OPEC can't agree on cuts in production

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC oil ministers failed early today to agree on a production cut that analysts said could boost prices, officials said.

The oil ministers said they would resume their debate tonight.

Eight of OPEC's 13 member nations backed a proposed two-month cut of 300,000 barrels a day in the cartel's production that analysts said could raise gasoline prices by 2.5 cents a gallon.

But Gholamreza Aghazadeh, the Iranian oil minister, said Saudi Arabia and three other Persian Gulf Arab states rejected the plan. The Saudis proposed that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cut only about 200,000 barrels a day, he said.

The Saudi idea was rejected by the eight-country majority, and the talks adjourned in the early hours Sunday. The ministers have been meeting since Thursday.

"We're still studying the issue," said Hisham Nazer, the Saudi oil minister, as he left the 3½-hour meeting. He declined to say more.

The other three holdouts are Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, whose oil ministers also have said they needed more time to consult with their governments. The 13th member not voting on the proposal is Iraq, which normally does not follow OPEC's production quotas.

The Venezuelan oil minister, Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, said the cartel leaders were still stuck "on the same questions."

"We are giving time to the four (gulf Arab) countries to think again about the proposal," Hernandez said.

Several officials, including Iran's Aghazadeh, said the Saudis insisted any cuts in production be shared equally rather than following the usual practice of assigning cuts in accordance with each member's share of current OPEC production.

In other words the Saudis insisted that Gabon, which pumps only 150,000 barrels a day, cut as much as Saudi Arabia, which produces 4.3 million barrels daily.

Analysts and OPEC officials said the proposal to cut OPEC production by 300,000 barrels, or 2 percent, could boost oil prices by as much as $1 a barrel, meaning an increase of 2.5 cents per gallon at the gasoline pump.

OPEC oil currently is selling for $14 to $16 per 42-gallon barrel, well below its target of $18 a barrel.

The Saudis' proposal to cut output by 200,000 barrels a day would match the reduction that a group of six non-OPEC producers has offered to make in tandem with the cartel, according to delegation sources.

They reported the Saudis said they would be willing to accept the 300,000 figure if the non-OPEC group raised its cutback offer to that level.

The six non-OPEC nations include Mexico, Egypt, China, Oman, Angola and Malaysia.

Taken together, the cuts would represent a loss of only about 1 percent of oil supplies in the non-communist world.

Normally, a cutback that small would have little or no effect on prices. But analysts said the psychology of the market is such that any agreement on production restraint between OPEC and the non-OPEC group would give at least a modest boost to prices.

Paul McDonald, a London-based oil consultant, said prices could rise as much as $1 a barrel in the very short term.

"It's sheer genius, as far as getting them over the next two months" when oil markets were expected to be weak, McDonald said in a telephone interview.

MARC joins house project

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Christmas In April volunteer and MarcWood resident Randy Roberts, 26, dumps old shingles into a trash can during Saturday's CIA workday. Roberts and other MarcWood residents teamed up with Northwestern Baptist Church volunteers to repair the roof of Cassie Johnson's southside residence. Working alongp with Roberts are Kevin Torgenson, 23, and Wayne Smith, 20.

Christmas in April lets men give back to their community

The wealth of fellowship seen Saturday spread beyond the homes receiving their annual spring shower of care to the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens.

Midland's Christmas in April this year attracted five or so young men from MARC, who worked with a dozen members of the Northwestern Baptist Church.

"We have a special ministerial class that some of the residents of MarcWood attend," the Rev. James Alldredge, Northwestern's pastor, Christmas in April team coordinator and MARC board member, said.

"They're used to working with these people, so it was a natural combination," he added.

David Brown, another MARC board member, said the joint effort was a first for both groups, but added that they plan to make it an annual tradition because this "is an opportunity for them to give something back to the community because they've received so much.

"They're really doing a good job," he observed.

Cassie Johnson, a widow who is confined to a wheelchair, was the one who benefitted from the joint CIA work Saturday. The group from MARC and Northwestern Baptist came to her southside house to do some painting and replace the roof.

"I'm just so happy and excited about this," she said. "They can really go to town."

Compared to some, Mrs. Johnson's wood-frame house required only a few major repairs. It had a leaky roof and its three bedrooms were in need of new paint.

"They were supposed to do the work last year, but I was in the hospital. Thankfully, they didn't forget Cassie Johnson this time," she said.

As workers from Northwestern Baptist tore off the old and installed new shingles, the MarcWood team — with shovels in hand — cleaned up debris that piled up on the ground.

Inside, the church women painted the three bedrooms that had sustained heavy water damage from the leaky roof.

MARC and Northwestern were among an estimated 2,000 to 3,000 from at least 80 civic groups, business representatives and church groups that spilled out into the city's neighborhoods on behalf of the 16-year-old effort.

Christmas In April — which marshals donated labor and material to repair the homes of the elderly and handicapped — has become the city's largest charitable organization.

One of the biggest projects was tackled Saturday by members of Texas Utilities & Electric Co. Among the items on their list: a new roof, windows, siding and a new paint job for another southside residence.

By getting involved with Northwestern Baptist, Brown asserted that MARC is making a concerted effort to "help people with mental retardation become contributing members of society and not just be on the receiving end."

He said, "We're trying help them realize that they need to do volunteer work."

23 candidates vying for board

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a six-part series examining the local elections that will be held Saturday.

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

With a relieved but weary twinkle in his eye, school board president Fred Newman leaned back in his board chair last Tuesday and explained to a student's mother the new school board would have to address her problem later this month.

Though spots are open in Saturday's local election on the Midland County college and hospital boards, the Midland City Council and the Greenwood Independent School District, it is the Midland Independent School District race that citizens pounced on when filing time occurred earlier this spring.

A record 23 candidates are vying for the seven single member district school board seats.

Midland County Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert predicts runoffs in all but the District 1 school board race since no less than three people face each other in the District 2 through 7 races.

One reason the 23 may be so thirsty for a change on the school board is because they haven't voted in an MISD election since 1985.

That year a battle erupted pitting local minority rights groups against the school board.

The League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council filed suit in Federal District Judge Lucius Bunton's court charging that the minority vote in Midland was diluted by the school district's method of at-large elections.

The case moved out of Bunton's court after two rulings in favor of the minority groups and into the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans at the school board's request. Twice there a five-member judiciary panel agreed with Bunton.

But not until the entire 15-member appellate body handed down a decision mirroring the four previous ones did the school board concede defeat...three years and nearly $300,000 in court costs later.

Bunton ruled during the ordeal that school board elections could not be held until the suit was finalized.

Every current school board member except Betsy Robinson — Newman, Mike Conaway, Bill Jackson, Joe Reed and Ron Britton — is serving on expired terms.

Mrs. Robinson's and former trustee Joe Golding's terms were to expire this year. Golding resigned from the board earlier this year to attend college in Alpine and his seat has been vacant since.

Understanding the differences between the 23 candidates may have proved to be a difficult and confusing task for some Midlanders.

Rumors abound of special interest groups — one comprised of MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi supporters and another in favor of candidates sympathetic to citizens miffed at past board decisions — attempting to sway the election.

In public, however, most of the 23 attest to their disapproval of the splintering effect special interest groups could have on the promise of a fresh and unified new board.

District 1 candidates are James Fuller and Edia Hernandez; District 2 candidates are Tony Carrillo, Adela Marmolejo and Clarence "Putty" Zachery; District 3 candidates are Don Aldridge, Ken Morrison and Price Parker; District 4 candidates are Jim Bullta, Joe Chavez and Jackie Hamilton; District 5 candidates are Roy Marshall, incumbent Betsy Robinson, George Staley and Robbie Warley; District 6 candidates are Dianne Anderson, Mona Craig, incumbent Joe Reed and Bob Rich; and District 7 candidates are J. Murphy Horton, John Kennedy, Ken Marks and Connie Reeves.

Clutching their MISD voting rights lawsuit in hand, minority rights groups turned to the Midland County Hospital District this spring with the same quest — the elimination of an at-large method of election.

Citing the facts they wanted more minority representation on the board and didn't want to go through a similar lengthy and expensive lawsuit, hospital directors acquiesced to the minority rights groups' desire.

The hospital district enlarged itself from five to seven members and implemented a single member district plan that will evolve over the next two years.

However, the creation of single member districts didn't do much for hospital district candidate turnout.

Three incumbent hospital district directors — James Ramsoure, Mrs. Margaret Purvis and Mrs. Pat Estes — are running unopposed in their races this year.

The hospital district owns Midland Memorial Hospital and is charged with the responsibility of levying taxes to cover the cost of treating indigent patients in Midland County.

There are no stinging issues in the hospital district race, though the MCHD is being sued by the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital in Midland for charges incurred by an indigent patient transferred from MMH to the private hospital.

No court date has been set in the hospitals' lawsuit.

Races look just as routine in the Midland City Council and Midland Junior College District contests as they do in the hospital district's.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, and council members Robert Rendall and Bob Monaghan are running unopposed in their quest to return to two-year terms on the city's ruling body.

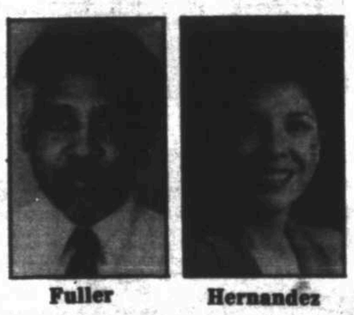

Monaghan was sworn in to the council last Tuesday to fill the seat vacated by former Councilman Kelly Fish who left the body after promising his family he would retire from public life.

Candidates say election will lead to understanding of issues

By JULIE HILLRICHS

Regardless of who wins, the two candidates seeking the District 1 seat on Midland's school board believe the election of minorities will lead to a greater understanding of issues important to blacks and Hispanics.

Fuller

Hernandez

Edia Hernandez and James Fuller, who were instrumental in the fight to get single-member district representation, are concentrating on such issues as the increasing dropout rate and the declining minority teacher population in their respective campaigns.

Fuller, who has studied and worked in both integrated and segregated school systems, said desegregation is "fine," but believes the minority communities have lost many qualified teachers in the process.

"We've had teachers who were in the community, of the community and part of the community. They knew our parents extremely well and the discipline, the motivation and the presence of these role models were positive things.

Midland man shot to death after bar fight

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 36-year-old Midland man was shot to death after a fight that broke out at a crowded south Midland bar spilled into a parking lot Saturday evening, Midland police said.

The shooting occurred moments after another man was stabbed inside the bar, officers at the scene said.

Francisco Lozano, 1109 S. Loraine St., was charged with murder and jailed at the police department late Saturday. He was ordered held in lieu of $40,000 bond by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

The victim's name was not immediately released because next of kin had not been notified, White said.

Plane on which Gramm traveling fills with smoke

ODESSA (AP) — Smoke from a cockpit fire filled a small plane carrying Sen. Phil Gramm Saturday, but the plane was able to land without incident.

The six-passenger Kingair plane carried Gramm, state Republican Party chairman George Strake, Gramm's aide Alan Hill and the pilot and co-pilot.

About 15 minutes after taking off from Austin, an apparent fire and resulting smoke spewed from a lever between the pilot and co-pilot's seats and began to fill the plane, according to Hill.

Pilot Saeed Arabzadegan turned back to Austin and requested an emergency landing, but the smoke stopped and the crew then continued on to Odessa, Hill said.

MISD

"To solve the problem, we're going to have to look at hiring more qualified minority instructors to function in those capacities," he said.

Mrs. Hernandez, 45, worries that the present MISD board is unaware of the severity of the dropout problem and doesn't have accurate statistics to reflect the true rate.

"We (minorities) have been talking about it for a long time and have tried to work within the system to solve the problem. But we've had the doors closed to us," she added.

Both candidates advocate a re-assessment of the school curriculum to ensure that teachers become more sensitive to the issues that affect minorities in the classroom.

A native Midlander, Mrs. Hernandez wants an on-going assessment of the Chapter 1 elementary schools that receive federal funding for regular, handicapped, neglected, delinquent and migrant students.

Such a study would ensure that "blacks, Anglos, and Hispanics are getting the quality and consistency that we're all talking about," she said.

Fuller, who is president of the Midland chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, encourages school administrators to celebrate the achievements of blacks and Hispanics in the curriculum and not just on special days and months of the year.

"That's why we have Black History Month: Because of the indifference educationally speaking that the books, the curriculum and the various school systems across the country exercise," he said.

In addition, the candidate urges a re-evaluation of the Gifted Education Midland program so that students' artistic talents — in addition to their academic test scores — are taken into consideration.

Fuller, 45, began his teaching career with the Lubbock Independent School District and now teaches English at Midland College. He's suspect of the MISD's record of tracking students through remedial courses.

"There are students who are put in remedial courses when they really shouldn't be there," he said. "It's not because those kids aren't capable of learning, it's just that somebody has a preconceived notion that if they don't do well, aren't attentive or don't pass a certain standardized test, they should automatically be put in another track."

The candidate maintains that sort of tracking destroys the individual's self-esteem. He asserts more teachers and administrators must exhibit a genuine concern for students and not just go through the motions of saying they are concerned about quality education.

"A lot of people have come to realize that's part of the rhetoric of being a board member, but now they want to see board members put up or shut up. It's just that simple," Fuller said.

If elected, Mrs. Hernandez — president of the Permian Basin League of United Latin American Citizens — wants to open the line of communication with parents, teachers, students and the remainder of her constituency, which she believes is the present board's greatest failure.

Both candidates vow to schedule forums across the entire district to bring more parents into the system. They also advocate conducting MISD's twice-monthly board meetings during the evening rather than the afternoon to generate more community participation.

Fuller, who serves on the district's community panel publicly supporting the upcoming $11.8 million bond election, said it's imperative that voters authorize money to be spent on new classrooms.

"In my district, I'm very concerned that the bond issue passes because some of those schools (Milam, Crockett, Travis and South) haven't had a lot done to them in a long time," he said.

Although Mrs. Hernandez supports the bond issue, she worries that it won't be enough to meet the long-term needs of the school district.

"I don't think we're going to get all of the money we really need and that we may have to go back to the voters for more in the very near future," she said.

Low morale among MISD teachers is another issue critical to both candidates, who blame much of the problem on a lack of discipline brought about by the overload of paperwork and an excessive student-teacher ratio.

Those MISD teachers who haven't received a salary increase in three years, will likely get a raise under the new board, both candidates observed.

"Quality should begin in the classroom and the ones who come into contact with our most precious possessions are the teachers," said Mrs. Hernandez. "We're going to have to put our money where our mouth is."

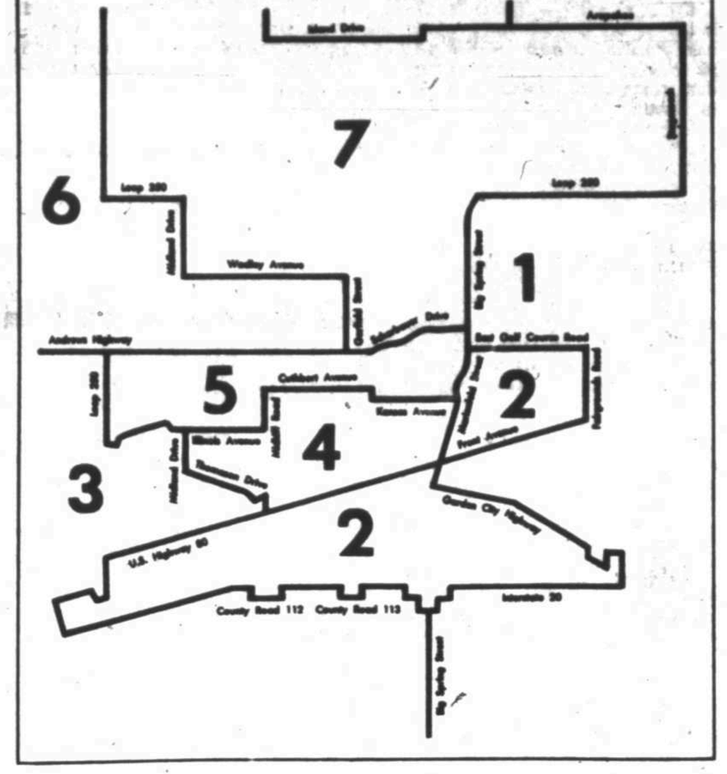

Fuller expects renewed support for the classroom teacher in the area of student discipline.

"Discipline can't be applied unless there is a definite guarantee from the administration, counselors and the board that the teachers will be supported when those situations arise," he said.

Both candidates also oppose the MISD's "24-hour Rule," which penalizes students in extra-curricular activities if they are caught smoking, drinking alcohol or using drugs before and after school.

They charge that the rule singles out students in extra-curricular programs, obligates teachers to be on the job 24-hours per day, shifts the responsibility of raising children from the parent to the educational institution and is inconsistent in terms of the severity of the punishment levied against violators.

"Some kids are suspended and others are sort of tapped on the hand and are back in school before you know it," said Fuller. "The policy as it reads is much more stringent and severe than that. But in practice, it seems to me that it depends on who you are and even who your parents are."

Feedback positive for bond election

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A projected school population surge plus a legislative mandate for smaller elementary class sizes means that local voters will be casting ballots on an $11.8 million Midland Independent School District bond election Saturday.

Community feedback has been positive since school district officials announced the proposal earlier this year.

Endorsements have come from the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Retired Teachers Association, the Midland Classroom Teachers Association, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Educators Association.

The only public dispute arose in mid-March when local architects claimed it wasn't fair that a Fort Worth design firm got the go-ahead to draw preliminary conceptual plans for the job without their knowledge that bids were even being accepted.

The matter was alleviated somewhat when a new board policy concerning notification of Midland architects was created several weeks later.

Bonds needed to finance the addition of 87 new classrooms, seven libraries and a 15-classroom primary school will be issued for a two-fold reason, school district officials have maintained.

Statistics reveal at least 2,000 new students in kindergarten through the sixth grade are expected over the next five years.

Last May, the elementary enrollment stood at 10,677, MISD figures indicate. Five months into the current school year, almost 600 students had been added to that same population.

"This is no isolated trend," bond election literature states.

The district also needs the new space because the state government requires it, supporters claim.

House Bill 72, a sweeping educational reform bill passed in 1985, set maximum classroom size limits. By the time the 1988-89 school year rolls around, no more than 22 students may be enrolled in a kindergarten through fourth grade class.

MISD has never been able to comply with the mandate because it didn't have the classroom space.

The district has received special waivers from the Texas Education Agency, the governmental body enforcing the law, since it went into effect.

However, time is up.

No waivers are available for classes through second grade, a memo for Education Commissioner William Kirby to MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi states.

Waivers are available for the 1988-89 school year for the 22-1 mandate in grades three and four. MISD has applied for this waiver because the new classrooms — should the bond election pass May 7 — won't be completed until at least January 1989.

But without the additional classrooms for grades three and four, MISD's state funding and accreditation are in jeopardy, bond election literature claims.

Twelve elementary schools are in line for additions should the bond issue pass.

The district's construction list includes the addition of eight classrooms at Henderson, Pease, Bowie, Burnet, Long and Travis elementary schools; nine classrooms at Jones Elementary; six classrooms at Milam, South and Lamar elementary schools and 10 classrooms at Crockett and Bonham elementary schools.

New libraries are slated for Bowie, Milam, South, Lamar, Crockett, Long and Travis elementary schools.

All the additions will include new offices, staff workrooms, storage, restrooms and a multi-purpose room for physical education, health and fine arts activities.

In addition to the additions, the construction of a 15-classroom primary school in northwest Midland is proposed to relieve overcrowding at Rusk, Santa Rita and Parker elementary schools.

The cost of each elementary addition is to be between nearly $700,000 and $800,000. The new primary school — slated for kindergarten through grade three — should cost about $1.8 million.

Though the district owns acreage in northwest Midland, the price of a new piece of land that may or may not hold the new primary school is included in the bond package so that MISD can afford to buy more land if the land it owns now is not geographically acceptable for the primary school construction.

Adding an additional $2.7 million for fees, furniture and the possible purchase of another tract of land brings the total to $11.8 million — the district's largest bond election since the first one was held in 1947.

MISD says general funds can't be used for the construction plans because the district has already skimmed $2.2 million out of its reserves to offset the tax rate it has maintained the past two years.

The total $59 million MISD budget doesn't contain the money necessary to construct the 102 new classrooms, officials have said.

Although MISD is making on promises on keeping the "maintenance and operations" faction of its total 79.9 cent-tax rate steady should the bond election pass, it claims the "debt service" part of the tax rate — $.097 per $100 of valuation — won't increase if the district's bonded indebtedness is extended through the year 2000.

Preliminary statistics show that a penny increase in the operation and maintenance tax translates into 10-15 teachers salaries, district officials claim.

Some Midland citizens have wondered why the district shuttered West Elementary this fall only to turn around and ask for money to build a hoard of new classrooms.

District officials respond that West will be used next year for special programs, but contend that its 13 classrooms couldn't adequately address the expected population surges.

MISD officials claim the population proposals are conservative and that there is little to no chance too many classrooms will be built. They cite their past projections over the past 15 years have never been more than 4 percent off.

The current school board has called for the bond election, but it will be the new school board — elected the same day the bond issue is made or broken — who calls the specific shots.

Holding a separate election for the bond election would have cost an additional $12,000, district officials say.

MISD has held 22 bond elections since 1947 and only three have failed.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Gusty winds and warm temperatures with a chance of thunderstorms are included in the forecast for Sunday and the first of the week, according to National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

Some morning cloudiness is expected Sunday, becoming partly cloudy and windy. High will be in the upper 80s, with winds expected from the south from 15 to 25 mph, increasing to 20 to 30 mph and gusty by midday.

Sunday night will be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low will be in the mid 60s.

Monday will be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the low 80s.

The record high for Saturday's date was 96, set in 1948, which was 16 degrees warmer than the high recorded of 80. The record low of 34, set in 1970, was 20 degrees cooler than Saturday's low of 54.

STATE

A large high-pressure over the eastern United States was keeping Texas dry Saturday despite a few lingering clouds from Central Texas to the Gulf Coast.

The rains that had covered much of the state as the week ended had cleared by Saturday as the system pushed the clouds slowly across the state.

Temperatures Saturday evening were in the 50s in the Panhandle with 60s and 70s reported in most places. The warm spots were in the far west and along the Rio Grande where it remained in the 80s into the evening.

Mostly cloudy skies are expected to return to the state Sunday as the chance increases for widely scattered thunderstorms in parts of West Texas late Sunday afternoon. Some of those storms could be severe, the weather service said.

NATION

Cold air moving into the Northwest triggered showers Saturday while a storm system developed over the central Rockies, and thunderstorms were scattered over the South.

Showers were scattered along the coast of Oregon and northern California and over central Montana and northwestern Utah.

Snow showers spread over the Oregon Cascades, with near-zero visibility reported at Sexton Summit. An advisory for 6 or more inches of snow was posted and snow also developed in sections of the Sierra Nevada range in northern California.

the mountains and northern parts of Arizona.

Snow advisories were posted into early Sunday for the mountains and foothills of Montana and for far western Wyoming. A winter storm watch was posted into Sunday for Wyoming's Big Horn and Wind River mountains.

In the South, showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the central Gulf Coast region through much of Florida. Strong thunderstorm wind caused about $100,000 damage to 15 to 20 trailer homes in Venice, Fla., police Lt. Jim Hanks said.

In Boca Raton, Fla., wind threw a car 50 feet, damaged several homes, snapped power lines and blew windows out of stores and cars, authorities said.

In the draw

The driver of this pickup truck who was believed uninjured apparently fled after he ended up in the draw in the 500 block of Scharbauer Drive, Midland police said. A wrecker was called to the scene after the 9:45 p.m. accident, police said.

OPEC

By June, oil demand in the industrialized countries is expected to pick up a little, putting less pressure on OPEC to restrain its production, he said.

If the Vienna talks ended without agreement, however, prices would be expected to fall sharply, analysts said.

The proposed mutual cuts in oil output were easy for most OPEC members to accept, partly because they are so small and of such short duration that it would be virtually impossible to verify whether any of the cuts were actually made.

"The whole thing is a nonsense" in terms of actually changing the balance of supply and demand, McDonald said.

OPEC leaders insisted, however, that the proposed cuts would be important.

DEATH

The man was shot three times just after 7 p.m. in the parking lot of the La Bamba Club, 1804 Rankin Highway, witnesses at the scene told officers. He died on the way to Midland Memorial Hospital after paramedics were unable to revive him, according to police reports.

Juan Rodriguez, 27, of Midland was stabbed at least three times, at least once in the abdomen, and by late Saturday night had undergone several hours of emergency surgery, the MMH night nursing supervisor said.

Witnesses told officers a fight "between five or six" persons broke out in the bar about 7 p.m., and after Rodriguez was stabbed — and left bleeding on the barroom floor — several people ran outside.

Moments later, the victim was shot twice in the chest and once in the abdomen with a .22-caliber rifle, White said.

"We believe that after the fight moved outside, someone retrieved the weapon from a vehicle in the parking lot," and shot the man, White said.

After the incident, police cordoned off the area, but late Saturday had not located the weapon used in the stabbing, the spokesman said.

An hour after the shooting, Lozano drove to the police department on Texas Street, walked in and said he shot someone, an officer said.

Detectives — who found the rifle believed used in the slaying at Lozano's home — said late Saturday they were not sure why the fight broke out, and did not know the relationship between the two victims and Lozano.

No one was arrested at the scene, and police had no suspects in the stabbing, White said.

PLANE

The plane landed without incident, and Gramm was 40 minutes late for his scheduled afternoon address to the Texas Associated Press Broadcasters meeting here.

"It was getting hard to see in there," Hill said of the smoke.

To help filter out the smoke and breathe, the pilot used a T-shirt presented to Gramm in Austin, where he had spoken to high school students.

Gramm treated the incident lightly, joking that Arabzadegan, who is a naturalized U.S. citizen, "used to work for the ayatollah."

"We passed around the undershirt so everyone could breathe through the undershirt," Gramm said. "We were able to get the smoke out of the plane."

Hill said mechanics in Odessa were checking the plane while Gramm addressed the broadcasters.

ELECTION

Fish faced painful public scrutiny recently, he has said, because of criminal charges stemming from separate charges of felony theft and false identification as a peace officer.

Monaghan's seat was up for re-election this spring.

Incumbents Parker Humes, Gloria Hinojosa and Bill Kleine are running unopposed in the MJCD race. Taxes levied by the college district go toward operation of the college.

College board terms are six-years long.

In the GISD race, three seats are open on the seven-member board who is elected to solely at-large positions.

Glen Evans faces incumbent Don Morgan in the Place 7 race and John Underwood seeks to oust incumbent James Donnell in the Place 6 race.

Three newcomers, Pete Wilkenson, James Mashburn and Johnny Womack, are running in the Place 2 race.

U.S. lifted ban on travel

On March 15, 1971, the United States lifted a 20-year restriction on travel to Red China.

Texas banks lost nearly $2 billion in 1987

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — Banks in Texas, led by losing performances at major bank-holding companies, lost nearly $2 billion during 1987, according to data compiled by Sheshunoff & Co. in Austin.

Nationwide, 82 percent of all banks were profitable, up from 80 percent in 1986, said Alex Sheshunoff, founder of the firm bearing his name.

"The disastrouse experience in the Southwest should serve as a warning sign of what would happen," he told the Dallas Morning News.

In Dallas County, only 35 percent of the area's institutions generated income before extraordinary items last year, and overall, they posted a $700.9 million loss, according to the data.

Harris County, which preceeded Dallas into the statewide recession, saw 29 percent of its institutions at either breakeven or profitable before charges.

Among all unprofitable banks, 43 percent were in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, the firm reported.

While the dollar amount of the Texas losses does not appear surprising, the depth of the problems plaguing the area's financial institutions is, said Sheshunoff.

"Nationwide, the rapid growth in real estate lending is a continuing cause for concern," he said.

While Texas banks lost $2 billion, the nation's 13,636 federally insured banks earned $3.3 billion — an earnings decline of 80 percent from 1986 levels and the industry's worst performance since the 1930s.

Dallas County bank assets totaled $42.6 billion, down 11.7 percent, while Tarrant County institutions stood at $11.2 billion, down 6.5 percent.

A total of 11.7 percent of loans were non-performing in Dallas County, compared with 10.67 percent in Harris County and 6.2 percent in Tarrant County.

Thousands may be exposed to viral infection

FORT WORTH (AP) — Some 11,000 people, including former President Gerald Ford, were being advised to contact their physicians after eating meals from the Worthington Hotel when it was discovered they may have been exposed to hepatitis.

Worthington spokesman Paul Lazzaro said people who attended banquets at the hotel between April 15 and April 27 may have been exposed to the viral infection, which causes fever, jaundice and tiredness.

A food handler in the banquet kitchen, who has worked at the hotel for two years, was diagnosed as having the infection, Lazzaro said. The food handler has been placed on leave, he said.

Former President Ford spoke — and ate — last week at a luncheon to launch Security Partners Inc., a new company head by Joel K. Glenn, vice president of security for Bass Enterprises in Fort Worth. The luncheon was at the Tarrant County Convention Center, but it was catered by the Worthington.

Ford's chief of staff in Rancho Mirage, Calif., said that the ex-president's office was contacted Friday morning and that Ford would check with his doctors about getting an injection.

Legalization lines lengthen

Associated Press

Lines of people with hopes for better futures have formed outside legalization centers throughout the state as the deadline approaches to apply for amnesty.

An estimated 3,000 people submitted applications at a Houston center Saturday and about 3,500 are expected Sunday, said Richard S. Rios, director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service legalization center.

The 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act allows undocumented aliens until midnight Wednesday to apply for legal status. To qualify, undocumented aliens must prove continuous residency in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982. A push for a proposed deadline extension failed in the Senate late in the week.

The Houston office was open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

"Monday, Tuesday, it's going to be outrageous," Rios said. "The crowd will grow as the deadline approaches," Rios said.

The legalization center in Arlington is serving amnesty-seekers around the clock from 6 a.m. Monday to midnight Wednesday. By the time it opened at 6 a.m. Saturday, lines of illegal aliens were camped outside the entrance.

Among those huddled against the building wall in the chilly air were three men — the youngest is 19 — who said they are eager to gain amnesty.

"It's a little safer, and a little relieving," said Pete R. Gonzales, an INS security officer who translated for the men, all of whom were born in Mexico. "They won't worry about people...telling them, 'We will call immigration.'"

More than 1,000 applications — more than three times the designed capacity — were being handled daily at the center late last week.

"We expect it to escalate from now until the end of the program," said Jim Ward, chief legalization officer.

Officials in Arlington and Houston have streamlined the application process by accepting forms and fees, rather than reviewing the applications. A card that substitutes as a work permit is given to the applicants, along with interview appointments. During the interview, the applicants must present supporting documentation.

Roberto Escamilla, legalization adjudicator with INS legalization office in Austin said his office expected to see 500 to 600 people by the time the office closed at 6 p.m. Saturday. He said the office would stay open later, if necessary, to see everyone.

"It's the same as usual. Lots of people are rushing to get in," he said. "They're trying to beat that deadline."

The Austin office has handled close to 16,000 people since the program began, he said. Have been averaging 200 a day. Office has been open weekends since mid-March. Tomorrow, plans are to be open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Escamilla said people are coming from the Dallas and Houston offices to Austin. The wait here is a couple of hours at most, he said. "The phones are ringing off the hook. We can't even keep up with them."

Soviets say Moscow is worried

AUSTIN (AP) — A delegation of Soviets concluded a weeklong conference at the University of Texas saying that Moscow is deeply worried about its economic situation.

However, conference members had an upbeat perspective on the future of Soviet-U.S. relations.

The Soviet delegation met in Austin with their U.S. counterparts for the 16th Dartmouth Conference, a series of unofficial gatherings every two years. The first was organized in 1960 at Dartmouth University in Hanover, N.H.

On Friday, the Soviets spoke mainly on reforms spearheaded by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Nikolay Shmelev of Moscow's Institute of U.S. and Canada Studies said the dire Soviet economic situation made the reforms inevitable.

"For decades, we developed with cheap labor force. We don't have a cheap labor force any more. We developed with cheap natural resources. We don't have cheap natural resources any more," Shmelev said.

Shmelev predicted widespread economic changes. He drew a gasp from the crowded auditorium when he predicted free-market economic forces would produce 75 percent of the Soviet economy by the mid-1990s.

The initial public euphoria over the loosening of economic controls by Moscow's central planners has faded, Shmelev said. Now, he said, managers and workers are starting to realize it will be hard to overcome entrenched bureaucracies.

"We produce six times as many tractors as the United States, but we buy your wheat. You don't buy any of ours," Shmelev said. "And how are the reforms succeeding? With difficulty. So far, it is a bloodless struggle, thank goodness, but it is an important one."

Shmelev said the Soviets must stop setting prices for the country's scarce consumer goods below their actual cost, and admitted leaders privately worry about what the public reaction will be if subsidies are phased out.

Workers are now electing managers of farms, factories and other economic institutions, but the new openness is little comfort to laborers who may be laid off if leaders board up inefficient factories.

George Arbatov, chairman of the Soviet group and a member of the government's ruling Central Committee, said five decades of arms races, wars and lack of cooperation have sapped the strength of the United States and Soviet Union.

"We have noticed that your competitors gained the upper hand in the world market, and we have noticed that our economy suffered," Arbatov said.

"Of course, our model of economy worked well in getting ready for the war against the Germans and during reconstruction, but somehow we got stuck," he said.

Superdelegates withhold Dukakis support

AUSTIN (AP) — Some of Texas' "superdelegates" are withholding support for Michael Dukakis in the hope of influencing his choice for a running mate, supporters of the presidential contender said.

Dukakis supporters say Texans want the Massachusetts governor to pick someone like U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas or U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia.

"I'm still uncommitted," said Democratic National Committee member Ed Miller of Texarkana. "I'm still concerned we have a balanced ticket, a Southerner who is considered moderate to conservative."

Dukakis is courting the superdelegates because their votes could be the key to victory at the convention, where no candidate is likely to have a mathematical lock on the nomination after the primary season ends.

The 30-member Texas delegation is made up of 14 national committee members, 15 U.S. representatives and Bentsen.

Bentsen urges halt of building 'twin plants'

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Saturday he is asking United States trade negotiators to a halt a trend toward building "maquiladora" manufacturing facilities deep in the interior of Mexico instead of along the border between the two countries.

The maquiladora facitities, also known as "twin plants," receive favorable U.S. tax and tariff treatment on the theory that they will improve economic conditions along the U.S.-Mexican border.

Bentsen, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, released a letter he wrote to U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter asking him to bring up the subject of these "mock maquiladora" plants during the trade negotiations now underway with Mexico.

The twin plants, also known as "in bound" plants, located primarily in Mexico, are used to assemble manufacturing components made in the United States. The components then are re-exported to twin plants in the United States for final sale.

Provided that output from these plants is exported from Mexico, the Mexican goverhment allows duty-free importation of raw materials. Under a 23-year old law, when the products reenter the United States tariffs are imposed only on the value added in Mexico.

Mexico recently relaxed restrictions on foreign investment for the maquiladora plants. Over 700 such plants employ about 200,000 workers, according to Tom Holt, writing in the Mexico-United States Report last fall.

In a taped interview for Texas television, Bentsen said he has supported favorable tax treatment to plants located on the border where they can benefit the economy on both sides.

Bentsen said, however, he sees no reason why maquiladora factories built deep in the interior of Mexico instead of along the border should have tariff and other tax breaks that the United States gives the border plants.

At least 11 such plants have been built in the Yucatan, on the sea coast 1,000 miles south of Brownsville, Texas. In his letter to Yeutter, Bentsen encouraged him to "address mock maquiladoras before they become epidemic as other regions in Mexico emulate Yucatan. A dozen more plants are envisioned...with four large industrial parks now under development...Local officials brag that up to 40 maquiladoras will be in place by the end of the year and 200 firms within five years in the Yucatan."

While such plants are legal, Bentsen said they receive favorable tax treatment but provide no development along the border.

"We have high unemployment along that border and low per capita income. Much of the wages paid on the Mexican side are spent in shops on the U.S. side and provide jobs," Bentsen said. "But I have always said that I don't want just a plant on the Mexican side and a billboard on the U.S. side. Now they're moving some of them so far into Mexico that we don't even get the billboard on our side."

Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees

District	List your qualifications for office. (75 words)	What policies and programs would you support to address the drop-out problem and to accomplish higher academic achievement in the MISD? (100 words)	With seven single-member districts now making up the school board, how do you plan to work for the best interest of all Midland school children? (100 words)
1 Edia Hernandez	Native Midlander. Bilingual. Seventeen years of experience in the oil industry has provided me with a strong background in business, accounting and government regulations interpretation. I have been active in church, school and civic organizations. The years of community involvement has enhanced my sensitivity to the needs of this community. As a parent and grandparent, I have a vested interest, concern and commitment to quality education.	To ensure quality education in all schools, and at the same time work to reduce the drop-out rate, in-depth ongoing assessment of school programs should be a priority. Principals and teachers should be allowed input on the needs of their schools. Calander year should leave room for schools to implement pilot programs to serve their needs. Recruitment of special master teachers for Chanpter 1 Schools should be ongoing. For better communication: In each Chapter 1 schools, a person should be hired to train parents and make home visits. Bilingual teacher's aids and attendance clerks should be considered in all schools.	Problems existing in our school system are not restricted to one district. However, because of neglect to some schools, some districts will need more consideration than others. Essential needs being met in one school will not be restricted to students living in that district. The cluster program brings children of different districts together. Lower standard programs in some schools have contributed to the drop-out rate. Striving for accomplishment of higher academic achievement in all schools, for all students, should have always been a priority. Single-member districts will bring the needed accountability of its board members.
James E. Fuller	San Angelo Junior College (ASU) — A.A., 1963; North Texas State University — B.A., 1966; Texas Tech University — M.A., 1974; postgraduate work. I have taught for twenty-two years — 9 years in public education and 13 years in higher education (Midland College). Planned, developed, implemented and function as the facilitator of the Chap Comp Center (a writing lab facility at Midland College). Other professional and community experiences which qualify me as a candidate are as follows: 1. Served on numerous committees related to public education, ie. elementary discipline, textbook. 2. Participated in curriculum development. 3. Participant in numerous school board meetings. 4. Member of the Advisory Board on current MISD bond election. 5. Supervisory and budget experience in the area of education.	1. Recruit more qualified minority teachers (role models help curb dropouts. 2. Improve the school curriculum to include specific materials, goals and objectives that are designed to enhance the self-esteem of all students — a cross cultural emphasis 3. Establishing mentor programs with the private sector that encourage students to do well in school and more importantly stay in school and take the challenging courses 4. Eliminate any and all forms of tracking which in the main stereotype and discourage maximum achievement 5. Establishing a community conference on dropouts which would include administrators, teachers, parents, students, and papaprofessionals in the area of motivation.	1. Address the issue of maintaining equal facilities, district wide 2. Address the issue of maintaining equal instruction and personnel and course offerings district wide 3. Visit schools and dialogue with personnel and students to intelligently identify common solutions to problems that are unique to individual districts 4. Work with board members to identify common solutions to problems that are unique to individual districts 5. Work to maintain two equal highschools 6. Introduce and support policies,ie. discipline, academic standards, to be applied equitably 7. Work to establish equal elementary educational programs, including improving the inclusion of more minority students in the Gifted and Talented program
2 Clarence 'Putty' Zachery	Graduate of the 1973 class of MHS and a native Midlander. Also a graduate of Leadership Midland, class of 86, Parks and recreation commissioner (appointed by Oralia Corrales), two year term 87-89, PTA President at Crockett Elem. for two terms, Vice President two terms, PTA Life Member, Coordinator of MJBA T-Ball, Vice President of MJBA and President of T-Ball, coach also. Eastern Little League Board of Directors and coach, Parent of two Elem. school children attending MISD.	I would stress the importance of the Elem. School age Children. I am under the firm belief that Children are dropping out because they cannot read,or they do not have the basic skills of the three R's. This is due mainly because of the lack of staff, counselors and funds in the elem. level. We need to change the focus and concentrate on the primary grades of elem. along with preschool experience and home influence. What our Children learn here will determine the future of the Childs education and possible life. Also by hiring qualified minority teachers and counselors.	By making strong, positive and fair decisions. Also by maintaining the cluster system as it is. This is important because improvements at either of the schools in the cluster will benefit children from three areas of town. At one time of another they will get to use the facilities and possibly have the same staff. By maintaining two equal highschools. Also by having an open mind listening to parental input and pitch in and lend a hand where its needed.
Tony Carrillo	A. Midland citizen and tax payer for over 23 years. B. Resident of District 2 for over 23 years. C. Child attending Midland High School. D. Employed by Dresser-Rand Co as salesman for over 22 years. E. Current member of City of Midland Planning and Zoning Commission. F. Current member of City of Midland Crime Prevention Commission. G. Current member and scholarship chairman of the Gas Processors Association of the Permian Basin. Also past secretary-treasurer.	At present I am not familiar with any special programs or policies that would help reduce dropouts or increase academic achievement. Any sensible programs or policies that will help will have my whole hearted support.	I think all seven trustees will have the education of their districts children as their primary concern. This being the case, I think that whatever the board does or decides will be in the best interest of all Midland school children.
Adela Marmolejo	De Zavala PTA officer 6yrs. City Council PTA member 5yrs. a single parent of a seventh grader at San Jacinto Jr.Hi. My commitment to serve the schools has been demonstrated in being a recipient of the VIPS award, Hispanic Community Involvement award, Texas and National PTA life membership. I am a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church and a resident of Midland for 31 years.	We need to address this problem at the elementary level. Meeting should be held in different neighborhoods to provide parents with an understanding of the attendance law and provide ways to deal with children losing interest in school. We need programs that improve students' self image, essential skills, provides role models who they can visit with on a regular basis and on hands experiences. We should provide a hot line for students to received counseling on issues of dropping out, drug usage, and suicide prevention. Academic achievement can be accomplished by curriculum that is equal in standards throughout the district.	The board will have a better picture of the needs of the total community because of the seven member districts. Each district will be able to voice its concerns, needs and suggestions. A greater number of citizens will have the opportunity to participate in the decision making process of educating their children. My responsibility will not only be to voice our concerns and solutions but also to listen to the other districts. This sharing will unite us in providing the best form of education thru equal facilites, curriculum, and teaching staff to all students in Midland.
3 Ken Morrison	BBA in Management from Texas Tech University. MS in Management from Wayland Baptist University. College Instructor in Management and Marketing. Taxpayer and parent with 2 children attending Midland schools. Experienced in budgets, forecasts, cost containment, acquisitions, expenditures, employee staffing and evaluations.	I will continue to support existing MISD policies and programs so long as they provide an effective environment where counseling and other instructional methods may be used. The drop out problem needs to be dealt with in a joint endeavor between home and school. It is the Board of Trustees responsibility to encourage curriculum development that provides challenging programs to meet the student needs. To enable these students to reach their full potential in society, We must provide them with a means to enter society.	Seven single-member districts now make up the Board of Trustees. This does not mean that MISD must be divided. I will work for the interest of all Midland school children by continuing my support for the educational mission of MID. That being to provide a climate conducive for each child, regardless of background, to achieve his optimal level of success. I will support policies that favor all the school receiving equal treatment as to staff, monies, resources and learning opportunities. The children's education must remain above the politics of the district's boundary.
Price Parker	My wife and I are currently co-PTA Presidents of Burnet Elementary. We have been elected to serve again as co-presidents. I am Director of the Royal Ambassador young men's group at Alamo Heights Baptist Church, and have been for the past two years. I have been treasurer for Alamo for two years, being responsible for expenditures for the church and envolved in the budget process. I feel that my desire for my three son's education is an old fashion qualification.	School drop-outs is a serious problem. The school cannot solve it alone. Community and especially parent envolvement is necessary. Parent education classes should be designed and implemented to help identify the potential student problem. Counseling for earlier detection of student problems and follow-up has to be done even if it means hiring more counselors. Higher academics can evolve thru greater teacher emphasis. Teacher input increases their response for envolvement. Their desire to see the edcuating of students can be enhanced by letting them teach without the burden of undue paperwork that has been place on them.	With the new board, composed of seven members, the direction of the board will have to be a conglomeration of ideas focused to a common idea of better education. Each trustee has the responsibility to represent their District, but an overall concern for the education of all students. Each member has to be on open mind and consider the needs of all students. I do believe that one must stand his/hers principles to a point, but not to cause damage to the school system.
Don Aldridge	BA — Hardin Simmons Univ., MBA — UTPB, army officer for four years with an honorable discharge with the rank of captain, Certified Public Accountant in public practice, Midland resident for ten years. Two children in MISD. Teacher of accounting courses at Midland College, and in Project Business and Midland and Lee Freshman Schools. Deacon at First Baptist Church where I am seventh grade Sunday school director.	A potential drop out can be identified early in elementary school. By the time a child reaches high school, the pattern has been set, and there is not much chance of changing his direction. We must reach the potential low achievers and drop outs in elementary school by 1) reducing the teacher/pupil ration, 2) providing counselors at the elementary schools, 3) providing more teachers aides and secretarial help at the elementary schools, 4) emphasing tutorial aid, whether paid or voluntary.	Because of the cluster plan, a school board trustee cannot restrict his attention to only his district. Three schools are in District 3, but the children from this district will attend twelve out of 21 elementary schools and Carver. Students from this district will attend both freshman and senior high schools. As a trustee, I must treat all areas in MISD equally because children from my district will attend the majority of schools in MISD. A MISD student's education effects the whole Midland community. We cannot restrict our attention to just one area.
4 Joe Chavez	I am a 36 year old graduate of West Texas State University where I obtained a Bachelor of General Studies and concentrated in psychology and sociology. I have 9 years professional management experience and am a father of 4 boys ages 6 months to 8 years. My interest in the school board nomination is a genuine desire to provide the best quality education to my 4 boys. I would like to contribute my talents and skills to the MISD School Board.	I believe the drop out problem should be addressed from the first year a student enters school. I believe that building a persons self-esteem is essential and imperative in the educational process. I believe helping each and every individual to develop a high self-esteem will minimize the drop out rate for the future. I believe higher academic achievements can be accomplished with more computer educational programs. Computers are playing a big part of America's future, but only the upper-middle and upper class America can afford the success of computer knowledge.	I believe my professional management experience and educational background will assist me in contributing in all areas of the school board functions.
Jim Builta	I am a concerned parent, married with three children, ages 6, 14 and 17. They all attend Midland public schools. I offer the ability to solve problems using good common sense.	It is the school board's responsibility to provide the highest quality of education possible. This can be accomplished by first bringing discipline back to our schools. Our teachers must have the authority to provide and atmosphere conducive to learning. The morale of the teachers also is of the utmost importance. A teacher will teach more effectively when his/her morale is high. They need to know they are appreciated. The same goes for the potential drop out student. I would support a program that would take children with these problems and make them feel that they are a part of our system and very important to us all. We could also provide counseling for these children.	I am deeply committed to proving to the community that the 7/0 single member districts will work for Midland, Texas. We as district representatives not only have the responsibility of representing our individual districts, we have to keep the entire picture in sight. We have to work together for the best interest of all the children in MISD. This will take a lot of cooperation of all seven district members. I have a lot of faith in the 22 other candidates.
Jackie Hamilton	1. Unlimited volunteer time 2. Christian Kelview 3. Midland High Graduate 4. 2 Children 5. 13 years experience — MISD 6. National and state PTA Life Member 7. PTA President — 3 yrs. 8. City Council PTA Board 9. District 17 PTA Board 10. VIPS 11. Teach McGruff programs on Drugs-Child Safety 12. Past Alamo Jr. High Coordinator — PUSH 13. Started Just Say No Clubs (Emerson, Rusk, Scharbauer) 14. Council Against Substance Abuse Board 15. Midland County Families In Action Board 16. Midland Crime Prevention Commission Board 17. Crime Stoppers Board 18. Allstar Volunteer 19. Teenage Suicide Prevention 20. Permian Basin Child Safety Committee	In our society we concentrate on the high achievers and the low achievers but neglect to recognize the average student. By concentrating on the average student starting kindergarten and teaching Say No to Drugs and Sex. We would eliminate the fear of AIDS, homosexual activity, unwanted pregencies, drop outs, and the suicide problems. With clean bodies and clean minds, attitudes improve and students can concentrate on higher academics. Money saved would once again be put towards quality education at a reasonable tax dollar.	First we must forget any prejudiced opinions one might have and learn to listen to each and everyone on the board. Each district could submit three priorities of importance and new board could list them in order of urgent need. During the next two years I'm sure most of these issues can be dealt with. I'm also positive that after everyone has voiced their opinions we'll find the bottom line is the children. We will come together as a whole rather than individuals.

Replies are printed as received from the candidates.

District	List your qualifications for office. (75 words)	What policies and programs would you support to address the drop-out problem and to accomplish higher academic achievement in the MISD? (100 words)	With seven single-member districts now making up the school board, how do you plan to work for the best interest of all Midland school children? (100 words)
5 Robbie Warley	Parent of four children in grades 1-12 of MISD. Volunteer in Public Schools. Texas State Foster Parent Association Board Member; currently member of State Legislative and Finance Committees. Midland County Child Welfare Board Member. Permian Basin Foster Parents Association, President. High Sky Childrens Ranch Sponsor Parent. Small Business Owner. Special Education: Child Behavioral Management; Legal Rights of Children; Discipline Alternatives; Child Sexual & Physical Abuse; Special Needs of Handicapped Children; Dealing with the Adolescent	Enhancement of elementary curriculum with staff additions, as needed. Stress curriculum continuity system wide as well as with each class as they progress through the system. HB 72 student-teacher ratio compliance. Strengthen parental involvement in secondary level. Improve teacher morale. Uniform and effective discipline policies. Early identification of at risk drop-outs with increased number of counselors in pre-high school grades. Notification and counseling program with parents as well as students. Alternative education program which stresses vocational training for appropriately targeted individuals. Development of program for students that fall between the learning disabled and special education students.	With the current cluster and districting system, students will attend schools in several different districts. It is impossible an impractical to focus on just the schools in one district and properly represent the voters within your district. I feel strong y about the integration of our system for the benefit of all children. Single member district representation will broaden the sensitivity and responsiveness of the Board and introduce a leadership process in which the community is a true and valued partner. The taxpayer will be assured a greater level of responsible spending and the board will become more accountable to the community.
Roy Marshall	I feel that one of my best qualifications is that I am the father of five children who have all atended Midland schools. Tammy graduated from Wayland Baptist University last April and will start on her masters at Texas Tech this fall. Garett is a senior at Southwester University. Tracie is a freshman at A & M. Tiffany is a Junior and Brett is a freshman. I have been involved in PTA and boosters clubs and all school activities that my kids have been invoied in. I have a degree in supervision and management.	To help students raise their academic achievement and address the dropout problem I feel we must install programs that have continuity from one year to the next. We need to change policies of passing students to the next subject even though they have not past previous courses. We need to get out reading, writing and math skills to a high level. We can accomplish this by making teachers more involved in setting up curriculum and by increasing homework in some of these subjects. Also hving qualified teachers equal equipment at every school.	I believe in order to have an efficient and effective school system we must set up lines of communication between parents, teachers, administratiors, taxpayers and the School Board. To accomplish this the first step I recommend is to move the school board meetings to night sessions. This will afford the working people and school teachers the opportunity to participate in these meetings. With these communication lines developed may of the problems we are now facing could be solved with community effort.
George Staley	B.S. Marshall University. M.S. University of Arkansas. Graduate work toward PhD at University of Utah. Extensive business background: Vice President of HNG Oil Company, President of Staley Gas Co., Inc., Director of First City National Bank of Midland. Four school age children.	The dropout problem must be addressed with emphasis of the importance of education to all younger children and their parents. Regarding academic achievement: Emphasis on basics. Emphasis on reading. Strong support of our GEM program for younger students and increased attention to our High School honors program. Passage of the Bond issue to insure less crowded conditions.	I am a candidate because of my concern for our children — to assure they all will have the opportunity for the best possible education. I support two strong, equal high schools with the emphasis on academic achievement from kindergarten through high school. I support Dr. Baressi and his work. I want to assure that our standards are the highest. I am committed to retaining and/or finding the very best person available for every available administrative and teaching position.
Betsy Robinson	Education: MISD Trustee — 3 years; Secondary teacher, Wayne State University, B.A.; Baylor, 12 yr resident Continuing Education: Board Training,Drop-out, Suicide,Drug-Alcohol, Child Abuse, Human Sexuality,Counseling, Effective Schools, — 400 + hours! Organizations: ALL STAR, Lion's QUEST, Council Against Substance Abuse, Midland Crime Prevention Commission, PTA, Neighbors Against Burglary/Drugs, Families in Action, First Baptist, CBS. Governor's Recognition: Invaluable Service to Youth Husband: Jerry — Pilot Children: Tim — Trinity University; Jonathan — USAF Academy; Catherine — San Jacinto	DROP-OUT PREVENTION PLAN A. Comprehensive (K-12) developmental counseling/guidance program. Early "at-risk" identification and intervention. B. Creation of a learning community (4-8) for constant communication between teachers, students, and liaison with parents. C. Professional seminars on parenting skills. D. Computer assisted individualized instruction. E. Madatory tutorials. F. Cooperative academic/vocational community program. G. Using existing facilities establish accredited alternative school (7-12). ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE A. Raise academic standards, strengthen honor code B. Establish academically challenging classes C. Develop additional advanced placement courses D. High tech opportunities for young enterpreneur E. Promote drug/alcohol prevention. F. Promote positive peer leadership: ALL STAR, LION'S QUEST, cooperative activities, role models, positive discipline, assertiveness training.	Working daily for quality education for all Midland School Children is natural for me. By community networking I led MISD to state and national recognition through ALL STAR, Drug Prevention, and Counseling Programs. I will establish regular "TOWN HALL" meetings where District Five voters can voice their opinions and concerns. A Research Task-Force will be formed. When questions arise concerning expenditures, programs, or policies, I'll continue to listen to teachers, parents, voters, and students from all districts. I research each question throughly before reaching a decision. I pledge to continue the ALL STAR spirit for all Midland Districts.
6 Diane Anderson	Worked as an administrative manager for oil and gas company. Owned and managed profitable business. Mother of three, involved in PTA. Awarded Outstanding Volunteer in Public Schools (VIPS) for 1987 in Sam Houston. Incoming PTA president, Sam Houston. Assisted teachers in classrooms through VIPS, and involved in City Council PTA as Chairman of Parent Education. Attended 1987 PTA State Convention and Workshops (Leadership, Kids and Drugs, Helping Children Learn, and others).	I support MISD's attempts to address the dropout problem, which is related to achieving higher academic standards, but I do not believe current policies and programs are sufficient. I would like to implement a new program, through a continuing series of assemblies and seminars, which focuses on the value and importance of education, and how education relates to the students' future and ability to succeed. I think many students lack faith in the value of school and have no hopes for the future. We need to substitute a lack of faith and home with a zest for life and a zeal for learning.	Although we are single member districts, we are all interested in resolving the same issues, and I do not anticipate the pros and cons to break down along district lines. There may be times when the interest of our district is not the same as that of the MISD and we will have a dual obligation to represent both our district and the school system, but I do not feel that will happen very often. Whether we use single member districts or trustees at large the goal is still the same, to educate our children to the best of our ability.
Bob Rich	1.) 15-year Midland resident 2.) Degree: Secondary Education Mayors: Psychology and English Graduate courses: Business, Finance and Management Continuing education: Land Management, Real Estate, Tax Accounting, Business Principles 3.) An owner of G&R Rich Properties Inc. since 1980. 4.) Community involvement: United Way, Young Life, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Midland Junior Baseball Association, First Baptist Youth, PTA, All-Stars, Junior Assembly, Youth Center and Booster Club 5.) Family: Wife, Genie, married 19 years; Two sons: Geoff, senior, and Gregg, sophomore, have attended MISD schools for their entire education	I would support a committee selected by the board and made up primarily of educators and a cross-section of community representatives to formulate specific recommendations to address this problem. The board could then make informed decisions regarding policies and programs. The same could be done regarding academic achievement. Also, in regard to that, before any new policies or programs are begun, new higher standards of discipline should be put in place and be made consistent within the entire system. Then the academic policies will be easier to implement. It is my understanding that an alternate school for discipline problems has been successful in other systems and that has helped to address each of these issues.	Each new trustee must come to the board in a spirit of cooperation. We are paving new road here. I would stress the importance of deciding at the outset how the agenda is to be chosen. We should ask, "How can we allow many of the secondary issues to be resolved by the system without coming before the board?", and, "How can we make the system more responsive to the needs of the community so that an issue does not have to wait for a board decision?" I believe that when the responsibility for education is placed in the hands of the educators who work in conjunction with the community that the system is more effective.
Mona Craig	I have been volunteering side by side with teachers, nurses, secretaries, librarians and children for 20 to 25 hours per week for the past 4 years. This year, I have been eating in our lunchrooms 3 days a week; served on the Goddard PTA Board, Dezavala PTA Board, Parker PTA Board, and the City PTA Board in charge of Partners-in-Reading Program. I do have work experience outside the home as a secretary, Business Manager, and Assistant Administrator of a Nursing Home but I feel that no work is more important than the work of educating our children.	To address the dropout problem and have higher academic achievement, I support the All Star Program and other such programs. I want to see as much positive encouragement for all (1-12 grades) academic achievements made by all our students. We in Midland are in a sad state of affairs when our 9-12 grades students have no entries in the Regional Science Fair and little Andrews has 25, winning the Grand National Award. Until we make academic achievement a priority for the School Board, it won't be for the students. I want to utilize our councilors experience more and even add councilors to our elementary schools. I also feel that educating our parents and teachers to better recognize ADD in our students will reduce our drop-out rate.	To keep in touch wit[illegible]e needs and concerns of all Midland Students, I plan to continue volunteering in our schools 20 to 25 hours a week. I want to work a small amount in each school allowing me to visit with all teachers and administrators. I will rely on input from committees, volunteers, and any concerned parent. Our PTAs are a great source for sharing concerns. Last and most importantly, I will rely on the Lord daily for guidance for a greater MISD.
A. Joseph Reed	B.S. snd M.S. degrees from the University of Arizona, President of Reed & Associates, Inc.; 20-year Midland businessman. Completing 4 years as MISD school board trustee with 27½ years of school board inservice; past member of the State textbook selection committee; past president of St. Ann's Catholic Church parish council; involved in Scouts, booster clubs and children's sports. Having 5 children currently enrolled in MISD elementary, junior high and high school is also a unique qualification.	The continuing drop-out problem must be a priority item to be addressed by the school board. MISD must continue to search for and support programs such as the early identification and total immersion programs, the alternative education center and more counselors. To accomplish higher academic achievement, a continued search for and support of supplemental programs such as Excel Math, Writng to Read, vocabulary development and study skills must be a priority along with the funding necessary for the hiring and retention of the best possible teachers available. Reinstating the advanced classes in junior high should be evaluated.	MISD is one of the finest educational systems in the state because past school boards have made important decisions based upon what was best for all children in Midland. I believe it will be essential to accomplish this same goal under the single-member district process of election. Each trustee must bring to the board the views of his respective district on every issue and then consider the views of the other districts. Final board policies must be made which are responsive to the needs and in the best interest of the children of MISD as a whole.
7 Connie Reeves	I am the mother of four children, three of them now attend Midland schools with the fourth to enter kindergarten in September. My children attend both elementary and secondary schools. I have been involved in public school systems for 10 years including Plano Independent Schools which my children attended for three years. My undergraduate study was in psychology with emphasis in child development and child psychology. I also have three years experience in banking and finance.	The dropout problem must be addressed early in the educational career beginning with kindergarten and continually reinforced throughout. Attendence requirements must be strictly enforced. Parents and guardians as well as children must be held accountable if District policy is disregarded. More emphasis needs to be placed on academics from kindergarten through 12th grade, not merely to obtain high scores on standarized tests but to insure that children actually learn and retain the fundamentals. Team teaching and the leveling of math, english and reading classes would benefit elementary school children and a volunteer Peer [illegible]torial program would be advantageous for secondary students.	As a board member I will work cooperatively with my fellow board members in an effort to form a cohesive unit. I will respect the opinions of each member and my representation will be open and honest. I will encourage and seek communication with parents, teachers, children and the community and remain informed on all school issues. Children and education are my greatest concern and I will give these first priority when making decisions on programs, policies or school issues.
Ken Marks	Business experience Community involvement Personal character President of Commercial Electronic Supply since 1962 Wife, Marylea, 33 years (25 years in Midland) Four children attended MISD My business experience prepared me to address the critical budget and personnel issues facing MISD. I am a prudent businessman that has prospered in various Midland economic climates by listening to people and maintaining a reputation of fairness and honesty.	By testing and evaluation we can identify 85% of the potential dropouts by the third grade. The successful programs of other districts should be studied and copied to address the problem. Since this problem is more prevalent among our minority students we should increase the number of qualified minority teachers as well as our counselling staff. We should also encourage all students into extracurricular activities to maintain their interest. To improve academic standards we should concentrate on the basics in the lower grades and initiate a comprehensive leveling program to provide for different levels of student achievements.	The first and foremost task faced by every member of the school board is to establish a strong working relationship with other board members and to earn the respect from the community. I plan to hold frequent meetings with voters in District 7 to find out their feelings on the various issues facing the school board. Each district should hold these meetings and select a parent and teacher representative that would meet with the full board periodically to express the views of the total community. Every trustee is responsible to every student in MISD and shoul act accordingly.
John L. Kennedy	Graduate of University of Texas — B.B.A. Certified Public Accountant A vested interest in the future of our schools with three children, the oldest in kindergarten Willingness to devote time and effort to make the best decisions for MISD	Parental interest and involvement are crucial to reducing the drop-out rate and achieving academic excellence. I would support programs and policies which encourage increased involvement of parents beginning in the elementary school and continuing through high school. In addition, I would support programs for early identification of drop-outs and subsequent preventative counseling of potential drop-outs. I, also, feel that updated vocational training would encourage our students to finish their high school education. Higher academic achievement might also be attained via leveling. The new School Board should thoroughly research this possibility.	Single member District elections are a method of equal representation on the the School Board. However, once the election is over and the new School Board is seated, members must work for the best interest of children throughout the community, not just those in a single district. By keeping the interests of all children the top priority, trustees can exchange ideas and information from the various districts and then act in the best interest of the district as a whole.
J. Murphy Horton	I am a independent geologist and have been a resident of Midland for 29 years, I have six children that have attended public schools in Midland, I presently serve on the Board of Directors of the Midland Need to Read Program. In 1983-84 I served on the State Board of Education from the 21st Congressional District. I belong to several professional organizations and have served in official positions both local and national. I have proven leadership ability and experience.	The dropout rate is a serious problem nation wide and threatens our economic and social well being. I would address it early on by showing the children they have self-worth and will be held accountable for their own actions. Motivational and role model concepts should also be introduced, all this hand in hand with solid educational concepts and strong parental involvement will achieve this goal. High academic achievement in MISD can be obtained by the following: (1) Give the classroom back to the teacher, treat them as the professionals they are, let evaluations be done by those competent to evaluate at grade level. If possible, with new State Board of Education rules, do away with evaluation other than that done by the principal of school. Give help, not hindrance, Supervise, not condemn. Encourage teachers to be more innovative and imaginative. (2) Development of good study habits beginning early on, homework in every subject on a regular basis.	As I noted in my qualifications above, I have served on several policy making boards and this always encompasses working with others. Seldom, if ever, do we get everything we want, and it is critical to understand that in moving forward we must often soften our demands, so long as we do not compromise principal. Every member brings to the board certain qualification and concerns that have value, but the MAJOR THRUST OF THIS BOARD MUST BE TOP QUALITY EDUCATION FOR ALL CHILDREN THROUGHOUT MISD.

Uncontested races

Midland County voters also will be called on to cast ballots in a number of uncontested races. Appearing on the ballot unopposed will be Mayor Carroll Thomas and City Council members Bob Monaghan and Robert Rendall. Unchallenged for Midland Junior College District posts will be Parker Humes, Bill Kleine and Gloria Hinojosa.

Midland County Hospital District seats are sought by James Ramsoure, Margaret Purvis and Pat Estes.

Jetliners grounded, barred from high altitudes

KAHULUI, Hawaii (AP) — Aloha Airlines grounded three aging jetliners like one that blew open at 24,000 feet, and a federal agency on Saturday barred three airlines from flying more than 60 similar planes at altitudes that high.

Federal investigators have focused on possible structural failure in the airliner as a cause of the accident in which a flight attendant apparently was blown out of the plane to her death and 61 people were injured, an official said.

A National Transportation Safety Board investigator said the plane, in service since 1969, had undergone an unusual amount of stress, but an Aloha official said recent inspections revealed no signs of fuselage cracks.

The NTSB was trying to determine how some of the passengers were burned in the accident. One passenger thought he was burned by loose electrical wires; a doctor, however, said the man had flash burns.

The plane, with 89 passengers, five crew members and an air traffic controller aboard, was traveling about 345 mph on an inter-island hop from Hilo to Honolulu when 20 feet of its upper fuselage peeled away explosively, exposing passengers to the open air.

The Federal Aviation Administration issued an emergency order Saturday barring the oldest versions of the Boeing 737 from flying higher than 23,000 feet if they have had more than 55,000 landings. The Aloha jet had had far more landings.

The FAA order is in effect until the affected airlines inspect the jets' first-class cabin structure, the area that opened in the Aloha jet.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the order would affect 66 planes in the 737-100 and 737-200 series. The jets are in the fleets of Aloha, Piedmont and American airlines, he said.

'Loose ends' remain on INF, senators say

WASHINGTON (AP) — A set of remaining "loose ends" is casting a shadow on prospects for ratification of the U.S.-Soviet Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty in time for President Reagan's summit trip to Moscow.

The four snags cited by Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., include a U.S.-Soviet disagreement about the meaning of provisions designed to assure the United States against Soviet cheating.

He and the other leaders say they are optimistic all the difficulties will be resolved, but they have firmly declared their opposition to rushing the ratification proceedings just so the work will be finished by the May 29-June 2 summit.

"This is not a delay," said Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Since last December, when the superpowers signed the pact eliminating ground-based missiles with ranges between 315 and 3,125 miles, Reagan has hailed the verification and monitoring provisions as unprecedented sets of safeguards against Soviet non-compliance.

Having steered the pact through committee hearings, the administration is now eager for approval by the whole Senate in time for a formal exchange of ratification documents between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at the summit.

Byrd told a news conference on Friday he would open the Senate debate on May 11, if the four obstacles are overcome. Joining Byrd and Nunn in the decision were the chairmen of two other important Senate committees: Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., of Foreign Relations and David L. Boren, D-Okla., of the Select Committee on Intelligence.

Jackson, Bush criticize Dukakis as he campaigns in Midwest

Associated Press

Jesse Jackson and George Bush found themselves in an unlikely political alliance Saturday as both attacked Democratic presidential front-runner Michael Dukakis, with Jackson saying he's too conservative and Bush saying he's not tough enough.

Dukakis, meanwhile, spent the day pleading with supporters in Ohio and Indiana to avoid the overconfidence that may come from his wide lead over Jackson for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I want to ask you once again to do everything you can, on those phone banks, in your neighborhoods, with your friends and co-workers, to make sure the people are taking this primary seriously, that they know it is important," Dukakis said in Cincinnati.

Dukakis is heavily favored to win Tuesday's primaries in Ohio and Indiana and has built up a 424-delegate lead over Jackson as the two campaigned for the Democratic presidential nomination.

While optimistic of his prospects in Ohio and Indiana, Dukakis warned his supporters that overconfidence contributed to his 1978 defeat when he ran for re-election as governor of Massachusetts.

"It was the most painful experience of my life," Dukakis told workers in Cleveland.

Bush, who also was campaigning in Ohio even though he has a mathematical lock on the Republican presidential nomination, called for the death penalty for "drug kingpins" and said that both Jackson and Dukakis lack his toughness on this issue.

Both Dukakis and Jackson oppose capital punishment.

"We've appointed tougher judges. We are getting more convictions and longer sentences. But where are the Democrats on mandatory sentencing, on tougher penalties for those who poison our kids with drugs? I favor the death penalty for drug kingpins, those involved in drug-related killings," he said.

"If Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson are serious about this, let's see where they stand on throwing the book at those who are poisoning the lives of the young people."

Jackson criticized Dukakis for not going far enough in committing himself to spend money on such issues as child care, southern Africa, education, and drugs.

"We need a massive commitment to invest in people, reinvest in America and end Reaganomics," Jackson said at a rally in Columbus.

He criticized Dukakis for offering $250 million in new education spending saying, "You cannot educate every child in America to go to college on only $250 million."

However, Jackson stopped short of saying that Dukakis would try to pull Democrats toward Republican policies.

"I would not put him in that category," he said. "There are some in the Democratic Party who would pull our party toward conservatism."

Bush also renewed his counterattack on the issue of Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who is the subject of a number of investigations by an independent counsel. Democrats have cited Meese as evidence of a "sleaze factor" in the Reagan administration that will be an issue in the fall campaign.

"I've heard Dukakis and Jackson talk about sleaze. What are they talking about? Who are they talking about?" said Bush. "Are they convicting someone before the system works?"

Bush warned that if the Democrats "want to go down the low road, we'll meet them."

NATION in brief

Mofford's records under investigation

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin says he is investigating whether to prosecute Gov. Rose Mofford for omitting land, loan and partnership transactions from sworn financial-disclosure statements.

Corbin is prosecuting Mrs. Mofford's predecessor, Evan Mecham, over omission of a $350,000 campaign loan from similar financial-disclosure statements, and Mecham's lawyers are sure to object if Mrs. Mofford is treated any differently.

But Corbin also is next in line to become governor should anything happen to Mrs. Mofford, much as Mrs. Mofford succeeded Mecham upon his ouster by the Senate Court of Impeachment in April.

"He's in somewhat of a delicate position," Senate Minority Leader Alan Stephens, a Democrat, said Friday after Mrs. Mofford filed amended financial disclosure statements.

Mrs. Mofford, a Democrat, called her ommissions "an honest mistake" and said she did not intend to hide the transactions reported a week before by The Associated Press.

Mecham, a Republican, used the same language last year when his ommission was reported by The Arizona Republic.

Spill menaces wildlife

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — The accidental release of at least 175,000 gallons of a particularly gooey form of crude oil has turned from a minor inconvenience into a major menace to fragile bird rookeries and a major sports fishing industry.

"This is a sin, a crime against God's creation, and makes a city boy want to cry," said Joseph Hallachi, 43, of Santa Cruz, who drove 120 miles to voluntarily help state crews remove oil from a city park shoreline.

The April 23 spill already has killed 200 birds and small animals and left 250 others suffering ill effects.

The spill of San Joaquin crude from Shell Oil Co.'s major Northern California refinery occurred after a broken storm drain pipe running through the middle of an oil tank allowed crude to be siphoned out. The company's practice of keeping valves open during storms was a violation of federal environmental regulations.

It has been a frustrating week for dozens of volunteers trying to care for dying wildlife and for cleanup workers struggling to remove the tarry muck.

Aid to Vietnam sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private relief agency says it is negotiating with Vietnam to send the first permanent American aid mission to the country since the 1975 defeat of U.S.-backed forces in Indochina.

World Vision, a California-based agency with projects in 80 nations, asked leaders in Hanoi for permission to open an operation that eventually could funnel up to $400,000 worth of assistance to Danang Province, World Vision president Robert Seiple said in an interview over the weekend.

Seiple said he was encouraged by some officials' responses during talks in Hanoi two weeks ago, but he cautioned that further discussions were needed with the Vietnamese, whom he called "tough negotiators."

Since the fall of South Vietnam 13 years ago, Vietnam has received an estimated $10 million in assistance from private American groups. But because Americans are prohibited from trading with Vietnam, humanitarian shipments must be specially licensed by the Commerce Department.

So far, the shipments have been small supplies of food and medical equipment arranged by delegations that visit the country for a few days.

Man to be first black American archbishop returns to South

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bishop Eugene A. Marino, about to become the first black archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in America, returns this week to a South he believes has "come of age" since he left his native Mississippi 36 years ago bearing childhood wounds of racial prejudice.

The 53-year-old Marino, an auxiliary bishop in the Washington, D.C., archdiocese since 1974, will be installed Thursday as archbishop of Atlanta, taking charge of a 69-county region of northern Georgia.

Marino recalls a childhood in Biloxi, Miss., in which, for example, he and his sister were kicked out of a coin-operated laundry because they were black. But he said in a recent interview feels "personally very comfortable" about returning to the South.

"I think that the South has changed and come of age and grown," he said. "In many ways, the race question has been more effectively addressed in much of the South than it has been in the North.

"I think I will be able as a black person to function better in a Southern situation, as a Southerner, than I might be able to function in some Northern situation," he said.

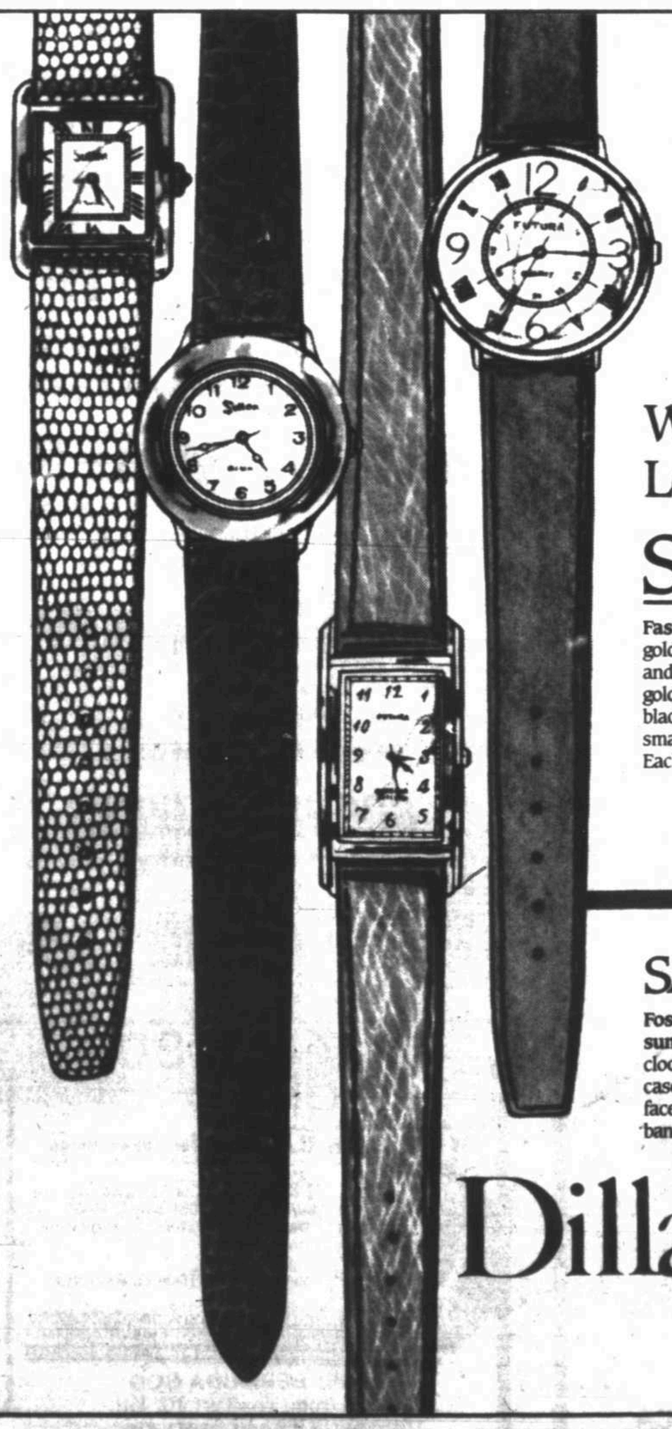

Marino's appointment by Pope John Paul II in March came more than two years after he and other black bishops wrote a pastoral letter calling on the church to increase the number of blacks in official positions.

One of only 12 black bishops in the United States, Marino became the first to hold an office in the National Conference of Catholic Bishops when he was elected secretary of the organization in 1985.

But despite his role as a trailblazer for blacks in the U.S. Catholic church, and despite Atlanta's long tradition in the civil rights movement, Marino said he does not necessarily see himself becoming a leader in that struggle.

Newly hatched condor eats first meals

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A hungry bundle of fluff named Molloko, the only California condor chick conceived in captivity, gobbled minced mice Saturday, and keepers of the endangered species were encouraged by its appetite.

The newly hatched chick, which raised the condor population to 28, ate its first meal from the fingertips of a handler at 6 a.m. and ate again at hourly intervals, said Martha Baker, spokeswoman for the San Diego Wild Animal Park.

"The chick was hungry and ate everything it was offered," Ms. Baker said. "Everyone seems very pleased with the progress of the chick. But the first 10 days are critical, for anybody, human or animal."

The chick's diet was a combination of minced baby mice and chicken egg yolk, she said. The meals fed to the chick, which is slightly larger than a person's fist, amounted to about two tablespoons of food each time.

U.S. Interior Secretary Donald Hodel congratulated the Wild Animal Park staff for the successful hatching.

"The hatching of the world's first captive-bred condor is a milestone that we've been awaiting for years," Hodel said in a statement released in Washington. The Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is responsible for the California condor recovery program.

"This small chick represents a big step back from the brink of extinction and a big step forward for recovery of the California condor," he said.

Palestinians, Israeli soldiers injured

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian youths pelted troops with stones Saturday in scattered anti-Israeli protests in the occupied territories, and four Palestinians and a soldier were injured, military and Arab sources said.

The occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip were relatively quiet after one of the calmest weeks since a Palestinian uprising began December 8. Israeli officials, encouraged by the relative calm, have claimed that the protests are fading.

In the main marketplace of Nablus, the largest city in the West Bank, Palestinian youths attacked Israeli troops with stones, according to an army representative who spoke on condition of anonymity. The troops opened fire and wounded a protester, he said.

Arab reporters in Nablus said a second protester was wounded.

In the nearby Balata refugee camp, young Palestinians hurled stones at Israeli troops, injuring one, the spokesman said. Troops wounded a protester there too, he said.

The military clamped a curfew on the camp right after the incident, forcing residents to stay home.

In the West Bank city of Hebron, a group of Jewish settlers from the nearby Kiryat Arba settlement were surrounded by stone-throwing youths, the spokesman said. The settlers fired shots in the air until troops arrived, he said, and there were no injuries.

Also Saturday, a Palestinian youth arrived at Hebron's Alia hospital with a gunshot wound in his arm, a doctor said. The army confirmed the report but said it was not clear how the youth was shot.

In Gaza City, students blocked a main street with flaming tires, boulders and trash cans, Arab reporters said. They waved outlawed Palestinian flags and chanted: "Our lives for Palestine!"

The students dispersed on army orders, Arab reporters said.

Since anti-Israeli violence broke out in the occupied territories, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East War, 175 Palestinians have died. One Israeli soldier and one Israeli civilian has been killed.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek protested a cartoon published in the Los Angeles Times depicting Jesus being turned away from Jerusalem by Israeli troops, who told him the city was a closed military area.

The cartoon, published March 30, was an apparent reference to the frequent closures imposed by the military in the occupied territories in an effort to quell the uprising.

"In all its history, Jerusalem has never been freer or more open to visitors to holy places than it is now," Kollek declared in a telegram to the paper earlier this week, said spokeswoman Sevannah Meryn on Friday.

The cartoon was one of two that angered Israel's consul general in Los Angeles, Eitan Ben Tzur, Israel radio said.

The second cartoon, published April 27, depicted an Israeli soldier holding a smoking rifle atop a pile of bullet-ridden bodies. The caption read: "I'm willing to talk peace, but there aren't any Palestinians to talk peace with!"

Polish walkout ends; second strike continues

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — Strikers occupying a machinery plant in southeast Poland ended their sit-in Saturday after apparently winning promises of higher pay, but a walkout by thousands of steel workers persisted with no end in sight.

The developments came as the Polish government prepared for its big May Day celebrations. Solidarity, the banned trade union federation, called for nationwide protests to mark the nation's biggest official holiday.

In the history of the communist government, there has never been a large-scale strike in progress on May Day.

More than 40 opposition activists were rounded up by police to prevent them from taking part in the holiday protests, said Zbigniew Romaszewski, a Warsaw Solidarity spokesman.

One of Poland's senior anti-government activists, Kornel Morawiecki, founder of the splinter dissident group Fighting Solidarity, was freed from prison nearly six months after his arrest through apparent negotiations by the country's powerful Roman Catholic church.

Morawiecki was freed with Andrzej Kolodziej, another member of Fighting Solidarity.

The two men were flown to Rome after initially refusing to leave.

A strike by what organizers said was about 15,000 workers at the Lenin steel mill in Nowa Huta outside Krakow entered its fifth day with no sign of a breakthrough.

The 7,000 striking workers occupying a heavy machinery plant at Stalowa Wola, about 150 miles southeast of Warsaw, left the factory Saturday at about 2 p.m. after management agreed to their pay demands, said Grzegorz Surdy, a spokesman for the strikers.

The Rev. Jan Niemiec, a Roman Catholic priest in Stalowa Wola, said the strikers received nothing in writing but that their demands were expected to be met.

The state-run news agency PAP also reported the one-day strike ended but denied there were any negotiations with the strikers.

"In view of the illegal character of the protest action, no negotiations had been held with the striking group," the report said.

The labor crisis began Monday and is the most serious to confront Poland since the December 1981 declaration of martial law and the banning of Solidarity.

In a positive development for the government, Krakow's tram drivers ignored a Solidarity call for a strike Saturday.

Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski was to address the nation during the May Day celebration in the capital of Warsaw, which was festooned with banners, red party flags and red-and-white national colors in the country's biggest official holiday.

The holiday is dedicated to working people and in recent years has been an occasion for sometimes violent protests for Solidarity.

Surdy, a student and twice-jailed Solidarity activist, said Saturday he was surprised that authorities had not attempted to stop the Nowa Huta strike before the holiday.

In a communique issued through the Polish news agency Interpress, the plant management said that as of Saturday, it would begin docking strikers' pay and would close down restaurants and snack bars on the plant grounds.

In an apparent hardening of the positions of strikers, three fired Solidarity activists — including Mieczyslaw Gil, the former head of the Solidarity at the plant — were named to the strike committee.

One of the committee's demands is that the three be rehired.

Unlike Poland's last wave of labor unrest in 1980-81, which gave rise to Solidarity, the workers did not cover the plant with banners or mix political and economic demands.

South Korea debates giving to Gulf costs

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea will consider any U.S. request to contribute to the cost of protecting shipping lanes in the Persian Gulf, a top Foreign Ministry official said Saturday.

The official said the United Sates is expected to make the request when U.S. Deputy Secretary of Defense William H. Taft visits Seoul on May 10-11.

"If the United States makes a formal request, we will study it," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Korean newspapers reported from Washington that the United States will ask South Korea to help defense efforts in the Persian Gulf by providing $20 million worth of free maintenance to American warships. The U.S. Navy is guarding the shipping lanes which have become dangerous most notably because of Iranian attacks on neutral shipping.

Iran attacks neutral shipping in retaliation for Iraqi strikes on Iranian oil industry targets. The two countries have been fighting for 7⅛ years.

The United States believes South Korea, which imports more than half of its crude oil requirements through the Persian Gulf, is obliged to contribute to the defense cost, the reports said.

The ministry official denied that South Korea has received any U.S. request. The Dong-A Ilbo, a leading South Korean newspaper, said Washington made an informal request through U.S. military channels a month ago.

Dong-A, quoting unnamed Korean government sources, said the United States is also asking South Korea to aid the Philippines as part of efforts to step up security in the Pacific region.

South Korea has not made any decision on the matter, it said.

Dong-A said even if South Korea decides to accomodate the U.S. request for contributing to the defense efforts in the Persian Gulf, it would be in the form of "technical assistance" rather than cash or sending troops or warships.

The United States is reportedly asking South Korea to increase the direct upkeep cost by $120 million a year.

Gulf shippers welcome U.S. expansion move

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The decision to widen the U.S. military role in the Persian Gulf could make the United States the policeman of the waterway, despite its aversion to the task, gulf shipping officials said Saturday.

The shipping community generally welcomed President Reagan's decision to expand its protection of foreign vessels from attacks by Iran. But some shippers also complained that the new policy does not go far enough.

"The best attitude to adopt now is a wait-and-see one," said a shipping executive who has complained that his vessels, mainly flying Asian flags, were left at the mercy of Iran as the big powers protected their own shipping.

"From what has been annnounced, protection has not been guaranteed for all ships," he said. "It sounds like an elastic policy that will be used by the United States at the right moment, when they choose to take on the Iranians."

Under the policy announced Friday, U.S. forces will go to the aid of non-communist, neutral ships that ask for help after being fired upon.

Previously, U.S. warships protected only those ships reflagged with U.S. flags or registered as U.S.-flagged vessels, including 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers.

The Navy escorts through the gulf, however, frequently have picked up "hitchhiker" vessels that are not U.S. flagged.

"In effect, (the new policy) could turn out to be a substitute for the proposal to have a U.N. naval task force protect shipping in the gulf until the Iraq-Iran war ends," said another gulf shipping executive.

"And despite statements by U.S. officials, the United States is going to find itself becoming the policeman in the waterway."

He was referring to U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci's comment that despite the policy change, the United States was not the "policemen of the gulf, nor do we wish to be."

Said another executive: "I think the Americans are taking on a tremendous load ... doing the job the United Nations is supposed to do."

Iran's state-run radio said Saturday that Washington's decision proved the United States was backing Iraq in the 7½-year-old war.

The radio said that by protecting neutral vessels, the United States will be "seeking to limit the Islamic Republic of Iran's retaliatory powers."

Iran attacks neutral vessels in retaliation for Iraqi strikes on Iranian oil installations and tankers.

Noriega vows to fight U.S. efforts

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, waving a machete that he called a symbol of the valor of the Panamanian people, vowed Saturday to keep fighting U.S. efforts to oust him as Panama's strongman.

"This machete says, 'Not one step back!'" Noriega told a "solidarity meeting" of about 300 Latin American labor leaders.

Noriega brandished the machete several times and people in the crowd cheered and waved machetes they had been given by the government as they entered the conference hall for the closing ceremony. The meeting was organized by pro-government groups.

"This is the machete of Panamanian dignity, of Panamanian valor," Noriega shouted and the audience chanted, "Not one step back!"

"There can be no national or international dialogue, unless the popular forces negotate their own security. This commander is willing to accept a dialogue for the benefit of the popular forces," Noriega said.

He claimed the United States is using Panama "as an experimental field" to develop methods to subjugate other Latin American governments.

The steel machetes, engraved with the Panamanian seal, are sold as souvenirs and are very popular.

Before entering the hall, the general told reporters he has "no commitments with the United States" to quit as chief of the Defense Forces.

Washington officials said Friday that Noriega had agreed during recent negotiations with U.S. envoy Michael Kozak to step down as the military commander but rejected American insistence that he leave the country immediately.

MAKING YOUR FINANCES FIT

from Patteann Daniel

The "Forever" Records

Now that tax season is over, comes the question: what paperwork must be kept, and for how long? The general rule is to keep each return, and the documentation for it, at least three years. In most cases, the Internal Revenue Service cannot audit your return after three years, unless there is substantial under-reporting of income, or suspicion of fraud.

However, some records should be kept indefinitely. For instance, the cost of of your first house, any capital improvements made to it, and the costs involved in any subsequent homes, all go into your basis when you sell and determine your taxable capital gain. You need all the records to document the tax return that reports the sale.

Now that there are IRAs funded by taxed dollars as well as by deducted contributions, you'll need to prove which is which. Save all IRA reports indefinitely. Keep purchase and sales slips on all investments to document the return on which you list the sale. If you inherit assets, save the estate tax return to establish basis.

Holt proud of his role in Bush campaign

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

When Vice President George Bush's top campaign aides meet Monday to map out strategy for the remainder of the presidential race, Midlander Bobby Holt will sit among them.

Holt, vice chairman of Bush's campaign fund-raising arm, was quick to point out last week that the vice president's recent Pennsylvania primary victory ceded him only Republican Party "official unofficial nominee" status.

With the national convention delegates won in Pennsylvania last week, Bush now has more than the 1,139 needed to win the nomination at the Republican National Convention in August.

But Holt says the campaign and the candidate are taking nothing for granted.

"We will go right on and see people in each state of the primaries," said Holt. "It's going to be hard fought right up until November 8," the day of the general election.

Part of the campaign's upcoming strategy will be an effort to place the candidate "in a position where he will be seen and he will be heard," said Holt.

"I think the issues and the policies will be articulated in full detail to show where he stands," he said.

As one of the Bush campaign's top fund-raisers, Holt is not placed within the organization to speak out on the issues themselves, he said. While the Midlander offers viewpoints in discussion, the vice president is "a pretty independent person," he observed.

Still, events such as Bush's on-air verbal scuffle with CBS Evening News anchor Dan Rather have an effect on Holt's main thrust within the campaign.

The fund-raiser said that following the face-off, "I had a lot of phone calls in favor of his (Bush's) response and the way he handled it." The calls led to further contributions to the campaign, he said.

Holt noted that his own experience in the West Texas oil industry gives him some base from which to offer advice.

Bush's support within the oil industry — a business the vice president himself knows well — remains firm, Holt noted.

Bush, while living in Midland, helped found Zapata Petroleum in 1954. He and his wife, Barbara, moved to Texas in 1948 after the vice president graduated from Yale University with a degree in economics.

Bush's oil industry support comes in the face of one position for which he's already on the record. Against the wishes of many oilmen, Bush logged in against an oil import fee for petroleum brought in from outside the country, Holt said.

Bush will articulate a more far-reaching policy that will encompass the entire energy industry in late June, Holt said.

The Midlander left other issues, such as the plight of embattled Attorney General Ed Meese, for the vice president's own thunder. "He should have the privilege of expressing his thoughts and ideas on that," said Holt.

Another thorny problem — Bush's involvement in the Iran-Contra affair — Holt pronounced a dead issue.

"As far as he's concerned, he's cleared of that, and it's the press that keeps bringing it up," said Holt. "My feeling is that it's been worn out."

Gramm: Media battlefield for war of ideas

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Describing himself as the "Gramm of Gramm-Rudman, trying to do the Lord's work in the Devil'e city," Republican Sen. Phil Gramm Saturday told members of the Texas Associated Press Broadcaster's Association, "I often come to the conclusion that I'm unloved."

Gramm

However, he said, an Associated Press story last year concerning an effort by the Federal Employee Treasurer's Union to raise funds to buy him an artifical heart attests to the fact that he's "not totally unloved in the federal city."

Saying that he was "touched by that," Gramm said of the offer, "I turned it down because I'm doing so well without one."

Although Gramm said he jokes about things like those kind of issues, he "has the heart of a liberal and I keep it in a glass jar on my desk and it bleeds every time I talk about cutting spending," he said.

But, the GOP senator added, "There's one place where I am always appreciated for my good work and that's at the White House."

Saying he was glad to be in Odessa addressing the TAPBA convention, Gramm noted, "I've always liked broadcasters better. I'm always amazed when I read the newspaper. There's always a headline: Gramm-Rudman Cuts; Gramm-Rudman Slashes; Gramm-Rudman Denies. I keep waiting on the headline that says Gramm-Rudman Saves," he said. "And, I wondered why that headline was never written."

Gramm said he discovered "that all the people who write those headlines for the newspapers think that the money government spends comes from heaven, so that when it's not spent it's lost. Broadcasters," he added, "know the rest of the story. The story is that the money government spends does not come from heaven. It comes out of the pockets of the working men and women of America and when government does not spend that money, that money is not lost. It goes back to families to invest in the American dream."

Terming the media, particularly the electronic segment, "the battlefield where the war of ideas takes place," Gramm said, "In America today, the ability to communicate through the media is not only the difference between winning and losing in terms of an individual campaign, but it's the difference between governing America, setting out a clear vision for America's future and having somebody else do it."

"Media, and media coverage, has changed American politics and its changed it for the better in my opinion," Gramm said.

Commenting on political campaigns, particularly the 1988 campaign, Gramm said, "Politicians are always complaining about the media carrying stories about personalities, about the horse race, about who's ahead, who's not ahead and not covering the issues. Maybe that's a legitimate complaint," he said, "maybe it's not. But I think part of the problem is that politicians don't tend to want to spend much time talking about the issues."

Speaking as a Republican and strong supporter of Vice President George Bush, Gramm said he believes the key to Bush being elected president "is for George Bush to define his vision beyond the Reagan vision. I don't think we're going to retain control of the White House by telling people how good things are under Ronald Reagan. The American people don't elect you for what you did. They elect you for what they think you are going to do."

Priest dreams of shrine to Virgin Mary

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The vision of a Marian Shrine in West Texas to glorify God and His Son Jesus Christ may be transformed into a worship amphitheater at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church in Midland.

"It's meant to augment faith," said the Rev. Domingo Estrada, pastor of the 1,500-family Roman Catholic Church of mostly Hispanic families. "We are really drawing from what is already there — a deep faith of the people in the mercy of God through Jesus Christ."

"In West Texas, we don't have a shrine to Mary like the Lourdes (in France) and the (Our Lady of) Fatima (in Portugal)," Estrada said.

It would be the first shrine to the Virgin Mary in West Texas.

"Our contention has always been that people without vision will perish, and people without a dream will founder," said the pastor. "The devotional faith of the people is augmented (by the shrine)."

The church's response to the vision of the domed grotto, held by Estrada and the late Rev. Jim Norman, has been "so affirmative," Estrada said.

"It's like everything you do," he said. "You've got to take one step at a time, and you've got to go slow."

Building of the grotto would be expensive, Estrada said, "but it can be done." The grotto would include tiered seating for 900, a 40-foot berm, and a 20-foot statue of Our Lady of Guadalupe, who, according to church history, appeared in Mexico in 1531 as the Virgin Mary with Jewish features and the complexion of an Aztec indian.

"She was greater than the sun god," Estrada said. "She was greater than the moon god. Yet, she wasn't greater than that which she was adorning — God through Jesus Christ."

Our Lady of Guadalupe brought the Indians, who were oppressed by Europeans, "great dignity and freedom," Estrada said. She appeared as a saint. "All of us are called to be saints," he said.

"She came as a concerned mother for the children who were oppressed and to lead them to the Lord."

The envisioned shrine, in addition to being a devotional place for the faithful, would also serve "to lead others to the Lord."

Today, members of the the 28-year-old church are proving that they have the the wherewithal to build the grotto — the shrine. They are doing that through preserving in smaller things, he said.

Church parishioners are donating their design skills, craftsmanship and labors in building a Sacristy for the Holy Chalice and other sacred vessels and vestments, an upper room for storage, and an Eucharistic Adoration Room adjacent to the church building — an A-frame edifice which Estrada beholds as "majestic."

"If you can do the smaller one (project), then it's possible to do the larger one — to show that it can be done," Estrada said.

"It's step-by-step — learning to be patient with myself, learning to be patient with others. Most of us would like to see this done yesterday."

Midland lawman will get chance to watch Chinese police in action

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Midland County Sheriff's investigator Fred Stubbs shows his business card, which has been translated into Chinese for his three-week trip as part of an American delegation of law enforcement officers.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Duty for a Midland County Sheriff's investigator will be a little bit different for the next three weeks — and will include a routine patrol through the streets of...Shanghai, China?

Fred Stubbs, a Midland County Sheriff's investigator, was the only Texan chosen to join a 20-member delegation of law enforcement officers which will visit the People's Republic of China and Hong Kong. The delegation left Saturday for the three-week sojourn.

"I don't know how they became familiar with me," the 49-year-old Stubbs, a highly decorated U.S. Army officer and former businessman, said of his selection.

"Maybe the national publicity that the sheriff got, that may have helped," he said, laughing about a sheriff's department sting in August 1987 that attracted reporters nationwide.

The delegation is officially referred to as the People to People Law Enforcement Delegation, Stubbs said.

"People to People" — a non-profit organization founded in 1956 by President Dwight Eisenhower to bring together persons of different nations — is sponsoring the trek through its Citizen Ambassador Program, Stubbs said.

The delegation will travel to Seattle, Wash., then stop in Japan for a night before arriving in Beijing, China.

GARY OTT

Burglary victim 'happy' to pay for thief's television viewing habits

An open letter to the two-bit thug who broke into my apartment the other day:

Ott

Dear Mr. Thug:

First of all, let me say a great big "thank you" for not stealing my favorite pair of black socks when you were in my home last Wednesday morning helping yourself to everything else I own.

I'm truly grateful.

As for the things you did take, I'm sure they will be most beneficial to you in your pursuit of happiness. I particularly hope you enjoy the television set. I think you will find it in excellent working condition. I was having a problem with the vertical knob earlier, but not to worry. I had it repaired two weeks ago. This should assure you trouble-free use of the set for at least three more years.

Of course, since you also took my converter box and remote control, you will be able to watch all of those steamy R-rated movies on Cinemax. Please think of me as you view them. They used to be my favorites, too. For what it is worth, Friday is a particularly good night for dirty movies. Just thought I'd let you know. Of course, with your obvious high moral standards, I'm sure you will be spending all of your free time watching the Disney Channel.

By the way, I notified cable company officials of the theft. They were most understanding. They are only going to charge me $300 to replace the items, so don't give it a second thought. I'm happy to pay that puny amount so you can enjoy my television set.

Then, of course, there's the money you took. I'm truly sorry I didn't have any large bills out for you to take. If you would have just let me know in advance, I could have been more accommodating. As for the two jars of spare change you did manage to take, please be advised I have generally used that money for cigarettes. You might want to consider doing the same. And, if you do, I hope you get brown stains on your teeth.

Fondest Regards,
Gary Ott

Yes, dear readers, I officially became a police statistic last week. The old apartment got broken into. Crime is on the rise and I have first-hand knowledge of the trend.

I am what is known as a victim. A person steals from me and I get to pay the piper. Ain't this fun?

Actually, I'm an old pro at getting ripped off. I'm a repeat victim, you might say. It happened to me several years ago when I lived in another town. That time they also broke into my home and took a television set. If this continues I should be able to open my own not-for-profit business. I'll buy new television sets and then sell them at a loss before they get stolen. Or, I could make a game out it. I could sell lottery tickets and let the general public guess when I will next get burglarized. The person nearest the exact date wins a prize — my television set.

I ask you again: Ain't this fun?

The thing that bothered me most about this latest burglary, however, was my reaction. I was cool, calm and collected.

The first time, it was different. I went into a frenzy. I cursed loudly, slammed my fist into the wall and threatened to join the American Nazi Party.

This time, I merely looked to the heavens and said, "Thanks a lot God. I take it You are still unhappy with me for watching R-rated movies on Cinemax."

I then called the police and the officer — David Gregg — showed up a short time later. He was a nice man. We had a delightful chat about all sorts of subjects — including my filthy apartment — while he attempted to lift fingerprints from various objects. He was most professional. When I offered him a beer, he just laughed and said, "Better not. I'm on duty, you know."

Seriously, though, he impressed me. He seemed to genuinely care about what had happened. I'll never see that TV again, of course, but at least I feel like this particular officer had his heart in the right place. He was on my side.

If you are reading this Mr. Police Chief, please give the man a raise.

And, Mr. Thug, if you're reading this, please take my advice regarding the cigarettes. Believe me, you, and your teeth, deserve it.

Gary Ott is city editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Parks, Recreation department offers summertime events

By LYN MILLER

Spring is here and summer is fast approaching, bringing longer daylight hours in which to enjoy activities out-of-doors.

Again this year, the City of Midland Parks and Recreation Department will be offering a wide variety of activities in which both children and adults may participate.

On Saturday at 9 a.m., a track and field clinic is scheduled at Lee High School track for the purpose of familiarizing children with a track meet and encouraging participation. The clinic will introduce the participants to the basic skills necessary to confidently compete in all events in a track meet. Attendance at the clinic, however, is not required for participation in the meet.

Once again, the Parks and Recreation Department and the ARCO Oil and Gas Company are sponsoring the ARCO Jesse Owens Games to be held on Saturday, May 14, at Midland Memorial Stadium.

Any boy or girl whose birth date falls in the year 1974 through 1981 is invited to participate in the meet. No entry fee is required and T-shirts will be distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis. Information and entry forms may be obtained at the Parks and Recreation Office at 300 Baldwin.

Perhaps you would like to learn how to play tennis or maybe just brush up on your skills. If so, make plans to register for tennis classes to be offered by the Parks and Recreation Department.

Tennis lessons for children will be offered in two-week sessions, beginning on June 6 through August 5, Monday through Friday, at the Midland High Tennis Courts, 906 W. Illinois. The cost will be $30 per session, and times and levels of instruction are beginner, 8-9 a.m; beginner, 9-10 a.m.; intermediate, 10-11 a.m..

Tennis lessons for adults will be offered in two-week sessions, beginning on May 23 and ending on August 5, Monday through Friday, with a fee of $30 per session. Times and levels of instruction are beginner and intermediate, 7-8 p.m.

Swimming is a very popular sport during the summer when days are hot. All swimming lessons will be given at Doug Russell Pool, 900 N. Midland Dr., beginning on June 6 and ending on July 29. The fee is $15 per two-week session and lessons will be offered as follows: advanced beginner, 10:30-11 a.m; swimmer, 10:30-11:15 a.m.; beginner IV (7 year olds), 11-11:30 a.m.; intermediate, 11:15 a.m.-noon; beginner II (5 year olds), 11:30 a.m.-noon; beginner III (6 year olds): 1-1:30 p.m.; beginner II (5 year olds) 1:30-2 p.m.

All classes have a limited enrollment, so early registration at the Parks and Recreation Department, 300 Baldwin, is encouraged. Hours of operation are from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., weekdays.

Other activities and special events will be sponsored by the department throughout the summer months, so be sure to watch for special notices, or check with the Parks and Recreation Office.

Anyone who has a question or suggestion regarding services offered by this department, or desires additional information regarding the classes mentioned above, is encouraged to stop by the Parks and Recreation office at 300 Baldwin or to give them a call at 683-4281, ext. 318.

They will be happy to hear from you. Remember, the type of services offered are a direct result of input from the community.

Arms act signed in 1941

President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Lend-Lease Act on March 11, 1941, allowing the United States to lend arms to countries whose defenses were important to the security of the United States.

STUBBS

There, the group — which includes the head of security for the Chevron Corporation, several other police officers, and a public housing official — will attend three days of discussions with officers of the Chinese Ministry of Public Security and the People's Liberation Army.

From Beijing, the delegation will travel to Nanjing, Shanghai, and wind up its visit to China with a look at law enforcement in Guangzhou Province.

From the People's Republic, the delegation will travel to the colony of the "fragrant harbor" — Hong Kong — for meetings with the Royal Hong Kong Police Force.

During the trip, the range of topics will run the gamut of modern law enforcement, from the handling of juvenile offenders to special weapons and tactics (SWAT) training, criminal investigations, bomb squads and canine patrols, firearms training and forensic science.

"My expectations are seeing how a civilization that dates back so far handles its police responsibility," the investigator said as he thought about the trip ahead. "There's a lot to learn, I know that."

The county is not paying for any part of the trip, Stubbs stressed. He added that he and his wife Jean are handling the nearly $5,000 in travel expenses with donations from the Downtown Lions' Club and part of funds raised from a self-defense course taught by two employees of the Midland County District Attorney's office.

Stubbs is no stranger to travel abroad, having trekked through most of Southeast Asia during his two tours with the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War.

But the trip to China will be a first, he said.

"It will definitely be a chance to broaden my horizons," he said. "I felt like it was a real opportunity, and something I didn't want to pass up."

As preparation for the trip, Stubbs enlisted the help of a Chinese student at Midland College, Ester Pui Yeung, who translated dozens of his business cards into her native language.

Realizing he would be acting as an ambassador from Midland, Stubbs also made a stop at the Chamber of Commerce to stock his suitcase with "Midland — Brightest Star in West Texas" buttons.

"I plan to hand those out wherever I go," he said.

Sheriff Gary Painter — who just returned from a management conference at Bandera where he shared ideas with other Texas law officers — said he had no qualms about approving the trip.

"I think it is certainly a big plus that one of our officers has been selected to represent American law enforcement" the sheriff said.

Midland's sister city in China — the teeming Dongying with a population of 1.5 million — is not included on the itinerary, which is Stubb's one regret about the trip, he said.

One of the most interesting events of the trip may be the chance to accompany Shanghai municipal police officers on routine patrol. But might Stubbs — if he sees a crime being committed — be tempted to act instinctively?

Laughing, he said "I have no powers as a law enforcement officer there. I am just a guest in their country.

"Of course, if I see something unusual, then I will report it to the proper authorities."

The delegation will have plenty of time to enjoy the sights, as social and cultural activities have been planned.

The Americans are scheduled to visit the Forbidden City and sites on Tian'anmen Square, the Great Wall at Badaling and the Ming tombs, the Yangste River Bridge, the Jade Buddha Temple, Longhua Pagoda, and Zhongshan Road, known formerly as the Wall Street of foreign powers in China.

Odessan arraigned on attempted capital murder charges

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 39-year-old West Odessa man wounded twice in an exchange of gunfire with Ector County sheriff's deputies Friday night was arraigned on three counts of attempted capital murder of a peace officer Saturday morning.

Peace Justice Manuel Valles set bond at $100,000 on each of the three counts for Terry P. Walls. Walls remained in jail late Saturday night.

Walls is accused of firing a 10-gauge shotgun at deputies who had responded to a shots-fired call near the intersection of Cypress Road and Dorado Circle, about a block south of West 42nd Street and east of Moss Road.

The call came from a neighbor who claimed he had been shot at, according to Sheriff'c Capt. Gene Kloss. When the deputies attempted to talk with Walls he reportedly refused to talk to them.

Sgt. Carl Rogers and Lt. Jerry Grey moved their vehicles away from the mobile home located in the 4000 block of Cypress Road, with Rogers parking about 100-to-150 years away, Grey said. He said they called for backup after leaving the mobile home and Deputy Herschel Callander arrived about the time the first shot was fired at Rogers.

The shotgun blast shattered the rear window of Rogers' patrol unit and a single pellet struck him in the forehead just above the eyes.

Rogers managed to clear the blood from his eyes and fired two shots, with one striking Walls, reports said. Callander fired two shots and Grey fired a total of 10 shots.

Walls was struck in the shoulder and arm by two shots, according to Kloss. He was released from Medical Center Hospital after treatment and questioned by deputies at the sheriff's office.

The shots fired at the officers damaged the vehicles driven by Grey and Callander. Grey's unit was hit on the right side by at least two shotgun blasts, which shattered the glass in the front and rear doors and pockmarked the doors. The rear windshield and radiator of Callander's unit were hit by shotgun blasts.

The initial call of shots being fired was received about 8 p.m. Friday, Kloss said.

HOLT

Still, the issue already has provided fertile ground for Democratic Party front-runner Mike Dukakis, governor of Massachusetts.

In a CBS interview following his own Pennsylvania victory, Dukakis said of Bush: "He sat there and did nothing while we engaged in one of the worst and one of the most misguided adventures in the history of American foreign policy."

A more subtle challenge for the candidate and his aides is the gradual focusing of Bush, an attempt to bring him out from the shadow of a popular sitting president.

While Holt asserts that Bush is "his own man," he adds that "if loyalty is a character flaw, then the vice president is 100 percent guilty."

Greater definition of the candidate "will come into the campaign at the appropriate time," said Holt. "People will be satisfied with his individual ability for leadership."

Talk of a running mate for Bush also is premature, Holt said. While the subject is not one the two normally discuss, "if I'm asked, I'll say how I feel," he said.

Holt's role within the vice president's campaign remains that of fund-raiser, and the Midlander proudly points to amounts gathered so far as evidence of the quality of his candidate.

Two months ahead of schedule, the George Bush for President National Finance Committee has gathered the maximum allowable — $23.7 million — under federal election codes.

With almost $9 million in federal matching funds, the amount to be applied to primary election campaigns will reach about $33 million, Holt said.

Under federal codes, the money only can be spent on primaries, so much attention is given to making sure all money gathered is budgeted into immediate needs, Holt said.

"We abide by it right to the T," Holt said of the Federal Election Commission. The body is "an extremely tough agency that's terribly strict."

The accounting will start anew after each party holds its nominating convention, Holt said. To keep the race on an even footing, each nominee is allotted between $43 million and $45 million to spend between August and November.

While almost all expenditures during that time must come from federal dollars, election laws allow some private gathering, and that work represents Holt's most immediate task, he said.

But outside the talk of budgets and goals, the vice president's Midland connection remained uppermost in Holt's mind.

"To have a guy who started his business career in Midland, Texas — you have to kick yourself to believe its real," he said.

DEATHS

LaVee Mills

Mills

Graveside services for Mrs. LaVee V. Mills, 77, will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at Resthaven Memorial Park with a minister of the First Presbyterian Church officiating.

Mrs. Mills was born July 30, 1910 in Broken Bow, Neb. As a young girl, she and her family moved to Lincoln, Neb., where she was raised. She married Lloyd Mills April 11, 1936 in Lincoln, and they moved to Fort Worth where they lived briefly before their move to West Texas.

They lived in various towns in West Texas before they moved to Midland in 1938.

She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, loved to play bridge and enjoyed quilting. She also loved flowers.

She is survived by her husband, Lloyd C. Mills of Midland; two sons, Richard Lloyd Mills of Weatherford and Jerry Lee Mills of Lubbock; a brother, Robert W. Mills of Lincoln, Neb.; a grandchild, and several nieces and nephews.

Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mildred Leskovitz

Services for Mildred M. Leskovitz, 72, will be held 11 a.m. Monday at the First Baptist Church chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Burial will be at 3:30 p.m. in Rosehill Cemetery in Merkel.

Mrs. Leskovitz died Friday at a local hospital.

A Midland resident since 1953, she was born Jan. 16, 1916 in Madisonville, and was reared in Noodle. She worked for Elder Chevrolet and John I. Moore before opening her own business, Sharp Carpets and Warehouse Carpets.

She retired in 1979.

Survivors include her daughter, Jackie Dozier of Midland; two sisters, Janelle Dozier of Midland and Lazelle Perry of Amarillo; a brother, K.G. Sharp of Baird; and two grandsons.

Memorials should be directed to the American Cancer Society.

Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Robert Cone

Robert W. Cone, 62, of Midland died Friday at his residence.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Monday in the Sizemore Funeral Home Chapel of Memories, with the Rev. Fred Nawarskus officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Cone was born Sept. 28, 1925 in Ironwood, Mich. He married Margaret Milano on Sept. 1, 1941 in Dallas. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College, a veteran of World War II and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret Cone of Midland; two daughters, Nancy Risdon of California and Debbie Luccous of Odessa; two sons, Charles L. Cone and R. William Cone, both of Midland; two brothers, Charles Cone of Tampa, Fla. and Lee Cone of Boston, Mass.; and two grandchildren.

Velma Haynie

Velma Ruth Haynie, 83, of Midland and formerly of Stanton died Saturday in Midland.

Services are pending with Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

Mrs. Haynie was born on Sept. 19, 1904, in Central Texas.

George Besek Sr.

Services for George B. Besek Sr. of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Besek died Saturday afternoon at a local hospital.

Francisco Estrada

Funeral services for Francisco Humberto Estrada, 40, of Midland, will be Monday in Dr. Belizario Dominovez, Chihuahua, Mexico. Services are under the direction of Sizemore Funeral Home.

Estrada died Tuesday.

He was born June 3, 1947 in Mexico and was married to Maria Esther Gomez. He was employed by Welltech Inc. and was a member of the Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Maria Esther Estrada of Mexico; three daughters, Armida Estrada, Nora Estrada and Lizabeth Estrada, all of Mexico; two sons, Francisco Estrada Jr. and Manuel Estrada, both of Mexico; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufugio Estrada and Mr. and Mrs. Rosario Gomez, all of Mexico; and a brother, Francisco J. Estrada of Midland.

SHRINE

In helping to realize the dream of the grotto, church parishioners will be raising funds in an effort called "La Promésa" — The Promise — at the Our Lady of Guadalupe 27th Annual Family Fair on July 9 and 10.

In life's spiritual pilgrimage, Estrada said, "We have to use the gift of faith. We have to be hopeful and keep on loving."

"We asked our people if they would be willing to take this walk of faith with us and build this grotto to the glory of God," he said. "The response has been so affirmative."

Bishop of the diocese, the Most Rev. Michael Pfeifer of San Angelo, noted that the project is "still in the planning stages" and expressed faith in the Midland church.

"Shrines are special places of prayer and devotion," Pfeifer said.

The concept of the shrine in Midland was dreamt by Estrada and late brother-in-the-faith, the Rev. Jim Norman, after they became the church's priests in 1986.

Estrada said when he first walked into the "majestic" church building and saw the crucifix and the dove, the representation of the Holy Spirit and of peace, he said, "'I feel like I belong here — a deep sense of belonging.'"

"We are delighted to be here," Estrada said. "The people are warm and sensitive."

Norman died last year.

"We lost one saint in Father Jim," Estrada said, "and gained another saint in Father (Michael) Slattery," associate church pastor.

"Sometimes I ask, 'Lord, what did we do to deserve such good people?' We have been exceptionally blessed."

The 45-year-old Estrada, who became pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church in 1986, said that the church's projects and missions are "all merely means to an end — to reach the goal which is our heavenly home."

"You've got to be able to walk the walk, go the pace, your pace, according to the given circumstances and situation and to be able to adjust," Estrada said. "Whatever time it takes" to build the grotto, "we will be here."

He said Bush, rather than concentrating on successes of the past, should convey to voters his vision of how the next hill is to be climbed.

"My vision for America's future, and I believe George Bush's vision, is a vision of America growing, providing more opportunities for more people," he said.

Gramm termed the current election a "watershed election." For that reason, he said, politicians should come out and say what they stand for and they must say it "in a way that is relevant to the ongoing public debate."

Support group for diabetics will be meeting

From Staff Reports

Persons with Type I and Type II diabetes and their families are invited to a support-group meeting and reception sponsored by the Midland Chapter of the American Diabetes Association (ADA) at 7 p.m. Monday in the Allison Cancer Center at Midland Memorial Hospital.

The reception will feature foods specially prepared by Midland Memorial Hospital dieticians and "will enable persons with diabetes and their families to share experiences about living with their disease," according to ADA Midland representative Kara Jennings.

Additional information on the meeting may be obtained by telephoning Ms. Jennings at 682-0314.

Officers investigating damaged equipment

From Staff Reports

Midland County Sheriff's officers are trying to find out who shot a piece of earth-moving equipment with a .22-caliber rifle repeatedly, causing at least $8,000 damage.

According to reports, the front-end dirt loader tractor owned by Danny's Backhoe Service of Midland was parked at a job site west of County Road 120 late Thursday.

When the equipment was checked late Friday, it had been damaged, reports said.

Texas Society to Prevent Blindness officially opens Midland branch

From Staff Reports

The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness has officially opened its Midland branch.

According to Midland Branch Executive Director Jeannette Bryant, the office is ready to assit the community in preventing blindness.

"The opening comes at a most opportune moment because May is Sight Saving Month in Texas. The Midland branch will be participating in this statewide function for the first time," Ms. Bryant said.

TSPB initially developed an interest in opening a Midland branch after receiving a number of calls for its programs and services. The programs include free vision screenings for pre-school children, free glaucoma screenings for adults, eye safety programs for industry, schools, farms, homes and sports, support materials for older adults and the aging eye and eye-preservation education through literature, workshops, seminars and audio-visual aids.

Last year, TSPB screened 48,840 pre-schoolers with 2,833 referred for professional eye care and 25,385 adults for glaucoma with 279 referred for professional eye care.

TSPB also has branches in Amarillo, Austin, El Paso, Houston, Galveston, Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Tyler.

The Midland branch's executive committee includes C.D. "Bud" Martin, president; J.D. Faircloth, vice president of financial development; Carolyn Cropper, vice president of programs; Charles Spence, vice president of public relations; Kathy Kennedy, secretary; and Allen McGuire, treasurer.

Board members include Ernest Angelo, Dr. James M. Arrington, Mrs. Jeanne Beach, B.J. Cook, Mrs. Cropper, Raymond C. "Skeet" Doss, Mrs. Kennedy, Frankie Mamola, Martin, McGuire, Mrs. Jan O'Neill, Mrs. Sue Snelson, Spence, Mrs. Norma Webb and Vance S. Wittie.

Dr. A.H. Meckley is serving as advisor to the board.

MISD trustee vote sets new course

Saturday's school trustee election will mark a major change for the Midland Independent School District. For the first time, voters will elect representatives from single-member districts, a change that resulted from a federal court lawsuit against the district by minority groups opposed to the old system of electing the board members at-large.

That much of the community was receptive to the change was reflected perhaps in the fact that 23 candidates are seeking the seven positions. While each candidate has particular attributes to bring to the board and some are obviously more qualified to serve than others, the overall concern and caring exhibited by the entire slate and their interest in the future of education in Midland are above question. Midland residents should be proud to have such outstanding school board prospects.

Of utmost importance this year, especially, is choosing a board that can work together in harmony — and do so quickly — for the good of the entire district. The task won't be simple. Most board members will be newcomers, since only two incumbents are seeking re-election. And there will be a number of important issues facing the new board, not the least of which will be determined by the outcome of the $11.8 million bond issue to be voted on at the same time as the board.

How those bonds will be spent if the expenditure is approved will be the responsibility of the new board, and if the bond issue is rejected, dealing with the district's anticipated student enrollment increase and the mandate of House Bill 72 will fall to the new board.

But while the outcome of the bond issue is crucial, it's not the only issue of importance that will face MISD in coming years. Teacher salaries, equipment, the goal of two equal high schools, balancing enrollments, AIDS and sex education, curriculum changes and many other issues will keep the new board busy in the months and years ahead. Picking the best board members to face those challenges is important.

With that goal in mind, the Reporter-Telegram met with each of the candidates individually and attended forums at which they addressed issues.

Following are our recommendations by district:

District 1: James E. Fuller. An educator by profession, Fuller has taught English at Midland College the last 13 years. He stresses the need for recruitment of more minority instructors and a return to firmer discipline. He also believes MISD must address its minority dropout problem.

District 2: Tony Carrillo. A product of MISD, Carrillo stresses the need to work toward equality of all Midland schools and says the board members should meet not only with the constituents of their particular districts, but also with students to learn of their concerns.

District 3: Ken Morrison. A certified public accountant, Morrison cites the need for a total English immersion program. Bilingual education is needed in the early years, he says, but the schools have failed if a child cannot speak, read and write English when he leaves school.

District 4: Jim Builta. Builta, an employee of Southwestern Bell Telephone, stresses the need for getting a board that will be unified in its work for the children of Midland and not be political in nature. He also stresses the need for a return to better discipline.

District 5: George G. Staley. Experience dealing with multi-million dollar annual budgets and strong associations in the Midland business community are Staley's primary strengths. He will bring needed expertise to the board.

District 6: A. Joseph "Joe" Reed. Just completing a term on the old board, Reed would bring the needed carryover expertise for the new board. His presence could help the board "hit the ground running."

District 7: John L. Kennedy. A certified public accountant, Kennedy stresses that the board must guard against single-district interests and, instead, work for the interests of the entire district. He also believes parents must be expected to take more responsibility for policing their children in regard to moral and ethical values.

Greenwood election offers good choices

Voters in Greenwood will join their Midland counterparts Saturday in casting ballots, but the circumstances of the elections are markedly different. Whereas Midland voters will be picking their first board of trustees from single-member districts, Greenwood's residents will be choosing three at-large members to the Greenwood Independent School District board from a slate of seven candidates.

After interviewing each of the Greenwood candidates, we are impressed with their dedication to the goal of achieving the best quality education possible for the district's schoolchildren. The candidates all recommend working toward a broader offering of high school courses.

For years, the Greenwood district has been known for its strict disciplinary codes in terms of conduct, clothes and hair lengths and each of the candidates noted they would continue to support those policies along with the school's "closed campus" policy.

There are few, if any, points of difference between the candidates on any "issues" facing the school district. The main difference is experience in serving on the board. Two of the candidates are incumbents — James Donnell in Place 6, challenged by John Underwood, and Don Morgan in Place 7, challenged by Glen Evans. The other three men — Pete Wilkinson, Johnny Womack and James Mashburn — are hoping to fill the unexpired term in the Place 2 position.

All the candidates are qualified and sincere in their desire to serve the Greenwood area.

Residents of Greenwood Independent School District have a tradition of showing strong interest in how their school functions and a reputation of involvement where it is concerned.

With seven residents offering to serve, it would be unfortunate if that interest was reflected this year by a meager turnout at the polls.

We urge qualified voters to show their continued interest in GISD by taking the time and effort to vote Saturday.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, May 1, the 122nd day of 1988. There are 244 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 1, 1960, the Soviet Union shot down an American U-2 reconnaissance plane near Sverdlovsk and captured its pilot, Francis Gary Powers. Imprisoned for espionage, Powers was released by the Soviets in 1962 in exchange for a Soviet spy captured by the U.S.

On this date:

In 1786, Mozart's opera "The Marriage of Figaro" premiered in Vienna.

In 1884, construction began on the first "skyscraper," a 10-story structure in Chicago built by the Home Insurance Co. of New York.

VP Bush mystery to some on Cabinet

WASHINGTON — A Sphinx-like George Bush sat through hundreds of Cabinet meetings during nearly eight years of the Reagan administration and rarely revealed his opinion. If he had strong feelings about anything the Cabinet discussed, they are a mystery to most of those who worked with him.

Jack Anderson

We recently surveyed 33 past and present Reagan Cabinet members about Bush. From their responses emerged a picture of a man who was indecisive, reluctant to join any political squabble that might put him in a tight spot and silent during Cabinet meetings apparently because he feared his pearls of wisdom would leak to the press.

One Cabinet secretary, speaking off the record, summed up Bush this way: "He spoke up in the meetings, but not always, mostly to ask questions, not to give conclusions." Bush appeared to act as a moderator for the president. "He seemed to want to make sure the president got a good explanation," but he offered no opinions himself.

"He was just there," another Cabinet member told us. "I don't remember any contributions."

One Cabinet member, former Secretary of Energy James B. Edwards, remembered a different Bush. "He expressed his opinion freely around the Cabinet table on a variety of issues," Edwards said. "But I don't recall his ever disagreeing violently with the president or even disagreeing markedly with the president."

Bush's tendency to keep his lips zipped goes back to an early White House meeting at which he had spoken freely. A week later, his opinions were leaked to the Wall Street Journal. "He never wanted to be quoted again in any of these sessions," a Cabinet member told us.

Bush's spiritless record as vice president is bound to plague his campaign during the general election if voters want to know who Bush will be when he is no longer joined at the hip with his mentor.

The publication of memoirs by Reagan staffers isn't helping Bush look like a man who can hold his own. Michael Deaver said that Bush's contribution included finding a joke of the day to amuse the president. Former presidential spokesman Larry Speakes is even less flattering in his controversial kiss-and-tell book, "Speaking Out," written with co-author Robert Pack. They call Bush a "perfect yes man." At a crisis meeting of top foreign policy advisers during the fall of the Ferdinand Marcos regime in the Philippines, Speakes took notes on the free-for-all debate among the advisers. Next to his notation, "VP" is a blank space. "He had spoken, I know, but what he had said had not been worth my recording," Speakes wrote about Bush's contribution.

It is like pulling teeth to get even friends of Bush to come up with examples of his impact on the Reagan administration. Some of that is Bush's fault. He refuses to share what transpires between him and Reagan during their weekly lunches. Bush maintains that it is at those lunches where he really shines.

That would be fine if Ronald Reagan was the only voter going to the polls Nov. 8.

The millions of American voters who will decide the election aren't getting many clues from Reagan, either. In an interview with USA Today last September, Reagan praised Bush as a "pivotal player." But when pressed for an example or two, Reagan said, "I can't answer in that context."

The president concluded that being governor was the best preparation for the presidency. That sounds like a slogan Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis should put on a button.

It is generally concluded, even among his detractors, that Bush's strong point is foreign policy. But specific examples are hard to come by. He was a strong advocate for removing our Marines from Lebanon after the 1983 massacre of 241 Marines in their Beirut barracks.

Bush's aides also say he interceded in 1985 and 1986 when Attorney General Edwin Meese tried to eliminate an executive order requiring certain affirmative action standards in federal hiring practices.

RUSSELL BAKER

Hanging up on Hair Loss Council's a loser!

The telephone just rang and I picked it up and — this is no joke — a machine said, "Hello, I'm from the Hair Loss Council." Before it could say another word, I hung up, as I always do when machines try to start phone conversations.

Russell Baker

This time, however, I regretted the rudeness before the receiver had stopped rattling in its cradle. Yes, the thing had actually said, "I'm from the Hair Loss Council."

My reflexes had betrayed me. In their zeal to uphold my record of never letting a telephoning machine deliver more than eight words of sales pitch, they had ruined my chance to communicate at last with the mysterious Hair Loss Council.

I waited for the machine to call back, but it did not. Machines rarely do, though the machines of the Hair Loss Council, I thought, might make an exception if the council really wanted to talk to somebody.

What the Hair Loss Council wanted to say I cannot guess, because the council's activities are absolutely secret and its members are sworn to silence. It is said that those who violate the oath are thrown into gigantic vats of lost hair containing a high percentage of mustache hair, which slowly tickles them to death.

Rumors in the international underworld have it that the council has been importing low-cost lost hair from Asia and mixing it with lost domestic hair. Congressmen who want the United States to stay competitive with the rest of the world are not laughing at the thought of the authentic American product being overwhelmed by Asian hair with inferior foreign hair tonic.

Today's Hair Loss Council was founded in the 18th century as a secret society to track down and punish wig thieves who preyed on elegant gentlemen, as well as rugged fathers of their country, who felt naked without their powdered wigs.

Armed wig highwaymen terrorized the countryside with their blood-chilling command, "Your wig or your life!" When the courts refused to levy sentences greater than 30 days suspended, except in thefts of judges' wigs (a hanging offense), the wig-wearing citizenry took law into their own hands and formed the Hair Loss Council.

Thereafter, wig bandits knew that if caught they could look forward to being tarred and covered with wig powder. It is said the council still carries on this tradition today by tracking down holdup men who take victims' toupees, then cutting the felons' hair and dipping it along with their pistols in a bucket of molasses.

Perhaps so. Perhaps this is why so few stickup men go for toupees anymore. There are ugly rumors, however, that the council is now more interested in creating hair loss than in punishing those who cause it.

As with so much else in American life, the Pentagon is said to be behind this sinister development in the Hair Loss Council's character.

No, the dreaded hair bomb, long rumored to be under development, is not involved. The hair bomb, packed with billions of tiny, chopped fragments of hairs Americans lose every day, would, if exploded over a large city, make much of the population sneeze itself to death. The technology is well understood, but the labor costs of chopping into small, sneeze-inducing lengths all the lost hair required for such a bomb was too much even for President Reagan.

On the other hand, the Pentagon is rumored to be intensely interested in Hair Stack as a method for confusing enemy attackers about the location of its intercontinental missiles.

As its name suggests, Hair Stack would be just that: a gigantic mound of lost hair concealing, or maybe not concealing, an ICBM. With the fashion for shorter hair among men, it should be easy to sweep up enough hair from barbershop floors, as well as beauty parlors and shower-drain strainers, to create thousands of Hair Stacks across the country.

Then let some enemy just try to guess where the ICBM is, heh, heh, heh. Hair Stack: better than the old railroad MX missile shell-game deployment, some say.

In any case, if the Pentagon goes for Hair Stack lost hair will become as precious as gold. So maybe, as the cynics whisper, the Hair Loss Council really is more interested now in creating hair loss than in fighting toupee crime in the streets.

I don't know anything for sure, and, mind you, I've said nothing. I just wish I hadn't been so quick to hang up when that machine said, "I'm from the Hair Loss Council."

My interest? Strictly professional. I'm a newspaperman, after all, and there's bound to be an Ed Meese angle. Always is.

Stanford's curriculum change has undertone

WASHINGTON — Descending on Stanford to smite it hip and thigh, Secretary of Education William Bennett may have felt as the 19th-century wit did when surrounded by curates: like a lion in a den of Daniels. He came to charge that the Daniels had been intimidated into dropping a Western civilization course required of all freshmen that emphasized the reading of 15 classics by Homer, Dante and other (the reformers noted, austerely) white males.

George F. Will

The new course will be CIV (Culture, Ideas and Values), which its most ardent advocates say will be innocent of the previous course's sin, Eurocentrism, which is a close cousin of racism and sexism. Professors will be directed to include works by "women, minorities and persons of color." Were not the Navy an instrument of imperialism, Stanford might adapt its slogan: "Join Stanford and see the world."

But will you see it through ideological filters? There is nothing inherently alarming about curriculum revision, and any selection of canonical texts invites intellectual argument. The worrisome aspect of Stanford's debate is its political undertone.

Some CIV advocates understand that the idea of a canon is incompatible with the central tenet of modernity, and for that reason they rejoice in anything that dilutes or disputes any canon. That tenet is this: The world is a bazaar of cultures, a cafeteria of "values," and no hierarchy of choices can be established by reason.

A backlash against this notion is apparent in the astonishingly large readership for Allan Bloom's book, "The Closing of the American Mind." Bloom's thesis is that modern nations, and none more than ours, have founded themselves on reason, so a crisis in the university, supposedly the seat of reason, is a profound political crisis. If any "commitment" to "values" is a non-rational act arising from factors other than reason — acculturation, race, sex, class bias, whatever — then all choices are political and all politics is essentially non-rational.

Disparagement of the power of reason to reach authoritative conclusions about the best way to live leads to disparagement of the idea of classic text valuable for comprehending the good life. Such disparagement may seem an expression of intellectual humility. Often, however, it is an act of aggression by people who are sure they are right about one thing: The West represents an overestimated, overbearing and perhaps inferior tradition.

Stanford would have been spared much trouble if Rousseau had been an Eskimo, if Lear had raged upon a blasted heath in Peru and if an Indian had written "Middlemarch." The trouble is, in part, that they have become pawns in an academic power struggle.

In the mixture of motives behind Stanford's curriculum revision there is a new wrinkle on special-interest scholarship. Such scholarship began with "black studies" and "women's studies." Not content with ginning up ersatz disciplines, the political academics would now dismantle courses which, being organized around canonical texts, affirm this fact: America is predominantly a product of the Western tradition and is predominantly good because that tradition is good.

Isaac Barchas, a Stanford undergraduate studying classics, sees exactly what is wrong with looking for texts to allocate in an academic spoils system to satisfy racial, sexual and ethnic groups. It is disrespectful of the idea of a text independent of its context. It also is an affront to the unifying theme of the West's rich tradition. The theme is that reason matters supremely, whereas individuals' accidental attributes, such as race, are irrelevant to the great enterprise of thoughtfulness.

The "great books" approach to undergraduate education has, says Barchas, this great advantage. Students are taught by great authors with the assistance of professors, rather than vice versa. When texts are chosen from a long and constantly changing list assembled to satisfy shifting standards of "relevance," the academic experience becomes rootless. Indeed it teaches rootlessness.

Furthermore, pedagogy that focuses on the social context that supposedly produced and explains the text's significance, rather than on the text itself, elevates the professor unduly. It places him in the grand — too grand — role of the supplier of social theories which are supposedly indispensable for interpretation of the texts. Thus today's teachers with their agendas, not the texts, become the sources of illumination. Then there is the intellectuals' self-dramatizing notion that they should comprise an "adversary culture."

All this is a recipe for politicizing universities. Stanford has not altogether jettisoned the anchor of canonical texts. However, it has taken a step on the downward path toward defining a university not as a transmitter of culture but as a "demystifier" of culture and an advocate of the politically ascendant agendas of the moment.

Will democracy be subverted by voters' apathy?

Modisett

With an important election less than a week away now, an appropriate topic is... apathy. Specifically voter apathy.

It's been noted on more than one occasion in a political campaign that everybody likes to talk about voter apathy. It's a "hot" and gossipy topic. After all, we all realize "Ol' Joe" didn't stop by the polls to vote on his way home last year. He went to Freddy's Bar instead.

The problem is that talking about voter apathy doesn't do much to alleviate low turnout, that bane of the democratic process.

Robert Maynard Hutchins, renowned for his unconventional theories of higher education, once opined that apathy is the greatest threat to democracy. Said Hutchins: "The death of a democracy is not likely to be an assassination by ambush. It will be a slow extinction from apathy, indifference and undernourishment."

Apathy is even now eating away at the foundations of democracy. Even in Midland. For the past several weeks, Midlanders have had the golden opportunity to take part in one of several forums featuring the 23 candidates for the Midland Independent School District board of trustees and to get more acquainted with the people who will shape the future of education in Midland. Yet, for the most part, the forums have been sparsely attended.

Likewise, the Greenwood Independent School District trustee ballot will feature seven candidates in three races and Greenwood residents will have the opportunity this week to attend a forum where they can meet the candidates and discuss the future of the school. It will be a good opportunity to gain first-hand the information needed to make voting decisions.

Of course in the other positions to be decided in Midland County next Saturday only a single candidate is seeking each, but voters still should make themselves informed so they will know the quality of the people being elected and can express to those individuals their concerns. But will the voters do that? If the past is a good indicator, only a minority of them will and that's sad.

Perhaps voters are disillusioned because in the past they've voted with strong convictions only to see their candidate lose — or, worse, to get elected only to perform in a manner less than expected. That is disheartening, yet it's no reason to lose faith in the system.

The way anything in this life is changed is through human involvement. Get involved. Go to rallies. Go to forums. Be educated and vote. No one else can do it for you and if you don't do it, it won't get done. Be a part and make a change in our political system.

Don't let Hutchins' prophecy come true.

Demand accountability from MISD candidates

The main purpose (believe it or not) of our educational system is to train our children to meet life and its challenges. To do that they must be supplied with the tools to make a living. The basic tools upon which all future education rests are the abilities to read, to write, and to calculate — the three R's. Our present educational system is not meeting this need.

Remedial education should be handled in the first and second grades. Social promotion of those students who cannot read or do mathematics is a crime against them, against their parents, against society.

The educational system must be held accountable for these formative years. It is counterproductive to attempt remedial education measures in middle school, in junior high, in high school, and/or junior college. Obviously this approach is not working.

Emphasis must be to instill and develop these skills at the lower elementary levels, that they may be effectively utilized at the higher levels.

I urge each of you to question every candidate for the MISD board on this matter. Unless our elected school board is willing to demand accountability from the classroom teacher, we will inflict more illiterates and semi-literates to live on the edges of society. Do your duty: demand accountability from both the school board and the educational system. They are your children.

Remember students when voting May 7th

On May 7th, we will have an opportunity to become a vital part of Midland's future.

Elementary education is of vast significance to our city, our state, and our nation, as it is the most influential institution in children's lives, outside the family. As a teacher at Henderson Elementary School writing for the Henderson Elementary teachers, we want to help shape our students with lasting impressions of themselves, to mold their aspirations and skills and to introduce them to their own culture, their country, and to the world in which they will grow up.

When you vote on May 7th, consider voting yes for our children.

Staley committed to quality education

During the past two years Midland residents have witnessed a favorable resolution of a key issue which faced the Midland Independent School District Board. This being, of course, the redistricting of our high school boundaries. On May 7, voters will elect up to seven new trustees to the School Board and thereby create a body with a positive momentum to move education forward for our children.

George Staley is a candidate from District 5. He present a positive attitude with dedication and leadership abilities — the type of trustee we all hope will represent us from all seven districts if we are truly committed to providing our children with high quality and equal educational opportunities.

George is supportive of the current MISD administration and the high school boundary plan because it is intrinsically positive, fair and equal for all. He will oppose any special interest group who would attempt to divert MISD from a positive purpose and direction.

We need George Staley on our School Board — we ask District Five voters to educate themselves on the issues and cast your ballot for George Staley.

Reeves misquoted on high school stance

In the article on the school board candidates in the April 20 issue of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Mrs. Connie Reeves was misquoted on the separate high school issue. She is in favor of separate high schools and believes in equality of education in each. A correction was printed, but we wanted to be sure the public was informed of her stand on this important issue.

Mrs. Reeves currently has 3 children in Midland Independent School District and is an excellent candidate for District 7 School Board Trustee. She has some very good ideas and will listen to parents, children, teachers, and the community on all school issues and will work to improve the elementary integration policy. Her decisions will be based on how well they benefits children and education.

We are casting our vote for Connie Reeves on May 7.

Jessica's rescue more than 'economic boon'

On my return to Midland after several weeks "on the road," I find the front page news reporting a tacky, dreary squabble between groups over the rescue film deal.

Then last night I heard a local TV commentator refer to the film as a possible "economic boon" to the local area.

Good grief! Doesn't Midland realize that the simple fact of Jessica's rescue has been a "boon" in itself?

When I travel about the country, I can't give my address without being asked "How is the little girl there?" All my out-of-town business calls go like this: "This is so-and-so from Midland, Texas. May I speak with so-and-so?" Odds are, the answer will be, "Yes, but how is little Jessica doing?"

Jessica put us on the map, and now I'm bustin' with pride at playing her (and Midland's) outside rep. You can't put a price tag on that.

About the film deal: Since the film and TV industry love to portray what's wrong with the country — it would be nice to try and balance that with a positive, inspiring (I almost said uplifting) story like Jessica and Midland and the rescue. For that reason, I am so pleased to read of Mr. Merritt and his blue-ribbon panel having taken steps to select a film maker and contain this haggling. Good for that.

However, if this selection of film maker is going to lead to protracted legal hassles and headlines, I say run out of town any and all commercial exploitation. Let them sue each other over the spoils of near tragedy — elsewhere — while we forget the film and get on with better things. I hope no local judge will let these birds foul our nest.

As often said, Jessica's spunk, her rescuers' courage and the community's support and generosity brought out the best in us during the ordeal.

But there is another thing my travels reveal to me: We weren't alone. In addition to all those silent prayers we offered up during that week in October, there were a zillion others doing the same thing around the country.

Now let's don't disappoint all those good folks, and ourselves, by showing our worst side and start getting greedy and self-serving with this film business.

Either get on with it, quietly, or let's run 'em off and just sit back and count our blessings, quietly.

Unborn suffer from 'war' over 'rights'

General William T. Sherman was correct when he said, "War is hell." In this century alone the wars of this nation have cost America 426,817 soldiers killed in action. If you add in the other deaths related to war such as accidents and illness, the total rises to a staggering 632,716 deaths. These are the figures for America's losses during World War I, World War II, the Korean "Police Action" and the Vietnam "Conflict." Adding in the casualties suffered in all the other wars our nation has fought, you will arrive at a grand total of 957,839 war-related deaths.

That's a lot of dads who didn't get to see their youngsters grow up. That's a lot of young men who never got to grow up and have their own families. That's a lot of people physically, emotionally and mentally scarred by all those wars.

Now, I want you to answer a question for me. Is it safer in America today to be a young man of military age or a baby in a mother's womb? Before you answer, consider this: In 1987, America's mothers and their consenting doctors killed more Americans than have perished in all the wars in this history of our country. In any single day, just like today, more Americans will be killed in our sparkling clean hospitals and clinics than were killed in action in the War for Independence from 1775 to 1783. In the past 14 days — less than half a month — more Americans were legally killed than died in the entire 12 years of the no-win war in Vietnam. War is certainly hell. But then, so is abortion.

There are those today who would call themselves "pro-choice," saying that a woman has the right to choose whether or not to have a baby. There remains, however, a simple biological fact: If a woman gets pregnant, she will have a baby. There is no choice in the matter. The baby will either be born alive or it will be born dead. The only "choice" in being "pro-choice" lies in choosing either to allow the baby to be born alive or to murder the baby while it is still in the mother's womb.

It is time we stop this hellish war against the unborn of America.

Dog shouldn't run loose to foul other's property

I am a furious property owner who lives at 427 W. Shandon.

Someone in our neighborhood — we don't know who — has a very large dog. Whoever owns this dog has no right to turn it loose to use other people's yards as a latrine, thus robbing them of the enjoyment and use of property they have bought and pay taxes on.

Be warned! I am going to keep a close watch and when I see your dog using my yard I will follow it home and then file charges against you. There are leash laws here.

Why do people turn their dogs out like this? Whoever it is, let your dogs mess up your own places. Just keep them away from mine.

Christmas in April shows selfless love in action

The City of Midland is grateful for the Christmas in April program that was started some twenty years ago by Bobby Trimble. Because of his efforts, many homes have been refurbished and made more livable for needy families. Members of various churches, clubs, and other organizations have assisted him with this work to express their love for those less fortunate.

This is the second year for the Masons in Midland to help in this good work and this year they have undertaken a major remodeling project. The Masons will work from three to six weeks refurbishing the home of Mr. & Mrs. Joe Prada at 2106 North Jackson Street.

The family has joined in helping with this work, and to show their appreciation, they have served lunch to the workers each Saturday.

We thank God for men like Bobby Trimble and the Masons in our community. May the world be a better place for these good deeds rendered to those in need.

We need to know more about Jerusalem project

The recent sketchily-publicized Jerusalem City A.D. 30 project has caught the attention of myself and several friends of mine. We were discussing it today and also the push that's going on to diversify this area's economy.

The aim of diversification and what this project is offering — maybe 10,000 jobs and a large tourist-trade base for who-knows-how-many-years — seem made for each other.

Why hasn't the paper published more on the project, including more on the background of the father of the idea and possibly where one might send some kind of donation to the project? Have we heard all that your publication has learned? It is certainly a project that any town could be proud of, and it appears to have a potential that this town needs!

Christians, Jews come together to honor Israel

If you are living in fear and troubled by the recent events and threat of war in the Mediterranean, and do not have the knowledge or understanding of what is happening in our world at this present time, I would like to invite you to attend a very special event. At this celebration, you will learn how all the events that are now taking place worldwide are fitting together in a perfect jigsaw puzzle and center around the modern State of Israel.

On Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Convention Center in Midland, Jews and Christians of Midland and Odessa will join together to celebrate Israel's 40th birthday, called "A Night To Honor Israel," in obedience to the Scriptures.

Come and you will also learn why, from our only Authority, the Bible, we as a nation must support Israel for our continued existence, and why The Church should comfort, pray for, bless and intercede for His chosen people.

God said, "I will bless them that bless My people."

Come and receive a great blessing in participating in this tremendous anniversary celebration!

Hunger holocaust needs to be ended

By TERRI VINSON

Terri Vinson, a lifelong Midlander, is on the public relations committee of CROP Walk, sponsored by Church World Service. She is a legal assistant with the Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson law firm.

It is hard to conceive of a human need more basic than food. Food is essential to sustain life and when people become devoid of this essential need, it becomes a moral imperative of the highest priority to provide them with sustenance.

Yet, while more than half a billion people are starving, the nations of the world are spending nearly $3 billion a day on arms and other military expenditures!

Has this become our highest priority? Between 13 and 18 million people, the majority of which are children, die each year because of hunger. Most of these hunger-related deaths occur in Asia, Africa and Latin America — the Third World. This hunger holocaust takes as many lives as would a Hiroshima-sized bomb dropped in the Third World every other day.

As Christians, we cannot limit our concern to a person's spiritual needs while ignoring his other problems. How can we spread the word that there is life after death to people who are wondering if there is life before death?

The cause of hunger is poverty and it is not limited to the Third World. In the United States, 35.3 million citizens live below the poverty line of $10,178 for a family of four.

Poverty is an endless loop for those caught up in it. The longer they are without access to the resources they need to change their situation, the longer they remain in a state of poverty and the more difficult it becomes to break out of the cycle. To help these people get out of their present state of hunger and poverty, we must make them healthy, literate, productive and self-reliant.

Church World Service is one of the international relief organizations with these goals in mind. CWS works with other Christian relief organizations and their philosophy is: "Together we can do more than we can do alone." CROP Walk is the community fund-raising effort of CWS.

At 9 a.m. Saturday, May 21, concerned Midlanders will embark on a 10-kilometer walk originating at Midland College.

Of the funds raised, 75 percent will go to overseas relief and development work and 25 percent will go to our own Permian Basin Food Bank which distributes food to local charitable agencies, such as Casa de Amigos, Community & Senior Services, High Sky Children's Ranch, Midland Baptist Association Crisis Center, Midland Salvation Army, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Teen Challenge, Victory Outreach, Blessing for Obedience (which includes our recently established soup kitchen), along with various church food programs.

The food bank is a non-profit affiliate of Second Harvest based in Chicago.

Food donations come from the food industry— producers, wholesalers, retailers and grocery chains and is "apparently wholesome food" (as defined by the Good Faith Donor Act) which is not salable for a variety of reasons (perhaps the packaging was damaged by an overeager forklift) and would otherwise be dumped. By donating damaged goods, businesses save on dumping costs, improve their corporate image, and may enjoy tax credits. The food bank in turn has food to distribute to the needy.

However, in order to nutritionally balance the food distributed, the food bank needs cash donations. This is especially true in light of the recently diminished supply of cheese, rice, powdered milk and honey which was once part of the government's commodity distribution program.

There are 1200 families in Midland who depend upon the monthly TEFAP food distribution and the loss of these commodities will affect them tremendously. By supporting the food bank, we are supporting the agencies who help these same people.

The CROP Walk needs walkers and the walkers need sponsors. I urge individuals, companies, and organizations to join together in this effort to alleviate world hunger and support our food bank.

Please call one of the CROP Walk recruiters listed below: Joe Peabody at 687-5410 or 682-7033; Sue Holmer at 685-1830 or Terri Vinson at 697-7470.

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 700 words or less.

Predicted 'economic collapse' fading into future

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — This week brought some more encouraging news about the economy and another setback for the judgment of those who keep scaring people with gloomy predictions about a recession or disastrous depression.

Earlier this year one well-known Washington prognosticator wrote that economic catastrophe is "around the corner."

In February, a Washington Post writer said the "big" economic "squeeze is upon us" and will take one of two forms — the "Painful or the Very Painful Version." This journalistic genius said the consumer "spending spree" that fueled the economic expansion President Reagan's recovery program brought about was "petering out."

So what did the Commerce Department report this week? It reported that the economy grew at a 2.3 percent annual rate during the first quarter of this year and that one of the major contributing factors was consumer spending that climbed at a 3.8 percent rate.

Other factors, according to the Commerce Department, were a big jump in business spending for new equipment and further gains in export sales which were up 22 percent from 1987 levels while imports climbed by only 11.1 percent. Inflation was restrained, rising at a 3.7 annual percentage rate, up only 1 percent from the previous quarter.

The increase in exports, made possible by the president's policy of lowering the dollar value, enabled export manufacturers to reduce substantially big inventories built up in the fourth quarter of last year and which it was feared would lead to sharp cuts in production and employment this year.

Leading economists interpreted the encouraging performance of the economy in the first quarter as reassurance there will be no recession this year.

Business is expected to be better in the second than in the first half of the year, with economic growth, now in its 65th month, continuing the greatest peacetime expansion in our country's history.

The National Association of Manufacturers' chief economist, Jerry Jasinowski, said: "Consumers have shaken off the stock market crash, excess inventories are being worked off and business is investing in new equipment at an astonishing pace." Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co., said the Commerce Department report showed "a good healthy picture of the U.S. economy."

Now that the pessimists have been proven wrong about a recession this year, they will undoubtedly start predicting one for next year, but economists with sounder judgment say there is no fundamental reason why there has to be one unless, as President Reagan said, the gloom sayers scare consumers away from the shops.

When one looks back, it is really incredible how wrong some of the economic forecasters have been. In 1985, they were predicting a recession in 1986. In 1986, they predicted it for '87. They thought the stock market plunge last October would lead to the same type of Great Depression that followed the 1929 market crash.

They overlooked an important difference. World production, income and jobs were contracting before the 1929 crash while economic growth, especially in this country, was expanding last October and is still going on.

So let's be cheerful instead of fearful about the economy this spring and confident in the basic economic strength of our great country.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Midlander named to panel that establishes standards

Midland Independent School District bilingual program coordinator Dr. John Martinez has been named to the Performance Standards Advisory Committee. The purpose of this committee is to assist the Texas Education Agency (TEA) in identifying and establishing performance standards.

The advisory committee consists of a select group of educators from around the state with demonstrated experience and excellence in program administration. Participants will examine and evaluate performance indicators, such as the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test and campus activities, to form recommendations for inclusion in the state's accreditation process of school systems.

Committee members will periodically meet in Austin for presentation and discussion of reports, interaction with TEA staff and conferences with other recognized professionals not serving on the task force.

Emerson PTA will meet

Emerson Parent Teacher Association will hold a joint board meeting for outgoing and incoming board members at 9:00 a.m., Friday, in the Emerson Elementary library, 2800 Moss.

Phone hotline bilingual

The National Committee for Citizens in Education (NCCE) has established a bilingual phone hotline for parents of school age children. The hotline, which will enable parents to obtain information and counseling about their rights within the school sytem, operates from 10 a.m.-4 p.m., and bilingual counselors are available from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. The toll free number is 1-800-NET-WORK (638-9675).

For further information, contact Rudy Mares, Texas Rural Legal Aid, Inc. staff attorney at the toll free number.

Council PTA will meet

The Midland City Council Parent Teacher Association will have its final meeting of the school year Monday at 1 p.m. at Parker Elementary, 3800 Norwood St.

New officers for 1988-89 will be installed. Big Tree and Acorn awards will be presented to PTA units whose pricipal, president and city council representative maintained perfect attendance at meetings during the year.

AAUW to give scholarahip

The Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women will award a scholarship to a Midland woman attending the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. This scholarship, based on both need and merit, will be $400 per semester if the recipient takes 12 to 14 credit hours or $300 per semester for a course load of 6 to 10 credit hours.

Application forms are available in the Registrar's Office at UTPB. For more information contact Jan Artley 694-0721.

Lee students to compete

A Lee High School team is among the semifinalists in the regional Texaco Star Academic Challenge, a competition among the best and the brightest high school students in the Permian Basin.

The semi-final competition, which will also feature teams from Andrews, Fort Stockton, and Permian High School of Odessa, will take place at the Big 2 Studios; and can be seen at 5 p.m., Saturday on KMID-TV.

The team, captained by Steve Welborn, a senior, consists of Richard Chen, also a senior, James McNew and Jim Murphy, both sophomores, alternate Kevin Appling, and team coach David Fly.

Winners will move on to the finals which can be seen at 5 p.m., Saturday, May 14, on Big 2 television.

What tastes as good as bottled water, costs less than bottled water, and doesn't come in a bottle?

BACK BY POPULAR DEMAND!!!

Culligan Reverse Osmosis Drinking Water.

There are lots of things wrong about bottled water. If you're running out of it, you're waiting for the delivery man. And those bottles. Lifting them is a real job. Storing them is impossible. On top of all that, bottled water is not cheap.
With the Culligan Reverse Osmosis System, you get up to 210 gallons per month of pure, clean, great tasting water - for a fraction of the cost of bottled water.
So, Kick the bottle water hassle. Call your Culligan Man

MAKING THE GRADE

Rev. William R. Harmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will C. Harmon of Lubbock, and grandson of Mrs. W.M. Harmon and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Whitmire of Midland, will graduate from Southwestern Theological Seminary May 13 with a Master of Divinity degree.

Harmon attended Texas Tech University and graduated from Hillsdale College in Moore, Okla. He has served as an evangelist and as associate pastor both in Midland and in Enid, Okla. before moving in 1984 to Fort Worth with his wife Angela to pastor Western Hills Free Will Baptist Church.

Hoh

The United States Achievement Academy announced today that Pady Hoh, daughter of Greg and Linda Hoh of Midland, and granddaughter of Lan-Shang Cheng of Dallas, has been named a United States National Award winner in science. This award is a prestigious honor with fewer than 10% of all high school students being recognized by the academy.

Miss Hoh, a student at Robert E. Lee High School, was nominated for this award by Billy Gilbreath, the school's science deparment chairman.

Karen Eggleston, daughter of David and Louise Eggleston of Midland, has been awarded a James B. Reynolds Scholarship by Dartmouth College for graduate study abroad during the academic year following graduation. She will pursue an advanced study of Chinese at Beijing University and at the Hopkins-Nanjing Center.

The scholarships are made possible by a trust established by the late James B. Reynolds, Class of 1890 at Dartmouth, who was active in international business and national Republican circles. He stipulated that the fund be used for "scholarships in foreign countries for graduates of Dartmouth." Although the scholarships are not restricted to subject or locale, the applicant's plans must be approved by Dartmouth Faculty Committee on Graduate Fellowships. The scholarships have been awarded annually since 1951 and currently carry a stipend of $10,000.

Miss Eggleston majored in Asian studies and completed an honors thesis in that field. She received academic citations for her work in Russian, Chinese and science courses. She entered Phi Beta Kappa honor society during her junior year. She received the Time magazine achievement award, and served as secretary of the International Students Society, as well as being a Montgomery Scholar and a member of the symphony orchestra. She also participated in the college's Foreign Study Program in Beijing, China.

Three local high school students are among the 50 sons and daughters of Marathon employees who have been honored as 1988 Marathon Scholars for outstanding academic achievement.

The scholars and their Marathon employee parents are: David Q. Holmes, son of William D. Holmes, Midland High School; Richard C. Chen, son of Tu-Kao Chen, and Richard S. Thompson, son of Elizabeth S. Thompson, both students at Robert E. Lee High School.

These students were selected on the basis of scholastic merit, leadership qualities, activities and potential success in college. Final selection was made by a scholarship committee composed of distinguished college educators.

Each student receives a $2,000 award. In addition, each winner is eligible to apply for a financial aid grant for four years of undergraduate study.

Outstanding High School Students of America is pleased to announce that Rhonda C. Hartzoge has been selected as a new member because of outstanding merit and accomplishment as an American high school student.

Miss Hartzoge is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Teinert of Midland.

Robert E. Lee High School, under the direction of Robert Stovall, will compete at the Cavalcade of Music in Colorado Springs, Colo., May 4-7 in the concert choir category.

The 56-member local group will be one of 103 groups from 57 schools to be hosted by the Colorado Springs Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Over 3,000 students representing six states will take part in this, the largest high school musical competition in the Rocky Mountain Region.

For more information contact the Colorado Springs Convention & Visitors Bureau at (719) 635-7506.

We Care
HOME HEALTH AGENCY

Mrs. Erma Hodge was named "Outstanding Client of the Year-1987" by We Care Home Health Agency. Presenting an award plaque is Billie Ruppe, RN, Administrator of We Care and on lookers Jean Cooper and Mary Blocker also of We Care.

In announcing this award, the We Care representative referred to the fact that the clients/patients are the sole reasons for the existence and development of the home health industry. "Since the patient plays such a vital role in his/her recovery, we felt it was fitting to recognize one client who demonstrated outstanding courage in the face of pain, disability and suffering" Mrs. Ruppe said. During the period of convalescence and recovery following a fractured hip, Mrs. Hodge was willing to keep on keeping on; she worked hard to help herself and faced her problems head on. Although Mrs. Hodge is pictured in a wheelchair, she is able to walk on a walker independently and lives alone attending to her own needs. Mrs. Hodge receives the credit for her own successful return to independent living. We Care workers enjoyed their association with Mrs. Hodge." She was an unusually pleasant elderly lady to work with and she cooperated fully with the nurses and therapists, and participated in her own care." See related story, Page 20-I in todays supplemental tabloid section for Older Americans Month.

Trinity School has announced its Upper School honor roll for the third six weeks grading period. Listed for High Honors in Grade Eight were Rajesh Babu, Bayard Bell, and Glenn Graham; and in Grade Nine Peggy Coffey. Named to the Honor Roll in Grade Seven were Taylor Gifford, Jon Green, Nicki Holloway, Scott Hoose, Suman Reddy, and Chris Thompson; in Grade Eight Ashley Chase, Davina Cowan, Kate Fullinwider, Howard Griffin, Stepheny Stone, and Kristen Williams, and in Grade Nine Lance Kimbrough, Kirstin McMillan, Matthew Renick, and Lucinda Snyer.

Sandra Spain of Midland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Spain, was recognized for academic excellence by Austin College Thursday, April 21, in Sherman.

She was named to Psi Chi, a national honor society in psychology, during the college's annual honors convocation.

Tompkins

The Midland Downtown Rotary Club has announced Jana Tompkins, daughter of Larry Tompkins, as their selection for Student of the Week.

Miss Tompkins, a senior at Midland High School, has served as vice-president and also as treasurer of the FFA, and has participated in 4H and Agriculture Leadership.

She plans to attend Howard Junior College, then continue at Texas A&M to pursue a course of study in psychology.

The National Secondary Education Council announced that Melissa Castaneda, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Adrian Castaneda of Midland and granddaughter of Mrs. Petra Castaneda of Sheffield, has been named a Scholastic All-American.

The NSEC established this program in order to offer deserved recognition to superior students whose grade point average is 3.3 or better, and must be selected by a counselor, instructor or other qualified sponsor.

Miss Castaneda, who attends Midland Freshman High, was nominated by Linda Harris, Counselor, and will appear in the Scholastic All-American Scholar Directory, which is published nationally.

Henley

Ric Henley, son of Jerry '& Rosemary Henly, and a senior at Midland High, has been selected by the Midland Downtown Lions Club as their Student of the Week.

Henley, a senior member of the National Honor Society and a TEAMS tutor in math, has also held the office of Band President in both his freshman and senior years, and is a member of the Young Republicans.

In the future, he plans to attend the University of San Diego, where he will study international business.

Potts

Shelley Potts, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Bobby Potts of Midland, is the reciptient of a Midland School Food Service Association Scholarship award.

A senior at Midland High School, she plans to attend Texas Tech University and major in electrical engineering and drafting.

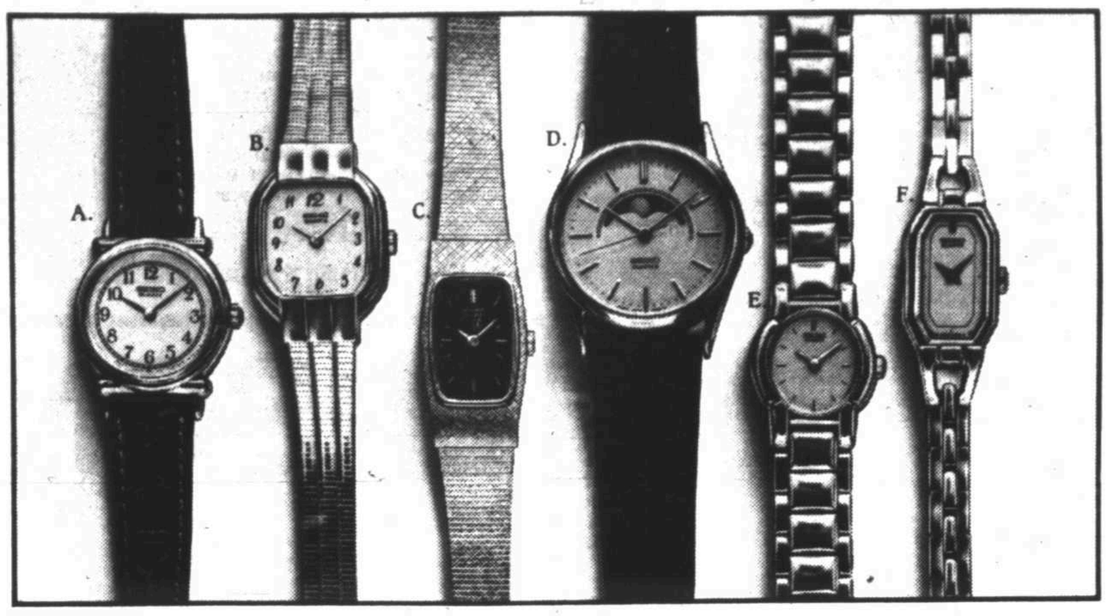

Womack

Michael James Womack, the son of Norman and Miriam Womack of Midland and graduate of Midland High School, has earned the coveted Thomas S. Gaithright Academic Excellence Award.

Womack, a junior at Texas A&M University, was selected on the basis of having the highest overall grade point ratio for junior students in the college of engineering.

MAKING THE GRADE

Rev. William R. Harmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will C. Harmon of Lubbock, and grandson of Mrs. W.M. Harmon and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Whitmire of Midland, will graduate from Southwestern Theological Seminary May 13 with a Master of Divinity degree.

Harmon attended Texas Tech University and graduated from Hillsdale College in Moore, Okla. He has served as an evangelist and as associate pastor both in Midland and in Enid, Okla. before moving in 1984 to Fort Worth with his wife Angela to pastor Western Hills Free Will Baptist Church.

Hoh

The United States Achievement Academy announced today that Pady Hoh, daughter of Greg and Linda Hoh of Midland, and granddaughter of Lan-Shang Cheng of Dallas, has been named a United States National Award winner in science. This award is a prestigious honor with fewer than 10% of all high school students being recognized by the academy.

Miss Hoh, a student at Robert E. Lee High School, was nominated for this award by Billy Gilbreath, the school's science deparment chairman.

Karen Eggleston, daughter of David and Louise Eggleston of Midland, has been awarded a James B. Reynolds Scholarship by Dartmouth College for graduate study abroad during the academic year following graduation. She will pursue an advanced study of Chinese at Beijing University and at the Hopkins-Nanjing Center.

The scholarships are made possible by a trust established by the late James B. Reynolds, Class of 1890 at Dartmouth, who was active in international business and national Republican circles. He stipulated that the fund be used for "scholarships in foreign countries for graduates of Dartmouth." Although the scholarships are not restricted to subject or locale, the applicant's plans must be approved by Dartmouth Faculty Committee on Graduate Fellowships. The scholarships have been awarded annually since 1951 and currently carry a stipend of $10,000.

Miss Eggleston majored in Asian studies and completed an honors thesis in that field. She received academic citations for her work in Russian, Chinese and science courses. She entered Phi Beta Kappa honor society during her junior year. She received the Time magazine achievement award, and served as secretary of the International Students Society, as well as being a Montgomery Scholar and a member of the symphony orchestra. She also participated in the college's Foreign Study Program in Beijing, China.

Three local high school students are among the 50 sons and daughters of Marathon employees who have been honored as 1988 Marathon Scholars for outstanding academic achievement.

The scholars and their Marathon employee parents are: David Q. Holmes, son of William D. Holmes, Midland High School; Richard C. Chen, son of Tu-Kao Chen, and Richard S. Thompson, son of Elizabeth S. Thompson, both students at Robert E. Lee High School.

These students were selected on the basis of scholastic merit, leadership qualities, activities and potential success in college. Final selection was made by a scholarship committee composed of distinguished college educators.

Each student receives a $2,000 award. In addition, each winner is eligible to apply for a financial aid grant for four years of undergraduate study.

Outstanding High School Students of America is pleased to announce that Rhonda C. Hartzoge has been selected as a new member because of outstanding merit and accomplishment as an American high school student.

Miss Hartzoge is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Teinert of Midland.

Robert E. Lee High School, under the direction of Robert Stovall, will compete at the Cavalcade of Music in Colorado Springs, Colo., May 4-7 in the concert choir category.

The 56-member local group will be one of 103 groups from 57 schools to be hosted by the Colorado Springs Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Over 3,000 students representing six states will take part in this, the largest high-school musical competition in the Rocky Mountain Region.

For more information contact the Colorado Springs Convention & Visitors Bureau at (719) 635-7506.

We Care
HOME HEALTH AGENCY

Mrs. Erma Hodge was named "Outstanding Client of the Year-1987" by We Care Home Health Agency. Presenting an award plaque is Billie Ruppe, RN, Administrator of We Care and on lookers Jean Cooper and Mary Blocker also of We Care.

In announcing this award, the We Care representative referred to the fact that the clients/patients are the sole reasons for the existence and development of the home health industry. "Since the patient plays such a vital role in his/her recovery, we felt it was fitting to recognize one client who demonstrated outstanding courage in the face of pain, disability and suffering" Mrs. Ruppe said. During the period of convalescence and recovery following a fractured hip, Mrs. Hodge was willing to keep on keeping on; she worked hard to help herself and faced her problems head on. Although Mrs. Hodge is pictured in a wheelchair, she is able to walk on a walker independently and lives alone attending to her own needs. Mrs. Hodge receives the credit for her own successful return to independent living. We Care workers enjoyed their association with Mrs. Hodge." She was an unusually pleasant elderly lady to work with and she cooperated fully with the nurses and therapists, and participated in her own care." MAKING THE GRADE

Trinity School has announced its Upper School honor roll for the third six weeks grading period. Listed for High Honors in Grade Eight were Rajesh Babu, Bayard Bell, and Glenn Graham; and in Grade Nine Peggy Coffey. Named to the Honor Roll in Grade Seven were Taylor Gifford, Jon Green, Nicki Holloway, Scott Hoose, Suman Reddy, and Chris Thompson; in Grade Eight Ashley Chase, Davina Cowan, Kate Fullinwider, Howard Griffin, Stepheny Stone, and Kristen Williams, and in Grade Nine Lance Kimbrough, Kirstin McMillan, Matthew Renick, and Lucinda Snyer.

Sandra Spain of Midland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Spain, was recognized for academic excellence by Austin College Thursday, April 21, in Sherman.

She was named to Psi Chi, a national honor society in psychology, during the college's annual honors convocation.

Tompkins

The Midland Downtown Rotary Club has announced Jana Tompkins, daughter of Larry Tompkins, as their selection for Student of the Week.

Miss Tompkins, a senior at Midland High School, has served as vice-president and also as treasurer of the FFA, and has participated in 4H and Agriculture Leadership.

She plans to attend Howard Junior College, then continue at Texas A&M to pursue a course of study in psychology.

The National Secondary Education Council announced that Melissa Castaneda, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Adrian Castaneda of Midland and granddaughter of Mrs. Petra Castaneda of Sheffield, has been named a Scholastic All-American.

The NSEC established this program in order to offer deserved recognition to superior students whose grade point average is 3.3 or better, and must be selected by a counselor, instructor or other qualified sponsor.

Miss Castaneda, who attends Midland Freshman High, was nominated by Linda Harris, Counselor, and will appear in the Scholastic All-American Scholar Directory, which is published nationally.

Henley

Mic Henley, son of Jerry & Rosemary Henly, and a senior at Midland High, has been selected by the Midland Downtown Lions Club as their Student of the Week.

Henley, a senior member of the National Honor Society and a TEAMS tutor in math, has also held the office of Band President in both his freshman and senior years, and is a member of the Young Republicans.

In the future, he plans to attend the University of San Diego, where he will study international business.

Potts

Shelley Potts, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Bobby Potts of Midland, is the reciptient of a Midland School Food Service Association Scholarship award.

A senior at Midland High School, she plans to attend Texas Tech University and major in electrical engineering and drafting.

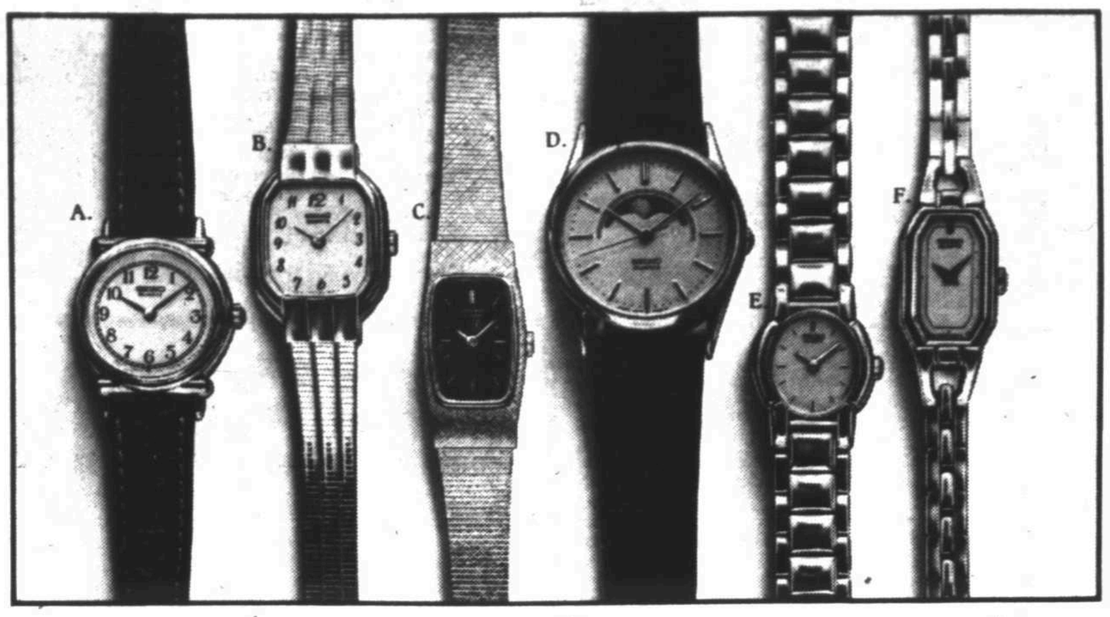

Womack

Michael James Womack, the son of Norman and Miriam Womack of Midland and graduate of Midland High School, has earned the coveted Thomas S. Gaithright Academic Excellence Award.

Womack, a junior at Texas A&M University, was selected on the basis of having the highest overall grade point ratio for junior students in the college of engineering.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Schedules for 'Kids College' being sent out

By H.A. TUCK

Tuck

"Kids College at Midland College" schedules are going out this week to students in Midland public and private schools. KCMC director Molly Marcum is excited about the courses being offered this summer in two two-week sessions.

Last summer's experiment with classes for first, second, and third graders was so successful, they will be offered again this year. For the first three years of Kids College, only those who had completed fourth, fifth, and sixth grades were eligible.

First session of Kids College will be June 20-30, with classes in the afternoon Monday through Thursday. The second session is scheduled July 11-21.

• • •

Without too much effort, you can hear three Midland College musical events during the next week. The MC Community Band and Wind Ensemble is presenting its spring concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. Thursday at 8 p.m. in the auditorium, the MC Chorale and Chamber Singers will perform.

And next Sunday at 3 p.m. in Dennis the Menace Park, the MC Jazz Ensemble presents its traditional Mother's Day program.

All these events are free and open to the public.

• • •

The 13th annual Midland College Athletic Banquet is slated for 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Holiday Inn Country Villa. Tickets are $7 each and may be reserved by calling 685-4575 or purchased in the Athletic Office at the P.E. Building.

This is the time the college and the community honor members of the basketball, golf, and tennis teams, cheerleaders, and trainers for their efforts during the 1987-88 season.

• • •

College employees have their own get-together at 5:45 p.m. Friday on Beal Plaza for the All-College Family Barbeque. The Community Band is going to perform for employees, their spouses, and families during the meal.

Service awards for five, 10, and 15 years of service will be presented, along with the Student Senate's "Teachers of the Year" selections for each of the college's seven divisions.

Next year, the college's first 20-year service awards should be given out.

• • •

This is the last week of the Spring Student Art Show, being displayed in the McCormick Gallery. In addition to all types of art work, visitors can view efforts of architecture and photography students. McCormick Gallery is located in the Allison Fine Arts Building and is open today from 1-5 p.m., Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-10 p.m., Friday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

• • •

Art instructor John Harmon has arranged for Christopher Staley, head of the Ceramics Department at Wichita State University, to present a two-day workshop at Midland College. It's going to be Saturday, May 7, from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday, May 8, from 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Fee is $35 and you need to register in the Continuing Education offices, Administration Building. The workshop is approved for 12 hours of Advanced Academic Training for public school teachers.

Specializing in vessel construction, Staley will talk about and demonstrate vessel-making, use of porcelain, salt-glazing, wheel work, and expressing personal ideas in clay. Staley's works have been exhibited throughout the United States and are included in the permanent collection of the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

• • •

Pre-registration for Summer Session I begins Monday, May 9, in the Student Services Office at the Administration Building. Official registration for the session will be Thursday, May 26. Classes start Tuesday, May 31, and end on Wednesday, July 6.

Summer sessions are Monday through Thursday.

A true pre-registration is planned for the second summer session, and we'll be explaining how that is going to be handled later in the summer.

• • •

While all these activities are going on, students are feverishly doing their last-minute reports and projects while studying for final exams, which begin May 9. This week used to be known as "Dead Week" but MC dropped that designation several year ago. Now it's just a time for students to review and for instructors to get in their last bits of information.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Seminar can develop business skills of self-employed

From Staff Reports

Six topics to help develop business skills for the self-employed are on the program of a seminar at Midland College Tuesday. The seminar is free and will be held at 7 p.m. in Room 113, Allison Fine Arts Building.

This is the final seminar in a series which has been conducted by Midland College's Midland Economic Development Center. Those interested are encouraged to pre-register by calling 685-4657, although this is not required.

Topics which are to be covered during the evening include: "Government Bidding Opportunities," "Legal Aspects and Tax Planning," "How to Apply for a Business Loan," "Permits — When They are Necessary and Where They may be Obtained," "Marketing and Manufacturing," "Recruiting and Selecting Job Applicants" and "How the Permian Basin Private Industry Council Employment and Training Program Can Help You."

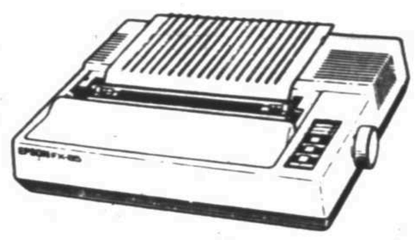

Co-sponsors of the seminar are the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Permian Basin Private Industry Council, Permian Basin Bid Center, Service Corps of Retired Executives/Active Corps of Executives, Small Business Administration, Students in Free Enterprise, and Texas Employment Commission.

HOW THEY VOTED

Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — Votes of area members of Congress on key issues during the week ending April 22, 1988.

KEY HOUSE VOTES

House overwhelmingly adopts trade bill. The House April 21 ignored President Reagan's veto threat and passed a long-awaited, omnibus trade measure, 312-107. The vote fell largely along party lines, with only two Democrats voting against the legislation.

The bill's passage marked a victory for House-Senate negotiators who were involved in the months-long battle to reach a compromise between House and Senate trade bills passed last year. The compromise bill now moves on to the Senate, where approval is uncertain.

Before the final vote was taken, members rejected a move by Republican leaders to strip a provision from the bill requiring larger companies to give workers 60 days' notice of closings and layoffs. President Reagan has vowed to veto the measure if it includes the plant-closing provision, which is opposed by business.

The core of the sweeping trade bill is meant to stiffen the U.S. response to unfair trading practices by other nations, enhance federal aid to U.S. industries and workers injured by imports, clarify the law against business-related bribes by American firms, and remove some snags from the complex system for keeping militarily sensitive technology out of the hands of Soviet-bloc countries.

Proponents of the bill claimed the trade measure was pro-trade, pro-export and in general good for the country. They also said that those members whose only objection to the bill was the plant-closing requirement should still vote for the bill. "Even if you oppose plant-closing requirements, the benefits of this trade bill far outweigh any requirement which may be imposed upon businesses to notify their workers of a plant closing or layoff," said Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

But some opponents held fast to the business view that a plant-closing notification provision should not be in the trade bill. Still others argued that because the legislation was "protectionist," it would harm U.S. companies and workers, too. "No matter how many times my colleagues attempt to defend their behavior by claiming that this bill will not hurt our competitiveness, the facts remain very clear," said Thomas D. DeLay, R-Texas. "A vote in favor of H.R. 3 (the trade bill) is a vote against our nation's competitiveness."

Voting for the trade bill: Combest (R), Gonzalez (D), Stenholm (D).

Voting against: Boulter (R).

Paired No: Smith (R).

House approves amnesty extension for illegal aliens. With time running out on an amnesty program for illegal aliens, the House April 20 narrowly passed a bill to extend the program for another seven months. The measure, approved by a 213-201 margin, would extend a legalization program enacted as part of a 1986 immigration bill, which was designed to curb the flow of illegal aliens into the country.

The House-passed measure would extend to Nov. 30 a program that provides legal status to aliens who can prove they have resided continuously in the United States prior to Jan. 1, 1982. The alien must meet other requirements, including a knowledge of English, and must prove that he can support himself financially. The program will expire May 4 unless both chambers okay the bill.

But the measure may have a bumpy ride in the Senate, where some sponsors of the 1986 bill have voiced heavy opposition to a one-year extension.

Before the 1986 legislation was enacted, congressional sponsors estimated that up to 3 million illegal aliens would be eligible for amnesty. But, according to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), only 1.2 million individuals had applied for amnesty as of March this year. Of those, about 674,000 have been granted legal status.

Noting this small turnout, supporters of the bill said an extension was needed to get the maximum effect from the legalization program. Proponents blamed delayed applications on complex new amnesty rules and slow processing by the INS, and criticized the INS for mounting a poor public information campaign to educate and encourage aliens to apply. "It is unfair to take away an opportunity to eventually become a U.S. citizen simply to meet an arbitrary deadline," said Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif.

Opponents countered that the extension was unnecessary and would delay applications even further by those aliens holding out for any changes made in their favor. "More time is not the remedy for procrastination," said Harold Rogers, R-Ky. They also expressed reservations over the cost of the extension — estimated by some to be about $50 million — to the INS.

Voting for the bill to extend amnesty: Gonzalez (D).

Voting against: Smith (R), Combest (R), Stenholm (D), Boulter (R).

KEY SENATE VOTES

Senate approves reparations for interned Japanese-Americans. After an emotional debate, the Senate April 20 voted 69-27 to pay $1.3 billion in reparations and formally apologize to Japanese-Americans interned during World War II.

The measure would provide $20,000 to each of the estimated 60,000 surviving internees — believed at the time to be security risks — who were forcibly relocated by executive order in early 1942. The bill's authorizations would be spread over five years beginning in fiscal 1989. A formal apology also was issued, with one provision stating: "On behalf of the nation, the Congress apologizes."

The bill also provided compensation to Aleutian eskimos who were evacuated from their homes and relocated to poorly maintained camps in Alaska after one of their islands was attacked by the Japanese.

The House passed a similar measure last fall, but the differences between the two measures are expected to be reconciled easily in conference. It is unclear whether President Reagan will sign the bill, which the administration has criticized as being too costly.

Supporters of the bill viewed it as a means of partially redressing the "grave injustice" inflicted upon Japanese-Americans by the United States government. Proponents also wanted to remove the stain of disloyalty that imprisonment gave the internees. "The individual payments acknowledge the unjust deprivation of liberty, the infliction of mental and physical suffering, and the stigma of being branded disloyal," said Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii.

Opponents of the measure acknowledged the need to apologize and officially recognize the unfair treatment of the Japanese-Americans, but objected to the payment of reparations. "(H)ow can we in good conscience now approve a bill with a price tag of $1.3 billion...money that this nation does not have to spend?" asked Chic Hecht, R-Nev. Opponents also believed that payment of reparations would set a poor precedent, favoring Japanese-Americans over other groups — American Indians and blacks, especially — who could justify a similar claim based on unfair treatment by the government.

Voting for the payment of reparations: Bentsen (D).

Voting against: Gramm (R).

Senate fails to end campaign-spending amendment debate. The Senate April 21 failed, 52-42, in its attempt to shut off debate of a constitutional amendment that would allow Congress to impose mandatory spending limits on campaigns for federal offices. The vote was eight short of the 60 needed to invoke cloture and limit debate.

The following day, a second attempt to invoke cloture was tried, but it also failed.

Under the amendment, public financing of campaigns would no longer be required as an inducement for candidates to accept voluntary spending limits. Instead, the limits would be mandatory. The impetus for the amendment stems from a 1976 Supreme Court ruling that said spending limits cannot be imposed unless they are voluntary.

The amendment proposal came to the floor following the Democratic leadership's failure last month — for a record eighth time — to break a Republican-led filibuster of another campaign-finance measure, which included public funding.

While the constitutional amendment measure is expected to suffer the same fate as the earlier campaign-finance bill, Democrats think they may gain support from Republicans who could go along with a spending cap, but not public financing of campaigns.

Members favoring cloture argued that limits on spending for federal campaigns were long overdue, since election costs keep escalating. They also complained that if costs continued to grow at their current rate, qualified candidates could be deterred from running for a federal office.

Opponents countered that the proposed constitutional amendment would deny ordinary people the opportunity to make financial contributions to candidates they supported. They also said that denying people this right would, in effect, violate their right to free speech.

Voting to invoke cloture on the campaign-finance amendment: Bentsen (D).

Voting against: Gramm (R).

Progress Notes In Medicine

By TULSI DYAL SINGH, M.D.
Family Practitioner

HIATAL HERNIA

It seems to me that I have seen more patients with discomfort due to hiatal hernia in the past month than I usually see.

Most cases of hiatal hernia can be treated to avoid the symptoms, which are due to acid and stomach contents refluxing up into the esophagus. Things you can do are: Raise the head of your bed about 6 inches; avoid bending over after eating; do not eat near bedtime; avoid hot peppery and spicy foods; and avoid big meals which tend to make you feel bloated.

Drugs which reduce the amount of acid secreted are usually helpful. Antacids which float at the top of the stomach contents and would then be the first thing to reflux up the esphagus are often helpful. The one I recommend is Gaviscon.

Most people who have symptomatic hiatal hernias are significantly overweight, so weight reduction is an important aspect of the overall management. Also, in the event that surgery becomes necessary, weight reduction contributes to a quicker, easier and less risky operation.

IMMUNIZATION UPDATE

The summer holidays is a good time to pull out the children's shot records and be sure that they are up to date.

The recommended immunization schedule is that children should have at least three DPT and Oral Polio in their first year, and then MMR (Measels, Mumps, Rubella) at 15 months and another DPT and Oral Polio at 18 months.

Their next shot is the "pre-school" shot between ages 4 and 6 years for DPT and Oral Polio. This followed by a DT not DPT shot 10 years later, between the ages of 14 and 16 years.

Adults should have DT boosters every 10 years.

FATIGUE

Fatigue is a common office complaint. A number of medical conditions can cause it, but the patients who are most baffled by it are the ones who tell me that they do nothing active and yet they feel tired all the time.

A simple yet effective little demonstration of how this inactivity creates a vicious cycle is to hold two books of equal weight, one in each hand. Hold one with the arm outstretched horizontally, but hold the other and move the arm up and down.

Which arm fatigues first?

RECURRENT THROAT INFECTIONS

I read recently that in patients who have recurrent throat infections, a useful recommendation is for them to throw away their present toothbrush and get another one.

I don't know the scientific basis for this, but the argument is that bacteria and viruses live in the damp bristles and may serve as the reservoir for repeated re-infections.

This may be unscientific, but for the time being I plan to recommend it for the several patients I see who seem to move from one throat infection to another, just a few weeks apart, for no apparent reason.

FLEXIBLE SIGMOIDOSCOPY

It has been over a year since I got my flexible sigmoidoscope and what a difference it makes for my patients who have to undergo this procedure. The difference between this instrument and the rigid pipeline instrument that we used in the past is remarkable.

CHOLESTEROL PROGRAMS

This is a good time to congratulate the broadcasting media, especially television, for the excellent coverage they gave to the cholesterol reduction program. I have seen a lot of people who are now aware of the need to lower their cholesterol and are doing something about it. Several of these are people in whom my attempts had gone unheeded.

They have certainly made cholesterol control important to the people who needed to be made aware of the changes that could be made.

The media deserve a big hand for taking on an important public education project and doing a very good job with it.

Putting Trash In Its Place

Turning a trash-filled piece of land into less of an eyesore was the goal of a group of volunteers from Physicians and Surgeons Hospital on Saturday, April 23.

A part of the city-wide Keep Midland Beautiful clean-up campaign, the group cleaned up the south side of Wadley Avenue between "A" and Big Spring Streets.

The volunteers were armed with trash bags and hats provided by Glad Bags for the campaign, along with gloves and spears. Starting on the "A" Street end, they slowly worked eastward, picking up papers (someone had lost a great recipe for a chicken enchilada casserole), cardboard boxes, glass bottles, paper cups and stickers (in the hands).

Participating were Vicki Ochoa, Mary Jo Clendenen, Millie Stuckey, Jesus Napoles, Huey Brooks, Jeanette Brooks, Jimmy Grimes, Dean Williams, Juan Baeza, Edna Harben and Celina Hildek.

Celina enlisted the help of her dog, Butch. She placed one handle of a trash bag around his neck and she carried the other. While the dog sniffed out the trash, she picked it up.

By the end of the morning, the bed of one pick-up truck had been filled with lumber, long metal pieces and numerous bags of trash.

The strip may not have been turned into a lush oasis, but the eyesore trash along the highway was gone.

Bunion Pain No Simple Problem

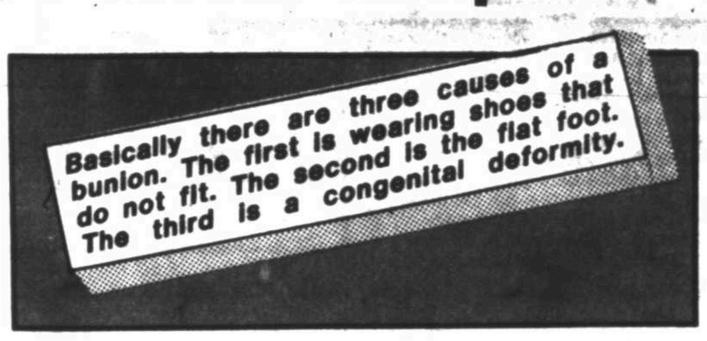

By JERRY L. COCHRAN, M.D. and ROBERT G. KONCHAR, D.P.M.
Texas Institute of Sports Medicine

Of the conditions which cause foot pain and dysfunction, one of the most aggravating is the so-called "bunion." The bunion, or more correctly known as "hallux valgus," is actually a complex deformity of the forefoot and toes involving joints, ligaments, tendons, and muscles. The complexity is such that an appreciation of the anatomy of the foot is necessary to understand the problem.

The foot may be divided into four regions: the hindfoot (the heel), the midfoot (lesser tarsus), the forefoot (the five long slender bones that connect the midfoot to the toes), and finally the toes (the great toe and the four small toes).

The first metatarsal and the great toe are the prime victims of this deformity and the resultant dysfunction to the foot. Biomechanically, most of the stress on the forefoot is carried by the first metatarsal and the majority of "push off" during walking or running is provided by the great toe. It is easy to appreciate why deformity of the first metatarsal and the great toe causes significant problems with function.

The patient with the hallux valgus deformity will have a large bump or knot at the medical aspect of the first metatarsophalangeal (great toe) joint. It is this bump or knot that is correctly called a bunion. Very frequently the great toe will be angled over toward the other toes and may even be rotated. Occasionally this great toe angulation will be so severe that the great toe will lay underneath the second toe. This may be associated with clawing or hammer toe deformities of the other toes.

Basically there are three causes of a bunion or hallux valgus deformity. The first is wearing shoes that do not fit. If a person wears shoes that are too narrow or where there is not enough room for the toes, a bunion will develop. In the first case, excessive pressure on the first metatarsophalangeal joint will cause irritation at the distal aspect of the metatarsal, and the patient will develop bursitis and eventually bony overgrowth of the distal metatarsal head. It is that entity that is correctly called a bunion. Should a person wear shoes that do not have enough room in the toe box, then compression of the great toe will eventually cause lateral migration of the great toe. A bunion will also develop.

The second major cause of hallux valgus is the pronated (flat) foot. In the pronated foot the weight bearing transmitted through the great toe has been displaced medially (toward the opposite foot) and the foot becomes prone to hallux valgus. In the pronated position the foot appears less able to withstand the deforming pressures exerted on it, either by shoes or by weightbearing.

The third major cause of hallux valgus is a congenital deformity known as "metatarsus primus varus." In this situation, the first metatarsal is directed much too medially. This circumstance is so biomechanically abnormal that the normal pull of the tendons going to the great toe may cause a lateral angulation of the toe. A bunion also develops and the sesamoid bones (the kneecaps) of the great toe chronically dislocate.

With all of this advanced anatomical and biomechanical knowledge concerning bunions, what can be done to prevent them? Actually it is very simple. The first rule is wear shoes that fit. Make sure they are wide enough and that the toe box is adequate for the toes. The fashion designers that dictated spiked high heel shoes with pointed toes are probably the cause of a tremendous amount of unwarranted surgery to correct a preventable problem. Secondly, people with pronated (flat) feet should be wearing biomechanical foot orthoses (custom "arch supports") to control the abnormal pronation which leads to bunions. Thirdly, babies who demonstrate the metatarsus primus varus deformity should be treated appropriately in corrective shoes as early in life as possible. This will hopefully prevent reconstructive surgery in adult life.

Once a person has bunions, surgery may be required. We do not believe the cosmetic appearance of the feet to be a legitimate surgical indication. The only reason to surgically treat bunions is for pain and dysfunction of the foot. As there are different causes for bunions, and even different types of bunions, there are also many different surgical procedures. Make sure you get the right procedure. In many cases, just removing the bunion will suffice. However, with people who have the metatarsus primus varus deformity, a simple bunionectomy will not work. The deformity will return. Overcorrection of the deformity also causes severe difficulties. The best advice is to find a surgeon who is well experienced with this type of problem.

Conference Awards Certificate to Singh

Tulsi Dyal Singh, M.D. was awarded the Certificate of Achievement in Occupational Medicine last week at the American Occupational Health Conference held in New Orleans.

Dr. Singh was one of 59 physicians nationwide so honored.

The Certificate of Achievement was awarded to physicians who have successfully completed the curriculum of the American Occupational Medicine Association Council on Education. Dr. Singh has been a member of the Association for seven years, and has attended several post-graduate courses run by the Association.

Dr. Singh serves as the company physician and medical adviser for several local companies. He performs preemployment physicals, job placement evaluations and work aptitude evaluations for new employees. In addition, he does preventative health examinations, executive physicals and work-place evaluations for compliance with the requirements of the Occupational Health and Safety Administration and National Institute in Occupational Safety and Health.

Hospital To Serve 'Eat and Run' Menu

The rules of etiquette say it's not polite to eat and run, but that's what Physicians and Surgeons Hospital will be doing in the next month with its participation in numerous events.

★★★

First on the list is Gourmet Midland. Physicians and Surgeons Hospital is one of 23 eating establishments that will have booths at the annual food-tasting extravaganza.

Michel McKay, director of dietary services at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, will be planning the menu and preparing the food for the 1,000 Midlanders who are expected to attend.

Former patients of Physicians and Surgeons Hospital have praised McKay and his staff on the food. Gourmet Midland will give the public a chance to sample it without having to be a patient first.

The doors to Gourmet Midland at Midland Center will open at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, May 5. For more information contact Gourmet Midland, 687-1149.

★★★

Eating, as well as running, can affect a person's blood pressure. Physicians and Surgeons Hospital will be conducting a blood pressure screening from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Wednesday, May 4, at Heart O' Texas Savings and Loan Association, 3402 N. Big Spring St. This will be part of their "Healthy, Wealthy and Wise" grand opening celebration.

The screening is free to the public.

★★★

The Midland Chapter of the American Diabetes Association has scheduled its education meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 10, at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

Dr. Jose Mayans will speak on "Diabetic Eye Disease." Anyone who has diabetes or is interested in learning more about the disease is welcome to attend.

★★★

And now, for the runners. Physicians and Surgeons Hospital will be one of the major sponsors of the Fifth Annual Hoffman Memorial Tall City Triathlon.

This annual affair, which attracts several hundred swimmers, bicyclists and runners from throughout Texas, will start at 7:30 a.m. Saturday, June 4.

The initial event will be a 1,000-meter swim at Doug Russell Pool. That will be followed by a 30-kilometer bicycle course and will end with a 10-kilometer run.

Entry deadline is May 25. For more information contact the Midland YMCA, 682-2551.

Three qualify for state meet

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK - After what was considered a disastrous Friday at R.P. Fuller Stadium in the Class 5A Region I track meet, Midland found state berth qualifying glory Saturday with Midland Lee's Marcus Strambler, Jimmy Fennell and Midland High's Tracy Parker.

Parker started the day by winning the shot put Saturday morning with a Region I record of 41-0 1/2, a career best.

Fennell followed with a tough-earned second place finish in the 110-meter high hurdles with a 14.09, not his best.

And finally, Strambler pulled down a victory in the 300 intermediate hurdles with a career best 37.29, which is thought to be a Region record.

Parker got her victory with her second throw in the preliminaries that put her Austin bound.

"I was really nervous and scared to death out there," said Parker. "I just thank God I made it with my best throw ever. I can do better if I work hard and it looks like that's what I'm in for the next two weeks."

Strambler ran a near perfect race in the 300 hurdles after having the third best qualifying time on Friday.

"I was really nervous in the blocks, but I kept thinking that if I can catch the three people in front of me on the stagger, I'll be there at the end. When I caught the first two, I knew it was all over," said Strambler, who is headed for Austin as a junior. "I thought a lot about qualifying third, but I just wanted to go out an run my best race and let everyone else take care of themselves."

The 300 hurdle record was listed as 34.7 by Permian's Gerry Guster, but all officials admitted that was incorrect, but no one knew what the "real" record was.

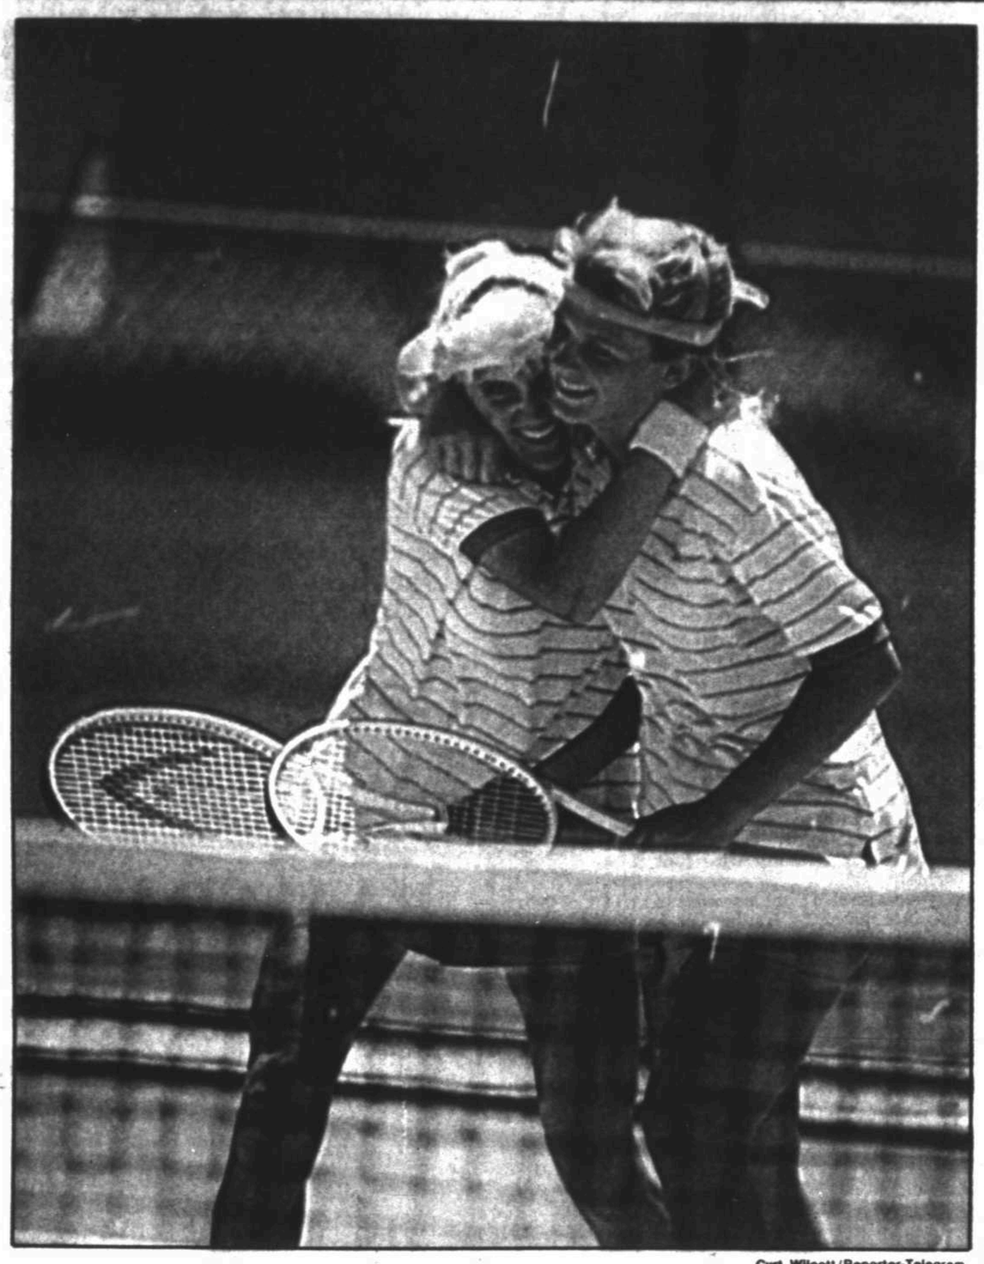

Fennell ended two years of Region I frustration, earning his first state berth. But it wasn't easy and he had to overcome a horrendous start to nail down his first Austin trip.

"I had a horrible start and ended up having to high jump the first hurdle," said Fennell. "I knew I was in big trouble at that point.

"At that point, I was physically sound, but my mind was not into the race. I had to play catchup and I can't do that anymore. But I knew I had to get that state berth and I battled back. I could have won the race if I hadn't made the mistakes early in the race."

The state meet in Austin is in two weeks and those three are the Tall City elite. No one else could crack the glory barrier even though Lee's David Parkerson made a run at a major upset in the 1600 meters.

Dysholm, MC in net sweep

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Johan Dysholm and Martin Tenlen are hardly strangers.

Not only did the two compete against each other as junior tennis players in their native Sweden, but McLennan's Tenlen defeated Midland College star Dysholm twice last season before Dysholm turned the tables on his countryman in fall competition.

DYSHOLM continued his mastery over the Highlander with a surprisingly easy 6-1, 6-4 victory in the No. 1 singles final at the Region V tournament on the MC courts Saturday.

Dysholm is ranked third among U.S. junior college singles players, while Tenlen is fourth. Ironically, McLennan coach Carmack Berryman puts out the national juco rankings.

Midland College continued to dominate the team standings in both men's and women's play after virtually clinching both divisions Friday. The real race was for second in men's play, but McLennan split two head-to-head doubles matches with Odessa in the semifinals Saturday afternoon to earn the second national tournament position.

Midland and Odessa Colleges were an easy one-two in the women's team standings.

The score of the Dysholm-Tenlen match was misleading, because the McLennan standout didn't let Dysholm off easy.

"I knew I had to be prepared," Dysholm said. The Sundsvall, Sweden native beat his countryman from Goteborg by resorting to lobs in the second set, a departure from his usual power-oriented game.

"I lobbed because he tries to force things so much," Dysholm said. "Also, if I hit the ball high, I could have more time to get back on the court."

It was a great way to end one's high school career. Senior pitcher Cal Jenkins, the District 4-5A ironman hurler, threw a three-hit shutout and Midland Lee baserunners combined for 10 stolen bases to beat the Abilene High Eagles 7-0.

In the final game of the year for both teams, Lee finished in sole possession of third place with a 7-5 record; AHS ends up in fourth place with a 6-6 district mark.

Cregg McGaha, Dudley Jordan and Blaine McAnally each drove in two runs for Lee as the Rebels scored a pair of runs in the second, third and fourth innings.

Jenkins, the district leader in innings pitched as well as pitches thrown, kept the latter category to a minimum Saturday as he kept Abilene off the basepaths in three straight innings. Only five Eagle batters got on base with just one making it past second. Jenkins also recorded six strikeouts to bring his district total to 61.

"This makes you feel kind of good," Rebel head coach Ernie Johnson said. "I'm happy we were able to win this one and not have to settle for a .500 season. That was our goal, to finish as high as we could and be above .500.

"I really felt like the best teams won district. I had hoped we could be up there on that level competing with them but we just didn't have the horses. We could've won two more games, against Odessa High and San Angelo, and still been out of the playoffs."

Lee finishes the year with a 12-10 overall mark. Last year the Rebs finshed 5-7 in district and in fourth place. For AHS, the Eagles end the season at 12-11 overall.

Midland's C.L. Penigar raps a single in the third inning of Saturday's game. The Angel outfielder has raised his average more than 50 points in the past week after a slow start.

Eric Boyt 2-hits Cooper

From Staff Reports

The Midland High Bulldogs decided Abilene Cooper's five-year reign as district champs was quite long enough.

The Bulldogs wrapped up the District 4-5A championship Saturday afternoon as Eric Boyt threw a 2-hitter en route to a 2-0 MHS victory. The win moves Midland to 10-2 in district; Cooper falls to 9-3 and will represent the district as the second-place playoff team.

"All good things have to come to an end sooner or later," Cooper head coach Andy Malone said. "Tim's put together a real good team. If a team beats you twice and comes into your park and beats you, they deserve to be district champion."

Midland High catcher Scott Mowles provided what little offensive spark there was in the game, belting a sixth inning solo homer. Mowles also drove in shortstop Jamie Surratt in the first with a bloop single, accounting for both of the Bulldog runs.

"We're not a power ball club," Midland head coach Tim Whalen said. "We don't drive the ball long, but you look in the scorebook and they count just the same."

COOPER POSED a minor threat in the second when, with runners at first and second with no outs, Scott North attempted to lay down a bunt, but struck out. Boyt then retired the next two batters on weak ground balls to get out of the inning.

In running his record to 5-1, Boyt struck out six and walked only three.

"He had three great pitches," Whalen said of Boyt. "He's worked real hard on his curve and off-speed and it really paid off."

Cooper starter Jason Satre also went the distance, falling to 7-1 in district. Satre struck out 10 Midland High batters, allowing only two Bulldog baserunners after the first inning.

"This has got to be a tremendous confidence boost to the kids," Whalen said. "We've added some enthusiasm to the program. In a game like this all you've got to do is win. If it was at home it wouldn't have mattered at all."

THE BULLDOGS, who move their overall record to 19-7 with the victory, will play District 3-5A runner-up, either Plainview or Lubbock Coronado, in the first round of playoffs. Home field advantage and dates have yet to be set for the first series. Plainview defeated Amarillo Caprock 13-2 Saturday and must beat Lubbock High Tuesday to ensure itself of a playoff berth.

Cooper also finishes the regular season at 19-7 and will meet 3-5A champs Lubbock Monterey in the first round.

Diablos beat Angels

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The Midland Angels continue to show Texas League opponents their late-inning hitting prowess, if only they could get anything going early.

The Haloes spotted the El Paso Diablos a nine-run lead before mounting an abortive comeback in a 9-6 loss before 2,252 at Angels Stadium Saturday. The loss sank Manager Max Oliveras' crew deeper into the TL West Division cellar, five games behind division-leading El Paso.

Nothing went for Midland in the first four innings, despite an improved performance from Angel starter Todd Eggersten. Eggersten was rapped for 10 hits in his 6⅓-inning stint, but his teammates committed three errors behind him.

El Paso jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead in the first inning on a leadoff double by Rob DeWolf, a walk, a fielders choice, and the first of two errors by shortstop Bill Geivett. Both runs scored on wild pitches by Eggersten.

The Diablos added two more runs in the second, four unearned runs in the third and one in the fourth. But Eggertsen settled down to allow only two hits in his last three innings before yielding to Vinicio Cedeno with two on and one out in the seventh.

Cedeno then shut the door on the Diablos in his first appearance since serving a five-game suspension last week for his role in a melee at El Paso earlier this season. The Dominican Republic native allowed three hits in his 2⅔ innings, but none of the three was well-hit and he struck out a season-high six batters.

"It was good to see Cedeno do well," Olivares said. "I've got to give credit to (pitching coach) Tim Kelly, who worked hard with him during the time he was off."

The Angels had trouble with El Paso ace Jeff Peterek in the early innings, but singles by C.L. Penigar and Jim McCollom provided Midland's first run in the third.

Peterek earned his league-leading fifth win Saturday, but his throwing error in the seventh enabled Midland to make a game of it with a five-run rally.

Midland DH Jeff Manto started the rally with a one-out home run to increase his league-leading total to seven and his TL-leading RBI count to 26. Erik Pappas grounded to shortstop for the second out, but Penigar reached base when Peterek fielded a high chopper by Penigar only to throw the ball into the Diablo dugout.

Dan Grunhard then doubled Alfredson to third and Jesus Alfaro walked off new pitcher Barry Bass, but Manto struck out swinging to end the threat. The Angels could do little with Bass in the last two innings, much as El Paso couldn't solve Cedeno.

What to do about the slow starts that have become a habit for Midland this season? Olivaras hasn't a clue.

"If I did, I'd be rich," he said.

Palmer, Barber combine for a 61

AUSTIN (AP) — Arnold Palmer's late putting heroics helped lift him and partner Miller Barber into a tie for the third-round lead Saturday in the Legends of Golf Tournament.

Palmer and Barber combined for a 9-under-par 61 on the rain-soaked Onion Creek Club and completed 54 holes of this better-ball competition for seniors, at 191, 19 under par.

Palmer dropped a 15-foot birdie putt on the 14th and scored again, from about 20 feet, on the 16th.

"Miller played very well and I made a couple of putts," said Palmer, 58, who is seeking his first Seniors Tour victory in three years.

Barber saw it as an omen.

"Any time you get Arnold Palmer putting like that, you know it's going to carry over to the next round," Barber said.

They shared the lead with Australian Peter Thomson and South African Harold Henning, and New Zealand-born left-hander Bob Charles and Australian Bruce Devlin.

Thomson, a five-time winner of the British Open, and Henning birdied three of their last five holes in a round of 62.

Charles and Devlin combined for a 66, including a last-hole birdie by Devlin.

Three more teams were a single stroke off the lead and two more were at 17 under par, setting up a potential eight-team scramble in the final round.

Defending champions Bruce Crampton and Orville Moody, Bobby Nichols and Butch Baird, and Tommy Aaron and Lou Graham were at 192.

In the separate but simultaneous competition for players 60 and over, Roberto deVicenzo and Charlie Sifford regained the lead in the Legendary Champions section with a 65 that put them at 195, 15 under par.

Greg Norman regains lead at Woodlands

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — It was his 35th hole of the day, but Greg Norman knew he was going to make birdie.

"I read it just like a putt," said Norman, who chipped in from 18 feet on the par-4 17th hole to regain a share of the lead with Curtis Strange in the $700,000 Independent Insurance Agent Open Saturday.

Norman shot rounds of 70 and 68 in Saturday's rain-delayed double-header for 54-hole score of 203, 13 under par.

The chip-in on No. 17 pulled him back into a tie with Strange, who shot rounds of 68 and 66 to move into position to win his third title here.

Tom Kite, who also had to play 36 holes Saturday, shot his best round of the tournament with a 6-under 66 in the third round for a 204 total.

Deb Richard pulls into tie with 66

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some of the big names were all around her, but Deb Richard did not falter Saturday, shooting a 66 to force a three-way tie going into the final round of the $335,000 Sara Lee Classic.

Tied with Richard at 7-under 137 after two rounds were Rosie Jones, who won last week's USX Classic, and Sherri Steinhauer.

Jones shot a 68 Saturday and Steinhauer had a round of 71 on the par-72, 6,424-yard Hermitage Golf Course.

Six more players were at 5-under, including Alcott, who stumbled to 74 after Friday's round of 65.

Jones picked up her final birdie of the day with a 25-foot putt at No. 18, but the final hole was not so kind to Alcott.

Jim's Orbit wins Derby Trial under a blanket

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jim's Orbit, an outsider in the betting despite the fact he's a Kentucky Derby candidate, won the $56,850 Derby Trial Stakes in a four-horse blanket finish Saturday at Churchill Downs.

Three noses separated the first four finishers in the field of seven 3-year-olds.

Kingpost, also expected to start in the 1¼-mile Derby next Saturday, finished second, Lover's Trust was third and Frosty the Snowman was fourth. A steward's inquiry was lodged against Frosty the Snowman but the order of finish was allowed to stand.

The only other Trial starter expected to run in the Derby was Cefis, who finished sixth, behind Pastourelles. Morgan's Levee was seventh.

Jim's Orbit, ridden by Shane Romero, carried 122 pounds over the mile in 1:38 3-5 for his first victory in four starts this year.

Jim's Orbit, owned and bred by James Cottrell, earned $36,952 and returned $21, $8.20 and $5.80.

Mark Warner's Kingpost, 122, ridden by Jorge Velasquez and trained by Diane Carpenter, returned $6.40 and $4.40 while Robert Driola's Lover's Trust, ridden by Wesley Ward, paid $4.

Thompson leads ProGolf Tour with 137

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — University of Georgia golfer Dicky Thompson of Peachtree City, Ga., shot a 70-67—137 on Saturday to led a field of 70 golfers into Sunday's final 36 holes of the ProGolf Tour $100,000 Crown Colony Invitational.

Rain forced golfers to play two rounds on Saturday and two more on Sunday, with players going off both the No. 1 and No. 10 tee boxes.

It took only 147 or better to make the cut — the highest cut in six stops held to date in the 18-event schedule of the PGT.

Thompson, who won the St. Louis Open in 1987, held a one-shot lead over Marco Dawson of Lakeland, Fla., going into Sunday's final two rounds.

Wayland sweeps at Drake

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Wayland Baptist completed the first-ever sweep of the six college division relays and Baylor sophomore Michael Johnson beat a veteran field in the invitational 200 meters Saturday at the 79th Drake Relays.

Led by seniors Devon Morris and Alrick Munroe, Wayland Baptist won the 400, 1,600, sprint medley and distance medley relays on Saturday to go with its titles in the 800 and 3,200 relays on Friday.

It was the first time any school won six relay races at Drake and continued an impressive string of success for Wayland, which had captured four relay titles at the meet in each of the three previous years.

Morris, who ran for Jamaica in the 1984 Olympics, anchored the victories in the 400 and 1,600 and ran on the 800 and sprint medley teams. Counting preliminaries, he ran in four races during the weekend.

Arizona was the only university division team to win more than one relay. The Wildcats won the distance medley Saturday after taking first place in the 3,200 on Friday.

Located in Plainview, Texas, Wayland Baptist at one point thought about not making the 900-mile bus trip to Des Moines this weekend because several runners were ailing.

"Some people were hurt, some people were reluctant to go," Morris said. "So our coach (John Creer) said if things start getting worse, we can't go to Drake.

Lee's Bishop bows in regional tennis

From Staff Reports

Brian Bishop, the area's only regional high school tennis qualifier, was eliminated in his first match Friday at the 4-5A regional tennis tournament.

Bishop, who was the first Lee netter to advance to regionals in the last 16 years, fell in straight sets to Duncanville's Brad Sweeney, 7-6, 6-4.

The Rebel junior was considered an underdog in the tournament after stunning District 4-5A's top seed, Aaron Layman of Odessa Permian, in last week's district meet.

WILLIAMS PBA VICTOR— Mark Williams beat Tony Westlake 237-214 in the championship game Saturday to capture his second $250,000 Tournament of Champions. Williams vaulted to an early lead against Westlake by opening with four straight strikes.

Westlake also hurt his cause in the title match by leaving the 4-6-7-10 split in the second frame and failing to convert.

Astros' Deshaies, Young tame Montreal, 3-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Deshaies allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Gerald Young scored twice as the Houston Astros defeated the Montreal Expos 3-0 Saturday night.

Deshaies, 2-2, helped the Astros win their fourth straight and extended Houston's streak of having its starters pitch at least six innings in all 21 games this season.

With one out in the eighth, Hubie Brooks tripled and Deshaies was replaced by Ernie Camacho.

The Expos loaded the bases with two outs in the ninth, but Dave Smith got Mitch Webster to ground out to third for the last out and earned his fifth save.

Young led off the first inning with a double off Bryn Smith, 0-2. Following a walk to Billy Hatcher, Glenn Davis was hit by a pitch to load the bases and Young scored on Alan Ashby's groundout.

Houston made it 2-0 in the third when Young led off with an infield single to shortstop, moved to third on Hatcher's bunt single, and scored on Kevin Bass' groundout.

The Astros added a run in the seventh when Craig Reynolds singled, stole second, and scored on Jim Pankovits' single.

Record-setting Orioles eye new record for May

From Wire Reports

CHICAGO — Manager Frank Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles would like to forget the month of April.

Not only did the Orioles set a major-league record by starting the season with 21 straight defeats — it also was an all-time American League mark — before breaking the streak Friday night with a 9-0 triumph over Chicago, but their 4-1 loss to the White Sox on Saturday night saddled them with the worst percentage for any month in modern baseball history.

"The month of April is behind us," said Robinson. "Tomorrow is May 1."

Told of the April record, Robinson replied, "You had to remind me?"

The 1-22 mark left the Orioles with an .043 percentage. The previous low of .067 was set by the Philadelphia Athletics in July of 1916 with a 2-28 mark.

Ivan Calderon's home run and Carlton Fisk's run-scoring single in the second inning backed the combined five-hit pitching of Rick Horton and Bobby Thigpen.

Robinson said he was looking for a second straight victory, "then a third and a fourth and a fifth. We want to win with some consistency."

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second on a triple by Tito Landrum and Carl Nichols' sacrifice fly. After Chicago went ahead to stat 2-1 in the botto of the second, the White Sox added an unearned run in the fourth on a triple by Kenny Williams and an error and scored another in the eighth off Mark Thurmond, 0-5, on a triple by Gary Redus and Ozzie Guillen's sacrifice fly.

Yankees 15, Rangers 3

NEW YORK — Dave Winfield tied the major-league RBI record for April with a two-run single and Mike Pagliarulo his a three-run homer and a grand slam.

Winfield's 28th and 29 runs batted in tied Ron Cey of the 1977 Los Angeles Dodgers and Dale Murphy of the 1985 Atlanta Braves and broke the American League mark of 28 by Don Baylor of the 1979 California Angels.

Pagliarulo, hit his fifth home run of the season off Jeff Russell in the Yankees five-run fifth following Winfield's two-run single off Texas starter Bobby Witt. He hit the fourth grand slam of his career off Mike Jeffcoat in the sixth after Winfield was intentionally walked with runners at second and third and the Yankees leading 9-2. Jack Clark also homered for the Yankees.

New York's Richard Dotson pitched a seven-hitter, including solo home runs by Geno Petralli and Oddibe McDowell.

Athletics 11, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Jose Canseco hit a three-run homer and Carney Lansford had three hits as Oakland extended its winning streak to six games. Oakland has won 10 of its last 11 and is nine games over .500 for the first time since Aug. 11, 1985. Cleveland has lost two straight games for the first time this season.

Winner Bob Welch gave up three runs and seven hits in six innings and Gene Nelson earned his first save with three innings of two-hit relief. Loser Rich Yett yielded five runs and six hits in three innings.

Oakland trailed 1-0 in the third when Lansford and Stan Javier hit one-out singles. Canseco then hit his eighth home run put the A' ahead 3-1. Canseco, who has 24 runs batted in, had only one homer and 10 RBIs last April.

Angels 6, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO — Mark McLemore singled a run home in the eighth inning to break a 1-1 tie and California added four runs in the ninth to back Chuck Finley's five-hitter as the Angels handed Toronto its sixth consecutive loss.

Finley struck out four in his first complete game in the majors. He retired 11 in a row from the third inning through the sixth. Devon White hit a solo home run, his second, to tie the score 1-1 in the California fourth.

Red Sox 8, Twins 3

BOSTON — Rick Cerone had three hits, including his first homer since Sept. 7, and scored three runs, helping the Boston Red Sox post their eighth victory in nine games.

Unbeaten Bruce Hurst, 4-0, was staked to a 7-1 lead but allowed 12 hits before needing help from Wes Gardner, who earned his first save with three hitless innings, retiring all nine batters he faced.

Off to their best start since 1962 with a 14-6 record, the Red Sox completed the best month of April in the club's 88-year history. The 14 victories are one more than the 1979 and 1982 teams had in April.

Brewers 4, Royals 1

MILWAUKEE — Paul Molitor singled three times, stole two bases and scored two runs and Bill Wegman scattered 10 hits over 8 1-3 innings.

Wegman blanked the Royals through seven innings before Willie Wilson singled in the eighth and scored on George Brett's double. Dan Plesac got the final two outs for his fourth save.

Kansas City's Kevin Seitzer extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a single in the third inning.

Mets edge Reds as ump takes cover

From Wire Reports

CINCINNATI — Howard Johnson scored from second base on shortstop Barry Larkin's hotly disputed throwing error in the ninth inning Saturday as New York beat Cincinnati 6-5 in a game that saw first base umpire Dave Pallone leave for his safety after the fans littered the field with debris.

The winning run scored on a disputed call at first that resulted in the ejection of Reds manager Pete Rose for pushing Pallone. The game also was held up 14 minutes following the altercation after fans threw all sorts of objects on the field.

Johnson had opened the ninth with a walk from John Franco, 0-1, and moved to second on a sacrifice by Kevin Elster. Mookie Wilson hit a two-out grounder to Larkin, whose throw pulled Nick Esasky off first base.

Pallone hesitated in making his call, giving Johnson time to score standing up. An enraged Rose argued briefly with Pallone and then shoved him in the chest with both hands. Fans then threw debris on the field, causing the game to be delayed while the grounds crew cleaned up and the umpires left the field.

It was the first run given up by Franco this season in 14 innings covering seven appearances.

When the players and umpires returned to the field, the fans started to throw debris Pallone's way and he left the field.

Phillies 7, Braves 5

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Schmidt had two singles and a triple, driving in two runs, and Juan Samuel had three RBI with a two-run triple and a sacrifice fly as Philadelphia snapped a three-game losing streak.

Cubs 2, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Vance Law hit a run-scoring single with two outs in the 13th inning. After Ryne Sandberg led off the 13th with a walk and was caught stealing, Manny Trillo followed with a double to left off Joe Price, 0-2.

Andre Dawson was walked intentionally, and Rafael Palmeiro lined to center before Law got the game-winning hit.

Les Lancaster, 1-2, blanked the Giants for three innings and was the winner. Goose Gossage worked the last inning for his second save.

Devils defeat Capitals, 3-2, in 7th game

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — John MacLean scored on a deflection to snap a 2-2 tie with 6:11 remaining Saturday night, lifting the New Jersey Devils to a 3-2 victory over the Washington Capitals in Game 7 of the Patrick Division finals.

The Devils, in the playoffs for the first time since moving from Colorado to New Jersey in 1982, advanced to the Wales Conference finals, where they will meet the Boston Bruins in a best-of-7 series beginning Monday night at the Boston Garden.

The game-winner came after New Jersey defenseman Craig Wolanin intercepted a clearing pass at the right point, turned and golfed a low shot. MacLean got his stick on the puck and tipped it past Washington goalie Pete Peeters, just inside the left post.

Rookie goaltender Sean Burke stopped 30 shots for New Jersey and made several key stops in the final period.

The loss marked the sixth consecutive year the Capitals have failed to advance past the second round of the Stanley Cup playoffs. It was also the fourth consecutive game and fifth overall in the seven-game series won by the visiting team.

Area teams to send 11 athletes to state track meet

Midland High golfers take fifth place

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — Despite a dramatic improvement over last year, the Midland High golf team failed to qualify for the state golf tournament, finishing fifth at the regional tourney held Friday and Saturday in Lubbock.

The Bulldogs shot a two round total of 612, 44 strokes behind tournament winner Denton's 568. El Paso Hanks was the second-place qualifier, shooting a 594.

District 4-5A champion San Angelo also failed to make the state cut, placing third with a 605; Mansfield was four strokes behind in fourth.

"It's been a good season," head coach John Ford said of his Bulldog linksters. "I'm very proud because they've come such a long way. We just kept getting better and better.

"This region is one of the toughest to get out of. We played better (Saturday) than we did (Friday) but not as good as we're capable of playing."

Midland High shot a first round 307 and at the time were only seven strokes out of second. El Paso Hank's second day 294, combined with MHS' Saturday mark of 305, though, landed the Bulldogs 18 strokes out of qualifying range.

Senior Mike Johnson led the 'Dogs with a two round 150, including a 73 on Saturday.

None of the Bulldog golfers were honored as top individual medalists, and the competition was so tough thateven Permian's Ben Bangert, regarded as the area's best golfer, failed to make it out of Lubbock.

Both medalists who will make the trip to Austin were from regional champ Denton.

Regional Top Five

1. Denton, 291-277-568; 2. El Paso Hanks, 300-294-594; 3. San Angelo, 309-296-605; 4. Mansfield, 313-296-609; 5. Midland High, 307-305-612.

Midland High Individuals

Mike Johnson, 77-73-150; Jay Rosebery, 76-76-152; Ted Newman, 79-76-155; Donnie Doan, 75-80-155; Kris Doan, 79-80-159.

TRACK

Parkerson placed fourth in the event that he was expected to be a no-show. He ran a close third for three and three-quarters laps, but couldn't put on the kick needed for a finish, but his 4:28.19 was a career best by five full seconds.

"I just didn't have the kick at the end," said Parkerson. Lee coach Eddie Wolski added, "That's the very best he can run. I couldn't have been prouder of him if he had won the event. He competed."

diand High's Mayra Pina placed 1 in both the 3200 and 1600. She was a late replacement in the 1600 when an Abilene High girl couldn't compete.

"I was really afraid I was going to finish last and embarrass myself, but I beat some people in both races," said Pina.

Midland High's Braggston Morris didn't qualify for the finals of the long jump after a 21-5 effort, but Duncanville's Julian Hayward won the event with a record 24-5.

Lee's girls placed sixth in the 400 relay with a 49.02, but did defeat Permian, a team they lost to in the qualifying round on Friday.

Overall, the Region I meet was not a blessing for District 4-5A. The Permian boys failed for the first time in eight years to qualify anyone for the state meet and the Permian girls, also district champions like their boy teammates, failed to get anyone to Austin.

Odessa High's Kasandra McDaniel won two state berths with an 11.83 in the 100 and an awesome 24.43 in the 200. Abilene Cooper's Tammy Scott placed second in a weak high jump field with a 5-4. Lee, with Fennell and Strambler, were the only boys from 4-5A to advance.

El Paso High's Gilbert Contreras won the 800 in a record 1:51.17 and then produced the double with a victory in the 1600 where he fell down at the start and got up to win.

Lubbock Coronado's Debra Tinnell was another double winner in the 800 and 1600. El Paso Irvin's Dino Napier was a double winner in the 100 and 200.

JUCO

"I didn't play up to my ability," Tenlen said. "I'm disappointed because I was hoping it would be a good match."

TENLEN defeated Dysholm in the No. 3 singles final at the 1987 Region V tourney before beating the MC standout again in the NJCAA national quarterfinals.

Only Scott Randolph at No. 5 failed to win a singles championship for the Chaparrals.

"Scott did not play well at all," coach Joe Williams said. "He got frustrated and temperamental."

Williams said doubles results for both MC men and women were important even though they would have little bearing on team standings.

"This tournament determines national seedings," he said. "If we play well here, we keep away from other good teams in the early rounds at nationals."

The Midland and McLennan men advance to the national tournament in Tyler May 24-28, while the MC and Odessa women will play in Pasadena May 19-20.

From Staff Reports

Eleven area athletes earned berths at the state track and field meet after qualifying at regional meets, held Saturday at various sites in West Texas.

Andrews' Joe Don Finley placed first in the discus competition at the 4A meet in Brownwood. Finley's first place toss measured 175 feet, one-inch.

Andrews also will send Kathleen Johnson to Austin, after she grabbed the gold in the girl's shot put with a throw of 40-5½.

At the Class 3A regional at Odessa College, Greenwood's Randy Donnell qualified for state with a first place leap of 6-6 in the high jump. Donnell also placed fourth, but did not qualify for state, in the 110 and 300 hurdle events.

Cheryl Martin will also represent Greenwood in Austin after finishing with the silver medal in the 100-meter hurdles. Martin finished with a time of 14.95.

Big Spring played host to the Class 2A regional, and seven area athletes placed high enough to advance to Austin in their events.

Rankin's 1600 meter relay team finished in the runner-up position. Junior Helmers, Doug Braden, James Watson and George Abalos comnbined for a second place time of 3:22.74.

McCamey's Roman Zarate had a gold medal finish of 38.24 in the 300 intermediate hurdles. In the pole vault, Rankin's Bruce Hooker finished second with a jump of 14-6, and Stanton's Kody Newman finished second in the girls 100 with a time of 12.63. Newman also finished fourth in the 200 with a time of 25.91.

The state track meet will be held May 13 and 14 at the University of Texas campus in Austin.

Below, divided by classes, schools and individuals, are area finishers, how they placed and their times at heir meets. Listed are those who finished in the top six in their events, with the first and second place finishers advancing to Austin:

McCutchen high on MHS outlook

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

With 10 returning starters from Midland High's first winning football season in more than a decade, coach Doug McCutchen is understandably optimistic about this year's spring practice session.

The Bulldogs begin spring drills Monday and will work until the annual Bill Mims spring scrimmage on May 21. McCutchen said the 'Dogs collective attitude is the best it's been in his four years at MHS, and he credits last year's 6-3 record with creating such a positive feeling.

"We've got more desire, more enthusiasm, and the kids feel better about themselves," McCutchen said.

Returning defensive starters include left end Ronnie Forrest, right end Jeff Rashell, cornerback Roman Duran, free safety Michael Savas and strong safety Kevin Rychell, while running back Dwane Roberts and right guard Thomas Brown return from the 1987 offensive unit.

Also, wide receivers Shaun Savas, Max Reyes and Rusty Holt alternated shuttling plays into McCutchen's split-back Veer offense. Eight other lettermen are expected to add veteran leadership to the 1988 squad.

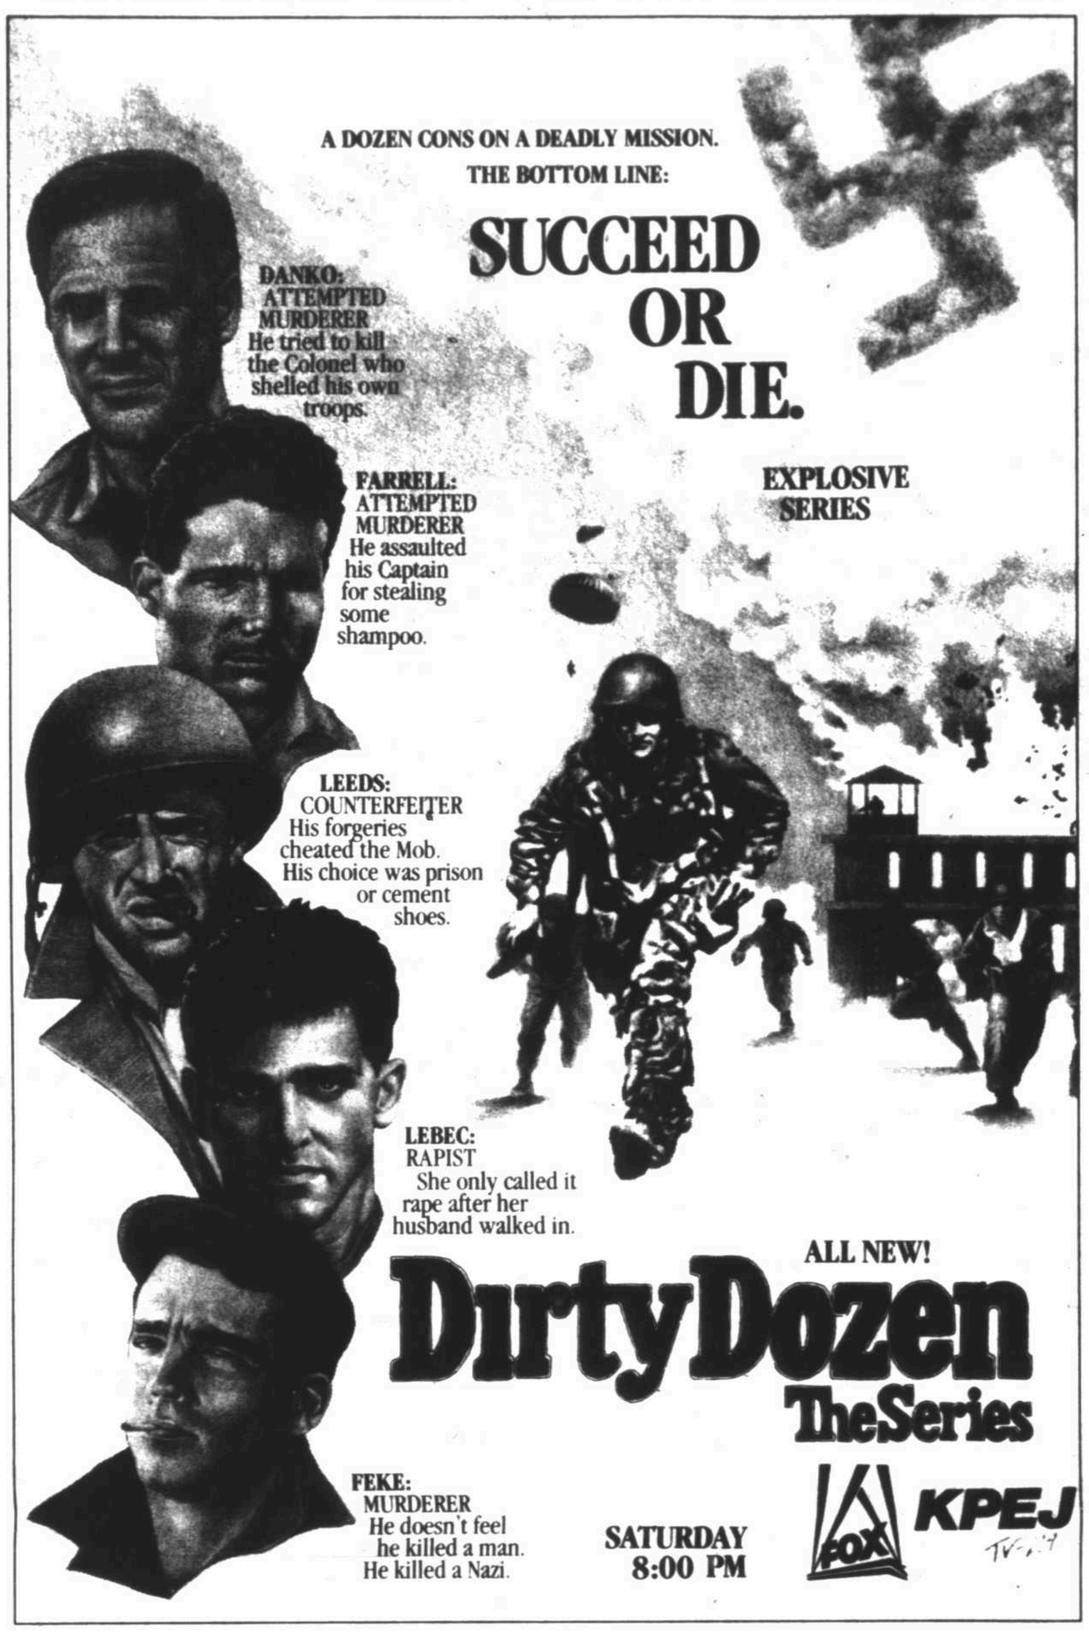

McCutchen said the Bulldogs will spend much of spring drills learning how to "veer" from their basic offensive set due to experience at the skill positions.

"We may line up in the I and some one-back formations," the coach said. "I just feel like we have better speed in the backfield and can do some more things."

DEFENSIVELY, McCutchen expects to rarely deviate from the Bulldogs' basic 4-3 formation, except for a moderate amount of overshifting and stunting.

The 'Dogs may be hampered during spring drills by the success of the playoff-bound Midland High baseball team, which includes quarterback candidates Russell Page, Patrick Mowles and Jason Stone. Other baseballers who may miss some spring ball include Roberts, Savas, Rychell and Will Sowders.

On the plus side, no Bulldogs will be forced to miss spring ball due to injury, according to McCutchen.

Contribute to the Industrial Rebirth of a Thriving Small City as EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY CENTER Jamestown, New York

Jamestown, NY is enjoying a healthy economic turnaround. This new Business and Industry Center is intended to nurture and expand this economic revitalization. The missions of the center, affiliated with the Chautauqua County Industrial Development Agency (recognized as one of the nation's best) and Jamestown Community College, are the analyses of company productivity problems, the imaginative syntheses and implementation of their solutions, and the education of personnel. The Executive Director will be responsible for fulfilling these missions. The staff will use consultants and area college resources in working with local leaders and private foundations.

EDUCATIONAL REQUIREMENTS
B.A. or B.S. Degree; Master's Degree would be helpful.

EXPERIENCE
Five years or more in a managerial position requiring analytical skills, definition of problems, construction of solutions and their implementation - all in an industrial organization or equivalent. Demonstrated ability to manage people and to establish rapport with CEOs.
An understanding of college participation in local economic revitalization would be a valuable asset.

Sales Executive

Office Systems

Midland/Odessa area

Pitney Bowes is the renowned leader in mailing systems. However, only one-half of our business is in mailing products. We also market an extensive line of microprocessor based electronic equipment and systems that place us in nearly every corner of the office—electronic scales, copiers, sorters, folding machines and much more.

You'll introduce our diversity to an office world that knows us well. We have 2 million customers around the world who are willing to listen to what else we have to offer. As a sales professional, you know the potential of this kind of client base.

You also know what it can mean to represent a complete line of equipment—not just a one of a kind. It gives you a flexibility of presentation and an opportunity to build one sale into another.

You must have experience in outside sales with a proven record of success. We prefer exposure to office equipment and copier systems sales with a good knowledge of competitive products. An ability to make a knowledgeable, informed and personable presentation to upper level executives is essential. When you have the best equipment, you want the best people to sell it.

The rewards are high and immediate, as we think success should be shared. The compensation package assures high earnings for solid effort. There are no limits imposed on earnings.

If you're one of the best, write

Jim Byroad

Exquisite Older Home

The exterior of the home is only one of the many highlights this week's featured home has to offer. The blooming plants in the picture were provided by La Casa Verde.

Although this week's featured home was built approximately 40 years ago, the design and special features in the home were years ahead of its time. The exquisite home has many features that are found in new houses that are being constructed today and this home has a formal living room, a large den, four bedrooms and two baths.

The design and landscaping of this home's exterior only begins to captivate any visitor or guest. Upon entering the home, a visitor immediately notices the lovely hardwood floors in the formal living room and dining room. The formal living area has three large windows and a closet has been converted into a bar area that can be used for displaying crystal decanters and glasses.

EXQUISITE

The dining room is located to the right of the living room and is decorated in a country motif in shades of wedgwood blue and white. The arrangements of these two rooms make this home perfect for any type of entertaining of family or friends.

A hall off the living room leads to the kitchen, which is also adjacent to the dining room. The St. Charles style kitchen is highlighted by the country print wallcovering and border that features cream, blue and white. The appliances include a General Electric range and oven and a Waste King dishwasher.

A small hall off the kitchen features a wall of storage cabinets that include a closet, and a door leads to a side yard.

Across from the kitchen, a lovely guest bath is situated. The bath is decorated in pale green and has peach accents. This bath has a tub and includes a storage area.

At the end of the hall, the den and a bedroom are located. The den is rectangular in shape and focuses on a wall of windows that overlooks a side covered patio that is blooming with spring plants. Another wall features bookcases with built-in storage cabinets. This room also has a storage closet and a door which leads to the patio area.

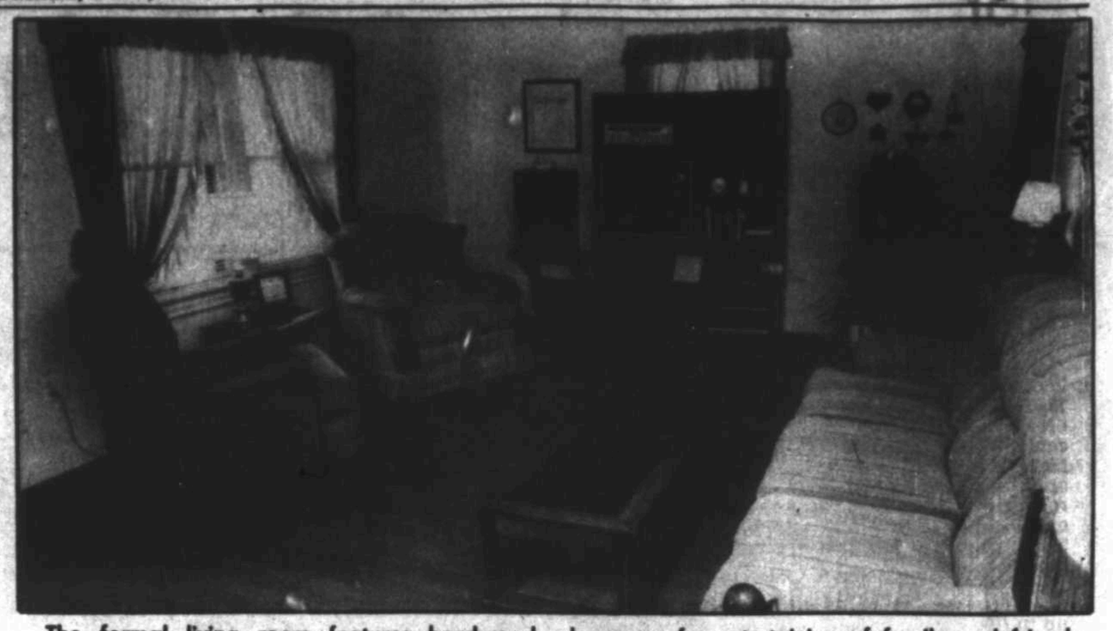

To the right of the den, the hall ends into a bedroom which was originally the master bedroom and has two large closets. This spacious room could be used as a bedroom, but is also ideal as an office or study.

Beyond the den area, three bedroom and a bath are located. The first bedroom has tan walls and two large closets. The second bedroom is being used as a small child's room and is decorated in a seafoam green. The closets in the room would delight any mother because of the extra built-ins. One side of one of the closets has shelves that can store lots of blankets and the other side has built-in drawers and cabinets for clothes and shoes. The second closet is also spacious enough to store larger toys.

The master bedroom has pale peach walls and two large closets with built-ins. Next to the master bedroom, a large bath is located. The design of this bath is very similar to many baths that are being built today. The sink area is located to the right, with the opposite wall being highlighted by two walls of mirrors over the spacious vanity area. This bath also features a private bathing area and is stylishly decorated in wedgwood blue and pink.

The other amenities in the home include 14 closets, a two-car garage with openers, a large utility room, a storage room, ceiling fans and a sprinkler system.

This unusually styled home combines the best of old and new and contains approximately 2,400 square feet. The home is located in a well-established, older Midland neighborhood and is being offered by Action Realty for 90,000.

The formal living room features hardwood floors and a closet which has been converted in a bar area for entertaining of family and friends. The dining room is adjacent to the living room.

Langston Realtors Talk About...

Title insurance questions answered

Approximately 400 persons attended our recent Home Buyers' Fair; an educational and marketing presentation by Langston Realtors. During discussion of closing costs and procedures, the subject of title insurance seemed to be one of the most confusing to prospective buyers and sellers. Therefore, we have asked a local attorney and owner of a local title company to give us some answers to the most frequently asked questions.

Q. What is a Policy of Title Insurance and what does it do?

A. It is an insurance policy which guarantees title to his property. If the title defects cannot be corrected after all legal remedies have been used then the face amount on the policy is paid to the insured. Some of the problems that may require a payment of money are forgeries, incapacity of parties to execute a deed. A title policy allows a purchaser to pursue his legal remedies against a title underwriter who has issued the title policy and the seller is generally absolved of any liability and does not have to defend a court action brought against him. It is cheap considering the protection it provides.

Q. When selling a home, why does an owner have to furnish a new title insurance policy? Why cannot he just pass on the policy he received when he purchased the home?

A. A policy issued to an owner when he brought the property insured only his rights up to that time of purchase. A new policy covers any title problems that have occurred since the seller acquired his home. Also, the new buyer may get protection on the insured increased sales price.

Q. What could have happened during the seller's ownership of a home that might affect the title?

A. There are numerous events that could have occurred during a seller's ownership that would affect the conveyance of the title. The most common are changes in marital status, a death of one of the owners, seller's bankruptcy, seller's failure to pay ad valorem (property) or federal income taxes, or incapacity of parties.

Q. Can a buyer purchased his own title insurance policy?

A. The obligation for the cost of title insurance is a negotiable item at the time of contract signing and can be allocated to either the buyer or seller. However, in our community and state, the Owner's Policy of Title Insurance is a "usual and normal" seller's closing cost and the Mortgagee's (Lender's) Title Policy is a buyer's cost, and are printed as such on the Earnest Money Contracts promulgated by Texas Real Estate Commission and used by Texas real estate agents. If different arrangements are agreed upon at the time of contract negotiations, these arrangements should be set forth on the contracts.

Q. You mentioned two different title policies; explain please.

A. If new or additional financing is put on a property when purchased, there are usually two policies issued–an owner's policy insuring the buyers against a claim on the title and a mortgagee's policy insuring the mortgage company's interest against a claim or flaw on the title. The cost for the owner's policy is prescribed by the Texas State Board of Insurance and is based on the sales price. The cost for the Mortgagee's Policy is presently $60 if it is issued at the same time as the Owner's.

Q. Can I close a purchase without a title policy?

A. Yes you can if you are willing to assume that risk and if your mortgage company does not require one. Sales may be closed with an attorney's Title Opinion or with Abstracts of Title certified by an abstract company. Before considering either of these two options, we would advise you to consult an attorney of your choice.

Q. Isn't it true that you rarely encounter title problems?

A. We experience difficulties in very few closings; however, even one, especially when it concerns you, is too many. All of our local title and abstract companies work very conscientiously with purchasers and sellers to detect and correct title problems and fortunately, have been able to assist the few parties and fortunately, have been able to assist the few parties concerned with these difficulties. Sometimes it has taken as long as two or three months, but we usually do progress to a successful closing.

Q. How does an abstract differ from a title policy?

A. An abstract is a compilation of copies of the recorded legal instruments as they pertain to the property. They make interesting readings; some in East Texas even do back to the prior of Spanish land grants. However, most buyers would still want to retain an attorney to interpret and evaluate the transactions detailed on the hundreds of pages of an abstract. An abstract is not insurance against a defect in the chain of title, but merely a record of that chain of title.

Advice given on what characteristics home seller should look for in Realtor

According to Anita Noles, of Don Harvey, Realtors, many prospective home sellers don't know what they should look for in a Realtor, or what they can do to help with the marketing effort.

Noles

Ms. Noles said, "To help the sellers be better prepared to select the right Realtor and be better able to assist the Realtor in the market effort, they should consider the following:

What should a seller look for when selecting a Realtor?

Tract record: Usually the best indicator of future performance is a proven tract record. Some things the seller might want to determine are:

- How long have they been in business?
- What is their reputation in the community?
- How many successful transactions do they complete each year?

Market Exposure:

Can they provide comprehensive effective exposure for their property. Some indicators are :

- How many full-time agents do they have available to be actively engaged in selling your home?
- How many yard signs do they have throughout the community. This is an indication of how active they are in listing and selling homes. In addition, most of the prospect calls a Realtor receives come from their yard signs. Therefore, the more yard signs they have, the greater their chances of finding the right buyer for your home.
- Do they also use the other creative forms of advertising to generate prospects.
- Are they a member of one or more major national referral networks that would send them prospective buyers?
- Do their agents have the needed knowledge, experience and training. Do they have an ongoing training program to keep them informed of changes in the market and industry as a whole?

Service Orientation:

Make sure you select a Realtor that is truly committed to conscientious service as exemplified by such things as:

- Will they stay in touch with you on a regular basis?
- Will they keep you always informed of your marketing progress and share the feedback they've gathered?
- Will they be constantly working to generate excitement and activity about your home in the Realtor community as well?
- Will they be easily accessible at all times to answer questions and help you solve problems?
- Do they clearly understand the Principal/Agent responsibilities: i.e. the person paying the fee, usually the seller, is the client even if they are also working with the buyer?

What can you do to help?

When the Realtor comes to list your home, try to have the information and documents readily available that will enable them to list your home accurately and market it effectively. An example of some things to have ready are:

- Deed
- Mortgage information
- Homeowners insurance
- Title insurance policy
- Copy of your survey
- Association of neighborhood fees you pay
- Record of your utility costs
- Information about your school district

When your house is being shown, some things you can do to help insure more effective showings are:

- Have all the lights on when they arrive
- Open curtains and blinds to make the house brighter
- Open closet doors and other doors that might conceal important areas
- Keep the room temperature comfortable
- Turn off the T.V.
- Have soft music in the background
- Have pets well out of the way
- Try to be gone yourself if possible. If you must remain, try to stay as much in the background as possible.
- Make sure the house is filled with pleasant odors.
- Do not try and sell personal property to prospects. Let them decide to buy your house first and then you can talk to them about personal property.

In summary, to successfully market your home, first be sure you've selected the right Realtor. Provide your Realtor with the information and tools they need to approach the job with accuracy and effectiveness. Stay in touch with your Realtor and be prepared to participate in and approve necessary decisions about marketing changes as they are needed. Always have your home preened and ready to make its best impression. Then, when your Realtor brings prospects stay in the background and let the Realtor do what they're supposed to do - sell your home.

Experts advise safety guideline for axes

What's the difference between an axe and an axiom? An axiom is a maxim widely accepted on its intrinsic merit. An axe is a cutting tool usually used for felling trees and chopping or splitting wood. There are many different kinds of axes, ranging from the single-edged fireman's axe to the double-edged Western axe.

Through the axiom may be widely accepted as self evident, the rules of safety regarding axes aren't. The proper use of axes, say the experts, isn't splitting hairs; it demands close adherence to safety rules. They include:

- Wear safety goggles.
- Strike squarely; try to avoid glancing blows.
- Use an axe of a size and weight suited to the job.
- Never use a tool with a loose or damaged handle.
- Use a file or whetstone to sharpen a cutting edge, never a grinding wheel.
- Never use one metal tool to strike another.
- Never use a dull tool.
- Replace a chipped tool immediately.

Experts also advise that buying a good-quality tool is a smart investment.

Home Realty offers beautiful family style home

By JILL HANCOCK
Advertising Feature Writer

Home Realty is offering a beautiful traditional home that would be ideal for many families and includes one main living area, three bedrooms and two baths.

This home has a lovely formal dining room that is located to the left of the home's entrance and the room is brightened by a large window that overlooks the front yard.

One of the main highlights of the home is the den and kitchen area. These rooms are separated by a breakfast bar, making this area the center of all family activity. The den features paneled walls and focuses on a white brick fireplace. This room also has a built-in bookcase on one wall and a window to the right of the fireplace that looks out onto the backyard.

A large breakfast bar that can seat up to five people visually separates the kitchen from the den. The kitchen has a Whirlpool dishwasher, a General Electric oven and a built-in cooktop. The other amenities of the kitchen include lots of cabinet and storage space, a lovely vinyl floor and a large work area next to the sink.

The breakfast room is adjacent to the kitchen and has a large window that affords sunshine all year round, as well as a lovely view of the backyard.

A small hall off the kitchen leads to the sequestered master bedroom. This attractive room has tan walls with white shutters on the windows. The master bath has a charming print wallpaper in shades of navy, white and tan. The bath has a sink area and a private bathing area that includes a built-in shower and vanity. A large walk-in closet with built-ins and a ceiling fan are the other amenities in this room.

One of the main highlights in the home is the den and kitchen area. These rooms are divided by the breakfast bar and the design makes this home ideal for any active family. The breakfast room is located to the right of the kitchen.

A large utility room is conveniently located to the kitchen and master bedroom. This room is spacious enough to include room for a freezer and also has storage cabinets and shelves.

The two car garage, with opener, is located next to the utility room. Another unique feature in this home is a built-in office in the garage that is spacious enough for filing cabinets and bookcases. The office has central air and carpeting and is an added extra for any homeowner.

Two bedrooms that share a hall bath are located to the right of the entrance. The first room has pale blue walls with white trim that is shaded by a large tree in the front yard. This room also has white shutters on the windows and a walk-in closet.

The second bedroom is located at the opposite end of the hall and includes mini-blinds and a walk-in closet.

A hall bath that features a tub and shower is located between these two rooms and has been decorated in a lovely shade of pale peach.

The other amenities in this family home are three ceiling fans, a storage building and a beautifully landscaped yards.

This special home, that is centrally located to schools and shopping centers, contains approximately 1,700 square feet and is being offered by Jim Craig Hess with Home Realty for $72,500.

Culver announces innovative, national real estate program

Louise Culver, President of Carriage Company, Realtors, is pleased to announce an innovative, national real estate sales program – EXSELL. This new corporate relocation program is designed to provide transferring employees with personalized marketing expertise to sell their homes.

Culver

As a member of Network 50, Inc. Merrill Lynch Realty's full service national referral network, Carriage Company, Realtors is qualified as Midland's exclusive EXSELL broker. When a corporation plans to relocate its employees from Midland and qualifies for the EXSELL program, Merrill Lynch Realty's Relocation Management Division will work with Carriage Company, Realtors to sell the property quickly for the best possible price.

Tim Thompson, Senior Vice President of Merrill Lynch Realty's Relocation Management Division, states, "We have developed the EXSELL program to make relocating as easy as possible for transferring employees and corporate clients. Through our unique team approach, we can provide the transferee with timely, professional guidance to maximize the marketability and price of the home."

EXSELL is a comprehensive program consisting of three integrated phases. During the first phase, the Competitive Market Analysis, a professional EXSELL advisor will analyze the property to determine its advantages, potential and realistic selling price. During the second phase, the advisor will develop a Home Selling Action Plan – a step-by-step program for marketing, showing and selling the property. During the third phase, the EXSELL advisor will review offers with the transferee and close the sale.

"By starting the EXSELL program and the home marketing process as soon as the employee has decided to relocate," states Louise Culver, "we can alleviate the stress of relocation, and the employee can concentrate on purchasing a new home, moving and getting to work at the new location. This ultimately gives the relocating employee a greater degree of satisfaction with the home sale process."

EXSELL can also help reduce the costs oassociated with corporate employee relocation. By providing professional, directed assistance at the earliest phase of a relocation, EXSELL can help sell the home before the employee's corporation must purchase it. In addition, EXSELL facilitates the homesale process and enables the transferring employee to become productive in the new location in a shorter period of time.

"The EXSELL program is clearly a new direction in the relocation industry," said Culver. "Through EXCELL, our corporate relocation business in Midland should increase our already impressive share of this market. As ab independent and locally owned firm, Carriage Company, Realtors, is pleased to join 270 other firms with more than 35,000 professional agents as members of Network 50, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Merrill Lynch Realty. This premier relocation network assists transferees throughout the United States, Canada and the U.S. Virgin Islands."

I HEARD A MEADOWLARK

as I exited one of the most "beautymus" new homes I have ever seen! Look at that lovely wallpaper, the "whisper gray" walls, those moldings, ceilings like you have never seen, the double fireplace, the large marble tub, a kitchen complete w/appliances including double oven and Jen-air, the ½ bath in the utility room, the water circulating system on the hot water heater, security alarm, and the view out to the expansive greenness at the back side. "Soon to be old" folks would love the little yard maintenance & so would anyone who prefers to do something besides yard work - such as being out on the greens at Green Tree North! NEW ON THE MARKET!

4008 Westminster in the beautiful Skyline West Addition

Just a two minute walk to the mall is this beautiful, very large family home located on a nicely landscaped and maintenance free lot. This home features 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths and 3 very large living areas and has so much upgrading and extras you won't believe! Sunken living, sunny den and spacious gameroom blend right together for entertaining and a walk-in wet bar is convenient to all three. A separate breakfast room adjacent to step up dining overlooks living and gallery entry. Sequestered master bedroom is enormous with double dressing areas, a luxury bath and jacuzzi tub. This home was made for the large, active family. Ceiling fans, mini-blinds and custom drapes throughout, reverse osmosis water system and water softeners, stereo system throughout, oversize garage with extra parking pad, gas grill and much, much more. Brand new on the market and listed at $162,900. Hurry - this one won't last long!

THE CAMOUFLAGE CUT

If you get depressed when springtime rolls around because your body has a few rolls around places it shouldn't — then listen up. The right clothing can help camouflage almost any figure fault — all it takes is the right cut.

Now, granted, you can't hide figure faults in poolside garb, but there are ways to fight those flabby figure flaws in many of your everyday clothes.

Take, for instance, jeans. This denim fashion phenomenon that was originally designed as work clothes (because of the fabric's durability) has slowly become a vital part of almost everyone's wardrobe. And in the spring and summer — when baseball, softball and other outdoor activities are popular — jeans are just as important as swimsuits.

The popularity of jeans hit its peak a few years ago when designer jeans were the rage. Everybody who was anybody had a pair of designer jeans, complete with the designer's insignia (signature or logo) embroidered on their derriere.

THE KEY to the designer jeans craze was fit — and the tighter they fit, the better.

The memory of these painted-on denim marvels may bring back a humorous memory or two — like remembering the times you laid down on the bed or floor to zip up your jeans, or worse, remembering the girl in gym class who carried a small pair of pliers in her purse to pull the zipper up because her fingers were not strong enough.

Not only was this fashion statement too tight for comfort, it was unhealthy and unflattering for most female forms.

Although jeans are still a very popular part of most any wardrobe, designers have become much more conscious of the individual, and the big news for spring fit is "anti-fit." This is the new terminology used for the loose fitting silhouettes showing up in pants this spring, according to Levi's trends forecast.

There also will be more variety of style this season, and that's where selecting the right cut to camouflage those places that are not quite right is important.

Because there will be a variety of styles and most will be looser fitting, women will be able to relax in their jeans, and with a little extra effort will be able to look slimmer at the same time. All it takes is a little know-how in selecting styles that can make light of body flaws and appear to whittle inches off a woman's shape. With the wide variety of styles, shapes and colors of jeans available, there should be at least one style to help flatter almost any figure.

ACCORDING TO Family Circle magazine's "Beauty & Fashion Hotline," the right style can actually minimize figure problems and make you look slimmer and trimmer.

If a tummy bulge is your figure flaw, the hotline suggests your best bet will be flat-front jeans with small slash or high-cut pockets. It is important that the zipper lies flat. Legs should be straight or tapered.

The idea is to direct attention away from the tummy area, so pleats and big, detailed pockets should be avoided.

Yolk styles are recommended by Phyllis Gonzales of P.S. Images, a Midland modeling agency. "Yolk styles are the most flattering (to those with tummy bulges) and the most comfortable," Ms. Gonzales said.

Saddlebags, those lumps that position themselves on the upper outside of the thighs, can be disguised by modified "baggies," according to the hotline. These jeans are cut fuller in the thighs so they skim over the problem area. A word of warning, however. Be certain the pockets are high enough so they do not draw attention the saddlebag area.

Classic five-pocket jeans are a definite no no for this figure type — they grab, wrinkle and pull up in all the wrong places. It's also advisable to pass up any jeans that are too stretchy or too tight. These jeans will cling and direct attention to all the wrong places.

Full hips, which can be lost under a full skirt, are not so escapable in jeans. Ms. Gonzales suggested going for the more baggy look or looser fit.

"Wearing tight jeans with tapered legs is not for the woman with broad hips," Ms. Gonzales said.

A REPORT from the Ladies' Home Journal recommends looking for relaxed denim fabric; however, it does suggest avoiding baggy front-pleated styles (since extra roominess makes hips look larger). Also to be avoided are fussy front pockets which draw attention to the hips.

The best jeans for those who are a little too "hip" are clean-lined side seamed styles with high waistbands. Slash pockets also will minimize hip size. Selecting dark colors, such as dark blues and black, also will minimize size, but stay away from white.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

It's Spring, and time to celebrate the return of blue skies, warm sunshine, green grass, beautiful flowers and songbirds. But the question remains: What are you going to wear?

Two recent style shows, presented by local shops, helped answer that question and also chased away any remaining winter blahs as they presented the latest in spring fashions for occasions ranging from the most casual to the very formal.

The Petroleum Club held a ladies luncheon-style show a week ago Saturday. In the ballroom, the women and their guests lunched on Mixed Seafood in Pastry Puffs, assorted baby vegetables and for dessert, chocolate cups filled with pastry cream and fresh raspberries, before viewing the spring collection from Midland's newest ladies wear shop, G. Bradford, and fine jewelry from Sam L. Majors.

Sharon Crouch from G. Bradford (her partner, Susie Burnett, was busy in the wings) and Lee Majors provided the commentary for the showing. Special musical entertainment by Mari and Bob Messinger from Lubbock preceded the show.

Among those enjoying the event, which began with a social hour in the club's atrium, were Betty (Mrs. Clem) George, Barbara (Mrs. Frank) Essex, Shirley (Mrs. Wilbur) Rocchio, Renie (Mrs. Robert) Zonne, Lilie B. (Mrs. Holt) Jowell, Laulie (Mrs. W.W.) LaForce, Beverly (Mrs. B.J.) Pevehouse and Martha Elder.

The previous day, the Midland Country Club Ladies Association held its April luncheon meeting.

Robbie Casey's entertained the women with a show featuring the works of various designers, including Christian Dior, Valentino, Nancy Heller and Joan Vass.

The menu featured Chicken Cordon Bleu with Supreme Sauce and a fresh fruit salad with poppy seed dressing. The floral centerpieces were awarded to those whose birthdays fell closest to Income Tax Day. Hostesses were Mable (Mrs. Dave) Henderson, Gertrude (Mrs. Edwin) Alstrin and Marge (Mrs. John) Wood.

The attendees included Karen (Mrs. Gary) Lang, Melinda (Mrs. Dan) Moody, Ricki (Mrs. Charles) Perry, Betty Jane (Mrs. Alan) Norwood, Freda (Mrs. Bill) Harris, Sue (Mrs. Bill) Marshall, Jeanne (Mrs. William) Beach, and Susan (Mrs. Jack) Jowell.

TO CELEBRATE the marriage of their son, Duncan Kennedy, and Cathy Woodard, Mary and Bill Kennedy entertained the evening of April 23 with a Hawaiian luau at their home.

The couple were married April 1 on the island of Maui. They will be moving soon to Oklahoma City, where Duncan will be associated with Chambers Exploration.

A profusion of tropical flowers decorated the party area, and orchid leis were presented to each of the ladies present.

Several of Duncan's high school and college friends came in from out-of-town for the party. Special guests were Cathy's parents, Lou and E.D. Woodard of Wichita Falls.

AS THE EIGHT women in robes and house shoes traipsed into the Warfield Truck Stop recently the truckers and others having their early morning coffee must have wondered if they were seeing the tail end of a slumber party. Instead, it was "Birthday Girl" Debbie (Mrs. Sam) Bakke and friends celebrating her Big Four-Oh.

Nancy (Mrs. Skeet) Doss and Jane (Mrs. Dennis) Rambo masterminded the event, and they not only surprised the honoree but the other guests by "kidnapping" them for breakfast at 5:30 a.m. in Jane's Suburban.

In addition to Debbie, the reluctant risers were Linda (Mrs. Brad) Bennett, Connie (Mrs. Chris) Scharbauer, Janet Kay (Mrs. Kelly) Baxter, Linda (Mrs. Bill) Gilmore and Susan Askins.

Miss Manners would have approved. The organizers called the truck shop for the "dress code" and were assured they would be welcome. They were escorted to a private dining room for the festivities, and the restaurant crowd joined in singing "Happy Birthday" to Debbie.

MIDLAND HIGH SENIOR Macey Bray has been honored at a series of pre-graduation parties. The latest was an Italian dinner Wednesday evening at Luigi's Restaurant. The host couples were Jean and Wes Pittman, Sue and Dan Secker and Bonnie and Orman Hubbard. Some 30 of her classmates attended.

The festivities began for Macey in March with a skating party at KC's Nutty Roller, where she was honored along with 25 other Midland and Lee High School seniors.

Macey also was feted with a luncheon at the home of Sandra (Mrs. George) Staley. After lunching on pizza, the 20 guests enjoyed making their own sundaes.

Co-hostesses were Karen (Mrs. Tim) Thompson, Ann (Mrs. Richard) Dunbar, Victoria (Mrs. Ernie) Gilkerson and Bennie (Mrs. Robert) Bledsoe.

The daughter of Marcie and Mike Bray, Macey plans to attend Colorado State University at Fort Collins and study pre-vet.

LAST SUNDAY'S STRONG winds did not daunt the spirit of the participants in a West Texas Geological Society field trip to the South Pacific earlier this year. They gathered, anyway, on the patio at the home of Jan and Bob Fitting for a cocktail buffet and picture sharing session.

Not all made it to Sunday night's reunion, but the tour group included Marie Bellomy, executive secretary of the WTGS, Dorothy and Hugh Frenzel, Jane Armstrong, Olivia and Duane Norman, Diane and Richard Mendenhall, Joan and Bill Henry, Edna and Mack Hibbitts, Eloise and Russell Stipp, Barbara and Nancy Creager, Doris Bruce.

Also, Evelyn Portele, Irene Perryman, Dorothy and Dave Buthman, Kim and Don Perryman, Dolores and John Davis, Nancy and Charlie Tierce, Pat and George Zimmerman, Marjorie and Dan Kozak, Vic Brockman, Peg Johnson of Bryan and former Midlanders Sue and Everett Sharp of Houston.

MIDLAND PI BETA PHI alumnae celebrated Founders' Day recently at La Bodega Restaurant. They enjoyed the Mexican luncheon at tables decorated in the sorority's colors of wine and silver blue.

Not only did they pay tribute to the 12 young women who founded the sorority 121 years ago, but took the opportunity to reminisce about their own college years and the lifelong friendships that have resulted from being a member of one of the oldest fraternities for women.

Ruth (Mrs. Edwin) Aldridge was given special recognition as a new Golden Arrow Pi Phi, signifying 50 years of membership. She shared highlights from her chapter days at Southern Methodist University. Others taking part on the memory-sharing program were Gertrude (Mrs. Edwin) Alstrin, Marge (Mrs. George) Tope, Carol (Mrs. Pete) Crain, Ann (Mrs. Bobby) Page, Suzanne Voltz and Pam (Mrs. Len) Musgrove.

Marg. (Mrs. Jack) Samples read an inspirational message from the Grand Vice President of Alumnae, in which she implored alumnae to dare to dream about the sorority and its future, stating "for it there are not dreams, there cannot be 'dreams come true.'"

Fast-track jobs for women in 1990s listed by career specialist

Copley News Service

Where are the fast-track jobs for women going to be in the 1990s?

Career specialist Anita Gates tries to answer that question.

She says certain careers have their season in the sun. The trick, of course, is to get in on the ground floor when things begin to heat up.

So here are her picks for the hottest careers of the '90s:

■ SYSTEMS ANALYST: a quarter of a million new jobs will open by 2000.

■ ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE SPECIALIST: high paying and very cutting edge.

■ PUBLIC RELATIONS: should expand by 30 percent between now and 1995.

■ PRIVATE EYE: the so-called "Cybill Shepherd effect" is getting more and more women into detective work.

■ VETERINARIAN: the dog and cat population continues to rise.

Gates says the worst career prospects include being a nuclear engineer, a college professor, an insurance saleswoman, a librarian, a pharmacist, an air traffic controller, an urban planner and a high school principal.

JEANS

If your problem is a little more toward the rear, jeans with no back pockets and legs that fall straight from the derriere are best, according to the hotline. Other flattering styles include the U-shaped seam up the back and the Capri-cut styles.

Those with extra baggage in the caboose should stay away from very fitted jeans that cling to the rear and dropped-yoke styles with stitching that usually is situated cn the widest point of the problem area.

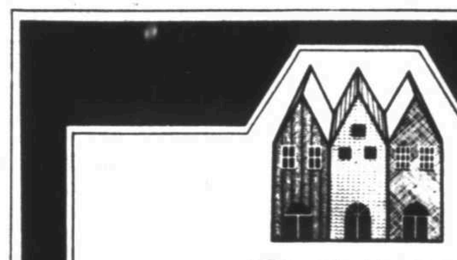

Front-seamed jeans that taper at the ankle are best left to those with the "perfect" figure or "toothpick" figure. This style creates a balloon effect.

Others styles best left to those with a likeness to the body of a New York model are those that follow the natural curve of the body, according to Ms. Gonzales. These styles are usually made from stretchy fabrics or are cut on a curve.

Mottle acid washed jeans and light colored jeans also exaggerate the body's contour.

In addition to choosing the right jean cut, LHJ suggests sticking with a uniform color — it can be as slimming as a diet.

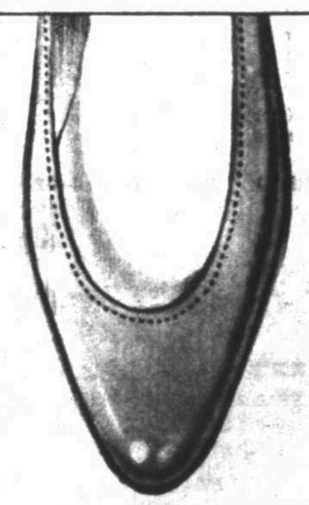

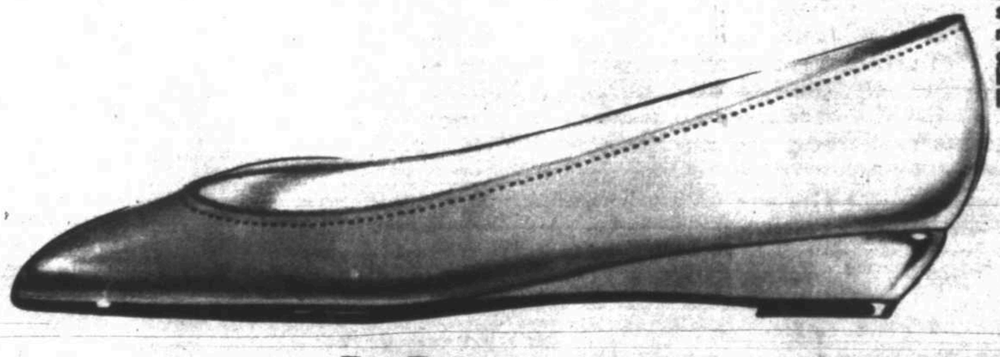

So even though most women do not have the perfect figure, selecting the right cut can camouflage almost any problem you may encounter. Just stay away from the poolside in your swimsuit, or all of you secrets will come out of hiding.

Designers reveal secrets of hiding figure flaws

Associated Press

Nobody is perfect, but they should know how to hide their flaws and flaunt their best features.

The secret of dressing to erase problem spots, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, lies in mastering the art of distraction.

"People would say to me, 'Oh, you're so lucky to be dressing all those perfect bodies,' " said Bob Mackie of his years as a Hollywood costume designer. "And I would say, 'I'm glad you thought so.' Let me tell you, they may have been talented but their physical shapes were not ideal."

The secret, Mackie said, is to keep the problem area simple and capitalize on their best features.

After you have played up your best points, here are some ideas for down-playing your worst.

■ Heavy hips and legs. Calvin Klein has two words when buying hosiery — matte and black. White makes the leg look heavier, as do flat shoes. If you are exercising the pants option, pick a non-clinging fabric that is loose in the thigh and cut straight or slightly tapered.

Full skirts don't hide wide hips, said Patricia Pastor, a designer at Perry Ellis. Instead, she advised, wear a dark, slim skirt and long loose top. And stay away from pants.

■ Shoulders. "Broad shoulders are never a problem," said Adrienne Vittadini. "All fashion looks stem from the shoulder and if you have a good, broad shoulderline, it helps lift your clothes. It gives them architecture."

To widen shoulders in the daytime, wear shoulder pads. At night, in this spring's off-the-shoulder evening look, wear dresses with ruffles around the shoulders. To narrow shoulders, wear your hair long, Vittadini said.

■ Arms, too thin, too heavy. Heavy arms are best covered up with loose-fitting sleeves. "The look you want," said Carolyne Roehm, "is one with puffy sleeves and a low-cut neckline. Most women are pretty in the bosom area and they should focus on that part by wearing bare necklines, as long as their bust isn't huge." Skinny arms should be covered in the same way because tightness accentuates both thin and heavy.

■ Stomach. "Bulging tummies are usually a major problem for women in their late 30s or 40s," said designer Cathy Hardwick, who recommends camouflaging the area with a slim skirt and long, loose blouse.

■ Neck. Mary Ann Restivo said open necklines, such as a V or scoop style, will elongate the line from face to chest.

Booklet teaches about playing

Copley News Service

Play is child's way of living and learning. As a parent, you fill a key role in this process. Throw a ball to your child and watch what happens. A baby, not knowing how to catch, will just let the ball go by or perhaps retrieve it and try to eat it. A preschooler may catch it but not be able to toss it back. An elementary school child may catch it and suggest forming a team. An older child may throw it back too fast for you to catch.

According to The Importance Of Play, a 16-page booklet from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' "Caring About Kids" series, each child's response is a measure of his ability to respond to play. This

Read about how play helps a child develop: toys and sex stereotyping; how play changes as a child grows older; fantasy and imagination.

Coming clean may spread some dirt

Copley News Service

If you have had an affair don't tell your mate.

If you come clean, your spouse may never recover — and neither may you, says Australian psychologist and author Peter Van Sommers.

In his book, "Jealous — What It Is and Who Feels It," Van Sommers outlines some ways spurned lovers get even.

For example, an American who was forced to turn over half his worldly goods to his wayward wife stamped all her designer clothes with the legend, "Buzz bought this for Jane while she was sleeping around."

An Australian buildozed the family home rather than share it with his cheating wife.

And a wife covered the town she lived in with nude posters of her rival, proclaiming her adultery.

Diamond industry wholesale prices tumble

Copley News Service

The diamond industry's benchmark stone, the colorless, flawless 1-carat gem, recently sold in the wholesale range of $14,000 to $17,000; in 1980 it had hit $64,000, when investors turned to diamonds as a hedge against inflation.

Emotional ties with parents important

Copley News Service

It's almost inevitable that at some time in your life your Mom or Dad may have to move in with you.

That's why building healthy emotional ties with your folks is important, says psychiatry professor Dr. Gary Small.

In his book, "Parentcare: A Commonsense Guide for Adult Children," Small gives a list of do's that can make the transition of having your parents live with you a lot easier.

Do call them, even if they have not called you.

Do respect their privacy.

Do remember that the quality of time spent with your folks is at least as important as quantity.

Do tell your parents about your own needs for privacy, so they don't feel neglected when they move in.

West was won in blue jeans

Denim is no stranger to fashion world

By LINDA GILLAN GRIFFIN
Hearst News Service

There is no doubt how the West was won. It was won in blue jeans.

In 1853, Levi Strauss, upon landing in California amid the height of the Gold Rush, discovered that mine workers were shredding their trousers right and left. Strauss whipped up some sturdy britches from the heavy tent cloth he had toted with him to the West Coast. Those 501 jeans we see today are virtually unchanged from the original button-fly "Levi's" that were given the lot number 501.

But little did Strauss, the father of blue jeans, dream that his pants would one day be honored with a Coty fashion award and displayed at the Smithsonian Institution. Levis have been sold on the black market in Moscow and put on exhibit in the Louvre museum in Paris. The French connection came from the town of Nimes from which denim, or serge de Nimes, took its name.

Unfortunately for Strauss, jeans quickly passed into the public domain. It was about 1911 when Henry David Lee, a former kerosene oil distributor and wholesale grocer, came up with the Lee Union-All, a denim garment that would cover and protect a complete suit of clothing. But the thing for which Lee is most revered is his switch from a buttoned to a zipper fly.

DENIM IS, of course, no stranger. We crawled out of our playpens into pairs of jeans, strapped on toy six-shooters and for the next 10 years played at games like "Cowboys and Indians."

As teen-agers in the '50s, we shucked our pink-shirt-and-black-poplin craze for the rebellious jeans-and-T-shirt uniform of James Dean and Marlon Brando. When we graduated from beatnik black, it was to hippie jeans, with flowers and flags sewn on our rumps.

Designers, those Seventh Avenue arbiters of style, unable to stand the idea of the masses creating their own signature jeans, began sewing on their names – and swans and horsies and triangles and question marks. Voila! Designer jeans. Overnight they became status symbols.

To suck in anyone who dared resist the craze, they turned to sex in their advertising to sell their wares.

"Nothing comes between me and my Calvins," cooed Brooke Shields.

Not content with just designer jeans, they began exploring other uses for denim. Skirts and jackets were naturals. Jump suits and vests, purses and hats, shoes and boots, earrings and bracelets, glasses frames, diaper pants and romper suits — probably no item of clothing has gone undenimed.

But for designers, plain old denim wasn't enough. They began to order it in different weights — not just 14.75 ounce for jeans, but 4.5 ounce for evening wear and 17 ounce for luggage. Then they began to torment the fabric. Fading, frosting, bleaching, tie-dying, distressing, prewashing, preshrinking and stone washing. If you wanted your stone washing carefully done, you could buy a prepackaged pumice stone and instructions and stone wash your own jeans.

FOR THE last few seasons, acid washed has been the denim to die for, released to the custody of retail outlets only after it was tortured by volcanic rocks pickled in hydrochloric acid. Denim treated in this latter process, which bleaches the surface fibers white, takes about 25 percent to 50 percent less wear but costs a lot more than its pristine sister denims.

Among all these Iron Maiden goings-on, designers got the notion that what Americans needed was preworn jeans and denims, so they began tearing them to shreds. And Americans bought it, acknowledging that they indeed did have too little time to wear holes in their own jeans.

Then the dyeing began. Traditionally, the cotton yarn for denim was dyed blue with natural indigo dyes, but over time, synthetic dyes wre developed. Now that dynamic duo — designers and denim — are in the throes of color. Not just shades of blue or black or gray or even brown. No, now we have peach, aqua, banana, melon and lilac. Get ready for emerald, ruby and sapphire. Not one to be outdone, Calvin Klein's spring blue jeans are white.

And do you think for a moment designers would let the old sleeping blue denim lie? Taking a cue from the excesses of French designer Christian Lacroix, designers such as Georges Marciano are embellishing denim with tiers of taffeta Spanish dancer ruffles and black Chantilly lace, so that your Guess jeans are looking a lot like Guess evening gowns. Bob Mackie is imitating denim with all-over deep blue beading and orange bead "seaming." Other designers piled on the rhinestones and the studs and the safety pins.

Then there are the appliques: denim jackets and miniskirts that look like band uniforms. Dianne Ditromile's denim jackets covered in lace, ribbons, antique buttons and other castoffs; and denim flight jackets dotted with Air Force patches.

THERE ARE the wearable-art denims — jackets splashed with enough paint and glitter to give Jackson Pollack nightmares, and the new Miss Selfridge jeans, with cartoons sewn on their rear pockets.

According to Jean Driscoll of Jeanswear Communications trade association, 430 million pairs of jeans were sold in the United States in 1986; the total for '87, she said, will probably come out to more than 450 million. She estimates there are as many as 200 jeans labels in the U.S. alone.

"Now, in the '80s, denim is perceived as being a fiber of what America is all about," said Driscoll. "It is what built America. It's very patriotic, and there's a great deal of emotion involved in denim and jeans. Most of the time people will say, 'It's my favorite pair of jeans.' "

What's next? Driscoll say we'll see a return to the basics. At The Gap, traditional Levis are going for $25 a pair.

So get ready for the dark blue denims of our youths, those all-American, traditional, rough-and-ready jeans, the ones that turned all our underwear and white shirts pastel blue. It would be unpatriotic to complain.

Mail delivered

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Pony Express riders once carried mail the 1,996 miles from here to Sacramento, Calif., in as little as eight days.

Some 400 relay stations, where riders changed ponies, stood 10 to 15 miles apart along the route. The riders covered about 75 miles a day, at speeds up to 25 mph. They were paid $100-$150 a month, high wages in the 1860s.

Pony Express riders regularly beat their competitors, the Overland Mail stagecoaches, to California by 12 or 14 days. But after less than 18 months of operation, totaling 650,000 miles ridden, Pony Express service ended Oct. 24, 1861, when the coast-to-coast telegraph made it obsolete.

New drug may help future mothers with delivery of baby

Copley News Service

Future moms will be delivered from much of the agony of giving birth: Labors that now take 30 hours might take only three. A pregnancy that today would end in a Caesarean section might instead conclude naturally. All this thanks to a drug with a comfy name: relaxin.

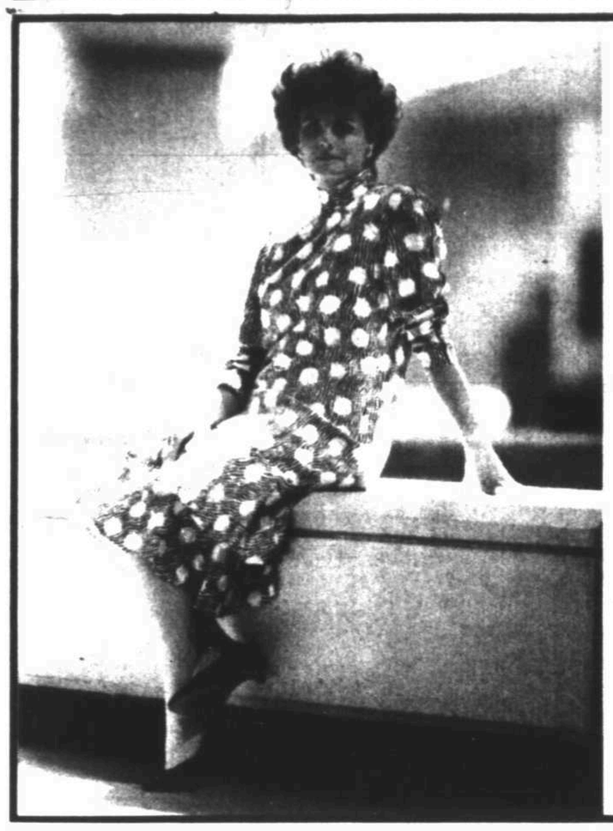

Women's bodies already make relaxin, a hormone, in their ovaries. The compound "ripens" the cervix, softening and dilating it so that the baby can pass through. But apparently relaxin isn't always produced in sufficient quantities at the right time. The result: prolonged, painful labor and sometimes delivery by Caesarean section.

Genentech in South San Francisco, Calif., has developed a way of making large quantities of relaxin and, soon, perhaps this year, it will begin testing it in pregnant women. In tests so far, pig relaxin shortened labor in humans, and human relaxin softened and dilated the cervixes of monkeys.

Hugh Niall, a Genentech researcher who is helping to develop relaxin, believes that with extra doses injected at the right time, "it's quite possible a few good contractions could deliver the baby with a safe outcome, minimal stress and short labor."

At present, the most obvious uses for relaxin are in births that must be induced because the mother has diabetes, the baby is overdue, or the baby is endangered for other reasons. These are circumstances that often result in Caesarean deliveries.

Genentech won't say whether relaxin would be used to abbreviate the agony of otherwise normal deliveries. But Niall expects that patients and doctors will want to use it. A safely shortened labor, he notes, means the baby isn't being pounded against the pelvis by contractions. "It could mean a baby that gets out nice and pink vs. one that gets out looking battered and blue." Or as Mary Martin, a UC-San Francisco gynecologist who works with Genentech, says, "You're talking about a smoother process for everybody."

GALVESTON

Texas is a state of contrasts. Within its borders stretch thousands of square miles of nearly every type of terrain imaginable. And within our state of contrasting landscape, if there is a city that is opposite to Midland, it has to be Galveston.

Where Midland grew out of the desert, Galveston emerged as an island in the Gulf of Mexico. And where Midland may have the sand for a beach, Galveston has the Gulf waters creating miles and miles of ocean-front beaches. And the view in Midland is typically West Texas, famous for its flat vistas. Galveston provides a view of rolling hills and ocean waves.

Another contrast is time. Midland was established around 1885, but settlements on Galveston date back about 70 years earlier than that. This gulf coast city is rich in history, and citizens of Galveston work to preserve and restore their city's past.

SOME OF its earliest settlements were, in fact, pirates' headquarters. According to Texas History Movies, Luis Aury "established himself at Galveston Island in 1816, claiming to be a commodore in the service of the group in Mexico which was fighting to overthrow Spanish power. His vessels patrolled the Gulf of Mexico, plundering not only Spanish vessels but any others they could find."

Aury eventually left Galveston and sailed off to fight in Mexico. "The expedition failed, and when Aury's ship came again to Galveston, it was found that another, and greater, pirate had taken possession." This man was Jean Lafitte, who was considered "the most successful pirate along the American coast." Lafitte had volunteered his services to General Andrews Jackson, and had actually fought with the United States in the War of 1812.

By 1817 he established his headquarters on Galveston Island, and resumed his pirating career. Texas History Movies continued: "In 1821 a vessel of the United States Navy called at Galveston Island. Lafitte and his followers loaded their plunder and sailed away."

Galveston's swash-buckling past has led to various legends about lost treasure, but, according to author David G. McComb in his book, "Galveston: A History," "Lafitte's treasure, if such exists, and that of others have not been found."

What does exist, however, are many buildings that date back to the founding of the city of Galveston. McComb credits Michel B. Menard, a native of Canada, as being the city's founder. The first lots were for sale April 20, 1838. "Thus, the city was born," he wrote. Although not the riches of a pirate's gold, these structures can be considered the treasure of Galveston.

IN FACT, there are so many historic homes and businesses on Galveston Island that the Galveston Historical Foundation has printed a list of historic properties that are available for sale, including the Greek Revival "Menard House" which is a National Register Property and dates from the 1830s.

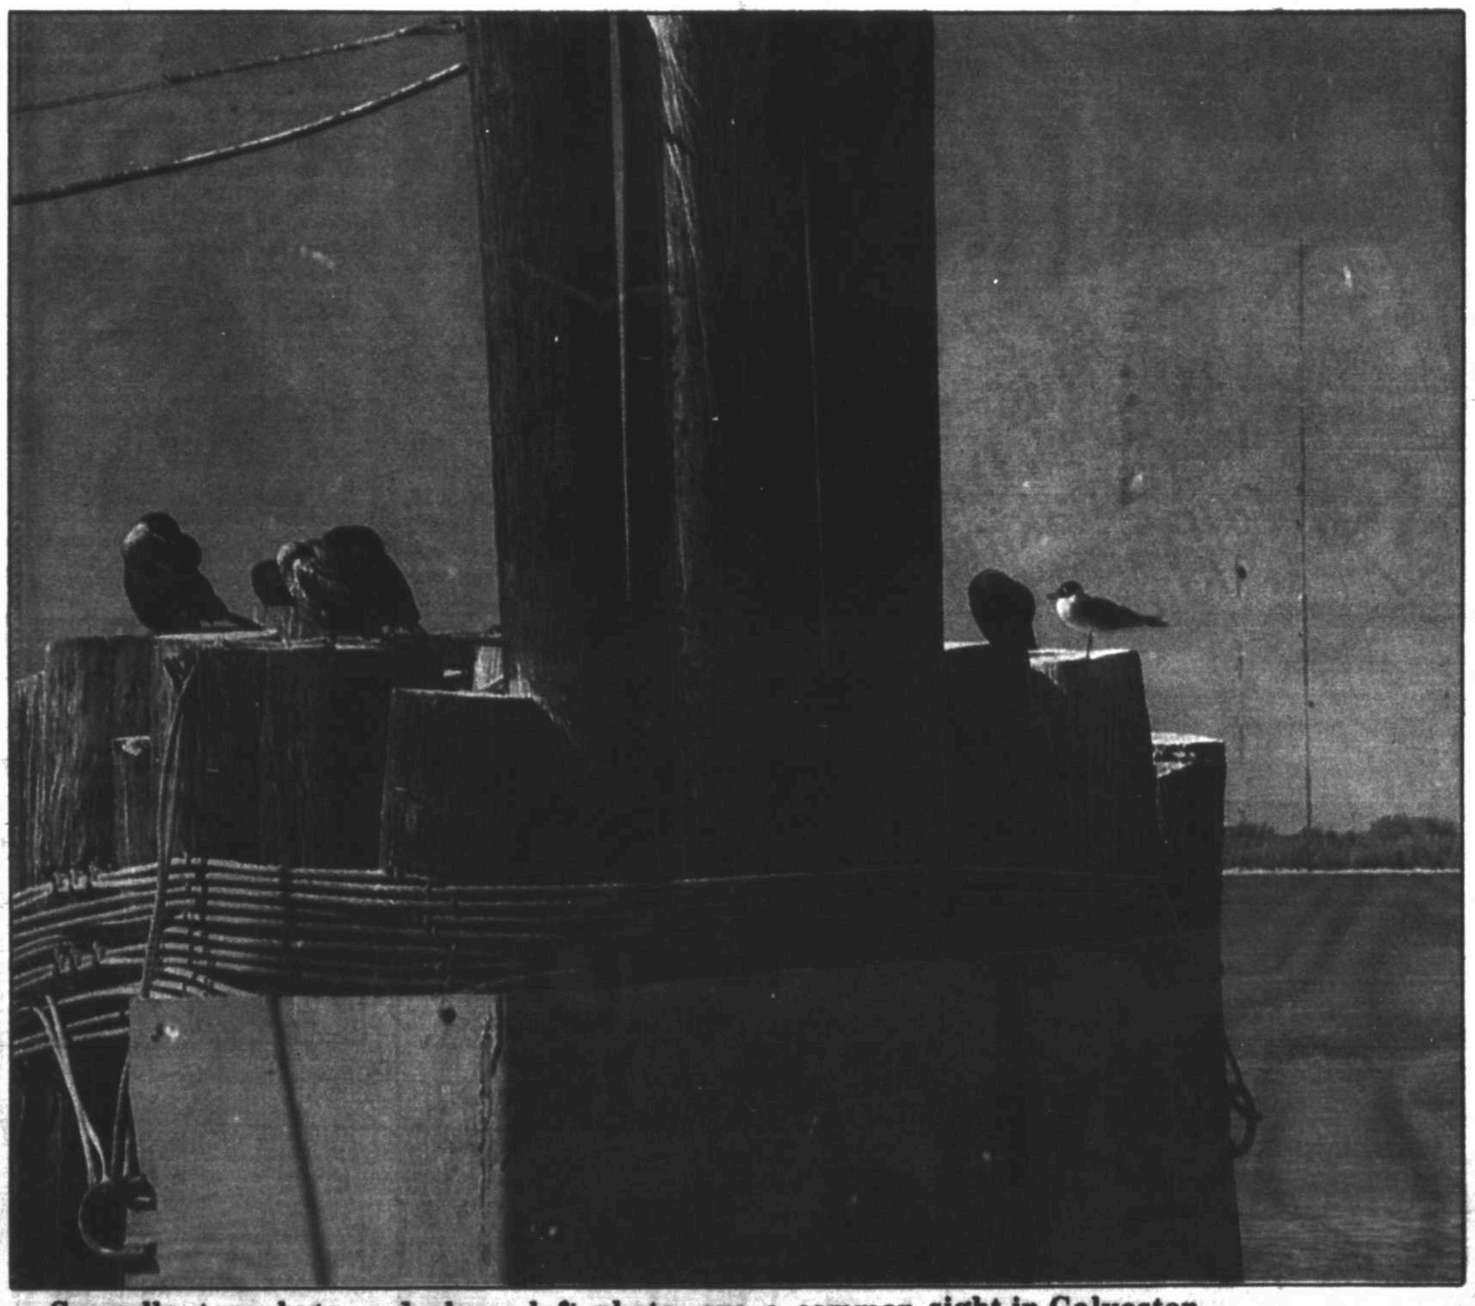

Other historic buildings are open for visitors' tours. One of the most popular is the Bishop's Palace, which was designated a "Point of Historic Significance" by the Texas Historical Commission.

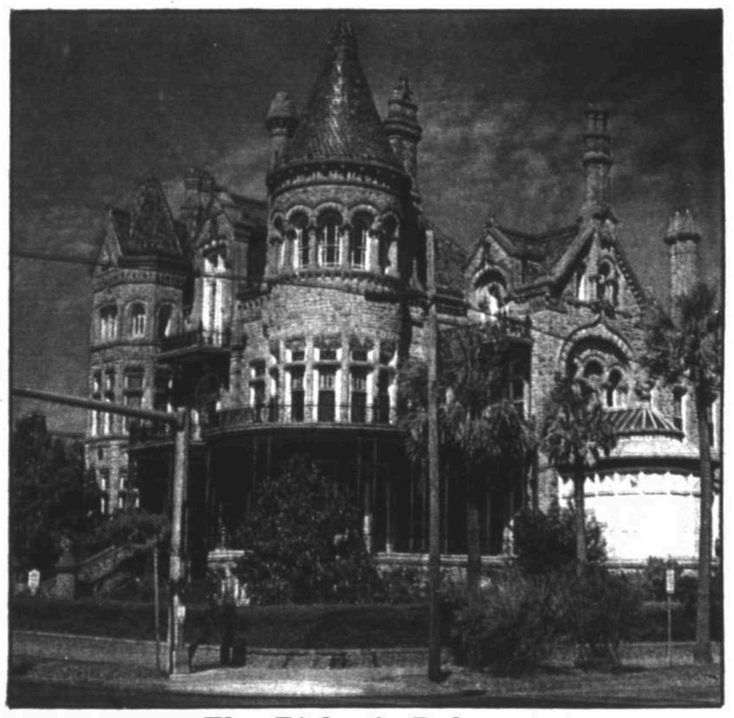

The Bishop's Palace was actually constructed in 1886 as the residence of Col. Walter Gresham, a Galveston attorney, and his family. It was designed by architect Nicholas Clayton, and was constructed with Texas granite, white limestone and red limestone. The interior woodwork was done with rosewood, satinwood, American oak and maple, and white mahogany.

According to tour guides, the home has walls 23 inches thick, which enabled it to withstand the hurricane of 1900 that killed thousands of people and completely destroyed many of the buildings on the island, including the church across the street. According to a brochure about the structure, "In 1956, the American Institute of Architecture gave recognition to the Palace by designating it as one of the one-hundred outstanding buildings in the United States. The residence is the only building in Texas included on this elite list of architectural masterpieces. It is also among fourteen other residences and civic structures which are included in the Archives of the Library of Congress as being representative of Early American architecture."

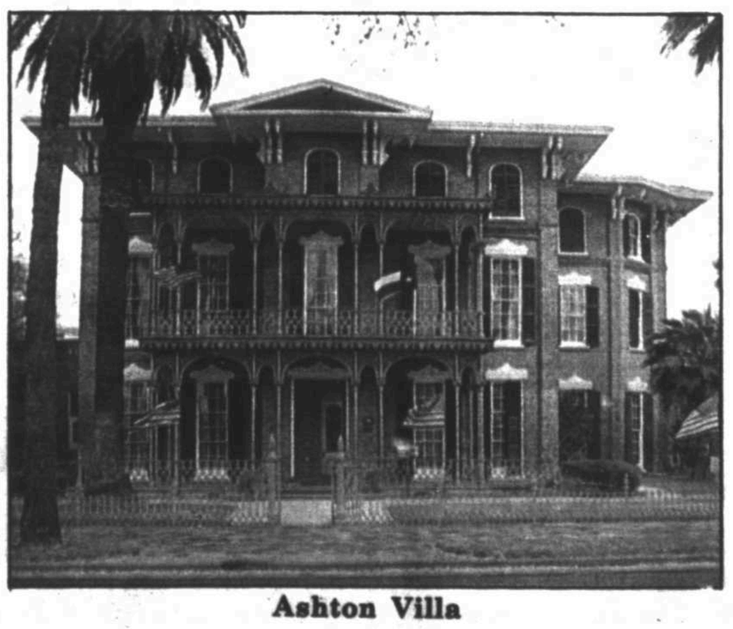

In 1923 the home was purchased by the Galveston-Houston Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, to be the home of the late Bishop Christopher Byrne.

Today, the first and second floors are open for tours, while the third floor serves as a home to medical students from the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, and the basement houses the Newman Club of UTMB.

Another of Galveston's historic homes is Ashton Villa, the James M. Brown house, built in 1858-59, which, McComb wrote, "was one of the first brick mansions in Texas."

The house, which "retained through time its plaster work, frescoes, French panel mirrors, and cast-iron grillwork," McComb wrote, also is reported to have a feature most Texas homes do not — a resident ghost. The ghost is "Miss Rebecca Brown, the daughter of the builder, who long after death still played the piano in the gold room," McComb went on. "She was known to have had a chronic bronchial cough loud enough to startle the streetcar mules on the street."

The mansion was scheduled for demolition until the city purchased it in 1971, and the Galveston Historical Foundation assumed its management. The home now is open for tours.

Much of Galveston's early business district — the Strand, which in its heyday was referred to as "the Wall Street of the South" — has also been preserved, restored and re-opened as boutiques and other shops. Strand Visitors Center even boasts a cautionary sign advising visitors to watch their steps: "Historic floor uneven."

Visitors can take a riding or walking tour of Galveston's East End Historical District. Included on this tour are 100 homes in "a residential community listed in the National Register of Historic Places," according to a pamphlet published by the East End Historical District Association.

Galveston Historical Foundation presents an annual Historic Homes Tour. This year's tour features eight homes and other structures, dating from 1853 to 1913. Tour dates are May 7-8 and 14-15. For more information write Galveston Historical Foundation, 2016 Strand, Galveston 77550, or call (409) 762-TOUR.

OF COURSE, Galveston is not all historic buildings. During the public school and college Spring Break season, the city's beaches overflow with students celebrating the end of the long winter. Unfortunately, spring weather can be unpredictable, even in Galveston, and sometimes these party animals find themselves tastefully attired in shorts, tank tops and chill bumps.

But the spring chills give way to the summer heat, leaving Galveston's beaches open to visitors seeking sun and surf. There are numerous activities available, both in and on the water. Vacationers can go deep-sea fishing or shoreline fishing, take a tour of the harbor, visit Sea-Arama Marineworld or just walk along the beach.

For those who are fascinated by sea-going vessels, Galveston offers the Colonel, a Victorian-type paddle wheel boat that is a period museum full of historical displays. Daily cruises, and dinner and moonlight trips also are available. For more information call (409) 763-4666.

The Colonel is located at Pier 22, next to Galveston's pride, the Elissa. This Tall Ship, a square-rigged merchant sailing ship built in 1877, was restored through the efforts of Galveston Historical Foundation. Tours are offered 10 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m.-8 p.m. weekends. More information is available at the Strand Visitors Center.

Seawolf Park, on Pelican Island at the entrance to Galveston Harbor, features displays of World War II ships, including the submarine Cavalla and the destroyer escort U.S.S. Stewart. Other attractions of the park are a three-level pavilion, playgrounds, concession area and fishing pier. For more information call (409) 744-5738.

TRAINS ALSO are popular in Galveston. The Railroad Museum at 25th and Strand Street displays "the largest collection of restored rail cars and locomotives in the Southwest," its brochure says. Pullman sleeper cars from the '20s, a live steam locomotive, a private luxury rail car, sound and light show memorabilia and electronic displays, and 30 sculptures of passengers waiting in the old Santa Fe Station waiting room are included in the exhibits. Visitors can even have dinner "in the diner," ordering from a menu similar to those from the '40s.

Galveston Sightseeing Train offers commentated tours, each about 1½ hours long, traveling about 17 miles around the city. Included are the sights of Seawall Boulevard, Fort Crockett remains, historic homes, Rosenberg Library, the shrimp fleet, Yacht Basin and UTMB.

Other activities available in Galveston include go cart riding, horseback riding, mini-speedboat racing, roller skating, sailing, scuba diving, skate boarding, surfing, water skiing, water sliding, the "wet indy" and playing golf, miniature golf and tennis.

Galveston's annual events include Dicken's Weekend on the Strand, a re-creation of a Victorian Christmas, presented the first weekend in December; Glow of Christmas, a candlelight tour of Ashton Villa, one of Galveston's historical homes, presented the second Sunday through Tuesday in December; Mardi Gras during February; Easter Egg Hunt on Easter Sunday; the Blessing of the Shrimp Fleet on the first and second Sundays after Easter; the Historic Homes Tours during May; and the Fourth of July Family Picnic and Ice-Cream Crank-Off on the grounds of Ashton Villa.

Guide: All you ever wanted to know about cheese

By MICHAEL COLIN
Copley News Service

For those readers who have always wondered about the word "cheese," we offer the following definition from The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language: cheese (chez) n. 1.a. A solid food prepared from the pressed curd of milk. b. A molded mass of this substance. 2. Something like cheese in shape or consistency (Middle English chese, Old English cese from German kasjus.)

For those readers who couldn't care less about the word and just want to know more about the curd, we offer a slide guide that presents in detail the Nutritional Value of Cheeses.

Produced by the American Institute for Cancer Research, this informative freebie provides you with information about the calorie, protein, fat, sodium and calcium content of popular cheeses.

Whether you favor feta, prefer Parmesan or savor Swiss, after a brief session with this guide you will know exactly what is going into your body when you eat cheese.

Send a long self-addressed stamped envelop to American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. CFB, Washington, D.C. 20069. Ask for Nutritional Value of Cheeses. Limit one per request.

Contractors to be chosen for new NASA project

Copley News Service

Just three months to go until the National Aeronautics and Space Administration selects a prime contractor to build the U.S. space program's new Advanced Launch System.

Advanced Launch System refers to a new generation of expendable rockets needed in the mid-1990s that will be more powerful than the shuttle or even the Saturn 5 moon rockets. Expected payloads include building materials for both the U.S. space station and President Reagan's strategic defense.

At least five private contractors currently are bidding to build the Advanced Launch System — Boeing, Rockwell, McDonnell Douglas, Martin-Marietta and General Dynamics. Only two eventually will be chosen.

Texas resort area booming

Hearst News Service

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND — You know you're close to this coastal resort when you first spot a sea gull perched atop a telephone pole that's surrounded by white sand. State Highway 100 ends about 200 yards from the beach.

From this vantage point, one might mistake South Padre Island for the Strip in Las Vegas. High-rise condominiums and hotels stretch as far as the eye can see. Their shapes are as varied and impressive as the many ships sailing the area waterways and docked in surrounding marinas. The Texas coastline sits at the back door of these modern skyscrapers.

South Padre Island is a young city. Less than 15 years ago, there were no condos, no hotels, no full-time residents. The island merely served this coastal area as a barrier against the ocean's fury.

Today, it is one of Texas' most beautiful vacation resorts. Miles of white-sand beaches welcome more than 2 million visitors each year. Its daily-swept beaches remain clean, as automobile traffic is prohibited. Instead, elaborate sandcastles and colorful umbrellas dot the sand as ocean lovers swim, sun and stroll along the beach. Families are in abundance.

Seafood as fresh as the morning catch is bountiful at nearly every hotel and restaurant. You can sample the gulf's menu while counting shrimp boats from the oceanfront formal dining room of the Sheraton Hotel, while watching the sunset melt into the bay at Louie's Backyard, or while checking to see what's been washed up on the beach near Blackbeard's Restaurant.

Visitors enjoy a semitropical climate cooled by gulf breezes. The average annual temperature is 74 degrees; during the summer months, temperatures rarely rise above 90. But don't miss the equally delightful off-season. Lodging rates are close to half of what they are in summer.

The beach is only a shot distance in any direction within the city limits of South Padre Island. Condos hug the beach along the Gulf of Mexico to the east, while restaurants, marinas, channels and more condos line Laguna Madre Bay to the west. Andy Bowie Park marks the city's northern border, and the city limits stop just short of the 34-mile long barrier island at Isla Blanca Park to the south. Isla Blanca is open year-round and offers full RV facilities for campers.

The island also has a Coast Guard station, a marine biology lab, a civic center and the Chapel by the Sea. An oceanfront pavilion provides showers, gift and rental shops and a benched area to escape from the sun.

Shrimp boats returning home can best be viewed out on the jetties. Hundreds of sea gulls trail the boats as the crews clean their catches before entering the Intracoastal Waterway.

Port Isabel, with its landmark lighthouse and an excellent fishing reputation, serves as a stepping stone to the island. The Queen Isabella Causeway, the longest bridge in Texas, spans Laguna Madre Bay and serves as the island's only link to the mainland. The paddlewheeler Isabella Queen can often be seen in the bay. It seems there's always a fiesta on board as it offers sightseeing, dinner cruises and Sunday brunches.

The island is also the home of Ida Loetscher, affectionately known as the "Turtle Lady." An octogenarian, she founded Sea Turtle Inc., a group whose goal is to save the Ridley sea turtles from extinction. She holds weekly "Meet the Turtle" programs about the Ridleys in her backyard.

For information on South Padre Island, call the Visitor and Convention Bureau at 800 992-4753.

Water Water Everywhere... But Not A Clean Drop To Drink?

This age old phrase is not far from the truth these days. We can no longer assume that the water we drink is clean and pure. Studies have shown that one out of every four cities depends on drinking water which fails to meet government health and safety standards.*
Why take a chance?
With the HONEY SPRINGS DISTILLER, you can be assured of a constant supply of pure, clean water for just pennies a day. A 2-stage distillation process removes chemical contaminants, heavy metals and other dissolved solids from ordinary tap water, and the HONEY SPRINGS DISTILLER is easier to use than an ordinary coffee maker. Other features include:
- Constant supply of up to 12 gallons of pure water a day.
- Easy installation on kitchen counter, under sink or in washroom.
- Quality stainless steel construction that is durable and easy to clean.
- A money back satisfaction guarantee.

DEAR ABBY

Children aren't only victims in molestation cases

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This concerns "Haunted," the gentleman who was "groped" under the blanket on an overnight flight by a precocious 10-year-old girl. You told him he should have told one of the adult members of the girl's family traveling with her that the child had a problem and needed counseling.

Sure, the child had a problem and needed counseling, but where do you think she learned such behavior? Obviously someone close to her had sexually abused her. Such seductive behavior is common in incest victims.

Had that man followed your advice, the girl would have denied it, and accused the man of touching her. It would be her word against his — and children always win in such cases!

I would have advised the man to find another seat, say nothing to anybody, and let it go at that. I speak from experience, having served 18 months in prison for child molestation. An 8-year-old girl lied. Now I never allow children in my house unless another adult is present, and I never allow a child to get within touching distance. My name and address are for your eyes alone if you want to verify this. — VICTIM OF A LIE

DEAR VICTIM: Judging from my mail, you belong to a very large fraternity. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When I saw the letter from "Haunted," I had to write. As you can see by my address, I am in prison. I was sentenced to four years for child molestation — a crime I did not commit.

I am 66 years old and will be released next month, but I am a broken old man. My wife suffered a massive heart attack and died four months ago, and I was not even allowed to attend her funeral.

The irony of this whole nightmarish experience is that shortly before my wife died, two of the three girls who falsely accused me came to my wife with their mothers and tearfully confessed that they had made up the story that convicted me. They said they got the idea from a TV program, "When Touching Is a Crime."

Unfortunately, the third girl, now 15, whose testimony was the most damaging, could not be found, having run off with an older man.

It doesn't matter now. The damage is done, and I'll be going home to an empty house soon. — NO. 34661, LAS CRUCES, N.M.

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Haunted" touched a nerve. While well-intended, it would have landed him in jail immediately. Had I been the gentleman in question, I would have gone immediately to my private attorney, put the whole incident down in affidavit form, had my attorney file an anonymous "friend of the court" petition on that child's behalf, and let the local child abuse authorities investigate it — without revealing my name or involving me.

The number of falsely accused in this country today would astonish you! I know. Three years ago, out of jealousy and meanness, my ex-wife accused me — falsely — of molesting one of our daughters. We have spent $150,000 in attorney's fees in the interim. I see my daughters only twice a month, with a court monitor, and the daughter who was manipulated by her mother is a psychiatrist's nightmare. — VICTIMIZED AND INNOCENT IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: Our father is 90 years old and requires complete care in a nursing home, which costs about $30,000 a year. My sister says we should take Dad's money out of his name and put it all in our names, because we are told that in two years, the government will take over the cost of Dad's care and we can have what's left of his money.

My sister says this is legal, and our father planned to leave his money to us anyway.

It seems unfair to me to make our father penniless when he's worked hard all his life to have what he has. It's great that the government will take over when a person's money runs out, but I think this is taking advantage of a good thing.

What do you think? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Have you asked your father what he thinks? I cannot assume that because your father is 90, he is incompetent.

AT WIT'S END

No matter how you cut it, plastic is forever

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

The trouble with buying things on credit is that you never know if the merchandise is going to outlast the payments. We've been known to pay on a car that stopped running, a freezer that stopped freezing, and braces for a kid who stopped smiling the day the braces went on and hasn't smiled since.

Now it seems that you can walk into a plastic surgeon's office, charge a nose job, a fanny tuck, eye lift or implants on your credit card and "wear now and pay later."

This is real scary. Do I really want to pay 18 to 20 percent interest on a nose that may go out of style? Do I really want to finance liposuction on my thighs knowing that they may grow back before my check clears the bank?

No matter that this plan gives new meaning to better living through plastics, the point is I want guarantees. After reading about buying a new bod on the installment plan, I went to bed and had the ultimate nightmare.

It started when I looked into the mirror and was reminded, "I haven't made chicken soup in a while." You couldn't tell where my face left off and my neck began. I decided to buy a face-lift on time. It cost $4,000, and my monthly payments ran $92. What with the payments on the house, the car and the VCR, I spent a lot of time worrying about how to make ends meet, so my eyes deteriorated and hung in swags like a theater curtain.

They were ruining my "look," so I had my eyes lifted for $2,000. The monthly payment on that ran $74.

I was really hustling now to pay for my youth. I went to work early and stayed late hunched over my desk. Eventually, my chest began to sag and someone suggested implants. I couldn't stop now, so once more I traded plastic for plastic. My new chest cost $2,700 and my monthly payments ran $69.

I never left my desk. Days and nights ran together as I struggled to meet my financial obligations. Finally, someone noted that my fat pockets were on overload and if I couldn't exercise, I should at least have liposuction. Why not? It ran $3,000, and my monthly payment was $84.

I now had plastic surgery bills that totaled $11,700 and monthly payments that totaled $319. As I worried, the wrinkles returned. As I brooded, the body fell like a stone. When the creditors began giving me ultimatums, it was as if someone slammed the door on the souffle of my existence. And I had 43 more months to pay.

When I awoke, I grabbed a mirror. Lying there on my back with my face distributed over a king-size bed, I didn't look too bad. The solution was clear to me. I would have to figure out a way to go through life without standing up.

Remains of Texas Navy warship sought

Hearst News Service

GALVESTON — Beachgoers here may be surprised to find a crew crisscrossing the beach with a long, cord-tethered instrument, planting little yellow flags and digging holes in a seemingly haphazard pattern.

The crew, members of the National Underwater Marine Agency (NUMA), were looking for the remains of the Invincible, a Texas Navy warship that ran aground on a sandbar while fighting off two Mexican navy ships on Aug. 27, 1837.

NUMA, a private organization, is named after a fictitious federal agency described in books by best selling author Clive Cussler. Cussler, author of the book, Raise the Titanic, and the current best-seller, Treasure, was among the searchers, who have been combing Galveston's East Beach since March.

Since its incorporation in Texas in 1978, NUMA has used private donations to find more than 50 ships dating from the American Revolutionary War to World War I.

In November 1986, NUMA searchers discovered the remains of the Texas Navy battleship Zavala buried under the Galveston Ship Channel.

Cussler and crew are using a gradiometer, an instrument similar to a magnetometer, that can screen out small iron-containing objects at or near the beach surface and detect cannon or anchors buried deep.

A recent search centered on one of the busiest stretches of R.A. Appfel Park beach, an area that was underwater in 1837 and over which the very battle that led to the Invincible's demise may have been fought.

NUMA members Tony Bell of Austin and Texas history researcher Kay Hughes of Galveston have pored over maps and charts from the past 15 decades of Galveston Bay and environs to learn how the shoreline had changed, where the bay entrance that eluded Invincible likely was in 1837, and where the ship engaged its Mexican pursuers.

"It would be nice if the hull were pretty much intact, but we're not necessarily expecting that," Gronquist said. "There's a hard, clay deposit below this sand and if it got embedded in that and was well covered by sand for the last 150 years, it could be in good condition."

"We know the anchors were left and we hope the guns were left, too," said Cussler, who now lives near Golden, Colo. "If she's indeed here, and she was covered quickly, the pieces of her might be scattered all over but they might be pretty well preserved."

Searchers recorded a cluster of high readings on a small section of beach and uncovered a heavy chain hook a couple of feet below the surface.

Briggs and colleagues have a state permit to dig on the Galveston beach for the Invincible and $10,000 in donations to spend.

Meeting scheduled

Book Review Unit of Midland Woman's Club will meet for luncheon 11:30 a.m. Monday at the clubhouse in Hogan Park. Marilyn Bassinger will review "Sure Nuff, How Come," by Freida Van Emden.

Ms. Bassinger, education director for Museum of the Southwest, received a bachelor of arts degree in English from Trinity University, taught English and history in secondary schools and appeared in Midland Community Theatre productions.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Family support needed for chronically ill

By STEVE EDWARDS

Edwards

The question of who takes primary responsibility for a parent who is chronically ill is an extremely difficult one for most families, especially if the parent is widowed or has a spouse who is physically or mentally incapable of the task. Obviously the burden is easier if all family members live in the same geographical area and share the responsibility, but such is not usually the case.

However, family members who live far apart can still build a support system, with each family member helping in his own way.

The basic problem most families face is differences of opinion. Each individual has his own ideas about the best way to care for thier parents. Tension and stress are common among family members suddenly forced to cope with new situations.

Most families believe (and past society traditions show) the daughter or daughters should assume physical care of a parent, with the sons providing financial or moral support.

The adult children's personalities are important in determining who should assume the responsibility for the parent. A child who feels close to the parent may willing assume the task, while others may resent the idea of extra care and see it as a burden.

The responsibility may be assumed by the child who feels closest to the parent, by one who feels the most guilty because of past behavior or by one who is trying to win parental approval.

Although self-centered children may find it easy to break away from the care of a parent, very few children ever turn their backs on parents completely.

The parent may resist these changes. Even though the parent may agree to certain aspects of care, when the time comes for him to give up responsibilities, he may change his mind. Most parents do not want to be a burden to their children or anyone else. Because of this, older parents may find it too painful to admit that they are no longer able to manage on their own.

For many elderly parents, losing their independence may be too difficult to face, so they struggle to continue living as they have in the past.

Parents and children must communicate feelings and concerns. Hasty decisions usually have negative results. Weigh possibilities over a long period of time. Family support, not quarrels, are urged.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

METERING CHANGE

Traffic, parking meters reflect economy

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

In trying to determine Midland's economic health, a number of indicators are looked at: Employment statistics, bank deposits, airline boardings and utility meter connections.

Other meters that tell a story about Midland's economic condition are the parking meter and traffic count meter.

During the boom, a parking space went for almost as much as an office and some workers had to periodically rush to the street to feed the parking meter. One could cruise up several dollars worth of gasoline looking for a parking place.

Now the meters stand as silent reminders of better times gone by, no longer gobbling up quarters like popcorn. But that doesn't mean the mental beggars still don't pull in the bucks.

This year meters are expected to pull in $176,000 or a half-percent of Midland's $27 million annual parking revenue. While that is less than the $155,000 brought in by parking meters in 1981, one must consider that rates have gone up since then, and there were only 303 meters then compared to 859 today.

If today's meters were pulling in today's rates during the boom, it is estimated that revenues would have been over a half-million dollars.

Far from downtown, traffic counts along U.S. Highway 80 and four-year-old Highway 191 indicate less traffic but the emergence of new traffic patterns and new possibilities.

Traffic along both highways is almost even, according to Morris Leach, signal maintenance supervisor with the Texas Department of Highways and Transportation.

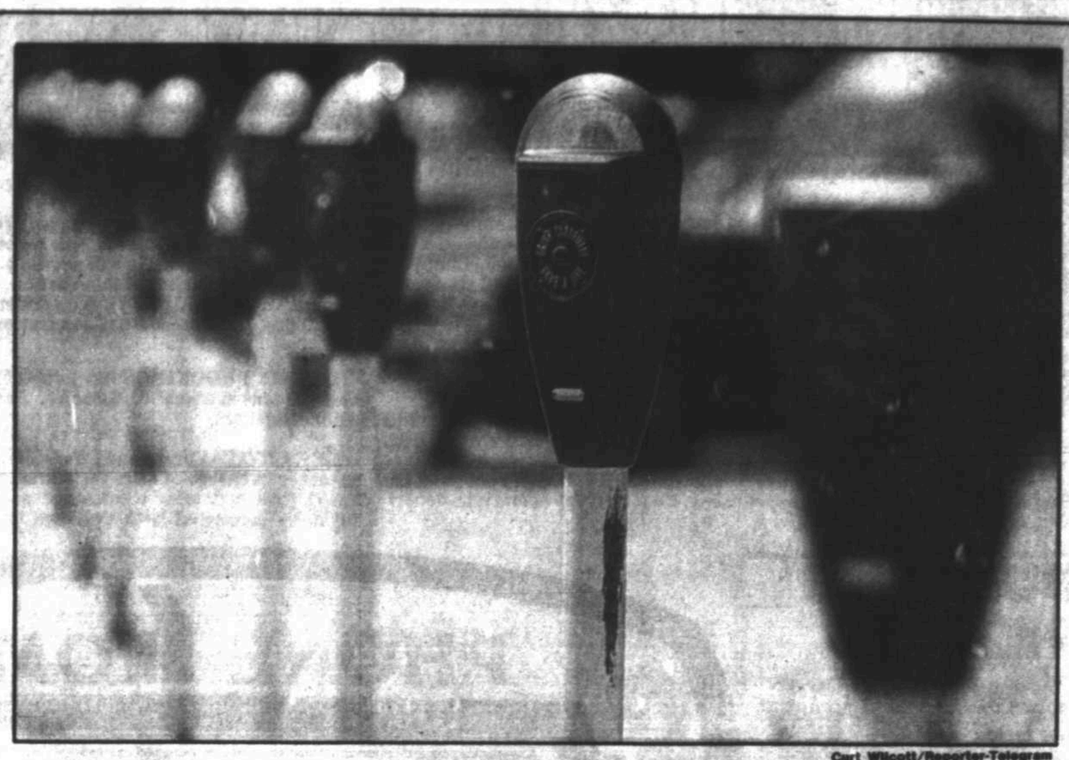

In 1985, before oil prices crumbled, Highway 191 averaged 10,352 cars daily compared to 13,690 daily for Highway 80. In 1986, the year prices collapsed, traffic averaged 10,091 for 191 and 16,440 for 80. The latest count, from last November, reflects the weakened economy due to low oil prices: Highway 191 averaged 9,772 daily and Highway 80 averaged 11,108.

He stated that when 191 first opened there was concern that it wasn't being used. But as more motorists became aware of 191, usage has increased. "It's taken some of the pressure of Highway 80, which wasn't designed to carry the traffic it was carrying," said Leach.

He noted that his office gets a lot of inquiries on the area's traffic patterns and roads from industries considering locating to the Midland-Odessa area and that 191 has major potential. "Highway 191 could be beneficial to both Midland and Odessa because it means easy access to the shopping centers and gives access to parts of the towns that wasn't there before," he said.

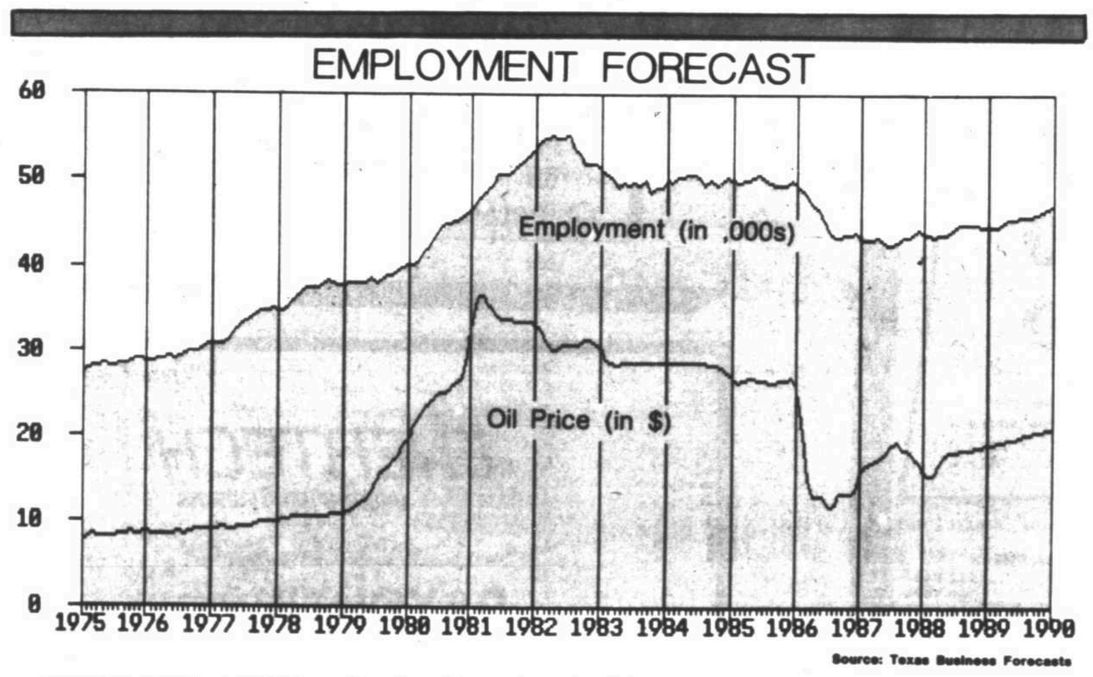

One company with great expectations for both Highway 191 and Loop 250, which crosses the highway, is SBC Corp.

Energy top priority for Japan

Over 83 percent dependent on foreign crude Japan has a comprehensive energy policy

By BERNARD WEINSTEIN and HAROLD GROSS
Cox News Service

Japan is fixed in the American consciousness as the paragon of an efficient industrial nation. While in many respects Japan's economy is much like our own — a rapidly maturing industrial economy threatened by foreign competition, for example — there are also major differences.

Japan is mercantilistic, with domestic consumption traditionally subordinated to the goal of positive trade balance. So, while much in Japan's business and economic prowess is admirable, comparisons with the United States should be made with care.

There is a very important exception — energy policy. Japan has one. The United States doesn't. The difference could have crucial implications for future economic expansion and world leadership.

Energy has been a non-issue during the Reagan years, even after plummeting world oil prices decimated the domestic petroleum industry, and began anew the imported oil spiral. The administration's actions seem bent on restoring the import oil dependence that helped create the crushing recession of the 1970s.

Industries and consumers are using more oil, which is compounded by a "hands off" economic policy. Record budget deficits have squeezed or cut research began in the early 1970s to achieve domestic energy sufficiency. Funding for energy research and the Department of Energy is down 50 percent since 1981, with alternative energy programs hit hardest.

More significant, inconsistent, conflicting federal and state energy regulatory policies have choked off power plant construction. Construction timetables are unknown, as are eventual plant costs. Utilities don't even know whether regulatory bodies will allow them to recoup their investment. These political and financial uncertainties have contributed to dozens of coal and nuclear plant cancellations, and are the reason not a single nuclear plant has been ordered in 10 years.

These trends are disturbing, because, since 1974, increased domestic coal use has saved the energy equivalent of 2.3 million barrels of oil per day, while worldwide, nuclear power is displacing 7 million barrels-per-day.

By comparison, Japan gives energy resource development the highest priority, particularly since it imports 83 percent of its energy. Indeed, Japan is so vulnerable to world crude oil disruption it's arguable that our presence in the Persian Gulf is more for Japan's sake than our own. What's more, rising oil imports costs, together with burgeoning Japanese domestic prosperity and the potential for imported consumer goods, raises the unpleasant prospect of a negative balance of payments by the early 21st century.

Local job growth may double nation's

Chamber study upbeat on future

Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it.

— George Santayana

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Understanding Midland's economic history is an important part of plotting its future direction.

To better chart that course, the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Economic Development Department commissioned an independent economist to "verify its suspicions and expectations of where the local economy is heading," explained John Fowler, chamber president.

However, the past is only one facet of "Midland's Economy: Past, Present and Future," written by James L. Williams and published by the Economic Development Center at Midland College.

What matters most about the economic peak of 1981-'82 is not aspiring to a repeat performance, but maximizing its legacy — a new city of under-utilized and low-cost facilities, said author Williams of Texas Business Forecasts.

More than half of the apartments, office buildings and retail space in Midland is less than 6 years old, Williams said.

The building oversupply is not only an asset in making the community more attractive to outside business interests, but is masking current economic growth in the Tall City.

"People closely associate growth with new construction," said the chamber's Fowler. Since commercial construction is at a standstill, they "assume there is no growth either."

"Without the bustle of construction, the growth is harder to see, but it's there," said Fowler.

However, economic indicators show employment is growing and Williams' report predicts annual job growth will continue at 4 to 5 percent during the next two years, given stable, gradually rising oil prices.

Taking a well-rounded look back at Midland's economy — warts and all — and evaluating it is vital to "know what makes it tick," Fowler said.

"We can't move toward the future without understanding fully where we've been," said Dr. Jerry Jones, chairman of business studies at Midland College and head of the Economic Development Center which published the study.

"We have pulled together an impressive data bank and resource base from the various groups working on economic development in the city — the black and Hispanic chambers, the Small Business Institute at Midland College, MOHRE (Midland/Odessa Health & Retirement Endeavor), the chamber's venture capital group and Midland International Airport, among others," Jones said.

Williams' econometric model of Midland, which has developed highly accurate forecasts in recent years, builds on the interrelationships of the various sectors he examined.

One of the study's major lessons, Fowler said, is that Midland can see growth with $18 per barrel oil. Plugging a steady oil price of $18 with gradual escalation to $21 in 1990 into the model yields 4 to 5 percent employment growth over the period — more than double the national estimate.

A second scenario — assuming a mid-1988 price jump to $21 — would result in 6 to 7 percent growth for the forecast period, Williams said.

Another major lesson is that "diversification is not a pipe dream," Williams noted.

Developing an eye for success

Business looks favorably upon eyeglasses

By SUSAN FAHLGREN-TORRES

DALLAS (AP) — Workers with their sights set on moving up in the business world may do better in eyeglasses, says a new study that found corporate recruiters look favorably on the bespectacled.

The survey, conducted by the Dallas-based Pearle Vision Center, found 79 percent of the corporate recruiters and fashion-image consultants queried said that glasses connote intelligence.

And 69 percent said they viewed glasses as enhancing a professional image.

Joseph Dono, Pearle's senior vice president of marketing, said the survey doesn't necessarily mean the 20-20 set should rush to buy glasses, but it could be a consideration for those who need corrective lenses.

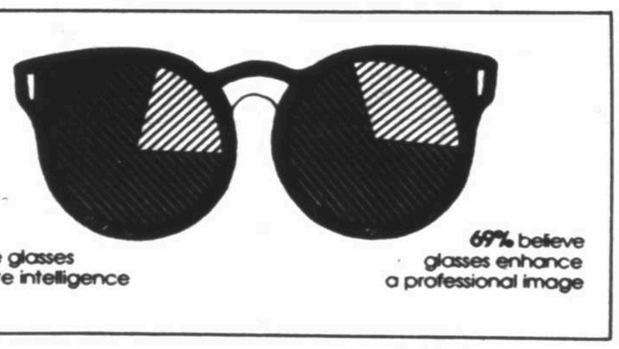

"Eyeglasses are not only functional for vision correction, but they also make a statement about the individual wearing them," Dono said Monday. "Today's consumer may purchase glasses as a fashion accessory, or to project a more business-like image for that 'board room' look."

Pearle researchers interviewed 100 corporate recruiters and image consultants in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. About 60 percent of those polled recruit either for executive-level positions or for the financial or communications field.

The survey reported 80 percent of respondents think eyeglasses help the wearer focus on making a power statement during a business presentation.

Removing glasses at strategic points is considered an effective way to emphasize a particular word or phrase. A third of those surveyed admitted using glasses for such a purpose.

"It's an eye-opener to people who are buying eyeglasses today," Dono said. "Many people who are buying glasses today haven't bought eyewear in about two years."

JOHN PAUL PITTS

The case for getting closer to the 'patch'

Pitts

I don't remember the year or his name, but I do remember how impressed I was with the young engineer and the job he was doing. It was in the '70s and I was writing a story on the state of oil production in and around Hobbs.

One of the individuals I interviewed was a young Amoco engineer who had recently been responsible for helping find some overlooked zones that had upped Amoco production from fields in and around Hobbs.

I found him at his desk, surrounded by heaps of paper, pouring over logs and production data, enthusiastic about the wells in his care. He was looking for clues to find misplaced or overlooked oil in the older fields around Hobbs. He also went to the field to look for clues and understanding.

When one of "his" wells was being pulled, he was there. "I want to know everything I can about my wells — how they look, feel and smell. I want to know the people working on them," he informed me.

Familarity may breed contempt, but I thought the young engineer was also demonstrating that it can breed production in the oilpatch.

I, like many others, admired Amoco for its close-to-the-well policy. Because of the policy, Amoco was viewed as one of the best-managed oil companies in the business.

With district offices at Hobbs, Brownfield, Levelland, Andrews and Odessa no major oil company was "closer" to the oil patch than Amoco. It was a closeness that had its rewards.

Building on a base acquired during the pioneering days of the Permian Basin, the company achieved an impressive record for replacing, expanding and increasing reserves in the Permian Basin.

While other oil companies played the perpetual reorganization games that sent employees scurrying in and out of the Permian Basin, Amoco seemed to prove that staying put, staying close to the well and sticking to oil business, instead of management business, was the best way to run an oil company.

That's why many of us were disappointed this week when Amoco announced it would close its district operations at Odessa and Brownfield and move nearly all of its engineering and administrative talent to Houston as a final step to "consolidation."

The news, that 200 technical and administrative employees would be asked to relocate, comes following the closure of district offices at Hobbs, Andrews and Levelland late last summer.

The announcement is especially perplexing when one considers that the Permian Basin is now in a new era of enhanced oil recovery in which the problem is not so much discovering new fields, but squeezing more oil out of discovered fields. Someone remarked recently, that in the next 20 years more oil would probably be found by reservoir engineers than geologists. That may well be true.

One can only wonder why a company, with at least four major EOR projects underway and such a big stake in squeezing oil from Permian Basin formations would move its talent to Houston.

The logical thing, it would seem, would be to increase the talent pool in the oilpatch — to get as many oil people as possible as close as possible to the problem.

That may have been what Arco, Exxon, Texaco and others had in mind when they made Midland a regional or division headquarters and beefed up staff here. Midland is smack in the middle of the oilpatch.

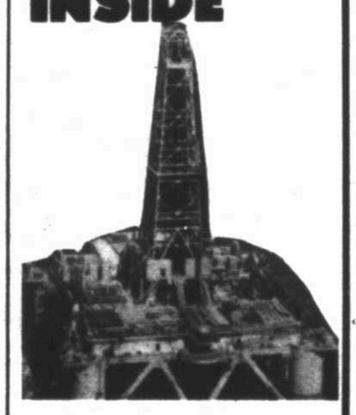

One Amoco spokesman remarked that one reason for the move was to get the technical people closer to the computer. A better move I think, would have been to move the computer to Odessa — or Midland. Nearly half of the Amoco employees at Odessa, in fact, live in Midland.

Houston, with a ton of oil companies, may be an oil town in numbers, but not in spirit. In a city so crowded, hectic, and diverse as humid Houston, the negatives and bigness overshadow and quash anything resembling spirit.

Midland, on the other hand, is an oil town. People here live, sleep, think and talk oil. There is a love, appreciation and enthusiasm for finding and producing oil in Midland that cannot be duplicated in Dallas, Denver or Houston.

Levi Strauss cuts El Paso workers

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Levi Strauss & Co. plans to lay off 350 workers May 2, the same day that Farah Inc. plans to lay off an equal number.

Levi Strauss officials attributed the layoffs to a leveling off of orders of jeans and jackets. Farah officials announced two weeks ago that reduced demand was forcing the company to make cuts.

Levi Strauss will make the layoffs by eliminating the night shift, which it hired a year ago to meet increased demand.

Rig Utilization

Basin, U.S. rig counts post gains

From Staff Reports

Both the U.S. and Permian Basin rig counts posted small gains this week, according to Houston-based Baker Hughes Inc.

The U.S. count rose four to total 908 while the Basin count rose three to stand at 134.

Lea County continues to lead the Permian Basin, with 21 rigs at work within county lines. Andrews County was second with 15 and Gaines County had 12. Midland County had one rig.

Bucking the rising rig count trend was rig utilization — the percentage of available rigs being used.

U.S. utilization dipped to 21.4 percent from 22 percent, and Basin utilization slipped from 27.3 percent to 26.9 percent.

Texas, the big loser the previous week with its count dropping by 13, posted the largest increase this week with 19 more rigs.

Among other major oil producing states, California's count increased by three and North Dakota's was up by two.

Louisiana lost six rigs and Oklahoma lost two. Kansas, Wyoming and New Mexico each lost two rigs, while Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania each lost one.

Cooper hopes turnaround means profits

By Nelson Antosh
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Cooper Industries Inc. is looking forward to large returns from the eventual turnaround in the market for oil-field capital goods, says Chairman and President Robert Cizik.

The company has $800 million in assets dedicated to the compression and drilling products segment, he said at Cooper's annual meeting this week. Normally, it expects a return of 10 percent to 15 percent on assets, which would mean operating profits from compression and drilling in the range of $80 million to $120 million.

Compression and drilling products, however, produced a loss of about $22 million in 1986 and a loss of slightly less than $5 million in 1987. That segment returned to profitability in the fourth quarter.

Overall, Cooper Industries recorded a profit for the year of $173.8 million, up from $147.7 million in 1986. First quarter net income rose by 17 percent.

"The energy turnaround has been slower than generally predicted, said Cizik. For the first time in six years we are producing mud pumps and such at our plant in Quincy, Ill.," he said. But he doesn't expect to see dramatic improvement until 1990 or 1991.

Cooper's stock price increased by 34 percent in 1987, he said, compared with the Standard & Poor's 500, which rose only 2 percent. The 34 percent gain came despite the Oct. 19 stock market crash.

The company also announced that Duane F. Emmert was elected general counsel and Louis B. Trenchard was elected corporate secretary. The board of directors declared a regular quarterly dividend of 45 cents a common share, payable July 1 to holders of record on June 10.

Global Marine seeing better times

By BRUCE NICHOLS

HOUSTON (AP) — When Global Marine, Inc. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in January 1986, it was one more sign of how bad business was getting in the offshore oil and gas drilling industry.

Now Global is talking about filing a plan during the next few weeks to emerge from bankruptcy by the end of the year, and it appears to be another indication the offshore business is improving.

"We expect to be able to file a plan of reorganization sometime within the next 30 to 60 days ... with the goal of being out of Chapter 11 by the end of 1988," said Jerry Martin, senior vice president and chief financial officer.

Chairman C. Russell Luigs, preparing for an annual meeting May 5, also is optimistic about his company's lot. "I'm very confident we will, in fact, have a very successful reorganization and the enterprise will survive and go on and prosper in the future," Luigs said.

Global initiated serious talks with creditors about a plan of reorganization last July, after business offshore began to improve, and at one time the company hoped to file a plan of reorganization in January, Martin said.

Details of the proposed plan of reorganization have not been disclosed, but it is expected to involve a "mammoth" debt-for-equity swap, giving creditors stock in Global in exchange for removal of debt from the books, said analyst Lincoln Werden Jr. of Thomson McKinnon Securities.

Global, which borrowed heavily and grew quickly in the years leading up to the oil industry collapse, owes more than $1.2 billion to 40 banks, government agencies and other creditors worldwide. Debt payments had reached $20 million a month when Global stopped making them, Martin said.

During the last four years, Global has lost $651.9 million as revenues have shrunk to $81.7 million last year from $407 million in 1984.

But offshore drilling activity worldwide has picked up in the past 12 to 18 months. A year ago this week, only 53.9 percent of rigs available worldwide were working. Last week, 71.2 percent were working, according to Offshore Data Services.

Recovery has been even sharper in the Gulf of Mexico, where the utilization rate has more than doubled last year's lows to stand at 61.7 percent last week.

Global Marine has participated in the improvement, although not as much as some companies because executives decided early in the Chapter 11 proceeding not to work a rig for less than operating cost, Martin said.

In May 1987, the company had only three of its 30 rigs working. Last week, 16 were making hole in Southeast Asia, near Africa, in the Gulf of Mexico and in the North Sea. The company's workforce, which peaked at 2,900 and bottomed out at 500, is back up to 1,300, Martin said.

Global has survived so far because it entered bankruptcy with $85 million in cash, and its creditors had little choice but to let it keep its rigs and try to keep operating, according to analysts. The market for repossessed rigs has been in a slump, offering creditors little chance of recovery through sale of collateral, until recently.

Interestingly, improvement in the offshore drilling industry has made a few of Global Marine's creditors more anxious to repossess rigs, which have become more valuable on the open market than they were at the time the company sought Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

"While the rigs are becoming more valuable as time goes on, the value of the business as a going concern exceeds the liquidation value of the equipment," Luigs said. "We think we've got a plan that makes good economic sense."

If Global can reach agreement with creditors to reduce its debt load and emerge from bankruptcy in streamlined financial form, the company's position could improve rapidly, said Bryan Dutt of Howard, Weil Financial Corp.

That doesn't mean hard times are over, analyst Werden said. "It's possible the industry is coming off a bottom, but they're still awfully depressed ... That has to be the reality," Werden said.

Global Marines's plans to soon emerge from bankruptcy signal improvement in the offshore oil and gas drilling industry.

"We see this as a major growth corridor for residential, commercial and planned industrial development," said Doug Henson, president of SBC.

For the next 12 to 14 months, Henson said, SBC will concentrate on residential development in the area, which he sees as a natural extension of Midland city limits. His company is currently completing 79 single family lots which will be deed-restricted to houses larger than 2,500 sq. ft.

As the residential development matures, community businesses are expected to develop in the area, Henson continued. He predicted that, in several years, the area will draw a major regional shopping mall.

"We have an LR2-zoned major mall-designated site that there is no serious interest in at the moment," he said, referring to the corner of Loop 250 and Highway 191, where Sam's Wholesale Club is located. This was to be the site of the Deauville Mall, which was shelved when oil prices collapsed in 1986. "As the economy rebounds, with the area's traffic and central location, I'm sure we'll secure a regional shopping center for that area."

Hanson doesn't see the area becoming a center for service and manufacturing companies such as those that line Highway 80 and Interstate 20. That area still has room for development, and as the economy continues to rebound, there will be an infill of currently vacant buildings, then new structures added, he predicted.

GROW

Manufacturing, a base employment sector in Midland and Odessa, was decimated by oil price collapses in 1983 and '86. However, Midland manufacturing employment dropped by 40 to 45 percent while Odessa registered more than a 65 percent drop.

"That 20 percent difference can be explained in two words — Texas Instruments," Williams said.

PATCH

Perhaps that is the reason oil companies keep moving employees into and out of Midland. One generation of oil executives forgets what a great oil town Midland is — another remembers.

Perhaps, too, it is this spirit of camaraderie that always brings oil people back to Midland, to retire after 30 years or so of being "consolidated, unconsolidated and reconsolidated" by major oil companies.

Houston may be fine for those who like to manage, but Midland is finer for those who like to find and produce oil. The reason? There really is great morale value derived when oil company employees are emersed in an oil community. Higher morale translates to improved employee productivity, which translates to increased oil production, which translates to higher profits.

Ask any oil company executive what happens to morale when employees are moved to Houston. Ask him, too, what happens to many of their employees when transferred to Houston. A fair share of them have ended up as independents and consultants in Midland.

Bill Morrow (Amoco chairman) didn't ask me, but if he had I would have strongly urged him to establish an Amoco division office at Midland.

Somehow, I just don't see how engineers wandering around halls in Houston, hovering over a computer terminals, fighting traffic jams, going somewhere on a plane two or three times a week then coming home to visit over the fence with a panty hose distributor can take as good care of an oil field in the Permian Basin as an engineer in Midland, Odessa, Andrews or Hobbs.

JAPAN

The Japanese also appear to have a keener understanding of the linkage between energy — particularly electric energy — and economic expansion. Electric intensive industries and mass media are expected to account for 30 percent of Japan's gross national product by 2000, nearly doubling in less than 20 years. Japan's electric power use is expected to grow 3 percent annually through the year 2000. Similar growth is occurring in the United States — up 18 percent during the last five years (3.4 percent annually), and 44 percent in the last 15.

But unlike the United States, Japan's spending priorities also reflect the energy-economic link. In 1986, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry spent $816 million for energy research, while private industry was spending $4.5 billion. The weight of Japan's energy research is reflected in its goal to cut oil-fired electricity from 35 percent to 13 percent by the year 2000, principally with nuclear energy. Nuclear now accounts for 27 percent of Japan's electricity needs. Its share will rise to 40 percent by 2000 and to 60 percent by the year 2030.

The two energy policies couldn't be more at odds. Japan promotes nuclear, as we allow it to languish. They plan for new capacity, while we aren't adding enough power plants to replace aging plants and fuel economic growth. An applied Economic Research report to Congress predicts demand increases of only 2.4 percent each year could mean shortages in many regions by the early 1990s. New England already is struggling to avoid brownouts and blackouts, despite Canadian imports and aggressive conservation.

The implications for the two international giants are clear. By accelerating energy resource development that's compatible with its changing industrial structure and consistent with its goal of energy independence, Japan is positioning itself for long-term economic growth and world economic leadership. The United States' failure to address the interrelated problems of oil dependency and insufficient electric capacity runs the risk of further undermining its leadership role.

The irony is, resource-poor Japan is achieving energy self-sufficiency, while resource-rich America again is becoming captive to foreign energy suppliers. Meanwhile, the real issue before the nation is not whether so-called "special interests," such as the petroleum and electric utility industries, are protected. Instead, we are dealing with the energy security and international competitiveness of the American economy.

Ohio State gives students $5 million to 'play market'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University is giving its business students $5 million to invest in a test of whether students can outperform the Standard & Poor's index and the university's regular money managers.

"The students will never have their hands on the money or stock certificates, but they will make the decisions," said University Treasurer James Nichols.

The performance of the students would be judged against the performance of the market and that of professional investment managers, Nichols said.

"If, over time, the students don't do well against the market and the professionals, the program will be terminated," he said.

He said he knew of no other university using such an amount of money in similar programs. He said other universities involve about $50,000 in their programs.

Under the program announced this week, students would act as investment managers as part of an advanced investments course for undergraduates. They will be expected to follow the same procedures as professional investment managers.

The money would come from the university's endowment, which is about $245 million. The fund consists of donations and doesn't include money from state subsidies or student tuition

Investments probably would be made on the New York Stock Exchange and the American Stock Exchange, and be consistent with the university's conservative investment policies, Nichols said.

"We are always looking a appreciation on long-term investments," he said. "We try to steady, and over time, that has paid off."

The course probably will be offered during the fall and winter quarters the next school year. It is scheduled for a trial run this summer.

Stephen Buser, a professor of finance, said the investments would add a new dimension to education. "This program will give students a view of the real world from the classroom," he said.

The program was suggested by OSU Trustee John J. Barone, a Toledo lawyer.

Jeff Burnett of Neu Tech, a Dallas-based business, sells Cellular Phoneys that offer "status without the static."

Faux phones ring true for would-be yuppies

DALLAS (AP) — Cut-rate yuppies who can't afford to have it all are calling on a new accessory to tone up their image, a fake cellular phone that's a dead ringer for the must-have gadget.

"We are a status-driven city — there's no doubt about it," said Michelle Stein, president of Neu Tech, a Dallas high-tech accessory store.

The Cellular Phoney is a realistic copy of real cellular phones that have become standard fixtures in BMWs and Mercedes whizzing along Dallas' highways.

At $15.95 for the handset and a fake, stick-on antenna, the fake phones live up to the advertising slogan of "status without the static," Ms. Stein said.

She said she has sold hundreds of the fake phones in the last year, although she did not have an exact count.

At Art Explosion, another Dallas store offering the Cellular Phoneys, business is brisk whenever a new shipment arrives, said salesman Larry Cornmesser.

The Cellular Phoneys are made by Faux Systems in Los Altos, Calif., a small company owned by Patricia Kvamme. An estimated 40,000 phones have been sold, many in Los Angeles, another hub of freeway fashion.

But the items do well wherever the real phones are popular, retailers said.

At three Art Explosion in Dallas, several hundred have been sold since the Christmas season, said Martha Widlus, spokeswoman at the company's headquarters in Ohio.

Other fake models also are on the market, including just the antenna.

Although many people are buying the Cellular Phoneys as gag gifts, some find the gadgets ring true as lifestyle accessories, Ms. Stein said.

"It's so incredibly real-looking that you have to begin to wonder how many people driving around out there with an antenna on the back of their car actually have a phoney," she said.

"Everybody is hungering for high technology across the board but because of cost prohibitions, not everybody can have them," she said.

Some novelty store owners said they aren't so sure the phones will do as well in Texas as in California.

Said Les Cohen, owner of Palmer Sales of Dallas: "Can you see a Texan driving down the road, talking into a play phone on his way to bankruptcy court?"

Packard plans to fund $2 billion charity

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hewlett-Packard founder David Packard plans to bequeath his $2 billion fortune to the foundation created by him and his late wife, making the charity one of the nation's 10 wealthiest, its director said.

The Los Altos-based David and Lucile Packard foundation, valued at $145 million, would rank with others such as the Ford Foundation, valued at $4.7 billion, executive director Cole Wilbur said Thursday.

The bulk of the donation will consist of stock contributed to the foundation, a charitable organization created by the Packards in 1964 to finance education and health projects throughout the world, Wilbur said.

Packard, 75, told Wilbur last week of his intention to leave the money to the foundation when he dies, the director said.

"His feeling is that there is a lot of important concerns in research and education, and he'd like to help develop them and to help really make a difference in this community and the world," said Wilbur.

Advocates call for small-part toy warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocates are joining a congressman's call for mandatory warning labels on toys that contain parts small enough for toddlers to choke on.

Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., said this week that labels stating "Ages 3 and up" seem to many parents simply like recommendations for ability levels and not a safety warning.

"Too often the proud parent thinks 'my Susie and my Sammy are so smart they certainly have the ability to play with this toy'," said Ann Brown, chairwoman of the consumer affairs committee of Americans for Democratic Action.

"Little does the unsuspecting parent realize that this is not an ability label, but is a danger label and should be followed absolutely," she said.

Gejdenson has drafted legislation to require all toys with small parts to include a label with the word "WARNING" in capital letters and a statement that children under 3 can choke on the parts.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission prohibits toy manufacturers from marketing products with small parts to children under 3, but the agency has no labeling requirements. Most U.S. manufacturers print age recommendations on the toy packages, but many of those do not outline the potential health hazard.

Chris Nelson, a compliance officer at the commission, said the agency has asked certain companies to print small-parts warnings on their labels.

But she said the commission has not made it mandatory because it would be difficult to prove a direct link between the lack of labeling and choking deaths and injuries. She said such proof would be necessary for the commission to issue a regulation.

6,000 cases of Texas wine Britain bound

WASHINGTON (AP) — A British wine merchant has purchased 6,000 cases of Texas wine in what is believed to be the largest single overseas shipment of a non-California wine, the House Agriculture Committee announced Thursday.

"This is an exciting event for the Texas wine industry," said committee chairman Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas. "Our work over the past year in developing export markets is now beginning to pay off for the state's wine industry."

The House Agriculture Committee said Douglas Henn-Macrae of London will import the entire wine inventory from Texas Vineyards Inc. in Ivanhoe.

"While this is only one sale, its size points to the untapped potential that exists in Britain and elsewhere for the entire Texas wine industry," said de la Garza, who has worked extensively in promoting Texas wines domestically and abroad.

Henn-Macrae had visited several Texas wineries for the first time earlier this year at de la Garza's invitation.

De la Garza was also instrumental in securing official U.S. sponsorship of the first major exhibit of American wines at one of the largest wine trade shows in Europe, Vinitaly in Verona, Italy. Thirty-five U.S. wineries from seven states, including five Texas wineries, participated in the show earlier this month.

The Midland Symphony and Chorale will present "A Rodgers and Hammerstein Evening."

Broadway tunes

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

"A Rodgers and Hammerstein Evening" descends on Midland Friday when the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale presents its final cabaret pops concert of the season at the Holiday Inn Country Villa Convention Center.

"We've had such outstanding response to our cabaret pops that we look forward to each one," says Connie Linsler, the organization's general manager. "And what better way to get in the spirit of this year's Celebration of the Arts than by enjoying an evening of music from one of Broadway's most famous song writing duos?"

"A Rodgers and Hammerstein Evening" features vocal soloists, the chorale and the orchestra in selections from, among others, "Carousel," "Oklahoma" and "The Sound of Music."

Soloists include Aleisha Williams, alto; Steven Powell, baritone; Tom Laney, bass; Noel Nease, bass; Janice Archer, soprano; Diane King, soprano; Pam Priebe, soprano; Tammy Stallcup, soprano; Michelle Sutton, soprano; Jim Humphreys, tenor; and Rob Sutphen, tenor.

"These soloists were chosen from area-wide auditions," says Eugene Pierce, director of the Symphony Chorale. "They represent a wide spectrum of our musical community, come from varied backgrounds and include people who are beginning their careers as well as seasoned performers."

The concert will be staged Saturday at Odessa's Holiday Inn Centre. Both pops concerts, which begin at 8 p.m, are sponsored by First RepublicBank.

"We are fortunate in this area to enjoy the support of businesses and individuals who believe in the importance of the arts," says Ms. Linsler. "Without their help, much of what is accomplished in the arts in West Texas would not be possible."

The symphony and chorale will be lead by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, music director and conductor; and Eugene Pierce, chorale director and assistant conductor.

"An accomplished performer, writer, composer and conductor," Dr. Hohstadt is in his 14th season with the Midland-Odessa symphony and Chorale," Ms. Linsler says.

His career highlights include serving as conductor for the Honolulu and Amarillo symphonies, serving on the conducting staff at the Eastman School of Music and appearing as guest conductor in seven different countries. An article by Hohstadt will be published in the June 1988 issue of Symphony Magazine, the official publication of the American Symphony League.

Pierce, a member of the symphony and chorale organization since 1986, is completing work on his doctorate at the University of Northern Colorado. Highlights from his career include performing as a member of the Westminister Choir and Temple University choir with some of the world's foremost conductors, including Leonard Bernstein, Pierre Boulez, Carlo Maria Giulini, Lorin Maazel, Eugene Ormandy and Robert Shaw; conducting college, church and community choral ensembles; and teaching at Temple University, the University of Northern Colorado and Adams State College.

Tickets, priced at $12 for general admission and $15 for reserved seating, may be purchased at Texas American Bank, Midland; MBank, Odessa; or the symphony office near Midland International Airport.

Quartet honored artists

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

When George S. Goebel attended a Thouvenel String Quartet concert 11 years ago, he had no idea that more than a musical experience would be the result.

Since that time, Goebel, who came to Midland from Tulsa, Okla., in 1965 to work for Jim Hall, Hap Sharp and Chaparral Cars, has developed a friendship with the Thouvenel players. What Goebel calls a "big print" was added to that friendship when he was on the Thouvenel's first tour of China.

"It was a super experience; it would not have been the same kind of experience had it not been for the Thouvenel," he says. The trip offered Goebel the opportunity to hear "concerts in a country that has never had that kind of concert."

That friendship has allowed the Thouvenel more travel ease in performing out of town concerts. Goebel, a pipeline pilot for El Paso Natural Products, has been able to fly them to concerts which are within reach of a one-day round trip, such as Abilene, Alpine and Brownsville.

Selected by Midland Arts Assembly as this year's COA Distinguished Artists, the Thouvenel String Quartet is being honored with a champagne reception from 2 to 4 p.m. May 8 at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave. The reception, which is open to the public, is sponsored by Texas Instruments and hosted by Midland Arts Association.

Midland Arts Assembly is the umbrella organization for the arts here and the presenters of Celebration of the Arts, which begins today with Ballet Midland's final performance of its spring season, set for 2 p.m. at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium. For tickets information call 686-0731.

COA concludes May 22, with the Festival Days set for May 14 and 15 at Midland Center, Centennial Plaza and the courthouse lawn and the Preview Party scheduled for May 13.

Without the volunteer efforts of supporters and friends of the arts, Midland's Celebration of the Arts would be a dream and not a reality. Countless man hours go into making possible such celebration events as the reception for the Distinguished Artists and Gourmet Midland.

Set for 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday at Midland Center, Gourmet Midland features cuisine prepared by 21 local restaurants, clubs, caterers and hotels. Entertainment will be provided by Dow Jones Average.

QUARTET

Participating merchants include Anasazi, Baskin Robbins, Chili's, Dobb's House, Dr Pepper, El Chico, Foods Fantastic, Greentree Country Club, Holiday Inn Country Villa, Luby's Cafeteria, Midland Country Club, The Midland Hilton, Murray's Deli, Physicians & Surgeons Hospital, Pizza Hut, Plaza Club Restaurant, Ramada Hotel Restaurant, Rosa's Tortilla Factory, Round House Depot and Oyster Bar, Taco Villa and Utopia Spring Water.

Gourmet Midland sponsors are Cattleman's Steak House, Jumburrito, La Bodega, Luigi's and Quisine-N-Flight.

"For the cost of $15, you can taste to your palette's content," says Cookie Wetendorf, Assembly coordinator for COA. Volunteer chairman for Gourmet Midland is Robin Sams.

This year's COA marks the first time performing artists have been selected by the Assembly board and the Celebration Committee to be the Distinguished Artists. The first year of COA, five artists were honored and for the past three years a local artist with a national reputation has been selected to be so honored.

Also a first this year was the poster contest in which artists vied for the opportunity of creating the 1988 Commemorative Celebration of the Arts poster.

Winner Terry Rhodes will be honored at a "Commemorative Poster Signing" being held from 4 to 6 p.m. Tuesday at Pages and Prints, Plaza Shopping Center. The subject of the poster is the Thouvenel Quartet.

Artist-in-Residence with the MOSC since the position was created for the quartet in 1977 and Artist-Coaches of the San Diego Chamber Music Workshop since 1979, the quartet has performed in the major music centers of New York City; toured Mexico; made two tours of China, the last being this summer when the quartet was the first musical ensemble from the West to perform in Tibet; and performed a four-concert series in Vienna, Austria, that won praise from European critics.

The Thouvenel is presenting the final concert in its series at 8 p.m. May 8 at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College campus. Guest artists will be pianist Rose Marie Chisholm and bassist Theodore Grille. The program will be Mozart's G Minor Piano Quintet and Schubert's "Trout Quintet." Tickets will be sold at the door.

The group's notable awards and commissions include a National Endowment for the Arts consortium grant to co-commission and perform new works by Mel Powell, Milton Babbitt and Elliott Carter; an NEA grant to commission and premiere the Eighth Quartet of Ernst Krenek; the Texas Commission on the Arts Touring Arts Program; the Mid-America Arts Alliance Touring Program; and the "Critic's Choice" in the Village Voice in New York City.

Current quartet members are Eugene Purdue, violin; Sally Chisholm, viola; Rebecca Seiver, cello; and Janet Calkins, violin.

"We felt it was time to recognize the performing arts, and certainly the Thouvenel is a great place to start," says Jean Posey, the Assembly's executive director.

"The quartet is a fine playing ensemble with an international reputation and a strong local following as evidenced by such loyal friends and fans as George Goebel. The arts don't exist in a vacuum. We need friends and supporters to survive."

POPS

Cost of admission covers complimentary cheese and fruit. A cash bar is available when the doors open at 7 p.m. Box suppers will also be available for sale. To reserve box suppers, prepared by Holiday Inn, or to charge tickets, call the Symphony Concert Line, 563-5269.

This season marks the first time the symphony has staged a pops concert series and a Master Season series, which ended in April. The upcoming performances are the final ones in the four-concert pops.

"The (pops) format has been so successful — playing to sold-out houses on several occasions — that we are now finalizing plans for next year's four concert series," Ms. Linsler says.

Why do groups host events same night?

Temple

Immediately following Midland Community Concerts closing show of the 1987-88 season, I was asked a question I have asked myself and others on numerous occasions over the eight years I have been pursuing this job (or has the job been pursuing me?) This time the question had a different slant.

My question has been why in a select size marketplace, organizations host events on the same night? The creation in December 1981 of an umbrella organization for the arts, the Midland Arts Assembly, has eased this situation somewhat since the relatively recent creation of a yearly listing of events.

A couple of dual bookings have occurred this year when the opportunity to bring a nationally known act to the area has come up at the last minute, and the only date available was one in which an event was already scheduled. Although painful for the organizations, this kind of double booking is understandable.

What I had not thought of was performances in Odessa affecting Midland; more specifically, the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Inc. holding an Odessa performance when another group is performing in Midland that the symphony musicians would enjoy.

That situation occurred when the Empire Brass Quintet, the resident brass quintet at Boston University, closed out MCC's season. The concert presented an outstanding example of solid programming, complete with carefully planned spacing of selections. The five players can play as one and as individuals.

I did have difficulty, sitting in the balcony, hearing the names of pieces being played. Although the quintet had a microphone on stage to speak from, individual members did not always use it when talking with the audience.

When it was brought to my attention that the symphony was playing that night in Odessa, I felt disappointed for the symphony brass players. This was a group not to miss.

I particularly enjoyed watching their ease and mobility onstage — only the tuba player sat down, and he only sat on occasion — and their closing presentation when they strolled through the audience playing their instruments.

After the show, players Rolf Smedvig, Jeffrey Curnow, Martin Hackleman, Scott A. Hartman and J. Samuel Pilafian said they'd like to play here again. One thing's certain — they acquired new fans during the concert. That was obvious from the audience's applause, and the number of people standing in life to buy albums and receive autographs.

Exhibit reflects 100 years of work by American artists

From Staff Reports

"A Select View: American Paintings from the Columbus Museum," an exhibition of 46 paintings, watercolors and drawings by American artists, is on view at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through May 29.

This exhibition is composed of works from the Columbus, Ga., museum's permanent collection. "A Select View" reflects close to 100 years of American painting represented by landscape, still life and figure works dating from 1858 to 1966.

Works by landscape artists John Frederick Kensett, Albert Bierstadt and Ernest Lawson are included as are still life paintings by John Frederick Peto and Emil Carlson. Figure painting artists include Frank Duveneck, Robert Henri, Richard Miller and Regional Marsh.

Jean Hagman, director of the Museum of the Southwest, designed the exhibition to be shown in galleries one and two of the south wing. Doric columns flanking the walls create a traditional atmosphere and the lighting heightens the focus on canvas. American art of the 19th and 20th centuries is Ms. Hagman's field of special interest.

Gallery Three, adjoining the exhibition galleries, is an activity room designed for exploring six basic elements of art and for testing visual skills to increase the enjoyment of seeing the artists' work. Children and adults are invited to use the gallery. Sixth graders will start their tours of "A Select View" in this gallery.

Museum which have shown "A Select View" report that "there is something for everyone" and that it has been popular with viewers, says a release from the Museum of the Southwest.

The exhibition is traveling under management of Smith Kramer Fine Art Services of Kansas City while the Columbus Museum builds a new museum faculty. A fully illustrated catalog is available.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

REVIEWS

'Above the Law' not very credible

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO

Salcedo

In the first 15 minutes of "Above the Law" a Chicago cop assaults men in a bar, beats a drug addict nearly senseless, and sneaks a relative away from the scene of a crime. It would appear that the cop, Nico Toscani (newcomer Steven Seagal) is indeed "above the law." But this is only because the film, which intends to show Nico as a crusader for justice out to get some Central Intelligence Agency men for breaking the law, misfires, and instead portrays Nico as a misguided and vicious criminal.

Co-written and produced by Seagal (pronounced Say-gahl, according to publicity material), "Above the Law" is an action film in search of an identity. It involves a small group of corrupt CIA crazies who have become unscrupulous drug traffickers to finance their covert operations (whatever they may be), first in the Far East (during the Vietnam War) and today in Central America.

Subplots (which by no means connect to the main plot) involve some illegal aliens hiding in a church, a U.S. senator targeted for assassination, a "chemical interrogation" specialist out to get Nico, and a huge narcotics shipment which turns out to contain powerful C-4 explosives.

The film is indeed an action film with plenty of car chases, bone-crunching violence, a mounting body count, and some poorly shot martial arts movements (a shame, since offscreen, Seagal is a sixth-degree black belt in Aikido and a master of weaponry). To be fair, action fanatics won't be disappointed, and several teen-agers were impressed by much of Nico's cliff-hanging daring-do.

While the acting in a film of this type is hard to judge, Sharon Stone, as Nico's wife, is downright annoying. She's not allowed to do anything but sniffle and whine.

Nico does much of his acting with his fists. The only integrity in the film is brought to the screen by Pam Grier as Nico's no-nonsense partner.

In a press release, Seagal, an ex-bodyguard for unnamed-heads-of-state, said, "I can't cite specific instances or details, but in the field (as a bodyguard) at one time or another, I've had to use practically everything I've learned." One can't help wondering whether Seagal would have done better sticking to autobiographical material rather than fiction in his film.

"Above the Law" stretches credibility to the limit with implausible plot twists and action scenes — and not enough time to tie anything together.

But the greatest flaw is the film's confused morality, best demonstrated by some old news footage of Richard Nixon shouting, "No one is above the law!" In the same hypocritical vein, Nico shouts to some CIA baddies, "You think you're above the law. Well, you're not above mine!"

Watch out, America, because Warner Bros. intends to set Nico up as the next American hero a la James Bond. Nico will fight for your justice — his kind of justice — even if he has to break every bone in your body.

"Above the Law," rated R for violence and more violence, is playing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

Summer Mummers tryouts slated

Auditions for the 40th annual Summer Mummers will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 8 and 9 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

In addition, olio auditions will be held at 3 p.m. May 8 and at 7:30 p.m. May 10, also at the Yucca Theatre.

The 40th anniversary show, "Banditry on the Border" or "They Came to Acuna," was written by the late William S. Davis and offers, says a news release from Summer Mummers, "ample opportunity for those who would swoon, croon a tune, be a buffoon or help a lampoon."

Groups and individuals are invited to audition for the olio.

"Bring your own wild and wacky act, or come and get ideas from the casting committee," the release says.

"Don't miss your grand opportunity to showcase your talents, unlock your secret desires, have lots of fun, and be a part of the Summer Mummers fabulous 40th anniversary."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Discovery concerts ending

The Discovery Chamber Music Series will present its Grand Finale Concert of the 1987-88 season May 15 in Odessa and May 16 in Midland.

"The non-profit series was founded to provide the (Midland-Odessa) symphony musicians with another opportunity to perform, to provide chamber music for the area and to allow the students of the musicians a chance to hear them perform in a more intimate setting," says a news release from the DCMS.

The closing concert will feature the Symphonietta for Winds by van Otterloo, along with two chamber music masterpieces, Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 by bach and "The Soldier's Tale" by Stravinsky. The concert will be conducted by Dr. Robert Winslow, director of bands at North Texas State University.

The Odessa concert will be held at 3 p.m. May 15 at First United Methodist Church, 415 N. Lee St. The Midland performance is scheduled for 8 p.m. May 16 at Grace Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St.

The public is invited to attend these free concerts. For more information call Robert or Barbara Adamcik, 699-0242.

Rasmussen art at theater

Mary Rasmussen is displaying her art at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., during Midland Community Theatre's performance of Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

The show contains florals and still life paintings in watercolor and oil. Flowers have long been a favorite subject of this artist, who finds pleasure in both fresh and dying varieties. The artist is currently involved in a still life series called "Trash and Treasure" playing on the idea of one man's trash being another man's treasure.

Mrs. Rasmusseum is self taught in the medium of watercolor and has studied oil painting with Bill Earle, Doug Higgins and Ted Goerschner. Her watercolors are painted in a realistic manner whereas her oils lean toward impressionism.

Her work hangs in collections through Texas and the Southwest. She recently received third place and honorable mention in the Midland Arts Association show at the Museum of the Southwest.

OC staging 'Antigone'

ODESSA — The Globe Theatre and Odessa College Theatre's production of "Antigone" closes today at 2:30 p.m.

The production is adapted by Paula Thompson from the play by Jean Anouilh, which was based on Sophocles' "Antigone."

Ticket price is $8 adults and $5.50 students and senior citizens. OC students and faculty are admitted with current ID's.

The Globe Theatre is located at 2308 Shakespeare Road. For more information or to make reservations call 1-332-1586. The project is funded in part by the Odessa Cultural Council.

Singing out

Practicing their parts in the musical tribute for "A Night to Honor Israel" are, from left, Judy Stone, producer; Rabbi Tracy Klirs, Temple Beth El, Odessa; and Jack Stone, producer. The interfaith choir is conducted by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt. The event honoring Israeli independence and the restoration of Jerusalem, to be staged at 7 p.m. Monday at Midland's Holiday Inn Convention Center, also will feature violinst Shony Alex Braun, the Midland-Odessa Symphony and a local folk-dancing group. The event is part of Midland's annual Celebration of the Arts.

'Brighton Beach' playing

Neil Simon's comedy hit "Brighton Beach Memoirs" plays Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., at 2:30 p.m. today.

Voted Best Play by the New York Drama Critics Circle, "Brighton Beach Memoirs" is a somewhat autobiographical play about Simon and his family in Brooklyn in 1937. The Midland Community Theatre production is being co-produced by Nancy and Buddy Anguish.

The production runs Thursday through Friday until May 14.

For reservations or more information call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

UTPB singers to perform

ODESSA — U.T. Permian Basin's University Singers will present a concert at 3 p.m. today at Our Savior Lutheran Church, Midland.

The group will perform Rossini's 1863 version of "The Petite Messe Solennelle" or "Little Mass" with chorus and soloists. Although Rossini was the most popular writer of comic operas during the 19th century, "Little Mass" is not a comedy but rather an unusual and uplifting sacred work.

Akins art at institute

ODESSA — "Future Akins: Confessions of a Day Dreamer" is now on display at The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University Blvd.

The show features the works of Akins, an artist on leave from the Museum at Texas Tech University. Included are paintings and prints.

The exhibit will be on display through May 22. For more information call Letha Hooper, 1-368-7222.

OC band to perform

ODESSA — A band concert will be presented by the Odessa College Community Band at 3 p.m. Tuesday at OC's Fine Arts Center.

The concert, which will feature a brass ensemble, a saxophone quartet and a woodwind quintet, is free and open to the public. Director of the OC Community Band is Dr. Bernard Rose.

Ice contest prize $130,000

NENANA, Alaska (AP) — Ah spring! For most of the nation, it's a time of fragrant flowers and verdant renewal. In Alaska, it's when the ice breaks.

So momentous is the event that since 1917 Nenana has held its Ice Classic, an opportunity for area residents to predict the exact moment of the ice break-up on the Tanana River.

This year, three Anchorage residents shared the $130,000 prize for being the only ones out of 146,300 entries to correctly guess when the 3-to-4-foot-thick ice would begin flowing down the river: 10:15 a.m. on April 27.

"It kind of took everyone by surprise," said Wayne Taylor, contest manager. "It's the first time the ice has ever gone out on April 27."

The prize was split among Dan Nicoli, a construction worker, Mac Davis, 43, an accountant, and his 62-year-old brother, Harry, a retired postal worker who lives in Sacramento, Calif. The brothers have been buying Ice Classic tickets for about 20 years.

"It's a real suprise to us, because the ice was 46 inches thick, about 7 to 9 inches above normal," Taylor said. "But we've had a very warm spring, temperatures overnight have been around 42 degrees. You can see the base logs of the tripod now. They were buried 21 inches into the ice."

Last year the ice went out May 5 at 3:11 p.m. The $155,000 prize was split among 19 people.

Student art hanging

ODESSA — The UT Permian Basin Student Art Exhibition is hanging in the university's Third Floor Art Gallery through May 8.

The exhibition, an annual event, showcases the creative works of university art majors. A variety of mediums will be featured, including sculpture, ceramics, weaving, painting, drawing, printmaking and photography.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. Weekend hours vary. For more informaiton call 1-367-2123.

'Intimate Places' at gallery

Gallery 1114's exhibit "Intimate Places, Filled Spaces" features the works of two of its members artists, Michael Banschbach and M. Jurras Mayberry.

Gallery hours are Wednesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. For more information call 685-9944.

Puppet show 'Patchwork Girl' to benefit Casa

From Staff Reports

Casa de Amigos is pulling a few strings to bring Pix Smith and the Dallas Puppet Theater to Midland.

"The Patchwork Girl of Oz" will be performed 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. May 8 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The performances, which are co-produced by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, is the last of three shows staged during the Children's Performing Arts Series, a benefit for Casa de Amigos made possible in part by a $5,000 grant from ARCO.

"The Patchwork Girl of Oz" is the story of a lively patchwork girl named Scraps and a little Munchkin boy traveling through a magic land. Smith, founder of the Dallas Theater, based this show on one of L. Frank Baum's most famous Oz stories.

The CPAS was initiated in San Antonio by the Judson Montessori School in 1982.

Patron tickets are priced at $10 for a single show. General admission tickets are $7.50 for a single show. A 20 percent discount is being offered for groups of 25 or more. The show will be followed by an autograph party and refreshments.

For more information call Casa, 682-9701.

Fasken artwork displayed at Frame Corner

Fasken

"Floral Impressions and Southwest Imagery" by Paula Mallams Fasken are on display today through May 31 at the Frame Corner, 2205 N. Big Spring St.

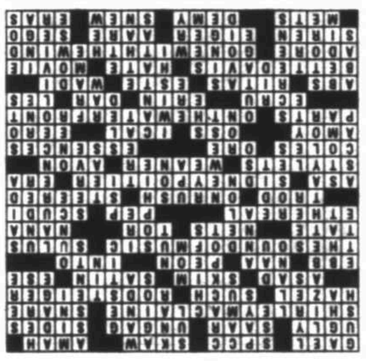

Mrs. Fasken's interpretation of subject matter is realistic in form but impressionistic in mood with emphasis placed on the underlying design.

Her formal academic training includes studying art history and design at the University of Kentucky. She credits nationally known watercolorists Judi Betts, Naomi Brotherton, Millard Sheets and Robert E. Wood with having added to her love and knowledge of watercolor painting.

A native of Wichita Falls, Mrs. Fasken has shown work in regional and national juried exhibitions as well as in invitational and solo shows. She has been affiliated with several state watercolor societies and has been an associate member of National Watercolor Society and American Watercolor Society.

Her paintings hang in private and public collections throughout the United States. This August she will be teaching, by request, a workshop at Carrizo Lodge Art School, Ruidoso, N.M.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, MAY 2, 1988

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Bing Crosby, Jordan's King Hussein, actor Brian Aherne, actor Theodore Bikel, Catherine the Great, singer Larry Gatlin, music genius Lorenz Hart, pediatrician Dr. Benjamin Spock, actor David Groh.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Find a place where you can establish strong roots and your close relationships will prosper. Money negotiations will turn in your favor if you are totally candid. State your needs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can expect a positive reaction to your ideas if you have the research to back them up. Practical solutions are best for you and those around you. Do not press your luck where money is concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your keeping an open mind bodes well for your relationships. Pay attention to details and your career will stay on track. A home-cooked meal is the first step to romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to see more than one side of an issue makes you a strong candidate for a promotion. A friendship will survive a challenge if you remain loyal. Travel brings new happiness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An unresolved labor-management problem requires prompt attention. Recent investments thrive. Spend time with your children or pets this evening. Cook a special meal for someone who feels under the weather.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be willing to shoulder more responsibilities and you will gain more power. Face a personal problem head-on; there are several possible solutions. An unexpected check arrives in the nick of time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A second career could put you in a higher income bracket. Seek better returns on your investments. Get all guarantees in writing. Let a new relationship take on a life of its own. Do not reveal too much too soon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Complete all projects on time and forget about doing things by committee. Trust your instincts; they are right on target. Originality is the key to greater success in career, romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hidden factors could hinder some of your efforts. Others will irritate you with their indecision. Concentrate on projects you can complete on your own. Loved one gives you a helping hand in an emergency.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A great time to negotiate contracts and apply for loans. Joint resources can be handled more effectively. Your creative talents impress those in authority. You could receive a substantial offer. Build savings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seek experts' advice on increasing profits. A new project can be launched without the backing of an influential person. Use your social contacts judiciously. Romance takes a fascinating turn. Be very discreet.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A conflict at work could prove enlightening. Your associates' true motives are revealed. Improve your relations with overseas contacts. A persuasive friend tries to talk you into something. Think twice. Protect your resources.

Opening lead: King of ♠ Hercule Poirot, the great detective in so many of Agatha Christie's murder mysteries, always harped on using the gray cells. He would have made a great bridge player, for simple deduction and logic often makes the game look easy. This hand was made for the thoughtful Belgian.

As played by most, South's jump to three hearts was invitational. North reasoned that his partner probably held a singleton club, and judged that his prime controls in the side suits and ruffing value in diamonds merited going on to game.

West led the king of clubs, and East signalled with the eight. It was time for the opening leader to take some time to consider what he knew about the hand.

For his jump to three hearts, declarer surely held a good six-card suit and, more likely than not, the king in his partner's suit. And East had to have four clubs for his raise, so declarer was marked with a singleton. Therefore, the defenders had to take three tricks in the red suits, and take them quickly, if they were going to prevail.

Since the trump ace was the only fast trick, West saw that his partner had to have the queen of diamonds to give his side a fighting chance. So at trick two he shifted to the king of diamonds. Declarer grabbed the ace and led a trump. West won and continued with the jack of diamonds. East alertly overtook with the queen to continue the suit, and West ruffed with the nine to administer a one-trick set.

While we salute the defense, declarer should have made his contract. All he needed to do was hold up the ace of diamonds for one round. If you don't believe us, try it.

MCT schedules auditions for play 'The Nerd'

From Staff Reports

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's production of "The Nerd" will be held at 7:30 p.m. today and Monday in the Redfern Room, Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Parts are available for five men and two women.

In "The Nerd," the original Mr. Nice Guy, an architect, is celebrating his birthday with his girlfriend, his best friend, a stuffy client, the client's wife and their bratty child. The architect's problems — his girlfriend has taken a job as a weather girl at a TV station, the IRS is auditing him, the client doesn't like his designs — seem minor when The Nerd shows up at his door.

Ages range from the child, who may be either a girl or a boy between the ages of 11 and 14, and the others who are in their late 20s to 40s.

"The Nerd" was written by Larry Shue, author of "The Foreigner," which was staged by MCT in May of 1987.

For more information, or a copy fo the script, call MCT's business office, 682-2544.

TV network to host longest train ride

NEW YORK (AP) — The exotic Orient Express, which normally runs between Paris and Istanbul, will be taking a 12,400-mile, 23-day sentimental journey from Paris to Hong Kong next fall, the longest train ride in history.

A Japanese television network announced last week that it will charter the venerable train for a jaunt into the record books, with stops in Cologne, East Berlin, Warsaw, Moscow, Novosibirsk, Irkutsk and Beijing.

The cost for each of the 90 passengers: about $15,000.

Travelers completing the journey will receive a certificate from the Guinness Book of World Records affirming their participation in the world's longest train trip, according to spokesmen for the Fuji Television Network.

Guinness lists the nine-day journey from Lisbon to Khabarovsk in the Soviet Union as the longest rail journey on record.

Orient Express '88 is being sponsored by Fuji in honor of the network's 30th anniversary. Publicists for Fuji said the 16-car train will depart Paris on Sept. 2 and is scheduled to arrive in Hong Kong on Sept. 25.

That will mark the end of the line for the 45 couples aboard — 15 each from America, Europe and Asia — but the train will keep going by ship to Japan, where it will be used for a series of excursions for two more months.

Among the difficulties involved in the journey are the different gauges of track in Europe, the Soviet Union and Japan.

The cuisine will vary along with the landscape. The chefs will be French from Paris to Moscow, Russian from Moscow to Zabaikalsk and Chinese from there to Hong Kong.

Muppets, Sesame Place attraction for family vacation

Copley Photo

A wide variety of rides please amusement seekers of all ages at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif. Disneyland is just one tourist attraction for a family vacation.

By NANETTE WISER
Copley News Service

Did you know the world's largest prairie chicken roams the streets of Rothsay, Minn.? Or that the world's largest shrimp holds court in Houston? It's just part of the fun of discovering America by car this season.

Most everyone knows about Epcot in Orlando, Fla., or Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., but there are hundreds of tourist attractions and amusement parks to explore with your family. To research the pastimes along your vacation path, check out books and atlases, including "Roadside America" by Jack Barth, Doug Kirby, Ken Smith and Mike Wilkins (Simon & Schuster) and "Festivals U.S.A." by Kathleen Thompson Hill (John Wiley & Sons Inc.).

"Are we there yet?" the kids will cry as your windshields are wiped and the oil checked. You can't miss the signs to these places, and your photos will be proof that the kids weren't the only sightseers.

Sesame Place (Langhorne, Pa.)

This 21st century action-oriented play park features live entertainment and appearances by the Muppets and is only 30 minutes from Philadelphia. Children can explore the features of light, watch talented macaws and cockatoos perform, record their own video performance and experiment with other hands-on science and kid-powered equipment.

Busch Gardens (Williamsburg, Va.)

This European-themed family park offers four villages, all alive with music and dance. The rides are as much fun as the frolicking and the food. Bumper cars, carousels, skyrides and a serpentine roller coaster are just part of the fun. The nearly 30 attractions are geared to each village's theme. In the German village the Big Bad Wolf plunges 80 feet to the Rhine River below. In the French village, take a spin in a Le Mans-replica motorcar, or ride the Le Scoot Flume at the Canadian logging village of New France.

Disneyland (Anaheim, Calif.)

Not enough can be said about Michael Jackson in 3-D, the Star Tours space shuttle, the Matterhorn roller coaster and a tour through the underground caverns of the Pirates of the Caribbean. The shops, the food, the Disney characters, even Mr. Toad's Wild Ride and other fairy tale trips through dioramas dripping in Peter Pan and Alice In Wonderland never cease to be amazing.

And at night, it's a '50s party or a spin around the town square to the best Dixieland jazz in Southern California. Top the night off with fireworks and a tram ride back to the Disneyland Hotel.

Rock City (Lookout Mountain, Ga.)

Just south of Chattanooga, Tenn., this natural wonder was once the private walk-through garden of the inventor of miniature golf, Garnet Carter. Mixing natural rock formations with concrete elves, it's considered one of the attractions in the Great Smoky Mountains worth seeing. Suspension bridges, a view of three states from Lover's Leap, a 1,000-ton balanced rock and Fairyland Caverns are some of the highlights of the trek down the flagstone walkway.

Descend through underground rooms covered with fake crystals, stalagmites and stalactites, presided over by demonically grinning and glowing elves. Dioramas depict children's fables while the "Dance of the Sugar Plum Fairies" echoes in the background. Next comes Mother Goose Village, a huge ultraviolet tableau inside a dark auditorium. Then back to the real world.

Performing Animals

If you miss Flipper, don't miss Sea World in San Diego. Shamu, the killer whale, and his friends romp and splash, and the high-dive shows are just as exciting. Of course, the shark tank and the penguin encounter can't be experienced too closely, but the view is well worth the crowds.

While in town, don't miss the San Diego Zoo's new Tiger River exhibit. And the monkey enclosures are among the best in the world!

Other notable animal acts around the country include Rex, the famous diving horse, at Magic Forest in Lake George, N.Y.; Henry the pole-vaulting fish in Wakulla Springs, Fla., viewed through their glass-bottomed boat; and Max, the performing electric eel in Florida's Marineland.

If you think it is impossible to love an alligator, check out the gator antics at the Gatorland Zoo in Kissimmee, Fla. Thousands of alligators smirk at you from the miniature train, but revenge is sweet at the snack bar, where you nibble on fried Gator Nuggets. Best of all is the Gator Jumparoo show — gators rocket out of the water to nab whole chickens from a cable five feet from the water.

Land of the Dinosaurs

Kids are brontosaurus busters these days, in case you haven't noticed the plethora of stuffed animals, stamps and stickers featuring these prehistoric denizens. So don't miss the wildlife museums such as Dinosaur Gardens in Vernal, Utah, home of the largest collection of full-size, anatomically correct dinosaurs.

At Prehistoric Gardens in Port Orford, Ore., the authentic jungle atmosphere and creatively colored dinosaur inhabitants will please the kids. You can shoot toy guns at the dinosaurs at The Prehistoric Forest park in Marblehead Ohio, but there's not too much historical education in this amusement park.

Stars A'Poppin'

Some folk heroes are authentic stars, such as Elvis Presley. Others gain fame through their fried chicken, such as Colonel Sanders. No matter what the honor, their homes and hearths should claim a place on your vacation itinerary.

Smokey the Bear has his own zip code — 20252. The Smokey Bear Museum in Capitan, N.M., National Forest tells the heroic Smokey story.

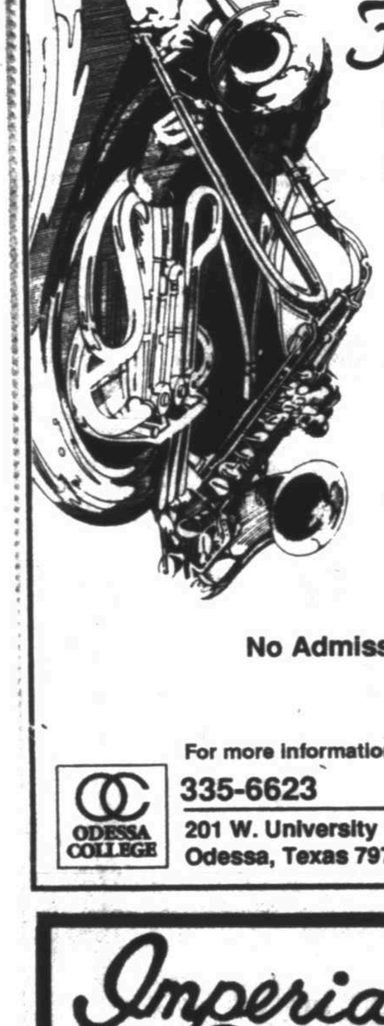

Mark Twain called Hannibal, Mo., home as a child, but the Hannibalians are crazy over Twain and celebrate his writings with Mark Twain Caves, a Mark Twain Museum and even a Mark Twain Dinette, famed for its fried chicken.

John Wayne wore eyepatches, and they show up at his home in Winterset, Iowa, and along with his guns and statue in the Frontier Historical Center in Temecula, Calif. At the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, there are two rooms dedicated to Wayne's personal collection of guns and saddles.

But perhaps the king of celebrity parks is the home of the king of rock 'n' roll himself, Elvis Presley. Start off at the Elvis Museum in Orlando, Fla., and see Elvis's wedding ring and karate outfit. Move on to the Elvis Hall of Fame in Gatlinburg, Tenn., for a look at a re-created Elvis bedroom and stop in at the World Of Illusion, where an Elvis hologram seems to sing. At the Country Music Hall of Fame in Nashville, Tenn., Elvis's solid-gold Cadillac and other cars will astonish you, but the best is Elvis-A-Rama.

'The Last Princess' ' message is money can't buy happiness

"The Last Princess," by Cynthia Freeman. Putnam. 382 Pages. $18.95.

By CAROL DEEGAN
Associated Press

Here is a truly boring story about a rude and unfaithful husband and his long-suffering wife.

Poor Lily. Hated by her parents, cut off from her inheritance, denied all opportunities for self-growth and development, she sticks by her Harry until the bitter end, when he redeems himself by dying of cancer.

Perhaps things wouldn't have been so bad if Lily had been one of those women who could distract herself by shopping, traveling and doing volunteer work. But one of the messages of "The Last Princess" by Cynthia Freeman is that although money buys country estates, expensive New York City apartments and countless designer dresses, it doesn't buy happiness. Lily is just as miserable being married to a successful novelist as she was when he was a poor and struggling author.

Harry is consumed by his work, driven to distraction by his unruly children and convinced that his wife fails to give him the emotional support he needs. (Never mind that she supported him both financially and emotionally when he was writing his first novel.)

Yet Harry refuses to give up Lily, and by doing so, he makes it impossible for her to leave him. His professed love for her endures, and why not? Lily refuses to fight back. She is the dutiful wife and mother, increasingly miserable as her children leave home and go away to school.

Meanwhile, Harry's agent waits in the wings to profess his love for Lily, thwarted first by his good manners and principles and then by Harry's fatal illness.

Will Lily ever find happiness? The answer is "yes."

Lily fakes a pregnancy and becomes a "late in life mother" to her daughter's illegitimate child. This child brings Lily unparalleled joy. And after Harry's death, the path is clear for Lily to find happiness with the man who has so patiently waited.

'The Icarus Agenda' has weak protagonist

"The Icarus Agenda," by Robert Ludlum. Random House. 677 Pages. $19.95.

By WAKA TSUNODA
Associated Press

Many Americans seem to be staying closer to home lately because of the weak dollar, terrorism or for other reasons. Evan Kendrick, the hero of Robert Ludlum's latest novel, "The Icarus Agenda," is one of them.

This is quite unusual for a Ludlum protagonist who usually hunts and is hunted in exotic locales all over the globe. Kendrick does get a taste of foreign intrigue in the Middle East, but the dramatic episode comes at the beginning of the novel and ends summarily. For the rest of the book, he hangs around Washington D.C., and Colorado with little to do.

Kendrick is a first-term congressman from Colorado. A millionaire construction engineer who formerly operated his own company in the Persian Gulf, he has no further political ambitions, and after one term, he plans to return to the private sector.

One day, trouble comes. Some, however, may not consider it trouble at all: A group of people want to run Kendrick for president of the United States — without his knowledge or consent to be sure — because they feel they need a good man and believe Kendrick is it.

Kendrick shows some spirit at first, and looks like he will make an interesting protagonist for a political novel, if not for an international suspense novel. But soon he becomes a bore as he keeps whimpering, "I'm not interested in a political career," or "I'm not qualified" to be president of the United States.

With a weak protagonist and little suspense, "The Icarus Agenda" probably is the least exciting of Ludlum books.

For Renaissance specialist, authenticity standard is in the ear

NEW YORK (AP) — Though the Tallis Scholars seldom sing anything more recent than the 17th century, Peter Phillips doesn't consider the group to be part of the early music revival.

Nor does the young conductor worry very much whether the Scholars mimic the sound of the Renaissance.

"We can't possibly guess, and we can't possibly know," he said during the British group's recent U.S. tour. "It's not like digging up an instrument which has been buried, and reanimating it."

The standard of authenticity, for Phillips, boils down to what sounds good. "I hope that is based on how the choirs were constituted, and how it did sound in the 16th century," he added.

The Scholars are now the busiest exponents of sacred music of the Renaissance, and are doing well enough to sustain their own label, Gimell.

Tallis Scholars recordings have a heavily English flavor, with two by Thomas Tallis, two more featuring the music of William Byrd and the Missa Gloria Tibi Trinitas of John Taverner.

There is also a single recording of music by the contemporary composer John Tavener, who was commissioned by the Scholars.

However, the group's best seller has been its recording of two masses by Josquin Desprez, a Flemish composer who died in 1521. The performance was honored as record of the year for 1987 by Grammophone magazine.

Debates about the performance of ancient music are often heated, and at times extreme. Phillips said he has heard it categorically stated that the music of Palestrina was meant to be sung one voice to a part, and that the music of Lassus ideally should have 12 voices per part — though the two men were contemporaries writing in similar styles.

"Experts tend to have their hobbyhorses, I find," Phillips said. "I can't afford to get bogged down with these endless details, and not see my way through to a good performance.

"In the end, I am most interested in preserving this beauty of sound, and I will not let dogmatic authenticity get in the way."

The voice he wants, Phillips says, is one "which can sustain a contrapuntal line without distorting the texture, and that requires singing in tune and without very much vibrato."

The group which toured this country included two basses, two tenors, two countertenors (male altos) and four women sopranos. The use of women, rather than boy sopranos, is Phillips' most obvious departure from the practice of the 16th century.

Phillips argues that "authentic" boy sopranos are no longer available, because boys' voices now break at age 12 or 13. In the 16th century, voices broke in the late teens, so the boy soprano of the time would have a riper voice and greater maturity as a musician.

Furthermore, Phillips said it is likely that women were used in some Renaissance music, such as Byrd's later works for the private chapels of Roman Catholic families. Whether that music was for one voice or two voices per part, Phillips said, "was very much a question of how many people turned up for service."

Phillips, 35, was never a choirboy — "my parents did not think of it, they aren't musical" — but he became interested in Renaissance music as an undergraduate at Winchester College. He won an organ scholarship at St. John's College, Oxford, where he claims to have been a very indifferent performer.

In the early 1970s, he came under the spell of David Wulstan's choral group, the Clerkes of Oxenford, which was founded in the 1960s and used women. The Tallis Scholars were found in 1973, and became a fully professional group in 1978.

The Scholars are the only group recorded by Gimell, the Oxford-based label which Phillips founded in partnership with Steve C. Smith after cutting two records for EMI.

"It was obvious they weren't particularly interested," Phillips said. "They wanted a money-spinner."

With his own label, Phillips has been able to record the music of composers such as Clemens non Papa, who is obscure even within the small world of early music. Gimell will soon release what is apparently the first recording of music of Sarum chant, the liturgical music of medieval England.

Dirty Dancing tour heads for the hills

NEW YORK (AP) — Movies, the wags once said, killed vaudeville. Will "Dirty Dancing" bring vaudeville back?

Promoters of the Dirty Dancing Concert Tour hope it will. A company of dancers and rockers, including Eric Carmen and Grammy winner Bill Medley, will bump and grind their way through 120 cities, starting May 29 at the Concord Hotel in the Catskill Mountains, where part of the movie was shot.

"Dirty Dancing," set in 1963, has become a national phenomenon. Many fans have seen the picture more than a dozen times and have worn out their tapedecks playing the hit soundtrack.

The movie also has sparked a new interest in social dancing with classes specializing in the steps of the '60s — the jerk, the mashed potato, the bump, Latin dances, the monkey — popping up all over the country.

Even Barbara Walters has gotten into the "Dirty Dancing" craze and will twirl a step or two with the movie's co-star, Patrick Swayze, when she interviews him on her next interview special, on ABC on May 11.

Though the movie has a limp plot with little more to distinguish it than a hot soundtrack of '60s music and some occasional sexy dancing, it has grossed more than $140 million worldwide, the album has sold more than 12 million copies worldwide and more than 400,000 videocassettes of the movie are in circulation.

Michael Omansky, vice president for marketing of RCA Records, said the soundtrack has sold 7 million copies in the United States and "More Dirty Dancing" — songs that didn't get on the first LP — has sold 2 million. Forty-four percent of those buying the album are 24 to 44 years old.

"(I've Had) the Time of My Life," the duet performed in the movie by Medley and Jennifer Warnes, won a Grammy award for best duet and an Academy Award for best movie song.

"In eight months the American public has spent over a quarter of a billion dollars on the 'Dirty Dancing' phenomenon," said Jon Peisinger, president of Vestron Video.

The tour will have eight dancers, including two who appeared in the movie, as well as Medley, Carmen, Merry Clayton and the Contours. It was conceived by David Fishof, who produced the Monkees reunion tour in 1986.

Tickets for the June 14-16 performances at the 6,000-seat Radio City Music Hall went on sale April 20 and sold out in 24 hours. Two extra dates were added.

Medley's biggest hit record was "You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin'" with Bobby Hatfield as the Righteous Brothers' in 1964. During a recent rehearsal at Radio City, he said he first turned down singing in the movie because his wife was pregnant and he didn't want to leave her.

When the baby, a girl, was born, he told his wife, "'I'll be right back. I'm just going to record a song.' Two weeks ago I told her, 'I'm going out on tour. I'll be right back.'" He also has a 22-year-old son.

He showed his daughter's picture to Clayton, who sings "Yes" in the film. The singer, who had a hit duet, "You're the Reason I'm Livin'," with Bobby Darin in 1963, said, "I've got a boy and girl, too. They're like old people. My son played my son in 'Made to Order.'"

Joe Billingsley, an original member of the Contours said that when he first heard about doing "Dirty Dancing" he thought it was an X-rated movie. The Contours formed in 1959 and had its biggest hit, "Do You Love Me?" in 1962. The song is heard in "Dirty Dancing."

Carmen sings "Hungry Eyes" in "Dirty Dancing" when Swayze starts to teach Jennifer Grey how to dance. Carmen started in Cleveland in the early '70s with the Raspberries, who did "Overnight Sensation." He went solo in 1975 after the group split.

"I think it would have taken something like this to get me on the road again, something I haven't done in 10 years," he said.

Both "(I've Had) the Time of My Life" and "Hungry Eyes" were written by John DeNicola and Franke Previte, who were in a group called Franke and the Knockouts. They're now writing songs for an upcoming album by Swayze.

The movie also uses '60s music by the Four Seasons, Otis Redding, the Zodiacs, the Surfaris, the Drifters, the Shirelles, Mickey and Sylvia and the Five Satins.

Dorian Sanchez, a dancer in the movie, was also assistant to choreographer Kenny Ortega. She's choreographing some additional dances for the tour, which requires more group dancing than the movie did.
