'Mad' Gaines dies

NEW YORK — William Maxwell Gaines, the eccentric publisher of Mad magazine, which lampooned life's sacred cows with help from a goofy, gap-toothed mascot named Alfred E. Neuman, died Wednesday at age 70. Gaines, who was often the target of his magazine's humor, died in his sleep at his Manhattan home, said Mad co-editors John Ficarri and Nick Meglin. The cause of death wasn't given.

More job losses

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department said Wednesday that 2.2 million payroll jobs were lost in the last recession, a figure that is one-third higher than the government's previous job-loss estimate. Red-faced officials said they are still at a loss to totally explain how such a huge error could have been made, but they insisted it was not politically motivated to make the recession appear less severe.

ABC series lawsuit

LOS ANGELES — The creator of television's "Growing Pains" is suing Warner Bros. for $50 million, saying he hasn't shared in the financial fruits of the ABC series. Producer Neal Marlens' lawsuit said he's entitled to 25 percent of net proceeds from the long-running series, but the studio's books show no profit from the 7-year-old show. "Although 'Growing Pains' has earned $204,419,250 in gross revenues to date, it has not earned a penny in net profits for Marlens," the Superior Court lawsuit said. "Indeed, according to (Warner's) voodoo accounting, 'Growing Pains' has a deficit of over $2.6 million."

Cable turns channel on stations

■ Dimension announces restructuring of lineup, prices effective June 28.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Phone lines at Dimension Cable have been buzzing this week as customers call to inquire about changes being made as the company announces a comprehensive restructuring of both its channel lineup and prices. Customers received letters from the cable company Tuesday regarding the changes and, as a result, company officials estimate getting some 2,000 calls from subscribers.

"What we've done is restructure the products we offer," said Missy Orr-Ryan, general manager of Dimension Cable. "We're trying to price services more individually to give customers more choice."

Cable service has been restructured into three levels: ■ Basic, consisting of channels 2-13, the local network affiliates (KMID, KOSA, KTPX), plus KMLM (Trinity Broadcasting) out of Odessa, Superstations WGN and WTBS, Univision, KOCV (PBS) and the AP Newtext. It will be $9.95 per month plus fees and taxes.

■ Dimension Service, offering 18 channels of special interest programming such as The Weather Channel and TNN; it will be priced at $7 plus franchise fee and tax. Combined with basic service, it will cost $16.95 plus fees and taxes.

Perot corrals 2 seasoned political vets

■ Hamilton Jordan to be in charge of overall strategy, Edward J. Rollins to handle day-to-day operations.

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — With opinion polls showing Ross Perot cutting deeply into both Republican and Democratic strength, his embryonic campaign Wednesday announced the hiring of two seasoned political strategists, one from each party: the engineer of Jimmy Carter's successful run for the White House in 1976, and Ronald Reagan's 1984 campaign manager.

At a news conference in Dallas, the Perot campaign said it was bringing on board Hamilton Jordan, the main strategist behind the only Democratic presidential victory since 1964, and Edward J. Rollins, who managed Reagan's landslide re-election.

The two men, whose appointment to the Perot campaign had been rumored for several days, will serve as co-managers: Jordan will be in charge of overall strategy for the campaign, while Rollins will handle the day-to-day operations. Rollins will start work on Monday, Jordan on June 15.

"They bring a great deal of experience and expertise," Thomas W. Luce III, the head of the Perot's petition campaign, said in announcing the hirings. "And more importantly, I think, they bring to this endeavor an understanding of what an incredible feat has been accomplished in the past 10 weeks."

Perot did not attend the news conference.

Midland oilman Pevehouse dies

B.J. "Joe" Pevehouse, 66, one of Midland's most prominent oilmen, died Wednesday evening in Houston.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Pevehouse was born Nov. 2, 1925, in Ranger. He married Beverly Allega on Oct. 21, 1945, in Carlsbad, N.M.

He was a 1948 graduate of Texas Tech University, where he had been honored as a "distinguished alumnus." In 1966, Pevehouse gave Texas

Rio's historic gathering opens to hope, warnings

RIO DE JANEIRO (NYT) — The historic Earth Summit opened with a warning that the human race is a "species out of control" and must forge a new global partnership to save both itself and the planet that sustains it.

With ringing pronouncements foreshadowing the difficult negotiations that still lie ahead, speakers from developed and developing countries offered near-apocalyptic visions of the threats to planet Earth, but they differed in key respects on their solutions.

Survey: Americans firm up on health rules, except for flab

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are buckling seat belts, quitting cigarettes and installing smoke detectors — all likely to help them live longer — but they're still risking disease and early death by eating too much of the wrong food, a new survey said Wednesday.

Cholesterol intake appears to have decreased over the nine years the Prevention Index survey has been conducted, but efforts to limit sugar and sodium, get enough vitamins and control weight have slipped.

The regression in eating patterns is both regrettable and dangerous, said Health and Human Services Secretary

Louis Sullivan.

"These are trends we cannot afford to ignore," Sullivan said. "Dietary factors are still associated with five of the 10 leading causes of death," including heart disease, some cancers and stroke.

Choosing a proper diet, after stopping tobacco use and alcohol abuse, "is the most important action Americans can take to improve their health and reduce their chances of contracting disease," he said.

The Prevention Index report on health practices gave Americans an overall score of 66.5 out of 100, highest in the nine years the annual survey has been compiled, according to Prevention magazine, which produced the report.

Sullivan said that although a 66.5 percent score might get a grade of D in school, "We prefer to look at it the other way, that the trends are in the right direction."

Individual adoption of healthy and safe behavior "would have a far greater impact on preventing disease, increasing life span and reducing the cost of health care than would reform of the nation's health care system," he said.

Despite the advances, the index showed that only 19 percent of adults were able to maintain the proper weight for their height, age and sex. That's 4 percentage points lower than the index found in 1983. The survey found that 63 percent were over their recommended weight range, compared with 58 percent nine years ago.

Much of the overall improvement was in safety precautions, with only a few significant improvements in things more often associated with health care.

■ Sixty-nine percent said they wear seat belts whenever they're in a car's front seat, up 50 percentage points from 1983.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Accu-Weather® forecast for noon today.

Expect some clouds, 90 today

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high near 90 with southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 90s. After an overnight low of 56, Wednesday's high reached 85 compared to the record for that date of 103 set in 1990. The record low for that date is 50 set in 1970.

STATE

Sunshine returned Wednesday to much of Texas as thunderstorms lingered in the northeast.

Temperatures climbed into the 70s and 80s across North and West Texas despite blustery north winds.

South Texas had highs in the 90s under cloudy skies with southerly winds.

The forecast for North Texas was for partly cloudy skies today through Friday with scattered thunderstorms tonight and Friday. Highs today and Friday were expected to be in the mid- to upper 80s. Lows tonight were to be in the mid-60s.

South Texas was expected to be partly cloudy through Friday. Isolated to widely scattered afternoon and evening showers or thunderstorms were expected this evening and Friday. Highs were to be from the upper 80s to lower 90s in the north with 80s along the coast and inland south. Lows tonight were to be from near 70 in the north to the 70s south.

Forecasters said West Texas would be partly cloudy through Friday with scattered thunderstorms east of the mountains today and tonight, continuing Friday in the Panhandle. Highs today and Friday were to be in the lower 80s in the Panhandle and mountains to near 100 in the Big Bend.

NATION

Rain fell over much of the southeastern quarter of the nation Wednesday, with locally heavy rain in parts of Florida.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended from eastern Oklahoma and northeastern Texas across the lower half of the Mississippi Valley, southern Illinois and Kentucky, and from the Tennessee Valley across the eastern half of the Gulf of Mexico states and into Florida and South Carolina.

Tornado watches were posted for early evening for parts of Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and northeastern Texas.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 2.94 inches at Pensacola, Fla.; 2.85 at Milton, Fla.; 2.26 at Valparaiso, Fla.; 1.60 at Columbus, Miss.; 1.53 at Savannah, Ga.; 0.96 at Muscle Shoals, Ala.; and 0.92 at Tupelo, Miss.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

State's figures on sales can provide slight edge for lottery players

By John Powers

Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Gamblers who like to play the odds should keep up with information from the state comptroller's office on lottery ticket sales and prizes awarded.

The figures, much like "counting cards" at blackjack, indicate how many winners are left in the number of tickets remaining. And with the extremely long odds for lottery winners, players need every possible edge.

For example, based on the projected number of tickets sold and the actual number of prizes awarded as of 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, the odds are better now than when the lottery started on Friday of buying a ticket with a small prize. Odds are about the same, however, for buying a ticket with one of the top $10,000 prizes.

The state's first scratch-off game, "Lone Star Millions," has a total of 300 million tickets.

After almost six days of sales, a projected 81.2 million had been sold. That is 27.06 percent of the total tickets.

Players had claimed 137 — or 27.40 percent — of the 500 tickets that offer $10,000 in winnings.

But on the other side of the coin, only 22.52 percent, or 563, of the 2,500 tickets worth $1,000 had been claimed as of Wednesday afternoon.

As of Tuesday afternoon, the latest day figures were available for the smaller prizes, 21.66 percent of the total tickets had been sold. But only 14.91 percent, or 18,654, of the 125,040 available $50 tickets had been claimed, along with 15.65 percent, or 4,696, of the 30,000 tickets offering $100 in winnings.

State lottery officials did not report the number of winners of $50 and $100 for Wednesday, and does not report the $2, $5, $10 and $20 winners. There are 29.9 million $2 tickets in the total, along with 6 million worth $5, 800,000 worth $10 and 600,000 worth $20 in prize money.

Kelly Fero, a lottery spokesman in the comptroller's office, said no determination has been made when to end the current game and start the next one.

"We've said we will provide the tickets until they are all gone," Fero said, "but it is conceivable we could end the game with some tickets left."

It is possible that at some point a lot of tickets could be available at retailers, while only a very few winning tickets remained. People would be less likely to buy then.

Fero said the next game, "Texas Match Up," is ready to go and could start immediately. He said it will have a higher top prize and some "different twists" to it.

He also said it is possible in the future that the state and retailers could have two different scratch-off games going on at once.

In the current game, winning tickets have three of the same numbers appearing under the six scratch-off positions. The three matching numbers can appear at random and do not have to be in any consecutive order to be a winner.

Any retailer participating in the lottery can redeem tickets worth $100 or less. Winners of $1,000 and $10,000 must go to one of 24 lottery claim centers around the state. A center is located in Odessa at 4682 East University Blvd.

If a ticket has the word "entry" appearing three times, the owner of the ticket is eligible for 12 weekly drawings to begin in June with a top prize of $1 million in cash.

Owners of such tickets must fill out information on the back of the ticket and mail it in as directed. Seven finalists will participate in each of the $1 million drawings, with two of them having to settle for $10,000 each, two winning $15,000, one taking home $25,000 and one $50,000.

PEROT: 2 strategists join campaign

(From 1A)

Jordan and Rollins would not say what they were being paid.

Jordan, an official with Whittle Communications in Nashville, Tenn., said he was taking a pay cut to join the Perot effort. Rollins has been working as an independent political consultant.

The appointments represent the beginning of a major transformation of Perot's effort from an effort that has been remarkably successful if disorganized to a full-fledged, professionally run campaign.

"It is very comforting to me and I know it is very comforting to the volunteers to know they'll have people who'll be with us who have been through this before and can help us in terms of expertise," Luce said.

Perot, who is on the ballot in nine states and whose supporters are gathering signatures in most of the others, also appointed Mort Meyerson, a longtime business associate, "senior adviser" to the committee.

Meyerson was recently appointed as chairman and chief executive officer of Perot Systems, Inc., a computer service company that Perot headed until he resigned last month. Meyerson will keep his job at Perot Systems.

The naming of a prominent Democrat and a prominent Republican to the Perot team also underscores the bipartisan nature of Perot's appeal and is evidence of the further weakening of the traditional party structure.

Jordan (pronounced JURR-dun), a moderate Democrat, has accused his party of being too beholden to interest groups; Rollins, who was head of the Republican National Campaign Committee in 1990, broke with President Bush over the agreement with Congress to raise taxes in 1990.

"I doubt if there has been a time in the recent history of our country where there has been a greater disparity between what the American people want and expect from government and what both political parties provide for them," Jordan told reporters.

Jordan said it was he who took the initiative, contacting aides to the Dallas billionaire several days after Perot's appearance on the "Larry King Show" in February, when the Texan first floated the idea of a presidential campaign.

Friends of Jordan say major considerations were what his precise role would be in the campaign and working out terms for leaving his current job at Whittle Communications.

Jordan said he is taking a leave of absence and would return to the Nashville company after the election and would not take a position in a Perot administration.

The Georgian said he had not talked with Carter about his intention to join Perot's effort, though he had sent the former president a note informing him of his decision. Some of Jordan's friends, like Jody Powell, who was Carter's press secretary and is now supporting Gov. Bill Clinton, tried to dissuade him from signing on with Perot.

"His view is that he thinks both Clinton and Bush are decent, well-intentioned people, but he doesn't think either one is in the position to make big changes," Powell said in a telephone interview.

Rollins, on the other hand, was contacted by the Perot staff members and asked to join the campaign.

Relations between Rollins and the White House soured two years ago, when as director of the Republican National Campaign Committee he wrote a memorandum urging Republican candidates for the House of Representatives not to let party loyalty inhibit them from publicly criticizing Bush's pact with Congress that cut federal spending and raised taxes.

Rollins' decision on joining the Perot campaign was complicated by the fact that his wife, Sherrie S. Rollins, held a White House position as assistant to the president for public liaison and intergovernmental affairs.

Citing "personal reasons," Ms. Rollins resigned her White House job Wednesday. But Rollins said she continues to support President Bush's re-election.

"We've put a wall up," he said. "She will stay in Washington, and I will move down here."

Both major-party campaigns took jobs at Perot on Wednesday.

In California, Clinton, who clinched the Democratic nomination with victories in six primaries on Tuesday, called the Texan "a politician like the others seeking the presidency." Of the Jordan and Rollins appointments, he said, "I'd like to know how much they were both paid to do it."

Bush did not mention Perot, but the Republican national chairman, Richard Bond, said in an interview on CBS News that voters would "look at his contradictions on taxes and the way he acts like a politician on subjects like abortion or gun control, and they're going to say, 'Uh-uh, better not.'"

Ronald H. Brown, the Democratic national chairman, said of the Rollins and Jordan appointments: "I think it makes a travesty of Ross Perot's claim that he's not seeking handlers and doesn't need handlers. Evidently he has recruited two of the most renowned ones."

Brown went on: "I think the fact that he was able to attract Ed Rollins is another sign of the absolute breakup of the Republican coalition that is going on. It sends another signal that it's unraveling for George Bush."

Denmark's EC partners vow to pursue union despite legal problems

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — European Community leaders vowed Wednesday to press on with political and monetary union despite rejection by Danish voters, but the plans were dealt a further setback when France announced it would put the issue to a vote.

Britain's government canceled a parliamentary debate on the proposed union treaty, and the European Community called an emergency meeting for today to discuss the implications of Denmark's rebuff.

French Premier Pierre Bergevoy called the results of Tuesday's referendum in Denmark "bad news for Europe," saying it raised procedural problems because the treaty requires unanimous ratification by the 12 member states.

He said that would be a prime concern at today's meeting of EC foreign ministers in Oslo, Norway.

Other European officials played down the need for unanimous approval of the so-called Maastricht treaty, saying they could overcome any legal hurdles.

EC leaders rejected an appeal from Denmark's government for renegotiating the treaty, which many Danes fear would harm their liberal social welfare system and strong environmental rules. Supporters fear new talks could lead to demands from other nations for changes that would derail the union process.

"There is strong unanimity that the 11 should go ahead without hesitation" and without renegotiating the treaty, said Foreign Minister Joao de Deus Pinheiro of Portugal, which currently holds the EC presidency.

He said Denmark's vote could signal its end as a member of the trade bloc, which with 330 million consumers is the world's richest market.

"It is something we must look at" during the Oslo meeting, Pinheiro said. "One member state cannot prevent the others from forming a European union."

Despite the confident notes, the Danish vote stunned leaders of member states and cheered opponents of the plan to create a closely integrated political, social and economic union with a common currency and foreign policy. Foes worry about losing their national identities.

Mitterrand announced Wednesday that he would hold a referendum in France, where conservative and leftist parties have stepped up attacks on the treaty. No date was set.

Mitterrand, who along with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, has been the driving force behind the treaty, expressed confidence union will succeed.

"We will do with 11 what it was not possible to do with 12," he said.

In a joint statement with Mitterrand, Kohl said Germany and France were determined to produce a European union before the end of 1992 as planned.

Bosnian leader asks West Europe to send in army

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Leaders of Bosnia-Herzegovina pleaded again for western European military help Wednesday as Serbs battled Muslims and Croats in clashes that left at least 45 dead.

Sabina Izetbegovic, daughter of Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, said from Sarajevo that the government appealed for intervention by the West European Union, the fledgling military arm of the European Community.

"The aggression is intensifying, the destruction of civilians more and more dramatic, and the Serb army is ... constantly bringing new reinforcements," she said, reading a statement issued by the Bosnian presidency.

European leaders have rejected previous requests to send peace-keeping troops to the former Yugoslav republic. But they have imposed economic sanctions on Serbia, which is widely accused of fomenting the fighting.

The U.N. Security Council also has imposed sanctions in an attempt to pressure Serbia to stop aiding ethnic Serbs.

Romania, which neighbors Serbia, said Wednesday that it would observe the U.N. embargo on trade, including oil sales, and air traffic. But the economically struggling country said it would seek U.N. compensation for severing its extensive trade links with Serbia.

Bosnia's latest appeal for outside military intervention came after a long overnight duel in Sarajevo between Serbs and Muslims who fought with heavy machine guns and artillery.

The fighting eased after sunrise in the Bosnian capital, allowing residents to venture out of cellars and other shelters. Using newly issued ration coupons, they hurried to buy what staples remained in the battered city, which has been blockaded for weeks by Serb fighters.

Heavy artillery fire also was heard near Dubrovnik, the Adriatic resort in Croatia that is not far from the Bosnian border.

The Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency said attacks had been launched against Serb positions on a 60-mile swath stretching from Dubrovnik to Mostar in southwestern Bosnia.

The attacks could herald a push by Croat forces to recapture territory lost to Serbs not only in Bosnia but also in Croatia, where an estimated 10,000 people have died since Croatia declared independence last June.

Fighting subsided in much of Croatia after a U.N.-mediated cease-fire went into effect in early January. But clashes have escalated in areas along the border with Bosnia.

British actor Morley dies

LONDON (AP) — Robert Morley, who died Wednesday at 84, made a career of being his own witty self on stage, in films and as a writer.

"I'd rather just put on a suit, preferably the one I am already wearing, and step on the stage so the people can recognize me," said Morley, whose girly, shaggy eyebrows and owlish eyes made him widely recognizable.

Morley died in a hospital in Reading four days after suffering a stroke, said his son Sheridan, who did not announce funeral arrangements. The actor's wife, Joan, son Wilton, daughter-in-law, Margaret, and grandchildren were at his bedside.

Among his fund of stories was an equivocal compliment paid to him by the much-married Rex Harrison: "Of course, Robert, it's all been so different for you: one wife, one family and, if I may say so, one performance."

Born May 26, 1908, Morley rebelled against his father's hopes that he would become a diplomat and won a place at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

"Showing off has been my profession. I learned all about acting in about three months selling vacuum cleaners door to door. I still tell people that is the best way to become an actor," he said in an interview with the Daily Mail two years ago.

He wrote eight plays and five books of reminiscences, including "Around the World in 81 Years," published two years ago. He was a prolific contributor to Punch and Playboy magazines and also was known to American television viewers as a spokesman for British Airways.

His first big success on stage was in the title role of "Oscar Wilde," which he reprised in New York in 1938.

Memorable film roles included the munitions magnate Andrew Undershaft in George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" and the title role in "Oscar Wilde." He appeared with Humphrey Bogart in "The African Queen" and with a crowd of stars in "Around the World in Eighty Days." In a triumph of type-casting, he played a corpulent gourmand in "Who is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe?"

Morley claimed he was cured of ambitions to play Shakespeare by touring in 1934 with Sir Frank Benson, then at the end of a distinguished stage career.

"Very often he (Benson) would go on as Malvolio and play the first scene of 'As You Like It.' If he made the wrong entrance he got on the wrong play and we had to try and talk him back. The audience never seemed to mind, though," Morley once said.

Aristide urges action to restore Haiti's democracy

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The exiled president of Haiti asked the United States and other countries in the hemisphere Wednesday to stop talking about democracy and start taking direct action to restore it, beginning with the interception of oil tankers bound for Port-au-Prince.

The exile, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, said that sooner or later a naval blockade of Haiti might be necessary to bring down the military government that ousted him eight months ago.

While avoiding direct criticism of the Bush administration, Father Aristide, who was elected president of Haiti in 1990 with more than two-thirds of the popular vote, delivered a bitter and sarcastic indictment against "friends of democracy" who he said seem unable to act to support it.

"They say: 'We will give democracy to them, we are with them. We will tighten the embargo,'" he said in an interview. "But when we saw more tankers arriving in Haiti only four days ago with oil, we thought, 'is this the best way to tighten an embargo?'"

"It is not difficult to do what we have to do," he said. "It is a question of knowing whether or not they believe in what they are saying."

Aristide also said the level of anger was rising among Haitians, who were running out of patience after eight months of a military government.

He agreed with comments by Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., who said after returning from a recent visit to Haiti that "a head of steam is building up there."

"It is true, it is like a volcano," Aristide said. "At this moment, it is very explosive."

He added that as a "responsible" head of government he had to urge nonviolence to head off an explosion like that in Los Angeles — a parallel he has been drawing in speeches around the United States as he meets business leaders, human rights groups and, on this trip, Jewish organizations.

But he also said non-violent people expect justice to be done. He said his job was not to teach Haitians patience but to bring back their elected government.

Aristide, a charismatic priest whose strong language has at times disconcerted officials in the Bush administration, spoke with low-keyed, sharply focused determination in an interview at his hotel in Washington.

He dismissed the naming Tuesday of the conservative economist Marc Bazin as a new Haitian prime minister, saying that this was another time-wasting ploy by the military under Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, which overthrew him on Sept. 30.

The secretary general of the Organization of American States, Joao Clemente Baena Soares, also rejected the Bazin nomination Wednesday, saying that "no government that may result from this illegal situation will be accepted."

Aristide insisted that developments in Haiti had created a propitious moment for a real tightening of the embargo on Haiti. He said some original financial and political backers of the coup are now breaking ranks and coming here to tell him that they are exhausted, fearful of spreading violence and ready to discuss his return.

"Some of them are really tired," he said. "They are really afraid. They know, day after day, the anger of people is increasing. They realize that the only way to avoid violence, vengeance, retaliation is to have democracy back."

Aristide said that the emergence of rival "gangs" within the military has created disaffection, and that he was receiving letters from soldiers complaining about the level of killing.

"If you go to Guantanamo," he said, "you will find soldiers among the refugees." He reiterated his belief that many refugees are "politically oppressed."

Last Wednesday, President Bush said in Atlanta that he was convinced that Haitians fleeing in boats were not "physically oppressed," and deserving of political safe haven in the United States.

"They say they want to stop refugees," Aristide said of the administration. "I want to stop refugees. So we have the same goal. They say, we want democracy. We say, we want democracy. We have the same goal. So I say, let's do it."

He said that some steps taken by the United States to punish the leaders and supporters of the coup, including the cancellation of U.S. visas, had been partial measures at best.

"They don't see any kind of real sign of action against them," he said of the coup leaders.

U.S. defector is found in Russian prison

TROITSKOYE, Russia (AP) — A 75-year-old American defector has been found in a psychiatric prison where he was known only as the mysterious "Mr. K" for three decades, authorities said Wednesday.

Victor Norris Hamilton, a former code analyst for the National Security Agency, was in good physical condition at Special Hospital No. 5, a tree-shaded red brick compound about 30 miles southwest of Moscow.

But he has mental problems, is paranoid, and has refused most treatment, hospital officials said. Doctors did not give a formal diagnosis of Hamilton's condition.

Hamilton, who defected in 1962, is free to return to the United States if his family claims him, said Yuri Kaganovich, deputy director of the facility.

"I would be glad if he could go home to his family," Kaganovich said.

Hamilton's relatives, who were shocked to learn he is still alive, say they are seeking his return, along with assurances the U.S. government will not prosecute him.

"He's a 75-year-old man who is mentally disturbed.

We do not want him to have to face charges and a trial," said his wife, Lillie Hamilton, of Union City, Ga.

Hamilton's whereabouts and identity were discovered by the Ark Project, a Connecticut-based group that searches for U.S. prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action. The group acted on a tip received after Russian television coverage of the search for American POWs in the former Soviet Union.

"His mental shape is not the best," said Susan Mesinal, an Ark official who visited Hamilton on Tuesday. She was accompanied by the vice president of Russia's Independent Psychiatric Association.

Though Hamilton is not the type of missing American targeted by Ark, Mesinal said the discovery encourages those hunting for U.S. servicemen in the former Soviet Union. A Senate report last year claimed as many as 20,000 U.S. POWs had been taken to the Soviet Union since 1945.

Kaganovich refused to allow a reporter or photographer to meet with Hamilton on Wednesday, saying his mental condition was too fragile.

Congress needs more statesmen

Statesmanship: 1. The art or practice of conducting governmental affairs. 2. Leadership characterized by wisdom, breadth of vision, or regard for the general welfare rather than partisan interest.

The definition is Webster's.

As an institution, Congress has been taking a beating this year. In a recent poll, a dozen members of Congress from each party termed the 102nd Congress the worst in terms of legislative achievement. "All this does," commented U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., "is confirm the public's worst suspicion of us." He's absolutely correct and if they're looking around for somebody to blame they should look no further than the nearest mirror.

Americans look to the Congress and the president for leadership. But this year, they've found that action is lacking. "We have not addressed the significant economic problems that confront the country, in the sense of enacting legislation," said U.S. Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md.

Democratic Rep. Ike Skelton of Missouri, noted, "There's more strident partisanship in this institution than I've ever seen... I don't see the goodwill that I used to see in other Congresses, and that concerns me."

It also should concern all Americans. The public mood has shifted from one of benign ignorance regarding the actions of lawmakers to one of resentment. Those in Congress are not faultless. Over a period of years, repetitive reports of pay raises approved out of the light of public scrutiny, officials who betray their public trust through scandalous activities that pull apart the moral fiber holding the nation intact, or extreme partisanship that acts as a divisive force can actually destroy the delicate bond that exists between Congress and the public over a period of time.

Of course, not all members of Congress violate the public trust. There are hundreds who serve honorably, and who attempt to counter actions they deem not in the public interest. Their efforts are to be commended. But, generally, the public must base its assessment of the individuals in Congress on the actions of a few members. When there are reports of pay raises or scandals, the Congress collectively gets a black eye. The members of Congress are held to potentially the highest standard in our society and, again collectively, should exemplify the standards for conduct in our society generally but, of course, vengeance at the polls should be exacted on an individual basis. Anything else will constitute vigilante justice at the polls.

Seventy-three members of the Congress already have opted to take retirement rather than run for re-election this year; hopefully, that turnover will result in more individuals in the House and Senate who are interested not in themselves, but rather the institution itself — what it stands for — and the nation. The United States still desperately needs statesmen.

What is necessary to bring about that change is not a big step. Will and Ariel Durant, 20th century American historians and philosophers, noted in one of their volumes, "The difference between politics and statesmanship is philosophy."

Those in the Congress would be wise to ponder that statement.

GEORGE WILL

Perot neither liberal nor conservative

WASHINGTON — To three nagging questions: Is Ross Perot more a liberal or more a conservative? Is he comparable to anyone currently in public life? What is the fundamental cause of George Bush's failure as president? — I herewith suggest three entwined answers:

Perot has too few ideas to be either a liberal or conservative, but he has the mentality that has gotten liberalism into lots of trouble. Perot resembles Bush more than either could comfortably acknowledge. And Bush has failed because he believes in nothing much other than the process that proved its merit by producing him as president.

Perot says that as president, "I'll be like a mechanic who's under the hood, working on the engine." The things a mechanic tinkers with under a hood can be complicated but not willful: They do not talk back, or have interests, convictions, yearnings, whims.

Still, Perot says that even the thorny matter of tax reform will go swimmingly: "We start with a blank sheet of paper." Then, "I would sit down with the congressional leaders and say, 'Now, these look like the best ways to me. What do you think the best ways are?' We would work all this through together, see, as opposed to the confrontational operation that goes on now."

Confrontation seems inexplicably irrational and utterly unnecessary to Perot, partly because it often arises from conflicting convictions, and the only strong conviction he seems to have is that he should be boss.

"In my sleep," he told Time magazine, "I am a better consensus leader than anyone who's up there (in Washington) now." Well, reaching consensus should be a piece of cake if, as Perot evidently thinks, conflict is aberrant behavior because people reasoning together will naturally come to agreement.

Backward reels the mind, to a president — a Texan, too — who was fond of echoing Isaiah: "Come let us reason together." Lyndon Johnson really believed, as good liberals do, that all people of good will and clear minds will reason the same way to the same conclusions. Hence society can be made rational (why, it can even be made into a Great Society) by the actions of a government staffed with liberals armed with expertise. (The theory needed some fine-tuning: Johnson was driven from office by a nation on the verge of a nervous breakdown.)

The Texan currently president may seem quite unlike either Johnson or Perot, but look again. Like Perot, Bush believes he should be president not because of anything he believes but because of what he is. Like Johnson, Bush believes that if the right sort of people — people like him and his friends — reason together, agreement will result. All that is required is the splitting of differences which are, after all, just differences about ideas, which aren't really important.

Recently a "senior administration official" expressed to The Washington Post his bewilderment: "Bush has given 20 percent more domestic speeches this year than last and 40 percent more than Reagan did in this period, and people say we still don't have a message."

It is easiest to mold plastic things and his pliable people include many old friends: at least 10 members of his Cabinet are longtime acquaintances and in his first nine months in office he appointed a higher proportion of friends and supporters to ambassadorial posts than either Reagan or Carter. His personalization of foreign policy explains his coddling of China's tyrants and his long reluctance to recognize that Gorbachev had become yesterday's man.

His inaugural address — "They didn't send us here to bicker" — had a Perotean premise: Conflict is something petty and ill-mannered, like bickering. Bush thinks government should resemble a garden party: Friends enjoying the process, without the tiresome intrusion of convictions that cause conflict.

Bashing reaches new heights in campaign

The buzzword for this year seems to be "bashing." People don't attack other people any more — they bash them.

The other day I received a call from a woman physician accusing me of bashing doctors because I made fun of those who owned their own labs. Not long before that I heard from a spokesperson with an automobile company who wanted to know why I bashed American cars instead of German ones. I replied that I had bashed German cars until I found out that Pat Buchanan drove a Mercedes Benz.

No one knows when serious bashing in America started, although it's generally agreed that the first victims were mothers.

In the '70s and '80s stand-up comedians started to bash their mothers, and this brought tremendous laughs from the audience. The tragedians realized that there was gold in those hills, and they started telling mother-bashing jokes as well.

Once bashing became popular, anti-bashing organizations sprung up to fight them — such as the Mothers Anti-Defamation League, NOW, The Polish American Society and, recently, the Organization to Eradicate Japanese Sumo-Bashing in America.

While bashing is as American as apple pie, it reached new heights during this political year. Every candidate has a bash consultant on the payroll whose sole job it is to plant damaging stories about his opponents.

Gov. Bill Clinton has had the worst of it. From the moment he gets up in the morning to the time he goes to bed, professional hit men are at work throwing eggs at him. He is not only getting it from George Bush's bashers but Jerry Brown's as well.

Clinton's mistake in the past was to deny all the charges. He did this so much that he lost his voice, but the opposition's mistake was to lacerate the governor early in the campaign so by now the country has become accustomed to the attacks and the voters want to go on to other issues.

While Clinton was being knocked about, his people kept saying to the press, "Why don't you bash Bush as much as you bash our boy?"

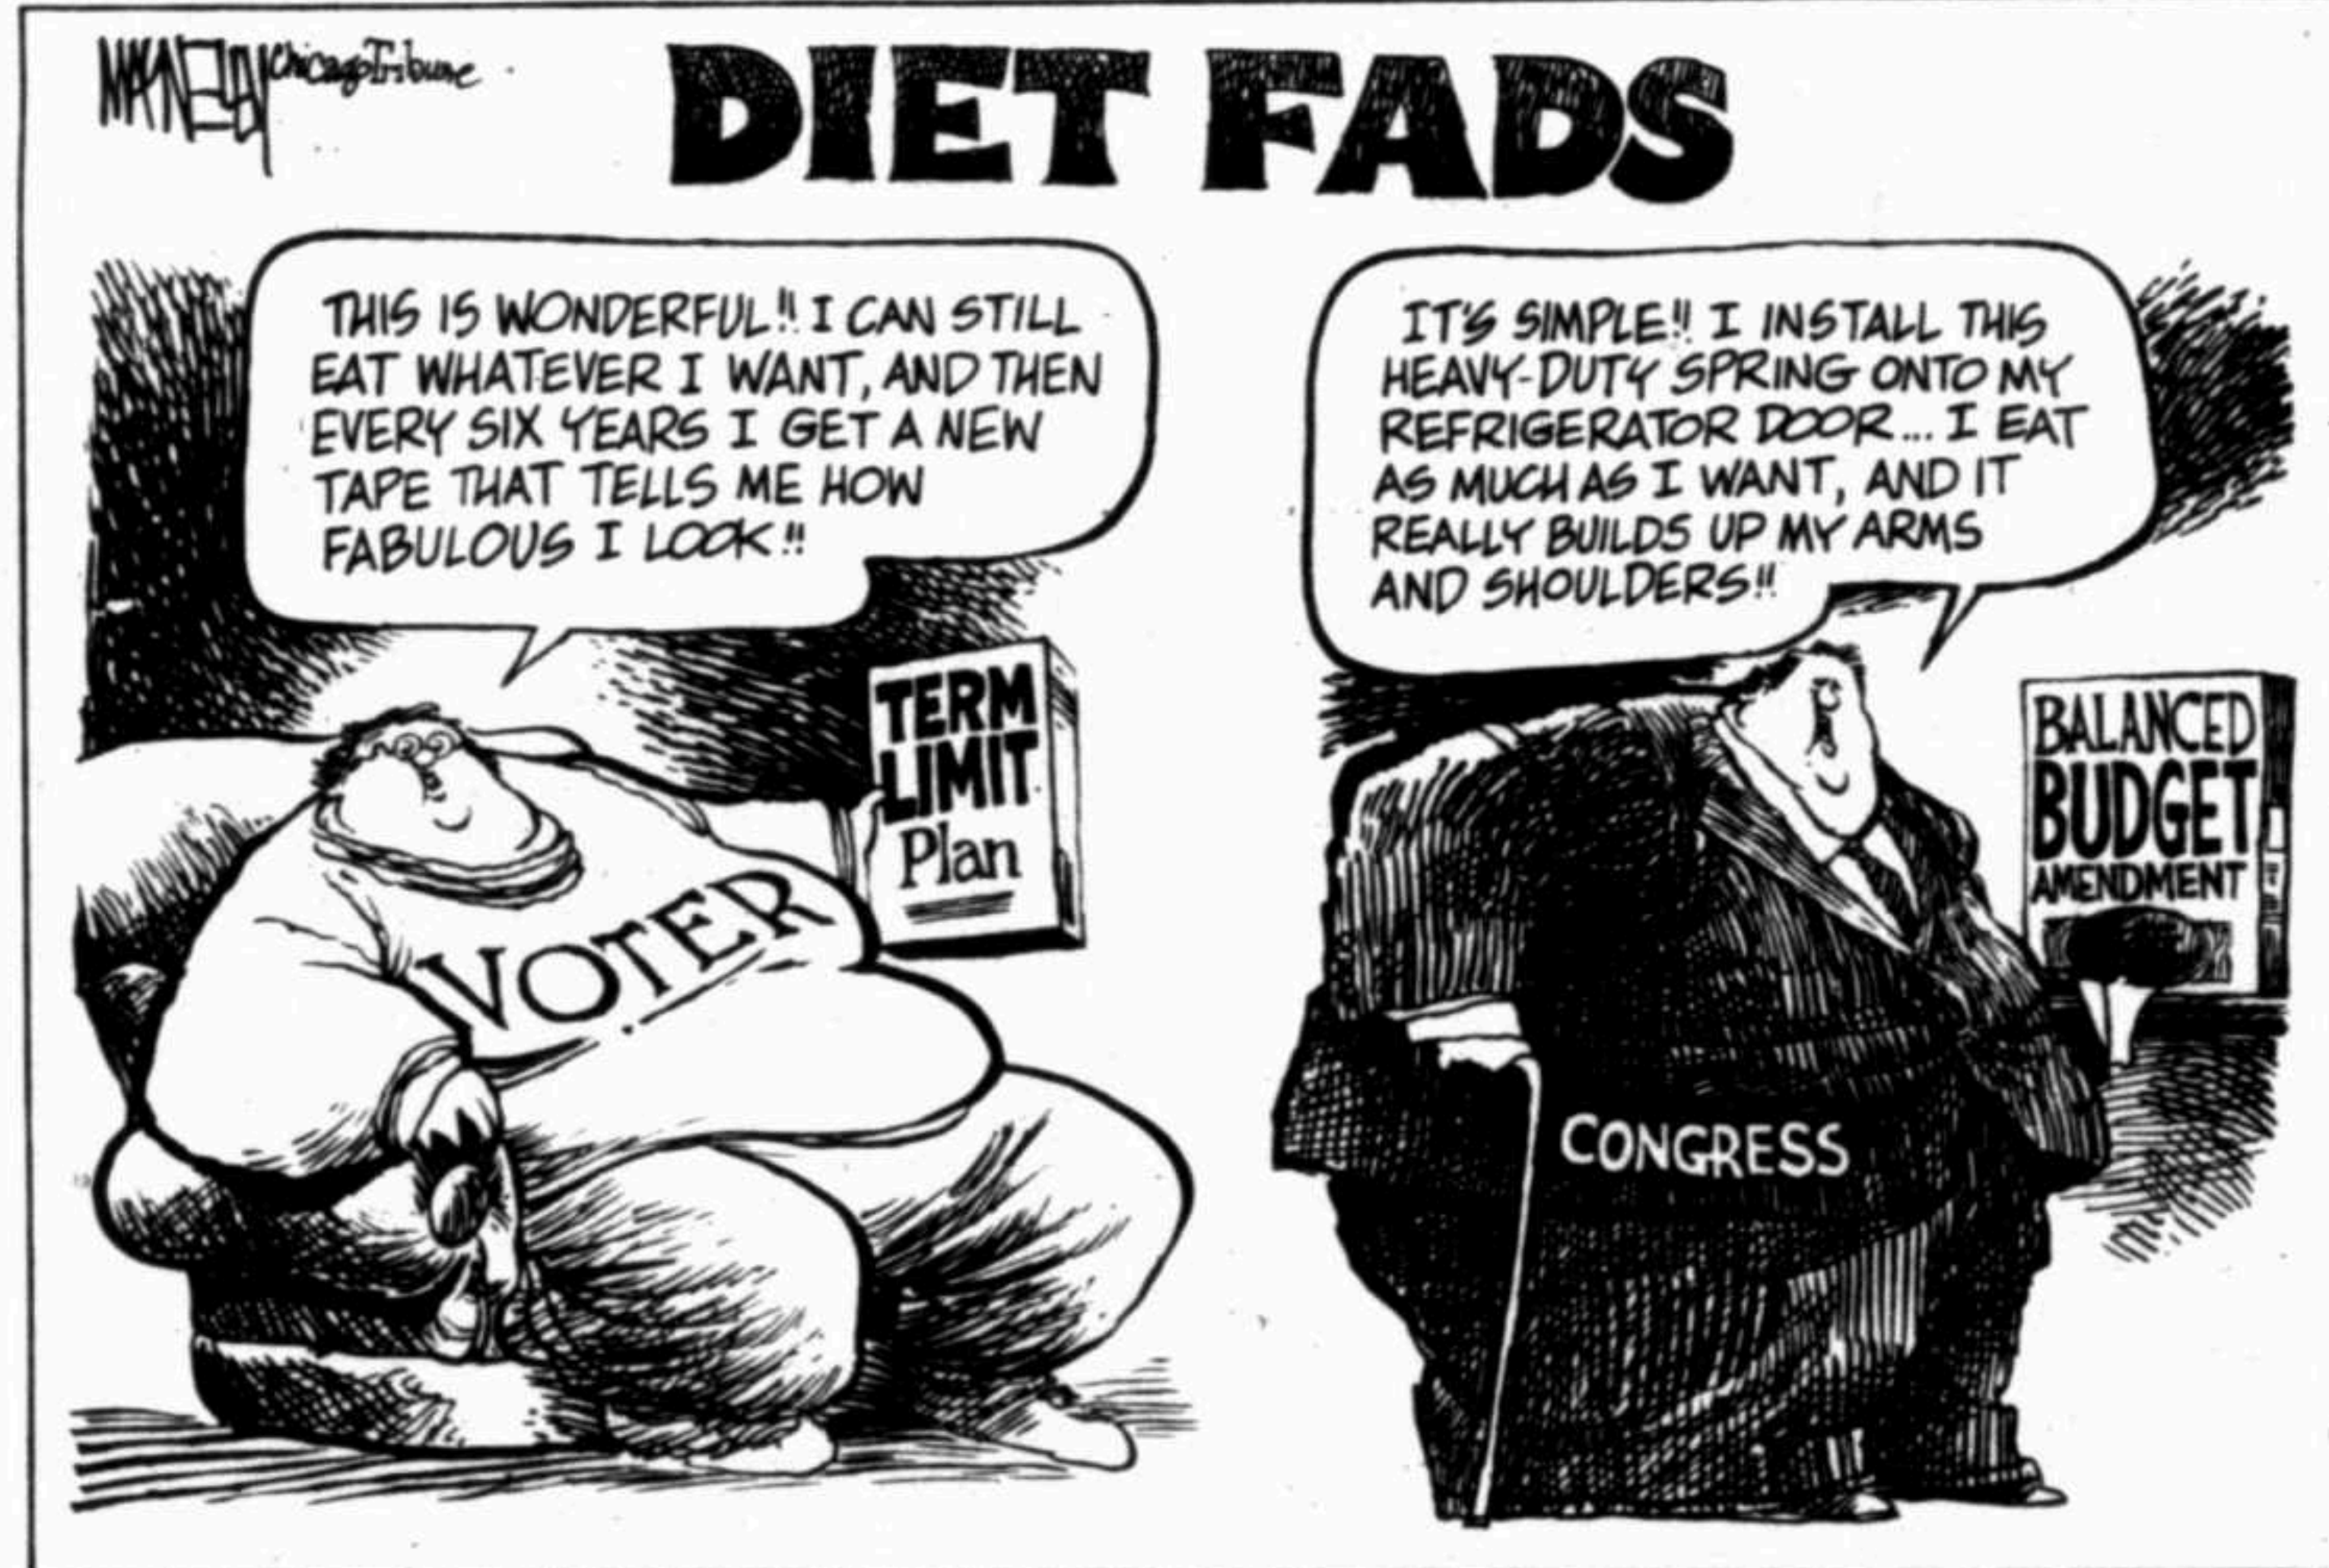

The press corps, which listens to everybody, started writing negative stories about Bush. This infuriated the president who had had a free ride until the recession.

The White House responded by bashing members of the media. The reporters didn't mind because if they are not being bashed by somebody they feel as if they're not doing their job.

Unless something untoward happens, such as Gov. Mario Cuomo descending with wings from the heavens on a flying white horse, the presidential candidates will be George Bush and Bill Clinton. Dan Quayle will probably be the vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket.

Since all the bashing material on Clinton, Bush and Quayle has been used up by now, the political bashers will have no one to hit over the head except the independent candidate. But I'm ready for him. If you can't bash a Texas billionaire, who can you beat up on?

Fighting single-member districts 'lost cause'

This is in regard to Ernie Angelo's recent letter recommending that the mayor and City Council "fight all the way to the Supreme Court" against single-member district representation on the City Council in the event that the results of the non-binding referendum did not portray what Angelo personally desired. Angelo, having been mayor of the City of Midland from 1972 to 1980, is living in the past.

I wish to point out the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) filed a lawsuit in 1985 against the Midland Independent School District (MISD) requesting that representation to the school board be from a single-member district. On Sept. 10, 1986, federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton ordered that the Midland Independent School District board be comprised of representatives from seven single-member districts. It is my understanding that in losing this lawsuit, MISD spent something in excess of $300,000 of taxpayer money fighting LULAC. Recently, the Dallas Independent School District spent approximately 5 million taxpayer dollars fighting LULAC and lost in the courts before having to establish single-member districts. In studying the issue involved, I have found no record of LULAC having lost a single lawsuit.

I would suggest that the mayor, City Council members and others that take the position as suggested by Angelo that we use taxpayer dollars to "fight LULAC all the way to the Supreme Court" read Attorney A.D. Nunez's letter of May 17th. Nunez speaks to the fact that the courts have already affirmed laws that are in place. Therefore, I warn against foolishly spending taxpayer money on such a lost cause. I suggest that the mayor and City Council sit down with representatives from the districts that have no representation on the City Council in an attempt to resolve this matter, instead of being faced with undertaking a costly lawsuit as suggested by Angelo.

We have just witnessed the commissioners court spending something in excess of $100,000 of taxpayer money in a "court battle" with Gary Painter over the interpretation of procedure rules and the dispensing of confiscated drug money.

Students get close look at democratic process

Democracy is not a spectator sport — for it to survive and flourish, we all must become involved. This is the message I heard from 342 high school students from 45 Texas high schools who recently participated in the Close Up Foundation government studies program in Washington, D.C.

For a full week the students had the opportunity to develop a better understanding of our democratic process in the nation's capital. By observing congressional proceedings, questioning journalists and meeting with government experts, the abstracts of history and the process of governing were transformed into concrete experiences. In addition, students were able to share their views with their peers from other areas of the country.

Participants returned home with a deeper awareness of their responsibilities as citizens and the realization that a single individual can make a difference. Their enthusiasm for involvement in the democratic process is to be admired.

The Close Up experience was made possible through the strong support of parents, teachers and schools. Also, various companies and organizations helped make Close Up fellowships available to students in financial need. These sponsors include Burger King Corp.

On behalf of all of us at Close Up, I would like to thank all who made the experience possible.

City's ambulance crew, hospital deserve thanks

On the afternoon of May 13, I suffered an attack on my heart. One of Midland's ambulance crews was dispatched to render aid in my cause. Never have I witnessed more professionalism and compassion than from Dane Orr and his co-workers on the fire department paramedic team. I salute these men for a job well done.

The staff of men and women that attended to me at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center from the time of my entry until my release were nothing less than superb. They worked as a team with a high level of professionalism and compassion. I salute the men and women of the emergency room, C.C.U. and the fourth floor cardiac rehabilitation.

Our hospital management is to be likewise commended for the leadership that attracts, trains and employs a high caliber health team such as we have in Midland. Incidentally, the hospital food was great.

We are so blessed in Midland to have so many loving and praying citizens. Thanks to the body of Christ for their prayers and loving support.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 4, the 156th day of 1992. There are 210 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Fifty years ago, on June 4, 1942, the Battle of Midway began during World War II, resulting in America's first major victory over Japan and marking a decisive turning point for the United States in the Pacific theater.

On this date: In 1647, the English army seized King Charles I as a hostage.

In 1812, the Louisiana Territory was renamed the Missouri Territory.

In 1878, Turkey turned Cyprus over to the British.

In 1892, 100 years ago, the Sierra Club was incorporated in San Francisco.

In 1896, Henry Ford made a successful test run with his car in a nighttime drive through the streets of Detroit.

In 1940, the Allied military evacuation from Dunkirk, France, ended.

In 1944, Allied forces liberated Rome.

In 1947, the House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved the Taft-Hartley Act. The law was later enacted over President Harry S. Truman's veto.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set a few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

■ Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.

■ They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.

■ Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Senate rejects cuts in public broadcasting funds

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Conservative critics were decisively defeated Wednesday when the Senate rejected their efforts to reduce proposed federal spending on public broadcasting by nearly $400 million over three years.

By a 75-22 vote, senators rejected a Republican effort to freeze government financing of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which had become enmeshed in a dispute over ideology and sexual expression.

The financing of public broadcasting, and the larger question of whether the government should have a say in the content of artistic or creative work it helped finance, have become even more of an issue in this presidential election year.

But the network was clearly helped by its enthusiastic supporters in all 50 states.

Critics contended that public broadcasting was too liberal and occasionally obscene. Supporters argued that the network should enjoy continued editorial independence and that Congress should continue to provide money with no strings attached.

In Wednesday's crucial vote, the Senate approved a $1.1 billion three-year authorization, from 1994 to 1996, rejecting a Republican move to freeze the authorization at the current level of $825 million.

By a vote of 84-11, the Senate on Wednesday night approved the entire bill, including several amendments intended to make the bill palatable to conservatives, who cast all the opposing votes.

White House budget officials said President Bush opposed the bill because of budgetary considerations, not because of the content of the public broadcasting programs that have enraged conservatives.

The Senate vote's margin suggests that if the president decided to veto the bill the White House would have trouble sustaining it. The bill passed the House by a voice vote last November.

On Capitol Hill on Wednesday, senators argued about how much federal money was needed for public broadcasting, as well as about the content of the programs. Conservatives said the programs were favored by liberals and the rich, while supporters said they were watched by a wide audience. "What we're really about here is whether there should be a continued national commitment to excellence in public broadcasting," said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla.

But Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., who led the conservative effort, said freezing the funds for public broadcasting would provide more money for domestic programs and reducing the deficit.

Contending that public broadcasting was watched and heard more by the rich than the poor, he said, "This clearly amounts, for the most part, to an upper-middle-class entitlement program." But Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the program had taught generations of poor children how to read and count.

Throughout its 25-year history the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which was set up as an independent, non-governmental body, has successfully fended off threatened government restrictions. The corporation does not broadcast or produce programs, but rather acts as a conduit for federal money for public radio and television stations.

Bush, Clinton camps try to demolish Perot's outsider image

Associated Press

Bill Clinton and President Bush offered previews of the coming fall campaign on Wednesday, barely pausing to note the end of the primary season. Ross Perot hired a pair of insiders to help steer his outsider's candidacy for the White House.

"I understand very clearly it's never over till it's over," the Texas billionaire said as he savored the polls that measured stunning support for his undeclared candidacy. It was 22 weeks from being over, and both the Clinton and Bush camps went right to work trying to demolish Perot's image as a man above politics.

"Ross Perot has been a very professional political operative for the last 20 years. I think that history will confirm that," Clinton said in California. "He is a politician like the others seeking the presidency."

Clinton jabbed, as well, at word Perot had hired Hamilton Jordan and Edward Rollins, veterans of Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan campaigns of the past. "I'd like to know how much they were both paid to do it," he said.

Jordan and Rollins made their debut for Perot at a nationally televised news conference in Dallas. Rollins' wife, Sherrie, resigned her White House job earlier in the day to avoid a conflict with her husband's new responsibilities.

Bush didn't utter Perot's name, but Republican National Chairman Richard Bond showed no reluctance. Voters will "look at his contradictions on taxes and the way he acts like a politician on subjects like abortion or gun control, and they're going to say 'Uh, uh, better not,'" Bond said in an interview on CBS.

Presidential politics aside, Democrats Dianne Feinstein and Rep. Barbara Boxer staged a flying victory tour to celebrate their nominations to twin Senate seats from California. Republicans picked appointed Sen. John Seymour to oppose Feinstein and conservative Bruce Herschensohn to oppose Boxer.

Only two women currently serve in the Senate, and Boxer said there is a need for more.

Wet weather breeds pet ticks, fleas

■ Veterinarians recommend weekly treatment to control pests.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

Local authorities say wet weather and a mild winter has triggered a severe onslaught of parasites — ticks, fleas and mosquitoes.

"The pests may be a real problem for people and animals this summer," said Dr. Evret Newman, regional veterinarian for the state health department.

"I'm recommending that people do what they normally do to control these parasites, but do it more often," Newman said.

"He explained that ticks and fleas can be killed in their larval stages by cold temperatures or dry conditions — neither of which has been abundant this year. Because of the unusually large amount of rain, then, mosquitoes have plenty of places to breed.

Midland Animal Control Director Coy Willis said his staff has already seen some animals severely infested with ticks and fleas.

"Our tick problem is very, very bad," he said. "We saw it very early this year. Right now, it's almost too late to take corrective action."

Both professionals recommended pet owners be vigilant about checking pets and using treatments.

For dogs and cats, Newman recommends using a species-specific dusting powder once a week. Local veterinarian Greg Adkins said tick and flea dips can be used safely once a week, but no more.

"Even with these treatments, it's going to be a problem if fleas get in the house," Newman said. "The house may need fumigation."

"The bottom line is environmental control," Adkins said. "Spray the yard and take care of the pets and the house at the same time."

Willis recommended consulting a veterinarian to find out what treatment is best for a pet.

Vacuuming is a good way to get the pests out of carpets, but the bag should be dumped outside so fleas can't crawl out and return, Newman said.

Burglars smash windows, grab women's apparel

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Midland police believe they have solved a string of dress-shop capers that have plagued three local shops in the last week. But no arrests are expected to be made until later this week, Sgt. Bill Morgan said.

"They've been smash-and-grab operations, where the culprit or culprits broke a front window and hauled off what they could grab,"

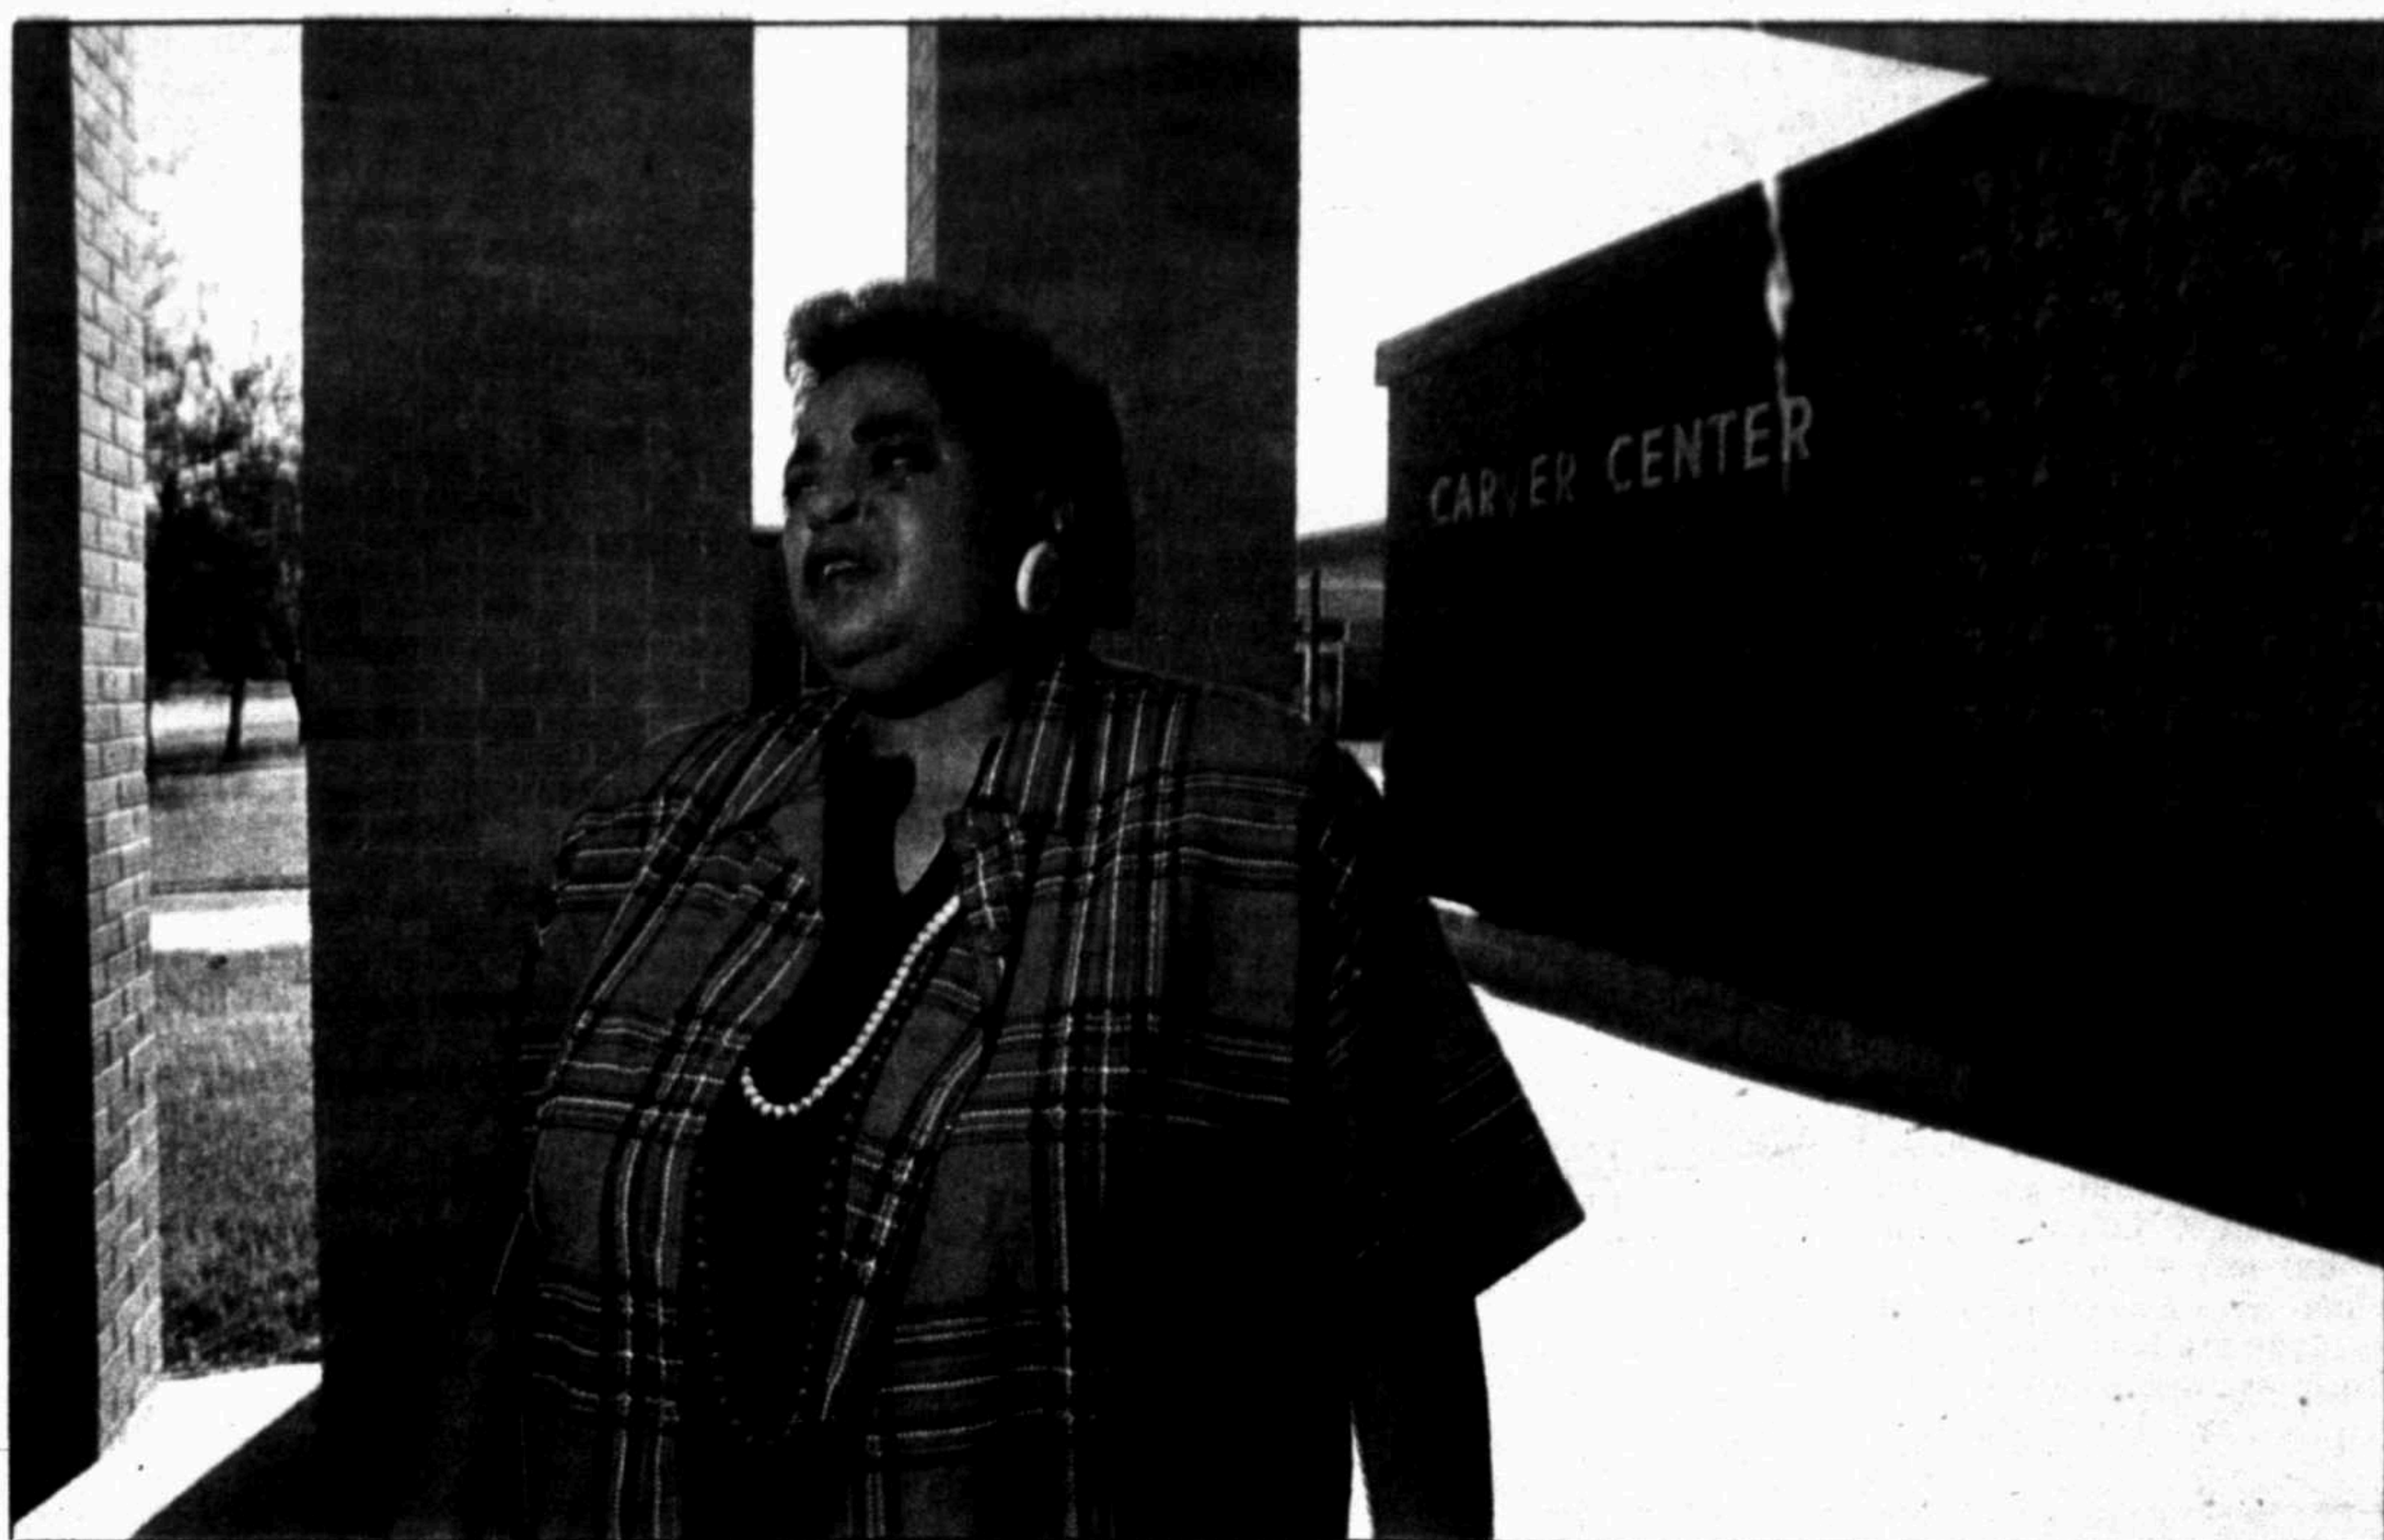

Morgan said.

"We have some good leads. We have our suspects in mind and will be acting on that in the next two days or so," he said.

Morgan believes the burglaries are related.

The two successful burglaries occurred at Lucille's Dress Shop on Tuesday and Julian Gold Inc. on May 26, both located in Colonnade Plaza at Loop 250 and Garfield

Rose Marie Ward, a graduate of the old Carver High School, is chairman of the 1992 George Washington Carver All-

Carver alumni to share memories

■ Reunion to coincide with Juneteenth Celebration.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The George Washington Carver All-School Reunion will coincide with this year's Juneteenth Celebration on June 19-21.

"The All-School Class Reunion Weekend offers a timely opportunity to reflect upon our heritage and what 'dear ol' Carver' has meant to us through the years," said Rose Marie Ward, the 1992 Carver Reunion chairman.

Ms. Ward graduated from the all-black Carver High School in the mid-1960s, not long before the school was closed in 1968 in Midland's integration movement.

Ms. Ward said the reunion's theme is "Memories."

The reunion will be held at Midland's Holiday Inn Convention Center and Country Villa and on the old Carver school grounds on Friday, June 19; Saturday, June 20, and Sunday, June 21.

In the meantime, the Juneteenth Parade to celebrate the freedom of emancipated black slaves in Texas will be held at 10 a.m. on Saturday, June 20. The parade route will flow from Nobles Avenue southward on Lamesa Road to Washington Park in the neighborhood of the old Carver school, which now is site of the Carver Cultural Center for gifted children.

At noon on June 20, a "Chat and Chew" luncheon will be held in the Carver Cafeteria, and a Carver Reunion program will be held in the Carver Auditorium at 2 p.m. that day.

A banquet and dance for Carver alumni and staff will be held Saturday beginning at 7 p.m. that night in the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

A Memorial Breakfast will be held in the Holiday Inn Country Villa Sunday morning. At 3 p.m., a "Praise Service" will be held in the old Carver Auditorium.

While the Carver Reunion is being staged, the Tall City Lions Club will be hosting the Juneteenth Celebration, which includes a get-acquainted session on the night of June 18, the Juneteenth Celebration on June 19 at Washington Park, the parade on June 20, and on Sunday, June 21, the "Gospel Explosion" — the spiritual-gospel singing of church choirs, at the park.

"We have got a lot of people who are proud of the (Carver) accomplishments in academics and sports," said Earl Booker, whose wife and two of their five children are alumni of Carver High School. Their other children are graduates of Midland High School and Lee High School.

Officials to appoint Martin tax assessor

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

STANTON — The death of Martin County Tax Assessor-Collector Leona Louder has left commissioners in the position of appointing a replacement on Monday.

The appointee will serve until the November general election.

Ms. Louder, who had served in the position for eight years, was nominated as the Democratic candidate in the March primary. She died of cancer at 63.

"She was a fine person and a real contemporary thinker," Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport said. "She'll be missed."

The Republican party did not have a nominee.

Deavenport said his office had received four written applications for the job as of Wednesday.

"We're still taking them. We're hoping everyone interested in the job will have a chance to apply," Deavenport said. "Preferably, the person should have office management experience. That's the main requirement."

Martin County Clerk Virginia James said that the Democratic County Committee would have the duty of selecting a substitute nominee for the election. Write-in candidates have until 5 p.m., September 4, to file with the County Judge's office.

Deavenport said he had invited County Democratic Chairman Roger Burch to ask members of his committee to sit in on the appointment Monday morning.

Now is the time to confront the world's problems

If you are in the middle of a problem, it often is hard to work out of the maze and into a solution.

Ideally, you set yourself apart in a disinterestedly concerned fashion, ponder, outline your objectives, make your inquiries, reckon what is and what isn't, calculate the obstacles and the optimum and workable route to success, and get to work.

Think. Don't be anybody's lackey — not even that of the opinion-makers. Watch out for them, those purveyors of electronic and printed news, facts, opinion, analyses, investigations, and subjective reasoning. Critically read them, listen to them, watch their mannerisms.

Mostly, be aware of the politicians and their rhetoric. Don't forget their campaign promises. See if there is any resemblance between what they say and what they do.

Fact is, you can practice on yourself. It is an enlightening exercise — at least it has been on this fellow's home front. Utterances issue off of the mouth's babbling tongue. But those words suggesting action and change often are not always followed up by action and change. Most anybody who has written and posted a New Year's resolution may find that not all resolves are really resolves. Most turn out to be either conveniences or have-tos.

The will may succumb to the flesh, such as in yielding to the temptation of eating more fattening gourmet and fast foods, falling prey to lustful sensuality, courting laziness and slovenliness, heightening your degree of couch potato-ism, taking careless risks, allowing the self to assume that it is the alpha and the omega, inviting deceit into schemes, and casting aside restraint and discipline.

Think. It is not easy to make changes in your own life. It takes work, time, resources, resolve, and commitment to pursue a dream. It is easy to decide to do something, but doing it — the pursuit — is mettle's test.

So, the foibles and flaws that crop up in your own consciousness as you seek to effect changes in your own life likely are similar to the foibles and flaws in the lives of politicians. They may act like they are on stage and doing their vaudevillian routine to see how far their show will take them in their clever outrages and quests. Their finale is coming.

If you, in some measure, can identify with their failings, then, perhaps, you can impart a degree of compassion and understanding. All the while, you might be kind enough to give yourself some compassion and understanding.

That done, the next move is to give you and them some loving admonishment similar to that of the parent who chastises the child for misdeeds and omissions.

Rightfully, the parent expects the errant child to work on a turnaround. And if the parent has done wrong, the child is correct in expecting repentance and a do-right attitude on part of the parent.

Well, the world at large needs conversion to do-rightism.

There is no quarter for sympathy for the blatant violators of right. Forgive them, yes, but don't condone.

Right now and for many years, the beloved Earth and its wonders have been smitten with greed, carelessness, and indifference. Worldwide, special-interest groups, including peoples, countries and corporations, have served themselves only and have ignored the whole — the environment and its delicate balance.

Today, all of the world's people are in the middle of the multi-faceted problem. The Earth is weeping over the world's hungry children and its polluted oceans, waterways, soil and air. The Earth wails over depleted resources, dying forests, and the demise of increasingly rare species of flora and fauna.

Now is the time for the people to cry and to confront the problem and to act. The world has had its fill of rhetoric from college English and the corporate board rooms to judicial hearings and the United Nations' rostrum.

What the world needs today is people acting on compassion for the Earth and all of its inhabitants.

Services for W. Wayne Barnett are set for 1 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with John L. Estes Jr. of the University Church of Christ of Abilene officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Barnett died Monday at a local hospital.

He was born April 20, 1923, in Fort Worth, where he grew up and attended school. He graduated from Northside High School in 1939.

A U.S. Navy veteran, he was serving aboard the U.S.S. California in Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. He served until 1946.

He married Joyce L. Flowers on Oct. 17, 1947, in Waurika, Okla.

He attended the University of Oklahoma and received degrees in Bible and accounting from Abilene Christian College. He was a certified public accountant and practiced in Abilene and taught at McMurry College. He was an Abilene city councilman in the late 1960s and was a scoutmaster in the Chisholm Trail Council.

He moved to Midland and joined Ard Drilling Co. as comptroller. He retired in 1985.

He was a member of the North Midland Drive Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, Joyce Barnett of Midland; one son, Kent Barnett of Abilene; one daughter, Krys Barnett Poeske of Boerne; one brother, L.E. Barnett of Chico; one sister, Bernice McKinney of Fort Worth; and four grandchildren.

Memorials may be directed to the Members of Churches of Christ for Scouting, ACU Box 7618, Abilene, 79699 or to the American Heart Association.

Charles Underriner

MABANK — Services for former Midlander Charles F. Underriner Jr., 66, were May 20 at the First United Methodist Church of Mabank with the Rev. Royce Riley officiating. Burial followed in Oaklawn Cemetery under the direction of Eubank Funeral Home.

Underriner died May 18 at a Dallas hospital.

He was born Sept. 24, 1925, in San Antonio.

He was a 34-year employee of Mobil Oil Co. before retiring in 1984. He was an engineer and a member of the Register of Professional Engineers. He lived and worked in many areas before moving to the Cedar Creek community in Mabank in 1984.

He was a member of the First United Methodist Church of Mabank, the Cedar Creek Country Club and the Cedar Creek Rotary Club.

Survivors include his wife, Patsy Underriner of Mabank; two sons, Charles F. Underriner III and Dr. Kenneth E. Underriner, both of Kemp; three grandsons and two granddaughters.

Memorials may be directed to the First United Methodist Church of Mabank or the American Cancer Society.

War leaves exchange student homeless

HOUSTON (AP) — Exchange student Mirna Martinovic once looked forward to returning to Bosnia-Herzegovina to attend college, but the violence there has left her homeless and she faces the bleak prospect of becoming a war refugee if she goes back now.

Although she had watched the ethnic fighting in her country on television, nothing could prepare her for the telephone call she received earlier this week from her father.

There was nothing to come home to, he warned.

The family's apartment in the town of Mostar had been nearly destroyed by a bomb. Her sisters have fled to Zagreb, and her parents are living at the hospital where he is a surgeon and his wife is a nurse.

"He told me it's hell there, in Mostar, my city. It's hell," the 17-year-old senior said Wednesday.

"He told me, 'If you can, find something. If you can stay, stay,'" she said, nearly crying. "He said, 'You can't come home. It's not the same. If you come back, you'll go to Zagreb. You will be a refugee.'"

Last year, Miss Martinovic left what was then Yugoslavia to come to Houston. She is one of a handful of students from the former republic who are exchange students here this year.

Exchange student Goran Saradzic, 18, is from war-torn Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia-Herzegovina. His father lost his job as a mechanical engineer when his office was bombed, and he has been sleeping in a hallway since his apartment windows shattered.

His mother fled with her parents to Belgrade and is now a war refugee on the Serbian side. Saradzic's host family wants him to stay and continue high school here and he hopes to get his visa extended.

Miss Martinovic once had plans to return home and attend college, perhaps majoring in architecture or biochemistry.

Now, she is just concentrating on how she can stay away from her home. Her visa expires later this month, but she wants to get an extension.

"I'm going to stay at home now and think about what I should do," she said.

The fighting began in her country after Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29. Serb militants, who oppose secession, have won control of about two-thirds of Bosnia with the help of the Yugoslav army.

In Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia-Herzegovina, the medical crisis center estimated Tuesday that 5,700 people had been killed and 20,000 wounded since the fighting erupted.

Miss Martinovic would be eligible to apply for a student visa that would allow her to stay in the United States if she gets accepted to a college as a foreign student, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

The news from her father Tuesday was the second, and by far the most serious, controversy she has faced in the past week.

She graduated Saturday night from Memorial High School during a rowdy commencement ceremony that was cut short by the principal after a student handed the school official two condoms.

PESTS: Tick problem 'very bad,' Willis says

(From 1B)

Animals should be checked carefully for ticks, he said. Shrubbery can be trimmed and lawns kept short to help control them outdoors.

"Most people have seen the large, brown dog tick," Newman said. "Those are relatively easy to see. What they need to also be looking for is the smaller type."

"They're tiny and they can easily hide. They need to be pulled off with forceps or tweezers, never fingers."

Those small ticks can hide around pets' ears, under the throat and between the hind legs.

To avoid contamination, the Lyme Disease Foundation recommends washing hands and the tweezers after removing a tick, and placing the pest in alcohol or flushing it down the toilet.

To prevent mosquito breeding, old tires and bird baths should be drained. Flowerpots or large pet watering dishes need to be emptied and cleaned once a week.

"This way, you can keep them away from the house, which is most important," Newman said.

"So far, we haven't seen any significant upsurge in the diseases carried by these parasites," he said. "But we're going to be checking, keeping an ear to the ground. New Mexico I know has already had a problem."

Lyme disease, a chronic infection carried by some types of ticks, is not common in West Texas, Newman said. But this year, with the unusually large population, it could become a problem, he said.

The Lyme Disease Foundation reported 15 persons infected in Texas last year.

The symptoms, after a tick bite, include flu-like muscle aches, tiredness and swollen glands. Skin rashes and conjunctivitis (eye infection) are also common.

For information about Lyme Disease, the foundation hotline is 1-800-886-LYME.

Staff report

ODESSA — A 15-year-old girl, who is accused of firing a small gun at her father Wednesday night, has been charged with attempted murder, police said.

The father, whose name has not been released, was not struck by the bullet and no injuries were reported.

Police responded to the call at 9:45 p.m. They recovered the weapon, a .25-caliber automatic handgun, at the scene. No other information was available late Wednesday night.

Stabbing

A man was in fair condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center Wednesday night after a stabbing at the Zodiac Club, hospital officials said.

Marcus Brooks, age unknown, was admitted at 9:54 p.m., shortly after he was stabbed in the "upper body" area, officials said.

Police had not made any arrests by late Wednesday night.

first 12th-grade graduate of the school in 1945. The 12th grade was added to the teaching program there during the 1944-45 school year. For years, many Texas public schools only offered an 11-year teaching program.

"That's one thing I'm proud of — that diploma," Mrs. Booker said. She was the sole Carver High School senior in the 1945 class, when her husband was overseas during World War II.

When Mrs. Booker was in school, the entire school attended classes in a four-room brick building. The cafeteria then was a wooden structure.

In later years, as Carver expanded in students, teaching staff, and in its physical plant, the Carver High School "Hornets" football and basketball teams won championships.

In the mid-1960s, the Hornets won the Texas football championship under the coaching of Johnny Williams, a retired Midland educator.

"When Carver was open," said Bernice Ray, mother of Carver graduates, "it gave all the children a good foundation in living and learning."

Midland's Carver school opened in 1933 as a three-room brick building off President Street, now the 100 block of Carver Street, Ms. Ward said.

The first graduating class, a class of two, was in 1943.

As the school grew in students and stature, Carver developed "into one of the best schools in the state," Ms. Ward said.

She cited the school's "educating, community service, teaching, loving, caring, dedication, school pride and spirit" as contributing to its reputation.

"The staff cared," Ms. Ward said. "And students learned. There was no such thing or phase 'We-will-skip-that-because-you-can't-do-that' (attitude)."

Ex-priest pleads guilty to assault

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Catholic priest pleaded guilty Wednesday to sexually assaulting a child and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Fernando Noe Guzman, 41, of Houston, was charged with four counts of sexual assault of a child. The victim, who was 14 when the assaults occurred in 1984, was a member of the Navasota church where Guzman was assigned, Grimes County District Attorney

David Barron said.

Guzman waived his right to a jury trial, and Judge Erwin Ernst sentenced him to serve 10 years in prison. Guzman will be eligible for parole on shock probation in 90 days. He had faced up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Barron said he thought the settlement was fair and spared the victim, now 22, the trauma of appearing in court.

Guzman testified in a 1990 civil lawsuit that he and the teen-age girl had sex. The lawsuit was filed by a former church secretary, Debbie McCorvey, who claimed the priest had forced her into a sexual relationship. A civil jury did not find Guzman negligent as McCorvey's counselor nor deem Guzman guilty of assault in a $7 million lawsuit that was filed against the Galveston-Houston Catholic Diocese.

"I've learned so much since then," she said. "The first one was so bad, but the joy in doing it was great."

She doesn't copy traditional patterns, but employs her own creativity to make designs.

Her preferred method is applique, which involves sewing designs on a solid piece rather than piecing together smaller sections. Ms. Baimbridge quilts on a small lap frame.

"Reflection of Eagle" was created from her memory of an eagle design she saw in a magazine. It is an applique-type quilt designed with a group of multi-colored birds around a ring of small flowers.

"I found it in a copy of a 1961 Women's Day," she said. "It's my rendition of the picture."

Her quilt will hang at the Sacramento Radisson Hotel for the invitational show, which is expected to draw enthusiasts from throughout the country. But Ms. Baimbridge said she won't be traveling to see her creation on display.

"I'd like to, but I can't," she said.

With the local guild, Ms. Baimbridge attends regular quilting "bees" and participates in projects. This year the group has set up some challenges for its 150 members to create new designs with limited resources.

"Quilting is my pastime. I don't like to sit and do nothing," she said. "It's just a real joy for me."

DRESSES: Burglars break in to 2 apparel shops

(From 1B)

Street. The thieves were able to collect several dresses, blouses and other ladies apparel items before making successful getaways, police said.

"We're assuming they are taking advantage of the three to five minutes it takes the alarms to respond to a break-in and police to respond. They are getting in and out awfully quick," Morgan said.

Morgan believes the burglars are attracted to the expensive dresses because they are easily sold on the streets for a fraction of the original cost.

"It's likely they may go over to Odessa or neighboring towns and pawn them off over there," Morgan said.

Morgan said "smash-and-grab" burglaries are not the norm in Midland.

"Usually these sort of thefts are done in the manner of shoplifting. If they are going to break in after hours like this, it usually involves going through the roof or a similar manner," Morgan said. "I don't recall anything like the smash-and-grab in recent history."

On Monday and Tuesday, burglars also attempted to break in to Macheille's womens apparel at 2302 N. Big Spring St. by throwing rocks through the front window. Nothing was taken.

Vicki Bailey and Bobbie Huckaby, the owners of Julian Gold Inc. and Lucille's Dress Shop, respectively, both declined to discuss the burglaries in detail.

"I think this can only hurt the Realtors in Midland," Ms. Bailey said. "I don't think the public needs to know anything about this."

Ms. Bailey reported minimal damage and a "small amount" of merchandise was stolen.

Ms. Huckaby would only say that small items were taken from her store.

Treasure hunt to test pilot, navigator skills

Staff report

An aerial treasure hunt that will expand flying, navigational, and puzzle-solving skills will be launched on Saturday at Skywest Airport southwest of Midland.

Registration for the flying event will begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at the airport. The hunt is being sponsored by the Purple Sage Chapter of Ninety-Nines (99s), an international group of women pilots, according to Betty Jones of Odessa and Sabrehna Wyche of Midland.

The fee to join in the hunt is $20 per aircraft. At least two people, the pilot and a navigator-spotter, are required to be aboard each aircraft in the hunt.

"You fly around — looking for treasures that will answer questions," Ms. Wyche said. The aircrew that correctly answers the most questions will win.

Pilots and navigators interested in joining in the hunt may telephone Ms. Jones in Odessa at 332-8959 or Ms. Wyche in Midland at 684-6200 or may show up at the airport in time for registration, briefing, and takeoff.

Clinton to give speech at state convention

AUSTIN (AP) — Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, who clinched the Democratic presidential nomination with victories in six state primaries Tuesday, plans to deliver a speech to the Texas Democratic state convention this week, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says.

Mauro said Wednesday that Clinton intends to address Texas Democrats at the Houston convention because he knows the state's importance in the fall election.

"We're the biggest state convention. And we still have 69 (national convention) delegates at stake," said Mauro, Clinton's Texas campaign chairman.

"He wants to come to the city where George Bush has a hotel room and to the state Ross Perot calls home," Mauro said.

President Bush, an adopted Texan, earlier locked up the GOP nomination and Perot is readying an independent presidential bid.

State Democratic Party officials had tentatively scheduled Clinton to speak to the convention Friday night. Mauro said he wasn't certain just when the Arkansas governor would appear. The convention runs through Saturday.

Clinton won the Texas primary on March 10 and earned 94 of the 127 national convention delegates at stake that night. Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas got 31 and former California Gov. Jerry Brown received two.

But another 69 will be apportioned at the state convention, and Mauro said Clinton forces have been working to win the largest share.

Court halts Granviel's execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court halted the scheduled execution of convicted killer Kenneth Granviel late Wednesday, about six hours before he was to have been given lethal injection for the 1974 slaying of a 2-year-old Fort Worth girl.

Attorneys for Granviel contended their client was mentally incompetent and insane and should not be executed for the slaying, one of seven people Granviel has confessed to murdering.

Granviel, 41, had faced lethal injection before dawn today for fatally stabbing Natasha McClendon nearly 18 years ago.

In the writ ruled on by the Supreme Court, Granviel's attorneys said the competency hearing to determine whether he could stand trial was unfair.

The Supreme Court, which is considering the same issue in another case involving a California claim, agreed to consider a request to hear Granviel's appeal.

"That will be dealt with in the normal course of business," court spokeswoman Toni House said.

No vote was noted in the court's decision, although the lack of a dissent indicated the ruling was unanimous.

"Granviel is a really seriously mentally ill person and all his claims have really highlighted that," Mandy Welch, one of his attorneys, said. "We're glad that the court has shown some concern for that."

Lawyers also had filed a 45-page petition with a federal court in Fort Worth contending Granviel was insane and led a "lifetime of trauma" due to paranoid schizophrenia. They also argued jurors were not allowed to consider Granviel's mental problems before they sentenced him to death.

Those claims remained unresolved before the district court.

State attorneys had sent a psychiatrist to Granviel's prison cell Wednesday to examine him and believed the former machinist would not be disqualified from execution. Prosecutors long have contended Granviel was competent.

Granviel would have been the ninth convicted killer executed in Texas this year and the 51st since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982. The totals are by far the highest in the nation.

The 2-year-old girl was one of five people, all members of the same family, killed Oct. 7, 1974, at a Fort Worth apartment. Each had been tied up and gagged by Granviel, who was a family friend, and then stabbed with a butcher knife.

Granviel said he killed the girl "because she started hollering and somebody was beating on the front door." He claimed uncontrollable sexual urges prompted the rape-murder spree.

Granviel surrendered to police on Feb. 8, 1975, after raping a woman and abducting another and holding several people hostage at a Fort Worth house. He later admitted to killing two female friends who had been raped and stabbed with a knife. Granviel led police to their bodies.

Granviel originally was scheduled to become the state's first prisoner to be executed by injection in September 1977. His execution date, however, was stayed as defense attorneys challenged the constitutionality of the then-new execution method.

Perot supported death penalty as potential juror

HOUSTON (AP) — Unofficial presidential candidate Ross Perot may be hedging on his formal political positions, but he was an outspoken supporter of the death penalty and a critic of the criminal justice system when he was a potential juror four years ago, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Perot was on a jury panel when he backed the death penalty, denounced the criminal justice system as "ineffective," called psychiatry "close to faith healing" and labeled Dallas "the crime capital of the United States," the Houston Chronicle reported.

The Dallas billionaire was not selected to serve on the jury for the capital murder trial of Cornelius Allen Goss, who was convicted in Dallas and sent to Texas' death row.

During voir dire as a potential juror, Perot had been asked about the death penalty. "I believe it is a deterrent to criminal acts," he told attorneys.

"I haven't broken it down that fine, but certainly when he takes another person's life, I certainly would very easily put that in the death penalty category," he said.

In Texas, the maximum penalty for murder is life in prison. Capital murder punishment is reserved for special circumstances, such as the murder of a police officer or a murder committed in the course of another crime, such as a robbery or rape.

Referring to a homicide in his upscale north Dallas neighborhood, Perot testified, "I'm in a very unique position here, because I have high security problems, personally. And so, you know, it is not something that I look at objectively at a great distance. It is something I live with every day of my life."

He said he only had a hazy recollection of the crime that led to the Goss' trial.

"I'm sure I read (the details) at the time, but we have so many murders in Dallas," Perot said. "We're the crime capital of the United States, you know."

FBI surveys ranked Dallas as third in the country in 1988 and 1989 among large cities for crimes per capita.

Perot expressed skepticism about psychotherapy and the opinions of psychiatric experts after lawyers raised the possibility that psychiatrists would testify in the death penalty case.

"I'd figure it was something I had to listen to, but ... you know, it is just as close to faith healing, as far as I'm concerned, so I don't put a lot of stock in it," he said.

He said he regards psychiatry as "a soft science ... so I don't place much credibility in psychiatric testimony or psychiatrist's treatment."

"I may be wrong. I am just a layman, but that is where I come from."

A judge prodded Perot to explain his doubts about the criminal justice system.

"I feel that if you look at the record, you look at the violence in our society, you look at the criminals who are back on the street while the policemen are still filling out the paperwork, then it is almost as if it is convoluted," he said.

"And instead of the primary emphasis being on looking at the law-abiding citizens, the primary emphasis has become looking after the criminals, and that is the problem in our criminal justice system," he said.

Jim Squires, a Perot spokesman in Dallas, did not immediately return a telephone call Wednesday from The Associated Press to comment about the report.

Council OKs $635,000 for woman's family in wrongful death case

HOUSTON (AP) — The City Council on Wednesday unanimously approved a settlement for the family of a woman shot to death by an off-duty policeman, but only after one member chastised the city attorney for likening the situation to the Los Angeles riots.

The family of Ida Lee Delaney will receive a $635,000 settlement from the city. She was shot to death Oct. 31, 1989, after a freeway dispute with three off-duty police officers.

Ms. Delaney, who was black, and one officer, Alex Gonzales, who was Hispanic, traded gunfire after she stopped for help on the side of the road. Gonzales, who was legally drunk at the time, later was convicted of voluntary manslaughter. He is appealing a seven-year sentence.

Ms. Delaney's family had sought $4 million in damages from the city and the three officers for her wrongful death.

The city on Friday reached a tentative compromise with Ms. Delaney's survivors that would pay the same amount awarded by a federal jury in a wrongful death lawsuit last fall.

U.S. District Judge Kenneth M. Hoyt in January had declared inadequate a $15,000 award in compensation for deprivation of Ms. Delaney's civil rights and ordered a new trial on the damages.

Originally, the city had planned to appeal the jury's verdict. But in his letter to council members Monday, City Attorney Benjamin Hall III advised them to settle.

On Tuesday, council member John Goodner chided Hall for linking Ms. Delaney's slaying with the Los Angeles riots in a letter to council members about the settlement.

"During a retrial of this litigation, there is the real prospect that damage assessments against the city would be considerably more, especially in light of recent developments in Los Angeles," wrote Hall, who is black.

"I think that because of what happened in Los Angeles got a lot of attention, a lot of people are real sensitive to make sure the justice system does actually work in all cases," he said.

But Goodner, who is white, was angered by the comments. "I don't like to think that this country is going to be ruled forever by what happened in Los Angeles." One injustice, he said, "led to almost the destruction of a whole part of that city."

Hall responded he was referring to damage valuations.

"I feared that persons may come to court with that attitude and want to assess exorbitant damages to address what might be some ill feelings about the Los Angeles situation," Hall said.

Activists oppose reports on HIV carriers' names

AUSTIN (AP) — AIDS activists are criticizing an effort by the Texas Health Department to get private medical labs to report names of clients who test positive for the AIDS virus.

Activists said they fear the change would scare some people away from testing, while those who do get tested would give phony names to keep from being identified.

Christi Reed, head of the state AIDS program, said Tuesday that the move is an attempt to more accurately track new infection with the human immunodeficiency virus, while eliminating duplicate reports.

Federal officials allocate AIDS funding to states with the highest numbers of reported AIDS and HIV cases, she said.

But Texas physicians are reluctant to report such cases, and most statistics come from hospitals only after patients are extremely sick.

The health department long has kept the names of people with AIDS in confidential files but has never sought the names of people who carry the human immunodeficiency virus, she said.

The rules would require private laboratories, including those in hospitals, to report the client's name, date of birth, race or ethnicity, sex, county of residence and date tested, as well as the name and address of the referring physician or counseling and testing organization. All the information would be kept confidential.

The proposal also would allow public labs run by state and city health departments to omit names, as long as they use a standard form issued by the federal Centers for Disease Control designed to prevent duplications.

Officials say the proposal would eliminate requirements that physicians, hospitals and community-based organizations report HIV infections.

The current system that requires no names and little information about those who test positive is inefficient, Ms. Reed said, because it relies on physicians to fill out the forms. In most instances, she said, they don't do it.

In other cases, people seek more than one HIV test. The results of all the tests get reported, resulting in duplications.

Ms. Reed said that makes the numbers of HIV infections reported to the state health department meaningless.

Public labs are excluded from the names reporting requirement because the forms they use ask if a client has had a positive HIV test in the past, she said. That eliminates the duplication.

Publicly funded laboratories will continue to offer anonymous testing to people who fear that they will be stigmatized by an HIV test, she said.

Brian Bradley, a member of the Greater Houston AIDS Alliance board and a local AIDS and gay activist, said he has received many telephone calls from people with HIV who have kept their conditions secret because they fear losing their jobs and their health insurance.

Scientists rig sea lions to reveal deep secrets

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (NYT) — California sea lions are mighty poor divers compared with their massive cousins, the elephant seals, but right now four of the smaller, sleeker animals are in training for a series of unique diving missions into the open ocean.

Wearing comfortable harnesses and carrying underwater instruments that measure their heartbeats, their swimming speeds and the depths of their descents into Monterey Bay, the sea lions will reveal details of their lives and physiology that scientists have never truly understood before.

In studies that will send the animals even farther out to sea, they will carry television cameras as they swim and dive alongside families of migrating grey whales to record the whales' behavior with an intimacy of detail no human could possibly capture.

For Jennifer Zeligs, who is training the mammals at the University of California's Long Marine Laboratory in Santa Cruz, the research project is part of a continuing effort to broaden human insights into the "miraculous adaptations," as she calls them, that enable all living species to survive and reproduce in their differing environmental niches.

While Zeligs and Daniel P. Costa at UC Santa Cruz are studying the diving physiology of the sea lions, James Harvey of San Jose State University is planning their whale-tracking missions at the nearby Moss Landing Marine Laboratory.

Eventually the sea lions will be living at Moss Landing, where large open-ocean pens will be built for their near-shore work. Harvey's mission, however, will free the animals to swim slowly alongside the gray whales twice a year — in the early winter as they migrate from Alaska to bear their calves in the warm inlets of Baja California, and again in the spring as they swim back north with their newborn young.

His lightweight, seagoing video camcorders are being designed now, and Zeligs will train the sea lions to carry them securely affixed to the harnesses and programmed to take the pictures as the whales swim and dive to forage for food. The results should make for unique underwater footage, Harvey says.

Right now, Zeligs is working with her four animals — Beaver and Hoover, about 12 years old, and Sake and Sushi, who are only 3 — in a tank at the Long Laboratory and in the open water of Santa Cruz harbor just offshore.

Their training is complex but not difficult, Zeligs says, because even though they eat their fill every day, every extra bit of fish, or a few moments of game-playing with her in the water, or even a bit of affectionate stroking serve as ample rewards for jobs well done.

The California sea lions (Zalophus californianus) that Zeligs trains are found as far south as the Galapagos Islands and as far west as Japan. They can dive for nine or 10 minutes at most, Zeligs said, and rarely dive more deeply than 500 feet.

Elephant seals, on the other hand, can reach depths of 3,000 feet and can stay below for 90 minutes or more, according to researchers studying their physiology.

The diving missions of the four sea lions at the Long Laboratory actually simulate the way the animals dive when they forage for food in the wild, and that is why the measurements are so important.

Scientists use crab shells for toxic cleanups

N.Y. Times News Service

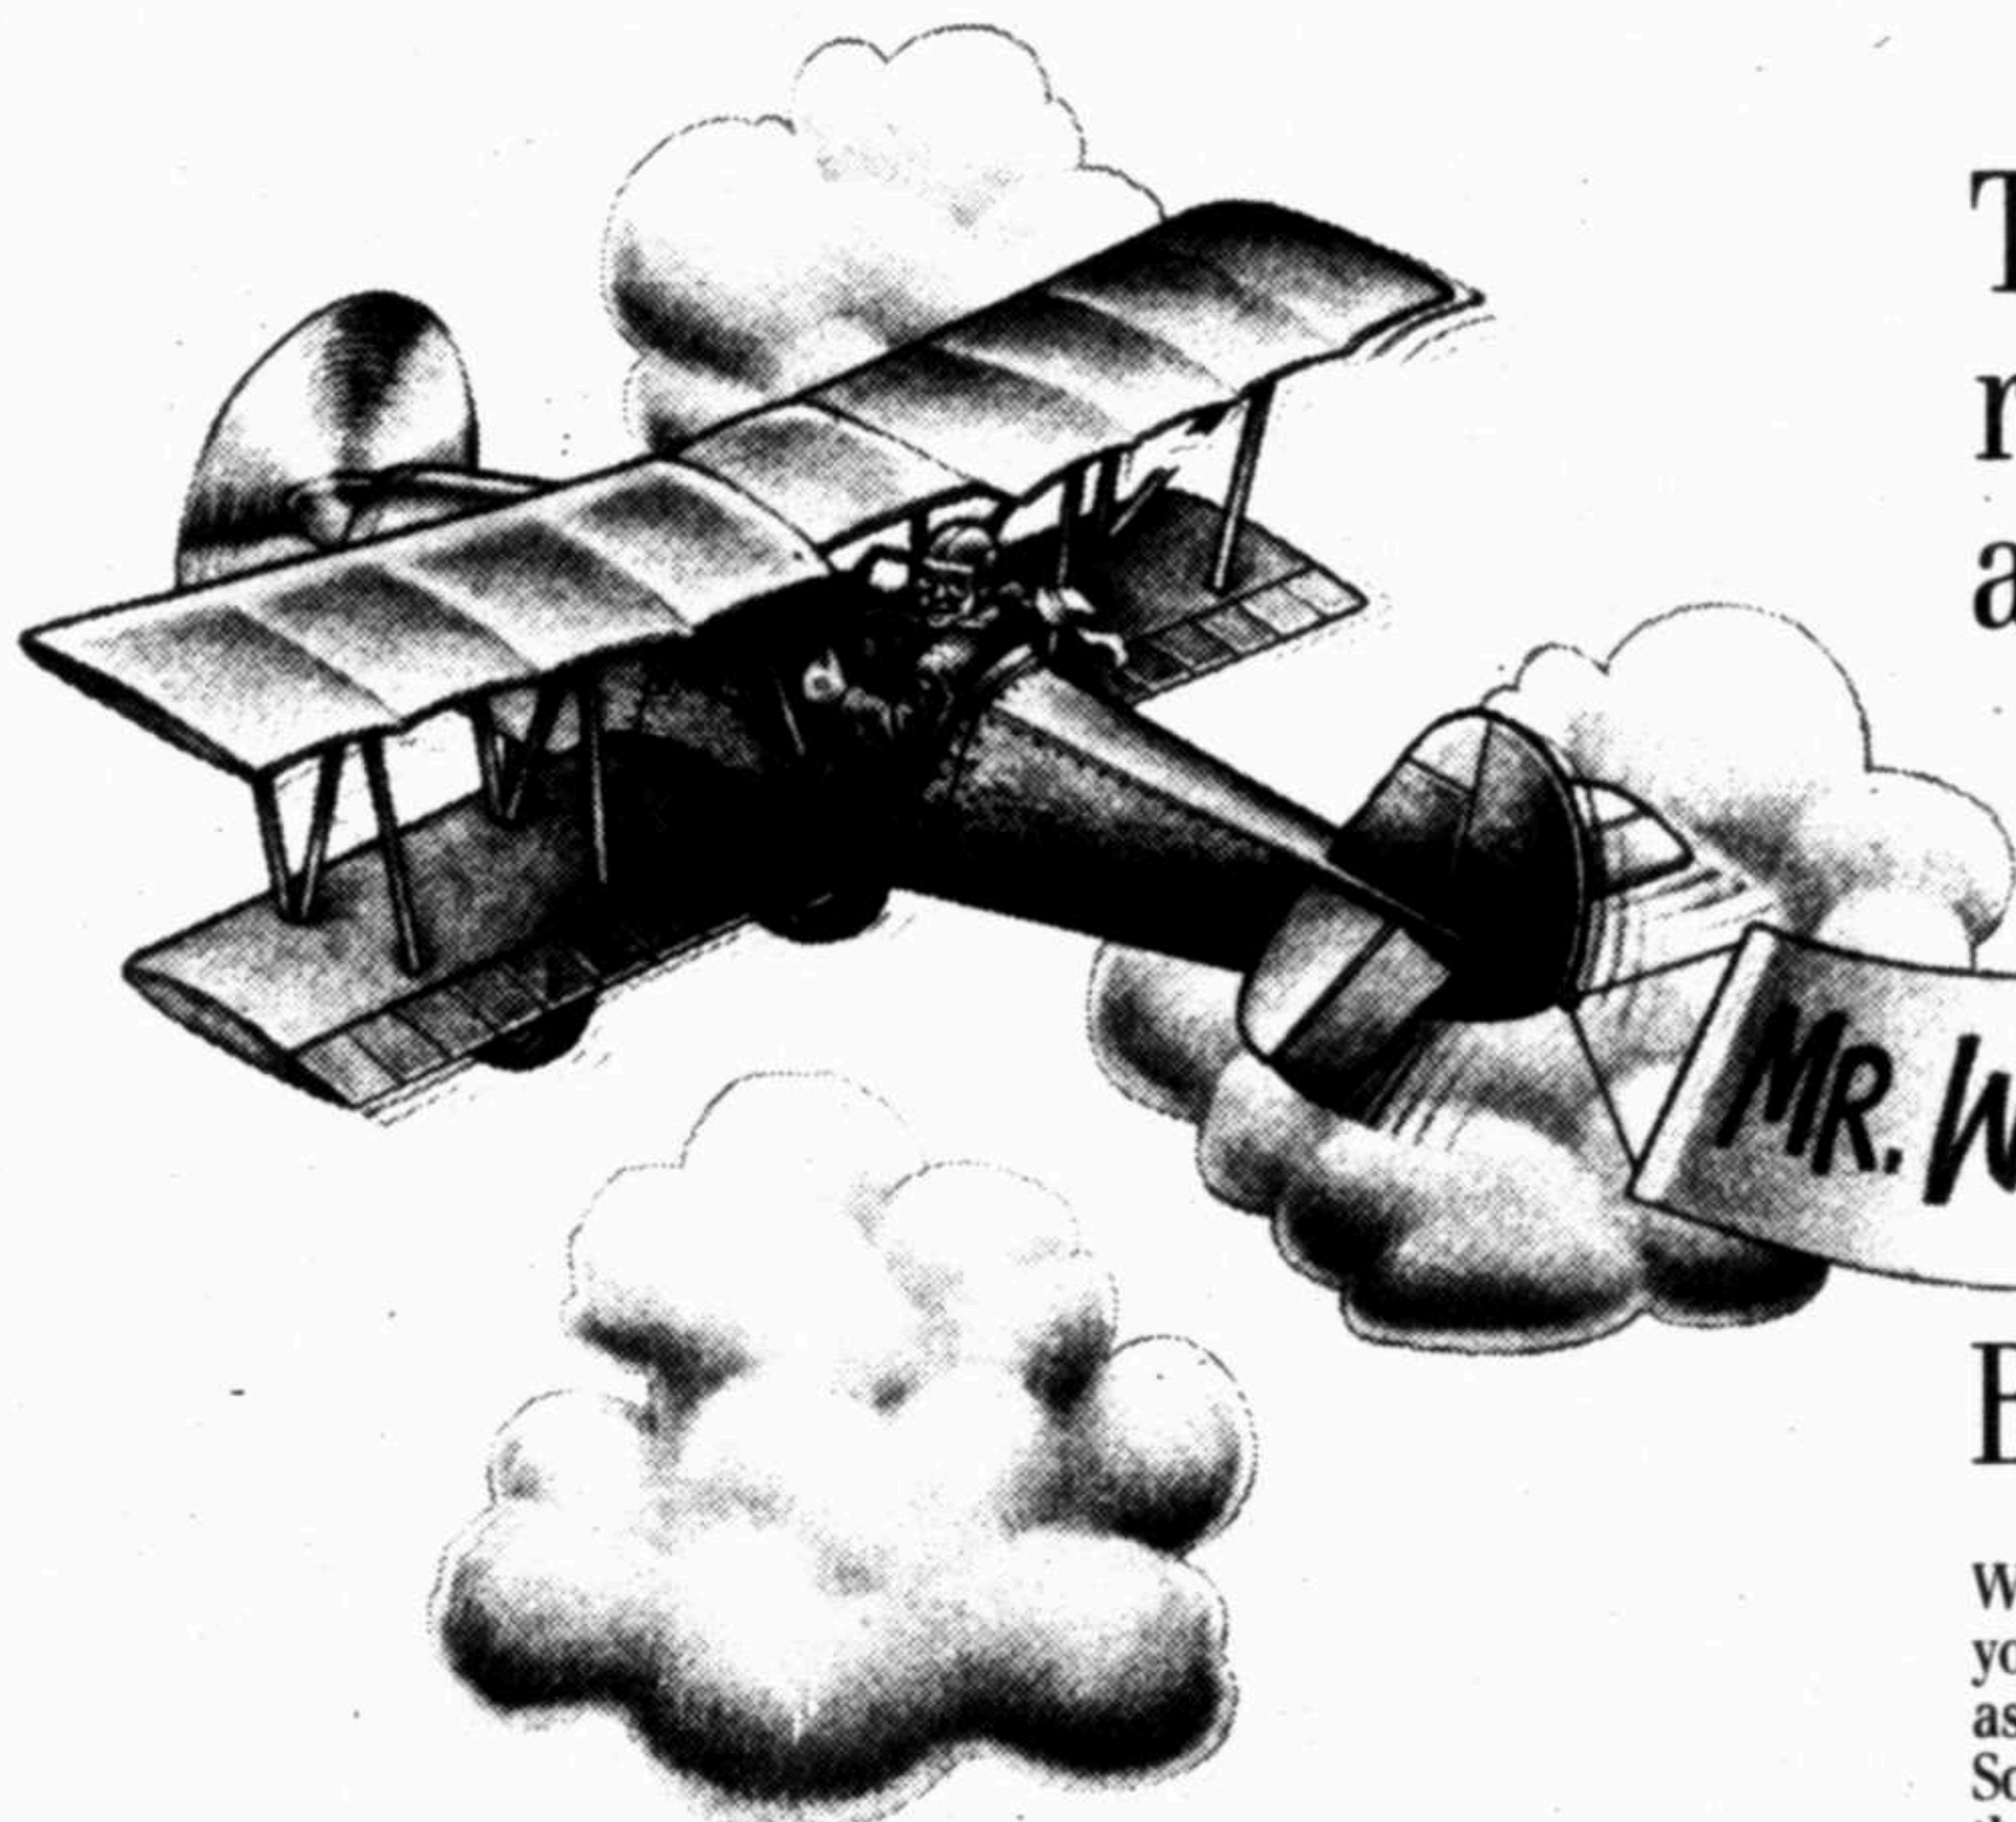

Scientists have found a way to use old crab shells to clean up toxic waste efficiently and inexpensively.

Researchers at Oregon State University have devised a method for making tiny magnetized beads out of a derivative of chitin, the hard, flaky material that forms a crab or lobster's shell. The "chitosan" beads are very porous and specifically soak up heavy metals, a common toxin in contaminated water.

The standard process for cleaning ground water contaminated by heavy metals like chromium, zinc or those used in nuclear fuels, is complicated and expensive. The water must be pumped to the surface, cleaned of contaminants like dirt and then treated in a six-step process that turns the deadly water into a much smaller volume of toxic sludge, which must somehow be disposed of.

Dr. Gregory Rorrer, an assistant professor of chemical engineering at Oregon State University, said the beads that he and a colleague, Dr. J. Douglas Way, had developed could simply be tossed into the contaminated water source to collect the heavy metals. The beads can be easily retrieved with a magnet and can also be treated to release the heavy metals. The only thing left is clean beads and resalable heavy metal, and not a drop of toxic waste.

With current technology, cleaning up heavy-metal toxic wastes will be an expensive task. "Depending on whose estimate you quote, it ranges from the billions to tens of billions or even hundreds of billions of dollars," Rorrer said.

There are more creative ways to reach customers in nearby towns and counties than a 1+SAVER Plan.

But not better.

When you run your own business, you look for ways to keep costs as low as possible. That's why Southwestern Bell Telephone offers the 1+SAVER™ Long Distance Calling Plan for small businesses.

With a 1+SAVER Calling Plan, you can save up to 20% off one-plus, direct-dial long distance calls placed with Southwestern Bell. In fact, it's one of the best ways to save on these calls. (And airplane banners can get pretty expensive.)

A 1+SAVER Calling Plan gives you a choice of three savings options to best suit your business needs.

For $5.00 a month, you get a 10% discount on these calls. For $8.00 a month, a 15% discount. And for $20.00 a month, a 20% discount. These discounts are good any time, any day. And these savings are in addition to any evening, night, and weekend calling period discounts.

A 1+SAVER Long Distance Calling Plan: It's a way to reach more customers so your small business can soar. And it's only one of the ways Southwestern Bell can help you use your business connections. For help in determining which 1+SAVER Plan is best for you, call us today at 1-800-255-SWBT, ext. 435.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A long-term relationship greatly influences the choices you make now. A new job in early fall will include training or research that could increase your earning potential. Focus on making friends in November. A family gathering during the holiday season leads to a reconciliation. Purchase luxury items early in 1993. A raise or promotion is likely in March. An important partnership decision leads to increased financial and emotional security.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: rock star El DeBarge, actor Bruce Dern, journalist Bettina Gregory, tennis star Andrea Jaeger.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Negotiations with those at a distance are favored; financial aid is offered. Lady Luck is on your side in the business arena. Advantageous alliances can be formed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is imperative that you do your homework and harness the power of the press. If necessary, hire experts to promote your efforts in a favorable light.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The day highlights problem-solving. Your duties are made lighter by an offer of assistance. Refuse to be exploited by a smooth talker. Dress conservatively to make a good impression.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for making long-range decisions. Review your finances. A fortuitous meeting reveals unsuspected opportunities. Go that extra mile to impress people in authority.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Obtain several bids if making home improvements and get everything in writing. Paying bills on time preserves your credit rating. A phone call or message boosts your spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Haste makes waste today. Take things nice and easy. Use the indirect approach when asking for a favor. New doors open to you tonight. You feel flattered and just a bit nervous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A day when you might have to haggle over terms or figure out who is right and wrong. Once the dust settles, you could be holding a trump card. Use your power judiciously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will hit your stride when doing something healthy and productive today. An understanding companion makes you feel great. A cottage industry could be the perfect solution.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even your friends could lead you astray now. Flying solo safeguards your interests. Follow the beat of your own drummer. Recycling an old project leads to new profits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Favorable conditions prevail at work. Strike while the iron is hot. Romantic hopes are revived by a brief conversation or encounter. Deal with emotional undercurrents as diplomatically as possible. Avoid discussing old grievances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are in an excellent position where employment activities are concerned. Be more communicative with people who can help you. Dress to impress if you are in the public eye.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Guard against a tendency to act rebellious or behave unconventionally. It is important to fit in with those who can advance your career. Look for ways to increase the passion in your life.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are intellectual, competitive and eager to explore fresh horizons. They want to follow their own star and will only excel at those subjects that interest them. Scientific fields hold special appeal for these inquisitive Geminis. Hurdles and setbacks only make these children more determined to succeed. Often fickle in romance, these Geminis show little interest in marriage until they reach their late 30s. They make devoted but somewhat permissive parents.

Only players with a death wish would consider playing to the first trick before developing a strategy for the entire campaign. Here's a typical example, adapted from a hand that cropped up many years ago in a world championship match between Italy and the U.S.

Suppose you reach three no trump on a natural auction such as the above. West leads the seven of spades, you play low from dummy and East contributes the eight. You win. Now what?

The sensible thing would be to knock out the diamond ace, refuse the club finesse and concede down one. You blew the contract by postponing your planning until after you had played from dummy to the first trick! You can't make nine tricks without getting one extra trick in clubs, and as soon as West gains the lead, a spade through the table's Q 10 gives the defenders more than enough tricks to defeat you.

Now let's see what would happen if you were to play the queen of spades from dummy on the opening lead. The best East can do is win the ace of spades and shift to a club. Since a finesse could lead to defeat, you rise with the ace of clubs and lead the king of diamonds. If that holds, you can revert to clubs and are guaranteed nine tricks. Should East win the diamond, no return can harm you.

Is this a sure-trick line? No. You will go down to defeat if a diabolic East shifted to a club away from the king and West holds the ace of diamonds. But on any other lie of the cards at least nine tricks are in the bank.

HSE wants 5A

AUSTIN (AP) — Home Sports Entertainment asked Wednesday that it be allowed to televise Class 5A high school championship games in football, basketball, baseball and track and field.

HSE's proposal would allow it to produce the football championship games of both the big school and small school divisions of Class 5A.

The proposal was one of several made to the University Interscholastic League's six-member Legislative Council Standing Committee on Athletics.

It's the first step in a process to add or change current UIL rules and policy. Proposals receiving a favorable recommendation of the committee will be forwarded to the 24-member Legislative Council, which meets each October.

Other proposals:

— Five proposals were made concerning the recommended addition of girls softball, including postseason playoffs to a state championship. Currently, 169 high schools field a girls softball team without any postseason activity.

— Texas State Network (TSN), based in Dallas, proposed producing radio broadcasts of the Class 5A football playoffs starting at the regional round for Division I and II, the boys and girls state basketball tournament, and the state baseball tournament.

— Several presentations were made to lessen a new UIL rule of automatic penalty for an ejected coach. Under the policy, enacted last year, an ejected coach is subject to public reprimand and one-year probation.

Jordan lights up Blazers

■ Michael Jordan scores 35 points in the first half to lead the Chicago Bulls to a blistering 122-89 victory over Portland in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

By Bill Barnard

AP Basketball Writer

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan usually can do whatever he chooses on a basketball court. In Game 1 of the NBA Finals, he chose to be an outside shooter and it killed the Portland Trail Blazers.

Jordan scored a Finals record 35 of his 39 points in the first half and set another record with six 3-pointers in the first two quarters of the Chicago Bulls' 122-89 victory over Portland on Wednesday night.

Jordan, who was just 27 for 100 from 3-point range in the regular season and 5 for 16 in the playoffs, made a shambles of the ballyhooed individual battle with Clyde Drexler, who scored 16 points for the Trail Blazers.

"I was in a zone," Jordan said. "The 3s felt like free throws. I took them and they went in."

The Jordan explosion put the Bulls up 1-0 as they opened defense of their first NBA championship. Game 2 is scheduled for Chicago on Friday night.

The largest margin of victory in the Finals was Washington's 117-82 win over Seattle on June 4, 1978.

On the eve of the Finals, Jordan compared himself to Drexler, saying the Portland Olympian is a better 3-point shooter "than I choose to be."

Jordan then hit 6 of 9 3-point attempts in the first half, lifting the Bulls to a 66-51 lead.

The 35 points broke Elgin Baylor's 30-year-old Finals halftime record of 33, and the six 3-pointers eclipsed the first-half record of four shared by Michael Cooper, Danny Ainge and Isiah Thomas. Jordan now shares the record for a game with Cooper and Bill Laimbeer.

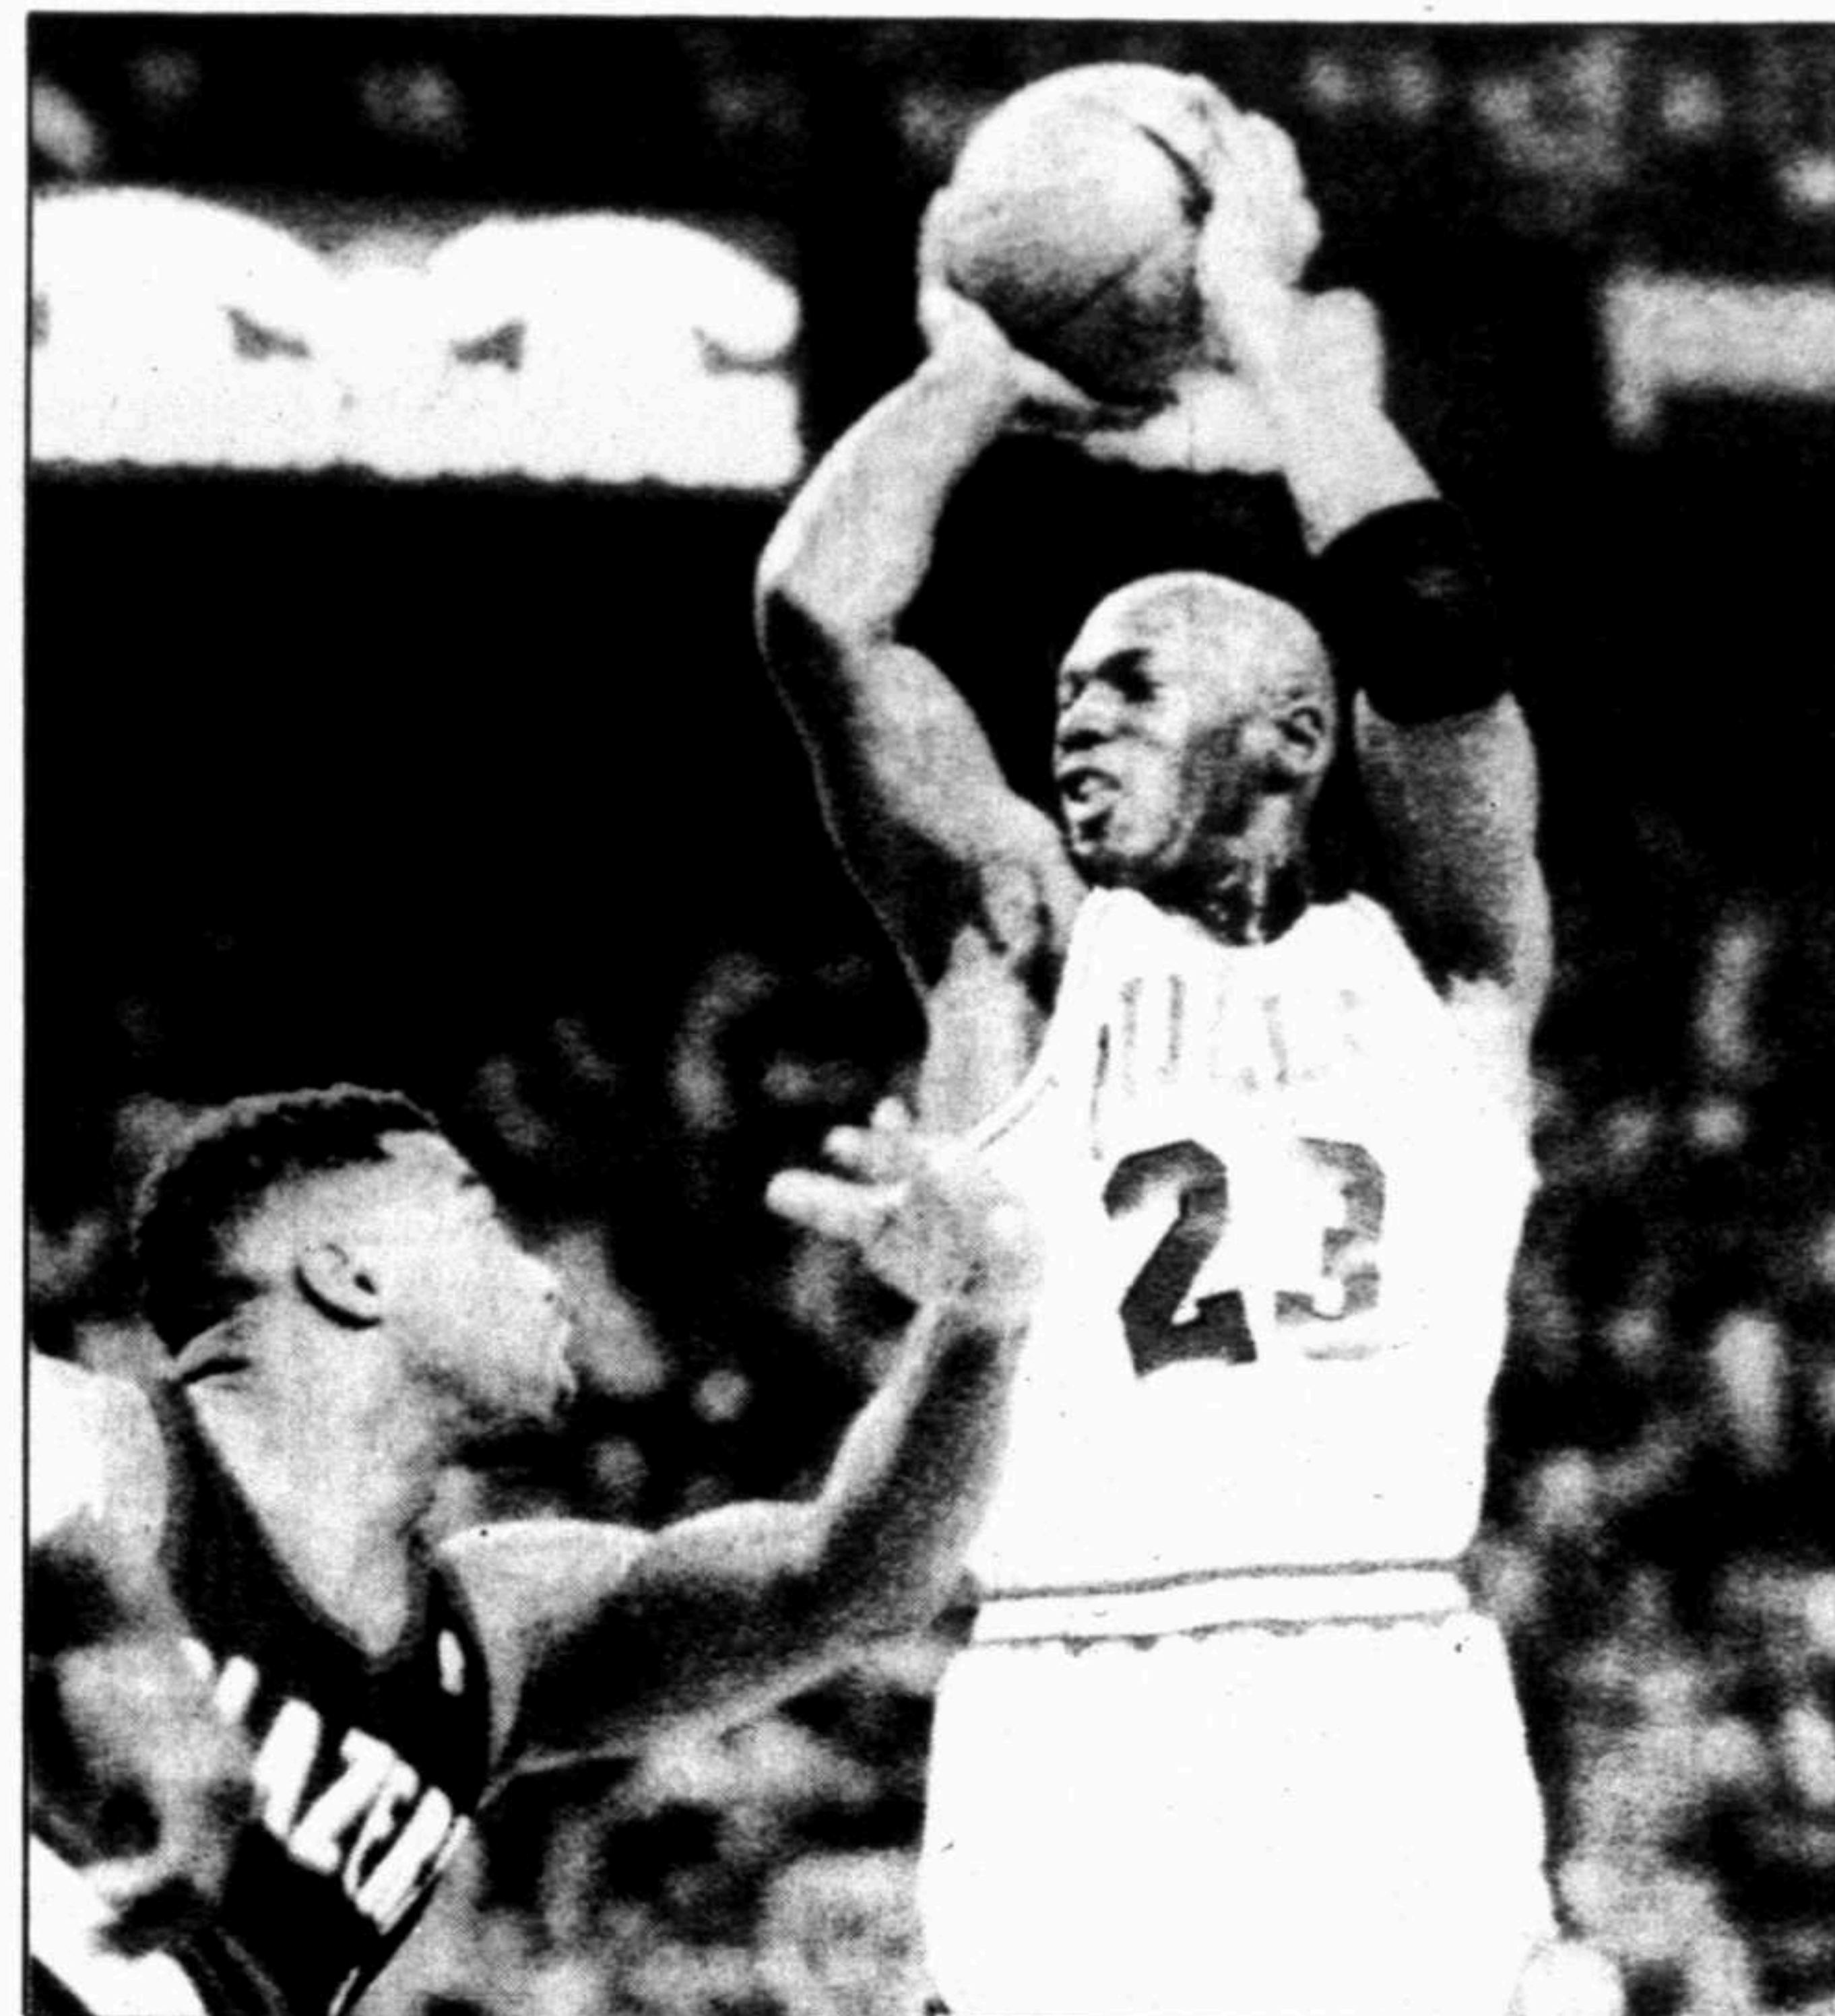

Any hope that the Trail Blazers might rally in the second half ended early when Jordan's jumper capped a 15-2 spurt at the start of the third period. That gave the Bulls an 81-53 lead that Portland never threatened as Chicago continued to ride the wave of emotion raised by Jordan in the first half.

"This was one game, one game doesn't make the Finals," Jordan said. "We have three games out there."

Jordan left the game with 3:04 left in the third quarter after missing his only 3-point attempt of the third quarter, then returned briefly in the fourth period.

Chicago, hoping to become the third team in six years to win consecutive titles, has now won five straight games in the Finals. They lost the championship series opener to the Los Angeles Lakers in 1991, then won four straight for its first NBA title.

While the 1991 playoffs were a breeze for the Bulls with 15 victories in 17 games, they lost five times in the first three rounds this year. But if Chicago can win Game 2, they will eliminate any chance for the Blazers to take away the NBA title in Portland.

Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls shoots over Portland's Mark Bryant.

Courier to meet Agassi

■ The French Open will feature an All-American flavor in one half of the semifinals.

By David Crary

Associated Press Writer

PARIS — Defending champion Jim Courier survived his first tough match of the French Open Wednesday, overcoming Goran Ivanisevic, 6-2, 6-1, 2-6, 7-5 to set up a semifinal showdown with Andre Agassi.

Agassi, who lost to Courier in last year's final, powered past struggling Pete Sampras on a rain-dampened court to reach the semifinals for the third straight year.

Sampras became discouraged by a loss in a first-set tiebreak, and Agassi breezed to a 7-6 (8-6), 6-2, 6-1 victory in just under two hours. Agassi won the last six games of the third set, which took only 28 minutes.

Henri Leconte of France, on the brink of elimination, rallied past Sweden's Nicklas Kulti 6-7, (10-8), 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 to gain one of the other semifinal berths.

A former top ranked player who has fallen to 200th after back surgery last year, Leconte had not dropped a set in his first four matches and appeared doomed by Kulti's quick start. But at the first signs of a comeback, the center court crowd began a cas-

'Horns have another shot at Pepperdine

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The big-hitting Texas Longhorns get a second chance to solve Pepperdine's pitching prowess tonight.

Fourth-ranked Texas takes a 48-16 mark against the third-ranked Waves, who shut out the Longhorns 7-0 Monday night.

Meanwhile, Cal State-Fullerton stayed alive in the College World Series by scoring five first-inning runs and hanging on to beat No. 1 Miami 7-5 Wednesday.

The Titans (45-16) battered starter Jose Prado (4-2) for four hits and five runs in the first inning. Phil Nevin, the No. 1 overall pick in Monday's major-league draft, hit a two-run homer in the second for a 7-0 lead as Cal State-Fullerton broke a five-game winning streak for Miami (55-9).

Texas (48-16) bounced back to eliminate Oklahoma, 8-5, its fifth victory in as many games with the Sooners this season.

Pepperdine (46-11-1) shut out Wichita State 6-0 in its opener, and is the first College World Series participant since 1972 to have two-straight shutouts.

The Waves, making only their second CWS appearance, have won 28 of their last 31 games and have pitched 29 consecutive scoreless innings in their last four playoff matchups.

Against the Waves Monday night, Texas suffered its first shutout in its last 81 games and its first CWS shutout in 52 games, dating back to 1972.

The Waves' Derek Wallace and Steve Montgomery scattered eight Texas hits.

Catcher Hoiles takes Orioles at their word

BALTIMORE (AP) — When the Baltimore Orioles told Chris Hoiles he would be their catcher, no one expected him to take it literally.

Hoiles missed just four of the Orioles' first 50 games this season. He's not merely showing up, either. His batting average has been near .300 for most of the season and he leads American League catchers in a half-dozen offensive categories.

Maybe it's just a matter of making up for lost time. After four years in the minors, Hoiles got into 23 Oriole games in 1990 and then shared time last year with Bob Melvin.

When Baltimore traded Melvin to Kansas City, Hoiles finally claimed the Orioles' catching. No longer did his playing time depend on what arm the opposing pitcher threw with, or whether he went a day or two without getting on base.

"Psychologically that helps me out a lot, knowing when I'm coming to the park that I'm going to be in there," he said. "I know that I don't have to go 4 for 4 or hit a home run to be in the lineup the next day. But I've been doing well, mainly because I'm in there every day and seeing a lot of pitches." There have been times when Hoiles catches nine innings of a night game, then does it all over again the following day. Sometimes he might punctuate that activity by spending an hour or two lifting weights or riding on a stationary bicycle. His philosophy is simple: the harder he works, the better he feels.

"During the course of the season the bat starts to feel a little heavy," he said. "Even the glove starts to feel a little heavy. But with all the weight-training I've been doing, I feel as if I've been getting stronger instead of going in the opposite direction."

Hoiles is on a pace to play about 150 games this season, although Baltimore manager Johnny Oates said he will begin to give his catcher a few more breaks during July and August.

"I don't know if anyone's concerned about Chris getting too tired," Oates said. "We've had enough scheduled off days thus far this season so that he's gotten some rest without having to miss any games."

"He's got the ability to call a game, block balls in the dirt and take command of the situation," Rick Sutcliffe said. "If there's a better catcher in the league, I don't know who he is."

Baltimore Orioles' catcher Chris Hoiles prepares to take the field against the California Angels Wednesday afternoon.

Bagwell dinger gives Astros another win

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rafael Ramirez capped a four-run first inning with a run-scoring single and Jeff Bagwell hit a 408-foot home run to lead the Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over the Montreal Expos on Wednesday night.

Pete Harnisch (3-5) pitched the first five innings and earned his first victory since May 1. He allowed three runs, including solo home runs by Moises Alou and Archi Cianfrocco, and five hits while striking out four and walking four.

Bagwell extended his hitting

streak to eight games with his seventh home run of the season. The fifth-inning shot was his first homer since May 19.

Pirates 6, Dodgers 5
PITTSBURGH — Jeff King drove in three runs with a pair of singles as rebounding Pittsburgh withstood Dave Anderson's two-run pinch homer and beat Los Angeles.

Pittsburgh won for the second time in the three-game series and took four of six from the Dodgers and San Francisco Giants following a 1-8 West Coast trip.

Reds 8, Cardinals 7
CINCINNATI — Cincinnati tied the score with four runs in sixth inning and went ahead on Glenn Braggs' double in the seventh, giving the Reds their eighth victory in nine games.

With the Reds trailing 6-2, Barry Larkin and Chris Sabo hit consecutive home runs off Donovan Osborne, the third homer of the year for each.

Phillies 4, Braves 1
ATLANTA — Curt Schilling

pitched seven shutout innings, and Darren Dalton homered in a three-run first inning as Philadelphia stopped Atlanta's five-game winning streak.

Schilling (4-3) allowed six hits, struck out six and walked one as he made only his fourth start in 20 appearances. Mitch Williams pitched the ninth for his ninth save in 12 chances.

Padres 5, Cubs 1
CHICAGO — Bruce Hurst pitched a six-hitter for his third complete game in five starts as San Diego avoided a three-game sweep.

Stevens, DiSarcina lead Angels to win

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Lee Stevens was sent up in a pressure pinch-hitting situation, still looking for his first RBI at Anaheim Stadium all season. And one of the California Angels many slumping hitters finally came through.

Stevens didn't get a hit, but his bases-loaded grounder delivered Jose Gonzalez with the winning run in a 4-3 victory Wednesday over the Baltimore Orioles.

"I'm glad they keep putting me in that situation," said Stevens, who had gone 59 at-bats in Anaheim without an RBI. "It shows that they still have confidence in me to get the job done. They haven't given up on me, so why should I give up on myself?"

The Angels, scoring more than three runs for the only time on their nine-game homestand, tied the game in the seventh on Gary DiSarcina's first major league homer, a two-run shot. He also made a run-saving play at short-stop in the eighth.

California loaded the bases in the 10th against Alan Mills (2-1) on two walks and an infield single by pinch-hitter Alvin Davis. Stevens batted for Luis Sojo and hit a slow roller up the first-base line. Jose Gonzalez beat the throw home from charging first baseman David Segui.

Rangers 4, Yankees 3
ARLINGTON — New York's Shawn Hillegas made an errant pickoff throw after Jeff Huxton put Texas in position to win through his own failure, and the Rangers beat the Yankees in 13 innings.

Hillegas (0-2) was attempting to pick pinch-runner John Cangelosi off third base with none out, but fired the ball wide of third baseman Charlie Hayes. Cangelosi came home with the run that ended a 4-hour, 31-minute game, giving the Rangers their 17th victory in the last 19 games against the Yankees.

Kevin Reimer opened the inning with a single. Huxton was unsuccessful in trying to sacrifice before moving Cangelosi to third on a hit-and-run single. Hillegas faked to third, faked to first and then wheeled and double-clutched before throwing the ball away.

Twins 11, Blue Jays 3
MINNEAPOLIS — Kirby Puckett had his second grand slam in six days and tied a career high with five RBIs as Minnesota beat Toronto, handing Juan Guzman his first loss.

Guzman (6-1) hadn't lost since Oct. 5, when the Twins beat him 3-1. He's 16-2 since losing to Baltimore last June 15 and 16-4 in his career.

Kevin Tapani (6-4), who allowed three runs on 11 singles in 5½ innings, won his fifth straight game. His ERA has increased from 4.89 to 5.12 in his last four starts, but the Twins have scored 40 runs in those games.

The Twins, who snapped a two-game slide, have won five of their last seven and 16 of 22. Toronto had won five straight games.

Athletics 7, Red Sox 6
OAKLAND, Calif. — Jose Canseco homered twice, Mark McGwire added his major league-leading 20th and Terry Steinbach broke a sixth-inning tie with a two-run single as Oakland beat Boston.

Canseco hit a two-run homer in the first off John Dopson and added a solo homer in the third, his 12th this season. McGwire also homered in the third.

Jeff Parrett (5-0) pitched 2½ scoreless innings as the A's completed a three-game sweep. Dennis Eckersley got three outs for his 20th save in 20 chances and his 24th in a row despite allowing Phil Plantier's two-out, two-run single. Eckersley is one save short of Tom Henke's major league record for consecutive saves.

Tigers 10, Brewers 4
MILWAUKEE — Cecil Fielder hit a pair of two-run homers and drove in five runs as Detroit stopped a six-game losing streak.

Fielder, who had just one home run since April 23, hit an RBI single in a five-run first and homered in the fourth and the sixth innings, giving him 10 this season. Kevin Ritz (1-1) allowed three runs and eight hits in 5½ innings for his first victory in 30 appearances since Sept. 5, 1989.

Royals 3, White Sox 1
KANSAS CITY — Brian McRae singled home the go-ahead run, and struggling Mike Magnante pitched Kansas City over slumping Chicago.

Magnante (2-4), hoping to stay in the rotation, gave up five hits and one run in seven innings, lowering his ERA from 7.90 to 6.54. Magnante's only other major league victory also was over the White Sox, on May 18.

Chicago, losing to Kansas City for the second straight night, has won just once in its last nine games.

Indians 8, Mariners 3
CLEVELAND — Sandy Alomar hit his first career grand slam to cap a seven-run fourth inning as surging Cleveland beat Seattle.

The Indians have won three in a row and seven of their last eight games.

Cleveland erupted for its biggest inning of the season with seven consecutive hits, including Carlos Baerga's leadoff home run, five singles and Alomar's bases-loaded shot.

OPEN: Women play today

cade of thunderous cheering, stamping and clapping that unnerved the Swede and swept the unseeded Leconte to victory.

Leconte's emotional play, and the din from the crowd, recalled his heroics in France's upset of the United States in the Davis Cup final last December.

He will play the winner of a match between seventh-seeded Petr Korda and unseeded Andrei Cherkasov. The match was suspended because of darkness after each won a set.

Courier easily won the first two sets against Ivanisevic late Tuesday, then committed a rare string of errors while the Ivanisevic settled down to win the third before play was halted by darkness. It was the first set lost by Courier, the top seed, in his five matches so far.

In the fourth set, Ivanisevic got an early service break, then faltered as Courier regained confidence.

"The first set was the key," Sampras said of his loss. "If I'd won it, something could have happened. After I lost it, I had a meltdown. I got a bit discouraged in the third."

Agassi — with a stronger backhand — had the edge in baseline exchanges. Sampras' usually potent serve often failed him, and the wet balls repeatedly broke strings on his rackets.

"I stayed intense and stayed focused — I had the help of a lot of luck," Agassi said, citing a smash which hit the top of the net, then landed on the sideline to clinch the tiebreak for him.

Sampras was seeded third, based on his world ranking as a hard-court maestro, but Agassi, the No. 11 seed, was favored due to his virtuosity on clay.

The two Americans, teammates on the U.S. Davis Cup squad, had split their previous six matches, but Agassi had won both those played on clay.

The match began more than an hour late because of rain and was halted for 30 minutes at the start of the third set by another shower.

Both players had asked for a delay, and Agassi borrowed an umbrella from a fan to make his point.

Agassi reached the finals here the past two years, losing in 1990 to Andrei Gornes and last year to Courier.

"This year could be my chance," Agassi said. "I'm certainly playing well enough to do it."

Rain has now disrupted play on seven of the 10 days of the tournament. Officials said it was the most rain-disrupted French Open since 1973, when the final, won by Romania's Ilie Nastase, was played two days late.

The four top-seeded women won their matches Tuesday to set up a re-run of last year's semifinals.

In one pairing today, top-seeded Monica Seles of Yugoslavia, seeking her third straight title, faces third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina. In the other, second-seeded Steffi Graf of Germany will try to avenge her worst defeat as a pro, a 6-0, 6-2 loss on center court last year to fourth-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain.

Graf probably has the strongest motivation as she seeks to make amends for last year's semifinal embarrassment. That was the second time she had lost on the center court at Stade Roland Garros to Sanchez Vicario — the first was when the Spaniard won the title as a 17-year-old in 1989.

"This is a different year, and we're both playing well," Sanchez Vicario said. "I've beat her here both times on center court, and I feel very comfortable. I'm just going to play my game and try to be aggressive and see if I can win."

Graf found reason for satisfaction in her 6-3, 6-7 (7-4), 6-3 victory over Natalia Zvereva of Belarus, even though she dropped her first set in five matches.

Sabatini also lost her first set of the tournament and trailed 0-3 in the second set before making a spectacular comeback to beat seventh-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

In her first four matches, Sabatini had lost only nine games.

Adams three-hits Missions

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — Dave Adams recorded the second complete game of the season for Midland here Wednesday night, as he threw a three-hitter and the Angels defeated the San Antonio Missions 2-0.

Adams (3-5) entered the game just averaging a little more than 2½ walks per nine innings, and did not issue a base on balls while striking out six Missions. His nine-inning outing was the first complete game by a Midland pitcher since Joe Kraemer performed the feat May 1.

While Adams was holding San Antonio in check, he got all the run support he needed from the Angel offense in the top of the fifth inning.

Shortstop Rod Correia punched a lead-off single into right field, and one out later catcher Fausto Tejedo lined one up the middle. Then with two outs, Dan Rumsey drew a walk from Mission knuckleballer Dennis Springer to load the bases.

That brought Jim Edmonds up to the plate, who watched as the base runners pulled off a three-way steal that saw Correia score Midland's first run. Edmonds then singled to right to drive Tejedo home from third, but saw Rumsey thrown out at the plate trying to score from second on the same play.

The last-place Angels (19-30 for the season) are now 2½ games behind the Missions (23-29) in the Texas League West, and can get out of the cellar by sweeping the four remaining games in the six-game series.

Arizona State's Mickelson cruises to NCAA record tying 63

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)

— Not even lightning could slow Phil Mickelson's eagle-powered cruise through the opening round of the NCAA Golf Championships.

The Arizona State lefthander eagled the par-5 first hole Wednesday and then methodically punched out the 7,246-yard Championship Course at the University of New Mexico with a tournament record-tying 9-under-par 63.

Discus athlete says sport dead in America

AUSTIN (AP) — Nevada's Kamy Keshmiri, the collegiate record-holder in the men's discus, led qualifiers in the NCAA Championships Wednesday, then lashed out at track and field's hierarchy.

Keshmiri, a 23-year-old senior, said the sport was "dead in this country" and that he was considering retiring after this season because of the lack of financial rewards.

First, however, he plans to compete for the United States in the Barcelona Olympics if he makes the team at the trials June 19-28 at New Orleans.

Keshmiri, whose father, Djelal-

Ali, was an Iranian Olympian in the discus in 1968, said he was offered "a substantial amount of money" by Iran to compete at the Games. He rejected it, he said, because of his patriotic feelings for the United States, where he was born and raised.

"This is my country," he said. "If I make the Olympic team, I can't see me standing on the Olympic podium for another country."

"This is where I was born. This is where I grew up. It's been my dream since I was young to stand on the podium, representing the United States, seeing the U.S. flag and listening to the national anthem."

"It's mismanaged, it's misrun," said Keshmiri, the two-time defending NCAA champion.

TCU returning to grass roots

By Galyn Wilkins
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — How different the atmosphere around TCU's football headquarters seems now, five months later. It's like going back to a favorite saloon expecting that it has been turned into a welding shop.

Not that the transformation is regrettably funereal, but it has been distinctly different since Pat Sullivan's crew moved in.

I always had the feeling, for example, that a guy wearing a mask and holding a sawed-off shotgun could walk into Jim Wacker's office, and the coach would tap dance on the desk with party balloons in both hands and then offer to buy lunch.

Wacker's office often was like a reunion of old combat chums or frat brothers.

Let's just say that Sullivan is cordial and direct. And calm, almost meditative. Different. Different from the walking, arm-flailing maelstrom that was Jim Wacker.

Now to another difference you will observe next fall: grass stains.

When the workmen started rolling up the carpet the other day, I thought I could hear ghostly cheers from Dutch and Davey and Ki. It's about time TCU returned to its roots.

By September, the Amon Carter Stadium floor will be layered with Tiff 419. Sounds artificial, but it drinks, it feeds, it grows. And it looks like something from which you would love to hit a 7-iron. And you probably have. It is, athletic director Frank Windegger said Wednesday, a type of grass used on the best fairways.

Sullivan is a grassroots coach. At Auburn, where he played and coached, they believe that rugs are for Persian palaces and board rooms, not football stadiums.

Sullivan, however, did not roll up the carpet and start sprinkling grass seed. Maybe he could order new jerseys, or a new offense. But a huge reclamation project? No. The stadium floor was a wreck, literally a wreck. The under structure was like a miniature San Andreas Fault. It was like laying a million-dollar carpet on a huge bowl of cornflakes.

"A receiver could be running along and step in a hole," Windegger said. "That's what we had, sinkholes. We had to do something."

The Frogs are going back to the future, in a way. The unstable foundation is being ripped up and replaced by real earth. Then grass, already growing in a nursery, will be planted.

More colleges are doing that. Oklahoma officials have called TCU for the details. Most South-eastern Conference schools play on grass. Ohio State has replaced plastic with grass.

Once, AstroTurf and its chemical descendants were regarded as the most revolutionary advance since the T-formation.

"We went to it for recruiting," said Windegger, who remembered his old playground as botanically perfect. "In my playing days here, we had a great grass field. We could be ankle deep in water on the sideline, and the field itself would be dry."

In 1971, a scientific-looking chap from Purdue walked into the office of then-athletic director Abe Martin with an alternative to plastic "turf," which was spreading across the land faster than a blight of grub worms.

"Look at this, just look," Abe said to a reporter, unrolling a mad plumber's diagram of pipes, pumps and timing devices. Prescription Athletic Turf was sort of a natural unnatural field: real grass, but controlled by an underground hothouse system.

"Could have used that in Jacksboro," Abe smiled. On his home turf, he said, he could have counted the all the blades of green grass on the toes of a lizard.

He passed on modern horticulture, though. Recruits were dazzled by rugs, by the racetrack speed on them.

But rugs didn't work at TCU. Weren't supposed to, obviously. Football was good here when players finished a game with their socks falling down and grass blades jammed between their teeth.

Real grass. Real football.

Giants already trying to revive new stadium proposals after defeat in San Jose

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Promises of new stadium proposals flew like hot dog wrappers across windy Candlestick Park as officials scrambled Wednesday to revive plans to find the Giants a new home.

San Jose voters defeated the latest stadium measure on Tuesday.

Mayor Frank Jordan, caught off guard when San Jose Mayor Susan Hammer announced in January a pact with the Giants that led to the failed proposition, said Lurie promised Wednesday to meet with him before talking with officials from any other city intent on wooing the Giants.

ABC pays for World Cup

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1994 World Cup will be televised in the United States without commercial interruption, ABC and ESPN said Wednesday.

The deal, worth a minimum of $11 million, calls for ABC to televise 11 games on weekends and July 4, and for ESPN to show 41 games. Up to eight games may be shown live on pay-per-view and televised on tape delay by ESPN, which is 80 percent owned by ABC's parent, Capital Cities-ABC.

The key to the deal was the networks' willingness to show the games without interruption.

"There's one way and only one way to show the game to the American public and that's in its unadulterated form," said Alan Rothenberg, chairman of World Cup USA 1994, the committee that will stage the 24-nation tournament.

The Coca Cola Co., MasterCard International and M&M Mars Inc. — three of the tournament's nine sponsors — agreed to become primary sponsors of the telecasts. The networks are seeking two additional primary sponsors and six secondary sponsors.

"The United States so far is the only where you don't see hours and hours of (soccer on) TV," FIFA spokesman Guido Tognoni said. "I think this situation will change."

However, the deal's relative unimportance was underscored by

Agency to resume seizing S&Ls

■ Thrift office to transfer management of institutions to RTC until Congress appropriates funds to protect depositors.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Regulators said Wednesday they will resume seizing insolvent savings institutions and put them under government management until Congress approves money to protect depositors.

On Friday, the Office of Thrift Supervision will seize five of 45 S&Ls considered likely to fail, transferring them to the Resolution Trust Corp., which will manage them until Congress acts on the administration request for funds.

The thrift office, an arm of the Treasury Department, will take over four or five insolvent S&Ls per week until all are transferred to the RTC, said Timothy Ryan, the office's director.

He said the S&Ls will be from various parts of the country, but declined to identify them until after they are taken over.

Financing for the bailout expired April 1 after the House rejected, 298-125, a bill that would have kept the program going.

Ryan said if the money had been provided his agency would have been able to wipe out the failed S&Ls' losses and find new owners for them, saving taxpayers the cost of operating the institutions at a loss.

"It is frustrating to me that... Congress refuses to act, letting millions, perhaps billions, of taxpayer dollars pour down the drain..." Ryan said. "I cannot fathom why Congress is unnecessarily adding to the cost."

RTC Chief Executive Albert V. Casey estimated that the first three-month delay will add $200 million to $250 million to the cost of the bailout. A second three-month delay would add an additional $600 million to $900 million, he said.

"That's because the longer the period of delay, the longer it takes you to catch up," he said.

Since its creation in August 1989, the RTC has seized 699 failed thrifts and spent $84 billion to close or sell 651 of them. Casey said it needs up to $46 billion more to deal with the remaining 48 institutions under RTC management plus the institutions Ryan's agency will transfer.

Both Democratic and Republican lawmakers are wary, however, of a backlash from voters disgusted with the thrift bailout. The chairman of the House Banking Committee, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, has refused to put an RTC financing bill up for a second vote unless President Bush mounts a personal campaign to win its passage.

Congressional aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Congress probably will approve additional bailout spending as part of a government-wide spending bill expected to be considered in a last-minute rush this fall before legislators adjourn to campaign for re-election.

But Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, who is chairman of a Bush administration board overseeing the bailout program, urged Congress to avoid further delay in the necessary but unpleasant job of protecting depositors.

"Without funds, the failed savings and loan institutions continue to operate in the red, which means further unnecessary costs to the taxpayer..." Brady said. "It would be a tragedy indeed if at this moment in time funds weren't provided."

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose to new closing highs for 1992 Wednesday as traders responded to a report showing U.S. stockpiles fell last week.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $22.43 per barrel, up 32 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil's previous closing high price for the year was $22.11, set Friday.

Oil prices have been advancing lately amid indications that Saudi Arabia, the world's most influential petroleum exporter, has reversed its long-time policy favoring moderate prices and now wants prices to go up.

Traders were given additional motivation to buy oil after the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday evening the U.S. supply of crude oil fell by 4.6 million barrels last week, a sizable drop.

Natural gas prices fell sharply, with contracts for delivery in July settling at $1.586 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 6.6 cents.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in July settled at $20.62 per barrel, up 21 cents.

Microwave dryer

LOS ANGELES — Southern California Edison Co. is betting that consumers will turn to microwave technology for dry socks as well as warm leftovers.

Engineers at the Rosemead, Calif.-based electric utility, working to move microwaves from the kitchen to the laundry room, said Wednesday that a prototype of their clothes dryer has passed U.S. Department of Energy tests.

Those tests concluded that microwaves dried most types of residential laundry loads quicker than conventional dryers and that drying temperatures also were reduced, giving fabrics a longer life.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mixed on world currency markets Wednesday as trading focused on the European currencies.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to 126.90 Japanese yen from 127.48 yen Tuesday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.8180 from $1.8240 late Tuesday.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — Oil and auto issues led a mild rally in blue chips Wednesday as the stock market steadied after Tuesday's late decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 17.11 points on Tuesday, rose 10.89 to 3,406.99.

Factory orders rise 1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — New orders to the nation's factories rose 1 percent in April, marking the longest string of consecutive gains in nearly four years, the government said Wednesday.

Economists said the advance, the fourth straight, suggested the economic expansion was continuing, albeit at a less than robust pace.

Manufacturers told the Commerce Department they received a seasonally adjusted $243.85 billion in new orders in April, the highest level in nine months.

Orders had risen 1.9 percent in March, revised upward from a previous estimate of 1.6 percent; 0.7 percent in February, and 0.5 percent in January.

It was the longest string of advances since the six months ending in August 1988, yet orders remained 4.4 percent below peak of October 1990, early in the recession.

A worrisome note in the report was an eighth consecutive decline in the backlog of unfilled orders.

Airlines use intricate system to sell seats

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though the airlines are running a big fare sale, passengers are discovering they might not get the price they want on the flight they want.

The airlines have developed an intricate system of selling seats on the same plane at vastly different prices, to make sure they get the maximum business from all types of customers.

Airlines have been swamped this week with millions of calls from people trying to take advantage of the sale, scheduled to end Friday, that cut the lowest fares in half for travel in the lower 48 states. By early in the week, many of the cheaper seats were gone.

The carriers estimate who will fly on a given flight, including how many people will show up at the last minute willing to pay full price. After accounting for those last-minute passengers, the airlines try to fill the rest of the plane with people who have the time to go for advance bargain rates.

The airlines call it "capacity control" or "yield management," but it basically means business travelers who fly on short notice, or first-class travelers who aren't worried about the money, will always find seats available.

Firms say they would keep LTV divisions in Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Leaders of two U.S. defense companies trying to buy the LTV missile and aerospace divisions said Wednesday they will keep them based in the Dallas-Fort Worth area if the deal is made.

The promise was made in letters to Gov. Ann Richards and other local leaders by Lockheed Corp. and Martin Marietta Corp. The LTV operations employ about 10,000 workers in the area.

Thomson CSF, a defense consortium mostly owned by the French government, and the Carlyle Group, a Washington, D.C. investment firm, joined together to outbid Lockheed and Martin Marietta when the LTV units were sold in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in April.

Because of Thomson's foreign ownership, their bid is being reviewed by the Committee on Foreign Investment, which has until July 6 to make a recommendation to President Bush, who then has 15 days to either approve the sale or not.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., have introduced a bill to block the sale.

The competing purchasers have launched public relations and lobbying campaigns to win popular support for themselves.

Lockheed and Martin Marietta raise concerns about the transfer of U.S. technology to other governments and say they could not keep up in the bidding war with the French government.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Worthless stock may result in capital loss

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have certificates for more than 3,000 shares of bank stock I purchased some years ago. The bank is defunct. I understand there is a class action lawsuit in process.

Does that suggest I hold on to the certificates and that my children might benefit some day? Or are the certificates worthless paper?

A: The class action suit won't give the stock any value, now or in later years. However, the stock might result in stockholders obtaining some money from the bank's officers and directors, in the form of damage awards. Stay in touch with the lawyers handling the case.

And don't throw the certificates away. There's a chance that stock might be worth something. If it has any value at all, even pennies per share, you can sell and realize a capital loss — the difference between the price you paid and your proceeds from the sale — to use on your income tax return.

Capital losses can be used to offset any capital gains you have by selling stocks and other capital assets at higher prices than you paid. If you have no capital gains, your capital losses can be used to offset ordinary income up to $3,000 annually.

When your net capital loss tops $3,000, as it evidently does in your unhappy situation, the rest of the capital loss can be carried over to other years and used, first, to offset any capital gains and, then, to offset ordinary income of $3,000 per year.

If the stock is worthless, you can take a capital loss equal to the full price you paid for it. Do that on Schedule D of the income tax return you file for the year the stock lost all value. List your sales price as "worthless" on Dec. 31. Assuming that happened last year or some previous year, you can file an amended return — Form 1040X. In the case of worthless securities, amended returns can be filed back for seven years.

To substantiate that a stock is worthless, get a letter from a brokerage firm stating the stock lost all value and there is no bid for it in any recognized market.

You are not required to send that letter with your return, but hang on to it in case the Internal Revenue Service questions you.

Q: One investment I have pays dividends quarterly. But I never receive the dividend check until at least two months after the end of the calendar quarter. Does the company have the right to do that?

A: Yes. Even though the dividends are designated as "quarterly," there is no rule saying each such dividend must be paid within the specific three-month period.

Dividends are declared by a company's board of directors, which normally has regularly scheduled meetings. The board meets on a certain date and declares a dividend payable on some future date to stockholders of record on another date — between the date the dividend is declared and the payment date.

Directors can't very well declare a dividend until they know how much cash the company has on hand. The board reviews such matters and other things at its meetings.

Q: I am a college student who will participate in a study program in Europe this summer. I recently purchased 100 shares of a stock at $29 per share and 100 shares of another at $9 per share. Both have dropped in price and it is unlikely they will fund my trip.

Is it possible they might do better in the upcoming months? Also, is it a good idea to buy shares of another stock that will go public soon?

A: Anything is possible. But it is more likely you will get a harsh lesson in stock market realities. It is ridiculous to buy stocks in hopes they will go up in value within a few months.

The initial public offering market, of stocks sold to the public for the first time, is loaded with risk and investors' losses.

Unless you change financial direction, you can forget the European jaunt. You'll be too poor to go anywhere.

Swimsuit season time for camouflage

Swimwear is riding a wave of technology designed to enhance the female form. It's no panacea, but there's hope if you follow the advice of computers, hangtags, trained salespeople — and your own good sense.

It's no substitute for exercise and diet, either. But illusion and control fabrics with minimizer panels can help compensate where nature goofed.

The industry move in recent years to nip the waist, lift the buttocks, tighten the tummy and perfect the bosom is aimed at an aging baby boomer population.

The majority of the female buying market is getting older, and their bodies are subject to gravity," says Eleanor Walsh of New York. Walsh is communications manager for Du Pont, which makes Lycra spandex, the stuff that makes swimwear stretchy.

Du Pont and the Swimwear Industry Manufacturers are offering training programs to the people who sell swimwear. Last year, retail sales totaled 30 million suits — two-thirds of them one-piece — at an average price of $40 to $50.

FOR WOMEN short on perfection, that's a lot of agony. Anne Cole, a Los Angeles swimwear designer, likens it to a nightmare version of "Mirror, Mirror On the Wall."

To help match the consumer to the style best suited to her shape, last February Cole put Swimfit computers in department stores. The computer offers a coded hangtag guide to the most flattering suit for each of a variety of figure problems — bust too large or too small, wide hips, tummy bulge, heavy thighs, long torso. The service is available at selected Foley's, Belk's, Macy's, Filene's, The Broadway, and Burdine's stores.

"Just press a button, press in your figure type, and it lights up," Cole says. "The computer won't take the place of a salesperson but will help you till she gets there."

And there's more. Today's state-of-the-art computers can custom design a suit by duplicating your image on the screen and then mixing a variety of silhouettes, colors and prints. The service is offered at Second Skin in West Palm Beach, Fla.; Beach Club in Chicago and Suit Yourself in Houston and Dallas. Prices range from $70 to $130.

At Everything But Water stores, the shopper's angst may be eased somewhat by the fact that the salespeople wear swimsuits on the job.

"The purpose is to show customers what different suits look like off the hanger and to make the customer more relaxed," says Cheryl Collins, executive director in Orlando, Fla.

Everything But Water operates 22 retail stores in shopping malls across the nation.

At THE Body I.D. swimwear company, each suit comes with These swimsuits are part of the Bill Blass spring/summer 1992 collection.

The Miraclesuit, introduced last November, slims and firms with about three times more Lycra spandex than the average suit, says Mark Waldman, president of Swimshaper, which makes the Miraclesuit ... Carol Wior's Slimsuit, with a tightly woven Lycra inner lining, claims to take an inch or more off your waist and stomach, smooth bulges and lift your buttocks at least half an inch. huge color-coded hangtags identifying flaws it is meant to correct. On the flip side of the tags are before and after photos.

"It's your silent salesperson," says Pattie Byrnes-Kane, New York designer for Body I.D. "Swimwear is such a harrowing purchase anyway, there's no reason you shouldn't get some self-help to identify what you need."

Body I.D. sales have doubled each year since the hangtags were introduced five years ago, she says. The average suit is $49, and the line is sold at Macy's New York, The Bon Marche in Seattle, Casual Corner stores, Liberty House throughout Hawaii and Strawbridge & Clothier in Philadelphia.

Other swimwear companies offering hangtag help are Robby Len, Mainstream and Jantzen, with its "5 Lbs. Under" indicating power net lining.

In addition to camouflaging flaws, there are swimsuits that hide extra pounds with girder-like fabrics and inner linings.

Covered-up look is hot new fashion

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

In recent summers, it has taken a real search to find a bathing suit that wasn't on the scanty side. Even maillots have been cut high on the sides. Now the tide has turned. To be covered up is cool.

The emphasis is on classic patterns and fabrics — though the latter are almost always laced with stretch fibers for a good fit. J. Crew's demure version of a Brigitte Bardot-style gingham-check maillot is made of cotton and Lycra. It costs $64 and can be ordered from the J. Crew catalog.

Saks Fifth Avenue's puckered-gingham suit is a little saucier. Its small puffed sleeves shift to form an off-the-shoulder neckline. Made of Dacron, nylon and spandex, it is from Viewpoint by Gottex and costs $87. Saks also carries Calvin Klein's no-nonsense tank of cotton and Lycra in a big graphic plaid for $150.

Barneys New York's striped cotton-and-spandex-knit maillot ends in short shorts. It costs $70. Galeries Lafayette's sporty two-piece version, by Huit, is in checked cotton and spandex. The belted short shorts are $48. The bra top, extending down to cover the rib cage, is $50.

Lands' End has always made a point of carrying modestly styled swimsuits. Fittingly, the cover of its summer catalogue features a striped cotton-nylon-and-spandex seersucker one-piece suit, $45.

The Miraclesuit, introduced last November, slims and firms with about three times more Lycra spandex than the average suit, says Mark Waldman, president of Swimshaper, which makes the Miraclesuit in Stockertown, Pa. The suits, claiming to make you look 10 pounds lighter in 10 seconds, range from $55 to $110 each. They're sold at Nordstrom, Rich's, Macy's, Burdine's, Joslins and Jordan Marsh. Carol Wior's Slimsuit, with a tightly woven Lycra inner lining, claims to take an inch or more off your waist and stomach, smooth bulges and lift your buttocks at least half an inch. Now available in more than 3,000 stores nationwide, it's sold with a tape measure so you can see the difference yourself.

BUT THE best way to deal with swimsuit shopper angst, says Anne Cole, is to reshape your attitude. "Don't just sit around and grouse instead of dieting, exercising or forgetting about it," she says. "Besides, most of your figure problems are in your head."

DEAR ABBY

Complaint about tip considered gratuitous

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your letter re "tipping" rang a bell with me. Recently I took a lady friend (at her invitation) to a dinner and jazz function. The bill came to $59, which included a $24 cover charge.

I filled out the credit card and added a $6 gratuity. My lady friend peered over my shoulder and said, "That's just 10 percent!" Her tone was very disapproving, implying that I was cheap, so I politely explained that one does not pay gratuities on cover charges, and considering the poor service we received, I thought the tip was generous. I added that whoever pays determines how much the tip should be, and furthermore, it is inappropriate for a guest to advise her/his escort on how much to tip.

I would like your thoughts on this matter, please. — TICKED OFF

DEAR TICKED OFF: I agree with you. It was extremely bad manners for your lady friend to have "peered" over your shoulder at the bill, and even worse to have commented on the size of the tip.

DEAR ABBY: While watching the news, I was shocked to hear about a baby sitter who gave a baby some very old, spoiled medicine, and the baby died!

I immediately checked all the stuff in our medicine chest. I had a bottle of Bayer aspirin that expired two years ago, also some Tylenol with an expiration date four years ago — and other things such as Nyquil, Bufferin, Maalox, all with expiration dates years beyond keeping!

Time passes so quickly, Abby. Please print this. I'll bet a lot of people will get some big surprises. Some prescription drugs may lose their potency only after a while, but others can be dangerous. — LUCILLE IN LONG BEACH

DEAR LUCILLE: Thanks for a valuable letter. Readers, when in doubt, ask your pharmacist.

DEAR ABBY: The question that bothers me is this: My daughter was married in the 1950s. She passed away from cancer two years ago.

If my son-in-law marries again, will he still be my son-in-law? They had no children. Please put your answer in the paper. It might help some other person who is in the same situation and needs to know. He always called me "Little Mama"...so that is how I will sign this. — LITTLE MAMA IN GEORGIA

DEAR LITTLE MAMA: Whether he marries or not, legally, he is no longer your son-in-law. Emotionally, perhaps yes. But not legally.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a thank-you note that reads as follows: "Thank you for the lovely gift," signed "Mrs. and Mrs. Newlywed"?

I was shocked to receive such a note. It was so cold and impersonal, it could have been run off on a copy machine.

I was very hurt because I had spent a lot of time and money selecting a gift I thought would be perfect for this couple. I would like to add that the bride is a relative of mine. — DISGUSTED IN BERTHOUD, COLO.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Obviously, the bride and groom are woefully ignorant about how to write a thank-you note. However, their note did serve to acknowledge that your wedding gift was received.

For lonely people, 'family' can be rented

By Erma Bombeck

Family relationships have been changing for a long time. Kids move out as soon as they can scrape together a deposit on an apartment, older parents are planted in nursing and retirement homes to go to seed, and married couples pursue individual careers and lifestyles.

It's happening in Japan, too. Satoshi Oiwa views it from a different perspective. "Since the war, Japan has been so busy manufacturing products that we've forgotten about the human heart. We have been good at 'hard services' but we lack 'soft services.'"

That is why five years ago she founded a company called Japan Efficiency. It's basically a Love-R-Us toy store for the lonely. For $375 an hour, an elderly woman will be met by a family on a Sunday afternoon, given children to play with, conversation and love. Lunch is included.

Ms. Oiwa's service provides a grandmother for parents of small children who do not have anyone to fill the role. She will set up a sympathetic person for stressed-out executives as well as for people who are ill with the need to rant and rave to someone.

She also offers personal assistants to recognition-starved homemakers. These are rental maids who don't actually clean house so much as they listen to the homemaker, go on shopping excursions with her, and "coo over her while she tries on clothes."

Amazing, isn't it? We live in a world where communication has never been more sophisticated. You can lift your arms in any room in the house and knock a phone off the hook. We have twice the number of cars as people, and yet we have individuals out there who call Larry King at night asking, "What do you think of the Bulls?" They don't really want to know about the Bulls. They're lonely.

There was a time in the world when we acknowledged that we needed one another and we had responsibilities toward these needs. Everyone had something to contribute to a family, ranging from humor to wisdom, from money to caring. Now we are independent of one another and too busy to deal with one another's problems.

We have the same situation as Japan. We're just a little more subtle about our solutions. When people feel the need to talk in this country, they go on "Gerald" or to a support group where they dump on strangers.

There isn't a day goes by that I don't read a treatise on what went wrong with America. When I read that a 75-year-old Japanese woman who rented a couple with a child said, "I wanted to touch the skin of a baby once again," I think I knew. It began when we lost our ability to acknowledge there is something bigger and more important than ourselves — a family.

Toyota adds spark to MR2 spirit

By Bob Plunkett

Buckle up and hold on tight: We're powering through a tight set of S-curves, putting G-forces to the jaw.

The horsepower's churning, all systems signal nothing but thumbs-up action, this thing's sticking through the turns like a bobcat on tree bark, and everything feels A-OK.

A quick down-shift to second sets up the next set, then we fly through those bends, slam that stick hard into third and wind it out into higher rpms as we build for speed on the straight-away.

Sock it to me, MR2.

Toyota's mid-engine marvel, with room for just you and your friend, delivers all the sporty action of a Ferrari Testarossa or Acura NSX, but for a price that positions this sports coupe well within the realm of reality.

And in a special mid-year issue bearing a 1993 model label, MR2 looks better than ever with some seriously beefed-up suspension components, subtle new exterior refinements and new color schemes.

Why put the powerplant in midship position?

By setting the heaviest component virtually equidistant between front and rear axles, the weight distributes nearly evenly, fore and aft.

This becomes an advantage when you want to run a set of S-curves, as the car seems to hunker down and go about the business of maneuvering through the series of turns in a highly stable manner.

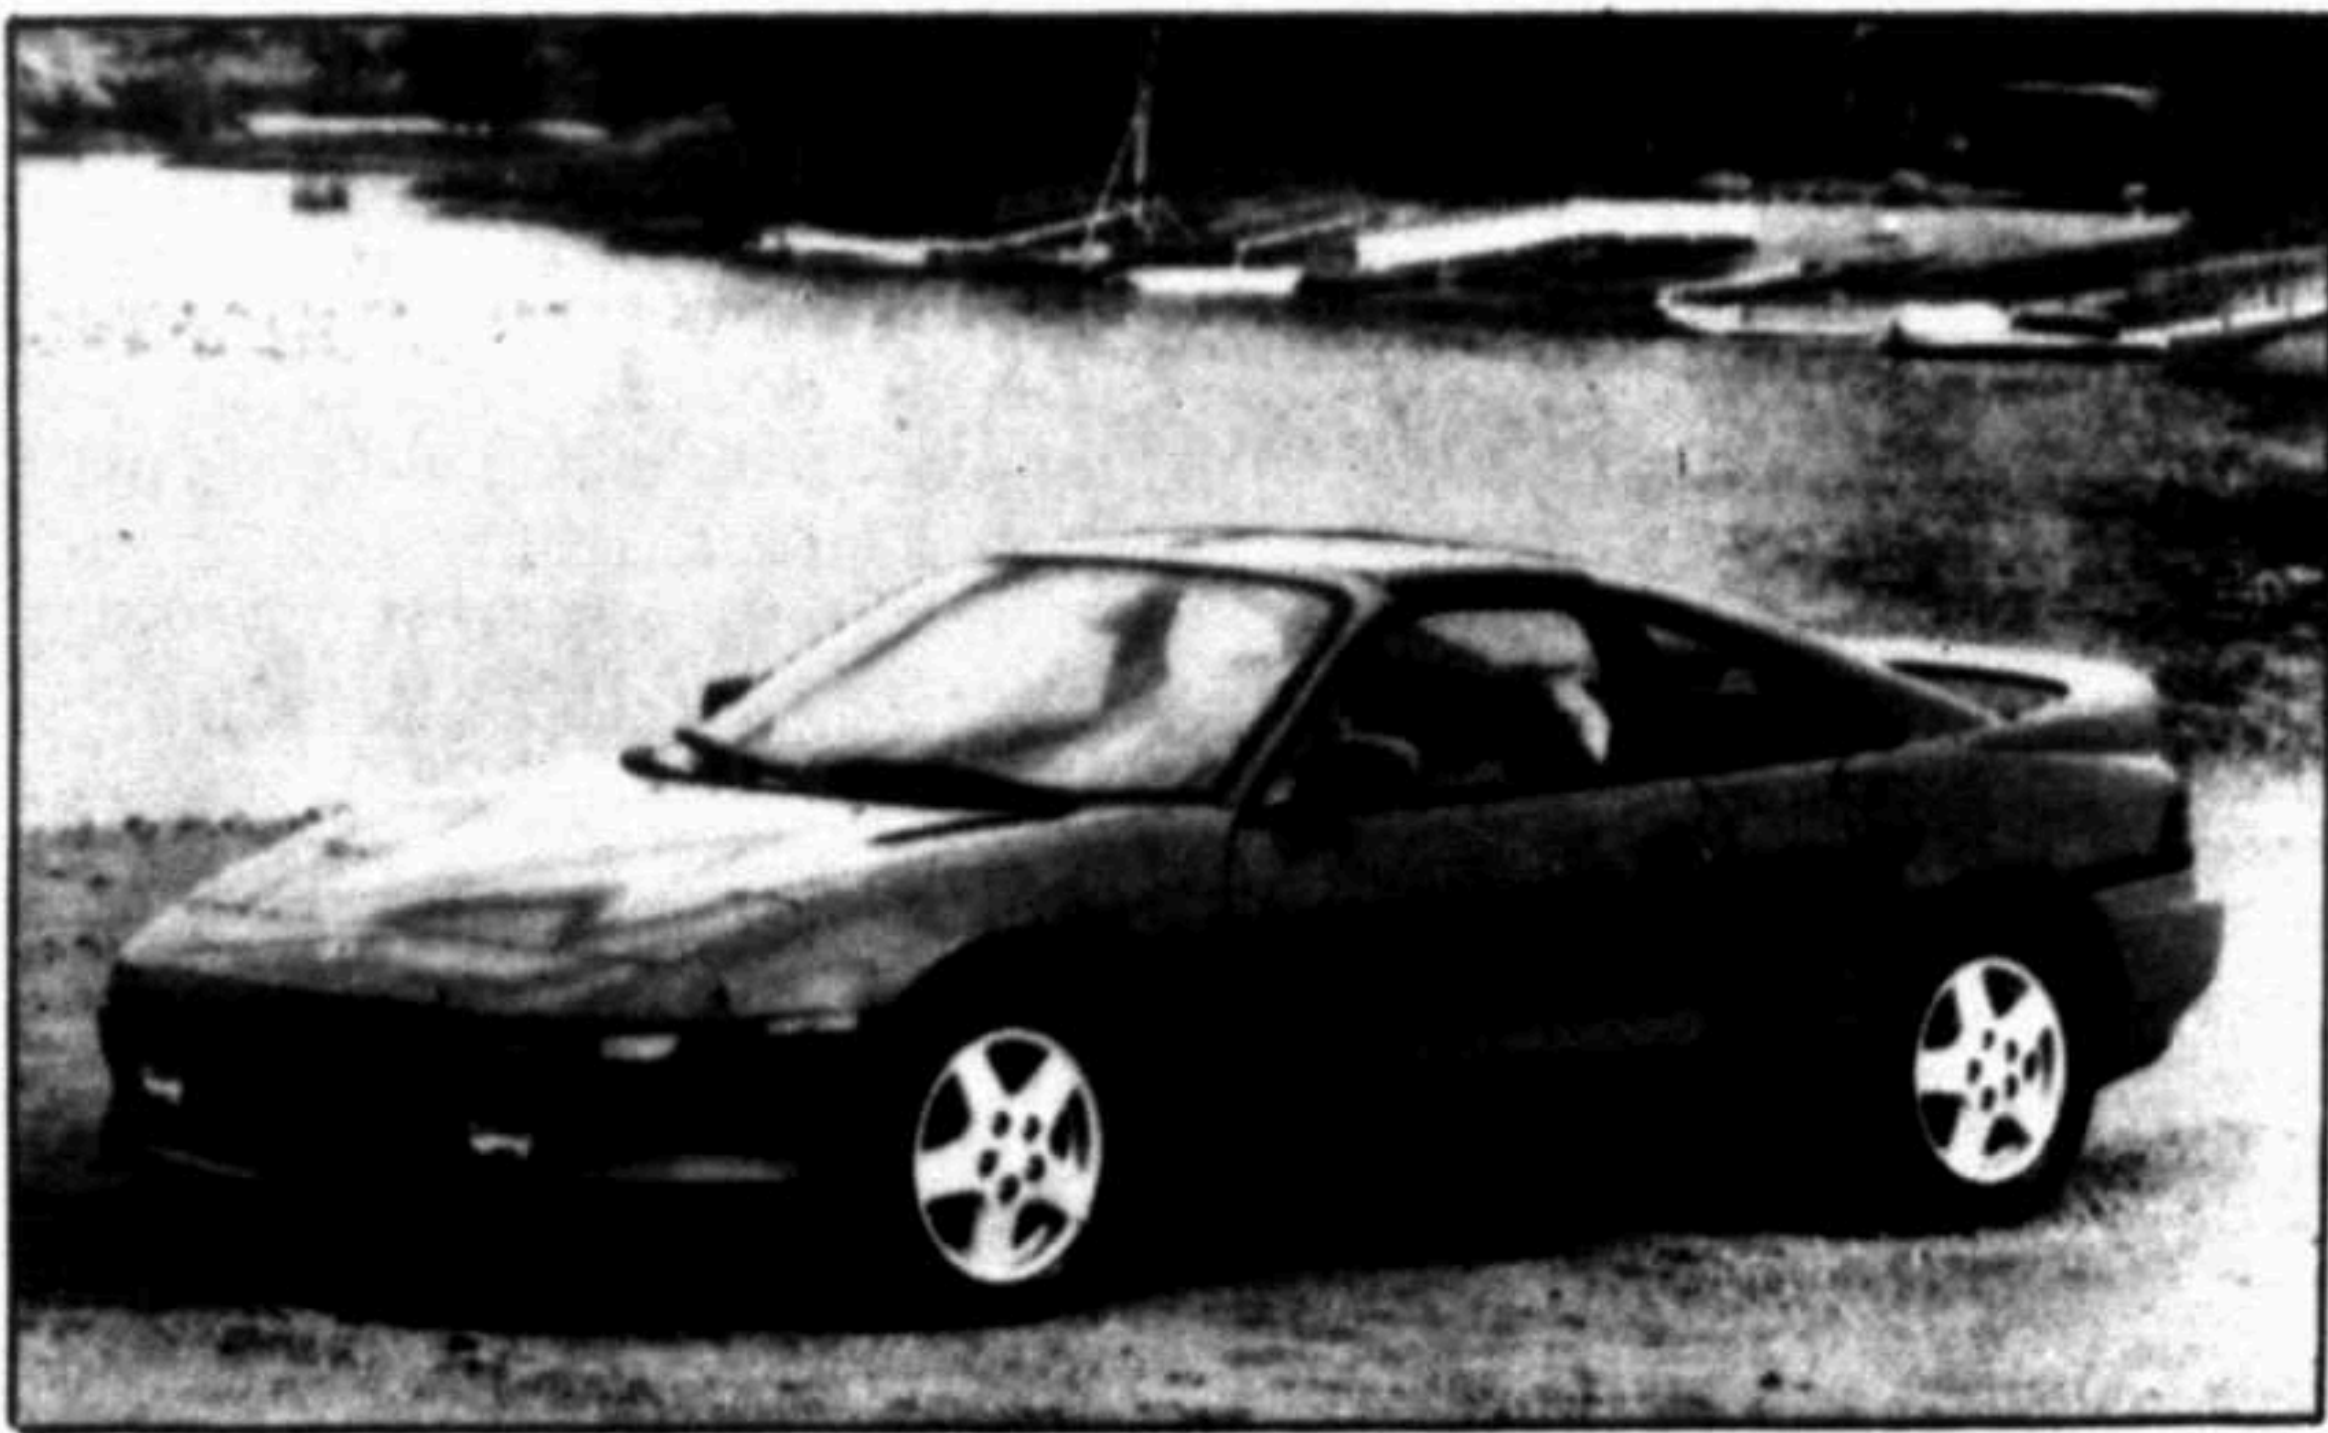

Only a few cars in the world offer this advantage, among them the Ferrari and Acura, each of which lists for more dollars than a bevy of these little Toyotas.

The present body style first appeared in the 1991 mode, and recent tinkering with MR2's suspension componentry corrected some prior performance problems.

With the former version, when you pumped power too soon coming into a turn, there was a chance that, if you weren't careful, the tail might swing out and vie for the lead.

This trait was particularly apparent on wet pavement and more so with the turbo.

But improvements to suspension elements of the 1993 MR2 correct these fishtail tendencies, resulting in not just a highly stable set of wheels, but a predictable one at that.

The front suspension now has stiffer bushings with increased spring rates designed to decrease body roll.

On-center tracking was aided by increasing the caster trail, while larger high-performance Yokohama tires result in crisp steering turn-in action.

Lengthening the toe control arms at the rear wheels reduce MR2's former oversteer problem, while the stiffer bushings bring more precise geometry to the entire suspension system.

High-performance Yokohamas with their unique three-arc pattern also have been added to the rear.

Interestingly, the front and rear tires vary slightly, as each has its special task to perform. Specifications for the V-rated version in front are 195/55R15 87V, while in back they are 225/50R15 91V.

To detect the changes to MR2's exterior, you'll have to cast a close eye for detail, as the overall shape and look of this little go-getter remain essentially the same.

Yet the front valance has been redesigned to bring a larger front-air opening, and, alloy wheels are new, as are dual color-keyed power outside mirrors.

This car looks lean and mean, with sloped nose featuring retractable halogen headlamps and a swept-back canopy that tapers to a blunt tail, where a rear wing spoiler shows up on the turbo-charged edition.

Dual side air intake vents give MR2 a serious look akin to that of the Ferrari and Acura, and optional T-bar roof panels allow you to feel the wind in your hair.

Climb aboard and you'll think you slipped into the plush cockpit of a fighter jet.

The bucket seats envelop your torso, locking you down for action soon to ensue. Bolsters feel seriously firm, the way a sport seat should.

Easy-to-buckle three-point safety belts are in place, as is an inflatable airbag mounted to the four-spoke sport steering wheel with its seven-step adjustments and swing-up feature for easy entry-exit.

A console separates MR2's seats and there's padding on top to coddle your arm when shifting.

The manual five-speed stick feels tight, throws short and smooth, but may take a few tries before you become accustomed to its manners.

A four-speed electronically-controlled automatic shifter is available on the non-turbo version for a few dollars more, but the choice may water down some of this sport car's get-up-and-go.

My choice would be the base edition — by far more affordable — with five-speed stick and the naturally aspirated powerplant. The in-line-4 arrangement displaces 2.2 liters, comes with twin cams on top and four valves in each cylinder, and can hit 130-horsepower.

By comparison, the 2.0-liter turbo-charged and air intercooled edition, also with four cylinders and 16 valves, punches up to 2000-hp.

This thing can fly, but you'll have to wait an instant or two for the turbo to lag.

Hardware options begin with an electro-hydraulic power boost to the crisp rack and pinion steering system.

To aid the ventilated four-wheel disc brakes, you can add an anti-lock system, and there's even the option of a limited slip differential for MR2 turbo.

For luxury, you can buy an optional package of features that include power windows and power door locks, plus an illuminated entry system.

Also, for the non-turbo version, the leather trim package brings a seven-way adjustable driver's seat, the power package and soft leather to cover seats, door panels, steering wheel and shift knob.

Then all you'll have to add is gas and guts.

Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo awards final school-year prize

Last November Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo announced the beginning of their "Driving for Education" program. Schools groups were simply to encourage their families and friends to visit Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo and test drive any new vehicle during "their" school's designated "test drive week." Once a pre-determined number of "proof-of-drive certificates" were tallied, the schools were able to select equipment from six different award levels. These awards included Apple Computers, Magnavox audio-visual equipment and Compton's Encyclopedia sets.

As a result of this program, several area schools received awards. Last week, the final award of this school year was presented to Emerson Elementary. They had 75 test drives and received an Apple Computer.

"Children are the hope for the future," Jack Sherman said.

Chevy Cavalier continues to enjoy great popularity

By Ann M. Job

Associated Press Writer

Americans know how to shop for price.

Just look at the last eight years of Chevrolet Cavalier sales.

Buyers have made the Cavalier one of the 10 best-selling autos in the United States in each model year since 1984.

Chevrolet says the Cavalier, first introduced in 1982, is a favorite with first-time car buyers, who account for nearly 50 percent of sales. More than 55 percent of buyers are women, said Kari St. Antoine, a Chevrolet spokeswoman. And a sizable number of sales of Cavalier sedans are to fleet buyers, including car rental agencies, utility companies and private businesses.

Besides the wagon and the VL (for Value Leader) coupe and sedan, the Cavalier line includes upgraded RS models and a sporty Z24 coupe and convertible.
