Gingrich won't run

House Speaker Newt Gingrich ended a brief flirtation with the 1996 presidential race Monday, saying he had decided it was more important to concentrate on the ambitious GOP congressional agenda. "I think I should stay and focus on what I am doing and get things done," Gingrich told a business group in suburban Atlanta. "I hardly need to run for president to get my message out." Page 5A

Davis denies he was 'man in black'

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press

FORT WORTH, — As his ex-wife watched with contempt, former millionaire Cullen Davis denied again Monday he was the "man in black" who gunned down four people in a bloody rampage 19 years ago at his secluded hilltop mansion.

"I was the object of a conspiracy which framed me for a murder I did not commit," he told a news conference that quickly turned ominous with the unexpected arrival of Priscilla Davis.

After a brief, hostile confrontation, Davis asked his ex-wife's forgiveness "for any grief that I've caused you in our lifetime."

"It's in God's hands," she replied coldly.

Asked if she forgave Davis, she snapped: "No."

Davis, 61, made it clear he was not admitting to being the gunman who invaded the Davis mansion in August 1976 and killed Priscilla's boyfriend and her 12-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Davis was critically wounded, as was a chance mansion visitor.

The three survivors of the midnight carnage identified Davis as the man dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig. He subsequently was acquitted of murder and murder-for-hire charges.

Davis summoned reporters Monday to respond to "defamatory and slanderous" statements by actress Heather Locklear and to express

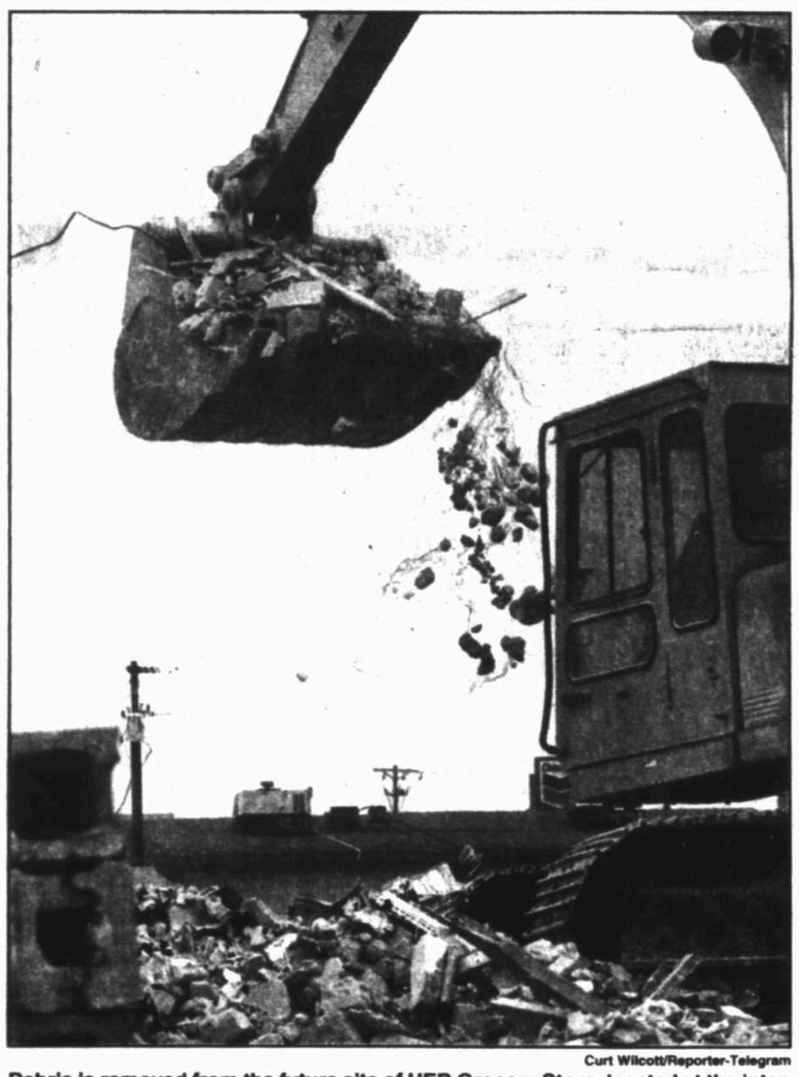
Pace of city's retail expansion picks up



Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Debris is removed from the future site of HEB Grocery Store, located at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and Midkiff Road.

Several new retailers are making plans — or giving serious consideration — to build along Loop 250.

As a result, retail development along the loop and around town — which took off about a year ago — looks to continue throughout the year.

"I think we're going to have a bunch more this year," Mayor Bobby Burns said.

Besides the stores and restaurants that have made definitive plans to locate on the loop, "there are like 20 maybes out there," Burns said.

Two major newcomers to Midland will be: a Circuit City electronics store being built on the northeast corner of Midland Drive and Loop 250, and a Target store that has set its sites on the southwest corner of Midland Drive and Loop 250. Developers for Target are scheduled to appear before the city's Planning and Zoning Commission later this month.

Meanwhile, Lowe's hardware store is scouting out two locations: near the southwest corner of Loop 250 and Midland Drive, and at Wadley Avenue and Loop 250. A site is expected to be selected within the next two to three months, a city official said.

Moving down the loop eastward, four retailers — Barnes and Noble bookstore, Michael's hobby shop, Office Max and Pet Smart — are looking at locating between Whitmire Drive and Ward Street near the Best Buy.

Gore lashes out, says extremists mustn't win

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Striking back Monday in the row over President Clinton's surgeon general nominee, Vice President Al Gore called Dr. Henry Foster Jr. the victim of an anti-abortion campaign to intimidate Congress. "We're not going to let the extremists win," he declared.

But critics of the Tennessee obstetrician showed no sign of easing up. House Speaker Newt Gingrich said in Georgia, "I think he's going to be very hard to confirm. I think it's going to be a very embarrassing set of hearings."

In Washington, White House press secretary Mike McCurry acknowledged, "We have our work cut out for us."

But McCurry also joined in the tougher rhetoric the White House has begun using. He said that extremists in the right-to-life movement "have now hooked Republicans and Congress by the nose and they're dragging them around."

Grand Canyon tourist plane loses engine, crashes, kills 8

TUSAYAN, Ariz. (AP) — A plane flying tourists to the Grand Canyon apparently lost an engine and crashed while trying to return to the airport Monday, killing eight of 10 people aboard, authorities said.

Two other passengers were being treated for serious injuries at the scene 2 miles northeast of Grand Canyon Airport, said Coconino County Sheriff's Sgt. Raoul Osegueda.

There was a fire when the plane crashed amid pine trees, Osegueda said.

The plane, a Piper Navajo, belongs to Las Vegas Airlines, a tour company that specializes in scenic flights over Grand Canyon National Park, Osegueda said.

It's believed the flight began in Las Vegas and had completed a tour of the park, said Fred O'Donnell, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Los Angeles.

Aggravated sexual assault, kidnapping charges will be included in capital murder charge against Henry Ortiz, police say.

Autopsy indicates 10-year-old had been sexually assaulted

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A 10-year-old girl who was found dead at a neighbor's apartment Friday had been sexually assaulted, according to preliminary autopsy results.

The results from the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas stated Julianne Powell's cause of death was suffocation and/or strangulation, Sgt. David Garcia said at a press conference Monday.

"We won't know for sure the exact cause of death until the full report comes in," he said. "Right now, we know that she died of a constricted airway."

Miss Powell was found dead in the apartment of Henry Ortiz, 41, about 7 p.m. Friday evening at Quinten's Walk Apartments, 3100 W. Caldera Blvd. Both the suspect and the victim lived in the same building.

Commissioners endorse Pacific trade corridor, I-27 extension

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday wholeheartedly passed two resolutions to bolster the West Texas economy through world trade and recreation.

The far-reaching resolution in support of the "La Entrada Al Pacifico" Trade Corridor contemplates the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and cites the "major trading opportunities" with the Western Mexican states of Chihuahua, Durango, and Sinaloa.

"If the corridor is approved and built, it would make Midland and Odessa and the entire Permian Basin a major distribution center for products not only going to Mexico and South America," said Midland County Judge Jeff Norwood, "but all over the world through the (deep-sea) port of Topolobampo near Los Mochis" off the Pacific Ocean at the Gulf of California.

The corridor would include the extension of Interstate Highway 27 southward from Lubbock through Midland-Odessa, past Fort Stockton at the east-west Interstate Highway 10, and then to Presidio-Ojinaga on either side of the Rio Grande.

"It would also attract manufacturing jobs to the Permian Basin," Norwood said, "and would be very, very significant to the long-term economic growth of the region."

The Mexican state of Chihuahua supports the corridor.

And the envisioned 20-year project would include upgrading the Orient Railroad from Fort Worth to Presidio.

Mexico would build an improved major roadway from Presidio-Ojinaga to Chihuahua City, improve the Ojinaga-to-Chihuahua City highway, upgrade the rail line between Chihuahua City and the port of Topolobampo, and would constructi new western-bound highway system across mountainous Western Mexico by way of Copper Canyon and on to Topolobampo.

Norwood said he expects the Interstate Highway 35 Coalition in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to support the corridor. I-35, which pretty well divides East Texas from West Texas, provides a major trade route into industrialized Eastern Mexico.

"We expect the I-35 coalition to approve a resolution in support of the corridor," Norwood said. "The Permian Basin is united in this effort to get the cor-

Opposition wins major victory in Mexico

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Mexico's largest opposition party on Monday celebrated the biggest electoral victory of its history, which analysts said could help end 66 years of single-party rule in Mexico.

The National Action Party claimed it won the governorship of the state of Jalisco, control of the state legislature and 90 of 124 city halls, including Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city.

"This triumph shows it is possible to change the government ... through the force of votes and not through the force of bullets," said Felipe Calderon, secretary-general of the center-right party, known as the PAN.

Sunday's vote was a vindication of President Ernesto Zedillo's promise of fair elections and greater democracy in Mexico.

It also came three days after Zedillo sent troops to crack down on leftist rebels in the southern state of Chiapas, breaking a year-long truce. That move thrilled hard-liners in his ruling party and may have helped dissuade them from challenging Zedillo with a fraudulent election in Jalisco, analysts said.

With 40 percent of the gubernatorial vote counted, the PAN's candidate, Alberto Cardenas, had 54.46 percent and the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party candidate, Eugenio Ruiz Orozco, had 35.9 percent. Eight other parties trailed far behind.

Cardenas, 36, is a former mayor of Ciudad Guzman and a university professor.

"We accept the results. ... We know the vote did not favor us," said Rafael Gonzalez Pimienta, state president of the governing party, known as the PRI.

In the past, the PRI had contested claims of opposition victory at the polls and had admitted losing only two statewide elections in its history — both to the PAN.

For years, presidents have been promising to clean up Mexican elections, but opponents have continued to accuse the PRI of using fraud, force and public funds to maintain its hold on power.

The last election before Zedillo took office in December, a November vote in Tabasco state, was marred by widespread fraud allegations. Militants within his party rebelled against Zedillo's efforts to solve the dispute in January, causing the president to appear weak.

"It is very important that did not happen in Jalisco," said Jaime Sanchez Susarrey, a political columnist and professor at the University of Guadalajara. "The government of the republic maintained control."

The election Sunday was the first since a sudden devaluation of the Mexican peso in December slashed Mexicans' buying power and forced the country to appeal for international aid to save its economy.

Sanchez suggested that the vote could be the first of a series of PAN victories and said the party has a chance to win control of Mexico's lower house of congress in 1997.

The World in brief

Balladur promises to change France for better

PARIS — France's presidential election campaign got into high gear on Monday, with the conservative front-runner, Prime Minister Edouard Balladur, promising to cut income taxes and unemployment, and opponents accusing him of being indecisive. The 65-year-old conservative prime minister said that if elected he would probably propose setting a limit of one seven-year term on the presidency, his own included, and submit the measure to a referendum within six months.

"For 20 years, it is true, our country has been in a crisis," Balladur said. "France has to change, with the support of the people, and change more deeply." Francois Mitterrand, the socialist incumbent, has held the presidency for nearly 14 years. Balladur never used the word malaise, but he painted a picture of a country "dehumanized" by unemployment, housing shortages, and other stresses of modern life and said he could restore hope and self-confidence.

French voters will cast votes for him or one of the other expected dozen or so candidates on April 23 and, if no one wins more than 50 percent of the vote, choose between the two leading candidates on May 7. Public opinion polls predict that Balladur, an aloof technocrat who looks like a banker, as the likely winner.

U.N. accuses Serbian commander with genocide

PARIS — The U.N. tribunal investigating war crimes in the Balkans charged the Serbian commander of a concentration camp in Bosnia with genocide on Monday, using a term for the mass killing of Bosnian Muslims that the United States and other Western governments have sought to avoid.

The tribunal indicted Zeljko Meakic, the overall commander of the murderous Serbian-run Omarska camp in northwestern Bosnia, on charges of "genocide and crimes against humanity." It also charged 20 other Serbian commanders, guards and visitors at the camp with war crimes.

The use of the term genocide for what happened at Omarska, a mine complex that was used by the Serbs as a concentration camp between May and August 1992, appeared significant in that it suggested precisely the kind of orchestrated project that Serbian leaders have sought to deny and Western governments have sought to gloss over. More than 10,000 people from northwestern Bosnia, most of them Muslims but also many Croats, are known to have been imprisoned in Omarska, where executions took place daily and the Serbs eliminated the Muslim elite of surrounding towns including Prijedor.

U.S. unhappy with Egypt's stand on nuke treaty

WASHINGTON — Administration officials said on Monday that the United States has told Egypt, its closest Arab ally in the Middle East, that it is unhappy that Cairo plans to oppose an indefinite extension of the worldwide treaty limiting nuclear arms. "We have had an extensive dialogue with the Egyptians on this issue, and they understand clearly that indefinite extension of the nonproliferation treaty is vital to the national security interests of the United States," a senior administration official.

The official said that Secretary of State Warren Christopher told Egypt's foreign minister, Amr Moussa, on Sunday that Egypt's opposition to extending the treaty was marring Washington's otherwise strong relationship with his country.

The Clinton administration is gently trying to pressure Egypt on the agreement, known as the Nuclear Non-Proliferatiion Treaty, the officials said, because it values that country's cooperation in pushing the Middle East peace talks forward. Germany marks 50-year anniversary of nightmare of Dresden

DRESDEN, Germany (NYT) — With candlelight and church bells, requiem and prayer, Dresden on Monday night observed the 50th anniversary of its wartime destruction by British and American bombers, an occasion that led the Germans to ask if they were victims, too.

The ceremonies here, on a cool night at a bend in the River Elbe, were the most elaborate Germany has arranged to commemorate a war in which its troops, tanks, and aircraft were finally vanquished after spreading destruction across Europe.

Monday night's observance came at a time when Germany's generations have turned, and when many of those who manage the economy that again makes it Europe's giant have no direct recollection of National Socialism or its horrors. Not only that, Dresden itself stood and fell as an emblem of a ruthless air campaign to terrorize civilians and thereby break the will to fight.

On the night of Feb. 13, 1945, when the first of two waves of British Lancaster bombers rumbled over Dresden, the city was virtually defenseless against air attack and its streets and schools were packed with refugees streaming west before the Soviet army's advance.

The British target area was the city center, away from any military installations. American B-17 Flying Fortresses flew a third attack on Feb. 14, 1945. The death toll is estimated at 35,000.

Dresden, thus, has a particular symbolism for many Germans, and, in an address on Monday to mark the occasion, President Roman Herzog sought to define a way in which Germans might honor their own dead without being accused of using the memory to minimize the atrocities committed in their name.

One year later, anger persists over massacre in West Bank

KIRYAT ARBA, West Bank — One year after Jewish settler Baruch Goldstein murdered 29 Palestinians knelt in prayer, he remains the focus of fury and revenge both for militant Muslims and Jewish extremists who consider the Israeli-Palestinian peace accord to be a pact with the devil.

By the Muslim calendar, Tuesday marks the anniversary of his massacre and of his own death at the hands of those he failed to gun down in Hebron's Tomb of the Patriarchs at dawn last Feb. 25. His family and admirers have announced a memorial service for Thursday.

Extremists on both sides of the conflict have threatened to turn this anniversary into an occasion for further settling of scores following months of some of the worst anti-Israel terror in history, including a double suicide bombing last month that killed 21 and plunged peace talks into crisis.

"Precautions have been taken," Lt. Col. Moshe Fogel, spokesman for the Israeli army, said, referring to the greatly increased security patrols and roadblocks visible in and near the occupied lands, especially around Hebron.

(An Israeli cab driver was stabbed to death in his taxi in Jerusalem Monday, Reuters reported.

("It was an incident very typical of the Ramadan period, which radicals see as an excellent time to carry out attacks," Israel's national police chief, Inspector-General Assaf Hefetz told reporters.

(There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

(Asked if the attack might have been timed to coincide with the anniversary of a Jewish settler's killing of some 30 Muslim worshippers in Hebron a year ago, Jerusalem Police Chief Arye Amit said: "It could be that in the end we will reach that conclusion."

Chechnya, Russia reach limited cease-fire accord

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russians and Chechens drank a toast to their dead Monday, then agreed to safeguard the living with a limited truce that halts the use of heavy artillery.

But reports of sporadic fighting in and around Grozny, the capital, tempered hopes that the latest cease-fire in the two-month war could succeed where others have failed.

Vladimir Nikanorov, a Russian Defense Ministry spokesman, said the agreement was reached during five hours of talks between the commander of Russian troops in Chechnya, Col. Gen. Anatoly Kulikov, and Aslan Maskhadov, the chief of Chechen forces.

Under the pact, fighting with heavy artillery will stop Tuesday, Nikanorov said in Moscow.

It was not immediately clear whether Chechen fighters, who are in scattered, isolated groups, would honor a cease-fire. Truces in December and January collapsed within hours.

The talks were held in Sleptsovsk, a village in the neighboring republic of Ingushetia, 30 miles west of Grozny. Ingushetian Vice President Boris Agapov attended as an observer.

"It was the first serious meeting on a very high level," Agapov said. He described the talks as complicated but "businesslike and calm."

Agapov said the agreement was "to stop all military action and guarantee to stop using air forces, heavy artillery and grenade launchers."

He said the two adversaries agreed in principle to devise ways to exchange bodies and prisoners of war. Details will be worked out when talks resume Wednesday, Agapov said.

At one point, he said, the negotiators rose and drank a toast to all the dead on both sides.

The cease-fire came amid reports that Russians continued to shell Chechen villages southwest of Grozny on Monday morning.

While artillery fire was still audible in the southern parts of the city Monday, the Russians appeared to have secured the north. A few civilians were out on the streets, but soldiers on foot and in tanks, trucks and armored personnel carriers continued their patrols.

Occasional small-arms fire rang out, and residents and soldiers said sniper fire increased significantly throughout the city at night.

As soon as the agreement was reached, the ITAR-Tass news agency said, Kulikov ordered his troops to stop firing heavy artillery at Chechen targets from Sleptsovsk.

The news agency quoted Maskhadov, the Chechen commander, as saying that President Dzhokhar Dudayev had told him to confine the talks "only to military issues" and avoid political discussions.

Russia sent up to 40,000 troops into the republic on Dec. 11 to crush the republic's drive for independence from Russia.

The war has killed thousands and forced hundreds of thousands of Chechens from their homes. Russian bombardments have largely destroyed Grozny and damaged surrounding villages.

In recent days, as Russian forces consolidated their grip on Grozny, the fighting has spread to villages to the east and west.

The Interfax news agency said the Russian army on Monday shelled the village of Argun, 19 miles east of Grozny. The village has withstood weeks of pounding by Russian artillery.

Highs to reach 60s under clouds

Staff Report

Tuesday's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 60s and southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be cloudy with a high near 70.

After an overnight low of 30, Monday's high reached 57, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1962. The record low was 13 set in 1963.

STATE

Drizzle froze to bridges and overpasses in North and West Texas, creating hazardous driving conditions that resulted in more than 60 accidents since Sunday.

Forecasters issued two winter weather advisories for freezing rain and sleet for West Texas and the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles. Motorists were cautioned to reduce speeds and allow extra time in reaching their destinations, but some did not heed the warning.

Police in Amarillo responded to at least three dozen fender-benders Monday morning. Thirty-five year old Knoxie Dillger died Monday after her car slid on a city street covered with ice and was hit broadside by another car.

Lubbock police reported about 60 accidents since Sunday evening, including one on Interstate 27 that sent nine people to University Medical Center.

Icy roads were blamed for an accident early Sunday night that killed one person and injured another in Plainview.

According to reports from the Department of Public Safety in Lubbock, 24-year-old Derrick D. Ryan of Pampa, was ejected from a 1994 GEO Tracker as it rolled over near the intersection of I-27 and the Dimmitt Road.

NATION

Heavy snow piled up around the Great Lakes on Monday, stranding motorists in upstate New York, and a fresh storm system blew into the Northwest with rain, snow and wind up to 100 mph.

Wind picked up moisture from the Great Lakes and dropped it as "lake effect" snow on parts of Michigan and New York state.

Snow fell at a rate of inches an hour in parts of New York along lakes Erie and Ontario, closing schools Monday in the snowbelts around Buffalo and north of Syracuse.

Blowing snow closed parts of Interstate 81 north of Syracuse.

"It's miserable. We're still in the midst of a blizzard," said Edward Sinser, undersheriff in Jefferson County north of Syracuse, where at least 2 feet of snow fell over the weekend.

About a half-dozen community fire halls in the Watertown area about 60 miles north of Syracuse were opened Monday afternoon for stranded motorists, said state police Sgt. Mike Maurerer. One had about 30 people waiting out the weather, he said.

Parts of Upper Michigan had gotten as much as 40 inches of snow since Friday.

A low pressure system centered off the Oregon coast kicked up rain, snow and wind across Oregon and Washington and into Northern California, northern Nevada and Idaho.

Up to 6 inches of snow fell by midday over Oregon's Coast Range, with 4 to 8 inches overnight farther inland around Heppner and Umatilla. Up to 4 inches fell in central and southern Idaho.

Heavy rain fell in parts of Northern California, changing to snow at elevations as low as 500 feet, with 6 inches reported near Laytonville in Mendocino County. Redding reported 0.83 of an inch of rain.

CRASH: Plane goes down, eight die

(From 1A)

Canyon Airport, 175 miles north of Phoenix and a few miles south of the park's main south entrance.

It took off at about 3:35 and almost immediately reported trouble, O'Donnell said.

"The pilot reported having lost an engine and declared an emergency, and we believe was attempting to return to ... Grand Canyon," O'Donnell said.

An employee at the airline's office at North Las Vegas Airport refused to comment or bring a company official to the phone.

The airport is the base for much of the lucrative Grand Canyon tour industry.

There have been numerous crashes of tour planes around the Grand Canyon in recent years, and Congress has imposed restrictions on air tours over the canyon, in part due to safety concerns.

DENIES: Former millionaire assails miniseries

(From 1A)

"outrage" at the ABC miniseries based in part on the Texas murder case.

Davis assailed the show for its "gross distortion and misrepresentation of our lives."

The show, "Texas Justice," aired Sunday and Monday nights with Peter Strauss portraying Davis and Ms. Locklear his ex-wife Priscilla.

Dennis Franz appeared as defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

The show is based on one of four books about the case.

"We have been portrayed in false light, insulted and humiliated before a watching nation," he said. "We have been damaged, our privacy invaded and our emotions distressed by this perverse invention of the network moguls."

He said he had no plans to sue the producers, but Davis told the hastily arranged session that he and his third wife, Karen, are writing a book to "set the record straight" on the criminal charges and their subsequent conversion to Christianity.

For a tense half-hour, Cullen, Karen and Priscilla were within a few feet of one another.

Davis read a prepared statement in which he accused Ms. Locklear of making slanderous statements in a Friday appearance on ABC's Good Morning America.

Davis admitted that he did not see the show but was advised that Ms. Locklear "said I beat the rap, that I was guilty and that I bought my way out."

On the show, host Joan Lunden asked Ms. Locklear if she played the role from the point of view that Davis was guilty.

"That he's guilty, absolutely," Ms. Locklear replied. "Priscilla, the character I play, said she saw him and there were other eyewitnesses."

The case began unfolding in August 1976 when a gunman invaded the $6 million Davis mansion on Fort Worth's southwest side.

The intruder killed Andrea Wilborn, Priscilla's daughter by a previous marriage, and Stan Farr, 30, Priscilla's live-in boyfriend. Priscilla and Cullen Davis were estranged, but not divorced, at the time.

Mrs. Davis, now 53, was seriously wounded, as was a young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, now 40.

Gavrel's teen-age date, Beverly Bass, escaped unharmed.

Davis insisted from the outset he was innocent.

After the longest, costliest murder trial in Texas history, an Amarillo jury acquitted him of killing Andrea, whose body was found in the basement of the mansion.

Nine months after the verdict, Davis was rearrested and charged with solicitation of capital murder, a case almost as bizarre as the mansion shootings.

An FBI informant swore that Davis ordered him to kill 15 people, including a divorce judge and the three survivors of the 1976 siege.

The FBI videotaped and tape recorded two meetings between Davis and the informant and arrested Davis after he handed over $25,000 purportedly earmarked for the slaying of his divorce judge.

That case first was tried in Houston, and ended in a mistrial in January 1979. Later that year, jurors in Fort Worth acquitted Davis of the murder-for-hire charges.

In 1987, Priscilla Davis and her ex-husband, Jack Wilborn, consolidated their wrongful death suits stemming from the slaying of the 12-year-old and dragged Davis back into court.

The $16.5 million civil case also ended in a deadlocked jury, which, to some extent, was just as well. By this time the largely oil-based Davis empire was crumbling.

When Davis filed for bankruptcy, news reports put his debts at $865 million and his assets at $1.8 million.

"I didn't spend all my money on lawyers. The company went bankrupt because of the crash of the oil industry, not because of my trials," Davis said.

Davis was not aware at once that his ex-wife had surfaced at Monday's session accompanied by her Dallas attorney, Cynthia Solls.

"I have nothing to say to Priscilla," he said in response to a question.

But again reacting to a question from the media, he turned and asked Priscilla for forgiveness.

Davis also acknowledged that he previously sought and received forgiveness from Jack Wilborn but stressed that "it had nothing to do with a confession of killing his daughter."

PACE: Retail construction sites abound in city

(From 1A)

they're definite but they're a long way from just looking," said Wisconsin-based developer David Shea, who owns the property.

In addition, there are a couple of other retailers interested in the Shea property but it's too early to name names, he said.

Meanwhile, groundbreakings for the long-awaited Olive Garden and Black-Eyed Pea restaurants — just east of Ward Street — are anticipated within the next few weeks. The eateries are expected to be serving customers by June.

Other retail construction developments around town include:

■ The H-E-B Grocery Co. — which is building a store at Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue — will be constructing a larger store than originally announced.

"Our plan was a 65,000-square-foot store. Now were are planning between 75,000 square feet to possibly as large as 80,000 square feet," said Kristi Ozmun, director of public affairs for H-E-B.

■ A Chick-Fil-A fast-food restaurant will be opening west of Midland Drive on the loop near the Wal-Mart Super Center.

■ Another Kent Kwik convenience store is planned for Wadley Avenue at the loop. Developers are expected to take plans before the city's Planning and Zoning Commission later this month.

■ Wondered what's under construction just east of Chili's Bar & Grill? The building will be security storage units.

■ Plans for a Venture department store are on hold because of contract negotiations between retailer and land owner. The retailer had its eye on property on the north side of the loop east of Billinglsly Boulevard.

GORE: Vice president attacks Foster opponents

(From 1A)

Douglas Johnson, a spokesman for the National Right to Life Committee, said the administration was just trying to change the subject. "The White House now resorts to name calling in a desperate attempt to distract from the growing revelations regarding Dr. Foster's 30-year history as an abortionist and an abortion-drug innovator," he said.

President Clinton left the strong talk to his officials, saying only that the controversy was not distracting him from other work and that he expected Foster to be confirmed if considered "by a fair-minded Senate."

Senate hearings are expected next month with a confirmation vote to follow.

Dispatching Gore to Tennessee was the latest in an aggressive set of White House moves to save the troubled nomination. While most nominees are held from public view until their confirmation hearings, Foster has defended himself in a medical school speech, a newspaper article and a national television interview.

On Monday, sitting elbow-to-elbow with Foster in a cramped low-income apartment, Gore stepped up the White House campaign to emphasize the doctor's efforts to reduce teen-age pregnancy among inner-city youths. The apartment houses Foster's "I Have a Future" program that teaches self-esteem and urges youths to abstain from sex.

Fewer unwanted pregnancies would mean fewer abortions, Gore said.

"Anybody who wants to see fewer abortions in this country ought to applaud the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster," said Gore, a former Tennessee senator. "He has devoted his life ... to making abortion less necessary."

The remarks were clearly aimed at anti-abortion groups rallying against the nomination — and the lawmakers who listen to them. The White House hopes to label any senator voting against Foster as an opponent of legalized abortions.

"There are people in this country who want to criminalize a woman's right to choose and they are now trying to make Dr. Foster a victim ... in order to make an ideological, political point and win on behalf of the extremists," Gore said.

"We are not going to let the extremists defeat this man," he said.

Foster had little to say, promising to defend himself at his confirmation hearing. "People have a right to speak," he said of his critics. "And I have a right to speak."

Asked for his position on abortion, Foster said, "Safe, legal and rare."

Foster has said he performed 39 abortions and supervised a drug trial in which 55 more women ended their pregnancies after moving to Tennessee in the 1970s. The White House angered some lawmakers, including Democrats, by twice understating the number of abortions performed by Foster.

The nomination ran into more trouble when it was disclosed that Foster had performed hysterectomies on severely retarded women in the 1970s. Backed by independent doctors, the White House said the practice was accepted medicine at the time.

In his attack on Foster opponents Monday, McCurry said that people in the right-to-life movement "intend to demand a payback for the payoff they got from the Senate Campaign Committee on the Republican side."

It was a reference to money that Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, chairman of that panel, had authorized to be given to an anti-abortion organization before the November election.

Also in Washington, the National Right to Life Committee said Gore "usually voted in support of pro-life legislation" when he was a member of the House. "Just when did Mr. Gore decide that pro-life people are all extremists?" asked spokesman Johnson.

Gore and Foster, sitting in metal folding chairs, visited with about 15 youngsters in an apartment converted for use by the teen-age pregnancy program. The cement-block walls were covered with posters of African kings, Malcolm X and Martin Luther King.

AUTOPSY: Charges will be added, police say

(From 1A)

Powell's body in a laundry hamper, with her clothes tossed on top of the body.

Ortiz was arrested Saturday and charged with capital murder. Garcia said aggravated sexual assault and kidnapping charges will be included in the capital murder charge.

The girl was reported missing by her mother about 5 p.m. Friday.

Garcia said police questioned Ortiz about the girl because he had been to the girl's apartment earlier in the day to borrow something.

"We basically went to question him because he was one of the last people we thought might have seen her alive," Garcia said.

Ortiz consented to a police search, during which police found Miss Powell's body.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said Monday the case will be presented to a grand jury on Wednesday.

Schorre said a preliminary investigation into Ortiz's history revealed that past charges of sexual assault had been made against him in Pecos, but Ortiz has no pending charges or convictions.

Ortiz had been working at Country Mesa, a residential drug-abuse treatment center for youths run by the Mental Health and Mental Retardation center in Midland, as a drug counselor, Schorre said.

Schorre called the case "pretty much open and shut."

A capital murder conviction results in either life in prison or the death penalty.

Schorre said it was too early to determine whether or not he will seek the death penalty in the case.

Tonie Miller-Uzzel contributed to this report.

ENDORSE: County backs Pacific trade corridor

ridor approved. We will be making a presentation to the Texas Department of Transportation in April, and that is going to be a very key event. And we hope we will have their approval to study and to do our engineering work to see what would be required to get the project done."

In a letter provided by the Commissioners' Court, Enrique G. Terrazas, a representative of the governor of Chihuahua, noted that Texas and Chihuahua "for a long time ... have looked for better ways to attend the important markets of the Pacific. And "having direct access to the Pacific could boost trade by reducing times of shipment and reducing costs of transportation."

The route from West Texas to Topolobampo is several hundred miles shorter that the route to the port of Los Angeles in California.

Jose-Luis Suarez, Mexico's consul in Midland, optimistically viewed the corridor and the mutual trade benefits between Mexico and Texas.

"Mexico is committed to spending millions of dollars to upgrade their transportation system from Chihuahua City to Topolobampo," Norwood said. You have to go through a lot of mountains there; it's a very expensive and highly technical engineering project. But they are committed to doing it."

Commissioner Guy McCrary said the "corridor is much more important than simply extending a highway from Lubbock to I-10. The corridor is truly a Texas project with Texas benefits. And I-27 is a significant part of that."

The I-27 project here is headed up by Charles Perry of the Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance.

"The corridor is considerably more valuable when you consider the Dallas-Fort Worth connection," McCrary said.

"It's not just Midland-Odessa putting this together. We have a very good relationship with the state of Chihuahua. And we now believe they are, in effect, facilitating the connection between the huge Metroplex of Dallas-Fort Worth and the developing parts of industrial Western Mexico."

Once established, "the corridor "would really help the long-term economic security of the Permian Basin," McCrary said. "In fact, we are in a world-trade environment and in a world economy. And if the Permian Basin is a crossroads in that world economy and world trade, it will be great for everyone. This is the proposal on the table, and the government of Mexico is in support of it."

In another resolution, the Commissioners' Court endorsed the concept of the Midland Exposition Center to be built with private, non-tax funds and then to be deeded over to and maintained by Midland County, but managed by the non-profit entity that proposes the $2.5-million Expo Center.

"The resolution ... was to add credence and encouragement to the concept that has come from private volunteers," McCrary said. "And we're hopeful that this well enable them to initiate successful fund-raising efforts, so that the facility could be constructed. The project seems to have "broad community support," McCrary said. "And the role of the Commissioners' Court should be to encourage development to benefit of the community."

The Expo Center would "not (be) exclusively for horses or roping events or livestock shows," he said. "I can envision a whole host of new activities."

Midland rancher Candi Cowden, veterinarian Dr. Bobby Cobb, and team-roper Joe Anderson are among those promoting the Expo Center.

"It's not going to be (financed) on a tax bond, or we would never get it built," Ms. Cowden said. "We are going to try our best (to raise funds for the center). But we are further down the road than we have ever been, and that makes me feel good."

Gingrich says he won't seek White House in '96

By Richard L. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Monday he would not seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1996, silencing speculation that he would try to ride his new-found prominence to the White House.

Gingrich, who had been coy about his intentions, said he wanted to concentrate on serving as speaker and on seeing through the Contract With America, the Republican political manifesto that he helped mastermind.

"I think I should stay and focus on what I am doing and get things done," he told reporters after a breakfast meeting with business leaders in Marietta, Ga., the heart of the district that he represents, Georgia's 6th Congressional District. "I hardly need to run for president to get my message out."

Gingrich said he gave particularly serious thought to running last week after another conservative Republican, former Vice President Dan Quayle, dropped out. But he said he concluded that he should make the most of his position as the first Republican speaker in 40 years, a job that he called "three times tougher" than he first imagined.

While he said he had discussions over the weekend with friends in Iowa and New Hampshire, the states with early presidential contests, Gingrich's spokesman said he made his final decision after talking to his wife and longtime friends in Georgia.

Gingrich has become the preeminent Republican in Washington, but he could have run into trouble as a presidential contender. And that is why some White House officials had hoped he would make the race.

Though he ranked in many surveys as the second best known of the potential Republican contenders — behind only Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the majority leader — Gingrich has much higher negative ratings.

A USA Today/CNN/Gallup poll conducted nationwide among Republicans from Feb. 3 to Feb. 5 found that Gingrich had a favorable rating of 43 percent and an unfavorable rating of 40 percent.

By running for president, Gingrich would also have put himself in the uncomfortable position of taking on Dole, with whom he already has a sometimes tense relationship.

In addition, Gingrich's often controversial remarks and the inquiries into his ethical conduct might have haunted his campaign. The House ethics committee has been examining the political action committee that he controls, and questions have been raised about a lucrative book deal with a publishing company owned by Rupert Murdoch, the Australian-born media baron.

Gingrich, 51, has vowed to abide by the new House rules that he step down after eight years, assuming he is re-elected. That could mean, according to some leading Republicans, that he is positioning himself for a later run, perhaps in the year 2004.

The speaker's dramatic political rise may have tempted him to seek the White House in 1996 Republican audiences often greet him with adulation, as happened the other day when he was mobbed by admirers at a conservative conference in Washington.

Some Republicans in Congress were said to have prodded Gingrich to state his intentions so as not to distract from their legislative efforts. Indeed, in his remarks Monday, Gingrich emphasized the importance of what he is doing in Congress.

"People who want to get involved in the presidential race ought to get involved," he said. "People who want to help us in Congress pass the Conract With America and work on renewing American civilization and replacing the welfare state will have to focus on that. We'll work on that for the next year and a half, and we'll let the other folks go out and run for president."

Gingrich gave no hint of whom he would like to see get the nomination, saying, "You've got a bunch of very fine candidates out there."

Haley Barbour, the Republican national chairman, said of Gingrich's decision, "I'm glad he cleared the air."

But President Clinton did not seem particularly moved Monday when he was asked about the dwindling field of Republicans vying for the nomination. "I noticed there's still a few," he said. "I wish the absence of Republican opposition was my main worry, but I don't think it is. Somebody will show up, sure as the world."

Despite his comments, Gingrich seemed to enjoy, to the point of encouraging, the speculation in recent months. Asked last October whether he would run for president in 1996, Gingrich replied with a smile, "Ask me in April."

House debates last GOP anti-crime initiative

By NANCY MATHIS
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Dismissing President Clinton's veto threat, House Republicans pressed ahead Monday with plans to scrap a law funding 100,000 new police officers on the nation's streets and, instead, allow cities to decide how to spend the crime-fighting money.

The GOP, amid expected bipartisan support, Tuesday will consider the last measure in its six-part, anti-crime package proposed in the Republicans' "Contract with America." They want to revamp a $30-billion, six-year 1994 anti-crime law enacted by Democrats and endorsed by Clinton.

The pending measure would eliminate the $16 billion earmarked in the 1994 law to hire 100,000 police officers and fund crime prevention programs. The Republican bill would reduce the amount to $10 billion and allow cities and localities to spend the money on anti-crime programs of their choice.

President Clinton, who made the police plan the centerpiece of his anti-crime campaign, said this weekend he would veto "any effort to repeal or undermine the 100,000 police commitment. Period."

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., chairman of a House crime subcommittee, called President Clinton's veto threat disappointing. McCollum, kicking off debate on the bill, said there are thousands of communities that cannot afford to match federal funds to gain more police officers and participate in prevention programs, as required by the 1994 law.

"It's only if we do that (pass the bill) that it will provide the maximum flexibility to the communities to decide on their own what they want to do with this money, whether that's hire new cops or whether that's pay overtime for police or whether that's to buy new police cars or whether that is to extend the prevention program of their choice," McCollum said.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said the measure highlights the philosophical differences between Democrats and Republicans. Each party wants to fight crime, but Democrats want the federal government to dictate the battle plan while Republicans want to allow individual communities to decide their own plans, Hyde said.

"Republicans believe local governments know best. We understand the problems are indeed local," Hyde said.

Democrats chided Republicans for being selective. They noted the GOP backed a prison construction measure last week that mandated states adopt new criminal sentencing laws to force inmates to serve 85 percent of their sentences if the states are to qualify for funding.

They also contended that turning over the federal funds with few restrictions would mean abuses.

"This program is $10 billion worth of pork," said Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., the highest ranking Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee. "It's begging to be abused."

Democrats hark back to the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration that provided grants to states and was fraught with abuse before being eliminated by President Reagan. Democrats also cited scores of law enforcement organizations that supported the 1994 law and oppose the Republican revision.

Attorney General Janet Reno joined in urging members to defeat the Republican measure.

Patient wounds two in hospital shooting

By Walter Berry
Associated Press Writer

MESA, Ariz. — A 71-year-old woman recovering from a hysterectomy pulled out a gun in a hospital and opened fire Monday, wounding two men, authorities said.

There was no immediate word on a motive, police Sgt. Earle Lloyd said.

Lloyd said Jean Dooley pulled a .38 caliber revolver from a knapsack brought to her by her husband and began shooting outside a nurses' station in the general surgery area of Valley Lutheran Hospital.

Witnesses told police that Mrs. Dooley dropped the gun after she emptied it and was mumbling incoherently when security guards subdued her, Lloyd said.

"She doesn't even know what city she's in. She's disoriented, and (detectives) can't get much out of her," Lloyd said.

A nurse wounded in the arm and back was in stable condition, Lloyd said. The other victim, an ambulance employee, was shot in the abdomen.

Mrs. Dooley, from Mesa, had been at the hospital for three days, said Tracy Scott, a hospital spokeswoman. Police said she would remain at the hospital while recovering from her hysterectomy. She was not injured in the shooting.

Police were questioning Mrs. Dooley's husband, Roy, 73, and 38-year-old daughter, Jeanne, who were visiting her at the time of the shooting.

Dooley and his daughter were talking in the hall when Mrs. Dooley pulled the gun, Lloyd said.

Police were checking to see if Dooley had a permit to carry a concealed weapon. Carrying a weapon without a permit is a state misdemeanor.

"There was some yelling and screaming, but it wasn't wild," witness Bud Berry said.

"I was on the phone talking to my son in Dallas when I turned around and saw a woman with a gun, and I took off," he said. "She was shooting at random."

Dunagan's legacy helps Basin people

J. Conrad Dunagan of Monahans, who died Friday in Dallas, was well-known in Permian Basin educational, business and historical circles. Although born in Midland, he had lived in Monahans since the 1930s and from there, helped shape the progress of the Permian Basin. He was, in fact, first and foremost an outstanding supporter of the Permian Basin - residents, businesses and educational institutions.

Dunagan helped organize First State Bank in Monahans and Kermit State Bank in Kermit, and remained active as an officer and on the board of both banks until his death. He also was active in civic affairs and had served on the Monahans City Council and the Texas Good Neighbor Commission. Dunagan had business interests in several businesses including Midessa TV.

He also was instrumental in creating Monahans Sandhills State Park; yet undoubtedly his greatest contribution for Permian Basin residents was in the field of higher education.

Roger Olien, author and J. Conrad Dunagan Professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, called Dunagan a "rare type of person" and UTPB President Charles Sorber noted that Dunagan's contributions to the university and to higher education in West Texas were "without measure."

Duane Leach, UTPB history professor, noted that Dunagan "invested in people, in students. He made his money in West Texas and reinvested in West Texas. He believed that new opportunities for West Texas included local education.'

To that end, Dunagan helped local students obtain their education by founding the Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation, and through his personal gifts to Odessa College and UTPB.

Leach underscored Dunagan's true legacy, however, when he noted that Dunagan "left the world, the Permian Basin, better than he found it." That is a worthwhile legacy for anyone.

History standards offer possibility for change

The national history standards, recently developed by historians for voluntary use by teachers, have been attacked for their alleged preoccupation with the "dark side" of the American experience.

The standards, according to conservative critics, compulsively spotlight what America has done wrong and celebrate little of what it has done right.

Lynne Cheney, former chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, which helped finance development of the standards, points out that they mention McCarthyism 19 times and the Ku Klux Klan 17 times — but never mention Thomas Edison or Albert Einstein.

The critics have a point. But a small, misleading point. Reading the standards and support materials is exhilarating. Students will rejoice in learning from them; teachers will cherish using them.

The 31 standards, organized into 10 eras, provide a scaffold on which harried, scantily trained teachers could build a coherent course based on issues and ideas.

The treasures, however, are found among the 2,600 sample assignments that accompany the standards. Consider the two standards that apply to the decade of the Great Depression. They would compel students to identify the likely causes and impact of the Depression and the purpose and impact of the New Deal. Other than clarity and brevity, the standards are nothing special.

But then come dozens of suggestions for bringing the period alive in the classroom. Elementary school students would study the lyrics of "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" and "Which Side Are You On?" to understand the emotional appeal of labor organizers.

High school students would survey their community to determine how New Deal theater companies influenced small-town America. Junior high students would use novels to examine the impact of the Depression on young adults and study the writings of opponents of the New Deal, from the conservative Liberty League to Huey Long.

Ms. Cheney skips over these jewels. She also ridicules through misrepresentation. Enumeration — McCarthy 19, Edison 0 — would make sense if the standards were a textbook, a compendium of all important facts.

But the sample lessons, from which the numbers are taken, are just that. Samples. Teachers would fill in the blanks — meeting the standard that calls for examining the impact of invention by discussing Edison.

Yet there is something to conservative attacks. Liberal bias creeps into, perhaps, a couple dozen of the 2,600 sample lessons.

Questions — such as, Did the New Deal go far enough? — come across more as answers than disinterested inquiry. People of color do no wrong: students are invited to admire Aztec architecture but not notice the Aztec practice of human sacrifice.

Most of what annoys conservatives can be remediated. For every mock trial of John D. Rockefeller on charges of amoral business practices can be added another exercise that celebrates the growth of individual freedom and wealth.

But there may be a limit. Social history deals with people in the streets, which by necessity shifts focus away from dead white males to conflicts and victims.

The real problem with the standards may be their ambition. Debates, mock trials and original research demand rigor and time that would stretch even college teachers. Yet if this government-sponsored project errs by demanding too much, that in itself might herald a welcome change for American's primary and secondary schools.

CHARLEY REESE

Perceptions control our behavior, beliefs

Americans practice the politics of perception whether they realize it or not. A perception is how we interpret the signals from our senses. The important point to remember is that our perceptions are not always accurate. But accurate or inaccurate, as humans, we have no choice but to act on the basis of what we perceive to be the truth.

Reese

Now you can see the motivation of propagandists. Since human action proceeds from perceptions, if you can control people's perceptions of reality, you can manipulate their behavior and beliefs.

That was the motive behind the proposed abominable Smithsonian exhibit on the Enola Gay, the B-29 which dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima. The intent was to make it appear that the American response to Japanese aggression was racist and cruel and that the racist U.S. government, intent on using Japanese as guinea pigs for atomic blasts, lied to the American people about the cost of an invasion.

Fortunately, American veterans rose up and demanded that this tax-subsidized propaganda show be stopped, and this time it was. But the campaign to propagandize the American people by rewriting history is ongoing.

It is also useful to point out who rose to defend the truth. It was not Congress. It was not the press. It was not academia. The three institutions that Americans should be able to rely on as guardians of the truth have largely degenerated into jokes when it comes to regard for truth.

Had the veterans not realized what was going on and not raised hell, Congress wouldn't have acted and the press would have continued in its usual lap dog mode of accepting as gospel any word which comes out of a mouth with a title attached to it.

The so-called national standards on teaching American history is another example of propaganda, in this case, again from the same source: intellectual leftists who despise the United States. It's insult added to injury that they are funded by tax money. Complain to your congressman.

That's why it is important to zero out not only National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, but all the programs which leftist elitists have lobbied through in order to force the taxpayers to fund their propaganda campaigns against the interests of the taxpayers.

The federal government should make no grants for any reason whatsoever to individuals, private organizations or semiprivate organizations that are set up for that purpose. Beyond giving away public land to be used as a school site, the federal government should not be involved in education. Its involvement in the arts should not extend beyond buying art for federal buildings. Its involvement in scholarship, like its involvement in the entertainment industry, should end, period.

Historians, by the way, are just pretentious journalists who work in the past. They are subject to the same faults and human frailties as journalists who work in the present. A "history" is not a true record of the past, it is the author's version of the past just as an Oliver Stone movie about John F. Kennedy's assassination or the Vietnam War is one guy's version of the events.

And, these days especially, historians are, like Stone, apt to color their version of the past to fit the politics of the present.

Generally speaking, you will get closer to reality by reading the works of people who were there. Ulysses Grant's memoirs are a better source than a modern biography of Grant, for example.

Quayle feeds country line about family life

Pointing at the TV set, Slats Grobnik said: "Why's Dan Quayle giving us such a line of baloney?"

What baloney? The man very forthrightly says he isn't going to run for president.

"Yeah, but listen to the tall story he gives us for not running. Does he think we'll buy that?

Royko

I accept it. He says that raising a campaign fund and running for president would be disruptive to his family. Why should that raise doubts? After all, he is one of the country's strongest advocates of family values.

"OK, then tell me this. What's his hobby?"

Unless he has recently taken up stamp collecting, I believe that he is an avid golfer.

"And he's good at it, right?"

Very good. Regularly shoots in the 70s, which most hackers only fantasize about.

"That's what I thought. So how does a guy get that good at golf?"

Well, you can either cheat or play and practice a lot.

"See? This guy's a golfer. And there's no game that disrupts family life like golf. Out of the house in the morning. On the course all day. Then sitting around with the guys, counting the scores, paying off the bets, playing cards, and guzzling gin and telling a lot of lies."

Well, the doctors insist that we get our exercise.

"Did you know that golfers get divorced more than bowlers, country dancers or birdwatchers?"

That wouldn't surprise me. It just shows how much they love the ancient game and will sacrifice for it.

"No, just shows that when a golfer says he wants to be with his family, it's an excuse for him to leave because he's losing at cards. Any time somone gives me that spend-more-time-with-the-family routine, I know it's a line."

That's unfair.

"Yeah? Then tell me, what do little kids do all day?"

Well, I suppose that in the morning many of them watch the Power Rangers now that the Ninja Turtles have faded. Then they go to school. Then they come home and swallow a sandwich and go outside and run around with other little kids.

"That's right. Now, do you want to spend your day doing all that with them?"

Don't be ridiculous.

"OK, and how do teen-agers spend their day?"

They comb and primp their hair in the morning, usually several times before they get it just right. Then they go to school. Then they come home and make phone calls. Then they go hang out.

"You got it. Is that how you want to spend a day?"

Impossible. I don't need that much time for my hair.

"So it's a lot of baloney, all these famous guys saying they want to spend more time with their families. Remember what Michael Jordan said when he quit the Bulls?"

I don't remember. The city was weeping so loudly I couldn't hear Jordan.

"He said he wanted to spend more time with his family."

So? That just shows what a fine young man he is.

"Ah, but then what did he do? After a few days of changing diapers, watching Mister Rogers and going to the Jewel to push the cart for his wife, he packed his bags and went down south to play baseball."

Well, as Plato often said, a man's gotta do what a man's gotta do.

"Right. It ain't natural for a man to spend all of this time sitting around with his family. It's in the genes, going back to our hairy ancestors, when they used to get up in the morning and go out and hit something with a rock and drag it home and have a cookout."

The good old days when they weren't nagged about cholesterol.

"You ever hear of a judge sentencing a guy to go to work every day? Nah. But sometimes a judge will sentence a guy to house arrest because sitting home all day is real punishment."

You may have a point.

"Sure. So if Quayle was worrying about disrupting his family, how come he ran for Congress and was a senator? Then when he was vice president, all he did was fly halfway around the world to go to foreign funerals. What kind of family life is it when you tell your wife and kids: 'Gotta fly off to Zimboolie for a dictator's funeral, if his people don't burn the body first.'?"

But the presidency is so awesome a job. It is bound to have an effect on your family life.

"Why should it? You work at home, so you can't phone your wife from a bar and tell her you'll be late. I figure that being president has got to improve a guy's family life."

I don't see how.

"Ask Mrs. Clinton. Without state troopers, a guy can't get in any trouble if he's all worked up over baseball."

ART BUCHWALD

Many suggest solutions to D.C.'s bankruptcy

I live in Washington, D.C. — a lovely little town on the Potomac River just inside the Capital Beltway.

We are a peaceful, law-abiding community except for the rare member of Congress or Cabinet officer who occasionally loses his moral compass. Our only problem is that we are broke — dead broke, flat busted, empty pockets and all.

Buchwald

The solution to this dilemma is grim — if the President makes as much effort to save Washington as he did baseball, we will have enough money to purchase sand for the next snowstorm. If not, the capital of the greatest and most powerful nation in the world will have to declare bankruptcy and face a fate worse than Orange County, California.

Some of the wisest and most frugal men in Washington are trying to find a way out.

One of the first solutions someone came up with was to give the District of Columbia back to Maryland.

Maryland politely refused the offer after the way the Washington Redskins played in 1994. I think the real reason it doesn't want our city is that Baltimore hopes to get another pro football team of its own. So annexing Washington would screw up the state's chances for a franchise.

D.C. was then offered to Virginia. There was some interest because the governor wanted to turn Washington into a giant parking lot to accommodate all the Northern Virginia residents who commute into the city every day.

But the rest of Virginia said that they were not concerned with solving Northern Virginia's parking problems. They maintained that most parkers were voters responsible for Ollie North losing his bid for the U.S. Senate.

After the neighboring states said "no thanks," Washington was offered to Vermont, Oklahoma, Montana and Nevada. Nevada was the only one interested because it was looking for a site to dump its nuclear waste, and the Department of Energy building in D.C. seemed to be just the right location.

When the trade-offs got nowhere, more imaginative solutions were proposed. One was to put a surcharge on Congressman Bob Dornan's mouth. Every time he became rabid, he would have to put $5 in the D.C. Treasury.

Another money-raiser would be a tax on any government employee being investigated by a special prosecutor. A second value-added tax would be levied against any Speaker of the House who signed a book contract with the hopes of getting a $4.5 million advance.

Besides collecting money the city could make better use of its public buildings. A commission is already studying how to convert the Washington Monument into a motel with a restaurant on the top overlooking the metropolis. Some experts claim that the Mall is perfect for a golf course where a person could tee off from Lincoln's lap at one end and putt out at the Supreme Court on the other end.

None of the above can solve the whole problem alone, but a combination of several could be the answer. If not, the only thing left is to make Marion Barry the head of the World Bank and tell him to get the money any way he can.

If nothing works, then Washington should go off the dollar and start using Mexican pesos to run the government. That way President Clinton will have no choice but to bail us out.

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Private eyes pursue cheatin' hearts on Valentine's Day

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Cheatin' hearts are big business on Valentine's Day.

On the day lovers are tradition-bound to show their devotion, private investigators are kept busy with requests from people trying to find out if their spouses are spending Valentine's Day in somebody else's arms.

"Three businesses make money off Valentine's Day — retail stores, the flower industry and detectives," said Miami private detective Carlos Armenio Fernandez. "To us, this is like Christmas."

The first clues may turn up months before Valentine's Day — unusual phone calls, plans for an out-of-town trip, the purchase of an intimate gift the spouse never receives.

But it's the Valentine's Day rendezvous itself — whether it's a romantic dinner or a hotel-room tryst — that offers the chance to catch the unfaithful partner in the act.

Jim, a 27-year-old Chicago man, became suspicious of his wife a month before Valentine's Day last year when he found a receipt for a $700 man's watch. Problem was, he never got the watch.

When he offered to spend Valentine's night with his wife rather than work his overnight shift, she insisted that he work, saying she'd stay home and watch television.

Jim hired a private detective, who caught Jim's wife on videotape attending a play, having dinner with one of the actors and spending most of Valentine's night at the actor's home. The couple later divorced.

"I think I knew, but ... I needed proof," said Jim, who asked that his last name not be used. "It just put my mind at ease."

Rebecca, a 28-year-old Miami woman, became suspicious just before last Valentine's Day when her husband started buying clothes and getting bills for calls to unfamiliar numbers. Then her husband said he would be out of town on business on Valentine's Day.

He didn't leave town at all; a detective agency caught him on videotape snuggling with a younger woman as they entered a hotel room.

"I was even thinking of inviting the whole family, having them watch the video," Rebecca said. She filed for divorce instead.

Some clients want to tag along with the private investigator to catch their cheating mate in the act, but that's discouraged. Larry Mayer, president of Lawrence Investigations in Chicago, said he checks his clients for weapons.

One woman insisted on confronting her fiance at a hotel near an airport, where he'd met a girlfriend who flew in from out of town, Mayer said.

"She knocked on the door, pretending to be room service. He opened the door, and she handed him two dead roses," Mayer said.

Another woman accompanied Mayer to find her husband in a compromising position with his mistress. She gave her husband a big kiss, wished him a Happy Valentine's Day and handed him a small package, which he opened to reveal "one giant, dirty rat," Mayer recalled.

Fernandez said he doesn't feel like he's ruining relationships on Valentine's Day — or on any day, for that matter.

"Nobody likes to be deceived," he said. "I feel like I'm helping them out."

And if any of these detectives' mates gets suspicious, they should relax. Tuesday will be a long, hard day on the job.

"I'll be in my car with my video camera, cellular phone, tape recorder and computer database, juggling 12 cases," Fernandez said.

Americans more romantic, less likely to marry early

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans are getting more romantic, but they are holding off longer for marriage, the Census Bureau reported Monday.

The bureau found that in 1993, the estimated median age for a first marriage was the highest ever recorded: 26.5 years for men and 24.5 years for women. Among those age 25 to 29, two out of 10 women and three out of 10 men had never married.

Despite the old song about love and marriage, you can have one without the other, the bureau found.

The bureau reported that florists, whose sales boom around Valentine's Day, reported an 18.9 percent increase in total sales between 1987 and 1992.

Manufacturers of greeting cards also profited from a more romantic consumer. Valentine's Day cards were among the fastest-growing categories, with sales rising 64 percent from 1987 to 1992, to $210 million.

Discover the latest on the Simpson trial in Cyberspace

By Peter Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

Hard to believe, but there are some people who cannot get enough information about the O.J. Simpson murder trial from newspapers, magazines, television, books and radio.

The Internet and other computer-based on-line information services are emerging as global repositories of trial news and trivia:

— What is the name of Nicole's dog? (No, not Plaintive Wail or Bloody Paws, but Kato, named after O.J.'s houseguest.)

— Is there a conspiracy in the news media to frame O.J.?

— Does CNN offer gavel-to-gavel television coverage of the trial for a businessman traveling in Europe? ("What's with you?" a nonsympathetic reader responded. "C'mon, get a life!")

— And why, hawk-eyed Internet users asked, did Judge Lance Ito suddenly stop using a Toshiba laptop computer last week and switch to an IBM Thinkpad? Is he using it to tap into the Internet to get information about the trial?

Thousands of people are doing just that. Scores of O.J.-related data bases, interactive discussion forums and electronic mail lists have opened in cyberspace since last June, when Simpson was charged with killing his former wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Commentators in the news media have already dubbed the Simpson case "The Trial of the Century." But judging from the role of information technology in these proceedings — not only in the courtroom, with its giant Sony video monitor and laptop computers, but in millions of homes and offices from Toledo to Taiwan — the Simpson case might be more accurately described as the first trial of the digital century.

In fact, the technological devices loom so large in the courtroom that Ito's office has received complaints that the trial is providing free promotions for Sony, Toshiba and IBM. Since then some of the equipment has been altered to make the brand names less prominent.

The interactive nature of the Internet and other computer networks allows people around the globe to retrieve hourly news feeds, follow daily court transcripts, dissect the American legal system, study and debate the finer points of DNA analysis and propose and attack various theories about the crime.

"Several people conducted their own ice cream melting experiments, because of the information that partly melted Ben & Jerry's ice cream was found at Nicole's condominium," said C.J. Morris of Thousand Oaks, Calif., a regular participant in an electronic forum that logs more than 200 messages a day.

"And these experiments were done precisely and scientifically, right down to using the same type of container and the same flavor of ice cream that Nicole allegedly bought on the night of the murders."

Unfortunately for Simpson, these virtual jurors and judges appear to have already reached their verdicts, posted as collections of on-line comments with subject lines like "Guilty as Sin," which is next to one called "Guilty But Will Walk on a Technicality." Far fewer are the subject lines that suggest Simpson is not guilty, like "Planting the Glove" and "Another Setup Theory."

O.J. headlines and "chat" areas are available on most of the major commercial on-line services. Compuserve advises its 2.6 million subscribers that "if you can't arrange your schedule to watch all the trial coverage, we'll have daily updates."

Prodigy, with 1.2 million subscribers, already has 20,000 O.J.-related messages in its data base.

On America On-line, with 1.5 million subscribers, an O.J. forum in the "Court TV" section is abuzz with armchair analysts.

Anyone with access to a personal computer, a modem and a telephone line can be a Robert Shapiro, a Marcia Clark, a Lance Ito, or a Geraldo.

"We are as up to date as the lawyers themselves are," said Jack Walraven, who distributes court transcripts and other Simpson-related data to a global audience from his Internet computer in Victoria, B.C.

"Because we have access to all the information, it makes for intelligent discussions."

Well, sometimes.

When the defense said it would produce a witness who would testify that she saw four men near the scene of the crime, a Seattle woman who subscribes to the America On-line forum was quick to note: "This woman who turns up to testify to seeing FOUR MEN — coincidence that it sounds just like FUHR-MAN?"

She seemed to be suggesting a conspiracy theory involving the defense and the prosecution, which has scheduled a witness named Mark Fuhrman, who was one of the first investigators on the murder scene. The defense calls Fuhrman a racist.

With the click of a computer mouse, one can gain access to complete collections of Simpson jokes and lawyer jokes, not to mention Simpson cartoons and doctored photographs of dubious taste. No one even remotely associated with the trial escapes electronic scrutiny.

Debating the trial in cyberspace has become so popular that people even log on to the O.J. forums to express their contempt for people who log onto the O.J. forums.

"This is ridicously to spend this much time and $ on someone is totally guilty in some way if not at all," one person messaged. Reflecting the egalitarianism of the net, the message drew praise, scorn and a note earnestly criticizing the writer's syntax and spelling.

On Compuserve each Sunday, subscribers can pose questions about the case directly to legal experts.

Rather than rely on conventional news organizations for information and analysis, the computer networks allow anyone to be a reporter, commentator or publisher.

Walraven said more than 10,000 people, mainly from North America but also from Asia and Europe, have retrieved files from his Simpson data base.

• Dynamic cushioning works by controlling airflow from the heel chamber to the forefoot chamber, through a channel. As the heel strikes the ground the heel chamber is compressed, forcing the air forward to the forefoot chamber. When you "toe off" the forefoot chamber forces air back to the heel. This movement of air gives extraordinary comfort to a walker.

• During long periods of sustained standing, dynamic cushioning stimulates circulation and helps reduce fatigue.

Jail beds reduce overcrowding

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Months ago when the state jail felony legislation went into effect, law enforcement and court officials were concerned that the state jail facilities wouldn't be constructed in time to house the offenders.

Now, state jail beds are in abundance and are being utilized to help reduce overcrowding in county jails by admitting "paper-ready" Texas Department of Criminal Justice prisoners into the state jails while awaiting transfer to a TDCJ prison, according to John Miller, community information officer for Pardons and Paroles.

Under state jail felony law -- which went into effect Sept. 1, 1994 - judges are required to give probation in state jail felony cases, which are essentially, fourth-degree felonies - in between a misdemeanor and a third-degree felony.

No prison sentence may be assessed and the length of probation is from a minimum of two years to a maximum of five years, according to Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman.

In the case of a first-time felony offender, the judge may require the defendant serve up to 60 days confinement in a state jail facility as a term of probation, Dettman said.

For a repeat offender, the judge may require the defendant serve up to 180 days in a state jail facility.

Miller said this up-front time can be served in a county jail at the county's expense or in a state jail facility at the state's expense. Then the probation goes into effect. He said if the offender violates his probation, then he will be sent to the state jail.

Law enforcement officials and court officials were concerned the numerous probation cases would clog the courts and county jails; especially when probation is violated.

However, so far, this isn't the case, Miller said.

He said more than 2,000 state jail beds are ready for prisoners, but so far only about 150 are being used for

INTRODUCING...

Trinity School Teacher Richard Catania, holding the book, takes the teaching of a language to new heights, pushing students to study not only the language they have chosen, but to learn about the culture as well.

French teacher spreads culture with language

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The French are known for many passions: art, love, fine cuisine; but one French national living in Midland enjoys a passion for teaching and for promoting the very-different-but-complimentary cultures of France and Texas.

Richard Catania chairs the Department of Foreign Languages at Trinity School and is an officer of a new, private French/American alliance geared toward enhancing cultural exchange and business opportunities between the two countries.

CLEF, an acronym for Comite Linguistique pour L'Expansion du Français, or Committee for the Learning and Expansion of French, began in Dallas last year when a group of French educators, professionals and business leaders joined for a common cause, Catania explained.

"About 20 of us formed CLEF for the promotion of French language and French culture in North America," Catania said.

Catania's passion for Texas culture is a long-standing affair, he pointed out. He requested the state specifically when deciding to come to America to teach.

"I told them I wanted to go to Texas — and not in a big city," he said. "Texas appeals to French people," he added.

One of Catania's major goals for CLEF is to find more avenues of funding that will allow more of his French students at Trinity to travel to France.

Board sends its concerns to legislature

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Board members of the Midland Independent School District are making their positions clear on a number of matters slated for discussion in the 74th Texas Legislature this year.

In a letter to Texas senators, representatives and the governor, board members made clear their position on several problems affecting MISD and other school districts around the state.

With the emphasis on changes in the educational system playing a large role in this year's legislature, board members thought it important to make their position clear on several points, said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi.

Letters to lawmakers are not unusual for school districts, Baressi said. "We

City to look at sanctuary status change

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A request by Midge and Woody Erskine to renew the wildlife sanctuary status of their property — prohibited last month to be used for wildlife rehabilitation — is scheduled to be considered by the City Council today.

The requested resolution for sanctuary status "is basically the exception to what is known as the weedy lot ordinance," Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

A year ago March 8, the council granted one-year renewable sanctuary status for the 3306 W. Golf Course Road property. That resolution set conditions including the maintenance of vegetation-clear zones for fire safety.

"It (the renewal request) doesn't have anything directly to do with animal or bird rehabilitation," Hackler said.

Survivor tells holocaust stories to students

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Mike Jacobs, the only member of his family to survive the Holocaust, vowed he would never remain complacent or silent about the atrocities he witnessed in the Auschwitz-Berkinau camp (one of three Auschwitz German slave labor and extermination camps). On Monday he continued to fulfill that promise as he spoke to several groups of Lee Freshman High School students.

"We must not stay silent about the things that one human can do to another," he said. "We must not forget. I can still hear the screams and cries of mothers begging for their children's lives."

Jacobs left a death camp at the age of 19 1/2 weighing 70 pounds. He was the sole survivor in his family of the mass murder of European Jews by the Nazis during World War II. More than 6 million Jewish men, women and children did not survive the gas chambers, starvation, illness and killings.

Jacobs, born in Poland, was sent to a concentration camp at the age of 14, the same age of many of the ninth graders in his captive audience. "I didn't get to know what it was like being a teen-ager," Jacobs said, noting he spent his teen-age years "wondering if I was going to live from one second to the next."

"I saw people shot and beaten to death daily.

Valentine's Day is probably least favorite of all holidays

More rambling thoughts ...

— Of all the holidays, Valentine's Day is probably my least favorite.

— It is always sad when you come across people who are not capable of enjoying their retirement years because they were so busy working they forgot to establish any outside interests.

— Likewise, it is equally sad when people can't enjoy their retirement years because they can't afford life's necessities.

— There was a time, believe it or not, when professional boxing had credibility.

— It always catches me off guard when I see a beautiful woman being escorted by a rather plain-looking man.

— The opposite, a handsome man with a plain woman, also seems odd.

— It shouldn't, but it does.

— Interesting fact: Of all the people who gamble, 55 percent are women.

— Nice title to a country song: "A Good Year for the Roses."

— All deaths are tragic in their own way, of course, but when a child, like the 10-year-old girl who was murdered last week, is involved, it somehow seems all the more terrible.

— Does anyone but me find it strange that Lyle Lovett attended Texas A&M? I mean, with all that weird hair going in all kinds of different directions, he just doesn't look like an Aggie.

— Horseback riding strikes me as one of those activities that looks like it is more fun than it really is.

— You know you are getting old when you discuss an event from your past, one which "feels" like it happened last year, and suddenly realize it occurred some seven or eight years earlier.

— There are certain people who insist on explaining in great detail every event that ever occurred in their lives, as if we really care.

— There are worse nervous habits than chewing one's fingernails.

— Judge Lance Ito's beard is too skimpy. He should shave it and get it over with.

— Sometimes it feels really great to cut loose and say exactly what is on your mind, but that sensation is generally followed by a feeling of remorse and extreme guilt.

— It seems to me that the word "cool" — as in "wow, that's really cool" — has made something of a comeback.

— That's too bad.

— Irritating occurrence: You get a song in your mind and you can't get rid of it, and the harder you try the more persistent the song becomes.

— People who refuse to open their minds to anything new are among the dullest people in the world.

— And, today's final quote comes from Merle Haggard, a REAL country singer, who once said, "Tonight, the bottle let me down."

FRENCH: Teacher mixes culture with speech

(From 1B)

This is a priority, since Catania's philosophy of language teaching involves an understanding of the culture as well as fluency with speech, he explained.

"I don't like to say bilingual — I prefer to use the term bi-cultural," he said. "It is the people that make a country. I'm not here for the sights, I'm here for the people," he added.

So far, Catania has been able to make 12 short visits to the country for multiple students to stay with French families. Recently, he was able to send one outstanding student, Lucia Lea Crump, to study for a full semester at a prestigious French school.

A secondary goal for Catania is to educate manufacturers, entrepreneurs and other businessmen in Texas about the extensive opportunities for business ventures between French and Texas companies.

Most Americans don't realize that the Michelin tires they're riding on are French made, as well as the aluminum can they drink out of, the Maalox® they take for indigestion and the Zenith PC a contractor might use to calculate purchases of French cement and French insulation, according to information from Alliance Français, an organization of French businessmen in the U.S.

"The French are heavily invested in America," Catania said, with that country investing more in the U.S. than in any other country. French companies employ 400,000 workers throughout the U.S.

Paris is the fourth largest economic center in the world, Catania explained. With France's inroads into the massive European Economic Community and its U.S. enterprises, French companies make great allies for American exporters and importers of products and technology.

Catania's primary objective, however, is to promote cultural exchange between the two countries.

"Many American students find themselves deprived of the opportunity of studying in France because of financial reasons. I want to encourage French companies to sponsor such programs, by offering scholarships to our most deserving students," Catania said.

"It goes without saying that if I am successful in my endeavor, the road will be open for American companies based in France to sponsor French students who wish to study in the United States.

"Sony has already sponsored a number of American students who were interested in Japanese culture. I am hoping to be in a position to offer our first scholarship for an internship or a study-in-France program during the school year 1995-96," he said.

Catania came to Midland in 1982 with the intention of staying for about two years, but fell in love with the people and especially his students. He met his wife, Andrea, in Georgetown in 1979 and both are now Midlanders.

JAIL: Bill would change jail structure

state jail prisoners.

"So, anybody in a county jail who is paper ready can be held here ... it is still secure like a prison," Miller said. "The state doesn't want to pay the county to house prisoners when we have empty beds."

However, Miller acknowledges the time line for an offender to have served his up-front time, then violated his probation and being sentenced to the state jail, may not have progressed that far by now.

"That may be why the beds are unoccupied," Miller said.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre agrees with that theory.

"The offenses had to be committed after Sept. 1, so most of those cases aren't in court yet - statewide," Schorre said.

"It may be September of this year before we see the jails fill up," he added.

But, Schorre believes these state jail facilities may end up full if state Senate Bill 15, sponsored by Sen. John Whitmire, is passed.

Whitmire, who is the chairman of the Senate Committee on Criminal Justice, has proposed revisions to help "fine-tune" the legislation which resulted in the state jail felonies.

"In 1993, we sent a message to violent offenders - if they choose to commit their crimes in Texas, they will spend a very long time in a Texas prison," said Whitmire.

"We prioritized our resources by establishing a state jail felony category for non-violent offenders who need to be punished; saving our precious, expensive prison space for rapists, murderers and child molesters," Whitmire added.

Senate Bill 15 proposes to expand the range for state jail felonies from six months to one to three years in a state jail; eliminating the mandatory probation allowing a judge or jury to show discretion in sentencing; enhancing the penalty for a third state jail felony conviction to time in a prison; as well as other areas of the penal code not associated with the state jails.

The bill has been presented to the Committee on Criminal Justice, but has not been heard by the committee yet.

Schorre supports SB 15, he said, calling it a "good idea."

"The state jail felony legislation was a compromise ... the Legislature hoped it would just be temporary," Schorre said.

SURVIVOR: Man recalls horrors of Auschwitz

(From 1B)

It was the first time I had even seen human blood," he said.

Jacobs' birthplace, Konin, Poland, was invaded by Germans Sept. 1, 1939. "The Nazis marched into our city. They set up curfews, took hostages and took scrolls and books of worship from our synagogues."

Jacobs and his family were prisoners of the Jewish ghetto Ostroweic until the summer of 1942 when two of Jacobs' three brothers, two sisters and his parents were sent to the death camp Treblinka. Jacob's brother, Rueven, escaped to fight with the Partisans, Jewish freedom fighters. "But then he was killed," Jacobs said. "He was killed by the Polish Partisans who fought the Jewish Partisans. The Polish Partisans wanted to be the forces to liberate Poland."

Being 14 and naive, Jacobs said when he stepped off of the train boxcar at Auschwitz-Berkinau he was heartened to hear a European orchestra playing and to see a doctor in a white coat stroll by. "I thought: 'This isn't so bad. There's music and and there's a doctor.'

Jacobs said he didn't realize the orchestra would continue to play as people were killed, beaten and tortured. He also didn't know he was looking at Dr. Josef Mengele, dubbed the Angel of Death for his personally selecting victims for the gas chamber and his experiments on humans in his attempts to create a race of people with blond hair and blue eyes.

Rolling up his shirtsleeve, Jacobs displayed the identification numbers tattooed on his left arm, tattoos forced on all Auschwitz-Berinau prisoners. The compelling speaker also added narration to grim slides of emaciated Jews tortured or undergoing human experiments. Some students gasped, a few cried. One photo showed a mother holding a baby to her breast as mother and child were shot. "The Nazis bragged about their aim, trying to kill both baby and mother with one bullet by shooting the child through the head and the mother through the heart," Jacobs said.

The Holocaust survivor said he never understood how the soldiers could smile at photos of their own children and then casually shoot children in the camp. "People in the camps would go out to work on roads and machines and would return bloodied or beaten or beaten so badly they were carried in," he said.

In order to get a prison uniform, to reduce his chances of freezing by being naked, Jacobs lied and said he was a machinist. While working with equipment or building roadways with rocks, Jacobs once felt the breath of a German soldier on his neck. "I heard a shot, and my friend to the right of me fell over in a pool of blood. I didn't look up. I didn't stop working," Jacobs said. "I heard another shot and the person on my left fell over. I kept working faster, and somebody upstairs was watching over me, because I am here today."

"This is so sad. I don't see how you could stand seeing all of those things," said one tearful student.

"I had hope and my beliefs — faith, kept me going," Jacobs said. "I was also positive I would survive."

Student Johnny Balderas said he was riveted to Jacobs' presentation. "It was exciting and kept my attention ... I had never heard of the electric fences and people being electrocuted," he said. Going forward after the presentation to touch a pair of children's shoes Jacobs has carried around for more than 50 years and to get a closer look at the striped prison uniform cap Jacobs wore, Balderas said he didn't want to leave, that he wanted to hear more about the death camps and Jacobs' survival.

"In the camps they could do anything to my body, but they couldn't break my spirit," Jacobs said.

As part of his promise to tell the stories of the Holocaust, Jacobs founded the Dallas Memorial Center for Holocaust Studies. He also returned to Auschwitz with a group of Americans in 1975. He found a large stone — in a memorial of stones — inscribed with his family's name. "I have no photos of my family. After 50 years their faces are fading away," Jacobs said. "... I embraced the stone and spoke to everyone in my family. I said: 'I am alive. I live in a beautiful country, the United States of America. I have a beautiful family, three sons and a daughter, and all my children are named for you.'" Jacobs said he is certain he felt warmth and softness radiating from the stone. "No one else wanted to touch it, but I could feel it," he said.

CITY: Erskines denied last month

(From 1B)

While the council permitted sanctuary status, they prohibited the rehabilitation of birds and other wildlife on the property. Despite the Erskines' request to continue to perform rehabilitation work, the council ultimately denied the request last month.

The city's involvement in the Erskine property arose from complaints by adjacent property owners Dennis and Vanessa Baker, who claimed the Erkines violated zoning and health codes.

Unlike the Erskines' request for an ordinance to operate a wildlife rehabilitation center, which required a public hearing, today's request only need be decided by resolution.

Ms. Erskine — known by some as the Bird Lady — ran the Eos Refuge Center on her 4.4 acre tract of property for 20-plus years.

MISD: Atop district's list of concerns is juvenile crime

don't lobby per se, in that we don't hire anybody ...," he said.

At the top of this list of concerns is the growing problem of juvenile crime, according to the letter. "Like many communities across the state of Texas, we are experiencing an increase in juvenile crime and school violence and feel that it is essential that the class B misdemeanor for the assault of a public school employee be reinstated. As you know, this was dropped when the Penal Code was revised," school officials state in the letter.

Support also is given in the letter for proposed legislation to lower the age at which a juvenile can be charged as an adult to 14.

The problem of unfunded state mandates for school districts also topped the list of concerns MISD officials presented to legislators. "Contrary to our community's reputation, our school district is below the average in wealth per student and finds it difficult to raise local taxes in order to comply with legislative mandates," according to the letter.

The board, however, was not averse to other increases in revenue for the district. "We have a large number of school buildings which are more than thirty years old and in need of major renovation, as well as a growing student population which necessitates building additional schools. We realize the legislature is reluctant to raise taxes. However, the facility needs of the school districts of Texas need your attention," MISD officials said.

Two other areas of concern for board members are problems in the delivery of textbooks and the eroding authority of local school boards.

Lengthy delays in getting school books to some children are caused by the current regulations that force school districts to order books based on the peak enrollment of the previous year, as opposed to the projected enrollment.

"Needless to say, many parents are outraged when their child does not have a state-adopted textbook. We suggest that the districts be allowed to order their books directly from the publisher and that an accounting system be developed which would hold districts responsible if they purposely hoard books," board members recommended.

Board members said they strongly support measures to increase and maintain the powers of local school boards regarding the governing of districts and the hiring and firing of personnel.

"We strongly disagree with Commissioner Meno's recommendation to transfer some of that authority from the school board to the superintendent. We also do not support the commissioner's recommendation to have state-appointed hearing officers replace local school boards in making decisions relating to student disciplinary matters," they said.

The letter is signed by board members Jackie Hamilton, C. Michael Dobey, James E. Fuller, Dianne D. Anderson, Jack D. Hightower and Robin M. Hightower.

Adela V. Marmolejo is the only board member who did not sign the letter. She stated at a recent board meeting her convictions against sentencing 14-year-old children as adults.

The bidding:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
Pass	Pass	1♠	3NT
Dbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠ Pay attention to the spot-cards partner plays — they can be the key to the defense on many a hand. Failure to do so cost East 300, possibly 600, points on this hand from a rubber-bridge game.

South's jump to three no trump was obviously based on a long minor which declarer hoped would run. Since West had both minors stopped, the double was well-judged.

West led the four of spades, dummy played low and the queen lost to the ace. Declarer started on diamonds, but had to surrender a trick to West. The ten of spades was covered by the jack and taken with the king.

West alertly shifted to the jack of hearts and, whether or not declarer covered, the defenders collected two spades, four hearts and a diamond — down three, for 800.

That was a nice enough return, but it should have been even sweeter. Let's go back and take a look at the very first trick.

East could see that West's opening lead of the four was the lowest spade out. Therefore, it could be only from one of two holdings: a singleton or three to the ten (South surely held the ace of spades for the three-no-trump overcall). Since West was unlikely to lead a singleton on this auction, it had to be from a three-card fragment. Therefore, East should have played a low spade to the first trick. If declarer again concedes a trick to the jack of diamonds instead of cashing out, another spade from West when in with the diamond would allow the defenders to collect four spade tricks, four hearts and a diamond for a five-trick set!

Decision to have an abortion a 'hard choice,' actress Whoopi Goldberg says

NEW YORK — Whoopi Goldberg says deciding to have an abortion was "a hard choice," and she has no use for people who take such decisions lightly.

Whoopi Goldberg says abortion was a hard choice.

Goldberg offered few details, such as when she had the abortion or who else was involved, in an interview in the March issue of McCall's magazine.

"I was in a great relationship at the time, but we were barely getting by," the Oscar-winning actress said.

Goldberg grew up in New York City housing projects and has one child, a daughter she gave birth to at age 18.

As for abortion in general, she says, "I have great anger toward people who cavalierly make these decisions, assuming some woman just decides, 'I'm going to get my hair done and then get an abortion.'"

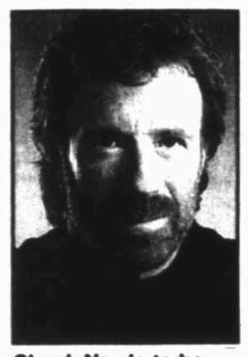
NEW ORLEANS — Chuck Norris will get his kicks as a grand marshal of one of the top parades in this year's Mardi Gras.



Chuck Norris to be grand marshal at top Mardi Gras parade.

The karate champion and action movie hero, currently starring in television's "Walker, Texas Ranger," will reign with Richard Karn of "Home Improvement" over the Krewe of Endymion's parade Feb. 25.

The 1,500-member krewe will include 42 marching bands in its multimillion-dollar, 29th annual parade.

Other guest marchers include KC & The Sunshine Band, Huey Lewis and the News, television personality Arthel Neville and actor Calvert DeForest, who played Larry "Bud" Melman on "Late Night with David Letterman."

PHILADELPHIA — Tamara Hadley has spent 20 years on her toes. Now the prima ballerina of the Pennsylvania Ballet Company is hanging up her shoes.

She blamed recent injuries for pushing her into retirement at age 41.

"I hurt," she said. "For the first time, I wake up and think, 'Oh, don't break anything! Don't get hurt today!'"

Hadley was inundated with flowers after her final performance in "Giselle" on Saturday. She will continue with the company as a ballet mistress.

"I'm not good with words, but I have found a challenge in expressing emotion with my body," she said. "You can say something and have people misunderstand you, but with one's body, you can be very clear and express something very deep."

NEW YORK — Johnny Depp has found a godfather figure in Marlon Brando.

"He's the most generous actor I've ever worked with and one of the most generous people I've ever known, in terms of advice or feelings or whatever," Depp told Newsweek magazine.

He bonded with Brando on the set of the film "Don Juan DeMarco," set for release in April, in which Brando plays a psychiatrist treating Depp's character, who claims to be Don Juan.

"It's like meeting an older guy in a bar," Depp gushed. "You just sit there and talk to him for hours and hours and hours, with his fascinating stories and fascinating thoughts."

Furthermore, he says, Brando is "one of the funniest guys I've ever met in my life. He could be the funniest."

DETROIT — If the Tigers start this season with replacement players, Gov. John Engler says he'll take his ball and go home.

Traditionally, the governor and the Detroit mayor have thrown the first pitch to open the American League team's season.

Engler says he won't — in fact, he'll boycott the game if the home opener April 3 against the Kansas City Royals is played by replacements for striking major leaguers.

"We want the regular season. We want the real team," Engler's spokesman, John Truscott, told The Macomb Daily.

Mayor Dennis Archer has not decided whether he will attend.

Spring training for the Tigers opens Feb. 22. The club holds open tryouts Saturday at its facility in Lakeland, Fla.

Heart-shaped tarts make perfect treat

Associated Press

Use 4-inch heart-shaped pans for Valentine's Day tarts. The tarts can be filled with vanilla pastry cream, thickened red raspberry puree or whole raspberries or blackberries. You can vary the pastry recipe by adding chocolate..

SWEET HEART PASTRY

2½ cups all-purpose flour, unsifted
5 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 sticks (1 cup) butter, well chilled
About 4 tablespoons orange juice or water

Combine flour, sugar and salt in a mixing bowl; stir to blend. Slice each stick of butter into 7 or 8 pieces.

Using pastry blender or two knives, cut butter into flour mixture until all resembles coarse meal. Add orange juice or water by tablespoons, mixing gently with a fork just until dough begins to hold together in clumps.

Gather pastry; divide into six disks. Wrap each disk in plastic wrap; chill for 30 minutes.

On lightly floured waxed paper, roll each disk into a circle at least 6 inches in diameter and slightly less than 1/8-inch thick. Transfer to six 4-inch heart-shaped tart pans. Gently press dough into each one, being careful not to stretch pastry. Trim overhanging pastry dough by rolling over edges with a rolling pin, creating a finished look.

Pierce bottoms with a fork, place on a rimmed baking sheet; freeze at least 30 minutes.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Transfer tarts to a rimmed baking sheet that is at room temperature. Line tarts with lightweight aluminum foil or crumpled parchment paper.

Fill with beans, rice or other pie weights. Bake while still frozen, on the lowest oven rack, in a 375-degree oven for 15 minutes.

Carefully remove weights, foil or parchment. Return tarts to oven; bake 15 minutes more, until deep golden brown. Cool on wire rack. Makes six 4-inch tarts.

Note: For light chocolate pastry, replace 1/4 of the flour with 1/4 cup cocoa. For darker chocolate crusts, replace › cup of the flour with › cup cocoa.

Vanilla Pastry Cream
3 cups low-fat (1 percent) milk
2/3rds cup sugar
4 tablespoons cornstarch
3 eggs (2 whole eggs, 1 yolk)
1½ tablespoons vanilla

Using double boiler, heat 2½ cups of the milk until steam rises from the surface.

In a separate bowl, combine remaining ½ cup milk and the sugar. Sift in cornstarch; whisk until well blended. Add 2 whole eggs and 1 egg yolk; whisk again until all is combined.

Remove milk from heat; gradually whisk in egg mixture. Return pan to top of double boiler; whisk constantly over medium heat until thickened and smooth, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla.

Transfer to bowl, press plastic wrap onto pastry cream surface and refrigerate for up to 3 days. Makes about 3 cups.

THICKENED RASPBERRY PUREE

2 cups whole frozen raspberries (about 8 ounces), thawed
3 to 4 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons black raspberry liqueur

Puree thawed berries in food processor or blender. Strain through a fine sieve to remove seeds. Place puree in small saucepan. Stir sugar and cornstarch together; add to puree, along with liqueur. Heat until thickened and glossy. Makes 1 cup.

Glaze: Combine ½ cup seedless raspberry jam or jelly, melted, with 1 tablespoon black raspberry liqueur or water. Makes ½ cup.

To assemble: Begin assembly one to two hours before serving time.

For Whole Berry Tarts: Each 4-inch tart will require about 1 cup frozen berries. This is equivalent to about 4 ounces frozen raspberries or 5 ounces frozen blackberries for each tart.

Spoon 3 to 4 tablespoons of the pastry cream into each pastry shell. Arrange evenly shaped frozen berries, stem side down, over the pastry cream, starting around the outside edge and working toward the center. Arrange raspberries in two layers; blackberries in one layer.

Refrigerate until ready to serve. Just prior to serving, spoon glaze generously over berries.

Garnish with orange zest, mint leaves or sliced kiwifruit.

For Red Raspberry Puree Tarts: Spoon 5 to 6 tablespoons puree into each pastry shell. Make decorative hearts by running a toothpick through droplets of vanilla cream that you have strategically placed on puree surface. Chill until serving time.

For Vanilla Cream Tarts: Spoon 5 to 6 tablespoons vanilla cream into each pastry shell. Make decorative hearts by running a toothpick through droplets of red raspberry puree that you have strategically placed on cream surface. Chill until serving time.

DEAR ABBY

Valentines Day is reminder to be a sweetheart throughout year

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it! It's St. Valentine's Day—already! And what better time to revive my Ten Commandments of Love?

Van Buren

Yes, Dear Readers, I actually had the chutzpah to write my own Ten Commandments. But it wasn't as though I was stealing from strangers—one of my ancestors was privileged to have received them on Mount Sinai from the Lord Himself—at least, that's what the Good Book says.

Originally, I wrote two sets of commandments—one for men and one for women. Then, Mandy Stillman, a lawyer and early feminist from Milwaukee, wrote to demand equal rights for women, insisting that there be only one set of commandments.

She was right, of course. So how's this for a gender bender?

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OF LOVE

■ Put your spouse before your mother, your father, your son and your daughter—your mate is your lifelong companion.

■ Do not abuse your body with excessive food, tobacco, drink, or any foreign substance that goes into your arm or up your nose.

■ Remember that cleanliness is a virtue.

■ Permit neither your business nor your hobby to make you a stranger to your children; the most precious gift a parent can give his or her family is time.

■ Willingly share all of your worldly goods with your mate.

Do not forget to say, "I love you." Even though your love may be constant, your spouse needs to hear those cherished words often.

■ Remember that the approval of your spouse is worth far more than the adoring glances of a hundred strangers, so be true to him or her, and forsake all others.

■ Keep your home in good repair, because out of it comes the joys of old age (not to mention its resale value!) .

■ Forgive with grace, because who among us does not need to be forgiven?

■ Honor the Lord your God every day of your life, and your children will grow up and bless you.

■ Today, be a sweetheart. Call someone you love and say, "I love you." (Make two or three calls; who says you can't love more than one person —in different ways, of course.)

Go through your closets and give all those clothes you've been saving until you lose 10 pounds to your favorite charity. Call someone who's lonely and say, "I'm thinking of you." Or, better yet, say, "I'll be over tomorrow to take you to lunch, or to run some errands for you ... or to give you a ride."

Visit a sick friend. Say a prayer. Donate some blood. Adopt a pet. Will your eyes, your kidneys and all your usable organs to someone who can use them after you're gone. Forgive an enemy. Hug your teen-ager. Write a fan letter. Listen to a bore. Pay your doctor. Tell your parents you think they're wonderful. Spay your dog. Neuter your cat. Quit smoking. Drive carefully. If you're walking, watch where you're going.

And don't wait until next year to be a sweetheart again.—LOVE, ABBY

Old college tie

IRVING — Ties may soon become extinct in college football.

Last week, the NCAA football rules committee recommended that a tiebreaker system be used in bowl games beginning next season. Now major college coaches are backing a study that could lead to a tiebreaker in regular-season games starting with the 1996 season.

Grant Teaff, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, said Monday the group will study the regular-season tiebreaker and make a recommendation to the rules committee next January.

Changes endorsed by the rules committee must then be approved by the NCAA executive committee.

Teaff said most Division I-A coaches who attended the AFCA meeting here supported the tiebreaker. One reason, he said, is that a tie doesn't help either team reach the six I-A victories that are needed to play in a bowl game.

"A tie doesn't count, so it's like a loss for both teams," Teaff said.

The tiebreaker system being considered for college games is different than the sudden-death overtime used in the NFL. The college version would give each team a chance to score after regulation.

MCHS playoff set

The Midland Christian boys basketball team will play Fort Worth Southwest Christian Tuesday at Arlington Lamar High School at 7:30 p.m. The game is a first round Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools state playoff.

Lady Rebs face playoff newcomer

■ Midland Lee's girls will be the first-ever playoff opponent for Lubbock Coronado when the teams meet tonight in Seminole for a bi-district basketball playoff.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Two unfamiliar foes meet on unfamiliar turf to decide a championship. Pretty typical playoff stuff.

But when Midland Lee and Lubbock Coronado play today in a Class 5A girls basketball bi-district playoff at 7: 30 p.m. in Seminole, it won't be the typical District 4-5A versus 3-5A matchup fans have experienced in recent history.

For starters, the 21-9 Lady Mustangs have never been to the playoffs in the history of the school. They had to bypass Amarillo High and Lubbock Monterey to finish as the runner-up.

Two-time state champion Amarillo High, was down this year after losing three starters to Division I scholarships and it missed the playoffs. Monterey, another perennial playoff team, finished in third. No one but Amarillo, Monterey and this year's champion Amarillo Tascosa have ever gotten a playoff berth out of that district.

Midland Lee (17-9), as the third place team, represents 4-5A for the first time since 1992 despite a long history of making the playoffs in the 18 years of competition.

So for Lady Mustang coach Shirlene Lilley, just getting past her district's playoff tradition was a huge accomplishment.

"It's been pretty tough to keep the kids motivated every year because it's always been that way," Lilley said. "It's always tough to be the first team to make history. But being the underdog like we've always been, it's pretty easy to motivate these kids."

Another unusual aspect about this game is the fact that the 4-5A representative is on equal, if not better, footing than its 3-5A opponent. In the past, 3-5A teams held a 23-game winning streak in the playoffs over 4-5A until Midland High broke it last year by beating Lubbock Monterey.

But lack of playoff history will be the last thing Lilley will be worrying about as Coronado faces Lee. April Armacost, Coronado's leading scorer, is lost for playoffs due to a torn anterior cruciate ligament

Bulldogs in playoffs but will play to win tonight

■ Midland High's boys can tie for first in district basketball with a win over San Angelo tonight.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland High basketball coach Jack Stephenson doesn't feel Odessa Permian will beat Abilene Cooper tonight in Abilene. So he figures it doesn't matter much what takes place on the floor at 8 p.m. in the MHS gym when his second-place Bulldogs host playoff-starved San Angelo Central.

A Cooper loss to Permian, coupled with a win by Midland High over San Angelo, would force a first place tie between MHS and Cooper at 10-2. That would mean a district playoff Friday or Saturday at a time and place to be determined to see which of those teams would enter the Class 5A playoffs with a first round bye.

"I just don't feel that Permian can go in at this stage of the season and beat Cooper," Stephenson said. "Permian would need a high level of confidence, and that's tough after you've lost a few games."

In fact, MHS may be better off without a playoff against Cooper since leading scorer Jumon Hailey is out at least through Saturday with an ankle injury.

"Jumon injured his ankle with 30 seconds left in the game against Abilene High," Stephenson said. "He won't play against San Angelo and he probably would miss any game we play Friday or Saturday.

"But you should have seen him against Abilene High. He had a school record 43 points (a single-game school record) with 16 of 20 from the field, 10 rebounds and eight assists. What else can one person do on the floor?"

Still, Stephenson says his Bulldogs will play to win tonight, and he has some solid reasons.

Comeback magic falters as Chaparrals fall, 91-69

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

LEVELLAND - All season long Midland College has been a come-from-behind ball club. The Chaps rallied from first half deficits in four of their seven conference wins. But then came Monday.

Midland went to the comeback well once too often as South Plains pulled off a 91-69 upset over the conference-leading MC at the Texan Dome.

The loss drops Midland College to 7-2 in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference and 20-5 on the year. It also drops MC out of a first place tie with New Mexico Junior College, which defeated Frank Phillips in Hobbs, N.M., Monday

UConn men join women at top

■ Connecticut's men join the womens team as the first double No. 1s in college basketball history.

By Malcolm Moran
N.Y. Times News Service

More than two decades after the passage of Title IX called upon universities to provide equivalent athletic opportunities for women, Connecticut created an unprecedented form of equality Monday: Two teams in the same place, from the same place.

The Connecticut men (19-1), one day after their emotionally taxing victory at Syracuse, were voted No. 1 in the Associated Press news media poll and the CNN/USA Today coaches' poll for the first time. The women's team (21-0) retained the top spot it has held for a month with its victory at Seton Hall.

The surprise is not that it happened, but that the same school had never appeared at the top of both lists since the first women's poll 19 years ago. Not at Chapel Hill, where North Carolina's women's team won the 1994 national collegiate championship and the men won their tournament the year before. Not at UCLA, where the dynastic achievements of the men overshadowed outstanding female athletes. Not at Virginia or North Carolina State or Iowa, where the accomplishments of the women have built upon the traditions established by the men.

"It's rarefied air," said Dee Rowe, a special adviser for athletics at Connecticut, the men's basketball coach from 1969 to 1977 and a part of the Storrs campus for 26 years. "It's stratospheric. I don't know that I'm a wordsmith, but it is stratospheric."

And yet the response to the

Tough night for MC Lady Chaps

■ The Midland College women, without two of their point guards, fall to South Plains College.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

LEVELLAND - Midland College freshman forward Stacie Johnson knew this was going to be a bad day. After arriving at Levlland for Monday's game against South Plains College she realized she had left part of her uniform at home. She had forgotten her book backpack, pony tail holder, and spending money.

Add to Johnson's gut feeling the loss of point guard Amber Follis, who missed her seventh straight game with a knee injury, and the absence of Pam Hicks who missed Monday's due to the death of her father.

The lesson - never question a woman's intuition.

The Lady Chaps managed just two field goals the first 10 minutes of the game and South Plains and used a 17-0 run early and then withstood a furious Lady Chap comeback to down Midland 79-71 at the Texan Dome.

The win by South Plains was its fifth in six games and moves them into a second place tie with Midland in the conference standings with identical 6-4 marks. It also assures Howard of at least no worse than a tie for first place while the Lady Chaps, now 21-7 on the year, need a win against either New Mexico Junior

Midland High, Lee boys fight for soccer playoff standing

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

■ District 5-5A Soccer

Rebels and Bulldogs will be battling more than each other today in District 5-5A soccer.

Midland Lee's Rebels try to keep the playoffs within their grasp. And Midland High's Bulldogs are fighting perhaps the closest thing they've had to a slump in the last two seasons. The boys and girls teams from both schools face each other for the second time this season at 4 p.m., with the Lee girls at Midland High and the Midland High boys at Lee.

Midland High's boys have struggled a bit lately, maybe from lack of competition in a league they have now dominated for a 1 1/2 years. The Bulldogs (6-0 in district, 8-1 overall) have won 17 of their last 18 district games. They outshot opponents 33-12 in their last two wins, but took both by uncharacteristically narrow 2-1 margins.

"With today's game I think we'll get fired back up," Bulldog sweeper Jason Faught said. "I don't really expect anything different (from Lee strategically). They have a good team. I think if we can frustrate them like we did last time we'll be OK."

LEE: Loss of 5-10 junior Armacost a factor

(From 1C)

(knee). Armacost, a 5-10 junior post, averaged 14.7 points a game before she went down during a crucial point in district play, Lilley said.

The loss of Armacost, who scored 27 points in a 74-70 loss to Midland High in the fifth game of the season, is a major factor as the Lady Rebels will try to take advantage with 6-2 senior post Krissy Woodard.

The Lady Rebels, despite having a chance to tie Abilene High for second place and play a possibly weaker third-place team in the playoffs, may have gotten the best of the playoff pairings. Lubbock Monterey, who survived a two-way third-place playoff to face Abilene High in the playoffs, has three players over 6-feet tall. Coronado has no players over that barrier. Plus, Lee has already played Monterey twice, splitting games with the Lady Plainsmen.

"It might be an advantage to play Coronado (instead of Monterey)," Lee coach Elise Kail said. "It's their first time in the playoffs and it's their first 20-win season. They've lost one of their best players so there are some advantages to playing them."

The playoffs, while not foreign to the Lady Rebel program, are not familiar for this current crop of players. Woodard and fellow seniors Michelle Benson, Farrah Fisher and Tiffany Rodgers, were freshmen the last time Lee went to the playoffs.

Jennifer Monroe, a 5-8 junior post, will take up much of the slack for Armacost. Monroe, who scored 16 points against Midland High, averages 7.6 points per game. Brooke Beavers, a 5-10 sophomore, will replace Armacost. Their hands will be full containing Woodard, who is averaging 18 points a game.

"April helped gets us a long way and we're pretty proud to be here, but we're going to have to face an awfully tough Lee team," Lilley said. "Their post is tough and as far as matching up with her, it's going to be hard to do."

Coronado will rely on its outside speed to counter the lack of size inside. Junior Jill Skipper, the Lady Mustangs second-leading scorer with 10.7 points a game, is an excellant outside shooter and a target for Lee guards Claire Wright and Fisher.

"We've got a bunch of little ones that's for sure," Lilley said. "We've got mainly guards and wing players."

That's the one thing that concerns Kail, whose team has battled against faster teams all season long. Kail said her team will have to employ the same tactics they did in beating the quick Midland High team.

"We're going to have to do what we've done all year long," Kail said. "Which is take the ball out of their hands, slow down, work the ball around and get it inside. But if we've got a fastbreak we'll take it. We're not going to turn it down."

PLAYOFF NOTES: The winner of tonight's contest will face El Paso Hanks, District 2-5A champion, in the area round of the playoffs ... In other bi-district action, Abilene High will play Lubbock Monterey at 7:30 tonight in Snyder ... Midland High, the district champion, has a bye for the first round of the playoffs but will get back into action next Friday or Saturday with an area-round playoff between the winner of El Paso Bowie and El Paso Bel Air.

SOCCER: Girls teams troubled with injuries

(From 1C)

The Rebels hover in the middle of the 5-5A standings in a three-way tie for third at 3-3 (5-5 overall). They lost to MHS in the teams' first meeting this year 5-0. But a change in the Lee lineup after that game has allowed them to put up enough offense to stay in the playoff chase.

If MHS wants to repeat its decisive win over Lee the first time the two teams played, it will have to again shut down Rebel forward Henrik Madsen. Madsen has 11 goals this season. But the Bulldogs held him to only two shots on goal in their Jan. 21 shutout of the Rebs.

"We're going to make some adjustments to counteract his ability to score," MHS coach Tom Esikhati said. "With the changes they made after the first game I think they are better. We just need to try and get our injured players going."

Esikhati held leading scorer Tyler Berry out of Saturday's San Angelo game because the midfielder had a hamstring problem. Midfielder J.D. Garcia also missed part of the San Angelo game with a bruised knee. Esikhati called Berry's status a question mark for today. Garcia should play.

Lee will play Madsen more at forward today.

"They marked him out of the game the last time," Rebel coach John McCulloch said. "Henrik was playing halfback most of the time. He should get more chances (at forward)."

Injuries abound in pregame talk of the girls game. Midland Lee, at 3-3 in district and badly needing a win to stay near a playoff spot, has two key players that are questionable. One of MHS' top offensive players, sophomore forward Ann Smith, sprained an ankle in Saturday's loss to San Angelo. Lady Bulldog coach Scott Hodkinson said she is "at least doubtful" for today.

Stephanie Smith, Lee's leading scorer from last year, and goal keeper Jamie Calhoun both have doctor's appointments today to determine the extent of their knee injuries. Smith has torn ligaments in her right knee and may have to undergo arthroscopic surgery, which would put her out for three to six weeks.

But Lee's girls are much more concerned about breaking their three-game losing streak than they are about injuries.

"We had a good week of practice," said Lee girls coach Van Gravitt, whose team had an off date Saturday and hasn't played since a 2-1 loss to Abilene Cooper Tuesday. "The girls are pretty determined to do what it takes to get into the playoffs and we got refocused in a lot of ways."

The Lady Bulldogs, 1-5 in district and 2-5 overall, expect another tough game from Lee, which beat them 4-0 to open district play last month.

"They lost three games in a row so they're going to be hungry and upset and everything else," MHS coach Scott Hodkinson said. "Plus they had an open date to prepare for us."

The Lady Bulldogs may move talented goal keeper Tina Richardson to the field for the game if keeper Cathryn Vadala decides to forgo her Lady Dawg basketball duties.

"We're certainly not taking them lightly," Gravitt said of MHS. "Even in their game Saturday (a 4-1 loss the San Angelo) I thought the score was misleading. From what I saw they're passing the ball and controlling it a lot better than they were early in the season."

Lee should get midfielder Leslie Keel back from an injured ankle, which means they can again move Crystal Zachry to forward for help on offense.

MHS: Bulldogs look to equal last year's win total

(From 1C)

"For one thing, it would be victory No. 24, and that's the number of games we won last year when we went to the state tournament," Stephenson said. "And without Jumon in the lineup, this is a chance to find out just how deep we really are. Our kids are playing very well right now. Also, I would like to see two teams from Midland in the playoffs and that will happen if we win."

That's the other factor tonight. An MHS win will send Midland Lee, off tonight, to the state playoffs. An MHS loss to the Bobcats will force San Angelo and Lee to meet over the weekend for a state playoff berth in a one-game shootout.

"Naturally, we want Midland High to win the game," said Lee coach Jon House. "You do wonder what the absence of Hailey in the lineup will mean to Midland High. He is a big part of their team. It makes you a little nervous."

With or without Hailey, Stephenson feels that San Angelo will be a worthy opponent.

"They won two district games last year and have won six so far this season. They have come a long way and they have some nice talent. Townsend and Nunez scare me if they put together good games. And they have come down the stretch with some big wins to stay in the playoff race."

PLAYOFF NOTES: If Midland High wins tonight, Lee and MHS will square off in a pre-playoff scrimmage at 7 p.m. Saturday at Chaparral Center. However, if MHS loses to San Angelo, that game would be off since Lee would have to face San Angelo in a district playoff to decide the league's third playoff representative.

In District 3-5A, Lubbock High meets Lubbock Monterey. If Monterey wins, the Plainsmen would tie idle Lubbock Coronado for the district championship and they would have to have a playoff. If Lubbock High wins, Coronado would own the crown. Then Monterey and Lubbock would be the bi-district opponents for Lee and MHS next week, provided MHS doesn't pull out a last minute District 4-5A title and the Rebels make the playoffs.

accomplishment was muffled by the absence of either team on campus Sunday afternoon — and perhaps by the tasks to come. A part of the campus that has been the scene of spontaneous bonfires in the past was reportedly quiet on Sunday, and gathering places, while crowded and loud, were not unusually crazy.

"They were excited," said Sean Scraba, an owner of Huskies, a bar and restaurant on the Storrs campus. "But I don't think you'll see anything until Tuesday night. People kind of go on their merry way. Maybe kids are more civilized these days."

MEN: Texans take third straight for third place

night.

It was the third straight win for South Plains which evened its conference record at 5-5 and 18-8 overall. SPC moved into sole possession of third place, one game ahead of New Mexico Military after the Bronchos lost to Odessa College Monday night and Howard had the night off.

The Texans, using their quickness, offset Midland's size advantage with a stifling 23 zone defense that kept the Chaps out of the middle, but also kept MC guards Kevin Rice and Devon Phillips from getting open on the wing.

The two combined for 44 points in the Chaps' win over SPC three weeks ago, but were able to score just 19 points Monday.

South Plains learned from its last game with the Chaps, blowing a 10-point halftime lead in the Chaps 95-91 win. The Texans built a 14-point first half lead, 45-31, thanks to an 11-0 run the final 3:41 of the half as reserve guard Richard Brown scored eight points during the run.

"I thought that was indicative of how the game went," said Midland coach Pat Rafferty. "Every time we made a run at them, they responded with a clutch basket or play. I thought our transition defense was very poor, we let (Corey) Wright go anywhere he wanted to and (center Richard) Batiste posted up anytime he wanted. We just got our tails whipped."

One statistic indicative of the one-sidedness was SPC out rebounding Midland 43-19 as the Chaps grabbed just two offensive rebounds.

SPC refused to let Midland mount a run as they answered every Chap basket in the first 10 minutes of the second half. MC could not score more than four unanswered points as the Texans built a 17 point lead, 57-40, after guard Corey Wright hit a basket with 14:58 remaining.

The Chaps were led in scoring by Phillips, Ben Radford and D'Juan Baker, who missed practice last weekend with a cold, with 14 points. Shedrich Franklin added 12 points.

South Plains had five in double figures with Marcus Williams leading the way with 17 points.

The Texan bench, which had scored 35 points in a 20-point win over Odessa College last Thursday, outscored Midland's reserves 38-16.

Both teams started the game on fire, Midland scoring on its first five possessions of the game to take a 12-6 lead after a Devon Phillips three-pointer with 17:45 left in the first half.

College on the road or Howard at home in the final regular season game of the season to clinch a spot in the Region V Tournament, Feb. 28-March 2 in Denison.

"I thought we played competitively for about 18 to 20 minutes of the game," said MC coach Ron Jones. "I think we proved in the second half that we could play without our point guards. Sometime during the game, I don't know when, we decided that we could play with them and you cannot wait. There is no room for error in this conference, you have to play a full 40 minutes."

South Plains guard Kiki Baker took control of the game, taking advantage of Tomenia Porter's emergency start for 16 first half points, including the Lady Texans first nine points in the opening 4:35 of the game. Baker led all scorers with a season-high 24 points, including 16 in the first half.

"She was unconscious in the first half and we tried not to wake her at halftime," said SPC coach Lyndon Hardin. "We felt like we had to get things going early and never let them get things going and we were able to do that. Midland was missing its two points and that was big for them."

Midland, which dropped its second consecutive conference game was led in scoring by JoAnna Kailahi with 20 points, 13 in the second half. Roslynn Dunn added 12 points while Shannan Jordan and Rashunda Jarmon chipped in 11 each.

Jarmon also had a game-high 13 rebounds. Midland came out firing early with consecutive three-pointers and a pair of Porter free throws to take an 8-4 lead with 16:28 to play in the first.

Oilers flirt with McNair

■ Alcorn State quarterback Steve McNair is the talk of this week's NFL combine.

N.Y. Times News Service

INDIANAPOLIS — From the moment he stepped off the plane here, Alcorn State quarterback Steve McNair has been the most sought-after player at the NFL scouting combine. McNair has been like a pied piper, with general managers, coaches, scouts, reporters, agents and autograph seekers following him everywhere.

"I'm excited about my opportunity, but I'm surprised so many teams are interested in me," McNair said during a break in the combine, which ended Monday. "I've had quite a few tell me they're going to draft me if they get a chance. I just feel honored to be considered."

Although the Houston Oilers are among the teams that need a quarterback, they have not told McNair they will draft him. Because he got so much attention as "Air McNair" last season and has so much potential, he would generate more interest as the Oilers' No. 1 pick than any player available, even though he probably wouldn't start as a rookie.

"There's a lot of talk about Houston drafting me," McNair said. "Really, though, it doesn't make any difference to me where I play. My favorite team is going to be the one that drafts me, and if that's the Oilers, I'll be happy to play there."

McNair threw better than the other quarterbacks Sunday, but his performance was nothing special, according to the scouts who watched him at the combine. Such prospects as Kerry Collins, John Walsh and Rob Johnson didn't participate in the drills.

"Everything's up in the air because the process goes in phases," Oilers general manager Floyd Reese said Sunday. The Oilers' third pick in the draft is their highest since 1987, when they used the third selection on Miami fullback Alonzo Highsmith.

Between the combine and the draft, the Oilers' brain trust will interview McNair extensively, analyze every college game he played, watch him in individual workouts at Alcorn State and interrogate his coaches, teammates and opponents.

"When the draft comes, there'll be no doubt about how we rate McNair and the other quarterbacks," Reese said.

At the combine, some players get annoyed at the attention, especially from the media. When they are being interviewed, they look uncomfortable, as if they would rather be elsewhere.

McNair is polite and cooperative. He doesn't dodge questions. He looks you in the eye, but when he talks, his voice is so soft you have to strain to hear him. He appears confident, comfortable and level-headed in a crowd. He is quickly growing accustomed to being bombarded from all sides.

McNair is 6-1, 218 pounds and built like a rock. His muscles look like a linebacker's.

One longtime member of the Oilers' organization observed McNair this weekend and said: "Warren (Moon) had to work his butt off for several years to look like this kid. I've never seen a more impressive physical specimen at quarterback."

Moon, who has said he'd like to end his career with the Oilers and would consider backing up and helping groom McNair, said he plans to talk to McNair about what to expect in the NFL.

"I'd most definitely like to talk to him because he's done so well in this league for so long," McNair said. "I want to be the best I can be, and Moon's already been through what I'm facing."

Wherever he ends up, McNair said, "I hope to get a good offensive coordinator who will teach me the pro game."

"When I'm ready to play depends on a lot of things — the coach, system, other quarterbacks on the team and the progress I make. I'm confident that I'll make a smooth transition into the NFL."

What McNair has going for him is a great arm, 4.5 speed in the 40-yard dash, outstanding running ability and all the intangibles — intelligence, toughness, competitiveness, determination and leadership capability.

Pirates face choice to sell team now or look for other offers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Perhaps by early next week, John J. Rigas could own the Pittsburgh Pirates — or, just as he has for 10 years, only own Pirates' season tickets.

With Rigas desirous of completing a deal and the Pirates unable so far to find another prospective owner who would drive up the sale price, sources close to the negotiations say the team soon faces a choice between:

— Accepting Rigas' bid and compromising with him on who will pay the Pirates' bills this season.

Rigas' $85.15 million proposal does not include the $27 million Urban Redevelopment Authority loan that raises his total acquisition indebtedness to $112 million. That is considerably more than the sale prices of the Oakland Athletics ($85 million) and San Diego Padres ($83 million).

— Further delaying a decision in hopes that another potential buyer will surface in a few weeks or months and drive up the sale price — at the risk of driving Rigas out of the bidding.

However, that tactic would likely force the owners to retain the team for another season and absorb at least another $12 million to $15 million in losses. Some of the 10 owners are unwilling to lose any more money and want to get out of the baseball business as soon as possible.

Rigas apparently is also eager for a decision. The 70-year-old cable TV entrepreneur has said repeatedly he is not interested in a protracted bidding war.

"Hopefully, we can make some real progress ... and get this done very shortly," Rigas said last week.

Chuck Greenberg, a Pittsburgh lawyer representing Rigas, declined to comment Monday on the negotiations. The Pirates also have refused to talk about the progress, or lack thereof, of any talks.

However, the Pirates' indecision over Rigas' bid is privately raising questions in Mayor Tom Murphy's administration about the owners' commitment to keeping the Pirates in Pittsburgh. Pirates chairman Vincent Sarni and other board members have insisted they aren't interested in making a profit, only in selling to owners who will keep the team in Pittsburgh.

J&S Commercial Electric
The whole spectrum of electrical services

For nearly 20-years, J&S Commercial Electric has provided an extremely high level of commercial, residential and industrial electrical services to the residents and businesses of the Permian Basin. Offering the whole spectrum of electrical services, the company is a subsidiary of J&S Oil Field Electric, and is managed by licensed master electrician Terry Shipman.

According to Shipman, what makes J&S Commercial Electric different from other companies is their attitude toward customer's needs. Offering a 24-hour, 365-days a year call out service, J&S Commercial Electric is always available. This is a great boon if you have a crisis at an odd time as the fast response times means money, time and worry saved by the client.

Because of J&S Commercial Electric's industrial background they already have all of the heavy equipment that is used to install and service electrical systems. Because clients don't have to rent machines such as bucket trucks and ditching machines, costs are kept low and competitive.

Jerry Jones, president of Midland Business Center, has used J&S Commercial Electric on several projects. "They have worked in a number of our buildings," he said. "They are excellent workers and they do a wonderful job...we would recommend them as an outstanding electrical contractor."

J&S Commercial Electric will deal with virtually all types of electrical work: whether it is installing a new wiring system or servicing an old ceiling fan. They also deal with regular maintenance and instal ation of all types of electrical systems.

J&S Commercial Elect : are used to being called out to rep lace a wire or a plug, whether for a large company, a small business or a home owner: no job is too large, or too small.

As one would expect from professionals, one of J&S' Commercial Electric's priorities is safety. Not only do they only employ experienced, licensed electricians, but every single job, regardless of size, is heavily insured.

For more information about J&S Commercial Electric's wide range of professional services, and how they could improve your company's safety levels and efficiency, call Charles Cunningham at 563-2209, or stop by their location at 7007 County Road 1284 South.

Terry Shipman, licensed master electrician with J&S Commercial Electric, works on the electrical system of the Western Building. The electrical company is replacing the electrical system in the fourth floor conversion. For more information about J&S Commercial Electric, call 563-2209

Investing Is a Long-term Commitment

"Investing can be compared to marriage. It has its ups and downs, but if you stick with it for the long haul, you'll usually be rewarded. Spouses who view every problem as the end of their relationship are over-reacting. Similarly, investors who view declining markets as catastrophes are usually mistaken. They are reacting to what has already happened, rather than preparing for the future," said Van Pearcy, Midland's investment representative with Edward D. Jones & Co.

Van Pearcy
Edward D. Jones & Co.

The first quarter of 1994 is a classic example of the disadvantages of a short-term outlook. During that period, the 15 largest mutual funds in America each recorded a negative return. The Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Stock Index was off 3.8 percent. And the average of approximately 4,000 mutual funds representing 13 different investment objectives reported a quarterly loss similar to that of the S&P 500 and Dow Jones Industrial Average.

Van states that everyone should remember that one quarter is a very short period of time, and investors who make decisions based on one quarter's performance are mistaken. Serious investors, on the other hand, ask only if their investments are meeting long-term objectives.

Taking a longer-term view, those 15 largest funds were up an average of 11.4 percent for each of the three years immediately preceding the first quarter 1994 loss. Johnson's average of growth-and-income funds, which closely parallels the market indexes, showed a 12 percent annual compounded rate of return for the 10-year period of 1984-94 -- which included the first quarter of 1994.

The largest declines in the first quarter of 1994 were those of the municipal bond fund average (off 5.5 percent) and the utility fund average (off 7.1 percent).

Investors in both of these sectors are typically concerned with current income and both types of funds continued to pay regular dividends even though their market value declined. Investors who carefully select funds to meet their objectives should not be overly concerned about short-term market action.

Even when it seems you're always wrong, Pearcy says that patience is paramount. If you had invested $5,000 in the Dow at the precise market peak every year for the past 20 years, and then watched stocks tumble in '94, your $100,000 investment still would have grown to $468,896.

Monitoring your investments is prudent. Day-to-day worry about price is not. Your most important investment decision is to begin. Define your goals, and select the best investments to get you there. Then, have the discipline to stand back and let them work for you.

"Stock market fluctuation is a fact of life," Pearcy said. "Upward fluctuations generally don't cause much concern. And, for long-term investors, neither should downward fluctuations. Stick it out through the bad times, and you just might live happily ever after."

Van Pearcy has run the local Edward D. Jones & Co office for 8 years. He's a born West Texan and received his BA and MBA from the University of Notre Dame. For a no-obligation appointment about retirement, investment savings or other financial matters, please call his office at 683-7516. Van's office is located across the street from the high school football stadium at 2020 West Cuthbert.

Maxwell fails to show for Rocket practice

HOUSTON (AP) — Vernon Maxwell, suspended for rushing into the stands to punch a heckler, failed to show for practice Monday night with the Houston Rockets.

"It was just a lack of communication with Vernon," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said after the two-hour workout. "We'll get it straightened out. He thought because he was suspended he wasn't supposed to be around the team."

Maxwell, a starting guard, has eight games left in his 10-game suspension. He has filed an appeal of the suspension as well as his $20,000 fine to NBA commissioner David Stern, claiming the league didn't fully investigate the incident.

Tomjanovich said it is not clear if Maxwell will start when he returns to the team.

"We'll have to see," Tomjanovich said. "If you stay off all that time, it just depends."

Maxwell went into the stands at Portland on Feb. 6 and attacked Steve George of Atlanta, claiming the fan had shouted racial and sexual insults about his family, especially his daughter, Amber, who died in 1993.

George has denied making any derogatory remarks about Maxwell and has demanded Maxwell retract his accusations.

On Monday at The Summit, Maxwell continued to receive support from his teammates.

"Every person has his pressure point," Robert Horry said. "One thing will make a person cross the line and something else will get to another person."

Otis Thorpe said he wasn't surprised at Maxwell's absence from the workout. "I don't know the rules," Thorpe said. "Sometimes you're not supposed to be with the team when you're suspended. Sometimes you are."

Tomjanovich had more than Maxwell on his mind as put the defending champions through their paces for Tuesday night's game against the Los Angeles Clippers.

Graf back on center stage

PARIS (AP)— Steffi Graf was helping with the draw. When the tournament official charged with placing the name cards on the draw sheet fumbled "S. Graf" and let it drop to the carpet, Graf quickly stooped over to retrieve it.

Her back appeared to give her no trouble.

This was good news for both Graf and women's tennis, which is in dire need of Graf's star quality.

Graf was back on center stage Monday. She was as uncomfortable as ever with probing questions and bright television lights on the eve of her first tournament in three months, the Open Gaz de France.

She is no longer ranked No. 1, and for the first time since early 1987, she does not hold a Grand Slam singles title. But such statistical matters were of little interest to her. What matters most is playing tennis without pain in her lower back or right calf or anywhere else.

"I don't wake up every morning thinking about which tournament I won last year or which tournament I hold," Graf said. "I don't think about that. I'm trying to be able to play a couple of Grand Slam tournaments. That's all I'm worried about right now."

She has played in only one tournament since losing to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the final of the U.S. Open last September. Graf was in pain during that match because of a bone spur in her lower back, and that condition would cause her to withdraw from four events.

Lady Dawgs survive Ozona

Midland High overcame a 13-8 first-quarter deficit with a torrid second quarter to pull away for a 56-51 non-district girls basketball win over Class 2A Ozona Monday night at Chaparral Center.

The Lady Lions are ranked No. 4 in the state despite having a starting lineup of three freshmen, one sophomore and a senior. They haven't lost a game since early December when they fell to Brownfield in the Brownfield tournament. That was the same tournament where Ozona (28-2) handed the playoff-bound Midland Lee girls a loss.

Despite the early lead, however, the Lady Lions fell victim to the MHS press and Amy Alcala. The Lady Dawgs went on an 11-0 run in the second to pull away for a 31-21 lead which they never lost as they outscored Ozona 23-10 in second. Alcala, who finished with a game-high 30 points, scored 18 of those in the second quarter. No other Lady Dawgs scored in double figures.

Midland High improved to 25-3 with the win and will have a bye in the playoffs before playing the winner of the El Paso Bel Air-El Paso Bowie bi-district contest which takes place tonight. Midland's area round game will probably take place on Friday in either Alpine or Lubbock but final playoff pairings will not be decided until tonight.

Lauderdale gets Hall of Honor nod

Harvey Lauderdale, a retired Midland amateur softball umpire, was inducted into the Texas Amateur Softball Association Hall of Honor this month in Waco.

Lauderdale also has been inducted into the Midland Hall of Fame and the national ASA Hall in Oklahoma City, Okla.

He has been playing and umpiring softball in Midland since 1967.

Junior Nationals set for Midland

Admission for the competition is $25 for adults and $18 for students for all sessions. Daily tickets for preliminaries and finals will be $10 and $7. One day prelim tickets are $4 and $3 and one day finals will be $6 and $4.

Chap Center to host playoffs

Chaparral Center will host four private school playoff outings today.

Former Mav coach Adubato in good condition

PHOENIX (AP) — Richie Adubato, hospitalized because of breathing problems and unable to help coach in the NBA All-Star Game, was listed in good condition Monday.

Adubato, 57, an assistant to Orlando Magic coach Brian Hill, never reached the America West Arena on Sunday. He felt short of breath at his hotel, and instead of joining Hill on the East bench, he checked into HealthWest Regional Medical Center.

HealthWest spokeswoman Cathy Deimeke said Adubato was in good condition, and team spokeswoman Traci Blue said in Orlando, Fla., that Adubato would be released Tuesday if he clears a final checkup.

Adubato has no history of heart problems, and an angiogram performed Monday was negative, Blue said. Angiography uses X-rays to reveal the condition of blood vessels.

Adubato, who joined the Magic last September, is in his 16th season as an NBA coach and once was a scout for Atlanta.

He began as a Detroit Pistons assistant in 1978. Adubato also has been an assistant with New York, Dallas and Cleveland. While he was with the Mavericks, he took over for John McLeod the last 71 games of the 1989-90 season.

Prices slump

Heating oil and natural gas futures prices plunged Monday on forecasts for warmer weather in the northern United States.

The outlook promised a return to the mild conditions that prevailed in December and January, causing stockpiles of heating fuels to swell.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, heating oil for March delivery dropped 0.99 cent to 47.29 cents a gallon; March natural gas tumbled 8 cents to $1.39 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In other energy trading, March deliveries of West Texas intermediate fell 19 cents to $18.27 a barrel

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

Industry reports last week showed U.S. stocks of natural gas were 33 percent above a year ago, while petroleum distillates, which consist mainly of heating oil, were 16 percent above a year ago.

The cold in recent weeks should reduce the natural gas surplus to about half what it was at the end of January, but the supply still will be about 115 billion cubic feet above the norm, said Michael Emerson, manager of risk management services for KCS Energy in Houston.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed against key currencies Monday as investors awaited economic reports that could yield clues about whether inflation is on the rise.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 98.76 Japanese yen, down from 98.93 late Friday.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5218 German marks, up from 1.5185.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2850 Swiss francs, up from 1.2825; 5.2685 French francs, up from 5.2585; 1,612 Italian lire, down from 1,613; and 1.4013 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4020.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5628, down from $1.5630.

Markets rise

NEW YORK — The stock market moved ahead modestly Monday during a dull session in which investors dithered while awaiting sensitive economic data.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which didn't stray far from the breakeven point for the first half of the session, perked up in the afternoon and ended near its highest reading of the day. It rose 15.14 to 3,954.21.

But the blue-chip gauge fared better than the broader measures. The New York Stock Exchange composite index finished almost flat at 261.85, up 0.05. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index failed to sustain a lead that brought it near its record of 482.00. It inched up 0.19 to 481.65

Only about 50 stocks separated advancing and declining issues on the Big Board where trading eased to a moderate pace. Volume on the Big Board's floor came to 255.13 million shares, down from 295.56 million on Friday and far below the heavy amounts of recent sessions.

Beyond the Big Board, the story was similar. The Nasdaq Stock Market composite index lost 1.01 to close at 789.42. The American Stock Exchange market value index fell 0.25 to 447.60.

Market analysts said investors held off buying ahead of potentially market-moving economic data due this week.

The hesitant stance also was evident in the bond market. In late trading, bond prices were slightly depressed, which nudged interest rates up a bit. The main 30-year Treasury bond was trading at a price to yield 7.67 percent.

Rate bumps to hit variable mortgages

By N.Y. Times News Service

If you want to know why higher interest rates haven't slowed the economy much, look no further than the adjustable-rate mortgage.

While rates were climbing last year, adjustable mortgages offered relief. Instead of paying 8 or 9 percent for a fixed-rate mortgage, a borrower could get an adjustable loan with a first-year interest rate of 5 or 6 percent.

But this year, borrowers will discover that there is no free lunch. On the anniversary of the loans, rates will be adjusted upward — in most cases, by 2 full percentage points, the maximum allowed. "Every month this year, you will hear yells and screams," said David Lereah, chief economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association.

For a typical family, the increase could amount to $2,000 over the course of a year. For the American economy, the rate increases will be the equivalent of a $10 billion to $20 billion tax hike. "It won't cause a recession, but it should cause some slowdown," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Bros., a New York investment firm.

The Federal Reserve has raised rates seven times in the past year in a deliberate bid to make it tougher for people to borrow and spend. The Fed is convinced that continued fast growth will lead to rising prices.

Some of those rate hikes immediately hit the consumer in the pocketbook. Home equity loans, for instance, are tied directly to the prime rate, which in turn, is linked tightly to the short-term rates the Fed controls. Over the past year, the prime rate has climbed from 6 percent to 9 percent, and home equity loans — which usually are adjusted every month — have risen an equivalent amount.

Many credit cards also have adjustable rates tied to the prime; typically, the rates change every three months. The rates on fixed-rate mortgages are set daily in the marketplace; over the past year, their rates have climbed from about 7 percent to 9 percent.

But adjustable rate mortgages are different because they put off the day of reckoning. Last year, their growing popularity allowed the housing market to remain strong, even as fixed rates were climbing sharply. Home sales slowed toward the end of 1994, but the dropoff was not dramatic. "Adjustables allowed families to circumvent the rise in rates," said Lereah.

Adjustables appeal to two types of buyers — those willing to gamble on rates and those who need help affording a home. The first group is betting that rates will decline. For most of the 1990s, that was a safe assumption. The second group needs the lower rate an adjustable rate mortgage offers simply to qualify for a mortgage. Those people are hoping their income will rise in future years so they can keep up with the payments.

In 1993, when mortgage rates fell to their lowest level in 25 years, adjustables were not terribly popular. Who needed to gamble when you could lock in a rate of 7 percent for 30 years?

In 1994, conditions changed. After the Fed began pushing up rates in February, mortgage rates began a steady ascent. Homebuyers took notice. In February, only 21 percent of the mortgages written nationally were adjustable loans, according to the Federal Housing Finance Board. By June, adjustables accounted for 43 percent of all mortgages, and by November they hit 55 percent.

By going for an adjustable rate mortgage, a homebuyer knocked off anywhere from 2 to 3 percentage points from his first-year interest rate. Because the mortgage market is so competitive, many lenders offered discounted first-year "teaser" rates on their adjustables, making the initial rate even lower than it would normally have been.

But the discounts won't last forever. On the anniversary of the loans, rates will be adjusted closer to prevailing interest rates. Typically, adjustable rates are pegged to the one-year US Treasury bill. Over the past year, the rate on those bills has climbed more than 3 percentage points. On most adjustable loans, rates can climb only 2 percentage points a year.

The two-door Romanian sport-utility vehicle awaits an unveiling at a convention of the National Automobile Dealers Association in Dallas Sunday. The four-wheel-drive is being billed as American's lowest priced 4x4.

Entrepreneurs to import $10,000 sport-utility vehicle

DALLAS (AP) — He admits the ARO won't have the dash or finesse of a Jeep Grand Cherokee or Ford Explorer, but entrepreneur John Trotman figures he can sell 20,000 of the Romanian sport-utility vehicles a year based on price.

At $9,828, you could drive home three of the 5,200-pound, four-door, four-wheel-drive ARO 24 models for the price of a loaded Jeep.

"It's not the prettiest thing in the world. We don't claim it to be," said Trotman, president of East European Imports Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

He was in Dallas on Sunday to unveil the vehicle and its two-door, $7,995 counterpart, and to sign up dealers at a convention of the National Automobile Dealers Association.

"We've got about 10 or 12 applicants so far," Trotman said. Targeting the East Coast at first, his company hopes to start importing the vehicles in May to capitalize on the booming U.S. market for sport utilities.

The AROs he will import are modified from a vehicle that has been built by ARO in Cimpulung, Romania, for 30 years and sold mainly to government agencies for military, ambulance and municipal use, Trotman said. The state-owned ARO company is working with Trotman's firm and Intercontinental Technologies Group of Long Beach, Calif.

"It's an inexpensive, extremely durable utility vehicle that will be great for first-time buyers, hunters, fishermen."
— John Trotman, Florida backer

East European Imports plans to spend $6 million on advertising to launch the ARO in the United States, and Intercontinental Technologies eventually will spend up to $20 million to add a modern engine assembly operation to the Romanian plant, said Trotman, who ran a Subaru distributorship in the Northeast in the 1980s.

He said he isn't worried by the reputation Eastern European vehicles might have in this country because of the quality and repair problems of the ill-fated Yugo subcompact that was imported in the 1980s from Yugoslavia.

"If there's a long-term plan in place for parts, service and warranties, those problems will take care of themselves," Trotman said.

The ARO 24 initially will be powered by a 2.9-liter, 180 horsepower V-6 Cosworth engine built in Britain. The two-door ARO 10 will have a 1.8-liter four-cylinder engine. Both will have driver-side air bags and meet other U.S. government standards for safety and emissions, said EEI chairman John Perez, a former Atlanta car dealer. Both will have 36,000-mile warranties.

"It's an inexpensive, extremely durable utility vehicle that will be great for first-time buyers, hunters, fishermen," Trotman said.

Tall City sales-tax rebates increase by 3.87 percent

From Staff Reports

The city of Midland has received its February sales tax rebates check for $1,356,921, which represents a 3.87 percent increase over the same period last year.

This month's payment includes taxes collected on holiday sales in December and reported by businesses filing monthly returns in January, quarterly returns for sales made in October, November and December, and yearly filings for 1994.

The latest check brings Midland's year-to-date total to $2,103,026, or 3.35 percent above last year's figure after two months of $2,034,744.

Most financial experts consider sales tax rebates to be an accurate indicator of a city's economic strength since they reflect the buying habits of residents.

Meanwhile, Midland County's numbers also showed a modest gain over the comparable period last. The county's payment was for $728,705, or 1.71 percent above last February's total of $716,443. The county's total to date is $1,197,507, or 1.74 percent above last year's total to date of $1,176,937.

Be wary of wireless cable limited partnerships

BY BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q: Enclosed is literature I received pertaining to investing in a wireless cable limited partnership. Since I have been burned before, I am seeking your advice.

Have you ever heard of such things? Are they reputable? Is their return on investment, which they project at 600 percent over five years, true?

A: Anyone who follows financial news at all has read quite a bit about limited partnerships in general and, recently, about wireless cable in particular. Much of that news has been bad.

Scandals have plagued that end of the securities business for decades, as various types of limited partnerships, especially oil and gas and real estate, have turned sour for investors. Some big-name brokerages have been racked up by regulators and ordered to refund hundreds of millions of dollars to investors in real estate limited partnerships.

There are plenty of legitimate limited partnerships. However, the bad apples do make the news. As we say around newspaper city rooms, "Sure, the technology has changed, but there will always be muck to rake."

During the past several years, wireless cable limited partnerships have been emerging from the woodwork, many promoted by brokerages whose reputations leave much to be desired. The earnings projection of the one you are considering is ridiculously high and doomed to fall way short.

Bob Brinker, a radio commentator I hold in high regard, has an apt description for wireless cable: "Shark bait."

Think it through. "Wireless cable" is an oxymoron. If you believe in that five-year, 600 percent earnings projection, you fit the second part of that descriptive word.

Q: When companies report their earnings, I often see the wording, "on a fully diluted per-share basis." What does that mean?

A: It's what earnings per share would be if all convertible securities were swapped for common stock.

Let's use our old standby, the nonexistent XYZ Corp., as an example. We'll say that XYZ, which has exactly 10 million shares of common stock outstanding — owned by investors — reports net income of $20 million for 1994. That's $2 per share, because per-share earnings are expressed as being on the common stock.

Let's also say XYZ has a large number of convertible bonds outstanding that give the bondowners the right to present those bonds to the company and receive XYZ common stock in return. We'll say the total number of common shares that could be issued as a result of conversions is 10 million.

Between the 10 million already outstanding and the 10 million that could be issued, the fully diluted number of XYZ shares becomes 20 million. Divide the $20 million earnings figure by 20 million shares and you see that XYZ Corp.'s 1994 earnings were $1 per share on a fully diluted basis.

Convertible debentures, convertible preferred stocks, warrants and all other securities convertible into common shares must be included in any calculation of fully diluted per-share earnings.

Q: I recently bought some common stock of a utility company and was told it is backed by the government. I never heard of this before and would like to know if it is true.

A: It would be interesting to know what "backed by" means and what branch of government allegedly is involved. Is it federal, state or local?

No government entity guarantees investments in any common stocks. All common stocks carry some risk, as well as potential for profit. Big Brother Government can't change that.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, a federal agency with extensive electric utility operations, has issued and sold notes and bonds to investors. But those are debt securities — not common stock.

Better check again with the person who told you the utility common stock has government backing. It's more than likely that yarn lacks credulity.

Dykstra dismays Clemens, Maddux

■ Roger Clemens and Greg Maddux dismiss comments about the baseball strike made by Lenny Dystra as not representing most players.

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — Roger Clemens and Greg Maddux took a break from golf Monday to throw some high, hard ones at Lenny Dykstra.

The two three-time Cy Young award winners, both staunch union backers, expressed dismay with Dykstra for even suggesting players should alter their contract demands and go back to work.

"He's going to have to play with the team," Maddux said. "We all feel like we're on the same team and in this together. When someone has a different opinion, it's a little upsetting."

Dykstra said last week he was considering playing despite the strike and wanted the union's negotiating committee to consider accepting a proposal offered by mediator W.J. Usery.

His comments, though, were dismissed by both Maddux and Clemens, who said they were misinformed and didn't reflect the thinking of almost all the other striking players.

"Lenny speaks up without really knowing the issues," Clemens said. "Lenny spent 20 minutes in a couple of meetings and then left. He should go to these meetings and spend the four to six hours that everyone else spends."

Still, Clemens said he didn't think the Philadelphia Phillies outfielder would actually cross the line and play without a settlement.

"Everybody knows Lenny is a little unusual," the Boston Red Sox pitcher said. "But I very much doubt he would cross the line."

On a week when pitchers would be reporting to camp to open spring training, Maddux and Clemens found themselves instead swatting golf balls at a charity tournament organized by PGA golfer Robert Gamez.

They were joined by Houston Astros slugger Phil Plantier, who said union unity was not a problem despite a strike now stretching into its seventh month.

"I believe there's no splintering," Plantier said. "Everyone I've talked to is real united. The more you know about what's going on, the more united you are."

Plantier said Dykstra has the right to his opinion, but should study the issues before voicing it.

"There's only a problem when someone doesn't know the facts," he said. "I think when he hears the facts he'll change his mind."

The long strike didn't seem to dash the enthusiasm of the handful of fans attending the tournament, who had their pictures taken with players and brought baseballs and trading cards to sign.

One determined autograph hunter carried two bats around the course, trying to get players and former players to sign them.

"We just have to stick together and hope the fans will forgive us once it's all over," Maddux said. "I hope they do. It will take a lot of PR on the part of both the players and the owners when this ends."

All three players expressed optimism the strike would be settled by the time the regular season is scheduled to begin, and scoffed at any threat posed by replacement players.

"They're not major league players and once we get back they won't be around," Clemens said. "If it's glorification to get double A and single A players out there and journeymen who couldn't get anybody out in their prime, let them go out there and have their fun."

"I'm not intimidated or scared by it," Maddux said. "I hope those guys have fun. Because those are guys who would be getting opportunities they wouldn't get if it weren't for the strike."

Maddux, who won an unprecedented third straight Cy Young award for last year's abbreviated season, said he and most other players are determined to stay out as long as necessary to get a settlement.

"I believe in the cause," Maddux said. "Until I'm convinced there's absolute proof baseball is on the verge of financial disaster.

No. 12 Georgia tops Texas women by five

AUSTIN (AP) — La'Keshia Frett and Saudia Roundtree each scored 20 points and Rachel Powell hit four free throws in the last 21.4 seconds Monday night, leading No. 12 Georgia to a 80-75 victory over Texas.

Kedra Holland's 3-pointer with 57 seconds left broke a 73-73 tie and gave the Lady Bulldogs (20-2) the lead for good in a half that featured 13 lead changes.

Nekeshia Henderson led all scorers with 30 points and Erica Routt added 19 for the Lady Longhorns (9-12).

After Amie Smith hit a layup to get Texas within 76-75 with 28 seconds left, Powell was fouled with 21.4 seconds left, and hit both free throws.

Henderson missed a 3-pointer, then Powell was fouled and again made both free throws.

Texas took a 43-41 halftime lead behind Henderson's 18 points and four 3-pointers, including one from two feet behind the 3-point line just three seconds before the first half ended.

Her other three 3-pointers came during a 14-4 run that put Texas ahead 27-18.

Georgia regained the lead 41-40 with 33.3 seconds left in the half on two free throws by Holland.

The Lady Bulldogs took an early second-half lead of 46-45 on a basket and a free-throw by Tracy Henderson.

Routt paced a 10-4 run that gave the Lady Longhorns a 55-50 lead, their biggest of the half, with 14:04 remaining.

But the Lady Bulldogs came right back to tie it at 55 with 13:39 remaining on Powell's 3-pointer.

And the teams traded baskets for much of the next 11 minutes before Georgia's closing run.

Lanier should replace Nelson

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Don Nelson, sick and demoralized after the divisive Chris Webber trade left his team in a tailspin, resigned Monday as coach and general manager of the Golden State Warriors.

The Warriors said Bob Lanier, an assistant coach and Hall of Fame center, will replace Nelson. Nelson's job as general manager was not immediately filled.

Nelson's son, Donn Nelson, currently an assistant coach for the Warriors, will remain with the team to assist with the 1995 draft.

Published reports said Don Nelson accepted a $1 million buyout.

Golden State was expected to challenge for the NBA title this season after 50 wins last year. But injuries and dissension following the loss of Webber, last year's rookie of the year, turned the year into a disaster. The Warriors were 14-31 at the All-Star break.

The usually cautious Nelson was talking about a possible title in the preseason, with injured guard Tim Hardaway returning to join Webber and All-Star guard Latrell Sprewell. Hopes rose further when the Warriors obtained their first established center in the Nelson years, Rony Seikaly, in a preseason trade with Miami for forward Billy Owens.

But Webber, squeezed under the team's salary cap last season by a contract making him a restricted free agent after one year, never played another game with the Warriors.

The former Michigan star had a publicized blowup with Nelson in Charlotte last season and was quoted in an off-season interview as saying it was the worst year of his life. Webber had no patience with Nelson's demanding style and eventually forced a Nov. 17 trade to Washington.

New owner Chris Cohan agreed to the trade, siding with his coach. In exchange, the Warriors got Tom Gugliotta.

Bagwell takes home two ESPYs

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeff Bagwell of the Houston Astros, Mark Messier of the New York Rangers and Charlotte Smith of the North Carolina women's basketball team each won two ESPY Awards Monday night on ESPN.

The two top ESPY Awards went to San Francisco 49ers quarterback Steve Young as male athlete of the year and Olympic gold-medal winning speed skater Bonnie Blair as female athlete of the year.

Televised live from Radio City Music Hall, the ESPY's were given out for the third year. Part of the proceeds goes to The V Foundation for cancer research, established in memory of the late Jim Valvano.

Thirty-three awards were given, including 17 performer of the year awards, seven so-called cross-cutter awards, and nine video awards decided by ESPN viewers.

Bagwell was honored as baseball player of the year and breakthrough athlete of the year. He broke his hand shortly before the baseball strike began Aug. 12.

"I might be the only one who benefited by the strike," Bagwell said in accepting his award.

Messier won NHL player of the year and best performance under pressure. In addition, he was on the outstanding team of the year. He carried the Stanley Cup aloft to the stage, followed by more than a dozen teammates.

"It's a little scary," Messier said. "But dreams do come true."

Smith was honored as women's college basketball player of the year. Her buzzer beater against Louisiana Tech in the women's final earned her the award for outstanding college basketball play of the year.

George Seifert of the 49ers was named coach of the year. Repeat winners from 1994 were Nick Price, golfer of the year, and Pete Sampras, tennis player of the year.

Most outrageous play of the year went to the half-court shot by Corie Clouse of Cincinnati for a one-year scholarship at Midnight Madness. Comeback player of the year was Dan Marino of the Miami Dolphins.

In an award announced earlier, ailing broadcaster Howard Cosell received the Arthur Ashe Award for Courage. Bill Cosby accepted the award on his behalf.
