Panel to release taped testimony

■ Officials set Monday as day to release the four-hour tape of president's testimony before a grand jury as well as testimony by Monica Lewinsky.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Overruling Democratic objections, the House Judiciary Committee voted Friday to release President Clinton's videotaped grand jury testimony as well as 2,800 pages of sometimes steamy evidence compiled by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

Congressional officials set Monday for the release of the four-hour Clinton tape as well as grand jury testimony by Monica Lewinsky, the former White House intern with whom the president had a sexual relationship.

"We won't rush to judgment and we won't refrain from judgment" of the president, Speaker Newt Gingrich told an audience of political conservatives at the same time the House panel was wrapping up two days of contentious party-line votes on what material to release and when.

"We got rolled," complained Rep. John Conyers, of Michigan, the senior Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, after the GOP rejected several attempts to force the deletion of sexually explicit passages from the material to be released. Conyers and his party's leader in the House, Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri, accused Republicans of conducting an unfair, partisan inquiry.

The White House heaped on criticism as well. "This appears to be a rush to prejudgment and an effort to get out the most salacious material at the speed of light, not at the proper pace of justice," said spokesman James Kennedy.

Vice President Al Gore, visiting workers in Teradyne, N.H., said the vote was partisan politics. "It shouldn't be that way. They should adopt a more bipar-

MILWAUKEE — In the stadium where Hank Aaron hit his final home run for the career record, Mark McGwire added to the single-season mark Friday night. McGwire hit his 64th home run, pulling out of a tie with Sammy Sosa in the race for the single-season record. McGwire hit a 3-1 pitch from rookie Rafael Roque 417 feet into the left-center field bleachers for a two-run homer in the fourth inning.

AIDS drug

WASHINGTON — AIDS patients got an easier-to-swallow drug Friday as the Food and Drug Administration approved a new once-a-day medicine that offers the first good alternative for patients who cannot take today's best AIDS treatment. DuPont Pharmaceuticals' Sustiva appears to be about as effective as protease inhibitors, the landmark medicines that have helped thousands of HIV patients rebound from their disease, the FDA said. And because it's taken only once daily, Sustiva could significantly cut the number of pills AIDS patients now swallow.

Late-term abortion

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's veto of a ban on certain late-term abortions survived a challenge Friday when the Senate fell three votes short of an override. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott pledged to keep fighting for it. "This is not the end of the battle," Lott, R-Miss., said as he delivered news of the 64-36 vote to a meeting of the Christian Coalition. The conservative political group has made a ban on "partial-birth" abortions a top priority.

United Way brings in champion to kick off campaign

To kick off its 1998 fund-raising campaign, the United Way of Midland brought in a Super Bowl champion.

Rocky Bleier was a fullback for the Pittsburgh Steelers when the professional football team won its four Super Bowl championships in 1973, 1974, 1978 and 1979. He overcame wounds in both legs suffered on the same day in South Vietnam in 1969.

Before the kickoff luncheon, Bleier said that he had been involved with United Way since his days as an NFL player and felt it was a way he was able to give back to the community for supporting him as a professional athlete and has participated in a number of kickoff lunches and dinners across the country for the organization.

Co-chairwomen of this year's campaign, LuAnn Morgan and Susie Hitchcock-Hall, arrived at the luncheon on the back of Harley Davidsons driven by Midland Police Chief John Urby and by Joe Mabee.

The two announced that this year's goal of $3,001,000, slightly less than last year's goal.

MC sets another record for 1998 enrollment: 4,603

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

Midland College this week set another record for enrollment and will probably receive more state money to spend on its programs.

The college set a new record this fall with 4,603 students as measured on its 12th class day. That is up by 104 students over spring 1998.

The school reports its 12th class day as a snapshot to the state of Texas for funding purposes, although the enrollment does change during the semester.

Elise Coombes, MC's public relations director, said administrators originally predicted the college would have 4,500 students in September.

"It's beyond what we expected. We would have been happy with 4,500," Ms. Coombes said.

The increase in students means more money from the state, which awards money based on course hours taken. The college has enjoyed a steady increase in enrollment over the past two years.

In fall 1996 the college had 4,008 students, followed by 4,163 in spring 1997, then 4,240 in fall 1997 and 4,499 in spring 1998.

State funding makes up about 50 percent of the college's budget, Ms. Coombes said.

She said the college's distance learning and Internet courses have helped attract more students. The college also has had an aggressive recruiting program.

"The other thing is when the oil industry is down, there are a lot of people who want to come back and train," she said.

Ms. Coombes also credits the student services staff for working hard to register more students and help them select the appropriate classes.

In a related matter, the increased enrollment has meant some traffic congestion, less convenient parking and heavy use of MC classrooms.

"We're using the portables for the first time," she said. "There's plenty of parking at the Chap Center. It doesn't mean we're out of parking. Everybody wants to be right by the door."

The college has dealt with the situation by adding more faculty and offering more night and weekend classes.

Overall, the crowding is better than a dropping enrollment.

"It is a good problem," Ms. Coombes said. "The mood around campus is great. People recognize the good programs we have."

Philippine ship with 402 aboard sinks in stormy waters; 136 rescued

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Rescuers battled heavy seas in search of survivors of a ship carrying 402 people that sank before dawn today in stormy waters south of Manila.

The Philippine navy said it had confirmed that 136 people had been rescued from the Princess of the Orient, including 14 people who were picked up in very rough waters by a passing fishing boat.

The owner of a seaside resort told a Manila radio station his staff had sighted rescue boats off the coast shooting flares in the air. Navy rescue ships were sent to the area, near Fortune island, 75 miles south of Manila, the capital.

A military colonel who was aboard the ship telephoned his aide on shore, pleading desperately for help, the aide told a radio station.

"He asked to contact all those in Manila who could help rescue them. There was noise in the background, people were shouting," the aide said.

Tomas Banzon, 25, a survivor picked up by the fishing boat, told The Associated Press he was sleeping in the ship's economy section about 10 p.m. when he heard shouting and felt his bed tilting. He put on a life jacket, rushed outside and jumped into the water, along with many others.

"People were shouting, crying, calling out names," he said. "I wanted to save them but I couldn't do anything." He said he floated in the water until about 4 a.m., when he was picked up by the fishing boat.

Geronimo Socrates, the skipper of the fishing boat, said he had a difficult time maneuvering his boat to the survivors because of big waves.

"They were very scared," he said of the survivors. "One of them clutched me and did not let go. I told him, 'Stay calm, we will save all of you.' "

Apparent target of Mexican massacre lies in coma, his drug ties uncertain

ENSENADA, Mexico (AP) — Mexican soldiers and police stood guard Friday outside the hospital room where Fermin Castro lay in a coma with bullet wounds suffered in the execution-style killing of 18 members of his extended family.

Castro apparently was the target of the attack Thursday morning. But in the hospital parking lot in this Baja California resort, family members wearing cowboy hats leaned on pickup trucks and said the man had no enemies they knew of.

"He didn't own guns. He wasn't a violent man," said Castro's brother Gilberto. "He was more of a humble man."

Police said they had no suspects in the massacre in the nearby middle-class suburb of El Sauzal, but family members said several ranch hands who lived in the family compound had been detained.

It was unclear whether the workers were present at the time of the killings or whether they had been given the day off for Mexico's independence holiday.

The gunmen pulled up at Castro's compound before dawn Thursday, lined up members of his extended family and told them to lie face-down, then shot them all. Only two children survived with Castro.

Mexican and foreign news media speculated about a possible motive in the deaths, all suggesting it was a battle of unprecedented brutality in the nation's drug wars.

A local radio station cited traditional punishments among drug traffickers in which smugglers who changed sides from one organization to another would have their entire family killed.

Local news media also cited a supposed quarrel between Castro and unidentified men that occurred at Independence Day celebrations on the eve of the massacre.

Police said Castro had been under investigation in the past for reasons they would not disclose. "He was involved in something," said federal highway police Capt. Fernando Rodriguez Goni, implying that "something" was illegal.

Several years ago, Castro began building a gated, three-house compound with satellite antennas, one that dwarfed surrounding houses.

On Thursday, the government news agency Notimex quoted the Baja California state attorney general as saying that Castro was suspected of growing marijuana for the Arellano Felix gang, Mexico's most powerful drug-smuggling organization based in Tijuana, 60 miles north.

The attorney general, Marco Antonio de la Fuente Villarreal, later backed away from those reported comments, saying: "We cannot say 100 percent that it was an aspect of drug trafficking."

The New York Times on Friday quoted federal Attorney General Jorge Madrazo as saying that Castro "was suspected of being an associate of Ismael Higuera Guerrero, a lieutenant of the Arellano Felix organization."

Higuera has been using Ensenada as a trafficking base, the newspaper quoted Madrazo as saying. Madrazo's office did not respond to requests for confirmation.

But family members said they didn't know of any drug ties.

They described Castro as a man who liked betting and made frequent trips to the southwestern United States. His trips to Arizona, Nevada and other states were tours to see farm animals and ranches there, they said.

Eight children and 10 adults died in the massacre, including Macaria Jaime Tovar, who family members said was eight months pregnant.

The only survivors included 12-year-old Mario Alberto Flores — who suffered unspecified but serious injuries — and Viviana Flores, 15, who apparently escaped unharmed.

It was unclear whether she was the 15-year-old girl who police have said survived the attack by hiding under a bed.

Zedillo says flood situation is 'grave, but under control'

TAPACHULA, Mexico (AP) — Calling the flood disaster in southern Mexico grave but under control, President Ernesto Zedillo said the government was rushing aid to hundreds of thousands of people without food or shelter.

Zedillo has made four trips to Chiapas state since floods devastated a Massachusetts-sized area last week along the coast, leaving about 450,000 people homeless and killing at least 162.

Officials said 250,000 people will probably have to relocate from their lowland houses and the government may have to build as many as 25,000 low-cost homes to replace those destroyed by the flooding.

The death toll is expected to rise, officials said.

"Four days ago, the situation was desperate, and today it is under control," Zedillo said on Thursday during his latest trip to Chiapas. "But the people are suffering much."

While Zedillo ordered all government agencies to cooperate in helping the victims, he chided independent aid groups. "I have not seen them here," he said.

The Red Cross and other groups have said flooded roads, wrecked bridges, bad weather and a lack of transportation have hindered their efforts to distribute aid.

All 500 members of the Chamber of Deputies, Mexico's lower house, voted Thursday to donate a day's pay, about $160, to help the victims.

CLINTON: Panel votes to release grand jury testimony

tisan approach," he said.

The committee's action sets the stage for an event unique in the annals of the presidency: images on television screens across the country of an incumbent chief executive being questioned, under oath and in explicit detail, about alleged sexual acts with a young female aide.

People who have seen the tape say Clinton is at times angry, at times evasive as he responds to Starr's prosecutors in his presence and to individual grand jurors asking questions by closed circuit from the federal courthouse.

In addition, sources said Monday's release of material, expected around 9 a.m. EDT, will include transcripts of prosectors' questioning of Ms. Lewinsky outside the grand jury, as well as White House records detailing the times of her visits to the White House. Presidential friend Vernon Jordan's business calendars are also contained in the material, these sources said. He helped Ms. Lewinsky find a lawyer and obtain job interviews in New York.

Even as the committee was wrapping up one phase of its work, one Republican member of the panel suggested the next phase, potentially more menacing for the president, wasn't far away.

"It wouldn't surprise me if we met the first week of October to decide whether to recommend an inquiry of impeachment to the full House," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas. Other officials said a vote would probably be held on the House floor before lawmakers adjourn for the fall elections.

A formal impeachment inquiry would presumably call for additional money and staff to enable the committee to launch an investigation on its own into Clinton's conduct, rather than merely review Starr's material.

Republicans have suggested in recent days that the scope of such an inquiry might not be limited to the Lewinsky matter, and could include items such as questionable fund-raising practices by Clinton's 1996 re-election campaign and Attorney General Janet Reno's decision so far not to appoint an independent counsel to investigate. Democrats say they would vehemently object to any such expansion.

'I think we did get along very well. Bipartisanship doesn't include surrender to everything the Democrats want.'

—Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., chairman of the committee

Compounding Clinton's problems, lawyers for Paula Jones said Friday they are likely to file a motion asking that the president be punished on grounds he testified falsely in Mrs. Jones' dismissed sexual harassment civil suit against him.

James Fisher, one of Mrs. Jones' Dallas-based lawyers, said the legal team can ask the trial judge in Little Rock, Ark., to hold Clinton in contempt or even ask her to reopen the dismissed case — which is now on appeal.

Clinton's aides have labored in recent weeks to stem any erosion in support among Democrats. There was one defection Friday as Rep. Gene Taylor, a conservative lawmaker from Mississippi, became the second congressman from his party to call on the president to resign.

The day's acrimony was in contrast to pledges of bipartisanship that Gingrich and Gephardt exchanged two weeks ago.

Republican officials said Gingrich, Majority leader Dick Armey, Gephardt and leaders of the Judiciary Committee had agreed to meet next Wednesday to review proceedings thus far. Democrats, who have complained that Republican reneged on earlier pledges of bipartisanship made on camera, said they would attend, but would not allow cameras and reporters into the room.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., chairman of the committee, said the panel had agreed to remove 120 sections from the material to be released, to "protect people whose names and vital statistics and involvement in this was very peripheral."

In addition, Democrats battled for a day and a half to remove about 20 additional passages with salacious details, including Lewinsky's descriptions of sexually explicit phone conversations between herself and the president. Each time, Republicans used their majority to insist the material be released.

One Republican, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Democrats had also sought to delete numerous passages in which Ms. Lewinsky had said Clinton touched her in a sexual way — something that he testified in the Paula Jones deposition last January that he did not do.

"There was a general view among the Democrats not to reveal anything, and there was a general view among Republicans to reveal as much as possible," Hyde said.

Countered Conyers: "It is sexually explicit, it is offensive, it is obscene, it does not build up any kind of case one way or the other. And I think it is a politicalization" of the process.

In the end the vote to release the written records was 20-15, strictly along party lines. The vote to release an unedited videotape was identical.

The immediate aftermath of the committee's vote was more like the scene after a presidential campaign debate than a chapter in a solemn impeachment review.

Individually and in groups, lawmakers of the two parties went before television cameras to offer starkly different versions of events.

At one point, Hyde and Massachusetts Democrat Barney Frank, a member of the committee, stood shoulder to shoulder before the microphones, vying for the upper hand in the public relations war.

Hyde told reporters the session had been marked by bipartisanship.

Frank responded that Republicans had a "new concept of unilateral bipartisanship."

Hyde responded "I disagree. I think we did get along very well." Bipartisanship, he said, "doesn't include surrender to everything the Democrats want."

Said Frank: "It was very civil and very partisan."

SINK: Rescuers continue to search for survivors in rough waters

(From 1A)

The ship sank near Fortune island off Batangas province, navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Salvador Cuba said.

Cuba said an official of Sulpicio Lines, which owns the ship, told naval authorities the ship left Manila for Cebu City in the central Philippines around 8 p.m. Friday.

A few hours later the ship reported it was listing near Fortune island and lost radio contact with its office in Manila around 12:30 a.m. today. No other details were immediately available from the shipping company, Cuba said.

The officer reported there were 300 passengers, including seven children, and 102 crew members aboard, Cuba said.

Rescue efforts were continuing in very rough seas.

Tropical storm Vicki, with 45 mph winds, was located about 200 miles northwest of Manila late Friday and was forecast to remain stationary for most of today, weather reports said.

The storm also caused heavy flooding in many parts of the Manila area.

CAMPAIGN: Preconceived ideas place barriers, Bleier says

(From 1A)

Ms. Hitchcock-Hall said she is confident the campaign will succeed despite energy prices at 12-year lows and an agriculture sector hit hard by drought and low commodity prices.

"In Midland, we have the spirit that when the going gets tough, we still keep giving," she said.

It's preconceived ideas such as 'With oil prices so low you won't be able to raise that kind of money' that place barriers, Bleier told the gathering, pointing out that "we are formed by preconceived ideas. We have preconceived ideas about everything — people, places, things, the past, the future."

People's perceptions can become their reality, he cautioned.

"If they perceive that this core group is not committed to this campaign, that it won't be able to raise $3 million, that it can't do anything for the community, the job won't get done."

Before he could enjoy a successful 12-year career with the Pittsburgh Steelers and win such awards as the Whizzer White Humanitarian Award, Vince Lombardi Award and Most Courageous Athlete of the Decade Award, Bleier had to overcome others' preconceived ideas about him — that he was too small and too slow to play college or professional football. And then, after he was wounded, the Army doctor's belief that he would never play football again and possibly never walk normally again.

But his experiences with previous injuries — from tearing ankle tendons in the fourth grade to knee surgery in college — Bleier said that he knew "in time, injuries heal and you go out and play. And my experience is no different than what we go through in everyday life. As we go through life's bumps and bruises, we heal and go back out and play. The road we've taken to where we are today is not necessarily easy — it's got its ups and downs and crosses to overcome. But there's no mountain so insurmountable that we can't get around it in some way."

What preconceived ideas don't take into account is the individual's inner drive to succeed, Bleier said.

"It's ingrained in us by our family, our peers, by society to be the best we can be," he said. "I've found that successful people are just ordinary people doing ordinary things extraordinarily well. They're set apart by their willingness to work hard and commit to doing what it takes to succeed."

Bleier recalled that as he lay wounded in that South Vietnamese rice paddy on that August day in 1969, he promised God that 'If you get me out of this, you can have my life; I won't complain about the bad times and I'll share the good times."

And he was fortunate to be in the right place at the right time with a group of football players and fulfilled not only his own dreams and expectations but those of Steelers' fans.

Being such a role model was an awesome responsibility, he said.

"A lot of people are good and want to do good," he said. "A prime example is the United Way. Corporations lend their executives, which is a big commitment, and all the volunteers that go door to door raising funds. It's terrific to be able to see that. People think that you have to do something awesome to be a hero, and really it's just living up to your responsibilities."

Parliament lifts opposition leader's immunity, clearing way for his arrest

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — The Albanian Parliament voted overwhelmingly Friday to lift the immunity of former President Sali Berisha, clearing the way for his arrest on charges he tried to overthrow the government.

It was unclear, however, whether the government would immediately attempt to serve an arrest warrant, a move that could trigger more unrest from Berisha's radical supporters.

International officials have urged President Fatos Nano to move slowly against Berisha and allow a "cooling off" period after two days of rioting, which brought Albania to the brink of anarchy for the second time in 18 months.

The crisis began with the killing Saturday of popular politician Azem Hajdari, a close aide to Berisha. The killing sparked riots Sunday and Monday in the capital, Tirana. Three people died and scores were injured.

Berisha's supporters have demanded Nano's resignation.

Before the vote, Berisha told about 3,000 people Friday in central Skanderbeg Square that he would continue to oppose Nano's government, even from jail.

"I'm ready to accept any sacrifice," he said.

Charges of overthrowing the government carry the death penalty upon conviction, although Albania has halted executions recently.

The vote to lift immunity was 108-0 with five ballots declared invalid. Some 42 delegates, including all those from Berisha's Democratic Party, were absent. The Democrats won 28 of the 155 parliamentary seats in the June 1997 election but have rarely attended any sessions.

As the vote was taking place, another rally by Berisha supporters ended peacefully. It was the third straight peaceful rally, but the small number of protesters showed Berisha's inability to mount significant support in the capital.

There were no immediate reports of protests elsewhere, despite Berisha's call for nationwide demonstrations.

President Rexhep Meidani and international officials had appealed for calm. Daan Everts, who heads the local office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, called for people to stay home Friday "so that they are not being misused for political ends."

Armed police turned back vehicles at a roadblock outside the capital, allowing only those with Tirana license plates to proceed. Police also stopped vehicles and searched for weapons on other roads in Tirana.

Meidani has been working behind the scenes to find a way out of the crisis, which Western powers fear will spread instability further in the volatile Balkans. Berisha has openly supported ethnic Albanian rebels fighting for independence in neighboring Kosovo province in the Yugoslav republic of Serbia.

Much of Berisha's support comes from former government workers who held positions during his five years in power but lost them when Nano took over last year.

In seeking a return to power, Berisha has exploited outrage over Hajdari's killing and widespread disappointment with the government's inability to revive the economy and restore confidence in the nation's future.

The violence has raised fears of a repeat of months of anarchy last year after the collapse of pyramid schemes, which cost many people their life's savings. Berisha was president during the crisis and lost elections in its aftermath.

Czechs see no successor to President Havel

PRAGUE, Czech Republic (AP) — About half of Czechs say President Vaclav Havel should quit his post because of illness, but the overwhelming majority has no clue who should succeed him, according to a poll released Friday.

About 47 percent of those surveyed think Havel should quit his job for health reasons, while 48.5 percent think he should stay on.

Almost two-thirds of the population cannot imagine anyone as president but Havel, who spearheaded Czechoslovakia's anti-communist revolution and became president in December 1989.

The closest contenders were parliamentary Speaker Vaclav Klaus, with about 7 percent support and Premier Milos Zeman who polled about 5 percent.

Senate fails to override Clinton veto of late-term abortion ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's veto of a ban on certain late-term abortions survived a challenge Friday when the Senate fell three votes short of an override. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott pledged to keep fighting for it.

"This is not the end of the battle," Lott, R-Miss., said as he delivered news of the 64-36 vote to a meeting of the Christian Coalition. The conservative political group has made a ban on "partial-birth" abortions a top priority.

While the vote appeared to close the book on the issue for this year, Lott said it could help elect GOP Senate candidates in the November elections.

A two-thirds majority, or 67 votes, is required for override votes in the Senate when all 100 members are present and voting.

Thirteen Democrats and 51 Republicans voted for the override, while four Republicans and 32 Democrats joined to sustain the veto. The vote means Clinton's veto will stand — at least until a new Congress convenes in January.

The House voted 296-132 in July to overturn the veto.

"Millions of Americans will remember this vote when they go to the polls in November," the National Right to Life Committee warned in a statement.

The White House had no immediate comment.

Opponents of the bill said the vote was politically inspired and praised the three dozen senators who showed "true courage" by rejecting an override.

"Despite intense election-year pressure, these senators once again thwarted the drive by anti-choice lawmakers to pass ... a bill with the power to outlaw most safe methods of abortion throughout pregnancy," said Gloria Feldt, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

Sponsored by Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., and Rep. Charles Canady, R-Fla, the bill would ban a procedure requiring the partial, feet-first delivery of a fetus and drainage of its skull — except when needed to save a woman's life.

Violators face imprisonment, fines and civil lawsuits.

The bill's supporters say the abortion method is a gruesome procedure that resembles infanticide and exposes women to unnecessary risks. Opponents maintain the bill is unconstitutional because it lacks a health exception, which they say is required by the 1973 Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

"If the president would have signed this bill he would have been putting a woman's health and her life at risk," said Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., who led opposition to the override. "So I think he did the right thing."

Santorum pledged to pursue an override in the next Congress, hoping a new group of senators will provide "the votes necessary to ban this rogue procedure and reaffirm our nation's commitment to the sanctity of life."

The GOP, with urging from social and religious conservatives such as the Christian Coalition, has pushed the ban since assuming control of Congress in 1995 and has created a long legislative history in the process.

Congress passed the ban in 1996 and Clinton vetoed it. The House voted to override, but the Senate fell nine votes short of the required majority. Lawmakers passed it again last year and Clinton issued his second veto in October.

Meanwhile, the Senate also is expected to vote before the sessions ends on a House-passed bill making it a crime to avoid parental notification and consent laws by taking a minor to another state for an abortion. The bill also is a priority of social conservatives.

FDA approves new, easier-to-swallow AIDS treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — AIDS patients got an easier-to-swallow drug Friday as the Food and Drug Administration approved a new once-a-day medicine that offers the first good alternative for patients who cannot take today's best AIDS treatment.

DuPont Pharmaceuticals' Sustiva appears to be about as effective as protease inhibitors, the landmark medicines that have helped thousands of HIV patients rebound from their disease, the FDA said. And because it's taken only once daily, Sustiva could significantly cut the number of pills AIDS patients now swallow.

"It really gives some flexibility and some new options for patients," said Dr. Heidi Jolson, FDA's antiviral chief.

But the FDA warned that patients shouldn't race to switch to Sustiva if they're doing well on other AIDS medications.

The HIV virus relentlessly mutates to overcome drug treatment, meaning patients must take a drug until it quits working — not switching on the spur of the moment — so they don't exhaust all their options too quickly, stressed AIDS expert Dr. Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health.

But for newly diagnosed patients, or those whose current cocktail of AIDS medicines is failing or causing too many side effects, Sustiva offers a good option, he said.

'It really gives some flexibility and some new options for patients.'
— Dr. Heidi Jolson, FDA antiviral chief

In a six-month study of 450 patients taking the standard drugs AZT and 3TC plus either Sustiva or the most popular protease inhibitor, Crixivan, both therapies were equally effective.

The FDA approved Sustiva, known chemically as efavirenz, for both adults and children. It is to be taken with a protease inhibitor and/or older AIDS medicines.

The Sustiva portion of that cocktail will cost almost $4,000 a year. DuPont says the price is midrange for AIDS drugs, and that Sustiva therapy could save up to $500 a year over Crixivan cocktails. DuPont also promised a treatment assistance program for poor patients, but would not reveal details.

But some AIDS activists attacked the price; the group Act Up wrote DuPont this week threatening protests to "reveal your greed."

Sustiva "addresses some important issues in the lives of people with HIV, including the complexity of taking a large number of drugs," said Daniel Zingale of AIDS Action. "But I don't think the company went far enough in fair pricing. ... They could price this lower and still make a profit."

Typical HIV patients swallow some 20 pills throughout the day to combat the virus, timed carefully to take some with meals and some without. They may also take additional medicines to prevent HIV-caused infections. Missing even a few antiviral pills, however, allows the HIV to mutate and become more difficult to treat.

Sustiva is taken just once a day, in three capsules, whenever it's convenient. DuPont also is developing a formulation that will require only a single tablet a day.

Easing patients' "pill burden" may be Sustiva's main advance. With it, some patients may get by on just five pills a day.

"I have some patients who absolutely will only take medicine twice a day," said Dr. Donald Poretz of Virginia's Inova Fairfax Hospital. "This is a nice addition."

Half of Sustiva patients suffer dizziness, insomnia, impaired concentration, abnormal dreams and drowsiness. Therefore, patients should consider taking Sustiva at bedtime, the FDA said, and definitely avoid driving or operating machinery if they suffer the side effects.

These are milder side effects than many AIDS drugs cause, and unlike other drugs they usually disappear over time, the FDA said.

But FDA's Jolson cautioned that Sustiva can also cause some severe side effects, and that it has been studied for only six months. Longer use of AIDS drugs typically turns up more problems. Sustiva's cautions include:

- Some patients — usually those with a history of substance abuse or mental illness — suffer severe depression or delusions. They should stop taking the drug.
- Forty percent of children and some adults suffer skin rashes, occasionally severe.
- Women must use effective contraception because animal studies suggest Sustiva causes severe birth defects. The FDA ordered DuPont to track accidental pregnancies to determine the true risk.

House passes bill to send education money to states

WASHINGTON (AP) — An election-year bill ending 31 federal education programs in favor of sending money directly to states cleared the House on Friday.

The GOP measure still must be taken up by the Senate.

Republicans said the measure helps carry out its promise to give states, school districts and families more control over how federal education money is spent. The programs would be replaced by grants of $2.7 billion in 1999 and totaling $14.3 billion over five years.

"It liberates teachers, parents and students to once again focus on learning, not on reports, not on regulations, not on bureaucracy, not on red tape," said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

Although 31 programs would be converted under the Republican bill, most education spending for kindergarten through high school would go untouched. Spending by the Education Department for aid to schools totals about $13 billion to $15 billion, depending on which programs are included.

Opponents said the measure does nothing to address serious problems such as crowded classrooms, a shortage of qualified teachers and a need for after-school programs. They said block grants in the 1970s and 1980s caused spending to be lowered.

Odessa native pens Bond books

By Chris Newton
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — A waitress in a loud and lively Tex-Mex restaurant makes eye contact with the roguish figure shrouded in shadow and cigarette smoke, sitting alone at a table in the corner.

"What ... what would you like to drink, sir" she says, bumbling over her words as she stares into his eyes for a moment longer than she felt was appropriate.

The man leans forward, smiles briefly and says in an unmistakably stiff, British accent, "Ice Tea. Shaken, not stirred."

James Bond? In Texas?

The idea doesn't seem so funny to Odessa native Raymond Benson, the latest writer to take over the title of lead James Bond novelist for the estate that owns the character.

Benson's third stab at Bond, "The Facts of Death," brings the clever, cunning hero to the Lone Star State for the first time while on the trail of chemical terrorists. Bond visits Bastrop and Austin and even has dinner at the Tex-Mex restaurant Chuy's in the book released earlier this summer.

Benson, who has had an insatiable passion for Bond since he was a boy, said his Bond will remind people why they fell in love with the smug, tuxedo-wearing agent in the first place.

He's taking Bond back to his womanizing, cigarette-smoking, hard-drinking, cold-blooded roots.

"Bond is not a nice guy," Benson said during a phone interview from his home in Chicago. "Bond is a killer. The politically correct treatment he started to get in the 1980s was the culmination of both films and books, especially with the advent of AIDS. He became a kinder, gentler Bond."

> 'He is an anti-hero. He has flaws you don't like but you can't help but like him. He's cool as hell.'
> — Raymond Benson, Bond novelist

Ironically, the passive Bond is similar to the real-life Benson, who is married, doesn't smoke, and says he would never own a gun.

"The stories really get interesting when you explore what must be going on in Bond's mind," Benson said. "He is an anti-hero. He has flaws you don't like but you can't help but like him. He's cool as hell. He's good looking, he's charming, he's tough — he's the epitome of masculinity."

Fans have raved about Benson's treatment of Bond.

"I'm not sure if they'll ever make these books into movies but they certainly should," said Will Samms, president of "007 Fan Club," one of the largest group of Bond followers.

"Benson gets into the nitty-gritty stuff, but also deals with the psychology behind Bond. He's written stories that, in my opinion, leave the recent movies in the dust. The action is just as good as the movie, but has a much more realistic feel," said Samms, of San Francisco.

Benson's Bond work has also received critical acclaim.

The Boston Sunday Herald said in a review that Benson's Bond "may never win a Pulitzer, but is as irresistible as ever." Kirkus Reviews said the book was "a post-modern treat for fans and newcomers that lovingly, if not ironically, duplicates a formula so familiar that originality would be sacrilege."

Benson, 43, took an unlikely path towards becoming the premier Bond author.

After graduating from the University of Texas with a theater degree in the late 1970s, he directed plays at the Ally Theater in Houston and in New York.

While directing, he saw a James Bond novel in a storefront window and decided that it would be fun to write a book compiling Bond lore.

"A friend of mine who was a writer pitched the idea to her publisher and he liked it," Benson said. "A lot of this was good fortune."

And thus, "The James Bond Bedside Companion," an anthology of Bond books, movies, quotes and trivia was born.

The book captured the attention of the Fleming estate, which owns the character that Ian Fleming created, and established Benson as an expert on Bond.

That led the estate to ask him to consider writing Bond books in 1995 when author John Gardner decided to call it quits.

"When I got back up off the floor, I said 'Sure,'" Benson said.

Since then, he has written "Zero Minus Ten" and a novelization of the movie "Tomorrow Never Dies," both published in 1997.

Benson, who said he will always have a special place in his heart for his home state, was happy to bring Bond to Texas for an adventure.

"I was able to do it within the confines of a good story, and for once, I didn't have to do much research," he said.

Benson is only the fourth author to write Bond novels and the first American to have the distinction.

Leaf out of hospital

SAN DIEGO — Rookie quarterback Ryan Leaf was discharged from a hospital Friday morning, practiced and said he'll be OK to play in the San Diego Chargers' game at Kansas City.
"I'll be ready to go Sunday," said Leaf. "I just felt a little weak today but I still threw the ball around hard; maybe my drop was a little slow."

Bulldogs renew rivalry with Monterey

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

As the District 4-5A season inches closer and closer, non-district games become more vital and goals become different.

With that in mind, the Midland High Bulldogs host an old nemesis — Lubbock Monterey — at 2 p.m. today in Memorial Stadium. It should be a game that the Bulldogs want, and frankly need, to win, and don't be surprised if they are rather defensive doing so.

"I want the defense to rise up this week," MHS head coach David Browning said. "They did a very good job in the second half and I would like to see them put a full game together, because it is a good unit.

"Defensively, we need to get higher. We were first (in the district standings) after the first week and we need to get back to the top. It will take a convinced effort this week."

The Bulldogs (1-1 overall) gave up 390 yards (145 rushing and 245 passing), to a high-flying El Paso Andress team in a 18-15 loss last Friday. Andress was in the Cooper mold, showing four or five receivers at times and a talented quarterback. Monterey, however, is the antithesis of Andress, bringing a wishbone attack to Memorial Stadium. It is a more complex wishbone attack than most Midlanders might remember with the old Midland Lee teams.

"We didn't run that many formations out of it. We were more triple option," said Browning, an assistant at Lee from 1978-85. "Offensively, they (the Plainsmen) present problems because they run an offense you don't see much of. They run a wishbone and break it down to about 24 different formations, which is unusual."

Offensively, Monterey (1-1) is averaging 212 yards on the ground and 55 in the air, not bad for an offense that is just in its infancy.

"We would like to be able to run the football and control the football," first year Monterey head coach James Morton said. "That is one reason we enjoy the wishbone."

Browning knows the wishbone can be productive. History says it is so.

"We played against the sucker (the wishbone offense) when I was at Appalachian State," Browning said. "We played Citadel, one of the best I-AA teams in the country. We beat them, but they had a lot of yards.

Hot Rebels dominate Warriors

■ Lee welcomes Arlington Martin to Tall City with 35-6 drubbing.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Arlington Martin's first ever trip out of the Metroplex for a football game in the 15-year history of the school was like a honeymoon to the Caribbean when a hurricane blows in.

Arling. Martin	6
Midland Lee	35

Midland Lee's methodical Rebels swamped the unbeaten Warriors, 35-6, and it was much worse than that. This was domination on both sides of the ball in a game where Lee can now say that the wheels are turning in all the right directions.

"We definitely stepped it up a notch tonight," said Lee head coach John Parchman. "The defense turned in another solid game and the offense did the things we knew they could do. We didn't have any turnovers and we did a lot of good things. The main thing is that we weren't predictable. We kept things pretty diverse. Our stock went up this week."

Lee ground out 336 rushing yards with both Autry Pryor (110) and Clint McNutt (115) busting the 100-yard barrier. Lee quarterback Jon Rogers also ran for a touchdown and passed for two more to McNutt. He had two TD tosses of 25 and 24 yards to McNutt and now has five TD passes in his last two games.

Rogers also fooled the Martin defense with a 33-yard touchdown run on a naked reverse. Rogers gave a good fake inside, drew in the whole Martin defense and sprinted outside. Rogers hasn't seen more green grass than that since he played grade school football.

The Rebels had three scoring drives of 80 yards or better. And consider this: Lee had an 88-yard TD punt return by sophomore Cedric Benson called back and once drove over 70 yards only to have a field goal blocked.

Meanwhile, Martin went three and out on four of seven possessions in the game. At the half, Lee so dominated the clock that the Warriors ran only 15 plays to Lee's 42.

Pryor, who had his second consecutive 100-yard rushing effort, didn't care about the yardage numbers, but he was thrilled with the win.

"I think it was the type of effort that two backs should have 100 yards (rushing), but our goal is really to win the game and the yardage thing will just fall into place," Pryor said.

McNutt added, "We've still got to get better, but we knew we had a hard team to play this week and we got

Trinity stuns Loraine by hitting TD pass with three seconds left

By Steven Valles
MRT Correspondent

The game Friday afternoon between Trinity and Loraine began slow but ended with a wild finish when a touchdown pass from Matt Midkiff to Dustin Truitt with three seconds left gave Trinity their first win of the season 18-12.

The first quarter scoring began with Trinity driving 78 yards from its own 2-yard line capped off by a 35-yard touchdown run by Nathan Pirtle to make it 6-0.

Loraine came right back with a 27-yard drive of its own with Leonard Williams running for a 20-yard touchdown run. This was the only scoring in the first half.

In the third quarter Trinity got its second touchdown of the game when Nathan Pirtle scored on a 15-yard touchdown run.

Loraine answered the touchdown by Trinity with a 50-yard touchdown drive sparked by Luis Rico's 5-yard touchdown run.

The fourth quarter began as a defensive struggle with Loraine knocking on Trinity's door at the 1-yard line with three minutes left in the game.

However the Trinity defense came up big and held Loraine on a goal line stand with a little more than two minutes to go.

Trinity's Coach Karl Kitto thought the play of his defense on the goal line stand was the turning point of the game and he thought the conditioning of his team helped make the difference for the win.

The Trinity offense began at its own 1-yard line to try to get the winning score. Things were not looking good for Trinity when Matt Midkiff got sacked for a 10 yard loss.

Buffaloes contain Hill, crush Colorado City

By Oscar LeRoy

STANTON — Out in the West Texas town of Stanton, the expected shootout turned into a Buffalo stampede.

The Colorado City Wolves came into the game with guns blazing. The only problem was that most of the shots misfired in No. 1 ranked Stanton's 24-6 win Friday in front of a packed Buffalo Stadium.

The Wolves' Justin Hill came in as one of the best returning quarterbacks in Class 3A and had moments showing why he's considered one of the best. But Hill was forced into attempting 40 passes and only connecting on 16 as the Wolves' ground game was limited to a minus 28 yards on the ground by the stout Stanton defense.

"We knew that they like to pass a lot and that Hill is a dangerous quarterback," said Stanton defensive end Chad Smith. "We just put a lot of pressure on him and that was tough. We showed tonight that our defense is starting to get to the next level. We're going to have a lot of work but we'll get there."

Stanton's defense sacked Hill four times and was pressured on just about every attempt.

Still, it was not all perfect in Buffalo land. The Buffs (3-0) were penalized seven times for 50 yards, turned the ball over twice, and mis-executed on several offensive plays.

"It's a good win but it was ugly," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton. "Their defense played well and I give them credit. But we made a variety of mistakes. In fact, I really felt we

Mojo subdues Sandies

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — When Friday's non-district game between Amarillo High and Odessa Permian became a foot race, there was no stopping Mojo. Permian defeated the Sandies 25-13 at Ratliff Stadium.

However, the key might have been the Permian defense, not the offense, because without the comparably unheralded guys who had to go up against a solid Amarillo High offense, Permian might not have gotten to the starting gate.

For the night, the defense was good enough when it had to be, and even better down the stretch holding Amarillo scoreless in their final four possessions.

For the game, the Panthers forced six Amarillo High turnovers (three interceptions and three fumbles), held the AHS' passing game to 40 yards on 16 attempts, and contained the Sandies running game to 168 yards on 48 carries (a 3.5 average). The Panthers even had a first-half safety.

More importantly, while the offense struggled in the first half with three turnovers, the defense held AHS to six points.

"Our defense kept us in the ball game until we got things cranked up," Odessa Permian coach Randy Mayes said.

The one blemish to the defensive effort came in the 137 yards and two TDs allowed to AHS' Johnny Johnson. However, when it came down to his last seven carries, Johnson was held in check with six total yards.

In the second half, the Panthers offense took over. Junior receiver Roy Williams and quarterback Leland Morris connected on scoring plays of 23 and 71 yards to open the third and fourth quarters respectively en route to a near record-breaking night.

"It is a blessing to have the talent to do some good things," Mayes said. "That is why I give their defense a lot

McGwire rips homer No. 64

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE — Hank Aaron says that when they tear down County Stadium to make way for Miller Park, "they will take a piece of my heart with it."

Mark McGwire knows the feeling.

In the stadium where Hammerin' Hank hit his final home run for the career record, Mighty Mac added to the single-season mark Friday night.

McGwire hit his 64th home run, pulling out of a tie with Sammy Sosa as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-2.

"We can't worry about each other," McGwire said. "I mean, right now it's a big deal who finishes on top. If you ask Sammy and I, I don't think it really matters."

McGwire, who sent three pitches out of County Stadium during batting practice, hit a 3-1 pitch from rookie Rafael Roque 417 feet into the left-center field bleachers for a two-run homer in the fourth inning.

Sosa, 0-for-4 with a strikeout and a run scored in the Cubs' loss to Cincinnati earlier Friday, gets his shot at adding to County Stadium's homer lore next week.

"What we've done in the game of baseball, nobody's ever done. Nobody's ever done it," McGwire said. "And it's like, what we're doing right now, people want more. How much more do you want? We're doing our best. We're both rooting for each other, and wherever the numbers finish, where we land, that's the way it is."

Before Tuesday, McGwire was homerless in 18 at-bats after surpassing Roger Maris' record on Sept. 8. Now he has homered twice in four games to regain the lead in a race he's trailed only once all season.

"I'm human," McGwire said. "There was such a buildup to do what I did and you do it, I mean I basically didn't know where I was for a couple days. I think that's explainable. Then, we go to Houston and I was pitched very well. So, then we come back home and I started feeling better. Everything goes in cycles."

County Stadium was the site of Hank Aaron's 755th and last home run, off Dick Drago on July 20, 1976. Informed of the tidbit before the game, McGwire said he'd love to meet Aaron.

Burkett's pitching, 2 homers by Stevens, Zeile lift Rangers

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — John Burkett pitched eight strong innings and Todd Zeile and Lee Stevens homered to lead the Texas Rangers past the Oakland Athletics 3-1 Friday night.

The Rangers, who began the night one game ahead of Anaheim in the AL West, won its fourth straight. Oakland has lost five in a row.

Burkett (8-13), who won for the first time since Aug. 6, gave up one run and four hits, struck out one and walked none.

His season-high eight innings were especially vital to the Rangers because the bullpen had worked 15 innings over the previous three games. Fans gave Burkett a standing ovation when he returned to the dugout after the eighth inning.

John Wetteland, who set the Rangers' save record Thursday night, allowed two hits to start the ninth before getting three straight outs for his 42nd save.

Burkett, who has allowed the most earned runs in the AL this year, is probably headed to the bullpen if the Rangers make the playoffs. He missed his last start because of neck spasms and may not start again if Texas goes to a four-man rotation for the final week.

Pitching on nine days' rest, Burkett retired the first 10 Oakland hitters before giving up three straight singles in the fourth, including an RBI chopper through the right side by Matt Stairs that put Oakland up 1-0.

Mike Oquist (7-11) allowed just two hits over the first four innings. But Stevens opened the fifth with a single and Zeile followed with a homer, his second in as many nights after going 30 games without one.

Stevens, who had been 3-for-20 before singling in the fifth, hit a solo homer in the sixth.

Notes: With Ivan Rodriguez leaving Thursday's game with back spasms, the Rangers brought up catcher Chris Tremie from Triple-A Oklahoma as an extra reserve.

Indians 4, Royals 1

CLEVELAND — Jaret Wright got his first win in nearly a month despite walking seven in five innings as the Cleveland Indians beat the Kansas City Royals 4-1 Friday night.

Wright (12-9) allowed one run and four hits in a shaky tuneup for the postseason. The seven walks were a career high and most by a Cleveland pitcher this year.

The win was Wright's first since beating Baltimore 6-3 on Aug. 21. He had gone 0-2 with two no-decisions.

Paul Shuey pitched two scoreless innings for his first save since April 5, 1997.

Tigers 5, Twins 4, 11 innings

DETROIT — Tony Clark hit a leadoff homer in the 11th inning as the Detroit Tigers handed the Minnesota Twins their ninth straight loss.

Clark hit the first pitch of the 11th from Mike Trombley (5-5) off the right-field roof for his career-high 33rd homer.

The Tigers had tied the game 4-4 in the ninth on Damion Easley's two-out solo homer. Easley's 25th homer of the season and third in two nights came with two outs off Rick Aguilera, who had converted his previous 15 save opportunities.

Devil Rays 6, Blue Jays 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Paul Sorrento hit a two-run homer and drove in three runs as Tampa Bay beat Toronto.

Bryan Rekar (2-7) won for the first time since July 27, giving up one runs and three hits in eight innings. Rekar, who struck out six and walked none, had gone 0-5 in his previous eight starts.

The Devil Rays are 5-3 during a season-ending 18-game stretch against playoff contenders.

White Sox 11, Red Sox 9

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas reached 100 RBIs for the eighth consecutive season with a two-run homer that helped the Chicago White Sox beat the Boston Red Sox.

Thomas became the first player to accomplish the feat since Willie Mays from 1959-66.

Despite the loss, Boston's retained its five-game lead over Toronto in the AL wild-card race. The Blue Jays lost 6-1 at Tampa Bay.

Yankees 15, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — David Wells got his 18th victory despite another poor performance and rookie Shane Spencer hit a grand slam in a seven-run ninth as the Yankees moved closer to the AL record for wins.

It was the 106th win for the Yankees, five short of the record set by the 1954 Cleveland Indians. New York (106-46) has 10 games left.

Wells (18-4) snapped his first two-game losing streak of the season even though he gave up five runs, 11 hits and a walk in 5 1-3 innings. The left-hander has allowed 14 runs and 24 hits in his last three starts.

De La Hoya repeats beating Chavez

LAS VEGAS (AP) — This time Oscar De La Hoya made sure there would be no excuses.

De La Hoya beat and bloodied Julio Cesar Chavez once again Friday night before Chavez's corner signaled their fighter wanted no more while sitting on a stool after the eighth round of their WBC welterweight title fight.

Chavez was bleeding from the mouth and nose and had cuts over both eyes, and had just taken a beating in the final minute of the eighth round when his corner signaled to referee Richard Steele that Chavez would fight no more.

It was the second time De La Hoya stopped Chavez, but this time took twice as long as when they met two years ago for the junior welterweight title and Chavez was stopped on cuts in the fourth round.

Chavez fought gallantly but took the brunt of De La Hoya's punches throughout the fight and was well behind on all three scorecards when his corner called the fight.

The fight was a brawl from the early rounds on, as De La Hoya pressed for the knockout he wanted to gain the respect he claims he didn't get from Chavez the first time they met.

"You did it. You did it," Chavez told De La Hoya as the two embraced after the fight, finally giving hiim the respect he wanted.

Astros stave off Pittsburgh, 5-2, as Johnson flirts with no-hitter

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

PITTSBURGH — Randy Johnson, the NL's most dominating pitcher since being traded to Houston, took a no-hitter into the seventh inning before giving up four hits in beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 Friday night.

The Astros (98-57) won their 98th game and need only two victories in their final seven for the first 100-win season in their 37-year history.

Johnson (9-1) is a big reason why with six consecutive victories and a 9-1 record since the July 31 trade that may have altered the balance of power in the National League.

Johnson struck out 12 over 7 1-3 innings — he has 40 strikeouts in his three starts against Pittsburgh — and didn't come close to giving up a hit until Kevin Polcovich and Jason Kendall singled to start the seventh.

Johnson then lost his shutout on Jose Guillen's run-scoring grounder, and gave up another run in the eighth after hitting a batter, walking another and yielding two hits, including Adrian Brown's RBI double.

Still, Johnson won't have any trouble remembering Pittsburgh when he looks back on this season. He was traded by Seattle on July 31 while the Astros were in Pittsburgh, then defeated the Pirates 6-2 two days later in his first start for Houston. He also struck out 16 in beating the Pirates 2-0 on a two-hitter Aug. 28 in the Astrodome.

For six innings Friday, Johnson — one of the weakest-hitting pitchers in baseball — even outhit the Pirates, who are 4-17 since that 2-0 loss to Johnson last month.

Johnson grounded into a force play for his first career RBI in a three-run second inning against Elmer Dessens (2-5), then doubled for his first career extra-base hit and scored in the fifth.

Craig Biggio went 4-for-5 and drove in two runs for the Central champion Astros, who are vying for the NL's best record and home-field advantage throughout the league playoffs.

Johnson is 6-0 with a 1.13 ERA in his last six starts and is now 17-11 overall with Seattle and Houston after going only 9-10 with the Mariners.

Jay Powell got the final five outs for his seventh save.

Reds 6, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Sosa went 0-for-4, remaining at 53 homers. Despite the loss, Chicago remained one-game ahead of the Mets in the NL wild-card race.

Dmitri Young and Barry Larkin each drove in two runs and got four hits, and Young made a diving catch in left that kept the Cubs from tying the game in the sixth.

Marlins 7, Mets 6

NEW YORK — John Franco (0-8) wasted a 6-4 lead in the ninth when Todd Dunwoody hit a two-run single and Edgar Renteria hit a sacrifice fly.

Dunwoody, Cliff Floyd and Kevin Orie homered for the Marlins, who at 51-103 have the worst record in the major leagues.

Expos 11, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Orlando Cabrera had a career-high four hits, including three doubles, and Brad Fullmer hit a three-run homer. Montreal matched its season high with 18 hits.

Javier Vazquez (5-14), who had only one victory in his previous 12 starts, allowed three earned runs and eight hits in five innings. Anthony Telford pitched four scoreless innings for his first save.

Notes, quotes: The Lady Rebels are on an eight-match winning streak... Lee coach Alexander wasn't able to obtain video tapes of Abilene High; she just knows the Lady Eagles are good. "Monterey beat them 19-17 in the third game, and Monterey is a good ball club," Alexander said. "We're looking for a real good match." ... Lee could go to 3-0 in district with a win today, keeping the Lady Rebels on top of 4-5A. Still, it's way too early for that to mean much. "You've got to take things one game at a time," Alexander said. "I'd love for us to be 3-0, but even if you hit 3-0, you've still got teams going after you. At this point, every game's a stepping stone."
Next match: Lee will host Lubbock High at 7:30 p.m. Monday. This game was originally scheduled for Tuesday, but Lubbock High had a scheduling conflict, Alexander said.

Midland High at Abilene Cooper

When: 2:30 p.m.
Where: Cooper
Records: Midland High is 14-8 overall, 1-1 in District 4-5A. Abilene Cooper is 12-9 overall, 0-2 in district.

Notes, quotes: Cooper's loss to San Angelo Central has to considered an upset. The Lady Cougars will likely be looking to bounce back.
Next match: Midland High hosts San Angelo Central at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

LEE: Rebels roll up more than 400 yards ready for it. Now we go to El Paso (Irvin) and we have to get ready for that."

The Lee defense was so dominant that Martin never had a chance. The Warriors didn't score until 4:29 left in the game when Lee was putting a lot of players on the field.

"Well, we need to work on that a little, I guess, but I'm really proud of the kids in this one," said Lee defensive coordinator Kelvin Ratliff.

But the Martin touchdown, set up by a 40-yard pass from reserve quarterback Chris Reil to Aaron Meyer to the Lee four-yard line, didn't sit will with Lee starting linebacker Drew Anderson.

"I'm very disappointed that they scored on us there at the end," Anderson said. "The defense was holding up all the way and it was mostly three and out for them all night. We'll just have to go to El Paso and make up for it. We don't like for the other team to score."

The Rebel defense gave up only 31 total yards in the first half and one first down to Martin. Lee, meanwhile, had almost 300 yards of offense in the first half alone and had 17 first downs at the break.

Lee line coach Randy Smith liked the way the offensive line dominated the line of scrimmage.

"I'm really pleased with what they did out there tonight," Smith said. "(Starter) Colby Marcum got a little injury and we had to put Brian Fowler in there the whole second half and Fowler did a great job for us. We had a lot of people who really helped us tonight."

Wingback Eric Clodfelter continues to produce in the passing lanes, catching two more passes.

Lee is now a perfect 3-0 on the season. This was supposed to be Lee's toughest non-conference test. If that is true, there are some teams down the road that will pay a heavy price when they face these Rebels.

Boat captures pole for IRL race at TMS

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

FORT WORTH — Poles are nice, but Billy Boat would gladly trade them for wins.

The driver who won the Pep Boys Indy Racing League event in June at Texas Motor Speedway, turned another sizzling lap Friday and won the pole for the inaugural Lone Star 500 on the same 1 1/2-mile oval.

His speed of 225.979 mph was the fastest qualifying lap ever with the current IRL engine-chassis combination, breaking the record of 224.448 set by defending series champion Tony Stewart at the June race.

It was the third consecutive pole for Boat since missing two races with a broken left leg and pelvis. That set an IRL record, just as his A.J. Foyt Racing teammate Kenny Brack did with his three consecutive victories coming into this event.

"I'd definitely trade his for mine," Boat said with a grin when asked if he was jealous of his teammate. "Kenny's got a roll going and I've been trying to find out what he's eating and drinking and where he's hanging out.

"We've had some unfortunate luck in the races recently, but we know the equipment is good enough to win and we've just go to keep our heads down and keep going for it."

This pole, his fifth of the season — another IRL record — and the sixth of his career, was in jeopardy right to the end of the qualifying session on a steaming hot afternoon.

Boat's Aurora-powered Dallara was the second of 28 cars to make qualifying attempts. The fast laps came on the first of two allowable hot laps. He failed to finish the second lap because of a transmission problem.

While Boat and Foyt sweated from both the heat and the pressure, nine drivers took the second spot before the end of the session.

Stewart wound up on the outside of the front row for Sunday's race with a lap of 224.869. He was followed by Scott Sharp at 224.551, Mark Dismore at 224.299, Jeff Ward at 224.076 and Davey Hamilton at 223.677.

Stewart got two points for his runner-up position in qualifying and moved into a tie for second place in the season standings with Hamilton, both of them trailing Brack by 23 points with only this race and the season-finale at Las Vegas remaining.

"That's two points closer and any way you can get closer is great," said Stewart, who noted that Team Menard has worked overtime since the race at Atlanta last month in which he had engine problems.

"Our guys have been up 18-hour days working on the motors. This was really a good result for them after that disaster in Atlanta," Stewart explained.

Both Stewart and Sharp attributed the Foyt team's success this season to a very strong engine program, and both said Boat's pole streak could be attributed mostly to the team's qualifying engines. But Foyt and Boat both disagreed.

"The engine in Billy's car today was a very good backup race motor," Foyt said. "We broke his qualifying motor on the dyno. But our qualifying motors are not really that much better than our race motors. They're probably only 15 to 18 horsepower more, but we abuse them more, run them harder than we'd run a race engine. And we put stuff in them that could probably run all day but you don't want to chance it."

Skip Away goes after ninth straight victory in Woodward Stakes

Associated Press

■ Horse Racing

NEW YORK — And the cards and letters for Skip Away just keep coming.

As the 5-year-old gray horse goes for his ninth straight victory in Saturday's $500,000 Woodward Stakes at Belmont Park, fan letters from all over the world keep arriving at the office of his trainer, Sonny Hine.

"He's finally getting a lot of respect," said Hine, who trains Skip Away for his wife, Carolyn. "We've gotten letters from Holland, news clippings about him from Jordan ... people really like him."

Skip Away's fans would like nothing better than to see him close his career with consecutive victories in the Woodward, the Jockey Club Gold Cup on Oct. 10 and the Breeders' Cup Classic at Churchill Downs on Nov. 6 en route to the Horse of the Year title he narrowly missed last year.

In winning the Iselin at Monmouth Aug. 30, Skip Away joined Cigar as the only thoroughbreds to have cracked $9 million in earnings, and a couple more victories would push him past Cigar ($9,999,915).

But Saturday's 1 1/8 run at Belmont — the scene of his last loss one year ago — could be one of Skip Away's toughest assignments.

The Grade I race drew a fierce field of five, including Free House, 2-for-2 this year, including the Pacific Classic; the redoubtable Gentlemen; Coronado's Quest, the streaking 3-year-old who has won five straight; and a European invader in Running Stag, the long shot at 30-1 under Ray Cochrane.

Skip Away, who will be ridden by Jerry Bailey, is the 6-5 favorite. Free House, with Chris McCarron, is 9-5; Gentlemen, with Corey Nakatani up, is 7-2; and Coronado's Quest, under new rider Pat Day, is 4-1.

"This is such a small field, it becomes a jockey race more than anything else," Hine said. "There's only five horses — if he wants to go to the lead, he'll get the lead. I believe he can do anything you want him to do."

Skip Away, who has won 17 of his 35 starts, has won all six of his races this year at tracks from Florida to Maryland and California despite some roadblocks.

On June 19, just before leaving for the Hollywood Gold Cup, Skip Away got loose at Belmont Park and ran off riderless for a half-hour, tearing his shoes off in the process. He won anyway and came back two months later to capture the Iselin by a nose despite having developed a reaction to a poultice on his legs the morning of the race.

"When he got loose it did a little something to him," Hine said. "And at Monmouth, he was on a hot day carrying 131 pounds. He doesn't really care for the surface at Monmouth, either. He was a little hang-dogish here Tuesday and Wednesday. But Thursday, you couldn't pull him up. He's a tough horse."

Mr. Greeley filly brings $310,000 at Keeneland sale

LEXINGTON, Ky. — A filly from Mr. Greeley's first crop of foals brought a top price of $310,000 during Friday's session of Keeneland's September Yearling Sale.

Narvick International purchased the chestnut daughter of Mr. Greeley from the Mare Haven Farm consignment. She is out of Poundzig by Danzig. Mr. Greeley, whose first foals are yearlings this year, won five races at 2 and 3 and earned $474,452.

Second high price of the day was $220,000 paid by trainer Kenneth McPeek, as agent, for a bay colt by Silver Deputy. Mount Brilliant Farm sold the colt, the first foal out of Date Stone.

Gordon focuses on another Winston title

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

DOVER, Del. — Best not to ask Jeff Gordon about breaking records.

His primary focus is on winning the Winston Cup championship. Beyond that, he seems to set a precedent every time he wins.

So why talk about it?

"We've just got to stick to our game plan," Gordon said as he began preparations for the MBNA Gold 400 on Sunday at Dover Downs International Speedway. "It's all about points."

Gordon, seeking his third Winston Cup championship in the last four years, has 208 of them to play with. He'd like to add a few more to further solidify his lead over defending race champion Mark Martin.

But Gordon won't be counting as he circles The Monster Mile, where he already is a three-time winner. He'll just be doing what comes naturally — running at whatever pace seems appropriate and waiting to see what develops.

"You have to drive smart," he said. "If you do that, the track comes to you much of the time."

It has been doing just that for most of the last three months, during which Gordon has won seven times in 10 races. Some of them — most recently the Southern 500 two weeks ago — have been won when others used up their equipment then watched Gordon drive to the winner's circle.

"We won't use up the car," Gordon advised. "If we've got a third-place car, we'll be happy to finish third."

That philosophy has permitted him to break open what once was a tight race with Martin and Dale Jarrett, who won May 31 at Dover Downs. Jarrett now trails by 308 points with just eight of 33 races remaining.

"It's really going to take two problems almost for them," Jarrett said of the predicament Gordon must experience to inject some life into the all-but-decided championship race.

MHS: Bulldogs get to play Plainsmen again

(From 1B)

"That is the offense that allows teams like Navy to beat Notre Dame. It is a tough offense to defend. The big thing is you don't see it much."

Monterey's defense also is the kind that you don't see much in that it brought back 10 starters from last year, and they have stood out. The Plainsmen have allowed an average of 145 yards rushing and 55 yards passing in two games this year. In a 23-7 loss to Abilene High, the defense kept Monterey in the game, down just 9-7 going into the fourth quarter. However, the weight of eight offensive turnovers became too much to bear.

Monterey only turned the ball over one time in a 12-6 win over El Paso Hanks.

Monterey will also be facing its second 4-5A feature back in three weeks. The Plainsmen opened the season against Abilene High's Arturo "Sneezy" Beltran, who rushed for 136 yards on 30 carries. Now, AHS must face the Shemond Davis, the second leading rusher in the district, who has rushed for 436 yards in two games.

"Their tailback is a threat on every play," Morton said. "He can score everytime he touches the ball."

Morton, who is in his first year at Monterey, knows this is a chance to knock off a 4-5A school, and that can bring a great deal of credibility when building a program.

"Playing District 4-5A, you will find out where you are as a team," Morton said. "It is the best football in Class 5A. Scrimmaging Permian and playing Abilene High and Midland High, they play the type of ball we like to play. They play physical and they get after you."

Morton's team waits for the chance, but knows any extra help would be nice.

"Our chances might increase if we played in El Paso and got those officials (who did the Andress-Midland High game)," Morton joked. "There wasn't any question who had the better team. They (Midland High) dominated."

MORE MONTEREY: Morton says that four or five players will play both ways... Monterey has scored three TDs this season — one each by the offense, defense and special teams... The team's leading rusher is fullback Tarvis Grant (91 yards on 19 carries). Second is Adrian Guigley (79 yards on 20 carries)... Quarterback Lance Cantu has passed for 45 yards and has almost as many interceptions (3) as completions (4) in his 23 attempts... Among the other players to look out for are Roger Ruiz (10 tackles versus Hanks), receiver/defensive back Dwight Smith, lineman Graylon Hamilton and tight end/defensive end Branum Noble... Morton came to Monterey from Friona, where he coached for six years and won three district titles. He takes over for Buster Leaf, who took over the position at North Mesquite....

SO WE MEET AGAIN: This is the first meeting between the two schools since 1993, the last year of a 38-year streak. The 38 games played between the two teams is more than MHS has played against 4-5A foes Midland Lee (37) or Abilene Cooper (37)... Monterey owns a 18-19-1 record against MHS. Monterey has won the last three meetings. Midland High's last victory came in 1990 (7-3)...

POSSIBLE THREE-PEAT: Shemond Davis can join elite company with another 200-yard game. Davis, a senior running back, has consecutive efforts for over 200 yards (a MHS record) and one against Monterey will put him with Lee's Farris Strambler (1989) as the only two backs in city history to rush for 200 yards in three straight. Strambler did so twice that season en route to the most productive season ever by a Midland city running back (2,718).

Davis would also become the first MHS back to rush for 200 yards three times in one season...

4-5A PLAYERS AMONG STATE LEADERS: Abilene High's Arturo Beltran leads Class 5A in rushing with 469 yards going into this weekend's games. Midland High's Shemond Davis is third, just 33 behind despite playing one fewer game. Permian's Leland Morris is eighth in the state in passing.

NOTES: Lubbock Monterey is injury-free while Midland High is missing DB Joey Kindred, who injured his knee against El Paso Austin... The last time Midland High played a Saturday game was in 1994 at Dallas Jesuit (21-17 win).

Buccaneers unveil new James Stadium

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

Home at last, even if the Tampa Bay Buccaneers never have played there.

The place is Raymond James Stadium, a state-of-the-art facility featuring everything from luxurious club seats to a $3 million pirate ship with cannons that will be fired whenever the home team scores.

The Bucs hope that is often on Sunday when they play the Chicago Bears in a matchup of 0-2 teams.

While the finishing touches were being put on the stadium, the Bucs played all five exhibition games and their first two regular-season games on the road. That can tire a club, and it didn't help that Tampa Bay opened at Minnesota and Green Bay, two top rivals in the NFC Central.

Coach Tony Dungy has played down the effect of all the travel, but others haven't.

"Seven weeks is a lot of traveling, and I think it's worn on all of us," quarterback Trent Dilfer said. "It's not an excuse. It's not why we've played poorly. But you know it wears on you, and I think it'll be refreshing to be at home."

It also should be refreshing to see the struggling Bears on the other side of the ball, although Chicago was competitive in losses to Jacksonville and Pittsburgh. The Bears fell by a total of six points.

"It's still an L," linebacker Rico McDonald said. "For us, we've got to look at it and say, 'How can we improve? How can we get better?'

"We can't harp on, 'Well, we were close.' Close isn't good enough. We get paid to win football games, and we haven't done that in the first two games."

Nor have nine other teams. Something will give at the Meadowlands, where the Colts and Jets meet. Same thing in Buffalo, where the Bills play host to the Rams. And in Arizona, where the Cardinals face the Eagles.

Also Sunday, it's Detroit at Minnesota, Pittsburgh at Miami, San Diego at Kansas City, Tennessee at New England, Washington at Seattle, Baltimore at Jacksonville, Denver at Oakland, and Green Bay at Cincinnati.

On Monday night, it's Dallas at the New York Giants.

Atlanta, Carolina, New Orleans and San Francisco have byes.

The Colts, rebuilding after posting the worst record in the league (3-13) last season, have played behind an inconsistent Peyton Manning. Of course, that can be expected from a rookie quarterback.

But Indianapolis has dominated the series with the Jets recently, winning eight of nine in New Jersey.

"Is that how many it is," Jets cornerback Aaron Glenn said. "That's not good. I wish you hadn't told me that."

The Jets rarely are able to control Marshall Faulk, who leads the AFC in total yards this season. In eight games with New York, Faulk has 550 yards rushing, more than against anyone else. And he has five touchdowns on the ground.

He's hurt the Jets as a receiver, too, with 29 catches for 264 yards and a touchdown.

Like the Bucs, the Bills opened with a pair of away games and lost both, at San Diego and at Miami. The team hadn't started the year with two straight road losses since 1973.

"I think there's only three teams (Buffalo, Tampa Bay and Arizona) that played the first two games on the road and all of them have one thing in common," Bills coach Wade Phillips said. "They're all 0-2. It's tough to go out on the road, especially when it's the other team's first home game."

Buffalo hopes to take advantage of that against the Rams, who played both their games at home, but couldn't win. St. Louis has gone into the second quarter of both games trailing 14-0.

"It's been that we haven't started fast enough," coach Dick Vermeil said. "In the second half, we've scored 31 points and given up 14 in the last two weeks. But it's hard to catch up against good football teams."

Raymond James Stadium in Tampa, Fla., stands ready to host its first NFL game Sunday when the Chicago Bears visit the Buccaneers.

Elway plans to start game against Raiders

DENVER (AP) — John Elway's sore hamstring won't be enough to keep him off the field Sunday. After all, he's missed just 10 games because of injury in his 16-year career.

Elway took virtually all the snaps with the first team in Friday's 75-minute practice, and Denver coach Mike Shanahan said the quarterback will play against the Raiders in Oakland.

"He looked good and, in fact, it didn't bother him at all," Shanahan said. "John will be ready to go."

Elway, who strained his right hamstring last Sunday against Dallas, waved off reporters as he walked off the field at the team's training complex. Before the workout, he said he didn't intend to do "anything too strenuous."

Elway completed 16 of 22 passes for 268 yards and two touchdowns before leaving in the fourth quarter against the Cowboys.

If Elway is unable to play or is forced to leave the game against Oakland, Shanahan said he'd have no problem sending in backup Bubby Brister.

"We are confident with Bubby because of how well he played in preseason," he said. "You always do (have concerns), anytime a guy pulls a hamstring, regardless of what position. You're always wondering if a guy going 100 mph is going to reinjure that hamstring."

As for other injuries on the Broncos, Shanahan said defensive tackle Keith Traylor was listed at 70 to 75 percent with his sprained left ankle and cornerback Darrien Gordon's bruised right clavicle was listed at close to 100 percent.

of credit, they knew what they had to stop."

Williams had 194 yards on seven catches. The yardage was the second most in one game in Permian history and within nine yards of Greg Anderson's 203 yards against El Paso Austin in 1984. It was the second time in three weeks that Williams put his name in the PHS' record books. He opened the season with 187 yards against El Paso Irvin. That mark ranks fourth.

"We made adjustments out there and they worked good," Williams said. "When things are going well, we are just going get on all cylinders and trying to go back at it to get a TD."

For the night, Permian had 219 yards passing and 143 rushing to improve to 3-0 for the season. Permian came in with wins over Irvin and Allen. Now it travels to Temple and hosts Dallas Bishop Lynch before the start of district.

"Anytime you beat Amarillo High, you had to do some good things," Mayes said. "They know how to play."

The offense rampage for Permian followed a lackluster first half.

The second quarter, in particular, was quite sloppy with both teams combining for six turnovers (three each). Permian had three turnovers (two fumbles and interception). Two of those turnovers came inside Amarillo's 40-yard line, one on the 1-yard line. The other turnover, a fumble by Koefie Powell, set up Amarillo High's only score of half, a 23-yard run around right end by Johnson.

Amarillo High was also mistake prone. The Sandies also had three turnovers (one fumble and two picks) although the damage was less. Only a fumble on their 42 set up a Permian score (a 32-yard field goal by Keith Robinson). The other two turnovers were interceptions around midfield.

In the first half, Permian had 23 yards rushing and 60 passing in the first half. Amarillo High rushed for 78 and passed for 39. The two teams combined for seven turnovers and one third-down conversion 11 attempts.

MOJO NOTES: Odessa Permian is 21-3 against Amarillo High... The safety in the second quarter was Permian's first since 1994 (against Abilene Cooper)... The game was played in front of 12,000 people... Both teams were a combined 3-of-19 on third-down conversions. All three times a conversion happened, the team went on to score...

Midland Christian bounces back with 27-14 victory vs. Coahoma

By Dave Sager
MRT Correspondent

The Midland Christian Mustangs proved Friday night that the loss to Stanton one week ago was not going to keep them down by beating the Coahoma Bulldogs 27-14.

Midland Christian (2-1) and Coahoma (1-2) started out slow with both teams not scoring until late in the second quarter. The Mustangs scored on a 10-yard pass to Justin Scott from Jamie Beeghley with 4 minutes and 25 seconds left and the Bulldogs scored on a quarterback sneak for one yard by Blake Nichols with just 40 seconds left in the half.

The third quarter, however, was all Midland Christian with three touchdowns all by their best athlete Josh Miller, who is the Mustangs' starting tailback, free safety, punter, placekicker as well as kickoff and punt returner. Two were passes from freshman quarterback Jamie Beeghley for 43 and 25 yards and one was for a 1-yard run.

Coahoma scored a 25-yard touchdown pass to David White from Blake Nichols in the fourth quarter, but it was too little, too late.

Miller led the Mustangs with 101 yards rushing on 17 carries, two receptions for 68 yards and three TD's. He even had a 90-yard kickoff return for a touchdown called back early in the fourth quarter. Trey Bohannon had 42 yards rushing on 13 carries and 5 receptions for 91 yards.

Lance Monteleone and Walt Bordelon led the Bulldogs with 45 and 38 yards rushing, while David White caught 4 passes for 60 yards.

"We came together as a team tonight," said Miller. "We can do a lot better, but this win makes us one step closer to our goal — a state championship."

Matadors run past Big Spring

By Aaron Gutierrez
MRT Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Who needs a running game? That is the question Lubbock Estacado Matadors answered in their 35-21 triumph over the Big Spring Steers. The Matadors were able to churn out 353 yards on the ground, 279 of which came in the first half.

Estacado's star running back, Todrick Thomas eluded the Steers defense for most of the night. He picked up 173 yards rushing despite sitting out most of the third quarter with a mildly sprained ankle.

Estacado quarterback Justin Hibler was rarely called upon to throw the ball as the Matador running attack proved to be too much for the Steers.

Big Spring, on the other hand, did not have the luxury of a power rushing game. Steer running back Colby Ford managed to pound out 107 yards on the ground, but he found himself to be an easy target for the Estacado defense.

An ineffective passing game practically forced Ford to carry the entire load of the Big Spring offense on his shoulders.

Big Spring did not throw in the towel after a 21-7 halftime deficit. The Steers came out and marched down the field on the opening drive. Quarterback Lance Brock capped off the drive with a 16-yard scamper which made the score interesting at 21-14. Ford also tacked on another touchdown near the end of the third quarter.

In the end, Estacado finished off the Steers with a flurry of rushes from Thomas and fullback Craig Worthy, who picked up 108 yards, 81 of which came on Estacado's first play from scrimmage.

Neither team had any luck with the referees, as both were called for numerous amounts of penalties. Big Spring's penalties were more costly by the fact that they often kept an Estacado drive alive.

Mental errors and untimely fumbles caused the demise of the Steers as they were plagued by turning the ball over four times.

"We need to hold on to the ball and watch the turnovers. We've got to improve on our pass blocking and avoid the big plays," Ford said.

The big plays killed the Steers early in the game. Two runs for over 63 yards really dug the Steers into a huge hole.

"We should have won that game. They just busted out a couple of big plays on us. There is nothing we could do about that.," Ford said.

The win for Estacado makes its record 1-2 while the Steers fall to 1-3. Big Spring now must go on the road for their next game against Abilene Wylie.

FORT WORTH — Abilene High's Arturo "Sneezy" Beltran and Euless Trinity's Robert Lolohea had a major rushing duel here Friday night, but Trinity had the best of the scoreboard with a 49-24 win over the Eagles.

For AHS (3-1) it was the first loss of the season for the Eagles, who fell behind 27-7 in the first half and never recovered.

Beltran had 171 yards rushing on 21 carries, but Lolohea had 180 yards on only 16 carries. He also had an 86-yard punt return for a touchdown.

However, Trinity's Brent Ingram also had 132 yards rushing and scored four times. That was the difference in the much ballyhooed matchup between Beltran and Lolohea.

Tide forgetting last year's nightmare

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — At this time last year, Alabama coach Mike DuBose was in full panic mode.

The Crimson Tide were 2-0, but DuBose didn't feel good about his team. Alabama had struggled to move the ball in a 20-0 win at Vanderbilt, so DuBose felt he needed to make some changes.

"We didn't have much success offensively and we came back that Sunday and started second-guessing everything," he said. "We got completely away from the things we were committed to."

Gone were the plans for a pass-oriented offense and Alabama reverted to its old conservative ways. The Tide lost seven of its last nine games and finished with a 4-7 record, its worst since 1957.

"We spent the entire spring and preseason (working on a new offense) and then we throw it out the window. We didn't have anything to hang our hat on," DuBose said.

One year later, Alabama is in a similar situation. A quick 2-0 start has helped the 24th-ranked Tide erase the bitter taste left over from last year.

But the enthusiasm is tempered, and rightfully so. After all, no one wants to see a repeat of last year. But DuBose, in his second year, is confident it won't happen again.

"Hopefully we understand the reasons those things happened and it's important that we don't dwell on them," DuBose said. "When you don't forget the mistakes of the past, you allow them to happen again."

This year there won't be any changes, DuBose vowed. And why should there be? So far, the Tide have looked nothing like last year's team.

Alabama looked sharp in a revamped offense in its season-opening 38-31 win over Brigham Young. On its opening possession, the Tide lined up four wideouts on the second play of the game. Three plays later Alabama went with two tight ends on a fullback dive and followed it by using cornerback Fernando Bryant as one of five receivers on a quarterback draw.

Not since Bear Bryant unveiled the wishbone in 1971 had Alabama used such a radical offense — and the coaches says there's a lot more to come.

"We've got a lot more stuff than we showed in that game," quarterbacks coach Charlie Stubbs said. "We've got a lot more wrinkles."

should've put 40 points on the board tonight."

The first half proved to be a defensive struggle as Stanton only took a 10-0 lead into the locker room. Will Harris booted a 28-yard field goal and James Jenkins ran for a 4-yard score. That's much more than Colorado City (2-1) mustered in the first 24 minutes with just four first downs and minus four yards rushing. The Wolves didn't reach Stanton territory until midway through the second quarter.

The score remained close until the fourth quarter but the score didn't reflect how much the Buffs actually dominated.

"I felt we dominated the whole game," Cotton said. "We just made too many mistakes. But even with the mistakes, I felt we got a lot of good conditioning in tonight."

The Buffs officially put the game on ice as Kyle Herm, who gets plenty of accolades with his quarterback arm, did the damage with his speed with a 50-yard punt return for a score. Herm took the ball at midfield, cut across to the near side and streamed to daylight for a lighting quick strike.

"I almost dropped it off the bounce because it took a wild bounce on me," said Herm about his dramatic TD. "I just got around a wall and got the blocks."

The usually dangerous Herm under center also had some problems with the Wolves defense as he just 5-of-10 for 39 yards passing and had 43 yards rushing on 13 carries.

"Colorado City played a good game," Herm said. "They had a good game plan spreading you out."

As good as this win was over a team from a higher classification, the Buffs know there's still plenty of work to do if they want to get back to the state championship form of 1997.

"Our defense is coming along and our offense is starting to click. We're not there yet," Herm said.

Stanton travels to face Reagan County next week.

'Horns enter lions' den in Kansas

Associated Press

Kansas State has scored points by the bushel in its first two games, and Texas has given them up just as easily.

That's why the No. 5 Wildcats are favored over Texas by nearly four touchdowns when the two meet in Saturday's only clash between Big 12 Conference teams.

Kansas State has outscored nonconference opponents Northern Illinois and Indiana State by a combined score of 139-7. Expect Texas to offer a tougher test, but the Longhorns have shown plenty of weaknesses themselves, especially on defense.

Texas climbed briefly into the Top 25 rankings with an opening win over New Mexico State. But its fortunes quickly fizzled as it was pummeled last week by UCLA in a game more lopsided than the 49-31 score.

The Longhorns have one of the nation's top running backs in Ricky Williams, who has already scored nine touchdowns. But redshirt freshman Major Applewhite is expected to play in place of injured Richard Walton.

The Wildcats have two running backs, Marlon Charles and Eric Hickson, averaging more than six yards per carry. But their quarterback, Michael Bishop, is among the conference leaders in total offense and scoring.

On defense, the Wildcats are the top-ranked unit in the nation, yielding just 128.5 yards per game.

Texas' defense, on the other hand, is giving up 533 yards per game — easily the highest in the Big 12.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. CDT.

Other Big 12 games Saturday will be:

— No. 21 Missouri at No. 1 Ohio State at 2:30 p.m. CDT. The Buckeyes strengthened their hold on the top spot by drubbing Toledo 49-0. Missouri is coming off an impressive win as well, beating rival Kansas behind the nation's leading rusher, Devin West. He ran for a school-record 319 yards. Missouri's Corby Jones, last year's all-Big 12 quarterback, had a poor game against Kansas and must do better to keep the Buckeyes' defense honest.

■ Big 12 Roundup

— Utah State at No. 15 Colorado at 2 p.m. CDT. The Buffaloes figure to handle the Big West Conference Utes easily — but that's what many thought before Colorado barely beat Fresno State last week. Buffs quarterback Mike Moschetti hopes to play after suffering rib injuries last weekend. But backup Adam Bledsoe has taken plenty of practice snaps, just in case.

— No. 17 Texas A&M is at Southern Mississippi at 2 p.m. CDT. The Aggies throttled a high-powered Louisiana Tech offense last week and hope to do the same again Saturday. On offense, the Aggies are led by D'Andre Hardeman, who scored three touchdowns last week. The Golden Eagles are led by quarterback Lee Roberts and receiver Sherrod Gideon, but their running game was held to nine yards in a 34-6 loss to Penn State last week.

— No. 20 North Carolina State at Baylor at 11:30 a.m. CDT. If the Bears didn't know much about North Carolina before last weekend, they learned a lot from the Wolfpack's 24-7 upset of then-No. 2 Florida State. Wolfpack coach Mike O'Cain's biggest job may be guarding against a letdown after beating the Seminoles. Baylor's problems appear more fundamental after committing a school-record 19 penalties in a sloppy 27-17 loss to Oregon State.

— No. 25 Mississippi State at Oklahoma State at 6 p.m. CDT. The two schools have played only twice, splitting a pair of games in the early '70s. Mississippi State is led by tailback James Johnson, who rushed for 1,000 yards last year despite starting only four games. The Cowboys have an aggressive defense that hopes to corral Johnson.

— Fresno State at Texas Tech at 6 p.m. CDT. Tech hasn't allowed a touchdown in two wins and leads the Big 12 in yardage. But those numbers were posted against Texas El-Paso and North Texas. Fresno State nearly forced Colorado into overtime last week with an offense led by running back Jamie Kimbrough, who is also a pass-catching threat, and quarterback Billy Volek.

— California at Oklahoma at 6 p.m. CDT. The Golden Bears were overmatched against No. 4 Nebraska last week, but hope to get back in the win column in Norman. Highly touted quarterback Justin Vedder leads the Cal attack. The Sooners scored twice in the final minutes to edge TCU last week, but will probably have to play better to win Saturday. They'll rely heavily on their defense, ranked third in the nation at just 168.5 yards per game.

— Illinois State at Kansas at 6:30 p.m. CDT. After a 41-23 loss to archrival Missouri last week, the Jayhawks will look to get healthy against Illinois State. The Jayhawk defense yielded 319 yards rushing last week to one man. David Winbush figures to get most of the running calls after gaining 99 yards against Missouri on 23 carries. But backup Mitch Bowles is also among Big 12 leaders in all-purpose yardage and scored on a scintillating run against Missouri.

— Ball State at Iowa State at 1 p.m. CDT. The Cyclones finally beat cross-state rival Iowa last week and hope to keep up the momentum against Ball State. Iowa State will rely on running backs Darren Davis, who had 244 yards last week, and Joe Parmentier, who twice crashed into the end zone from short yardage. The Cyclones' biggest task Saturday might be to guard against overconfidence when they play the Mid-American Conference member.

— No. 3 Nebraska is idle this week.

Florida quarterback Jesse Palmer discusses strategy with coach Steve Spurrier during the Gators' win over The Citadel Sept. 5 in Gainesville. The second-ranked Gators play at No. 6 Tennessee on Saturday.

Spurrier gets comedy material out of series between Gators, Vols

By Tom Sharp
AP Sports Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Florida's five-game winning streak over Tennessee has done wonders for Steve Spurrier's standup comedy routine.

"We expect to be treated with a lot more respect this year because we are now the defending Citrus Bowl champions," the Florida coach cracked.

The No. 2 Gators (2-0) play at No. 6 Tennessee (1-0) on Saturday in one of college football's great rivalries.

And Florida's domination of late has given Spurrier, a Tennessee native, an ample supply of comic material.

Such as calling Orlando, Fla., site of the Citrus Bowl, the winter home of the Tennessee Volunteers. Or noting, "You can't spell Citrus without UT."

There wasn't much the Vols could do except take it. They spent New Year's in Orlando in 1993, 1995 and 1996, largely due to their inability to beat the Gators. While Florida won the Southeastern Conference championship each of those years, the Vols headed for the Citrus Bowl.

But last year, despite Florida's 33-20 victory, it was Tennessee that won the SEC title while the Gators packed for Orlando.

"They had a better year than we did," Spurrier said. "They're the defending conference champs and we're the defending Citrus Bowl champs. So it's kind of a reversal from years past."

And it's a reversal that doesn't sit well with the Gators. Florida beat both the teams in last year's SEC title game, Tennessee and Auburn, but were denied their sixth straight trip to the game by losses to LSU and Georgia.

"They won our title. They have our ring," Florida linebacker Johnny Rutledge said. "Now we've got to go out and try to take it from them. Last year, the two teams that played in the conference title game, we beat handily. It made me sick to my stomach."

Even the Vols realize their SEC title does not command as much respect because of the loss to Florida.

"They probably say we really didn't earn it because Florida did beat us," receiver Peerless Price said. "But we went about our business the rest of the year and Florida lost two games in the SEC. But a lot of people probably don't respect us for our championship because we didn't beat Florida."

Added linebacker Al Wilson: "Our season is always put into this one game. I think the critics say we can't beat Florida so we shouldn't be at the top."

Twice in the seven years since the SEC expanded and split into two divisions the loser of this game won the division title: Florida in 1992 and Tennessee last year.

"It's hard not to place that much emphasis on this game because of the potential for going two games down in the division," said Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer, who is 55-11 overall but just 1-5 against the Gators.

"If we were in different divisions it probably wouldn't be such a big deal, but it is a big deal because of the consequences for the loser. It's hard to expect the other team to lose twice, although history has proven it can happen."

But history more strongly suggests that the loser will spend New Year's in Orlando.

"It only matters at the end who's the champion," Spurrier said.

Buckeyes need to keep up with this Jones

By Rusty Miller
AP Sports Writer

Something's got to give when Missouri plays No. 1 Ohio State, and Tigers coach Larry Smith just hopes his quarterback stays in one piece.

No. 21 Missouri wants — no, needs — to run against the Buckeyes, and it's willing to put Corby Jones in the line of fire to do it.

The Buckeyes are keying on Jones and fully expect to crack his pads a few times in Saturday's game in Columbus, much as they did a year ago in a 31-10 victory in Columbia.

The Tigers already have questioned some of the punishment Jones has taken in a 37-0 victory over Bowling Green and last week's 41-23 decision over Kansas.

"I don't know if it's head-hunting," said Smith, who grew up going to games at Ohio Stadium.

■ College Football

"Basically people are really loaded and stacked to stop him."

That's despite the fact that Missouri leads the nation in rushing with 370.5 yards a game and that Devin West carried 33 times for a school-record 319 yards against the Jayhawks.

At least one Ohio State defender couldn't remember West's name — perhaps an indication of whom the Buckeyes are concentrating on.

"What you do is, you have to keep going at the quarterback," Ohio State defensive end Rodney Bailey said.

A year ago, things were going well for the Tigers in the second quarter until Buckeyes linebacker Andy Katzenmoyer leveled a scrambling Jones. The momentum seemed to shift then, even though Jones denies it was the jarring tackle that did it.

But Ohio State thinks Jones became gun-shy after the hit — and thinks it can get the same result again.

In other games featuring top 10 teams Saturday, it's No. 2 Florida at No. 6 Tennessee; No. 4 UCLA at Houston; Texas at No. 5 Kansas State; No. 7 LSU at Auburn; No. 8 Penn State at Pittsburgh; Brigham Young at Washington and Clemson at No. 10 Virginia.

Florida (2-0) renews its SEC rivalry with Tennessee (1-0) riding a five-game winning streak over the Vols. This time, Florida won't have to face Peyton Manning, but Gators coach Steve Spurrier doesn't think his team has any psychological advantage.

"I don't put any stock at all in that," Spurrier said. "We don't talk about it. Certainly, one team doesn't beat the other all the time and we know that. We're just trying to get ready to play the best we can."

No. 4 UCLA (1-0) has a 4-0 record against Texas teams the past two seasons and are 27 1/2-point favorites against the Cougars (0-2).

"We don't overlook anyone," UCLA quarterback Cade McNown said. "Last year, we started out 0-2 and it was an uphill battle the rest of the way. We want to make sure we take care of each game and not look past anybody, no matter what their record is."

The Bruins beat Houston 66-10 and Texas 66-3 last season and opened this season with a 49-31 victory over Texas.

The game between No. 7 LSU (1-0) and Auburn features one of the wilder rivalries in the SEC. Take out Auburn's 34-10 win in 1993 and the other five games were all decided by six points or less with crazy endings. Auburn has beaten LSU four times since 1992.

Razorbacks eagerly await game with SMU

By Kelly P. Kissel
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK — The pain of losing to Southern Methodist the last three years has Arkansas pointing to Saturday's game against the Mustangs as its first "Game of the Year."

SMU coach Mike Cavan is flattered.

"We're nowhere near where they are," Cavan said. "We're just a bunch of little guys from Dallas. We're learning how to be a better football team."

Since 1995, Arkansas has found a way to lose to the Mustangs, still rebuilding after surrendering its football team under NCAA sanctions in 1987-88. SMU has won only 24 games since restoring football in 1989 — and one-sixth of the victories have been over the Razorbacks.

—With less than a minute to play in 1995, Barry Lunney Jr. fumbled at the SMU 1, letting the Mustangs escape with a 17-14 victory. It was SMU's only victory of the year.

—In 1996, quarterback Pete Burks fumbled to end a first-half two-minute drill aimed at padding a 10-7 Razorback lead. SMU scored two plays later to go up for good in a 23-10 win.

—Coaches, players and most of the officiating crew missed a touchdown signal in the second quarter of last year's game. The episode, while not the Razorbacks' fault, led to confusion on the sideline and appeared to contribute to a 31-9 loss.

It makes one wonder what could possibly happen in this year's game.

"This has probably been the most-asked question. How are you going to do against SMU?" first-year Arkansas coach Houston Nutt said.

Cavan said, "I'm flattered by the idea that Arkansas has pinpointed us as the game of the year."

Arkansas will play more important games this year — SEC play begins next week at Fayetteville against Alabama — but Nutt prefers to dwell only on SMU as the most important game of the week.

"It's a very big game," he said.

The Razorbacks (1-0) have been 2-0 this decade only once, six seasons ago, after opening 2-0 eight times in the 1980s. SMU enters the game 0-2 after falling to Rice and Tulane.

In the 1997 game, Arkansas finished with minus-22 yards rushing. In its season opener two weeks ago, the Razorbacks had 249 yards on the ground and welcomed back Madre Hill, who last saw action in 1995.

Hill carried nine times for 73 yards and a touchdown — after fumbling the ball away close to the goal line on Arkansas' first possession.

It was only the second fumble lost for Hill.

"He's doing very well for, the first play of 1998, putting the ball on the ground," Nutt said. "All we did was give it back to him on the next play. Remember, it's been nearly three years since he touched the ball in a game situation."

Chrys Chukwuma had 132 yards and two touchdowns in the opener against Southwestern Louisiana, on just 12 carries. Anthony Lucas also caught two touchdown passes, including a 46-yard TD, as the Razorbacks had 200 yards rushing and 200 yards passing for the first time since 1996.

SMU, meanwhile, had 185 yards rushing from Rodnick Phillips in his first start against Rice two weeks ago. Phillips had 60 yards against Tulane last week, but the Mustangs had to give up much of its running plan after falling behind 31-0. SMU lost 31-21.

"We're a very young football team and we're struggling," said Cavan, who has just 12 seniors, including one at each corner on defense. Cornerback Jacoby Rhinehart has two fumble recoveries after two games.

Freshman quarterback Josh McCown threw for 252 yards against Tulane, 162 to senior Albert Johnson.

Winless Devils won't overlook North Texas

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Lured by money and facing a team oh so hungry for a victory after an unexpectedly awful start to the season, North Texas visits Arizona State this weekend overmatched but not overlooked.

"We're taking them very seriously, obviously," Arizona State quarterback Ryan Kealy said. "We're 0-2, and if we don't take them seriously, there's something really wrong with this team."

There has been something very wrong with the Wildcats so far this season, as they lost a heartbreaker to Washington at home 42-38, then were beaten soundly by Brigham Young 26-6.

By all accounts, the Sun Devils' practices this week were as spirited and intense as they have been all season.

"I think we were up in the clouds a little bit," Kealy said. "This has brought us down to reality. This is football. We just have to go out and hit and hit and hit until they can't hit us anymore."

Red-hot Pepper gets U.S. team off to fast start

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

DUBLIN, Ohio — Dottie Pepper hit Team USA's first shot and was the emotional leader the rest of the day, scoring two points as the Americans took a 5 1/2-2 1/2 lead over Team Europe after Friday's opening rounds of the Solheim Cup.

The United States, seeking its third straight team title, took three of four points in the morning foursome, or alternate-shot, matches, then came back to win 2 1/2 of a possible four points in the afternoon four-ball, or best-ball, matches.

Pepper was the lynchpin, energized by the flag-waving crowd and continually hitting the big shots needed not just to win holes but to prevent the opposition from winning them. Three times during the afternoon match, she saved par and halved holes with long putts.

Pepper, who has played in all five Solheims, teamed with Juli Inkster in the morning at Muirfield Village Golf Club, then was paired with a soggy Brandie Burton in the afternoon.

Pepper's teams won 3-1 and 2-up, improving her record to 7-3-1 in Solheim foursomes and fourball matches. The two points also gave her 10 1/2 in Solheim play — the most of anyone on either side.

In the biggest rout of the day, Pat Hurst and Rosie Jones rolled to a 7-5 victory over Europe's Lisa Hackney and Sophie Gustafson. Hurst, who also picked up two points, and Jones, cheered by Ohio State fans in the gallery, led 6-up through nine holes after winning five of six holes during one span.

Betsy King and Chris Johnson went seven under but could only halve their best-ball match against Laura Davies and Charlotta Sorenstam.

France's Marie Laure de Lorenzi, playing with Helen Alfredsson, salvaged a point for Europe when she holed a 35-foot sand shot from behind the 17th hole for a 2-1 victory over Kelly Robbins and Sherri Steinhauer.

"It hasn't gone really according to our plans today," European captain Pia Nilsson said. "The Americans played really, really well. But I think we're OK, because we're not far away from playing great. There are still 20 more points to go, so we have a lot left."

Pepper's playing partner in the best-ball competition was Burton, who struggled with her game throughout the day but found her way to a prime spot on most of the nightly sports highlight shows.

Burton had to stand in the slippery, marshy area around the creek which snakes across the par-5 11th hole as she hit her third shot from almost eye level on the steep bank. She slipped as she swung, hitting the ball into the creek, then lost her balance and fell backwards. She tried to jump across the creek, but fell on the far bank, losing her shoe in the muck. Her shorts and shoes were covered with mud.

In the morning matches, Inkster nearly aced the 16th hole and Pepper followed by hitting the 5-foot birdie putt that all but assured the Americans' first point.

AP Photo

Chris Johnson, right, gives teammate Betsy King a high five after their team scored a birdie on the fourth hole at Muirfield Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio. Solheim Cup play began Friday.

After Davies and Trish Johnson conceded the 17th hole and the match, the large partisan crowd circling the green shouted, "USA!" Inkster smiled and raised her fist to the gallery while Pepper tipped her visor and waved.

"You hope to get on the board first like we did," Pepper said. "The team wants to know what's happening in front of them."

Each match is worth a point in the Solheim, the women's equivalent of the men's Ryder Cup. The United States needs 14 of the 28 possible points to retain the cup; Team Europe needs 14 1/2 points.

Saturday's matches will also feature alternate-shot twosomes in the morning and best ball in the afternoon. On Sunday, all 12 singles will play in head-to-head matches.

Canadian Barr storms to second-round lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Dave Barr no longer has perfect balance because of a bad back. On Friday, the 46-year-old Canadian was perfectly wonderful from tee to green and gained the second-round lead in the B.C. Open.

Barr, who has won just twice on the PGA Tour — the 1981 Quad Cities Open and 1987 Atlanta Classic — shot a 7-under-par 65 for a two-round total of 9-under 135. That was one shot better than first-round leader Chris DiMarco, who had a 70. Chris Perry also shot a 70 and was another stroke back in third.

Early-morning fog delayed play 90 minutes before evaporating into a cloudless mid-September day more like Palm Springs, Calif., than upstate New York. The late start forced tournament officials to suspend play at dusk with 22 players still on the course. They will finish their rounds beginning at 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

Summerhays leads first round with 6-under 64

MASON, Ohio — Bruce Summerhays birdied the last five holes to complete a 6-under-par 64 and take a two-stroke lead in the $1.1 million Kroger Senior Classic on Friday.

"Getting off to a good start is marvelous," Summerhays said. "You can't win the tournament on the first day, but this way you don't have to come back."

Mike Hill, Graham Marsh and Jim Albus were at 66, and seven players shot 67.

Free-agent signee Hull gets early start in leadership role for Stars

By Mike Heika
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

VAIL, Colo. — Ken Hitchcock just couldn't resist giving a verbal jab to Brett Hull.

"Hey Hully," the Stars' coach shouted over morning coffee yesterday. "We had our captain's meeting, and we only spent about two hours talking about how we're going to deal with you."

Hull just laughed and fired his comeback: "Hey, did they discuss everything on that list of concerns I sent in with them?"

Brett Hull might be able to stop being a captain, but he likely can't stop being a leader. The superstar winger, who signed a three-year, $17 million free-agent deal with the Stars over the summer, is fitting in just fine with new linemates Mike Modano and Jere Lehtinen on the ice. And so far, he's doing a pretty good job off the ice, too.

Despite being one of the most outspoken players in the NHL and a former captain with the St. Louis Blues, Hull will not be one of the five players given a share of the Stars' five-man captaincy. Instead, he'll have to be part of what Hitchcock is calling "the support group" — a handful of players who will be expected to lead in a quieter role.

All of which, Hitchcock said, makes the 1998-99 season one in which leadership boundaries have to be reformed.

"When you come into these situations and you assume you're going to have the old chemistry back, that's the wrong assumption," he said. "It has to be different. We have different people at different focal points in their careers. We have to adapt to that."

In addition to Hull, the Stars have five former captains on their team — Joe Nieuwendyk (Calgary Flames), Pat Verbeek (Hartford Whalers), Guy Carbonneau (Montreal Canadiens), Brian Skrudland (Florida Panthers) and Mike Keane (Canadiens). Only Nieuwendyk is part of the captaincy team — captain Derian Hatcher and alternate captains Mike Modano, Craig Ludwig, Sergei Zubov and Nieuwendyk.

That captain's group is intact from last season, but the input of Keane and Skrudland (acquired in a March trade) and Hull in July make this a new locker room.

"I think it's a great situation," Hull said. "You have great leaders who might not say as much but lead on the ice. And then you have guys like Luds and Carbo who a player can go to and say, 'Hey, can you tell the coaches this.' Different people lead in different ways."

And Hull is not without his style. He often jabbers on the ice or on the bench. He's generally a cut-up in the locker room. He'll often address leaguewide concerns in the media. And that's kind of given him a bad reputation as a busybody who might have his nose too deep in management's business.

"Over the past four years, it seems, I've had the worst reputation," Hull said. "And I don't think any of it's true."

In fact, despite Hitchcock's ribbing, he believes that Hull will fit into the Stars' leadership picture perfectly.

"The risk is not so much in Brett Hull, the risk is can the guys who have been captains and been leaders on other teams, can they come in and be strong support people for the leaders who wear the letters.

"We saw him at the World Cup 1/8in 1996 3/8, and we saw at the highest competition level that Brett Hull was equal to the task and probably better than most," Hitchcock added. "He's a good player in a good atmosphere, and we think that atmosphere is here. But he's in a support group as far as leadership goes."

Which is just fine with Brett Hull.

"I like it this way," he said. "It's just like a bunch of friends talking."

WNBA star fights for custody of child

By Justin Hyde
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — There's a growing list of firsts for women in sports, but Pamela McGee has an unusual one: the first woman in the WNBA whose pro career has become an issue in a child custody case.

Under a court order, McGee turned her 3-year-old daughter over to her ex-husband Tuesday while a court decides whether her basketball career interferes too much with her duties as a parent.

Legal experts and women's advocates disagreed about how much a mother's work schedule should matter in such cases.

Macomb County Chief Circuit Judge Peter J. Maceroni ruled this week that McGee's ex-husband, the Rev. Kevin E. Stafford of Mount Clemens, will have temporary custody of their daughter, Imani, while a Friend of the Court investigation is under way. That investigation could take four to 12 weeks.

Stafford's attorney, Peter Lucido, said the father has had temporary custody since the beginning of the year, and McGee has seen Imani 14 days this year.

Lucido has said McGee's travel schedule raises concerns. He said Imani missed her first day of preschool Tuesday because McGee, a starting forward for the Los Angeles Sparks, had delayed returning her to her father. Imani had been staying with her mother at her grandmother's house in Flint. McGee also has a 10-year-old son.

Hingis-led Swiss team takes on Spain in finals of Fed Cup

By Erica Bulman
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland — Led by Martina Hingis, Switzerland will attempt to complete its climb from tennis' minor leagues this weekend with a victory over Spain in the Fed Cup finals.

Playing in the tournament's third division just three years ago, Switzerland is on the brink of its first title.

This is the first time in Fed Cup history that a team new to the world group will play for the title.

"My first impression is positive," said Hingis' mother, Melanie Molitor, who is also the Swiss captain. "Martina and Patty (Schnyder) seem comfortable on this court.

"But against Spain it's 50-50. The four in the final are all ranked in the top-10. And the difference between them is minimal."

Spain, which has reached the finals seven times in the last eight years, will be led by four-time Fed Cup champions Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario and Conchita Martinez.

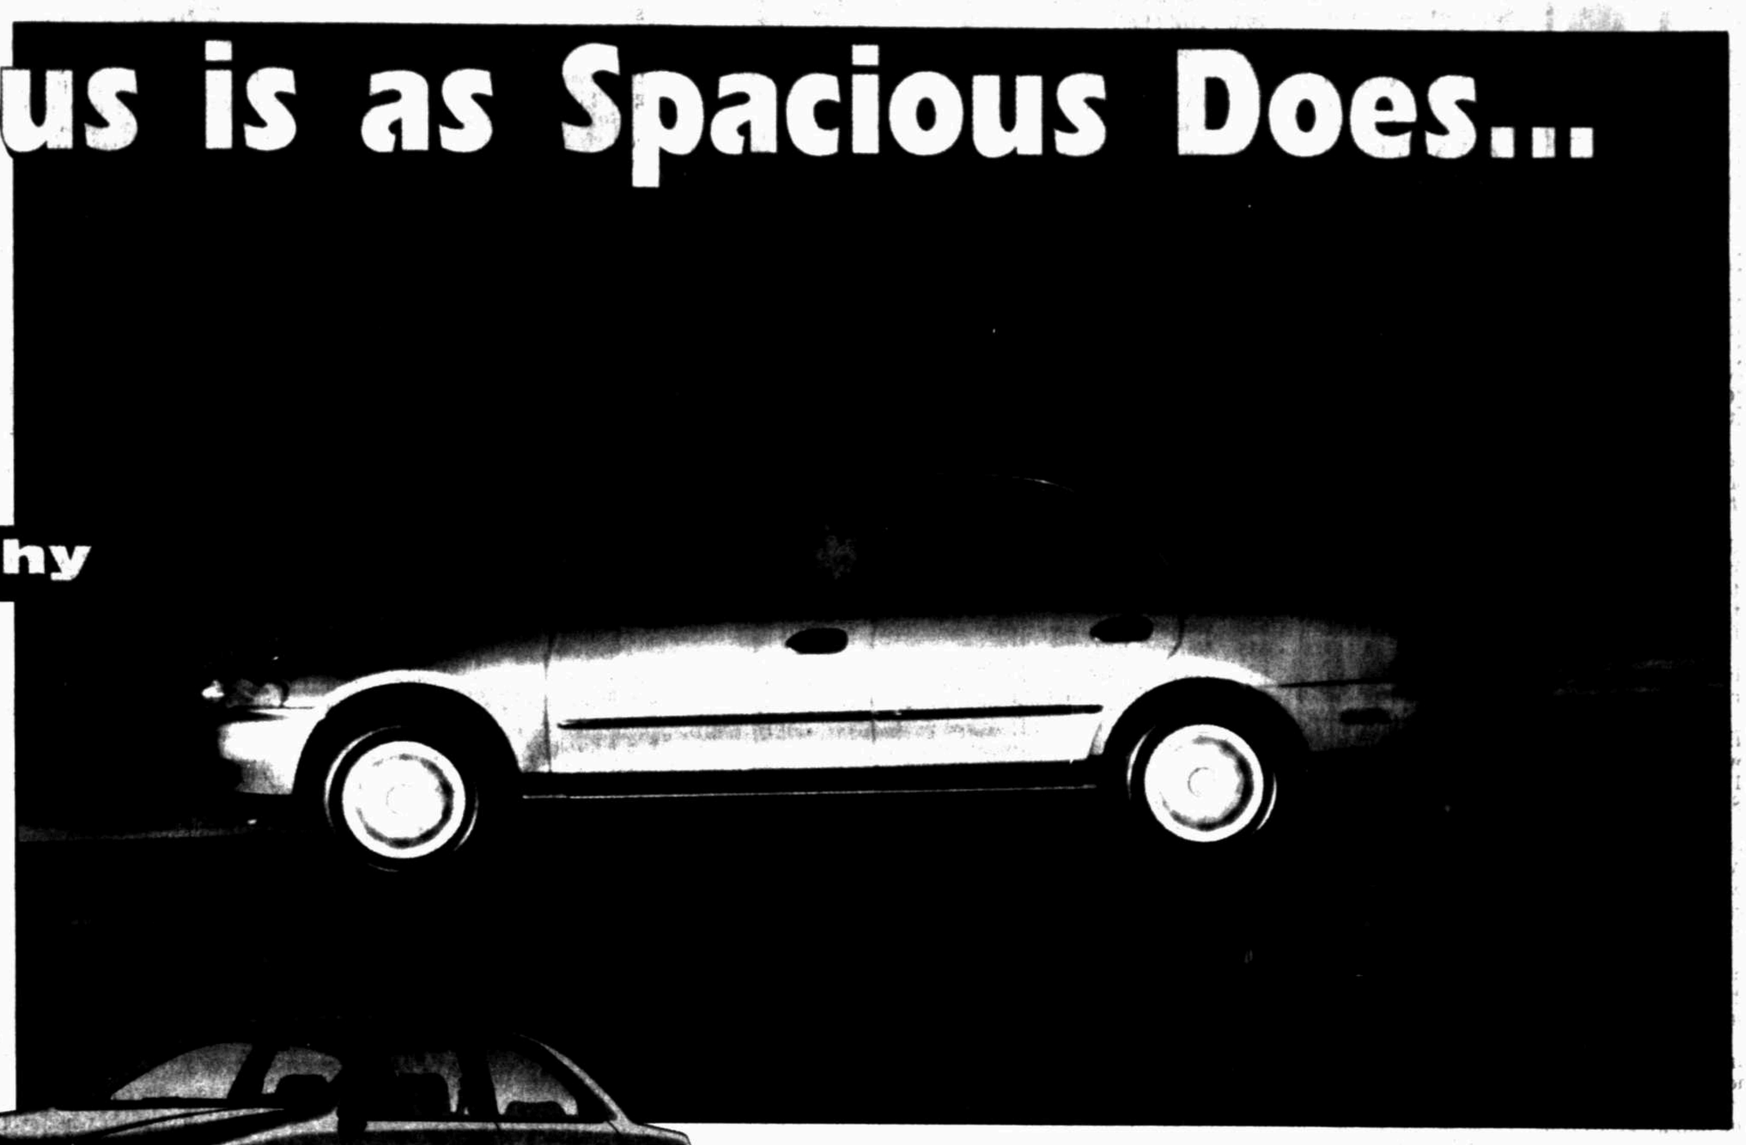
'98 Mazda Protege ES sedan

Roadworthy



RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.

It has been three years since I last spent some quality time with a Mazda Protege sedan. It was during the 1995 model year that the small Mazda last received a major redesign. While the automaker's brush with difficulty made headlines, the company was quietly repositioning the small sedan to be a bigger player in a fiercely competitive market segment. Without affecting the build quality or the available features, Mazda has successfully made the Protege a real value again, back in the thick of the battle for the hearts and pocketbooks of the American consumer. I borrowed a top-of-the-line ES sedan to see for myself.

Improvement through evolution

As the successor to the popular 323 sedan of the 1980's, the Protege sought to move Mazda more into the mainstream. Built in Japan and imported by Mazda, the small sedan is available in three trim levels: DX, LX and ES. The DX and LX models are powered by a 1.5L DOHC multi-valve four cylinder engine making 92 horsepower @ 5500 rpm and 96 ft-lbs of torque @ 4000 rpm. The ES model is propelled by a 1.8L DOHC multi-valve four cylinder engine that was lifted from the Miata MX-5 convertible. This powerplant generate 122 horsepower @6000 rpm and 117 ft-lbs of torque @ 4,000 rpm. A manual five-speed transmission is standard equipment with a four-speed automatic an $800 option.

With a wheelbase of 102.5 inches, overall length of 174.8 inches, weighing just 2573 pounds, this Protege is no heavy weight. Mazda engineers, applying a concept to interior space that they call OptiSpace, have managed to carve out some 95 cubic feet of interior cabin space, earning the Protege a classification as a large subcompact sedan. On the road, the Protege was willing and responsive. It's suspension bits worked together to produce a vehicle that is both nimble and agile in hard driving.

Inside the cabin, the driver is greeted by decent displays and controls, with a rear seat that is comfortable for two adults and an easy to use rear split fold down seat back. The release for each of the rear seat backs is a button conveniently located at the top rear of each headrest. The resulting pass through adds to precious cargo space.

Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked. The one gripe that I have is that the front center armrest does not extend far enough forward for short drivers.

By the numbers

Standard safety equipment for the Mazda Protege sedan includes: dual airbags and side impact door beams. Four wheel anti-lock brakes are $800 for LX and ES, not available on DX models. Traction control is not available. EPA fuel economy ranges from 30 city/37 highway for the 1.5L four cylinder/five speed manual powertrain to 23 city/30 highway for the 1.8L four cylinder/four speed automatic. Retail sticker prices begin at $12,145 for the DX to $15,295 for the ES. Destination charge is $450 additional. Dealers report good supplies of the Protege sedan. ■

1930 BUICK SIX

The restyled 1930 Buick series began July 27, 1929. In spite of the Great Depression that began at the end of October of that year, the '30 Buick was a great success!

It was much better looking than the '29 model, which had been dubbed "The Pregnant Buick- because of its bulging sides. So well liked was the 1930 design that the 1931 eight cylinder Buicks looked virtually the same on the outside ... the main differences being two extra cylinders, a restyled instrument panel, and a 1931 radiator cap with a raised "8" at the front.

The 1930 and 1931 Buicks were so good that many of them lasted 20,25 years, or even longer! They outlasted many younger Buicks, and almost all older ones!

Notice the clean, simple design of the engine. Most Buick engines in those days were painted a grayish green (including the valve cover, which was shown here in a darker color merely to make it more noticeable).

The 1930 Buick "40" series used an engine with a bore and stroke of 3 7/ 16 inches by 4 5/8 inches and rode on a 118-inch wheelbase.

A larger engine (3 3/4 inches by 5 inches) was featured in the 50 series (124-inch wheelbase) and 60 series (132-inch wheelbase). Phaetons were available in 40 and 60 series, but the mid-range 50 series included only the "58-Victoria Coupe and "57" four-door Sedan.

Classy new feature of the '30 Buick: thermostatically controlled radiator shutters that concealed the core.

GM stylist Harley Earl had been upset when Buick engineers "double crossed" him and executed his planned bulges in the wrong places on the 1929 model. But he was pleased when the new design for 1930 was so popular that it lasted from the summer of 1929 until the 1932 models appeared!

Mail from readers is always welcome! Write to Ted Burness, c/o Auto Album, P.O. Box 247, Pacific Grove, CA 93950. If you want a reply, please be sure to enclose a SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE with sufficient postage attached. Thank you.

Keeping track of fuel

One of the things an RVer must keep track of is fuel. Keeping track of your fuel is important for more than one reason. Obviously it's not a lot of fun to run out of fuel 15 miles from "next fuel — 30 miles in either direction" sign. Not only can it be embarrassing, it can be dangerous. But there are other reasons. If you happen to like dry camping and have a motorhome you may find yourself without your generator if you let your fuel level drop too low. Most RVs have the generator fuel pickup set somewhere between 1/8 and 1/4 level in the fuel tank. Allowing the fuel level to drop below that point means that your generator won't run.

If you travel in the western U.S. you will often find yourself with long stretches between fueling stops. If you travel in the eastern half of the U.S. you'll find some states where fuel is considerably cheaper than others. Maybe you like to take "the road less traveled" where there isn't a fuel stop every 40 miles. For all of those reasons you should be constantly aware of how much fuel you have.

Important factors in fuel economy

An important factor in fuel economy is inertia. Overcoming inertia takes fuel. It takes a lot of energy to overcome the inertia of your rig sitting at rest. That's why your vehicle has a transmission with different gears. Once you're rolling along it takes relatively little energy to keep the rig moving. You can actually get some pretty phenomenal fuel economy while you're rolling along. But when you take into account the amount of fuel it took to get you up to a traveling speed the fuel economy drops down. So a trip with a lot of starts and stops, or speed changes is going to use a lot of fuel.

Another factor in fuel use is drag, or air resistance. Because of its size, the best RV on the highway has a terrible coefficient of drag (Cd). Cd is a measurement of how much resistance an object offers to movement through the air. A motorhome, with its big, flat front end, squared off rear etc. or a truck or van and travel trailer or fifth wheel trailer, with all the gaps, flat surfaces etc. have Cds that are considerably higher. Air resistance squares as the speed increases. What that means is if the air resistance of an RV is four at 30 mph, it will increase to 16 at 40 mph. These aren't actual numbers, just examples. So, the faster you go the more fuel you'll use. Driving into a head wind has the same effect as going faster in terms of fuel usage.

Odometer as a fuel gauge

Over the years I've gone from watching my fuel gauge to watching my odometer. My rig has two fuel tanks. The main holds 45 gallons, the auxiliary 28. When I top off both tanks I know I've got 72 gallons of fuel. I also know that I generally get about 5.5 mpg. which gives me a travel range of about 400 miles. Most fuel gauges are not so much gauges and indicators. What's the difference? Most of the time fuel gauges are not so much measurement devices as clue givers. My auxiliary fuel gauge works sporadically. The main never gets much above 3/4, but the engine starts sputtering when the needle is just above "E". So I've started to drive by odometer.

Driving by odometer isn't all that hard. I've checked both my odometer and trip meter against measure miles on the Interstates. Armed with that knowledge I know for sure that my odometer and trip meter are more accurate than my fuel gauge. Over the years I've also found that I can travel about 140 miles on my auxiliary fuel tank and about 240 miles on the main. So I ignore my fuel gauges and watch my odometer.

My practice is to fill the tanks and start driving on the auxiliary tank. When the auxiliary tank runs dry I switch to the main. I do this because my generator runs off the main. If I run the main dry and switch to the auxiliary tank I won't be able to run my generator. After I go to the main I begin looking for a fuel stop when the odometer tells me I've traveled about 350 miles total. Using that system I've never run out of fuel. Traveling via fuel gauge I've coasted into a gas station at 11:30 one dark night. Since then I've traveled by odometer. See you on the road.

Local ministers: For nation to heal, forgiveness necessary

President Bill Clinton needs forgiveness from both God and the electorate according to ministers in Midland.

If you were on the national news last week and your name wasn't McGwire or Sosa, chances are you had a bad week.

Conversation around the coffee machine these days often focuses on President Clinton, the now infamous Starr Report and the president's videotaped appearance before a grand jury.

Should the president be impeached? Should he resign? Rebuked or censured? Effective leader yes, but morally? Forget about it, he falls way short.

People everywhere have their opinions about President Clinton and his admitted liaison, affair, relationship, sexual contact, whatever the word of the day. Many of the opinions hold the president in low esteem. Yet national polls continue to support his job performance, sending conflicting messages of the public's opinion.

Two thousand years ago, Christ warned his followers to not judge an adulteress unless free from sin themselves. What followed was one of the most often repeated passages from the Bible: "Let ye who is free from sin cast the first stone."

In speaking with several Midland ministers, it is God's forgiveness, not judgment, that the American people should remember when discussing the president's situation.

"There are things in all of our lives that we need to correct," said the Rev. O.J. Archie, of Macedonia Baptist Church. "The Bible teaches us to forgive. A lot of the people who are putting him down are guilty of either the Jewish people to be a time when God jotted down notes about their character.

Jews to observe Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur

"Back then, everyone was very literal," Noah Fishman, president of Temple Beth El in Odessa, said of the Jews of that era. "They believed that at Rosh Hashanah, God opens the book of life and writes down what's going to happen to you in the coming year. Ten days later, on Yom Kippur, the book of life is sealed. During that 10-day period, if you are properly repentant and reflect on your sins and how you can try to make them better, you

But he doesn't take all the credit.

Community of Joy celebrates 4th year

Service uses music, drama, contemporary worship method to address today's issues

There is not much preaching in the traditional sense. And the music is very '90s. There's even a stage performance given by a group of local actors every Sunday.

Based on studies that show more young people are likely to join a church with a more relaxed atmosphere in which they feel they can make a contribution, First United Methodist Church established Community of Joy four years ago this weekend.

With services every Sunday at 10:45 a.m. at the Cole Theatre on Wadley, COJ celebrates its fourth year of worship this Sunday. It has provided an alternative to the traditional form of worship for members of FUMC to invite their unchurched friends.

Following Sunday's 10:45 a.m. service, a reception in the theater lobby with soft drinks, snacks and photos of earlier services, will be featured.

"Community of Joy started out in 1994 as an outreach to the unchurched," said John Rech, an associate pastor at FUMC who preaches and

'A Broken Heart'

The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity will host a brief stage production entitled, "A Broken Heart," following its 9 a.m. service Sunday. Written in 1982, the play has been performed before thousands of high school students across the country. Starring Lauren Swartz and Matt Hinkley (both pictured), Amanda Salmon, Ross Brunner and L.T. Burns, the play tells the story of a young girl who receives devastating news from her mother and continues to battle the temptation and confusion that often accompany life as a high school student. The play also features music from several pop music singers including James Taylor and Dan Fogelberg. The production will be staged in Holy Trinity's sanctuary.

VINCENT MULI WA KITUKU

Every knee shall bow: but when exactly?

Kituku

I was admitted to the University of Nairobi in early September 1981. This was a jubilant experience. Only about 2 percent of the country's population get this opportunity. The education system was terminative. That is, if your grades are below admission requirements, you never get the chance again unless you repeat another whole year and re-take the exam. Even in this second chance, you are not sure you will make it.

When I received the admission forms, I noticed that I was required to get a signature from a government officer from my home place. He or she was to confirm that the admission forms were filled and signed by the right person. It was not a problem for me to get an officer as my father knew the magistrate.

After filling out the forms, my father took me to the magistrate's office. When permitted to enter his office, I led as my father followed. There were two seats across the table from where the magistrate was sitting. I took one seat after handing my admission forms to the magistrate. My dad faced the magistrate, bowed to him then proceeded to sit down. We were not inside the courtroom, I figured there was no need to bow.

The magistrate exchanged brief greetings with my father and went through my forms without looking at me or saying anything. Naturally, he was the quiet type. He never said much even outside his office. I was

The Good Book: Deuteronomy

(Part 5 of 52)

Overview

In Deuteronomy, Moses presents his farewell address to Israel, in which he recounts all that God has done for them in the wilderness, warns of the temptations of life in Canaan, and pleads for loyalty to and love of God as the condition for life in the promised land. Deuteronomy means "second law." In this book the laws of God for his people are reinterpreted in more contemporary terms.

Theme Passage

Deuteronomy 6:4-7

"Hear O Israel: The Lord is our God, the Lord alone. You shall love the Lord you God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your might. Keep these words that I am commanding you today in your heart. Recite them to your children and talk about them when you are at home and when you are away, when you are led down and when you rise."

Second Baptist invites over 'Company' for 2nd year

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

For the second year in a row, Second Baptist Church brings to its sanctuary, "The Company," a travelling Christian dramatic troupe that stages a selection of brief, Christian-based one-act dramas intended to reach both church members, visitors and those new to the faith.

Presentations by The Company will be offered at the 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. Sunday worship services at Second Baptist Church, 3125 Travis. The Company will also offer a drama clinic at 3 p.m. today at the church. There is no charge for either the clinic or the performances.

Members of the Fort Worth-based "The Company" will perform during the 8:30 and 11 a.m. worship services Sunday at Second Baptist Church below, 3125 Travis.

The Company is a group of students at the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth who are from Jacksonville, Texas; Georgia; South Carolina, and from as far way as Germany.

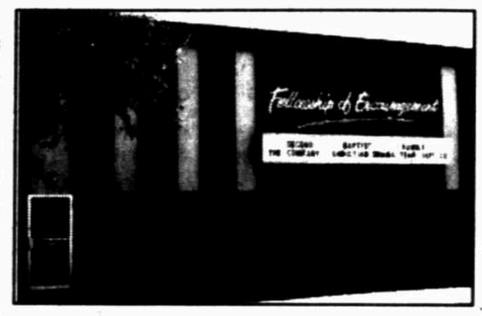
"The purpose of this weekend is that we want to introduce people to our church and to God," said Tom Revilla, minister of music at Second Baptist. "This is a non-threatening way to do that. It's a way to reach out in a non-evangelistic type service. We don't mind people from other churches coming, but we also want to reach out to the unchurched."

Sketch titles to be presented by The Company during the worship service include, "Awesome God," "Jesus Loves the Little Children," "The Hanging," "Go Light Your World," and "David and Goliath."

Performance time runs approximately 40 minutes.

Revilla said it is the church's hope that the group will return to Midland on a yearly basis.

Literature accompanying The Company calls on a verse from Psalm: "The Lord announced His Word and great was the company of those who proclaimed it." The verse provides the foundation upon which the troupe is established — proclaiming God's word through the performing arts.



The Company was founded in the Fall of 1985 as an outgrowth of a repertory acting class taught by Dennis Parrish, a faculty member at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. The group performs for youth activities, rallies, retreats, workshops and worship services such as at Second Baptist.

The Company has performed at the state Drama, Clowning and Puppetry Festivals in Texas, Tennessee and Oklahoma; the Single Adult Labor Day Conference in Ridgecrest; Jericho '90 weeks at Ridgecrest and Glorieta; the Southwest Theatre Conference; the annual meetings of the Baptist General conventions in Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado; the Sunday School Report of the Southern Baptist Convention; Missions '90; the Ohio and Texas Youth Evangelism conferences; the Texas and Arkansas BSU conventions; Boston '90 with Marketplace Ministries, and the National Youth Minister's Conference.

CLINTON: Minister says Clinton shows God's meaning has purpose

the same thing or worse. We all have something that we need to be forgiven for."

Archie said he has addressed Clinton's problems from the pulpit not only just last Sunday, "but from the beginning." He said his congregation does not discuss the situation with him, but thinks they likely discuss it among themselves.

Don Hafemann, pastor emeritus of Grace Lutheran, currently serving as interim pastor, has avoided the issue, remaining true to his faith's liturgy lesson. Hafemann, though, did offer a prayer during last Sunday's service.

"Our current situation underlines the fact that we need to remember the people whom we have elected in our prayers, and ask that God will give them the strength and the wisdom to lead their life and the country in accordance with God's will," Hafemann said.

K.C. Blackketter, pastor at Bethel United Methodist Church, said he has not addressed Clinton's situation, but has spoke on the public's apparent reaction to it.

"In reference to the polls (that show) people believe all of this bad stuff but they don't care ... if the polls are true, it speaks poorly of our society," Blackketter said. "I believe our society has more character than those polls indicate. The character of society is going to be shaped by the influence of the church, so we hold a grave responsibility."

'I think this should be somewhat of a lesson for our young people: God's directives have meanings and they lead to strong family life and this shows what happens when they are ignored.'

— Fr. Jerome Burnet, Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Pastors, Blackketter said, are in a tricky situation. "We believe in a loving God that can forgive anything," he said, "but we also believe in a just God, and while we may be forgiven spiritually, that does not always exempt us from suffering the consequences of our actions in the realm other than spiritually. If you commit murder you can ask for God's forgiveness but the person is still dead and you still have to go to court."

As for public opinion that shows people hesitating to be too harsh on the president's personal life because they feel he is an effective leader with sound policies, Blackketter said, "Leadership is a sacred trust and it goes far beyond policy. (Leaders) have a moral obligation to the people and to God."

For forgiveness to be complete, Blackketter said, it will have to come from both the people and from God.

"Both have been sinned against," he said. "He violated God's moral laws and he's violated our trust in him as a leader."

On a radio program Tuesday, William Bennett, former education secretary and currently author of "The Death of Outrage" and editor of a series of morality-based books, said it was his impression that Clinton apologized only because he had been backed into a corner. Fr. Jerome Burnet, parish priest at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, said Bennett's place is not to judge Clinton.

"(The president) needs God's forgiveness," said Burnet, who has not spoken on the issue to his parishioners. "I think this should be somewhat of a lesson for our young people: God's directives have meanings and they lead to strong family life and this shows what happens when they are ignored."

Dr. Doug Lamb, pastor at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, did not address the issue from the pulpit because he was out ill for the first time since Clinton has been in office. Still, he had personal feelings on what has been happening in Washington.

"Any Christian response to the current situation facing President Bill Clinton must be based upon an understanding of the Character of God," Lamb said. "There are two attributes that stand out. The first is the forgiveness of God. Just as God forgives us when we confess to him, so also we must forgive President Clinton in response to his confession.

"The second attribute that we must consider is the attribute of God is justice. In other words, although God forgives, that does not mean all consequence is removed. Forgiveness and justice are not mutually exclusive. For example, if you run into my car and dent it, I will forgive you. However, I still expect you to pay for the damage.

"Everything has results. If a president breaks the law, he can and should be forgiven. However, he, like any other American citizen, must still face the consequence of his crime. If forgiveness removes consequence, then let's empty out our prisons ... many of the persons incarcerated in our nation have also been forgiven."

KITUKU: When you pray may actually determine where you spend eternity fine with his behavior. After signing my forms, he handed them to me, again without a word. I thanked him and stood up to leave.

My father, who was sitting near the door, also stood up. But, instead of leaving the office, he turned to me and held my neck and bent it. I got the message, I had to bow. He bowed too, and we left the office. I was humiliated. I felt angry. I wondered why I didn't do it before I was forced to. Probably I would have earned some respect from the magistrate.

Over the years, I have thought and talked about the experience of being forced to bow many times. Mostly in the light sight of it. However, the whole scene was replayed in my mind recently as my family watched a drama, "Eternity," presented by Capital Christian Church in Boise, Idaho. Romans 14: 11 was clearer to me than it has ever been since about midnight on March 9, 1985, when I accepted Christ as my personal savior. "For it is written, as I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God."

In the play, lives of people who bowed and accepted Christ while alive and those who didn't were portrayed. Each scenery began with the moment of death. Some folks died from accidents. Others died from illness. Some died alone while others died together as brothers, or couples. Young and old were shown to die alike and all just involved in daily routines. Their lives were the ordinary lives we are used to. Some were committing socially controversial acts, culturally accepted but not in line with God's stipulations.

After death there was reflection of the kind of life each individual lived before death. This reflection was used to determine two outcomes: Whether one was to enter through the pearly gates with angels celebrating a victor's welcome or to be cast into hell. After this, each individual went to the Arch Angel to find where his or her name was written in the book of life. How each individual received or rejected Christ was shown.

Those who had accepted God's gift of salvation and lived a genuine Christian life had joy awaiting them. They had bowed before death. They didn't have to bow wailing and pleading for mercy as those who had neglected the great salvation. Christians who died at the same time with their loved ones had the agony of seeing them (unsaved beloved ones) go to hell. However, this agony was soon forgotten when they (saved ones) found their names in the book of life, angels singing and Jesus welcoming them to their eternal peace.

Those who had not bowed and those who were hypocrites wished they had listened. Some pleaded, outlining their works on earth. It was too late. Bowing at this end didn't change their destination.

The play portrayed that every knee shall bow. When one does it makes the difference of where one spends eternity.

JOY: Congregation has doubled in four years of worship plays a significant role at the Community of Joy service every week. "One of the advantages is that it tends to draw families with youths because the music and drama attracts their attention. We try to focus on one theme and to coordinate it all each week."

(From 1E)

Scripts are obtained through two national script services, but Rech said locally written scripts are occasionally used.

Between eight and 12 musicians make up the Joyful Noise Band each week. David Thomas is the music director and his wife Delanna serves as drama director of Community of Joy's Rio Wadley Players.

That Community of Joy's contemporary approach has been a staple for four years is a sign that this relatively new method of worship will be around for awhile, Rech said.

"Contemporary worship is definitely here to stay," he said. "This is the style of music people are listening to every day on the radio. The reason we do contemporary music is because it touches people's hearts. It's the style many of them were raised on, so if you want to connect with the heart, you have to use the music. Music is one of the most important ways to reach God."

According to Community of Joy's mission statement, the chief purpose of the service is "to provide a weekly contemporary Christian worship service, for individuals and families not participating in a conventional church. COJ's principal goal is to assist people in developing and nurturing a relationship with Christ. This will be accomplished by providing an informal, friendly and accepting worship service utilizing music, drama and a biblically based message which addresses contemporary issues, problems and challenges."

Current events such as parent-child relationships and social issues are examples of recent COJ themes.

JEWS: Upcoming 10 day repentance time considered to be holiest of days can influence what happens during that year and what God writes in the book of life."

For today's Jews, the allegory is a nice way to think of the high holiday period that begins at sundown Sunday, on Rosh Hashanah, and ends with Yom Kippur, on Sept. 29-30. Loosely translated, Rosh Hashanah is the Jewish New Year; Yom Kippur is the Day of Atonement, a 24-hour period of fasting ideally spent in prayer for the entire day.

Both observances commence at sundown because days on the Jewish calendar begin at sunset, not at midnight.

Rosh Hashanah marks the beginning of the 5,759th year. The Jewish calendar began with creation, believed to be almost 5,800 years ago, although many of today's Jews believe time was measured differently in the early part of the Jewish calendar.

"Jewish holidays are different from Christian holidays," Fishman said. "Christian holidays are more commemorative. At Christmas, Christians celebrate the birth of Christ. At Easter, Christians celebrate the death, and resurrection of Christ. Jewish holidays don't have that kind of commemorative connection. Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur are two of the most serious holy days of the year.

"It says in the Bible, Leviticus 23, the first day of the seventh month, 'shall be a solemn rest unto you, acclaimed with the blast of the sound of horns.' "

Obviously, September is the ninth month on the lunar calendar, but on the Jewish calendar it is the seventh month. Thousands of years ago, the Jews marked the new year in the springtime.

"The Bible doesn't say to celebrate. It's a sanctification of time," Fishman said. "God says in the Bible this day of this month is going to be holy to you forever. They are very serious days, not like we Americans conceive holidays to be, with party horns and fireworks. You reflect on your deeds over the course of the year. The days in between the two holy days are called the Ten Days of Repentance. It is then that we have long synagogue services and you try and identify what went wrong during the past year and you pray to God for forgiveness and to make your life right during the coming year."

The Jewish faith, Fishman said, makes clear the distinction between things that are wrong in the eyes of God and the wrongs you may have done toward yourself and other people. In that, we believe that any sins we might have committed between us and God, if you are repentant, will be forgiven by God. The sins between you and your fellow man you have the obligation to make right yourself."

Yom Kippur, the holiest of Jewish days, starts at sundown the 29th and ends at sundown on Wednesday the 30th. Jews do not eat, work and are not supposed to even drink water. Pregnant women and those people with ill health can be excused from certain elements of fasting.

"The day is set aside for prayer," Fishman said. "It's a very, very solemn day."

Other traditions that are centuries old and still practiced by many Jews include the dipping of an apple into honey to signify a sweet year to come; and a child dripping honey onto a page of the Bible, signifying that the study of the Bible and their religious education will continue to be sweet for them throughout their lives; horns also sound on Yom Kippur which symbolize the coming of the Messiah, something the Jewish faithful feel has yet to occur.

Jewish mysticism, Fishman said, teaches that the Messiah is to appear on earth about the year 8,000. However, many ultra Orthodox Jews, Fishman said, believe that several signs that occurred when Israel became a state in 1948 point us closer to the coming of the Messiah — the first coming as Jews believe; the second coming, according to the Christian faith.

Synagogue fire brings reflection on Judaism's coming High Holy Days

By Julia Lieblich
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — Central Synagogue lost its roof but not its grandeur after fire broke out last month. Light streams into a courtyard of charred columns of faded blue, sienna and gold in the 126-year-old Moorish revival temple, sanctuary of the oldest Jewish Reform congregation in New York City.

Still, the Holy Ark that holds the Torah scrolls, the Five Books of Moses handwritten on parchment, escaped harm as did the lamp symbolizing God's presence. And as the Jewish High Holy Days approached, Central Synagogue's senior rabbi, Peter Rubinstein, could not help marveling at the light amidst the loss.

"There's a mystery about the things that were protected," said Rubinstein, who noted that enough of the midtown Manhattan structure survived to allow rebuilding. "The way the building was struck casts a profound and visual difference between destruction and hope. ... And having the sky as your roof is awesome."

It was just before sundown on Friday, Aug. 28, when a workman's torch apparently set the temple on fire. Rubinstein saw smoke encircling the 112-foot minarets and raced into the synagogue, where he broke a glass display case and carried out two Torah scrolls, the only two in the temple that had not been stored during a renovation.

"My instinct to save any Torah scroll was so strong," he said.

While firefighters battled the five-alarm blaze, synagogue members who had gathered for Friday services prayed and comforted one another at the synagogue's community house across the street.

News of the fire spread quickly, and other religious leaders offered sanctuary and condolences.

In San Diego, Rabbi Wayne Dosick couldn't help thinking of the day his own home burned, and the lessons he brought to the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashana, and the Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur.

In the past, Dosick said, he read the words in the prayer book — "How many shall pass on, how many shall come to be ... Who shall perish by fire and who by water?" — as part of a litany of the ways people might die in the upcoming year.

After the fire, he understood the text differently. "Instead of meaning, 'Who shall pass away?' it means, 'Who shall pass through this?' "said Dosick, author of "When Life Hurts: A Book of Hope."

"When we stay connected to God we can get through the worst things. When we're disconnected from God we feel anguish not so much from a terrible event, but from not being connected to the source."

The High Holy Days, beginning at sundown Sunday with Rosh Hashana, are traditionally a time for Jews to think about such connections and their own mortality and renewal in the face of death.

The fire at a mighty sanctuary, said Rubinstein, made members of Central Synagogue "more aware of their own fragility. ... And in the most mystical way, it led to a time for consideration of what we want to do with ourselves."

Longtime member Emita Levy has been reflecting on what it means to be an "urban nomad" in a congregation without a home. Traditionally, High Holy Days services attract 5,000 worshippers to the synagogue and several spillover locations. This year, services will be held at a state armory, and Levy hopes the common location will foster a sense that a community is more than a building.

"I hope this brings us together, really together," she said.

Rubinstein repeatedly reminds his congregants that their fire was a trauma, not a tragedy that took human life, that Jews have a history of rebuilding, and before long they will be carrying their Torah scrolls joyously into the synagogue.

"With care," he said, the community will emerge "with a quiet, trembling strength."

Still, he hopes other religious communities can learn from Central's experience without repeating it. "And I hope they can comprehend the centrality of their church, synagogue or mosque in their life, and rekindle the feeling of passion before their own loss."

Images of loss from fire pervade Gates of Repentance, Reform Judaism's High Holy Days prayer book, as do depictions of fire as a reminder of God and the promise of God's help in sustaining a community.

The biblical side of the Clinton-Lewinsky saga

By Richard Ostling
AP Religion Writer

■ Testaments

The Monica Lewinsky-Bill Clinton saga has involved lying, adultery, treachery and vengeance — all classic biblical themes — but also, most intriguingly, the dynamics of confessing sin.

Politicians, pundits and preachers alike have debated whether the president's confession in a nationwide TV address passed moral muster. The conversation could linger for years.

Scripture offers numerous examples of confession. But for many Bible readers, the most memorable is the one cited just before the presidential address by the Rev. J. Philip Wogaman, pastor of the Washington church the Clintons attend. An articulate liberal scholar of ethics before he moved to Foundry United Methodist Church, Wogaman is also a political commentator as president of the Interfaith Alliance, which opposes the religious right.

"King David, if I read my Bible correctly, was not impeached," Wogaman remarked, and yet the sin of that biblical monarch was indisputably worse than anything in Kenneth Starr's files. David, consumed by lust, used his power as Israel's commander in chief to kill the husband of his lover Bathsheba by assigning him to the front lines of battle.

As recorded in 2 Samuel 12, David is finally forced to confront his sin. The prophet Nathan visits David and tells him a parable about a rich man who was preparing dinner and took the only lamb a poor man owned instead of one from his own extensive flocks. David says angrily that the rich man deserves to die.

Nathan's well-known response: "You are the man."

When Nathan speaks God's words of condemnation, David confesses, "I have sinned against the Lord." Nathan states that the Lord "has put away your sin" and will remove the punishment of death that the deed deserves. But as the Rev. Billy Graham's son Franklin reminded readers of The Wall Street Journal, that isn't the end of the story. Nathan informs David that divine judgment is coming and the child of his liaison with Bathsheba will die. David's family becomes a nest of sedition and death. As Franklin Graham wrote, "He was never the same king."

One good thing resulted from "Bathshebagate": Psalm 51. According to Jewish tradition, David wrote it after contemplating what he had done. It's probably the greatest expression of contrition ever written. No wonder that the Rev. Jesse Jackson used this psalm in his talk with Clinton the night before the controversial TV speech. Millions of worshipers still recite from Psalm 51: 1-2:

"Have mercy on me, O God,
"according to thy steadfast love;
"according to thy abundant mercy blot out my transgressions.
"Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity,
"and cleanse me from my sin!"

(From the Revised Standard Version)

Biblical commentators observe that the psalm lays out the requirements for God's grant of forgiveness: acceptance of personal accountability without buck-passing, acknowledgment that the sinner has spurned God, deeply felt sorrow, forthright confession of evil, and sincere determination to sin no more.

Clinton's speech obviously fell short of those biblical criteria. But that's not the point, according to the Rev. C. Welton Gaddy, Wogaman's colleague at the Interfaith Alliance and a clergyman in the Southern Baptist Convention, Clinton's denomination. Gaddy contended that what a president told the American public in a context of media fury could not be what he might say to his wife, his daughter or his pastor, or to God in private prayer.

Perhaps, then, Clinton was following the words Jesus uttered as he introduced the Lord's Prayer in Matthew 6: 1-8:

"When you pray, go into your room and shut the door and pray to your Father who is in secret; and your Father who sees in secret will reward you."

POET: Current work deals with a brush with a heavenly protector

borhood streets during predawn hours. He was driving at a steady speed when a voice in his head told him to stop his car immediately.

A few seconds later, bullets riddled his patrol unit, shattering the window that was just a few inches from his face.

"Something just told me to stop. Many people would have ruled that out as police instinct, but I knew it was my guardian angel," Cowin said. "That's something I'll never forget."

That night, a man was firing his gun at a suspected burglar from across the street. He missed the prowler and shot Cowin's unit by accident. Had he driven just a few feet more, he would have been shot — maybe even killed.

At 19, Cowin answered into his calling to become an enforcer of the law, which eventually took him to several agencies in the state, including Big Lake and Ballinger. The line of work he pursued was something he envisioned since childhood.

But for the next 32 years of his life, Cowin felt like there was some kind of satisfaction missing from his life, he said. He couldn't explain why he felt empty or pinpoint what exactly he lacked. After all, he enjoyed the pleasures of a large family, a wife and a steady job. What more could he do with his life?

'I felt like I was going to die spiritually. I felt that the Lord was dealing with me all my life and wanted me in the ministry. I finally said OK.'

— Terry Cowin.

Then one night almost four years ago, he had an epiphany. He realized that he had gone through life without helping others find faith enrichment by accepting the Lord into their lives, Cowin said.

"I felt like I was going to die spiritually," he said. "I felt that the Lord was dealing with me all my life and wanted me in the ministry. I finally said OK."

In March 1995, Cowin obtained a license for Baptist ministry. He's now is a field preacher that substitutes for preacher Darrel Martin of Temple Baptist Church on Thomason Drive.

"He's the best preacher of the Bible I've ever seen. Everyone can learn a lesson from him," Cowin said of his mentor.

Though most of the time Cowin assists with the weddings and funerals, he's also given dozens of sermons and closes each one with a religious poem tailored for that particular service.

"I feel relaxed when I write poetry, but I need inspiration. I also have to start with the last line of the poem," he said.

He's currently working on a poem about his brush with a heavenly protector. The first line that popped in his head goes: 'Have I ever seen an angel? No, but I have felt the flutter of its wings."

Cowin's strong religious foundation helps him cope with emotions stirred up by each case he works, which usually deal with juvenile victims of crime. Each year, he clears dozens — if not hundreds — of cases involving child abuse, neglect and molestation. His most recent victim is only 3 years old and the subject of a rape investigation.

"I can't do this alone. The Lord helps me and gives me the ability to work these cases," he said. "I can also be the witness for the Lord. I'm part of his ministry because I deal with kids who have been hurt."

Though some skeptics might think a religious officer may be too lenient with criminals or too soft for police work, being a lawman and minister make for a good combination, Cowin said.

"I think it's a strength to be a Christian. Being a minister does not slow me down from being a peace officer," Cowin said. "I do feel that all people, including the victim and suspect, are the lambs of God. I still have a duty to protect everyone."

How California ministers are handling Clinton saga with congregation members

By Yvette Cabrera
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Sex scandals aren't usually topics of church sermons, but clergy across the nation used the Sabbath to focus on the issue as parishioners struggled to come to terms with a president who admitted to an extramarital affair.

Some were faced with questions from church members about how to explain President Clinton's conduct to children. Some said Clinton should resign, and a number of religious leaders talked about atonement.

Pastors such as the Rev. Cecil Murray of the First AME Church in Los Angeles took the opportunity to teach of sin, repentance and forgiveness, as Americans continued to reel from details released Friday about Bill Clinton's sexual affair with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

"I think you will find very little if any opposition in the minority black community to forgiveness," Murray said Sunday in a phone interview from his South Central Los Angeles church.

Midway through his sermon, Murray asked his congregation to rise. He then spoke of how all should keep in mind that nobody is without sin.

"Finally we have received a request for forgiveness, we have received a commitment to repentance and our answer is a resounding yes," Murray told his parishioners.

Clinton is a good leader who sees people regardless of their circumstances, said Murray, echoing an opinion voiced by other leaders in the African-American community.

"He has made terrible errors in this case and perhaps related cases, but always on the scale of human values, one weighs the good against the bad, and only one category fails to regard the good and that's the total bad," Murray said.

Others, like Rabbi Elijah Schochet of Shomrei Torah, said much can be learned from the Clinton-Lewinsky scandal, which is unfolding during a key period for Jewish synagogues.

Starting next Sunday, Jews will observe the new year, Rosh Hashana, which begins the Ten Days of Penitence and will end with Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, on Sept. 29.

It is a time of the year when Jewish religious vocabulary is replete with phrases like sin, repentance and atonement, which make the Clinton issue all the more salient, Schochet said.

"It's very easy for these (phrases) to be abstract concepts," Schochet said. "But all of a sudden there's a real live drama that's taking place that brings it to the fore."

"I think it became a living demonstration of the central human dilemma that we all face, which would be coming to grips with our shortcomings, our mistakes in life and what to do about them," Schochet said.

Numerous parents in Schochet's suburban synagogue of 750 families have approached him for advice on how to deal with the questions that their young children have raised about Clinton's sexual conduct.

It is an issue "I would say for quite a number of my members," Schochet said. "How does one explain exactly what has transpired?"

Parents, with children as young as 3 and 4, who are faced with this same dilemma have approached the Rev. Gary Dickey, pastor of the First United Methodist Church in the San Fernando Valley.

"I had a parent who told me, my child wanted to know what oral sex was," said Dickey, who recommends that parents tackle the touchy subject in a straightforward manner.

"Maybe this is the time to talk about these issues with a child, as young as they may be, because if you don't talk, then their decisions on what to do is determined by what they hear or read," Dickey said.

Dickey addressed the Clinton scandal in a Sept. 6 sermon but declined to take sides on the issue of whether Clinton was guilty or not. Instead, he used the opportunity to discuss morality and sexual ethics and how this relates to a Christian who has to make the same kinds of decisions.

"We have to expect from our leadership a good example because our young people, our society, takes example from that leadership," said Dickey, who did not broach the Clinton issue on Sunday. "It wouldn't matter if it was Clinton, Nixon or (Al) Gore. The person is not the issue here; the issue is the ethics."

Opinion among Dickey's parishioners on what Clinton should do now has been varied.

"There are some who say he shouldn't be impeached and others who say he should," Dickey said.

"Some are willing to forgive Clinton as much as any other congregation might, but our issue is that forgiveness doesn't mitigate one's actions. You can be forgiven, but you still have to take responsibility for your actions."

Program aimed at helping repair marriages

By Richard Vara

HOUSTON — For Cheryl Patrick, the choice seemed painful and terrifying: either divorce her husband, David — or kill herself.

"I was kind of suicidal at that point," said Mrs. Patrick, 43, a Kingwood homemaker. "It was going to be either suicide or divorce, one or the other."

David Patrick, a CPA, was equally desperate in December 1989. He was frantically trying to save his marriage. The couple had already divorced in 1979, partly because of David's workaholic ways. But the couple remarried less than a year later. Ten years and three children later, the marriage was again imploding because many of the couple's problems remained unresolved, including David's long work hours.

"She actually decided to divorce me again," said David Patrick, 43. "I was pretty quick to realize I didn't want a divorce, but I didn't know what to do."

Marriage counseling wasn't working for the Patricks, members of Kingwood United Methodist Church. But through their involvement in Marriage Encounter, a Christian marriage enrichment program, the Patricks knew of Retrouvaille, a program for troubled marriages offered by Roman Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston.

Developed in Quebec, Canada, in 1977, Retrouvaille (French for rediscovery) begins with a weekend retreat program for troubled couples who want to restore their marriages. Even separated and divorced couples attend the weekend and a six-week, follow-up program learning to communicate and develop skills for fulfilling relationships. Retrouvaille claims an 85 percent success rate for couples completing the program. Its success has made the program popular in the United States and worldwide.

Winnie Honeywell, diocesan director of family life ministries, said more couples now want to fix their marriages rather than end them. "Divorce is not the answer some people think it is," said Honeywell, who introduced Retrouvaille into the diocese 15 years ago. The life of a divorced single or a single parent is not as fun-filled or romantic as films and TV depict, she said.

"One of the major problems today is the easiness in getting out of a lifetime commitment," said the Rev. Joe Gietl, a Catholic priest who participates in the weekends. "When times get tough or problems arise, it is easier to get out of marriage than to hang in there."

Honeywell said several studies finding long-term negative impact of divorce on children is also fueling more interest in marriage-saving programs.

Retrouvaille was a lifeline for the Patricks, who remain happily married. "We wouldn't be (together) if it weren't for that program," Cheryl Patrick said.

David Patrick learned of a Retrouvaille weekend just days prior to it. He begged a reluctant Cheryl to attend. "Honestly, she was just determined that we were going to divorce," he said.

"I wasn't receptive," Cheryl admits. "Mentally, I was convinced I was not in love with him at all." But she considered her children and she did not favor divorce on religious grounds. She agreed to attend just a few hours before the weekend program began Friday evening. The Patricks joined other couples and the Retrouvaille team, which includes three couples and a priest at a Houston-area hotel.

The couples listen to talks given by the team couples on interpersonal and relational skills. The team couples can also relate their experiences with many of the difficulties that can unravel marriages including unresolved anger, infidelity, the death of a child and other issues. The priest speaks on the spiritual dimension of a marriage. "It sounds trite, but God is the glue of marriage," Gietl said.

The married couples then go to their rooms and privately discuss the topics after each session. Often it is the first time that couples are able to express intimate feelings and deeply felt emotions. They begin tearing down walls that have often separated them.

"It turned things around, gave us hope and set us on the right track," David Patrick said.

"It is not a miracle cure," Cheryl Patrick said. "It takes a lot of work. But it gives you hope."

Roger and Pat Bate have seen many warring, alienated spouses become a united couple. The Bates attended the first Retrouvaille weekend held in Texas in Fort Worth in October 1984. Honeywell invited the couple to attend the weekend as observers so they could introduce the program in Houston.

But the Bates realized the program was addressing problems in their marriage. "When we got into the program, the reality hit us that we were one of those (troubled) couples," said Pat Bate, a homemaker and former nurse.

Like many couples, the Bates ignored unresolved hurts, indifference and anger while focusing on work and raising five children. "He was so busy doing his job and I was busy doing my job as mother and homemaker and all that Roger and Pat got lost," said Pat Bate, 61.

The program helped them reconnect. "We worked hard on communications and such," said Roger Bate, 63, who retired from chemical manufacturing last year. "We really had some rapid growth that year," he said.

Retrouvaille taught the couple principles of overcoming difficulties, principles that rescued the couple from the 1988 nightmare of losing their 27-year old son, Greg, to a drug overdose. Studies have shown that couples who lose a child have a divorce rate of nearly 80 percent.

"We don't question for a moment that had it not been for this program at that particular time, we would have gone under," Pat Bate said.

The couple received the support of other Retrouvaille couples.

"We were surrounded by couples and priests that were very supportive," she said. A support network is integral to healthy marriages during a crisis like job loss or death of a loved one, the Bates said. Too often, well-meaning friends and family are more willing to volunteer the name of a divorce attorney rather than help a troubled marriage, the Bates said.

In 1991, the Bates, along with Gietl, were elected international coordinators for Retrouvaille for a three-year term. Retrouvaille is in nearly every state in the U.S. and in Canada, Ireland, Mexico, South Africa and several other countries.

The Bates attribute the program's growth and popularity to a growing societal disillusionment with divorce. "Getting a divorce is not going to solve your problems," Pat Bate said. Retrouvaille often attracts divorced couples who find that divorce created more problems than a troubled marriage, Pat Bate said.

The program is successful because most participating couples want to make their marriages work, Roger Bate said. Couples plagued by drug or alcohol-related problems or abusive relationships are encouraged to seek professional help in addition to Retrouvaille, the Bates said. Any third-party relationships must also be terminated prior to beginning the program.

Couples pay a $75 registration fee and fill out a short application. The spouses are interviewed separately to make certain they are attending freely and are willing to attend the weekend program and follow-up sessions. The program is open to members of all faiths.

Despite the precautions, some couples attend because one or both are under pressure from children or other family members, the Bates said.

Retrouvaille is sometimes the last stop for couples who already have a court date for divorce proceedings. Some spouses even present court orders requiring separate housing.

Even couples with the severest problems are usually adept at masking their difficulties, Pat Bate said. But during the weekend, the couples' body language reveals the pain, frustration and hurt. Some look dejected or resigned. A few lash out angrily at the other spouse.

By Sunday, attitudes have changed. Smiling couples are sitting close together or are holding hands. At this point, the couples are warned that the follow-up sessions are necessary to build on the weekend's achievements.

Pat Bate remembered one woman who angrily demanded her registration fee back, stating that she hated her husband and did not want to live with him anymore.

The woman attended the weekend because Pat Bate refused to refund the money. "I have never seen anybody who was so unattractive," Pat Bate said. "I was amazed. She looked like the Wicked Witch of the West."

But by Sunday afternoon, the woman and her husband were sitting together happily. "And she was without a doubt one of the prettiest women I have ever seen," Pat Bate said.

Couples' pain can be so palpable that Gietl admits he does not enjoy the weekends, although he has participated in many across the nation. "But I know it is possible for them to be in a different place in a few weeks," he said. "The after-effect is the best part."

"You don't fall in love or fall out of love," Gietl said. "Love is a decision. You decide to love this man or this women until death do you part."

Streep unveils Walk of Fame star

LOS ANGELES — Meryl Streep retraced her footsteps along Hollywood Boulevard, this time amid shouts and applause as she unveiled her Hollywood Walk of Fame star.

More than 300 fans gathered curbside to witness the dedication of the actress' star Wednesday.

"When I was 19, I had a date and we walked along Hollywood Boulevard," she said. "I never dreamed someday I'd be walking over me."

Miss Streep's was the 2,119th star enshrined along the famous walkway on Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street.

The dedication was timed to coincide with the release of her new movie "One True Thing," which opens nationwide Friday.

Miss Streep, 49, won Academy Awards for "Sophie's Choice" in 1982 and "Kramer vs. Kramer" in 1979.

BERKELEY, Calif. — Ani DiFranco isn't one to shy away from politics, and she'll throw her support behind prison reform with a weekend concert and conference.

"Everything is politics," said DiFranco. "If you decide you're not going to get involved, that's just a way of saying that you're not concerned, that you're embracing the politics of apathy."

DiFranco, 27, will be joined in concert Saturday by Me'Shell Ndegeocello and Michael Franti as part of a conference at the University of California, Berkeley featuring political activist and former Black Panther Angela Davis and Ms. magazine co-founder Gloria Steinem.

"Critical Resistance: Music and Solidarity" will benefit the Prison Activist Resource Center and the California Fund for Women Prisoners.

DiFranco believes the millions of dollars spent building new prisons could be put to better use.

"I know it sounds like a cliche, but what about education and job training?" she said Wednesday in the San Francisco Examiner. "If you could combine education with some serious gun control laws, I think you'd be on the right track."

BOSTON — Nancy Kerrigan has settled a defamation lawsuit against an Internet company that displayed computer-generated pornographic images of the figure skater online.

Under the settlement reached Wednesday, Marvista Computing Co., also called SexPicNet, will pay Kerrigan an undisclosed sum of more than $10,000, said Kerrigan lawyer Victor Polk.

Polk said Marvista grafted an image of Kerrigan's head onto another body.

Kerrigan, the 1994 silver medalist in figure skating, claimed in a May 1 lawsuit that the images defamed her and caused her emotional distress.

"I feel good that we were able to prevail," said Jerry Solomon, Kerrigan's agent-husband. "It sent a message to people in that business that you just can't irresponsibly do whatever you want to do."

Under the agreement, Los Angeles-based Marvista will also relinquish the three computers used to produce the images and will not be permitted to print any more images of Kerrigan.

Efforts to reach Marvista for comment Wednesday were unsuccessful. In May, company officials said the Kerrigan image was an "obvious fake" and for entertainment purposes only.

LOS ANGELES — Lisa Marie Presley's religious beliefs are off-limits to lawyers defending a supermarket tabloid in her defamation lawsuit, a judge ruled.

Ms. Presley sued the National Enquirer over its June 1997 story headlined "Lisa Marie Suicide Drama," which said she tried to kill herself and performed self-mutilation, drawing blood from her body and scrawling, "Nobody loves me" and "I'm ugly" on her arms.

"It was entirely false and we sued," Presley lawyer Daniel Petrocelli said Wednesday after Superior Court Judge Lawrence Crispo ruled tabloid lawyers couldn't examine Ms. Presley's religious beliefs during the trial.

The trial is to begin Jan. 25. Ms. Presley's libel lawsuit seeks unspecified damages.

Petrocelli said the Enquirer wanted to invade Ms. Presley's personal relationship with the Church of Scientology as a "way to distract the case from the merits."

National Enquirer Executive Editor David Perel said from his Lantana, Fla., office that there would be no comment on the ruling.

Although Ronald Reagan didn't seem like our most scholarly president, his administration produced an enormous volume of paper. Edmund Morris, whose authorized biography "Dutch: A Memoir of Ronald Reagan" will be published this fall, shared some of the numbers with Forbes FYI.

Morris says the official papers of President Ronald Reagan include 2,386 feet of things filed by given names, 200 feet of sample popular mail, 2,449 feet of things filed by subject and 48 feet of things written in the president's hand. There are also 126 feet of material deemed confidential and 1,008 feet of Confidential File Oversize Attachments. In all, the files include 50 million pages of material.
