3 years in the Sparrow's Nest

Photos by Timothy P. Howsare

Above, the mother and daughter team of Jill and Cindy Crawford are the brains behind the Sparrow's Nest, a unique antique and collectables store at 120 N. Cuyler St. Below, there's no Yellow Brick Road, but you can still pretend you are on a magical journey strolling the aisles of the store.

Putting The Sparrow's Nest into a single "retail category" would be difficult because the store has so much to offer in its historical location on North Cuyler Street.

Along with the items store owner Cindy Crawford and her daughter Jill Crawford stock on the display racks, about 40 individuals renting space in the store sell everything from Texas-made jellies and salsa, to women's clothing, to antique furniture to unique, handcrafted items that would add charm to any home or office space.

To mark its third anniversary, the store is holding a customer appreciation event from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today.

"It's worked out really well for us," said owner Cindy Crawford. "We want to say thank you to Pampa and all area customers for three wonderful years."

All women's clothing will be 15 percent off, and sales on other merchandise in the store range from 10 to 50 percent off.

"We usually get a good crowd on Saturdays but the sale brings in even more people," Jill said.

Customers who stop in can taste for free some of the goodies in the store — salsas and jellies made right here in Texas.

Everyone who shows up can enter a drawing for a $100 gift card that can be used at the store.

For Harvester football fans past and present, homecoming mums and other homecoming collectables are now on sale.

These items are custom-made by store employee Christine Kiper.

The store is located at 120 N. Cuyler St. and the phone number is 806-669-1900

Woman hospitalized for stab wound

Staff Report

The Pampa Police Department at approximately 2:30 p.m. Thursday responded to a 911 call on a family fight in the 1000 block of Varnon Drive.

Upon arrival, officers determined that one of the persons involved in the incident had received a stab wound to the arm. The wound was not life-threatening. The 40-year-old female victim was transported to the hospital by Pampa EMS.

The victim in the case has chosen not to pursue charges against the suspect, claiming the stabbing was accidental, said PPD spokesman Brian Massey.

"Detectives are working on completing the investigation, but it is believed that no charges will be filed at this time due to the lack of a cooperating victim," Massey said.

Landscaping and beautification as hobby, career

By John Lee
jclee@thepampanews.com

Beautification is among the top items of a city's list whether it be a metropolis like Dallas, a mid-sized town like Amarillo or a small town like Pampa. You see it everywhere in these cities whether it is improving their downtowns or painting their overpasses.

For Losoya and Son Landscaping owner Eddie Losoya, landscaping is all about beautification and working outside, which is what he loves about it.

"I love the beautification part of it," Losoya said. "I love to take something that doesn't look

Kiwanis of Pampa installs new board members

By John Lee
jclee@thepampanews.com

"Thank you to Robert (Benyshek) for a great year and thank you to everyone for entrusting me with this position," new Kiwanis of Pampa president, Doug Cates, said.

Doug Cates was selected by the Kiwanis of Pampa board of directors to be their president from 2013-2014.

Kiwanis of Pampa held a banquet Thursday night to install not just the newly selected president, but also the other officers for the 2013-14 year.

The board members are Bud Lewis, Dick Stowers, Jerry Foote, Mac Smith, Pat Bagley and Bill Kindle.

The 2012-13 president, Robert Benyshek, has to serve on the board for one more year as the past president. Bruce Riehart will continue as the secretary of the club.

The treasurer, as the title suggest, is in charge of the financial and budget presentation at the board meetings. This office will be held by Lacy Ramson.

James Burton and Janet Gregory will be vice president and president-elect respectively.

Kiwanis operates on six objects, according to their website www.kiwanisone.org:

• To give primacy to the human and spiritual rather than to the material values of life.

• To encourage the daily living of the Golden Rule in all human relationships.

• To promote the adoption and the application of higher social, business, and professional standards.

• To develop, by precept and example, a more intelligent, aggressive, and serviceable citizenship.

• To provide, through Kiwanis clubs, a practical means to form enduring friendships, to render altruistic service, and to build better communities.

• To cooperate in creating and maintaining that sound public opinion and high idealism which make possible the increase of righteousness, justice, patriotism, and goodwill."

Thursday was also the last night for one of the cooks, Pat Terry, who has served lunch for the Kiwanis meetings for several years.

For more information on Kiwanis club, go to www.kiwanisone.org. For more information on Kiwanis Club-Pampa, contact Bruce Riehart at riehart@nts-online.net.

Davis announces bid for governor

By Jay Root
The Texas Tribune

Amid widespread reports that she plans to run for Texas governor, state Sen. Wendy Davis on Thursday released details about the announcement of her future plans next week.

Davis will make the announcement at 3 p.m. on Oct. 3 in the auditorium where she received her high school diploma in 1981 — the Wiley G. Thomas Coliseum in Haltom City.

Davis had previously announced the date, but until Thursday she had not given details about the time or location.

Politico reported Thursday that Davis is telling top Democrats she is running for governor, though she and aides are declining to confirm anything with their names attached to it.

"Next week join your friends and neighbors for the moment when I announce what I plan to do next," Davis said in an email blast to supporters.

"We'll be gathering at the same coliseum where I received my high school diploma — and I really want you to be there with me."

Davis became a political celebrity for Democrats when she helped temporarily derail a restrictive abortion bill with an hours-long filibuster in June.

as good [and turn it into something great]. Beautification is what it is all about."

Losoya and Son Landscaping started June 8, 2009, but Losoya said that he has been in landscaping for 12 years. Losoya said that while they do have a Facebook page, the company has gotten most of their business through word-of-mouth advertising.

"I love working outside and it's something I have always loved to do," Losoya said. "I have had office jobs before, but working outside is just what I like to do."

Losoya said the strength of his company rests on the fact that when they start a project they are there from start to finish.

"When we start a project we go from zero to 100 percent," Losoya said. "Start to finish, we don't jump hoops, we start it and we finish it. That is one of the things that has really helped our business. People know that when we come in, we don't leave until we finish."

Losoya and Son Landscaping's busiest times are from spring right up until winter. Even though winter is considered their slowest time, it doesn't mean that Losoya and his company get to take a break.

Losoya and Son Landscaping also does Christmas lighting, flag stone, leaf cleanup and flag stone work. As long as it is above freezing, the company will work.

Losoya said that his favorite project they have done is at Leverich Companies on Price Road.

"We did all the landscape work there and all their stone work," Losoya said.

Beautifying and bringing work to Pampa is one of the passions for the company.

"Beautifying Pampa is one of the things [that we want to do]," Losoya said. "We want to Continue to take care of our community and bring work to our community."

But Pampa is not what Losoya and Son Landscaping is limited to. They have done work in Panhandle, Canadian and Amarilo.

The city commission has approved Losoya to start a small-scale nursery at the corner of Wells and U.S. Highway 60, which will be run by his wife, Cecilia.

"It's great, being able to control it (as the landscaper and the client)," Losoya said.

Losoya said that he couldn't have done this without the help of the community of Pampa.

"Thanks to the community for their support of Losoya and Son Landscaping," Losoya said.

Losoya has 17 employees who work under him.

His son, Andres Losoya, plays wide receiver for the junior harvester football team. He also has a daughter, Celeste Gonzales, who will graduate Texas Tech University in May.

Losoya and Son Landscaping is locally-owned by Eddie Losoya and can be reached at 806-662-0497. They also have a Facebook page, http://on.fb.me/1fN6tWU.

Job seekers warned of false Employer Scams

Submitted by TWC

AUSTIN — The Texas Workforce Commission is warming Texas job seekers to be aware of unscrupulous people posing as potential employers who may try to obtain personally identifiable information such as date of birth, debit card or bank account numbers, Personal Identification Numbers (PIN), or Social Security numbers.

Reported incidents include job seekers receiving unsolicited online and/or telephone communications from individuals posing as potential employers from job matching websites such as TWC's WorkInTexas.com. These false employers may request to interview job seekers over the phone or Internet and then, following the interview, offer them a position on condition that they cash a company check and/or send a money order to purchase equipment or training needed to begin work with the company.

Texas residents are reminded that legitimate employers will never ask for money as a condition for starting work. Job seekers also should never provide personally identifiable information to an employer prior to a face-to-face meeting.

TWC encourages individuals to check their bank or other online accounts for unusual activity if they suspect they are victims of a similar scam.

Stricken United plane captain dies in Boise

BOISE, ID (AP) — Idaho officials have identified the United Airlines captain who died after suffering a mid-flight heart attack as 63-year-old Henry Skillern of Humble, Texas.

Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg performed an autopsy on Skillern late Friday morning and confirmed that he died at a Boise hospital of a heart attack.

The captain was piloting United Flight 1603 from Houston to Seattle when the emergency occurred Thursday forcing an off-duty pilot to take over control of the plane.

Two Madigan Army Medical Center doctors onboard performed CPR, according to Jay Ebbeson, a spokesman for the hospital at Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

Ebberson says the two are captains and radiology residents who were returning to the base near Tacoma, Wash., from a medical course at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

They were unavailable Friday to talk about the incident, he said.

The plane made an emergency landing in Boise and Skillern was still alive when he was taken to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, but he died during treatment, spokeswoman Jennifer Krajnik said Friday.

The news lit up social media in the early morning hours Friday.

Passenger Ken Martin told Seattle TV station KOMO a first-year resident doctor sitting next to him volunteered to help perform CPR.

She told Martin the pilot appeared to weigh over 300 pounds and was taken into the first class cabin where CPR was performed.

Passenger Bryant Magill described a calm scene onboard.

"I'm really impressed with all the flight attendants," Magill told KOMO. "They kept themselves calm. They kept it professional. There was no panic on the plane."

United Airlines spokeswoman Christen David said another off-duty United Airlines pilot was onboard and helped land the plane. She declined to immediately release details of the situation.

Bush feeling 'pretty good' after heart procedure

IRVING (AP) — Former President George W. Bush says he's feeling "pretty good" after undergoing a heart procedure last month and able to go mountain biking and play golf.

"I'm a little more risk averse on the mountain bike, but I'm exercising," Bush told The Associated Press on Friday after kicking off the competitive portion of his golf tournament for wounded military members.

"It's really important to stay fit and not vegetate," he said.

This is the third year that the George W. Bush Presidential Center has hosted the Warrior Open for military members wounded in Iraq and Afghanistan. Twenty-four military members, many with prosthetic legs, were participating in the two-day tournament in the Dallas suburb of Irving. Participants include active and retired members of the military.

"I'm inspired every year to be in the midst of people who suffered significant injury and refuse to quit," Bush told the AP as the participants teed off.

"Golf is an unbelievably challenging sport and it's especially challenging, for example, if you are trying to drive with one leg — and yet they've overcome their difficulties and are really good golfers. The talent out here is pretty amazing," he said.

Bush had a procedure on Aug. 6 to have a stent inserted after a blockage was discovered in an artery during his annual physical. The 67-year-old who lives in Dallas is known as a fitness buff. While in the White House he ran about three miles four days a week, and cross-trained with swimming, free weights and an elliptical trainer. When doctors found his knees were getting damaged, he turned to mountain biking.

Bush said he was fortunate that the blockage was found, and was pragmatic about his recovery.

"I feel pretty good. I've learned that aging can be difficult if you let it be difficult," he said.

My new favorite producer

JUDITH SMITH

There are movie makers and movie stars idolized by an adoring public. I admit I've looked starry-eyed at a few stars, and I have my favorite producers such as Spielberg and Ron Howard. Lately, however, I have found a new favorite — Ken Burns.

Burns has created so many documentaries, and I have yet to find one that I haven't thoroughly enjoyed and learned from, even his story of baseball. The most recent production, "The Dust Bowl" illustrated how devastating this natural disaster was, and how far-reaching. There are most certainly people here in Pampa who knew or are related to someone who experienced the Dust Bowl first hand.

My own grandparents and my mother and uncle probably drove through the dust storms as they moved from Illinois to California, driving their old Model A Ford along Route 66.

We have recently been watching "The National Parks" on our local PBS station, and through Burns' artistry we have been introduced to National Parks we never knew existed. The history of the parks and the people who were involved in their creation and maintenance makes me appreciate the parks even more. Between us, my husband and I have only visited eight of the 59 parks—Grand Canyon, Joshua Tree, Everglades, Great Smoky Mountains, Rocky Mountain, Mammoth Cave, Badlands, and Channel Islands. We'd better get started if we're going to visit the rest!

Ken Burns has made 24 documentaries, including two that are still in production. We have invested in two sets of DVDs from the series: "The Civil War" and "The War," a documentary about World War II. I'm sure there will be more titles added to our collection because we both feel our grandchildren would and should benefit from watching them.

Burns's documentaries have a personal feeling to them, almost as though one were right there with Lewis and Clark as they made their way west, or sitting with Mark Twain or Frank Lloyd Wright. We car enthusiasts enjoyed "Horatio's Drive." For those who have never seen it, "Horatio's Drive" is the hilarious 1903 saga of the first transcontinental automobile trip. On a visionary whim and a $50 bet, Dr. Horatio Nelson Jackson became the first person to drive an automobile across the continent. His arrival in New York City, after every imaginable breakdown and delay, proved that the "horseless carriage" really did have a future. Sounds a bit like my first long road trip in the now-departed Corvair.

"Prohibition", another Burns presentation, follows the rise and fall of the 18th Amendment, and its part in the Roaring 20's. The descrip-

Fear in churches and malls, hope for the world

BLOSSOM MATHEWS

They say that "no news is good news." Well, there's been a lot of news lately.

It takes some major world events to rope me back into the 24-hour news cycle. Over the past year, I've pushed back from the news to some degree, tired of the biased reporting (on both sides), bickering and general depressive nature of human power struggles.

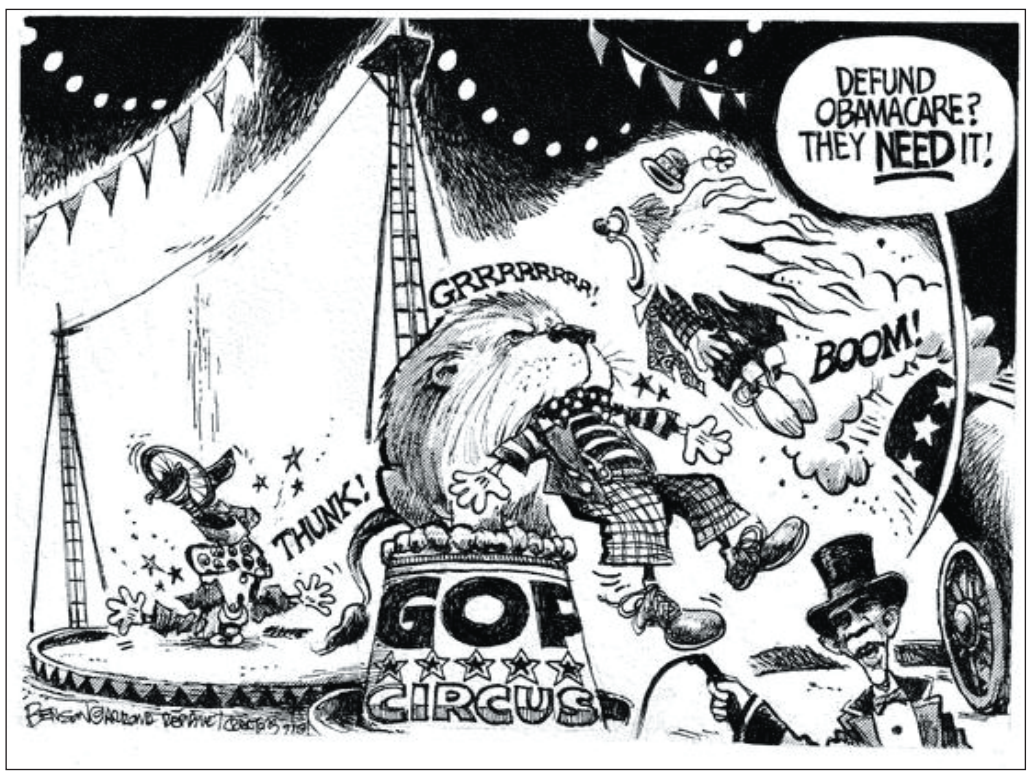

But this past Sunday, as our church family gathered for worship, a suicide bomber had already entered All Saints Church of Pakistan, killing 81 people and wounding 120 more. It didn't matter that this Christian congregation is far removed from my experience, speaking a language foreign to my own and living in a reality which most of us could hardly fathom. Instead, they were simply fellow human beings coming to what should have been a place of refuge, meeting violence and death in its place. Can we imagine living in fear that going to church on Sunday morning could bring an attack upon our friends and family? These Pakistani Christians were my brothers and sisters in Christ, adults and children alike, whom I know I will see in eternity. But for now, this world has been robbed of their influence, and their families have been robbed of their love.

Christians make up only about 4 percent of Pakistan's population of 180 million. We Americans sometime talk about being persecuted as Christians today. Sure, Hollywood and popular culture preach beliefs contrary to our own, making fun of Christians who can't keep up with the tide of culture. Both media and peer pressure serve to mold our nation with a force as strong, and subtle, as that force which formed the deepest canyons over time. But the truth is that regardless the changes we see in our nation, we can still attend church without fear for our own safety. And we can go to the mall with little to no concern that terrorists will take over, as happened in Nairobi, Kenya, this weekend. Unlucky shoppers who tried to leave were given a litmus test question regarding the name of Mohammed's mother. Those who got the answer wrong (her name was Amina) were shot.

Do we now understand the import of Jesus' words in John 16:33, "In the world you face persecution. But take courage, I have overcome the world!" Much of the Bible was written by and for people much like these Pakastani and Kenyan people who live in fear for their lives, knowing that real faith has consequences. Whether it was the people of Israel struggling against foreign oppressors or the early Christians facing tyrants like Nero who burned Christians for light in the streets, the Scriptures are rooted in the reality of persecution.

The simple truth is that there will be no end to these modern day acts of violence. Some may say that we can control human action, whether though war and occupation or through legislation. But violence is a story as old as time, starting when Cain rose up to kill his brother, Abel. There is nothing new under the sun. While we will do all we can to live and offer peace in the world, I won't place any bets that basic humanism will save the day. I'm putting my chips on Jesus. I'll live my life for him and place my eternal hope in him. The biblical promise that Jesus will one day set everything straight (as Christians around the world pray each week through The Lord's Prayer) is my hope. So, I'll live for that hope and act as if it is already taking place through the actions of those who seek to live Christ-like lives. Through gifts to foreign-aid, mission work, and various national efforts, we seek to offer support to those in need. But in addition to these practical solutions, the hearts of American Christians should be broken and calling out in prayer to God for the sake of our brothers and sisters facing injustice and persecution around the world.

Blossom Mathews is pastor at First United Methodist Church in Pampa.

MDA thanks fire department for Fill the Boot campaign

There are no words to describe the generosity of the Pampa citizens who contributed to the Muscular Dystrophy Association through the Fill the Boot Campaign on August 24, 2013.

The Pampa Fire Department's Fill the Boot campaign raised $9,237.82 this year! In part, this will help fund MDA's worldwide research program. However, the revenue also helps send local children with muscular dystrophy to MDA Summer Camp at no cost to their families.

Our heartfelt thanks goes out to the City of Pampa for their continued support of MDA and Fill the Boot. Of course, the biggest thanks of all, goes out to the true heroes of our community, Pampa Fire Fighters. Their hard work and dedication, along with the generosity of the citizens of Pampa, will be of great value to the local families that rely on MDA for vital services and support.

Non-germane President Obama

LAWRENCE KUDLOW

One of the biggest mistakes President Obama is making in the current debate over the threat of a government shutdown and the failure to raise the debt ceiling is his repeated and stubborn refusal to negotiate . In speech after speech, Obama crusades against negotiation. Has anyone ever seen anything like this? He's the president. Supposedly, he's the chief executive. But Obama doesn't want to dirty his hands by talking to Republican congressional leaders.

Now, this is an odd paradigm given the fact that the president and his lieutenants are willing to negotiate with Russia's Vladimir Putin, Syria's Bashar al-Assad, and most recently, Iranian President Hassan Rouhani. They are a motley crew at best and a bunch of dictatorial mass-killing thugs in truth.

What does this say about the president's strategy for the economic health and wealth of his own country, the United States of America?

Lately, there have been reports of a possible White House meeting on the so-called continuing-resolution, CR, budget, but there's no discussion of the debt ceiling. And you really can't do one without the other; the deadlines are only a couple of weeks apart.

And then comes Obama's extraordinary claim that in the history of the United States, non-budget items have never been attached to the debt ceiling. He is essentially calling Speaker John Boehner and the other GOP congressional members extortionists.

Well, according to "Fact Checker" columnist Glenn Kessler of The Washington Post, the president's claim is completely wrong. Going back decades, the debt ceiling bills have been linked to campaign-finance reform, Social Security, ending the bombing in Cambodia, voluntary school prayer, banning bussing to achieve integration, and proposing a nuclear freeze. Way back in 1982, then-Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker unleashed a free for all, allowing 1,400 non-germane amendments to the debt ceiling legislation. Kessler rightly gives Obama four Pinocchios.

Actually, in terms of renewing the government's borrowing requirement, Boehner is proposing what I would term financially related, germane amendments. Though final decisions have not yet been made, the speaker is talking about a one-year delay of Obamacare, including all taxes and regulations related to the health plan, instructions for revenue-neutral tax reform, and additional instructions for entitlement reform, all as part of a one-year extension of the debt ceiling. Only the passage of the Keystone pipeline — a pro-growth job creator — could be termed non-germane.

But then again, the president himself is beginning to look non-germane. He won't negotiate, and he won't compromise. Apparently, he won't even discuss.

Look for Obama's polls to keep falling as a result of his intransigence. It's a weak 2 percent economy. Job creation is actually slowing. And a large chunk of the new jobs are part-time and low-wage, largely as a functional response to Obamacare.

So Republicans are essentially going it alone. Can you blame them? They'd like to avoid a government shutdown and a Treasury borrowing crisis.

After passing a continuing resolution that includes defunding Obamtion of the video reads, in part, "Prohibition raises questions about means and ends, individual rights and responsibilities, and the role of government in our lives." This seems to be an ongoing battle, only with different subjects.

I've missed seeing some of the programs, like "Thomas Jefferson" and "The Central Park Five" and hopefully will catch up on some of the other programs.

I hope Ken Burns continues to make documentaries for many years!

acare, the House GOP is sending the CR over to the Senate. No one knows how this is going to turn out, and in all likelihood, it won't pass. Harry Reid said he's going to send it back minus the Obamacare defunding.

But a big question here is whether the Senate version of the CR will include the budget-cutting sequester, something the Obama Democrats obsessively hate. The sequester has held down spending, a solid economic-policy success, with more to come if the GOP keeps its eye on that ball. Republicans cannot lose sight of the sequester benefits leading to a smaller government share of the economy and freeing up resources to invest and grow.

One more point on the Republican defunding strategy. Current political pundit and former President George W. Bush advisor Karl Rove has warned the GOP about a recent poll showing that independents oppose defunding Obamacare if that risks a temporary government shutdown. While they dislike Obamacare, according to Rove's Crossroads GPS poll, independents oppose the shutdown scenario by nearly 30 percentage points. The defunding-shutdown threat is something Republicans must avoid.

I believe that a one-year delay of the individual mandate would pass the Senate if it ever came to a vote. It would be safer politically for the whole Republican Party. But unfortunately, no compromise can be reached on this or anything else if President Obama just refuses to show up.

I hope he enjoys his meetings with Iran and Syria. But vastly greater benefits will accrue to the U.S. if the president would make a deal with the GOP in the House and Senate.

Preparing for shutdown, government plans furloughs

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a third of federal workers would be told to stay home if the government shuts down, forcing the closure of national parks from California to Maine and all the Smithsonian museums in the nation's capital. Workers at the State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs wouldn't be around to process visa and passport applications, complicating the travel plans of hundreds of thousands.

These would be just some of the effects of a government shutdown that furloughs 800,000 of the nation's 2.1 million federal workers.

It could hit as early as Tuesday if a bitterly divided Congress fails to approve a temporary spending bill to keep the government running.

Supervisors at government agencies began meetings Thursday to decide which employees would continue to report to work and which would be considered nonessential and told to stay home under contingency plans ordered by the Office of Management and Budget.

Details about shutdown plans for each agency were expected to be posted on the OMB and individual agency websites by Friday afternoon, according to union officials briefed on the process. Formal furlough notices would be sent on Tuesday, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

"Fifty percent of our members may be locked out of work altogether during this shutdown," said J. David Cox Sr., president of the American Federation of Government Employees. "Half will be expected to continue to work without a paycheck."

Not all of government would cease to operate. Services considered critical to national security, safety and health would go on as usual, such as border patrol, law enforcement and emergency and disaster assistance. Social Security and Medicare benefits would keep coming, for example, but there likely would be delays in processing new applications.

Active-duty military personnel are exempt from furloughs, as are employees of the U.S. Postal Service, which doesn't depend on annual appropriations from Congress.

Union officials said preparations for a possible shutdown have created anxiety and uncertainty among federal workers and among those who have an expectation of government services.

"Federal agencies have had to devote time and resources to develop yet another crisis plan, distracting agencies from their critical missions," said Colleen Kelley, president of the National Treasury Employees Union.

"And, if the government shuts down, the public will be further harmed by the loss of vital services people need and depend upon."

The last shutdown, which took place during the Clinton administration, lasted three weeks, from Dec. 16, 1995, to Jan. 6, 1996.

At the Smithsonian, a majority of the 6,400 employees at 19 museums would be furloughed, said spokeswoman Linda St. Thomas. Museum doors would remain closed as of 10 a.m. Tuesday, ruining vacation plans for thousands of tourists expecting to see the National Air and Space Museum or view art at one of the museum's galleries.

The National Park Service was expected to announce the specific impact of a shutdown on Friday. A contingency plan prepared in 2011 — the last time a shutdown loomed — said all 401 of the country's national parks would close and cease activities except for those necessary to respond to emergencies.

Federal courts plan to keep operations going for at least 10 business days in the event of a shutdown — roughly through Oct. 15 — using fees and other funds.

But after that, only essential work would continue and each court would determine what staff is needed, according to a Sept. 24 memo from U.S. District Judge John Bates, director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts.

Federal jury trials should continue as necessary, the memo said, and staff performing essential work at federal courts would report to work without getting paid. They would be paid when appropriations were restored.

During the 1995-96 shutdown, 20,000 to 30,000 applications by foreigners for visas went unprocessed each day, while 200,000 U.S. applications for passports went unprocessed, according to a report by the Congressional Research Service. The report also described delays in the processing of firearm applications by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms.

The Environmental Protection Administration would essentially be closed to most of its approximately 17,000 employees, except for those involved in shutting down systems, tasked with emergency cleanups, or doing legal work in ongoing federal cases, said John O'Grady, president of the local union of EPA employees in Chicago.

Texas woman slain outside 8th grade football game

GILMER (AP) — An East Texas man is accused of killing a woman outside an 8th grade football game.

KLTV-TV reports that police in Gilmer arrested 32-year-old Jonathan Ray Shepherd in the death of 29-year-old Cheyenne Green.

Police say Green was found lying on the ground in a parking lot at Gilmer High School, where an 8th grade game between Gilmer and Gladewater was being played.

Authorities suspect her death was related to domestic violence.

Police say Shepherd will be charged with murder and arraigned later Friday.

Shepherd did not have an attorney listed in jail records. A call to his home went unanswered.

sunday horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Sept. 29, 2013:

This year you open doors and make friends feel like family. As a result, you'll discover a new sense of intimacy. If you are single, you might not be able to tolerate that status this year. Are you ready to commit yet? If the answer is "yes," look to summer to meet Mr. or Ms. Right. If you are attached, the two of you hang out together a lot and enjoy your friends and the social scene. You will be successful in networking, and you'll expand your circle of friends. LEO can be a lot of fun.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You'll turn up the fun level just by being yourself. A conversation could become rather intense, and you might find that the other party is distancing him- or herself. Remember, everyone needs to feel comfortable in this situation. Tonight: Play the game of life.

This Week: Use your high energy at the beginning of the week.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Tension seems to build, and you might decide to head in your own direction. You likely will need and/or want some personal time at home. A conversation with a difficult friend could cause a rift. Know what you are asking before you start talking. Tonight: Relax.

This week: Your ingenuity solidifies a decision.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ You might be surprised at how dynamic a get-together for brunch could be. It is as if someone took the restraints off. Greater insight into a key loved one could become possible. You will understand what makes him or her tick as a result. Tonight: Hang out.

This Week: Use Monday and Tuesday to the max. The rest of the week is a downhill slide.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ You might want to head in a different direction or do something in your own way. You'll feel empowered yet somewhat constrained by logistics. You can indulge a loved one by tapping into your imagination. Tonight: Your treat.

This Week: Your leadership brings the desired results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

This Week: Negotiate your way through a problem.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Quack! Wisconsin bill would legalize duck races

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A Wisconsin lawmaker is introducing a bill, no pun intended, that would legalize duck races.

Well, not real ducks but the plastic ones with numbers on the bottom. Nonprofit organizations commonly race the little plastic ducks as fundraisers. Participants usually buy a raffle ticket corresponding with a duck's number.

The first to float across the finish line wins.

State Rep. Andre Jacque circulated a proposal Thursday to legalize the races. He says the village of Mishicot was warned by the Wisconsin Department of Justice that its annual rubber duck race amounts to illegal gambling.

Jacque's bill creates an exemption for duck races, similar to laws in Minnesota and Michigan.

Rubber duck races in Wisconsin include the "Ducktona 500" in Sheboygan Falls and the "Lucky Ducky Derby" in Menomonee Falls.

On Oct. 7, 2013 a group of Texas Panhandle organizations will join the National Steinbeck Center to retrace the journey that The Grapes of Wrath's Joad family took along America's Route 66 through Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona at the height of the Dust Bowl — toward California and their hopes of a better life.

Amarillo College, the Amarillo Museum of Art, Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum and Panhandle PBS are teaming up to take part in the journey, and will provide the following opportunities for Texas Panhandle Residents to get involved:

Monday, October 7th

• 10:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon and 1:00 -3:00 p.m. Panhandle PBS at Amarillo College

Share your story: Oral History Collection at Panhandle PBS, Gilvin Broadcasting Center at 2408 S. Jackson on Amarillo College Washington Street campus. Open to general public to share stories on overcoming adversity. Please call station staff at 371-5222 to reserve your interview time.

In addition, Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum will be collecting oral histories for this project on October 7th. These stories will have the same theme, overcoming adversity, and will be included in the documenting of the journey.

In 2012, Amarillo College, Amarillo Independent School District, Amarillo Museum of Art, Amarillo Public Library, Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, Panhandle PBS and Region 16 ESC presented Days of Dust - a community exploration of the topic of the Dust Bowl. Many outcomes from this effort are still available for the Panhandle to explore the Dust Bowl era, including classroom lesson plans, art work explorations, a traveling trunk for area schools, and more. Those resources may be accessed through www.daysofdust.org

The Steinbeck Center's trip this fall will be led by a team of artists, including a playwright, a filmmaker, and a woodblock print artist who will be actively engaged in exploring modern day stories of the human experience of struggle and resilience. Along the route, this team will lead programs and workshops at cultural arts and education organizations and will collect oral histories exploring the human capacity to carry on from individuals they meet on the road.

Amarillo College, the Amarillo Museum of Art, Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, Panhandle PBS and the National Steinbeck Center are excited to partner in this dynamic Journey.

The Steinbeck Center's artists will be blogging throughout the Journey, and will invite public collaboration and feedback through multiple social media channels. Jersey residents spent less time at shore

SEASIDE HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — Many New Jersey residents spent less time at the shore than usual this summer, according to a poll released Wednesday, giving credence to officials' oft-repeated worries that visitors would stay away during the lucrative season because of a perception that Superstorm Sandy had wiped out the entire coastline.

Nearly 40 percent of respondents to a Monmouth University-Asbury Park Press poll spent less time at the Jersey shore than usual this summer, with many deterred by a fear that businesses had not reopened after the devastating Oct. 29 storm.

Poll respondents who did not visit the shore as often as usual were asked why.

Nearly half said the expectation that some businesses would not be open after the storm was a factor, including 25 percent who considered it a major factor and 22 percent who said it was a minor factor.

Dennis Behsman and his wife, Sandy, usually spend part of their summer in Ocean or Monmouth counties, scenes of the worst destruction, but stayed away this summer.

"They made it sound on the news like the entire area was just wiped out and washed away," he said.

On their way down this week to the largely spared southern New Jersey shore town of Ocean City, they decided on a lark to stop off in Seaside Heights, home to one of the storm's most-photographed images — a roller coaster that plunged into the ocean when the pier that supported it was swept away.

"It was fine," Behsman said. "A couple of the houses looked like they had some minor damage, but the news made it sound like everything was that way."

The erroneous perception that the entire Jersey shore was wrecked gave rise to a ubiquitous "Stronger Than The Storm" ad campaign, which drew criticism from Democrats for including popular Republican Gov. Chris Christie in the spots during his re-election campaign.

Christie defended the ads as necessary to protect the state's crucial tourism industry, which accounts for close to $40 billion a year.

Overall, nearly 6 in 10 New Jersey residents polled said they visited the shore this past summer.

That's down from the 70 percent who said in February that they planned to do so. Only 9 percent said they made an extra effort to visit more frequently this year.

Erratic weather also played into decisions to stay home or go elsewhere. Twenty-two percent who stayed away cited weather as a major factor; 23 percent called it a minor factor.

The telephone poll of 783 New Jersey adults, conducted Sept. 6-10, has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

The poll comes as the anniversary of the storm approaches.

While many heavily damaged communities have made major strides, others are having a harder time.

Destroyed buildings still need to be torn down, and many homes still standing need extensive renovations that are keeping their owners living elsewhere.

Many need to be elevated to comply with new federal flood insurance regulations.

Despite the lingering challenges, many visitors say they are gratified there are still many places for tourists to patronize.

Joan Bosko, of East Brunswick, said she and her family visit the shore repeatedly each year and did so again this year.

"I love this place," she said, eating a raspberry and vanilla frozen custard swirl on the Point Pleasant Beach boardwalk.

"I grew up here as a kid. Everything we love is here, and things are fine. We did everything this year that we always do. People need to keep coming down here."

PeeWee Romines celebrated his 90th birthday, Saturday, September 21st, at the Honey-do Spoiler Party Barn. Hosted by his family.

Pampa Harvesters take on run-heavy, unbeaten Vernon

With a lightning delay for the second consecutive home game for the Harvesters, the team was looking to slow down another undefeated team.

This time the mentality of the offense of the Vernon Lions was to run the ball down the throat of the Harvesters. In the first quarter they did just that.

The offense of Vernon scored four touchdowns before the first quarter was even over. Three of them came off the legs of senior running back Orlando Haymon. The last of them came from senior running back Dany Valverde.

Something to keep in mind about the Vernon running backs are that they have rushed for more than 1,000 yards combined this season. The Harvesters also had a turnover during a kick return in the first quarter that gave Vernon a short field. The score at the end of the first quarter 27-0 Vernon.

Vernon started with their short field and used it to drive down the field and score, extending their lead 35-0. The Harvesters struggled to muster any offense in the second quarter, and Vernon continued to control the ball and the clock with gashes of five to six yards up into the secondary of Pampa. After a three and out from the Harvesters, the Lions drove the ball 60 yards down the field for another Vernon touchdown, 42-0 Vernon. The Harvesters finally had a drive put together toward the end of the first half, but got stopped after three rushing attempts.

After an in-game lightning delay, the steady train of storms forced the game to get called at 42-0 Vernon.

There will not be a make-up game and the Harvesters will start a two-game road trip next Friday beginning in Canadian.

American football overseas, good idea or bad idea?

JOHN LEE

The NFL has flirted with the idea of creating a franchise based in London ever since the NFL International Series kicked off in 2005. Occasionally the Buffalo Bills will have a home game hosted in Niagra Falls-partner Toronto, but for the most part the more recognizable international games are held at Wembley Stadium in London.

While I think this is a very fun idea and may be successful one day, I don't see it happening in the next five to 10 years. I have multiple reasons why I don't think it will work, beginning with the old adage that the NFL is the big fish in the proportionally small pond that is American sports.

Everywhere else in the world, soccer is the premiere sport. Now I am not saying soccer is better than NFL football, but I am simply saying that soccer is larger across the globe than it is in the United States. Finding a way to take the soccer die-hards away from their sport and watch an American sport will be difficult. But who knows, if MLB and the NBA can do it, maybe the NFL can.

The second reason it would be hard is, the players wouldn't like it and how many would actually go through with it. There are only five players in the NFL that played their college ball in Hawaii, which is five hours away from San Francisco (For comparison sake, London is seven hours away).

I bring this up because, in my opinion, playing in London and playing in Hawaii is about the same. Many players don't like the idea of London because of time away from families.

"Just personally speaking, I probably wouldn't sign over here because of the fact that every road trip is going to be three, four, five days away from your family," Vikings defensive end Jared Allen told the Star-Tribune.

The 2000s NFL actually had a handful of players go to Europe and play and then come (sometimes back) to the NFL, such as Kurt Warner. I get the impression that the NFL in Europe was more of a developmental league for players looking to go to the NFL. Kind of like the Canadian Football League, except the CFL is a pretty profitable league itself. (Watch one of their games sometime; they are fun.)

A third reason is the market. If you're going to make a London franchise, why don't we have a Hawaii franchise? The market is there clearly, University of Hawaii is one of the most popular teams in the Mountain West Conference. It seems like they are always on ESPN.

So back to London. Back in the 1990s there was the NFL Europe. Before that there was the World League of American Football. London had a team, the Monarchs, from 1991 to 1998, under the WLAF umbrella.

The WLAF didn't feel like the London-based team had been successful, despite winning a World Bowl in 1991, so they became the England Monarchs. Following that the team closed down.

What's the point? We would have a European Jacksonville Jaguars if they make a new team.

Here is what I propose: If the NFL really wants to tread on previously stormy waters and build off the success of the NFL now, try to remake the NFL Europe and they can even make an NFL Pacific for Hawaii and Asian teams.

If those end up being successful, try to make one of their franchises a franchise in the NFL U.S.

I am not closed-minded to the NFL having a team in London. But if it didn't work the first time, what will make it work the second time? The NFL is a growing multi-billion dollar industry.

Just like any other industry, it is only a matter of time before it tries another shot at markets overseas.

Thursday: Angels get beat on walk-off HR in Texas again 6-5

ARLINGTON (AP) — Reliever Michael Kohn and the Los Angeles Angels can't seem to end a rather strange streak.

Texas pinch-hitter Jurickson Profar homered leading off the ninth, and the Rangers beat the Angels with a walk-off homer for the fourth straight time at home in a 6-5 victory Thursday night.

Kohn (1-4) was on the mound for the last two, having surrendered Adrian Beltre's winning blast that completed Texas' three-game sweep on July 31. Geovany Soto and Leonys Martin won the first two games of that series with long balls.

"It's definitely weird, four walk-offs in a row," Kohn said. "It's not the ballpark. It's just a matter of executing pitches."

Profar was on the bench when the Rangers had the first four-error inning in their 43-year history in Texas.

When he got the call as a pinch-hitter, the rookie erased that bad memory and gave the Rangers at least another day of realistic playoff hopes with a shot about 10 rows into the stands down the right-field line.

The Rangers matched a win by Cleveland for the third straight night to stay within a game of the Indians for the second wild-card spot in the American League.

Cleveland beat Minnesota 6-5, and Tampa Bay stayed a game ahead of the Indians after finishing a three-game sweep of the New York Yankees.

Texas manager Ron Washington said he was just looking for a leadoff hit when he went with Profar after sending Lance Berkman to the on-deck circle in the bottom of the eighth.

"And he gave me the opposite of what I was looking for," Washington said. "But it was huge."

Joe Nathan (6-2) got the win after striking out two with a runner at third and one out in the top of the ninth.

"We're alive another day," said Texas starter Matt Garza, who gave up 11 hits in 5 1-3 innings but allowed just one earned run because of the defensive meltdown behind him. "That's what we're playing for right now. We're just playing to get in any way we can do it."

Josh Hamilton, back in Texas with a chance to damage the postseason hopes of a team he helped lead to consecutive World Series in 2010 and 2011, went 1 for 3 with two walks. He was on third in the ninth when Mark Trumbo struck out to end the inning.

Moments before his at-bat, Trumbo was in the on-deck circle when he had to duck to avoid a line drive from Kole Calhoun. Trumbo went to the dugout but emerged about a minute later.

"It grazed me," said Trumbo, who snapped an 0-for-25 skid with three hits, including a tying single in the seventh after Calhoun led off with a triple off Tanner Scheppers. "Sure, it was a little bit scary. No blood, no foul."

Other scores:

San Diego 3, Arizona 2 (11 innings)
Milwaukee 4, N.Y. Mets 2
Atlanta 7, Philadelphia 1
San Francisco 3, L.A. Dodgers 2
Tampa Bay 4, N.Y. Yankees 0
Baltimore 3, Toronto 2
Cleveland 6, Minnesota 5
Kansas City 3, Chicago White Sox 2

49ers run all over Rams in 35-11 rout

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Expected to be an up-and-comer if not a full-fledged contender, the Rams have been, well, the same old Rams so far this season.

A 35-11 home loss to San Francisco on Thursday night dropped St. Louis to 1-3, a disappointing start for a young team that appeared on the upswing after going 7-8-1 last year in Jeff Fisher's first season as coach.

Five days after the Cowboys' DeMarco Murray gashed St. Louis for 175 yards rushing, veteran 49ers running back Frank Gore was dominant, too, gaining 153 yards on 20 carries that included a back-breaking, fourth-and-1 34-yard touchdown run in the final minute of the second quarter that put the 49ers up 14-3.

Gore also had runs of 18, 27 and 17 yards. Overall, San Francisco had 219 yards on the ground.

"It's disgusting," Rams defensive end Chris Long said. "It really is just disgusting. That's not who we are, but if we keep playing like that it'll be who we are."

The other side of the running game was just as horrific for St. Louis. The Rams entered the game 29th in rushing offense, and that got worse, with 18 rushing yards in 19 attempts. Second-year back Daryl Richardson, the replacement for departed free-agent Steven Jackson, carried 12 times for 16 yards.

The Rams haven't had a winning season since going 12-4 in 2003, the swan song of the "Greatest Show on Turf" years. Until last season they were an NFL-worst 15-65 over the previous five seasons. Last season's improvement, and what appeared to be a strong draft, seemed to have St. Louis on the verge of a turnaround.

Maybe not. After beating Arizona to start the season and losing by just a touchdown at Atlanta, the Rams have been outscored 66-18 in the past two games.

Girlfriend of Ex-Patriot Hernandez is indicted

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — The girlfriend of former New England Patriot Aaron Hernandez has been indicted on a perjury charge in connection with the killing of his friend, a Massachusetts prosecutor said Friday, bringing to five the number of people facing charges in the case.

A grand jury indicted Shayanna Jenkins, 24, on a single count in relation to the investigation into the June 17 killing of Odin Lloyd, Bristol County District Attorney Samuel Sutter said.

It wasn't clear what led to the charge. Sutter's spokesman, Gregg Miliote, said he could not comment until her arraignment, which has not been set.

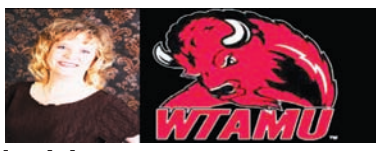

Lloyd, a 27-year-old semiprofessional football player from Boston, was found shot to death in an industrial park in North Attleborough, Mass., near Hernandez's home, where Jenkins also lives. Lloyd had been dating Jenkins' sister.

Rivera closes as baseball great

NEW YORK (AP) — Herb Raybourn first came across Mariano Rivera in 1988, when he scouted a youth tournament in Panama and saw a slim 17-year-old playing shortstop. Raybourn wasn't interested at all.

"I didn't think he would be able to hit in the big leagues, as far as the long ball," he recalled last week. "I just couldn't project him playing in the big leagues as a shortstop, so I just gave up on him."

Raybourn returned in February 1990 for another tournament, by then the director of Latin American operations for the New York Yankees. He was unpacking in his hotel room when he received a phone call from Claudino Hernandez, the catcher on the Panama Oeste team, who told him he had to see a certain pitcher.

Raybourn didn't know Rivera had switched to the mound. So he arranged a workout behind Rivera's home in Puerto Caimito.

"It didn't even have a mound. It was just a slope," Raybourn said. "He threw nine pitches. I saw enough at nine pitches."

And with that, a star was born. Or in the making, anyway.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Sept. 30, 2013:

This year will be pleasant for you, especially if you enjoy your friends and fulfill your long-desired goals! You seem to be fortunate in nearly every area of your life. Your career blooms in July 2014. You'll start to see the results of your efforts in the period that follows. If you are single, let others know of your decision to maintain that status. Some of you will meet several potential life mates. If you are attached, the two of you will need to deal with a certain amount of the unexpected. Stay goal-oriented and focused. LEO can be a strong personality.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ The unexpected continues to make daily life exciting for anyone around you. Whether you're working on a love letter or coming up with a new business idea, your creativity seems to be at work. Tonight: Kick up your heels and be noticed. Don't worry about tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ You will want to spend more time at home than you have in a while. Pressure could build, and you might feel more comfortable staying at home. However, be aware that a family member likely will lose his or her cool as a result. Just do your thing. Tonight: Make a favorite dinner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ So many people seek you out that you easily could be overwhelmed by all of the requests and invitations. Listen to what people are sharing. Try to avoid getting into a tiff, if possible. Screen your calls in order to accomplish what you want. Tonight: Off to enjoy yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ Be aware of others' needs. Recognize that you have a tendency to go overboard. You might not worry about the damages now, but you will later. Be careful if you become angry or frustrated, as you could be accident-prone. Tonight: A little restraint might help.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Others will be delighted to have you around, at least until they realize the level of your energy. In fact, if you can't express yourself the way you want to, you could become difficult. Be open to positive changes. Someone's reaction might surprise you. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★ Trust your sixth sense about what is going on behind the scenes. You might want to rethink a recent decision you've made once you either confirm or deny what your intuition is telling you. Don't swallow your anger; make a point to choose your words with care. Tonight: Lie low.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★ Understand that someone you care about suddenly could become difficult. You do not have to react or do anything. Stay calm and centered. You will see this person realize the error of his or her ways. A neighbor could be on the warpath. Tonight: Beam in more of what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Someone you look up to seems to be bent out of shape. You might be taken aback by this person's behavior at the moment. If you are smart, you will keep your opinion to yourself. This person will calm down, and you will feel more relaxed as a result. Tonight: A must appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★ At first, you might be upset by what is going on. The unexpected could throw your plans in several different directions. You will be forced to gather your own facts, and as you do, you will notice that you are detaching considerably. Tonight: Think about taking off for a few days.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You absorb a lot of information, and quite quickly at that. Nevertheless, you might feel challenged by someone you look up to. Your limits could be tested, as well as your ability to handle someone else's less-than-perfect behavior. Tonight: Spend time with a close friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★ Someone you know quite well might come barreling toward you like an enraged animal. How you handle this person's behavior could determine the long-term durability of this bond. Think carefully about the ramifications. Tonight: Out and about. Others seek you out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You might be trying to do so much that you could be accident-prone as you speed from one person or activity to another. You might need to take some time to sit down, discuss what needs to get done immediately, and revamp your schedule. Tonight: A close encounter.

Dear Abby…

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl who's having a disagreement with my parents about dating. There's this guy, "Connor," who likes me, and I'm very comfortable with him. His older sister and I are good friends.

The trouble is, my parents have strict rules against dating and I think it's unfair. I think I'm mature enough to date, and I know right from wrong. My friends say I'm very mature for my age, and they approve of Connor because he's friendly and has an outgoing personality. I have tried talking to my parents about this, but I always end up in tears.

Can you tell me how I can convince them to give this guy a chance? — GROWN UP AT 14, PRINCE GEORGE, CANADA

DEAR GROWN UP: A sure way to show your parents you're mature enough to date would be to show them you're a responsible person. Do they know when they ask you a question that they'll get an honest answer with no evasion? Have you shown them that you respect their curfews? Do you do the chores that are expected of you without having to be reminded? Is the same true about your homework?

If the answer to these questions is yes, then do they KNOW Connor? Do they know his parents? If they do, they might feel more comfortable about your seeing him, IF it's in a group rather than one-on-one.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 13 years old and I recently enrolled in a new school. I have met two boys, "Jake" and "Cory," and I have been crushing on both of them.

I really like Jake for everything, but I'm not sure he likes me back. I like Cory for his looks and popularity, and I'm positive he likes me because he said so. Should I ask Jake to go with me first, and if he says no, rebound to Cory? — CONFUSED IN RAYMOND, MISS.

DEAR CONFUSED: The school year has just started and it's a little early to be asking someone to "go" with you. If you take your time — say, wait a month — Jake may find the courage to tell you he likes you, too. If he doesn't, tell Cory you're interested in him and see if he still feels the same way about you. (The odds are 50/50.) And who knows? In another month, there might be a third guy.

DEAR ABBY: My brother thinks I eat too slow, and I think he eats too fast. He claims it's rude to eat slow and make others wait for you. I say eating slowly is healthy, and it's better than wolfing down your food to keep up with the people you're with. Who's right? — AT MY OWN PACE IN EDDINGTON, MAINE

DEAR AT YOUR OWN PACE: You're both right. If you eat so slowly that the rest of the people at your table must wait for you to finish, ask them to proceed with their dessert and coffee so they won't have to sit there and watch you masticate. And wolfing down one's food causes some people to overeat, which is why weight-loss specialists advise against it.

DEAR ABBY: What do new fathers hand out today instead of cigars? — NONSMOKER IN SAVANNAH

DEAR NONSMOKER: Because so much more is now understood about the dangers of tobacco, many new fathers today hand out small gift bags of candy instead — blue for a baby boy or pink for a daughter.

Couts chosen as Texas Tech Parent of the Year

SUBMITTED

Cheryl Couts of Pampa was selected as a Texas Tech Parent of the Year.

The Texas Tech Parent of the Year Award seeks to recognize parents and guardians who have made a significant impact and contribution to the life of a Texas Tech student. By supporting their children, these parents are in turn supporting Texas Tech University.

Students were required to submit an essay, collage or video explaining why their parent should be the Texas Tech Parent of the Year.

The submissions were judged on the students ability to convey the merit of their parents outstanding involvement in their lives.

Once we received all submissions, the essays were read by the Parent of the Year Committee which consisted of various staff members around the Texas Tech campus and were able to find our five winners. The five winning parents were recognized during the pre-game of the Texas Tech vs. Texas State football game on Sept. 21.

Parents received a commemorative plaque and copy of their students essay.

Judge William D. Smith, District Court Judge of the 84th District, recently swore in CASA volunteers Kevin and Dyan Harrison of Perryton in the Ochiltree County Courthouse. CASA of the High Plains served 147 children last year with 33 volunteers and staff; there is a need for more volunteers in the High Plains area. You may contact the CASA office in Pampa by calling 806-669-7638 to inquire and hear more about becoming a CASA volunteer.

Officer impostor confronts detective

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Authorities in Colorado say a police impersonator picked the wrong man when he approached an undercover detective and demanded he hand over drugs as part of a police drug bust.

According to the Pueblo Chieftain, the undercover detective was in a cellphone store speaking to a clerk when a man came in demanding to know why the detective had so many phones and accused him of being a drug dealer on Monday. He demanded the detective "give him the drugs," according to the paper.

The detective then turned the tables on the impersonator. He showed the man his own law enforcement credentials and advised the man he was under arrest for suspicion of impersonation of a peace officer.

Authorities say Roland Herrera was taken to jail.
