MLK march

The annual Martin Luther King Jr. symbolic march begins at 2:30 p.m. today at Martin Luther King Jr. Park, located west of the Northeast YMCA. This year's march is themed "Developing New Perspectives: The King Legacy and Human Services." March participants are requested to assemble at 2 p.m. They may bring church or personal banners. The march will end at Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, 303 E. Shandon. Following the march, Luther Baker of the University of Texas will speak at the church at 3 p.m.

Streets closed

Castleford Street, from Garfield to Polo Parkway, will be closed beginning at 8 a.m. Monday due to drainage construction on Castleford. Motorists in that area "will need to be cautious and observe all barricading and warning signs," city officials said. Midlanders who routinely use that street will need to find alternative routes.

Tax increase

LUBBOCK — Residents overwhelmingly approved a half-cent sales tax increase on Saturday in hopes of luring a military finance center and 4,000 jobs to the West Texas city. "I feel tremendous," said Mayor David Langston, who had championed the project. Langston said voters, who rejected the tax increase last year, approved it this time for several reasons. "We had a specific project for the funds to be used for. The second thing is that the (city) council was committed to getting it passed," he said. Langston added that voters also knew this time that he would support a recall of the tax if Lubbock isn't picked for the military project. The vote brought 26,630 people to the polls, with 21,974, or 82.72 percent, voting in favor of the tax, and 4,589, or 17.28 percent, voting against.

Janis Joplin day

PORT ARTHUR — The music may be different now, but the feeling is the same for hometown fans of gutsy blues and acid-rock legend Janis Joplin. Texas Governor Ann Richards has declared Tuesday to be Janis Joplin day in Texas. /11A

'My heroes have always been Cowboys'

Team's success can alter person's outlook, doctors say

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff writer

In a flat economy, with the threat of layoffs always looming, there are bigger-than-life events that tend to lift the spirits of average people. And no place is this more true than in sports.

From the grade school to the professional level, there are moments that shape history — that shape individuals — and even to some degree, give a new outlook on day-to-day living.

That's why it is no surprise to see and hear Midlanders talk about the success of the Dallas Cowboys, who two years ago were a long way from the mountaintop.

From the locker room at the local health club to the banter between beers at the local tavern, the talk is Cowboys. The talk is Super Bowl. The talk is Jimmy Johnson, Emmitt Smith and Troy Aikman ... America's Team II.

These people, whose lives appear uneventful, now sparkle with talk of a championship vs. the usual daily grumbling about a stagnant oil and gas industry.

That mood — that sparkle — doesn't surprise local psychologists, who point to sports and other memorable events as an avenue of escape that some people take to feel better about themselves and others.

Dr. Richard Stafford said as a child those feelings rose and fell with the success or failure of past Cowboys teams.

"It's like some events that have occurred in space or successes surrounding an Olympic team. If people identify with it, the reality of their own situations hasn't changed, but they feel better."

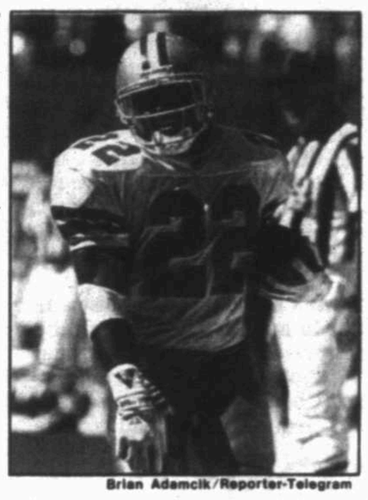

Stafford said while life won't change as a whole, for at least one moment or one day, people can look at things differently. "Actually it can be a positive thing as long as it is not carried to an extreme or as long as someone doesn't allow it to carry their emotions. That's unhealthy."

Dr. James Olsen, a psychologist and professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, agreed.

"Sure it's positive. If you can identify with a winning team, it tends to take your mind off things ... It distracts you from day-to-day reality," he said.

Midland Police Sgt. Andy Glasscock displays a replica of a pipe bomb. Glasscock is the Police Department's only bomb technician.

Bomb squad is one-man unit

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

The rash of bomb and extortion threats in the Midland-Odessa area during the past month have not only made business owners anxious, but they have also kept one Midland police officer very busy.

Sgt. Andy Glasscock works in the detective division of the Midland Police Department.

He also handles the bomb threats.

"I am the Midland bomb squad," he said, laughing. "When officers refer to the bomb unit, they mean me."

Glasscock has been with the Midland Police Depsrtment for 12 years. Two years ago, he decided to undergo the training required for becoming an Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) technician, or bomb technician.

"My wife thinks I'm brain-damaged," he said. "You know, just a bigger boy with bigger toys. But, I have always been interested in the different types of explosives, how they are put together and things like that."

U.N. rejects Iraq's latest flight offer

■ Weapons inspectors must fly over Jordan, Saddam says, and threatens to shoot down allied planes that enter Iraqi airspace.

Associated Press

Raising the prospect of renewed bombing raids against Iraq, the United Nations on Saturday rejected Baghdad's latest offer on allowing inspection flights into the country, saying its conditions were unacceptable.

Baghdad on Saturday bowed to pressure from the world body and promised safe passage for the flights, but said the U.N. planes must fly over Jordan, not two zones where allies have barred Iraqi aircraft.

Iraq also threatened Saturday to shoot down allied planes that enter its territory, and a confrontation simmered on the border with Kuwait over six police posts Baghdad should have torn down.

"The response is that the Special Commission cannot operate effectively if it is forced to enter the airspace of Jordan," said Tim Trevan, spokesman for the commission designated to destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

He refused to elaborate on why the inspectors opposed using the longer route over Jordan. But he reiterated that Iraq was obliged to let in U.N. weapons inspectors from any point, under terms

Marines find 1,000 tons of arms

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somali civilians led U.S. troops Saturday to bunkers overflowing with more than 1,000 tons of arms and ammunition. A Marine spokesman called the find "the mother lode of arms caches."

U.S. officials rejoiced over the discovery but indicated it would do little to curb clan warfare. They also revealed Saturday that at least three of six Somalis killed in a firefight between U.S. troops and bandits were civilians.

Bandits holding up a truck carrying about 15 civilians had opened fire on a six-vehicle U.S. Army patrol Friday near the village of Burlego, northwest of Mogadishu. The American forces returned fire, killing six Somalis.

U.S. officials originally said the six were gunmen. But Marine Col. Fred Peck told reporters Saturday at least three of them were innocent civilians.

Four of the six wounded also appeared to be civilians, Peck said.

Clintons bid farewell to Arkansas friends

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bill Clinton of Arkansas bade wistful farewell to friends and neighbors Saturday, then embarked on the journey that will culminate in his inauguration as the nation's 42nd president. "I ask you to pray for us," he said. "I ask you to pull for us."

"It's time for us to go," the 46-year-old president-elect told several thousand people squeezed into an airport hangar for a send-off that had all the earmarks of a campaign rally.

"The road ahead is difficult," said the man who soon will inherit responsibility for managing the economy and grappling with world trouble spots such as Iraq, Somalia and the former Yugoslavia. Still, he said, "I am confident that together we will do this work."

Clinton, his wife Hillary and their daughter Chelsea flew to Charlottesville, Va., site of Thomas Jefferson's Monticello home, on the first leg of their trip to Washington. They arrive in the nation's capital today by bus, roughly retracing the path Jefferson took to his own inauguration in 1801.

Clinton is to be sworn in at noon on Wednesday, a

Midlander talks in Stanton about dealing with AIDS

STANTON — With reports of as many as 16 families dealing with AIDS in this small, conservative town of 2,500 people, residents Thursday tried to learn how to help their friends and neighbors cope with the crisis.

More than 200 people gathered at the Martin County Community Center to hear the testimony of Midland woman Judy Warren, whose brother died of AIDS in October 1990.

The meeting, the first of a proposed series of community education events in Stanton, was organized by James Johnson, minister of the Stanton Church of Christ, personal triumph, but also a symbolic passing of power to a younger generation of leadership.

FAREWELL: Clintons' road to Washington begins in Virginia

Preparations were well along for the inauguration on the terrace of the Capitol and the accompanying hoopla — the traditional parade down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House, the evening balls, the private receptions by the dozen and Thursday's open house at the White House.

President Bush, the odd-man out, was spending his final weekend as commander-in-chief at the presidential retreat at Camp David, the better to give packers and movers space to prepare the White House for the next occupant.

Clinton, the first member of the baby boomer generation to win the White House, departed with a gift from Little Rock Mayor Jim Dailey, a sign carved from Arkansas wood and bearing the inscription "Don't Stop Thinking About Tomorrow." It is the name of a Fleetwood Mac song that was frequently played at Clinton campaign rallies and was being played in the background in the hangar.

"I don't know when I will be home next or how often I can be there," said Clinton, who was born in the tiny town of Hope, Ark., and has been governor of his state for 12 of the last 14 years. "But you'll always be there with me. Arkansas runs deep in me and it always will."

Clinton noted he began his campaign 15 months ago, and said he did it reluctantly on a personal level, "but with determination because I believe our country needed to change course, had to face the challenges of this time and had to secure a future for our children.

"In November the people of American decided to give me the chance to lead that change, to face those challenges and secure that future. And I will do my best."

His remark that "It's time for us to go" was a variation on the campaign motto first uttered by Vice President-elect Al Gore at the Democratic National Convention in July, when he said of the Republicans, "It's time for them to go."

Gore and his family greeted the Clintons' plane in Virginia, as did several hundred others who turned out on a near-freezing night. The president-elect thanked the crowd for being "a part of our beginning."

Earlier, Clinton and his daughter took one last walk around the grounds of the governor's mansion in Little Rock. They walked to a tree distant from the house, and when they turned back, she wiped a tear from her eye.

The president-elect spent most of the day packing and attending to last-minute details. "They're doing great," he said of his movers during a picture-taking session in the mansion.

A nearly full moving van was parked outside the governor's mansion. Clinton resigned as governor Dec. 12 but was permitted to remain in the mansion.

One box being loaded on the van was marked "Clinton hats." Another said "BC Suits. Room 219 White House." Another wardrobe box said "Chelsea Bedroom. Do Not crush."

Asked if he regretted leaving, Clinton said, "No. I've worked through that. I'm ready to go now, actually eager."

As the movers finished up, Clinton took time out for a jog. Scrambling down the bank of the nearby Arkansas River, he set Chelsea's pet frog free. "She decided to leave it here where it can live a normal life," he said.

Press secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton has been making considerable progress on his inaugural address. She said he has been sketching it out over the past few days in longhand on legal pads.

"But I don't think he'll get much work done today," Myers said.

In Washington, hundreds of tourists peeked into tents being set up for the folk festival, as vendors from around the country set up their stalls.

"It's like a warm day in spring," a souvenir vendor near the Washington Monument said in the January chill. "We've got much bigger crowds than usual."

On Sunday, the Clintons and Gores will take their last bus tour before assuming office — from Monticello to Washington,

Clinton heads for his inauguration with U.S. troops engaged in Somalia and headed for Kuwait and with allied forces poised to strike again in southern Iraq.

And a naval barricade was forming off the coast of Haiti to keep would-be refugees — encouraged by Clinton's campaign promises for relaxed immigration policy — from making the risky trip to Florida.

"Domestically, the central things that have changed are that the deficit is much bigger ... than had been projected and health care costs reached 14 percent of our gross national product in 1992," he said in an interview in U.S. News and World Report.

Clinton already was being criticized in some quarters for breaking campaign promises.

His decision to enforce, at least for now, the Bush administration policy of forcibly returning Haitian boat people was a retreat from his campaign promise to overturn that policy.

And he used the higher deficit figures to justify a decision to reconsider the middle-income tax cut that was a major campaign theme last winter in New Hampshire and other early-primary states.

TONS: Firefight kills civilians, officials say

(From 1A)

"We are not sure but (the Somali gunmen) might have been trying to use civilians as shields," Peck said. "As far as we can determine the soldiers did what they were trained to do. They were fired on at night and they returned fire."

He said one of the dead and one of the wounded Somalis were thought to be bandits, two of the dead were still unidentified and one of the wounded was a woman shot by the bandits before the soldiers arrived.

He said Marines also shot a Somali man in Mogadishu on Saturday after he aimed a pistol at a Marine. The Marines said the man went down, but his condition was unknown because they didn't look for him after he was hit.

Civilians have been the hardest-hit victims of fighting between rival clans and a famine made worse by rampant looting of aid. Some 350,000 died last year as a result, prompting the U.S.-led military operation to stop the catastrophe. Another 2 million are considered at risk.

It was civilians who led U.S. Army police to the 30 bunkers of arms and ammunition, south of the town of Afgooye, 20 miles west of Mogadishu.

Peck said the ordnance would fill 150 to 200 five-ton trucks and included surface-to-air missiles, 500-pound bombs, small arms, machine guns and ammunition.

"I don't want to start using cliches but you would have to say this is the mother lode of arms caches," said Peck.

But he indicated the seizure might not do much to cripple the clans in a country armed to the teeth with weapons smuggled in or left from when the superpowers supplied Somalia with weaponry during the Cold War.

"It seems to be an old Somali military cache, but some clan could have been drawing arms and small arms ammunition from it," said Peck.

Meanwhile, warlord Ali Mahdi Mohamed, who controls northern Mogadishu, returned to the capital and said he was confident all 14 Somali factions would honor a cease-fire signed Friday in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

But with communications all but nonexistent in Somalia, it was not clear when word of the agreement would filter down to Somali clan gunmen or if they would abide by it.

The faction leaders also agreed to hand over all heavy weapons to the U.S.-led coalition forces in Somalia.

The leaders created a committee to deal with questions about who will participate in a national reconciliation conference, scheduled to take place in Addis Ababa in March.

Gen. Mohamed Farah Aidid, the warlord controlling southern Mogadishu, told reporters in Addis Ababa on Saturday that autonomous regions should be created before talks begin on an interim central authority. The proposal would legitimize the fiefdoms warring clans have carved out of Somalia.

He said a national reconciliation conference should first discuss ways of creating a police force and restoring essential services.

Doctor admits he belonged to Nazis SS

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The German president-elect of the World Medical Association admitted Saturday that he belonged to the Nazi SS before World War II, saying German youths did not realize Hitler's aims at the time.

Dr. Hans J. Sewering, 76, also denied accusations that in 1942 he sent a retarded teen-ager to her death by transferring her from a hospital to a clinic known to have practiced euthanasia.

Sewering is to assume office next Oct. 1. But doctors in Germany and the American Medical Association are pressuring him to withdraw.

He defended his time with the SS-Cavalry, saying many German youth joined such organizations after the Nazis took over, not realizing Hitler's plans.

He said after he finihsed his medical studies he was assigned to the tuberculosis hospital near Munich. While there, he is accused of approving the transfer of 14-year-old Babette Froewis to Eglfing-Haar clinic, known to have practiced euthanasia under the Nazis.

Dr. Michael Kochen, of Goettingen University said Sewering's SS past and allegations that he contributed to the girl's death make him unacceptable for the presidency of the medical association.

The Chicago-based American Medical Association, a member of the World Medical Association, asked on Jan. 7 that Sewering withdraw his name.

Saddam challenges U.N. forces with latest actions

By Victoria Graham
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — On the second anniversary of the start of the Gulf War, President Bush and his Iraqi nemesis are locked in a test of wills. Saddam Hussein appears intent on provoking a final confrontation.

A master of brinksmanship, Saddam doesn't always pull back. In the Gulf War, and the clash over control of the skies in southern Iraq, he has been willing to sacrifice Iraqi lives and hardware for his military and political ambitions.

■ Analysis

Veteran Saddam-watchers, who thought he would stop short of another attack by U.S. and allied forces, have been confounded by the Iraqi president.

Bush seems to want to teach Baghdad a final lesson before he leaves office. But how effective that will be, given the blurred political objectives, is questionable.

Saddam is showning no sign of abandoning his "cheat and retreat" strategy, suffering losses but making enough concessions to avoid a death blow.

Iraqis and diplomats say Saddam's major objectives appear to be reasserting himself within Iraq and challenging U.N. insistence on Iraq's obligations under the 1991 cease-fire agreement.

Baghdad initially agreed to pay war reparations, allow destruction of its weapons of mass destruction and halt oil exports, but it is now challenging the United Nations across the board.

Iraq says it wants to renegotiate the agreement to progressively lift the crushing 2-year-old U.N. embargo as Baghdad fulfills its obligations.

Iraqi officials have been saying for a year that they have nothing to gain by full compliance with the cease-fire conditions. No matter what they do — and they have met many requirements — Bush has said he won't lift sanctions as long as Saddam is in power.

Some Iraqis believe Clinton will take even harsher action than Bush.

Baghdad may feel it has little to lose. The country has been virtually dismembered, stripped of control of the skies over more than half its territory, unable to export oil, its main source of revenue.

Arrest of mob fugitive came too late some say

By Daniel J. Wakin
Associated Press writer

ROME — During the 23 years Salvatore Riina lived as a fugitive, he married in church, fathered four children born in the same clinic, circulated freely in Palermo, Sicily, and ruled as dictator over the Mafia, investigators and former mob members say.

That freedom ended with his arrest in the Sicilian capital Friday. Amid the banner headlines and expressions of joy, many Italians were asking how the country's most wanted man could have avoided capture so long.

"Why did it take twenty years to arrest him? Who protected him?" wrote commentator Roberto Martinelli in the Turin daily La Stampa.

Riina was transferred to a high-security wing of Rome's Rebibbia prison, state television reported. It showed him being hustled aboard a helicopter in Sicily as he clutched a coat over his head. He was expected to appear before judges Monday.

More details about his capture emerged.

A team of Carabinieri, the paramilitary police force, pinpointed the house where Riina slept Thursday night and kept it under surveillance with a long-range camera, the news agency AGI reported. Members of the team watched him leave and drive towards the main road where he was arrested.

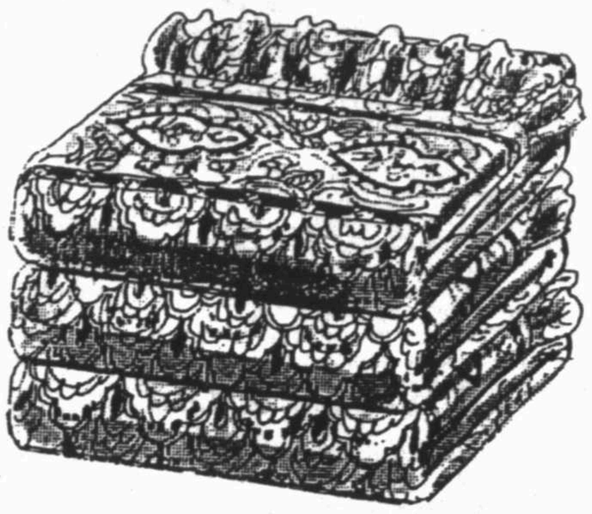

ANSA reported that an informant in the northern city of Turin, identified only as Baldassare, had provided key tips regarding Riina's habits and the people he met with.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Today's high to be in mid-60s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for increasing cloudiness with a high in the mid-60s, and south winds 5-15 mph, according the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of light rain and a low in the mid 30s, the NWS said.

Monday's forecast is for mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of light rain and a high in the mid-50s.

Saturday's high was 65, compared to the record high of 79, set in 1971. The record low for today's date is 14, set in 1957.

NATION

Thunderstorms drenched southern Florida on Saturday, spawning tornadoes and damaging power lines. Rain also soaked Southern California and much of the Atlantic Coast, while snow blanketed parts of the Rockies.

A winter storm watch was in effect through Sunday for California's Sierra Nevada range. Advisories for snow through Sunday were also posted for the southwest mountains of Colorado.

Two tornadoes touched down near Fort Myers, Fla., around daybreak Saturday. There were no reports of injuries or major damage. Strong thunderstorms and wind gusts damaged power lines in several other parts of southern Florida.

In the West, 5 inches of snow had fallen on the central California mountain town of Bishop, Calif., by dawn.

Rain also soaked much of California, which is emerging from six years of drought. Heavy rain caused rock and mud slides near Los Angeles, closing some roads.

About 2 inches of rain fell between noon Friday and noon Saturday at Santa Ana, Calif., and at San Diego, in the southern half of the state.

The rain has rapidly filled dams and reservoirs in the Los Angeles area. Warnings have been posted because of dangerous, high flows through local channels carrying water released from reservoirs for flood control.

In central California, the National Weather Service issued a flood watch for the San Joaquin Valley, where many rivers were at their maximum.

At 1 p.m. EST, rain and thunderstorms extended across the southern tip of Florida and rain fell across the central Atlantic Coast. Snow was scattered over the Great Lakes, the central Rockies and higher elevations of the Pacific Northwest. Rain also fell on Southern California and Arizona.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COPE: Woman educates about AIDS

a City Council member and Odessa College professor.

"We are looking at being better friends and neighbors," he said. "The bad news is there is a disease that is killing people. The worse news is it will affect all of us one day — whether it be a neighbor, friend or family member."

Mrs. Warren, who speaks frequently to area organizations — including schools and churches — started Midland Area AIDS Support in 1991 to help AIDS families and sufferers.

She told the story of the bond that developed between she and her brother, Larry, after he was born when she was 10-years-old.

"We were almost like one person and often finished each other's sentences," she said. "The affect he had on my life ... I never knew until 30 years later (through professional help)."

"Finding out that my brother had AIDS was one of the most devastating things ... How could I live?" she said. "There is a tremendous fear that I can't explain because there is no cure."

Shortly after learning her brother was HIV positive, Mrs. Warren and her husband moved to Midland from their home in Houston. Her brother remained in Houston.

"My brother felt a tremendous fear for his future. It was a goodbye I'll never forget," she said. "Larry broke down and started weeping and we embraced ... I had literally gone into shock, my brother got into his car and drove off."

She turned away and found she was covered with his sweat and tears.

"I went into the bathroom and scrubbed my face and neck with whatever I could find and Comet," she said. "I was so ignorant then."

When her brother first told her he was HIV positive, Mrs. Warren said she was scared of "catching" AIDS and when he visited from Houston, she would put him up in a motel room so they wouldn't have to share a bathroom, she said.

Today, she is concerned with teaching others about the disease and how to comfort friends or family members with AIDS.

"AIDS is easily avoidable with education," she said. "But it's also important to educate how you can't get AIDS."

On Thursday, she administered a true/false test about AIDS to help dispel some of the myths about the disease.

"I think it takes someone like this, who can speak from experience, to really get the message across. She's a brave woman," said Dorothy Waldrop, 58.

Bill Messersmith, 28, agreed.

"People don't seem to think about AIDS as being real. It's real, not only in the large cities, but here in a small West Texas town. People here realize that, and that makes me proud to be from here," he said. "The bigger towns should be so smart."

"That woman made me cry," Joy Elston said. "It's so sad what she had to go through. To keep that secret for so long."

Mrs. Warren kept the secret of her brother for 1½ years and lived a double life — becoming active in her church but keeping silent about her home life.

"I was doing everything to take care of my life ... but what about my brother? He had lost everything," she said.

Eventually she told her minister.

"My greatest fear was that someone would try to harm my brother," she said.

But instead, members of the congregation began visiting her brother, taking him to movies, out to dinner and bringing him food. One person brought homemade fresh banana pudding once a week for over a year.

"I didn't expect to see the love that developed between them and my brother. And they were truly his friends ... not someone doing a good deed," she said.

Mrs. Warren said she would never forget the support her brother received.

"Larry told me that it killed him ... the pain it brought his family," she said. "He said he was tired of the word 'gay'.... he doesn't think of himself as a gay man ... but a man."

"I saw God use my gay brother to affect so many lives."

Mrs. Warren is turning MAAS into a non-profit organization. The group has a local office at the First Presbyterian Church at 800 W. Texas Ave. Anyone interested in learning more about the group can call 684-7821.

In Midland County, 67 people have tested HIV positive since 1981 and 22 people have died of AIDS. In Ector County, 53 people have tested HIV positive and 34 people have died of AIDS. In Howard County, 16 people have died of AIDS since 1981.

U.N.: Iraqis fire on American F-111s of the Gulf War cease-fire.

And he indicated the next move was up to Iraq. The United Nations was "still expecting that Iraq would abide by its obligations," he said.

The development escalated the week-long confrontation between Baghdad and the world body, raising prospects of new military strikes against Iraq following an allied bombing raid Wednesday.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States was consulting with its coalition partners about the U.N. statement, but "remains determined" to make Iraq comply with U.N. resolutions.

Even as diplomats and U.S. officials debated their next moves, reports of military clashes between Iraqi and U.S. planes came from Turkey.

Maj. Mike Waters, a spokesman for the U.S.-led allied coalition force based in Incirlik, said Saturday that two American F-111s encountered fire Friday night in northern Iraq but neither was damaged.

The West imposed no-fly zones in both the north and south of Iraq, to block Iraqi attacks on Shiite Muslims and Kurds.

Waters denied an Iraqi television report that Iraqi planes had chased two allied warplanes over the northern town of Mosul and that Iraqi anti-aircraft missiles had fired on another plane over the town and forced it to flee.

The new Iraqi limits on the U.N. Special Commission's inspection flights violate Security Council demands that Iraq allow the inspectors "unrestricted freedom of entry and exit" in their mission to destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

"We have the right to go anywhere, to use any point of entry and any point of exit and fly anywhere in Iraq," Trevan told reporters. Iraq must also "insure the safety and security of aircraft," he said.

He said the United Nations had informed Baghdad of the world body's position, adding that a flight scheduled for today would not go unless Iraq gave the necessary guarantees.

"We are still waiting for a reply," Trevan said.

Nizar Hamdoon, Baghdad's envoy to the United Nations, told The Associated Press that he didn't "see the logic" of the U.N.'s response. "We've provided them a practical way of reaching Baghdad," he said.

"I think there is a good possibility" of another bombing attack, he said.

Earlier, Hamdoon had expanded the Iraqi conditions on safe passage, saying they applied even when the inspectors were inside Iraq.

On Friday, President Bush gave Baghdad four hours to rescind its Jan. 8 ban on U.N. flights into Iraq. The United States warned that the allies may mount another air raid unless Baghdad gave in.

Just before the deadline expired, Baghdad informed the U.N. it would drop the ban, but would not guarantee the safety of the flights. The U.N. termed the conditions unacceptable and gave Iraqi time to come up with a better offer.

In Baghdad, meanwhile, Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz, said Saturday that Iraq would continue to resist U.S., British and French "aggression" in the "no-fly" zones.

Iraqi Air Force commander Lt. Gen. Mozahem Saab al-Hassan said Iraq "strike at any target that enters our airspace." He spoke in a statement in the Defense Ministry newspaper Al-Qadissiya that was carried by the official Iraqi News Agency.

Aziz accused Bush of having a "personal vendetta" against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and of deliberately provoking confrontation by linking the conflict over the zones with U.N. resolutions concerning weapons inspections and other disputed issues.

Shortly after Aziz spoke, the Iraqi government announced that Saddam would broadcast a speech nationally on Sunday, the second anniversary of the allied bombing that began the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

On another disputed front, U.N. spokesman Abdel-Latif Kabbaj said Saturday that Iraq had not met a U.N. deadline of Friday midnight to remove six police posts along the newly redrawn border with Kuwait. Baghdad has rejected the U.N.-drawn border.

Security Council President Yoshio Hatano complained Saturday to Hamdoon about the posts. Hamdoon contended his government had never been officially informed about Friday's deadline and said it was "premature" to say whether it would comply now.

Aziz called the violation "incidental" but also would not say whether the posts would be removed.

The confrontation between Iraq and the West began Dec. 27 when a U.S. aircraft shot down an Iraqi warplane that penetrated the southern "no-fly" zone. Baghdad countered by deploying surface-to-air missiles in the south that the allies said threatened their aircraft.

Tensions rose further after the U.N. flights were banned and Iraqi teams raided Kuwait for military equipment abandoned at the end of the war.

On Wednesday, U.S., French and British bombed an air defense network in southern Iraq.

BOMB: Glasscock's called if device is found

(From 1A)

Glasscock began his training at Redstone Arsenal, a U.S. Army base in Huntsville, Ala., where he spent four weeks learning from Army technicians how to handle bombs.

"We learned how to handle explosives, what booby traps looked like, how to recognize bombs and dispose of them," he said.

After his initial training, Glasscock underwent two-weeks advanced explosive training at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Brunswick, Ga. The training, conducted by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, involved learning how to decipher evidence after a bomb has gone off and how to investigate a bombing.

Every three years, Glasscock must attend a refresher course and every month, he meets with the three EOD technicians from Odessa for a day of reviewing procedures and practice.

"We go to a bomb disposal site we have set up in Notrees," he said. "We practice, you know, trying to keep ourselves totally on top of what we do."

Although Glasscock is the bomb technician, he is not called out to every threat.

"If a threat is called in, the dispatcher will send two police units and a supervisor to the scene," he said. "I only go if an actual device is found."

Glasscock said the police officers' role in a bomb threat is assistance.

"An evacuation is left up to the owner," he said. "Of course, if we (the police) have information that leads us to believe that there is a definate danger, then we can override the owner's decision. But, I can't think of a reason why the owner would not evacuate if that were the case."

Police assist in an evacuation and in the search. The primary responsibility falls on the shoulders of business owners, who also must search their premises for a possible explosive device.

If a device is found, then Glasscock is called to the scene. He determines if the device is explosive or not and how to detonate the device.

"The idea of placing a bomb in water to defuse it is an old wives' tale," he said. "What we do with it depends on the type and how dangerous it is. We try to move them if they are life-threatening. If not, we blow it in place."

Glassock has yet not been in a situation where an explosive device was involved, even in the series of threats being made in Midland-Odessa recently.

"The only thing I have handled was an incident where a kid was making pipe bombs last summer," he said.

No explosive devices have been found in any of the incidents plaguing the area since December. However, Glasscock said all the threats are treated seriously.

"During the first threats, the ones involving extortion, we found a device in Odessa and in Midland," he said. "And, the one I saw in Midland McDonald's — whoever did it had enough working knowledge about bombs to make it explosive if they had wanted to. So, you never know and you can never get complacent about it."

The arrest of a 22-year-old Midland man in connection with a threat made to a Midland restaurant Friday sends the message that callers making the threats can be caught, Glasscock said.

"We have a pretty good track record with catching these people," he said. "Of course, a lot of it is luck, getting an actual witness, for instance. But, if someone keeps making calls, sooner or later, they will get sloppy and we will catch them."

COWBOYS: Team identity can be positive thing, doctors say

(From 1A)

However, Olsen said it can also be bad, in the sense that those distractions prevent people from taking care of things that need to be done, such as looking for a job.

"With everything, you need a balance," Olsen said. He said many people use distractions to avoid realities, whether that distraction is sports or just watching television.

Dr. Olga Campbell said she believes events such as the Dallas Cowboys advancing in the playoffs make people feel better in a superficial sense.

"I suppose just feeling better has to be good, but some people can carry that to an extreme."

She said with some people, there is a tendency to do just that. "But there's a need to keep sport teams and other things in a realistic perspective."

Alan Schroeder, a psychotherapist, said experiencing positive feelings such as about a winning football team is much like owning a new car. "You get excited about it over a period of time, but then it fades."

Schroeder said such events are not matters of the soul, which are deep, far-reaching and lasting. "This kind of thing is an ego high. I suppose in some cases it could last, but more often than not, it's a high that gradually goes away."

"I don't think there's anything inherently wrong with it, unless it's misunderstood and you let it take on an energy that begins to work against you," said Schroeder, such as with an addiction or obsessive behavior. "All that serves to do is help you avoid other parts of your life."

Iraqi police posts remain intact

ON THE KUWAIT-IRAQ BORDER (AP) — Six Iraqi police posts remained on Kuwaiti soil Saturday in violation of a U.N. deadline, a U.N. spokesman said.

Confrontations in the demilitarized zone between the two countries have led the United Nations to consider bolstering its force in the area, officials said.

Gunbattles between the Iraqi and nearby Kuwaiti border posts are frequent.

But the Iraqi positions, which the United Nations has ordered Baghdad to move, assumed new importance this week with the U.S. threatening military action against Iraq for any move that flouts the Gulf War cease-fire resolutions.

In Baghdad, deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said Iraq has no claim on Kuwaiti territory, and he dismissed the U.N. deadline as "incidental."

Abdel-Latif Kabbaj, spokesman for the United Nations Iraq Kuwait Observation Mission, said Kuwait, too, was violating the Jan. 15 deadline — it had been ordered to move two police posts considered too close to the border, he said.

The deadline's expiration coincided with the arrival of 400 more U.S. troops for maneuvers with the Kuwait military. The reinforced contingent is designed to shore up the emirate's defenses in anticipation of possible Iraqi retaliation for Wednesday's allied air strike.

About 750 troops have arrived so far, with the full contingent of 1,000 soldiers from the 1st Cavalry Division in Fort Hood, Texas, expected, U.S. command headquarters said.

Interior Minister Sheik Ahmed al-Sabah said Kuwait would remove its posts once it received extra territory under a U.N.-brokered redrawing of boundaries last year. Iraq disputes the new borders.

Confrontations between observers and Iraqis over the unauthorized removal of four Silkworm anti-ship missiles prompted a request to double the 350-member peacekeeping force at the border, Khabbaj said.

Five more die in rainy border city mudslides

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Mudslides slammed into two homes Saturday, killing four children and a woman, and authorities evacuated families below a brimming reservoir as rain continued to drench the city.

The deaths brought to 22 the number of people who have died since the first of a series of storms struck Tijuana nearly two weeks ago. Dozens more remained missing in the city immediately across the border from San Diego.

Water a foot or more deep flowed swiftly through some Tijuana streets Saturday, cutting off some neighborhoods to all but the most rugged vehicles, said city spokesman Gabriel Rosas.

The threat of more rain prompted officials to evacuate about 60 people living below Rodriguez Dam, southeast of the city, Rosas said.

"We have to take precautions. It's still raining. It's not raining hard, but it's constant," he said.

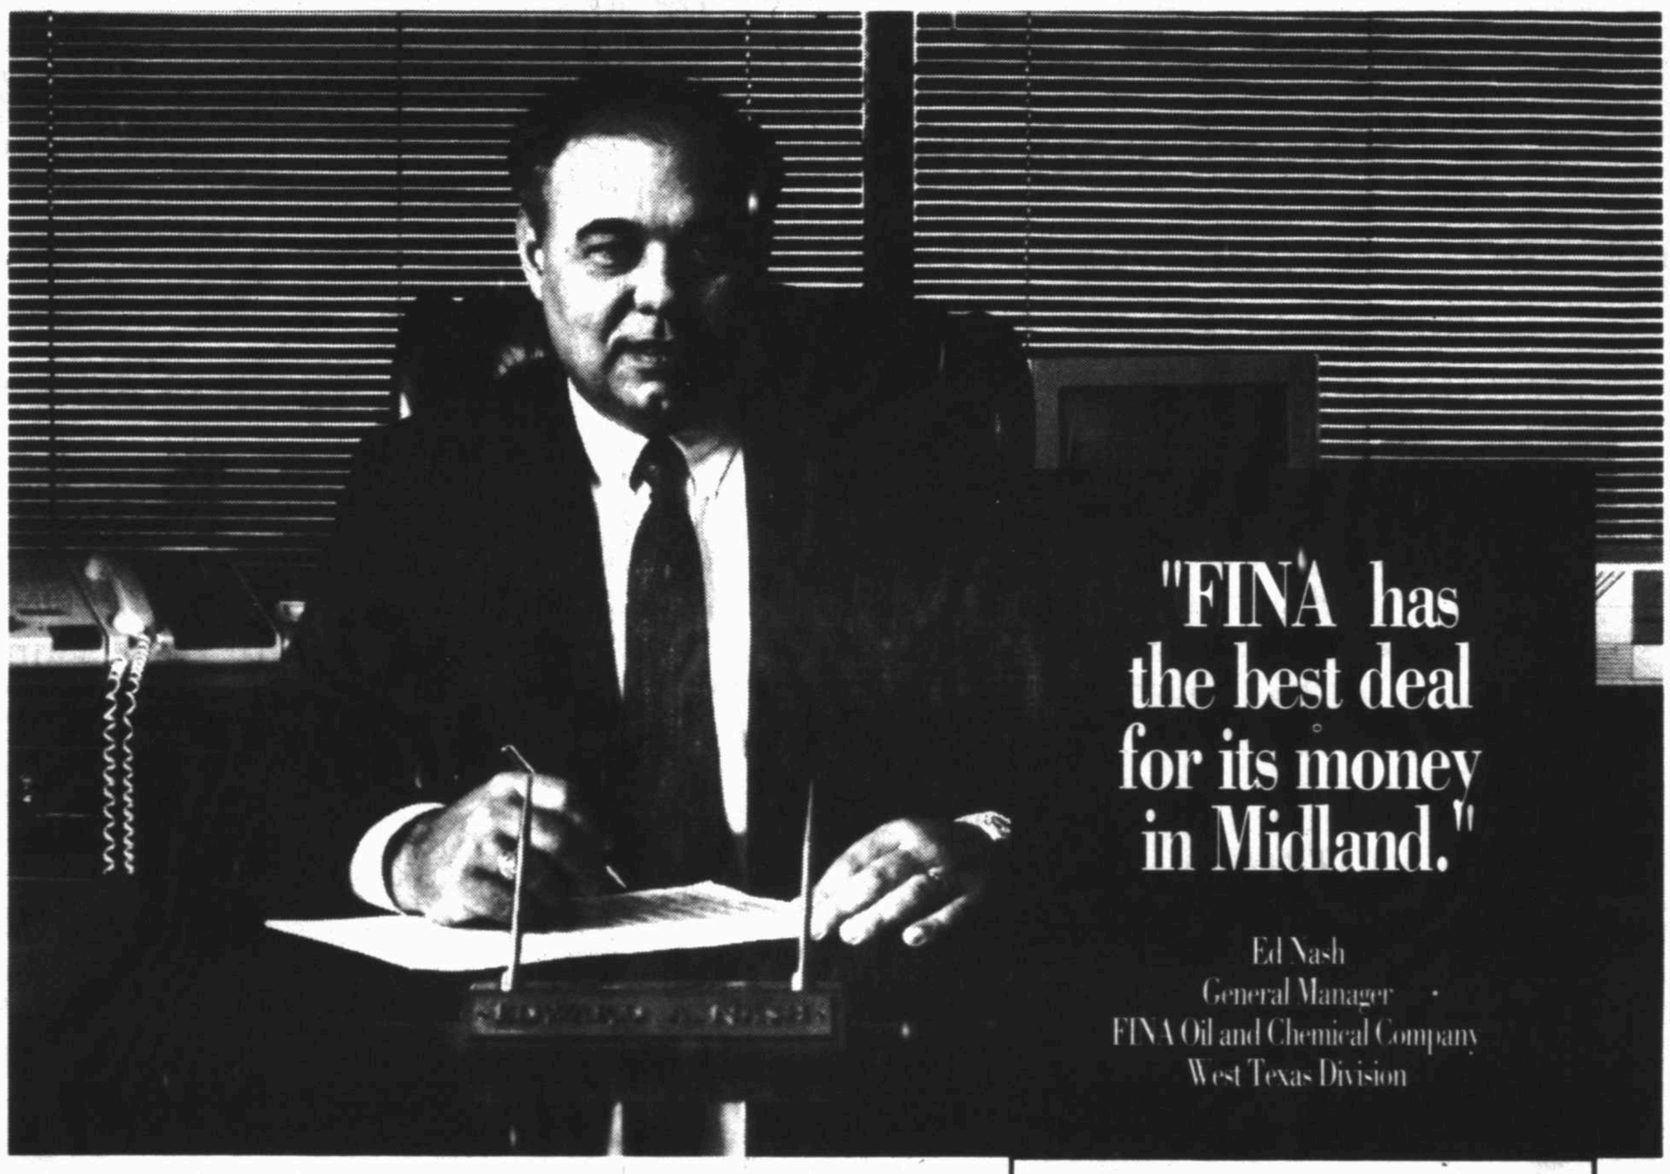

Two children — a 6-year-old girl and a 20-month-old boy — were killed shortly after 3 a.m. when a mudslide crashed through their bedroom wall, said Amado Gallardo, a spokesman for the coroner's office.

Four hours later, a 3-year-old girl, an 18-month-old boy and their mother were killed when a wall of mud smashed into their house.

In both cases, the mudslides struck in middle-class areas. No other injuries were reported, Gallardo said.

The rain also washed out three bridges along Highway 2 between Tijuana and Tecate.

Serbs strand U.N. convoy outside Muslim town

By Tony Smith
Associated Press writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serbs blocked a U.N. aid convoy with a log barricade Saturday from reaching a besieged Muslim town where scores are reportedly dying from cold and hunger, relief officials said.

Fighting between Bosnian government forces and Bosnian Serb rebels, meanwhile, spilled over into Serbia, one of two republics left in what remains of Yugoslavia.

Bosnia's Serb leader also told reporters that his community got a raw deal in accepting an agreement to divide Bosnia into provinces, but at least had prevented Muslim "domination" by accepting the plan.

Relief workers and ham radio operators said Serb forces refused to allow the U.N. relief convoy into Zepa, a town 40 miles east of Sarajevo that has been cut off from aid during the war.

The convoy came within 500 yards of the town before turning back to spend the night in Borike, 12 miles away, a ham radio operator in Zepa said in a message received in Zagreb, Croatia.

He said the convoy would try again on Sunday.

The convoy, carrying 80 tons of aid, was blocked by a barricade of logs, said Sylvana Foa, spokeswoman of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva. She said people in the convoy also heard mortar fire.

Scores of people have reportedly been dying from cold, hunger and disease in the town, which has been under siege for 10 months.

At least 17,000 people have been killed since Bosnia's Serbs rebelled after the Muslim and Croat majority voted for independence from Yugoslavia in February.

The Yugoslav government planned to meet late Saturday night to discuss the shells fired by Bosnian troops into the Serb town of Bajna Basta. No casualties were reported.

The incident occurred during a Bosnian government offensive apparently aimed at breaching a strategic corridor connecting Serbia to Pale, the Bosnian Serb stronghold southeast of Sarajevo.

Bosnian Serb commanders said at least 40 of their troops died in the offensive centered south of Bratunac, 75 miles northeast of Sarajevo.

"This is the toughest Muslim offensive on Serb positions" in the region since the war began, Col. Milan Prstojevic, a Bosnian Serb commander, told a reporter in Bratunac. Bosnia's government is Muslim-led.

Evidence of large-scale civilian deaths was clearly visible in Bratunac. Some 100 freshly dug graves were in the cemetery. Some tombstones bore names of victims as young as 12.

Elsewhere, Bosnian radio reported 60 people froze to death in the last few days in the region of Zvornik, a town on the border with Serbia, 60 miles northeast of Sarajevo. There was no way to confirm the report.

Muslim-Croat fighting in and around Gornji Vakuf, 40 miles west of Sarajevo, flared anew. On Saturday, Bosnian forces reported destroying a Croatian armored vehicle and several mortars and taking some prisoners.

With Geneva peace talks scheduled this week to address the division of Bosnia-Herzegovina into provinces, fighting between Muslims and Croats — nominally allied against the Serbs — has erupted, in part over territory.

Although provincial boundaries will not be drawn solely along ethnic lines, all three ethnic groups continue laying claim to certain regions.

Radovan Karadzic, the Bosnian Serb leader, said Serbs got a raw deal in accepting the agreement to divide Bosnia into provinces.

Eruption scare limits search for volcano victims

PASTO, Colombia (AP) — Search parties searched for more bodies Saturday from a volcanic eruption that hurled blazing rocks the size of televisions into the air.

At least nine people were assumed dead following the eruption of the 14,030-foot Galeras volcano on Thursday, and officials said the death toll could rise.

Reports of the number of injured were conflicting and ran as high as 20. At least three American scientists were hospitalized.

Rescuers searched the rim area for bodies despite the danger of another eruption. The volcano continued to shake Saturday, but the aftershocks dropped off slightly from the more than 60 an hour registered Friday, officials said.

Workers recovered the bodies of four Colombians. Four scientists, including a Russian and a Briton, and another Colombian were missing and presumed dead because they were last seen either inside or near the crater.

More people may be missing because tourists and journalists not registered on the conference list were in the region, said Capt. Carlos Arturo Barios, head of the civil defense department in Pasto, 375 miles south of Bogota.

The volcano erupted with a deafening roar, sending a black column of ash shooting 1.5 miles in the air, just as up to 17 scientists who were attending a conference on volcanos were either inside the crater or on its rim.

Survivors said visibility atop the volcano was about three feet.

Andrew McFarlane and Mike Conway, both from Florida International University in Miami, and an Ecuadoran scientist scrambled frantically away from the crater.

"I heard this huge boom, and then rocks the size of televisions started falling around us," McFarlane said Friday from his hospital bed in Pasto.

He suffered a broken foot, bruises on his legs and badly burned hands from climbing over the burning rocks.

Conway's cloth jacket was filled with holes from burning rocks. He said the Ecuadoran was walking — even trying to run — on two broken legs.

Conway, also hospitalized, had a broken hand, broken fingers and burns over much of his body.

The scientists were part of a U.N.-supported study of the world's volcanos. The volcano, 13 miles west of Pasto, last erupted in July.

Study: Yo-yo dieters are greater heart risks

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Middle-aged men who kept their weight steady — even if they were overweight — had lower heart attack risks than men whose weight cycled up and down, a study shows.

The study is the latest of several reports that suggest that "yo-yo dieting" — repeatedly losing and gaining weight — is riskier than keeping weight steady, researchers said Saturday.

The results led to the controversial suggestion at an American Heart Association meeting that people should stop trying to reach an ideal weight and simply lose whatever they can realistically keep off.

"I propose that smaller but well maintained weight losses will be a more beneficial factor ... than larger but poorly maintained weight losses," said Kelly D. Brownell of Yale University, a leading obesity researcher.

"It's really quite a new concept," Brownell said. "It goes against the medical orthodoxy which says you're either at the ideal weight or you're not."

Brownell's suggestion was warmly received at the American Heart Association's conference on heart disease prevention.

"It's sort of facing reality," said Dr. W. Virgil Brown, past president of the American Heart Association.

"We have been culprits in the case he's making, setting unrealistic goals for everybody," Brown said.

The heart association has no specific recommendation for ideal weights, but it has informally recommended weight targets that may be unattainable for many people, Brown said.

The latest study on yo-yo dieting was discussed by Steven N. Blair of the Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas.

He analyzed data on 12,866 men in the federal government's MRFIT study, conducted in the 1970s and 1980s.

Many of the men were overweight, smoked cigarettes and had high blood pressure, all of which put them at high risk of heart attacks.

Blair found that men whose weight remained constant over a period of six or seven years had the lowest heart disease risks.

Men whose weight went up and down in yo-yo fashion or who gained weight had higher risks, Blair found.

Surprisingly, men who lost weight also had higher risks than men whose weight held steady, Blair said.

More research is needed to explain the perplexing result in the new study, Blair said.

Baboon liver recipient becomes more alert

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 62-year-old man who received the world's second baboon liver transplant became more alert on Saturday and squeezed the hands of family members and doctors.

The man, who hasn't been identified, remained in critical condition, and doctors were treating him for what they believe is organ rejection, said Lisa Rossi, a spokeswoman for the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center.

Until Saturday, the man responded only intermittently to requests to open his eyes or squeeze someone's hand.

The man received the transplant in an operation that ended Monday. On Friday, surgeons removed his spleen. The spleen produces white blood cells that attack foreign tissues, including transplanted organs.

King sites, civil rights memorials become tourist spots

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The young black lawyer traveled from San Francisco. The white woman came from a small town in Iowa, bringing her two teen-age daughters along.

They, like 130,000 others in the past year, were drawn to the balcony of the Lorraine Motel — the spot, frozen in a grainy newsphoto image, where the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. died.

"I want to teach my children so that the injustice won't continue," Kathy Gerber of Algona, Iowa, said quietly.

"The sacrifices people made ...," whispered the lawyer, Chris Wilkinson. He shook his head.

The Lorraine no longer is a motel. Gutted and reopened in 1991 as the National Civil Rights Museum, it is just one stop along an increasingly well-traveled Southern circuit of new memorials to the bloody and bloodless triumphs of the civil rights movement.

Tour companies and state tourism officials, accustomed to steering visitors to more comfortable, often musty historic sites, are starting to focus on the painful recent past.

A state-published pamphlet, "Alabama's Black Heritage," for example, features many places where civil rights activists bled or died in the 1960s.

"I've had people call here and say, 'Why would you produce a booklet that would highlight such a negative?' " said Frances Smiley, black heritage coordinator for the state tourism division.

She makes no apology: "People want to walk in the footsteps, they want to sit in the pews. ... We promote it, yes. It changed the course of American history."

Tours stop at the Selma, Ala., bridge where voting rights marchers were beaten and at the Birmingham, Ala., church where four black Sunday school pupils died in a bombing.

King's birthplace and his white marble tomb, just a block apart in Atlanta, are the most visited sites, with 3.2 million visitors last year. They are centerpieces of the MLK National Historic Site, established in 1980.

Other major destinations, besides the Lorraine's National Civil Rights Museum, include:

— The Birmingham Civil Rights Institute, which opened in mid-November and already has drawn at least 35,000 visitors. The institute's $12 million museum, archive and conference center anchor a downtown historic district in the city once called "Bombingham" for its racial violence.

— The Civil Rights Memorial in Montgomery, Ala., an evocative granite monument combining a fountain with a millstone-like table inscribed with the names of slain activists. Dedicated in 1989, it had 200,000 visitors last year, according to the Southern Poverty Law Center.

Learning from history is the goal of most visitors, according to those in the industry.

"The interest is threefold over what it was last year," said Roger Pennyman of Atlanta Specialty Tours.

Young blacks mark King holiday with an 'X'

ATLANTA (AP) — Growing up in suburban Atlanta, Kenyatta Adeniya says, young people were taught about one black figure who towered above the rest: Martin Luther King Jr.

But when he entered his sophomore year in high school, Adeniya began hearing about another black man. He remembers listening to a song by the rap group Public Enemy and saying to himself, "Who is this Malcolm?"

Now in his second year at Georgia State University, Adeniya recently led a series of sit-ins as president of the Black Student Alliance. The 20-year-old says he still respects King. But Malcolm X, he insists, is the voice of the young generation.

"Malcolm can relate more to the community now," Adeniya said. "The youth are less willing to actually bow down and let somebody hit them over the head. We come with more of the philosophy of 'You hit me, I'll hit you back.'"

Nearly 25 years after King's assassination and nearly 10 years after Ronald Reagan signed legislation creating Monday's King Holiday, the civil rights leader is settling into mainstream American history.

Forty-nine states observe the King Holiday (New Hampshire being the exception). Children across the nation study King in school.

But on the streets of inner cities and on college campuses, Malcolm X, the outspoken Black Muslim leader, is the icon now invoked by young blacks.

Young people who hadn't heard of Malcolm X a few years ago now are wearing "X" hats and clothing, which multiplied with the release of Spike Lee's recent movie.

But the move away from King began long before the film came out.

Donald Bakeer, a high school English teacher in South Central Los Angeles, saw a change beginning in the mid-1980s.

Since the late '70s, Bakeer had delivered a rendition of King's "I Have a Dream" speech at a school assembly every year to commemorate the slain leader's birthday.

White House tapes could give almost a decade of details

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine being able to search the minds of the White House staff during the most momentous events of the past eight years.

About 4,000 computer tapes from the Reagan and Bush years might give scholars, curious citizens and even prosecutors a handy way to tap into the innermost workings of government, if the tapes survive the transition of power.

The Challenger explosion, the Iran-Contra scandal, the Panama invasion and Desert Storm, not to mention a couple of presidential elections and budget crises galore — those were some of the many events that marched before the nation's eyes since the White House staff started doing business by computer in 1985.

Staffers used computers to draft documents and spreadsheets, send memos and notes to each other, and schedule meetings in the White House and outside.

It's all on the tapes, which were used daily to make backup copies of information in the White House computers.

"The only way to get at the old stuff is saving it in electronic form," said Michael Tarkington, attorney for Public Citizen, an advocacy group that's gone to court to preserve the tapes.

The amount of information saved on the tapes could easily exceed the equivalent of 400 million pages, double spaced, in formats used by the more modern computer systems. That's something like 100 billion words.

Human beings don't live long enough to deal with that much information easily. One person reading a page a minute would take more than 7,000 years to wade through all those words.

Bush officials say they want a free hand to erase records from the computer system and deny they need to keep the backup tapes once they've printed the information. They says they want to give the new administration a clean slate.

Public Citizen and a private group that preserves government documents, the National Security Archives, are challenging the Bush administration's right to destroy the data before President-elect Clinton takes office Wednesday.

A federal judge on Friday told the White House it could erase some information from its computers, as long as the data had been saved on tape.

If the information remains available on tape, then computers can be used to search for it.

For example, during the investigation into former Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega, the Justice Department used computers to search files from the Reagan era.

"They wrote a program that looked for files of particular people, looked for files individually, looked for 51 keywords, and spit out a note if there was a match," Tarkington said. "They couldn't possibly have done it if they had just the paper copies."

The tapes also show who messages went to, whether they were received, and when they were sent. That information is produced by the computer, eliminating human error or deliberate tampering.

Polls find four in five expect taxes to go up

NEW YORK (AP) — Eighty percent of Americans expect President-elect Clinton to raise their taxes after he takes office, but if that happens, a majority thinks he will do so in a way that's fair, a poll released Saturday shows.

Most Americans favor a tax increase if the money is used to make health insurance available to more people or to provide job training for the unemployed, the survey found.

The poll taken Wednesday and Thursday for Time magazine and Cable News Network found more preference for a national sales tax (43 percent) than for an increase in the gas tax (31 percent) or income tax (18 percent).

Another poll, taken for U.S. News and World Report, found 69 percent of Americans having a favorable opinion of Clinton.

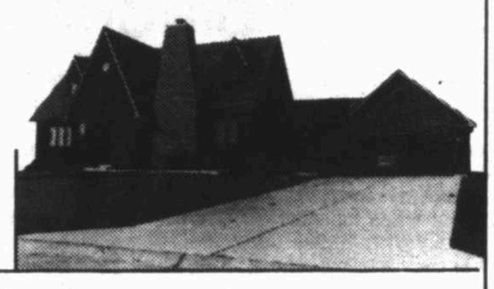

Those with doubts about Clinton's honesty fell from more than half last April to less than a quarter in the Time-CNN poll; 69 percent said they think Clinton is trustworthy enough to be president.

House takes long weekend, studies school financing

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — The 73rd Legislature got off to a quick start on Tuesday, with the House electing its first new speaker in 10 years and all 31 senators signing on to support a products liability reform bill.

Committees also went to work on writing a tight-fisted budget for 1994-95 that is expected to make deep cuts in many state services.

But two days after convening for the 140-day regular session, the House adjourned until Friday, and the Senate took a four-day weekend.

Both houses were out last Friday, and will take off Monday to observe the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

The House also adjourned until Friday of this week so members can attend the inauguration of President-elect Bill Clinton. But Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who presides over the Senate, said only one senator had expressed interest in going to Washington for the festivities.

Although not officially in session, some House members will be holding informal talks here on school financing.

Lawmakers must come up with a constitutional way to equalize financing for property-rich and property-poor school districts by June 1, or the state Supreme Court will impound state money for schools.

House members also will be looking at rule changes proposed by the new speaker, Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center.

The former speaker, Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, retired after serving an unprecedented five terms as House leader. Until recently, most speakers served only one or two terms.

Lewis faced charges of ethics violations involving gifts from a law firm. He pleaded no contest to lesser misdemeanor charges and did not run for re-election.

Several House members, who felt they were shut out of the legislative process, demanded rules reforms before casting their ballots for speaker.

Laney, a West Texas cotton farmer and businessman, said his top priorities are restoring the House's tarnished image and overcoming the partisanship that has divided the House on school financing.

Laney did not propose two major changes some legislators want — term limits for the speaker and election by secret ballot.

But Laney said he did not expect to seek more than two terms, and he proposed changes to open up the process, limit the concentration of power and allow more time to study bills before voting on them.

He also will require staff members to promise not to lobby the Legislature for a period of time after they leave his employment.

Meanwhile, pushed by Bullock, business and plaintiff attorneys agreed to compromise tort reform legislation on lawsuits that are filed on behalf of people injured or killed by defective products.

As for the budget, the Senate has three finance subcommittees hearing requests from state departments.

With Gov. Ann Richards and Bullock vowing there will be no new taxes this biennium, lawmakers may have to cut as much as $3 billion from what would be needed to maintain current state services.

Early last week, the Legislative Budget Board, which prepares preliminary recommendations for the Legislature, confirmed the worst fears of many people.

Joplin's hometown celebrates early

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — The music may be different now, but the feeling is the same for hometown fans of gutsy blues and acid-rock legend Janis Joplin.

Texas Governor Ann Richards has declared Tuesday to be Janis Joplin day in Texas. But some residents in Ms. Joplin's hometown are celebrating early, with a concert in her honor scheduled tonight. And her younger sister is in town.

The last time Laura Joplin saw her older sister was in August 1970, when Janis had returned home to Port Arthur to visit with her family and attend her high school class's 10th year reunion.

"She had come home, ready to visit and ready to have a good time," said Laura Joplin, who has recently published a biography. "But she had come home a star."

A rhythm and blues concern was scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday at the Port Arthur Civic Center to celebrate what would have been the singer's 50th birthday next week.

Ms. Joplin, who was born in Port Arthur on Jan. 19, 1943, died in 1970 at age 27 in Hollywood, Calif., of what a coroner ruled was a drug overdose.

"People are very serious in their appreciation for Janis and this is one way of showing it," said Laura Joplin.

"They don't just have a plaque outside of town, but they have an exhibit, a statue and an annual musical celebration, which I think is quite a testament to their acceptance and remembrance of Janis," she said.

The celebration began Friday with a reception to honor Laura Joplin, who was promoting her biography, "Love, Janis."

The younger Ms. Joplin acknowledged that many people in the community did not originally want to celebrate her sister's birthday because of her drug-related death.

Anti-klan, klan backers face off at Capitol

By Scott Rothschild and Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press writers

AUSTIN — The Ku Klux Klan rallied Saturday on the steps of the Capitol and were met by 5,000 chanting, sign-carrying anti-Klan demonstrators.

The counter-demonstrators threw eggs, beat drums, shouted down Klan speakers and conducted a "mass mooning."

Police said six anti-Klan protesters were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct, two during a brief confrontation with authorities in which a glass door was broken. No injuries were reported.

"This was a cakewalk compared with 10 years ago," said Mike Cox of the Texas Department of Public Safety. In 1983, a Klan march in Austin sparked bitter protests and violent outbursts that resulted in a dozen injuries.

Security around the Capitol was tight with at least 150 DPS troopers in riot gear and dozens of Texas Rangers, Austin police and Travis County Sheriff's deputies. Some were stationed on the roofs of nearby buildings and in offices of the statehouse.

Earlier, about 1,000 people marched up Congress Avenue to protest the Klan. But that crowd grew to about 5,000 just hours later as approximately 50 Klan members arrived under heavy police protection.

Michael Lowe of Waco, leader of the Klan in Texas, and Thomas Robb of Harrison, Ark., national Klan leader, spoke for about an hour. They protested against the holiday for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the slain civil rights leader.

"You will never have America because we will not let you," Robb said to the crowd that shouted at him and tossed eggs.

During the protest, about 75 people organized by Austin singer Steve Fromholz "mooned" the Klan. While some daredevils showed their bare behinds, others revealed boxer shorts with messages painted on them.

Jay Gagen, 33, of Austin, was one of those who dropped his pants. "We just wanted to show the Klan what a ridiculous organization they are," he said.

After leaving the Capitol steps, the Klan members — behind a wall of helmeted DPS troopers — ran through two state office buildings, boarded state and county prison buses and left with a police escort.

DPS officers and several dozen protesters briefly scuffled in front of the Reagan Building, located north of the Capitol. One person broke one of the glass doors, and the officers arrested two people.

During the morning anti-Klan rally, demonstrators listened to a recording of King's "I Have a Dream" speech, and civil rights activists urged the crowd to avoid confrontation with the Klan.

"They're coming here in order to get publicity," said Gary Bledsoe, president of the state chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "They want a confrontation ... but it is not for us to stoop to their level, but we need to bring them up to our level."

Freak firewood accident kills 2 in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A child and a man were killed and seven others were injured when a trailer loaded with firewood broke free in a two-vehicle collision and careened onto a sidewalk near Hermann Park.

The boy, Alfredo Guevara, 4, and the man, whose identity was not released, were crushed by the trailer Friday morning, police said. The child died at the scene, while the man, whose body was found atop the child, was pronounced dead on arrival at Ben Taub Hospital, Houston police Sgt. B.J. Garrett said.

The seven others, including a pregnant woman and Guevara's mother and three brothers, were injured in the collision or by flying firewood, police said.

A truck, driven by Thomas Aykes of Wharton, was pulling the loaded trailer when it collided with a car driven by Margie Earl of Houston. The impact sheared off a hitch that secured the homemade flatbed trailer loaded with the wood, officers said.

As both the truck and the car spun and skidded to a halt at the intersection, witnesses told police, the trailer kept going, plowing into the seven people on the sidewalk.

Ranger contracts

DALLAS — Three Texas Rangers, including Rafael Palmeiro, have filed for salary arbitration, but the club continues to pursue a multiyear contract with the first baseman.

Pitchers Kevin Brown and Kenny Rogers also filed for the second consecutive year.

All three players went to arbitration last year. Rogers lost and received a salary of $620,000. Palmeiro ($3.85 million) and Brown ($1.2 million) won their cases.

Brown's agent said the Rangers made a mild overture about negotiating a multiyear contract and were rejected. Agent Scott Boras said Brown, who can become a free agent after the 1994 season, is more inclined to play this season under a one-year contract.

Palmeiro can become a free agent after this season. Trying to eliminate that possibility, the Rangers have had discussions with Palmeiro's agent, Jim Bronner, about a multiyear contract.

S.F. forecast

SAN FRANCISCO — Heavy rain and possible thunderstorms are forecast for today's NFC championship game between the Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers.

A strong storm in the Pacific was supposed to bring more rain into the already-soaked Bay area Saturday night, the National Weather Service said.

More rain means the sturdiness of the newly resodded Candlestick Park field will be tested. Almost an inch of rain fell in the Bay area Friday night.

■ Candelstick Park promises to be a swamp when the Cowboys and 49ers play for the NFC title today.

By Ira Miller
N.Y. Timers News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Everybody talked about "The Catch." It was followed by reports about the mud, the rain, the shoes, the cleats.

We have learned about football history, weather and grass, and now, mercifully, the buildup is about to be over.

The 49ers and Cowboys, the NFL's two best teams, will play at 3 p.m. (CST) today for the NFC championship at Candlestick Park. They'll play rain or shine, probably the former, but at least they'll finally play the game.

"I think it's a great matchup: No. 1 defense and No. 1 offense. I think it's perfect," said Ricky Watters.

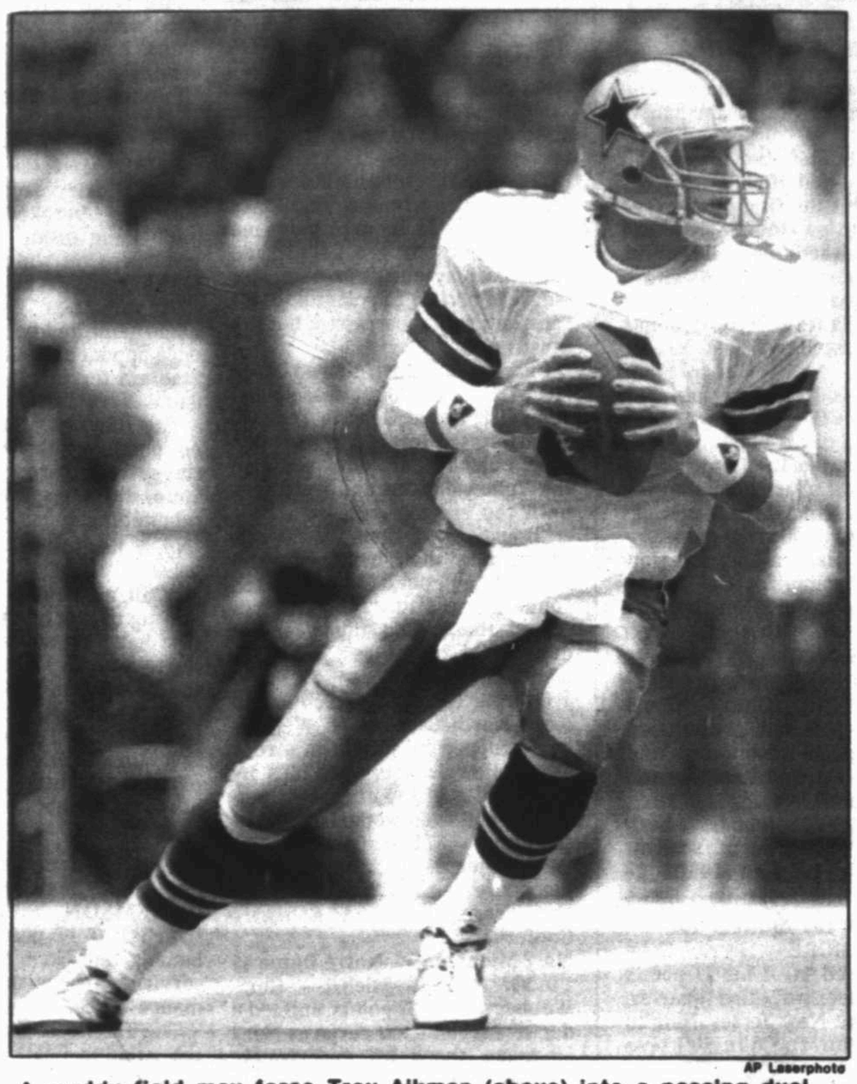

"I mean, this is the game everyone wanted to see all year long. At least everyone I talked to (was saying), 'Man, I hope you guys go against Dallas.'

"But now we're here, and it's a game, and it's a matchup, and it's a clash of the titans ... I just hope it turns out to be everything everybody expected."

Between the two teams, the game features the league's two-time passing champion (Steve Young), the league's two-time rushing champion (Emmitt Smith), the all-time leader in touchdown catches (Jerry Rice) and the league's top-rated defense (Dallas).

The differences between the teams seem relatively narrow.

■ Miami hosts Buffalo in the AFC championship.

By C.W. Nevius

MIAMI — This is so cute.

Having heard about the big playoff game at Candlestick Park this weekend, the folks down here decided to stage their own little "championship." Apparently, the winner of today's 11:30 a.m. (CDT) AFC championship gets a trip to the Super Bowl to be humiliated by the NFC team.

At least that's how it's worked the last eight times.

You've got to admit, though: They've done their homework. They've got all the factors, just like the big boys.

For example, playing the part of the Dallas Cowboys — the once great team now attempting to return to glory — are the Miami Dolphins. They've got the key advantage of having no idea what the playoffs are all about.

"Experience?" said linebacker Bryan Cox. "We're too young and naive to be worrying about experience."

And, playing the San Francisco 49ers — the established power hoping

SPC's late three sinks MC at wire

■ Although the Texans never had a lead in the game, Artie Griffin's three-point shot with 13 seconds left nails the Chaparrals.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

LEVELLAND — Sophomore Artie Griffin hit a three-pointer with 13 seconds left as South Plains College defeated Midland College 64-61 Saturday night at the Texan Dome in Levelland.

The trey gave SPC its only lead of the game as MC dropped its third straight Western Junior College Athletic Conference game.

The loss moves MC to 14-5 overall, 1-3 in conference play. SPC is now 15-5 and 3-1.

In other conference action, Odessa College upset No. 4 Howard College, 69-67, and New Mexico Junior College upended New Mexico Military Institute, 83-78. SPC's win, combined with OC's win over Howard puts the Texans and Hawks in a two-way tie for second in the conference.

After Griffin's go-ahead shot, MC had one last opportunity to tie the game, but a three-point attempt by Luis Cambraia fell short as the buzzer sounded.

MC, which played one of its most well-rounded first halves of the season, was stung with 2:54 remaining when point guard Terrance Rone fouled out. The loss of Rone left MC without a point guard and no one capable of successfully guiding the Chap offense. Shawn Morris the team's truest point, and forward Kelon Haynie were both serving suspensions for unspecified reasons and did not

Agassi foregoes Australian Open

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — It's Jim Courier weather at the Australian Open — 140 degrees, sun rays blasting through ozone holes, rubberized hard courts bouncing back heat and sizzling soles.

And it's another blown opportunity for Andre Agassi at the year's first Grand Slam event, which starts here Monday (today in the U.S.).

Courier's No. 1 ranking is up for grabs. No. 2 Stefan Edberg or No. 3 Pete Sampras could take it away, and No. 4 Boris Becker could come close, if any of them capture the title Courier won a year ago.

"This is the start of the year," Courier said. "We wipe the slate clean. We start from scratch and we go."

But in this heat, on these courts so suited to Courier's topspin style, the guy who might have had the best shot at beating him decided not to show up.

Agassi, whose own heavy topspin shots, quickness and endurance would be perfect for the Australian, was scheduled to play here for the first time after skipping it for years because it inter-

BILL PRICE

Putting 'The Catch' in proper perspective

Everybody loves a winner, so it really hasn't surprised me to see all the hullabaloo concerning the Dallas Cowboys.

Price

All those people who thought that Tom Landry was treated just horribly and vowed never to follow the JJ-led Cowboys now are harder to find than a sunny day by the Bay. Heck, more people (estimated at more than 60,000) showed up at a "pep rally" at Texas Stadium than for any of the home games of the 1-15 season in 1989. "We were really behind you all the way, JJs." Yeah, riiiight.

But like I said, winning does that to people. What may disturb those diehards of the 1-15 era more may be the fact the San Francisco fans still revel in the glory that was "The Catch." The italics are to emphasize past tense.

Those Dallas fans lived through the glory years, the Super Bowl wins (and losses), and endured their just grapes when, because of the NFL's parity scheme, the inevitable low hit rock bottom. But they are just a little weary of "The Catch," wary to cuss or discuss, watch or think about the play that sent the 49ers to the first of four Super Bowl titles while Dallas hit the downward spiral.

(Sudden random, totally unrelated thought: I'll bet the Dallas Mavericks are happier than anyone that the Cowboys are still in the playoffs. It keeps the Dallas media off their backs for the time being).

So while I was talking to a 49er fan the other day, the perfect rebuttal (something akin to "Oh, yeah?!") popped into my head. Entering today's game the Cowboys are 2-1 against the Niners in the NFC championship and 3-1 in the playoffs.

You see, while San Francisco fans may use their selective memory only to conjure up visions of Dwight Clark pulling his leaping gnome act in the Candlestick end zone, Dallas fans still have "The Comeback," and two "Bridlings of Brodie."

Who can forget, unless you're too young to remember, defensive lineman Larry Cole rolling on the ground in ecstasy after Roger Staubach threw for two touchdowns in the last 1½ minutes, giving the Cowboys a 30-28 win over the 49ers in the first round of the 1972-73 playoffs?

Then their were the NFC championships of the '71-72 and '70-71 seasons. Dallas shut down the John Brodie to Gene Washington (Minnesota had a Gene Washington, too) connection to win 14-3, in San Francisco, on its way to a Super Bowl win over Miami. The previous year the Cowboys beat the 49ers in Dallas, 17-10, before losing to Baltimore in the Big Game.

If my conversational counterpart was not aware of those facts before, he is now.

Of course, as Emmitt Smith pointed out this week, "The Catch" is ancient history (has it really been 11 years?). That means the coverage of those games from the early '70s must certainly have been recorded on scrolls.

The point to all this reckless rambling is that, even if Joe Montana does play today (which I doubt), he would be the sole remaining player from the 1981 championship game that the Niners won 28-27 when Clark pulled his gem out of the sky.

Ergo, none of the preceding has any bearing on today's game, a fact that makes this column rather useless. Maybe that's apropos because my columns tend to end in that fashion anyway. But it was fun reminiscing, wasn't it?

Bill Price is a sports writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

A big night for three 'go-to' men

■ David Robinson leads Spurs with 52 points, Michael Jordan scores 64 and Hakeem Olajuwon 42.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson scored a career-high 52 points on 20-for-28 shooting and the San Antonio Spurs extended their season-high winning streak to six games Saturday night, 124-111 over the Charlotte Hornets.

Robinson, who also had 14 rebounds and seven blocked shots, scored 33 points in the second half, giving a scoring lesson to the Hornets' heralded rookie, Alonzo Mourning, who scored 24 points. Robinson's previous career high was 43 points.

Dale Ellis scored 21 points for the Spurs, including three 3-pointers to move one ahead of Michael Adams on the NBA career list with 815.

Playing without Sean Elliott for the second consecutive game because of back spasms, the Spurs used a 9-0 run late in the third quarter and early in the fourth to go ahead 93-72 with 11:06 remaining.

The Hornets never threatened the rest of the way as San Antonio improved its record to 11-2 under new coach John Lucas and 6-0 since Avery Johnson became the starter at point guard.

Rockets 104, Knicks 102

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored a season-high 42 points and blocked Greg Anthony's final shot of the game, preserving the Houston Rockets' victory over the New York Knicks.

Olajuwon scored 16 points in the fourth quarter and Matt Bullard came off the bench with 11 points in the final period, including two 3-pointers that lifted the Rockets to their fourth straight victory after seven consecutive losses.

Olajuwon, who also had 14 rebounds, saved the game from possible overtime when he blocked the final shot by Anthony with 2.5 seconds left.

New York tied the game at 83-83 on two free throws by Doc Rivers with 5:05 to go, but a three-point play by Winston Garland with 6:03 left gave Houston the lead for good.

Olajuwon's basket with 18 seconds remaining gave the Rockets a 103-99 lead.

Magic 128, Bulls 124

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan's NBA season-high 64 points wasn't enough for the Chicago Bulls as they lost to the Orlando Magic in overtime.

Jordan and Indiana's Reggie Miller held the previous season-high with 57 points. Jordan, whose career-high is 69 points, made 27 of 49 field-goal attempts against the Magic, who also won at Boston on Friday night.

■ NBA ROUNDUP

With 1:07 left in overtime and the score tied 118-118, Nick Anderson hit the first of two free throws to put the Magic ahead for good, then followed his miss on the second attempt with a basket that made it 121-118.

Scott Skiles scored 31 points and Shaquille O'Neal 29 for Orlando.

Nuggets 106, Mavericks 91

DENVER — Robert Pack scored all of his 19 points in the second half as the Denver Nuggets kept Dallas winless on the road and handed the Mavericks their 30th loss in 32 games.

Derek Harper had a season-high 35 points for the Mavericks, who are 0-15 on the road this season, with their closest game 14 points.

Cavaliers 127, Hawks 99

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Brad Daugherty scored 19 points on nearly perfect shooting and Larry Nance had 20 points and 14 rebounds.

The Cavaliers, who have beaten the Hawks eight straight times, have won 14 of 18 overall.

Nets 109, Bullets 101

BALTIMORE — Derrick Coleman scored 11 of his 27 points in the decisive third quarter, lifting the New Jersey Nets to their fourth consecutive victory.

The Bullets, who are 8-7 at their regular home in Landover, Md., dropped to 0-3 at Baltimore Arena.

76ers 123, Pistons 108

PHILADELPHIA — Jeff Hornacek scored 25 points and Tim Perry had a season-high 21 on 9-for-9 shooting as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Detroit Pistons.

Hornacek made 11 of his 15 shots as Philadelphia snapped a five-game skid against the Pistons, including three straight home games against them.

Pacers 117, Warriors 116

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored the last five points of the game, including a steal and layup with 39 seconds left, as the Indiana Pacers edged the Golden State Warriors.

It was the fourth consecutive defeat on the road for the Warriors.

Celties 110, Bucks 99

MILWAUKEE — Xavier McDaniel scored 19 points, including two key fourth-quarter baskets to hold off a Milwaukee rally, as the Boston Celtics sent the Bucks to their sixth straight loss.

Jazz 108, Kings 107

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone and Tyrone Corbin each scored eight points in a fourth-quarter rally, leading the Utah Jazz to a victory over the Sacramento Kings.

College of Charleston topples Jackets

Associated Press

ATLANTA — In just six days, Georgia Tech has experienced the highest of highs and the lowest of lows.

The latter happened Saturday night as the No. 8 Yellow Jackets were upset by College of Charleston, 84-67. Last Sunday, Georgia Tech had the biggest win of the season, knocking Duke from the No. 1 spot and snapping the Blue Devils' 23-game winning streak.

Marion Busby scored 29 points and Patrick King added 20 as Charleston (8-2) shot 59 percent from the field and never trailed in the second half.

"I take full responsibility," Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "We just were not ready to play. It's my responsibility to get us up and ready to play and it was obvious we were not. So I apologize to our fans, and I'm embarrassed, but life must go on."

Charleston, which moved up to NCAA Division I last season and went 19-8, lost at Georgia Tech 77-70 last season in a game in which they outshot and outrebounded the Yellow Jackets and were in it until the end.

"I just asked them to do two things, play their hearts out and let it all hang out," Cougars coach John Kresse said. "Last year we scared them. And this year we didn't fold in the last seven or eight minutes."

Georgia Tech (9-3), which lost to No. 5 North Carolina on Wednesday, dropped its second in a row. The Yellow Jackets were hurt by poor field goal shooting — 41 percent — and even worse free throw shooting — 37.5 percent.

The Cougars, 1983 NAIA champions, are in their first season in the Trans America Athletic Conference.

No. 2 Michigan 70, Notre Dame 55

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Chris Webber scored 22 points, and led a decisive second-half surge as No. 2 Michigan shook off surprisingly stubborn Notre Dame.

Michigan (13-2) led only 39-35 when Webber started a 16-point run with a 3-pointer. He finished it with another, and the Wolverines held the Irish without a basket for nearly 7 minutes.

■ TOP 25 ROUNDUP

Juwan Howard added 18 points and Jalen Rose 14 for Michigan, which overcame 23 points by Notre Dame's Ryan Hoover.

No. 3 Duke 65, No. 13 Iowa 56

DURHAM, N.C. — There was Bobby Hurley from the outside early and Cherokee Parks and Antonio Lang inside late and Duke just keeps on winning at home.

The third-ranked Blue Devils (12-1) won their 36th consecutive home game and beat a non-conference opponent at Cameron Indoor Stadium for the 78th consecutive game.

The Hawkeyes (12-3) led by seven points in the first half and stayed close through some tough zone defenses and aggressive rebounding.

No. 4 Kansas 98, Louisville 77

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Rex Walters hit a 3-pointer from the corner to trigger a 14-0 run in the first half that sparked No. 4 Kansas to a victory over Louisville — the 1,500th win in Kansas' history.

Kansas recorded its first victory in 1899 under James Naismith, the inventor of basketball. North Carolina and Kentucky are the only other teams that have won at least 1,500 games.

No. 5 North Carolina 82, Clemson 72

CLEMSON, S.C. — George Lynch had 17 points and 13 rebounds, and No. 5 North Carolina survived a poor shooting performance to beat Clemson.

The Tar Heels (14-1, 4-0), leading the Atlantic Coast Conference in shooting percentage coming in, won their sixth straight game despite hitting just 42.9 percent. They were a dismal 11 of 32 in the first half.

The Tigers (9-3, 0-3) lost their third straight game — all to Top 25 teams.

No. 6 Indiana 83, Illinois 79

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Calbert Cheaney scored 30 points as No. 6 Indiana beat Illinois, denying Illini coach Lou Henson his 600th career victory.

Illinois pulled within 75-74 with 2:15 to play, but Cheaney hit four free throws in the next minute and Greg Graham added four more in the final 23 seconds.

Cheaney finished with 14 points from the foul line, while Graham and Brian Evans added 15 each.

The victory pushed Indiana's record to 15-2, including 4-0 in the Big Ten. Illinois dropped to 9-5, 2-1.

Pittsburgh 76, No. 7 Seton Hall 73

PITTSBURGH — Garrick Thomas hit his fourth 3-pointer of the game with four seconds left as unranked Pittsburgh continued its run of Top 25 upsets, ending No. 7 Seton Hall's 11-game winning streak.

Pitt (11-2, 4-2 in the Big East) has beaten three Top 25 teams in the last 19 days — UCLA, Connecticut and Seton Hall.

No. 11 Cincinnati 70, DePaul 64

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Nick Van Exel scored 25 points and 11th-ranked Cincinnati hung on to down DePaul.

It was the eighth consecutive victory for the Bearcats (11-1 overall, 2-0 Great Midwest), who had to hang on after building a 24-point halftime lead.

No. 12 Arizona 87, Washington St. 63

TUCSON, Ariz. — Chris Mills scored 17 points and No. 12 Arizona used its height, depth and defense to bury Washington State.

The Wildcats (8-2, 3-0 Pac-10) led by 13 at halftime and built their advantage to 60-34 in the first 5:30 of the second half. Washington State (6-6, 0-3) didn't score its first basket of the second half until 13:13 remained.

It was another 2:46 before Tony Harris hit a 3-pointer and cut Arizona's advantage to 65-39.

No. 15 Connecticut 66, No. 22 Boston College 64

BOSTON — Donyell Marshall hit a long jump shot with 1.6 seconds left to give Connecticut a victory over Boston College in a battle for New England supremacy.

Marshall, who hit two free throws with 1:33 left to tie the game at 64-64, picked up a loose ball just inside the 3-point line following a missed Connecticut shot and was successful on a high, looping shot.

Oregon St. 79, No. 15 UCLA 73

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Charles McKinney made four 3-pointers and scored 16 points in the second half as Oregon State beat 15th-ranked UCLA.

Scott Haskin scored 22 points, grabbed a career-high 17 rebounds and played the entire game for the Beavers (8-5, 4-0).

No. 17 Purdue 61, Penn St. 54

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Glenn Robinson had 21 points and 14 rebounds, and No. 17 Purdue overcame poor shooting in the first half to beat Penn State.

Wisconsin 79, No. 19 Minnesota 70

MADISON, Wis. — Michael Finley scored 17 of his 21 points in the second half to lead Wisconsin to a victory over 19th-ranked Minnesota.

No. 20 Georgetown 66, Villanova 56

PHILADELPHIA — Othella Harrington scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half and fellow freshman Eric Micoud added 13 as No. 20 Georgetown defeated Villanova.

No. 23 Michigan State 80, Northwestern 75

EVANSTON, Ill. — Shawn Respert scored 22 of his 25 points in the second half as No. 23 Michigan State beat Northwestern.

No. 24 Syracuse 69, Providence 57

PROVIDENCE, R.I.— Lawrence Moten scored 15 of his 26 points in the second half as No. 24 Syracuse overcame a halftime deficit and defeated Providence.

Houston, Rice remain unbeaten in conference

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Anthony Goldwire scored 19 points and David Diaz added 17 Saturday, leading Houston to an 81-69 victory over Texas A&M.

The Cougars improved to 9-2 overall and 2-0 in Southwest Conference play while dropping the Aggies to 5-8 and 0-2.

Houston led 19-17 with 7:25 remaining in the first half, but went on an 18-9 run for a 37-26 halftime lead. The Aggies used a 12-5 run to pull within 42-38 early in the second half and later got within 4 points again, at 50-46.

But the Cougars, led by Derrick Smith's 9 points, pulled away and the Aggies never got closer than 7 points the rest of the way.

Damon Johnson scored a game-high 23 points and pulled down 10 rebounds for Texas A&M, while Chuck Henderson added 15 points.

Charles Outlaw contributed 16 points and Jessie Drain 10 for the Cougars. Goldwire scored 7 of Houston's final 15 points on free throws.

Texas A&M was without 6-6 freshman reserve Lance Broderson, who sprained an ankle in practice on Friday.

Rice 84, Texas Christian 65

HOUSTON — Brent Scott scored a career-high 31 points, leading Rice in a victory over Texas Christian and helping the Owls to their first 3-0 start in Southwest Conference play since 1953.

■ SWC ROUNDUP

Rice improved to 8-4 overall while winning its sixth consecutive game. The Horned Frogs lost their sixth in a row, dropping to 2-9 and 0-2 in SWC play.

After leading 37-30 at halftime, the Owls pulled away with an 18-3 run early in the second half. Scott had 12 points during the st etch, which ended with Rice ahead 55-35 with 11:50 to play.

Scott also grabbed a game-high eight rebounds, helping the Owls to a 36-14 advantage on the boards.

Torrey Andrews had 12 points for Rice and Marvin Moore added 10.

The Horned Frogs were led by Jentry Moore's 19 points. Allen Tolley scored 15 and Brent Atwater 10.

TCU was playing without coach Moe Iba, who left the team to be with his family following the death of his father, coaching legend Henry Iba, on Thursday.

Assistant coach Ken Smith handled coaching duties in Moe Iba's absence.

Baylor 87, Texas 86

AUSTIN — Willie Sublett hit a 15-foot jumper with two seconds remaining, lifting Baylor to a victory over Texas.

The Bears improved to 10-2 overall and 2-0 in Southwest Conference play while sinking Texas to 5-7 and 0-4. The Longhorns' five-game losing streak is the longest in coach Tom Penders' five years at Texas.

Sublett's winning shot offset a season-best 34-point performance by Texas sophomore guard Terrance Rencher.

Texas led by up to 7 points several times in the first 20 minutes and took a 47-45 advantage into the half.

The Bears then opened the second half with a 7-0 run and built leads up to 72-58 with 9:41 remaining.

But Texas surged back behind six points each from Rencher and Albert Burditt for a 77-76 lead with 4:31 to go.

Southern Methodist 61, Texas Tech 59

LUBBOCK — Gerald Lewis sank two free throws with 13 seconds remaining, lifting Southern Methodist to a victory over Texas Tech.

SMU improved to 9-4 overall and 2-0 in the Southwest Conference. The Mustangs also beat Texas on the road to open undefeated against two teams expected to battle for the league crown.

The Red Raiders fell to 8-4 overall in their league opener.

Lewis, who scored 15 points, was fouled by Will Flemons to get to the line, and after he sank both shots, Chad Collins' halfcourt desperation heave bounded off the backboard as time expired.

The foul at the end ruined a great performance by Flemons, last year's SWC Player of the Year, who had 16 points and 19 rebounds for his seventh double-double of the season.

TENNIS: Heat adds to courts' speed

fered with his winter vacations.

A week ago, he was "focusing on tennis" in the United States, his manager, Bill Shelton said. There was no mention of illness, no hint of a tickle in his throat. A few days later, Agassi suddenly withdrew from the tournament, claiming a long-suffering infection had developed into bronchitis.

Agassi's alleged ailment, real or contrived, deprived the Australian Open of one of its main attractions — especially with the absence of semi-retired John McEnroe.

More than that, it showed that Agassi, despite winning Wimbledon last year after skipping that championship for years, still is not ready to make a serious bid for the top ranking. Players who are serious about reaching No. 1 go to all the Grand Slams if they can walk and get out of bed.

Edberg is here, fighting off a cold, but doing all he can to reclaim the No. 1 spot and the Australian title he won twice.

Sampras is here, playing through the pain of shin splints, trying to get rid of his Australian jinx. When he got on the plane to come here, he considered his bad luck the past two years.

"I was thinking, 'I hope this plane lands,' " he said with a nervous smile.

He played tuneup tournaments on his last two visits and each time left after a week because of injuries — first shin splints, then a shoulder injury. Missing the Australian Open, he felt, set him back for several months both times.

Ivan Lendl, recovering from a groin injury, is going for his third Australian title.

Lendl used to thrive in these conditions, donning his desert cap and slogging around the court for hours until he left his defeated foes in puddles of sweat.

Courier has his own sartorial style, going nowhere without his baseball cap, and his own way of wearing down opponents. If he plays the way he did through the first half of 1992, no one is likely to upset him. Just ask Sampras.

"These courts respond well to spin," Sampras said. "With his heavy forehand and his good backhand — he hits with a very heavy topspin — his shots penetrate deeply.

"And it's going to be very hot, and there are going to be some long matches, and Courier is probably the fittest player on the tour and the hardest worker. So he's looking like the player to beat this year."

Monica Seles is always the player to beat on the women's side. She's going for her third straight Australian title and, as the No. 1 seed, has about as easy a draw to the semifinals as possible.

No. 2 Steffi Graf and No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini probably are the only players who could upset Seles right now, but if the weather stays hot it could throw off anyone.

Jennifer Capriati, seeded No. 7, is changing her style a little, going to the net more often and taking one-handed volleys in hopes of closing the gap on the top players.

Capriati, 16, looks awkward at times, as if unsure of where she ought to be, but as she gains confidence in her new strokes she could be a threat to win her first Grand Slam title. She made a big breakthrough at the Olympics last summer, winning the gold, but knows she can't often beat Seles or Graf by staying on the baseline.

Not coincidentally, Seles also wants to develop her net game and become more of an all-court player.

"I think it will make it a lot easier on us to play that way," Capriati said. "Monica, if she hits a great (baseline) shot, can end the point so much sooner and easier if she came to the net instead of just hitting it back and playing a rally again. That's what I want to do.

"I'm not, like, a net player, but I'm better. It's difficult to start doing things you're not used to doing. I'm not coming to the net on everything. You've got to do it sometimes and take your chances to get confidence."

Taking chances usually is the key to becoming a champion and reigning as No. 1. Seles and Courier take their chances from the baseline, slugging for winners. Edberg and Sampras do it from the net.

Agassi, ranked No. 9, takes his chances on the court, too, but not often enough. No play, no points.

Twitty still in front after 3 rounds

Associated Press

■ Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU, Hawaii — It is not exactly familiar territory for Howard Twitty: a 3-shot lead going into the final round of the Hawaiian Open.

After all, it's been almost 13 years since the 44-year-old veteran scored his last victory on the PGA Tour.

And the last time he was in this position?

"I don't know. I can't remember. I don't have any idea," Twitty said.

On the other hand, there's Paul Azinger. He's in second place — a very familiar position indeed.

While he has yet to win this title, Azinger has three runner-up finishes in the Hawaiian Open and on another occasion missed a playoff by one shot.

"I don't really know why this golf course suits my game so well. I just can't explain it," Azinger said Saturday after a 3-under-par 69 lifted him into a place he knows so well at the Waialae Country Club.

Twitty, however, needed only a hard-won round of 70 in gusty, blustery Trade Winds and occasional shower, to add one stroke to the two-shot lead he held after both the first and second rounds.

"You could have fooled me," he said. "On this course, shoot 70 and you figure to lose ground."

He will take a 201 total, 15 under par, into today's last 18 holes of the chase for a $216,000 first prize.

Joey Sindelar, who scrambled to a 66, was alone in third at 205.

Keith Clearwater, with a 68, and former Hawaiian Open winner Wayne Levi, with a 69, were next at 206.

Cowboys' success puts team in giving spirit

By Scott Ostler
N.Y. Times News Service

VALLEY RANCH — Dissension has struck the Dallas Cowboys.

It happened Thursday in the Cowboys' locker room at their practice compound here in Valley Ranch, which sounds like a salad dressing but is actually a suburb, although it is strangely coincidental that Dallas spelled backwards is Sallad.

But that's another story.

The calm, businesslike atmosphere that has pervaded Camp Cowboy this week gave way to bitter rancor (which is also a salad dressing) when Michael Irvin started handing out fancy leather jackets.

Irvin is the team's star wide receiver and clubhouse leader. In appreciation for the fine work turned in by the team's blockers, Irvin had leather jackets custom made for the Cowboys' offensive linemen and fullbacks.

The jackets are gaudy blue-and-white garments plastered with NFL and Cowboys logos and player numbers. Irvin handed out the jackets as the team broke for lunch.

The guys who got them were thrilled. It was the first such gift they had received all day.

The guys who didn't get them were like kids stiffed by Santa Claus.

"Ain't nothing in my locker!" shouted wide receiver Alvin Harper.

■ INSIGHT

Running back Emmitt Smith was also miffed, and Irvin tried to mollify Smith, the NFL's most dangerous rusher, by lacing Smith's football shoes for him.

Sure, it's possible I misread the situation, that Harper and Smith were just "goofing around," to use the players' jargon.

Smith and a couple of other players talked about how tense the team has been this week preparing for today's Muddle in the Puddle, but judging from the locker-room atmosphere the last couple of days, the Cowboys handle tension well.

As Harper stormed around the locker room railing at the injustice of being left off the jacket list, one player sprawled on the carpet and worked a crossword puzzle (most experts expect today's game to be "physical," but you want to be ready in case it turns "mental"), punter Mike Saxon played catch with a buddy, and big Frank Cornish dribbled a basketball behind his back and through teammates.

There was much joking and good spirits. It was such a warm, convivial atmosphere that you expected the players to break into a song from "Brigadoon."

"Everyone is excited," said backup quarterback Steve Beuerlein. "Everyone realizes how big this is, but nobody is overwhelmed by where we are."

Nor are they underwhelmed. They are merely whelmed.

Most teams in the Cowboys' position, making the playoffs for the first time in a decade, would be happy just to be here. The Cowboys are motivated to take it one step further, because beating the 49ers would mean two more weeks of gift giving.

"Every day we come in and there's something new in our lockers," center Mark Stepnoski said.

"Troy (Aikman) and Emmitt gave us airline tickets. Troy gave us each a gift basket with a portable computer. Beuerlein gave us a bag of clothes and a gift certificate to a stereo place. (Tight end) Jay Novacek gave us each a huge deer sausage and smoked jerky."

In addition, Smith recently made good on his promise to buy each offensive lineman a Rolex watch if he won last season's NFL rushing title.

But don't think the Cowboys are too busy exchanging gifts to take care of business.

Defensive tackle Tony Casillas, for instance, was mulling over a dilemma presented by the 49ers' quarterbacks. Generally, you want to rough up the other team's quarterback enough to sideline him, but the Cowboys aren't convinced this is the way to go Sunday, considering who the 49ers' second-stringer is.

"I don't know whether to put the guy (Steve Young) out of the game or keep him in the game," Casillas said, philosophically.

The Dallas defenders will be required to make this decision in a fraction of a second. There's the quarterback! Should I break something?

It will require what you might call a snap decision.

On the weather front, the Cowboys, by decree of coach Jimmy Johnson, are officially not worried about the possibility that Candlestick Park may be California's shallowest lake.

The Dallas players are expressing no worry, despite having heard reports that helicopters are being brought in to hover over the Candlestick field, which won't dry the field but will create more favorable conditions for windsurfing.

The Cowboys are trying hard to maintain their edge without getting too edgy.

"It is kind of tense around here," Smith said. "We're on a bubble, and we don't want the bubble to pop."

Just then Harper walked past, yelling about not getting a jacket, causing Smith to double over with laughter and lose his train of thought.

The locker-room scene spoke volumes.

Based on my many years of observing teams, it's clear that the Cowboys are either emotionally unprepared for today or well-prepared, one of the two.

Scott Ostler's column is distributed by the New York Times News Service.

NFC: Hype goes into warp drive

(From 1B)

The 49ers appear to have a slight edge on offense, the Cowboys on defense.

Each team has a Pro Bowl quarterback, Pro Bowl running back, Pro Bowl wide receiver, Pro Bowl tight end and two Pro Bowl offensive linemen.

But although the Cowboys had the No. 1 defense, only the 49ers have a Pro Bowl defensive player (Pierce Holt).

Dallas has better special teams. The 49ers have more NFL big-game experience. The Cowboys are quicker and younger, with the NFL's youngest roster. The 49ers are more experienced and playing at home.

If nothing else, the game also has proved that a two-week build-up, such as is usual before the Super Bowl, is not necessary for the hype machine to go into warp drive. Today's mud-wrestling exhibition has been dissected as thoroughly as any game before it.

George Toma was quoted more than Steve Young. The Cowboys opened Texas Stadium for a pep rally, and 60,000 people showed up. The politicians made their usual silly bets.

■ MORE SPORTS, 8B

Searching for a new angle, a newspaper in Fort Worth interviewed a priest in San Francisco's Chinatown and a radio station in San Francisco interviewed an astrologist. Searching an ancient book used in some Eastern religions, the priest said the 49ers would win. The astrologer hedged.

Sounds like some people had too much time on their hands.

Hey, there was even time enough to second-guess the groundskeepers.

"Everybody's talking about George Toma coming in. The last time I played on a George Toma field was the Miami Super Bowl (following the 1988 season), and that was a lousy field, also," said 49ers' tackle Harris Barton.

"The bottom line is that Candlestick is a tough place to play, and they should have kept the guys who know what's going on over there. It's a tough place to prepare the field.

"The tides rise, it's been raining all month, and they come in and rip up the field and try to put down something new. I don't know much about grass, but it can't be any better than it was ... It will be disappointing if the game turns based on the field."

In Dallas, Cowboys' coach Jimmy Johnson made a point of saying that he didn't want the field condition to become the focal point of the team's week, but he said it often and players were asked about it every day.

There is no escaping the central fact that this game could be remembered for the effects of nature, and Johnson didn't overlook it in preparation.

First he was going to water the practice field in Dallas. Then he wasn't going to. Finally he ordered the hoses turned on when an expected rainfall did not materialize.

The 49ers didn't have that problem, because they had real rain almost every day to keep their practice fields moist.

"The way I look at the situation, we can go out there and just play on dirt without any grass," said Jerry Rice.

AFC: Miami hopes Buffalo not a vice

to stay atop the standings — are the Buffalo Bills.

They've even got a quarterback controversy. You can tell because everyone is insisting that it is NO BIG DEAL that veteran Jim Kelly is expected to start instead of up-and-coming Frank Reich.

"When Jim got hurt," Reich said this week, "what I was thinking in my mind was, 'Just keep this going until Jim can get back again.'"

And that's your extremely sincere sound bite for the day.

Then there are the concerns about the weather, just like in San Francisco. Let's come right out and say it, it is just a shame that a football game has to be played under these conditions. This is simply not football weather.

Thursday was typical, as South Florida reels from the effects of what the papers are calling "a slow moving cold front" with rain. By 10 a.m. it was still no warmer than 68 degrees, and it took until nearly 1 p.m. before the air warmed up to a more tolerable 85 degrees.

And, let me tell you, it is not a dry heat.

How the Bills will react to these extreme temperatures is anyone's guess. We can only hope that they have prepared.

Has Buffalo coach Marv Levy been able to practice in the team boiler room, or somewhere else to duplicate the Miami conditions? We just don't know.

The AFC teams have added one little wrinkle, and it's a dandy.

When was the last time we had a good old-fashioned grudge match? Didn't the league ban those along with instant replay?

Well, we've got one here, a real rivalry.

"It's not a rivalry," says Cox, "it's hatred. That's not a secret."

And if it was a secret, it's pretty well out of the bag now. That happened when Miami safety Louis Oliver sent a T-shirt to Buffalo players, including running back Thurman Thomas, which read, "A Dolphins Favorite Christmas Carol? Deck the Bills, we'll all be jolly."

"I guess he had money to waste on T-shirts," muttered Buffalo tight end Keith McKeller. "We're not a team that does things like that."

Oh yeah, say the Dolphins. Don't you think we get the newspapers down here?

"They've made a few comments," says linebacker David Griggs. "Thurman Thomas said we were babies, and 'Those guys can't play in the cold.'"

"They're so cocky and confident," says Oliver. "They challenge you to beat them."

Oliver, of course, can match anyone for confidence. After he intercepted a pass in Miami's 31-0 win over San Diego last week, he took off on a wild, strutting display that saw him doff his helmet, run through virtually the entire team on the sideline and throw the football into the stands. It was a display that tightened the famous jaw of Miami coach Don Shula, although others took it more lightly.

"By the time he finished that act I was under the bench laughing," backup safety Liffort Hobley told reporters. "He told me at halftime that if he got an interception everybody was going to know about it. Well, everyone sure did.

"I could never do something like that myself. I can just see me trying and my wife yelling out from the stands, 'I told you that you should have taken those dancing lessons.'"

Bottom line, as they like to say, is that it is a buyer's market for talk right now.

"Until we knock them off," says Griggs, "and have something to talk about, all we can do is listen."

There is really only one facet of the playoff atmosphere the AFC teams have yet to master. They're too darn accessible.

The Miami locker room was completely open to reporters, and the players were extremely cooperative in requests for interviews.

In the NFC, the media is allowed in the locker room, but only when there are no players there.

Floor price, import fee needed in oil industry

U.S. Sen.-designate Bob Krueger's assertion last week that once in the Senate he will suggest a floor price of $20 a barrel in addition to an oil import fee as a means of revitalizing the domestic oil industry is good news for the beleaguered oil patch, now in the 10th year of depressed activity. But there is a negative flip side to his talk of a floor price for oil.

Most industry officials agree that an oil import fee is needed to help stabilize the industry. Yet the idea of an oil import fee actually is far preferable to that of a floor price, although the result from both would be essentially the same.

The problem that arises when Texas politicians in Washington, D.C. start talking about a floor price for oil is that other politicians immediately assert the need for a "ceiling price" also. After all, those politicians assert, the Congress must guard against "excess profits" in the oil business. Of course, they can only do that if they remain blind to the fact that the domestic oil industry has been in a state of suspended animation for a decade with hardly any profit to speak of at all, a condition imposed by the low oil price resulting from the world glut of oil.

Now, with the U.S. economy beginning its recovery from the pre-Christmas doldrums, Krueger and other Texas politicians are starting to talk about the need for a recovery in the domestic oil industry. They're correct to do so.

Krueger's suggestion of a $20 a barrel floor price for oil in addition to an oil import fee would be the ideal tool to help the industry recover. Of course, if Krueger's suggestion about both the floor price and an import fee brings shouts from other congressmen for a ceiling price on oil, it would be better to simply work toward enactment of an oil import fee to kick in at the $20 or $25 a barrel level. It's always preferable to avoid the feds' entangling traps if at all possible.

Krueger is correct to note that oil and gas are still Texas' bread and butter. It also can give the nation greater energy independence.

It's time for recovery in the oil patch — but let's avoid as many federal "strings" as possible.

Business involvement could help save schools

Financing Texas' public schools must be at the top of the order of business for the Texas Legislature. . . . And urgently so, since a lame-duck special session failed — for good reason — to pass a school funding plan. The so-called Robin Hood plan for recapturing property taxes from property-wealthy districts to send to property-poor districts, as proposed, provides no long-term escape from the school funding quagmire.

If the Legislature fails to meet its challenge, the state is headed for an unavoidable train wreck resulting in the closure of Texas' public schools. Such action would create chaos in our school districts and mark Texas as an undesirable state in which to raise families and do business.

Anticipating such dire consequences has caused the state's business community, at long last, to get involved in this politically intractable problem. . . . Their proposal may be the last best hope of avoiding that June disaster.

As unpalatable as the limited recapture plan is, the business leaders would be willing to accept such a plan with the guarantee that it be a temporary two-year bridge to a long-term solution that would involve an overhaul of both school financing and the state's tax structure.

There is no easy way out of this morass. But it is a hopeful sign that business leaders are getting involved and may help lead the politicians out of the wilderness.

License suspension bill deserves prompt action

Suppose a plague suddenly killed 1,200 people while maiming another 33,000, many of them teen-agers. There undoubtedly would be public outcry. Government would take all steps to eradicate the plague.

But every year those same numbers of people are killed and maimed in alcohol-related car wrecks, and little is said.

One state senator, Judith Zaffirini, a Laredo Democrat, would like to change that. Zaffirini plans to introduce a bill that would automatically suspend the driver's license of someone who failed or refused to take a blood-alcohol test. This will be the fourth time Zaffirini has introduced the bill. Unfortunately, some shortsighted legislators and members of the public seem to think drinking and driving is a constitutionally protected right that cannot be infringed upon no matter how many lives are saved.

Zaffirini has said she is tired of those who worry more about the rights of drunken drivers than then right of the victim. We agree. The Legislature should pass this bill as quickly as possible.

Clinton's VA chief could be an enigma

WASHINGTON — Jesse Brown will never be accused of being one of the so-called "policy wonks" of the Clinton administration. He's a man of action and bears the scars to prove it.

Anderson

Brown's boot-strap rise from inner-city Chicago to the Clinton Cabinet as Secretary of Veterans Affairs is a tale of true grit. The 48-year-old former-Marine was disabled in Vietnam when a bullet shattered his right arm. Transforming misfortune into a mission, Brown joined the Disabled American Veterans in 1967 and has served as its executive director for the past five years.

Today, Brown is one of the biggest wild cards of the Clinton Cabinet: impressive and qualified but neither "safe" nor predictable. His appointment marks the first time that a VA chief has been plucked from the leadership of a service organization, such as DAV and Veterans of Foreign Wars. Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., has tagged these groups the "professional fund-raising veterans" whose "demands are insatiable."

The groups certainly showed Edward Derwinski who was boss.

The Bush administration sacked the Veterans Affairs chief several days after the VFW, which backed Bush in 1988, declined to endorse either candidate last year. Although he squeezed three consecutive $1-billion increases for the VA budget out of his administration, Derwinski became political dead meat when he proposed a pilot program in which two underutilized VA hospitals would have been allowed to treat poor non-vets.

The program, which was shot down, was designed to justify a $15 billion VA health-care system in which some hospitals are as much as 50 percent vacant.

The message was clear: Vet entitlements are sacrosanct. Agency insiders question whether Brown can make the transition from lobbyist to leader, from advocacy to austerity. A recent General Accounting Office report predicted that "efforts to contain the rising federal deficit will likely mean that VA, like other government entitlements, will have to operate its programs and activities with increasingly constrained resources."

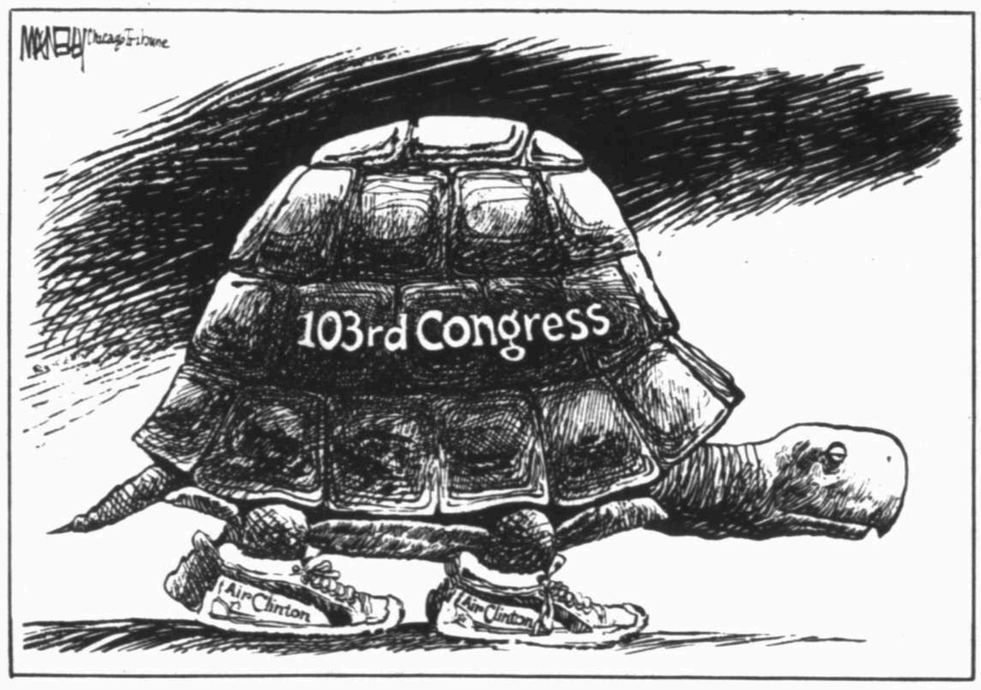

"His challenge will be to go from advocacy — in other words, 'give me more, more, more' — to 'how can I get the most efficient and streamlined VA,'" one agency official told us.

During his recent confirmation hearings, Brown struck a conciliatory tone, saying, "I understand and I think veterans understand that with that responsibility, it has to be used in the context of what is best for the nation as a whole."

Which Brown will sit at the Cabinet table, the hawk or the dove? The uncertainty makes the VA one of the sleeper stories of the new administration. For Clinton, the issue was already laden with emotion, owing to allegations of Vietnam draft dodging. In that light, Clinton's largesse toward Vietnam vets, seemingly boundless during the campaign, raises the question whether he was offering campaign promises or penance?

VA insiders speculate that one of two scenarios will materialize within the first 100 days of the Clinton administration. The first: Brown goes to the wall within the administration fighting for more money and wider eligibility for existing programs, pitting himself against Budget Director Leon Panetta, who wants to put all entitlements on the negotiating table.

Georgia governor takes stand against flag

WASHINGTON — "In Dixieland I'll take my stand ..."

On Feb. 10, 1956, 21 months after the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision and less than three months after Rosa Parks was arrested for refusing to yield her seat to a white male passenger on a bus in Montgomery, Ala., the Georgia Legislature took a stand. It redesigned the state flag that had been adopted by the 1879 legislature (which included many Confederate veterans). The 1956 legislature made a new flag, two-thirds of which is the Confederate Battle Flag.

Will

Last week Gov. Zell Miller asked the legislature to, as it were, furl the Battle Flag. He wants a state flag without that "symbol of defiance and intolerance."

In his State of the State address he noted that for the first time since President Jackson from Tennessee and Vice President Calhoun from South Carolina took office in 1829, the nation is to be led by "two sons of the South." The time has come, Miller said, to repudiate the flag that is the last remnant of a political stance long-since repudiated throughout the South.

The 1956 flag was "imposed" (Miller's acerbic word) during what Miller rightly calls a "segregationist frenzy." The governor in 1956, Marvin Griffin, was saying "Georgia will have separate public schools or no public schools" and the legislature was stampeding to vote just that — either to defy the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution by maintaining segregation, or to abolish public education.

Polls today prove that Miller's position on the flag is intensely unpopular. And his argument is especially admirable because it is optional. He could couch his argument in mushy rhetoric about "sensitivity" for "feelings." Instead, he cuts to the quick of Southern history. A former professor of history (at Young Harris College, Emory University and the University of Georgia), he knows that the shape of the future is influenced by interpretations of the past, and in his interpretation he does not mince words.

The Confederacy, he notes with nice astringency, represents just 1.5 percent of Georgia's 260-year history. "Yet it is the Confederacy's most inflammatory symbol that dominates our flag today." The 1956 flag identifies Georgia "with the dark side of the Confederacy," the determination to destroy the United States, if necessary, in order to deny some Americans the equal rights that are every American's birthright.

He finds "infuriating" the notion that the 1956 flag is necessary lest Georgians forget the sacrifices of Confederate soldiers. He has standing to be furious. He is the great-grandson of a soldier wounded while serving with Stonewall Jackson at Chancellorsville, and wounded again at Gettysburg, where his brother died. Georgia's memory is kept alive by graveyards, monuments, literature and family histories, not to mention the name of Sherman, who arguably made Georgia the first arena of modern warfare.

Miller will not traffic in the cloying sentimentality about "the Lost Cause" — a sentimentality often inversely proportional to the historical knowledge of the person waxing sentimental. When Miller says the 1956 flag "exhibits pride in the enslavement of many of our ancestors," he is saying: The Confederacy was not the pretty swirl of crinolines painted by Atlanta's Margaret Mitchell in "Gone With The Wind."

RUSSELL BAKER

Media creates illusion of joy in Washington

At these times Washington is like an old courtesan taking a new lover. Necessity counts for more than passion in these affairs, and what appears at first to be love quickly proves to be cold calculation.

Baker

One must accommodate, after all, in a world where new conquerors arrive with such regularity. After Napoleon was defeated, Paris — official Paris, that is — shrugged and gave herself with a smile to the new crowd behind the Duke of Wellington.

People of the world do not confuse these matters with the love celebrated by poets. Unofficial Paris, of course, kept Napoleon in her heart and to this day has never quite got over him.

In this she is more beguiling than unofficial Washington, which rarely becomes passionately involved with any of the constant flux of conquering heroes. Franklin Roosevelt perhaps was truly loved by the unofficial Washington of his day, which was black, cultivated and middle-class.

Since then, unofficial Washington has changed a great deal. Most of it, in fact, now lives in white suburbs and in automobiles inching along ever-expanding, ever more congested highways.

It is not absurd to speak of suburbs as capable of giving their heart to anyone, yet the deepest emotions of suburban unofficial Washington are engaged chiefly with taxation and highway construction.

In the District, as these suburbanites call Washington with silent gratitude for not living in it, presidents come and go, talking not of Michelangelo but of polls and plans and leading indicators. If the latest fellow doesn't amount to much in the long run, unofficial Washington is not heartbroken. New ones come along these days as fast as cars in a passing express train.

It is official Washington that is fascinating to watch in these pauses between dream and reality. The outward signs all suggest a city gaga with delight at the prospect of taking to herself a new conqueror.

This is illusory. The illusion of a city in happy delirium is created by a compliant press, partly because it is an old press tradition to insist that inaugurations, despite mountains of cold and turgid evidence to the contrary, really are wild and crazy fun.

The press, with its need for theatrics, also has a subliminal interest in creating joyous expectations since it sets the stage for later stories about the disastrous collapse of high hopes.

Even more decisive to the sense that something tawdry is afoot is the smell of greed on the air. Greed for money, influence, jobs, taxpayer-subsidized cars, promotions, unlimited expense accounts, partnerships, real-estate killings, titles, servants, retinues, private-plane privileges, invitations to dine, chairmanships, cabinet positions, for seeing oneself praised by notorious newspaper columnists as brilliant, for being introduced to members of the opposite sex as powerful.

The new conqueror and his entourage usually know they ought not to succumb to the seductive atmosphere, but it is hard to resist. How hard it is even now to remember that scarcely a year has passed since George Bush was the toast of all official Washington humanity.

Why, don't you remember, Violetta? How we all loved him so, toadied so abjectly to his brilliance in matters of Araby that not a Democrat of any distinction even dared challenge him for our affection?

Now he is just another used-up old-timer who keeps hanging around the edge of the party, trying to be a good sport, pretending it doesn't hurt to fall so far so fast. Bush was fond of talking about "modes." Does he now, one wonders, think of official Washington as being in treacherous old-harlot mode?

Surely not, not even in his most private thinking chambers. Such a thought is of a violence he tolerates only when in campaign mode. He is a Yale man, after all, and is now in transition mode. Never mind that sluttish official Washington wishes he would get stuffed.

Official Washington's immediate goal is not just to romance its new knight. It must move him beyond romance, wise him up, open his eyes, show him the true Washington way, remind him that he must now quit courting innocents beyond the Beltway and learn to do things the grown-up way, the Washington way, with committees, lawyers, know-how mechanics, insiders, Nestors of the press ...

Washington must now make him hers, and probably will, that cunning old courtesan.

Donated gifts made many children happy

I am continually touched by the response to the Living Angel Trees. We don't know who you are, but we want you to know you made more than 500 children happy with over 1,500 gifts. I have had the privilege of talking to some of you and wish I could personally thank everyone for touching so many lives in a positive way. The morale in our offices has soared as each new gift was returned and we realized there is so much generosity in West Texas!

In Children's Protective Services we see a lot of pain throughout the year. So, seeing the joy being provided through the donated gifts for abused and neglected children was heartwarming.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank the sponsors and locations of the Living Angel Tree for helping this past holiday be a Christmas come true. They are as follows:

Alldredge Gardens, A Way Out Travel, Antiques, Etc., Mr. Brooks Bar-BQ, Dr. Coleman, KNFM Radio; K-Mart - Midland, Midland Reporter-Telegram, News West 9, Odessa American, Texaco, Walgreens - Midland, Willis Permian Movers, Winwood Mall, Midland Park Mall, Pecos County State Bank, McDonald's - Big Spring, McDonald's - Alpine, Winkler County County State Bank, Kermit State Bank, First State Bank, Security State Bank, Marfa National Bank.

Treated water could contaminate reservoir

In the Reporter-Telegram of Jan. 4th, a legal notice appeared for an application for a waste discharge permit amendment in regard to the City of Odessa being allowed to discharge 9,400,000 gallons of effluent treated water daily from their east Water Reclamation Plant. The water from the plant would flow into Monahans Draw, thence to Midland Draw, thence to Johnson's Draw, thence to Mustang Creek, thence to Beal's Creek, thence to the Colorado River, etc. One can readily see that this effluent water in the rainy season could possibly flow into and contaminate the Stacy Dam Reservoir.

With the emphasis currently being on economic development, Midland and Odessa must explore and take advantage of any problem that exists in place of considering the placement of added taxes to encourage economic development. For example, the Odessa Water Treatment Plant is located near oil production that requires large amounts of water for secondary recovery. The plant is also located near the Shell Oil Refinery and the Dynagen Plant where large amounts of water are used in these facilities. Shell and Dynagen drill water wells in order to obtain a source of water and also dispose of the plant water after the water goes through their systems.

I would suggest that in the economic development program for Odessa, they should explore the possibility of furnishing the effluent water after treatment to the facilities that are looking for water to continue their operations. This would entail the employment of individuals to construct the pipeline and the necessary facilities to supply this water. The lifting cost incurred by the facilities needing water in addition to the cost of drilling the water wells is very expensive. The City of Odessa could dispose of the effluent treated water by establishing a water station in conjunction with the companies that require water for their continued operation. In the event they were successful in this endeavor, this would alleviate many problems and potential lawsuits as encountered by flowing their water from Ector County across Midland County adjacent to the City of Midland as outlined in the application for their waste discharge permit.

In the event that Odessa is able to contain this effluent water within Ector County, they would not re-create the problems for Midland County such as developing an extensive area which would allow the breeding of mosquitoes and the resulting health hazards that have occurred in the past. It was not too long ago that the Texas Water Commission required the City of Midland to go through the expensive route of disposing of their effluent water approximately 15 miles east of Midland. Midland's water at that point is used to irrigate crops for cattle feed.

As a matter of information, the route proposed for the effluent water from Odessa to the Colorado River is the resulting area for the Stacy Dam where I was successful in saving millions of dollars for taxpayers in Ector and Midland County after proving that the Concho River Water Snake was not an endangered species.

Threats, boycotts take over choice of people

We are troubled! We thought that we lived in a "free society" called America. We thought that the right to vote was the voice of the people that represent the majority of the people. Why then, pray tell, all the national uproar by a select few "Hollywooders and anti-Christian lifestylers," who take it upon themselves to change and boycott and threaten a state when that state's people voted in a free election? I'm referring to a state called Colorado, whose people voted to keep their state and their children in alliance with the laws of God (read 1 Corinthians 6:9-11 and Romans 1:26-28 as starters).

We lived in this beautiful state for four years and our second son was born there. Though we are native Texans, our hearts go out to those good people who are being bombarded by threats and boycotts from other state governments (Austin included) for no more than exercising their precious freedom of voting the way they want their state to be run, where they work and how they live their lives.

Lord help us all when the voice of the people can be overturned by the likes of these groups that do not even live in this beautiful state. If this is allowed to succeed, we are all in danger of losing that most precious commodity we have in America — the right to vote our choices.

We need to think of, respect others' rights

I take a pencil in hand to write this letter not knowing exactly what I want to say. Primarily because as I write, the thoughts of the letter's subject rush over me.

The reason I feel a need to write is that when I arrived home Friday, Jan. 8, I was met at the door by my usually effervescent 14-year-old daughter in tears.

The cause for her tears was that someone had stolen her Christmas gifts of a coat and watch. This theft occurred between 3:20 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. this day from the athletic department at San Jacinto Junior High while she tried out for the school basketball team.

Somewhere tonight a child has a coat and a watch that do not belong to them. To the parents of this child I hope you recognize that your child has a coat and watch and that you don't know where they came from. When you find out they aren't your child's please return them (name and phone number on tag inside the purple suede coat) and take a little time to talk to your child about how stealing is wrong.

To the child that stole these items I hope they bring you no comfort or pleasure. I hope that the thought of your dishonesty causes you much anguish. I can think of no justification for stealing from people because the one who owned it has as much need for it as you do.

It is time that each and every one of us stops and thinks about the rights of others and respect each other for those rights. Where are we headed as a people if we do not respect other people's property? Where will it stop if we don't individually take responsibility for our actions and the actions of our children? Will it only stop when we can't even leave our homes for fear that some thief will come and take all we have worked for?

Please return my daughter's property. You have no right to it.

We can use prisoners for medical research

I am also concerned with the animal rights movement!

I have a great idea. Go to all the prisons and over the country and ask the prisoners to be volunteers for medical research. I'll bet the response would be overwhelming.

All in all using real people would be much more satisfactory in every way. The doctors could talk to the patients and ask them questions and get good answers that would leave the "guess" out of their experiments. These patients could likely tell the doctors things that they had never thought about. They would feel useful and not be bored.

Results could be attained faster and likely much better or more satisfactory.

As compensation the prisoners could have their sentence shortened for their contribution to medicine.

I feel that if it is government funded, time is no problem — dragging things on and on is big business.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Contest exploits, endangers children

I am writing a letter that I regret I did not write last year in reference to your newspaper's Beautiful Baby Contest.

I am distressed that the Reporter-Telegram would promote an activity that leads its readers to make a judgment about the value of an individual based solely on physical appearance. To ask your subscribers to decide which child is the most beautiful after viewing one small photograph is a travesty against childhood. As a parent and teacher, I try to instill in children that the true worth of a person is what he or she is on the inside, not the outside. And what of the children in our city whose parents refuse to participate in the contest? Are they to assume that their parents do not believe them to be beautiful?

A second reason that I object to this type of display is the potential danger involved. As we both know, not all adults value and esteem children. There are those who would exploit and abuse children for pleasure and profit. What better way for them to find their next victim then to have children's faces and names supplied by the local newspaper.

I hope your readers will join me in protesting your unwise and unsafe decision to promote this contest.

President-elect takes 'look like America' idea too far too fast

Reagan Democrats squawk about Bill Clinton shortchanging them in favor of Carter foreign policy liberals. Jewish leaders complain that the Clinton team isn't sufficiently Jewish or pro-Israel. Women and blacks demand their share of the diplomatic and defense pie.

Nothing new here in job jockeying, particularly not among Democrats — except in degree. But degree can be everything.

Under daily pounding, the president-elect is taking a good idea — making his national security team "look like America" or his political version of America — too far too fast. If his devotion to diversity congeals into artificial and goofy quotas, his team will overflow with people who are not up to their responsibilities and who won't get along with each other, or with him.

Many women, blacks and others are more than ready for the most senior posts on the domestic side of the administration. Many have had plenty of experience in Congress or in state and local government. But very few have comparable grounding in national security positions. More women and blacks need honing at mid-level positions at State and Defense and should be given the edge for those posts.

As for conservative Democrats and pro-Israel Jews, they too deserve representation in the administration. But some job candidates from these groups can't work with anyone who disagrees with them. Their tolerance for diversity is zero. And Clinton has to exercise great care not to mortgage his policies to their rigid views.

Many of these same people screamed a year ago that President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker were anti-Semites and enemies of Israel. The truth was that both men wanted to change certain hard-line Israeli policies, not hurt Israel.

Now, these self-appointed arbiters of who loves Israel are targeting Secretary of State-designate Warren Christopher and the national security adviser-to-be, Anthony Lake. Yet none have the foggiest idea what either Lake or Christopher thinks about Israel. The appointees' guilt rests solely on their having served Jimmy Carter. And while some Carter officials were too hard on Israel and naive about the Arabs, so were scores of officials in every administration since Harry Truman's.

Singling out Jimmy Carter is particularly monstrous because he undoubtedly did more to insure Israel's security than any president before or since. At direct risk to his power and prestige, he personally brought about peace between Egypt and Israel at Camp David. That treaty, along with Israeli military power, has prevented a new Mideast war.

Nonetheless, Clinton seems poised to reward the purveyors of this anti-Carter, guilt-by-association garbage by naming ideologues of their choice to his team.

Nothing better illustrates Clinton's thinking about diversity and his vulnerability to pressure than his last-minute juggling of appointments three weeks ago. He had settled firmly on Christopher at State, Lake at the National Security Council, and Les Aspin at the Pentagon. He was also prepared to name Clifford Wharton, a black pension executive, as U.N. ambassador (after Ron Brown, another black leader, turned him down), Madeleine Albright to a senior State Department post and Thomas Pickering, a brilliant career diplomat, as director of Central Intelligence.

But then women's groups weighed in heavily about being underrepresented in the Cabinet. So, Clinton shifted Wharton to the number two spot at State and moved Ms. Albright over to the U.N., with the promise to raise that job to Cabinet status.

All or most of these moves could turn out just fine. It is the next set of appointments that could cause trouble. If Clinton now names blacks or women who are not yet qualified for high posts, or Jews whose main aim will be to support Israel right or wrong, or conservatives whose principal efforts will be to savage former Carter administration officials whatever their individual records, he will be sorry — and so will America.

Clinton will not be fooled by one of world's evil demons

by WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Three dramatic days from this Sunday, America's new leader will be sworn in on Washington's Capitol Hill to face some of the most difficult domestic and foreign problems in our history.

We are now in a virtual state of undeclared war with Iraq's demoniacal tyrant, Saddam Hussein, who is intent on using nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction to conquer the Middle East, control vast oil resources and create a barbaric Islamic empire.

In retaliation for weeks of provocations that flagrantly violated the United Nations agreement halting the 1991 Persian Gulf War, U.S. aircraft, with support by British, French and other allied planes, attacked missile batteries in southern Iraq.

At least 110 warplanes from land and aircraft bases were involved in what White House officials described as a limited strike. The official Iraqi news agency reported one Iraqi air defense soldier was killed and three soldiers and four civilians WERE wounded. The U.S.-led attack and fighter-escort planes returned to their bases with no losses and no injuries to the crews.

That was the good part of it. The disappointing part was the U.S. intelligence revelation that at least a third of the targets were missed and a stray 2,000-pound bomb caused heavy damage to an apartment building near the town of Basra. Only one of the four surface-to-air missile batteries they targeted was destroyed. The raid was limited to a single 15-minute strike with about 40 bombers, mostly American and a few British. Seventy U.S., French, British and other allied aircraft provided air cover, refueling and other support.

Some Pentagon officials criticized the tactics used, including limiting the attack to a single strike and dropping two weapons at a time. In the Persian Gulf War, the pilots were instructed to drop one bomb at a time. That way, the planes could strike again to hit the target if a cloud interfered with the laser beam and caused some of the first bombs to go off course.

Nevertheless, Bush administration officials claimed the air strike on Iraq was a political and military success. Most of the untouched surface-to-air missiles were quickly moved out of the area.

President Saddam's response was to threaten a "holy war" against the U.S. and its allies, but, as usual, Iraq's U.N. Ambassador, Nizar Hamdoon, was backing down on the issues that provoked the confrontation, including refusal to allow entry by U.N. inspection planes into Iraqi territory.

President Bush had the full support of President-elect Clinton for our aerial attack. Mr. Clinton has clearly indicated he would not hesitate to order another attack, if necessary, when he assumes the presidency. It was reassuring to see that the president-elect disagreed with an interpretation being given to a statement he made in an interview with the New York Times that if Saddam "wants a different relationship with the United States and the United Nations, all he has to do is change his behavior."

Mr. Clinton later denied this meant he would normalize relations with Iraq. And he steadfastly reiterated his support of President Bush's policy.

Secretary of State-designate Warren Christopher, at his confirmation hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Tuesday, indicated he doesn't believe Saddam could be relied on to behave decently.

He told the Senate committee America had "tolerated and supported dictators too long in many countries," including Iraq. He said that during the period leading up to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait "we tried to do business with Saddam Hussein, and it turned out to be a terrible mistake, a very serious mistake," adding: "We consistently have stayed too long with dictators and then reaped the whirl-wind later on."

I am confident that Mr. Clinton, with an exceptionally intelligent mind dating back to his teenage years and matured by education with a Rhodes Scholarship at Oxford and graduation from Yale Law School, will not be fooled by one of the world's most evil demons.

COM untouchable in first two days

The City of Midland Swim Team has been untouchable through two days of its A/B Swim Meet at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center.

COM owns 1,124 points, heading into today's final leg of the meet, which is 623 points ahead of the second place Cypres-Fairbanks Swim Club with 501 points. The Fort Bliss Sharks are a distant third with 261 points.

Scott Strauss of COM has scored 42 points and won three individual victories in the meet to lead the 11-12 boys age group, 20 points ahead of teammate Mark Stoltz.

COM's Amber Goodwin, who won one event Saturday, is tied with Cypres-Fairbanks swimmer Carli Watts for the 11-12 girls lead, both with 36 points. COM's Monica Stroman leads the 13-14 girls division with 54 points after winning five events Saturday while teammate Susie Carnett owns 41 points.

COM also has the top three swimmers in the senior girls events with Kathryn Krall (45 points and two victories Saturday), Shannon Conkey (29) and Sarah Conkey (28).

Other COM swimmers to win events Saturday were Lee Irons, Robin Hill, Kevin Williams, Stephanie Kimble, Sara Carnett and Howard Flowers. COM also won three medley relays.

Cypres-Fairbanks set a pool record in the 13-14 Medley Relay with a 4:02.78, knocking 3.99 seconds off the old record.

El Paso Agua Posse's Lacey Elliott set a pool mark of 32.92 in the 10-Under 50 backstroke. The old mark was 33.27.

Cypres-Fairbanks' Joey Montague had a pool record of 2:08.52 in the 13-14 boys 200 backstroke, breaking the old mark by 1.07 seconds.

MHS wins tourney

GRAND PRAIRIE — Midland High won the Grand Prairie soccer tournament title here Saturday with a 2-1 sudden death victory over Boswell in the finals.

After a scoreless first half, Boswell took a 1-0 lead mid-way through the second half, but MHS sent the match into sudden death overtime on a goal by Brian Robey just before the end of regulation play.

Ross Hunter scored the winning goal two minutes into the overtime period.

The game was played on astroturf and MHS players had a hard time adjusting to a skidding ball.

Earlier Saturday, Midland High won its semifinal battle, 6-2, over Haltom City as Jesse Dominguez led the way with two goals. Also scoring for MHS were Ross Hunter, Dustin Fellows, Tyler Berry and Toby Walker.

MHS is now a perfect 3-0 on the season.

Denton nips Lee

DENTON — Host Denton scored a goal in the 78th minute to beat the Midland Lee Rebels, 3-2, here Saturday night to win the Denton Invitational soccer tournament.

Lee tied Denton at the half 2-2 with a goal by Denver Renfro and a penalty shot by Brett Ramsey, but Lee had to play a man down after a second half red card and still held on until late in the match.

Lee's Freddie Silva, Tommy Tipton and Jason Meyers made the all-tournament team.

Lee got to the finals against Denton after a 1-0 win over Burkburnett in the semifinals. Matt Lawrence scored the winning goal in the 18th minute of the first half.

This was the season opening tournament for Lee, who finished 2-1 in the tournament.

Stanton honored

STANTON — The national office of USA Track and Field has named the West Texas Association as recipient of "Volunteer of the Month," according to Frank Greenberg, president of the organization.

The award was presented Friday to the Stanton Track Club and members of the Stanton Independent School District for work done while hosting the West Texas Association Meet on June 27, 1992, following an evening where tornadic winds damaged portions of Stanton.

"This award is an acknowledgement of the fine efforts of the many volunteers and organizers who worked all night following tornado damage so their Junior Olympic Association Championships on June 27 could go on," Greenberg said.

■ HULA BOWL

HONOLULU — Jason Elam's second field goal of the game, a 28-yarder with 51 seconds left, gave the West a 13-10 victory over the East on Saturday in the Hula Bowl.

The East had a chance to tie, but Notre Dame kicker Craig Hentrich missed a 65-yard field goal with two seconds left. The kick was long enough, but just wide left.

The West started its game-winning drive on the East 30 after Notre Dame quarterback Rick Mirer fumbled the snap from Iowa center Mike Devlin on a fourth-and-1 play.

Washington linebacker Dave Hoffman recovered, and the East ran the ball to the East 11 to set up Elam's winning boot before his hometown fans at Aloha Stadium.

East coach Lou Holtz of Notre Dame chose not to let Hentrich try a 52-yard field goal with 7:32 left. Instead, Florida quarterback Shane Matthews threw an incomplete pass on fourth and 6 from the West 36.

Safety Ron Carpenter of Miami of Ohio had three interceptions for the East, and was the game's defensive MVP. Miami receiver Lamar Thomas was offensive MVP with six catches for 64 yards.

Purdue QB paces NFC to 21-6 win

■ SENIOR BOWL

MOBILE, Ala. — Purdue's Eric Hunter threw two touchdown passes and Carlton Miles of Florida blocked a punt to set up another touchdown, leading the NFC to a 21-6 victory over the AFC in the Senior Bowl on Saturday.

The NFC stopped the AFC three times inside the 20 without giving up points.

The special team advantage also went to the NFC. In addition to Miles' block of a punt by Kansas State's Sean Snyder, AFC kicker Brian Lee of Mississippi missed a field goal and an extra point.

Hunter impressed NFL scouts with his passing and running and even recovered a fumble to earn the game's MVP award. He competed 3 of 6 attempts for 62 yards, including touchdown passes of 13 yards to Rice's Trevor Cobb and 12 yards to Tony McGee of Michigan. Hunter also ran seven times for 33 yards.

Hunter's scoring pass to Cobb came with 11:47 left in the second quarter, after NFC running back Derrick Lassic of Alabama fumbled at his 34. Randy Cuthbert of Duke set up the scoring pass with a 22-yard run.

The NFC bid to tie the game on its next possession. Alex Van Pelt of Pittsburgh threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Syracuse's Qadry Ismail to cap a 12-play, 80-yard drive, but Lee's PAT was wide right.

In the first quarter, Lee has missed a chance to put the AFC ahead when his 39-yard field goal attempt sailed wide.

Foreman batters Coetzer

Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — No one could have blamed Pierre Coetzer for wishing that referee Joe Cortez had listened to George Foreman in the fourth round Saturday night.

About a minute after Foreman had knocked the South African down in the fourth, Foreman was battering Coetzer when he turned to Cortez and asked the referee to stop the fight.

Cortez, however, didn't call a halt until after Foreman had scored a second knockdown, in the eighth round. Coetzer had taken a terrible battering by the time the fight was halted.

The 44-year-old Foreman was wishing as the fight drew on that Cortez had followed his advice. After the sixth and seventh rounds, Foreman asked his corner. "What round is it?"

The victory at 1:48 of the eighth round sends Foreman into an April 16 match against Tommy Morrison, who got up from two fifth-round knockdowns to stop Carl "The Truth" Williams at 2:10 of the eighth round on Saturday.

Foreman watched the Morrison fight on television and said, "I'm definitely going to box him."

Midland, Angels renew player development pact

Staff report

No games are being played, but moves are being made by the Midland Angels of the Texas League.

The Midland club has signed a new four-year Player Development Contract with the California Angels, meaning Midland will remain California's Class AA affiliate through the 1996 baseball season. The 1993 season will mark the ninth year of the California-Midland affiliation.

Since Midland became an Angels farm club, Midland fans have seen more than 40 future big leaguers play in a Midland Angels uniform on their way to the majors. Among the most recent Midland stars are Gary DiSarcina, Scott Lewis, Joe Grahe, Tim Salmon, Damion Easley and Hilly Hathaway.

In the 21-year history of the current Midland franchise, the club has had only two major league affiliations with the Chicago Cubs from 1972-1984 and the Angels from 1985 to the present.

Harold Fuller has been named director of group and ticket sales for the Midland baseball club. The move follows the decision by former director of concessions and publications Doug Stewart, who has become the general manager of the Rochester Aces of the Northern League (short season Class A).

Fuller, 23, is a native of Angelica, N.Y. He spent last season, his first in professional baseball, with the Buffalo Bisons of the International League (Class AAA). He worked as an intern in the Bisons' sales department from January to May while completing his degree in sports management at Houghton College. The Bisons drew more than one million fans for the fifth consecutive season in 1992.

Stewart, 25, spent the last two seasons with the Angels, following a two-year stint with the Greensboro Hornets of the Class A Carolina League. Stewart will oversee the day-to-day operations of the Aces, one of six teams in the newly formed Northern League, which begins play in June. The league is an independent league that is not affiliated with the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Stewart's appointment brings to four the number of former Midland Angels staff members who have accepted general manager's positions with other teams during the 1992-93 off season. George Brzezinski (1989-90) and Charles Dowd (1990-91) took GM jobs with Albany-Colonie (N.Y.) and New Haven (Conn.) of the AA Eastern League. John Frey (1986-90) is now with Greensboro of the Class A South Atlantic League.

Rick Carden is one of three front office promotions announced by Midland Angels GM Monty Hoppel. Carden has been named assistant general manager. Carden is in his third year with the Angels, previously serving as the team's director of sales and marketing.

Scott Seator, in his second season with the Angels, is now director of media and community services after serving as editor of the team's publications in addition to sales and marketing duties.

Jeff Corbett succeeds Stewart as director of concessions. He joined the club last season as an administrative assistant.

Ed Todd/Reporter-Telegram

McCamey's Claude W. Brown has promoted his hometown, West Texas, Democratic politics, the petroleum industry and many other worthy causes since he, now 88, moved west in 1935 to drill for oil.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

McCAMEY — At age 88, Claude W. Brown is a man of many roles: Mr. McCamey, Mr. Democrat, Mr. West Texas, Mr. Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Oilman.

And similar to poet Robert Frost's meditations in his 1923 poem, Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening, Brown, too, has "... promises to keep, And miles to go before I sleep, And miles to go before I sleep."

As surely as the poet found "The woods are lovely, dark and deep," Brown has viewed his life as most challenging and exhilarating. He explored for, drilled for and produced petroleum; promoted national, state and regional Democrats for political offices and benefited students, ministers, churches, higher education, his community and West Texas.

"I've just worked practically all of my life," Brown said.

He started out picking fruit for a dollar a day plus board in the early 1920s in Ballinger. After he graduated from high school in 1922, Brown moved into the oil patch as a roustabout near Mexia, then an oilfield boom town. By the mid-1920s, he was drilling oil wells. He was faring well until the Great Depression hit in 1929 and he went broke.

Brown persevered.

Without benefit of a college degree in geology or engineering, Brown in 1935 moved west to McCamey and to ranching country. He drilled and produced hundreds of oil wells and became wealthy.

"I never sold anything in my life but what, if I had kept it, I would have been better off," Brown said. "Even in Cross Plains, where I started out (drilling) in '25 and '26, the shallow wells are still producing."

In the 1950s, Brown and his son-in-law, geologist Ed Thorp, developed the prolific Brown-and-Thorp Oil Fields near Girvin in Pecos County as well as other fields in West Texas. Brown had a flair for finding oil, making money, operating automobile, oilfield supply and banking businesses, and developing oil-and-gas pipeline systems.

He was generous with his money.

For example, Brown gave $100,000 to McMurry College in Abilene in the 1960s to establish political science scholarships. He received an honorary doctorate from the college.

Later, he was invited to speak to a gathering of petroleum engineers in Midland. In studying his talents and drive, the engineers asked Brown what he supposed would have happened to him had he graduated from The University of Texas or Texas A&M University.

Brown's reply was plain: "I'd be just like you fellas, sitting out there listening to somebody else talk."

A staunch Democrat, Brown, beginning in 1956 when Adlai E. Stevenson was the party's presidential nominee, was an Upton County delegate to the National Democratic Party Convention four times.

He was a friend to and promoter of presidents and governors: U.S. Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Jimmy Carter and Texas Govs. Allan Shivers, Price Daniel, John Connally, Preston Smith, Dolph Briscoe, Mark White and Ann Richards.

Educator enlightens audience on subject of gifted children

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

In a presentation peppered with song, poetry and humorous anecdotes, Mary M. Frasier demonstrated a talent for entertaining.

Frasier

It was only fitting since the educator was attempting to enlighten an audience about the talent and imagination of gifted children that too often go undetected.

Between laughter and coercing nearly 200 educators, parents and community leaders to sing along with her Friday night, the associate professor in educational psychology at the University of Georgia expounded on the message of giving every child an opportunity to excel in school.

The educator discussed the traits of gifted learners at Coleman High School Friday night, then conducted a day-long workshop for Midland public school teachers at Carver Cultural Center Saturday.

Ms. Frasier, the director of Torrence Center for Creative Studies, a National Research Center on the Gifted and Talented at UG, said, "We have an obligation to find different ways to identify children, to find out how the gifted behavior is manifested in order to represent the diversity of our nation."

Speaking on "Equity: The American Ideal," Ms. Frasier noted that new methods of assessing gifted children need to be used to address the inequity of minority children in the higher ability programs. Nationally, statistics suggest that the ratio between majority-minority children's participation is 5 to 1, and is usually not representative of minority populations in particular districts.

She said minority parents need to become involved in their children's education and gain an understanding of gifted programs.

"Name me some gifted writers," Ms. Frasier said. Audience members responded by calling out the Corporate spelling bee seeks Midland teams for competition

Staff report

The fourth annual Reporter-Telegram "Corporate Bee for Literacy," which raises funds to battle adult illiteracy, has been set for 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Feb. 26 at Midland Center.

The bee is underwritten by the Reporter-Telegram with all proceeds benefiting Midland Need to Read, a United Way member agency that currently has 152 volunteer tutors working on a personal basis with a like number of citizens seeking to improve their reading skills.

The popular lunchtime event is much like an old-fashioned spelling bee but corporations compete by fielding spelling teams made up of three spellers representing each company. These teams compete for trophies. Last year's winner was Arco Oil & Gas. Other organizations fielding teams were Texaco, Team Bank, Midland College, Exxon, Chevron, Penny Quick Printing, First City Texas, Texas Instruments and COV, Inc.

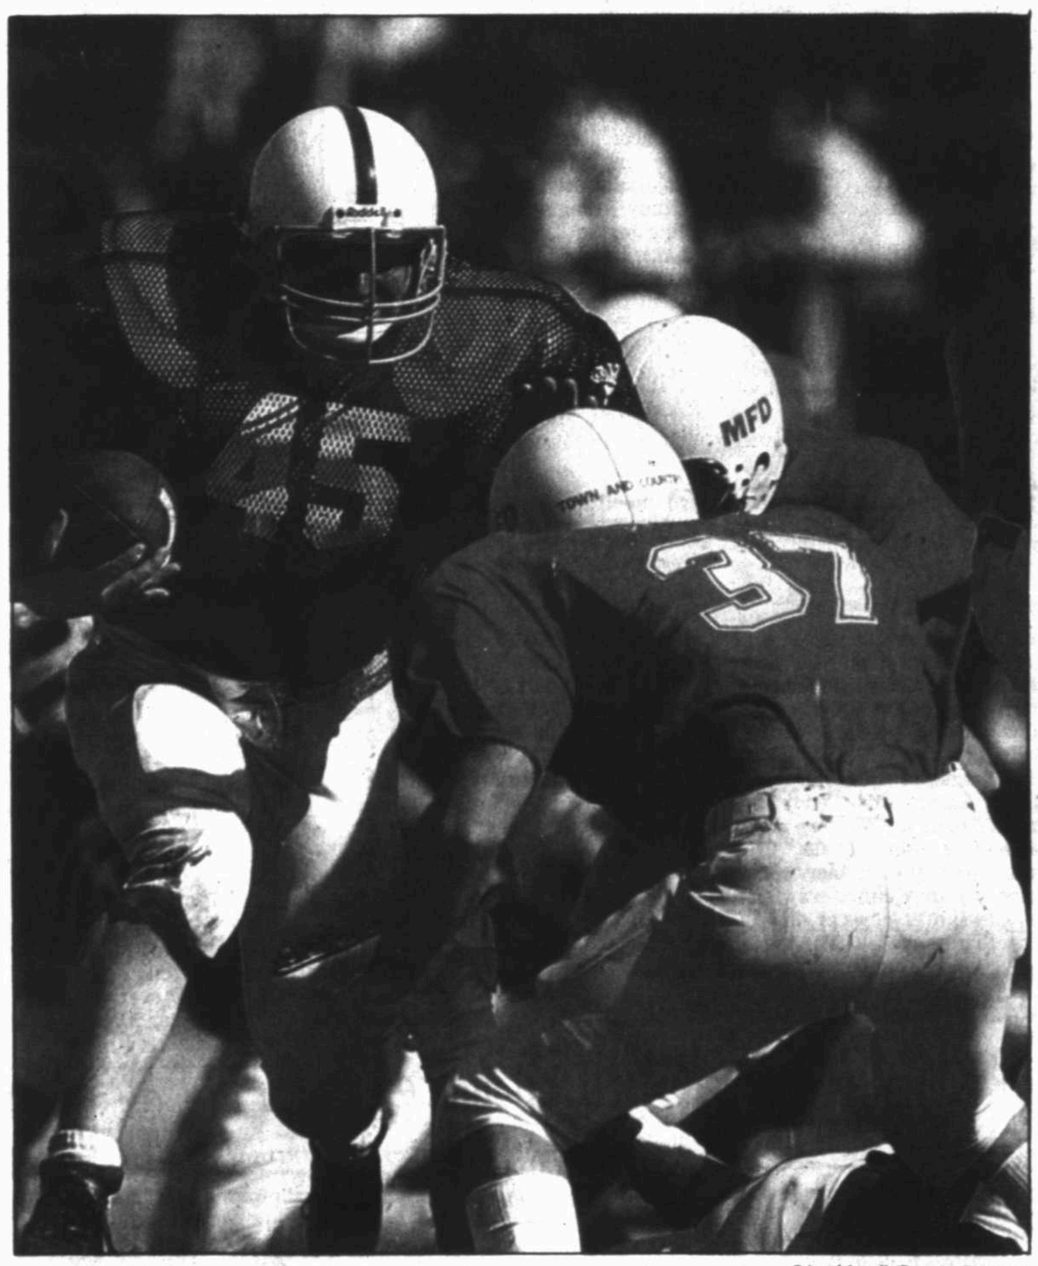

Pronouncer this year will be Denise Walters and Fay Helms will serve as chairperson. Bill Dingus of Exxon will serve for the fourth year as master of ceremonies.

The entry fee for each corporate team is $500 that includes lunch for the three team members and official Bee for Literacy t-shirts.

Unlike other bees, each group fields three spellers with members

With friends, honesty is not always the best policy

This is one of those dreary situations everyone has had to face at one time or another. A good friend is doing, or perhaps wearing, something that is totally unacceptable and it is up to you, the so-called "best friend," to inform him (or her) that a change simply must be made.

Ott

Let's look at some examples.

Say your friend has chosen a particularly foul-smelling brand of cologne to wear. He obviously is quite proud of his choice, but you, like everyone else in the civilized world, realize the unfortunate truth: it makes him smell like a pimp. How do you break the dreadful news to him?

Some might suggest, "honesty is the best policy." Just march right up to your friend and say, "I hope this doesn't hurt your feelings, but the cologne has got to go. You're killing all living matter within 100 miles of here. Even the cockroaches are heading for cover."

But others might counter, "I can't say that to a friend. I need something more subtle."

OK, fine. You might want to consider your basic "back-door approach," whereby you walk into the room where your friend is standing and suddenly gasp for air and scream, "Good Lord, someone call the plumber. The sink has backed up again."

Maybe he'll get the message, maybe he won't. But at least you tried.

Still, as touchy as that situation can be, an even more explosive one involves "bad breath." There is really no easy way to tell a friend that his breath would bore a hole through a cinder block, so you generally have to rely on "casual hints," such as offering the person a piece of gum or some peppermint candy.

But being oblivious to the damage his breath is causing the earth's ozone layer, more times than not the person will merely smile and say, "No thanks, I'm fine."

If only he knew.

But he doesn't, so, like with the cologne, you have to take the back-door approach. One possibility is to mosey over to your friend and begin sniffing. Then with a quizzical expression say, "My goodness, is there a stock show going on around here?"

If he says, "Huh?" and breathes on you, chances are your hint misfired.

Still, you must try.

Women, on the other hand, rarely stink, so it is much more likely that you will face a potentially embarrassing confrontation with them over a piece of clothing they have chosen to wear.

I can hear you smirking now. You know exactly what I'm talking about, don't you? Of course you do. Some women simply have no taste when it comes to clothes.

What's a friend to do?

Usually you bite your tongue and keep your comments to yourself. But in this case your friend has selected a particularly hideous looking outfit and you feel obliged to express your opinion — for her own good, of course.

How do you do it? How do you inform your best friend that she looks like a cheap harlot?

You could tell her straight out. Just say, "Honey, that blouse makes you look like a whore." But that would be mean. And, besides, she is your best friend. You would like to spare her feelings if at all possible.

But like with the cologne and bad breath, you can't let it slide. Something has to be said, so you need to look for alternatives, possibly by dropping a well-placed hint and hoping she catches your drift.

You could stick with the "floozy" theme, for example. You might say, "Gee, I love that dress. Didn't Mae West wear one just like it in her first movie?" Then you could giggle and in a very sexy voice say, "Why don't you come up and see me some time."

Chances are, she's going to figure it out. If not, have a male friend offer her $100 to go to lunch with him.

But without a doubt, the most difficult situation you will ever face is having to tell your best friend that her boyfriend is cheating on her.

There is nothing fun about it. If you say something, you're a heel. If you don't, you're an equally big heel.

Probably your best bet is the old "good news-bad news" approach.

You take your friend aside and say, "I've got some good news and some bad news. The good news is that I've just fallen in love with the wonderful man in the world. The bad news is that he's your soon-to-be ex-boyfriend."

As she looks on in horror, you quickly add, "But I love your dress. And your breath smells real good, too."

BROWN: West Texas man plays both business, political roles

(From 1C)

"I have been interested in politics all of my life," said Brown, whose late brother, Democratic Party leader Tom Brown Sr. of New Mexico, got him active in politics.

"All three of the Kennedy boys (John, Robert and Teddy) were there, working the New Mexico State Convention (in 1960)," Brown said. "And they either collared delegates, they either crawled under pews, over pews or down the side. They really worked the deal."

In 1972, when Bill Clinton was George McGovern's national campaign chairman, Brown's brother told him: " 'You had better watch that boy, ... Bill Clinton. He's going to climb that ladder fast (to the presidency)."

Brown was an unerring admirer of John Ben Shepperd, the Texas attorney general of the 1950s and, later, a West Texas-Odessa promoter who "would have been the best governor we could have ever had" had it not been for an infamous land scandal that, by association, undermined his gubernatorial hopes.

Unlike other prosperous oilmen in boom time, Brown did not fall to the temptation of switching political parties.

"A lot of fellows, (after) they got a little rich in the oil business during the good times, the first thing they did was buy them a Rolex watch and turned Republican — my Democrat friends," Brown said. "I bought me a Rolex watch, but I stayed a Democrat."

Of his loyalty to the Democratic Party, Brown said, "I just have regard for my fellow man of all classes. I think everybody has a place, if they can find it, in the world."

Brown's place, once he was well established in the oil patch, was serving on public-service boards and commissions from McCamey to Austin. Among his many services were mayor of McCamey, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Texas Industrial Commission.

"I've never taken a nickel out of anything — not a salary of any kind," Brown said. "I've put in instead of taking out. It cost me lots of money, business-wise."

Brown fondly presents himself as a roustabout among the "big shots" elected to the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame in Midland. He was elected to that body in 1985, since he "exemplifies the gutsy spirit of the free-wheeling businessman," a salute to Brown said. "His civic, public and church activities have made him one of the best known and best loved oilmen in the state."

Three years later, the Permian names Langston Hughes, Alex Haley and Maya Angelou.

"How many words do each of those writers have in their vocabulary?" she asked.

Greeted with silence, she replied, "The answer is: Who cares?" causing the audience to respond with laughter and applause.

"And what do tests tell you? They tell you how well a child takes a test and may indicate some basic skills. Imagination, critical insight, motivation, these gifted abilities won't be assessed," she said.

Ms. Frasier said gifted children tend to "pick up on humor well."

"These are the children who will be on the floor laughing when Bill Cosby comes on," she said.

She said the same children "are the ones who will interrupt a teacher 2½ minutes into a classroom lecture to say: 'Oh, the point you are trying to make is ...' And the teacher stands there with 40-odd minutes left of class and a student who has already got the whole lesson."

Ms. Frasier said a child with insight beyond his or her years, may relate cockleburrs to Velcro fabric fasteners.

"These are the students who want to know why everything works the way it does. Why is it this way? Why is it that way? It's the 'why' that identifies them," she said.

Patricia Maurer, principal of the local GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program, said, "It is my hope and desire to incorporate much of Dr. Frasier's work into revising GEM identification procedures."

Ms. Maurer said she was "overwhelmed at the turnout" Friday night and Saturday during the workshop.

She noted the Friday dinner and lecture was the first social event held at Coleman High School. Dr. Viola Coleman attended the event at the school named in her honor, along with various other community leaders.

EDUCATION

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Wednesday is last day to register

By H.A. Tuck

This is a busy week, with lots of varied activities. First, of course, is that Wednesday is the final day for students wishing to register for credit courses in the spring semester. With classes having started a week ago, students now would be limited to enrolling for a maximum of three courses.

Tuck

Late registration is handled in the Student Services area of the Student Center from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. all three days.

To save a bit of time, you can call 685-4501 to find out which classes and which sections of classes still have openings.

The monthly breakfast for small and minority-owned businesses resumes Tuesday. Starting at 7:30 a.m. in the Student Center's Chaparral Hall, the breakfast is an opportunity for owners/operators of small businesses to visit with their counterparts. They also learn about possibilities for doing business with large firms and governmental agencies in the area.

Cost is $5 per person, payable at the door. Sponsors are the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and Neighborhood Coalition.

There's only one Chaparral basketball game this week and it's on the road. Midland is open on Monday night. Thursday, the Chaps go to Hobbs for a game with New Mexico Junior College. The Thunderbirds are always tough, especially in Hobbs.

The next home game is Monday, Jan. 25, when New Mexico Military Institute visits for a 7:30 p.m. game. That marks the end of the first half of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference schedule.

When the college employees and their families got together on Dec. 11 for a "Stone Soup" luncheon, they were asked to bring non-perishable food for the Permian Basin Food Bank.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, workers brought a truck from the PBFB to pick up the donations. They totalled 657 pounds of food from the college, which helped thousands of people in the Permian Basin have a happier Christmas.

We appreciate the donations of the employees, the work of the Permian Basin Food Bank, and the efforts of the various distribution points.

Excerpts from a short fiction essay by a former Midland College student have been used in recent University Interscholastic League literary contests. Peggy L. Miller wrote "La Curandera" in 1989. It won first place in the college's creative writing contest that year and was published in the 1990 issue of the college's literary magazine Tableau. Ms. Miller works for the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

MC Continuing Education offers 14 short courses

Staff report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 14 short courses beginning the week of Jan. 25, 1993. Courses are:

Joe Salman will teach Bridge I on Mondays from 7-9 p.m., Jan. 25 through March 22. Standard American Point count bidding and response. Basic techniques of leading, finessing, and ducking in winning play.

Financial Planning will be taught by Lee Hobbs on Mondays from 7-9:15 p.m., Jan. 25 through Feb. 15.This class is designed for students who are seeking knowledge in investments and financial planning and desire to develop strategies to achieve financial goals in life, i.e., mid-life, pre-retirement, and retirement. Topics to be included are: college funding, insurance, asset allocation, investment types and strategies, effects of inflation, taxation, and compound interest on income and asset growth. While working with a Certified Financial Planner, students will use concepts to develop a personal financial plan. Notebooks and materials are included in tuition. Course fee of $45 covers all materials and registration for either one person or a couple.

Debbie Lindsay will teach Parenting: Teenage Years Can Be The Best on Mondays from 7-9 p.m., Jan. 25 through March 1. This class will enable parents to learn healthier, more nurturing ways to interact with their teenagers. Topics will include: Trust, Communication Skills, Problem Solving, Family Rule, Awareness of the Appropriate Expression of Feelings. Optional handbook available on the first night of class.

Photos: From Shoebox to Showcase will be taught by Nanda Poe two different sections as follows: Mondays from 7-9 p.m., Jan. 25 through Feb. 8 or on Thursdays from 12:30 -2:30 p.m., Jan. 28 through Feb. 11. Tired of having old photos stuck away in a box and unmarked? Or worse yet, slowly being chemically destroyed in one of the many popular albums available? In this program, participants learn how to design safe and creative family photo albums. The two-night class will consist of a two-hour session with instructions and questions, as well as a three-hour hands-on workshop. Included are organization of photos, types of photos, types of photo-safe materials to use for maximum longevity, how to start your family album and more. Materials (approximately $30) are available commercially or from the instructor at class time. Supply list is available from the Department of Continuing Education.

Karen Kenaley will teach Introduction to Records Management on Mondays from 7-8:30 p.m., Jan. 25 through April 5. An introductory course in the policies and principles that effect the creation, protection, circulation, retrieval, preservation, and control of business and institutional information. Discussions include indexing; classification; coding; active systems; in-active systems; management of correspondence, directives, copy, forms and imagery (mainly micrographics). Emphasis will be placed on the legal ramifications of good records management practice.

Study Skills will be taught by Barbara Stoltz in two sections: Monday, Jan. 25 and Wednesday, Jan. 27 from 4-6 p.m. and on Tuesday, Jan. 26 and Thursday, Jan. 28 from 7-9 p.m. Do you have difficulty completing your homework assignments? Do you feel anxious and does your mind go blank at exam time? Are you easily distracted in class? Can you take effective notes? Help for these and other problems will be provided in this course, co-sponsored by the Special Projects Program and the Department of Continuing Education.

Marylyn Leonard will teach Women Time Management in two different sections as follows: Mondays from 7-9 p.m., Jan. 25 through Feb. 1 or on Tuesdays from 9:30-11:30 a.m., Jan. 26 through Feb. 2. Need more time in each day? Get ready to change your life. This course is designed just for the modern woman. Course includes: goal setting, a daily planner, household emergency guide, cleaning organization and children helps. You may not have it all together when you finish, but at least you'll know where to begin.

Calligraphy I will be taught by Martha Kallus on Tuesdays from 7-9:30 p.m., Jan. 26 through March 2. A study in the basic skills of beautiful handwriting. This class will introduce letter formation, terminology, tools, and basic lettering styles. Information will be given in the application of calligraphy for addressing envelopes, designing invitations, and other general uses. Supply list available at the Continuing Education Office.

Warren Bell will teach Long-Term Care Concerns on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., Jan. 26 through Feb. 23. This special forum covers realistic concerns related to several different aspects of long-term care. Topics addressed by specialized professionals include: the role of nursing homes and hospitals, legal considerations; emotional/psychological concerns; and financial management.

Pottery will be taught by Boyd Harris on Tuesdays from 6-9 p.m., Jan. 26 through March 23. For those interested in working with clay using handbuilding and an introduction to wheel-thrown pottery making. Raku, pit firing, and other low fire techniques will be taught. Both beginning and advanced students are welcome and will work at their own levels of achievement. Fee includes cost of clay and other supplies are available at the MC Bookstore.

Apple Chiropractic Clinic John Lindahl, DC

Millions of people find relief from pain and other health problems through chiropractic care. Every area of the body is controlled by nerves passing through the spinal column. Therefore, any misalignments of the vertebrae can disturb these nerves causing many painful and irregular conditions. These conditions include, but are not limited to, headaches, back, neck and shoulder pain, numbness in your arms and legs and nervousness.

Chiropractic is a method of locating any nerve interference caused by stress or misaligned vertebrae, and adjusting the spinal column to allow the body to function at its optimum. Doctors of chiropractic spend countless hours learning palpation (the art of examining by touch) and spinal examining procedures in order to administer a specific spinal adjustment and treat the cause of your condition. Dr. John Lindahl, located in Midland at 2215 North Big Spring Street, phone 687-3822, is a highly trained chiropractic physician. Through a careful and thorough examination, including x-rays, Dr. Lindahl will locate the nerve interference and recommend the appropriate adjustments and therapy. His office will file Medicare, worker's compensation or other insurance for you.

If you have been in an accident, have back pain or a health condition that is not responding to other medical treatment, you owe it to yourself to let Dr. John Lindahl and the Apple Chiropractic Clinic help you.

Medical Eye Care Center Dr. J. Ralph Berry, BSc, LMCC

Eyesight is one of the most precious gifts we possess. Dr. J. Ralph Berry, located at 3340 Claydesta Center in the Atrium Bank Tower in Midland, phone 686-0195, 1-800-392-5152 or FAX (919) 686-0198, is an ophthalmologist specially trained to detect and treat diseases of the eye. Annual vision analysis should be an integral part of preventive healthcare for your entire family, but especially for individuals over 40 years old. Many eye diseases can result in blindness when left untreated. These diseases include, but are not limited to, cataracts, glaucoma and retinal diseases such as diabetic retinopathy. Dr. J. Ralph Berry is skilled in surgery and has restricted his field to oculoplastic and trauma.

Modern technology has made many advances in the ophthalmological field within the last decade. These procedures can, in many cases, save the vision of an individual who, ten years ago, may have had to live his life in darkness. Also provided are all forms of contact lenses for children and adults, and refractions for glasses.

Dr. J. Ralph Berry also encourages parents to be very cautious of eye injuries involving their children. Sharp objects or sports injuries can cause damage to the eye which may or may not be reversible. Emergency treatment for all forms of trauma is available. Dr. J. Ralph Berry recommends regular vision examinations to protect your sight and the sight of your loved ones.

First Presbyterian Church to host 43rd School of Christian Living

Staff report

The 43rd School of Christian Living is set for Jan. 24-27 at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

This year's school, "Generation to Generation: Empowering Today's Families," features guest speakers Anette M. Citzler, professor of economics at Texas Lutheran College; Ismael Garcia, professor of Christian ethics at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary; Linda H. George, adjunct faculty in social work at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin; and Linda Adams Goddard, president and founder of Christian Life Enrichment Resources Ministries.

Ms. Citzler's talk on "Economic Values and the Family" will introduce basic insights into the U.S. economy, including the problems of inflation and unemployment. Her talk will address how the "standard of living" will affect moral and ethical values in the 1990s and the way value and values are created by households and families.

Garcia's talk on "How Do We Decide Who We Want To be?" will examine the background of current understandings of the family, what moral principles ought to guide family life and ways the church can help.

Ms. George's talk "Families: Let's Talk" will explore the power of families, the transition families are going through today and keys to family communications.

Ms. Goddard's talk "Reclaiming Eden" will examine God's original intent in regard to sexuality, equality and dominion; and how this generation can help the next one in its task of reclaiming Eden so that "God can restore, redeem and renew the world."

Each session will be presented twice, once in the evening and again the next morning. This allows participants to schedule class attendance to their greatest convenience and to attend two classes in their entirety for one registration fee.

Registration is $18.

Registration for the night session is set for 6 p.m. Jan. 24. The evening sessions begin at 6:30 p.m. and conclude at 9 p.m. Assembly is held at 6 p.m.

Registration for the day session is at 9 a.m. Jan. 25 and 26. The morning sessions begin at 9:30 a.m. and will conclude by noon. Assembly is held at 9 a.m.

Sponsored by the Midland Association of Churches, the school is hosted by a different church each year. This year's host is First Presbyterian. Again, the school will provide a bookstore, which will be open before the sessions, at breaks and for 30 minutes after each session.

BROWN: Texan plays many roles

(From 2C)

Basin Petroleum Association gave him the "Top Hand Award," which, Brown is wont to say, places "me, just a roustabout," among giants such as "Mad" Eddie Chiles, founder of The Western Co.; Robert O. Anderson, former president of Arco Oil & Gas Co. and the late Joe O'Neill, independent Midland oil operator.

Brown, who is blessed with laughter and humor, said he was elated when his good friend, former U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, was named by President-elect Bill Clinton to be Secretary of the Treasury.

"My money worries are over," Brown said, "when I have a good friend that prints it."

Brown still wheels and deals in political and humanitarian causes. He has since entrusted his fortune to his grandchildren. Brown's daughter, Claudyne Thorp, died at age 38 in 1968, and Christine, his wife of more than 60 years, died several years ago. He has since remarried.

Brown has an optimistic outlook for the petroleum industry in West Texas despite the slump in oil prices and competition from imported oil and other energy sources.

"The Permian Basin is not gone," Brown said. "It has been badly hurt by the last 15 years. We thought Reagan was going to do something with the oil business. We thought Bush was going to do something. Nobody has done anything.

"And, now, the major companies have all (virtually) left us, just like rats leaving a sinking ship. Now, it's left up to the independents. The majors have kept some of their cream-of-the-crop stuff, but anything they had that cost a lot of overhead, they got rid of it. They are going to Russia for bigger stuff. They've got to hit those big jackpots to really make it worldwide now."

Of turning West Texas oil reserves in production, Brown said that it is "up to the independents. We are lucky we've got people like Parker & Parsley, like John Cox, like Wagner & Brown that have enough circulation going that they can keep drilling. They've got a hard row to hoe. But they've got plenty of places to look for oil in the Permian Basin.".

Meanwhile, Brown, like the poet's quest for "miles to go before I sleep," feels "compelled to get things done," his wife, Nova, said. "He is in a hurry."

Free-lance writer presents workshop

Staff report

Acclaimed free-lance writer and instructor Nancy Robinson Masters is presenting her second writing workshop on Saturday at Midland College.

Masters

The intensive session begins at 9 a.m. and ends at 4 p.m. Fee is $25.

With more than 700 articles to her credit, Ms. Masters is one of West Texas' most prolific authors. Her new book, "All My Downs Have Been Ups," includes many of her popular "Ups and Downs" newspaper column articles. She previously published a history of the Confederate Air Force, Spirits In The Sky, and a practical, well-followed book for writers and would-be writers, Guidelines For Freelancers.

That book is the basis for her workshops.

She is a West Texas native who grew up in Stamford and now lives in Abilene.

Ms. Masters will appear at Pages & Prints bookstore, #40 Plaza Center, on Friday from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. for a book-signing.

Persons wishing to enroll in her writing workshop should contact the Midland College Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518.

St. Paul's Church to host HIV seminar

Staff report

Dovers

St. Paul C.M.E. Methodist Church, 409 S. Lee St., will host a free HIV seminar Saturday geared at informing the public about AIDS.

"The seminar was prompted by a desire to teach people how they can help those who have the disease," said Rubye Hampton, a Midland teacher who organized the event.

Featured speaker will be Ricky D. Dovers, an ordained minister and certified HIV crisis intervention trainer.

"Although most of the ways the virus is acquired are not condoned religiously, the fact is someone is going to die," Dovers said. "Someone will lose a child. Someone will lose a spouse. Someone will lose a friend."

The seminar is slated for 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday at the church. The public is invited. Lunch will be provided by the church's missionary society.

SOUTHWESTERN CHARMER

Step into the magic of the Southwestern culture in an adobe style home where satillo tile floors sweep the hallways of this Southwestern charmer.

Nestled on a quiet cul-de-sac, this 3-bedroom, 2-bath customized home is the perfect starter home and is filled with Southwestern touches.

From the outside, the brick structure depicts a certain charm characteristic of the adobe architecture. Enter through a wrought iron gate that acts as additional security as well as adding further character to the distinctive designs.

A private courtyard entry is a trademark of the adobe designs found throughout New Mexico and adds a special touch when entering the home.

Satillo tile, arched doorways and wood ceiling rafters exemplify the resplendent New Mexican designs. To the left, the satillo tile floor flows into the earthtone comfort of a carpeted living room that is filled with the light of numerous windows and a high wood-beamed ceiling.

A warm fireplace inlaid with the satillo tile of the native lands graces this expansive living room, providing an ideal sanctuary at the end of a long day.

An appealing view of a private terrace is seen through the generous arrangement of windows along the back wall.

An inviting dine-in kitchen is complete with a breakfast area that is convenient for people on the go. The Southwestern influence is seen once again, lending a rustic charm to this large kitchen with the satillo tiled floors and wood ceiling rafters.

A natural skylight and door leading to the terrace add to the open feeling of this room. For additional storage, the laundry room is conveniently placed off of the kitchen and is filled with an abundance of cabinets.

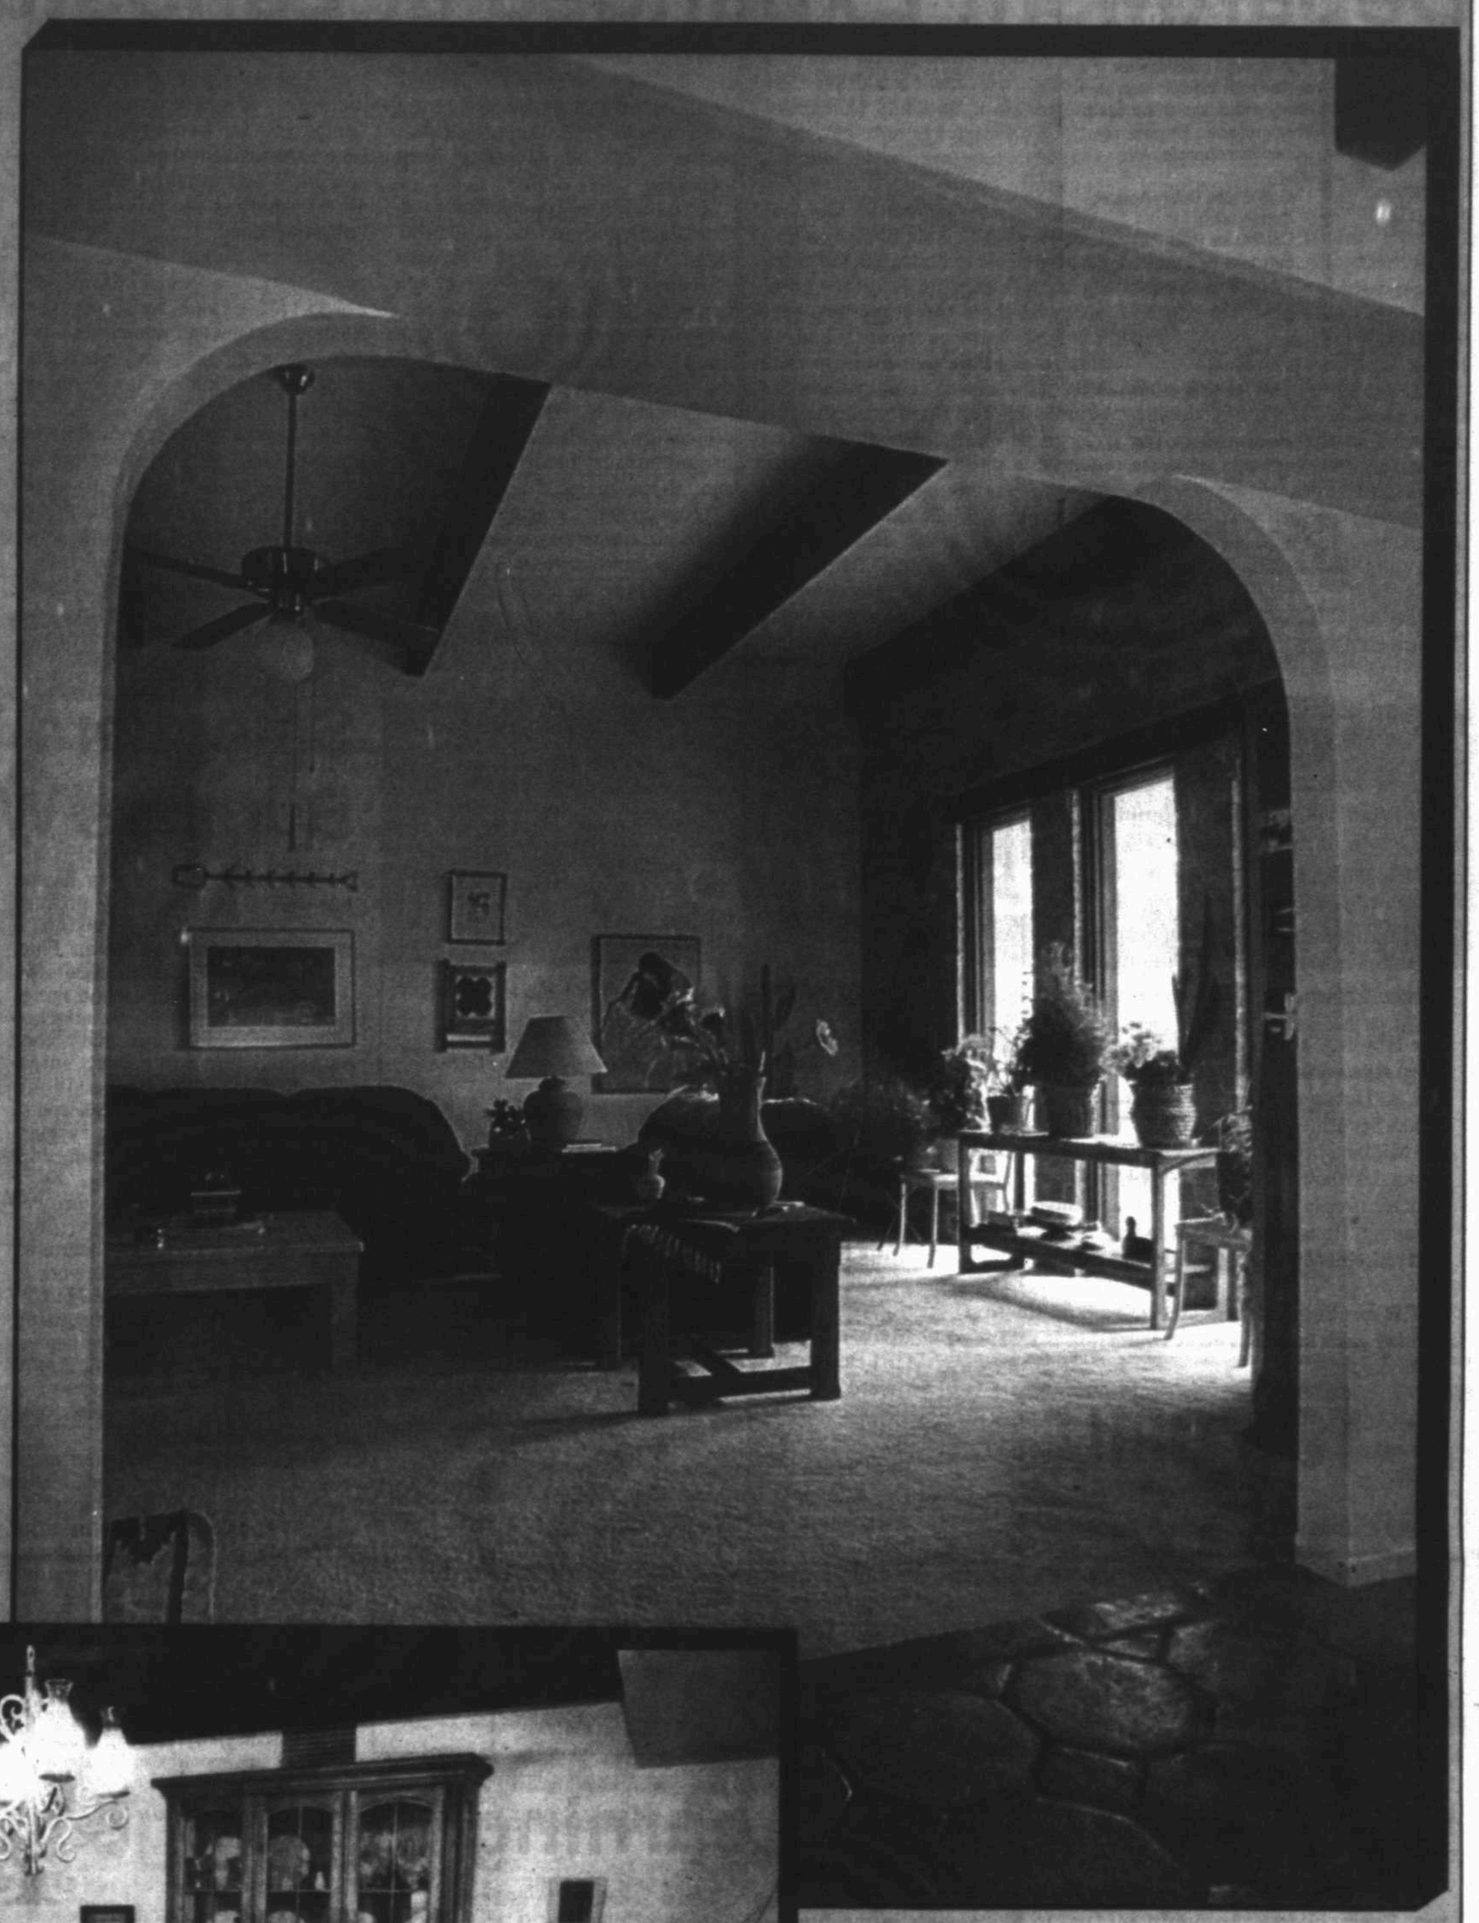

The master bedroom and two additional rooms are secluded towards the front of the home for added privacy when entertaining. Ample living quarters are provided for the master of the house in a room that is large enough for a separate sitting area.

Separate walk-in closets provide the assurance of ample storage space while an adjoining bath is appropriate for private use.

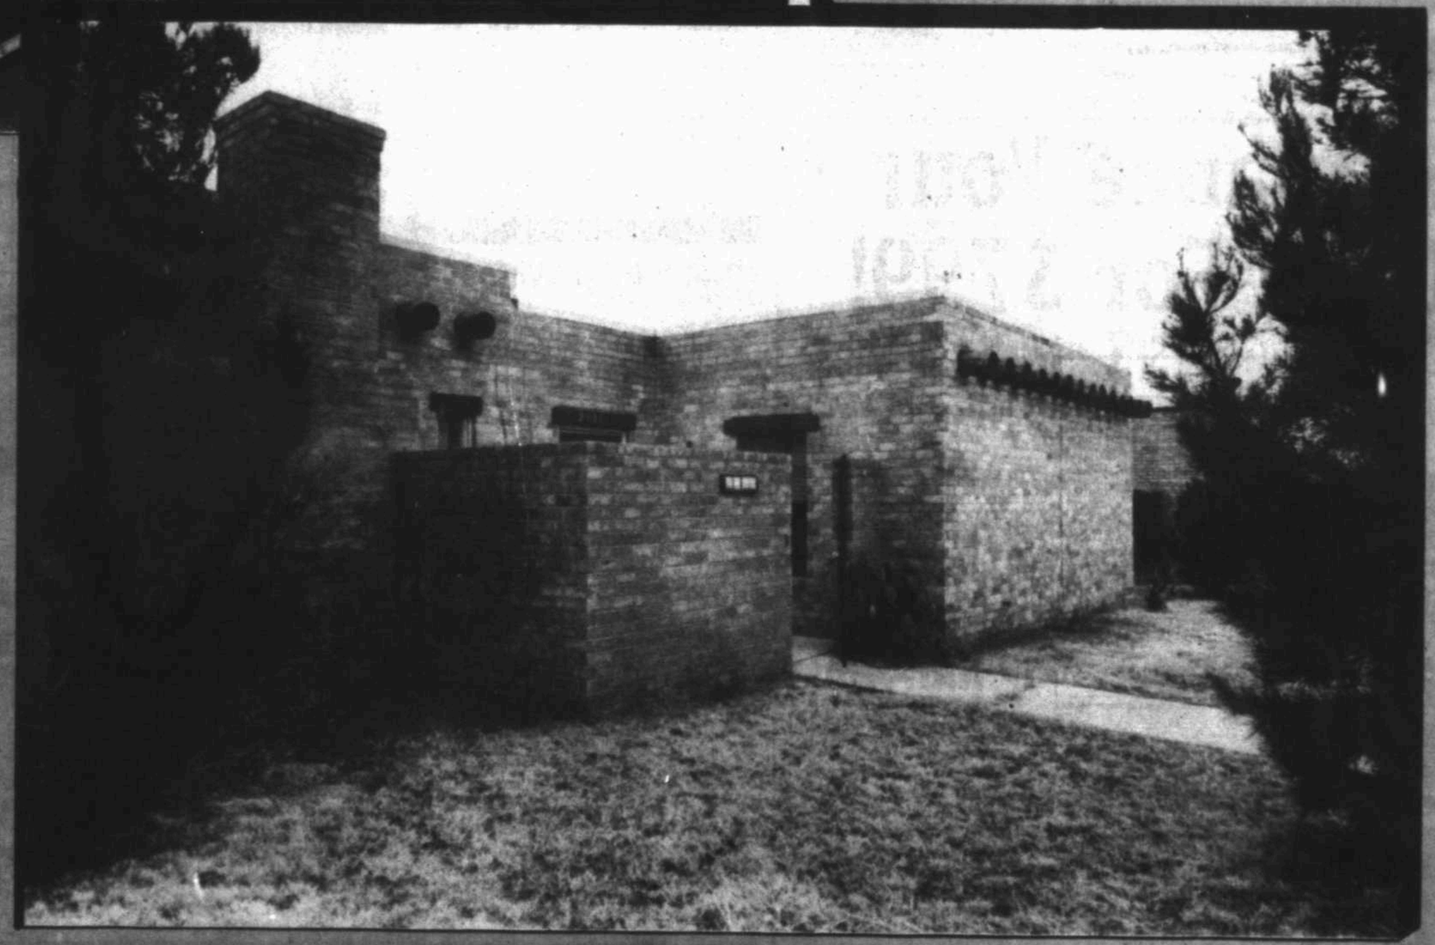

Burnished metal light fixtures, reminiscent of the Spanish conquistadors, add the crowning touch of Southwestern influence to the hallway and additional bedrooms.

A separate hallway bath accommodates visiting relatives or guests. A touch of the Southwest is even added to this bath, where tall ceilings and a skylight grace the arched doorways and satillo tile floor.

The wonders of the Southwest are being offered in this affordable home for $59,900. Call Jo Braden of The Prudential Adobe Realtors at 683-1425 or 694-9548 to arrange a private showing, or come by the open house today at 2104 Rosita Drive from 2 - 4 p.m.

Langston Realtors Talk About...

New Rental Assistance/Property Management Department Expanded at Langston Realtors

Langston Realtors today announced the addition of four new expanded departments and services to be offered by the firm. These include a Rental Assistance/ Property Management Department, a Relocation/Community Orientation Center, a Builder's Center, several Buyers/Sellers Educational Seminars and new Agent Training/Agent Refresher Courses scheduled throughout the year, according to Joanne Langston, president.

"These are all services that our firm currently offers, but we saw the need in the community for expansion and emphasis of these services; therefore we will be allocating staff, agents, space and resources on a more specific basis to provide the services," Langston said.

The new Rental Assistance Department is headed by Nell Scott. Mrs. Scott is a longtime Midland Realtor who has earned her GRI designation, and has extensive property management experience. She will develop and maintain a complete listing of all available rentals in the community She will also develop an additional inventory of properties to be leased and managed by Langston Realtors , and she will show the properties, prepare the lease agreement, and do day to day management of properties. "Owners of rental properties should be delighted with the full range of management services available through this department: leasing, maintenance, contracting for repairs, collections and disbursement of rents, and handling calls from the tenants," Mrs. Scott said. For rental or management information, Mrs. Scott may be contacted through Langston Realtors , 682-9495 or toll free, 1-800-231-2483. The Rental Department will be located at the Wall office, 1908 West Wall, but services will be offered at both locations.

Expansion of The Relocation Community Orientation Center should be completed by February 15, and is headed by Richard Langston, VP Relocation. The center will contain a comprehensive library of information on the community including information on neighborhoods, housing, cultural, education, sports, employment, organizations, health care, child care, shopping, recreation, etc.

"Newcomers to the city are leaving their support systems and services in their previous community. We find they are especially appreciative to find the resources and assitance for development of new support systems professionally and comprehensively presented in one location," Mrs. Langston stated. "Employers are finding this service very beneficial for their transferees, new hires and interviewees. There are no charges for this service," Langston added.

Resources include a video on the community, two special information books published by Langston Realtors , maps and numerous publications, pamphlets, and brochures from organizations in the Permian Basin area.

The Builder's Center should be in place by early spring, according to Mrs. Langston. "It will feature plans, plats, and information on contractors, custom builders, new construction -- essentially all information needed by a person considering building, remodeling, or adding to their present property," Mrs. Langston said. "It will be located in the Langston North office at Loop 250 and Garfield and is a support and extension to our present services for builders, sales of new construction and marketing of new construction. Builders who desire to be included in the center are invited to call me at 685-0400 office or 683-8386 home," Mrs. Langston added.

Announcement of the Buyers and Sellers Educational seminars will be made when dates have been set. The first should be scheduled in March. The New Agent Training/ Experienced Agent Refresher courses are tentatively set for mid-February. Newly licensed agents, and prospective agents scheduled to sit for their licensing exam, or agents who desire to reenter the business are invited to call Pat Orseth, VP Management and

Safeguard Your Home Against Burglars With Simple Precautions

Your home may be your haven, but unless certain safety precautions are taken, it might also be a burglar's heaven, says Norma Pine, Owner Broker, Chaparral Realtors .

"Burglars look for certain things in a home, whether it's an unlocked window or an unlit area, that homeowners often don't even think about," Pine says. By becoming aware of your home's weak spots, however, the risk of being burglarized can be significantly reduced," she adds.

Chaparral Realtors is a member of RELO/The International Relocation Network, headquartered in Chicago. The RELO network is the oldest broker-owned and directed referral service representing independent real estate companies. The RELO network has 3,000 offices in the U.S. and overseas and more than 50,000 sales agents who serve 14,000 communities.

RELO members reported more than $70 billion in total residential sales for 1991, which places the RELO network among the elite leaders in total dollar sales volume, in comparison with the major national real estate franchises. This also makes RELO the largest network of independent real estate brokers in the country with worldwide marketing capabilities.

Pine suggests beginning with a mock break-in by "casing the joint" as a burglar would do. Deliberately lock yourself out (making sure someone is available inside to let you back in), and see if you are able to enter your home without keys. This will give you an idea of what points of entry need to be made more secure.

One factor to look for is the strength of the doors that lead into the home. The safest doors are made of metal or solid-core wood at least one and three-quarter inches thick, according to Pine, whereas hollow-core doors are easily knocked in.

Homeowners also need to be conscious of using locks effectively, Pine says. "Many burglaries take place with almost no effort on the part of the burglar because entry was made through an unlocked door or window. It's important to keep points of entry locked whenever they are not being used," Pine notes. Multiple locks provide added safety, as well.

Pine points to adequate lighting as another important deterrent to burglars. Exterior lighting should illuminate large areas, especially near doors or windows, since dark areas provide a burglar with an opportunity to enter the home unobserved. In addition, interior lighting should always give yor home the appearance of being occupied. "Whenever you are going to be away from home, whether it's for a night or for a month, use a timer on indoor and outdoor lights, even on the radio and television, to make it appear that someone is home," she recommends.

Other preventive measures against burglars include participating in a neighborhood watch program, or establishing one if none exists. Consider installing an alarm system, Pine suggests, which may range from a battery-operated, self-contained alarm that is mounted on a door to a professionally installed system that provides 24-hour monitoring and response.

Your Neighborhood Expert.. Learning the Lingo

Every occupation has its own jargon. Even children develop their own shorthand terms in order to communicate a frequently used concept quickly.

Many of us have at least one embarassing story about a word or phrase created within the confines of their family, that they assumed in adulthood everyone else understood.

Words and phrases can have meaning only in a family, geographical region, or profession. For the uninitiated, they may as well be spoken in a foreign tongue.

As you prepare to buy or sell a home, you can find yourself lost in the language of real estate and loans.

Here are some common terms you may come across:

ARM: Adjustable Rate Mortgage, a loan that has its interest rate adjusted to movements in the financial markets.

Buydown: A subsidy (usually paid by builder or developer) to reduce monthly mortgage payments.

Conditions, Covenants and Restrictions (C, C & R): The standards that define how a property may be used and what protections the developer requires for the subdivision.

Convertibility: Ability to change a loan from an adjustable to a fixed rate.

Due-on-sale: A mortgage clause that requires the buyer to pay the entire outstanding balance on sale or transfer.

Fixed Schedule: A mortgage with a payment plan that is established at closing for the life of the loan.

GPM: Graduated Payment Mortgage, a fixed-rate, fixed-schedule loan that starts with lower payments, increases, then levels out at five or ten years.

Mortgage Broker: A broker that represents numerous lenders. Charges a fee only if the consumer finds a loan.

Negative Amortization: An increase in the outstanding amount when the monthly payment does not cover the monthly interest due.

Point: A one-time charge paid to the mortgage lender on closing to increase the lender's interest yield.

PITI: Principal, Interest, Taxes and Insurance. The four major components of your monthly mortgage payment.

R-Value: Insulation rating. The higher the number, the greater the insulating value.

BRIEFING

Rigs down

Swivels hanging in the wind. Drilling activity declined during the week ended January 8, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count fell 12 to 113 during the week. A year ago it stood at 117.

Nationwide, the count declined 19 to 903, but remains above year-ago levels of 732.

Among major oil producing states, Texas lost five rigs for the week and Colorado and New Mexico each lost eight. The biggest gainer was Oklahoma, up 13 rigs.

Exxon

HOUSTON — Exxon Co. U.S.A. has cut production at several of its U.S. refineries, but the company isn't planning to reduce its workforce, a spokesman said.

Weak prices

A tank batteries (above) were peaceful after a mid-week attack by Allies on Iraqi missile positions failed to boost oil prices significantly this week. The best the Wednesday attack could do was prompt a 12-cent gain in February contracts for West Texas Intermediate.

Late in the week, oil futures had risen to $18.70. Prices had fallen to a 10-month low of $18.38 at the beginning of the week. The posted price ended the week at $17.25.

Natural gas prices showed a slight gain, with February contracts around $1.65 per thousand cubic feet late in the week.

Transco suit

HOUSTON — A legal feud between Transco Energy Co. and a Corpus Christi-based natural gas gathering firm has sparked allegations of fraud and conspiracy.

Corpus Christi Gas Gathering is seeking $890 million from its former business partner, and Houston-based Transco has countered with a $250 million suit.

The dispute stems from a series of deals in 1989 and 1990 in which Transco agreed to loan a group of Corpus affiliates nearly $46 million to build 300 miles of gas gathering pipeline, Corpus officials said.

The money was not handed over in one lump sum, Corpus officials said. The parties, at Transco's insistence, entered into eight separate transactions that created several separate partnerships. Transco owned a 50 percent ownership stake in each.

Corpus officials say that Transco required that each Corpus entity that received a loan had to agree to guarantee payment on all the other loans. That requirement, Corpus contends, constituted usury — charging of illegally high interest rates under Texas law.

Production falls again

■ U.S. production slumps again in 1992 as independents call for import fee.

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – U.S. oil production slumped again last year, falling to its lowest level since 1960, while crude oil imports increased by nearly 3 percent, the American Petroleum Institute, the industry's largest trade group, said Wednesday.

Leaders of the nation's smaller independent producers, meanwhile, have renewed their call for an oil import fee, urging President-elect Bill Clinton to tack on an unspecified surcharge on every barrel of foreign crude oil brought into the United States.

Eugene Ames, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, told reporters in Washington that an import fee would curb imports, help reduce the federal deficit and also encourage price stability for U.S. oil producers.

"For too long, cheap foreign oil has flooded our domestic economy, driving the domestic oil price down and driving American producers to their knees," said Ames, an oilman from San Antonio, Texas.

The API, which represents major oil companies, is neutral on imposing an import fee, said Edward H. Murphy, the group's finance director, at a news conference to unveil the industry's annual statistical review.

Spurred by hints of an economic recovery, Americans used slightly more oil last year than in 1991, Murphy said. Daily U.S. oil demand in 1992 averaged just under 17 million barrels a day, up 1.6 percent over the 1991 average of 16.7 million barrels a day.

"As the U.S. economy has begun to recover, the consumption of petroleum, as well as energy consumption in total, has begun to grow," Murphy said.

But domestic oil production dropped last year, falling 3.8 percent from 7.4 million barrels a day in 1991 to 7.1 million barrels a day in 1992. And U.S. imports of foreign crude oil increased last year for the first time in three years, jumping 2.9

Deep rigs, like this former MGF rig have been stacked for a long time, but could be activated again if a study by the National Petroleum Council proves valid. The study concludes that natural gas can and will play a bigger role in the energy future of the U.S.

Study upbeat on natural gas

■ Natural Petroleum Council says natural gas will play larger role in U.S. energy future.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

More good news for Permian Basin gas producers. A much-touted and long-awaited study by the National Petroleum Council offers a bright picture for natural gas.

Requested by Energy Secretary William Watkins, the study, which spans issues from production to consumption, was commissioned as a comprehensive analysis to determine if and how natural gas might make a larger contribution to the nation's energy supply, and what impediments might be encountered.

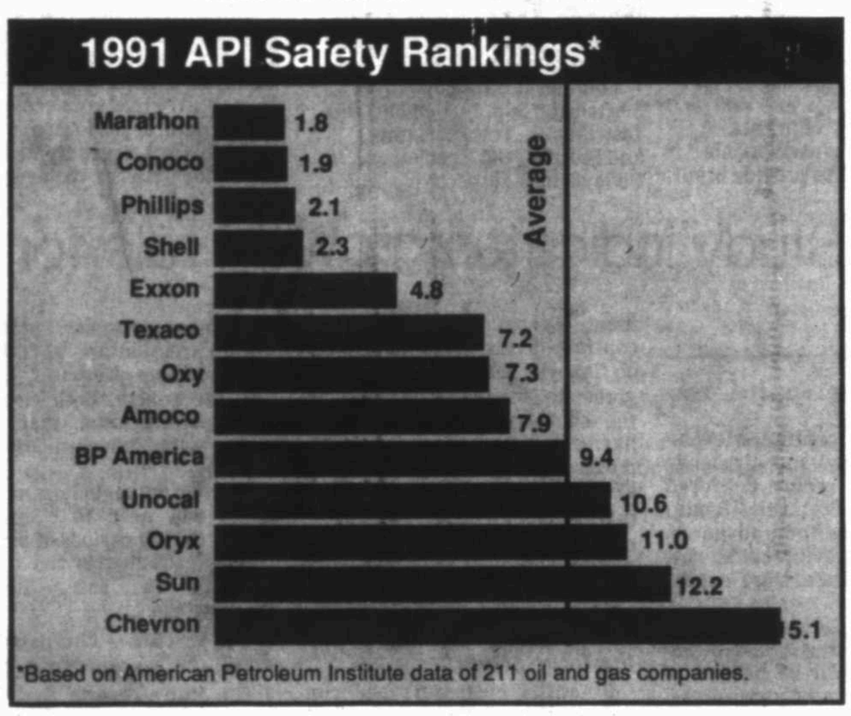

The study which has taken nearly two years of study and analysis, essentially concludes that there is a large natural gas resource base that can be competitively produced and sold to a growing U.S. market.

Results from the study have been consolidated into the following key findings:

■ RESOURCES — "The natural gas resource base is abundant and can be produced and delivered at prices that allow both expansion of the market and continued development of the resource."

The study says sufficient new natural gas supplies can be delivered at competitive prices, even though a substantial portion of this gas is in reservoirs that are more expensive to develop and require sustained real growth in wellhead gas prices and

Oil firms ranked on safety

■ The API has issued results of its 1991 safety survey.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

The Academy Award of oilpatch safety has been release and the winner is Marathon.

Each year, the American Petroleum Institute surveyed oil and gas companies on lost workday injuries in 1991, and the news was good for some.

In the API survey, Marathon had the lowest lost workday injuries per thousand employees among the 13 largest oil companies listed in the ranking. Marathon averaged 1.8 days in 1991 per thousand employees and was followed by Conoco with 1.9 days, Phillips Petroleum with 2.1 days and Shell with 2.3 days.

Other companies below the average of 9.4 days include Exxon with 4.8 days, Texaco with 7.2 days, Oxy with 7.3 days and Amoco with 7.9 days. BP America was right at the average of 9.4 days.

Those exceeding the average were Unocal, 10.6 days, Oryx with 11 days, Sun with 12.2 days and Chevron with 15.1 days.

"We're making progress," said Ken Leonard, who is responsible for safety and health issues for the API. He notes that the number of lost workday injuries per thousand is on the decline.

He said the companies will use this survey as a tool to objectively measure of how they compare to others in the business. They will also, he said, take the different data from the survey and plan a data exchange, focusing on problem areas.

When the API holds safety conferences, he said, problem areas identified in the survey will be focused on and speakers invited who have taken initia-

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Could U.S. become the defender of Iraq?

Pitts

As the U.S. dropped fresh bombs on Iraq this week one could not help but be reminded of the treachery that continually lurks in that part of the world and the impact it can have on oil supplies and prices.

Governed by despots, dictators and demented holy men, the Middle East is a ticking time bomb of cultural and religious hate, that threatens to explode at any minute. Life there has become akin to living on the San Andreas Fault. Sooner or later, almost everyone expects the "the big one" to happen.

Daniel Yergin's four-night series "The Prize" on PBS proved him a very able historian of petroleum. But in addition to that he is also one of the most experienced and insightful oil market analysts in the world with a network of contacts around the world.

When I spoke to Yergin prior to the showing of "The Prize" last week, he reminded me that the Middle East problem has not gone away, and in published comments provided me by Yergin, he warns that Iran will be the next trouble spot in the Persian Gulf.

"Something is going to happen," he warns. "Given Iran's accelerated military build-up, its need for hard currency and its desire to impose its brand of Islam on its neighbors. Something is bound to happen."

Yergin did not offer a specific timetable other than to say that "it" might happen in the mid-1990s. What might "it" be?

Let us ruminate on the facts for a moment. Iran and Iraq were at war for seven year. It was a bloody holy war, that saw Saddam use poison gas on his own people and the Iranians to send young boys across mine fields to clear the way for tanks. The U.S. backed Iraq.

The war between Iran and Iraq is cool for now, but it would take only a slight provocation from either side to become hot again. And who knows better how to provoke than the rulers of these two countries.

Would the U.S. (that is "U.N.") be drawn into another Iran-Iraq conflict? Probably, if the war involved nuclear arms or expansionist designs.

If Iran only wanted to remove Saddam Hussein as a threat and that only involved killing Saddam and a few hundred thousand Iraqis, with conventional weapons, and if Iran went home after the war and did not make any territorial claims, the U.S. would probably not only sit it out, but send Iran a.thank you note for taking care of Saddam.

But would the U.S. permit Iran to interject nuclear warfare into the Middle East and rain tactical nuclear weapons down on Iraq? Probably not.

Does Iran have nuclear weapons yet? Some intelligence sources say they may have bought an assortment from sources inside the former Soviet Union. Would they use them if they had them? In a New York minute.

Also, if Iran takes on expansionistic ambitions and attempts to get its hands on Iraqi oil or spread its fanatical brand of Muslim religion to all of Iraq the U.S. (that is "U.N.") would probably be drawn into the conflict.

Instead of a heads on nuclear attack, a most likely scenario is that Iran may try to brew a revolution in the South of Iraq to overthrow the militarily crippled Saddam, then support the revolution with arms.

If Hussein were overthrown Iran may then attempt to set up its own puppet mulah in Bagdad. Or, it might try to partition the country into a North Iraq

MEETINGS

Thin oil and gas zone evaluations SIPES topic

Manning

Michael J. Manning will be the guest speaker at Wednesday's meeting of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists. The meeting will be at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Manning is chief petrophysicist with Halliburton Logging Services. His topic will be thin oil and gas zone evaluation using modern wireline logging devices and processing. he will also discuss the relatively new technique of borehole imagining.

These thin zone techniques are applicable to both clastic and carbonate reservoirs.

The meeting is open to members and their guests. No reservations are necessary.

SPE to discuss changes faced by professionals

The Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

James L. May will speak on "The Day The World Changed or This is a Fine Kettle of Fish You've Got Us in, Ollie."

According to May, the American professional in general is facing a national economy that is in a period of long-term structural change. A specific goal of his talk will be to introduce some concrete actions that have been found to help others successfully cope with the stressful experiences of unemployment, threatened unemployment and underemployment.

Reservations can be made by calling 686-7329.

Upcoming SEPM field trip to be previewed

The Permian Basin section, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Robert F. Lindsay of Chevron U.S.A. in Midland will present "A Geology of the Arbuckle Mountains."

His talk will be a preview of the group's upcoming field trip which will be Feb. 18-20.

The Arbuckle Mountains are a large folded thrust that was implaced by Pennsylvanian tectonic movement in southern Oklahoma and contains exposed Cambrian through Pennsylvanian igneous and sedimentary rocks.

Cost is $7 per person.

WTGS evening program visits Antarctica

The West Texas Geological Society will host a special evening meeting Thursday at the Plaza Club beginning with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m.

Kurt M. Cox with Chevron U.S.A. in Midland will speak on "Antarctica: Journey to the Last Continent."

Cost is $12.50 per person. Reservations should be made by 5 p.m. Tuesday by calling 683-1573.

SPE group discusses landfarming drilling waste

The Environmental Study Group of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Bonsall S. Wilton of Arco's Western Drilling Department will discuss the evaluation of the potential for landfarming drilling waste.

Cost is $10 per person and reservations should be made by Tuesday by calling 686-7329.

Well loggers host Core Labs research manager

The Permian Basin Well Logging Society will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club.

Guest speaker Dan Georgi will speak on "Application of Pressure-Decay Profile Permeametry to Reservoir Description." Georgi is manager of research and development with Core Laboratories in Houston.

Cost is $10 for members, $12 for non-members.

OSHA hygienist to visit safety engineers

Nancy Bethea, senior industrial hygienist with the Occupational Safety and Heatlty Administration Lubbock area office will speak at the meeting of the Permian Basin chapter, American Society of Safety Engineers. The meeting will be Thursday in Room 130 of the Electronics Technology Building of Odessa College beginning with an optional meal at 6:30 p.m. and meeting at 7 p.m.

Bethea will speak on Osha's bloodborne pathogens standard.

Reservations for meals can be made by calling 368-1082 by noon Tuesday.

OIL: Continues to slump

percent to 7.8 million barrels a day last year from 7.6 million barrels the previous year.

The difference between daily oil demand and domestic and imported oil is accounted for by crude oil in transit and in U.S. pipelines.

Murphy blamed low crude oil prices and federal bans on offshore drilling in most U.S. waters and in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge for a continued decline in domestic exploration and drilling, a trend he said resulted in the loss of 40,000 oil jobs in 1992.

As of last October, the most recent month for which data are available, employment in oil exploration, production and refining was 462,200, the API said. Ten years ago, the figure was 920,300.

"Unfortunately, with well completions at their present level and bans on searching for oil in areas of the United States that are the most likely to contain large reserves, it is hard to see any reason for this trend to improve," Murphy said.

The API executive also warned that if U.S. production trends continue, Americans will soon be importing half of their daily needs, "possibly within the next two years," Murphy said.

According to API statisticians, the highest annual import ratio was 47.7 percent in 1977. On a monthly basis, API says, the United States has imported more than 50 percent of its oil on 10 different occasions, the most recent being August 1991.

Both trade associations oppose additional federal gasoline taxes as a means of curbing oil imports and cutting the federal debt, however.

"I think it could very well stymie the recovery we're under right now," Murphy said. "There are a lot of negatives associated with it."

PITTS: U.S. friend or foe?

(From 1E)

and South Iraq, with a Muslim fundamentalist government in the South. Either attempt would put Iran in control of Iraqi oil production, disrupt the balance of power in the region and be unacceptable to the United States.

At issue is the industry, commerce and security of the United States which is fueled by Middle East oil. The U.S. cannot and will not allow the expansion of gangsterism in the Middle East. We already have more trouble than we can handle with the gangster in Baghdad.

Ironic as it may seem at this moment, the U.S. in the near future could very well find itself coming to the defense of Iraq.

Sadly, American oil interests in the Middle East are no safer today than they were before Desert Storm.

SAFE: Survey helps

tives to improve safety or made significant progress and can share their actions with others. Leonard said the industry group is planning a spring program to look at safety management, how rules are implemented, and other topics such as conducting better hazard analysis, better identify safety hazards, improve engineering controls to reduce hazards and emergency response in case of an incident.

Lonnie Ashley, safety and occupational health coordinator with Conoco's Midland office, credited his company's high ranking on the company's philosophy of "We look at the safety program as the individual's responsibility. From the core of the company up, we've emphasized that each person is responsible for his own safety and that of those around him."

He added that in the last year or so Conoco has concentrated on a "safety leadership" theme. "I think that's the main emphasis that drives our program: Individuals must take responsibility to correct unsafe acts or not perform a job or activity they think is unsafe until they've looked into it closer and convinced themselves they can do it safely. If they can't convince themselves, they don't do it."

He said the Midland division has gone over 6-1/2 years without an employee lost-time accident, a record he is very proud of "and would like to have go on forever if we could."

But he said unless the employees accept responsibility for their own safety, "we won't have safety records or an injury-free workplace."

Max Comer, safety and environmental affairs supervisor with Phillips Petroleum in Odessa, said "of course we're disappointed we're third, but everyone is concerned with safety. We at Phillips try to aggressively keep everyone involved and proud of their safety record."

Comer said his company has a variety of safety programs, from several driving programs such as "Circle for Safety" reminding drivers to check around their vehicles before moving them, a lighted vehicle policy, and defensive driving, to training employees in pre-emergency medical services such as first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation and monthly safety meetings.

Leonard pointed out that data for 1990 and 1991 could be compared in many different ways.

He offered as a good general illustration the total incidence rate — the number of incidents or accidents per 200,000 hours worked. By dividing the number of incidents in 1990 by 200,000, there were 3.52 for 1990; for 1991, the rate was 3.35.

Leonard explained that the API uses the 200,000 hours base because it is the same basis as data reported to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

However, the API found a total of 14 fatalities suffered in the oil and gas industry in 1990 and a total of 31 in 1991. The number of fatalities in the exploration and production division in 1991 rose by five over 1990. The number of employees covered by BLS reports was 319,000 in 1990 and 366,000 in 1991. Leonard said not only was employment up, but the API was more aggressive in getting companies to report.

For its survey in 1990, the API surveyed 120 companies. In 1991, it surveyed 210 companies.

Leonard said the data gathered is the most accurate way to make comparisons between disciplines or industries. The API, he added, is in the process of dramatically improving and strengthening its safety programs. The industry group has completed a survey of its safety standards and is in the process of developing new standards and updating existing ones to take new technology into account.

Of course, he said, in the oil industry or any industry, "one death is too many."

How the gas study reached its conclusions

Staff report

The natural gas study by the National Petroleum Council has taken nearly two years of study and analysis and has involved contributions from some 200 individual in industry, government, trade associations, academia, and private enterprise. This study brought together representatives from all segments of the natural gas industry (major and independent producers, transmission companies, local distribution companies, and marketers) as well as end users and federal and state regulators.

Additionally, the study utilized focus group interviews with participants representing consumer advocates, regulators, various customer classes, and the different industry segments.

The focus group participants were encouraged to provide input on where the natural gas industry was not meeting their specific requirements, what concerns they had about the industry, and suggestions on how the industry could improve. These results were considered by the NPC study members in analyzing the potential barriers to increased use of natural gas and developing recommendations for moving the industry toward its goal.

Results from the study have been assembled into six volumes, the first of which is a summary of the overall findings and recommendations along with the methodology used in conducting the study. This summary is supported by reports of each of the four task groups.

Volumes II through V cover Source and Supply, Demand and Distribution, Transportation and Storage, and Regulatory and Policy Issues, respectively. The final volume contains descriptions of the computer models used in the study and selected output from the analysis.

Over the course of the study, the NPC assessed

(1) growth opportunities for natural gas under two different scenarios.

(2) the economic potential for satisfying growing demand with domestic gas resource base and the available imports,

(3) the ability of the transportation and storage system to meet the increased demand, and

(4) how the regulatory environment affects the operations of the industry. The NPC further identified actions by government and industry that are necessary for the natural gas to compete effectively for a larger fraction of the nation's energy requirements.

Committee Members

The NPC Committee on Natural Gas was comprised as follows:

The Committee was chaired by Frank H. Richardson, president and chief executive officer, Shell Oil Co., Houston.

He was assisted by Kenneth L. Lay, chairman and chief executive officer, Enron Corp., who served as vice chairman, transmission and Eugene A. Tracy, immediate past chairman of the executive committee, Peoples Energy Corp., who served as vice chairman, distribution.

The goverment co-chairman for the study was James G. Randolph, assistant secretary for fossil energy, U.S. Department of Energy. The committee was assisted by a coordinating subcommittee and four task groups.

GAS: Study indicates growing role for natural gas time to bring on the new production.

It notes that continued evolution of technology and efficiency will combine to reduce delivered prices below what they would have been without these advances, and thus offset the increasing cost of developing these more expensive supplies.

Study participants say proper emphasis on research and development (R&D) will be needed to impact the future of natural gas.

■ NEW MARKETS — "The natural gas market is increasingly diverse, with new challenges and opportunities."

While natural gas has potential growth opportunities in all existing market segments and several new technologies including the use of natural gas as a transportation fuel, the study says it will not be easy sailing into these new markets.

Stiff competition is expected from the other traditional fuel sources as well as improved energy efficiencies and conservation. Regional and site-specific factors will be important in determining the growth potential for natural gas.

■ DELIVERABILITY — "Increased reliance on competitive market forces has improved the gas industry's ability to serve customer needs in a diverse and expanding marketplace."

New regulatory policies are encouraging competition and the natural gas industry is responding by providing additional value-added services, flexible contracting options, and increased attention to customer needs. Sound management, operational mechanisms, contract diversity, and active use of financial markets can work together to manage risk and reduce the short-term volatility that is likely to occur as the industry moves through various transitional phases.

■ REGULATION — "The gas industry faces significant challenges requiring proactive steps by industry and government, as evidenced from the responses of both the study participants and the focus groups."

Potential customers are concerned about the ability of the industry to deliver gas when and where it is needed, particularly during times of peak demand. Additionally, the industry does not have a good public image and has not been sufficiently effective in the past at marketing natural gas, in spite of its inherent beneficial qualities, and has been overdependent on regulation for setting direction and resolving conflicts.

The two general categories of recommendations that have emerged from the study are directed toward government officials and industry, respectively:

■ GOVERNMENT — "Federal, state, and local officials need to allow competitive market forces to continue to develop and work."

Government must promote and support policies and regulations that foster customer choice and reduce regulatory uncertainty, and eliminate programs, policies, and procedures, both regulatory and environmental, that unduly increase the delivered cost of natural gas.

In addition, regulators and legislators will need to exercise restraint during periods of price and supply volatility as the industry adjusts to the changing marketplace.

■ INDUSTRY — "Industry must make the market work."

The study reports that the industry will need to do a better job of selling, promoting and delivering their product to make the markets work. Recommendations include: continued and accelerated development of technology and procedures to reduce the delivered cost of natural gas; promotion and commercialization of new end-use technologies; development of new and innovative strategies for dealing with environmental issues; concentration of efforts to improve the reliability of supply and delivery systems; increased customer focus in marketing; and increased leadership efforts.

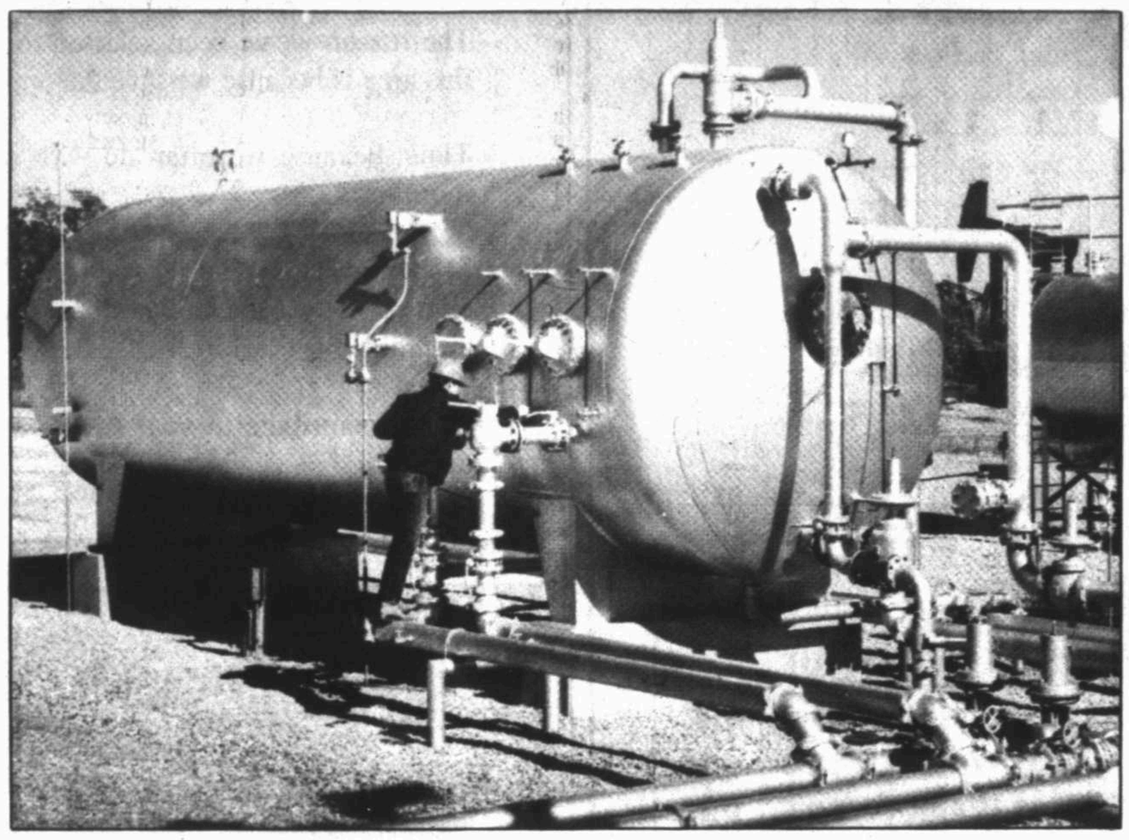

The adoption of the principles embodied by these recommendations, says the NPC report, is a necessary prerequisite to achieving the expectations to make "natural gas a greater contributor to the energy security and environmental enhancement of our Nation."

Leading The Way In Oil And Gas

Since the company was established in 1926, Natco has devoted its services exclusively to the oil and gas production segment of the industry.

Natco is one of the oldest firms in the oil and gas industry. The company has been instrumental in developing the processing technology that is applied throughout the oil field today. And the company continues as a leader...Advancing the basic principles of processing. Researching new ideas. Developing new products. Expanding new services. Always seeking a simple, reliable solution to the increasingly complex demands of your processing operations.

The company and all its personnel have worked with one thought in mind..."The Highest Service that can be afforded the oil and gas industry is the development of products that save and conserve the saleable hydrocarbons, to the highest degree possible."

Not only must a company as ours be able to furnish new as well as improved products, it must furnish such designs that are least expensive to fabricate together with adequate shop facilities to make any commercial size and weight vessel to fit the designs. Natco engineers have a broad scope of training and experience. When the efforts of experienced and expert Mechanical, Petroleum, Chemical, Civil and Electrical Engineers are coupled with excellent salesmen and servicemen, large and versatile fabricating facilities are required. Experienced shop personnel is necessary to make everything Natco offers.

We are dedicated to providing local technical expertise, professional service, invalco valves, and other quality products that support and improve the overall effectiveness of our customer's operations.

We have an on-line data base connecting you with all available equipment including: All Natco owned reconditioned production equipment and production company's surplus.

Eddins-Walcher Company Security Fuel Systems

Our security fuel system is designed to save you money on your fuel bill and provide you with an excellent and revealing accounting record for each vehicle that uses it.

Purchases for each unit are listed chronologically, and the time, date and location of each purchase are recorded. Each card issued for a separate unit can be restricted to one kind of fuel, or it can be coded to allow the purchase of any combination of diesel, regular, unleaded, and/or premium unleaded gasoline. It is your choice. If you want the driver to purchase only diesel, the card will not activate any of the gasoline pumps. Each card can also be coded to reflect the unit number and the odometer reading. The choices are optional also. The pumps are activated only by punching in the required information into the card reader.

Pricing is very competitive with the so-called "street prices" in all 31 locations where these cards are operable. One thing that a businessman should consider in using our Security Fuel Systems is the fact that when you hang up the hose, you are free to leave. Just pump and go!! This saves the time required to go into a station, have a ticket prepared, sign it and then account for it. All of this is done automatically by our Security Fuel System. Office personnel also do not have to match up copies of tickets with the monthly statements.

Each account is assigned a security code number. That is confidential to you. If a card is lost, it is unusable because the finder does not know the code number and therefore cannot activate the card reader. We guarantee you that this Security Fuel System will save you money -- all we have for sale is gasoline and diesel, and they are available 24 hours a day every day in the year. Each unit is well lighted for night use. These facilities have air and water, windshield washing equipment with paper towels and trash cans. Most of them have vacuum cleaners.

Commercial companies eliminate the liability of fuel tanks in their yards -- no evaporation -- no danger of spillage affecting the environment. You also eliminate inventory investment and accounting for each withdrawal -- our system does all this for you.

We urge you to try this system and determine for yourself the advantages and benefits it produces.

Benchmark...Chemicals for the World's Petroleum and Manufacturing Industries

A Global Perspective

Benchmark Research & Technology, Inc. is a family of chemical companies, recognized world-wide for its time-tested commitment to service, quality products and environmental accountability. Serving the petroleum and manufacturing industries, Benchmark evolved from a single company in the early 1980's to the current four corporations:

Chemical Blending Services, Inc., West Texas Drum Company, Inc., ZTC - Applied Crosslinker Technology and Strata Prop, Inc.

These companies provide a wide range of services and products including proprietary chemical blending and distribution, container reconditioning and the research, production and application of crosslinkers and "System Stable™ proppants.

Chemical Blending Services, Inc.

Benchmark has grown through a logical progression of acquisitions and startups since 1981 when Chemical Blending Services, Inc. was established. Chemical Blending was originally established to meet the needs of the oil well service industry by providing for the proprietary blending and packaging of liquid and dry chemicals. In 1983, Chemical Blending's product and service capabilities were greatly expanded with the purchase of a regional chemical distribution company.

Today, Chemical Blending provides chemicals for a number of industries and has further expanded its services to include grinding, milling, specialty and proprietary blending, manufacturing, commodity chemical distribution and warehousing. A highly-trained technical service staff of chemists, rheologists and engineers is available to answer any questions, perform specifications-testing or help develop chemical compositions to meet special needs.

The philosophy of our company has always been based on service -- product on demand, 24-hours a day, seven days a week, every day of the year. We're here to meet your needs, whenever or wherever they may occur.

Plant and Facilities

In 1985, Benchmark moved its headquarters to the present ten-acre location in Midland. Together with our new Houston-area facility, we have more than 90,000 square feet of warehouse space with rail and truck access, 75,000 square feet of production space and continually expanding laboratories at both locations. We also have a raw material storage capacity of several million pounds for uncoated proppant to supply our new process-controlled StrataProp proppant coating facility.

The Benchmark Commitment

At Benchmark, we recognize that quality chemicals can be purchased from any chemical company. What sets Benchmark Companies apart from the competition is our commitment to service. This commitment has kept us in business since our inception, and will continue to be our philosophy in serving your needs, whether for long-term contracts or emergency orders that must be on-site tomorrow morning.

Benchmark's environmental commitment is persistent and uncompromised. Not only do we incorporate proper waste disposal, safety awareness and regulatory compliance into our daily routines, but we make every effort to advance in each of these areas as well. Our newest facilities are specially constructed to help ensure regulatory compliance. Benchmark's commitment helps assure a safer tomorrow for our world.

Few gifts actually improve with age. Your bank sells one of them.

You can count on one hand the gifts that actually get better as they get older. There's only one, though, you can buy at your bank: a U.S. Savings Bond.

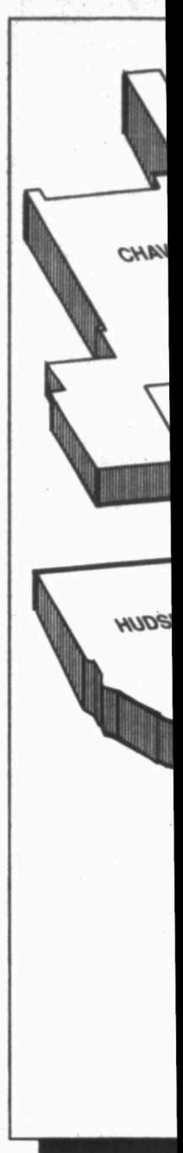

The longer Savings Bonds are held, the more they're worth. You buy Savings Bonds for half their face value. They earn competitive, market-based interest — compounded semiannually, when held for five years or more —with a guaranteed return. And they're absolutely safe.

Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. Order them at any full-service bank, savings and loan or credit union, and ask for a gift certificate to give now. When the person receives the Bond in the mail, you and your gift will be remembered for years to come. Visit your bank for the gift that improves with age: a U.S. Savings Bond. ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Wiser Oil finals Scurry Reef project

Staff report

THE WISER OIL CO. has completed the first successful exploration test in its Scurry Reef exploration project on the Permian Basin's Eastern Shelf.

The company completed the No. 1 Wiser-Terry Shafer in Howard County to flow 133 barrels of crude and 100 Mcfd on an 11/64 inch choke from the Canyon Reef formation. Flowing tubing pressure was 505 psi. The well is producing a state allowable of 120 barrels of oil per day.

With the completion, Wiser reopened the Hobo South (Canyon Reef) field, which was originally opened in September 1960 by Camp Oil Co. No. 1 R.T. Shafer.

Location of the No. 1 Wiser-Terry Shafer is 2,501 ft. from north and 1,015 ft. from east lines of Section 27, Block 25, H&TC survey, Abst. 29.

The well is the second in a projected 10-well 1992-1993 program to explore the Scurry Reef complex. Two additional wells are currently drilling.

The company said wells in this area have potential for multiple productive horizons that can be identified with new seismic technology.

New producer added to Schleicher field

DISCOVERY OPERATING INC. has added new production to the PW (Canyon) field of Schleicher County, 25 miles northwest of Eldorado.

The No. 1 Otis was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.59 Mmcfd from perforations 6,684 to 7,095 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,350 gallons of 15 percent NeFE and fractured with 72,000 gallons gel an d60,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 50,000 lbs. 16/30 sand.

Scheduled as a 7,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,163 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,125 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 5,572 ft. and Canyon at 6,184 ft. on ground elevation of 2,481 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 2,571 ft. from south lines of Section 27, Block TT, TCRR survey.

Pecos field gains new pay opener

New pay has apparently been opened in the Stroman field of Pecos County, seven miles east of Fort Stockton.

EXXON CO. U.S.A. completed the No. 1 W.A. Stroman "G" to flow 166 barrels of 35 gravity crude and 32 Mcfd on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 190 psi. The well flowed from perforations 3,915 to 3,930 ft., with no treatment reported.

Originally drilled to 26,214 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,950 ft. A five inch liner was hunt from 18,091 to 26,214 ft.

The well topped the Montoya at 21,6313 ft., Simpson at 22,066 and Ellenburger at 24,358 ft. on ground elevation of 2,901 ft.

Location is 2,316 ft. from south and 2,565 ft. from west lines of CCI&M survey 526, Abst. 39.

The well was originally completed in 1974 as the No. 1 W.A. Stroman "C", a Devonian producer in 1974. Original potential was a calculated absolute open flow of 570 Mcfd from perforations 21,281 to 21,601 ft.

Oklahoma completions off in 1992

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oil and gas drilling in Oklahoma in 1992 was at its lowest level in almost 50 years, the Oklahoma Corporation Commission says.

Drillers made 1,678 oil and gas wells in the state last year, a nearly 24 percent drop from the previous year, the commission said Thursday.

The number was the lowest since 1943, when 1,184 oil and gas wells were drilled in the state.

Decreasing reserves, a sluggish economy and low prices caused the decline, said Larry Claxton, oil and gas statistics manager for the commission.

The record high was 12,030 completions in 1982. The record low was in 1904, when the petroleum industry in Oklahoma was just taking hold and 361 wells were completed, according to U.S. Geological Survey records.

In 1991, 2,206 wells were completed.

Of the 1992 completions, 628 were for oil, 491 were for gas and 559 were dry holes, a 66.7 percent success ratio, the lowest since 1972 when operators had only 59 percent.

SAN FRANCISCO

Hot Spots & Hidden Places

By Carolyn Fitz-Gerald

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a two-part Sunday series.

I hop another cable car and get off in Chinatown. I walk down Grant Avenue and cross over Columbus and Broadway with its glitzy bars to upper Grant Avenue.

I notice that Chinatown has invaded upper Grant Avenue which was once strictly Italian. There are Oriental cleaners and groceries and a florist called Hoo Wah among pizza parlors with wood-burning ovens and spaghetti houses with checkered tablecloths. I think that Basta Pasta is my favorite.

Even though the Chinese influence continues, the coffee houses are all Italian and the pervasive scent of garlic and the cappuccino that spices the air supersede any hint of soy sauce. There are terra cotta roofs and women in black dresses hanging the wash out of cupolas.

I ask an Italian man what is the best place to dine in North Beach. He tells me that the "hot spot" is Buca Giovanni at 800 Greenwich. "They raise their own rabbits," he whispers and I take time to call 776-7766 and make a reservation. I have to beg a little to get it. He adds that Caffe Roma is a good place for coffee and that Flor D'Italia served first-rate food.

I continue along Grant Avenue. There is a sign directing me to Peter Macciari metal sculptor and jewelry designer. I move along a little hallway to his shop at the back and admire his work which has a wit and difference that is all Macciari.

A place called Slips, hidden among the eclectic mosaic along Grant Street in San Francisco, features the finest in "chair couture," such as this "Mona Lisa" slip for a cafe chair.

THERE ARE many collectible stores and second-hand stores. My favorites are Old Vogue where a fedora catches my eye, and the Schlock Shop where I want everything, particularly the earrings and watches and a Yellow Cab driver's hat. Birds offers avant-garde women's clothing, colorful and very, very short.

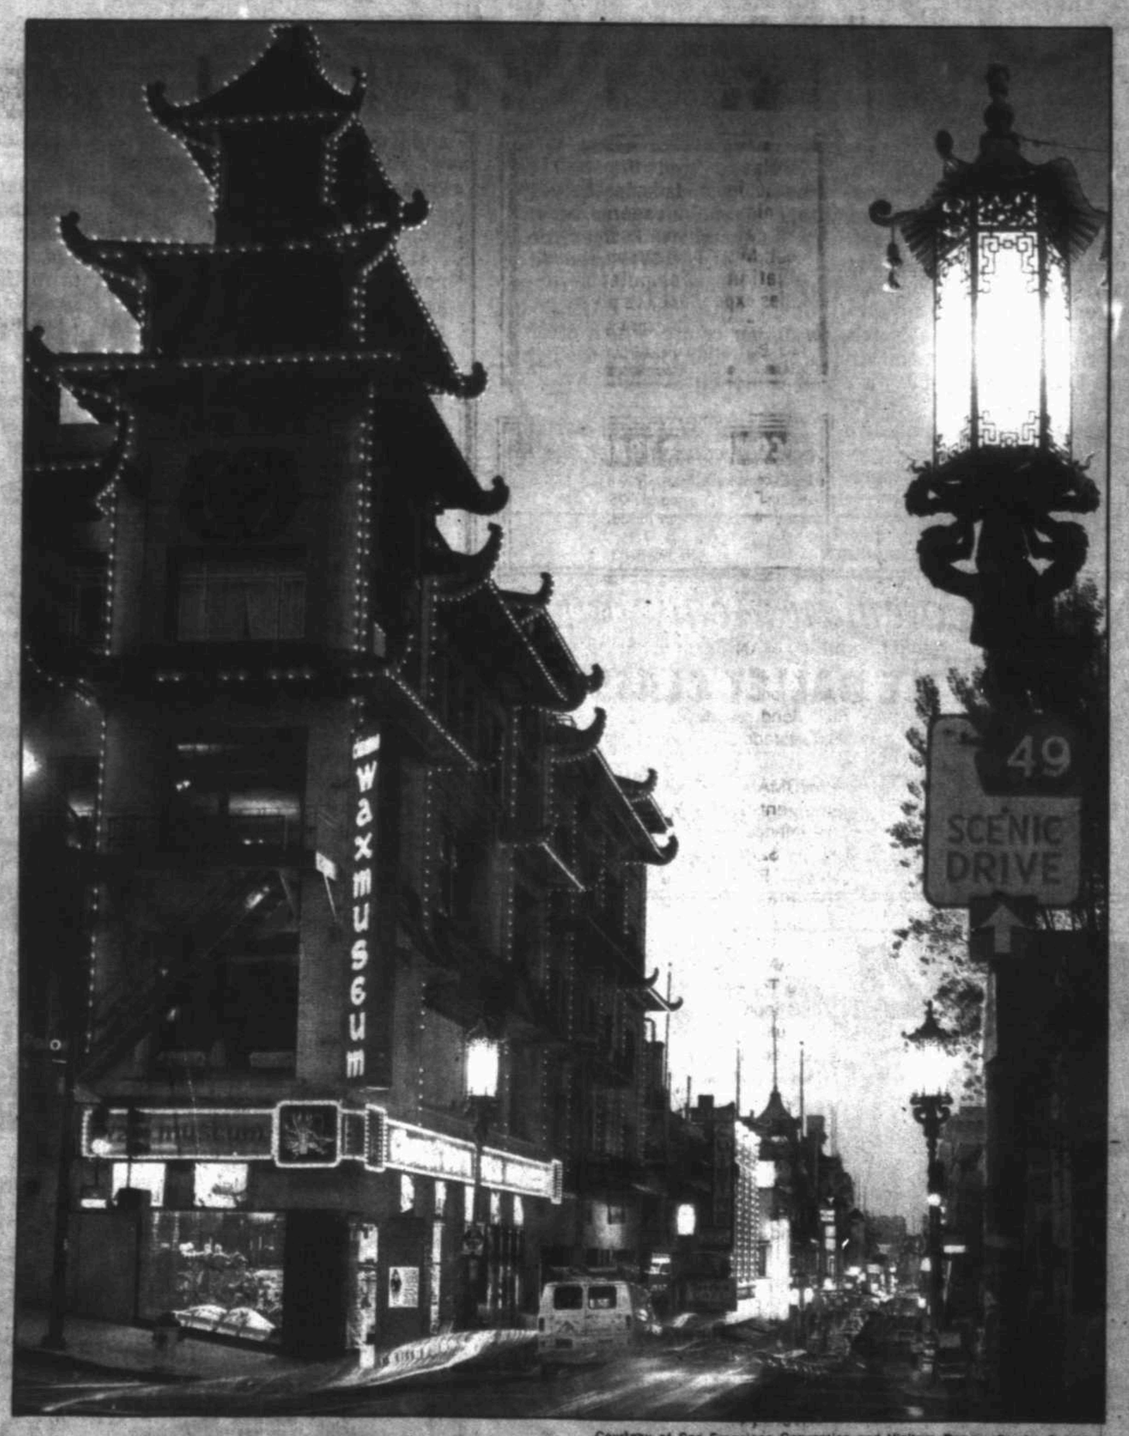

Farther along, there is an Italian-French bakery at Grant and Union where baguettes cost a mere 75 cents. I am surprised at the French influence here, but not nearly as surprised as I am by coming across Cafe Jackelein at 1454 Grant which boasts "a little bit of Paris in Little Italy." The cafe is open Wednesday through Sunday only. Jackelein's souffles are an alchemy of egg and air that defy description.

I move on to the real find of the day. Hidden among the eclectic mosaic of Grant Street at number 1543 there is a place called Slips.

I hear the hum of a sewing machine and enter to find a beautiful young girl working away. No tongue in cheek visible, she says that Slips offers "chair couture and ready to wear, complete clothing for chairs."

There is a display in the tiny shop of shirts, jackets and leggings for director's chairs, cafe

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Time management is subject of program

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

A Dennis the Menace cartoon in which Dennis states, "The best thing you can do is getting good at being you" set the tone for Midlander Marylyn Leonard's program for the Ladies Association of Ranchland Hills Country Club recently.

McKnight-Harrison

Owner of Woman Time Management, Mrs. Leonard encouraged her audience to use goal setting and daily planning to help their lives and homes run more smoothly and to give them more time to explore their capabilities, talents and love for others.

"Setting goals brings the future into the present," the speaker said. She further stated that the rewards of planning and writing down goals include higher self-esteem, more freedom and a better appreciation of life.

"One should make a list of 10 things each day and then number them by priority. In making the list, consider the following: Are you planning too many jobs in one day? Is there time for yourself? Are there tasks that can be delegated? Are there things others can do for themselves."

For the past 11 years, Mrs. Leonard has been teaching other women how to have more time for their homes, their families and themselves by organizing, prioritizing and goal setting in classes and through programs, such as the one presented for the Ladies Association.

Following the social hour, members and their guests enjoyed a luncheon of Baked Lasagna, Almost Caesar Salad and Chocolate Mousse.

Table centerpieces, which were later awarded as door prizes, were white baskets filled with assorted sweets and cosmetic items, tucked into colorful shredded tissue paper.

Among those spotted in attendance were Linda (Mrs. Paul) Johnson, Liz Robinson, Martha (Mrs. Jim) Rogers, Betty (Mrs. Wylie) Basham and Sharon (Mrs. Rene) Hoover.

HELEN AND LYLE EBERLY hosted a dual celebration recently at their home.

The party celebrated the December graduation of their son, John, from Texas Tech University's College of Architecture, and the engagement of their daughter, Karen, and Jay Pitzer, both of Fort Worth.

Karen is financial development director for the Northwest Texas Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation, and Jay is a senior engineer with General Dynamics. They are planning a May wedding.

A special guest at the party was Hazel Pride of Bakersfield, Calif., who was maid of honor in the Eberlys' wedding. Among the other guests, who included neighbors and a few longtime friends, were Frances and Bill Collins, Dede and Bob Plank, Cecelia and Bob Davis, Everett Bingham, Audrey Robbins and Becky Day.

JODY AND BOB SLAYDON honored their daughter, Cyd, with a graduation celebration recently at Hackberry Creek Country Club in Irving. Cyd graduated from Texas Wesleyan University in Fort Worth the evening of Dec. 18.

Attending the party were Cyd's sister and family, Susan and Mike Higgins and their three-year-old son, Will, of San Angelo and former Midlanders Wanda and Jim Watson of Fort Worth. Others attending, all from the Dallas-Fort Worth area, were Lon Lowenthal, Myrna and Sid Lowenthal, Lindsay Lowenthal, Lauren and Clay Gerard, Shelly Sill, David Garonzik, Nicki Nichols and Cyd's cousin, Mark Landrum.

Graduation day began with the traditional robing convocation, in which Cyd was honored to have her favorite professor, Dr. Benjamin Hale, robe her. A reception was held afterwards to honor the seniors.

The next day, a brunch at La Madelyn in Fort Worth honored Cyd and her family.

IT'S NOT EVERYONE who goes to Hawaii and is mistaken for a celebrity. But when Donna and Terry Potter were visiting the island of Oahu recently, Terry was thought to be the actor, John Cullum, who portrays Holling, the bartender, on the hit TV series, "Northern Exposure." Although he can't claim any kinship, he says it was a fun experience.

The Midlanders were guests of Terry's parents, Dot and Lou Potter of Austin, who were celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. The couples spent the entire two weeks in Oahu, and Terry declares they still did not find time to do everything on their agenda. His father, who served in the South Pacific during World War II, was particularly interested in showing them the historic sights, including the famed USS Arizona at Pearl Harbor and the Punch Bowl cemetery.

The foursome made their headquarters in Honolulu, a block off Waikiki Beach. In addition to enjoying the beaches, they toured the island extensively and were impressed by the lush scenery and the hospitable Hawaiian people, as well as intrigued by their culture.

They particularly enjoyed a visit to the Polynesian Cultural Center. Another highlight was a dinner cruise, which offered a spectacular view of the lights of Honolulu at night.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

SPOTS: Bay offers sightseeing, romance

chairs, all kinds of chairs.

I am taken by the "Mona Lisa" slip for a cafe chair which carries a price tag of $190. Her life-sized image beckons me from the back of the chair and her black skirt of fine netting suits her perfectly. I think even da Vinci would approve. I am also charmed by the "Lou Lou" slip made to look like trompe l'oeil and adorned with tassels and fringe. Both are regular stock designs but I am told that owner Sami Rosenzweig will develop a design just for me. I take the number: (415) 362-5652.

What if I had a whole dining room of Mona Lisa chairs? Would anyone eat? I think the designs are better as one-of-a-kind conversation pieces but the seamstress assures me that Slips often makes whole sets.

Reluctantly, I leave Mona Lisa behind. It is getting warm and I throw my jacket over my purse and proceed up Grant Avenue. A Chinese motherly type screams at me. "Yu chun de!' It sounds like a definite reprimand. She points to my jacket lying on the curb. She chastises me in Chinese and tells me to tie it to my purse. When I do not understand, she ties it on for me, smiles and bows. I thank her even though English seems inadequate to the occasion.

I decide that I could spend a whole week on Little Italy's Grant Avenue but the recently-repaired Bay Bridge beckons. I wonder if something akin to Grant Avenue from another culture and another time lies across the bay. I bid the Chinese mother good-bye and decide to investigate.

Fairyland lies across the Bay Bridge east of San Francisco. It is, of course, for children but there is one for adults too. It is called the Lake Merritt Hotel. This ornate old edifice with the Mediterranean facade is located on the shores of Lake Merritt just a block from downtown Oakland.

CHILDREN'S FAIRYLAND, set on the far side of the lake, closes at dusk but nighttime is when the romance and splendor of the restored 1927 Lake Merritt Hotel comes to life. To sit in the glassed-in Terrace Room and watch the necklace of lights adorn the perimeter of the lake is like being in a fairyland created just for guests of the refurbished grande dame of hotels in Oakland.

Built in 1927, the hotel was the "in" place for wedding receptions, tea dances and a favorite of the great jazz bands of the '20s.

Oaklander Randy Berger often heard the stories of the elegant old hotel where his father attended his high school Senior Prom and his uncle proposed to his aunt. Long before he was born, the all-glass Terrace Room, complete with a bandstand that reached out toward the water, was built. Randy saw the sparkle was heard the stories all of his childhood, but he was never inside.

By the time Randy was a young man, the old hotel was a thing of the past, an apartment hotel for retirees, but nonetheless a fixture in Oakland.

Like many Oaklanders, Randy was horrified when the old hotel was slated for destruction. Preservationists and some of the remaining residents set up a vehement protest that anyone would think of demolishing the Mediterranean-style relic with its exterior bas-relief and interior art deco. While others railed, Randy acted, and with silent partner Paul Lum, bought the hotel for $2.6 million.

With photographs in hand, Randy set out to restore the hotel to its former grandeur. A million dollars later, the lobby invites visitors to drop back in time when ceilings were high, double moldings were hand-carved and the pace of life afforded time to hold hands and look out over the lake and dream.

Pretend it is the 1920s opening instead of the 1990s opening: Enter to the sounds of a grand player piano offering golden sounds of times gone by and pause to listen in one of the love seats of crimson mohair, fringed all around. Pass through the creamy pearlized pewter wall coverings that are complemented by black lacquer, cobalt blue and emerald green. Stop at the writing desk to pen a note with one of Randy's real fountain pens that are his signature. Then move on to the Terrace Room for a breathtaking view of the lake.

WHILE THE newly-opened hotel has no restaurant, Chef Armando is accommodating. He will have a repast ready if you order it in advance. The multi-talented Armando also makes hors d'oeuvres for parties, designs wedding cakes and plays the piano in the lounge when he is not sending delectables out from the kitchen. He arranges a complimentary continental breakfast each day and a wine tasting each evening.

Pretend some more. Take the sturdy old elevator that jerks to a stop on the fifth floor. Follow the patterned burgundy, cream and deep blue carpet to one of the 51 suites. Here it is still 1927. The drapes are heavy and patterned with huge flowers that interlock. There is a water lily in a black vase and again, a mohair couch and a giant writing table. In the kitchen there is a pull-down ironing board and a well-stocked refrigerator. The hall boasts a telephone seat that flips out below the telephone inset. There is green and blue tile in the bathroom and a marble threshold.

Look out of the living room that overlooks the very modern jogging track around Lake Merritt. A paddle boat spirits visitors around the 3.2 mile expanse of water which offers Lakeside Park and Children's Fairyland on its shores. Explore the suite some more.

Step into the walk-in cedar-lined closets and inhale the fragrance. Read one of the brochures and be astonished to find that the cost is a moderate $99 for a standard suite and $119 for a deluxe suite. Discover that the suites are a place to stretch out and live in and, indeed, the Lake Merritt hotel encourages corporate guests to live there when they have business in the giant buildings only a block away. One couple is visiting grandchildren for six weeks. There are no honeymooners yet but surely there will be soon.

FOR A ROMANTIC weekend or just for sightseers, Oakland is a bountiful feast of museums, posh dining establishments and shopping. And people with children should be sure to visit Fairyland just across the lake where youngsters can visit and pet the Three Little Pigs, get lost in the Mad Hatter's Tunnel and ride the Jolly Trolly. Randy Berger notes that some Oaklanders say that this longtime children's delight is where Walt Disney conceived his idea of Disneyland.

Older children will enjoy a trip to the hands-on Lawrence Hall of Science at the University of California only 10 minutes away, or Marine World in Valejo only 30 minutes northeast of Oakland.

Jack London Village, Jack London Square and the Waterfront are teaming with things to do. Or visitors may sit and watch the boats come and go from one of the fine waterfront restaurants such as Scott's or Pescatore. A 30-minute ferry ride will let sightseers off at San Francisco. After the earthquake, for a while the ferry became the only mode of transportation between Oakland and San Francisco.

Up above Oakland, high in the hills, there are beautiful mansions and giant trees in Piedmont. And on Piedmont Avenue in Oakland the visitor will find a jumble of shops, movie houses, yogurt parlors, businesses and restaurants.

SANDWICHED BETWEEN a wine shop and an optometrist is Chef Paul's restaurant, one of Oakland's finest. Chef Paul was once the executive chef of the Viking cruise ship line and later a favorite of diners in San Francisco. When he decided to open his own dream restaurant, his choice was a small, intimate place in Oakland. Amid crisp white tablecloths, grey damask drapes and the most succulent food in any city, Chef Paul offers evening diners a Petit Menu for the small palate: field salad with heart of palm to which Chef Paul adds a slice of duck pate if he divines that it should be so. Add to that fresh lobster in whiskey sauce with asparagus buds and Kahlua ice cream.

Every course, including the main entree, is served on bread and butter plates and beautifully presented. There is a tasting menu for the adventurous: roast duck breast, lobster bisque, fresh seafood, rack of lamb and Romanoff-/Picasso Dessert, which is the chef's own creation with chocolate wings.

After a stroll along Piedmont Avenue, it is time to go home to the Lake Merritt Hotel. I sit down on the overstuffed couch and watch the necklace of lights around the lake some more, but they outlast me. The next morning I am told that they are alight all night.

I see bicycles and joggers taking an early morning turn around the lake. It requires only an hour to walk all the way around the lake, but I do not have an hour. I make a note of the hotel's telephone number: 1-800-933-HOTEL or (415) 832-2300. I want to bring my granddaughter back to Children's Fairyland and stay a bit longer at the grande old dame of Oakland hotels. I like her style. There is posh 1920s decor and there is accurate 1920s decor. The Lake Merritt Hotel is accurate to the last detail.

It is time for business at the Kaiser Center. A gentleman on the high steps in front of the hotel awaits the Lake Merritt Hotel's own limousine. It pulls up. Of course, it is a vintage Austin Princess. I wonder if it belonged to Randy Berger's uncle.

DEAR ABBY

'You know' drives some people crazy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Something that has been bothering me for years, and is getting progressively worse, is the use of "you know" in everyday conversation.

Van Buren

It doesn't really mean anything; it's not a serious question requiring an answer. It's what journalists call "a filler" — a couple of words to fill in what would otherwise be an embarrassing silence while you're trying to think of something else to say. I've enclosed a poem titled "You Know," which I think says it all. — PAUL L. HENDERSON, SPRING VALLEY LAKE, CALIF.

DEAR MR. HENDERSON: And, you know, I think it's worth sharing:

Of all the words that we know today,
The ones overused which get in the way of intelligent talk when conversing with friends are the words 'you know' used again and again.

It bothers me so to have them used over and over since they are really abused, and lend no thought and are hard to follow,
in a conversation that becomes so hollow.

It's difficult to know just what they mean,
They are used so much — like coming out of a machine,
They have no meaning because I really don't know just what they mean when they say — YOU KNOW."

DEAR ABBY: Re "Can't Cope Anymore," who is dreading the thought of her surly, negative stepson coming to live with her while he attends college.

My situation was identical. With some trial and error, this is what I learned to do:

I stopped bending over backward trying to please him. I treated him as though he were my son. I wrote thoughtful little notes regularly and left them in his bedroom, because communication was a problem for him. I didn't make his father responsible for his son's relationship with me. I didn't try to "outmom" his mother.

His father and I set clear guidelines concerning laundry, car, his room and responsibilities, and we stuck to them. I didn't coddle him.

Was it difficult for me? It was the hardest thing I've ever done. Was it worth it? You bet!

Today, I have a son. Being brought together from a mutual love of the same person (his dad), we have found a common ground upon which to build a relationship of our own, which took more time than one summer vacation. It was also a valuable growing experience for me. — GRATEFUL IN FLORIDA

DEAR GRATEFUL: Congratulations; you have achieved one of the most difficult feats in family relations: being accepted and genuinely liked by a teen-aged stepchild.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a dispute we're having: Was the following a genuine invitation — or was it a "back door" invitation?

"We're having Christmas Eve at my house; you're welcome to come if you want to." The recipient of that invitation felt that the invite meant: "Come if you want to, but use the back door."

We've agreed that the invitation would have been much nicer had the host said, "Please come; we'd love to have you. If you don't come, you will be missed." — CURIOUS IN SIOUX CITY, IOWA

DEAR CURIOUS: Although the invitation was not as graciously put as it might have been, it was still an invitation. It's just a cut above, "If you're not doing anything, join us."

ANNIVERSARIES

Couple celebrates 50 years together

Mr. and Mrs. Dillard J. Phillips of Midland were guests of honor at a 50th wedding anniversary reception Saturday at Golf Course Road Church of Christ. Hosts were the couple's children and grandchildren.

Phillips and the former Fay Foster were married Jan. 15, 1943, in Tye. They have three children — Linda Craig of Albuquerque, N.M.; Curtis Phillips of Carrollton; and Patti Perkins of Lubbock — as well as 10 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Phillips served in the U.S. Army, 915 Field Artillery Battalion, 45th Division, from March 1942 until October 1945. He served in the European Theater of Operations and participated in the D-Day Operation.

The couple lived in Gladewater 1945-52; Midland 1952-69; and Monahans 1969-87 before moving back to Midland in 1987. Phillips was mechanic and shop foremen with a Ford dealer from 1946-52; and then was employed with Mobil Oil for 30 years before he retired in 1982. Mrs. Phillips was employed with First State Bank in Monahans; was school tax assessor/collector in Monahans; and is currently employed with Calame, Linebarger, Graham and Pena in Odessa.

Mr. and Mrs. Dillard J. Phillips

They are members of Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Sloans observe golden anniversary

Clarence and Jerry (Geraldine) Sloan of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception Saturday in the parlor of First Christian Church. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Ron Pettie of Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Sloan of Odessa, and Paul and Paige Pettie.

Sloan and the former Geraldine Coplen were married Jan. 13, 1943, in Abilene. They moved to Midland in 1952 to open Sloan-Bagwell Furniture Store. Sloan retired in 1980.

They are active in First Christian Church, where Sloan is an Elder. Mrs. Sloan is an active member of the Hospital Auxiliary, a charter member of Trinity Tower Auxiliary, En Amie Book Review Club and Church Women United Bible Study. Both are active in Meals on Wheels.

Clarence and Geraldine Sloan

Reids celebrate 50th anniversary

Alva and Ina Reid of Midland were honored at a "come and go" reception Saturday at Second Baptist Church, in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary. Hosts were the couple's children and their families: David Reid and family of Shreveport, La.; Roy R. Reid and family of Fort Worth; and Nancy Jamison and family, and Brenda Sherinian and family, both of Copperas Cove.

The couple were married Dec. 31, 1942, in Washington state where Reid was serving in the U.S. Army.

They have lived in Midland since 1962, when Reid was transferred from Kansas by Sohio Petroleum Co. He is now retired from Sohio, and Mrs. Reid is retired from Midland Independent School District cafeterias. They are members of Second Baptist Church.

Attending the meeting were Joann Gardner, Barbara Hill, Caroline Holmes, Martha McNair and Melva Sizemore. After the meeting, Beta Delta chapter served refreshments.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Take care of winter weeds now

By Deborah A. Benge

Even though we've not had much precipitation this fall and winter, we still have pesky winter weeds becoming evident in our lawns.

Benge

Winter weeds — which are referred to as cool-season annuals — germinate from seed in the fall of the year. Sometimes it's not until this time of year or a little later that they become apparent, but they're out there.

Some of the common winter annuals you might be seeing in lawns, gardens or orchids include rescuegrass, henbit, London rocket mustard, prickley lettuce and a few others.

If you have a warm-season lawn, like bermuda, St. Augustine or buffalo, they do go dormant when the temperatures are low and stay low. These lawns will look like yellow straw while the winter weeds mentioned above will be a bright green, there's no mistaking the contrast between the warm- and cool-season plants.

One of the really aggravating weeds is rescuegrass, it doesn't bother many home gardeners ... until about the first of summer when it begins to die, creating large weakened or dead areas in the lawn. At that time, it becomes clear that not controlling this weed pest was a mistake and can weaken your lawn.

During the month of January is a good time to control many of these weeds with a post emergent herbicide. Post emergent means the herbicide is applied after the plant has germinated and is growing. One herbicide in particular that can be sprayed over the top of your dormant, warm-season lawn without harming it, but yet killing the winter weeds is glyphosate.

Of course, this method applies to warm-season lawns only. Cool-season lawns such as tall fescue, creeping red fescue, perennial ryefrass, or lawns overseeded with annual ryegrass should not be sprayed.

If you have a serious winter weed problem, one that can't be controlled by hand pulling or other means, you may want to control them with a broadcast spray of glyphosate herbicide. Before actually spraying your lawn, there are several factors to consider:

1) Your warm-season lawn must be truly dormant. Spraying during January, following several days of cold weather is the safe thing to do. Take a close look at your grass ... down past the leaves to the stolons and crown of the grass. Are they green? Avoid spraying during warm spells, they can become active enough to take up the herbicide.

2) Glyphosate herbicide is a non-selective herbicide, that means it will translocate (move) into the green leaves or young green trunks of all plants, so take care not allow it to drift onto desirable landscape plants.

3) Don't worry about root uptake. Glyphosate is not active in the soil, so it can't be taken up by trees, shrubs or weeds, through the roots.

4) Glyphosate is packaged by several different companies. What you'll want to pay attention to is the percent of glyphosate listed under the active ingredients of the label to get your money's worth. And carefully read and follow the use and directions label. Add a surfactant (spreader-/sticker) for better control.

5) Spray on a calm day to avoid drift of herbicides onto desirable plants. Spray foliage until wet.

6) Evidence of weeds dying will be slow because of cold winter temperatures, be patient. Within about two weeks you should see some yellowing of leaves. A second application at this time may be necessary for better results.

This herbicide can be applied as a spot treatment or it can be wicked on with a chemical wick applicator.

Don't let winter weeds get the upper hand, leaving you with an unnecessary mess this summer. Control winter weeds in your dormant lawn by evaluating your weed problem realistically, use a non-selective herbicide if needed, follow herbicide label directions, take steps to protect evergreen desirables and make sure your warm-season lawn is truly dormant before spraying during the true dormancy of your warm-season lawn.

If you work in turfgrass, landscapes, grounds keeping or lawn maintenance ... mark your calendar for Jan. 27 for the Permian Basin Turfgrass Conference to be in Odessa. This one-day educational conference is geared for individuals involved in the care and maintenance of turf and landscaped areas.

If you hold pesticide license with TDA or SPCB you will be able to obtain 3 CEUs upon completing the conference.

Call 687-1351 or 335-3071 for more information or preregistration for this conference.

AT WIT'S END

A kiss is no longer just a kiss to most

By Erma Bombeck

Kissing on television and in the movies has become as exciting as watching someone wolf down a late lunch.

Couples work so hard at something that should be relaxed and pleasurable. Body parts that I cannot identify flip across the screen and masses of hair literally cover the bed.

Bombeck

The problem is that lovemaking was never meant to be a spectator sport. I feel like I'm watching an athletic event and it gives me lounge chair privileges. I am permitted to criticize and offer advice.

When one of their heads hangs over the bed, I yell at the screen, "Support your back!" And I can't tell you how nervous I get when a couple impetuously decides to make love on a desk. Who wants to go through life with an imprint of a stapler in her back?

What really makes me crazy is when I see a woman who has put on her lipstick with a trowel. A man approaches her with fish lips that explore every part of her face. THE LIPSTICK NEVER SMEARS. I often wondered how they did that until an actress on a soap explained that they put tons of powder over their lipstick to keep the man from looking like he just crashed through a windshield.

I've seen so much lovemaking on the screen that I don't believe any of it is real anymore. No one in her right mind would go to bed wearing full makeup.

I saw a western the other night in which the hero had been left to die on the desert. His beard was long, his clothes dusty, he hadn't brushed or flossed, and had been without food or drink for three days. The heroine jumped from her horse, ran over and kissed him on the mouth. Puleeese. When beef jerky-breath comes in, love goes right out the window.

Kissing used to be reserved for rather special occasions like weddings or when you were on your way to a war.

Now we've reached the talk show stage where you buss everyone in your path. You kiss the security man when you enter the building, kiss the man who presses your clothes, plant one on the cheek of the makeup artist, kiss the host backstage, kiss everyone in the green room (including the censor), kiss the host again when you are introduced and once more when you take your leave.

I had my teeth cleaned last week and kissed my dental technician. I don't know why I did that. It means nothing to me.

American in London

Ex-Odessan teaches at Royal College of Music

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

After 20 years of living in London, violinist Dona Lee Croft still calls West Texas home.

"The minute I step off the plane, I know I'm home," she said during an interview several hours after her arrival from London. "It doesn't matter how many years I have been gone."

A winner in the first annual National Young Artist Competition while in college at The University of Texas at Austin, Ms. Croft was drawn to England in 1973 by her desire to study with Nathan Milstein and to have him coach her for the six solo performing dates she had accepted in Europe.

"He was the last living pupil of Leopold Auer, the most famous Russian violin teacher of the turn of the century," said Ms. Croft, who is performing this week as guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony. She will also be a judge in the 1993 National Young Artist Competition being held at Midland College Jan. 29 and 30.

"He (Auer) trained the great violinists of the turn of the century including Jascha Heifetz, Benno Rabinof, Mischa Elman and Milstein. They changed the whole standard of violin playing."

At the time, Ms. Croft, who had completed her bachelor's and master's degrees in music at UT before earning several degrees in Europe, was teaching at Texas Tech University. She left the security of that position for the insecurity of a career as a soloist and the opportunity to study with Milstein. Some months later she found herself teaching in a polytechnic school in London.

"IT WAS indispensable. I had to have a work permit to stay there, and no one else wanted the job," she said.

"I taught in the gym master's office. The basketball court was on the left side of his office and the showers were on the right. We could hear both."

After finally achieving resident status in England, Ms. Croft was offered a position in the junior department of the Royal College of Music, which is under the patronage of the royal family and has the Queen Mother as its president.

"It was definitely a step up," said Ms. Croft, who is the daughter of Odessan Dorothy Croft and the late Leland Croft. "The facilities were drastically different. The Royal College of Music is a five-story, red brick Victorian building that has two huge gabled towers on either side of the gold-outlined, frosted glass canopy which hangs over the entrance steps.

"It's a very, very dignified building with Italian marble floors, valuable statues and paintings of composers, many of whom have studied at the college. The building also houses one of the finest museums of ancient musical instruments in the world. Certainly better than the gym master's office."

Six years ago, Ms. Croft was made a professor at the Royal College of Music. She is the only professor on staff who is an American. Then, in November 1991, she was offered an honorary membership in the Royal College of Music.

"When I got the letter from the director, I thought it was a reprimand from the main office because my reports were late. I didn't open the letter for three days."

WHEN SHE did, she was flabbergasted.

She is the first Texan to receive this honor, which has been conferred on only five other Americans.

Ms. Croft, who is still a U.S. citizen, finds London suits her needs.

"Although there's so much I miss about the States, I'm in a city with five major orchestras — even New York doesn't have that — two opera companies, two ballet companies and several chamber orchestras. Eventually, everybody in the world comes to London to solo or perform recitals. The first year I went there, I went to at least three concerts a week. I was so thrilled to hear these people in person rather than on recording."

In 1992, Ms. Croft was made a professor of violin in the Welsh College of Music and Drama at Cardiff.

"I never thought I would go into teaching and enjoy it," said the Odessa High School graduate. "And I love it."

At first, she had taught to supplement her solo career.

"IT'S TERRIBLY hard for any musician to make a living unless you are one of the world-famous musicians. There aren't that many orchestras in the world to support musicians, so most do have to teach. Also, it's awfully important to do it because you are passing on to the next generation what you have learned."

Early in her solo career, Ms. Croft experienced a tragedy destined to alter her career plans. After completing the solo concerts that first brought her to England, she began experiencing muscular problems in her left shoulder and hand. The pain became so great she could not perform for longer than 10 minutes. A friend suggested she contact Bela Katona, a Hungarian professor living in London.

"I shall be forever grateful to him. He taught me how to drop the left fingers onto the violin and not countergrip with the thumb and how to let the violin float on my shoulder. He took me back to the very beginning — how to hold the violin and how to hold the bow — and we did open strings and boring, boring exercises musically.

"Mentally, they were very interesting, and I could tell they were sorting out my problem."

The two worked on "nothing but technique" for five years.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale will present its third concert of the Classical Series at 8 p.m., Tuesday at Lee High School and at 8 p.m. Thursday at Bonham Jr. High School, Odessa.

The concert, under the direction of Don Th. Jaeger, includes Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor, featuring former Odessan Dona Lee Croft, and Honegger's "King David," featuring Suzanne Galer, Priscilla Peebles, Joe Duerkson and Tom Laney.

Other former West Texans and former MOS members coming back to play with the symphony are Denise Couch and Dwight Pounds. Ms. Couch, a graduate of Permian High School, is concertmaster of the Houston Ballet Orchestra. Pounds, a former vice president of the American Viola Society, is viola professor at the University of Kentucky.

For tickets or more information please call the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale at 563-0921.

In addition, the 1993 National Young Artist Competition, sponsored by MOSC Inc., will be held this year at Midland College Jan. 29 and 30.

The finals, which are free and open to the public, will be at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 30. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

Each of the three possible performing winners will receive the Lara Hoggard Performance Medallion, $2,500 and the opportunity to perform with the MOS Feb. 4 and 5.

Jurors include:

- Dona Lee Croft, concert violinist and member of the faculty of the Royal College of Music, London;
- Constance Channon-Douglas, Canadian concert pianist and teacher, graduate of the Juilliard School of Music and the Accademia di Santa Cecilia, Rome;
- Penelope Jensen, soprano soloist, graduate of Pomona College, Harvard University and the Longy School of Music, Cambridge, Mass., and member of the faculty of Duke University and the Oberlin Baroque Performance Institute;
- Moreland Kortkamp Roller, concert pianist, member of the Original Philharmonic Piano Quartet and former faculty member of the Juilliard School of Music and the University of Houston;
- Michael Udow, professor of music and percussion, School of Music, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich., and principal percussionist, Santa Fe Opera.

Cash awards totaling $10,000 will be distributed among finalists and performing winners.

Categories include piano, strings, winds and percussion and voice.

Division One is for student musicians through age 18 who are not currently or have never been enrolled in a college, university or conservatory.

Division Two is for student musicians registered in a college, university or conservatory at the time of the competition.

Instrumental contestants must be 25 or under Jan. 30 of this year. Voice contestants must be 29 or younger Jan. 30 of this year.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Wynonna to perform

Wyonna Judd is to at Midland College's Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. Feb. 12.

The concert, which will feature Miss Judd performing selections from her multi-million selling album, is part of her 1993 World Tour. The self-titled MCA release has produced three No. 1 hits and has sold more than two million copies. Her latest single, "My Strongest Weakness," is currently climbing the charts.

Appearing with Miss Judd will be MCA recording artists, McBride & The Ride. On the heels of their recent hit, "Going Out of My Mind," McBride & The Ride continues record success with another single release, "Just One Night."

Tickets, priced at $20, may be purchased at Chaparral Center.

■ George Jones to sing

ODESSA — George Jones, John Anderson and Tracy Lawrence are set to perform at the Red Man Country Concert Series show at 8 p.m. Feb. 13 at Ector County Coliseum.

The concert is part of a 30 plus city tour staged under the banner of the Red Man Country Concert Series.

As with previous Red Man Tours, an effort has been made to keep ticket prices affordable. Ticket prices range from $12.50 to $18.50. A $3 discount coupon is available at Kent Kwik Convenience Stores and are redeemable with the purchase of a ticket at the coliseum box office only.

■ Arts, crafts fair set

ODESSA — An arts and crafts fair and demonstration is scheduled at Odessa College on Jan. 23.

The fair, sponsored by OC's Continuing Education Division, will be held from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Community Room on the second floor of the Student Union Building. Those attending will be allowed to try their hand at any of the crafts.

Among those crafts being demonstrated will be porcelain dolls, weaving, quilting, stained glass, decorator bows, flower arranging, framing and matting, gift baskets, oil painting, watercolors, calligraphy and serger sewing. All are classes offered by Continuing Education.

Refreshments prepared by students in OC's culinary arts classes will be served to those attending the fair.

■ Babbitt works showing

Midland Fine Arts Center and Gallery, 921 W. Wadley Ave., is presenting the work of colorist Salli Babbitt of Houston in her first Midland one-woman show.

Ms. Babbitt's recent exhibitions have been with the Art League of Houston, Hounston Women's Caucus for Art, Visual Arts Alliance and Small Works Exhibit Art League of Houston.

Her gallery affiliations include Main Gallery of Houston and Carlton Gallery of San Antonio.

The Midland showing is entitled "For Our Children" and remains here through Feb. 7.

■ MISD choirs to sing

The Midland Independent School District's Choral Festival will be held at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 28 at Chaparral Center.

The Elementary Honor Choir, directed by Kay Brahaney and Paula Edwards, will be the featured group of the evening. Other performing groups will include intermediate grade school students from each elementary, a secondary school girls ensemble, a secondary school boys ensemble and choirs from both senior high schools.

■ MCT seeks scripts

Midland Community Theatre is looking for two original scripts — one for the Summer Mummers and the other for the 1993 McLaren Comedy Playwriting Competition.

Deadline for entering either contest in Jan. 31.

The Summer Mummers script needs to be a melodrama in three acts, with a running time of 45 to 50 minutes. Characters include a hero, a heroine, a villain, a vamp and assorted "sidekicks."

The selected script will be staged at the Yucca Theatre from late June through Labor Day weekend.

Scripts for the McLaren Comedy Playwriting Competition have no restrictions regarding length, number of characters or setting. The play needs to be unproduced; previous "readings" are not counted as productions. The winning script will be presented in a "Reader's Theatre" format at Midland Community Theatre in July or August.

Scripts for both competitions are to be typed and bound, or in a folder, and submitted to Midland Community Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley, Midland, 79705.

"Summer Mummers" or "McLaren" must be marked on the envelope. Scripts will not be returned unless accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The exhibition, curated by Jane Dillard and sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas C. Taylor, is a collection of miniatures — houses, room boxes, shops and other small creations belonging to Midland and Odessa area miniature enthusiasts.

George Carlin seems to be angrier than ever

By Scott Williams
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Just because George Carlin is returning as sweet, elfin Mr. Conductor for 25 more episodes of PBS' "Shining Time Station," don't for a second believe that he is mellowing.

If anything, the actor-comedian is angrier than ever.

Carlin's next album, "Jammin' in New York," burns white-hot with some of the most acid, bleak, contemptuous comedy of his career.

He spits out savage views about the human race — and the Gulf War, commerce, religion and government — and they are hilarious.

"People are terrific if left alone," Carlin said. "But when they begin to clump — or clot, as I like to say — when they begin to clot, even in groups of two, people change."

"It's true if you join a corporation, join the Marines, become a policeman, get on a baseball team — anything you join — you surrender part of yourself for the sake of the group and the group mind," he said.

Carlin credits "Jammin' in New York," which was adapted for an HBO comedy special, with pushing him to a creative breakthrough, an artistic "second wind."

"I have finally discovered the secret to being critical of man's follies," he said, "and the secret for me is called . . . 'Give Up on It All.' "

That realization, he said, has given him "a new-found freedom to not be bound by any sort of propriety or niceties or these liberal precepts of behavor."

Some comedians, Carlin said, are saying by implication that if just a few things changed, everything would be all right.

"I know better," he said. "It's always going to be rigged against ordinary people. And people will always be suffering except for the small moments. So I have abandoned all hope.

"I've pulled out to somewhere like the Van Allen Belt or the Oort Cloud and I observe the whole thing, really detached."

Carlin got great notices for his work in Barbra Streisand's film "The Prince of Tides," but he doesn't think Hollywood is beckoning.

"I still have the same roadblock that I had earlier," he said. "They see me as kind of an interesting, marquee bit player. They don't want to give me any money, and I cannot keep doing small parts or I send the wrong signal."

His relationship with cable TV's HBO continues to flourish, as do his biennial comedy specials for the premium network, and might lead to more on-screen time in HBO's feature film division.

CROFT: Violinist says she loves teaching cause I really did feel shattered," Ms. Croft said.

"The next crisis after that was being able to play musically again after so many years of nothing but technique."

When this malady struck her, Ms. Croft thought she was the "only one in the world who suffered from this." She has since discovered she was wrong.

"There are many violinists who have suffered from the same muscular pain. It's an extremely difficult and totally unnatural instrument to play."

The experience broadened her teaching skills.

"I don't want anyone else to go through what I went through," Ms. Croft said. "When I see students playing with severe tension, I try to teach them how to play in a more flexible way because often the tension can lead to tendonitis. There's no way they can understand what I am talking about, but I would hate to see their careers grind to a halt because I as a teacher did not train them properly and they were under my care."

Ms. Croft, who began taking violin lessons from her mother when she was 5, is looking forward to serving as a juror in the 1993 NYAC.

"There is a great responsibility that goes with judging," she said. "You hope you have the knowledge to make the best decision and the wise decision. There always have to be those who do not win, and you hope you can explain why this particular time they didn't win so they aren't discouraged, but instead want to try again."

Despite the difficulties she has faced in performing, Ms. Croft also is excited about performing with the MOS.

"I feel it is a great privilege to come back and solo. I have so many memories that are connected with the symphony," she said.

As a youth she performed first with the Odessa Symphony, which her mother — a violinist with the Houston Symphony before moving to Odessa — helped start. Then she performed with the Midland Symphony and served as soloist for the combined symphonies, founded by conductor by Lara Hoggard.

For this week's performances, Ms. Croft will perform Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor.

"The Mendelssohn is a concerto I love and fear — the perfect example of a romantic classic concerto."

Ms. Croft thrives on challenge and feels her talents flourish when she is surrounded by great music performed by outstanding players.

"You shouldn't be the same after you have heard a really great performance," she said. "You go away and you feel so blessed for having heard such a performance. Then you go home and you pick up your own violin and it's light-years away from what you just heard. It's like the donkey with the carrot in front of it. You're always walking forward stretching yourself."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JANUARY 17, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You can look forward to fewer hassles and more harmony at both work and home. Concentrate on forging an important new alliance in March. Resist the temptation to ignore or rationalize a health concern in June. Regular medical checkups are essential. Summer could find you seeking different employment. Let your friends and neighbors know what you hope to find. Behind-the-scenes financial dealings are favored in November. Loved ones draw nearer to you during the holidays.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor James Earl Jones, actress Betty White, puppeteer Shari Lewis, patriot Benjamin Franklin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your ideas are much more than wild suppositions. Follow up with action; monetary rewards may result. Your mate or partner is a source of strong support.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Meetings with friends and group activities enjoy highly favorable influences today. Closely guarded secrets are revealed. Be an open book — it invites trust!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel could cause undue expense now. Try to stick close to home and avoid making major decisions. Becoming a better listener will improve your rapport with a teenager.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spend more time with the ones you love this week. A journey may not be worth your while. Step out and shine this evening. Avoid engaging in shop talk at social events.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your festive attitude rubs off on other people today. Put out the welcome mat for friends and neighbors. A potluck supper is a simple way to share the cooking chores and expense.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Too much merrymaking last night or a temporary money pinch could get your day off to a slow start. Observe all traffic rules. Romance could hold a delightful surprise!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Renewed energy and enthusiasm make you a powerful force to be reckoned with now. Keep an open mind when dealing with new people and innovative ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Despite a promising morning, winter vacation plans or scholastic pursuits could be a bit nettlesome today. Neutralize an emotional confrontation with good humor and common sense.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Visiting friends or relatives will make this a happy and informative day. Do not allow a convivial mood to overrule your financial judgment, however.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although this is an excellent time for shopping, you might do better if a friend does not tag along. Try a few unfamiliar places if you want to make really interesting buys.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your social life becomes more interesting, perhaps because someone from a distance enters the picture. A relationship may not be as platonic as anticipated. Go slow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on confidential matters and private problems. Concentrating on a neglected area will improve a parent-child relationship or alleviate a health concern.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

"What is the cheapest trick you've ever seen that was not due to a misplay by someone?" asks a reader. That reminded us of this hand from a rubber bridge game some years ago.

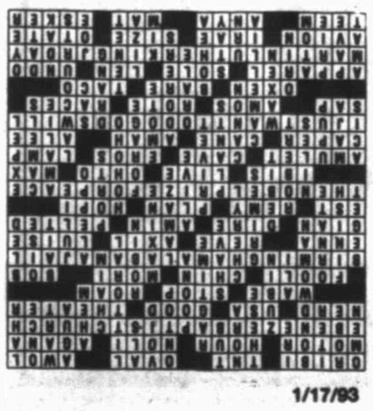

North's reverse bid of two spades created a game force. Thus, North could afford to rebid only three diamonds next to leave maximum room for exploration. With a minium opening and poor trump suit, South showed no interest and the auction subsided in the no man's land of five of a minor with nine tricks on top at three no trump.

West led the queen of clubs to East's ace and a club was returned to declarer's king. To the third trick declarer led the deuce of trumps, West followed with the three and dummy's four was played. East showed out and the first round of diamonds had been won by the four!

No, declarer was not peeping. Having already lost one trick, the contract was safe as long as declarer lost no more than one trump trick. The defenders could come to two diamond tricks only if the suit broke 4-0. If East held all the trumps, there was nothing declarer could do to avoid defeat. Declarer simply took a safety play against a trump stack in the West hand. If East had produced a trump, the ace and king would have picked up the outstanding trumps and declarer could claim the rest.

What if West had inserted a diamond honor on the first lead? Declarer would have won and, when East failed to follow, come back to hand to lead a second trump, finessing if West did not put up another honor. The pretty safety play limits the defenders to one trump trick no matter how West defends.

Houston is to soon have 'biggest honor of all'

By Robert Macy
Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — She owns just about every honor a singer could covet, but Whitney Houston says the best is yet to come.

Houston

This year she'll add the title of "Mom," and the pop music megastar says it's an honor without equal. "There is no comparison," she says, patting her abdomen, a smile lighting up her face.

"It is just the biggest honor of all — to be pregnant, to be waiting for your child to come. It's an amazing thing. It's like no other feeling of joy in the world that I can compare."

Houston, 28, talked of pending parenthood during a recent interview at the Desert Inn Hotel, where she drew turnaway crowds during a recent three-night engagement.

It was her first appearance at a hotel-casino. But she says she may be working more small venues as opposed to arenas in the months leading up to the birth of her first child.

Now six months pregnant, she' slowing down a bit. It didn't show in her high-energy, 75-minute performance at the Strip resort.

"I like playing the small venues," she said, propping an elbow on a table in her spacious suite. "I played the small clubs before when I first started out with my mom (singer Cissy Houston) and they were the best of times for me.

"I LOVE the feeling and the intimacy with the people. The feeling that takes half an hour to generate through an arena takes 10 minutes in an intimate atmosphere. I remember once loving that feeling very much."

She says she plans to scale back her work late in her seventh month and "will probably not do anything" in her final month.

But she admits inactivity isn't her forte.

"I'm the type of person — I can't just sit around, I like to keep busy. I'm just pregnant; I'm not an invalid."

Houston is the only artist to achieve seven consecutive No. 1 hits, surpassing the Beatles. Her three albums have reached multi-platinum status. She went from an unknown teen-ager singing in her mother's church choir in her hometown of Newark, N.J., to music stardom with hits such as "The Greatest Love of All," "Didn't We Almost Have It All?" and "Saving All My Love for You."

She's won two Grammys, 12 American Music Awards, three People's Choice citations, a pair of Emmys and an American Black Achievement Award — to name a few.

And she has ventured onto new professional turf with her first movie, "The Bodyguard," opposite Kevin Costner.

SHE PLAYS a singer-actress being stalked by a killer, with Costner hired as her bodyguard despite her objections. Their relationship evolves from confrontational to romantic, but Houston won't tell the outcome.

"You'll just have to go see the show," she says.

The switch from singing to movies was a "great thrill but very hard work, very confining work," she says.

"It's a very slow-moving process. For me it was a real culture shock, coming from music and being able to move fast, move at your own pace. If you want, you can have a record out in a week. Films take discipline, a deep-rooted discipline."

She received many scripts before "Bodyguard," but none to her liking.

"None of them seemed to hit me. Then I saw this one, and I knew it was special. I was afraid. It was like, 'My God, can I handle this? This might be too much, Whitney. Don't bite off more than you can chew. Don't do this to yourself.'

"But there was the challenge, along with Kevin's encouragement. He kept telling me, 'You can do it. You can do it.'

"It is a major role for a black entertainer, for a black female," she said.

THE SUBJECT matter — someone stalking a star — was chillingly realistic for Houston, as it is for many celebrities.

"I've dealt with it before," she said. "I've been threatened. People love you to death, if you know what I mean. The word fan comes from the word fanatic."

Houston says she may have a sonogram to learn the sex of her baby, although she likes the suspense of not knowing.

Her husband, singer-songwriter Bobby Brown, is hoping for a girl, she says, while she would like a boy. "So I think it will be a girl, because that's what he wants," she said with a laugh.

As a youngster she wanted to be a teacher or a veterinarian.

"I was always dragging stray animals home. I had this thing for animals. I still do."

The close-knit family that Houston knew growing up remains that way today. In addition to her mother's role in her career, her father, John, is head of her management company, brother Michael is her road manager and brother Gary provides backup vocals. Her career also was influenced by cousin Dionne Warwick and family friend Aretha Franklin.

Children share a special niche in Houston's life. She's formed the Whitney Houston Foundation for Children, Inc., headed by her mother. The organization is dedicated to promoting a positive self-image for children by providing opportunities for them to learn and express themselves in safe, supportive environments.

"IF ANYBODY doesn't know a child is a miracle, they're not living on this planet," she says.

She makes it a point while on tour to visit children's homes and terminally ill youngsters — one of her toughest challenges "because it touches me so deeply."

Having won it all, and with her first child on the way, Houston says she has another, very special dream.

"I would like to see this nation that we live in called America the beautiful take more interest in our children: in their health; in their education; in their care. When I was growing up, people at least still cared about each other. Their values and morals were more intact. We have to get back to basics. I think we're losing a lot of young people very fast," she said.

"I see things getting worse — drug abuse, crime, the assaults we make on each other. And it really comes down on you when you're about to bring a life into this world. It really starts to beat you over the head.

"I want my child to grow up in a healthy world, and right now it's not looking very healthy."

Actor doesn't trade on Goldwyn name to get roles

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Tony Goldwyn is carrying on a hallowed Hollywood name. But unlike his grandfather and father, he's doing it as an actor.

His latest role cast him with Jim Belushi and Lorraine Bracco in the new murder mystery, "Traces of Red."

"I had seen the script because my wife (Jane Musky) was hired as production designer," he said. "I thought it was an interesting part, and she said, 'Go for it!' My agent said 'No way.' "

After months of trying, Goldwyn wangled an audition, but he was rejected. Filming started with the role uncast. The producers reviewed audition tapes and decided they liked the tall, blond actor's sympathetic approach to the role after all.

In the film, Belushi and Goldwyn play Palm Beach detectives looking into a series of murders of beautiful women. Both cops become suspects in the course of the investigation.

When producer Samuel Goldwyn heard that his son was being considered for a role in a Goldwyn movie, his reaction was: "Oh, no!"

"It's not that I didn't think Tony's a good actor," the elder Goldwyn said. "I just thought that it would be better for him not to appear in one of my pictures. But my people convinced me otherwise."

"My father and I have had a sort of tacit understanding from the time I became an actor," the younger Goldwyn said, "that I would do it my way and he'd do his thing, and never the twain shall meet. That was the way we wanted it, and we were real good friends.

"At first it was because of the nepotism thing. When I was struggling, I never wanted to put him in the position that he had to give me a job and to compromise himself. I didn't want to feel that I got a job just because someone gave it to me. I needed to feel I got it on my own merit.

"As I became more successful and it made more sense from a business point of view, I didn't want doing business together to interfere with our relationship."

His grandfather lent his name (but not his participation) to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and reigned as the top independent producer for decades. His films included "Wuthering Heights," "Pride of the Yankees" and "The Best Years of Our Lives."

Samuel Goldwyn Sr. died in 1974 when Tony Goldwyn was 14.

"Our relationship was grandfather-and-grandson; I didn't know him as other people did," he said. "We were very, very close. Of course he never knew that I wanted to be an actor. If he had, he would probably have been much more difficult than my father was."

Knowing the perils of the acting life firsthand, his father did nothing to encourage him. Goldwyn Jr. and his wife, Jennifer Howard, an actress and daughter of screenwriter Sidney Howard of "Gone with the Wind" fame, kept their children removed from the Hollywood milieu.

"It was a real family rule that we were not to be immersed in the movie business," Goldwyn recalled. "I didn't know a lot of movie stars. We didn't go to Hollywood parties. The only people in the business I knew were close friends of my parents. There were some famous people there, but not part of the Hollywood scene.

"Going on movie sets was the same thing: that was their business, and the kids didn't need to be involved in it. The thing I remember most was going to the studio with my dad and playing on the backlot. That was really fun.

"I don't think I was on a movie set until I was in a swamp in Covington, Ga., playing a role in 'Friday the 13th, Part 6.' "

The acting urge struck him midway through college, and he switched to Brandeis University, which had a strong drama program.

After graduation, he spent two years learning the classics at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts, then started getting small roles in.

The megahit "Ghost" moved him into the big time. The seeming friend of the couple played by Patrick Swayze and Demi Moore, he turned into a killer.

The elder Goldwyn remarked that during the editing of "Traces of Red" he discovered a duality that he had never suspected in his son.

Said Tony Goldwyn: "It must be strange to see your child portray someone who is not the person you know him to be. My dad often said to me: 'The thing about film acting is that you are the person or you're not.' I said, 'That's not really true.'

"Seeing me play a character where I use my own personality and yet there's a whole other thing going on — that must be an unnerving thing to watch."

Honoring a Man of Greatness

By Jeffrey McDonald

It has been nearly twenty-five years since an assassin's bullet brought an end to the turbulent life of Martin Luther King, Jr. In the 39 years of his life, King had seen many changes in what he called 'the community of man', and he had become an integral part of those changes.

"We are prone to judge success by the index of our salaries or the size of our automobiles," wrote King, the son of a Baptist minister and the grandson of a sharecropper, "rather than by the quality of our service and relationship to humanity."

By the scale of service to humanity, King would certainly rank as one of the most successful men of the twentieth century. In a world of growing tension and the threat of violence, he was a man of peace.

"I am convinced that if we succumb to the temptation to use violence in our struggle for freedom, unborn generations will be the recipients of a long and desolate night of bitterness," King once said. "And our chief legacy to them will be a neverending reign of chaos."

That temptation to violence was understandable in the light of basic human rights that were denied minorities in the United States. King grew up in a society where racial segregation was an accepted practice in schools, in public parks, in housing, in businesses, and in the voting booth. King's commitment to non-violence grew not only from his own Christian upbringing, but from his studies of the writings of Henry Thoreau, and tactics used by Mohandas Ghandi in his struggle against British suppression of Hindus in India.

"We have a power, a power as old as the insights of Jesus of Nazareth and as modern as the techniques of Mahatma Ghandi," wrote King. "If humanity is to progress, Ghandi is inescapable. He lived, thought, and acted, inspired by the vision of humanity evolving toward a world of peace and harmony. We may ignore him at our own risk."

In 1955, Rosa Parks, a Montgomery, Alabama, seamstress, was arrested under a city ordinance governing racial accommodation on publicly owned vehicles. Parks, who was black, refused to give up her seat on the bus to a white passenger.

King first came to national attention during the protest that followed that arrest. As the president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, he led a boycott of the Montgomery bus system, crippling not only that business, but stores that relied upon bus traffic to deliver Christmas shoppers downtown. In the year that followed, King and his family received many threats, he and other boycott organizers were arrested and convicted of conspiracy, and their homes were bombed. But they persevered, and in November of 1966 the United States Supreme Court upheld a lower court's ruling that Alabama's state and local laws requiring segregation on buses was unconstitutional.

"There comes a time when a moral man can't obey a law which his conscience tells him is unjust," King later wrote. "And the important thing is that when he does that, he willingly accepts the penalty - because if he refuses to accept the penalty, then he becomes reckless, and he becomes an anarchist. There were those individuals in every age and generation who were willing to say, 'I will be obedient to a higher law.' It is important to see that there are times when a man-made law is out of harmony with the moral law of the universe."

In 1963, the dream of A. Phillip Randolph, a pioneer of the twentieth-century civil rights movement, would finally be realized. That dream, a peaceful march upon Washington to

Honorando un Hombre de Grandeza

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Ya ha sido ya cerca de veinticinco años desde que la bala asesina trajo fin a la turbulenta vida de Martin Luther King, Jr.. En los 39 años de su vida, King había mirado muchos cambios en lo que él llamaba 'la comunidad del hombre', y él se hizo una parte integral de estos cambios.

"Aquí estamos listos para juzgar el éxito por el indicio de nuestros salarios o el tamaño de nuestros automóviles," escribió King, el hijo de un ministro Bautista y el nieto de un agricultor, "en vez de la calidad de nuestro servicio y relación a la humanidad."

Por la escala de servicio a la humanidad, King ciertamente se destaca como uno de los hombres mas exitosos del siglo veinte. En un mundo de creciente tensión y el peligro de violencia, él era un hombre de paz.

"Yo estoy convencido de que si nosotros sucumbimos a la tentación de usar violencia en nuestra lucha por libertad, generaciones por venir serán las que tendrán largas y desoladas noches de dolor," King una vez dijo. "Y nuestra mayor legacia para ellos seria un reino de caos sin final."

Esta tentación de violencia fue entendida en la luz de derechos básicos de la humanidad que fueron negados minoritarios en los Estados Unidos. King creció en una sociedad donde separaciones raciales eran una practica aceptada en las escuelas, en parques públicos, en viviendas, en negocios, y en los puestos de votación. El propósito de King hacia no usar violencia creció no solo de su propia creación cristiana, pero de sus estudios de las escrituras de Henry Thoreau, y tácticas usadas por Mohandas Ghandi en su lucha contra la represión Británica de Hindus en India.

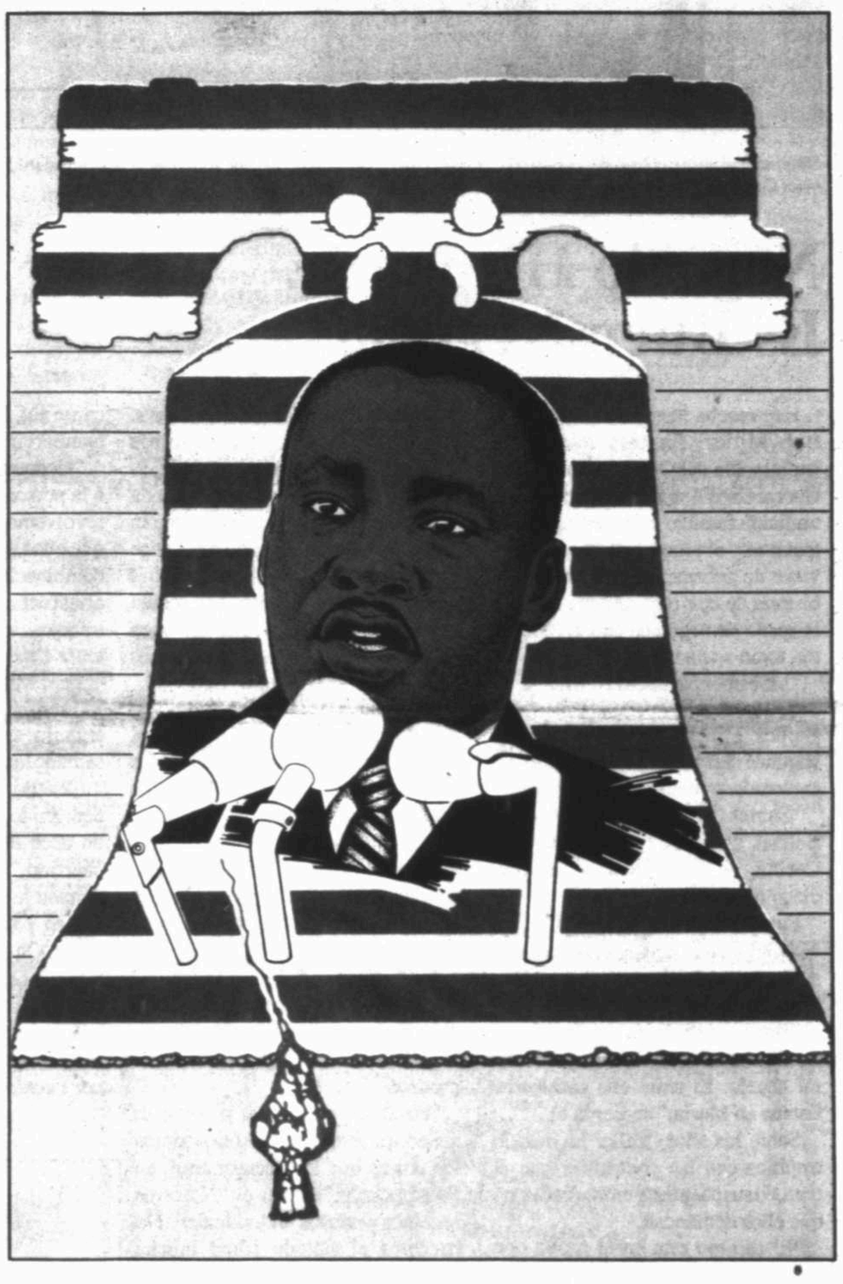

"Nosotros tenemos una fuerza, una fuerza tan vieja como los hechos de Jesús de Nazaret y tan moderna como las técnicas de Mahatma Ghandi," escribió King. "Si la humanidad va ha progresar, Ghandi no es escapable. Él vivió, pensó, y actuó, inspirado por la visión de la humanidad volviéndose hacia un mundo de paz y armonía. Lo podremos ignorar a él a nuestro propio riesgo."

En 1955, Rosa Parks, una costurera de Montgomery, Alabama, fue arrestada bajo una ordenanza de la ciudad gobernando acomodaciones raciales en vehículos públicos. Parks, quien era Negra, se negó a dar su asiento en el camión a un pasajero blanco.

King primero vino a atención nacional durante la protesta que siguió al arresto. Como Presidente de la Asociación de Mejoramientos de Montgomery, él llevo a cabo un boicot del Sistema de camiones de Montgomery, estropeando no solo este negocio, pero tiendas que dependían en el trafico de camiones para entregar compradores de regalos de Navidad a el centro de la ciudad. Y el año que siguió, King y su familia recibieron muchas amenazas, él y otros organizadores del boicot fueron arrestados y juzgados de conspiración, y sus hogares fueron bombardeados. Pero ellos perseveraron y en Noviembre de 1966 la Corte Suprema de los Estados Unidos tuvo una baja corte que declaro que leyes locales y estatales de Alabama que requerían separaciones en los camiones eran anti-constitucionales.

"Vino un tiempo donde un hombre moral no podía obedecer una ley la cual su conciencia le decía que no era justa," King mas tarde escribió. "Y la importante parte es que cuando él hace esto, él esta dispuesto ha aceptar el

Un Hombre Común Excepcional

Por Dick Meister

Durante mas de medio siglo, Fred Ross estuvo entre los mas influyentes, hábiles, dedicados y con éxito de los organizadores comunitarios que han hecho tanto por los desposeídos de la sociedad estadounidense.

Ross era alto y enjuto, un hombre tranquilo con una dedicación seria. Sin embargo, cuando él murió en California en este otoño, a la edad de 82 años, poco se escribió sobre su deceso. La mayoría de los lectores de periódicos nunca oyeron hablar de él.

Así era exactamente cómo Fred Ross lo deseaba. El veía a su trabajo como el de adiestrar a otros para asumir la dirigencia y recibir el reconocimiento.

Y bien que los adiestró, a cientos de ellos, incluyendo al dirigente de los trabajadores agrícolas, César Chávez.

Este era un estudiante típico de Ross — un miembro pobre y sin experiencia de un grupo oprimido, que estaba dispuesto a movilizar a otros para que se enfrentaran a sus opresores.

"Fred hizo un trabajo tan bueno de explicar de qué modo la gente pobre podría edificar el poder, que yo podía saborearlo," recuerda Chávez hoy.

Chávez se hallaba entre los Mexicano-Americanos que vivían en los barrios de California en el decenio de 1950, a quienes Ross ayudó a formar bloques políticos. En el transcurso de unos pocos años, las pequeñas organizaciones formadas por los residentes de aquellos barrios se unieron en un poderoso grupo de todo el estado, la Organización de Servicios Comunitarios, encabezada por Chávez.

Unos pocos años después, Chávez fundó lo que se convertiría en el Sindicato de Trabajadores Agrícolas. Fue la primera organización eficaz de trabajadores agrícolas del país, precisamente debido a que se organizó de acuerdo con los principios de Ross — desde el suelo hacia arriba, por parte de Chávez y otros trabajadores agrícolas que descansaban en tácticas no violentas como el boicot.

Después de abrirse camino en la Universidad del Sur de California en 1936, Ross se propuso ser un maestro de aula, pero no pudo encontrar empleo en la enseñanza en aquel año obscuro de la Gran Depresión. De modo que tomó otro empleo público, administrando con el tiempo el campamento federal de mano de obra migratoria cerca de Bakersfield, California, que el novelista John Steinbeck uso como el modelo para el campamento que desempeño un papel central en la obra titulada "Las Uvas de la Ira."

An Uncommon Common Man

By Dick Meister

For more than a half-century, Fred Ross was among the most influential, skilled, dedicated and successful of the community organizers who have done so much for the underdogs of U.S. society.

Ross was tall and lean, a quiet man of fierce commitment. Yet when he died in California last fall at age 82, little was written about his passing. Most newspaper readers probably never heard of him.

That is exactly how Fred Ross wanted it. He saw his job as training others to assume leadership and receive the recognition. Train them he did, hundreds of them, including farmworker leader César Chávez.

Chávez was a typical Ross student — a poor, inexperienced member of an oppressed group willing to mobilize others to stand up to their oppressors.

"Fred did such a good job of explaining how poor people could build power I could taste it," Chávez recalls today.

Chávez was among the Mexican Americans living in California's barrios in the 1950s whom Ross helped form political blocs. Within just a few years, the small organizations formed by the residents of those barrios joined into a potent statewide group, the Community Services Organization, headed by Chávez.

A few years later, Chávez founded what became the United Farm Workers union. It was the country's first effective farmworker organization precisely because it was built from the ground up by Chávez and other farmworkers in accord with Ross, principles, relying heavily on such non-violent tactics as the boycott.

After working his way through the University of Southern California in 1936, Ross planned to be a classroom teacher, but he could find no teaching jobs in that dark year during the Great Depression. So he took other public work, eventually managing the federal migratory labor camp near Bakersfield, Calif., that novelist John Steinbeck used as the model for the camp that played a central role in "The Grapes of Wrath."

Fiction though it was, Steinbeck's account was accurate. Camp conditions were deplorable. So were those imposed on the migrants by the local growers. But, thanks to young Ross, the migrants were able to organize themselves to win better living and working conditions.

Ross had found his life's work. He would become a full-time organizer — "a social arsonist who goes around setting people on fire," he often said.

He left the migrant camp to work on the West Coast with Japanese Americans who were herded into internment camps during World War II. He helped many win release by finding them jobs in the manpower-short factories in the Midwest, producing vital war materials.

After the war, he returned to Southern California to help Blacks and Mexican Americans fight housing and school segregation. They also fought effectively against police brutality and elected Los Angeles's first Hispanic city councilman, Edward Roybal.

Ross worked in Arizona, too, helping Yaqui Indians get sewers, paved streets, medical facilities and other basic needs that had been denied their communities.

His most ambitious and probably most satisfying work came during his 15 years of training hundreds of organizers and negotiators for the United Farm Workers. Those he trained were inexperienced and long-oppressed rank-and-file members.

Oscar Hijuelos

Lideres Hispano-Americanos

Oscar Hijuelos, de cuatro años de edad, hablaba solamente Español cuando fue hospitalizado durante un año por una enfermedad grave de los riñones, lejos de su familia. Cuando regreso a casa, hablaba principalmente Ingles. Treinta y cinco años mas tarde, el novelista ganador del Premio Pulitzer se maravilla de esta transformación y del equilibrio desplázate y constante entre una cultura rica y otra diferente, un tema que persevera en sus obras actuales.

Hijo de inmigrantes Cubanos, Hijuelos se crió en un barrio etnicamente mixto de Harlem flagelado con pobreza, violencia pandillera y música — desde blues y jazz hasta rumbas y mambos. Se matriculo en el City College de New York, donde obtuvo su licenciatura y maestría, y comenzó a escribir cuentos cortos. En el transcurso de los ocho años siguientes, continuo escribiendo mientras trabajaba en una agencia publicitaria.

En 1984, Hijuelos publico su primera novela, "Nuestra Casa en el Ultimo Mundo," la cual recibió aclamación critica extendida. Dejo su trabajo, gano una beca literaria que le permitió trabajar en Italia y comenzó su siguiente libro. Pero conforme escribía, algo mas que palabras estaba emergiendo.

"La música comenzó a tomar su lugar," dijo Hijuelos. La música Cubana de su juventud le ayudo a idear su historia de dos hermanos y sus aventuras amorosas, sus dolores y su fama efímera como músicos invitados con la banda de Desi Arnaz en la función televisiva "I Love Lucy". La historia se convirtió en "Los Reyes del Mambo Tocan Canciones de Amor", una novela publicada en 1989. En 1990, Hijuelos llego a ser el primer Hispano nacido en Estados Unidos en ganar el Premio Pulitzer en Literatura Novelistica.

Actualmente Hijuelos esta trabajando en una novela acerca de una familia medio-Cubano medio-Americano.

Hispanic-American Leaders

Four-year-old Oscar Hijuelos spoke only Spanish when he was hospitalized for a serious kidney disease for one year, away from his family. When he returned home, he spoke mostly English. Thirty-five years later, the Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist still marvels at this transformation and at the constantly shifting balance from one rich culture to another, a theme that pervades his work today.

The son of Cuban immigrants, Hijuelos grew up in an ethnically mixed Harlem neighborhood riddled with poverty, gang violence and music — from blues and jazz to rumbas and mambos. He enrolled in City College in New York, where he received both bachelor's and master's degrees, and began writing short stories. Over the next eight years, he continued his writing while working at an advertising agency.

In 1984, Hijuelos published his first novel, "Our House in the Last World," which received widespread critical acclaim. He left his job, won a literary fellowship that enabled him to work in Italy and began his next book. But as he wrote, something more than words was coming to the surface.

"The music began taking over," said Hijuelos. The Cuban music of his childhood helped shape his story of two brothers and their loves, their pain and their fleeting fame as quest performers with Desi Arnaz's band on the "I Love Lucy Show." The story became "The Mambo Kings Play Songs of Love," a novel published in 1989. In 1990, Hijuelos became the first American-born Hispanic to win the Pulitzer Prize for fiction.

Hijuelos is currently at work on a novel about a half-Cuban, half-American family.

"Well sometimes yopu get depressed, and sometimes you have a good day. It's never a dull monment." Bob Miller, owner of Miller Meat Company, Ft. Stockton, Tx. with wife Estella.

Hispanic Business... Is Good Business

By Amarante Cordova

There's a lot of history in Bob Miller's family. It includes the exploration of West Texas, and the American Civil War. It includes a family tradition in the butchering and meat processing business that spans generations. And it included the story of how a successful Hispanic businessman in Fort Stockton got his name.

"My great-grandfather was born in Ireland. He discovered Balmorhea Springs," explained Miller. "He helped with the wagon trains. He was like a scout and an Indian fighter."

"Samuel R. Miller. He came from Belfast, and married my great-grandmother, Cecilia, from Chihuahua, and had five or six children."

It was from the family that Miller, whose Miller Meat Company is now in it's twelfth year of business in Fort Stockton, learned his trade.

"Well, when I was a little boy, I used to help my grandfather. He used to have a meat market. It was in Marfa," he recalled.

Over the years, Miller has seen changes in the companies he deals with, in his customers, and in the products they demand.

"The change is in the way they handle the beef now. All the big companies taking over the little ones," he said. "See, we used to have slaughterhouses in San Angelo, and Abilene, and El Paso. They've all gone under. All the big companies went into the 'boxed' beef."

"Now my beef is coming from Dallas. I handle all 'hanging' beef. I don't have no 'boxed' beef. And it's getting harder and harder to find that type of beef, because these little companies can't compete with the big ones. But, so far, we've been able to stay with that type of beef, and that makes a difference for the customers."

Working to make a difference for his customers, who include not only individual customers, but also many area restaurants, has been a key to Miller's success.

"The only meat we handle is 'Choice' beef, and boy, we've got to trim that fat out of that meat! Because everybody's worrying about cholesterol and all that," he said. "But we trim all the fat they want. If someone wants a good steak with a good piece of fat in it, we can leave it."

"See, we cut individual steaks, whatever size they want. We don't cut a steak and put it in the counter. We cut it when the customer comes in here. You want a 'T-Bone' three-quarters? We cut three-quarters. You want one-inch? We cut one-inch. See, we cater to the customer."

Miller also has an opportunity to provide individual service during deer season, when successful hunters bring their venison to him for processing.

"We do a lot of deer processing for this area. We're the only ones doing it here, in Fort Stockton," he explained. "We do individual deer. We don't do the method like a lot of people, who throw all their meat in there, and weigh them out, and then run the hamburger, whatever they want."

"We give individual meat to the individual person. We don't miss any of it. The product they get is theirs, not a combination. That's why we cater to everybody. We do individual jobs. We try to keep everybody happy."

But while Miller admits that his business has it's ups and it's downs, it is a business that has given him a lot of satisfaction.

"Well, sometimes you get depressed, and sometimes you have a good day. It's never a dull moment," he said. "Somebody's always chewing you out or giving you a hard time, or they come by and pat you on the back and say, 'Oh boy, that was a good steak!' I mean, you never know what to expect. It's rewarding. I mean, it's never a dull moment!"

Negocio Hispano... Es Buen Negocio

Por Amarante Cordova

Hay mucha historia en familia de Bob Miller. En esta incluye la exploración del Oeste de Texas, y la Guerra Civil Americana. Incluye una tradición familiar en el negocio de la matanza y el proceso de la carne que viene de generaciones. Y incluye la historia de como un exitoso hombre Hispano de negocios en Fort Stockton tomo su nombre.

"Mi bisabuelo nació en Irlanda. Él descubrió Balmorhea Springs," explica Miller. "Él ayudo con los vagones del tren. Él era como un explorador y como un indio peleador."

"Samuel R. Miller. Él vino de Belfast, y se caso con mi bisabuela, Cecilia, de Chihuahua, y tuvieron cinco o seis hijos."

Fue de la familia que Miller, la cual Miller Meat Company esta ahora en su doceavo año de negocios en Fort Stockton, aprendió su carrera.

"Bueno, cuando era yo apenas un muchacho, acostumbraba ayudarle a mi abuelo. Él tenia una carnicería. Estaba en Marfa," recuerda él.

Sobre los años, Miller ha mirado cambios con las compañías que él trata, en sus clientes, y en los productos que ellos demandan.

"El cambio esta en el modo que ellos manejan la carne ahora. Todas las compañías grandes están tomando poder sobre las pequeñas," dice él. "Mira, nosotros acostumbrábamos ha tener las matanzas en San Angelo, Abilene, y El Paso. Todas estas se han ido acabando. Todas las compañías grandes se hanido con la carne empacada en cajas."

"Ahora mi carne viene de Dallas. Yo manejo toda la carne fresca, yo no tengo carne empacada en cajas. Y se esta poniendo difícil, y mas difícil de encontrar esta clase de carne, porque las compañías pequeñas no pueden competir con las grandes. Pero por lo menos hasta ahora he sido capaz de quedarme con esta clase de carne, y esto hace una gran diferencia en los clientes."

Trabajando para hacer la diferencia en sus clientes, quienes incluyen no solo clientes individuales, pero también muchos restaurantes del área, han sido la llave del éxito de Miller's.

"La única carne que nosotros tenemos es la carne escogida y, tenemos que quitarle lo gordo a toda esta carne! Porque todos se apuran ahora del colesterol y todo eso," dice él. "Pero nosotros le quitamos todo el gordo que ellos quieran. Si alguien quiere un buen steak con un buen pedazo de gordo en el, se lo podemos dejar."

"Cortamos steaks individuales, decualquier tamaño que ellos quieran. Nosotros no cortamos steaks y los ponemos en el mostrador. Nosotros los cortamos cuando el cliente viene aquí. ¿Quieres un 'T-bone' de tres-cuartos? Nosotros lo cortamos de tres-cuartos. ¿Los quieres de una pulgada? Lo cortamos de una pulgada. Nosotros complacemos al cliente."

Miller también tiene la oportunidad de dar servicio durante la temporada del venado, cuando cazadores exitosos le traen sus venados para que él los procese.

"Hacemos mucho del proceso de venado por esta área. Nosotros somos los únicos que lo hacemos aquí, en Fort Stockton," explica él. "Nosotros hacemos venados individuales. No hacemos el método como mucha gente lo hace, quien pone toda la carne ahí, la pesan, y luego corren la hamburguesa, de lo que quieren."

"Nosotros damos carne individual a la persona individual. Nosotros no revolvemos nada de ella. El producto que ellos tienen es de ellos, no es una combinación. Es por esto que nosotros abastecemos a todos. Hacemos trabajos individuales. Tratamos de tener a todos contentos."

Pero Miller admite que su negocio ha tenido sus altas y bajas, es un trabajo que le ha dado muchas satisfacciones.

"Bueno, algunas veces uno se pone deprimido, y algunas veces uno tiene un buen día. Nunca es un momento aburrido," dice él. "Todo el tiempo alguien te regaña o te da mal rato, o vienen y te palmean en la espalda y dicen 'Oh boy, este si que era un buen steak!' Digo, tu nunca sabes que esperar. Es gracioso. Digo, nunca hay un momento aburrido!"

El Ascenso de la Política Hispana, XI:

Los Nuevos Dirigentes Locales

Por José de la Isla

Poco después de tomar posesión de su cargo en 1981, el Presidente Reagan propuso rebajas presupuestarias de mas de $41,000 millones. El quería disminuir o poner fin a 83 programas federales, y tenia un apoyo publico mejor que de 2 a 1 para hacerlo. Pero el rebajar el presupuesto federal, ascendente a $700,000 millones, no era fácil. La sangría empezó, y la Cámara de Representantes aprobó un presupuesto de reforma, con pocas concesiones, el 7 de Mayo de 1981.

Muchos de los programas rebajados por el Congreso, a pedido del nuevo Presidente, habían sido diseñados como salvavidas para la recesión: Cupones para alimentos, asistencia económica publica, Medicaid, subsidios para enseñanza, adiestramiento para el trabajo y programas de alimentos para mujeres, niños y lactantes. La recesión de 1981 y 1982 situó a 9,500,000 trabajadores en líneas de espera por cheques de compensación por desempleo. El desempleo agudo continuo durante el invierno de 1982, pero la inflación disminuyo y también las tasas altas de intereses. La recesión fue seguida por cinco años buenos, sin gestiones congresionales serias para restablecer los antiguos niveles de gastos de los programas que habían sido desalojados del presupuesto y sustituidos por gastos mas altos para la defensa.

La Revolución de Reagan coloco a la responsabilidad por los necesitados sobre los gobiernos estatales y locales. La senadora estatal de Colorado, Polly Baca Barragan, señaló: "Si el sector privado o los gobiernos locales hubieran aceptado esta responsabilidad desde el principio, nunca habría habido la presión ejercida sobre el gobierno federal para llenar este vacío (en el primer lugar)."

Fernando Oaxaca, que fue un funcionario de la Oficina de Administración y Presupuesto durante el gobierno de Gerald Ford, contesto que el gobierno federal había engendrado una industria de servicio social hispana solamente para el servicio propio. El critico a "ese uno o dos por ciento superior de nuestra comunidad" que dependía de "la generosidad federal . . . para su mantenimiento . . . mientras que se envolvía con seguridad en la manta del interés "Hispano."

La reacción hispana a la Revolución de Reagan se registro en las elecciones de mediados de termino en 1982. La representación latina en el Congreso aumento de 6 a 11 — todos en la Cámara de Representantes. Nueve eran miembros con voto y dos (que representaban a Puerto Rico y a las Islas Vírgenes) eran delegados sin vòtos.

En Nuevo México, Toney Anaya fue electo gobernador y Clara Padilla Jones fue elegida como secretaria de estado.

A los niveles estatales y locales, una nueva cosecha de candidatos adaptaron sus campañas con una actividad repentina de negociaciones, cambalaches, afirmaciones de organización y politiquería que señalaba el surgimiento de los nuevos dirigentes. Federico Peña fue electo alcalde de Denver, una ciudad cuya población era Mexico-Americana en su quinta parte; Henry Cisneros llego a ser alcalde de San Antonio; Maurice Ferre de Miami; y Raúl Martinez de Hialeah. Los Hispanos desempeñaron un papel importante en la elección de Mario Cuomo para gobernador del Estado de Nueva York y de Tom Bradley como Alcalde de Los Angeles.

A mediados de 1983, los Estados Unidos tenían 105 legisladores estatales Hispanos (31 en las cámaras altas y 74 en las cámaras bajas). Los Cuba-Americanos y demás Hispanos de la Florida lograron la paridad en la legislatura de aquel estado. Arizona y Nuevo México casi habían alcanzado la paridad.

Para Agosto, los éxitos del Proyecto del Suroeste para la Inscripción y la Enseñanza de Electores inspiraron una campaña nacional importante para inscribir a electores. Sus campañas habían aportado considerablemente a las victorias del Gobernador de Texas, Mark White, y del Alcalde de Chicago, Harold Washington. Doscientos campaña a fin de inscribir a un millón de nuevos electores antes de 1984, con objeto de aumentar al electorado latino a una meta de 4,400,000.

Entre los principales dirigentes Hispanos que estaban allí se contaban los alcaldes de Miami, Hialeah, San Antonio y Denver. El Asambleista de California Richard Alatorre, Lou Moret del Comité Demócrata Nacional y el ex-presidente de LULAC Tony Bonilla ayudaron a oficiar. El Senador Edward Kennedy y el Vice-Presidente George Bush participaron también. Se planearon cerca de 300 campañas para 28 estados.

El Presidente Reagan, que disfrutaba de una tasa de aprobación del 52%, decidió postularse para un segundo periodo. El no tenia oposición virtual, a medida que se aproximaban las primeras elecciones primarias republicanas. Entre los candidatos menos conocidos se encontraba el comerciante de California Benjamin Fernandez. Este se sentía confiado, dijo su portavoz, porque "los Hispanos votan por el Partido Republicano. Los ilegales votan por los Demócratas." Algunos no encontraron el sentido del humor.

Reagan hizo nuevas insinuaciones a los electores Hispanos, contrarrestando sus tasas bajas entre los negros y las mujeres. El asistió a una festividad del Cinco de Mayo en San Antonio, con Henry Cisneros compartiendo el estrado. Su itinerario de discursos incluía a la Cámara de Comercio hispana de los Estados Unidos en Tampa y al American G.I. Forum en El Paso.

Empero, los grupos Hispanos se quejaron en alta voz de que Reagan había tratado de eliminar a la oficina tradicional de la Casa Blanca de enlace comunitario Hispano. Henry Zuniga fue designado eventualmente para esa plaza y Catalina Villalpando lo sustituyo después.

A medida que el Presidente aceleraba su campaña, también se aceleraban las criticas de los demócratas. Edward Kennedy y Walter Mondale atacaron por separado a Reagan por encabezar uno de los gobiernos mas anti-Hispanos que hubiera habido. En Noviembre de 1983, Reagan defendió sus cursos de acción tres veces en una semana.

El gobernador de Nuevo México, Toney Anaya, portavoz principal de "Hispanic Force '84" (Fuerza Hispana '84), la campaña para inscribir electores, había trabajado enérgicamente por Harold Washington en Chicago y efectuado numerosos viajes de campaña para ayudar a otros candidatos demócratas e Hispanos. A el se le daba crédito por orientar un presupuesto a través de la legislatura republicana de Nuevo México y evitar una crisis económica que se planteo durante la recesión. Pero, a medida que su popularidad aumentaba fuera del estado, el llego a ser cada vez menos popular dentro del mismo. Empezaron a aparecer calcomanías en las defensas de los automóviles que decían: "¡Llama a tu casa, Toney!"

Cisneros, de San Antonio, figuro en la "lista corta" del candidato presidencial Walter Mondale para consideración sobre la plaza de vicepresidente, junto con la Representante Geraldine Ferraro, por el estado de Nueva York, la alcaldesa de San Francisco, Diane Feinstein y el gobernador de Massachusetts, Michael Dukakis.

Cisneros llego a la prominencia al rechazar los enfoques de estilo antiguo, basados en la asistencia económica publica, sobre los problemas sociales. El dio paso a un nuevo estilo. La enseñanza de "alta tecnología" se convirtió en una prioridad. El dirigente Lane Kirkland, de la AFL-CIO, lo respaldo para vicepresidente. Pero Mondale dio su aprobación a Geraldine Ferraro.

Cisneros pronuncio un discurso de respaldo cuando el nombre de Mondale se presento en postulacion para presidente. El Gobernador Toney Anaya secundo a Geraldine Ferraro como candidate vicepresidencial.

The Rise of Hispanic Politics, XI:

The New Local Leaders

By José de la Isla

Soon after taking office in 1981, President Reagan proposed budget cuts of more than $41 billion. He wanted to reduce or end 83 federal programs, and had better than a two-to-one public support for doing so. But cutting the $700 billion federal budget was not easy. The bloodletting began, and the House passed a reform budget, with few concessions, on May 7, 1981.

Many of the programs cut by Congress, at the new President's request, had been designed as recession life-savers: food stamps, welfare, Medicaid, education grants, job training, and food programs for women, children and infants.

The 1981-1982 recession put 9.5 million workers into waiting lines for unemployment compensation checks. Acute joblessness continued through the winter of 1982, but inflation came down and so did high interest rates. The recession was followed by five good years, without serious congressional efforts to reinstate the former spending levels of the programs that had been gutted out of the budget and replaced with higher defense spending.

The Reagan Revolution placed responsibility for the needy on state and local government. Colorado state senator Polly Baca Barragan pointed out: "Had the private sector or local governments accepted this responsibility initially, there never would have been the pressure exerted on the federal government to fill this void (in the first place)."

Fernando Oaxaca, an Office of Management and Budget official during President Gerald Ford's administration, answered that the federal government had spawned a self-serving Hispanic social service industry. He castigated "that upper 1 or 2 percent of our community" that depended "on federal largess . . . for their livelihood . . . while safely wrapped in the blanket of 'Hispanic' concern."

Hispanic reaction to the Reagan Revolution was registered in the mid-term elections of 1982. Latino representation in Congress increased from six to 11 — all in the House of Representatives. Nine were voting members and two (representing Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands) were non-voting delegates.

In New Mexico, Toney Anaya was elected governor and Clara Padilla Jones was voted in as secretary of state. At state and local levels, a new crop of candidates adapted their campaigns with a flurry of negotiations, trade-offs, organization assertions and electioneering that heralded the emergence of the new leaders.

Federico Peña was elected mayor of Denver, a city only one-fifth Mexican-American; Henry Cisneros became mayor of San Antonio; Maurice Ferre, of Miami; and Raul Martinez, of Hialeah. Hispanics played a significant role in the election of Mario Cuomo as New York's governor and Tom Bradley as mayor of Los Angeles.

In mid-1983, the United States had 105 Hispanic state legislators (31 in upper houses and 74 in lower houses). Cuban Americans and other Hispanics in Florida reached parity in that state's legislature. Arizona and New Mexico had almost reached parity. By August, the successes of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project and the Midwest Voter Registration Education Project inspired a major national voter registration campaign. Their drives had contributed significantly to the victories of Texas Gov. Mark White and Chicago Mayor Harold Washington. Two hundred Hispanic leaders met in San Antonio to launch a campaign to register a million new voters before 1984, to increase the Latino electorate to a goal of 4.4 million.

Among the major Hispanic leaders present were the mayors of Miami, Hialeah, San Antonio and Denver. California Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, Lou Moret of the Democratic National Committee and LULAC past president Tony Bonilla helped officiate. Sen. Edward Kennedy and then Vice-President George Bush also participated. About 300 campaigns were planned for 28 states.

President Reagan, enjoying a 52 percent approval rating, decided to run for a second term. He was virtually unopposed as the first Republican primaries approached. Among lesser-known candidates was California businessman Benjamin Fernandez. Fernandez was confident, said his spokesman, because "Hispanics vote Republican. The illegals vote Democratic." The humor was lost on some.

Reagan made new overtures to Hispanic voters, counteracting his low ratings among black and women voters. He attended a Cinco de Mayo observance in San Antonio, with Henry Cisneros sharing the podium. His speaking schedule included the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce in Tampa and the American G.I. Forum in El Paso.

Still, Hispanic groups loudly complained that Reagan had attempted to eliminate the traditional White House office of Hispanic community liaison. Henry Zuniga eventually was named to the position and later replaced by Catalina Villalpando. As the President stepped up his campaign, so did Democratic criticism. Edward Kennedy and Walter Mondale separately attacked Reagan for leading one of the most anti-Hispanic administrations ever. In November 1983, Reagan defended his policies three times in one week.

New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya, chief spokesman for Hispanic Force '84, the voter registration drive, had campaigned hard for Harold Washington in Chicago and made numerous campaign sorties to assist other Democrats and Hispanic candidates. He was credited with guiding a budget through New Mexico's Republican legislature and avoided a financial crisis arising during the recession. But as his popularity increased outside the state, he became increasingly unpopular at home. Bumper strips began appearing: "Call home, Toney!" and "Does Toney Annoya?"

San Antonio's Cisneros made Democratic Presidential candidate Walter (Fritz) Mondale's "short list" for vice presidential consideration, along with New York Congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro, San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein, and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Cisneros came to prominence by rejecting old-style welfare approaches to social problems. He ushered in a new style. "High-tech" education became a priority. AFL-CIO leader Lane Kirkland backed him for vice president. But Mondale gave the nod to Ferraro.

Cisneros delivered a seconding speech when Mondale's name was put in nomination for president. Gov. Toney Anaya seconded Geraldin Ferraro as the vice presidential candidate.

Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Holds 6th Annual "Step Up To Success"

By Amarante Cordova

Finding out what lies ahead may have Midland students stepping up instead of dropping out.

'Step Up To Success', the 6th Annual Youth Conference brings educators and businesses together to provide students with a unique opportunity to learn what lies ahead, and to prepare for their future.

"They're targeting the at-risk kids because of the fact that a lot of them want to drop out of school," explained Mary Lopez, secretary to the Director of Public Relations at Midland College, and an organizer for this year's conference. "Some kids don't have much. And so these seminars let them know that if they stay in school, it's going to pay off. They see that people, just regular people like them, can do real good."

A series of workshops offered at the conference will help students recognize the obstacles that lie ahead, and show them ways to overcome those obstacles.

"One workshop is called 'Roadblocks'," said Lopez. That's going to cover the drugs, the crime, the sexually-transmitted diseases, you know, the teenage pregnancy, all that."

"And another one is called 'Just Do It', and it's going to be on goal-setting. Then the next one is called 'Money Talks'. This is the one on careers and salaries, what can be expected with or without an education. And then the last one is called 'Study Skills', and it's going to show students how to study and take exams."

The conference is open to Midland freshman students, and their parents. Separate workshops for parents show them how to become effective partners in their child's education.

"We're trying to give parents the idea that, you know, 'You really have to tell your kids to go to school,' and, 'You need to talk to your kids, about sex, and about drugs,'" explained Lopez.

The conference begins Saturday morning, January 23rd, and will take place at the Student Center on Midland College Campus. Lydia Torres, Special Assistant to the President of Odessa College, will be the kickoff speaker.

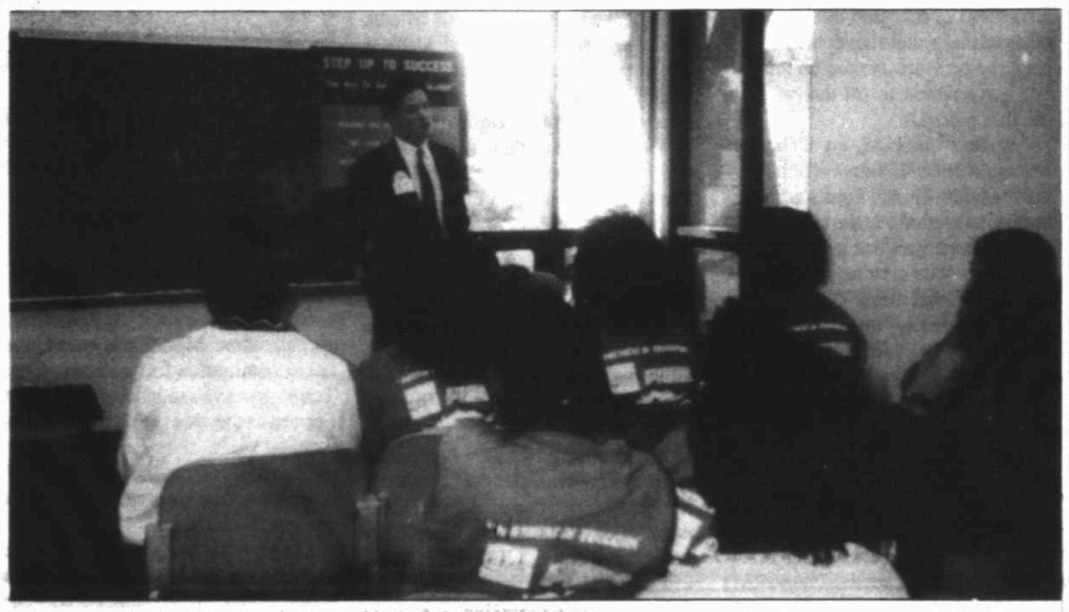

Students will select the workshops they wish to attend. These workshops will be conducted by business professionals, who will offer practical advice to the young people, based upon their own experience.

During lunch, which is provided free-of-charge by the conference organizers, Jose Cuevas, Jr., President of Jumburrito, Incorporated, will be part of a panel discussion, along with Forrest Allen of Arco Oil & Gas, and Dianne Klancher of Mobil.

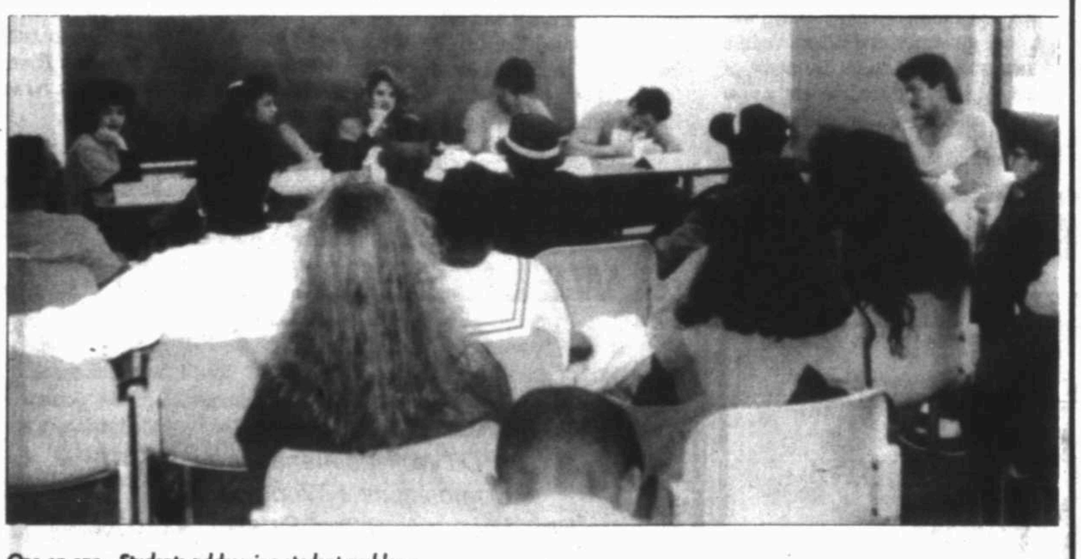

Transportation to the conference will be available for all participants, who will also receive tee shirts provided by Mobil and Exxon, and refreshments provided by Coca-Cola. Other corporate sponsors include Arco Oil & Gas, Midland College, the Midland Reporter Telegram, and the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Notices of the conference have gone out to students at Midland and Lee Freshman Schools. Students and their parents can also register by calling the Hispanic Chamber at 682-2960, or Midland College at 685-4554.

La Cámara Comercio Hispana de Midland Entretiene el Sexto Anual "Step Up To Success"

Por Amarante Cordova

Encontrando lo que viene adelante puede hacer que los estudiantes de Midland sigan subiendo en vez de que sigan abandonando las escuelas.

'Step Up To Success', la sexta Anual Conferencia de Jovenes atrae educadores y hombres de negocios unidos para proveer a estudiantes con una oportunidad única de aprender lo que viene adelante, y prepararlos para su futuro.

"Ellos están poniendo interés en los muchachos que están en riesgo por el factor de que muchos de ellos quieren abandonar la escuela," explica Maria Lopez, la secretaria del Director de Relaciones Publicas del Midland College, y una organizadora de la conferencia de este año. "Algunos muchachos no tienen mucho. Y así que estos seminarios les enseñan que si se quedan en la escuela, les ira bien. Y miraran que personas, personas comunes como ellos, pueden hacer algo muy bien."

Una serie de talleres ofrecidas en esta conferencia irán ha ayudar a los estudiantes ha reconocer obstáculos que vendrán después, y les enseñaran caminos para sobrepasar estos obstáculos.

"Un taller es llamado 'Roadblocks'," dice Lopez. "Y esto va ha tratarse de drogas, crimen, las enfermedades sexuales transmitidas, tu sabes, el embarazo de jovenes, y todo esto."

"Y otro es llamado 'Just Do It', va ha ser para sentar metas. Y luego el que sigue se llama 'Money Talks'. Este es sobre carreras y salarios, lo que se puede esperar con o sin educación. Y luego el ultimo que es llamado 'Study Skills', y va ha enseñar a los estudiantes como estudiar y tomar exámenes."

La conferencia esta abierta para todos los estudiantes del grado nueve de Midland, y sus padres. Separados talleres para padres enseñarán como ser socios efectivos en la educación de sus hijos.

"Estamos tratando de dar a los padres la idea de que, tu sabes, 'Realmente les tienes que decir a tus hijos que vayan a la escuela,' y 'Necesitas hablarles a tus hijos, sobre sexo, y sobre drogas,'" explica Lopez.

La conferencia empieza el Sábado por la mañana, del 23 de Enero, y tomara lugar en el Centro de Estudiantes en el Midland College, Lydia Torres, Asistente Especial de el Presidente de Odessa College, será la primera parlamentaria.

Los estudiantes seleccionaran los talleres que desean tomar. Estos talleres serán conducidos por negociantes profesionales, quienes ofrecerán consejos prácticos para la gente joven, basados en su propia experiencia.

Durante la comida, la cual es dada gratis por los organizadores de la conferencia, José Cuevas Jr., Presidente de Jumburrito, Incorporado, será parte de una discusión, al mismo tiempo Forrest Allen de Arco Oil & Gas, y Dianne Klancher de Mobil.

Transportación para la conferencia esta disponible para todos los participantes, quienes recibirán camisetas dadas por Mobil y Exxon, y refrescos dados por Coca-Cola. Otros donadores corporativos incluyen Arco Oil & Gas, Midland College, Midland Reporter Telegram, y la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland.

Las noticias de la conferencia han sido mandadas a los estudiantes de las escuelas Midland y Lee Freshman. Estudiantes y sus padres se pueden registrar también llamando a la Cámara Hispana al 682-2960, o al Midland College al 685-4554.

"One thing I had going was my knowledge of the community, having worked in every grass-roots organization, with the Black, the Hispanic, and the Anglo community." Oralia Corrales

La Primera Representante Hispana en el Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Para Oralia Corrales, las raíces de su ansia por un cambio, y su comportamiento por hacer que este cambio pasajera, están hondamente enterrados en los campos donde una vez ella trabajo como una trabajadora emigrante de cultivo.

"Muy familiar con el trabajo emigrante," recuerda Corrales. "Al contrario de Lena y los otros, yo se como hacer cada clase de pizca, de uvas, de duraznos, tomates, cebollas y ajos. Odiaba las papas! Odiaba levantar papas y ajos."

Pero productos agrícolas no era la única cosa que crecía en los campos de California. También crecía el disgusto de los trabajadores emigrantes sobre la condición de vivir y trabajar que soportaban.

"Me hice muy familiar con esta clase de vida," dice Corrales. "Pero, primero que nada, fui capaz de mirar las condiciones de vivir de la gente que era muy inadecuada."

"Y me hice muy familiar con los objetivos de Cesar Chavez," agrega ella, refiriéndose al hombre quien organizo trabajadores del cultivo, y fundo la Asociación Nacional de Trabajadores de la Labor en 1962 "Todavía lo apoyo fuertemente. Y probablemente fue cuando mi primer sabor a ansia de querer que ocurriera un cambio."

Sobre su regreso a Midland, Corrales encontró muchos modos que afectaban cambios en su comunidad. Como una interprete que apoyaba las escuelas y las iglesias. Ella también entro en el campo de negocios cuando ella empezó la agencia de aseguranzas Corrales.

Pero uno de sus mas grandes retos, vendría en el campo de la política.

"En los setentas, corrí para la directiva de la escuela," recuerda Corrales. Gane en mi área, probablemente como por 300 votos arriba, teníamos el distrito de miembros individuales, pero como era a lo largo, perdí en contra de Ed Runyan por un numero de votos."

"Realmente no se porque alguien quiere correr para la directiva de la escuela! Yo pensé que el Concilio de la Ciudad estaba difícil, pero cuando estas tratando con niños, esto esta realmente difícil. Oí una vez a Ted Kerr decir este es un trabajo que vas ha tomar cuando vas ha ser corrida de la ciudad, y el pueda estar en lo cierto. Pero había un numero de cosas en las que yo estaba interesada."

Entre estas cosas estaba una posición en el Concilio de la Ciudad de Midland en 1982. Cuando ella fue primero llamada por los líderes de la comunidad, Corrales no estaba completamente segura si quería llenar esta posición.

"A este particular tiempo, apenas le había agregado 1,200 pies cuadrados a mi oficina de aseguranzas, y tenia un largo personal, había sido una de las 10 mas altas agentes de aseguranzas de mi distrito," explica Corrales. "No había ni una razón en el mundo el porque quisiera peligrar esto en cualquier modo, forma, o razón, por una carrera política."

"Pero la ansia estaba ahí, por un cambio. No había mirado este cambio. Nuestra comunidad, especialmente el Sur de la ciudad, estaba deteriorándose. Mas y mas, los Hispanos y los Negros que aspiraban tener algo mejor, se estaban moviendo a el Oeste de la comunidad. Y no estábamos construyendo nada nuevo, que fuera atractivo o una razón para quedarse. Ellos querían vivir en una vecindad donde hubiera mas seguridad, donde hubiera mas animación para el barrio."

Y así Corrales entro en la carrera, uno de los cinco candidatos minoritarios para la silla del concilio de la ciudad, y ella admite que estaba insegura de las oportunidades que ella tenia. Pero ella fue elegida, siendo la primera Hispana ha servir en el concilio de la ciudad de Midland. Ella serviría por un termino de dos años, durante el cual ella seria presentada con muchas oportunidades para traer un cambio.

"Una cosa que tenia, era el conocimiento de la comunidad, estando trabajando en cada organización desde la raíz, con la Negra, la Hispana, y la comunidad Anglo," dice Corrales. "Una de las áreas en la cual fui primeramente éxitosa fue en tener el parque Martin Luther King. Y luego, después de esto, trabajando con el Centro de Ciudadanos Ancianos. Y luego en tomar la primera ayuda financial para fundar la cámara Hispana, el cual eran $35,000. Esto fue realmente un récord, porque era tan difícil tomar $35,000 como era, por decir, tener el Parque Martin Luther King."

Pero también tengo que decir que los otros miembros del Concilio de la ciudad también ayudaron en la ocasión. Lo que decimos en conversaciones privadas, lo que dijimos esta todo borrado. Y así tuve muy buen periodo con el concilio."

En efecto, Corrales encontró que ignorando diferencias, para encontrar soluciones que beneficiaría la comunidad, era una de las mas importantes habilidades para un exitoso termino en el Concilio de la Ciudad.

"Honestamente, yo pienso que no lo podía haber hecho sola sin la cooperación de ellos. Aun con las discusiones internas que tuvimos, ellos siempre eran capaces de mirar lo que era lo mejor para la comunidad. Y esto fue una de las cosas que cuide mas arriba siempre en mi mente cuando estuve en el concilio," explico Corrales. "No nomas lo que era bien para mi área, pero lo que era lo mejor para la comunidad entera. Y como siempre, al principio, pensé que seria una posición muy dificultosa, y ahora que miro hacia atrás, realmente fue hecha fácil por los miembros del concilio. Porque como mujer, y como minoritaria, muy bien podía haber sido solo un voto."

"Pero ellos querían cooperar. Tal vez con sus manos torcidas en la espalda, o como quiera, pero lo hicieron. Y todos hicimos algunas cosas, muy buenas cosas."

Midland's First Hispanic City Council Representative

By Jeffrey McDonald

For Oralia Corrales, the roots of her hunger for change, and her commitment to make that change happen, are buried deep in the fields she once worked as a migrant farm laborer.

"Very familiar with migrant work," recalled Corrales. "Unlike Lena and the others, I do know how to do every type of picking, of grapes, to peaches, tomatoes, onions and garlic. I hated potatoes! Hated to pick potatoes and garlic."

But agricultural produce was not the only thing growing in the fields of California. There was also growing unrest over the living and working conditions that migrant workers had to endure.

"Became very familiar with that type of life," said Corrales. "But, first-hand, I was able to see that the living conditions of the people were very inadequate."

"I became very familiar with Cesar Chavez' objectives," she added, referring to the man who organized farm workers, and founded the National Farm Workers Association in 1962. "Still support him very strongly. And probably that's when my first taste of wanting to change occurred."

Upon returning to Midland, Corrales found many ways to effect change in her community. As an interpreter, for example, and as a volunteer with organizations that supported the schools and the churches. She also entered the field of business when she founded the Corrales Insurance Agency.

But one of her greatest challenges would come in the field of politics.

"In the late seventies, I ran for school board," recalled Corrales. "And I won in my area, I would have won probably by over 300 votes, had we had the single member districts. But since it was an at-large, I lost to Ed Runyan by a number of votes."

"I don't really know why in the world anyone would want to go run for the school board! I thought the city council was rough, but when you're dealing with people's kids, that's really rough. I once heard Ted Kerr say that that's a job you take when you're going to get run out of town, and he may be right there! But there were a number of things I was interested in."

Among those things was an opening on the Midland City Council in 1982. When she was first approached by community leaders, Corrales was not completely sure she wanted to fill that position.

"At that particular time, I had just added another 1,200 square feet to my insurance office, had a very large staff, had been a Top 10 insurance agent for my district," explained Corrales. "And there was no reason in the world why I would want to jeopardize that in any way, shape, or form, for a political career."

"But that hunger was there, for change. I had not seen that change. Our community, especially the southside, was deteriorating. More and more, the Hispanic or the black who aspired to have something better, were moving to the west side of the community. And we were not building anything new, that was attractive or a reason to stay. They wanted to live in a neighborhood where there was more safety, where there was more upkeep of the neighborhood."

So Corrales entered the race, one of five minority candidates for the seat on the city council, and she admits that she was unsure of what her chances were. But she was elected, becoming the first Hispanic to serve on the Midland City Council. She would serve for two two-year terms, during which she would be presented with many opportunities to bring about change.

"One thing I had going was my knowledge of the community, having worked in every grass-roots organization, with the black, the Hispanic, and the Anglo community," said Corrales. "One of the areas that I was first successful in was getting the Martin Luther King Park. And then, after that, working on the Senior Citizen's Center. And then getting the first grant to fund the Hispanic Chamber, which was $35,000. And that was really a breakthrough, because it was just as difficult to get 35,000 as it was to, say, get the Martin Luther King Park."

"But I must say that the other members of the city council really rose to the occasion. What we said in private conversation, what we said was all erased. So I had a very good period with the council."

In fact, Corrales would find that overcoming differences, to arrive at solutions that benefited the entire community, was one of the most important skills for a successful term on the city council.

"I think that I can honestly say that we couldn't have done this if it hadn't been for their cooperation. Even with the infighting that we had, they were able to see what was best for the community. And this was one of the things that I kept uppermost in my mind when I was on the city council," explained Corrales. "Not just what was best for my area, but what was best for the entire community. And although, at first, I assumed it would be a very difficult position, as I look back on it, it really was made easy by the members of the city council. Because as a woman, and as a minority, I could have been just one vote."

"But they did want to cooperate. Maybe with their hands twisted back, or whatever, but they did. And we did some good things, very good things!"

Ross kept at it for virtually the rest of his life — organizing grass-roots campaigns for liberal politicians; joining his son, Fred Jr., now a highly regarded organizer himself, in the national campaigns against U.S. policies in Central America; working with anti-nuclear and peace groups.

It was not until four years ago, when Alzheimer's Disease struck, that he finally stopped.

Fred Ross was an organizer's organizer, a trailblazer, a pioneer. He was — and he remains — a vital model for those seeking to empower the powerless and to truly reform, if not perfect, this imperfect society.

"Fred fought more fights and trained more organizers and planted more seeds of righteous indignation against social injustice than anyone we're ever likely to see again," says former UFW general counsel Jerry Cohen.

"He was a giant," says filmmaker, playwright and former UFW activist Luis Valdez. "He was an uncommon common man."

Hombre de Grandeza

castigo — porque si él se niega ha aceptar el castigo, entonces él se convierte en indiferente, y se convierte en anarquista. Había estos individuos en cada etapa y generación quienes estaban dispuestos ha decir, 'Seré obediente a la alta ley.' Es importante mirar que hay veces donde una ley hecha por el hombre es hecha contra la armonía de la ley moral de el universo."

En 1963, el sueño de A. Phillip Randolph, un pionero del siglo veinte del movimiento de leyes civiles, al final seria realizado. Este sueño, una marcha pacifica sobre Washington para demostrar la solaridad de la comunidad minoritaria, y para promover legislación de derechos civiles, traería a King probablemente el momento mas memorable de su carrera. Un momento que se hizo acomodado en la historia Americana, y un parlamento que se acomodo en el vocabulario de nuestra nación y su cultura.

En el calor de una tarde húmeda de Agosto, estando parado sobre los escalones del Lincoln Memorial en Washington, hablándole a una multitud de mas de 200,000, King regreso al tema que él había desarrollado en el pasado, un tema construido alrededor de su visión de el futuro.

"Yo les digo a ustedes, mis amigos, que a pesar de las dificultades y las frustaciones de el momento, todavía tengo un sueño, es un sueño hondamente derivado en el sueño Americano," él dijo. "Tengo un sueño de que un día esta nación se alzara y vivirá en el verdadero razón de su creencia: 'Nosotros poseemos esta verdad para que sea evidencia propia; que todos los hombres ha sido creados igualmente.'"

"Yo tengo un sueño de que un día en las rojas colinas de Georgia los hijos de anteriores esclavos y los hijos de anteriores dueños de esclavos serán capaces de sentarse juntos en la mesa de la hermandad."

King fue, el primero y principal, un predicador, el hijo y nieto de predicadores. Su discurso, él cual ahora muchos contemplan como una de los clásicos del siglo veinte, fue escuchado no solo por la multitud en Washington, pero fue llevado por radio y televisión a millones alrededor del país.

"Cuando nosotros dejamos a la libertad sonar, cuando la dejamos sonar desde cada pueblo y cada aldea, desde cada estado y cada ciudad," King concluyo, "seremos capaces de avanzar ese día cuando todos los hijos de Dios, hombres negros y hombres blancos, Judíos y Gentilicios, Protestantes y Católicos, serán capaces de unir sus manos y cantar en las palabras de este viejo Negro espiritual, 'Libre al final! Libre al final! Gracias a Dios todo poderoso, somos libre al fin!'"

En 1964, King recibió el Premio Nobel de la Paz en reconocimiento a sus proezas como "las primer persona en el mundo occidental que nos enseño como una lucha puede ser manejada sin violencia".

En su discurso de aceptación, King agradeció a el comité Nobel por su reconocimiento, pero también indico que la lucha por igualdad estaba muy lejos de ser terminada. "Estoy consciente de que solamente ayer en Birmingham, Alabama, nuestros hijos, llorando por hermandad, fueron contestados con mangueras de fuego, perros gruñendo y aun con muerte," dijo él. "Estoy consciente de que solamente ayer en Philadelphia, Mississippi, gente joven buscando la seguridad para votar fueron brutalizados y asesinados."

King estaba siempre alerta de el peligroso camino que él había escogido. El peligro de violencia, aun de muerte, estaba todo el tiempo presente. En Junio de 1963, Medgar Evers, un líder del NAACP en Mississippi, fue balaceado y muerto. En Junio de 1964, tres trabajadores de derechos civiles fueron secuestrados y asesinados en Mississippi. En Febrero de 1965, Malcolm X, líder de la organización de Afro-Americanos Unidos, fue asesinado en Nueva York. En Marzo de ese año, James Reeb, un ministro Unitario, fue golpeado a muerte en Alabama. Y en Agosto, una semana de motín en la sección de Watts de Los Angeles, California, dejaron 35 muertos.

"No se que ira ha pasar ahora. Tenemos algunos días dificultosos por venir," dice King. "Pero no me molesta ahora, porque he estado en la tapa de la montaña. Y no me preocupa. Como cualquiera, me gustaría vivir una larga vida; eternidad tiene su lugar. Pero no estoy interesado sobre esto ahora. Solo quiero hacer la voluntad de Dios. Y él me ha ayudado ha subir a la montaña. He mirado sobre ella. Y he mirado la tierra prometida. Tal vez no llegue ahí contigo. Pero quiero que sepas esta noche que nosotros como personas iremos a la tierra prometida."

"Y estoy contento esta noche. No le temo a ningún hombre. Mis ojos han mirado la gloria de la venida del Señor!"

demonstrate the solidarity of the minority community, and to promote civil rights legislation, would provide King with probably the most memorable moment of his career. A moment that became fixed in American history, and a speech that became fixed in the vocabulary of our nation and it's culture.

In the heat of a humid August afternoon, standing upon the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, speaking to a crowd of more than 200,000, King returned to a theme that he had developed in the past, a theme built around his vision of the future.

"I say to you, my friends, that in spite of the difficulties and the frustrations of the moment I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream," he said. "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of it's creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal.'"

"I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave-owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

King was, first and foremost, a preacher, the son and grandson of preachers. His speech, which many now regard as one of the classics of the twentieth century, was heard not only by the crowd in Washington, but was carried by radio and television to millions across the country.

"When we let freedom ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city," King concluded, "we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of that old Negro spiritual, 'Free at last! Free at last! Thank God almighty, we are free at last!'"

In 1964, King received the Nobel Peace Prize in recognition of his achievements as "the first person in the western world to have shown us that a struggle can be waged without violence".

In his acceptance speech, King thanked the Nobel Committee for their recognition, but also pointed out that the struggle for equality was far from over. "I am mindful that only yesterday in Birmingham, Alabama, our children, crying out for brotherhood, were answered with fire hoses, snarling dogs and even death," he said. "I am mindful that only yesterday in Philadelphia, Mississippi, young people seeking to secure the right to vote were brutalized and murdered."

King was always aware of the dangerous path he had chosen to follow. The threat of violence, even death, was always present. In June of 1963, Medgar Evers, a leader of the NAACP in Mississippi, was shot and killed. In June of 1964, three civil rights workers were abducted and murdered in Mississippi. In February of 1965, Malcolm X, leader of the Organization of Afro-American Unity, was murdered in New York. In March of that year, James Reeb, a Unitarian minister, was beaten to death in Alabama. And in August, a week of rioting in the Watts section of Los Angeles, California, left 35 dead.

"I don't know what will happen now. We've got some difficult days ahead," said King. "But it doesn't matter with me now, because I've been to the mountain top. And I don't mind. Like anybody, I would like to live a long life; longevity has its place. But I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will. And He's allowed me to go up to the mountain. And I've looked over. And I've seen the promised land. I may not get there with you. But I want you to know tonight that we as a people will get to the promised land."

"And I'm happy tonight. I'm not fearing any man. Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord!"

On April 4th, 1968, less than 24 hours after he made that speech, Martin Luther King, Jr. was shot and killed by a sniper in Memphis, Tennessee.

Aunque era ficción, el relato de Steinbeck era exacto. Las condiciones en el campamento eran deplorables. También lo eran las impuestas a los migrantes por los cultivadores locales. Pero, gracias al joven Ross, los migrantes pudieron organizarse para ganar mejores condiciones de vida y de trabajo.

Ross había encontrado el trabajo de su vida. El se convertiría en un organizador a tiempo completo : "un incendiario social que anda encendiendo a la gente," diría él a menudo.

El dejó el campamento de migrantes para trabajar con los Japoneses-Americanos en la costa occidental, quienes fueron llevados en masa a campamentos de internamiento durante la Segunda Guerra Mundial. El ayudó a muchos a obtener la libertad encontrándoles empleos en las fábricas escasas de mano de obra en el Medio-Oeste, que producían materiales de importancia vital para la guerra.

Después de la guerra, él regresó al sur de California para ayudar a los negros y a los Mexico-Americanos a luchar contra la segregación en las viviendas y en las escuelas. Ellos lucharon también eficazmente contra la brutalidad policíaca y eligieron al primer Concejal Municipal Hispano de Los Angeles, Edward Roybal. Ross trabajó en Arizona igualmente, ayudando a los indígenas yaquis a obtener alcantarillas, calles pavimentadas, instalaciones médicas y otras necesidades básicas que habían sido denegadas a sus comunidades.

Su trabajo mas ambicioso y probablemente el mas satisfactorio llegó durante sus 15 años de adiestrar a cientos de organizadores y negociadores para el Sindicato de Trabajadores Agrícolas Unidos. Aquéllos a quienes él adiestró eran miembros de las filas sin experiencia y oprimidos durante mucho tiempo..

Ross continuó en lo mismo durante virtualmente el resto de su vida — organizando campañas populares para los polfticos liberales; uniéndose a su hijo Fred Jr., que ahora es un organizador muy respetado él mismo, en las campañas nacionales contra los cursos de acción de los Estados Unidos en la América Central; y trabajando con los grupos opuestos a la energía atómica y con los pacifistas.

No fue sino hasta hace cuatro años, cuando lo azotó el mal de Alzheimer, que él se detuvo por último.

Fred Ross fue un organizador de organizadores, un precursor, un innovador. El fue— y continúa siendo—un modelo vital para los que procuran habilitar a los impotentes y reformar verdaderamente, si no perfeccionar, a esta sociedad imperfecta.

"Fred libró mas combates y adiestró a mas organizadores y sembró mas semillas de indignación recta contra la injusticia social que cualquiera a quien hayamos de ver alguna vez" hace notar Jerry Cohen, que fue antes el asesor legal general del Sindicato de Trabajadores Agrícolas Unidos.

"El fue un gigante," dice el cineasta, dramaturgo y ex-activista del Sindicato, Luis Valdéz. "El fue un hombre común excepcional."
