Mahon Asks White House To Back Busing Protest

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. REP. George Mahon of Lubbock has asked the White House to put its support behind legislation that would prohibit court-ordered busing of children to integrate schools.

According to an aide, Mahon made the request to Frank Moore, President Jimmy Carter's liaison with Congress. Mahon also hopes to speak directly to Carter on the matter.

The aide, Savannah Walker, said Mahon is "urging that the president 'get the message' to help avoid further damage done by forced busing."

The Avalanche-Journal on Wednesday learned of another action at the federal level that may affect school desegregation here and across the nation.

The Internal Revenue Service has just imposed a moratorium on granting tax-exempt status to new private elementary and secondary schools. An IRS spokesman said all applications for such status have been suspended "until further notice" due to litigation over tax-exempt criteria.

The litigation is expected to be settled soon so that IRS can resume processing applications, the spokesman said.

At least one private school in Lubbock — Winfrey Private School, 4601 83rd St. — says it may be hurt by the IRS moratorium.

Dorothy Winfrey, president and director of the non-profit school, said that without a tax-exempt status, the school will have to pay "perhaps thousands of dollars" in federal income taxes and state sales and franchise taxes. This cost would have to be passed on to patrons through higher tuition, she said.

Miss Winfrey said she had applied to IRS for tax-exempt status in September, 1977. She said she spent several hundred dollars preparing the application and providing authorities with necessary information on the school and its financial condition.

Up until Tuesday, IRS indicated "everything was fine. We met all the requirements," Miss Winfrey said.

But on Wednesday, IRS notified her of the moratorium. "They just suspended our application without a word. I was very surprised," Miss Winfrey said.

And she was suspicious at first. She saw the IRS action as the federal government's way to discourage new private schools, which have become more popular in part due to court-ordered busing of public-school students in Lubbock and other cities.

The IRS spokesman said the moratorium was "in no way" an attempt to stifle the growth of private schools.

In another desegregation development, Dana Vowell of the local anti-busing group called We the People said she has been informed by congressional leaders that there "is indeed hope" for anti-busing legislation.

Mrs. Vowell released a letter from Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, who is sponsoring a proposed constitutional amendment to ban court-ordered busing.

Mottl's proposal has yet to receive a hearing from the House Judiciary Committee, despite appeals from Mahon and other congressmen. However, Mottl has been circulating a "discharge petition" which — if signed by 218 House members — would remove the bill from committee jurisdiction and bring it to the House for a vote.

Mottl said that after several months at a standstill, his petition has picked up three more signatures, bringing the number to 201. He called the latest signatures "a major breakthrough, and we hope a turning point."

Mahon, 77, retiring congressman from Lubbock, said he supports the proposed anti-busing amendment to the Constitu-

U.S. Says Soviets Violate Rights Pact

Carter Sends Message On Trials

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — President Carter accused the Soviet Union Wednesday of violating the 1975 Helsinki human rights accords in the trials of Anatoly Shcharansky, Alexander Ginzburg and other prominent Soviet dissidents.

Carter made the accusation in a message to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, a State Department spokesman said.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance delivered the message to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in a private meeting with no other officials present, following day-long arms-control negotiations.

U.S. spokesman Hodding Carter said the message outlined the U.S. position on the dissident trials and charged Soviet authorities with disregarding proper legal procedures.

SALT Not Linked

Hodding Carter said the administration was still "not linking" its displeasure over the trials to an effort to complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons — the purpose of the Vance-Gromyko talks. He added, however, that "We are reviewing other aspects of our relationship."

One possible course of action known to be under consideration is blocking shipment of oil drilling equipment from American firms to the Soviet Union. U.S. officials privately question whether economic sanctions of this sort could have a major impact on Soviet behavior.

Spokesman Carter said the president, Vance and other administration officials shared "strong concerns" about the trials.

1975 Conference

The human rights provisions President Carter referred to were part of the agreement signed by the United States, the Soviet Union and 33 other nations at the 1975 conference on European security and cooperation at Helsinki, Finland.

Shcharansky is on trial for his life in Moscow, charged with espionage and treason. Ginzburg is being tried for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda" and could go to prison.

The controversy has cast a shadow over Vance's weapons negotiations with Gromyko, but the two sides traded proposals to try to break the deadlock blocking agreement on a new treaty.

Trial Not Mentioned

The SALT II talks opened without mention of the Soviet dissidents' trial, and Gromyko said of his talks with Vance on a new arms accord: "We agreed to consider it, No. 1."

He was clearly irritated when asked whether the dissident trials were impeding the progress of the SALT negotiations, and declined to reply beyond saying: "Trials, what trials? I do not wish to speak on the subject. Do you understand me correctly?"

Vance tried to play down the human rights issue.

"It was touched on," he said at the end of the day's deliberations.

By contrast, both men registered determination to make headway on controlling U.S. and Soviet long range bombers and

Hen Lays Two Eggs Daily-But No Shells

EAST LANSING, MICH. (UPI) — A New Mexico scientist studying sex reversal has produced several effeminate roosters and a strain of chickens that lay two eggs a day.

Researcher David Zartman mixed the female hormone estrogen with corn oil and fed it to chickens, producing several white leghorn hens that consistently lay two eggs a day. The only trouble is the hens' eggs don't have any shells.

Zartman also conducted sex-reversal research on roosters.

He outlined his findings during a joint meeting of the American Dairy Science Association and the American Society of Animal Science at Michigan State University.

Sex reversal research has gone on since the 1930s, but Zartman, an associate professor at New Mexico State University, said he decided to try it after reading a Japanese study on goldfish that had been sexually reversed through the use of estrogen.

Zartman said he injected estrogen substances into chicks at birth and at four and eight days old, attempting to change genetic males to females. He found extreme sex reversals in roosters.

The research produced nine "roosterettes" which have short combs, cluck, sing and flirt with other normal roosters.

The researcher said he also found hens given extra estrogen began laying eggs at twice their usual rate.

One hen laid two eggs in a day on nine occasions and another did so on five occasions, Zartman said. He said the eggs, of medium size, had no shells but were otherwise normal.

Zartman said the research could have great potential for egg producers but that much more work is needed on both dosage and timing before the process can be readied for general use.

Support, Opposition Displayed As Postal Workers Picket Here

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THERE were stares, often followed by frowns and shaking of heads. Too many fresh memories of a postage increase, the important letter that arrived two days late or a parcel which looked as if it went through a meat grinder.

Reactions to Tuesday's "informational" picket of Lubbock's main post office ran the gamut from support to disgust as members of the American Postal Workers Union marched with their signs.

"You make too much money now. Go home!" was one angry reaction. But later, from a gray-haired woman who spotted a picket sign urging the President not to interfere: "Give 'em hell—Jimmy Carter has his beak in more places than necessary."

The demonstration, joined by the local branch of the National Association of Letter Carriers, was one of many around the nation Tuesday called to protest the lack of progress toward a new contract. The current agreement expires July 20.

Union officials in Lubbock are hoping for a settlement. They are as much aware of adverse public reaction as U.S. Postal Service management.

"I don't think the public would understand. Here in Lubbock, they think we're overpaid, but we're not. We are paid more than the area median income," said Starlie G. Pace, local AWPU president.

Starting salaries for clerks and carriers are $13,800 a year, with a top of $16,500. Surveys of the South Plains area indicate an average household income of $10,300.

"A lot of things go on at the Postal Service that we, as workers, can't do anything about," said Al Edwards, NALC branch president. "People want to blame rising postage on labor, but that's only a part of it. There are a lot of little things —non-post office type work—that contributes to it."

Extra Chores Cited

Edwards cited the handling of food stamps for the poor, duck stamps for the hunters and passports for the better-off as examples.

"And the Postal Service keeps open little post offices operating in the red," said Edwards. "The free mailing privileges for congressmen don't help, either."

Even though it can account for a large boost in their incomes, postal employees are not happy about being forced to work overtime.

"There is a unit of 13 people here working 10 hours each a week in overtime," said Pace. "They could hire three new employees for what they're paying in overtime."

Overtime Delays Picketing

Tuesday's demonstration, which was to have started at 8 a.m. when a number of workers ended their shifts, was delayed. They had to work overtime.

"It just so happens that is one of our national items to be negotiated in the new contract," said Pace. "Overtime should be voluntary, except in emergencies and in December (because of the heavy Christmas load)."

"They (the Postal Service) are trying to take things away from us that we already

Administration Lashes GOP Tax Cut Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax-cut plan that Republicans insist will pay for itself is a pipe dream that could lead to a disastrous round of inflation, President Carter's chief economic adviser said Wednesday.

"No way, no way" could the tax reduction for individuals of about 10 percent a year for the next three years spur the economy enough to bring in more revenue than it would cost the Treasury, Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told the House Budget Committee.

However, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal indicated the Carter administration might be willing to accept some reduction in the capital gains tax. This position could break a House Ways and Means Committee stalemate that has delayed action on Carter's tax-cut bill.

The administration adamantly opposes Rep. William Steiger's bill aimed at cutting in half the maximum tax on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stocks and other property.

But Blumenthal said it is signficant that Carter has not flatly ruled out any reduction in the tax.

The administration will not propose any alternative to the Steiger bill, Blumenthal said. But if Congress comes up with a plan that meets administration objections, he might recommend it to Carter, the Treasury secretary added.

Schultze's criticism of the individual tax-cut plan, sponsored by Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., provided the most thorough Democratic response yet to the bill that Republicans have vowed to make a national issue in this election year.

Blumenthal used the same forum to

Ex-Agriculture Chief Has Broken Hip

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Ezra Taft Benson, president of the Mormon Church's Council of Twelve, suffered a broken hip Wednesday when the horse he was holding for a friend bolted, knocking Benson down, a church spokesman said.

Benson, 78-year-old former secretary of agriculture during the Eisenhower adminitration, was listed in satisfactory condition in a Salt Lake City hospital.

Don LeFevre, spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said Benson was in satisfactory condition and "in good spirits." Hospital officials said Benson would undergo surgery. Doctors said they would pin the bone in place and no complications were foreseen, he said.

Two Tax Relief Bills Going To Conferees

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House and Senate unanimously passed inheritance and utility sales tax relief bills Wednesday and now must work out differences between the two chambers' versions.

The Senate quickly passed separate utility and inheritance tax relief bills 29-0 early in the day. The House passed a single package containing both forms of tax relief, 136-0, after six and a half hours of work that ended shortly after 8 p.m.

The House added amendments that shot the cost of its measure from $496 million to $535 million that would cut taxes between now and August 31, 1981.

The essential features are the same in both chambers' bills. They would repeal the 4 percent state sales tax on residential gas and electric bills and exempt the first $200,000 of an estate from inheritance taxes. The present inheritance tax exemption is $25,000 off the amount bequeathed to an individual heir.

But the House added a couple of extras. It voted to exempt small commercial establishments from the utility sales tax and applied the inheritance tax exemptions to estates of persons who have died since Dec. 1, 1977. The Senate inheritance tax bill applies to estates of persons who die after August 31, 1978.

Those two provisions added almost $40 million to the total amount of tax relief provided by the House bill.

Representatives voted 85 to 60 against an amendment that would have repealed all of the inheritance tax except for a small portion that would have remained as a credit against federal estate taxes.

Rep. Fred Orr, D-DeSoto, told the House this was "your first opportunity to vote for or against a tax."

But Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, called the inheritance tax repealer "the Howard Hughes amendment" saying it would enable heirs of huge estates to escape taxation.

The House did amend its tax package to exempt from inheritance taxes back pay and allowances that accumulated while soldiers killed in action were listed as missing.

An amendment by Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, providing a 5 percent annual escalator in the exempt portion of estates for the next decade was approved on voice vote.

House Speaker Bill Clayton said he doubted either chamber would act quickly on the other's bill.

Clayton said the wisest thing to do would be to delay final action until it can be seen what the session's final output likely will be. That way, he said, lawmakers can avoid overspending the projected surplus and revenue growth.

"A conference committee is where we'll have to adjust the figures," he said.

He said that by the end of next week, legislators will have a better idea of what measures have strong support "because

Nuclear Waste Sympathy Lags

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AMARILLO — A small audience here Wednesday listened politely but unsympathetically to a federal government proposal to locate a nuclear waste site in southeastern New Mexico.

Less than 100 persons showed up at the Quality Inn here for the second of three West Texas public hearings. Their number was virtually identical to the turnout at Tuesday's meeting in Midland. A third meeting, scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. today, will be held in El Paso's Civic Center.

An estimated one-third of the radioactive waste which might flow to the Waste Isolation Pilot Project (WIPP), planned for a desolate site 25 miles southeast of Carlsbad, would pass through Texas.

Officials here said Amarillo has a vested interest in the project since the city is located on one of several proposed transportation routes to the nuclear dumping ground.

Lubbock also has been mentioned as a city through which some of the hazardous material might pass.

David Dean, who described himself as a concerned Amarillo citizen, approached the microphone late in the afternoon.

He called Americans "the most wasteful people who have ever lived on the face of the earth," and urged energy department officials to consider a more humane alternative to burying radioactive waste beneath the earth.

"It would be a far nobler idea," Dean said, "for us to once again go back and live in caves or holes or tents than to do what you gentlemen would like to see done." The audience applauded the 37-year-old.

Unlike participants the past two days who thanked the panel for conducting the forums, Dean said he detected "arrogance" on the part of officials. He told them it was their duty to hear public sentiment on the proposed waste site.

Lillian Littrell, also a concerned citizen, expressed fear of the radioactive waste, which scientists say could have a lifespan of 100,000 to 250,000 years.

"I protest the time and expenditures toward this project," she said.

"The lifetime of this poison is beyond our control. You can't guarantee anything over 100 years. Look what happened to the Panama Canal. We thought the post office was great. I can't even go down after 5 p.m. and buy a stamp," she Area Heat To Continue

Sizzling 90-degree readings will bring out sunbathers on the South Plains again today as forecasters promised more typical mid-July weather.

Wednesday the mercury fluctuated around the mid-90 mark, reaching a high of 96 at 3 p.m. No important temperature changes are forecast for today.

Cloudlessskies will keep the days warm through Friday but will allow the temperature to drop at night. Highs should be in the mid 90s, lows near 70.

The high pressure ridge that has settled over the South Plains is responsible for the southerly wind which will continue to blow at 10 to 15 mph today and Friday.

Temperatures across the state were slightly cooler than those earlier in the week. Mid-afternoon readings in Wichita Falls and El Paso were just below the century mark at 99 degrees. Dallas and Houston recorded a humid 94 degrees.

Thundershowers moved eastward during the morning from the Eastern Plains into the Upper and Middle Mississippi River Valley. Some heavy rains were reported in Minnesota and Iowa.

The national forecast for today calls for more showers in the Mississippi Valley and hot temperatures in Maine and northwest Washington as well as the southern portion of the Central Plains.

The high pressure ridge that continues to dominate the majority of the states will, however, keep the temperatures near the seasonal norm.

University Self Study Should Be Open

AUSTIN (AP) — Virtually all of the preliminary draft of a self-study of the University of Texas should be made available for public inspection, Attorney General John Hill said Wednesday.

Hill said the preliminary draft was prepared in August 1975 and a final draft, which is almost identical to the preliminary report, already has been made public.

The only part of the preliminary study that UT may keep secret, Hill said, is Chapter 9 on faculty. He said the deletions "occurring in this chapter constitute the type of opinions, advice, and recommendations intended to be protected" by the Open Records Act.

The pages on the faculty may be released if the university wishes to release them, Hill said.

His opinion was requested by W.O. Schultz II, associate general counsel of the UT system.

It was Hill's 196th decision on the Open Records Act.

Wrinkles, Lines Of Age Show In New Presidential Portrait

WASHINGTON (AP) — The smile is still there — just less broad. The hair is grayer. And there are pronounced lines of age on the neck and brow.

All in all, President Carter's new official photograph projects, according to the head of the White House photo staff, a "more presidential" image.

Its release is part of a White House effort aimed at improving the public perception of the chief executive in the wake of polls showing confusion about the administration's direction and disapproval of its performance.

The first official portrait showed the president displaying the famous, toothy Carter grin. The new picture is far from stern, but the grin is less pronounced. The president has reduced his display of upper teeth from 10 in the first picture to seven in the second.

Compared with the earlier, more relaxed portrait, the new portrayal of the president is "more official-looking," said Billie Shaddix, chief of the White House photo operation.

"The job has a way of changing the way a person looks, aging him a bit," said Shaddix. "Character lines change."

The new portrait of the president, who will be 54 on Oct. 1, will "keep what the president looks like in the minds of the people," Shaddix said.

A new portrait of Mrs. Carter was also prepared by the White House.

Mrs. Carter's new portrait is also undoctored.

Gerald Rafshoon, the Atlanta media specialist who directed Carter's advertising during the 1976 presidential campaign, was also shown the pictures and he approved of the final choice, a secretary said. Rafshoon's primary mission at the White House now includes improving the public's perception of Carter.

The first picture was taken in the White House library, with books and the U.S. flag in the background. The new picture was taken in the Oval Office, with the president standing in front of tan draperies, and the U.S. and presidential flags.

Rex Granum, a deputy White House press secretary, said the official photograph would be replaced periodically. He said all copies of the earlier portrait had been distributed.

Shaddix said 250 copies of the new photograph were prepared and that after they are distributed, more can be printed from the same negative.

ed by the Government Printing Office and costing less than the high-quality, matte-finish photograph, will be made available to citizens asking for it.

Legionnaires Tested For Affects Of Disease

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thomas Payne didn't wince Wednesday as the medical technician filled a test tube with blood from his right arm. He said he hoped it might help solve the mystery of Legionnaire's disease, which nearly killed him two years ago.

The disease struck in Philadelphia in 1976 during the state Legion convention, and eventually resulted in the deaths of 29 and sickening of 150 persons connected with the meeting. It was this circumstance that gave the sickness the name "Legionaire's disease."

Payne, a 49-year-old Air Force veteran from Chambersburg, was the first of hundreds of Pennsylvania Legionnaires — beginning a four-day convention here — who are undergoing blood and pulmonary testing to determine whether victims of the disease have any permanent lung problems.

"It is pretty frightening," said Payne, recalling the 105-degree temperature that kept him in a hospital for 11 days.

"There's still nothing conclusive been found out," he said. "And that's disappointing because of all the medical know-how and resources that this country has."

Dr. Gary Lattimer, an Allentown infectious disease expert, is conducting the tests with the help of four aides from Allentown's Sacred Heart Hospital.

"By testing the breathing function of the Legionnaires who had the disease, and comparing it with those who didn't, we'll be able to tell whether the disease itself is associated with any lung disfunction such as emphysema or bronchitis," Lattimer said.

The physician, who treated six of the original victims, said it probably will take two to three weeks to analyze the results.

James Warman, a 56-year-old coal miner from Waynesburg who was hospitalized for two weeks with the disease, carefully filled out a two-page questionnaire before taking the tests in a basement meeting hall of the downtown Sheraton Hotel.

"I'm trying to do everything I can to find out what caused it," Warman said. "I've worked 17 years in the mines and I've never had any lung problem. Now I tend to tire quickly, and often am short of wind."

Victor Stonebraker, a pulmonary technologist, said his tests with special computerized equipment will check the flow of gas from the lungs to the blood system, and determine whether there is any restrictive or obstructive blood disease.

Payne, Warman and Mahlon Shaffer, of Lehighton, another of the 1976 victims who stopped in for tests, said they had no fear about returning here for the Legion's 60th convention.

"I've been looking forward to it," said Payne. "I intend to go down to South Broad street, and maybe peek around the corner to see what's going on at the old Bellevue-Stratford Hotel."

The Bellevue, convention headquarters two years ago, was also a victim of the disease. It was forced to close at the end of 1976, shunned by guests who were afraid the deadly germ still lurked in its rooms or restaurants.

Its furnishings are now on sale. It will undergo a $20 million refurbishing and open under a new name, the Fairmont.

VFW Post 'Mystery Disease' Pondered

BRIGHTON, Mich. (AP) — Experts puzzled Wednesday over what they called a "mystery disease" that made people "start dropping like flies" at a meeting in a Veterans of Foreign Wars post.

Twenty-five persons were treated or checked at a local hospital.

Without a scent or warning, most of the 22 members attending a VFW Post 4357 Ladies Auxiliary meeting Tuesday night became ill. So did six other persons in the adjoining post bar.

Thirteen of the 28 persons collapsed, authorities said. Eight others said they were not affected, although some of the eight were checked at a local The post, two miles east of Brighton, was closed indefinitely for tests on the heating system, air conditioning and water well.

There was some speculation the cause might have been a faulty carbon dioxide tank or leaky air conditioner. Officials ruled out food poisoning because some victims had not eaten or drunk anything.

"Everybody just thought it was themselves," said member Barbara Fuller, who herself was overcome but did not faint. "The first one to go down was sitting next to me. When a second one fainted, we closed the meeting — temporarily, we thought."

"It's scary," said Livingston County sheriff's investigator Lt. Dick Winsett.

"We've never run into anything quite of this nature," said Robert Scranton, county health director. "It baffles us. We are testing things like water, but don't really even know what to test for."

Twenty-five were treated at McPherson Community Center in Howell and released. Some victims complained that their bodies "felt like lead," of "tingling in the limbs," sore throats, headaches and nausea. All recovered quickly, doctors said.

Many returning to the post for their cars said they smelled "a sick, sweet smell" outside the building.

"What appears to be the most probable cause, according to one of our physicians here, is that it might have been from Freon gas, possibly leaked from an air conditioner," said hospital administrator Paul Baldwin.

"We administered oxygen and ran some blood gases (tests), but there did not seem to be any common denominator," Baldwin said.

Consumers Power Co. technicians spent much of the night testing for natural gas or carbon monoxide leaks, but found none.

Travel Deductions Seem Paradoxical

WASHINGTON (AP) — A North Carolina man has been allowed tax deductions for expenses while working in Maryland, but three West Virginians working in Ohio were turned down in similar cases before the Tax Court.

The court approved the deductions for meals and lodging for Ronald Basden of Beulaville, N.C., who was working in Maryland.

The court held that his work was temporary noting that his work was obtained through a union and when work is slack such "outsiders" are laid off. Also, he was seeking work in North Carolina during the time he worked in Maryland.

In the other cases, however, the court held that the jobs in Ohio were "indefinite" rather than temporary and denied deductions for daily travel from West Virginia to the Ohio job site. Those cases involved Donald Harrison of Kenova, W.Va., Ralph D. Hensley of Shoals, W.Va., and Russell E. McCallister of Culloden, W.Va.

Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. became the first American in orbit on Feb. 2, 1962, when he circled the earth three times in the Mercury capsule Friendship 7.

Lebanon--A Page From Past

IF ANY ONE thing is needed to point up what has happened in the world the past 20 years, an anniversary which will pass this week should serve the purpose.

It was on July 15, 1958, that President Eisenhower sent two battalions of U.S. Marines to Lebanon in a move which made headlines, among other things.

President Eisenhower took the action, he told Congress, to "protect American lives (and) to assist the government of Lebanon in the preservation of it's territorial integrity and independence, which have been deemed vital to U.S. national interests and world peace."

CAN YOU imagine the reaction if such a move were taken today, or for that matter even three or four years ago when Lebanon's current travail got out of hand?

Which poses the question as to what happened in those two decades since we felt it pertinent to move in such a bold manner?

Well, for one thing, of course, there was Vietnam. And that says a lot.

But, before the analysis, a bit of history concerning the Lebanese move is in order.

THE LEBANON crisis of 20 years ago was not unlike that of today.

Lebanese President Camille Cahmoun had asked for American military assistance to help defend his government against Moslem rebels, purportedly backed by the United Arab Republic. The day before Eisenhower sent the Marines, army officers friendly to the UAR overthrew the pro-Western monarch of King Faisal II in Iraq. Things have not been the same since.

The "lesson" of U.S. involvement in Vietnam makes it unlikely that U.S. Marines would be sent to Lebanon again, for any reason. Yet, the U.S. has responded to Lebanese pleas for arms shipments.

The Lebanese civil war initially was viewed as a struggle between Christians and Moslems over the country's complicated system of government. The struggle began not as a fight over religion but as an effort by the Moslems to secure an equitable share of the political power and the economic benefits such power could bring.

TODAY, THE battle between the two religious factions continues, this time complicated by the presence of a Syrian-dominated Arab forced charged with enforcing tenuous peace.

Also, the implied threat by Israel that it would "protect" the Christian forces from further shelling in Beirut and PLO activities in the southern part of the nation adds another dangerous question mark.

There are those who may argue that we accomplished little by sending the Marines in 20 years ago. But, there was not the bloodshed then there is now and the situation was at least temporarily stabilized.

But, the main point here is that in those days, with atomic superiority, with respect around the world and most importantly, with faith in what we were doing and the guts to do it, the U.S. was not afraid to act. A wishy-washy political war in Vietnam and kowtowing to the growing threat of world Communism has changed it all.

Frankly, we preferred it as it was...

AN EDITORIAL:

Oil-ers Can't Win Aggie Bowl

AS IMBALANCED as it may appear at this point, the trade relationship that pumps billions of oil dollars out of the U.S. and into the OPEC countries is far from one-way.

The Arabs are becoming increasingly active importers—of a multitude of manufactured products by choice; and of agricultural commodities by necessity.

In 1970, Arab countries imported $1.7 billion worth of farm products. By 1976, their purchases had grown to $8 billion.

By 1985, food imports are expected to reach a value of some $16 billion.

ADMITTEDLY, THEY can afford the expenditure, now and for some time to come. But the wherewithal comes from one great source—oil. It is a finite resource, nonrenewable capital.

In the long term, there could be problems in feeding the appetite that is being developed in what was not so very long ago a subsistence economy.

An intensive effort is underway to expand Arab favor.

Agriculture is well-developed at present only in vastly overcrowded Egypt, not likely the very best of circumstances to be able to share much with its neighbors.

Where it is not unyielding desert, most Arab territory is still too arid to offer much potential for agricultural development.

Optimistic forecasts see domestic production increasing at about three percent annually for the next 10 years or so.

MEANWHILE, ARABS are also increasing. By the end of this century—a little more than two decades—they are expected to number some 270 million, double the present population.

The need to import food is thus in the process of being built into Arab economies. The primary source at present and probably in the future is the West, most prominently the United States.

It may not be up there with oil in terms of economic glamour. But as a resource, agriculture has at least one great advantage.

Agriculture, unlike oil, is renewable.

ART BUCHWALD:

Home Improvements Are Pain In The Assessment

WASHINGTON—In all the fuss about homeowner taxes, no one mentioned the official tax appraiser who decides how much your house is really worth.

I myself hadn't given him any thought until the other day when I saw a nicely dressed man with a pad and pencil standing on a street corner studying a house.

"You thinking of buying?" I asked him.

"No," he said, "I'm just appraising. How much do you think that house is worth?"

He wrote down $34,000.

"BUT IT'S IN great shape. They put a new roof on it two years ago," I told him.

He added $10,000 to his pad.

"They make any other improvements?" he asked.

"They put in air conditioning in 1962," I said, trying to be helpful.

He wrote "A.C., $5,000."

"But they're really neat people. They take care of their lawn, and they have the most beautiful rosebushes in the back."

He scribbled "Rose Bushes, $16,000."

"When was the last time they painted the house?"

"Oh, they don't have to paint. All they do is wash down the brick every four or five years."

He wrote "No painting" and next to it "$7,500."

"WHAT'S THAT SHACK back there?" he asked.

"That's where they keep their electric lawn mower. The old man's getting on in years and can no longer mow his grass manually."

The appraiser wrote down $6,000 for "lawn improvement."

"They give many parties?" he wanted to know.

"Not many, but they have a lovely patio in the back and they bought a new awning for it last year."

Another $5,000 was added for the awning.

"You're really writing fast," I said.

"The law says any home improvement has to be added to the tax appraisal."

"I feel as if I'm ratting on those nice people," I said.

"LOOK AT IT this way. You're just making sure that they're paying their fair share of their property taxes. If they don't, then you'll be burdened with more than you should pay."

"That's true. I guess you know about the barbecue pit they built. The old man laid every brick of it himself."

The appraiser wrote down "Home-built barbecue pit, $25,000."

"Isn't that a bit much for a barbecue pit?" I asked.

"Since it's home-built it's one of a kind. These things have a lot of value. Their curb seems kind of new."

He appraised the new curb for $2,000.

"I see the house next door is up for sale."

"YES, IT'S THE best house in the neighborhood. Has a wet bar in the cellar, an automatic sprinkling system, a chime doorbell and a gazebo in the back yard."

"How much they asking for it?" he said.

"Two hundred and eighty thousand dollars."

"Well, why didn't you say so in the first place?" the appraiser said angrily, tearing up his notes.

"Why?"

"If that house is going for $280,000, then every house on the block is worth that."

"Oh," I said. "There goes the neighborhood."

So They Say.....

"Tell me," asked the teacher, "is there any group of people in the world who are always happy?"

"Yes," quipped a student. "Nomads."

The average teenager will tell you he believes in parental guidance and has tried it—but his parents won't accept it.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Gerald R. Ford's old pals on Capitol Hill are overriding protests from his potential rivals for the 1980 presidential nomination to dip into party campaign funds for him—stirring up dying embers of the blazing Ford-Reagan bitterness two years ago.

Without announcement or authorization, Ford's friends who control the Republican congressional campaign committee are paying the $36,500 salary this year for Ford's political aide.

While supposedly hired to help Ford campaign for 1978 congressional candidates, the aide will be invaluable in preparing a 1980 presidential run by Ford.

Neither one political aide nor $36,500 will make Ford President again, but they could represent something much bigger. His backers clearly intend that Jerry Ford will be chief beneficiary of Republican gains in congressional elections providing momentum for his presidential comeback.

WHAT BOTHERS many Republicans, however, is not the example of Nixon in 1966 but of Ford in 1976. To Reaganites, the incident all too closely resembles Ford's use of the party apparatus to beat back Ronald Reagan's challenge two years ago.

The decision to start paying for Ford's political aide in April was made by Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, the committee chairman, and Steven Stockmeyer, its executive director, without notifying other committee members; like Ford, both are from Michigan.

The aide is Charles Greenleaf (still another Michigander), who was a Ford delegate hunter and campaign assistant in 1976. Greenleaf is answerable to Ford only and is located at Palm Springs, Calif., the former President's home.

Nobody would have suspected this cozy arrangement except for a June 2 account by New York Times reporter Adam Clymer.

Bob Barrett, Ford's former military aide and present executive assistant, revealed to Clymer what an experienced politician would have concealed. Greenleaf's work, said Barrett, "would make it easier for Mr. Ford to exercise his options in 1980."

THAT SET OFF grumbling in Republican cloakrooms, even among such Ford stalwarts as Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, House minority whip. But another Illinois congressman, Rep. Philip Crane, did more than grumble.

Crane, a Reagan supporter in 1976 and a possible candidate himself in 1980, on June 8 fired off to Vander Jagt a series of blunt questions:

Who made the decision? Who else is eligible for such help? How much will Greenleaf be paid?

"Is this consistent with the objectives behind the formation of a Republican congressional campaign committee?"

Vander Jagt replied on June 14 by sidestepping Crane's questions. Instead, he used that hoary politician's device of attacking the news story while claiming Greenleaf "is part of our Congressional Advocates program."

Stockmeyer told us helping Ford has two precedents: Nixon in 1966 and John B. Connally in 1976. But the subsidy for Nixon (variously estimated at $30,000 to $80,000) was specially raised and did not come out of committee funds.

The help for 1976 congressional campaign activities by Connally (not then a presidential prospect) was around $8,000 to pay a scheduler hired by the committee and located in Washington.

ARE THE OTHER 25 "Congressional Advocates" eligible for their own Greenleaf? "We'll do the same for anybody who asks," Stockmeyer told us.

Not so, says his boss. Vander Jagt told us Ford is "a special case," lacking funds or staff.

Actually, Ford has more resources than his potential rivals: 12 staffers, seven of whom are fully paid for by the federal government with no statutory restrictions on their political use. Defending the arrangement, Ford wrote Vander Jagt June 15 that paying Greenleaf should not "be imposed on the taxpayer." If so, he has leftover funds from the President Ford Committee's (PFC) campaign fund of 1976.

VANDER JAGT HAS put out the fires in the cloakrooms, at least among Ford stalwarts. "After all, he is an ex-President," Michel told us, adding, however, that he wants no more special help for Ford.

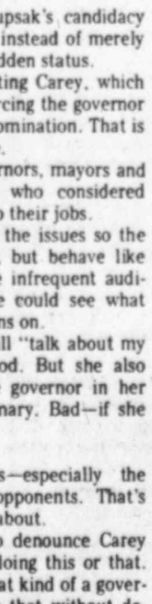

But Crane was considerably less satisfied after talking to Vander Jagt, who turned down a Greenleaf for "Congressional Advocate" Crane.

Vander Jagt has yet to answer a similar request from Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's longtime political adviser. "We feel that this kind of preferential treatment (for Ford) will be disturbing to many who have contributed to the congressional committee," Nofziger warned in a June 21 letter.

So, "in an effort to treat all of its fundraisers (Congressional Advocates) equally," he called for the committee to pay a Greenleaf for Ronald Reagan. For Republicans, the unpleasant echoes of the summer of '76 had returned.

ANDREW TULLY:

She's No Pussycat

WASHINGTON—Over the phone from New York, a spokesman for Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak said something silly. "Mary Anne will not run as a woman," he said of her race against her boss for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

I don't believe it for a moment. It's as if the word was passed that Gov. Hugh Carey had decided not to run as a man. Indeed, what makes the race interesting is that Mary Anne Krupsak indisputably is a member of the female sex.

She is running because she is sore at Carey for not giving her enough to do, and an angry woman can stir up a much bigger fuss than an angry man.

Carey has done a pretty good job of running a state that comes close to being ungovernable.

BUT I WELCOME Miss Krupsak's candidacy because she is doing something instead of merely yelping about woman's downtrodden status.

Whatever her chances of beating Carey, which as of now are slender, she is forcing the governor to run instead of walk for the nomination. That is a plus for the people of the state.

We have had too many governors, mayors and assorted other office holders who considered themselves shoo-ins to hang onto their jobs.

They don't bother to address the issues so the voters can decide their worth, but behave like those medieval kings who gave infrequent audiences to the masses so people could see what they looked like with their crowns on.

Miss Krupsak has said she will "talk about my approach to government." Good. But she also said she wouldn't criticize the governor in her campaign for the Sept. 12 primary. Bad—if she really means it.

CONFOUND IT, candidates—especially the outs—have to criticize their opponents. That's what a political campaign is all about.

Miss Krupsak has just got to denounce Carey for doing this or that, or not doing this or that. She'll have to tell the voters what kind of a governor she'd be, and she can't do that without denouncing the kind of governor Carey has been.

Whatever their faults, women do not pull punches, whether they're running for office or coming to bat with the bases loaded or confronting a husband who's been out all night.

The average male is a relative rabbit, wearing the mantle of aloof dignity. The average woman is a tigress, determined to convince her audience by sheer force.

Women also have guts. Few families of eight kids have been raised right by weaklings. Golda Meir was no shrinking violet. Back in the old days of McCarthyism, it was the usually Sen. Margaret Chase Smith who bullied Joe out of the Senate.

Carey says he's not afraid of Mary Anne Krupsak. That's silly, too. Everybody should be afraid of a woman with her dander up. Apparently, nobody ever told the governor what hath more fury than Hell.

JAY HARRIS:

The Fat's In Fire

THE FAT IS in the fire. That expression is an apt one across the land these days.

Today, Lubbock's City Council comes face to face with what's cookin' in the kitchen as far as the "tax revolt" is concerned.

What is the answer? Just cut taxes, comes a chorus from irate homeowners and others.

How and where? That's your business comes the answer like a rehearsed crescendo. Just cut the fat!

There is no question but that a new era, at least for the moment and maybe for the foreseeable future, has arrived, not only in California with Proposition 13, but in cities and states from coast to coast.

IT'S MUCH easier said than done.

It must occur to the elected leaders, and to those who are leading the charge to lower taxes, "like right now," that the Tax Bugaboo wasn't built overnight, nor can it be dismantled in the same time.

In brief, far too many person on both sides of the fence are pushing panic buttons.

There is no question but that taxes should be and can be trimmed, in many instances substantially. The rumble of discontent has been abuilding for years. The moment of truth is now at hand.

But, having said that, then what? Those who pick some figure out of the air, whether it is 25 percent or 57 percent, as in Prop. 13, must realize as Lubbock Mayor Dirk West noted, that taking a broad axe to the subject isn't the answer.

THERE ARE those who will take out after Hizzoner for what some may interpret as "talking back" to them on the tax issue.

But, although we disagree with Dirk on some areas, specifically on law enforcement and his argument that the auto tax has to be imposed, we feel he has an obligation to keep things in perspective on the tax "hot potato."

For openers, West notes that the Lubbock Property Owners Assn. request for a 25 percent cut in taxes would mean a saving of about $90 a year on a $45,000 home, or less than $8 a month.

The mayor then equated that roughly to the price of two theater tickets or less than the price for a family eating out. But, he added, the 25 percent cut would result in a $4.3 million slash in City revenue for and have a "rather significant impact on city services."

Dirk then suggested that if services had to be slashed, such things as the Library, parks, brush pickup, Health Department increases and weed control could be affected.

RIGHT OFF, WE can hear those who use the Library, the parks, who have brush in the alleys, who want their food inspected and hate weeds saying, "Now wait a cotton pickin' minute..."

So, what is the answer? If one is to accept City officials' assessment, there is little fat in the current $71.9 million budget. And on the surface, they appear to be on fairly safe ground in their argument.

On the other hand, we know a lot of people, especially some on borderline incomes—even two of them—who don't pay $8 for theater tickets or eating out either, at least not very often—and who will feel even a small monthly increase in home payments.

It was with those clashing forces in mind that The A-J suggested that one of the better courses of action would be for Lubbock to join other Texas cities in asking the Legislature to divert one penny of the current 4 cent state sales tax levy to the Cities and/or School Districts.

In Lubbock's case, based on the current penny the city does get, that would be equivalent to $7 million annually, or a cut of 56 cents in the City tax rate, somewhat less if divided between the City and School District.

OTHERS ARGUE that an across-the-board homestead exemption of $10,000 a year would give more direct relief for homeowners.

If the penny were diverted, most current services could be maintained. In the latter case, cuts in services still would be necessary.

For whatever it is worth, the Legislature is studying a variety of options. Diversion of the sales tax wasn't one of them at last report.

The issue, of course, isn't all that simple, or quickly resolved.

As Mayor West pointed out, most of the action thus far has been directed at the City. The truth is that some 53 percent of the combined City-School tax goes to the Schools. Hizzoner thinks some attention should be directed to the readin', ritin' and 'rithmetic area.

THE MAYOR also had his say about those who threaten to seek a recall of the Council if it does not jump through the hoop on command.

"A cheap shot," the outspoken West said. "None of us on the Council are professional politicians. We don't even make our living as City Council people. We serve because we want to do something for the City," he added.

Dirk argues that Lubbock has thrived and its citizens prospered because it and they were willing to invest in the future, and "as a vibrant city its citizens always wanted the best." The issue goes deeper than whether we go first class, of course.

Inflation, rising costs at all levels, and finally tax boosts--it's too much. And Big Brother's edict calling for $1 million or more for buses to make pawns of Lubbock students hasn't helped tempers any. Regardless, the goal is to find a happy medium, giving real tax relief, yet not wrecking vital City and School services. It's no easy task...

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. "WHERE IN THE Bible is any mention of potatoes?"

A. Nowhere. And that's the main reason potatoes were scorned as possible food for so many years. If they weren't identified in the Bible, they couldn't be any good, the folk figured. Big famine in 1740, however, turned the thinking around.

What's not widely realized hereabouts is there are more people who understand the English language outside the United States than inside the United States.

Average man is said to admire a revealing dress on somebody else's girl, but not on his own. Or so claim the surveytakers. That sort of dress he likes best on his own ladyfriend, they report, is a summer linen.

Q. "What's the latest estimate of how much it costs to produce a business letter?"

A. $4.77.

Harsh Term For Accused Soviet Dissident Ginzberg Requested

MOSCOW (AP) — The prosecution Wednesday asked a Soviet court in Kaluga to sentence human rights activist Alexander Ginzburg to eight years at hard labor and three years in Siberian exile, court officials said.

Ginzburg, 41, who is charged with anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, was scheduled to make his own closing summation today. He is accused of disseminating literature hostile to the Soviet Union and running a fund to aid dissident prisoners.

In a second dissident trial, in Moscow, the prosecution introduced a signed statement by Los Angeles Times correspondent Robert C. Toth as evidence that 30-year-old dissident Anatoly Shcharansky was a spy. Shcharansky faces the death penalty on the charges.

President Carter, in an interview with European television stations, said Tuesday the Shcharansky trial "is an attack on every human being" and will arouse worldwide condemnation of the Soviet Union." Carter repeated his claim that the allegation that Shcharansky was a spy for the United States "is patently false."

Toth said Wednesday in Washington that the statement he signed was a record of the interrogation by police about Shcharansky in June 1977. The statement verified the proceedings of the interrogation and that his answers were correct, Toth said.

"If I hadn't signed it, I would have been under a charge of perjury," he said. "But the charge againt Shcharansky is espionage, and there was nothing in my statement that could be used in an espionage case."

Toth said the interrogation, conducted shortly before he ended his assignment in the Soviet Union, covered such questions as where and when he met Shcharansky, how the Soviet dissident helped Toth on stories and how often they met.

Experts testified at a close-door session that the information Shcharansky gave to westerners "is absolutely secret and constitutes a state secret of the U.S.S.R.," said a court official briefing reporters on the trial.

The official gave no details of the statement and did not mention Toth by name. But he said it was signed by "a foreign correspondent, a witness, who was questioned during preliminary investigation and who cooperated with the military intelligence service of a capitalist state." He said Shcharansky "had nothing to say" about the statement.

Toth has denied he ever worked for an intelligence agency.

Ginzburg's wife Irina was barred from the Kaluga trial again Wednesday because she would not promise to refrain from outbursts in the courtroom such as the one Tuesday when she called a witness a liar.

At the end of the day, she talked to a court doctor who, she said, told her Ginzburg was suffering from high blood pressure. Sources attending the trial said he was ill and had received an injection.

Court official Geogry A. Novikov said 25 witnesses had been heard, including seven he said testified for the defense. He said the trial could end Friday.

Ginzburg has been convicted twice previously on the charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. Maximum sentence upon conviction of a third offense is 10 years at hard labor and five years of exile.

According to Ginzburg's 70-year-old mother, Ludmila, who has attended the trial since it opened Monday, the session Wednesday was so boring that "the audience was dozing" as the judge went over about 1,800 pages of prosecution documents.

Shcharanksy is a Jewish activist. Ginzburg, the son of a Jewish mother and non-Jewish father, never has considered himself a Jew and says he is Russian Orthodox. He has been active in the Soviet human rights movement rather than its related, but separate Jewish movement.

The third day of Shcharansky's trial ended shortly before 7 p.m. His brother Leonid, 36, said the atmophere among spectators inside had been very hostile. He said Shcharansky cross-examined three witnesses against him, but was constantly interrupted.

Court official Magamet Pirbugadov said Shcharansky had a chance to question the experts who said he passed on state secrets. Afterward, he said, the trial was reopened and testimony was heard on a separate charge that Shcharansky engaged in anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. The official said witnesses accused Shcharansky of receiving money from abroad to provide "falsified information ... alleging persecution of Soviet citizens."

On the spying charge, Shcharansky has been accused of having passed on to Westerners the locations, personnel and security classifications of military-related industrial enterprises. With Shcharsnky's help, Toth wrote a story in 1976 suggesting one could learn about secret enterprises by examining the workplaces of Jews denied exit visas on security grounds.

Shcharanky also was accused of helping Toth make contact with scientists who allegedly passed on classified information about the space program, genetic engineering and parapsychology, the science of extra-sensory perception.

American reporters and officials have been barred from the courtrooms of both trials, which are being conducted before a judge and two laymen, and all information about the proceedings is coming from official Soviet spokesman or relatives of the defendants who are attending.

Diego conducted his guessing game recently in the lobby of the Tower. The model, which is made up of 31,957 LEGO blocks, will be on display through December. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter Calls Shcharansky Trial 'Attack On Every Human Being'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says the trial of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky in Moscow "is an attack on every human being" and will arouse worldwide condemnation of the Soviet Union.

In an interview with European television stations on Tuesday, the president also said that, despite the trials of Shcharansky, Alexander Ginzburg and other Soviet dissidents, "we have never let anything interrupt our effort, which is constant, to bring about a successful conclusion of the strategic arms limitation treaty negotiations."

Carter, who granted two separate interviews with European television shortly before his trip to Germany on Thursday, denied that the trial of Shcharansky, charged with high treason, was an attack on the administration's human rights campaign.

"I think it is an attack on every human being who lives in the world who believes in basic human freedom and is willing to speak for these freedoms or to fight for them," Carter said in transcripts of the interviews released by the White House on Wednesday.

"The allegation that Shcharansky was a spy for the United States is patently false. The Soviets know it to be false. They are prosecuting Shcharansky because he represents an element in the Soviet Union who are fighting for the implementation of international agreements which the Soviets themselves have signed," Carter said.

The president said the United States would cooperate with the Soviets enthusiastically on mutual security and trade matters, but would not hesitate to voice displeasure on matters of disagreement.

"When we disagree, of course we reserve the right as a free nation to let those disagreements be known so that they can be debated," Carter said. He added that while the United States doesn't want to intrude into the internal affairs of other countries, "we try to demand that now and in the future international agreements are honored."

The president said the trials of Shcharansky, Ginzburg and others violate the universal declaration of human rights and the Helsinki Act, which guarantees citizens the right to leave their country, speak freely, live with their family members and criticize their government.

"These are the things that the Soviets are attacking in the Shcharansky trial, the Ginzburg trial, and others. We deplore this, the acts themselves, and the violations of agreements which the Soviets themselves freely signed," Carter said, adding:

"I don't believe that this trial will arouse anything throughout the world except condemnation of the Soviet Union and deploring of this unwarranted action. I don't think it will still the dissident voices."

The president was interviewed by British, Japanese, French, Italian and German television networks two days before he begins a four-day trip to Bonn for a state visit and an economic summit.

Kremlin Leaders Said Playing Odds In Trial Of Dissidents

MOSCOW (AP) — The aging leaders in the Kremlin, determined to crush dissent in the Soviet Union, are playing for high stakes in trying two leading human rights activists. They apparently believe that protesting Western governments will be long on words and short on action.

The trials of Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg are part of the Soviet crackdown on dissenters and an effort to make it clear that only the Soviet Union will decide how it will abide by its commitments to the world community.

The decision to hold the trials the same week Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is meeting in Geneva with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko on a new strategic arms limitation agreement defies President Carter's human rights campaign and the international concern for the two dissidents.

There is no indication the trials mark a significant victory by hawks in the Soviet leadership who advocate a return to stiff repression of any opposition. Liberals, on the other hand, advocate a more humane face for communism.

Nor is there any indication the decision to be tough is related to jockeying for position in the hierarchy in light of President Leonid I. Brezhnev's uncertain health, as some Western diplomatic observers here are speculating.

Dissident historian Roy Medvedev and others here believe a basic decision was made by the Politburo in the autumn of 1976 to heighten the pressure on dissidents and cut them off from the West, from which they draw moral support.

In the past 1½ years, members of unofficial groups set up in Moscow and other parts of the country to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki accord on European security have been arrested. Some have been sentenced to prison, some are awaiting trial and others, given the choice to emigrate or stay and face prosecution, have left the country.

"What we are seeing is the culmination of this process," one Western source said. "I don't see how you can read anything deeper into it in terms of internal politics. There's no evidence."

Any potential successor to Brezhnev would have to demonstrate firmness in order to impress his Politburo colleagues, another source commented. "But in the matter of the trials it was simply the momentum of the KGB (security police) juggernaut reaching its climax."

The Soviets apparently weighed the decision to hold the trial in the same week as the Gromyko-Vance arms talks into their calculations and decided, correctly it appears, there would be no adverse effect on the negotiations.

Some observers suggest the Soviets have decided a new arms agreement will not get through the U. S. Senate this year so they have decided to remove problems, such as the Shcharansky affair, that stand in the way of improved relations with Washington.

But if Shcharansky and Ginzburg receive harsh and brutal sentences, this would be a sharp challenge to President Carter's human rights campaign and could threaten U.S.-Soviet detente.

To the regret of dissidents here Carter appeared to have toned down his campaign in recent months and tried not to link it to other issues between the superpowers.

But if Shcharansky, who faces a death sentence, and Ginzburg are punished "with all the severity of the Soviet law," as the KGB hardliners have insisted they will be, then the United States and other Western countries could be forced to take more concrete steps to demonstrate that such Soviet behavior is unacceptable.

Carter Backs ERA Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told Congress on Wednesday a proposal to extend the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment has "my strong support."

In a letter to Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of a subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, Carter wrote that ratification was "long overdue."

Although expressing hope the constitutional amendment will be ratified before the present deadline, Carter wrote: "But I am concerned that the current deadline may be an unnecessary barrier toward assuring more than a hundred million their constitutional rights."

The president said there was "no constitional requirement" for a deadline and said Congress "is empowered to determine the period of ratification and can change, by resolution, any previously established ratification period."

The ERA, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, has been approved by 35 states and must be ratified by three more by March 22, 1979, to become part of the Constitution. Four of the 35 states that have ratified the measure have since rescinded approval, but the validity of that move still is in question and the Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide. The states that have rescinded approval are Kentucky, Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska. Kentucky's action was vetoed, however.

Big Corn Crop Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite late planting and acreage curbs ordered by the Carter administration, the government says that this year's corn crop could be the third largest on record.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told reporters after the report was issued that "another good crop" seems to be in the works and that his department's estimate based on July 1 surveys is "slightly higher than some trade sources had thought" it would be.

Actor Gets Role In Miller Drama

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Benjamin, who recently starred in the space-age comedy "Quark," will star as a playwright who must come to grips with success in "Fame," which Arthur Miller wrote for the Hallmark Hall of Fame.

Benjamin, who starred in "Goodbye Columbus," "Diary of a Mad Housewife," "Westworld," "The Sunshine Boys" and "House Calls," now is filming "Love at First Bite."

Miller's one-hour drama goes into production at the Burbank Studios on Aug. 7.

Lubbock Police Continue Probe Of Burglaries

Dave N. Sparkman told police that whoever pried open a window at his 1903 26th St. home made off with about $4,500 worth of jewelry.

About $830 worth of goods were taken from Michael M. Jones residence at 223 Ave. U. Jones said the burglars broke a window to gain entry to the house, which they ransacked before taking a stereo amplifier, clothing and tools.

Tony Kauris, owner of a restaurant at 117 University Ave., said burglars broke a window at his business early Wednesday and took about $400 cash from the cash register and a bank bag.

Autry M. Jones told police that a $100 shotgun was taken from his vehicle early Wednesday while the car was parked at an E. Broadway and Ute Avenue business where he is a night watchman.

Raymond C. Page, manager of a sports equipment shop at 1609 University Ave., said whoever broke a window at that business caused about $300 damage.

Louis Berryhill said one of his tank trucks, parked at his 1403 N. Indiana Ave. business, suffered $100 damage when someone shot the cab of the vehicle, late Tuesday.

H.M. Bourgeois told police it would cost about $300 to replace two panels of a sliding glass door, which were broken out of an apartment under construction at 3108 Vicksburg Ave.

Property valued at an estimated $6,005 was taken from Robert L. Gamble's 3106 26th St. home early Tuesday. Two television sets, jewelry, several firearms and a microwave oven were included in the list of items taken after someone reportedly kicked down Gamble's back gate and entered through a window on the west side of the house.

Donald Lindsay Telford said someone broke into his home at 2104-D 15th St. early Tuesday, taking property valued at approximately $1,000. The missing items included a television set, guitar and stereo system. Reports indicate the burglar pried the front door.

Mrs. Richard Klocko of 4405 10th St. said someone kicked in the rear door of her residence early Tuesday, taking items from her dining room cabinet. An antique silver service, flatware and silver trays were some of the items of unknown value taken from her home.

Tools and mechanical equipment, much of which was engraved wh the victim's drivers license number, were taken from Mike L. Louden's 5422 13th St. residence sometime between Jun 27 and June 28. Reports indicate the burg entered Louden's garage through an overhead door which had been left unlocked.

Bob Ray Lusk of Route 3, Post, said his .25-caliber automatic pistol was taken from underneath the front seat of his car Tuesday. The $125 gun was taken while Lusk was having his car serviced at a downtown Lubbock firm.

Larasa Urtado said someone entered a window on the west side of his 123 Ave. M home late Tuesday, taking two TV sets, jewelry, firearms and assorted household goods. Reports indicate the house had been ransacked.

Two plate glass windows valued at approximately $1,200 were broken sometime in the last week at the Fashion Barn at 2316 34th St., according to police reports.

Yvonne Thomas of 6402 Albany Ave. reported approximately $343 worth of building materials were stolen from her house under construction at 8105 Utica Ave. Police reports indicate the theft may have occurred any time between June 27 and July 2.

NEW IBM BUILDING IN MANHATTAN — The International Business Machines Corporation announced Tuesday that it will build a 43-story, five-sided office building in midtown Manhattan, with construction to begin this summer and to be completed in 1981. The buildingwill be located at Madison Avenue and 57th Street, is designed by Edward Larrabee Barnes, and will consolidate eight of IBM's 12 city offices. (AP Laserphoto)

LULAC Director To Address Protest In Plainview After All

The director of a statewide Hispanic organization will speak at a demonstration to be held Saturday in protest of recent court action in a Mexican-American man's death.

Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin-American Citizens, told The Avalanche-Journal he will address the rally in Plainview, despite earlier reports that his invitation had been withdrawn.

Brown Beret leader Gilbert Herrera announced Wednesday morning that Bonilla's invitation to speak was rescinded because of a decision by the local LULAC ghup not to endorse the planned demonstration formally.

The loal executive board voted unanimously Tuesday not to officially join in the protet march from Hale Center to Plainview However, the board urged individual members to support the protest.

Herrera said a "misunderstanding" prompted hi earlier criticism of Bonilla and LULAC After talking with Bonilla, Herrera said he learned that the state director supports the Brown Berets and the demonstration.

Bonilla, who will be representing LULAC at the rally in his official capacity, said his speaking invitation never was withdrawn formally. The incident was an "unfortunate misunderstanding," he added.

The Corpus Chrsti attorney said, "We have to make it very clear that the Hispanic community isvery united on the issue of maladministration treatment of justice" in Texas.

Mexican-Americans "have to not be fragmented" on the issue, he added.

Bonilla said his address Saturday probably will "provide an overview of inaction taken by state authority in various" Mexican-American deaths in West Texas recently.

The demonstration Saturday, which is expected to draw several hundred people, is a protest of a Hale County grand jury's decision Friday not to indict a deputy for the shooting death of Timothy Rosales Jr., 25, of Hale Center.

Rosales waskilled instantly June 25 after being struck in the head by a bullet from sheriff's deputy Charles Cypert's gun. The bullet reportedly was discharged during a struggle between Cypert and Rosales after the deputy stopped the Mexican-American on a DWI complaint. The shooting occurred about four miles north of Mayfield.

Plainview Police Chief Alan Stewart told the AJ he believes the protest march will be a peaceful one. The march's leaders have been "very cooperative" in planning for the demonstration, he said, adding, "I think the whole thing will come off very peaceful."

He acknowledged that rumors have circulated about white people banding to harass the marchers. But, he said, his department has traced the rumors and found them to be "unsubstantiated."

Stewart added that his officers will protect both marchers and non-demonstrators from violence.

Nine-Year Term Given In Aggravated Robbery

A 20-year-old Lubbock man Wednesday was assessed a nine-year prison term after pleading guilty to aggravated robbery.

The term was meted out to Jimmy Lee Ephiarm, of 1909 E. Cornell St.

The defendant was among four persons to plead guilty to felony offenses Wednesday in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court.

Ephiarm admitted participating in the Sept. 17, 1977, robbery of the Serv-U Food Market at 704 E. Broadway.

Stipulated testimony introduced by Asst. Dist. Atty. Cindy Miller indicated that three persons, two men and a woman, took part in the heist.

Clerk Susie Nell Gregorcyk indicated in stipulated testimony that the robbery took place after a young woman approached her, ostensibly to buy 32 cents worth of candy.

According to Mrs. Gregoreyk, a man then grabbed her from behind after she opened the cash register.

Mrs. Gregorcyk's testimony indicated that the man beat her head on the counter. A third person, also a man, stood near a meat counter, according to the testimony.

Employee Bob Ross, during testimony in the earlier jury trial of co-defendant Ned Taylor, Jr., had said a man at the meat counter covered him with a gun.

Ephiarm said in a statement introduced into evidence at Wednesday's proceeding that he had acted as a lookout during the robbery.

Taylor, 27, of 2629 E. Cornell St., was identified by Mrs. Gregorcyk during the prior trial as the man who beat her head on the counter. He was assessed a 30-year prison term by jurors.

In another case Wednesday, Kenneth Neil Watson, 18, of 3216 E. 7th St., was handed a two-year prison stint after pleading guilty to theft.

Clarence Ellis Breedlove, 29, of Fort Worth, was assessed a six-year probated penitentiary term after pleading guilty to theft.

Raymond Ayala Lopez, 22, of 3432 Erskine St., received a five-year probation after pleading guilty to a forgery charge.

Little Britches Rodeo Correction

ABERNATHY (Special) — The Abernathy Riding Club will open the chutes for their Little Britches Rodeo Friday and Saturday at their arena.

Grand entry is set for 6:30 p.m. for each performance. However, the admission gate will open at 5 p.m. each day. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

The days of the rodeo were incorrectly listed in Wednesday morning's Avalanche-Journal.

Joan Little Enters Plea Of Guilty

RALEIGH, N.. (AP) — Joan Little, saying she wanted to "get this over with," changed her plea to guilty Wednesday while a jury was being selected for her trial on a prison-escape charge.

Wake County Superior Court Judge James H. Bailey said he would give Miss Little a sentence ranging from six months to two years in prison. That sentence would be added to the end of her current seven-to-10-year term for breaking and entering.

The sudden change of the plea came after five jurors had been seated.

DIVORCE NOT NECESSARY

NEW YORK (AP) — Marie Nini was admitted to Bird S. Coler Hospital on Wednesday, marking the start of needed medical care and the end of fear that she and her husband would have to divorce to get financial assistance from the government.

Aspirin Called Helpful In Averting Male Stroke

BOSTON (AP) — Moderate daily doses of aspirin greatly reduce the risk of stroke in men who are in danger of having the crippling, often fatal attacks, Canadian researchers say.

The doctors found that when these men took the popular pain killer, the rate of stroke and death was 48 percent lower than usual. However, for reasons they could not explain, aspirin does not prevent strokes in women.

Fighting stroke is only the latest of several newly discovered uses for aspirin, which has long defied scientists' ability to explain just why it eases minor aches and pains, reduces fever and calms inflammation of the joints.

Last fall, Boston doctors reported that aspirin prevents blood clots in patients who undergo hip operations. Another study suggested that aspirin may protect men from heart attacks, and now the National Heart and Lung Institute is conducting a major project to find out whether this is true.

A report on the stroke research, conducted by the Canadian Cooperative Study Group, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The patients who participated in the seven-year study took an aspirin tablet four times a day. However, Dr. Henry J.M. Barnett of the University of Western Ontario, who directed the study, said a smaller dosage probably will prove to be just as effective.

Most people can take aspirin safely, but it can cause irritation and bleeding in people with stomach problems, especially ulcers. Some people are also allergic to aspirin and suffer from hives or asthma if they take it.

A stroke is a blood clot in an artery that leads to the brain. After heart disease and cancer, it is the third leading cause of death in the United States, killing one of every five persons. Half of all strokes are fatal, and many of those who survive are handicapped by paralysis or slurred speech.

The doctors said aspirin interferes with blood cells called platelets, which force blood to clot when a person is cut.

The researchers recommended that aspirin be prescribed routinely for men who have the warnings sign of stroke.

In their research, the doctors studied 585 men and women who had suffered ischemic attacks, minor blood clots that either dissolve or block a small artery. These attacks often precede major strokes.

In the study, 200 men took aspirin alone or in combination with a drug called sulfinpyrazone, while 206 took sulfinpyrazone alone or a placebo, a pill with no medicinal value. After seven years, 29 of the men who took aspirin had died or had strokes, while 46 of those who took the alternate pills had been stricken.

Among women, 90 received aspirin and 89 the alternatives. Of these, 17 who took aspirin were stricken, along with 12 who got the other pills.

The aspirin treatment worked best for men who had no previous history of heart attack. When they took aspirin, the incidence of stroke or death fell 62 percent.

In an interview, Barnett said the researchers were amazed that aspirin was so effective.

"We were quite surprised when the results came out in favor of aspirin and not in favor of sulfinpyrazone," he said. "The majority of the people who took part in the study felt that it would be the other way around."

Sulfinpyrazone, a drug used to treat gout, was of no help in preventing stroke, he said.

Aspirin, which according to the Food and Drug Administration is the most commonly used medicine in the United States, was discovered as a natural by-product of coal tar in 1853 by Charles Gerhardt.

Senate Quickly Passes Assortment Of Treaties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not all treaties attract the controversy of a Panama Canal pact, SALT or detente. The Senate, without a word of debate or a dissenting vote Wednesday, approved ratification of five treaties, including one with the Soviet Union.

All five were approved on a single roll call vote of 95 to 0.

The treaties would:

—Provide for the transfer of U.S. citizens serving criminal sentences in Bolivian prisons to U.S. institutions for completion of their terms. Bolivians serving sentences in this country also would be transferred to prisons in their homeland.

—Provide for cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union in the identification and protection of 208 species of birds which migrate between the two countries.

—Authorize the signatories to an international convention to take necessary steps on the high seas in cases of maritime disasters to protect coastlines from pollution by substances other than oil. These substances include toxic chemicals, such as acetone, chromic acid, nitric acid and methyl chloride, and radioactive material. The language covering substances other than oil is included in a protocol to an agreement dealing with oil pollution.

—Grant reciprocal fishing rights to ships from the United States and the British Virgin Islands. Fishery conservation zones extending 200 miles from shore recently were established by the United States and also around the British islands in the Caribbean. U.S. fishermen from Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands traditionally have fished in the waters around the British Virgin Islands, particularly sport fishing.

—Incorporate into a single document technical amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea which sets safety standards and regulations for ocean navigation and shipping.

The treaty with the Soviet Union allows indigenous inhabitants of Alaska to continue taking migratory birds for "nutritional and other essential needs."

The exemption applies to any Indian, Eskimo or Aleut, an Alaskan native.

Lumber Fire Laid To Arsonist

A Lubbock lumber company Wednesday became the latest victim in what fire officials believe to be a series of deliberately set fires.

Maxey Lumber Company, 124 N. University Ave., lost more than $14,800 worth of lumber in the 3:14 p.m. blaze, which started in the alley behind the business.

Although the origin of Wednesday's blaze is the same as for four fires in late June and earlier this month in the downtown area, firemen said they do not believe the latest incident is related to blazes touched off along a portion of 19th Street.

A resident of a trailer park across the alley from the lumber yard told fire fighters he saw two youths ignite grass in the alley. Investigators are still seeking an older man in connection with the 19th Street fires.

The suspect's name was provided by a witness to the June 22 blaze set in a shed behind Lubbock Floor Covering Co., 2144 19th St.

Two engines and a booster unit controlled the Maxey Lumber Co. fire in about 15 minutes, but remained on the scene almost an hour to make sure flames did not rekindle in the almost 20-feet high stack of lumber, unloaded only Tuesday night.

Towering flames were threatening power lines in the alley before the blaze was noticed by a company employe.

The lumber company fire was one of seven the fire department fought within a 90-minute period Wednesday afternoon.

Only minutes before the lumber fire was reported, fire fighters answered a call to a dumpster fire behind the North College Station post office at 212 N. University Ave.

A postal carrier spotted the dumpster fire as he was returning from his route and post office employees doused the flames before fire department units arrived.

A small shed in a back yard across the alley from 514 N. Detroit Ave. was destroyed by flames, resulting in more than $1,000 damage to the structure.

Firemen also were called to extinguish a fence fire at 2721 E. 9th St., a grass fire at 2504 Colgate Ave., a grass and dumpster fire at 2506 Colgate Ave., and were summoned to check out possible burning electrical wires at 2202 Ave. Q.

Jurist Rejects Newspaper's Plea On 'X' Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall rejected the New York Times' attempt Wednesday to avoid giving a New Jersey court all information it collected in the "Dr X" curare murder case.

Conceding that the Times' emergency request raised "important and unresolved questions" about a reporter's confidential files, Marshall nevertheless ruled the Times not entitled to any immediate help.

The Times and one of its reporters, Myron A. Farber, now must surrender to Bergen County Judge William Arnold notes, tape recordings and documents in the "Dr. X" case by Friday or face contempt of court charges.

The information was gathered by Farber while preparing stories in 1975 on the deaths of five patients at Riverdale Hospital in Oradell, N.J., in 1965 and 1966.

No charges had been filed in the case until Farber's articles appeared. Then Dr. Mario Jascalevich was indicted on five counts of murder.

Jascalevich was identified only as "Dr. X" in initial news stories. In a trial now under way in Arnold's court, Jascalevich is accused of committing murder by using curare, a potent muscle-relaxing drug.

Arnold ordered the newspaper and Farber to surrender all materials in the case, saying he would review the information confidentially and then decide whether to give it to Jascalevich's lawyer for use in the trial.

The Times resisted the subpoena order, but its state court appeals failed.

The newspaper asked Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan on Monday to postpone the effect of Arnold's order, but Brennan, a former member of the New Jersey Supreme Court, disqualified himself from the case. He did not explain why.

Justice Byron R. White turned down the Times on Tuesday, and the newspaper's lawyers then turned to Marshall.

In a brief order Wednesday, Marshall said, "There are, of course important and unresolved questions regarding the obligation of a newsperson to divulge confidential files and other materials sought by the prosecution or defense in connection with criminal proceedings.

"It may well be, moreover, that forced disclosure even to a judge for (private) inspection will have a deleterious effect on the ability of the news media effectively to gather information in the public interest," he said.

But because the Times' request was made during an ongoing criminal trial, Marshall said, "applicants are plainly not entitled to a stay at this time."

The Times and Farber, he said, could refuse to hand over the ordered material and raise their same constitutional arguments in subsequent contempt proceedings.

Since a series of 1972 Supreme Court decisions, reporters have no absolute protection from having to surrender their notes, the names of sources or other material to criminal investigations.

Lawyers for the Times and Farber said Arnold should have first determined that the material sought actually was needed for trial use. They argued that Arnold could make such an initial determination without seeing the material.

Lubbock Murder Case Ends In Mistrial

The Eiseo Montalvo Padilla murder trial ended with a hung jury here Wednesday, after a 99th District Court panel deliberated approximately three hours and 45 minutes without being able to reav a guilt or innocence verdict.

Dist. Judge Thomas L. Clinton granted the mistrial upon the motion of defense attorney Bill Wischkaemper.

Padilla, 64, of 913 40th St., had been accused of murder in connection with the Feb. 5 shooting death of Estella Trevino Ynguanzo, 37, of 504 Hub Homes.

Mrs. Ynguanso reportedly was shot at a club at 355 Ave. H about 10:40 p.m.

Plants At Amarillo, Elsewhere Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four major plants that manufacture and assemble nuclear weapons are using outmoded equipment "that industry would discard," according to a report by investigators for the House Armed Services Committee.

The report said the administration's indecisiveness about whether to build neutron weapons contributed to the deterioration of equipment and conditions at the four plants.

They were listed as nuclear weapons plants at Savannah River, S.C.; Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Kansas City, Mo.; and Amarillo.

The report is an internal memorandum written last December by committee staff members Adam J. Klein and Seymour Shwiller which was made public this week.

Shwiller said Wednesday in an interview that conditions at the weapons-assembly plants are about the same today as when the investigation was made and the conclusions of the December 1977 report are still valid.

The report said the four plants were among five nuclear weapons plants visited by the two committee investigators. The fifth was in Pinellas Plant, Fla. The plants are either operated by or under contract with the Department of Energy.

"Except for the neutron devices department plant in Pinellas, Fla. all DOE manufacturing plants visited are significantly handicapped by the need to use equipment and machine tools that industry would discard," the report said.

It said the situation at the Savannah River plant "could be called galloping obsolescence."

And it said that the nation's future supply of plutonium — a key element in atomic weapons — is being jeopardized because of the lack of modernization at these plants.

"Overall activity in nuclear and non-nuclear parts production is at a low point because of the administration's lack of direction and-or decision on enhanced radiation weapons production," the report said. Enhanced radiation weapons — or neutron warheads — are controversial devices designed to kill through massive doses of radiation instead of by blast power as with conventional nuclear explosives.

Carter has deferred production of neutron weapons in hopes of winning arms concessions from the Soviet Union. But some congressmen, including Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, are urging Carter to go ahead with production of the weapon.

The Energy Department, in a written response to the committee's allegations, acknowledged that much of the equipment at the nuclear plants is old and in need of replacement.

"Studies on the replacement of aging and obsolete equipment and utilities are underway at the special nuclear production facilities," the department said.

Citizens Taunt Board To End Police Strike

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Battle lines hardened Wednesday between striking police and civic leaders in this normally peaceful coastal community, after hundreds of citizens packed a meeting of aldermen chanting, "We want our police."

All 32 patrolmen in this city of 18,000 persons went on strike 11 days ago, demanding a 10 percent pay hike instead of the 6 percent offered by the governing Board of Aldermen, which would have made starting pay $8,022.

Police Chief John Worsham was fired by the board last Friday for supporting his men and that prompted the entire force to vow they would return to work only if Worsham were reinstated.

At Tuesday night's board meeting, several hundred residents turned out to support the policemen and the meeting was interrupted with shouts of, "We want Worsham, we want our police." Former police captain M.E. Windham said the people filled the room, the halls and the stairway of city hall.

"We want our police back. We want our chief back. We don't want strangers in here," Katherine Daniels, an organizer of a group which picketed city hall for several days in support of the police, said Wednesday.

"If we get a new group of police in here, the whole town will suffer for quite a long time," she said. "Even if they're local guys, they just don't know" the ins and outs of police work in the town.

During the strike, police protection has been provided by North Carolina highway patrolmen and Craven County sheriff's deputies. No upsurge in the community's low crime rate has been reported.

Police department spokesman Capt. P.O. Rodgers said Wednesday that as far as the department is concerned the matter is closed.

Military Construction Bill Gets Senate Okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a $3.9 billion military construction bill Wednesday after refusing to authorize any of the combat construction projects sought by the Carter administration for Europe.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said much of the $375 million in combat-related construction requested for NATO is an "alliance responsibility that should not be unilaterally funded by the United States."

The bill, funding construction at military bases in the United States and overseas, also attempts to push the military toward accelerated use of solar energy systems.

It would require that solar systems be incorporated in all new family housing units and in 25 percent of all other facilities placed under design after the legislation is enacted.

The House recently approved a $4.1 billion military construction bill authorizing most of the NATO projects. It does not contain any quota for solar projects. Differences between the two bills will have to be worked out by Senate and House negotiators.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., floor manager of the bill, said the Pentagon is "the ideal federal test-bed" for new energy-saving technology. He said, however, there is "strong, bureaucratic resistance with the Defense Department" to devote money and manpower to energy problems.

The Armed Services Committee estimated that use of solar systems could boost construction costs by 10 percent to 20 percent. The bill allows the Pentagon to exceed the congressional authorization for any project using solar systems.

Gen. Alexander Haig, commander of NATO forces, told a House hearing recently he is "greatly disturbed" by elimination of the NATO projects.

"It will place in jeopardy all the enhancement programs that we have worked so diligently to put in place and especially the progress made this past year in developing a consensus to enhance our readiness," said Haig. He also is commander in chief of U.S. forces in Europe.

The administration requested authorization for $647 million in construction projects in Europe. As rewritten by the Armed Services Committee and approved by the Senate, the bill only authorizes funding for European construction projects used for support of U.S. forces and dependents — such as housing, schools, hospitals and maintenance and administrative facilities.

Hart said the committee, in making the reductions, "takes issue not so much with the requirement for these facilities but with the question of who should pay for these facilities."

Instead of the United States paying for the programs unilaterally, he said, they should be funded by the NATO Infrastructure program through which the allies share the cost of facilities needed for the joint defense of Europe.

Study Intended To Streamline Structure Of Military Command

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon unwrapped on Wednesday a major study of the national military command structure that Defense Secretary Harold Brown said would "increase the stature and influence" of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

At the same time, it made public a second study, also ordered by President Carter, designed to streamline the policy-making machinery of the Defense Department, which its author said "is well managed."

The command structure study, a six-month effort by former Defense official Richard Steadman, found "the system has been generally adequate to meet our national security needs in peacetime, crisis, and wartime."

But Steadman, now a New York investment banker, said there are "some fundamental shortcomings which may make it incapable of dealing adequately with our future needs."

Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would be the principal gainer in power and authority under the changes proposed by the command study. Steadman denied, however, that his proposals moved closer to the single-chief-of-staff concept which Congress has rejected for more than 30 years.

Under the Steadman proposals, which Brown promised to study, the chairman of the joint chiefs would acquire key formal new power as the principal military adviser to the defense secretary on vital budget issues and on allocation among the armed services of increasingly tight resources.

He also would become the single military superior for U.S. field commanders around the world.

For the first time, the chairman would serve as an arbiter on budget issues among the military services and decide which competing projects to recommend for approval by the defense secretary.

He also would be made a full voting member of what now is an essentially civilian council of high ranking Pentagon officials who decide on weapons developments and production.

"The chairman already acts as an adviser to the secretary of defense on budget and constrained force structure issues, but he now does so on an informal and personal basis," the Steadman report said.

"He does not have adequate staff support on these issues, nor does he have a regular and formal input into the system."

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are made up of a chairman, who is a four-star general or admiral, plus the top military officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, when issues of importance to the Marines are under study.

In denying that the strengthened JCS chairman would become a sort of single chief of staff, Steadman said, "the chairman would have no authority...he would be acting as adviser to the secretary of defense and all decisions would reside with the secretary of defense."

Unborn Infant Hazard From X-Rays Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials conceded Wednesday that exposure of pregnant women to x-rays still is too high, despite general knowledge among doctors that radiation may be harmful to unborn babies.

KENNEDY

Donald Kennedy, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, also told a House health subcommittee hearing that giving x-rays to patients during routine dental checkups "is a bad idea."

Earlier, Dr. Leon A. Phillips, associate professor of radiology at the University of Washington Medical School in Seattle, testified that about 70 children a year can be expected to develop cancer because their mothers were x-rayed during pregnancy.

He said doctors once widely used the procedure called x-ray pelvimetry to determine if pregnant women might have difficulty in delivering their babies.

Dr. John Villforth, director of the FDA's Bureau of Radiological Health, estimated that about 805,000 women who gave birth to live babies in 1970 had been exposed to x-ray. Of that figure, about 200,000 had x-ray pelvimetries, he said.

Villfoth said that although the medical profession is cutting down on the number of pregnant women exposed to x-ray, "it is still is too high."

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., the subcommittee's chairman, said, "It can be reduced to almost zero."

A technique called ultra-sound is being used increasingly by doctors and hospitals in place of x-rays.

Kennedy said the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare are trying to educate both consumers and the medical profession to the dangers of x-ray exposure during pregnancy.

Anti-Bug Sentiment Has Some Agencies In Bind

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The Social Security Administration is afraid that a "post-Watergate" fetish against electronic eavesdropping will prevent it from checking up on how its clerks respond to calls from the public.

The agency, which fields 63,000 calls a day from citizens asking about their retirement, disability or health benefits, wants to resume a practice stopped in 1974 of having supervisors monitor calls.

But it is running afoul of a proposal by the General Services Administration, the government's housekeeping agency, to bar all civilian federal agencies from surreptitious monitoring of any telephone calls.

"I'm feeling a bit whipsawed," Don I. Wortman, the acting Social Security commissioner, said in an interview. He said the dispute reflected "the general tension in the '70s between privacy and service."

"In this post-Watergate period, we're super conscious of Big Brother," said Wortman. He said he simply wants to check his workers' "promptness, courtesy and accuracy."

The GSA was prodded by two privacy-minded congressmen, Reps. John E. Moss, D-Calif., and Dale E. Kildee, D-Mich., to move to ban surreptitious monitoring.

A ban would affect the Internal Revenue Service, where supervisors currently are listening in to make sure clerks give out the right tax information over the phone and it also would affect the GSA itself. The agency, which oversees 1 million government phones, has supervisors who check up on the government's phone operators.

Frank Carr, the GSA's telecommunications and computer chief, said his agency has not yet decided whether to allow exceptions to a ban.

He noted that both President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance moved to prohibit telephone monitoring in the White House and State Department after they took office.

Vance's predecessor, Henry A. Kissinger, used to have secretaries listen in and take notes on his conversations. Upon leaving office, Kissinger became involved in a legal imbroglio over whether those notes belonged to him or the government. He lost.

Wortman said that telephone companies, utilities, airlines and other private companies that field phone calls from the public all rely on supervisors to spot check the calls.

To assuage the privacy concerns, Wortman has suggested playing a taped message advising citizens that a supervisor may listen in; if the caller then objected, the supervisor would get off the line.

The GSA has not set any date for the ban to go into effect. Carr said his agency wanted to give the other federal departments time to come in and "give us their side of the story."

"We are going to try to see whether a reasonable accommodation of the privacy interest can be achieved without sacrificing the economy and efficiency those (listening) devices offer," he said.

Plaintiff Switches In City Lawsuit

The Rev. Roy Jones, president of the Lubbock chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will replace Gene Gaines as plaintiff in a lawsuit challenging Lubbock's at-large council election system.

The substitution will not affect the case, which probably will be set for trial in the fall by U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward, attorney Lane Arthur said.

Gaines, former NAACP president, is moving his law practice to Dallas.

A news briefing on the case's status will be held at noon Wednesday in Suite 1506 of the Metro Tower, 1220 Broadway, Arthur said. He and the other five attorneys for the plaintiff will be present to answer questions.

Gaines filed a class action suit against the city in 1976, seeking to have the election system declared unconstitutional. A court hearing in the case was postponed several times, pending the outcome of a U.S. Supreme Court decision about a similar suit involving the City of Dallas.

The court last month decided to not invalidate as unconstitutional Dallas's election system, a combination of at-large and ward styles.

Accused Duo Seen In Crossfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys predict that if two former top FBI officials stand trial at the same time for civil rights violations they "will slice each other to ribbons."

Attorneys for former acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray and for Edward S. Miller, once head of the domestic intelligence division, Wednesday asked a federal judge for separate trials for their clients because each will end up accusing the other.

"How could we be more in a collision crossfire?" asked Allan Baron, a lawyer for Gray.

"Miller claims that Gray authorized so-called black bag jobs and Gray has categoricly denied it ...they are in direct head-to-head antagonism on the single most important issue in this case."

Gray, Miller and the former No. 2 man in the FBI, W. Mark Felt, are charged with authorizing illegal break-ins by FBI agents searching for fugitives in the radical Weather Underground in the early 1970s.

"I'm sure the government will love to have Miller and Gray slice each other to ribbons but that is precisely what is going to happen," Baron told U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant in a hearing on pretrial motions.

Miller's lawyer, Tom Kennelly, also argued for a separate trial for his client, saying that it would be "logically inconsistent" for a jury to accept the versions both defendants will offer.

"If it accepts Gray's defense that he didn't authorize them (the break-ins) the jury must find Miller guilty. There is no way in that situation that a jury can acquit Gray and acquit Miller."

The lawyer said that Miller agrees with the government evidence and "that's why Miller has to be tried separately."

Felt's lawyer, Bryan Gettings, said there was no conflict between Felt and Gray. Gray was the only one of the three men indicted who was not in the courtroom Wednesday.

If convicted, each man could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000.

At the time of their indictment on April 10, Felt told The Associated Press that he and the other two men rejected a Justice Department proposal that they plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge.

George Liebmann, another of Gray's lawyers, also argued that statements about the case by Attorney General Griffin B. Bell prejudiced his client's right to a fair trial.

He quoted Bell as telling the FBI field office in Indianapolis in late April that "the prosecution must go forward but we wish they would not have much done to them in the end."

And Liebmann also cited Bell's saying at a news conference announcing the indictments that responsibility for the FBI's actions in the Weather Underground case belonged at the top.

FBI Short On Women, Minorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women and minorities comprise less than 4 percent of the nation's FBI agents, according to a new General Accounting Office study released Wednesday.

Despite what it called relatively successful attempts by the government to reach out to women and minorities, the number chosen as FBI agents remains small, the GAO told Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif.

As of March 31, the FBI's special agent ranks included 1.2 percent women and 4.5 percent minorities, said the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress.

In a letter to the GAO, John J. McDermott, assistant to FBI Director William H. Webster, agreed there were far too few women and minority special agents.

"The need for drastic improvement in the representation of women and minorities within the special agent position is well recognized by FBI management and highly concerted efforts are currently being undertaken to insure measurable gains will be achieved in this area in as short as time as possible," he said.

The GAO report said more progress has been made by the Federal Prison System and the Law Enforcement Assistance Admistration. The prison system increased its women employees by 18 percent and its minorities by 22 percent, and LEAA now has 5 percent more women and 47 percent more minorities.

In contrast, the number of minorities in U.S. attorneys offices decreased 6 percent to a total of 8 percent between late 1976 and March 31, 1978, while the overall work force in those offices increased 11 percent, the study said.

"They've got a long way to go," said Edwards, chairman of the House Judiciary's subcommittee on constitutional and civil rights.

At a hearing on the matter, Edwards noted that momentum must be maintained to create equitable programs to bring women and minorities into the mainstream, including the federal work force.

The GAO recommended that the Justice Department monitor recruiting and selection procedures more closely, develop methods for insuring equal opportunity in promotions, and modify its system for registering complaints.

The department had told the GAO that it didn't tally promotions by race or sex so it was impossible to see if any pattern of discrimination existed, said GAO spokesman Hyman L. Krieger. He said these relatively simple compilations should be made.

Texas High Court Rejects Anti-Nazi Bounty Suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court rejected a lawsuit Wednesday to stop Houston Nazis from offering a $5,000 bounty over the phone on non-whites who attack whites but encouraged public officials to determine whether such messages are legal.

If they are illegal, the Supreme Court said, officials should "take the authorized steps to control it."

In other action, the high court:

— Upheld once again the 1961 so-called Sunday closing law that restricts store sales on Saturdays and Sundays.

— Ruled in a precedent-setting Parmer County case that buyers cannot collect from sellers when items purchased "as is" are damaged as a result of internal defects.

In the Nazi case, the Supreme Court affirmed a Houston Court of Civil Appeals decision that Houston television reporter Marvin Zindler had no legal standing to file the suit.

The Supreme Court said, however:

". . . we concur with the statement of the court below which describes the language used in the telephone messages as 'vicious, disgusting and repugnant to all decent persons,' and which encourages the appropriate public officials to examine the conduct of the Nazi Party to ascertain whether or not such conduct is illegal, and if so, to take the authorized steps to control it."

Zindler was backed up by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in his appeal to the Supreme Court.

Houston Nazis used an automatic telephone answering device to play a recording offering callers "a $5,000 prize for every non-white carcass killed while attacking a white person."

The recordings allegedly contained a statement "encouraging mass executions of non-whites in order to make their stay in this county an unhealthy one."

Zindler said he was of Jewish descent, making him "non-white" by the Nazis' definition. He contended that as a public figure he was especially endangered by the recorded messages.

A Houston district judge granted Zindler an injunction to stop the Nazis from playing the messages, but the appeals court reversed that decision.

The appeals court said Zindler had failed to "show a special injury peculiar to himself."

This, it said, has been Texas' standard for filing civil suits since 1888.

B'nai B'rith's "friend of the court" brief said the standard was too narrowly applied.

"When should a court prefer to protect Mr. Zindler's rights, after he is physically harmed or killed, or at the first instance when the bounty offer is made?" B'nai Brith's brief asked.

In the "blue law" case, Gibson Distributing Co. appealed to the Supreme Court after an El Paso judge upheld the constitutionality of the law.

The Supreme Court noted that it has upheld the law on previous occasions.

Gibson's only new argument in the El Paso case, said Chief Justice Joe Greenhill, was that the state's right to regulate Saturday-Sunday sales has been preempted by the federal antitrust Sherman Act.

"It is our view," Greenhill wrote, "that the Congress, by enacting the Sherman Act did not intend to prohibit a valid exercise of the police power of the states — as this court has held the statute in question to be."

In the Parmer County case, Curry County Spraying Service of New Mexico sued Mid Continent Aircraft Corp. of Missouri when engine failure caused a crop-dusting plane to crash. A bolt had worked loose because a locking plate was left off.

Damage was estimated at $4,600, and the firm was found to have lost another $3,690 because the plane was out of service. There were no injuries or damage to other property.

The Supreme Court said the spraying service would have to bear the loss itself, because its purchase contract specified the plane was bought "as is."

The result of the "as is" disclaimer, the Supreme Court said, "is that Curry County has taken the entire loss as to the quality of the airplane and the resulting loss."

Hill To Seek Reversal In Suits Matter

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill said Wednesday he will ask the Texas Supreme Court to reverse a decision that he cannot sue state agencies when he thinks they have acted illegally.

Comptroller Bob Bullock also indicated he will appeal a ruling that he overstepped his authority in trying to tax holding company profits on national bank stock.

Both officials lost decisions Wednesday in the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals.

The court said in two separate cases that attorneys general could not file suit to knock down actions of state agencies, which they normally are obligated to defend.

In one case, Hill contended the Edwards Aquifer — San Antonio's drinking water supply — would suffer from an order of the Texas Water Quality Board. In the other, he said the Texas Water Rights Commission erred in upholding a contract for the South Texas Nuclear Project to pay $50 million to the Lower Colorado River Authority for cooling water.

Both water agencies since have been absorbed by the new Texas Department of Water Resources.

"To uphold the attorney general's position would give rise to an intolerable situation which . . . would put him on both sides of the lawsuit," said Chief Justice John Phillips's opinion in the Edwards Aquifer suit.

Associate Justice Trueman O'Quinn wrote in the LCRA case that the Texas Constitution does not "arm the attorney general with authority to sue the state or any of its arms or agencies, even when the attorney general holds a view different from the decision or discretion exercised by an administrative agency."

The court struck down Bullock's 1974 ruling that dividends and interest on holding companies' stock in national banks must be included in computing gross receipts subject to the Texas corporate franchise tax.

Since 1974, eight bank holding companies have paid $7.8 million in such taxes under protest, according to a spokesman for Bullock.

"Every company that pays this tax has paid it under protest," said George Kuempel, the spokesman.

Bullock contended a 1973 congressional act designed to end tax favoritism toward national — as opposed to state — banks made his ruling legal.

But the appeals court said the federal law "is unrelated to taxation of dividends and interest from national bank stock in the hands of corporate stockholders."

It said Bullock's ruling violated a state law passed in anticipation of the 1973 change in the federal banking code.

The Texas law said passage of the 1973 federal act should not operate to increase state taxes on institutions affected by the congressional action.

The appeals court concluded that Bullock "acted without authority and in contravention of an explicit act of the Legislature" in issuing his ruling.

Anti-Smoking Campaign Nets Califano Award

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1978 Winston Churchill Award of the International Platform Association is going to HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano for his campaign against smoking.

The secretary will accept the award at IPA's 146th annual convention to be held in Washington July 31 to Aug. 4. The professional organization of the U.S. lecture circuit gives the award each year in recognition of the "statements made from the platform most important for the future of U.S. citizens."

Name Change Requested

DENVER (AP) — Citing the "sexist connotations" of its name, the Denver Manpower Administration has asked the City Council to change the agency's name.

Juan McAlister, director of the city agency that administers federal grants, says the change would follow a federal government policy of removing "manpower" from the title of jobs and training programs to avoid sexist overtones. The new name would be the Denver Employment and Training Administration, McAlister said. The council will consider the proposal at next Monday's session.

Administration Likes Gasohol For U.S. Autos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration told Congress Wednesday that it wants to encourage development of alcohol motor fuels but isn't sure how.

Assistant Energy Secretary Alvin L. Alm told a House subcommittee hearing that the administration is still "evaluating what role the federal government should play in the development of such fuels."

There are a number of proposals before Congress to provide incentives for production of so-called "gasohol," ranging from tax breaks to direct government subsidies for companies that manufacture it.

But Alm indicated the administration still needs more time to study the matter.

He said that using blends of alcohol and gasoline in automobile fuel tanks is technologically feasible and can play an important role in stretching U.S. energy supplies.

A gasoline blend containing 10 percent ethanol even boosts the octane rating of gasoline by about four points, making such a mixture "in the competitive range with premium, unleaded fuel."

Testifying before the advanced energy technologies subcommittee of the House Science and Technology Committee, Alm said the administration has already taken some steps to remove "institutional barriers" that hamper the marketing of gasohol.

These include a recent regulation allowing retailers of gasohol to include the higher costs of producing the alcohol mixture in their selling price — even if it means exceeding the federally set gasoline price ceiling.

Alm said the remaining major obstacle for gasohol appears to be its relative high cost in comparison to gasoline.

But Rep. David F. Emery, R-Maine, told the panel that it is possible for wood alcohol to be produced from timber in some areas for as low as 34 cents per gallon with "prudent forest management practices."

Emery has introduced a number of bills calling for government subsidies of gasohol production.

"Alcohol fuels are technologically ready for production today and can be produced from a wide variety of resources," he testified.

Two types of alcohol under consideration for use in gasoline mixtures are ethanol or ethyl alcohol and methanol or methyl alcohol. They have slightly different chemical structures.

Ethanol is ordinary "grain alcohol," the kind used in alcoholic beverages, usually made from grain or other agricultural products.

Methanol is sometimes called "wood alcohol." It is poisonous and can be made from wood products or even from coal.

Either ethanol or methanol can be used for gasohol in automobile engines.

Overcharging Could Cost $52 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Special Counsel of the Department of Energy proposed Tuesday that Ashland Oil Co. pay the U.S. Treasury $52.1 million for alleged overcharges on gasoline.

Ashland said it would appeal the order. The company said it had abided by federal pricing regulations and doesn't believe it overcharged its customers.

Paul Bloom, special counsel for compliance, said his office found that Ashland had overstated increases in product costs that refiners can pass on to their customers under federal oil pricing regulations.

Bloom said some $52.1 million was improperly treated as an increase in gasoline costs and was included in Ashland's gasoline prices, becoming an overcharge to the purchasers during a period from August 1973 through December 1976.

He said the purchasers were generally resellers and it would be difficult to find out whether they, in turn, passed on the alleged overcharges. It would also be difficult to identify individual gasoline consumers who may have been overcharged, he said.

For those reasons, Bloom said, his office proposed that Ashland refund the $52.1 million to the U.S. Treasury.

Oil Company Selling Off Stock Shares

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — Ashland Oil Inc. said Wednesday that Kaiser Resources Ltd. of Canada intends to buy the remaining common shares of Ashland Canada Ltd. not held by parent Ashland Oil at the same price — $29.82 a share — that it agreed pay for Ashland Oil's 83 percent interest.

On Tuesday, the Vancouver, British Columbia-based firm topped its previous offer of $28.97 a share set last week when the two companies reached an agreement in principle.

The companies said Kaiser would pay more for Ashland Oil's shares of Ashland Canada because of competitive bids Ashland Oil had received from other companies.

The agreement is subject to approval under the Canadian government's Foreign Investment Review Act.

Kaiser, which is 32.5 percent-owned by the Oakland, Calif.-based Kaiser Steel Corp. and 27 percent-owned by a group of Japanese companies, said the acquisition was designed to make the company "more broadly based."

U.S., Germany Ink Transportation Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German and U.S. officials drank champagne toasts Wednesday after signing a transportation agreement.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams and West German Transport Minister Kurt Gscheidle signed for their respective governments, and each hailed the pact, which extends and expands on a five-year agreement reached in 1973.

No time limit was set on the new agreement.

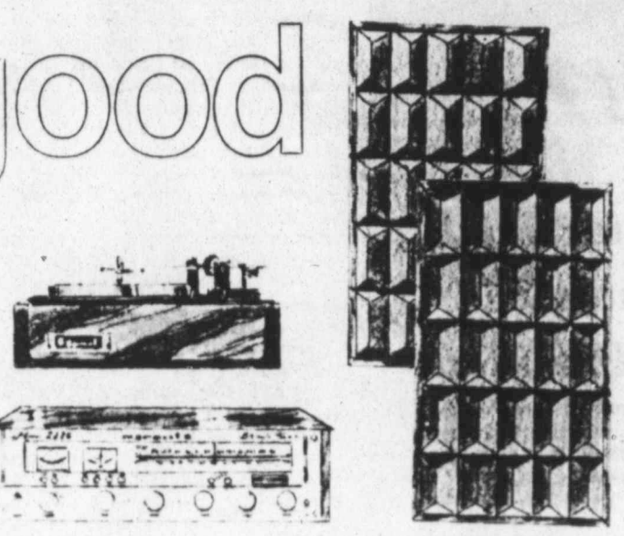

It involves joint research and development in such areas as rail technology, magnetic levitation, urban transportation systems, motor vehicles, traffic systems and highway construction.

The program includes exchange of information and personnel and annual workshop-seminars.

Adams said he and Gscheidle also discussed international maritime and aviation policy.

Carter Cites Cuts In Imports Of Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said for the first time Wednesday that imports of manufactured goods and not imports of oil have worsened the nation's trade deficit and eroded the dollar.

In fact, Carter said, oil imports have decreased.

The statement, made in interviews with foreign correspondents, marked a significant shift in U.S. strategy on the eve of Carter's departure today for an economic summit conference in Germany.

Carter criticized both Japan and Germany for exporting large quantities of goods to the United States without accepting U.S. exports. "The underlying economic problem is the very high adverse trade balance," he said.

Administration officials had said previously Carter probably would be criticized at the summit for not having won enactment by Congress of his legislation to reduce U.S. imports of oil. Other nations see oil imports as the chief cause of the world trade imbalance and the decline of the dollar.

Until recently, Carter took the same view. So did Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who said in a major speech on June 30 that the Senate took "gravely irresponsible action" in voting to prevent Carter from enacting fees on imported oil to discourage imports.

Carter himself said at a news conference on Jan. 12 that "it's clear that our heavy dependence on imported oil is a main part of our trade problem and that our failure to adopt a comprehensive energy program has badly weakened confidence in our ability to deal with that problem."

Speech Cited

In a speech on April 11, he said: "We simply must have meaningful energy legislation without further delay. Our security depends on it, and our economy demands it. He said then that if Congress didn't act soon, he would take administrative action to reduce oil imports.

But in the new late-hour shift in strategy, Carter said the United States "already has been successful" in reducing oil imports, citing recent Commerce Department statistics showing imports down by one million barrels a day in the first five months of this year.

And he praised Congress for its handling of his energy legislation, saying, "I think the Congress has made great progress already .... I have been pleased with what the Congress has done so far."

Oil Imports Decline

Oil imports have declined, but the decline has been credited largely to production of oil in Alaska, which is considered by most experts to be only a temporary solution. U.S. oil imports have averaged 7.8 million barrels a day in recent weeks, at an average daily cost of $105 million.

Both Carter and Blumenthal had recently complained the United States was the only major nation without a comprehensive energy program. But in his latest comments, Carter did not repeat that complaint. His energy program has languished in Congress for 15 months.

The shift in strategy apparently has the two-fold purpose of heading off expected criticism from the leaders of the other nations at the summit and of putting new pressure on Japan and Germany to stimulate their economies to increase imports of U.S. goods.

Trade Surpluses

Japan and Germany both have trade surpluses, and the Japanese trade surplus with the United States will approach a record $10 billion this year if present trends continue.

"Most of our trade balance now comes from the purchase of manufactured goods, not oil," Carter said. "Of course, the nations like Japan and Germany who sell a lot of manufactured goods to us like to talk about our oil imports, but they don't deplore the fact that we also buy large quantities of manufactured goods from Japan and others."

Carter's comments were made in an interview with foreign reporters Tuesday and were made public Wednesday.

Carter also said he thinks a new recession can be avoided, especially if the nations at the summit work together to understand "both common problems and individual national problems...."

The economic summit, the fourth in as many years, will be held on Sunday and Monday in Bonn, the German capital. It will be preceded Friday and Saturday by Carter's two-day, official state visit to Germany. Other countries represented at the summit meeting are France, Japan, Great Britain, Italy and Canada.

Carter will return to Washington on Monday. It will be Carter's first visit to Germany since being elected president.

After welcoming ceremonies in Bonn on Friday, Carter will hold lengthy discussions with German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. U.S. officials say the talks will include East-West relations and the SALT disarmament negotiations, the Middle East; Africa, NATO and economic relations between the two countries.

At the last economic summit conference in London last year, Carter had promised to adopt such a program, but he has failed to win the support of Congress, which will be a matter of considerable embarrassment for him at the Bonn summit.

Carter had hoped to be able to tell the other summit leaders he would impose fees on oil imports to discourage U.S. consumption, but the Senate has voted to prevent him from even doing that — another embarrassment.

Congress also has failed to enact the administration's tax cut program and has not yet approved Carter's commitments for aid to poor nations.

Blumenthal, who will attend the summit with Carter, has said concern over congressional roadblocks to presidential action is so great that this problem will be raised at the summit by Carter so the other leaders will know what he is up against.

There are few expectations that the summit can produce any major breakthroughs to ease problems that have plagued the global economy since 1974. However, U.S. officials are hopeful it will produce a package deal for Germany and Japan to do more to stimulate their economies, if Carter can persuade the others the United States will enact the energy program.

Administration Rips GOP Tax Cut Plan

pitch for Carter's own one-year, $15 billion tax-cut plan and to assail the Roth-Kemp bill as "sheer waste."

The Carter administration's tax plan is "of a magnitude appropriate to the needs and capacity of the economy," Blumenthal said. "As in most things in life, moderation is a virtue; too much of a good thing will produce economic indigestion, not improved economic health."

On capital gains, Schultze said Republican claims that the reduction would send stock prices soaring and provide a major spur to the economy "border on sheer fantasy."

Steiger, R-Wis., seems to have the votes to cut the maximum capital gains tax from about 49 percent to 25 percent, if he can get the bill to a vote. The administration's all-out opposition to that bill has stymied congressional action on the president's tax-cut proposal.

Schultze repeated Carter's position that the Steiger plan would provide a major break only to a handful of wealthy investors and would not stimulate investment as well as the $5.5 billion corporate tax reduction backed by the administration as part of the $15 billion general tax cut.

Capital Gains Tax

And the capital gains tax is not that burdensome anyway, Schultze added. The average rate paid in 1976 was only about 16 percent, far below the maximum of 49 percent plus, he said.

A dozen Democratic members of the House joined in the assault on the Steiger bill, saying it offers "new ways for the wealthiest people in America to avoid paying taxes."

Schultze aimed most of his fire, however, on the Roth-Kemp bill that would cut income taxes by about 30 percent over the next three years.

Noting that in 1981, the bill would cost as much as $120 billion in lost tax revenue, Schultze said, "Committing the federal government now to a tax cut of such dimensions is, I submit, a sure-fire recipe for inflation."

Collections Cited

Backers of Roth-Kemp contend that such a large tax cut would so stimulate investment and productive capacity that it would actually increase federal tax collections. Schultze compared that claim to a "free lunch" and said he knows of no economic analysis that would justify it.

Traditionally, a $1 tax cut will produce a growth of about $2 in the economy, he said. But for the Roth-Kemp plan to work as its backers claim would require a $5 growth for each $1 tax cut, Schultze added.

He said the assumptions are unrealistic. The actual result of such a tax cut would be "a very overheated economy and an increase in the rate of inflation that could be enormous," Schultze said.

Roth-Kemp backers point to the experience during the Kennedy-Johnson administrations when a tax cut spurred the economy and produced more revenues than it cost.

Schultze found three pitfalls in that comparison:

— The Kennedy-Johnson tax cut was equal to only about 2 percent of the Gross National Product; Roth-Kemp eventually would be for about 4 percent of GNP.

— In the mid-1960s, inflation was running at 1½ to 2 percent; today it is more than 7 percent.

— The 1960s tax cut came at a time when industrial production was lagging far behind capacity; today's capacity is only three or four percentage points below what is considered the optimum, Schultze said.

have, such as the cost-of-living increases," said Edwards.

Edwards said post office workers are criticized because of the wage issue, but "wages are not the only thing involved. Actually, working conditions are more important to us here locally."

The unions have proposed a $1,100 raise the first year of the new contract and $865 more for the second year, plus provisions for cost-of-living increases.

Pace and Edwards are optimistic there will be a settlement with the help of a federal mediator, and there are alternatives to a strike.

"Not working overtime, a work slowdown or participating in a 'sick-in' have been suggested," said Pace. "Personally, I think refusing to work overtime is the best choice."

Pace's organization, the Hub Area Local of the APWU, has 200 members in Lubbock and another 50 in post offices spread from Abernathy on the north to Seminole on the south, Farwell in the west to Chillicothe on the east. Ninety-eight percent of the letter carriers in Lubbock are union members, according to Edwards.

Pace said reports that union members not honoring orders from the national APWU office would be removed from membership roles is not true.

"The local employees will have to make up their own minds. We will only ask that they comply with whatever the president of the national union wants us to do," Pace said.

Edwards said if the dispute finally came down to a strike, his union probably would be a little slower to respond because the rank and file has not authorized its president to call for such an action.

Import Fees Ban Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators were urged Wednesday to retain the Senate-passed ban on the Carter administration's threatened imposition of import fees on oil.

On the eve of Carter's departure for an economic summit in Bonn, West Germany, Sen. Robert C. Dole, R-Kan., said he and 24 other supporters of the prohibition had signed a letter urging the conferees to stand fast in opposition to import fees.

The signers consisted primarily of Republicans and Democrats from the East Coast, which would be hardest hit by the import fee because of a heavy reliance on imported heavy heating oil.

The administration has threatened to impose a fee of at least $5 a barrel on imported oil to help stabilize the U.S. dollar if Congress fails to approve the crude oil tax.

Administration officials at one time left open the possibility that Carter would announce these fees during the Bonn summit if there was no progress on the tax by then — a move now viewed as doubtful in light of the Senate action.

Theft Of Airplane Charged To Pair

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — A South Florida pilot and his wife were arrested Wednesday on grand theft charges in connection with the theft of a DC-6 aircraft which was stolen from Miami International Airport and flown here.

Bernard Watson, 49, was arrested at an airport at Sanford, while his 43-year-old wife, Laura Mae, was apprehended at their Broward County, Fla., home, said Marty Martin, a spokesman for the Manatee County Sheriff's office.

"There's at least one more suspect, perhaps others in connection with the case," Martin said Wednesday.

Police said firemen at the Sarasota-Bradenton International Airport saw three persons depart the plane after it landed here early Sunday morning.

Manatee officials say the Watsons had leased a hangar at Sarasota-Bradenton International for $10,000 under the name of All Aircraft Services Unlimited Inc., which police said was formed by the couple on June 23.

Soviet Trials Denounced By President

intercontinental ballistic missiles.

"Both of us have made our views known to the other and we've exchanged thoughts on what the other had to say," Vance said.

He carefully avoided even an interim assessment of the talks, which continue today.

"It is too early to do that," Vance said.

Vance presented Gromyko with new American proposals to limit missile systems, and Gromyko called a recess after asking Vance a few preliminary questions about the American plan. It was believed the foreign minster may have consulted with the Kremlin during the four-hour break. Soviet proposals were given to Vance, but their substance was not disclosed.

Upon returning to the afternoon session, Gromyko gave no indication what he thought of the American proposals or how the negotiations were going.

"We're not yet in the middle of our negotiations," Gromyko told reporters. "It is too early to make predictions."

Vance said: "You are right."

Vance has said repeatedly the human rights issue must not interfere with the nuclear arms negotiations. A senior U.S. official said objections within the Carter administration to Vance's meeting with Gromyko were dismissed because arms limitation was an "imperative" that could not be delayed.

Vance's spokesman added, however, that Vance would emphasize to Gromyko "the importance of dealing fairly not only with Shcharansky but all the dissidents."

The American arms proposal is aimed at providing a breakthrough in the treaty talks, which seek to limit new missiles and long-range strategic bombers on both sides. The U.S. plan would restrict the missile modifications the Soviets could make during the life of the treaty, until 1985.

Under the plan, the United States would also reserve the right to develop the MX, a mobile missile system and also to build thousands of new silos to make the current arsenal of Minuteman missiles less vulnerable by shifting them periodically from silo to silo.

"It's going to be hard sledding," a senior U.S. official said in anticipation of Soviet objection to the "shell game" defense strategy known to officials as MAP, or Multiple Aiming Points.

NUCLEAR WASTE HEARING—Robert Thorne, Assistant Secretary for Energy Technology, answers questions in Amarillo Wednesday at the second of a series of meetings on nuclear waste disposal at a site in New Mexico 125 miles southeast of Carlsbad. said.

Ken Rotan, president of the Carlsbad, N.M., Chamber of Commerce, was one speaker who offered support for the WIPP.

Rotan said he had supported the project since its inception and continued to do so.

"We feel extreme care is being exercised to preserve all facets of (the Carlsbad area) environment," Rotan said.

He added, however, that he could not support the waste project if officials ever withdrew their pledge to ensure that buried radioactive trash could be retrieved if necessary.

Plumber Gives Support

An Amarillo plumber, Tom Sweeney, noted that the country is inextricably tied to the need for electricity and because of that need, he said, he would favor the WIPP.

Roger LeGassie, associate director for program analysis in the Department of Energy's (DOE) office of energy research, said the impossibility of monitoring the waste is precisely why some feel burying it in stable geologic formations is the country's best bet.

Dr. Charles Hyder, a scientist from Albuquerque who has criticized the WIPP idea for some time, leaped on a DOE task force statement that the consensus in the scientific community is that subterranean formations are the best alternative.

"I can assure you the entire scientific community who has viewed the geologic question does not agree that (underground burial) is the best" alternative, Hyder said.

New Doubts Cast

Hyder cited a news story Wednesday that said a White House study "cast new doubts on the long-range suitability of nearly all current proposals for storying nuclear wast underground.

"Even deep salt beds, a leading contender as a permanent resting place for atomic waste" received poor ratings, the story said.

Hyder said the most troubling aspect of the nuclear waste proposal is the transportation of radioactive flotsam across the nation from several sites, including those at Idaho Falls, Idaho, Hanford, Wash., and Aiken, S.C.

The former NASA scientist and University of New Mexico professor said he personally favors research which could develop "transmutation", whereby the toxicity of waste might be diminished.

Above all, Hyder said, the government should avoid wholesale transporting of the waste due to the high probability of accidents.

Tech Staffer Applauded

A Texas Tech University instructor, Edward George, drew applause early in the comment session when he urged the DOE to "genuinely and vigorously pursue solar energy."

Standing in the way of solar energy, George said, is the development of a market for its technology. Panel member, Robert Thorn, assistant secretary for energy technology in the DOE, nodded in silent agreement.

George said a solar energy market might develop if the federal government would use solar collectors, wind generators and other technology in its hundreds of buildings.

The DOE plans additional public hearing on waste repositories, as several states including Texas are being studied as potential waste sites.

The estimated cost of the WIPP project, the DOE says, would be between $350 million and $400 million.

the committees will have heard a pretty good range of subject matter."

After its brief morning session, the Senate quit until 10:30 a.m. Monday.

"There is just nothing for us to do Thursday and Friday," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Asked if he would be surprised if the special session accomplished no more than the two Senate-approved bills, Hobby replied:

"No, I would not be surprised."

Senators were told earlier by the Legislative Budget Board that repeal of the utility tax and increasing the inheritance would cost the state about $496 million in lost revenue the next three years. Sen. Frank Lombardino, D-San Antonio, author of the utility tax repeal, said a committee amendment that would make the bill effective this Oct. 1 instead of Sept. 1, would lower the revenue loss another $10 million, for a net total of about $486 million.

The budget board estimated the new inheritance exemption would cost $14.5 million this year, $15.4 million in 1980 and $16.2 million in 1981.

The utility sales tax repeal would cost the state about $115.7 million this year, $149.5 million in 1980, and $175.5 million in 1981.

Sen. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, said his inheritance tax exemption bill would update a 1923 tax law to conform with today's increased estate valuations. He said it should help Texas families keep their family estates intact. Under the present $25,000 exemption for estates, the surviving spouse and children often must divide up the estate to avoid high inheritance taxes.

Instead, Mahon still hopes the committee will hold a hearing on the proposed amendment and bring it through regular channels to the House floor for a vote.

It was in this regard that he sought the president's help.

Family's Cruise Of Five Years Found To Be Tough Vacation

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — For the Wilcox family, a tranquil cruise to exotic lands aboard a 40-foot sloop seemed the ideal escape from the bustle of big-city life. But after five years, 30,000 miles and one ramming on a coral reef, they decided it was a colossal mistake.

"Never again," said daughter Linda, 15. "Once was too much."

Said father Chuck — still standing aboard the battered sloop Vela after returning to this Peninsula city south of San Francisco from a voyage to 34 countries:

Wilcox, 42, walked away from a $20,000-a-year job as an electronics engineer in 1973 to sail the seas with his wife, Dawn, also 42, Linda and their son Garth, 18.

"For years I heard people talk about the joys and pleasures of cruising," Wilcox said.

The voyage began Aug. 20, 1973, two years after Wilcox bought the sailboat for $33,000.

"Sometimes I think it was a mistake to bring the kids, especially teen-agers," Wilcox said with a sigh. "My daughter never liked the idea of going, but we figured she'd grow into it."

A year after the start of their voyage, the Vela was cruising before dawn near Fiji — too near. The boat hit a coral reef and it took 10 months and about $17,000 to get it seaworthy again.

"Things got a little tight after that," said Wilcox. "We had to keep pretty much to the essentials. There wasn't any money for luxuries."

Mrs. Wilcox lost her only good stove when the boat grounded. For the next four years, she said, the cooking and baking was done on a single burner.

"Coming up the Red Sea it was so hot and everything was breaking," said Linda. "The engine wasn't working; the sails were fouled up and then Chuck's chronometer went over the side ... I got sick of the whole deal a lot of times."

The 87 days from Panama to California got on everyone's nerves. With the engine out and the rigging broken, they averaged only two miles per hour. Food got short, and everyone went on rationing.

"If I can go through that, I can go through anything," said Linda. She said the one thing she'll never forget about the trip is sailing homeward bound — through the Golden Gate.

Weather Modification Plea Voiced By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Man will be able to change weather significantly within the next two decades and the government must assure that the implications of producing more rain or lessening storm damage are considered early, a federal advisory panel said Wednesday.

The Weather Modification Advisory Board said in its report to Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps that weather modification is a new technology that has a chance of being introduced properly.

"The history of our time is sprinkled with instances of new technologies running ahead of the social, economic, environmental, international and institutional thinking that should accompany them," Harlan Cleveland, board chairman, said in a letter to the secretary.

"Precisely because the science and technology of weather resources management are still at such an early stage, there is an excellent chance in this field to do things right," Cleveland continued.

For example, critics say nuclear power is a technology that was pushed into use before such long-term implications as environmental effects, radioactive waste storage and disposal of old power plants had been dealt with.

The one-year weather modification study said the abilities to increase rain and snowfall and to lessen some storm damage are "scientifically possible and within sight."

The panel predicted that by the early 1980s scientists will be able to increase mountain snowpacks by 10 percent to 30 percent. By the latter part of the decade, rainfall in the High Plains and Midwest could be increased 10 percent to 30 percent, it concluded.

By the 1990s, the report said, it will be possible to reduce hurricane winds by 10 percent to 20 percent and cut the amount of hail in some storms by 50 percent.

The group, established under the National Weather Modification Policy Act of 1976 and charged by Congress to recommend a national policy, said the best approach at this stage is an accelerated national research and a minimum of firm federal regulation.

Most weather modification now involves localized projects of seeding clouds with chemicals to affect rainfall within one state's borders, the report said.

The federal government should establish guidelines for doing this work and license weather modifiers for competence, as it does airplane pilots, the study group said.

"We do not think it would be wise to try to legislate the content of these guidelines," the panel said. "The science and technology in which they must be rooted will be mutating too fast for that."

But as future projects get larger and affect many states, more federal regulation may be needed, the group said.

The major federal effort should go into a 20-year research and development program to improve weather modification techniques and assess their environmental impact, the study said.

The research program outlined requires federal spending in the field to double in fiscal 1980 to $37 million, and increase to $90 million five years later, bringing the total projected cost for the first five years to $322 million, the report said.

The report said there are strong reasons for hastening progress in weather modification. Among them are the economic benefits of delivering more water to the right places for farming, hydroelectric power and municipal and industrial water supplies.

As more people move to coastal areas, decreasing the risk from hurricanes and other severe storms will become increasingly important, the report said.

In all of this, the report stated, "environmental considerations cannot be an afterthought; they have to be part of the planning."

Hill Urges Price Control End For Marginal Wells

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill urged the Texas congressional delegation Wednesday to support exemption of so-called marginal wells from federal price controls.

The issue is expected to be voted on this week, and Hill asked the delegation to ignore the Carter administration's opposition to such exemptions.

"Texas needs the marginal well oil exemption," Hill said in a telegram. "We produce 11 million barrels of marginal well oil each month in Texas, and exemption from federal price controls would mean $25 million to $40 million a year in additional state oil tax revenues."

Woman Stands Guard Over Burned House

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — There has been little rest for Violet Jones since the 70-year-old woman was pulled from her burning home shortly after fire struck July 1.

For the past 10 days, she's been on the street standing guard in front of her house.

"People tell me I'm going to have to leave. They tell me they'll say I'm crazy and they'll put me away," she said. "I'm not crazy. I worked hard for what I've got."

When fire swept through Miss Jones' rented six-room unpainted frame house, police broke in the door and led her to safety, just before most of the roof gave way.

"All I could take with me was a shopping bag with a raincoat and umbrella in it, a housecoat, the houseshoes I wore. That's all I got," Miss Jones said Tuesday. "I stood there until the fire was out. People kept trying to get me to go home with them. I told them, 'I'm going to stay until I see if anything can be saved.'

"Right away some people came along and started pulling stuff out of the windows, out between the cracks in the boards. I told them to go away, it was all I owned, wet and burned like it was."

Some things — clothes, lamps, a set of cookware and hundreds of books — survived the flames. She's especially happy about the books.

"I got 2,500, maybe 2,600 now. They fill up one whole room. I got religious books, school books, ancient history books. I got a speller and I have a lot of Bibles and some dictionaries," she said.

But there's been little time for reading.

"I ain't been to bed since the fire broke out Saturday night before last," Miss Jones said. "I'm scared. I really am scared. There was a man who drove by here today and yelled that he was going to burn the rest of my home down."

Several days after the fire, a Memphis Housing Authority employee nailed a sign near the door: "KEEP OUT. Dangerous Building. This building is considered dangerous by the director of housing."

"The people from the city government are mad at me because I haven't found a house. But you know the minute I leave they are going to take everything," she said. "It ain't going to do me any good to find some other place to live if I can't have nothing to put in there."

Dissidents Compared By Andrew Young To U.S. Prisoners

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Andrew Young, the American ambassador to the United Nations, today compared dissidents in the Soviet Union to civil rights campaigners in the United States and said there were "political prisoners" in both countries.

Commenting on the trials this week of two prominent Soviet dissidents, Young said in an interview the Soviet Union was making a "terrible mistake" in trying to stifle the human rights movement. But he made it plain he felt the situation of the dissidents should not be dramatized.

"You cannot stop the world because of a trial, no matter where it is and who it is."

He said he agreed with the White House denunciation of the trials as a repressive action striking the conscience of the entire world.

"But it also strikes the conscience of the entire world when we do ridiculous things like that."

In Washington, Sen. Barry Goldwater demanded on the Senate floor that President Carter fire Young if the ambassador is unable to supply evidence to support his claim about American political prisoners.

"I call upon the president to demand of Ambassador Young details of who he thinks are political prisoners," the Arizona Republican said.

At the request of Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., Goldwater read the Associated Press account of Young's interview aloud on the Senate floor. About 25 senators listened intently as he read, but none commented on the story.

Young confirmed a quote attributed to him today in the Paris socialist newspaper Le Matin, in which he said "there are hundreds, perhaps thousands of political prisoners in the United States" and that he had been a "political prisoner" too when he was arrested in a civil rights demonstration in Atlanta 10 years ago.

He said, however, that in the Soviet Union there were "likely to be tens of thousands" of political prisoners. He also noted there was a difference in defining the term "political prisoners."

"There is nobody in prison in the U.S. for criticizing the government," he said. "There is no one in prison for writing a style of literature or for having a monitoring system of our human rights."

Asked what kind of American political prisoners he was talking about, he said: "There are all varieties of political prisoners.

"I do think there are some people who are in prison much more because they are poor than because they are bad. But that's a problem we are working on and one on which we are making great progress.

"There are problems in our system which sends intelligent, aggressive, poor people to jail and in which intelligent, aggressive and rich people have opportunities."

The Soviet trials, Young said, "remind me very much of my own days in the civil rights movement when people in the South said we were Communists because we wanted to exercise certain freedoms. Now the Communists are saying these (dissidents) must be capitalist spies. In many ways, I think, the same things apply."

NO-SMOKING BILL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would make it a criminal offense to smoke in the public areas of most buildings in the District of Columbia has been approved by the City Council. Restaurants, tobacco shops and the lobbies of hotels are exempted from the bill's provisions. And, because of lack of jurisdiction, the bill also does not apply to federal buildings.

Congress Gets Blame In Energy Mess

By LOUIS HARRIS

By a 75-16 percent majority, Americans are concerned that Congress has not yet passed a comprehensive energy bill. The chief culprit in the public's mind is "political maneuvering in Congress," which a 52 percent majority believes to be "very much to blame" for the inaction.

The absence of a clear-cut U.S. energy policy is likely to cause embarrassment for President Carter as he sits down with the leaders of the Western world next week in Bonn at the economic summit. West Germany and Japan have made it abundantly clear to the United States that confidence in the dollar and in the direction of our economy will remain in serious doubt as long as there is no resolution of the energy issue. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany is especially concerned about the lack of any organized U.S. effort to cut back on consumption of oil in America.

Ironically, according to the findings of a recent Harris Survey of 1,529 adults nationwide, Americans seem to feel the same way as some of the foreign critics:

—A substantial 61 percent cites "too much dependence on foreign oil" as the most important reason for the energy problem in the United States. This is an increase from the 56 percent who felt the same way a year ago. This dependence on foreign oil is precisely what worries our major Western partners.

—In second place as a major cause of the U.S. energy problem is "the wastefulness of most Americans in the use of energy." This is singled out by 60 percent of the public as "very important."

Besides the political maneuvering in Congress, what other elements does the public blame for the delay in passing an energy bill?

Heading the list are the major oil companies, which are seen as being "very much to blame" by 50 percent of the public. Moreover, a 51 percent majority feels that an important part of the present energy situation has been the "reluctance on the part of the oil companies to drill for more gas and oil unless prices are raised." The oil companies have been in the public's doghouse ever since the 1973 and 1974 shortage stemming from the oil embargo in the Middle East.

Other potential targets of public wrath over the failure to enact an energy program receive much less criticism from Americans:

—Only 14 percent of the public feel that President Carter is "very much to blame," although another 44 percent hold him "somewhat to blame." The contrast between the 52 percent who fault Congress and the much lower 14 percent who fault the President is significant. In political terms, it is likely to mean that the Democrats running for the U.S. Senate and House this fall are apt to find public discontent on the energy issue being taken out on them. If no energy bill is passed by the end of this session of Congress, it could well be reflected in Democratic losses this November.

—The charge of being "very much to blame" for the delay in passing an energy bill is leveled at other groups and persons, but to a lesser degree: 33 percent criticize electric utilities for the delay; 28 percent, the public for its attitude toward mandatory conservation; 26 percent, labor unions; 22 percent, the coal companies; 19 percent, environmental groups; 13 percent, consumer activists; 11 percent, Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger; and 11 percent, small oil companies.

Not only has there been a growing impatience on the part of the public, after a year of committee hearings and negotiations between the House and the Senate, but people also have growing doubts about whether the thrust of the legislation is well directed. Last year, by a relatively close 41-32 percent, the public felt that the emphasis in energy policy should be more upon increases in production than on cutbacks in the use of energy. This year, however, the preference for new production has risen to 46-26 percent. Given few direct requests or orders to cut their own consumption, the public is turning more toward supply concerns, especially the development of alternative sources of energy.

County Budget Requests Eyed

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Requests for bigger staffs, made by the tax assessor-collector and criminal district attorney-elect, were reviewed by county commissioners in budget hearings, Tuesday.

Assessor-collector Russell Hardin asked for an additional appraiser and seven more deputies in the proposed budget he submitted, and John T. Montford, who is unopposed this fall for election as criminal district attorney, came back to the hearings Tuesday with refined and clarified proposals.

The hearings were to continue this morning, and department heads will be called in after the commissioners develop an initial approach to each proposed budget, County Judge Rodrick Shaw said.

Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard, who is asking for 10 more deputies, an average raise of about $100 a month for everyone in the department and about $160,000 more from the county, did not appear Tuesday or Wednesday.

Shaw said department heads could be called in at any time during the informal hearings.

They will also appear formally before the budget is adopted in September.

Montford gave the commissioners in their second day of budget hearings a schedule showing salaries of 12 assistant attorneys, five law clerks, seven investigators and 10 secretaries.

That would be an addition of four investigators and all of the law clerks, a trimming of two attorneys from the staff and the same number of secretaries. The total budget would be $459,325 as opposed to the 1978 office budget of $386,553.

Montford said grant applications to pay primarily for the extra investigators will be prepared by July 19.

He also proposes adding an office administrator at $18,000 per year.

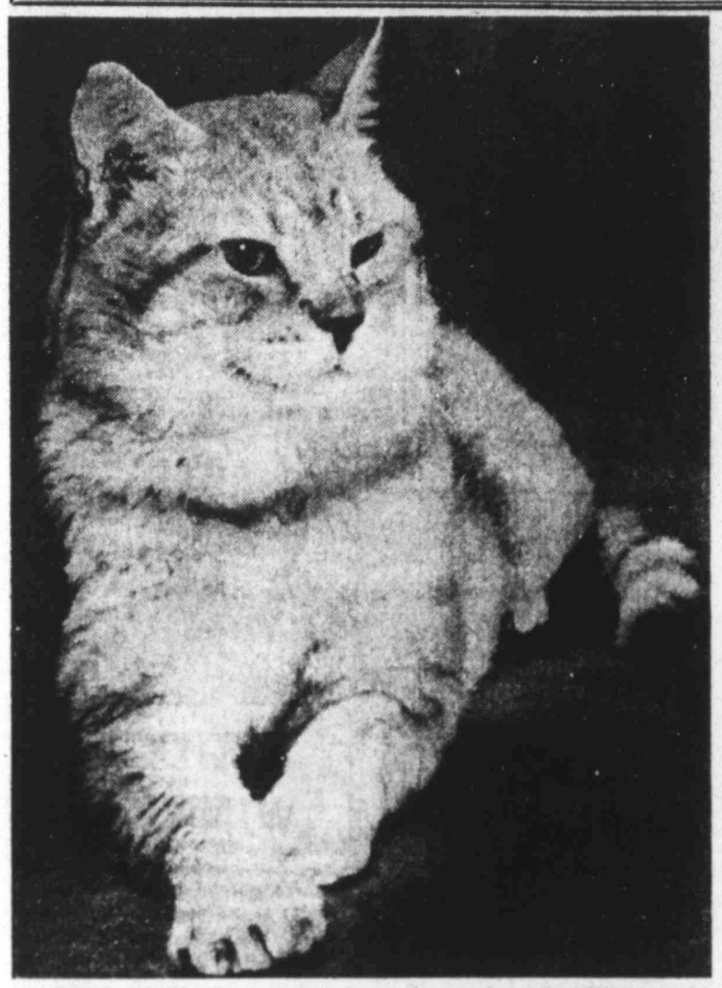

Before Montford came back to the hearings late this morning, the commissioners discussed at length the proposed budget of County Tax Assessor-Collector Russell Hardin and his request for an additional appraiser and seven more deputies.

His current budget is for $594,767, and the personnel increase would cost $42,378.

In a related discussion, Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton criticized employment of separate appraisers for the various taxing entities in Lubbock County.

"We appraise, the city appraises and the school appraises," Biggs said. "A piece of property is worth 'X' amount of money. Why does it take five different people to tell what it's worth?

"When you have four or five people assessing property, it stands to reason that it's going to cost you four times as much to do it."

FELINE STAR DIES—Morris, the cat who was the star of a pet food TV commercial for 10 years, died in Chicago July 7. Morris was 17 years old and will be replaced by an understudy who will also be known as Morris. (AP Laserphoto)

Cat Food Commercial King Morris Dead At 17

CHICAGO (AP) — Morris, the orange-colored alley cat who became known in the trade as the Clark Gable of cat food television commercials, is dead at the age of 17.

The tomcat was found by pet handler Bob Martwick in 1966 in a Chicago humane shelter. Martwick was looking for a cat to be trained to star in 9-Lives cat food commercials.

"Morris had been picked up by humane officers in a Chicago alley. He had been in a fight and was disturbing the peace," said Pamela Talbot, spokeswoman for Star-Kist Foods Inc. "No one claimed him, and no one seemed to want him because he was scarred up. One ear had been bitten and was a little ragged and there was a cut on the inside of one eye. But all this gave him his interesting expression, a certain jauntiness. It made him the Clark Gable of cats."

Morris was 7 when he first appeared before cameras. He was finicky, aloof and independent.

"He was an instant success — a natural actor with a lot of ham. He just lit up before a camera," said Martwick.

An actor's voice was dubbed in, adjusting to the changing expressions of Morris as he responded to calls that his cat food was ready. In 10 years, Morris, who was owned outright by Star-Kist, starred in more than 40 commercials.

The pampered tomcat appeared to be in fine health despite his age, equivalent to 90 years in a human. He last posed for publicity pictures and film in May. He died Friday, and was buried on the suburban property of his handler, Martwick, whose home he shared throughout his career.

Announcement of his death was made Wednesday by the company.

Morris's veterinarian, Dr. Barbara Stein, said his death "was sudden and associated with cardiac complications related to old age."

Mrs. Talbot said that Morris's role will be perpetuated by a cat that has served as his understudy for some time.

"He is a double for Morris physically, and seems to be as finicky and aloof as Morris," she said. "He, too, will be known as Morris."

Expansion Of Power Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee approved unanimously Wednesday a bill expanding the power of the Supreme Court to refuse to decide cases presented to it.

No action has been taken in the House.

Backers of the bill said it was supported by all nine justices of the nation's highest court.

Most cases appealed to the court reach it under a procedure allowing the justices to refuse a hearing without giving any reason.

In some categories of cases, however, the losing party in the lower court has an automatic right to a decision.

These include cases involving the government in which a U.S. district judge strikes down a federal law, cases in which a U.S. circuit court of appeals strikes down a state law relied upon by one of the parties, and cases in which the highest court of a state strikes down a federal law.

National Guard Fighter Crashes, Killing Pilot

ALPENA, Mich. (AP) — An Air National Guard F-105 fighter-bomber carrying live ammunition on a training mission crashed and burned Wednesday north of Phelps Collins Airport, killing the pilot and causing an explosion on a runway.

The plane was flying in formation with two other planes when it "pitched into the ground" from about 1,500 feet, said Major Edward Carroll, a public information officer. Live ammunition from 20 mm cannon on board exploded on the airport runway and guards were posted to keep it clear. The pilot, who was not immediately identified, was attached to the 113th Tactical Fighter Wing, based in Washington.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My niece was born with hips out of their sockets. Is this a very common thing, and is it repairable? Is it 100 percent hereditary or can it happen from other causes? The doctor says that if the baby wears braces for three to six months everything should grow in place and the baby will learn to walk. Can you tell me something about this? Is this more prevalent in baby girls than boys? — J.W.K.

The family should be thankful for the efficient hospital examination of this tot. Congenital hip dislocation (dysplasia) may easily be missed until late, when treatment is not nearly so effective. It occurs in about one birth in 1,000 (Caucasian males). The odds are slightly higher for Caucasian female babies and higher in some ethnic groups. Hereditary factors seem to be present.

If detected at birth and if treatment is begun early, the chances of the baby developing normally are quite good, but the outlook becomes dimmer with advancing months and years. The treatment includes splinting of the hip for from three to six months — after it has been adjusted properly — or until X-rays show joints developing properly. It can take much longer than six months in some cases. Caution is the word. The treatment fails if the splints are removed too soon.

Among the characteristic signs of hip dislocation at birth is a peculiar clicking sound (Ortolani's sign) heard when the doctor moves the joint in a certain way. Other manipulations confirm the problem. This is one reason pediatricians do a great deal of gentle tugging and turning of tiny hips in examinations done in the first several months of life.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 70 and have had a hiatal hernia for about 15 years. The doctor says it is small and since it does not bother me much it doesn't have to be operated on. What I want to know is, in case sometime I should ever get a sick stomach and have to vomit, won't I strangle to death? This has never happened to me, but if it did, would it be the end? — R.F.H.

Hiatal hernias vary in size and in the discomfort they produce. Some have this lower gullet deformity all their lives and are never aware it is there. It is the most common abnormality of the upper gastrointestinal tract.

Since you have lived with it for 15 years (that you know of) it is unwise to begin tampering now, especially if it has not given you trouble. If you have lost weight in the intervening 15 years, the hernia has most likely become less of a problem to you. You'll find your other questions on this subject answered in "Hiatal Hernia: Eight Ways to Combat It." Send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What would cause a healthy, 29-year-old woman to cease menstruating? My doctor checked me over and found nothing wrong. He said he could force the periods with hormone injections, but as I have no desire to become pregnant I declined. My periods had been very regular until they stopped abruptly two years ago. I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall, weigh 110 pounds. My blood pressure is OK. I do have poor circulation, with cold fingers and toes all the time and dry skin. Should I simply leave well enough alone and consider it just an early menopause or should I pursue matters further? I have never used the Pill and am not on any medication currently. — D.B.

Could be an early menopause, a fact your doctor could easily establish with tests. The only other thought I have concerns low thyroid function. The coldness and dryness of your skin might suggest that, so it should be examined. Other symptoms of this might be sluggishness and unexplained weight gain.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell us sometime in your column how your name is pronounced — with long O or a short O. — C.K.K.

Short "O" as in "tossed salad." In fact, the purists pronounce the name "Tossteson."

• • •

Your thyroid plays a critical health role for you — in everything from eyesight to fertility. Dr. Thosteson explains this important, and misunderstood, gland in his booklet, "Your Thyroid: How It Works For You." To get a copy, enclose 50 cents and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

The Professor started his play just the way anyone else would. He took dummy's ace of hearts, led the 10 of spades and paused to think before going further. He had started with four apparent losers and now the bad trump break had increased the number to five.

Then the Professor remarked, "Maybe this cloud has a silver lining." He played his spade ace.

He cashed his king of trumps and ace of clubs. Then he led a club to dummy's king, cashed dummy's ace of diamonds and threw West in with the jack of hearts.

West took his high trump and was left with nothing but hearts. He had to lead one. South could get a ruff and a discard but that wasn't enough. Instead South discarded the last club from dummy and a diamond from his own hand. West had to lead another heart. This time the Professor ruffed in dummy while discarding his last diamond.

He had lost just three tricks and had no losers left since he could trump his one remaining club with dummy's last trump.

A special tournament will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the center.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have the best husband! He has solved the problem of matching socks, dark as well as white.

No more going to the window to distinguish between the many shades of navy blue.

You'll need your brightest and loudest threads from your sewing box. Using red, for instance, sew a small knot in the toe of both socks in a pair, leaving a short tail when you cut the thread.

Change to another color for another pair of socks, being sure there is a good contrast between the colors of the threads.

Now all you have to do each time the socks are washed is simply match the threads sewn into the toes of the socks.

Since most men's shoes do not have open toes, the threads never show, and are not uncomfortable.

Don't forget to use this idea on the white athletic socks for your children as well.

Remember I said I have the best husband? Well, he did all of his own socks for me! — B.

Hubbies like yours don't grow on trees, B., so be sure to hang onto him. He's precious! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For the quickest and easiest cobbler ever, prepare the fruit as usual.

Then mix one cup flour, one cup sugar, a dash of salt, drop in one egg and one-half eggshell of water. (No shell, just water!)

Mix and drop by spoon over the fruit.

Bake at 350 degrees until the dough is golden brown. — E. Adams

DEAR HELOISE:

How does one clean peacock feathers? Neither my dry cleaner nor my laundry man has an answer. Please help! — Vase of Peacocks

Not being a peacock myself, I wouldn't know. But I'll bet you that some of our precious readers will.

Come on, folks, sharpen up that old pencil and write your answer to Heloise. We'll love you for it since it has become the latest fashion to put these in vases. Bless you who write. — Heloise

We have dropped plastic drinking straws in the tracks where the doors ride.

The doors will not move until the straws are removed. — Barbe Anderson

DEAR HELOISE:

As homemakers we need all the help we can get and your column has terrific ideas. Recently, I came up with one that is creative, money-saving and attractive.

As the shades at the windows aged, I noticed tears or cracks. I decided to redecorate. I bought a bright, cheery roll of adhesive-backed paper and made different sizes of stars and circles to place over the tears as well as the good areas of the window shade.

It really beats the cost of a new shade! — Lila Birgenheier

You're a precious doll to share this clever idea with the rest of us! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

In spite of directions to the contrary on my favorite boxed scalloped or au gratin potatoes, it is much easier to dissolve the sauce mix with the hot water before adding the potatoes. — Nancy VanLieshout

SPIRITED BRAISED LAMB

2 lbs. boneless lamb stew meat*
2 level tbsps. flour
1 tsp. paprika
1 tsp. onion powder
Oil for browning
½ cup coffee liqueur
¼ cup water
2 tbsps. red wine vinegar
1 clove garlic, pressed
1 ¼ tsps. salt
½ tsp. rosemary, crumbled
¼ tsp. pepper
½ lb. fresh mushrooms
2 tbsps. thinly sliced green onion
Lemon wedges for garnish

Cut lamb in 2-inch cubes, removing any fat. Reserve any trimmings for browning meat. Combine flour, paprika and onion powder. Add to meat and toss until coated. Heat lamb fat trimmings in a large skillet to render fat. Add oil, if needed, to measure 2 tablespoons and brown meat well. Meanwhile, combine liqueur, water, vinegar, garlic, salt, rosemary and pepper. When meat is browned, discard any fat remaining in skillet. Add liqueur mixture to meat. Bring to a boil, cover and turn heat low. Simmer 1 ½ to 1 ¾ hours, or until meat is tender. Cut mushrooms in halves and add to the skillet last 5 minutes meat cooks. Remove lamb and mushrooms to heated serving platter. Skim off any excess fat from sauce. Pour over the lamb, or serve on the side. Garnish with sliced green onion and lemon wedges. Serve with rice, if desired. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

* 3 pounds lamb blocks, boned and trimmed, yields about 2 to 2 ¼ pounds.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married ten years to a man I love and trusted. My husband's sister was my maid of honor at my wedding. She has been a dear friend all these years. Something happened recently and I don't know what to do.

Last week I found someone else's lipstick on my husband's shirt. I confronted him with the evidence in a quiet, calm manner after the children went to sleep. He broke down and confessed that he had been having an affair with a woman at the office for five months. I asked how he managed it since he is home every night. He said he had been seeing her during the afternoon at his sister's apartment. (She had a key made for him since she works from 8:00 till 5:00.)

My husband says he is glad I found out because the guilt had been killing him and now he is through playing around — for good. But what about my sister-in-law? Am I wrong to feel she was no friend to me? What should I do? — Torn

Dear Torn: She was certainly no friend. By all means have a talk with her and see if you can reestablish your friendship on an honest basis. If you are unable to do so, it is understandable. If you can — you are a super lady.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 16, blue-eyed, blonde and just happen to measure 40-22-36. I have plenty of boyfriends but the girls at school are very unfriendly. This really bothers me.

I asked a very nice girl in my English class to tell why the girls don't like me. She said, "It's the way you walk."

When I went to summer camp a few years ago we practiced walking with books on our heads. Now I'm in the habit of walking with my head high and shoulders pulled straight back. I won a posture award at camp that summer and am very proud of it.

This nice girl who I'm sure was trying to help me said I walk as if I am trying to advertise myself. She suggested I carry some books in front of me — especially when I wear a sweater or something tight.

What do you think of her advice? — Too Much Of A Good Thing Maybe

Dear Too Much: Some girls may not like the way you walk, but I doubt that this is your major problem. People (both girls and boys) respond to the way you treat them — not the way you walk. If you make a genuine effort to show girls that you want them as friends, they will warm up to you.

Now that you have already won the posture award maybe you don't need to pull your shoulders back QUITE so much, dear.

• • •

Dear Ann: I have been married for 33 years and I'm 58 years old. I have been hit in the face, struck on the head, choked, bruised on every part of my body. Three weeks ago, my husband knocked me over backwards and I struck my head on a table. Then he shook me until I was almost senseless. He finally was going to get a gun and kill us both. I ran outside and came back in the house expecting a gun blast in my face, but do you know what he said? — "Why did you make me do this?"

Why do I stay? Because I have no place to go. Please help me. — Frightened And Shaking

Dear F and S: You don't need a place to go. You need the courage to see a lawyer and get a legal separation or a divorce. The man sounds crazy and dangerous. Get moving.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — The First International Soap Opera Exposition will be held in New York City at the Statler Hilton Hotel the weekend of Aug. 26 and 27.

Planned as the first, all-encompassing exhibit to focus on the serial phenomenon, the exposition will feature screenings of American as well as foreign soap operas. Products from books to records to magazines in the field will be displayed. Performers, writers and production personnel will answer questions from fans about the mechanics and evolution of the medium. And there will be an evening program featuring the musical talents of several serial stars, including Candice Manera (Donna Tyler on "All My Children"), John Gabriel (Seneca Beaulac on "Ryan's Hope"), Jill Voigt (Becky Lee Hunt on "One Life to Live"), and Joel Crothers (Miles Cavanaugh on "Edge of Night"). Other soapers will make special guest appearances throughout the two-day affair, and there will be a celebrity auction to benefit the Damon Runyon-Walter Winchell Cancer Fund.

SHORT TAKES:

The roles of Vivian, Iris' new maid on "Another World," is providing that rarest of serial treats — genuine guffaws in the afternoon. Vivian is portrayed by Gretchen Oehler, who is currently tickling Broadwayites as another maid in the hit revival of "Dracula."

NOT TOO LONG ago, Millee (c.q.) Taggart (Janet Collins on "Search For Tomorrow") and her family departed their Westchester, N.Y., three-story home for a Saturday shopping outing. When they returned they found the house burned to the ground, presumedly the result of faulty kitchen wiring. Millee and her menage are camping with friends until the house can be rebuilt from the ground up.

CHRIS WALLACE, "All My Children's" friendly policeman, Mel Jacobi, is a jack of many entertainment trades. Born in Fort Wayne, Ind., Chris majored in radio-TV-theater at Ohio Wesleyan University before working in counter-intelligence in the Army. While stationed in Germany he performed in several local plays. Then he produced public television programs in Ohio when he returned to the states. He worked in advertising in St. Louis before joining a TV network promotion department. The brown-haired and -eyed actor produced a recent documentary film about wildlife management, and he's also an ASCAP award-winning songwriter.

FANS OF "Days of Our Lives" may not be seeing much of Wesley Eure this summer in the role of Michael Horton. Wes will be taking a leave-of-absence to film a starring role in the theatrical film, "C.H.O.M.P.S." You'll have to tune in tomorrow to see whether he'll return periodically, permanently, or perhaps not at all if his film career takes flight.

THE MAILBAG:

Is Donna Bacalla, the new Gina on "General Hospital," from Baltimore? I think I know her. — H.P., Baltimore, Md.

You just might. Donna was raised and lived in Baltimore until age 17 when she embarked upon a career as a ballerina with the National Ballet Company in Washington, D.C. An injury curtailed her professional dancing career and Donna turned to acting. She's appeared in numerous primetime TV guests appearances and was featured in the Dennis Hopper film, "The Last Movie."

What happened to the gal who played Anne-Tyler Martin on "All my Children?" Will she be returning to the show? — J.Z., Vista, CA.

Anything's possible, but when actress Judith Barcroft departed "AMC" she explained that the hour-long show drew her too much away from her family life. The show is still an hour so it's doubtful Barcroft will return unless she can wrangle a contract that calls for only a few days work each week. Meanwhile, her real-life husband, Wisner Washam, is bringing home the bacon as one of the "AMC" dialogue writers.

What is the actress who previously played Nicole on "Edge of Night" doing now? — J.T., Richmond, VA.

Actress Maeve McGuire recently returned from a trip to Greece with her longtime secret beau. She's currently in rehearsals for a starring role in a play that will be produced at her alma mater, Sarah Lawrence, during the school's 50th anniversary, the week of July 24.

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune in Tomorrow," 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

POACHED PEACHES

6 medium freestone peaches (1½ lb.)
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
¼ tsp. ground cinnamon
½ cup light rum

Skin peaches, halve and pit. In a large skillet bring to a boil the sugar, water and cinnamon, stirring until sugar dissolves. Add the peaches, cut side down, and immediately reduce heat so syrup simmers; cook gently uncovered for 4 minutes; turn cut side up; continue poaching until tender — about 4 more minutes. Remove from heat. With a slotted spoon, remove peaches to a bowl. Stir the rum into the syrup and pour over the peaches. Cover and chill. Makes 6 servings.

Lions Club Auxiliary Officers Installed

New officers have been installed for the Lioness Club of the Lubbock Lions Club, largest in the United States.

Revocation Of Probation Overturned

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has overturned the Lubbock County probation revocation of Zachary Knighten, saying no evidence exists to show he actually was operating a vehicle he was alleged to have stolen.

Knighten rented a vehicle on Sept. 11, 1976, from Dollar Rent-A-Car Systems, agreeing to return the vehicle by 6 p.m. on the same day. He did not return it, court records state, and the car was recovered several days later in Dallas.

The person who rented the car to Knighten said he did not have permission to use it after 6 p.m. on the evening in question, court records show.

However, the appeals court ruled there is "absolutely no evidence that Knighten operated the automobile after 6 p.m. or that it was in his possession at that time. The trial judge revoking Knighten's probation "abused his discretion" in the case, the court ruled.

In other cases, the court upheld the Deaf Smith County conviction of Ed Belling for delivery of marijuana. Court records show Belling's attorney did not file an appeal brief within 30 days after previous court records were approved and Belling confessed his guilt in the case.

The court also affirmed the Lubbock County probation revocation of Marie Toney, who was found guilty of violating a burglary probation condition by committing a subsequent burglary.

Miss Toney alleged evidence of the second burglary was insufficient to convict her of the May, 1975, break-in of Amherst Variety and Dry Goods Store.

Court records show, however, that Miss Toney's apartment was searched under warrant to locate clothes stolen from an East Texas store. At the time of the search, a Lubbock detective found clothes later identified as those from the Amherst store.

Miss Toney was placed at the store shortly before closing time, the court states, and the identification of the clothes in her apartment is sufficient evidence, the court ruled.

The appeals court also overruled Miss Toney's claim that the trial court erred in denying her request for disclosure of an informant's identity.

Religious Group Cleans Astrodome

HOUSTON (AP) — It's not that the Houston Astrodome was dirty, it just wasn't clean enough.

About 55,000 members of the Jehovah's Witnesses are to meet at the dome this weekend. They inspected the facilities and agreed it was clean, but maybe needed a few more licks with the mops and brooms.

Volunteers from the religious group swarmed over the stadium Wednesday, mopping the floors, dusting and scrubbing all of the seats in the big stadium.

Paul Stevens of Houston, a member of the Witnesses, said not only is the dome cleaner now, "but we will leave it cleaner than we found it. It wouldn't be right for the Witnesses to come and leave a mess."

HIRSCH TO STAR

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Judd Hirsch will star in the new ABC comedy "Taxi" in the fall season. It is set in a New Yok taxi garage. Hirsch, currently starring on Broadway in Neil Simon's "Chapter Two," will join the production in mid-July. He previously starred in the series "Delvecchio" and "The Law."

Grasshoppers Eat as EPA Waits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government spokesman said Wednesday that it may be a month before a decision is made on whether a potent pesticide may be used to combat a plague of grasshoppers in the Great Plains.

Meanwhile, the grasshoppers are chewing their way through millions of acres of wheat and pasture land.

But Roger Sandman, Nebraska state director of agriculture, said that he intends to keep pressure on the Environmental Protection Agency to get a "specific exemption" in federal rules so that the chemical — heptachlor — may be used to combat the insects.

Sandman was here this week in an effort to try to get the EPA to allow heptachlor to be used in this case.

Under federal regulations, the EPA must hold a hearing to determine how badly a chemical is needed before deciding to approve even the limited use of a restricted pesticide.

Larry O'Neill, an EPA spokesman, said that he "would be surprised" if a hearing could be scheduled within 30 days.

"Something will be done but we have to have a written request from the state before thinking about a hearing," he said.

Heptachlor has been "pretty much banned" in the United States by the EPA since 1975, O'Neill said. It is among a group of pesticides suspected as possible causes of cancer. Some uses of heptachlor, including the control of cutworms in corn, are still permitted but the chemical is supposed to be phased out entirely by 1983, he said.

Budget Cuts Likely Council Topic

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Saff

Cutting next year's proposed $71.9 million city budget may be foremost in the minds of city council members when they convene in regular session at 9:30 a.m. today.

The fury of the local tax revolt has focused on the city's budget and tax rate since the city began budget deliberations three weeks ago.

The Lubbock Property Owners Association is demanding that city ad valorem taxes be cut 25 percent, that the homestead exemption for the elderly be "substantially increased" and that the property tax on automobiles be removed.

The association backed up its demands with more than 8,000 letters to Mayor Dirk West asking him to have the 25 percent tax cut "ready for discussion at 9 a.m. Saturday.

The mayor and council plan to meet with the association's board of directors Saturday morning, but the meeting's tone probably will be set by council budget action today.

Another budget consideration will be a petition drive by the anti-busing group We the People to limit the city tax rate to 80 cents per $100 valuation. Currently the city taxes at $1.41 per $100 valuation.

The group hopes to put a lid on city taxes through a charter amendment election.

In addition to the 80 cent tax rate limit, the group wants put to a vote:

—Evaluating real property for tax purposes at a value no greater than its last sale price or its present owner's construction cost.

—Valuing agricultural land by its productivity, not its fair market value.

—Spending city taxes "first" on police, fire protection, garbage collection, water, sewer, parks, streets, libraries and public transportation.

Councilman Bill McAlister plans to ask the council to reduce taxes by $2.9 million by reducing the rate at which property is assessed.

Currently property is assessed at 60 percent of its market value, ut McAlister wants to drop the ratio to 50 percent of its value.

In budget sessions three weeks ago, the council tentatively approved cutting the tax rate by eight cents and raising the homestead exemption for the elderly by $2,000. The cuts would mean Lubbock residents would pay about $1.1 million less in taxes next year, but the reductions don't translate into significant savings for the average homeowner.

However, any tax cut needs to be accompanied by a program of educating the public about what's in the city budget, Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan said.

"Between now and August and September when the budget is finally adopted, there's a need for a lot of public education in terms of what the budget is for," she said.

If the public is made aware of what is in the budget, she said, it may accept the document as providing necessary services or make suggestions on what can be eliminated.

"I'd be pleased to be in a position to cut taxes if I felt corresponding cuts in services are what people want," she said.

the local level that there's not that much waste," she said.

Without public education about the city budget, there can be "no meaningful suggestions on where to cut," Mrs. Jordan said.

Although she said many citizens have approached her about a tax cut, "not one single person has suggested where they want the budget cut."

Pawnshops Lose CB Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission denied on Wednesday a petition by a group of Texas pawnbrokers seeking permission to sell the government-banned 23-channel CB radios.

On Jan. 1, 1977, the FCC prohibited further marketing of the 23-channel devices in favor of 40-channel sets that have higher performance standards. The sets with the larger number of channels are less likely to interfere with television reception.

Persons who own 23-channel sets purchased before the cutoff date may continue to use them, or give them away, but may not sell them.

The pawnbrokers found themselves with lots of 23-channel sets that had been left as security for loans. So they sought FCC permission for an exemption from the order.

Nuclear Device Detonated

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A weapons-related nuclear device with a yield of between 20,000 tons and 150,000 tons of TNT was detonated beneath the Nevada desert, Wednesday, causing a shock wave felt in Las Vegas, nearly 100 miles to the south.

"There were no problems," said Department of Energy spokesman Dave Jackson. "Everything went well." He said there were no reports of any radiation leak from the device, buried 1,800 feet beneath Yucca Flat.

The test, the sixth announced this year at the sprawling desert test range, was code-named "Lowball" and was conducted by the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory.

Jackson said venetian blinds in his office in Las Vegas, 95 miles southeast of Yucca Flat, "definitely rattled and started swinging" when the shot was fired at midmorning.

The test was the 316th announced since the United States ended atmospheric nuclear tests in 1963. Not all tests are announced, however.

KARI D. GORDON

Correspondence Supervisor Named At Tech

Kari D. Gordon has been named supervisor of the school of correspondence in the Office of Continuing Education at Texas Tech University, according to Dr. Michael Mezack III, director of Continuing Education.

She succeeds Bea Russell who has moved to Pennsylvania.

Miss Gordon received the bachelor's and master's degrees in education, as well as an administrative certificate, from the University of Arizona. She headed the Migrant Program summer school in Florence, Ariz., where she also served as an elementary school principal from 1975 to 1977.

Miss Gordon wrote proposals for federal grants, Title I and Title IV, B and C, which have been implemented into the Florence school system. The proposals concern the improvement of education for migrant and minority families.

She plans to review the existing correspondence program. "I am interested in opening new avenues to people who want to improve their knowledge or those working towards a degree," she said.

CARTER NAMES NOMINEE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced Wednesday he will nominate Stanley R. Resor of New Canaan, Conn., to be undersecretary of defense for policy. Resor, 60, has been U.S. representative to the negotiations on mutual and balanced force reductions in Vienna since 1973.

Forgetfulness Called Very Common Fault

HOUSTON (AP) — You forgot something again today? Well don't worry about it, even if you are getting up in years. Everybody loses an article, forgets a name, or comes home from the grocery store without one of those items on the shopping list.

Rosenfield, speaking Wednesday at a family physician conference, said some people who imagine they have memory problems really have nothing to worry about. Forgetfullness, he said, is perfectly normal.

"I forget things and I am in my mid-30s," he said.

The neurologist said common absent-mindedness can frighten older people.

"They are afraid of becoming disabled and put into a nursing home. But all of us have trouble remembering, and if someone forgets to do something, they are not less of a person.

"People don't become less intelligent as they grow old. They may become a little slower, but they are not compromised in quality."

Rosenfield said his patients have included professors who can't remember their lectures to older women who can get lost in their own homes.

On occasions, he said, the loss of memory can be blamed on a physicial problem, such as underactive thyroid glands, hormonal inbalances, depression and "a whole host of diseases that can be treated."

For those with a loss of memory and no physicial problems, Rosenfield said doctors can often help by making visual associations and getting the patient to maintain the same habits and patterns each day.

Mrs. Talmadge Gets Campaign Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fund-raiser for Betty Talmadge, who has divorced her senator husband and is running for Congress, netted $10,000 from more than 125 guests.

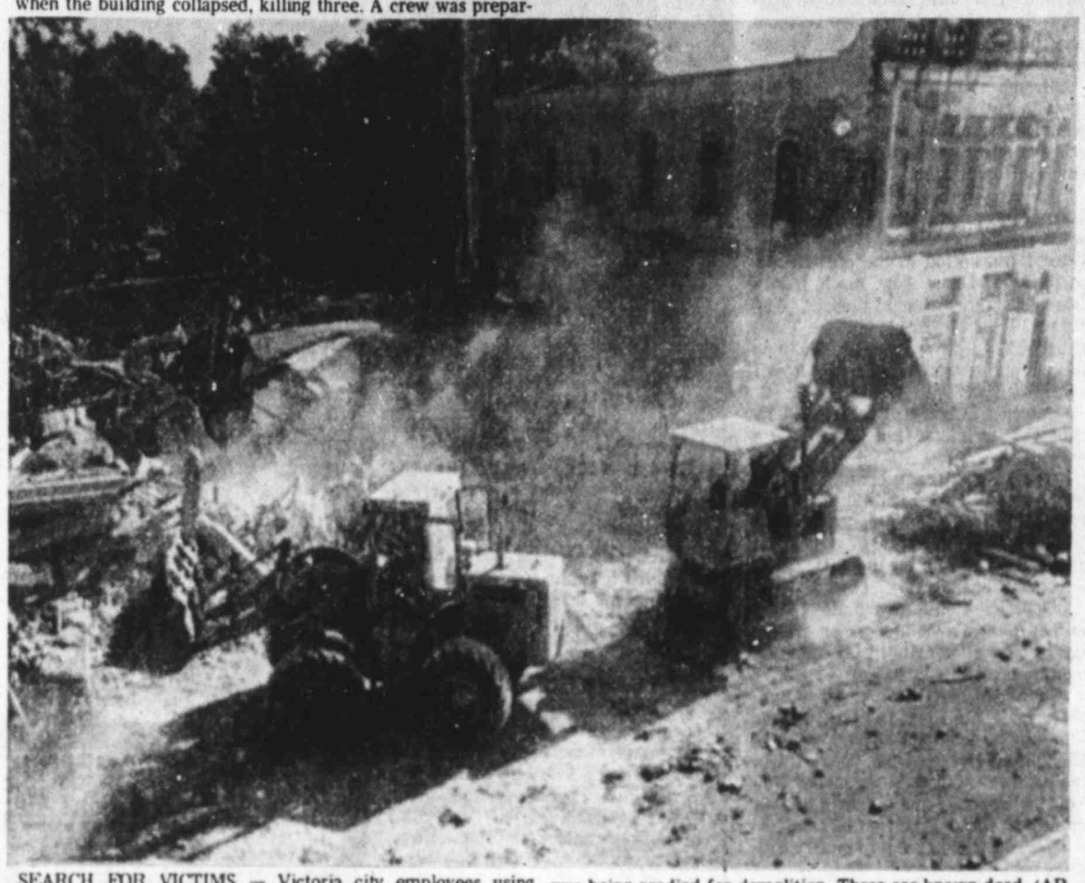

Among those present were Lady Bird Johnson, Lynda Bird Robb and Rosalynn Carter's press secretary, Mary Hoyt. Mrs. Talmadge is the former wife of Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.

XEROX FIGHTS SUIT

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two days after a federal jury in Connecticut found that Xerox Corp. had monopolized the office-copier industry, Xerox began fighting a similar anti-trust suit here Wednesday. The trial pitting the giant of the copier industry against Van Dyk Research Co., a small Whippany, N.J. firm, raises a new question about Xerox's share of the business — the area of high-speed copiers, which are machine capable of producing 4,000 copies an hour.

AUTO DEMOLISHED BY BUILDING — The smashed auto was standing near the old Denver Hotel in Victoria, Tuesday, when the building collapsed, killing three. A crew was preparing to demolish the building when the accident occurred. (AP Laserphoto)

SEARCH FOR VICTIMS — Victoria city employees using heavy equipment continue a search of the rubble of the Denver Hotel in quest of victims of the Tuesday cave-in. The building was being readied for demolition. Three are known dead. (AP Laserphoto)

Hotel Collapse Victim Got Wish

VICTORIA (AP) — Minutes before he died, demolition expert Weldon Johnston wished aloud that the wind would help weaken the gutted walls of the ancient hotel he was tearing down.

Then, as if on cue, witnesses said there was a great rumbling, roar and the 65-year-old Denver Hotel collapsed on Johnston, a Webberville resident, and three others. All but one unnamed individual were found in the rubble within hours of the Tuesday afternoon tragedy.

A police spokesman Wednesday said searchers still had not found the missing person, who was believed to be somewhere on the second floor of the four-story building at the time of the crash.

Ken Heaton, who was in this Southeast Texas city buying hotel scrap material, said he was talking to Johnston just before the cave-in.

"I heard this damn roar. Then, this piece of concrete came rolling out like somebody had dynamited the place," said Heaton. "I just turned around and saw that slab come down. I knew he was under it."

Heaton escaped without serious injury.

Besides Johnston, the bodies of two unidentified Mexican nationals, reportedly Johnston's employes, were recovered. Police, firemen and volunteers renewed their search again early Wednesday after a six-hour rest break.

Manuel "Polly" Villareal said he left the building's basement minutes before the crash. He had been buying scrap fixtures from Johnston.

"There was a rumble. Jesus Christ — just a rumble," he said. "The damn place just caved in. There was no time...for the people to get out."

Eyewitenesses said they could see nothing for almost five minutes because of the dust.

"Just wasn't my time," said Villareal, embracing his father who rushed to the scene to check on his son.

He said he had been concerned about the soundness of the building earlier Tuesday and expressed his sentiments to Johnston before leaving.

"I told him the building was getting awful weak," said Villareal. "He told me, 'I wish the wind would help it and weaken it a little more.'"

Jury Indicts Couple In Family's Murder

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Jefferson County grand jury indicted Ovide Joseph Dugas Jr. and Linda Burnett Wednesday for capital murder in the deaths of five members of a Winnie family.

The grand jury returned five indictments against Dugas and Miss Burnett in the slaying of Bishop Phillips, 64, a farm employee; his wife, Esther, 66; their son, Elmer, 31; his wife, Martha, 34, and their son, Jason, 4. The younger Phillips family was visiting from Woodward, Okla.

Miss Burnett and Dugas, once married to the Phillips' eldest daughter, Mary, were charged with three counts in each indictment — capital murder during an aggravated kidnapping, capital murder during the commission of a burglary and murder, according to a spokesman in the district attorney's office.

Criminal District Judge Larry Gist refused bond and set arraignment for Friday.

Authorities had charged Miss Burnett, 30, of Nederland, with five counts of capital murder.

Chambers County authorities had charged Dugas with kidnapping earlier this week after the bodies were recovered. Those charges came about since the family was abucted from their Chambers County home July 1.

Their bodies were found in Jefferson County, however, and a jurisdictional question arose as to which county should bring the capital murder charges.

That question was made moot by Wednesday's indictments.

Dugas has been held in the Chambers County jail.

Meanwhile, the five slain Phillips were buried Tuesday in Winnie under rain-threated skies.

The Rev. Guy Pry, speaking to more than 250 friends and relatives of the family in a small Methodist Church, asked there not be anger but only a thought of the good the Phillipses had brought to the community.

Justice of the Peace Mary Dugat, who a few days earlier had sat as a judge while kidnapping charges were filed against one of the two accused in the slayings, sang, "We won't have to cross Jordan alone."

The five were abducted from a small rural home the night of July 1. Their bodies were found in a shallow grave Saturday night. All had been shot.

Texas Klan Plans March On Capitol

AUSTIN (AP) — Ku Klux Klan members plan to march in full regalia on the Capitol next week if the legislature delays passage of tax relief measures.

"It's not the Negroes or Mexican-Americans anymore," said Gene West of San Antonio. "It's the politicians. We'll go after the politicians."

The Klan spokesman said his group wants to meet with as many legislators "as will have us" and said he already has talked with Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston.

"We want welfare cuts. We want property tax cuts. If the legislature doesn't give us something similar to the Jarvis bill (California's Proposition 13) then we'll come up to Austin to get signatures."

Ag Representative For China Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Wednesday that a career employee, William L. Davis Jr., has been assigned to the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking as the agency's representative in China.

Davis, who has been international marketing director for cotton in the department's Foreign Agricultural Service here since 1976, is expected to arrive in Peking in mid-July.

Officials said Davis will succeed Koy Neeley, who was assigned to Peking in November 1975. Neeley will be reassigned to Teheran, Iran.

Phone Rate Boost Decision Delay Requested By Bell

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has asked the public utility commission to delay a decision on the utility's $214.3 million rate hike request.

The company said the U.S. attorney in Dallas has questioned certain expenses used by Bell to justify its rate request.

"Although the expenses in question appear to be minor when compared to total expenses, we feel it would be inappropriate for the commission to issue the final order until we can assure ourselves and the commission that all expenses we claimed are completely valid," the company said in a statement.

"I'm more than happy to delay an increase," utility commissioner Alan Erwin said after the company requested the delay. "What we want, at least what I want, is a thorough explanation of what expenses are involved. And it looks like that kind of information should have to come from the U.S. attorney."

The commission was expected to rule on the rate hike by Friday or Bell would have been able to place its higher rates in effect.

Newspaper In Education

For more than 200 years newspapers have been used by teachers to add revelancy and timeliness to daily class routine. During the past few years, due to the continual quest to improve our educational process, the Newspaper In Education program has been explosive. Much credit is due to teachers who use the newspaper in a myriad of instructional disciplines.

Schools now participating in the Avalanche-Journal Newspaper in Education program number 31 elementary, 11 junior high and 48 senior high. Over 3,000 copies each school day used by nearly 8,000 students!!!

The Avalanche-Journal is committed to the Living Textbook concept and our Educational Services Department is ready to be of assistance to you!

As a participant you receive these services:

- Special school rate for newspapers used in the classroom
- Free varied, instructional materials written by teachers.
- Free guides, workbooks and manuals
- Free Living Textbook Conference conducted on the campus of Texas Tech University

Big Spring Mulls Bond Election

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The necessity for a city bond election, which would fund improvements to the local sewer plant, streets and parks, will be discussed during a public forum slated at 7:30 p.m. July 20 in the Dora Roberts Community Center.

The total improvements project, estimated to cost $3,815,000, would be partially funded with monies from the Economic Development Administration. The City of Big Spring would be responsible for providing $953,750 of the total amount.

Improvements to the local sewer plant will cost $1,750,000, and of that amount, $437,500 would have to be provided by the city.

"If improvements are not made, the water quality board can do one of three things: nothing, which is unlikely; it can allow no new customers and remove some of our present customers; or it can fine us $1,000 a day until the improvements are made," City Manager Harry Nagel said.

Mayor Wade Choate said that it is important that the city move fast on the sewer plant improvements. He added that the 1978-1979 budget is balanced and has been cut extensively.

"There will be no tax increase," he said. "But, there will be no surplus for matching funds for this EDA grant. A bond election may be the only alternative."

Swisher Birthday Set Saturday

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — Swisher County will celebrate its 88th birthday here Saturday with numerous activities including parades, a sky diving show, class reunions and a street dance.

The day's festivities will kick off with a kiddie parade at 10 a.m. An oldtimers luncheon will follow at 11 a.m. in Conner Park. Persons 65 and older or those who have been residents of the county for 50 years will be served free.

The new Swisher County library will be dedicated at 1:30 p.m., and the newly published "Windmilling," a history of Swisher County, may be purchased throughout the day at the Swisher Memorial Building.

The Amarillo Sky Divers will be jumping from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Little League Ball Park, and at 4 p.m. the "Windmilling" parade, under the direction of the Happy Jaycees, will get underway at Conner Park. Water polo is slated at 5 p.m. on the west side of the square.

For those who are more interested in seeing old classmates, several reunions have been scheduled during the celebration.

The Tulia High School 1928 graduating class will hold a reception at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Chandelier Room of the First National Bank. A dinner meeting will follow at 6:30 p.m. at K-Bob's Steak House.

The 1948 graduates of Tulia High will meet at the First United Methodist Church for refreshments following the "Windmilling" parade and will meet for dinner at 9 p.m. at K-Bob's.

Other festivities include an amateur rodeo at 8:30 p.m. in the Cobb-Wheeler-Mote arena; a street dance at 9 p.m. on the east side of the square; and a rodeo dance at 9:30 p.m. featuring Emil Schattel's West Texas Express in the show barns.

Childress Traffic Activity Reported

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — With vacationers swelling the amount of traffic on area highways, Department of Public Safety troopers stationed in Childress investigated 27 accidents in June.

Six of the traffic mishaps occurred locally, while the other 21 were logged in the five-county area covered by the Childress DPS office.

Sgt. Paul Clanton Jr. said that in addition to the accidents, troopers also made 1,127 traffic-related arrests during June. Of that number, 294 were local arrests. In addition, Clanton said 785 warning tickets were issued in the area, with 272 of those warnings going to motorists here.

Figures show five local arrests by DPS troopers for driving while intoxicated from a total of 21 such violations in the five-county area.

Amherst Sets Reunion For 1938 Class

The Amherst graduating class of 1938 will have a reunion at the Amherst School Cafeteria Saturday at 1 p.m. All former class members, families, friends and faculty are invited to attend.

Class To Mark 25th Anniversary

MORTON (Special) — The Morton High School class of 1953 will celebrate its 25th anniversary beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Arrangements have been made at the Morton Country Club to use the golf course, swimming pool and snack bar. Dinner will be catered at 7 p.m.

Childress Reunion Scheduled

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Plans are finalized for the annual Childress County Old Settlers Reunion, and officials say this year's celebration is to be one of the biggest and best.

Registration for the three-day celebration begins at 9 a.m. Thursday in Fair Park Auditorium.

Memorial services are set for 2 p.m. the same day, to be followed by a business session of the Old Settlers Association. New directors will be chosen.

The traditional parade will begin its way from Fair Park to the downtown area at 4 p.m. Prizes will be given in the float and riding club competition.

The Amarillo Gunfighters group will stage a bank robbery and shootout.

Following the parade 1,100 Pounds of barbecued bee will be served in Rotary Bowl.

Evening festivities throughout the celebration include a rodeo nightly at 8:30 and a dance to begin at 9 in Fair Park Auditorium.

Activities Saturday include an Old Fiddlers Contest at 1:30 p.m. in Fair Park Auditorium. The competition is open to both men and women.

Tech Faculty Artworks Displayed

MIDLAND (Special) — Work done by the Texas Tech University art faculty, entitled "Works on Paper," will remain on display in the McCormick Gallery of the new Midland College Fine Arts Building through August 10, between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday each week.

Oil Expenditures Planned

HOBBS, N.M. — According to Paul Thompson of Hobbs, division manager for production for Continental Oil Co., the firm plants to spend some $40 million in New Mexico during the next six months, with a good share of it due for expenditure in south eastern New Mexico.

Continental has 275 employees in the state, 145 of them under Thompson's management. Of that 145, all live in Lea County except 16, who are stationed in Farmington.

Included in the division is the entire state of New Mexico plus Arizona; one county in southeastern Utah; and five counties in Colorado.

Capital outlays in the state should total about $31 million with the primary amounts going for minerals projects and additional oil and gas production programs, Thompson said.

Of the 29 net wells Continetal plans to drill before the end of 1978, 15 will be drilled in southeastern New Mexico.

Women Working On Offshore Oil Rigs Upsetting Co-Workers

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — When they're back on land, the men who tend offshore oil and gas production platforms use terms like chicks or girls or just plain women. But out here in the Gulf they call their female co-workers ladies and try to watch their language.

"They kept telling me I didn't look the part, that it wasn't a job for ladies, that I wasn't that type of woman. I don't know what they thought I had to be — a two-ton Annie or something," said Shirley Eubanks, who has just completed her first month as a roustabout on a Sun Co. platform 160 miles south of New Iberia, La.

The hours are long and the work is often back-breaking on board what some call "time bombs" — the complex structures where oil and gas shoot up from wells beneath the sea floor, pass partial processing and on through pipelines to shore.

Until about two years ago the world offshore was a male domain and women were as welcome as a danger horn in the middle of the night.

The arrival of women in the confined environments of platforms and drilling rigs has caused confusion and consternation among many men. In an apparent attempt to retain at least some of the mystique surrounding male-female relationships, they call the women ladies but are no longer certain what that means.

Although most women who work offshore today don't consider themselves feminists, they do not deny that the women's movement was the key in opening up employment for them.

"I used to work in a bank where men tellers earned more than women. Then I worked eight years as a clerk for Sun. When I transferred to the offshore department and saw how much money those guys were making, I thought, 'Why not me?'" the 34-year-old Sillsbee, Texas native said. "I just want to be able to do the job and make operator as fast as I can."

She works 26 weeks a year, seven 12-hour days at a time and makes $750 a week.

"We've got 14 holes and 27 wells here, and Shirley helped bring us on line. She's a good worker and a lady," he said.

Many men — onshore and off — seem to feel women want to work on drilling rigs or production platforms because the men are sexually irresistable.

"You're out here to work, not to romance," said Liz King, the first of four women to go offshore with Sun. "After 12 hours in the freezing wind, you look like you've been shot out of a cannon. Why would a woman come out here and go through all this — for these Clark Gables — when she could have it so much easier at the bank?"

For ambitious women — as well as men — without college degrees, the way up the ladder in the Byzantine world of oil and gas production is to start in the field, paying your dues and doing the dirty work as lowly "worms" and "weevils."

But some men, particularly the younger offshore workers who are competing directly with women for places on the higher rungs, feel women may be getting boosts without having to do their fair share of the work.

"There's no way they can do the same work as some of these young guys I have here," said Pat Johnson, foreman on a womanless platform. "I have nothing against them, but can they do the work?"

Miss Eubanks — whose work involves looking after compressors, checking gauges, turning valves, replacing pipe and climbing 10 stories several times a day — admits that "lack of muscle" bothers her.

Miss Eubanks, King, Maxine Parker and Sherry Green work a shift alone with their male counterparts. Each has a room with two bunks and a private bath. The men sleep two or four to a room — contract personnel sometimes sleep six — depending on the platform. To the argument that a bed goes empty with a lone female on board, the ladies reply — put on another woman.

Mrs. Parker, a 38-year-old grandmother of four with eyes as blue as the water around her platform, said the spare time offshore can be harder than the work.

"We play a lot of pool and cards and watch television," said the former licensed practical nurse from Hemphill, Texas who went offshore because nursing wasn't enough of a challenge. "And you've got to know how to kid around. Living in such close quarters is for well-balanced people."

A brief, unscientific survey of five platforms showed older men were concerned about the possibility of sexual encounters and the need to watch their language. Younger men spoke more about the competition. All the men complained about having to climb long flights of stairs to use the latrine when there were women on the platforms.

No one knows exactly how many women work on the 427 manned platforms — out of a total 2,249 — in the Gulf. Atlantic-Richfield, Tenneco, Gulf and Cities Service employ no women. Exxon has five and Texaco has between six and eight, who work close enough to shore to go home every night.

The Marlin Drilling Co. of Houston has 11 women roustabouts among its 406 employees on jack-up rigs.

All company representatives said they had a hard time getting enough women to fulfill their affirmative action programs.

"We're trying to make contact with interested women through other employees," said Feagan Scott of Exxon's New Orleans office. "I can't say they're exactly beating down the doors."

Miss King, a 49-year-old Lake Shelby, Miss., native who practices French, karate, marksmanship and piano during her weeks off, said there is danger and a great sense of responsibility in offshore work.

"But it is inspiring to know you can help in some way to keep this gas flowing. I think by what I'm doing I can help the mature woman — and the younger ones as well."

Police-Fire Pay Scales Rift Aired

HOUSTON (AP) — Proposed pay adjustments for police officers and fire fighters have sparked disagreement between Mayor Jim McConn and City Treasurer Henry Kriegel.

The adjustments average 7 percent.

The $7 million annual pay adjustment package should be considered despite moves here and in Austin to limit or reduce property taxes, McConn said.

While he criticized attempts by some state officials to push through tax-reform measures hastily, McConn said local officials know taxpayers want frills cut out of city spending.

"But I don't think it's a frill to talk about an increase in the Police Department where we are having a difficult time recruiting," McConn said.

The crime rate here "is on a serious increase," he said.

McConn said the council probably would delay action on pay proposals pending final outcome of tax proposals here and in Austin.

Kriegel said the proposed pay adjustment would commit $12 million of the 1979 budget at a time when the city is unsure of next year's income from property taxes or other sources.

The proposal would increase pay and pensions for the city's 2,800 police officers and 2,300 fire fighters and increase pension benefits for retired personnel in those departments, Kriegel said.

Kriegel said the city's three pension funds for fire, police and municipal employees already are in need of funding.

He also said municipal employees will likely seek pay adjustments similar to those requested by the police officers and fire fighters.

In a letter to McConn and members of the council, Kriegel said the average pay for a police officer here went from $8,379 in 1968 to $19,491 in 1978, an increase of 132.6 percent.

Kriegel said the average pay for fire fighters here went from $9,376 in 1968 to $21,023 last year, an increase of 124.2 percent.

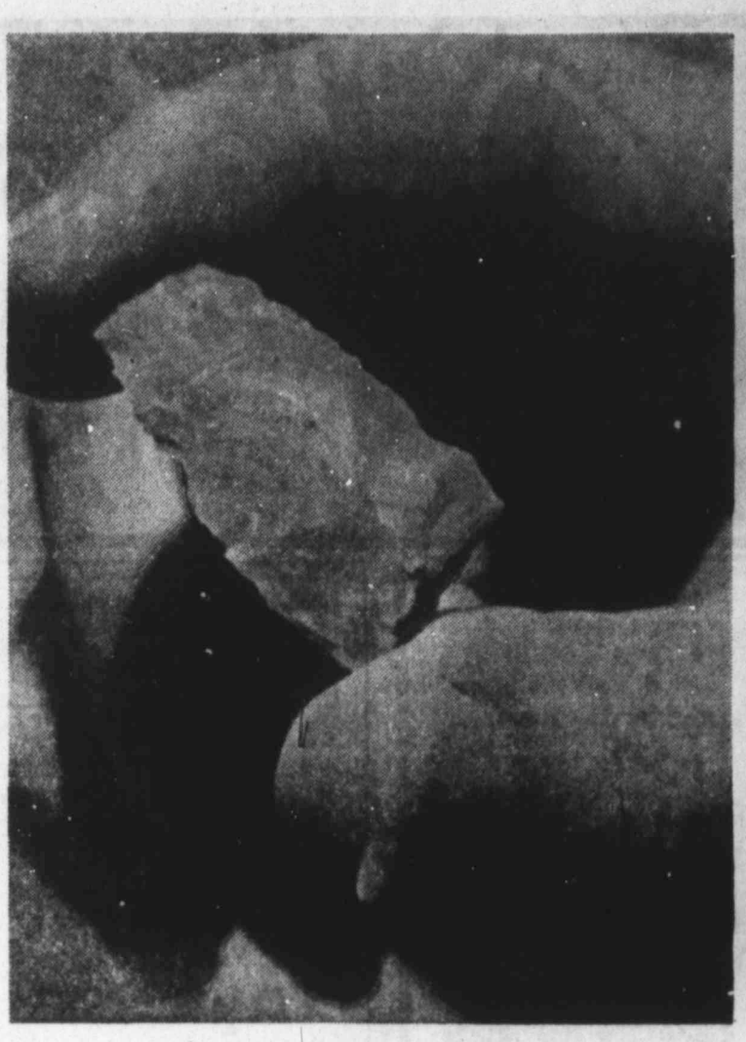

McConn said Tuesday that local groups threatening to initiate a petition drive aimed at setting tax limitations may be trying to "demagogue" the tax issue.

McConn's tax plan includes revaluing about one-fourth of the city's tax accounts in each of the next four years while the city gears up for a computerized revaluation program.

He said he would ask the council to approve contracts with several firms to computerize the tax system. Those contracts probably will cost at least $15 million but will enable the city to limit tax increases to any desired level, McConn said.

ACTING REPLACEMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alan Feinstein has been named to star in NBC's "The Runaways," replacing Robert Reed in the series previously called "Operation: Runaway." Feinstein starred with Jack Warden in "Jigsaw John" and most recently was in the film "Looking for Mr. Goodbar."

Dead Child's Mother Claims Threats

MARSHALL (AP) — Brenda Carr, accused of starving to death her 6-year-old son, was the helpless pawn of a man who buried her son in a pasture and threatened to kill her 7-month-old baby if she tried to leave him, according to her lawyer.

The 26-year-old topless dancer surrendered to Texas Ranger Glenn Elliott in this East Texas city Wednesday morning in attorney James Wedding's office. She waived extradition and flew with police to Lawton, Okla., where she is wanted in connection with the death of her son, Melvin Ward.

Lawton Police Lt. Ronny Ward said Melvin reportedly was locked in a closet for more than a week as punishment for not being able to say his ABCs and add and subtract. The child's decomposed body was found July 5 in a shallow grave, concealed by a rusty refrigerator, about 15 miles south of Decatur in North Central Texas.

A Dallas pathologist estimated the boy had been dead from one to six weeks.

Miss Carr's boyfriend, Larry Paul Gough, 36, is also being held in Lawton in connection with the same death. He was arrested in Wichita Falls last Friday.

Wichita County child welfare supervisor Jim Jones confirmed Wednesday that the agency took Gough's 10-year-old daughter and Miss Carr's 7-month-old son into protective custody last week.

Texas murder warrants were issued for Gough and Miss Carr after Wise County authorities discovered the grave. However, Oklahoma charges may take precedence since police believe the child died in Oklahoma.

Lawton Police Chief Robert Gillian said Wednesday afternoon he is not sure what charges will be filed against the pair.

Miss Carr's 9-year-old son was also in protective custody at an undisclosed location Wednesday. Wedding said he met with his client Monday when some of her ex-relatives from Houston brought her to see him. He said the 9-year-old accompanied her as far as Lufkin, where he was dropped off with other relatives.

"The police down there (in San Jacinto County) are nuts," said Wedding. "There were two friends of hers who picked the boy up in Lufkin and were returning him to a relative's house in Houston where he had been staying for a year."

Police said they intercepted the youngster and the two men on U.S. 59 at Urbana, early Tuesday, after learning that Miss Carr had arranged for him to be brought to her somewhere in the Lufkin area.

"There were reports that she (Miss Carr) was armed and dangerous," said Wedding. "That's all wrong. She had sent the boy down there to live to get him away from this guy (Gough).

The attorney said Miss Carr told him she had been hiding in the Houston area after escaping from Gough last month in Las Vegas.

"The day she got back, she started calling police and the FBI and trying to get them to go and get her 7-month-old son," said Wedding. "But nobody would listen to her. They just wanted her to come in and talk to them, but she was afraid to do that until she was sure her baby was safe."

Wedding said his client identified herself and Gough to Tarrant County deputies in Fort Worth and gave them the location of Melvin's grave.

"The little boy died while they were in Lawton," said Wedding. "She told me how but I can't go into that. It was vicious and horrible. "He (Gough) bought a shovel, drove to Texas and buried him. Then, he sold their car, put himself, her, his 10-year-old daughter and her baby on a bus and went to Las Vegas."

Wedding said Gough forced Miss Carr to work as a topless waitress in the gambling capital while he stayed home with the children.

"He never left those kids," said Wedding. "Anytime she mentioned leaving he threatened to kill the baby. They were there about 10 days when she finally escaped. A truck driver gave her some money and she caught a bus back to Houston."

The attorney said he arranged for Miss Carr to surrender to Ranger Elliott about "two or three days ago." Oklahoma authorities were notified and two detectives flew to Marshall Wednesday morning.

"All she wanted to do was make sure her kids were safe and then she was ready to give herself up," he said.

NOMINATION REVEALED

Brothers Strike Plea Of Guilty For Theft Of Federal Money

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Don and Clarence Gray, two Lower Rio Grande Valley union officials, pleaded guilty to theft of federal Manpower funds Wednesday, the first day of testimony in Don Gray's trial.

The pleas came in a complicated plea bargaining session Wednesday afternoon between State District Judge Harry Lewis of Brownsville, Prosecutor Joe K. Hendley, the Grays and Don Gray's lawyer, Tom Upchurch.

The brothers pleaded guilty to a two-count indictment charging them with theft from the Texas Education Agency and the Harlingen Independent School District.

That indictment alleged that on May 26, 1972, Clarence and Don Gray defrauded the TEA and the Harlingen ISD of $1,-525.

The brothers will go to Galveston Monday to plead guilty to federal theft charges arising from the federal Manpower program conducted by a union headed by the Gray brothers in Harlingen.

That case was moved to Galveston on a change of venue from Brownsville.

As part of the plea bargaining, the brothers' state sentences will be the same as the federal sentences and will run concurrently.

Sentencing on the state charges is set for Sept. 8 in Brownsville.

All further proceedings involving the Grays will now go back to Brownsville.

Other federal and state charges will be dealt with there.

When asked what prompted the sudden and unexpected plea bargain, Hendley said "the article in this morning's paper."

That article, written by Corpus Christi Caller reporter Bob Rivard, referred to testimony to be given by Eliseo Sandoval, another figure in the Manpower scandals.

Rivard was called to the stand Wednesday morning by Upchurch but refused to reveal his sources for the story in the morning edition of the Caller. He was backed up by Judge Lewis.

The Grays are among 19 persons originally charged with abusing federal funds in the Manpower program. The trial was moved here on a change of venue.

Indictments were dropped against nine of the 19 earlier this week.

After Rivard refused to answer Upchurch's questions, he asked Lewis to declare a mistrial but Lewis refused.

Gray's theft of federal funds charges arose from the federal program conducted by his plumbers and pipefitters union in Harlingen in conjunction with an anti-poverty agency.

Upchurch introduced Rivard's story as the first piece of evidence. The article was read silently by Lewis and Henley outside the presence of the jury.

"The article seems to set out in detail matters of testimony" Upchurch said in requesting the mistrial.

He asked the judge to make Rivard reveal "those persons named in the article who are unknown."

Lewis said, however, he felt the "effect of compelling the witness to answer would be compelling him to divulge the source and this is a can of worms I don't want to get into."

Lewis told Upchurch: "Unless you can show reason, I feel the court would not compel him to reveal his source."

The jury was brought back in and asked if any member had read the newspaper article. None said they had. The body was excused and Rivard again took the stand at Upchurch's demand.

Sandoval was granted immunity from prosecution Wednesday in the case of Gray and the nine others charged.

Sandoval pleaded guilty in Brownsville Tuesday to U.S. District Court Judge Reynaldo Garza on two charges. Assistant U.S. Attorney John Smith said further federal charges will be dismissed if Sandoval continues to cooperate.

Consortium Loss Argued

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' 1972 Equal Rights Amendment extends to wives the right to sue for loss of consortium, a Dallas attorney told the Texas Supreme Court Wednesday.

"In a tort action, the court is obligated to follow the common law rule that follows loss of consortium," attorney Ronald Wilkinson said. "Common law action was that the husband had the right and the wife did not. But the action now has been extended with the ERA."

Wilkinson represents Ann P. Miller, whose husband was injured in an automobile accident. Miller settled claims with the insurance company for $9,650. She then sued David Andrew Whittlesey, whose car collided with her husband's.

Consortium has been defined as "conjugal fellowship of husband and wife, and the right of each to the company, cooperation, affection and aid of the other in every conjugal relation."

A Dallas trial court dismissed the case, saying wives have no right to sue for loss of consortium since common law makes no such provisions.

The Tyler Court of Civil Appeals reversed the decision, saying the ERA amended the common law, and ordered the case set for trial.

Whittlesey's lawyers argued before the Supreme Court that the civil appeals court erred in saying that common law, instead of civil law, governed all marital property rights.

"The constitution provides that all marital property rights that are not separate property are community property, and laws shall be passed clearly defining these rights," attorney Harvey Davis of Dallas said.

Parks Bill Approved By House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation authorizing approximately $1.3 billion for more than 100 park, conservation and recreation projects was passed by the House Wednesday.

The measure was dubbed the "park barrel" bill by its critics. Conservationists, however, took particular satisfaction in provisions which resolved a decades-long controversy over California's Mineral King Valley, the Tocks Island Dam in Pennsylvania and the New Jersey Pine Barrens.

Approximately $650 million would be authorized over the next five years for grants to cities to improve or expand urban parks, with projects running the gamut from community centers to basketball and tennis courts.

The bill, approved by a 341-61 margin and sent to the Senate, amounted to legislative cleanup of a long list of conservation items that have languished in the House Interior Committee for years.

Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., chairman of the Interior's subcommittee on parks, chose to consolidate more than 100 bills into one package.

In the process, Burton was able to help out a large number of House members with projects dear to their districts. Burton said, however, that he had only selected the omnibus bill approach because it was the most efficient way to do the job.

Overall, the bill would designate 2 million acres in 12 national parks as wilderness, create new historic sites and recreation areas, designate four more frontier paths as part of the National Trails system, and add or study two dozen rivers for designation as Wild and Scenic Rivers.

Development funds and boundary changes were approved for scores of parks and historic sites established under previous laws.

California's Mineral King Valley — mostly federal forest land — had long been sought by Walt Disney Productions for development of a ski complex. Instead, the bill would add the valley to adjoining Sequoia National Park, with instructions to the park service to consider a more modest ski area development to serve Southern California.

Also in Southern California, some $155 million would be authorized for federal and state acquisition of privately-owned land for establishing a National Recreation Area and a protective buffer zone in the Santa Monica Mountains on the sea side of the Los Angeles Basin.

Since 1962, the Army Corps of Engineers had worked on plans for a dam at Tocks Island on the Delaware River, the last big free-flowing stream east of the Mississippi. The bill designates the dam site as a wild and scenic river, thus killing the project unless Congress takes some specific action to keep it alive.

For years, conservationists had sought federal support for preservation of the expanse of pine and marshlands of southern New Jersey. The bill authorizes $25 million for initial purchase of land

Parks Named For Pirate, Late Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — After much squabbling Wednesday over a pirate and a late senator, the House decided to add its names to a federal historic site and seashore park.

So honored were Jean Laffite, the pirate who helped out Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans, and the late Sen. Paul A. Douglas of Illinois, who played a major role in creating the Indiana Dunes National Seashore Park.

Wednesday, Rep. Keith Sebelius, R-Kan., introduced an amendment to a $1.3 billion parks bill, authorizing some $50 million for land purchases to establish the Jean Laffite Historic Site near New Orleans. That was approved but only after several members expressed shock over the use of a name.

Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., said the Laffite action should legitimize adding senator Douglas to the name of the seashore. The senator dedicated much of his public career to preserving the dunes on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Sebelius said if the House followed Yate's logic it would have to name the Louisiana historic site after the late Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana, since he was the champion of preserving Laffite's memory: "That's the history of this thing."

Rep. Phillip Burton, the floor manager, then stood and said, "This power of ours should be used sparingly." However, in this instance, he said, Douglas should be honored.

The House went along with Burton and adopted the Yates amendment for the seashore by voice vote. Now it's up to the Senate to decide if there should be a Paul A. Douglas Indiana Dunes National Seashore.

For-Sale Signs Banned In Long Island Village

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — To head off a feared exodus of white residents of this Long Island community, the village board has voted to prohibit the posting of for-sale signs in front of homes.

The ban approved unanimously Tuesday night applies to all temporary signs in front of homes or elsewhere in residential areas of the Nassau County village, which has a population of about 40,000. Of those, about 60 percent are white and about 40 percent are black, a much higher percentage of blacks than in Long Island as a whole, according to a community group.

Resolution Condemns Red Trials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved a resolution Wednesday condemning the trials of political dissidents in the Soviet Union, but some members continued to demand sterner action by Congress and the Carter administration.

The resolution, adopted on a vote of 380-10, describes the three trials now underway as "deplorable events," which could "impose obstacles to the building of confidence and cooperation" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It also calls on Soviet leaders "to seek a humanitarian resolution" to these cases and to work toward improving the climate in U.S.-Soviet relations.

While endorsing the resolution, which the Senate had earlier adopted, some House members complained that it failed to assert strongly enough that the some House members complained that it failed to assert strongly enough that the trials of Anatoly Shcharansky, Alexander Ginzburg and Viktoras Petkas violated the Soviets' own laws and the pledge of their leaders to adhere to the 1975 Helsinki human rights accords.

Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, touched off an unexpected parliamentary wrangle by demanding that the proposal be toughened with language calling for immediate suspension of U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty talks in Geneva.

Declaring that "nobody should have been surprised" by the Soviet actions, Ashbrook complained that the resolution's language was "little more than throwing wet Kleenex at them."

Ashbrook sought to add a demand for immediate suspension of the SALT talks and recall of U.S. negotiators until the Soviet Union agreed to abide by the Helsinki agreement, which the Soviets signed.

The House rebuffed his demand on a 277 to 120 vote, then approved the resolution.

While supporting the resolution, Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., said he also felt it "understates the case."

He added that Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, in the SALT talks, "had better be darn careful he doesn't sign an agreement with a country that has no intention of keeping it."

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said Vance "ought to be brought home from Geneva" and the administration should cancel any "high technology" licensing agreements with Moscow — both suggestions raised earlier in the Senate.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., who heads the U.S. Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe — the so-called Helsinki commission — said there was "no doubt that the Soviets are on a determined course to punish all the people who rely on the Helsinki accord itself to achieve their rights under their own government's laws."

He told the House that his commission plans to continue hearings on additional ways in which the Soviets can be made to understand the extent of U.S. displeasure with the trials.

"It is all part of a political process in which the United States is being challenged," Fascell said. "There are loud calls from many quarters for more action. We need to speak with a resolute voice, but we also need to be cautious so as not to harm rather than assist the cause of those whom we are trying to help."

N.Y. Bankruptcy Bill Delayed By Conferees

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees Wednesday postponed for a day their meeting on a bill designed to save New York City from bankruptcy.

The delay followed threats from Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to postpone the conference for a week because he was miffed over the House delegation's handling of a compromise proposal he submitted Tuesday.

The House members already have drawn up a new counter proposal intended to narrow the gap between the bills passed last month in the House and Senate.

However, a Senate source Wednesday described the latest House proposal as "not very good."

The bills passed by the House and Senate both provide the city with the long-term bond guarantees the city says it needs to put together a financing plan and avert bankruptcy.

The conferees are divided because of a provision in the House bill that would allow the city part of the aid for short-term financing.

Proxmire has said this would represent "a step backwards" for the city and increase New York's dependence on the federal government at a time he believes the city should be moving toward independence.

Congressman In Good Condition After Mishap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John J. Flynt Jr., who is chairman of the House ethics committee, was reported in very good condition Wednesday in Bethesda Naval Hospital where he is undergoing tests as a result of a mild concussion.

The Georgia Democrat suffered the concussion in a fall at his home in Griffin, Ga., on July 2. A statement released by the congressman's office said there were incidents of double vision and headaches which continued after he returned to Washington.

Flynt is expected to be released from hospital by the weekend, the statement said.

Four Killed In Three-Car Collision

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four persons were killed, including a mother and her two young daughters, when a speeding car that was being pursued by police crashed into two other cars in southeast Los Angeles.

The driver of the speeding car, identified as Kenneth Boyd, 29, of Compton, was among the four killed Tuesday night, police said.

Three persons were injured, including the dead woman's husband and father-in-law.

Boyd, reportedly armed with a handgun, was traveling at speeds up to 90 mph when the crash occured, police said. A loaded .32-caliber revolver was recovered from his car.

The coroner identified the dead as Deborah Hoyt, 23, of Los Angeles, and her daughters Kara, 3, and Kerry, 6 months.

Mrs. Hoyt's husband, Alvin, 27, and his father, Henry Hoyt, 53, were injured in the crash, police said. The driver of the third car was slightly injured but did not require hospitalization.

Police Detective Steve Watkins said the incident began when officers were alerted by bystanders, about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, that a man was brandishing a handgun in his car.

Police followed the car, watching as the man drove at about 20 mph, while waving and opening his car door to talk to pedestrians as he went by, Watkins said.

"Then he suddenly put his foot through the carburetor and zoomed up to 90 mph," Watkins said.

With police in pursuit, the driver raced through a red light and slammed into the two vehicles, Watkins said.

Housing Ordinance Vote Slated

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan's substandard housing ordinance finally will be put to a vote today when the city council convenes in regular session.

The ordinance was drafted last year at Mrs. Jordan's request, then resurrected in May following a Texas Supreme Court decision establishing a landlord's responsibility to provide housing fit for human habitation.

Discussed and refined at three council sessions, the ordinance would allow city inspectors to investigate tenant complaints of substandard housing.

If the housing is found to be substandard and the landlord refuses to make necessary repairs, a tenant may begin depositing rent in an escrow account established by the city.

When repairs are made, the landlord would be reimbursed from the escrow account. If repairs are not made, the landlord is subject to a $200-a-day fine.

Since the ordinance was first drafted, Mrs. Jordan has insisted the responsibilities of tenants and landlords be more balanced.

Although a landlord would be prohibited from evicting a tenant who filed a complaint, a tenant who stops paying money into the escrow account could be evicted.

But enforcement of the proposed ordinance may require additional staff which means more expense, and Mrs. Jordan said she may have to settle for a modified ordinance which wouldn't require more employees.

Also at the council's 9:30 a.m. meeting in council chambers, an ordinance proposed by Councilman Bill McAlister to curtail false alarms will be voted on for the first time.

The ordinance would require the registration of all alarm systems operating in the city and require the licensing of all Lubbock alarm companies.

Mrs. Jordan will ask the council to consider asking railroad companies to place signal arms at tracks which cross major streets in the city.

Recently two children were killed in a car-train collision at such a crossing on Quaker Avenue.

Mrs. Jordan said several years ago the council approached the railroads about such signals, but the companies said the signal arms were too expensive.

Council members are expected to have lunch with candidates for the legislature Thursday to discuss city-related legislation council members would like to see passed.

McAlister is expected to report on Texas Tech University's reponse to his suggestion that they buy the municipal auditorium-coliseum for $1 million.

In other action the council will consider a bid for the construction of a central fire station at 18th Street and Avenue K.

The present central fire station will house central fire department offices and maintenance facilities when the new station is built.

Since all bids exceeded the Community Development funds allocated for the project, the council will also consider using $12,155 in contingency CD funds for the construction.

Representatives of the West Texas Homebuilders Association are expected to appear at Thursday's council meeting to complain of a requirement that underground cable between the alley and a house be enclosed in plastic pipe.

The builders say the pipe is too expensive, but the city contends there were nearly 80 power outages last year caused when bare cable was damaged by digging.

Also today the council will:

—Hold a public hearing on an application for a $451,000 Urban Mass Transportation Operating Assistance Grant for the next fiscal year to help finance the Citibus system.

—Consider using $226,000 in Community Development funds to pay off a federal loan used to pay for civic center construction.

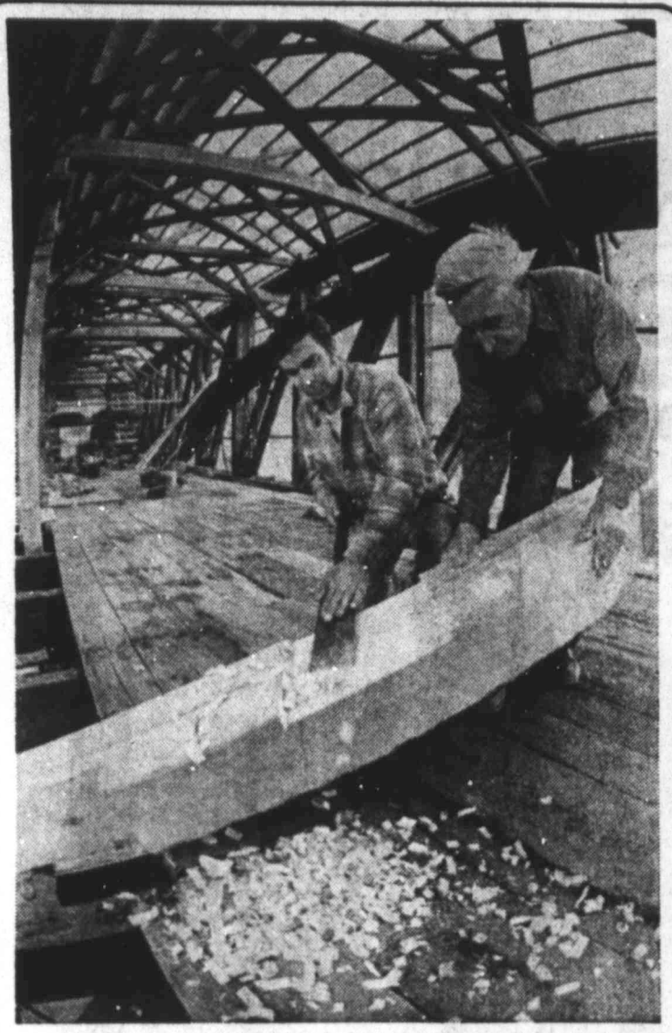

—Consider buying and remodeling a church building on North Quirt Avenue for use as the Parkway Neighborhood Center.

—Authorize the sale of $2.4 million in general obligation bonds on July 23 and 30 and August 6, 13 and 20.

—Consider asking a consulting firm to evaluate the efficiency of city employees and the need for each city job.

Bridge Doctor Tends To 'Patient'

SOUTH NEWBURY, Vt. (AP) — The patient is 112 years old and in traction, joints gnarled and twisted, frame sagging.

But the doctor, Milton Graton, says the Bedell Bridge is recovering.

Working with hand tools and aided by two assistants, Graton is restoring the 396-foot covered bridge that spans the Connecticut River between South Newbury and Haverhill, N.H.

Perched on a plank suspended alongside the wooden bridge, the 69-year-old Ashland, N.H., bridge expert is relaxed as he performs the delicate surgery.

The Bedell, warped by time, buffeted by floods and crippled by neglect, was "in terrible sad shape when I got here," Graton says.

While the most critical phase is behind him, Graton says, much work remains. A new roof is being shingled and side boards are being replaced. Some 64 vertical posts that support the trusses are being fitted and damaged joints rebuilt.

If he believed in metal, the job might be easier. But for Graton, building bridges of steel is "like shooting a deer in the zoo. There's just no challenge to it.

"If the state folks have a job and want metal, they get someone else," he says, stroking the spruce posts at the Vermont entrance. "This modern generation knows all about concrete and steel. When they see wood, they make a campfire out of it."

Examples of his work can be found from Canada to Michigan. In all, he has restored 22 bridges in 20 years. Five others he built from scratch.

His knowledge grew out of a job moving bridges for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. In the process, Graton began to make repairs. Before long, he wanted to do more.

Each sunny day, a few townspeople from both sides of the river arrive at midmorning to watch and wait. Graton stops work to show them newly restored sections of the bridge he calls "the masterpiece."

Beavers leave their home pond at the age of two, some wandering more than 30 miles before settling down. One marked animal in North Dakota traveled 148 miles before finding a suitable homesite.

Lutheran Leader Notes Shift Of Emphasis To Internal Self

CHICAGO (AP) — American Protestantism was pictured Wednesday by one of its top leaders as having shifted its focus over the last 10 years from the external to the internal — from good works to private religious experience.

The Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, who throughout that period has headed the Lutheran Church in America, made the observation in his final presidential report to the denomination's biennial convention.

Since Marshall made a recent surprise decision to leave office, the choice of his successor was a key concern as delegates gathered for the opening session.

The delegates took a first secret nominating ballot. The results were not disclosed immediately, but customarily they contain a host of regional favorite sons as well as more widely known candidates.

Other ballots will follow, gradually narrowing the list, until one candidate emerges with a majority vote, expected by Friday afternoon.

Among those considered likely prospects are: The Rev. Dr. H. George Anderson, president of the Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary in Columbia, S.C.; the Rev. Dr. William A. Lazreth, a departmental executive and prominent scholar; the Rev. Dr. James. R. Crumley, church secretary, and the Rev. Franklin D. Fry, a Summit, N.J., pastor and son of the denomination's longtime commanding leader, the late Rev. Dr. Franklin Clark Fry.

"God's people in mission" is the theme of the eight-day meeting, the top governing body of the 3.1-million-member denomination, the nation's third largest Protestant body.

It ranks next to the United Methodist Church of about 10 million and the Southern Baptists numbering 13 million. Lutherans, in several U.S. branches, total about 9 million.

Marshall said that when the 1968-78 decade began, the "public view of the churches focused on social action," while now at the end of the period, the main attention is on "persons being born again."

Those differing emphases reflect the two traditional poles of Christian concern — efforts to implement biblical principles in the world and the inner nurturing of the individual spirit. The pendulum historically has swung in cycles between them.

The church "has sought ways to hold these together" amid the common tensions between them, he said.

Citing the strains of trying to project biblical ideals into a diverse, contending modern society, he said "we live in a time when it is easier to believe in God if a person shuts out more of the world than the Bible does."

Airlines Open Merger Talks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Continental Airlines and Western Airlines announced Wednesday that they have begun exploratory talks toward a possible merger that would create the nation's seventh largest airline.

The two Los Angeles-based carriers had said June 1 that they were "exchanging information in connection with a preliminary joint study of a possible merger."

A Continental spokesman said the latest announcement meant that negotiations between the two airlines have now "gone past exchanging information. Now they're into discussions on whether merger talks should be initiated.

Western is now the ninth largest airline in the United States while Continental is ranked as 10th largest. A merger would push their combined operations past Dallas-based Braniff and place them just behind Delta Airlines, which operates out of Atlanta.

Both Continental and Western now fly as far west as Hawaii and as far east as Miami, although most of their routes are concentrated in the Pacific Coast, Rocky Mountain and Southwestern states.

Couple's In-Flight Wedding Fun But Not Binding

THEY HAD A WEDDING IN THE CLOUDS — Eric Sham, 23, and Debbie Robinson, 24, enjoy a glass of wine while he works on his music in their apartment in Palatine, northwest of Chicago, Wednesday. They were married aboard a Pan Am 707 by the flight captain while flying somewhere southwest of Greenland June 16. Sham learned Wednesday that the marriage was not legal. They plan to have another wedding in Dallas next month. (AP Laserphoto)

CHICAGO (AP) — Somewhere southwest of Greenland, Eric Sham and Debbie Robinson were awakened on the Pan Am 707 excursion flight by a stewardess asking whether they wanted champagne.

"If you have champagne, you should have something to celebrate, so we decided to get married right then and there," said Sham, 23, a waiter-bartender.

Sham said he and Debbie, 24, a waitress, had met three months ago and planned to be married in Europe after arriving on the Boston-to-Amsterdam flight.

"We just changed our plans. It was all spontaneous," Sham said. "The stewardess told the captain we wanted to get married and he obliged. The flight crew drew up something they called a wedding document. A passenger who was a notary public notarized it. Another passenger provided a Bible.

"Some passengers collected $11.50 for a wedding gift," Sham said. "Others made a veil for Debbie out of a pillow case and flowers from paper cups and paper napkins. I gave my kazoo to a passenger who played a wedding march. We had everything but the ring."

Sham learned Wednesday, though, that there was another thing missing for the June 16 marriage performed by the flight captain, David Gober — legality.

Gober said in Miami, Fla., that he "went through the motions" of marrying the couple "as a gag."

"Several other captains had performed such marriages on flights, but the company had informed them that they could not do so legally," said Gober. "So I told Eric and Debbie that I was not legally authorized to do it. They said to go ahead anyway. And a couple of little old ladies said: 'Aw, go ahead, captain, and marry them.'"

Sham said that amid the celebration and picture taking by many of the 144 persons aboard that he did not hear the captain say he could not legally tie the knot.

Debbie said Wednesday, "I'm surprised, but not shocked that we are not considered legally married. Eric telephoned his parents (Jack and Harriet Sham) in Dallas last night and arrangements were made for us to be married there some time next month. It probably will be just a city hall wedding with the parents holding a reception."

Sham said he and Debbie made a lot of friends at the Boston airport while waiting 10 hours for their flight.

"About 25 of them boarded with us, and from the bunch we picked Pat Honrath as best man and Yvonne Cabocir as maid of honor," said Sham. "Both are from Boston. All the passengers applauded after the ceremony and then watched the movie 'House Calls.' We had a wonderful honeymoon in Europe, traveling mainly in Germany, and were back home in a week."

Woman Cadet Injured During Boxing Class

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Department of Public Safety officials say a brain concussion, suffered by a woman cadet during a boxing session Thursday, has them re-evaluating some training practices.

Belinda Macias, 21, El Paso, one of two women in a class of 80 cadets at the training academy, suffered the concussion Tuesday during a boxing match with a male cadet. The match was part of the training program.

Miss Macias, 5-foot-5 and 110 pounds, was matched against Tim Mullenkoff, 21, who is 5-foot-8 and 150 pounds. Officials said Miss Macias received a blow on the side of her head and became "woozy." Within half an hour she collapsed.

She was reported improving Wednesday in the intensive care unit of Brackenridge Hospital.

Neither of the cadets wore protective headgear, a practice discarded "years and years ago" because of cadet complaints that the bulky headgear scratched their ears and turned sideways during matches.

However, Jim Robinson of the DPS public information office said Wednesday that the policy was being reviewed. He said the chief of the department's administrative division had asked for "physical training instructors to re-evaluate non-use of protective headgear."

Nebraska Should Seek Exemption On Pesticide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state of Nebraska is expected to seek special permission to use the banned pesticide Heptachlor to kill grasshoppers plaguing crops and rangeland, Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Larry O'Neill said Wednesday.

O'Neill said about 30 days would elapse after a state request before permission could be granted to permit the use of Heptachlor, a long-lasting pesticide described as a human carcinogen.

Military Handed Liquor Tax Evasion Warning

AUSTIN (AP) — The Alcoholic Beverage Commission has warned military installations not to try cut liquor costs by purchasing directly from distillers.

Administrator W.S. McBeath said the commission had received information that liquor buyers for military installations will attempt to avoid the $2 a gallon state tax by ordering directly from out-of-state distillers.

McBeath distributed a letter telling wholesalers and non-resident sellers that the commission "will vigorously challenge any attempt to circumvent" the gallonage tax.

He said Texas law "is entirely different and distinguishable" from the law in Mississippi and Louisiana, "where the courts have authorized tax-free sales to the military."

Assistant administrator Joseph Darnall said the question arose in connection with an Air Force installation. He said the liquor is used in clubs on the base, which generally charge low prices for drinks. The clubs must be self-supporting, he said.

"Inflation has hit them like everybody else," Darnall said, "and they are desperate to cut costs."

Asked if he could say which installation might test the commission's position, Darnall said the commission staff had discussed the situation with Ben Marcak, attorney for Randolph Air Force Base, near San Antonio.

Asked if Randolph disagreed with the commission's interpretation of the law, Darnall said, "Most definitely."

SOME WARDROBE

An entourage of 24,000 — noblemen with their families, servants and household goods — accompanied the Empress Elizabeth of Imperial Russia each time she moved the 400 miles between her palaces at St. Petersburg and Moscow. At her death in 1761, Elizabeth's closets contained 15,000 dresses!

SOUTHWEST AIRLINES — making a quantum leap in service this year with new flights in Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and three other Texas points — is planning to spread its wings even further soon both inside and outside the state.

Southwest plans to file an application in early 1978 to extend its routes to Amarillo and the Beaumont-Orange-Port Arthur area, hopefully in 1979, airline president Lamar Muse says.

And it hopes by 1979 or 1980, he told The Avalanche-Journal, to be operating a subsidiary company, Midway Airway, in the North.

That interstate operation would center on Chicago's close-to-town Midway Airport and serve 14 other markets, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Minneapolis-St.Paul, Omaha and Pittsburgh, he said.

An application for such service already has been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Southwest's expansion plans into Amarillo have nothing really to do with Continental Airlines' pull-out there, Muse said.

"We made that de Continental announce ping Amarillo."

Airport Bomb
Kills Worker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spring-loaded pipe bomb exploded Saturday in a locker room at National Airport, killing one Federal Aviation Administration employe, but the FAA said there was no threat to air passengers and no disruption of airline opertions.

FAA and FBI officials said initial investigations gave them a good idea about the type of bomb used but no clue about the motive for the blast. They said there was no warning the bomb would go off.

An FAA spokesman, referring to the 1975 locker bomb explosion that killed 11 and injured 70 at New York's LaGuardia Airport, said: "This was no LaGuardia."

'Fight Crime' Reward Fund Leaps Ahead

THE "FIGHT CRIME NOW" reward fund — announced Wednesday by a group of anonymous citizens who want to help stem the mounting crime rate in Lubbock — has now climbed to $2,880.

Robert R. Norris, vice president and general manager of The Avalanche-Journal, announced Saturday that the newspaper would add $500 to the fund.

In addition, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dregne contributed $25 and three anonymous donors added $355 to help swell the total to $2,880.

Norris had announced earlier that The Avalanche-Journal, along with a local bank, would serve as the recipient for handling the fund, which will be held in trust.

From time to time, specific rewards will be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who commit crimes against society, particularly armed robberies and assault cases.

Four citizens who requested anonymity to avoid the possibility of personalities becoming involved contributed $500 each to the fund to originally establish it.

The original $2,000 has been offered for information which leads to the arrest and conviction of one or more of the three persons who, without provocation, attacked, beat and shot 21-year-old Texas Tech student Jim Adair on Dec. 15 at the service station where he worked. The remainder ($880) will remain in reserve.

Adair only recently returned to his home in Richardson from a Dallas rehabilitation center, where he had undergone treatment since Jan. 17. Still partially paralyzed and wearing back and leg braces and using crutches or a wheelchair, he will remain home for about a month, after which a diagnosis will be made on his progress.

Further contributions may be made to the fund by sending them to the "Fight Crime Now Fund" in care of The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock 79408. Persons desiring to remain anonymous should attach a note when making the donation.

Monies received will be turned over to a bank to act as trustee, Norris said. "The newspaper in this instance is not acting or attempting to act as a law enforcement agent, but in the avenue of public service to encourage those who wish to do so to participate as citizens to help make Lubbock a better and safer place in

Solons' Recent Votes In Roll Calls Listed

Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were reported on major roll call votes immediately preceding the Fourth of July recess.

HOUSE

CONGRESSIONAL VETO Adopted, 244 for and 140 against, an amendment giving either house of Congress power to veto certain Department of HUD regulations. It was attached to HR 12433, a HUD bill awaiting final passage.

The regulation in question, authored by HUD Secretary Patricia Harris, directs that a certain portion of a city's annual community development block grant be spent on projects for low-and middle-income persons. Many congressmen object to that directive.

The constitutional issue spotlighted by this vote is what Congress can do to countermand executive branch regulation it dislikes. The executive branch writes thousands of regulations each year in implementing the general language of laws enacted by Congress.

Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., the sponsor, said: "The executive branch has used its regulation-writing authority not to flesh out the law but to undermine the law. It has used its authority to thwart the will of Congress."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., an opponent, said: "Congress is not a pitiful, helpless giant in its dealings with the bureaucracy. We have ample means and powers to see that the legislation we enact is implemented the way we want it to be."

Members voting "yea" favored the admendment.

Reps. Olin Teague, D-6, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, John Young, D-14, Robert Krueger, D-21, Dale Milford, D-24, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), did not vote.

BUYING A HOME Rejected, 93 for and 285 against, an amendment that sought to require persons buying a home for the first time to receive special government counseling as a condition of receiving an FHA mortgage loan. Such counseling would explain the costliness of home-ownership, in hopes, its advocates said, of cutting the FHA foreclosure rate that costs the government millions annually. The amendment was proposed to HR 12433, a Department of HUD bill awaiting final passage.

Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill., a sponsor, said: "Let us mandate prepurchasing counseling for first-time home buyer so they know what responsibilities go along with home-ownership and are not led to believe the only cost is the monthly mortgage payment."

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, an opponent, said the Mortgage Bankers Association told him "this amendment...would provide major disincentives for lenders and sellers to deal with first-time homebuyers" and that the amendment "could have devastating effects on the ability of young...families to purchase a home."

Members voting "nay" opposed the amendment.

Teague, Eckhardt, Wright, Krueger, Milford and Runnels did not vote.

SENATE

NEW YORK AID Passed, 53 for and 27 against, a bill (HR 12426) providing up to $1.5 billion worth of federal loan guarantees necessary to avert New York City's bankruptcy. The bill, sent to conference with the House, follows up the 1975 federal loan legislation that expired June 30, 1978.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., a supporter, said the bill would "preserve our national city...the capital of the nation in the very real terms of economics and finance, with an enormous concentration of the business, the culture, the medicine, the education, the lines of communication and the agencies of credit which represent the strength of the U.S. to the world."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., an opponent, said "it is clear to me that sufficient resources are available in New York City and New York State, from the various financial needs without additional assistnace from the federal government. Furthmore, I have grave reservations about the precedent we are setting for other cities..."

Senators voting "yea" favored the federal assistance.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, and Harrison Schmitt (R-N.M.) voted "nay."

Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., did not vote.

Woman, Dog Become Partners To Create Furry, Knit Fashion

By LOLA PRINE

WITHEE, Wis. (NEA) — Anne Holopainen has combined two interests — dogs and knitting — into one unusual business: spinning dog yarn.

Such a unique business calls for a special kind of business partner. The Wisconsin woman has that, also. He is a 7-year-old white Samoyed named Lovy.

Holopainen and Lovy have been in the dog yarn business since 1972. Lovy has been blind for two or three years, his mistress says. But the handicap obviously has had no effect on the growth of his thick white coat, which is his primary contribution to the business.

PROFITABLE BUSINESS — With help from her white Samoyed, Anne Holopainen has built a profitable home business. She produces mittens, socks, caps and sweaters — all from dog fur.

Of course, Lovy cannot supply all the fur his mistress needs. Holopainen gets most of her raw material from a kennel in Michigan.

The kennel mails bundles of fur, which she spins into yarn and knits into clothing. The clothes are then sold by the kennel. Her mittens and socks sell for about $5, caps for about $12 and large items such as vests and sweaters for $75 and more.

Holopainen originally had no idea of spinning commercially. "I thought I would be doing it just for myself," she recalls.

"I sold everything I had with me," she said, obviously surprised at the response.

Now she is kept busy without having to advertise, she says. Word of mouth is the only advertising that her knit garments need.

How does Holopainen go about her work? She — and Lovy — demonstrate.

She begins by brushing the dog's coat, then pulling the combings out of the brush and forming them into soft wads of hair.

The next step in the process is the carding.

That is done with two cards, which resemble large hairbrushes studded with tiny nails. She puts the hair wads on one of the cards, then brushes the cards against each other to straighten the fibers.

The carded hair is then ready to be spun. Vigorously pumping the foot treadle to power her spinning wheel, Holopainen feeds a continuous flow of hair into the wheel.

Spinning, she explains, is basically just twisting fibers very tightly. As she describes the process, the fluffs of hair emerge from the wheel as a long, fine piece of yarn.

"For knitting, this is a bit too thin," Holopainen explains. So, she uses a small electric wheel to twist yarn from two spools into a single thicker, stronger strand.

The finished two-ply yarn is similar to that found on skeins in the store, except that it is slightly more coarse. Holopainen says the yarn is easy to knit with, and "fuzzes out" gradually as a garment is worn. Her first sweater, now more than 10 years old, closely resembles angora.

Jury Told Of Blows That Killed Boy, 4

HOUSTON (AP) — Joey Willette's mother repeatedly beat him in the stomach to "make him tough" and hit him with a hairbrush to quiet his crying, witnesses told a jury here.

Her boyfriend, Terry Lee Clifford, 24, is also implicated in the beatings. He has pleaded guilty to murder and is awaiting sentencing.

A next-door neighbor and family members Tuesday told a jury in State District Judge Wallace Moore's court that either Clifford or Mrs. Willette struck the boy with fists, knuckles, a hairbrush and, on one occasion, with a stick, in the months before he died.

Robert Heinz, Clifford's half-brother, slammed his fist into his hand to demonstrate how he said Mrs. Willette socked the child in the stomach to "make him tough."

"If she hit me that hard, it would have hurt," the husky Heinz testified. "If he would start crying, she would thump him on the head to make him stop."

Patsy Riggs, a neighbor, said Mrs. Willette once instructed Clifford to kick the boy "once for me, once for you and once for general principle."

Joey was rarely allowed to leave the couple's trailer home to play and was prohibited from talking to adults unless he raised his hand, she said.

"There always seemed to be bruises on his head," Mrs. Rigg said.

Mrs. Willette told her once the injuries were caused by a flower pot she accidentally dropped on him, she said.

Dr. Kenneth Matto testifed Joey's heart had stopped beating, he was bleeding internally and bruises were visible on his arms, legs, abdomen and head when the boy was admitted to Ben Taub Hospitial.

A police officer told the jury Mrs. Willette expressed no concern when informed of the boy's critical condition shortly before his death. Instead, he said, she asked when breakfast would be served in the Jacinto City jail where she was locked up.

As he was leaving, she asked about her dogs, he said.

Nomadic Wheat Combine Crews Follow Harvest In Grain Belt

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

One need not look at a wheat field to know when harvest time has arrived in the Grain Belt. The highways tell the story as the large wheat-cutting combines towed by grain trucks lumber down the road in convoys.

And every summer, the men and women who make up the custom combine crews begin their nomadic trek, following the wheat harvest north from Texas to Canada as the grain ripens at the rate of 60-75 miles a week.

Year after year, the custom cutters work from dawn to well beyond dusk, subject to the whims of nature. They earn about $350 to $500 a month, including their room and board, living in trailers, converted school buses or motel rooms in numerous small towns.

Most of the cutting crews — collections of family members, college students and hired hands — come from the major wheat-growing states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska, Colorado and the Dakotas. Some hail from such faraway states as Mississippi. A Kiowa, Kan., crew even had a member from England.

"You can make a good living at it," said 68-year-old Frank Shuman of Laverne, Okla., who was taking his large custom-cutting operation north through Kansas for the 35th consecutive year. "My hands ask me how much they'll make. I say, if you can control the weather, we'll make quite a bit.

"It's kind of like a vacation. You get away from home and meet people you've known for 25-30 years," he said. "It's all right."

Some operations consist of a single combine and a truck. Others resemble a National Guard division on its way to camp.

Shuman's custom operation includes six combines, six grain-hauling trucks, a pickup truck, two school buses and two mobile homes. The buses and house trailers accommodate his crew of 12 as well as his wife and son Jim's wife to handle cooking.

The most recent U.S. Department of Agriculture survey, released in 1975, showed 3,400 custom combine crews in operation seven years ago, cutting wheat in the summer and sorghum in the fall. At one point of entry in Kansas this year, 500 combine crews passed through on their way south.

This year, the crews began working Texas wheat fields in May. Many won't quit working until the harvest ends in Canada and northern U.S. states in the fall. Then some crews work their way back south, cutting sorghum crops.

Farmers often hire combine crews instead of doing their own cutting so they can avoid making large cash outlays. Combines sell for between $35,000 and $60,000, while a grain truck ranges from $15,000 to $40,000.

"It depends on how many acres you farm," said Sam Mott, a Kiowa wheat farmer whose 875 acres were harvested by a North Dakota crew last month.

"If I'd invest $50,000 in a combine and didn't custom cut too, that thing would sit there all year. Besides it's hard to get help. The sooner you get it cut and the ground plowed, the more your wheat's going to make next year."

Whether a farmer uses a combine crew also depends on the weather and the acreage to be harvested, said Myron Krenzin, executive director of the Kansas Wheat Commission.

"This year the wheat got ripe pretty quick in the west, so I'd say half the farmers in western Kansas would have combines come to help them," he said. Farm size is a factor because speed often is of the essence in harvesting.

"If you only have a combine or two, it would take 10 days to get it out (on a large farm)," said Krenzin. "When the wheat's ready, they want to get it out because it could cloud up, and hail could come up in a minute."

The standard price charged in Kansas by combine crews is $8 per acre, 10 cents for each bushel over 20 bushels per acre cut and 10 cents a mile for hauling grain. Figuring the cost to an average farmer is difficult because of differences in the size of farms and of cutting crews and because crop yield may vary from field to field.

Bob Holland of Forest City, Iowa, head of a five-man crew that travels from Texas to Montana, said the low market price for wheat in recent years has cut down on the number of farmers willing to pay for custom work. "If it's going to cost too much to cut it, they let it stay in the field," he said.

AERIAL VIEW OF SPANISH BLAST SCENE — An aerial view reveals the extent of damage visible Wednesday at the Alfaques campsite on Spain's Mediterranean coast some 50 miles south of Barcelona. THE DEADLY TANK TRUCK — Two men examine the wreckage Wednesday of a propylene gas truck that tumbled into a camping ground at Tarragona, Spain, Tuesday setting off a fiery explosion that killed more than 100 persons and left more than 200 severely burned. Survivors Of Camp Explosion Recount Tragedy

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — Survivors of the fiery gas truck explosion that devastated a Spanish seaside campsite told Wednesday of horrifying burns and tourists scrambling madly over rocks and jumping into the Mediterranean to escape the leaping flames.

Hospital officials said 14 persons died Wednesday in the crowded burn centers in Barcelona, Valencia and Tarragona, bringing the unofficial death toll to 139. More than 250 were injured.

The Swiss Air Rescue Service, which visited hospitals where most of the injured are being treated, said in Zurich there were still almost 100 very seriously burned patients "who have virtually no chances of survival."

A gas tank truck carrying 1,518 cubic feet of propylene gas veered off the highway and plunged into a campsite 50 miles south of Barcelona at midday Tuesday, starting a fire and chain of explosions that engulfed the 500-600 campers, who were eating lunch in their tents and trailers.

The body of the driver was not found. A Madrid propylene transportation firm, Cisternas Reunidas, took responsibility and said an investigation has been ordered.

Minoca Kosta Korgen, 34, of West Germany was in a trailer with her husband and son when the fire roared over the camp.

"I ran to the sea as fast as I could," Mrs. Korgen said. "Then I came back and pulled my son into the water with me."

But somehow she was separated from him. She has not seen either her son or her husband since.

"It was something that if you were not there you could not imagine it. Terrible cries came from all around. I saw persons burned beyond recognition."

One 28-year-old German woman was flown to Germany for treatment, along with 30 other countrymen.

"I felt a heat wave on my back and instinctively plunged into the water," she said. "I swam away from the beach, towing my 8-year-old daughter who can't swim."

The woman suffered light burns, but her daughter was severely injured. Both were flown to Heidelberg and taken to a special burn clinic in nearby Ludwigshafen.

Some 30 West German physicians and nurses were flown to Tarragona, along with plasma and supplies, rescue agencies said.

A West German Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Bonn that a maximum of 90 Germans were signed into the seaside trailer camp and 73 of those had been accounted for.

A Dutch man whose trailer was untouched said he saw a "giant wall of flame" roll by and survivors stumbling out "with their outer skin burned all off."

Part of the hull of the tanker truck was found about 50 yards deep inside the camp. Its contents appeared to have spread in all directions, particularly toward the sea.

About one-quarter of a square mile, or about half the camp's size, was destroyed as the flames poured over automobiles, camping trailers, trees, motorbikes, and people. It left behind dozens of blackened metal tent frames with only shreds of burned canvas remaining.

Near the hull a metal picnic table set for lunch stood, with the tableware still laid upon it.

Identification of the dead, and even of many of the injured, has been difficult because of their severe burns. Officials said many of the dead would have to be buried without identification.

The majority of the bodies have been placed in wooden coffins and laid temporarily at Tortosa cemetery, health officials said.

There was still no official word on what caused the accident.

While police sifted the debris and ashes in the campsite, frogmen searched in the waters off the beach, where some bodies were blown by the blast.

The area is one of the most industrialized on Spain's coast, but it is dotted with dozens of sea-side camping areas that lure Europeans in automobiles into the sunshine for an inexpensive vacation.

A petrochemical complex is located in Tarragona and trucks on the single-lane highway rush by, 20 feet from the camp's cement block fence border.

The gas contained in the truck is colorless and obtained from the petroleum refining process. It is used to make polypropylene, a light thermoplastic resin used for packaging and coating.

Survivors said many families were wiped out. One Belgian woman pointed to a crumpled and blackened house trailer where every member of one family died except the youngest daughter, who was swimming.

One victim, a woman whose body was blackened by the fire, was found seated in a chair. A rescue worker scooped up the remains of another and placed them in a white canvas bag.

The Catholic churches in the area opened their doors to the steady stream of people and the rows of coffins, over which they had come to pray.

Clarity Required On Child Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payments intended as child support must be specifically designated in the divorce settlement to avoid tax problems, the U.S. Tax Court points out.

The court noted that the Supreme Court's 1961 "Lester" decision says that alimony is included in the taxable income of the person receiving it. Under that decision, unless payments are specifically designated as child support, they are considered taxable alimony payments.

"It is regretable that taxpayers, such as this petitioner, apparently only learn about Lester after it is too late to do anything about it, thus adding tax grief to domestic grief," the tax court said.

The decision came in the case of Carol Anne Zettlemoyer of Glenside, Pa.

In her divorce settlement, payments from her former husband were designated for the support of both Mrs. Zettlemoyer and their child, but not broken down as to alimony and child support.

Bcause of that omission, the court held that all of the payments were taxable income to Mrs. Zettlemoyer.

Solons' Recent Votes In Roll Calls Listed

Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were reported on major roll call votes immediately preceding the Fourth of July recess.

HOUSE

CONGRESSIONAL VETO Adopted, 244 for and 140 against, an amendment giving either house of Congress power to veto certain Department of HUD regulations. It was attached to HR 12433, a HUD bill awaiting final passage.

The regulation in question, authored by HUD Secretary Patricia Harris, directs that a certain portion of a city's annual community development block grant be spent on projects for low-and middle-income persons. Many congressmen object to that directive.

The constitutional issue spotlighted by this vote is what Congress can do to countermand executive branch regulation it dislikes. The executive branch writes thousands of regulations each year in implementing the general language of laws enacted by Congress.

Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., the sponsor, said: "The executive branch has used its regulation-writing authority not to flesh out the law but to undermine the law. It has used its authority to thwart the will of Congress."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., an opponent, said: "Congress is not a pitiful, helpless giant in its dealings with the bureaucracy. We have ample means and powers to see that the legislation we enact is implemented the way we want it to be."

Members voting "yea" favored the admendment.

Reps. Olin Teague, D-6, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, John Young, D-14, Robert Krueger, D-21, Dale Milford, D-24, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), did not vote.

BUYING A HOME Rejected, 93 for and 285 against, an amendment that sought to require persons buying a home for the first time to receive special government counseling as a condition of receiving an FHA mortgage loan. Such counseling would explain the costliness of home-ownership, in hopes, its advocates said, of cutting the FHA foreclosure rate that costs the government millions annually. The amendment was proposed to HR 12433, a Department of HUD bill awaiting final passage.

Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill., a sponsor, said: "Let us mandate prepurchasing counseling for first-time home buyer so they know what responsibilities go along with home-ownership and are not led to believe the only cost is the monthly mortgage payment."

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, an opponent, said the Mortgage Bankers Association told him "this amendment...would provide major disincentives for lenders and sellers to deal with first-time homebuyers" and that the amendment "could have devastating effects on the ability of young...families to purchase a home."

Members voting "nay" opposed the amendment.

Teague, Eckhardt, Wright, Krueger, Milford and Runnels did not vote.

SENATE

NEW YORK AID Passed, 53 for and 27 against, a bill (HR 12426) providing up to $1.5 billion worth of federal loan guarantees necessary to avert New York City's bankruptcy. The bill, sent to conference with the House, follows up the 1975 federal loan legislation that expired June 30, 1978.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., a supporter, said the bill would "preserve our national city...the capital of the nation in the very real terms of economics and finance, with an enormous concentration of the business, the culture, the medicine, the education, the lines of communication and the agencies of credit which represent the strength of the U.S. to the world."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., an opponent, said "it is clear to me that sufficient resources are available in New York City and New York State, from the various financial needs without additional assistnace from the federal government. Furthmore, I have grave reservations about the precedent we are setting for other cities..."

Senators voting "yea" favored the federal assistance.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, and Harrison Schmitt (R-N.M.) voted "nay."

Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., did not vote.

Woman, Dog Become Partners To Create Furry, Knit Fashion

By LOLA PRINE

WITHEE, Wis. (NEA) — Anne Holopainen has combined two interests — dogs and knitting — into one unusual business: spinning dog yarn.

Such a unique business calls for a special kind of business partner. The Wisconsin woman has that, also. He is a 7-year-old white Samoyed named Lovy.

Holopainen and Lovy have been in the dog yarn business since 1972. Lovy has been blind for two or three years, his mistress says. But the handicap obviously has had no effect on the growth of his thick white coat, which is his primary contribution to the business.

PROFITABLE BUSINESS — With help from her white Samoyed, Anne Holopainen has built a profitable home business. She produces mittens, socks, caps and sweaters — all from dog fur.

Of course, Lovy cannot supply all the fur his mistress needs. Holopainen gets most of her raw material from a kennel in Michigan.

The kennel mails bundles of fur, which she spins into yarn and knits into clothing. The clothes are then sold by the kennel. Her mittens and socks sell for about $5, caps for about $12 and large items such as vests and sweaters for $75 and more.

Holopainen originally had no idea of spinning commercially. "I thought I would be doing it just for myself," she recalls.

"I sold everything I had with me," she said, obviously surprised at the response.

Now she is kept busy without having to advertise, she says. Word of mouth is the only advertising that her knit garments need.

How does Holopainen go about her work? She — and Lovy — demonstrate.

She begins by brushing the dog's coat, then pulling the combings out of the brush and forming them into soft wads of hair.

The next step in the process is the carding.

That is done with two cards, which resemble large hairbrushes studded with tiny nails. She puts the hair wads on one of the cards, then brushes the cards against each other to straighten the fibers.

The carded hair is then ready to be spun. Vigorously pumping the foot treadle to power her spinning wheel, Holopainen feeds a continuous flow of hair into the wheel.

Spinning, she explains, is basically just twisting fibers very tightly. As she describes the process, the fluffs of hair emerge from the wheel as a long, fine piece of yarn.

"For knitting, this is a bit too thin," Holopainen explains. So, she uses a small electric wheel to twist yarn from two spools into a single thicker, stronger strand.

The finished two-ply yarn is similar to that found on skeins in the store, except that it is slightly more coarse. Holopainen says the yarn is easy to knit with, and "fuzzes out" gradually as a garment is worn. Her first sweater, now more than 10 years old, closely resembles angora.

Jury Told Of Blows That Killed Boy, 4

HOUSTON (AP) — Joey Willette's mother repeatedly beat him in the stomach to "make him tough" and hit him with a hairbrush to quiet his crying, witnesses told a jury here.

Her boyfriend, Terry Lee Clifford, 24, is also implicated in the beatings. He has pleaded guilty to murder and is awaiting sentencing.

A next-door neighbor and family members Tuesday told a jury in State District Judge Wallace Moore's court that either Clifford or Mrs. Willette struck the boy with fists, knuckles, a hairbrush and, on one occasion, with a stick, in the months before he died.

Robert Heinz, Clifford's half-brother, slammed his fist into his hand to demonstrate how he said Mrs. Willette socked the child in the stomach to "make him tough."

"If she hit me that hard, it would have hurt," the husky Heinz testified. "If he would start crying, she would thump him on the head to make him stop."

Patsy Riggs, a neighbor, said Mrs. Willette once instructed Clifford to kick the boy "once for me, once for you and once for general principle."

Joey was rarely allowed to leave the couple's trailer home to play and was prohibited from talking to adults unless he raised his hand, she said.

"There always seemed to be bruises on his head," Mrs. Rigg said.

Mrs. Willette told her once the injuries were caused by a flower pot she accidentally dropped on him, she said.

Dr. Kenneth Matto testifed Joey's heart had stopped beating, he was bleeding internally and bruises were visible on his arms, legs, abdomen and head when the boy was admitted to Ben Taub Hospitial.

A police officer told the jury Mrs. Willette expressed no concern when informed of the boy's critical condition shortly before his death. Instead, he said, she asked when breakfast would be served in the Jacinto City jail where she was locked up.

As he was leaving, she asked about her dogs, he said.

Nomadic Wheat Combine Crews Follow Harvest In Grain Belt

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

One need not look at a wheat field to know when harvest time has arrived in the Grain Belt. The highways tell the story as the large wheat-cutting combines towed by grain trucks lumber down the road in convoys.

And every summer, the men and women who make up the custom combine crews begin their nomadic trek, following the wheat harvest north from Texas to Canada as the grain ripens at the rate of 60-75 miles a week.

Year after year, the custom cutters work from dawn to well beyond dusk, subject to the whims of nature. They earn about $350 to $500 a month, including their room and board, living in trailers, converted school buses or motel rooms in numerous small towns.

Most of the cutting crews — collections of family members, college students and hired hands — come from the major wheat-growing states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Nebraska, Colorado and the Dakotas. Some hail from such faraway states as Mississippi. A Kiowa, Kan., crew even had a member from England.

"You can make a good living at it," said 68-year-old Frank Shuman of Laverne, Okla., who was taking his large custom-cutting operation north through Kansas for the 35th consecutive year. "My hands ask me how much they'll make. I say, if you can control the weather, we'll make quite a bit.

"It's kind of like a vacation. You get away from home and meet people you've known for 25-30 years," he said. "It's all right."

Some operations consist of a single combine and a truck. Others resemble a National Guard division on its way to camp.

Shuman's custom operation includes six combines, six grain-hauling trucks, a pickup truck, two school buses and two mobile homes. The buses and house trailers accommodate his crew of 12 as well as his wife and son Jim's wife to handle cooking.

The most recent U.S. Department of Agriculture survey, released in 1975, showed 3,400 custom combine crews in operation seven years ago, cutting wheat in the summer and sorghum in the fall. At one point of entry in Kansas this year, 500 combine crews passed through on their way south.

This year, the crews began working Texas wheat fields in May. Many won't quit working until the harvest ends in Canada and northern U.S. states in the fall. Then some crews work their way back south, cutting sorghum crops.

Farmers often hire combine crews instead of doing their own cutting so they can avoid making large cash outlays. Combines sell for between $35,000 and $60,000, while a grain truck ranges from $15,000 to $40,000.

"It depends on how many acres you farm," said Sam Mott, a Kiowa wheat farmer whose 875 acres were harvested by a North Dakota crew last month.

"If I'd invest $50,000 in a combine and didn't custom cut too, that thing would sit there all year. Besides it's hard to get help. The sooner you get it cut and the ground plowed, the more your wheat's going to make next year."

Whether a farmer uses a combine crew also depends on the weather and the acreage to be harvested, said Myron Krenzin, executive director of the Kansas Wheat Commission.

"This year the wheat got ripe pretty quick in the west, so I'd say half the farmers in western Kansas would have combines come to help them," he said. Farm size is a factor because speed often is of the essence in harvesting.

"If you only have a combine or two, it would take 10 days to get it out (on a large farm)," said Krenzin. "When the wheat's ready, they want to get it out because it could cloud up, and hail could come up in a minute."

The standard price charged in Kansas by combine crews is $8 per acre, 10 cents for each bushel over 20 bushels per acre cut and 10 cents a mile for hauling grain. Figuring the cost to an average farmer is difficult because of differences in the size of farms and of cutting crews and because crop yield may vary from field to field.

Bob Holland of Forest City, Iowa, head of a five-man crew that travels from Texas to Montana, said the low market price for wheat in recent years has cut down on the number of farmers willing to pay for custom work. "If it's going to cost too much to cut it, they let it stay in the field," he said.

AERIAL VIEW OF SPANISH BLAST SCENE — An aerial view reveals the extent of damage visible Wednesday at the Alfaques campsite on Spain's Mediterranean coast some 50 miles south of Barcelona. A truck loaded with propylene gas exploded at the campsite Tuesday killing more than 100 campers and badly burning more than 200 others. (AP Laserphoto)

THE DEADLY TANK TRUCK — Two men examine the wreckage Wednesday of a propylene gas truck that tumbled into a camping ground at Tarragona, Spain, Tuesday setting off a fiery explosion that killed more than 100 persons and left more than 200 severely burned. Some 500 to 600 campers were eating lunch in their tents and trailers when the blast occurred at the campsite some 50 miles south of Barcelona. (AP Laserphoto)

Survivors Of Camp Explosion Recount Tragedy

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — Survivors of the fiery gas truck explosion that devastated a Spanish seaside campsite told Wednesday of horrifying burns and tourists scrambling madly over rocks and jumping into the Mediterranean to escape the leaping flames.

Hospital officials said 14 persons died Wednesday in the crowded burn centers in Barcelona, Valencia and Tarragona, bringing the unofficial death toll to 139. More than 250 were injured.

The Swiss Air Rescue Service, which visited hospitals where most of the injured are being treated, said in Zurich there were still almost 100 very seriously burned patients "who have virtually no chances of survival."

A gas tank truck carrying 1,518 cubic feet of propylene gas veered off the highway and plunged into a campsite 50 miles south of Barcelona at midday Tuesday, starting a fire and chain of explosions that engulfed the 500-600 campers, who were eating lunch in their tents and trailers.

The body of the driver was not found. A Madrid propylene transportation firm, Cisternas Reunidas, took responsibility and said an investigation has been ordered.

Minoca Kosta Korgen, 34, of West Germany was in a trailer with her husband and son when the fire roared over the camp.

"I ran to the sea as fast as I could," Mrs. Korgen said. "Then I came back and pulled my son into the water with me."

But somehow she was separated from him. She has not seen either her son or her husband since.

"It was something that if you were not there you could not imagine it. Terrible cries came from all around. I saw persons burned beyond recognition."

One 28-year-old German woman was flown to Germany for treatment, along with 30 other countrymen.

"I felt a heat wave on my back and instinctively plunged into the water," she said. "I swam away from the beach, towing my 8-year-old daughter who can't swim."

The woman suffered light burns, but her daughter was severely injured. Both were flown to Heidelberg and taken to a special burn clinic in nearby Ludwigshafen.

Some 30 West German physicians and nurses were flown to Tarragona, along with plasma and supplies, rescue agencies said.

A West German Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Bonn that a maximum of 90 Germans were signed into the seaside trailer camp and 73 of those had been accounted for.

A Dutch man whose trailer was untouched said he saw a "giant wall of flame" roll by and survivors stumbling out "with their outer skin burned all off."

Part of the hull of the tanker truck was found about 50 yards deep inside the camp. Its contents appeared to have spread in all directions, particularly toward the sea.

About one-quarter of a square mile, or about half the camp's size, was destroyed as the flames poured over automobiles, camping trailers, trees, motorbikes, and people. It left behind dozens of blackened metal tent frames with only shreds of burned canvas remaining.

Near the hull a metal picnic table set for lunch stood, with the tableware still laid upon it.

Identification of the dead, and even of many of the injured, has been difficult because of their severe burns. Officials said many of the dead would have to be buried without identification.

The majority of the bodies have been placed in wooden coffins and laid temporarily at Tortosa cemetery, health officials said.

There was still no official word on what caused the accident.

While police sifted the debris and ashes in the campsite, frogmen searched in the waters off the beach, where some bodies were blown by the blast.

The area is one of the most industrialized on Spain's coast, but it is dotted with dozens of sea-side camping areas that lure Europeans in automobiles into the sunshine for an inexpensive vacation.

A petrochemical complex is located in Tarragona and trucks on the single-lane highway rush by, 20 feet from the camp's cement block fence border.

The gas contained in the truck is colorless and obtained from the petroleum refining process. It is used to make polypropylene, a light thermoplastic resin used for packaging and coating.

Survivors said many families were wiped out. One Belgian woman pointed to a crumpled and blackened house trailer where every member of one family died except the youngest daughter, who was swimming.

One victim, a woman whose body was blackened by the fire, was found seated in a chair. A rescue worker scooped up the remains of another and placed them in a white canvas bag.

The Catholic churches in the area opened their doors to the steady stream of people and the rows of coffins, over which they had come to pray.

Clarity Required On Child Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payments intended as child support must be specifically designated in the divorce settlement to avoid tax problems, the U.S. Tax Court points out.

The court noted that the Supreme Court's 1961 "Lester" decision says that alimony is included in the taxable income of the person receiving it. Under that decision, unless payments are specifically designated as child support, they are considered taxable alimony payments.

"It is regretable that taxpayers, such as this petitioner, apparently only learn about Lester after it is too late to do anything about it, thus adding tax grief to domestic grief," the tax court said.

In her divorce settlement, payments from her former husband were designated for the support of both Mrs. Zettlemoyer and their child, but not broken down as to alimony and child support.

Bcause of that omission, the court held that all of the payments were taxable income to Mrs. Zettlemoyer.

Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. Ray D. Hietikko of Wolfforth on the birth of a son weighing 8 pounds 4 ounces at 7:40 a.m. Wednesday in West Texas Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Danny Tims of 221 Arnold Drive on the birth of a daughter weighing 6 pounds 13 ounces at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in University Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Galvan of 2729 E. Third St. on birth of a son weighing 7 pounds one-half ounce at 10:25 p.m. Tuesday in West Texas Hospital.

Birds Explode Past A's

The Lubbock Cardinals parlayed six hits and six errors into an eight-run second inning and hung on to defeat the Floydada A's 9-5 in the opening game of the NBC west region tournament Wednesday.

The Brownfield Astros met the Towndraw Brewers in the late game at Mackenzie Park.

Today's action matches four Lubbock teams with the Z's facing the Indians at 6:30 and the Chaps meeting the Texans at 8 p.m.

Jim Wells opened the Cardinals' eight-run inning with a single and later added an RBI-double to the explosion. Rick Powell, Larry Horn, David Arterburn and Donald Ewing also contributed hits during the frame, which featured three miscues by losing pitcher David Rush and three more by shortstop Todd Vickers.

Held hitless for three innings by Gene Segrest, Floydada took advantage of two walks and an error plus Freddy Longoria's single and Steve Westbrook's double to tally four runs in the fourth and the game had only two serious threats after that.

The A's made 10 errors behind Rush and Longoria but Cardinal pitchers Segrest, Powell and Horn surrendered 10 walks to tighten the contest.

Japanese Golfer Tops First-Round Standings

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Some late putting heroics — 20 and 30-footers to save par on the last two holes — enabled Isao Aoki to avoid the disasters that struck down the American stars and staked the Japanese veteran to a one-stroke lead Wednesday in the first round of the 107th British Open Golf Championship.

"I was concentrating so hard I got a headache," the 35-year-old Aoki said through an interpreter after he'd completed his 4-under-par 68.

"Yeah, well, the Orientals are into that kind of thing," observed Tom Weiskopf. "I'm not intellectual enough for that. The only thing that gives me headaches are double bogeys."

And he made one of those, a 6 on the treacherous 17th, thus becoming the major victim of the famed "Road Hole" on the historic Old Course at St. Andrews, the birthplace and cradle of golf.

That double bogey knocked Weiskopf out of sole possession of the lead and sent him stumbling back into a tie for second at 69 with Ray Floyd and a couple of former British Open runners-up, Australian Jack Newton and Spain's 21-year-old Severiano Ballesteros.

Ballesteros, the leading player in Europe for the past couple of years and winner of the Greensboro Open early this season, had a share of the lead until he, too, bogeyed the 17th.

"It may be a bogey to you, but it's a par to me," quipped Ballesteros.

"It's a hole you can't shoot at," said defending champion Tom Watson, who also bogeyed the hole on the way to a 73.

"You play it as about a par-4½," said Jack Nicklaus, who played two great shots to the green and then 3-putted for bogey, missing a three-footer. Nicklaus, with Watson a pre-tournament co-favorite to take this ancient title, shot a 71 in his quest for a 15th major professional championship.

"The wind kicked up just about the time we started," said Nicklaus, who played in a chilly, blustery afternoon wind. The morning starters — including Aoki and most of the other leaders — had almost ideal conditions, mild temperatures, overcast skies and practically no wind.

"The fellows who got out early were pretty fortunate," Nicklaus said. "The golf course was considerably tougher this afternoon."

ISAO AOKI

Asked for his assessment of Aoki, winner of 22 Japanese professional tournaments including three this year, Nicklaus replied: "He's a good player. I've played with him several times."

Then he paused and allowed himself a smile.

"I don't know how good a wind player he is. But we'll sure find out."

Aoki and the other leaders are scheduled to play their second round in the afternoon when the winds are usually at their worst on Scotland's Eastern coast.

"When normal St. Andrews conditions prevail, there's a lot of golf to be played on the Old Course," warned Nicklaus, who claimed his second British Open title at this centuries-old layout back in 1970.

Arnold Palmer, the legendary 48-year-old who helped re-establish the British Open as one of the world's big four titles with his victories in 1961 and 1962, dropped a five-foot birdie putt on the final hole for a 71 that left him very much in contention.

Tom Kite matched par 72. With Watson at 73 were fellow Americans Johnny Miller, George Burns and Andy Bean, winner of three of his last five starts. John Schroeder shot 74. So did South African Gary Player, the Masters champion.

Lee Trevino, twice a British Open winner and expected to be a prime contender again this year, Hale Irwin and Ed Sneed struggled to 75s. Bill Kratzert and Jerry Pate shot 76s.

So did PGA champion Lanny Wadkins.

Golf: Game For Elders?

TOKYO (AP) — Golf is most suitable in arresting the physical and mental decline accompanying old age, a noted Japanese geriatrician says.

Dr. Konosuke Nishinura, 64, who operates a geriatic clinic at Kyoto in central Japan, will report his theory at the International Congress of Fitness Research at Johannesburg July 15-19. He will be a member of a 10-man Japanese delegation to the congress. d

"I have collected during the past several years data showing several hundred people in their 40s and older who are 5 to 10 years younger physically than average people of their age, stay healthier and prolong life accordingly," he said in an interview.

"Jogging is also recommendable, but it is apt to be a little strenuous for older people and less freshening mentally because of its monotonousness," he said.

In addition to his clinic work, Nishinura teaches health and physical theory at Doshisha University in Kyoto.

Aged patients visiting his clinic are told to go on a diet and then to go out and play golf or do other exercise, instead of taking a rest cure, if their heart tests turn out satisfactorily.

"This theory of mine is paying off. You will find many of my patients look much younger than their age," Nishinura said.

"Why golf? Well, it's the kind of exercise that will help older people arrest, if not cure, their old age illness — rheumatism, high blood pressure, heart or liver ailments which require two to three hours of mild exercise a day to improve circulatory function and the flow of blood to aging tissues.

"Old age illnesses usually stem from a lavish diet and not enough exercise," he said.

In a recent test of 493 amateur golfers whose ages averaged 48.8, their physical fitness was that of average people of 40 to 44 years old, he said.

After a round of golf, their fitness further improved to match that of average men of 35 to 39 years of age, he added.

Japan, where the first golf course was built in Kobe in 1924, now has more than 1,300 golf courses across the country with an estimated 8 million to 10 million people playing golf.

Cowens Enjoys Life Away From Basketball

COLD SPRING, Ky. (AP) — Boston Celtics center Dave Cowens is helping to put up a barn at his family's home here, and he's loving every minute of it.

The task is a welcome diversion from the world of basketball, which last season brought him a lot of headaches.

"This is my pleasure," said Cowens, who was married last April. "This is what I enjoy. I can work hard, sweat and enjoy some beers with my friends."

Cowens said he's been working on the project along with some friends from 6:30 a.m. until "the bugs get too bad" at night.

The all-star's days at his family's home are numbered, since next week he begins five weeks of basketball camp near Boston.

"The clinics refresh my fundamentals," he said.

Last season was not a pleasant one for the 30-year-old center for the Celtics, who finished with a 32-50 record and failed to make the playoffs.

"You know what? It's the first time I've ever been on a losing team, high school, college or pro," said Cowens, who played his scholastic career at nearby Newport Catholic High School.

Cowens said the discord in the Celtics' locker room last year prompted him to tell Red Auerbach, the club's vice president and general manager, that the infighting "embarrassed" him.

"So much went on in the locker room it made me sick. I told Red I ain't going though that again," said Cowens.

He said he planned to "wait and see what happens" with Auerbach's future before deciding about playing outside Boston. Auerbach said Tuesday he is negotiating with the New York Knicks and an undisclosed team, besides Boston, for his services next season.

The Celtics, meanwhile, have undergone several changes including a new owner, John Y. Brown of Louisville, Ky., and a six-player trade that brought Marvin Barnes, Nate Archibald and Billy Knight from the Buffalo franchise.

"I've played with all those players," said Cowens. "They're nice guys. They're good professionals."

Cowens, however, is wondering how all this will affect the Celtics' system.

"Everybody on the Celtics has a role. No one person is important, it's a team concept. It takes a while to learn.

"You've got to build around defense. You've got to have tough, hard-nosed defensive players to build a championship team. Look at Phoenix with Walter Davis and Paul Westphal. They win, but they don't win big. We can't have that on our team," Cowens said.

Cowens said the Boston news media "bent over backwards to make excuses for us" last season. "They won't be so sympathetic this year."

Enthusiasm, Lasorda Help NL

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Once more, with feeling, the National League All-Stars have embarrassed the Americans in their mid-season collision and feeling might really have something to do with it.

"You never saw so much enthusiasm by our players," said NL Manager Tom Lasorda after Tuesday night's 7-3 National League victory. "They wanted to win. They were pulling for one another, patting each other on the back."

Lasorda, who directs baseball's huggingest team, the Los Angeles Dodgers, during the regular season, believes togetherness gives a team an edge.

"It's like a man in the stands shouted at me after the game," said Steve Garvey, who drilled a pair of clutch hits and earned his second All-Star Most Valuable Player Award.

"He said, 'I love you tonight, but I'll hate you tomorrow.'" Garvey chuckled. "I told him, 'As long as you love me tonight.'"

There was plenty about Garvey to love in the 49th All-Star game, if you were rooting for the National League as most of the crowd of 51,549 in San Diego Stadium seemed to be. He stroked the two-run single that tied the game at 3-3 in the third inning and then walloped the leadoff triple that ignited the Nationals' four-run winning rally in the eighth.

It all added up to a seventh straight victory for the NL and 15th in the last 16 games. Lasorda grinned at the record which now shows 20 NL victories in the last 22 games and a 30-18-1 lead for the series that began in 1933.

"I didn't want to be the manager who lost to the American League," he said.

Actually, the Americans got off well in this game, jumping into a 3-0 lead as Rod Carew ripped a record two triples, leading off the first and third innings. George Brett doubled him home in the first and then scored on a sacrifice fly. In the third, Brett delivered Carew again, with another sacrifice fly.

"I thought we had them early," said Brett. "I really thought we had a chance to win it."

But just as suddenly as the Americans had constructed their lead, it disappeared in a sea of wildness by AL starter Jim Palmer, who walked three straight batters to force in one run and then surrendered Garvey's two-run single that tied the score.

"I had pine tar all over my hand after hitting in the top of the third," Palmer said. "I had trouble gripping the ball."

The early deficit hardly disturbed the NL Stars.

"We were three runs behind and that made the game even," said Bruce Sutter, who was the winning pitcher following the eighth inning rally.

"Honestly," said Lasorda, "I thought we would score a lot. We have an outstanding group of offensive ballplayers and I knew they would come back."

And, of course, they did. Palmer's control problems and Garvey's clutch single tied the score. Then it seemed a matter of time until the NL found a way to win. That came in the eighth with a flurry on hits touched off by Garvey's triple.

So the American League wound up losing again, a feeling that has been distressingly familiar for the past two decades. Manager Billy Martin was asked why his league keeps coming up short in these games.

"No," he said. "If I had an idea, they wouldn't have won."

who was 3 under par at the turn then lost it all. He dropped 7 shots to par over the last six holes and played the back nine in a fat 43.

Hubert Green had similar difficulties. He required 41 strokes over the last nine and shot 78.

The story of the day's play was primarily, the saga of 17, the "Road Hole," 461 yards into the wind with a corner of the Old Course Hotel intruding into the fairway. It also has a road biting into the back right of the green, heavy rough on the left, out of bounds on the right, the deep, yawning "Road Bunker" in front, the green sloping sharply away and the pin tucked behind a mound on the front of the putting surface.

"You simply can't shoot at the hole," Watson said. "The way the green slopes, and where they had the pin today, you're probably better off playing your second shot to the left of the green and taking your chances on trying to chip close for a par."

Birdies apparently, are out of the question.

The entire field of 155 of the world's best shotmakers was unable to make one. Bogeys, double and triple bogeys outnumbered pars by more than 2-1.

And it was that hole that knocked Weiskopf out of the lead.

"Look at it this way," he shrugged. "Maybe I was lucky to get away with a 6."

Weiskopf had gone to 6 under par and was a 2-stroke leader through 10 holes.

He bogeyed the 15th when his tee shot came to rest on an old divot.

But the tall American, the 1973 British Open champion and winner of the Doral Open earlier this season, still held the lead.

Until he got to the dreaded 17th.

On the tee, over the ball, he twice was distracted by the flow of the gallery across an adjacent fairway.

"They are all nice and polite and they're very knowledgable about golf and I'm not complaining about the galleries," Weiskopf disclaimed. "But it looked like a subway at rush hour out there.

You know how it is when you run into somebody on the street and he goes this way and you go that way and you keep getting in front of each other and you're standing there trying to dodge each other?

"Well, that's what it looked like."

In any event, Weiskopf said his concentration was broken.

"I just couldn't get my mind on what I was doing," he said.

Finally, he pulled-hooked his drive far, far to the left. His second shot found knee-deep, wiry rough and he was faced with an impossible shot.

"You hit 10 balls out of there and five will go where mine did, in front of the green, and five will go on the road," he said. His fourth shot ran some 25 feet beyond the cup and he 2-putted from there for the disastrous double bogey.

"You could say I let the round get away from me," said Weiskopf, who appeared calm and composed and displayed none of the temperament that has marked much of his career.

"It's a little disappointing. But just because I finished poorly that doesn't mean I'm out of the golf tournament. I've had a lot of finishes like that before and gone on to win the golf tournament.

"I just played two bad holes. I played th rest of them as well, better, than I've ever played here before. There's a lot of golf left. Like any major tournament, it'll go down to the last nine holes."

Aoki, a Japanese World Cup player and winner of about $150,000 already this season, is among the best players in his country, but rarely plays outside Japan.

One of the first men off the tee and thus able to avoid the gusty afternoon winds, he had to drop a couple of spectacular putts to retain his lead. He was short off the green on that testing 17th, could get his chip only 30 feet from the flag, then dropped the par putt.

Top Seed Reaches Semifinal

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Top-seeded Arthur Ashe cleared his quarter-final match in the $75,000 Hall of Fame Tennis Championships on Wednesday, defeating Spanish veteran Manuel Santana 7-5, 6-2.

The 40-year-old Santana mounted a strong challenge in the first set, as the two played a similar game trading hard serves and skillfull ball placement.

In the second set, Santana was unable to handle Ashe's powerful serves and appeared to tire as he chased sharply hit shots from one end of the court to the other.

"I served very well today," said Ashe. "It wouldn't have mattered who was on the other side of the net."

Ashe, the 1975 Wimbledon champ, said he was not overconfident for the Santana match. He said it didn't matter that Santana, the 1966 Wombledon champ, had not played in a tournament since last year's event at the Newport Casino.

"Look, the man can hit the ball," Ashe said.

"Instead of going to the beach I come here, I like to play tennis," he said.

In an earlier match, Australian John James upset fourth-seeded Victor Amaya, of Holland, Mich., 6-3, 2-6, 7-6 (7-5). James came back after being down, 5-3, 40-0, in the third set.

Russell Simpson of New Zealand over third-seeded Hank Pfister of Bakersfield, Calif., 6-3, 6-4; Australian Bob Giltinan over John Austin of Rolling Hills, Calif., 6-1, 6-2; Bernie Mitton of South Africa over Robin Drysdale of Great Britain, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3. Tim Wilkison of Shelby, N.C., over Steve Docherty of Australia, 7-5, 6-4, and Tom Gullikson of Easton, Pa., over Mike Machette of Pacific Palisades, Calif., 7-6(7-3) 6-2.

Nastase, Fibak Post Victories

NEW YORK (AP) — Ilie Nastase and Wojtek Fibak posted easy second-round victories in the Forest Hills Invitational Wednesday, as player complaints about ultra-light balls grew louder and more vehement.

Meanwhile, the tournament director said the ball had been chosen to avoid boredom. The ball is manufactured by Spalding, the official ball of World Championship Tennis which is sponsoring the $300,000 tournament.

Nastase defeated Australian John Alexander 6-2, 6-2. Fibak eased by John Newcombe 6-1, 6-2.

In later matches, Dick Stockton was to play Peter Fleming, and Vitas Gerulaitis was to meet Ken Rosewall.

Nastase did a better job than Alexander did at compensating for the fly-away balls on serve. Alexander double-faulted five times.

"You don't see anybody serving half well," an angry Alexander said later.

"All of the players are angry about it," said Nastase, who served an ace at 4-2 in the second set, only to follow up with a double fault of his own. "You never see this many double faults."

Tournament Director Gene Scott couldn't help but be aware that his players were frustrated by the feathery orb. Nastase, after two of his serves simply blew away in the light wind, batted the balls over to Scott at courtside.

"But none of the players have come and talked to me about it," Scott noted, adding he'd be willing to consider a change if the players presented a good case.

The ball was chosen, he said, to compensate for the slow clay-like surface. Because it is lighter, it travels off the ground and off a player's strings faster.

"The problem we've had before...is that ground strokes become a bore if carried to their logical extreme (a long baseline rally)," Scott said. "The rallys are short, but that's what we want. We're getting more serve and volley."

Part of the players' frustration is the adjustment they must make after playing several weeks on rain-soaked English grass, where the ball became quite heavy.

"I just find it different. It's very amusing," he said after overpowering a clearly frustrated Newcombe, whose long flat ground strokes frequently wafted out of the court. Fibak faltered badly in the seventh game of the second set, though, squandering four match points to give Newcome his only break for 2-5.

He broke back in the final game, however, on a deftly angled forehand crosscourt.

Jockey Dies In Ruidoso

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — Jim Smith, 23, a jockey at Ruidoso Dwons, died Monday afternoon following injuries suffered in a spill earlier in the day. The tragic mishap occured around 9 a.m. as Smith was working a quarter horse down the homestretch. The horse was going at full speed when the sounds he was making startled another horse which was being ponied on the track.

The startled horse veered into the path of the oncoming horse. Smith was thrown underneath his horse and suffered severe head injuries.

He was immediately taken to Ruidoso Hondo-Valley hospital, where physicians quickly summoned a military helicopter, and Smith was flown to Sierra Medical Center in El Paso.

The rider passed away around 3 p.m. John Phillips, Ruidoso Downs stewards for the State Racing Commission, said: "It was just a freak accident. No one is held responsible."

Smith, who resided in the village of Ruidoso Downs, is survived by a wife and one young child.

He worked mainly as an exercise rider for trainer Gerald Rich. Smith was also licensed as a jockey. He had worked at Ruidoso for the past few seasons as an exercise rider.

Smith's death was one of the few fatal injuries to either jockeys or exercise riders in New Mexico racing history. Phillips noted the last fatality involved jockey Richard Lujan, in a morning-workout accident at Ruidoso Downs around 1961.

Louisville Grad Joins Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Rick Wilson of Louisville, a second round National Basketball Association draft choice, has signed with the Atlanta Hawks, the team announced Tuesday.

The 6-foot-4 Wilson scored 17.8 points per game in his senior year and was named most valuable player in the Metro-7 Conference.

Hawks General Manager Mike Gearon said Wilson might play both forward and guard in the NBA.

Weiskopf Calms Blowup

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Scottish fans braced for an explosion when Tom Weiskopf, sailing along at 6 under par at one stage, double-bogeyed St. Andrews' treacherous 17th "Road Hole" Wednesday in the first round of the 107th British Open golf championship.

The blowup never came. The game's once stormy petrel collected himself, finished with a par for a 69 and established himself as one of the early threats for the title.

"Sure, I was disappointed," acknowledged the 6-foot-3 stylist from Columbus, Ohio "I got mad at myself. Maybe that's a bad word. Frustration is "You don't draw pictures out there, you know. It's all an accumulation of numbers. I don't think I've lost the golf tournament just because I had this one bad hole. I've finished worse and won. I've finished better and lost."

Such is the new philosophy — the more restrained temperament — of the gifted 14-year tour veteran who has been known to pick up his ball and stalk angrily off the course when fortunes took an unfavorable turn.

"I haven't had any trouble in 3½ years," he said when someone commended him for maintaining his cool.

Driving magnificently and dropping putts of from 6 to 25 feet for six birdies in the first 10 holes, Weiskopf appeared headed for the undisputed tournament lead until he turned toward the club house. He got the first five on his card on the 567-yard par five 14th, bogeyed the 15th when he drove into a divot and hit what he called "my first bad shot of the day."

He still headed the field until he came to the 461-yard 17th, which has wrecked a thousand dreams. Twice he backed away after teeing up his ball.

"I was distracted by the flow of the gallery," he said. "This is an unusual golf course. With double fairways and double greens, you are always having to wait for people to cross or the other guy to putt.

"I am not complaining, understand. It's just the characteristic of this particular course. It breaks your rhythm. It breaks your concentration."

With an almost impossible shot at the green where an errant blow could send him onto the paved road beyond the hole, he flew his second shot over a scoreboard into some knee high rough.

"I didn't have much of an alternative," he said. "Either you take a chance on being short or running over into the road." He whaled the ball to the fringe in front of the green, sent his next ball 25 feet past the cup and two-putted for a six.

Someone suggested that this would have been a ripe time for the old Tempestuous Tom to blow the whole ball of wax.

"If I didn't have control of myself, I might have 3-putted No. 18," he said. "But I didn't.

"I'm an expressionalistic person. Is that a real word? If I'm disappointed I look disappointed. My emotions are spontaneous. But I have learned to control myself. I told myself, 'you were lucky to make a six.'

Someone told Weiskopf at the post-round interview that Isao Aoki, the Japanese player who shot a 68, had said the course gave him a headache from concentrating.

"Those Orientals are in that sort of thing," Weiskopf said. "I'm not intellectual. I don't get headaches from concentrating."

The tall Ohioan, who won this championship in 1973 at Troon and who has earned more than $1.5 million on the U.S. tour, recalled his first confrontation with the Old Course at St. Andrews in 1970.

"I started off pretty well but finished badly with a 78 in the last round," he said. "I remember the wind and the rain. I was standing back of the 18th green when Doug Sanders 3-putted, giving Jack Nicklaus the championship.

"I told my wife, 'I never want to come back.' I changed my mind. This is a great course. Take my word for it, you don't need wind and rain for it to be tough. You've got to play this course well to score."

Pele, Wife Announce Seperation

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Pele and his wife of 12 years, Rosemary Cholby, have announced their separation, but the retired soccer king says he still thinks there are chances of a reconciliation.

"Unfortunately, this time it is true," Pele said to Brazil's Globo Television Network in an interview in New York, referring to the much rumored separation.

"We both realized we are not enjoying the same kind of things any more," he added. "Rose has thought that a separation is necessary."

The interview was broadcast throughout Brazil Tuesday night.

"Chance of reconcilitation exists. We are very good friends," Pele said.

Pele, whose real name is Edson Arantes do Nascimento, and Rose married on Feb. 21, 1976, in Santos, Brazil. The couple has three children: Kelly Cristina, 12, Edson Jr., 8, and Jennifer was born last month in New York. Pele was in Argentina at the time, working as a sports commentator for Venezuelan television.

Pele said in the interview that he thinks both he and Rosemary will keep living in New York. Kelly Cristina and Edson Jr. are studying at the United Nations international school there.

Pele said he has already talked to his Brazilian lawyer, regarding his marriage situation. But he added, "We do not know yet whether it will be a separation or a divorce. We will see to that later."

Divorce was legalized in Brazil last year.

Kansas State AD Sees Strong Future

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State University's beleaguered athletic program got a new director Wednesday, along with his promise the university would remain a part of the Big Eight Conference.

"Kansas State today is in the Big Eight and in the Big Eight for good," said DeLoss Dodds, who was head track coach at the school 14 years before becoming assistant commissioner of the Big Eight.

Dodds, 41, replaces John "Jersey" Jermier, who resigned May 21, just three days before the Big Eight penalized the university for awarding excessive football scholarships.

rumors that the Wildcats would be dropped from the Big Eight in favor of Arkansas.

"The only problem I would forsee would be for them to consider putting us out in the future for being too strong," he responded.

The former Wildcat track star told newsmen he felt current penalties the university is facing could be overcome through extensive fund-raising activities and ticket sales programs.

Regarding the three-year penalty, which will cost the school some $125,000 a year, Dodds said, "Maybe that's what the Big Eight is telling us. They're saying, 'Let's see if you want to play football and play basketball in the Big Eight.'"

Dodds, who served as interim athletic director at K-State in 1976, will begin his new duties Thursday.

It was announced at Wednesday's news conference that Jermier would remain at the university through September in a fund-raising capacity.

Asked about facing problems such as financing for women's athletics and minor sports, Dodds said, "Kansas State faced the women's challenge before any other Big Eight university. I think that's behind us. Other universities are just now facing that challenge."

Tech's Felton Signs, Saints' Camp Begins

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The New Orleans Saints came to terms Wednesday with their last three unsigned draft choices while rookies, free agents and veterans began arriving at trainiBng camp for their first day of physicals

Contracts were signed with Barry Bennett, the Saints' No. 3 choice; Eric Felton, their No. 5 choice, and Francis Chesley, their second selection in the sixth round.

Bennett is a 6-foot-4, 257 pound defensive lineman from Concordia College in Minnesota, where he played both tackle and end.

Felton, 6-feet and 200 pounds, is a defensive back from Texas Tech who will be tried as a cornerback.

Chesley, 6-foot-3 and 219 pounds, is a linebacker from Wyoming.

Two free agents were added to the roster: Mark Meseroll, a 6-foot-6, 286-pound offensive tackle from Florida State, and Joe Ware, a 6-foot-2, 215-pound tight end from Tennessee Tech.

Sixteen veterans and 34 rookies and free agents reported to the training camp site, Dodgertown, where the Los Angeles Dodgers practice in the spring.

The players will complete physicals and draw equipment on Thursday. Two-a-day workouts will begin Friday.

Veterans who were on the roster at the end of last season are not required to report before July 20, but the Saints said veteran qarterback Archie Manning and Bobby Scott are scheduled to arrive Saturday.

PULLS UPSET—Kim Hubbard, a 21 year old resident of Spokane, Washington unseated first place medalist Mike Campbell Wednesday during the first day of match play at the USGA Public Links Golf Tourney held at Bangor, Maine. Hubbard pulled one up on Campbell after twenty holes of play. They were tied after 18 holes. Hubbard was seeded 34th before facing Campbell. Thirty-six holes will be played Thursday when the field will be reduced to 8. (AP Laserphoto)

Medalist Loses Match In Public Links Action

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Defending champion Jerry Vidovic of Blue Island, Ill., won his first challenge but medalist leader Mike Campbell of Louisville, Ky., lost his as match play began Wednesday in the U.S. Amateur Public Links Golf Championship.

Vidovic, who had carded a 75 and 74 in the two days of qualifying on the par-70 Bangor Municipal Golf Course, defeated John Kerins of West Middlesex, Pa., 4 and 3.

Campbell, a former University of Cincinnati quarterback, was the only golfer among the 159 entries to shoot below par in the 36 holes of qualifying. He had twin 69s Monday and Tuesday for a 2-under-par 138 total — six strokes better than his nearest competitors.

But he was defeated in match play Wednesday on the 20th hole by Kim Hubbard of Spokane, Wash., who had trailed Campbell by 12 strokes in the qualifying rounds.

Artie Diaz of Phoenix, Ariz., lost to Gene Pall of Minneapolis, 3 and 2, while Philip Pleat of Manchester, N.H., triumphed over Charles Pifer of Miami, Fla., 2-up.

Diaz and Pleat had finished tied for second in the medal or stroke play behind Campbell.

The rugged, six-day tournament, which is being held in New England for the first time, is tailored to the true amateurs of golf — the "weekend warriors" who hold regular jobs during the week.

The field of 64 golfers who survived the qualifying rounds was cut to 32 after Wednesday's match play.

Two 18-hole rounds Thursday will reduce the contenders to eight and an additional two rounds Friday will leave two golfers who will face off for the title in Saturday's 36-hole match play finale.

SAILING WINNER

SANDHAMN, Sweden (AP) — Frank Tolhurst of Australia in "Arunga III" won the second race of the 5.5 meter Gold Cup event Monday. Albert Fay of Texas in "Wildfire", who won the first race Sunday, put up a good fight in the early part of the sailing but had to withdraw when the boom broke.

Is Holmes Peoples' Champion?

And King is equally convinced that his fighter has the out-of-the-ring magic it takes to capture another title.

"He's the brightest star around now. He can become the people's champion. We have a lot of champions walking around now but no people's champion," King said.

As the World Boxing Council champ sat in a hotel coffee shop, joking with reporters, he talked about being the people's champion.

"I'm doing what Leon Spinks is not doing — not to belittle the man. My goal is not only to be the champ but to prove other things to myself and other people," he said.

Spinks, who holds the World Boxing Association version of the title, has captured attention by collecting an impressive string of traffic tickets in recent weeks.

King touts Holmes as the succesor to Ali as the people's champ. Holmes has been compared to The Greatest in both his life style and boxing style. But the WBC champ said he has not copied anyone.

"If it works for Ali and it works for me, so what? If you want to say I imitate Ali, go ahead, it works," he said.

He cheerfully signed autographs in the coffee shop and had a greeting for every young lady that wandered by.

"I'm trying to conduct myself as a champion...to set a good example for young people," he said. The champ added that he wants to give youth the kind of help he never had.

"I never thought of being the heavweight champ. I thought about money, paying the bills, eating," he said.

But now he does think about being champ — the full champ. He is eagerly awaitng the Spinks-Ali rematch for the WBA title.

Another Typical All-Star Plot

DECISIVE RUN — Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey crosses the plate to break a 3-3 tie in the bottom of the eighth inning. Garvey lofted a triple to the right field wall and scored moments later on a wild pitch to Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion by New York's Rich Gossage. The umpire is Paul Pryor. (AP Laserphoto)

Farquhar Falls In Trans-Miss

DALLAS (AP) — Oklahoma State's Lindy Miller birdied four of the first five holes, faltered in mid-round, then rallied in the stretch to beat Ted Ferguson of Midland 3-1 in Wednesday's first round of the Trans-Miss golf championship.

Ferguson, who won three rounds in the British Amateur, battled back from a slow start to pull even in the match after 10 holes, but took double bogeys on the 13th and 15th holes, giving Miller a two-hole advantage that was too much to overcome.

Doug Clarke, 19-year-old Stanford golfer, shot a wild nine-over-par 80 for the day, but his opponent, UCLA's Tom Pernice, had the same kind of round. Clarke made a 40-footer on the 17th hole, his only birdie of the round, to go 1-up over Pernice and then both players bogeyed the final hole.

Two former Walker Cup players — John Grace of Fort Worth and John Farquhar of Lubbock — were eliminated. Grace lost, 4-3, to University of New Mexico golfer John Stansberry, and Farquhar bowed, 1-up, to Wake Forest's Gary Pinns.

Pinns had Farquhar dormie with three holes to play, but Farquhar sank a six-footer for a par that won No. 16 and a 10-footer for a birdie on No. 17 that sent the match to the final hole. Farquhar's 30-foot birdie try at No. 18 stopped a half turn short, and Pinns made his three-footer to half the hole and win the match.

Bob Tway, medalist in the two rounds of qualifying play, hit the pin with his chip shot on the 191-yard 16th hole and his "gimme" par gave him a 3-2 victory over Bob Dickerson of Dallas.

Tway, a teammate of Miller on the NCAA champion OSU squad, said he "played real dumb. I started playing him (Dickerson) instead of the course, and that's a bad thing to do. He'd hit a trap, and I'd play safe and hit to the center of the green instead of going for birdies. Then he'd hit a good shot and par the hole, and we'd half it."

Tway three-putted the 13th hole and saw Dickerson close to within one hole. The 19-year-old native of Marietta, Ga., then three-putted the 14th hole also, but Dickerson failed to cash in, missing a two-footer that would have given him a par and evened the match.

Tway then sank a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 15 and closed out the match with his easy par on the 16th.

Britt Harrison, also of OSU, won 5-3 over Danny Dodson of Las Vegas, Nev., but the Cowboys' Rafael Alarcon was beaten 3-2 by John Chaffee, a University of Texas golfer.

The University of Southern California had three golfers in Wednesday's first round, and all advanced — Joe Flood 4-2 over Lee DeSanders of Dallas, Carl Steinberg 1-up in 19 holes over Greg Young of Austin, and Graig Anderson 2-up over Payne Stewart of Springfield, Mo.

DALLAS (AP) — Results of Wednesday's first round in the 75th Trans-Miss golf championships (Winners of matches listed in each paragraph will play, in same order listed, in Thursday's second round):

Pony Stars To Collide

Dixie and Southern all-star teams will collide today at 6 p.m. to open the city Pony League Baseball Tournament.

Only three teams will be competing in the double-elimination tourney which will continue through Saturday.

After the 6 p.m. game, the winner will play Southwest all-stars. Results of tonight's games will determine the schedule rest of the week.

Winner of the local tournament will go to Pecos in ten days for the next round of playoffs, with the winner from Pecos heading for Austin and the state tournament.

Southwest all-stars won last year's local tournament and later claimed the state championship.

Olton Deadline Arrives Today

OLTON (Special) — Deadline for entering the Olton Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament is 5 p.m. today. Entries will be accepted at Olton Tennis Club, site of the tournament which will be held here Friday through Sunday.

Entry fee is $8 per team.

Only 18-and-under (junior) division will begin Friday, with the others, open, over 35, over-45 and novice (for beginning players) will start later.

Persons wanting to enter the Olton Open, scheduled Aug. 2-6, will be July 31. Entry fee is $4 for singles, $8 for doubles, and entries can be mailed to Jako Garos, Box 538, Olton. The field will be limited, however.

Boys and girls singles and doubles will begin Aug. 2 and 2, the adult divisions Aug. 4 and 5.

Rose Hopes Cincinnati Improves

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose wants the Cincinnati Reds to push harder after the All-Star break, but no one can fault the third baseman for his recent contributions.

Rose, who earlier this baseball season stroked his 3,000th career hit, has hit in 25 straight regular-season games to tie his personal high, set in 1967. He's only two games away from the club record of 27, held jointly by Edd Roush and Vada Pinson.

After that, the goals grow more distant, with the National League record of 37, held by Tommy Holmes, as Rose's next target.

The major league record of 56 games is held by Joe DiMaggio, and now, Rose can only smile and say, "Right now, I'd say I've got the best chance of anyone."

"I don't feel any pressure," Rose said in a recent interview. "Maybe, I'll feel some when I get close to 37, but that's still a long way off."

Rose's batting streak has lifted his average to .303. At one time, it had dropped to .267 after Rose was weighted down by a six-for-51 slump.

Now that he's got his batting average over .300 again, Rose has his sights set on Jeff Burroughs of Atlanta, who is leading the league in hitting.

"Going into Sunday, Burroughs led the league in hitting at .322," Rose noted. "That's only 19 points higher than me and I think I can get up to .320, too. It looks like that might be enough to win the batting title and I think I can do it."

"We're going to have to develop more consistency after the All-Star game," Rose said.

Ex-WT Boss Listed Among Possibilities

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Eight prospects, including the head coach at Holy Cross and former head coach at West Texas State, have been interviewed as candidates for the vacant St. Louis University basketball-coaching job, a published report says.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said it had learned that Holy Cross' George Blaney and West Texas State's Ron Ekker were among those contacted by a screening committee headed by former Billikens star Ed Macauley.

Other college coaches considered candidates, the newspaper said, include George "Torchy" Clark of Florida Tech, Frank Giovannucci, Bloomfield, N.J., Jim Valvano, Iona, and George Faerber, Purdue assistant.

The Post-Dispatch identified the additional candidates as Frank Layden, Atlanta Hawks assistant, and Rich Grawer, coach of DeSmet High School in suburban Creve Coeur.

Ron Coleman was fired as St. Louis U. coach last month following only one year at the reins. Macauley was quoted by the newspaper as acknowledging only that all eight enumerated in an article have visited the school's campus "at one time or another."

Quad Cities Event To Tee Off Today

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Roger Maltbie has declared his independence, financially, as he attempts to regain the form that won him PGA Rookie of the Year honors three years ago.

"I just bought out the contract of my sponsors back in San Jose (Calif.)," Maltbie said as he prepared for the $150,000 Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open golf tournament that starts today.

"We were bickering back and forth for a long time, so I decided to just sit down and see what it would take to buy them out," said Maltbie.

"Now, I'm completely on my own for the first time since I've been on Maltbie, 27, won his first PGA championship here in 1975, and followed that with a victory in the Pleasant Valley Open a week later.

He won the Memorial Tournament the next year, but barely held onto his exempt status last season when he finished 59th on the money list.

"I'm not that strong mentally to stay with the tour week after week," said Maltbie. "I just had to get away from the tour for awhile."

So, he took off an entire month to stay home in San Jose and during that time he purchased his independence.

"I'm hoping this year's Quad Cities Open will give me a new start," he said.

Four former Quad Cities champions are back, but most of the game's top names are playing in the British Open this week.

"I missed this tournament to play in the British Open last year, but that was so I could take my mother back to her homeland," said Maltbie.

Joining Maltbie in today's tournament will be former Quad Cities champions Mike Morley, John Lister and Dave Stockton.

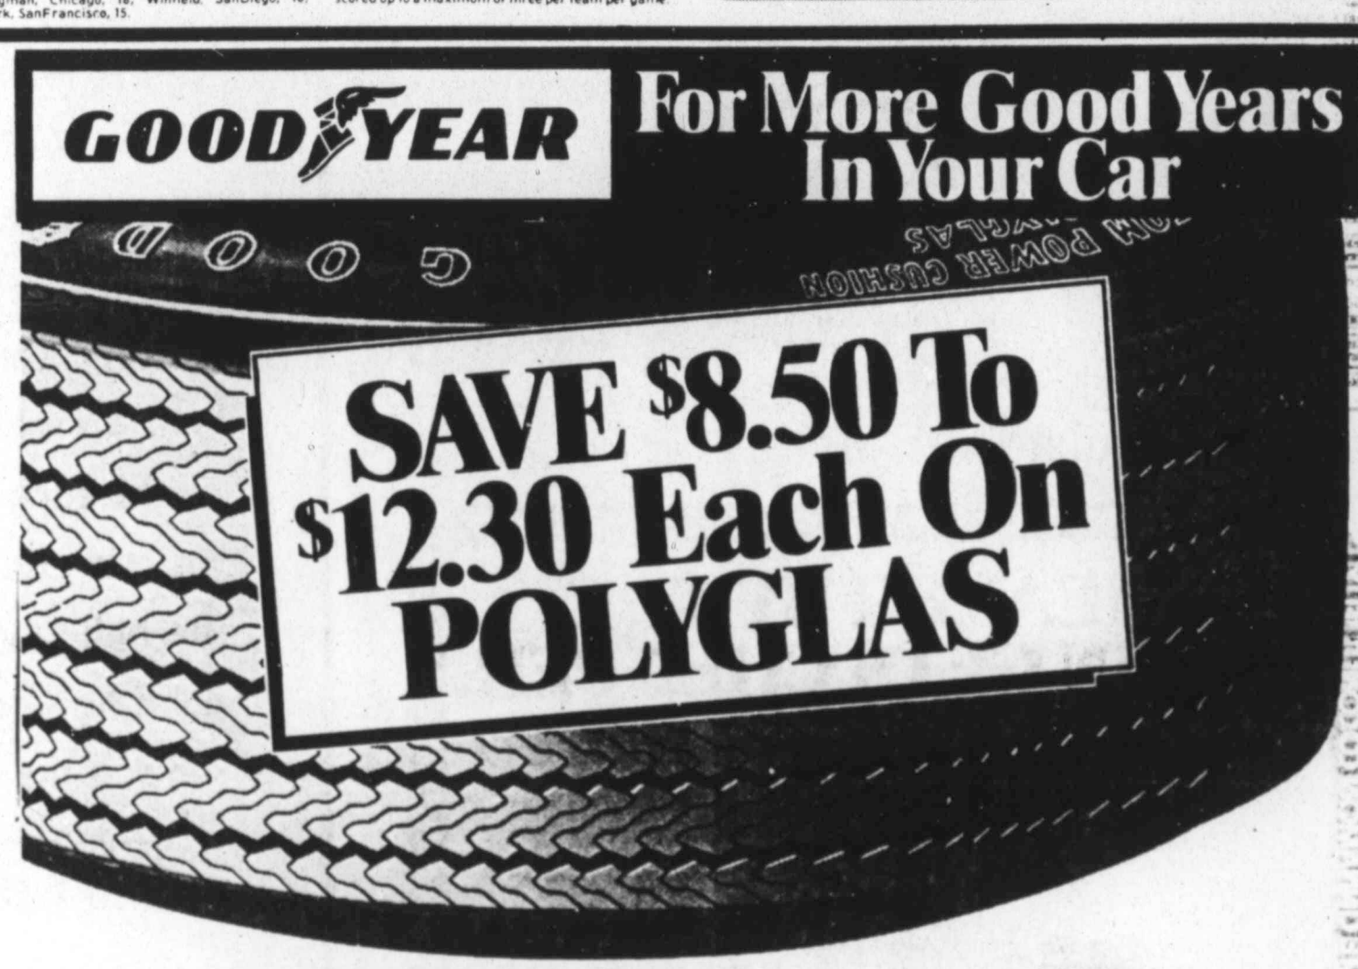

Morley, whose only tour victory came here last year, has not played well since a strong start this season in which he tied for third in the Hawaiian Open and tied for fourth at the Crosby National.

KING INJURED

Public TV Plans 'Scarlet Letter'

BOSTON (AP) — Public television, which won a following by importing British remakes of the classics, is striking off on its own with a mini-series based on "The Scarlet Letter."

Filming of Nathaniel Hawthorne's tale of passion begins July 13 in a recreated version of Puritan Boston built inside the walls of Fort Adams, a Revolutionary War post in Newport, R.I.

The four, hour-long programs will be aired early next year on Public Broadcasting Service stations.

The $2.5 million mini-series is the first American attempt at what has on film.

The English programs, which run once a week as "Masterpiece Theater," are imported by WGBH in Boston, the same station that is producing "The Scarlet Letter."

"We are committed to doing an American classic," said Diane Miller, associate producer of the new program. "Once you decide that, you try to think of the most quintessential American writer who is dealing with telling and still-important themes in American life. You get to Hawthorne right away."

The book is one of the most popular in American literature. It is the story of Hester Prynne, a young woman forced to wear a scarlet A because she bore the illegitimate daughter of Arthur Dimmesdale, the town minister.

The TV program will try to recreate life in the young settlement of Boston in the 1640s.

"We want to disabuse people of their stereotypical impression of the Puritan past as a dank, dark period in our lives," said Miss Miller. "Our research shows that it was bright, colorful and alive — almost a frontier atmosphere."

The production has hired six scholars who check the script and set for historical accuracy.

WGBH picked "The Scarlet Letter" for its timeless treatment of human passion, guilt and vindictiveness.

"We want to bring out moral problems that are still pertinent," said Miss Miller. "A woman who strays from the beaten path may still have the community against her. She may not have a scarlet A on her chest, but she still has problems."

The producers built 20 colonial buildings around the old fort's parade ground, which in the program will be Boston Common. On a lonely stretch of nearby waterfront, they have constructed the hut where Hester lived in exile.

Hester will be played by Meg Foster, who starred in the comedy "A Different Story," and the minister is John Heard, a Broadway actor. Three different girl's will play Hester's daughter, Pearl, at ages 3, 5 and 7.

Teachers' Test Scores Ruling Handed Down

AUSTIN (AP) — The Dallas Independent School District must disclose test scores made by some 500 new teachers — but without revealing how specific individuals performed, Attorney General John Hill ruled today.

Performance by the teachers on the Wesman Personnel Classification Test has been a recent issue in Dallas, with allegations that the scores were poor.

The district contended the scores were confidential by law — not just individual results but reports, compilations, analyses, percentile rankings and various measurements showing how the teachers performed.

The school administration also contended that the test results fell under an exemption for "drafts and working papers involved in the preparation of proposed legislation."

On top of that, he said, the information requested automatically became public when the district failed to provide copies to the attorney general.

"We have repeatedly requested that you comply with this express requirement to supply the information at issue, but you have refused to do so," Hill said.

Sammy Davis Jr.'s Broadway Return 'Selfish'

By DENISE M. HOLT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mankind personified is Sammy Davis Jr. in his return to the Broadway stage as Littlechap in the updated version of "Stop The World, I Want To Get Off."

At 52, Davis is as versatile as ever. In "Stop The World," gone is the Las Vegas glitter, absent is the Hollywood lingo. There remains instead the universal man.

"Stop The World" is a comedic portrait of humanity. About Littlechap, a man who climbs the world's ladder, pushing first a coffee cart, then politics, and finally, a cane. Along the way he treads on a few hearts but later is impacted by the backlash.

Marian Mercer, Davis's costar, is a towering blond on stage beside him. But there is attractiveness in the opposition. Miss Mercer plays his wife and his three lovers.

But because she never changes costumes between roles — although she shows extreme adeptness at changing from an English to a Russian to a German to an American accent — Littlechap is always in love with the same woman.

The stage setting, which also never changes, is like the cast — multi-colored and worldly. It is a neon collage of familiarity, with the Golden Gate Bridge and Chinese dragons accenting its universal flavor.

Why did he return to the stage for the first time since his two-year Broadway run in "Golden Boy" ended in 1966?

"I just wanted to do it," he says simply. "They say the time to do something like this is when you don't need to do it. Most performers do what they do because they have to do it. But I've gotten into a position now where I can sort of play it by ear."

He stopped staring intently at his image and redirected his gaze to the telegrams and pictures that decorated his dressing room walls. Many were from fellow entertainers.

"Actually, my reason is the most selfish in the world," he added thoughtfully. "I want to grow some more as a performer. It's a very special challenge to someone like me.

Memphis Rooms Filled For Elvis Presley Week

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Owners of motels and hotels on Elvis Presley Boulevard say their rooms are already sold out for August, when the first anniversary of the singer's death occurs.

Presley, 42, died of heart disease last Aug. 16. His body was found in Graceland, his Southern Colonial mansion that fronts on the street named for him. Thousands have visited his gravesite on the mansion grounds in the past year. Memphis Area Chamber of Commerce officials say they expect all of the city's motels and hotels to be filled during the anniversary week of Presley's death.

West Berlin Maintains Stockpiles— Just In Case

BERLIN (AP) — Thirty years after the Russians blockaded West Berlin, the city is still stockpiling everything from coal to canned pineapple to bicycles. Just in case.

"The widest possible palette of goods that you can store," is the way it's described by Gerhard Erbe, who oversees the secretive stockpiles for this island of democracy 110 miles inside communist East Germany. President Carter will visit here Saturday.

The blockade started 30 years ago this summer and lasted almost a year. Some of the coal flown in during the 1948 airlift may still be in today's stockpiles, officials say.

There are children's shoes, to accommodate feet that might grow out of their old shoes during a blockade, and paper to keep schools and offices running.

As the city's economy has grown less dependent on coal, it has boosted reserves of heating oil and gas.

Berliners have stocked away alcohol to make liquors, along with the ingredients for beer.

West Berlin's 2 million residents are connected to West Germany by three highways, rail and water routes and three air "corridors" that date back to early occupation days after World War II. All routes are the result of years of diplomacy.

Even today, only American, British and French planes can fly the corridors. Modern jets have only recently begun flying higher than the 10,000-foot ceiling set in the days of propeller-driven planes.

Berlin's blockade began June 24, 1948, when Soviet forces halted land travel through their German occupation zone, now East Germany, and cut off supplies of food, coal and electricity to western Berlin.

Soviet officials blamed the blockade on a western currency reform that created what has become the West German mark. Western theorists say the blockade was aimed at driving the Americans, French and British out of Berlin and starving the western part of the city into the Soviet camp.

The Allies organized an airlift to supply the city, bringing in fuel, industrial goods and some 4,000 tons of food a day. In one 24-hour period, 1,398 planes flew into the city. A third city airport was built in 90 days and seaplanes were brought in on a city lake.

To keep anyone from figuring out how long the city could hold out in a new siege, tight secrecy is kept on the size of its current stockpiles, how much they cost and how much material the city, now about 200,000 people smaller, would go through in a day.

But it takes 120 city workers to handle the paperwork and the city and the West German government spent about a million dollars last year just taking care of the stockpiles.

Thievery is a minor problem, Erbe says, though some Berliners raid city rockpiles when they build their houses, and a group of warehouse workers helped organize the theft of 300 tons of sugar a few years ago. "Actually, it's astounding how little is taken," he says.

City officials say some of the coal may date back to 1948-1949, but everything else has long since been swapped out and replaced, much of it sold to Berliners in sales that periodically produce cut-rate bargains in city stores.

"It really doesn't make any difference if a can of sardines has been stored for a year and a half," Erbe says. "We have some goods that actually improve with a little storage."

The city got only about 30 per cent of its money back when it decided to unload out-of-fashion textiles and shoes.

A flood of orange juice into supermarkets a few years ago changed prices and tastes enough to practically wipe out the resale value of the city's carefully assembled stocks of blackberry juice.

Twenty-year-old newsprint may still be usable, but its quality falls short of what Berliners have gotten used to over the last two decades.

And somewhere, packed away in boxes, are the city's bicycles, destined for West Berliners cut off in remote locations by fuel and transport cutbacks.

"We will be in a position to provide a bicycle for families that might not have one," Erbe says. "In any case, we will be very healthy."

JUST IN CASE — Stacks of coal briquettes fill a storage yard in West Berlin where city officials have been stockpiling fuel, food, medicine, canned goods, health supplies and small pleasures of life for the past 30 years in the event of another Cold War siege. It was in June of 1948 when Soviet forces cut off land travel in what is now East Germany and ended the flow of supplies to West Berlin, leading to the Berlin air-lift. (AP Laserphoto)

Air Force Planning Restudy Of Questioned Cancer Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said Wednesday it will examine 32,000 medical slides prepared from cancer tests of women to determine if a private laboratory did not process them correctly.

The Pap smear slides, processed by the Automated Medical Service of Ohio Inc., are from cancer tests on Air Force women and wives and daughters of Air Force personnel.

The Air Force said that in the meantime it will contact the women to advise them that the reports may not have been correct and that they should undergo another examination.

Air Force officials described the 32,000 women as a "high risk group" because they may not have taken follow-up Pap smear tests, which check for possible cervical cancer, since June-September 1977. Doctors said a sample check of 1,200 slides turned up 3 percent "major discrepancies not necessarily cancer." Less than 1 percent showed abnormalities that conceivably could be cancerous, they said.

"A team of Air Force medical specialists will begin re-examining the 32,000 slides on July 17," the announcement said. "Slides showing results significantly different than those earlier reported to the Air Force by the contractor will be flagged and the base where the smear was taken will be immediately notified."

It said that re-examination of the slides and the notification process should be finished by the end of September.

Col. William R. Cowan, an Air Force doctor, told reporters Air Force investigators and the Justice Department began probing the Mansfield, Ohio, firm's actions after he received a letter in June 1977 signed by a former Amso employee alleging irregularities.

Cowan said the letter alleged that company technicians analyzing the test slides were given three to four times a normal workload and that unqualified personnel handled the analysis and supervision.

An earlier anonymous letter received in January 1976 led to an investigation by the Center for Disease Control which found nothing amiss, Cowan said. The center is an agency of the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

Officials said the Mansfield laboratory handled about 640,000 Pap slides for the Air Force over a five-year period, from 1972 to 1977, "when the workload could not be handled totally in house by Air Force personnel."

Dr. Raymond Thabet, head of Mansfield company, was not available for comment. The laboratory's contract with the Air Force expired Sept. 30 and has not been renewed, the announcement said.

As for women given Pap tests before the investigation began, the Air Force said it will use contractor records to identify and locate them but that it is hoped that most of this group already has been re-examined. An annual Pap smear is recommended for most women and is required of female Air Force personnel on active duty.

"As a further precautionary measure," the Air Force also is recommending that all other women who had a Pap smear performed...during the period July 1, 1972 through May 1977, and who have not had a subsequent Pap smear" at an Air Force medical facility" consult a physician as to the need for a repeat examination.

Asked why the Air Force did not act before this, Cowan said "it took this long to accumulate the evidence to subpoena the slides."

Scenes For Soap Opera Filmed Underwater

NEW YORK (AP) — The daytime serial "Guiding Light," in its 41st year on the air and its 27th year on television, will include underwater location scenes filmed in Nassau in upcoming episodes.

The story focuses on Dr. Peter Chapman, who is haunted by memories of a disturbing incident while scuba diving in Nassau.

The Irish consume 317 pounds of potatoes per capita annually, more than any other people in the world.

Bill Providing For Bankruptcy Judges Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday approved a bill setting up a system of independent bankruptcy judges after eliminating a provision bitterly opposed by railway unions.

The bill which was cleared for Senate floor action calls for bankruptcy judges to serve 12-year terms. However, a bill passed earlier this year by the House would create lifetime bankruptcy judges.

Under current law, bankruptcy cases are handled by referees who serve six-year terms and are subordinate to U.S. district judges.

The section of the bill that drew the fire of the railway unions would have permitted trustees appointed to reorganize bankrupt railroads to reject work rules in labor contracts and establish new rules in their place.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., chairman of the subcommittee on improvements in judicial machinery, favored the provision. He argued that it would preserve jobs and help bankrupt railroads become solvent again.

At a hearing by the transportation subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee on Tuesday, J.R. Snyder, testifying on behalf of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, called the provision "a meat-ax approach which would slaughter collective bargaining as it has applied to railroads in reorganization."

DeConcini agreed to eliminate the section after receiving assurances from Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., chairman of the Human Resources Committee, that he will hold hearings on it next year.

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said he would probably try to get the provision put back in the bill when it reaches the Senate floor.

The proposed bankruptcy judges would receive $48,500, the same as bankruptcy referees. The lifetime judges under the House bill would get $55,000, as district judges do.

Six Flags Snake Rumor Denied

ARLINGTON (AP) — Pestered by telephone calls from "everywhere," Six Flags Over Texas denied Wednesday the vast amusement park is infested by snakes.

"The latest rumor is that snakes are dropping from the trees," sighed spokesman Bruce Neal.

Neal said a rumor began about a month ago that a park visitor had been bitten by a snake. The rumor has grown "to at least 50 versions that I have heard," he said.

They include:

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Justice Believes In Justice

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Chief Justice A.H. Ellett believes in justice among justices, even if it costs him $10.

Ellett recently received a letter from Colorado Supreme Court Justice Jim R. Carrigan, who said his daughter, Maura, was stopped in Utah and cited for driving at 60 mph.

Carrigan said his daughter was told to report to a judge at a restaurant in Soldier Summit. When she arrived, a waitress told her the judge was not there, but she could give the money to the waitress, Carrigan said.

"Having no choice she gave the waitress $10 and proceeded on her way," Carrigan wrote. "Is this the way law is administered in Utah?

"Warmest personal regards anyway. I hope you folks can make good use of my 10 bucks. We eliminated that form of 'frontier justice' some time ago and I was suprised to learn that it still persists in Utah."

Ellett said he told Carrigan: "I know of no way to cause the state to refund this amercement, but I am enclosing my own check made payable to your daughter in the sum of $10."

Travel Causing Divorce

NEW YORK (AP) — Pele, the Brazilian who helped build soccer in the United States, sad Wednesday that he and his wife of 12 years, Rose, are going to be divorced.

"Rose does not want to travel with me," said Pele, who works for Warner Communications, which owns the North American Soccer League champion Cosmos. Pele led the Cosmos to the league title last year.

"I cannot change my life at this stage. I have been traveling for 22 years. Rose says it has to stop but I cannot," Pele said.

Road Life Irks Singer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — It's no secret that Jerry Vale's been keeping a low profile these days. But it's not because he enjoys singing less, the road life has gotten to him.

"I hate to travel," he said in a recent interview here before a summer theater concert. "I've been doing it almost 30 years and I'm at the point now where if I never did it again I wouldn't miss it. That's the reason I only work about 15 weeks a year."

The rest of the year, Vale, 47, is busy as entertainment director at The 20th Century hotel and casino in Las Vegas.

New Name Poses Problem

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Maryland's attorney general went to a lot of trouble last year to get his name legally changed. But he may have trouble getting his new name on the ballot when he runs for governor.

(BILL) BURCH

After a long legal battle, Attorney General Francis Boucher Burch became Francis B. (Bill) Burch, adding the nickname with parentheses he has used since childhood.

But those parentheses are causing problems.

Willard A. Morris, administrator of state election laws, has told Burch that his parentheses can't go on the ballot in the Sept. 12 primary election because, "parentheses indicate a nickname and nicknames aren't allowed on the ballot under state law."

However, Philip Z. Altfeld, the attorney general's campaign manager, said his boss isn't giving up. Altfeld said the candidate will file suit to get his nickname, parentheses and all, on the ballot.

"It would be difficult under the circumstances to get an attorney general's opinion on the issue," Altfeld added.

Boss Gets Honor?

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Do the employees of Montana Attorney General Mike Greely know something the rest of the state should know?

They recently presented their boss with a special license plate reading "KAHUNA."

Leo The Lion Too Clumsy For Romance

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Leo the lion tried to be romantic but he was so clumsy that zoo officials figured it was safe to take his mate, Ginger, off a birth control program.

But Leo fooled them and now there's a new addition at the Columbus zoo, a 3-pound, 1-ounce cub born to Ginger and Leo.

"We were very much surprised," zoo keeper Scotty Roy said Wednesday.

The zoo gave Ginger a birth control liquid in her food about two years ago when it decided the zoo had enough lions. Last summer, the zoo took Ginger off the birth control diet when she ".. started developing male characteristics — growing a mane," said Roy.

Leo and Ginger, both 9 years old, had failed several years ago to produce cubs.

Roy said Leo had had no problem with initial steps of the breeding process, such as grabbing Ginger by the neck with his paws, but somehow didn't become a father.

"It's not that he didn't know how, he was just clumsy," Roy said.

The cub, born early Tuesday morning, was moved from its parents' cage to a zoo nursery, Roy said.

Zoo officials had no idea Ginger was expecting even though the gestation period for lions is between about 90 and 110 days, Roy said.

"She's a very large lion and showed no outward signs," he said.

Lions usually have more than one cub, generally litters of from two to six. He said Ginger's only cub is "an extremely healthy animal."

Witnesses Clean Dome

HOUSTON (AP) — It's not that the Houston Astrodome was dirty, it just wasn't clean enough.

About 55,000 members of the Jehovah's Witnesses are to meet under the dome this weekend. Their representatives inspected the facilities recently and agreed it needed a few licks with mop and broom.

Volunteers from the religious group swarmed over the stadium Wednesday, mopping floors, dusting and scrubbing all the huge stadium's seats.

Paul Stevens of Houston, a member of the Witnesses, also promised that "we will leave it cleaner than we found it. It wouldn't be right for the Witnesses to come and leave a mess."

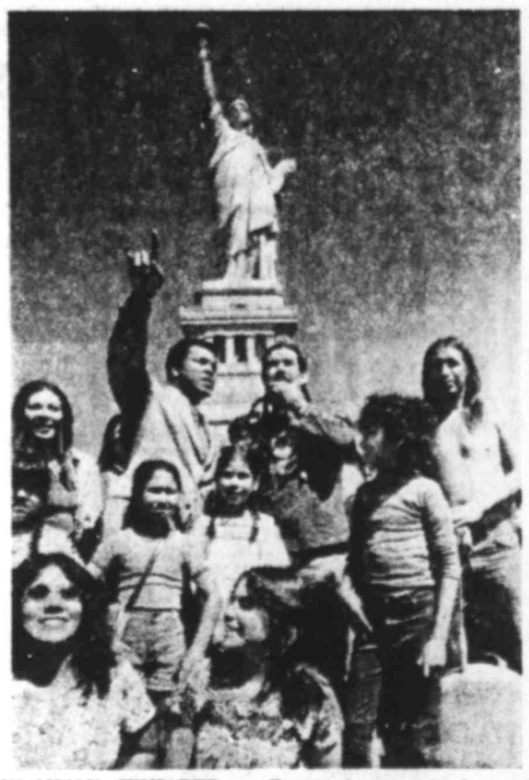

Crowd Greets Cellist Champ

NEW YORK (AP) — Nathaniel Rosen, the first American cellist to win the gold medal in the prestigious Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow, stepped off an Aeroflot jet in New York Wednesday to the enthusiastic applause from a reception line of fellow musicians and relatives.

"This is fantastic. I really feel home now, I feel like an American," the youthful Rosen, "Nick" to his friends, beamed.

Rosen, 30, who is the principal cellist with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra and a senior member of the faculty of the Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, won the gold medal after three weeks of competition.

Rosen won over 53 other cellists with his interpretations of Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme," and Dvorak's "Concerto in b for Cello, Op. 104." After the first two rounds, which included performances with piano accompaniment, only 12 contestants were left for the third and final round of trials with orchestra.

CHAMPION CRUSADER — Former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali talks with American Indian leader Clyde Bellecourt, hand on chin, and other American Indians on Liberty Island Wednesday. Bellecourt, the national coordinator of the "Longest Walk" held a press conference on the island to discuss anti-Indian legislation in Congess and the media blackout of the "Longest Walk." Beware Calorific Salad Bar

DURHAM, N.H. UPI — Salad bars may be good for the self-esteem but not always for the waistline, warns a University of New Hampshire nutritionist.

"Don't count on the restaurant salad bar to avoid calories," Carol Courser said. "You may be fooling yourself." A simple bowl of greenery sprinkled with vinegar or lemon juice contains only 25 calories she said.

But a plate heaped with lettuce, cottage cheese, potato salad, olives, bacon bits and croutons, drenched in dressing and accompanied by a slice of buttered bread, adds up to an astounding 700 calories or more, she said.

Diners' greed also trips them up at the eat-all-you-want salad bars, she said.

"There's no research to back this up, but if you watch people, they think because they've paid for this, they have an obligation to get their money's worth," Miss Courser said.

UNEMPLOYMENT EYED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter, taking on the problem of unemployment, is sponsoring a day-long seminar for community leaders in Washington on July 27. "The aim is to enlist the aid of private citizens throughout the nation to help solve problems," Mrs. Carter said.

Vietnamese, Americans Confer

HONOLULU (AP) — The first Vietnamese delegation to the United States since Communists took over the Southeast Asian nation met with American officials here Wednesday in an effort to speed up recovery and identification of U.S. war dead.

A six-man Vietnamese delegation which includes two doctors who are specialists in forensic medicine sat down for day-long discussions after touring two facilities.

They visited the Joint Casualty Resolution Center, which has files on more than 2,500 U.S. war victims whose bodies have not been recovered, and the U.S. Central Identification Laboratory, which made positive identification of the remains of 59 war dead returned earlier.

Frank Sieverts, deputy assistant secretary of state, said the Americans wanted to show the Vietnamese the "extraordinary capabilities" of the laboratory and to express a willingness to help in recovery of the remains.

Vu Hoang, head of the Vietnamese delegation, pledged more active and effective efforts by his government to recover and identify the bodies.

However, Sieverts said the recovery effort will take time.

"We have no illusions that anything will happen overnight," he said.

The six delegates are the first Vietnamese to pay an official visit to the United States outside the United Nations since the end of the Vietnam War.

Spanish Basques' Protest Continues

MADRID (AP) — Interior minister Rodolfo Martin Villa traveled to northern Spain Wednesday in an attempt to restore peace after round-the-clock clashes between police and Basque demonstrators.

Most political parties in Spain blame him for the four days of violence and have demanded his resignation.

Basque nationalists, who want independence for Spain's northern Basque provinces, have been protesting the deaths of two youths in shooting incidents since Saturday. Nationalists clashed again Wednesday with riot police in suburban San Sebastian, but no casualties were reported.

Many of the city's streets were isolated by barricades thrown up by the demonstrators. "We appear to be living on a powder magazine that may go off at any time," said a shopkeeper.

AUSTIN — The Cook Memorial Hospital in Levelland has filed a request with the Texas Health Facilities Commission for an exemption certificate.

RAY TO TESTIFY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge signed papers Wednesday to permit James Earl Ray to be brought to Washington to give public testimony before the House Assassinations Committee.

Peking Denies Planes Flew Over Vietnam

TOKYO (AP) — China said its warplanes never violated Vietnamese airspace and called allegations to the contrary "lies out of thin air."

The official Hsinhua news agency Wednesday reported that a Foreign Ministry spokesman said no Chinese aircraft came within 12 miles of the Sino-Viet border.

Vietnam had alleged that on July 8, 1978 Chinese jets flew over its territory.

Vietnam protested the intrusion in a protest to the Chinese embassy in Vietnam Monday, the spokesman reportedly said. In turn, he added, China lodged a protest with Vietnam's embassy in Peking over the Vietnamese allegations.

The spokesman was quoted as saying Vietnam authorities had "gone so far as to entirely ignore facts and resort to such tactics of fabricating lies out of thin air, ... to cover up the truth of opposing China and ostracizing Chinese residents."

China also accused Vietnam of trying to win control of all of Southeast Asia and create an "Indochina Federation" with Hanoi at its head, the official Chinese Communist Party newspaper said Tuesday.

Vietnam is "carrying out a naked war of aggression" against Cambodia and is acting a "junior partner of the Soviet Union," the article in the People's Daily said.

It said Vietnam's "victory in the war against U.S. imperialism and the great amount of arms now their disposal have made the Vietnamese authorities' heads swell and their hands itch to get more."

Relations between China and Vietnam have reached a low point since China accused the Vietnamese of persecuting ethnic Chinese who are living in Vietnam.

A Chinese representative negotating to arrange repatriation of the Chinese in Vietnam said Tuesday there had been no progress toward settlement.

In response to what it calls Vietnam's anti-China stance, China has halted aid, withdrawn experts, closed three Vietnamese consulates in three southern Chinese cities. It has said Hanoi is "dancing to Moscow's tune" in persecuting the Chinese residents of Vietnam.

Vietnam has denied the charges and accused China of intimidation.

Americans Awaiting Flight For Home

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — About 300 young Americans swarmed into Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport Wednesday trying to get back to the United States on reduced-fare tickets offered by Pan American World Airways.

"This was supposed to be an inexpensive two-week vacation to Europe, but it's turning out to be a financial disaster," said James D. Collinwood, 25, a medical student from Providence, R.I. "I've been trying to get a seat for almost a week and all the time I'm stuck in Amsterdam it's costing me money I can't really afford."

A Pan Am spokesman said Tuesday the airline had suspended sales for the $50 one-way Amsterdam-Boston tickets because the waiting list had swelled to 2,500.

"I'm just going to hang out at the airport now until I get a flight, although there doesn't seem much chance before the weekend," Collingwood said. "They say most boarding passes until then have already been allocated."

In contrast to Tuesday, when there were only about 40 persons waiting at the airport for a seat on a Pan Am plane, the passengers streamed back Wednesday after the Dutch Civil Aviation Authority told the airline a numbers system it had been using was not in line with standby regulations.

"Now it's first come, first served," a Pan Am spokesman said.

The airline spokesman said it would be at least two weeks before the backlog is cleared and airport authorities have set aside an area for waiting passengers to sleep.

The cheap flights were arranged with the Dutch government for a one-month period, which expires next Saturday, although those with a return ticket can travel until the end of the month.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 13, 1978

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a good time to take any chances as your judgement is not apt to be good right now. Wait for another day to make long-range plans that pertain to your advancement and future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The situation at home could be tiring so do what you can to clear up any misunderstandings first. Show that you are of an open mind and accept good ideas.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are confused by ideas of friends right now, but later you will comprehend them and will cooperate with them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care you do not invest unwisely. Get that talent working more intelligently by thougt and practice. Be happy with loved ones.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21). A new project may be slow in starting, but later you can make up for lost time. Show you are efficient.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Wait for a better time to have that talk with partners and avoid tension. Tone up your health and get routine affairs working better.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact those persons with whom you want to have business dealings and come to a find understanding with them. Make property more valuable by making needed repairs. Get right prices.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 24) Improve your health and you improve your appearance. Meet with a group of good friends and talk over mutual ideas. Something good can come of this.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a very good time for any work of an investigative nature. Meet with a good friend for a happy time together.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your friendships and know which to cultivate and which to weed out. Make new ones, too. Join a group later where you can have the kind of recreation you like.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan 20) Find a better method for handling vocatinal and social duties and take care of them quickly. The evening is especially good for advancing your career, when a fine opportunity presents itself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle the details of a trip you want to take and count the cost well. Get correspondence out. Take no chances in payment of bills.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You feel stymied about a bill you have to pay, but later you see your way clear to do so. Handle a business matter wisely, also. Content better relations with loved ones.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will be able to understand both sides of any situation and would do well in the field of law, especially where reconciling couples are concerned. Teach to stick to own views instead of relying on others.

Washington Man Now On Side Of Spiders

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (UPI) — Dale Lund eyed the tarantula spread menacingly across the expanse of his hand and said: "Eventually, they just look like an eight-legged hamster."

Lund, 29, is helping develop a new image for the large spiders traditionally cast in the villain's role in jungle and horror movies as an evil lurking on the wall or at the foot of the bed.

"They're really very docile," he said, adding that tarantulas are becoming increasingly popular as pets.

Lund has been developing his curiosity about the huge spiders since he bought his first one 14 years ago in an effort to overcome a childhood fear of creepy, crawly things.

Certain the spider was the most frightening living thing he could think of, he bought the tarantula but kept it for two years sealed behind heavy glass and wood with a double padlock on the door, just to be safe.

But when Lund set about attempting to learn what he could about his new house guest, he found there was little known about the creatures.

Since he could find only one book written on tarantulas — that one out of print — Lund decided to write one himself. He titled the book, published in 1977, simply "All About Tarantulas."

Now the tarantulas have brought Lund, who makes his living as a bank teller, a degree of fame, at least among tarantulaphiles.

He began publishing early this year the "Tarantula Times," a newsletter to share information on the spiders.

He's also formed the American Tarantula Society.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I are in our 80s and have invested almost all we have in common stocks of nine utility companies, paying 8 to 9 percent. We were advised to do this, instead of keeping our money in savings certificates paying 6 to 7 3/4 percent. Do you concur?

Back in the 1930s, I lost most of my bank deposits — got 2½ cents on the dollar. I am now afraid of what might happen.

A. Although I would not have advised you to make the big move you did, the recommendation now is that you sit pat.

What happened back in the early 1930s won't happen again, as long as the bank and/or savings and loan association in which you deposit your money are insured. And everyone should have some money in insured savings for emergency purposes.

The higher income you are collecting in dividends from those utility stocks has to be counted as safe income. Good utility commons have long records of paying high dividends and gradually increasing their dividend payouts. They are natural choices for people such as you.

The market prices of utility stocks have dipped recently. But that's nothing to worry about, as long as your reason for holding those stocks in high dividend income.

Q. I invested $12,000 in a municipal bond fund in January. Since then, the value of the fund's shares has declined. I am concerned that higher interest rates will force municipal bond values to drop even further.

Should I redeem my shares of that mutual fund and put my money in savings certificates? I am 52 and in the 32 percent income tax bracket.

A. Your purpose in buying shares of that fund should have been to get tax-free income. You're in a tax bracket where the lower but tax-free interest from municipal bonds provides more keeping money than higher yielding but taxable securities. That situation hasn't changed. So, why think about cashing in your fund shares?

Sure, the market values of municipal bonds have declined for some months now. Because bonds are fixed-income securities, their market prices drop when interest rates go up. That happens to all bonds and to the values of shares of mutual funds which hold bonds.

But, unless your investment aims have changed, there's no reason for you to make a move. Interest rates won't keep going up forever.

Q. My broker sends me statements for stocks I purchase but the statements arrive several days after the "settlement date." The broker says to disregard the date. Is this standard practice?

A. Not at all. The settlement date in "regular way" transactions — the way most stocks are bought and sold — is the fifth business day following the date of the transaction. It is the date on or before which you are supposed to pay for stock bought or deliver stock sold.

The confirmation statement you receive from your broker, among other things, lists the price and date of your purchase or sale and the settlement date. How can you know how much money or stocks to send to the broker, if you don't have your confirmation statement before the settlement date?

It may be that you leave your stocks with the broker, along with enough cash to settle all your transactions. Leaving stocks in "street name" is a common thing. But leaving a bundle of cash with a broker has to be counted as not a very smart business move by a customer.

Eased Grain Surplus Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Domestic and foreign demand for U.S. wheat and livestock feed grains in the coming year will about match 1978 production of those crops and will help slow the growth of surpluses, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

As a result, farmers can look forward to higher prices through much of 1979 for grain, particularly wheat, the department's World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board said.

The report showed stockpiles of grain could decrease slightly from present levels, highest since the early 1960s, if domestic and export demands materialize as indicated.

Also, farmers are storing substantial amounts of grain — especially wheat — for an extended period under the government's three-year reserve program. This has the effect of locking the grain off the free market until prices rise enough to trigger their release for sale.

Thus, with demand projected to continue at a brisk rate, prices of the commodities are expected to improve from their low levels following last year's bumper grain harvest.

For example, the "season average" farm price of wheat in the 1978-79 marketing year that began June 1 was projected at between $2.70 and $3.25 a bushel, compared with $2.31 a bushel for the 12-month average last year.

Corn prices at the farm were projected at $2.10 to $2.30 a bushel in the 1978-79 marketing year to begin Oct. 1 when this year's harvest is ready, compared with $2.03 this season.

The 1978 soybean production will not be estimated until Aug. 10, but the report said that a record crop is possible and that continued strong demand for the oilseed may mean prices to farmers of $5 to $7 a bushel against $5.80 for the 1977 harvest average.

Looking at the supply and demand situation for wheat, the report said that leftover stocks when this marketing year ends next June 1 could total about 1.13 billion bushels, slightly less than the 1.17 billion carried over this spring.

For corn, the carryover on Oct. 1, 1979, may be about 1.07 billion bushels, down from 1.17 billion estimated for this Oct. 1, the report said.

The soybean reserve this Sept. 1, the beginning of the 1978-79 marketing year, is expected to be 125 million bushels. If the crop and its demand materialize as projected, the Sept. 1, 1979, soybean reserve might be about 145 million bushels.

Department experts are prohibited by law from making advance price estimates for cotton. The amount held in reserve when the new year begins for cotton on Aug. 1, however, is expected to be about 5.6 million bales. It could rise to 5.8 million bales by Aug. 1, 1979, the report said.

FFA Head Opts For Writing

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — The president of the Texas Future Farmers of America is among a new breed of agriculturist. He did not want to join the 60,000-member group in the beginning and he does not plan to become a farmer in the future.

Elvin Caraway grew up in the South Plains town of Spur, located "between Boot Hill and Red Mud," joined the FFA because it was required at Spur High School.

Caraway, 20, is a sophomore at Texas Tech and is majoring in agriculture journalism, with the intent of authoring farm journals, doing radio and television farm commentary or public relations work for a large agricultural firm.

During 60,000 miles of travels to visit with high school FFA chapters across the state, Caraway has told students there is no way he could be persuaded to be a farmer and put up with "sandstorms, rattlesnakes and mesquite trees."

"I never realized the business opportunities that are open to young people in farming," said Caraway at the opening of the FFA's 50th anniversary convention underway here this week. "My research shows that if the trends follow, only about 5 or 6 percent of the people going into farming today will actually be tilling the land tomorrow.

"The emphasis seems to be on agribusiness — marketing, retailing and public relations."

Some people have never heard of ag journalism, Caraway laughed, and may think it is the practice of talking to plants to make them grow.

"But it's a new field and it's wide open," he said. "The reason is that scientists and inventors are marketing so many great new products that we are having fewer farmers producing more food. So farming has become a management and economics game."

Caraway said many FFA members, particularly in urban areas, do not actually want to go into farming the land.

"Some of them think of farmers in terms of overalls, boots and dipping snuff. The emphasis in the city seems to be toward horticulture."

Although he does not want to plow the land himself, Caraway said he realized he has profited from farmers and has become committed to serve them.

"Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown said it best when he said a lack of communication is the farmer's biggest problem. I think we can bridge that gap between farmers, consumers and the government," he said.

"When the farmers went up to Washington to let the goats loose, they were trying to tell us that government support prices were strangling them and reducing their self-sufficiency. But because farmers have been so dependent on government subsidies, it will be a gradual process before they can get parity through the free enterprise system and through supply and demand."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

WITH THE RULES BARELY SETTLED for operation of the 1978 farm program, the wheels already are in motion toward announcement of regulations for the 1979 crop.

Farm law requires announcement of the 1979 cotton loan level by next Nov. 1 and the national program acreage must be determined by Dec. 15. Target price, set-aside, disaster program regulations, Commodity Credit Corp. sales policies and procedures for setting farm payment yields are other decisions in the making.

A Texas "task force" on cotton met earlier this month in College Station to decide this state's program needs. The chairman, Jim Goad of Rosebud, this week took recommendations to Washington where he and cotton task force chairmen from other states conferred with top USDA officials.

IT IS EXPECTED THAT PRELIMINARY USDA decisions will be announced in the Federal Register by Aug. 1, after which there will be a 60-day period for public comment.

The Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., representing producers in 25 High Plains counties, made its wishes known to Goad last week in hopes of having a measure of influence on 1979 program details prior to the initial announcements.

Donald A. Johnson, PCG executive vice president, says area producers are most keenly interested in the 1979 loan level and regulations governing operation of the disaster program.

The secretary of agriculture now has authority to base the 1979 loan solely on average U. S. spot market prices, in agreement with PCG legislative policy, and Johnson says the High Plains group is "urging that he use that authority to set the 1979 loan at the legal maximum."

DISASTER PROGRAM REGULATIONS being recommended by the PCG include changes in the method of determining prevented-planting payment eligibility and the way payments on hail and wind-damaged crops are calculated.

In 1978, producers unable to plant cotton before the June 1 required planting date were denied a prevented-planting payment if they later received moisture for planting some other crop.

But when crops were destroyed after planting and after June 1, producers could qualify for a "failed-acreage" payment, whether or not they chose to plant some other crop on the acreage.

"There is no good reason for determining prevented-planting payment eligibility on a basis different from that used to decided failed-acreage payment eligibility," Johnson contends, "and we hope to see this inconsistency in program administration corrected for 1979."

CROPS DAMAGED BY HAIL AND WIND this year are being "appraised" as a certain percentage destroyed and the pounds on which payments are being made are reduced by the number of pounds USDA says the remaining stalks would produce if carried to harvest.

This is being done even when crops are damaged to such an extent as to make continued efforts to achieve production "totally impractical," Johnson points out.

"This has been USDA's policy since the inception of the disaster program in 1974, but it is still wrong and we are continuing our efforts to get it changed," he adds.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures declined while soybeans finished essentially steady on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

The Department of Agriculture's estimates of corn and wheat production were larger than traders had expected.

That accounted for most of the weakness, although grain analysts said the figures were not shockingly high.

Some traders were skeptical about projected corn yields of 91 bushels an acre, noting that late spring planting makes that crop vulnerable to early frost.

Still, the weather has been favorable and corn production was put at 6.15 billion bushels.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $55 cents to $1.50 a bale higher Wednesday.

Concern over dry weather in Northern Texas again spurred some demand for futures contracts, brokers said.

Cattle Futures Rise Led By December

By Reuters

CHICAGO — December reached its highest level in more than a month, Wednesday, to pace live cattle futures to a gain of 32 to 140 points on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Up from the start, prices climbed seven cents a pound above recent lows on a turnover of 22,073 cars.

Traders noted the increase of 1,123 contracts in open interest, along with the light pace of slaughter and steady demand for carcass beef, as supporting influences in local and commission house trade.

Wholesale beef was up one cent at 85 1/2 to 86 1/2 cents per pound. Cash cattle were up $1 to off 50 cents with the top at $57 per hundredweight in Omaha.

The day's slaughter was estimated at 142,000 head. Today, the six markets expect 7,400 head to arrive.

Feeder cattle futures ran up 67 to 145 points led by October at the highest levels since May. Prices were on the plus side all day and lifted 9 1/2 cents per pound from recent lows.

The market attracted fresh support after Tuesday's gains in most contracts. Advances in live cattle futures, along with prospects for plentiful feed supplies, made for a positive attitude, as did some sharp advances in cash feeder cattle.

Six-market arrivals are expected to total 3,100 head today. Cash feeders were steady to up $5 with a top at $84 per hundredweight in San Antonio.

Hog futures finished 17 to 90 points higher, led by distant July. Sales were 5,150 cars.

Prices rose to their highest points in three weeks with distant August at a new season's peak. The market rallied from initial losses of as many as 77 points in distant June and was up as many as 130 before reacting.

Support was attracted on higher cattle futures along with light hog runs and firm cash prices. Resistance in the early trade followed easier pork products, Tuesday, but they strengthened at noon.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 71 to 77 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to $1.50 per hundredweight on a top of $48.25 in Peoria.

Kill on Wednesday was estimated at 241,000 head. The major terminals expect 26,000 head to arrive today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 47 points lower to 25 higher on 6,081 turnovers. August was off most with February at the best gain.

Mart Posts New Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market notched its fifth consecutive gain Wednesday with the help of a steady showing by the dollar in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.64 to 824.93, extending its advance over the past week to 19.14 points.

The rally the market launched last week picked up added impetus from unconfirmed rumors that Texaco had discovered gas in the Baltimore Canyon off the New Jersey coast.

A Texaco spokesman declined comment other than to say that the company would have made an announcement had there been a discovery to report.

Brokers also said an upturn by the dollar against leading foreign currencies gave the market a boost.

In addition, stock prices apparently have drawn support lately from hopes that Congress will approve a proposal to give more favorable tax treatment to capital gains.

New York (AP) —Wednsday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

State Court Stands By Decision For New Trial

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused Wednesday to change its decision ordering a new murder trial for Death Row inmate John Whitmore, whose alleged accomplice was acquitted.

The court split 5-4 in rejecting the state's motion for a rehearing.

Whitmore was convicted in Fort Worth of hiring Harrell Totty to kill Judy Carol Rummel, Whitmore's girlfriend, in September 1974.

In another death penalty case, the court upheld Alton Von Byrd's conviction in the 1976 shooting death of a San Augustine woman.

Totty was not called to testify at Whitmore's trial because defense lawyers felt he would invoke Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

The appeals court said an 1880 case established "that where two are jointly indicted and one is tried and convicted, and subsequently the other is tried and acquitted, a new trial will be granted the former to obtain the testimony of the latter where it appears that the new evidence is legal, competent and material to the convicted defendant's defense."

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Leon Douglas said the "rule apparently can be used to invalidate any conviction where there is more than one defendant charged with the commission of an offense."

In the Von Byrd case, the court ruled that state employees can be called as "disinterested" expert witnesses. Von Byrd was convicted in the shooting death of Linda Price, whose body was found in a wooded area.

Among his arguments was that the judge failed to appoint a "disinterested" expert witness when he selected a psychiatrist from Rusk State Hospital to examine Von Byrd.

"Were we to accept the appellant's contention we would have to likewise hold that trial judges are not disinterested in the outcome of trials," the appeals court said.

In other cases, the court:

— Reversed Raul Garza Villalobos' murder conviction in Fort Bend County because a prosecutor told the jury he thought Villalobos was guilty. The defendant's 25-year prison sentence was dismissed and the trial returned to Richmond.

— Threw out the Tarrant County robbery conviction of John Florio because a defense lawyer was not allowed to ask prospective jurors if they believed a policeman could lie from the witness stand. Florio was sentenced to 60 years in prison. The case was returned to Fort Worth.

— Upheld the 99-year sentence assessed Elvin Rufus DeHart by a Texarkana jury in the Christmas Eve 1974 beating death of 3-year-old Tabatha Dawn Snyder.

— Affirmed a Dallas jury's verdict assessing Michael Lou Garrett life imprisonment in the Aug. 11, 1975, beating death of Paula Calvert.

Appeal Limit Firm On Tax Matters

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Internal Revenue Service assesses extra taxes from you, you have 90 days to appeal to the tax court and no longer.

A Compton, Calif., firm has learned that limit in a case rejected by the court for not having filed on time.

Last Oct. 25 was the deadline for the appeal from Pete James Enterprises Inc., and the firm's lawyer finished preparing the appeal that day, according to court papers in the case.

The lawyer then stamped the envelope containing the appeal on an office postage machine and deposited the material in a mailbox.

When the material arrived at tax court, however, it bore two dates. One, Oct. 25, stamped by the lawyer's office postage meter, and another, Oct. 26, stamped by the U.S. Postal Service.

The official postal service stamp is the controlling date, the tax court ruled, and refused to hear the case because it was not filed in time.

The tax court added, however: "Hopefully petitioner will be able to pay the deficiency ... and file an action for refund of the amount so paid in the United States District Court or the United States Court of Claims in order to obtain a judicial determination on the merits of the rather unusual issue involved."

Bond Ordered For Amarillo DA

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a $1,000 bond Wednesday for District Attorney Tom Curtis of Amarillo Wednesday and scheduled a hearing July 19 on Curtis' appeal of a contempt citation.

Curtis was assessed a three-day jail term after saying District Judge H. Bryan Poff was prejudiced toward a former Potter County commissioner accused of theft. The exchange came during the pretrial hearing of Bob Hicks, accused of theft.

The district attorney said the judge was messing up a "darn good case."

THE TET OFFENSIVE

In the "Tet offensive" of Jan. 30, 1968, the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese attacked 30 provincial capitals in South Vietnam. The U.S. Embassy in Saigon was occupied for six hours. Record casualties were suffered on both sides.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE—I am a 68-year-old veteran of World War II with an honorable discharge. I need your help. My health is borken and I would like to have institutional care at a V.A. Hospital. I was in Houston V.A. Hospital for three weeks in 1973. I was discharged and got better for a while.

My Social Security check is small and I can't qualify for Medicare. Could your efforts be helpful in geting me admittance to this V.A. Hospital or another? The admittance personnel are quite negative and obstinate. Thank you. This could possibly prolong my life. — W.M., Houston

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — I provided your letter to officials with the V.A. Hospital in Houston and they advise me to have you come to the hospital for an examination and evaluation for admittance as soon as possible. They assure me that they will assist you in every way they can.

MESSAGE — I am writing to ask you assistance in getting my daughter returned to this country from Japan. When she graduated from high school she enlisted in the Navy and went through basic training. She was then assigned to Kamiseya, Japan for two years. First, I contend that a two-year assignment to a foreign culture is too long for an 18-year-old when it is the first time away from home. I have discussed this with her Base Commander and although he agrees with me he has been powerless to change the system.

That is only part of the problem. She was due to receive reassignment orders in March, but she has just been told that the Navy does not have enough funds to reassign her to the U.S. This will make her stay in Japan almost three full years. Is there anything you can do to locate the funds for allocation to the Navy (if this is really the problem) and end this nonsense? I appreciate your help. — D.S., Houston

SENATOR BENSTON RESPONDS — Naval officials inform me that a shortage of permanent change of station funds is at the root of the problem. They are seeking to correct the situation by transferring funds from other programs, a step that requires congressional approval. Until Congress approves the transfer, however, the Navy must proceed with spending plans with its budget as it now stands.

State Court Stands By Decision For New Trial

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused Wednesday to change its decision ordering a new murder trial for Death Row inmate John Whitmore, whose alleged accomplice was acquitted.

The court split 5-4 in rejecting the state's motion for a rehearing.

Whitmore was convicted in Fort Worth of hiring Harrell Totty to kill Judy Carol Rummel, Whitmore's girlfriend, in September 1974.

In another death penalty case, the court upheld Alton Von Byrd's conviction in the 1976 shooting death of a San Augustine woman.

Totty was not called to testify at Whitmore's trial because defense lawyers felt he would invoke Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Totty later was tried separately and acquitted.

The appeals court said an 1880 case established "that where two are jointly indicted and one is tried and convicted, and subsequently the other is tried and acquitted, a new trial will be granted the former to obtain the testimony of the latter where it appears that the new evidence is legal, competent and material to the convicted defendant's defense."

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Leon Douglas said the "rule apparently can be used to invalidate any conviction where there is more than one defendant charged with the commission of an offense."

In the Von Byrd case, the court ruled that state employees can be called as "disinterested" expert witnesses. Von Byrd was convicted in the shooting death of Linda Price, whose body was found in a wooded area.

Among his arguments was that the judge failed to appoint a "disinterested" expert witness when he selected a psychiatrist from Rusk State Hospital to examine Von Byrd.

The court said that just because a witness is employed by the state does not mean he automatically would be prejudiced against the defendant.

"Were we to accept the appellant's contention we would have to likewise hold that trial judges are not disinterested in the outcome of trials," the appeals court said.

In other cases, the court:

— Reversed Raul Garza Villalobos' murder conviction in Fort Bend County because a prosecutor told the jury he thought Villalobos was guilty. The defendant's 25-year prison sentence was dismissed and the trial returned to Richmond.

— Threw out the Tarrant County robbery conviction of John Florio because a defense lawyer was not allowed to ask prospective jurors if they believed a policeman could lie from the witness stand. Florio was sentenced to 60 years in prison. The case was returned to Fort Worth.

— Upheld the 99-year sentence assessed Elvin Rufus DeHart by a Texarkana jury in the Christmas Eve 1974 beating death of 3-year-old Tabatha Dawn Snyder.

— Affirmed a Dallas jury's verdict assessing Michael Lou Garrett life imprisonment in the Aug. 11, 1975, beating death of Paula Calvert.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE—I am a 68-year-old veteran of World War II with an honorable discharge. I need your help. My health is borken and I would like to have institutional care at a V.A. Hospital. I was in Houston V.A. Hospital for three weeks in 1973. I was discharged and got better for a while.

My Social Security check is small and I can't qualify for Medicare. Could your efforts be helpful in geting me admittance to this V.A. Hospital or another? The admittance personnel are quite negative and obstinate. Thank you. This could possibly prolong my life. — W.M., Houston

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — I provided your letter to officials with the V.A. Hospital in Houston and they advise me to have you come to the hospital for an examination and evaluation for admittance as soon as possible. They assure me that they will assist you in every way they can.

MESSAGE — I am writing to ask you assistance in getting my daughter returned to this country from Japan. When she graduated from high school she enlisted in the Navy and went through basic training. She was then assigned to Kamiseya, Japan for two years. First, I contend that a two-year assignment to a foreign culture is too long for an 18-year-old when it is the first time away from home. I have discussed this with her Base Commander and although he agrees with me he has been powerless to change the system.

That is only part of the problem. She was due to receive reassignment orders in March, but she has just been told that the Navy does not have enough funds to reassign her to the U.S. This will make her stay in Japan almost three full years. Is there anything you can do to locate the funds for allocation to the Navy (if this is really the problem) and end this nonsense? I appreciate your help. — D.S., Houston

SENATOR BENSTON RESPONDS — Naval officials inform me that a shortage of permanent change of station funds is at the root of the problem. They are seeking to correct the situation by transferring funds from other programs, a step that requires congressional approval. Until Congress approves the transfer, however, the Navy must proceed with spending plans with its budget as it now stands.
