Truck/train mishap

The unidentified driver of this Ford pickup truck was taken to Odessa's Medical Center hospital after the truck was hit by a westbound Missouri-Pacific freight train at the Coors Road crossing six miles west of Midland along U.S. Highway 80 about 7:30 a.m. today. The victim, whose name was withheld pending notification of relatives, was still being treated at press time.

Dean predicts 2.5 million will vote in Texas

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State David Dean predicted about 2.5 million Texans would vote today in elections for governor, U.S. Senate, nine other statewide executive and judicial spots, 27 congressional seats and 181 legislative seats.

Dean said Monday he expected about a 42 percent turnout of voters, based upon a spot check of absentee voting in 38 counties, where 59 percent of the registered voters live.

At the top of the ticket were races for governor and the Senate.

Gov. Bill Clements, the state's first Republican chief executive since Reconstruction, faced a challenge from Democratic Attorney General Mark White, who won the nomination without a majority last May.

White led a field of four Democratic candidates and received the nomination when Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple dropped out of a runoff battle.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat seeking his third term, was challenged for re-election by U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas.

Collins, in a campaign that reminded some observers of Bentsen's successful fight against then-U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough in 1970, has criticized Bentsen for his "liberal" and "un-Texan" voting stances.

Bentsen has labeled Collins an "extremist" who has not passed any of his own legislation during 14 years in Congress.

Clements and White continued their head-knocking campaigns Monday with quick visits to the largest groups of voters in the state.

"We'll knock off the door of the governor's mansion and open it to the people of Texas," White promised a noon rally in downtown Houston.

Clements told a noon rally in Dallas that he was confident voters would favor him in Tuesday's election "and retire White, a career politician."

Clements was supported by Vice President George Bush, former Gov. John Connally, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

"The opposition is shrill," said Bush, who called Clements a "great governor for Texas."

Bush said the Republican's leadership in his first term prevented a teachers' strike, brought about $1 billion in tax relief and added 800,000 jobs during the four years.

Appearing with White were Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby; Ann Richards, Democratic nominee for treasurer; Garry Mauro, Democratic candidate for land commissioner; and Jim Hightower, Democratic candidate for agriculture commissioner.

White said Clements had "turned the Public Utility Commission into lap dogs. I'm going to turn the commission into a servant of the people," he said.

Hobby squared off for re-election today against George Strake, a Houston oilman and former secretary of state under Clements.

Ms. Richards, a former Travis County commissioner who upset incumbent Warren Harding in the Democratic primary, faced Republican Allen Clark, a former Clements aide, in the treasurer's race.

Republican Woody Glasscock challenged Mauro in the land commissioner's race. Incumbent Bob Armstrong staged an unsuccessful run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination earlier this year.

Hightower, a writer and consumer activist who beat incumbent Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary, battled Republican Fred Thornberry, a Texas A&M poultry specialist, in the agriculture commissioner's race.

In the attorney general's race, Republican Bill Meier, a retiring state senator from Euless, faced U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox, a Dallas Democrat.

Incumbent Comptroller Bob Bullock was challenged by Republican Mike Richards, a former state senator.

Democratic Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent was seeking his first full term. Nugent, a former state representative from Kerrville, faced Republican John Thomas Henderson, a retired Austin businessman who accepts no campaign contributions.

In a Supreme Court race, Democrat Ted Robertson of Dallas, a judge for 17 years, faced Republican John L. Bates of Waco, a lawyer for the 36 years.

Man injured as train hits truck

An unidentified man was taken to Odessa's Medical Center Hospital after the pickup truck he was driving collided with a frieght train west of Midland Regional Airport early this morning.

The man was northbound on Coors Road and was crossing the Missouri-Pacific tracks along U.S. Highway 80 when his truck was hit broadside by a westbound freight about 7:30 a.m., according to initial reports from the Department of Public Safety.

The engine was thrown from the demolished 1970s model blue Ford pickup, which bore New Mexico license plates and was pushed a half-mile down the tracks.

According to a Mo-Pac spokesman in Odessa, the 69-car, 4,175-foot-long train was travelling at 55 mph at the time of the accident. It had left Big Spring earlier and was on its way to El Paso with a five-member crew, none of whom was injured.

The victim was undergoing treatment in the emergency room of MCH and his condition, as well as further details of the accident, were not available at press time. There were no other occupants in the vehicle.

He was taken to MCH on a life support system, according to Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry, who arrived at the scene after the man had been transported to the hospital.

The accident occurred about five miles west of a similar accident that claimed the life of an Odessa woman a year ago.

Mary Jo Hamilton, a 31-year-old mother of four children, died when her pickup was hit by a westbound freight at another Mo-Pac crossing a mile west of Holiday Hill Road Sept. 24, 1982.

While both crossings are protected by stationary crossing signs, no gates or flashing lights are present. The Mo-Pac spokesman said the state highway department decides which crossings get gates and flashing lights and bases its determination on a priority list of dangerous crossings statewide.

Election day is a holiday for state employees and highway department officials could not be reached for comment.

United Way at 75 percent with one week left in campaign

"Community support has been very generous," Joe Kloesel told United Way volunteers this morning, "but our figures show we will need a strong extra effort from now until the end of the campaign in order to meet our goal."

Campaign cabinet members met today, barely a week before the campaign ends Nov. 10, to review pledges and plan last-minute strategy. Although several divisions did meet their objectives for this report period, the collective total stood at 75.4 percent. Campaign leaders had targeted a goal of 80 percent complete by today.

The tally of $1,210,520 fell $79,000 short of that figure. Kloesel explained that contributors from previous years could not be expected to provide the increase necessary to meet the goal and called on those who had not contributed in the past and persons new to Midland to help in meeting this year's $1.612 million goal. He added volunteers have been especially diligent this year, and blamed isolated campaign losses on 1982's leveling of the boom economy of the past few years.

"This goal represents needs of our entire community," Kloesel said, "and we want everyone in Midland to share in the privilege and responsibility of taking care of those needs. Anyone who wishes to help and who has not been contacted should call the United Way office (682-4358) for information."

Kloesel noted community involvement in this year's campaign has run at a consistently higher level than in the past, beginning with the campaign kickoff attended by almost 500 people. He said also that more than 400 free hotdogs were served to a crowd on the Courthouse lawn Oct. 20, and re-emphasized an invitation to the public to attend Friday's noon report rally, also to be held on the Courthouse's south lawn.

Dallas Cowboy Tony Dorsett will highlight the Friday rally, and free soft drinks and hot dogs again will be provided to all who attend.

Like Cliff Harris, who was kickoff speaker and who cheered volunteers on at the previous report rally, Dorsett has served as a volunteer for United Way of America and is now involved in oil-related business.

Kloesel said Friday's rally will give special recognition to the Education Division, chaired by Jess Parrish, which will report its campaign total. Monday, the Education Division, which reported $0 at the Oct. 20 meeting, stood at 101 percent of its goal, with some pledges yet to be reported.

Andrews residents seek to separate services

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

ANDREWS — About 50 Andrews residents gathered in the old Country Club building on Election Day eve for what amounted to an unofficial referendum on the city's combined police-ambulance service.

When the shouting subsided and opinions were tallied, the verbal vote totals read: residents, about 50; city hall, 0.

After settling on a name, "Citizens for a Safe Andrews," and passing a cowboy hat to bolster its fledgling treasury, the group vowed to file a lawsuit against the city of Andrews, its city council and its city manager unless action is taken by Nov. 11 — the council's next scheduled meeting date — to separate the police and ambulance services.

Glen Williamson, a former Andrews district attorney, offered to file a suit on behalf of the group alleging that because ambulance duties often interfere with policemen's law enforcement responsibilities, the city is failing to provide adequate police protection.

WILLIAMSON, WHO served as district attorney from Jan. 1, 1977, until April 30, 1982, offered as evidence an instance in which Andrews police responded to a shooting incident. He said that because ambulance duties must take precedence over law enforcement, the policemen were forced to transport the victim to the hospital immediately, leaving the assailant and evidence behind.

Ellen Hoffman, meeting organizer, said the group will buy space for a questionnaire in the Andrews County News in order to survey other Andrews residents prior to the Nov. 11 deadline.

Mrs. Hoffman said the problems inherent in a combined police-ambulance service came to her doorstep Sept. 3, when two men robbed her at gunpoint. Because the on-duty officers were making an ambulance run, they were unable to respond to her calls for assistance until well after the gunmen had escaped. The two have yet to be apprehended.

"All I can say is, something needs to be done," said Mrs. Hoffman. "Don't even think that there's not one of you it can't happen to. I'll grant you one thing, it's not much fun. And I guarantee you, I'll never be put in that position again."

ANDREWS WAS left with a combined police-ambulance service in 1970, when Singleton Funeral Home discontinued its ambulance service. The city presently budgets about $129,000 for ambulance service, recovering about $11-12,000 of the expenses through ambulance fees. Andrews County assumes 60 percent of the remaining ambulance expense while the city of Andrews pays for the remaining 40 percent.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Clear skies for most of the nation are forecast for Wednesday by the National Weather Service, with showers expected from the central Gulf Coast to the Great Lakes. Mild weather is expected to continue in the East with cold temperatures predicted for the Plains.

Cloudy skies, chance for rain forecast

According to popular political wisdom, Republican candidates — supposedly favored by a light voter turnout — should love today's weather forecast. Midland voters may want to bundle up a bit as they trek to the polls tonight, and maybe even bring along an umbrella.

With no precincts reporting, but backed by its radar machines and meteorological moxie, the National Weather Service is forecasting partly cloudy skies tonight with a 20 percent chance of showers. The low tonight should dip into the upper-30s with northerly winds gusting at 15-20 mph.

Wednesday should be fair and ~~cold with~~ the high in the mid-50s and winds again northerly at 15-20 mph.

Monday's high of 77 degrees fell 10 degrees short of the record 87 set in 1952. The overnight low of 48 beat 1966's record low 27 by a landslide.

Sunset tonight is at 5:58; sunrise Wednesday is at 7:07.

Thunderstorms develop over North Texas area

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms developed before dawn over North Texas and portions of the Panhandle as a cold front entered the state, dropping temperatures and promising a cooler temperatures Wednesday.

Some fog was reported along the northern coastal bend. Elsewhere, skies were fair to partly cloudy.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from the upper 40s behind the front in the Panhandle to the 70s over the southern half of the state.

The forecast called for thunderstorms over most of Texas through tonight. Partly cloudy skies and cooler temperatures were expected statewide Wednesday.

Andrews citizens seek separate services

morning, said he was not aware of the proposed lawsuit. But he said "on issues as complex as this, that does not seem to be a very productive way to approach the problem."

Wilson said the Andrews County commissioners court and the city council have studied ambulance service serveral times in past years, most recently this summer when budgeting for fiscal year 1983 was under way. In each instance, he said the combined service seemed to be "the most practical and workable solution."

He called ambulance service "a very complex issue" that "must be handled in such a way that neither law enforcement or ambulance service suffers to the detriment of the citizens."

The city police force has 16 sworn officers, according to Wilson, and responds to about 300 emergency and 250-350 non-emergency calls annually. Wilson said he did not know how many officers were certified emergency medical technicians (EMTs).

An agenda for the council's Nov. 11 meeting has not yet been set, Wilson said.

Hoffman said the city council representatives and city manager were invited to Monday's gathering, but none were in attendance. Several county commissioners, who have indicated a willingness to work with the city on rearranging its ambulance service, were present at the meeting.

MEANWHILE, MANY citizens in attendance were on the edge of their folding chairs, willing to offer opinions on the issue.

Barry Dortch, a former Andrews police officer, said the conflicting responsibilities presented by the ambulance service were "a giant factor" in his decision to leave the force more than a year ago.

"If you need an ambulance at 3 a.m., you got one," he said. "Now if you need a cop at 3 a.m., that's another story."

Earlier, Dan Wheeler, an EMT studying to be a paramedic, told the group that life-and-death ambulance runs shouldn't be "rushed" by impinging police duties.

For his part, Dortch said, "I've seen ambulance runs rushed by ambulance runs."

Dortch remembered at least one eight-hour shift consumed entirely by ambulance calls. He recalled two cases when a shooting victim was rushed to a hospital and the assailant was left behind, the result of having only two policemen on duty and a state law that requires two people on an ambulance run.

Dortch, 33, said only a few of Andrews' approximately 15-person police force are equipped with EMT training. Most, he said, have only first aid certification.

HE SAID THE police force has three vehicles used for ambulance service. "The truck," a Chevrolet Suburban outfitted for emergency service, is patrolling around the clock, he said. Also, he said the city has an emergency van, and a more traditional, "modular" ambulance for long trips.

Several officers have quit because of the strain posed by the conflicting duties, said Dortch, who added that attracting new officers willing to drive the ambulance is difficult.

Dortch said if the combined service has any redeeming quality, it's the conscientious effort extended by the police.

"Even though they hate it with a passion, these guys make an effort, a solid effort, every time.

Pat Shoemake, a respiratory therapist formerly employed at Andrews' Community General Hospital, praised policemen's efforts, saying the group only wishes to bury the combined service.

"I DON'T WANT IT to look like we're after them (the police)," she said. "I don't think it's fair for us to ask the policeman to do a medical job. When he went into policework, that's what he was thinking about, that's what he's geared toward. I wouldn't want to do a policeman's job."

A hospital nurse seated near the back of the room echoed Shoemake's remarks.

"It'd be the same as pulling me off my surgery wing and telling me to go stop a robbery," she said.

Joyce Nelson, an Andrews resident for 22 of her 29 years, said criminals may be getting wise to the problems posed by conflicting police and ambulance service. She said in at least two instances, police responded to reported automobile accidents outside the city. In both cases, she said the police arrived to find no accident and returned to find a business burglarized.

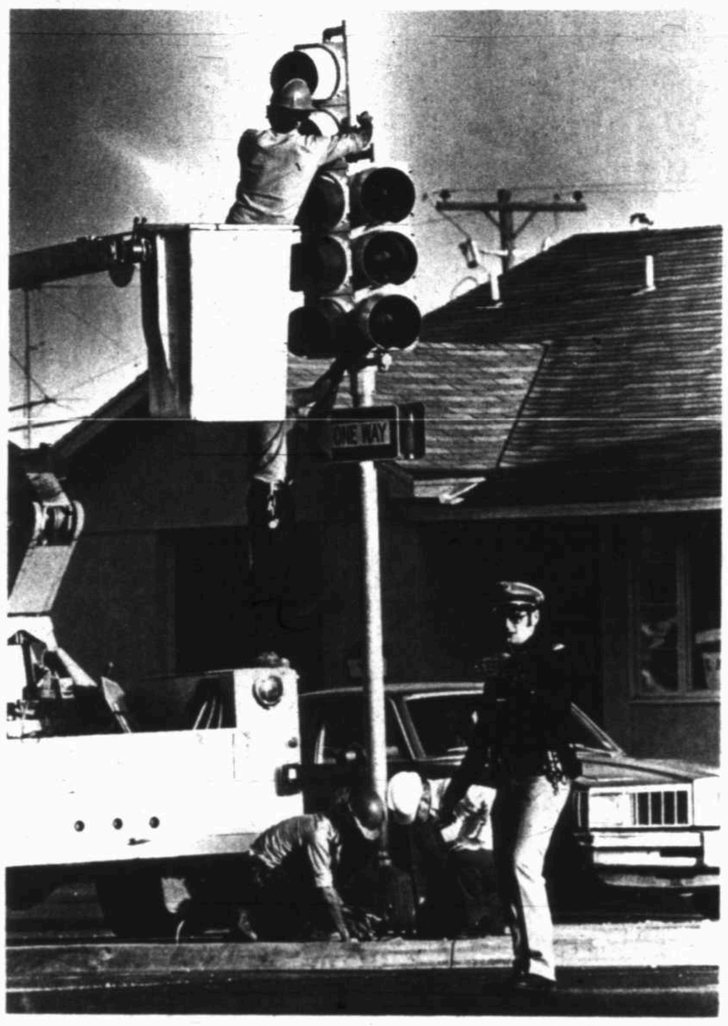

Ms. Nelson recalled a case in which an automobile crashed into a downtown clothes shop. Police responded but were quickly summoned on an ambulance run. She said the police armed and deputized a tow-truck driver, who remained at the crash scene.

Nicki Turnbow, 27, an EMT and a lifetime resident of Andrews, said, "These people haven't even got time to take care of the police work. There's two jobs going on at once and they don't have the time to do either one."

Dortch, who sandwiched two, two-year stints with the police department around a tour with the U.S. border patrol, said, "The ambulance has got to get out of the police department. The police department can't do it. They can't do two jobs. If something's not done, it'll come to everybody personally."

Listening to Dortch's remarks, one man summarized the quandary faced by many in attendance.

"So if a guy's kicking down my door with a gun in his hand, the thing for me to do is call the ambulance and say I'm having a heart attack."

Efforts made to get new voters to polls

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Washington Bureau
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Millions of new voters have been registered for this year's crucial off-year elections, including an additional 3.5 million union members. But now comes the hard part: getting them to the polls.

The methods vary widely:

—In Baltimore, where a record number of blacks have registered, black preachers are ringing the church bells on the hour to remind them to vote.

—In Missouri, more than 200 nurses are calling other nurses and lobbying them at shift changes in hospitals to vote for state Sen. Harriett Woods in the nose-to-nose race against GOP Sen. John Danforth--part of the unprecedented electoral activities in 185 congressional districts inaugurated by the American Nurses Association.

—An estimated 10,000 environmental volunteers will be making their final voter turnout drives in what has been a landmark canvassing and organizational effort. Several hundred volunteers will be trying today to get out at least 40,000 voters for endangered Democratic Rep. Phil Burton in northern California alone.

—And in North Carolina, where 12,000 blacks registered for the first time to support the unsuccessful congressional campaign of Democrat Mickey Michaux, most will come out again today as part of a late-blooming write-in campaign for Michaux, one of many local contests that are expected to draw millions more blacks to the polls this year.

Predictions on whether the election will draw a record number of off-year voters or continue the downward trend that began in 1962 vary dramatically.

There is unanimity on only a few points: that organized labor appears to be coming back to the Democratic Party, with a weekend poll showing a 70 percent Democratic vote in contrast to less than a 60 percent vote in 1980; and that the black vote will increase markedly because of intense antipathy toward President Reagan.

They also agree on another point: that dozens of close races will be determined by just who votes and who stays home.

If pre-election predictions are wrong and a Democratic landslide occurs today, it would almost certainly be attributed to the "sleeper" impact of grass roots get-out-the-vote drives which pollsters can't track.

The pollster who erroneously predicted New York City Mayor Ed Koch would beat Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo by 17 points, only days before Cuomo upset the mayor by 6 points, lamented later he had vastly underestimated the turnout of the labor, liberal, minority, feminist and environmental coalition for Cuomo.

The Cuomo coalition is matched in hundreds of other races across the country — most often working for Democrats but also helping some liberal and moderate Republicans. It has given liberals some breathing room from th big-bucks opposition benefitting conservatives — but how much will be known today.

"I still believe in good field work and in good get-out-the-vote work," says Joanne Symons, a veteran political activist who co-chaired the Draft Kennedy efforts in New Hampshire and who now is political director for the American Nurses Association. "In 1980, we were down 20 points before the election and we lost by only 9 points, due largely to these activities."

In Texas, top strategists for Mark White, the Democratic challenger to GOP Gov. William Clements, are counting on just such a sleeper impact of a unified party voter-turnout operation to put White over by a fraction. Clements, however, retains his own formidable voter turnout telephone bank which gave him his 1978 upset victory.

In 1980, New Right activists claimed to have registered and gotten out for Reagan millions of religious and social conservatives. This year, they are barraging these same people with millions of telegrams and "stay the course" appeals to counter what they call a widespread disillusionment with Reagan's back-burner approach to school prayer and abortion.

New Right direct mail entrepreneur Richard Viguerie said the conservative leaders persuaded Reagan to send an election-eve letter to a Nebraska pastor jailed for violating mandatory school-attendance laws, "because we remember how John F. Kennedy won millions of black votes with his telephone call to Coretta Scott King after Martin Luther King was jailed."

For the first time, dozens of national women's groups are mounting their own get-out-the-vote campaign. This is non-partisan, on the face of it — and may also be too unfocused and untargeted to prove the impact tomorrow.

Organizers contend, however, that the "gender gap" will be a factor in today's vote and that a disproportionate number of women will vote Democratic rather than Republican.

The environmental coalition appears to have come of age in this election, with Marian Edey of the League of Conservation Voters saying at least 100,000 new voters may be pulled out because of concern about Interior Secretary James Watt's policies.

In addition to the California help for Phil Burton, other key races they have targeted are the New Mexico senate race, opposing GOP Jack Schmidt, and the Vermont and Maine senate races where acid rain is a key issue, favoring GOP Sen. Robert Stafford and Democratic Sen. George Mitchell.

"The environmental movement nationwide has more volunteers working in elections today than any other bloc except labor," Edey said.

AIMS publishes bulletins on law, medical schools

AIMS (Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service), a non-profit aptitude testing and research organization headquartered in Dallas, has published free bulletins about law school admissions and medical school admissions.

Most helpful to individuals who are contemplating a career in medicine or law and who want to find out more about getting into medical or law school, the topics covered in the bulletins include undergraduate majors, undergraduate grades and the difficulties experienced in getting into both of the schools.

Two members of the AIMS staff, Irvin C. Shambaugh and Brenda M. Smith, will be at Midland College Nov. 12-14 to administer the aptitude testing and evaluation program.

The testing service is useful to individuals who want to find out more about themselves before making career choices. Finding out what kinds of tasks the individual performs faster and more accurately than the average person is emphasized in the testing procedure.

At the conference, which in Midland costs $400, the individual meets with an AIMS staff member to discuss his aptitude profile and receives a written report detailing the occupations which match his or her aptitudes. If the individual is a student, appropriate colleges and universities also are listed. Parents of high school and college students usually attend the conference.

The testing procedure takes eight hours on the first testing day. Three additional hours are required on the second or third day to complete the testing and to confer with one of the AIMS staff about the results.

Persons interested in more information about the testing service should contact Dr. Robert Hawkins at Midland College, 684-7851. Hawkins, who is in charge of scheduling, can arrange to have a brochure describing the testing service sent to those persons who contact him.

To order a bulletin on law school or medical school, write to AIMS, 2506 McKinney Ave. Suite B, Dallas, Texas 75201. Please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Ballots should show if nation's voters want to 'stay the course' on economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bombarded for months by appeals to their hopes and fears, Americans went to the polls today to shape a new Congress and signal whether they are willing to stay the course with President Reagan's economic program.

Polls opened at dawn and within hours state and county elections officials in the East, South and Midwest cited unseasonably warm weather and said voters were turning out in high numbers, frequently heavier than had been anticipated.

New York City officials said that, if the early high turnout persisted through the day, the tally could exceed the 1978 off-year total by more than 500,000 votes.

In Baltimore County, Md., one official said the early turnout was "the heaviest I've seen in 15 years." Officials in Lycoming County, Pa., said people were waiting in line when the polls opened, which the officials said they had not seen before.

Lines were also reported at some Virginia precincts before the polls opened and one West Virginia official said of the early morning lines in his county: "We seldom see that so early in the day."

Reports of heavy early morning turnouts also came from officials in Connecticut, Ohio, Georgia, Tennessee and Illinois. While some observers reported light or moderate turnouts, others said turnouts could easily reach 60 percent to 70 percent of all registered voters.

Pope's visit turns to politics

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain — After two days of religious celebrations, Pope John Paul II meets today with political and military leaders of this largely Roman Catholic nation where the church has been lamenting what it calls a trend toward "secularization."

John Paul II, who celebrated Mass Monday for 200,000 people in the central city of Avila, was to start the third day of his visit to Spain with a Mass for the dead at the cemetery of Almudena in Madrid.

He was to call on the royal family later in the morning at the Zarzuela Palace, where he was to meet with political and military leaders.

The pontiff said on arriving Sunday for his 10-day, 16-city tour — the first ever by a reigning pope — that his visit was of "a purely religious nature, above all political matters."

But he later addressed a group of Spanish bishops, urging them to fight efforts to legalize abortion and divorce and to cut government subsidies to parochial schools.

The Socialists, who won a sweeping victory in last Thursday's general elections and are to form the first left-wing government in 43 years, are on record as favoring liberalized abortion laws and cuts in parochial-school support.

Right-wing officers within the armed forces, many of whom are former supporters of the late dictator Francisco Franco, are said to resent deeply these and other changes proposed by the Socialist.

The pope briefly referred to Spain's political problems during one of his speeches here, mentioning "the well-known tensions, sometimes leading to open clashes which have taken place in the bosom of your society."

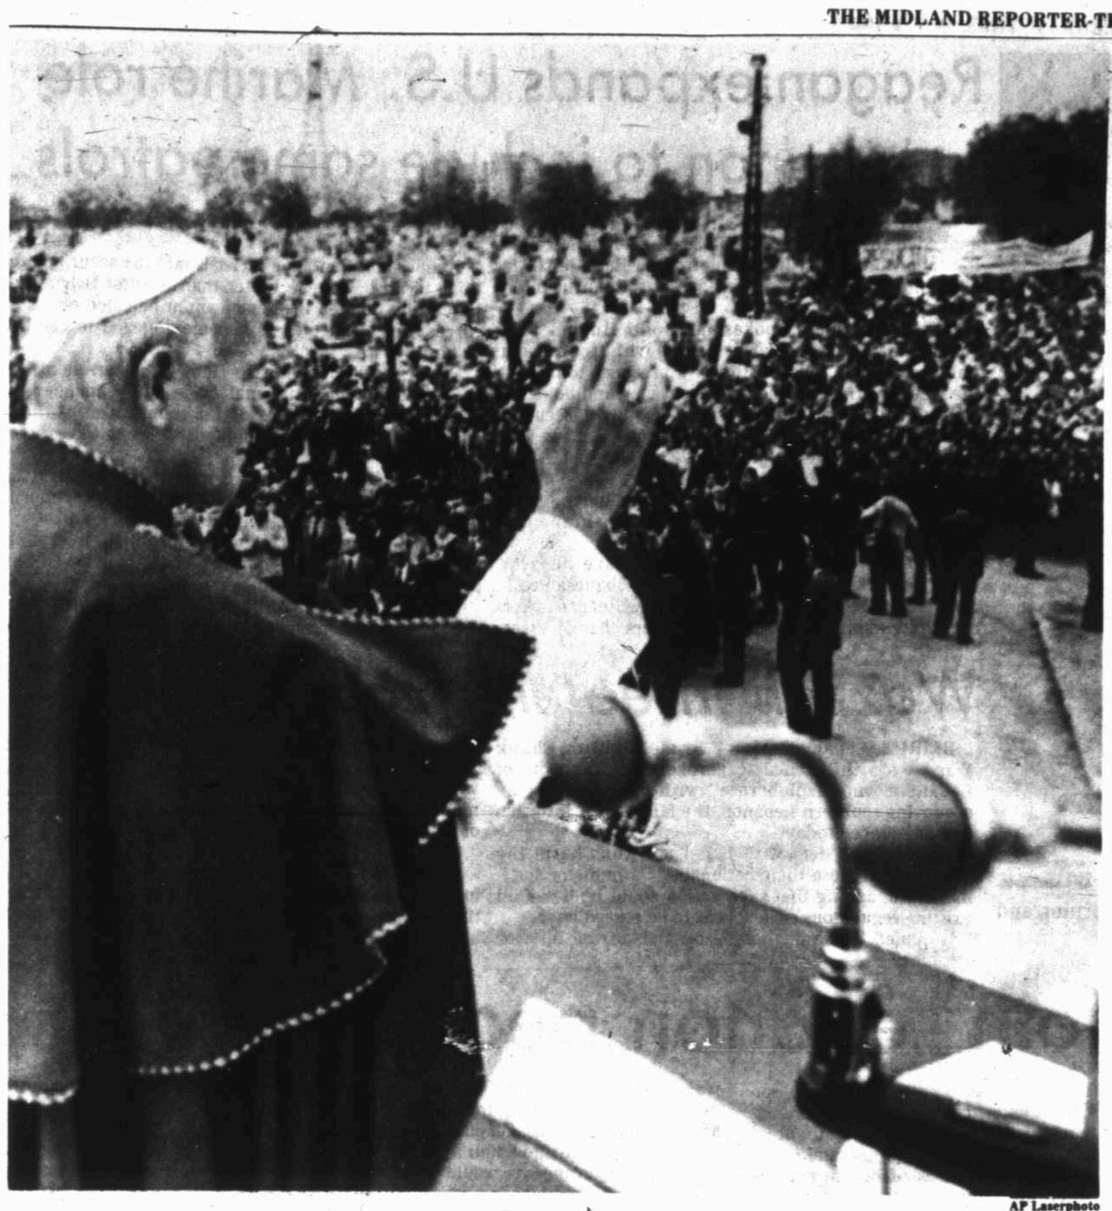

On Monday, the pope paid homage to St. Teresa of Avila in the walled city of Avila on the Plains of Castille, where the renowned Carmelite nun was born and founded the first of the 17 convents she established in Spain.

"Her voice has resounded farther than the Catholic Church," the pope said, calling the 16th century nun's life an example for Christian women around the world.

Later in the day, the pope was taken by helicopter to Alba de Tormes, 45 miles northwest of Avila, where St. Teresa died in 1582 and her remains are kept. John Paul closed the year-long celebration of the 400th anniversy of St. Teresa's death, which brought more than 2 million pilgrims to Avila and Alba over the year.

In Alba, he heard a strong speech by Bishop Mauro Repulles of Salamanca, who attacked what he called the "de-Christianization" of Spanish life.

The pope also celebrated the 36th anniversary of his ordination as a priest in Poland.

Reagan to meet Italian minister

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — When President Reagan receives Italy's Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini at the White House Wednesday, he will meet an unusual man — a distinguished historian, ex-newspaper editor and head of one of Italy's tiniest parties who is known as the "critical conscience" of his nation.

But perhaps most remarkable about the 57-year-old Spadolini, who also will visit Los Angeles and San Francisco this week, is the fact that this intellectual-turned-politician has become one of the most popular and most pro-Western leaders Italy has had since the end of World War II.

That's quite an achievement in a country that has had 47 governments in the postwar era and has a powerful and legal Communist party.

Spadolini, in fact, was nominated as head of the Italian government by a Socialist president, Sandro Pertini, who sought an outsider to bridge the gap between the Socialists and Christian Democrats.

Indeed, this leader of the small Republican Party, which holds only 3 percent of the seats in Parliament, is Italy's first head of government since World War II who is not a member of the Christian Democrats. They hold 38 percent of the seats in Parliament. The Socialists hold 11 percent.

"He is completely free of the taint of power, an honest, independent and hard-working man who perhaps has the one virtue we need most. He is uncorruptible," a senior Italian diplomat said here, which may be one reason why "he has the unanimous support of the Jewish community."

While small numerically, Italy's Jews have a great deal of influence, particularly in financial and political circles.

But Spadolini, whose party has historically been the most vocal advocate of Italy's membership in NATO, also will be unusually frank with Reagan, Italy's ambassador to the U.S. said in an interview. That may come from his background as the hard-hitting editor of the respected newspaper Corriere della Sera.

"We are at a crucial moment in U.S.-European relations," Ambassador Rinaldo Petrignani said he would tell Reagan. Having resolved the dispute over European steel exports that embittered relations for the last two years, "we better set to work" on resolving the dispute over pipeline sanctions, he said.

That is an absolute precondition for a return to the "reciprocal confidence and cooperation" that has been a hallmark of allied relations since World War II. "Let's face it. The sanctions are unpopular in Europe," the envoy said. They have caused "an uproar" in Italy, he added.

That is because last month U.S. customs officials arbitrarily seized four rotors being shipped by General Electric to its Italian subsidiary Nuovo Pignone. The officials charged the rotors were destined to help the Soviet Union complete its 3,700-mile Siberian natural gas pipeline to Europe.

The Italian company contends the rotors were not even headed for Russia but for Algeria. But what really angered them was that the customs officers issued a press release "implying Nuovo Pignone was trying to cheat." The contracts, he said, were signed before last December's martial law crackdown in Poland.

"They put Nuovo Pignone on a black list. The consequence was that all shipments of technology related to oil and gas whatever their further destination became illegal even if they were not going to the Soviet Union," Petrignani complained.

Spadolini is expected to spell out to Reagan how "irritated" the Italian public is over this affair at the same time that he signals Italy's willingness to adopt a new code of rules for trading with Russia that should make it easier for Reagan to lift the embargo on pipeline equipment.

"The fact remains that these rotors are still seized," the ambassador said, "and their technical characteristics make them unfit for the Soviet Union," not to mention the "bad taste" of U.S. customs officers in issuing a press release. Apart from this, Italy remains one of America's closest allies.

Spadolini will tell Reagan, the ambassador said, that Italy will proceed with the NATO decision to deploy Pershing II's and cruise missiles next year despite heavy domestic opposition.

Reagan expands U.S. Marine role in Lebanon to include some patrols

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has expanded the role of U.S. Marines in Lebanon, ordering them to conduct limited patrols in East Beirut in addition to their peacekeeping job at the Beirut International Airport.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said Monday that the 1,200 Marines, along with troops from Italy and France, will constitute "a presence to bolster the security efforts of the Lebanese army and police."

He said the Marines will have "no direct security missions" themselves and that the new duties will involve only part of the present U.S. contingent at any one time.

Another Pentagon official called the move "symbolic," and added, "We are showing the flag in support of the Lebanese army."

The presence of the Marines, who have been in Beirut since Sept. 25, was requested by Lebanese President Amin Gemayel and approved by Reagan after consultations with congressional leaders. The Marines are part of a 3,800-man multinational peacekeeping force now in Lebanon.

Hughes and Pentagon officials said the security situation in East Beirut is better than in West Beirut and that while isolated incidents cannot be ruled out, U.S. forces aren't expected to become engaged in combat or hostilities.

Hughes said that while the Gemayel government has requested the multinational be greatly expanded to encompass other regions of Lebanon, talks on those requests are continuing and no decisions have been made.

Leaders of Congress were told of the decision to involve the Marines in street patrols on Monday morning and voiced no objection, one U.S. official said.

"There seemed not to be any problem, everyone seemed to support it," said the official, who asked not to be identified.

The multinational force entered Beirut after the massacre of Palestinian civilians there.

Wazzan threatens 'collaborators'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan has threatened to revoke the citizenship of Lebanese who "collaborate" with the Israeli army occupying southern Lebanon, the Ministry of Information announced today.

"People who deal with Israel and thus harm the country could lose their nationality," a ministry statement said, adding that such action could be based on existing regulations or new laws to be passed later.

It quoted Wazzan as telling officials of the Interior Ministry and Local Government Affairs Ministry that "from now on there would be no leniency in dealing with cases of collaboration with Israel on the level of municipal or local government officials or on the level of civil servants and ordinary citizens."

Wazzan has demanded that the Israeli army, which invaded Lebanon June 6 in a drive against the Palestine Liberation Organization, leave government buildings and offices it has taken over in southern Lebanon.

Moroccan troops pledged to join Lebanon peace force

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel has won a pledge from Morocco's King Hassan II to contribute 2,000 troops to the 4,000-strong multinational peace force in Lebanon, Lebanese radio stations reported today.

The announcement followed President Reagan's order for U.S. Marines guarding Beirut's international airport to conduct "limited" patrols in the eastern half of the Lebanese capital, controlled by private Christian militias.

There was no indication when the Marines would begin patrolling east Beirut.

In the Chouf mountains 12 miles southeast of Beirut, rival Christian and Druse militiamen clashed in the village of Brih and at least one combatant was killed and another wounded before Israeli soldiers arranged a cease-fire, the state radio said.

Israel's military command in Tel Aviv said an Israeli soldier was wounded by cross-fire in the battle, the latest in a series of Christian-Druse clashes in the area.

President Gemayel pledged in his inauguration speech Sept. 23 to bring the entire country, including the Christian militias once commanded by his slain brother, under the undisputed control of the central government.

He has been flying to capitals around the world seeking backing for his effort to increase the 4,000-strong multinational force to 30,000 troops and has received support in principle from Italy, France and the United States.

But none of these countries, whose troops make up the present peace force, have made any specific offers of more soldiers.

Gemayel flew home today from a one-day visit to Rabat, Morocco, and Lebanese state and private radio stations quoted correspondents traveling with Gemayel as saying Morocco agreed to join the multinational peace force. It was not clear from the reports when any Moroccan troops would be sent.

The radio stations quoted King Hassan as saying that an initial Moroccan contingent of 2,000 troops might be increased once Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces leave Lebanon — an effort being pressed by the Reagan administration.

The privately-owned Lebanese Central Information Agency quoted unidentified officials as saying Lebanon also would seek peacekeeping contingents from Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

The Arab contingents would handle peacekeeping functions in eastern and northern Lebanon while the U.S. Marines, French and Italian troops would help maintain law in the capital, the news agency said.

Lebanese press reports said the expansion of the U.S. Marine role was intended to pave the way for deployment of the Lebanese army in east Beirut and the possible disarming of rightist Christian militias who control the sector.

French and Italian peacekeepers helped the Lebanese army take control of Moslem-populated west Beirut last month, and disarm leftist private armies allied with the Israeli-ousted Palestine Liberation Organization.

Christian militias, the largest of them loyal to the rightist Phalange Party led by Gemayel's father, have been in control of east Beirut and the mountains and coasts north of the capital since the 1975-76 civil war.

In new offensive, Iranians report recapturing 90 square miles held by Iraq

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian forces are pressing a major new offensive against Iraq today and have recaptured some 90 square miles held by Iraqi forces in western Iran near the city of Dezful, the official Iranian news agency claimed.

The state-run Iraqi News Agency confirmed the Iranian attack, but quoted a military spokesman as saying it was being repelled. It said Iranian forces were "attempting in vain to cross the Iraqi international border."

Both sides said the battle began Monday night and was continuing today. Western reporters are barred from the battlefront.

A military communique quoted by Iran's IRNA news agency claimed one Iraqi jet was shot down and Iraqi forces suffered "heavy losses" in the offensive, the second in a month.

"A large area of the Islamic territories of Iran were liberated, including a number of important oil wells in the region," the communique said.

It said four Iranian outposts less than six miles from the Iraqi border were "liberated" during a nighttime fight on a rain-soaked battlefield. It listed the border outposts as Cham Hendi, Cham Sori, Rabut and Nahr-e-Anbar.

Some of the ground recaptured by Iran overlooks the Iraqi towns of Al-Gharbi and Tayeb, as well as part of the Baghdad-Basra highway running about 6 miles inside the Iraqi border, the Iranian agency said.

The Iranian advance also brought Iraqi oil wells in the Zobeidat region within range of Iranian artillery, it added.

In another dispatch, IRNA said the attack was concentrated in a region 47 miles west of Dezful, near the Iraqi border.

Dezful is 155 miles north of the Iranian oil-refining city of Abadan, near the Persian Gulf on the southern edge of the battlefront, and 225 miles southeast of the major border crossing of Qasr-e-Shirin, focal point of Iran's previous major offensive launched at the beginning of October.

The new attack came at the end of the mourning month of Moharram, observed by Iran's Shiite Moslems.

On Monday, Iranian President Ali Khamenei rejected new efforts to end the war, charging that "the U.S.-sponsored policy which imposed the war now wants to impose peace on Iran."

IRNA said Khamenei made this charge in a letter to Guinean President Ahmed Sekou Toure, the leader of a mediation team appointed by the Islamic Conference Organization in an effort to end the Gulf war.

The Iranian attack west of Dezful was the third major military operation reported by Iran since June.

Violence flares in parts of London

LONDON (AP) — Five-hundred police officers battled 400 youths hurling gasoline bombs and bricks as a protest against a demolition project flared into violence in the racially-tense Brixton district, according to police and newspaper accounts.

In a separate incident Monday in the Tottenham area of north London, 20 black youths angered by the arrest of a black man on a traffic charge smashed in the police station door and the window of a patrol car, police said. Four people were arrested, police said.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said eight people — two police officers, a firefighter, a local official and four news photographers were injured in Brixton, the south London area torn by rioting last summer. He said four people were arrested, but did not report any casualties among the rioters.

Both Brixton and Tottenham were reported calm today.

The population of Brixton — a rundown, low-income area of high unemployment — is mostly black and community-police relations have long been strained. The police deny charges of racially motivated harrassment and assaults, saying the area has an above-average incidence of crime and firm policing is required.

Scotland Yard said crowds of youths hurled gasoline bombs, bricks and bottles at police, set a derelict house and a builder's hut on a construction site ablaze and attacked press photographers.

No surrender seen

STONY MOUNTAIN, Manitoba (AP) — Five convicts holding two guards hostage since Sunday at Stony Mountain penitentiary were reported exhausted after 30 hours of negotiations with authorities, but there was no sign today that they were ready to surrender.

Officials at the medium-security prison, 25 miles north of Winnipeg in east-central Canada, said the convicts were given a short time to rest overnight and negotiations over a telephone hookup to the cell would continue today.

Election night coverage

Coverge of today's general election likely won't generate as much controversy as did television coverage of the presidential election two years ago. But the competitive pressures of election coverage will be there, giving the election a carnival quality and leading some observors to wonder just how many of the practices of electronic journalists constitute good journalism.

If you'll recall, in the November 1980 general election that put Ronald Reagan in the White House, the outcome was predicted and broadcast prior to the close of polls in the West. Democrats contended that the early prediction discouraged some of their party supporters from even going to the polls.

At the heart of the controversy is the use of exit polls, used by the television networks since 1967 to provide them an early indication of voting trends. The main technique used by the political scientists, statisticians and journalists who predict races for the networks is known as "key precinct analysis." Dozens of voting precincts are selected in each state, and local members of the League of Women Voters are hired to collect the vote totals in those precincts and call them in immediately to the networks, according to Editorial Research Reports.

The numbers are then fed into the network computer and compared with a statistical model based on electoral history. Precincts with specific demographic characteristics also are examined for deviations from past voting patterns.

"Someplace along the way, information will tell us that it's time to say that 'X' has won the election," according to Roy Wetzel, director of NBC's political unit. The question is should the announcement be made at that point.

In its defense for the 1980 early predictions, NBC noted that it called no race in an individual state before the local polls closed. However, Editorial Research Reports indicates that NBC put Ohio in Ronald Reagan's column one minute after the polls closed there.

While most Americans would agree that the television networks provide a valuable service by bringing to viewers election results as rapidly as possible, most also would agree that the networks should take a close look at their practices to ensure that they do not endanger the political process.

It's much preferable to have the networks police their activities than to have government attempt to do so, particularly in light of First Amendment implications in the event of the latter.

'Cambio historico'

No one could have said it better. Forty-year-old Felipe Gonzalez, who soon will become the youngest prime minister in Europe, described his Socialist Party's victory in the Spanish elections with the words "cambio historico," or "historic change."

The change that has taken place in Spain is truly of historic proportions. The meaning of the dramatic vote is that the roots of democracy that began to sprout after General Franco's death in 1975 are steadily digging more deeply into Spanish soil.

Under Franco's military thumb the press was muzzled. So were the people, for they were denied the right to vote or to form parties to oppose the government. All that is changing and more changes are sure to come.

The presence of 201 Socialist seats in the 350-seat Congress does not mean that Spain is about to be socialized in the radical sense of the word. Felipe, as he is fondly called by many of his countrymen, has convinced his party that he is a moderate and not an extremist. Evidence of this was his success in getting the Socialists to drop the Marxist label that tarnished its image.

King Juan Carlos deserves great credit for the way he has nourished Spain's democratic roots since Franco's death. If it had not been for his efforts in keeping the army under control, Gonzalez would not have been given his opportunity to lead. A bright spot on the horizon is the fact that the king and the Socialist leader get along well.

In Spain you have a monarch who believes in democracy and is its stout defender, and a democratic leader who appreciates the value of a monarchy that stands as a buffer between Congress and the army. One of the eventual results of the Gonzalez victory may be that King Juan Carlos no longer will have to stand as a shield against the military.

Meanwhile Spain has emerged one more step from the darkness of dictatorship to the light of popular government. Problems lie ahead, but when a people once oppressed become masters of their own destiny that, as Felipe Gonzalez says, is an "historic change" in which the free world rejoices.

Another View:

Tax cuts not cure-all

Many a bold economic assumption has been knocked in the head by unplanned circumstances. Sadly, it is beginning to look as if such a fate may have befallen the Reagan administration's premise that the 1982 income tax cut would lead the economy to fast recovery via the consumer-spending route.

So far, it hasn't happened. True, consumer spending rose 1 percent in September, but that only offset an August decline. As Business Week quipped in a recent article, waiting for the consumer-led boom is like waiting for Godot. What went wrong? Aren't consumers supposed to increase their purchases when they have more money left after taxes are paid?

Yes, all other things being equal, but a couple of other important elements refused to stand still. The problem is explained quite succinctly in the current issue of Morgan Guaranty Survey, published by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

The intervening villains were (1) a growing consumer hesitancy, based on a feeling of economic insecurity as unemployment and business failures increased, and (2) a decline in consumers' net worth. Everybody knows about the first problem. But the second one will come as a surprise to many people who have assumed that the recent increase in the rate of savings means a corresponding increase in personal wealth.

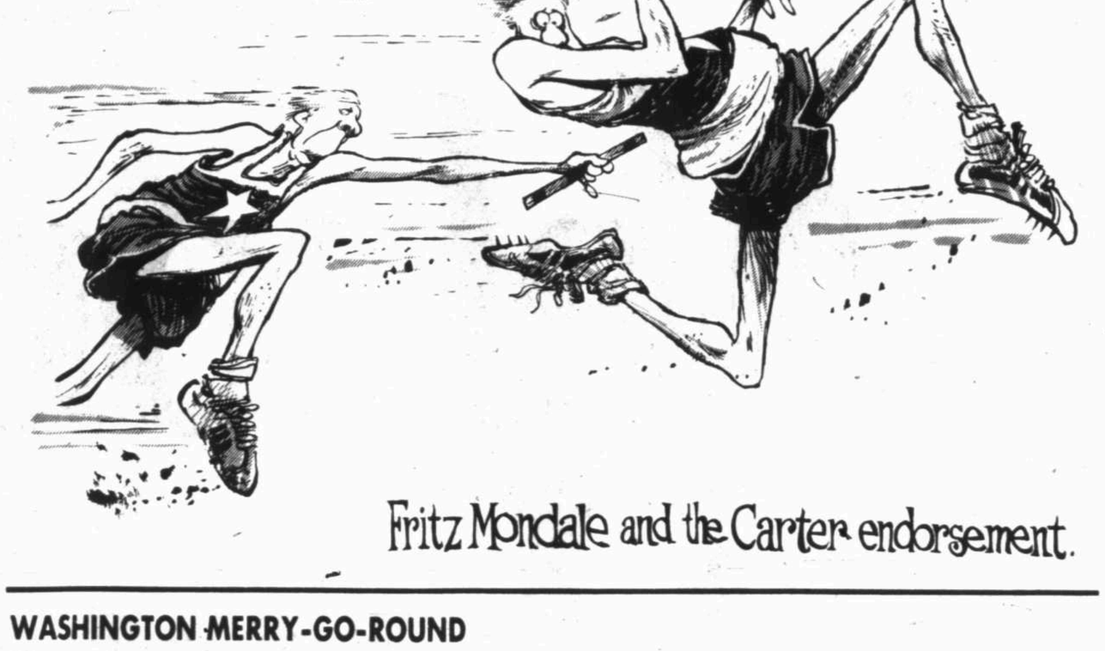

The main thing that depressed consumers' net worth was the softening of the housing market. Whereas home owners previously could count on a sharp growth of equity year after year, they were now faced with a drop in the real value of their houses.

Under such circumstances, people naturally do not feel as free to spend money for consumer goods as they would if the ever-increasing value of their homes provided a comfortable economic cushion. In time, various economic forces may adjust the problem, but for now it interferes with a badly needed recovery.

The obvious moral of the story is that economic policies don't work in a vacuum. A tax cut may turn the trick in one situation but fall in another. The Reagan tax cuts didn't just increase people's take home pay. They also aggravated the federal deficit, contributing to high interest rates and ultimately to the weakness of the housing market and other segments of the economy.

The experience should be enough to give politicians pause the next time somebody argues that a given policy will produce surefire results.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Offbeat lobbies try to influence lawmakers

WASHINGTON — I have a suggestion for American voters today: On your way out the door to vote, take a look around your home.

Jack Anderson

For just about every item you see — the butter, beer, eggs and milk in your refrigerator, the bread and sugar in the cupboard, the living-room furniture, the fixtures in your kitchen and bathroom, the bikes and mowers on the lawn, the car that you'll drive to the polling place — there is a political action committee that has been trying to influence your vote.

They include the Amalgamated Sugar Co. PAC; Land O' Lakes Inc. PAC; Anheuser-Busch Co. PAC; Dairymen Inc. PAC; Wickes Corporation PAC; American Standard Inc. Good Government Fund; and the Toro Company Employees for Better Government Committee.

Even Hallmark greeting cards and Orkin exterminators have PACs that channel money to congressional candidates they hope will give them a break in the new Congress.

There are now 3,149 political action committees in the United States, and they have contributed more than $80 million to the congressional candidates you'll be assessing today. To get a sampling of "PACs Americana," my associate Tony Capaccio (with the help of Edward Roeder, a veteran Washington journalist who specializes in campaign financing) combed election records for some of the offbeat committees that have tried to influence your vote today. Here are a few:

— The Silver Dollar PAC and the Hard Money Political Victory Fund, which want the country back on the gold standard or some other precious-metal currency base.

— American Space PAC, Campaign for Space PAC and Citizens for Space PAC are pushing for further flights into the stratosphere (on a combined total contribution of $600).

— McDonald's, Burger King, Hardee's and White Castle all have their political action committees.

— The American Nazi Party's National Socialist National Election Committee has been mercifully inactive this year, but it still exists, waiting to goose-step onto the stage.

— There are at least 20 strongly pro-Israel PACs, including Americans for Better Citizenship, Arizona Politically Inclined Citizens, Americans for Good Government, and the Desert Caucus.

— The Armenian National Committee PAC has given $26,250 to five candidates this year, including $10,000 to Gov. Jerry Brown's campaign for the Senate in California.

— Filipino physicians practicing in this country have a PAC that donated a total of $750 to Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., and Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky.

— PAC for 2, based in Los Banos, Calif., advocates limiting members of Congress to two terms. Strangely, it has been inactive this year, according to the federal election records.

THE ECLECTIC AIRPLANE: The war in Lebanon proved the effectiveness of the Israeli Kfir jet, a hodgepodge of aircraft design the Israelis have been working on since about 1970.

The Kfir, which was supposed to be ready for the 1973 war but never made it into action, is based on a French Mirage airframe and powered by a General Electric J-79 engine, the same one that's used in the F-4 Phantom.

According to a CIA report, "the Kfir can fly at more than twice the speed of sound and can be used either as an interceptor or a ground-attack aircraft." The plane's development was set back for a couple of years while the Israelis reworked it to overcome the damage caused by an East German spy who had infiltrated the Israeli aircraft industry.

In their annoying way, the Israelis didn't tell the United States about their great new warplane. The CIA only learned about the Kfir when an internal Israeli message was intercepted.

One problem with the hot Israeli plane is its hotshot Israeli pilots. According to the CIA, the Israelis have a tendency to fly their planes beyond normal stress limits.

In fact, the month after the Kfir was publicly unveiled in 1975, one of the planes was lost over the Mediterranean when it "reportedly disintegrated while accelerating at high speed." A couple of months later, the air intake of a Kfir was evidently damaged badly by an explosion while the plane was on a high-speed test flight.

The Kfir's components are made and assembled in Israel under U.S. license. It is now a hot export item for Israel.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Energy Department poohbahs don't have much to do as their agency drifts toward phase-out, so they evidently feel the need to hang onto such bureaucratic prerogatives as they have left. Ann Morgan, head of DOE's public affairs office, recently countermanded a lower-level decision to spend $5,000 on a booth at a recent international conference of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers.

The modest booth was to let the prestigious professional group know about DOE's research on solar-energy projects. The research, conducted by DOE's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, has cost nearly $250 million since 1975.

Why kill the information booth? Because, Morgan said, the idea hadn't been cleared with her in advance.

Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, observed that "this latest incident, unfortunately, is all too typical of the strange thinking that dominates our energy policy these days."

INSIDE REPORT:

Stigler's comment gave Demos ammunition

WASHINGTON — Among the very red faces in the Oval Office after Nobel Prize economist George P. Stigler used the White House itself as a platform for saying that the U.S. is in a "depression" — just six days before the election — the reddest belonged to Dr. Martin Feldstein, the new chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers (CEA).

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Feldstein had "briefed" the 71-year-old Chicago economist, recent winner of the Nobel Prize, to guard against what actually occurred. No one tells Dr. Stigler what to say or not to say. But after his briefing, Feldstein was satisfied that the famous economist would say nothing to the White House press corps that could hurt Reagan or the Republicans.

Other White House aides had hoped to cash in on Stigler's visit to receive Reagan's congratulations for the Nobel Prize. They remembered his remarks over network television a week earlier when he gave Reagan an "A" for his performance as president. They were counting on a repeat performance, but instead Stigler handed the Democrats explosive ammunition to be fired at Republican candidates across the country trying to fend off the unemployment issue.

WHY RR SKIPPED CALIFORNIA

President Reagan stayed out of his home state of California the last week of the mid-term election campaign because of recommendations from a New York-based Democratic pollster, overriding pleas for help from the Republican candidate for governor.

Pollster Richard Dresner, working in San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson's Republican campaign for the Senate against Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., cautioned that a late Reagan visit would energize Democrats. The Wilson campaign, accordingly, asked the president not to come.

White House political aide Ed Rollins argued that a final-week Reagan visit would get Southern California Republicans in Orange and San Diego Counties behind State Attorney General George Deukmejian's late charge to catch Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley for governor. But beating Jerry Brown is the top White House political priority, and the president heeded Wilson's wishes.

CHICAGO LOVES GLENN

The hearts of Chicago's regular Democratic organization may still be with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, but their heads are inclining toward Sen. John Glenn for the 1984 presidential nomination.

The Chicagoans never have recovered from the way President Jimmy Carter wiped Kennedy out in the 1980 Illinois primary. Democratic leaders there have doubts about Glenn's charisma but, as of now, consider him the best bet to beat Ronald Reagan.

A footnote: The Chicago drift to Glenn may include Mayor Jane Byrne, Kennedy's Illinois leader in 1980. For now, however, she is concentrating on closing the gap between her and state's attorney Richard Daley Jr. in the mayoral primary next March.

THE NAVY AND POLITICS

National Republican operatives have been steaming over the year-long stream of press releases by Rep. Phillip Burton, the most prestigious Democratic House member endangered for re-election, announcing the arrival of U.S. Navy warships for refitting and berthing in Burton's San Francisco Bay District.

The aircraft carrier Coral Sea is being refitted at Alameda, and the new carrier Carl Vinson will be based in San Francisco, where the ammunitions ship Flint is also being refitted. However, Burton failed to get Bay Area refitting for the battleships Missouri and New Jersey, which ended up in Long Beach.

The Navy contends it can hardly shape its operations to defeat Burton, who recently pulled ahead of the strong challenge from Republican state Sen. Milton Marks. Nevertheless, national Republican strategists feel extraordinary efforts were justified against Burton, the architect of the California gerrymander likely to cost the Republicans six seats in Congress.

UDALL IN '84

The long list of Democratic presidential hopefuls is likely to have a surprise addition: Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona.

Friends who have talked to Udall have no doubt that despite his disappointing performance in seeking the 1976 nomination, he is determined to embark on a 1984 last hurrah. Less clear is how he figures to get nominated if, as he hints, he will enter no presidential primary elections. In 1976, Udall lost to Jimmy Carter in seven straight primaries.

A footnote: If he does seek the presidency again, the witty Udall will have to temporarily drop one staple from his after-dinner speaking patter. Noting Sen. Barry Goldwater's debacle as 1964 Republican presidential nominee as well as his own 1976 experience, Udall has been getting laughs with this line: Mothers in Arizona, unlike other mothers, cannot tell a son that someday he can be elected president.

CHARLEY REESE

Reforming FRS is tough political job

The Federal Reserve, popularly called the Fed, has opened the money tap and at last allowed interest rates to fall, if only temporarily.

Charley Reese

Many reasons are being bandied about. The political cynics say the Fed is loosening the money strings to help the incumbents win re-election. Secretary of the treasury, Donald Regan, said recently they did it because the Fed was worried that the recession might slide into a depression.

I don't buy any of those reasons. I don't think the Fed cares a whit about the elections nor is it worried about a depression. The Fed is worried about the Fed.

For the first time that I can recall, talk is beginning to circulate in Congress of abolishing or seriously reforming the Federal Reserve. Even Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., in a speech to a union, spoke of returning some of the functions of the Federal Reserve to the Treasury.

The Federal Reserve is scared to death to become a topic of public debate — if the debate gets into the area of reform or abolition. The game for years has been to pretend that the Federal Reserve is an inviolable, permanent institution and that no one but cranks and crackpots would even think of changing it.

Well, we ought not merely to change it, but abolish it, for it is nothing more than a clever scheme cooked up by the robber barons to turn over to them control of credit, money supply, and the economy to manipulate as suits their selfish purposes.

J.P. Morgan manipulated the election in 1912 by tricking Teddy Roosevelt into splitting the Republican vote so William Howard Taft would be defeated. Taft had vetoed an earlier version of the Federal Reserve. One of Woodrow Wilson's first acts was to sign the Federal Reserve Act of 1913.

It is a private central bank, but it was designed to disguise that fact. The name, Federal Reserve System, implies that it is part of the federal government. Not so. It is a private corporation owned by banks, chartered by the federal government, but not answerable to it. One writer has described it as a "pawnshop for banks." It is a bank for banks owned by banks.

The scam was completed in the early 1930s when the government seized private gold and made Federal Reserve Notes legal tender. That means you have to accept them for payment of debts, but the Federal Reserve Note in your pocket is nothing but a piece of paper, redeemable in nothing, and backed by nothing except the power of the government to levy taxes on you. It was no coincidence that the federal income tax followed on the heels of the Federal Reserve Act.

When a medium of exchange has no intrinsic value and is not redeemable in a commodity with an intrinsic value, such as gold or silver, then its purchasing power is determined solely by the quantity in circulation. The 14-member "politbureau" of the Federal Reserve, meeting in secret, has the sole power to raise or lower its value by increasing or decreasing the amount in circulation. That is tantamount to the power to rob you because, for example, if you have $10,000 in savings, they can reduce it to the equivalent of $1,500 by inflation.

The Constitution gave the Congress the power to coin money; the Federal Reserve Act shifted that power to a private central bank and we have had since then, scientifically engineered, inflation-depression cycles.

In 1980, the Congress foolishly expanded the powers of the Federal Reserve so that it can now swap money for debts, not only the debts of private banks, but the debts of foreign governments. It is another scheme to shift the debts of banks onto the backs of the taxpayers.

Congressman Ron Paul, R-Texas, tried to stop this, but the clause, which he had succeeded in getting deleted from the House version of the bill mysteriously reappeared in the joint House-Senate bill.

We should not let the Federal Reserve off the hook. We should make it a public issue and force the Congress to abide by the Constitution and return control of money to the federal government where, at least, the people who manipulate it are answerable to the American people. That will mean abolishing the Federal Reserve. It will be the toughest political job since the American Revolution but the benefits will be just as great if we succeed.

Chagra says Harrelson bragged about shooting

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson bragged about shooting a federal judge in the back with "a clean shot" from a high-powered rifle three years ago, a key government witness testified.

El Paso attorney Joseph Chagra, 36, also told jurors Monday that his older brother — 39-year-old Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra — admitted hiring Harrelson to assassinate U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Joseph Chagra, who has pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy, told jurors he advised his brother to have Wood killed after the judge refused to disqualify himself from presiding at Jimmy Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial.

Jurors today were expected to begin listening to secret FBI tapes and reading transcripts of Jimmy Chagra's conversations with his brother and his wife, Elizabeth, from October 1980 to January 1981 at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

Jimmy Chagra, serving 30 years without parole for criminal enterprise, is accused of paying Harrelson $250,000 to kill the judge. He will be tried for murder separately later.

Harrelson is charged with shooting Wood here on May 29, 1979. Also on trial are Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, 41, charged with obstruction of justice and perjury, and Elizabeth Chagra, 28, charged with conspiracy to kill Wood and obstruction of justice.

Joseph Chagra told a packed courtroom Monday that the plot to kill Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his stiff sentences in narcotics cases, was hatched in a Midland, Texas, courtroom on April 2, 1979.

Wood had refused to disqualify himself from Chagra's drug trial and granted only one of about 30 motions Joseph Chagra filed in his brother's behalf.

Chagra said both brothers were angry and upset as they sat at the counsel table after the hearing.

"Jimmy told me he was never going to get a fair trial and if I thought he should try to get Judge Wood killed," the younger brother testified.

"I told him he should," he said.

Chagra said the two brothers discussed Wood's death again as they walked across the front lawn of Jimmy Chagra's $1 million mansion in Las Vegas, Nev.

"Do you still think I should do it?" Jimmy Chagra allegedly asked.

"Do you know anybody who would do that?" Joseph Chagra said he replied. "He said, yes, he did. I said, 'Yes.'"

Chagra reportedly will receive a prison term of no more than 10 years in exchange for his cooperation.

"He (Jimmy) told me he didn't want to tell me any more about it because he didn't want me involved," he said.

Wood was shot in the back outside his San Antonio townhome on the same day Jimmy Chagra originally had been scheduled for trial.

After the killing, his brother "told me he had nothing to do with it," Chagra testified.

But in July 1979, when casino records of several people — including Harrelson — were subpoenaed in Las Vegas, Chagra said his older brother then "pointed to Mr. Harrelson's name and said he was the person he'd hired to kill Judge Wood."

In March 1980, Joseph Chagra testified, Harrelson appeared at the El Paso apartment of a mutual friend, where the two met privately and Harrelson boasted about the assassination.

Harrelson told Chagra "that he'd shot Wood with a high-powered rifle. Judge Wood was standing by his car."

"When he reached in the car with a briefcase, that's when I shot him in the back," Chagra quoted Harrelson as saying. "He said it was a clean shot."

Harrelson told the attorney no one saw the shooting and "it really wouldn't have mattered because he was disguised. Earlier that morning he had actually walked past Judge Wood," Chagra said.

Inmate medical leaves troubling

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Many terminally ill inmates with records of violent crimes or serving lengthy prison sentences cannot be automatically sent home to die, a parole board official says.

Ruben Torres, chairman of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, said Monday that an inmate who shows a tendency toward violence is considered a poor risk for early release.

"Some people think it's very inhumane that we don't let people go home to die. But we can't act on our emotions and we must consider the cold facts in each case," he said.

Parole officials are now reviewing records of 50 terminally ill prison inmates.

Officials said the inmates being considered for medical reprieves suffer from cancer, emphysema and chronic heart disease.

Couple indicted on illegal grain sales

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Williamson County grand jurors have indicted Victor and Modene Marek on charges the husband and wife owners of Central Texas grain warehouses sold $86,256 worth of grain they didn't own.

The 12 indictments returned Monday accuse the Mareks of stealing grain from a public warehouse and unlawful delivery of grain. The second-degree felony charges carry penalties of up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

State inspectors in September discovered a 16 million pound shortage at Grain Producers Inc. in Granger and Marek Brothers Gin and Grain in Bartlett. Victor Marek owns the Granger facility and is co-owner of the Bartlett warehouse with his brother Alvin.

Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh said Alvin Marek testified in front of the grand jurors and was not indicted. The Mareks also testified during the grand jury investigation that began two weeks ago, he said.

"They did have grain in the warehouses of their own," said Walsh. "In August they had depleted the amount of grain they had and they began selling grain that wasn't theirs."

The indictments charge the couple with selling grain from the warehouses on Aug. 19 and 23 and Sept. 3 and 10.

Sharp jury selection may last two weeks

LUBBOCK (AP) — Jury selection is expected to last two weeks in the trial of an oilfield worker accused of slaying a Kermit woman and her daughter and of kidnapping another daughter.

Michael Eugene Sharp, 28, of Odessa is charged with two counts of capital murder and one count of aggravated kidnapping.

The trial was moved to State District Judge Robert C. Wright's court here because of pretrial publicity. Selection of the panel began Monday.

Since a conviction on either capital murder charge carries a possible death sentence, jurors will be asked whether they could sentence a man to death, District Attorney Mike Fostel of Lubbock said.

Brenda Kay Broadway, 31, and her 8-year-old daughter, Christie Michelle Elms, were stabbed to death after they were abducted from a Kermit car wash shortly after midnight June 11.

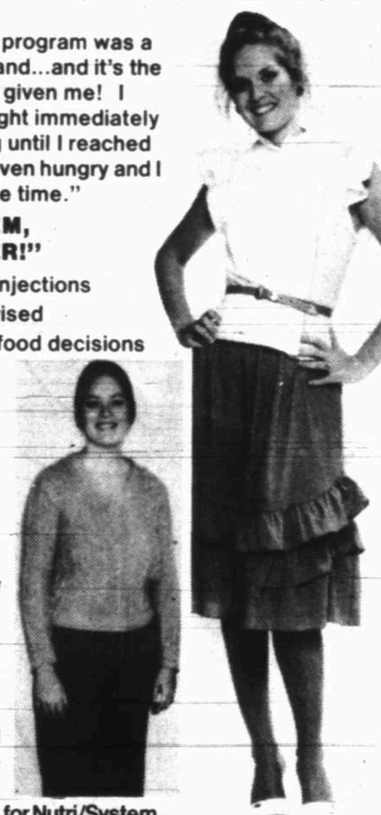

Fourteen-year-old Selena Kay Elms also was abducted but escaped and ran naked, her hands bound, five miles through rough pastureland to seek help at an oil rig.

Officers later found the two bodies in shallow graves in a remote part of Winkler County.

Sharp was arrested June 16 at a Sweetwater bus station after a manhunt that involved law officers from two counties.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Pychosis may not lead to violence

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why are people who have been in mental hospitals allowed out on the streets where they can attack innocent people? — Tony, Dayton, Ohio

Dear Tony: Your question, brief as it is, probably sets some sort of record for false assumptions and unjustified conclusions. In the first place, many people with emotional problems do get better. Would you have everyone who enters a mental hospital remain there for life? This hardly seems to be either a practical or a humane approach to the treatment of mental illness.

Secondly, why do you assume that a person who has to be hospitalized for emotional problems is necessarily violent? The association between violence and emotional disturbance does not even hold true for individuals charged with violating the law.

A report by Robert J. Menzies, of the department of sociology at the University of Toronto Center of Criminology, disputes what unfortunately is fairly common belief that psychosis is associated with violence. His conclusions are based on a study of more than 400 criminal defendants who had been examined by a psychiatrist and then followed for two years.

One conclusion of the study was that mental pathology does not predict violent behavior. In fact, the only association between mental illness and subsequent violence was that those who had been hospitalized with a mental disorder were less likely to engage in violent behavior than were others.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is the insulin pump any good? I usually don't go in for gadgets because there are too many things that can go wrong with them. Is it hard to learn how to use one? — Guy, Boise, Idaho

Dear Guy: According to Dr. Maurice Fox, of the Stanford University School of Medicine, the insulin pump is extremely effective for insulin-dependent diabetic patients. He reports that a study of 35 diabetics who were using the pump showed that only two of them had returned to a more traditional method of injecting insulin. I find this is also true for the patients I recommend to use the insulin pump.

It takes about a month for someone to become skilled enough to use the device.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some time ago you wrote about a device that lets a man have an erection when otherwise he would not be able to have one. Does this mean that such a person could also have an orgasm? — Rennie, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Rennie: You are referring to a penile prosthesis, and many men with penile prostheses can achieve orgasm. The device has been found to be of value in patients who, for example, have had cancer of the prostate or of the bladder and have had surgery or radiation therapy.

For D.G., Tucson: I can determine if a short child can benefit from human growth hormone. If so, the use of the growth hormone from cadaver pituitaries should result in satisfactory linear growth. Human growth hormone from recombinant DNA technology, will soon supplant human pituitary sources.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Forest regulations may be damaging, says forester

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, — New rules governing the management of the nation's national forests, which include 783,000 acres in Texas, go into effect Monday.

While U.S. Forest Service officials say the regulations will have little impact on the way the national forests are managed, some environmentalists are less sure.

"There's potential for some real damage," said Al Sample, a forester with the Wilderness Society. He notes, however, that major improvements have been made in the regulations since they were first proposed in February.

Environmental movement spokesmen identify four major areas in the rules where they foresee potential problems:

— Eliminating the floor of 20 cubic feet per acre per year timber growth before which timber on a piece of land can be cut. Environmentalists charge elimination of the floor will encourage timber cutting on marginal land where timber can't easily regrow.

— Allowing regional foresters, rather than the chief of the Forest Service, to permit cutting beyond annual sustained yields. This means regional foresters could allow more timber to be taken out of a forest than is replaced through growth.

— Requiring fish and wildlife habitats to be maintained only to the extent necessary to insure "viable populations."

— Extending the Forest Service planning cycle from 10 to 15 years, which environmentalists say will make less land available for wilderness designation in the future.

"In a time of vast oversupply of sold-but-uncut federal timber, these weakened regulations are a Reagan-Crowell (Assistant Secretary for Natural Resources and the Environment John Crowell) giveaway to the timber industry," said John Hooper, public lands specialist with the Sierra Club in San Francisco.

However, forest service officials differ.

"They're just throwing stones at the administration," said Rex Hartgraves, director of land management planning for the Forest Service, which rewrote the regulations in an effort to make them more palatable to environmentalists.

While environmentalists are still unhappy about some sections of the changes, they say they represent a major improvement. The proposed revision drew more than 2,000 letters, mainly protesting the changes.

"While the rules aren't as good as they were originally, they aren't nearly as bad as when they were proposed in February," said Tom Lustig, an attorney with the National Wildlife Federation.

Lustig says that as originally proposed, habitats had to be maintained and improved only "where practical," but that viable populations are now insured.

Other improvements, environmental spokesmen say, are deleting provisions that would have prevented consideration of additions to wilderness areas of less than 5,000 acres and that would have reduced public participation and access to information in the planning process.

However, Sierra Club's Hooper says the changes in no way have overcome all the shortcomings.

By extending the planning cycle by five years, he said, the Forest Service won't be able to consider additions to wilderness areas until 1998 rather than 1993. Less area for potential wilderness designation will be available at that time.

Permitting regional foresters to allow exceptions to cutting beyond sustained yields could mean such departures will be more common than in the past, Hooper said. "All these choices are designed to eliminate old-growth stands and roadless areas and to settle the wilderness question with a chainsaw," he said.

U.S. district judge again being investigated by grand jury

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A U.S. district judge who has never tried to hide his dislike for federal prosecutors again is the target of a grand jury investigation, according to published reports.

The New York Times in today's editions said U.S. District Judge Harry Claiborne has acknowledged the existence of the grand jury inquiry and has declared that he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

Contacted by The Times, Joe Yablonsky, special agent in charge of the FBI's Las Vegas office, declined comment.

"This is a criminal investigation and it is not the department's practice to discuss ongoing criminal investigations except under the most extraordinary circumstances and in this case we would prefer not to comment," he said.

Claiborne had hardly donned his federal robes in 1978 when he became the subject of a grand jury probe in Las Vegas. The Justice Department's Federal Integrity Section targeted him for allegedly hiring private investigator Eddie LaRue to execute illegal electronic surveillance when Claiborne was a private defense lawyer.

A Reno, Nev., jury failed to convict LaRue and the government's case came apart at the seams, although it never officially has been dropped.

Now the Public Integrity section is taking a second run at Claiborne, according to the reports.

The Portland Oregonian reported in September that a Portland, Ore., grand jury is looking into Claiborne's relationship with fugitive Reno brothel owner Joe Conforte. Conforte fled to Brazil and forfeited $200,000 bail in December of 1980 to avoid a five-year prison sentence for tax evasion charges.

The newspaper said the Portland grand jury is involved because Claiborne was there as a visiting judge in 1979 at the time the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals was hearing Conforte's appeal on the tax charges.

Claiborne, one of Nevada's most celebrated defense attorneys before his federal appointment, represented Conforte on various criminal charges, including white slavery, in 1968.

Chaps host Wranglers

Midland College will be going for its 25th win in a row when the National Junior College Athletic Association champions launch their 1982-83 season against Cisco College at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Langford Chaparral Center.

MC hasn't lost since dropping an overtime game to Amarillo College game last December in WJCC action.

Coach Jerry Stone returns six of nine players who gave MC WJCC, Region V and NJCAA titles.

Cisco dropped an 88-81 decision to MC in the Region V finals at Big Spring last year and the Wranglers expect to floor another strong team this season.

Returnees for MC include 5-6 Spud Webb, the dunkin' point guard, who was first team all-WJCC, all-Region and all-NJCAA. Spud also won the Bud Obee Award as the outstanding small player in the nationals.

Six-seven Chester Smith started every game and hit 53 per cent from the field and 58 from the foul line and won all-WJCC laurels last year while setting Chaparral records for rebounds. Six-five Jerome Crowe was a starter at forward last season.

Other returnees are 6-4 Justin Morett, 6-3 Chuck Robinson and 6-3 Rodney McChriston.

Recruits include 6-9 Ernest Harris, a sophomore who transferred from the University of Arizona, 6-2 Nate Bufford, a deadly shooter from outside, also a transfer, from Columbus, Ga., College.

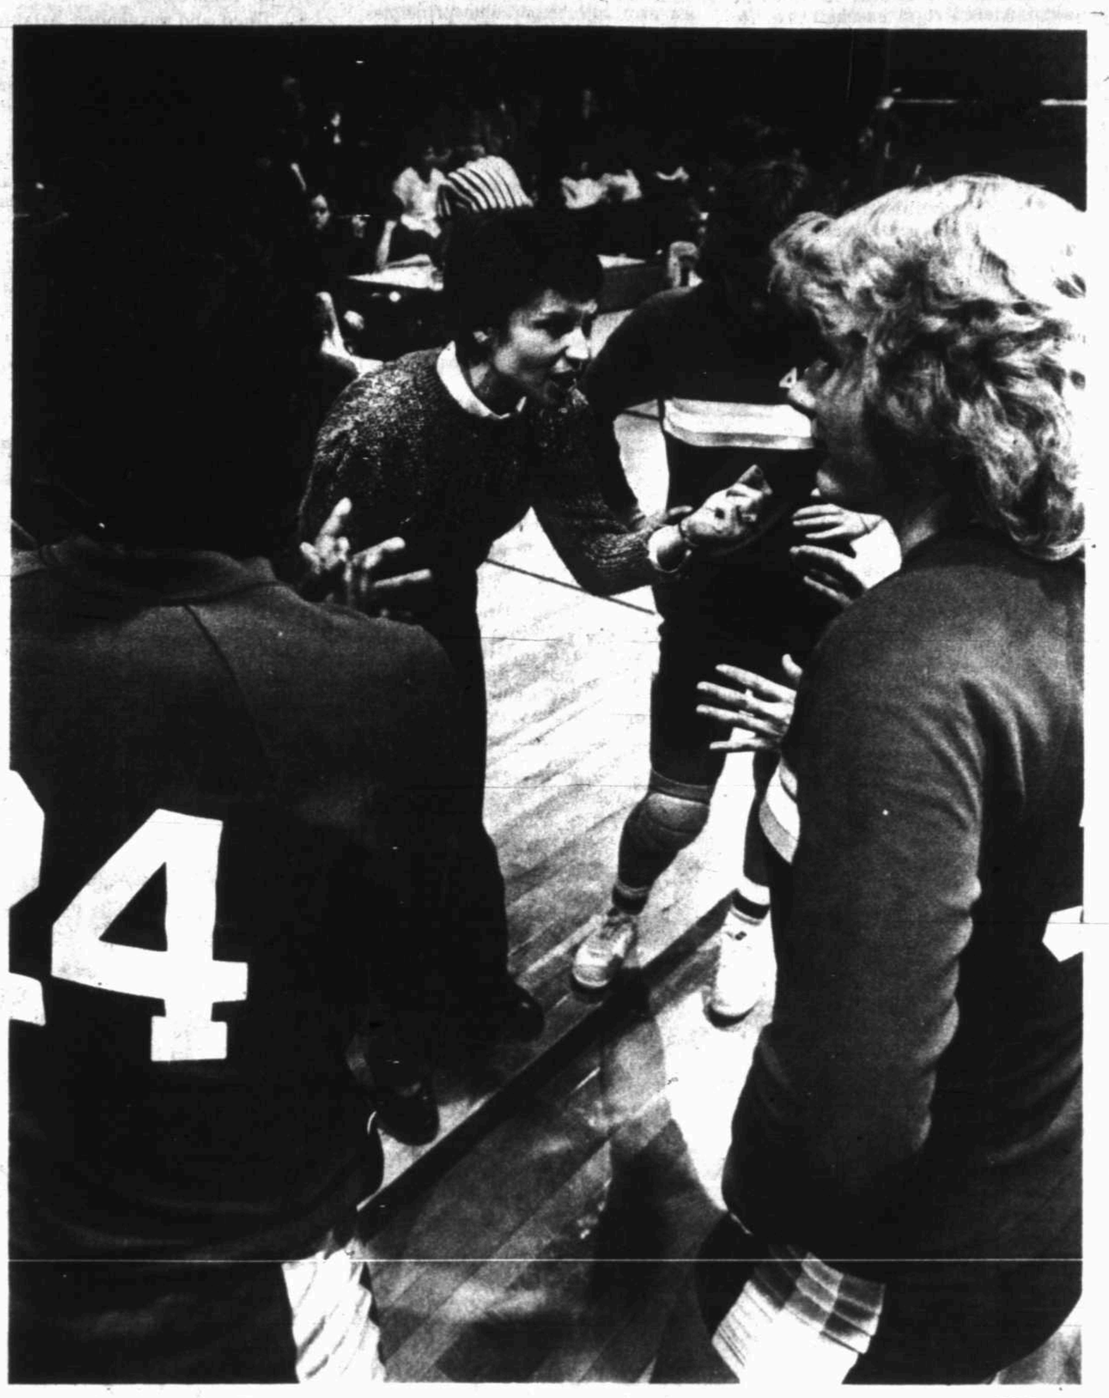

Freshmen are 6-5 Brian Essary, 6-5 Jackie Phinnessee, 6-0 Alvin Dunson, 6-2 Ervin Williams, 6-4 Robbie Swegler and 5-8 Earl Wimbush.

It's a squad that gives Stone more height, depth and manueverability than last year's 34-4 team. Whether it will be as successful remains to be seen.

For the first time, reserve seat season tickets are being sold and fans with preferred seating or desiring to purchase $40 season tickets are requested to enter at the Northeast.

Fans buying $3 general admission or $1 children's tickets are asked to enter by the Northeast entrance.

Section J, behind the scorer's table, has already been reserved for the season, but season tickets are being sold in sections H and K, behind the visiting and home benches.

Midland High volleyball coach, Linda Jolly, gives her Bulldogs instructions during a timeout in a recent home game. The Bulldogs beat San Angelo Central for the district title in Big Spring yesterday.

MHS takes district volleyball crown

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — When the San Angelo Bobcats gave up the winning point here Monday night in the third game of a match played to determine District 4-5A's first place representative in the state volleyball playoffs, an already loud Midland High crowd gave out with an explosive roar while the players on the court were mobbed by the coach and players on the bench.

It didn't take long for the fans to reach the floor either. Everybody was ready to congratulate the Bulldogs for their 15-4, 13-15, 15-11 championship victory with hand shakes and hugs.

The victory over San Angelo was the second in two weeks for Midland High, and both matches were, in a sense, for the district title. The first victory, 15-13, 9-15, 15-13 on Oct. 21, tied Midland High and San Angelo for the lead in the conference race with 10-2 records. A loss would have, as the remaining games on the schedule proved, given the title to the Bobcats. The second victory, with both teams holding 12-2 4-5A records going in, officially gave the Bulldogs the crown.

IN THE playoff match, the 15-4 score in the first game was as one-sided as it sounds. The Bobcats seemed a little nervous on the court and quickly fell behind by a 9-0 count before starting to loosen up and put points on the board. They were able to pull to within seven, 11-4; before the high-flying Bulldogs put the game away.

"It's good sometimes to beat a team like that," said Midland coach Linda Jolly about the 15-4 first-game score, "but sometimes a team has a tendency to slack off after a win like that and they are (the Bobcats) fighters, they are that. They are tough and wouldn't give up."

The Bulldogs took control early in the second game, building up 4-1 and 7-2 leads before the kind of play that has brought four consecutive 4-5A titles to San Angelo started to show. The Bobcats started to come back to take the lead at 8-7 and eventually win by the 15-13 count.

THE LEAD changed hands twice in the early stages of game three and was tied at 6-6 when the Bulldogs started their run for the title. Midland High went ahead 8-6 and San Angelo came within one only once down the stretch, 10-9.

Senior Melinda Raschke was serving when the Bulldogs picked up their final two points. The first came on a San Angelo set play when Monica Bradley spiked the ball into the net and the winner came when Bobcat Bonnie Smith couldn't handle the serve as it bounced off her arms out-of-bounds in a diving attempt to save the match.

The entire Midland High team played well with "good balance on offense and defense," said Coach Jolly. And if only one player could be chosen for a stellar performance, it would have to be senior Laura Sherman for her aggressive offensive and defensive performance at the net.

COACH JOLLY expressed her entire team's feelings about the victory, saying, "I'm excited, I really am. I couldn't ask for more from the girls, they really wanted it. They improved as the season went along. They're fighters and I'm proud of them."

The win over San Angelo wasn't the only vitory Midland High recorded Monday night. The Bulldogs also won the home court advantage for the opening match of the bi-district playoffs that begin Thursday at Midland High gym at 7:30 p.m. against District 3-5A's runner-up, Amarillo Tascosa.

The site was determined by a flip of the coin and Coach Jolly's call of "tails" proved to be right and set off another round of rousing cheers, mostly from the players who would like nothing more than to perform in front of their Bulldog fans.

The Bobcats, who will face Amarillo Caprock, the 3-5A winner, lost their coin toss to determine site and will have to take to the road to start their bi-district trek.

Buffaloes win key game; District 7-A decided

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Scott Church's two field goals proved to be the margin of victory as the Stanton Buffaloes beat the Wall Hawks, 20-16, Friday night in a game between the only two undefeated teams in Distrcit 6-AAA.

Church kicked a 31-yard filed goal in the third quarter and a 42-yarder in the finals stanza to go with his two PAT's.

Mark Helms and Rocky Barnes combined for 241 yards rushing to lead the Buffs ground attack that racked up 333 total yards.

The Buffaloes defense was stung by two long pass plays, 71 and 80 yards, for the Hawks only touchdowns.

But Stanton head coach Steve Park said that his teams defense was the key to victory.

"The defense came through when we needed it. Especially at the end of the game." he said. "They really hung tough."

Wall head coach, Mark Elam, called Stanton a championship team following his teams first district loss.

McCamey, 3-1, had a tough time with Eldorado, 0-4, as the Badgers pulled out a 35-27 victory over the Eagles.

Doug Ussery broke the McCamey defense open for scoring runs of 90 and 54 yards to put McCamey down 21-6 in the third quarter.

But the Badgers kept their playoff hopes alive as they came roaring back, scoring 22 points in the third stanza.

Reagan County, 3-1, kept its share of second place, whipping Miles, 0-4, 55-0.

The Owls had 492 yards rushing while holding Miles to 72.

Tim Thompson led the Reagan County ground attack wiht 169 yards on 12 carries and Greg Fisher toted the ball 11 times for 114 yards.

District 2-AAAA

Andrew's Brad Boynton kicked a 20-yard field goal with 4:16 left in the game to break a 6-6 stalemate with Snyder as the Mustangs moved into sole possession of second place in the district race.

The hard fought 9-6 victory over the Tigers, 1-4, combined with Monahans' 31-16 loss in Pecos, 3-2, put the Mustangs, 4-1, one game ahead of the Loboes in the fight for the district's second playoff berth.

But the game didn't really give Andrews any advantage as the Mustangs must still face Monahans in the season finale, a game that could decide which team goes into post season play.

The Monahans defense gave way to the Eagles rushing game as it yeilded 237 yards on the ground and gave up more points to Pecos than any district foe it faced this year.

For the Eagles it was their highest point production of the season against a team that held district opponents to an average of 10 points-per-game.

In another close contest, Lakeview, 5-0, clinched a playoff berth with a 10-6 win over Sweetwater, 2-3. The Chiefs improved their overall record to 8-0, while Sweetwater suffered its third straight set back after starting the season with a 5-0 record.

Fort Stockton, 2-3, recorded its first district shutout with an easy 28-0 win over the Lamesa Tornadoes, who are winless in five district outings.

District 6-AAA

After starting the season with seven consecutive victories the Golden Cranes have lost their last two district outings and any chance at a spot in the playoffs.

First it was the Ozona Lions 17-8, then the Ballinger Bearcats, 10-0. The loss was the first shutout of the Golden Cranes offense this season, as they fall to 2-2 in loop play.

With the victory, the Bearcats guaranteed themselves at least one post season game as they stayed tied with Ozona at 3-1 with one week left to play.

This season must still be considered a success for Rick Whites' Golden Cranes after suffering through a 0-10 season last year.

The Lions will also enjoy an extra game on its schedule as they beat Coahoma 27-7. Elsewhere Colorado City, 2-2, beat Sonora, 1-3, 21-13.

Should both Ozona and Ballinger win, or lose, their final games Ballinger would be declared district champions by virtue of its 28-13 victory over the Lions.

District 6-A

Dennis Black rushed for 187 yards on 23 carries to lead the Rankin Red Devils to a 61-6 win over Sanderson, 1-4.

Randy Fulton contributed another 101 yards in five attempts to keep Rankin's, 3-2, dim playoff hopes alive.

Rankin's offensive production has been sporadic in its five conference games having scored 51, 61, and 62 points in the three victories while being held to seven and eight points in the two losses.

In the battle for first place, Wink shutdown the powerfull Iraan offense enroute to a 12-0 victory.

The Braves, 4-1, were averaging 35 points per game in district action while the Wildcats, 5-0, had given up only 14 points in their four district games.

Grandfalls, 3-2, kept its playoff hopes alive with a 20-12 win over Fort Davis, 2-2-1.

Balmorhea, 1-3-1, recorded its first victory of the season with a 28-20 win over Buena Vista, 0-5. The Bears offense had scored only 29 points in their six losses.

District 7-A

The Greenwood Rangers gave Eden all it could handle but fell to the Bulldogs 36-16.

The Rangers, 4-2, scored more points against Eden than any team this season but also gave up more points than they have all year.

After a scoreless first quarter, Greenwood took a 10-0 lead on a Stuart Burleson field goal and touchdown pass. John Ellis hauled in the ten-yard scoring pass only minutes after Buleson kicked a 26-yard field goal.

But the defense broke down allowing a 73-yard scoring strike from James Rannefeld to Junior Medders.

Mistakes cost the Rangers two more scores before the half as Benny Robles returned an interception 27 yards and Rannefeld recovered a fumbled punt snap in the endzone.

Another fumble, this one on the one-yarline, cost the Rangers a third quarter touchdown as the Bulldogs scored three times in the second half to put the game away.

While Eden, 6-0, was clinching the district title, Sterling City, 5-1, secured a second place finish with a 22-13 win over Garden City, 4-2.

Irion County, 1-5, won its first district contest wth a 23-6 effort over Water Valley, 0-6.

Robert Lee blitzed Bronte, 1-5, 28-0 to evened its disrtrict mark at 3-3.

Stanton's Darren Sorley gains yardage on a quarterback keeper in firat half action against the Wall Hawks. The Buffaloes beat Wall 20-16 to stay atop the District 6-AAA and guaranteed themselves at least a tie for a state playoff berth.

Mustangs second in AP poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Pitt Panthers opened a commanding lead today in The Associated Press college football poll, while Washington fell from second to 10th and Southern Methodist moved past Georgia into the runner-up position, its highest ranking in 32 years.

In addition, Arizona State shot from seventh place to fourth, while Miami and Auburn dropped out of the Top Twenty and Maryland and Florida replaced them.

Pitt, a 63-14 winner over Louisville, received 48 of 60 first-place votes and 1,181 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

SMU trounced Texas A&M 47-9 and nosed past Georgia into second place with five first-place votes and 1,095 points. Second is the Mustangs' highest standing since they were No.1 for two weeks during the 1950 season.

Georgia received three firsts and 1,092 points following a 34-3 triumph over Memphis State and Arizona State, which turned back Southern California 17-10, earned three firsts and 986 points.

Pitt, SMU, Georgia and Arizona State are unbeaten and untied, as is Arkansas, which defeated Rice 24-6. The Razorbacks received the remaining first-place vote and 964 points in holding onto fifth place.

Rounding out the Top Ten are Nebraska, Penn State, Alabama, UCLA and Washington.

Nebraska remained No.6 with 891 points following a 52-0 rout of Kansas. Penn State trounced Boston College 52-17 and climbed from eighth to seventh, while Alabama downed Mississippi State 20-12 and rose from ninth to eighth with 754 points.

UCLA, unbeaten but once tied, whipped Oregon 40-12 and jumped from 11th to ninth with 727 points, while Washington, which had been No.1 for six consecutive weeks earlier in the year, plummeted from second to ninth with 660 points after losing to Stanford 43-31.

Miami suffered its third loss of the season, bowing to Florida State 24-7.

Dumping Kuhn takes the guts out of baseball

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Club owners have just ripped the spine out of major league baseball. It now becomes a jellyfish organization with its integrity laid bare and left defenseless.

When Bowie Kuhn failed Monday in Chicago to get enough votes for extension of his 14 years as commissioner, baseball apparently took the first steps toward installing a corporate-like structure of administration and abandoning a the safety valve dating back to the 1919 Black Sox scandal which brought the election of tough, old Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis as the first commissioner.

"You gentlemen ... had made up your minds ... for a situation to be created the game's history.

Landis, with his shaggy hair and bushy eyebrows, became the conscience of the game, which had just been dirtied by a bribing scandal, and a guardian of its ethics. He left a legacy.

Judge Frank McGarr of the U.S. District Court in Chicago referred to the commissioner's broad powers when he upheld Kuhn in a suit brought by Oakland owner Charlie Finley in 1977.

Dumping of Kuhn was a black day in where somebody would be given authority, if I may put it brutally, to save you from yourselves."

Now who's going to save the owners from themselves?

Kuhn antagonized many because of the even-handed manner in which he administered rigid baseball law. He stepped on toes. He refused to be the owners' pawn. Yet he was constantly criticized for his actions and often railed in the press as a timid czar who tip-toed past recurring crises.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. A towering, distinguished figure, educated at Princeton and Virginia Law, Kuhn administered the office with decorum — never making waves, rigidly conscious of the "best interests of the game."

Baseball prospered under his jurisdiction.

Even his severest critics, such as the Yankees' George Steinbrenner and Brad Corbett, when he owned the Rangers, acknowledged he was an honest man with impeccable principles.

The owners don't want a strong man. They want somebody they can bend to their will. Despite his low profile, Kuhn has proved — as did A.B. "Happy" Chandler — a commissioner of unshakeable integrity.

He has dealt with players and owners alike, disdaining favoritism and giving no particular privilege to the bosses who paid his salary. It was this unwavering honesty that brought his undoing.

He suspended Steinbrenner for a year for illegal political contributions. "He's ruled against me 11 times in 11 cases but I don't hold it against him — I think he does what he thinks is right," said the Yankee boss.

He fined and suspended Atlanta's Ted Turner for tampering with free agent Gary Matthews. "It took me seven years, but I finally got him," said Turner after casting his vote against Kuhn.

He invited the lasting ire of both Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's and and Cincinnati's influential Bob Howsam by voiding the sale of pitcher Vida Blue to the Reds.

The St. Louis Cardinals' August Busch held a grudge because Kuhn ordered owners to open camps during the work stoppage in 1976. Kuhn antagonized the Mets' Nelson Doubleday by supporting revenue sharing and Houston's John McMullen for not projecting himself into the 1981 players' strike.

Baseball super stars have not been sacrosanct. Kuhn ordered Willie Mays to divest himself of all baseball connections after he took a job at an Atlantic City casino. He refused to allow Hank Aaron to lay out of a road game so his record home run could be hit in Atlanta. He dealt firmly but sympathetically with Fergie Jenkins' drug case. No one has been immune.

Bowie upheld the highest standards of the game — without fear or favor. A guy can't expect more than that.

Texas Rangers should be loose club with Rader at the helm

HOUSTON (AP) — Could the Doug Rader who was named manager of the Texas Rangers be the same person who once taped a rat to a teammate's bat and on another occasion took the lineup card to home plate wearing a chef's hat?

A check of photographs reveals that it is in fact the same fun-loving Rader who once kept his Houston and San Diego teammates loose with his constant practical jokes.

Monday's announcement that Rader, 38, had taken on the task of rebuilding the lowly Rangers reminded former associates and teammates of his antics as a player.

Rader is best remembered in San Diego for his reaction to a public announcement by Ray Croc, who had recently bought the Padres. Croc castigated his team and the visiting Astros over the public address system in the seventh inning of a 1975 ball game for what he considered sub-par play.

"He's going to have to learn he's not dealing with a bunch of short order cooks here," Rader said after the game.

The remark was widely circulated and when the Astros returned to to San Diego on their next road trip, the Padres had installed "Short-Order Cook Day."

Rader, in the spirit of the festivities, donned a chef's hat and carried the lineup card to the umpire in a frying pan.

Rader was traded to the Padres the next year. The team was still in spring training when he learned that teammate Bobby Valentine had a rat phobia.

"We kept seeing this figure lurking under the stands and finally we recognized it to be Rader," said Mike Ryan, the Astros' public relations director who was then with San Diego. "Then we hear this loud scream and a bat came flying out of the dugout. Rader had found a rat under the stands and taped it to Valentine's bat and put it back in the rack so that when Valentine went for his bat he grabbed the rat."

Rader played for the Astros from 1967 through 1975 and was a five-time Golden Glove third baseman. He worked with shortstop Roger Metzger, who became a light sleeper as Rader's road roommate.

Rader's reputation as a flake off the field won't affect his performance as a manager, said Metzger, now a restaurant owner in Brenham.

"I think he's going to be great for baseball," he said. "He has a sense of humor and some people might think he's not responsible. But it's just a release valve for him. When the game started he was all business.

"I haven't been around him in five or six years but I'm sure he's not as drastic now. He's probably mellowed a little," he said.

NFL offers new proposal

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Union chief Ed Garvey thinks it's about time some of the National Football League's owners join the negotiations — and at least one of them reportedly feels the same way.

Russell Erxleben, the New Orleans player representative, told The Associated Press that John Mecom, the Saints' owner, told him he planned to come to the bargaining site today to become actively involved in the talks and that he would urge fellow owners to do the same.

"He wants to play football," Erxleben said of Mecom. "He said he is coming up and would contact as many owners as possible."

On Monday, the calm of this latest round of talks in the 43-day-old strike was ruffled when the player representatives were briefed by Garvey and his fellow union negotiators on part of management's latest offer.

They were told Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, was attempting to take a step backward in the wage-scale aspect of the talks by insisting that signing and incentive bonuses be part of any minimum wage rather than added to it.

Garvey also recommended that other player reps contact their team owners and urge their attendance and mentioned that Max Winter, the Minnesota Vikings' owner, and Art Modell, boss of the Cleveland Browns, were in town and that he hoped they, too, would join the negotiations.

The union insists that the minimum-wage proposal is a change in league policy. A member of the management negotiating team denied that incentive bonuses were part of the proposal.

Garvey, asked if he thought the owners had "pulled a fast one" with their controversial minimum wage proposal, replied: "No — but they tried."

After being told of management's proposal, a number of the player reps expressed their bitterness in impromptu interviews with newsmen in the lobby of the midtown Manhattan hotel where the bargaining is being conducted.

"I don't think we'll have a settlement now until January," said Marvin Powell, the New York Jets' player representative. And Stan White of the Detroit Lions, a vice president on the union's executive committee, said: "We are back to Square One on some of the economic issues."

Not long after that, the 26 player representatives gathered here (only Seattle and Green Bay are not represented) and other players here met with Sam Kagel, the 73-year-old San Francisco lawyer who joined the negotiations as a mediator Oct. 12.

The players told him of their anger and dismay at the turn of events and asked Kagel to convey their feelings to the management council. Kagel agreed, stressing that he was acting only as a messenger and that he was not supporting the players' views.

Jim Miller, a spokesman for the owners, said the minimum-wage disagreement was nothing more than "a small snag typical of labor negotiations."

Kagel briefed the media for the first time since this round of bargaining began. He said "reasonably close" issues were being dealt with by management and union subcommittees and that "the major issues have also been identified and discussions are proceeding in depth between the parties."

Inside Sports folds after three-year run

NEW YORK (AP) — Bowing to cash-flow problems and a lack of investors, the owners of Inside Sports told employees Monday they were folding the 3-year-old monthly magazine.

Later, about half the magazine's employees sat inside a Manhattan bank for nearly five hours when the bank refused to cash their severance checks.

Publisher Valerie Salembier attributed the magazine's demise to "no cash and not enough investors. I am not optimistic that they will find a buyer."

Newsweek Inc. sold Inside Sports in January to Active Markets, Inc., a company made up of three men from Bellevue, Wash. The magazine was plagued by "poor management," cash-flow problems and "undercapitalization," she said.

The magazine, with a circulation of 510,000, sold for $2 on newsstands. The cover of its November issue features football player Ed "Too Tall" Jones.

The decision to stop publishing was announced to the 40-member staff around 2 p.m., Salembier said.

Upon hearing the news, employees left the office at 444 Madison Ave. and went to a Chase Manhattan Bank branch on 46th Street to cash checks for two-weeks severance, a day's pay and 70 percent of vacation pay, according to editor John Walsh.

After cashing about half the employees' checks, the bank refused to honor a certified check drawn on an account at a different bank and deposited by the magazine's owners and ordered tellers to stop handing out money.

At that point, the magazine's employees vowed to stay in the bank until they were paid, Walsh said.

While the employees were waiting, bank officials said they would not comment on the matter.

For 4½ hours, about 21 people waited inside the bank, forcing bank personnel to stay beyond the 3 p.m. closing time. Another 19 members of the magazine's staff who had cashed their checks stood in the bank's lobby to give support to their colleagues.

"The magazine has been a classy publication, but this is a messy ending," said senior editor Bill Gallagher.

Around 7 p.m., a spokesman for the bank, Ken Mills, said officials had contacted a bank in Seattle with which Active Markets had an account and the bank had agreed to wire money to cover the employees' checks. Shortly after Mills' announcement, the employees received their money.

As he left the bank with his severance pay, editor John Walsh was cautiously optimistic. He said he was going to talk to a prospective buyer on Tuesday. He said he hoped the December issue of the magazine would be printed, although "it seems a little remote."

"We've been under a cloud of rumor and controversy since the day we were born, and it seems this (the announced folding) is another in a chain of bizarre events," Walsh said.

FERC imposes first civil penalty on Texas gas producer

By WILLIAM GARLAND
From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission imposed its first civil penalty in October against a natural gas producer for violating an important gas-classification provision of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978.

That fine of $5,000, levied against Houston-based Paul E. Cameron Jr. Inc., probably will be followed by other fines against producers who have incorrectly classified production of "old gas" as "new gas."

"Several (penalties) could go public in the next several months," said Marilyn Doria, who oversees enforcement of the natural gas act for FERC.

The number of fines apparently will be small in comparison with the number of similar violations involving the previous price controls on crude oil.

New gas, produced from a well after April 1977, gets an average price of about $3.25 per mcf (thousand cubic feet), whereas old gas brings a price of only about $1.50 per mcf. Those prices are controlled by provisions set out in the current natural gas act.

FERC officials call a switch of categories, such as that in the Cameron case, "revintaging." They impose a fine of $5,000 per day for every incident of wrongly classified gas, as allowed by the act.

In the incident with Cameron, they said the Houston producer probably did not "revintage" purposely, since his contract for sale of the gas in Goliad County did not allow a higher price.

"That dealt with a very bad application. I don't think he was trying to misclassify the gas," said Howard Kilchrist of FERC.

Kilchrist, who has headed the FERC compliance division since it was initiated in 1979, said it is difficult to prove that any producer purposely revintaged his natural gas.

But he directs about 150 auditors who periodically visit state regulatory agencies, production companies, and pipeline firms to find out if requirements of the complicated natural gas act are being met.

He confirmed that more penalties against producers for revintaging should be forthcoming, although he will not make the final decision on whether or not the fines will be imposed. He passes his information to the enforcement division, along with a recommendation about how serious he considers the alleged infraction.

Kilchrist would not say how many cases of revintaging are pending with FERC, but he said there are several "good candidates for the assessment of civil penalties."

However, he said "there's been no indication yet of any wholesale revintaging."

"There's a reason for that," he added. "It's not like the oil industry. It's much more difficult on gas pricing to circumvent the NGPA. You're hooked up right from the wellhead to the consumer and the production is in most cases actually being monitored by the purchaser," he said.

"With oil, you could transport it anywhere. With gas, you're in a fixed system," said Kilchrist, referring to price controls on crude oil that were lifted by President Reagan in one of his first acts as president in January 1981.

For a natural gas producer purposely to get a higher price than allowed for his gas under the current natural gas act, the pipeline company purchasing the gas would almost have to be aware of the revintaging, he said.

The Economic Regulatory Administration of the Department of Energy has been responsible for handling violations of the previous crude oil controls. And the extent of those violations is said by DOE to range as high as $10 billion to $15 billion.

Most of those violations, which also involved categories of "old" and "new" oil based on the date of production from a given well, were committed by major oil companies.

Compared to that, Kilchrist said the number of violations of the natural gas act are "insignificant."

Since the Texas Railroad Commission has approved more than 56,000 well applications under the act, the number of infractions would seem miniscule.

King Vidor, right, on the set of "Solomon and Sheba," poses with Yul Brynner. Vidor, who worked his way up from script boy to direct many silent-film era classics and later became a producer, died Monday at the age of 87 at his California ranch.

Director of first version of 'The Champ' dies at 87

PASO ROBLES, Calif. (AP) — King Vidor, whose 34 years as a movie director spanned Hollywood's transition from silent films to talkies and brought realism to the screen's fantasy world, is dead at age 87.

Vidor's credits include the original 1931 version of "The Champ," with Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, and "The Fountainhead" in 1948 starring Gary Cooper as Ayn Rand's rebel architect.

His cardiologist, Dr. Stanley Hoffman, pronounced Vidor dead at 7:30 a.m. Monday after he was called to Vidor's 88-acre Willow Creek ranch in the rolling seaside hills halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"He just died quietly at home," Hoffman said. "His heart just got old."

Vidor's films frequently depicted the lives of ordinary men and women.

In a recent interview, he said: "When I arrived in Hollywood, there was a sort of unreality about films, a falseness. The action was overdone. The makeup was overdone. (There was) no connection with reality."

A five-time Oscar nominee, Vidor never received that coveted statuette as best director.

But in 1979, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences gave him a special award with an inscription citing "his lifetime achievements as a cinematic creator and innovator."

American critics tended to belittle his achievement until late in his career, but he was a favorite in Europe. His 1955 version of "War and Peace" played in Moscow for six months.

In 1979 the Moscow Film Festival awarded him the "Russian Oscar."

Born Feb. 8, 1895, in Galveston, Texas, Vidor abandoned his family's lumber and hardware business after working as a local movie projectionist. He and his first wife, Florence — later a noted silent screen actress — arrived in Hollywood in their Model T Ford with 20 cents and no job prospects.

He hung around studios and began working as a $1.50-a-day actor for the chance to watch D.W. Griffith direct. He became a script clerk, a cameraman and by overstating his directing experience, began turning out half-hour shorts.

There are no surviving copies of his first feature film, "The Turn of the Road," but it opened doors to major studios. When they wouldn't finance his films — as with "Our Daily Bread" (1934) — he raised the cash to produce them himself.

Vidor's first hit, "The Big Parade" (1925), featured John Gilbert as a middle-class American struggling with World War I. He followed with the silent comedy "Show People" (1928) starring Marion Davies as a would-be movie queen, and "Hallelujah" (1929), the first major movie with an all-black cast.

His "Billie the Kid" (1930) was the nation's first 70mm film.

Vidor's other credits include "The Citadel" (1938); "Northwest Passage" (1940); "H.M. Pulham, Esq." (1941) and "Duel in the Sun" (1946). His last film was "Solomon and Sheba" (1959).

In a 1980 interview with The Associated Press, Vidor said his acting experience helped his directing.

"Acting is very close to directing," he said, "but I wasn't one of those directors who insisted on acting out every part. I learned that lesson from D.W. Griffith; all of his actors seemed alike.

"Later I saw the same thing happen when I was watching (Charles) Chaplin directing Sophia Loren in 'The Countess from Hong Kong.' Showing actors how to act knocks down self-expression."

Vidor's third wife, Florence, died in 1977.

He is survived by three daughters, eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Roxanne Pulitzer 'servant' to husband, says psychiatrist

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Roxanne Pulitzer was a mere "servant" in her millionaire husband's household, suspicious of his motives and disturbed by attentions he paid his 26-year-old daughter, according to testimony at the Pulitzers' divorce trial.

Mrs. Pulitzer's mother and a psychiatrist testified Monday about the relationship between Peter Pulitzer and his 31-year-old wife just prior to their breakup after a 6½-year union.

"There was no marriage," declared Dr. Jose Almeida, describing the lives of the 52-year-old grandson of newspaper baron Joseph Pulitzer and Mrs. Pulitzer, the daughter of a New York drugstore owner.

The couple is fighting over custody of their 5-year-old twins and whether Mrs. Pulitzer is entitled to half of Pulitzer's fortune, which she says totals $25 million. Pulitzer says he is worth only a tenth of that.

Mrs. Pulitzer, a former secretary, believed her socialite husband "wanted her to be available at all times," said Almeida, who saw Mrs. Pulitzer for three appointments, starting on Feb. 12, 1981.

Their relationship was "one of master to servant," said Almeida.

"You are my wife, but you don't have any needs. You respond to my needs," said the psychiatrist, summing up Mrs. Pulitzer's version of what her white-haired husband expected of her.

Also taking the stand Monday was Mrs. Pulitzer's mother, Marilyn Ulrich.

She testified that Mrs. Pulitzer was distraught at the attentions Pulitzer paid his 26-year-old daughter from a previous marriage. Mrs. Ulrich said Mrs. Pulitzer had seen Liza Leidy going around Pulitzer's yacht topless and kissing Pulitzer.

"It disturbed my daughter very much," Mrs. Ulrich said.

Palm Beach Circuit Judge Carl Harper, hearing the case without a jury, ruled that the evidence about occurences on the yacht was inadmissable.

The testimony came as the headline-grabbing divorce trial reopened after a three-week hiatus forced by Palm Beach Circuit Judge Carl Harper's loaded docket.

With reporters at the rear of the courtroom straining to hear his softly spoken testimony, Almeida diagnosed the defects he believed led to the breakup.

"I felt she was constantly responding to double messages from the beginning of the marriage," declared the doctor, who spent two years in communist prisons after serving as chief medical officer during the bungled Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961.

Lost painting of da Vinci goes on tour

SEATTLE (AP) — After almost 400 years in a convent and 80 years in a private collection, a painting that one art historian believes is a lost work by Leonardo da Vinci goes on tour this week.

The "Salvator Mundi" is the centerpiece of an exhibition opening at the University of Washington on Saturday.

Joanne Snow-Smith, an assistant professor of art history at the university who has researched the painting's origin, contends it is one of only 18 paintings in existence by the Renaissance master.

The portrayal of Christ has "strength without harshness, compassion without sentimentality and only Leonardo could do that," she said.

"That very fine line is what sets this painting apart," she said Monday. "It's a face only Leonardo could paint."

She said the painting is worth millions and is in better condition than Leonardo's most famous work, the "Mona Lisa."

Joseph Newland, editor of publications for the Henry Art Gallery, where the exhibition will be displayed here, said the gallery expects the exhibition and a new book by Ms. Snow-Smith to open debate on the painting's authenticity.

"This is the opening argument of the side for," Newland said Monday. "It's up to the opposed side to present their arguments. It will start a process of scholarly discussion that will take place in scholarly journals."

The gallery is publishing Ms. Snow-Smith's book, "The Salvator Mundi of Leonardo da Vinci," which Newland edited.

"Salvator Mundi" is Latin for "savior of the world." The painting is an icon of the Christ figure in which he is holding a globe in his left hand and blessing it with his right hand.

"The theme was popular in the 15th and 16th centuries," said Ms. Snow-Smith.

She said the clarity and delicacy of the colors made the "Mona Lisa" famous. But while that painting has faded, the colors of the Salvator Mundi are almost alive, she said.

The painting was commissioned by the French King Louis XII in 1507, Ms. Snow-Smith said.

She believes da Vinci worked on it in Milan from 1510-1513. "He worked very slowly and had a reputation for not finishing things — he did so many other things," she said.

She believes the king gave the painting to a Franciscan convent in Nantes after his wife, Anne of Brittany, died. Her family had founded the convent, which kept the painting almost 400 years.

In 1902, Ms. Snow-Smith said, the painting was bought by the family of the current owner, Marquis de Ganay, a French nobleman who kept it in Paris.

Ms. Snow-Smith said the family believed an assessment by noted art critic Bernard Berenson, who labeled the painting "a poor copy by an inferior pupil of Leonardo."

Ms. Snow-Smith became interested in the painting 1972 as a doctoral student at the University of California at Los Angeles. She contacted the family in Paris and began her research.

Many copies of the painting, all slightly different from the one in the possession of the marquis, already had been studied.

But a breakthrough came in the discovery of an etching of the painting in the Royal Library at Britain's Windsor Castle. An inscription said it was a copy of the work by Leonardo, Ms. Snow-Smith said. It was identical to the marquis' painting, she said.

The painting underwent extensive technical testing at the Louvre in Paris in the mid-1970s, and tests confirmed the paint and wood used were the same as those used by Leonardo, she said.

Ms. Snow-Smith first published her findings in 1978, Newland said.

The painting has been exhibited in Italy since 1978 and is beginning its first major tour, under the auspices of the University of California at Berkeley and the Italian Cultural Institute.

Burns to receive Jack Benny Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian George Burns has been selected to receive the annual Jack Benny Award for Excellence in Entertaining presented by UCLA's Campus Events Commission.

Linda Evans, star of television's "Dynasty," will make the award Thursday in Royce Hall on the UCLA campus. The presentation traditionally draws more than 2,000 students.

Highlights of the 86-year-old Burns' long career in radio, television and motion pictures will be shown, including several performances with his late wife, Gracie Allen, and Jack Benny, said Bill Feeder of the public relations firm of Rogers & Cowan.

George Burns

Recent award recipients include Rodney Dangerfield, the late John Belushi, Chevy Chase, Steve Martin and Johnny Carson.

Burns' new special, "George Burns and Other Sex Symbols," will be broadcast on NBC television Monday and will include appearances by actor John Schneider and actress Bernadette Peters.

Eileen Brennan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Eileen Brennan is being deluged with telephone calls, flowers and cards as she recovers from broken legs and facial fractures suffered when a car hit her on a dark street.

Miss Brennan takes the cards and accepts some calls, but doesn't see the flowers because they aren't permitted in the intensive care unit, said Christine Plank, spokeswoman at Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital in Marina del Rey. She said the flowers are put in other patients' rooms.

Ms. Plank said Miss Brennan, 48, was in good condition Monday and was "improving steadily," but would remain in intensive care for several more days of observation.

The actress was injured Oct. 27 while leaving a restaurant in the seaside community of Venice with actress Goldie Hawn, her nemesis in the film, "Private Benjamin." Miss Brennan also appears in the television series of the same name.

Writers at Warner Bros. Television are developing a new character to replace Ms. Brennan's frazzled Army Capt. Doreen Lewis on the show. A studio spokeswoman who asked that her name not be used said two of 13 episodes have yet to be filmed.

The new character, an Army major, will be played by Polly Holliday, who starred in the CBS programs "Flo" and "Alice," the spokeswoman said.

Billy Graham

LIDICE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — American evangelist Billy Graham said there is "no excuse" for repression, as he laid a wreath at the memorial to the victims of a Nazi massacre during World War II.

Graham knelt Monday before the 50-foot wooden cross draped with barbed wire in this village 12 miles from Prague.

Lidice was wiped out by the German occupiers of Czechoslovakia in retaliation for the assassination of the Nazi military ruler, Reinhard Heydrich. Only 159 of the 500 villagers survived.

The Baptist minister, in his third trip to a communist country this year, declared, "Lidice should...stand as a sober warning of what might happen to our world if we do not find a way to reduce the terrible threat of weapons of mass destruction...I pray that our world will never become another Lidice."

Graham visited Moscow in May and East Germany in October.

Nightmare of crime spree ends as men plead guilty

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Five men arrested after a May crime spree in a private home and two suburban diners, where many of the terrorized victims were forced to strip, surrender their valuables and engage in sexual acts, have pleaded guilty to 819 charges.

"This closes the door on some of the most infamous crimes ever committed in Nassau County," said Judge Raymond Harrington. The crimes involved more than 100 victims, and Harrington said the Monday pleas would spare the female victims from the "humiliation, degradation and denigration" of a trial.

The defendants, all from the borough of Brooklyn in New York City, were charged with traveling to Plainview, a suburb on Long Island 20 miles to the east, and forcing their way into a family party on May 29 during the Memorial Day weekend.

They ordered everyone to undress and lie on the floor, then raped two women, beat another guest with a blackjack and robbed other guests of thousands of dollars in cash and jewelry, police said.

About 45 minutes later, according to police, the five armed men robbed, raped and humiliated 75 patrons at the Sea Crest Diner in Old Westbury. The defendants forced the customers to strip and lie on the floor, police said. At gunpoint, they ordered some of the victims to have sex with one another while they looked on and laughed.

A similar attack was made on a second diner.

The men entered the pleas after Harrington ruled that statements they made to arresting officers would be admissable as evidence if the case went to trial.

"I'm going to give you the maximum on every count if you plead guilty," the judge said at the pretrial hearing in Nassau County Court. Each man faces up to 30 years in prison at sentencing Dec. 7. They could be eligible for parole in 15 years.

No plea bargaining was involved, said Assistant District Attorney Daniel Cotter. He said his office had received petitions with more than 30,000 signatures asking that no plea bargain be arranged.

One by one, the defendants, shackled and handcuffed, appeared before Harrington and in a barely audible tone admitted guilt.

The five men were identified as Michael Williams, 22; his half-brother Robert Williams, 19; Robert Samuel, 19; Robert Martin, 21, and Bruce Garrison, 22.

Majority still depend on papers, says analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the big splash round-the-clock news is making on television, a student of the subject says most people get most of their news from a source they can hold, fold, clip, put aside, retrieve and reread — the newspaper.

Lawrence Lichty, an analyst of the impact of television, says it is probably a myth — one widely accepted by TV personalities — that the tube has surpassed the paper as the chief source of news for most people.

The fact is, he says, the only people who get most of their news from television are those who watch a lot and for whom the news is just another show and those who are news buffs and get a lot of it both from print and airwaves.

Lichty, a professor of communicatons at the University of Maryland and co-author of "American Broadcasting," drew his conclusons from an analysis of studies by the Simmons Market Research Bureau, which quizzed 15,000 people to learn how much exposure advertising gets in various mediums.

For years, an annual Roper Organization survey has fostered the notion that TV was America's prime news source.

Last year, for example, 39 percent named TV and 22 percent said newspapers when asked the source of most of their news. Others cited radio, magazines and other people. That's been the pattern since 1970.

But, said Lichty, the more exhaustive Simmons studies show that while more than two-thirds of adults read at least a part of a newspaper every day, fewer than one-third of adults watch any TV news.

That still adds up to 50 million daily network viewers, but the legend of loyal fans tuning in every night to the same newscast is another myth, Lichty said.

'Free' courthouse annex appears to be getting costlier

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

That "free" courthouse annex, which the Midland County Commissioners' Court had dreamt of, seems too elusive to ever grab hold of.

But the commissioners on Monday again considered two developers' proposals, both of which included the building of hotels on the county-owned property 1½ blocks east of the Midland County Courthouse and between Illinois and Texas avenues and running along Baird Street.

Submitting proposals were Dan J. Hanesworth, regional manager of SP (Southern Pacific) Realty & Development Co. of Dallas, and Austin Lewis of Dallas.

The commissioners had hoped that a developer would build the county a 50,000-square-foot annex for free and deed it over to the county in exchange for the county's leasing to the developer the "prime" downtown location for a hotel.

BUT BOTH developers said that was not good business for them. They needed money.

Hanesworth said SP proposed that Pratt Hotels of Dallas, formerly Inns of America and the company that built the Sands Hotels in Las Vegas, Nev., and Atlantic City, N.J., would build a 275-room hotel and that SP would arrange the financing on the annex and a 475-space automobile parking garage.

Plans for building an office building were postponed due to the "kind of dismal picture" of excess office space in Midland, Hanesworth said.

But SP's proposal would entail the county's leasing half — 25,000 square feet — of the annex for $170,000 at $6.80 per square foot or the 50,000 square feet for $265,000 per year at $5.30 per square foot for 15 years.

Afterward, the county would get "full title to the building."

Over the 15-year period, the county would have paid $3.975 million for leasing the entire building or $2.55 million for leasing half the space — the 25,000 square feet. Under the latter proposal, SP would lease the other half to help pay off the indebtedness.

In addition, the county would be paying between $80,000 and $100,000 per year for leasing 200 spaces in the parking garage.

Hanesworth proposed that the county deed three-fourths of the county's block to SP.

"IF YOU (the county) give up the land at the end of the period, you're not getting a very good deal," said Commissioner Durward Wright. The land has been appraised at $3 million or $3½ million, or between $45 and $50 a square foot. "Every deal has got to be good for both parties."

"We'd be foolish to go along with you," Wright told Hanesworth. "It would not be good for us; it would be good for you."

Wright said the county would fare better by floating a bond issue and building its own annex.

"You startled me with some of the things you said," County Judge Bill Ahders told Hanesworth. "We want to get what's best for Midland County."

The project's architect, Ken Easterwood of Dallas, noted that the SP proposal was almost diametric from its earlier proposal. "That (a free annex for the county) was the goal," he said. "It went the other way."

On a sidenote, Wright noted that Midland could use more hotel rooms and meeting places. "We could be a viable convention city, which we are not today."

DALLAS DEVELOPER Austin Lewis proposed what appeared to be a more agreeable proposition to the county. Lewis suggested that he would lease the county the 50,000-square-foot annex for $50,000 a year — $1 per square foot — for five years, and then the annex would be deeded over to the county.

In addition, he proposed that the county would lease 500 spaces of a 750-space parking garage for $60 per space per month for $360,000 a year for "the duration of the financing," which would be 15 years. Under Lewis' initial proposal, the county's cost of leasing the annex for five years at $50,000 a year and leasing the 500 parking spaces for $360,000 per year for 15 years would total $5.65 million. However, Lewis said he would forego the parking arrangement if the county could work out parking in other ways.

"I don't know where I got it in my head," Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis said, "we were going to come out better."

On that same county-owned land, Lewis would build a 225-room hotel.

"I'm not interested in owning the land," he said. "I can't depreciate that (for tax purposes)."

Lewis said he would be making the money via the hotel.

"My reason for doing this is the hotel," he said. "That's where I'm going to make my money."

"I think there's a definite need (for a hotel)," Ahders said.

Commissioner Charlie Welch asked Lewis, "Why couldn't you just build a building (the annex) and step away from it?"

"Probably could," Lewis said.

Were Lewis to be selected for the project, planning by architect Dennis Peck on the annex would begin Dec. 1, financing would be completed by March 31 and construction, which would take nine months to a year to finish, would begin April 1, Lewis said.

Construction of the parking garage would begin April 1 and would take about six months to complete.

"The hotel is going to take a bit longer," Lewis said. Construction on the hotel would begin in September and would be finished in 18 months.

"Well," Davis asked the judge, "when do we start building?"

The commissioners postponed making any decision until further study.

Plan offers community water aid

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Greenwood residents, who have been moaning the blues over unsavory water, have a chance to do something about their sad song.

For $300 per household-subscriber, they can join the Greenwood One Water Supply Corp. and, with the backing of a $1.25 million Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) loan, they can tap onto wells bringing in potable water from water fields south of the community, Ted Pearce, president of the corporation, announced in a news conference on Monday at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at Midland Regional Airport.

Pearce's goal is to sign up 250 subscribers by Dec. 31.

"I have had some comment about the timing at Christmas, but it's understandable," Pearce said. The membership fee, payable by the end of the year, will include a water tap and installation to the tap. Those who join afterward will be paying a $200 water tap fee, cost of installation and the $300 membership fee.

"That's to help rush up the memberships," said Oswald Raggett, a member of the corporation's board of directors. The seven-member board has been studying potential water sources, including buying treated water from Stanton, which is linked to the Colorado River Municipal Water District, but Stanton rejected the proposal.

"We investigated every source that we know," Pearce said.

The Greenwood community, which is centered about the school and church 10 miles east of downtown Midland, in recent years has had a dearth of good underground water.

"Well, there are some (individual wells) where the water is poor and some where the wells are flat out of water," Pearce said. "They are not of sufficient quality," he noted without speculating on why the water quality has suffered.

However, some Greenwood-area residents have blamed seepage of the city of Midland's effluent waste water for spoiling the underground water table. Midland Draw, which is an extension of Scharbauer Draw which runs southeasterly through Midland, runs past the city's sewage treatment plant and eastwardly past Greenwood.

In readying for the sign-up, pay-up water-supply campaign, the corporation's board of directors surveyed 100 Greenwood residents to determine their sentiments on the water plan.

"We got virtually 100 percent positive responses," Pearce said. "We had two negative responses out of 100, and they were two brothers."

If the corporation's efforts are successful, wells are to be drilled about 130 feet deep about one-fourth of a mile south of Greenwood. Lines will be laid and taps made by next summer.

"We assume that we'll return the full $300 if it doesn't fly," Pearce said.

Making up the board of directors on the non-profit corporation are Pearce, president; Claude Bass, vice president; Bill Conner, secretary-treasurer; Ken Ellis, Kent Lester, Don Carphart and

Marijuana 'sale' leads to 12-year sentences

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Two Lubbock men who allegedly negotiated the sale of 30 pounds of Mexican-grown marijuana to two Midland undercover agents last March 26 in a Midland motel room were meted out 12-year prison terms by a 142nd State District Court jury which found them guilty of delivery of marijuana.

Convicted were Guadalupe Eugene Herrera, 26, and Inez Martinez Flores, 28.

The defendants had arranged to supply the undercover agents, David Garcia of the Midland County Sheriff's Office and John Anastasio of the Midland Police Department, the marijuana after the agents had contacted them.

"He (Garcia) had a deal to buy 30 pounds of marijuana for $6,000" from Herrera, said the case's prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Jim Rex. However, the defendants later settled on $4,300 for 24 pounds of the marijuana, as the remaining six pounds was of a better quality and at a higher price, Rex said.

The negotiated prices computed to $12.50 an ounce for 30 pounds of marijuana and $11.20 an ounce for 24 pounds. However, noted Rex, the street value of marijuana is about $50 a "lid" — an ounce. And at that rate, 30 pounds sold piecemeal would gross about $24,000, and 24 pounds, $19,200.

Rex said that Herrera and Flores were eager to sell the blocks and sacks of marijuana, since "a fellow had ripped them off for 19 pounds." Rex identified him as Sean Gallagher, whom a jury earlier had found guilty and had sentenced to three years on a marijuana-related offense.

"They needed the money and were anxious to do the deal," Rex said.

The two defendants were arrested in the Midland Inn by surveillance officers. However, the arrests came prematurely, as Garcia's bugging device malfunctioned and awaiting officers could not hear his cue to burst into the room and make arrests. But the "bust" came after the surveillance officers, unable to hear the conversation by the undercover agents, mistook another cue and rushed into the motel room before the marijuana-hauling companions of Herrera and Flores had arrived.

However, later on the night of March 26, officers arrested three Lubbock men who transported the marijuana for the transaction from Lubbock to Midland. They were identified as Guadalupe Cuellar Herrera, 53, father of defendant Herrera; Juan Martinez Flores, 30, brother of defendant Flores; and Louis Martinez, 28.

As the three were getting out of their car at the Midland Inn, Juan Flores told agent Garcia, said Rex, that "If anything went wrong, he would bury him."

They were subsequently arrested.

MMH looking into alternative financing for expansion

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Because the sluggish economy could hinder funding for Midland Memorial Hospital's expansion plans, MMH directors may pursue alternative financing for the proposed project rather than rely on a bond issue.

Four investment bankers will make a bond presentation — including alternative financing for the expansion project — to the five publicly-elected hospital officials at 8 a.m. Nov. 11. The meeting is open to the public.

The four investment bankers — First Southwest Co. of Dallas, Shearson American Express Inc., Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. and E.F. Hutton Co. Inc. — have submitted proposals to the MMH district for the financing of the expansion project, according to MMH President Ray Branson.

"We're looking at alternatives for financing this project," Branson said. "Anytime you put it (project) to a vote there's a possiblity of it being turned down (by the voters). This project is a much more urgent project than chemical dependency, so we are considering the financing a lot faster."

Since the state health agency has not approved the expansion, the proposed financing may be premature. MMH has submitted a certificate of need application for a $15 million, 77-bed expansion, while Parkview Hospital has applied for a $17.9 million, 110-bed full-service hospital — placing the hospitals in direct competition.

The two-week-long THFC hearing, beginning Nov. 9, is expected to be a heated battle between Midland's public and private hospitals.

While the decision about the applications lies in the hands of the THFC, financing for the MMH project is in the voters' laps — that is, if MMH's directors decide to bring it before the public.

The investment bankers will present two financing methods — general obligation and revenue bonds. Issuance of general obligation bonds must be publicly approved while revenue bonds can be issued without public approval. Parkview's project would be financed through private funds.

According to Tevis Herd, MMH director, the legislation that created the hospital district gives authority to the directors to issue revenue bonds, allowing project financing without voter approval.

"We have not made any decision to avoid a submission to the public for a vote," Herd said. "We're studying this (financing) right now and we'll probably decide on it in the future."

Herd said after discussing the expansion financing informally with other directors over the weekend, the timing of presenting a bond issue to the voters was mentioned.

"The school district is expected to come up with one (bond election in the spring), and we have to think about what effect this would have on the hospital," he said.

Wanda Mohr, MMH director, said alternative financing is being considered because of public reaction about the expansion, the present economy and the need for an expansion.

"There's been some concern that the public has the conception that we're (MMH) the big guys out to squelch Parkview and private enterprise," she said. "None of us (directors) think this is true, but a sleeping wheel (the public) can make a whole lot of noise.

"While the economy isn't the safest thing in the nation, the (Midland) doctors are complaining of not enough room and we need more space.

"What are we going to do?" Ms. Mohr asked. "We don't have to take this (expansion) before the public, but in my opinion, it would probably be a good idea to; the expansion is necessary. It's an incredibly difficult, complex decision to make and no matter what we do, somebody is not going to like it."

When asked if the financing for the expansion project should be brought before the public, Ed Magruder, MMH director, said: "Since the public chose to form the district and elect a board of directors to run the hospital district business, the directors should do what is in the best interest of the public.

"If it's in the best interest of the public, health care and the district to issue revenue bonds, then we should issue revenue bonds," he said.

"All I want to do is hear what they (investment bankers) have to say," Magruder said. "The cost would be a factor — which would be less costly and in the best interest of the public. I've got to wait and see."

Director Pat Estes said that the general public is knowledgeable about the expansion and should be part of the financing decision.

"They want and expect Midland Memorial Hospital to be first class and since the hospital is a taxing entity, the voters should have the right to be correctly and honestly informed about our situation."

Ms. Estes said the expansion should be brought before the public in the form of a bond election.

"I would have to seriously consider the outcome of the public vote before I made any decision (to choose the revenue bonds) because I have been elected as a member of the Midland County Hospital District board of directors to represent the people of Midland."

Director Dr. Henrie Mast is on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

DEATHS

O. Leon Fontenot

TEMPLE — Memorial services for O. Leon Fontenot, 68, of Belton and formerly of Midland were to be at 2 p.m. today in Sheffield Funeral Home in Temple with Dr. O.A. McBrayer officiating.

Fontenot died Sunday at his residence in Belton.

He was born May 6, 1914, in Villa Platte, La. He received his bachelor's degree in civil engineering and his master's degree in hydraulic engineering from Louisiana State University. He served as a lieutenant colonel in the armed forces during World War II. He retired from Exxon Co. USA in 1975, after 37 years of service. While living in Midland, he was active in St. Luke's United Methodist Church, and served in various positions including chairman of the administrative board.

The family requests that memorials be sent to the Burgin Watkins Scholarship Fund at St. Luke's U.M.C. or to MCOR of the United Methodist Church.

Water solution offered

Raggett. Greenwood residents wanting to know more about the water supply may contact Pearce at 683-4963, Bass at 684-7189 or Conner at 685-1967.

"It is essential that we establish a permanent source of water to prepare for the future water needs of our community," the board of directors said in a letter, dated Oct. 27, to Greenwood-area residents. "It is our feeling that a cooperative effort of this nature is the proper way to satisfy this need."

Pearce was careful not to link the water corporation's formation with any notion of incorporating Greenwood and turning it into a town.

"I don't see it as such," he said. "It's up to the people out there."

Unauthorized calls discovered

HOUSTON (AP) — About 15 residents of the Houston area were caught making unauthorized long distance calls using a Harris County government telephone code over the weekend, the district attorney here said

John Holmes said investigators were trying to decide whether the group, which included an oil company executive who phoned his mother in Philadelphia, had committed criminal acts.

Four injured in two separate Odessa motorcycle accidents

ODESSA — Two separate motorcycle accidents here Monday have left two hospitalized and two others injured, according to Odessa police.

Joel Daniel Deadrick, 21, of 1109 Avenue G, was listed in satisfactory condition at Medical Center Hospital this morning after his motorcycle collided with a car on West 16th Street about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

According to police, Deadrick was westbound on 16th Street when a car heading east made a left turn onto the service entrance of Loop 338, colliding with Deadrick's motorcycle. Police said the car left the scene.

In another accident involving a motorcycle, two children and a man were injured after a motorcycle/pedestrian accident which occurred at 2:09 p.m. Monday.

Police said Richard Taylor, 17, of 1407 N. Alleghaney, was traveling west on his motorcycle in the 1100 block of W. 19th Street while Katherina Marie Scott, 6, and Richard Kenneth Scott, 8, of 718 Graham St., were walking southbound on the same street.

According to witnesses, the children ran from the north curbline when Taylor's motorcycle approached the area. Witnesses said Taylor braked, but struck the children.

Police said Katherina Scott suffered a broken left leg; she was reported in satisfactory condition this morning at MCH. According to hospital reports, Richard Scott and Taylor were treated and released for minor lacerations.

Suits being prepared

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County is preparing to file the first of as many as 7,000 civil lawsuits to collect delinquent taxes, which currently total about $77 million.

County Tax Assessor-Collector Carl Smith said Monday that about 60 percent of the accounts are for such property as land and buildings, while the rest involve personal property such as trucks and airplanes.

No-caffeine Dr Pepper anticipated

DALLAS (AP) — The Dr Pepper Co. plans to enter the $360 million low-caffeine soft-drink market with a decaffeinated version of the No. 3-selling beverage, industry analysts say.

The new product probably will be announced at a special bottlers' meeting later this month, Paul Mullins, editor of the semi-monthly Beverage Industry journal, said Monday.

The decaffeinated Dr Pepper will be offered in both sugar and sugar-free versions, said Jesse Meyers, publisher of Jesse Meyer's Beverage Digest, a Greenwich, Conn., biweekly newsletter that tracks the industry.

Dr Pepper spokesman Jim Ball said the Dallas-based company had no comment on the reports but did say the firm was planning to announce a new product this month.

"We've had a low-caffeine formulation for some months and obviously have been studying the market for such a product," Ball said.

"If and when the time is right, we'll have something ready."

The Seven Up Co., which launched an advertising campaign in March touting the fact that the No. 4-selling drink does not contain caffeine, started a low-caffeine cola a month later.

No. 2 Pepsi-Cola Co. followed suit in July.

Accident injures man

ODESSA — An Odessa man was in stable condition with a shoulder injury in Odessa Medical Center hospital this morning after the car he was driving was involved in a two-vehicle accident, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Joe Valdez, 4002 Uranus, was injured, while David Winchell, also of Odessa, escaped injury when their cars collided at the intersection of Huntington and FM 2020 at about 6:50 a.m.

Valdez was traveling west on FM 2020 in a 1976 Subaru and Winchell was traveling south on Huntington in a 1968 Chevrolet.

Trooper Corbin Bowles of the Odessa DPS investigated the accident.

Santa Ana winds trigger physical, emotional ills

"There was a desert wind blowing that night. It was one of those hot dry Santa Anas that come down through the mountain passes and curl your hair and make your nerves jump and your skin itch. On nights like that every booze party ends in a fight. Meek little wives feel the edge of the carving knife and study their husbands' necks. Anything can happen."— Opening to Raymond Chandler's "Red Wind."

By MARK SAUER
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Bev Davis didn't need a weather report to know that the hot dry wind was blowing.

"We've been going crazy with calls. One of our counselors came on at 8 a.m. yesterday and in three hours she had dealt with five suicidal people. On the midnight shift we had three lines going for five straight hours plus another line on hold and a dozen people to call back. People were just flipping out."

Davis is a member of the San Diego Crisis Team that handles a 24-hour suicide-prevention hot line. She understands what happens when the Santa Anas hit. Too often she has been called upon to try and keep a lid on the bubbling cauldron of tension the winds seem to trigger in people.

"Callers are real depressed; they don't know what's wrong, they don't know what to do, they haven't slept in three days, they haven't eaten. They say they can't understand it, but they seem to be losing their minds," said Davis.

"These people are not under the influence of drugs or alcohol. They're just desperate and they don't know why. It may be they are walking around with unsolved problems and functioning normally, then the Santa Ana hits and something about the wind and the heat triggers it.

"Suddenly, everything surfaces and it seems frighteningly real. We've had all kinds of domestic squabbles. Often, one person in a relationship decides it's time to leave. Something about the wind makes him figure it's time to go and that puts the other person in a state of crisis. When the weather breaks, he may go back — who knows?

"But people definitely go crazy ... the Santa Anas just seem to bring them out in force."

This Santa Ana lasted five days, then broke. The winds died and the heat receded. Customary night and morning low clouds and cooling coastal fog returned, bringing welcome relief for Davis, her colleagues and everyone else.

But this is Santa Ana season and it's quite possible the hot wind will return soon, perhaps bringing with it not only flames but also suicidal feelings.

In addition to brush fires, Santa Anas and the world's other hot, dry winds — the sharav in Israel, foehn in Europe, sirroco in Italy and chinook in the Pacific Northwest — have long been blamed for increases in crime, accidents and radical mood shifts.

Scientists say it may be more than the effect of heat on tempers and nerves. It may have more to do with the winds electrifying the air with "positive ions" which may adversely affect some people sensitive to them.

Normally, molecules of oxygen, nitrogen and other elements carry their full complement of electrons and are electrically neutral. In various ways, however, an electron may be knocked off such a molecule leaving it with a positive charge. It is then a positive ion.

Until recently, the scientific community looked down its nose at the notion that positive ions may affect human health and behavior. But recent experiments at two respected institutions may have documented some psychological effects of positive ions on volunteers.

The effects, described recently in medical literature by Jonathon M. Charry of Rockefeller University and Frank B.W. Hawkinshire V of New York University, were increased tension and irritability among volunteers shown to be sensitive to positive ions.

Earlier research done in Israel has shown that 30 percent of the population becomes ill with migraine, nausea, vomiting, dimness of vision, respiratory symptoms and other ailments when air blowing in from the desert is charged with positive ions.

Such research is buttressed by tests conducted for the past 27 years by Paul Albert Krueger and colleagues at the University of California at Berkeley. In tests on bacteria, plants, mice and other small animals, Krueger found that exposure to positive ions changes blood levels of the hormone serotonin.

Applying that to humans, Charry noted that analysis of brain tissue from suicide victims and of cerebrospinal fluid from victims of severe depression showed reduced levels of the hormone. In Israel, during a sharav, excessive amounts of serotonin have been found in the urine of those classified "weather sensitive."

"Positive ions, we found, have a profound effect on plants, insects and small animals," Krueger said in an interview. But he was reluctant to draw similar conclusions regarding humans, and Charry and Hawkinshire said much more research needs to be done.

Volunteer Action Awards nominations requested

President Reagan has announced the second annual President's Volunteer Action Awards, a program designed to honor outstanding volunteer achievements and to call public attention to what can be accomplished through voluntary action.

The President will present the awards in April at a White House ceremony. Awards will be made in 10 categories: jobs, health and mental health, the environment, material resources, education, public safety, arts and humanities, human services, international volunteering and the workplace. Official nomination forms can be obtained by writing the President's Volunteer Action Awards, Box 37488, Washington, D.C. 20013. The deadline for submission of nominations is Jan. 7, 1983.

The program is co-sponsored in a cooperative effort by the two organizations which promote effective volunteering: VOLUNTEER, The National Center for Citizen Involvement in the private sector, and ACTION, the federal agency. Funding for the program is provided by private sector corporate and foundation sponsors.

VOLUNTEER is the primary national organization supporting greater citizen involvement in problem-solving. It provides a broad range of technical assistance services to volunteer-involving organizations, public agencies, unions and corporations. It works closely with a network of approximately 225 associated Voluntary Action Centers and over 1,000 other local, state and national organizations.

ACTION serves to stimulate voluntarism and to demonstrate the effectiveness of volunteers in addressing social problems. Its major programs include the Foster Grandparent, Retired Senior Volunteer and Senior Companion programs for the elderly and a variety of programs for youth. ACTION also promotes private sector initiatives by providing short term grants to innovative volunteer projects in such areas as literacy and drug abuse.

Sixteen individuals and groups and two corporations received the 1982 President's Awards at a White House ceremony of April 15. One of the recipients was Bobby Trimble of Midland, organizer of Christmas in April, Midland's volunteer force of citizens who band together to repair homes of elderly, low-income and handicapped Midland citizens.

Legion Auxiliaries to sell calendars

The Texas American Legion Auxiliaries are sponsoring the sale of Bob Hope's Thanks for the Memories 1983 Photo Calendars. The calendars will feature approximately 50 photos of Bob Hope taken during personal appearance before military personnel from 1943-72.

AT WIT'S END

Metric dies quietly

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's a good day when an idea whose time has come gets up and goes and no one notices.

Remember back in 1975, how we were all going to be speaking metric like native Mets by 1985?

Early next year, a full two years before the time period is up, Congress will abolish the metric board and admit defeat. They really should have known better in the first place. Americans just don't cotton to anything foreign unless they can eat it with beer, dab it behind each ear, or get 34 miles per gallon when they drive it. That's the way we are.

Gasoline distributors tried. But by the time they changed gallons to liters, the price of gasoline became so high they cut it in half to make the price seem better and besides you couldn't get it anyway on Sundays and long holidays.

Joggers were probably the most successful in the use of metrics. They had everyone talking about running 10 K's instead of 6.2 miles, but if you believe people who elevate sweat to a sacrament, then you'll believe anything.

The real resistance came from women who keep house. A kitchen harbors enough strange animals without having milligrams and centimeters running around under the sink. And you try telling a woman who measures a yard from the tip of her nose to her fingers that it'll take 12 meters to cover the kitchen windows with curtain!

I understand the logic behind having a universal system of measuring throughout the world. It's just that other things seem to take priority. I'll take European metric seriously when James Bond drives on the right side of the road, when all the bathrooms in Europe have the same flush mechanism, when other nations stop crossing their sevens in the middle, and when Italian lira come out with a few big bills.

In a few years, I suspect all that will be left of the metric invasion in this country is a few cans of whole onions on the shelf that read "1.34 kg" and a road sign that reads, "Willardsville, 40 kilometers."

They will be reminders that you can spoon-feed Americans a diet of decimals, but they don't have to swallow 'em.

DEAR ABBY

Affair with married man no bed of roses

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you had a letter about what a woman should expect if she has an affair with a married man. I thought it was funny at the time, but now that I've started to see a married man, the few things I remember from it have turned out to be the God's honest truth.

Please hunt it up and run it again. I need it to get my head straight. — INVOLVED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR INVOLVED: My secretary had no trouble finding it. Readers have been requesting reprints of that column ever since it first appeared:

"Dear Abby: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is 'in love' with a married man:

"Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays.

"Never call him at home.

"Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

"Never depend on him in times of personal crisis.

"Don't believe him when he tells you his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and she hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

"Don't ever expect his wife to divorce him — even if she catches him. She knows you are not his first and won't be his last. Also, she is not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you.

"However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate, and find another married man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years. Sign me ... His Wife"

DEAR ABBY: I'm not a bad-looking guy, but I have the worst luck with women. I can't seem to connect with any of them.

In the last year, I've been given I don't know how many phony telephone numbers. I've made countless dates and have been stood up every time. I would a hundred times rather be turned down with a flat-out NO than be given a non-existent phone number or stood up.

How can I avoid these terrible disappointments in the future? — DISGUSTED WITH WOMEN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Don't ask a woman for HER phone number, give her YOURS. And if it's any consolation, you haven't missed anything worthwhile. A woman who would stand up a date isn't worth dating.

CONFIDENTIAL TO PORTLAND, OREGONIANS: I'm told there is a "shop" in Portland that displays a countertop box of single cigarettes for 5 cents. It's for smokers who are trying to cut down or quit, and don't want to buy a whole pack. Tell me the name of the shop. I want to send an orchid.

Officials pleased with tougher law

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona law enforcement officials are crediting the state's tough new drunken driving law for a decrease in the number of such arrests and accidents.

Drunken driving accidents statewide have been reduced by nearly 40 percent and arrests have declined between 20 percent and 25 percent since the law took effect July 24, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety's highway patrol said last week.

"I think the public awareness is probably the biggest factor," said Sgt. Frank Lopez, the patrol division's administrative official who deals with the new law. "People are just afraid to get caught. For law enforcement, it's (the new law) been great."

The law stiffens mandatory sentences, including prison stays in some instances, and eliminates plea-bargaining to lesser charges. A third conviction within three years, considered a felony, results in a mandatory six-month prison term, fine of up to $150,000 and three-year license suspension.

Lopez said the department is forming two federally funded tactical squads to deal with drunken driving as of Jan. 1, to be based here and in Phoenix.

They will patrol specifically for drunken drivers, as does a squad already in operation with the Tucson police department.

Lopez said the department's drunken driving arrests averaged about 1,200 a month before the new law and about 600 now, with the decrease spread statewide but particularly in the high-incidence Phoenix and Tucson areas.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Nov. 3, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Boxing's Larry Holmes, Hall of Fame Cleveland Indians' fast-baller Bob Feller and no-hitter pitcher Ken Holtzman were born on this day. Also sharing your birthday: Pulitzer Prize-winning New York Times columnist James "Scotty" Reston. Promising career developments give you greater work satisfaction. Financial worries lessen. Do not be surprised if a new business takes off quicker than you anticipated. Foreign travel works out best if mate accompanies you. Romance has a positive effect on both your outlook and lifestyle. Rely on an old friend helping out when it really counts. Family ties grow stronger and more rewarding.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Let others take the lead today. You profit from their mistakes. Check the credentials of someone who is quick to loan you money. Romance proves lucky.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You want to set new career goals. Be careful not to discard old ones that are still valid. Consider starting a part-time business. If you follow your intuition, profits will grow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Confidence is the key to getting a new assignment or account. A romantic relationship may have led you to lose sight of your true values. Step back and rank things over.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You now enter a more successful period. Consult mate before spending personal funds on a business idea. A parent-child dispute may have to be arbitrated by an outsider.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have special talents that you sometimes neglect to use. Stand on your own two feet and stop expecting others to rescue you. You will feel much better about yourself!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.): Timing is the key to better business and financial results. You get a bright idea from a casual conversation. Once you solve a puzzle, you are able to move forward.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The key to financial success if found in a letter. Seize an opportunity to improve your position at work. Small businesses survive despite government red tape.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Reject an offer which you suspect is not genuine. A former colleague returns and helps you develop a million dollar idea. Romance gets a boost when your plans suddenly change.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are wasting precious time promoting a project which is too impractical to succeed. New romance appears just as you declare your independence. Think things over carefully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your charisma and energy give you the advantage in a competition for funds and support. A financial impasse is broken when the friend of a friend intercedes on your behalf.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Challenge authorities. If your cause is right, you will win. Your earnings go up when the boss thinks he might lose you. Homemakers come up with plans that will produce extra cash.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): A community leader may approach you for advice. Be less protective of a loved one. You need to pay greater attention to detail to avoid becoming the victim of a coworker's mistake.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

There are hands when it is incumbent on one of the defenders to direct the defense. Don't shirk your duty.

The auction needs a word of explanation. In their methods, South's jump rebid of three spades was invitational, not forcing. North had just enough to go on to game.

When we saw this hand played, West led the king of hearts. East followed with the pine. West continued with the ace of hearts and another, forcing dummy to ruff. That made sure of a trump trick for East, but it also presented declarer with his contract.

After ruffing the third heart in dummy, declarer took the trump finesse and cashed the spade ace in the hope that the king would drop. He was disappointed that it did not, but he was not yet through. Next came three rounds of diamonds, and when East followed suit, the contract was home. On the fourth diamond declarer discarded his club loser, and the king of trumps was the third and last trick for the defense.

For East, the hand should have been an open book. To defeat the contract, the defenders would have to take at least two heart tricks, a club and a trump. That could be accomplished if the defenders took their tricks in the right order.

To the first trick East should follow with the queen of hearts. That play shows either a singleton or the jack, and requests that partner underlead his other honor. West will duly continue with a low heart, and East wins the jack. Now, he must first cash the ace of clubs to complete the defensive book.

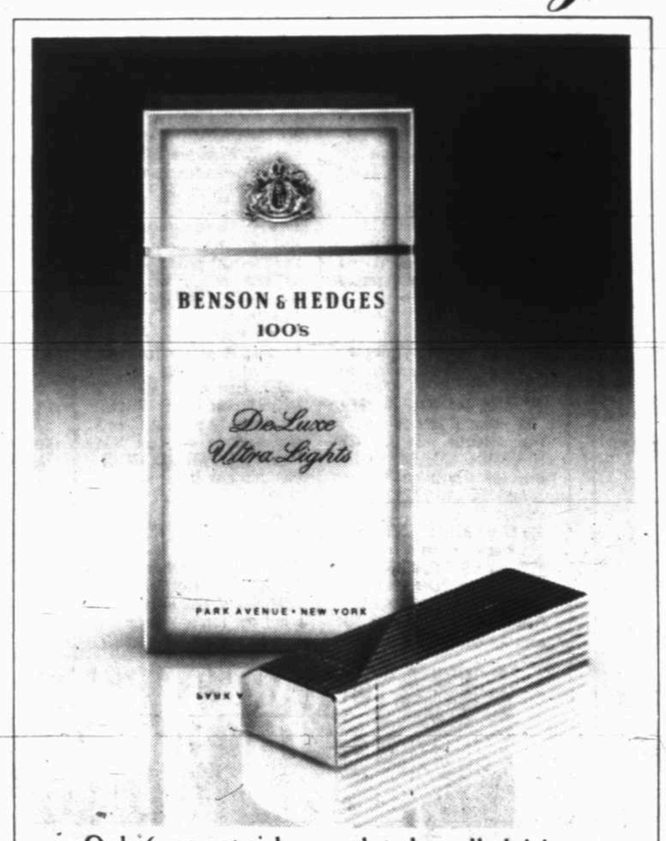

East can then revert to hearts to secure a trick for the king of trumps. Dummy is forced to ruff the third heart, and the king of trumps can no longer be captured, even on a trump coup.

So another adage bites the dust. Perhaps it should read: An ace was meant to capture a king, except in those cases where it could be the setting trick.

If we don't sell your home, we'll buy it.*

Your ERA Real Estate Specialist is now offering a worry-free way to buy and sell a home-the Sellers Security Plan.

First, the Sellers Security Plan can advance up to $100,000 on the equity in your present home to use as a down payment on your next home, providing you purchase that house through an ERA approved broker and your present home qualifies.

Then if your house hasn't sold after 210 days, ERA will buy it, at a price and terms you agree to when you accept the plan.

A minimal application fee and certified appraisal are required to see if your home qualifies.

The ERA Sellers Security Plan. Equity advance and assured sale at a price you can live with.

ERA® REAL ESTATE

*Some conditions and limitations apply. To see if you qualify, call your ERA Real Estate Specialist and review the Sellers Security Plan contract.
