Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

Good morning, folks.

Here I am trying to do a colym in The Record News.

I hope I'll be a little more regular about it than I was in The Times.

And I hope the readers of The Record News will bear with me in all my mistakes of fact and conclusion.

What I expect to write will be just plain everyday talk and ought not to be taken too seriously, and while the heading under which I write would confine my talk to Wichita Falls, I will probably often wander afield. And why should a mere talker be restricted as to location or subject?

For this colym I'll be glad to have suggestions and letters from friends and readers and if anything is "too hot" for my peaceful purpose I'll just pass it up.

Anything, say, like the doctrine of total depravity or the curative qualities of relics and shrines.

Even with the best of intentions I am likely to get all mixed up and involved in controversy. But I am reminded that even controversy oft serves a good end.

Now, if anybody else had wandered over as much space merely in introduction and explanation, I'd be kicking and I am wondering where to start. I am again reminded that the way to begin is to begin.

Let's see, there's Thanksgiving, deep oil development, the price of turkeys, the end of the football season—I have it, crappie—yes, I looked in the dictionary and it's spelled that way—fishing.

Undoubtedly more fish were caught at Lake Wichita last week than have ever been caught there in a similar period. Thousands of big, fat crappie have been pulled out of the water around the pier in front of the pavilion. A lot of folks have caught the legal limit on successive days. Such luck has not been known in these parts in years.

Put the weight on the end of the line, the hooks a little above it, bait them with small minnows, hold the line so that the end is about four inches off the bottom, was the advice of a friend who had caught the limit on two successive days.

This talker followed this advice, but in two chilly hours failed to get a nibble. Others around him had fair success.

Why is it that some folks seem to have all the luck in fishing? Our friend says it's all a matter of right living.

For the first time in Wichita Falls, so far as this talker knows, the governors of two states met here last week when Gov. W. J. Holloway of Oklahoma and Gov. Dan Moody of Texas attended a Shrine ceremonial here.

Both are young men who are making good records in office and who have personal qualities that make them quite popular. As both are young and popular there is talk that neither of them expects to retire from public life at the end of their present terms of office.

Governor Holloway recalled that he spent a year of his youth in Texas living with an uncle and aunt on a tenant farm near Honey Grove. He said that something like 80 per cent of the population of Oklahoma was of Texas origin.

Governor Holloway said that he was going to be governor of Oklahoma 12 months longer for, as he said, the Oklahoma supreme court had held the legislature of that state can be convened only upon the call of the governor and that he did not intend to take any chances by issuing a call before the end of his term.

But the new governor of the Sooner state has gotten off to a good start and has won the support of practically all factions so that he wouldn't be in any danger of impeachment even if he did call a special session of the legislature.

He came down from Oklahoma City by airplane. We could have wished that he had driven down in an automobile for then he could have learned from his own bumps the need of highway improvements on the Oklahoma side of the river.

Texas and Oklahoma officials met in Fort Worth Friday and approved plans for three additional free bridges across Red river north of Denison, Ringgold and Gainesville. All of these bridges are badly needed, and so is a free bridge between Byers and Waurika.

This talker likes the plan of the merchants to decorate for the Christmas season with evergreens and colored lights. The mere sight of such decorations must inspire something of the cheer and spirit of Christmas in every beholder. Wichita Falls has been rather backward in the matter of Christmas decorations heretofore. Let's do a good job of it this season.

The sale of Christmas seals for funds to fight tuberculosis opens in Wichita county this week. Sixty-five per cent of the proceeds from the sale of these seals goes to the work of the Wichita County Anti-Tuberculosis association, the remainder going to the state and national associations. Tuberculosis leads all other diseases as a cause of death in the United States. Twenty-five years ago this disease was claiming 200 lives in each 100,000 annually; today this toll has been cut in half and we are told that, in a short time the disease can be eradicated entirely. The fight against tuberculosis is one that mankind is winning. It's a fight in which all of us ought to be glad to enlist.

STATE'S PLUM FOR HIGHWAYS LEADS NATION

Secretary Hyde Announces 1931 Apportionments Now Available

625,000 TO GET WORK

Total of All Road Construction to Read $2,000,000,000 in 1930

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (AP)—With an allotment of $4,545,830, Texas will receive the largest sum in federal road aid of all the states in 1931, it was revealed here today.

Secretary Hyde ordered an apportionment among the states of a fund of $73,125,000, authorized by congress as federal aid for construction of roads in the fiscal year of 1931.

Calling attention to President Hoover's suggestion for acceleration of public building programs to promote business, the secretary said state highway departments would be given authority to make immediate preparations for expenditure of the money. He added there still was an unexpended balance of $28,000,000 from funds previously apportioned, which, added to the new fund, made a total of $101,125,000.

All of the 48 states and Hawaii share in the appropriation on the basis of their respective areas, populations and mileages of post roads.

Next to Texas in order in the secretary's apportionments are New York, with $3,605,965, and Pennsylvania, with $3,314,707.

The funds allocated to other states include:

Arizona, $1,062,190; New Mexico, $1,190,296, and Oklahoma, $1,751,015.

$25,000 TO GET WORK ON ROADS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (US)—With $100,000,000 available for immediate distribution and prospects of an additional appropriation of at least $50,000,000, America's road-building work for 1930 today promised to pass the $2,000,000,000 mark, and give employment to 625,000 persons.

The prospective expansion is by long odds the largest ever contemplated by Uncle Sam, Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association, estimated.

Federal, state and county expenditures for roads in 1929 will amount to about $1,800,000,000, according to present indications, said. Next year an additional appropriation of $50,000,000 by congress would be matched, according to terms of the federal road aid system, by another $50,000,000 from the state and county builders which would bring the total to $1,900,000,000.

To this, Henry believes, it is conservative and safe to expect that states and counties, on their own initiative, will increase building activities by at least $100,000,000, in furtherance of President Hoover's move for expansion of industry in all lines, bringing the total to an even $2,000,000,000.

To this must be added $500,000,000, the annual sum spent by municipalities in maintaining and constructing street and highway systems, thus making a final total program of about $2,500,000,000 for road work in 1930.

It is estimated that every $4,000 represents materials and wages of one worker, whence comes the employment figure.

GROWTH OF AIR MAIL IS SHOWN

Postmaster General's Report Sent to Hoover

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (AP)—How the romantic duties of the pony express have finally devolved upon the airplane was set forth in cold figures today by Postmaster General Brown in reporting to President Hoover that almost 11 and a quarter million dollars had been expended last year in sending mail by air over nearly 10 and ¢ quarter million flying miles.

But the deficit which has ridden the back of the postoffice department for decades also touched this new method of transporting a share of the postal load. Congress had appropriated $12,430,000 for hiring private lines to do the work which was begun several years ago by the government. The expenditure was $11,207,957.07, and the mileage was 10,212,511 up to June 30 last. Nevertheless it was estimated that the cost of the service was $7,000,000 more than the postage revenue.

Postmaster General Brown said the demands for new routes were far above the annual appropriations but that the department had followed a conservative but progressive policy with regard to this service. He informed the president in his annual report that while the expenditures for the air mail were above the estimated revenues, steps were being taken to adjust equitably the rates paid air mail

AGED SENATORS WEARY AS NEW SESSION OPENS

Strenuous Year of Labor Takes Toll From Old Men's Ranks

LITTLE EXPECTED

Tariff Revision and Tax Cut Only Measures Sure of Passing

By FRASER EDWARDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (US)—A cheerless congress, which reassembles Monday will survey with some dismay and depression the huge legislative load expected to be dumped upon its door-step by President Hoover.

Congress has been in session almost continuously for a year. The younger members of the house may be all merry and bright, but the elder statesmen of the senate are tired—dog-tired.

Toll Takes Toll

That year of toll has taken toll of the old-timers. They are saddened by the passing of Burton of Ohio and Warren of Wyoming. They have seen Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader, crack under the strain. They are giving thought to their own well-being.

Such is the mental and physical condition of many of the most important legislative figures on the eve of the first regular session of the 71st congress. It is not a bright prospect for the ambitious legislative program.

Little Expected

Those old fellows, veterans tried in the wars, may be expected to buck up and put their shoulders to the wheel. But in the six months' grind ahead there may be little legislative accomplishment beyond tariff revision and tax reduction. At least, these are the only measures sure of passage.

Many other measures are expected to be initiated by President Hoover. These will include legislation on radio, railroad consolidation, prohibition enforcement reorganization, reorganization of the executive departments, flood control, rivers and harbors, Muscle Shoals and branch banking.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 1. (UP)—The law of supply and demand isn't working out so well in the Syracuse baby market, Mrs. Florence Grannis, county commissioner, is in need of 20 choice infants, blue-eyed, blonde girls preferred.

Mrs. Grannis has, for many years, been placing dependent children in foster homes. Recently the number of available babies has been falling off, she says, while the number of applicants for babies is on the increase. She now has orders for 20 babies and isn't able to fill a single order.

Amelia Earhart, Visitor Here, Pleads For 'Fair Play' In Printing Air News

By FRED D. THOMPSON
The Record News Staff

Miss Amelia Earhart, acclaimed by the world as the only woman flier to complete a transoceanic flight, and who at present is assistant general traffic manager of the Transcontinental Air Transport company, landed at Staley field, this city, at 5:30 p. m. Sunday for an overnight stop. Flying east from Los Angeles, Calif., Miss Earhart expected to take again to the air at 7 a. m. Monday for Omaha, Neb., where she is scheduled to make an address Monday night before the convention of the Advertising and Selling league in session there.

The noted aviatrix flew here direct from Columbus, N. M., where night overtook her Saturday on her flight from Los Angeles. She left Columbus early Sunday morning, reached El Paso about noon, and after a brief stop there took off for Abilene, where she landed to obtain weather reports before proceding to Wichita Falls.

High winds and low-hanging clouds had made the trip difficult all the way from Columbus, she said. Miss Earhart is flying alone in a Lockheed Vega plane with a Wasp motor. The plane is a commercial ship.

AMELIA EARHART

Miss Earhart, it appeared in an interview she granted newspaper men Sunday night, was interested in two things: a good old fashioned dinner, consisting, in part, of stewed chicken with homemade noodles and an enormous glass of buttermilk; and last, but to her all important, the problems of aviation.

Aviation, of course, was the first thing she talked of. But, weary after a full day in the rough windy skies, the noted flier interrupted the interview a moment to exclaim "I'm starved," and to add, as if it had just occurred to her, that she had eaten nothing since breakfast.

The stewed chicken with noodles—"I always like noodles," she said—having been ordered served in her room at the Kemp hotel, Miss Earhart piloted the conversation back to aviation.

The subject uppermost in her mind Sunday night was the close relation between newspapers and the aviation industry. Miss Earhart said that while the press had undoubtedly given aviation more impetus than any other force, it was in great danger of harming both the aviation industry and it-

TEMPERATURE DROP FORECAST

Brisk North Wind Brings Colder Weather

Colder temperatures for the region adjacent to Wichita Falls was forecast Sunday night, as the first day in December, Christmas month, dawned to the howling of a brisk north wind which has sent the mercury falling all over Southwestern Oklahoma and Northwest Texas.

Train dispatchers of the various railroads reported late Sunday rapidly lowering temperatures in Oklahoma, where in some localities the temperature was as low as 24 degrees. The 24-degree mark was registered at Woodward.

The Wichita Valley dispatcher reported temperatures as follows: Stamford, 40 degrees; Abilene, 41 degrees; Spur, 35 degrees.

A general temperature of 40 degrees prevailed along the Denver line to Childress, the Denver dispatcher reported.

The temperature here at 5 p. m. Sunday was 42 degrees, and as night fell was perceptibly lowering.

Hotel Maid to Star As McManus Witness

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. (UP)—The trial of George A. McManus, accused of the murder of Arnold Rothstein, begins tomorrow what should prove its critical week. With most of the troubles besetting the jury apparently ironed out, the state will have five unencumbered days, or as much of them as is required, to put in what should prove the most important portions of its evidence. The week should bring to the witness stand Bridget Farry, the picturesque chambermaid depended upon to give the necessary evidence for proof that McManus actually was in the room at the Park Central hotel in which the state alleges Rothstein was shot.

BUS TAKES 11 TO FACE TRIAL

Borger Group Under Total Bonds of $120,000

BORGER, Texas, Dec. 1. (AP)—Eleven prisoners of the federal government, including several former city and county officials, left today on a bus for Amarillo, where hearings will be held tomorrow on charges to violate the national prohibition act.

Before the prisoners were placed in the bus, a roll call was taken by U. S. Deputy Marshal B. F. Harper, and the following answered "present:"

Glenn A. Pace, former mayor of Borger; Jim Crane and Cal Baird, former deputy sheriffs; C. A. Mitchell, former constable; Jack Payne, one time deputy constable; Sam Jones, former deputy constable; Johnny Jones, probation officer; and Lewis Crim, H. O. Taylor, Louis Weitzman, E. L. Lantron, who held no official claim to distinction.

Sam Jones had just made two bonds, one for $7,500 on a charge of murdering District Attorney John A. Holmes, and $1,500 on a liquor indictment.

Officials said it was one of the most expensive group of prisoners ever to take a bus ride. They estimated the bonds would be between $60,000 and $120,000. The arrests were made late yesterday.

A special session of the federal grand jury at Amarillo has been called for Dec. 9.

Mexico to Make Effort To Balance Its Budget

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1. (AP)—President Portes Gil, in a statement today said Mexico would continue a strict policy of retrenchment in an effort to balance its budget, but added this would be impossible until the problem of public debt had been settled.

He said definite steps have been taken to solve the debt problem on the basis of Mexico's capacity to pay. A payment plan is being arranged covering all questions connected with the debt. Negotiations have been opened with international bankers for settlement of the international debt with the view of settling all pending foreign claims in a block, while a special committee has been appointed to take up the claims of natives in order to clean up the internal debt.

GROWTH OF AIR MAIL IS SHOWN

contractors to square with existing legislation on the subject.

The department, on the whole, was far from making both ends meet for the year. In fact the burden of deficit grew noticeably heavier, the outgo exceeding the income by $85,461,176.24. For the previous year the unfavorable balance was $32,121,095.80. The difference was explained by the postmaster general as having been due to expenditures ordered by congress, such as increased postal pay, free mailing privileges, ocean mail contracts, and other such items.

It was shown in the report that the American people bought $527,706,790.28 worth of postage stamps and that other sources of revenue brought the total receipts up to $696,947,577.69. The expenditures were $782,408,753.93.

In the maze of big sums set down in the report, it was disclosed that the department spends annually more than $50,000 in handling free mail for blind persons. This sum was the smallest listed for non-profitable services. The others, when added totaled $31,232,906.52, which, if paid for, would reduce the actual deficit to $56,752,934.61.

The postmaster general listed other items contributing to the deficit as including handling and transporting second class matter free within counties of origin $8,781,530.83 and differentials favoring vessels of American registry under the merchant marine act $8,787,843.91.

Mr. Brown frankly said that he did not like the idea of having the postoffice department charged up with the cost of handling free mail and recommended that legislation be passed appropriating $9,931,240 to the department to cover such cost.

A total of 276,773,736 pieces of mail, weighing 35,998,676 pounds, was mailed by departments other than the postoffice department, on which no postage was paid. The revenue which would have been derived from such mail would have totaled $8,169,170. In addition members of congress franked 37,273,270 pieces of mail which would have brought a revenue of $957,964 had postage been paid on it.

Not content with setting down astonishing figures about stamps and deficits the postmaster general turned mathematical again and informed President Hoover and congress there had been a total of 17,663,751,272 distributions and redistributions of pieces, exclusive of registered mail, by railway postal clerks.

The vast extent of the postoffice business had no better yardstick than 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline during the year, to say nothing of oil.

Cold Weather Postpones Races

Owing to the cold weather Sunday, the motorcycle races which had been scheduled for Sunday at the Texas-Oklahoma fairgrounds were postponed until next Sunday. Those who had gathered at the speedway were somewhat disappointed at the postponement. Many good drivers had come here to participate and the meet was to have been a big one had not the weather prevented.

self by overplaying plane crashes in its news columns.

Her attitude, however, was not that true news should be suppressed, but that in the presentation of the news the facts be accurately given, and that the play of the news be based on the facts.

To illustrate her point she related that recently when a large 32 passenger plane crashed on the Pacific coast a large metropolitan newspaper told the story in gigantic headlines on the first page, despite the fact that no person had been injured in the mishap. She added that on one of the obscure inside pages of the same newspaper there was a story reciting the tragic death of two residents of the town in which the newspaper was issued and that this story had been given no significant play.

In such cases, where news values are not accurately judged, and prominence is given the supposed danger of air travel the newspapers of the country, Miss Earhart said, "are killing aviation."

"And at the same time," she added, "they are killing themselves by playing up stories that are not, in the long run, deserving."

"What the aviation industry would like to see come about is fair play in the handling of aviation news," she concluded. "And to get fair play the newspapers must cooperate with aviation. Aviation has as much to do with it as the newspapers, of course, because if air officials give out the wrong information, the story will be printed wrong."

Miss Earhart further pointed out the discrepancy between the news policies and the editorial policies of some newspapers, which, one day, will fill their editorial columns with "Boost Aviation" talk, and the next day will run huge headlines on some minor air crash.

Plane crashes, of course, where they are serious and result in the loss of a number of lives, must be printed, she said just as any other tragedy must be presented to the public as news.

Miss Earhart was not bitter against the newspapers in any way. Rather she said she hoped that "something could some day be done to bring about a better understanding between the press and aviation, in the interest of fair play."

Miss Earhart, at the close of the interview, was asked for some personal statement regarding her career, her likes and her dislikes.

She said: "I don't care what you say about me, but I do care what you say about aviation."

The dinner arrived then, and the interviewers made ready to depart. Miss Earhart, fair-haired and blue-eyed, her head leaning comfortably on the back of the chair in which she was sitting, was visibly relieved at the sight of the stewed chicken and homemade noodles.

"But don't rush off...." she said.

Three Tragedies Fatal for Score

Five of the young people were killed instantly. De Ford died while being taken to the Mercy Memorial hospital in Whittier.

The coupe with three of the students in the front and three in the rumble seat was sent hurtling against a concrete signal post and was cut completely in half. Two of the bodies were hurled more than 100 feet from the wreckage.

Death of the six young people came as a climax to a "hard times" party and sorority dance at Baker's ranch, Santa Fe Springs, where the three couples had gone after the University of Southern California football game Saturday afternoon. They were all in costume.

TRAIN DERAILMENT TAKES NINE LIVES

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 1. (US)—Checkup of the casualties in the wreck of the Norfolk-New York excursion special early today revealed tonight that nine had been killed.

The special train was going at a speed of almost 60 miles an hour when the wreck took place at Onley, on the eastern shore of Virginia.

More than a score of injured were taken to hospitals in this city where the condition of several of them is critical.

The cause of the wreck has not been determined.

The wrecked train, all coaches, was one of the special excursions run by the Pennsylvania railroad at reduced rates. The coaches contained about 500 passengers approximately evenly divided between whites and negroes.

Gentleman's Agreement Can End War, He Says

CHICAGO, Dec. 1. (AP)—Industrial leaders of the world can permanently abolish war by a mere gentlemen's agreement, Edward N. Hurley wartime chairman of the U. S. shipping board said in a letter today to Georges Theunis, of Belgium, president of the international chamber of commerce, in asking the latter to place an industrial peace proposal upon the next agenda of that body for consideration.

ILLITERATES TO SOLVE CRIME

Unschooled Hill Folk Will Be Murder Witnesses

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 1. (UP)—Women who can't count the number of their own children and others who can't reckon time of day will be called to solve the Ozark country's most atrocious crime—the burning alive of Connie Franklin, war veteran.

This illiteracy coupled with alleged clan rule which has gripped the cabin homes of St. James, Ark., will, according to copyrighted reports of the Kansas City Journal-Post, hinder the prosecution of five men held for Franklin's flaming death in the hills last March.

Although Arkansas state officials deny knowledge of such conditions, the Journal-Post investigator sent into the hill country of northern Arkansas reported "clan rule" and the belief that Franklin, a newcomer, "was too smart" resulted in his murder.

The men held, including Alec Fulk, alleged leader of the Cabin and Cagin creek gangs supposed to have inflicted a life of terrorism upon the ignorant folk of the hills, will be tried in Mountain View, Ark., Dec. 16.

According to the investigator, threats of clan violence have been made against Sheriff Sam Johnson who, aided by the gossiping tongue of Bertha Burns, herself a victim of the floggers, traced Franklin's disappearance to a pile of charred bones in a thicket at the end of a deer trail.

Franklin was killed as he started with Tiller Ruminer, 16, his fiancee, to be wed by the justice of the peace.

The sheriff fears, according to the article, that silence which cloaked the crime for months may be imposed by other alleged clan leaders. Johnson has been threatened to quit "monkeyin' in these parts."

He is dubious of the effectiveness of the hill folk as witnesses when the trials are called.

These people, living from generation to generation in wooded glens untouched by railroads and roads, compute time by "sunup and sundown." It was "right smart after sundown" that "Uncle Lou" Saunchises, a hermit, revealed he witnessed the band's mutilation of Franklin.

Tiller, the girl and main witness, has never been to school and in her hill country life had never known of Thanksgiving day.

Her mother, Mrs. Charles Ruminer, cannot count her own children. "That's Floyd and Hoyd and Lloyd," she began, while visitors counted out seven as they stepped up. The mother, now 30, was married when 18.

Railroad Man To Press Extortion Charge

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. (US)—Nathan Leo Amster, railroad financier, let it be known today that he will make no compromise with Olga Eide Edwards in the suit for extortion brought against her. The notice served by Amster on the young woman, stopping the payment of $500 a month to her and her five-year-old child, is expected to end all payments.

The outlook today was that the case will drag through the courts indefinitely.

FOLLERIN' THE BAND

WHO hasn't "follered" the band up Main street, or up Broadway or Michigan boulevard? Heart pumping joyously, feet beating the ground in time! Grandly intoxicating moment of childhood!

And—later in life—who hasn't felt a thrill as the conductor lifted his baton for the overture to begin? A moment pregnant with the glamour of the theatre! Music casts its spell throughout all the Ages of Man.

Is it wise then, in this enlightened and prosperous day to countenance substitution of a shadow of music for the real thing in the theatre?

Imagine the Irish following a Music Box on St. Patrick's Day! Or fife and drum music by a Machine on Memorial Day! Incongruous? Of course but not more so than a mechanical overture in the theatre.

Talking pictures—a new dramatic form; the radio—which transmits music directly and DOES reflect the artist's mood of the moment; the phonograph in the home—where living music usually is not available—are not at issue here. We are discussing only the SUBSTITUTION OF MECHANICAL MUSIC FOR REAL MUSIC IN THE THEATRE, in consequence of which Real Music is being eliminated in theatres.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Just in front of us on the bus sat a mother and her daughter, of probably 14 or 15 years. The mother held a magazine and was looking at the cover picture. "Poet laureate," she murmured; "Who is the poet laureate of England now, honey?" she asked. "Er—ah, er'ah—oh I don't know," said her daughter, candidly. "Don't know!" ejaculated the mother. "Well it looks like your English teacher would see that you knew that." "Well, who is the poet laureate?" inquired her daughter, in turn. "I just can't remember," replied the mother; "But I'd have known when I was your age in school."

We realized that we didn't know the name of the poet laureate of England and went home to hunt it up. We would have known it when we were in school also, but we couldn't blame the girl for its seems that poets laureate of England have been lower in the scale of genius as the years have gone by.

There must be a poet laureate and sometimes perhaps, the crop is poor from which he is picked.

But we constantly tell the children that school does not stop with graduation. One must keep on learning all through life.

Poetry is not the only thing that is changing. From what we have heard of the graceful long skirted "debs" at the Junior Forum Thanksgiving dance, we gather that for the first time in their lives, they knew what it was to "come sweeping down the stairs."

And shoes! They change each season. Just stand on the corner of Eighth and Indiana and watch the crowd go by.

There are little short vamped, spike heeled affairs that make the girl wearing them look as if she tipped to the front; long and slender vamps making a foot attractive, but half the time with a high heel utterly unsuitable for the street; common sense oxfords on thick ankles that don't care how they look and now and then a neat sport shoe on a girl's foot. It makes you wish to shake hands with her.

We do not care for spats. Most of the men whom we have seen wearing them, are theatrically inclined. However, Thanksgiving night, a very high-toned colored man got on the bus we were riding, accompanied by five female members of his race. He wore pearl gray spats.

We suppose, to be perfectly tolerant, we'd let them wear what they please and make no derogatory remarks.

Just at present the eldest brother of the late Isadora Duncan is said to be wearing homespun toga, sandals and long hair around the streets of Manhattan. He has dressed for years as an ancient Greek. He will wager he is cold.

And Bert McConnell, associate editor of the Literary Digest, emerged from the Canadian woods Nov. 29, clad in one beard, a moosekin jerkin and two moccasins. He spent 60 days proving that modern man is able to withstand the hardships of primitive life.

Judge Predicts Laws To Discourage Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1. (UB)—The time is coming when the law in most states will automatically deprive both parents in a divorce action of the custody of their children except in a very few cases, Superior Judge B. R. Schauer predicted.

"If the law took the children away from both parents most persons would think more carefully before breaking up their homes," the jurist said during a divorce hearing.

Abilene Woman Says She Was in Much Misery

All Her Troubles Have Now Gone Since Taking Orgatone and She Says She Would Like to Tell the Whole World About It.

"Nobody can ever realize the torture I suffered for nearly five years until Orgatone restored my health," said Mrs. Gladys Watts, residing on rural route 1, Abilene, Texas, when talking to the Orgatone representative in Harvey Hays Drug store a few days ago.

"I had the most terrible dizzy headaches that any human being ever suffered with," she continued, "and sometimes for several days at a time I was so bilious and upset I was unable to even do my own housework. I lost my appetite completely and there have been times when I would'nt even touch food for days at a time. Of course all this suffering got me in an awful weak, rundown condition and very often I would just have to stay in bed too miserable to move.

"Well, sir, this medicine just seemed to make me all over again. I haven't had a single headache since I started taking it. I feel so much better that I just want to go out and tell the whole world what a wonderful medicine Orgatone is. Everything I eat now tastes so good and I have such can appetite that I am almost ashamed of myself. Why, my family accuses me of eating between meals. I have gained in weight, I don't know how much, but I can tell by the way my clothes are all getting tight that it's a whole lot, and I sleep fine every night and get up full of energy. I'm not troubled with constipation any more, and I just feel strong all over."

It's Pity We Can't Forget Unpleasant Things, Says Dix

Why Do So Many of Us Spend Our Time Recalling the Unpleasant Experiences We Have Had and the Wrongs That Have Been Done to Us? Queries Dorothy Dix—What a Pity We Can't Forget It.

There is one slang phrase that embodies the whole philosophy of life and sums up in two words. It is: forget it.

Whatever is done, is done. Forget it. You have had your hour of triumph or despair. Forget it. The old wrong, the old failure, the old grudge. Forget it. Perhaps you have failed. Forget it. Perhaps you have been treated unjustly. Forget it. Wipe off the slate every day and start a new score.

What is the use of vain repining over departed glories? What good is there in shedding tears over spilled milk? What profit in threshing over old straw? What is the use of wasting time regretting the mistakes that can never be rectified? It is memory, more than anything else, that makes bores and cowards of us.

I know a woman who has never forgotten anything unpleasant that has ever happened to her. She still tells you how a dressmaker ruined a party frock for her when she was a girl. She still recalls after more than 50 years the slight that she felt was put upon her when Mrs. X invited her to her big reception instead of a small dinner she was giving for some celebrity. She still harps upon how Aunt Sally did her out of a silver spoon when grandma's things were divided after her death.

She is like a ghoul delving in the graves of the past and hugging the rotting bones of old feuds to her breast, yet she cannot understand why people avoid her as they would a pestilence and why even her children dread to have her around.

What a pity she can't forget it.

I know another woman whose great-grandfather was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. She is a good, kind, commonplace woman, but people also flee at her approach, for well they know that the minute she sees them she will ram her distinguished ancestor down their throats, and they are fed up with him.

You can't remark upon the weather without her telling you how dear great-grandpa, who was a signer, had his rheumatism affected by dampness.

You can't offer her an apple without having her go into a long and detailed description of dear great-grandpapa's orchard that he planted just before he signed the Declaration of Independence. You can't do or say anything that does not remind her of the signer and to avoid being stalked by his ghost everybody leaves granddaughter alone.

What a pity she can't forget it!

I know a woman who as the phrase goes, has seen better days. In her youth she had money and a beautiful home and fine clothes and trips to Europe and was a figure in fashionable society. Now she is poor and has to earn her own living.

She has brains and good health and energy, and she could make a great success in business if she would only cease harping upon the past and give her mind to making something out of the present instead of letting it be obsessed by the memories of her departed grandeur. But instead of being proud of having the ability to hold down a good job, she is ashamed of having to work.

She is always apologizing for standing behind a counter and waits upon a customer with the air of a princess condescending to a mere commoner. And she is always telling futile little lies about really getting so bored with society and being so bitten by the restlessness of the age that she decided she would go in for a commercial career. And she finds it quite exciting, don't you know, but, of course, it wasn't what she was brought up to.

And the poor soul can't see that she kills the respect that people would have for her because she went to work when she lost her fortune instead of being a parasite, and that she is completely blocking her every chance of advancement and earning more money because you have to put pride in your job to ever get anywhere in it.

What a pity she can't forget it.

I know a woman who made an unfortunate marriage in her youth. Her husband was a rotter who abused and misused her and starved her, and who, just before her baby was born, eloped with another woman.

WILL DO ALL IT CLAIMS TO DO

Mrs. Steele Says of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pratt, W. Va.—"I was so weak and nervous that I was in bed most all the time and couldn't sit up and I am only 30 years old. I saw your advertising in a magazine and after I had taken three doses of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could feel that I was better. After taking two bottles I began doing my work and I feel like a new woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and say it will do all it claims to do and more. I will gladly answer all letters I recive."—Mrs. S. E. Steele, Pratt, W. Va.

These Maids Will Chase Wichita Blues

One of a series of the beautiful dances to be given at the Forum clubhouse afternoon and evening of Dec. 9 by the Isadora Duncan dancers.

Russian Dancers Promise Matinee Performance

On with the dance! That is the thought being expressed on every hand when one speaks of the treat in store for Wichita Falls lovers of music and the dance, in the coming of the Isadora Duncan dancers. There is elation over the news that a matinee performance will also take place at the Forum clubhouse at 3 o'clock Monday, Dec. 9, before the evening performance of the same day.

Every phase of this group's art is reported by the most severe critics to be uplifted by the disarmingly beautiful and graceful Russian girls.

In the revolutionary group, where the dancers sing as they dance, a high and thrilling dramatic level of intense emotion and strong rhythm is reached.

In the terpsichorean interpretation of the folk songs in "Revolutionary Russia," Isadora Duncan gave the history of what might be called the world's greatest stirring of a huge people.

Back to 1905 we go; cold bodies fall under the volleys of czarist soldiers on the banks of the Neva. Survivors go to Siberia in the cold and snow. There is death—and more death.

Time elapses and after war and more suffering, the soul of labor moves. Through all the vicissitudes of the revolutionists, the dance moves until life is again sweet and on the steppes, comes "Little Tamara's" intriguing "One-two-three" a Russian girl scout song.

Little Theater Cast Perfecting Parts in Play

For two hours and a half on three consecutive evenings, Jerry Moffett will be a multi-millionaire.

Just how it feels to be a multi-millionaire has not been revealed by Mr. Moffett, since rehearsals occupy most of his time. As William van Luyn in "White Collars," the Little theater production to be given on Dec. 11, 12 and 13, Mr. Moffett must portray the suavity and poise of a wealthy young man.

Willie F. C. McClung, director, is putting the young man into his luxurious setting and making him accustomed to it. Miss Thelma Chitwood is likewise learning to be a rich man's stenographer—and fiance. Clyde Straus, noted for his participation in amateur productions since his schooldays here and only recently the title player in "Aunt Lucia" will add another character to his list of parts as "Cousin Henry," one of the stenographer's many peculiar relatives who add to the humor of the plot.

Mrs. W. T. Watkins, as a flapper will bring in as her "truck-drivin' Romeo," J. W. Whitelaw, and his conversation with the erudite van Luyn promises to be one of the outstanding bits of the play.

Mrs. Hermoine Vaughan, director of music at the junior college, makes her debut in dramatics as Mrs. Thayer, and Raymond Strong, ex-Blue Curtain player, will finish the cast as Frank Thayer.

Tickets are being sold for the three nights by members of the Little theater. The play is to be given at the new playhouse, Polk and Avenue H.

TOO MANY MOSES

Daily Editorial

THE LITTLE birds who frequent telephone wires, and learn what is going on between mouthpieces, begin to whisper that the senate captured a Wall street mouse, and not a mountain, when Messrs. Glass, Borah, Caraway, et al., summoned Mr. Fred Kent for inquisition.

It appears that Mr. Kent is not the authorized oracle of finance that scareheads tend to indicate.

Neglect to so emphasize that fact is the more surprising, in view of reputed intention on his part to preface any utterances at Washington with a statement that his conclusions were those of an emeritus professor, rather than an active member of the corporation faculty—the expression of independent, rather than associate convictions.

In which case, his widely broad cast opinions on federal reserve technique, tariff blocs and political balances of power, would hardly seem to wear shoulder-straps.

And their significance should be estimated accordingly.

Considering the territorial animosities already aroused by Mr. Joseph Grundy's evaluation of the South's and West's economic importance—and in the light of the president's effort to abort any further schisms between the contributing factors to national stability, it's just as well to correct the record.

PROSPERITY stands no danger, except of being rumored to death. The times are only critical in that there are too many self-elected Moses proposing to lead us into, instead of out of bewilderments, which chiefly exist in speculative imaginations.

To accuse congress of deflating security values, by legislative delay, is as arrant nonsense as to indict the money masters of deliberately slaughtering a million lambs to fatten their institutional fortunes.

The Hawley bill was defeated because industry demanded greater privileges than its representatives were willing to grant agriculture. And the farming states, for once, stood firm for constituent rights.

The intra-party splits, necessary to secure that equalization, will likely continue into the next session—unless the interim develops an administration strategist of Mark Hanna or Nelson Aldrich stature.

Meanwhile, White House conferences are daily issuing cloudbrooms to sweep the skies of gloom.

The concerted investment programs of railroads, manufactures and the construction trades, totaling the vastest sums ever expended in a given period, upon replacement, extension and business promotion, guarantee continuance of full-time output, general employment, sustained consumption, and forward marches in all departments of commerce.

The labor chiefs have expressed satisfaction with current wages and undertake to restrain monkey-wrench throwing.

The rediscount rate is down; cheap cash is again available for all sound ventures; and smut in the Argentine is boosting wheat prices back to liquidating quotations.

A minority has suffered severe disappointment, and fewer dollars than expectation has stowed in air-castle strong-rooms—but we're still billions ahead of budgeted expenditures, and the treasury is affluent enough to afford a drastic cut in income taxes.

If provocateurs of pessimism and regional friction will kindly quit braying and let sober judgment talk, ticker tape, dividends and government will soon reflect betterments.

Utility Improvements Under Way at Graham

Special to The Record News

GRAHAM, Texas, Dec. 1.—The Texas-Louisiana Power company has had a force of men at work the past two weeks improving the line in this city by enlarging the gas mains and otherwise improving the system. O. W. Yankee of Arlington is foreman of construction and the company expects to expend between $15,000 and $20,000 in the improvement program.

The Deep Oil Development Company

IN A FULL page advertisement in the Sunday paper the Deep Oil Development company invites subscriptions both large and small to the million dollar fund it seeks to raise for the production of oil in this area.

Nearly half the amount has been subscribed before the invitation has been made to the general public. This procedure has been followed to show the confidence of leading business men throughout the district in the proposition. This confidence has been demonstrated in the subscriptions they have made. One leader in Wichita Falls has made a subscription of $50,000. A number of others have made subscriptions of $25,000 each and many have subscribed $5,000 and $10,000 each. They are not the type of men who throw their money away or who invest it in enterprises that are likely to be unprofitable.

The men who are putting these amounts into the company do not consider it as a contribution. Neither should those who subscribe for smaller amounts.

Most of the wealth in Wichita Falls today has come from oil. The men who are taking the lead in this enterprise are all men who are familiar with the oil business and who have made money out of it. A number of years ago a similar enterprise on a smaller scale was launched here which made good profits to those who invested in it. With all the experience that has been gained in the meanwhile and with the larger capital that will be back of the present company, is it not reasonable to expect that it will be even more successful?

Read the names of the proposed directors from Wichita Falls: Frank Kell, N. H. Martin, J. J. Perkins, James E. McKanna, W. B. Hamilton, John Hirschi, J. I. Staley, W. M. McGregor, L. H. Cullom, J. S. Bridwell, J. T. Harrell, John F. O'Donohoe.

Other of like standing and success and responsibility are to be named from other sections of Wichita county and Wilbarger, Clay, Archer and Young counties.

Do you not believe that your money entrusted to these men will be handled wisely and to the best advantage?

The Record News believes that the company now organizing is likely to become one of the strong and successful independent producing oil companies of the Southwest.

Preserving a New Asset

WICHITA FALLS has been given a new intangible asset by the completion and opening of North Scott avenue and its concrete bridge. Preservation of it will demand a definite policy of controlling building along that artery of through-city travel.

Visitors entering the city from the northwest at North Scott avenue and Broadway are greeted with a view of a wide, straight avenue leading directly into the heart of the business district, and with an attractive view of the city's largest buildings. At present the new highway north of the bridge has few buildings adjacent to it.

Because of its directness, the Scott avenue entrance will be used by practically all automobile travelers on the Colorado-to-Gulf highway. That factor which enables the city to present an impressive appearance to south bound visitors will also attract undesirable building along the new avenue. The impression a new arrival receives when first entering the city usually stays with him. Future buildings along North Scott avenue will determine the impression of Wichita Falls which thousands of persons will receive. Control designed to restrict buildings there to such structures as will create a favorable attitude toward the city would be amply justified by its influence upon new arrivals and tourists.

The undeveloped property along either side of Scott avenue north of the new bridge could be marked within a short time, perhaps, with unsightly, small, temporary stands which would catch some trade from a small percentage of tourists. It can be reserved for slower but much more profitable occupation by such firms or residents as will preserve the city's valuable asset in the good appearance of that area. It is to be hoped the possibilities of the new avenue will be developed.

The Cost of Illness

THE CHIEF REASON for the fight against illness, of course, is the mental and physical suffering that it causes. A congressional committee, however, reveals that there are urgent economic reasons as well for striving to make this a healthy nation.

The 36,000,000 wage earners of the United States lose at least 250,000,000 work days a year because of illness, according to the committee. Figure that up in terms of dollars and cents and you'll realize what an enormous bill we pay for sickness.

Apparently the country is doing everything it can, though, to remedy matters. At any rate, the committee discloses that the United States has more physicians in proportion to its population than any other country in the world. Nearly 1,500,000 people are employed in this country in connection with the care and prevention of disease.

A Bit Too Extreme

GENERAL SMEDLEY BUTLER is a man who has deserved well of his country. The doughty marine has made a distinguished record, and has helped give new luster to the famous corps of which he is a part. But it is a little hard to follow him in his assertion that disarmament "is the bunk."

"The only way to keep peace," he says, "is to be so strong that nobody will want to tread on your toes."

That might work very well—but suppose every nation tried it at once? Then we should have what Europe had prior to 1914; a terrific race in armaments, ending in an explosion that nearly blew the world to bits.

Between General Butler's position and the equally extreme position of the out and out pacifist there is a safe middle ground. The big task of the leaders of the world now is to find that middle ground and occupy it.

That C. W. Beall, of 56 William street, N. Y. (he is the vice pres of Harris Forbes investment brokers) is an elephant fancier. He won't even tell their winter quarters.

That a former bootlegger now rents binoculars to Bowery bank building tenants. The Commodore hotel is across the way.

That the Boston censors (who are funny that way) inspected "Porgy" again when it played a return date, passing up "A Night in Venice," which is pediculous with double-entendre.

Marriage for Two-- By Arthur Somers Roche

A newspaper reporter arrives with Mrs. Wilson's announcement of the breaking of the engagement—and Larry, incensed by the notoriety, and thinking only of his desire to hurt Helen, asks Joyce to marry him.

Revenge!

She tried to raise herself on the pillow.

"Marry you?"

She stared at him incredulously.

"Marry me," he said.

"But—are you joking?" she asked.

"It would be a queer joke, wouldn't it?" he retorted.

"But—you don't mean it. You don't love me."

"But I hate some one else?" he said.

Now she understood. Her face was pale now, and she struggled to keep aversion from her eyes.

"But that—to hurt her—you wouldn't do that," she said.

"Wouldn't I? Try me. But you—your desire to repay—not that you need to pay, but—your words meant little, eh?

"People can be engaged and still not know each other. They can even be married and be hardly acquainted. In fact," he added, and at his implication pallor left her face to be replaced by crimson, "I'd hardly expect to become acquainted with you." He suddenly became dry and business-like of tone.

"You have no money; you have a hatred of charity. You rebel at being under an obligation. The laws of New York, Miss Carroll, compel a husband to support a wife. There are advantages in the proposition."

"For me," she said.

"For me, also," he added. "You get protection, and support—but I—get even."

"A cheap thing," she said.

"But beyond price to me," he said.

She looked at him fully a minute. Then relaxing, sighing, she spoke.

"I'll marry you."

Contempt

Tracy looked at his wife. Then he glanced at the marriage license bureau official who had just made him a husband and made this stranger woman a wife. There was a look of expectancy in the eyes of the official, and the clerks who had been called in as witnesses were smirking meaningly.

He felt compelled to that conformity expected of him. He bent his head—not much, for her lips were very little below the level of his own and his mouth touched hers. She neither greeted nor evaded his caress. The lips that met his were cold, unresponsive, but she did not turn aside her head.

The license official, conscious of a snug fee, escorted them to the door of his office, murmured, banalities which neither of them heard, and a moment later they were in a taxi, speeding uptown.

It seemed to him that she had placed herself at the far end of the seat, that she was occupying the least possible space, as though proximity to him was distasteful.

"I'm sorry," he said.

He could not see her averted face.

"For kissing you," he explained.

Her shoulders moved slightly. The shrug might have indicated embarrassment, distaste, contempt or resignation.

"There are privileges which, having been paid for, must be granted," she replied.

"There are none which need be granted to me," he told her. "I thought you understood."

Now she turned her head, and he felt an inward shrinking from the blazing contempt in her eyes. She had been apathetic on the ride to the city hall, and apathetic during the brief marriage ceremony. But now all that was gone.

She had shown him brief glimpses of many sides of her character during the week that he had known her. There had been the stark courage of their first meeting, the fiery pride of her, and blistering self-contempt at her own physical weakness. There had been the unexpected wit when, after Dr. Blanchard's first ministrations, she had received him in his own bedroom, clothed in his pajamas. There had been the swift sympathy for his unhappiness, and then there had been her aversion when he had suggested marriage.

During the week that had intervened between his proposal and this mockery of a ceremony which they had just gone through, it had seemed to him that every time they met she deliberately erected between them a wall, an impalpable yet impassable wall. It was as though she wished to afford him no further revelations of herself, as though a lamp were extinguished upon his approach.

Not, he told himself, that he expected her to show a gayety that must be feigned. But she needn't show so plainly the contempt she felt. After all, she didn't have to marry him. On the day after she had said that she would do so, he had clumsily approached the matter of her destitute condition. He had intimated that he would consider it a privilege to advance her any sum she might require, for any purpose she might wish.

It had been a cruelly unfair thing to take advantage of her condition and thus gain her acceptance to a marriage that was, on the very face of things, utterly preposterous.

But she had coolly told him that unless he repented of his bargain she was prepared to go through with her part of it. And he, smarting under the continued publicity given the breaking of the engagement with Helen, dogged by reporters and hounded by cameramen, conscious of the hidden smiles of his acquaintances, obsessed with the idea of hurting Helen, had told her that he was eager to go through with it.

Dr. Blanchard

Dr. Blanchard had talked with him almost hotly.

"Damn it all, Larry," he said, "there are certain decencies."

"Marriage," Tracy had mockingly answered, "is the essence of decency."

"But it's so unfair," Blanchard had cried.

"I'd like to know what's unfair about it," Tracy had retorted. "God knows I don't want to talk about it—but do you think I like the whole world to know that I've been jilted? If she'd waited—"

"What good would that have done?" inquired the doctor.

"I don't know and don't care. But Helen deserves nothing from me. If I can show her friends—and the whole crowd are never concerned with anything but appearances—if I can show them that being jilted had no really crushing effect upon me—if I can make Helen ridiculous—what do I care whether I'm fair to her or not?"

"You talk," Blanchard had told him, "like a spoiled brat. You place a cheap vanity above anything else. My God, don't you suppose men have been jilted before? And what do you care about what people think? Don't you know that in a month hardly any one will even remember that you were acquainted with Helen Wilson?"

"I'll remember it," said Tracy grimly, "and she'll remember it."

"And you'll sacrifice a lifetime that might have been filled with happiness to a revengeful whim, a whim that won't even have the effect you hope for? Do you think Helen Wilson, engaged to Burton, will care what you do? She'll merely laugh, will hug to herself the thought that you married another girl out of pique."

"Will she? I wonder," said Tracy. "And as for happiness—I never expect it. I don't even want it."

"And I don't care whether you get it or not," exclaimed his friend. "You're not merely the temper of a spoiled child, but its logic. Who's asking you to be fair to Helen? And why on earth did you think I meant you when I spoke of a life that might be filled with happiness?"

Tracy, attempting mockery, looked searchingly about the library where they sat.

"I don't see any one else here whom you could mean," he said.

Blanchard jerked a thumb upward.

"The sun rises and sets on yourself, doesn't it? I'm thinking of the damned unfairness to that poor kid upstairs. I'm thinking of her unhappiness, not yours, my lad."

Tracy elevated quizzical eyebrows.

"She's apparently of age. You say that she's recovering with amazing speed. You maintain that her mind is OK, that she's throwing off the effects of shock. She's old enough to know what she wants, isn't she?"

"She can know what she wants and not be able to get it," retorted Blanchard.

"I'm not forcing her to marry me. How could I? I've offered her money—"

"Which she has too much pride to accept," interrupted Blanchard.

"Before she fainted, before I brought her here, she took money," said Tracy.

"She was starving then. Now—rested—"

"Don't talk rot," jeered Tracy. "She won't take money from me, but she'll marry me. Well, the ethics of the two points of view are beyond me."

"Because," said Blanchard savagely, "you've never starved, never been up against it. Who can blame her, a waif, a stray, for jumping at a chance such as you offer her? But because a young girl is willing to make a mistake doesn't mean that it's right for you to let her make it."

"You seem," said Tracy, "singularly concerned over her."

"Because she's a corker," cried Blanchard. "A straight, brave, decent—oh, hell!" He studied Tracy's countenance. "If—if you were in love with her—" He paused expectantly.

"That," said Tracy, "is rather absurd, isn't it?"

Blanchard pursed his lips. "She's a beauty," he declared. "You know I warned you that she might be a remedy for what ills Helen had inflicted upon you."

"That was when you visualized her as my mistress, wasn't it?" asked Tracy. "Now it's too bad to make her my wife. Then it was all right to make her my mistress."

"Because," said Blanchard, "I was then as much of a cad as you are now."

"The only place we'll get, if this continues, is to the end of a friendship," suggested Tracy.

Blanchard had promptly risen to his feet.

"Sorry, old man. Whatever you do—I may advance objections before it's done, but after the accomplished fact—it's all right with me. Sorry."

"'Sall right," muttered Tracy.

And that had been that.

A Bargain

With no other friend had he discussed the planned marriage. Indeed, he had hardly left the house during the past week. He had left it to his chief clerk to postpone all legal engagements, and had refused even to answer the telephone.

What could any one wish to talk to him about? He didn't want any friend to mention Helen, and if the friend didn't mention his ex-fiancee he would know that it was through unwillingness to touch a sore spot.

Of course, the servants knew that the invalid in his bedroom was soon to become the mistress of the house. Tracy told Hogan, told him in a colorless voice that forbade any comment even from this devoted servitor. But Hogan had not offered the mockery of congratulation. As for Nurse Evans, her manner took on a strange coldness, but what did Tracy care?

And now, on this first day when Dr. Blanchard had given his consent for the patient to leave the house, they had driven down town together and been married. "Until death do us part. . . . Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder. . . . For better and for worse. . . ."

The ceremony itself, pronounced over them by a layman to whom the event was a commonplace raised from inconsiderableness only by the fact that grooms were sometimes extraordinarily generous, and witnessed by clerks whose only interest was a furtive salaciousness, had made no impression upon Tracy.

But now, as it receded behind him, its implications took hold, and all the conventionality that was his background rebelled against the outrageous thing he had done, the wicked thing that he had persuaded this young girl to do. Or perhaps, instead of these implications, this thrusting into the foreground of a hazy background, it was the expression on the girl's face that made him realize what he—she, too—had done.

"How can one be sure of understanding anything about a man like you?" she demanded.

His own contempt for himself was about all that he could bear. That she, who was equally guilty of the travesty on what should be the most sacred occurrence of life, should add to his burden by the visitation of her own contempt upon him, was not to be borne.

He met her anger with an equal rage.

"You value yourself too highly," he said. "I told you that the first time we met. I tell you so again now. You have nothing—that I want," he added deliberately.

"And I," she told him, "would never wish to give anything."

"You may even," he went on, "rest assured that after your usefulness to me has ceased, I shall in no way interfere with any plans you may care to make for the future."

"My usefulness," she sneered—the grimace that usually brings uglinges to the loveliest face somehow but rendered her more attractive "will cease, I suppose, as soon as Miss Wilson is aware that you were able to forget your grief in marriage?"

"Not quite," he said. "I do not wish her to think that I merely—was married. I wish our marriage, apparently, to be a happy one."

"You think we can successfully impose such a pretense on any one?" she asked.

"Unless you try," he said, "I shall feel that what you said—about being willing to repay me, was a cheap promise, lightly made, with no honest intent behind it."

He felt, angrily, that he sounded bookish, unreal. But the situation in which they found themselves was so outside his experience that he knew no way to meet it.

"I shall keep my word," she said.

How to Use Coconuts

People who live in tropical regions call the coconut the most valuable tree in the world, since it furnishes them with food and drink, the lumber for their huts, the thatching for their roofs, and the sap is used for making wine or vinegar. The tender shoots may be cooked as asparagus or cabbage, and the young buds used for salads.

From the dried coconut or copra is pressed an oil or edible fat, which can be used as substitute for butter, or be made into soap, face cream and other products. In England the oil is used, too, in the preparation of a type of powdered milk.

In the Philippines a brown sugar is distilled from the sap of the unopened flower of the palm. The coconut is also used for sugar in Java. The South Sea maidens use the oil as a beauty oil and dress their hair and bodies with it. In fact, maidens throughout the world use coconut oil as a beauty preparation, since it is the basis of many cold creams.

The cocoanut, protected by its floating sheath, has been carried by wind and wave to every tropical land and island where it will grow. Since the shell is impervious to salt water the growing qualities of the seed were not destroyed. Although the tree grows best near the seashore, it requires fresh water.

In America the dried grated coconut is frequently used as a garnish for salads, in making macaroons, and in candy and cake making. Prohibition has indirectly stimulated the coconut industry, since it has brought about an increased consumption of candy, and tons of coconuts are used in candy manufacturing. The oil pressed out of the dried copra can be separated into an oil and a solid fat. The solid part is known as cocostearing, being available for candies. The oil is extensively used in face creams, lotions, shaving creams, shampoos, toilet soap, etc.

One of the most important uses of the coconut oil is in the making of butter substitutes or margarines.

The coconut when new contains a refreshing milky liquid which may be used fresh or fermented. In the tropics it is used to make a sweet ice cream. When the coconut is green, the fleshy part has not become hard and may be eaten with a teaspoon. It makes a very satisfactory meal. In most of the coconuts obtainable in America, the flesh has become hardened and is very tough to chew, but is good for strengthening the gums and increasing the circulation about the teeth.

The flesh contains 3½ per cent water, 6 per cent protein, 57½ per cent fats, 31½ per cent carbohydrates, and 1½ per cent of mineral matter. The mineral matter contains a large amount of chlorine. When used in the raw, starchy form, coconut is not as easily digested as in the soft condition, but it may be made more easily assimilated when boiled or baked. Cocoanut must be cooked a long time to thoroughly soften the tough fibres, when it may be used as the starchy food in place of potatoes, macaroni, rice or other starchy food, but should not be used in addition to them.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Effect of Fever

Question:—H. C. M. asks: "Will you kindly recommend a remedy for fallen hair resulting from a recent scarlet fever case? Will I gain back the natural thickness of my hair?"

Answer:—The hair will always come out easily after a fever, but if you build up your general health and strength and eat the proper alkaline foods you will soon grow back another good crop of hair.

Cancers and Cans

Question:—M. W. writes: "The doctors say they don't know where all these cancers come from. Don't you think they come from the tin-canned foods? Why can't everything be canned in glass? I should think the pure food law would see to that."

Answer—I really do not believe the cause of cancer will ever be found from cans, but your suggestion about canning things in glass is a good one, although the methods used by the modern cannery make it almost as safe to use the tin-canned foods as those put up in glass. The canners themselves have improved their methods a great deal in the past few years so that there is now little poisoning from canned foods.

Good Circulation

Question: J. W. B. writes—"Every bit of blood I have seems to run to my hands and feet as though they were bursting. My hands are always red unless holding them in an upright position. I am in the early forties, but this has always been so. Am well and work hard."

Answer—It is likely that you have a very good circulation of blood and that your blood is rich in hemoglobin and red cells. The average person complains of a poor circulation and, in fact, most people would give a good deal to have what you complain of.

Hi-Y Boys Given Feast at Graham

Sponsors who attended were A. A. Morrison, Dr. W. O. Padgett, Stanley H. Peavey, D. H. Bolin and I. T. Gilmer, superintendent of schools, and honorary sponsor of both clubs. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss ways and means of going to the Amarillo Older Boys conference. It is expected that about 50 boys from Graham will attend. The program included: invocation, I. T. Gilmer; special music, Goldie Easterling and brother; discussion of Older Boys conference, Houston Crump, secretary of boys work; presentation of prizes to Hi-Y members who participated in anti-cheating speaking contest, S. H. Peavey; special speaker, D. H. Bolin; word from sponsors and visitors, A. A. Morrison, Dr. Padgett, Mr. Gilmer and Mr. Hemphill responded.

The meeting was dismissed by Robert Price. The chamber of commerce will invite the Older Boys conference of Northwest Texas to hold its 1930 convention in Graham. A representative from the Graham Chamber of Commerce and other clubs of Graham will attend the meeting in Amarillo. Houston Crump, head of the boys work in Graham stated that if the convention came to Graham, the city could probably expect from 350 to 500 visitors.

THREE GREAT ELEVENS FINISH SEASON WITHOUT DEFEAT

The Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

This Year—and Next

A year ago, at the finish of her season, Georgia Tech had bounded through unbeaten. Later on Georgia Tech was to add a victory, California.

At the same date Notre Dame had lost four games. One of these had been dropped to Georgia Tech. Wisconsin, Southern California and Carnegie Tech had rubbed it in.

Notre Dame this season had come up to the Army game unbeaten, with eight straight victories—and four of these had been lifted from the systems of Georgia Tech, Wisconsin, Southern California and Carnegie Tech.

In the meanwhile Georgia Tech had lost to North Carolina, Tulane, Notre Dame, Vanderbilt and Alabama. Her only major victory was over Florida.

This brief resume of two football teams shows how the tide can swing from one season to another. For that matter, it can swing far enough from one Saturday to the next. Dartmouth beat Harvard, 34 to 7; Yale beat Dartmouth, 16 to 12; Harvard beat Yale, 10 to 7. About the same thing happened where Stanford, Southern California and California were involved.

What about the strong and weak teams this fall when figured a year away? The fall of 1930 is a long hike into the mists. But among those teams that should return enough material for a good year are Notre Dame, Harvard, Army, Dartmouth, Purdue, Pennsylvania and the three coast teams that are seldom bothered with any great lack of man power.

Pittsburgh loses a flock of veteran stars, but there are other good ones waiting for their chance to break in. The Army is just as glad that several members of the 1929 squad will not be hanging around in 1930.

Back to the Heavyweight

With the football mix-up about over, not quite but nearly, the hot pursuit of a heavyweight champion will now take place. The first move will come in the meeting of Von Porat and Phil Scott. What this move will lead to depends upon the entertainment Von Porat and Scott happen to hand out. Von Porat is one of the best punchers in the trade, and there is a good chance that he will punch Scott right out of the pleasant scenery that has been stretching before him.

Scott's greater cleverness may get him by without having any splinters hammered from his block, but this is doubtful. Von Porat knows he will have nothing much to fear from the Briton's leather fusillade, so far as any heavy punishment is concerned. He should catch him inside of 10 rounds, and when Von Porat catches an opponent the following moments are rarely pleasant.

The Next Opponent

Whether the winner will be matched against Jack Sharkey or will be given another January test is still undecided.

The problem now is to find good heavyweights, with Max Schmeling still peering intently across the ocean, idle where he should have been fighting and improving. He has been the worst handled heavyweight in the history of the ring. He had a great chance a year ago. What he has left is a guess. Schmeling will have to be considered before any final award is made, unless he stays away so long that he will be forgotten.

Schmeling stepped along too fast for his head. He became dizzy looking down from what seemed to be great heights. They are not so great today. They are getting lower and lower as the months slip by, with the German fighter still idle. He may be looking up from the floor if he stays out of action much longer.

WILSON LEADS

Baylor Quarterback Is Best Scorer in Conference

DALLAS, Dec. 1. (AP)—By plunging across for two touchdowns in his team's final battle with Rice yesterday at Houston, Jake Wilson, Baylor university quarterback, won individual scoring honors in the Southwest conference for the season with a total of 84 points. The Bear flash scored 14 touchdowns in 11 games and kicked one extra point.

Cy Leland, brilliant Texas Christian halfback, lost his chance for top honors when he was smothered by Southern Methodist yesterday, but managed to finish second with 78 points. Dandy Dick Miller, Arkansas halfback, came in third with 72 points by scoring a touchdown against the Oklahoma Aggies Thanksgiving day.

There was no real rival to Harlos Green, T. C. U. sophomore back, in the art of adding extra points. He booted 15 in 10 games, including the one which enabled the Frogs to tie S. M. U. and win the conference title.

Not a field goal was registered the entire season, although there were numerous attempts. There has been only one made in the conference in the last two seasons.

A total of 72 players broke into the scoring records in one way or another. Following are those who made at least 18 points.

PITT, PURDUE, IRISH BEST

Three-Cornered Bid for Title

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Football's frozen finish finds the gridiron forces today ready for winter quarters and one of the biggest debates yet waged for championship honors.

All factors considered, Notre Dame, Purdue and Pittsburgh probably can claim the biggest share of the gridiron laurels for a season of spectacular individual performance and record shattering crowds in nearly every sector of the battle front. These three great arrays finished tough schedules without defeat or a tie. Each displayed a powerful line and great backfield.

Purdue, winner of the Big Ten title for the first time, was hard pressed only by Iowa and Michigan, in sweeping through the eight games triumphantly.

Pitt's Close Call

Pittsburgh's closest call was against Nebraska, but the Panthers displayed perhaps the greatest all-around scoring punch of any team in the country against first class opposition.

Notre Dame dashed through a more exacting schedule than either Purdue or Pittsburgh, running up against a tough foe every week, but the fighting Irish also came closest of the three to defeat. They beat Southern California by a single point and were hard pressed in their final game to conquer the Army with Jack Elders 100-yard dash to a touchdown accounting for the only score of a spectacularly hard-fought game.

Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Purdue not only figure in a three-cornered argument which has no definite basis for settlement, but they have to contend with the claims of at least four other outfits.

Tulane in the South and Utah in the Rocky mountain area also topped off a fine season without the trace of defeat or tie. Texas Christian in the Southwest and St Mary's on the Pacific coast had only a single tie apiece to mar otherwise brilliant campaigns. The same thing was true of Tennessee.

Tulane, T. C. U., Utah

No matter where they may be rated nationally, and all have strong claims for considerations, Tulane, Texas Christian, Utah and St. Mary's dominated the performances of their respective sections. St. Mary's turned in a better record than any one of the famous California "Big Three" to make it a great year for the boys tutored by "Slip" Madigan, old Notre Dame star.

Last season the New Year's day game at Pasadena helped end a good share of the debate in favor of Georgia Tech, victor on that memorable occasion over California, but there appears no prospect of any post-season settlement this winter, even with a number of interesting games yet to be played in the West and South.

Army Drawing Card

Besides furnishing the climax to a spectacular season, Army and Notre Dame shared honors as the greatest drawing cards. The Irish beat Southern California before the biggest gathering of American football history, 123,000 at Soldiers field, Chicago, and played before more than 500,000 spectators in nine games. The Cadets filled the stadium at Cambridge, New Haven, Champaign and New York, with another capacity crowd awaiting them in the Christmas week game at Palo Alto against Stanford.

Influence of Report

Whatever the influence of the famous Carnegie report on subsidizing and recruiting of college football stars, it obviously had no effect upon the drawing power of the gridiron game. Nor did the much discussed new fumble rule extract the long-run thrills from a sport that in the East alone witnessed such climax runs as Dick Gentle's 102-yard gallop against Cornell and Jack Elder's 100-yard dash through the Army. Booth, Cagle, Marsters, Hinkle, Follet, Uansa, Fesler, Wolgast, Carideo, McEver, Banker, Leland and Lom were among the stars who registered long dashes for touchdowns in a season notable for its swift turns and "breaks."

Tie games broke up two of the most successful marches of the season. Texas Christian ran wild through the Southwest until held to a 7-7 deadlock yesterday by Southern Methodist, but the Horned Frogs won the conference title any way because S. M. U. previously had been tied by Texas. Tennessee ran neck and neck with Tulane all season for the Southern conference lead until stopped by Kentucky Thanksgiving day in a 6-6 tie.

Utah and Nebraska alone were able to retain major conference titles in a campaign otherwise featured by upsets. The Utes were not in much danger in the Rocky mountain sector as they won the title for the third time in four years. Nebraska led the Big Six again in spite of ties with Missouri and Oklahoma.

Wellington Football Men Get Letters and Banquet

WELLINGTON, Texas, Dec. 1.—Football players who have won letters this year, as has been announced by Coach Jimmie Smith, are: Capt. Pete Boverie, Adrian Rowland, Lonnie Watkins, Harold Watkins, Garland Hampton, Ross Gladney, Robert Willoughby, John Stout, Frank Campbell, John Williams, Woodrow Stafford, Clinton King, Ervin Gilbreath, Farris Breedlove, Ellis Johnson, C. C. Small Jr., and Edmund Cocke, business manager.

WELLINGTON, Texas, Dec. 1.—Continuing a precedent established by them a year ago, Doctors E. W. Jones and E. W. Moss entertained members of the Skyrocket football squad and several other guests with a banquet at the Hotel Wellington dining room. A complete turkey dinner was served under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Hearn, managers of the hotel.

The long banquet table was appropriately decorated in black and gold, chosen colors of Wellington high school. At each end of the table, miniature football goals had been erected, from which footballs were suspended.

All boys who have played sufficient quarters during the past season to win a "letter" were in attendance, as well as several other members of the Skyrocket squad.

County Attorney Luther Gribble acted in the capacity of toastmaster at the banquet, calling upon a number of those present for talks after the dinner had been served. Addresses were made by G. L. Farrar, S. R. Pinkston, E. L. Winn, R. F. Curry, Coach Jimmie Smith, Lee O'Neil, C. R. Joyner, J. D. Wilson, Dr. E. W. Jones, Dr. E. W. Moss, Adrian Rowland and Buster Worley.

IF THE WAGE EARNER IN THE CITY could devise some way whereby he could save all his hard-earned wages and not have to pay it out in rent and grocery bills, he could then accumulate enough capital to eventually become independent. Why not bring your family into a beautiful garden home where the table could be furnished direct from the garden? Then by putting in a few hundred choice high-record hens the little farm should become self-supporting, furnishing employment for the entire family while the head of the household still continued his job in the city's commuting to his farm.

Visit the Model Farm in Weeks Community of Little Farms located near Westmoreland swimming pool and see what irrigating water and abundance of fertilizer will do when scientifically applied. It will be a revelation to you. If you cannot come write for free literature.

T. C. U. Horned Frogs Win Conference Title After Seven Years of Striving

DALLAS, Dec. 1. (AP)—After seven years af striving, Texas Christian university Horned Frogs today held undisputed claim to a Southwest conference football championship. By holding Southern Methodist to a 7 to 7 deadlock on a windswept field yesterday at Fort Worth, the Purple machine attained the goal for which seven teams had waged a spectacular fight.

The deadlock with the Mustangs enabled the Christians to finish their conference season with four victories and a tie. It spoiled an otherwise perfect record for the powerful eleven coached by Francis Schmidt, but it brought joy to the school just the same.

Southern Methodist had to be content with second honors. Three victories and two ties for its conference program. The Mustangs likewise escaped defeat through a grueling campaign, but were tied by four teams, Nebraska, Texas, T. C. U. and Howard Payne college.

Vast Crowd at Game

The greatest crowd ever to witness an athletic event in Fort Worth, 25,000 packed every available foot of Clark field for the final spectacular skirmish. Several thousand stood on the sidelines, banked five and six deep. They suffered from a biting wind.

In contrast to the glamour surrounding the title bout was another closing struggle at Houston. Baylor climbed into a tie with Texas for fourth place in the final standing by humbling the Rice Owls, 19 to 0. It climaxed a disastrous season for the Owls, who scored only one touchdown in five conference melees, Jake Wilson, Bear quarterback, took advantage of the opportunity to plant two touchdowns and capture conference scoring honors.

Spectacular Climax

It would be difficult to picture a more spectacular climax to a championship campaign than that between the Frogs and Mustangs. Late in the fourth period, Harlos Green, Texas Christian sopohomore fullback, braced himself against stinging blasts and kicked the extra point that tied the score. The conference title rode on his toe.

Howard Grubbs, stellar Frog field general, rose to the heights in propelling his team down the field to a touchdown in that mad last quarter, after it appeared the title had slipped from the grasp of the Schmidtmen. His rifle passes to Leland and Roberson drove deep into Mustang territory and it was he who dived off tackle for the vital score after the powerful Methodist line had repulsed six consecutive plunges from the one-yard line.

Sudden Thrust

Southern Methodist struck with characteristic suddenness to score its touchdown in the third period. There was no hint of a break in the deadlocked struggle when Weldon "Speedy" Mason took a Frog punt and returned to his 43-yard line. Then on the next play, it happened. Mason, running far to the left side of the field, speared a pass from Bob Gilbert on his fingers and, twisted and dogded his way through a bevy of tacklers for a touchdown. Neely was called out of the line to add the point.

The Mustangs were successful in their resolve to stop Cy Leland, but they neglected the important matter of balking Grubbs. He was the game's outstanding individual star. Leland got away only once, a 24-yard return of a punt. He was watched like a hawk and never had a chance to unreel one of his touchdown gallops. He helped pave the way for the tying touchdown, however, when he grabbed a pass and dodged to the Mustangs' 11-yard line.

Texas Christian's march to the title is a tribute to Francis Schmidt's coaching genius. The former Arkansas university mentor more famed for his ability to produce championship basket ball teams, inherited almost the same eleven that could not finish in the first three last year and drove it to the throne.

Negro Wins Damage Suit Against Mayor

Special to The Record News

QUANAH, Texas, Dec. 1.—In a damage suit growing out of the collision of two automobiles on highway No. 5 west of Quanah last June, Willie Wyatt, a negro, was given judgment for $300 against D. C. Wallace, mayor of Gunter, Grayson county, Texas, by a jury in county court here this week. An appeal was taken.

Suit was based upon the alleged damage to the negro's car.

STRIBLING DID NOT MEAN IT

Giant Italian Fakes His Pain

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Although adjudged winner, Primo Carnera, the 285-pound Italian pugilist, lost a great deal of prestige after his contest with Young Stribling in the Albert hall.

The blow which disqualified the Georgian boxer was not a deliberate one. True it was low, it landed in the groin. The mighty Italian made a great play; he rolled and groaned on the floor and at the same time cast appealing glances and gestures, as to where he had been hit, to the referee. But the latter was never in doubt and ordered Stribling to his corner without the slightest hesitation.

After leaving the ring there was not the slightest sign of physical hurt visible on Carnera's face. The writer saw Stribling in the ring afterwards. He said:

Bout on Foul

"The referee gave the bout to Carnera on a foul. I didn't complain. But it was not a deliberate foul. I thought I was winning the fight easily. He socked me very hard in the third round, but I had shaken off the effects. That was the only time he hit me.

"I was confident I was winning the fight, and anybody confident of winning never deliberately throws away a fight by striking a foul blow.

"What happened was this: We were in a clinch, remember he is 10 inches taller than I am; I had the inside position and was aiming at his stomach. The first one I struck was a left, which he parried with his glove and it glanced low. Carnera shouted an appeal. The next one I aimed was higher. Carnera flopped and I thought then that I had won, but the referee ordered me to my corner and I was surprised to discover I had lost."

Was Blow Paralyzing?

Through an interpreter Carnera told the Universal Service correspondent that the second blow paralyzed him.

"I felt as fit as ever," he said, "although Stribling was giving me plenty to think about and plenty that hurt. I can't remember anything about the blow except that it paralyzed me. I would much rather have won in a clean-cut way."

Jeff Dickson, the promoter, said: "I am sure the blow was unintentional. The first three rounds of the fight were the most sensational I have ever seen. It showed me one thing, that Carnera can take punishment and fight back. I am certain that with luck he will be the next world's heavyweight champion."

Ted Broadribb, the referee and the only British boxer ever to gain a decision over Carpentier, was unhesitating in declaring that Carnera had been struck two foul blows.

"I would have disqualified Stribling on the first," he said, "but the second came so quickly and as the Italian went down I had no option but to give him the decision."

Harry Preston, a well known boxing expert, who was acting as host to the Prince of Wales, said that the foul blow ended what he regarded as one of the most exciting heavyweight contests he had ever seen.

"It's a great pity," he said, "for the prince was very interested, especially in the third round, but the disqualification was a very disappointing anti-climax. Stribling's pluck and skill against such odds were astounding, and I can't think, realizing how much the fight was going in his favor, that he would deliberately foul his opponent.

Sport Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

According to the papers, every football game that you can read about, if it is played on Thanksgiving day or happens to be the closing game of the season, is a gridiron "classic." Thus at this particular time of the season the country has been filled to the brim with gridiron "classics," running into, say, hundreds and even up to thousands, maybe,—counting high school "classics" and all. But, platitudinously, there are classics and classics—as you all have probably heard it said before.

Still and all and albeit, the game Saturday between the S. M. U. Mustangs and the T. C. U. Horned Frogs was one of the classics of the country and "the" classic of the Southwest. In the vernacular of the sporting fraternity the game between the Frogs and the Mustangs was "one of those things." For it brought together two of the best teams in this country in a game that decided the football championship of the Southwest. We can think of but one other game over the week-end that could rank the T. C. U.-S. M. U. tilt in the general public concern. And that was the Army-Notre Dame tilt at the Polo Grounds before the Yankee stadium.

The game Saturday at Clark field, Fort Worth, gave the Frogs the title but the 7 to 7 score would seem to indicate that the Mustangs are co-holders also of the title. It is hardly the mark of a real champion to win his spurs by a draw verdict or by a tie game. The spirit and sinew of a real champion is not satisfied merely with a draw bout but on the contrary wills to destroy, annihilate, and rise triumphant over the prostrate form of the adversary. Jack Dempsey was acclaimed a champion of the first order because he annihilated big Jess Willard; the Athletics were acclaimed real champions because they slaughtered the Chicago Cubs; the 1927 Spudders were great because they obliterated the New Orleans Pelicans. And it is the mark of all great champions that they ruthlessly crush all opposition with a kind of ironic beastliness.

That the Frogs are of real championship caliber is undeniable, they deserved better than the 7-7 tie game with the Mustangs. We believe that they were at least a touchdown or two better than the Mustangs. But bad strategy and poor handling of the substitutes robbed them of one or two markers. A more judicious jockeying of the Frog backfield stars would, we believe, have meant the difference in a tie game and a touchdown or two victory over the Ponies.

All of which refers, of course, to the curiosity as to why Coach Francis Schmidt, deliberately or unconsciously, failed to work his strongest combination of human battering rams—Griffith and Green—at opportune times against the Mustangs. These two backs were the best line plungers that the Frogs had. On two different occasions, had these two backs been in the game at the same time together, we believe that the Christians would have scored.

In the second quarter, after the Frogs had failed to make any appreciable headway with their vaunted passing and Leland's broken-field work, they opened up in earnest on the Mustang forward wall and found it pregnable. Taking the ball on their own 20-yard line and with Green carrying the ball most of the time the Frogs started pounding the line for 3-5-7-10-12, yards interspersed with an occasional pass, to chalk up three straight first downs and roll back the Mustang line to their own 33-yard line. At this critical moment with a T. C. U. touchdown almost imminent and with the Mustang's line crumbling Coach Schmidt halted the game to send in Griffiths for Green. Griffiths took the ball one time for a gain, and then after they had time to talk, the Frogs started a passing attack which was promptly broken up by Powell's intercepting of a pass on his own 18-yard line.

What is incomprehensible about Schmidt's tactics was why he yanked Green instead of, say, Woodwine, to send in Griffiths. Woodwine was doing little if any good in there. Of course, when the drive started and the Mustang line began to give way before the awful plunges of Green, it was high time to send Griffiths into the game—but to help Green out and on and not to relieve him. It is a maxim of war and football to strike fast and where the enemy seems weakest. With Green and Griffiths working together on the line and with Leland back as a constant open field or pass-receiving threat, we can't see what would have kept the Frogs from scoring on that mighty drive through the enemy line.

While Griffiths was in the game he performed much after the manner of Green, chalking up one, two, three first downs. In the third quarter Coach Schmidt reversed his fullbacks, but not his strategy, and sent in Green for Griffiths. Most incredible, we say. A powerful combination was not formed and a most potent pair not made the most of.

Thus it is maintained that tactical and strategical blunders on the part of the T. C. U. coach probably cost the Frogs a deserving victory over the S. M. U. Mustangs. Demonstratably, the Frogs have a championship outfit. Potentially they are the more powerful team by a touchdown or touchdowns but they simply failed to play their backs as well as they might have been played and thus lost for themselves the solace and satisfaction of having defeated the Mustangs in the year of 1929.

MYTHICAL ALL-S. W. ELEVEN

Some of Best Players in History

DALLAS, Dec. 1. (UP)—A mythical all-Southwestern eleven which could unquestionably hold its own with the best from any loop has been selected by the United Press from a symposium of choices made by coaches, sports editors and correspondents.

It includes some of the greatest forwards and versatile backfield men ever developed since the conference achieved national recognition, but doesn't include a host of others who are almost as good.

Southwestern teams gave a good account of themselves in this season's intersectional tilts, and had material equal to the best. It is one of those years, too, when there is a marked absence of last year men with much experience.

The United Press selection follows:

Hammon, S. M. U., left tackle.
Sanders, S. M. U., left guard.
Atkins, T. C. U., center.
Brumbelow, T. C. U., right guard.
Brown, Texas, right tackle.
Long, S. M. U., right end.
Grubbs, T. C. U., quarterback.
Leland, T. C. U., left half.
Wilson, Baylor, right half.
Sheeley, Texas, fullback.

"The Purity of Certified Milk applied to CREMO"

"Cremo cigars are safe for your mouth . . . they are not tipped in spit," says

Alfred W. McCann

D. Litt., A.B., LL.D.,
Famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"There is double enjoyment in every cigar that you know is absolutely clean and safe. And Cremo is that kind of cigar . . . whose purity I can certify.

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. And every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along every step of the way.

"Cremo cigars are folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions without the menace of spit . . . in factories that are models of cleanliness . . . air-flooded, sunbathed, spotlessly clean!

"This Cremo purity is sealed . . . in separate sanitary foil wrappers. Thus the method of manufacture insures a cigar that aims to give you the same standard of purity as found in certified milk."

Here's a suggestion deliberately made with confidence, which you smokers of imported cigars will appreciate: Try a Certified Cremo. You will recognize the superiority of Certified Cremo which starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported wrapper! For 5 cents you get the delight of a high priced cigar, for Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, ten or leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

How often have you been disgusted with the filthy, germ-breeding places where some cigars are made . . . dark, stuffy factories . . . warm, dingy shops and windows . . . where cigars are rolled by careless, dirty lips and fingers and spit on the ends! What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

Comanche Beats Cotton Record

Special to The Record News

LAWTON, Okla., Dec. 1.—Cotton ginned in Comanche county up to Nov. 14, surpassed the entire yield for 1928, according to figures released today by B. B. Brereton, government cotton statistician.

Twenty-one thousand six hundred and sixty-one bales had been ginned up to Nov. 14 while department of agricultural figures show that up to the same date last year only 14,529 bales had been ginned, and that the total for the entire year was only 20,960.

Cotton men here believe the total crop in Comanche county this year will closely approach 24,000 bales.

Negro Land Owner May Become Rich

TYLER, Texas, Dec. 1. (UP)—Luke Erwin, 50, negro, figured that he didn't carry a rabbit's foot 50 years for nothing after all when he discovered that the 80-acre farm he bought with a Carnegie foundation reward for bravery might have oil under it.

Erwin already has leased the farm for $250, and officials of the firm which leased it told him he might become wealthy.

Luke is now out trying to sell an interest in his "loyalty," and isn't permitting himself to be too optimistic.

"Luck sho' have been with this nigger," he said when he got the money for the lease. "Been waiting 50 years for this here, but Old Luke ain't gonna count them chickens before they hatch."

About a year and a half ago Luke rescued another negro who was dying from damp gas in a well from which he couldn't escape, and he nearly lost his own life putting a rope around the other negro and getting him out.

Through efforts of Tyler business men, Luke's heroism was recognized and he was rewarded with a Carnegie medal and $1,000 in cash. He bought the farm with the $1,000. He is the father of 10 children.

MARTIN TALKS ON HOME LIFE

Memory of Christian Abode Is Best Legacy

The environment of a Christian home in which he also is required to do a proportionate part of the family's work is a child's best guarantee of a fruitful life, according to a discussion of "The Christian Home" by Judge P. A. Martin before the men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning.

"Idleness is the enemy of the home," said the speaker, "and the boy or girl raised on the farm, with work to do, really has a better chance in the world than the child raised in the city. There are thousands of innocent children handicapped in this country by broken homes—the parents separated for life because of sin."

The greatest legacy which can be left to a child, Judge Martin declared, is the memory of a faithful Christian home where peace prevails, and where God is worshipped in every-day life.

Christ's Childhood

His address in part follows:

"Our lesson today treats of the home life of the Savior; the short little record we have of his boyhood, his young manhood in the home of Joseph and his mother Mary. Out of it there comes the vision of a bright and happy childhood, the useful and obedient boy being subject to his parents; the annual visit to Jerusalem to the feast of the passover and the inquiring young mind temporarily forgetting his earthly parents while listening to the doctors in the temple, as they discussed the things of God; his ready understanding that this was indeed his father's business and his determination to be at such business.

"And, in the background, we see the carpenter's home at Nazareth. It was a typical Jewish home. A strictly religious home. On both sides of the house there was royal blood for both Joseph and Mary were descendants of David, the shepherd King of Israel. It is safe to say that the words of the Shema were written on the doorposts of Joseph's cottage. And it is equally safe to say that the family diligently kept all the law of the old testament. They feared God and kept His commandments. They all worked together for their common good. There was no discord in that home. They ate the bread of honest toil and not the bread of idleness.

"And it was in such a home as this that the great God of the universe chose that His only begotten Son should be reared and trained for the mighty work to be done for the salvation of the race. And it is from homes like this that the men and women come who are carrying forward the Master's work among the sons of men to this good day.

Children's Handicaps

"The most pitiful thing in this world is the child with a handicap for which it is not responsible in any degree. I saw a sweet-faced little girl at the courthouse one day last week limping around on one leg and a crutch and I thought it was such a handicap to the child. A few minutes afterward I saw in the courtroom a man, a woman and three children; the man and woman separated for life and the three little ones handicapped for life on account of the sins of their parents. Pitiful victims of a broken home. And I thought that perhaps the handicap of these little ones was greater, if possible, than that of the little lame girl. Thousands of innocent children are growing up in this country with the handicap of broken homes; separated families—all the result of sin.

"Idleness is the enemy of the home. The boy and girl on the farm, with work to do, really have a better chance in the world than the child raised in the city. In the homes of ancient Palestine, everybody had to work. Every young man had to learn a trade. Jesus learned that of a carpenter at the home.

Did His Share

"The record says he was subject to his parents. This meant that he did his part in the home for the benefit of the family until he was 30 years of age, when he began his ministry. In the modern home, the home of today, the parents are too often subject to the children instead. Many a fond parent realizes when it is too late that his children are beyond control.

"It is my judgment that the greatest blessing that can come to a child is to be reared in a Christian home. He may depart from its teaching and go far astray; he may violate the laws of God and man and sink to the lowest depths of shame; but out of the depths he will remember the fond faithful mother or the praying father, and, like the prodigal son, may arise and go back to home and to decency. The best legacy we can leave our children is not stocks and bonds and bank account; not lands, oil wells or property of any sort; it is the memory of a faithful Christian home—a home where peace, the peace of God, prevails—a home where God is worshipped in everyday life."

Holliday Woman And Two Children Hurt Here

Mrs. J. C. Kennedy and her two children, J. C. Jr., 7, and Eula Mae, 8, of Holliday suffered injuries of a minor nature when the car in which they were riding and another machine collided at the Ninth and Polk streets shortly before 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The boy J. C. Jr., was the most seriously hurt. The three were rushed to the Wichita General hospital. The boy's injuries consisted of severe cuts on the face, a badly torn lip and body bruises. Mrs. Kennedy and the small girl escaped with bruises and small cuts, attendants said.

Graham Operators Buy South Bend Production

Special to The Record News

GRAHAM, Texas, Dec. 1.—Pitzer & West, local operators, have announced the purchase of oil properties at South Bend involving approximately $30,000. They purchased the O. P. & G. lease of 165 acres near South Bend. This property was developed by the Oklahoma Petroleum and Gas company and is on the McCluskey & Keller lease. Ten wells are involved in the deal. The producing wells on the lease are averaging approximately 35 barrels of oil per day at this time. Oil is found in this area in a 2,000-foot sand. The local operators plan to clean up all of the wells at once in an effort to increase production. Other tests may be drilled later. Production in this area was discovered several years ago.

CITY B. Y. P. U. WINS HONORS

Wichita Delegates Score at Longview

Representatives of the B. Y. P. U. federation of this city gained honors in five competitive divisions at the state B. Y. P. U. convention which closed at Longview Friday night, according to information given by J. W. Mason, educational director of the First Baptist church.

The attendance banner among individual unions was awarded to the Alice Leath union of the First Baptist church, which showed an attendance of 57 per cent of its total membership at the convention.

The First Baptist church also won the attendance banner given to the church whose delegates represented the largest volume of traveled miles in getting to Longview. With 21 persons in the delegation, each traveling 574 miles on the round trip, the total mileage was 12,054.

The Alice Leath union also won the efficiency banner with a grade of 90 per cent in the work during the year, and the banner for highest efficiency by a city union as a whole was awarded to the Wichita Falls federation. Second place in the efficiency contest was given to the "Builders' union," an adult organization, of this city, with a grade of 74 per cent.

Billy Stone, 9, of the First Baptist church junior B. Y. P. U. was one of nine competitors in Bible memory work, all of whom scored 100 per cent. The silver cup offered in that event was engraved with names of all nine winners and presented to the state organization.

The delegation returned from Longview Saturday night.

Season's Third Good Bill Is Presented

By W. L. UNDERWOOD
The Record News Staff

Patrons of vaudeville entertainment as provided during the winter months in Wichita Falls by the Keith-Orpheum-Interstate circuit turned out in goodly numbers Sunday afternoon and night for the current bill. They went under the conviction that the performance would represent a healthy rebound from the solid jolt with which the past week's offering hit bottom. They were correct in that surmise, for Sunday's five-act show ranked with the other two good bills that have been here this fall.

Two sets of twins, one of men and one of the opposite persuasion, are a never failing source of amusement provided they really bear a close resemblance and provided secondly that they mix with the people. The Angus and Searle quartet is composed of twins of that description, for their likeness was real with the audience as well as fictional in their adopted skit, "Who's Who?" Enacting the roles of watchful wives to husbands of widely varying types, the two sisters are materially aided in precipitating much enjoyable confusion by having a hotel room as a setting for the action. Hotel rooms enjoy the confidence of no trusting wife. The four comedians manufacture an unusual amount of humor before the final shakedown occurs.

Frank Devoe, accompanied by James Steiger, composer of many popular songs, contributes a period which shows considerably more class than the bulk of such billings. Using a pleasing tenor voice, he has chosen songs which have more than a fair chance of appealing to a representative audience without surrender of pedigree.

Irene Vermillion's "Variety" presents an impressive group of dances, with a stringed ensemble supplying a colorful accompaniment. A second dancing number is added to the program by "Cherry Blossom and June," the time element in that picturesque combination being a wee miss of nine years. A wide variety of dancing themes and styles were interpreted with extreme grace and originality.

Setting the standard for the best of the remaining acts, the curtain-raising "Honey family," gymnasts, introduced a new catalog of feats which were enacted with commendable speed and smoothness.

Janet Gaynor, diminutive beauty, and Charles Farrell, both legitimate stage stars, bring the "hill-billie" folk of Tennessee's hills to the screen in "Lucky Star" to complete a uniformly good entertainment.

THE NEW WAXFREE HAVOLINE
The greatest ANNOUNCEMENT ever made about OIL

THIS is the announcement of the New Waxfree Havoline—made by the Govers Process.

The only paraffin base oil from which all wax has been removed.

For years, the oil industry has sought in vain to produce such an oil.

For months, the automobile industry has awaited this announcement.

Now the facts are published.

These facts are based upon definite figures—the specifications by which every lubricating engineer judges oil and these specifications are printed here.

What do these specifications prove?

They prove that the New Waxfree Havoline (Govers Process) has better heat resistance than any other oil of the same viscosity at 210° F. and above.

—has better cold weather lubricating value than any other oil—

—remains "oily" at every temperature—

—is the only oil that meets all specifications for ideal lubrication because—

It is not a blended oil.

Without a doubt, this is the greatest advance in oil refining since the automobile was invented.

The development of the New Waxfree Havoline has been long and dramatic. Scientists have been brought literally from the ends of the earth. A vast 400-acre refinery has been turned into a practical laboratory. Not with tiny retorts and test tubes—but with giant twin stills, built at a cost of $2,000,000, the new Govers Process was brought to perfection.

WAXFREE
Wax turns water-thin under heat. Wax turns candle-hard under cold. Now, for the first time, you can get a waxfree paraffin base oil for the best year-round lubrication

What does this announcement mean to you and to your motor car?

It means protection for your engine, at every season of the year. Protection from the searing heat of hard driving—a better defense against power loss—better hill climbing ability—more miles per gallon of gas.

In winter—remember this fact—it will mean easier starting. No engine stiffness at zero—because this oil flows at five below!

For the first time, you can put in your crankcase a pure lubricant—the New Waxfree Havoline is not a blended oil.

Get the New Waxfree Havoline (Govers Process)—wherever Havoline Oils are sold. It retails at 35c a quart—it is worth far more in engine protection.
