Alexander Jury Deliberating

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A state district court jury that convicted Billy Wayne Alexander Jr. of killing a state trooper now must decide whether Alexander will die by lethal injection or spend his life in prison.

Alexander, 21, returns to the courtroom today as the punishment phase gets underway in his trial for the Oct. 5 shooting deaath of Department of Public Safety trooper Jerry Don Davis, 25, of Slaton.

Under Texas law, the only punishments allowed for persons convicted of capital murder are death by lethal injection or life in prison.

Inspectors Seek Mishap Cause

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — State safety inspectors returned to a Sierra Nevada construction site Sunday to look for the cause of a scaffolding collapse that sent seven miners tumbling more than 300 feet to their deaths.

A total of 10 workers have died since work began in 1977 on Pacific Gas & Electric Co.'s Helms Creek hydroelectric plant.

The company has disclaimed responsibility for safety at the $384 million underground facility, however. It claims worker safety is in the hands of the builder, Granite-Ball-Groves Co. of San Francisco.

The latest accident occured late Friday as the hard rock miners, standing on a circular platform suspended from four cables in a 970-foot ventilation shaft, were applying concrete to the walls.

Suddenly the platform fell, and the workers were thrown to their deaths.

To Discuss Cowboy Hall

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — State Tourism and Recreation Director Abe Hesser says he will meet today with Gov. George Nigh to discuss what Oklahoma can do to keep the Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Oklahoma City.

Meanwhile, the hall's board of directors, after meeting in Denver on Saturday, said the center will remain here for the time being while a committee studies its current problems and proposals to relocate it.

Reds Praise Convictions

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist Party today praised the conviction and sentences of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow and her nine co-defendants but warned that their followers must also be suppressed.

"Pouring out the waters of the Yangtze River could not wash away their crimes," said the Communist Party newspaper, the People's Daily.

Two Theft Cases Probed By Police

Two thefts and a spate of traffic accidents were investigated during the weekend by city police.

Reporting the theft of a $265 AM-FM radio and cassette tape player was Alfredo Quiros. He told officer Buddy Kinney the item was taken from his car while the vehicle was parked in front of his Rt. 3 home.

The second theft was also worked by Kinney. Reporting it was Roy Giddens, 2106 Merrill. Giddens said a tool box, tools, and a battery charger were stolen from him. That merchandise was estimated to be worth $170.

The first traffic accident was at 9 a.m. Saturday in the 3000 block of Ave. L. Involved in it were a parked 1962 Chevrolet owned by Moreline Thompson and a 1980 Chevrolet driven by Darrell P. Robertson. The accident was worked by Kerry Fritz.

The next wreck was at 11 a.m. at the intersection of 27th St. and College Ave. and was investigated by Fritz. There, a 1980 AMC driven by Naomi Culp Gleastine was in collision with a 1979 Chevrolet driven by Bobby Gene Herriage.

Richard McCulley worked a wreck at 4:05 p.m. Saturday at 4200 College Ave. that involved a 1980 Datsun driven by Tonja Renea McFatridge and a 1969 Chevrolet driven by Joyce Helen Kimsey of Ira.

A three-vehicle accident was investigated by McCulley at 7 p.m. in the 3600 block of College Ave. Involved in it were a 1976 Dodge driven by David Richard Huff of Big Spring, a 1968 Chevrolet driven by James L. Bloom, and a 1973 Chevrolet driven by Jesse Antu Alderete of Burlington, Colo.

The final accident Saturday was at 11:05 p.m. at 2403 41st St. Involved in it were a parked 1975 Ford owned by S.T. Rains Well Service and a 1975 Ford driven by Johnny Dewayne Welch. The accident was worked by Mike Harris.

Kinney worked a hit and run Sunday at 10:05 a.m. in the 3000 block of Crockett. A parked 1979 Plymouth owned by Nora Brumlow of Kermit was struck by a vehicle which fled the scene.

NEW CONTAINERS DISTRIBUTED—New sanitation department containers are being put into service here, and eventually the entire residential area will be served by the new equipment. Zack Garza is shown unloading one of the new boxes from a truck. All will be serviced by sideloading trucks. (SDN Staff Photo)

Day Is Set Aside For Ex-Hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, declaring the former hostages freed from Iran have shown that "the spirit of our country can never be broken," signed a resolution today designating Thursday a day of Thanksgiving in their honor.

The resolution, the president said, "salutes the unity of the nation when we are confronted with threats to our freedom."

"It recognizes the principle of public service which 53 men and women fulfilled in the highest tradition of their calling," Reagan said. "It recognizes the devotion and bravery of professional soldiers, the memories of those eight men in the long line who have given everything to preserve everything."

"It reminds us that greater glory has no man than he lays down his life for another," the president said.

Reagan signed the resolution at his desk in the Oval Office, appearing to read his comments from a typewritten paper on the desk.

At one point, he got his words mixed up, stating: "This resolution pays strength to the tribute of America."

With all the hoopla usually reserved for visiting heads of state, Reagan will salute the hostages with a ceremony Tuesday on the South Lawn of the White House and a reception in the East Room.

The former hostages and their families, shielded from the public and the press, were reunited Sunday and went into seclusion at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. Today was to be a private day for them.

As the freed hostages' plane flew over the Atlantic toward home Sunday, Reagan opened the second week of his administration by assembling their relatives at the White House for a pep talk and send-off to New York.

"We won't be going with you to New York because we feel very deeply that you don't need any outsiders," he told 139 relatives in the ornate, gold-chandeliered State Dining Room. "This is a moment for you and for them."

The president praised the courage of the 52 Americans held captive so long, and then told the families:

"I think it might be appropriate here to say a word about the courage of all of you, the dignity with which you have borne this, the courage when all you could do was wait through the many disappointments. Not only those who are coming home, but all of you too — America has to be very proud of you."

The president's eyes swelled with tears and his voice choked with emotion as he said:

"Since we all didn't go to church this morning because of this (ceremony), can we just say, Dear God, Thank You. Thank You for what You've done. And God give you the understanding and the patience that you'll need now with regard to this homecoming and get-together. Amen."

At his side, his wife Nancy wept openly.

Vice President and Mrs. George Bush also talked with the families.

Larry Persinger, father of hostage Gregory Persinger of Seaford, Del., thanked Reagan for his role in bringing the Americans home. "You helped put the icing on the cake," he said.

As they talked among themselves, some relatives recalled the strain of the long ordeal.

Cameras Okayed For Courtrooms

WASHINGTON (AP) — States are free to allow television and still-photography coverage of criminal trials — even when defendants object, the Supreme Court ruled today.

Such coverage does not automatically violate a criminal defendant's constitutional right to a fair trial, the high court said.

Today's unanimous decision upheld Florida's policy of allowing courtroom camera coverage, thus upholding the burglary convictions of two Miami Beach policemen who claimed they had been denied a fair trial.

More than half the states have adopted some policy, either permanently or on an experimental basis, for allowing broadcast media coverage of trials. Not all those states, however, have allowed coverage of criminal trials over the objections of defendants or others involved.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, writing for the court, said a 1965 decision striking down the swindling conviction of Texas financier Billie Sol Estes did not establish that televising criminal trials is inherently unconstitutional.

"It does not stand as an absolute ban on state experimentation with an evolving technology, which in terms of modes of mass communications, was in its relative infancy in 1964, and is, even now, in a state of continuing change," Burger said.

He added that the Supreme Court is not willing to set down any such kind of automatic ban.

Justices Byron R. White and Potter Stewart, in separate opinions, said they thought the Estes decision 16 years ago had set down an absolute ban but that they were willing to overturn that decision.

Burger's opinion said defendants remain free to challenge their convictions on grounds that news media coverage prejudiced their trial.

But, he said, defendants cannot bar the courthouse door to the broadcast news media if state policy says otherwise.

"If it could be demonstrated that the mere presence of photographic and recording equipment and the knowledge that the event would be broadcast invariably and uniformly affected the conduct of the participants so as to impair fundamental fairness, our task would be simple; prohibition of broadcast coverage of trials would be required," Burger said.

The decision did not give the broadcast media any constitutional right to cover trials with cameras and microphones, but appeared to lay the groundwork for such a First Amendment showdown.

The Supreme Court last July ruled that the public and news media have such a constitutional right to attend criminal trials — even when defendants object.

Armed with that ruling, broadcasters may be expected to test their rights in those states not allowing broadcast coverage of trials, or allowing such coverage only when all participants consent.

The American Bar Association's ethical standards imposing an absolute ban on electronic media and photographic coverage of courts still serves as a model for many states and the federal courts.

Florida's policy was challenged by two Miami Beach policemen convicted in the 1977 burglary of a restaurant, Picciolo's.

3rd Quarter Sales Hit $66.48 Million

Gross retail sales in Scurry County during the third quarter of 1980 amounted to $66,480,567, Bob Bullock state comproller of public accounts, has announced.

"The Texas economy continues to grow each quarter and remains one of the brighter spots in the country's overall economic picture," Bullock said.

Gross sales for the entire state in the third quarter topped the $65,7 billion mark, the comptroller reported.

Scurry County's gross sales were well above those of other area counties in its population bracket. The sales here were produced by 427 retail outlets.

Figures for other area counties, with number of outlets and total retail sales, in order:

Nolan County (Sweetwater-Roscoe), 363 for $53,488,507; Terry (Brownfield), 241 for $51,794,850; Hockley (Levelland), 407 for $50,191,330; Ward (Monahans), 281 for $44,463,025; Dawson (Lamesa), 324 for $39,403,802; Reeves (Pecos), 317 for $29,143,272; Mitchell (Colorado City-Loraine), 158 for $12,413,650; Garza (Post), 108 for $8,309,735; Fisher (Rotan-Roby), 71 for $4,907,462; Borden (Gail), 3 for $58,043.

Polish Students Launch Sit-in

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Some 2,000 students were reported today to have begun a sit-in at the university in Lodz to demand abolition of mandatory classes in Marxist philosophy, adding a new element to the unrest in Communist Poland.

Meanwhile, an unprecedented offer — a televised debate — has been extended by the government to leaders of the independent trade union Solidarity in the wake of a series of strikes and threats of more to back demands for a five-day workweek.

Ask Us

Q.—How long are coaching contracts at Western Texas College and why doesn't Coach Larry Dunaway have an assistant coach for recruiting?

A. Nobody employed by WTC--and that includes administrators, department heads, professors, coaches and all other personnel--has tenure, says Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president. As for assistant coaches, the program is not considered big enough to justify more personnel in this area. The only WTC coach with an assistant is Bob O'Day, the golf coach, and the reason for this is that he also serves as athletic director and as manager of the pro shop, which requires a lot of time and supervision which is being increased now by the addition of the racquetball facility. Coach Dunaway's recruiting problems the past year are attributed more to a late start than to a scarcity of help. He was not brought onto on the scene until the recruiting season was already well underway last spring.

Summit Chief Says War In Mideast Top Concern

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq today told the 37-nation Islamic summit "the highest priority" should be given to ending the 18-week-old Iran-Iraq war which he said weakens the entire Persian Gulf region.

"The conflict between the brotherly Islamic countries, Iran and Iraq...is a tragic blow to our hopes and expectations, " said Zia, the president of the conference of Islamic nations, who has made two unsuccessful mediation trips to Baghdad and Tehran.

"The attrition of the resources of these two Islamic states weakens the entire region and makes it more vulnerable to outside pressure," Zia said in a prepared text.

Therefore, he added, "it is a matter of the highest priority for the Islamic world to explore all possible ways and means to bring this conflict to an end."

Hopes that a truce might be arranged at the summit to halt the war were dashed when Iran refused to attend because Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was coming.

Iraq has demanded Iran recognize its sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab waterway, its only outlet to the Persian Gulf, which it captured early in the war. Iran says it won't negotiate until all Iraqi troops leave its territory.

Zia also called on the conference to take "decisive action" against Israel to force the return of occupied Arab land for a Palestinian state.

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia, the summit host, lobbied the Islamic leaders to get the divided Moslem world to unite and drive Israel from East Jerusalem and Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Murder Charge Filed Against Daniel's Wife

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel, wife of former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., is free on $50,000 bond after being charged with murder in the shooting death of her husband.

Accompanied by her attorney, Andrew Lannie, Mrs. Daniel, 33, surrendered to authorities Saturday evening after Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols earlier told Lannie he had a warrant for his client's arrest.

She was arraigned on the murder charge before Peace Justice I.B. Carrell, then booked and fingerprinted at the Liberty County jail, Eckols said. Mrs. Daniel was released after a Liberty bonding company posted the bond.

District Attorney Carroll E. Wilborn Jr. had said earlier he was not going to file charges in the case, but would refer it to a grand jury scheduled to meet Wednesday.

Neither he nor Eckols explained why authorities decided to file charges instead of waiting for the grand jury session.

Eckols said although the warrant was issued Friday, he decided not to arrest Mrs. Daniel until Saturday. He declined to say why he decided to wait.

The attractive blonde, who had initiated divorce proceedings against Daniel prior to the shooting, was discharged from a Liberty hospital Friday.

She was taken there Monday night following the shooting for treatment of "emotional shock" and "hysteria."

Eckols said Mrs. Daniel was staying in Houston with relatives after she posted bond Saturday.

The sheriff said he spent about five hours Saturday at the Daniel home on the outskirts of town with Lannie and other law officers, searching for evidence of a warning shot Mrs. Daniel says she fired before Daniel was shot once in the stomach.

Saturday, Eckols said a bullet hole was found in the roof of the home near the spot where Lannie said his client told him she fired the first shot.

An autopsy revealed that Daniel died of internal bleeding after he was struck in the abdomen by a bullet that severed his aorta.

Authorities have said since since early in their investigation that there was evidence Mrs. Daniel fired the shot that killed her husband.

Daniel was found face-down in a hallway between the kitchen and the garage, and a .22-caliber rifle and two spent cartridges were recovered in the bedroom of the home.

Mrs. Daniel had filed for divorce Dec. 31, citing "a conflict of personalities with no hope of reconciliation." She had filed for divorce previously, in November 1976, but withdrew that petition within days.

Pay Raise Issue Could Test Clements' Strength

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A vote on a state employee pay raise could provide an early — but inconclusive — test of Republican Gov. Bill Clements' strength in the predominantly Democratic Senate.

The House, meanwhile, is apparently stymied by House members' refusal to suspend a constitutional rule and allow committees to hold hearings in the first month of the legislative session. The Legislature convened Jan. 13.

Scheduled for Senate debate today was a proposal to grant employees an immediate 6.8 percent pay raise that would cost $110.3 million, twice as much as the increase recommended by Clements.

Sen. John Leedom, a Clements ally, set the stage for the vote with the comment that he had once been advised "in matters of principle, stand like a rock — in matters of opinion, agree to compromise."

Also on the Senate agenda was a vote on the governor's appointment of Mrs. Billie Pickard of Raymondville as a regent at Pan American University, an appointment Sen. Carlos Truan has vowed to block.

Truan, D-Corpus Christi, told reporters he had investigated Mrs. Pickard's actions as a school board member, and "she was totally insensitive to the needs of the children there ... almost all of whom were Mexican-Americans."

Truan said Mrs. Pickard, who lives in his district, had opposed federally funded programs for bilingual education and school lunches for poor children.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said he had sponsored the 6.8 percent proposal as a "meaningful pay raise" that would be far better than a "political display of tokenism."

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, said his office had had 300 telephone calls from state employees about a pay raise.

However, Leedom, also a Dallas Republican, said he had had only one call and the message was, "You're right. Hang in there."

last of big spenders?

"It is not fit that you should sit here any longer," Oliver Cromwell told the Rump Parliament. "You shall now give place to better men."

Change the words "better men" to "more frugal men and women" and the old Puritan's benediction would have been appropriate for the 96th U.S. Congress just recently ended.

The more conservative members of Congress elected this year can make no claim to being "better" than their defeated opponents in any moral or general sense of the word, of course. But the political differences appear to be enormous.

With luck, the 96th will go down in history as the Last of the Big Spenders.

Considering Republican promises to increase defense spending, the new Congress will not be able to immediately deliver a balanced budget or a vast reduction of federal bureaucracy. But in the creation of new departments, new programs and new ways to spend tax dollars, it will surely offer a welcome contrast to the 1979-80 session.

The 96th ignored the rising breeze of conservatism and went about the business of taxing, spending and regulating the same as its recent predecessors.

Its accomplishments included the biggest single tax increase in the history of the world - the misnamed "windfall profits" levy on energy consumers.

The 96th created a new and labeled by many experts as an unnecessary Cabinet agency, the Department of Education. It ignored the energy crisis by severely restricting or banning development on millions of acres of Alaska to the benefit of backpackers and environmentalists and the permanent detriment of energy-hungry consumers.

Former president Carter praised the 96th for its "superb record." This suggests that even now he doesn't understand why he was soundly defeated along with so many allies in the Congress.

The 96th will be remembered, too, for the indictment or conviction of several members on bribery and morals charges.

But this was neither a liberal-conservative nor a partisan issue. The list of accused included two of the most prominent supporters of the Moral Majority, proving that immorality knows neither partisan nor ideological division.

But even without Abscam and the morals charges, the 96th would have been a washout.

The voters properly told many of its most liberal members it was "not fit that you should sit here any longer."

WASHINGTON (NEA)—One of the most vexing and controversial questions facing Ronald Reagan's administration—at least within its own ranks—is whether to continue the embargo on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union.

In response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, President Carter on Jan. 4, 1980, embargoed all such sales in excess of the 8 million tons a year covered in a five-year contract now entering its fifth year. The Soviets were thus prevented from buying an additional 13 million tons of corn, 4 million tons of wheat and 2 million tons of soybeans.

Carter put the issue of the embargo's continuance squarely in Reagan's lap by renewing the one-year proclamation for another year rather than allowing it to expire. If Reagan wants the embargo ended, he will have to issue an order of his own to countermand Carter's.

Transition sources report that a split has arisen over the matter among Regan's advisers.

Candidate Reagan firmly opposed the embargo—especially in front of farm audiences. And John Block, the incoming agriculture secretary, has spoken out against the embargo in speeches and at his Senate confirmation hearings.

But a different opinion is held by members of Reagan's foreign policy transition team, who want to send the Soviet Union a clear message that the United States will not be pushed around anymore. They are urging that the embargo be retained for now because the Soviets might misinterpret its lifting as a sign of weakness.

Further complicating the debate are the embargo's mixed effects upon U.S. farmers and upon the Soviet Union.

The embargo has not hurt the American farmer all that much. True, its initial effect was to depress farm prices. For example, the price of corn fell to about $2.20 a bushel. But a combination of summer drought and record exports has driven corn back up to a healthy $3.40.

Neither has the embargo been as debilitating to the Soviet Union as was forecast. The Soviets probably imported only about 5 million bushels of grain fewer than they had intended before the embargo thanks to their increased purchases from other countries.

However, they had to buy that grain at premium prices about $1 billion more than U.S. farmers would have charged. This has caused serious foreign currency problems for their centrally planned economy.

Ironically, U.S. grain exports were pushed to record levels more or less as a result of the embargo.

The Soviets made a huge grain purchase from Argentina, whose traditional customers—including Italy, Spain, Japan and Colombia—were then forced to turn to the United States for much of their grain.

In addition, some countries, such as Sweden, bought large quantities of U.S. soybeans for the first time, U.S. authorities speculate that those soybeans were eventually ground into cattle feed and sold to the Russians.

So, should Reagan continue the embargo for foreign policy reasons after promising the only slightly inconvenienced farmers that he would do away with it? Or should he trust the Soviets to recognize its lifting as a domestic political decision without foreign-policy implications?

The depth of the split among his advisers over those questions recently led Reagan to respond to a reporter's question on the future of the embargo by saying: "I don't know. It's a very complicated question and one that will require a lot more study."

Don't expect a quick resolution of this issue from the new administration.

Some people get very depressed about their age.

I cannot understand this. You are only as old as you feel. Everyone knows that.

Someone pointed out to me the other day that Shirley Temple became a grandmother. They are obviously talking about another Shirley Temple and not the same one I know. The one I remember who sang and danced to "On the Good Ship Lollipop" would only be about nine or ten years old now.

Then someone said they read in the paper where the government made a mistake and sent a draft notice to Mickey Mouse at Disneyland. A spokesman said they were going to notify the government of the error and that Mickey was 52 years old now and served in World War II. It should be obvious to everyone as it is to me that they are talking about two different Mickey Mouses (Meeces? Mices?). The one I remember is a rodent and the government would have remembered if they had made a uniform for him during World War II.

People just don't stop to figure things out. My mother called the other day and said. "Quick! Look at Lucille Ball's daughter on television. She's in a new movie." I turned it on and there was this tall, beautiful woman mother thought belonged to "I Love." I told her not only was it a biological impossibility, but Lucy has red hair and this girl was a brunette.

There's a group of people out there who just can't stand it when you remain young at heart. There's always someone who will butt into a conversation and say, "Did you know Eddie Haskell, that rotten kid on 'Leave It to Beaver'? He's a policeman now."

Or someone in a beauty shop will try to frost your hair naturally with a 'smart remark like, "Sandra Dee is 39 years old now. I heard it from an unimpeachable source."

Don't get the wrong idea. I don't expect the world to stand perfectly still year after year. I know that your old theatres give way to parking lots and old boyfriends have faces that extend all the way back to their coat collars, but you have to keep it in perspective.

Last night my husband turned a page of the paper and said, "The Atlanta airport is finished."

"Which Atlanta?" I asked defensively.

"The one in Georgia."

"You're lying!" I said. "The Atlanta airport has been under construction for 35 years. It was all something we took for granted."

"Well, it's finished!"

People just can't stand to see me happy and well-adjusted. Next thing you know, someone will tell me Little Orphan Annie has grown eyes and sings on the New York stage!

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking forward to the springtime of the year, when the administration will be two months old and showing its first few blossoms, one sees also the ravages of winters past.

Which is to say that any new economic beginning, which every President offers, drags along economic debris that fouls the scenery and clogs the machinery. By this year's spring the burden should be obvious.

It will be a time when carmakers make perhaps their most intense sales effort ever, not just to move inventories from the lots but to remain solvent. For one, Chrysler, it is do or die or merge with another.

The problem, which includes General Motors and Ford to lesser degrees, and which concerns the economic fortunes of millions of Americans, is not of Reagan's making, but it is his to deal with, for good or bad.

He didn't create high interest rates, for instance, but when the big sales push comes, so also may come costlier financing. The ingredients already are in place, just waiting to be activated by demand.

The car companies received a painful lesson from those rates last fall: When interest rose into high double digits, as they did, people simply postponed buying cars. The industry is interest rate-sensitive.

Now add in this situation: The after-tax buying power of American factory workers declined 4.8 percent last year because of inflation. That situation isn't changing; workers continue to lose buying power.

Considering these problems — rising interest and shrinking buying power — will buyers bail out the automakers? And if they don't, will Reagan be able to step in to help, if only to save his own programs?

Spring is also home-buying time, but the latest government figures show neither housing prices nor mortgage rates falling. Those housing people who claim to know say they're getting ready for a dismal year.

The dual problems of these two basic industries, affecting hundreds of other industries, provokes the question: Can the President avoid a recession? Especially with energy and food prices also likely to rise?

Such a list of problems and potential difficulties isn't meant to deflower the spring. It's purpose is to paint a landscape a bit more real and less colorful than the roseate pre-inauguration perspectives.

Perhaps the most formidable challenge may come from the impatience of people who will be asked to lower living standards while submitting to inflation, one of the main reasons why voters retired Jimmy Carter.

Wasn't Reagan supposed to have freed people from this economic trap.

That's what he said, but now in the dusky light of mid-winter it is easily perceived he can't free anyone from the economic shackles with the twist of a key. He'll have to file the chains away. It takes time.

Bomb Rips Iran Bank

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bomb blast ripped the Bank Melli Iran early today with an explosion strong enough to shatter windows on buildings across the street, police said.

There were no injuries and no one claimed responsibility for the 12:35 a.m. PST blast at the bank, located on Montgomery Street in San Francisco's financial district, a police spokesman said.

The explosion blew out all of the windows in the Iranian bank, which had offices in the Wells Fargo Building, as well as the windows in the Union Bank office across the street, the spokesman said.

State agents were investigating and federal authorities were notified of the blast, officials said.

Your Birthday

January 27, 1981

In the year following your birthday things may not always be a bed of roses, but you won't let any adversities distract or hold you back from your goals. Because of this, success is yours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Fulfill your ambitions today, but do so in ways that you will be proud to talk about later. The end must justify the means. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Methods which proved unfruitful for you previously are likely to come up empty again today. Learn from past mistakes. Don't repeat them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be an observer rather than a participant in the affairs of others today. Butting in where you are not invited could cause complications.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unusual stress in important relationships is something you might have to contend with today. If opposed, keep your cool.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your way of doing things and your boss's may not synchronize today. Think twice before biting the hand that signs your paycheck.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Normally you're cautious and prudent in financial or commercial dealings, but today you may act without having all the facts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Neither you nor your mate should make major decisions today without the full consent of the other. Two heads should prove wiser than one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're extremely observant today, but you may focus more on the shortcomings of others than on their virtues. Look for the latter.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Treat your resources and possessions with respect today, or you might not end up with as much as you started out with.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's nice to be able to operate in a free and independent manner, but today this privilege may be denied you. Make the most of the hand you're dealt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of operating as you usually do, letting bygones be bygones, today you may allow something another did to you in the past color your thinking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Steer clear of friends who make unreasonable demands upon your purse or property today. You could be maneuvered into a giveaway position.

Dear Abby

With Examples Like These, We Can Overcome

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: In a recent column, I shared an inspirational item sent by Herman Endler, who, at age 40, suffered a stroke that left him totally disabled. He wrote:

"I wasn't able to get out of bed, but by the grace of God and a surgeon's skill, I made it. At times I was so despondent, I prayed it would all end. Then a friend gave me the enclosed inspirational piece, which I must have read 1,000 times. I had moments when my vision clouded, and I thought, 'This is it; this is the end.' Then I'd read that message again, and it pulled me through.

"Abby, some of the greatest men and women of our times have been saddled with disabilities and adversities but have managed to overcome them.

"Perhaps somewhere there is someone who is at the end of his or her rope and needs encouragement. Pass this along. It may save a life. It saved mine."

A portion of the inspirational piece:

"Cripple him, and you have a Sir Walter Scott.

"Lock him in a prison cell, and you have a John Bunyan.

"Bury him in the snows of Valley Forge, and you have a George Washington.

"Raise him in abject poverty, and you have an Abraham Lincoln.

"Subject him to bitter religious prejudice, and you have a Disraeli."

The response to that column was overwhelming. A distinguished publisher, philanthropist and former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain wrote:

"Dear Abby: Your column, 'From Adversity, Many Find Strength,' is indeed a masterpiece. I am adding it to my personal collection of 'reminders.'

"There are two great sources of inspiration in life, enthusiasm and tragedy, and I have been boxed in by both. But having been boxed in by both, I also recognize that perseverance is the key to escape and satisfaction. Sincerely, Walter Annenberg."

Hundreds of readers submitted additional names for the list of those who had succeeded against the odds. Some contributions follow:

Spit on him, humiliate him, then crucify him and he forgives you, and you have Jesus Christ.

Strike him down with infantile paralysis, and he becomes a Franklin D. Roosevelt, the only president of the U.S. to be elected to four terms.

When he is a lad of 8, burn him so severely in a schoolhouse fire that the doctors say he will never walk again, and you have a Glenn Cunningham, who set the world's record in 1934 for running a mile in 4 minutes and 6.7 seconds.

Deafen a genius composer who continues to compose some of the world's most beautiful music, and you have a Ludwig van Beethoven.

Drag him, more dead than alive, out of a rice paddy in Vietnam, and you have a Rocky Bleier, that beautiful running back with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Have him or her born black in a society filled with racial discrimination, and you have a Booker T. Washington, Harriet Tubman, Marion Anderson, George Washington Carver or Martin Luther King Jr.

Make him the first child to survive in a poor Italian family of 18 children, and you have an Enrico Caruso.

Amputate the arm and leg of an aspiring young actor, and you have a James Stacey.

Have him born of parents who survived a Nazi concentration camp, paralyze him from the waist down when he is 4, and you have the incomparable concert violinist, Itzhak Perlman.

Call a slow learner "retarded" and write him off as ineducable, and you have an Albert Einstein.

See tomorrow's column for others who have succeeded against the odds.

Larger Sizes Are Not Always Best

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Shoppers who buy the large, economy-size package in the belief it saves them money may be paying more than they need to, says a Syracuse University associate professor of marketing.

Clint B. Tankersley of the School of Management advises customers to use unit pricing to avoid the "large-economy-size trap."

"Don't just assume the larger size offers the best value," he says. "Check it against other sizes of the same product and use the unit-pricing labels."

Tankersley urges shoppers to be particularly cautious when the packages are odd sizes. "This makes it even more difficult for easy mental price comparisons and increases the probability that quantity surcharges will go undetected," he says.

A quantity surcharge results when a large size of a brand is priced more per unit than a small size, assuming equal quality and packaging. For example, a brand of baked beans may be priced 25 cents for the eight-ounce size and 55 cents for the 16-ounce size. Shoppers conditioned to viewing the larger size as a better buy may ignore the quantity surcharge and select the 16-ounce size.

"This is particularly important to low-income consumers who tend to buy the large economy size in the belief it is more economical," Tankersley says. His research indicates most shoppers spend very little time selecting individual grocery items and make few price comparisons.

"Unit pricing was designed to aid consumers in making price comparisons, yet studies have shown that shoppers make very little use of the unit-price tags," he says. "Consumers who take the time to read and understand unit-pricing labels are not likely to become victims of quantity surcharging." Conscientious unit-pricing information has implications for the marketer as well as the consumer, Tankersley says.

"A customer who begins to associate a brand or a store with quantity overpricing may tend to distrust that marketer and find another store in which to shop," he warns, adding, "When consumers become aware of quantity surcharge they may interpret it as a deceptive act designed to exploit the unwary."

Tankersley says shoppers who use "cents off" coupons lower their chances of paying a quantity surcharge. He advises consumers to be aware that promotion items featured in markets are often displayed in one size only.

"Here, again, it is important to check the unit pricing if there is any doubt that the 'bargain' is really a 'bargain,'" he says.

Oswald: "Here is another play problem. North uses Stayman to see if South has a four-card major suit and then bids a proper six notrump."

Alan: "A quick count shows South that he has 11 top tricks and he can get the twelfth in either minor suit. He wants to try to guard against the chance that West will hold the queen of clubs and both missing diamond honors while retaining all other options. He can and does find a safety play to to insure 12 tricks."

Oswald: "He takes his second high heart at trick two and starts on the spades. Both opponents follow to the three leads so South takes dummy's ace and queen of hearts while discarding two little diamonds. All hearts and spades are now accounted for."

Alan: "Note that South does not cash the fourth spade. He would squeeze himself if he did. He simply leads a diamond to his nine."

Oswald: "West is in with the jack and must give South his twelfth trick. It should be noted that if East held both the king and jack of diamonds, South would have made seven."

Cosmorama Club Has New Officers

New officers were elected by the Cosmorama Study Club at a salad supper Jan. 21 at the Martha Ann Woman's Club.

New officers are Mrs. Ray Courtney, president; Mrs. Jerry Smith, first vice president; Mrs. Dean Floyd, second vice president; Mrs. Carl Ashley, recording secretary; Mrs. Doug Flynn, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M.L. Duke, treasurer and Mrs. Floyd, reporter.

Members also voted to make donations to the MAWC.

Mrs. T.A. Hicks presided over the business meeting.

Different State Regions Prefer Different Chocolates

NEW YORK (AP)—Experts claim they can tell what part of the country you come from by the kind of chocolate you eat.

Your taste buds can often be as eloquent as a regional dialect when it comes to sweets, says R.E. Ferguson, senior candy buyer for a major chain of variety stores.

He cites as an example cream-filled chocolate eggs, very popular in Philadelphia at Easter but which "cannot be given away in New York City then or at any time of the year."

"While chocolate has its followers from sweet to bitter, tastes can differ from East to West," Ferguson said. "Easterners prefer dark and bitter chocolates over light milk confections. In the Midwest, consumers seem to favor milk chocolate, with the story being the same on the West Coast where chocolate-covered cherries with liquid centers are also big sellers. In San Francisco, cream fillings are highly popular and in Los Angeles it's chocolate in any form, light or dark."

Based on the high-volume candy sales of his own company, F.W. Woolworth—about a quarter of a billion pounds annually—Chicago residents buy more nut candies than do consumers in many other cities. Floridians take to sesame-type candies, while New Orleans residents enjoy heavenly hash and gold-brick chocolate bars.

While candy consumption is down in general because of today's weight conscious society as well as price, Ferguson says that seasonal purchases are showing an increase.

Sniper Suspect Shot By Police

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A man officers say "ambushed" two teen-age motorcycle riders died in a barrage of police gunfire and tear gas three hours after he killed one of the boys and critically wounded the other.

Police said Richard Tiedemann, 33, died about 7 p.m. Sunday after 24 officers pumped more than 40 shots and several tear gas canisters into his one-story, wood-frame home.

Ralph B. "Trey" Shelton, 14, was pronounced dead about three hours earlier after being struck at least twice in the head and back with a blast from a shotgun, according to Medical Examiner Dail McMillan.

Kevin Curnaut, 13, was in "critical condition" early today in the intensive care unit of Arlington Community Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

"We have witnesses who said the suspect was apparently hiding behind a concrete outhouse near the (motorcycle) trail and when the two boys came by, he opened fire," said Sgt. Dennis Rhoten of the Arlington Police Department.

Neighbors said Tiedemann oftened had complained of motorcycles being ridden in a wooded area a short distance from his homes, but police said they weren't sure of the motive for the shootings.

Rhoten said the two boys were riding along a dirt road when Tiedemann apparently opened fire on them; then returned to his home and barricaded himself inside as officers arrived at the scene.

While Tiedemann, an engineer for Vought Corp. and described as a "loner" by one neighbor, waited inside his home, police began evacuating the neighborhood.

Rescue workers managed to move the Curnaut boy to safety, but were kept from dragging the body of the Shelton youth from the scene because it was close to Tiedemann's house, police said.

Rhoten said it took three hours to get the neighborhood cleared. He said the officers, including 12 members of a tactical squad, then started to move toward the house and saw "a man in a red suit" walking from the house to a garage.

As one of the officers started talking to Tiedemann, he fired four shots at the police, Rhoten said.

Officers returned fire and hit the suspect, but he managed to drag himself back inside the home.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Changing habits can help

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I smoked cigarettes for nearly 10 years before I quit. I was up to over a pack a day. The way I quit was cheap. Instead of reaching for a cigarette I would reach for a glass of ice water. I carried a glass of ice water around wherever I sat, or in the kitchen where I was cooking. After two weeks I did not want a cigarette anymore.

Five years later I was in the hospital and they fed me intravenously and gave me blood for about five days. When I got home I had the craving again. After about a week I smoked more than a pack at one sitting. To this day I have not wanted another cigarette. That was four years ago.

Not being able to smoke killed my great-grandmother. She was only 104. A country doctor told her children that she was going to die if she did not quit smoking. She refused to eat or drink until they gave her her pipe. In less than a week they were putting flowers on her grave. She had smoked since she was 12.

DEAR READER — Thanks for your suggestion about how to quit smoking. You used a good method — substituting a new habit for an old one. Drinking water, or whatever one chooses to do to satisfy the need to be doing something, will help for a variety of reasons. The good thing about your water habit is that it does not contain calories. A lot of people substitute eating for smoking and that adds to the problem of weight gain.

I often recommend exercising when you have the urge to smoke. That helps to use calories and helps with weight control, which is sometimes important after quitting smoking.

Many of the hazards of tobacco are discussed in The Health Letter number 2-6, Tobacco: Cigarettes, Cigars, Pipes, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. In general, a heavy smoker tends to shorten his life expectancy by about 14 years.

Now about your great-grandmother. Smoking a pipe is not as dangerous to one's health as smoking cigarettes. And some heavy smokers are lucky and do get by with the habit, just as some people play Russian roulette and don't shoot themselves. Your great-grandmother did not die from stopping smoking. She died from not eating. That is particularly dangerous in older people.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A friend of mine who served in New Guinea in World War II claims he saw a native with his testicles in a wheelbarrow and that they weighed around 20 pounds apiece. Is that true?

DEAR READER — It happens. Sometimes the scrotum gets so large that it nearly drags on the ground. It is caused by a disease called filariasis, otherwise known as elephantiasis, because it also involves the legs which can be as large as the leg of an elephant.

It is caused by a worm that blocks the lymphatics in the leg or scrotum or both. The swelling from fluid and fibrosis causes the enlargement. The disease is transmitted by one type of mosquito. The tiny worms can be eradicated with medicines, and surgery can help correct the deformities. It occurs mostly in the warm climates of the world.

Former Hostages Doing Better After Four Days

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — After four days in "Little America," the ex-hostages left Germany looking and feeling healthier and better prepared to face life at home again, those who worked and spoke with them say.

"From Day 1 to Day 4, there was definite progress in quite a few instances. There was definitely a change," said a military source who spent every day with the freed Americans during their stay at the U.S. Air Force Hospital in Wiesbaden.

Doctors and other officials at the hospital refused to speak with reporters after the 52 former captives flew to the United States Sunday. But other hospital personnel and others who saw them frequently — as well as some of the ex-hostages themselves — said the stay here was a valuable aid in the readjustment from being prisoners in Iran to heroes in America.

"They have a lot of catching up to do, and they were grateful for the treatment here," said medic Martin Bonneville.

"I haven't met anyone yet among the hostages who is champing at the bit to go home again," former hostage Malcolm Kalp of Fairfax, Va. told reporters on Saturday.

"It's a big emotional withdrawal when you leave there and come here, so this is a good idea to be here."

Faces Manslaughter Charge...

Diver Blocks Escape Of Car On Railroad

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The friend pounded frantically on a car blocking an escape route. On the railroad tracks, a 19-year-old woman sat in her compact car, apparently frozen at the wheel, and watched as the frieght train closed in.

The friend continued to pound, but she said the driver of the car didn't move. The 100-car Florida East Coast Railway train, traveling at 35 mph, did.

The next sound was grinding metal.

The driver who allegedly didn't move now faces vehicular manslaughter charges in death of Dawn Dulock of Fort Lauderdale.

"We're still trying to get over the shock of it all," Barbara Dulock, Dawn's mother, said Sunday from her Albany, Ga., home. "She had everything going for her."

Oakland Park Police Detective Rick Wright called the Dulocks' Georgia home in the middle of the night Saturday with the news.

"There wasn't much he could say," Mrs. Dulock said.

Miss Dulock and Rhonda Axtell, who met 18 months ago at Fort Lauderdale Art Institute, were heading home from the house of a friend when Miss Dulock drove onto the tracks.

Two cars waiting at a traffic signal blocked escape from the front, Miss Axtell said.

When Miss Dulock tried to back up, the car behind her wouldn't move, said Miss Axtell, who said she jumped out of the car and pounded on the windshield of the car to the rear.

"I yelled at her (Miss Dulock) to put it in reverse, but when she did we hit the car behind us," said Miss Axtell. "He had at least a car length and a half of room behind him to back up."

Then the train struck, shoving Miss Dulock's car sideways and into her desperate friend, Wright said.

"I think the train was so damn close she just sat there and looked at it," Miss Axtell said.

Miss Axtell, suffering from minor cuts, said she ran back to the car that had blocked escape, opened the door and punched the driver, Anthony James Puerta, in the mouth.

Oakland Park police arrested Puerta, 26, of Pompano Beach, and charged him with vehicular manslaughter, driving under the influence of alcohol and possession of narcotics paraphernalia.

He was booked at the Broward County jail and released on $2,625 bond pending arraignment next month, a jail spokesman said Sunday.

"He was really shook up" after the collision, said Miss Axtell. "He kept telling me Dawn was going to be all right."

Helicopter Hijackers Bungle Prison Escape

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities were trying to determine today who was targeted for freedom in a daring but bungled attempt by a man and a woman to pluck an inmate from atop a Manhattan federal prison by using a hijacked helicopter.

The escape attempt fizzled in mid-morning Sunday when the hijackers gave up trying to cut through a grating over a rooftop recreation area at the Metropolitan Correction Center in downtown Manhattan's Foley Square near City Hall.

But for the next three hours, 20 prisoners held a guard hostage in the recreation area while police trained rifles on them from rooftops and hundreds of people watched from nearby apartment towers.

Warden Dale Thomas said a recently convicted narcotics dealer, Robert Wyler, was one of the inmates under investigation as a possible target of the incident. The FBI declined comment.

Wyler was accused of heading a three-state cocaine ring and was alleged by prosecutors to be a member of the Mafia.

The escape attempt ended without injury, and no shots were fired.

The incident began at 7 a.m. when a dark-haired woman who wore a maroon jogging suit and said her last name was Sanchez rented a helicopter from Island Helicopters Corp. at New Jersey's Teterboro Airport, about seven miles from Manhattan.

The pilot, identified by police as Thomas Nietsche, took the woman over the Hudson River and the island of Manhattan to a heliport on Manhattan's East Side, where they were met by another woman.

The second woman gave the first woman two bags, the women and the pilot had breakfast at a nearby restaurant, and Ms. "Sanchez" and the pilot returned in the helicopter to Teterboro, where they picked up a man who appeared to be in his 40s, authorities said.

Anthony Amanzio, general manager of Island Helicopters, said the man and woman asked the pilot to return to Manhattan.

In the air, the two passengers offered the pilot money to land on the roof of the federal detention center, Amanzio said. When he refused, "they placed a sawed-off shotgun to his head and told him it no longer was a request."

Nietsche landed the helicopter on the cage over the 12-story jail shortly after 10 a.m. and the prisoners there overpowered their unarmed guard and locked him in a washroom.

The woman in the helicopter let down a chain-link ladder, lowered herself to the wire mesh and tried to sever the quarter-inch-thick wire with a bolt-cutting tool, authorities said.

Her companion also tried to cut the wire, without success.

In a final effort to puncture the cage, the hijackers ordered the pilot to bounce the helicopter on it. But that also failed.

One of the hijackers tossed a pistol to the prisoners through the cage and the pilot was ordered to fly to another heliport beside the Hudson River on Manhattan's West Side.

Course Set In Reading Efficiency

Reading Efficiency for Business and Professional People will be offered through the Continuing Education department of Western Texas College at the affordable cost of $24.15, Gerald Corkran, instructor, has announced.

Corkran is director of the WTC Reading Center and has designed this course to offer reading methods, techniques and approaches for adults who must handle an increasing amount of reading material each day.

Participants will have the opportunity to develop individual strategies to accomplish their specific needs, to increase their general reading rate, and to increase comprehension and retention of materials read.

Classes are to meet from 7-9 p.m. on Mondays in the Reading Center from Feb. 9-April 13. The cost includes the textbook "Guide to Effective Reading."

Persons interested in the course are invited to contact Corkran for additional information. Those planning to enroll are to call the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, extension 240 to preregister. Registration will be held from 6:45-7 p.m. on Feb. 9 in room 207 of the Learning Resource Center.

6th Graders To Sing At Senior Center

The sixth grade choir from Northeast Elementary School will present a musical program for Senior Citizens in the Senior Center at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Senior Citizens will participate in the weekly Sing-Along starting at 11:30 a.m. Friday.

A variety of pre-noon programs entertain Senior Citizens as they gather in the dining room each weekday, and all county residents 60 years of age and older are invited to join the gathering.

The Center will mark its second anniversary in the present location this month and an anniversary observance is being planned for Thursday, Gloria Shaw, Center director, said. The Center shares the county-owned building at 2603 Avenue M with other agencies and is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Firemen Called

A grass fire north of town was extinguished Saturday afternoon.

The fire was reported to Snyder firefighters at 5 p.m. It occurred about 15 miles north of town on Highway 84.

A mascot is a person or thing that is supposed to bring good luck, from the French slang "masco," sorcerer.

LOST 29 LBS. NOW A SIZE 5 FROM A SIZE 11

Lee Motley's True Story:

After I had my third child, I couldn't seem to shake the extra pounds I'd gained. Although I'm only 5'3½", my weight was up to 138. It was so discouraging, because I didn't look good in a bathing suit or jeans anymore. But when I realized that my husband wasn't giving me compliments anymore... well, that's when I decided to call Pat Walker's.

I started to see results within a few weeks. Pat Walker's no-sweat passive exercise unit really does a good job of toning up a flabby body (my worst area was around my hips). Also, the counselors showed me how I could balance my eating habits so I wouldn't have to give up the homemade cookies and cakes I love to bake for my family and friends. I've gone from a size 11 to a 5—back to my old self again. Now when my husband calls me "The Cookie Monster," I know it's because he likes my baking.

Honestly, I think Pat Walker's will work for you like it did for me.

Me with my third baby — and big hips.

Tigers Take 8th Triumph In Row

Snyder's Tigers ripped off scoring streaks of six and 10 points to take command here Saturday night and oust the Chiefs of San Angelo Lake View, 53-31.

The Tigers, 6-1 in 2-AAAA competition, can earn a share of the first-round district title with a win over state-ranked Andrews here Tuesday at 8. Snyder is now 11-12 on the season, having won eight straight contests.

Snyder fell behind in the early-going Saturday, 6-7, 6-9 and 6-11 before Ricky Housden and James Caldwell garnered back-to-back buckets at the end of the first period.

Though behind by a point, 10-11 going into the second stanza, the game was really never in question. The Tigers, who got key help from Housden, Caldwell and Dayton Robertson, as well as regulars Barry Blackmon and Kris Seale, out-scored the Chiefs 13-8 in the ensuing moments.

A bucket by Earl Clemons put Lake View up 13-10, but Snyder suddenly shot ahead as Curtis Gafford scored on a short jumper, Blackmon laid in a steal, and Seale negotiated a three-point play, 17-13.

Clemons came back to hit a pair of freethrows, but Snyder had gotten the lead and the Tigers were to keep it for the remainder of the game.

The third period was the game clincher. Ahead 23-19 at halftime, Snyder came back and chunked in the first 10 points of the third period. John Wilson, Blackmon (6 points) and Seale all hit buckets in the stretch.

With 2:08 showing in the quarter, Kent Corder finally scored for the Chiefs. But it was to be Lake View's only points of the period as the Snyder defense swarmed over the visitors.

Seale, who garnered high-point honors for the game, retaliated after Corder's bucket with another three-point play. He and David Rios added four more points before the buzzer sounded, giving Snyder a 40-21 lead. Snyder went on to out-point the Chiefs 13-10 in the final quarter and earn the victory.

Seale's 14 led the Tigers, though Blackmon came away with 11 points and some big rebounds. Housden poured in 9 - several from long distance, while Caldwell added 7.

Top scorers for Lake View were Clemons and Corder with 8 each. Key Chiefs player Stan Laing managed only 5 points in the game. He got into foul trouble early, and had four with 2:49 still remaining in the first half.

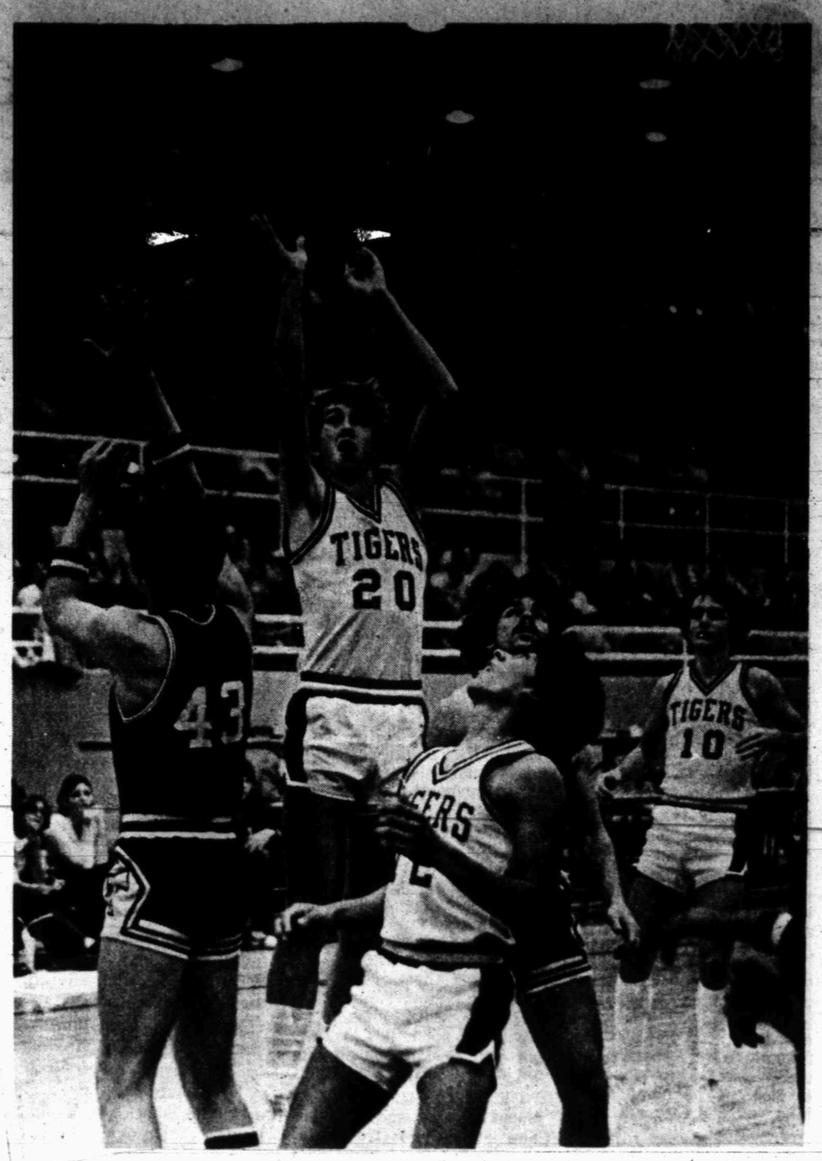

Tuesday's game here with No. 12 ranked Andrews will be for a part - or possibly all - of the first-round district crown. Snyder, Andrews and Odessa Ector all boast 6-1 records. Ector, which travels to underdog Fort Stockton on Tuesday, would appear to have a tie for the crown already. Should the Eagles get upset however, the Snyder-Andrews winner would capture sole possession of the title.

Game time for either contest will be 8 p.m. Snyder and Andrews will play in Scurry County Coliseum. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

TIGERS WIN AGAIN – Snyder's Tigers sacked up their eighth straight win of the 1980-81 season here Saturday, defeating San Angelo Lake View, 53-31. The Tigers' winning streak, which has advanced from 3-12 to 11-12, will get its toughest test yet when No. 12 ranked Andrews calls Tuesday at 8 in the coliseum. Above, Ricky Housden releases a 15-footer that will rip the net as teammates David Rios (center) and Dayton Robertson (10) look on. On defense for the Chiefs is Kent Corder (43).

Drake Takes Aim At Tulsa Quintet

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Drake, which has lost its three Missouri Valley Conference games by a total of 4 points, will be trying to rebound from two heartbreakers last week in a key contest at Tulsa tonight.

And fourth-place Tulsa will be trying to pull even with third-place Creighton as the Valley basketball race heats up.

Forward Cliff Levingston helped Wichita State to a pair of important victories on the road last week, enabling the Shockers to surge into second place in the Valley with a 5-1 league mark.

The Shockers are pressuring defending league champion Bradley, the only other team with one league loss at 6-1.

Levingston scored 28 points and had 18 rebounds as the Shockers bumped off Drake, 89-88, in Des Moines Saturday night. Bulldog powerhouse Lewis Lloyd pumped in 43 points in the losing effort.

It was Drake's third one-point game, two of them losses, during the week. The Bulldogs fell to fifth place with a 3-3 league record.

Thursday, Wichita State defeated Creighton in Omaha, 77-72.

Saturday, Bradley handed Southern Illinois its seventh straight loss, 58-47, to maintain its grip on first place. Creighton blasted West Texas State, 86-69, for a 5-2 record good for third place.

Tulsa was idle Saturday after a 70-63 loss at Bradley and a 103-90 win over West Texas State during the week.

Graham 'Moves' To Victory

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — David Graham cited a move to Dallas and a new offseason practice schedule as the key factors in his victory in the Phoenix Open golf tournament.

"Always before, I'd put the clubs away for a month or so at the end of the season and just go hunting, or trap shooting and then when the new year started it took me four months before I was really ready to play again," Graham said Sunday after turning around a career-long habit by winning his first start of the season.

An Australian, he is a full-time resident of the United States and last year moved his family from South Florida to Dallas.

Robin Yount of the Milwaukee Brewers was the only American League player to hit two grand-slam homers in 1980.

WTC Faces No. 2 Chaps

MIDLAND -- Midland College's Chaparrals, the nation's No. 2 ranked junior college basketball team, welcomes scrappy Western Texas College to Chaparral Center tonight at 8 for a WJCAC shootout.

Both teams will be trying to rebound from recent losses. Midland, ranked No. 1 until it suffered consecutive losses to Howard County and Frank Phillips, comes off of a victory over Odessa last Thursday, 106-82. Western Texas lost to Frank Phillips on Thursday, after defeating Amarillo and Clarendon the week before.

MC is 18-2 on the season and its 6-2 conference record puts it third in the standings behind deadlocked Howard County and Frank Phillips, each with 7-1 marks.

Western Texas is 13-6 for the year and 4-4 in conference action, tied for fifth with South Plains, a WTC opponent this Thursday.

Midland College is led in scoring by Puntus Wilson, a 6-3 native of Dallas, who puts up 18.3 points an outing. Midland native Charles Johnson, a 6-6 sophomore, averages 17.5 and leads the Chaps on the boards with a 9.8 figure. Team-wise, Midland averages 89.4 points per game and allows 72.6.

Donald Warren (6-6 sophomore, Oneonta, Ala.) has quit the Westerners due to what Coach Larry Dunaway called "disenchantment with amount of playing time he was getting and the way things were going."

Brian Baker (6-6 sophomore, West Covina, Calif.) has taken over Donald's role. He has shown improvement and is playing better.

Brett Smith, 6-5 freshman, Borger, who left the team at midterm (holiday break) is back with the team. He will be eligible for tonight's game.

"Donald had become disenchanted with the amount of playing time he was getting with the team and Donald had not benefitted the team as well as we thought he would or he thought he would."

Chuck North, out with an ankle injury, will not play tonight. Dunaway hopes he will be able to go Thursday.

"Playing the number eight team in the nation and now having to play the number two team is not easy for us at all, especially under the circumstances. But we are not out of it (the regional tournament). Our attitude still remains positive. We have had a lot of things happen to us this year. Maybe we'll get lucky and this will leave us and get some of the other teams.," he laughed.

Soph Cagers Down Odessa

The Snyder boys' sophomore basketball team defeated the Odessa High sophomores 56-44 in action Saturday. In double figures for Snyder were Brent Roemisch, David Nicholson and David Miller with 10 points each. High point man for Odessa was Taylor with 18 points.

Also scoring for Snyder were Britt Vincent with eight points, Matt Daivs with six points, and Trey McWilliams, Don Johnson, Kirk Herrley and Derwin Price with two points each.

Coach Jim Carson's sophomores play Odessa again Friday in the Coliseum at 4:15 p.m. The game will precede the Snyder High—Odessa-Ector game.

Ching Johnson, once a great defenseman for the New York Rangers, later worked as a linesman and on one occasion body-checked a player who was breaking in on the goalie.

Davis' Misfits Wearing Super Bowl Crown Today

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They are a roster of rejects, living in the halfway house of the National Football League.

They are outcasts, playing for a franchise operated by an owner called "an outlaw."

They are a team torn between two cities, 45 men who play for each other and against the rest of the world.

Call the Oakland Raiders all those things today, but don't forget to call them champions. They are the world champions of professional football, convincing winners of Super Bowl XV with a 27-10 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday.

Led by Cinderella quarterback Jim Plunkett, who completed a storybook return from football's scrap heap with a record-shattering three-touchdown, 261-yard game, the Raiders stepped gingerly into the glass slipper and found the fit was perfect.

"World champions! That sure sounds nice," said guard Gene Upshaw, captain of this scrappy team which delights in confounding the establishment.

"We have a strong feeling for each other and it makes us stronger and better as a team," said flanker Bob Chandler, one of the retreads, who caught four of Plunkett's passes for 77 yards.

The pass Chandler remembered best was the one he didn't catch — a busted play which developed into an 80-yard touchdown for running back Kenny King. It was in the final seconds of the first quarter with the Raiders on their own 20-yard line and leading 7-0.

King had been running a simple short pattern, but when Plunkett started to scramble, all bets were off. The linebacker covering King moved in to try and trap Plunkett. Suddenly, the running back was alone and Plunkett saw him.

King caught the ball at the Oakland 39 and turned the play into the longest touchdown pass in Super Bowl history. And when he high-stepped his way into the end zone, there was Chandler, the original primary receiver, right behind him.

"I told him with 100 million people watching I didn't want to fall away from him too quickly," said Chandler who, at 31, isn't exactly the fleetest player in the league. "I was surprised to see him," King said admiringly. "That boy's fast."

That touchdown gave Oakland a 14-0 lead and all three players involved in that key play were reclamation projects, acquired and nurtured by owner Al Davis, who never let his war with the league interfere with his team's drive for the championship.

Plunkett was a washed-up quarterback, ready for retirement, when Davis signed him. He spent two seasons virtually unused and a disappointing career seemed at a dead-end for the 32-year-old quarterback.

When Don Pastorini broke his leg in the season's fifth game, Plunkett inherited the quarterback job. The move was made as much out of desperation as anything else because rookie Marc Wilson simply wasn't ready for the job.

Given the chance, Plunkett flourished, weaving the Raiders through the regular season and the mine field that awaits any wild-card team in the playoffs. When it was over, he was the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl and beamed at the designation.

The game went badly for the Eagles right from the start. On their third play from scrimmage, Ron Jaworski threw his first pass. It was complete...to Oakland linebacker Rod Martin — the first of a record three swipes recorded by Martin in the game.

He returned the interception from midfield to the Philadelphia 30 and seven plays later Plunkett had the Raiders in the end zone with a 2-yard pass to Cliff Branch.

Local Team Wins C-City Tournament

The ninth grade boys Black Team rebounded from a halftime deficit Saturday to defeat Colorado City 66-61 and win the Colorado City Invitational Tournament.

Fred Fleming tossed in eight field goals and one free shot to lead the scoring with 17 points. Paul Tate contributed 14 points to the winning effort. For C-City, Hamilton led the scoring with 23 points.

Coach Gerald Greene's boys were down 12 at the half after scoring only 16 and 9 points in the first two quarters compared with 16 and 21 points for Colorado City.

"The boys didn't give up and we finally prevailed," said Greene.

Snyder scored 26 and 15 points in the second and third quarters of the game overtaking the hosts, who could only manage 11 and 13 points.

Colorado City went to the free throw line 27 times compared to 8 for Snyder.

Also scoring for Snyder were Norman Malone, who sunk six field goals and one free shot for 13 points; Chad Peterson and Torri Walker, who made five field goals each for ten points apiece; and Richard Payne, who made one from the floor for 2 points.

The team now has a 5-2 record.

The next game will be at 5 p.m. Thursday against Hood Junior High of Odessa at the Midland Tournament. The Black Team was scheduled to play Cohoma at Cohoma Thursday. The Gold Team will be taking their place at that 6:30 p.m. match.

Literature Course Has Openings

Registration is still open for Masters of Literature, a sophomore English course meeting on Tuesday nights at Western Texas College in the spring semester.

Mrs. Janet Halbert, Assistant Professor of English, is instructor for the course, English 223. The focus of the course is the topic "Novels and Short Stories on Film."

Students will study a number of short stories and novels that haye been made into feature-length films, comparing the methods and results of the two media. Among the novels and films, to be studied are "The Great Gatsby," "The Grapes of Wrath," and "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." Short stories and classic silent films will also be studied.

The course is fully transferable for sophomore English credit and may be selected as an option to American, British and World Literature.

Additionally, Mrs. Halbert welcomes anyone in the community to audit the course or take it as a non-credit course if they merely wish to see the films without fulfilling all the requirements to attain credit.

"I'd love to have anyone interested in classic films to come watch with us. We have a lineup of really good, historically important films for this class, and it should be an entertaining as well as instructive course for anyone to experience," said Mrs. Habert.

For further information about the course, those interested are invited to contact her at 573-8511, extension 298.

Late registration for the spring semester will continue through Jan. 20.

Public Invited To Meet New WTC President

Dr. Don Newbury, new president of Western Texas College, will be introduced at a coffee from 10-11 a.m. Thursday in the Chamber of Commerce building at 2302 Avenue R.

Mrs. Newbury and the couple's daughters, Julie, Jana, and Jeanie, are also to be at the coffee.

"We would like to invite Snyder and area citizens to come by on their morning coffee break and meet Dr. Newbury and his family," Dr. Ben Brock, WTC vice president, said. "We have planned this get-acquainted session downtown in cooperation with the Chamber to enable more people to attend during a busy workday."

Dr. Newbury will be moving his family to Snyder by April 1 when he will officially assume the office of president at WTC. The Newburys have lived in Fort Worth since 1967 when he became Director of Communications for the Tarrant County Junior College District, a position he is leaving to accept the presidency at WTC.

Diabetic Believes Pump Experiment Worth Risk

SEATTLE (AP) — I'm a guinea pig for science, just like those heroes you read about in school books.

But I'm no hero. I'm not taking big risks.

I'm lucky.

For the first time in the 27 years I've had diabetes, I have something that keeps my blood sugar down.

It's called an insulin pump. It's a bulky, brick-shaped blue box that I wouldn't wear for fun, even though it's a relief from daily shots.

But I wear it because it's done something 10,000 insulin shots failed to do — keep my blood sugar near normal.

Instead of my sugar measuring a syrupy 400-plus on blood tests, which I perform myself at home, it's down between 100 and 200 since I got the pump last September. Normal is 70 to 115.

Probably fewer than 100 diabetics in the country are on the pump for any length of time.

Before I got it, doctors logged my vital signs, photographed my eyes, fired electricity through my arms and legs and charted my body like excited cartographers discovering a new world.

They'll compare what they found with how I look later and see what happened.

Diabetes occurs when the pancreas gland doesn't produce enough insulin, a hormone that allows billions of cells in the body to turn food into energy. About 10 million Americans have diabetes, and two million of them need daily insulin shots.

My insulin pump is just one of the new avenues of diabetes control. University of Minnesota doctors recently implanted a hockey puck-size pump in a diabetic's chest. Other doctors are working with multiple daily shots.

Many doctors agree with Dr. Paul Fredlund of Seattle's Mason Clinic — my doctor — that "the pump plus home blood tests are the most significant developments in diabetes control since the discovery of insulin in 1921."

Dr. Robert S. Sherwin, one of the men who tested the pump for diabetic use at Yale University, says, "Its future is pretty good and my guess is that this type of device or something like it will replace conventional diabetes treatment."

But he adds, "It's still in the experimental, developmental stage.

"I hesitate to be overoptimistic, to raise false hopes. It's conceivable that improving blood sugar doesn't necessarily mean that complications from diabetes — blindness, vascular problems — will be improved. We think they will, but we don't know."

The one-pound pump hangs from my belt. Every few minutes, it sends a squirt of insulin through a slim tube into a small needle under the skin of my abdomen. Before meals, I twist a dial on the pump and give myself an extra stream of insulin.

The almost constant squirt keeps fresh insulin in the body day and night, approximating the work of the normal pancreas.

Diabetes is a stealthy companion because you feel fine for so many years, then things go wrong.

Fragile blood vessels in your eyes burst and spill, veiling your vision in red foam. I'm blind in one eye.

I've lost some feeling in my feet and fingers, too, because over the years diabetes vandalized my blood vessels and robbed my nerves of nourishment.

Diabetics tend to ignore their condition. I'm 38 and most of my life I took my shots in the morning and pretended I didn't have diabetes the rest of the day.

Incidentally, diabetics who've lived with daily shots as long as I have don't mind them as much as nondiabetics imagine. They become second-nature, like pulling on your socks. Whoosh! Hitchhiking along a road, studying in a library, working on a boat, there's nothing to quietly drawing out a syringe and taking insulin.

The pump has drawbacks. It's bulky, though a trimmer model is due out soon. And it has to be worn day and night. It's subject to human error and mechanical flubs.

When I got the gadget, I balked at its clinical looks. For the first time, I felt like a "diabetic" instead of a person who happens to have diabetes. I didn't like its small, blinking red light that attracted queries in crowds. It banged against desks and tables.

At night, the contraption must be plugged into a wall socket for recharging. The maneuver of jumping into bed, trailing an extension cord behind you like a toaster, requires understanding and a sense of humor from your spouse.

I accidently set the wrong dial one night and gave myself an insulin overdose. I had to drink large gulps of orange juice to straighten out.

But with all its drawbacks, the pump has done that single, amazing thing — lowered my blood sugar.

Doctors say the question now is whether good control will reduce the devastating complications of diabetes. That may take years to find out.

I expect to be there when they get the answer.

'The Lizard of Oz'

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — When I was a little girl, I loved to read "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," because Dorothy and her three friends all found such easy answers to their problems.

The Scarecrow got brains by being awarded a diploma, the Tin Woodman was given a ticking clock to substitute for a heart, and the Cowardly Lion gained courage when he received a medal for bravery.

Even Dorothy's wish to return to Kansas was granted when she simply clicked her magic shoes together.

During the past 20 years, I have seen many psychologists, but none has been able to solve my problem. I am afraid to go out of my house.

Can you help me?

DEAR READER — Part of the broad appeal of "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" to adults and children alike is the simplicity with which its characters' problems are solved. Were it only that way in real life!

The same characters have no such luck in the new book "Dorothy and the Lizard of Oz" by Richard Gardner, M.D. (Creative Therapeutics, Cresskill, N.J.; $9.95).

Taking up where the classic leaves off, Gardner reveals that each character's problems have only begun. The Cowardly Lion, for example, remains afraid despite his medal.

It is only with the help of the Lizard of Oz — a wizard who was transformed into a lizard because people were dissatisfied with his complex solutions to their problems — that the four resolve their difficulties in a more realistic and gratifying way.

Make a commitment to a therapist with experience in treating phobias.

It may take two years before you achieve success. The process of resolving human problems is long and complex.

OBITUARIES

Mrs. Bruner

Service for Pattie Lee Bruner of Corsicana was scheduled for 10 a.m. today in Paschal Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. David Hale officiating. Burial was to be in Long-Prairie Cemetery. Mrs. Bruner died Saturday. She was 83.

She is survived by four sons, W. S. Bruner of Snyder, Kenneth Bruner of Corsicana, Joe Bruner of Midland and Harold Bruner of Abilene; two stepsons, Leonard Bruner of Corsicana, Earl Bruner of Cedar Creek Lake; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Bessie Stovall of Kerens; two brothers, Raymond Harris of Roscoe, Ballard Harris of Mineral Wells.

Advisory Council Claims Its Not A National School Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 20 citizens who make up the new Intergovernmental Advisory Council on Education are not — repeat, not — a national school board.

But they do sit on the bluest of blue-ribbon panels, a highpowered group with a mandate from Congress to advise the president and the secretary of education and to provide a national forum where politicians, pedagogues, parents and pupils can discuss the education issues that often divide them.

Advisory groups are a dime a dozen in the nation's capital, but this one has the unusual distinction of being created by the same law that gave birth to the Department of Education last year.

Never before in creating a new department had Congress seen fit, or felt the need, to unleash a watchdog as well. The council was intended to allay lawmakers' fears that the federal agency might usurp state and local control of the nation's schools.

"It is not too much to say the Department of Education would not exist without the council," one departmental report concluded.

The fears of an expanded federal role in education were reflected in President Reagan's platform pledge to kick education out of its newly won Cabinet seat. Congress would have to pass new legislation both to downgrade the department and to eliminate the council.

But congressional aides who took part in the lengthy effort to create the department believe that, regardless of the agency's fate, the council will endure as a vehicle for dealing with educators' concerns about the voluminous red tape in federal school programs.

The first secretary of education, Shirley M. Hufstedler, told the council members at their first meeting last fall: "We need to have people talk to each other across jurisdictional lines. We have perhaps more fiefdoms per square inch in education than any other structure of which I am aware."

She also reminded council members that they "are not a national school board any more than I am a minister of education."

The pedigrees of the participants may have prompted that disclaimer. The council includes a governor, a mayor, several state legislators and two college presidents. With a projected $500,000 budget and a full-time staff, the council should have the wherewithal to be "an independent observer of education in America," as its chairman, Florida Gov. Robert Graham, forecast.

The council will meet several times a year (with members paid $100 per day) and issue periodic reports.

When the government issued a call last winter for nominations to the council, it was flooded with more than 1,000 names submitted by educators, politicians and interest groups, plus several thousand more letters of support. Congress had specified that six members be elected officials, five from elementary and secondary education, five from postsecondary education and four from the public at large.

Congress also stipulated that the 20 must "represent a diversity of geographic areas and demographic characteristics."

It took headhunters in the Education Department and the White House six months to sift through the names.

Groups scrambled to get their favorite sons or daughters on the council. Four governors were nominated; only Graham was chosen.

His colleagues include a rabbi, a state school superintendent, a deaf fighter for handicapped rights, an eminent historian and the man who brought National League baseball back to New York City.

The headhunters met their goal of 40 percent minorities (four members are black, two Hispanic, one Asian-American and one American Indian) but were far short of their target of 50 percent women (only six, or 30 percent, are female).

Just how those on the council got their seats in this high echelon is a study in microcosm of how government panels take shape.

Some lobbied or called in political chits to secure their appointment. For others, it came out of the blue.

Rodeo Team Has Eyes On National Finals

The Western Texas College rodeo team returns to the spring semester with high hopes of qualifying for the National Finals College Rodeo in Bozeman, Montana, in June, Bob Doty, rodeo advisor, said.

If the team remains in second position in the regional standings as it now is, these hopes will become a reality since the top two teams from each region qualify. Currently, WTC is 412 points behind front running Sul Ross State University and in front of third place Tarleton State University by a slim 19-point margin.

The season is now half over, with six rodeos planned for the spring. The first competition will be Feb. 26-28 at Sul Ross.

WTC will host its home rodeo April 9-12 in the Scurry County coliseum.

Several WTC team members could also win individual awards in the region, Doty said. Troy Reynolds, freshman from Hudson Falls, N.Y., is third in calf roping for the year. Tim Gradous, freshman from Hephzibah, Georgia, is presently first in the region in bareback riding. James Garlick from Van Horn, sophomore, who missed the Texas Tech rodeo due to a knee injury, is still in third in the bareback riding.

Ray McKnight, freshman from Durango, Colorado, is first in the region in bareback riding. Dave Appleton, freshman from Australia, is third in saddlebronc riding and fifth in bareback riding. Chris Welch, sophomore from Midland, is wnning second in bull riding.

Fraudulent Dividend Form In Circulation

A fraudulent dividend benefit form is once again being circulated to veterans and veterans organizations in Texas and throughout the nation, E. H. (Dan) Dever, Jr., Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, said.

This fraudulent typewritten form indicates that a bill was passed in Congress that would give World War II veterans a dividend of 65 cents per $1,000 of their GI insurance for each month of service.

There is no such bill and this information is completely false, Dever emphasized.

Dividends are paid only on policies which are kept in force. Nearly four million veterans who have kept their policies in force will share in a record $619.7 million dividend during 1981, with dividends paid automatically on the anniversary date of the individual's insurance policy.

Veterans who would like information about VA benefits, including educational benefits, may contact Dever's office, located in the Administration Building at Western Texas College. The office is open Monday through Friday and during evening hours Monday through Thursday.
