IN THE MAIL — More than 4,000 tax notices will be received this week by Scurry County property owners. These are being mailed by staffers with both the county tax assessor-collector's office — like Diana Williamson (shown here) — and personnel with the appraisal district. The last day all taxes may be paid without penalty or interest is Jan. 31, 1985. (SDN Staff Photo)

Tax notices 'in the mail'

Scurry County property owners will be receiving their annual tax billing statements this week in the mail.

These will come from two sources.

Statements for taxes due for the City of Snyder as well as the three county school districts — Snyder, Ira and Hermleigh — will be mailed by the Scurry County Appraisal District.

For Scurry County and the district which formed Western Texas College, tax bills will be mailed by the tax assessor-collector's office for the county.

Ray Peveler, chief appraiser for the appraisal district, said his staff will be mailing about 22,000 statements.

A similar amount was reported by Eloise Morgan, who heads the county tax office. She estimated about 20,000 tax billings.

The last day all taxes may be paid without penalty or interest is Jan. 31, 1985.

On statements related to taxes for both the county and college district, discounts will be offered for early payment.

For the county and college only, tax payments made in October will be eligible for a 3 percent discount.

Payments made in November and December will receive 2 and 1 percent discount amounts respectively.

The statements issued by the county tax assessor indicate what the discounted amount is in each case.

Individuals may pay all tax statements in person at the respective offices or by mail.

Taxes for each are figured based upon the appraisal of property issued by the appraisal district. The tax rates — the amount multiplied times each $100 valuation — is set by the individual taxing entities.

Tax rates are carried to four decimal places. As an example, a rate of .8000 equals 8 cents per $100 valuation. A residence valued at $50,000 would equal 500 $100 valuations.

Assuming an 8 cent tax rate, the tax for this property would then equal $40 (500 X 8).

The tax rates for each entity this year are: Scurry County, .1558 (approximately 15½ cents); WTC College District, .0830 (8.3 cents); City of Snyder,

District tax value challenged

Dresser Industries Inc. of Dallas has filed a civil lawsuit here challenging a valuation rendered by the Scurry County Appraisal District for inventory in their Di-Chem division office and warehouse in Snyder.

Dresser is challenging the valuation of chemicals stored at the local facility which the appraisal district has listed with a value of $101,600 for 1984.

In a legal petition filed last week in 132nd District Court, the company maintains much of the chemical is out-of-date and therefore unsaleable. They contend that the actual market value of the inventory is only $13,400.

In their petition to the court, the plaintiff's maintain the valuation rendered by the district's review board was unfair. Di-Chem protested the value during review hearings of the board here Aug. 9.

Papers filed in conjunction with the petition indicate that the review board lowered the value of the Dresser inventory from $128,000 to the $101,600 figure after the hearing in August.

Dresser is asking the court to set aside the valuation rendered by the review board and to issue

Hospital included in lawsuit

D.M. Cogdell Memorial Hospital has been named co-defendant in a half-million dollar medical malpractice lawsuit filed in 132nd District Court this week.

Lois and Fred Allen of Midland are bringing the suit against the local hospital and Dr. Thomas Wiman, D.O. They allege Mrs. Allen suffered complications following her hospitalization here last February.

Cogdell is included in the suit since Wiman is a member of the hospital staff. The Allen's allege the facility was "negligent" for allowing him to practice in the facility.

According to the plaintiff's petition, she was hospitalized Feb. 10 under Wiman's care — complaining of stomach pains.

The plaintiff's allege her condition was misdiagnosed and that her condition deteriorated until Feb. 21 when she left Cogdell and was admitted to a Midland Hospital.

In Midland, the plaintiff's claim she was operated on for a ruptured appendix. The petition states in addition to the appendix, doctors had to remove her colon due to an infection.

The plaintiffs are asking for $500,000 in damage from Wiman and the hospital. They are seeking also a separate award of $25,000 for the husband for loss of his wife's consortium.

Auction to benefit teenagers

The first fund raising event for the Snyder Teen Center is being planned — a public auction of items center volunteers are now soliciting from local businesses and individuals.

The auction will be conducted Nov. 3 — a Saturday. Volunteer workers for the event are also needed and persons interested in helping out should call 573-6731 or 573-2366.

A non-profit organization — Teen Center of Scurry County Inc. — was founded last December to fund operations for the local center.

Located at 2207 College Ave., it was opened to give county teenagers a place to enjoy themselves in an atmosphere free of both alcohol and drugs.

The Teen Center is supervised

Sun plant realigns top staff

Numerous personnel changes--including the retirement of District Plant Superintendent Jack Denman--were announced Friday by Sun Exploration and Production Company.

Denman retired Friday after 31 years with Sun. He will be succeeded in Snyder by Ronnie Foust who was promoted from plant process foreman.

Denman returned to Snyder three years ago to oversee the two plants in Snyder, the Jameson plant in Coke County and the Sun plant at Decater.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The surest way to hold on to your shirt is to roll your sleeves up."

Colonial Hill Baptist Church observed its 30th anniversary recently. Long-time minister Miller Robinson is the second minister to serve the church.

The congregation surprised and honored Robinson on that anniversary Sunday by presenting him with the deed to the parsonage.

It's Miller's custom to go to the back of the church and greet members of the congregation after the service. After the presentation, Miller was late reaching the foyer.

"Where have you been?" asked one of the deacons.

"Oh, I had to call Ray Peveler and complain about my property taxes."

We noted where State Treasurer Ann Richards let her political views be known when she declared, "I just vote the woman, not the party."

It reminds us of a story about Teddy Roosevelt who was making a whistlestop tour. He was repeatedly interrupted by a belligerent Irishman who kept shouting, "I'm a Dimmycrat, I'm a Dimmycrat!"

Losing his patience, the President interrupted his speech and asked the heckler why he was a Democrat. "Because me grandfather was a Dimmycrat, me father was a Dimmycrat and I'm a Dimmycrat," the man answered.

With elaborate scarcasm Teddy asked, "Suppose your grandfather had been a jackass and your father had been a jackass, what would you be?"

Without hesitation, the man replied, "A Republican."

We'll know good times are here again when we can have rain and telephone service at the same time.

Chamber luncheon is Monday

A preview of the Whirl-a-Gig musical — to be presented Oct. 13 as part of White Buffalo Days here — will be offered Monday at a special chamber of commerce noon luncheon.

The event will also mark another attempt by the chamber to give away a $100 door prize. The name of a chamber member will be drawn from the general membership list. To win, the individual must attend the luncheon.

It will begin at noon in Room A of the Scurry County Coliseum.

Q. — Are there any extra copies for sale of the book "Footprints Across Scurry County?"

A. — Book sponsors say no. No books were printed unless ordered. The book committee did order a few extra copies in expectation that individuals would still want some after the deadline was passed. These "extras" have now all been sold and the only remaining books are the few which are still to be picked up. It is expected there will be no extras left.

House break-in

Snyder police are investigateing an apparent daylight burglary discovered Friday afternoon.

Charles Blakely of 2800 El Paso reported the break-in at his residence at 5:04 p.m. Friday.

Entry was gained by forcing a residence door. Investigators Saturday morning did not have a complete list of items taken. These were thought to include three guns and several pieces of jewelry, however.

Grand jury in

The Scurry County grand jury will meet for it's regular October session at 9 a.m. Monday in the 132nd District Courtroom in the Scurry County Courthouse.

Book 'final'

Monday through Friday will be "absolutely the final week" to pick up copies of the "Footprints Across Scurry County" family history book at the book committee's office in the chamber of commerce building.

The committee worker, Cecile Kerley, will not be in the office at all times and persons who have paid for books are asked to make appointments. The number to call is 573-0780.

In addition, persons who have not picked up pictures used in the book are asked to pick these up also.

Fluvanna meet

A community meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Monday to finalize plans for the 1985 Fluvanna Homecoming. Orval Mathis, general chairman for the every-five-year event, urges all interested persons to be at the Fluvanna Community Center.

A place for the homecoming will be discussed and committees will meet.

Four are indicted in death of A&M cadet who was hazed

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Four Texas A&M University students, including three juniors present when a member of the school's Corps of Cadets suffered a fatal heat stroke during "motivational exercises," have been indicted on misdemeanor charges.

A Brazos County grand jury returned the indictments about 10 p.m. Friday. Earlier that day, its members heard nine hours of testimony, then deliberated four hours.

The panel was investigating the Aug. 30 death of Bruce Goodrich, 20, a sophomore member of the corps.

University officials said Goodrich collapsed after he was rousted from his bed at 2:30 a.m. on Aug. 30 and forced to run and do pushups and situps for about an hour on a hot, humid night. Officials said he was encouraged to get up and keep running after he dropped.

Three juniors present when Goodrich collapsed were indicted on charges of negligent homicide. They were 21-year-old Jason Miles of Houston; 20-year-old Louis Fancher III of San Antonio; and 21-year-old Anthony D'Allesandro of Houston.

All were members of corps unit F-1, which Goodrich had joined the week of his death.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

The three also were charged with violating a state statute against hazing, as was Gabriel Cuadra, a senior from Houston who was the personnel officer for the corps unit.

Cuadra, who resigned from the corps after Goodrich's death, also was charged with tampering with evidence.

The tampering charge — which also carries a maximum term of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine — alleges that Cuadra destroyed an "exercise schedule" while police were conducting an investigation, Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner said.

Convictions of violating the hazing statute could bring fines of $25 to $250 and jail sentences of 10 days to three months.

Grand jury foreman Bill Adams and other members of the panel refused to comment on the indictments.

Goodrich died at a Bryan hospital the same day he collapsed. A preliminary autopsy showed he died of heat stroke.

Officials said a final autopsy report would not be released until Monday.

Slain inmate second one killed this week

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A prisoner stabbed to death with a sharpened ruler was the second Texas penitentiary inmate killed this week and the 15th to die as the result of violence in the prison system this year, officials said.

Alvin Pink, 30, was fatally stabbed about 8:50 a.m. Friday in a hall at the Ramsey II Unit near Rosharon, said Charles Brown, a spokesman with the Texas Department of Corrections.

Pink was the 15th Texas prison inmate killed this year, officials said. He was the 14th to be stabbed to death.

Pink was serving a life sentence for a Harris County murder. Brown said officials were questioning a 28-year-old inmate serving 75 years for a residential burglary in Dallas County.

On Wednesday, Clifford Ray Shropshire, 31, serving 15 years for involuntary manslaughter in Denton County, was punched once in the head and died immediately.

Preliminary autopsy results released Thursday indicated Shropshire died of a broken neck. The incident occurred in the Darrington Unit's vegetable garden.

Ollie Falks, an investigator for the Brazoria County sheriff's department, said Shropshire and Donald Royale, 22, serving five years for burglary in Hunt County, were walking back to the prison unit from the pepper and okra fields.

Parents remain jailed...

Teenager indicted in carrier's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-ager remained free today following his indictment on a murder charge in the slaying of a female mail carrier, while his parents stayed behind bars for their refusal to testify against him before a grand jury.

Attorneys for Bernard and Odette Port tried to convince a judge to release the couple after the indictment was returned Friday. But the judge refused, saying the grand jury's inquiry was not finished and that the couple still needs to answer some questions.

Grand jurors returned the indictment against David Port, 17, on Friday. The teen-ager remained free on $20,000 bond on the murder charge, stemming from the shooting death of Debora Sue Schatz, 23.

Miss Schatz disappeared June 7 while making deliveries in the Ports' affluent west Houston neighborhood. Her body was found two days later in an isolated, wooded area north of Houston.

The youth's parents were jailed Sept. 12 on a contempt citation after they refused to testify before the grand jury investigating the killing.

The couple's attorney Randy Schaffer, sought to have the couple freed from jail. But Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers opposed their release because the grand jury will continue its investigation.

State District Judge Lupe Salinas denied the request late Friday.

"The grand jury has returned an indictment in the case, but the investigation is continuing as to possible capital murder charges," Salinas said. "Obviously there's a significant difference between the two charges. Murder carries five to 99 years. Capital murder is life or death."

Schaffer will make a similar plea to release the Ports on Monday before State District Judge I.D. McMaster, the presiding judge.

The grand jury handed down the indictment to avoid exceeding the 120-day limit of the Speedy Trial Act, which requires that such action be taken within four months of the arrest, Beers said.

Earlier Friday, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White rejected the elder Ports' request that they be granted bail pending their appeal of the contempt order.

The Ports, who are Jewish, contend it would violate their religion to be forced to testify against their son.

Prosecutors want to question the Ports about their knowledge of their son's activities on June 7, whether he made any statements to them about Miss Schatz, possible motives for the alleged murder and their son's emotional and mental history.

The Ports' attorneys argued a Texas law that prohibits spouses from being forced to testify against each other should apply to the parent-child relationship as well.

Their arguments have been rejected in state and federal courts.

POOR SLEEPING POSTURE CAN LEAD TO A RUDE AWAKENING

If you're 30 years of age, you have already spent approximately ten years . . . sleeping. In fact, whatever your age, about one third of your life has been spent in slumber. And the position in which you spend that third of your life can have a great effect on the condition of your health.

There's more to getting a really good night's sleep than just getting to sleep. Here are some guidelines from the American Chiropractic Association that might be helpful in attaining and maintaining good sleeping posture.

Pick Out a Good Mattress. Since you spend a third of your life in bed, the mattress you sleep on should be comfortable, but should be firm enough to give well-balanced support.

Don't Sleep on Your Stomach. Low back problems are compounded by sleeping on the abdomen. The best position is to sleep on your side with one or both knees drawn up.

Select a Good Pillow. It could be the answer to many neck problems. Sleeping without a pillow is a sure way to develop discomfort in the neck. And pillows that are too thick are as harmful as pillows that are too thin.

Don't Use Your Arm for a Pillow. People who sleep in the prone position (on their abdomens) have a tendency to use their arms for head support. This not only cuts off circulation, but places a great deal of stress on the arms, shoulders, and upper back. It's not good to sleep with the arms or hands tucked under any part of the body.

Doctors of chiropractic are among the strongest advocates of correct posture. They have made an intense study of conditions related to the spine and nervous system, and recognize the value of the correct placement of the body's structural components to functional ability and health.

Dear Abby

Miserly Husband May Give Woman a Miserable Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when the man you're in love with is "tight"? I've been going with this retired gentleman for two years. Money is not a problem in his life. He's charming and personable and we get along beautifully, but our routine goes like this:

He eats lunch at my home five days a week, and dinner twice. When we go out for the day, he asks me to pack one of my "real good meals," and like a jerk, I do it! He has bought me coffee and lunch once in a great while. He gave me one small gift last Christmas and that was that.

He's asked me to marry him, but I can't imagine how he'd treat me as a wife. Meanwhile, as a widow I had built up a life with other women until he came along. Now I'm seeing less and less of them as he is monopolizing my time. Am I weak in the head? I really care for him. At least he hasn't asked me to do his laundry yet.

Is there a solution? Hinting hasn't helped.

LITTLE ME

DEAR LITTLE: Quit hinting and tell him what's on your mind. And don't marry him until everything having to do with money is spelled out clearly beforehand, because cheapskates usually get cheaper after they're married.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had just finished lunching at a very fine restaurant. As we were walking out the door, my husband slipped on the marble floor and broke his arm.

We are bringing suit against the restaurant, but have been told that we don't have a case because my husband was drunk. He was a little tipsy, but he wasn't falling-down drunk or anything like that.

I know you're not a lawyer, Abby, but do we have a case or don't we?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: I learned the following in my high school commercial law class: "A drunk person is just as entitled to a safe place to walk as a sober one—and more in need of it."

DEAR ABBY: Twenty-five years ago, my husband left me with three small children. Two years later I married a fine man who raised my children as his own. They saw practically nothing of their natural father. My husband was the only father they ever really knew. They always called him "Dad."

Recently the children's natural father died and all three children sent flowers to his funeral as a show of respect.

When my husband heard about the flowers, he ranted like a madman! Now he refuses to speak to any of the children, and if they come to the house, he leaves. I think he's being unreasonable and cruel. Abby, I've been crying myself to sleep every night about it.

I dearly love my husband, but I love my children, too, and I would rather leave my husband than see my children treated this way.

What should I do?

TORN IN TWO

DEAR TORN: Your husband's behavior is irrational. Even though your children saw practically nothing of their natural father, to have acknowledged his death with flowers was a kind and generous gesture that in no way diminishes the love and respect they feel for the stepfather who raised them.

Please don't make a decision as important as this without seeking professional counseling. And urge your husband to get counseling, too. He desperately needs it.

Senator says tax hike fair for all

AUSTIN (AP) — If lawmakers can't find the $114 million needed for a 6 percent pay raise for state workers, Texans should pay higher taxes to fund the emergency increase, a state senator says.

But Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, said Friday the tax hike should be a last resort of the 1985 Legislature. Howard is one of three co-sponsors of the pay raise bill pushed by the Texas Public Employees Association.

The 20,000-member organization has asked Gov. Mark White to support an emergency pay raise in January.

Gary Hughes, TPEA executive director, said the state's 175,000 employees are "stranded" as a result of a recently effective 3 percent pay hike that has been more than eaten up by a hike in insurance premiums.

The insurance hike was up to 25 percent for some state workers.

"In other words, while the cost of living continues to climb, state employee incomes will be standing still or slipping back through next August," Hughes said, asking the 1985 Legislature to "come to the rescue of stranded state employees with some emergency pay hike."

"Right now it is imperative for the state to recognize the problems of our state employees," said Howard, calling the workers "very patient and long-suffering."

The bill's sponsors will be Howard, vice chairman of the Senate finance committee; Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene and finance committee chairman; and Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and House Appropriations Committee chairman.

Howard says he knows the TPEA request comes amid forecasts of a tight budget. Comptroller Bob Bullock recently predicted the state money shortfall could reach $1.7 billion through 1987.

"In light of Mr. Bullock's projection ... I feel that the state employees deserve and should receive some benefits as a result of an additional tax," said Howard.

"You look at all the other considerations first," he added.

2 candidates claim victories

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Both candidates for Texas' U.S. Senate seat claimed victory after their first debate in which Democrat Lloyd Doggett charged Republican Phil Gramm with running a "lie-and-buy" campaign.

Gramm countered in the televised Friday night matchup that Doggett, a state senator from Austin, had "promised every special interest group" that he would support raising taxes and that he voted five times against right-to-work laws in Texas.

The big question, however, was whether anyone watched the debate, broadcast from Gramm's home town of College Station across the state on public television stations. The 8 p.m. confrontation was running opposite the season premier of CBS' "Dallas" series, always a ratings topper.

Friday night also is high school football night in Texas, drawing thousands of people away from television.

Indeed, asked by moderator Ron Stone, an anchorman for a Houston TV station, to define the "average Texan" to whom he was trying to appeal, Gramm said he guessed the average Texan would be "watching high school football now instead of this debate."

Topics ranged from national defense to gay rights and immigration laws as the two answered 11 questions from four reporters.

Doggett identified himself as "David" in a "David and Goliath" scenario and accused Gramm of running a "lie-and-buy" campaign.

Gramm, meanwhile, sought to tie Doggett to the Democratic presidential campaign of Walter Mondale, labeling him a liberal big-spender and a "millionaire lawyer" who has accepted campaign donations from a male strip-show in San Antonio.

"I think we won," Gramm said. "I think it was a clear-cut debate. I think we got to the heart of the matter. I think we won not because I'm inherently better-looking, but we got by those rocks my opponent has been throwing. I don't think it helps the political process to be calling people a liar.

"You heard a lot of very harsh rhetoric and name-calling, but you didn't hear it from me."

Throughout the debate, Gramm accused Doggett of wanting to raise taxes and opposing a strong defense.

"I thought it was so much fun, I want to do it again," Doggett said afterward.

Asked who won the debate, Doggett replied, "We did."

As Doggett gave his concluding remarks, Gramm gave a thumbs-up sign to the audience. At the conclusion of the debate, one of Doggett's daughters ran up and hugged her father.

While Doggett was speaking, Gramm repeatedly wiped his brow with a white handkerchief. On occasion, Doggett would speak directly to Gramm and ignore the camera.

Doggett called Gramm a "servant for those who already have it made," while he said his supporters are "going up the ladder."

Doggett attacked Gramm for "fiscal irresponsibility" and also complained that Gramm supported cuts in Social Security, denied education to those that need it and cut loans to farmers.

Gramm, meanwhile, remarked it was "humorous" for Doggett to quote from the Bible "when he is opposed to school prayer."

Questioned how he would raise money and cut spending, Doggett said he would "survey every federal spending program" help reduce waste and look at loopholes. Gramm replied that his record shows that "no one is more committed than I've been" when it comes to trimming federal waste.

"I'm not going to vote to cut the heart out of your budget by raising your taxes," he said.

Doggett said that Gramm favored elimination of income tax deductions for home mortgages, a statement that Gramm denied.

Doggett accused Gramm of "trying to develop fear" through statements about campaign donations made by the owner of a San Antonio male strip club. Doggett insisted that the $300 contribution was returned.

"I don't share their perspective, but I'm not going to see them made an object of fear or hate" he said of Texas' homosexuals.

"When you go in and cut Social Security and cut education, you've got to concentrate on such issues," Doggett said.

Gramm said the issue is "pandering." He said Doggett is "pledged to support their legislation," referring to the gays.

Doggett shot back, "The only reason he's made this an issue is because there are more Gramm wrongs than gay rights."

On prayer in public schools, Doggett said he is committed to voluntary prayer, but "we don't need more politicans telling us how, when and in what places we can pray."

Gramm responded, "the bottom line is that my opponent voted against voluntary school prayer."

On immigration legislation, Gramm accused Doggett of changing his position on the Simpson-Mazzoli Act, saying he had originally supported segments of the bill, then switched.

On Central America, Doggett said it is important to "protect our national interest and curb Cuban influence." He added that current policies have not worked.

Gramm said he was alarmed that Soviets might "have a foothold in Central America" and said that the United States could not allow such a foothold to influence Mexico or "20 million refugees" would be fleeing to this country.

Doggett repeatedly accused Gramm of cutting Social Security benefits, but Gramm said his mother was the recipient of those benefits and said "I'm not going to take that checks away from my mama."

"The bottom-line is that I was there when we voted to put Social Security back in the black," Gramm said.

"The Almanac of Investments" says one of the most expensive cars ever built was the 1969 Presidential Lincoln Continental Executive. It has a length of 21-feet, 6.3-inches, with a 13-foot, 4-inch wheelbase, and weighs 12,000 pounds. Even if all four tires are shot out, it can travel at 50 miles an hour on inner rubberedged steel discs. The estimated cost of the car is $500,000.

Today, 34 urban centers have more than 5 million residents, yet in 1950 only seven were this large. The United Nations projects that by 2025 there will be 93 such cities, and 80 of these will be in the developing nations.

Man who shot pupils charged in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A 28-year-old man who surrendered to law officers, saying he was the gunman who shot one boy and fired on another, explained only that he was "mad and upset with the world," officers said.

Samuel George was in Harris County Jail on bonds totaling $40,000 after he was charged with one count of attempted murder and two counts of assault with a deadly weapon, authorities said Friday.

George is accused of shooting a boy who was raising the U.S. flag and firing at another who was walking to a second school. George, accompanied by his parents, turned himself in to officers at a sheriff's department substation about 4:30 a.m. Friday.

Sturgis said that later in the day, George took detectives to his Cypress-area home, where he lives with his parents, and showed them the .22-caliber semi-automatic rifle he used in the shootings.

Sheriff's Capt. Mike Quinn said George led detectives to the car that witnesses reported seeing the gunman drive.

Sturgis said a student positively identified George as the gunman.

Investigators said that as far as they could determine George was never a student in the district.

George is charged in the shooting of 10-year-old Joshua Baker Littell, who was wounded in the arm at about 8:40 a.m. Thursday at Millsap Elementary School in the Cypress-Fairbanks school district, located northwest of Houston.

The boy suffered a fracture just above his elbow and was treated at Cypress-Fairbanks Medical Center Hospital, where he was listed in fair condition Friday, officials said.

George told authorities he also fired a shot at a seventh-grader on Thursday at Bleyl Junior High School, which is located about four miles from Millsap Elementary. The youth, 13-year-old Curtis McGuffie, was unharmed.

School prinicpal Ben Ledbetter said the teen-ager was the only student outside the school during the shooting because he had overslept and was more than an hour late for school.

After George turned himself in, school officials lifted the tight security they had imposed upon district's 27 schools after the shooting.

"Everything is returning to normal," said George Drushel, administrative assistant for public information for the district.

A classmate of the wounded boy, Nicol Adams, 9, said the incident left her "a little bit frightened to go outside."

'Everybody was talking about it in class, and I didn't know what to believe," the girl said. "Somebody had said he had been cut, then the teacher told us he was shot."

Man shoots up his alma mater

NORTH RICHLAND HILLS, Texas (AP) — A heavily armed man wanted in the slaying of a karate expert was charged with attempted murder after he sprayed the foyer of his old high school with gunfire, police said.

Barry Wayne Shaw, 21, was disarmed by the principal of Richland High School shortly after the gunfire Friday morning and held at bay until authorities arrived.

School principal Ray Williams said later that "my knees got a little weak" after he learned Shaw was wanted on a murder warrant.

Shaw was taken to the Tarrant County Jail in Fort Worth, where he was being held in lieu of $500,000 bond on the attempted murder charge, according to Randy Schiflet, a spokesman for the North Richland Hills Police Department.

One student hit by flying metal fragments was treated for minor injuries by the school nurse, Williams said. The gunman fired about 30 rounds, Schiflet said.

Shaw — was a 1981 graduate of the school, located in this city northeast of Fort Worth — allegedly walked into the foyer at about 8:50 a.m. and began firing an automatic rifle.

Black farmers blame Reagan for decline in farms owned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of black farmers may dwindle to zero by the year 2000, partly because of discrimination by Agriculture Department lending officials in the South, black leaders say.

"If something is not done about it, a breed will be extinct," said Ralph Paige, director of the Federation of Southern Cooperatives, a group that pools the resources of about 10,000 black farmers to bolster their competitiveness.

Paige and other black leaders, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, criticized the Reagan administration in harsh terms at a news conference Friday to call attention to the shrinking number of black producers.

Blacks on farms are going out of business at a rate 2½ times the much-publicized rate of their white counterparts, the group said.

Government figures showed that in 1920, 926,000 of the nation's 6.4 million farms were operated by blacks. Today there are just 2.4 million farms, but the number of black-operated farms has fallen far faster, to only 57,000.

Joe Brooks, president of the Atlanta-based aid group Emergency Land Fund, contended that black farmers in the South, where most are concentrated, are still struggling against a racist "good old boy network" that controls Agriculture Department offices there.

"We don't have access on par with our white counterparts," Brooks said.

And Jackson, who has been campaigning to register black voters and promoting the candidacy of Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale, called the department's alleged inaction "classic, vintage Reagan anti-black, anti-poor behavior."

He said that in 1980, the year before Reagan took office, blacks received 3 percent of mortgage loans and 8 percent of operating loans from the Farmers Home Administration, or FmHA, the government agency that is the farm lender of last resort for those who cannot get loans from commercial sources.

Last year, blacks got just 1 percent of ownership loans and 5 percent of operating loans, said Jackson. The average size of loans to blacks was less than half those made to whites, according to figures compiled by the aid groups.

The top civil rights officer for FmHA, William True, said while he could not confirm the figures, the trend for loans to blacks is downward.

But he said the agency has not sat still in the face of the problem.

FmHA has contracted with North Carolina A&T University to develop a new financial management training system for young black farmers. It also is beginning to hire black agricultural faculty members in 13 Southern states to work with state FmHA directors on problems of black farmers.

Try to discover fever origin

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Doctors will try to determine the origin of a fever that has put Gov. George C. Wallace back in the hospital, for the fourth time since his inauguration.

Wallace, 65, had no comment to reporters or onlookers as he was wheeled into University Hospitals on Thursday.

"About mid-morning his fever was about 101 to 102 degrees," said Billy Joe Camp, the governor's press secretary. "He worked in the office yesterday and woke up this morning feeling badly. He hasn't been in for a checkup in a long time."

Emily has been working in the housekeeping department of the Purple Sage Motel for the last 3½ years. She has since worked her way up to head maid.

One of Emily's responsibilities is inspecting the rooms. This is an especially important job since the Purple Sage is listed in both the AAA Tour Book and the Mobil Travel Guide. Each of these organizations has special guidelines which must be followed to be approved by them. Only the top 20% of hotels and motels are accepted.

Emily is not only responsible for insuring the rooms are clean and comfortable, she must check everything. There are requirements concerning: storage, beds, desks, fire protection - even the wattage of light fixtures.

Art and Helen Feinsod, owners of the Purple Sage, rely a great deal on Emily to keep the rooms ready for the yearly spot inspections by representatives of AAA and the Mobil Travel Guide. Because of the fine effort of employees like Emily Freeman, the Purple Sage has now had an increase in their rating in the Mobil Travel Guide. ADV.

September farm prices off by 2.8 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers got an average of 2.8 percent less cash for their raw products in September, while their costs for supplies and other expenses held steady, the Agriculture Department says.

In its monthly report on agricultural prices released Friday, the department said the index for prices received by farmers was 2.2 percent above its level of a year earlier and the gauge for prices paid was up by 1.9 percent from 1983.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said declines in the prices for potatoes, hogs, beef cattle, oranges, corn and soybeans were only partly offset by increases in prices farmers got for tobacco, apples, peaches, milk and broilers, the board reported.

The prices farmers paid in September for supplies, services, interest, taxes and wages was unchanged from August, with feed and feeder livestock prices falling while fuels and energy costs rose.

The release of the figures came while Agriculture Secretary John Block was on a Farm Belt campaign swing, saying in Omaha, Neb., that the Reagan administration is helping farmers through the "stress and strain" it inherited from the Carter years. About 15 picketers protested outside his speech to the Chamber of Commerce.

Block said at a news conference that farmers "are living under some tough conditions. None of us wants to say they are not." But he said after 3½ years in office, the Reagan administration is "starting the correction process" to help the farm economy.

Friday's price report said that in the crop sector, prices generally were 4.2 percent lower than for August but 2.2 percent above September 1983. Livestock and livestock products prices were off 2.1 percent from the previous month and 2.2 percent higher than a year ago.

Revised figures for August showed that the latest downturn actually started last month, instead of holding steady as preliminary figures had shown. August prices were off by about 0.7 percent.

Prices rose sharply in August 1983, reflecting the reduced crops that resulted from drought and the government's one-year payment-in-kind acreage-reduction program. They dipped last fall, then rose early this year and had held relatively steady for the past four months.

But with PIK largely a thing of the past, millions of acres are back in production this year, and projections are for stockpiles of feed grains and wheat to begin mounting again. That has weakened the outlook for commodity prices next year.

Department economists are predicting a sharp upturn in 1984 overall farm income because of greater production and a rebuilding of inventories, and they say food prices may rise about 4 percent this year, significantly above last year's 2.1 percent increase, which was the smallest since 1967.

The preliminary September figures, based primarily on mid-month averages, the index for meat animals was off 3.9 percent from August but was up 5.8 percent from a year earlier.

Dairy products were up 2.2 percent from a month ago and 0.7 percent down from September 1983, while poultry and eggs were up 2.5 percent from August and down 3.9 percent from a year earlier.

Vegetable prices were 8.5 percent below August levels, averaging 4.8 percent above last year. Lower prices for tomatoes, onions and lettuce contributed most to the decline.

Potatoes, sweet potatoes and dry beans plummeted 40 percent from a month ago and were down 2.3 percent from a year earlier, with potatoes suffering the sharpest drop.

Corn led the decline in the feed grains and hay category, with the index 2.7 percent below August and 9 percent below last year.

Soybeans continued their decline, and all oil-bearing crops were down an average of 5 percent from a month earlier and 23 percent from 1983.

Overall, September farm commodity prices averaged 139 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures, four points lower than August's 143 index.

Last April the index rose to 146 percent, an all-time high, and then declined in May to 144 percent where it had been until August.

The September parity ratio of 56 percent was down two points from the 58 percent recorded in August. A year earlier the indicator was 56 percent.

Under the parity formula, prices farmers get for commodities are compared with prices they pay to meet expenses. It then uses a 1910-14 measurement to gauge what happened.

Senate trying to break civil rights filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, facing delays that threaten plans by Congress to adjourn next week, was trying today to break a filibuster by conservative lawmakers who oppose a controversial civil rights bill.

Supporters of the civil rights measure want to attach it to an emergency money bill designed to keep the government solvent. Without the spending bill, a number of agencies will go broke at midnight Sunday.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr. says he hasn't the "foggiest idea" when Congress may adjourn this year.

Sixty votes would be needed to limit debate by conservatives opposing the so-called Civil Rights Act of 1984, and there was some doubt whether supporters could muster that many backers during the unusual weekend session.

If the move fails, another attempt to get 60 votes would be made Monday — when chances would improve, given the legislation's 63 co-sponsors.

But even a successful "cloture" vote would allow several days of debate on the civil rights measure and leave the Senate in a crisis.

That's because the civil rights measure is holding hostage an emergency money bill and legislation to increase the debt ceiling. Supporters of the civil rights bill want to attach it to the appropriation measure.

And the government's authority to continue borrowing money, nearly at its limit, needs to be increased in a separate bill before Congress quits for the year.

"I don't have the foggiest idea when we're going to finish" the money bill, Baker said, adding, "I no longer target Oct. 5 as the adjournment date." Oct. 5 was the original quitting date set by Congress.

The civil rights proposal aims at overriding a Supreme Court ruling last Feb. 28 that a law banning sex discrimination at colleges receiving federal aid applied only to the specific program receiving assistance, and not the entire institution.

The measure would require recipients of federal money to comply with anti-discrimination laws even if the funds reached only one portion of the recipient organization or institution. Supporters of the proposal say it would restore the broad coverage of civil rights laws that existed before the court decision.

Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederate States of America, died in 1889.

Classic Designs

by Jeana Duke, Assoc. ASID

In interior design, the term PERSPECTIVE seems somewhat abstract. Applied to a room or office, however, it has a very tangible effect. Think conciously of creating a foreground, middle ground, and a background which will provide a three-dimensional effect for your interior.

Mirrors, although they can be somewhat expensive, will always give a room added depth and enlarge the space. They can be placed on a table or mantlepiece with a plant, silk flowers, or other small objects d'art and they will be given extra perspective. A hinged screen could also serve as a background, behind a small table in the middle ground, and finished off with a lamp or object in the foreground or focal area. Think in terms of depth or perspective within furniture arrangement and picture groupings as well.

Confused about PERSPECTIVE? Come by CLASSIC DESIGNS and let us help with your interior design needs. We can help you create a space that will be comfortable for your business or personal needs. "Quality furnishings, fine fabrics and unique accessories" ... Open 9:30 to 5:30 Monday through Friday.

Evangelist to form church

EULESS, Texas (AP) — Evangelist James Robison will leave the First Baptist Church of Euless and form his own church because of doctrinal differences with the church's pastor, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

The newspaper said the differences between Robison, a well-known television evangelist and the Rev. James T. Draper Jr., past president of the Southern Baptist Convention, involve Robison's teachings about healing, deliverance from demons and other spiritual gifts.

"James and I just have a basic disagreement," Draper said.

Robison told the newspaper he and his wife, Betty, will withdraw their membership from the Euless church next month and help form a Northeast Tarrant County satellite church of the more charismatic Lake Country Baptist Church in Fort Worth.

The church is being formed by the Rev. Jim Hylton, pastor of Lake Country Church and Dudley Hall, two of Robison's associates in his television, evangelical and Bible seminar ministry.

Draper said he met recently with Robison to discuss their differences. Draper has been preaching a series of sermons on the Southern Baptist view of healing, deliverance, speaking in tongues and other spiritual gifts.

"I just told him I cannot support him any more or stand with him, particularly on his approach to the condemnation of local churches and pastors," Draper said.

Relationships between Robison and some members of the Euless church have been strained because of his dramatic change to a more pentecostal-style, spirit-filled ministry, which is cludes an emphasis on spiritual gifts, such as healing and deliverance, the newspaper reported.

Milton Green, a non-theologically trained Bible teacher who has had a great influence on Robison, is believed to be at the center of the controversy, the newspaper reported. People who embraced the teachings of Green and Robison in their seminars have been described as "Greenies."

Some pastors have complained that church members who attended the Robison-Green seminars have come back to their churches and caused splits in the memberships, the newspaper said.

Draper said he was aware of the splits over disagreements concerning the teachings of Robison and Green. But he said he has taken a conciliatory approach and ignored the advice of some members who asked him to ask Robison to leave the church.

The Euless pastor said he never asked Robison to leave, but that he anticipates the evangelist will leave for the the Lake Country church.

The differences intensified recently, Draper said, when Robison asked for permission to use the church for a Bible seminar and Draper refused.

"James asked to use the church and I told him no. I told him I don't believe in what you are doing in your seminars and I can't let the church vbe totally identified with it," Draper said.

Robison said Friday he was not upset over Draper's refusal to allow him to use the church.

"I can understand why he refused, but I just don't understand why Christians can't cooperate with each other," Robison said.

Robison said he will remain a Southern Baptist and continue to teach that all churches, including Baptist ones, must follow the New Testament teachings, which he says comamnds that Christians continue the practice of using all the spiritual gifts.

Baptist are most anxious to use these spiritual gifts, but they've always been taught against it," Robison said.

Many Baptist theologians teach that the type of healing performed by Jesus and his Apostles was only for New Testament times and doesn't extend to modern times.

Robison now disagrees.

"The ministry of Jesus Christ is to be expressed today as it was then. We are seeing people undeniably healed. We still don't see some healed," Robison said.

The evangelist said his views on spiritual gifts are often misrepresented and he would have liked an opportunity to talk to members of the Euless church about his views.

"I would love to share with all churches, including my own, what I see. I would like them to hear it first-hand and not second-hand. I would like to answer questions," Robison said.

Robison said he will be identified with the new church, but intends for his main emphasis to be on his television ministry, which has been recently expanded to daily broadcasts on national cable networks.

Ex-senator to marry

LOVEJOY, Ga. (AP) — Former Sen. Herman Talmadge says he's ready to marry for the second time, at age 71.

Talmadge, who divorced his first wife seven years ago, said Wednesday he will marry Linda Pierce, a 45-year-old Gwinnett County home economist employed by the University of Georgia Extension Service.

Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Doctor can help with menopause

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a woman, 49, and apparently have started menopause. I started having hot flashes, sweating and insomnia this month. I have all my female organs. Should I have medication to control the hot flashes and sweating, or should I just let my body do its own work? What kind of medication? Should I see a doctor to find out if I have an estrogen deficiency?

DEAR READER — Of course you should see your doctor. Your age and symptoms certainly suggest that you are into your menopause. Having hot flashes is the one symptom that is characteristic of the menopause, and it is the one symptom that can be controlled by administering estrogen.

But there are a lot of other reasons why you should not just let Nature take its course. In the first three to seven years after menopause, a woman is most apt to lose a lot of her bone mass. That makes her susceptible to osteoporosis (porous bones), which may lead to a humped back and serious fractures later. Estrogen, in sufficient quantities at an early stage, can prevent these changes. Getting enough calcium helps, too.

The after-effects of the cancer scare linger on, but the amount of estrogen needed to control the important symptoms and side effects of the menopause is much less than was used before the panic. A small amount of estrogen may control hot flashes but may not be enough to prevent bone degeneration.

Many changes occur during menopause. Not all of them are because of diminished estrogen. I have discussed these in a new issue of The Health Letter, Special Report 22, Understanding the Menopause, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A short time ago there was a rash of stories that said high blood pressure was caused by not getting enough salt and calcium. Do you believe this is true? Do you recommend increasing one's salt intake to avoid high blood pressure?

DEAR READER — No, in answer to both questions. I believe that the sodium scare has been overdone. Many people who have a decrease in blood pressure from sodium restriction do so because of a loss of body fat that results from eating fewer calories. People often eat less on low-salt diets because the food is not appealing. There are many studies that show that body-fat loss does lower blood pressure.

The study you refer to did not prove anything. It only showed an association that suggests a need for research, and it is unrelated to the need to restrict sodium in many medical conditions, such as congestive heart failure.

I'm not unhappy with the findings, because many people are not getting the calcium they need. It may prove important in terms of blood pressure. But milk is a major source of calcium, and those in the study who got lots of calcium also used more milk. Milk is a good source of potassium, which may mask part of the results about calcium.

And I strongly disagree with the comment from the American Heart Association that expressed concern about people using more milk because it might increase cholesterol (and presumably saturated fat) intake. There are many excellent skim-milk products fortified with nonfat milk solids that are about as low in saturated fat and cholesterol as any food you can get. It is wrong to imply that these products could be implicated in causing heart disease.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read a report that two-thirds of the people on earth cannot digest milk because they lack something in their stomach. If I drink fortified milk day after day, I begin to feel sluggish and full, but I can drink some. Canned milk that has been heated seems OK. The report suggested using yogurt, as it was already digested.

Do I get any calcium or vitamins from the fortified milk even if I do feel sluggish? My last blood test showed my calcium was fine.

DEAR READER — The percentage of adults in the world who cannot tolerate large amounts of milk may be even greater than the figure you cite. Northwestern Europeans and those from Great Britain and their descendants are the only ethnic groups that do tolerate milk easily in adult life. Even about 10 percent of these people are deficient in lactase, the enzyme needed to completely digest lactose (milk sugar). In other ethnic groups, as many as 90 percent of adults may not tolerate milk well.

In some regions of the world, the way people avoided calcium deficiencies was by consuming yogurt. Cultured yogurt contains bacteria that form the same enzyme we use to digest milk sugar. And some yogurt does help, or at least can be digested without difficulty. That may not be true of all yogurt you can purchase.

Yes, despite some symptoms, the calcium in the fortified milk you drink is absorbed and used. The fact that you can drink some milk without symptoms means that you probably still produce some lactase enzyme — just enough to digest some milk but not enough to digest a large amount. If you want to increase your milk tolerance, you may want to use an enzyme powder, LactAid, to treat your milk in advance.

I have discussed the problems of milk intolerance and how to manage the problem with enzymes and foods in a recent issue of The Health Letter, Special Report 26, The Milk Question, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had a proctoscopic examination and it revealed a small anal fissure. The doctor said it was very small and he would not recommend surgery or cauterization. Anal suppositories were prescribed to promote healing. Meanwhile, I have discomfort and doubt that the suppositories will be that effective. Can a specific diet help to correct this problem?

DEAR READER — An anal fissure is literally a crack in the tissues. It is often caused by trauma associated with difficult bowel movements. Small fissures tend to heal if the cause of the trauma is reduced or eliminated.

You might keep the area well lubricated. The anal suppositories are to relieve pain and you should give them a chance to help, but I do think that you need to consider your bowel habits. You may be wise to increase the bulk in your diet and drink lots of water. That may help soften the stool so it will not injure the area. If that doesn't help, you may want to use a stool softener. Avoid straining when having a bowel movement.

Almost all anal fissures will heal with such management. It is rare that a chronic fissure develops and needs surgery. Moreover, there is always the danger that surgery to relieve anal-sphincter spasm may result in leakage.

"The Almanac of Investments" says one of the most expensive cars ever built was the 1969 Presidential Lincoln Continental Executive. It has a length of 21-feet, 6.3-inches, with a 13-foot, 4-inch wheelbase, and weighs 12,000 pounds. Even if all four tires are shot out, it can travel at 50 miles an hour on inner rubberedged steel discs. The estimated cost of the car is $500,000.

Examiner seeks UPS okay

AUSTIN (AP) — United Parcel Service won its biggest victory in its 18-year battle to make package deliveries between Texas cities when a state examiner recommended approval of the UPS application.

Texas Railroad Commission Examiner C. Kingsberry Ottmers, who previously had said state law barred UPS service within Texas, on Friday said her review of the 30,731-page record showed a clear need for the company's service.

She said she recommended approval "based on a showing of public necessity and convenience and fitness of (UPS) to provide the service and inadequacy of existing carriers to fulfill the public need."

In previous years, the commission said UPS — which is allowed to provide interstate service in Texas — could not make deliveries between Texas cities because of state law requiring regular routes and schedules.

UPS offers point-to-point pickups and deliveries on demand rather than on any fixed schedule. When asked to provide the Railroad Commission with its routes, UPS submitted a state highway map and said it would operate over all roads in Texas.

In August, the commission voted 2-1 to reject Ms. Ottmers' earlier report citing the state law she said banned UPS service within Texas. After complying with the commission's order to make a recommendation based on the record of the 15-month hearing, Ms. Ottmers came up with the positive proposal on Friday.

About 600 witnesses had testified at the hearing, including many small business owners who said that only UPS can provide the service they need. Some Texas businesses now send their goods outside of Texas so that UPS can deliver them back to Texas cities.

Tex-Pack Express, a group of Texas package delivery services, has fought the UPS application.

Ms. Ottmers on Friday said the case record showed that UPS was correct in claiming its service is in demand in Texas.

"There is a public need," she said. "There is an inadequacy of the existing services to meet the need. UPS can meet that need."

The recommendation now faces commission review, probably within two months, officials said.

Mrs. Ottmers predicted the commission decision will not end the long battle.

"The whole thing will (ultimately) go to court," she said.

Attorneys and officials with Tex-Pack were not available for comment late Friday.

A lawyer representing UPS said he was "delighted" with the recommendation.

"We think the record supports it. We look forward to the matter being acted on by the commission," said Joe Kilgore of Austin.

Asked if the commission decision would end the case, Kilgore said, "We would not be surprised if it wound up in court again."

School personnel, officials to discuss education reform

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Six thousand administrators and school board members are gathering for three days of discussions on the state's new education reforms.

The occasion is the joint conventions of the Texas Association of School Administrators and the Texas Association of School Boards.

On tap Sunday is the first gathering of the newly appointed State Board of Education. As many as 10 of the 15 board members are expected to attend a special reception Sunday night.

Gov. Mark White appointed the 15 last week, implementing a new facet of the education reform package calling for an appointed board. The previous 27-member panel was elected.

Also expected to appear is State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum, who is scheduled to make a presentation Sunday on the education reform bill passed in a special session of the legislature this summer.

The bill calls for massive reforms in public education and raises taxes by nearly $3 billion to pay for the improvements.

Also on the agenda are appearances by Rep. Bill Haley and Sen. Carl Parker, respective chairmen of the House and Senate education committees. They are expected to present a legislative viewpoint of the reforms.

Democratic state Sen. Lloyd Doggett and Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, who are vying for the U.S. Senate, are to speak at a Monday luncheon.

Participants are to attend workshop sessions on such topics as curriculum, school finance, board leadership, school law, teacher pay, public relations and personnel evaluation.

Each organization will hold a delegate assembly, where the education changes will be discussed and policy statements will be adopted.

The groups will honor the state's outstanding school board Sunday night. The winner will be selected from among finalists Fort Worth, Irving, La Marque and Tuloso-Midway.

Also to be recognized is the superintendent of the year. Nominees are Ed West of the North East School District in San Antonio, Johnny Clark of Goose Creek, Mark Culwell of Corsicana and Tony Rico of Weslaco.

Peace hopes linger despite strike vote

LONDON (AP) — Hopes of a fresh initiative to end Britain's seven-month miners' strike lingered today, despite an overwhelming vote by mine foremen to launch their own work stoppage and bring the few operating coalfields to a standstill.

The independent Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service said in a statement Friday night that it plans exploratory talks with the state-run National Coal Board and miners' leaders next week.

"Both the NCB and the National Union of Mineworkers have today indicated their readiness to meet ACAS officials," the statement said.

Arbitration service Chairman Pat Lowry said his mediators were "continuing the process of exploring the ground privately and confidentially."

The British news agency Press Association earlier reported that a new formula had been devised and the 183,000-strong miners' union had accepted it, but the coal board had not reached any decision yet. Nine earlier peace attempts have collapsed.

The miners' strike has idled two-thirds of Britain's 175 state-owned mines. Those kept working by rebel miners opposed to the strike would be closed if the foremen walk out, because the foremen carry out essential safety functions.

Man runs frog collectors club

By JUDY HARPER
The Scottsdale
Daily Progress

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — It all began when his girlfriend, who later became his wife, purchased an orange, yellow and green shower curtain. To coordinate, she picked up a toothbrush holder, soap dish and hand towels — all displaying frogs with bright orange and yellow eyes.

"Then someone gave me a card with a frog on it and then a T-shirt. From that point, I just kind of latched onto frogs," said Bobby Harr.

Twelve years later, he added, "I still have the frogs but not the wife."

Harr, 34, is founder and president of the Frog Connection, a Scottsdale-based frog collectors' club. For the past three years he has been studying frogs and frog paraphernalia and started the club last year to bring collectors together.

Members get a calendar with prints of frogs and the Frog Chronicles, a quarterly publication with such features as the Lily Pad question and answer column, Croaks (negative) and Ribets (positive) comments and the Toadal Shopper, a swap and shop section.

"There are about a half million people who collect frogs, but until I started this club, there wasn't any information on collecting," he said. "And frogs are just like antiques — they aren't worth anything without documentation."

Harr has everything from a lead frog to a frog back massager. Even his carpet is green.

A "Welcome to my Pad" doormat prepares visitors for what's inside Harr's studio apartment, but even that isn't enough to warn of the 300 or so frogs that share the abode. Every nook and cranny of the apartment is occupied by the four-legged amphibians. Signs suggest such ideas as "Housework causes warts" and "Beauty is only skin deep — thank God."

Shoplifting arrest

A 16-year-old juvenile was arrested on a misdemeanor theft charge at Furr's Supermarket Friday afternoon.

According to reports, the suspect was arrested by city police responding to a shoplifting call from store employees at 3:22 p.m.

The suspect was charged with one count of misdemeanor theft and placed in the juvenile detention facilities at the Scurry County jail.

He was later released to the custody of his parents Saturday morning.

In other action Friday, city police jailed four suspects on misdemeanor charges. Three were jailed for public intoxication and one was taken to jail as a traffic instanter after running a stop sign.

Pickup fire here

Snyder firemen extinguished a pickup fire at the intersection of 25th St. and Ave. R at 5:50 p.m. Friday.

According to reports, a 1979 Ford pickup owned by F&F contractors of Snyder sustained extensive damage from the blaze.

Bill Ford of Snyder was driving the pickup when the fire ignited.

Friday accident

A single minor traffic mishap was reported in Snyder Friday.

Involved in the 7:48 a.m. mishap in the 3400 Block of 44th St. were a 1984 Ford driven by Angelique Duncan of 3407 44th St. and a 1979 Chevrolet driven by Carla Jo Chapman of 3406 44th St.

No injuries were reported to either driver.

The company is also asking the court to order the appraisal district to pay all legal fees incurred by them in bringing the appeal into court.

Those fees are currently estimated to range from $5,000 to $12,500, depending on how far the legal challenge will be carried in the courts. No "damages" are sought.

Dresser Industries is not challenging valuations for their real property in the county or other "personal property" tax values. The petition indicates also the company intends to pay all taxes not in dispute.

Dresser Industries is represented in the case by the Austin law firm of Hearne, Knolle, Lewallen, Livingstone and Holcomb.

dent, Foust will assume responsibility for the four plants.

During his career with Sun, Denman has worked as a roustabout, operator, engineering technician, foreman, field training coordinator, and plant superintendent.

Denman first came to Snyder in 1970 as an engineering technician. In 1977, he was transferred to Dallas where he spent two years before being transferred to Oklahoma for seven months.

When he returned to Snyder, he also was in charge of California gas plant operations for Sun.

Denman has been active in Snyder civic affairs. He is a member of the board of directors of the Snyder chamber of commerce and is a member of the City Zoning Board of Adjustments. Denman also is a member of the Snyder Lions Club and the Colonial Hill Baptist Church. He and his wife, Frances, have been married 34½ years.

Foust, the new plant superintendent, will oversee an operation that employs 82 persons. Foust started with Sun in Dallas in 1953. He worked as a roustabout in Arp and Gainesville before moving to the Jameson plant in 1957. He was transferred to McAllen in 1965 and to Maracaibo, Venezuela in 1969. He returned to the Jameson Plant as a senior engineer technician in 1971 and in 1975 he moved to Snyder as plant operator foreman.

His wife, Carol, is office manager for H&L Services. They have two daughters, Vicki and Linda, who live in Longview. A son, Robert, lives in Snyder and works for Tri-State Construction. Foust is a Baptist and is a member of the Snyder Country Club.

In other personnel changes, Mike Post, an employee of Sun since 1970, will replace Foust as plant process foreman. Post has had assignments with Sun in Perryton; Healdton, Okla.; Moore, Okla.; Hennessey, Okla.; and his latest assignmen in Silver as gas plant engineer technician. Post is married and has two boys, ages five and eight.

H. K. Lofton, a Snyder gas plant employee since 1951, will retire next spring as field and maintenance foreman and will be replaced by Bob Burney who has been promoted from maintenance leader.

Lofton began his career with Sun as a meterman and other duties have included gas tester, gas systems foreman, senior plant foreman, and specialist plant foreman.

Burney began his work with the company in 1957. He has served as roustabout, oiler, repairman and maintenance leader.

Additional Snyder personnel changes announced include B. L. Smith who began work in 1951 and retired on June 1, 1984. He worked as a truck loader and meter repairman.

H. R. Stokes was employed in 1953 and retired on July 1, 1984. He began work as a train loader, worked as a compressor operator, production maintenance man and maintenance assistant.

Leroy Brown started with Sun in 1952 and retired Aug. 1 of this year. Postions he held include meter repairman, train loader, electrician, senior repairman and master craftsman.

C. L. Mearse also retired effective Aug. 1 after beginning work in 1951. He worked as a tank farm operator, lab operator, generator operator, meterman, gas tester, and meter repairman.

H. R. Carmichael was employed in 1953 and will retire in July of 1985. He has worked as utility man, generator operator, lab operator, tank farm operator, chief train loader, process operator and meter repairman.

L. R. Feaster began his work with Sun in 1954 at the Jameson plant and transferred to Snyder in 1971 as operator of the SACROC CO2 removal facility. He will retire July, 1985.

B. M. Null, an employee since 1951, will retire in May of 1955. He began his career as a roustabout in Starr County. He moved to Snyder in 1973 as senior engineer technician and then became plant engineer specialist.

Meetings set

The Snyder city council has two meetings planned this week including Monday's regular October session.

The council is to meet again Thursday to consider a rate request submitted by Lone Star Gas Co.

Monday's session will begin at 6:30 p.m. at city hall.

In addition, the Scurry County Appraisal District will conduct its regular monthly session Tuesday. This meeting will be at 5 p.m at the district offices.

Scurry County commissioners will be in regular weekly session Monday at 10 a.m. as well.

Agency formed to help when one parent snatches a child

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Deborah Steiner von Rooyen considers herself one of the lucky ones. After eight weeks, 10,000 miles and $20,000, she tracked her estranged husband and abducted daughter to a suburban bungalow in Pretoria, South Africa, where police recovered the child.

Primavera Garrido was less fortunate. She found her 3-year-old daughter in Rosquetas, a tiny seaside village near Barcelona, Spain. But when she tried to take the child, Nelly, her in-laws attacked her. While she waited for the courts to act, her husband and child vanished a second time.

Ms. Garrido is still searching, haunted by the memory of her missing daughter.

"Your whole world just seems to fall apart," she says. "I'll wake up in the middle of the night and think, 'Nelly's not here.'"

The two women are among the growing ranks of parents whose children have been taken overseas, kidnapped by their foreign parent.

Their stories are strikingly similar. A quick romance and marriage to a foreign national; a child, an acrimonious divorce. Then one day, the estranged parent snatches the child away to the sanctuary of his or her native land, protected by conflicting laws and red tape.

"It's much harder when the children are taken overseas," says Richard Stenzel, the head of a California detective agency that specializes in recovering "parent-napped" children.

"You've got citizenship priorities. That country may feel it owes some allegiance to that person."

The State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs is investigating 1,429 cases of international child abduction. An estimated 691 American children are believed in Europe, 249 were taken to the Mideast, 50 to Africa, 86 to Asia and 353 are believed in Latin America.

The incidents appear to be increasing.

"We started counting cases in 1980 and each year the number of cases doubles," says a State Department official who asked not to be named. "We don't know if it's a new problem or if people are just finding out they can contact us."

Ms. van Rooyen thinks the numbers may be higher. "Many people don't know who to call," she says. As a result, she formed the International Child Abduction Information and Search Agency, an organization she thinks can help parents find their missing children.

The struggling agency was formed in May and already has received more than 100 calls.

"We're trying to establish a major network of police, lawyers and reputable detectives," she says. "With what took me two months and 300 names, I can give someone help in a few hours."

A 33-year-old photographer and graphic artist, Ms. van Rooyen met her husband while on assignment in South Africa. They married, moved to the Boston area and had a child, Kierie. The couple divorced two years later.

A month after the divorce, her husband failed to return from a weekend with their daughter. He left a note that read, "I've taken Kierie and gone to South Africa. If you try to find me I will travel further."

Local police hesitated, reluctant to get involved in a domestic problem. They told Ms. van Rooyen her husband would be back. She tried the FBI; they couldn't act until local police brought kidnapping charges. By that time her child was in South Africa.

Ms. van Rooyen ran up a $1,000 phone bill "calling everyone I could think of in South Africa." In desperation, she called the South African national police and found a sympathetic ear. A week later she flew to Cape Town to continue the search with money borrowed from friends.

In the weeks that followed, as police investigated deadend leads, she received custody of the child from the South African courts and told her story in the South African newspapers. The coverage prompted a phone call from her husband.

His call was the key. Authorities traced him to Pretoria, and then — with the help of a detective and local police — to a friend's home.

Following a dramatic chase and confrontation, Ms. van Rooyen was reunited with Kierie.

The experience convinced her that parents in such a situation must travel overseas to recover their child.

"People told me to wait for the authorities. There are no authorities," she says. "No one will look for a child unless you show up on their doorstep with tears in your eyes and find a big-hearted policeman."

The task of recovering an abducted child may be made easier by the Hague Convention on Civil Aspects of Parental Child Abduction, a 27-nation agreement that calls for the return of abducted children to parents with court-granted custody.

The agreement is in force in France, Switzerland, Canada and Portugal. The other countries — including the United States — must still ratify the convention.

Ms. van Rooyen, who is now trying to help 22 parents find their children in Saudi Arabia, Canada, Spain and South America, says it may take 10 years for all the countries to ratify the agreement.

Until then, she says, the burden rests with the parent. Ms. van Rooyen advises parents with missing children to take direct action. "It won't happen sitting back and waiting for someone else to do it," she says.

Ongoing erosion battle continues

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — For 160 years, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has fought to keep the sand on Presque Isle Peninsula, a claw-shape spit that shelters Erie harbor.

But, says Gene Giza, superintendent of Presque Isle State Park, "Controlling erosion at Presque Isle is like stringing beads without having a knot on the end of the thread."

At stake is a multimillion dollar tourist industry. A state park since 1922, Presque Isle has seven miles of beaches and a rich mix of lagoons, bays, ponds and marshes that form an ecological sanctuary.

The sandy playground lured 4.5 million visitors last year — do"ter visiting Yellowstone National Park. It accounts for 60 percent of Erie County's $114 million-a-year tourist industry, officials say.

Since Congress passed the first Rivers and Harbors Act in 1824, more than $21 million has been spent to defend the six-mile long, 3,200-acre sandbar from Lake Erie's relentless currents and severe storms that can whip up 15-foot waves.

Ramparts built over the decades have included at least 34 groins, which are fingers of rock laid perpendicular to the shore to trap sand, 12 jetties, five bulkheads, three sand traps, cribwork breakwaters and nylon bags filled with grout.

"You name it and we've tried it," says Denton Clark, chief of coastal engineering for the Corps' Buffalo District. "It's a capsule history of coastal engineering."

In the past 30 years, more than 4.2 million tons of sand has been dumped at a total cost of $14.8 million. Under a 1962 agreement, the federal government bears 70 percent of the cost; the state pays the rest.

Engineers think the answer is to build a line of 58 parapets called rubblemound breakwaters that would intercept waves, absorb their energy and cut erosion by 75 percent. The 150-foot long breakwaters would be 400 feet from shore and spaced 350 feet apart.

Three experimental breakwaters were built in 1978 with positive results. A mockup of the peninsula built at the Waterways Experimental Station in Vicksburg, Miss., also showed the breakwaters would work.

However, the federal Office of Management and Budget balked at the $31 million price tag. Last October, it asked the Corps to study a cheaper alternative.

A second option would have 38 breakwaters with two miles of beach anchored by cobblestones covered with sand. The cost would be $26 million, but the idea of stones has stirred controversy because it would create stone beaches.

Births

WTC pupils happy choosing relatives as dorm roommates

Getting the right roommate was a piece of cake for at least eight dormitory residents at Western Texas College this fall. They chose relatives to share living space, and all are pleased ith the arrangement.

David Ehlers of Wilson and Greg Ehlers of Slaton are double cousins. David graduated from Wilson High School and Greg from Slaton High School, schools located about 11 miles apart.

David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ehlers and Greg's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Arlis Ehlers. They are both freshmen and neither has selected a major as yet.

Rene and Latrice King of Lubbock are the daughters of the Rev. and Mrs. K. C. King. Rene is a sophomore and Latrice a freshman. Both graduated from Lubbock's Estacado High School and both are majoring in theatre education at WTC.

Freddie and Toby Villa of Haskell are the sons of Mrs. Delia Villa. Toby is a sophomore physical education major. Freddie has not decided on a major at this time. Both Freddie and Toby graduated from Haskell High School.

Danny Schwertner of Lubbock shares his dorm room with a cousin, Paul Schwertner of Wilson. Danny, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Travis Schwertner, was graduated from Coronado High School and is a freshman law enforcement major at WTC. Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Schwertner and a graduate of Wilson High School. He is a freshman majoring in diesel mechanics.

Why choose a relative for a roommate? Well, why not? Getting acquainted with a stranger in the close quarters of a dormitory room can present problems, and choosing a roommate in advance could help prevent some uncomfortable situations.

"I already knew my brother's bad points and I didn't think it fair to make somebody else put up with him," joked Freddie. (His brother works part-time and wasn't at the gathering to defend himself.)

"We've very close," Rene and Latrice agree. "Some people don't understand how close sisters can be. And besides, this way we never have to ask if we can borrow something from our roommate. That's already been settled–it's okay."

The Ehlers and Schwertners agreed that they were happy with their arrangement, too. Paul and David attended high school together at Wilson so they had at least one acquaintance on campus in addition to their roommate.

Would the eight recommend that others consider a relative for a roommate? The decision is unanimous that they would. Keeping it in the family makes sense.

Snyder graduate gets scholarship

CANYON--More than 300 students attending West Texas State University as freshmen have been awarded $200 Don and Sybil Harrington Scholarships for the 1984-85 academic year.

Scholarships are awarded each year to students who were members of high school National Honor Society chapters or similar organizations.

David E. Cook, a graduate of Snyder High School, is a Don and Sybil Harrington Honor Scholar. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon D. Cook.

The Harrington Honor Scholarships were begun in 1979 with an endowment from the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation of Amarillo.

Seniors plan 42 tournament

The Senior Center's August 42 tournament was such a success that another match has been planned for Oct. 4. Senior citizens who want to play are to draw for partners at 9:45 a.m.

A class on dry brush techniques for ceramics will be taught by Mildred Garrett from the Bisque-It Two Shop at 8 a.m. on Oct. 8. Space in the workroom limits enrollment to eight persons for this class, Jean Smith, assistant Center director, said, so the first eight to sign the list will be the class members. Persons interested in the ceramics classes at the Center may contact Smith for information.

Country and western dancing has become a popular activity each second Tuesday evening in the Center. Hank Davis and the Westerners play again on Oct. 9 from 7-9 p.m. and senior citizens who have not attended are invited to join the group.

Both the Kitchen Band and Sunshine Choir have resumed rehearsals and welcome new members for the performances scheduled this fall. The choir's first booking is on Oct. 17 at the Snyder Nursing Center, while the band will play first on Oct. 11 at Snyder Oaks Care Center.

Located at 2603 Avenue M, the Senior Center is open from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. each weekday.

Tech professor to teach math workshop in Snyder

An in-service workshop "Creating Mathematics Understanding Through Manipulatives" will be offered for teachers in the Snyder Independent School District Monday.

The workshop will be presented by Dr. Charles Geer, associate professor, Texas Tech University. Dr. Geer is a member of the Texas Tech University College of Education Math Team, a university-based team of workshop leaders in the area of mathematics education.

The workshop activity is designed to enable teachers to learn and practice skills in the use of concrete objects and manipulatives in the teaching of mathematics to elementary school children.

The staff development activity will be held at West Elementary School Monday beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Actor to face October hearing

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Richard Gere faces an Oct. 25 hearing on charges he assaulted a garage attendant after harassing the man for eight months.

Gere, accused of assaulting Harold White, appeared Thursday in Manhattan Criminal Court, where he pleaded innocent and was released on his own recognizance.

White said Gere jumped him from the rear, then punched, kicked and choked him on July 11 after having harassed White "for the past eight months by repeated foul and abusive language."

Model will not apologize for semi-nude shots

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Model Cristina Ferrare says she is "not going to apologize" for semi-nude photos of her that appeared in a Brazilian magazine.

The photos in the Sept. 8 edition of the weekly Manchete had been used seven years ago to illustrate a story in Harper's Bazaar.

The Harper's edition "was a beauty and health issue and I did some photos in the buff, in the jacuzzi, in the buff," said the former model who recently separated from her husband, former automaker John De Lorean.

She made the remarks Thursday on "AM Los Angeles," the local talk show she co-hosts.

"I was a big girl when I did it and I am not going to apologize for it," said Ms. Ferrare, 34.

The photo editor of Manchete said the pictures were "no big thing" and did not even boost the issue's sales.

Charlotte Rainey appears in movie

For the second time in five years, Charlotte Rainey of Snyder, K-mart's camera and jewelry manager, has caught the attention of picture makers. The most recent event occurred this past summer when she was asked by George Sluizer, head of M.G.S. Studios in Amsterdam, Holland, to appear in his film, "Red Desert Penitentiary," filmed in Sweetwater.

The saloon scenes in which Rainey appeared were shot in "Old Abilene Town,", approximately 80 miles east of Snyder.

In the movie Rainey played the role of an 1880s saloon madam. Even though the role was small, Rainey said she felt "it offered great opportunity."

For the part of the saloon madam, Rainey wore a black lace and green satin gown, especially designed and created for her by Shirley Crawford.

Five years before, Rainey and Richard Avedon, a well-known photographer, crossed paths in Sweetwater where he was attending the annual rattlesnake roundup. He asked her to let him photograph her then but, not realizing who he was and being pressed for time, she declined.

Later, upon realizing her mistake, she had her own picture made and sent it to Avedon via a Sweetwater women who was attending a party in the photographer's honor at the Fine Arts Museum in Dallas.

That picture eventually was published in a 1979 Dallas newspaper article.

Somehow Sluizer saw that picture and when he came to Sweetwater this past spring to begin pre-production on his latest movie, he told his staff, "find me this woman," Rainey said.

Center to sell pecans again

The Senior Citizens Center is taking orders for pecans for holiday baking or gifts.

Prices are the same as last year: $4.50 per pound for halves or $4.25 for pieces.

Halves in a two-pound decorated tin are $12 with three pounds of halves in the tin at $15. Roasted halves in the box are $13 for two pounds and $16 for three pounds.

Orders can be placed by calling the Center at 573-4035. Orders placed by Nov. 7 will be delivered by Nov. 19, while orders placed by Nov. 30 will be delivered by Dec. 14. Proceeds from the sale of the pecans goes into the operating fund of the Senior Center.

Conferees approve waste bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major legislation to place millions of tons of hazardous waste under federal regulation for the first time appears headed toward final passage by Congress after winning approval of House and Senate conferees.

The conference committee on Friday approved a compromise version of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, which will bring an estimated 130,000 small businesses under Environmental Protection Agency regulation. It is expected to win final approval in the House and Senate next week.

But prospects were not as bright for the bill's companion measure, a proposal to expand the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up abandoned hazardous waste dumps.

The Democrat-controlled House has voted to expand the superfund to $10.2 billion, and the Senate Environment Committee has approved a $7.5 billion expansion. But the Senate Finance Committee has failed to write the tax provisions for the Senate bill that are needed to raise the money.

The disposal bill approved by the conference committee was a compromise version of bills passed earlier by the House and the Senate updating the federal law that tells businesses what they can and cannot do with the hazardous wastes they produce.

In its final form, it will extend EPA regulation to an estimated 130,000 small businesses that use chemicals in their everyday work, affecting virtually every business that produces enough hazardous waste each month to fill half of a 55-gallon drum.

Current hazardous waste law does not regulate businesses until they generate at least 2,200 pounds of hazardous waste each month, an amount one firm involved in the debate has estimated to equal about five 55-gallon drums.

House sponsors of the bill say the high threshhold allows between 12 million and 15 million tons of hazardous waste to escape regulation each year — with most of the waste instead being treated as ordinary trash.

The legislation also begins phasing out the practice of putting liquid hazardous wastes in landfills, where they can leak into underground water supplies; imposes new technical standards on existing ponds and lagoons containing liquid hazardous wastes; and begins regulating hazardous waste that is mixed with heating oil and burned, sometimes unwittingly, by businesses and homes.

Golden temple is returned to priests

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The government formally returned control of the historic Golden Temple complex in Amritsar to the Sikh high priests today, the United News of India reported.

The 17th century temple, considered the holiest Sikh shrine, was the scene of a bloody four-day battle in early June between Indian army troops and Sikh militants.

From 1963 to 1965, Lenny Moore of the Baltimore Colts scored at least one touchdown in 18 consecutive games, an NFL record.

"Mr. Anderson is a careful researcher, a thorough scholar who has spent years searching public and private sources in order to tell the story of Pete Snyder. He has given us an account that is as complete and accurate as existing records will allow and he has made us aware of the contribution of this pioneer to the history of Scurry County."

Snyder's own Tony: Talks softly but carries one whallop of a hit

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

Tony Degrate is an imposing person to look at. His size - 6-foot, 4-inches and 280-pounds - is obviously intimidating. It had been a couple of years since I talked to him face to face, and I was a little shocked at how big he is.

I wasn't suprised to find him as soft spoken and courteous as the same kid whose 90 mile-per-hour fastball was a source of frustration for Snyder High School baseball opponents though. While his stature has changed - he was listed as 6-2, 230 pounds on the 1979 football roster - his demeanor hasn't. Those who meet him for the first time have difficulty reminding themselves that this is the same person who won All-Southwest Conference defensive tackle honors as a junior for the University of Texas Longhorns a year ago, has been picked as a 1984 preseason All-American by respected publications, and who may well be a first-round draft choice into the professional ranks.

We set up the following interview the day after Snyder's varsity football game between Snyder and Brownfield. I want to stress that the word "interview" is inappropriate because the hour and 15 minutes we spent talking was anything but formal. As a result, the questions and answers which follow may not have occurred in the order in which the reader finds them. I've also taken the liberty to shorten questions or answers, without changing the overall thought.

You started off the season with a great game against Auburn.

"The coaches were very pleased. I had 14 tackles, a fumble, two pressures, one sack and one tackle behind the line. Someone asked if I thought I was the best defensive tackle in college football and I said I thought I was up there with the best of anybody."

We've talked about this before, the fact that you really didn't have an outstanding senior year at Snyder High School. Someone along the line, things changed for Tony Degrate.

"They've nicknamed me Dr. Jeckle and Mr. Hyde because I'm soft spoken off the field and a lot more aggressive on the field. In high school I was still passive out on the field. I relied more on my size. I was bigger than a lot of people and I didn't think I had to work too hard. In college, I realized I better get it together. There have been a

IRA – Cast the Ira football field as a pinball machine and Darren Hughes as the pinball wizard and you get the overall picture.

Ira and Paint Creek kept the scoreboard flashing for 116 points - 16 touchdowns - in a wild homecoming game which ended in a 72-44 victory for the celebrating Bulldogs here Friday night. Hughes figured in the scoring on seven of Ira's 10 touchdowns. Bruce Strickland had a hand in the other three, and kicked six two-point conversions.

Despite the runaway score, Ira didn't break the game open until the fourth quarter, partly because the Bulldogs constantly short-circuted themselves, picking up 18 penalties for an unreal 206 yards.

"We were pretty sloppy tonight. I'd have hated to play Borden County or Highland tonight," said Ira Coach Mitch Lee. "At times we showed flashes of what we can do. Other times, well...

"Penalties killed us. Eighteen is entirely too many if you want to win a ballgame. Hopefully we got those out of our system. We had enough to last the whole season," he added.

In first half action, Hughes scored on a 10-yard sweep, a 20-yard pass reception from Jay Clark and a 15-yard run. Strickland TDed from eight yards out, and kicked two conversions.

Paint Creek, which came into the game with a 3-0 record, scored on a 10-yard pass from Ronald Campbell to Lewis Lacy and a 2-yard run by Greg Rowland. Jamie Braly scored one conversion.

The Pirates were able to take the lead in the third quarter on scoring passes of 12 yards from Keith Medford to Lacy and 23 yards from Medford to Ken Jeffcoat. Braly booted two conversions to give Paint Creek a 30-28 advantage.

Ira came fighting back on a 65-yard scamper by Hughes and an 18-yard pass from Clark to Hughes. Strickland kicked both PATs and the hosts were up 44-30. A 33-yard scoring run by Strickland early in the fourth quarter made it 50-30.

For Paint Creek in the fourth quarter, Mikeal Gonzales scored on a 75 yard kickoff return and Medford hit Braly on a 1-yard pass. Braly kicked one points-after try.

Ira's final-stanza TDs were on a 1-yard run by Hughes, a 1-yard run by Strickland and a 52-yard pass from Clark to Hughes.

Hughes rushed for 207 yards on the night; Strickland had 193.

Strickland led in tackles with 11, followed by Barry Ezra with 10 and Steve Denson and Lloyd Goswick with eight apiece.

The win gives the Bulldogs a 2-0-1 record. They play in Rochester at 7:30 Friday, Oct. 5.

GAIL – Chris Cooley broke loose on an 18 yard scoring run with 24 seconds left in the game here Friday to lift the Borden County Coyotes past the Weinert Bulldogs in non-district six-man football action.

The touchdown, one of four scored by the fleet Coyote running back, gave undefeated Borden County a 26-20 victory. Teammate Mickey Burkett thwarted a Bulldog last-ditch comeback when he intercepted a Weinert pass on the final play of the contest.

The victory puts the Coyotes at 4-0 on the season as they prepare to entertain Rule next weekend. The loss was Weinert's first of the season, giving the 'Dogs a 3-1 mark.

"We needed to play a good, tough ballgame and we did," said Borden County Coach Duke Frisbie, who had nothing but praise for the opponent.

"They had two fumbles that came at terrible times for them, killing a couple of good looking drives. They are an excellent ball club," he said.

Borden built a 14-0 halftime lead. Cooley scored his first TD on a 16-yard pass from Bric Turner in the opening quarter. Kirby Williams kicked the PAT for an 8-0 advantage.

The Coyotes tallied again in the second period when Cooley ran over from nine yards out. The points-after kick failed.

The score remained 14-0 until Weinert got its fine passing game to click in the third quarter. Shannon Forehand directed the aerial game, hitting Johnny Perez on touchdown passes of 50 and 8 yards. Perez kicked one two-point conversion but Borden's Turner blocked the second, leaving the game knotted at 14-14.

Both teams then traded touchdowns with Cooley scoring on a five yard run in the third period and Forehand hitting Juan Castorena on a 60-yard pass play in the fourth. Neither PAT attempt was good.

The game remained 20-20 until 18 seconds were left to play, when Cooley found a block and raced 24 yards for the winning touchdown.

Cooley ran 34 times for 248 to lead all ball carriers.

"It was an excellent ball game. It could have gone either way," said Coach Frisbie. "Robin Hood and Tommy Soto and Kirby Williams played excellent defense to only give up 106 yards rushing. On the other hand, this kid (Forehand) is an excellent passer."

Forehand passed complete 10 of 22 times but was intercepted twice. Burkett picked him off on the final play of the game. Earlier, Cooley had intercepted and ran 60 yards, but the Coyotes were unable to capitalize.

Williams recovered one Bulldog fumble, caused by a hit from Soto. Williams also jarred loose another fumble and it was picked up by Cooley.

4-1A grid roundup

Ira's Bulldogs resumed varsity play in a big way Friday night, while Borden county was a winner for the fourth straight outing in 4-1A South Zone six-man ball.

Ira blitzed previously undefeated Paint Creek 72-44 in a 16-touchdown ballgame as the Bulldogs celebrated their homecoming. The 'Dogs had over 400 yards rushing and almost 130 passing in defeating the Pirates, but also notched 206 yards worth of penalties.

Borden scored with 18 seconds left in the game to edge Weinert 26-20 in a war between two unbeaten teams. Said Coyote Coach Duke Frisbie. "It was a great game. I hope we play them again - in the playoffs."

Friday night's outcomes weren't so kind to two other 4-1A squads. McCaulley dropped its fourth straight decision of 1984 with a 50-22 loss to Rochester, while Grady succumbed to North Zone powerhouse Jayton, 65-22.

Highland, who besides Borden County is the only undefeated team in the zone, was to play Trent on Saturday.

2-4A grid roundup

Pecos suffered its first loss of the season while Monahans kept on rolling as 2-4A warriors completed their non-district schedules Friday evening.

The loop faired well in non-league action, posting a collective 16-7 record against outside opposition. Lubbock Dunbar, a 20-19 victor over Pecos on Friday, can however brag three of those wins. The Panthers took down Snyder, Lake View and Pecos in order.

One team nobody has stopped is Monahans. The Loboes, who have yet to give up a touchdown in 1984, blanked Lubbock Estacado 24-0.

Fort Stockton and Lamesa, the only other unbeaten 2-4A squads, were idle Friday, as were Andrews, Sweetwater, Snyder and Lake View.

TONY DEGRATE

lot of influences, the coaching staff at Texas, Kenneth Sims and other players. There are numerous factors of why I'm doing better now but the biggest is becoming a lot more aggressive."

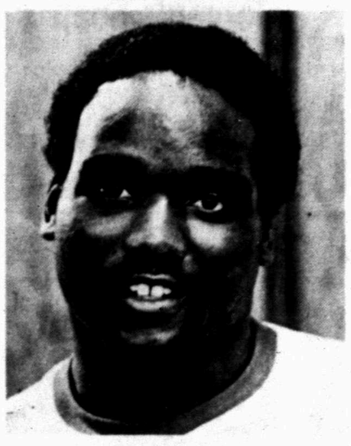
In high school, did you ever dream of playing for a major college like Texas, being an All-American and maybe playing in the pros?

"Coach Akers told me 'You've exceeded your expectations and you haven't reached your potential.' I saw myself starting, but not an All-American. After the middle of my junior season I said 'I can play with these guys.' With the Lord's help, I've been able to do that."

You've been picked as a preseason All-American by several publications, you've been interviewed by major magazines and newpapers, you've gotten a lot of notoriety, yet you still manage to keep on top of your studies.

"You've got to keep things in proper prospective. Texas (The University of Texas) is known to have great players so it's something a lot of players go through. I played behind (All-American) Kenneth Sims and he helped me a lot. I'm a student Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Saturday I'm a football player."

You're a senior. How is your final year shaping up?



TONY DEGRATE

"I'll be 15 hours away from graduating after this semester. My spring will hopefully be tied up with the NFL and all. It's really hard to take much of a load during the spring when you are a senior because you have so much tension from pro scouts and all. You have to choose an agent and that's as tough as choosing a college. I plan on taking a few courses, then coming back and taking summer school."

You are planning on graduating then?

"Definitely. I think it's very important. I'm not going to be 15 hours away from graduating and quit. Right now, I look at pro football as my future. But I'm not going to put all my marbles in one bag. Barring all injuries and if the Lord is willing, they've got me projected as a first-round (draft choice). That gives me extra incentive."

Before we talk about your future in pro football, let's talk about your other career, art.

"Studing art at Texas has been an experience. I remember my first art forms course the model just started taking off her clothes. I was shocked. I thought, 'they don't do this in Snyder.' I was just a guy from the country. I wasn't ready for that."

From the articles I've seen, writers sometimes focus almost as much on your art as they do your football.

"It's terrific. I've got more requests than I can handle. I've really been blessed in that, because unlike most other art students, I've been able to make a lot of contacts through football. It goes hand in hand. My professor has encouraged me to go to France and study there and they don't tell just every student that. Someday, I hope to open an art studio."

Now the football. NFL, USFL?

"My heart has always been with the NFL, but you know what they say, money talks. The Cowboys are my favorite team, but I think I could fit in with the Raiders or Redskins. The Cowboys play more of a finesse game where as the Raiders and Redskins are more aggressive. I think I'd fit in more with them."

You've been out to workouts here and in the locker rooms. You were at the football game last night (September 21).

"Last night meant so much to me. A lot of people were planning on going fishing or hunting but I just told them 'I haven't seen the Tigers play in four years and I want to see the Tigers play.' I couldn't believe the crowd. It was like a college game. Everybodv was cheering so much and there was so much excitement."

You wrote a letter to the team before the season, wishing them success and encouraging them.

"I wrote that letter because I like to give back things that were given to me. I'm proud I'm from Snyder. I've always been proud of the school. I was sky high when the baseball team won state (in 1983). Jeff Ward, our punter, is from Austin Westlake and they beat us at state the year I was pitching (1980). I had to brag to him about it."

You keep up with Snyder athletics then.

"Your school is a matter of pride to all of the guys up there. On Saturday morning you'll see everybody with a paper looking up how their high school team did. You can tell how they did just by watching the faces. Everybody tries to get back. My heart is still here in Snyder."

Is there anything you'd like to say to the football team now?

"I told them (after the game) there's no reason there can't be a lot more (wins). It's a great foundation to build on. Coach Akers (Texas Coach Fred Akers) would say Snyder kept their composure and Brownfield couldn't break their will. The fan support was unbelievable at the game. With that kind of support there is no way Snyder can't be successful. It's makes me feel good I can brag about my Tigers. I have a Ragin' Tiger sticker I'm going to hang in my room. I wish them best of luck. They've just got to remember when you lose you've got to pack it up and go on and when you win you've got to pack up and go after another one. And enjoy it while you can."

What are your goals, both for the Longhorns, and your personal ones?

"I believe in a team concept. If the team does well, the personal goals will take care of themselves. I think we're (Texas) right up there with anybody in the country. We want to get back in the Cotton Bowl and win that game. My personal goals are to be an All-American, not only an All-American, but a consensus All-American. And I want to be a Lombardi and Outland candidate and winner. I think those are reachable goals. I'm sure a lot of people question that but a lot questioned whether I would be an (preseason) All-American."

Defenses could dominate when Cowboys meet Bears

CHICAGO (AP) - A tight struggle is in the making Sunday when the Dallas Cowboys and the Chicago Bears, two of the top defensive units in the National Football League, clash in Soldier Field before a capacity crowd of more than 65,000.

Both teams have 3-1 records. The Cowboys are coming off a 20-6 victory over Green Bay while the Bears saw their perfect record topple with a 38-9 loss at Seattle last Sunday.

The Bears hope to get their offense back in gear with the return of Jim McMahon at quarterback.

McMahon, who suffered a hairline fracture of the hand and a back injury against Denver Sept. 9, was used sparingly the following week against Green Bay and was kept out of last week's loss at Seattle.

Usually, a game between the Cowboys and Bears is billed as a battle between running backs Tony Dorsett of Dallas and Walter Payton of the Bears. One might still develop but while Payton is bearing down on Jim Brown's all-time rushing record, Dorsett has had some problems.

Dorsett rushed for 44 yards in 20 carries against Green Bay and has 286 yards for the season. His 8,621 career yards rank sixth on the all-time list.

Against the Bears, the Cowboys will face the NFL's top defensive team. They have given up the fewest yards rushing, the fewest yards passing and the fewest total yards.

The Cowboys also have a strong defense which is second only to the Bears in the National Football Conference. They showed it against Green Bay last week.

The Cowboys had four interceptions, six sacks and limited the Packers to 204 total yards.

In other games Sunday, it's Miami at St. Louis, Atlanta at San Francisco, Los Angeles Raiders at Denver, Dallas at Chicago, Cleveland at Kansas City, New Orleans at Houston, New England at the New York Jets, Buffalo at Indianapolis, Philadelphia at Washington, Seattle at Minnesota, Green Bay at Tampa Bay and Detroit at San Diego.

Cincinnati visits Pittsburgh Monday night.

The only 4-0 teams are San Francisco, Miami and the Raiders.

St. Louis will try to stop Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who is the league's top-rated passer and leads the NFL in touchdowns with 12. The Dolphins lead the league in scoring with the Marino-Mark Duper passing combination showing the way.

Kansas City beats A's to win AL West title

by The Associated Press

When they were biting the dust back at the All-Star break, not many of the Kansas City Royals believed they would be drinking champagne in September.

"When you're 11 games under .500 at the All-Star break, you don't have faith in much of anything," second baseman Frank White said after Friday night's division-winning 6-5 victory over Oakland.

"We've only been in the pennant race for three weeks, and every game was a big one. Before that, we were winning but we didn't realize how much."

The Royals' ascension to their fifth American League West title in nine years was made possible when second-place Minnesota blew a 10-run lead and lost 11-10 to Cleveland.

In the AL's other games, it was Detroit 4, New York 2 in 12 innings; Boston 5, Baltimore 4; Texas 4, California 1; Milwaukee 4, Toronto 3 in 11 innings and Seattle 7, Chicago 1.

Steve Balboni, the hottest hitter in Kansas City's September title drive, sent the Royals ahead with a fourth-inning single. It was his sixth game-winning RBI this month and his third this week.

Dan Quisenberry survived two home runs in the final three innings to earn his 44th save, one short of the major league record he established last season and which was tied this year by Bruce Sutter of St. Louis. He relieved Charlie Leibrandt, 11-7, who allowed five hits and two runs over the first six innings.

The Royals, who were deep in the division standings at midseason, won for the 10th time in their last 13 games and made their record 44-25 since July 18.

"We're not a great club, but we're a good, solid club, and we've proved we can win," Manager Dick Howser said. "The Detroit Tigers respect us. They know we've been a good club the last two and a half months."

Golfers finding Lajet cold, wet

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - The bone-chilling wind even had the Canadian begging for mercy.

"Just because I'm Canadian, don't think I'm used to weather like this," Dan Halldorson said after he'd struggled through rain, wind, mud and biting cold - a wind-chill factor of 13 degrees - to a share of the 36-hole lead in the $350,000 LaJet Golf Classic.

"On the first nine, I was ready to quit," said Halldorson, who rallied for a 4-under-par 68 and a tie at 135 with Curtis Strange. "I was thinking, 'How can they let us play in stuff like this?'" Halldorson said.

"Under these conditions, it was maybe my best round ever," Strange said Friday after he'd compiled a no-bogey 5-under-par 67.

The early starters were interrupted by a heavy shower - in an area that, until this week, had been suffering through its worst drought in decades - that caused a 32-minute suspension of play. Temperatures ranged through the 40s. North winds gusted beyond 20 miles per hour.

Players bundled themselves in layers of sweaters, foul weather gear, gloves, mittens, toboggan caps - even, in the case of Mac O'Grady, a fur-lined face covering.

REGULARITY
Too many people believe that a daily laxative must be standard procedure in order to keep regular. An occasional skipped day or even two or three days should be no cause for alarm, states the California Medical Assn. They note that many laxatives produce undesirable side effects. Increase your bulk intake by eating more fresh raw fruits and vegetables. Drink plenty of liquids too - you can enjoy healthful regularity without laxatives.

WTC golfers place sixth in tournament

HUNTSVILLE -- Western Texas College battled wind, rain and some of the country's top competition to place sixth in the Sam Houston State University Intercollegiate Tournament at Waterwood Country Club near here Friday.

The Westerners shot a 318 on Thursday and a 327 Friday for a total 645. Ryan Heller led the squad with back-to-back 76s for a 145.

"The weather was cold and windy and we caught some rain," said Coach Dave Foster. "This course will be the hardest we'll play all year. If you make a mistake you pay for it dearly. But it's a good test and a good field and it's good experience to play a course of this nature."

Friday's scores were inflated in comparison to Thursday's due to cold winds and sparatic rainfall.

The University of Houston freshmen won the junior college division with a total 599. Second was defending NJCAA champ McLennan Community College with a 602, followed by Temple, 623; Odessa, 628; Paris, 639; and Western Texas. Twelve schools played in the division.

Peter Vanderpivt, UH freshman, took medalist honors with a 145.

In addition to Heller's 152, which placed 15th overall, the Westerners turned in the following:

Bob Stangby, 84-80--164; Jim Batjer, 81-84--165; Bo Kay, 79-88--167; and Pat Fitzpatrick, 82-87--169.

Next action for the Westerners will be the third WJCAC meet of the season, Oct. 5 in Midland.

Cowboys riding well despite cold weather

CLARENDON – Anyone complaining of the cold should talk to Bob Doty and the Western Texas College rodeo bunch first. They were preparing for slack competition in the Clarendon College Rodeo here Saturday morning where it was a chilly 38 degrees.

No, the rodeo area is not indoors.

Despite the weather, Coach Doty's troops were prepared to enter the final day of rodeo action in fine shape. Westerner troops were leading the bull riding and calf roping, and were second in team roping.

"We're in pretty good shape, except we're real cold," said Doty. "If we can do well tonight, it should be a good rodeo for us."

Heading into Saturday's action, Bliss Mayhan was holding first place in the bulls with a 68. Jason Phillips and Van Hale were tied for second, third and fourth with a pair of 65s.

Don Eddleman was tied for first in the calf roping with an 11.6 clocking while Cody Foster and Texas Tech University roper Cliff Tibbetts were second in the team roping with a 10.5.

Mayhan was also placing fourth in bareback with a 62 and Judy Cox was tied for third in breakaway roping with a time of 3.9.

Doty did have some bad news to report other than the weather. Seminole native Max McGuire, a sophomore, suffered a broken right ankle when he caught the chute gate coming out in the bareback event.

SNYDER 3500 College SNYDER

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown — SDN Society Editor

"Well, what did you do this morning before coming to class?" Pat queried the friend sitting next to her in their 8:30 a.m. class.

"I fixed breakfast for my husband and two kids. Then I sent him to work; got the kids dressed; made three beds; and ran two loads of laundry," the friend replied.

The mouth of the 19-year-old listening to the conversation dropped open.

Pat Blakely, 45-year-old housewife and bookkeeper turned college student, laughs when she tells that story. "Most of the young people in my classes have no idea what it takes for us older ones to return to school."

Many older women have no idea either; consequently, sometimes those who, like Pat, have dreamed of a college education will not attend school to get one. Many of these women have no idea what their capabilities are and are sometimes afraid of failure.

"Image," a new program instituted by Western Texas College, is providing emotional support to women over 24 years of age who are returning to college, who are beginning college or who are entering or re-entering the work force by providing friendship and a discussion of common problems. Bettie McQueen, director of vocational-technical education for WTC, spearheads the group.

Pat's story is illustrative of the kinds of problems older women face. Born with a heart condition that began restricting her activities in junior high school, Pat was forced to drop out of the regular classroom because her doctor would not allow her to climb stairs. Since Wisconsin state law required children to remain in school until they were 18 years old and since the state had no provisions to teach handicapped students, Pat transferred to the Milwaukee Vocational School. "It was the only school with an elevator," she remarked.

Because she completed her education in the vocational school rather than in the high school, she was not granted a diploma. Later she worked for her GED.

Four years ago, Pat decided to study conversational Spanish at the college. "I enjoyed it so much that I decided to enroll as a regular student. I felt so lost because I had no idea how to go about getting in," she said. "I didn't know there were counselors or a handbook. I didn't even know where things were. All I knew was that I had to have 62 hours to graduate."

Through a sorority she had been invited to join, Pat met some of the counselors and a few older students. "Still I found out everything about the school by sheer accident," she added.

By talking with other women, she discovered that many were experiencing the same problems. After being elected vice president of Psi Beta, the psychology honor fraternity, she decided to develop a project through the organization to help those older women. Through Psi Beta and Mary Hood, she was put in contact with Bettie McQueen.

Bettie already had the idea in mind, and with the help of some federal money and Pat's enthusiasm "Image" became a reality. June saw the group's first meeting with Pat providing most of the ladies — Roxie Herron of Sylvester, Frances Hardy of Snyder, Joan Holder of Snyder and Faye Reeves of Hamlin.

For Pat, "Image" has provided a way to share with other women from her own experiences. She would like to continue her education at Texas Tech but may begin putting her psychology into practice as a volunteer with the Noah Project after graduating from WTC in May, 1985.

"I have enjoyed being a part of 'Image' because I have been able to help other women avoid some of the mistakes I have made," she quickly pointed out.

Another participant in "Image" is Penny Hayes, a 40-year-old mother and also a former bookkeeper, who recently moved to Snyder from Kilgore.

"Now is an opportune time for me to return to school," she remarked. "I've been wanting to go but either my daughter was too small or we didn't live close enough to a college. Now my daughter is in junior high and I'm not working."

Penny has one advantage over Pat because she attended Texas Tech University after graduating from high school. "I went the first time because those who did well in high school were expected to go on to college. But I didn't know what I wanted to do at that time. I was as liberal arts as you could get with absolutely no idea what direction to take. Then, women were mostly expected to major in elementary education or nursing or some other 'woman's' type of work," she added. "Besides, I was more interested in marriage."

Penny feels that going back to school now is easier because she has learned more about managing her time and because she tends to be more serious about her work.

"But," she said, "it is also more difficult. Because I have not used my high school knowledge in 20 years, it is more difficult to recall. Study habits are gone and it takes a while to renew them. It is also a new experience having my daughter tutor me in algebra."

At a recent "Image" meeting, the women shared some of their concerns and problems. One woman remarked, "Education is an insurance policy because today a woman cannot afford to support herself."

Self-confidence is another problem for many of the ladies. "You don't really know your capabilities and it is scary to start out thinking you will fail," said one. Penny added, "Sometimes we feel intimidated to be on an 18 or 19-year-old's 'turf'. Kids today are learning in junior high what I didn't learn until I was in college."

Another common concern is lack of support at home. Even though the husbands of both Pat and Penny encourage and help them, some husbands remark, "Why do you want to waste my hard earned money on such foolishness?"

"We want to be able to provide the necessary support for those who aren't getting it at home," one woman responded. "Even if

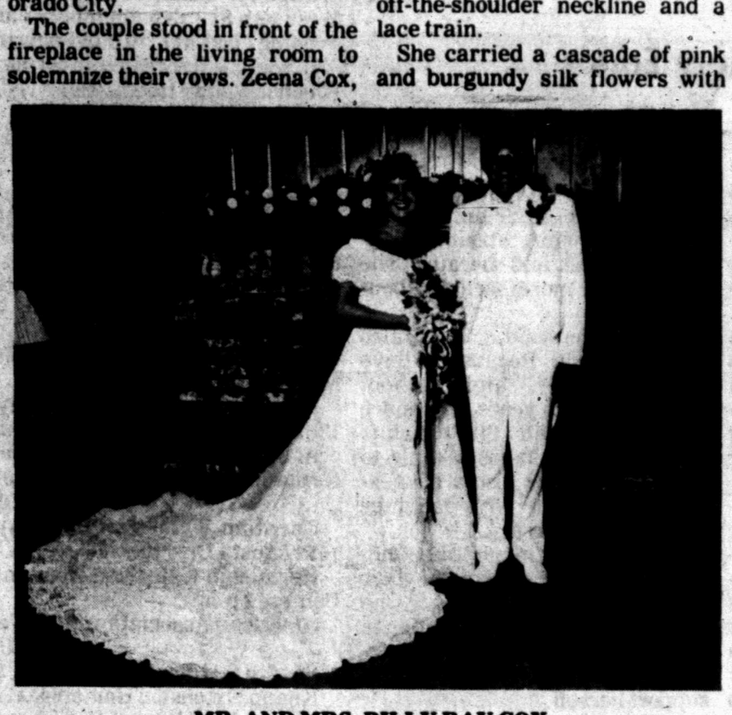
Solemnize vows in parents' home

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Ray Cox are at home in Snyder following their Aug. 24 marriage at the bride's home in Ira.

June Strickland, the bride's mother and pastor of the Ira Church of God, led the couple in repeating double ring wedding vows.

The bride is the former Aaren Rene Middlebrooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Strickland of Ira. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Cox of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roberts of Colorado City.

The couple stood in front of the fireplace in the living room to solemnize their vows. Zeena Cox, sister of the groom, lit the candles arranged in greenery on the mantle.



MR. AND MRS. BILLY RAY COX

Escorted and given in marriage by her stepfather, the bride wore a white gown featuring an off-the-shoulder neckline and a lace train.

She carried a cascade of pink and burgundy silk flowers with baby's breath, English ivy and satin ribbons.

In keeping with tradition, for something old the bride wore a diamond necklace given to her by the groom and her bridal gown served as something new. She borrowed diamond earrings from Aimee Walker. Something blue was her garter decorated with a cameo heirloom belonging to the Cox family. She also wore pennies in her shoes minted in the years of the couple's birthdates.

Maid of honor Amy Middlebrooks, the bride's sister, was attired in a long, pink off-the-shoulder dress accented with ruffles at the neck and hemline. She carried a smaller version of the bride's bouquet. A garland of pink flowers adorned her hair.

The groom wore a white tuxedo with a white shirt and tie and a boutonniere made of a silk pink rose trimmed with burgundy and greenery.

Curtis Cox served as his brother's best man. He wore a silver tuxedo with a pink shirt and boutonniere similiar to that of the groom.

Immediately following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception in the Ira Church of God annex.

The bride's tables were covered with pink floor-length cloths overlaid with white lace. The registry table was identical to the bride's tables and all were adorned with pink and burgundy bows.

The first tier of the three-tiered cake rested on four white columns over a fountain encased with greenery. Shorter columns held the other two tiers. Four separate cakes were placed on the table. Miniature stairways with a candle on each step joined two of the smaller cakes to the wedding cake. Rita Graham made the cake served by Dee Dee Dunn and Lisa Allen. Aimee Walker presided at the punch table.

The groom's table was laid with a burgundy cloth trimmed in eyelet lace and small gray bows. The C-shaped cake with a chocolate rifle atop was served with coffee from a brass server. An arrangement of pink and burgundy flowers in a brass vase centered the table. Ozane Pylant and Jamie Reynolds served.

Mrs. Ernest Cox made all the flower arrangements, bouquets, corsages, boutonnieres and bows in the wedding decor.

The couple honeymooned in Ruidosa, N.M. He is employed by Cox Service Company.

Out-of-town guests attended from Snyder, Colorado City, Post, Midland, Delcambre, La., Bristow, Okla. and Trenton, Ohio.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT — Charlie T. and Jenet M. Garner of Winter Garden, Fla. announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Beth, to Brian K. Giselbach, son of Paul T. Giselbach of Elwood, Ind. and Brenda L. Giselbach of Kokomo, Ind. The couple plan a Dec. 28 wedding in the West Orange Church of Christ in Winter Garden. (Family Photo)

McQuaid to celebrate ninetieth birthday

Friends and acquaintances of Carrie Lou Lee McQuaid are invited to share with the family in celebration of her 90th birthday on Oct. 7 from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. in the Hermleigh Community Center.

Her birthday is Oct. 3. Seventy-nine of her 90 years have been spent in Scurry County. She and her late husband, W.H. McQuaid, owned and operated the Hermleigh Telephone Exchange. After his death in 1944, she and her daughter and son-in-law, Marlene and Herman Richburg, continued operation including service to Hermleigh, Dunn, China Grove and Pyron. After twenty years, she sold the business to Southwestern Bell. She has many memories of her experience as a telephone operator and enjoyed her many subscribers and friends.

McQuaid and the Richburgs now live west of Hermleigh on the family farm. She has two grandsons and three great grandchildren.

Grandson Quaid Richburg, his wife, Rosa Nell, and children, Ed, Tommy and Tonnie, live in Sweetwater where he is associated with Cates-Spencer Funeral Home.

Jay and Kayla Richburg also live in Sweetwater where he is employed with West Texas Welders Supply.

The family requests no gifts.

'Image' provides support you have support at home, sometimes you still can't talk to your husband the same way you can talk to another woman."

In addition to moral support, information about the campus, help with securing funds (through "Image" a single woman with three children was able to secure a loan) and interest and vocational guidance is promoted.

Bettie wants to emphasize to all women, including those returning to work rather than school, "We are here to help. Sometimes a woman believes she's too fat or too poor or hasn't enough intelligence. We are here to help each woman discover her own image, to be what she wants to be."

Local clubs and organizations can help by inviting Bettie to address their members, by providing financial assistance through scholarships and by offering to present programs for "Image" meetings.

At First Baptist...

Couple married in double ring ceremony

Rita Lynn Black, daughter of James (Red) and Velesta Black of Houston, became the bride of Kris Alan Kimmel, son of Bill and Gay Kimmel of Snyder, on Aug. 18 in the chapel of First Baptist Church. Rev. Ken Branam, pastor, officiated the evening double ring ceremony.

A brass 17-light heart-shaped candelabrum flanked by two seven-light candelabras centered the altar. The parents' pews were marked with satin bows in apricot and white.

The couple chose the prelude music played by Bobby Wells of Snyder, pianist, and Betty Watts of Snyder, organist. Anne Kimmel of Colorado City and Ron Burns of Baytown, both cousins of the groom, lit candles at 7:30 p.m. to "Sunshine on My Shoulders." The grandparents, sisters-in-law and mothers were ushered in to "Always and Forever." Then Seleta Earhart of Garland, the bride's cousin, sang "The Wedding Song." The minister, groom and attendants walked in as "Truly" was played and the bride entered to the traditional "Wedding March."

During the ceremony, Toby Black of Sterling City, the bride's brother,sang "I Could Never Promise You." Julie Kimmel of Ira, the groom's aunt, and Black sang "You Make Me Feel Brand New". Kimmel sang "The Lord's Prayer" while the couple lit the memory candle.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose a gown styled in ivory silk organza and Chantilly re-embroidered lace. The low circled neckline was outlined in Chantilly lace in a scalloped design, and the lace was embellished with seed pearls. The sleeveless bodice featured two rows of organza flounces which formed a cap effect over her arms. Tiny ivory satin bows centered with dainty silk flowers adorned the lace on the bodice. The bodice's center front featured a wide row of re-embroidered Chantilly lace appliques which extended to the modified empire waistline, then continued to a point below the waistline in re-embroidered lace applique. Seed pearls and tiny flower-centered bows accented the bodice front. A band of Chantilly lace completely circled the waistline and came to a slight point in the back. The back of the bodice continued the scalloped lace at the neckline, and the organza flounces which began at the front of the bodice continued to the center back. The full skirt featured a slight flounce at the bottom which was outlined with a row of Chantilly lace and accented by tiny satin bows centered with silk flowers. The skirt flowed into a full chapel train.

Covered with candelight re-embroidered lace applique, her bridal hat was turned up on one side with a rose and an attached fingertip veil of illusion.

The bride borrowed her mother's pearl earrings. For something old, she wore a strand of pearls belonging to the groom's mother and her blue and satin lace garter served as something new. Pennies minted in the years of the couple's birthdates were placed in her shoe.

She carried a cascading bouquet of apricot roses, candlelight French carnations and double, blue baby's breath with satin matching streamers.

Bettsey Patterson Robertson of College Station served as matron of honor with Darla Gray of Snyder, sister of the bride, and Sherette Perry Kimmel of Lubbock as bridesmaids. The women wore baby blue Latique taffeta dresses featuring off-the-shoulder double ruffles, fitted bodices which came to a point in front and floor-length, gathered skirts. They carried apricot silk roses with greenery, baby's breath and bows with streamers and wore rings of baby's breath in their hair.

Flower girl Angela Gray, the bride's niece, wore an apricot dress designed like those of the bridesmaids. She carried a basket of flower petals and wore baby's breath and streamers in her hair.

Bill Kimmel, father of the groom, stood as best man for his son. Tommy Kimmel of Ira, the groom's uncle, and Stephen Kimmel of Lubbock, his cousin, were groomsmen with Toby Black of Sterling City , brother of the bride, Philip Kimmel of Snyder, the groom's uncle, and Dale Adams of Lubbock as ushers.

Mat Powell, ring bearer, carried the rings on a candlelight, smocked satin pillow.

The groom wore a charcoal gray classic cutaway jacket with a cream wing-tip shirt, pearl gray vest, striped ascot and hickory pinstriped charcoal gray trousers. Groomsmen, ushers, the candle lighter and the ring bearer wore tuxedos styled like that of the groom with classic stroller jackets.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the garden room of the church.

Centered with the bride's bouquet, the bride's table was covered with a white satin tablecloth. Apricot roses, touches of baby blue stars and apricot ribbon bows and streamers decorated the three-tiered cake. Punch, mixed nuts and mints were also served.

A floral arrangement surrounded with the groom's western hat and spurs he wore in 4-H competition and a photo taken of him at nine years old in the same hat centered the groom's table which was covered with a white, lace-trimmed, floor-length cloth overlaid with a brown cloth. The horseshoe-shaped chocolate cake with a "K-K" brand was surrounded by miniature covered wagons and western hats. Chocolate candy boots were served on a silver tray won by the groom in junior 4-H horsemanship competition. Coffee was served from a silver service. Sonia Kimmel of Hayden Lake, Idaho, sister-in-law of the groom, Cindy Burns of Dallas, his cousin, and Becky Burns of Baytown, also his cousin, presided.

MR. AND MRS. KRIS ALAN KIMMEL

Carrie Taylor Richardson of Snyder registered guests in the bride's book at a registry table covered with a round white cloth designed with multicolored embroidery which had been used in the bride's parents' wedding and in her brother's wedding.

Ashley Gray, the niece of the bride, and Kasey Lee Kimmel of Hayden Lake, Idaho gave the guests apricot and blue rice bags. Gray was dressed like the bridal attendants and Kimmel was attired like the groomsmen.

For her honeymoon, the bride chose a two-piece, fitted, candlelight embossed dress which her mother had worn as her wedding dress. The groom wore dress slacks and a shirt.

A 1979 Snyder High School graduate, the bride received her BS degree in management information systems from Texas Tech University in May. She is employed by Chevron.

The groom graduated for Snyder High School in 1981 and will receive a BS degree in finance from Texas Tech in December.

Program may become model

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — It's not unusual for a city to make a buck from some of its services, such as the water works or the municipal golf course, but St. Paul could become a model for government-for-profit.

Facing a deluge of red ink and the prospect of further cutbacks in services, officials of Minnesota's capital city asked a think tank to show them how to make government pay.

"There's no longer any fat in our budget," says Peter G. Hames, director of the city Department of Finance and Management Services. "We've been cutting muscle out, and we don't want to cut off the arms next."

Mayor George Latimer says the city's property tax is already at its "legal and tolerable limit" and inflation and diminished state and federal aid have forced the city to cut employees from 3,500 in 1976 to 2,900 at present.

Unless something is done, projections suggest, revenues for 1988 in this city of 270,000 will fall $8 million short of what's needed.

For solutions to the problem, city officials turned to the Rand Corp., a California-based think tank.

Rand's answer was simple: allow city departments that are capable of making a profit to do so.

Two departments are now targeted to become "profit centers" by the end of the year. They are the Parks and Recreation Department and the Traffic and Lighting Division.

Officials hope to increase rentals of a new municipal stadium for concerts, sports tournaments, plays and other events.

The basic idea is to make a profit where it can be done — logically, competitively and without creating problems with citizens, unions or other governmental bodies, Hames says.

Like most cities, St. Paul has had "user fees" for years. It even sells its police radio repair service to suburban communities.

"The profit center is an extension of the user fee concept," Latimer says.

The profit center concept originated at the Rand Corp., which offered to design and implement a project for St. Paul. The idea generated little enthusiasm, Hames says, until a cutback of $4 million in state aid forced the city to cut the equivalent of 190 full-time positions in January 1982.

"That shock got us real serious in a hurry," Hames says.

Rand examined St. Paul's revenues and expenditures, analyzed services and recommended a way of determining which were essential and which were responsive to market pressures.

The think tank suggested that essential services be financed by appropriations from property taxes and other stable revenues, while user fees and special assessments could be collected from the beneficiaries of special services.

Traditional garb is considered out

HONOLULU (AP) — You won't see the "malo," the traditional wrap worn around the loins of Hawaiian men, at the Polynesian Cultural Center here any more.

The musicians who host visitors to the center's Hawaiian Village have been told to take off their loin cloths and put on either midi-length skirts or a shorter, paneled skirt that covers everything above the knee.

The malo was comfortable, everyday garb for traditional men of Hawaii. It was about a foot wide and three to four yards long, made of kapa cloth dyed red or yellow.

Executives at the center say the replacement, a "pa'u," is equally historic and authentic.

"It's a wraparound found in Hawaiian history," said Ralph Rodgers, center president and general manager.

The cultural center policy had been a long time coming and stemmed from the opposition of the Mormon Church, which operates the center, to exposure of the human body.

"We run an organization that would not offend anybody," explained Rodgers. "Some people would not wear the malos properly. We're not doing a missionary thing. But if there's something in history that's more modest, we'll use it."

Rodgers said he'd received no complaints from visitors, "just complaints from some of us around the grounds."

"We've always meant to take them out of the malos," said Hawaiian Village operations manager Haunani Kaanaana.

"Because the center is operated by the church and we try to stay as authentic as possible, we try to stay within church regulations. Also, some have been through the temple and the regulation is once you've been through the temple, you must wear a shirt."

Euphausia superba is a protein-rich crustacean that may be the world's most important plankton species. It has 11 pairs of legs. It swims with the five back pairs and feeds with the six forward pairs, National Geographic says.

Next movie is about dancers

ROME (AP) — Filmmaker Federico Fellini says his next movie, "Ginger and Fred," will be about a couple of veteran dancers — but their names won't be Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

The film, Fellini's first project since "And the Ship Sails On," will star Fellini's wife, Giulietta Masina, and Marcello Mastroianni, Italian newspapers reported Thursday.

"'Ginger and Fred' is not the biography of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, as many people have suggested," Fellini, 64, was quoted as saying by the Turin daily La Stampa. "I just want to tell the story of a couple of old dancers and make a parody of the modern world."

Miss Masina starred in Fellini's 1954 film "La Strada," which won the Oscar for best foreign film.

A U.S. presidential address was broadcast for the first time Dec. 6 1923, when Calvin Coolidge spoke to a joint session of Congress.

Advancement in your chosen field is likely this coming year, provided you keep current with new knowledge as it develops. First study, then apply.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to be at your best today you require activities that stimulate you both mentally and physically. Get off your duff and start moving around. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material aspects are still favorable and mysterious circumstances could unleash something that will make it possible for you to add to your present holdings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your leadership qualities will seek expression today. You'll know how to assert yourself in a manner others will find inspiring.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Friends will sense today that you are a person in whom they can confide. They are apt to tell you things that they won't dare tell anyone else.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Avoid the company of dullards today. You need to be around people who are enthusiastic and progressive. Seek out this type of companionship.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're capable of masterful achievements today. Use your bright imagination to envision yourself successful at whatever you attempt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Actions that are in accord with your highest ideals should work out very fortunately today. Don't lower your standards, even if others do.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to be adaptable today regarding changes that might be imposed upon you. Adjusting to situations eliminates frustrations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Harmonious one-to-one relationships can be easily maintained today if you excuse in others what you want excused in yourself. Be tolerant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Sitting around and being ideal will weigh heavily on you today. If you want peace of mind, do things that are productive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Just by being yourself today you can be the center of attention, regardless of where you go. Let the real you come through.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll have more fun entertaining at your place today than you will have going out on the town. Call up pals for an impromptu get-together.

Your Birthday

Oct. 1, 1984

This coming year you will be showered with an abundance of opportunity. However, if you are indifferent or complacent about what occurs, it may count for little.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to be a leader today, you must first set a proper example. Don't expect others to follow rules you personally ignore. Major changes are in store for Libras in the coming year. Send for your year-ahead predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If a friend comes to you for advice today, there's a possibility you might tell him what he wants to hear, instead of the truth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's bad enough to be wasteful with your own resources but there's also a chance today you might be careless with the holdings of another.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In competitive situations today, do not make the mistake of underrating your opponents. You'll be caught off guard if you do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be optimistic and hopeful today, but don't let it override your common sense. Facts must be taken at face value, not glossed over.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Risky financial ventures must not be impulsively rushed into today. Before making any moves, be certain you have a crystal-clear picture.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In order for collective effort to click properly in career situations today, a harmony of purpose must exist between you and your cohorts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's imperative at this time that you keep pace with your duties and responsibilities. If you fall behind, it will be difficult to catch up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be extra careful today regarding who you do business with. If you have any doubts regarding the integrity of the person or firm, back off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Important family matters should not be aired in public today. Keep pertinent discussions between you and your mate restricted to your own household.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Tasks you normally perform with considerable ease could prove rather difficult today. Don't take your work for granted or you may have to do it over again.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not be a tightwad today but, by the same token, don't be overly extravagant with persons who don't warrant it just because you want to make a good impression.

Early film start nets success

READING, Pa. (AP) — When Ray Dennis Steckler was 16, growing up in Reading during the 1950s, he used to wander with his pals to the banks of the Schuylkill River and shoot pirate movies with an 8mm camera his stepdad had bought him.

"Everybody thought I was kind of crazy, but I knew that with a camera I could do something with my life," Steckler said. "At that point, I wanted to do photography and become a film director more than anything."

And become a filmmaker he did. Steckler today is known to legions of B-movie fans as the director and sometime star of such luridly titled quickies as "Rat Pfink A Boo-Boo," "The Thrill Killers," "The Hollywood Strangler Meets the Skid Row Slasher," and "The Incredibly Strange Creatures Who Stopped Living and Became Mixed-Up Zombies."

Some of those attractions were supplemented with the best 3-D effects ever devised: Steckler and his cohorts would go to the theaters themselves, in costume, and scare the wits out of unwary audiences.

Steckler also helped support himself by freelancing as a cinematographer. Among other assignments, he shot "The Professionals" television series in 1969, an advertising film with David Steinberg for Playboy magazine, the Olympic trials at Lake Tahoe for ABC, and 16mm educational films for children.

Most recently, he filmed a 4½-minute short called "Thunderbirds in Concert," which captures the first performance by the U.S. Air Force precisionflying team since a 1982 accident that killed four members.

Despite his lustrous credentials, Steckler is one of Reading's best-kept secrets.But his anonymity should end before long. Steckler, now 46 and a cinema instructor at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, is in the process of acquiring rights to many of his old movies, which he plans to distribute anew on the midnight circuit.

And next year, the 30th anniversary of his graduation from Reading High School, Steckler hopes to return with his students to film a pet project about obsession and lost identity that he wrote years ago, a suspense thriller set at the Pagoda atop Mount Penn.

Steckler said he had actually begun planning for his career while in elementary school.

After his stepfather bought him that first movie camera, Steckler was hooked. He wrote and filmed little stories with his friends, complete with costumes designed by one of them. In the service, he studied photography.

In 1959, he got a call from an Army buddy, a fellow cameraman and writer-producer-director who was preparing to shoot a movie in Vancouver and needed help on the photography crew. Steckler packed his bags and headed west.

A few days into production, Steckler's pal was fired, and Steckler wound up as director of photography in his first legitimate movie.

Steckler is certain a new generation of fans is ready to embrace his handiwork. He's buying back the rights to his old movies, and he guarantees that his films will be showing up at local midnight bookings within a year.

"I'm trying to build a cult following so that eventually something will drop in my lap," he said. "I feel that's just around the corner because I'm getting all sorts of offers to do small films."

The liner Deutschland sank near London in 1875 and 157 persons drowned.

THANK YOU

By Donny Brown

At least one part of the United Way campaign is as much fun as fishing.

Forget the initial planning part; and finding folks willing to serve; and preparing the brochure; and fielding the budget requests; and mailing letters to out-of-town donors; and shaking the cup at local business owners and wage earners.

That stuff is pretty much brass, sweat and gentle arm twisting.

But remember how it feels to run a trot line on a sunny summer morning?

When you've got 30 or so leader lines to check after the initial work of cutting bait and doctoring hooks.

Say you laid that line the afternoon before — a time when the wind blows and choppy water makes handling a boat about as much fun as backing a four-wheel trailer.

You probably got one or two hooks jabbed into the soft, fleshy part of your thumb. And the abrasive trotline cord felt like fire in your water-soaked hands.

Then the drift carried you past where you wanted to chunk the far end of the durn thing — making you a good 25 ft. off of where you reckon the channel runs deepest.

But the sun was going down, the lantern was back at the boat house and it was too late to do anything about it then.

Then the morning comes, the wind is gone and the lake runs as smooth as milk. You find the bleach bottle you left for float, and straighten the boat horizontal to your trotline.

Then you begin pulling yourself toward the first hook. It may be empty, but you pull it free from the water and test the tautness of the rest of the line.

The next two or three may also clear the lake's surface, dangling quickly side to side and holding only a drip of water.

But your pulse gets a shove if there's a sharp dip in the line a ways up.

Moving closer to it, you'll feel the on-again, off-again tension of movement as you hold onto the connecting string. It will grow stronger, and a small constriction will begin to flutter in your jaw and face muscles — the beginning of a grin.

When you finally reach the spot, seeing a big catfish's head break water is about as much fun as there is.

So anyway, back to United Way. The work that goes into the Scurry County campaign is by now pretty much over.

But like trotline fishing, the fun part now begins as you haul your donor packets back in.

They normally come back sealed, so you have to stack the lot in front of you and go through each. Breaking the seal, you never know what to expect.

Some contain nothing but the campaign literature you provided, and these cause the downdraft of a disappointment — just like that wet but empty hook.

But the next one will have a colored slip of paper — a signed and memoed check — or the good, green rustle of cash.

And the squirt of pleasure you get every time you land a donation is on a par to seeing that whiskered catfish shake his head at you in greeting.

The bigger the catch, the better it feels. But it all feels good.

Weird weather. Weird. Even for West Texas...strange.

I'm not complaining. The rain was more than welcome. The cold that came with it was a refreshing change also, especially since my air conditioner squeaked out two weeks notice Aug. 1, and quit altogether Aug.15. Good riddance to the noisy thing. I don't need it now.

The nicest thing about this cold, wet spell is that we get a taste of winter without having to swallow the whole season right away. What I mean is there will still be some sunny, balmy days with cool nights (I hope) before the nasty season gets here for real. This cold spell gives us a chance to warn up to the notion that winter will come again after all. That is something I couldn't make myself believe two weeks ago as I doused myself with cool water before going to bed and then hoped I went to sleep before I dried off.

The weather people are full of explanations for the cold and wet. They are blaming it on icy air from Canada, and a tropical storm off the coast of Florida. I don't recall any of them warning us last week to brace ourselves for cold north winds and drenching rain. I suspect those rascals knew but were afraid to tell us because, if wrong, they knew their miserable lives would be worth less than a turkey's on the third Thursday in November.

Think about it. In the midst of a hot, dusty drought, would you put your neck on the line and predict three inches of rain and cold north winds? Not unless you had a guarantee that's seldom granted this side of heaven. Those guys aren't paid enough money to take that kind of risk.

Speaking of money, some of the merchants knew. I'm not suggesting that they made a pact with the devil, but how else do you explain all those anti-freeze sales I saw in the papers? Only the very prudent buy anti-freeze in September. Had they had the sale last week, they wouldn't have got any of my money.

I prefer to wait until 2 a.m. in dead winter and the first real sub-freezing norther is undisputably blowing in. I get out of a warm bed and rush down to the truck stop and bid on the last gallon left this side of Dallas. It is not much fun, and it is expensive, but does add a sense of adventure to my dull existence.

The norm this time of year for people of my ilk is not to worry about winter, but to try to remember the location of the last full-service gas station where they bought a gallon of gas so they can hit on the attendant to check the freon. We worry about winter when it gets here.

If you are one to worry about the weather, here is some food for thought. Some scientific types say the ice age is returning. The winters are getting longer and colder. It is a gradual thing, but already in some places the growing season has been shortened enough to cause some types of crops to be abandoned.

The last major ice age reached its peak about 18,000 years ago. As recently as 1890, what scientists call a "little ice age" peaked. Glaciers advanced, and bodies of water in northern latitudes remained frozen for long periods of time. Then from 1890 to 1940, worldwide temperatures rose about 18 hundredths of a degree every 10 years. Since then the mercury has been dropping again.

If you're not in the mood to worry about a new ice age, then you might fret some about the "greenhouse effect." Perhaps you read about it in the National Enquirer. This theory holds that pollutants and other man-made baddies are trapping the sun's heat in the atmosphere, much as a greenhouse traps heat. The result, some say, will be a melting of the polar caps and flooding of the earth.

Well, have a happy weekend. I have to go get my anti-freeze out of the back of my pickup and stash it in the closet before it walks off.

In 1860, South Carolina became the first state to secede from the United States.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
September 23

For the current fall term, Western Texas College has reached its second highest student count ever, it was reported Sunday.

A total of 1,319 passed both the previous record for a fall semester and the earlier record for second highest semester. The all-time high remains at 1,414, reported in the spring of 1983.

MONDAY
September 24

Monday morning, Kent County law enforcement officials were continuing their investigation into the Sunday morning shooting incident — now thought to be a murder-suicide — involving 70-year-old George Weldon Johnson and his wife Ida Sue Johnson, 69.

Kent County officials said information gathered to date indicated Mrs. Johnson first shot her husband, then took her own life.

For the first time in its four-year history, a man and woman team was the winner at the Scurry County Domino Tournament, it was reported Monday.

Mary Langford made history Saturday as the female half of the winning team. Her partner was Orville Mathis.

The second place team was comprised of Ted Crenwelge and Max von Roeder.

Some $10,700 was divided among the three Scurry County school districts Monday as part of the annual distribution of interest derived from the County Available School Fund.

County commissioners unanimously voted to approve the distribution with Snyder ISD receiving $9,865; Ira ISD receiving $506 and Hermleigh ISD receiving $391.

TUESDAY
September 25

Backed by sufficent drive dollars to make this year's effort more than one-third complete, United Way workers Tuesday were urged to quickly push the 1984 goal "over the top."

Dr. Don Nnwbury served as keynote speaker at the United Way luncheon. Representatives from the eight agencies benefitted by the drive, campaign workers and officials from 18 "Pacesetter" donor firms attended the event.

The first significant cold front of the fall provided needed rainfall over all of Scurry County Tuesday afternoon and night — amounts ranging from 2 to 4.5 inches.

Along with the rain, temperatures here dipped to 44 degrees overnight. Lake J.B. Thomas was expected to benefit somewhat from the Tuesday rain, but the immediate prediction was the lake level would not go up substantially.

An Albuquerque couple — 59-year-old Juanita Gorham and her husband Vernon — sustained serious injuries about 11:30 a.m. Thursday when the late model Chevrolet they were driving on U.S. Highway 180 was in collision with a one-ton truck owned by Southwestern Bell.

Both were transferred to Lubbock's Methodist Hospital Thursday afternoon and were listed in serious condition there Friday morning.

The Scurry County Fair family sweepstakes plaque — the Hugh Taylor Award — was presented Thursday morning to the Benjamin A. Taylor family.

The four Taylor children — Macie, Greta, Alissa and Theron — won 30 first place ribbons, 11 second place ribbons and three ribbons for either third or fourth place.

FRIDAY
September 28

The annual review of Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) farm loans in Scurry County is to begin soon, and this year's review will determine which local farmers may qualify for a "rescheduling" of a portion of their loan based upon new FmHA "farm credit initiatives."

John B. Smith, the FmHA representative for this county based in Rotan, said Friday farmers may qualify for up to a five-year deferral.

Guidelines for the 1985 farm program were announced by Snyder representatives of the Scurry County ASCS office Friday.

Dates to signup for the farm program will be Oct. 15 through March 1, 1985.

"Kids helping kids" is the theme of the 1984 Toys for Tots campaign now underway in Snyder. Sharyon Bond will serve as director and she will be assisted by county 4-H youth, it was reported Friday.

FIVE YEARS AGO

M.E. Scott of Snyder was inducted into the Texas Electric Service Co.'s Quarter Century Club in honor of his 25 years service to the company at a banquet at the Scurry County Coliseum Monday night — Sept. 24.

Cheerleaders for WTC for the 1979-80 school year named this week were Belva Marsh, Lynda Cain, Tonya Porter, Gina Williams and Renae McBroom.

Snyder Kiwanians celebrated a triple officer installation Saturday night — Oct. 29. Presidents of the three local clubs installed at the meeting included Roy Meador, president of the Sunrisers Club; Paul Hurt, president of the Noon Club; and Ray Summers, president of the Golden K.

10 YEARS AGO

Grand Champion Booths named this morning — Sept. 26 — for the 1974 edition of the Scurry County Fair were entered by the Scurry County Museum Association and the Ira Community.

Candidates for Homecoming Queen of the SHS Homecoming of 1974 named today — Sept. 30 — are Ruth Ann Fagin, Marla Watkins, Jeana von Roeder, Teresa Clark, Annette Williams and Kerry Holt.

15 YEARS AGO

Officers and owners of the R.S.&P. railroad celebrated the arrival of a new 1,500 horsepower diesel-electric locomotive today — Sept. 24. The new engine is the first acquired by the railroad since 1949 and is said to be capable of pulling a fully loaded 70 car train.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to take this time to say thank you to the Scurry County fair board for letting me be a part of the fair this past week. For three years now they have let us come out and have a dog show. This year we even had a dog fashion show. These are times the children will never forget. The dogs are their 4-H project and the fair so kindly lets the children come out and show their animals. Thank you so much.

I would like to say thanks to the folks who worked so hard to help put on the dog show and the fashion show. Kent Mills, Kathy Roberts, Dalinda Roberts and Deanna Myers. Most of all parents, thank you for allowing me to work with your child this past year.

To the editor,

Every religion known to man today is made up of dogmatic tenents. The church is a mutual social, insurance organization. The people band together to help one another. The trouble today is not the church. The trouble is that the Gov. trys to take the role of God. Since the Gov. subsidizes all churches by exempting all donations from taxes, income and property. The richer the church the bigger the subsidy. This discriminates against the poor churches. The alternative is to tax all churches on value of property and donations.

Joe Eicke home filled with history

The Joe Eicke home on the Roby Highway has a lot of history. According to Opal Eicke, she and her late husband, Joe, were told by Uncle Ed Joyce that the house was about 100 years old. Legend has it that the house was used as a half-way home for early settlers who traveled between Abilene and Lubbock. They would often stop here for the night, feed and rest their animals, and go on to their destination the next day...

Artifacts reveal facts about Indian life in early day Ohio

CINCINNATI (AP) — "Imagine what you do every day," says anthropologist C. Wesley Cowan. "You have a varied schedule, but with a certain amount of regularity you do the same thing every day."

If the same was true for Indians in Ohio a thousand years ago, Cowan expects to have a good idea what their schedules were like, when he finishes his work at the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History.

In an upstairs room at the museum, a wall of beer cartons holds relics of the lives of some Indians of the Ohio River Valley. Crammed in the cartons, in paper bags the size that hold peanuts at ball games, are bone tools, stone tools and pottery fragments.

The artifacts were left by Indians who lived on the banks of the Little Miami River north of Cincinnati between A.D. 450 and A.D. 1400. They were found in a plowed field some 40 years ago, but their full story has never been told.

Scientist Charles Oehler supervised that dig, but was too busy to do a thorough evaluation of the artifacts. Since then, scientists and students have analyzed parts of the collection. But no one has analyzed the whole.

Service dogs honored

AGANA, Guam (AP) — The bright sunlight glistens on 21 white grave markers. Some bear the names of privates and corporals of the K-9 Corps, while others are merely marked "unknown."

The cemetery is small but unusual, because it is a cemetery for dogs. The sign reads "American War Dog Cemetery."

Before 1942, the United States military use of dogs was limited to arctic areas, where they were used as sled dogs. During World War II, however, 1,000 dogs of various breeds were trained and sent overseas for scouting, patrol and sentry duty. Many of these dogs, like their human handlers, never returned from the war.

Today, near Andersen Air Force Base, Guam, the white grave markers stand as a silent memorial to the 21 canines that are buried there. The American War Dog Cemetery was moved to its present location when the ocean threatened to wash away the old cemetery. Men of the 3960th Combat Defense squadron sentry dog section have maintained the cemetery ever since.

War dogs buried here served as scouts, mine dogs, sentries and messengers during the liberation of Guam from the Japanese in 1944. The dogs, with their handlers, flushed the enemy from the thousands of cave, jungle and wooded hiding places of the island.

George G. Flores, a Dededo fireman, was familiar with the dogs assigned to the 21st Marines, 3rd Battalion, 1st Brigade, with which he served as a scout.

"We trusted the dogs completely," said Flores. "They saved our lives more than once. The Japanese would set up an ambush in a cave or in the jungle and the dogs would sense it. When the dogs started to hunch down and crawl in a certain direction, glancing over their shoulders at us, we would know that something was wrong. Most of the time the enemy was ahead and we were ready for him."

Because of their light weight and superior sense of smell, the dogs excelled as mine detectors. They could determine where the Japanese had dug in the ground because their scent would be heavy there, and they did not have enough weight to set the mine off.

Sometimes the dogs were helpful in the capture of prisoners.
