Midland Firm Wins First Round Of Fight With FEA

By JOE SALMAN
Basin, Inc., of Midland has won the first round of a fight with the Federal Energy Administration on the question of whether Basin has the right to purchase certain crude.

Judge D. W. Suttle of the Federal District Court in San Antonio late Monday issued a temporary injunction against the FEA's order that Basin not participate in 15 supplier-purchaser contracts made by Basin.

The FEA claims the 15 contracts, made during a time when the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act was not in effect, are illegal and should not be consummated.

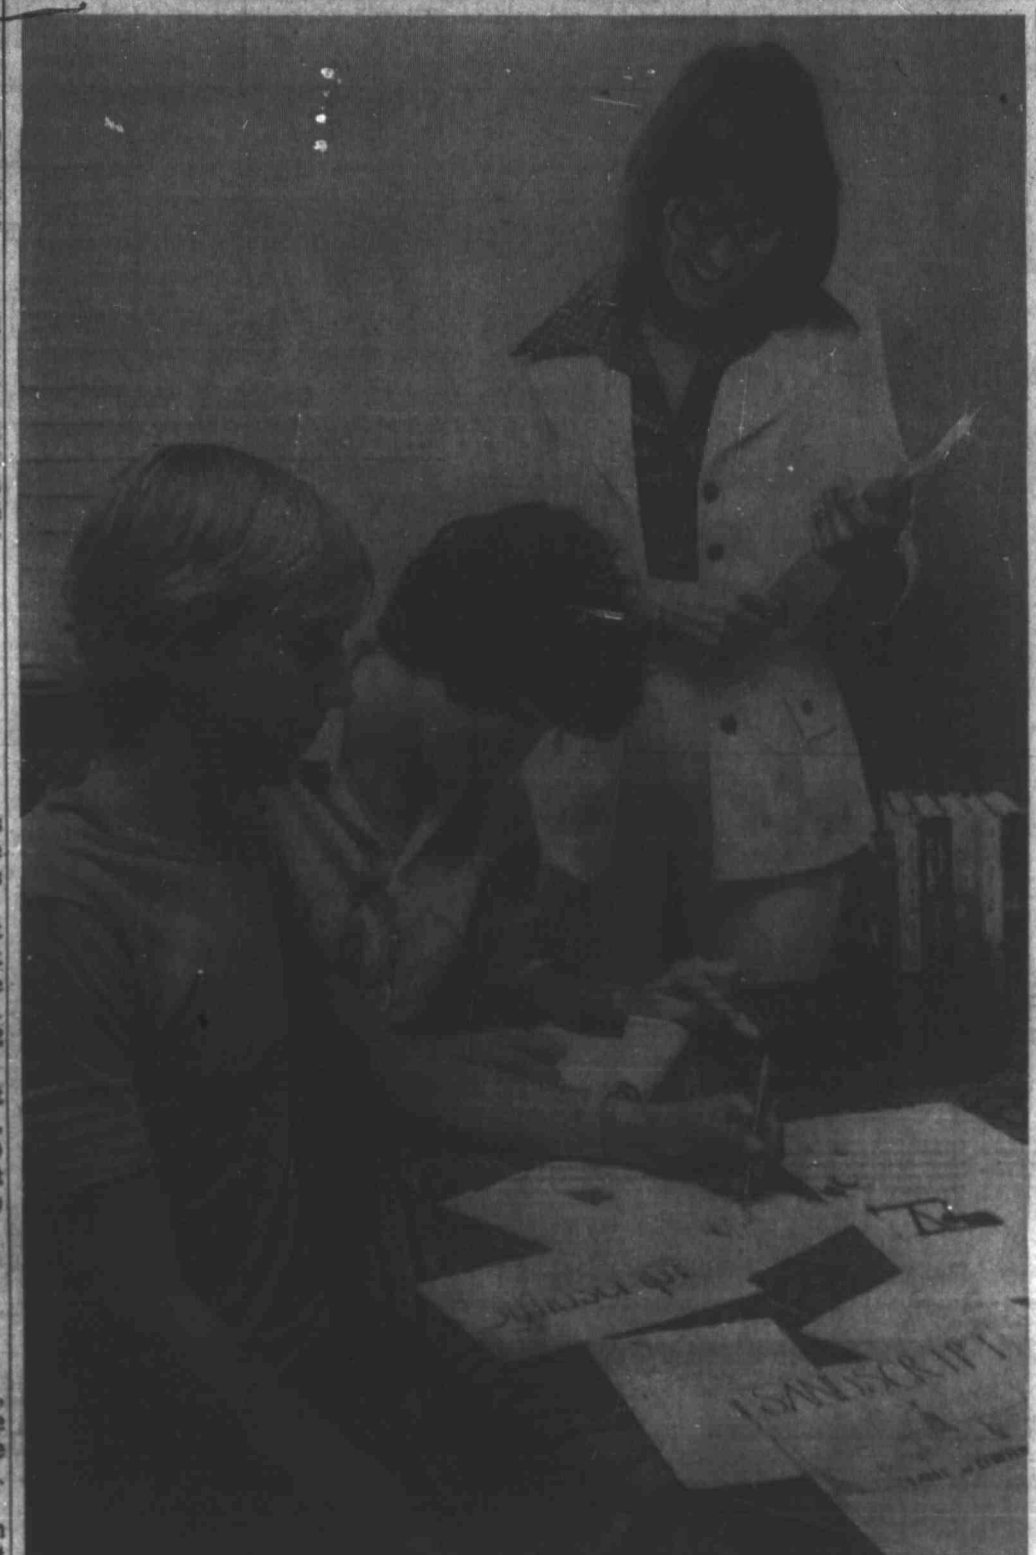

A spokesman for Basin said this morning the FEA is certain to appeal Judge Suttle's ruling to the Emergency Appeals Court, which was set up primarily to rule on questioned energy regulation.

"It all goes back to the regulations set up under the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act set up by FEA in 1973 which included the rule that producers could sell only to their historical customers," Walter R. Davis, president of Basin, said.

Davis said that Basin was organized in 1973 and the FEA made it almost impossible for the company to purchase crude.

"We have contacted the FEA 46 times, in person and by telephone, during the last year in an attempt to get the historical purchaser regulation changed," Davis said. "And, we have been unsuccessful."

The historical purchaser rule was to expire Sept. 1 of this year, and "we went out and contracted with 15 suppliers to sell us oil, effective Sept. 1," Davis said.

Study On Moving Air Park Ordered By City Council

By GEORGE MASSEY

After hearing proposals to apply for more than $1-million in funds from the Federal Aviation Administration for improvements at Air Park, Midland councilmen Tuesday voted to have a study made on the feasibility of relocating the general aviation facility.

The council noted that plans to move Air Park to a new location are "nothing new" and that past attempts have all proved failures. But, the council decided Tuesday, "It's time to come to grips with the problem of what to do with Air Park," either upgrade the present facility, move it or completely do away with it.

Councilman Carroll Thomas was the first to suggest that the aviation facility be relocated. Last month, Thomas had suggested that the facility be closed.

However, Thomas said Tuesday that he had received more information on the "need and importance" of maintaining a general aviation facility and would now propose only that the Air Park be "relocated."

He said past studies have indicated that the land on which Air Park is located in "Midland's northern development area" has been estimated at a net worth of "approximately $3 million."

City officials have indicated that Air Park property along Wadley Street might possibly sell for as much as $20,000 per acre.

Thomas suggested that if it is decided to relocate the airport "enough money would be raised in selling the property it is now located on pay for building a new facility."

Thomas said he has looked at land north of the present facility, and has "good indications that the land would be available for purchase for the new airport location."

No specific description was offered on the possible new site, but Thomas said it was the same land that had been previously suggested, several years ago, for the relocation of Air Park. "At that time," Thomas said, "the land was not available for sale to the city, but it has changed hands and is possibly available now."

He said the area in question is "approximately three miles farther north, along the Lamesa Highway, on ranch property."

But the council balked at using only one location possibility and suggested that several locations be studied before a decision is made. Then, the council voted to have a consulting firm study the cost of rebuilding a complete airport facility, less the cost of a site, before any further action is undertaken.

The council ran into another problem with a city facility — the sewer disposal plant, but were told by Joe Reed, water consultant, that the plant is operating within all state water requirements. Reed said the sewer plant is producing an effluent water better than the grades suggested by the state.

Councilman Martin Neill said

if the sewer plant isn't causing a problem of pollution "downstream in the draw" which runs south out of the sewer plant "something else is."

Neill said that County Commissioner Charlie Welch has shown him several places where water downstream from the sewer plant is "polluted." He said that Welch and persons living in that part of the county "are justly concerned about the condition of ponding and surface water there."

Neill said he wanted an outside study of the sewer plant's effluent discharge, but the council refused and instead recommended that a staff study be

A&M Economics Prof To Oppose Bentsen In Senate Primary Race

AUSTIN (AP) — Dr. Philip Gramm, a Texas A&M economics professor who describes himself as a free market man, announced today he will oppose Sen. Lloyd Bentsen next year for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Bentsen also is seeking the party's presidential nomination and will have a slate of delegates on the 1976 presidential primary ballot.

Asked if he would make the double candidacy a campaign issue, Gramm replied, "It already is an issue."

Gramm, 33, said that Bentsen, in his quest for national standing, had taken positions that are "out of step with the views of the people of Texas."

He said Bentsen had voted to reduce the oil depletion allowance for major petroleum companies, a congressional decision that Gramm claimed cut oil company investments—largely in Texas—by $1.9 billion.

"I pledge to the people of Texas that I will use my knowledge of economics, my voice, my vote, and my energy to stop the inflation. I will oppose any expansion of federal spending which exceeds the rate of banking."

Gramm said he intends to spend the full $841,000 allowed by federal campaign laws to "defeat Lloyd Bentsen in one of the greatest upsets in Texas history." He said he has "many friends in the oil industry" but no specific group is bankrolling his candidacy.

Gramm, a Georgia native and Ph.D. graduate of the University of Georgia, said he is on a leave of absence from A&M, where he teaches courses in the theory of money and

Students Plan Historical Magazine

By LUANNA CROW
Students in Midland High School's honors English class have entered the publishing business with a magazine they're calling Sanscript, which will be published for the first time in January.

Joni Helm, student editor, says it will be a collection of writings, photographs and art work depicting the history of the area through its traditions, folklore, crafts, occupations, superstitions, tools and, primarily, its people.

The fledgling magazine will print four issues this year in the winter, spring, summer and fall months. The class teacher, Mrs. Jackie Carter, envisions "Sanscript" as a continuing project to be carried on by honors English classes year after year.

Not the first of its kind,

Midland's historical magazine will be modeled after "Foxfire," a successful publication edited by high school students in the Appalachian Mountains.

All 31 students in the class will be conducting taped interviews which will be filed as oral history in the classroom. They will be coupling historical research with their interviews to create articles for the magazine which will run the gamut from West Texas windmills to the appearance of the railroad.

Operating without any funds from the school or school district, the magazine will have to pay for itself through subscription sales. Students already are conducting a sales campaign for their new publication which sells for $5 for all four issues.

Mrs. Carter said each magazine will include 50 to 64 pages, liberally accented with photographs and ink drawings, all done by students. The cover will feature a color photograph.

"The first issue will be rather general, as an indication of the area," she said, anticipating a sprinkling of each subject to create "a feel of the old days, Midland as it was."

Miss Helm said the intent of the magazine is to "preserve the spirit" of old West Texas.

Among the area residents who are or will be interviewed by these high school seniors are Smith Ray, whose great-grandfather was the first sheriff; Charles Loke, a longtime Midland area farmer; Frank Cowden Sr., a pioneer cattleman, and Steve Church and I. G. Peters, both Stanton farmers.

Kay Rever, one of the students involved in the project, already has interviewed Peters and his wife, both of whom were reared in that community.

Miss Rever said the couple recounted such commonplace events as gathering firewood daily to cook antelope or rabbit, using "divining rods" to locate water and neighboring farmers assisting each other with their harvests.

David Dally, another class member, sat in on an interview with Midlander Bill Forehand who began working on the Scharbauer cattle ranches in the 1920s and continued to his retirement.

Dally said longtime cattleman described life in that era, the changes in the cattle industry, oldtime rodeos, his responsibilities on the Scharbauer ranch and how he used his leisure time in those days.

Forehand has what Dally calls "a very extensive newspaper clipping collection" to chronicle those years.

The student also is involved in a project to describe the early oil industry from the viewpoint of a tool dresser or, perhaps a driller on an oil cable tool rig.

He plans to tell "how they brought in the well, the tools used, the procedure, how they brought in (transported) the oil and sometimes the frequent disasters."

Other class projects may tell about such crafts as saddle making, the early brands, law and order including some of the early trials and the use of native plants in home remedies.

Mrs. Carter pointed out the magazine project requires a great deal of out-of-class work because the "routine" lessons also must be included in the class. She emphasized, however, she is "confident of the quality"

Five Killed In Terrorist Attack On Spanish Police

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Terrorists attacked a Barcelona police headquarters early today, sparking a gunbattle in which police fire killed three innocent civilians in a passing car and two of their own officers, police said.

Two other persons, including one policeman, were seriously wounded in Spain's bloodiest day of violence this year.

The attack raised the death toll to eight policemen and four civilians in seven days of political violence since Spain was plunged into crisis at home and abroad by the executions of five young terrorists Sept. 27.

Police said the latest deaths, in the working class district of La Verneda, came after a group of gunmen drove past the police barracks firing with sub-machine guns.

Police guards, untouched by the bullets, returned fire and in error riddled a second car, killing a couple and their 22-year-old son and seriously wounding a fourth person in the car, police said. The civilians were reported returning home from a wake for a friend.

Continuing to fire, police hit three policemen returning from a night call. Two died instantly, and a third was seriously wounded, police said.

Authorities said later the killing of the two policemen was due "to lack of visibility at the time and the interposition of vehicles" — the patrol car and the automobile of the civilian victims.

Barcelona is a stronghold of the urban guerrilla organization FRAP — the Patriotic Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Front — which lost three militants to police firing squads 12 days ago. The three had been convicted of killing policemen.

Two Basque separatists also were convicted of killing policemen were executed in addition to the three FRAP militants Sept. 27.

Ford Lectures GOP Governor On Balanced Budgets

By FRANK KORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, having urged a new tax-cut plan tied to curbing federal spending, rejected a Republican governor's request for more federal funds and gave him a blunt lecture on balanced budgets.

Ford, who announced plans earlier this week for what he said was "the biggest single tax cut in our history," met Tuesday with seven Appalachian state governors in Knoxville, Tenn., and immediately was confronted with a plea for funds.

West Virginia Gov. Arch Moore told Ford more federal money is needed to keep Appalachian highway projects on schedule. Ford wryly recalled that most of the governors in the room had agreed with a Southern Governors Conference resolution calling for a constitutional amendment requiring balanced federal budgets.

Ford said, "Fellows, we can't have it both ways."

He said the government faces federal deficits in the current fiscal year of up to $70 billion, adding, "If you have back-of-the-envelope deficits of $70 billion, you're going to have more and more troubles in trying to finance your own state and municipal governments."

As the President was touting his new tax cut and spending curbs, his proposal was meeting with four comments from Congress.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., called Ford's plan "an impossible one."

A Ways and Means subcommittee chairman, Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, criticized Ford's proposals to reduce corporate taxes and released figures showing that 142 major corporations paid less than half the standard corporate tax rate of 48 per cent last year. Vanik said eight companies paid no taxes while 18 others paid at a rate of 10 per cent or less.

Ford proposed enactment of $28 billion in permanent tax cuts for 1976 if Congress will agree to an identical cut in federal spending.

He would require establishment of a $395 billion spending ceiling for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1.

Under Ford's $28-billion tax-cut plan, individual taxpayers would receive about $2.6 billion more in tax reductions in 1976 than they did in 1975. White House tax tables show that if the plan is enacted, a family of four with an income of $15,000 would pay $287 less in 1976 taxes than it will this year. A family of four with a $20,000 income would pay $310 less in 1976 than in 1975.

The tables show that a single person with a $10,000 income would pay $249 less and a single person earning $20,000 would pay $264 less.

Ullman's committee began work Tuesday on an assortment of bills to revise tax laws, including the Ford plan. Of Ford's demand for a spending ceiling, Ullman asked, "If the President wants a $395-billion budget, why doesn't he submit a $395 billion budget?" Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, appearing before the House panel to explain the Ford proposal, was asked by Ullman, "Are you sitting there with a straight face and saying that Congress can be expected to put a ceiling on a budget it hasn't seen, without knowing what priorities would be set—to blindly strike out with no information on the budget?"

Ullman called such a proposal "totally preposterous," adding, "I must say I am rather shocked that the administration would propose such a thing."

Simon argued that Congress could pledge itself to meet the ceiling, leaving details to be worked out later. He stressed and put a tax cut in place by January."

that Ford is ready to veto any tax reduction plan not accompanied by a spending ceiling.

Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., said Ford had told GOP leaders that "if he has to veto 100 bills to hold down spending, he'll do it."

Ullman's criticism won the support of Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., who said imposing a spending ceiling before seeing the President's budget "is like tying infinity to zero—you get nothing."

Meanwhile, in a speech on the House floor, Vanik said the 142 companies had an aggregate income of $46 billion, but were able to reduce their tax liabilities "through entirely legal means."

Vanik listed the eight companies he said paid no 1974 income taxes and their 1974 adjusted net incomes as Ford, Motor Co., $351.9 million; Lockheed Aircraft Corp., $29.8 million; Honeywell, $98.8 million; U.S. Industries, Inc., $17.9 million; American Airlines, $26.7 million; Eastern Airlines, $17.6 million; American Electric Power Co., $163.7 million; and Allstate Insurance Co. and subsidiaries, $157.3 million.

Companies which Vanik said paid at an effective rate of 10 per cent or less included Consolidated Edison; LTV Corp.; Occidental Petroleum Corp.; Chase Manhattan Corp.; Texaco, Inc.; Continental Illinois Corp.; Bankers Trust New York Corp.; Northwest Airlines, Inc.; Mobil Oil Corp.; Texas Gulf; Pennzoil Co.; American Metal Climax, Inc.; American Motors Corp.; UAL, Inc.; Delta Airlines, Inc.; McDonnell

Reagan Says He Might Accept Republican VP Nomination In Some Circumstances

HOUSTON (AP) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan says he might accept the Republican vice presidential nomination under certain circumstances but he is not seeking the number two position.

"I would have to under the most extreme circumstances of that kind, such as if there was no other man in the world," Reagan said Tuesday.

"I don't think anyone can put himself in a position where if there was a service or duty he could perform that was essential that he would refuse that duty."

Reagan appeared at a news conference prior to a speech at a building fund campaign kickoff for a Houston hospital.

Reagan said he will make a decision sometime next month whether to challenge President Ford for the Republican presidential nomination in 1976.

He also added he felt interest in a third party "has lessened a great deal."

"Today I think the two-party system," he said, "and today I think a third party would run the risk of doing what it has done in the past—dividing people of a like philosophy and then getting someone that you oppose sneak under the wire because of divided forces."

"If I make a decision to go (for the presidential nomination), I'll make a decision to enter the primaries as a Republican."

He said he thought a contested presidential nomination would be divisive to the party but "might spark a little interest in the tired old elephant."

Reagan called the President's proposed $28 billion tax cut as "cosmetic" and not being "a long range approach to the long range problem of inflation."

In his address at a $15 million building fund campaign kickoff for St. Joseph's Hospital, Reagan was critical of government intervention into medical care.

"You can't socialize the doctor without socializing the patient," he said.

Reagan received an ovation when he contended the country faced no serious medical problem.

"In short," he said, "there is no health crisis in America. The notion that there is has been created by those who want to impose government medical practice whether we need it or not."

The measures include a ban on drinking in public places, hotels, restaurants, clubs and at receptions.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Should Adopted Persons Seek Out 'Real' Parents?

DEAR ABBY: I recently saw a TV program that really shook me up. A 30-year-old man and mother who had always known that she was adopted decided to try to locate her "real" parents.

With the help of a lawyer, she was successful in finding her "real" father. (Her mother had died.) Although the young woman was certain that she had found her natural father and the man at first confirmed that he was, he later denied it.

Abby, I was an unwed mother at the age of 15. I gave my infant girl up for adoption and later married a fine man with whom I had four children. I told him about my illegitimate child, but our children don't know it and neither do any of his relatives—which is the way I want it.

I think it's grossly unfair for an adopted person to go looking for his (or her) natural parents. The couple who raised my firstborn are her "real" parents.

In some states, when an adopted person reaches legal age, he has a right to know who his natural parents are. But what about MY right to privacy?

NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: I agree with you. But for another point of view on that subject, read on.

DEAR ABBY: I have always known that I was adopted. I am now 17 and know that when I become "of age," I can demand that my file be opened to me so I can know who my natural parents are.

Abby, I have absolutely no desire to locate them. They gave me up because they felt it would be better for me and possibly for them, too.

The parents who took me when I was 1-week-old, raised me and gave me their love and all the material things they could afford are my "real" parents. No other parents could be more real to me.

I am not saying that I have never wondered what my natural parents are like, but I can truthfully say that my curiosity is not so great that I would risk upsetting their lives by suddenly appearing or risk hurting the parents to whom I owe so much.

NOT LOOKING

DEAR ABBY: My husband has always been a very selfish man, but the other day he topped himself when he carried on like a crazy man because I had cut three roses from his rosebushes. The rosebushes have loads of buds on them and I can't see that I did them any harm.

My husband claims that roses should not be picked in the first year. I always thought that rosebushes produced bigger and more abundant blooms after the flowers were plucked. Who's right?

If my husband is right, I'll keep my bloomin' hands off his blooms.

DEAR N.: Picking roses off the bush the first year will not affect the health of the rosebush. But it might not be too healthy for your marriage.

Place In History
The scallop shell has its place all through history and is especially prevalent in ancient chapels, on funeral monuments and marble coffins. HINTS FROM Heloise Just Right For Baby's 'Umbrella' Stroller

Dear Heloise:
Since becoming a new mother, I've found many newfangled gadgets that really help out.

One such gadget is the stroller that folds like an umbrella. I really love it, but there are no baskets to put packages in when I go shopping.

I looked for bicycle baskets, but I needed a deep, narrow one, and all I could find were the pairs that fit over the back fender of a bicycle.

Then I saw a freezer basket and BINGO! It was even better! It's coated with plastic so there are no wire ends to scratch and catch on clothes.

Since the stroller folds up, there is no way the basket can be permanently attached. I just slip the basket over the handles when I go shopping and slip it off when I get home.

I've just about broken my arm patting myself on the back!

Since I was never very domestic, another newfangled gadget I've gotten used to looking for is your column!

Sandi

Let us pat you on the back, Sandi, for coming up with this super idea!

Ticked pink that you have discovered my column! Although it isn't really new, perhaps it is to you.

Hope some of the hints will make your tasks a little easier so you can spend more time with that sweet baby.

Here's lots of love from me to you — and baby!

Heloise

Dear Heloise:
I save all my used plastic bags and aluminum foil in the little compartment on my refrigerator-freezer door.

They are so clean and fresh when I want to use them to store things for the freezer.

Roughage Is Vital For Healthy Diet

By SHIRLEY BRIGGS BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Cellulose is the most abundant organic compound in the world and is an important part of every normal diet.

The term "cellulose" may not be familiar because the popular terms "fiber" or "roughage" are more often used. Whichever term is used it refers to the indigestible residue in foods that provides the necessary "bulk" in the diet.

Recent studies point out the vital importance of roughage in the health of the digestive tract. Maintaining intestinal mobility through proper diet is essential to human health.

American eating habits have degenerated so badly in the last 25 years that intestinal tract problems are becoming a major health concern. Incidents of cancer of the colon and diverticulitis have been increasing at an alarming rate.

This is not surprising when you consider the changes over the years in the American diet. Soda pop, potato chips, hamburgers, pie, candy and ice cream contribute lots of calories, but very little roughage.

It is also not surprising that youngsters raised on a dependence of these foods

develop diverticulitis,

constipation or other painful intestinal ailments.

Cellulose is the nondigestible structure framework of plant tissue.

The human body lacks the necessary enzyme to break down monosaccharide linkages—which is a rather technical way of saying the body cannot digest it. This may seem to imply that it is, therefore, unnecessary. Not so—it is vital.

Certain animals have a bacterial enzyme system that cannot be properly absorbed,

Vitamin and mineral deficiencies will occur. Vitamin and minerals taken in capsule form will not help because they will not be absorbed either.

Again we return to the value of basic good sense in choosing a proper diet. The inclusion of fruits and vegetables are of great value, not only because they provide cellulose, but also because they give a higher percentage of nutrients than they do calories. Skins of fruits and vegetables, bran, cauliflower and broccoli included in your diet will be of particular help.

Panel Probes Handling Of Medicaid By Blue Cross

Austin Bureau
AUSTIN—When most people think of welfare, they think of a "giveaway program" operated by the federal government. Now, the House Health and Welfare Committee is finding out that an awful lot of big business managers to get its hands on millions of welfare dollars.

How the Medicaid program is operated by the Department of Public Welfare, through a contract with Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Texas, is a subject the House committee has tackled during the legislative interim.

Freelance writer and legislative aide Jackie Cox testified that she has traced welfare dollars paid to Blue Cross that ended up as loans for multi-million dollar corporations.

The state received no interest on the money being loaned, Ms. Cox said, despite the fact it was supposed to go for Medicaid service.

Ms. Cox, an aide to Rep. Lane Denton of Waco, has filed suit in state court at Dallas against Blue Cross seeking to have access to financial records of DPW-Blue Cross operations of the Medicaid program.

She told the House Committee that through Republic National Bank of Dallas, Medicaid funds were used to loan American Airlines $1 million.

Similar loans of $1.5 million were made to Southwestern Bell Telephone, to Texas Power and Light of $500,000, and to Lone Star Gas for $500,000, Ms. Cox said.

In addition, Ms. Cox said Medicaid funds totaling $40,000 were paid by Blue Cross to the Texas Medical Association for "services" of TMA's lobbyists.

Testifying before the committee, Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell said he knew nothing about an interlocking relationship between Blue Cross and Republic National Bank, when asked by Rep. Emmett Whitehead of Rusk.

But Ms. Cox said that three men who serve on the board of directors of Group Hospitals Service Inc., Blue Cross' parent company, also sit as directors of the Dallas bank.

Committee Chairman Lynn Nabers of Brownwood said after the day-long hearing that "our investigations will continue until we get to the bottom of this."

Eugene Oney, senior vice president of Blue Cross from Dallas, said it would be "inappropriate to make any comment" on the various complaints leveled during the hearing because of the pending lawsuit.

Oney, who represents Blue Cross in the annual contract bargaining sessions on the Medicaid program with the welfare department, said that at a future hearing he would "offer complete testimony" on the handling of the program.

DPW chief legal counsel, David Young, said that "as a legal document" the contract for operation of the Medicaid program "is not a good one."

The current $157 million contract is scheduled to expire on Nov. 30 and revisions are already being proposed, Young said.

That contract wasn't signed until February of this year and was to expire Aug. 30. It is now in a 90-day extension which officials say is not uncommon.

Rep. Chris Miller of Fort Worth complained throughout the hearing that she wants to see how Blue Cross spends the $8.5 million it is paid to operate the Medicaid program for 800,000 Texans.

Vowell said he did not favor making the information public, telling the committee that Blue Cross "could lose its incentive to be efficient if its operating costs are revealed."

Ms. Cox said such comments should be implied as meaning DPW "wanted to protect the insurance industry," and was only making "noise" about changing the present Medicaid program.

In August, the three-member welfare commission adopted Vowell's suggestion that a study be undertaken to see if alternatives could be found for operating the program.

One alternative is that the contract could be awarded on a competitive basis, and Vowell has said other companies have shown an interest.

But some members of the House committee have expressed doubt on the competitiveness of bids, since Blue Cross has been in access of welfare records and statistics since 1962, and has been the sole operator of the Medicaid program since its inception in 1967.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which is responsible for overseeing the Medicaid program nationwide, first saw problems in Texas when it discovered that Blue Cross was not paying all its Medicaid claims.

At one point this year, unpaid claims totaled $34 million; but $2 million of installments, those outstanding claims were reduced to $10 million which Blue Cross is allowed to keep in holding. That represents about one month's claims.

In addition to the $8.5 million Blue Cross receives for administration, it also gets $300,000 per year as a "community support" factor, which is really "insurance" on an insurance program. The $300,000 is paid to Blue Cross so adequate funds are available if claims are larger than expected.

No doubt about it, "Rep. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi said, "We make sure Blue Cross doesn't lose any money."

It was not until 1971 that Blue Cross was required to pay the premium tax of other insurance companies, because it was chartered as a non-profit corporation.

Some Achievements Hard To Grade

Austin Bureau
AUSTIN—Some achievements by students are difficult to grade, and this is one of the problems in judging special education programs.

Education Commissioner M.L. Brockette told the committee of one special education student learning to put on his shoes and socks.

"I think in time that youngster will certainly be able to put on his shoes and his socks," Brockette said. "And it will be quite an achievement for him."

"These students vary all the way up and down the ability scale. How do we get a handle on what we're really accomplishing?" Brockette said. "This suggests that you need to talk to parents during your inquiries."

Brockette said 19 per cent of the student population in Texas participates in some special education program. Special education is designed to serve the mentally retarded, the deaf, the blind, students with learning disabilities and speech defects, and those with physical disabilities.

Preston is chairman of the subcommittee. Reps. Al Brown of San Antonio and Ed Watson of Pasadena also serve on the subcommittee, with House Education Committee Chairman Tom Massey of San Angelo as an ex officio member.

Rep. George Preston of Paris

Coups Often Only Way To Change Latin America

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copy News Service

There are not really many revolutions in Latin America. It just seems that way.

What there are are 25 sovereign nations in the Latin American area. Probably each has its share of vigorous, ambitious, impatient men and women who think they could do a better job of running the country if only they had a chance.

If their impatience gets the best of them in a nonelection year in those countries that do have periodic elections there can be trouble.

If, however, they happen to live in Cuba, Haiti, Panama, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay or Chile, countries that have dispensed with the electoral formality, or those other countries where the party in power always wins, a coup is the only recourse.

That is what happened in Peru and Ecuador recently.

In Peru, the armed forces since October 1968, under Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado, a veteran military man whose health and temperament have worsened with time. Finally, on Aug. 28, the army, navy and air force commanders decided to put Gen. Francisco Morales Bermudez in his place. There was no bloodshed. Mrs. Velasco was asked to send the car down to the palace and take the general home. She went herself and picked him up.

In Ecuador, where the armed forces have been in power since February 1972, with Gen. Guillermo Rodriguez Lara as president, things were uglier. A group of high-ranking officers, apparently including members of all three services, and a number of civilian politicians decided to lay siege to the presidential palace, with Gen. Rodriguez Lara inside. He managed to slip away under cover of darkness, rally an armored tank unit to his cause and get back to the palace not long after the rebels had blasted their way inside. Surrounded and outgunned by the tanks, the rebels had to surrender and the uprising was over.

Only Bolivia, of the remaining countries that do not have periodic popular elections, seems prone to revolution. But it has always been that way in Bolivia. In the last 50 years, Bolivia has had 24 different recognized governments.

Some thoughtful Bolivians blame their instability on the altitude. The seat of their government is La Paz, a city located some 12,000 feet up in the Andes, where water and everything else has a low boiling point.

The most recent significant revolution in Latin America was that which occurred in Chile two years ago, Sept. 11, 1973. Then the Chilean armed forces ousted the government of President Salvador Allende to halt a Popular Unity coalition attempt to impose Marxism on that traditionally democratic South American nation. Chileans applauded the action of their armed forces then, as the majority of the Chilean voters were democratic and anti-Communist in their ideology.

Most of the relatively democratic Latin countries have not had a revolution in many years.

In Colombia, the dictator Gen. Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, was toppled in 1957. Costa Rica's last revolution occurred in 1948. In the Dominican Republic, it was 1965 when an attempt was made to return former President Juan Bosch to power by force of arms. The Guatemalan armed forces toppled Gen. Miguel Ydigoras Fuentes in 1963. Back in 1911 Mexico sent aging Gen. Porfirio Diaz into exile ending his 35-year-long dictatorship. In 1958, Venezuelans violently deposed Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez.

The fact that military men are themselves running so many governments in Latin America presumably dissuades some would-be revolutionaries.

New York Woes Cause Municipal Bond Market Trouble

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While officials still talk about containing the impact of a New York City financial default, fears of such a collapse already have rippled through the tax-exempt bond markets.

Massachusetts, Connecticut, California and Oregon are among the states that have been forced to pay higher rates because of investor doubt and caution arising from New York City's plight.

More problems very likely lie ahead for the rest of this year and into 1976 because of the need of housing agencies in several states to refinance maturing debt. Some bondmen have doubts about the agencies' ability to do so.

The fact is that the so-called municipal bond market is in serious trouble, and the limited amount of financing it can accommodate probably will have to be done at record high costs.

In the past eight months the typical $1,000 state or city bond has declined in market value by nearly $185. That is, retail buyers of the bonds are willing to pay only $815 for paper with a face value of $1,000.

The effect of this is to raise the price that governments must pay for the money they borrow. As the price of a bond declines, the interest costs rise relatively.

Early this year the average price municipalities paid for their money was 6.32 per cent, based on the Dow Jones municipal bond yield index. Two weeks ago it had risen to 7.59 per cent. Last week it jumped to 7.78 per cent.

At those rates, municipalities might find themselves building even bigger problems for the future, and so many of them are likely to be forced into postponing new projects.

That option, however, isn't open to those cities, states and agencies whose existing debt is coming due and needs to be refinanced. This is especially true of state housing agencies, which must refinance hundreds of millions of dollars within the next year.

Some market observers are inclined to say the fears are irrational. They note that some of the very high borrowing charges are being attached to offerings carrying top ratings by the rating services.

If the rating services, which delve deeply into the financial structure of companies and municipalities, declare the bonds safe, why shouldn't investors also consider them safe?

There are several partial explanations, all of which lead to the same generalization: a lack of confidence.

The rating services might judge the soundness of bonds but they don't put their money on them; there's a big difference, easily recognized by any investors. Investing is for real; rating is paperwork.

Moreover, the big institutions that purchase bonds in quantity have other outlets for their funds, especially if they are non-taxpaying entities. The municipal bond tax-exemption has no attraction to pension funds, for example.

At the basis of the reluctance lies an erosion of confidence. While this might seem to be overstating the obvious, it nevertheless is worth saying. Without confidence there are no markets of any kind — in services, goods or money.

Hirohito Toasts Mayor Daley, Plays With Piglet On Farm

PLAINFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Emperor Hirohito, once considered a god in his native Japan, toasted America's most powerful mayor, visited a farm family and played with a piglet on a day-long visit to the nation's heartland.

The 74-year-old monarch and Empress Nagako arrived in Chicago on Tuesday, with Secret Service agents and about 1,000 police officers on guard duty.

The royal couple began a 15-day tour of the United States on Sept. 30. They left at 8 a.m. CDT today for Los Angeles and will visit San Francisco and Honolulu before returning to Japan on Monday.

Two men were arrested for carrying concealed weapons during the Chicago visit, but officials said neither man posed any threat to the emperor and his wife.

After a colorful parade featuring horsemen and bands along Lake Michigan, Hirohito told a luncheon that Chicago and the Midwest hold an "important role as a world center of economic activities."

The emperor, the first Japanese monarch ever to visit the United States, exchanged toasts with Mayor Richard J. Daley at the luncheon, attended by about 700 civic and local Japanese leaders.

Hirohito left the luncheon with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz for a tour of farms near Plainfield, about 35 miles southwest of Chicago, while Empress Nagako toured Wyler's Children's Hospital and the Chicago Art Institute.

The emperor spent about 30 minutes at the 750-acre spread of Donald and Bernice Baltz and about the same amount of time at the farm owned by the Baltz' son, John, 34.

"Who'd think an emperor would come to a farm, especially our farm?" said Marianne Baltz, 33, John Baltz's wife.

The elder Baltz, 57, clad in a work shirt and dungarees, washed the dirt off his hands to greet the emperor. "We realize it's a little more than the next-door neighbor coming to visit you," Baltz said, but he had promised to keep his usual attire intact for the visit.

Hirohito watched the harvesting of soybeans, one of Japan's major imports from the United States, and stood atop a combine to wave at well-wishers lined up along rural roads.

Hirohito then traveled a quarter of a mile away to the younger Baltz' 1,700-acre farm, which resembles an Americana setting like a Norman Rockwell painting with a century-old house and two red barns.

Hirohito watched the harvesting of corn, viewed some of Baltz' 600 hogs and 35 cattle, held one of the children's piglets and petted their rabbit.

"Thanks for all the soybeans we use in Japan," the emperor said.

Former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Sr. was asked Tuesday why his son was shying away from announcing any strong desire to be president.

"He certainly would be foolish to run for president after nine months of the governorship. I think he owes a duty to the people to work as hard as he can. If that makes him a presidential candidate, so be it," said the 69-year-old Democrat.

Brown Sr. said his son was definitely "presidential timber."

French Official Lauds Sweden

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — Sweden is the most advanced country in women's rights, says the French minister for the status of women. Francoise Giroud added that she does not agree with the feminist movement in the United States.

"Women have made a battleground with men and because of it they've attained no real power," she said during a visit here Tuesday.

Giroud, 57, was in Ottawa for a meeting with the Canadian government to discuss the status of women in Sweden.

She was accompanied by her husband, Jean Giroud, 55, who is also a French official.

The couple arrived in Ottawa on Monday for a two-day visit.

Giroud said that Sweden is a country where women have achieved a high degree of equality with men.

He said that in Sweden, women have the same rights as men in all areas of life, including politics, business, and education.

Giroud said that he was impressed by the Swedish model of social welfare, which provides for a high standard of living for all citizens.

He said that he hoped that the Canadian government would take some of the Swedish model as an example.

Giroud said that he was looking forward to his visit to Canada and to meeting with Canadian officials.

He said that he was sure that his visit would be a successful one.

Child Nutrition Veto Overridden

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, defeated in his battle with Congress over child nutritional programs, is having a higher percentage of his vetoed overridden than any chief executive since Andrew Johnson served in the White House more than a century ago.

Midlanders Are Nominated

SAN MARCOS — Three Midland students attending Southwest Texas State University have been nominated for Gaillardian honors as all-campus favorite.

The Midlanders are Mary Ann Booth, daughter of Robert Booth of 704 W. Cuthbert St.; Donna Jean Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Thomas Jr. of 4408 Meadowlark St.; and David K. Gregory of 3507 W. Illinois St.

Twelve Gaillardians will be chosen from the 100 nominees Oct. 24, the day before homecoming, in a formal presentation ceremony.

Tuesday's decisive Senate and House votes to enact a $2.75-billion nutrition bill over the President's objections marked the seventh time in 14 months that Congress has overridden a Ford veto.

The House tally of 397 to 18 was 120 more than the needed two-thirds, and the 79 to 13 Senate vote was 17 more than necessary, with Republicans breaking ranks to contribute heavily to the tally.

Since becoming president, Ford has vetoed 39 bills. The seven successful overrides give the heavily Democratic Congress a score of 18 per cent. Woodrow Wilson, overridden on six of 44 vetoes, is next highest in the post-Johnson era with about 14 per cent.

Unless Ford and Congress can agree on spending cuts,

Ford may get a chance to veto a lot more bills. Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., says Ford is adamant on cutting spending. He quoted Ford as promising that "if he has to veto 100 bills to hold down spending, he'll do it."

Johnson, a Republican, vetoed 29 bills during his presidency from 1865 to 1869. Congress overrode him 15 times, a score of more than 50 per cent and by far the worst presidential performance in the nation's history.

Since then, virtually all presidential vetoes have stuck. One reason is that in most cases, Congress and the White House have been controlled by the same party. By comparison, Congress overrode 12 of President Harry S. Truman's 250 vetoes, or about 5 per cent. Truman was a Democrat.

Democrat Franklin D. Roosevelt, who served a record 12 years in the presidency, vetoed a record total of bills — 635. Congress overrode him only nine times, or about 1 per cent of the time.

Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower vetoed 181 bills in eight years, and Congress only overrode him twice, also about 1 per cent.

Democrats John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson vetoed 21 and 30 measures respectively between 1961 and 1969 without ever losing.

Richard M. Nixon, battling Democratic congresses, vetoed 43 bills in 5½ years and lost five times or about 12 per cent of his vetoes.

Tuesday's action marked the third time in recent weeks Congress has enacted a bill expanding social program into law over Ford's veto.

The other two were bills covering a variety of federal health programs and the appropriations measure for the government's education programs.

Carrillo Trial Delayed Until Nov. 18

By ROBERT HEARD

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The impeachment trial of South Texas District Judge O. P. Carrillo has been postponed for six weeks over the strong objections of several senators and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, who lost, 12-14, on an attempt Monday to have the trial postponed until Dec. 1, persuaded the Senate to change its mind Tuesday and postpone the trial until Nov. 18. The vote was 16-13.

Of the 14 who voted no Monday, only Sen. Glenn Kothmann, D-San Antonio, voted yes Tuesday. Three other senators, who were not present for the vote Monday, voted with the majority Tuesday.

The Senate first voted 15-13 to adjourn until Nov. 17, but changed it to Nov. 18 after it learned Carrillo, convicted on income tax evasion charges last Thursday in Corpus Christi federal court, will be sentenced Nov. 17.

The 15-13 vote followed a 35-minute closed-door session requested by Schwartz, and after a spirited open-session debate in which Hobby argued against postponement.

Hobby supported Sen. Don Adams, D-Jasper, who shouted to Schwartz that the statute on impeachment trials says they shall be conducted "expeditiously."

"If words written down on paper mean anything, they mean what the senator from Jasper said," Hobby told the Senate.

Schwartz made the same argument he used Monday.

The voters amended the Texas Constitution to establish the Judicial Qualifications Commission to handle just such cases as this one, Schwartz said.

Hobby said, "If the Judicial Qualifications Commission functioned, as I believe it ought to do, we wouldn't be here today."

Schwartz also argued that Carrillo's federal court trial in Corpus Christi would not be completed until Carrillo is sentenced. Schwartz said the trial stage of that proceeding comes to an end only with sentencing.

Carrillo could get up to 14 years and a fine up to $25,000 in the federal case. The senators agreed without objection to forego until Nov. 18 the $30-a-day expenses each is entitled to during the impeachment trial.

"Justice dictates that this court (the Senate) recognize other judicial proceedings," Schwartz said.

Adams responded that the Senate would be "shirking our responsibility" if it voted to postpone.

"Senator," Schwartz told Adams, "you're ignoring what billions and billions of your brain cells tell you—that you're wrong."

Five Lawyers Admitted To Western District

Five lawyers from Midland, Odessa, Lubbock and Dallas in federal court here this morning were admitted to practice law in the U.S. District Court's 68-county Western District of Texas.

Admitted were Richard M. Graham of Midland, Darrell Frank Smith of Odessa, Albert Perez of Lubbock and John H. Marks Jr. and Bryan James Maedgen, both of Dallas.

"It's a milestone and an achievement," U.S. District Judge D. W. Suttle told the attorneys in admitting them to practice in the district. "Foremost is not the knowledge, but the character they certified to. That's what's important," the judge said.

Some individuals, Judge Suttle said, could never match up to that character criteria because "they just don't have the fundamental concept of decency."

"That's the way mistakes are corrected," he said.

Eight attorneys had made applications for admission to the Western District. Not appearing before the court this morning were Gary Dean Jackson, James Herman Martin and Roy J. True, all of Dallas.

The federal court's Western District of Texas is comprised of seven divisions: Austin, Waco, El Paso, San Antonio, Del Rio, Pecos, and Midland-Odessa.

Dutch Firm Offers Plane For Kidnappers

LIMERICK, Ireland (AP) — A Dutch firm is offering to fly the kidnappers of one of its executives out of Ireland in a company jet if they agree to release him unharmed for a ransom.

But official sources said the government is reluctant to approve such a move even if the kidnappers accept the offer to free Tiede Herrema, 53-year-old head of the Ferenka steel plant in Limerick.

Herrema was kidnapped Friday and threatened with death unless three members of the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army were freed from prison. The government refused to meet the demands.

The dragnet for Herrema intensified as hundreds more police and troops with helicopters joined the hunt. The IRA, which has condemned the kidnapping, also is hunting for the kidnappers, presumably to kill them for discrediting the movement.

The target of the dragnet is Eddie Gallagher, a former Provisional expelled by the IRA when he challenged guerrilla leaders following his escape from a top security prison last year.

He is believed to be the common-law husband of Rose Dugdale, one of the prisoners whose release the kidnappers demanded. He is also believed to be the father of her son, Ruari, born 10 months ago in Limerick Prison.

The baby was reported to have been moved to a hideout outside Dublin on Tuesday after a mystery group threatened to execute relatives of the three IRA prisoners named by the kidnappers.

In addition to the kidnap gang, the prisoners are Miss Dugdale, the prisoners are Kevin Mallon and Jim Hyland. Spokesmen for Ferenka's Dutch parent company, Azko, said Tuesday that two telephone calls that Herrema's 26-year-old son Jelle claimed to have received from the gang saying the businessman was alive were hoaxes.

Security Plans Of Ford Visit Found On Lawn

By C.D. HYLTON
ELKINS, W.Va. (AP) — A six-page security plan for President Ford's visit to Elkins Saturday was found on the lawn of the Randolph County Courthouse three hours before the President's arrival.

The plan, found by this reporter prior to the security-conscious presidential visit, pinpointed places along Ford's route where he would probably be shot. The President did stop at each of the three spots detailed on the plan.

The locations of four two-man West Virginia State Police sniper teams, assignments of all state and city police along the parade route, escape routes to be used by the presidential limousine in case of emergency and security plans for areas behind buildings along the parade route were also listed in the plan.

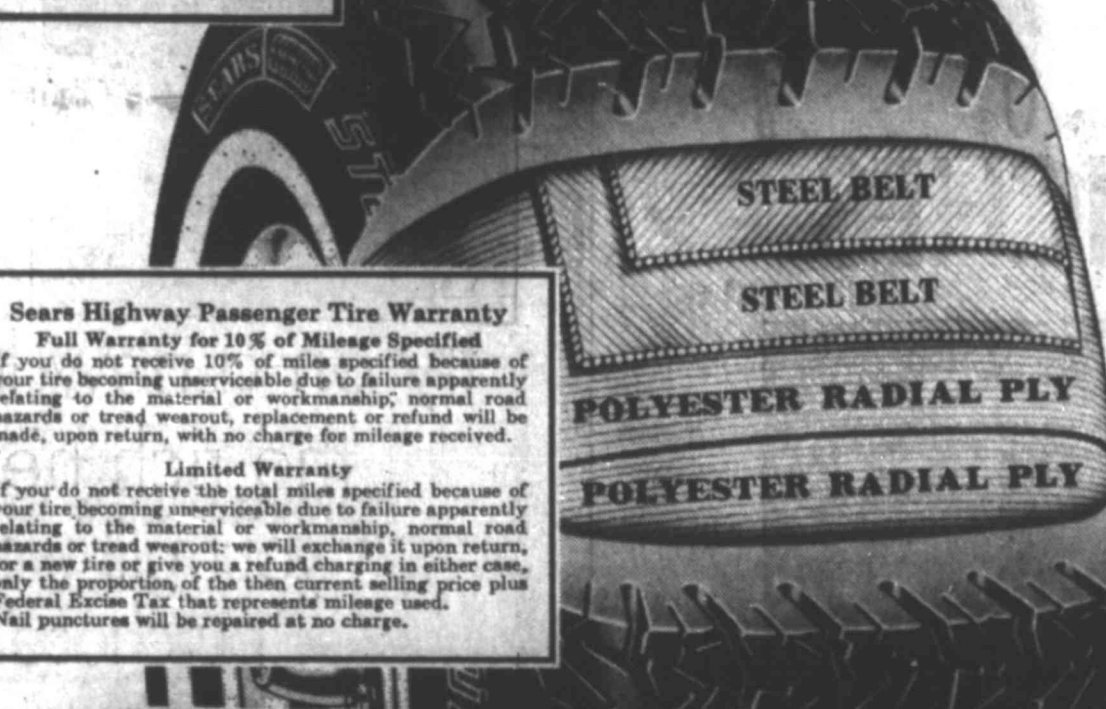

It included the assignments of state conservation officers and detailed the number of men involved in each assignment.

When an attempt was made to return the plan to a Secret Service agent assigned to the press credential room, the agent glanced at the material and said it was not important.

The reporter later showed the papers to Pappy Noel, a staff assistant to the President, and told him where they were found. Noel and other White House aides examined the plan and said they were alarmed at the apparent carelessness involved in its loss.

The aides kept the material turned over by the reporter. Noel said the plan was distributed to state and local law enforcement officers during a briefing the morning of the President's arrival.

'Missing' Group Puzzles Officials

The Los Angeles Times

NEWPORT, Ore. — "No one knows what to think," Sheriff's detective Ron Sutton said here Tuesday as he was swamped by hundreds of calls about the disappearance of perhaps 20 persons said to be following a mysterious group promising deliverance by space ship to a higher plane of life.

"It's so weird and far out," Sutton and Oregon State Police officer Mel Gibson finally escaped the siege of newsmen and worldwide telephoners to spend most of the day in the settlements along the central Oregon coastline.

They were checking out rumors of persons giving away their land, personal belongings and even children in order to vanish to some unknown Colorado hideaway in preparation for departure to outer space.

Sutton estimated that 15 to 20 persons have disappeared from the Newport-Waldport area since a Sept. 14 meeting conducted by strangers at Waldport's Bayshore Inn.

A similar meeting, scheduled for Wednesday night at San Jose, Calif., was abruptly cancelled Tuesday by a letter and an anonymous phone call to officials in that city.

Most authorities and citizens in this Oregon coastal area take a less-than-rapturous view of the whole story. They suggest that many of those who vanished are really "hippie" types apt to wander off at the summons of any Pied Piper.

"WE HAVEN'T paid much attention to it," said Connie Hoffman, news editor of the Newport News Times. "If 200 people from this area attended a meeting, we would know someone who was there. We don't."

Newport Police Sgt. Lynn Dennis said those who apparently have gone from the area "are mostly floaters."

Waldport City Recorder Viola Blackman said, "I can't think of one person from the city of Waldport who is missing and I've been around here for a few years."

One man presumably gave away his farm. But officials said there wasn't much to give — other than a big mortgage.

Sheriff's detective Sutton said it was untrue that another man gave away his boat.

In the coastal town of Yachats, eight miles south of Waldport, 70-year-old Mrs. Hilda Eaton did not agree that her missing son, Dan Staggs, 43, fits the "hippie" description, however.

She said he left a good job in a Springfield (Ore.) nursery to go.

She said she received a postcard from Colorado saying, "I am on my way and you will not hear from me again."

"I assume he is pursuing something he thinks is valid," she said Tuesday. "He is a mature person with a good brain. He was interested in everything."

Staggs was divorced.

The Lincoln County Sheriff's Dept. said it had received no actual missing persons reports.

Sutton said that after being asked for help by a 19-year-old girl who told of her 22-year-old sister's plan to go with the group, he talked to several persons living in apparent commune style in a Newport house.

ADVANCE POSTERS for the Sept. 14 gathering — held after a well-dressed "Joseph Simon" paid $50 cash to rent a meeting room — advertised that "two individuals... sent from the level above human" would tell how they plan to return and how others might reach the same level via UFO.

Meanwhile, San Jose radio station KONE news director Victor Boc, who in mid-August interviewed the unidentified middle-age man and woman who held recruiting meetings in Los Angeles, Spokane, Colorado and other locations, told of how he had been informed by telephone from "someplace in Colorado" that Wednesday night's scheduled San Jose meeting was cancelled because of the storm of publicity.

"They don't want their pictures taken," Boc said, "because they say they are going to be assassinated soon and will arise in three days — like Christ. When they do, they don't want to leave photographs."

Boc said a disciple of the group told him "The Two," as the unnamed man and woman leaders call themselves, are reluctant to leave a cult behind when they depart this earth.

Boc said he had been told that about 100 followers are now with "The Two" in Colorado, including five or 10 from San Jose and 12 to 20 from Oregon.

A FREELANCE writer from Utah who asked not to be named told The Los Angeles Times he had accompanied a group of about 30 persons — who eventually dwindled to about 20 — after meetings were conducted with metaphysics enthusiasts in Los Angeles last April.

He said they traveled in caravans and generally camped out in park areas, holding out for a time in the mountains south of San Jose.

Pirates Cinco

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Cincinnati Reds lead the National League in wins, but the Pirates are the team to watch in the Series victory since they have the mighty complacent Oliver of the Pirates.

"They'll go all the way," said R. Sparky Anderson, who pitched superbly Tuesday night, who beat Pittsburgh 3-1 in the National League playoffs.

THE REDS swept three games even though rookie John Niekirk pitched superbly Tuesday night, matching a play-off record of 14 strikeouts.

"This is the best my life," said R. Sparky Anderson, who pitched superbly Tuesday night, who beat Pittsburgh 3-1 in the National League playoffs.

Pirates' Oliver Sees Cincinnati Victory

"This is the happiest day of my life," said Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson, whose club opens the World Series Saturday in Boston against the American League-winning Red Sox.

Putting Worries Snead Even In Win

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — International All-Star golf matches. Before he can even think about playing the likes of Jack Nicklaus or Tom Weiskopf, J.C. Snead says his putting touch must improve in the $117,500 Burns. But he wasn't satisfied.

Sooners To Go Without Littrell

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma head coach Barry Switzer announced Tuesday that starting fullback Jim Littrell would not play Saturday when the Sooners take on the Texas Longhorns in the Cotton Bowl. "Jim can't practice and won't be able to play this week," said Switzer. "Junior Jim Culbreath will take his place and Horace Ivory (reserve right halfback) will back him up."

Littrell twisted an ankle in the Sooners' 21-20 victory over Colorado last Saturday. The Sooners worked mainly on the Texas defense front Tuesday, a defense different from any they've faced in four games this season. Texas uses an eight-man front requiring different offensive blocking schemes.

"We need to have a better practice tomorrow, better than today," explained Switzer. "We are making too many mental errors, especially on offense."

The Sooners have been practicing behind closed doors preparing for the Longhorns. "We have too many people watching our practice and if we do something different we don't want everyone knowing about it. It's none of their business," added Switzer.

Injured Steer Backs Scheduled For Duty

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas who scouted the No. 2 ranked Coach Darrell Royal returned Sooners, reported on the great two injured backs to practice all-around play of the team that Tuesday and both will be used in Saturday's game. "Their defense is fantastic," showdown of the unbeaten Dabbs said. "Colorado drove only two and 24 yards on two of their touchdowns and was forced to punt without making a first down eight times. Their defensive unit plays with enthusiasm and in the Selmon brothers bell. Quarterback Ted Constanzo returned to duty after the missing Monday's drill with a knee injury."

Offensive guard Will Wilcox and defensive end Travis Alford, both worked out but are doubtful for competition Saturday. Assistant coach Ken Dabbs, "And in Joe Washington they have the premier halfback in America," the scout declared. "He is a game-breaker—not only from scrimmage but as a receiver, blocker and punt returner."

Ags' Bellard Praises Raiders

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — "We're going to face a very becuva challenge against the performance Texas Tech Saturday," Texas A&M coach Emory Bellard said Tuesday. "The only difference (between Texas Tech and Kansas) has them playing very aggressively."

Bellard said: "Tech has two and we didn't. "I'm going to have to make some puts if I'm going to beat anybody else. And I'm unhappy I didn't hit the ball very far today," said the nephew of the famed Sam Snead.

The younger Snead took advantage of Burns' jittery start to go 2-up after three holes. He played the 13 holes in 12 pars and a solitary bogey over the par-72, 7,000-yard Muirfield Village layout.

"I don't make many birds. That's the trouble with me," said Snead, who faced Australian Bob Stanton in the second round today.

Stanton ousted young American Mark Hayes 3 and 2 in the first round.

Other second-round matches today paired Tsutomu Irie of Japan against John O'Leary of Ireland, Jerry Heard against fellow American Eddie Pearce and newlywed Tom Kite of the United States against American Forrest Fezler.

Irie upset Ben Crenshaw of the United States 2-up. Stanton ousted young Mark Hayes of the United States 3 and 2, while O'Leary eliminated Leonard Thompson, another American, 2 and 1.

Heard carded a three-under-par 69 on the 7,000-yard Muirfield Village Memorial course in downing Australian David Graham 3 and 2. Pearce notched a 2-up triumph over fellow American Joe Imman.

Kite, who was married in Las Vegas, Nev., last week, was a 5 and 3 winner over Kazumari Takahashi of Japan.

Fezler beat Bernard Gallacher of Scotland 1-up Tuesday in a close match that went down to the final hole. Fezler carded a par 4 on the 18th hole while Gallacher, fresh from winning the Dunlop Masters in England, hit his tee shot into the water and wound up with a double bogey 6.

First-round losers pocketed $2,500 checks.

Survivors of the second round this morning will play another round in the afternoon, with the winners going against Nicklaus and Weiskopf, both seeded into Thursday's finals. At stake is a first prize of $25,000.

McBee Leads North Texas PGA By 2

DALLAS (AP) — Host pro Rives McBee fashioned a three-under par 33-33-68 Tuesday to take a two-stroke first round lead in the Northern Texas Section PGA championship tournament on Irving's Lee Collins Country Club course.

The former tour veteran had five birdies against two bogies on his late afternoon round to grab the early lead from Ras Allen of Plano, who had turned in a card of 33-37-70 for the first 18 holes of the 72-hole $10,000 tournament.

Three players were tied at 72, Steve Sheelis of Canton, tour regular Don January of Dallas, and former tour player Eldridge Miles, also of Dallas.

The championship ends Friday.

Hog Back Moves Up In Rushing

NEW YORK (AP) — Arkansas halfback Jerry Eckwood, in bed with a partially paralyzed leg a year ago, is averaging almost a first down every time he touches the ball.

Eckwood, averaging 9.5 yards a carry, moved into second place behind Southern Cal's Ricky Bell in the national major college rushing race.

According to figures released today by the NCAA Statistics Service, Bell is averaging 100.7 yards per game while Eckwood is pouncing out 151.7 yards a contest.

The Arkansas sophomore underwent enzyme injections for a disc injury a year ago and seemingly has completely recovered. And if consistency is the name of the game, Eckwood has sparked with games of 143, 156, 146 and 162.

Kansas quarterback Nolan Cromwell played on the defensive team last season and didn't even start the first two games this year. But, after rushing for only 16 yards in his first game and 28 in his second, he exploded for successive games of 294 and 187, vaulting him to sixth among the rush-

Hays Uneasy Over OSU's No. 1 Role

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Oklahoma defensive end Jimbo Elrod was named AP lineman of the week for 19-tackle effort in Saturday's 21-20 win over Colorado. Arkansas' Jerry Eckwood, who has gained 607 yards for a 9.5 yard per carry average, was named SWC Offensive Player of the week for his 162-yard performance in a 19-8 win over TCU.

Ohio State's Woody Hayes last week was complaining because his Buckeyes weren't No. 1 in the nation and now he's uncomfortable because they are. "That means everybody will be pointing harder at us. I feel like the fellow who was tarred and feathered and ridden out of town on a rail. He said if it weren't for the honor, he'd just as soon have walked."

Hayes added, "This team has played as well as any I've had up to this point. I think the tougher schedule helped. They were under the gun from the very start."

Herb Lusk, Long Beach State's "Praying Tailback," was named AP back of the week for his 258-yard rushing spree in a 31-24 victory over Southern Illinois. The 22-year-old son of a Baptist preacher explains his nickname, "I want to thank God for giving me the ability to do what I do. Wichita Back Nabs Mo Valley Honors

TULSA (AP)—Wichita State University came out of a losing streak Saturday and notable in its win was tailback Elbert Williams. Williams charged for 124 yards on 27 carries as the Shockers defeated Louisville, 13-10, and today he was named Missouri Valley Conference offensive player of the week.

3 Leagues Fight Playoffs

NEW YORK (AP)—Three last weekend. The Associated Press learned the vote was 8-4—five members of the 17-man committee were absent—and three of the negative votes were cast by representatives of the Big Ten, Pacific-8 and Southeastern Conferences. They were faculty representative Marcus L. Plant of Michigan, a member of the Big Ten; athletic director J.D. Morgan of UCLA, which belongs to the Pac-8; and Boyd McWhorter, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference. The fourth negative vote came from Alan Chapman of Rice University, a member of the Southwest Conference.

The committee fight for a national championship playoff was led by Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney, who was represented by sports information director Don Bryant, and Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, executive vice president of Notre Dame. Other affirmative votes, The AP learned, were cast by Casale, athletic directors Bud Jack of Utah, Seaver Peters of Dartmouth and Homer Rice of North Carolina; faculty representative Edwin L. Saxer of Toledo and Robert C. James, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Absent committee members were Coaches Darrell Royal of Texas and John McKay of Southern California, athletic directors Elroy Hirsch of Wisconsin and Carl Maddox of Louisiana State and faculty representative William H. Baughn of Colorado.

Look Out When Cowboys Start Executing

DALLAS (AP)—Dallas Coach Tom Landry says his un-beaten Cowboys aren't a solid football team right now but look out for them when they start executing.

"Our young players still don't execute—not the way you would associate execution with Cowboys teams of the past," said Landry Tuesday. "They make up for lack of execution with attitude and enthusiasm. Maybe the great execution of the best (teams) I've had, will come later this year or next year. We've been doing some thing well by accident. But we are making the plays players just need experience."

Landry added. He cited second-year half-back Charles Young as a prime example of the talent in the Cowboy larder.

"We were counting on him to fill Calvin Hill's spot and he was injured throughout pre-season," said Landry. "Against Detroit, Charles showed great explosion and could be an important asset in our future." Landry said, "We still don't have any consistency either on offense or defense. But we do have a team that will hit."

Landry said Dallas certainly wasn't "awesome" which was a description used by television commentator Frank Gifford, an old Landry teammate with the New York Giants.

"Oh, Frank is a friend of mine," Landry said. "We played well but we weren't devastated."

A Poor Week For Picking

Last week was not one of the better weekends in trying to pick Class AAAA football games in hitting 10 correct while missing five.

The way teams in District 5-4A play, you never know who is going to win. Midland and Cooper dropped tough decisions last week while Lee and Abilene were impressive to say the least.

So on the year, this corner has hit 75 correctly and missed 24 for a .756 average.

Rebs To Beat Central

MIDLAND LEE takes a 4-0 record into the big game with San Angelo Friday night in San Angelo. Two years ago, Lee dropped a 16-14 decision, but this time around Clyde Gary and Co. will prevail, 20-16.

MIDLAND HIGH will get back on the winning track at the expense of the Big Spring Steers who were dismantled last week, 34-6, by Abilene. The Purple Pack to post a 27-13 victory in Memorial Stadium Friday night.

ODESSA PERMAN has yet to be scored on, but that will end Friday night. The Panthers will win, however, say, 17-7 in one that could even be closer mainly because of the speed of the Warbirds.

ABILENE COOPER has lost to Killeen and San Angelo in the last 30 seconds the past two weekends and that is bound to take something out of the Cougars and Darrell Shepard is mighty dangerous, but the Cougars will win in P. E. Shotwell Stadium, 20-14.

In other games, Amarillo Caprock to take care of Lubbock High, 28-7. Lubbock Monterey to nip the Pampa Harvesters, 28-17. Amarillo Palo Duro to race past Canyon, 33-13. Hobbs, N.M. to edge Lubbock Coronado, 14-12. Plainview too big for Dumas, 20-13. Hereford to take care of El Paso Borges, 22-8. Tascosa, Amarillo and Borger all have open dates this weekend.

MHS Girls Take 5-4A Lead

ODESSA—Midland High cap-over Cooper Thursday in turned sole possession of first Abilene.

In the District 5-4A Linda Wimberly led the volleyball race here Tuesday Bulldogs with five straight with an easy 15-6 win over spikes against Odessa and Staci Odessa High.

The Bulldogs got some help Graham was high point in from Big Spring as the Steers individual with 10 points. Tish upset Cooper on the Cougar Madison slammed three hard home court. Midland High now spikes at Odessa's defense.

stands alone at the top with Spiker Jo Ann Johnson and a 5-0 mark.

The Bulldogs can sew up the varsity to a 15-6, 15-7 win over first half crown with a victory Odessa High.

Steers Never Easy For Purple Pack

The post-Permian lockdown has proved a harrowing experience to prepare for, because you're for Midland High Coach John Reddell and his Bulldogs in the to do. I guess you'd call them past and this year it could be worse than ever.

Still, it's difficult to figure how the Purple Pack can cut it any closer against the Steers than they did in 1972 and 1973.

In 1972 Midland won 17-16, but had to sweat out a last gasp field goal attempt by the Steers before they were home free. Then in 1973, it took a cross-country jaunt by quarterback quarterback Steve Reddell late in the game to nail down a 27-20 decision.

Last year, the margin was 21-6, a comparative breather. But this fall Coach Bob Burris has the type of team that could make it spooky again.

"Big Spring is a difficult team to prepare for, because you're for Midland High Coach John Reddell and his Bulldogs in the to do. I guess you'd call them past and this year it could be worse than ever.

While Midland has limited four rivals to less than 100 yards split end Ricky Ross, both in a game average rushing. It's the passing of senior quarterback Curtis Pittman and a 38-yard scoring pass from Pittman to Mark Moore that gives the Midland coaching staff the coffee nerves this week.

"They do a good job of pass blocking, particularly Mike Gomez, a 230-pound, 6-3 tackle," adds Reddell.

Midland will be bouncing back from a 14-0 district opening defeat at the hands of Permian which levelled the Pack's record at 2-2.

Despite the setback, Reddell wasn't too upset over the play-

Friday, it was the first Permian turnover this fall...The Steers are 2-2, but had that Snyder game slip out of their grasp in the final seconds.

"Offensively," Reddell said, "We were able to move the ball just enough to keep our hopes alive, but Permian has an outstanding defense. Our drives bogged down when they just whipped us physically in a few places."

BULLDOG QUICKIES — Last week's Pittman-Ross scoring pass mark the first TD aerial against the Bulldogs this season... Halfback Phillip Ward is the Bulldogs' leading ball-carrier with 266 yards in 30 carries, better than eight-yards per crack. When cornerback James Wortham recovered that fumble

Rebel Girls Whip Permian

The Midland Lee volleyball team slugged Odessa Permian, 16-14, 14-12, in District 5-4A action at the Lee gym Tuesday night.

The victory gave the Rebels a 3-2 district record. The Lee junior varsity is also 3-2 after storming back Tuesday to whip Permian, 3-15, 15-5, 15-7.

The Rebels will host Abilene High Thursday in another league encounter.

'There Is A Way'

"What value is it to you or any consumer if the price of gasoline is 35 cents a gallon and there is no gasoline to buy? Or what value is it to the farmer burning propane if there is no propane for him to buy?"

These were questions asked recently by D. W. Calvert, a Tulsa, Okla., oilman, in addressing the Downtown Rotary Club of Des Moines, Iowa.

The oil industry and consumers really have a common interest in seeing that adequate petroleum supplies are obtained for the nation, he said.

As to oil efficiency, Calvert said the only way the oil industry can relieve the nation of dependence on foreign oil "is for the federal government to get out of the oil industry regulating business."

If the government had not been in the regulating business, prices of domestic oil products would have gradually increased over the past 20 years as the industry's cost rose, in contrast to the sharp jump they took after the Arab embargo, he explained.

Calvert was telling the story of petroleum as it really exists . . . and he was telling it where petroleum missionary work needs to be done. He was spreading the message where it counts.

But he wasn't through. As a result of federal policies, he continued, "we now find ourselves in a position of being short about one-third of the total oil demand in this country . . . We must gear up our oil industry to close this gap between our domestic supply and demand."

He explained further that even with the increases in prices of fuel oil, gasoline and propane over the last two years, there hasn't been a better domestic supply developed. He said that it takes substantial "lead times" from the time one makes a decision to explore for oil and gas until that oil and gas actually reach the marketplace.

Calvert also cited some of the enormous expenses the oil industry incurs in order to bring domestic supplies to the American consumer.

"The future of this nation's energy problems rests with you and me," Calvert said. "I urge you to study the problem, looking at it from a businessman's point of view . . . then tell your congressional delegation what your conclusions are, by writing to them."

Calvert was doing his part to educate the voters outside the oil patch as to the situation as it exists today.

"There is a way to solve the energy shortage," he said, "and you and I are it."

Temporary Victory

Texas Secretary of State Mark White Jr. saved the day for Texas in working out an agreement with the U.S. Justice Department, delaying intervention in Texas election affairs until after the Nov. 4 election on the proposed state constitution.

This is great, and White is due commendation for his determined efforts.

The Justice Department had indicated that it would make a last minute intervention which could have derailed the Nov. 4 election.

White worked out an agreement with Washington on distribution of Spanish language election information and materials in specific sections of the state, rather than to every voter, as Justice Department representatives had suggested.

Texas simply could not have funded or achieved the federal request in the time allotted. Steps already had been taken to take care of the situation.

Extension of the Voting Rights Act to include Texas was an unreasonable and unjust action, as has been discussed in this space previously.

Texas in the past has taken steps to eliminate voter discrimination. It is hoped that the Justice Department will discover this fact in its future studies. It is unfortunate that Congress overlooked it.

NERVOUS NORWAY:

Worries Touched Off By Russian Rockets

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — When the Soviet Union announced Sept. 11 it would conduct rocket firings into the icy Barents Sea it sent shivers of concern down the spines of Norwegians as far south as Oslo.

Was this a new pressure by their powerful neighbors to the east as bilateral negotiations for drawing a line between the continental shelves of the two nations creeps along?

Or are the firings, the first of their kind in this area, simply a manifestation of the expanding need for tests for the Soviet's expanding store of ballistic missiles?

The Moscow announcement (by Tass) did not describe the rockets or say how many would be launched, but emphasized the "safety" aspect.

"Rocket firings to an area of the Barents Sea bounded by a circle with a radius of 40 nautical miles will be made in the Soviet Union from Sept. 16 to 27," Tass said. "The center of this circle has coordinates of 73 degrees zero minutes latitude North and 35 degrees zero minutes longitude East."

Tass is authorized to state that, to insure safety, the Soviet government asks the governments of other countries using the sea and air routes of the Barents Sea to give instructions to appropriate bodies to keep shipping and planes out of this area and the airspace over it from 10 to 21 hours, local time.

The Norwegian man in the street and press have taken a somewhat different view regarding Soviet designs in the Barents area than the government in Oslo, at least when the latter speaks officially.

The large Norwegian dailies have already wondered editorially whether the Russian tests were meant to demonstrate pressure and one of them said, in effect, "if it is, it is most inappropriate."

The government, making it clear that it was not "protesting" the Soviet activity, disclosed it had instructed its ambassador in Moscow to express to the Kremlin "the concern" of Norwegian authorities for ships and fishing in the area.

It has been Norwegian government policy to do all it can to avert a confrontation with the USSR and to do nothing to provoke its displeasure, if at all possible. It has generally played down the significance of Soviet shows of military strength in the north.

Although Norway is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, it emphasized at the time it joined the alliance that no foreign allies would be permitted to station forces on Norwegian soil nor could nuclear weapons be stored there. These limitations were in deference to Soviet fears and strength.

Soviet interest in the Barents Sea area is both military and economic. Strong Russian military forces are based on the Kola peninsula in the Murmansk area.

Soviet-Norwegian discussions as to how the division of the continental shelf between the two nations should be drawn in Barents Sea and north to the arctic have not yet gotten very far.

Jekyll And Hearst

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By JACK ANDERSON
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — To break the 1973 siege at Wounded Knee, S.D., the Army advised sending tanks and troops against the ragtag Indian rebels — a move that could have led to an awful recurrence of the 1890 Indian massacre at the same historic site.

An inside account of Wounded Knee has been written by John Ehrlichman, the former White House aide, who is eager to help the Indians as penance for his Watergate crimes.

He has recounted the Wounded Knee developments in a private, handwritten letter to actor Marion Brando, who sought the details for a movie he hopes to produce about the mistreatment of Indians.

The siege began in late February, 1973, when Indian militants occupied the Wounded Knee battle site to dramatize their innumerable and timeless grievances. It was the most spectacular Indian uprising since the days of General George Armstrong Custer.

In 1890, a U.S. cavalry unit killed 300 Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee. In 1973, the Army recommended using a full division as the "minimum" force to break the siege.

Wrote Ehrlichman: "Def Buzhardt, general counsel for the Defense Department, sent an observer to Wounded Knee at one point — a professional soldier. He came back with very strong criticism of the way the marshals were handling it."

A group of White House and Justice Department officials, therefore, "met with Army people to learn their views on how to handle such a problem," Ehrlichman continued. The Army's advice was either to get all in or all out.

Norway has proposed that a median line be drawn between the two countries and their island territories so that each obtains, essentially, half the shelf.

But the Russians have indicated, unofficially, that they are not prepared to accept this solution.

They are said to favor the "sector" principle, which was used in the Antarctic, and which would give them about one-third more shelf than they would get under the median-line method.

Britain, Norway, The Netherlands, Denmark and Sweden divided the North Sea shelf, where rich oil deposits have been discovered in recent years, by median lines.

Norway has gotten a large share of North Sea deposits and soon may rank with Libya and Iraq as an oil producer-exporter.

The Norwegian continental shelf extends to the Svalbard (cold land) of which the Spitsbergs form by far the greater part.

The increasing interest in the Svalbard is tied to the possibility—or better, the probability—that vast deposits of oil and gas may be found in the offshore areas.

The Soviet population on Svalbard today exceeds the Norwegians by 2 to 1. Noting this, an American official said in an interview:

"Renewed Soviet interest over Svalbard appears linked to general Soviet assertiveness on the northern flank and drive to extend the Soviet defense line westward past Norway into the Atlantic."

"If it was to be all in and the Army were asked to do it, they would use tanks, a minimum of a division of troops and go full scale. But the Army was not looking for the job. The White House people refused to consider such an assault."

The reformed Ehrlichman, who has been living among the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico, described Wayne Colburn, then chief U.S. marshal, as "the super-hawk and villain."

According to Ehrlichman, "Colburn was for going in, strongly. He apparently authorized the marshals to return fire, and on a given night, thousands of rounds would be fired, with very little effect usually."

"Colburn reported to his superiors at Justice that the firing was necessary because Indian fire 'pinned down' federal people, who then had to be extricated with counter-fire."

Colburn acknowledged to us that he had, indeed, "urged police action." He pointed out that the siege was the "longest civil disturbance in U.S. history." He said he was "proud of my people" who never opened fire, he swore, unless they were fired upon.

Throughout most of the Wounded Knee crisis, Ehrlichman confided, President Nixon was "holed up" at Camp David and left the decisions to a second-string aide.

"What were the President's orders?" asked Ehrlichman. Answering his own question, he wrote: "None. Ken Cole decided, in the President's name, the things that needed White House decision."

"This was not unusual in domestic matters in the Nixon White House especially when Vietnam or some foreign problem was pressing. Nixon would delegate vast latitude to others on continuing basis."

"Cole knew he had authority to act."

"At a minimum, Soviet intentions are designed to deny any use or potential use of Svalbard territory and ocean space to NATO, yet the possibilities for Soviet military use of Svalbard must be considered," the official said.

"Svalbard offers the Soviets definite military advantages through installation of surveillance systems, as its location is along the U.S.-USSR ICBM and SAC bomber routes."

Also, he pointed out, Iceland would be within closer range of Soviet bombers, and maritime and fighter aircraft based at Svalbard's newly opened all-year airport would help the Soviets extend their forward defense to the Iceland Faeroes line.

It is plain that the United States and other NATO nations feel that it is incumbent upon Norway to assert actively its sovereignty in the area.

INSIDE REPORT

The Busing Lemmings And Their Reasoning

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The fateful course taken last week on racial busing by Sens. Birch Bayh of Indiana and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota points to grim consequences for Democrats in the 1976 presidential election if the liberal wing maintains its present party dominance.

Bayh, the active presidential candidate considered best equipped to unite the party's left and center, felt constrained to vote against all anti-busing amendments. Humphrey, who may be the consensus nominee if the primaries produce no winner, not only opposed the amendments but did so with an old-fashioned HHH stemwinder on the Senate floor.

Bayh and Humphrey were defending the most unpopular and ineffective federal practice since Prohibition. But hard-boiled Democratic operatives, while conceding the biracial unpopularity of busing, believe the two Senators voted the only way possible for Democratic national leaders.

"No Democrat can hope to run for President from an anti-busing stance," says one savvy liberal Democrat who personally — and very privately — views busing as a catastrophe. Such reasoning is based on fear that black leaders and their doctrinaire white liberal allies will block an anti-busing Democrat's nomination or prevent his election. Such stubborn ideology puts the Democratic party in thrall to a black minority, even at the risk of losing the white majority to Gov. George Wallace in the primaries or the Republicans in November.

Some Democrats are escaping thrallidom. Sen. Joe Biden of Delaware, 32, is a liberal (rated 81 per cent in 1974 by Americans for Democratic Action). But Biden compared liberals to lemmings during his 1972 campaign and long ago decided that only a lemming could support busing.

After hundreds of hours of conversations over the problem, Biden months ago abandoned the liberal cliché that busing should be the integration remedy of last resort. Rejecting arguments from civil rights lobbyist Clarence Mitchell of the NAACP, Biden determined that busing is no remedy at all. On Sept. 17, he introduced an amendment barring busing ordered by the federal administration, which passed in amended form on Sept. 25.

Biden consequently posed a painful dilemma for Bayh, who says he opposes busing and talked that way during his eyelash reelection in conservative Indiana last year. Many labor leaders see him as the antidote to Wallace among their anti-busing rank-and-file.

But Bayh's presidential strategy is based on convincing liberals he can win. With former Sen. Fred Harris making an open-throated left appeal with unrestrained support for busing, gay rights, abortion and the like, Bayh felt he must cast one pro-busing vote after another. He was thereupon picketed by anti-busers in New Albany, Ind., and forced to cancel a speech in bustling Louisville, Ky., but his credentials with the left stayed pure.

So did those of such unannounced presidential-level Senators as Edward M. Kennedy (the Senate's most intransigent buser), George McGovern, Edmund Muskie — and, especially, Humphrey. Campaigning in the 1972 Florida primary, a frantic Humphrey eyed his longshot comeback and equivocated on busing. But on the Senate floor Sept. 26, a confident Humphrey whose partywide prestige had reached new heights embracing busing and denounced Biden's amendment in light righteous rhetoric of the 1960s: "The message to segregated children is that Congress is ready to destroy the only existing machinery for systematic enforcement of their constitutional rights."

As a House member running for President, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona had no chance to join Bayh, Humphrey et al on the bus. But when questioned at an ADA meeting in Springfield, Mass., Sept. 28, Udall declared he would not close the door on busing as a last-ditch remedy. Although the Biden amendment would be overwhelmingly adopted by the House, Udall would vote against it.

But in 1973, before he was running for President, Udall co-sponsored a compromise bill aimed at integration without busing and fought back when Clarence Mitchell and other black leaders attacked him. Our column applauding Udall's courage fired animosity toward him by ADA stalwart Joseph Rauh, which persisted after Udall announced his candidacy this year. At the ADA's national meeting here last April 18, Udall recanted and declared his compromise bill dead. That was good enough for Rauh, who contributed to Udall's campaign as a peace offering.

Sens. Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, centrist presidential candidates not in busing bondage, voted for the Biden amendment. But Bentsen is becoming a regional candidate, and liberal activists say Jackson's votes only confirm their determination to stop him.

All this suggests the party's dominant liberal wing has not learned enough since 1972. Joe Biden would have neutralized an issue as politically unrewarding as Prohibition and Jim Crow used to be. Instead, Wallace again can travel Florida indicting Democratic presidential candidates as supporters of a practice rejected there by 74 per cent in a statewide referendum and scarcely more popular anywhere else.

Sweetwater's Bootleggers Facing Long Dry Spell

The Los Angeles Times reported that Sweetwater, Tex., is a town of 25 years. Ruben Palma played an active and vital role in the business activity of this small West Texas town, famous for its annual rattlesnake roundup.

Palma was widely known, and plenty of people regularly patronized his business. If they didn't have time to drop by, he would deliver the goods to their homes.

He was invited to join the chamber of commerce and was given his plaque, which he displayed at his place of business. He attended booster breakfasts and hobnobbed with community leaders. His brother was a deacon in the Church of Christ, and another was a minister.

"It was a good business. I done well there while it lasted," he said.

Nell Coplen did well in the same type of business for 20 years. She was a member of the VFW and American Legion Ladies' Auxiliaries. Her place, a popular rendezvous for young and old, rich and poor, was located not far from a high school, surrounded by high weeds that made excellent hiding places to store what she sold—liquor and beer.

"I put my girl through college. It was called a business then. Now they call me a bootlegger," she said in her living room as a radio tuned to police calls chattered in the background.

THE CAREERS of Palma and Mrs. Coplen are coming to an end.

Sweetwater voted to go wet Sept. 5. Bootlegging, an unusual trade that long since has passed from the scene, almost everywhere in the nation, is on the way out here.

Voting dry and drinking wet has been a way of life here for 33 years.

The wet vote means only that there will be legal beer and liquor package stores in town, however. Mixed drinks can be purchased only in private clubs, and the surrounding county remains dry.

"I've delivered beer and whisky to homes where they asked me to carry away the empties so their neighbors wouldn't know they drank," Mrs. Coplen said.

Changes come slowly here. County Atty. Carl Anderson has been a dry for years, and proud of it.

"(Liquor) could be bought before, so what's the difference now?" he asked. "I'd rather have it in the back alleys than on main street. It's just going to be brought out into the open now."

"I'm a teetotaler. I never tasted the stuff in my life. Some of my best friends drink. But I wish they didn't."

County Judge John Edd Killen said, "I drink a little and vote dry. I guess that makes me a hypocrite. But I hated to see this town go wet. I don't see that it's going to be a good influence in our town."

"I guess I'd just rather live in a dry town than a wet one," the judge said.

Asked about a rumor that the county jail was so decrepit that authorities refused to lodge bootleggers in it, Killen replied, "Well, that's only partly true. The real reason is that if we started putting everybody (the bootleggers) in jail, they would start appealing and the court system would get bogged down."

UNLIKE MANY of the small and dying towns in West Texas,

Sweetwater is a changing community. The wet vote, along with a move to build a new courthouse and a hospital, were pushed by the tough local newspaper, the Sweetwater Reporter. The wet vote came at a time when the town was picking up some economic steam after a severe case of recessionary doldrums, when jobs and population fell off.

But no one believed the move to bring in legal package stores would pass countywide, so the referendum was confined to the town.

During the 33-year dry spell, anyone who wanted a beer or a bottle of liquor could go to the bootlegger or drive 41 miles to the closest legal package store at the town of Impact. Other package stores were 78 miles south, 68 miles west and 88 miles north.

The bootleg prices were high. Palma charged $12 for a case of beer, compared to the average legal price of about $5.

Much of the wet vote consisted of support from young voters. Many of the dries, however, still visualize a wet Sweetwater as it was in the early 1940s, filled with rough honky-tonks, street fights, murders and thievery.

The last election over legal liquor in Sweetwater took place in 1965 when the dries won overwhelmingly. The highlight of the dry push then was a parade in the center of town featuring wrecked cars liberally sprinkled with children covered with blood-red catsup and feigning death.

"It scared the daylight out of a lot of people," said a citizen, recalling the gory sight.

AFTER SEVERAL decades of inactivity but before the vote the police and sheriff's departments and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission had recently begun putting the heat on the bootleggers.

Palma was caught not long ago with 45 cases of beer, and officials said they suspected him of having considerably more stashed away to make a killing before package stores can be set up and legal sales begin this week.

But Palma has put up cardboard signs around his house reading, "No Beer - Out of Business," and "On Strike, No Beer."

Some citizens have accused law enforcement officers of being soft on the bootleggers for years, and in a way they are right.

"The law is as good as society makes it," said Sheriff Joe Slater, in answer to the criticism.

And Police Chief Garland Byrd said, "You'd arrest a bootlegger, and the judge might slap a fine on him. And if the bootlegger got a jury trial, the jury would let him go. Usually there was someone on the jury who knew the bootlegger and patronized him."

Law enforcement ignored bootlegging because of public apathy, the officials said, and because it was obvious, the public approved. The dries never encouraged police to raid the unlawful sales of beer and liquor sales, they said.

Now, as the lawful package stores prepare to open, that hypocrisy is about to disappear.

THE COMING of the package stores is bad news for the county, however. Last year, Nolan County collected $44,270 in bootleg fines and Palma contributed handsomely to the total. So far this year, he has been fined $5,000 and total bootleg fines in the county have amounted to $24,631.

"We don't count the fines as revenues," said county auditor Weldon Patterson, "but they do help. I had already anticipated that bootleg fines would be up to $80,000 by 1976. We won't get that now and it will be missed."

Mrs. Coplen, who has never served a day in jail for bootlegging, recently paid a $1,000 fine rather than take a $500 fine and a probation that might have put her in jail.

She would like to own a legal package store, but there is no opportunity. She is a marked woman now.

"I'm a bootlegger," she said, "and before that I was simply in business. But they didn't ask my employment when they drafted my boy to fight in Vietnam."

HER SON was killed in Vietnam in 1968. He was posthumously awarded the Silver Cross for gallantry.

"People are people everywhere," she sighed. "It's funny how many of them didn't want their friends to know they were drinking."

"I feel I served a good purpose here. People wanted a drink, they could come by and get it from me."

She and her husband, from whom she is now divorced, began bootlegging when he hurt his back on an oil rig. "Once you start bootlegging, it's hard to do something else," she said.

"But I'd just as soon have sold legal," she added.

The change from dry to wet will make the most difference to Palma, Sweetwater's biggest bootlegger.

"They've been putting pressure on me," he said. "Right now I'm paying about $500 a month in fines on the installment plan. I can't keep no help. I'm shut down. Last year I paid about $16,000 in fines."

"I'm living, but cats and dogs live too," he said.

According to most officials, however, Palma and the other bootleggers have been living well because their profits were enormous.

Larry Fluit, pastor of the Church of God, was a leader in the drive to keep Sweetwater dry. So was Ted Weaver, the former president of the chamber of commerce who invited Palma to become a member.

"A lot of dries were older people who have died, or gone into rest homes, or didn't register to vote," the minister said. "The margin of victory surprised me. But then I know values are changing. To me it is still a moral issue."

"I live by the Bible. God sets the standards, not the people."

As You Swallow, So Shall You Weep

"Tell me what a man eats, and I'll tell you the kind of man he is," a great gourmet once wrote. This works in reverse too. If you look at the way West defended this hand, you can tell that he ate too much for dinner.

"I guess I'd just rather live in a dry town than a wet one," the judge said.

Asked about a rumor that the county jail was so decrepit that authorities refused to lodge bootleggers in it, Killen replied, "Well, that's only partly true. The real reason is that if we started putting everybody (the bootleggers) in jail, they would start appealing and the court system would get bogged down."

UNLIKE MANY of the small and dying towns in West Texas,

Sweetwater is a changing community. The wet vote, along with a move to build a new courthouse and a hospital, were pushed by the tough local newspaper, the Sweetwater Reporter. The wet vote came at a time when the town was picking up some economic steam after a severe case of recessionary doldrums, when jobs and population fell off.

But no one believed the move to bring in legal package stores would pass countywide, so the referendum was confined to the town.

During the 33-year dry spell, anyone who wanted a beer or a bottle of liquor could go to the bootlegger or drive 41 miles to the closest legal package store at the town of Impact. Other package stores were 78 miles south, 68 miles west and 88 miles north.

The bootleg prices were high. Palma charged $12 for a case of beer, compared to the average legal price of about $5.

Much of the wet vote consisted of support from young voters. Many of the dries, however, still visualize a wet Sweetwater as it was in the early 1940s, filled with rough honky-tonks, street fights, murders and thievery.

The last election over legal liquor in Sweetwater took place in 1965 when the dries won overwhelmingly. The highlight of the dry push then was a parade in the center of town featuring wrecked cars liberally sprinkled with children covered with blood-red catsup and feigning death.

"It scared the daylight out of a lot of people," said a citizen, recalling the gory sight.

AFTER SEVERAL decades of inactivity but before the vote the police and sheriff's departments and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission had recently begun putting the heat on the bootleggers.

Palma was caught not long ago with 45 cases of beer, and officials said they suspected him of having considerably more stashed away to make a killing before package stores can be set up and legal sales begin this week.

But Palma has put up cardboard signs around his house reading, "No Beer - Out of Business," and "On Strike, No Beer."

Some citizens have accused law enforcement officers of being soft on the bootleggers for years, and in a way they are right.

"The law is as good as society makes it," said Sheriff Joe Slater, in answer to the criticism.

And Police Chief Garland Byrd said, "You'd arrest a bootlegger, and the judge might slap a fine on him. And if the bootlegger got a jury trial, the jury would let him go. Usually there was someone on the jury who knew the bootlegger and patronized him."

Law enforcement ignored bootlegging because of public apathy, the officials said, and because it was obvious, the public approved. The dries never encouraged police to raid the unlawful sales of beer and liquor sales, they said.

Now, as the lawful package stores prepare to open, that hypocrisy is about to disappear.

THE COMING of the package stores is bad news for the county, however. Last year, Nolan County collected $44,270 in bootleg fines and Palma contributed handsomely to the total. So far this year, he has been fined $5,000 and total bootleg fines in the county have amounted to $24,631.

"We don't count the fines as revenues," said county auditor Weldon Patterson, "but they do help. I had already anticipated that bootleg fines would be up to $80,000 by 1976. We won't get that now and it will be missed."

Mrs. Coplen, who has never served a day in jail for bootlegging, recently paid a $1,000 fine rather than take a $500 fine and a probation that might have put her in jail.

She would like to own a legal package store, but there is no opportunity. She is a marked woman now.

"I'm a bootlegger," she said, "and before that I was simply in business. But they didn't ask my employment when they drafted my boy to fight in Vietnam."

HER SON was killed in Vietnam in 1968. He was posthumously awarded the Silver Cross for gallantry.

"People are people everywhere," she sighed. "It's funny how many of them didn't want their friends to know they were drinking."

"I feel I served a good purpose here. People wanted a drink, they could come by and get it from me."

She and her husband, from whom she is now divorced, began bootlegging when he hurt his back on an oil rig. "Once you start bootlegging, it's hard to do something else," she said.

"But I'd just as soon have sold legal," she added.

The change from dry to wet will make the most difference to Palma, Sweetwater's biggest bootlegger.

"They've been putting pressure on me," he said. "Right now I'm paying about $500 a month in fines on the installment plan. I can't keep no help. I'm shut down. Last year I paid about $16,000 in fines."

"I'm living, but cats and dogs live too," he said.

According to most officials, however, Palma and the other bootleggers have been living well because their profits were enormous.

"The Bible denies that one is justified by 'faith only.' (Is. 2:24-26) In keeping with the context we readily see that the word 'faith' in this place is used in the limited sense. Another example of the limited use of faith is Mark 16:15-16. 'He that believeth not shall be condemned.' Specifically he that 'believeth not the gospel shall be damned.' The rulers of Jesus day 'believed on him' but being afraid of the people refused to confess him. (Is. 53:1) James declared that 'the devil believeth.' (Is. 2:19) That this is not the faith that saves, surely needs no proof to those who study objectively.

Saving faith, then, is a faith so comprehensive that it causes one to obey the Divine commands of God. (Mt. 7:21) Who would be so preoccupied as to conclude that I am teaching here that one is saved by works? I am simply saying that the Bible teaches that saving faith is a faith that expresses itself in obedience to God.

"WHAT IS BELIEF?"

The words "faith" and "belief" are used interchangeably in the Bible. This is illustrated in Hebrews 11:6. "Without faith it is impossible to be well-pleasing unto him; for he that cometh unto God must believe that he is...". Believing that God is and that He rewards those who seek Him is faith. (Compare Mk. 6:10 and 13)

Belief is used in a comprehensive way and also in a specific way. Failure to recognize this truth has caused many people to accept the false doctrine of justification by faith alone. You will note that belief is sometimes used to include all the conditions of salvation which God has imposed. An example of this is found in Acts 19:4-5. In verse 4 it is said that John the Baptist had said to the people, "...that they should believe on him that should come after him, that is, on Jesus." When they "heard this," they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. This shows that being baptized by the authority of Christ involved in "believing" on him that should come after him. Again, read Acts 16:31-34. The comprehensive use of belief is found in the conversion of the jailer. When the jailer asked, "What must I do to be saved?" the answer was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus." Verse 33 tells us that the man was "baptized." Now, in verse 34 his actions included his being baptized as Luke says the man "having believed in God."
