boy that flying the mail got to be just as much a job as driving a delivery wagon, and Mary Pickford could tell the girl that smearing your face with grease paint day after day, and doing over the same scenes 50 times, can get to be just as monotonous as writing form letters or selling buttons.

If you take your job that way. The thrill comes in when you put it there by giving yourself to your work, by putting all that is in you into it, by making it an adventure that keeps you always pepped up, by finding it a strange country in which you are always discovering new paths that lead to success.

Worst of all this insane mania for thrills is responsible, above all else, for the wrecking of homes and the increase in divorce, for somehow the thrill has become the domestic barometer and when it falls to zero out goes the hearth fire, and everything is off except paying the alimony.

Men and women who have been married for 20 years and who should have enough sense to know better, decide that they have ceased to love each other because they no longer have palpitations of the heart and grow hot and cold at the sound of each other's footsteps, or because they do not thrill at each other's kisses as they did when they were sweethearts.

The greatest complaint that the modern men and women bring against domesticity is that it gets dull and monotonous. That married life has no kick in it. Half the unfaithful husbands have no grievance whatsoever against their wives. They have just wandered away from home in search of thrills.

Half the disgruntled wives who are dissatisfied with their husbands are miserable just because they don't get the same sensation out of a ham and egg peck on the cheeks that has been repeated thousands of times that they did out of their first kiss in the moonlight.

And it never occurs to these poor foolish thrill-hunters that it is only when a man and woman cease to thrill at each other's presence and settle down into the blessed assurance of certainty of each other, that real happiness is to be found in marriage.

Pitiful, isn't it, and ludicrous, this chasing of the will-o-the-wisp of the perpetual thrill?

—DOROTHY DIX.

Migraine Headache

The migraine headache, which occurs at regular intervals, is probably the most common of all headaches. Some of the popular names for it are sick headache, blind headache, bilious headache and migraine headache.

The patient can usually tell when a sick headache is coming on. The face is pale, the patient chilly, depressed, and there is some disturbance of the vision so that it is blurred, or else flashes of light race over the field of vision. Dizziness and nausea are common. As the headache begins, the face flushes on the side of the head that is affected, and perspiration may break out, either general in nature, or on one side only.

The most distressing feature of the headache is a painful ache which is usually one-sided. It begins in a small spot often over one eye, the pain at first being dull and later of sharp boring character. It spreads over the forehead, and on the side of the head. The pain is so acute that the patient feels that he can hardly stand it. Any sudden light or noise makes the pain more intense. The pain usually reaches its height about noon, and has subsided by night.

The patient commonly feels quite well between the attacks. Any excitement, tense nervous condition, constipation, indigestion, loss of sleep, or continued mental concentration, will make the attacks worse.

Migraine commonly occurs with women more often than with men, although it frequently occurs among men who do much mental work or study.

Inasmuch as migraine is a form of headache which makes habitual visits on certain definite times, there is much reason to believe that it may be brought on by certain expectant states of mind.

Migraine headaches are often considered incurable, arising from an unknown cause, but I have found that it is as readily cured as any other sick headache. I have never treated any case which could not be cured by the methods used in the ordinary form of headache.

For permanent relief, it is a good plan for the patient to go on a fasting regimen, using one eight-ounce glass of grapefruit juice, tomato juice, or orange juice every two hours. During the fast one enema should be taken daily. These measures will assist in eliminating the toxins which are largely responsible for the headaches. After the fast the patient should use a diet which assures plenty of both cooked and raw vegetables. No alcoholic stimulants should be used, as beverages containing them only intensify the nervous, high strung temperament already present with most migraine patients.

The patient should cultivate a calm, quiet and peaceful frame of mind; plenty of sleep is essential.

For temporary relief at the beginning of an attack, give copious warm enemas, putting the feet in a tub of hot water, with hot compresses to the forehead and cold compresses to the back of the neck, will usually make the patient feel better.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Appendicitis Operation

Question—Mrs. K. writes: "I recently had an operation for appendicitis and prolapsus of the internal organs, but don't seem to gain strength as I should. Also, have a constant fear that someone is going to harm me, although I really don't believe I have a real enemy. For hours at night I lie awake, almost afraid to turn in bed, and sometimes I walk all night from room to room, looking out first one door and then another, watching for something, I don't know what. I am miserable. Can you help me?"

Answer—Your organs are probably prolapsed as badly as before and you have all the neurotic symptoms which go with a pressure of the prolapsed organs upon the uterus and ovaries. You certainly could be helped with the right treatment, but such treatment cannot be given through the columns of a newspaper. You need manipulative treatment of the abdomen, and exercising of the abdominal muscles to make these muscles strong so that they will hold the abdominal organs in place.

Are Proteins Necessary

Question—H. G. asks: "Can one build a strong, healthy body on an exclusive diet of fruit and vegetables, if any, are fattening?"

Answer—It is necessary to use some protein in the diet besides the fruits and vegetables. The only fruits which are considered fattening are bananas, olives and avocados. Vegetables which are often called fattening are potatoes and Hubbard squash, but the cereals are the most "fattening" foods.

Twitching of Face

Question—Miss A. B. asks: "Would nervousness cause a twitching of the face? At times I cannot control the muscles of my face. I am 20 years old."

Answer—You need a diagnosis to determine the cause of your nervousness. You can then no doubt be helped if the right treatments are used, with proper diet and the cultivation of good hygienic habits.

Damage Suits Follow Acquittal of Trio

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 3. (INS)—Counsel for the three men acquitted yesterday of charges of conspiring to assassinate Gov. D. E. Carlton today announced they were preparing to bring a series of suits for damages in connection with the charges.

The defendants, Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahasse newspaper publisher, Henry Halsema and Frank Rawls, were freed on a directed verdict yesterday after the state had concluded its testimony in their preliminary hearing.

STEENGRAFE'S 4-HIT PITCHING BRINGS HIM HIS 19TH VICTORY

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Every now and then it happens. A championship club gets to floundering around in the mud. The Brooklyn Robins did it. The Memphis Chicks lost 10 straight and saw their impressive lead cut in half.

Most decidedly the Wichita Falls Spudders are undergoing one of the most amazing slumps any club in the Texas league ever experienced. Their brilliance in the first half has been almost completely drowned by the washouts of the second half.

And what is to blame. Is it the hitting? Is it the pitching? Is it rough and ungainly fielding?

The answer to which is that it is not the hitting and it is not the fielding.

The hitting has been rocking along in a very creditable manner. There's not a Spudder who has not improved his batting average very substantially during the second half.

Many are heard to flay the great Larry Bettencourt, the big boy with the bat. It is true that he has lacerated the atmosphere quite much, as we say in the shower room, in recent games; but we go to the official figures and read this:

That during the first half, in 267 official trips to the plate the great Larry smote 22 home runs.

And that including Monday's double-header with Dallas, he has been at bat the same number of times, i. e., 267, during the second half, and has hit 20 home runs.

No. You can't blame Larry, or any other slugger on the club. They're all hitting up to par.

Nay, it is the pitching, and I'm dancing with globules in my orbs as I say it.

We took a trip through the records on this point also. And they produced the amazing fact that we have only two pitchers on the staff who have showed any sign whatever of improvement during the second half; whereas three have been throwing their reputations, and consequently our pennant chances, away during the last semester. Further, that our leading pitcher, Hal Wiltse, has remained about stationary, neither getting worse nor better; and that another, Ash Hillin, fairly valuable in a pinch in the first half, has been more of a deterrent in the second half.

The only two pitchers that have shown any improvement at all are Maul 'Em Milton Steengrafe and Stormy Freddie Vincent.

Steengrafe's record is impressive. He is head and shoulders above all the other hurlers on the team for the second half. In the first half he won eight games and lost three, but in the second half he has come through with his hoop-skirt curve and has won 10 and lost only three. This includes the games of last Monday.

Old Stormy Vincent, during the first half won four and lost two, but so far in the second half he has won seven and lost three.

Wiltse is about breaking even, but his pitching during the second half has not compared with his accomplishments during the first semester. In the first half he won 11 games and lost five, and so far in the second half he has won eight and lost three. A very good record, indeed. But something like five shut-out games were to his credit during the first half, and if memory serves correctly he hasn't pitched a single shut-out during the second half.

Hal is doing a great thing in breaking even, however. If some of our other pitchers could have done that we wouldn't be trembling at the Fort Worth menace today.

Look at the records of Lester White and Earl Caldwell, for instance. Caldwell has hit the bottom with a resounding thump, during the second half, despite the fact that he turned in two brilliant performances against Beaumont and Houston. During the first half he went like a house a-blaze, winning 11 games and losing four. During the second half he has to date won the astounding number of four games, while losing seven . . . Still dancing with chokes in my throat.

And consider the case of White. During the first half, he swept through with 10 victories to four defeats, and so far in the second half he has equalled Caldwell's tearful record of four victories and he has lost five games. And none of his victories were as impressive as the two sensational ones that the lowly Earl turned in. Oh, alas!

Dick Florrid, to continue, was a great help in the first half. His relief pitching was the talk of the state. He won five and lost only one. But during the second half he has won only two games, and, including Monday's games, he has lost five.

Ash Hillin has all but faded out of the picture. During the first half he won four and lost one. A good record. But during the last semester he has won only two and has lost three.

Milton Steengrafe, we repeat, old Maul 'Em Mill, is at present our leading pitcher by virtue of showing such improvement in his record. And old Cyclone Vincent is charging right in behind him. There is not the slightest doubt—indeed, how could there be?—that had our other pitchers shown the same determination in this second half that Steengrafe and Vincent have, we would all be buying tickets to Memphis right now instead of . . . well, dancing around with globules in our orbs.

No, you can't blame the hitters, even if they were considerably embarrassed by Dizzy Dean of Houston and a few other dark horses. They have been knocking the ball a-plenty, and in nearly every one of the games during the second half they have been scoring anywhere from three to 12 runs a game. But even a 20-run lead can disappear like a twenty-dollar bill at a country carnival when the pitcher all of a sudden decides to haul out his fence ball. Our sympathy is with the sweating sluggers, who pound out a winning margin, only to have their hurling mate throw it away.

Old Milton, and his running mate, the Cyclone. It is hard to quit writing about those two. Great pitchers, both of them. Steenie, with his slow, angular motions, giving a heave at his belt before he unloosens a curve that seems to loop around third base before sliding across the plate . . . Old Cyclone Vincent, breathing fire and brimstone, storming around in the box like a caged coyote before hurling one down the middle that the batter couldn't see if he had a magnifying glass . . . both of them great fellows . . . would we had more like them.

MILTON DOWNS STEERS, 8 TO 2

Cats Open Four-Game Series Here Today

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Behind a brilliant defense, in which he played a conspicuous part, Big Milton Steengrafe Wednesday afternoon limited the Dallas Steers to four scattered hits and won his 19th game of the season in giving the Spudders an 8 to 2 victory over the Atzmen in the final game of the series.

Two home runs, one in the seventh by Gene Moore, and another in the ninth by Willingham, shattered the big right-hander's dream of a shut-out. The only other Bovines to connect with Milton's famous loop were Cotter and Woodall, the former slamming out a double in the first and the latter getting a single in the seventh.

Maul 'Em Fans Five

In turning in one of the prettiest pitching performances seen at Athletic park this year, and his 11th victory of the second half, Milton fielded his position perfectly, accepting five chances without a flaw. In addition, he speeded matters up by striking out five.

In five of the nine innings, it was three Steers up and three down, and Milton twirled through the first six innings allowing but one Steer to reach first on a safe blow.

With his victory Steengrafe tied Hal Wiltse in the number of games won this season, and lags behind the latter only by virtue of having lost one more game than the deft southpaw.

Captain Howard Fitzgerald was missing from the battle-front Wednesday owing to a foot injury. Larry Bettencourt took over the center position while Garland Orr occupied the right garden.

While the Steers were wondering what Milt would do next, the Spudders made every one of eight blows off Hensick count for a run. And Chubby Orr was right in there hitting with the rest of them, his single in the first figuring in the scoring. Levey, first up in the first, drew a pass. After Storti had flied out to center, Chubby blazed a hot grounder past second to advance Levey. Kloza followed with a single in the same direction which scored Levey and advanced Chubby to second. He was stranded, however, when Burns grounded out and Crouch flied out to left, Bettencourt walked between the two outs.

When, Where and How

The fifth round saw the next scoring. Kloza drew a pass. Burns forced him at second, first to short. Bettencourt singled to left, advancing Burns to third. Crouch doubled to center, scoring Burns, Bettencourt taking third. Euller plopped one to short, and Crouch was run down between second and third, Bettencourt scoring on the play. Steengrafe grounded out, short to first, for the third out.

With two out, Orr walked in the sixth. Kloza doubled to center and Chubby charged home. Burns then doubled down the first base line, scoring Kloza. Bettencourt walked. On a passed ball, both runners advanced, but Crouch grounded out third to first.

The last three were made in the eighth. Storti was safe at first on the shortstopper's bobble. Orr grounded out to first unassisted, Storti going to second. Kloza grounded out, short to first, Storti taking third. Burns walked. Bettencourt singled to left, scoring Storti, and Burns went to third and Bettencourt to second on the throw-in. Crouch bounced one at Shortstopper Urban, who committed his second bobble of the inning, Burns and Bettencourt scoring. Euller grounded out, third to first, to close the inning.

Today—the Cats

Today is the day of days. The great Cats of Pantherville will charge in among us and try to duplicate the heralded Stoner-Whitworth-McCabe act that has proven so effective around the circuit. The slaughter of one or the other of the teams will start promptly at four.

Pirates Rally in Sixth to Beat League-Leading Chicago Cubs, 9-6

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 3. (AP)—A sixth inning rally which netted Pittsburgh six runs, today enabled the Pirates to beat back the league leading Cubs, 9 to 6, in the first clash of their four-game series. The Cub loss, while the New York Giants were splitting even with Boston in a double-header allowed McGraw's contenders to creep up a half game on the champions.

The Buccaneer lineup batted around in the big sixth inning, Comorosky, who started the rally with a double, fanning with two men on to end the frame. The home team was trailing, 5 to 2, when the game-winning offensive was launched. Teachout, starting Cub hurler, and Blake, who relieved him, both were driven from the slab in the sixth, Nelson finally stemming the drive. He left the game in the eighth for a pinch hitter and Shealy finished.

Spencer, starting Pirate moundsman, also went out in the sixth, Brame batting for him and driving in a pair of runs with a single to center. Swetonic, whose relief pitching against the Cubs has baffled them several times this season, held the visitors runless except for a homer by English in the ninth. Score:

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 3. (AP)—Cotton was higher today on a renewal of covering which appeared to be influenced by relatively steady Liverpool cables and reports of a continued holding movement in the South. The latter were colored by the comparatively small volume of southern selling here, but the market met considerable realizing and after selling up to 11.44 for the new December contract or 28 points net higher, lost part of the advance, closing at 11.30 for that position. The general market closed steady at net advances of 10 to 15 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 1 to 6 points in response to the better showing of Liverpool. Offerings were light and the market showed increasing firmness later in the morning. New October closed at 11.11 and March at 11.55 with prices showing reactions of about 10 to 16 points from the best of the day.

The weekly report of the weather bureau was considered about a standoff by some traders, but others were inclined to base a bullish construction on the statement that the soil again was becoming dry in some western sections that had recent rains. The figures of the International Cotton Federation placing world's consumption of American cotton for last season at 13,023,000 bales against 15,076,000 during the season 1928-29 were about in line with expectations.

A private report placing the prospective yield in the 12 leading cotton states at 12,932,000 was published before the opening and may have been contributing factor on the advance which, however, was more generally ascribed to the reports of a steady spot situation.

Exports today 18,891, making 431,318 so far this season. Port receipts 45,681. U. S. port stocks 1,881,499.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 3. (AP)—In moderately active trading today cotton showed a tendency to improve as prices rallied on a bullish private crop estimate, fears of the tropical hurricane now in the Carribbean sea near San Domingo and a generally bullish weekly weather and crop summary.

After opening 1 point down to 2 up prices advanced 7 to 11 points from the previous close on a bullish private crop estimate of 12,932,000 bales on a condition of 68.9. After a slight reaction prices later advanced again 22 to 24 points from the opening figures on the bullish weekly weather report but lost 8 to 9 points of this gain after mid-session on realizing. The market ruled quiet in the late trading but continued to ease off on realizing, losing 13 to 14 points from the highs and closing steady at net gains for the day of 10 to 13 points.

Liverpool came in 2 to 3 points better than due and first trades here were 1 point down to 2 up. The market soon rallied however on the private crop estimate, October advancing to 11.10 and December to 11.31 up 7 to 11 points compared with the previous close.

Prices later rallied again on the bullish weekly weather report, October trading up to 11.26 and December to 11.45 up 22 to 24 points from the opening figures, but later lost 8 to 9 points of this gain on realizing.

The market continued to ease off in the afternoon on realizing but the selling pressure was moderate, active months losing 13 to 14 points from the highs. October closed at 11.13 and December at 11.34 or 10 to 11 net up.

Stocks Yield to Steady Selling Pressure on Unfavorable Reports

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 3. (US)—Stocks were subjected to steady pressure today and closed generally lower. Considerable disappointment was evident over the market's failure to respond to somewhat cheerful comments on the steel industry by the Iron Age. This publication reported a slight gain in activities at steel mills and also indications of improved demand for steel products. Then, too, the market had to contend with a series of unfavorable dividend actions, particularly lowering of the Kennecott Copper payment to $2. This was the second reduction by this leading metal concern in as many quarters. As if to top the cheerless news, wheat prices suffered a further setback to new low levels for many years. Whereas the stock market had seen fit last week to ignore the steady decline in wheat since the drouth scare ended, today it attracted great attention and was further emphasized as professionals continued to pound vulnerable spots in the stock market. Volume for the day, however, of 1,744,000 shares, indicated no more than a reasonable amount of selling had been forced. Call money firmed somewhat, advancing to close at 2½ per cent after a lengthy stay at 2 per cent.

The market from the opening paid close attention to Steel common because of the disclosure here that considerable selling has been taking place in this stock for the account of very well-informed interests. As already stated, this selling represents profit-taking on stock brought under 160. It is understood that an aggregate of 75,000 shares of Steel common has already been sold from one banking source close to the corporation. Steel common sold off two points under this pressure. Such selling while significant is not actually of the outright liquidation type, but rather represents a belief in informed quarters that the stock has advanced sufficiently to have discounted the immediate future insofar as improvement in steel operations is concerned. There is no desire to permit the market to enjoy a false and rapid advance as the fiasco earlier in the year. The powers-that-be are anxious to maintain a reasonable market without undue excitement. At the same time, incidentally, the best-informed steel people are still confident that a further improvement, though perhaps moderate in its pace, will be witnessed.

With steel heavy, the entire market hesitated, but its action was entirely in line with expectations, since it had approached an important technical point, having about equalled its previous high point. Profit-taking was naturally invited at these levels, and the bear crowd undoubtedly felt encouraged to resume aggressive activities. This was particularly noticeable in Radio, which was a notably weak feature throughout the day. Selling here, however, could not be blamed entirely on the bears, as the stock's action has been very disappointing even to some of its ardent friends. American Can also seemed in supply and other leaders closed lower, the Oil group continuing under fears of further price-cuts.

Announcement was made, however, that stocks of gasoline in refiners' hands decreased 1,027,000 barrels during the week ended Aug. 30. The aggregate of 38,815,000 barrels, however, is still too large to be comforting to holders of oil stocks. Kennecott actually advanced despite the dividend cut, but the buying presumably was short covering on the old theory based on the "bad news" being out. Nevada consolidated, a Kennecott subsidiary, also lowered its dividend to 25 cents quarterly from the former rate of 37½ cents, this also representing the second cut this year. Bohn Aluminum cut its dividend to 37½ cents from the former 50-cent quarterly rate, and Glidden lowered its quarterly distribution from 50 cents to 30 cents.

Bethlehem Steel continued an outstanding strong issue, adding 2½ points more to its price despite weakness in big steel and others in the group. The Bethlehem strength however, is based on special developments probably connected with Youngstown merger suit. The buying came in part from a leading trust company identified with Bethlehem, but a goodly part of the demand was attributed to speculative activities. Bethlehem, like other independents in the steel trade, will find difficulty earning its dividend at current rate of operations. Motion picture stocks joined the downward trend, but this group had enjoyed a very substantial rise for several weeks, ever since this column announced that motion picture attendance had turned sharply upward with the first change in the weather. These stocks have been entitled to a resting spell.

General Motors lost most of its gain of the previous day, confirming the opinion that its strength reflected primarily speculative activities. Vanadium was heavily sold and dropped 2⅝ points, but renewed buying by interests very bullish on the issue was reported taking place on a scale down.

The speculative community has been expecting a setback after the market's recent strength, so that little speculative buying came into the list even on the setback. Opinion, however, is that today's weakness represented principally a correction of the technical position. The stock exchange announced that its member's collateral loans on Aug. 29 were $90,000,000 below a month ago, and were the smallest since July, 1927.

Grain

TEXAS CASH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, Sept. 3. (AP)—Fair domestic demand for wheat continued on the cash grain market here today but export demand was very slow and little grain was being drawn by the exporters' bids of 87¼@87½c, basis ordinary wheat delivered at Texas gulf ports. Mills were bidding nominally 92½@93½c with high protein still drawing no premiums here.

There was a fair demand for corn, barley and sorghums, with offerings of the latter very small and trade light. In fact some dealers said that any heavy receipts would be hard to sell on the present market.

Estimated receipts: Wheat, 16 cars; corn, 11; oats, 3, and sorghums, 1.

Bids and offers on coarse grains ranged as follows, basis carloads delivered Texas common points, freight paid:

Corn, No. 2 mixed $1.01@1.02; No. 2 white $1.03@1.04; No. 2 yellow $1.11@1.12.

Oats, No. 2 red 52@53c. No. 3 white delivered Texas group 1 points 49½@50½c, to which add 1 cent for delivery group 3.

Barley—No. 2 nominally 72@73c.

Sorghums—No. 2 milo per 100 pounds nominally $1.90@1.93; No. 2 kaffir $1.70@1.73.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 3. (AP)—Wheat prices crashed down today to the lowest levels reached here in 16 years. Not since before the world war started in 1914 has wheat been sold as cheaply on the Chicago board of trade as it was at the close today. The market showed no recuperative power in the late trading. There was no apparent concentrated pressure on wheat, and at times some impressive buying support was noted. The rallies attracted increased offerings however, and the consequent reactions swept prices into new low territory. A dispatch quoting George S. Milnor, president of the grain stabilization corporation, to the effect that all wheat used for drouth relief purposes would be replaced in the open market, failed to steady the faltering market. All other grains were depressed by the downward trend of wheat.

Closing prices on wheat were unsettled at nearly the bottom levels of the day, ⅝@1¼c net lower than yesterday's finish, corn closed ¼@¾c down, oats from ¼c lower to ⅛c advanced, and provisions unchanged to an advance of 13c.

Extreme weakness at Winnipeg, accompanied by reports that Canadian country deliveries today amounted to 7,379,000 bushels, as compared with 5,439,000 bushels on the corresponding day last year, helped to sap the Chicago wheat pit of confidence.

Corn was depressed by the action of wheat. Trade was small and this made the market easily susceptible to outside influences. There were no deliveries today. The market generally showed resistance to pressure with some buying on the possibility of light frosts in the lowlands of Northern Iowa, parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin tonight.

Oats and rye were influenced by the action of other grains. Oats, in particular, met with some liquidation.

Provisions were somewhat unsettled, reflecting the trends of both grain and hogs.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—September 81⅜c, 83¼c; December 87⅛@87¼c, 90¼c; March 91¼c, 94c; May 94¼c, 97c. Corn—September 96⅛c, 99c; December 91⅝@91¾c, 94⅛@94¼c; March 93⅝c, 96⅝c; May 95⅞c, 98⅝c.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, Sept. 3. (US)—Local bulls interpreted the weekly weather and crop report with its statement that the first half of August was as unfavorable for corn as the last half of July as meaning a possible larger reduction in corn figures in the forthcoming government report.

Scott, Burrows & Christie say: "Some time within the next four to six weeks we should reach and pass the peak of the Canadian movement and pressure from that source should be fairly well taken care of. There will then be diminishing pressure until southern hemisphere crops come on the market in January."

Duluth wired that there has been a good demand for wheat there since the movement got well underway. Mills are reported paying 5@7c over Minneapolis September for No. 1 northern.

French exporters were said to be purchasing wheat in the Winnipeg market today.

Rumsey & company say: "We don't hear very much of the feeding of wheat on the farms, nor are there any real estimates of the amount that will probably be fed this year. We have covered the winter wheat belt pretty thoroughly and, in our judgment, the feeding will be heavy. This applies particularly to the Southeast and Southwest."

Largest Carillon Tops N. Y. Church

New York soon will hear the world's largest carillon from the 21-story tower of the new Riverside church, shown with Grant's tomb. The bells (top), gift of John D. Rockefeller Jr. (inset), range from 25 pounds to 22 tons.

Bells of Rockefeller's Gift To Peal From Gothic Tower

NEW YORK, Sept. 3. (AP)—High in the 450-foot Gothic tower of the great new Riverside church, the world's largest carillon soon will be pealing out over New York's peaks.

The 72 bells, gift of John D. Rockefeller Jr., range all the way from tiny 25-pound bells that furnish the high notes to a 22-ton monster that will boom forth throaty tones of low C.

The carillon is a memorial to Mr. Rockefeller's mother. Dr. Henry Emerson Fosdick is pastor of the church.

Other New York churches have chimes, but this will be the city's only carillon.

Next largest of the world's carillons is that of Louvain university, Louvain, Belgium.

The carillon's music, it is expected, will be heard over most of New York, and across the river in New Jersey, for the church stands on the east bank of the Hudson and there are no high buildings nearby to deaden the sound.

The church itself, called the largest protestant church in America, will be ready for the first service Oct. 5. It has been under construction since 1926, at a cost said to approximate $4,000,000.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., was by far the largest donor of funds for the building. He is a trustee of the church and an honorary president of its Men's Bible class.

The church, of white limestone, is modeled after Chartres cathedral in France. It stands on a bluff high above the Hudson on Riverside drive almost opposite Grant's tomb.

The great nave rises clear 250 feet. Ten magnificent stained glass windows symbolize various religious, social and cultural subjects. In the auditorium and two galleries 2,500 people can be seated at once. There will be a large pipe organ in the auditorium and a smaller one in the chapel, which seats 300 people.

Amplifiers can carry services from the auditorium to all parts of the building.

In the 21 stories of the tower will be church offices, school rooms and other auxiliary facilities. The three basement floors include a gymnasium, kitchen and club room.

TOADS USED TO CHASE INSECTS

Texan Imports Porto Rico Frogs for Farm

AUSTIN, Sept. 3. (AP)—No more sleeping in cornerstones for toads in Texas.

They're now expected to work toward prevention of millions of dollars in insect crop damage.

Giant Surinam toads are being brought into the state from Porto Rico to rid the lower coastal regions of the mole cricket, one of the most destructive insects of the region.

The cricket does most of its damage underground in the daytime, but comes to the surface at night. The Surinam toads, which sleep little, are expected to catch the pests when they come out of their holes.

But crickets are not the only insects that Porto Rican toads thrive on. The imported pest-catcher is expected to aid materially in extermination of May beetles, boll weevils, white grubs, cockroaches, fleas, melon beetles, leaf hoppers, millipedes, house fly pupae, centipedes, land snails and caterpillars.

The toad's appetite seems insatiable. Tests show it is fond of 83 different kinds of insects, most of them detrimental to crops. One toad has caught 128 flies in less than a half hour.

Experiments with the Surinam toads are being watched closely by the Texas state department of agriculture, and it is probable that a campaign will be started to introduce the toad into all parts of the state. Experiments so far have been confined to Jefferson county near Beaumont. J. F. Combs, agricultural extension agent, is in charge of the work.

First tests with the toads were made in 1929 to determine their adaptability to American soils and climate. A dozen were kept under observation during the winter and they suffered little although slightly protected from the cold.

Recently a shipment of 89 was received, and this number is expected to care for the needs of Jefferson county, so fast do the toads multiply. The production from the spawn of one female is estimated at between 1,000 to 2,000 a year. Combs asserts that a single toad will be worth $19.80 a year because of the cutworms it will kill.

The toads are about twice the size of the native American toad.

South Dakota is making a survey preparatory to revising its course of study in public schools.

The 13th district cup for the greatest activity during the past year was awarded to the Wichita Falls post of the American Legion at the state convention in Austin Wednesday. Fifteen members of the post are attending the meeting.

The activity of the post in behalf of disabled veterans and dependants of war victims and its increasing membership were determining factors in the awards, legion officials explain. The local membership is 700, 200 more than its assigned quota. Through the efforts of Adjutant J. F. Sustained by Artificial Respiration, Girl Wages Gallant Fight for Life

STROMSBURG, Neb., Sept. 3. (UP)—Her condition complicated by infantile paralysis and by a cold which settled on her lungs, Miss Anita Hollister, who for 26 days has been kept alive by artificial respiration was believed tonight to have "an even chance" for recovery.

For two weeks, friends and relatives have worked incessantly, using artificial respiration to preserve her life after her chest muscles had been paralyzed. Improvement was noted. Finally she was able to breathe for several minutes unaided, and physicians believed she was beyond danger.

Monday she contracted a cold which settled on her weakened lungs. The periods for which she could breathe unaided became shorter. Today she was able to breathe for but two or three minute intervals.

The quarantine on the Hollister home has been lifted, doctors stating the disease with which she had been afflicted had passed the contagious stage. As yet, however, Miss Hollister has been able to move only one arm and one foot.

Tentative Budget of $75,000 Voted By Community Chest Committee

1931 campaign the shortage will be taken from the three organizations whose appropriations were cut. The amounts given to the Red Cross and the Children's Aid society were also reduced.

The cut in the Children's Aid society was with the following provision: That the society raise the difference in the amount requested and that given by solicitation among other communities in Wichita county, inasmuch as practically 40 per cent of their work is in other parts of the county; and that, failing to raise that amount, the work of the Children's Aid society be merged with that of the Family Relief society, thus eliminating a certain amount of office expense, etc.

An increase was made in the appropriations to be given to the Family Relief society and the Salvation Army, the former to receive $20,000, and the latter $10,000.

Tentative Budget

Tentative appropriations, as compared with those of last year and what was asked for this year, are as follows:

	1929-30	Asked This Year	Granted
Salvation Army	$ 8,698.22	$11,307.25	$10,000.00
Wichita Day Nursery	4,731.00	5,471.00	5,471.00
Boy Scouts	6,045.28	6,000.00	3,000.00
Camp Fire Girls	2,786.10	3,000.00	1,500.00
Y. W. C. A.	6,150.42	7,100.00	3,000.00
Children's Aid Society	4,310.55	5,362.00	3,000.00
Family Relief Society	15,508.00	15,154.00	20,000.00
Travelers Aid	2,680.95	3,002.00	3,002.00
Colored Day Nursery	1,682.17	1,900.00	1,900.00
Executive office	2,996.57	2,000.00	2,000.00
American Red Cross	4,410.55	4,000.00	2,000.00
Totals	$60,000.81	$64,296.25	$54,873.00

Added to the total of $54,873, a shrinkage of $11,000, campaign expenses of $5,000, and a this year's debt of $3,500 makes a total of $73,773. Those in attendance indicated that the final total, after all protests had been registered and additions and subtractions made, would be $75,000 or more. Last year's total was $70,000.

Those present were Walter D. Cline, chairman; J. B. Marlow, W. M. McGregor, Lester Jones, Mrs. C. R. Hartsook, Miss Maude Thomas, A. E. Kelly, Joe Art, Will Daniel, Judge J. P. Marrs, H. A. Gray Jr., Linden E. Brooks of Chicago and Mrs. J. O. Bentley.

DeMolays Solve City's Problems

Times building by the Lehrack company.

"Drouth relief is really just that simple," he explained.

After giving his official approval to the city records, Clarence Lee Witherspoon, self-styled "best looking city clerk in 25 years" gave his attention to the graver matters of negro taxi drivers operating without licenses.

"This must be stopped," he ordered grimly as he signed complaints.

"A chip off the old block," they said Wednesday when E. W. Napier Jr., DeMolay member acting as city attorney, succesfully prosecuted a jury trial in the corporation court. The jury trial was an unexpected event on the city court's docket, but Young Napier presented his testimony and argued his case before the jury like a veteran. His father is well known as an attorney.

Henry Andrews assumed the post of tax collector when the treasurer's labors proved too dull, and Henry Pappas, reluctant head of the health department, looked askance at death certificates and hypodermic needles.

The boys were inducted into office by Mayor Walter Nelson at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning and enjoined to run the city government for 24 hours as a training in citizenship.

Rites Held at Devol For Accident Victim

Special to The Record News.

DEVOL, Okla., Sept. 3.—Funeral services for J. B. Alford, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Alford of this city, who was fatally injured when he fell from a truck at Burkburnett Tuesday, were held at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the First Baptist church with Rev. Clarence Brown, pastor, officiating. Interment was in the Devol cemetery, with arrangements under the direction of the Owens Funeral home of Burkburnett.

Active pallbearers for the services were Delbert Dickson, Oscar Brock, Rex Young and Gay Watkins.

The boy's death resulted from injuries suffered when a heavy sack of metal fell upon him after the end gate of the truck came open accidentally, causing him to fall out. Besides the parents, the boy is survived by three sisters, Misses Anna Mae, Geneva and Willie Mae Alford, and a brother, W. F. Alford, all of Devol; and two half brothers, J. G. McElhaney of Devol and A. C. McElhaney of Chickasha.

Special Train Bears Body of Noted Mason

Special to The Record News.

LAWTON, Okla., Sept. 3.—On a special train which carried a group of Royal Arch Masons of Oklahoma to the West on an excursion to Yellowstone park, the body of Milo A. Nelson, age 73 years, United States commissioner at Lawton for the past 12 years, is being returned to Oklahoma. A body of local Masons will meet the train at Oklahoma City and accompany the remains to Lawton.

Definite funeral arrangements will not be known before the end of the week. Mr. Nelson came to Lawton from Liberal, Kan., in 1901 and was one of the city's best loved citizens.

BLAST SHAKES REFINERY HERE

Conoco Workers Subdue Spectacular Fire

high into the air, but they had moved away and were out of range at the time, although still within the network of steel in which the tower is located.

Fire Visible Eight Miles

The pillar of fire sent headlong into the air by the explosion was visible for miles. People flocked to the scene of the blast, many coming from as far as six or eight miles in the country. They had seen the fiery pillar at that distance, they said.

Mr. Record said the explosion originated in what is known as a treating tower, in which gasoline is treated and filtered through fuller's earth, a fine powder substance which removes foreign matter from the gasoline and which becomes saturated with the explosive and inflammable liquid and vapor. Workmen expressed the opinion that the blast was caused when a pop-valve failed to open to let out excess pressure inside the tower, the pent up gases inside expanding until the tower could no longer stand the strain. The entire top of the tower was blown off. A definite cause for the explosion was not known Wednesday night, however, and officials of the refinery said no attempt would be made to approach the tower for an examination until morning.

The explosion occurred at 7:45 p. m. Through the quick work of Continental employes and the city fire department the blaze was completely under control 40 minutes later.

At the risk of death or injury, employes of the plant dashed a-top the towers adjoining the one that had exploded, and within only a few feet of raging flames, manned steam valves, which shot steam into the inferno below. Meanwhile other employes rushed into town in trucks, returning with loads of foamite which was showered into the fire.

Employes Battle Fire

The employes who manned the steam valves were in constant danger. Had pipes leading into other adjoining gas-filled towers been broken by a cave-in of equipment on the destroyed vapor tower, an explosion of greater magnitude than the first would have resulted, probably with loss of life.

Crowds attempted to swarm into the Continental plant's enclosed yard soon after the blast, but were held in check by fresh-faced DeMolays in the role of city traffic officers.

A Merkle and a Hines ambulance rushed to the scene, at the response of refinery officials who felt certain that casualties resulted, but a complete check of all employes showed there were no injuries.

At 8:25 p. m., after the fire had been completely extinguished with the chemicals, a second blast occurred, causing slight tremors in the ground near the refinery and serving as a signal for a return rush of spectators toward the scene of the first explosion. Police and refinery employes held the crowd in check with difficulty while others rushed to the plant to determine the cause of the second detonation. Fire fighters immediately reconnected their chemical hose when it was found that the blast was caused by accumulated gas in the control room and that new flames had sprung up. This second blaze was soon brought under control, however.

After the fire had been extinguished Roscoe Reed, 304 Austin street, a refinery employe, was given first aid treatment at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital for minor burns suffered when he came too near the flames and heated metal while assisting in the fire fighting. Raymond J. Kane, chief engineer at the refinery, also suffered minor burns from the fire and the foamite chemical, which saturated his clothing and hair and entered his eyes. He was given treatment at the refinery laboratory.

V. R. Ballard, employe of the Continental Oil company's filling station in the yard of the refinery, described the first blast. He was sitting in the filling station with his wife and child when the blast occurred, he said. First there was a deafening crash, he said, followed by a sheet of flame that swerved through the skies toward the city for a distance of about a block. The flames went all of 200 feet in the air, he said.

Pastor Urges Return Of Family Altar

Restoration of the family altar is the only way to save the American home, Rev. Harry S. Allen of Macon, Ga., told a congregation at the Grant Street Methodist church Wednesday evening in his revival service.

"God answers all earnest prayers," said Rev. Mr. Allen. "It may not be our way but it will be answered. The reason we do not have greater victories is because we are not willing to pay the price in prayers from a bleeding heart."

The morning services are drawing unusual attendance, church leaders said, and the prayer services were attended by more than 100 Wednesday.

When the executive committee was just about through making movie stars, there was a suggestion from one of its members:

"Boys, we've made some of these men handsome, and given good voices to others, and some we've endowed merely with personality. Just for fun, let's put one man in Hollywood who rates 100 per cent in everything—thrilling to the women, a regular sport to the men, a fellow who can sing and dance and act and fill the bill in every respect."

Such must have been the creation of Ramon Novarro. If ever one man had everything, he has. If there were no other reason for the success of "In Gay Madrid," Novarro would be enjoyable. But there are other reasons—

There are, for instance, stirring, lilting songs by a superb male chorus; songs by Novarro himself; a tango by Novarro and Lottice Howell; a clever, rapid plot with good comedy situations and something like "The Student Prince."

When Octavio leads Ricardo (our hero) in to be introduced to his father, he grins fraternally and says, "Well, here he is!" And probably every woman in the audience feels like little Carmina and every man grins like Octavio, because "here he is" expresses the proper sentiments—here he is, the fairy prince.

Of course the pistol shot isn't fatal. Only those aimed at villains are fatal. Heroes are protected by some of that powder Moran and Mack used on the battlefield. But then, we can overlook a strained happy ending if there's enough to make up for it. The fact is, an unhappy ending would probably have enraged the entire audience, critics and all, and the audience is always right.

"Song o' My Heart" is released on Sept. 7, having been held on Broadway so long that we've heard all about it and nobody has seen it except those who make Eastern trips. Wichita Falls sees it on Sept. 6, which is a pretty good speed record. One week later, Dallas will see it.

"Silent Enemy," another Broadway success which is just now being released to us provincials, will show at the State within the next few weeks. It is an all-Indian picture which has enjoyed an unusual popularity in its long Broadway run.

LIONS HEAR SAFETY TALK

Lyle Warns Against Many Home Accidents

That safety should be taught in the homes, schools and places of employment where a large majority of the accidents occur was pointed out in a talk by J. W. Lyle, president of the Wichita Falls Safety council and district engineer of the Texas Electric company, before members of the Lions club at their regular weekly luncheon Wednesday.

"Approximately 24,000 persons were killed in homes last year which is about 25 per cent more than were fataly injured in automobile accidents," Mr. Lyle said.

"Most of them could have been prevented by a little foresight. Some of the more common ones were leaving matches where children could play with them, drinking poison by mistake and placing heavy objects within reach of children.

"April fool jokes often result in needless accidents as do weak ladders and even finger rings were listed as a cause for serious accidents."

It was announced by Frank Cripliver, president of the club, that Dr. R. H. Graham, past president, was named head of the governors board for the Texas district at a meeting at Hillsboro Tuesday night. He will preside at the Texas convention of the organization to be held at Port Arthur soon.

Musical numbers were given by the club quartet, composed of W. P. Lacy, A. B. Maples, J. L. Eggleston and Claude Young. The accompaniment was played by George Kerner.

Negro Given Jail Term of 15 Days In Theft of Tires

Charlie Harris, negro, was sentenced to 15 days in the county jail following his plea of guilty Wednesday afternoon in the county court at law on a charge of complicity in the theft of several automobile tires here, for which Walter Scott, another negro, is being held under felony charges to await the action of the October grand jury, according to information given by Judge Irvin J. Vogel.

It was alleged that Harris had allowed Scott to use his automobile, knowing that the machine was being used to transport tires after they had been stolen from automobiles here. Scott was named Wednesday in another complaint charging burglary in connection with the theft of several tires, this charge making the second on burglary against him and adding to another complaint charging theft over $50 filed against him Tuesday. Several misdemeanor complaints are also filed against him. Members of the sheriff's department have recovered 21 tires.
