High Court Against Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court held 5 to 4 today that the death penalty, as it is now used in the United States, violates the Constitution and cannot be imposed.

The nine justices divided so sharply that they issued 11 opinions while reversing specifically two death sentences in Georgia and a third in Texas.

The somewhat ambiguous pileup of views evidently leaves the door slightly open for legislatures to reinstate capital punishment in special circumstances.

The five-man majority comprised Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and, with some reservations, Potter Stewart and Byron R. White.

The four Nixon administration appointees stood as a bloc in favor of the death penalty.

Chief Justice Burger stressed in his dissent that the court, while setting aside the death penalty, also gave state legislatures "the opportunity and indeed unavoidable responsibility to make a thorough re-evaluation of the entire subject of capital punishment."

The other dissenters were Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr., and William H. Rehnquist.

The decision evidently serves to maintain a moratorium on executions in the United States. There are now 600 death-row inmates in 31 states.

The central question before the court was whether capital punishment violates the Eighth Amendment's prohibition against "cruel and unusual punishments."

Three of the justices, Douglas, Brennan and Marshall, concluded that the amendment outlaws the death penalty. Stewart generally agreed with them but said the situation might be different if a state legislature determined that forcible rape and murder could be deterred only with the death penalty upon everyone who commits those crimes. White, meanwhile, said the death penalty is imposed so infrequently it is very doubtful that it meets "any existing general need for retribution."

Set aside by the decision were:

1. The murder conviction of William H. Furman, a Georgia Negro convicted of slaying William J. Micke Jr. of Savanna in 1968 while burglarizing the Micke home.

2. The rape conviction of Lucious Jackson Jr., a 21-year-old Negro, convicted in 1968 of the non-fatal assault on a white woman in Chatham county.

3. The rape conviction of Elmer Branch, 19, for the non-fatal assault in 1967 on an elderly white woman in Vernon, Texas.

There hasn't been an execution in the United States in five years. A ruling upholding the death penalty would not necessarily lead to mass electrocutions and hangings. But it would wipe out the most consistent argument against capital punishment—that it is too cruel to be constitutional.

The three cases involve William H. Furman, convicted of murdering a Savannah, Ga., man during a household burglary; Lucious Jackson Jr., convicted of rape also in Chatham County, Ga., and Elmer Branch, convicted of rape in Wilbarger, County, Tex.

Both rape victims are white. All three inmates whose appeals are before the court are black.

The death penalty is legal in 39 states and the District of Columbia, but eight of these have no prisoners condemned to execution. Of the 600, all but two are men. The women under death sentences are Marie Dean Arrington of Florida and Marylin Dobrolenski of Pennsylvania.

Of the 600, a total of 517 were convicted of murder, 79 of rape and four of armed robbery. There are 329 blacks, 257 whites and 14 of other racial and ethnic backgrounds.

A year ago the court rejected, 6 to 3 challenges to death-penalty procedures. The ruling said that leaving to the jury's discretion the power to decide between life and death in capital cases does not violate the Constitution. Secondly, the court held then, the Constitution does not require separating the penalty phase of capital trials from the body of the trial.

While the decision leaves the door open for legislatures to reinstate capital punishment in some circumstances, one of the nine opinions issued by the court said the immediate result is to remove the death sentences from the 600 condemned inmates across the land.

All nine justices filed statements of their views. In the majority were Justices William O. Douglas, William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall, and with some reservations, Potter Stewart and Byron R. White. Dissenting were the four Nixon administration appointees, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr., and William H. Rehnquist.

Fruit, Eggs, Vegetables, Seafood Prices Frozen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon brought fresh fruits, eggs, vegetables and seafood under price controls for the first time today, but only after the first sale has been made by the farmer.

Nixon signed an executive order removing the current exemption on raw agricultural products from price controls after the first sale—meaning that it will apply primarily at the wholesale and retail level.

The action will have virtually no impact on the selling cost of meat to consumers. Processed meat such as beef and pork have been under controls since the inception of Nixon's price controls last November.

For the first time, however, products such as fresh vegetables, fresh fish that has undergone some processing, and other raw products at wholesale and retail will be subject to Price Commission rules. These rules limit businesses' profit margins and require stores to justify all price increases through increased costs.

Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council told newsmen that Nixon's action "cannot drive food prices down—only increased supply or reduced demand could do that ..."

But he said the decision is designed to put discipline on price markups and margins at each step of the food processing chain.

Rumsfeld said Nixon's action probably will not be greeted with much enthusiasm at the wholesale and retail level.

Nixon announced last week he is lifting meat import quotas for the remainder of the year in an effort to slow the rise in beef and pork prices. But the President has been reluctant to tighten the control program to make it apply to the farm level.

Some of the products that will be affected include: eggs in the shell, all fresh vegetables; all fresh or naturally dried foods; and all raw seafood products, including those which have been shelled, scaled, skinned, iced, eviscerated or decapitated.

Rumsfeld said the price of food is basically determined by supply and demand, but he added that bringing these items under controls for the first time may have some impact on slowing prices.

He said the Price Commission is in the process of deciding how and when new regulation will be put into effect. He indicated it is expected to be soon.

South Vietnam's Offensive Meets With Light Resistance

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. helicopters landed more than 1,000 South Vietnamese marines on the seacoast of Quang Tri Province today as 20,000 other Saigon troops pushed north toward the enemy-held provincial capital, Quang Tri City.

The South Vietnamese counteroffensive was reported meeting light to moderate resistance in its second day from North Vietnamese forces who have held South Vietnam's northernmost province since May 1.

The heavier going was in rolling terrain west of Highway 1, military sources told Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel.

"They're doing very well; keep your fingers crossed," said Maj. Gen. Howard Cooksey, senior U.S. military adviser in the region.

Marines and armored forces advancing up the coast from the My Chanh River reported killing 70 North Vietnamese Wednesday, and military sources said paratroopers west of Highway 1 had killed 23.

Four South Vietnamese paratroopers were reported killed and 13 were reported wounded.

Far to the south, on the battlefront north of Saigon, the South Vietnamese command reported 61 enemy and 14 government troops killed about three miles south of An Loc. The command said the enemy forces fired 150 artillery and mortar rounds to back a ground attack on South Vietnamese units trying to open the highway to An Loc.

In the air campaign against North Vietnam, U.S. fighter-bombers concentrated Wednesday on supply and antiaircraft positions in the Panhandle above the demilitarized zone, but Navy pilots attacked the Kep airfield 30 miles northeast of Hanoi.

The Command said 240 strikes were flown.

Plant Found In Compliance With Ordinance Regulations

Representatives of the Texas Water Quality Board and the Texas Air Pollution Board found "everything in compliance" after conducting a check of the Western Beef Packing Co. yesterday.

The board representatives made the check of the plant to determine progress of a water pretreatment plan to comply with Pampa's industrial waste ordinance.

Howard Lewis, plant manager, said the representatives found the plant to be operating in compliance with the ordinance regulations.

Prior to the visit of the pollution officials, various residents of the city had made complaints about a nauseous odor in areas around the plant.

Lewis said the plant had "worked around the clock" to correct the malfunction of the barometric rendering system. He said the malfunction had been corrected and a dual barometric system had been isntalled to help eliminate the odor.

The pollution officials made no statements about the odor, Lewis added.

Western Beef has taken all steps necessary to remedy waste discharge and odor problems to comply with the enforcement of the city's industrial waste ordinance.

Candidates Awaiting Delegation Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — George McGovern's hope for a first-ballot presidential nomination lay precariously in the hands of the Democratic Credentials Committee today, as the panel neared a decision over the challenge to his 271 delegates from California.

Despite furious lobbying throughout the night and morning, McGovern strategists conceded the vote, expected about noon, could be "very, very close."

A spokesman for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, one of four contenders attempting to slash McGovern's California strength by more than half, agreed the battle was nip and tuck.

Also on the agenda of the 150-member committee were delegate disputes from Hawaii, Missouri and Tennessee, each a matter of considerable controversy despite the spotlight attention given California. Hawaii, for example, was targeted for a McGovern blitz designed to increase representation of women, who now occupy four of the state's convention seats.

Humphrey has said the challenge is vital to party unity. Invoking the memory of 1968, he commented to panel members that "I above all other men, know the dangers that a presidential candidate faces if he is charged with being a candidate of an unrepresentative convention."

Odessa Workers To Be Here For Construction

Approximately 200 workers employed by McVean and Barlow Construction Co. of Odessa will move into Pampa next week to establish headquarters for construction of loop gas lines for the Natural Gas Pipe Line Co. of America.

The project will consist of 37 miles of 36-inch gas pipeline with a loop east of Fritch and another loop line east of Pampa to the Wheeler County gas field.

R.W. McKee, in Pampa this week making arrangements for housing the workers, said the construction period would run anywhere from two to three months. Sleeping rooms and small apartments will be needed for members of the work crew.

Persons having available rentals are asked to contact the company's local office which will have a phone immediately after July 4. This information also can be registered now with the Chamber of Commerce by calling 669-3241.

The project superintendent will be Paul Jones of Odessa and the field superintendent in charge of construction will be R.W. McKee.

McKee said most of the labor force will be brought in from outside the city, although a few local jobs may be available.

Officials of the Pampa Industrial Foundation are assisting the Odessa firm in making advance arrangements, according to Fred Neslage, PIF president.

McKee met with Foundation officials at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce offices yesterday and discussed arrangements for the pipeline construction job.

PIF Board Holds Meet

Directors of the Pampa Industrial Foundation met yesterday and heard reports on several industrial prospects the Foundation is now considering.

"It is hoped something good will come from these negotiations that can be announced at a later date," said Fred Neslage, PIF president.

The board heard a report from Dale Greenhouse, regional manager of Marie Foundations, who said his company had need for approximately 200 employes at its Pampa and McLean plants. He stated further the Pampa plant would be able to grow in proportion to the number of employes that could be made available. Greenhouse expressed the company's appreciation for what had been done by the Industrial Foundation to assist in securing additional employes.

A special committee was appointed by Neslage to set up a plan for industrial plant visitations in Pampa within the coming months. The board subscribes to the theory that existing plant expansion is as important as new industry where the same number of jobs apply, according to Neslage.

Skyjacker Arrested At Home By FBI

DETROIT (AP) — A 28-yearold unemployed man was arrested at his home and charged as the airliner hijacker who got $502,500 ransom and parachuted over Indiana last weekend, the FBI announced today.

Martin J. McNally, 28, of suburban Wyandotte was charged with violation of the federal air piracy statute, said Neil J. Welsh, special agent in charge of the Michigan FBI. McNally was arrested shortly before midnight Wednesday and was held by the FBI in Detroit pending arraignment today.

A spokesman said an FBI complaint would be filed today at St. Louis.

A hijacker took over the American Airlines Boeing 727 shortly after it left St. Louis Friday night en route to Tulsa, Okla. with 94 persons on board.

He forced a landing at St. Louis where airline officials said the man armed with a submachine gun was given $502,500 and two parachutes. He released most of the plane's passengers and changed planes after a car raced onto the runway and smashed into the first airliner.

The hijacker forced the plane with six hostages to fly toward Toronto and he bailed out over north central Indiana. An American Airlines bag containing $500,000 was found in a farmer's field Monday and a submachine gun was found about five miles away.

Law enforcement officers speculated the hijacker was injured in the jump since airline officials said he demanded and was given instruction on how to operate the parachutes.

An FBI agent at St. Louis said McNally told agents in Detroit that the parachute opened correctly but that he dropped the bag with the money as he left the plane.

The FBI said extensive investigation by agents in Missouri, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan developed information that led to McNally.

Jury Finds Local Youth 'Not Guilty'

The trial of Freddy Wilbon, 17, on a charge of assault and battery, ended in a "not guilty" verdict Wednesday afternoon in Judge Don Lane's Municipal Court.

The jury was out four minutes. In that time they elected a foreman and arrived at their verdict.

The trial grew out of an incident in the final quarter of a hotly-contested high school basketball game between Pampa and Tascosa of Amarillo last Feb. 11.

Immediately following the referee's whistle noting a foul by Durrett against Wilbon, Durrett was knocked unconscious by the Pampa player. He was treated at Highland General Hospital and later released.

His father filed the assault charge.

Testimony in the case involved seven witnesses and covered two hours. Jean Martindale, prosecuting attorney, tried to hold testimony to the letter of the law on assault and battery.

David Holt, attorney for Wilbon, applied a portion of the same statute (dealing with self-defense) that Martindale read defining assault and battery.

Delmar Durrett, father of the alleged victim of the assault, was the first of seven witnesses that included his son and the defendant.

The altercation apparently grew out of a shoving incident. Testimony revealed young Durrett had four fouls called against him in only six minutes of play.

Local Rotary Club To Hold Banquet

Pampa Rotary Club will hold its annual installation banquet at 7 p.m. today at the Coronado Inn.

Paul Payne will be installed as the new president. New directors are Otis Nace, Jack Reeve, Rex McAnelly, Bob Curry, George McCarroll and Chuck Zlomke.

Milo Carlson will be retiring as president.

A program of musical selections will be presented by the Banknotes, a singing group from Booker.

President Will Meet Press Tonight On TV

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — After clearing his desk of two key Vietnam decisions, President Nixon is at his mountaintop Camp David retreat, roughing out answers to questions he faces tonight in his first live television news conference in 13 months.

Before the President flew to his Catoctin Mountain compound by helicopter Wednesday afternoon with his wife, he announced his decision to continue at a slower rate the U.S. troop withdrawal from Vietnam and he named a new commander for U.S. operations in the war zone.

The White House said Nixon has decided another 10,000 U.S. troops will be withdrawn by Sept. 1, bringing the American troop level in South Vietnam to 39,000.

Nixon also disclosed he was elevating Gen. Frederick C. Weyand to command U.S. operations in Vietnam, succeeding Gen. Creighton Abrams who was appointed Army chief of staff last week.

Weyand has been deputy commander under Abrams for the past 18 months. The new Vietnam deputy commander will be Air Force Gen. John W. Vogt, who also will continue to head the 7th Air Force in Indochina.

The selection of Vogt as deputy commander was part of Nixon's unification of Army and Air Force commands in Vietnam—a consolidation which follows the disclosure of bombing strikes on unauthorized North Vietnamese targets ordered by a since-demoted 7th Air Force commander, Gen. John Lavelle.

Before Nixon left for Camp David, his staff had prepared a set of questions—and background material for presidential answers—expected to come up when the chief executive meets newsmen at 9 p.m. in the White House East Room.

The news conference, to be broadcast live by the major television and radio networks, is the first session with such a format since June 1, 1971.

City Reports Sales Tax RevenueRise

Pampa's sales tax revenue for the first quarter of 1972 was up about 8½ per cent over the same quarter of 1971.

This was revealed today as Pampa received its check for the quarter ending March 31 in the sum of $86,222.73.

Receipts for the comparable quarter last year totaled $74,086.53. The 1972 gain amounts to $12,136.20.

The check received by City Secretary S.M. Chittenden represents the city's share of the 5 per cent sales tax paid by consumers. Pampa has had a one-cent sales tax in effect since January, 1970. The other 4 cents goes into the state treasury.

Chittenden said the sales tax pays about 33 per cent of the city's general operating expenses and property taxes approximately 67 per cent.

The history of Pampa's sales tax collections show that first quarter receipts always are the smallest and last quarter receipts the biggest, resulting from heavy holiday purchases during the Christmas season.

More Showers Forecast For Area By Evening

A thunderstorm raced through Pampa about 7 a.m. today with high winds bringing rain and gray clouds to hover over the city.

Other thunderstorms menaced parts of West and North Texas during the night and early morning, while a heatwave still kept hold on most of the state.

Overcast skies and rain kept the temperature around 70 in Pampa this forenoon. By 11 a.m. about .20 inch of rain was recorded.

Showers were expected to continue into the afternoon, with thundershowers forecast for the evening.

Some of the more severe thunderstorms last night were packed with hail and turned loose rain at rates up to two inches per hour, Weather Bureau observers reported.

Hail up to the size of golf balls pounded areas around Lubbock and Abilene.

Tornado funnels were reported in an area north of San Angelo and near Twin Mountains. No damages were noted.

By morning most of the thunderstorms were concentrated near Amarillo and Memphis in the Panhandle and from West Texas into North Texas.

Towns reported thunderstorms and showers included Midland, San Angelo, Brownwood, Abilene, Vernon, Wichita Falls, Mineral Wells, Breckenridge, Denton, Gainesville, Denison and Paris.

Skies were mostly cloudy in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and Southwest Texas, but fair in other sections.

The storms broke out at the end of a day which saw temperatures reach above 100 degrees once more at a number of places, going as high as 105 at Wichita Falls and Wink.

Forecasts held out a prospect for still more showers and thunderstorms by evening in western and northern portions of the state, according to the Associated Press. It was expected to be clear to partly cloudy elsewhere, with steamy heat lingering everywhere.

DESPITE PROGRAM DECLINE

Business Continues To Boom In Area Around Space Center

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The nation's space program is declining and Astronauts are quietly leaving the Manned Spacecraft Center here. But the area around the center, in an almost mocking contrast, is booming as never before.

In the last five years, the number of workers at the space center, home of America's astronauts, has declined by about 5,000, but for the merchants, banks and home builders in the area, the decline has hardly been felt.

"It beats me how we could be any busier," said a grocery store manager.

"We can't get enough houses to sell," said Charles Whynot of Space City Development, a real estate firm.

Webb Sharp, manager of the Clear Lake Chamber of Commerce; said that although the Manned Spacecraft Center and the torrid pace of the space program helped the growth of the area, there would probably have been a boom here anyway.

"The space program gave us the immediate base," said Sharp.

But it was the nearness of Houston, 27 miles by freeway, and that city's immense growth that rocketed the area's economy upward, says Sharp.

Clear Lake City, a community put together by Friendswood Development Corp., a subsidiary of Humble Oil & Refining Co., is the largest new development in the area with a population of about 14,500.

Charles Pence, a vice president of Friendswood, said that even with the declining amount of activity at the space center, home sales in Clear Lake City reached its highest level ever in 1971, and a better year is predicted.

"We're ahead of last year in sales already and expect by the end of the year to have sold 660 new homes," he said. New apartment buildings and new townhouses are going up also.

"We now have a diversified job base for the home buyers," he said. Pence and others estimated that about 65 per cent of the area's job holders are not in aerospace. This represents a turnaround from earlier years.

Pence said that Clear Lake City and a nearby deep water port industrial district were already on the drawing boards when the space center was located here.

At that time, 11 years ago, cattle grazed where mission control now stands. A battered, two-lane rural road was all there was to what is now NASA Road One, the avenue of the astronauts.

The only major developments nearby were Ellington Air Force Base, a dying military base 10 miles away, and Webster, a sleepy Texas town.

Down the road the other way was a fading resort area on Clear Lake, a sweet water lake that offered boaters a path to Galveston Bay and the gulf beyond.

But Friendswood and other developers were expecting the rapid expansion of Houston to affect the area.

The company designed Clear Lake City and Bayport and planned a long orderly development.

The sudden impact on the Manned Spacecraft Center construction accelerated the development by about five years or more, according to most estimates.

It also led to the establishment of other communities in the area and a rapid growth of such nearby towns as Seabrook, Kemah, La Porte, Dickinson and Friendswood, a one-time quaker community now popular with aerospace engineers.

Four motels sprang up near the space center and despite the program's decline they are still profitable operations. They now get a healthy share of the convention business coming to Houston, plus tourists attracted by the space center and the nearby Gulf of Mexico.

More than a million persons toured the space center last year and the number keeps growing. Many stay in the nearby motels.

Sharp and others believe even if the space program died, the boom in the area would continue.

Bayport now has 16 companies in operation, six more committed and a payroll of $300 million. There are predictions of 22,000 jobs and a $1.5 billion payroll by 1980.

Ellington AFB, now busier than ever, is expanding.

Additionally, the University of Houston has established a branch in Clear Lake Cith with 15,000 students expected to enroll by 1981.

The two new hospitals are expected to create 600 new jobs.

Most of the astronauts built homes near the space center and many of these are now up for sale as the space agency quietly trims the number of spacemen in the corps.

And, according to Whynot, the astronauts and others who are selling their homes are having little difficulty finding buyers.

Home values have increased from 25 to 50 per cent in the last six years, and are still going up, he said.

A space engineer, who was here when space was King, recalled a recent incident which to him illustrated just how the emphasis has shifted in recent years.

Arkansas Man Killed In Shootout

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP)—A man quoted by officers as saying he was not afraid to die was killed today in a shootout inside the police station on the Arkansas side of this two-state city. One patrolman was wounded.

Rames E. Twitty, 44, struck by nine bullets, died before reaching a hospital.

Attendants said patrolman Mike Rachel was in fair condition after surgery for face wounds.

Desk Sgt. Robert Brush and other officers related these details:

Twitty, released from jail 90 minutes earlier after his wife posted bond for him on a driving while intoxicated charge, returned about 2:30 a.m. carrying two pistols.

He stepped inside, walked behind the booking desk with both weapons and told Brush, "You s.o.b., I'm going to kill you."

Brush leaned over, concealing the hand with which he held open a radio microphone switch, and talked to Twitty, who said he wanted the two policemen who had arrested him.

As Twitty stuck one of his guns into the sergeant's ear, two officers entered and the former prisoner levelled his pistol at the new arrivals. The two told him they were not the policemen who took him into custody.

While the officers again tried to reason with Twitty, Rachel kicked open an outer door and pointed his revolver at Twitty. Rachel and Twitty then fired at almost the same time.

Young Bride Electrocuted On Farm

A young bride was electrocuted Wednesday morning on a farm three miles west of Panhandle while trying to see a ground squirrel in a pipeline.

Mrs. Rhonda Jean Bailiff, 20, was dead on arrival at a doctor's office in Panhandle. She had been married three months.

Her husband, Johnny, and Glenn Pratt, farm owner, were taken to Highland General Hospital in Pampa to be treated for burns.

Pratt was treated and released. Bailiff was admitted, then later released.

The accident occurred about 10:45 a.m. when Pratt and Bailiff called Mrs. Bailiff to see a ground squirrel which had run into an irrigation pipe the two men had started to set.

The three of them then lifted the pipe, trying to avoid a high line above it. The high line then arched to the pipe, electrocuting Mrs. Bailiff, who was reportedly barefoot.

Bailiff was burned on the arms, hands and legs below the knees. Pratt had burns on the feet.

The two men took Mrs. Bailiff to Panhandle in a pickup. Mrs. Pratt then drove the men to Pampa.

The young couple, who were married three months ago, had moved from Des Moines, Iowa, a month ago. They were living on the Pratt farm.

Funeral arrangements were pending this morning with Smith Funeral Home of Panhandle.

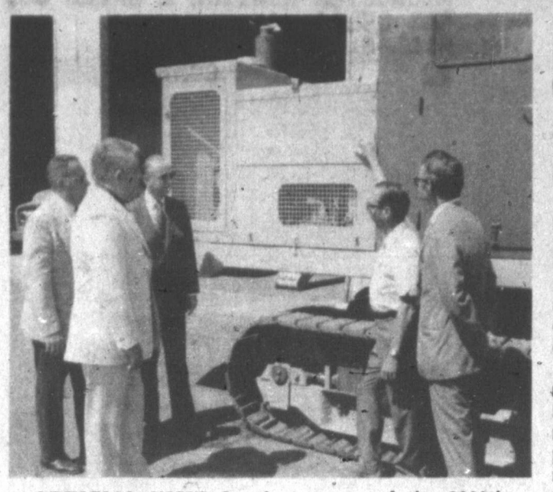

Pistol Taken At Local Store

Pampa police are investigating theft of a pistol from a counter at Gibson's on Perryton Parkway, Wednesday.

The gun, a Regent .32 caliber, was being shown. Before it was returned to the locked case, according to the official report, the attention of the clerk was called to another area and the weapon was missing when he returned to the counter.

According to the report, it is believed the pair of youths who claimed his attention were working with a third in the vicinity at the time allowing him opportunity to take the pistol.

It bore brown plastic grips and serial number GO 9863.

OFFICIAL VISIT--In observance of the 2000th unit built for Harnischfeger Corporation at Cabot's Machinery Division, officials of both companies were in Pampa Wednesday. Inspecting a partially finished P & H backhoe are, left to right, V.P. Raymond, general manager of the Machinery Division, W.D. Manly, Cabot's vice president of the Engineered Products Group, J.A. Mezera, vice president Construction and Mining Products for Harnischfeger, W.A. McKean, superintendent of the Assembly Shop, and W.D. Forsha, assistant general manager of Cabot's Machinery Division.

Cabot Completes 2,000th Unit For Wisconsin Firm

Officials of Cabot Corp. and Harnischfeger (P&H) Corp. of Milwaukee, Wis., were in Pampa Wednesday to mark completion of the 2000th unit built for P&H by Cabot's Machinery Division in Pampa.

Cabot began building construction equipment for P&H in 1964, when the company acquired Cabot's design on hydraulic backhoes. Shortly after that, Cabot also began building a line of hydraulic cranes for P&H and since then over 2000 cranes and backhoes have been constructed in Pampa and shipped to all parts of the world.

The marking of the 2000th unit built for P&H was particularly notable, according to P&H officials, because of the exceptionally high quality built into each unit by Cabot.

"P&H units built in Pampa, by Cabot, are known the world over for their high quality," said Bill Stewart, P&H resident manager in Pampa. He and Vic Raymond, Cabot general manager, commended Cabot employes for the workmanship that goes into each unit.

Visiting in Pampa for P&H were J.A. Mezera, vice president of construction and mining products; Anthony L. Necci, director of manufacturing, construction and hydraulic products, and James W. Gaudet, controller. Visiting here for Cabot was William D. Manley, vice president of the engineered products group.

Police Check Sugar Incident

James Camp, 205 Tignor, complained to Pampa police Wednesday that sugar had been placed in the gasoline tank of a truck left parked overnight at the door of Furr's Cafeteria in Cornonado Center.

According to the official report, Camp told officers he suspected some youths he made angry over the loading of some trash from the cafeteria.

It is believed the sugar came from the cafeteria. A sugar scoop was found in the men's room.

Police are investigating.

State Senate To Vote On Smith's Appointees

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A vote on 325 appointments by Gov. Preston Smith to state boards and agencies and a resolution to prohibit busing as a tool of integration were on the Senate agenda today.

The appointments were considered non-controversial. Other nominations to which there is opposition will be voted on later.

The Senate State Affairs Committee had a 2 p.m. hearing on a resolution by Sen. Henry Grover of Houston, the Republican candidate for governor.

Grover's resolution asks congress to call a constitutional convention to propose the following amendment to the U.S. Constitution:

"No student shall be assigned to nor compelled to attend any particular school on account of race, religion, color or national origin.

Four other anti-busing resolutions already have been approved by committees in the House or Senate.

House members were in recess today until Saturday to study a 4.1 billion one-year state budget.

The long recess began after senators waited out a world record filibuster of 42 hours and 33 minutes by Dallas Sen. Mike McKool to pass the spending bill and the House Appropriations Committee substituted its own version.

The final budget for the fiscal year starting Sept. 7 will be a compromise written by a 10-member House-Senate conference committee.

Charger Sets Fire

Units of the Pampa Fire Department made a run at 9:30 this morning to 704 Doucette St. where a battery charger had started a garage fire.

Apparently, the charger had been connected to power a battery over night. No report had been issued at presstime as to how the fire started from the unit.

Assault Charges Are Filed

A charge of assault and battery was filed against K.A. "Buddy" Lamberson in municipal court Wednesday.

The charge was made by Ken Peeples alleging that Lamberson struck him at a Farm League baseball game June 21 at Optimist Park.

Peeples collapsed later and was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital at Amarillo. He is at home now but under a doctor's care, according to reports today.

Lamberson was acting as coach of one team in the league and Peeples was assisting with game chores for another team.

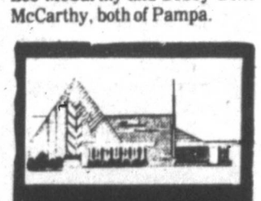

Both men have been suspended from working with boys in the Optimist Club program by a unanimous vote of the members following an investigation of the incident.

Local Youth Death Cause Determined

Results of the autopsy on Garry Lee McCarthy, 16, 1108 E. Foster, have been returned from Austin, showing strangulation on food particles as the cause of death, Justice of the Peace Ed Anderson reported today.

The youth was dead on arrival at Highland General Hospital Sunday, May 21. He was reportedly eating a snack at the Killarney Cafe, where he was helping his mother clean, when he collapsed.

He was the son of Mrs. Bertie Lee McCarthy and Bobby Gene McCarthy, both of Pampa.

Worry Clinic

By GEORGE W. CRANE Ph. D., M.D.

Lionel's case will be duplicated many times this summer! So take time to have your child prepared for such an emergency. If you parents shun this vital chore, let a YMCA or Summer Camp Athletic Director take over the task. Insure your kiddies via "Horse Sense" measures!

CASE U-522: Lionel J., aged 8, is a tragic case.

"Dr. Crane," his grandfather began, "Lionel was a very bright child.

"But he never had learned how to swim, for his parents kept him tied to their apron strings.

"And they were not athletically inclined, so he led a sheltered life.

"But recently he was in the park with members of his Sunday School class.

"It was warm so several of the boys suggested they go wading.

"Lionel was delighted and joined in the fun.

"But he stepped off into deeper water and drowned!

"If he could have swum even 10 feet, he could easily have got back to shallower water.

"So please alert your readers to the vital importance of teaching youngsters a few basic safeguards for saving their lives!"

WATER PSYCHOLOGY

Thousands of Americans die because they cannot swim 10 feet!

You don't need to be an expert in the water or a long distance swimmer.

For when a canoe upsets, you are generally within 5 to 10 feet of it, so even a poor swimmer can save his life by heading back to the boat.

Remember, what causes most people to drown is fear and panic!

For if you can't swim a stroke, you are scared abnormally when your head goes under water.

And that fear will zoom your pulse rate from maybe 72 clear up to 120 beats per minute.

But with that faster pulse, you run out of oxygen sooner, so you become even more terrified if your head is under water 10 seconds.

The major value of being able to swim, even 10 feet by the basic "dog paddle" method, is your improved confidence.

For then you don't zoom your pulse rate by sudden panic due to terror.

So PLEASE see that all kiddies learn to swim early in life!

Gradually accustom them to the water and to holding their face underneath.

Make a game out of the latter! Let them take a big breath; then hold their face submerged while you slowly count out loud.

Make a contest out of it, by seeing who can keep his face under water till you reach a count of 10 or even 20.

For the first terror of the novice is having his mouth and face submerged. You can play this game even at the bathroom wash basin!

Later, at the beach, let the child lie in shallow water, supported by his hands on the bottom, and urge him to dip his face under.

Next, let him take his hands off the bottom so he will float, largely submerged.

Finally, let him stand; take a few deep breaths, then as you go "Bang," (as if to shoot) have him fall face downward into the shallow water.

(Always write to Dr. Crane, Hopkins Bldg, Mellot, Indiana 47958 enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

12 States Pass Laws Against Habitual Traffic Offenders

The national campaign to ban habitual traffic offenders from the roads is gaining increased momentum, according to Joe Fischer, president of the Pampa Association of Insurance Agents.

"Four states, Indiana, Florida, Georgia and Kansas, have passed habitual offender legislation this year, bringing to 12 the number of states which have such laws on the books," Mr. Fischer said. "At least three more—Ohio, Iowa and New York—have bills pending. And work is underway to introduce habitual offender bills in several more."

Habitual offender laws call for the loss of driving privileges for any driver who accumulates multiple convictions for driving violations ranging from vehicular manslaughter, and drunk driving, to speeding and running traffic signals. Generally three convictions for serious offenses and 10 or more for lesser violations within a period of five to ten years are needed for such loss of license.

The Pampa Association is affiliated with the National Association of Insurance Agents which has developed a model habitual offender law as a guide for states. The NAIA has been calling for tighter traffic regulations as a means to reduce the high incidence of death and injury on the country's highways.

"We fully subscribe to the NAIA approach to improved highway safety", Mr. Fischer said. "There is no reason why we have to suffer 55,000 deaths and nearly five million injuries every year.

"We would like our state to join this national movement against the habitual offender. We independent insurance agents will attempt to have legislation introduced but we need the help of every responsible driver. Everyone should write his legislator and tell him this type of law is needed. We want to see our roads safe for every family."

Humphrey Says He Is Still The Man Best Able To Defeat Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey says his own mistakes and a flawed selection process have helped Sen. George McGovern become the frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Humphrey said in an interview with The Associated Press that he still thinks he's the man best able to defeat President Nixon in November and said more Democrats support him than support McGovern.

He said he would campaign for McGovern if the party nominates him, although he would like to see his rival change his views on defense, taxes and welfare.

Excerpts from the interview:

Q. Can you beat Richard Nixon in November?

A. I believe that I am best capable of beating Mr. Nixon. In 1968, with almost insuperable odds against me, I came within a hair of defeating Mr. Nixon.

I also believe I can best carry the campaign against Mr. Nixon. He is vulnerable primarily on the social and economic front. It is here that I have spent much of my political life.

The highest unemployment in a decade, the highest inflation in two decades, the highest budget deficits in four decades, the highest balance of payments deficits in eight decades, and the highest interest rates in 100 years. These points have to be hammered home, and I can do it.

I believe that I am the candidate that can build the coalition that will defeat Mr. Nixon. That coalition must consist of minorities, the black people, Mexican-American proud citizens, the working people of this country, the elderly people of America, as well as the young people.

Q. Do you believe that Sen. McGovern or Sen. Muskie can beat Mr. Nixon?

A. I think that a Democratic party that's united can mount a campaign that can defeat Mr. Nixon. I would say, however, that Sen. McGovern is vulnerable on some of the issues that he's raised and not fully clarified. Particularly the issue of his income redistribution plan, his tax program and his massive cuts in national defense. Sen. Muskie and myself are pretty much on the same wavelength.

Q. If you were the nominee, how would you prevent a walkout or sitout of the campaign by supporters of the other nominees?

One of the advantages of this particular year for the Democratic nominee is that there is time to heal wounds. In 1968 our convention was over on the 30th day of August. We had no time to do the job of planning a campaign, raising the funds, healing the wounds, talking to the people who had been in controversy and competition.

In 1972 the convention will be over in mid-July. There will be lots of time to talk to governors, state chairmen, delegates, factions, to work with the political leadership old and new, to put the party back together.

But I would hope that we would be able not to have a walkout. I don't want any of the Humphrey delegates to walk out.

Q. What can you do to rally young people behind you if you're the nominee?

A. I don't believe any of these people want Richard Nixon in the White House for four more years. I will go to the young people, or anybody else, to point out a record of performance over the years, in the field of civil rights and health legislation, care of the elderly, of the children, deep dedication to public service and the public interest, and ask them to look at that record.

I will also appeal to their sense of the future. I believe that I have outlined in this campaign more programs and policies for the future than any candidate.

Q. Is it possible to stop McGovern from getting the nomination, and if so, how?

A. I realize that my task is much more difficult, because I do not have that number of votes, of delegate votes. But his is likewise difficult. I think we have to keep in mind how these votes were accumulated. For example, in the New York primary where Sen. McGovern received a very large number of delegates, about 12 per cent of the eligible Democratic electorate participated.

Q. But there was no opposition.

A. Now I believe it's fair to say that our selection process itself is found wanting. And not only for Sen. McGovern, but the rest of us.

Q. The thrust of your remark seems to be the large number of delegates Sen. McGovern has pledged to him doesn't represent his true support in the Democratic party. Is that true?

A. To put it in the affirmative, I believe that I have a broader base of support.

Q. You mentioned some flaw in the selection process. Is it in the process or in the way that you and Sen. Muskie and other opponents of Sen. McGovern have used the process? In other words, have you made mistakes that, had you not made them, might have made a difference?

A. Oh, yes. I'm sure of that. I commend Sen. McGovern's organization and the enthusiasm of his people. I think it's well known that it's very difficult to get people out to precinct caucuses and into primary elections.

Q. How would you end the Vietnam war and get our prisoners back?

A. The procedure is to set a date and announce that date to Hanoi, as to the time of withdrawal of all American forces, provided that within that frame of time that North Vietnam release our prisoners of war and identify the missing in action. I would seek international supervision. I would also seek a cease-fire, but I would not condition our withdrawal on a cease-fire.

Q. So actually there's no substantial difference between your position and the President's?

A. And the latest position of the President. Prior to that the President had conditioned the withdrawal of forces from Vietnam on the basis that there would be no take-over of the government of South Vietnam.

Q. Earlier you outlined an indictment of President Nixon's handling of the economy. But there are some good signs, too. The economy is expanding, millions of new jobs have been created, inflation is down to roughly half its peak, an inflation that started when you were vice president. What would you do that Nixon hasn't done to improve the economy.

A. Well, of course, the population of the country grows. You've got to create jobs. The point is that the number of jobs that were eliminated under the Nixon tight-money, high-interest-rate policy of the first couple of years of his administration.

Trouble is, inflation hasn't been curbed. The wholesale price index went up three-tenths of one per cent this last month and all the projections are that food prices are going up again.

I do not consider the administration's price control program effective. Much talk, no action.

Q. How would you improve it?

A. By enforcement, with severe penalties for violations.

Q. Would you retain the present form of controls?

A. I think for the immediate period of time, until you get inflation pretty much under control, you ought to continue what you have, with enforcement. But as you taper off into what you call Phase 3, I would then go only to the large industries and into the areas of big capital and large work forces.

Copper is the oldest metal known to man.

Taxpayer makes 'home delivery' to postmaster

By Abigail Van Buren

(© 1972 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I wanted to call up my postmaster and tell him a thing or two because I knew he ate my pension check, but I couldn't find his telephone number in the book. I called information and that's when I found out he had an unlisted number! That really made me mad, so since I knew where he lived, I drove over to his house and told his wife off.

Abby, as a taxpayer, I would like to know why a public servant like a postmaster would have an unlisted telephone number? TAXPAYER

DEAR TAXPAYER: Probably to protect him from people who "know" he ate their pension checks.

DEAR ABBY: For the mother whose 16-year-old son pretends to be retarded to draw attention, and the father's encouraging reaction:

Obviously the boy is a good actor, but he probably is repeating himself, so I suggest the father do the following to inject realism.

Begin by using elastic bandages to tie the boy's elbows just slightly behind his back, so the elbows will remain bent. Next, wrap heavy rubber bands around the boy's fingers so that they may be used only with effort. Next, the father could have the boy lie on the floor where he could then wrap elastic bandages around his crossed knees. Then wrap more elastic bandages around his feet so they will be pointed inward.

Next, place a handful of large marbles into the boy's mouth, so he can neither close it nor control his saliva. Finally put a strap around the boy's head, and attach a rubber strip to it so the head is held up only with effort.

By this time the father is probably about to explode in anticipation of the boy's next performance. Then the father should instruct the boy to do some simple task, like turn on the TV and adjust the color and then try to sit in his favorite chair.

My analogy to simulate what it's like to have cerebral palsy [which isn't necessarily retardation] breaks down here—for the father is able to undo the boy's temporary condition. I wish to God that I had such power for my young daughter. THE FATHER OF A C. P. IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: From the letters in your column, we "cold" wives should form a club. There are a lot of us around. We're easy to recognize. We're either sick a lot [headaches] or dead tired. We drink too much, smoke too much, and eat too much ["I'm going on a diet tomorrow"]. We lose ourselves in novels [dreaming] and watch a lot of late television.

We're sharp with our kids and we get foolish in the 40s [wearing too much makeup and not enough clothes.]

As for myself, I have most of the symptoms already and I'm not yet 40. I'd give 10 years of my life if my husband would grab me at the kitchen sink, pat me, pinch me or seduce me [before somebody else does]. I'm about ready to boil over!

Come on, Abby, print this. Maybe my husband will get the message. ANOTHER COLD FISH IN POMPANO BEACH, FLA.

DEAR FISH: If I read you right, it will take more than a message. It's time you straightened up and swam right. I hear there's awfully good fishing around Pompano Beach. Don't give your husband a good reason to junk his marriage license for a fishing license.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L. A., CALIF. 90069 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069.

PROGRESSIVE HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

Mrs. G.B. Hogan, president, led the meeting of the Progressive Home Demonstration Club in the home of Mrs. LaZetta Grant, 1430 Williston.

Miss Jimmie Lou Wainscott, county HD agent, announced a workshop on making men's trousers, July 6, and another workshop July 13, on cereal and meat.

Miss Patricia Henderson, assistant HD agent, installed the new officers, who are Mrs. D.A. Rife, president; Mrs. G.B. Hogan, vice president; Mrs. E.C. Golden, secretary; Mrs. LaZetta Grant, treasurer and council delegate; and Mrs. E.P. Templin, telephone chairman.

Mrs. Hogan was presented a gift of appreciation from the club for her work as president.

Miss Wainscott demonstrated home methods for removing spots and stains from fabrics, and Mrs. Bertha Hinton gave a patio workshop on crafts.

Next meeting will be at 11:30 a.m. July 18, in the home of Mrs. Tom W. Price, 1221 W. 18th.

Members present were Mmes. B.F. Dorman, E.C. Golden, LaZetta Grant, G.B. Hogan, John King, Evart Revard, D.A. Rife and E.P. Templin.

Guests were Mrs. Bertha Hinton, Miss Henderson, Mrs. Lee Jackson and daughter, Mrs. B.G. Ward and Miss Wainscott.

Hip to Chic

Indian jewelry, which was so popular with "hippies," has become the trademark of the most chic crowds. Silver buckles, knotted together with leather make an exciting piece for casual or dress events.

Opening lead—♠ J

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The North-South bidding was very scientific. They certainly found out that no-trump wasn't a sound contract and that the hearts, for slam purposes, were wide open.

They also told West what to lead but West's spade holding looked so good to him he opened that suit.

This lead gave South an excellent chance to make a slam. All he had to do was finesse the right way for the queen of clubs; discard a heart on dummy's fourth club and claim the overtrick.

South had no interest in this. He was a strictly practical bridge player and while a sure 20 points was not to be despised it seemed silly indeed to risk game and rubber in an effort to collect that little extra nubbin.

South simply drew trumps; cashed the last top spade, led a heart and sat back.

It didn't matter to him what the opponents did. They could take two heart tricks. After that the man on lead would have to solve South's problems for him. A club lead would locate the queen. A heart or spade lead would allow a ruff and discard.

Incidentally, while this one time the scientific bidding might have proved expensive, we approve heartily of Souths three-spade bid. Give North the king of hearts instead of the king of spades and he would have been able to bid three no-trump, a contract which would have been unbeatable against any hand.

Tribespeople Don't Worry About Dentist

ANGORAM, New Guinea (AP) — Constant flooding of tribal land by the Sepik River probably is responsible for the extraordinary lack of dental decay among tribespeople here, says a World Health Organization expert.

Dr. David E. Barmes was chief of Australian New Guinea's Government Division of Dental Services until 1967 when he joined WHO.

While working in New Guinea, he took special interest in the lack of dental decay among 20,000 tribespeople living between Angoram and Amboin on the swampy banks of the Sepik river.

Now, he's in the area with a research team to try to find out why the villagers never have to worry about dentists.

Barmes said that although all village people in the 19-village survey area had the same diet, there was a heavy contrast in the rate of dental decay depending where people lived.

People in villages on low river banks where flooding was regular had no dental decay he said. Other people in higher areas free of flooding had all the normal dental problems.

Soil analyses showed the best teeth were found in areas of flooding where silt-soil contained large traces of strontium, barium, calcium and phosphate. On the other hand, the higher the concentration of lead in the soil the higher the rate of dental decay.

"Now, we have to find out exactly what's causing all this — and then find a way of using it to reduce dental decay right round the world, if we can," says Barmes.

Senior Center Corner

By Gertie Shaw

There were 57 senior citizens present at Thursday's Center meeting. Door prizes went to Jay Evans and Mrs. Pearl Slaten.

The Friendships Class of the First United Methodist Church was the hostess group. Serving refreshments were Mmes. W.A. Hardy, J.B. White, Fred Cary, W.H. Burden, Bess Griffith, W.R. Cole, Bill Jarvis, S.C. Evans, Carl Boston, Frank Chapman and Paul Caylor.

Ben Cates is in Highland General Hospital. We hope he will have a speedy recovery.

Carla Chisum, granddaughter of Mrs. Mina Berham, was a guest.

Mrs. Bertha Gates was welcomed back after an absence of several months. She now lives at Sharon Springs, Kans., where her son-in-law is pastor of the Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. O.L. Lester returned from a trip to El Paso, New Mexico and Old Mexico.

Mrs. Margaret Connolly, who lives at Pampa Nursing Center, is now doing nicely.

Mrs. Ella Cade, formerly of Des Moines, Ia., who is now living at Eastridge Nursing Home, was a guest.

Mrs. Lila Fulton attended a family reunion in Navajo, Ariz. There were 42 relatives who attended the one-week event.

Mrs. Edith Lawrence is home again after a trip to Oklahoma City, Okla., Texhoma and Gainesville.

David and Martha Shelton of Fort Worth are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Ruby Stovall.

Mrs. Leona Turner and her son, Jimmy, of Albuquerque, N.M., visited her mother, Mrs. McClendon, this past week.

Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Shyrock visited W.E. Melton and family and Margaret Holt this past week. Mrs. Shyrock will teach school in Oklahoma City, Okla., this Fall.

Altrusa Club members present were Mrs. Louise Sewell, chairman; and Mmes. Lalar Wilkerson, Lora Dunn, Olive Hills, Ruth Sewell, Gertrude Barber and Marian Jameson.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JUNE 30

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This is a year to get out of whatever grooves you've let yourself settle into. Abandoning bad habits as preliminary to self-improvment programs gets you started. Today's natives find home life important, are frequently gifted teachers who themselves live by what they teach.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Competitive noises intrude. Do as little as current conditions permit. Any interesting tale you tell comes back unrecognizable.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: New friends seem destined to complement your talents but eventually confuse all your affairs to the point that you must leave them and change.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Most of the day is routine and somewhat uninspiring. There's a reward for sticking it out. Change direction for the evening.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Technical advice shows you more sides to the situation than your feelings had led you to believe. Gather energy for a later effort.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: You will possibly spot some weakness in your financial planning. It will be a while before you see what should be done to correct it.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Whatever you are most sensitive about is most likely to attract curiosity. Be nonchalant, carry it off with supreme poise and few words.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: A congenial mood adds little to your efficiency. Keep things simple to get thru the day. Evening hours are for entertainment.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Emotional concerns tend to overbalance most other subjects, and it's just as well. Creative ideas force changes, abandonment of projects.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: The exploration stage of dealings yields surprising information, or if it doesn't, the suggestion is that you've missed something.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: If you have to do anything serious now, take it as a trouble-shooting job, make notes of provocative ideas for future application.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Your steady effort is appreciated, not overly amusing to you, quite difficult if you balk or skip important chores.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Personal relations, in and out of the home, practically sparkle with excitement, readjustment, perhaps abrupt surprises.

Land Investment Guidelines Given

There's an increase in advertisements of lake lots, wilderness lots and speculative land investments," noted Mrs. Bonnie Fowler of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M Univesity. "If you're considering the purchase of land for a vacation or retirement home or as an investment, there are some guidelines to keep in mind."

The home management specialist suggested making a personal visit to the land to see for yourself the condition of the site. Find out what facilities, utilities and roads are there. Ask if water and electric power facilities are available at reasonable costs. Does the management permit septic tanks?

Be sure to check on recreational facilities. If the land developer advertises a golf course, swimming pool, boat marina or other recreational activities, find out the status of these items. Ask if they're still in the "early planning stages." Find out exactly when they'll be completed.

Be careful of buying land for a retirement home in an isolated area. Discover the distance to stores, medical care, banks, churches and other public services. How close are neighbors? Many lots have been sold in remote and desolate deserts, mountains and swamp areas.

Mrs. Fowler explained that passage of a federal law cuts down on land sale fraud by requiring sellers to provide information about the land. Under the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act, the land developer who offers 50 or more unimproved lots for sale and advertises across state lines must file a statement of record containing detailed information about the property with the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Washington, D. C., 20411. This report must be filed before the land can be offered for sale.

The act also requires sellers to provide prospective buyers with a property report containing information needed by the consumer to make a decision whether or not to buy.

The report includes information on the availability of water, electricity, sewer service and recreational facilities. The report must also include information regarding the existence of liens on the property, the type of title the buyer receives and the distances to nearby communities over paved and unpaved roads.

"Study the property report carefully before making a decision," advised Mrs. Fowler. "The law requires the buyer to give you a copy of the report at least 48 hours before you sign the contract."

When buying land, avoid being misled by a "free" lot offer. Many real estate promoters offer "free" lots in development sites as a lure to sell land often fees, charges or other strings are attached to getting these lots.

Stylish Terry

Cotton terry is an easy-to-care-for, comfortable fabric that has been making summer appearances for many years. But this year's version is one of the best. It's a floor-length dress with round neckline and a slit straight up to the thigh. Terry's back but in better style.

Exhibit Prospectus Available To Artists

The prospectus for the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts' 19th Southwestern Print and Drawing competition has been mailed to artists in a seven-state region.

The print and drawing exhibition will be held at DMFA from October 7 through November 5. Following the Dallas closing, the exhibit will tour a circuit of 10 colleges and universities through December, 1973.

Any tourist who has been a legal resident of Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma or Texas for one year or more is eligible. Artists who wish to enter the event, but do not receive a prospectus, are urged to contact the museum for entry forms. There is an entry fee of $2 per artist. A total of two entries in any media may be submitted, with works done in class or under instruction not elibible.

Entries for the exhibition, which will be juried by Garo Antresian of the Tamarind Institute, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, must be received at the museum between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. from Friday, August 25 through Friday, September 8. No Saturday or Sunday acceptances. Works shipped by any bus line will not be accepted as the museum cannot provide transportation from terminal to the museum.

All print and drawing media are eligible except monoprints. Works must be matted, not to exceed 28 x 34 inches outside dimensions, and must not be framed. Mats shoudl have rigid cardboard backing, hinged at the top only, but not sealed as the pieces will be covered with heavy acetate by DMFA and then sealed.

Purchase funds and awards will be available and awarded by the juror. All entries will be considered eligible for purchase unless otherwise indicated by artists on the entry blank. A 10 per cent commission will be deducted by the museum making the sale. Accepted entries will be insured by the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts while on exhibition and on circuit.

Accepted entries will remain with the exhibition until the close of the circuit in January, 1974, at which time they will be returned to the artist prepaid. Rejected entries will be returned prepaid as soon as possible after judging or may be picked up by hand between September 21 and 30 or October 30 through November 3.

Adjustable Politicians

The other day we discussed Sen. George McGovern's emergence as the top contender for the democratic nomination for President.

We suggested McGovern might be a trial balloon this year with the idea of running for the victory in 1976. Our suggestion was that Nixon would be unbeatable this November.

Now we hope our readers will not take all this too seriously. Making political predictions is mostly amusement especially for those of us who have no "horse" in the race.

But we see Nixon as unbeatable because we predict he will have the Americans out of Vietnam before November and will successfully prime the economic pump to create the illusion that "happy days are here again."

Whatever secret deals and concessions needed will be made to "ease" the world tensions, so that by the time November rolls around, there will be no Vietnam for McGovern to cry about, and that just about wraps up his campaign.

We mentioned McGovern's flexible position in our earlier commentary, and we'd like to explore this interesting phenomenon of politics in more depth here.

When a politician is merely a spokesman for a point of view, his statements always seem more positive, more belligerent, more unshakeable. When the same politician moves into a category of a "possible" presidential nominee, his statements are shaped to fit the audience. When he becomes the most likely nominee, he begins to "explain" his position in more detail, and if he becomes the candidate, all "extreme" positions vanish from his campaign talks except the constant reminder that he is extremely opposed to his opponent.

Let us see how it works in McGovern's one consistent stand has been to oppose the war in Vietnam, and this has been his major attraction to voters within the Democratic Party.

But since he has been conceded a shot at the nomination his extreme positions on "share the wealth" have been tempered somewhat depending upon his audience. His New York campaign has softened considerably on the point of taking from the very wealthy and distributing to the poor. It seems these remarks had upset some of his financial supporters.

We wonder why anyone gets upset about what a candidate promises since so few of the promises are kept once the candidate is elected.

But McGovern's softening position is also demonstrated in his "warming up" to Gov. George Wallace. When Wallace won the Florida primary, McGovern's comments were caustic—something on the order of despising all that Wallace stands for.

But when the governor proved he could attract votes in the North, McGovern softened a bit, even visiting the governor at the hospital and not closing the door to a possible cabinet post for the "other" George.

The way the game is played, by crossing off George Wallace, McGovern might be crossing off the more than 3.6 million folks who voted for Wallace in the primaries. That's only 300,000 fewer votes than McGovern received up to New York, and Wallace was not a candidate in most of the races.

The point here is that Wallace represents some political muscle, and when it comes to trying to win elections, politicians are realists, and they make deals.

The campaign oratory is for the suckers.

Get In Step, Laird

Defense Secretary Melvin Laird has done everything but fall down on the floor and threaten to hold his breath unless Congress agrees to support the administration's plan to modernize our "offensive strategic forces."

Never quite having gotten into the spirit of the arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union, Laird insists we need all kinds of new weapons systems to make sure we are better at making peace than our enemies are.

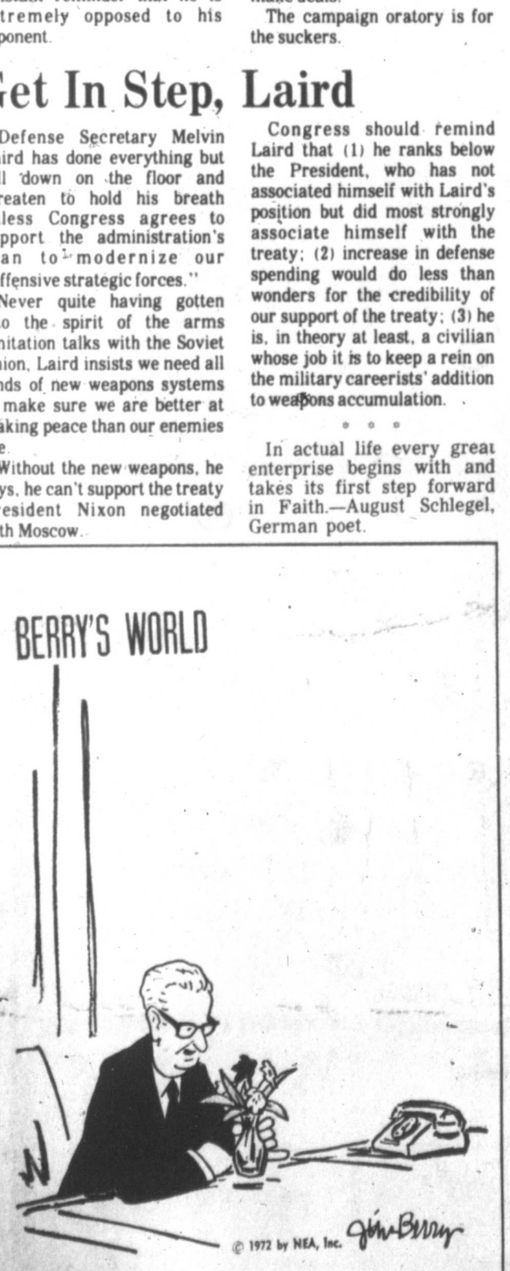

Without the new weapons, he says, he can't support the treaty President Nixon negotiated with Moscow.

Congress should remind Laird that (1) he ranks below the President, who has not associated himself with Laird's position but did most strongly associate himself with the treaty; (2) increase in defense spending would do less than wonders for the credibility of our support of the treaty; (3) he is, in theory at least, a civilian whose job it is to keep a rein on the military careerists' addition to weapons accumulation.

Connally May Be '76 G.O.P. Pick

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) —While everyone (almost) is giving rapt attention to this year's political campaigns, a group of rather influential Republicans is worrying about the presidential contest of 1976, when Richard Nixon will no longer be in the running.

The group has no formal standing as yet. And no funds. But they have a candidate—former Texas governor, ex-Navy and ex-Treasury Secretary John Connally. On the Republican ticket.

They are convinced the Texas Democrat has more political know-how than any other man on the horizon. They believe Nixon is inclined their way, though they have no convincing evidence as to the President's feelings on friend Connally as his successor at the White House.

Interestingly enough, this informal group of backers does not favor Connally as Nixon's running mate this year. For one thing, they believe he would not be happy as vice-president. Even more importantly, they're convinced the vice-presidency is not the best stepping stone to the White House.

History is on the side of their argument.

It is true that in the early years of the Republic, three of the first seven U.S. presidents after Washington had been vice-presidents—John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Martin Van Buren. But since then, except for Nixon, eight vice-presidents have succeeded to the presidency only through death of the president. And Nixon was unable to make it directly from the vice-presidency.

The track record of those in Spiro Agnew's post is definitely not good.

Therefore, these backers would like Nixon to name Connally as secretary of state. They see at Foggy Bottom a much greater scope for their man's particular talents. Here, interestingly enough, they're not swayed by the statistics showing only six secretaries of state have become presidents—Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Van Buren and Buchanan.

They note that quite a few other secretaries of state have made names for themselves, either at State or the Supreme Court or elsewhere, including John Marshall, Daniel Webster, John C. Calhoun, Elihu Root, Robert Lansing, Charles E. Hughes, Frank Kellogg, Henry Stimson, James Blaine, Cordell Hull, John Foster Dulles and Dean Acheson.

The thinking of these backers, therefore, is that Connally wouldn't get lost in the wings at State as he might as vice-president, though they admit it difficult in any event to conceive of Connally being out of sight, regardless of his official position.

Connally himself has gotten a taste of international dickering as Treasury secretary, and liked what he was doing in this role as negotiator, following Nixon's dramatic dollar evaluation and drive for a new set of international currency arrangements. The word is that Connally likes his present assignment, too, as a personal traveling troubleshooter for Nixon abroad.

Curiously, there is no indication that this group has thus far contacted Connally to get his views on his future. But they have no doubts as to his aspirations. They're men who have been close to him in the past in one way or another.

Should You Buy Or Rent Is Real Good Question

By PAUL HARVEY

Americans on the move are moving out of houses and into apartments. Hold everything! Now most states promise tax relief for homeowners. Such could tip the advantage the other way again.

Governors and candidates for governor are promising homeowners lower taxes. As is nationwide, there's a wide disparity.

On a $25,000 house you'll be taxed $743 in Philadelphia—only $115 in New Orleans.

You'll pay $763 in Minneapolis or St. Paul—only $188 in Jackson, Miss.

In most of the big-big cities with their high welfare and other burdens—all things considered—it's cheaper to rent.

All things include the higher taxes plus upkeep and repairs, inside and out—and heat, water, garbage collection, snow shoveling.

For minor plumbing, electrical and carpentry repairs you may pay less to keep a janitor in a large apartment than you'll pay one for a special house call just once a year.

Measured just in terms of dollars, there are enough things for which the renter does not pay extra so that, in most cases, he'll end up ahead.

Historically the homeowner was building up an equity which offset his upkeep costs.

But with higher taxes and higher mortgage rates, that's not the advantage it once was.

Assuming on that $25,000 house he pays $150 a month on his mortgage, any residual value when he sells the house someday has already been eaten away.

The Time-Life book on Family Finance cited examples of two brothers, Sam and Dan, each of whom started out with $3,500. One made a down payment on a house.

The other invested in stocks and rented a place to live.

After 30 years, Sam the renter was way ahead—financially.

One category of worker who has no business buying is the one whose job is likely to move him from place to place at frequent intervals.

It's seldom you sell a house under pressure without absorbing a substantial loss.

This, plus the 7 per cent the seller pays the realtor, makes buying and selling houses with any degree of frequency unduly punitive.

A compromise as old as ancient Greece and as new as now in many cities is the "row house"—the suburban town house—said to provide most advantages of houses plus most conveniences of apartments.

These, builders tell me, are selling faster than any other.

Now that I've said all that—and what I've said was said after consulting major realtors who deal in both homes and rentals—presently for me there's no home like a house.

And it's gratifying to see New York, California, New Jersey, Minnesota, Oregon, Washington, Colorado and a dozen other states seeking or placing a legal limit on the taxability of private property. Now 25 states grant homestead exemptions from all taxes up to $20,000 valuation. And voters voting next November can, and I think will, make homeownership good business again.

H.L. Hunt Writes

HAPPY YOUNG PEOPLE

They came to Dallas more than 100,000 strong, these young "crusaders." Because they were polite and orderly, they did not receive as much attention from the national news media as 10 per cent of that number would have received for demonstrating against something. They came from every part of the nation and from all over the world. They came to witness for Christ.

Explo '72 crusaders had quite an impact on Dallas. They were mostly young, but leavened with many seasoned veterans. They were not somber and joyless but were bright and cheerful.

Law enforcement officers lauded their attitude, noting that the young people, gathering in their tens of thousands in the Cotton Bowl several times, always left it undamaged and unlittered. They were polite and respectful, thanking the officers charged with smoothing the flow of people and traffic and cooperating better than any group previously seen there.

When a public place is filled with nearly 100,000 "demonstrating" young people who do NOT break windows and burn buildings, it is real news in these days, GOOD news. News is supposed to be that which is unusual, so the conduct and attitude of the young people attending Explo '72 should be a welcome change to editors and broadcasters.

These are the real youth of our Republic, not the destroyers. These good youngsters largely ignored the few agitators who tried to switch Explo '72 from religion to anti-Freedom activities. They were too busy learning about good things and many of them took away with them some useful ammunition fro future crusading for Faith and Freedom.

Your Health

By Lawrence E. Lamb

What Is Overactive Thyroid?

Dear Dr. Lamb—With the exception of mild anemia, I have always been very healthy until I got the flu. I wasn't given antibiotics until a month later and I have had vomiting and spasms of the stomach muscles. Despite antibiotic treatment my eyes remain swollen and protruding, and I was diagnosed as having an overactive thyroid. I have been taking a white pill called Tapazole for this. I go to the eye clinic every three months and have my eyeballs measured. What I would like to know is how did I get this and could this have been from the flu? Is it hereditary? I have no relatives with thyroid trouble. What is the life expectancy for a person with such a disease?

Dear Reader—Apparently, your doctor does think you have an overactive thyroid, or he would not be giving you the white pill (Tapazole). First, let me say that antibiotics are of no value whatever in the treatment of flu or any other real virus infection. Antibiotics are useful in the treating of bacterial complications. Not getting penicillin has nothing to do with your thyroid problem.

It is probably true though that your vomiting was associated with an overactive thyroid. It is also true that an illness can trigger off an attack of overactivity of the thyroid if you already have the underlying problem. In people with long-term overactive thyroid problems, the worst difficulties tend to come and go; frequently as attacks in the fall and spring. Sometimes the problem is worse after emotional strain, but there is no specific link between flu and an overactive thyroid.

It is difficult to say what causes an overactive thyroid. There is some tendency for thyroid difficulties to occur in families, but not as a specifically inherited disease.

The main symptoms of an overactive thyroid are a large appetite, associated with weight loss (if it were not for a few other things, many people would like to have this), excessive nervousness, intolerance to heat with excessive sweating, thin, dry skin, sometimes an increase in body temperature, fine hair, overactive digestive tract which may include vomiting and diarrhea, fast heart rate and in some people the pop eyes that you are describing.

The prominence of the eyes is thought to be caused by a hormone from the pituitary gland, underneath the brain and behind the eyes. This hormone overstimulates the thyroid (thyrotropic hormone) and in some way the development of the prominent eyes.

Most overactive thyroid problems can be controlled with modern medicine if the patient is diligent in following his doctor's instructions. So most individuals with these problems can expect to get along with a minimum of difficulty and remain gainfully employed and otherwise active.

Arms Pacts: Will They Bring Parity or Peril?

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Those Congressional hearings (by four different committees) on the strategic arms limitation agreements are far from finished, but already one central issue is clearly evident.

In summary, it is as follows:

That under these treaties, Russia can build up its land and sea-based missile armaments as it had planned to do. That is, the Soviet is not prevented from doing what it had contemplated anyway. All the pacts do is to legitimize their strategic weapons build-up.

On the other hand, the agreements signed in Moscow put the U.S. in a straight-jacket that explicitly prevents it from further development of its strategic arms. Under this freeze, the U.S. is definitely put at a serious numerical inferiority in both ICBMs and submarines, while Russia is allowed to continue expanding its already huge arsenal of these cataclysmic weapons.

As a consequence, it is being argued, at the conclusion of the five-year duration of these accords, the U.S. will be perilously inferior and highly vulnerable in both land and sea-based missiles.

This key issue was sharply and forcefully spelled out by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., at a hearing of the Senate Armed Services Committee, as follows:

"Within the five-year life of these agreements, that is by mid-1977, we will be in the position of having to ask the Soviet for parity. In other words we will be asking them to give up in SALT II what they have gained in SALT I. Yet what possible reason is there to expect that the Soviet will be willing to do that? Or more to the point, what political and diplomatic concessions will we be forced to make so that the Soviet will not further widen their margin of superiority?"

There was no answer from Defense Secretary Laird, to whom this penetrating question was addressed.

Disturbing Details

Underlining the contention that under these treaties Russia has a virtual free hand in building up its strategic forces, this hearing produced the following significant corroborative testimony:

Secretary Laird and Admiral Thomas Moorer, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, maintained that had the arms limitation agreements not been reached, Russia over the next five years could have deployed 250 land-based nuclear missiles (ICBMs) a year, and built eight missile-armed nuclear submarines a year.

But under close questioning by Sen. Jackson, the two Pentagon leaders acknowledged that there is authoritative evidence that the Soviet, instead of pursuing that policy, was modernizing its land-based missile forces--which already outnumber most of the U.S. by 50 per cent.

In other words, instead of building 250 of the same type ICBMs year after year, Russia actually was in the process of producing fewer but more powerful and sophisticated missiles.

Again, Laird conceded "that might be the case."

Jackson flatly asserted the same situation prevails regarding submarines.

Under the pacts, the Soviet in five years will have 62 missile-armed nuclear submarines, with another 18 "in the pipeline"--that is, in various stages of construction.

This is exactly what Russia planned to do before the treaties.

"But," grimly noted Jackson, "the U.S. is limited to 44 modern nuclear ballistic missile submarines. The crucial question for the nation and for the cause of world peace is whether these numbers add up to stable parity or unstable inferiority."

Also pointedly cited by Jackson was Laird's frank admission that there will be no defense budget savings as a result of the arms limitation agreements.

"In fact," said Jackson, "there are already proposed increases. They may be necessary and I am not saying I amagainst them. I firmly believe in maintaining a strong balanced defense. But let's not kid ourselves or the American people. As much as I can understand the desire to believe that the Moscow summit heralds a new era of peace and cooperation, I must say that there is no substitute for facing the facts.

"And the plain fact is that these arms agreements raise as many questions as they answer."

The four committees conducting hearings on the treaties are--Senate Foreign Relations, Senate Armed Services, House Foreign Affairs and House Armed Services.

From the tenor of these proceedings, it will be quite a while before the pacts are submitted to the House and Senate for consideration. From the present outlook, they will be approved in the end.

"Enriched" Debt Ceiling

The pending national debt ceiling bill may wind up on President Nixon's desk with a wholly unexpected and unique addition--a 20 per cent across-the-board social security increase.

That's the plan of Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who is sponsoring such an amendment with the backing of 62 Republican and Democratic co-sponsors.

That is well over a majority of the Senate, and Church says they mean business. If they really do, they are in a strategic position to put over their plan because the existing $450 billion national debt ceiling expires June 30.

The pending bill, passed by the House in April, must be enacted and signed by the President by midnight of that day.

Connor's Mother Causes Excitement

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jim Connors, 19-year-old left-hander from Belleville, Ill., with all the makings of a future tennis superstar, plays Italy's Adriano Panatta today in the third round of the 86th All-England tournament.

And Mrs. Gloria Connors will be in the stands shouting "let's go."

Her enthusiastic support caused many admonitions from elderly English spectators when Jim smashed seventh-seeded Bob Hewitt of South Africa out of the championships in the first round.

"But what's wrong if I get excited for my boy?" asked his mother.

"I don't mean to annoy or offend anyone. People roar encouragement at other ball games, so why not at tennis?"

A tennis player herself, Mrs. Connors taught her son the rudiments of the game as soon as he could walk, then handed him over to the instruction of Pancho Gonzales at the age of 16.

Connors got into the third round by overwhelming Nicky Kalogeropoulos of Greece 6-3, 7-5, 8-6 Wednesday.

Nine other American men are in the last 32. They are: top-seeded Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif.; Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash.; Erik Van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif.; Jim McManus of Berkeley, Calif., Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn.; Dick Stickton of Port Washington, N.Y.; Mike Estep of Dallas; Alexander Mayer of Woodmere, N.Y.; and Dan Bleckinger of Oshkosh, Wis.

Clark Graebner of New York City, one of the U.S. hopes for the title, was off form and bowed out in the second round to Ilie Nastase of Romania, the No. 2 seed, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Hewitt and Andres Gimeno of Spain were the only seeded players beaten thus far. Gimeno, seeded .fourth, lost to Onny Parun of New Zealand.

In the women's division, 17-year-old Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. and three-time Wimbledon champion Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif. were among the American winners Wednesday. Little Chris, winner of the women's title in the London Grass Court Championships, beat Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego 1-6, 6-3, 6-3, while Mrs. King ousted Sharon Walsh of San Rafael, Calif., 6-2, 6-0.

American League

Luis Tiant and Mike Cuellar, two crafty old Cubans, gave the race in the American League East a Latin tempo Wednesday night ... with a big assist from rookie Juan Beniquez.

Tiant, a 32-year-old right-hander from Havana, pitched the Boston Red Sox to a 5-3 victory over Detroit with five innings of one-hit relief.

That sliced the Tigers' lead to one game over Baltimore when Cuellar, a 35-year-old southpaw from Santa Clara, Cuba, hurled the Orioles to a five-hit 5-0 triumph over the New York Yankees.

Elsewhere, the Chicago White Sox downed Oakland 6-4, Minnesota edged California 7-6 and Milwaukee took two from Cleveland 4-2 and 5-2. Texas and Kansas City were not scheduled.

I've come back to my old motion," said Tiant, who won 21 games for Cleveland in 1968 but was released by Minnesota after spending two months of the 1970 season on the disabled list with shoulder problems.

"My motion is the big thing," he went on, referring to his herky-jerky corkscrew delivery. "I give the batters my back and surprise them with my hesitation. I confused them tonight the way I used to before I was hurt."

After the Red Sox took a 4-3 lead against Joe Coleman with three runs in the fifth on Doug Griffin's double, Carl Yastrzemski's triple, Reggie Smith's single and stolen base and a single by Beniquez, Phil Gagliano drew a bases-loaded walk in the eighth and Beniquez, a 22-year-old rookie shortstop from San Sebastian, Puerto Rico, filling in for the injured Venezuelan, Luis Aparicio, cha, cha, cha-ed across the plate with an insurance run.

Cuellar gave the yankees fits with his slow curve and screwball despite a case of the blahs.

"I didn't feel too good," he reported. "Maybe it was the humidity, but I had no fast ball. But everything else I put exactly where I wanted."

The Orioles broke through Fritz Peterson with two runs in the fifth when left fielder Roy White lost Mark Belanger's two-out, bases-loaded fly ball in the twilight. In the sixth, Brooks Robinson doubled and Merv Rettenmund homered.

National League

Everybody knows about Bad Henry's relentless pursuit of the Babe's big record—but now, all of a sudden, it seems he's shooting for another target as well.

Bad Henry, of course, is Hank Aaron of Atlanta, who today is just 61 home runs short of Babe Ruth's all-time major league record of 714.

He got his 653rd career blast Wednesday night against San Diego and, for two reasons, it couldn't have come at a more propitious time.

The more obvious one is that it won the game. It was a two-run, tie-breaking clout in the ninth inning that gave the Braves a 4-2 triumph in the opener of their twi-night doubleheader. But he couldn't equal his heroics in the night-cap and the Padres won that one 4-2, ending their latest tailspin at five games.

In other National League games, the New York Mets edged Philadelphia 3-2, Montreal beat Pittsburgh 3-1, Los Angeles blanked Houston 5-0, St. Louis defeated the Chicago Cubs 8-4 and Cincinnati turned back San Francisco 4-2.

The fact that Ralph Garr was on base with an infield single was the second reason for the timeliness of Aaron's 14th homer of the season.

Instead of just one run-batted in, it gave him two—and that gave him 1,992 RBI for his career, catapulting him one ahead of Lou Gehrig and into second place behind the Babe's 2,209 on that all-time chart. So suddenly he's on the trail of two incredible records.

"There has been so much talk about trying to break Ruth's home run record," Aaron said between games, "that I hadn't thought much about the RBI thing.

"It's quite an honor, though, to drive in more runs than Gehrig becaue I've always considered him one of the greatest players in the history of the game."

It appeared Aaron would be able to sit out the second game after his first-game heroics.

Golf Injunction To Be Appealed

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — The case of Jane Blalock vs. the LPGA is en route to a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Houston.

Bud Erickson, executive director of the Ladies Professional Golf Association, said Wednesday night the wheels were in motion to appeal the ruling handed down earlier in the day by a U.S. district court in Atlanta. Judge Charles A. Moye Jr. granted Miss Blalock the right to compete in tournaments pending trial of her $5-million antitrust suit against the LPGA.

The leading money winner on the women's pro tour this season, with more than $38,000, was suspended from pro golf on May 31 for one year for breaking the rules of the game. She took the case to court and was granted a restraining order, then, on Wednesday, Judge Moye issued a temporary injunction.

"He was just trying to avoid a decision," Erickson said.

Moye did, however, rule that any money Jane won on the tour would be put in a court trust until the case was resolved. If it is in her favor, she gets the money back. If it is not, the money is to be distributed among other LPGA players.

Gera Explains Her Resignation

NEW YORK (AP) — "I called a good game," says Mrs. Bernice Gera of her one-game career as professional baseball's first woman umpire—an experience that has left her "frustrated and disappointed in baseball."

"If they don't want women in baseball, women should not go to the games," said Mrs. Gera, who vowed to work in the women's liberation movement.

However, the 40-year-old housewife from New York said Wednesday at a news conference that she was not calling for women to boycott baseball games. "Every woman should think for herself."

Mrs. Gera said that when she went on the field as base umpire for Saturday's New York Pennsylvania League contest between Geneva and Auburn at Geneva, N.Y., she knew it was going to be her first and last game.

"I decided that the umpires' meeting that I would resign after one game," said the woman, who had fought legal battles for six years for the right to become a pro baseball arbiter.

Mrs. Gera said it was apparent at the umpires' meeting Friday that she would get no cooperation from her colleagues.

"Umpires must work as a team," she said. "But I went on to the field alone. I had no partner."

The umpire working behind the plate Saturday was Douglas Hartmayer, also a rookie, he had been critical on national television of Mrs. Gera, who reversed one of her decisions and then ejected Auburn Manager Nolan Campbell for arguing.

Mrs. Gera said that when she first tried to get into baseball she was thinking of being an umpire.

"I would have done anything," she said. "I would have shined the ballplayers' shoes. That's how much I love baseball."

Drivers Plan On Qualifying

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Faced with a threatened lockout, drivers planned to report to the Pocono International Raceway today for qualifying runs for the $400,000 Schaefer 500 championship auto race.

Track officials had said Wednesday night that the race, one of three 500 milers sanctioned by the United States Auto Club, would be postponed from Sunday and run when a date is agreed on.

They said the track would not be open for any activity today.

Ted Williams

Williams Is No Longer The "Splendid Splinter"

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—He admits without a struggle (the mirror has already struck the final blow) that he is no longer the Splendid Splinter. But he emphatically (with trace of smile) pronounces that he has not changed otherwise.

"Well," Ted Williams pauses, hedges, putting his stockinged feet back up on his desk in the Texas Rangers' manager's small office, "maybe a little. It was 10, maybe 15 years ago that I began to have compassion for writers. I mean, that they had a job to do, too. That they had families and had to earn a living.

"But I still got this." He picked up a copy of an American League rule book and read the part that says reporters may come into a clubhouse only with the permission of the manager. He laughed and brandished the book like a hammer. "You know, I enjoy talking to writers now. Some things do change."

Don Mincher the first baseman for the Texas Rangers poked his head in the door. "Ted, I'd like you to meet Michael. He's one of our biggest fans," said Mincher. "Michael's had some back trouble, but he's doing fine now." Michael wore a Rangers baseball cap and a brace that could be seen reaching around his neck from under his shirt.

Williams rose from his chair quickly and young Michael appeared a little tree between two tall oaks. "Good to see you, Michael," said Williams, in that clear, strong John Wayne voice. They shook hands. "Keep doin' fine." (To Mincher) "Get him a bat, will ya, Don? Michael oughta have a bat."

One could quickly size up Williams, standing there, capless, in short-sleeve sweatshirt, knickers, stockings with blue stirrups. Natural with a youngster; his eyes crinkly and his smile warm.

His hair is cut short and one wonders if it isn't so to conceal the increasing grayness, just as on even the hottest days he wears a warm-up jacket to shroud his paunch.

If it weren't for the massive atmosphere of the man, his neck and arms could be described as beefy. But he appears lithe—because of his animated talk that combines arms waving, hands darting with descriptive groans, grunts and other sound effects.

He sat back down and began to lace on his rubber-soled baseball shoes. ("Spikes" were for a time past.)

"Ted," a writer asked him, "do you think you could still hit .300?"

Williams, who had a lifetime batting average of .344, the last man to hit over .400 (.406 in 1941), has been retired as an active player since 1960 when, incredibly, at age 42, he batted .316 with 29 homers.

He took the question seriously, but did not hesitate. "No," he said. "I can still make contact, but I've lost the power.

"I got into the batting cage only once this season. It was an off-day in Baltimore. I took about 10 pitches and didn't miss a swing. But when I hit the ball, nothing startling happened.

"I think I can hit the ball about 350 feet now, but that's about all.

"I liked the feel in the box, the digging in. Now, though, a 33-ounce bat feels like it's got weight. Once it was like a feather in my hands."

"What would I be trying to prove?" he asked rhetorically.

He does haphazardly try to watch his weight. He tried a big rubber belt around his middle for awhile. But it burst in public and he had to wiggle to keep it up and he said the hell with it.

"I also don't drink 12 chocolate milk shakes a day like I used to," he said.

One morning not long ago, he had a scare. He had a dizzy spell. His wife demanded he get to a doctor. After a full series of tests, he was found to be in fine health. "No cholesterol," he said. "That's good. Maybe it was from drinking so much orange juice over the years. I used to squeeze and squeeze the oranges in Florida during all those spring trainings."

WHA Is Awaiting Chicago Reaction

WINNIPEG, Man. (AP) — The World Hockey Association, especially its legal staff, was interested today in what the Chicago Black Hawks would say when they broke their silence on Bobby Hull jumping from the National Hockey League to become a Winnipeg Jet.

The Black Hawks, who had withheld comment since Hull signed a multiyear, multimillion-dollar contract Tuesday, to coach and play for the Jets, scheduled an 11:30 a.m. (CDT) news conference.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, threw the puck to the Black Hawks Wednesday when he said: "The league has no official status in this. When they (the Black Hawks) review the situation and consult their advisers, I'm sure they will take appropriate steps."

Gary L. Davidson, president of the WHA that already has taken 34 players from the other league for its first season this fall, said his legal staff was ready to meet any legal tests arising from the signing of Hull or other players.

"I'm confident we can prevail," said Davidson, who also was one of the founders of the American Basketball Association. "I'm sure the NHL, and I can speak for the WHA, would not want a long-drawn battle in court. I was told the ABA paid legal fees of more than $1 million last year."

Davidson noted that, while many professional basketball players have been signed by other teams while their old contracts are still in force, the WHA intends to sign only players whose obligations have been met.

Hull signed a $1.75 million contract—$250,000 a year for the first five years and $100,000 for each of the next five years—with the Jets to play for at least through the 1977-78 season and then continue as coach or executive if he wanted to retire as a player.

Entry Deadline Saturday

Boys and girls aged 9-17 are invited to enter the West Texas Junior Olympics that will be staged in Borger July 8.

The Pampa Jaycees will pay the entry fee for any boy or girl who would like to enter the event. The deadline for entering is this Saturday, so if anyone is interested, he should immediately contact Ed Rowntree at 669-2343.

Further information about the meet can be obtained from coach Robert McPherson, head of Pampa's summer recreation program.

Coffeecake Loaves Have Date-Nut Filling

COFFEECAKE LOAVES — They have a delicious filling of dates, nuts and an orange-sugar mixture.

By Cecily Brownstone
Associated Press Food Editor

Cooks who like to bake with yeast and who want really delicious coffeecake loaves might consider using the following recipe. These loaves are among the very best we've ever tried — delightful to serve fresh from the oven or, several days after they're baked, heated or toasted.

One hint: if you toast slices of this coffeecake do so under the broiler or in the oven part of a toaster-oven. If slices are put into regular toaster slots, the filling will ooze out.

DATE NUT LOAVES

6 1/2 cups (about) flour
2 packages instant blend dry yeast
1 cup milk
1 cup water
1/2 cup (1/4-pound stick) butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 eggs
2 teaspoons soft butter
1 cup cut-up pitted dates
1/4 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts or pecans
grated rind of 1 orange mixed with 1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons sugar

In large electric mixer bowl thoroughly stir together 2 1/2 cups of the flour and the undissolved yeast.

Into a 1-quart saucepan turn the milk, water, 1/2 cup butter, 1/2 cup sugar and salt; heat, stirring constantly, until warm (120 to 130 degrees). Pour into flour-yeast mixture. Add 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk; reserve remaining egg white. Beat at low speed, scraping bowl, for 1/2 minute. Beat at high speed for 3 more minutes. With a spoon, gradually work in enough more flour to form a soft dough.

Turn out dough on a floured smooth surface; knead until smooth — 5 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl; turn to grease top.

Cover and let rise in a warm draftfree place until doubled — 45 to 60 minutes.

Punch down dough. Let rest 10 minutes. Divide into 2 parts. Turn out 1 part onto a floured pastry cloth. With a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll to a 15 by 7 inch rectangle; spread with 1 teaspoon soft butter; sprinkle with 1/2 cup dates, 2 tablespoons walnuts and half the orange-sugar mixture. With flat side of spatula press filling into dough.

Beginning with 7-inch side, roll up to form a loaf; pinch together edges, sealing well. Place in a well-buttered loaf pan (9 by 5 by 3 inches), sealed edge down. Fill and shape second part of dough the same way.

Cover and let rise for 20 minutes. To allow steam to escape, with cake tester or metal skewer, make holes to bottom of pans, 1 inch apart, over tops of loaves. With a razor blade make 3 diagonal slashes 1/2 inch deep across top of each loaf. Brush loaves with reserved egg white; sprinkle with the 2 tablespoons sugar. Let rise as previously until doubled — about 20 minutes.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 35 to 45 minutes. After 20 minutes place a sheet of foil over loaves to prevent over-browning. Turn out loaves on wire racks; turn right side up; cool.

Makes two 2-pound loaves.

SUGAR PAINT AND SPICE MAKES COOKIES NICE--Now that school is out, lots of young girls will be learning some of the simpler steps of cooking this summer guided by their own copies of "My First Cookbook" from Imperial Sugar Company. Written especially for beginners, ages 6 to 12, the cookbook features easy-to-read recipes, such as "Animal Crackers" frosted with "Sugar Paint Icing."

Child's Cookbook Aids In Developing Interests

Now that school is out and children have fewer planned activities, summer is a good time for them to practice some of the homemaking arts.

Young girls enjoy helping in today's happy kitchens where pushbutton cooking is an expected convenience. An occasional morning or afternoon devoted to cooking is one of the best ways to help develop their interests and skills.

A little girl's enthusiasm for learning more about cooking comes with having a cookbook of her very own. Because of her, Imperial Sugar Company is offering "My First Cookbook," prepared especially for beginners, ages 6 to 12, and to help mothers guide their efforts.

The recipes start with "You will need" and go on to "Work Plan," then "Serve" and "Idea." "You will need" tells the child which ingredients and utensils are needed. "Work plan" gives directions to prepare the recipe. "Serve" tells how and when to serve and gives yield. "Idea" contains variations and other serving suggestions. The ingredients are listed in the order in which they are used and the directions for "doing" are in proper sequence using four basic steps.

A variety of 28 recipes are in the cookbook, including interesting titles such as "Tiny Turtle Salad," "Mad Hatter's Breakfast," "Devilish Eggs," "Funny Face Pancakes" and especially for little boys, "QuarterbackMeatloaf."

The 36-page book is divided into nine sections, including beverages, breads, eggs, main dishes, salads, vegetables, as well as cakes and cookies, candy, and other sweets that children enjoy making most of all.

"My First Cookbook" explains cooking terms, shows how to measure and how to use utensils. It gives important safety steps and helps to establish good cooking habits. Learning to cook at an early age develops good table manners, table setting habits and teaches youngsters how to entertain guests. And since it involves counting, measuring, weights and proportions, cooking is a practical lesson in mathematics for children.

"Imperial Sugar-Paint Icing" and "Animal Crackers" are typical of the recipes included in the book—fun to make, easy to make, nutritious and delicious to eat.

ANIMAL CRACKERS

You Will Need:
2¼ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
¾ cup Imperial Granulated Sugar
½ cup shortening
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract
1 large egg

Sifter, measuring cups and spoons, mixer or beater, knife, pastry board, rolling pin, cooky cutters, baking sheet, wire rack.

Work Plan:
Sift flour, salt and soda together. Cream sugar, shortening, vanilla, almond extract and egg. Mix the two mixtures thoroughly. Shape into a 3-inch roll, wrap in wax paper and chill. Slice in ½ inch slices. On lightly floured pastry board, roll each slice and cut with animal cutters. Bake at 350 degrees F. about 8 minutes. Cool on wire rack.

Serve:
Serve plain, with a tall glass of cold milk, or frost with Imperial Sugar-Paint Icing, recipe on page 15.

Idea:
Cut cooky in paper doll shapes and design clothes to be painted on with tinted icing.

IMPERIAL SUGAR-PAINT ICING

You will need:
2¼ cups Imperial 10X Powdered Sugar, sifted
4 teaspoons soft margarine
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons milk

Sifter, measuring cups and spoons, small spoon, food coloring, pastry brush or clean water color brushes, small bowls.

Work Plan:
Mix all ingredients and blend thoroughly. Use white; or divide icing into several small bowls and tint each batch a different color.

Serve:
Decorate Animal Crackers, using clean pastry brush and clean watercolor brushes, if mother says you can. Slivers of gum drops, sprinkles (brightly colored cake decorations), colored sugar and chopped nuts are fun, too.

Idea:
Make Animal Crackers and have a tea party for your friends. Cooky dough rolls may be kept in refrigerator for several days if they are tightly wrapped; you can bake a few one day and the rest another day.

"My First Cookbook" is being distributed now through a free offer to users of Imperial Pure Cane Sugar. Readers may obtain a copy by sending name, address (zip code must be included) with the red pure cane block marked "Pure Cane" cut from any Imperial Sugar package to Imperial Sugar Company, Sugar Land, Texas 77498. The cookbook comes postage and handling charges paid by Imperial Sugar Company.

When Busy as Bee Broil Ham Slice for Honey of a Feast

Getting outdoors for gardening or golf can cut into a cook's time for meal preparation. When you're busy as a bee, broil a ham slice and brush with a honey glaze for a hurry-up yet hearty meal that brings the family buzzing 'round the table.

Orange juice and mustard blend with honey to make a delicious nectar for glazing smoked pork. With the first bite they'll proclaim you're a honey of a cook.

Select an inch-thick ham slice for broiling, suggests Reba Staggs, home economist of the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Whether cooking in range broiler or on outdoor grill, use moderate, not high, heat for juicy tender meat.

Honey-Glazed Ham Slice

1 slice smoked (fully-cooked) ham, cut 1 inch thick
¼ cup orange juice
¼ cup honey
1 teaspoon prepared mustard

Combine orange juice, honey and mustard and cook slowly for 10 to 12 minutes, stirring occasionally. Set regulator for broiling. Place ham slice on rack in broiling pan and insert pan in broiler so top of meat is approximately 3 inches from heat. Brush with orange glaze. Broil on first side 8 to 10 minutes, turn, brush with orange glaze and broil 6 to 10 minutes longer or until meat is heated through, brushing occasionally with orange glaze.

MADDOX

A Time of Change In Eating Patterns

By GAYNOR MADDOX

This is the season for the outdoor barbecue: It's a way of life adjusted to warm weather.

But our way of living has changed generally over the past several years. Today, there are more meals on the run, more meals that really are not meals; more snacking and less actual food preparation in the kitchen.

The underlying causes of these changes are more leisure time and a change in eating patterns.

"The point is that with more affluence and a greater desire for leisure time the consumer's demand for services has been growing faster than the demand for food itself," states Dr. David L. Call, Babcock Professor of Food Economics, Cornell U.

Writing in the May edition of Journal of The American Dietetic Assn., he observes: "An extension of this trend toward greater consumption of services has been the growth in the institutional or 'away-from-home' food market, particularly that segment referred to as 'fast food service.' . . .

"The ultimate in services will be deliveries of cooked hot food to the home ready to serve on the table . . ."

Nutritional quality of our food is still the major health consideration. Processed foods, including new types of food substitutes and food analogs (look alike but different basically) are being questioned. But unfortunately, they are being questioned only by a small section of the consumer public. Nutrition is being relegated to second place in the buyer's mind.

And what about the overall quality of our changed diet patterns? Will changes in the kinds of food we eat affect those of us who have heart disease, obesity, or anemia?

"Our food system has a high degree of inertia. Those who wish to alter the types of food produced face many obstacles. It should be realized that pressures to alter our dietary patterns can have important economic and other effects throughout the system."

"Those who wish to see animal fat consumption limited often don't realize the tremendous economic impact of such a shift in basic dietary patterns. It is little wonder that producer groups fight so hard against such suggestions. Their economic livelihood is at stake."

Even so, food processors are facing a severe challenge and they might as well face up to it. Nutrition must be considered as an integral part of food, too.

The growing shift of many consumers to "health" or "natural" foods implies a fear of processed foods.

"I think our food supply is safe and nutritious. Granted improvements may be needed—it probably could be safer, but these problems will not be solved in the headlines," concludes Cornell's distinguished professor.

Doctor in the Kitchen®

HUNGER AND APPETITE

Hunger and appetite are not the same thing, scientists tell us. Hunger is when you have been deprived of food — and it is not a pleasant sensation. Appetite, on the other hand, is largely a pleasant sensation. Hunger, scientists say, is an "unlearned response." Appetite, the desire to eat, is largely a learned response.

Hunger has a basis in one's physical condition. Research studies have related hunger to the level of sugar in the blood. There is also a gland in the brain, that, according to one theory, regulates food intake. A fall in the level of blood sugar stimulates the feeding center of the hypothalamus and hunger pangs begin. On the other hand, a rise in the blood sugar level stimulates the satiety center of the hypothalamus and a feeling of satiety results.

More information is needed before the food-intake regulating mechanism is fully understood.

The Desire To Eat

Desire to eat, it is believed, stems from both hunger and appetite, but appetite can function long after hunger is satisfied. Overeating can stem from an appetite that is uncontrolled.

It is not thought that human appetite is guided by instinct. Nor is appetite an indication of the kinds of nutrients people need. At one time we believed infants might be able to select from an "array of foods" those which they needed to make a good diet. This is now discounted. Once children have tasted various foods they develop their likes and dislikes on factors that are not related to nutrient needs.

An article a few years ago in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition discussed a practice known as "earth eating" — found among preschool children and poorly fed pregnant women in lower socio-economic groups in the United States and in developing nations. Eating earth is part of a practice known generally as "pica" — the eating of certain foods such as corn starch or non-food items such as clay and plaster.

Cultural Influences

It has been suggested that this unusual craving is due to nutrient lacks in diet. However, cultural influences must be at work because when sufferers were given vitamin and mineral supplements they still practiced pica. Emotional needs, it is felt, may be the cause.

I have discussed all this because I feel there is a relationship with the United States problem of overweight. People accustomed to poor eating habits continue to cling to those habits even though they are not good for them.

There undoubtedly are both physical and cultural bases for problems such as overweight in our country. As medical and nutrition science progress we will find the answers. Meantime, if you are overweight, we may not be able to make it easier for you, but you can help yourself by starting your exercise with pushing yourself away from the table — before you are satisfied, not after.
