Lee football team barred from 5-4A title

By PAUL DOMOWITCH and BOB DILLON

BIG SPRING — Midland Lee High School's football team was disqualified today from competing for the 1977 District 5-4A football title during an emergency session of the Executive Committee of District 5-4A of the University Interscholastic League.

The Rebels were disqualified for violating rule 24 of the UIL Football Plan. Specifically, Lee was accused of using contact equipment in preseason practice.

After two hours of deliberation, the committee, composed of superintendents of the four 5-4A school districts — not including Midland — voted unanimously on the action. The Rebels will be ineligible for the district title, but will still be allowed to play out their schedule.

The committee determined the action was necessary because of the Rebels' "failure to achieve positive results after their 1975 probation for conducting illegal spring workouts."

Acree will now go before an emergency meeting of the Board of Trustees for the Midland Independent School District at 8:30 a.m. Saturday in the school administration building.

Midland Lee Coach Jim Acree had admitted an "honest mistake" and Midland school board President Johnny Warren had said he felt the fact that Midland turned itself in was in Lee's favor.

Acree, speaking before the Midland Lee Rebel Booster Club Tuesday night, read an excerpt from the 1976-77 UIL rule book to the more than 70 people in attendance, citing the fact that the "contact equipment" rule did not list the dummies his team used before the Aug. 19 date.

Acree noted, however, that the new 1977-78 edition does include mention of the dummies as part of the contact equipment prohibited during the first four days of fall workouts, but explained, "I have not yet received my copy."

Acree added, "I made a mistake, just like you people make on your IRS. We were negligent, but it was just an honest mistake. There was nothing malicious intended.

"I hope it's a mistake I can live over," he added. "I'll make my stand at the meeting just like I'm making it to you today."

Acree predicted the executive committee's decision will "depend on what kind of mood they (the superintendents of the five 5-4A school systems) are in at the time.

"I'm going to sleep real well tonight," he said in closing Tuesday night, "And all of you pray for me. Keep your fingers crossed and just hope for the best."

Members of the Midland school board met behind closed doors in executive session Tuesday afternoon to discuss the matter, but after talking to Midland Schools Athletic Director Sam Cox for more than 30 minutes, they agreed to table the matter until after the results of today's 5-4A meeting are known.

Board President Warren said after Tuesday's meeting, "We will review the results of Wednesday's meeting and decide what, if any action, should be taken at that time."

Warren added that there will be a meeting Saturday, regardless of the outcome in Big Spring.

Dr. James Mailey, superintendent of the Midland Independent School District, explained that "Saturday's meeting will be more likely to deal with personnel."

Warren confirmed later that the "personnel" Mailey was referring to was the Lee High School football coach.

When Warren was asked later if the "personnel" Mailey was referring to was Acree, he said yes.

Cox, after learning of the alleged violations last week, promptly contacted Bailey Marshall, the director of the UIL, and told him what had happened. Marshall complimented Cox for his actions.

Storm snaps trees, dishevels, peels roofs

By ED TODD

Trees were splintered and broken and house roofs were disheveled or peeled by the storm which lingered in northeast Midland for about 45 minutes Tuesday afternoon.

No one was reported injured in the storm, which brought darkened skies and dropped rain and pea-size hail.

"We had a pretty good storm out here — lost three trees completely, snapped off," said Jeff Smith, assistant golf pro at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

The brunt of the storm apparently was on the club's 18-hole golf course and surrounding area.

"I don't know what it was," he said. "I was standing by the window, and I could see 10 yards out."

Debris, mostly tree limbs, were "all over" the fairways and greens, he said.

"It was pretty scary. It really was," he said of the storm.

A three-sided cage of wire and 2-by-4 planks was ripped apart by the high winds.

"That thing's history," Smith said. "It's about a fairway and a half over."

Steve Turnbo, also an assistant pro at Ranchland Hill, said the storm was the hardest hitting touch of weather he has witnessed in the 15 years he has lived in Midland.

"It's just amazing," Smith said. "I couldn't believe it. It usually doesn't rain out here."

Farther north, at the Culver Youth Home on North Lamesa Road, house parent Lula Wooten said a "few limbs were torn off trees."

"It killed lots of birds out of the trees," she said. "The wind was coming from three different directions."

Lights went out briefly four times, she said. It was "dark, really hailing and raining hard," she said.

"The wind was laying trees down. It was that strong," she said. Most righted themselves after the wind died down. Others didn't. Cacti were toppled.

At nearby Hogan Park, pea-size hail fell along with the striking lightning.

"We had a tree on No. 1 (green) knocked down by lightning," said assistant pro Susan Holland.

Along East Wadley Avenue, just west of Ranchland Hills, the winds tore up roofs.

At least one dead tree was felled by

Moisture soothes city after 106-degree day

Scattered rain fell Tuesday night, providing welcome relief from the day's sweltering heat, which set a new temperature record and had area residents sitting by their air conditioner with fans.

The high Tuesday was officially 106 degrees. The previous record high for Aug. 23 was 101 degrees set in 1950. The record low for Aug. 23 remained unbroken at 57 degrees set in 1966. The low temperature Tuesday was 71 degrees.

Rain recorded by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal was .29 inch, bringing the month's total to .35 and the year's total to 5.17.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy with a continued chance of thunderstorms through Thursday. The low temperature tonight should be in the lower 70s, and the high Thursday should be in the mid-90s. Winds are expected to be southerly at 5 to 10 mph tonight. Chances of rain are 40 per cent tonight and 20 per cent Thursday.

Rankin, Big Lake and Big Spring reported light showers Tuesday night. Clear to partly cloudy skies were reported by all area towns this morning.

A tornado in West Texas and severe thunderstorms in the Panhandle dominated the Texas weather picture early this morning.

However, the twister amounted to little more than a few anxious moments for residents in Monahans. A police dispatcher said the lonely funnel cloud was reported on the ground about eight miles northeast of the downtown area but did nothing more than make a one-point landing before returning to the clouds.

Funding plan approved

By JIM STEINBERG

After a public hearing lasting almost two hours, the Midland City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to approve a plan providing for the dispersal of $1.6 million of revenue sharing funds.

The largest block of those funds — $625,000 — was allocated for the construction of a new central fire station in the 1700 block of West Wall Street and a new substation on the city's northwest side.

Also approved was the city's $18.1 million budget for 1977-78, of which $11.9 million was allocated to the general fund, $4.9 million to the water fund, and $1.3 million to the airport fund.

Approximately 70 per cent of the general fund increase is in the area of personnel, where the city increased its staff by 20 employes and provided a 6.5 per cent cost of living salary increase to those employes.

Also approved was the new tax rate, which provided for an actual decrease of approximately 2 per cent from last year's rate before the 1977 citywide property evaluation. The new tax rate was set at 65 cents per $100 of assessed valuation compared to the old tax rate of $1.14. The actual rate that would have generated the same total income for the city as was obtained in 1976 was calculated to be 66.2 cents.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said that increased income to the general fund and a healthy balance in unappropriated surplus made the small tax cut possible.

Included in the city budget figure is a $61,200 request for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, $51,000 for the Human Relations Council and $34,500 for the city's share of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

More than 75 persons attended Tuesday's final public hearing on the 1977 revenue sharing plan and most of those addressing the council voiced some opposition to the plan outlined by Mayor Angelo during the Aug. 9 city council meeting.

No alterations were made in the plan which allocated $500,000 for a new central fire station in the 1700 block of West Wall Street, $125,000 for a new fire substation on the city's northwest side, $300,000 for a new golf pro shop and concession stand,

Sister accepts storm's damage; brother peeved

John Anders was upset over some fine scratches in the glistening paint on his new brown sedan.

The storm did it.

His sister, Vivian Thurman, lives a block up at 310 E. Wadley Ave.

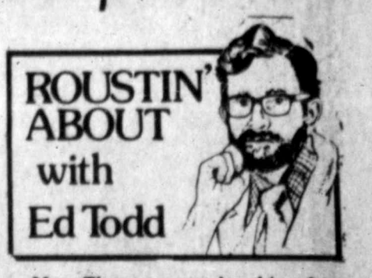
She was thankful to be alive — that no one was killed or injured in the madcap storm that struck northeast Midland midafternoon Tuesday.

She was even less concerned about the high winds ripping off the sheet asphalt and gravel roof of her and her husband's brick house.

Neither she nor her husband nor their children, Tyrone, 10, and Kirk, 9, was at home when the strong whirlwinds, dark clouds and rain and hail descended.

"I just thank God nobody got hurt," said Mrs. Thurman, 32. "You can build another house, but you can't get another body."

The roof peeled and plummeted onto the backyard. Pieces of it were blown over to a neighbor's yard.



Mrs. Thurman was laughing from relief. The ripped-off roof and high winds "messed up" the patio.

"It also rained inside but not much . . . leaking," she said.

Unlike her brother, she wasn't noticeably disturbed. Not a soul was hurt — just pocketbooks. And John Anders' pride in his new car suffered an acute blow.

"Of course, there's no other way to take it," Mrs. Thurman said. "It's

Park won't allow U.S. questioning

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tongsun Park, the key figure in the South Korean influence-buying scandal in Washington, came out of hiding today and said he would not let American authorities question him.

Declaring "I am a 100 per cent Korean," he told a news conference there is no need or any obligation for him to speak to any American investigators.

"If Leon Jaworski comes to Korea, it's his liberty, but I'm not going to see him," he added.

Jaworski, the former Watergate special prosecutor, is the new director of the investigation into the scandal by the ethics committee of the U.S. House of Representatives. The U.S. Justice Department also is investigating charges that Park was the South Korean government's chief payoff man in Washington.

The 42-year-old Korean businessman said American newspaper allegations that he gave funds and favors to members of Congress to get their support for the Korean government and to advance his own rice-buying operations were "irresponsible, merciless and inhumane."

He also said there was no justification for the seizure of his property in the United States by U.S. authorities in connection with allegations of tax evasion.

Park met Korean and foreign reporters at his office in downtown Seoul after being questioned earlier in the day by the Seoul prosecutor's office. It was his first news conference in 10 months, since the scandal in Washington broke last October and he moved to London.

Prosecutor Ahn Kyung-sang said he called Park in to determine if his alleged activities in Washington violated any Korean laws. He refused to say what he learned in the initial interrogation but said Park would be questioned again.

There was speculation that the government also suspected he might have violated foreign exchange regulations in his extensive business dealings abroad.

An informed source said Park would not be allowed to leave the country until he was cleared of suspicion. Park said he planned to leave as soon as his ailing mother recovered.

It could not be learned whether the questioning was requested by the U.S. goverment. Park cannot be returned to the United States against his will since South Korea does not have an extradition treaty with the United States. The Korean government has repeatedly denied that it had any connection with his activities in Washington.

Park arrived from London last Thursday traveling under an alias. He reportedly returned to see his 70-year-old mother, who was discharged from a hospital on Saturday after treatment for anemia and stomach trouble.

Jaworski to give progress report

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski is giving the House Ethics Committee a progress report on his first few days in charge of the investigation of alleged South Korean influencebuying attempts in Congress.

The former Watergate special prosecutor is meeting with committee members today in their first session since he took over the investigation on Aug. 15. Aides declined to say in advance what Jaworski would tell the committee.

They also would not say whether the panel will consider a contempt of Congress action against Suzi Park Thomson, a former secretary to retired House Speaker Carl Albert. Ms. Thomson, who prefers that designation, was threatened with the contempt citation last week by investigators after she refused to answer three questions.

Ms. Thomson's lawyer, Phillip Hirshkop, said she is willing to answer the questions in a public session, but not in private.

He said she was asked whether she knows of any "payoffs" to congressmen by Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park or by former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo and what she knows about a 1975 congressional trip to Korea.

Both the House of Representatives and the Justice Department are investigating whether Park, Kim and other Koreans tried to buy influence in Congress for the Seoul government with cash contributions, gifts and favors.

Meanwhile, a 1975 memorandum to Park written by an aide reports alleged efforts to line up senators for an expense paid-trip to Seoul.

The memo, written on June 29, 1975 by Spencer Robbins, purported to advise Park that John C. Stennis, D-Miss., could not visit Korea but that Sens. John Tower, R-Tex., Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., and "Bird and others are interested."

Stennis, Tower and Bartlett say through aides they never received offers for expense-paid trips from Park or anyone claiming to represent him.

The "Bird" referred to in the memo could be either Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., or Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind-Va.

Aides quoted both those senators as saying that they never considered taking such a trip and have no memory of being asked to do so.

The memorandum is among papers that two freelance writers reconstructed from shreds taken from Park's trash.

An aide to Bartlett said he suspects Park's aide was trying to impress his boss and wrote the memorandum without contacting the senators.

The only senator who acknowleges he went to Korea at the time that the memo concerns is Jake Garn, R-Utah, who also says he believes the journey was financed by a private foundation.

Garn, contacted in Salt Lake City, said Tuesday, "There's no evidence that Korean government funds were involved, but I have said it would not surprise me at all if there were some Korean government funds involved" in the trip.

Garn acknowledged last month that he accepted an expense-paid trip to Korea in 1975 from the Korea-U.S. Economic Council, a private foundation which he said he later came to suspect received funds from the South Korean government.

President begins push for treaty ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, declaring that public opposition to the proposed Panama Canal treaties is based in part on misconceptions, is launching a series of meetings with officials from around the country to win support for the agreement.

As he called in the governors of Mississippi and Kentucky for a briefing on the agreement, Carter told a news conference Tuesday that the United States would have first rights to involvement in a new canal, if one is built.

And the President, while telling reporters he "wouldn't want to say anyone who disagrees with me is ignorant," added he believes, "The way to arouse public support for the treaty is to let the American people know the advantages to our country of its terms."

Carter acknowledged that "there is not popular support for the Panama Canal treaty" but blamed this on "a great deal of misconception."

The President's actions are part of an administration attempt to counter attacks by foreign-policy conservatives who say the treaties give away too much for what the United States gets in return.

A White House official said that the meeting with the governors, Cliff Finch of Mississippi and Julian Carroll of Kentucky, was the first of several on the agreement.

The governors said after the meeting that Carter sought their help in convincing their states' citizens of the need for the treaties, but that he specifically asked them not to put pressure on their states' senators.

During Tuesday's news conference, Carter also:

—Defended Budget Director Bert Lance, saying, "I don't know of any allegation that has been made or proven that Bert Lance did anything illegal or even unethical."

A report released last week by the Comptroller of the Currency said no evidence was found to warrant prosecution of Lance, long a friend and adviser of Carter. The report was prepared following an investigation of the personal financial dealings of Lance, who was president of the National Bank of Georgia before becoming director of the Office of Management and Budget.

—Said South African officials had reported to the United States "that they do not have and do not intend to develop nuclear explosive devices for any purpose." He said the United States would continue to monitor the situation.

—Said that the United States would go no further than cautioning Israel that its settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River in occupied territory created "an unnecessary obstacle to peace."

Spacecraft, engine may have bumped

PASADENA, Calif. — The Voyager spacecraft now en route to Jupiter may have been struck by its own burned-out rocket engine sometime during the first day of the mission, engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here reported Tuesday. If so, the collision only jostled the probe and did not damage it.

Normally an engine used to propel a satellite onto a particular trajectory is jettisoned so it does not trail along behind the spacecraft.

But last Friday's launch of Voyager 2 was the first time the civilian space agency has ever used this particular 15,300-pound-thrust solid propellant motor on a deep-space mission (although the Air Force has used it for some classified satellites).

About 17 hours after burnout of the rocket engine, something bumped the Voyager.

Engineers ruled out asteroids or meteors as possible "somethings" because the spacecraft was only jostled and not otherwise damaged. An asteroid or meteor strike almost certainly would have punctured the probe and damaged it.

The supposition is that the "something" was traveling in space at about the same velocity and in almost the same direction as the Voyager. That would almost have to mean some previously jettisoned part of the spacecraft.

Government trying to rummage through Nixon 'gift' boxes

HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the strenuous objections of Richard Nixon, the federal government is seeking to rummage through boxes he left behind to see if they contain clues to the whereabouts of valuable gifts from foreign dignitaries.

At stake in the federal court hearing is more than just a listing of the gifts, some of which may be "missing" through poor record-keeping.

The hearing, scheduled for today, is the government's first attempt to search the materials in its possession since the Supreme Court awarded custody to Uncle Sam — specifying that strict regulations must govern access. It also is Nixon's first chance to challenge those rules.

While the fight over custody of Nixon's papers, tapes and other materials was going through the courts, the boxes remained untouched under court order. Now that the case is settled regulations for government access have gone into effect and rules for public access are being considered by Congress.

Last month, State Department Chief of Protocol Evan S. Dobelle wrote the General Services Administration that "questions have arisen" about the location of foreign gifts to Nixon and his family. Publicly, at least, Dobelle didn't spell out the questions or who asked them.

He said he wanted an inventory of all gifts in the custody of the National Archives, an agency of the GSA, which is storing all the materials left behind by the Nixon administration.

"In particular, Mr. Dobelle requested access to Box 118-C which he speculated contains 'records' of foreign gifts," Nixon's lawyers said in a petition that sought to stop the search.

Informant on Yarbrough says he's afraid for life

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Post quoted Bill Rothkopf as saying Tuesday night he fears former State Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough will get revenge for secret tape recordings Rothkopf allegedly made while acting as an agent of the Harris County district attorney.

The newspaper quoted Rothkopf as saying he met face to face with Yarbrough over the weekend at a deposition hearing and it is still possible "for him to do me in."

"I'm very concerned about my safety and I will continue to be in the future," Rothkopf said in an interview with the Post. "I know this is very important to him and I'm sure he feels vengeful toward me. Knowing him as I do, I continue to feel that it is possible for him to do me in at any time."

"When I saw Bill I felt tremendous compassion for him," Yarbrough told The Associated Press. "I told him, 'Bill, I am not angry with you and I hope you call me some time.'"

Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance has said he has tape recordings in which Yarbrough plotted to have former Victoria banker Bill Kemp killed.

Vance said Rothkopf, a former business associate of Yarbrough, had a special body microphone taped to him and made the recordings during conversations with Yarbrough between May 12 and June 10. Vance said he did not have enough evidence to obtain conspiracy to commit capital murder charges against Yarbrough.

Yarbrough resigned from the Supreme Court June 15. He faces trial in Austin in October on forgery and perjury charges. A disbarment trial is scheduled in Houston Sept. 5.

Yarbrough files suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Former State Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough has filed a state court suit claiming three judgment liens against him "do not attach" to his homestead real property.

He asked in the suit filed Tuesday that the judgments be partially released and reformed so they do not represent an impediment to the sale of the property.

The defendants in the suit were plaintiffs who have secured civil judgments against Yarbrough, who resigned from the Texas Supreme Court after indictments on forgery and perjury charges.

Vance claims progress with Teng

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met today with Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and claimed afterward to have made progress toward normalizing U.S.-Chinese relations, the chief aim of his visit here.

"I believe we have had useful and helpful talks," Vance said in a toast at a banquet given in his honor by Teng. He said he looked forward toward improved relations and added, "We believe this visit to Peking is an important step toward progress along that road."

In his toast, Teng said the Chinese believe "we should move forward to full normalization of relations." But he did not claim that ground had been gained in the talks.

Neither Vance nor other U.S. officials gave any indication of how progress had been made.

Vance met with Teng for the first time today, and a U.S. spokesman said the talks "will be moving along at an accelerated rate."

It was considered unlikely, however, that the Chinese would moderate their demand — reiterated only last week by Communist party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng — that the United States cut all diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan as the price for full diplomatic relations with the Communist government.

Carter Administration officials have promised not to abandon the Nationalists, who fled to the island after the Communist military victory on the mainland in 1949. But there has been speculation that the United States might offer to break formal diplomatic relations while maintaining economic relations and its guarantee to protect the Nationalists from invasion.

In view of Hua's speech, this did not seem to be enough of a concession to get the Chinese to agree to exchange ambassadors.

Teng, twice purged and twice restored to power, posed smilingly for photographers as he received Vance and lectured American correspondents accompanying the secretary. Now 73, his handshake was firm, his eyes clear and he appeared sprightly.

"I have read some of what you are writing," he told the journalists with a smile. "Some of it is accurate, some is not."

Offering Vance a cigarette, he commented: "Whoever smokes can help himself. Act in accordance with the Chairman's slogan, self-reliance. Use your own hands and clothe and feed yourself."

After that bow to the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, he recalled the hardships of the Communists' life in the 1930s after the Long March to Yenan.

"We found it necessary at that time for us to be able to feed and clothe our own army as well as many patriots and, young people who numbered some tens of thousands and had come from various parts of the country," Teng said.

He told of living in caves, raising pigs and scratching crops out of poor land.

The message seemed clear: China will overcome its economic problems through determination and hard work.

Before his meeting with Teng, Vance held his third 2½-hour session with Foreign Minister Huang Hua. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Huang "made some points about normalization" of relations between Washington and Peking, but he refused to elaborate.

Huang was the highest-ranking Chinese official Vance saw prior to the meeting with Teng. Vance met Teng once before during a private visit to Peking in 1975.

Mandel awaiting word on status of pension

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gov. Marvin Mandel, convicted of mail fraud and racketeering along with five of his closest friends, is appealing his conviction and awaiting word on the status of his pension.

Convicted in U.S. District Court Tuesday on a single racketeering charge and 17 mail fraud counts, Mandel will remain governor under the state constitution until sentenced by Judge Robert Taylor on Oct. 7.

Lt. Gov. Blair Lee III would then become the state's 57th chief executive.

But the possibility has arisen of Mandel, 57, resigning earlier in order to qualify for his $12,500 pension. Both Mandel and Lee asked for a pension opinion earlier in the trial.

State Atty. Gen. Francis Burch says he is working up an opinion on the pension question, which may be announced sometime next week.

The Maryland state constitution says a governor upon sentencing "shall be suspended by operation of law without pay or benefits from the elective office."

Some officials in the state have contended that Mandel is entitled to the pension on grounds that he served a previous full term in office. Others assert that he must forfeit all benefits, pension included, if convicted of a crime. Burch has been silent on the controversy, pending completion of the opinion.

After he was found guilty, Mandel said he would spend the next few days gathering his thoughts. His lawyer, Arnold Weiner, is preparing an appeal.

"I want to say to the public that I have never defrauded the people on the state of anything," Mandel said at a posttrial news conference. "That's as true today as it was when I took office."

"Thank God for Marvin Mandel," added his wife, Jeanne. They were joined by Mandel's son Gary, 33, by a previous marriage, and his stepson Paul Dorsey, 12.

The completion of the 12- week Mandel trial creates a lull in Maryland's political trial mill.

Since 1972, Maryland has not been without an investigation or trial involving some major political figure.

The Mandel case took 13 days for the jury to reach a verdict. He and his five codefendants won acquittal on three mail fraud counts.

Convicted with Mandel on the same charges were his friends who, the jury concluded, paid him off in return for his efforts to get the 1972 General Assembly to legislate benefits for Marlboro Race Track, which the five then secretly owned.

Picture try by defense fails

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Defense attorneys for millionaire Cullen Davis tried unsuccessfully today to introduce into evidence a provocative picture of Davis' estranged wife Priscilla and a partially nude male friend.

The blonde Fort Worth socialite, under cross examination by the defense, said she could not recall the picture being taken but identified the man as W. T. Rufner.

"Do you recall ever seeing W.T. Rufner in this condition of attire, or lack of it?" defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes asked.

"No sir," she replied.

"Not in that particiluar situation, no sir," she said.

State District Court Judge George Dowlen sustained prosecution objections to the picture and barred at least temporarily its introduction into evidence.

Haynes also zeroed in on the number of people, male and female, who have visited or lived at the mansion since the Davises separated in 1974. He questioned her specifically about how many had individual house keys.

The lawyers for Davis know they must discredit Mrs. Davis, the state's star witness, if they are to win an acquittal for the Fort Worth industrialist.

Mrs. Davis Tuesday identified her estranged husband as the "man in black" who wounded her and killed her lover Stan Farr in a summertime 1976 shooting spree.

"Their only defense is to destroy me," Mrs. Davis, 36, said outside the courtroom. "But it doesn't matter if I was the biggest hooker, doper or what have you....it has absolutely nothing to do with what he did."

Davis, 43, is on trial for his life in the Aug. 2, 1976, slaying of his stepdaughter, Andrea, 12, the first of two to die in the midnight shootings at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Davis, shot once in the chest that night, told the jury Tuesday how she lay bleeding on the mansion floor and watch the gunman fire two fatal shots into the dying Farr.

"Stan just looked at me, closed his eyes, laid down his head and he died," she said, tears flowing down her cheeks and her ice-blond hair tumbling across her face.

Moments earlier, she said, the man in black and wearing a woman's shoulder-length black wig had stepped from a stairwell, said "hi" and "then he shot me."

Mrs. Davis told also of running through the darkness to a neighbor's home across the 1881-acre estate and crying:

"My name is Priscilla Davis. I live in the big white house in the middle of the field. Cullen has wounded me very badly. He's killing my children. He's killing everyone...please, he's trying to kill me."

She testified she was unaware at the time that Andrea's lifeless body lay crumpled in a basement utility room.

Since there were no witnesses to Andrea's death, the state intends to prove the bullet which killed the child was fired from the same gun used to kill Farr.

The tiny, 52-seat courtroom was packed and spectators lined up outside as Mrs. Davis began a tearful account of the story she told from a wheelchair at a bond hearing a year ago in Fort Worth.

The defense sought to show Mrs. Davis had been well-rehearsed by prosecutors before her appearance.

She conceded there was a nighttime "walk-through" or reenactment at the mansion with surviving principals of the shootings, but said she recalled no other such sessions.

The defense also delved into her two marriages prior to meeting Davis and brought out that she once lost custody of her children in a contested action.

During her testimony, Mrs. Davis said she and Farr returned from dinner and drinks with friends about midnight Aug. 2 and found the mansion's security system deactivated.

Nervously fingering the white lace blouse of her pink dress, Mrs. Davis said she first spotted what appeared to be bloody handprints on a wall and door leading to the basement.

"I hollered for Stan," she said recalling that Farr, with whom she shared the mansion, had ascended the stairs to the bedroom.

New agriculture candidate says position no joke

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, says he wants to be Texas's new agriculture commissioner because of the "clowning" attitude of the appointed incumbent.

"Texas agriculture is not a laughing matter — it never was and never will be," the 40-year-old legislator told a news conference Tuesday in announcing that he was a candidate for the 1978 campaign.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, former aide to Gov. Dolph Briscoe, was named by Briscoe to be agriculture commissioner when Commissioner John C. White resigned to become deputy U.S. secretary of agriculture.

"Today we are witnessing the office operating by an appointee — a temporary commissioner of agriculture — who apparently believes that he is solving some of the state's problems by telling funny stories and reciting nursery rhymes," Hubenak said.

"Agriculture in Texas must not become a mistreated stepchild, and we need to institute new ideas and new programs to bolster the products and incomes of our farm and ranch populations," he said.

Hubenak said his primary source of income was his partnership in an accounting business in Rosenberg plus an interest in three different tracts of farm land with his family and others.

He said he was born and reared in Iowa Colony, Brazoria County, and went to school in Alvin, Alvin Junior College and the University of Houston.

Sister accepts damage

just God's work. There's no need of shedding tears."

Now, brother John wasn't quite as charitable as his sis. He wanted some reckoning.

"It (the storm) messed up my 1977 Cougar, which had 500 miles on it," said Anders who, though dramatic, wasn't acting. He was dead serious. "That's about $800 (damage). Brand new car. Man, that's pitiful."

It wasn't long before disquieted Anders left his sister's place, went back over to his own and started polishing out those scratches that would come out.

Twigs and other light debris must have blown into his sedan.

"It's got everything a (Continental) Mark V's got but the Mark V name," lamented Anders.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Thurman were at work when the storm struck. Their children, who normally would have been home, were visting their grandmother, Lucille Anders.

Insurance adjusters would be out and, with the help of some friends and neighbors, the roof, patio and what-all would be repaired.

Mrs. Thurman was just thankful that no one was injured in the storm.

"No need of being sad," she said. "I've got a house to look at."

Her husband didn't "ride with fate" quite as easily as she. But he wasn't nearly as upset as his brother-in-law down the block.

"No point in crying over spilled milk," Thurman said.

"We might be crying," said the wife, "after the insurance company gets through with us."

Meanwhile, Thurman said his "friends and neighbors," like Peewee Reyes and his wife Lupe, would be helping clean up "the mess" and repairing the roof and patio.

Lucille Anders, who first saw the damage to the house, said Tuesday's fairly isolated wind-devil storm was the "first" in Midland "in quite awhile."

"It happens in Lubbock all the time," the grandmother said.

"They said it (the Midland storm) was just strong winds," she commented.

Her daughter, Mrs. Thurman, said, yes, it was that and more.

"There had to be something in that wind," she said.

True.

Brother John knows that. Something put those scratches in the gleaming brown sedan.

Citizens' group objects to allocation for parks

By JIM STEINBERG

Spending more than $1.5 million on parks and recreation is too much. That's what John Luccous, a spokesman for the Taxpayers Association of Midland, told the Midland City Council at a public hearing on revenue sharing Tuesday.

"Lets put that revenue sharing on the streets of Midland where all the people can benefit," Luccous said. He was one of several representatives of the group of 45 persons at the city council meeting who expressed displeasure with the allocation of city revenue sharing funds and general budget emphasis which they say is too heavily oriented to parks and recreation areas.

Said Luccous: "They want to spend $945,642 on parks and recreation from the general fund and $607,000 from revenue sharing. I think after the overwhelming defeat of the bond issue the people made it clear they didn't want that."

Luccous claims the Taxpayers Association has between 400 and 500 members.

Specifically, group members objected to the expenditure of money for golf course club house improvements, seats at Cubs Stadium and the plan which would provide a squad car for every Midland policeman.

The long list of objections to the council's prospective plans led Councilman Gordon Marcum II to remark, "What do you want to spend money on?"

That comment later drew fire from one woman in the audience who advised the mayor and council that better salaries for city policemen were in order.

"Are you aware that most policemen have to work a two jobs in order to support their families?" the woman asked the council.

Mayor Angelo said the council was aware of this and added that the car program would provide a morale boost to the department, inaddition to serving as a deterrent to crime.

Luccous said the plan to provide policemen with cars was objectionable because they could be allowed to drive the cars to work at an off-duty job. He discounted the effect it might have in reducing crime.

Councilman Carroll Thomas said that although the benefits of the car plan would be hard to measure, the council's commitment to combatting the increasing crime rate required this step to be taken.

Thomas countered objections to golf course improvements by noting that he felt very strongly against appropriating money to areas in which voters had indicated, through the bond issue defeat, that they wanted no spending.

Councilman Marcum said one reason he thought recreational improvements were so important was that in future years high fuel costs would force many Midlanders who seek recreation outside the area to stay nearer home.

Later council members winced when Katherine Shriver, representing the Senior Center Membership Council, said she felt she had been given the "short end of the stick" at the Aug. 9 public hearing. She claimed the council had largely decided on the revenue sharing breakdown before the public hearing and she noted that no funds were allocated to the senior citizen center at that meeting.

"I assure you, you were not facing a stacked deck" two weeks ago, Angelo told Mrs. Shriver.

The plan outlined at that meeting called for the senior citizen center to be located in the old Fire Station No. 4, at Circle Drive and Delano Street, after it is closed.

Councilman Carroll Thomas said Tuesday that no money can be allocated to the renovation of the fire station until the fate of the city's $946,000 Community Development Grant application is resolved. Approximately $140,000 of that money has been earmarked for a senior citizen center. A decision from the Department of Housing and Urban Development is expected sometime in early September.

Storm wreaks havoc

the winds at 109 W. Wadley Ave. It apparently struck a mobile home and car and then landed between the two.

Except for the plywood covering, the roof of the Curtis Thurman house at 310 E. Wadley Ave. was ripped off. Other roofs and some cars along the avenue were damaged.

High winds turned over benches at Midland Country Club but apparently did no more damage.

"We got a little rain, not a whole lot, and high winds," said assistant pro Alan Pursley.

In the 2600 block of North Big Spring Street, the winds "moved all the trash cans out," reported Jane Wheat.

"Oh, we got lots of rain, sure, plenty of rain for a little while," she said. Lights were out for about an hour.

Outside of northeast Midland, the "weather" was relatively mild and gentle — for the most part.

"No, we didn't (get any rain), not a drop," said Pat Semple at the CA&L Pecan orchard about three miles south of the city limits and just off the Rankin Highway.

"We got a little bit of wind. There's some clouds. . . . Little bit of sunshine now," she said late Tuesday.

Northwest of Midland, at the Westview Estates, "We got about three sprinkles," said Bill Crawford.

Clouds were "completely around" but the sun was shining on Westview, he said.

New cars to cost more

DETROIT (AP) — Prices on General Motors' new cars are going up an average $405 a vehicle this fall, according to the nation's largest automaker.

The increase — near six per cent from a comparably equipped 1977 car — means the suggested manufacturers' price of a 1978 GM car, including options, will climb to an estimated $7,200.

That price does not include taxes or discounts that dealers usually offer buyers.

GM, which builds more than half the cars produced in the country, announced Tuesday that base prices on its new cars are going up $242, or 4.6 per cent, on the average, from 1977.

Lightning believed cause of numerous area fires

Midland firemen were kept busy Tuesday afternoon and night responding to fires believed caused by lightning.

Lightning was believed to be the cause of a fire that destroyed two-and-one-half sections of pasture eight miles north of Midland on the Lamesa Highway Tuesday afternoon.

Six units were called to the blaze, where it took 5,000 gallons of water to extinguish the blaze.

The Pearl Bradshaw residence at 2710 Delano Ave. sustained heavy damage to its roof and side after lightning struck it about 11 p.m. Tuesday, according to reports. There was no other damage report at that house, firemen said.

MAN INJURED

A 22-year-old Midland man was listed in satisfactory condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital after he was injured in a car-motorcycle accident about 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Joe Deon Latimer of 3608 W. Michigan Ave. was injured when the motorcycle he was riding and a car driven by Jean Evridge Eads, 34, of Rt. 4, Box 16-A-15 collided on the parking lot of the M-System food store, 400 Midland Drive, according to reports.

Police said Latimer was northbound and Eads was eastbound on the parking lot when the mishap occurred.

HOUSE BURGLARIZED

A typewriter, shotgun, costume jewelry and two packages of cigarettes valued at a total of $331 were taken from the George Roe residence, 1723 E. Oak Ave. between 8:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Police said entry to the house was gained by breaking a sliding glass door. The items were taken from the master bedroom, according to police.

School board meets in executive session

The Midland school board met in executive session Tuesday afternoon for approximately three hours to discuss a personnel matter and land acquisition.

Following the session, the board announced an 8:30 a.m. Saturday executive session, to be followed by an open board meeting.

"The meeting will be for the purpose of determining possible allegations concerning University Interscholastic League (UIL) violations," School Board President Johnny Warren said. "You mean possible UIL violations," corrected board member Joe Dominey.

The possible violations refer to an incident last week involving the Lee High School football team.

The board also agreed during the executive session to authorize the firm of Neuhardt and Babb to undertake the necessary plans for construction of a vocational-technical unit for the Midland High School campus. The unit would provide space for the classes now housed at North Elementary. Action was taken formally in open board meeting.

Supt. Dr. James H. Mailey was authorized to proceed with the sale of the North Elementary property on some type of bid basis.

The board entered into an agreement with the University of Texas of the Permian Basin for the university to provide an unfurnished mobile unit. The unit will be used by Midland Independent School District as a mobile classroom and teaching laboratory at Bowie Elementary School.

In other business a bid of $6,680 was accepted from Xerox Corp. of Midland for reproduction paper. Other bids included $7,880 from Nationwide Papers of Arlington and $6,600 from Graham Paper of Lubbock.

The $6,600 bid was not accepted because it did not meet specifications. The bid was for number four grade paper, and the bid request specified number two.

The board also approved the final amended budget for the 1976-77 school year.

Mahon says hottest issue in rugged session energy

"It's been the most rugged session I have experienced in my years in the House," said U.S. Rep. George Mahon during a press conference this morning.

"The hottest issue that has been before us all the time is a six-letter word, energy."

"Oil companies are very unpopular with the majority of the House and Senate. Many of them do not believe that there is a real energy crisis and (believe) that the oil companies are pulling a rip-off," he said.

"The bill that was passed in the House was wholly unsatisfactory because there is no incentive for the oil companies to look for more oil."

Mahon also pointed out that under the new bill the federal government will take control of intrastate gas.

"Before, we have had control and we have had a sufficiency of intrastate gas. We may have paid higher prices for it, but with this bill the federal government will control and allocate this gas. We will no longer have a sufficiency if this bill is passed in the present form," Mahon said.

"The oil companies are doing quite well, and they will continue to do quite well. Nobody wants the companies to make an excessive profit, but I would rather see profits made and exploration. We are going to continue to move toward a worldwide shortage, and we have got to go to new sources."

Mahon also dealt briefly with the issues of forced busing and the Korean scandal.

"It's ridiculous for the South Koreans to spend millions of dollars to court the U.S. Congress. The House and Senate are very sympathetic toward South Korea."

Council approves plan for sharing revenue funds

$176,500 for softball park improvements, $144,000 for the first stage of a two-year program to provide a squad car for every Midland policeman, $148,000 for sanitation compactors and containers, $5,500 for portable bleachers at Cubs Stadium, $85,000 for a new fire truck, $5,000 for a new fire department radio console, $45,000 for improvements in Hogan Park road and $50,000 for a park on land near the intersection of Moss Avenue and Whitney Drive.

An additional $38,000 from the city's general funds would be allocated for golf paths around the existing facilities at Hogan Park.

Hospital bond passes handily

MONAHANS — Ward County voters Tuesday approved a $4 million bond issue to build a new hospital for the county.

The issue passed by an eight to one margin.

Of 1,684 votes cast, 1,474 were for the bond issue and only 204 were against.

The bonds will be used to finance a new hospital to replace one destroyed in a tornado April 19.

The new hospital will be constructed under the supervision and management of Hospital Affiliates International (HAI).

The hospital board of managers and HAI signed contracts late Tuesday for project management and interim management until the facility is constructed. HAI will also serve as advisory consultants after the new hospital opens.

The old hospital's roof was torn off by the twister and one wing was destroyed. Damages totaled an estimated $1.75 million.

College receives more income than expected

Midland College trustees Tuesday learned the college received $226,228 more income than was expected during the 1976-77 fiscal year.

The college spent $19,854 more than previously budgeted, business manager Bob Phillips told the trustees at a Tuesday afternoon meeting.

The trustees agreed to put $200,000 of the surplus into the construction fund to help pay for new construction on campus.

Most of the increase in income, Phillips said, came from state contingency funds to compensate the college for enrollment increases. More funds were available than previously budgeted.

Also Tuesday, the trustees agreed to renew the college's contract for $2,800 with the Human Relations Council. College President Dr. Al G. Langford said the council provides numerous services, including helping establish communication with minority communities.

The board agreed to allow the City of Midland Parks and Recreation Department free use of the physical education building, on a space-available basis, for its league basketball games.

In other action, the trustees approved hiring of 10 persons and formally accepted the resignation of former student activities director Gary Askins.

A committee was appointed by the trustees to meet with city officials concerning possible purchase by the college of a 46-acre tract north of the campus. That land is owned by the City of Midland.

Another committee was appointed to consider names of possible new Midland College Foundation board members. The foundation board expects to expand its membership from 11 to 15 members at its next meeting, Langford said.

Langford told the trustees the occupational-technical building expansion is expected to be ready for classroom use today and for laboratory use by Aug. 30.

Langford said the fine arts building is expected to be ready for limited use by the spring semester. He also said construction is speeding up on Chaparral Center, and that "a complete turnaround" has been achieved from past construction problems on the center.

Council raises overparking fine with reluctance

With voiced reluctance, the Midland City Council voted Tuesday to raise the fine for overparking on the city's parking meters from $1 to $2.

"The idea is not to increase revenue but to decrease the number of tickets," Councilwoman Mrs. Doris Howbert said.

With meters that take a quarter and a prospective fine of only a $1, a lot of people are probably just deciding to take their chances without feeding the meter, Councilman Carroll Thomas said.

Mayor Angelo said he hated to see someone caught downtown without a quarter penalized by the increase, but felt administratively there was no solution to the growing problem of parking violators. No date was set for the new ordinance to go into effect, although the council indicated there would be a substantial lag period between when the ordinance is prepared and when it goes into effect.

Bell to open defense

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., under fire from one former high executive and the family of another, opens it defense today of charges leveled in a $29 million damage suit.

The suit was brought by fired Bell executive James H. Ashley and the family of T. O. Gravitt, who was Bell's top Texas official when he committed suicide in October 1974 during an internal company investigation.

The plaintiffs rested their case Tuesday afternoon after 11 days of testimony from 22 witnesses and 21 sworn depositions collected since the suit was filed 33 months ago in state court.

Most of the allegations against Bell stem from a suicide message and pages of attached notes which Gravitt left in the study of his Dallas home when he killed himself Oct. 17, 1974.

The suit alleges that Gravitt was hounded to his suicide and Ashley wrongfully fired as a result of the company probe.

The Gravitt notes accused Bell of operating illegal political "slush funds," engaging in unfair rate-fixing tactics

Andrews plans time capsule

ANDREWS — The people of Andrews are leaving a message for that city's residents 100 years from now — a message in the form of a time capsule.

The time capsule is scheduled to be buried Sunday in the sidewalk in front of the Chamber of Commerce building, '76 House, at the dedication of that building.

The dedication will begin with a 12:30 p.m. barbecue catered by the Mesquite Burners at the Andrews Civic Center.

The time capsule is expected to include items such as copies of the current city, county and school budgets, a Bicentennial flag and $300 in checks from Andrews' two banks and one savings and loan association. In a hundred years, at 5¼ per cent interest, compounded quarterly, the value of that $300 will he $55,250.

Tickets to the barbecue are $2.50 each.

Sound opposition!

The American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) has joined the ranks of those expressing dissatisfaction with the comprehensive energy bill passed by the House shortly before starting its month's summer recess.

Allan Grant, AFBF president, said that the bill has three strikes against it.

He explained that if enacted, the bill will increase consumer prices, raise production costs and retain incentive-killing controls.

This is exactly what the petroleum industry and other groups and individuals have said about the bill from the time it first was proposed. They haven't changed their minds concerning it. In fact, most of them now are saying the legislation is much worse than they had thought in the beginning.

The opposition voiced by the farm group, a strong organization in itself, certainly strengthens the stand of the forces opposing the energy bill.

The bill (H.R. 8444) will be considered by the Senate when it reconvenes on September 6. And therein lies the last remaining hope to kill or alter the measure.

"Specifically, Farm Bureau opposes the crude oil and equalization tax provisions as approved by the House," Grant said. "This tax would substantially raise the cost of crude oil products without providing needed price incentives for future exploration for oil reserves."

He explained further that the proposal to pay a part of this tax to consumers represents a back-door approach to redistributing the wealth of the country.

Grant also said that Farm Bureau is disappointed that the energy bill does not provide for decontrol of natural gas prices which "we believe is essential to encourage production of more natural gas."

Farm Bureau, he said, opposes any proposal to increase the federal gasoline tax unless the proceeds of such tax are earmarked specifically for the Highway Trust Fund.

The bureau is due a resounding vote of thanks for its sound position on this specific provision.

The bureau chief continued by making it known that the bureau also opposes efforts to bail out the Social Security Trust Funds through imposition of crude oil taxes.

"While we object to three key issues in the bill," he said, "there are a number of other features that move in the direction of federal government intervention in the energy field."

As an example, he cited the failure of the bill to specify the allocation of available energy supplies through the market system — a system which he said is not only the best allocator but one which also provides the incentives necessary to stimulate increased exploration and development of oil and gas fields.

In other words, the legislation continues and expands the present maze of government price controls and regulations on oil and gas, a concept strongly opposed by Farm Bureau — and others with a belief in and for free enterprise.

A good weed crop

It's somewhat strange, but weeds seem to do well here despite the unusually dry weather.

This particularly is true in the central business district where weeds grow tall in and around some vacant lots, in alleys and along curbs and sidewalks.

And, in a number of locations, they haven't been bothered by hoes, rakes,other cutting implements, or by pulling. The healthy, undisturbed plants have become somewhat unsightly in certain areas.

A number of vacant lots in the residential areas also have excellent stands of weeds and wild grass, some of the weeds having attained championship contender heights. Tall weeds on corner lots in some cases have created traffic hazards.

Right now would be a mighty good time to "harvest" the tall weed crop in the Tall City. How about it?

ASIA MEMO:

U.S. correspondents are needed in Peking

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

Edward Neilan

It is evident that the process of normalization of relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China is not proceeding as rapidly as many Americans had expected.

It is very unlikely that there will be much progress on bilateral issues during Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's trip to Peking.

Even the much-discussed frozen assets question, on which some movement had been noted, seems stalled; the inertia is evenly divided between both governments.

Given the political and public opinion realities in the United States, the wait-and-see and cautious approach at this time is the course most easily supported.

But while the China issue does not stir the same sense of urgency in Washington which the Middle East, energy, welfare, the Panama Canal, Africa and Bert Lance's bank account create, we must not lose sight of the importance of China specifically and Asia generally in the future of the world.

Economic power is shifting away from Europe and a new Pacific Era is imminent. China will be a main factor in that era, whether we have an embassy in Peking or not.

An immediate first step which could both serve the cause of adding light to the China debate and stimulating the process of normalization would be a new American push to base news correspondents in Peking.

It is clear that we are not going to win concessions from Peking on the issue of Taiwan's future security. And since the economic and security well-being of Taiwan is something in our interest to preserve, the Peking-Washington talks are bogged down.

The Chinese have reason to be wary of the basing of American newsmen in their capital. There is the risk, from Peking's side, that probing American newsmen would look under some carpets and perhaps even gain interviews with some Chinese dissidents, of which there are admittedly many. A half-dozen American reporters based in Peking could provide some commentary on how China is living up to President Jimmy Carter's vision of human rights.

Whenever I bring up this matter of basing correspondents in Peking at a seminar or discussion, it is criticized roundly by some academics who belittle the role of the press in being able to extract much that is meaningful from a Communist capital.

The point is that having U.S. newsmen based in Moscow has been a better deal than not having them based there; the same would be true of having our reporters based in Peking.

I happen to think that American reporters based in Peking would contribute to a better understanding of what is going on in China for American readers. Whether the picture were sunny or cloudy, the reporting would help diminish some of the cliches and illusions which form the basis of our perceptions of China today.

There is the strong possibility that China might feel it was giving too much; that if the United States got newsmen through the Peking gates on a permanent basis, then there would be less enthusiasm for going all the way toward full diplomatic recognition.

The free flow of information is what this country is all about.

The subcommittee on Future Foreign Policy Research and Development of the Committee on International Relations recently held informative hearings on "United States-Soviet Union-China: The Great Power Triangle."

If that is the true "power triangle" for the future, then we ought to have some journalists in the third corner as soon as possible. Pushing for the opening of U.S. news bureaus in Peking would be a worthy goal for Vance to pursue during his trip.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Bulgarian gets VIP treatment

BY JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — For 25 years, the State Dept. has been arbitrarily blocking selected Communists from entering the United States by invoking a law from the Red Scare days of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

The McCarran Act, passed in 1952, established nearly 30 categories of people who could not visit the United States unless they were recommended for visa waivers by the State Dept.. Among the undesirables were prostitutes, polygamists, paupers and advocates of the "international doctrines of world communism."

Now, thanks to a recent bill passed by Congress, the McCarran Act will soon be less restrictive. Over the years, nevertheless, the law has often been selectively applied. Out of some 19,000 waiver applications last year, for example, only about a thousand were denied.

During the Richard Nixon-Henry Kissinger era, Communist leaders from Western Europe were considered anathema, because official visits to the United States would give them credibility at home. In 1975, for instance, a prominent Italian Communist, Sergio Segre, was invited to speak at the New York Council on Foreign Relations. The waiver was denied and the conference had to be cancelled.

Communists who were critical of U.S. allies were also considered verboten by the Nixon administration. One such case involved a prominent British citizen, Carmel Budiardjo, who wanted to lecture in the United States on human rights violations in Indonesia. Under pressure from the Indonesian government, the State Dept. temporarily withheld her visa on the grounds that she had previously lied about being a Communist from 1946 to 1948.

In contrast, Communists who have the State Dept. seal of approval are speedily granted visa waivers and are ushered in on a red carpet.

Take Vulkan Shopov, chief of agriculture for the Bulgarian Communist party. As an Eastern European Communist, in an era of detente, he is ardently courted by U.S. diplomats.

Shopov came to the United States in June at the invitation of the State Dept.. The U.S. taxpayers footed the bill for his month-long visit, including travel expenses to and from Bulgaria.

In a May 9 cable to the State Dept., the U.S. ambassador in Sofia, Martin Herz, was ecstatic about Shopov's pending tour. "Embassy strongly believes (Shopov) must be accorded VIP status as far as (expenses) and general treatment is concerned," exclaimed Herz.

The Communist leader, cabled the ambassador, should be taken to a "Southeastern agricultural region, including visit to Atlanta or other Southern city"; the Great Plains wheat, corn and soybean region; and the Western states.

In general, wrote Herz, Shopov "would like to see most advanced forms of American agricultural technology. He has said he expects to work hard during the visit."

Despite the distinguished Bulgarian's announced intention to keep his nose to the grindstone, Herz suggested some lavish entertainment for the visitor:

"He would appreciate chance to see modern American dance (though we suspect anything too avant-garde would not go down well; believe American Ballet Theater, Alvin Ailey or Eliot Feld would be just about right), Broadway show (suggest, if possible, 'A Chorus Line' or 'Bubbling Brown Sugar'). Opera, or orchestral concerts. Shopov not interested in jazz or rock."

The ambassador added a "special note." In his talks with Shopov, wrote Herz, the Bulgarian made a "special point of saying he does not want to bump into correspondents from (Radio Free Europe) while in U.S., and does not wish to give interview to (Voice of America) ... He asked that interpreter not be 'political immigrant' ..."

Shopov had been assured, the ambassador stated, "that interpreter would be selected in such fashion as to assure there would be absolutely no political embarrassment."

When he finally arrived in the United States, Shopov was taken to the Smithsonian, the Kennedy Center, colonial Williamsburg, Va., and to other spots around the country.

But the scholarly Shopov, a State Dept. official told us, "squeezed in" the cultural sights only when he had spare time. The Bulgarian decided to forego Disneyland, which "disappointed" State Dept. officials.

Footnote: While Communists need waivers to visit the United States, leaders of repressive right-wing regimes such as Chile, South Korea and Argentina, can come and go as they wish.

WATCH ON WASTE: The government gives out awards for outstanding performances by employees, which translate into higher salaries and rapid promotions. At the Patent and Trademark Office, however, a startling 75 per cent of its 2,955 workers received such awards in 1976. The rest of the Commerce Dept. gave awards to a mere 39 per cent of its workers. "It's not a giveaway," a spokesman insisted, "it really is hard-earned."

Red Chinese defector speaks out against 'system'

TAIPEI — The way Fan Yuan-yen, the Chinese Communist pilot who recently defected to Taiwan, tells it, the Peking regime eventually will attempt to "liberate" Taiwain by force, but only after the United States establishes diplomatic relations with Peking.

Fan, an air force squadron commander who became disillusioned with life in Red China, told this correspondent, through an interpreter, that Peking's strategy is to achieve diplomatic recognition by the United States and then harass Taiwan until an invasion is feasible.

That moment will come, Fan said, when the Communists, strangthened by their U.S. ties, can deploy troops from the Soviet border to the coast opposite Taiwan and pose an invasion threat.

If Taiwan resists, Fan declared in the interview, the United States would be powerless to intervene in the consequent war. "The U.S.," he said through the interpreter, "would have no say in the internal affairs of the one Chinese (Peking) government. If the U.S. disapproved of such an invasion, what could it do?

"If the U.S. protested, the Communist government would mobilize its propaganda apparatus and tell the world that the U.S. was interfering in her internal affairs. Even the Soviet Union would be forced to condemn the U.S. for that."

Fan was based at Tsinkiang Airbase about 200 miles west of Taipei, across the Taiwan Straits. He said there is only a small MIG-19 force there now, and that the Communist military deployment facing Taiwan is defensive.

For 27 years, he said, the People's Republic of China has claimed it would one day liberate Taiwain by force. But, he added, the Peking regime's military capability is overrated. Equipment and facilities are poor, he said, and morale low in the armed forces.

His own military superiors told him that Taiwan's planes performed far better than the MIG-19s and MIG-21s, though are far outnumbered by the Communist air force.

Still, Fan explained, Communist ground and air forces regularly engage in invasion exercises, and last year increased forces from batallion to division strength. Since his defection to Taiwan, he has recommended that its military increase anti-air and anti-submarine capability. The Chinese Communist submarine fleet, which could blockade the Taiwain Straits, numbers 65 and is expanding, Fan said.

The Chinese Communist government has been preoccupied with internal political squabbling, the Cultural Revolution and the elimination of the "Gang of Four," Fan said, to the great detriment of building military strength. Even military officers such as himself had to spend many hours educating and re-educating themselves on the latest ideological twists, Fan explained.

But he cautions that once the P.R.C. gets "settled down," and achieves diplomatic recognition from the United States, "the freedom and security of Taiwain will go down the drain." Moreover, Fan said, the Peking regime will step up the number of agents it sends to the United States under the guise of cultural or scientific exchange, for purposes of "instigating people."

Fan said he was told by superiors that such subversion must be plotted over a long period of time, and that Chairman Mao was often quoted to him as saying: "When ping-pong affair starts, even though ping-pong is such a small ball, it can activate turning of the earth."

The great weaknesses of Communist China, Fan declared, are its inability to supply people sufficient food, the "slackness" in factory production, the necessity to frequently use the military to restore control in various areas and the poor treatment given retired military personnel.

He said that Teng Hsiao-p'eng, at an earlier time, planned to pacify disgruntled military veterans with jobs and benefits, but was purged before the program got started. Now, according to Fan, with Teng restored to a position of power, he might try to remedy the veterans' situation which has grown quite serious.

At best, Fan said, the P.R.C. only achieves "superficial" order in its society through political purges and executions.

The basic problems of creating a better life, he argues, are not being solved, and people are discontented. There is the potential of an uprising against the regime, he claims, but it must be organized, and there are no signs of this kind of organization. It will only come, he explained, when people realize that the real fight is not over which faction is correct, but against a wrong system.

Though Fan stated that the P.R.C. military is overrated, he said the Peking rulers would have sent it into action against the United States if American forces had ever tried a large-scale invasion of North Vietnam during that war. Any such attempt to capture Hanoi, he explained, would have been considered a threat to the P.R.C. because of its closeness to that capital.

Fan has a wife and three children in Communnist China. Since his startling arrival in Taiwan, he has said several times that he would like Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to ask Peking officials to allow Fan's family to join him in Taiwan.

"President Carter advocates human rights," Fan said through the interpreter. "I have faith that Mr. Vance will bring this out when he is in Peking. How the P.R.C. responds to my request will show the world what they think of U.S. advocacy of human rights."

Coffee hottest item in Africa currently

By DAVID LAMB
(C) 1977, The Los Angeles Times

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — The hottest commodity in Africa these days isn't gold or oil. It's coffee. For many of the continent's impoverished countries, a bean in the bag is worth more than a buck in the bank.

With prices on the world market still sky high, the competition to share in this economic bonanza has become so fierce that coffee smuggling is now a significant enterprise in Africa and international disputes over the control of coffee shipments are common.

Earlier this year, the Ivory Coast sent troops to its border to thwart the smuggling of coffee into Liberia. On numerous occasions, Ugandan coffee smugglers and Kenyan buyers have shot it out for control of a shipment. In one such incident, 20 persons were killed.

The situation became so serious this month that all Ugandan coffee shipments to the Kenyan port of Mombasa were cut off until the Kenya railroad system could devise new security measures to foil the coffee thefts.

But coffee has become such a gold mine that impoverished Uganda has leased a jet freighter to fly its beans four times a day to Djibouti for export. More than 85 per cent of Uganda's export earnings will come from coffee this year, and the high prices already have wiped out a balance-of-payments deficit that had existed since 1973, even though Uganda's coffee production fell by one-third between 1976 and 1977.

In Kenya, where a housewife can still buy a pound of coffee for $1.30 retail, coffee has replaced ivory as the favorite commodity of smugglers. The illicit trade has links to high levels of government and profits run into the millions of dollars.

Last year, Kenya was selling its coffee for $1,636 a ton. This year, the price peaked at $3,958. The record price coincided with a record crop in Kenya. On several occasions, coffee-laden convoys traveling to the port of Mombasa have been highjacked.

Ethiopia will realize more than $200 million from its coffee crop this year, an immense sum in a nation where the average worker earns less than $100 a year.

Rwanda and Burundi, two of the world's poorest countries, are virtually being kept afloat by coffee. The picture is much the same throughout Africa, which produces one-third the world's coffee.

The high prices have come at a particularly opportune time for the Ivory Coast, the world's largest producer after Brazil and Colombia. The Ivory Coast has become so prosperous that it is no longer eligible for cheap money from foreign lenders. Its ambitious development projects have been financed by money borrowed from foreign banks at commercial rates. The coffee boom, which helped give the Ivory Coast a $90 million balance-of-trade surplus this year, will ease the crunch of interest payments due over the next five years.

For years, coffee producers in Africa and elsewhere believed that people would drink as much coffee at 30 cents a cup as they would at 15 cents a cup. But events in the past two years have challenged that theory.

Cold weather destroyed much of Brazil's crop in 1975. That, combined with a civil war in Angola and floods in Colombia, wiped out much of the world's stockpile and sent price skyrocketing on the commodity markets in London and New York.

Inventive rocket expert keeping busy

By WILLIAM GILDEA
The Washington Post

Robert Truax is thinking even bigger thoughts than he did when he built Evel Knievel's steam-powered flying machine known as the Sky-Cycle that failed to make it across the Snake River Canyon three years ago.

Truax, a former Navy rocket expert, has begun work on his own rocket that he dreams someday will carry someone into space; he wants to launch a private astronaut. And that's only half of Truax's latest activities.

Nearing 60, Truax says he spends the rest of his time "studying the problem of aging." The engineer has turned to biochemistry, having studied two years at Stanford, come up with a theory on why exactly people grow old, and started a book "to encourage research into aging."

Truax, a retired Navy captain who headed the military space program in the late '50s "when it was all hush-hush" and helped get the Mercury project under way, worked two years putting together Knievel's canyon "Cycle," doing much of the assembly at his former residence in Potomac, Md.

Knievel's flight became a fizzle when his two parachutes opened almost immediately after blast-off, causing the promotion-minded daredevil to float unceremoniously to earth on some rocks on the near side of the canyon bottom. Truax says the "suction effect" of the takeoff caused the "lid of the canister holding the chute to open prematurely."

Truax says the same thing happened in a test flight two weeks before. He thought he had solved the problem after that brief flight of a spare "Cycle" carrying "a fellow named 'Good Galahad,' an anthropomorphic parachute-testing dummy" who "ended up in the river."

Despite the unhappy landing, Knievel dusted off his American-flag colored jumpsuit and began thinking of a new stunt. "This is going to be a hard act to follow," Truax says that Knievel told him. "You have anything else up your sleeve."

While Knievel was apparently thinking that over, Truax built for him a display ramp that he uses to show off his Sky-Cycle and a jet-powered motorcycle that Knievel rode in a Bicentennial July 4 parade in his hometown of Butte, Mont. But Truax says he hasn't heard from Knievel lately.

Meanwhile, Truax has started building his new rocket. All he needs, he says, is $1 million to finish the project, and he's looking for a promoter to back him. Truax says one promoter mentioned that he "liked the show business aspects" of a private astronaut shoot "for closed circuit TV."

Truax says that he has finished "about 10 per cent" of the rocket and has a 25-foot mockup of it that he brings out on the driveway of his present home in Saratoga, Calif.

Estimates don't ensure persons moving interstate

Newsday

Consumers wind up with a damage or loss claim of $50 or more in about one in six interstate moves.

And in about one in four interstate moves made after an estimate has been given, consumers are hit with a bill that's at least 10 per cent more than the estimate.

Those statistics come from a recently released report from the Interstate Commerce Commission, the federal agency that regulates household moves from one state to another. The report listing performance records for last year as supplied to the agency by the 20 largest interstate movers in the country, is an annual affair. The companies listed handle roughly 80 per cent of all interstate moves.

The percentage of moves that led consumers to file damage or loss claims of $50 or more ranged from 9.1 per cent, for both Lyon Moving & Storage Co. and Gloval Van Lines Inc., to 27.4 per cent for the Aero-Mayflower Transit Co., one of the largest of the companies. The average is computed by the ICC was 17.30 per cent.

The number of days taken to "settle" a claim ranged from 14 for Burnham Van Service Inc., to 58 for Symth Van Line Inc., with 31 days listed as the average for the 20 companies. According to regulations, an interstate mover must make a settlement offer within 120 days after a claim is filed. The definition of settlement is vaque, though. Raymond Atherton of the ICC said that a $100 payment on a $200 claim could be counted as a settlement. So, settlement is not necessarily synonymous with consumer satisfaction.

The percentage of estimates that turned out to be at least 10 per cent lower than the ultimate bill ranged from 14.9 per cent for Wheaton Van Lines Inc. to 37 per cent for Burnham Van Service Inc., with 24.3 per cent the average for the 20 firms. Bills that turned out to be lower than estimates were also frequent; in fact, overestimates had the edge on underestimates in frequency. An average of 27.1 per cent of the estimates written turned out to be at least 10 per cent higher than the bill.

One surprising aspect of the report was that a large number of consumers who make interstate moves don't bother to obtain an estimate, even though there can be no charge for one and it provides some benefit. After a move in which an estimate has been given, ICC regulations stipulate that the consumer must pay a bill that goes up to 10 per cent above an estimate in cash, money order or certified check on delivery, or the mover can withhold the property. If the cost is over the estimate by more than 10 per cent, the consumer can withhold the excess for 15 business days. This is small consolation, perhaps, but important if you don't have enough money on hand to pay the full bill and delivery of your household goods hangs on the transaction.

Two representatives of the moving trade indicated that the statistics on damage or loss claims and on estimates came as no surprise.

Golden Gate Bridge director resisting erection of barrier

By WILLIAM ENDICOTT
The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Since it was opened in 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge has gained a reputation for holding an almost mystical attraction for people bent on killing themselves.

Among the handful who have jumped from the bridge and miraculously survived, one later told an interviewer it was "the only stylish way to go." And another said there was "a kind of form to it, a certain grace and beauty."

But the bridge district's 18-member board of directors for years has resisted erecting suicide barriers on the picturesque span, which extends across the bay from San Francisco to Marin County, first saying barriers would disturb the aesthetics of the bridge and later admitting much of the reason was financial.

It now appears, however, that the directors are about to change their minds, partially because of pressure from suicide prevention groups in San Francisco but also because statistics show the age for bridge jumpers rapidly decreasing.

A 15-year-old boy was among last year's suicides. The parents of a 19-year-old who leaped to his death are suing the district for $1 million, charging negligence. And the average age of jumpers now is 26, compared with an average of 47 in the 1950s.

Earlier this month, the directors asked their engineering staff for a report within 90 days on the feasibility of replacing the existing bridge railing, which is 42 inches high, with an 8-foot-fence equipped with an alarm system.

"I don't like to use the word barrier," said San Francisco Supervisor John L. Molinari, who also sits on the bridge board and who, as head of the district's suicide prevention committee, has opposed barriers in the past. "People think that's something you can't see through. I prefer to call it a deterrent."

Molinari said he had a change of heart about the need for "deterrents" because of the declining age level of jumpers and because the bridge railing needs replacing anyway. "It's getting badly corroded," he said.

Ironically, despite the legend of the bridge as a sort of suicide shrine, the 620 people who are known to have killed themselves by jumping off the bridge represent only 3 per cent of the total suicides in the San Francisco Bay area over the past 40 years.

But the difference, according to proponents of barriers, is that the bridge suicides could have been prevented.

"It's so readily available," said Richard H. Seiden, a professor of Behavioral Science at University of California Berkeley who has made a study of bridge suicides. "It's a highly lethal means for impulsive activity. Getting a gun or pills is much more difficult.

Seiden also cited the "mystique and glamor and publicity surrounding the bridge. "People jump off the Bay Bridge (between San Francisco and Oakland)," he said. "There's been a couple of hundred of them, but you probably never read about them. There's tremendous publicity about suicides off the Golden Gate.

United Way workshop planned

Thirty-eight business executives from Midland firms are slated for a full day of training Thursday as they learn how to function as loaned executives for the Midland United Way.

The training will begin at 8 a.m. in the Midland Room of the Midland National Bank, and includes a tour of several agencies. During the program, the loaned executives will be briefed on the 1978 budget needs for the Midland United Way agencies, functions and operations of 19 agencies which are financed wholly or partially by the United Way, and methods which will be used during the campaign.

Their training will be completed between Sept. 1 through 15 when pilot campaigns are conducted at 11 Midland businesses. The loaned executives will "learn how to present the Midland United Way story" during the pilot campaign, before they begin contacting major businesses and organizations during the regular campaign, Sept. 7 to Oct. 27.

Heading the loaned executive training program is John Berry of Texas Electric Service Co., chairman of the Loaned Executive Division. Others who will speak during the meeting include: Tony Martin, president of the United Way Board of Directors; Capt. Robert Vincent Midland Salvation Army; Deane Stoltz, 1978 campaign chairman; Neil McDonald of Fort Worth, a former loaned executive leader in Midland; Jack Moore, Louis Pare and Blaine Schrag, loaned executive coordinators.

At mid-day, the group will tour the Midland Boys Club, Community Day Nursery, Casa de Amigos, Salvation Army and Planned Parenthood, as representative agencies.

Lunch will be served at the Community Day Nursery.

"There is no way we could conduct a successful campaign without the invaluable assistance of the loaned executives," Martin said Wednesday. "They are on loan to us by their companies for a period of about 30 days to head the solicitation drive for the funds which are necessary to operate the United Way agencies during the next 12 months.

Rain soothes scorched city

Scattered rain fell Tuesday night, providing welcome relief from the day's sweltering heat, which set a new temperature record and had area residents sitting by their air conditioners with fans.

The high Tuesday was officially 106 degrees. The previous record high for Aug. 23 was 101 degrees set in 1950. The record low for Aug. 23 remained unbroken at 57 degrees set in 1966. The low temperature Tuesday was 71 degrees.

Rain recorded by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal was .29 inch, bringing the month's total to .35 and the year's total to 5.17.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy with a continued chance of thunderstorms through Thursday. The low temperature tonight should be in the lower 70s, and the high Thursday should be in the mid-90s. Winds are expected to be southerly at 5 to 10 mph tonight. Chances of rain are 40 per cent tonight and 20 per cent Thursday.

Rankin, Big Lake and Big Spring reported light showers Tuesday night. Clear to partly cloudy skies were reported by all area towns this morning.

A tornado in West Texas and severe thunderstorms in the Panhandle dominated the Texas weather picture early this morning.

However, the twister amounted to little more than a few anxious moments for residents in Monahans. A police dispatcher said the lonely funnel cloud was reported on the ground about eight miles northeast of the downtown area but did nothing more than make a one-point landing before returning to the clouds.

Severe thunderstorms over the Panhandle produced heavy rains in some areas and a flash flood warning was issued for Swisher County near Tulia during the predawn hours. Minor flooding was reported along Interstate 40.

Storm peels house roofs, splits trees

By ED TODD

Trees were splintered and broken and house roofs were disheveled or peeled by the storm which lingered in northeast Midland for about 45 minutes Tuesday afternoon.

No one was reportedly injured in the storm, which brought darkened skies and dropped rain and pea-size hail.

"We had a pretty good storm out here — lost three trees completely, snapped off," said Jeff Smith, assistant golf pro at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

The brunt of the storm apparently was on the club's 18-hole golf course and surrounding area.

"I don't know what it was," he said, "I was standing by the window, and I could see 10 yards out."

Debris, mostly tree limbs, were "all over" the fairways and greens, he said.

"It was pretty scary. It really was," he said of the storm.

A three-sided cage of wire and 2-by-4 planks were ripped apart by the high winds.

"That thing's history," Smith said. "It's about a fairway and a half over."

Steve Turnbo, also an assistant pro at Ranchland Hills, said the storm was the hardest hitting touch of weather he has witnessed in the 15 years he has lived in Midland.

"It's just amazing," Smith said. "I couldn't believe it. It usually doesn't rain out here."

Farther north, at the Culver Youth Home on North Lamesa Road, house parent Lula Wooten said a "few limbs were torn off trees."

"It killed lots of birds out of the trees," she said. "The wind was coming from three different directions."

Lights went out briefly four times, she said. It was "dark, really hailing and raining hard," she said.

"The wind was laying trees down. It was that strong," she said. Most righted themselves after the wind died down. Others didn't. Cacti were toppled.

At nearby Hogan Park, pea-size hail fell along with the striking lightning.

"We had a tree on No. 1 (green)

Lee football coach says mistake 'honest'

Jim Acree

By PAUL DOMOWITCH and BOB DILLON

Midland Lee Coach Jim Acree admitted an "honest mistake" and Midland school board President Johnny Warren said he felt the fact that Midland turned itself in is in Lee's favor as the executive committee of District 5-4A met this morning in Big Spring to discuss alleged violations of the University Interscholastic League code.

Lee reportedly used contact equipment during the shoes-and-shorts phase of preseason football drills.

Acree, speaking before the Midland Lee Rebel Booster Club Tuesday night, read an excerpt from the 1976-77 UIL rule book to the more than 75 people in attendance, citing the fact that the "contact equipment" rule did not list the dummies his team used before the Aug. 16 date.

Acree noted, however, that the new 1977 addition does include mention of the dummies as part of the contact equipment prohibited during the first four days of fall workouts, but explained, "I have not yet received my copy."

Acree added, "I made a mistake, just like you people make on your IRS. We were negligent, but it was just an honest mistake. There was nothing malicious intended.

"I hope it's a mistake I can live over," he added. "I'll make my stand at the meeting just like I'm making it to you today."

Acree predicted the executive committee's decision will "depend on what kind of mood they (the superintendents of the five 5-4A school systems) are in at the time.

"I'm going to sleep real well tonight," he said in closing Tuesday night. "And all of you pray for me. Keep your fingers crossed and just hope for the best."

Members of the Midland school board met behind closed doors in executive session Tuesday afternoon to discuss the matter, but after talking to Midldnd Schools Athletic Director Sam Cox for more than 30 minutes, they agreed to table the matter until after the results of today's 5-4A meeting are known.

Another executive session of the school board has been called for 8:30 Saturday in the board room of the Midland school administration building.

Board President Warren said after Tuesday's meeting, "We will review the results of Wednesday's meeting and decide what, if any action, should be taken at that time."

Warren added that there will be a meeting Saturday, regardless of the outcome in Big Spring.

Dr. James Mailey, superintendent of the Midland Independent School District, explained that "Saturday's meeting will be more likely to deal with personnel."

Warren confirmed later that the "personnel" Mailey was referring to was the Lee High School football coach.

When Warren was asked later if the

Funding plan approved

By JIM STEINBERG

After a public hearing lasting almost two hours, the Midland City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to approve a plan providing for the dispersal of $1.6 million of revenue sharing funds.

The largest block of those funds — $625,000 — was allocated for the construction of a new central fire station in the 1700 block of West Wall Street and a new substation on the city's northwest side.

Also approved was the city's $18.1 million budget for 1977-78, of which $11.9 million was allocated to the general fund, $4.9 million to the water fund, and $1.3 million to the airport fund.

Approximately 70 per cent of the general fund increase is in the area of personnel, where the city increased its staff by 20 employees and provided a 6.5 per cent cost of living salary increase to those employes.

Also approved was the new tax rate, which provided for an actual decrease of approximately 2 per cent from last year's rate before the 1977 citywide property evaluation. The new tax rate was set at 45 cents per $100 of assessed valuation compared to the old tax rate of $1.34. The actual rate that would have generated the same total income for the city as was obtained in 1976 was calculated to be 66.2 cents.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said that increased income to the general fund and a healthy balance in unappropriated surplus made the small tax cut possible.

Included in the city budget figure is

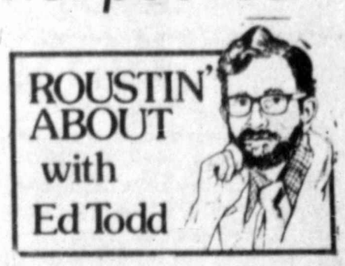
Sister accepts storm's damage; brother peeved



John Anders was upset over some fine scratches in the glistening paint on his new brown sedan.

The storm did it.

His sister, Vivian Thurman, lives a block up at 310 E. Wadley Ave.

She was thankful to be alive — that no one was killed or injured in the madcap storm that struck northeast Midland midafternoon Tuesday.

She was even less concerned about the high winds ripping off the sheet asphalt and gravel roof of her and her husband's brick house.

Neither she nor her husband nor their children, Tyrone, 10, and Kirk, 9, was at home when the strong whirlwinds, dark clouds and rain and hail descended.

"I just thank God nobody got hurt," said Mrs. Thurman, 32. "You can build another house, but you can't get another body."

The roof peeled and plummeted onto the backyard. Pieces of it were blown over to a neighbor's yard.

Mrs. Thurman was laughing from relief. The ripped-off roof and high winds "messed up" the patio.

"It also rained inside but not much . . . leaking," she said.

Unlike her brother, she wasn't noticeably disturbed. Not a soul was hurt — just pocketbooks. And John Anders' pride in his new car suffered an acute blow.

"Of course, there's no other way to take it," Mrs. Thurman said. "It's just God's work. There's no need of shedding tears."

Now, brother John wasn't quite as charitable as his sis. He wanted some reckoning.

"It (the storm) messed up my 1977 Cougar, which had 500 miles on it," said Anders who, though dramatic, wasn't acting. He was dead serious. "That's about $800 (damage). Brand new car. Man, that's pitiful."

It wasn't long before disquieted Anders left his sister's place, went back over to his own and started polishing out those scratches that would come out.

Twigs and other light debris must have blown into his sedan.

"It's got everything a (Continental Mark V's got but the Mark V name," lamented Anders.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Thurman were at work when the storm struck. Their children, who normally would have been home, were visting their grandmother, Lucille Anders.

Insurance adjusters would be out and, with the help of some friends and neighbors, the roof, patio and what-all would be repaired.

Mrs. Thurman was just thankful that no one was injured in the storm.

"No need of being sad," she said. "I've got a house to look at."

Her husband didn't "ride with fate" quite as easily as she. But he wasn't nearly as upset as his brother-in-law down the block.

"No point in crying over spilled milk," Thurman said.

"We might be crying," said the wife, "after the insurance company gets through with us."

Meanwhile, Thurman said his "friends and neighbors," like Peewee Reyes and his wife Lupe, would be helping clean up "the mess" and repairing the roof and patio.

Lucille Anders, who first saw the damage to the house, said Tuesday's fairly isolated wind-devil storm was

Park won't allow U.S. questioning

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tongsun Park, the key figure in the South Korean influence-buying scandal in Washington, came out of hiding today and said he would not let American authorities question him.

Declaring "I am a 100 per cent Korean," he told a news conference there is no need or any obligation for him to speak to any American investigators.

"If Leon Jaworski comes to Korea, it's his liberty, but I'm not going to see him," he added.

Jaworski, the former Watergate special prosecutor, is the new director of the investigation into the scandal by the ethics committee of the U.S. House of Representatives. The U.S. Justice Department also is investigating charges that Park was the South Korean government's chief payoff man in Washington.

The 42-year-old Korean businessman said American newspaper allegations that he gave funds and favors to members of Congress to get their support for the Korean government and to advance his own rice-buying operations were "irresponsible, merciless and inhumane."

He also said there was no justification for the seizure of his property in the United States by U.S. authorities in connection with allegations of tax evasion.

Park met Korean and foreign reporters at his office in downtown Seoul after being questioned earlier in the day by the Seoul prosecutor's office. It was his first news conference in 10 months, since the scandal in Washington broke last October and he moved to London.

Prosecutor Ahn Kyung-sang said he called Park in to determine if his alleged activities in Washington violated any Korean laws. He refused to say what he learned in the initial interrogation but said Park would be questioned again.

There was speculation that the government also suspected he might have violated foreign exchange regulations in his extensive business dealings abroad.

An informed source said Park would not be allowed to leave the country until he was cleared of suspicion. Park said he planned to leave as soon as his ailing mother recovered.

It could not be learned whether the questioning was requested by the U.S. goverment. Park cannot be returned to the United States against his will since South Korea does not have an extradition treaty with the United States. The Korean government has repeatedly denied that it had any connection with his activities in Washington.

Park arrived from London last Thursday traveling under an alias. He reportedly returned to see his 70-year-old mother, who was discharged from a hospital on Saturday after treatment for anemia and stomach trouble.

Jaworski to give progress report

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski is giving the House Ethics Committee a progress report on his first few days in charge of the investigation of alleged South Korean influencebuying attempts in Congress.

The former Watergate special prosecutor is meeting with committee members today in their first session since he took over the investigation on Aug. 15. Aides declined to say in advance what Jaworski would tell the committee.

They also would not say whether the panel will consider a contempt of Congress action against Suzi Park Thomson, a former secretary to retired House Speaker Carl Albert. Ms. Thomson, who prefers that designation, was threatened with the contempt citation last week by investigators after she refused to answer three questions.

Ms. Thomson's lawyer, Phillip Hirshkop, said she is willing to answer the questions in a public session, but not in private.

He said she was asked whether she knows of any "payoffs" to congressmen by Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park or by former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo and what she knows about a 1975 congressional trip to Korea.

Both the House of Representatives and the Justice Department are investigating whether Park, Kim and other Koreans tried to buy influence in Congress for the Seoul government with cash contributions, gifts and favors.

Meanwhile, a 1975 memorandum to Park, written by an aide reports alleged efforts to line up senators for an expense paid trip to Seoul.

The memo, written on June 29, 1975 by Spencer Robbins, purported to advise Park that John C. Stennis, D-Miss., could not visit Korea but that Sens. John Tower, R-Tex., Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., and "Bird and others are interested."

Stennis, Tower and Bartlett say through aides they never received offers for expense-paid trips from Park or anyone claiming to represent him.

The "Bird" referred to in the memo could be either Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., or Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind-Va.

Aides quoted both those senators as saying that they never considered taking such a trip and have no memory of being asked to do so.

The memorandum is among papers that two freelance writers reconstructed from shreds taken from Park's trash.

An aide to Bartlett said he suspects Park's aide was trying to impress his boss and wrote the memorandum without contacting the senators.

The only senator who acknowleges he went to Korea at the time that the memo concerns is Jake Garn, R-Utah, who also says he believes the journey was financed by a private foundation.

Garn, contacted in Salt Lake City, said Tuesday, "There's no evidence that Korean government funds were involved, but I have said it would not surprise me at all if there were some Korean government funds involved" in the trip.

Garn acknowledged last month that he accepted an expense-paid trip to Korea in 1975 from the Korea-U.S. Economic Council, a private foundation which he said he later came to suspect received funds from the South Korean government.

President begins push for treaty ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, declaring that public opposition to the proposed Panama Canal treaties is based in part on misconceptions, is launching a series of meetings with officials from around the country to win support for the agreement.

As he called in the governors of Mississippi and Kentucky for a briefing on the agreement, Carter told a news conference Tuesday that the United States would have first rights to involvement in a new canal, if one is built.

And the President, while telling reporters he "wouldn't want to say anyone who disagrees with me is ignorant," added he believes, "The way to arouse public support for the treaty is to let the American people know the advantages to our country of its terms."

Carter acknowledged that "there is not popular support for the Panama Canal treaty" but blamed this on "a great deal of misconception."

The President's actions are part of an administration attempt to counter attacks by foreign-policy conservatives who say the treaties give away too much for what the United States gets in return.

A White House official said that the meeting with the governors, Cliff Finch of Mississippi and Julian Carroll of Kentucky, was the first of several on the agreement.

The governors said after the meeting that Carter sought their help in convincing their states' citizens of the need for the treaties, but that he specifically asked them not to put pressure on their states' senators.

During Tuesday's news conference, Carter also:

—Defended Budget Director Bert Lance, saying, "I don't know of any allegation that has been made or proven that Bert Lance did anything illegal or even unethical."

A report released last week by the Comptroller of the Currency said no evidence was found to warrant prosecution of Lance, long a friend and adviser of Carter. The report was prepared following an investigation of the personal financial dealings of Lance, who was president of the National Bank of Georgia before becoming director of the Office of Management and Budget.

—Said South African officials had reported to the United States "that they do not have and do not intend to develop nuclear explosive devices for any purpose." He said the United States would continue to monitor the situation.

—Said that the United States would go no further than cautioning Israel that its settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan River in occupied territory created "an unnecessary obstacle to peace."

Spacecraft, engine may have bumped

PASADENA, Calif. — The Voyager spacecraft now en route to Jupiter may have been struck by its own burned-out rocket engine sometime during the first day of the mission, engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here reported Tuesday. If so, the collision only jostled the probe and did not damage it.

Normally an engine used to propel a satellite onto a particular trajectory is jettisoned so it does not trail along behind the spacecraft.

But last Friday's launch of Voyager 2 was the first time the civilian space agency has ever used this particular 15,300-pound-thrust solid propellant motor on a deep-space mission (although the Air Force has used it for some classified satellites).

About 17 hours after burnout of the rocket engine, something bumped the Voyager.

Engineers ruled out asteroids or meteors as possible "somethings" because the spacecraft was only jostled and not otherwise damaged. An asteroid or meteor strike almost certainly would have punctured the probe and damaged it.

The supposition is that the "something" was traveling in space at about the same velocity and in almost the same direction as the Voyager. That would almost have to mean some previously jettisoned part of the spacecraft.

Government trying to rummage through Nixon 'gift' boxes

HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the strenuous objections of Richard Nixon, the federal government is seeking to rummage through boxes he left behind to see if they contain clues to the whereabouts of valuable gifts from foreign dignitaries.

At stake in the federal court hearing is more than just a listing of the gifts, some of which may be "missing" through poor record-keeping.

The hearing, scheduled for today, is the government's first attempt to search the materials in its possession since the Supreme Court awarded custody to Uncle Sam — specifying that strict regulations must govern access. It also is Nixon's first chance to challenge those rules.

While the fight over custody of Nixon's papers, tapes and other materials was going through the courts, the boxes remained untouched under court order. Now that the case is settled regulations for government access have gone into effect and rules for public access are being considered by Congress.

Last month, State Department Chief of Protocol Evan S. Dobelle wrote the General Services Administration that "questions have arisen" about the location of foreign gifts to Nixon and his family. Publicly, at least, Dobelle didn't spell out the questions or who asked them.

He said he wanted an inventory of all gifts in the custody of the National Archives, an agency of the GSA, which is storing all the materials left behind by the Nixon administration.

"In particular, Mr. Dobelle requested access to Box 118-C which he speculated contains 'records' of foreign gifts," Nixon's lawyers said in a petition that sought to stop the search.

Informant on Yarbrough says he's afraid for life

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Post quoted Bill Rothkopf as saying Tuesday night he fears former State Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough will get revenge for secret tape recordings Rothkopf allegedly made while acting as an agent of the Harris County district attorney.

The newspaper quoted Rothkopf as saying he met face to face with Yarbrough over the weekend at a deposition hearing and it is still possible "for him to do me in."

"I'm very concerned about my safety and I will continue to be in the future," Rothkopf said in an interview with the Post. "I know this is very important to him and I'm sure he feels vengeful toward me. Knowing him as I do, I continue to feel that it is possible for him to do me in at any time."

"When I saw Bill I felt tremendous compassion for him," Yarbrough told The Associated Press. "I told him, 'Bill, I am not angry with you and I hope you call me some time.'"

Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance has said he has tape recordings in which Yarbrough plotted to have former Victoria banker Bill Kemp killed.

Vance said Rothkopf, a former business associate of Yarbrough, had a special body microphone taped to him and made the recordings during conversations with Yarbrough between May 12 and June 10. Vance said he did not have enough evidence to obtain conspiracy to commit capital murder charges against Yarbrough.

Yarbrough resigned from the Supreme Court June 15. He faces trial in Austin in October on forgery and perjury charges. A disbarment trial is scheduled in Houston Sept. 5.

Yarbrough files suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Former State Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough has filed a state court suit claiming three judgment liens against him "do not attach" to his homestead real property.

He asked in the suit filed Tuesday that the judgments be partially released and reformed so they do not represent an impediment to the sale of the property.

The defendants in the suit were plaintiffs who have secured civil judgments against Yarbrough, who resigned from the Texas Supreme Court after indictments on forgery and perjury charges.

China meetings 'to accelerate'

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met today with Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and hoped to get down to the chief business of his trip to China, closer relations between the U.S. and Chinese governments.

The talks now "will be moving along at an accelerated rate," a U.S. spokesman said. But it was considered unlikely that the Chinese would moderate their demand, reiterated only last week by Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, that the United States cut all diplomatic and military ties with the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan as the price for full diplomatic relations with the Communist government.

Carter Administration officials have promised not to abandon the Nationalists, who fled to the island after the Communist military victory on the mainland in 1949. But there has been speculation that the United States might offer to break formal diplomatic relations while maintaining economic relations and its guarantee to protect the Nationalists from invasion.

In view of Hua's speech, this did not seem to be enough of a concession to get the Chinese to agree to exchange ambassadors.

Teng, twice purged and twice restored to power, posed smilingly for photographers as he received Vance and lectured American correspondents accompanying the secretary. Now 73, his handshake was firm, his eyes clear and he appeared sprightly.

"I have read some of what you are writing," he told the journalists with a smile. "Some of it is accurate, some is not."

Offering Vance a cigarette, he commented: "Whoever smokes can help himself. Act in accordance with the Chairman's slogan, self-reliance. Use your own hands and clothe and feed yourself."

After that bow to the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, he recalled the hardships of the Communists' life in the 1930s after the Long March to Yenan.

"We found it necessary at that time for us to be able to feed and clothe our own army as well as many patriots and young people who numbered some tens of thousands and had come from various parts of the country," Teng said.

He told of living in caves, raising pigs and scratching crops out of poor land.

The message seemed clear: China will overcome its economic problems through determination and hard work.

Before his meeting with Teng, Vance held his third 2½-hour session with Foreign Minister Huang Hua. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Huang "made some points about normalization" of relations between Washington and Peking, but he refused to elaborate.

Huang was the highest-ranking Chinese official Vance saw prior to the meeting with Teng. Vance met Teng once before during a private visit to Peking in 1975.

There was still no indication whether Hua would receive Vance before the secretary leaves China on Thursday.

Vance, looking for a formula to better ties without casting Taiwan adrift, has been emphasizing the mutual interest of Peking and Washington in countering Soviet influence in such areas as Africa.

Defense to go after Priscilla

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Defense attorneys zeroed in on Priscilla Davis today after the blonde socialite identified her estranged husband as the "man in black" who wounded her and killed her lover, Stan Farr, in an August 1976 shooting spree.

Lawyers for Cullen Davis know they must discredit the state's star witness if they are to win an acquittal for the millionaire Fort Worth industrialist.

"Their only defense is to destroy me," Mrs. Davis, 36, said outside the courtroom. "But it doesn't matter if I was the biggest hooker, doper or what have you....it has absolutely nothing to do with what he did."

Davis, 43, is on trial for his life in the Aug. 2, 1976, slaying of his stepdaughter, Andrea, 12, the first of two to die in the midnight shootings at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth.

Mrs. Davis, shot once in the chest that night, told the jury Tuesday how she lay bleeding on the mansion floor and watch the gunman fire two fatal shots into the dying Farr.

"Stan just looked at me, closed his eyes, laid down his head and he died," she said, tears flowing down her cheeks and her ice-blond hair tumbling across her face.

Moments earlier, she said, the man in black and wearing a woman's shoulder-length black wig had stepped from a stairwell, said "hi" and "then he shot me."

Mrs. Davis told also of running through the darkness to a neighbor's home across the 1881-acre estate and crying:

"My name is Priscilla Davis. I live in the big white house in the middle of the field. Cullen has wounded me very badly. He's killing my children. He's killing everyone...please, he's trying to kill me."

She testified she was unaware at the time that Andrea's lifeless body lay crumpled in a basement utility room.

Since there were no witnesees to Andrea's death, the state intends to prove the bullet which killed the child was fired from the same gun used to kill Farr.

The tiny, 52-seat courtroom was packed and spectators lined up outside as Mrs. Davis began a tearful account of the story she told from a wheelchair at a bond hearing a year ago in Fort Worth.

The defense sought to show Mrs. Davis had been well-rehearsed by prosecutors before her appearance.

She conceded there was a nighttime "walk-through" or reenactment at the mansion with surviving principals of the shootings, but said she recalled no other such sessions.

The defense also delved into her two marriages prior to meeting Davis and brought out that she once lost custody of her children in a contested action.

During her testimony, Mrs. Davis said she and Farr returned from dinner and drinks with friends about midnight Aug. 2 and found the mansion's security system deactivated.

Nervously fingering the white lace blouse of her pink dress, Mrs. Davis said she first spotted what appeared to be bloody handprints on a wall and door leading to the basement.

"I hollered for Stan," she said recalling that Farr, with whom she shared the mansion, had ascended the stairs to the bedroom.

"I kept hollering, 'Stan come here, Stan come here'," she testified.

As she crossed to the kitchen, she said, all of a sudden, "Cullen" stepped out.

"When you say 'Cullen' ...?," Curry interrupted.

"Cullen Davis," she replied.

"...He had all black on and ... a woman's wig, a shiny wig ... straight, but with curls at the bottom. It had a part in it," she continued.

"Did he say anything?"

"He said, 'hi'."

"Then what did he do?"

"Then he shot me."

She pointed to the spot where the bullet entered her chest and exited through her back, an injury for which she said she is still receiving treatment.

Mrs. Davis said the man in black "had his hands together and they were covered with a black or dark garbage sack."

After the first shot, she said, she screamed, "Cullen shot me! Go back, Stan, go back! He's got a gun!"

With tears turning to sobs, she told how the gunman attempted to push through a door separating him from Farr.

"He stepped back and shot through the door . . . I heard Stan go like 'Uhh' and I knew he'd been hit."

Farr then lunged through the door, grabbed the gunman's wrist and the two wrestled until another shot felled the towering former basketball player, Mrs. Davis said.

Mandel awaiting word on status of pension

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gov. Marvin Mandel, convicted of mail fraud and racketeering along with five of his closest friends, is appealing his conviction and awaiting word on the status of his pension.

Convicted in U.S. District Court Tuesday on a single racketeering charge and 17 mail fraud counts, Mandel will remain governor under the state constitution until sentenced by Judge Robert Taylor on Oct. 7.

Lt. Gov. Blair Lee III would then become the state's 57th chief executive.

But the possibility has arisen of Mandel, 57, resigning earlier in order to qualify for his $12,500 pension. Both Mandel and Lee asked for a pension opinion earlier in the trial.

State Atty. Gen. Francis Burch says he is working up an opinion on the pension question, which may be announced sometime next week.

The Maryland state constitution says a governor upon sentencing "shall be suspended by operation of law without pay or benefits from the elective office."

Some officials in the state have contended that Mandel is entitled to the pension on grounds that he served a previous full term in office. Others assert that he must forfeit all benefits, pension included, if convicted of a crime. Burch has been silent on the controversy, pending completion of the opinion.

After he was found guilty, Mandel said he would spend the next few days gathering his thoughts. His lawyer, Arnold Weiner, is preparing an appeal.

"I want to say to the public that I have never defrauded the people on the state of anything," Mandel said at a posttrial news conference. "That's as true today as it was when I took office."

"Thank God for Marvin Mandel," added his wife, Jeanne. They were joined by Mandel's son Gary, 33, by a previous marriage, and his stepson Paul Dorsey, 12.

The completion of the 12- week Mandel trial creates a lull in Maryland's political trial mill.

Since 1972, Maryland has not been without an investigation or trial involving some major political figure.

The Mandel case took 13 days for the jury to reach a verdict. He and his five codefendants won acquittal on three mail fraud counts.

Convicted with Mandel on the same charges were his friends who, the jury concluded, paid him off in return for his efforts to get the 1972 General Assembly to legislate benefits for Marlboro Race Track, which the five then secretly owned.

New agriculture candidate says position no joke

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, says he wants to be Texas's new agriculture commissioner because of the "clowning" attitude of the appointed incumbent.

"Texas agriculture is not a laughing matter — it never was and never will be," the 40-year-old legislator told a news conference Tuesday in announcing that he was a candidate for the 1978 campaign.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, former aide to Gov. Dolph Briscoe, was named by Briscoe to be agriculture commissioner when Commissioner John C. White resigned to become deputy U.S. secretary of agriculture.

"Today we are witnessing the office operating by an appointee — a temporary commissioner of agriculture — who apparently believes that he is solving some of the state's problems by telling funny stories and reciting nursery rhymes," Hubenak said.

"Agriculture in Texas must not become a mistreated stepchild, and we need to institute new ideas and new programs to bolster the products and incomes of our farm and ranch populations," he said.

Hubenak said his primary source of income was his partnership in an accounting business in Rosenberg plus an interest in three different tracts of farm land with his family and others.

He said he was born and reared in Iowa Colony, Brazoria County, and went to school in Alvin, Alvin Junior College and the University of Houston.

Storm wreaks havoc

knocked down by lightning," said assistant pro Susan Holland.

Along East Wadley Avenue, just west of Ranchland Hills, the winds tore up roofs.

At least one dead tree was felled by the winds at 109 W. Wadley Ave. It apparently struck a mobile home and car and then landed between the two.

Except for the plywood covering, the roof of the Curtis Thurman house at 310 E. Wadley Ave. was ripped off. Other roofs and some cars along the avenue were damaged.

High winds turned over benches at Midland Country Club but apparently did no more damage.

"We got a little rain, not a whole lot, and high winds," said assistant pro Alan Pursley.

In the 2600 block of North Big Spring Street, the winds "moved all the trash cans out," reported Jane Wheat.

"Oh, we got lots of rain, sure, plenty of rain for a little while," she said. Lights were out for about an hour.

Outside of northeast Midland, the "weather" was relatively mild and gentle — for the most part.

"No, we didn't (get any rain), not a drop," said Pat Semple at the CA&L Pecan orchard about three miles south of the city limits and just off the Rankin Highway.

"We got a little bit of wind. There's some clouds. . . . Little bit of sunshine now," she said.

Northwest of Midland, at the Westview Estates, "We got about three sprinkles," said Bill Crawford.

Clouds were "completely around" but the sun was shining on Westview, he said.

South Africa tells U.S. it's not going nuclear

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Tuesday that South Africa has informed the United States "they do not have and do not intend to develop nuclear explosive devices for any purpose, either peaceful or as a weapon ..."

Reports that South Africa was on the verge of blasting its way into the world's exclusive nuclear club, first publicized by the Soviet news agency Tass on Aug. 8, have spread alarm among many nations. South Africa has indignantly denied the reports.

From American and French sources it was learned that suspicions about a potential South African nuclear test were aroused by American and Soviet satellite reconnaissance sightings of activity in the Kalahari desert region of South Africa, near the South West African (Namibian) border.

One French radio report claimed that atomic-test sites were spotted in the desert. American sources declined to be specific about what was sighted from space.

Carter made the first official public reference Tuesday to the suspicions raised in the Kalahari region, which for two weeks have preoccupied intelligence specialists in the United States, France, Britain, West Germany and other countries, in addition to the Soviet Union.

South Africa, he said, has informed the United States "that the Kalahari test site which has been in question is not designed for use to test nuclear explosives, and that no nuclear explosive test will be taken in South Africa now or in the future."

Carter first said, "We appreciate this commitment from South Africa," and then referred to it as "this information." Other administration sources said that the United States has "assurances without equivocation" that South Africa will not set off a nuclear test blast.

The United States, Carter said, nevertheless will "continue to monitor the situation there very closely," in addition to urging South Africa to place all its nuclear-power facilities under international safeguards, and to sign the 1963 nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Council approves plan for sharing revenue funds

a $61,200 request for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, $51,000 for the Human Relations Council and $34,500 for the city's share of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

More than 75 persons attended Tuesday's final public hearing on the 1977 revenue sharing plan and most of those addressing the council voiced some opposition to the plan outlined by Mayor Angelo during the Aug. 9 city council meeting.

No alterations were made in the plan which allocated $500,000 for a new central fire station in the 1700 block of West Wall Street, $125,000 for a new fire substation on the city's northwest side, $300,000 for a new golf pro shop and concession stand, $176,500 for softball park improvements, $144,000 for the first stage of a two-year program to provide a squad car for every Midland policeman, $148,000 for sanitation compactors and containers, $5,500 for portable bleachers at Cubs Stadium, $85,000 for a new fire truck, $5,000 for a new fire department radio console, $45,000 for improvements in Hogan Park road and $50,000 for a park on land near the intersection of Moss Avenue and Whitney Drive.

An additional $38,000 from the city's general funds would be allocated for golf paths around the existing facilities at Hogan Park.

Hospital bond passes handily

MONAHANS — Ward County voters Tuesday approved a $4 million bond issue to build a new hospital for the county.

The issue passed by an eight to one margin.

Of 1,684 votes cast, 1,474 were for the bond issue and only 204 were against.

The bonds will be used to finance a new hospital to replace one destroyed in a tornado April 19.

The new hospital will be constructed under the supervision and management of Hospital Affiliates International (HAI).

The hospital board of managers and HAI signed contracts late Tuesday for project management and interim management until the facility is constructed. HAI will also serve as advisory consultants after the new hospital opens.

The old hospital's roof was torn off by the twister and one wing was destroyed. Damages totaled an estimated $1.75 million.

Lee High football coach says mistake 'honest'

"personnel" Mailey was referring to was Acree, he said yes.

Acree was expected to be present at today's meeting in Big Spring and will probably bring along the KMID-TV tape which allegedly shows that the Rebels used blocking dummies during preseason practice.

Warren refused to speculate on the possible outcome of today's meeting, but was hopeful the committee would take into consideration the fact that Lee turned itself in.

Cox, after learning of the alleged violations last week, promptly contacted Bailey Marshall, the director of the UIL, and told him what had happened. Marshall complimented Cox for his actions.

Warren said, "We feel strongly that the fact that we have reported ourselves will make some kind of a difference in the decision. It's the one thing in Lee's favor right now.

"This meeting was called at our own request, and we brought the alleged violation to the attention of not only the state UIL, but the district committee as well."

If the 5-4A executive committee rules against Lee, the penalty could range from probation, a warning that would not prevent the Rebels from playing for a District 5-4A football championship, to a suspension which would prohibit the Rebels from playing any of their games, a drastic and highly unlikely decision.

A more likely possibility would be a suspension that would make Lee ineligible for the 5-4A title, but would not interfere with the playing of the regular season schedule.

School board meets in executive session

The Midland school board met in executive session Tuesday afternoon for approximately three hours to discuss a personnel matter and land acquisition.

Following the session, the board announced an 8:30 a.m. Saturday executive session, to be followed by an open board meeting.

"The meeting will be for the purpose of determining possible allegations concerning University Interscholastic League (UIL) violations," School Board President Johnny Warren said. "You mean possible UIL violations," corrected board member Joe Dominey.

The possible violations refer to an incident last week involving the Lee High School football team.

The board also agreed during the executive session to authorize the firm of Neuhardt and Babb to undertake the necessary plans for construction of a vocational-technical unit for the Midland High School campus. The unit would provide space for the classes now housed at North Elementary. Action was taken formally in open board meeting.

Supt. Dr. James H. Mailey was authorized to proceed with the sale of the North Elementary property on some type of bid basis.

The board entered into an agreement with the University of Texas of the Permian Basin for the university to provide an unfurnished mobile unit. The unit will be used by Midland Independent School District as a mobile classroom and teaching laboratory at Bowie Elementary School.

In other business a bid of $6,680 was accepted from Xerox Corp. of Midland for reproduction paper. Other bids included $7,880 from Nationwide Papers of Arlington and $6,600 from Graham Paper of Lubbock.

The $6,600 bid was not accepted because it did not meet specifications. The bid was for number four grade paper, and the bid request specified number two.

The board also approved the final amended budget for the 1976-77 school year.

Lightning believed cause of numerous area fires

Midland firemen were kept busy Tuesday afternoon and night responding to fires believed caused by lightning.

Lightning was believed to be the cause of a fire that destroyed two and one-half sections of pasture eight miles north of Midland on the Lamesa Highway Tuesday afternoon.

Six units were called to the blaze, where it took 5,000 gallons of water to extinguish the blaze.

The Pearl Bradshaw residence at 2710 Delano Ave. sustained heavy damage to its roof and side after lightning struck it about 11 p.m. Tuesday, according to reports. There was no other damage report at that house, firemen said.

MAN INJURED

A 22-year-old Midland man was listed in satisfactory condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital after he was injured in a car-motorcycle accident about 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Joe Deon Latimer of 3608 W. Michigan Ave. was injured when the motorcycle he was riding and a car driven by Jean Evridge Eads, 34, of Rt. 4, Box 16-A-15 collided on the parking lot of the M-System food store, 400 Midland Drive, according to reports.

Police said Latimer was northbound and Eads was eastbound on the parking lot when the mishap occurred.

HOUSE BURGLARIZED

A typewriter, shotgun, costume jewelry and two packages of cigarettes valued at a total of $331 were taken from the George Roe residence, 1723 E. Oak Ave. between 8:30 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Police said entry to the house was gained by breaking a sliding glass door. The items were taken from the master bedroom, according to police.

New cars to cost more, auto manufacturer says

DETROIT (AP) — Prices on General Motors' new cars are going up an average $405 a vehicle this fall, according to the nation's largest automaker.

The increase — near six per cent from a comparably equipped 1977 car — means the suggested manufacturers' price of a 1978 GM car, including options, will climb to an estimated $7,200.

That price does not include taxes or discounts that dealers usually offer buyers.

GM, which builds more than half the cars produced in the country, announced Tuesday that base prices on its new cars are going up $242, or 4.6 per cent, on the average, from 1977.

Including added-cost options, GM estimates its average 1978 car will carry a price that is up $387, or 5.7 per cent, over a comparable 1977 car.

On top of that, shipping charges are being raised an average $18, which raises the per unit increase to $405.

GM previously indicated it might raise car prices by up to six per cent, on the average, because of increased costs for materials and labor, and despite record profits.

GM, the industry's pricing leader because of its size, traditionally is the first domestic automaker to set prices for the new model year, which officially begins Oct. 1.

Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. have said earlier that they too were considering six per cent price increases.

Last year, GM raised prices on 1977 models by an average $338, or 5.9 per cent.

"The price increases for 1978 are substantially less than increases in the cost of raw materials and labor which occurred during the past year," GM said in a prepared statement.

True.

College received more income than expected

Midland College trustees Tuesday learned the college received $226,228 more income than was expected during the 1976-77 fiscal year.

The college spent $19,854 more than previously budgeted, business manager Bob Phillips told the trustees at a Tuesday afternoon meeting.

The trustees agreed to put $200,000 of the surplus into the construction fund to help pay for new construction on campus.

Most of the increase in income, Phillips said, came from state contingency funds to compensate the college for enrollment increases. More funds were available than previously budgeted.

Also Tuesday, the trustees agreed to renew the college's contract for $2,800 with the Human Relations Council. College President Dr. Al G. Langford said the council provides numerous services, including helping establish communication with minority communities.

The board agreed to allow the City of Midland Parks and Recreation Department free use of the physical education building, on a space-available basis, for its league basketball games.

In other action, the trustees approved hiring of 10 persons and formally accepted the resignation of former student activities director Gary Askins.

A committee was appointed by the trustees to meet with city officials concerning possible purchase by the college of a 46-acre tract north of the campus. That land is owned by the City of Midland.

Another committee was appointed to consider names of possible new Midland College Foundation board members. The foundation board expects to expand its membership from 11 to 15 members at its next meeting, Langford said.

Langford told the trustees the occupational-technical building expansion is expected to be ready for classroom use today and for laboratory use by Aug. 30.

Langford said the fine arts building is expected to be ready for limited use by the spring semester. He also said construction is speeding up on Chaparral Center, and that "a complete turnaround" has been achieved from past construction problems on the center.

Bell opens defense today

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., under fire from one former high executive and the family of another, opens it defense today of charges leveled in a $29 million damage suit.

The suit was brought by fired Bell executive James H. Ashley and the family of T. O. Gravitt, who was Bell's top Texas official when he committed suicide in October 1974 during an internal company investigation.

The plaintiffs rested their case Tuesday afternoon after 11 days of testimony from 22 witnesses and 21 sworn depositions collected since the suit was filed 33 months ago in state court.

Most of the allegations against Bell stem from a suicide message and pages of attached notes which Gravitt left in the study of his Dallas home when he killed himself Oct. 17, 1974.

The suit alleges that Gravitt was hounded to his suicide and Ashley wrongfully fired as a result of the company probe.

The Gravitt notes accused Bell of operating illegal political "slush funds," engaging in unfair rate-fixing tactics and allowing company executives to spend money wastefully on themselves.

Bell, in a counterclaim in the suit, charges Gravitt and Ashley defrauded the company of about $30,000, mostly by filing false travel and expense vouchers.

Ashley and the Gravitt family claim the company investigation destroyed the two executives' reputations and was designed to drive them out of the Bell power structure because they were critical of certain practices.

Bell attorney Hubert Green, in his opening argument to the 10-man, two-woman jury more than two weeks ago, warned there would be a lot of "mudslinging" in the case.

He said the company maintains it has the right to investigate its employes.

Ashley was suspended from his $55,000-a-year job in San Antonio on Oct. 9, 1974, by an official who told him one of the reasons for the action was alleged sexual relations with female Bell employes. He was fired Oct. 31, 1974.

The plaintiffs contend Gravitt was driven to insanity and suicide by the investigation which Bell security agents questioned employes about alleged wrongdoing by Gravitt and Ashley, including whether they ever had sex with them.

But a psychiatrist, testifying out of order earlier this week for Bell, said Gravitt was not insane and that the asking of questions would not have bothered him "had he been completely innocent."

Earlier, a psychiatrist testified for the plaintiffs that the Bell probe drove Gravitt to insanity and suicide.

Andrews plans time capsule

ANDREWS — The people of Andrews are leaving a message for that city's residents 100 years from now — a message in the form of a time capsule.

The time capsule is scheduled to be buried Sunday in the sidewalk in front of the Chamber of Commerce building, '76 House, at the dedication of that building.

The dedication will begin with a 12:30 p.m. barbecue catered by the Mesquite Burners at the Andrews Civic Center.

The time capsule is expected to include items such as copies of the current city, county and school budgets, a Bicentennial flag and $300 in checks from Andrews' two banks and one savings and loan association. In a hundred years, at 5¼ per cent interest, compounded quarterly, the value of that $300 will he $55,250.

Tickets to the barbecue are $2.50 each.

Sound opposition!

The American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) has joined the ranks of those expressing dissatisfaction with the comprehensive energy bill passed by the House shortly before starting its month's summer recess.

Allan Grant, AFBF president, said that the bill has three strikes against it.

He explained that if enacted, the bill will increase consumer prices, raise production costs and retain incentive-killing controls.

This is exactly what the petroleum industry and other groups and individuals have said about the bill from the time it first was proposed. They haven't changed their minds concerning it. In fact, most of them now are saying the legislation is much worse than they had thought in the beginning.

The opposition voiced by the farm group, a strong organization in itself, certainly strengthens the stand of the forces opposing the energy bill.

The bill (H.R. 8444) will be considered by the Senate when it reconvenes on September 6. And therein lies the last remaining hope to kill or alter the measure.

"Specifically, Farm Bureau opposes the crude oil and equalization tax provisions as approved by the House," Grant said. "This tax would substantially raise the cost of crude oil products without providing needed price incentives for future exploration for oil reserves."

He explained further that the proposal to pay a part of this tax to consumers represents a back-door approach to redistributing the wealth of the country.

Grant also said that Farm Bureau is disappointed that the energy bill does not provide for decontrol of natural gas prices which "we believe is essential to encourage production of more natural gas."

Farm Bureau, he said, opposes any proposal to increase the federal gasoline tax unless the proceeds of such tax are earmarked specifically for the Highway Trust Fund.

The bureau is due a resounding vote of thanks for its sound position on this specific provision.

The bureau chief continued by making it known that the bureau also opposes efforts to bail out the Social Security Trust Funds through imposition of crude oil taxes.

"While we object to three key issues in the bill," he said, "there are a number of other features that move in the direction of federal government intervention in the energy field."

As an example, he cited the failure of the bill to specify the allocation of available energy supplies through the market system — a system which he said is not only the best allocator but one which also provides the incentives necessary to stimulate increased exploration and development of oil and gas fields.

In other words, the legislation continues and expands the present maze of government price controls and regulations on oil and gas, a concept strongly opposed by Farm Bureau — and others with a belief in and for free enterprise.

A good weed crop

It's somewhat strange, but weeds seem to do well here despite the unusually dry weather.

This particularly is true in the central business district where weeds grow tall in and around some vacant lots, in alleys and along curbs and sidewalks.

And, in a number of locations, they haven't been bothered by hoes, rakes,other cutting implements, or by pulling. The healthy, undisturbed plants have become somewhat unsightly in certain areas.

A number of vacant lots in the residential areas also have excellent stands of weeds and wild grass, some of the weeds having attained championship contender heights. Tall weeds on corner lots in some cases have created traffic hazards.

Right now would be a mighty good time to "harvest" the tall weed crop in the Tall City. How about it?

ASIA MEMO:

U.S. correspondents are needed in Peking

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

Edward Neilan

It is evident that the process of normalization of relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China is not proceeding as rapidly as many Americans had expected.

It is very unlikely that there will be much progress on bilateral issues during Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's trip to Peking.

Even the much-discussed frozen assets question, on which some movement had been noted, seems stalled; the inertia is evenly divided between both governments.

Given the political and public opinion realities in the United States, the wait-and-see and cautious approach at this time is the course most easily supported.

But while the China issue does not stir the same sense of urgency in Washington which the Middle East, energy, welfare, the Panama Canal, Africa and Bert Lance's bank account create, we must not lose sight of the importance of China specifically and Asia generally in the future of the world.

Economic power is shifting away from Europe and a new Pacific Era is imminent. China will be a main factor in that era, whether we have an embassy in Peking or not.

An immediate first step which could both serve the cause of adding light to the China debate and stimulating the process of normalization would be a new American push to base news correspondents in Peking.

It is clear that we are not going to win concessions from Peking on the issue of Taiwan's future security. And since the economic and security well-being of Taiwan is something in our interest to preserve, the Peking-Washington talks are bogged down.

The Chinese have reason to be wary of the basing of American newsmen in their capital. There is the risk, from Peking's side, that probing American newsmen would look under some carpets and perhaps even gain interviews with some Chinese dissidents, of which there are admittedly many. A half-dozen American reporters based in Peking could provide some commentary on how China is living up to President Jimmy Carter's vision of human rights.

Whenever I bring up this matter of basing correspondents in Peking at a seminar or discussion, it is criticized roundly by some academics who belittle the role of the press in being able to extract much that is meaningful from a Communist capital.

The point is that having U.S. newsmen based in Moscow has been a better deal than not having them based there; the same would be true of having our reporters based in Peking.

I happen to think that American reporters based in Peking would contribute to a better understanding of what is going on in China for American readers. Whether the picture were sunny or cloudy, the reporting would help diminish some of the cliches and illusions which form the basis of our perceptions of China today.

There is the strong possibility that China might feel it was giving too much; that if the United States got newsmen through the Peking gates on a permanent basis, then there would be less enthusiasm for going all the way toward full diplomatic recognition.

The free flow of information is what this country is all about.

The subcommittee on Future Foreign Policy Research and Development of the Committee on International Relations recently held informative hearings on "United States-Soviet Union-China: The Great Power Triangle."

If that is the true "power triangle" for the future, then we ought to have some journalists in the third corner as soon as possible. Pushing for the opening of U.S. news bureaus in Peking would be a worthy goal for Vance to pursue during his trip.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Bulgarian gets VIP treatment

BY JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — For 25 years, the State Dept. has been arbitrarily blocking selected Communists from entering the United States by invoking a law from the Red Scare days of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

The McCarran Act, passed in 1952, established nearly 30 categories of people who could not visit the United States unless they were recommended for visa waivers by the State Dept.. Among the undesirables were prostitutes, polygamists, paupers and advocates of the "international doctrines of world communism."

Now, thanks to a recent bill passed by Congress, the McCarran Act will soon be less restrictive. Over the years, nevertheless, the law has often been selectively applied. Out of some 19,000 waiver applications last year, for example, only about a thousand were denied.

During the Richard Nixon-Henry Kissinger era, Communist leaders from Western Europe were considered anathema, because official visits to the United States would give them credibility at home. In 1975, for instance, a prominent Italian Communist, Sergio Segre, was invited to speak at the New York Council on Foreign Relations. The waiver was denied and the conference had to be cancelled.

Communists who were critical of U.S. allies were also considered verboten by the Nixon administration. One such case involved a prominent British citizen, Carmel Budiardjo, who wanted to lecture in the United States on human rights violations in Indonesia. Under pressure from the Indonesian government, the State Dept. temporarily withheld her visa on the grounds that she had previously lied about being a Communist from 1946 to 1948.

In contrast, Communists who have the State Dept. seal of approval are speedily granted visa waivers and are ushered in on a red carpet.

Take Vulkan Shopov, chief of agriculture for the Bulgarian Communist party. As an Eastern European Communist, in an era of detente, he is ardently courted by U.S. diplomats.

Shopov came to the United States in June at the invitation of the State Dept.. The U.S. taxpayers footed the bill for his month-long visit, including travel expenses to and from Bulgaria.

In a May 9 cable to the State Dept., the U.S. ambassador in Sofia, Martin Herz, was ecstatic about Shopov's pending tour. "Embassy strongly believes (Shopov) must be accorded VIP status as far as (expenses) and general treatment is concerned," exclaimed Herz.

The Communist leader, cabled the ambassador, should be taken to a "Southeastern agricultural region, including visit to Atlanta or other Southern city"; the Great Plains wheat, corn and soybean region; and the Western states.

In general, wrote Herz, Shopov "would like to see most advanced forms of American agricultural technology. He has said he expects to work hard during the visit."

Despite the distinguished Bulgarian's announced intention to keep his nose to the grindstone, Herz suggested some lavish entertainment for the visitor:

"He would appreciate chance to see modern American dance (though we suspect anything too avant-garde would not go down well; believe American Ballet Theater, Alvin Ailey or Eliot Feld would be just about right), Broadway show (suggest, if possible, 'A Chorus Line' or 'Bubbling Brown Sugar'). Opera, or orchestral concerts. Shopov not interested in jazz or rock."

The ambassador added a "'special note." In his talks with Shopov, wrote Herz, the Bulgarian made a "special point of saying he does not want to bump into correspondents from (Radio Free Europe) while in U.S., and does not wish to give interview to (Voice of America) ... He asked that interpreter not be 'political immigrant'..."

Shopov had been assured, the ambassador stated, "that interpreter would be selected in such fashion as to assure there would be absolutely no political embarrassment."

When he finally arrived in the United States, Shopov was taken to the Smithsonian, the Kennedy Center, colonial Williamsburg, Va., and to other spots around the country.

But the scholarly Shopov, a State Dept. official told us, "squeezed in" the cultural sights only when he had spare time. The Bulgarian decided to forego Disneyland, which "disappointed" State Dept. officials.

Footnote: While Communists need waivers to visit the United States, leaders of repressive right-wing regimes such as Chile, South Korea and Argentina, can come and go as they wish.

WATCH ON WASTE: The government gives out awards for outstanding performances by employees, which translate into higher salaries and rapid promotions. At the Patent and Trademark Office, however, a startling 75 per cent of its 2,955 workers received such awards in 1976. The rest of the Commerce Dept. gave awards to a mere 39 per cent of its workers. "It's not a giveaway," a spokesman insisted, "it really is hard-earned."

Red Chinese defector speaks out against 'system'

TAIPEI — The way Fan Yuan-yen, the Chinese Communist pilot who recently defected to Taiwan, tells it, the Peking regime eventually will attempt to "liberate" Taiwain by force, but only after the United States establishes diplomatic relations with Peking.

Fan, an air force squadron commander who became disillusioned with life in Red China, told this correspondent, through an interpreter, that Peking's strategy is to achieve diplomatic recognition by the United States and then harass Taiwan until an invasion is feasible.

That moment will come, Fan said, when the Communists, strangthened by their U.S. ties, can deploy troops from the Soviet border to the coast opposite Taiwan and pose an invasion threat.

If Taiwan resists, Fan declared in the interview, the United States would be powerless to intervene in the consequent war. "The U.S.," he said through the interpreter, "would have no say in the internal affairs of the one Chinese (Peking) government. If the U.S. disapproved of such an invasion, what could it do?

"If the U.S. protested, the Communist government would mobilize its propaganda apparatus and tell the world that the U.S. was interfering in her internal affairs. Even the Soviet Union would be forced to condemn the U.S. for that."

Fan was based at Tsinkiang Airbase about 200 miles west of Taipei, across the Taiwan Straits. He said there is only a small MIG-19 force there now, and that the Communist military deployment facing Taiwan is defensive.

For 27 years, he said, the People's Republic of China has claimed it would one day liberate Taiwain by force. But, he added, the Peking regime's military capability is overrated. Equipment and facilities are poor, he said, and morale low in the armed forces.

His own military superiors told him that Taiwan's planes performed far better than the MIG-19s and MIG-21s, though are far outnumbered by the Communist air force.

Still, Fan explained, Communist ground and air forces regularly engage in invasion exercises, and last year increased forces from batallion to division strength. Since his defection to Taiwan, he has recommended that its military increase anti-air and anti-submarine capability. The Chinese Communist submarine fleet, which could blockade the Taiwain Straits, numbers 65 and is expanding, Fan said.

The Chinese Communist government has been preoccupied with internal political squabbling, the Cultural Revolution and the elimination of the "Gang of Four," Fan said, to the great detriment of building military strength. Even military officers such as himself had to spend many hours educating and re-educating themselves on the latest ideological twists, Fan explained.

But he cautions that once the P.R.C. gets "settled down," and achieves diplomatic recognition from the United States, "the freedom and security of Taiwain will go down the drain." Moreover, Fan said, the Peking regime will step up the number of agents it sends to the United States under the guise of cultural or scientific exchange, for purposes of "instigating people."

Fan said he was told by superiors that such subversion must be plotted over a long period of time, and that Chairman Mao was often quoted to him as saying: "When ping-pong affair starts, even though ping-pong is such a small ball, it can activate turning of the earth."

The great weaknesses of Communist China, Fan declared, are its inability to supply people sufficient food, the "slackness" in factory production, the necessity to frequently use the military to restore control in various areas and the poor treatment given retired military personnel.

He said that Teng Hsiao-p'eng, at an earlier time, planned to pacify disgruntled military veterans with jobs and benefits, but was purged before the program got started. Now, according to Fan, with Teng restored to a position of power, he might try to remedy the veterans' situation which has grown quite serious.

At best, Fan said, the P.R.C. only achieves "superficial" order in its society through political purges and executions.

The basic problems of creating a better life, he argues, are not being solved, and people are discontented. There is the potential of an uprising against the regime, he claims, but it must be organized, and there are no signs of this kind of organization. It will only come, he explained, when people realize that the real fight is not over which faction is correct, but against a wrong system.

Though Fan stated that the P.R.C. military is overrated, he said the Peking rulers would have sent it into action against the United States if American forces had ever tried a large-scale invasion of North Vietnam during that war. Any such attempt to capture Hanoi, he explained, would have been considered a threat to the P.R.C. because of its closeness to that capital.

Fan has a wife and three children in Communnist China. Since his startling arrival in Taiwan, he has said several times that he would like Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to ask Peking officials to allow Fan's family to join him in Taiwan.

"President Carter advocates human rights," Fan said through the interpreter. "I have faith that Mr. Vance will bring this out when he is in Peking. How the P.R.C. responds to my request will show the world what they think of U.S. advocacy of human rights."

Golden Gate Bridge director resisting erection of barrier

By WILLIAM ENDICOTT
The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Since it was opened in 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge has gained a reputation for holding an almost mystical attraction for people bent on killing themselves.

Among the handful who have jumped from the bridge and miraculously survived, one later told an interviewer it was "the only stylish way to go." And another said there was "a kind of form to it, a certain grace and beauty."

But the bridge district's 18-member board of directors for years has resisted erecting suicide barriers on the picturesque span, which extends across the bay from San Francisco to Marin County, first saying barriers would disturb the aesthetics of the bridge and later admitting much of the reason was financial.

It now appears, however, that the directors are about to change their minds, partially because of pressure from suicide prevention groups in San Francisco but also because statistics show the age for bridge jumpers rapidly decreasing.

A 15-year-old boy was among last year's suicides. The parents of a 19-year-old who leaped to his death are suing the district for $1 million, charging negligence. And the average age of jumpers now is 26, compared with an average of 47 in the 1950s.

Earlier this month, the directors asked their engineering staff for a report within 90 days on the feasibility of replacing the existing bridge railing, which is 42 inches high, with an 8-foot-fence equipped with an alarm system.

"I don't like to use the word barrier," said San Francisco Supervisor John L. Molinari, who also sits on the bridge board and who, as head of the district's suicide prevention committee, has opposed barriers in the past. "People think that's something you can't see through, I prefer to call it a deterrent."

Molinari said he had a change of heart about the need for "deterrents" because of the declining age level of jumpers and because the bridge railing needs replacing anyway. "It's getting badly corroded," he said.

Ironically, despite the legend of the bridge as a sort of suicide shrine, the 620 people who are known to have killed themselves by jumping off the bridge represent only 3 per cent of the total suicides in the San Francisco Bay area over the past 40 years.

But the difference, according to proponents of barriers, is that the bridge suicides could have been prevented.

"It's so readily available," said Richard H. Seiden, a professor of Behavioral Science at University of California Berkeley who has made a study of bridge suicides. "It's a highly lethal means for impulsive activity. Getting a gun or pills is much more difficult.

Seiden also cited the "mystique and glamor and publicity surrounding the bridge. "People jump off the Bay Bridge (between San Francisco and Oakland)," he said. "There's been a couple of hundred of them, but you probably never read about them. There's tremendous publicity about suicides off the Golden Gate.

Unions, groups push for stricter controls

By MERRILL HARTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is under increasing pressure from union and consumer groups to impose strict controls on a pest-control substance suspected of causing sterility in men and cancer in animals.

But a major manufacturer of the substance, DBCP, says its own safety guidelines are adequate.

Two federal agencies are considering requests for new controls on the chemical, and a spokesman says one agency was considering stepping in before it was asked to do so.

Concern over the health effects of the compound, known as dibromochloropropane, was heightened this month by evidence of sterility in a dozen workers who handled the substance at Dow Chemical Co.'s Magnolia, Ark., plant.

Dow suspended production Aug. 11 after tests found the men produced little or no sperm.

In another case, 10 men who worked with the chemical at an Occidental Chemical Co. plant in Lathrop, Calif., were found to be either totally sterile or to have extremely low sperm counts.

In addition, a recent National Cancer Institute study linked the pesticide to cancer in rats and mice.

On Tuesday, the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union asked the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to issue emergency temporary DBCP standards.

The union is seeking orders limiting worker exposure to DBCP, special sterility tests for workers who used the substance and continued monitoring of exposure levels in work areas.

The second request for government action came from the Health Research Group. The organization, associated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader, petitioned the Environmental Protection Agency for an emergency suspension of registrationfor all pesticides containing DBCP.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Dow defended the safety levels it established for the substance, developed to control worms and other soil pests.

But the spokesman said workers who became sterile after handling the pesticide apparently were exposed to it within the company's safety levels. These limits were based on tests conducted more than 20 years ago showing DBCP could make animals sterile, Dow said.

An OSHA spokesman said the agency was considering an emergency standard for the pesticide even before the union filed its petition. OSHA issued a so-called notice and alert about DBCP on Aug. 16 in which it asked industry to take "appropriate action to protect employes" while the problem was being studied.

The principal manufacturers of DBCP include Dow, which markets the pesticide as Fumazone; Shell Oil Co., which calls it Nemagon Soil Fumigant; and Occidental, which makes DBCP products called CHA-KEM-CO, Garden Fume and Green Light. About 30 million pounds of the chemical are produced each year.

Californians find DBCP in wide use

By PETER H. KING

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tons of the widely used pesticide DBCP are buried in California soil. Much more is stored in warehouses and railroad cars, and farm experts are hunting for a way to gather and dispose of those stores.

The chemical DBCP — dibromochloropropane — was banned by the state this month after tests revealed that 10 workers regularly exposed to it at an Occidental Chemical Corp. plant at Lathrop, 75 miles east of here, were sterile or had almost non-existent sperm counts.

In Magnolia, Ark., 12 of 14 workers who had handled DBCP at Dow Chemical Co.'s plant there were found to produce few or no sperm, and test animals injected with DBCP contracted cancer.

More than 800,000 pounds of DBCP is used by California farmers every year, said Bill Betts, who supervises the state Department of Food and Agriculture's pesticide use enforcement program. The chemical is planted in the soil to ward off crop-destroying worms.

Betts said on Tuesday that no farmers reported problems with sterility after using the chemical. "It diffuses in the soil. We don't know of any evidenie at all of danger to the consumer," he said.

"A person who is working in the formulating plant is exposed eight hours a day. A user wouldn't use it anywhere near that long."

Betts said on Tuesday that the product is "spread around pretty well" throughout the state — stored on farms and in warehouses, tanks and train cars.

"You just can't take it out to a dump or a disposal site," he said. "If it's not going to be used any more, somebody is going to have to find another way to get rid of it. And it's very unlikely it will be used in California again."

William Steffan, head of the Occupational Health Branch of the California Department of Health, suggested the chemical should be placed in Class I dumps, which are used to store hazardous substances, or returned to the manufacturers to have them "transfer it into another chemical form."

Lou Holtz' grid philosophy sounds contradictory

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Lou Holtz' offensive philosophy sounds contradictory: "We will play a wide-open conservative game."

But, read on.

"People chuckle at that, but it's really true," said Holtz, who is preparing for his first year as head football coach at the University of Arkansas. "We will throw it from our end zone, but we know what we're doing."

Holtz, head coach at William and Mary for three years and North Carolina State for four years before arriving at Arkansas via the New York Jets, says he learned a valuable lesson his second year in coaching.

"I lost a football game because we were sitting on a lead deep in our territory, a 10-point lead, and trying to run the clock out. Gol-durned if we didn't fumble it...twice. I think we threw 33 passes that day and nobody even deflected one. That's what's ridiculous. If people know you may throw it out of the end zone, it makes it a little easier to run it out of there."

Arkansas' passing attack was awful last year. The Razorbacks completed 38 of 104 passes while compiling a 5-5-1 record.

Holtz says the passing game is difficult to develop and that the Razorbacks didn't progress in that area as fast as he would have liked during spring practice.

"One reason was the protection," he said. "All of sudden your linemen have got to learn to protect the passer which is completely contrary to everything they have been taught in the running game. You can forget about developing a passing game until you learn to protect. Halfway through the spring we could finally start getting a pass off.

"For the linemen, it's a passive type of thing. Then you've got to teach the receivers to learn to catch the ball coming out of a tunnel. It's not like you just run out there and catch the ball. You don't see the quarterback. All of a sudden you just see the ball shooting out of the linemen, so to speak.

"The receivers have to catch it in a crowd, find the open areas, slide there, run the right route. Then you have to get the quarterbacks to get the proper reads against all the different coverages.

"It's a sequence thing, but you can't get those other things until you develop the pass protection. It might not take as long as what it should, but it's taken us longer than what we want it to take."

Holtz says he has great confidence in quarterback Ron Calcagni, who played only five complete games last season because of injuries.

"He's going to make a lot of great plays because of his ability, because of his approach to the game," Holtz said. "The big thing Ron has to do for us to be successful, he has to eliminate the bad play. By trying to make the great plays consistently, which nobody is going to do, he sometimes makes the bad play."

Robert Farrell, who suffered a broken collarbone last year, established himself during the spring as one of the Razorbacks' receivers. At 6-foot-5, he is an excellent target. Holtz is still looking for another wide receiver.

He is high on tight end Charles Clay, 6-foot-1, 205. "Clay may be the finest athlete I've ever coached. He's not big enough, but he sure is good enough. He hasn't really played up to his potential but if he does he will be as fine a tight end as there is in the conference."

The offensive line is shy of experience, but Holtz is expecting big things from senior guard Leotis Harris and senior tackle Steve Heim.

Holtz says the question marks on defense are depth and defensive end, where Arkansas is trying to replace Johnnie Meadors and Dennis Winston. "I have great confidence in our defense if they'll stay healthy," he said.

ADDRESSES AMERICAN LEGION — Secretary of Energy James R. Schlesinger addressed the annual convention of the American Legion in Denver, saying energy conservation is imperative. He told the 4,500 members assembled, that only recently has the country realized the magnitude of the energy problem, and praised the Legion for its support of President Carter's energy proposals. West Texas areas draw discovery, pool wells

Nolan County gained a King sand pay opener and a reentry test was slated. A Fisher County wildcat pumped oil and water, and extenders finaled in Mitchell and Edwards sectors. James K. Anderson, Inc., of Dallas, has completed No. 1 Rotan as a King sand pay opener in the Divide field of Nolan, ½ mile northwest of Nolan townsite. The well had a 24-hour pumping potential of 46 barrels of 43-gravity oil and 21 barrels of water, producing through perforations at 4,127-4,140 feet, following treatment with 750 gallons of acid and 250 gallons of fracture fluid, plus 5,000 pounds of sand. Total depth is 4,146 feet, and 4½-inch casing was set on bottom. It is 1,588 feet from north and 717 feet from east lines of section 311, block 64, H&TC survey.

Fisher-Webb, Inc., Abilene, filed application to reenter and clean out to wildcat depth of 3,450 feet for tests at No. 2 Kinard, Nolan failure, three miles northeast of Blackwell.

Originally drilled by Superior Oil Co. as No. 2-30 Kinard, it is a former producer in the Blackwell, North (Ellenburger) field, and it became depleted in 1969.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 30, block Z, T&P survey.

FISHER PROJECT

Petroleum Corp. of Texas, operating from Breckenridge, was making production tests in the Noodle Creek at No. 6 Steele, Fisher wildcat, eight miles southwest of Hamlin.

The well pumped seven barrels of oil and 48 barrels of water in four hours, through perforations at 2,922-2,925 feet, following 400 gallons of acid on the pay section. Testing continued.

Drilled to 3,067 feet, it spots 990 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 210, block 1, BB&C survey, eight miles southwest of Hamlin and surrounded by Flippen production 2 in the Royston pool area.

MITCHELL EXTENDER

The Mitchell part of the Jameson, North (Strawn) pool gained a ⅜-mile northwest extension with completion of WES-TEX Drilling Co. No. 2 M. C. Hendry, four miles north of Silver.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 30 barrels of 43-gravity oil and nine barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,000-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 6,172-6,204 feet. Treatment was with 1,000 gallons of acid, plus 60,000 gallons of fluid and 88,000 pounds of fracture sand.

Location is 2,173 feet from south and 1,787 feet from east lines of section 2, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

CANYON WELL

Canyon gas production was extended 2¼ miles southeast in the Edwards part of the Sawyer field, with completion by Amoco miles Production Co. of its No. 5 H&C Peterson, 10 miles northeast of Rocksprings.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 162,000 cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 1,884-2,219 feet, after acidizing with 4,000 gallons.

It is 1,650 feet from northwest and 800 feet from southwest lines of section 25, T&NO survey, abstract 288.

Amoco asserts error started investigation

CHICAGO — Substantial discrepancies and conflicts in Federal Energy Administration calculations were the major cause of last winter's middle distillate pricing "triggerings" in the North Central region, according to an Amoco Oil Co. official.

In Aug. 2 testimony before the FEA, Amoco general manager of marketing John Hamilton asserted that the 2 FEA index, using incorrect data, had "triggered" the need for a government pricing investigation.

A "substantial discrepancy," said Hamilton, seemed to arise from FEA's mistaken assumption that refinery and retailer middle distillate oil sales to residents represented a 55-45 per cent split. "It is clear that refinery sales in the residential category do not exceed 10 per cent of the total residential sales."

Because the resulting error amounted to .4 cents per gallon, Hamilton said that the monitoring system had incorrectly signaled an evasion of the pricing index.

Citing this and other conflicts, Hamillon questioned why there had been so little FEA response to Amoco's expressed concern. "Since July 11 our representatives have repeatedly urged the Price Analysis Division, Office of Oil and Gas Analysis to review its published data. That office has yet to justify what appears to be a conflict in FEA data."

Hamilton said that if the FEA were to clear up this one point, "we believe it would demonstrate conclusively that the FEA index was not triggered in the North Central Region and that there is no need for this kind of device to monitor the industry's 2 prices in a free market."

Two test sites set

Pool sites have been staked in Ward and Sterling areas.

Gulf Oil Corp. will drill No. 4 T. B. Pruett GU, et al, as a 1¼-mile northwest outpost to the one-well Soda Lake (Fusselman) gas field of Northwest Ward.

It is slated to 19,800 feet, and spots 1,320 feet from southeast and 1,980 feet from southwest lines of section 31, block 1, W&NW survey, 11 miles northwest of Barstow.

The discovery, Gulf No. 1 Pruett, finaled in March for a calculated, absolute open flow of 46.8 million cubic feet of dry gas daily, through perforations at 19,000-19,198 feet.

Marathon Oil Co. will drill No. 2-28 R. T. Foster, a link test in a Southeast extension area of the Big Salute (Canyon) field of Sterling.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 28, block 31, T-5-S, T&P survey, 12 miles southwest of Sterling City. Contract depth is 8,000 feet.

Nuclear plant cost inflates

HOUSTON (AP) — The cost of the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City has been boosted to $1.3 billion because of inflation and regulatory requirements.

An early projected cost of $1.126 billion had risen to $1.216 by the time an environmental report was completed in 1974, Jim Parsons, a Houston Lighting & Power Co. spokesman, said Tuesday.

He said revision to $1.3 billion is the first major change in the projections since the final stages of planning.

"Project members reviewed the costs a month or so ago and came up with what is, in effect, an updating of the projected costs as result of inflation and regulatory requirements," Parsons said.

The 2.5 million kilowatt plant is a joint project of Houston Lighting & Power, Central Power & Light of Corpus Christi and the cities of San Antonio and Austin.

The first of two generating units is scheduled to be in operation by late 1980, the second by early 1982.

Austin has 16 per cent interest in the project, Houston Lighting 30.8 per cent, Central Power 25.2, and San Antonio 28 per cent.

Pogo hires K. R. Joynt

HOUSTON — Kenneth R. Joynt, a former resident of Kermit, will join Pogo Producing Co. Sept. 1 as senior vice president — operations, as well as a member of the board of directors.

Joynt, who is retiring as general manager of the Houston exploration and producing division of Mobil Oil Corp. is a graduate of Missouri School of Mines. He began work with Mobil in Kermit, first as a roughneck and then in a variety of production department positions in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Louisiana, as well as Texas. He was named production manager, vice president and director of Mobil Oil Canada, Ltd., in 1960.

He was named operations coordinator and vice president of operations of Mobil's North American Division in New York in 1974, and in 1969, he became regional vice president in Houston of Mobil's Gulf Coast exploration and producing region.

He has held his present position since 1975, following a worldwide realignment of Mobil's exploration-production organization.

Gas zone confirmed

The University 53 (Ellenburger) field of Schleicher County gained its second well and a ⅞-mile north extension with completion of Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1-SX State, 28 miles northwest of Eldorado.

It gauged a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 23 million cubic feet of gas per day, plus an unreported amount of condensate. Gravity of the condensate is 60.8 degrees.

It was completed through perforations at 7,819-7,823 feet, after acidizing the pay section with 2,200 gallons.

Drilled to 7,886 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set at 7,874 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 13, block 53, ULS.

The discovery, Gulf No. 1-TM State, finaled in March 1976 for a calculated, absolute open flow of 16 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 7,806-7,816 feet.

Outpost site set in Eddy

Dorchester Exploration Corp., operatimq from Midland, intends to drill No. 1 Morrison Communitized as a 1¼-mile west outpost to the one-well Four Mile Draw, West (Morrow) field of Eddy County, N.M.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 5-19s-26e, 10 miles south of Artesia. Contract depth is 9,700 feet.

The discovery, Samedan Oil Corp. No. 1 Fanning, was completed in November 1973, for 2.97 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations at 9,207-9,233 feet.

Austin needs $28 million

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin must come up with another $28 million to keep its 16 percent share of the South Texas Nuclear Project, City Manager Dan Davidson says.

The city's share of the nuclear power plant at Bay City originally was estimated at about $180 million but the cost appears to be closer to $208 million, said R.L. Hancock, electric utility department director.

Davidson said Monday his staff has begun a 90-day study to decide if it would be better to raise the $28 million, possibly in a bond issue, or to reduce Austin's 16 percent ownership. Other partners in the project are San Antonio, Houston Lighting & Power Co., and Central Power & Light of Corpus Christi.

The city council will make the final decision after getting the staff study.

Hancock said the most recent hike in the estimated total cost of the project, up from $1.126 billion to $1.3 billion, was caused by inflation and stricter Nuclear Regulatory Commission requirements.

Hancock said that despite the $28 million increase the city's participation in the project is cheaper than a similar investment in coal.

Facility to open

ODESSA — A new district office and service facility for Cardinal Chemical, Inc., will be opened this month in Sonora.

The Odessa-based company specializes in oil and gas well stimulation and it has facilities located in oil and gas producing areas throughout the mid-continent area.

The new facility will be located on Highway 277, south of Sonora, and will employ about 26 people. Most of the personnel who will be located in Sonora are now moved.

Bill Massey has been named district manager for the Sonora operation and Charles Nisbett is district sales manager.

An open house event is planned.

Irion gets exploration

Gulf Oil Corp. plans to drill an 8,500-foot wildcat in Southwest Irion County, six miles southeast of the Dow-Mayer (Spraberry) field.

Location is 1,093 feet from south and 1,796 feet from east lines of section 5, block 40, ULS, and the project is slated to 8,500 feet.

'Bonus' oil questioned

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A 1942 rule permitting a "bonus" oil production allowables in the East Texas Field may be responsible for pulling too much water into that field's leases, says the Texas Railroad Commission.

The commission called for a Nov. 29 hearing to determine the "appropriateness" of the old rule.

Under the rule, an additional barrel of oil is allowed for each 115 barrels of salt water reinjected into the field to increase oil production. Originally, the rule was aimed at economical disposal of salt water brought up with oil in the field.

Oil produced under bonus allowables qualifies as "new oil" under federal price regulations.

Since new oil is higher-priced than so-called old oil, the 1942 rule renders ineffective a water-oil ratio rule adopted in 1975 to reduce water production. Producers are encouraged by the old rule to pump more salt water into the field to get the higher-priced oil, according to Phillip Russell, director of the commission's oil and gas division's field operations.

But pumping more water into the field may result in less oil production ultimately because it will increase the proportion of water in the oil recovered.

Apco to dispose of properties

HOUSTON — Thomas W. diZerega, president of Apco Oil Corp., has announced that Apco and its wholly-owned Canadian subsidiary, Apco Oil, Ltd., have entered into an agreement with Shenandoah Oil Corp. for the sale of Apco's oil and gas producing properties located in the United States and Apco's Apco Oil Ltd.'s non-producing properties located in Canada, for an aggregate basic price, subject to certain adjustments, of $90 million.

The consummation of the agreement is subject to the approval of stockholders of both Apco and Shenandoah and the adoption of a plan of complete liquidation by Apco's stockholders.

A special meeting of stockholders of Apco has been scheduled, as previously announced, to be held on Sept. 30, for such purpose. If so approved, it is contemplated that the closing in connection with such sale would occur shortly thereafter. Under the terms of the agreement, $75 million is payable in cash and the remainder, at the option of Shenandoah either in shares of common stock of Shenandoah (valued immediately preceding the closing) or cash.

Caution best policy says state treasurer

By GUY COATES

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — State Treasurer Mary Evelyn Parker said Monday the state should move cautiously in allowing a combine of oil companies to sell tax-free revenue bonds to build a superport off the Louisiana coast.

"I am loath to do anything to hamper the project but I believe we should be very careful to protect the interest of the state," she told the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee gave unanimous approval to the Senatepassed bill which would set up the mechanism for the sale of the bonds.

The combine, called LOOP, received a license from the federal government this summer to bill the offshore oil terminal and plans to begin construction next year.

Members of the combine include Texaco, Murphy Oil Co., Marathon Oil Co. and Ashland, Inc.

Under the bill, the combine would have to get approval from the State Bond Commision on any sale of revenue bonds and would have to meet state guidelines.

Several committee members voiced concern that the measure might place the state's full faith and credit behind the bonds.

"We don't want another Superdome," said one committee member, pointing out one of the sore spots of the legislature.

The committee noted that when the Louisiana Superdome was in the planning stages, legislators were told that the state's full faith and credit would not be behind the project.

However, when the lease was signed with the superdome commission, the courts determined the state's credit was behind the construction bonds.

Now, the state is obligated to help make the dome bond payments since the facility has been showing a deficit.

Mrs. Parker said she didn't think "by any stretch of the imagination" that the offshore terminal project would put the state in a similar spot.

However, she said that timing was essential in allowing the firms to go to the bond market to sell $400 million in bonds.

"We don't want to endanger the sale of our own general obligation bonds," she said, stressing that it wouldn't be wise for the state to be selling bonds at the same time the combine was floating its issue.

The treasurer told reporters later that New York investors might not see the difference between state bonds and the terminal bonds. "All they see is a flood of bonds from Louisiana," she said.

The measure now goes to the full House.

Young gets Texaco post

HOUSTON — Texaco Inc. has announced the appointment of Norman R. Young as general manager in the Petrochemical Department, effective immediately. In his new assignment, Young will continue to be located in Houston.

Young is a graduate of Mississippi State University where he received a B.S. degree in Chemical Engineering in 1956. He joined Texaco's Research and Technical Department at Port Arthur that year. He held various engineering posts there and in the Petrochemical Depamtment's New York office until 1967, when he was named Supervisor of Operations of the Additive Division of the Petrochemical Department.

He was named assistant manager of the Ghent Chemical Plant of S.A. Texaco Belgium N.V., a Texaco subsidiary, in 1968. He returned to New York in 1972 and filled managment posts there until he was named assistant general manager of the Petrochemical Department in 1974.

Set up long suit but keep control

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's very discouraging to start a hand with 12 tricks and wind up with only ten. This is the sort of thing that makes a partner mutter into his beard and strengthen his drink.

Opening lead — ♠ Q

South took the king of hearts, counting three spades, two hearts, four diamonds (if the suit broke normally) and three clubs—12 easy tricks.

Declarer blithely led out the ace, king and a low diamond, noting joyfully that the suit did break favorably. His joy was short-lived.

Back came a heart to the ace, and South was in his hand for the last time. The king and queen of spades were useless, and South won only ten tricks.

POOR SUGGESTION

"Take the spades before you set up the diamonds," dummy suggested, after the hand had come to a sad end.

"That gets you nowhere," East pointed out. "If you cash three spades and then lead diamonds, I'll take two good spades."

The correct play is more subtle. South should lead his low diamond at the second trick.

No matter what is returned, declarer can clear the ace of spades out of the way, get to his hand with a diamond to take all of his own high cards, and then return to dummy with a club to take the high clubs and the last two diamonds.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2 NT, and the next player passes. You hold: S-10 8 6 5 3; QJ-2; Q-7 3; S-10 6. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. If partner has three or more spades you are willing to play the hand at four spades; otherwise he will bid 3 NT.

The 'Judge' evokes stern image

By RUDY ABRAMSON
The Los Angeles Times

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — When Frank M. Johnson Jr. came to Montgomery nearly 22 years ago as the youngest federal judge in the United States, he joined the Baptist church and started teaching a Sunday school class.

The local papers were full of pictures of the Johnson family, and Montgomery society was thrilled at having a handsome young Alabama native in its midst as a U.S. district judge. Without asking, he was given a membership in the country club.

But 29 days after Johnson was sworn in, a tired black woman named Rosa Parks said no to a driver who ordered her to get up and move to the rear of a battered Montgomery city bus just a few blocks down the street from the U.S. Court House.

She was arrested for violating a city ordinance requiring blacks to sit in the back, and ordered to pay a $10 fine.

Within days, Montgomery blacks led by an obscure young preacher named Martin Luther King had organized a crippling boycott of the bus system in the first of the massive protests that were to sweep the South for years to come.

Several weeks later, with the boycott still going on, Johnson declared that the ordinance Rosa Parks had defied was unconstitutional.

The black community and Martin Luther King won the boycott and the first major victory of the Civil Rights movement.

The Deep South has never been the same since that day. Frank Johnson has been in the vortex of the civil rights movement ever since, and he has been ostracized by the Montgomery Establishment and white Alabama from that day to this.

Last week, he agreed to step down from the federal bench and become director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He had been President Carter's first choice as a long-term leader to put the FBI back on an even keel after years of unrest, but he had turned the President-elect down last December.

Then, for reasons he has not revealed, he changed his mind, deciding to leave the bench and Montgomery.

He has been an isolated man here from the day of his decision in the bus boycott, the ostracism growing less harsh only in recent years.

A friend, bitter at seeing Johnson leave, said last week, "Don't paint the judge as some kind of a stuffed shirt after what this town has done to him. Montgomery makes Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" look like a utopia. This is the most conniving, back-biting, scheming place in America. It's the epitome of a degenerate, broken-down, Southern 'aristocracy.' "

While he gained a national reputation for his civil rights decisions, Johnson became at the same time one of the most intensely admired and hated men in Alabama.

His decisions, nearly always sustained by the higher courts, outlawed segregation in one area after another and broke new ground in civil rights with each passing year.

Johnson was on a three-judge panel that ordered the desegregation of more than 100 Alabama school districts with one massive order. He wrote the first reapportionment plan designed by a court. He abolished the Alabama poll tax.

He went to unusual lengths to see that his orders were implemented, spelling out specific steps to assure the rights of involuntarily-committed mental patients and the humane treatment of prisoners in state penal institutions. He put women on juries and struck down impediments to black voter registration.

In recent years, it has been arguable whether the judge or Gov. George C. Wallace exerted more influence over the affairs of Alabama.

The reaction to Johson's judicial activism has extended far beyond the cold shoulder given him by the social community in Montgomery.

Though tensions have dropped in recent times, he has been an object of repeated threats. His mother's home was bombed. He was scorned by the Alabama press and ridiculed by Wallace, an old classmate at the University of Alabama Law School. Two years ago, his 27-year-old adopted son, John, committed suicide, a tragedy which some friends believe may have contributed to a decision by Johnson and his wife, Ruth, to leave Montgomery.

The judge has kept his reaction to all of this much to himself. He is by nature an introspective, self-sufficient sort of man.

Lanky, 6-feet-2, leathery, handsome, Johnson goes about with a perpetually sad look that takes on a menacing, withering quality when he peers over his half-moon reading glasses at a lawyer who has displeased him.

Frank Johnson's personality is easier to understand when one considers his background.

He grew up in the hills of Winston County — the "free state of Winston," they call it because the county tried to secede from the state when Alabama joined the confederacy.

Winston County, unlike the rest of Alabama, has always been Republican.

The Winston County of Frank Johnson's youth was not only Republican, it was a rocky, hilly, poor county in an unusually poor state. Its black population was small. Politically, economically, culturally, it was vastly different from the Alabama black belt where Frank Johnson served as a federal judge.

The judge's great-grandfather, James Wallace Johnson, was a law-and-order sheriff of Fayette County. His reputation for fairness earned him the nickname "Straight Edge."

Some longtime family acquaintances in the north Alabama hills are said to refer now to Frank Johnson as "Straight Edge." But to his face there are few people who call him anything besides "Judge."

Young Frank Johnson developed his interest in public affairs from his father whow as once Winston County's probate judge. The father also served for a time as the postmaster of Haleyville, Ala., under appointment from Herbert Hoover, and was for several years the only Republican members of the Alabama legislature.

Thus Frank Johnson came to Montgomery and the federal bench with a heritage of hard-headedness and independence.

A decorated veteran of Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in World War II, Johnson was in private law practice in north Alabama when President Eisenhower named him a U.S. attorney in 1953.

Johnson had headed Veterans for Eisenhower in the Southeast during the 1952 presidential campaign.

Despite Johnson's nationwide reputation as a liberal judge, his friends and many of the lawyers who practice in his court think of him first and foremost as law-and-order man.

In criminal cases, he is not hesitant to hand out maximum sentences.

Johnson has a further reputation of being especially conservative when it comes to money, handling government resources as though they were his own.

Earl Pippin, one of Johnson's close friends here, recalls that the judge grew indignant once when Pippin laughed at him for making a collect call to a lawyer preparing a case for the Johnson court.

"Of course I called him collect," Johnson said. "You don't think I would spend the government's money to call some lawyer to talk about his own brief, do you?"

The main impression that Johnson leaves with lawyers practicing in his court is toughness.

Ira DeMent, the outgoing U.S. attorney who tried cases before Johnson for eight years, said recently, "He is tough as hell, but he is fair. If you are not prepared when you go into his court, you had better look out."

Johnson has been known to reduce lawyers to speechlessness when they irritated him by being ill-prepared.

Though he has never undertaken an administrative task comparable to running the FBI, Johnson admirers insist he will be able to direct the huge bureaucracy.

"He will crack a mean whip up there," said Ray Jenkins, a Montgomery editor, who is one of the judge's good friends. "It will be a brave bureaucrat indeed who will face Frank Johnson and say, 'I haven't done that yet.' "

It is accepted among Montgomery lawyers who know the judge that his abiding ambition has been to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. That was on the minds of local reporters last week when they asked him whether he would serve a full 10-year term as FBI director.

Johnson, who was believed to have been considered for the court by Richard M. Nixon, assured reporters he intends to serve the full term permitted by law if he is confirmed for the FBI post.

Johnson apparently was on the verge of accepting an Administration offer to be deputy Attorney General months ago. Friends who talked with him about the post were certain he had made up his mind and were taken aback when he declined the job, which could have been a step toward the high court.

There is still speculation as to why Johnson changed his mind after eight months and sent word to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell that he would take the FBI job.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We live in the country, and out house has a big stone cellar. We were thinking we might store some apples and potatoes down there this winter. We have so much room that we could easily put other fruits and vegetables in our cellar, as well. Do stored foods lose many nutrients or do they keep pretty well? Are there any safety rules we should know about?—Sharon P.

Dear Sharon: There is no nutritional loss that you have to be concerned about if the temperature and humidity are right. And there isn't any special hazard, as long as you get rid of any fruits or vegetables that show signs of decay and see to it that the storage facilities are kept clean. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says you can store quite a number of fresh fruits and vegetables in basements, cellars, outbuildings or pits—some up until early spring, provided winter temperatures average 30 degrees or lower and you follow a few basic rules.

Candidates for storage include such root vegetables as potatoes, late cabbage, late celery, pumpkins, squash, green tomatoes, apples, pears, oranges and grapefruit. An attic can also be used for storing certain foods. It is particularly good for onions, dried peppers, and other produce that needs plenty of ventilation.

You can find out more about this from a U.S.D.A. booklet called "Storing Vegetables and Fruits." Write Consumer Information Center, Dept. 37, Pueblo, Colorado 81009, enclose 40 cents, and ask for Home and Garden Bulletin No. 119.

STRICTLY FOR DADS

Dad dogmatic on dating issue

Is double-dating the best idea when a girl starts going out with boys? Some fathers seem to think so.

I hear from many girls complaining about parents (especially dads) who insist on double-dating at the outset.

Today's "Strictly for Dads" column is about doing a retake, having another look at preconceived ideas, and maybe reversing a decision. So here's another oldie worth checking—from an adult viewpoint two couples together might sound protective, but what if it isn't?

When our daughter first started dating, we told her we wanted her to go the double-date route. But after the first two experiences, she sat us down and said, "Your idea that a girl's first dates should be with another couple really doesn't work out like you think it would. I know you feel if I'm with three other people, that's better than being alone with one. Well, remember the other night when I was late and you didn't like it? The truth is I didn't like it either, but I couldn't help it. The other couple wanted to see the movie again. I didn't think it was that good and neither did Jimmy. But sometimes there isn't much you can do, especially if you went in their car. Anyway, do you see what I mean? Two people can do what they want to do, but if there are four, it isn't so easy. Will you please think it over, because I honestly believe I'm right. A girl really can handle one person better than she can handle three."

So we thought it over, one more time. We agreed sometimes the smartest thing parents can do is to change their minds. It really does make sense, doesn't it? If we have done a good job, our children should know more about how to handle some of their personal affairs than we do.

School days happier if youngster prepared

The best way to avoid fear and anxiety in a child attending school for the first time is to him know what to expect, says a nationally recognized authority on early childhood education.

"Children often have a very real fear that their mothers won't be coming back to pick them up," cautions Dr. Edith M. Dowley, former director of the Bing Nursery School at Stanford University.

Dr. Dowley, a special consultasnt for children's books, says parents should "explain to the child the relationship between the home and the school."

"Tell him that school is part of the neighborhood and a predictable part of life," she says.

"Tell him what you will be doing, tell him where you will be, so he can visualize your day and get a sense of the time element involved. Tell him what he will be doing so he will understand the amount of time involved for him."

Dr. Dowley suggests taking the child to school beforehand, and identifying landmarks along the way, so the child doesn't get the feling that he is being "transported to some place far away."

"It's important to introduce the child to the teacher. The parent should smile and look comfortable with the teacher, so that the child will have someone to model himself after. The parent and teacher should discuss such topics as where the child should sit, the location of the bathroom, and where coats should be hung."

Here are some other tips for the first day of school:

— a child will feel more secure in a new neighborhood if he has his name, address and telephone number in his pocket. Having his father's work phone number is also a good idea.

— a child will have a positive feeling if he wears a T-shirt or jacket with his name. It's nice when everybody knows who you are.

Thousands expected to march for Equal Rights Amendment

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — On Friday, about 3,000 people, mostly women, wearing white, draped with purple, white and yellow sashes and lead by a 15-year-old girl on a white horse, will march down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House.

They will evoke the past.

The march is for a current issue — the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), which needs the ratification of three states before its March, 1979, deadline to become an amendment to the Constitution.

But the women will recall the early part of this century when suffragettes dressed in white, wearing the colorful sashes and usually led by a suffragette on a white horse marched on the White House for the right to vote.

The procession, honoring the late Alice Paul, who originated the Washington suffragette marches in 1913, will be held on the anniversary of the 1920 ratification of the 19th Amendment, granting universal suffrage to women.

It will end with a rally in Lafayette Park fronting the White House, and organizers hope a meeting with the President.

"The march will parallel the same feelings of desperation (of the suffragettes) because time (for ERA ratification) is running out on us," said Ruth Clusen, president of the League of Women Voters and one of the organizers of the march.

A major goal is to increase presidential support of ERA ratification.

DEAR ABBY

Sports rate over new baby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who's afraid her husband won't be on hand when she has her baby, because she's due Jan. 1, and her husband already has tickets for the Rose Bowl game.

I was born on New Year's Day, and I'm sure I wasn't the only baby who had to compete with the Rose Bowl game.

My mother's doctor (an avid football fan) gave her strict instructions not to come to the hospital until after the game was over! My mother, an obedient registered nurse, was used to taking orders from a doctor, so she waited until the game was over and she barely made it to the hospital in time. Those on the scene tell me that I was very nearly delivered by a neighbor lady.

Sign me . . .—NEW YEAR'S BABY (1954)

DEAR BABY: Read on for another situation in which the doctor was a football freak:

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the expectant mother whose husband loved football reminded me of my own experience.

The day my baby was born I awakened my husband early in the morning to tell him I thought we should call my doctor. We dressed and waited for a grocery store to open because those were depression days and we had no phone. We phoned the doctor from the store, and he told us to get to the hospital fast. We had no car, so we called a cab, a terrific extravagance for a couple living on $16 a week. (Our college degrees cut no ice!)

When we got to the hospital, my doctor said I would probably not deliver before evening. Around noon my doctor invited my husband to go to the football game with him, so the two of them took off.

You guessed it! At 1:20 p.m. a staff doctor I had never seen before brought my nine-pound baby boy into the world!

My "baby" will be 44 in October. He has two fine children of his own, and times have changed because HE was present when they were born.—MRS. P. H. R., CINCINNATI

DEAR ABBY: I'll put my bowling nut up against that lady's football nut any day.

When I was expecting my fourth baby, I knew from experience that the baby was on its way—but in a hurry. So I threw a few things into my overnight bag and my husband drove me to the hospital.

The doctor on duty called my doctor and said it wouldn't be long.

My husband kissed me on the forehead and ran down the hall, saying he had to bowl in a tournament that night!

I didn't whine or cuss him out because I knew the team needed him. (He was top scorer.) They won the trophy, and I finally had a baby girl after three boys!—MAGGIE

DEAR ABBY: Please tell that lady who's expecting her baby on Jan. 1 that she doesn't have to worry about competing with the Rose Bowl game in 1978.

Jan. 1 will fall on Sunday next year, so the Rose Bowl game will be played on Monday, Jan. 2.—FOOTBALL FAN

Cookbook section planned

Readers of The Reporter-Telegram will have an opportunity to win cash prizes by submitting their original recipes for publication in a special cookbook supplement to the newspaper.

"Recipes '77" will be published as a tabloid supplement to the Oct. 23 (Sunday) edition of The Reporter-Telegram. It will feature scores of recipes submitted by readers.

First prize winners in each of eight categories will receive $25.

A grand prize winner to be selected from the eight first prize winners will receive an additional $75.

The categories of recipes will be: (1) Salads; (2) Meats; (3) Casseroles, vegetables and side dishes; (4) Outdoor cookery; (5) Breads; (6) Cakes; (7) Pies, and (8) Microwave.

Winners will be announced in "Recipes '77" on Oct. 23.

Deadline for entries will be Sept. 15.

All entries will be judged by a panel of professional home economists not connected with the newspaper.

The judges will select the three best recipes in each category, and the entrants will be contacted and asked to prepare their dishes and take them to Texas Electric Service Co. at a specified time for tasting.

All entries will be published either in "Recipes '77" or in subsequent Thursday editions of The Reporter-Telegram.

Readers are asked to submit only one entry per category.

Entries should be typed or neatly printed, and all measurements and instructions clearly stated.

Each entry should be clearly labeled at the top with the entrant's name, address, telephone number, the name of the recipe and category entered.

The contest is open to everyone in The Reporter-Telegram's retail Trading Zone except employes and agents of The Reporter-Telegram and their families.

Keep cool with runaway child

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. Although our son who is 9 years old threatens to run away, he hasn't done so yet. Perhaps he never will.

But you would think he had threatened suicide or something equally serious to hear my wife talk to him about it. She pleads, cries and carries on with him and me as if it is the end of the world.

He is an only child and of course precious to both of us.

When I was a kid I not only threatened but I ran, many times. Then I became cold, hungry or tired, and ran right back home.

My mother had a hot meal, a comfortable bed and a smile waiting for me.

Help me get my wife off his back — and mine.

A. "Go — I'll make you sandwiches," was a wise parent's reply to a child's runaway threat.

Your mother was apparently that kind of person, and your wife isn't.

If your rational counseling cannot get through to her, perhaps the aid of a professional guidance person or clinical psychologist is necessary. Such assistance may be available through your youngster's school or by referral from there.

Q. My husband is an exacting kind of person concerning his clothes, schedule, records, checkbook, just about everything. That really isn't a problem.

In fact, it's kind of nice because it keeps things pretty orderly regarding our budget, vacations and all the rest.

The problem is our son who seems to be following in the same pattern. He is 8 years old. He does his schoolwork on time, keeps his room in order, and sticks close to a daily schedule of play, school, meals and sleep.

He has a number of close friends, and they are the same kind of children.

Perhaps he is just too compulsive.

A. A lot of parents would like to have your kind of "problem." He may be "too compulsive;" but the evidence so far is that he is following his father's example and (as a well-known educator once said) "enjoying both the process and the results."

Perhaps it is just that there may be a bit of resentment on your part that your son is more like his father than like you, or you might envy the way they control their environment and how orderly their lives are.

You're right — it is nice to have one or more well-organized persons around the house.

(100) proof barkeeps aren't really that bad

By SUSAN KIRVIN
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Experience has taught Nick Kotsonas that you are what you drink.

Find that a little hard to swallow?

In his 32 years serving the drinking public, the internationally celebrated bartender has learned more about people while standing behind a bar than most human behavioral psychologists do in a lifetime.

It all comes with Kotsonas' job as bartender and general manager of a cozy sandwich shop predominantly inhabited by businessmen who talk shop over lunch.

Here are a few of his findings:

— Nearly 99 per cent of all men who drink martinis for lunch and switch to Scotch at night are businessmen.

— About 75 per cent of all women are mixed drink drinkers, while the other 25 per cent prefer the taste of hard liquor.

— You usually can spot an alcoholic in the morning by the type of drink he or she orders — bourbon and Seven-Up.

Kotsonas' hideaway establishment doesn't fit the image of a sleazy, noisy bar inhabited by drunks and lonely losers boozing it up in between confessions to a sympathetic bartender.

It's that very concept that's given the bartending profession a bad name, says Kotsonas, who's trying to change it.

"To the public, a bartender's a thief and a drunk," he says. "We're trying to upgrade our profession so people can come in and enjoy themselves."

Kotsonas feels at home standing behind a bar. The round Italian with a face like Fred Flintstone got the spirit to tend bar at the age of 22 when his uncle gave him the keys to his bar and ordered him to work.

As a member of the United States Bartender's Guild, Kotsonas is proof that reputable bartenders do exist.

Many of his drinks, which he creates, have won numerous awards in international competition. His "Peddler Fizz" was selected as Best Drink in the United States by Smirnoff and featured in the 1976 September issue of Playboy magazine.

His "White Satin Glow" won the World Championship in Italy in 1969.

There's no secret to making prizewinning drinks, says Kotsonas. Like any good thing, it just takes practice.

"Making good drinks is like mixing food," he explains. "Certain types of liquor go with certain liqueurs."

He spends about a week concocting new drinks, testing and retesting each one until it tastes just right. Patrons are eager and willing guinea pigs.

"I'd say about 99 per cent of all people like to try new drinks, even confirmed martini drinkers," says Kotsonas.

Still, classics like margaritas, whisky sours, martinis and Harvey Wallbangers are old and popular favorites. Kotsonas has approximately 100 drink recipes stored in his memory although, he says, a good bartender need only remember about 20 drinks.

A good cocktail, he says, never should have more alcohol than chaser. "You shouldn't be able to taste the liquor in a mixed drink, just its scent. Always measure and follow the jigger proportions."

Tired of serving the same old drinks at your parties? Here are two of Kotsonas' internationally celebrated cocktails you can make that will give your drinks new dimensions.

Cheers!

Survey of women shows 70 per cent oversee family finances

A survey of 35,000 women published today in a leading woman's magazine reports that, "in seven out of ten households it is the woman who oversees family finances."

"When it comes to major decisions—about investments or life insurance or large purchases—in 3 out of 4 families such decisions are made jointly," writes author Vivian Cadden. Eighty-four per cent of the women responding to the questionnaire, were married, while 10 per cent were divorced, widowed or separated. Among married women, the majority being in the 21-49 year age group, 40 per cent reported their hosehold incomes to the betweem $15,000 and $25,000, while one-third reported family incomes over $25,000. Forty per cent of the respondents work full time, 16 per cent part-time.

The women lodged more complaints against the rising costs of rent, fuel and utilities than against any other fixed expense, with 61 per cent registering anger at their inability to plan or budget around inflation in this area. Fifty-seven per cent said they were angry about the rising costs of food and insurance, as well as taxes. In the face of inflation, nearly half the respondents said they cut down on baction, travel and dining out expenses in order to save money, while one-third held back on a major purchase, such as a car.

Among all the women surveyed, only 5 per cent reported not having credit cards or department store charge cards. Younger women, ages 21-34, were more willing to borrow and/or charge beyond their incomes, with 40 per cent reporting a $1,000-$5,000 debt. Among older women, from 50-64 years of age, 36 per cent reported that they refuse to borrow money.

> "The belief that women are incapable of managing money is as phony as a three-dollar bill."
> Vivian Cadden
> Author

In the portion of the survey covering the personal and psychological effects of money on family life, 46 per cent of the respondents reported that they do not argue about money with their husbands. However, the rate of strife over money was higher among younger couples, and highest—70 per cent— among couples in which the wife works full-time, and presumably wants to have her say on all questions of spending. In the higher income group, 43 per cent of couples earning over $40,000 reported that they do argue over money. Arguments predominated where one spouse felt the other was either too rigid, or too easygoing, about spending.

Twenty per cent of women admitted that they waste money on clothes, and the same percentage felt their husbands wasted money on liquor and cigarettes.

When asked, "what about money gives you the most satisfaction?" 57 per cent of women responded, "buying something for someone you love," which was twice as high as "buying something you really need" (25 per cent). Fifty-five per cent, however, found satisfaction in "providing security for the future."

While sixty per cent of the respondents felt their attitudes about money were attributable more to their parents and early life than to husbands, the state of the economy, or effort expended to earn money, there was general agreement that some aspects of money go beyond mere financial transactions and budgeting. For example, 66 per cent reported that, when they were feeling blue or depressed, buying something, however small, usually or sometimes makes them feel better.

The admission that spending can be psychologically-motivated in no way detracts from the overall survey results which display women as capable managers of money.

There's something new in the cards

By MADELINE HILDEBRAND
Copley News Service

It started in a Joliet, Ill., apartment in 1972. Then it moved into a basement, and then a one-office back room.

The results: a family card game that appears to be sweeping the nation.

UNO is becoming No. 1, a fact that keeps the Joliet manufacturer-distributors moving. When all the cards are on the table, they love it.

International Games, Inc., a family organization created to handle the new game, moved from the back room office recently into a 2,400-square-foot executive suite. The company also now has a showroom in New York.

What began as a hunch, perhaps a gamble, now has sales for the year projected at about $1.5 million or 500,000 games. The 1978 projections call for the sale of about one million games.

It wasn't easy to break into the big time in the toy and game industry, especially with only one item to sell, according to company officers. During the first few years the group wondered if others would share their enthusiasm for the game, a takeoff on the game Crazy Eights, which is played with a regular deck of cards.

Ed Akeman, executive vice president, and his sister, Sandra Tezak, corporate secretary, said they spent hours playing UNO for fun. But most of all, they played hoping to get others interested. They even handed out games without cost trying to encourage its use.

Ed and Sandy had to play more than the camd game.

They had to try their hands at the "word of mouth" game, because three years after forming the company to manufacture UNO, they couldn't interest retailers in "picking up a hand."

They sent samples to hundreds of major retailers, but got no response.

They persisted, and some of their samples began to make their way across the country and back — thanks to family and friends. Soon the corporation began getting letters from people who wanted to know where they could buy it.

Families sent the game to servicemen and now game requests come from England, Japan, Africa, Germany and Canada.

Assad winning respect worldwide for Syria

By JOE ALEX MORRIS Jr.
The Los Angeles Times

DAMASCUS, Syria — Hafez Assad, president of Syria for more than six years, appears to be gaining unprecedented respect for his nation both among his fellow Arabs and on the world scene.

With the exception of his continuing problems with Iraq, Assad appears to have accomplished a small miracle in the Middle East:

—He has won over the Americans without losing the Russians.

—He has controlled the Palestinians and, after alienating them, has won them back — chiefly because they had nowhere else to go.

—He has pacified Lebanon and won the support of the powerful, conservative oil monarchies of the Arab world. And his economic liberalism apparently has won back some support from the Syrian merchant class.

—And as for the Syrian people, they appear relieved for the most part to have some stability after the political chaos of the first two decades of independence, even though it may not be enthusiasm for what is still essentially a military regime.

But the huge Damascus airport, built years ago by the French and subsequently little used, now is jammed with the traffic of international airlines, diverted, perhaps permanently, from Beirut.

Foreign businessmen this month have packed Damascus hotels, from the hopelessly inadequate older hostelries to the new French-run Meridien, for Syria's annual trade fair.

The principal jarring note comes from Syria's MIG jet fighters, still flying low-level patrols over the city, a reminder that Israel's forward positions in the Golan Heights are little more than a long-range artillery shell away.

From World War II until Assad's seizure of power from another general in 1971, there were 21 revolutions or attempted coups in Syria. Like many Arab states emerging from the colonial era, Syria saw its political fortunes fluctuate wildly from one extreme to another.

Its economy fluctuated almost as wildly. A big, underpopulated country, Syria ranged from rampant free enterprise to nationalization, overcentralization and dependence on the Soviet bloc for economic guidance as well as military aid.

When Assad, a quiet, unassuming air force commander, became head of state, there was little reason to believe Syria's stormy fortunes would change.

In his first few years in power, Assad showed no dramatic tendencies, but rather consolidated his grip on power. Then came the 1973 Middle East war, the first of the Arab-Israeli conflicts in which the Arabs could tell themselves that they gave as good as they got.

The war was followed by the oil price explosion, and the oil-affluent Arabs were quick to help Syria and Egypt, the "front-line" states that had borne the brunt of the conflict with Israel.

Syria's military and political leadership never entirely dropped the fiery slogans of the Arab Social Renaissance (Baath) Party, which in theory supplies the socialist principles upon which the state operates. But Syria did accept help from its now-wealthy Arab allies in the form of state-to-state reconstruction aid as well as private investments.

This probably was a key factor in turning Syria away from socialism and toward today's mixed economy.

Begin's minority party enjoying popularity

The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's minority Likud Party is riding a wave of post-election popularity despite three run-ins with Washington over the occupied West Bank.

The opposition Labor Party's warnings of impending diplomatic isolation go unheeded following Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's recent unfruitful discussions here.

A high point in the nine-week-old Begin administration's honeymoon with the Israeli boter came during the prime minister's trip to Washington. In Israeli eyes, the right-wing politician managed to steer a course independent of the Americans without causing a confrontation with Tel Aviv's one indispensable ally.

Since Vance's visit, doubters, especially in Labor Party ranks, are beginning to question whether Begin really got away with it.

These doubts were recently expressed in a Jerusalem Post editorial that said Begin "is dissembling when he seeks to make it appear that the present situation is no more, indeed far less, a cause for concern than was Mr. Ford's reassessment in 1975 and Mr. Carter's savage lecture to Mr. Rabin earlier this year. While disharmony is virtually at a peak of harshness Mr. Begin pretends to hear little except the sounds of sweet concord." That alone the paper said, "is reason for anxiety."

Doubts among some opinion-makers, however, have not sifted down to the population-at large, and the honeymoon between Begin and the Israeli public continues.

Begin's position of refusing to return to Israel's pre-1967 borders or to deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization is unquestionably shared by all the major political parties except the Communists.

The opposition Labor Party does not share his position that Israel should not surrender territory on the West Bank and Gaza Strip even for peace, but Labor's restrictions on what could be given back were so narrow and circumscribed that they too were unacceptable to the Arabs.

Begin's three moves to consolidate Israel's position on the West Bank following his visit to Washington appear to some Israelis as a poke in President Carter's eye. In succession, Begin legalized three Jewish settlements on the West Bank, promised to equalize services between West Bank Arabs and Israeli citizens, and then announced that three more Jewish settlements were to be established on the West Bank.

A high government official hinted that the three new settlements may be only the beginning and that more may follow shortly.

Begin's explanations that he was only following up decisions made by the previous government or that his moves were made solely on humanitarian grounds appear to some Israelis as disingenuous. "It seems as if he is trying to trick President Carter," one Israeli said recently.

But the majority of Israelis appear to feel that Begin is doing a better job than his predecessor, Yitzhak Rabin, in maintaining good relations with the Americans while at the same time standing up for Israel's interests.

"I am absolutely crazy about him," a refreshment stand owner said. "In my eyes Begin is the equal to Ben Gurion. The only problem is his ministers. If only they were all like Begin."

Begin's team of ministers is still feeling its way, and it is much too early to judge its performance. But it is already very clear that Begin and Begin alone is the government.

"This is the closest thing that we have ever seen to a presidential system of government," an official said recently.

East Germany new face on Africa scene

The Washington Post

BONN — For the second time in less than four months, a battle among the turbulent states of Africa has turned up a new face among the interested world spectators.

The face is that of East Germany — a steadfast Warsaw Pact all of the Soviet Union that is becoming increasingly involved in activities in black Africa below the Sahara.

In May Zaire expelled East German diplomats and suspended relations with diplomats and suspended relations with the European country, accusing East Berlin of supplying arms to anti-government rebels in Shaba Province.

Today, as the undeclared war between Ethiopia and Somalia continues in the Ogaden desert, observers in both capitals are noting that there seem to be a number of East Germans present.

Although Western attention continues to focus on the major role of Cuba and the Soviet Union in Africa, East Germany has made inroads into several of the more revolutionary states in the past two years. Western specialists rank it as the third most influential Communist power in the area.

East Germany quickly recognized the new Popular Front government in Angola in 1975 and is well established there, reportedly with several hundred persons in the country and the largest presence behind Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Hispanic Catholics wind up 4-day 'Encuentro'

By MARJORIE HYER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — David Juarez, 49, scrubbed the dirt of Florida cabbage fields from under his fingernails last week and came to Washington to impress on the bishops of his Roman Catholic Church the problems of their more than 12 million Spanish speaking members throughout the United States.

Juarez and more than 1,100 other Hispanic Catholics from all over the country wound up a four-day "Encuentro," or conference, that raised problems ranging from illegal aliens to the need for more church journals in the Spanish language.

In spirited plenary sessions, the delegates debated and adopted position papers on such topics as human rights, ministry, political responsibility, education and evangelization.

They demanded "total amnesty" for undocumented aliens and called on the church to "use its power" to help with immigration questions. They declared that "the bishops should back the right of every person to find their own residence wherever they may encounter favorable conditions for a decent life."

At the same time they called for an end to illegal immigration into this country.

Several efforts to get the Encuentro to back ordination of women to the priesthood were rejected, but the group did approve calls for including women in "decision-making positions" in the church at all levels and urged giving women equal access to education for leadership roles in the church.

A statement on political responsibility asserted the "obligation and the moral responsibility" of the Hispanic Christian community to participate within the political system."

This includes the creation of and backing of Hispanic political blocs lobbying "to create laws in favor of the Hispanic people" and the responsibility "to seek out and support competent, honest responsible Hispanic candidates."

They denounced discrimination, whether in church or society, and demanded that their bishops look into the special needs of Hispanics among migrant workers and in the military. They pleaded for church structures in Hispanic communities which would reflect the culture of the people.

More important than the recommendations themselves, most agreed, was the process itself, which brought together Chicanos, migrant workers, Puerto Ricans, Cubans and other Spanish-speaking person who have long been silent minority in the church.

Bishop James S. Raucsch of Phoenix, whose Bishops' Committee on the Spanish-Speaking must now work through the recommendations adopted here, said the "most important element of the Encuentro was "the process. As a result of this meeting and all of the smaller meetings which led up to it, the Hispanic people feel much more part of the ministry of the church."

Archbishop Robert Sanchez of Sante Fe, one of the eight bishops of Spanish ancestry in the Catholic church in America, said the Encuentro produced "a great sense of unity among the Hispanic participants, regardless of the nation of origin."

NOTICE TO PARENTS OF ELEMENTARY PUPILS

The majority to minority pupil transfer policy provision is an important part of the desegregation plan of Midland elementary schools. This transfer policy allows eligible young children to attend the same school as older brothers and sisters in grades 4, 5, and 6. The majority to minority transfer policy states:

A primary level pupil (grades 1, 2, or 3) may transfer from a school in which the pupil's race or ethnic background is the majority to another school in the assigned elementary school cluster, serving the residence, in which the pupil's race is the minority. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes which transport intermediate level pupils (grades 4, 5, and 6) within the elementary cluster.

Pupils in grades 1, 2, and 3 may transfer to another school in the elementary cluster when their race or ethnic background is a majority in the home school. Also, the race or ethnic background must be in a minority in the receiving school. Transportation is provided by regularly scheduled bus routes within the elementary cluster.

You may receive more information by contacting the principal of any elementary school. Application forms are available from any elementary school principal or may be obtained at the central administration office at 702 North "N" Street.

Veterans Land Board sells bonds

AUSTIN—The Veterans Land Board recently sold bonds totaling $25 million, which Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong predicts is enough to keep the popular program operational for another 10 months, at best.

The latest series of bonds, authorized by the voters in 1973, were sold to the First National Bank of Dallas at 4.4537 per cent interest.

The second-lowest bid came from Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., which offered a interest rate of 4.463 per cent.

Of the eight bids received for the bond sale, the highest and lowest were separated by only thirteen hundreths of one per cent (.13).

Armstrong was pleased with the good showing which the bonds attracted, believing it indicates "continued stability" in the Veterans Land Program.

He said he hopes it indicates investors, at least, will be behind the proposed constitutional amendment authorized by the 65th Legislature, allowing the sale of an additional $200 million in veteran bonds. Voters will decide that amendment on Nov. 8.

Armstrong says he knows of no opposition to the proposed new bond sale, with voter acceptance of the veteran program remaining quite firm in the last two decades. However, as a safeguard, the land commissioner says he plans to meet with the various veterans organizations in Texas, shoring up the ranks for the special November election, which, likely, will witness a small voter turnout.

The Veterans Land Board issues loans to military veterans who are Texas residents, in amounts of up to $15,000.

Even with the recent $25 million bond sale, Armstrong says interest on the loans can be kept at six per cent, over a 40-year period.

School to begin at Klondike

KLONDIKE — The first day of school for the Klondike Schools will be Friday, with an abbreviated version of a regular school day, according to James W. Logan, superintendent.

Bus routes will begin about 8:15 a.m., allowing the buses to arrive at the high school about 10 a.m. The junior high and high school will begin classes at 10 a.m., and the elementary school will begin about 10:15 a.m.

School will be dismissed at the elementary school about 1:30 p.m. and at the junior high and high schools about 2 p.m.

It is requested that all parents allow their children to ride the bus to and from school on Friday.

Lunch will be served, with the prices the same as last year, 40 cents for kindergarten through fifth grade and 50 cents for all other lunches.

Monday will be the first regular day of school. Junior high and high school will begin classes at 8:45 a.m. and dismiss at 3:50 p.m. Elementary school will begin classes at 9 a.m. and will dismiss at 3:30 p.m. All buses will arrive at the high school between 8:30 and 8:45 a.m. The elementary buses will leave the high school at 8:45 a.m. and return in the afternoons at 3:45 p.m. All buses will leave the high school campus at 3:55 p.m.

Students attending the Klondike schools for the first time should bring their immunization records when they come to register. Kindergarten and first grade students also should bring their birth certificates.

Board meeting set

The Board of Trustees of the Greenwood Independent School District will hold a regular meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the board room to consider prospective legal counsel, delinquent taxes, amending the 1976-77 budget and opening bids for a confection oven.

Volunteer training program scheduled

The Adult Basic Education Department at Midland College has scheduled a volunteer training program Sept. 6 through 9 for persons interested in teaching adults how to read.

The class will be at Our Lady of Guadalupe Education Center. Morning and evening training sessions will be offered, according to Roberta Aldridge, director of the Midland College Adult Basic Education department.

The department assists those who do not speak, read or write English. It also assists those who have less than a high school education to learn the skills necessary to pass the General Equivalency Diploma.

Persons interested in the volunteer training program can call 684-7851, extension 194.

Forensics program scheduled at college

A forensics program, headed by Tyler Tindall, will begin this fall at Midland College, according to a recent release by Dr. Jack Schneider, chairman of the Division of Communication Studies.

Tindall will organize and coach a debate team, as well as instruct students in persuasive speaking, informative speaking, impromptu speaking, oral interpretation and duet acting.

Students who wish to be members of debate or forensics teams will compete against other colleges and universities during the year.

Last class scheduled

The Parks and Recreation ladies swim class at Alamo Pool will meet for the last time from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. Friday. Members are asked to bring a covered dish.

Environmental statement sent

A draft environmental impact statement for the Pecos River Basin Water Salvage Project in New Mexico and Texas has been submitted to the Council on Environmental Quality, according to Robert H. Weimer, regional director of the Southwest Region, Bureau of Reclamation in Amarillo.

The project is a management program consisting of 'selective clearing of saltcedar from the flood plain of the Pecos River from Santa Rosa, N.M., to Girvin, Tex.

The area of clearing extends through Loving, Reeves, Ward, Crane, and Pecos counties in Texas, and Guadalupe, DeBaca, Chaves and Eddy counties in New Mexico.

The project will conserve about 57,500 acre-feet of water annually and will result in increased low flows within the river. Saltcedar will be removed and replaced by vegetation, which uses less water.

Habitat for tree-dependent species of wildlife will be reduced, but mixed woody and open areas will increase the diversity of habitat, and thus a diversity of wildlife.

Extension classes registration slated

ODESSA — Registration will be at 7 p.m. Thursday at McCamey High School for Odessa College extension classes in McCamey.

Classes will be offered based on the number of requests from prospective students. The Texas State Coordinating Board requires each extension center to have an average of 15 students per class, Dr. Roy Hart, coordinator for the extension program in McCamey, said.

Those who register will be required to pay all fees at the time of sign up. Three semester hours will be billed at $48.50 and six semester hours will be $65.

Machine worries union

ROGER SMITH
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — California's lettuce growers fought and lost a bitter battle with the United Farm Workers several years ago in an effort to hold labor costs down. But a machine now under development by the U.S. Departmnet of Agriculture and the University of California could revive their campaign.

The machine can automatically harvest four rows of iceberg-head lettuce simutaneously. A sensor using either gamma rays or X-rays examines each head to judge whether it is ripe, a cutter chops off the selected heads and a converyor removes the harvest to a trailing hopper.

Department of Agriculture officials estimate that widespread commercial use of the $60,000 harvesters would replace up to 30 per cent of the state's lettuce workers.

"And we think the machine can do a better job of selecting lettuce for harvest than is now being done by hand," said one of the department's scientists.

For California growers, who annually produce $325 million worth of lettuce the savings could be significant.

Although the number of lettuce workers is small compared with the total membership of the United Farm Workers, the union is nevertheless worried about the machine.

"We're concerned about this," Mark Grossman, assistant of UFW President Cesar Chavez, said. "Mechanization can make more money for the growers, but it should not come at the expense of the workers."

Most growers signed three-year agreements with the UFW last year. But extensive use of the machine could make renewals difficult in 1979 "if a grower wants to evade bargaining in good faith," Grossman said.

Department of Agriculture and the university have developed different designs of the machine, and both are in prototype stages.

The machine is getting close to commercial reality, Roger Garrett, chairman of the agricultural engineering department at UC Davis said.

Aggie jokes reflection of university's uniqueness

By NICHOLAS C. CHRISS
The Los Angeles Times

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. — Almost everyone in the Lone Star State has heard the story about the angry Texas Aggies who got into an argument with a group of Louisiana Cajuns visiting the Texas A and M University campus here.

The Aggies, the story goes, became so riled that they began throwing sticks of dynamite at the Cajuns, who lighted them and threw them back.

And because every Texan has heard the story about the Aggie who thought bacteria referred to the rear entrance of a cafeteria, the Aggie who invested heavily in frozen radio dinners, and the Aggie who went to the butcher shop and ordered five karate chops.

If these sound a lot like the Polish jokes that got Polish groups up in arms a few years ago, they are. But there is one difference: Aggie jokes are spread mainly by the sons of Texas A and M, the Aggies themselves.

Put two Texans together anywhere around the world and the chances are that they soon will while away the time telling each other Aggie jokes. a few of the jokes are very funny, most are corny, and some are even racist, but somehow Aggie jokes have survived for years and are thriving.

Perhaps the oddest thing about this Aggie putdown is that the jokes conceal the fact that Texas Agricultural and Mechanical University has become something like the MIT of Texas. The big oil and gas, engineering and construction companies pick off the Aggie graduates for high-paying jobs as fast as they come off the assembly line with their diplomas.

"There's something different about an Aggie graduate," one recruiter for a large firm said. "He's usually level-headed and sober, he has good grades and he's not afraid to work. He's science-oriented, and he hasn't spent a lot of time playing around in college."

If the university is so good, then why all the corny self-deprecation?

"We think that when you're No. 1, people make jokes about you," Edwin H. Cooper, director of admissions, said. But tht doesn't explain why — when Poles complain about Polish jokes, Cajuns bristle at Cajun jokes and Mafia jokes bring an Italian Defamation League into existence — most Aggie jokes originate with Aggies.

Dr. James H. Copp, a university professor of psychology, called it the "Okie from Muskogee syndrome," a reference to the popular country-western song of a few years ago that proclaimed that Okies from Muskogee don't smoke marijuana or engage in promiscuous sex and so forth.

In other words the Okie from Muskogee was proud to be a rather square individual.

Copp, like many other Texas A and M faculty members, gladly admits that the school "is a little bit square."

Copp said Aggies don't relish hearing Aggie jokes told by outsiders. But when those jokes are made up and told by outsiders, such as rivals at the University of Texas in Austin, it is usually because Aggies are admittedly "easy targets" because of the school's conservative image, according to Lane B. Stephenson, the school's public relations spokesman.

It is a rare Aggie that can withstand the temptation to tell another Aggie joke.

On the desk in his dean's office, Copp continued, is a model of an "Aggie car" with very lopsided wheels.

"The administration really rejoices in this squareness," he said. "They simply say, 'Thank goodness we aren't like the rest of the world,'" Copp said.

The Texas A and M campus, for one thing, is a hodge-podge of architectural styles where few buildings match, and it is ringed by fast-food franchises.

The school is not only conservative in its image, but occasionally conservative in spending too. A new medical school will cost only about $4 million because present buildings will be renovated and used. But on the other hand a new student center a couple of years ago cost millions of dollars, and was done in atrocious design — lending credibility to stories of Aggie poor taste.

In 1970, at a time when many other college students were demonstrating, several thousand Aggie students marched on the president's house. But not to protest.

They went to honor and to welcome Dr. Jack K. Williams and his wife on his first full day in office.

George W. Strake Jr., a Houston oil and real estate magnate, was so proud of the students that he ordered his foundation to give two $5,000 contributions to the Aggie student government.

When streaking was a college fad, only one streak took place in Aggieland. But it gained national headlines. Not because the nude streaker was on a motorbike on the campus, but because a conservative, short-haired and angry Aggie tried to lasso the streaker with a rope.

Texas A and M maintains its conservative image, partly, some school officials indicate, by continuing to be a state school that refuses to drop its high entrance requirements or make an effort to recruit racial minorities. Out of an enrollment of about 28,000, only about 180 are blacks, about half of them on athletic scholarships, and only about 500 are Mexican-Americans — in a state that has a high percentage of both blacks and Mexican-Americans.

There is, however, one minority group the school has recruited: women. Although they were banned from the school until a few years ago, there are now 7,000 of them.

But Texas A and M also is a military school, with a corps of 2,000 cadet officers who wear uniforms at all times. Their training is conducted separately from that of the ROTC students. The school's long military tradition dates back to its founding in 1876. During World War II it provided more military officers than West Point, and over the years 150 Aggies have become generals and admirals. Seven Aggies won medals of honor in World War II.

Except for the official military academies such as Annapolis and West Point, Texas A and M commissions more officers than any school in the country.

In addition to its military cadets, the university has the largest agricultural enrollment in the nation, about 6,000, and more than 6,000 other students study engineering.

The university is just getting around to placing some emphasis on the liberal arts.

"We devote the major portion of our energies and resources to practical studies — in the classroom and the laboratory," Stephenson said.

Texas A and M has never gone in for fads, he added, but "we taught ecology, and environmental studies five to six years before it became fashionable elsewhere."

Aggie alumni around the world give more money to their alma mater than do those of any other public university with the exception of the much larger University of Michigan. They must be the most loyal alumni in the nation, and perhaps around the world, and they are the only ones to hold "muster" annually, 400 special services around the world to honor Aggies who have died in the preceding year.

Somewhere in all this madness there must be some method, says sociologist Dr. Edward Joubert of the University of Southern Louisiana. Joubert is a Cajun and an Aggie graduate so he has sampled the best, or perhaps the worst, of the jokes about both Cajuns and Aggies.

Joubert said the Aggie joke syndrome has its basis in the fact that Aggies need a sense of identity and brotherhood because they have been a "threatened minority."

And sure enough, he couldn't resist an Aggie joke himself. He recalled the time he offered to tell an Aggie joke to a sensitive and sophisticated young Aggie. But the youngster complained, saying "Hey, I'm an Aggie student!"

Joubert replied, "That's all right, I'll tell it slow."

Man versus bureaucracy in fan drama

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A few Justice Department employees may remember this period primarily as the Summer of the Fan Raids. Details are murky in this sweaty drama of individual will pitted against the relentless vast and impersonal bureaucracy.

What the affected employees agree on is that, a few weeks ago, word got around that individual, government issue office fans in one Justice Department building would be confiscated because they were fire hazards and because they wasted energy.

The confiscation of the fans has reduced energy consumption in federal buildings nationwide by 30 per cent since 1973, according to the General Services Administration (GSA).

Forewarned, attorneys, secretaries and paralegal specialists conspired to hide the precious fans in closets or under desks, some in shopping bags. One antitrust division attorney said he still has one stashed "above the acoustical tiles in my ceiling."

Attorneys said the fans are important when the volume of the peoples' business requires them to labor on weekends, when the building air conditioning may not be on, and also between seasons when the government schedule says the air conditioning must be off, but when the weather is, nonetheless, hot.

At these times, the air in small, windowless, inner offices becomes stifling, according to employees in the antirust division, which is housed in an old building across Pennsylvania Avenue from the main Justice building.

Some employees occupying inner offices said they need the fans even in the winter, when the heating system becomes oppressive.

Some of the hiding places used by the resistance were more successful than others.

The raiders "found most of the fans. They came in the middle of the night and found all the ones we had hidden in a closet," according to another antitrust lawyer who did not wish to be named.

Employees saw the raiders on more than one occasion, saw them rolling the fans out of the building and, according to one secretary, "onto an unmarked truck."

"They told us our coffee pots, radios, desk lights, our little refrigerator, anything that plugs in would have to go," said secretary Katrina Schroth, though those things were still in evidence here and there in the cramped, low-ceilinged offices.

The employees had assumed the raiders to be agents of GSA, which oversees the operation of federal buildings.

Mulholland new president of NBC

NEW YORK (AP) — With the new television season only two weeks away, NBC-TV — third in the national ratings race for the last two years — has named a new president and reorganized its top management.

Robert Mulholland was named president this week, replacing Robert Howard, who had held the post since 1974.

It had been assumed that Howard's future would be decided by ratings for the new fall season, but Herbert Schlosser, president of the parent National Broadcasting Co. said he had decided on the move earlier this year.

"If I waited, people would relate it to how we're doing in the fourth quarter," Schlosser said. "I didn't want my decision to get mixed with the fall season."

Howard's future with the network was uncertain, and Schlosser said "we just haven't resolved that yet."

Mulholland, 43, has been with NBC for 16 years. His accomplishments with the network include instituting the nation's first two-hour local news program, on KNBC in Los Angeles. He was a producer on the "Huntley-Brinkley Report," and most recently was put in charge of coverage of the 1980 Olympics.

"THINKING"
with ODOM
PHILIPPIANS 4:8

For the past three weeks I have been writing on the subject of "prejudice." Let me define it again for you, as the definintion of the word is necessary in order to get the reader to see the application of the term.

Webster tells us that the word "prejudice" means," prejudge; to form an opinion or judgment before the facts are known; a judgment or opinion held in disregard of the facts." Considering what is said of the word, one would conclude that being prejudiced is anything but noble. I therefore urge our readers to consider what one has to say with an open mind before you come to your conclusions that the utterances are false. Otherwise, nobility will not be a trait of your character.

I have heard it said that members of the church of Christ believe in a "water salvation." I heard a denominational preacher say onetime in a debate, "Members of the church of Christ believe that the man who lives the closest to the creek lives the closest to heaven." I have no doubt that you will agree that that is a prejudicial statement if there ever was one made. That is not what members of the church of Christ believe about baptism.

The truth about it is this: a man may be immersed every night from now until Jesus Christ comes with the idea in his mind that such an act is going to wash away his sins, as per the teaching of Acts 22:16, die, and still go to torment! Now that is exactly what this scribe, as a member of the church of Christ, believes and teaches. Does that sound like I believe in a "water salvation?" Of course not!

I hasten to add to those remarks this simple biblical fact, however, that Jesus Christ did say, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). Paul declared that we are baptized into Christ as well as into the body (the church) (Galatians 3:27; 1 Corinthians 12:13). The apostle Peter made the affirmation that "baptism doth also now save us" (1 Peter 3:21). Yet in spite of all that baptism does for the sinner; the fact that he cannot be saved without having been baptized, he must also "believe." Jesus declared, "...he that believeth not shall be damned," (Mark 16:16)

While one must be baptized, my friend, he may live on the banks of the Pacific ocean and still be lost. Only the prejudiced charges us with "water salvation."

Accuser concedes he may be wrong

The Los Angeles Times

A federal official who has accused Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of overcharging the government millions of dollars on Navy shipbuilding contracts is now conceding that he may have been wrong.

But after twice going out on a limb charging that Lockheed's shipbuilding subsidiary billed the Navy for millions of pounds of steel that allegedly was not used in the construction of seven transport docking ships, Goodwin Chase still isn't backing down.

Chase, chairman of the Renegotiation Board, a federal agency which oversees government contracts, has written a letter in which he admits that if Lockheed's internally audited figures are correct, "My figures for the amount of unaccounted-for steel are overstated."

Chase's letter acknowledges that a review of "account data assembled by Lockheed" shows that he "erred in the translation of dollar amounts in question to pounds of steel." A Lockheed spokesman said the letter, which was addressed to Robert W. Haack, chairman of the Burbank-based company, supports Lockheed's contention that it did nothing wrong during the building of the Navy's ships from 1964 to 1971. "Even though he (Chase) admits he made an error, he still goes on to make further unsubstantiated charges," the company spokesman said.

Chase, who heads an agency that is currently fighting for congressional legislation to extend its life, says he isn't going to drop the issue. In a telephone interview, Chase said, "My letter in its entirety speaks for itself. There is more than just the question of purchased steel."

Congressional sources argue that Chase may have been using the original charges as part of his political battle to preserve the agency.

Despite his apparent errors, Chase in his letter goes on to say, "Questions remain regarding the 'cost growth' figures submitted by Lockheed to the Navy in support of its contract claims; the apparent excessive progress payment billings to the Navy; the large difference between steel purchased and that actually used in ships, even using Lockheed's figures..."

But Chase offered no evidence to support his continuing belief that Lockheed overbilled the government.

Lockheed's Haack, in a statement issued Monday, said the federal official "had alluded to a number of unresolved issues" and that Haack "would, as in the past, be of whatever assistance possible."

The charges and countercharges over the apparently simple matter of how much steel had been charged to the Navy began in June when Chase told a Senate committee that Lockheed had allegedly overbilled the Navy for 73 million pounds of steel for which the government could not account. When Lockheed said the charges were "shocking" and "irresponsible," Chase sent three assistants to Seattle, where Lockheed Shipbuilding and Construction Co. is located.

In July, Chase raised the amount of missing steel to 117 million pounds, based on his staff's investigation. Chase was so confident of his position that he made a point of challenging Haack's credentials: "I think Mr. Haack is protesting too much," Chase told The Los Angeles Times.

Cubs face crucial doubleheader

Rookie Randy Martz and Andy Muhlstock, the successful reliever turned successful starter, turned things around in El Paso after the Midland Cubs lost three straight to the Diablos and Manager Jim Saul is counting on them to do it again tonight against Amarillo.

The doubleheader winding up the season's series against the Gold Sox begins at 6:30 p.m. at Cubs Stadium.

While Tuesday's Midland-Amarillo game was rained out, El Paso was beating San Antonio to take a 1½ game lead in the Texas League West Division. The Diablos and Cubs open a five-game series at Cubs Stadium Thursday.

WINNERS OF last year's Texas League pennant, the Gold Sox, destined for last place this year, nevertheless seem determined to go out like champions. It was the Gold Sox who swept the Diablos six straight a couple of weeks ago to turn an El Paso runaway into a three-team race.

Now the Sox hold a 2-1 edged in this vital series for the Cubs and has Midland behind the eight-ball.

Martz, 3-2, will start one game for the Cubs. The University of South Carolina product who was Chicago's No. 1 choice in the June free agent draft has won three of his last four starts, the lone loss a 2-0 shutout at Shreveport.

Muhlstock picked up a staff-leading eight saves as a reliever and when it became necessary to rest his arm longer between starts he became a starter. And as a starter he has won seven straight decisions to raise his record to 11-4 for the season.

STARTERS FOR Amarillo will be Gregg Wilkes, 6-6, and either Galen McSpadden, 6-10, or Mike Lentz, 3-5.

Going into the final games of the series, Midland holds a 16-12 edge over the Gold Sox.

Midland Stars capture victory

RICHMOND, Va.—Midland's Senior Division All-Stars cleared their first hurdle here Tuesday in the National Miss Softball America double elimination tournament by defeating Chesterfield, Va., the host team, 4-3.

Midland won the game with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning when Kathy Moore singled in the winning run.

Midland had four consecutive singles with two outs to pull out the victory. Gena Keniepp, Debra Kittle and Julie Ochsner all had safties before Moore singled to left to drive in the winning tally.

Moore went the distance to pick up the victory for the Midland All-Stars.

Midland will meet the winner of this morning's battle between Auburndale, Fla., and Stanford, Conn. Midland is scheduled to play at 9:30 p.m.

The first round victory kept Midland out of the loser's bracket, where it is an uphill battle to stay alive. Midland can still lose a game without being eliminated from the tournament.

In the Major Division, Snyder ran into some bad luck as they dropped a 4-3, 10 inning decision to North Torrance, Calif., the defending champions.

Snyder's Connie Weber tossed a one-hitter, but absorbed the loss when she walked in all four Torrance runs.

Midland and Snyder earned the right to enter the national tournament by winning the regional titles in Midland two weeks ago.

Racquets gain playoff finals

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Chris Evert defeated Kerry Reid 6-2 in women's singles Tuesday night, propelling the Phoenix Racquets into the World Team Tennis playoff finals with a 30-22 triumph over the San Diego Friars.

The victory sends Phoenix against the New York Apples for the WTT championship, a best-of-three series which begins Thursday night in New York.

Butch Walts helped Phoenix by breaking Rod Laver's serve in the 11th game of men's singles competition to win the set 7-5.

A crowd of 7,114 watched the match.

Turkey Shoot set in Rankin Sunday

RANKIN—There will be a 4-H sponsored Turkey Shoot here Sunday at 1 p.m. on Highway 349, next door to the Western Company.

Sponsors of the trap shoot ask entrants to bring shotgun and ammunition. It will be a good chance to sharpen the eye for the coming dove season.

Cougar's best yet to come

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman keeps saying Southwest Conference football fans still haven't seen the best of quarterback Danny Davis.

"He started out last year pretty good and got better," Yeoman said of Davis, who led Houston to a 10-2 record and a Cotton Bowl victory over Maryland in the Cougars' first season in the SWC. "His whole personality is one of confidence in himself.

"As he mastered the mechanics of our offense last year, that confidence just got stronger."

UH opponents must shudder at the thought of Davis being stronger than last season but he's a year older and wiser as the Cougars open practice this week and he's got a good supporting cast returning from last year's championship team.

There's Alois Blackwell, who came out of the woodwork about midseason to turn in five 100 yard games and earn outstanding offensive player award in the Cotton Bowl victory over Maryland.

Fullback Daryl Thomas and an outstanding corps of running backs also return to support Davis and Blackwell.

Despite the presence of Davis, Yeoman still frets about the quarterback position because of the lack of experienced backups.

"Danny has to stay healthy for us to be successful on offense," Yeoman said. "If anything happened to Danny, our first backup would be Delrick Brown. He's got an excellent arm but he needs game experience. He has to play to get confidence."

After Brown there's freshman Darrell Shepard from Odessa Permian, who pulled a last minute switch during recruiting season and joined the Cougars rather than the Texas Longhorns. Yeoman hopes he won't have to thrust Shepard into the fight immediately.

"I think he might be able to grasp our running game this season but it takes longer to learn the passing game," Yeoman said. "It took Danny a year and a half to get it down and I thought he was a pretty outstanding prospect.

"Learning when the cut comes open and when to pull off and go to your second or third receiver comes from scrimmaging. It'll take him this year and spring training to be ready."

The Cougars' lose the entire left side of their defense this season including All-American tackle Wilson Whitley. Also gone are end Guy Brown, linebacker Paul Humphreys and cornerback Mark Mohr.

"We're not going to be able to compete unless our defense comes along," Yeoman said. "Last year we got the ball in super field position. That's the first thing you notice when you look back at our game film."

The defensive boost will have to come from returning starters Robert Oglesby at nose guard and right tackle Ross Echols, end Reid Hansen, linebacker David Hodge, cornerback Anthony Francis and safties Fred Snell and Elvis Bradley.

Newcomers will be end Vincent Greenwood, tackle Grady Ebensberger, linebacker Willis Williams, and cornerback Gerald Cook.

Bulldogs' feed set Thursday

The annual Midland High Bulldog football barbecue is on tap for 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Memorial Stadium at which time boosters and fans can meet the varsity amd junior varsity teams along with the cheerleaders.

Tickets for the feed are $3 per person and may be bought at the barbecue, according to Boots Goode.

The Bulldog band will be unable to attend since it is having its ice cream supper and concert the same evening.

Coach Jerry Hopkins will introduce his staff and in turn, will introduce his varsity team to the gathering.

Then on Friday, picture day will be held at 9 a.m. and the Purple Pack will travel to Snyder to scrimmage the Class AAA Tigers with the JVs starting at 5 p.m. and the varsity at 7 p.m.

Goltz one hits Boston

By The Associated Press

"Every pitcher with great stuff has six or seven games a year where they put on quite a show," said Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch.

Tuesday night was one of those games for Twins mound ace Dave Goltz, who hurled a one-hit, 7-0 gem against the Boston Red Sox. The triumph was Goltz' third this year against the Sox, whose fifth consecutive loss dropped them out of first place in the American League's East Division.

The only hit off Goltz, 16-7, was a single by Jim Rice in the fourth inning. Goltz struck out 10 and walked three in recording his first shutout of the season.

"Those stats sure show how well he pitched," said Boston catcher Carlton Fisk. "He's been tough on us all year." He struck out everybody in the world.

"We've got to forget about this game. He won't pitch like that every time."

The Minnesota hurler agreed.

"They're a good-hitting club, which I'm sure will make them more conscious to beat me this weekend," said Goltz, whose next start is scheduled for either Saturday or Sunday in Boston.

Glenn Adams had two doubles and a single and Lyman Bostock chipped in with a double and two singles to spark Minnesota's 14-hit attack. Rod Carew socked his 12th home run, extending his hitting streak to 13 games. Carew has hit in 30 of his last 32 contests.

Yankees 8, White Sox 3

Mickey Rivers went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs and Graig Nettles smacked his 30th home run for three more runs as New York beat Chicago and edged past Boston in the East.

Mike Torrez, 15-10, surrendered 11 hits in throwing his 14th complete game as the Yankees took over first place for the first time since July 10.

"We're still behind in the loss column and until we get ahead there, I don't consider us in first place," said Nettles, the defending AL home run champion, who tied Jim Rice and Bobby Bonds for the homer lead Tuesday night.

"The season isn't over, so being in first place now doesn't mean that much," said Manager Billy Martin. "If the season was over, then I'd feel great."

Royals 5, Orioles 2

The red-hot Royals won their seventh straight to stay atop the West. John Mayberry's 20th homer halved a 2-0 Orioles lead in the fourth, then George Brett clouted a three-run shot for his 16th homer of the year.

"George is a big guy. There's no reason he can't hit .330 and 20 to 30 homers," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog. "He's as big as Mickey Mantle."

Jim Colborn, 14-12, picked up the victory with last-inning relief help from Larry Gura.

"I've pitched some pretty good games against them," said Colborn, whose 3-13 lifetime mark against Baltimore wouldn't indicate that. "The record is not a good picture. I should be 5-8 or 5-9.

"One game, I had a shutout for 13 innings and we lost in the 17th. I lost some others in the ninth. I guess I deserve to win some sometime."

Brewers 4, Rangers 2

Home runs by Sal Bando and Cecil Cooper and strong pitching by Mike Caldwell and Bill Castro led the Brewers to victory.

Caldwell, 4-6, took a five-hitter into the ninth but surrendered two hits and left in favor of Castro, who retired three straight batters to preserve the triumph.

The loss dropped Texas 2½ games behind Kansas City in the West.

Tigers 5, Angels 1

Bob Sykes and Steve Foucault collaborated on a five-hitter to lead the Tigers to their fifth consecutive victory, matching their longest winning streak of the year.

Ron LeFlore hit his 16th home run of the year to pace the Tigers attack. LeFlore has hit .422 in Detroit's last 15 games.

Blue Jays 8, A's 1

Toronto rode the strong pitching of Jim Clancy and Tom Murphy to a five-hit triumph over the A's as Oakland dropped its 20th game in its last 23.

Otto Velez' bases-loaded double accounted for three of the Toronto runs in a five-run, sixth-inning rally.

Phillies seek to lose flair

By The Associated Press

If the Philadelphia Phillies haven't lost their flair for the dramatic, they should go into a slump right about now.

It is one year to the day since the Phillies saw a whopping 15½-game lead begin to fritter away. It dwindled down to three games before they recovered and won the National League East by nine games over the Pittsburgh Pirates. And, of course, there is the team's monumental collapse down the stretch in 1964.

"That doesn't even come to mind. This is the first time anyone's ever asked me that question," Manager Danny Ozark said following the red-hot Phillies' 3-2 triumph over the Atlanta Braves Tuesday night. It was their sixth consecutive victory and 19th in 20 games and kept them 7½ games ahead of Pittsburgh...their largest lead of the season.

Greg Luzinski's two-run single in the first inning and Mike Schmidt's 31st home run in the fifth paced the Phillies' triumph. Overshadowed were 13 strikeouts in eight innings by Atlanta's Phil Niekro which gave him a league-leading 204 for the season and broke his record of 195 for a Braves pitcher the team's 12-year Atlanta history.

"Our club has developed a much more positive attitude on the importance of winning," said relief pitcher Tug McGraw, who replaced winner Randy Lerch in the eighth. "Early in the season we had a lot of lackadaisical play. Now we seem to be concentrating on every play.

"You can't take any team lightly. Anyone wearing a big league uniform can beat you. Last year we went into a slump about this time, but this year I think we'll be an awesome team from here on out. We probably have more depth than anyone in the league."

Pirates 7, Padres 6

Al Oliver broke a tie in the bottom of the ninth with a first pitch home run off San Diego relief ace Rollie Fingers. The Pirates, who had lost three games in a row, scored a pair of unearned runs in the eighth inning to take a 6-5 lead but San Diego's Gene Tenace tied it in the ninth with a homer.

"When I got near home plate, he (Fingers) looked at me and said, 'You dirty rascal,'" Oliver disclosed. "I kind of laughed. We're old friends from Portsmouth, Ohio, and we played on the same American Legion team each summer."

Giants 4, Cubs 3

Tim Foli's run-scoring single in the 13th inning gave the Giants their first victory of the year over the Cubs after eight defeats. With one out in the 13th, Jack Clark walked and stole second and Darrell Evans also walked before Foli's soft single.

"The way the game was going I knew it would take a chink hit to win it," said Chicago's Bobby Murcer, whose long drive with a man aboard in the bottom of the inning was caught near the fence. "I still can't believe the ball I hit didn't go out of the park."

Cardinals 2, Dodgers 1

Bob Forsch pitched a three-hitter in outdueling Don Sutton, and Lou Brock drove in the winning run with a second-inning single for his 2,800th career hit. The 38-year-old Brock, who singled and scored in the first inning, also stole the 889th base of his career, leaving him three shy of the all-time major league record set by Ty Cobb.

"It's good to win. I haven't been doing much of anything out there," said Brock, who entered the game in a 1-for-26 slump. Forsch, 16-5, shut out the Mets on two hits in his last outing but called this effort "the best game that I've thrown all year, especially against that kind of a club."

Expos 4, Reds 2

Dave Cash continued his season-long assault on Cincinnati with two hits, an RBI, and two runs scored. Cash doubled and scored in the first inning, reached on a fielder's choice and scored in the fourth, and drove in an insurance run with an infield hit in the ninth. Gary Carter homered for Montreal's other run.

"Most guys have a team they hit exceptionally well. My team is Cincinnati," said Cash, who has 18 hits in 37 at-bats against the Reds this season for an average of .486." They give me a lot of good pitches to hit."

Mets 2, Astros 1

Lenny Randle singled home Leo Foster with the winning run in the ninth inning after the Mets tied the score in the eighth on Ed Kranepool's pinch double. Houston scored in the top of the eighth on Terry Puhl's double and a single by Jose Cruz.

Goodner gains eligibility

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gary Goodner, 6-8 forward who missed half of last season because of grades, has regained his academic eligibility, says University of Texas basketball Coach Abe Lemons.

The departure of the muscular Goodner from the middle allowed other teams to beat up on his finesse-oriented team, Lemons said. Lemons swore he would go out and get some "Godzillas" to compete, and he did recruit well.

Gilliam is shaky Saint

By The Associated Press

New Orleans Coach Hank Stram says there's a strong chance that quarterback Joe Gilliam won't make it back with the Saints.

Gilliam was passing during a practice session Tuesday, but Stram said he ranks Gilliam dead last in the four-man race for the quarterback job.

That means the former Pittsburgh Steelers star is apt to be cut or traded by the National Football League team.

Stram says he still has faith in the quarterback, but that there isn't much time left for him to make it into form. The player hasn't made more than three practices in a row since the preseason started due to headaches and nausea resulting from his withdrawal from heroin.

Meanwhile, Garo Yepremian is back, but it looks as though Roger Staubach's comeback may be delayed.

Yepremian, the Miami Dolphins' placekicker who has been sidelined with a hamstring pull since Saturday, practiced Tuesday and kicked well, according to Coach Don Shula. Bob Griese returns to his more familiar role as quarterback and Yepremian to his regular kicking job in the Dolphins' NFL exhibition against Minnesota Friday night.

But in Dallas, quarterback Roger Staubach's hamstring wasn't healing well. Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said there was no better than a 50 per cent chance he would play in Saturday's game against Baltimore.

"It will be difficult to keep him out of there. He always tries to hide his injuries," said Landry.

Elsewhere in the league, the Baltimore Colts said they'd retire the venerable No. 19 jersey of Johnny Unitas in an Oct. 9 ceremony.

The Colts also announced they'd signed five-year veteran cornerback Nelson Muncey to a series of one-year contracts. Muncey missed the team's last six games last year with a knee injury.

The Cincinnati Bengals moved premier receiver Isaac Curtis from strong-side flanker to weak-side split end to give him more pass-catching opportunities.

Watson, Weiskopf eye duel

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Tom Watson and Tom Weiskopf both have an added incentive this week in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

Watson, winner of the British Open, the Masters and three other American titles this year and the leading money winner, has the opportunity to become only the third golfer to go past $300,000 in single-season earnings.

Weiskopf is looking for a spot in next week's World Series of Golf.

"That's my principal goal right now," he said. "I'm fighting for the World Series."

Both could make reach their goals in the 72-hole test that begins Thursday on the tough, 7,007-yard, par 71 No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club. And both could reach them without winning.

Watson, with $291,678 for the year, could finish as low as sixth and join the absent Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller as the only players to earn $300,000 in one year.

More importantly, he is almost certain of extending his money lead over the runner-up Nicklaus and, with a high finish, could be within range of Miller's record $351,022.

"With the purses going up all the time, that's not the sort of record that figures to stand up for any length of time, but I'd still like to break it," Watson said.

After this tourney, he is scheduled for only two more appearances this season on the American tour, including next week's World Series.

Weiskopf has not yet secured a spot in that elite field, but is in a commanding position to do so this week. Another victory, to go with his Kemper Open title earlier in the year, would do it nicely.

He can get in another way, too. He is the leader, by 40 points over Mike Morley, on the summer tour standings which close with this event. Simply finishing ahead of Morley would assure Weiskopf of the 18th spot in the World Series field.

In addition to Watson, Weiskopf and Morley, the 156-man field here includes 12 other 1977 tour winners, topped by defending champion Ray Floyd.

ACC coaches disturbed over cage dropout rate

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference basketball coaches are worried about a disturbing trend among their players: a declining number end their college careers with a diploma.

The coachescite a number of reasons:

—Players can keep their grades up.

—Intense publicity creates an unreal atmosphere in which academic achievment is difficult.

—Professional basketball offers big money to a talented few before they graduate.

—Freshman eligibility brings many students to college with unrealistic expectations of how much they will play in their first year.

WHATEVER THE reason, the statistics for the last 15 years show a marked decline in the number of players who graduate on time and play out their college eligibility.

In the six-year period from 1962 to 1967, the seven ACC member schools recruited 208 players on basketball scholarships. A total of 125, 60 per cent, both graduated and played out their eligibility. Meanwhile 161, or 77 per cent, eventually got their degrees.

From 1968 through 1973, the ACC recruited 203 players, 106, or 52 per cent, graduated and completed eligibility while 125, or 62 per cent, eventually graduated.

Since 1973, there have been 81 ACC basketball recruits and 26, or almost one-third, already have left campus. Of the 20 incoming freshmen in 1974, only 10 will be entering their senior years next month.

The graduation figure for ACC basketball recruits over the last 15 years is 266 out of 423, or 66 per cent.

NORTH CAROLINA'S Dean Smith has the best record of active ACC coaches in terms of keeping players on campus. He says coaches need to stay in better touch with their players off the court.

Smith, whose tenure spans the 15-year statistical period, has compiled a 332-104 record while graduating 40 or 73 per cent of 55 recruits and coaching 34 or 62 per cent of the 55 through four years of eligibility.

"From the time we start recruiting a player, we hammer away at the importance of academics," Smith said. "We consider grades as part of a player's responsibility. In one-on-one conferences, I spend more time talking about academics than basketball. Players are encouraged to set academic goals for themselves, even to predict their grade-point averages. And if I get word that a player hasn't been attending class, he rides the bench for a while."

THE STATISTICS were compiled by The Greensboro Daily News.

The figures show that Virginia, which has graduated 41 of 53 recruits in the last 15 years, leads the ACC with a 77 per cent graduation score. Duke is second with 75 per cent, followed by Carolina's 73 per cent, Wake Forest's 65 per cent, Clemson's 61 per cent, Maryland's 59 per cent and N.C. State's 57 per cent.

N.C. State's Norm Sloan and Maryland's Lefty Driesell both cite the influence of professional contract opportunities for college standouts, despite the odds against actually cashing in big.

"A total of 700,000 youngsters play high school ball," said Sloan. "And 18,000 of them go on to play college ball. But there's only room for 264 players in the NBA. So we try to point out to players that those are unbelievably bad odds and that they'd better concentrate on getting an education to enter some other field."

Driesell said the freshmen eligibility rule has contributed to the problem.

"Most young players expect to come into a college program and get their share of playing time right off the bat," he said. "And when it doesn't happen, they become disappointed and eventually disenchanted."

Rosewall loses flash

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Ken Rosewall, a one-time Australian Davis Cup star who helped build pro tennis into a virtual gold mine, finally is slowing down. At age 42 he no longer is a flash picture player.

Rosewall, one of the game's all-time greats, was embarrassed Tuesday night, as he was beaten 7-5, 6-4 by Patrice Dominguez of France in a first-round match of the 50th U.S. Pro Tennis Championships at Longwood.

Rosewall, who bolted the amateur ranks with other outstanding players in the 1960s, appeared not only rusty, but run down at even lackadaisical at times.

Missing was the old zip that carried him to three U.S. Pro titles, four Australian championships and two U.S. Open titles. The fact that he has played little in recent months seemed only incidental.

"This certainly is not the best way to start a tournament," Rosewall said with a faint grin. "I didn't feel tired, but this was my second tournament since May. I felt sure I could win, but he played well and I missed a lot of easy shots.

"I also had trouble with the lights. I had trouble seeing the ball, especially on return of my service."

Dominguez, a member of the French Davis Cup team here to tune up for the Cup semifinals against Italy next month, won a battle of service breaks with Rosewall.

Rosewall was broken four times and Dominguez three in the first set. The pair exchanged service breaks in the first five games of the second set before the 27-year-old Frenchman held by saving seven break points in the sixth.

"I don't know whether it's my biggest win," Dominguez said. "On my first visit to this country with the Davis Cup team in 1972, I beat Pancho Gonzales. That certainly stands out for me."

Rosewall had been seeded ninth in the $125,000 tournament. Dominguez earned one of the 64 berths by qualifying in weekend action.

Second-seeded Briant Gottfried survived a brief scare in a second-round match, advancing with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-0 triumph over Alvaro Betancur of Colombia.

Attorney to pay Ali

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Fairfax attorney Spiros Anthony has agreed to pay world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali $390,000 to settle a claim by Ali that Anthony misued and spent some of Ali's funds last year.

The out-of-court settlement, reached Tuesday, calls for Anthony to pay Ali the $390,000 at the rate of $20,000 a month. If Anthony misses one payment, the total amount will increase to $625,000, less payments already made.

The agreement also calls for Anthony—a former attorney for Ali—to withdraw a $3 million countersuit.

The suit alleges that Ali owed Anthony $3 million in profits from various "joint ventures." According to court papers the ventures included the retailing of packaged chicken called Cahmp Chicken and the sale of Mack trucks and prayer rugs in Middle Eastern countries.

Neither side admitted any wrongdoing as part of the settlement.

Ali sued Anthony for $2 million, claiming Anthony breached his duties as trustee of Ali's share of $6.1-million purse from last September's fight against Ken Norton in New York.

Bradshaw key Steeler

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — Terry Bradshaw marched into training camp eight years ago, touted as a man with a golden arm, tabbed as savior of the hapless Pittsburgh Steelers.

Bradshaw has lived up to the billing as well as anyone could. He has led the Steelers out of pro football's wilderness and helped them win five division titles and two Super Bowl championships.

What more could be expected of this blond cowboy from Louisiana who loves to sing, fish, raise cattle—and play football?

Bradshaw knows: When is Terry Bradshaw, the hot-shot quarterback from Louisiana Tech, going to pass for 3,000 yards, become All-Pro and finally live up to his ability?

"Everybody is waiting for me to erupt," Bradshaw said Tuesday at St. Vincent College, the Steelers training camp. "Everybody is waiting for me to get 3,000 yards and 28 TDs like Kenny Stabler (of Oakland). But that's not going to happen. I don't think it can happen and us win."

Bradshaw guides the offense, calls the plays. But the Steelers, under Coach Chuck Noll, are not a pass-oriented team. They do not rely on the pass to win.

And that means Bradshaw plays a different kind of role than Stabler or Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota, who use the pass as a primary weapon.

"I'm not the nucleus of this team," said Bradshaw. "The defense and the running game are. It took me a while to get used to the idea but now I like it.

"I think it's even more of an accomplishment to have 50 per cent completions, have two running backs run for 1,000 yards and win the Super Bowl. If they're waiting for me to erupt ...heck, I may have erupted five years ago."

Then he launched into the Bradshaw grin, looked at his roommate, punter Bobby Walden, and said: "Watch me. I'll probably have a 4,000-yard year and 30 TDs. Wouldn't that be something?"

Bradshaw had his best personal statistics five years ago, passing for 2,259 yards and 13 touchdowns.

"Yeah, and we were 6-8 that year," he said.

In 1975, Bradshaw nearly matched that season with 2,055 yards, but he also threw 18 touchdown passes and the Steelers won their second straight Super Bowl.

Bradshaw has oked extremely sharp in preseasogames this year. He completed 13 of 6 passes against the New York Jets st week. He has a 65 per cent avera in three games while playing about alf the time.

The 6-foot-3, 21 ound Bradshaw attributes his finetart to peace of mind, experience d a change in his passing style.

"I'm excited abt this year," he said. "I'm throwi the ball better because I'm taki it up to my shoulder after d snap and not whirling it around ke a pitcher like I used to. I'm not throwing it as hard, but I'm throwing it etter."

Bradshaw, whowent through a divorce several ars ago, now is married to ice ating star Jo Jo Starbuck.

"I'm happy. I'm happily married. We don't have mu in common, but we have importan things in common. We go to church tee times a week, we pray together nd we love each other. But she don't tag along with me and I don't tag ong with her.

"She finally we to a cattle sale with me, but thes lept through the whole thing. I dot think she'll go again. And I wenskating with her one night. She cdn't believe it."

Cosmos seek win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It's become easier for Shep Messing. The Cosmos goalie doesn't have to worry about glass anymore.

The Cosmos meet the Rochester Lancers tonight in the second and final game of their North American Soccer League semifinal series. The Cosmos won the opener 2-1. In the other semifinal series, Seattle, which leads 1-0, hosts Los Angeles Thursday night.

Another full house, 76,891, is expected for the game in sparkling Giants Stadium, a far cry from the Cosmos' old play ground, Downing Stadium on Randall's Island.

The only thing sparkling at that stadium was the broken glass which often littered Messing's goal crease.

"I stood many hours in practice and in games making sure there was no broken glass," said Messing of the depressed conditions at Downing Stadium. "It's hard enough stopping goals without having to worry about getting sliced up.

"The night before, if there was a music festival, all the garbage and bottles would be left on the field. I literally had to clean up the goal area."

Jim Trecker, the Cosmos' director of public relations, says in the bad old days, the days before Pele rescued American soccer, the team's officials would have to post ticket sale signs, sweep the stadium and clean the seats.

"When Pele came to us in 1975 we had no ticket windows," Trecker said. "People came directly to the door and paid their money."

Now the Cosmos are the hottest ticket in town. Actor Dustin Hoffman calls up for tickets, Henry Kissinger comes to the games and a lot of just plain folks, coming mostly from the suburbs, are going to the games.

The Cosmos' last home game, the Aug. 14 playoff match against Fort Lauderdale, drew a North American record of 77,691 spectators. Trecker says 800 fewer fans will get in this time because standing room was eliminated following the Fort Lauderdale game.

But if the stadium were bigger and there were no restrictions, "we'd get 90-100,000," Trecker predicted.

Messing remembers in 1973 when the entire turnout at Randall's Island could fit into one men's room at Giants Stadium.

"It was a July 4 game, a Sunday," said the Cosmos' flamboyant goalkeeper, who was the game's most valuable player Sunday. "There were maybe 100 people there, and I knew 99 of them."

Lou Holtz' grid philosophy sounds contradictory

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Lou Holtz' offensive philosophy sounds contradictory: "We will play a wide-open conservative game."

But, read on.

"People chuckle at that, but it's really true," said Holtz, who is preparing for his first year as head football coach at the University of Arkansas. "We will throw it from our end zone, but we know what we're doing."

Holtz, head coach at William and Mary for three years and North Carolina State for four years before arriving at Arkansas via the New York Jets, says he learned a valuable lesson his second year in coaching.

"I lost a football game because we were sitting on a lead deep in our territory, a 10-point lead, and trying to run the clock out. Gol-durned if we didn't fumble it...twice. I think we threw 33 passes that day and nobody even deflected one. That's what's ridiculous. If people know you may throw it out of the end zone, it makes it a little easier to run it out of there."

Arkansas' passing attack was awful last year. The Razorbacks completed 38 of 104 passes while compiling a 5-5-1 record.

Holtz says the passing game is difficult to develop and that the Razorbacks didn't progress in that area as fast as he would have liked during spring practice.

"One reason was the protection," he said. "All of sudden your linemen have got to learn to protect the passer which is completely contrary to everything they have been taught in the running game. You can forget about developing a passing game until you learn to protect. Halfway through the spring we could finally start getting a pass off.

"For the linemen, it's a passive type of thing. Then you've got to teach the receivers to learn to catch the ball coming out of a tunnel. It's not like you just run out there and catch the ball. You don't see the quarterback. All of a sudden you just see the ball shooting out of the linemen, so to speak.

"The receivers have to catch it in a crowd, find the open areas, slide there, run the right route. Then you have to get the quarterbacks to get the proper reads against all the different coverages.

"It's a sequence thing, but you can't get those other things until you develop the pass protection. It might not take as long as what it should, but it's taken us longer than what we want it to take."

Holtz says he has great confidence in quarterback Ron Calcagni, who played only five complete games last season because of injuries.

"He's going to make a lot of great plays because of his ability, because of his approach to the game," Holtz said. "The big thing Ron has to do for us to be successful, he has to eliminate the bad play. By trying to make the great plays consistently, which nobody is going to do, he sometimes makes the bad play."

Robert Farrell, who suffered a broken collarbone last year, established himself during the spring as one of the Razorbacks' receivers. At 6-foot-6, he is an excellent target. Holtz is still looking for another wide receiver.

He is high on tight end Charles Clay, 6-foot-1, 205. "Clay may be the finest athlete I've ever coached. He's not big enough, but he sure is good enough. He hasn't really played up to his potential but if he does he will be as fine a tight end as there is in the conference."

The offensive line is shy of experience, but Holtz is expecting big things from senior guard Leotis Harris and senior tackle Steve Heim.

Holtz says the question marks on defense are depth and defensive end, where Arkansas is trying to replace Johnnie Meadors and Dennis Winston. "I have great confidence in our defense if they'll stay healthy," he said.

Album captures flavor of inaugural tribute

By LARRY ROHTER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Imagine being asked to put together a show that's a "tribute to America, its people, its creative and performing arts." You'd want to include at least one serious piece by an American classical composer, of course. Some Broadway show tunes, too. Also Jazz, blues, gospel and spirituals. A bit of comedy, perhaps. Country music and, yes, even a dash of rock'n'roll.

"The Inaugural Album" has all this and a lot more. Recorded at a Kennedy Center gala concert this past Jan. 19, the night before Jimmy Carter took his oath of office, this 90-minute-plus, two-record set features performances by some of the most prominent names in American entertainment—brought together in an effort to capture the American popular culture, music and theater division.

It is a recording with an unusual, even unprecedented premise, and Columbia Records intends to promote it with some unorthodox marketing techniques. Current plans call for "The Inaugural Album" to be sold, at $40 a copy, exclusively by mail order: Ads will be placed in several prestigious magazines and newspapers across the country, and profits from the sale of the album will be donated to the National Endowment for the Arts.

In return for their investment, purchasers of "The Inaugural Album" will receive a simple yet attractive clothbound package containing a 40 page commemorative booklet and a pair of records somewhat uneven in content. In general, the strictly musical numbers here fare better than the comedy skits of the spoken bits; although actor Jack Nicholson, one of several hosts imported from Hollywood, at one point speaks of the "irreverance" of the comedy routines, the truth is that there's more zing in the performances by the singers, both classical and pop.

The musical selections range from Beveraly Sills singing "Una Voce Popo Fa" from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville", and Linda Ronstadt rocking her way through "When Will I Be Loved" to Aretha Franklin's soulful interpretation of three classic Duke Ellington tunes and Loretta Lynn's twangy rendition of her own "Coal Miner's Daughter." Despite their vast differences of style, these performances do have a common denominator: the excellence of a respective field, amply demonstrated here.

A review

But it is pop singer-songwriter Paul Simon's spare, moving rendition of "American Tune" that perhaps best exemplifies what host Paul Newman cited as the purpose of the inaugural gala: to capture the "beautiful new spirit in the country." After explaiing that he wrote "American Tune" during "some of the bleakest and most turbulent times" in the nation's history, Simon dedicates his performance to Carter "in the hope that perhaps a time of righteousness and dignity may now be upon us."

Running a close second is the medley of spirituals sung by the Howard University Choir and Brother John Sellers as accompaniment for the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. Essentially a reworking of three traditional and very familiar standards—"Sinner Man," "The Day Is Past and Gone" and "Rock-a My Soul"—this rollicking, inspirational 8 ½-minute gospel interlude embodies those qualities of hopefulness, faith and endurance in the face of adversity that we like to think of as being quintessentially American.

In comparison, the handful of comedy routines that occupy all 26 minutes of the album's second side seem flat and, in the case of Chevy Chase and Dan Aykroyd, labored. Although the late Freddie Prinze, who committed suicide nine days after the inaugural gala, contributes a devastatingly accurate impression of Muhammad Ali, the best that Mike Nichols and Elaine May, reunited for only the second time in 17 years, can do is a tedious sketch about "the first Jewish President" and his nagging mother. Maybe you had to be there to appreciate it.

•

One show that can be enjoyed from a distance, however, is "Annie," the musical that proved to be a smashing success at the Kennedy Center before going on to become a hit on Broadway. The original cast album of "Annie" is now available, recorded in one day at the same studio used for "My Fair Lady," one of the best-selling cast albums of all time.

Como likes slower pace of life

By JOSEPH P. MASTRANGELO
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Perry Como is a man of great faith who once told an audience, "I have the things money can buy now, but the things money can't buy I've always had."

Relaxing more in a straight back chair than anyone could, he wore a plain yellow shirt with the cuffs turned up, open at the next showing a gold medalion hanging from a chain, beige shorts, sweat socks and untied sneakers. His appearance matched his attitude toward life.

At 65 he looks a very handsome 40 and was planning to jog five or six miles in the afternoon. His weight is 160 pounds and his health is perfect. "I started jogging about 10 years ago, just to get the heart started. Some days I go up to 7 or 8 miles. It all depends how I feel."

He thought about the question, "How long have you been in show business?" He closed his eyes as a lot of people do to think, and said, "I married Roselle, let's see, we celebrated our 44th anniversary in July, so it's 44 years because I started singing the same year."

Roselle Belline was a childhood sweetheart Como met when he was an apprentice barber in Steve Fragapane's shop in Cannonsburg, Penn.

He was the seventh child in a family of 13 born to Pietro and Lucia Como, who came to the U.S. from Abruzzi, Italy, and the first of their children to be born in America.

Roselle and Perry have three children and nine grandchildren and he is amused when he says, "I think the kids are going the way of my parents."

His first singing job was in 1933 when he made $28 a week with Freddie Carlone's band.

In 1936 he went with Ted Weems for $50 a week and was unhappy with the lifestyle.

"After years of one-night stands and the disruption of family life I quit, went back home and tried to find a good location for a barber shop."

In 1942 the demand for him to return to show business was heavy, so he signed with CBS to do his own radio show.

"I knew the direction I wanted to go then. The big bands were in, Sinatra had the kids screaming in the aisles. Helen O'Connell, Bob Eberly were all starting up."

Como had some screamers and it embarrassed him, so he told his audience, "Scream if you want, but there is really nothing to scream about." "Then I sold them on the idea that screaming was disrespectful," Como said.

Along with his nightclub and theater success, Como's recordings started to hit the market. In 1945 he set a record by selling over a million copies of "Till the End of Time." In one week in 1946, 4 million Como recordings were turned out.

He had long planned to cut down his weekly schedule, and after 20 years of TV and radio made good his "threat" of wanting to spend more time with his family. "After all," Perry said, "things don't go on forever. They've got to come to a halt sometime."

That is exactly how he felt sitting out at Shady Grove Md., where he is appearing for three nights. He tours infrequently now.

"It's tough to do shows. You have to get guests and they are hard to come by, and then you have to reciprocate and go on their shows.

"I could have Bob Hope, but he might call me and say, 'We're going to Tanganyika Tuesday and I want you along.'"

The pace he has set is just right for Como now.

Florida in the winter and Long Island in the summer. Some time with the grandchildren, a little golf, fishing now and then.

About his sons he said, "One is a stock broker who hasn't made a dime for me. They work hard, I send them golf clubs and they send them back."

He still likes to get up once in awhile and sing before an audience and remembered a night at the Garden State Arts Center in New Jersey.

"It's beautiful out there and the people sit on the grass. I had an opening throwaway line. I was going to come out to this nice middle-aged audience and say, 'I see you're all on grass.'

"I was sitting in my dressing room and the young warmup comedian is on stage throwing out the same line."

Like a lot of Italians, Perry likes a plate of spaghetti and bragged about his wife's excellent cooking.

"She can make any dish there is. Once in awhile we have spaghetti, we call it 'a spaghetti fix'. I eat a huge bowl and have to stay away from it for a couple of weeks."

He talked about his songs and said he sees a good many younger people in his audiences so he sings a few contemporary songs along with the oldies.

"How could I leave out 'Prisoner of Love'? Can Helen O'Connell leave out 'Green Eyes'?"

Summer show could be band's 'stepping stone'

The first hit song Bill and Taffy Danoff were connected with — John Denver's "Country Roads," which the Danoffs helped to write — brought about some big changes in their lives.

"That song," Bill Danoff says, "bought us a house and a Mercedes, and paid off all our bills," one of which was for $1,300 worth of groceries. Musicians can work up an appetite waiting for the Big Break.

Last year the Danoffs, now one-half of the Starland Vocal Band, had another hit. This one was called "Afternoon Delight," and it brought more changes, such as a bigger house, and their very own television series.

It's called "The Starland Vocal Band Show" and it is on CBS on Sunday nights. The program is what's known as a "summer replacement," which means if it does well in the ratings it will probably become a regular series eventually, maybe in January.

And if it doesn't ...

"If it doesn't," says Bill Danoff, "at least we will have flopped on our own merits. It's very important to us that the show reflect us, what we're really like. We want to maintain our integrity, but at the same time we want the show to be as relaxed, as free-form as possible."

The premise sounds promising enough. It has the band — which includes Jon Carroll and Margot Chapman in addition to the Danoffs — scooting around to such relaxed, free-form places as Great Falls in suburban Washington, D.C., trendy old Clyde's and the Cellar Door in Washington's Georgetown and Pepperdine College in Malibu, Calif., singing their songs, of course, and engaging in a little light comedy. Things will be kept informal, low-key. There won't, for instance, be any "big name" guest stars.

Marshal reveals Patty she knew

NEW YORK (AP) — Patty Hearst never smiled before the cameras during her 1976 bank robbery trial because her attorney said such pictures would make the public "think she was frivolous" and look at her trial as "a lark, "writes Janey Jiminez.

The former U.S. marshal who spent 350 hours with the newspaper heiress has written a book "My Prisoner," which is condensed in the Septmber issue of Ladies Home Journal.

She wrote that "The Patty Hearst I came to know is a far cry from either the devil caricature perpetrated by the SLA or the demure angel fashioned by her lawyers."

The account also claims Miss Hearst was upset about a book written by Steve Weed, her fiance until she was abducted by the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Weed said he told the SLA members during the abduction, "Take anything you want but leave us alone."

But Miss Hearst was quoted as saying "Weed's words were '...and leave me alone.' If you really love someone, how can you say, 'Take everything but leave me alone!'"

TV movie examines effects of violence on audience, writer

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A TV movie shows a mentally ill man setting fire to a building he designed. A disturbed kid sees the film, sets a fire in which he dies. Some blame the TV movie for his death.

The film's conscience-stricken writer in time decides he'll never again do a show with violence in it. Too pat an ending? Maybe.

But you'll see it in "The Storyteller," a made-for-NBC movie about the controversial issue of violence in TV and its possible effect on viewers. The show will air in late November or early December.

And the writer's decision to avoid future depictions of violence "is an exact duplication of what we did some years ago," says the movie's coauthor, veteran TV scripter Richard Levinson.

Levinson, who wrote "The Storyteller" with his long-time partner, William Link, said their decision came shortly after Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1968.

"Before there was a hue and cry about violence on television, we made a unilateral choice," he said. "We had a gut feeling that a constant diet of violence on TV was in some unspecified way detrimental to children."

True, they created the violence-prone "Mannix" in 1967, but say they left the show just after it began. Yes, they created "Columbo" but say they deliberately took violence out of it from the start.

They were interviewed at the Century City offices of ABC, which turned down "The Storytellers" but where, ironically, the filming of the NBC show was under way this week.

'We'd been debating this (the TV violence issue) within ourselves a long time," Levinson said. "We decided to write this piece about six months ago, and with a somewhat antiviolence bias.

"Midway through, the whole thing broke loose."

He meant the strong, recent criticism of TV violence by the PTA, the American Medical Association and Dr. George Gerbner, communications dean of the University of Pennsylvania, among others.

He said he and Link studied that side and its demands for less violence, then that of showmakers worried that such demands, however well-intended, could lead to widespread censorship in television.

What the program tries to do, he added, is show the complexity of the entire issue of TV violence, to show there's no easy answer.

In 1974, the mother of a young girl sued NBC for $11 million. She alleged that a rape scene in "Born Innocent," a TV movie, led to a similar attack on her 11-year-old daughter.

Levinson was asked if NBC had suggested he and Link write "The Storyteller" to illustrate the problems the industry faces in the issue of violence in dramatic television programs.

"NBC had absolutely nothing to do with this," he said. "We wrote it because we're at Universal (Studios) and get paid, anyway.

"We submitted it. Their (NBC's) concern was not so much what it was about as whether it would attract an audience..."

007 script writer finds Bond audience demanding

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The thing about the James Bond movies is that you can't repeat yourself, and yet the audience demands similar ingredients. Writing them becomes a brain-breaking thing."

Richard Maibaum knows. He has coauthored eight of the 10 Bond movies not including the maverick "Casino Royale." The latest is on view throughout the nation this summer: "The Spy Who Loved Me," starring Roger Moore, Barbara Bach, Curt Jergens and 7-foot-2 Richard Kiel as Jaws, whose steel teeth are as lethal as a sten gun.

Maibaum was a curious choice to become 007 laureate. He is about as British as a Coney Island red hot. Born in New York City, he attended New York University, graduated from the University of Iowa and came to Hollywood in 1936 after making a name for himself as playwright.

He worked on such scripts as "They Gave Him a Gun," "Stablemates," "I Wanted Wings," produced combat films for the Army during the war, returned to write and produce "The Great Gatsby" (Alan Ladd version), "The Big Clock," "No Man of Her Own," and so on.

Because he had made several films with Ladd, Maibaum was lured abroad. Ladd became partners with producer Irving Allen and Albert "Cubby" Broccoli in a series of films made abroad for tax reasons.

"'Cubby' gave me the Ian Fleming books to read in 1957 or 1958," Maibaum recalled. "He was thinking about filming them, and his partner, Irving Allen, didn't want to go along. He didn't like the Bond books. So Harry became partners with Harry Saltzman.

"I first wrote the script of 'Thunderball.' But because of a lawsuit against Fleming over the rights to 'Thunderball,' 'Dr. No' was filmed first. United Artists rather reluctantly advanced $600,000. The picture cost about $1 million, I believe."

And so the Bondomania began. Maibaum continued collaborating on all of the films except "Live and Let Die" and "You Only Live Twice," during which time he was contracted to MGM for other films.

The elements of a Bond script are rigid: larger-than-life heroes and villains, torture scenes, flip jokes, stunning women and "a pretense of seriousness." The script writers' chore becomes more difficult with each succeeding film, Maibaum remarked, because they are working almost entirely on their own.

Networks juggling premieres 'like beginning of World War'

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — "It's like the beginning of World War III," proclaims CBS senior vice president Lou Dorfsman, who is in charge of his network's promotional activities.

ENTERTAINMENT

As the new television season is about to get under way, the three networks are indeed mobilized for war — the perennial prime-time ratings battle — and many broadcasting executives are predicting the coming season will be the most aggressively competitive ever.

At least it is starting out that way, with all three networks jumping the gun on the official season start as they jockey for position and try to throw the competition off balance.

ABC, last year's ratings leader after years of dwelling in the cellar, is the early-line favorite to repeat for this season because of its solid line-up of returning series favorites such as "Happy Days" and "Charlie's Angels."

CBS and NBC, meanwhile, are expected to battle furiously to avoid the third-place booby prize they used to reserve for ABC. Because the outcome could mean extinction for either network's high-priced programming executive, this has contributed an even more desperate edge to the jousting.

"There have been seasons that have been competitive in the past, but they have never been this competitive," observed Harvey L. Shephard, a CBS vice president for programs. "When they have, they were a two-way race-ABC was not in the running. But as a three-way race, in terms of moves and counter-moves, this is far and away the most competitive season ever. And at the end we're going to have a lot of burned-out programming executives."

For the last few weeks, the networks have been reworking their schedules, honing strategy, publicly sniping at each other to psych out the opposition, and generally trying to get an early let up in the, to them, all-important run for the ratings.

As a result, the season that was supposed to begin officially on Sept. 19 now looks like it will get under way just after Labor Day.

And the opening two weeks will be crammed with ballyhooed specials, known in the trade as "stunts," that are meant to grab attention for the remainder of the season's schedule.

ABC programming whiz Fred Silverman triggered the shift when he scheduled "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," a high-priced political mini-series based on John Ehrlichman's Watergate novel, "The Company," for six straight nights beginning Sept. 6.

Hoping for a repeat of the blockbuster ratings success of last season's "Roots," ABC planned to use the "Washington" series in the same way it utilized last summer's Olympic Games — to heavily promote the new shows on its fall schedule to a fat audience while the rival networks were still showing their summer reruns.

But NBC and CBS weren't about to concede without a struggle and have thrown in blockbusters of their own and also moved up many of their season premieres to blunt the ABC strategy.

Beginning Sept. 5, NBC has loaded its schedule with assorted specials virtually every night for two weeks. These include the first of six one-hour "Laugh-In" shows, a three-hour motion picture, "The Hindenburg," about the infamous dirigible starring George C. Scott; a preseason football game between the Dallas Cowboys and the Pittsburgh Steelers; a quadrupleheader of heavyweight boxing filling one entire evening's schedule; the first broadcast of the Miss Black America Pageant; the 1977 Emmy Awards; and the Third Annual Rock Music Awards Show.

With this opening barrage, NBC is displaying the strategy it will pursue for the rest of the season, relying heavily on special events programming and mini-series to get audiences while downplaying the weekly series shows where it is weakest.

CBS already had committed itself to an unusual $1 million promotion of its new schedule tied to an 11-page supplement in TV Guide for the week of Sept. 19 that offers $250,000 in sweepstakes prizes for viewers who tun into CBS' new shows and who can answer simple questions about them.

But it was also forced to move up its premieres and counter with stunts of its own.

So also beginning just after Labor Day, CBS has the first television showing of the movie "Logan's Run," a two-hour season premiere of "The Waltons," a "Night of the Champions" evening of boxing of its own, a two-hour "State Fair America" special preceding the "1977 Miss America Pageant" on Sept. 10, and a "Super Night at Forest Hills" variety special tied to the tennis tournament.

For the early two weeks, it also is introducing such newcomer series as "Rafferty" and "The Betty White Show," and advancing the start of some regulars.

CBS' Dorfsman expresses some disappointment that his "sweepstakes" promotion has been undercut but says that, on second thought, "I figured if people watch before the formal premiere time, that gives them a leg up on answering some of the questions." Dorfsman says the magazine promotion, which no network has ever tried before, could boost initial viewing of CBS shows by 25 per cent.

"Variety," the magazine that serves as the weekly scorecared for the enterainment business, recently estimated that all of the advance jousting could be costing the three networks $15 million or more in commercial revenues they otherwise would have received because extremely expensive programming is being slotted in weeks where sponsors already have payed low rates for commercial time on what they thought would be summer reruns.

Not so, say the networks. ABC says it has been able to renegotiate prices with sponsors, and is getting $70,000 for a 30-second spot on the "Washington" series, or $140,000 a minute. And on a hastily produced special called "The Making of 'Star Wars' " about this summer's No. 1 movie sensation, which will air on Sept. 16, it is charging and getting $175,000 per minute for commercial time.

CBS and NBC also have been making adjustments to recoup some advertising revenues.

But, fortunately for networks, there is also an extremely robust advertising economy to support this white heat of program competition and it is considered worth it to each network to squander a few million dollars if it means keeping close to the pace as the ratings race starts.

"There's a definite value to get the head start and be first," said Jake Keever, vice president and national sales manager for ABC Television. "If we have 'Washington' on, we at least force NBC and CBS to move other items earlier. And if 'Washington' is a big hit, then we've got a big jump on everyone."

Total network television revenues last year exceeded $3 billion, and this year advertising rates are being boosted by between 15 and 25 per cent, with ABC getting the largest jump because it finally is cashing in on the ratings successes it achieved last season.

Advance selling for the entire season is very strong, with more than two-thirds of advertising time through next summer reportedly already sold by the networks and ABC claiming to be 90 per cent sold in the coming fourth quarter and 85 per cent for the next three quarters.

Ratings differentials do not affect revenues in a given season because most time is sold in advance, but each point difference in the Nielsen ratings is estimated to translate eventually into about $20 million in advertising sales.

According to most observers, ABC is expected to be the almost certain ratings leader after the first three months of the new season, particularly because it will be airing the World Series for the first time this year, and in prime time this has served as a tremendous ratings booster for NBC, which had it regularly in the past.

Opinion is divided as to how NBC and CBS will fare. ABC's Silverman took a swipe at his former employer by predicting CBS will finish "a distant third" because its new shows, though well done, are old-fashioned and "should have been scheduled three years ago." He predicted NBC's special events programming will outpace CBS.

On Wall Street and Madison Avenue, observers believe NBC may well be in second position for the first three months of the new season as it frontloads special programs such as the nine-hour showing of a television version of "The Godfather" incorporating two hours that were not included in the two Oscar winning films. This is scheduled for airing over four consecutive nights in November.

But they also predict that NBC — which was a solid second last year for the same period, mainly on the basis of a two-night showing of "Gone With the Wind" that broke all ratings records, only to drop to third — will fade again as NBC's weakness in regular series programming asserts itself.

NBC executives scoff at this suggestion, claiming they have a much larger arsenal of special programs and mini-series than they did last year, and say their regular series are not as weak as outsiders claim. They further bristle at charges they are far outspending their rivals in their programming strategy and therefore buying ratings at the expense of profits.

"ABC got where they are by dealing with the sleeping giants by outspending them," said NBC programming chief Paul Klein. "But we actually spend less for our stunts than ABC pays for its regular programming. We paid less for anything than they paid for 'Rich Man, Poor Man: Book II.' "

Klein even suggests ABC may come a cropper if the "Washington" series is not the kind of ratings bonanza Silverman anticipates and also is not as invincible in its overall schedule as most suggest.

So far as NBC supposed weakness in its regular series, the bread and butter of television profits, Klein says, "We'll beat CBS week-to-week in series programming.We'll beat them in the places where there is very little stunting, such as the 8 to 9 period. I think we'll beat them 6 out of 7 nights. And we might also do a job on ABC. We'll certainly beat ABC in adults."

West Texas areas draw discovery, pool wells

Nolan County gained a King sand pay opener and a reentry test was slated. A Fisher County wildcat pumped oil and water, and extenders finaled in Mitchell and Edwards sectors. James K. Anderson, Inc., of Dallas, has completed No. 1 Rotan as a King sand pay opener in the Divide field of Nolan, ½ mile northwest of Nolan townsite. The well had a 24-hour pumping potential of 46 barrels of 43-gravity oil and 21 barrels of water, producing through perforations at 4,127-4,140 feet, following treatment with 750 gallons of acid and 250 gallons of fracture fluid, plus 5,000 pounds of sand. Total depth is 4,146 feet, and 4½-inch casing was set on bottom. It is 1,588 feet from north and 717 feet from east lines of section 311, block 64, H&TC survey.

Fisher-Webb, Inc., Abilene, filed application to reenter and clean out to wildcat depth of 3,450 feet for tests at No. 2 Kinard, Nolan failure, three miles northeast of Blackwell.

Originally drilled by Superior Oil Co. as No. 2-30 Kinard, it is a former producer in the Blackwell, North (Ellenburger) field, and it became depleted in 1969.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 30, block Z, T&P survey.

FISHER PROJECT

Petroleum Corp. of Texas, operating from Breckenridge, was making production tests in the Noodle Creek at No. 6 Steele, Fisher wildcat, eight miles southwest of Hamlin.

The well pumped seven barrels of oil and 48 barrels of water in four hours, through perforations at 2,922-2,925 feet, following 400 gallons of acid on the pay section. Testing continued.

Drilled to 3,067 feet, it spots 990 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 210, block 1, BB&C survey, eight miles southwest of Hamlin and surrounded by Flippen production 2 in the Royston pool area.

MITCHELL EXTENDER

The Mitchell part of the Jameson, North (Strawn) pool gained a ⅞-mile northwest extension with completion of WES-TEX Drilling Co. No. 2 M. C. Hendry, four miles north of Silver.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 30 barrels of 43-gravity oil and nine barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,000-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 6,172-6,204 feet. Treatment was with 1,000 gallons of acid, plus 60,000 gallons of fluid and 88,000 pounds of fracture sand.

Location is 2,173 feet from south and 1,787 feet from east lines of section 2, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

CANYON WELL

Canyon gas production was extended 2¼ miles southeast in the Edwards part of the Sawyer field, with completion by Amoco miles Production Co. of its No. 5 H&C Peterson, 10 miles northeast of Rocksprings.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 162,000 cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 1,884-2,219 feet, after acidizing with 4,000 gallons.

It is 1,650 feet from northwest and 800 feet from southwest lines of section 25, T&NO survey, abstract 288.

Amoco asserts error started investigation

CHICAGO — Substantial discrepancies and conflicts in Federal Energy Administration calculations were the major cause of last winter's middle distillate pricing "triggerings" in the North Central region, according to an Amoco Oil Co. official.

In Aug. 2 testimony before the FEA, Amoco general manager of marketing John Hamilton asserted that the 2 FEA index, using incorrect data, had "triggered" the need for a government pricing investigation.

A "substantial discrepancy," said Hamilton, seemed to arise from FEA's mistaken assumption that refinery and retailer middle distillate oil sales to residents represented a 55-45 per cent split. "It is clear that refinery sales in the residential category do not exceed 10 per cent of the total residential sales."

Because the resulting error amounted to .4 cents per gallon, Hamilton said that the monitoring system had incorrectly signaled an evasion of the pricing index.

Citing this and other conflicts, Hamilton questioned why there had been so little FEA response to Amoco's expressed concern. "Since July 11 our representatives have repeatedly urged the Price Analysis Division, Office of Oil and Gas Analysis to review its published data. That office has yet to justify what appears to be a conflict in FEA data."

Hamilton said that if the FEA were to clear up this one point, "we believe it would demonstrate conclusively that the FEA index was not triggered in the North Central Region and that there is no need for this kind of device to monitor the industry's 2 prices in a free market."

Two test sites set

Pool sites have been staked in Ward and Sterling areas.

Gulf Oil Corp. will drill No. 4 T. B. Pruett GU, et al, as a 1¼-mile northwest outpost to the one-well Soda Lake (Fusselman) gas field of Northwest Ward.

It is slated to 19,800 feet, and spots 1,320 feet from southeast and 1,980 feet from southwest lines of section 31, block 1, W&NW survey, 11 miles northwest of Barstow.

The discovery, Gulf No. 1 Pruett, finaled in March for a calculated, absolute open flow of 46.8 million cubic feet of dry gas daily, through perforations at 19,000-19,198 feet.

Marathon Oil Co. will drill No. 2-28 R. T. Foster, a link test in a Southeast extension area of the Big Salute (Canyon) field of Sterling.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 28, block 31, T-5-S, T&P survey, 12 miles southwest of Sterling City. Contract depth is 8,000 feet.

Discovery completes

Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc., Midland, former Pennsylvanian, South reopener in the GPM field of Winkler County, 10 miles southeast of Kermit, has been repotentialed as a Tubb discovery.

It finaled for a daily pumping potential of 74 barrels of 35.2-gravity oil and 40 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio being 270-1.

Production was through perforations at 6,151-6,298 feet, after the section had been acidized with 12,000 gallons.

Total depth is 8,900 feet, and it is plugged back to 8,400 feet. Five and one-half inch casing is seated at 8,886 feet. Top of the Tubb was picked at 6,122 feet, under ground elevation of 2,812 feet.

Wellsite is 1,320 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of section 15, block B-10, PSL survey.

It was completed through perforations at 7,819-7,823 feet, after acidizing the pay section with 2,200 gallons.

Drilled to 7,886 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set at 7,874 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 13, block 53, ULS.

The discovery, Gulf No. 1-TM State, finaled in March 1976 for a calculated, absolute open flow of 16 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 7,806-7,816 feet.

'Bonus' oil questioned

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A 1942 rule permitting a "bonus" oil production allowables in the East Texas Field may be responsible for pulling too much water into that field's leases, says the Texas Railroad Commission.

The commission called for a Nov. 29 hearing to determine the "appropriateness" of the old rule.

Under the rule, an additional barrel of oil is allowed for each 115 barrels of salt water reinjected into the field to increase oil production. Originally, the rule was aimed at economical disposal of salt water brought up with oil in the field.

Oil produced under bonus allowables qualifies as "new oil" under federal price regulations.

Irion gets exploration

Gulf Oil Corp. plans to drill an 8,500-foot wildcat in Southwest Irion County, six miles southeast of the Dow-Mayer (Spraberry) field.

Location is 1,093 feet from south and 1,796 feet from east lines of section 5, block 40, ULS, and the project is slated to 8,500 feet.

Apco to dispose of properties

HOUSTON — Thomas W. diZerega, president of Apco Oil Corp., has announced that Apco and its wholly-owned Canadian subsidiary, Apco Oil, Ltd., have entered into an agreement with Shenandoah Oil Corp. for the sale of Apco's oil and gas producing properties located in the United States and Apco's Apco Oil Ltd.'s non-producing properties located in Canada, for an aggregate basic price, subject to certain adjustments, of $90 million.

The consummation of the agreement is subject to the approval of stockholders of both Apco and Shenandoah and the adoption of a plan of complete liquidation by Apco's stockholders.

A special meeting of stockholders of Apco has been scheduled, as previously announced, to be held on Sept. 30, for such purpose. If so approved, it is contemplated that the closing in connection with such sale would occur shortly thereafter. Under the terms of the agreement, $75 million is payable in cash and the remainder, at the option of Shenandoah either in shares of common stock of Shenandoah (valued immediately preceding the closing) or cash.

Terra plans office here

Terra Resources, Inc., has announced plans for the establishment of a new District Office in Midland, in the Wall Towers West Building.

The Southwest District Office will be responsible for the firm's oil and gas exploration and production activities in West Texas and New Mexico.

Terra is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Farmland Industries, Inc., Kansas City, Mo., and plans for exploration, production and administrative staffs totaling 45 in the Midland office.

The Midland office plans follow by a few days Terra's announcement that it had activated a new Mid-Continent District Exploration and Production office, also with 45 members, in Oklahoma City.

Caution best policy says state treasurer

By GUY COATES

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — State Treasurer Mary Evelyn Parker said Monday the state should move cautiously in allowing a combine of oil companies to sell tax-free revenue bonds to build a superport off the Louisiana coast.

"I am loath to do anything to hamper the project but I believe we should be very careful to protect the interest of the state," she told the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee gave unanimous approval to the Senatepassed bill which would set up the mechanism for the sale of the bonds.

The combine, called LOOP, received a license from the federal government this summer to bill the offshore oil terminal and plans to begin construction next year.

Members of the combine include Texaco, Murphy Oil Co., Marathon Oil Co. and Ashland, Inc.

Under the bill, the combine would have to get approval from the State Bond Commision on any sale of revenue bonds and would have to meet state guidelines.

Several committee members voiced concern that the measure might place the state's full faith and credit behind the bonds.

"We don't want another Superdome," said one committee member, pointing out one of the sore spots of the legislature.

The committee noted that when the Louisiana Superdome was in the planning stages, legislators were told that the state's full faith and credit would not be behind the project.

However, when the lease was signed with the superdome commission, the courts determined the state's credit was behind the construction bonds.

Now, the state is obligated to help make the dome bond payments since the facility has been showing a deficit.

Mrs. Parker said she didn't think "by any stretch of the imagination" that the offshore terminal project would put the state in a similar spot.

However, she said that timing was essential in allowing the firms to go to the bond market to sell $400 million in bonds.

"We don't want to endanger the sale of our own general obligation bonds," she said, stressing that it wouldn't be wise for the state to be selling bonds at the same time the combine was floating its issue.

The treasurer told reporters later that New York investors might not see the difference between state bonds and the terminal bonds. "All they see is a flood of bonds from Louisiana," she said.

The measure now goes to the full House.

Set up long suit, but keep control

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's very discouraging to start a hand with 12 tricks and wind up with only ten. This is the sort of thing that makes a partner mutter into his beard and strengthen his drink.

Opening lead — ♠ Q

South took the king of hearts, counting three spades, two hearts, four diamonds (if the suit broke normally) and three clubs—12 easy tricks.

Declarer blithely led out the ace, king and a low diamond, noting joyfully that the suit did break favorably. His joy was short-lived.

Back came a heart to the ace, and South was in his hand for the last time. The king and queen of spades were useless, and South won only ten tricks.

POOR SUGGESTION

"Take the spades before you set up the diamonds," dummy suggested, after the hand had come to a sad end.

"That gets you nowhere," East pointed out. "If you cash three spades and then lead diamonds, I'll take two good spades."

The correct play is more subtle. South should lead his low diamond at the second trick.

No matter what is returned, declarer can clear the ace of spades out of the way, get to his hand with a diamond to take all of his own high cards, and then return to dummy with a club to take the high clubs and the last two diamonds.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2 NT, and the next player passes. You hold: S-10 8 6 5 3; QJ-2; Q-7 3; S-10 6. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. If partner has three or more spades you are willing to play the hand at four spades; otherwise he will bid 3 NT.

The 'Judge' evokes stern image

By RUDY ABRAMSON
The Los Angeles Times

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — When Frank M. Johnson Jr. came to Montgomery nearly 22 years ago as the youngest federal judge in the United States, he joined the Baptist church and started teaching a Sunday school class.

The local papers were full of pictures of the Johnson family, and Montgomery society was thrilled at having a handsome young Alabama native in its midst as a U.S. district judge. Without asking, he was given a membership in the country club.

But 29 days after Johnson was sworn in, a tired black woman named Rosa Parks said no to a driver who ordered her to get up and move to the rear of a battered Montgomery city bus just a few blocks down the street from the U.S. Court House.

She was arrested for violating a city ordinance requiring blacks to sit in the back, and ordered to pay a $10 fine.

Within days, Montgomery blacks led by an obscure young preacher named Martin Luther King had organized a crippling boycott of the bus system in the first of the massive protests that were to sweep the South for years to come.

Several weeks later, with the boycott still going on, Johnson declared that the ordinance Rosa Parks had defied was unconstitutional.

The black community and Martin Luther King won the boycott and the first major victory of the Civil Rights movement.

The Deep South has never been the same since that day. Frank Johnson has been in the vortex of the civil rights movement ever since, and he has been ostracized by the Montgomery Establishment and white Alabama from that day to this.

Last week, he agreed to step down from the federal bench and become director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He had been President Carter's first choice as a long-term leader to put the FBI back on an even keel after years of unrest, but he had turned the President-elect down last December.

Then, for reasons he has not revealed, he changed his mind, deciding to leave the bench and Montgomery.

He has been an isolated man here from the day of his decision in the bus boycott, the ostracism growing less harsh only in recent years.

A friend, bitter at seeing Johnson leave, said last week, "Don't paint the judge as some kind of a stuffed shirt after what this town has done to him. Montgomery makes Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" look like a utopia. This is the most conniving, back-biting, scheming place in America. It's the epitome of a degenerate, broken-down Southern 'aristocracy.'"

While he gained a national reputation for his civil rights decisions, Johnson became at the same time one of the most intensely admired and hated men in Alabama.

His decisions, nearly always sustained by the higher courts, outlawed segregation in one area after another and broke new ground in civil rights with each passing year.

Johnson was on a three-judge panel that ordered the desegregation of more than 100 Alabama school districts with one massive order. He wrote the first reapportionment plan designed by a court. He abolished the Alabama poll tax.

He went to unusual lengths to see that his orders were implemented, spelling out specific steps to assure the rights of involuntarily-committed mental patients and the humane treatment of prisoners in state penal institutions. He put women on juries and struck down impediments to black voter registration.

In recent years, it has been arguable whether the judge or Gov. George C. Wallace exerted more influence over the affairs of Alabama.

The reaction to Johson's judicial activism has extended far beyond the cold shoulder given him by the social community in Montgomery.

Though tensions have dropped in recent times, he has been an object of repeated threats. His mother's home was bombed. He was scorned by the Alabama press and ridiculed by Wallace, an old classmate at the University of Alabama Law School. Two years ago, his 27-year-old adopted son, John, committed suicide, a tragedy which some friends believe may have contributed to a decision by Johnson and his wife, Ruth, to leave Montgomery.

The judge has kept his reaction to all of this much to himself. He is by nature an introspective, self-sufficient sort of man.

Lanky, 6-feet-2, leathery, handsome, Johnson goes about with a perpetually sad look that takes on a menacing, withering quality when he peers over his half-moon reading glasses at a lawyer who has displeased him.

Frank Johnson's personality is easier to understand when one considers his background.

He grew up in the hills of Winston County — the "free state of Winston," they call it because the county tried to secede from the state when Alabama joined the confederacy.

Winston County, unlike the rest of Alabama, has always been Republican.

The Winston County of Frank Johnson's youth was not only Republican, it was a rocky, hilly, poor county in an unusually poor state. Its black population was small. Politically, economically, culturally, it was vastly different from the Alabama black belt where Frank Johnson served as a federal judge.

The judge's great-grandfather, James Wallace Johnson, was a law-and-order sheriff of Fayette County. His reputation for fairness earned him the nickname "Straight Edge."

Some longtime family acquaintances in the north Alabama hills are said to refer now to Frank Johnson as "Straight Edge." But to his face there are few people who call him anything besides "Judge."

Young Frank Johnson developed his interest in public affairs from his father whow as once Winston County's probate judge. The father also served for a time as the postmaster of Haleyville, Ala., under appointment from Herbert Hoover, and was for several years the only Republican members of the Alabama legislature.

Thus Frank Johnson came to Montgomery and the federal bench with a heritage of hard-headedness and independence.

A decorated veteran of Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in World War II, Johnson was in private law practice in north Alabama when President Eisenhower named him a U.S. attorney in 1953.

Johnson had headed Veterans for Eisenhower in the Southeast during the 1952 presidential campaign.

Despite Johnson's nationwide reputation as a liberal judge, his friends and many of the lawyers who practice in his court think of him first and foremost as law-and-order man.

In criminal cases, he is not hesitant to hand out maximum sentences.

Johnson has a further reputation of being especially conservative when it comes to money, handling government resources as though they were his own.

Earl Pippin, one of Johnson's close friends here, recalls that the judge grew indignant once when Pippin laughed at him for making a collect call to a lawyer preparing a case for the Johnson court.

"Of course I called him collect," Johnson said. "You don't think I would spend the government's money to call some lawyer to talk about his own brief, do you?"

The main impression that Johnson leaves with lawyers practicing in his court is toughness.

Ira DeMent, the outgoing U.S. attorney who tried cases before Johnson for eight years, said recently, "He is tough as hell, but he is fair. If you are not prepared when you go into his court, you had better look out."

Johnson has been known to reduce lawyers to speechlessness when they irritated him by being ill-prepared.

Though he has never undertaken an administrative task comparable to running the FBI, Johnson admirers insist he will be able to direct the huge bureaucracy.

"He will crack a mean whip up there," said Ray Jenkins, a Montgomery editor, who is one of the judge's good friends. "It will be a brave bureaucrat indeed who will face Frank Johnson and say, 'I haven't done that yet.'"

It is accepted among Montgomery lawyers who know the judge that his abiding ambition has been to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. That was on the minds of local reporters last week when they asked him whether he would serve a full 10-year term as FBI director.

Johnson, who was believed to have been considered for the court by Richard M. Nixon, assured reporters he intends to serve the full term permitted by law if he is confirmed for the FBI post.

Johnson apparently was on the verge of accepting an Administration offer to be deputy Attorney General months ago. Friends who talked with him about the post were certain he had made up his mind and were taken aback when he declined the job, which could have been a step toward the high court.

There is still speculation as to why Johnson changed his mind after eight months and sent word to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell that he would take the FBI job.

Seventh diet menu given

Dear Readers: In response to your requests, I have published, in previous columns, Days One through Six of my one-week reducing diet. Today, the final menu—for Day Seven—appears. If you would like to lose additional weight, you can use these seven days of diet menus over and over again. For maximum benefit, you should complement the diet with a simple exercise program, such as the one in my new book, "Dr. Solomon's Proven Master Plan for Total Body Fitness and Maintenance." You can get a copy at your bookstore or library.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We live in the country, and out house has a big stone cellar. We were thinking we might store some apples and potatoes down there this winter. We have so much room that we could easily put other fruits and vegetables in our cellar, as well. Do stored foods lose many nutrients or do they keep pretty well? Are there any safety rules we should know about?—Sharon P.

Dear Sharon: There is no nutritional loss that you have to be concerned about if the temperature and humidity are right. And there isn't any special hazard, as long as you get rid of any fruits or vegetables that show signs of decay and see to it that the storage facilities are kept clean. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says you can store quite a number of fresh fruits and vegetables in basements, cellars, outbuildings or pits—some up until early spring, provided winter temperatures average 30 degrees or lower and you follow a few basic rules.

Candidates for storage include such root vegetables as potatoes, late cabbage, late celery, pumpkins, squash, green tomatoes, apples, pears, oranges and grapefruit. An attic can also be used for storing certain foods. It is particularly good for onions, dried peppers, and other produce that needs plenty of ventilation.

You can find out more about this from a U.S.D.A. booklet called "Storing Vegetables and Fruits." Write Consumer Information Center, Dept. 37, Pueblo, Colorado 81009, enclose 40 cents, and ask for Home and Garden Bulletin No. 119.

'Holier' church posts sign

STRICTLY FOR DADS

Dad dogmatic on dating issue

Is double-dating the best idea when a girl starts going out with boys? Some fathers seem to think so.

I hear from many girls complaining about parents (especially dads) who insist on double-dating at the outset.

Today's "Strictly for Dads" column is about doing a retake, having another look at preconceived ideas, and maybe reversing a decision. So here's another oldie worth checking—from an adult viewpoint two couples together might sound protective, but what if it isn't?

When our daughter first started dating, we told her we wanted her to go the double-date route. But after the first two experiences, she sat us down and said, "Your idea that a girl's first dates should be with another couple really doesn't work out like you think it would. I know you feel if I'm with three other people, that's better than being alone with one. Well, remember the other night when I was late and you didn't like it? The truth is I didn't like it either, but I couldn't help it. The other couple wanted to see the movie again. I didn't think it was that good and neither did Jimmy. But sometimes there isn't much you can do, especially if you went in their car. Anyway, do you see what I mean? Two people can do what they want to do, but if there are four, it isn't so easy. Will you please think it over, because I honestly believe I'm right. A girl really can handle one person better than she can handle three."

So we thought it over, one more time. We agreed sometimes the smartest thing parents can do is to change their minds. It really does make sense, doesn't it? If we have done a good job, our children should know more about how to handle some of their personal affairs than we do.

(Dr. Shedd has written another bestseller perfect for gift-giving. THE BEST DAD IS A GOOD LOVER is a sound collection of helpful information for better fathering. It shows that dad's real love of children rests on his co consistent love of their mother. This cloth-bound book is only $5.95 postpaid. Send your order to: BEST DAD, P. O. Box 2218, Mission, Kansas 66201. SMART DADS I KNOW, a collection of articles on 40 dads—and their solutions to the problems facing all parents—is still available at $4.95 postpaid. First the good news.

HOMER WINGER
Import Car Specialist

Today we have these Honda models available and ready to sell.

Now, the bad news. These are the only models we have in stock. Hondas are in extremely short supply these days because the demand has been phenomenal. And, at the rate they're going, the cars we have now aren't going to last long. So please come see us soon, while we can still sell you a Honda for immediate delivery.
