

Police free Dozier from Red Brigades

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Police commandos burst into an apartment in this northern Italian city today and freed U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier as terrorists from the Red Brigades held a pistol to his head, Italian and U.S. officials said.

The rescue ended his 42-day ordeal in a "people's prison."

Ten policemen broke into the apartment and pounced on one of the terrorists who was holding a pistol with a silencer pointed at Dozier, Padua police chief Gianfranco Corrias told a news conference.

Corrias said five suspects were arrested and no shots were fired. Earlier, National Security Adviser William Clark told reporters in Washington that police fired one shot as they stormed the apartment.

The general, who was wearing a track suit, was tied up and being held in a tent in the apartment, Corrias said. One of the police who raided the apartment told the Italian news agency ANSA "we found Dozier barefoot but in good condition."

"HE'S A BIT tired and a bit shaken by events but in good health," said a U.S. Embassy official in Rome.

Dozier, 50, was taken to a hospital at the NATO base in nearby Vicenza for evaluation, spokeswoman Staff Sgt. Nancy Bouchard said.

A special commando unit of the Italian security police had located the apartment Wednesday night but held off the raid until daytime for fear a night attack might endanger the 50-year-old general's life.

Five terrorists holding Dozier gave up without resistance, police said. All were Italians.

According to U.S. officials, Italian police in recent days cracked the Red Brigades terrorist "column" which operated in the area of Verona, where Dozier was kidnapped Dec. 17.

"It was a textbook operation. They cracked the column, the people talked and they followed up every single lead. They did it right and it worked," said a U.S. official, who asked not to be identified.

Shortly after being taken to police headquarters, Dozier telephoned his wife, Judith, who left their apartment in Verona and went to West Germany, about 10 days ago, U.S. officials said.

The terrorists, several of whom were dressed as plumbers when they kidnapped the NATO general, transported Dozier 40 miles east, in the direction to Venice, to this city.

Dozier is the highest-ranking U.S. military official at the NATO base in Verona.

THE WHITE HOUSE said President Reagan was awakened at 6:50 a.m. EST, by William Clark, director of the National Security Council and the president's national security adviser.

"A lot of prayers have been answered. It's difficult to express gratitude to all those who assisted in his release," deputy press secretary Peter Rousset quoted Reagan as saying.

Dozier's sister, Joan Townsend, of Alvin, Texas, told a Houston radio station that she had clung to the hope he would be rescued. "We got used to the hopes. I did have a sense of calm all along that this would turn out positive," said Mrs. Townsend.

A Vatican spokesman expressed "relief and satisfaction" at the release of Dozier.

ANSA said word of Dozier's release was relayed to the head of Rome police by the prefect of Verona, the local representative of the national government, who has directed the probe of Dozier's abduction.

INTERIOR MINISTER Virgilio Rognoni immediately informed President Sandro Pertini, Premier Giovanni Spadolini and U.S. Ambassador Maxwell M. Rabb.

Spadolini, who was in Palermo, Sicily, addressing a national mayor's association meeting, interrupted his speech to tell the officials, "The fight against terrorism has recorded a new success. The soldier of a friendly nation has been returned to his loved ones, to his family."

The Italian Parliament was in session at the time and the deputies burst into applause when the session was interrupted by the news.

Ambassador Rabb said he had expressed "enormous gratitude" to Italian officials for the way the investigation was conducted.

Word of Dozier's release was greeted with cheers at the U.S. Embassy in Rome where a round-the-clock crisis desk kept track of developments and coordinated U.S. Defense, State Department and NATO efforts to help the Italians find the general.

An undisclosed number of U.S. Defense and State Department specialists, using electronic monitoring equipment, assisted Italian police during the long manhunt. However, a U.S. official said there had been no specific U.S. assistance in the final operation that led to Dozier's release.

During the long captivity, Italian and U.S. officials emphasized they wouldn't negotiate with the Red Brigades because of their hard-line policy against dealing with terrorists.

However, NATO officials confirmed earlier this month that unidentified "friends" of Dozier were offering a $2 million reward for information leading to the general's release.

On Monday, a Rome newspaper retrieved a Polaroid photo of the general, and authorities said it was "the most hopeful sign" since his disappearance that Dozier was alive.

THE PHOTO SHOWED the general, with a thick beard, in front of a flag with a five-pointed star, symbol of the Red Brigades, and holding a propaganda statement. A communique that accompanied the photo neither set demands for Dozier's release nor gave any information about him.

During the 42-day hunt, police were plagued by a series of false leads and hoaxes. Investigators speculated some of the red herrings might have been arranged by terrorist sympathizers to slow down the search.

At least twice Dozier was reported to have been killed, and once authorities partially drained a lake looking for his body.

Dozier's sister elated with rescue news

ALVIN, Texas (AP) — Joan Townsend, sister of rescued Air Force Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, said today she felt all along her brother would survive his ordeal with Italian terrorists.

"I was surprised when I got the call this morning — I was sound asleep — but I felt it was going to work out all right," said Mrs. Townsend, who said she was awakened by a radio station about 5:15 a.m.

"A local reporter called and read the communique to me and that certainly got me awake," she said from her apartment in this small town just south of Houston.

She was worried at times during her brother's six-week ordeal — "Was he warm, was he being taken care of physically?"

"I figured he would be able to handle the emotional and psychological part," said Mrs. Townsend.

Midland fails to gain TIC approval for parking garage

Not paying filing fee contributed to application being sent back for further study

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland failed to gain approval of the Texas Industrial Commission on its application for an 11-story parking garage, according to a member of that commission, Midlander Joe Kloesel.

Kloesel explained to the Midland Chamber of Commerce board of directors during its monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon that late last week the TIC had sent the application back to the staff for study.

Also reviewed at the meeting in the chamber's conference room was a restructuring plan involving the committees.

Despite some reports late last week that the garage, to be built with low-interest bonds, had been approved, Kloesel said the commission decided it wouldn't place itself in the position "of being the soul and conscience of any community in Texas."

INSTEAD OF TRYING to determine if the projects outlined in the applications will be located within or adjacent to a blighted area, Kloesel said the applications will be reviewed on the basis of whether or not they follow the TIC rules as stated in the law. He noted that Midland also had failed to pay the filing fees and that contributed to its being sent back to the staff.

"The staff is reviewing all the applications. If Midland's application fits the rules as written, then it will be approved," Kloesel added.

He noted that no application had been approved at the meeting.

Larry Bell, new chamber president, noted the organization is "embarking on a new era with a new executive director and a new general manager."

CHANGES IN COMMITTEES include combining the highway and aviation committees into a transportation committee; changing the petroleum committee into the oil and gas committee; and turning the Midland Area Sales Team's direction inward.

Grant Billingsley, new general manager, said MAST will try to "maintain a relationship with the existing industries and keep them on track."

In the past, MAST had tried to entice outside businesses to locate in Midland.

Representing the Board of Realtors, Dene Kelly noted that $185 million in housing was sold last year, with most of the sales in the single family category.

"We don't have a housing shortage," she said. "It's here if you can afford it." County Commissioner Durward Wright added, "I heard that only 3 percent of the population here can afford to buy an average-priced home." The average price he tossed out was $90,000.

Earlier, he had reported that the county commissioners have been reviewing from one to three plans for new developments — mostly mobile home — at each of their twice-a-month meetings. One study he saw reported the county contains 1,800 to 2,400 single family units, Wright added.

BILLINGSLEY ALSO reported on Midland's growth, noting that building permits for 1981 broke a new record with $311 million in valuations. The previous year, which also had set a new record, was $138 million. "That's a 124 percent increase in permits," he said.

That figure in building permits "has been getting in national publications," Billingsley said, pointing to recent stories about the Tall City in U.S. News & World Report and Forbes magazines.

Midland also almost tripled its permits for new housing with 3,650 being issued compared to 1,300 in 1980. That figure includes single family residences and apartments.

Employment in Midland, he continued, rose by 10.5 percent in 1981.

Steve Davidson with the Midland City Council reviewed the proposals for a $47 million bond issue and noted these items "are due mostly to the growth that we're all familiar with and we see everyday. He said the "list isn't in the final stage, but I don't think you'll see much change in the items."

Those items include a sewage disposal system, additions to Midland Regional Airport, renovations and additions to three city buildings, building of two fire substations, upgrading streets and putting in new water and sewer lines.

Doug Henson, a chamber board member, said he felt the items "are a must list. It's do or die."

Council decides to step up study on effluent discharge

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council decided to proceed with studies on J. "Timber" Floyd's land southeast of the city and to help pay for the cost of stepping up the timetable during a continuation of its regular meeting Wednesday.

The council had recessed that item during its Tuesday meeting and held off on a decision until the next afternoon in City Hall Council Chambers.

In addition, the council discussed attending a hearing Monday in Austin before the Texas Water Commission, which is an agency of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

Mayor G. Thane Atkins said Floyd has employed a specialist to evaluate how his land could be used for agricultural purposes. To speed up the timetable will involve more money and the city agreed to pay part of that cost.

FLOYD'S ACREAGE is being eyed as the location where effluent from the sewage treatment plant will be disposed. The project is the object of $18 million allocated on a preliminary list of items for a spring bond issue.

The hearing in Austin will allow the city to submit data on irrigating additional land in the vicinity of the sewage treatment plant with effluent, according to John Lowe, director of public utilities. This data will explain what kind of crops will be grown.

The commission already temporarily granted a permit for this additional irrigation but the hearing will determine if the act continues. Lowe said the permit, if granted, will be issued only for 24 months. By the end of that period, he hopes to see the new disposal system in place because the city will have to cease using the farmers' land for irrigation.

The additional land amounts to 1,603 acres which are owned by several farmers. Currently, the city is irrigating 1,380 acres with effluent.

IN EARLIER MEETINGS, the council had noted that because of the cooler temperatures during winter, less water is needed for irrigation. For that reason, less effluent is used by the farmers and the effluent has "stacked up" in the holding ponds and threatened to break the dikes. If this happened, Midland Draw would be flooded.

The disposal plan to pump the effluent to Floyd's land should eliminate that problem for at least 30 years, the council was told Tuesday.

Glen Doty with Black & Veatch engineering firm suggested his company proceed with setting up a construction schedule in connection with the Floyd disposal project. This schedule would be presented to the water commission at its Monday hearing if requested, he noted.

Atkins pointed out that the disposal project "is up to the people of Midland. The commission should be aware of this."

TALK OF THE schedule prompted City Attorney Joe Nussle to comment: "They (water board) don't have any business trying to legislate in the permit what's going to happen in Midland. They're trying to tie that permit into staying on that schedule."

The Floyd plan, according to Councilman Steve Davidson, "is the most practical and economical way to dispose of water that will benefit everyone involved."

Police nap robbery suspects after off-duty officer spots car

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Two men wanted in connection with a westside robbery Wednesday afternoon were in custody this morning after being spotted by an off-duty police officer who gave chase in her personal squad car — the second such arrest in less than two weeks.

Being held at the city jail today were two Fort Worth men, ages 21 and 17, who are charged with the robbery of 17-year-old Jeffery Wood in the driveway of his home at 4701 Brookdale about 2:20 p.m. Wednesday.

Wood told officers he was working on his car when two men in a beige Monte Carlo pulled into the driveway and asked directions for a particular street. As Wood leaned over to talk to the men, one of them grabbed him by the shirt and threatened to beat him up if he didn't turn over his money.

Wood said he gave them $140 and the men drove off. A friend of Wood's witnessed the robbery and took down the license number of their car.

Officers Kay Therwanger and Dale Lester had just gotten off duty at Air Terminal and were heading into Midland in Ms. Therwanger's patrol car when they heard a police broadcast of the robbery and saw the wanted car westbound on U.S. Highway 80 near the Schaler Rolls Royce dealership.

Ms. Therwanger turned and started pursuing the car after the driver

Emerald Airlines terminates service to Midland airport

After less than two months of serving Midland Regional Airport, Emerald Airlines has pulled out, according to Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city.

Although their termination notice specified Jan. 29 as the last day of service, Banks believes they stopped last Friday. "Someone had tried to get reservations on Saturday and couldn't get them," he said.

Emerald Airlines, an Austin-based commuter line, initiated Midland service Dec. 1.

In the letter notifying Banks of its termination, Emerald stated that Southwest Airlines provides five flights a day between Midland and Austin and adequately serves the market for San Antonio and Austin. Banks said he checked with Southwest and the flights daily to Austin number three. And San Antonio service goes through Dallas.

One of the major reasons he believes Emerald pulled out is due to low passenger load at Midland. The commuter line carried 340 passengers during December.

"On its two daily flights out of Midland, Emerald utilized F-27s, which carried 44 passengers. And then it switched to the 35-passenger DC-9s," said Banks. "It just wasn't economical for that airplane."

"Another problem facing Emerald, he added, is that it couldn't obtain the landing and take-off time slots it wanted at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Duke professor traces shroud to 6th century

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Duke University professor on Wednesday presented photos as evidence that the Shroud of Turin existed as long ago as the 6th century, which would make the cloth 800 years older than previously thought.

Dr. Alan D. Whanger said he made the findings by accident, after he compared the image of the face of Jesus on the shroud with an image of Jesus on a Byzantine coin from the 7th century and another on an icon from the 6th century.

"My evidence indicates that the icon and the coin were copied from the facial imprint on the shroud more than 800 years before the shroud turned up in France," Whanger said, noting that there is documentation of the shroud since that time.

Debate has centered over whether the shroud was the burial cloth of Jesus Christ. The cloth, which is preserved in a cathedral in Turin, Italy, is a piece of linen 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide. It bears the imprint of a man who was crucified.

Whanger, a professor of psychiatry who studies shrouds as a hobby, said he used polarized light and other photographic techniques to match the image from the shroud with the face on the objects.

He said separate historical evidence refers to a shroud called the Mandylion, which was believed to be a life image on cloth rather than a death image on a shroud. He said the shroud was folded and mounted on a frame at that time so that only the face showed.

HE SAID THAT SOME time between 525 A.D. and 545 A.D. the Mandylion was found in the wall in the ancient city of Edessa in Turkey.

After the shroud's discovery, Whanger said artistic depictions of Christ changed drastically.

Whanger used polarized filters to blend photos of the coin and the icon with an enlarged image of the head on the shroud. Through the process, he said he established more than 80 matching points between the shroud and the coin and more than 45 matching points with the icon.

He said he believed the similarities are as reliable in identifying the shroud as are fingerprints for identifying a person.

The coin, which is about the size of a nickel, was issued about 690 A.D. during the reign of Justinian II. The icon, located in St. Catherine's Monastery on Mount Sinai, is believed to have been painted about 590 A.D.

Among the similarities, Whanger said, are a swelling of the right eye he believes was caused by a blow to the face of the crucified man, configuration of the eyebrows, disproportionately large eyes and markings on the pupil of the eyes believed to have been made by coins placed over the dead man's eyes before he was buried.

The shroud's history is well documented from about 1357 A.D., when it was in the possession of Geoffrey de Charney of France.

At a news conference Wednesday, Whanger showed a series of slides depicting Christ through the ages and focusing on changes after the Mandylion was discovered.

"APPARENTLY THE people who saw this (Mandylion) were convinced that's what it was," Whanger said, referring to the fact the image was presented as that of Christ.

"It profoundly affected the artistic depictions of Christ."

St. Mary's receives $7.5 million

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — St. Mary's University has received its largest gift since it was founded in 1852, a $7.5 million donation from the Kennedy Foundation.

The Kennedy grant will be used to build and furnish a new 62,000 square-foot, two-story law library, enabling it to increase its holdings to 250,000 volumes, university officials said.

The foundation was established more than 20 years ago by the late Sarita Kennedy East, wife of South Texas rancher Arthur East, in memory of her parents John G. and Maria Stella Turcotte Kennedy.

Ironically, the donation was the foundation's first charitable contribution because of 20 years of litigation over membership in the foundation that was ended last summer by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"This gift represents a significant endorsement of the academic merit of St. Mary's University, and especially our law school's long tradition of serving South Texas," said the Rev. David Paul, president, at a Wednesday ceremony at La Mansion Hotel on the banks of the San Antonio River, location of the original St. Mary's Law School.

"The Kennedy Foundation's deep and genuine commitment to the highest standards of legal training will be a major thrust for our future growth as a university," Paul said.

Foundation trustees Kenneth Oden Sr. and Judge Lee H. Lytton Jr. jointly announced the gift at the ceremony.

Dallas firm files against kidnapers

DALLAS (AP) — Two Britons who sought to charter a yacht to Barbados have been accused by a development company of causing almost $40,000 damage to the vessel during the kidnaping of one of England's most infamous robbers last year.

A Dallas company, National Development Co. Inc., is seeking restitution for repairing the schooner's hull and interior and $100,000 in damages in a lawsuit filed Tuesday.

Company officials say the 59-foot boat was used in the kidnaping of Ronald Biggs, who was sentenced to 30 years in prison for masterminding the $7 million "Great Train Robbery" in 1963. He escaped to Brazil two years later, but avoided deportation because of a legal technicality.

United Way elects new board of directors

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

United Way of Midland Inc. elected its 1982-83 board of directors and officers and made campaign award presentations at its annual meeting and awards luncheon Wednesday at the Midland Hilton.

Awards were presented to W.P. Franklin, United Way president, and George W. Bush, United Way campaign chairman, for the time and effort they contributed to the 1982 campaign.

"This has been an outstanding year for United Way," Bush said. "Probably this year has meant more to me than any other. The best part of this job is giving the recognition to the people who went out to achieve our goal."

The 1982 goal was $1.25 million; however, $1,407,845.18 has been raised to date, approximately $57,895 over the goal.

"Midlanders have assured our city's human needs will be met for another year," Bush said, referring to money raised.

IN THE president's message, Franklin thanked all the volunteers who "surpassed an ambitious goal."

"Once again you have demonstrated the United Way does work in Midland, and I am proud, as all of us should be, to have been part of that effort.

Recognition was given to all companies and employees that contributed to the campaign with special thanks to Sara E. Smith, executive director.

All awards are given to employee groups in recognition of employee contributions to the 1982 campaign.

The Gold Award was given to organizations achieving 90 percent or better fair share contributions. They are Casa de Amigos, IBM Corporation, Salvation Army, Frank See Chevrolet Inc., and United Way of Midland Inc.

The Silver Award, for 80 percent or better fair share contributions, went to Lone Star Abstract & Title Company.

For fair share contributions of 70 percent or better, awards went to American Red Cross, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Lario Oil & Gas and Texas Instruments.

OTHER presentations included the achievement awards presented to employee groups for contributions of 30 percent or better.

The business meeting included the nominating committee report and the election of directors and officers.

The new directors for the three-year term ending in 1985 are Daryl Faris, Linda Isbell, Dan Mendell III, Rodney Robinson, Norma Short, Jeff Smith, Robert Thomas and Ricardo Torres. Re-elected were Carol Orem, Jim Servatius, Schatzie Tighe and James Tom.

William H. "Bill" Collins was elected to the board for a one-year term.

Officers elected for a one-year term included Jack Steele, president;

Harrell Feldt, president elect; the Rev. Joseph Schley, vice president; Jane Wolf, vice president; Leon Jefferson, treasurer; and Ruth Bell, secretary.

United Way highlights in 1981 included meeting with Big Brother/Big Sister representatives to explore possible funding. United Way provided $15,000 to the organization as a start-up grant and applied for additional grants from foundations.

ALSO, AS a result of the transient problem, United Way approved a $2,000 grant for Midland Association of Churches' emergency assistance program.

In addition, United Way worked with the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children to help the group prepare its application for agency status.

Illinois dragon slayer faces prison term

CHICAGO (AP) — He was the dragon slayer who battled industrial polluters and corporate giants, a fair-haired boy with enduring ballot-box appeal. For years, William J. Scott seemed nearly invincible in his public duels.

Scott, Illinois' attorney general for a dozen years, is a dapper, handsome politician who mowed down almost every challenger who got in his way. He seemed destined for bigger roles in Republican Party politics.

As the state's top legal officer, Scott also was an innovator. With the power of government behind him, he took on the big companies — General Motors, Commonwealth Edison and U.S. Steel.

But in 1980 he was convicted by a federal court jury of underreporting his income for 1972. Last week, the U.S. Supreme Court, without comment, refused to consider Scott's appeal.

IT WAS probably the last stop on the appeals path and increases the likelihood that Scott, now 55, will soon head for a federal penitentiary to serve a year-and-a-day sentence.

Following the high court's ruling, Jeremy Margolis, an assistant U.S. attorney on the prosecution team, said, "A corrupt public official has been judged by his peers, convicted and properly removed from office."

Margolis has said he would ask U.S. District Judge Marvin Aspen on Friday to set a surrender date for Scott.

Scott always denied any guilt. But the high court's refusal to hear the case was a clear response to Scott's protestations that the tax indictment was nothing more than "incredible harassment" and that the trial was engineered to ruin his future.

Scott's image as attorney general was of a crusader for the interests of the people, a consumer protector who filed a $34 million suit against General Motors and who sued U.S. Steel and the city of Lake Michigan. The Milwaukee suit is still pending but in June, a federal jury ruled GM must pay $550 to each of more than 10,000 purchasers of 1977 Oldsmobiles whose cars contained Chevrolet engines.

DURING his 10-week trial, prosecutors stressed what they called Scott's "secret life." He allegedly hoppedcotted from one exotic spot to another using campaign cash he didn't report as income.

Prosecutors said Scott traveled from the Caribbean to the Mediterranean to the Riviera and spent about 400 days out of state from 1970 to 1976, including travels with a young woman after he remarried, Margolis said at the time that Scott "traveled around the world like a sheik."

To show Scott had non-taxable sources of income, the defense produced witnesses who said they gave him thousands of dollars in cash gifts, sometimes handing him hundred-dollar bills on the street.

On March 18, 1980, Scott lost the Republican primary for the U.S. Senate.

The next day, a federal court jury found Scott guilty of deliberately understating his federal income tax returns for 1972.

"Throughout this ordeal I have attempted to conduct myself with dignity and respect for the law. I shall continue to do so."

Brady gives thumbs up sign in first real public appearance

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James Brady gave a thumbs up sign at a Washington Press Club "Salute to Congress" dinner, his first real public appearance since he was shot in the head during an assassination attempt on President Reagan.

Brady and his wife, Sarah, received the good wishes of the president Wednesday in a closed-circuit television. Brady received a standing ovation from the crowd of more than 1,200 Washington journalists, members of Congress and political figures.

Reagan, who appeared at the club's annual dinner last year, made a few jokes during the short closed-circuit TV presentation.

He said he wasn't telling jokes any more and then added, "They called me as an eyewitness at that creationism trial."

He said his staff equates congressional sessions to some of their budget meetings. "Someone gets up to speak and nobody listens, nobody says anything and then everybody disagrees," he said.

Brady is undergoing what is expected to be a long period of therapy and recovery from the head wound he received March 30. He appeared earlier at the re-opening of the White House press room after repairs.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer reportedly will build the first golf course on mainland China later this year.

Palmer's company will hire about 4,000 Chinese to help build the course in Canton, the Orlando Sentinel Star reported Wednesday.

The golf pro said he's hoping the course will be finished by October. Details of the course are still being worked out, the newspaper said.

Palmer said he met with Chinese officials at Bay Hill Club near Orlando this week and agreed on a contract.

Palmer visited Canton for a tour of the proposed site part of a $50 million resort complex. "I think this is great," Palmer said. "Very shortly, we will see a lot of action (in China)."

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations' new secretary-general, Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru, has presented a gold U.N. peace medal to his predecessor, Kurt Waldheim of Austria.

After the ceremony Wednesday, both men went down to a basement coffee shop where Perez de Cuellar has presented gifts from Waldheim's native country to the United Nations and chairs for the coffee shop and a box of Sachertorte for himself.

The 16 tables, with marble tops and cast iron legs, and the 64 chairs, replaced less-exotic furnishings in use since the shop opened more than a year ago.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A divorce suit filed by Jaren Lewis, the estranged wife of entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis, has been dismissed in Shelby County Circuit Court.

Divorce proceedings will continue between the couple, however, in Chancery Court in Hernando, Miss., where Lewis has filed against his wife.

Judge Charles McPherson dismissed Mrs. Lewis' complaint after reviewing the divorce proceedings in Mississippi.

"He got word that the chancellor had ruled that Lewis was a resident of Mississippi at time of filing the divorce, so he dismissed the divorce proceeding here without prejudice so it could be heard by the Hernando chancellor," David Caywood, Mrs. Lewis' lawyer, said Wednesday.

Caywood said he would file a cross-complaint on behalf of Mrs. Lewis against Lewis in Hernando this week.

Lewis filed for divorce in 1979 in Hernando and his wife filed for divorce in Memphis in 1980. They were married in 1971 and have a 10-year-old daughter.

Journal says Laetrile fails as cure for cancer

BOSTON (AP) — A new study proves Laetrile "doesn't work" against cancer, and it's time to focus on other treatments for the disease, the editor of the New England Journal of Medicine says.

The report, which appears in today's edition of the medical journal, described efforts to cure 178 cancer patients with the substance. When the study was over, 85 percent of the patients were dead, and none had improved.

"There was not the slightest suggestion of any beneficial effect," Dr. Arnold S. Reiman, the journal's editor, wrote in an accompanying editorial.

"Some, undoubtedly, will remain unconvinced, but no sensible person will want to advocate its further use, and no state legislature should sanction it any longer," he said. "The time has come to close the books on Laetrile and get on with our efforts to understand the riddle of cancer and improve its prevention and treatment."

The National Cancer Institute, which sponsored the study, estimates that 70,000 American cancer victims take Laetrile.

A preliminary version of the study, directed by Dr. Charles G. Moertel of the Mayo Clinic, was made public last April at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology in Washington.

The doctors tried to match the procedures of Laetrile enthusiasts. They put the cancer victims on special diets including enzymes and vitamins. But the patients survived an average of less than five months. "It must be concluded that amygdalin (Laetrile) in combination with high doses of vitamins, pancreatic enzymes and a diet of the type commonly employed by 'metabolic therapists' is of no substantive value in the treatment of cancer," the doctors wrote. "Further investigation or clinical use of such therapy is not justified."

In Scottsdale, Ariz., William J. Libby, president of Arizona Laetrile Co., said he would continue to produce the substance.

He challenged the study, asking, "What did the 85 percent of the patients die of? Heart failure? Cancer?"

"We're not out of business and we don't intend to be," he added.

Laetrile is a brand name for amygdalin, a substance derived from apricot pits and bitter almonds. The substance has been legalized in 27 states, and also is legal for use nationwide under a federal court order.

Not only is Laetrile useless, but it also is dangerous, the doctors concluded. The substance is converted to cyanide in the body. And in several patients, they found that blood levels of cyanide "reached levels that have been reported in fatal cases in poisoning in human beings."

The patients received Laetrile at least until there was definite evidence that the disease had spread or until they deteriorated to the point that the therapy could not go on.

Rescue team reports 500 dead after river floods Peru valley

TINGO MARIA, Peru (AP) — The first rescue team to reach a remote valley flooded by a jungle river in Central Peru said today that at least 500 people drowned or disappeared.

"Many people died or were swept away when they were sleeping," said Capt. Luis Ramos Tejada, who led 25 civil guards to the disaster zone Saturday morning, only six hours after the Chontayacu River carried an avalanche of mud, rocks and trees down the valley.

"Cruzpampa, the first settlement we reached, was gone," he said. "Nothing was left of the 40 houses that used to be there. I thought it was a supernatural punishment or something."

Ramos Tejada said two other settlements, Aji and Chalon, also disappeared completely, and at least 17 others were hit by the flood. He estimated at least 500 people drowned or disappeared. But a policeman in Tingo Maria added:

"Many affected settlements have not been visited by the rescue squads and we cannot yet evaluate the full extent of the damage and loss of life."

Uchiza, the largest town in the area with a population of some 2,500 people, was hardly touched, he said. It is 102 miles north of Tingo Maria and 390 miles northeast of Lima.

Because of heavy rains and swollen rivers, Uchiza was accessible today only by airplane and helicopter.

The policeman said survivors moved into rural schools for shelter and medical teams were establishing emergency clinics to treat the injured and vaccinate the population against contagious diseases.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY! Detroit-born actor Tom Selleck, TV's "Magnum P.I." and one-time USC basketball star, celebrates his birthday with you. Also born in this date: "Dynasty" star John Forsythe and actress Kathryn Ross. You will be greatly encouraged by what you can accomplish on your own this year. The financial picture improves and romance takes on a new meaning. Friends play an even greater role in your leisure-time activities. Do not be surprised if some of them also influence the direction of your career. Recognize the importance of obtaining the best available professional advice and be willing to pay top dollar to get it.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work goes well and job situation takes a turn for the better. You could be lucky when it comes to finance today. Shed any worries and enjoy yourself this evening.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Any family objections to a new romance begin to fade as everyone becomes better acquainted. Develop a closer rapport with your co-workers. Travel could lead to re-employment plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep a low profile at place of employment. Combine your personal interests with public service. Romance enjoys favorable influences. Give a personal relationship another chance.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone could resent your social graces. Let others take the lead in social situations. Teamwork is favored if you use a positive approach at all times. Financial rewards are easier to obtain.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Financial rewards are a certainty if you are willing to put in extra hours. Close friends burden you with unwanted responsibilities. Do what you can to help if it is an emergency.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your friendship with someone from another country gives you the advantage in a business deal. Procrastinating will only magnify a personal problem. Tackle situation head on.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A misunderstanding could result in widespread confusion. Get the facts straight and start over. Spend more time with someone who shares your interests.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Both sides are vulnerable in a romantic situation. Partner wants to know what your goals are before investing further capital. You are able to score an impressive triumph.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Young people ask for help and get what they want now. Scholarships are available for the deserving. Travel is linked to romance. Financial security is easier to obtain than in the past.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A financial problem is easily solved thanks to third party's intervention. The generation gap narrows and family members draw closer together. An invitation will provide valuable answers.

six spades over his partner's two spade response to Stayman. There was only one minor flaw to this contract—both the ace and king of trumps were missing! West led his top club, and Sir Rodney was not fazed at the prospect of bringing in twelve tricks. He won the ace of clubs in dummy, cashed the ace of diamonds and overtook the queen of diamonds with the king. He then led the jack of diamonds as if he were trying to get a club discard from dummy.
 West was having none of that. He ruffed the jack of diamonds with the spade deuce and dummy overruffed with the five. Declarer came back to his hand, with the king of hearts and led the ten of diamonds. West was still not going to let declarer stuf a club, so he ruffed with the three. Declarer overruffed again, then led a trump from dummy. When the ace and king crashed on this trick, a delighted South was able to claim the rest of the tricks. He had cleverly maneuvered to hold his trump losers to one.

One of the handsomest bridge books that we have seen is Play Better Bridge, by Riki Markus (Octopus Books, hard cover, 156 pp., $7 plus $1 postage; available from Bridge World Magazine, 37 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025). It is done in a large format (9 1/4 x 11 1/4) and will grace any coffee table in a bridge player's home. But the book is not for show only. It contains many interesting hands, some sage advice gleaned from Mrs. Markus's many years of experience in bridge at the highest levels, and all of the Bobby Bridge Tips. Casals said responsibility to welfare of mankind

By ISAAC STERN
Special from Reader's Digest

"I give you my heart, my fingers, and my fiddle," I told Pablo Casals the first time I met him. I never had cause to take them back, least of all my heart. All my life I had revered Casals, who was two tremendous persons in one — the finest cellist in history and a supreme humanitarian.

An outspoken foe of totalitarianism, he traveled thousands of miles crusading for peace. Despite personal tragedy and loss, he always maintained, "Life is wonderful." I first met Casals in the small French village of Prades, just across the Pyrenees from his native Spain, where he had exiled himself in 1939 following Franco's victory. There Casals organized aid for Spanish refugees and vowed never again to play his cello in a world of war and dictatorship. Later, however, he took heart and played a few times for the refugees.

Casals felt that his first responsibility was not to his music but to the welfare of mankind. "To live is not enough," he used to say. "We have to take part in what is good and do our best."

Pablo was born in 1876, near Barcelona, in the village of Vendrell. The boy was fascinated by musical instruments, especially the cello. His father made him one out of a gourd and a strip of wood. At 11, Pablo received his first real cello.

His mother took him to Barcelona, started him on music lessons, and left him with relatives. Pablo took a job playing at a local cafe. Isaac Albeniz, a leading Catalan composer, heard him and was so impressed that he brought him to Count de Morphy, a adviser to the Queen Regent, who granted Pablo a small pension. He studied for nearly three years in Madrid, until de Morphy advised him to move on to the prestigious Conservatory of Music in Brussels.

When Pablo auditioned in Brussels, he was told to sit in the back of the room while members of the cello class played. Finally, the professor said to him sarcastically, "Well, little Spaniard, will you play something for us?"

The professor reeled off a list of compositions, and Casals nodded to all of them. "This boy must know everything!" the professor said, and the class hooted with laughter. Told to play "Souvenir de Spa," a flashy and difficult piece, there was stunned silence when Pablo concluded. The professor said softly, "You will get first prize if you will consent to be in my class."

"No," Pablo told him. "You ridiculed me in front of your pupils."

Pablo, his mother, and two young brothers promptly went to Paris. Annoyed, Count de Morphy had the queen cut off Pablo's pension. The only job Pablo could find in Paris was as second cellist at a music hall that specialized in the can-can. Destitute, they returned to Barcelona. Suddenly, things started looking up. Pablo was offered a teaching post, and he found a job playing cello in the opera orchestra. Pablo quickly became an international figure, commanding very high fees.

Although he loved the whole human race, children were his special favorites. Casals worried about children growing up in a totally materialistic world. "They know nothing of the wonder of life," he said sadly to me. "To realize that one is unique in all creation — what a privilege!"

In the summer of 1973, Casals and I went to Israel. He looked every one of his 96 years. We carried him, faint and ill, from the plane to his hotel in Jerusalem. Immediately, he demanded a piano. The only one I could find was in the hotel bar, so I had it brought up to his suite. The frail, weary old man sat down, loosened his tie, dropped his braces and started playing a Bach prelude. Color returned to his cheeks. He smiled and everything was all right again.

Maryland legislators put their money where their foul mouths used to be ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Heck no, Maryland's lawmakers aren't fussin' about cussin' for nuthin' — they're putting their money where their foul mouths used to be.

The Senate Budget and Taxation Committee has agreed on what it unofficially calls the Undeleted Expletive Revenue Enhancement Act of 1982. It's better known as "the cussin' tax."

The bill provides fines for committee members each time one of them utters a no-no word.

Fines range from 25 cents for milder obscenities — such as the use of Satan's address — to 50 cents for tasteless words and a whole dollar for ... well, you get the picture.

A top-dollar word would be a rarity but Sen. Julian Lapides, D-Baltimore, says that, like art, he'll know one when he comes across one.

Lapides, in fact, is busy listening for a "100-center," since he currently leads the expletive sweepstakes and would like to give up the position to someone else on the committee.

Chrysler repays debt weeks early

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca says that for all practical purposes, the automaker will have no U.S. bank debt after it makes a $47 million payment to a consortium of banks next week.

Chrysler is making the $47 million payment six weeks early to remove the final $1.3 billion in bank debts from its books. The company said Wednesday that the payment will be made Monday to complete a debt-restructuring agreement that enabled Chrysler to borrow an additional $400 million in federally guaranteed loans.

Iacocca said sales are improving when compared to levels of year-ago levels, and the company's financial position has improved from the dire situation of a year ago.

Passenger says he told airline of seeing body, was ignored

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A passenger on the DC-10 jetliner that slid into Boston Harbor said Wednesday he was ignored when he tried to tell officials that he saw someone disappear under the icy water.

And the Coast Guard reported that one of its men spotted a body in the wreckage, but no search was conducted because World Airways announced that everyone was safe.

"They kept on saying everyone was all right, but I couldn't get it out of my mind what I saw," Donald Welsh said, a day after airline officials confirmed that two men were missing and feared drowned in the aftermath of the accident Saturday night.

Richard Griggs, chief of Coast Guard operations in Boston, said that one of his men who entered the water in a survival suit after the accident reported seeing a body in the forward, broken-off section of the plane.

But Griggs said nothing further was done because the Coast Guard's search and rescue center was subsequently told the airline had announced all passengers and crew were safe.

"There was no reason to search since they had accounted for everyone," Griggs said.

World officials had insisted since the accident that there were 208 passengers and crew aboard and that all were accounted for. But on Tuesday, Edward Ringo, senior vice president of the air carrier, said Walter Metcalf, 69, and his son Leo, 40, both of Dedham, were missing.

Divers spent Wednesday searching for the bodies in the water near the half-submerged plane.

Federal investigators said other pilots reported the runway was slick with ice on the night of the accident.

Ringo and officials with the Massachusetts Port Authority, which operates the airport, said they discovered carry-on luggage belonging to the elder Metcalf after relatives approached state police Tuesday.

Cauble says cattle, not pot, sold

By LEIGH SHIRLEY
Associated Press Writer

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Millionaire Rex Cauble says he sold cattle, not marijuana, to raise the huge cash bank deposits that prosecutors contend links the wealthy rancher to an elaborate drug smuggling scheme.

Prosecutors have introduced thousands of documents in an attempt to bolster their claim Cauble financed and profited from a scheme to smuggle 106 tons of marijuana into Texas during 1977 and 1978.

Cauble, whose attorneys rested their case Wednesday, says the documents only show his employees kept poor records.

U.S. District Judge William Steger, who told attorneys to present final arguments this morning, said he hopes the jury in Cauble's racketeering, conspiracy and embezzlement trial can begin deliberating by noon.

Cauble testified Wednesday that he and his ranch foreman, Charles "Muscles" Foster, decided to sell a large number of cattle in 1977 and 1978 because the market was good.

Cauble, 68, said Foster sold the cattle and brought him the proceeds in cash. He said the only documentation of the cash sales were in the form of deposit slips and a list of buyers' names provided by Foster.

"Muscles wasn't the best record keeper in the world," Cauble said. "He knew what he was doing but he didn't keep good records."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Democrats say the redistricting squabble that threatens the May primaries is the Republicans' fault. Republicans blame the Democrats.

Each party says it is watching out for the interests of black and Mexican-American voters. Each claims the other is using minorities for their own political benefits.

It's a political year in Texas, and redistricting brings out political potshots from both camps.

On Tuesday the U.S. Justice Department — a Republican-controlled agency — said Texas' plans for redistricting of the Legislature improperly diluted minority voting strength.

THE PLANS REJECTED by the federal officials had been approved by the all-Democratic Legislative Redistricting Board.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, agreed with the Justice Department and told Texas Attorney General Mark White to ask a three-judge federal panel in Dallas to draw the lines. That panel is considering a lawsuit filed by Republicans against House and Senate plans.

White, a Democrat seeking his party's nomination to challenge Clements, said Wednesday he would do the opposite of what Clements' asked. White said his department would ask the judges to OK the maps rejected by the Justice Department.

White said he also would ask for a meeting with U.S. Attorney General William French Smith to discuss the case. White said minority legislators and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby would accompany him to see Smith.

Monday is the filing deadline for legislative races. White says court approval of the previously rejected districts would allow the May primaries to go on as scheduled. Clements said a court version of the plans would mean postponing the filing deadline, but no delay in the primaries.

Democratic leaders on Wednesday, during a rapid succession of news conferences, said they would fight Clements' idea.

"In (Clements') letter he has urged me to surrender to an obvious political decision by the current Republican administration in Washington," said White. "If the governor and his secretary of state want to surrender, that's their privilege. But I do not intend to do so."

The Justice Department ruling, he said, was a "new low in partisan politics." Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said the decision was a "blatantly political act."

Hobby, also a Democrat, said, "The Justice Department is merely supporting the Republican Party in their suits filed in an effort to increase their chances in the election."

George Strake, Hobby's GOP challenger, blamed Hobby. "I think that too much concern was given to the protection of incumbent Democrats by the (redistricting) board. The Senate plan, specifically, was William Hobby's product. If he had been fair in the first place, Texas might not have been subjected to all this," said Strake.

Democrats claim Republican support of more districts that would elect minority lawmakers is based on the "packing" theory. By "packing" blacks and Mexican-Americans into districts, the minority voters' effect on other districts is lessened, increasing GOP chances in those districts.

White said the GOP's only interest is more seats in the Democratic-controlled Legislature. "I can't imagine anything else they would want," he said.

WHITE ALSO CHARGED that Clements and Secretary of State David Dean violated their oaths of office by telling the Justice Department the redistricting plans probably violate the Voting Rights Act.

"It seemed that the plan was condemned by the secretary of state and the governor, and that is in contradiction to their position in trying to uphold the laws of the state. That particular plan had all the full force and effect of any other law of the state of Texas and for them to selectively condemn it...is a dereliction in their responsibilities," White said.

Rep. Paul Ragsdale, a black Democrat from Dallas, said the plans were fair to blacks and Mexican-Americans. Ragsdale drew the House plan approved by the board.

"While Governor Clements has been calling political fouls on Democrats, he has been counting all along on his friends in the Reagan Justice Department to try and rig the outcome in his favor," said Ragsdale.

"Above all, I hope that common people will remember that there is nothing in the history of the Republican Party to suggest it is a modern day Robin Hood," he said.

Officials say federalism OK in principle; Use unclear

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Reagan's "new federalism" — a plan to turn over federal programs to the states, announced in his State of the Union address — has drawn philosophical support but with practical caution from Texas officials.

"I was pleased with the speech and I am certainly philosophically in agreement," Gov. Bill Clements told reporters Wednesday. "I have no objection in principle to the proposal at all, but I want to see the details.

"There is a vast difference between making a state of the state speech and the finished legislation on his desk," he added. "This thing is going to take many a zig and a zag in the House and Senate."

Reagan proposed that control of many social service, transportation and education programs revert to the states, with a $28 billion annual trust fund of federal money set aside to operate them.

"I believe the states, particularly Texas, are better able to determine the course of many of our domestic programs," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said at Wednesday.

Mediated divorce can be easier than court battle

By CYNTHIA ROBINS
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — For a middle-class family on the rocks, the conventional, contested divorce can cost each spouse from $3,000 to $10,000. And that's only the money.

Emotionally, divorce can be laced with acrimony, mistrust, hatred, revenge and retribution — the shattering of any intimacy achieved during the marriage. For the children of such a divorce and for the divorcing spouses themselves, it may take years to recover.

There is an easier way: the mediated divorce. Families in Transition is a three-month-old program run by Dr. Matthew McKay and Dr. Peter Rogers, clinical psychologists.

Says McKay, 34, "Our job is to try to teach people how to fight it out without leaving a scar and how to resolve their conflict in a way that both parties get most of what they want."

In general, when divorcing spouses go to their respective attorneys, his tells the husband to cut off the credit cards; hers says to clean out the joint checking account. The husband tries to write a check and it bounces; the wife can't go to the store and charge.

WITH THE MEDIATED divorce, Families in Transition uses the services of two psychologists and a team of female attorneys, including Cathleen Moran, a partner in a Palo Alto legal firm. The ground rules for working with McKay, Rogers and their attorney associates are specific.

The divorce has to be a mutual decision. The couple must be equal partners in the decision-making process. There must be a full financial disclosure (and if finances are complicated, the couple must agree to pay for an independent auditor to sort things out). Finally, both must agree not to beat each other up emotionally.

Families in Transition charges a flat fee of $1,500 for 12 sessions, which can take place as often as once a week, but usually are not prescribed by any given time period. If the couple can come to some agreement by the eighth session, there is a refund of $400. If more than 12 meetings are needed, there is no additional fee. The legal papers are prepared and all the filing fees are paid as part of the $1,500 cost.

The product of the mediation is a legal agreement, which a judge will affirm if both parties have agreed to it. McKay says that he and his colleagues recommend that each spouse take the agreement back to his or her attorney to fine-tune it, but often, many divorce settlements can be handled in the mediation process.

"We teach the Fair Fight," says McKay. "The number one rule is that you learn to make 'I' statements instead of 'you' statements, and not be accusatory. People talk about how they feel and not how terrible the other person is. The last thing we insist upon is that people agree to common goals — things they share and both want. It's easier when they have children because they are a major concern. And when it gets emotional and the going gets tough, we can always return to the goal."

In the first session, the couple meets with the two psychologists. "One therapist can support a person," McKay explains, "while the other therapist is confronting him. There is always a balance."

THE LAWYER, usually present from the second session on, explains to the divorcing parties about such things as tax ramifications of child and/or spousal support, property settlement or distribution of future income.

Attorney Moran, 32, explains that in mediation, "I am free to credit emotional issues as being possibly as important as the financial issues, free to weigh the cost to the parties of fighting — to point out that fighting is extraordinarily expensive."

"Law is extremely labor-intensive, and the going rate can be from $75 to $150 per hour. There is no way to try a case without putting a lot of time into it. Very few middle-class people can afford the cash drain during a drawn-out court trial over marital issues."

McKay says that the usual course for mediation is from eight to 10 meetings but, in some cases, the divorce settlement can take as few as six sessions or as many as 12.

A car driven by Mavis Blount jumped a curb and ended up in the Lakehill Cleaners and Shirt Laundry in North Little Rock, Ark. Mrs. Blount, 65, of North Little Rock, told police the engine was malfunctioning and she could not control the car when she tried to park. There were no injuries.

HOUSTON (AP) — Parishioners at Christ the King Lutheran Church are being asked to give to God the way modern Americans give to Caesar — by plastic.

Parishioners can put their pledge on the credit card and pay later, the Rev. Ed Peterman said.

It began earlier this month, when Texas Commerce Medical Bank, which handles the church account, designed special forms that can be dropped into the collection plate, said bank officer Richard Ramirez.
