Motivational speaker to offer range of management advice

A week-long seminar to focus on marketing, public relations and advertising will be held in Snyder starting Monday.

Charles A. Mouser, who has more than 30 years experience in marketing and who has given seminars thoughout the world, will conduct the seminar.

The seminar, offered free of charge, is sponsored by the Snyder Daily News. "Mr. Mouser spoke at a recent press convention and I was so impressed with what he had to say that I invited him to Snyder. Anyone in any type of business can benefit from what he has to say," said SDN Publisher Roy McQueen.

"This is an unique opportunity for our business community and I am confident that attendance at one or more of the seminars will be valuable to owners and managers as well as employees."

All seminars will be conducted in the Scurry County Museum on the campus of Western Texas College. The seminars have been endorsed by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce through the chamber's retail committee.

The week begins at 9 a.m. Monday with a seminar for owners and managers. Two separate sessions Monday afternoon are planned for sales clerks. One is at 2 p.m. followed by a 3:45 p.m. session.

A session for realtors is set for 10 a.m. Tuesday followed by restaurant and food service personnel at 2 p.m. Tuesday. Lumber and hardware personnel will convene at 4 p.m.

At 9 a.m. Wednesday, subjects will be targeted for auto dealers, parts stores and repair shops. At 2 p.m. Wednesday, the session will be geared to general merchandise stores such as clothing, shoes, gifts, houseware and soft goods.

Supermarkets and convenience stores will convene to hear Mouser at 9 a.m. Thursday followed by furniture and appliance dealers at 10 a.m. Oilfield service company personnel will have a session at 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

Mouser will speak to all Snyder civic clubs during the week and a luncheon will be held at noon Monday for representatives of Snyder financial institutions.

A special public relations seminar for members of the medical community will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday. A 4 p.m. session on Wednesday is planned for all public officials.

In addition, Mouser will be available to make individual calls to firms as time permits.

Lebanon reacts to blockade plans

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's leading Moslems will meet this weekend in Syria to discuss ways to end Moslem militia control at the Beirut airport and restore government authority in the capital's Moslem sector, government sources said.

The meeting comes in response to U.S. threats to blockade Lebanon's only commercial airport. Feuding Christians and Moslems have united to protest the American move.

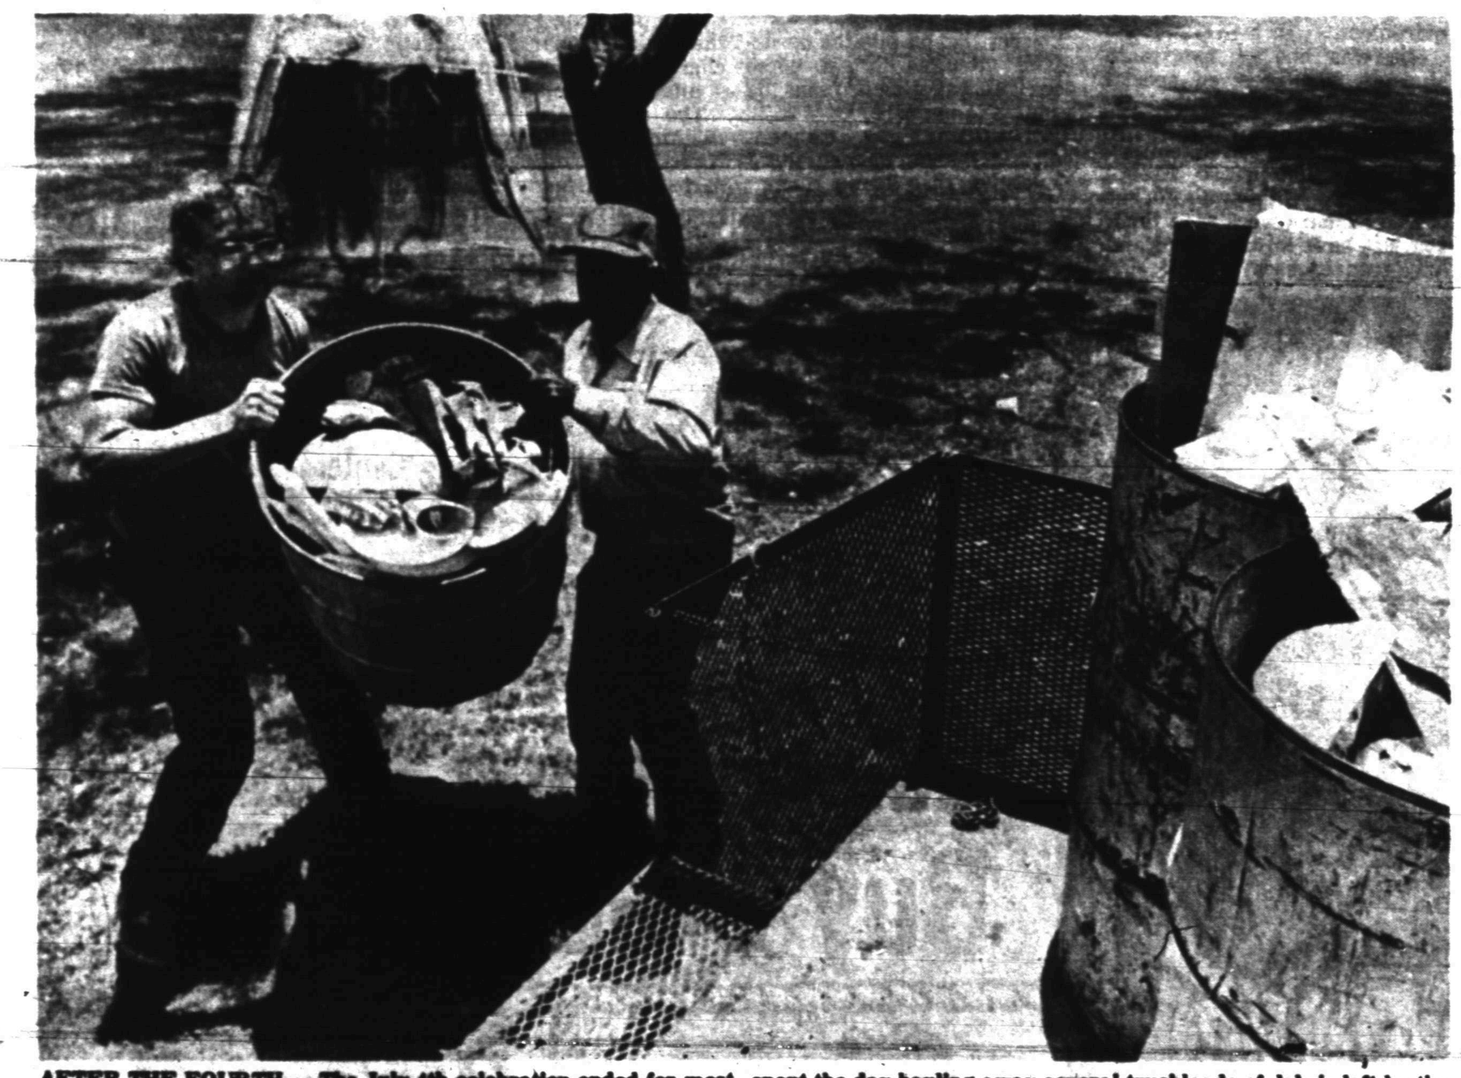

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Parliament Speaker Hussein Husseini, a Shiite Moslem, and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt will travel to the Syrian capital Damascus today, followed on Sunday by Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem.

They said Shiite leader Nabih Berri was summoned to Damascus late Friday and was expected to stay there until Tuesday. Berri's Amal militia and Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party control the airport.

The Syrian government Al-Thawra newspaper said today: "America's punitive measures are not only directed against Lebanon, but against the entire Arab world. America and Israel are trying to force us to bow to their schemes."

The Syrian media, reflecting the government's stand, have urged Arabs to boycott U.S. airlines until Washington drops its ban on Lebanon's two main carriers landing in the United States. The United States also has banned American carriers from landing in Beirut.

The sanctions were announced Monday in retaliation for the June 14 hijacking of a TWA jet. Thirty-nine Americans who were aboard the plane were held hostage in Beirut for 17 days by Shiite extremists.

AFTER THE FOURTH — The July 4th celebration ended for most Scurry County residents at midnight Thursday. Not so for local county park employees, however. Independence Day activities continued Friday for park staffers Keith Wright (left) and David Bailey, who spent the day hauling away several truckloads of debris left by the thousands who gathered in Towle park Wednesday evening and all day Thursday. Jobless rate at 5.5 high

The highest unemployment rate for Scurry County since the fall of 1982 occurred during May, it was reported Friday by Texas Employment Commission officials.

TEC estimates set Scurry's out-of-work total at some 590 individuals, equaling an unemployment percentage of 5.5 percent.

It marked the second time during 1985 when local unemployment figures went into the 5 percent or greater level and marked a 1½ percentage point rise from the previous month.

In January of this year, unemployment was figured at 5 percent. The last time the 5 percent mark was reached was in March of 1983.

And the last time a greater unemployment level was noted here goes back three years to 1982. In October of that year, the percentage of unemployed was set at 7.5 percent.

When it reached that high, the county labor force was set at 10,096 with 9,339 said employed. This left 757 out of work.

The recent estimate of 5.5 percent unemployment figures a labor force of 10,785 with 10,195 employed. This leaves an out-of-work figure of 590.

Q. — When will the new seatbelt laws go into effect and, if a passenger in the vehicle does not have their seat belts on, will the driver have to pay the fine?

A. — Regarding the second part of the question, no. Only persons riding in the front seat who fail to buckle up will be held liable. The law technically goes into effect Sept. 1, although Department of Public Safety officials have noted they will issue warning tickets until Jan. 1.

In Brief

Cause of fire

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A preliminary investigation shows a pipeline leak led to a fire at the Mobil Oil refinery, a Mobil spokesman said Friday.

Roy Dickerson said a pipeline leak within a platinum reforming unit caused a flash fire that started the blaze at 8:34 p.m. Thursday.

Mobil emergency crews contained the fire to that area, bringing it under control by 10 p.m. and finally tapping it out at about 3 a.m. Friday, he said.

No one was injured in the fire that could be seen for miles, officials said.

Snyder did it again--put on one terrific July 4th celebration. The celebration in Towle Park is a good tradition, and one that folks from a large area surrounding Snyder look forward to each year.

Hats off to the chamber and all the other folks who put on the event. Just watching folks relaxed and visiting with their friends and neighbors made it all worthwhile.

We overheard one teenager comment about July 4th:

"It's my favorite holiday--better than Thanksgiving or Christmas. Everybody stays home and no relatives come to visit."

Monday starts another big week in Snyder. The Snyder Daily News is sponsoring a week-long advertising and public relations seminar for the local business community.

Charles Mouser, nationally-recognized consultant, will be in Snyder to conduct the event. It all kicks off at 9 a.m. Monday with a session for owners and managers. There are other sessions throughout the week.

It's all free of charge, and we guarantee you'll profit from what Mouser will have to say.

Snyder's Jay Huckabee says Texas A&M has moved into the high-tech age. Jay says the Aggies have developed a tiny, miniature breed of cows.

"They want to corner the micro-chip market."

Remember former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz who used to stay in hot water for off-the-cuff remarks? We figure Butz is in trouble again--this time with his spouse.

When asked, 'How is Mrs. Butz?' he told his audience: "Expensive."

Talk about expensive. Peter Grace and his waste commission recently were guests of honor at a cocktail party hosted by Ag Secretary Block. Cost to taxpayers: Over $1,200.

That's 100 Proof that Washington is out of step with the rest of the nation.

Building for June reported

New Snyder building permits for June equaled less than half-a-million dollars, and the chances of equaling or bettering 1984's record building year now seem to be rapidly fading.

The year's total now stands at $5.7 million spread over a nine month period. This compares to $7.4 million reported for the same time last year.

By Sept. 30, 1984 — the end of the fiscal year — the city's building totals had climbed near $10 million, thought to be an all-time record.

For this past June, the monthly figure was $432,490, bringing the year to $5,731,047. The exact figure for the same period

OPEC ministers continue meeting

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC oil ministers began a second day of meetings today on ways to prevent price cuts under pressure from non-member Mexico, which indicated it would reduce the price of its crude if the conference failed.

Relaying a message from Mexican President Miquel de la Madrid, Mexican Oil Minister Francisco Labastida Ochoa said the country would have to "fully defend its national interests" if the meeting found no formula to regulate prices and the market.

"We will announce these decisions if OPEC does not reach an accord," the minister said in an interview with the official Mexican news agency Notimex. Mexico is observing the conference.

Although he mentioned no specifics, analysts said it was clear that Ochoa meant Mexico would reduce prices for its oil. The country is a major oil producer and if it discounted its crude, the 13-nation oil cartel would almost certainly have to follow suit.

GARNERS HONORS--Snyder High School student Alex Brice, son of Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Brice, has received two academic and citizenship honors this week. Both the United States Achievement Academy and the National Secondary Education Council notified Brice that he had been named one of the national winners on the USAA national awards. He was recommended by SHS teacher Mrs. Brenda Otto. Less than 10 percent of American High School students receive this award which enables Brice to compete for scholarships to be granted by the United States Achievement Academy. In Addition, he was notified that he has been selected as an Academic All-American by the National Secondary Education Council. (Family Photo)

13-year-old obtains degree

OXFORD, England (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Ruth Lawrence had never been to school before she entered Oxford two years ago. Now she has a mathematics degree from the esteemed university.

Ruth learned the good news Thursday when exam results were posted at the 800-year-old school in central England. She finished college in two years instead of the normal three, but cannot pick up her degree until next year because the university has a three-year residency requirement.

She was one of two math students who received special commendation from the examiners.

"I don't think I am a genius," Ruth told the British Broadcasting Corp. "I think it's got out of a lot of hard work. ... I think you just have to work hard and have good teachers."

Watermelon recall said to cost millions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With 72 illnesses linked to tainted watermelons in four Western states and Canada, officials urged people to avoid eating the fruit and said growers who knowingly used unapproved pesticides should be prosecuted.

The costs could run "in the multimillions," a county official in California said.

Markets stopped selling melons Friday as investigators focused on California growers. The 2,400-member Western Growers Association warned that delays in locating the source of the contamination could mean disaster for California's $25 million-a-year watermelon industry.

"The Fourth of July is the busiest watermelon holiday of the year," said Al Priester, a salesman with Shapiro, Gilman-Shandler, a wholesale produce distributor in Los Angeles.

He predicted he would lose "a couple of hundred thousand dollars a day" since watermelon sales constitute half of his business this time of year.

Traces of the pesticide aldicarb sulphoxide, which is not approved for use on most foods, were found in melons on the vine at two Kern County growers, said Kenneth Kizer, director of California's Department of Health Services. He said the first apparent poisonings were reported Monday.

All watermelons were recalled at state order Thursday in California. Oregon and Alaska officials Friday ordered all California melons off store shelves.

At least 72 people had fallen ill in the four states and British Columbia, 34 of them in California, Kizer said.

Bill Snodgrass, Kern County's deputy agricultural commissioner, said 2,000 tons of watermelons were ripening each day in county fields and stood a chance of rotting there.

"The cost is going to be in the multimillions," Snodgrass said.

Officials in Washington warned earlier Thursday not to sell watermelons, and in the Canadian province of British Columbia, food retailers and distributors Friday were voluntarily removing from stock all California and Arizona-grown watermelons.

In Alaska, officials were investigating 10 illnesses possibly linked to melons. They said Friday they were considering whether to change their advisory into a ban on sales, and promised to issue further information during the weekend.

Kizer said he did not know the extent of the the problem with watermelon in the rest of the country.

"At this time, it's only California-grown melons" that have been blamed for the illnesses, said Tom Hall, senior pesticide use specialist with California's Department of Food and Agriculture.

Washington state officials, however, said they were investigating four possible sources of watermelons sold in that state — Phoenix and Yuma, Ariz., and Bakersfield and El Centro, Calif.

Texans still training thoroughbred horses

DALLAS (AP) — Two Texans are building training centers for thoroughbred horses despite the state legislature's enduring refusal to allow parimutuel betting in the state.

"I want to live in Texas and see (my horses) grow up here," said former Dallas mayor Bob Folsom, the main backer of the Twin Eagles center.

The center is being built on 750 acres in Rhea Mills, about 30 miles north of Dallas.

Texas native Johnny T.L. Jones Jr., the owner of the Walmac International Farms in Lexington, Ky., is working on a second major center, Twin Creek Farms in Fayettville, the Dallas Morning News reported.

Folsom said despite the unsuccessful attempts to get horse races with wagering in Texas, he wants his center here.

"My wife and I enjoy competition, and there's nothing more competitive than horse racing. It's only natural we'd enjoy it," Folsom said. "It would be nice to have racing in Texas."

The 50-year-old former mayor said he bought his first thoroughbred six years ago and hasn't stopped buying since. He bought 13 yearlings at summer sales in Lexington, Ky., last year, including one by Halo, the sire of 1983 Kentucky Derby winner Sunny's Halo, Folsom said.

Folsom also owns a share of top Kentucky stallion Damascus. He said he plans to keep his broodmares at the Texas center, but will breed them in Kentucky.

His Twin Eagles center will be open by next summer, he said, and will include a 6-furlong track with a 5-furlong Fibar track on the inside. Fibar is synthetic chips with cushioning properties similar to wood chips.

The center also will have a swimming pool for treating horses with injuries and two barns that will house 120 horses.

Five charged in conspiracy

AUSTIN (AP) — Secret Service agents have charged five Travis County residents with conspiring to distribute $11,000 in counterfeit $20, $50 and $100 bills, the agent in charge of the Austin office says.

Special Agent Wayne Dean said Friday that the arrests capped a two-month investigation that began when one of the people arrested gave a counterfeit bill to a Corpus Christi merchant.

The counterfeit money seized in Austin was printed in a Houston plant that the Secret Service shut down last year, Dean told the Austin American-Statesman.

Although it can't be determined exactly how much money was produced by the Houston counterfeiters, the amount was estimated to be at least six figures, Dean said.

Dean said it also cannot be determined how much of the money was passed to Austin merchants. Agents said the money was of fair quality.

Bogus money from the Houston counterfeiters has been recovered across the United States, Dean said. He said people often use it to exchange for narcotics, and some of the money was recovered in a drug raid in Miami.

Dean said that when the Corpus Christi merchant recognized the bill given to him as counterfeit, he got the customer's driver's license number and notified the Secret Service.

The person was traced to a mobile home in southeast Travis County, and Dean said the mobile home was raided Tuesday afternoon by local, state and federal authorities.

Assad tries to win freedom for 7 other U.S. hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — After helping win release of the hostages aboard TWA Flight 847, Syrian President Hafez Assad is trying to help the seven remaining American captives in Lebanon, the State Department says.

State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian said Friday that Syria "has an important role to play" in Lebanon because of its influence with Lebanese authorities and Shiite Moslem groups.

Djerejian's statement apparently was based on a telephone conversation President Reagan had with Assad earlier this week. The spokesman refused to provide details of the conversation.

Assad's influence was crucial in the negotiations leading up to the release last Sunday of the 39 Americans who were aboard the Trans World Airlines flight.

The United States is doing "everything possible" to obtain the release of the seven, who have been kidnapped in isolated incidents over the past 16 months, Djerejian said.

The seven Americans still held hostage in Lebanon were seized over the past 16 months. When President Reagan welcomed the TWA hostages home Tuesday he said "the homecoming won't be complete until all have come home."

The seven are Terry Anderson, Associated Press Beirut bureau chief; David Jacobsen, administrator of the American University Hospital in Beirut; William Buckley, a political officer at the U.S. embassy; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister; Thomas Sutherland, dean of the Agriculture Department at the American University; Peter Kilburn, a university librarian; and the Rev. Martin Lawrence Jenco, head of Catholic Relief Services in Lebanon.

Following the release of the TWA hostages, the United States called for an international boycott of Beirut airport. On Friday, a delegation of three Arab diplomats, representing the Council of Arab Ambassadors here, appealed to Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy to reconsider the action.

Clovis Maksoud, permanent representative of the 22-nation Arab League, told reporters the United States should take into account new measures to enhance security at the airport.

He said Lebanon has tightened security along all roads to the airport. According to reports from Beirut, Army troops and airport security officers have begun searching travelers, banning cars from the terminal area and keeping armed militiamen away.

Also, new earthen barriers and a fence are under construction at strategic gates and on the airport's perimeter.

But Djerejian said those measures fall far short of what the United States believes is necessary to meet minimal security requirements. "Much, much needs to be done," he said.

Joining Maksoud at the meeting were Ambassador Shaikh Saud Nasir Al-Sabah of Kuwait, the acting dean of the Arab diplomatic corps, and Lebanese Ambassador Abdallah Bouhabib.

In Beirut, Lebanon asked European nations to hold off joining the U.S. effort to shut down the Beirut airport to international travel. The Beirut leftist newspaper As-Safir said France, Italy, Greece and Switzerland have given assurances they will not back the U.S. position.

John Gayle talk slated

John Gayle, Snyder's city manager, will present a program on civil defense in the Senior Citizens Center Friday.

Gayle will be discussing plans for city residents in the event of emergencies such as severe weather and nuclear attack. His program will begin at 11:30 a.m. in the center's dining room.

A hamburger fry and baking contest for senior citizens will be sponsored by the center on July 25. Homemade ice cream will also be on the menu, and all senior citizens are invited to attend. Because of the food preparation involved, persons planning to attend are to make reservations in the center. The evening's activities will be held in Towle Park.

Senior citizens who would like to enter the baking contest are to pick up entry forms in the center's office and these will be available until each day the center is open. Carolyn Durouen and Pearl Wheeler will judge the baked foods and they will be served following the judging.

All county residents 60 years of age and older and those whose spouses are within that age group are invited to participate in the senior center's programs. Persons who need transportation to the center are invited to call the office at 573-4035.

Authorities from at least six Texas counties are searching for Foote.

Medicare program is cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging says new Medicare cutbacks in home health care will "translate into millions of denied home health visits to elderly Americans."

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., offered the opinion after the Reagan administration on Friday announced more than $225 million in cuts in Medicare spending, including limits on home health care. The cuts are effective immediately.

The home health regulation will cover specialists in fields such as physical therapy and speech pathology and result in savings of at least $100 million over the next three years, the department said. One table in the regulation says the changes could save $443 million over five years.

The Department of Health and Human Services said about 70 percent of such specialists will be affected, either by being pressured to lower their rates or by being refused full reimbursement, and predicted most will choose the former.

But Roybal said people will be hurt by the change.

"Once again, this administration is stacking dollars against people," he said. "What they callously write off as $443 million in 'savings' will translate into millions of denied home health visits to elderly Americans.

"The administration is only kidding itself if they think the 70 percent of all providers affected ... can and will simply pull in their belts to absorb more budget cuts," Roybal added.

"Many of these will be forced to pull out of Medicare," he said. "In the end, the squeeze on providers is squeezing out people from the care they need."

The home health regulation affects payments to specialists in six fields — skilled nursing care, physical therapy, speech pathology, occupational therapy, medical social services and home health aides.

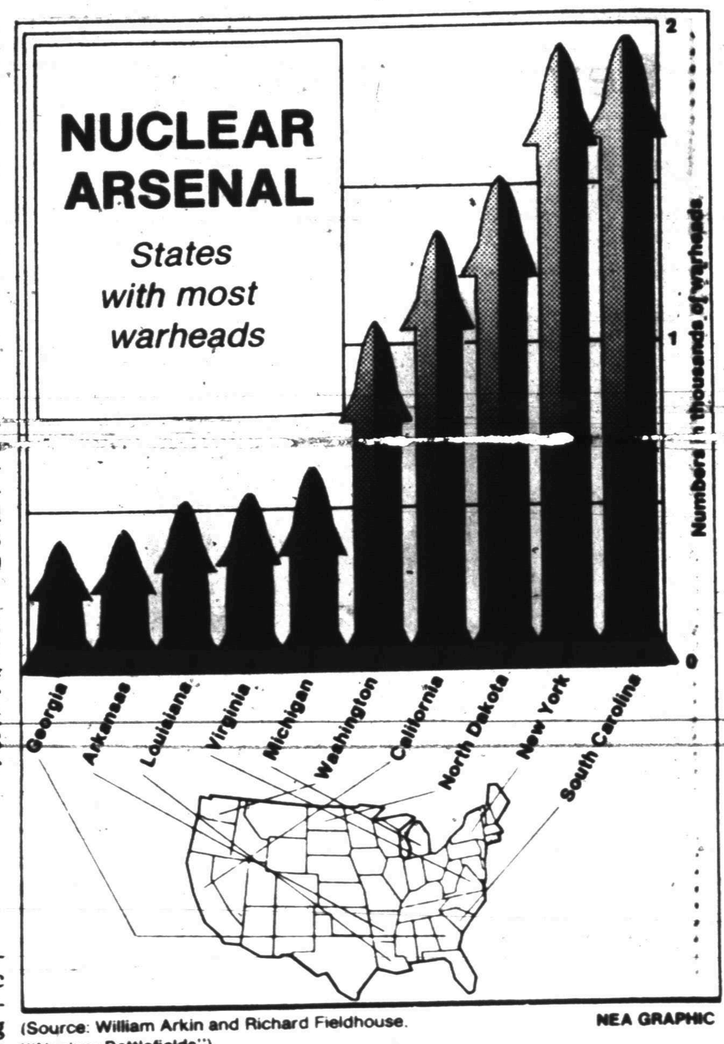

Roybal said the changes were particularly critical because other Medicare cost-saving measures are forcing patients out of hospitals sooner, making them more dependent on home health care.

In addition to the home health care regulation, the department published regulations freezing Medicare's subsidy for medical education. That regulation will affect primarily the nation's 1,300 teaching hospitals, where medical school graduates provide supervised care and receive training while working as interns and residents.

In 1984, Medicare paid $1.13 billion in direct medical education costs — salaries for interns and residents and classroom costs — to 1,660 hospitals, almost all of them large urban hospitals. The assistance is paid in addition to payments for Medicare patients' bills.

But the cost is going up even though the nation is facing a surplus of doctors, the department said. HHS said that at present growth rates, the United States will have 35,000 surplus physicians by 1990 and 51,800 surplus physicians by 2000.

"Our nation has a growing surplus of physicians in nearly every area of medicine — and the demands on Medicare for medical education support should reflect that reality," HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler said.

Ex-wife talks about new book

BOSTON (AP) — The ex-wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says she feels betrayed by a forthcoming biography written by her former aide that reportedly details her feelings about the death of Mary Jo Kopechne at Chappaquiddick.

Joan Kennedy, 48, told The Boston Globe in an interview published Thursday that she tried to talk her former administrative assistant, Marcis Chellis, out of writing the book, "Living with the Kennedys: The Joan Kennedy Story."

Fireworks' injuries causing concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide rash of Fourth of July fireworks injuries isn't unusual and won't change, a concerned doctor says, without better awareness of the dangers — and maybe even federal limits on devices that burn and blind as well as boom.

"There should be federal involvement," including a ban on general use of all but the smallest fireworks, said Dr. Joe Greensher, who is head of an accident prevention committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

However, he said Friday that congressional action was unlikely, especially "with the present climate of letting business do things voluntarily."

"It's been a national problem for quite a number of years," the Long Island, N.Y., pediatrician said in a telephone interview. "Here's another July Fourth gone by, and you see the reports."

He noted in particular a news account he'd just heard of a 4-year-old Yonkers, N.Y., boy who'd lost parts of two fingers when a firecracker exploded in his hand.

That was just one of hundreds of scattered reports across the country. In the worst cases:

—17-year-old Sean McKenzie of Lynnwood, Wash., was killed Thursday night when he apparently lit a firecracker on train tracks, stepped back too slowly and was hit by a freight, authorities said.

—Police in Buffalo, N.Y., said 30-year-old Thomas Sinclair was killed and another man injured in an explosion that occurred while they were apparently packing gunpowder from firecrackers into a metal pipe or container.

Virtually countless lesser injuries occurred elsewhere, including dozens involving public displays that exploded by accident or too low, each sending about a half-dozen people to hospitals in Wake Forest, N.C.; Wickliffe, Ohio; Glenview and Fairfield, Ill.; Topeka, Kan.; and Riverdale, Utah.

Estimates of yearly fireworks injuries, great and small, range from 10,000 to twice that number and more, many around July Fourth. But detailed figures are lacking.

Dr. R. Sloane Wilson, a Little Rock, Ark., ophthalmologist, is hoping to remedy that lack in a national survey he's conducting this month on behalf of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

If the survey, depending on help from more than 11,000 eye doctors, works out well, the academy should have a much better idea of just how many injuries fireworks do cause and whether there is much difference between states with and without laws limiting or banning sales and use.

Medicare program is cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging says new Medicare cutbacks in home health care will "translate into millions of denied home health visits to elderly Americans."

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., offered the opinion after the Reagan administration on Friday announced more than $200 million in cuts in Medicare spending, including limits on home health care. The cuts are effective immediately.

The home health regulation will cover specialists in fields such as physical therapy and speech pathology and result in savings of at least $100 million over the next three years, the department said. One table in the regulation says the changes could save $443 million over five years.

The Department of Health and Human Services said about 70 percent of such specialists will be affected, either by being pressured to lower their rates or by being refused full reimbursement, and predicted most will choose the former.

But Roybal said people will be hurt by the change.

"Once again, this administration is stacking dollars against people," he said. "What they callously write off as $443 million in 'savings' will translate into millions of denied home health visits to elderly Americans.

"The administration is only kidding itself if they think the 70 percent of all providers affected ... can and will simply pull in their belts to absorb more budget cuts," Roybal added.

"Many of these will be forced to pull out of Medicare," he said. "In the end, the squeeze on providers is squeezing out people from the care they need."

The home health regulation affects payments to specialists in six fields — skilled nursing care, physical therapy, speech pathology, occupational therapy, medical social services and home health aides.

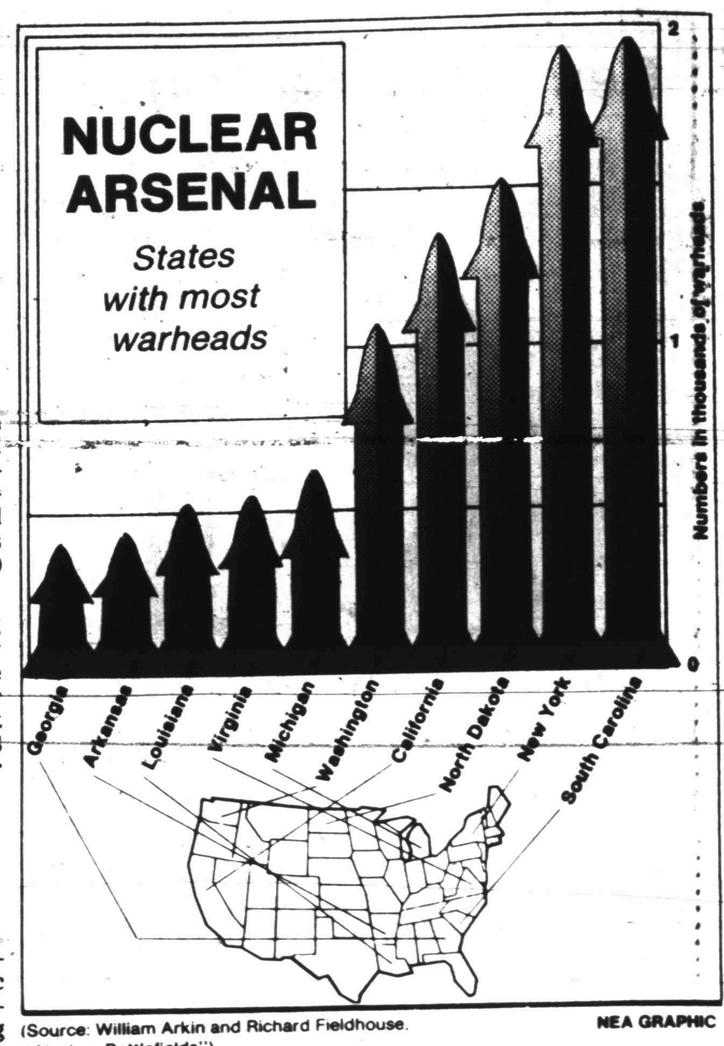

Roybal said the changes were particularly critical because other Medicare cost-saving measures are forcing patients out of hospitals sooner, making them more dependent on home health care.

In addition to the home health care regulation, the department published regulations freezing Medicare's subsidy for medical education. That regulation will affect primarily the nation's 1,300 teaching hospitals, where medical school graduates provide supervised care and receive training while working as interns and residents.

In 1984, Medicare paid $1.13 billion in direct medical education costs — salaries for interns and residents and classroom costs — to 1,660 hospitals, almost all of them large urban hospitals. The assistance is paid in addition to payments for Medicare patients' bills.

But the cost is going up even though the nation is facing a surplus of doctors, the department said. HHS said that at present growth rates, the United States will have 35,000 surplus physicians by 1990 and 51,800 surplus physicians by 2000.

"Our nation has a growing surplus of physicians in nearly every area of medicine — and the demands on Medicare for medical education support should reflect that reality," HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler said.

Nuclear warheads are stored in 27 states, but South Carolina and New York are the "hottest": Each contains nearly 2,000 — more than all of the warheads in Great Britain.

Fireworks' injuries causing concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide rash of Fourth of July fireworks injuries isn't unusual and won't change, a concerned doctor says, without better awareness of the dangers — and maybe even federal limits on devices that burn and blind as well as boom.

"There should be federal involvement," including a ban on general use of all but the smallest fireworks, said Dr. Joe Greensher, who is head of an accident prevention committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

However, he said Friday that congressional action was unlikely, especially "with the present climate of letting business do things voluntarily."

"It's been a national problem for quite a number of years," the Long Island, N.Y., pediatrician said in a telephone interview. "Here's another July Fourth gone by, and you see the reports."

He noted in particular a news account he'd just heard of a 4-year-old Yonkers, N.Y., boy who'd lost parts of two fingers when a firecracker exploded in his hand.

That was just one of hundreds of scattered reports across the country. In the worst cases:

—17-year-old Sean McKenzie of Lynnwood, Wash., was killed Thursday night when he apparently lit a firecracker on train tracks, stepped back too slowly and was hit by a freight, authorities said.

—Police in Buffalo, N.Y., said 30-year-old Thomas Sinclair was killed and another man injured in an explosion that occurred while they were apparently packing gunpowder from firecrackers into a metal pipe or container.

Virtually countless lesser injuries occurred elsewhere, including dozens involving public displays that exploded by accident or too low, each sending about a half-dozen people to hospitals in Wake Forest, N.C.; Wickliffe, Ohio; Glenview and Fairfield, Ill.; Topeka, Kan.; and Riverdale, Utah.

Estimates of yearly fireworks injuries, great and small, range from 10,000 to twice that number and more, many around July Fourth. But detailed figures are lacking.

Ex-wife talks about new book

BOSTON (AP) — The ex-wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says she feels betrayed by a forthcoming biography written by her former aide that reportedly details her feelings about the death of Mary Jo Kopechne at Chappaquiddick.

Joan Kennedy, 48, told The Boston Globe in an interview published Thursday that she tried to talk her former administrative assistant, Marcis Chellis, out of writing the book, "Living with the Kennedys: The Joan Kennedy Story."

Donations urged for Babe Ruth club here

Snyder Black, just a handful of wins away from a berth in the Babe Ruth League State Tournament, is in need of equipment and funds, coaches said today.

The squad has jersies, generously donated recently, but to play in the state tournament they must also have matching pants, said Albert Lewis, one of the coaches.

Also needed will be funds to use for expenses for the July 22-27 trip to Andrews.

Those interested in contributing should contact Lewis at 573-3813, Don Osborn at 573-9477, Bob Lanier at 573-2548 or Rickey Howell at 573-6786.

Moffett Field to entertain tilts Saturday and Monday

Moffett Field is the setting for two teenage baseball games, scheduled Saturday and Monday.

Snyder Black, the local Babe Ruth League team, was to entertain Post 7 p.m. Saturday at the field.

On Monday, also at 7, the Buffs and Braves will playoff for the local Junior Teenage League championship. Winner of the contest will advance to post-season play.

The Black team scheduled its game Saturday to compensate for a contest in which Spur forfeited to Snyder. League rules state that each team must play 10 games.

Becker in men's final Sunday...

Navratilova wins fourth Wimbledon crown

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Martina Navratilova came from behind to clinch her fourth consecutive Wimbledon singles title Saturday, beating arch-rival Chris Evert Lloyd 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 in the women's final at the All England Club.

The 28-year-old Czechoslovakian-born left-hander overcame an uncharacteristically tentative start before her power-game halted Lloyd's Grand Slam march.

Lloyd, the 30-year-old holder of the Australian and French titles, needed to win the Wimbledon and U.S. championships to claim a $1 million bonus offered by the International Tennis Federation to any player who could win all four tournaments consecutively.

Navratilova's victory in their 66th career meeting gave her a 34-32 edge over her rival. Their last 24 meetings all have been in finals.

Earlier in the day, Boris Becker, a 17-year-old unseeded West German, became the youngest ever Wimbledon men's finalist when he beat the Swedish No. 5 seed, Anders Jarryd, 2-6, 7-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Becker will meet eighth-seeded Kevin Curren, a South African-born naturalized American, in Sunday's final.

Becker, in only his second season on the circuit, came from a set down against Jarryd, who also had a 3-1 lead in the second set tiebreaker.

The match was interrupted by rain Friday with the scores level at a set and a game apiece. But when play resumed, Becker quickly raced ahead of the more experienced 23-year-old Swede.

The electrifying pace of the match continued from the day before, but Becker showed more consistency.

He broke Jarryd's serve in the second game after the resumption, and although the Swede immediately broke back, the West German "Wunderkind" captured his serve again for 5-2. Becker then clinched the set when Jarryd fired a return long.

Despite Jarryd's usually immaculate game, the opening three games of the fourth set all went against the server with Becker emerging with a 2-1 lead.

He then survived four break points before extending his advantage. And when he broke in the seventh game, he found himself serving for a place in the final.

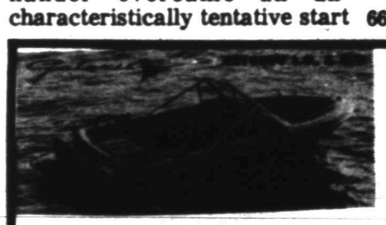

Amazingly he dropped his serve after blasting a smash off court and then serving a double-fault.

But he clinched his berth in the final on his first match point when his service return clipped the net-cord and Jarryd flopped a backhand half-volley into the net.

Curren's powerful, accurate serve allied to a flashing service return will be his main weapons in the final. In defeating Sweden's Stefan Edberg, the No 14 seed, defending champion and No.1 seed McEnroe, and then Connors, he did not drop his serve.

During his 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 demolition of Connors in the semifinal, he served 17 aces.

"I've gotten better and better as the tournament has gone on," Curren said. "I've felt more and more comfortable."

Myers named top 'winter' coach in TSPWA polling

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Golf coach Dave Williams of the University of Houston and track coach Clyde Hart of Baylor shared first place in the Texas Sports Writers Association's voting for Senior College Coach for Spring while basketball coach Gerald Myers of Texas Tech was an overwhelming choice for Senior College Coach for the Winter, it was announced Friday.

In the preferential balloting Williams and Hart each got 162 points with baseball coach Cliff Gustafson of Texas a close third with 156 points.

Williams won his 17th NCAA golf championship this spring. Hart's 1600-meter relay team went through the season undefeated, winning the NCAA with a record 3:00.88. He also had three pole vaulters to clear 18 feet in the meet - a first - and his team wound up third in team scoring.

Myers' team won both the Southwest Conference regular-season basketball title and the SWC post-season tournament. He drew 40 first place votes out of a possible 48 for 135 points. Jody Condradt of Texas, whose women's basketball team was No. 1 most of the season, finished second in the voting.

Norman takes three-stroke lead at Canadian midpoint

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) - Greg Norman was careful to offer the usual disclaimers.

"There's a lot of golf to be played," he said."No lead is safe," and so on. But the man known as "The Great White Shark," three shots clear of the field at the halfway point of the defense of his title in the Canadian Open Golf Tournament, couldn't resist a big broad smile after his continued domination of the par-5 holes at the Glen Abbey Golf Club.

"It's nice to be back on top," said Norman, enjoying his first lead of the season. "I feel comfortable with my golf game. I feel confident about my golf game.

"I feel that as long as I don't get too complacent, I should have a profitable weekend."

Norman, one of the outstanding players in golf last year but a struggling non-winner this season, chipped in for an eagle-3 Friday on his way to a second round 68 and a 135 total after 36 holes.

That's nine shots under par for the two rounds. And, for the two day's play, the powerful, white-haired Australian is nine under par on the par-5 holes. He played those four long holes four under par Friday and in two days has recorded two eagles, five birdies and a single par on the par-5s.

With 36 holes to go, his closest pursuers are Larry Mize and Curtis Strange tied at 139. Mize had a solid, no-bogey 66 in the second round and Strange, winner of two titles and more than $433,000 already this season, had a second consecutive 69.

Fuzzy Zoeller, again on medication to ease the pain in his hips, moved into contention with a closing string of four consecutive birdies that finished off a 66 and put him at 139.

He was tied at that figure with Skeeter Heath, who had a 68.

PGA champion Lee Trevino, a three-time winner of this event, had a 75-150 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Senior PGA

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) - Don January shot a course-record 8-under-par 64 to take a 1-shot lead after two rounds of the $200,000 Greenbrier American Express senior PGA tournament.

January, who is $32,000 away from becoming the senior tour's first millionaire since its inception five years ago, has a 1-shot lead over Harold Henning, the first-round leader.

Lady golfers name Roughing It winners

Roughing It was the playday for the Snyder Country Club Ladies' Golf Association, played last Tuesday.

Players in the rough the fewest times were Barbara Yorgesen, Sandra Davis, Marjorie Briggs, Wilma Dillard, Finnie Seale, Betty Hildreth, Carolyn Greene and Bobbie Hargrove.

The regular luncheon meeting was held with preparations continuing for the Earl Fish Tournament, July 12-14, and the Ladies Handicap Tournament on July 16 and 17 the topics of discussion.

Tee time for July will continue to be 8:30 a.m. for the playdays.

Winners of a recent tournament in Winters were: Betty Hildreth, Juanita Hester, Jo Sterling and Susie Miller, playing in a four-person scramble. They took second place in the Championship Flight.

Alcott running away from field at Mazda

SUGAR LAND, Texas (AP) - Amy Alcott didn't have a shot so she went out and created one.

Standing between a tree and the final green 175-yards away, Alcott took out a seldom used 7-wood, sent a screamer that clipped the top leaves of the tree and landed 20 feet from the hole.

Alcott sank the putt, completing a run of five birdies over the final six holes for a 4-under-par 68 Friday and a four-stroke lead after two rounds of the $300,000 LPGA Mazda Hall of Fame Championship at Sweetwater Country Club.

"I was prepared for anything that could have happened on that shot," Alcott said. "I call it (7-wood) my secret weapon. It's not really secret and sometimes it doesn't work but today it did.

"When you don't have a shot, you go out and make one."

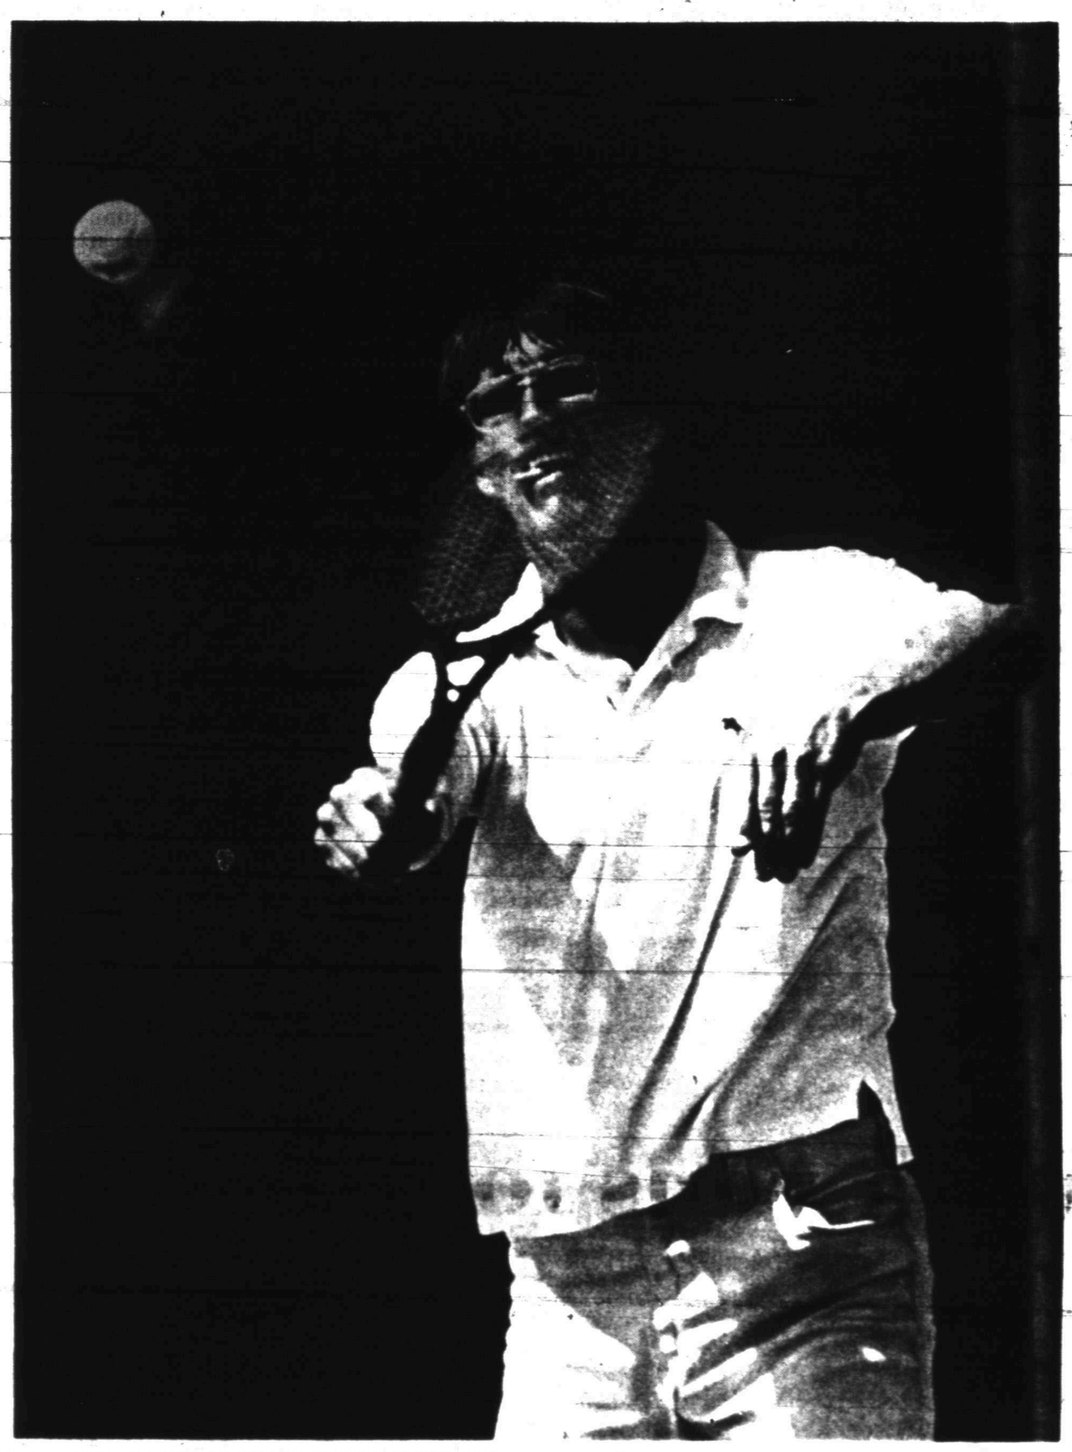

Alcott's 36-hole score of 137 gave her a four-stroke lead over Nancy Lopez, who birdied the final hole for a 2-under-par 70 and a 141 total.

Lopez's final birdie allowed her to remain one stroke ahead of Hall of Famer JoAnne Carner, who had a second-round 70 for a 142 total.

Janet Coles shot a second round 69 and tied with Pat Bradley and Kay Kennedy at 143, one under par. Kennedy shot a second-round 71 and Bradley had a 72.

Sally Quinlan, with a 73 and Sally Little, with a 69, and Beverley Davis with a 72, tied at even par 144 with Mary Beth Zimmerman, who shot a course record 66.

The field was trimmed to 78 golfers scoring a 8-over-par 152 or better for the final two rounds.

Marathon play characterizes recent diamond-man games

by The Associated Press

National League baseball is becoming a long-running play.

For the second consecutive evening, a National League game ran into the morning hours as the Pittsburgh Pirates and San Diego Padres, delayed three times by rain, labored over six hours before the Pirates won 5-4 in 12 innings.

A night earlier, the New York Mets and Atlanta Braves played until almost 4 a.m. EDT before the Mets won 16-13 in 19 innings.

About 10,000 fans held out until the end at Atlanta, but only 8,986 were there for the start of the Padres-Pirates game at Three Rivers Stadium, and most were long gone by the time Johnny Ray's sacrifice fly completed a Pittsburgh comeback from a 4-2 deficit.

The game, which started at 7:35 EDT, finally ended at 1:42 a.m. The rain delays occurred between the fourth and seventh innings and totaled 2 hours, 35 minutes.

In other National League games, it was San Francisco 12, Chicago 6; Houston 4, Montreal 2; New York 6, Atlanta 1; Philadelphia 5, Cincinnati 2; and Los Angeles 4, St. Louis 1.

In the American League, it was Baltimore 6, Kansas City 3; Chicago 8, Cleveland 3; New York 6, Minnesota 3; Texas 3, Detroit 1; California 13, Boston 4; Toronto 8, Oakland 2 and Seattle 7, Milwaukee 6 in 11 innings.

Trailing 4-2 midway of the 12th inning, the Pirates loaded the bases with none out against reliever Craig Lefferts, 4-3, on singles by Lee Mazzilli and Marvell Wynne singled and a walk to Tony Pena. Luis DeLeon relieved Lefferts and surrendered Bill Madlock's two-run double.

Ray, the 16th player used by the Pirates, then hit a sacrifice fly to score Pena from third.

Rangers 3, Tigers 1

Charlie Hough won his first game since June 4 with a five-hitter, and Texas scored all of its runs in the third inning, keyed by Curtis Wilkerson's two-run single.

Bobby Jones led off the third with a single off Jack Morris, 9-6, and advanced to third on Tommy Dunbar's double off the wall in right-center. Wilkerson singled up the middle for two runs, then stole second, advanced to third on a balk and scored on Don Slaught's infield single.

The only run allowed by Hough, 6-10, came on Tom Brookens' fourth homer.

Astros 4, Expos 2

Kevin Bass, who hit four home runs in the previous two seasons, hit two Friday night to give him nine for the year. Both came with the bases empty off starter Mickey Mahler, 1-3.

Jose Cruz batted in the other two Houston runs.

Hospitals add frills to attract business

DALLAS (AP) — The days when hospitals were solely treatment centers for serious medical ailments are gone as facilities add frills to attract more patients and income.

Valet parking, catering and weight reduction programs are just a few of the ways some hospitals are trying to lure more clients and boost diminishing revenues.

In the past, "the philosophy was that a hospital was a place to go get operated on and get well," said Richard Bettis, senior vice president for governmental relations with the Texas Hospital Association.

"Nowadays, a hospital with that kind of attitude finds it hard to stay in business very long," he said. "It's either sink or swim in the hospital business — and that is what it has become: a business."

At St. David's Community Hospital in Austin, the food service staff has been allowed to form a full-service catering company called "A Catered Affair."

"We saw the catering business as a good way to make money for the hospital," Sondra Mechaley, director of food service, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

In Houston, Methodist Hospital has valet parking, doormen, bellboys, a concierge and executive suites.

U.S., Soviets agree to consult on threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union will use their hot line to consult in the event either receives information that a third country or a terrorist group may explode a nuclear weapon, sources said.

The accord was completed on June 14 during a meeting in Geneva by Soviet and American officials who meet periodically in Geneva to discuss compliance with arms control agreements. The group is known as the Standing Consultative Commission.

At the time the accord was reached, few details were made public, partly because the group's deliberations are private. The State Department issued only a vaguely-worded statement on Friday when asked for additional information.

Deputy spokesman Edward Djerejian said the agreement contains "mutual obligations concerning notification and sharing of information either party may have in cases when that would help preclude misunderstanding which could increase the risk of nuclear war."

Privately, U.S. officials said the agreement was directed at third countries or terrorist groups that obtain nuclear weapons. It was learned independently that use of the hot line also is called for under certain circumstances.

The officials, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said the agreement expands on a 1971 accord that commits the two countries to take measures aimed at reducing the risks of a Soviet-American nuclear confrontation.

"It's not an enormous step forward," said one official. But, he said, the agreement shows the the arms commission can be a useful forum and that it is possible for the administration to move ahead on arms control issues.

The new language incorporated into the 1971 agreement reflects the heightened concern of the two superpowers over the possibility that new nations may join the six-nation "nuclear club" or that nuclear weapons may fall into the hands of terrorists.

Nations currently possessing a nuclear capability are the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France, China and India. Countries where such a capability is believed to be within reach are Pakistan, South Africa and Israel, among others.

Nuclear non-proliferation is one area in which the United States and the Soviet Union have indicated an ability to work together.

Habitual criminal said most wanted

AUSTIN–Stanley Glen Butler got a belated birthday present last year compliments of the Texas Department of Public Safety–his own fingerprints and a tour of the Travis County Jail.

Butler, who was born May 13, 1956, was arrested at a south Austin shopping center by DPS narcotics agents on May 16 last year on charges of delivery of a controlled substance.

The charges stemmed from an undercover investigation of Butler that culminated when he tried to sell nine grams of methamphetamine to a DPS agent.

While Butler was being searched by DPS agents, a second quantity of methamphetamine was found in a billfold and he was additionally charged with possession of a controlled substance–less than 28 grams.

Prosecutors added one more serious charge to Butler's list–habitual criminal–prior to his grand jury hearing.

When Butler failed to appear for a November 13, 1984 court hearing, a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Law enforcement officials say at least three additional warrants have been issued for Butler.

On October 31, 1984, he was charged with theft by appropriation in connection with the disappearance of a stereo system from an Austin business where he had been employed.

On November 14, 1984, a warrant was issued charging him with possession of dangerous drugs.

And on February 11, 1985, Butler was charged with theft by check out of Travis County.

Now, the Department of Public Safety and Crime Stoppers would like to give Butler still another belated birthday present.

The 29-year-old fugitive has been placed on the Texas Most Wanted list. A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered for information leading to his arrest.

Anyone with information about Butler's location is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll-free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their indentities.

Mormon document...

Controversial paper exists

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — "Facsimile No. 2," one of the most famous and controversial of sacred Mormon Church documents, has been located and sold in Texas, a collector says.

The document is part of a collection of papyrus fragments Mormons believe church founder Joseph Smith translated into the Book of Abraham, an account purportedly written by the Old Testament biblical figure.

Egyptologists have concluded the manuscripts are actually an unrelated collection of ancient magical burial rites. However, Mormon historian Hugh Nibley said there is confusion over the exact meanings of symbols, and the entire field is being reassessed.

Mark Hoffman, a Salt Lake seller of historical autographs and manuscripts, said he located a collection — including Facsimile No. 2 — that at one time belonged to William McLellin, an early Mormon apostle who was excommunicated.

Hoffman said he found other documents of interest to Mormons, including letters written by Joseph Smith and his mother Lucy Mack Smith and a blessing Smith gave to his son, Joseph III.

Other items in the latest find included the diaries of William McLellin himself from the 1830s.

"The collection is of considerable historical value in regards to the early (Mormon) church," he said. "It contains insights into the personality of William McLellin and numerous references to Joseph Smith."

Hoffman said terms of the sale were that he not reveal the name of the buyer nor the amount of the sale. However, he said the collection may be made public when the documents are authenticated.

William McLellin, a teacher and physician, was ordained a Mormon apostle in 1835. He later was excommunicated for publicly opposing church leaders, and spent the rest of his life urging organization of another church.

Historian Brent Metcalfe said it was thought church officials had possession of the collection, but evidence suggests the documents are owned by a private individual. Hoffman said the church did not buy the documents.

A copy of Facsimile No. 2 appears in the Book of Abraham, which contains a story of an attempted sacrifice of Abraham by pagan priests, an incident not mentioned in the Bible, and scripture that credits "the Gods" with creation of the world rather than the traditional monotheistic Genesis account.

In 1967, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York presented the church with 11 papyrus fragments from a collection Joseph Smith bought more than a century before for $2,400.

Mormons knew papyrus fragments had been donated to the museum, but they had long assumed the manuscripts had been destroyed in a subsequent fire.

Foreign viruses may help in war on grasshoppers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Experiments are still under way, but the Agriculture Department said Friday that some new foreign viruses may turn out to be effective against hordes of grasshoppers that chew their way across fields and pastures.

John E. Henry, who is an entomologist with USDA's Rangeland Insect Laboratory in Bozeman, Mont., said seven viruses from overseas "look promising for grasshoppers in North America." The viruses cause diseases, or poxes, in grasshoppers, but not in humans and livestock.

Of the seven viruses, Henry has tested one on a 10-acre plot and found "results worth pursuing," said the department's Agricultural Research Service.

Henry said he had not found any native viruses that were powerful enough to affect the more than 600 species of grasshoppers in this country.

Army colonel foiled in coup attempt

by The Associated Press

The military government of President Lansana Conte said Friday that it had foiled an attempt by former Prime Minister Diara Traore to seize power in the impoverished West African nation of Guinea.

Guinea's embassies in Paris and London announced the collapse of the coup attempt in the country's capital of Conakry.

Rebels had seized Radio Conakry and declared they had taken over the government. Later broadcasts on Radio Conakry, monitored in France, Senegal and the Ivory Coast, said the plot had failed and an unspecified number of civilians were killed.

They also said troops were conducting a house-to-house search for the 50-year-old Traore, most recently minister of state for education, who helped Conte seize power in April 1984.

Conte, 52, was in Lome, Togo, during the overnight coup attempt for a summit meeting of the 16-member Economic Community of West African States.

All points of exit by land, sea and air were closed and troops were patrolling the capital, according to Radio Conakry. It said a curfew was ordered from 8 p.m. to 7 a.m.

The coup attempt began late Thursday when Diara Traore announced on Radio Conakry that he had taken power to end "15 months of total disappointment" with Conte's regime. He charged Conte with a "lust for personal power" and said he failed to promote economic development.

Conte, then army chief of staff, seized power on April 3, 1984, eight days after President Ahmed Sekou Toure died in the United States following emergency surgery.

Sekou Toure established a socialist regime with the end of French colonial rule in 1958 and ran the country with an iron hand, suppressing all political opposition.

Conte promised a rapid return to democracy, but did little to implement the pledge during his first year in office.

Diara Traore was Conte's top aide in the 1984 coup. For the next nine months, he served as Conte's prime minister and unchallenged deputy. He was demoted last December to head the Education Ministry, apparently because of growing tribal and personal rivalries between the two men.

Diara Traore, trained in the Soviet Union as an artillery officer during Sekou Toure's "socialist" period, was Guinea's military attache in Moscow for several years.

With only about 5.5 million inhabitants in an area of 95,000 square miles, Guinea has enormous, largely untapped mineral wealth, including an estimated one-third of the world's known bauxite resources. But it is rated by the United Nations as one of world's 20 poorest countries.

Air India wreckage found on ocean floor

LONDON (AP) — Operators of an underwater robot said it had located wreckage Friday on the Atlantic floor that is believed to contain the flight recorders of the Air India jet that crashed off Ireland, killing all 329 people aboard.

Neville Hunter, a spokesman for the Cable and Wireless Telecommunications Co., told The Associated Press his firm would recover the wreckage as soon as Indian and Canadian authorities give permission.

The Boeing 747 vanished from radar screens June 23 on a flight from Canada to India via London before the pilot could radio a distress call, leading to speculation there was an explosion aboard.

Based on engineering drawings of the jumbo jet, Cable and Wireless specialists believe the "black box" flight recorders are in a tail panel found about 100 miles southwest of Ireland, Hunter said.

The recorders could provide clues to whether an explosion caused the crash. There have been suspicions that a terrorist bomb was responsible.

The tail panel was found among wreckage scattered over a three-mile-long path of the seabed, Hunter said.

"It could be recovered if we receive instructions from the Indian and Canadian authorities," he said. The underwater robot, named Scarab, could attach lines to the tail panel so that the mother ship could haul the panel up.

Boeing 747s carry two flight recorders. One stores information from the aircraft's instruments showing the direction, altitude and engine readings, and the other records voices and sounds in the cockpit.

Indian news agencies reported Thursday that Indian investigators who studied wreckage and bodies from the plane believed an explosion occurred in a cargo container.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported, however, that experts had found no trace of explosives in the wreckage retrieved and were questioning the bomb theory.

Eastwood course is now planned

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — Clint Eastwood, who roams the movie screen muttering "make my day," has as much place in a college classroom as the poet who "wandered lonely as a cloud," says a Miami University professor.

Officials expressing optimism about fires

By The Associated Press

Increased humidity and lower temperatures gave California firefighters an edge in the battle against the largest of the blazes that have charred about 200,000 acres in nine Western states and British Columbia, officials said.

"We're cautiously optimistic," said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Joanna Guttman of the fire that blackened 78,000 acres in the Los Padres National Forest in Ventura County.

"If the weather holds, we'll be in good shape, although we still have a forest fire on our hands."

Almost 3,000 firefighters contained 38 percent of the blaze, the state's largest fire, as the number of active blazes in California dwindled Friday from about two dozen to three.

Firefighters were also busy in Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming and British Columbia.

California Gov. George Deukmejian sought federal aid Friday for areas of the state where arson caused an estimated $23.6 million damage.

He offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of whoever set a fire that killed three people, destroyed 48 homes and damaged 18 others in the Baldwin Hills district of Los Angeles early this week.

An arson fire in the Normal Heights area of San Diego County burned 64 homes Sunday.

In a letter, Deukmejian asked President Reagan to declare the city of Los Angeles and San Diego County federal disaster areas to enable residents to apply for federal aid.

At the Ventura County blaze, which that had threatened Ojai and nearby towns, firefighters benefited Friday from fog, less wind and highs only in the 80s and 90s.

"The higher humidity and lower temperature is boosting morale out on the lines," U.S. Forest Service spokesman Pete Libby said. "They've been faced with 100-degree temperatures for several days."

Ventura County Sheriff John Gillespie said he suspected arson.

Three firefighters suffered serious injuries — an eye injury, heat exhaustion and a chainsaw cut — and 48 had minor ones. Libby said firefighting costs since Monday reached about $1.4 million.

The fire, about 40 miles east of President Reagan's ranch, was less than five miles north of Carpinteria, a coastal town 12 miles east of Santa Barbara. It destroyed or damaged $3 million worth of orchards, 15 buildings, most of them cabins, sheds or barns, and 32 vehicles.

Most of the 5,000 people evacuated had returned to their homes.

Elsewhere, hundreds of firefighters from throughout the Northwest battled several fires, including one covering more than 1,700 acres on the Colville Indian Reservation, about 60 miles northwest of Spokane, Wash.

Across the border in British Columbia, firefighters reported 495 wildfires around the province, with 39 raging out of control.

In Montana, forest fires have covered more than 3,100 acres in western and central areas.

Twenty-two small fires — three set by lightning Friday — were reported in the Gila National Forest in New Mexico, but most were left to burn themselves out.

Lightning fires that charred about 3,000 acres in the northwest Nebraska panhandle were expected to burn through today, Forest Service spokesman George Probasko said.

Fire crews in Idaho stepped up the assault Friday on a Salmon National Forest fire that almost tripled to at least 3,500 acres, but the Forest Service said another central Idaho blaze to the southwest appeared to be stabilizing at 2,600 acres.

Harvard school courts billionaire

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University is reportedly courting Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot in hopes that the computer magnate will rent thousands of artifacts from the school's renowned but needy museum of archaeology.

The Peabody Museum, which owns 3 million African, South American, Asian and Native American pieces, has begun informal talks with Perot's associates about constructing a Texas extension to the museum and renting artifacts on a rotating basis, The Harvard Crimson reported Thursday.

Reached aboard his yacht in the Mediterranean, Perot said he was "very interested" in the deal.

Perot recently made a $72 million bid for New York's Museum of the American Indian, and he told the Crimson he was excited about combining the resources of that musuem with the Peabody's possessions.

Grass fire doused

Snyder firemen extinguished a grass fire shortly after 6 p.m. Friday.

No property damage was reported from the blaze, located about ¼ mile east of where College Ave. intersects with U.S. Hwy. 84.

Two tents stolen from local park

Two tent thefts in Towle Park were reported to Snyder police Friday.

Linda Meyers of 3115 39th St. filed the first report at 6:55 p.m. Filing the second report at 7:06 p.m. was Dela Alvarado of 123 Milburn Ave.

Both missing tents are thought to have been taken from the park sometime Friday afternoon.

In other routine action Friday evening, police jailed four subjects for public intoxication.

Ancient mission is discovered under field

SOCORRO, Texas (AP) — A woman who complained of hearing ghostly voices didn't live long enough to discover her home bordered an ancient Spanish mission and graveyard.

Cranczia Hernandez often told friends of hearing voices at night. Now an excavation by archeologists next to her home has uncovered a graveyard and 300-year-old Spanish mission — possibly the oldest European structure in Texas.

Josie Holguin, a friend of Mrs. Hernandez, said seeing the centuries-old skeletons from the mission burial ground convinced her that the voices her friend spoke of were more than just imagination.

"We didn't believe her. Now I do," Holguin said during her first visit to the dig.

She was one of 500 people who visited the site during an open house Thursday.

Pointing to the ruins of Hernandez' small, three-room house at the edge of the site, Holguin recalled how friends and relatives sometimes stayed with the old woman overnight.

"She was scared to stay by herself. Sometimes we came here, but we wouldn't hear anything," Holguin said.

Neighbors and friends did not know the burial grounds and old mission were underneath the cotton farmland until recently, when archaeologists began excavating.

The 3½-year-old excavation project is being supervised by Rex Gerald, an anthropology professor at the University of Texas at El Paso.

Gerald, who said he started scratching around the site after hearing oldtimers talk about the mission, has already found a 100-foot long church with 7-foot thick walls. The mission dates to the late 1600s, which makes it the oldest European structure in Texas, he said.

He also has uncovered a burial ground and a convent near the mission.

And although he hasn't found it yet, Gerald is sure that a Piro Indian pueblo will be uncovered in the surrounding area.

The Spanish built the mission after fleeing from the Pueblo revolt in New Mexico, said Gerald and Ben Tice, who is writing his masters' thesis about the site.

Tice called the site the "focal point of development of the Spanish and Indian cultures."

Analysis of the infant and child skeletons reveals they suffered from malnutrition, the men said. Their parents were "fighting Indians day and night and couldn't get the crops planted," Gerald said.

The land at and around the archaeological site now belongs to three families, who are supporting the excavation. But Gerald said the property should eventually be acquired by a public entity.

"We need to get it into some kind of public domain to get it preserved," Gerald said.

Job market flat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment remained stubbornly at a 7.3 percent plateau in June as manufacturing suffered more job losses and service-oriented businesses registered modest gains, the government reported Friday.

The seasonally adjusted jobless rate stood still at 7.3 percent although the government's estimate of the total number of people at work plunged by nearly 600,000, from a record-high 106,960,000 in May, to 106,370,000 last month.

The BLS makes these estimates based on a Census Bureau survey of some 60,000 randomly-selected U.S. households, and Ms. Norwood said the survey in May might have exaggerated the number of people with jobs.

The reason the jobless rate did not rise was that roughly 600,000 job-seekers, mostly teen-agers, dropped out of the labor force in June, substantially lessening competition for work and offsetting job losses in manufacturing.

The total number of those officially classified as unemployed held steady at 8.4 million and the rate stood still after adjustment for such seasonal variations as school closings. Without such an adjustment, the rate would have been 7.5 percent.

"It is foolish to try to draw any grandiose economic conclusions from the economic data for May and June," said John M. Albertine, president of the American Business Conference. "Both months' data is affected by seasonal adjustment factors that can be skewed all over the map by the timing of summer vacations."

Crisis ends for 8

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A United Nations agency dealing with Africa's famine said Friday the crisis is over in eight of the 21 nations that faced exceptional food supply problems in 1984-85. But it said the emergency is acute in five countries.

The Rome-based Food and Agriculture Organization said in its latest report on Africa's food situation, issued in Nairobi, that the countries now out of danger are Burundi, Kenya, Lesotho, Morocco, Rwanda, Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

"The drought has been broken, the weather conditions have favored 1985 main season harvests, and the food supply situation is back to normal," the FAO report said of the eight nations.

The U.N. agency said, however, that the food emergency is "most acute" in Chad, Ethiopia, Mali, Niger and Sudan, partly because of port congestion and other problems in distributing food aid throughout the countries.

In Ethiopia, for example, the FAO said that as of late June about 175,000 tons of grain had piled up at the country's Red Sea ports of Assab and Massawa and at the harbor in neighboring Djibouti, which also is used to funnel food to Ethiopia.

An additional 37,500 tons of of food was at anchor destined for Ethiopian famine victims, the agency said, while "reports continue to be received of widespread malnutrition and deaths from starvation."

While good rains have come to some countries, the FAO said, Botswana in southern Africa is in the gripe of a fourth year of drought. The agency added that food production is still severely impaired in Angola and Mozambique because of civil war.

The other countries still suffering food shortages to varying degrees are Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Mauritania, Senegal and Somalia.

Scurry County Folks...

By Linda Baylor

"I grew up on a farm and am proud to be a farmer's daughter," said Kathryn (Kathy) Roberts, home extension agent for Scurry County. "I was a 4-H'er and showed registered Hereford bulls. That's unusual for a girl," she laughed.

She and her husband, Gary, and their two children moved to Snyder in 1969. Kathy taught school for 10 years prior to accepting the position as home extension agent. "I've really had three careers, I guess," she said. "I worked as a home economist for a utility company before I started teaching school and now I'm a home extension agent."

Kathy enjoys the flexibility of her current job and the opportunity to work with the different age groups, especially the young people. She explained that she and her husband are committed to working with young people and 4-H provides ample opportunity for that.

"Extension service means people helping people. We train people to go out and train others," explained Kathy. As an example she used the Extension Homemakers Council. A representative from each club will meet for training in a given area or subject and then return to her individual club and train the other members.

Each individual club selects the projects and topics they wish to study during the year. Kathy does a lot of the training and programs herself but in some areas that require a specialist, she tries to provide that also.

There are many free booklets available to the public on an individual basis. This is one more facet of helping people help people.

KATHRYN ROBERTS
HOME EXTENSION AGENT

She works closely with the Scurry County Fair which has been slated for Sept. 18-21 at the Scurry County Coliseum. Friday, Sept. 20 has been selected as Extension Homemakers' Day and there will be various demonstrations held throughout the day. Jean Bullard is chairman of special events, according to Kathy, and has made this special day possible.

Items will be brought to the coliseum on Sept. 18 and judged on the 19th by a panel of six judges. Displays will be open to the public on the 20-21st. "There's a lot of people we don't see throughout the year until it's fair time. Then they'll bring in items for the fair. It's just a really big event in Snyder," she added.

Another event Kathy works with in her capacity as home extension agent is the bazaar which will be held by the Extension Homemakers' Clubs. "These clubs are all non-profit and this is about the only way they have to earn money. That money is always funneled back into the community through various projects, donations or scholarships," explained Kathy.

The bazaar has been set for Oct. 5 this year and the club members will be selling homemade craft items, homebaked goodies and conducting programs thoroughout the day.

Another aspect of her busy schedule is the 4-H program. This involves young people from nine to 19 years of age and programs and activities in all areas of family living and ag skills.

Currently Kathy is working on the upcoming State Fashion Show which will be held in Lubbock. She is one of two script writers for the show and must write the script from looking at a picture of the finished project and the pattern.

"There will be people there from all over the state. We have 13 districts in the state and each district could bring as many as four contestants," she said.

One of the teaching methods used in 4-H is the Method Demonstration. According to Kathy, this helps the young people learn to organize their thoughts and to present a proper presentation of a given subject.

National 4-H week will be celebrated Oct. 6-12. Sometime during that month the local 4-H group will have an awards banquet for outstanding [illegible] will also attend the Gold Star Awards Banquet later in the year.

Kathy also works with the Family Living Committee. This committee is composed of people from all walks of life and it is designed to see what needs to be done or what would benefit the community. The members help to fill these various needs.

For example, the Family Life Committee will be sponsoring a Health Fair Oct. 22 from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. at the coliseum.

"That's another thing we can and will do," said Kathy. "We'll be happy to present programs for any organization that wants one."

Another aspect of her job is answering questions. "We try to answer all that come our way and they can really be unusual. Like how to make goat milk's cheese. I found that one," she laughed.

Someone called in needing to know how to make sunshine pickles, according to Kathy. "I'll have to tell her that we can't recommend that for safety and sanitary reasons. They're made outside in the sunshine," she explained.

The extension agents try to make certain all the information they give out is the best current research has to offer. They have access to specialists in all areas and keep in close contact with these people.

"We feel like anything worth doing is worth doing right. That's why I tell them when they call, that, yes, you do need to blanch your vegetables before you put them up," she laughed.

As a home extension agent, Kathy works with all areas of family life such as safety, in-

Double ring ceremony unite Ladonna Benson, Jack Powers

Ladonna Lee Benson became the bride of Jack Steven Powers in a double ring ceremony held Saturday, June 22 in the Prestoncrest Church of Christ in Dallas. Murphy Phillips of Weatherford officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Benson of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Powers of Greensville.

The altar was defined with two heart shaped candelabras accented with greenery and pink roses. Centering the candelabras was an octagenal table supporting two large pink feathered swans. Fresh greenery nestled in the backs of the swans cascaded to the floor. A fan shaped candelabra holding five tapers sat between the swans. Flanking the arrangement were two spiral candelabras. Each of the candelabras was decorated to match those defining the altar.

The aisle was decorated with lighted silk pink roses enhanced with greenery and large pink satin bows.

The candlelighters, Kim and Heather Benson, cousins of the bride from Philidelphia, Penn., wore matching light pink tea length dresses fashioned of laquinta taffeta. Puffed sleeves enhanced the fitted bodice which featured an off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline.

Mike and Lisa Maxwell, Alan Austin, Melinda Simpson, Gayle Graves, Mark Aldridge, Roberta Straayer and Sharon Hans sang "You and I" and "Sunrise Sunset" while the candles were being lit.

Larry Dobbins, Nacogdoches, brother of the bride, sang "Lady" while the grandmothers and mothers were being seated. The entire choral group sang "You Make Me Feel Brand New" while the minister, groom and his attendents entered. They hummed the traditional wedding procession as the bride's attendents entered.

Lloyd Benson, brother of the bride, sang "The Hawaiian Wedding" as she was escorted to the altar by her father. Following the vows, Adele Little, sister of the bride, sang "Evergreen". Sharon Hans sang "The Lord's Prayer" after the prayer.

After the couple lit the unity candle, they were joined by their parents. The united family joined hands and the choral group sang "God Bless You" and "Go With God".

Following the ceremony, the group sang "O Lord Our Lord" as the newly wedded couple left the church followed by their mothers and grandmothers.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose a gown that was an Ilissa for Demetrios.

The fitted bodice was fashioned of peau d ange lace with a pattern of roses and accented with pearls and sequins in the front. The off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline dipped into a "V" at the back and was embellished with hand rolled roses across the shoulders.

The turn of the century leg of mutton sleeves were fashioned of matching rose patterened lace and were enhanced with a self ruffle at the elbow. The fitted portion of the sleeve ended in petal points at the wrist.

The softly gathered skirt fashioned of peau d sau satin fanned into a chapel length train which was enhanced with an arch designed by using three tiers of pleated organza outlined with lace, pearls and sequins. A hand rolled rose nestled at the top of the arch adding interest to the train.

To compliment her gown, the bride wore a broad brimmed French style hat which was turned up on one side. The hat was fashioned of two layers of small pleated organza overlaid with matching roses, pearls and sequins. The bridal veil was secured to the crown of the hat and the double netting dropped to just below the hips. It was a John Fenamore for Demetrios.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a cascading bouquet of pink and white roses, Cymbidian orchids and Stephanotis.

In keeping with tradition, her dress served as something new. For something old, she wore a gold bracelet which belonged to her great-grandmother and she borrowed a diamond necklace from her mother-in-law. Her garter was blue.

Adele Little of Garland, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. The bridesmaids included Mrs. Terry Aldridge of Garland, Mrs. Louis Nabors of Houston, Nancy Ewing and Marian Mixon, both of Dallas.

They wore matching tea length dresses of paradise pink laquinta taffeta. The dress design featured a fitted bodice with off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline. Completing the outfits were matching shoes.

The bride's attendents carried bouquets of pink and white roses accented with pink satin ribbon streamers.

Alera and Andrea Powers of Cleburne, neices of the groom, served as flower girls. They wore matching dresses fashioned of light pink and designed to match those of the bridesmaids and candlelighters. They carried baskets fashioned of candlelight colored Chantilly lace and matching ribbon and enhanced with light pink rose petals.

Nathan Little of Garland, nephew of the bride, served as ring bearer. He was attired in a black tuxedo enhanced with an eggshell colored shirt. He carried a pillow fashioned of candlelight satin and accented with four inches of Chantilley lace and matching satin ribbons.

The groom wore a black tuxedo with tails. A matching black bow tie and eggshell colored shirt completed the ensemble. His boutonniere was a white rose.

Leon Powers of Greensville, father of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen included Mike Ragsdale of Plano, and Charlie Adams of Greensville, both friends of the groom, and Lloyd Benson of Abilene, brother of the bride. They wore matching black tuxedos complimented with eggshell colored shirts. Their boutonnieres were white carnations.

The bride's mother selected an evening gown of old rose crepe over taffeta. The bodice dropped to the hips which were encircled with a matching satin ribbon tied gracefully into a bow. The skirt was straight to the knees and then fanned into a flowing kick circle.

The groom's mother wore an evening gown of almost matching color. Her gown featured tiers to the hips and the skirt was straight to the floor.

They wore matching corsages fashioned of white Cymbidium orchids.

The registry table was covered with a light pink taffeta cloth and overlaid with a candlelight colored lace skirt. A bouquet of pink and white roses centered the table. The bride's book was an original hand made book designed with off white satin overlaid with lace, sequins and pearls. The pages were embossed with flowers. A pink feathered pen completed the setting.

Mrs. Pam Powers of Cleburne, sister-in-law of the groom, assisted the guests as they arrived.

Special guests registered from Midland, Weatherford, Fort Worth, Nacogdoches, Philidelphia, Penn., Nashville, Tenn., Odessa, Childress, Dumas, Cleburne, Greensville, Houston, Plano, Snyder, Garland, Dallas and Abilene.

A special guest of the bride was Clint Longley of Abilene, former Dallas Cowboy quarterback and longtime friend.

Following the ceremony, a buffet was held in the fellowship hall of the building.

The bride's table was covered with a paradise pink taffeta cloth and overlaid with candlelight lace. A bouquet of pink silk lighted roses arranged in a paradise pink swan served as the centerpiece. Pink punch was served from a crystal bowl. Crystal appointments completed the setting.

The traditional three tiered cake was decorated with pink roses. Swans and roses nestled atop the cake with satin ribbons of pink and paradise pink running from the top of the cake to gracefully connect separate tiered smaller cakes which flanked the wedding cake.

Mrs. Sandra Allen of Garland, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Kim Allen also of Garland, cousin of the bride, assisted the guests at the table.

The groom's table was covered with an eggshell cloth enhanced with saddle stitching done in brown. Centering the table was an old poetry book opened to the poem "What Is A Husband". The cake, baked by Adele Little, sister of the bride, was chocolate decorated with dark chocolate decorations and two enterwined hearts nestled on top.

Other members of the houseparty included Jerry Wheeler, Jo Ann Hamilton, Margaret Baker, Sue Prescott, Jo Ragan, Johnnie Smith, Ellie Oz and Jana Hall, all of Garland.

For a traveling dress, the bride selected a shocking pink silk dress with matching satin shoes. She wore a corsage designed with a white Cymbidium orchid. Following their honeymoon in Aruba in the Caribbean, they will make their home in Dallas.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and she attended Abilene Christian University for two years. She went to Dallas where she pursued a career as a model and singer. Currently, she is working at Marie Leavell Ladies Shop in Dallas.

The groom graduated from Greensville High School and attended East Texas State at Commerce. He is currently employed for LTV in Grand Prairie.

A rehearsal dinner was held on June 21 in the Summit Hotel.

Single ring ceremony unites couple in Lighthouse church

Janice Lynn Haywood and Kenneth Alvin Rollins, both of Snyder, exchanged wedding vows at 7 p.m. June 8 in the Lighthouse Assembly of God.

James H. Lee of Binger, Okla. uncle of the groom, officiated the single ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. David Haywood and Mr. and Mrs. David Hammit, all of Snyder.

The altar was decorated with a large floral arrangement designed with silk roses and carnations done in white and orchid. Accents of baby's breath added interest to it. Highlighting the floral arrangement were several candelabras.

The unity candle was enhanced with a matching silk ribbon and carnation.

The groom's mother made the flower arrangements.

Keadon Collins, cousin of the bride, served as candlelighter.

Mrs. Kathy Block served as pianist. The musical selections included "I Can't Help Falling In Love", "Theme from Ice Castle" and the traditional wedding march.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected a formal length gown fashioned of silk knit and overlaid with French imported lace. The Princess Anne bodice was enhanced with appliqued rosette and butterflies. Rhinestones and pearls were scattered across the front.

The Bishop sleeves, fashioned of matching French imported lace, featured cuffs of hand appliqued rosettes. The scooped neckline was outlined in matching lace.

The full skirt gathered gracefully into a chapel length train which was trimmed in hand cut Chantilly lace.

Two sweetheart roses gracefully secured the bridal veil to a wide brimmed hat which was covered with Chantilly lace and accented with appliqued rosettes and a scattering of pearls.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a nosegay of white and orchid roses and orchid carnations accented with baby's breath. The bouquet was gently secured with lace streamers.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore a set of diamond earrings which belonged to her grandmother for something old. Her dress was borrowed and her grandmother gave her a necklace for somthing new. She wore a blue garter fashioned of ribbon and lace.

Shelby Clayton, the bride's aunt, served as matron of honor. She wore a white eyelet dress topped with a wide brimmed hat trimmed with silk orchid colored flowers and highlighted with orchid colored satin ribbon. She carried a bouquet of orchid roses and carnations accented with baby's breath.

Karley Collins, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore an orchid dress of flowered material. An orchid hat trimmed with matching ribbon and flowers completed her ensemble.

She carried a white basket filled with rose petals.

Cara Collins, cousin of the bride, served as train bearer. She was attired in an outfit which matched that of the flower girl.

Cory Clark, nephew of the groom, served as ring bearer. He wore a light brown suit and carried an satin orchid pillow overlaid with lace. Matching silk ribbons were held in place with sweetheart roses.

David Hammit, father of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were Clint and Damien Haywood, brothers of the bride.

As the bride was escorted to the altar by her father, she paused and presented her mother with a red rose. As she and her husband left the church building, they paused and she presented his mother with a matching red rose.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride's table was covered with two-tierred chiffon lace cloth which was ruffled with orchid ribbons and accented with silk carnations at each corner. The centerpiece was an elegant candelabra decorated with white gardenias, orchids and carnations.

The white three tiered cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom standing inside a gazebo trimmed with orchid flowers. Matching flowers enhanced the cake.

Barbara Abel and Buffie Wilson, both of Snyder, presided at the table.

The groom's table was laid with lace over linen and centered with an orchid silk floral arrangement. A German chocolate cake flanked by a silver coffee service completed the setting.

Nita Brooks assisted the guests at his table.

The couple will make their home in Snyder.

A rehearsal supper was hosted at the bride'shome on June 7 at 6:30 p.m.

Using a sun block

Any suntan lotion labeled "sun block" is supposed to prevent all tanning. However, a normal person perspires constantly, even though we don't always notice it.

Evaporation of skin moisture breaks down any sun lotion. For effectiveness, reapply lotion often during the day and after a swim or shower, especially when you remain in the sun or are on a boat or near water where you get reflected sunlight.

Also, use lotion during "gray" days when summer sun continues to penetrate and can cause serious sunburn.

By Donny Brown

Four gigantic squash plants formerly growing to beat sixty were deemed beyond the hope of modern gardening last Sunday — the victim of neglect which stretched over a 14-day period.

Brief uprooting services were conducted and interment followed in the neighborhood trash dumpster, yours truly officiating.

The four — planted as seedlings — had been in cultivation one week shy of three months.

They had produced a host of offspring before being struck down some two weeks ago. Cause of death was officially listed as squash bugs.

They are survived by several rows of blackeyed peas; six healthy stands of tomatoes; four cantaloupe vines; two straggling pepper plants; a smattering of lettuce shoots; and a new planting of Jack-o-lantern pumpkins in their place.

The family suggests memorials to your favorite lawn and garden herbicide salesman.

So anyway, we make a semi-big deal over the fact of our lost squash plants since two weeks ago they were the star attraction of our back yard.

We mentioned their size and fecundity in a column two Sunday issues back — a time when their rapid growth and seeming invincibility had us about half-feared to get too close to them.

We dropped the ball, however, since the squash bugs that did them in were noted in the same column. And these squash bugs were left to increase unopposed. By the time we'd realized our tardiness, it was too late.

How were we to know that squash bugs have apparently mastered the art of immaculate conception?

They reproduced on a scale that must have skipped the time-wasting interlude normally associated with love and birth. In other words, we have a feeling the little squash bugs must have plunked out of mama already primed to be mamas themselves.

One can image a line of the insects — each a proportionately size smaller — stretching out to infinity.

All of this activity goes on beneath the leaf, by the way, so it's not hard to see how your typical, shadetree gardener is caught unawares.

That is until the formerly formidable squash plant — which two weeks ago seemed to possess predatory instincts — suddenly begins to look like a peeled banana skin. Make that a stepped on, peeled banana skin.

The quick demise of what seemed to be a giant-among-plants once again brings home some good advice handed out free of charge by the poet Robert Frost, who wrote "Too many fall from great and good to ever doubt the likelihood."

To this, and to the brief services offered for our squash plants, we can only offer a silent "Amen."

Selective retribution

By Don Graff

Washington is moving swiftly, as well it should, to avenge the four Marines gunned down in El Salvador.

The FBI is reportedly involved, both in the investigation and in the training of a special unit of the Salvadoran police assigned to track down the leftist rebels responsible for the June 19 killings.

There is also unexpected progress in the 4-year-old murders of two American agricultural advisers who were assisting the Salvadoran land reform program. New witnesses, including an American colonel and his wife, have come forward to finger a Salvadoran army officer as the mastermind of the public execution of the two in the coffee shop of San Salvador's Sheraton Hotel.

All good news as far as it goes. But that, as far as I am concerned, is not far enough. One name is conspicuously missing in this pursuit of justice for American victims of Salvadoran violence.

Patricia Cuellar.

A U.S. citizen who had been working in refugee programs of the Salvadoran Roman Catholic Church, she has not been seen since she was arrested on July 28, 1982. I had met her two years earlier on my first visit to El Salvador. She was then secretary of Socorro Juridico, the legal aid office of San Salvador archbishopric. Shortly before, police had raided the office, seizing case records of thousands of Salvadorans who had sought the church's assistance in the calamities of the spreading civil war.

A small woman, several months pregnant at the time, she was hardly a heroic figure. But she left a lasting impression of immense courage in the face of great danger.

To go back to the murdered Marines for a minute, chances of catching up with their killers are not very good. Members of one of the smallest and most extreme groups in the rebel alliance, they have, in all probability, disappeared into the mountains by now, beyond reach of even the FBI's best tracking efforts.

Prospects of justice eventually being done in the case of the murdered American agricultural advisers would appear to be considerably better. The American Embassy has been instrumental in producing the new witnesses against the implicated Salvadoran officer. There is a promising precedent. The embassy was also heavily and successfully involved in seeking justice for the four American churchwomen murdered in 1980.

In El Salvador in February 1984, I was told by an authoritative embassy source that the intense American pressure on Salvadoran authorities to find and convict the churchwomen's killers would produce results by May at the latest. He could not have been more on target. Five Salvadoran guardsmen were tried, convicted and sentenced in a two-day trial notable for the judge's opening statement that since the defendants were obviously guilty, that's how the jury would find them.

I also asked in February 1984 about Patricia Cuellar. The case was still open, the source said, but nothing new.

The latest reports prompted me to telephone the State Department's El Salvador desk with the same question. I got the same answer.

I don't know why information on Patricia Cuellar should be so difficult to come by. She was arrested by uniformed soldiers. Army and security personnel in possession of her keys later searched her home. Someone in authority somewhere must know something.

There is, to be sure, an important difference between her case and the others in question. The churchwomen became a national cause, with Congress conditioning aid to the Salvadoran government on the pursuit and punishment of their killers. The slaying of the Marines is a direct challenge to the American government. The agricultural advisers had an AFL-CIO connection.

But Patricia Cuellar has no special constituency pressing for justice.

Maybe in addition to how swift retribution for American victims of terror is or is not, we should be concerned about how selective it can be.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
June 30

New tax values have been mailed to local entities by the Scurry County Appraisal District — and the fact of a locally declining tax base has once again been driven home, it was reported Sunday.

Declining oil production is again the reason — although values which include farm and pasture land also took a dip this year.

Tax bases reported include: Scurry County, $2,228,927,907; WTC district, $2,222,890,768; Snyder ISD, $2,040,183,248; City of Snyder, $242,183,494; Ira ISD, $194,002,782; and Hermleigh ISD, $34,589,185.

MONDAY
July 1

Scurry County commissioners voted unanimously Monday to accept a recommendation from the county juvenile probation board related to a car-use allowance to be granted Juvenile Probation Officer Larry Thompson.

The court granted Thompson a mileage allowance of 20 cents per mile for all transportation related to the juvenile office.

Winners were reported Monday for 4-Hers from eight surrounding counties participating Saturday in the 1985 Scurry County 4-H Invitational Horse Show.

Scurry County entry Tommy Henderson was the "all around" winner for the Pee Wee Division of the show, those competing in the age group for 8 and under.

In the mare division, local Jana Kincheloe had the reserve champion.

The Sunday evening beating of Snyder woman Mary Elizabeth Davis, 2900 Ave. H, resulted in the indictment and subsequent arrest Monday morning of a 35-year-old man on charges of aggravated assault.

Don Odell Williams of 1007 29th St. was jailed at 11:45 a.m. after grand jurors returned the indictment against him.

TUESDAY
July 2

The twin budgets for the Scurry County Appraisal District were presented to the board Tuesday, reflecting an approximate 3 percent increase for appraisal work chores and an approximate 3 percent decrease in the district's tax collection duties.

The proposed 1986 appraisal budget is set at $374,300 and the collection budget at $60,922.

A prisoner being held in Scurry County Jail awaiting extradition back to Tennessee has filed suit against local district court and law officials claiming his imprisonment is a violation of his civil rights, it was reported Tuesday.

The legal document was written and filed by the suspect, Phillip Andre Harrison, 33.

The Towle Park National Guard Armory — traditionally a focal point for July 4th activities here — is still undergoing exterior renovation work, and with the celebration fast approaching, local taxing entities "pitched in" to help cordon-off the front and side areas still under repair, it was reported Tuesday.

Scurry County commissioners have donated some 700 ft. of chain-link fence which is being temporarily erected at the site.

WEDNESDAY
July 3

Citing other charges pending against him in Tennessee, Judge Weldon Kirk of Sweetwater denied a writ of habeas corpus presented on behalf of Phillip Andre Harrison in 132nd District Court here Wednesday.

Harrison, who has also authored and filed a federal court lawsuit alleging civil rights violations by district court and local law officials, had filed the writ in an effort to win release from jail.

THURSDAY
July 4

"Winners" from Thursday's July 4th celebration here included more than the thousands of people who thronged Towle Park for a range of "free" events.

It was a day of friendly competition for some, to include works entered in the Palette Club Art Show and kids competing for bike decorating awards and in the Jaycee fishing rodeo.

All who attended might be considered "winners," however, as a range of events were offered at no charge, courtesy of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce.

FRIDAY
July 5

In view of a declining tax base for the county overall, each of the three county school districts will be required to increase their respective tax rates this budget year just to maintain the same budget amount as 1984, it was reported Friday.

This fact was surfacing this week as local taxing entity's began receiving 1985 values from Scurry County Appraisal District authorities.

I think the cartoon in Sunday's paper (June 30) is in very poor taste.

Maybe if the news media had helped Carter instead of all the criticism heaped on him, he might have been a better president.

Enough is enough. Why don't we leave him alone.

Jennifer Brown weds Don Jenkins

Jennifer Brown became the bride of Don Allen Jenkins in a double ring ceremony Thursday, June 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the chapel of the First Baptist Church with the Rev. Miller Robinson, minister of the Colonial Hill Baptist Church, officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mona Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Karol Don Jenkins, all of Snyder.

The altar area was decorated with an arrangement of red silk flowers accenting a rainbow arch of votive candles gracefully supported on a brass pedestal.

Mrs. Troy Lilly served as the pianist. Musical selections included "We've Only Just Begun", "The Homecoming", "Let It Be Me" and the traditional wedding march.

Given in marriage by her brother, Jeffrey W. Brown of Kermit, the bride chose a traditional gown of white taffeta designd by Alfred Angelo. The fitted bodice featured an off-the-shoulder sweetheart neckline accented with a diagonal ruffle fashioned of hand rolled taffeta flowers and Schiffli embroidered lace. The ruffle crossed the bodice from the right shoulder to the left side of the natural waistline. Melon sleeves added interest to the bodice. The bouffant skirt swept into a cathedral length train.

A waist length veil of bridal illusion was gracefully secured to a tiara covered in Schiffli embroidery and adorned with hand rolled taffeta flowers and floating pearls.

To complete her ensemble, the bride carried a cascading bouquet of red and white flowers enhanced with baby's breath. The arrangement was secured to a white Bible with red and white silk ribbon streamers.

In keeping with tradition, the bride's gown was new and she carried her Bible for something old. Pearl earrings were borrowed from her aunt, Benita Nichols of Del Valle, and she wore a blue garter.

Patsy Brown of Kermit, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. She was attired in a tea length dress of embroidered red cotton eyelet. A matching cummerbund and butterfly sleeves enhanced the dress.

She carried a nosegay of white flowers secured with red and white silk ribbon streamers.

Karol Don Jenkins, father of the groom, served as his best man. The ushers were Steve Jenkins, brother of the bride, and Jeffrey Brown, brother of the groom. They escorted their mothers into the church prior to the opening ceremonies.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the Garden Room of the church building.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a traditional wedding cake accented with fresh red and white flowers. A bouquet of red carnations adorned with white baby's breath served as the centerpiece. A crystal punch bowl and appointments completed the setting.

Sonya Hanks and Barbara Miller, both of Snyder, and Monica Brown of Kermit, neice of the bride, presided at the table.

The groom's table was covered with an ecru cloth and featured a chocolate cake in the shape of a piano. The bride's bouquet served as the centerpiece. A brass coffee service and appointmets completed the setting.

Patsy Brown of Kermit, sister-in-law of the bride, and Cindy Jenkins of Snyder, sister-in-law of the groom, assisted the guests at the table.

Monica Brown of Kermit, neice of the bride, presided at the registration table.

Special guests were registered from Kermit, San Angelo, Albuquerque, N.M., Carrolton, Abilene, Colorado City, Lubbock, Del Valle, Austin and Snyder.

Following a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will make their home in Snyder.

Barbecue luncheon stages grand finale

The grand finale for the Fluvanna Reunion and Homecoming was held Saturday, June 8 at the Snyder Coliseum. Registration started at 9 a.m. and a barbecue luncheon was served to approximately 800 people, according to Orval Mathis, chairman of the event.

Following the luncheon, L.M. Dawson of Westbrook, former long-time superintendent of Fluvanna School, served as master of ceremony for the program and presented awards and plaques to six Fluvannaites.

E.O. Wedgeworth of Mineola received a plaque for being the teacher who taught the longest at Fluvanna School. Wallace Jones of Fluvanna received a plaque for being the earliest school board member.

Adriana Bilano traveled from Saudi Arabia in order to attend the reunion and homecoming. She received a plaque for traveling the farthest distance.

Velma Ball of Snyder had 10 children graduate from Fluvanna School and she received a plaque for this honor.

Francis Stavely Belew of Las Animas, Colo. received an award for co-authoring the school song and Edith McKanna of Fluvanna received a plaque for hosting the Old Settlers Tea.

Gilbert Mize of Perryton, former principal and teacher, spoke about past days in Fluvanna. Wedgeworth also spoke about times past and directed a singing group from the 1940's, The Bluebelles, in an impromptu song.

The program concluded with the group singing the school song, "All Hail to Thee, Fluvanna High".

The Old Settlers Tea was held at Rock Ledge Farm Friday, June 7 from 2-5 p.m. It featured old fashioned lemonade which was served from crocks on the terrace and tea cakes made from an old fashioned recipe.

A country and western fiddlers group provided entertainment and a square dance group performed authentic old time dances on the tree lined patio.

The hosts and hostesses were attired in country and western dress and were identified by corsages fashioned of red carnations tied with black and red ribbons using the colors of the Fluvanna School.

Following the tea, class parties were held around the community Friday night. They were hosted by M.J. Merritt of Snyder; Mike Herring, Sue Lloyd and James Beaver, all of Fluvanna and all former students of Fluvanna School.

50th anniversary celebrated here

Andrew and Lorena Schmidt hosted a dinner in their home Sunday, June 30 in honor of their 50th wedding anniversary. They were assisted by their daughter and her husband, Martha and Charles McCain, and by their grandchildren, Phillip and Marlo McCain.

The Schmidts were married July 3, 1935 in Copperas Cove. They moved to Snyder in November of 1937 and are members of the First United Methodist Church.

A total of 43 guests from Abilene, Austin, Brownwood, Copperas Cove, Early, Goldthwaite, Haskell, Lubbock, Snyder and Temple attended the celebration.

TAFFY FROSTING

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons molasses
¼ cup water
2 large egg whites

In a medium saucepan stir together over low heat the sugar, molasses and water until sugar dissolves. Bring to a boil; boil until syrup reaches 240 degrees on a candy thermometer or until a little of it, dropped into cold water, forms a soft ball that flattens on removal from water. Shortly before syrup is ready, beat egg whites until stiff; as you continue to beat, pour syrup into the whites. Continue beating until frosting holds its shap. Enough to fill and frost a 9-inch round 2-layer cake. Store in refrigerator.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

July 7, 1985

In the year ahead you will be able to resolve and change something of great importance that has had you stymied. Its ripple effect will benefit others as well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can be of great help today in teaching others how to look for the true values life offers, instead of the temporal things that bring only momentary gratification. Major changes are ahead for Cancers in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If present conditions are not to your liking, take positive steps today to change them to serve your needs. Be a victor, not a victim.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An arrangement you make today with someone older will work out to your liking. However, the results may not be immediately apparent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, strive to be industrious for a rewarding purpose. Focus your talents and energies on an objective that offers you a worthy trophy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends won't object to stepping aside and letting you take charge today. They'll know that what you organize will be a fun happening for everyone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't be hesitant to meet difficult situations head on today. You're well equipped to handle challenges that could send others scurrying for cover.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Benefits that friends may overlook will be obvious to you today. Strive for personal gain, but also be willing to share what you get with them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If there is something owed you that has yet to be repaid, don't be afraid to request it today. Now is a good time to collect.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're not suited for a follower's role today so don't slip into one through indifference. Assert yourself in situations where a strong leader is required.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will be effective at controlling others today if you do so as unobtrusively as possible. Implant the suggestion, then step back.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When you make your social plans today, be sure to include old friends along with your newer ones. The mix will turn out to be fun for everyone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're capable of outstanding achievements today, especially if the objective is materially meaningful. All you require is motivation.

Your Birthday

July 8, 1985

Goals and objectives that you previously thought were important will become of no consequence in the year ahead. However, the new target for which you aim will be truly meaningful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't agree to career arrangements that are contrary to your best interests just because you don't want to hurt the feelings of a sensitive associate. Major changes are ahead for Cancers in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless you are working on something artistic or creative, you're likely to be a slow starter today and not apt to get too much accomplished.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't boast to friends today about your recent good luck. One of your pals may be a bit jealous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be sure to put things back in their assigned places around your house today. Later, when you search for something you need, you may not find it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You think that one of your colleagues dislikes you, but today you'll be proven wrong. It was all in your imagination.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be doubly money-conscious if you make major purchases today. You could be talked into paying more for merchandise than it's worth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others will be willing to assist you today, provided they see you are making an effort to help yourself. If they're not convinced, you'll be on your own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Normally you're a rather positive thinker, but today you could be needlessly apprehensive about things that may never happen. Look for the sunny side.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to be sensible regarding expenditures today. Buy what you need, but don't waste funds on frivolous things or activities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be tolerant and forgiving today and adhere to your highest ideals. Do nothing that could reflect unfavorably upon your honor or reputation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A worrisome situation will work out to your advantage today, not to your detriment. Be hopeful and act in a positive manner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It will prove wise today to do business with people you dealt with previously and whom you know to be ethical. Be wary of strangers offering deals.

Alexander Graham Bell was granted the first basic patent for the telephone March 7, 1876. Bell was born in Scotland but went to Canada with his family as a young man. He conceived the idea for the first phone in Canada and the first transmission of speech through his invention took place there in 1876. On March 7, 1926, exactly 50 years after the Bell telephone was patented, the first radio-telephone conversation between New York and London took place.

The movie, with Patrick Swayze and William Smith in the lead roles, depicts the first invasion of American soil by enemy troops.

Saudi Arabian shop has unusual animals

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — In the bright sunshine, two lion cubs rest in their pen, leisurely swiping at lingering flies.

Several paddocks away, a herd of gazelles stands at attention, while beside them llamas chew their cud. Across the way, ostriches prance to the shrill call of peacocks.

These seenes could be from any zoo. Instead, all of these animals are for sale.

One of the more unusual pet stores in the world is operated here by Wesmi al-Wesmi. Called Beautiful Animals, the store was started about a year ago by the American-educated al-Wesmi and a partner.

Licensed by the Saudi ministries of both commerce and agriculture, Beautiful Animals is the first business of its kind in the Middle East, al-Wesmi claimed.

This pet shop does not offer the usual kittens, bunnies or guppies. Instead, it has tiger cubs for sale as well as chimpanzees, giraffes, elephants, wolves, vultures and hyenas.

As might be expected, Beautiful Animals caters to a somewhat exclusive clientele.

Although the days of some rich sheik coming in and buying four truckloads of elephants, gazelles, zebras, giraffes and ostriches to create his own miniature "African plains", have passed with the current economic downturn, Beautiful Animals is still doing a booming business.

There is no want of takers for lion or tiger cubs, both priced at about $2,400. Elephants also are a popular item. Depending on size and age, an elephant calf can range in price from $15,000 to $24,000, excluding air freight. Persian cats and gazelles are cheaper and are among the shop's more popular items.

"A lot of Saudis want to bring Africa home with them," al-Wesmi explained. "It's difficult for Saudi families to travel about, so this is one way they can see these animals. After all, everyone loves animals."

Many of the species al-Wesmi offers were in fact once part of the Arabian landscape.

According to naturalists, ostriches were still being sighted in the southeastern Arabian plains about 40 years ago, as were oryxes and cheetahs. Development and increased hunting pressure exterminated the last remnants of those species.

At Beautiful Animals, no animals are sold without a medical certificate. Upon arrival, all animals are immediately examined and treated by a veterinarian, al-Wesmi said.

In addition, animals are first given several weeks to acclimate to the kingdom's heat and dryness before being sold. Some animals adjust quickly while others, such as wallabies from Australia, require additional time, he said.

Before any animal is sold, a staff member inspects the prospective owner's flat or villa to check if proper facilities for keeping an exotic animal are present. If they are, the sale goes through after a special license is issued.

"Many of our buyers release their animals in large, fencedin enclosures," al-Wesmi said. "Ostriches are always funny to watch when they're set free. They almost seem to dance."

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My mother-in-law is 68. Two years ago her doctor found a corroded artery in her neck. Once a year she has a test done that is costly and gives the doctor information, but does not improve her condition. I heard that a new drug can dissolve these blood clots in patients who are potential stroke victims. Do you know about it?

DEAR READER — Often a corroded carotid artery can be reamed out surgically in order to re-establish adequate blood flow to the brain. Although the operation is helpful, it is dangerous and is seriously considered only for patients who either have extreme symptoms, like dizziness and blackouts, or who are in imminent danger of stroke — that is, when pieces of the arterial obstruction are poised to break off and be carried to the brain.

Perhaps your mother-in-law's doctor believes she has not yet progressed to the point where carotid surgery is appropriate. Although I do not know of any drug that consistently improves circulatory problems like hers, many experts recommend plain aspirin as a preventative. One adult aspirin taken twice a week may help to stabilize her condition and keep a potential problem from becoming a serious condition.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a heart attack about six weeks ago. I'm embarrassed to ask my doctor how soon I can have sex again. I'm 49 and was in good health until the heart attack. What do you think?

DEAR READER — Sex encompasses a broad array of activity, from rather passive ho-hum encounters to vigorously strenuous, lengthy gymnastics. I think that if you exercise discretion, you can participate more or less fully right from the time you leave the hospital.

Some medical centers are performing modified stress tests on cardiac patients before they are discharged. This activity is not nearly as much fun as sex (for people other than doctors) and it is more strenuous.

I recommend to my post-coronary patients that they enjoy sex whenever they feel like it ... but, please, be sensible. Non-coital sex is fine. If the couple chooses to have intercourse, I suggest the man-under position. If chest pain or undue shortness of breath appear, the engagement will obviously have to called off and the doctor consulted — the next morning is soon enough, thank you. Most heart patients are able to experience normal sexual enjoyment if they and their partners are willing to modify their behavior to adapt to the temporary disability.

The bigger problem I encounter has to do with heart-attack victims who are so apprehensive during their recovery that they lose the urge, the ability or both. This is a natural mental phenomenon and is accentuated by any of the many medicines prescribed after heart attack.

Short of a sexual marathon, I believe sex after hospitalization is an appropriate part of the recovery phase. I'd rather my coronary patients fool around in bed than smoke cigarettes. However, if you have a specific question, you can ask your doctor. You're not assured of a comprehensible answer, though, since many physicians know as much about sex as does the average first-grader. Come to think of it, maybe less. On this issue, you will probably get more mileage if you ask him, "Can I have sex?" If he reddens and mutters affirmatively, stop there and work out the details yourself.

After eight to 12 weeks of uncomplicated cardiac convalescence, the average coronary patient can resume all normal activity, providing he or she avoids lifting and straining. Given the lead time on this column and the date of your heart attack, you are now probably safe to engage in whatever sexual expression you choose, the only limits being propriety and the laws of your state.

Of all the defense mechanisms used by the average human being to avoid responsibility, one has worked so well for doctors that it is now as much a part of medical practice as are tax shelters and computer billing. This mechanism is called denial, and doctors are the quintessential proponents of it.

Take medical expenses, for example. Although most physicians acknowledge that medical care is becoming financially exorbitant, few doctors are willing to admit that the good old practitioner is a major cause of escalating costs. The real causes, they say, are hospitals and the "new technology" demanded by patients. This misperception is universal among doctors because it removes responsibility from the physician and places it on Them — uncaring hospital administrators and the eternally unsatisfied public.

But wait. Who decides when patients should enter hospitals and how long they should stay? Who orders astronomical constellations of X-rays and lab tests? Who determines which treatments are used? Who charges $1,500 for an operation and then hits you up for 50 bucks each time he sticks his head in the door of your hospital room to say hello? Your doctor, folks.

To make matters worse, physicians rarely know the costs of the services and drugs that are ordered. Incredibly, we don't even care. An M.D. who speculates heavily in buffalo-hide futures can rattle off three weeks of high-low figures. He knows the cost of a new Maserati Biturbo without even thinking. The amount he socked away in his IRA and yesterday's closing price of his computer stock are irrevocably programmed into his brain ... but he can't for the life of him remember how much a blood chem-screen costs, although he orders them every day on patients.

I am not familiar with any doctors who know what their associates charge. On second thought, maybe some surgeons are privy to this privileged information. However, the average physician would no more ask another doctor what he charges for an office exam than he would inquire how much Scotch the old boy puts away after hours. If you really want to make a doctor suffer, ask him precisely what the hospital radiologist is paid for reading an abdominal ultrasound exam or how much the anesthesiologist will stick you for a spinal. You may get a figure if you ask what your doctor himself charges for an office call, but you'll be put in a class with E.T. if you demand that he tell you what his surgical colleagues make from hernia operations.

As an ordinary consumer, you price things when you shop. You're entitled to an estimate before you agree to have a valve job on your car. When you buy heating oil, you know what the stuff costs per gallon before it's delivered. When you buy a sportscoat or dress, the price is on the sleeve. In short, you're able to plan ahead and know the extent of your commitment.

However, in a hospital, it's all very vague, very mystical and unspoken. There are hidden charges, too — everything from Band-Aids to blood-drawing fees.

If you want to feel the hair rise on your neck, read a hospital bill. Doctors occasionally read them and are astounded, but we soon forget. We deny. It's all for the good of the patient, you know. And the doctor doesn't want to give up the right to spend your money as he sees fit. We want to stay in control. We insist that you do what we think is best for you. So it becomes the fault of the hospital — or the moon or Japanese imports — that charges are high. Forget that the doctor was responsible for them in the first place. We are experts at passing the buck — literally.

I've conceived of a method to fix all this. First, every patient needs an itemized bill. More important, the fees for separate services ought to be listed on all lab requisitions so that doctors are constantly reminded how much each test costs. Finally, a patient could be entitled to a pre-admission estimate of hospital expense — in advance, in a non-emergency — computed by the doctor.

Of course, the medical establishment would scream bloody murder. Then, while they're having conniption fits, ask the doctors to pay a portion of the charges over and above the estimate. Boom.

Hey! C'mon, guys, take it easy; I was only kidding ...

'Dear Tabby' communicates with animals

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Phyliss Moline calls herself the "Dear Tabby" of the animal kingdom.

A self-styled psychic, Mrs. Moline, 31, believes she can solve animals' problems by reading their minds. She calls it "telepet," or pet telepathy.

"Most humans are aware only that their pet gives them pleasure, or pain at times, and aren't conscious of the dynamics of what takes place between themselves and the animal," she says. "We communicate with our pets not just verbally, with a look or gesture. We also send them mental images."

And although veterinarians and others may be skeptical, Mrs. Moline has done readings on hundreds of animals — from cats and dogs to birds and boa constrictors.

Pet owners pay $10 to learn why their cat is depressed, why their dog keeps wetting the rug, or even if their animals are suffering from internal physical ailments.

Some of her customers want to see if she can learn things about them through their pets, she said. Others bring pets in "to find out what they're feeling or just for curiosity."

Mrs. Moline works out of Transpersonal Counseling Center — a Nashville office complete with couch, desk and small Buddha statue — with her partner, the Rev. Donald Wageck, an ordained United Methodist minister.

She and Wageck opened the center 1½ years ago and advertise only by word of mouth. In addition to the "telepet" readings, the two counsel people and conduct regular healing seminars to discuss such things as past and future lives and spiritual development.

In her work with animals, Mrs. Moline says her chief task is to "interpret the pets' feelings."

"Sometimes they're lonely, they don't understand something in the environment or why their owners leave them alone during the day," she said. "It ranges from emotional to real physical problems."

The telepathy process with pets is similar to that with humans, Mrs. Moline said. "I link my mind to their mind, my soul to their soul and then get sensations and feelings," she said.

"If a cat, for instance, feels sad, I feel sad and then the cat sends a picture which I interpret. Most dogs are in black and white and cats in color."

Camp Fire group is changing

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A group of children roast marshmallows in a vacant New York City lot — modern day adventurers swapping tales in a forest of skyscrapers.

Hundreds of girls and boys take over a shopping mall overnight in Reading, Pa., stretching out their bed rolls for the ultimate suburban campout.

Times have changed, and so has Camp Fire Inc., an organization celebrating its 75th anniversary this year.

In 1975, Kansas City-based Camp Fire adopted a sweeping "New Day" modernization program calling for the creation of a new coeducational organization. The once exclusively female youth group now says 20 percent of its members are male.

But despite dramatic changes, officials say Camp Fire's motto — "Wohelo" or "Work, Health, Love" — and mission remain the same.

"The founders felt that girls should be involved in influencing the health and welfare of the community," said Carol Bitner, Camp Fire's acting national executive director. "Another basic tenet was that girls should be encouraged to find beauty in daily living, in everyday common events."

The Camp Fire tradition grew out of a series of events beginning in 1910 — the same year the Boy Scouts of America was incorporated as a national organization and two years before the creation of the Girl Scouts.

In Thetford, Vt., William Chauncy Langdon organized a group of "Camp Fire Girls" as a female alternative to the Boy Scouts. Near South Casco, Maine, Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick and his wife, Charlotte, were conducting the second season of their camp for girls.

As the summer of 1910 ended, the Gulicks, Langdon and others decided to form a national organization for girls. Informal Camp Fire groups associated with churches and schools quickly popped up across the nation — even though the first local council wasn't formed until six years later in Kansas City.

Gulick opposed the council system, believing instead that local group leaders should report directly to the organization's headquarters in New York. However, the idea caught on and other councils were formed in Chicago, Minneapolis and Seattle.

Since then, thousands of women have grown up in the Camp Fire program. Like other national youth groups, Camp Fire saw its membership plummet in the 1970s — dropping from a peak of 633,000 in 1969 to fewer than 300,000 members four years later. Since then, officials have managed to hold the line slightly above the 300,000 mark.

Veterans focus of new publication

by The Associated Press

A Vietnam veteran, tired of the negative image that still dogs his fellow veterans, is starting a news service that will stress their continuing contributions to the nation.

"We're not going to counteract it (the negative image) so much as present veterans in a more positive light," said retired Lt. Col. Chuck Allen of Fayetteville, N.C. "The human aspect doesn't always get picked up. It isn't all delayed stress syndrome."

Allen already publishes the National Vietnam Veterans Review, a monthly newspaper with a similar mission and about 4,000 subscribers around the nation. Its stories are by and about Vietnam veterans, who Allen believes have been wrongly portrayed elsewhere as unstable and violence-prone.

The Veterans Press Syndicate will encompass veterans from other wars as well, he said.

"Not all the issues going on involve only the Vietnam veteran," said Allen, who spent 24 years in the Army — including six in Vietnam. "Our Washington bureau will have three people, and they'll be going up the (Capitol) Hill, checking on veterans bills and the VA (Veterans Administration).

"Our target audience is the veteran and his family — that's about 80 million people," said Allen. "There's a big market out there."

Allen said the news service is planned in three phases. During the first year, it will build the print media capabilities with 35 to 40 correspondents around the nation. Allen hopes to issue weekly news releases on veterans and national defense issues to 6,500 media outlets — major newspapers, college veterans publications and veterans groups' newspapers.

A monthly package will include feature stories, movie and book reviews, photos and cartoons in camera-ready form, he said.

The second year, Allen hopes to provide tapes, spot reports and narratives to radio stations.

Dear Abby

Mom Knocks Daughter Down To Prevent Her Growing Up

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Once again I have come away from a visit with my mother feeling severely depressed and inadequate. I can't remember the last time she gave me a compliment. She always finds something to criticize no matter how good I look or what I have achieved.

I could recite one example after another, but your column isn't long enough. The most recent was last week when I was a bridesmaid at my cousin's wedding. I wore a beautiful gown that showed off my slim figure. My hair and makeup were professionally done and everyone was telling me how fantastic I looked. My mother came up to me and said, "You look horrible—you're too skinny!"

I have cried my eyes out from her insults. Abby, I want so desperately to love her and feel guilty when I don't, which is most of the time. I'm 25, self-supporting and have lots of friends. What is the matter with my mother? Or is it me?

SOMEWHERE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SOMEWHERE: It's both of you. Your mother refuses to recognize that you are a grown woman, and her constant criticism is her way of controlling you—to assure herself that she still has power over you. And even though you are self-supporting, you are still her "little girl," trying to win her approval. You could benefit from some counseling to help cut those apron strings without feeling guilty.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: What should be done in regard to a wedding gift for a relative who marries twice in four years?

I gave a substantial cash gift to a nephew when he entered into an ill-advised marriage four years ago. As expected, it bombed before the first year was over.

This nephew is "in love" again and is getting married in a couple of months. His bride has never been married and is having a big church wedding.

I and several of my relatives are in a quandary about what kind of gift to give for the second time around. These second marriages are becoming a little too frequent to suit me. I'm considering giving a small household appliance—about one-fourth the value of my first gift. Or maybe it should be just a nice congratulatory card?

PERPLEXED IN IOWA

DEAR PERPLEXED: I can understand your reluctance to pop for another substantial gift, but please consider the bride, whose only "sin" is being No. 2. A card will do, if that's all you can afford, but I vote for a small household appliance.

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law passed away five years ago. Eight months later, his widow passed on. They were both well into their 80s and are buried in the family plot side by side.

As of now, their graves have no markers, which I think is disgraceful. I have mentioned this to my husband several times, but he hasn't done anything about it. My husband and his brother are the only children. I have discussed this with my sister-in-law, and she feels the same way I feel about it.

As I understand it, my brother-in-law wants to put something on his father's headstone, crediting him with having served in the Army overseas for four years, but he doesn't know how to word it.

I can't see where it's important—or even proper—to put that on a headstone. All I see on headstones in modern cemeteries is the person's name, date of birth and date of death.

Do you think my sister-in-law and I should go ahead and select a headstone and have it put up? Five years in an unmarked grave is long enough.

TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: Give your husbands a deadline (no pun intended). And if they don't get the job done, you and your sister-in-law should do it.

Arizona farmer grows seeds

ELFRIDA, Ariz. (AP) — Roger Major is hooked on love grass — not the kind of grass the cops like to confiscate, but the kind cattle like to munch.

Major, who farms north of Elfrida, said he thinks he might be the only commercial grower of irrigated Cochise love grass seed in the world. The love grasses are natives of South Africa. The heat- and drought-tolerant species have been brought to the United States to help revegetate deteriorating rangeland and abandoned farmlands.

Range-grass seed fell into the right hands when it met up with Roger Major. Raised on a Washington state dairy farm, he majored in agriculture in college. He graduated from the University of Arizona in 1972 with a Ph.D. in agronomy. His specialty was seed physiology.

After he graduated he went to work on a ranch near Elfrida "to get some practical experience." The ranch was raising test plots of range grasses, and Major was in charge. The ranch discontinued its experiment, but when Major moved on to his own farm he remembered the tough grass.

"It's not a big moneymaker," he said, but it fits in with his diversified farming operation and requires little water.

"Economics have been tough," Major said of farming, but the fact that his family can work it together helps. His wife, Barbara, and their five children help out by "pruning, packing squash, whatever. We kind of do it together," Major said.

The baby sleeps in the family van while the other children, the oldest of whom is 10, work in the fields during busy times when they're out of school. Major has one full-time employee.
