KIMBLE CASTS HEAVIEST VOTE ON RECORD.

With practically every box in the county voting full strength, and with one new box, Kimble County polled the largest vote ever recorded here in a primary election. The largest vote being cast for candidates for sheriff, totaling 1,435, as against 1,202 in the same race two years ago. However, in the race two years ago the largest vote for any office was cast in the tax assessor's race, which totaled 1,205. The next highest number of votes last Saturday was cast in the county judge's race, which showed 1,415 votes.

These were the most hotly contested races and resulted, as shown by the tabulated results printed elsewhere, in a majority of 23 for Dee Gibbs for re-election to the office of sheriff and tax collector, and a majority of 41 for A. G. Farmer for county judge.

A bulletin board was arranged on one of the big poster boards near Heyman's drug store and returns were posted as rapidly as it was possible to get them from the eight boxes outside of Junction. The final returns from the Junction box were not complete until about 10:30 Saturday night, as the voting was light in the morning and when the rush came in the afternoon the election board was unable to keep up with the counting and had to complete their work after the polls closed.

Most of the country boxes could not be reached by telephone complete and the election officers returned home. Four boxes, Murr, Gentry, South Llano and Segovia, were brought in Saturday night between ten o'clock and midnight.

Mesdames Jobes and Murrah worked at the switch board until past midnight, and to them, those in charge of the bulletin board, and the public are indebted for the returns received.

At the time the telephone exchange closed Saturday night, there was doubt as to the outcome in several races, as Noxville could not be reached by telephone and the results at that time showed a majority for Jim Moore for sheriff, A. G. Farmer for county judge, and it was a question as to who would be in the run-off for county and district clerk.

Joe Bissett and J. A. Browning were elected tax assessor and treasurer, respectively, with cut opposition, as were commissioners R. W. Fisher and Andrew Wood.

J. A. Browning who was elected treasurer, was first elected to this office in 1910. He was elected tax assessor first in 1886 and held that office until 1906. It will be seen from this that Mr. Browning has been elected to public office eighteen times by the people of Kimble County, a record attesting his ability as an officer, which has never been equaled in this county and it is doubtful if this record can be equalled anywhere in this section of the State.

As shown by the complete tabulated results, the following will be the county officers for the coming two years: county judge, A. G. Farmer; sheriff and tax collector, Dee Gibbs; run-off between N. R. Skaggs and L. R. Hodges for county and district clerk; tax assessor, Joe Bissett; treasurer, J. A. Browning; Commissioner Precinct No. 1,Boy Hodges; Commissioner Precinct No. 2, Andrew Wood; Precinct No. 3, R. W. Fisher; and Precinct No. 4, Chas. G. Montgomer; Justice of the Peace Precinct No. 1, Howell Wright.

NEW JUNCTION-MENARD ROAD PROPOSED.

Representatives of the Menard Chamber of Commerce were guests of members of the Junction Chamber of Commerce last Monday night at a dinner given at the Tourist Cafe, for the purpose of discussing and reaching some agreement as to the proposed change in the Junction-Menard road.

Messrs. Jim Smith, Judge Mathews, John Smart, Harry Polunsky, R. H. Heyman, Ed Mears, Frank Hartgraves, A. M. Nauwald, and H. H. Wheeles were visitors from Menard.

After a fine chicken dinner, served by the Tourists Cafe, had been enjoyed by the Menard visitors and some twenty-five members of the Junction Chamber of Commerce, Judge Weaver Baker opened the road discussion and told of the very favorable attitude of the Commissioners' Court and the Chamber of Commerce, towards the proposed change and improvement of the road, which will shorten the distance between Junction and Menard some ten miles and will avoid all the present creek crossings.

Mr. Robert Fulton, District Highway Maintenance Engineer for the State Highway Department, was also a guest at the meeting and told those present what the Highway Department would do if the proposed changes could be arranged.

Ed. Mears, Attorney Frank Hartgraves and Judge Mathews [illegible] A. G. Farmer and Rev. Deel, were other speakers during the evening.

A number of plans are in process of being carried out and a committe composed of W. P. Riley, J. A. Heyman, Ed. Mears A. G. Farmer and J. L. Wright, was appointed to see just what can be done and when this committee lost no time Tuesday in taking up the matter with the land owners through which the road would pass, their report Tuesday night was more than encouraging.

The proposed road will turn off the Highway just east of the N. H. Skaggs house and will run north between the Skaggs and Murr ranches, then between the Whittle and Skaggs ranches, going up the left hand side of Elm Creek to the Richardson ranch where it will cross the creek and go up the hill at the point where the old county road leads up; from there it will go to the Kennedy ranch, then the Mears ranch, then to the county line. Alll and through which the road will pass, has been offered as a right-of-way by the owners, according to the committee.

The proposed road is of inestimable value to both Junction and Menard and all the people of the two counties, and with the attitude of the Highway Department, both counties will make every effort to meet the requirements of the Department

MENARD OFFICERS RE-ELECTED SATURDAY.

The Eagle secured by telephone Tuesday, the results of the Saturday's election in Menard County. Judge Mathews had no opposition, while Miss Bertha Mears, County and District clerk, Mrs. Nixon Treasurer, and Frank Slaughter sheriff, were re-elected by substantial majorities.

In the tax assessor's race, there will be a run-off between John Lewis and Doc Miller.

Messrs. Carl Ward, W. A. Thompson, J. A. Wright and W. R. Tomblinson were elected commissioners.

SOUTH LLANO SPRINGS CAMP HAS BARBECUE.

South Llano Springs Camp on the Hardeman-Estes ranch was the scene of a delightful affair Wednesday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hardeman, Mrs. C. S. Estes and Harrell Estes entertained a number of their Junction friends and the camp guests with an old fashioned barbecue. In a beautiful pecan grove at the junction of Spring Creek and the river comfortable seats had been grouped and gaily spread tables prepared for the feast.

Harrell Estess, garbed as a "wild west movie sheriff," with sweeping black mustache and barking six-shooter, greeted the guests and supervised the parking of cars to form an amphitheatre of running boards around the picnic ground. Supper was served at six o'clock. Unusually fine chevon was supplemented by sandwiches, salad, iced drinks, and the usual good things that complement barbecue.

Mr. Hardeman was assisted at the barbecue table by Charles Henderson, Frank Briggs of Dallas and Carroll Black of Naples. Aiding the hostess were Mrs. Charles Henderson at the salad table, Mrs. Carroll Black and Miss Annie Mae Estes in charge of the sandwich basket, and Mrs. Conde Hardeman at the tea table.

Later in the evening the guests adjourned to the camp's excellent bathing beach. Lights had been swung along the river ing the water. Swimming, with fancy spring board and swing diving entertained participants and on-lookers. Torch light canoeing added to the beauty of the scene as well as the amusement of the guests.

Exploring parties visited the camp's modern cottages along the river bluff and sought out the many springs from which the camp takes its name.

DISTRICT JUDGE AND SENATORIAL RACES.

Reports from the State Senatorial race indicate that Hon. Walter C. Woodward of Coleman is elected by some 1,500 votes majority over Hon. J. A. Thomas of San Angelo. While this county rolled up a large majority for Mr. Thomas, primarily because he was living nearer, the district will be in efficient hands as investigation has shown that Mr. Woodward is an excellent gentleman and a well qualified official, being a former assistant Attorney General.

So far as information was available Wednesday afternoon Hon. J. H. McLean had been re-elected District Judge of this 33rd Judicial District, defeating N. T. Stubbs, a former judge of the district. While it was not possible to get the results by counties, as the telephone communication with Llano, where the votes were tabulated, was bad, it was stated that Judge McLean's majority was between four and five hundred.

A letter to Wahl Brothers & Jordan this week from Chris Schraub states that Mrs. Schraub is greatly improved and that he will be home in a few days but she will remain in Dallas for two weeks or more.

JUNCTION HIGH SCHOOL GETS ADDITIONAL CREDITS

Some very interesting information was received here this week from the Department of Education at Austin, in regard to the local high school.

Last term the school had 12 credits; this would admit graduates of this school to the Universities and colleges of the country on condition that some three or four credits be made up by examination or by taking additional work during the first year. The school had these 12 credits on the following subjects: English, Ancient, Modern and American History, Plane Geometry, Latin, Animal Production and Commercial Arithmetic.

The information received this week states that four additional credits have been given on the following subjects: Algebra, 2; Plant Production, 1½; and Solid Geometry, ½. This makes a total of 16 credits, the most the school has ever had, and places Junction in rank with the better class of schools over the State. Graduates from this school can now enter the first class colleges and Universities of the country without examination and without conditions.

With the magnificent new school building ready for the opening of the next term, and with a well qualified corps of teachers, Junction has every reason to be proud of her school and there seems to be no reason why this next term will not be the best in the history of the school. Let's make it that way

N. A. R. ASSOCIATION DIRECTORS MEET HERE

A meeting of the directors of the National Angora Record Association met at the office of the association in Junction on Tuesday of this week to attend to several matters of routine business and to take up again the matter of the membership voting on the consolidation with the A. A. G. B. Association, The recent vote on consolidation by the members of the N.A. R. A. was very light and it was decided to again place the ballots in the hands of all members and urge that they vote either for or against the consolidation.

The following members of the board were present: George Hay, Medina; B. M. Halbert and G. W. Stephenson, Sonora; Hal Peterson, Kerrville; Jack Turner, H. W. Rieck, Carl M. Wolf, J. B. Randolph, J. D. Cowsert, and J. L. Wright, Junction.

BOY KILLED BY TRUCK WAS BURIED HERE.

Terry Randle, son of W. D. Randle of Aho, Arizona, and a nephew of T. T. Randle of Junction, was buried at the local cemetery Tuesday, being bro't here from Sinol, California, where it is reported that he was run down and killed by a truck.

Young Randle was 19 years of age and was born in New Mexico. His father, W. D. Randle, who, with his daughters, Thelma and Hazel, are visiting at the T. T. Randle home, moved to this county some 25 years ago and a couple of years later moved west.

Rev. N. H. Skaggs conducted the funeral services.

E. A. Willis and family and George Williams and family, all of Burk Burnett, and Murot Willis and family of Lipscomb County, are visiting at the E. A. Willis home here.

RUNGE DEFEATS STEWART BY BIG MAJORITY.

With returns tabulated from telephone calls from the Eagle to County Chairmen, practically complete, it seems certain that Roscoe Runge of Mason County, has defeated B. J. Stewart of Barksdale for Representative, by a large majority. While the exact vote of Schleicher and Crockett Counties could not be secured, it was learned that Runge carried Schleicher by 25 votes and Crockett by 100.

The vote in Real County was not available Wednesday afternoon, but this is a thinly populated county and no change in the results would be made.

The results from counties in which accurate returns were secured, are as follows:

County.	Runge	Stewart.
Mason	1,070	175
Menard	571	332
Kerr	264	550
Edwards	115	99
Kimble	680	557
Sutton	299	150
Pandera	269	222

The above gives Mr. Runge of Mason a lead of 1,307 over Stewart and insured his election as Representative of this district.

Mr. Runge is highly qualified to fill the office and this district will find in him a man that will take his place among the influential members of the house and and in his official capacity he will reflect credit on this district of the State.

FRANCIS MARION ADAMS.

F. M. Adams, familiarly known all over Texas as "Uncle Fuzzy," died at his farm home near London, July 24th, and was buried at Little Saline the following day, under the auspices of the Masonic Order, of which he was a member for many years and in which he has taken a prominent part as an instructor for some eighteen years. He was a member of the State Committee on work of this order and spent most of his time with Lodges over the State.

Deceased was born in Lincoln County, Kentucky, December 6, 1859. In 1879 he married Miss Dora Freeman at Glen Rose, Texas, and to them were born four boys, John, Dave, Frank and Arthur, and three girls, Mesdames J. J. Nixon, of Sutton County, J. R. Hamilton and Jack Ivy of London, all of whom survive him except one son, Frank, who died when seven years of age.

He moved to this county from Milam, forty-two years ago and settled at the place which was his home at the time of his death. He was a member of the Baptist Church for more than thirty-five years.

Besides the children mentioned above, he is survived by his mother, who lives with D. Q. Adams in Sutton County; his wife, four sisters, Mrs. Alzada Pearl of London, Mrs. Doc Joy of Roosevelt, and Mesdames George and Fred Trainer of Sonora, and five brothers, W. C. of Langtry, Matt of Sonora, D. Q. and W. B. of Roosevelt ,and Tom of San Angelo.

One of the largest crowds ever attending a funeral in this county gathered to pay the last rites to the memory of "Uncle Fuzzie" last Friday. About 200 cars were in the cortege and nearly 200 relatives were present.

Mesdames S. J. McCollum of Houston, M. E. Williams of San Antonio, and J. E. Palmer and E. N. Boeckman of Kerrville were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Kountz the first of the week.

THE ROMANCE OF GLASS, WINDOW, PLATE, MIRROR.

(Texas Commercial News.)

How, when, and by whom glass was invented has been disputed for centuries. The question may never be satisfactorily settled. Many authorities have written about the early history of glass but few of these accounts agree. It is very probable that glass was discovered by accident. Perhaps some ancient metallurgist obtained the secret through the study of vitreous slag used in smelting. Most of the old fragments of glass handed down to the present are colored, and the coloring matter appears to be metallic.

Pliny tells us that glass was accidentally discovered by Phoenician sailors, but this is not supported by convincing evidence. However, it is an established fact that the Egyptians made glass long before the birth of Christ. The Assyrians also knew of glass, and specimens have been found in the ruins of Nineveh, but, like the early Egyptians, they used it mainly for ornamental purposes. Evidence shows the Romans made some use of glass for window purposes, but most of their glass was opaque and ornamental. There are those who contend that the Romans made glass as early as 50 B. C. They are known to have introduced it into Asia and carried it to many parts of Europe. The great Venetian glass-making industry seems to have started not earlier than 1090 A. D. In the 13th century the industry was centered on the island of Murano where a plant extended, unbroken, for about a mile and employed 8,000 workmen. During the middle ages there were many small individual establishments.

It was not until comparatively recent times that glass was extensively used in windows. Early writings of the clergy mention isolated cases of "glazing." The great church at Treves was glazed about 420 A. D., and later Rome and Ravenna boasted of churches with windows. This early window glass was not blown, as now, but cast; that is, it was poured out, molten, on a stone or other flat surface, and then smoothed out. About the end of the 11th century blown glass panes were introduced. The method then used, though crude, was not greatly different in its essentials features from that used today.

In early times users of window glass were taxed. Only the wealthy could afford such a luxury. Besides, the quality of the glass was poor and panes had to be frequently replaced. About Columbus's time a reasonably good glass was to be had at moderate cost. The Virginia colonists brought with them "eight Poles and Germans to make pitch, tar, glass and soapashes." In 1608 there was established somewhere in the Virginia forests the first glass-manufacturing plant in America. Owing to many hardships, the industry died and was not revived until shortly before the Revolution. In 1689 a poet named Holme was inspired to write thus:

"The window glass is aften here,
Exceeding scarce and very dear,
So that some in this way do take Isinglass for to make."

A glass works was opened in Massachusetts in 1639. It prospered. After the Revolution there were many attempts to found glass-works but few succeeded. Though extensive with an adequate supply of other raw materials, there was a scarcity of skilled workmen. Roads, the only means of transportation in those days, were few and were generally in bad condition.

So-called plate glass has been made possible by modern machinery and other conveniences. However, the making of this glass remain a difficult art. Thus the great Ford City Glass Co., whch extends for a mile equipped with machinery of the very highest type, turns out less than three carloads of plate glass a day. One of the drawbacks in glass-making is that an essential item of equipment, the crucible for melting, requires years for its preparation and lasts only a few days in service. This means that an immense stock of these pots must be carried on hand. Some factories keep a reserve supply of 5,000 pots, each weighing 3,000 pounds, in storage. These pots are made of a special kind of clay. Each one is capable of melting one and one-half tons of glass at one time.

The work of making the pot begins three years before it is used. Selected clay is ground, screened, mix-kneaded, and then stored away to "ripen." The pot has to be formed by hand because a slight defect would cause it to crack in the furnace, thus destroying its valuable contents. The pot-maker therefore builds it up laboriously, layer upon layer. The pot is subjected to rigid tests before being used. In actual use its life is under 20 days.

In the terrific heat of the melting furnace, which accommodates from 12 to 20 pots at a time, the fusing of the material so reduces it bulk that it is necessary to refill each pot three times to insure a full pot of molten glass at the end. At a critical point the heat must be deduced to prevent the formation of gas bubbles and to permit the pot to be approached and manipulated. An electric crane grasps the hot pot with a pair of mammoth tongs and carries it to the casting table, a great steel slab, 32 feet long by 20 feet wide, weighing 200 tons. The pot is tilted and its molten contents poured over the full width of the table. A steel roller weighing 25 tons rolls out the mass to a specified thickness. During this process both table and roller are water cooled to prevent warping. We now have a red hot sheet of glass about half an inch in thickness. But there must be no delay. The glass must proceed quickly to the annealing oven or it will develop flaws. This oven is some 800 feet long. An electrical device conveys the glass through it so slowly that it requires five hours to go from one end to the other. During this process the temperature of the glass is gradually cooled. Cooling plates are sometimes shattered in their entirety. When the glass reaches the end of the tunnel-like oven it is cool enough to handle. Here it is examined for defects. Flaws are cut out. To transform the rough glass into clear, polished glass, grinding, smoothing and polishing are necessary. Electric cranes lift the plates to great steel circular tables covered with wet plaster paris. The hardening of the latter holds the glass fast. These tables are the towed by motor-car to a position under the grinders. Motors rotate the 70-ton table while a ponderous machine weighing 124,000 pounds revolves over the surface of the glass. Water and sand are fed on the rotating table, first coarse sand and then finer sands until the work reaches a point where the finest grade of sand has been used. There a finer abrasive, emery, is employed. Several degrees of fineness are used in turn. The grinding process leaves the glass with a satin-like surface. It is transferred to another department which washes it and again examines the product for defects. Still on the circular table, it is towed to the polishing machine. The latter looks very much like the grinding machine but instead of grinding shoes it carries many buffing disks of felt, each about 18 inches in diameter. Once more the table is set revolving. As the felt disks are lowered to the surface a red oxide of iron, commonly known as "rouge," finest of all abrasives, is fed under them in the form of paste. Under the slow rubbing of the revolving felts the glass takes on the brilliant polish of the finished product. Both sides of the glass receive the same treatment. In the process of grinding, smoothing and polishing the original thickness has been reduced to a quarter inch.

About 30 per cent of the original material is volatilized and lost in gaseous form during melting. Almost 50 per cent of the rough plate is ground off in the finishing operation. A loss of approximately 25 per cent is

(Continued from Page Two) caused by breakage during machine operation or by rejection for defects. When the glass is delivered to the warehouse aftre being cleaned of all plaster of Paris and dirt it is again scrutinized for defects and the latter are cut out. This reduces the plate to smaller sizes. Certain sizes are shipped out to jobbers as stock sheets and others are deduced to sizes for which the factory has special orders.

The plate glass selected for mirror making must be of the highest grade because the silvered back accentuates every defect. The first process in making the mirror is beveling. This cannot be done until the glass has been thoroughly clean ed, among other things passing under special machines for the removal of dirt and scratches. After which a solution of nitrate of silver is poured carefully over the glass. A re-agent, added to the solution before pouring, begins to operate in a few minutes and precipitates the silver on the glass, leaving the liquid on top, where it serves to exclude air from the silver thus preventing its oxidation. After the plate is dried, a preservative coating of schellac is spread over the silver and over that is painted a weatherproof coat of mirror-black paint. Examine the back of a mirror and you will find an air space. This is to prevent moisture from condensing on the paint and working through to oxidize the silver; it also permits circulation of air and protects the backing from scratches.

Window glass differs from plate glass in the method of manufacture. The former is a cheaper and more common type of glass. It is blown—that is, a portion of melted glass is picked up at the end of a pipe and blown into a hollow cylinditions is flattened into the sheets we see. The blower first gets a solid ball of melted glass on his pipe. The floor in front of him is cut away to form what is known as the swing-hole. The artisan blows gently until he produces a pear-shaped bubble. This is reheated to soften it and the blower swings it downward into the hole where its weight and his blowing into it causes it to assume a cylindrical shape which is assisted by his spinning the pipe between his hands and so bringing centrifugal force to bear. The neck of the tube is cut off with a red hot instrument. The cylinder is then cut into sections and each section split in half. In an oven the sections are heated to a point where they are pliable and a flattening iron does the rest. After this the glass goes through scientific cooling as in the case of plate glass. Machine-power to some extent in the larger plants. It is interesting to note that early Egyptian art pictures glassblowers.

There are many kinds of glass. Glass with patterns on its surface is obtained largely by driving fine plain glass and also by chipping, embossing and etching. Prism glass is pressed into shape. Recently there has been developed glass that will not shatter. The older type contains wire to give it strength; a new type does away with even the wire. Leaded glass refers to the method of treatment rather than the particular kind of glass. Colored glass is glass that is stained after being made; stained glass has the color part and parcel of its substance. Bent glass is produced by treating glass sheets that have been made and finished in the regular manner, and involves heating the glass until it softens sufficiently to bend it into the required shape with special costly machinery.

"DIRECT TO CUSTOMER"

"Direct to Consumer" has been a misleading phrase in many phases of merchandising. So many times we have heard the old story, "cut out the middleman's profits, buy direct from factory-to-consumer," that we have come to believe this form of buying is most economical without stopping to give a thought to the economic facts involved.

The "middleman" carries a large variety of goods. All of the expense of doing business is not chargeable to any one item in the line. Store rent provides a place where many people come to buy. If it were necessary to employ a salesman to go out and call on each of the people who ordinarily go into a store during the month, the salesman's expenses would amount to far more than rent and clerk hire because he would have to call on so many more people than those who are actually in the market for goods.

The writer is familiar with the selling expenses of some of the well known factory-to-consumer lines. The salesman's commission usually runs from 40 to 50 per cent of the selling price of the goods. The retailer or middleman's cost of doing business seldom exceeds 25 per cent.

So the direct to customer must secure a higher price for goods of the same quality as those distributed by the middleman. In order to make his merchandise appear economical, the direct seller usually offers a product of inferior quality at a slightly lower price than standard goods of known quality.

POTATO MACHINERY.

(Grapeland Messenger.)

A fellow dropped into town recently and sold seventy-two potato slicers for $1. each. The same slicer was on sale at local stores for 35 cts. Smooth salesmen always reap the long green when people are inclined to be generous.

Yes, but how did the housewives who bought the $1 potato chants had 35c potato slicers of identical pattern? You know the answer. It was because the home-town potato slicers hadn't been advertised. When the potato slicer agent came to the housewife's door and exhibited the potato slicer he was attorney for, the housewife knew she needed it. The sight of the implement reminded her of her need. She hadn't previously been invited to buy a potato slicer and hadn't bought one. The position of the home merchants was to the effect that everybody knew they had potato slicers for sale and the people would come and buy them when potato slicers were needed. But not so. Advertising not only directs consumers to where they may be supplied, but it simultaneously stimulates the wish for the things previously done without. The agent at the door advertises by showing the article he sells. It is a costly way, as proved by the 65c he added to the price. But when those who keep potato slicers for sale in stores fail or refuse to let the people know where and at what price potato slicers may be had, the potential consumer continues to be in need of a potato slicer. All of this means that unless potato slicers are advertised, many housewives will continue to slice potatoes with the kitchen knives, and many others will buy slicers from the agent at the door.

Without advertising business languishes.

Unless people are reminded of their needs they will come to believe they don't need much. That road runs back to the wilderness, and it ends at the hut in the forest, and the frying pan and coffee pot.

Unless products are bought and used, producers must go out of business, and when producers go out of business, labor receives no wages and merchants get no trade. Advertise. Stimulate! Produce! Prosper.

JOB HOLDERS.

Figures from authoritative sources assert that nearly $4,000,000,000 is paid out in the United States every year to public officials, active and retired.

These figures are not surprising when we know that nearly 3,500,000 persons are on the public payroll, federal state and local.

Nearly one-half of the $8,000,000,000 spent annually by our government goes to officials and former officials. Every taxpayer should understand that almost one-half of his taxes go to support office-holders.

Our trouble is that the jobholder is the backbone of every political party. Jobs are the currency in which party debts are paid. And this currency is at present inflated.

CARD OF THANKS

Through the columns of the Junction Eagle, I wish to express my sincere and heartfelt thanks to all those who were responsible for my nomination for the office of Commissioner of Precinct No. 1, of Kimble County, Texas. As you all know, the position is largely one of responsibility rather than a money consideration. To those who opposed me, I wish to say that I hold no enmity or malice towards them, and if elected at the November election, will put forth my greatest efforts to help give the people of Kimble County a business administration.

Respectfully,
A. B. Hodges.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to those who so loyally stood by me and were responsible for my nomination for sheriff and tax collector. I have no ill will towards those who were against me and it will be my purpose, if elected in the general election, to serve all the people of this county in a way that will merit their approval and in a way that will prove to my friends that I was worthy of their support.

I ask the earnest co-operation of all the good people of Kimble County in my efforts to enforce the laws.

Sincerely yours,
Dee Gibbs.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heart felt thanks, through this paper to our hundreds of kind friends who so faithfully assisted us and sympathized with us during the recent illness and death of our beloved husband and father, F. M. Adams. Your love for him was demonstrated by the many acts of kindness done and words spoken, and we want you to know that we are grateful for what you said and did. May God's richest blessings be with you all.

Mrs. F. M. Adams and family.

Walter Latham, who lives near Segovia, got a leg broken just above the ankle Tuesday while baling hay. In attempting to push the hay down into the baler while it was in operation, the plunger caught his foot. Prompt medical attention was given and he was doing well Wednesday.

Mrs. Leslie N. Shaw of San Antonio, and her niece, Miss Joehanna Purtill of Du Quoin, Illinois, spent the week at the W. W. Allen ranch.

We don't want you to think we are egotistic or anything like that, but we want you to look this paper over from one side to the other—read the ads., too, and compare The Eagle with any paper published anywhere in a town the size of Junction, or a county with the population of Kimble, and see how they compare, and if you don't think The Eagle compares favorably with others, tell us why; maybe your suggestion will be worth something to us. We are striving to merit the support of all the people of the county and the fact that all but a very few take paper now, is a source of much encouragement to the management. There are a few, perhaps a dozen or so here in town who will not take the paper, but who are often seen reading it, and occasionally come down for us to give them a copy, when something of particular interest to them appears. We never go out of the way to accommodate this kind of people and we have no apology to offer. If they are not lending their support to the only home paper they have, they have no right to expect accommodations from it. People who think we ought to accommodate them, should bear the above in mind, when they tell us they can buy the Kansas City Star for 50 cents per year. If such a paper suits them, then they ought to expect that paper, and not this one, to extend them the many accommodations.

TO THE VOTERS OF KIMBLE COUNTY.

I take this means of expressing my gratitude to my friends who so loyally supported me in my race for county clerk.

To those who espoused the candidacy of my opponents, I have no ill feeling whatever, as I feel that the campaign was conducted on a high plane, devoid of any personal animosity, and for my opponents, who are are both my personal friends, I have nothing but the heartiest good will. May the best man win.

Respectfully,
R. R. King.

A large barn on the Frank Baker farm just across North Llano from town was destroyed by fire about 9 o'clock Tuesday night. About a thousand bales of hay and some other feed and several hundred dollars worth of farm machinery was also destroyed. A number of people gathered after seeing the flame from town, but the fire had gained such headway that nothing could be done. The wind was from the south and helped to keep the flames away from the residence, which was only a few yards south of the barn.

An item that was overlooked last week was the visit with relatives here of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Cavaness and son, Farrel, of Miami, Arizona. Walter is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cavaness and has been in the far west a number of years.

SHERIFF GETS FOUR FOR TRANSPORTING LIQUOR.

The sheriff's office received a telephone call Wednesday afternoon from near Telegraph that four men, driving a Ford car, were intoxicated and were disturbing the peace up that way.

Sheriff Gibbs and Deputy Allen Taylor and Albert Bartley near the dam and waited for the car, as it was reported to be coming this way. After a short wait, some men meeting the description of those wanted, came along and when halted by the officers, according to Mr. Gibbs, began pouring something out of a jug, and by the time the car stopped, only a small quantity of liquor remained in the jug. This and the car were taker charge by the sheriff and the men placed in jail. They waived examining trial, and Justice of the Peace E. Holekamp set their bonds at $1,000 each.

Yesterday morning they were making an effort to get some one from their home to come here and bond them out. The men gave the names of J. E. Wurley and son, Clyde, H. J. Bryce and N. H. McCain, and stated that their home was in Coleman County.

STRONG MEN LEAD BOTH PARTIES.

The major political parties of the country have made nominations and the campaign is on. Undoubtedly, as the contest warms up, things will be said concerning candidates, platforms and policies that will not stand in the light of truth, but after all has been said and done, we can still be assured of an administration by strong men well versed in the needs of the country, and capable of steering the Ship of State through troublesome foreign waters. Coolidge and Dawes, the Republican candidates, are both men of experience in business and in statesmanship. No one doubts the courage of either to hew to the line in the conduct of the office to which they aspire.

Davis and Bryan head the Democratic ticket. John W. Davis is a lawyer of exceptional ability and is rated as a business man who quickly solves intricate business problems. He is also versed in foreign diplomacy, having served as ambassador to Great Britain and acted in the capacity of friend and counselor to the late President Wilson. He served as Solicitor General, and at one time represented his district in West Virginia in Congress. He is a well balanced, capable man, eminently qualified to perform the duties of the President of the United States. In point of courage he is the equal of President Coolidge or his running mate, Charles Dawes. The Democratic Convention could not have selected a stronger man to head their ticket. It is only to be regretted that political leaders did not center on Mr. Davis earlier in the session instead of cockeying around trying to nominate some favorite son.

Mr. Davis' running mate is not so well and favorably known He is governor of Nebraska, but is better known as the brother of William J. Bryan, who has been active in Democratic circles since his famous "Cross of Gold" speech at the Chicago convention in 1896.

With strong men leading the tickets, voters should select men for congressional places who will co-operate with the President in giving the country an economical and progressive administration. Congressmen who will place party secondary to the interests of the country will be much in favor with the people.—Farm and Ranch.

LIVE AND LEARN.

In Russia, the land of greatest political experiments in communism and public ownership, government operation of industry has failed by reason of its own deadly inertia.

It is stated that private industry and initative has recaptured 83 per cent of the country's retail trade, simply by reason of better service, better prices and more efficient management and economy.

The stores to serve the people "at cost—without profit" failed to render service and supply goods and commodities to the consumers.

It is the old experience witnessed throughout the ages, what is everybody's business is nobody's business. Without a profit there is no incentive to render service. Where service is eliminated, costs rise to unreasonable figures.

In the face of this record in Russia, we have some agitation in our own country to launch the government in various lines of business.

At the present time we see this manifested in an attempt to establish monopolistic state workmen's compensation insurance. There is no more excuse for it than there is for a monopolistic state grocery or bakery.

It is entirely within the function of the state to pass workmen's compensation laws setting forth how a workman shall be paid and how much he shall be paid. After this machinery has been provided to protect the workman and with the power of the state behind the laws to guarantee their fulfillment, there is no earthly reason for the state entering into any line of private business so long as the public is being satisfactorily served by private enterprise under state regulation and control.—Texas Commercial News.

ATTENTION! MELON GROWERS.

Some melon growers have been complaining of "honey dew" in their melon vines, and through the courtesy of Supt. Miller of the Junction public school, we are able to give some information as to methods of combating this aphis or common melon louse, which sucks the plant juice from the under side of the melon leaves and soon causes the plants to die, and the "honey dew" spreads rapdly and will, within a short time destroy an entire crop of melons if not guarded against.

Aside from natural enemies, the most beneficial to the grower being the common ladybug, the following methods of artificial control can be successfully used in a spray, which can be purchased at a very nominal price:

1. The easiest to use and probably the best preparation is "Blackleaf 40," diluted with water as directed by the label on the cans. Local dealers can supply this preparation.

2. Another good insecticide is a kerosene emulsion. Dissolve ½ pound of hard or whole oil soap (or 1 quart of soft soap) in one gallon of boiling water, add two gallons of kerosene and churn until the oil is thoroughly emulsified, forming a creamy mass.

To use in spray, dilute this stock solution with from 10 to 15 pints of water; spray with a fine nozzle, getting the solution under theleaves. Remember the solution must touch the louse to kill it. The vines should be carefully watched and sprayed again if necessary, as some will naturally be overlooked the first time. Any kind of spray that will make a fine mist will do. The earlier the spraying is done, after the vines become infected, the better.

The Chamber of Commerce of the little town of Taft are backing up their home town paper in a great way. The chamber decided a good weekly paper, well printed and carrying advertising from every firm in the the town would be the best advertisement they could send out, so they got behind Editor Clark of the Taft Tribune, gave him a booster fund so that he could double the size of his paper, and now he is sending out one of the biggest and finest country papers in Texas, and it is certainly a fine advertisement for Taft. The town has only 1,000 population but will not stand at that long with a live bunch of citizens like they have there.—San Marcos Record.

THE VALUE OF AN EDUCATION.

The value or worth of an education to the individual or the State is often wrongly valued by the average idividual. One class of people acquire a cultural education which molds their ideals and develops their character; while another group of society emphasize the vocational education which teaches how to make a living. This may be broadly termed the economic phase of our system of education. It is now claimed by advanced educators that one cannot afford to remain in ignorance and ever hope to attain any degree of success in the social, political, scientific, or economic world.

Life problems are becoming more complex as time goes forword. Formerly, economic problems were dealt with by legislation. But within the last decade economic evolution has come into its own through scientific discoveries and modern inventions. So, now if any worth while problem is to be solved, a specialist in that line is handed the job for solution.

To be able to use the brain effectively, the youth must be trained. Using a common term we say they must attend school. Education is a slow process. One must have time enough, money enough, energy enough, plenty of patience and perseverence, as well as ambition, to pass from darkness unto light. After a time one finds that, with the mastery of the underlying principles of science, art, or his craft, he is more powerful, is worth more to himself and the State in which he lives. He is an asset to society instead of a liability. In other words, knowledge is power, if used. So we find hundreds of thousands of far-seeing youths spending their time, energy, and money in fitting themselves for life's complex problems. And one gets just about what education he wants.

At $1,000 a year a high school graduate earns in 40 years $40.000; at $500 a year uneducated men earn in 40 years $20,000 Ten dollars a day for 1,000 school days, investigations indicate, that agricultural college training increases the average yearly income nearly $1,000.

Young folks, what will you be earning 10 years from now?

Old Folks' Ailments

"I began taking Black-Draught over fifty years ago and my experience with it stretches over a good long time," says Mr. Joe A. Blakemore, a Civil War veteran and former Virginian, who is now a prominent citizen of Floyd, Texas. "It is the best laxative I know of for old people. . . A good many years ago, in Virginia, I used to get bilious and I found that was the best and quickest relief I could get. Since I came to Texas I have these bilious attacks every now and then—a man will get bilious anywhere, you know—and I find that a little Black-Draught soon straightens me out. After a few doses, in little br no time I'm all right again."

Thedford's Black-Draught is a purely vegetable liver medicine, used in America for over eighty years. It acts on the stomach, liver and bowels in a gentle, natural way, assisting digestion and relieving constipation. Sold everywhere.

TO THE PUBLIC.

I Wish to express to the voters of Kimble County my sincere appreciation for the support given me in the primary election held last Saturday, which gave me second place in the race for district and county clerk.

The second primary will be held August 23rd. I will sincerely appreciate any consideration you give me and should the majority of the people of Kimble County see fit to elect me to this office, I promise that I shall endeavor to the best of my ability, to deserve the trust you will have reposed in me.

ATTENTION, EX-RANGERS!

The time for our Fifth Annual Reunion to be held at Menard, Texas, August 13, 14, 15, is drawing near, and I am taking this opportunity to call your attention to the fact that there will be important business to attend to at this meeting, and we would be glad if every member could be present.

Menard is putting forth an extra effort, both profitable and pleasant. It is destined to be the biggest gathering that has ever been in Southwest Texas, if the indications today are to be considered. As Menard is quite a small place, it will be impossible for the people of the town to take care of the immense gathering in their homes I am requested by the good people of Menard to ask all who come to bring their cots and blankets, and we will spend the time in the beautiful park where there is a dense shade and plenty of cold water and eats without limit.

So let all Ex-Rangers come prepared to camp and if the rains come as they did last year, I am prepared to say that all Ex-Rangers will be taken care of.

Come and have a good time!

Respectfully,
W. M. Green,
Major Commanding.

The laziest man in town was driving leisurely down Main Street in his new car. His wife, who was slightly deaf, was reclining on the rear seat. Suddenly there came the hail from across the street:

The driver stopped the car, got out and walked over to the man who had called. "Not so loud, not so loud," he cautioned. "If my wife should hear you she'd make me get out and fix it

He was proud of his farm

Ben Dexter was a mighty successful farmer. He took 240 acres, half prairie and half river bottom land, and on it built up and developed a farm property that any man would have been proud to own. His home, barn, granaries and equipment had all been added through vision and courage, and he deserved to win.

First, however, there came a day when it seemed to Ben Dexter that he had just about reached the end of his efforts. Finances were, of course the problem. That day, Dick Havermeyer, cashier of a local bank, drove by. He stopped to replenish the water in his car and got to talking with Dexter. It led to a tour of the farm, all the while Dexter explaining developments, improvements, and the possibilities in the land.

Result of it was that Havermeyer took off his mental coat and started to figuring with Dexter, finding a way out, whereby the place was properly financed to enable Dexter to go ahead.

Agriculture is a business—the biggest business in the nation. No matter how much courage and ambition a man has, he needs the advice and service of men experienced in finance if he wants to succeed in a big way. We offer such service to farmers and stockmen in Kimble County.
