API pushes 'new issue': lower taxes

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

HOUSTON — The oil industry lobby is mounting a spirited campaign against higher oil taxes, claiming it already is over-taxed and that any new assessments would endanger the nation's energy security.

"We can and must show that our industry is not — cannot be — a magic source of endless revenue," Charles J. DiBona, chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, told delegates at the trade group's annual convention Monday.

DiBona said new taxes on the oil industry would discourage domestic oil production, lead to a greater reliance on imported oil "and ultimately cause shortages and higher consumer prices" for energy.

DiBona gave little attention to the oil lobby's long and unsuccessful attempt to win congressional acceptance of faster decontrol of natural gas prices. That had been the central issue of the 1981 convention.

DiBona said at a news conference Monday that Democratic gains in the Nov. 2 elections made it "obviously more difficult" to win congressional approval of a plan for accelerating the decontrol of gas prices.

The trade group favors an acceleration of the present schedule for ending gas price controls. Under the current law, natural gas discovered after April 20, 1977, will be removed from federal price controls by Jan. 1, 1985. Gas discovered before that date will remain controlled indefinitely.

The tax issue gained greater attention at the group's meeting of about 2,000 oil executives because of a court ruling that the windfall profits tax on domestic oil production is unconstitutional. U.S. District Judge Ewing Kerr of Cheyenne, Wyo., ruled last Thursday that the tax was unlawful because it is not applied uniformly — some Alaskan oil is exempted.

DiBona said the possible tax proposals in the next session of Congress included a new windfall profits tax on natural gas, increases in the existing oil tax, additional taxes on refineries, more gasoline excise taxes and oil import fees.

"The main victims of excessive taxes levied against oil producers would be energy consumers," DiBona said. "They would not have the petroleum that this industry could no longer afford to find."

DiBona charged that "neither the public nor the government" understands that a higher tax burden on oil companies would reduce their ability to spend money on domestic exploration and development programs.

"The results for our nation could be disastrous," DiBona said.

Other oil executives echoed DiBona's concern about new energy taxes.

"The government looks to a convenient, big industry such as oil because they think it can be taxed more and more," without ill effects, said John K. McKinley, chairman of Texaco Inc.

Clifton C. Garvin Jr., the chairman of Exxon Corp., said that oil companies' available cash is "down substantially." He said, however, that he doubted oil would escape new taxes in 1983.

Garvin also said he saw signs that the domestic oil industry may be on the verge of a mild recovery. But he said that oil demand would not rebound as fully as the overall economy because of continuing improvements in conservation and substitution of other energy sources for oil.

Bingo balloting set for January

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

With ballot boxes still smoking after mid-term elections, voters will journey to the polls again Jan. 15, 1983, and decide whether bingo games should be legalized throughout Midland County.

The special election was approved unanimously by Midland county commissioners Monday during a regularly scheduled meeting after Janeice Builta, county elections administrator, produced a 2,022-signature petition from registered voters favoring a bingo vote.

Ms. Builta said the total number of signatures was greater than the 2,022 figure. But because only 1,894 signatures — 10 percent of the registered voters in the latest gubernatorial race — were needed to clear the way for a special election, no further counting was necessary, she said.

The 1980 Bingo Enabling Act allowed city and county governments the right to conduct local option bingo elections. The act demands that only non-profit organizations conduct bingo games and that proceeds be directed toward charity. It also permits a city or county to exact a 2 percent tax on gross bingo receipts.

Another petition drive earlier this year fell short of the required registered voter total. Midland voters approved the Bingo Enabling Act, a constitutional amendment, by a 2-to-1 margin in 1980's election.

The state comptroller's office raided a bingo game at Midland VFW Post 7208 Sept. 23, confiscating about $1,200 in proceeds.

On Oct. 25, the Midland County Grand Jury decided to take no action against the VFW post or about 150 participants in the illegal bingo game.

Jack Leonard, post commander and one of the petition drive leaders, was pleased with the special election announcement.

"I am really happy, it was quite a struggle," said Leonard, who estimated that at least 1,000 additional valid signatures were submitted to the election administrator.

Leonard said bingo backers will continue to push for the bingo issue in hopes of victory in January's election.

"We'll have bumper stickers, we'll advertise, we'll tell them where our money goes," he said. "I'm pretty sure it'll pass, I think they'll vote for it."

In other action, commissioners viewed pre-schematic diagrams of the courthouse addition and renovation

Conservative Republicans, Democrats sharing an 'interest'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unlikely but potent coalition of conservative Republicans and Democratic leaders is emerging in Congress to force the Federal Reserve Board to lower interest rates.

The prospect of a bipartisan bill that would pull down high interest rates is attracting Republican luminaries such as Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and GOP House Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi, and Democratic leaders such as Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia and House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, according to congressional sources.

Backers of such legislation say the effort will force the Federal Reserve — either voluntarily or by law — to abandon its current monetary policy for controlling inflation and return to the interest rate-setting policy it scrapped three years ago. They also claimed rates could be brought down without jeopardizing the success the Fed has achieved in lowering inflation.

Congressional emissaries delivered that message in a post-election meeting at the "Fed" last week with an aide to bank Chairman Paul A. Volcker: either the bank bring rates down or Congress will force it to. Some Fed critics contend the bank already has moved to lower rates to diffuse support for the legislation.

The Fed, although independent of the White House, is under the direct control of Congress, which created it and can abolish it.

"The prospects (of a bipartisan coalition) may be better than anyone believed at the beginning of our discussions," one Senate Democratic source said Monday. He, along with other congressional sources, asked not to be identified by name.

"This is one of the two or three major issues on the Democratic agenda when (the new) Congress convenes," the source said.

"We emphasized to the Fed that the coalition is serious and alive and intending to press the interest rate issue," said another source who attended last week's meeting. "It was not just an election issue."

The Fed's response was that while it would not commit itself to any policy changes, it is well aware it is a creature of Congress and is listening to what Congress has to say, Fed officials said.

The prospect of Congress setting monetary policy has perturbed Volcker, who said last spring that "transient political influences" on monetary policy could have adverse repercusssions for the economy. The Fed chairman also has personally lobbied members of Congress against interest rate legislation, the sources said.

Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress have been in agreement on few economic issues since Reagan moved into the White House.

Since midsummer, several interest rate bills have been introduced by congressmen of divergent economic views. Kemp and Lott are sponsoring one bill; the Senate Democratic leadership has sponsored another one, and House Democratic leaders are pushing a third.

United Way near end of fund-raising effort

Less than two days remain in the United Way of Midland's fall fund-raising campaign, and almost $200,000 is yet to be pledged.

Campaign chairman Joe Kloesel said Monday that the success of the campaign depends upon the generosity of each individual in Midland County. "If new residents and people who have not previously contributed will step forward this year and help us out, we could make our goal," he said. "We cannot, however, depend on previous givers to bear the entire increase."

By Monday afternoon, campaign pledges totaled $1,412,170.60, or 87.6 percent of this year's goal of $1.612,000. Last year's campaign raised $1,407,895, which represented more than a 20 percent increase over the amount raised in 1980.

"The economy was hit harder at some sectors of this year's campaign than others," Kloesel explained. "We have experienced losses that could not have been predicted at the time our campaign goal was set."

Kloesel went on to explain that the potential does exist for the goal to be reached by Wednesday night "if individuals and firms come forward to contribute." The United Way's Victory Dinner celebration is scheduled Wednesday night at Midland Center.

Unlike some cities, Midland's United Way prefers not to extend its campaign timetable. "Momentum is lost, and the community is not as motivated to respond past its original deadline," Kloesel explained.

Funds raised in this fall's campaign will be used to help support programs and services of 20 United Way participating organizations which help meet the needs of Midland County residents. During the past year, United Way participating agencies have dealt with a steadily increasing client load, as well as with decreasing federal funding.

Midland's United Way is coordinating a community-wide task force to address possibilities of new ways for the public and private sectors of the city to deal with the needs affected by these federal budget cuts.

Hospital hearings begin with call for two facilities

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Joint hearings began today at the Texas Health Facilities Commission on two proposed hospital facilities in Midland, with the administrator of an existing hospital saying there is a need for two full-service hospitals in the city.

Richard C. "Dick" Liley, administrator at Parkview Hospital, which has sumbitted an application to the commission for a new 110-bed hospital called Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin, testified it would not be possible to expand Parkview.

"We could expand Parkview Hospital and remodel, but that's not possible since the site is on 2.5 acres of land," Liley said, pointing out additional land cannot be purchased since the hospital is "locked in" by surrounding streets.

Midland Memorial Hospital, which would be in competition with the proposed Doctors Hospital, is opposing the application. Testimony from MMH's witnesses is scheduled to begin next week.

MMH has submitted an application to the commission requesting approval to construct two building additions totaling 76,950 square feet, and to renovate 10,390 square feet of the existing facility.

American Medical Corporation of Tennessee, which owns Parkview and the proposed Doctors Hospital, has said it is not opposed to both projects being approved, but MMH officials do not think that would be feasible.

New services to be offered at Doctors Hospital — not available at Parkview — include cardiac stress testing, labor and delivery services, nursery services, social services, nuclear medicine and ultrasound, Liley said. Such deliveries at Parkview "all stem from space (limitations)," he said. "It's not viable to continue operating Parkview Hospital as it is."

Modern hospitals have between 700 and 1,000 square feet of space per bed, Liley testified, and Parkview has 462 square feet per bed. "It's totally inadequate," he said.

Doctors Hospital would contain 92 medical and surgical beds, 10 obstetrical beds and eight intensive care beds, compared to 58 medical and surgical and two intensive care beds presently at Parkview, Liley said.

Plans call for Parkview to cease operation as a full-service hospital, he added, and to convert it into a free-standing psychiatric facility.

Liley said Doctors Hospital could be completed within 12 to 14 months, and construction could begin six months after the project is approved by the commission.

Don Miller, an architect who helped design the proposed medical facility, was scheduled to testify late Tuesday after Liley.

Hearing officers Gordon W. Hardin said the joint hearing should be completed in two weeks.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Snow flurries are forecast for Wednesday for the northern Plains, changing to rain over Minnesota and the upper Great Lakes. The National Weather Service also predicts showers for Southern California and the Southwest. Cold weather is expected for the West and Northeast, with other areas likely to be warm.

Little change seen in weather forecast

The following weather forecast, since it so closely parallels Monday's...and Sunday's...and so on, is being printed for the benefit of anyone who used the above mentioned days' newspapers to peel spuds.

Be advised that tonight should be partly cloudy with a low hovering near 50 degrees Winds should be southerly tonight at 10-15 mph, cranking up to 10-20 mph Wednesday. Wednesday's high should be near 70.

Monday's high of 72 landed 14 degrees shy of the record 87 set in 1934. The overnight low of 53 nearly doubled the record low 27 set in 1948.

No precipitation for the past 24 hours leaves monthly and yearly rainfall amounts at a trace and 12.63 inches.

Sunset tonight is at 5:53 p.m.; sunrise Wednesday is at 7:13 a.m.

Bingo balloting scheduled presented by Walter Pate, of Pate-McLaughlin Architects.

Pate said the pre-schematic drawings, which indicate the location of various county departments within the courthouse complex, is a preliminary step before architects begin assembling plans for the location of specific courthouse offices.

Pate outlined several changes in department locations for the commissioners, seeking their approval before planning continues on the project.

He said a re-shuffling of courthouse space could move the Justice of the Peace court and the constable's office, formerly slated for first floor space, onto the ground floor along with sheriff's facilities.

Relocating the Justice of the Peace court and the constable's office would allow placement of county commissioner's court on the first floor instead of the third, Pate said. Adult probation offices could also be moved to the first floor from its present location in the courthouse annex at 218 Illinois Ave., he said.

Finally, with commissioner's court removed from the third floor, office space could be found there for district clerk and county treasurer and auditor, he said.

After commissioners granted approval for the preliminary plans, Pate said he expects to appear before them again Dec. 13 with schematic diagrams of specific office layouts.

In their morning session, the commissioners canvassed voting returns from the Nov. 2 election. A few discrepancies were discovered, none of wich affected local races.

Humid conditions blanket some areas

By The Associated Press

Cloudy skies moved in over much of Texas early today as moisture from the Gulf of Mexico promised to bring humid conditions to the state.

A band of low cloudiness stretched from the coastal bend into Central Texas. High clouds covered most eastern and western sections of the state.

Clear skies were the rule across the Lower Rio Grande Valley and West Texas.

Wazzan's cabinet given right to rule Lebanon by decree

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Parliament gave Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and his new Cabinet an overwhelming vote of confidence today, granting the government sweeping powers to rule by decree for six months.

Wazzan originally demanded the powers for eight months to introduce major reforms in security, defense, taxation, reconstruction and education. The shorter period granted by Parliament was an apparent compromise to allay fears of giving the Cabinet too much power.

The vote was 57-1 in favor of allowing Wazzan's 10-man Cabinet, formed Oct. 8, to decree laws without legislative approval. The vote followed a week-long debate in the one-house Parliament.

In another development, the authoritative An-Nahar newspaper reported today that Israeli and Lebanese officials would meet here within 48 hours to begin negotiations over the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon.

It said arrangements for the meeting were made by U.S. envoy Morris Draper and President Amin Gemayel. Israel reportedly has agreed in principle to the talks, but there were disputes over where they would be held and at what level.

Lebanese government spokesmen refused to comment on the An-Nahar report, which said the disputes had been settled.

In Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir predicted that negotiations on the evacuation of foreign forces from Lebanon would take several months, a senior official said.

Shamir told an eight-member delegation of the Mideast subcommittee of the U.S. House Foreign Affairs Committee that Syria's attitude was "not helpful and negative because it is not willing to do anything to secure the withdrawal" of Palestinian forces under Syrian control, the senior official said.

The congressmen asked if the negotiations could be concluded by the end of the year, and Shamir replied that "it is a question of months" before he expected an agreement, the official told reporters.

The delegation, headed by subcommitteee chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., also met with Prime Minister Menachem Begin but made no comment to reporters after either meeting.

An-Nahar, quoting unnamed Lebanese officials, said Draper and Gemayel agreed that the talks would be held at the Lebano Beach hotel, four miles south of the center of Beirut, starting by Thursday.

Three leaders seeking Brezhnev's post

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's health is so poor that he is only in symbolic charge in the Kremlin while three top contenders jockey to succeed him, according to U.S. intelligence estimates.

The three are Yuri Andropov, former head of the KGB, the secret police; Konstantin Chernenko, the failing leader's closest associate in recent years; and Victor Grishin, head of the Communist party in Moscow.

A fourth erstwhile contender, Andrei Kirilenko, 76, is himself in poor health and no longer considered in the running. Intelligence sources here said Kirilenko will be dropped from the ruling Politburo when it meets Nov. 15 and also will be taken off top defense committees.

"Brezhnev keeps going up and down, but each time he comes back he comes back at a lower level of energy," said one U.S. official who watches Kremlin developments closely.

"He's able to cope, and it's clear that he may go on for a number of years still," the official said recently. "But his abilities to manage all the complexities of government are decreasing over time."

Another official who also keeps tabs on the Soviet hierarchy said of Brezhnev: "He's always been in bad shape."

The Soviet leader, 76 next month, no longer chairs committee meetings. "He really isn't running the country anymore," said this knowledgeable official. But he said the Kremlin decided it was preferable to retain Brezhnev in office than have an open fight over succession.

The Soviet leader's infirmities, and the quiet struggle over succession, obviously are of acute interest to the Reagan administration.

An Analysis

There is a growing consensus that despite the infighting, the Soviet decision-making process remains vigorous — largely through the combined strengths of Andropov, Chernenko, Andrei A. Gromyko, the veteran foreign minister, Dmitri Ustinov, the defense minister, and Nikolai A. Tikhonov, the premier.

They are said to set policy and get Brezhnev to approve it, although there is no formal agreement on how to keep the Kremlin operating when the president is absent or unable to function.

"I don't see any sign at all of paralysis," said a U.S. official as he described the largely informal Soviet arrangement.

Ironically, despite hard-line rhetoric from Moscow, a number of U.S. policy makers interviewed recently are convinced that during the transition period the Soviets might be more inclined to reach arms control agreements with the United States and follow a less bellicose course around the world.

They see precedents in the 1953-54 and 1965 periods, after the death of Josef Stalin and the forced retirement of Nikita Khrushchev, when the Soviets masked internal uncertainty by showing an interest in reaching understandings with the West.

Coit Blacker, a Soviet military analyst at Stanford University, referred to the process recently as seeking "a kind of breathing space."

The theory will be tested mainly at Geneva, where the United States and the Soviet Union are engaged in two sets of arms control negotiations.

One seeks to reduce strategic nuclear missiles on both sides. The other is designed to cut back or eliminate the basing of medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

Instead of sweeping aside President Reagan's proposal last May for a one-third reduction in intercontinental warheads, the Soviets have responded with a counter-offer that is described by some here as "fairly substantial."

Insurance group contests compensation judgement

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A $48,000 workers' compensation judgement in favor of a former city police officer is being contested by Texas Employers Insurance Association, the company that handles workers' comp claims for the city.

TEIA filed suit in 142nd State District Court Oct. 26 to vacate an award by the Industrial Accident Board in favor of former police Lt. Ed Ward, who left the force Aug. 31, 1981, after 21 years of service.

TEIA says in the suit that the IAB "award is unjust and defendant (Ward) is not entitled to recover workers' compensation benefits in the amount and for the time claimed."

The suit, filed on behalf of TEIA by the law firm of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson, does not elaborate as to why the judgement is being contested and company spokesman Sherman Smith said this morning he could not comment on the matter because he wasn't "all that familiar with it."

The award was made at an Oct. 25 IAB hearing which determined that Ward should receive $48,194.13 for permanent incapacitation resulting from injuries suffered in a July 1981 fall he claims aggravated a job-related traffic accident that occurred in November 1962.

The 1962 accident damaged Ward's right hip and he received an artifical hip in 1977. On July 23, 1981, according to Ward, he fell while on duty and was told by doctors he eventually would have to have the hip operated on again.

Late last spring or early summer, according to Personnel Director David Hunter, the city began participating in a joint insurance fund operated by the Texas Municipal League, with TEIA acting as administrative agent and having "sole authority to pay or contest a claim."

Ward, who is being represented by Odessa attorney Warren Heagy, declined comment on the case. Heagy filed a formal response to the TEIA suit Monday and also declined comment.

Heagy is the lawyer who successfully sued the city in the Calvin Jezek case, which resulted in a $1 million judgement against the city.

The state supreme court ruled last year that the city was largely responsible for the 16-year-old youth's death because it had failed to properly maintain a weed-grown T-intersection where Jezek's car collided with another vehicle in 1976.

Building evacuated after bomb threat

Police late this morning began evacuating the twin, 14-story towers of the Midland National Bank building after a bomb threat that "was taken seriously this time," said an employee of the bank who asked to remain anonymous.

The evacuation began about 10:50 a.m. and employees were told to stay away until 1 p.m. "The building has had two or three bomb threats this year," said the bank employee. "But this is the first time it's been evacuated."

No details were available by press time.

TAC reschedules refueling seminar

The Texas Aeronautics Commission (TAC) has rescheduled an aircraft refueling safety seminar for tonight at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at Midland Regional Airport.

The session, set for 7 to 10 p.m., was originally scheduled last week, but was postponed when the supplies necessary to conduct the session didn't arrive. Attendance and materials will be free. Co-sponsors will be Chaparral Aviation and the Federal Aviation Administration.

The seminar is an effort to counter the increasing rate of accidents and fatalities associated with the use of incorrect fuels in aircraft. It is tailored for those involved with line service and fueling operations at airport's fixed base operations. Some of the topics will include types of aviation fuel, aircraft identification, ramp safety and aircraft refueling techniques.

Will Poland make pope's visit a ploy?

By THOMAS W. NETTER

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The announcement of Pope John Paul II's planned visit to Poland was the most dramatic of recent government moves that one official calls "persuasive measures" to thwart a strike call by the Solidarity underground.

The measures range from public warnings of "firm" government action to quell protests to subtler maneuvers such as enforcement of attendance rules at factories and schools.

The government, meanwhile, has kept up its direct attack on Solidarity, seizing clandestine printing presses, transmitters and leaflets, and arresting key underground leaders, including Wroclaw Solidarity chief Piotr Bednarz and 12 of his lieutenants last Sunday.

At the time, the underground was reeling from the capture of Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, Bednarz's predecessor on the four-man "temporary national commission" set up in April to run the underground union.

Solidarity — which had been suspended since the Dec. 13, 1981, imposition of martial law — was banned Oct. 8.

The government launched its "persuasion" campaign two weeks ago, after the outlawed union leadership called for an eight-hour nationwide strike and protests Wednesday, the second anniversary of the court registration of Solidarity.

Union die-hards also called for protests to coincide with the first anniversary of martial law.

An Analysis

On Monday, a joint announcement by martial law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and Roman Catholic Archbishop Jozef Glemp said the pope would visit Poland next June. It would be the second visit by John Paul, once Cardinal of Krakow, to his homeland.

The government could be counting on the announcement to divert the attention of Poland's devout workers from the Solidarity protests, and as a show of its confidence that Solidarity has been vanquished.

"It's obvious they hope to use it (the announcement) as a bargaining chip when Solidarity supporters are calling for major disturbances," one Polish journalist commented.

Earlier, Jaruzelski had said the pope's visit depended on an end to social unrest and protests.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban has described the recent government moves as "persuasive measures." They include the following:

— Warnings that people should make sure they are working Wednesday so they cannot be accused of "pretending" to work or of striking. Some workers have said they received such admonitions from their superiors.

— Circulating work regulations on attendance and duties to foremen, and making them sign documents saying they are aware of them so they cannot claim ignorance if some workers disappear from their work posts or shirk duties.

— Circulars ordering university professors and lecturers to take careful attendance on Wednesday.

— A new law on work shirkers providing prison terms ranging from three months to two years for those who, once fired from their jobs, refuse to accept work assigned by the authorities.

— A new law on juvenile delinquency holding parents responsible for actions of their children.

— Threats of "militarization" of factories, or putting them under military discipline that mandates prison terms of up to six years for failing to obey orders.

This has created a sense of anxiety among many workers, but there still appears to be defiance of the military regime.

Government posters, emblazoned with the caption "enough" and calling for law and order, at first were marked by graffiti saying "enough murders." This week, stickers reading "strike" were slapped on some of the posters.

But a communique issued by the government over Polish television on Monday warned: "If the organizers of disturbances do not draw conclusions from their record of failure and accompanying tragedies, the authorities will not refrain from using means indispensable for the protection of peace, order and uninterrupted work.

"The Polish state has at its disposal sufficient forces and resources to enforce peace and respect for the law, including that resulting from martial law," it said.

Harrelson tells of love for two on tape

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Charles V. Harrelson and his wife did not exchange glances as jurors heard tape recordings in which Harrelson professed his love to two other women and urged them not to talk to the FBI about the contract slaying of a federal judge.

"I love you so much," Harrelson told Jo Ann Robinson in a conversation secretly recorded by the FBI on Nov. 18, 1980. "...God, I miss you."

"I dream of you every time I go to sleep," he told wealthy El Paso businesswoman Virginia Farah in a phone conversation recorded the next day. "...Virginia, I love you."

Mrs. Robinson, the wife of Harrelson's friend Hampton Robinson III, and Mrs. Farah, a widow, are witnesses for the prosecution in the trial of Harrelson, his wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, and Elizabeth Chagra in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The Harrelsons, seated two chairs apart at the defense table, did not look at each other while the tapes were played Monday, but he whispered something as both were being returned to jail for the night.

In earlier testimony, Harrelson's 25-year-old stepdaughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, testified for the government that she had an "affair" with him in late 1979 and early 1980. While Mrs. Jasper was jailed for refusing to testify before a grand jury about the killing, Harrelson wrote her a letter saying, "I love you with every fiber of my being."

In that letter and the phone calls to Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Farah, Harrelson tried to persuade the women to be distrustful of FBI agents, whom he referred to in obscene terms and contended were trying to frame him.

Harrelson, 44, is accused of killing Wood on May 29, 1979, for a $250,000 fee. Mrs. Harrelson, 41, is charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice, and Mrs. Chagra, 28, the wife of the man accused of paying for the judge's murder, is charged with conspiring to kill Wood and to obstruct justice.

Imprisoned narcotics trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra will be tried later on murder charges alleging he hired out the killing to prevent Wood from presiding over his pending drug trial. Joe Chagra, Jimmy's brother, has pleaded guilty to conspiring to kill Wood.

Mrs. Farah testified Monday that she employed Harrelson as a bodyguard briefly until he was arrested in Van Horn in September 1980 for jumping bond on state firearms, narcotics and gambling charges.

She said she knew Harrelson only as "Joe Robinson" and did not learn his true identity or that he was a fugitive until the arrest.

Mrs. Farah said she let Harrelson keep two stacks of $100 bills in her safe while he stayed at her house.

Also Monday, FBI ballistics expert Robert Sibert testified that the 18 bullet fragments taken from Wood's body "corresponded exactly" with a .243-caliber Weatherby Mark V deer rifle of the same kind as the suspected murder weapon. He said the fragments also match a 100-grain Hornaday .243-caliber, or 6mm, bullet made by Weatherby exclusively for the Mark V rifle.

Although the barrel and firing mechanism of the alleged murder weapon have not been found, the government has introduced as evidence the stock of a Weatherby Mark V found with the help of a map Joseph Chagra said he drew from a description given to him by Harrelson.

Prosecutors also have presented evidence that Mrs. Harrelson, using a false identity, bought a Weatherby Mark V at a Dallas sporting goods store 12 days before Wood was slain.

Bill would legislate hiring of kin

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1983 Legislature will be asked to approve a nepotism bill that would allow a school board to hire a superintendent's wife or husband as a teacher, if it took that to keep the superintendent.

"This is quite a serious problem in some of our school systems," said Chris Stanley of Dallas, a member of a subcommittee of the Public Servant Standards of Conduct Advisory Committee.

The proposed legislation, which will be presented to the full committee in December, generally would keep state agency officials from hiring kinfolks to the third degree, which includes great-grandparents or second cousins.

"This looks like a pretty good bill to me," said Speaker Bill Clayton, who sat in on the meeting. "Now who's going to help me lobby this through the next Legislature?"

Much of Monday's meeting concerned possible exemptions for "hardship" cases.

"I don't think we have many hardships," said Clayton. "Most of this is just another loophole to get around the law...If we open the door too wide what's to keep some supervisor from hiring all his cousins and aunts?"

Gary Hughes, a subcommittee member from Austin, said there had been requests for such an exemption from the Texas Department of Corrections.

"There are some areas of the state where the work forces are smaller and it may be a hardship to fill vacancies without getting those who are kin," he said.

Staff members said the Department of State Highways and Public Transportation also requested that "hardship" exemptions be allowed where two kinsmen had worked on the same payroll for a number of years.

The special amendment applying to school superintendents says a superintendent's spouse may be hired by the school board after an open public meeting if that is necessary to employ the superintendent.

Later another subcommittee of the Public Servants Standards of Conduct group discussed conflicts of interest among legislators, state officials and state employees but took no action. Members agreed to hold at least two more meetings on the subject before making recommendations to the full committee.

There was an informal agreement to consider conflict of interest legislation for state officials and employees separate from legislators and legislative branch employees. Legislation regarding local officials and employees will be discussed at a Nov. 19 meeting.

"I don't think we can specifically include legislators along with state officials and employees because they do not look to the state as a primary source of income," said Jack Gullahorn, Austin, subcommittee vice chairman.

Proposals presented the subcommittee, but not voted on, would say a state official or employee had a conflict of interest if he intentionally acted on any matter in which he had a financial interest of 10 percent of his holdings or $2,500.

It was proposed no former state official or employee be allowed to appear before a state agency or receive any services for a matter he acted upon while on the state payroll.

PUC will decide rate hike's fate

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. can only sit and wait now for the Public Utility Commission's decision whether to grant Bell its highest rate hike request yet — $471.5 million.

The rate increase would boost basic residential service by $4.60 per month.

A hearing on Bell's latest rate request concluded Monday after 10 weeks of testimony from customers, Bell officials and technical experts.

The commission is expected to rule on the case in early January, after the PUC hearing examiner files her report in December.

Meanwhile, Bell is putting the higher rates into effect under bond effective Nov. 23. Bell would have to make refunds to customers if the rate increase is turned down or reduced by the commission.

The PUC staff recommended a $304.5 million increase.

The Texas Municipal League, representing several cities served by Southwestern Bell, argued Bell merits only $217.9 million more per year in rates.

Except for 1978, the phone company has asked the commission for higher rates every year since 1976, when Bell filed the first rate hike request at the newly created PUC.

Presidential bid not ruled out for Texas legislator

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Will Texas Rep. Ron Paul run for President in 1984? As a Libertarian?

Not likely, says Paul. But a Libertarian Party splinter group maintains that the Lake Jackson Republican is seriously considering seeking the party's nomination.

The Libertarian Party Radical Caucus, which opposes a Paul candidacy, notes that the third-term Texas congressman recently had a meeting with a prominent party fundraiser. He also has been added as a commentator on a radio program produced by the party's former national chairman.

"I think it's obvious that he's running," says Justin Raimondo, a spokesman for the Radical Caucus. "I wish he would run so we can beat the pants off of him. He's a Republican, not a Libertarian."

Paul, who was unopposed for re-election last week in the 22nd Congressional District, concedes that he has been asked by high-level Libertarian party officials to "entertain the thought (of a presidential race)."

But he adds: "It's a wild idea...It's just a lot of speculation. I'm not seeking the nomination, or plan to in the forseeable future."

Paul has addressed several Libertarian Party forums in recent years and is a member of Libertarians for Life. But he disagrees with many of the Libertarian positions, such as support for abortion and gay rights. The Libertarian Party believes that the government should not interfere in the life of the individual.

Ed Crane, former national chairman of the Libertarian Party, said there is a "one-in-three chance" that Paul will seek the nomination.

"I talked to him recently and he said it was too early to make a decision," Crane added. "He would bring credibility to the ticket. It has been hard for the party to get serious news coverage."

Kathleen Jacobs, a spokeswoman for the party, agreed that Paul would give the fledging group sorely needed name recognition. Ed Clark, the party's 1980 presidential candidate, received less than 1 percent of the vote. But Jacobs said the Texas congressman would have a fight on his hands if he sought the party's top spot.

"'He's sympathetic to some of our positions but there would be a mixed reaction if he runs," Jacobs says.

Paul, a 47-year-old former physician, represents the 22nd Congressional District, which stretches from the south side of Houston across the coastal plain to the Brazosport area on the Gulf of Mexico.

Council halts sale of candy

LUBBOCK (AP) — The local chapter of the Camp Fire girls is looking for new ways to raise money after a needle was found in a cashew cluster, promting a recall of all candy in their current drive.

"We believe it is our duty to issue a statement about our candy and to suspend our candy sale," said Louise Cummins, president of the Camp Fire Council of Lubbock.

A teen-age boy Sunday night bit into a cashew cluster and exposed a needle and 15 inches of thread, Mrs. Cummins said Monday.

"No one was injured and we believe it to be an isolated incident," she said.

The Camp Fire girls suspended a $30,000 fund-raising drive and offered refunds to people who have already purchased candy from Camp Fire girls.

Mrs. Cummins said the Lubbock council has no idea how much candy has been sold since the drive began Saturday.

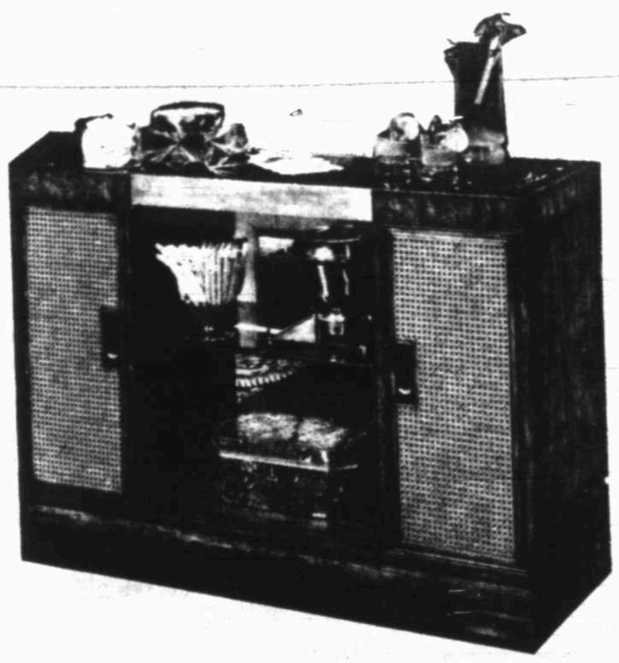

The Camp Fire council will develop alternatives to the $2.50 candy boxes to raise funds for activities, she said.

Lubbock police said they were investigating the incident, but did not think the box, wrapped in cellophane, had been tampered with after it left the factory.

The candy was manufactured by Falcon Candy Co. of Philadelphia, one of several companies that have contracts with Camp Fire councils, Mrs. Cummins said.

Telephone calls to the company were not answered Monday night.

Polling methodology may be weak but polls' mathematical basis sound

By LEE DEMBART
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Despite several election night gaffes in projecting winners, experts in statistics insist that while there may be shortcomings in the methodology of polling, its mathematical basis is sound.

Though it is hard to believe, the theory of probability says that it is possible with reasonable accuracy to make statements about a large number of people after polling a relatively small number of them. This is true in election polls as well as in the Nielsen Ratings, which estimate the size of television audiences.

It seems odd that pollsters can ask only 1,000 or so people what they think and extrapolate from that to an entire state or nation, but statistics say that it can work.

"The basis behind the whole theory is the pervasive notion of normal distribution," said Edward Packel of Lake Forest College, Ill. Because the population is theoretically regular, the sample size can be fairly small.

In fact, according to Gary Lorden, a professor of mathematics at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif., "it is not the ratio of sample size to total population that counts. Once the population size is fairly large, only the sample size matters. The margin of error of, say, 1,000 people is insensitive to the total size of the population.

"It doesn't matter whether it is 1,000 reflecting 20,000 people or 1,000 reflecting 1 million people."

The problem, he said, is analogous to the following: If someone gives you a big bag of apples and wants to know the ratio of red apples to green apples in the bag, how many apples would you have to take out before you felt confident you were reasonably certain of the answer? Not very many, the statisticians say. If the first 10 apples were red, the chances are very good that reds predominate in the bag.

Every sample will have some degree of uncertainty associated with it, which is related to the square root of the sample size. As a result, Lorden said, "In order to cut the uncertainty in half, you need to quadruple the sample size."

Thus, every poll is a compromise between the desire to reduce the uncertainty and the cost and difficulty of polling more and more people for smaller and smaller improvements in accuracy.

Most polls conducted nowadays, including the Los Angeles Times Poll, aim to be 95 percent certain of being within four or five points of accurate.

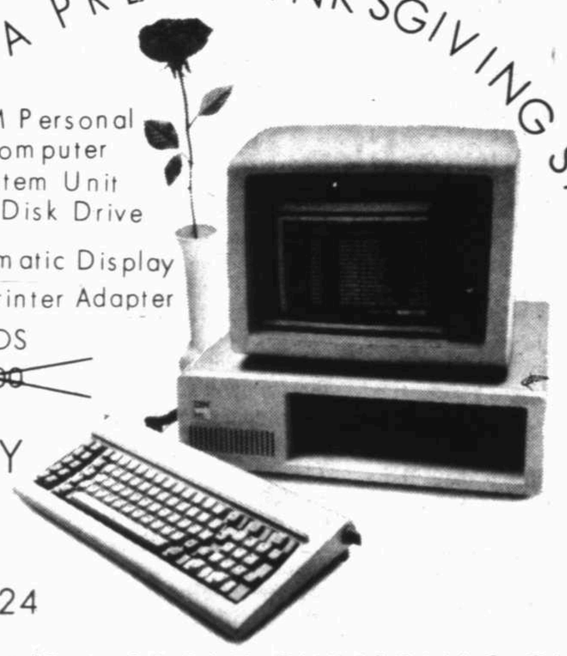

Which means that in theory, 5 percent of the time, the polls will be more than five points off. This is a statistical uncertainty built into the theory of polling and is not based on any error in choosing the sample.

"The fact that there's an occasional failure to predict correctly is to be expected," said Packel, who is the author of "The Mathematics of Games and Gambling," a recently published volume on the practical uses of probability theory.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Nov. 10, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actors Richard Burton and Roy Scheider, country music's Donna Fargo, New York Yankees superscout Birdie Tebbetts and the late great character actor Claude Rains were born on this date. Although your powerful personality makes some people fear you, it can help you gain a new leadership position in the coming year. Deliver your decisions with tact so that others do not confuse your quick action for ruthlessness. You need to develop better rapport with your associates. In romance, you are the object of several individuals' attention. Be careful not to take your loved ones for granted. Neglect can cause devotion to wither.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You make gains at the office. Talk with influential people over lunch. Offer your services to help another when the occasion arises. The favor will be repaid many times over!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will have no cause for complaint today. Things go extremely well at both work and home. Even the financial picture brightens. Play it cool. Avoid trying to rush romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are busy today but should still find a moment to check with your mate or parents. Self-improvement activities pay off handsomely. Postpone asking the boss for a favor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good time to tackle routine office tasks. Clear away the mail that has been piling up on your desk. Gossiping about your co-workers could backfire.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have all the talent needed to start a new business. Check the credentials of someone who asks questions. Financing will be easier to obtain if you have a definite plan and timetable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your co-workers are in a congenial mood. Use their cooperation to gain a foothold for a new project. Use any free time at home to plan your next career move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your career gains momentum. An overdue check arrives. Refuse to be pressured into doing something that your intuition tells you to avoid.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Extreme positions or undue anger will prevent you from moving forward. Be more patient at work. Exhaustive research pays rich dividends. All of your hard work is proved worthwhile.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You make a dazzling comeback after an error. All is forgiven. Do not make dates at the last minute. Careful planning is the key to success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A new project develops that will be both monetarily and emotionally satisfying. You can increase productivity by promoting closer cooperation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A last-minute phone call could turn your day upside-down. Mate is feeling a bit neglected. Plan a fun but inexpensive surprise for this evening. Let romance develop naturally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pursue a new idea even if people try to throw cold water on it. In time, you will be vindicated. A need for money may lead you to take part-time work.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

Some end plays cannot be avoided. But you don't always have to be ensnared in declarer's web. Preventive measures are possible.

North's decision to jump to four spades on a hand containing two aces is unusual. However, no better bid suggests itself — the hand is too weak for a jump raise, but too strong for a single raise, and no descriptive waiting bid is available. The jump to game was a practical solution.

West led the queen of diamonds. Declarer realized that, even if he guessed the club position correctly, he was in danger of losing four tricks — two in hearts and one in each minor. The only way out was to engineer an end play.

So declarer allowed the queen of diamonds to hold the first trick and won the continuation with the ace. A low club from the table went to the jack and West's ace. Now West shifted to a heart, but it was too late. Declarer took the ace, drew two rounds of trumps, cashed the king of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. With the minor suits eliminated, declarer exited with a heart. The defense had no counter.

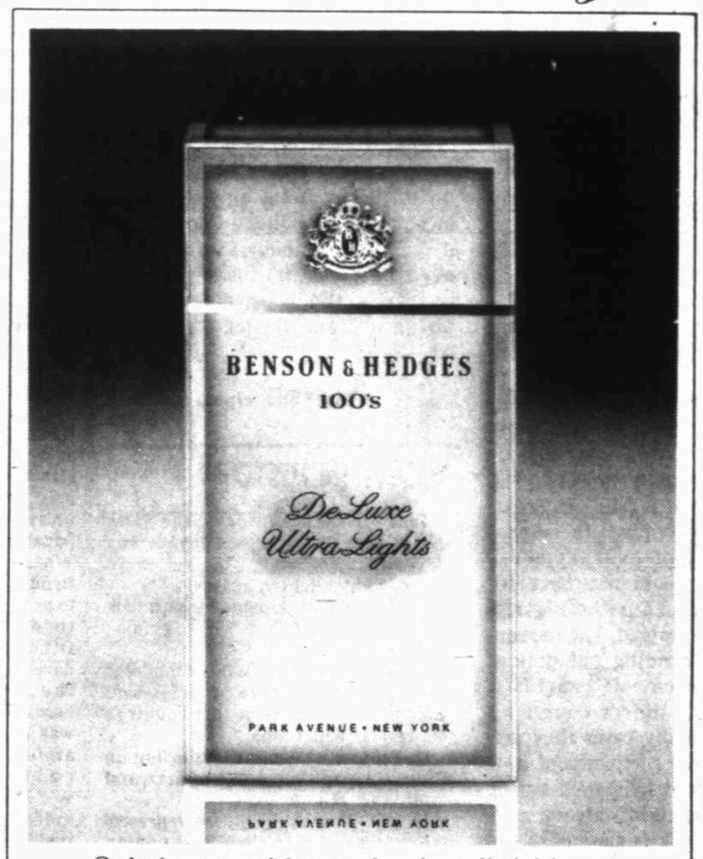

West could not overtake East's heart honor, because that would set up dummy's ten. But when East won the heart, he was forced to lead back a minor suit. No matter which he chose, declarer would sluff his remaining heart while ruffing on the table.

We attach no blame to West for failing to find the heart shift at trick two — the culprit is East. East should have realized the danger of his heart holding and dummy's two minor-suit doubletons. He could see that there was no future in continuing with a diamond, so at trick one he should have overtaken his partner's queen of diamonds with the king and shifted to the queen of hearts. The defense has now gained a tempo, and declarer can no longer set up an end play. Eventually he will be forced to concede two heart tricks.

Great day for arts!

Midland's newly formed arts council — Midland Arts Assembly — undoubtedly will bring to the city a means for highlighting and spotlighting the arts. That's good.

The need for an arts council was obvious. As of the moment the arts council was conceived and carried to fruition, Midland was the only community of its size in the state functioning without such an organization. Yet there is no other place in the entire state more appropriate for an organization to promote and display the arts.

By it's very nature, Midland is an affluent city boasting an extraordinarily well-educated populace. It traditionally has been that segment of society which has fosterd the arts and it is in such an environment that an organization of this type should flourish.

The traditional role of such a council has been to serve as an umbrella organization for a community's arts programs and offering such services as granting support money, providing information on how to secure funds, coordinating special programs, publicizing local events and encouraging individual, group and community endeavors.

Midland Arts Assembly certainly should find a willing public for its endeavors, not the least of which will be the coordination of a city-wide celebration of the arts to be held in 1984. The idea for an arts council has come of age in Midland, as well it should. The arts are the spice of modern-day living; without them, life takes on a bland, vanilla flavor.

To the Midland Arts Assembly's first panel officers — Tom Roberts, president, Ann Goff, vice president, Dorothy Perkins, secretary, and Maridell Fryar, treasurer — and the organizational representatives and others who were instrumental in the formation of the assembly, best wishes for future endeavors.

It's a great day for the arts in Midland!

Americans like Ike

The hullabaloo of midterm elections has obscured an anniversary of a significant event in American history. Thirty years ago this month Dwight David Eisenhower was elected president, an office he held for the next eight years.

A group of his friends and associates gathered in Washington the other day to reminisce about those years. They were aware that Ike has been downgraded by some as a sort of second-rater, a bland leader who was not activist enough. They also were aware that he was a better president than some of his detractors have conceded, and they sought to remind the country of some of his strong points, many of them overlooked during his presidency.

Ezra Taft Benson, a Mormon who served as Ike's secretary of agriculture, took note of the president's religious proclivities, as well as his commitment to military and political peace:

" . . . a very religious man. Often he would quote the Bible in conversation, sometimes without realizing it because it was a part of his life." Ike was "essentially a peacemaker. He had the great ability to bring factions together."

Arthur Flemming, who was secretary of health, education and welfare in the Eisenhower years, said the president was considerably more forceful behind the scenes than in public. "No president," said Flemming, "used the cabinet better in the art of consultative management. He could lead and encourage discussion better than anyone I have known."

Flemming concluded with this appraisal of his friend and chief: "The revisionists are at work, and I am delighted to have lived long enough to see Eisenhower recognized for what I have long thought he was — one of this country's truly effective presidents."

During the heat of political battles in the '50s, these words might be looked upon as mere partisan accolades. In the cold and objective light of 30 years of reflection, however, they obviously represent the attitudes of millions of Americans of both parties.

It was fitting, especially in this election year, that a few citizens should take time out to remind us all that Americans really did like Ike and are deeply grateful for the steadfast quality of his leadership.

Crackdown on aged

Sometimes the Social Security Administration, a huge bureaucracy, makes mistakes, sending a recipient more money than he or she is entitled to. If the mistake is not the recipient's, and if the recipient can't afford to repay, the Social Security Administration, under its own rules, is required to waive the overpayment, which usually doesn't amount to a great deal.

In November 1981, however, the agency launched a "shift in Social Security's philosophy" to emphasize recovery of overpayments under the Supplemental Security Income program for the elderly, the blind and disabled. The bureaucrats started sending out notices threatening to cut off benefits if the recipients didn't cough up promptly. In many cases they neither advised the recipients of how the overpayment happened nor of their right to request waivers.

The philosophy is similar to the philosophy that bureaucrats pursued of massive cutoffs of benefits under the disability program without giving recipients adequate review or opportunity to appeal. Congress blew the whistle on that, and now a U.S. District Court judge in New York has blown the whistle on the "menacing" tactics in SSI.

The injunction by Judge Irving Ben Cooper applies only to residents of New York state. The Social Security Administration should apply it nationwide without awaiting further orders. It ought not compound its errors by threatening to take away the only source of income of — as Judge Cooper put it — "some of the most infirm (yes, even helpless) members of our society — the poor, elderly and physically and/or mentally distressed."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 9, the 313th day of 1982. There are 52 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 9, 1937, Japanese troops took Shanghai, China.

On this date:

In 1962, the United States completed its emergency airlift of arms and ammunition to India in that country's border war with China.

In 1963, a coal mine explosion in Umuta, Japan, killed 452 miners and injured 450 others.

In 1971, Mainland Chinese representatives took part in their first conference as Peking's full delegation headed for New York.

In 1979, the United Nations Security Council tried unsuccessfully to resolve the American hostage crisis in Iran.

Ten years ago: President Nixon said he hoped to use his second term to lead the nation out of a crisis of spirit.

Five years ago: Israeli fighter-bombers attacked targets in Southern Lebanon, and the Lebanese government said at least 60 civilians were killed.

One year ago: Israeli defense minister Ariel Sharon said his nation would take military action against Syrian and Palestinian Liberation Organization positions in Lebanon if U.S. peace initiatives failed to produce results.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Solidarity embarks on dangerous course

WASHINGTON — Tomorrow the first real test of strength will come between Solidarity and the Polish military regime since the workers' movement was outlawed last month.

Jack Anderson

It will also, according to top administration sources, mark the beginning of a new and dangerous course decided on in recent weeks by the union's underground leaders.

The strategy reflects the courage and stubbornness that have been both the hope and despair of Poland in the two years of Solidarity's history. The union leaders' goal is nothing less than to force the generals to back down through a series of escalating demonstrations that would culminate in a nationwide general strike next spring.

The first of these demonstrations is the eight-hour work stoppage called for tomorrow, the second anniversary of Solidarity's legal recognition by the communist government. The next show of strength will be a protest on Dec. 13, the first anniversary of the declaration of martial law.

Poland-watchers in the administration were unwilling to predict the outcome of tomorrow's strike, much less the probable results of Solidarity's ambitious strategy. They point out that for the grand strategy to succeed, each new demonstration must build on the one before it, with a "crescendo" effect that will finally convince the military regime it must retreat from its hard-line repression.

The boldness of Solidarity's gamble is a sharp change of course, born of desperation and disillusion. In the 11 months since the military crackdown shattered the union leadership, Solidarity has often been indecisive and ineffective. Its remaining leaders have come to the realization that they must regain the offensive if the movement is to survive at all.

Part of Solidarity's passive behavior in recent months can be traced to the leaders' hopes that Gen. Vojcek Jaruzelski wasn't as bad as he seemed to be, and that he would keep his promise to end martial law and allow Solidarity to function again.

The union leaders' illusions were finally shattered when Jaruzelski declared Solidarity illegal last month. They now recognize that the general interpreted their patience as weakness, and that he will respect only an unmistakable show of strength on their part. So that's what they intend to give him; as they see it, they have no choice.

Administration sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado there is no question that disturbances will occur as Solidarity embarks on its collision course with the military regime. The only question is just how widespread and effective they will be. That nobody can predict with accuracy.

The odds against Solidarity are long. For one thing, it seems clear that the underground leadership has been penetrated by goverment moles. As soon as the union was declared illegal, a top national leader and two regional leaders were captured and jailed — convincing evidence of infiltration at the highest levels.

Indeed, this may help to explain Solidarity's vacillation at the time of the prohibition decree. The shipyard workers in Gdansk staged massive walkouts. It was the right psychological moment for Solidarity to call a nationwide protest in their support. Instead, the surviving underground leadership called for tomorrow's strike — a month after the opportunity for spontaneous public support had passed.

In the long run, of course, the odds against Solidarity and the Polish people are slim. If the union's new strategy succeeds in forcing concessions from the military regime, it must be careful not to go too far. This could lead to replacement of Jaruzelski with even tougher hard-liners, or to intervention by the Soviet Union.

However, should there be an overwhelming show of support for Solidarity tomorrow, the analysts will have to go back to their drawing boards.

CHANGING THE SCRIPT: Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., wants Congress to devote much of its lame-duck session to consideration of ways to restore the solvency of the Social Security system. But an even more influential Republican evidently has other ideas. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., discouraged the suggestion in a private letter to Jacob Clayman, chairman of the Council on Aging Organizations.

"Some have expressed concern that Congress may enact changes in the Social Security System at this time," Baker wrote. "In my judgment, it would be precipitous on our part to do so."

Baker noted that the National Commission on Social Security Reform won't give its report and recommendations to Congress until late this month. It would be wise, Baker added, for Congress to take time to digest the commission report before making the necessary decisions.

"For this reason," Baker wrote, "I will recommend that the Congress convene for a special session next year to address this issue." Baker did not make clear why a special session would be needed, or how he plans to keep the new Congress from taking up Social Security matters when it convenes for its regular session in January.

INSIDE REPORT:

Pope asked to help fight 'nuclear heresy'

WASHINGTON — An ace diplomat secretly called on Pope John Paul II at the Vatican last week to seek his help in blunting the attack of the Roman Catholic Church's American bishops against the U.S. nuclear deterrent, reflecting rising concern here over the church's "nuclear heresy."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Gen. Vernon Walters, veteran international operative and U.S. ambassador-at-large, quietly slipped in the holy city for an unannounced papal audience. Walters confirmed the visit to us but refused to discuss it. Other sources have told us that the "nuclear heresy" question was paramount among issues raised by Walters — indeed was the real purpose of his trip.

John Paul is the Reagan administration's hope to turn back the American hierarchy's anti-nuclear crusade. Informed opinion here is divided about what the pope will do, but critics of the American bishops were cheered when a leader of the anti-nuclear movement — Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago — was unexpectedly summoned to the Vatican last week.

Short of papal intervention, high U.S. officials fear the worst. Incidents of Catholic soldiers and sailors refusing nuclear-connected service could be the early warning of chaos ahead. Months of apprehension crystalized Oct. 24, when a committee of bishops released a proposed pastoral letter calling first-use of nuclear weapons immoral. Unwittingly or not, that fits Soviet propaganda and strategy while undermining the U.S. government's moral stature in its own country.

The theological argument in the draft letter is viewed by thoughtful Catholics as so contrary to past church practice and to scripture, from the Ten Commandments to the New Testament, that they call it "the nuclear heresy." Akin to the fourth century dispute between Athanasians and Arians over the nature of Christ, this struggle pits a heretical hierarchy against the traditionalist laity.

Sixteen centuries later, the dispute is not over Christology but the morality of war. It therefore threatens not only a schism but an undermining of U.S. peace-keeping through 35 years of nuclear deterrence. The only antidote is the pope.

Many American Catholic laymen who oppose the bishops worry that the nuclear heresy is too far advanced in this country for the pope to stamp out. But administration officials are more optimistic. That explains the secret Vatican mission of Walters, a Catholic who has conferred privately with John Paul before.

There is no doubt about John Paul's own belief that nations must be able to defend themselves. His audience earlier this year with officers of the NATO defense school, who deal with weapons of nuclear retaliation, reflects his attitude. But will he interfere with the American bishops?

An answer was suggested by the summons to Rome last week of Archbishop Bernardin, leader of the committee that drafted the pastoral letter. Since he had been to the Vatican a few weeks earlier upon his appointment as archbishop, the unscheduled visit was interpreted as reflecting the pope's concern with the leaked pastoral letter.

The fact that the pastoral draft was intentionally "leaked" assures that some language will finally be approved by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. But there is hope it will be watered down to irrelevance by John Paul's intervention. If that provokes a dissident letter drafted by the same junior priests who clearly control Bernardin's committee, so much the better.

The impact of these priests on public policy was first felt late last year when Catholic bishops objected to naming a nuclear submarine "Corpus Christi" (body of Christ). Last June two Catholic sailors assigned to the nuclear power school at Orlando, Fla., were given an administrative discharge when they refused to perform their duties because of their interpretation of Catholic doctrine.

The political thrust has been overt. "When ... President Reagan is running for re-election," Bishop Thomas J. Drury of Corpus Christi, Texas, wrote Navy Secretary John F. Lehman last February, "wouldn't it be nice for the 240 bishops ... to remember that our administration did not turn a deaf ear on us in 1982?" The draft pastoral letter was released one week before the mid-term election, coinciding with voting in nine states on nuclear-freeze resolutions opposed by the president.

Lehman, a Catholic, said in a speech last March: "We may wake up one morning and find we have lost a war of propaganda waged against a strong American defense, a war of ideas put forward by a zealous, uninformed and unrepresentative minority in the name of valid religious values invalidly applied." All that prevents America's Catholic bishops from officially joining that minority is John Paul II.

Critical reviews help city's arts

To The Editor:

Judging from some recent letters to the editor, there are a number of Midlanders coming down pretty hard on Entertainment Editor Georgia Temple for her specific criticism of Midland cultural offerings. I, for one, appreciate the results of her reviews, and will explain why.

First, when she finds the overall impact lacking, she explains why. I enjoy contrasting my reasoning with hers. If the flaw is in the writing, I may save my money.

Second, her criticism is usually of technical flaws which can be corrected, and in correction, strengthens the believability or effect of the performance. For instance: "the performers did not appear to be at ease with the microphones," "Joe Blow missed several cues," "the actress wore summer shoes with a winter outfit," "the technical crew was noisy," "the French horns were weak," "there was too much static on the electronic equipment." Because the performers (directors, technical assistants, etc.) want to do the best job of which they are capable, and perhaps also to prove the critic wrong, by the time I see the performance (such as MCT) or go to the next concert, the problem has been resolved and I experience a super performance. If all the reviewer said were nice things, we'd all have to put up with performances that are less than excellent.

Third, Ms. Temple reviews a much wider gamut of cultural offerings than previous Reporter-Telegram critics; from movies, to concerts, to ballets, to plays. Just the category of concerts has broadened greatly. Where previous critics only reviewed classical offerings (Midland-Odessa symphony, Civic Music Concerts), she includes rock, country-western, chamber music, jazz and church concerts. That's a pretty broad spectrum and no one is an expert on all those segments of musical style. But she does do a credible job of summarizing the overall impact of the performance and judging its strengths and weaknesses.

With positive, encouraging style criticisms which I believe her's generally to be (in any performance she always finds something positive to say) the quality of performances continues to improve. After all, if she killed the arts here, she would no longer have a job.

Pray on it!

To The Editor:

Regarding Bob Hunter's comments of Oct. 28, 1982 about school prayer, I think it is a pity that his intellectual perception regarding the differences between Christians, Jews, Muslims, Buddhists, and atheists that he had when he was about 12 years old and in the fifth grade did not remain with him until now when he refers to their prayers as a "vocalization of superstitious beliefs."

It takes a rare courage or complete lack of sensibility to insult nearly 2 billion people. He is living proof that one school year of daily participation in Bible study has no lasting effect. I cannot help but wonder where he was during the study of facts and reasoning that he mentions as being necessary in school. He neglected to add ethics and philosophy which provide the reasoning to use the facts.

Some people apparently believe that our Constitution does not allow religion. This is incorrect. The people who founded this nation, and the people who fought the greatest power on Earth at that time to make it a free nation were predominantly Christians, yet their belief in religious tolerance is apparent in the Constitution that they drafted and agreed to be governed by.

Every president of this nation has expressed a religious belief and preference and has taken his oath of office with one hand on a Bible and closing the oath with...so help me God.

To call a five-minute period of time alloted to prayer (not even mandatory) "organized religion" and a "specific prohibition of the Constitution" is at best a misconception of the English language, or at worst an assumption of authority based on personal desire and perversion of truth.

As to what God the prayers are to be directed; that's easy: The same one mentioned in our pledge of allegiance, our national anthem, written on our money, and referred to by all who take oath of public office closed with...so help me God.

A fine tribute

To The Editor:

Since I do not know whom to thank for the fine tribute which appeared in your publication of Oct. 24, 1982, I will take this means of conveying my personal appreciation to that person. It imparted what many of us feel, but often do not take the time to say.

I am extremely grateful for having known Mr. Kelly and many of the others to whom Midland owes a debt. As the only member of the Ryan family remaining in Midland, I would like to express our appreciation for including Dr. Ryan's name in this recognition.

Technicians check satellites prior to the closing of the shuttle's cargo bay Sunday at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. These satellites will be launched from the space shuttle. The top bay holds the Satellite Business Systems' SBS-3, which will be the first commercial satellite to be launched from the Space Transportation System. The bottom bay holds the Telesat Canada's Anik C-3 communications satellite. The fifth mission of the space shuttle is scheduled for a Thursday morning liftoff.

NASA says liftoff to be on time

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space agency voiced confidence that Columbia's first commercial mission will lift off on time Thursday despite a leak in the space shuttle's steering system that interrupted the countdown.

Engineers were evaluating the problem overnight and expected a final decision today on whether the countdown would continue, leading up to a scheduled liftoff at 7:19 a.m. EST Thursday.

A statement issued Monday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said experts as a precaution were analyzing the leak found Sunday in a backup helium regulator in the system of 44 small jets used to steer Columbia in orbit.

"Engineers believe the test will show that leakage through the regulators is at a low enough level to permit use of the system in its normal configuration for the ascent phase of the mission," it said.

If officials decided to replace the leaky unit, the flight might have to be delayed several weeks because of the need to return the spaceship to its hangar for repair work.

Backing its confidence, NASA directed the four astronauts who will man Columbia's first satellite-hauling trip to fly here today from their training base at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Commanding the shuttle's first four-man crew is veteran astronaut Vance Brand. The others are space newcomers — Pilot Robert Overmyer and mission specialists William Lenoir and Joseph Allen.

The leak was detected Sunday and the faulty unit was deactivated, with its function assigned to another system. Helium is used to pressurize fuel lines.

Troubleshooting the problem delayed the countdown by seven hours, but crews gradually were making up the lost time and expected to be back on schedule sometime today.

While the engineers probed the problem, workers Monday night conducted a major step in the countdown — pumping liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into the tanks of Columbia's power-producing fuel cells.

The weather outlook for a Thursday launch is favorable, with a forecast of good visibility, light winds and a temperature of 72 degrees.

The four astronauts spent several hours Monday in a shuttle simulator in Houston, practicing liftoffs and landings. Later, they did some proficiency flying in T-38 jet planes.

The major goal of the mission is to place in separate orbits two commercial communications satellites built for Satellite Business Systems of McLean, Va., and Telesat Canada, Inc. They are the first in a long line of customers who have signed on to pay NASA for shuttle launch services.

Cuomo thanks New Yorkers

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — What, another political television commercial? New York's Gov.-elect Mario Cuomo wants 30 seconds of your time to say "thank you."

The last of the Cuomo TV spots is scheduled to be shown statewide Tuesday night, and in some areas Wednesday, too. Harvey Cohen of Great Neck, Cuomo's media consultant, said the winning campaign will spend about $50,000 on the thank-you project, which was filmed late last week at Cuomo's home. Cohen attributed the idea for the spot to Cuomo's son, Andrew, who played a key role in his father's campaign.

Another person close to the Cuomo campaign said the governor-elect could afford the thank you since he wound up with a surplus of about $1 million.

'Dial a shuttle' expanded to other nations

BEDMINSTER, N.J. (AP) — People around the world can hear conversations between Earth and space during the next flight of the space shuttle Columbia — if they're willing to pay the phone bill.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and American Telephone & Telegraph Co. have expanded their telephone eavesdropping service for this mission to include dialers from outside the United States.

More than 1 million calls were made from the 50 states during the shuttle's last mission from June 27 to July 4, said Carolyn Zachary, spokeswoman for AT&T's Long Lines Department. The calls averaged three minutes and netted $1.2 million for AT&T, she said.

Ms. Zachary said the interest in the conversations between astronauts and mission control stems from "a desire to be in on history in the making."

The service will begin at 6:19 a.m. EST Thursday, an hour before the scheduled liftoff, and continue through the six-day flight, Ms. Zachary said Monday.

Calls from the 50 states will cost 50 cents for the first minute and 35 cents for each additional minute, plus tax, the spokeswoman said. Callers may listen for up to 2½ hours before being disconnected.

Ms. Zachary said there will be gaps in the conversations between the shuttle and the Johnson Space Center — when the astronauts are eating or sleeping, for example.

During longer gaps, NASA's news conferences may be broadcast or recorded status reports and change-of-shift briefings may be provided, she said.

In the United States, the number to call is 900-410-6272.

The Salang Pass roadway, 70 miles north of Kabul, Afghanistan, leads toward a tunnel 11,000 feet above sea level. About 2,000 civilians and 700 Soviet soldiers were asphyxiated when the tunnel was sealed off after a fiery auto crash. Reports indicate the Soviet soldiers believed they were under rebel attack.

2,700 killed in Afghan tunnel

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Up to 2,700 civilians and Soviet soldiers died from asphyxiation in a car-filled mountain tunnel in Afghanistan, Western diplomatic sources reported today. The sources said the soldiers had sealed off the tunnel after a fiery auto crash, apparently fearing they were under rebel attack.

There was no independent confirmation of the report. Neither the Marxist Afghan regime nor the Soviet Union, which sent troops to Afghanistan in 1979 to help crush a Moslem rebellion, have commented on the reports.

Afghanistan's Radio Kabul has been broadcasting lengthy lists of death notices each night, without saying what the cause of death was, the sources said.

The sources, citing reports from their mission in the Afghan capital, said between 400 and 2,000 Afghan civilians were killed in the early November disaster in the 1.7-mile-long Salang tunnel, 11,000 feet high in the Hindu Kush mountain range and a major gateway for Soviet Union-bound traffic.

They said as many as 700 Soviet troops were reported to have died, while another 200 were said to have been injured. It was not clear how the soldiers were killed or injured.

Bodies were still being flown from the area, one week after the disaster, the sources said, briefing reporters here on condition they not be identified by name or by country. They described Kabul as a city in mourning.

New Jane's Weapon Systems volume cites MX, technological achievements

LONDON (AP) — The latest edition of Jane's Weapon Systems, citing what it calls the "troubled" MX missile system, says President Reagan's defense program has been disappointing and high-technology weaponry no longer is the monopoly of superpowers.

In the foreword of the 1982-83 edition of the authoritative volume, published today, editor Ronald T. Pretty adds:

"It is a matter for regret that...the impressive progress in modern weapons technology we have recorded...has not been matched by a comparable growth in wisdom or expertise of those responsible for (its) application,"

Pretty, an electronic weapons engineer and former Royal Air Force pilot, said that because of the proliferation of advanced technology for warfare, "War in space is now a practical matter."

He wrote that the aircraft-launched anti-satellite, or ASAT, systems are the newest developments in the Soviet and U.S. arsenals that are likely to destabilize the balance of power. He also cited new laser and particle-beam weapons being developed by Washington and Moscow as "potentially destabilizing in the longer term."

Turning to the MX missile, the much-debated weapons system launched by the Carter administration, Pretty wrote:

"Instead of this important program becoming a firm prospect with the coming of President Reagan, it again embarked on another round of debates concerned with the same difficulty of basing that had already bedevilled progress for years."

In Washington, defense officials said Monday they expect Reagan will study a Nobel-prize winning physicist's reported reservations about whether the proposed 100 missiles could be deployed in "superhardened" launch silos faster than the Soviets can develop technology to neutralize them.

The officials said Reagan wanted to be able to make a decision about basing the missiles by Dec. 1. The Air Force has recommended putting the missiles in "dense packs" on the theory that Soviet warheads sent against the MX system would destroy or disable each other by blast, radiation and debris.

Pretty also cited as a "disappointment" of the Reagan defense program the strong opposition by many Europeans to planned deployment of medium-range U.S. missiles in Europe starting next year.

Listing some new high-technology developments changing the face of modern warfare, Pretty wrote of efforts in the United States and Britain to make warplanes "invisible" to an enemy,

The volume also cites new missiles systems from Israel, Japan, Taiwan and South Africa to show that high technology weapons no longer are the monopoly of the superpowers.

It lists South Africa, for example, as having Cactus mobile surface-to-air guided missiles linked directly to an early-warning radar network covering its northeast and northwest approaches.

He also singled out as particularly effective Irsael's electronic detection and guidance system and unmanned missile-carrying drones that destroyed Syrian surface-to-air missile systems in Lebanon.

Reagan to study report on deployment weakness

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to study a Nobel-prize winning physicist's reported reservations about the vulnerability of MX missiles deployed close together, Defense officials say.

The scientist is Charles Townes, who headed a special Defense Science Board panel that studied the strengths and weaknesses of the closely spaced deployment concept, dubbed "dense pack" by the Air Force.

Townes is said by sources to have questioned whether the proposed 100 missiles could be deployed in "superhardened" launch silos faster than the Soviets could develop technology to neutralize them.

The University of California physicist was reported Monday to have taken a less optimistic view than the Air Force about the length of time the new missile system could remain impervious to Soviet counter-action.

There had been behind-the-scene reports the Air Force sought to block the Townes views from reaching the president, but senior Defense officials said they believed that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger would make certain Reagan received every relevant document before making the final MX basing decision.

The president is scheduled to decide before Dec. 1.

Security conference reconvenes

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The European Security Conference, reconvening after an eight-month recess prompted by the crisis in Poland, is expected to face tough Western demands that Polish authorities ease martial law and reinstate olidarity.

Informed Western sources said the United States and fellow NATO members also were planning to call for resumption of a dialogue with Poland's powerful Roman Catholic Church when the 35-nation East-West conference reopens today.

Western delegates from 16 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations met for more than six hours Monday to map a unified strategy for the conference, which began nearly two years ago.

The conference recessed March 12 with the United States leading the West in saying it was impossible to conduct "business as usual" because of the situation in Poland, rocked by a series of bloody protests following the Dec. 13 imposition of martial law and suspension of Solidarity.

Poland's Parliament outlawed the Soviet bloc's only independent labor federation on Oct. 8 under strict new labor laws. The Solidarity underground has called for nationwide strikes and protests Wednesday.

The conference reviews human rights, cooperation and easing of tensions as outlined in the 1975 Helsinki agreement signed by the Soviet Union, United States and 33 other nations. The accords were hailed at the time as a landmark in East-West relations.

The NATO bloc was preparing a series of demands for relaxation of Polish martial law and recognition of Solidarity as a legal trade federation, according to the Western sources, who requested anonymity.

They said the new demands would be proposed as amendments to a draft final document advanced last December by the conference's eight neutral and non-aligned nations.

Another set of demands, aimed at the Soviet Union, was expected to call for a stop to the "repression" of political dissidents and the jamming of some Western radio broadcasts.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda on Monday claimed the United States and other Western countries have "obstructed" the conference through a policy of "diktat," or dictation.

In today's editions, some Soviet-bloc newspapers assailed the potential East-West confrontation. The Czechoslovak Communist Party newspaper charged the West was trying to "dictate (to) sovereign states certain conditions" and was turning "from efforts for cooperation to confrontation."

Prospects appeared slim of the Soviets and their Eastern European allies accepting the Western amendments, observers said. But a Western official denied they were intended to scuttle the conference.

The Madrid meeting includes North America, the Soviet Union and all of East and West Europe except Albania.

Key proposals to be dealt with include one for a new commitment on observance of human rights and another for a new conference on confidence and security-building measures and disarmament in Europe.

The Soviets have rejected Western allegations of human rights violations in the Soviet Union and East bloc, but agreed in principle to a French suggestion for the follow-up European conference. Details have not been worked out.

Bulldogs defeat Bel Air, advance to regionals

Screaming fans help with third game rally

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Monday night, when things were looking a bit grim, the Midland High Bulldogs got some needed inspirational help from an estimated 1,200 fans seated in the stands for their Area Playoff volleyball match against the El Paso Bel Air Highlanders.

After winning the first game of the match 15-10, the Bulldogs found themselves in trouble in the second game as Bel Air snapped a 2-2 deadlock to build up a 5-2 lead and eventually went up by as much as 12-4 and 13-6. Everything was falling right for the Highlanders. Everything, that is, until Midland High started getting tough and fighting for every point.

Trailing 13-6 doesn't give a team much room for error, only two points, and after picking up one point, the Bulldogs were suddenly faced with game-point at 14-7 immediately after losing serve. Midland High coach Linda Jolly wasn't ready to quit and the Bulldogs showed they weren't either.

"I called a time out, my last of the game, and told them if you want to stand around and lose go ahead. My seniors had to pick up the slack, display leadership."

The talk must have worked. Nine times Bel Air served the ball and nine times the Bulldogs killed the winner while picking up valuable points along the way. More important, their desperate struggle to save game sparked an already noisy Midland High crowd and the Bulldog faithful stayed behind their team until, at 14-13, Bel Air finally managed the winning point.

UNDAUNTED BY defeat, the fans gave their Bulldogs a standing ovation which carried over into the third game and eventually helped Midland High to a 15-10, 13-15, 15-8 victory and a berth in Saturday's Regional Tournament to be played at Midland Lee Gym.

"When the girls came back on the court (after losing), it really helped," said Coach Jolly.

"When they stood up for us, it was great," added Lisa Coldeway who was listening to her coaches comments.

The finish in game two carried over in the third as Midland High jumped out to a quick 5-1 lead and led 7-2 before Bel Air was able to get untracked and knot it at seven. It was the only run the Highlanders would make before being eliminated from the 1982 playoffs.

ONE OF the things that has helped Midland High reach the Regional Tournament has been strong front-line play by the girls at the net. They, Penny Griffin, Sheila Christian, Laura Sherman and Coldeway, have spiked and dinked their way through an unbeaten season at home.

But, against the Highlander defense, they found spiking a rough route to take. Paced by La Tanya Thompson and using a double blocking combination at the net, Bel Air was able to put a damper on the Bulldogs' power game and even made dinking a tough route to take.

"That one tall girl, No. 11, (Thompson) can really block," said Coach Jolly. "Everything we gave her she got to. Penny, Lisa, Sheila, all of my spikers, she was getting to them. I told them to start varying their shots more. Any time we hit the ball anywhere close to the front line, I knew we would have to set up against that tall girl. She was like a wall up there. They really didn't need double blocking with her up there."

The double-teaming caused a lot of problems for the Midland High attack and if it hadn't been for a strong effort by the back-line players, fighting for everything they could get to and keeping the ball in play, things could have turned out differently.

Throughout the season and into the playoffs, Midland High has had the benefit of outstanding back-line play by, among others, sophomore Denise Lanz. Monday night, the Bulldogs almost lost her to an injury that's been nagging her for awhile.

It was on one of the first Bel Air serves of the game when a sore back she'd been nursing came into play for the rest of the night. Lanz, running back for a shot over her head, dived to the floor in a vain effort to save point and slid nearly to the wall.

"Denise has been having back problems and it keeps getting worse and worse and we had to take her out for awhile," said Jolly. "She couldn't take it any more. We had to sit her down and get her some rest. She was feeling fine before the match. Doc (MHS athletic trainer James "Doc" Dodson) put her through exercises. When she went down, I knew she was hurt. As she got up she gave me that look and I knew she was hurting."

Though injured, Lanz played a good portion of the game and continued to dig out shots for her teammates to return.

ACCORDING TO El Paso head coach Mary Thompson, a big problem with her team Monday night was in the serving game. "We've had problems serving all year, our serving has been atrocious," she said. "The kids know it, too. You can see it every thime the kids go to serve, you see the pressure they're facing. If we could put more serves in, we could have put the second game away a little earlier and would have had more left for the third game. They really came at us.

Coach Thompson, like Amarillo Tascosa coach Dana Hatch, had an opportunity to pre-scout Midland High and from that game and Monday night's, came away with a good impression.

"Midland has a very strong team," she said. "When I watched them play Amarillo Tascosa (the first game in bi-district play) I was most impressed with their hustle. They got to balls most teams would let go. You can't count a point against them until the whistle blows.

WITH THE Area Playoff game under her belt, Coach Jolly is on her way to El Paso to scout her opponent in Saturday's Regional Tournament at Lee. The Bulldogs will open play in that game at 11 a.m. against either Amarillo Caprock or El Paso Burgess, playing tonight at 7 p.m. at Burgess.

Other teams coming to Midland have yet to be decided but will include the winners of the Denton-Arlington, Arlington Heights-Grand Prrie and Caprock-Burgess matches.

Play Saturday morning will begin at 9 a.m.

Stanton captures district title; Andrews needs one more win

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Stanton ended a 32-year drought for a district football title when the Buffaloes took a convincing 26-5 victory over the McCamey Badgers Friday night.

For head coach Steve Park, it ended five years of being a bridesmaid. In his first two years as an assistant and the last three as head coach, the Buffaloes have finished in the runner-up spot.

But this year, when being second gets a team into the playoffs, the Buffaloes won it all. They went undefeated through the district with a 5-0 mark and finished 7-3 overall.

"It feels just great," Park said. "The kids just went after it real tough."

At halftime it appeared Stanton might settle for another second place finish as the Buffs fell behind 6-0. But the second half belonged to the Buffaloes as they capitalized on two turnovers and used field position to dominate the Badgers.

Tailback Bobby Barnhill lead all rushers with 172 yards on the ground, 149 coming in the second half.

The 170-pounder gained most of his yardage on one play.

Ahead 7-6 in the third quarter, the Buffs had a first down on their own 17 when Barnhill took a pitchout on a sweep play. After breaking back to avoid the pursuit, he hurdled a would-be tackler at the line of scrimmage and out ran the secondary in a race for the goal line. The 83-yard scoring run was the longest of the senior's career.

"I knew I had the speed to make it, but I was afraid I would get tired," he said. "And I did. But I made it.

"The longest run I've had is about 15 yards," he added.

For McCamey the loss ment not making the playoffs for the first time in four years.

Badger head coach Larry Nabors pointed to the turnovers as the telling story, but added. "They just ended up whipping us."

In the battle to stay out of last place the Eldorado Eagles, 1-4, shutout the Miles Bulldogs 28-0.

After a 3-2 pre-district mark the Bulldogs were shutout in all five of their district games. But even with an offensive threat it would have been hard for Miles to win a game since the opposition averaged more than 45 points per game against the Bulldog defense.

District 2-AAAA

With one week still left to play the Lakeview Chiefs clinched the district title with a 49-22 triumph over Snyder, 1-5.

The victory gave the Chiefs a 6-0 league record and a 9-0 overall mark.

Both Andrews and Monahans came away with victories, setting up this week's showdown for the second playoff berth.

Andrews, 5-1, shutout Lamesa, 0-6, 20-0 while Monahans, 4-2, had an easy time with Fort Stockton, 2-4, 35-7.

The Mustangs and Loboes will square off in Andrews Friday with the winner advancing to post season play.

Sweewater, loser of three straight, squeeked by Pecos 8-7. Both teams are 3-3 in loop play.

District 6-AAA

It went down to the final week before Ballinger could claim the district title.

Ballinger and Ozona tied with identilcal 4-1 records but the Bearkats won the district title by virtue of their 28-13 victory over Ozona in the opening week of loop play.

The Bearkats finished with a convincing 26-6 win over Coahoma, 1-4.

The Lions took the runner-up spot with a 27-16 win over Sonora, 1-4.

After winning its first seven games, the Crane Golden Granes, 2-3, dropped three in a row. The final defeat coming at the hands of Colorado City, 3-2, 21-14.

Crane's improvement over last year is immeasurable. The Cranes were winless in 10 games in '81 and finished this season 7-3.

District 6-A

With one week of games still remaining the Wink Wildcats, 6-0, shutout a stubborn Rankin team, 14-0, and guarenteed themselves the district championship on the way. The loss dropped the pre-season favorite Red Devils to 3-3.

Iraan, 5-1, clinched the remaining playoff berth with a 34-0 victory over Fort Davis, 2-3-1.

Grandfalls, the surprise team of the district, improved its record to 4-2 with an impressive 39-0 blitz over Buena Vista, 0-6.

The Sanderson Eagles, 2-4, scored more points in one game than they have all year in defeating Balmorhea, 1-6, 48-12.

District 7-A

Eden finished its season with a perfect 7-0 district mark as the Bulldogs shutout Robert Lee, 3-4, 18-0.

The fifth ranked Bulldogs are 9-0-1 as they head into the playoffs.

Sterling City, the district's second place finishers at 6-1, beat Irion County, 1-6, 28-15.

Greenwood, 4-3, finished the season on a sour note as they dropped a 28-13 decision to Garden City, 5-2.

Greenwood's 4-6 season record was the schools first losing season in its brief three years since joining the UIL. Last year the Rangers improved to 7-3 over their 6-4 mark in 1980.

It was a hallmark year for Water Valley. The Wildcats won their first district ball game in three years as the Wildcats shutout Bronte 7-0.

The Wildcats were winless in their first rwo years of 11-man football until this season. They finished 3-7.

Georgia tops AP poll; SMU settles for No. 2

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

For the second time in three years, the Georgia Bulldogs have climbed into first place in The Associated Press college football poll thanks to Notre Dame.

In 1980, Georgia beat Florida 26-21 and jumped from second place to first when No.1 Notre Dame was held to a 3-3 tie fy Georgia Tech. The Bulldogs went on to win their only national championship.

On Monday, Georgia jumped from third place to first following a 44-0 rout of Florida, while Pitt dropped from first to eighth by losing to Notre Dame 31-16. The victory also boosted the Irish back into the Top Twenty.

GEORGIA, SOUTHERN METHODIST and Arizona State, the only three unbeaten and untied major college teams, held the top three spots in this week's rankings, while Louisiana State jumped from 11th to sixth — it's highest ranking since 1972 — and Arkansas fell from fifth to 10th.

"The call from the AP two years ago that we had won the national championship was much better than this one," said Georgia Coach Vince Dooley. "Seriously, it will be a great point of pride this week. We play at Auburn and we'll find out if we're mature enough to handle a No. 1 ranking.

"The rankings certainly become more meaningful every week this late in the season. At the same time, it will give Auburn another incentive, although I don't know how they could have any more incentive."

LAST WEEK, Pitt was first, SMU second and Georgia third, only three points behind the Mustangs. But Georgia swamped Florida and received 33 of 59 first-place votes and 1,150 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

SMU, which defeated Rice 41-14, received 19 first-place votes and 1,126 points, while Arizona State, a 30-16 winner over Oregon State, received five firsts and 1,049 points. The Sun Devilw were fourth a week ago.

SMU Coach Bobby Collins said he was "disappointed somewhat" with the new rankings. "But as a coach trying to prepare for Texas Tech, this may add a little incentive," he said. "It (the No. 1 ranking) is something we want."

NEBRASKA MOVED up from fifth to fourth with one first-place ballot and 984 points for a 48-10 triumph over Oklahoma State. Penn State received the other No. 1 vote and 955 points after crushing North Carolina State 54-0.

LSU was sixth with 865 points following a 20-10 licking of Alabama, which dropped the Crimson Tide from eighth to 17th. Washington rebounded from its only loss of the season and edged UCLA 10-7, climbing from 10th to seventh with 779 points and dropping the Bruins from ninth to 12th.

Pitt, a 31-16 loser to Notre Dame, plummeted from first to eighth with 765 points. Florida State rose from 12th to ninth with 686 points by routing South Carolina 56-26. Arkansas, a 24-17 loser to Baylor, rounded out the Top Ten with 572 points.

THE SECOND Ten consists of defending national champion Clemson, UCLA, Notre Dame, Michigan, Oklahoma, Southern California, Alabama, Maryland, West Virginia and Texas. Last week, it was LSU, Florida State, Clemson, Oklahoma, Michigan, Southern Cal, West Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland and Florida.

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season records and total points. Points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

BASKETBALL—Lon Morris vs. Midland College, 8:00 p.m., at Chap Center.

The Quotebook...

"Obviously, I'm dissappointed. The record is there. The game has come a long way. I'm happy I made some contributions. You can always look back and see some things could have been done differently. I tried to be guided by my conscience and did the things I thought were morally correct." — Bowie Kuhn, commissioner of baseball, after being voted out of office by the team owners.

Did You Know?...

Waite Hoyt came out of Erasmus Hall High School here to sign with the New York Giants in 1918 at the age of 17.

That won him the nickname of the "Boy Wonder" — but not with the Giants. He pitched in only one game for the Giants in 1918 and then spent two years with the Boston Red Sox.

Hoyt was traded to the New York Yankees, where he pitched well enough to earn a place in the Baseball Hall of Fame. A winner of 237 regular season games, Hoyt won six World Series contests for the Yanks.

MC hosts Lon Morris on Pack-the-Chap-Center night

At least one Chaparral wasn't doing any hand springs over his performance last week as Midland College opened the season with a 69-62 win over Cisco College.

Six-seven Chester Smith knew the statistics weren't good even before he saw them. But just six rebounds for the guy who set all the Midland College career rebound records last year was completely out of character.

Six-five Jerome Crowe was the team leader with 11, which is fine, but Smith is the one who feels he should be setting the pace.

Part of the problem last Tuesday was position. With 6-9 Ernest Harris operating under the rim, Smith has moved to forward position.

"I've got to drive to the rim to get my rebounds this year. That's something I've got to learn to do. Last year, I was in position and I was there when the ball came off the boards."

"Chester has an adjustment to make," agrees Coach Jerry Stone, "When he's outside like that, he must slash toward the basket to get his share. But that will come."

THAT, AND adjusting to the inevitable pressure and quick defensive dropbacks by the opposition will be among the things the Chaps will be working on against Lon Morris in Pack-the-Chap-Center Night 8 p.m. today in the season's second game and last home appearance until December.

Behind Crowe and Smith in rebounding against Cisco was freshman Ervin Williams with five while Anthony "Spud" Webb led in assists with six.

Another freshman, Nate Bufford made a brilliant MC debut, canning 8-of-17 field attempts in scoring a game high 20 points. His four steals also topped the team and he contribured three assists. No. 2 in thefts was Crowe, who had a fine all-around night, with three.

MC and Lon Morris scrimmaged prior to the season at Hardin-Simmons.

FOLLOWING tonight's game, the Chaps take to the road and won't be back home for three weeks. Their first stop will be in Great Bend, Kan., for the Barton County Classic, Nov. 18-20. Then they will be in Amarillo during the Thanksgiving holidays for the Amarillo Classic, Nov. 25-27. The team will reamin in Amarillo Sunday and then head to Clarendon for their first conference game against Clarendon College on Nov. 29.

Chap Center will again come alive Dec. 2-4 as the MC squad hosts its own Chaparral Classic.

Stone will be cautioning his players as they head for Great Bend and Amarillo. Last year's slow-starting Chaps lost two games in the Barton County Classic and lost again to host Amarillo College, which ended up with two victories in three meetings against MC.

But the Great Bend and Amarillo events don't count, except on the total record. It's the conference meetings which are important and by the time they arrive in Clarendon, Stone likely will have his team shaken down and ready to defend their conference title.

This year, all Chaparral games are being broadcast on Quad K radio, 99 FM.

Just 'Tri' this for exercise

The Tall City Triathlon, a half mile swim...a 10-mile ride...a five-mile run, will be held at Saturday and entry deadline is Wednesday.

Each team will consist of three competitors, each of whom will participate in one of the three events. Times will be recorded and the best cumulative time will determine the winning team in each category.

Competition for the Coors sponsored triathlon will be conducted in Open Men, Open Women, Open Mixed, 30-39 Men, 40-plus men. An average age of team participants will be used to determine the 30-39 and 40-plus categories.

Team members may pick up numbers this week at the Central YMCA.

Swimming and cycling begins at 8 a.m. and the running is slated for 10 a.m. The swimming (snorkles, but no fins, please) will be at the COM pool and the five-mile run will start and finish at the COM. The cyclists will compete on the Midland College oval.

Trophies will be awarded to the first place teams in each category and certificates will go to the second and third place teams in each phase of category.

Entry fee is $15 per team, or $5 per person.

Proceeds will be used to purchase handicap facilities for the Central YMCA.

Rowland Wong (682 2551) is director of the triathlon.

Saints' vote breaks ranks with NFLPA

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The war of words continues in the National Football League players' strike, with union leader Ed Garvey discounting an apparent crack in the Players Association's solidarity by noting that 25 teams had rejected the owners' latest offer.

Garvey accused the owners of further "illegal tactics" Monday night at an NFLPA news conference and said that a vote by the New Orleans Saints in favor of accepting the NFL's most recent proposal in principle "is just one of 28 teams and we're not too concerned.

"Once they see all the facts, I'm confident they will reject it too.

"Most of the teams felt there was not enough there to warrant a vote. Twenty-four teams rejected it in one way or another. (Another club voted against the proposal several hours after the news conference; the Houston Oilers said they would vote today and one other club had not reported its vote.)

"We are delighted that management's latest illegal tactic has failed," he added. "They players don't think it's a representative offer. They know it's not the bottom line."

The Saints voted 45-1 with one abstention to accept the owners' offer and urged other teams to do the same, according to Guido Merkens, the Saints' alternate player rep.

The Saints "agreed to accept management's offer in principle while realizing there are details that need to be refined," Merkens said.

"I took what I heard up there (in New York at Players Association meetings during the negotiations, which broke off Saturday night) and explained it to our players here as it was explained to me," Merkens said on ABC-TV's 'Nightline.' "We asked, 'What do you want to do, accept it in principle or reject it altogether? We think there is a workable framework there.

"It's not true that management persuaded us (on how to vote). We're trying to let the union reps know how the New Orleans Saints feel."

Garvey didn't seem worried by the New Orleans' vote.

"Twenty players met with (Saints owner) John Mecom Jr.," Garvey said, "and then they voted. The owners are seeing if they can sell their latest offer to the players by going over the head of the union."

Garvey had a stronger reaction to a statement made by Philadelphia Eagles owner Leonard Tose. Tose charged Monday that a player representative had been threatened with bodily harm if he continued to appear on television making statements not approved by the union.

Though he refused to identify the player, Tose said at a news conference that a player rep was told they "would break both arms and both legs if you don't stop being on television. And, not only that, but we'll violate your wife."

"We would have to conclude that Leonard Tose has lost it," said Garvey. "His comments reached a new low ... to suggest that the union used physical intimidation on a player representative. We demand a retraction from him. It's really incredible to make such a statement."

Free agents come from good stock

NEW YORK (AP) — There aren't many million-dollar babies among them. Still, this year's family of baseball free agents comes from some pretty good stock.

They number 41 in all, 23 from the American League and 18 from the National League. Among them are 11 pitchers, six catchers, 14 outfielders and 10 infielders.

Four free agents hit .300 or better, eight drove in 50 or more runs, and four homered 20 or more times. Three of the pitchers won in double figures, and four had ERA's of 3.50 or less.

The 1982 free agents, who will be drafted on Wednesday, include major league RBI king Hal McRae of Kansas City (133) and American League strikeout leader left-hander Floyd Bannister of Seattle (209).

Bannister is one of three A-ranking free agents, who will require compensation in the form of a professional player from a special pool created for the draft. The others are outfielders John Lowenstein of the Baltimore Orioles and Steve Kemp of the Chicago White Sox.

Besides McRae, the 50-plus RBI men included Steve Garvey of Los Angeles (86), Reggie Smith of San Francisco (56), Don Baylor of California (93), Bruce Bochte of Seattle (70), Al Cowens of Seattle (78), Kemp (98) and Lowenstein (66). The 20-plus homer group starred McRae with 27 and also included Baylor (24), Cowens (20) and Lowenstein (24).

Some of these players were not ranked because they ejther had 12 years or more of major league service or had gone through the free agent re-entry draft before.

Despite his A ranking, Bannister is expected to be selected by more teams than any other free agent. He compiled a record of 12-13 with the struggling Mariners this season, and he had an ERA of 3

Nothing decisive in the NHL

Monday is kiss your sister day

By The Associated Press

Much in the same fashion as Bruce Sutter or Rollie Fingers, John Garrett played relief pitcher for the Quebec Nordiaques.

Garrett came off the bench in the second period, took over in goal for the injured Daniel Bouchard, and stymied the Edmonton Oilers as the Nordiques earned a 5-5 National Hockey League tie Monday night.

In the only other NHL game, Jeff Larmer, playing his third NHL game since being recalled from the minors, scored at 12:15 of the final period to give the New Jersey Devils a 2-2 tie with the Washington Capitals.

Garrett, who hadn't played since Oct. 21, replaced Bouchard at 12:30 of the second period and yielded just one goal in nearly a period and-a-half of work.Bouchard, who injured his right hand making a save was to have X-rays taken today to determine the extent of the injury.

"Garrett proved once again that he can do the job, just like he did last year in the playoffs," said Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron. "Garrett is like a relief pitcher, he is always ready in en important situation."

Relief goalies, unlike pitchers, don't get an extensive warmup, but Garrett said he didn't need one against Edmonton.

"In that situation, it doesn't take long to get into the game," said Garrett, who was brilliant for the Nordiques in their seven-game, Adams Division playoff victory over Boston last April."I knew I would see the puck a lot because Edmonton takes a lot of shots."

The only shot to beat Garrett was by left wing Mark Messier at 9:48 of the final period to give the Oilers a 5-4 lead.

But Michel Goulet finished off a three-way passing play with Marian and Peter Stastny at 12:10 to lift the Nordiques into the tie.

"It was a perfect passing play with Peter and Marian," said Goulet. "We must have made five or six passes aftev we crossed the blue line.

"Marian pulled the goaltender and I was just waiting for a rebound, but he gave me a perfect pass and I had a wide-open net."

Marian Stastny scored his 11th and 12th goals of the season, and Peter fired his 14th for the Nordiques, who were never led in the game.

Jaroslav Pouzar gave Edmonton a 1-0 first-period lead, but Marian Stastny nullified that.Jari Kurri, with a power-play effort, and Glenn Anderson scored to make it 3-1 early in the middle period, but Marian Stastny, with his second of the game, and Alain Cote closed that gap.

Peter Stastny's goal pulled the Nordiques even at 8:55 of the second period after defenseman Paul Coffey had made it 4-3 Edmonton.

Wayne Gretzky had four assists in the game to run his league-leading points total to 36. Gretzky has scored 10 goals.

Capitals 2, Devils 2

New Jersey's winless streak stretched to 10 as the Devils managed their third straight tie. Hector Marini connected on a first-period power play for New Jersey, then Bobby Gould and Ken Houston scored in the second period for Washington to set the stage for Larmer's tying tally.

"I can see a lot of Rick Middleton in him," the Devils' Bob MacMillan said of Larmer. MacMillan notched his 300th career assist on Larmer's goal.

"Wow, did he really say that?" Larmer asked when told he was compared to the 50-goal scorer and Lady Byng Trophy winner from the Boston Bruins. "That is a real compliment."

UIL may form a 'Super Conference'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The rulemaking body of the University Interscholastic League has voted to study an application to allow private and parochial schools to compete against the public schools of the UIL for district, region and state championships.

President William McArdle of the Texas Christian Interscholastic League had requested membership for TCIL schools in the UIL.

The 20-member UIL Legislative Council decided Monday to set up a study committee rather than simply deny the request or place it on a referendum to see what UIL schools wanted to do.

The committee also voted to hold hearings on whether to establish a "Super Conference" by elevating some Class 5A schools to 6A and whether to change the UIL prohibitions against basketball summer camps. Another topic for review will be whether to split Class A into two conferences.

THE COMMITTEE will include principals, school board members and school administrators.

Hearings have been scheduled for Dallas-Fort Worth, Lubbock, Houston, San Antonio and Austin.

The Legislative Council also voted to create the position of "state waiver officer" and to set up an appeals boavd to rule on disputes involving residency requirements, athletes' grades and other aspects of eligibility.

A student could appeal rulings of his or her district executive committee to the waiver officer in Austin, and the officer's decision could be appealed to the nine-member board.

The officer would be designated by the UIL director. The board would include at least one represenative from each of the five conferences, A through 5A.

THE LEGISLATIVE Council voted not to consider wrestling as a UIL-sponsored sport.

In other action, the council agreed to hold a referendum on adopting National Federation speed-up rules for baseball; limiting football scrimmages to five days, rather than a week; sponsoring gymnastics; allowing football players to wear helmets during the five days of fall conditioning work; and allowing 4A schools to compete for a team championship in tennis.

Class 5A schools are scheduled to play for a team title in tennis next fall. Individual and doubles tennis competition still will be held in the spring.

Arguello seeks historic title

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Alexis Arguello, who will try to become the first man to win four world boxing titles Friday, reminds trainer Eddie Futch a lot of his friend Joe Louis with the way he handles himself in and out of the ring.

Louis was the legendary "Brown Bomber," who defended the world heavyweight championship a record 25 times.

Arguello is "Flaco Explosivo (Explosive Thin Man)," who is one of six men to win world titles in three weight classes (featherweight, junior lightweight and lightweight) and who will try to win the World Boxing Association junior welterweight title from unbeaten Aaron Pryor in the Orange Bowl.

THE 70-YEAR-OLD Futch, who also trains World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, has trained Arguello for his last five fights.

His association with the late Louis was as a friend and fellow amateur in Detroit.

"I used to spar with Joe," said the 5-foot-7 Futch, who weighed in the low 140s as a amateur. The 6-1½ Louis was a light heavyweight (175 pounds) as an amateur.

"He wanted me to work with him for speed," recalled Futch Monday before Arguello worked out. "I worked out with him got his last national championship."

Futch remembers well Louis' hand speed and power. "When you were in range, suddenly you'd see a flash of light...you were hit."

ARGUELLO DOESN'T have great hand speed, said Futch, but he has great power.

"They (opponents) don't know how hard he hits," said Futch. "Then he hits them. It doesn't matter where, and they think, 'What am I in with.'

"Louis kept pressure on behind a straight left hand," aid Futch. "He kept pressing an opponent, moving in. Arguello doesn't jab as much, but the jab is hard and he keeps pressure on.

"Arguello also attacks to the body, featuring a left hook to the body, like Louis did."

As for Louis and Arguello as men, not just fighters, the word, said Futch, is "gentlemen."

"Louis was a raw rough kid off the streets," said the trainer. "He learned so fast and he became such a gentleman."

ARGUELLO IS working out at an amateur boxing facility at Tropical Park, a one-time racetrack and now public park.

"He is the only pro I let work here," said Dwaine Simspon, boxing director for the Metro Dade Parks and Recreation Department. "He done a lot of work for our program.

"This is a real gentleman."

While Arguello, the current WBC lightweight champion, worked out before a good-sized crowd, then talk to reporters, the 27-year-old Pryor worked out in virtual secrecy, avoiding members of the media for the second straight day.

The defending champion from Cincinnati is upset about a Sports Illustrated story, which he feels portrayed him unfavorably, and members of his camp feel the news media has treated Pryor more like a challenger than a champion.

What's So Great About Our 500 Account? No Surprises.

We know there are a lot of checking accounts around. Each one has a claim to fame. But watch out for the hidden maintenance fees you never know about until you see your first monthly statement. Economy has stopped falling, upturn is still debatable

By LAWRENCE R. KLEIN
Special to the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

In most economic cycles, the turning points are sharply defined. At the bottom — or trough — of the cycle it is usually possible to spot both an end to the decline and a beginning of the upturn. At this time, it is possible to say that the economy as a whole has stopped falling, but there is a great deal of debate about whether or not it has turned upward again. The bottom is turning out to be extremely flat; some statistics suggest that an upturn -ever so slight-has occurred, but other figures continue downward.

This is a situation that calls for unusual powers of judgment and insight. It is necessary to look at extremely short-run movements and, above all, to adjust for seasonal changes. The customary practice of comparing today's figures against those of the corresponding period one year ago can be quite misleading. While that method automatically allows for seasonal variations, it makes a 12-month (four-quarter or 52-week) comparison rather than a short-run, month-to-month (or quarter-to-quarter or week-to-week) comparison.

In comparison with one year ago, the economy is definitely scaled down, but in comparison with one quarter ago, the economy is probably up. Real gross national product grew by a small amount in the second quarter over the first quarter of 1982 (by 2.1 percent at a compounded annual rate) and again by a small amount in the third quarter over the second (0.8 percent at a compounded annual rate). On a year-over-year basis of comparison, however, it is estimated that real GNP fell by 1.6 percent in the second quarter and by 1.9 percent in the third quarter.

How are we to interpret these small quarterly changes? Do they indicate that the economy has changed course? To answer these questions we must wait, we must forecast, and we must look more deeply into available statistics. The figure for 2.1 percent growth in the second quarter of 1982 has gone through two revisions, starting at an estimate of 1.7 percent. The figure for the third quarter will go through some revisions, and we shall have to wait at least two more months before we have a firmer view of what has actually been happening.

A reason for questioning the indicative nature of the quarter-to-quarter GNP movement is that some other measures of the economy are moving in different directions. While GNP has been moving upward for six months, industrial production has been moving downward on a month-to-month basis. Conversely, unemployment has been moving upward on a month-to-month basis.

An Analysis

ORDERS FOR DURABLE goods have been sometimes up, sometimes down, on a monthly change basis. The stock market is decisively up (since August) and interest rates are down. Some kinds of consumer spending are up; others are down. Business capital formation is still falling, while house building is up. These are the mixed results that do not yet give a clear picture of economic revival.

In the third-quarter GNP statistics, the components that contributed most to the small quarterly increases are consumer spending on non-durable goods and services, inventory investment, residential construction and military spending. Net exports, consumer spending on durables, business fixed capital spending and government-civilian outlays are down. Developments in financial markets form the basis for predictions of increases to come, in the fourth quarter of 1982 and the first quarter of 1983, in consumer durables and business investment, while extending the gains in other lines that have already gone up.

Two weak quarters of gain do not constitute the definition of business cycle recovery, but if these quarters were followed by declines, that would be a clear sign that recovery is not at hand. If they are followed by further gains, which is the prediction of Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates, then we have reasonable grounds for having said that we are now in the midst of a very shallow trough. That is our present assessment.

The recovery path is very weak; therefore, unemployment could get worse before it gets better, and, when it does get better, it is not likely to improve very much. That makes the recovery unsatisfactory.

The strong dollar keeps our exports down and imports up. We cannot expect much help from the external economy. The rest of the world is waiting for U.S. leadership in coming out of the recession. We cannot depend on others.

THE PRESENT BASES for recovery, in consumer non-durables and services, with some inventory rebuilding, are not of a lasting nature. That is why we are looking toward consumer durables, more home building, business investment and military spending for confirmation of the turnaround in the economy. Those areas, apart from the military component, are all sensitive to interest costs and will be stimulated by the recent drop in interest rates, a drop that has not yet run its course, according to the Wharton forecast.

After having gone through two quarters of slight GNP growth, what could happen to deflect the economy in a negative direction? The weakness of the second and third quarters is shown by the fact that final sales, measured as GNP less inventory change, did not increase.

If the increase in inventory investment occurred because goods could not be sold, and piled up on distributors or manufacturers' shelves, then we have discouraging signs from the last six months. If the inventory increases occurred as a result of normal restocking in order to have goods available for sale, they are not bad signs. The increases in some other parts of the economy lead me to the conclusion that the recent gains in GNP were not misleading signals.

A frequently encountered scenario is the following: As the economy begins to recover, inflation will rise again, causing the Federal Reserve Board to tighten its policies once more, bringing interest rates up again, choking off housing and investment and leading us right back into the pattern of late 1981-early 1982.

This "triple-dip" scenario does not seem plausible to me. The declines in inflation are not so fragile. Primary product prices are down, wage claims are moderate, the strong dollar holds down import costs, and productivity is on the mend. In this economic environment, I see no inflationary fear in light expansion and do not look for a rerun of the last recession.

It is sad that the lower turning points of the GNP curve can be seen only in the offices of the Bureau of Economic Analysis, where the national accounts are prepared from primary sources, and not in the shopping centers or on factory floors. In another two to six months, it should become more apparent to all that the economy has changed course.

Auction results please

Results of an oilfield equipment auction held recently in Hobbs, New Mexico, by Shell Oil Company greatly exceeded the expectations of Shell officials, according to a spokesman.

More than 200 bidders paid $670,000 at the event, held to dispose of production equipment associated with Shell's North Hobbs Unit Field. Installation of new equipment for a water flood project in the field caused an equipment surplus larger than Shell normally handles, necessitating the auction.

The North Hobbs is a unitized field of 241 wells owned by various working interest partners, with Shell the operator.

Most of the equipment — LACT units, heat treaters and separators, pumping units, piping and tubing — was used but still serviceable, said Jim Butler, Shell purchasing representative in Odessa.

"It was somewhat unusual, for an auction to be happening in the production side of the business," he said. "Usually auctions are held in the drilling, servicing or manufacturing side. We exceeded our internal estimate by twice the amount, so we were very pleased."

Shell had dismantled and stacked the equipment — components of 75 tank batteries — during the last two years while the waterflood project was under construction. Most of the new equipment, including pipelines, went into operation in April of this year.

The project has been the subject of industry attention due to its size, said Welton Moore, production foreman for the field.

Currently, there are 14 new satellite tank batteries and one central one in the field. New pipelines have been laid, and remedial work is continuing on some of the wells, Moore said. By the time the project is completed early in 1983, there will be 189 producing wells and 77 water injection wells in the field.

The auction was one of the largest ever held by Shell, and certainly the largest ever to get rid of production equipment, said Butler.

Normally when Shell has surplus equipment on hand, it is either shuffled to another location within the company or offered to buyers through various sales solicitations, he said. In this case, there was too much equipment available at one time to be "transferred" or kept in storage while waiting for buyers. Shell temporarily rented a 54-acre site near Hobbs to store the equipment prior to the auction.

Now that the equipment is being dispersed, the landscape around Hobbs has changed, according to Moore. "Some of these old landmarks (tank batteries) in the field that have been there for years, aren't there anymore."

Federal judge to hear energy experts' testimony

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge here will spend most of the week hearing technical testimony from energy experts in a complicated lawsuit alleging that the federal government bilked Texas out of $1 billion in off-shore oil and natural gas rights.

U.S. Justice Department attorneys today will begin cross-examining a Houston energy consultant who testified Monday that the federal government has sold more than $7 billion worth of leases in four disputed tracts.

Attorney General Mark White filed the lawsuit in 1979 claiming that Texas is owed $1 billion of that lease revenue.

Testimony began Monday in federal court here before U.S. District Judge Robert Parker.

Governor-elect White contends that the U.S. government drained oil and natural gas from Texas deposits without compensation, and that the federal government benefited from early Texas exploration of off-shore finds.

The non-jury trial is expected to last several days. Any award to the state would benefit the Texas Public School Fund — the beneficiary of state revenues from oil and gas leases.

Under federal and state laws, Texas owns jurisdiction to undersea oil and natural gas extending three leagues or 10.2 nautical miles from shore. Three miles beyond that boundary, the federal government is able to sell tracts to companies for exploration and production.

White began presenting geological surveys to back his contention that drillers in federal waters drained oil and natural gas from Texas deposits.

The lawsuit also alleges that the U.S. Department of the Interior sold leases at a higher price because investors already knew of Texas' proven finds.

Lawyers for the Interior Department say Texas was properly compensated, and that the state has no legal grounds for its claim that federal sales benefited from the state's experience.

White, two attorneys from his Austin office and a Beaumont lawyer hired by the state as a consultant questioned Houston energy consultant P.T. Von Tungeln during the opening day of the trial.

Von Tungeln estimated that auctions of federal off-shore drilling rights have netted more than $7.228 billion. White says the state is owed $1 million of that revenue.

White also quizzed Texas Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong on the history of off-shore leases in the Gulf of Mexico.

Armstrong said there were unresolved problems between the state and Interior Department "right from the beginning."

"We were asked to operate in the dark," Armstrong said.

Agreements to compensate the state for resources drained from state lands are normally hammered out by the governor of each state and the secretary of the interior before leases are auctioned.

U.S. Justice Department attorneys Margaret Strand, Andrew Walsh and Charles Findlay are defending the federal government.

Sonangol commissions $200 million EOR project

MALONGO, Cabinda, Angola (SWN) — A $200 million gas project to boost oil production was commissioned here Monday.

Constructed for Sonangol, the Angolan state oil company, and Cabinda Gulf Oil Company, a subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corporation, the project was designed and installed in the Cabinda Concession to increase the recovery of petroleum from two reservoirs through pressure maintenance by gas injection, to provide gas for existing and new gas lift operations to other reservoirs in the Concession and to extract natural gas liquids which will be sold for export.

Funding for the project, one of the largest single investments made in Angola since its independence, was negotiated in three stages. The Export-Import Bank of the United States provided $85 million, a syndicate of international commercial banks led by Morgan Guaranty Trust of New York provided $50 million, and a further $18 million was financed by the Italian Export Credit Agency.

The project marks the midpoint of a five-year program to substantially increase crude oil production from the offshore fields in the Cabinda Concession, where current production averages 85,000 barrels per day. Approximately 60 percent of Angola's crude oil is produced in the Concession, where a major new discovery, the Takula Field, is being developed. Initial increased production from this field will begin in late 1982 and production will increase over the next several years as additional development wells are drilled.

The Cabinda Gas Project consists of three newly-constructed platforms with associated compression and process facilities. The process facilities are designed to handle over 150 million cubic feet of gas per day.

The gas is compressed to 800 psi for liquid extraction and gas lifting. The remaining gas, up to 80 million cubic feet per day, will be compressed to 3,200 psi and injected into two project reservoirs. After compression and dehydration of the gas, natural gas liquids are extracted. The facilities are designed to extract up to 9,000 barrels per day of natural gas liquids. The natural gas liquid is fractionated into a propane-butane mix of liquid petroleum gas.

The liquid petroleum gas product is delivered by subsea pipeline to a 75,000 cubic meter refrigerated storage tanker, the Berge Sisar, which is permanently moored about two kilometers from one of the gas injection platforms. Here the LPG will be refrigerated to minus 40 degrees Fahrenheit and stored. The LPG will later be transferred to refrigerated tankers for export. The export will be sold as petrochemical feedstocks.

The prime contractor for the project was Marine Contractors Inc. of New Orleans, Louisiana. -30-CONTACT: Sherry Zippay, Gulf Oil Corporation, 713/754-2355.

T-bills bouncing back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities have bounced back following declines the previous week, the Treasury Department says.

About $5.6 billion in new three-month bills were auctioned Monday at an average discount rate of 7.964 percent, up from the 7.813 percent of last week.

The government also sold about $5.6 billion in six-month bills at an average rate of 8.397 percent, up from 8.231 percent.

Monday's yields, a measure of the cost of government borrowing from the public, were the highest since Oct. 25, when rates were 8.031 percent for three-month bills and 8.472 percent for six-month bills.

The discount rate on the new T-bills understates the actual return to investors. That return will come to an average of 8.24 percent on three-month bills and 8.89 percent on six-month bills.

Beginning Tuesday, in private accounts linked to federal securities:

—Savings and loan associations may pay as much as 8.897 percent interest on $10,000-minimum six-month money market certificates and commercial banks may pay 8.647 percent. The ceilings had been at 8.731 percent and 8.481 percent for the past week.

The ceilings are set one-quarter point (for banks) and one-half point (for S&Ls) above the higher of two figures: the new discount rate on six-month T-bills or the average for such bills at the four most recent auctions — 8.215 percent in this case.

—Banks and S&Ls may pay as much as 7.964 percent on $7,500-minimum three-month certificates compared with last week's 7.813 percent.

—S&Ls may pay as much as 9.85 percent and commercial banks as much as 9.6 percent interest on 2½-year "small-saver" certificates, down from 10.2 percent and 9.95 percent the past two weeks.

New tax-exempt, one-year "all-savers" certificates issued by financial institutions through Nov. 27 pay 6.66 percent when held to maturity. To gain the maximum tax exemption — $1,000 for individuals and $2,000 for married couples — an individual would have to invest $15,015 at the current rate and a couple twice as much.

He said 'buy 'em'; Now grand jury says try him

HOUSTON (AP) — A tycoon who climbed from hard-scrabble beginnings as the son of an oil production company foreman to own a $3.5 million South Texas mansion has become the center of a four-year probe by investigators wondering how he made his fortune.

Donald Glenn Crawford of Carrizo Springs is nothing if not ambitious, according to one man who did not want to be identified.

"The more successful he became the more he wanted to buy Mexico, and then Central America if he could and then South America," the acquaintance told the Houston Chronicle. "He got bigger and bigger. I'm sure he felt bigger than the law. He probably didn't even know what the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act was. His motto was 'Buy 'em,'" the acquaintance said.

But last week, a federal grand jury here indicted Crawford and some of his business acquaintances on 49 counts of bribery, obstruction of justice and violating the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

In the indictment, federal prosecutors claim, Crawford, 48, conspired between December 1977 and May 1980 to win $225.4 million in contracts by paying two former officials of Pemex, the Mexican petroleum monopoly, nearly $10 million.

He pleaded innocent and was freed on a $50,000 personal recognizance bond.

Crawford worked his way from the Oklahoma oil patch to become one of the world's leading fabricators of packaged natural gas compressor systems, the complex devices that keep gas flowing through the pipelines.

Worth about $40 million, Crawford built a $3.5 million mansion on 3,000 acres in Carrizo Springs, a home so grandiose it was nicknamed Carrizo Hilton.

Crawford, who weighs 310 pounds and stands 5-feet-11, grew up at Carter Grissom camp, two miles outside Seminole, Okla., where his father was a production foreman for Carter Oil Co.

"We thought we lived pretty good," said Crawford, recalling his childhood. "I hunted and fished, that's the only thing I ever did — and still do."

He left Oklahoma and came to Houston, where he worked briefly as a draftsman at the Harris County Flood Control Office. He took a job with Cherco Engineering Inc. of Longview and four years later was transferred back to Houston as a salesman.

Crawford left the company in 1963 and formed Compression Inc. of Houston. He said he sold the company six years later to Siboney, a Dallas firm, and accepted $4.6 million in stock as payment.

He used the money to purchase the Pearl Beer distributorship in Corpus Christi, which he also sold several years later and formed Crawford Enterprises Inc.

"After a $40,000 loss the first year, we made money and earnings doubled the next six years. Our volume grew bigger and bigger and we ended up with the largest compressor fabrication plant in the United States," he said.

Crawford's business acquaintances swear by his honesty.

Bob Boone, with Compression Systems Inc., of Midland, said Crawford was a man who "kept every commitment he ever made" and had a handshake agreement that was good enough for most of his business associates.

Bank merger approved

AMARILLO (SWN) — The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas today announced approval of the application of First Amarillo Bancorporation Inc. to acquire First Bank of Amarillo, a de novo institution formed to acquire certain assets and assume the liabilities of Texas Bank of Amarillo pursuant to the emergency provision of the Bank Holding Company Act.

Watt adresses API

HOUSTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt told delegates to the American Petroleum Institute's annual convention that they "can count on" a large increase in federal land for energy exploration.

"In the future, we will make available 200 million acres of land each and every year," Watt said. "You can count on it."

He said the Interior Department will lease more onshore acreage this year than the Carter administration did in its entire four years.

Watt said Monday that the Reagan administration wants to establish a consistent policy that the energy industry can depend upon.

"Government must be predictable. It must be dependable," he said. "Industry must be able to plan ahead."

Earnings trailing prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Median earnings of families with wage and salary workers rose only 3 percent for the 12 months ending in September, leaving them behind the rise in consumer prices over the same period, government figures show.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics listed "median usual earnings" for such families at $455 a week through Sept. 30.

It said that over the same period of time, the Consumer Price Index rose at an annual rate of 5.6 percent — 2.6 percentage points ahead of the earnings increase.

In the same report, the bureau said the median weekly earnings of wage and salary workers with full-time jobs in the third quarter were 7.1 percent higher in at the same time a year ago — more than enough to keep them ahead of the rate of inflation.

The government defined "usual weekly earnings" as the money a worker gets in his or her paycheck before any deductions. This includes any overtime, commission or tips. The median is the mid-point in a series of numbers.

In the third quarter of 1982, the bureau said, 41.1 million families — or 66 percent of all U.S. families — had earnings exclusively from wages or salaries. An additional 14 percent of American families had earnings solely from self employment or combined self employment with wage and salary income.

"Largely because of increased unemployment," the bureau said, "the number of families with no earners rose by almost 800,000 over the year, to 12.1 million."

Jobless figures for October, released last Friday by the Labor Department, showed that a seasonally adjusted 10.4 percent of the labor force was unemployed with 11.6 million people out of work.

The study also found that married-couple families had median earnings of $498 a week in the third quarter. It listed the highest — in families where both the husband and wife and one other household member were working — at $830 a week. The lowest was $180 a week in families where the only worker was a son or daughter.

At $257 a week, the study added, the median earnings of families maintained by a woman without a husband in the home remained about half as that of married-couple families.

Federal Reserve decision credited with strengthening dollar

By The Associated Press

A decision by the Federal Reserve Board not to cut a key lending rate has been credited for the growing strength of the U.S. dollar abroad, while at the same time forcing stock prices into a broad retreat at home.

American consumers, meanwhile, are giving mixed signals about their hopes for economic recovery.

A survey released Monday showed their confidence in the economy fell in October, but the government said they took on $1.1 billion more installment debt than they paid off a month earlier — a sign they might be gaining confidence and be willing to spend more.

In foreign exchange trading Monday in Europe, the dollar reached new peaks in relation to the French franc and Italian lira and also hit a record high against the Norwegian krone while reaching six-year highs against the West German mark and British pound. The dollar also rose against most currencies in U.S. activity.

A New York bank, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., said the dollar was at a 12-year high against the currencies of 15 industrial trading partners.

European dealers attributed the dollar's gains to the absence of a widely expected cut in the Federal Reserve Board's 9.5 percent discount rate, the interest on Fed loans to banking institutions, and on other indications that interest rates might not continue falling.

Although U.S. interest rates have tumbled sharply since June, they remain high in relation to inflation and when compared with interest rates in other countries with stable currencies. That has made dollar-denominated investments attractive.

Stocks lost some of their recent glitter, however, and the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 14.34 points Monday to 1,037.44. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange slowed to 75.24 million shares from 96.55 million shares traded Friday.

Analysts said the retreat also reflected disappointment that the discount rate was not cut. But unlike the dollar, expectations that rates will climb dampen the attractiveness of stocks because higher rates would endanger corporate profits and boost yields of competitive investments, such as money market mutual funds and bonds.

Reflecting that notion, yields on short-term Treasury securities auctioned Monday rebounded from the previous week, the Treasury Department said.

As a result, banks and savings and loan associations today can begin paying more interest on six-month money market certificates, whose returns are pegged to the weekly auctions.

Savings and loan associations may pay as much as 8.897 percent interest on $10,000-minimum-deposit certificates, while commercial banks may pay 8.647 percent. The ceilings had been at 8.731 percent and 8.481 percent, respectively, for the past week.

The drop in consumer confidence in the economy came as rising unemployment and persistent economic stagnation continued to worry Americans, the Conference Board reported.

Plans for purchases of homes, automobiles and appliances also fell, according to the business-supported board's survey of 5,000 households nationwide.

The Conference Board's Consumer Confidence Index, which combines measurements of Americans' assessment of present conditions and expectations for the next six months, fell to 49.2 in October from 54.4 in September and 53.7 in August. It had climbed in each of the previous four months, reaching 61.6 in July.

Many economists contend that consumer spending must increase sharply in order to stimulate new orders, which in turn would allow manufacturers to increase production and, perhaps, hire back workers.

Dollar trails key currencies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar trailed against key currencies in early trading today after dipping against the Japanese yen. The price of gold inched up.

The dollar eased back from record highs posted Monday against the French franc and Italian lira.

In Tokyo, it closed at 273.50 yen, down from Monday's late rate of 276.60 yen. It was the dollar's lowest level in Tokyo since Oct. 22 and Japanese dealers attributed the drop to prospects of lower European interest rates.

In London, it cost $1.6560 to buy one British pound, against $1.6547 late Monday, a six-year high for the dollar.

Other morning rates compared to Monday's late levels:

7.3050 French francs, slightly down from 7.3085

2.5880 German marks, down from 2.5913

Interior seeks court order stopping Yates project

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — The Interior Department is seeking a court order to prevent an oil company from continuing to drill a natural gas well in a protected federal wilderness area northeast of here.

U.S. Attorney Bill Lutz said late Monday night that the department wants him to seek the order to stop Yates Petroleum Corp. of Artesia, N.M., from drilling in the 8,500-acre Salt Creek Wilderness.

"I understand the paperwork is on the way," he said. "We would have to prepare the suit and file it with the court. A temporary restraining order would have to be followed within 10 days by a hearing for a temporary injunction."

Meanwhile, New Mexico District Judge Paul Snead of Roswell on Monday issued an order barring protesters from blocking access to the drilling rig for at least 10 days.

A group of protesters Sunday night pitched tents on a road carved into the drilling site trying to halt the drilling. The campers used cattle to block an access road to prevent water-hauling trucks from reaching the drilling site, and there was a minor scuffle as company officials moved to clear the road.

The protesters said Monday they had given up their blockade of the access road.

Snead ordered the protesters to stay away from that road and the necessary routes of access on surrounding lands to the rig. He also ordered them to stay at least 50 feet beyond the graded portion of the roadway and the drilling site.

Snead set a hearing for Nov. 15, asking parties in the case to show why an application by Yates Petroleum for a preliminary injunction should not be granted to halt further interference by protesters.

Last Wednesday, Yates Petroleum was issued a citation for trespassing by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Thomas Smylie, a spokesman for the service, said the company shut down drilling for about one hour after receiving the citation, then resumed operations.

The company, which moved into the area Nov. 1, says its state-issued lease to subsurface mineral rights allows the drilling.

The surface of the wilderness, which lies within the Bitter Lakes National Wildlife Refuge, is controlled by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The state kept its subsurface mineral rights when it sold the wilderness area to the federal government in 1954.

Ray Graham, director of the state Land Office's oil and gas division, said the state leased the mineral rights to Yates Petroleum in 1972. The lease stipulated Oct. 31, 1982, as the deadline for development of the site.

Last week, conservationists criticized the Interior Department for refusing to press charges against Yates Petroleum.

Terry Sopher of the Wilderness Society said the department's "failure to act decisively to end the illegal action is a major break with the obligation to protect these lands."

Hospice: Helping patients 'live until they die'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Tears still come frequently for Jim Bradshaw, but he's moving in the right direction to live with the grief he feels.

Bradshaw has had his share of heartaches. In the last three decades his grandmother and two wives have died; both wives died of cancer. But with the help of hospice, he was able to share his second wife's last days with a true meaning of life.

Amy, Bradshaw's first wife, died in Tulsa, Okla., in 1972. Their daughter, Alice, was 8 years old when Amy went into the intensive care unit. She didn't understand why she couldn't be with her mother.

With her stepmother it was different. Alice experienced the loss and is now able to begin the grieving process. She is 19 years old and became the homemaker in the Bradshaw home during this period.

While it was not intended that his second wife, Ruth, get well, she did die well with the assistance of Hospice of Midland Inc.

"CANCER IS A difficult matter to deal with," he said. "It requires special understanding. It is largely not understood by the public — too many myths surround it."

In a period of 11 months, Bradshaw and the family supported Ruth through the first sign of pain to the hospice approach and death.

During this time, the recurrence of cancer was discovered. Bradshaw said the family accompanied Ruth through several levels of treatment and then they shifted from curative to palliative care.

"We had the knowledge and assurance at each step that we had the best medical teams ever assembled at our disposal," Bradshaw said, explaining that Midland Memorial Hospital has "excellent technical and nursing staffs."

"We never felt a need for more than we have right here," he said, referring to the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center at MMH.

Entering the hospital for any reason is difficult for many patients and families, and Bradshaw said the nursing care and staff at MMH were significant through this period.

"The hospital is geared, structured and properly dedicated to curing patients and sending them back to normal lives," Bradshaw said. "Everything is aimed at this and should be. One must feel that a return to normalcy is going to be the result of an effect."

WHEN A FAMILY member has cancer, the hospital care changes.

"When one enters the cancer (Allison) center the whole atmosphere changes," he said. There one enters a total caring world. The entire staff, from volunteers to oncologists, demonstrates a tenderness, not just for the patient, but for the whole family.

"The caring takes on a new dimension not felt in the hospital room," Bradshaw added. "The oncology team knows that many of their patients will die of cancer, yet they will give everything they have in the attempt to cure. How they walk that line day in and day out is difficult to understand."

Perhaps, for the Bradshaws, the physicians' medical care was aided by the type of nursing care Ruth received.

"Three levels of nursing — hospital, oncology and hospice — are appropriate to the patient's needs and our experience at each level was very satisfying. We have only praise for each."

And it was Midland's Hospice that befriended the Bradshaw family and brought clarity to a very muddy and dark time in those last hours.

ALTHOUGH RAVAGED by cancer, Ruth did not lie forgotten in the hospital, her veins jammed with intravenous needles, waiting for a nurse to bring the next injection. Instead she died at home with family, friends, neighbors — and hospice.

"Then you enter the world of hospice care," Bradshaw said. "The word 'terminal' must be faced. The shift from curative to palliative treatment must be made. You leave all the institutionalized care behind. The mixture of relief and dread is at first difficult. Hospice nurses must be very special to deal with this. This third level of nursing is unique."

As a minister of education in the Wilshire Park Baptist Church, Bradshaw had an opportunity to come in contact with Hospice of Midland Inc. on two occasions about a year before his first-hand experience with the group.

"It wasn't an immediate decision," Bradshaw said, referring to the family decision to cross the threshold from cure to death. "We talked at great length about it. This was our choice as a couple."

Bradshaw explained he was the primary nursing care person for his grandmother, who was institutionalized before her death. While Bradshaw's grandmother would have benefited from the hospice experience, circumstances surrounding his first wife's terminal disease did not make the hospice approach possible, Bradshaw explained.

"WHEN YOU COME under the hospice care, it moves you toward 'hey, this is going to end,'" Bradshaw said. "Their presence tells you day after day you're now moving toward death and we care. The hospice people make it as easy as possible until you die."

Bradshaw said he and Ruth went through the stages of shock, denial, bargain, depression and acceptance, but never anger.

"The grief process began in February of 1981 when we realized Ruth's mortality — she would die from the life-threatening disease," Bradshaw said. "Shock set in...We tried to deny it — 'not me; not now.' Down deep we knew; it is now.

"But there was never anger," he said. "Our Christian faith would not allow that. Acceptance came in September — life would soon end in months, perhaps weeks."

However, Ruth never lost her sense of humor. Bradshaw remembered when Ruth's 32-year-old sister came to Texas from Michigan.

"Nancy said, 'Ruth I'm not going to be at your funeral,'" Bradshaw said. "Then Ruth looked at Nancy and said, 'Nancy don't worry about it. I won't be there either.'"

AND THEN Ruth bargained.

"Ruth said she couldn't die until the family could all be here for the funeral. That wouldn't be until Oct. 4 (1982). She died Oct. 13. When Ruby Skelton (hospice sitting nurse) reached over and closed her eyes, I said to myself — man what a relief," her husband said. "I tried to act as normal as possible."

And the dying process was made possible through the hospice philosophy.

"Every technique, method, approach or program for cure is laid aside," Bradshaw said. "The aim now is to make this person's remaining days as comfortable and pain-free as possible. The patient enters a world of care as different as the cold, hard hospital gurney is from the silk pillow. Hospice put its arms around us and held us gently."

Exhibiting this "gentleness," 11 hospice staff members offered nutrition tips, fixed Ruth's hair, washed the family clothes, counseled and comforted.

Among the hospice staff, Ruth Dawson, Nan Oestmann, Beverlee Lanning, Gail Wilson, all registered nurses, and Susie Wilmeth, a nutritionist, remember Ruth as an inspiration.

"Lots of special things were done out of loving, caring hearts," Bradshaw said. "When they said to call any time day or night, you knew they would and did respond."

Bradshaw said hospice brought perspective to his personal theology of caring and ministry.

"Hospice has helped clarify my understanding of prayer, faith, miracles and God's will," he explained. "By demonstrating how to deal with the dying, hospice has matured my theology of death.

"Hospice enabled my wife to live in her own home, with her husband, with her friends, with her children and grandchildren, with the smell of her kitchen, with familiar sounds and pictures — hospice made it possible for her to live until she died."

Coping with death through care

Hospice eases way to death

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

From medieval times to the present, the word "hospice" has gone from meaning shelter for travelers on difficult journeys to a concept of specialized care for the terminally ill.

Today, hospices throughout the country assist many weary travelers on the long road to death.

The hospice concept came from Dr. Cicely Saunders, a London physician who was unhappy about the way her dying patients were being treated in the hospital.

Dying patients wanted peace — instead they were scheduled for tests, meals, sleep and visitors. While doctors and nurses were trained to think of conquering illness and disease, they were reluctant to talk honestly about death.

Saunders eventually opened St. Christopher's Hospice in London in 1967 and began a new way of caring for the dying and their families.

Presently, Hospice of Midland Inc., is helping about 29 "travelers" to their destination "by making the road less lonely" through home care.

While Midland's hospice is one of 19 state members of the National Hospice Organization, programs exist in virtually every state in the country.

NHO members are promoting the hospice organization for support and public awareness this week as part of the first National Hospice Week.

Hospice is dedicated to helping persons in the last phases of incurable disease, providing them with a life as full and comfortable as possible.

The physician-directed Hospice of Midland administers its program of medical care to the terminally ill, furnishing health care delivery to the home.

The employees or volunteers of hospice recognize dying as a normal process and the program neither hastens nor postpones death.

The concept of care prepares the patient and family through sensitive caring of their needs — emphasizing a mental, spiritual and physical preparation of death that is satisfactory to them.

It is an alternative to therapeutic or institutional care for the terminally ill, with the care administered primarily in the patient's home.

The hospice team consists of nurses, physicians, social workers, counselors and volunteers who contribute palliative and supportive services that

Sixth grade students plant garden of vegetable delights

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Ask a farmer and he'll tell you it's not always blue skies and yellow corn. Ask a florist and he'll tell you it's not always red roses and prolific peat moss. But ask a sixth grade gardener at Crockett Elementary School and he'll tell you that no matter how cloudy, cool or windy planting day is, onion bulbs will grow upright even if you stuff them in the dirt upside down.

He also can show you how to water freshly-planted vegetables lightly so you won't knock off frail leaves or knock the newborn plants over with a gush of water. He can explain a plant's root system and tell you which nutrients to add to the soil if your tomato plant has only a few scrawny leaves showing above the ground.

He can tell you these things because, since September, he's studied them at school, and Monday he and his science classmates planted their very own garden.

Between the large hedges along the south side of a school wing are seven freshly dug gardens planted with broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, red and green cabbage and onions.

According to Crockett sixth grade science teacher Dorothy Nash, the goal to plant a garden was met due to Wolfe Nursery's Hugh Franks, who unhesitatingly offered his assistance when she first approached him in September.

Monday, planting day, was his third visit to the sixth grade science classes, Franks said.

"I didn't realize that sixth graders would be interested in a garden," he said. "But it makes it a whole lot easier. A lot of them have had some experience. Maybe three or four have parents who have gardens or they'd worked in their grandparents' garden on a couple of weekends. But they'd never approached it from a scientific standpoint. They'd never taken a soil sample to see what should be done."

But they did under the leadership of Franks. On his first meeting with the students, he explained the root system of plants. He discussed the way roots receive nutrients from the soil and what needs to be added to the soil if the plants display certain symptoms. On the second visit, the students took samples of the soil, ran pH tests and figured out what type of organic material would be needed to supplement the soil.

Franks donated the minerals and organic materials, the plants, the water container and the hoes and rakes the students grasped with determined hands as they watched him struggle to break up solid clods of dirt.

"It's a little bit hard to do," Franks panted. "So do it," he added with a laugh, shoving the hoe at an empty-handed student, who immediately joined the group pounding on the mound of dirt.

"He's been great with the kids," Mrs. Nash said. "He's presented it as a challenge, as something that was fun

Laboring over the land, students in Crockett Elementary's seven sixth grade science classes turned into gardeners Monday. The planting of winter vegetables followed in-class instruction and will end, hopefully, with a successful harvest and a hearty meal.

Roger Stinson, left, representing the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans in Midland, accepts a stack of tickets from Mayor G. Thane Akins Monday as a donation to the organization. The tickets, for a show called the Magical Fantasy Review to be presented at Midland High School Dec. 20 at 7 p.m., were purchased by the city of Midland and then donated back to the Brotherhood chapter. Tickets, priced at $3.50 apiece, are available from members of the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans.

relieve the pain and stress of terminal illness.

For those who wish to die at home, a hospice nurse will come to the home, evaluate the situation and, working with the patient's doctor, will teach a relative or friend how to care for the patient and give the required pain-killing medication.

A hospice social worker will assist the patient in attending to any business, such as a will, funeral arrangements or medication payments.

The specially trained volunteers — probably the heart of the organization — visit, sometimes talking, reading, writing letters or running errands for the dying patient.

The hospice staff works as a team, giving 24-hour, seven-day-a-week, visiting care as necessary.

The hospice service does not end with the death of the patient, but continues in the form of grief therapy and visits by hospice personnel who want to be sure the family is adjusting to its loss and is carrying on.

The first hospice in the U.S. was started in 1974 and the movement has grown through community action. Funding for hospices began with individual gifts and foundation grants, but today an increasing number of health insurance programs are paying part of the cost of hospice care.

However, Midland's hospice currently provides care to anyone free of charge.

On Aug. 19, 1982, Congress adopted legislation that will provide hospice care coverage to the terminally ill Americans who are eligible for Medicare benefits. The legislation, incorporated in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act, allows Medicare reimbursement to qualified hospices that provide physician services, nursing care, medical-social services, homemaker-home health aide services, short-term inpatient care, outpatient drugs for pain relief and respite care.

and something that was beneficial to them."

And it's not over until harvesttime, she added. Schedules have been made so that each child will have a turn being responsible for the watering and caring of his class' garden. If there is an early frost, students will place plastic containers over the plants to keep them from freezing. "We'll be like farmers," Mrs. Nash said, "totally at the mercy of the weather."

And if the weather holds out, harvest should take place in time for a little snacking before Christmas.

"We'll eat the vegetables in class," Mrs. Nash explained. "And we'll study the best way to prepare them so that they can get the most nutritional value from them."

Although chow time will be the end of that particular winter crop, plans call for the planting of poppies in front of the school next spring, she added.

The school year for the seven sixth grade science classes began with the study of flowering plants, donated by Buddy's Flowers. Other class periods have been spent studying solar energy and visiting the Marian Blakemore Planetarium to get a taste of astronomy. Also, representatives from Jerry's Perfect Pet Shop visited the class to discuss the behavior of fish, she said.

The help from area businesses and the community is gratifying, Mrs. Nash added. "All we've had to do is approach the people and all of them have been so cooperative and willing to help all they can."

Odessan shot by sheriff's deputy

ODESSA — Ector County Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee has ordered an autopsy on the body of an Odessa man who was shot and killed by a sheriff's deputy attempting to arrest him on a traffic charge early this morning.

James P. Miller, 21, was shot during a struggle with deputy Elton Blount in the 6300 block of Golder in rural Odessa about 2 a.m., according to Lumpee, who said he was called out at 3:10 a.m. and pronounced Miller dead at the scene.

Lumpee said Blount had stopped a vehicle occupied by two men and had placed one man under arrest and was attempting to arrest Miller when a fight broke out and Miller tried to grab the deputy's gun when he was shot. The other man was not identified.

Miller's body was taken to the Easterling-Wilson Furneral Home and an inquest into the death may be ordered, according to Lumpee. Sheriff Bob Brookshire, who instructed his deputies not to talk about the case, could not be reached for comment.

Injured motorcyclist in hospital

ODESSA — An Odessa motorcyclist was in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital this morning after his bike collided with a pickup truck about 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Craig C. Weatherbee, 23, suffered head and leg injuries in the crash, which occurred as his motocycle ran a red light at the intersection of 17th Street and North Tom Green and collided with a Ford pickup driven by 22-year-old Derrel W. Armstrong, according to police.

Armstrong, also of Odessa, was not injured. He was northbound on Tom Green and Weatherbee was eastbound on 17th at the time.

Break-in reported

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Barry Reece of 1000 W. Marlin said jewelry, guns, a TV set and a jar of coins worth a total of $20,925 were taken in a break-in at his residence Monday.

And Wallace Mills of the Chateau Apartments, 1603 N. Midkiff, told officers jewelry, clothing and some coins valued in excess of $5,000 were stolen from his apartment Monday after someone broke a window to gain entry.

Accident kills man

CRANE — One man was killed in a one-vehicle accident 14 miles north of here on U.S. 385 early this morning, according to Crane County Sheriff's Department.

No identification was immediately available.

The 5 a.m. accident was investigated by the Department of Public Safety. No additional details had been released by presstime.

Proposal filed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill to prohibit outgoing governors from making last-minute regent appointments was filed Monday by Sens. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, and Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Connection leads to 'dry' courthouse

Workers in Midland County Courthouse and other nearby downtown office buildings discovered they were in the middle of a "dry" town this morning if they tried to quench their thirst at the water fountain.

From 8 until about 10 a.m., water to those buildings was shut off when the contractor for Eagle Plaza decided to make a water connection, according to City Engineer George Medley. The contractor shut off the water without notifying City Hall.

According to Medley, contractors must go through City Hall to have the water turned off. And in most cases, water connections are not made during regular business hours.

The contractor was straightened out about procedure, said Medley, and city employees were turning the water back on by 10 a.m.

Troubled economy puts crimp in fashion industry

By EILEEN PUTMAN
AP Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mirrors and chrome gleam in the Fifth Avenue showroom where celebrities like Bianca Jagger and Lauren Hutton view Halston's new collection. But the designer has his eye on J.C. Penney shoppers.

Anne Klein is nipping prices as well as waistlines for spring and is developing a line for the "working girl."

At Carol Horn's, spring clothes are being offered in one-color groups rather than the usual three or four color selections.

Hemmed in by a troubled economy and even more troubled shoppers, top fashion houses are reaching beyond their usual markets or retrenching to wait for better times.

But there are no immediate signs that better times are coming.

THE CONFERENCE BOARD, an independent economic research organization, says consumers are more disenchanted than at any point in the 15 years it has been surveying consumer confidence — an indication of the public's buying mood.

September's confidence index was 54.4, and in October it fell to below 50. This time last year it hovered at 70.

"The message is unmistakable. There's a tremendous amount of restlessness and uncertainty and unhappiness. Things have been lousy too long," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the Board's consumer research center.

Sales in the $88 billion-a-year apparel industry reflect the mood, and they are up only 4 to 5 percent over last year — not enough to keep up with inflation.

The industry is hoping for a turnaround in 1983, but apparel manufacturing firms are continuing to fail and industry jobless figures run higher than the national average.

INFLATION IS BEING held down, but prospective shoppers are cautious because of high unemployment.

"The consumer is able to spend money, but he chooses not to. The consumer's net worth is rising, but he lacks confidence because of the high level of unemployment," said Monroe Greenstein, an analyst with Bear, Sterns & Co.

All this has unsettled fashion houses where, at shows each spring and fall, designers try to sell their new collections to store buyers.

Big names like Halston — whose products bring in $200 million annually — still spend lavishly to showcase designs for the fashion elite. But even he is reaching further for the mass market.

Earlier this fall, it was announced that Halston will design moderately priced women's, men's and children's clothing and home furnishings for J.C. Penney, the nation's third-largest retailer.

HALSTON ENTERPRISES WILL take in an estimated $1 billion over the life of the six-year agreement, according to Michael Lichtenstein, Halston's managing director.

"Halston has always felt he wanted to reach a broader public than he has been able to with the prices he has," said Lichtenstein.

Analyst Greenstein puts it another way: "The real big money is made in the mass market."

Designer Carol Horn found other ways to cope with the economy. Her spring show was not the lavish production that many houses staged last year. There were fewer outfits and they were in fewer color selections.

"The buyers don't have much money to spend," she said. "I'd rather put my money into something else."

That something else, she says, would be a leisure sportswear line or at-home wear that would be practical and sell in higher volume than couture products.

ANNE KLEIN, FOR example, is thinking of lower priced sportswear to "reach a more working woman that can't afford couture prices," says Bob Vehlow, Klein's vice-president of sales.

"It'll be a different market — the working girl who's not a lawyer and not an actress, and who makes $400 a week," he said.

Prices usually increase by about 10 percent from one year to the next, but Anne Klein — like other designers — is cutting prices. A jacket that would have been marked $185 will bear a $175 ticket for spring.

"It has nothing to do with our business. It's how much a woman can spend," said Vehlow. "Last year she would maybe buy three outfits. This year, she might buy only a couple of pieces."

Shoppers who do venture out will find sales and promotions in nearly all the major retail stores.

Mountain more of tourist distraction than attraction

By RANDALL HACKLEY
AP Writer

LAKEWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Locals get a kick when visitors come to see Florida's largest mountain and end up in guffaws instead of breathless "ahhhs."

"It's really nothing but a pimple on the horizon," Lakewood resident Terry Washington says of the Florida Panhandle's Britton Hill. "It's even funnier when climbers carrying fancy rock climbing equipment come to conquer this mini-mountain."

Britton Hill is the smallest biggest mountain in the nation. The highs and lows of mountains in the United States range from Alaska's Mount McKinley at 20,320 feet, to Britton Hill — altitude 345 feet.

"This isn't much of a mountain, if you ask me," says Margaret Britton Richbourg. "You can't even break your breath walking up it. Still, each year we get a few dozen people from around the States who come to see the highest point in Florida. It strikes our funny bone."

When the Britton family founded Lakewood in 1904, the town flourished briefly with a special railroad serving lumberjacks in southeast Alabama and northwest Florida. But when the sawmill went broke, the railroad closed, and the town scrambled for recognition.

Locals soon claimed Lakewood as the state's highest point.

State cartographers didn't know until 1972 which of the low-lying hills in Florida's uplands was the highest. Some thought 320-foot Iron Mountain near Lake Wales, or Laurel Hill, near Paxton, were higher than Britton Hill.

When a statewide survey revealed that Britton Hill was the highest point in Florida, the Richbourgs responded with lukewarm enthusiasm.

"What's to hoot about? Even the Washington monument is higher than here," Bill Richbourg says. The Washington, D.C., edifice is 210 feet higher than Britton Hill.

The Richbourgs and only 10 other families live in this tiny town, which lost its post office in 1979 during federal cutbacks. To mail a letter, residents travel two miles to Florala, Ala.

Three years ago, former U.S. Rep. Bob Sikes, D-Fla., unofficially commemorated the state's highest hill by establishing a private park in the Richbourg's front yard.

The Hazel Britton Memorial Park, dedicated to the town's founder, is composed of a rusting metal sculpture of the Earth, surrounded by some roses.

The Richbourgs have offered to sell the site to the state to set up a public park commemorating the "mountain." The offer has fallen on deaf ears.

"I guess no one wants to buy the highest point in Florida," Richbourg, a retired Pensacola municipal judge, says.

One Naples businessman considered buying the land in hopes it could be a tourist attraction, but withdrew his bid because "he didn't see much future in the site," Richbourg says.

Unlike Mount McKinley, soybean-covered Britton Hill in the desolate red clay hills of northwest Florida remains a forgotten anomaly on cartographer's charts.

In northwest Rhode Island, Jerimoth Hill is that state's highest mountain at 812 feet. In north-central Louisiana, Driskell Mountain soars comparatively over Britton Hill at 535 feet. And an unnamed Brandywine Creek hill in northeast Delaware is that state's tallest at 442 feet.

Any notoriety is easy to overlook — just like Britton Hill — for many neighboring residents.

From the top of Britton Hill, the only thing visible is a patch of bug-infested bushes. And, through a clearing, there is a barely perceptible view of about 100 feet of green farmland.

"That's it. Nothing else to see," says Miss Washington.

Goggle use for racket sports desired

By JOANN RODGERS
Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Eye doctors who won the fight to make hockey players wear face guards now want to require protective goggles for every adult and child who plays racket sports.

"It's the only way to prevent an estimated 70,000 eye injuries from these sports every year," says Dr. Paul Vinger, assistant clinical professor of ophthalmology at Harvard University. "A well hit racketball can hit the eye with the velocity of a .38 caliber bullet."

Some studies say at least one-fourth of racket sport eye injuries are serious enough to involve long and costly care, or to permanently damage or blind the eye.

Studies at Pennsylvania State University, Vinger says, show that a forehand-driven badminton shuttlecock can travel up to 145 miles per hour and hit the eye with that force.

A squash ball, by comparison, travels up to 140 mph, a racketball 110, a tennis ball 110 and a fastball in the hands of a major league pitcher 90 to 100.

Vinger heads the eye safety committee of the American Society of Testing and Materials. Its design for a goggle that will withstand the impact of a ball traveling 90 mph should be approved by the 25,000 member organization this fall after three years of testing.

Many of the "open lens" style plastic goggles now on sale are inadequate, he said in an interview.

Society guidelines are generally accepted by the federal government's American National Standards Institute and become industry standards.

"Tennis, squash, racketball and bandminton are quite dangerous without eye protection," said Vinger, who is in San Francisco for the 24th International Congress of Ophthalmology.

"A squash player, for example, who plays three times a week for 25 years has a one in four chance of significant eye injury."

Studies at Vinger's Lexington (Mass.) Eye Association show most injuries are minor, but cuts, retinal detachments and eye hemorrhaging occur as well.

At the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, a major eye care center in Boston, 45 of 94 admissions for eye injury were due to sports and half of those to racket sports. Their hospitalization alone cost $40,000.

According to Vinger, these sports are the leading cause of eye injury in women 20 to 50 and second only to industrial causes of eye damage in men.

Vinger admits that like seat belts, getting players to wear goggles will be an uphill battle.

"It's a long, arduous process, but there is a way," he said. That's when the player is under supervision of anyone or any organization that can be made to supply and require them.

In hockey, that meant schools, leagues and professional team owners. For tennis, squash, racketball and badminton, "it means any school, club, camp, pro-team, group, organization or business involved in play."

"The hope is that what they must do in these cases will carry over to what they do voluntarily on home or private courts."

After fighting face guards for years, professional and school hockey teams accepted rules demanding their use. In the five years since their adoption, the guards have prevented an estimated 70,000 injuries and $10 million in medical costs among 1.2 million players.

"Schools and racket clubs at least have a responsibility to prevent injury to the eyes if possible," Vinger said. "It's not only ethical, it's economically prudent. Schools are already being sued for failing to provide reasonable protection to students who participate in sports."

The goggles range in price from $15 to $45. "Considering the investment made in racket sports, that is little enough," Vinger commented.

Laser techniques may treat eye disease

By C.W. MIRANKER
AP Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new type of laser which cuts tissue with a swift pulse of energy holds promise for someday replacing a scalpel in the treatment of some eye disorders, ophthalmologists report.

Working like a tiny knife within the eye, the "cold" laser can make a precise incision without burning and without affecting surrounding areas in the eye.

Its capabilities were described Monday at the joint meeting of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and the International Congress of Ophthmology. The seven-day convention, which ends Friday, has attracted some 16,000 ophthalmologists.

The new technique was one of several laser treatments discussed at a panel called, "Can lasers replace scalpels and medications?"

Lasers are narrow, concentrated beams of light. The newest sort, known as the YAG (for yttrium-aluminum-garnet) laser, induces a tiny explosion with a pulse of energy lasting a few billionths of a second that disintegrates tissue targeted in the eye, sais Dr. Danièle Aron-Rosa of the Trousseau Hospital in Paris.

It can be used on out-patients, often without anesthesia, to cut scar tissue or membranes that are blocking vision.

Of the 6,500 cases in which she had used the YAG laser since 1978, no significant complications developed, she said.

"It's like a tiny scalpel that's brought into the eye by invisible hands," said Hanspeter Lortscher, a laser physicist who has worked on another type of YAG laser with Franz Fankhauser at the University of Berne in Switzerland.

"The risk for the patient is dramatically reduced," he added.

Developed and tested in Europe, the laser likely will be introduced soon in this country, said Dr. H. Dunbar Hoskins, associate clinical professor of ophthalmology at the University of California at San Francisco. He said the cost of the laser, nearly $100,000, has in part delayed its introduction in the U.S.

But replacing eye surgery with the YAG or other lasers is still "way down the road," he said. "It'll be many years before we can throw our scalpels away. But it's possible that scalpels will be more and more replaced by things like lasers and ultrasound."

The argon laser already is replacing surgery as the treatment of choice for glaucoma that cannot be controlled with medicines, according to Dr. James B. Wise, chairman of ophthalmology at Baptist Medical Center in Oklahoma City.

In glaucoma, a leading cause of blindness, fluid pressure builds up in the eye, progressively destroying optic nerve cells.

With the bright blue-green beam of an argon laser, Wise makes a series of tiny burns in a spongy ring that circles the inside of the eye to normalize the flow of fluid.

In more than 1,000 eyes treated by that method, the eye pressure returned to normal in more than 80 percent of the cases, he said. The results also persist, with a pressure control rate of 77 to 80 percent in 30 eyes treated more than five years ago, he added.

Center studies link between diet, aging

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Can eating the right foods keep people young? The world's first research center devoted exclusively to the nutritional needs of the elderly wants to answer that question, helped by live-in volunteers on regulated diets.

At the new center, 50 scientists will study the links between nutrition and growing old, and search for ideal diets to slow the deterioration that comes with age.

The center scheduled a formal opening ceremony today, to be attended by Agriculture Secretary John R. Block and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

The $32 million, 15-story complex is formally known as the U.S. Department of Agriculture Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University.

"We will attempt to see how people's functions can be maintained as they age, how much nutrition influences this and the extent to which elderly persons need different nutritional components in their diet," said Dr. Hamish N. Munro, the center's director.

As part of the studies, scientists will study effects of the food consumed by 28 volunteers who will live at the center for periods ranging from six to 12 months.

The men and women's bodily functions and diets will be carefully monitored, and they will be able to leave the building only if accompanied by a staff member.

The purpose is to make sure the scientists know exactly what the volunteers eat. That way they will be able to find out what happens when old people follow different diets.

The center is located at Tufts' downtown Boston campus next to the university's medical, dental and veterinary schools and the affiliated New England Medical Center.

Munro, calling the center's work unique, said 29 research projects will be under way when the building is fully operating early next year.

"We ought to be able to identify the general dietary conditions and other environmental factors such as exercise, that lead to continued healthy tissue function," Munro said.

"The striking thing is the way, year by year, various body functions become less effective," he added. "Aging is a phenomenon associated with continuous deterioration. We want to find out how this is affected by nutrition."

Among the center's planned research:

—A survey of the nutrition and health of more than 1,600 men and women between the ages of 60 and 100.

—The impact of age-related deterioration of the digestive tract.

—The importance of specific vitamins and minerals to the elderly.

—The way drug reactions change with age.

'Problem' child may have undiagnosed learning disability

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In July 1980 you printed a fine article about "problem children." The Lancaster (Pa.) County Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities is now conducting an awarenesscmpaign, and a rerun of that letter would help us enormously. Thank you. — PAT DEMMY. ASSOCIATION SECRETARY

DEAR PAT: Here's the letter.

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago I wrote to you concerning a problem we were having with our son who was then in the third grade. His teacher told us he was having difficulty keeping up with his class because he couldn't read. (She even hinted that he might be "slightly retarded.") She said he was also a discipline problem and she couldn't recommend him for the fourth grade.

I wrote to you in desperation, and you suggested I write to the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities. I did, and want you to know that this organization has helped us enormously. Our "problem child" is now a high school senior who qualifies for college.

Abby, please acquaint others with this wonderful group. Had it not been for you, we never would have known about it. — GRATEFUL IN ELIZABETH, N.J.

DEAR GRATEFUL: Thanks for this opportunity to advise other parents to take a closer look at their "clumsy" 3-year-old who can't sit still and seems hard to handle, or the slow learner who's a troublemaker and disrupts the class.

That child could be brighter than average but afflicted with a learning disability that is treatable if detected early.

A letter requesting information can be sent to: The Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities, 4156 Library Road, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15234. It is not a high-pressure group and does not solicit public funds. It helps by sending educational material. The organization is non-profit, so when writing, please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Please add this suggestion to your annual fire prevention article: "And if a child is burned, contact any Shriner."

We budgeted $81,460,000 for our three burn institutes to treat children up to the age of 18 free — regardless of race, color or creed.

Pass this along, Abby. — J. AUSTIN VINCENT, THOMASVILLE, GA.

DEAR J.A.V.: For years the Shriners have been famous for their crippled children's hospitals, but their burn treatment centers are relatively new. Any child who has been disfigured by fire qualifies for free treatment. Contact any Shriner.

AT WIT'S END

Who's paying the check?

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's probably a trade secret, but I am intrigued by waiters and waitresses who instinctively know to whom to give the check.

A friend of mine who waited tables this summer said he's no expert, but he followed certain guidelines.

The man who summons the wine list is fingered as the man in charge and gets the check.

The man who says in a loud voice, "I think you'll like this place. I'd personally recommend the barbecued ribs," sets himself up as an authority-check figure.

The man who sees the check coming and still doesn't bolt to go to the restroom or to make a phone call gets the bad news.

The man — even if he just stopped by a table full of women to say hello — gets the check.

Every woman at one time or another has been to one of those famous luncheons where the waiter, ignoring pleas to bill individually, puts it all on one check. He places it in the middle of the table like a hand grenade, then stands back so that each may quickly toss it back and forth to one another with cries of, "I had the iced tea and the apple brown betty. Do they still charge for extra whipped cream?"

"How much is the pot of tea and the meringue sandwich?"

"I'm paying for Ruth's lunch. She drove. Take back Ruth's money."

"I'm not leaving a big tip. When I asked where the women's room was, he just grunted."

Men generally regard all this as tacky. My husband took me to lunch the other day and when the check came, I instinctively reached for it — an impulse from raising three teenagers. "What do you think you're doing?" he shouted. "As long as you are eating with me, I assume the responsibility for the check. Frankly, I still find it a blow to my ego when a woman picks up the tab. Just sit there and be feminine and thank me for being so generous and accommodating. By the way, you got two bucks for the tip?"

Now, that's tacky.

Life of Dashiell Hammett basis of upcoming movie

By PAUL WILNER
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Dashiell Hammett lives! More than 50 years after the laconic ex-Pinkerton's agent started publishing pulp adventures in Black Mask, Hammett's work and life have become objects of a revival that is no less fervent for being somewhat misdirected.

Besides Francis Ford Coppola's forthcoming production of "Hammett," a movie directed by Wim Wenders and based on Joe Gores' novel about the writer's San Francisco days, a biography of the creator of Sam Spade by British novelist and screenwriter Diane Johnson is due from Random House.

Surprisingly, this most recent Hammett boom is focused on the writer's shadowy life, rather than his substantial body of work, which includes such novels as "Red Harvest," "The Dain Curse," "The Glass Key," "The Thin Man" and "The Maltese Falcon."

SUCH INTEREST has been fed, of course, by Lillian Hellman's remarkable memoir of Hammett, her longtime lover, mentor and best friend, in "An Unfinished Woman," and in the introduction to "The Big Knockover," a group of Hammett's unpublished short stories.

In writing about Hammett, Hellman seemed to rediscover her own strengths as a writer. The conviction of her memoir carried such emotional force that learning about Hammett through Hellman was like discovering things you'd always suspected but had never been sure of.

However, by the time Hammett was fictionalized and portrayed by Jason Robards in "Julia" — the movie adapted from a section of her memoir — the image was corrupted and made into a sentimentally crusty embodiment of what a writer of integrity and great talent should act like.

SUCH OVERSIMPLICATIONS failed to come to terms with the contradictions in Hammett's own career — the fact that he failed to write any real fiction after his virtuoso performances in the late '20s and early '30s, the ambivalence of his wrong-headed, well-intentioned Popular Front politics, and his gradual withdrawal into a role as Hellman's tutor.

As Rolling Stone movie critic Michael Sragow points out in his recent review of Coppola's still-unreleased movie: "The moviemakers take the most sentimental-leftist view of Hammett as a manly, tubercular loner who left Pinkerton's rather than break strikes. (The real Hammett often said he left because he lost a trip to Hawaii by solving a case a day early.) The movie's story merely reaffirms what this man of boozy rectitude knows all along: that in any 20th-century metropolis controlled by 'cops, crooks and the big rich,' a man can hang onto his virtue only by sticking to his honest business, whether it's pounding the pavements or the typewriter."

Focusing on Hammett's political convictions — which during World War II led him to re-enlist in the Army despite severe lung problems, and later to serve six months' confinement for refusing to name names before the House Un-American Activities Committee — poses other problems, however. As heroic as his refusal to testify might seem, Hammett's own convictions — which included support of the Hitler-Stalin pact and the Moscow purge trials — were more problematic.

SOME HAMMETT scholars like Richard Layman, author of last year's biography, "Shadow Man," have suggested that his radical convictions grew out of self-disgust over his activities as a strike-breaker while working for Pinkerton's. Although such a judgment jibes with the scathing analysis of class relations in Hammett's two finest novels, "Red Harvest" and "The Glass Key," Hammett's more explicit political activities on behalf of the Spanish Loyalists and other causes came in the aftermath of his creative period as a writer, at a point when he was lolling unhappily at Hollywood studios and Manhattan cocktail parties.

It's a cruel irony that Hammett, the scourge of Agatha Christie and Dorothy Sayers, should now be subjected to academic scrutiny by British highbrows like Diane Johnson. And it's equally appalling that the great exponent of revealing character through action should be glorified in the romantic Hollywood stereotype of a "writer," typing away through his tuberculosis, in the hackneyed tradition of Paul Muni playing Louis Pasteur.

SOCIETY MAY HAVE adjusted to the world according to Hammett, then readjusted to a more peaceable view. But the latest Hammett revival shows disturbingly greater interest in Hammett himself than in his work — almost an excuse to avoid his novels.

In Wales it was thought that rubbing your palm with an oak leaf would keep you healthy for a year.

Prince Philip addresses members of the media at Brookfield Zoo in the Chicago suburb of Brookfield, as Samson the gorilla struts in the background. The British prince is in Chicago to speak on behalf of the world'stropical forests.

Gorilla Samson greets Prince Philip

CHICAGO (AP) — Britain's Prince Philip was greeted by Chicago-area conservationists and Samson the gorilla during a brief visit to the world's largest indoor rain forest at Brookfield Zoo.

When the prince stopped at a ridge in the forest to give a news conference, the 450-pound Samson climbed onto a small cliff overlooking the ridge, about 12 feet away. Nothing separated them but a moat, said zoo spokeswoman Joyce Gardella.

About 50 conservationists, 20 security people and 40 reporters held their breaths, but Samson simply climbed a tree, she said. Then, the exhibit's hornbills — large African birds — began to call to each other.

"We had turned off the waterfalls and the air flow system just so the prince could be heard, and then the hornbills got warmed up, and it was very difficult to hear anything," Ms. Gardella said. "(Prince Philip) had quite a day with nature."

The prince, who also holds the title Duke of Edinburgh, visited the zoo Monday during a two-day stay to chair a World Wildlife Fund symposium. The prince has been president of the fund since 1961.

"It is through exhibits such as 'Tropic World' that people in metropolitan areas such as Chicago will be able to relate to what we're losing in rain forests," the prince said at the news conference, which followed a tour of Tropic World, the zoo's newly opened African section of the rain forest exhibit.

James Cagney

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Actor James Cagney, whose film career spans more than half a century, will receive a lifetime achievement award at the Jubilee Ball of the American Diabetes Association on Friday.

Cagney, 83, agreed to attend the event because he has suffered from diabetes most of his life, said association spokeswoman Chen Sam.

Among those attending the affair at the Franklin Plaza Hotel will be actors and actresses who appeared in films with Cagney, including David Huddleston, Ruby Keeler and Sylvia Sidney.

Cagney's films, beginning with releases in 1930, include "The Public Enemy," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Devil Dogs of the Air" and the recent "Ragtime."

Cagney, who was honored last year by President Reagan, lives in New York state and recently celebrated his 60th wedding anniversary with his wife Willie, Ms. Sam said.

Lou Gossett

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Actor Lou Gossett spent just over an hour in an emergency room but was "fine" afterward and expected to resume work quickly on the movie "Jaws 3-D," officials said.

After complaining of pains in his stomach and chest, the tall, bald 45-year-old actor went to the emergency room about 8:30 a.m. Monday. He was examined and then released at 10 a.m., Barbara Reems, a spokeswoman at Brookwood Community Hospital, said.

"He's fine. He was back in an hour," said Rupert Hitzig, a production official with the film crew. "He didn't feel good and went to see a doctor. He's going to be back at work in the morning."

Gossett's most recent film was "An Officer and a Gentleman." He also starred in the television series "Roots" and appears in the TV series "The Powers of Matthew Starr."

In "Jaws 3-D," he plays the manager of a marine-life park that is attacked by a killer shark. The movie is being filmed at Sea World, a tourist attraction near Orlando.

David Ruffin

DETROIT (AP) — David Ruffin, former lead singer of the Temptations, has been sentenced to six months in prison and ordered to pay a $5,000 fine after pleading guilty to income tax evasion.

Ruffin pleaded guilty June 3 to a charge of failure to file a 1976 tax return on $177,359 income. He was sentenced Monday by U.S. District Judge Philip Pratt, said Leonard Gilman, U.S. attorney for the Michigan's eastern district.

The former soul singer originally was indicted by a federal grand jury on three counts of income tax evasion, Gilman said. Two of the counts were dropped in exchange for his guilty plea.

Ruffin will begin serving his sentence Nov. 15, Gilman said.

POSITIVE THINKING

Tough-minded overcome obstacles

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

The late Frank Leahy of Notre Dame, one of the greatest football coaches America ever produced, nailed up a big sign in the locker room where his players could see it when getting ready for a game. Printed in large, bold letters, it read: "When the going gets tough, let the tough get going."

That's a very useful motto on the football field or off it. When the going gets tough for you, let the tough inside you get going. For toughness of mind and spirit can overcome anything. And the doing of what other people think impossible results from acquiring just that mental toughness.

I have an old book by a great inspirational author of other days, Owen Scott Marden. Actually it was written in 1897 but still packs a wallop. The author brilliantly discusses that word which defeats so many people, the concept impossible, and quotes a remark by William Pitt, outstanding British Prime Minister. When Pitt was told that something was impossible, he said, "I trample upon impossibilities."

That's what we call tough-mindedness! And it's good.

Marden also tells the story of Napoleon and his crossing of the Alps. The negative thinkers said that he couldn't possibly cross those vast mountains. "The Alps stand there, a super barrier," they said. "No one can take an army over the Alps."

But the Little Corporal looked up at those gigantic white-capped mountains and what was his reaction? "There shall be no Alps," said Napoleon. And he crossed the Alps in four months. Today, by plane, it is a matter of minutes. "The word 'impossible'," said Napoleon, "is only fit for the dictionary of fools."

Alexander the Great lived only thirty-two years, yet broke the power of the Persians at their peak of empire, and changed the world. Napoleon called him the greatest general who ever lived. Few of Alexander's own words have come down to use over the centuries but these have: "There is nothing impossible to him who will try."

Much later, the French philosopher, Mirabeau, put it another way: "Nothing is impossible to the man who can will." It is really a matter of being tough-minded enough to let no obstacle stand before you. My own mother used to repeat to me that great maxim, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." Refusing to be overawed by the size of an obstacle or to stop trying to overcome it is the real secret of doing the impossible.

It all boils down to being tough-minded enough to handle problems. The father of American psychology, William James pointed out that basically there are two kinds of people in this world, the tender-minded and the tough-minded. The tender-minded give way under any adversity. They are very sensitive to criticism. They let people and circumstances push them around. They regard almost every obstacle, even the smallest, as an impossibility.

But the tough-minded know what they want and are about to try to get it. They stand up for what they believe. They don't permit themselves to be pushed around. Criticism does not throw them. Obstacles do not frighten them; they adopt toward life an attitude of, "Bring on your troubles; I can handle them." And when life does bring troubles, they stand firm and rock-like against them and such people inevitably win out, however difficult everything may be.

That tough streak is built into each of us. Discover yours; then develop it and you will find that you, too, can do the impossible.

IUDs may not be good for all women

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard women who used an IUD say it is the best thing ever, and I've heard other women say they tried them and they were horrible. Would you recommend use of an IUD? — Jane, Oklahoma City

Dear Jane: You really answer your own question. An intrauterine device (IUD) may be good for some women and not good for others. It is not possible to make a blanket recommendation either for or against their use.

The fact is that about 6 percent of women in the United States — or 2.7 million women — use IUD's, so they and their physicians must find them to be a satisfactory means of birth control. However, there are also contraindications to their use, including a history of pelvic inflammatory disease and severely painful menstruation, among others.

Your question about recommending an IUD for a woman must be answered with another question: Which woman? Your own physician will have to answer that in your case.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son was born with one testicle that did not come down properly, and the doctor says he wants to operate when the baby is a year old. This seems kind of young to me. Wouldn't it be better to wait until the baby is a few years older? — Mrs. F.J., San Francisco

Dear Mrs. J.: In most infants, an undescended testicle resolves spontaneously within six to 12 months; after that time, the testicle is not likely to descend on its own. If the condition is not corrected, various complications become more likely, including infertility and the risk of testicular cancer.

Dr. Even Kass, of the Children's Hospital National Medical Center in Washington, D.C., recommends correcting the condition at about one year of age. In addition to the medical indications for performing surgery, the child also enjoys the psychological benefit of growing up with normal genitalia.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it still necessary for a child to be vaccinated against measles? You don't hear much about it any more, and I would just as soon my baby did not get the shot it if is not needed. — Mrs. C.P., Tulsa

Dear Mrs. P.: Aside from whatever legal requirements for immunization exist in your community, you should know that the Immunization Practices Advisory Committee has reported to the National Centers for Disease Control that children should receive a single dose of measles vaccine at 15 months of age. The committee says that this would provide maximal protection against the disease.

The committee also noted that measles is prevalent in many foreign countries, and that people who travel outside the United States should make certain they are protected.

For Phyllis, Aberdeen, Md.: I think the attitude you describe is a cop-out. even very obese people can benefit from some kind of exercise program. As I discuss in my book "Stop Smoking, Lose Weight," there's nothing wrong with walking, and very few people are so obese that they cannot walk.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Bridgewater to raise money with 'Jamie Fiske Day'

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) — Civic groups have declared Friday "Jamie Fiske Day" here in the hometown of the 11-month-old girl who underwent a life-saving liver transplant last week.

"Everybody is so happy for them," Jamie's grandmother, Muriel Moynahan of Lynn, said Monday. "You expect relatives to be happy, but so many strangers have come forward.

"It's really amazing," Mrs. Moynahan said. "People have called from all over the country. A woman called from Columbus, Ohio. She's 85 years old. She said she just couldn't go by the phone without calling to say how happy she was."

The "Jamie Fiske Day" activities are to include a pancake breakfast, a marathon, bake sales, an evening dance and an appearance by world middleweight boxing champion Marvin Hagler, who lives in Brockton.

Proceeds will go into a special fund at the Bridgewater Savings Bank that will be used to help defray Jamie's medical expenses.

Doctors at University of Minnesota Hospitals in Minneapolis performed the liver transplant Friday after a long wait for a donor. The operation was termed a success, but doctors said the next few weeks are crucial in the child's attempt to accept the new organ.

The infant suffered from biliary atresia, an incurable liver disorder that makes it impossible to digest food and can cause a buildup of toxic matter in the blood.

Physicians said Jamie, who was born Nov. 26, would have died by her first birthday if she had not received the new liver. She remained in satisfactory condition at the Minneapolis hospital's.

MGM to offer stock shares for home video subsidiary

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — MGM-UA Entertainment Co.'s home video subsidiary Monday filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for a public offering of about 4.5 million shares, which could raise between $67.5 million and $81 million for financially strapped MGM-UA.

The Culver City, Calif.-based company said seven months ago that it was considering such an offering, when it first proposed spinning off MGM-UA Home Entertainment Group Inc.

The parent corporation will retain about 85 percent of the subsidiary's outstanding shares after the offering is made, said Jason Rabinovitz, vice president, finance, of MG-MUA Entertainment.

In its filings with the SEC, MGM-UA disclosed that it sold exclusive non-theatrical rights to existing and future films to its subsidiary for a $200 million promissory note with a 40-year license. MGM-UA called its film library the largest in the United States.

Proceeds of the subsidiary's stock offering will be used to repay a portion of the debt incurred to acquire rights to the MGM-UA library, the company said.

MGM-UA said the shares are expected to be offered for about $15 to $18 each. The offering will be underwritten by a group managed by E.F. Hutton & Co. and L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin.

Law banning video games upheld

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has upheld a bylaw banning commercial video games in the town of Marshfield, but the ruling is expected to be appealed.

"While the matter is not free from doubt," Judge Joseph Ford said in his decision Monday, "the court is not persuaded that the video game bylaw is unconstitutional or in excess of the powers granted to the town by the home rule amendment or the General Court."

The bylaw making it illegal to operate video games commercially was approved June 15 at a town meeting. Residents said they feared their children would spend too much money on video games, and that areas where the games were played would become places for drug trafficking.

Mrs. Dorothy Smith of Whistler, Ala., is comforted by friends after she fell to her knees when learning her son was one of 27 inmates who died in a jail fire at Biloxi, Miss., early Monday morning. Another 61 persons were injured in the blaze set by an inmate being held in a padded cell.

De Lorean's lawyers attack government

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys for flamboyant auto executive John Z. De Lorean, accused of cocaine trafficking in a transaction videotaped by undercover agents, say they plan to attack "outrageous conduct" and entrapment by the government.

De Lorean, 57, faces trial early next year on the nine-count federal indictment to which he pleaded innocent Monday. His attorneys said they will file motions alleging government misconduct and entrapment, probably before the trial.

De Lorean is accused of financing a $24 million cocaine distribution deal in what prosecutors said was a desperate bid for cash as his car company failed.

Attorney Seth Hufstedler, who entered the case Monday, told reporters the government had generated negative "propaganda" about De Lorean since his arrest Oct. 19 and "much of it is half-truths and much of it is downright false."

"There is a procedure by which the outrageous conduct of the government can be attacked, and we intend to do so," Hufstedler said.

Hufstedler was one of four prominent attorneys flanking the tall, silver-haired De Lorean as he appeared in court Monday for the first time since his release from prison on $10 million bail.

DE LOREAN AND HIS WIFE, model Cristina Ferrare, held hands tightly as they pushed their way through a mob of reporters and camera crews at the courthouse. They did not speak outside court.

De Lorean's co-defendants, William Morgan Hetrick, 50, and Stephen Lee Arrington, 24, were brought to the courtroom in handcuffs from the Terminal Island federal prison. Hetrick's attorney asked the judge to consider reducing his $20 million bail, and a hearing on the request was scheduled for Wednesday.

Arrington, being held on $250,000 bail, filed papers saying he could not afford an attorney and received a court-appointed lawyer.

De Lorean, accused of conspiring with Hetrick and Arrington to sell cocaine from South America, never glanced at them as they were arraigned. His attorneys never mentioned the co-defendants.

"He will present a careful and complete presentation of the facts in this case at the time of trial," Hufstedler said. "And he is fully and firmly convinced on doing so, a fair-minded jury will find him innocent."

Attorney Joseph Ball, who has headed the De Lorean defense since shortly after his arrest, said he expects a six-week trial after a long series of pretrial motions.

U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE Robert J. Takasugi tentatively scheduled trial for Jan. 7, but De Lorean's attorneys said they would seek a later date. Takasugi said he would rule later on the request.

FBI agents have said they videotaped De Lorean accepting delivery of a package of cocaine at a Los Angeles hotel. Those and other videotapes are expected to be the crux of the government's evidence against De Lorean, who allegedly discussed planned drug dealings with undercover FBI agents.

One of the government's key witnesses is expected to be James Timothy Hoffman, 41, a former chief salesman for Hetrick who allegedly became a Drug Enforcement Administration informant in late 1981 while he was facing drug charges. He pleaded guilty to one count of importing cocaine and was placed on probation, court records show.

Hetrick, head of a Mojave, Calif., aviation company, is charged with running a drug importation ring.

Ball denied a report in the auto industry trade journal Automotive News that said the Internal Revenue Service had expanded a routine audit of De Lorean's tax returns into an investigation of possible tax fraud.

DE LOREAN "HAS BEEN audited regularly for 21 years by the government," Ball said.

The attorney said the report was an example of "too much information from the government" and suggested the report had been leaked to damage De Lorean's position.

De Lorean's business dealings have been questioned before. He is the target of unresolved lawsuits filed by a rancher in Salmon, Idaho, an inventor from Phoenix, Ariz., and a car dealer from Wichita, Kan.

The rancher, Clark Higley, says he lost hundreds of thousands of dollars in a real estate deal engineered by De Lorean.

Man held in padded cell allegedly set fatal jail fire

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — A man with a history of mental disorders was being held only "for his own protection" when he allegedly set a smokey jail fire that killed 27 fellow inmates, authorities said.

Robert E. Pates, being held at the Harrison County Jail where the deadly fire broke out Monday morning, now faces 27 counts of capital murder, said District Attorney Albert Necaise.

Pates, one of the first inmates rescued, remained under guard at a local hospital while recovering from smoke inhalation and second-degree burns. No arraignment had been set, a police spokesman said.

"We thought we ought to pick him up for his own protection," said policeman Dan Russell, who arrested Pates, 31, of Granite City, Ill., for public drunkenness after a disturbance Saturday at a lounge. "I wish now we hadn't."

Pates was being held Sunday in a padded isolation cell at the jail. At about 1:30 a.m. Monday, authorities said, he started a fire in the small polyurethane-lined chamber.

Coroner Ed Little said he "may have first ignited the mattress on his bed and this spread to the padding. The flames were limited to the one cell but the ventilation system quickly carried the smoke to the rest of the building."

It was not known how Pates could have started the fire. Matches are banned in isolation cells.

The smoldering polyurethane released smoke and toxic gas, said Harold Windham, an assistant fire chief.

When jailer Tom Miller passed out, the other prisoners lost their chance to flee. Miller had unlocked doors in the north cell block where the fire broke out, but was overcome before he could get to the south block.

The dense smoke hid him and the keys from other would-be rescuers.

Fire Chief Guy Roberts said Miller lay on the floor as rescuers searched for him and the keys. They were eventually found by rescuers equipped with air tanks and face masks who crawled along the floor.

"When we first got there, the inmates were hollering out for help, but there was nothing we could do until we found the keys," said firefighter Danny Boudreaux, who was hospitalized.

"By the time we got to all the cells and got them unlocked, most everybody was unconscious."

At least 47 people were injured, including 30 inmates and 17 support personnel such as firefighters, police and emergency technicians.

"The ones that stayed alive got wet towels and wrapped them around their face or got in a shower and put wet blankets over them," said Charlie Acevedo, a prisoner hospitalized for smoke inhalation.

One master key opens all cells, said Dick Schultz, a sheriff's investigator. Miller's was the only key "closely available," he said.

Miller and 10 inmates were hospitalized in critical condition, but they were all stable and improving by late Monday. There were 97 inmates and three jailers in the 102-prisoner facility when the fire broke out.

Sheriff Howard L. Hobbs said Pates normally would have been released Sunday, but deputies believed he was a danger to himself and others because he was incoherent.

Later Sunday a judge ordered Pates committed for mental treatment. His family reported Pates had been confined to mental institutions regularly for the past 10 years, Hobbs said.

The Justice Department disclosed Monday that it has been investigating complaints of overcrowding at the jail. Spokesman John Wilson said the department "will now accelerate its investigation."

Ron Welch, director of the Mississippi Prisoners Defense Committee in Jackson, charged Monday that polyurethane should not have been used in the prison because it releases cyanide gas when burned.

Polyurethane has also been blamed in a 1977 jail fire in Maury County, Tenn., that killed 42 inmates.

Deadly jail, prison fires serious threat, groups say

By The Associated Press

Art Lee fears "monkey see, monkey do" even though his Oklahoma jail has many fire precautions. Ron Black calls his Los Angeles deputies "the best fire alarms you can get" but holds monthly fire drills.

Many law officers and private groups say deadly jail fires like the one that killed 27 prisoners Monday in Biloxi, Miss., could happen just about anywhere in the United States.

They cite examples like these:

—Only 11 of the nation's 3,000 jails have met the Commission on Accreditation for Correction's stringent fire safety standards, the private, non-profit group says.

—Just 3 out of 10 jails have scheduled fire evacuation drills, a National Sheriff's Association study says.

—Although about half the states have adopted fire standards, enforcement is not a high priority, both a National Fire Protection Association spokeswoman and an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer say.

—In Tennessee, where a county jail fire set in a mattress in 1977 killed 42 people, the state's jail inspector says few jails conduct fire drills or have evacuation procedures and many still use the highly flammable material, polyurethane.

But many jails have made improvements in recent years.

The fire in Biloxi was started by an inmate who set fire to polyurethane padding in his cell, sending toxic smoke through the unit that overcame the only jailer with a key.

Lee, undersheriff of Tulsa County, Okla., said his 270-inmate jail has fireproof covers on its mattresses, has smoke alarms and held an evacuation drill this summer.

Even so, he said Monday, "We might anticipate several (fires) now. It's kind of a monkey see, or hear, monkey do."

At the 5,980-inmate Los Angeles County Jail, Capt. Ron Black said, "We have deputies stationed in every room in the facility. They are the best fire alarms you can get."

The jail Black runs has fire-retardant mattresses and does not have padded cells. Fire drills are conducted monthly. Even so, lint in vents caught fire last week about an hour after a drill, with some smoke escaping. No one was injured.

Recount of several Chicago precincts trims Thompson's slim lead in governor's race

CHICAGO (AP) — A recount in a handful of Chicago precincts has trimmed Gov. James R. Thompson's lead over challenger Adlai E. Stevenson III to about 6,000 votes, but an aide says the governor is still "comfortably ahead" in his bid for re-election.

Lawyers for both the Republican incumbent and his Democratic opponent agreed after meeting with city election officials until late Monday that Thompson's lead in last Tuesday's election had shrunk by more than 900 votes, but they differed on the exact margin.

"Our estimate is that the governor is still comfortably ahead in Illinois," said James Montana, Thompson's lawyer. He said a recount Monday of unofficial vote totals from 10 Chicago precincts gave Stevenson a net gain of 964 votes.

John Schmidt, Stevenson's lawyer, said Stevenson's gain was 975 votes, or perhaps 996. He said two counts — 15 minutes apart — of only nine of the 10 precincts gave the different results.

"Everyone's arithmetic here is a little rough," Schmidt conceded.

Schmidt said he did not "think anyone expects any change of consequence to result" from the count of the 10th precinct.

Both Montana and Schmidt said they could not provide new city or statewide totals based on the results of Sunday's counting of the 10 precincts. They said only a net gain figure was available to them because of the late hour and weariness of the counters.

The most recent statewide figures, including a check of some Chicago precincts and an Associated Press county-by-county check of vote totals, showed Thompson with 1,814,925 votes to Stevenson's 1,807,965 votes on Saturday. Thompson's margin was 6,960 in his bid for an unprecedented third consecutive term.

"All (Monday's new totals) tell you is what the canvass is out of Chicago," Schmidt said. "Now you've got to watch for the rest of the state — and also for the results of a recount, if it comes to that."

Representatives of both candidates had until 5 p.m. today to make final objections to the unofficial Chicago precinct vote totals, city elections board spokesman Thomas Leach said.

City election officials expect to announce official results of the city canvass on Wednesday, when Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper also was scheduled to release suburban Cook County canvass results.

Kusper said a final countywide canvass, adding suburban and Chicago totals, should be ready to send to Springfield by Friday.

Community spirit brightens with 'Light-up Night'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Thousands looked on from hilltops and river banks as Pittsburgh residents revived their unemployment-dampened spirits with "Light-Up Night," watching illuminated office buildings and landmarks shimmer through the crisp autumn air.

The tradition had been suspended for nine years as a gesture of energy conversation. But in an effort to rekindle community spirit, scores of downtown buildings in the "Golden Triangle" left lights burning amber and white from 6 p.m. Monday until midnight. Churches turned on floodlights and rang bells and chimes through the night.

Construction crews, too, left bare white light bulbs in four major office buildings twinkling in the darkness as thousands viewed the scene and snapped photographs from river banks and hilltops.

"There are very few cities, perhaps only New York, with a skyline as beautiful," said Fred Kenderson, 46, an industrial photographer and lifelong Pittsburgh resident, as he took time exposures from nearby Mount Washington.

The mountain, a prime vantage point for the event, rises above the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio rivers.

"It used to be pretty dismal here. You couldn't see the city because of the smoke," said John McManus, 64, a heating contractor and lifelong area resident. "But this affects us, those who lived here longer. There's a certain community pride to it."

The six-hour annual event was held from 1965 until 1973, when it was suspended as a symbolic gesture to energy conservation, said Jacques Kahn, executive director of the Golden Triangle Association business group.

It was revived, Kahn said, to give Pittsburgh a "psychological lift" from a dark mood caused by 14 percent area unemployment, the depressed steel industry, the approaching winter and idling of the Steelers football team by the National Football League players' strike.

"I just hope it makes everybody feel that maybe things are looking up, the holiday season's coming up and we're putting the worst behind us," Kahn said. "We hope it gives everyone a little spirit."

Even the weather cooperated, with breezy 56-degree temperatures and high clouds allowing 12 miles visibility, according to the National Weather Service.

Television helicopters circled over the sparkling downtown like lightning bugs. Near the Monongahela, the Grant Building's orange neon spire tapped out the word "Pittsburgh" in Morse code. Near the Allegheny, the Gulf Building's ice blue point offered a weather forecast in color code.

The 105-year-old Duquesne Incline tram was crowded with sightseers riding 400 feet up and down between the Monongahela bank and the crest of Mount Washington.

On downtown streets, Santa Clauses handedlout 5,000 candy canes, carolers sang holiday songs and department stores unveiled holiday decorations and window displays.

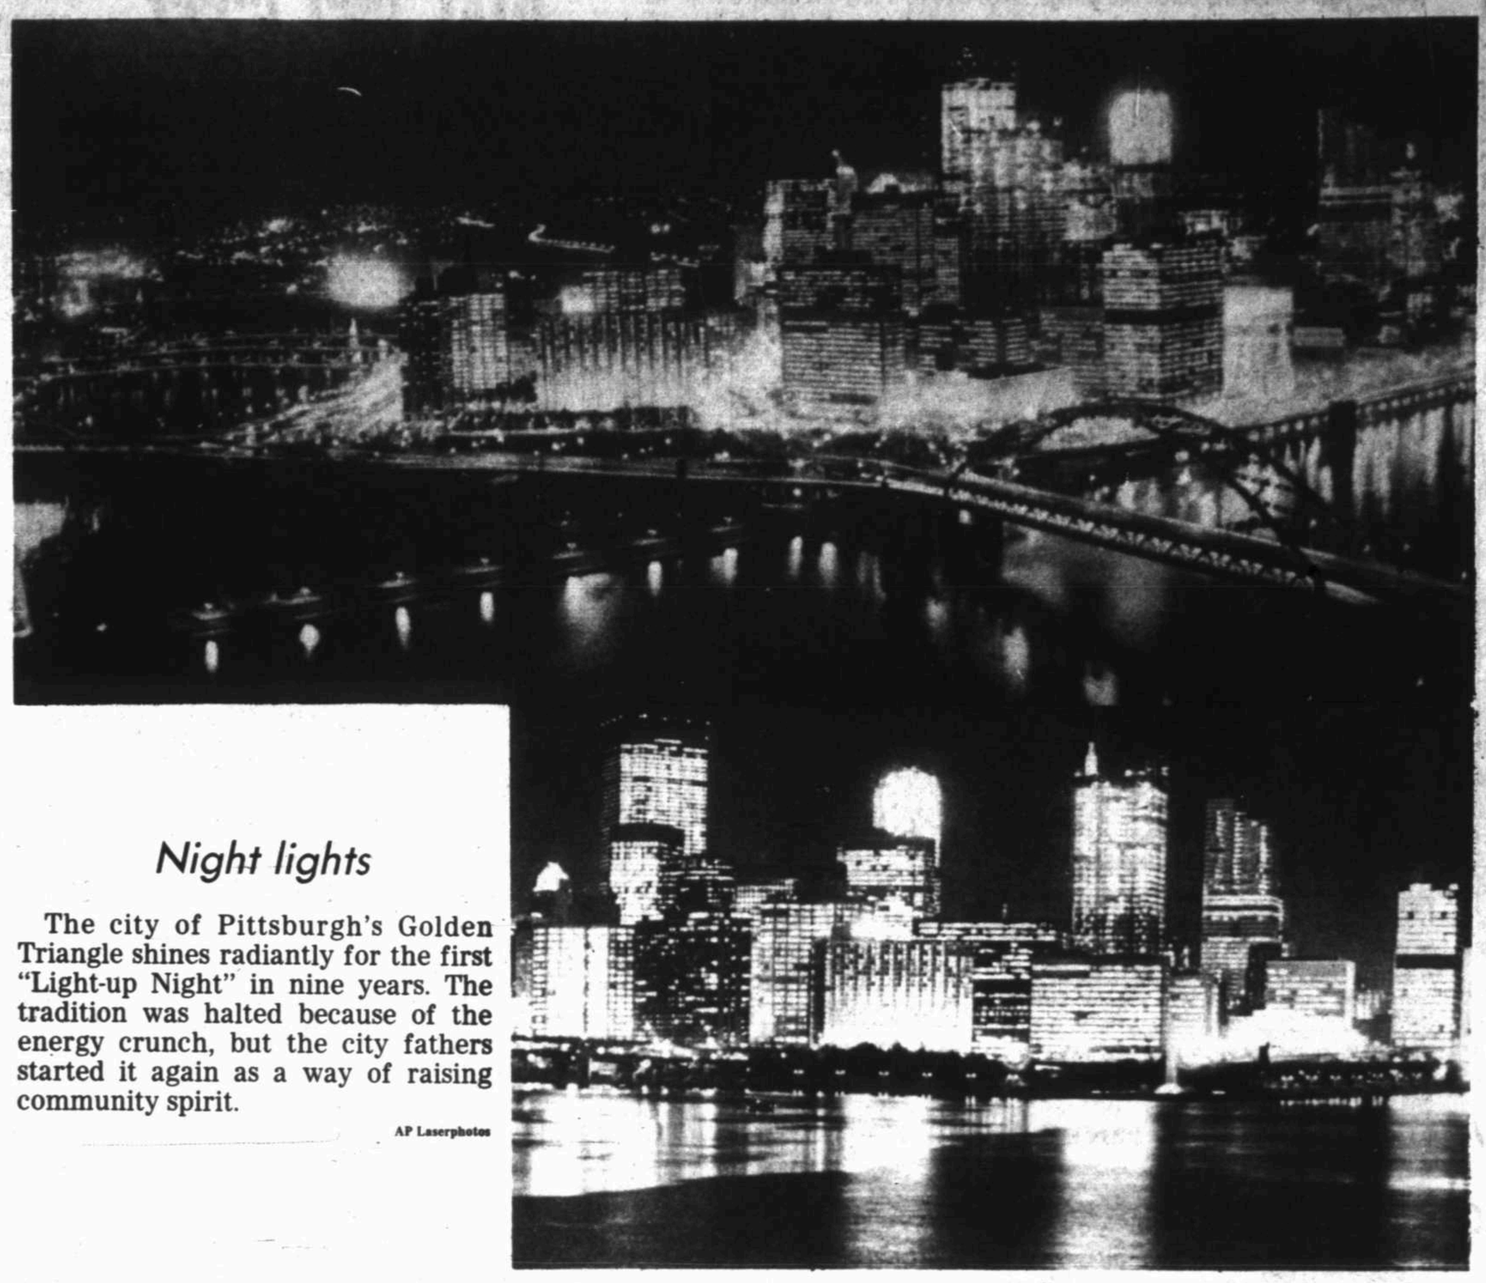

"From up here, it looks nice," said Dave Snyder, 30, a hospital administrator snapping pictures on Mount Washington. "But if you're stuck in traffic, it doesn't look so nice."

The event had the blessing of city officials and the Duquesne Light Co., which estimated downtown buildings used an extra 90,000 kilowatts of electricity at an additional cost of about $2,700.

Duquesne Light spokesman Ken Scherer said engineers reported a slight surge in electrical usage, roughly equivalent to 15 night games at Three Rivers Stadium. He said the utility easily handled the load.

The utility favors the "wise use of electricity," and considers the event "beneficial" to community spir, Scherer said.

Three Rivers Stadium, which had been expected to light its playing field like a Monday night football game, left its interior dark and a huge fountain at the confluence of the rivers was not fully illuminated. Some were disappointed.

Night lights

The city of Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle shines radiantly for the first "Light-up Night" in nine years. The tradition was halted because of the energy crunch, but the city fathers started it again as a way of raising community spirit.

Appy Kroll, left, rustles up some lunch for her son, 80-year-old Bill Schluter, at their home in Spokane, Wash. Appy is 106 but still fixes meals three times a day and reads the Bible to her son. The two have lived together since Bill's wife died four years ago.

Mother, son together after all these years

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — When 80-year-old Bill Schluter was a boy, his mother would give him three square meals a day and put him to bed on time.

Nowadays, she still does.

Schluter's mother, Appy Kroll, is 106. About four years ago, when his wife died, Schluter asked his mother to move back in with him, and now they share happy times in their north Spokane home.

"I give him three meals a day and put him to bed on time. That's the best I can do," said Mrs. Kroll. She also reads to him and sings along when he plays the piano.

"She's a lot of company — and she can cook. Sure, I love having her here," Schluter said Monday.

Visitors to their place may find the house warm with the sweet smell of stewing prunes. Schluter is likely to be playing "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" on the piano.

If his mother coaxes him, Schluter will bring out his guitar and harmonica to play her favorite, "Beautiful Texas."

"That's the way he used to amuse himself while I was getting dinner, especially on Sundays," Mrs. Kroll said.

Mrs. Kroll was born in Anderson, S.C., in the national centennial year of 1876. She came to Spokane by train in 1901 — shortly before Schluter was born — and she remembers draft horses getting stuck in the mud downtown.

"The town was lousy with horses," she said. "Why, I saw the first Ford that came into town."

Schluter was born in Spokane, and the family moved shortly afterward to a homestead north of town, where they had a dairy herd.

Mrs. Kroll would bake all her own bread — using 50 pounds of flour every 11 days. She also helped her husband cut wood and sometimes took the horse and wagon on the 3½-hour trip to Spokane.

All that while raising six sons and two daughters. Four of her sons are still alive.

Schluter's father, Mrs. Kroll's first husband, died in 1915. Her second husband died in 1927.

Before his retirement in 1967, Schluter worked as a lumberman, a school janitor and an oil company employee.

Mrs. Kroll now needs a huge magnifying glass to make out the Bible verses, but she says she never passes up a chance to read scripture:

"If you have your Bible to read, the hard part of the world don't bother you."

And though she's happy, she still speaks fondly of the old days.

"We'd go to bed early and get up early," she said. "That helps strengthen your life. That and common food."

Vietnam War memorial to be dedicated this week

By JACK KROST

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — It has been reviled as "nihilistic," a "ditch," and "a black gash of shame."

It has been praised as being "contemplative," "democratic" and "an eloquent memorial to human suffering."

For better or for worse, however, a national memorial to the servicemen who died in the Vietnam War will be dedicated this week in the nation's capital.

About 50,000 veterans and other officials from around the country are expected to attend the four-day series of events, beginning Wednesday with a candlelight vigil and culminating Saturday with a veterans parade.

The memorial has been a source of controversy ever since a panel of artists and design professionals early last year pored over 1,420 entries and selected a design by Maya Ying Lin, then a 21-year-old senior student of architecture at Yale University.

The memorial, which was recently completed, consists of two highly polished, 200-foot black granite walls that converge in a 10-foot depression in a park-like area a short distance northeast of the Lincoln Memorial.

THE V-SHAPED walls bear the names of the 57,692 servicemen who died in Vietnan, in the order in which they were killed, during this country's 16-year involvement in the Southeast Asian war.

Critics, including congressmen, Gold Star Mothers, Interior Secretary James Watt and some, but not all, veterans groups, have said the memorial is unpatriotic and does an injustice to the servicemen whom the memorial is supposed to honor.

But supporters, including the American Legion, reply the memorial does nothing of the kind; it pays a simple, abstract but sincere tribute to the dead and lets people make up their own minds whether their suffering was in vain.

The Capital Fine Arts Commission thought it had put the controversy to rest Oct. 13 when it approved several additions to the memorial in an attempt at a "compromise." The additions include an eight-foot-high sculpture of three soldiers and a flag with an inscription honoring the veterans for "having served our country under difficult cicumstances." The soldiers, in fatigues, have a somewhat uncertain, expectant look on their faces. The additions will be erected sometime next year.

The statue originally was to have been placed 150 feet in front of the apex of the black walls, and the flag was to have been placed behind them and slightly off center. But to prevent the flag and statue from interfering with the visual effect of the walls, the commission decided to place them off to the western side of the memorial, in a grove of trees.

A number of veterans, led by lame-duck congressman Don Bailey, a Democrat from southwestern Pennsylvania and a highly decorated Army veteran, aren't satisfied. They insisted at a Washington press conference Thursday that the flag and statue be put in front of the walls to ensure that the memorial "conveys a message of honor, respect and sacrifice" and "recognizes that these people fought for a proper purpose."

THEY ASKED President Reagan to order that the 50-foot flag be placed in front of the walls through a proclamation, and they threatened to organize a campaign to build a second memorial if their demands aren't met.

The whole experience has left Lin, now 23 and continuing her studies in architecture at the Harvard University graduate school of design, "disillusioned" and somewhat shell shocked.

She says she is dismayed how large a role politics played in the whole process, charging that the changes were pushed through behind her back "by a small minority of conservative, right-wing men" who engaged in a "political power play to get their way. Everything was done pretty much under the table."

At one point, Watt threatened not to grant a permit for the memorial, blocking this week's ceremonies, if the flag and statue weren't approved.

Although Lin "feels a sort of relief" that the commission unofficially decided to place the flag and statue to the side of her design, she says they still "amount to putting a mustache on someone else's work."

The sculpture was designed by Washington, D.C., artist Frederick Hart, who came in third in the original contest for the memorial.

LIN WAS SO upset earlier this year, before the commission agreed to the compromise placement, that she missed the March 26 groundbreaking for the memorial.

She now plans to attend the dedication, however.

The events will begin with a candlelight vigil and reading of the names of the dead at the National Cathedral on Wednesday. On Thursday and Friday, there will be reunions of veterans units, and on Saturday, the memorial will be formally dedicated following the parade.

The idea for the memorial was conceived by Jan C. Scruggs, a soldier who served in the 199th Light Infantry Brigade in Vietnam. Scruggs became president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, a private group that raised $7 million for the memorial and successfully lobbied Congress to donate two acres of land in July 1980.

Everything seemed to be going fine, until the fund's panel of artists picked Lin's design in May 1981, sparking an outcry.

The issue came to a head last summer at a meeting in the office of Sen. John Warner, R-Va., when veterans came up with the idea of the sculpture.

Robert Lawrence, president of the American Institute of Architects, protested that the change would result in a "patched-up, modified, compromised" memorial, but he was overruled by the Fine Arts Commission.

LIN FINDS the controversy over her design ironic, contending that its abstract quality is more "democratic" than a realistic sculpture, giving the viewer the "freedom to think," in the American tradition.

She says she designed it specifically with the site, Constitution Gardens, in mind. From the center of the memorial one has a clear view of the Lincoln Memorial to the southwest and the Washington Monument down the Mall to the east. The view makes one contemplate American history and the role the Vietnam War played in it, she says.

Lin says she has been "living in a fishbowl" ever since her design was picked and has found it hard to study at Harvard.

But she'd do it all again.

"I guess the Vietnam veterans have been stepped on enough because of politics, and I'm glad I could make an apolitical statement for them," she said. "I think it's their service that's the issue, and not what some politicians think about the war."

Pulitzer, Kimberly had lesbian affair, witness says

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A last-minute mystery witness in the surprise-laden Pulitzer divorce trial says he saw Roxanne Pulitzer, wearing a sheer nightgown, in bed with socialite Jacqueline Kimberly — who was wearing nothing at all.

The judge in the divorce case termed it "very damaging testimony" to Mrs. Pulitzer's claim that she and Mrs. Kimberly never were lesbian lovers.

Speaking in a calm monotone, Steve Anderson, the mustachioed former mate aboard the Pulitzers' 75-foot yacht, testified Monday that he stumbled across Mrs. Pulitzer in bed with the 32-year-old Mrs. Kimberly.

The encounter occurred in the spring of 1979 as he passed by a bedroom at the Pulitzers' lavish waterfront home on his way to make a phone call, Anderson said.

"I observed four legs protruding from the bed," Anderson testified. "Subsequently, one set of legs slid off and stood up. It was a naked woman...it was Jackie Kimberly."

Then, Anderson, testified: "Out came Roxanne in a very sheer nightgown and asked what I was doing in the house."

On hearing the testimony, Mrs. Pulitzer threw her head back and laughed. But Palm Beach Circuit Judge Carl Harper termed the stocky sailor's statement as "some very damaging testimony to the wife."

Harper told attorneys for both parties that the 17-day trial, rife with charges of immoral and illegal conduct, would end by today.

"I've heard enough of this," the judge said wearily. "This trial hasn't been a kissing contest."

He said he expected no decision on the custody and property matters before Christmas. Mrs. Pulitzer seeks a chunk of her husband's fortune, which she estimates at $25 million and he says is a tenth that. Both parties want custody of their 5-year-old twin sons.

Mrs. Pulitzer, a 31-year-old brunette, has denied ever being in the same bed with Mrs. Kimberly. And Mrs. Kimberly, an ex-model married to Kleenex heir James Kimberly, has called rumors she engaged in homosexual relations with Mrs. Pulitzer "disgusting."

A drawn-looking James Kimberly also took the stand Monday on Mrs. Pulitzer's behalf. The 76-year-old tycoon said he and his wife were on a trans-American tour during the time Anderson claims he saw the two women in bed at the Pulitzer home.

Mrs. Kimberly was not present for her husband's testimony. Since Friday, she has been hospitalized at Good Samaritan Hospital for "exhaustion," and was listed in fair condition Monday.

Thurmond urges vets to lobby against cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — American veterans' organizations, gathered here to honor those who fought in Vietnam, are being urged to lobby against any moves by Congress to slash defense spending.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., joining in a Labor Department-sponsored "Salute to All American Veterans," said he was concerned that the political brouhaha resulting from rising unemployment would force a rollback of the Reagan administration's planned military buildup.

"I want to say on this occasion that we have a great president who believes in preparing our country and I feel that the veterans of this country should back this president and his defense program," Thurmond said Monday.

If we don't sell your home, we'll buy it.*

Your ERA Real Estate Specialist is now offering a worry-free way to buy and sell a home-the Sellers Security Plan.

First, the Sellers Security Plan can advance up to $100,000 on the equity in your present home to use as a down payment on your next home, providing you purchase that house through an ERA approved broker and your present home qualifies.

Then if your house hasn't sold after 210 days, ERA will buy it, at a price and terms you agree to when you accept the plan.

A minimal application fee and certified appraisal are required to see if your home qualifies.

The ERA Sellers Security Plan. Equity advance and assured sale at a price you can live with.

ERA® REAL ESTATE

*Some conditions and limitations apply. To see if you qualify, call your ERA Real Estate Specialist and review the Sellers Security Plan contract.

Neighborhood offices everywhere, each independently owned and operated.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 97/8% on a loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 147/8% for first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent twentieth Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the adjustment in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7.5% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 80%. At each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATES 16 7/8%
