EPA records called sloppy, amateurish

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two House subcommittee chairman charged today that Environmental Protection Agency financial records of its $1.6 billion superfund "are so sloppy that the agency cannot verify whether more than $50 million was properly spent."

Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., said an EPA inspector general's audit obtained by Congress reveals "unbelievably amateurish, incompetent management that has been going on for well over a year."

The inspector general's audit, dated Feb. 11, dealt with the hazardous waste clean up program, which is already being investigated by six congressional panels and the FBI, looking into allegations of political favoritism and conflict of interest.

Scheuer and Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., said the inspector general's audit for 1982 said there was inadequate documentation to determine if $53.6 million of the $180.7 million in superfund money spent during the year had gone for legally permissible uses.

Of the $53.6 million in questionable charges, a staff analysis indicated about $20 million went to salaries, travel expenses and fringe benefits for EPA employees.

Related story, Page 2A

Scheuer said EPA managers in some cases made a deliberate decision to "raid" the environmental clean-up fund to get money to be spent on other EPA activities. The EPA, under the Reagan administration, has suffered sharp budget cuts, with the superfund program one of the few that has received additional money.

As an example, Scheuer said $10,549 for telephone bills at EPA's Cincinnati research center were improperly charged to the superfund account.

The congressmen cited as examples of "questionable" expenditures $1,880 for a laboratory meat saw and $127,820 in travel expenses from EPA's Chicago office.

Synar said it could not be determined just how much of the $53.6 million had been improperly spent, but he has requested a General Accounting Office audit of the books. The congressmen said that similar questions were raised about the previous year's superfund budget but EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch did not implement the reforms.

The congressmen, who obtained the audit after asking EPA for a copy, head two of the six congressional investigations of the embattled EPA into allegations the superfund was manipulated for political purposes, that "sweetheart" deals were struck with polluters and that EPA officials violated conflict-of-interest laws.

In another aspect of the controversy swirling around the agency, President Reagan's spokesman said Thursday the chief executive was "absolutely not" intending to waive executive privilege when he said he would not withhold EPA documents subpoenaed by a House subcommittee "if there's a suspicion in the minds of the people that maybe it is being used to cover some wrongdoing."

At his press conference Wednesday, Reagan said, "I can no longer insist on executive privilege if there's a suspicion in the minds of the people that maybe it is being used to cover some wrongdoing."

But deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the president envisioned turning documents over to the Justice Department for review of possible wrongdoing, not to Congress.

Adelman 'still slugging'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms control nominee Kenneth L. Adelman, coming out fighting with President Reagan in his corner, says he can't remember ever calling arms reduction talks a "sham."

The 36-year-old Adelman also urged the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which delayed a vote on his nomination Wednesday, to let the full Senate vote so the administration can "get on with the serious business of seeking real arms reductions."

Adelman's opponents earlier produced a 1981 New York Daily News article in which Adelman was quoted as saying arms control talks were a "sham," but his policy "would be to do it for political reasons."

At a new conference in New York Thursday, Adelman said, "I have no recollection of making any such a statement at any time."

Adelman, deputy U.S. ambassador to the United States, also said the statements in the Daily News "are not consistent with my views."

"My views favoring strong arms control with real reductions have been consistent throughout my adult life," Adelman said. Discussing the article, he said: "When these kinds of misunderstandings occur in public policy matters, they need to be cleared up quickly. I hope I did so here."

Kenneth L. Adelman

The foreign relations committee delayed a vote on Adelman's nomination as head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency after members said the lineup was 9-8 against Adelman.

Meanwhile, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who opposes Adelman's nomination, predicted Reagan's nominee will be confirmed if Reagan and GOP leaders succeed in getting his name to the Senate floor.

"If the president insists, he can have Adelman," Pressler said, guessing there would be 30 votes to 40 votes against the nominee in the full 100-member Senate.

Reagan has said he would try to persuade reluctant senators to support Adelman, even if he has to "make them feel the heat" to do so. And on Thursday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president remains "solidly behind" Adelman and has no plans to withdraw his name.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said, "It is my plan to get it (the nomination) to the floor. I am confident wecan get it to the floor."

Adelman was nominated Jan. 12 to succeed Eugene V. Rostow, who resigned at the president's request.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the first member of the committee to use the Daily News column against Adelman, said he was "very skeptical" of the nominee's claim not to remember. Cranston has asked to have Adelman called before the committee to explain the interview.

"It is unfortunate that the president and Mr. Adelman were unwilling to accept the olive branch that has been offered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and instead insist on confrontation," Cranston said.

Council, zoning board affirm goals

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council reaffirmed its faith in a growing downtown office district and the need to keep it competitive not only with other cities but with suburban office areas during a special meeting Thursday morning.

With the council and Planning and Zoning Commission members packed into the basement conference room at City Hall, the group heard reports on the Master Plan for the Central Business District. Speakers were J.T. Dunkin of J.T. Dunkin and Associates; Dan Sefko, urban planner with J.T. Dunkin; and Jack Hatchell, a street and traffic specialist.

With projections for Midland's population to continue growing along with more office buildings sprouting up downtown, the specialists recommended the council begin working to make Lamesa Road a major thoroughfare into downtown. Toward the end of the morning conference, Dunkin tossed out the concept of developing green areas to make downtown more aesthetically pleasing.

The Central Business District (CBD) was delineated as those blocks bounded by Cuthbert Avenue, Lamesa Road, Front Street and D Street. Within that sector, only 2½ percent is considered retail; much of the rest is office, said Sefko.

TODAY, THAT TRACT has 6.1 million square feet of office space, which translates to 25,000 office workers, he said.

"We wanted to find out how much development could cover downtown under existing zoning," Sefko explained.

Looking at today's population of 90-92,000 and a working force of 59,000, Sefko said those figures reflect the character of a city.

In this CBD, the planning firm projected a maximum of 13.6 million square feet of office space with a potential of 54,000 workers. Sefko estimated that as the city's population goes up, more offices will spring up, taking workers out of the downtown area. Whereas 68 percent of the city's office space is located downtown, that percentage would drop with increasing suburban offices.

Cannonballs, mortar rounds found at Houston site

HOUSTON (AP) — A construction crew unearthed 75 cannonballs and mortar rounds — many still containing live explosives — that historians believe came from a Confederate supply ship pillaged after sinking in 1862, police said.

The rounds were found about noon Thursday on a National Car Rental Systems lot.

Ron Luce, the firm's manager, said a Coyote Construction Co. crew was excavating a drainage ditch about three-feet deep when "they just started popping up."

Sgt. Bobby Morgan of the Houston Police Department's bomb squad said officers removed 65 cannonballs, ranging from the size of a baseball to a bowling ball, and about 10 mortar-style rounds 10 inches by 4 inches.

Morgan said the ammunition would be detonated at an undisclosed location because much of it still contained black powder, which if kept dry retains its blasting capability even after more than a century.

Historians believe the cannonballs date back to the Civil War because they were round, like those used for muzzle-loading cannons, Morgan said. That type became obselete soon after the war and was replaced by cylindrical, breech-loaded shells, he said.

Morgan said the cannonballs and mortar rounds were strewn over a 10-foot-square area.

"We looked hard for the cannon, but it wasn't there," Morgan said.

Carroll Lewis, a Houston historian, said several cannonballs have been found in downtown Houston because a supply ship sank and a Civil War munitions plant were looted after Union troops occupied the city.

Hatchell looked at the maximum 13.6 million square feet of office space and considered what it would mean in terms of getting traffic in and out of downtown and in finding enough parking.

With the 6.1 million square feet of office space, Hatchell found the city has 18,281 parking spaces, which he said is sufficient. But if the population goes up to 140,000 and the CBD office space to 9.48 million square feet, the need would be for 29,200 parking spaces. And if it jumps to 13 million square feet and 200,000 population, the CBD would need 41,700 parking spaces.

ALTHOUGH DEVELOPERS now are providing parking when they put up new buildings, Hatchell said it won't be enough to meet the demand.

He suggested the city:

—Encourage the private sector more to develop parking.

—Push for cooperative efforts with public and private groups.

—Promote transit ridership on MidTran.

—And amend the zoning ordinance to require three instead of the present 2.5 parking spaces per 1,000 square feet of office space.

"Would the three spaces discourage people from putting up a building?" questioned Councilman Tom Sloan.

"It might discourage them from the CBD, but I don't think it would discourage them from coming to Midland," Hatchell said.

Sloan then voiced a concern that it might be a detriment to downtown's growth.

To accommodate the maximum office space, Hatchell recommended A Street be widened to six divided lanes up to Cuthbert Street and that Lamesa Road on the east side be developed into a major feeder into the CBD.

He suggested the city realign Lamesa Road to connect directly into Highway 80 and to intersect with Loop 250.

To move traffic faster, Hatchell recommended making Big Spring and Marienfeld streets one way.

QUESTIONED BY Sloan as to whether or not the council should encourage growth in the CBD, Dunkin replied, "Anything you encourage for the city will be good. The downtown area needs to be competitive, maybe more competitive than it is today. This is the business center of the community, maybe of the region.

"You should try and encourage its continued growth and probably with more interest than has been done in the past."

Councilman Carroll Thomas remarked that Midland is unique to Dallas and Houston because the downtown office area keeps the main businesses together. "If anything, we probably need to do some of these improvements more rapidly to encourage growth of the CBD," he said.

And development of Lamesa Road probably will rise in importance not only as the CBD grows but as ClayDesta Plaza on North Big Spring opens. Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, said the intersection at Big Spring and Wadley will be jammed with office traffic heading in two directions, one for ClayDesta Plaza and the other for downtown.

"That's why you have to view Lamesa Road as a major north-south street" to get some of the traffic load off Big Spring Street, he said.

HANDLING THE third part of the presentation, Dunkin remarked, "There is something that is needed for the downtown area and it is environmental treatment," or landscaping.

The best green areas are at the county courthouse and the city park adjacent to Midland Center, according to Dunkin.

Returning to the idea of making downtown competitive, Dunkin pointed to ClayDesta Plaza and its landscaped areas. "I would love to be the contractor supplying the trees or grass out there," he said with a laugh.

Claiming the downtown area is clean and with good architectural lines, Dunkin said it needs more work on the open areas. Landscaping "gives a downtown area character."

Looking at three small triangular-shaped pieces of land where Marienfeld and Big Spring intersect which the city has been thinking of selling, Dunkin recommended the council retain them and put grass, trees and shrubs on them.

"That would be a shame," he said of the idea to sell the land. "It could create a focal point into the downtown area."

He also suggested "extensive" tree planting along Front Street and a large green area for the two blocks being considered downtown for a performing arts auditorium.

"I agree with you," Sloan said of the landscaping idea. "It's easy to say. But how do you accomplish it."

Although Sloan didn't get a direct answer, he was told that if the council reinforces the idea of green areas to developers, they can create an atmosphere that landscaping is important to a high-rise office building.

Another EPA offical under investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — John P. Horton, a top official at the Environmental Protection Agency, is under investigation for allegedly using a government secretary and phone for private business, sources inside and outside EPA say.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said internal EPA investigators seized files from the office of Patricia Kruger, Horton's special assistant, and found that nearly all the documents dealt with Horton's private business dealings.

Sources said Horton's phone records also showed a large number of overseas calls, believed to involve outside business.

The disclosure of the Horton investigation comes at a time when EPA is reeling from allegations that other EPA officials, including assistant administrator Rita M. Lavelle, negotiated "sweetheart" deals with chemical companies rather than force them to pay their proper share for cleaning up waste dumps.

President Reagan fired Ms. Lavelle last week and vowed Wednesday to investigate all charges of wrongdoing at the agency.

EPA spokesman Clay Jones confirmed that the EPA's inspector general's office began an investigation of Horton last October after receiving an anonymous letter claiming that Ms. Kruger was conducting outside business for Horton.

Although refusing to provide details about the probe, Jones said the investigation was continuing.

Horton, 57, failed to return two telephone calls placed to his office Thursday. A secretary said Horton, the EPA assistant administrator for administration, was out of town.

Ms. Kruger also did not return phone calls, but through Jones denied doing private business for Horton.

Upon his appointment to the EPA job in August 1981, Horton said he severed positions he held with 10 companies, including seven located in Great Britain, Denmark and the Netherlands, according to his government financial disclosure report. Several of the firms are involved in the manufacture of street-sweepers.

Horton's latest disclosure report, dated May 15, 1982, shows that he remained president of Rokalor, Inc., of Kenilworth, N.J. There was no explanation of why he retained the private corporate position while holding a federal position.

Directory assistance had no listing for Rokalor in Kenilworth and no other location for the firm could be found immediately. The disclosure report also does not indicate what Rokalor does.

Opposition to Salvadoran aid increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional critics of U.S. involvement in El Salvador appear to be gaining strength for a fight against American aid to the Salvadoran government.

The latest salvo came from Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., who accused the Reagan administration Thursday of ignoring congressional intent in sending $140 million in economic aid to El Salvador this year.

The administration is seeking another $120 million in economic aid for the Salvadoran government in 1984, and $86.3 million in military aid, up from $26.3 million this year.

"I think its pretty clear the game that is being played here," Sarbanes said.

The $140 million for 1983 is considerably more than Congress said it approved, William Schneider Jr., the undersecretary of state for security assistance, admitted to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday.

Some of the money that went to El Salvador was originally intended for other countries, Schneider said.

While Sarbanes didn't contend the administration had acted illegally, he said it was "completely moving money around without any regard to congressional decisions."

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said U.S. aid has totaled nearly $1 billion in the last five years, and he asked Schneider, "What has our billion dollars gotten in El Salvador?"

Schneider said the funds helped create circumstances leading to last year's "free and fair election." Without U.S. aid, he said, the situation would be "dramatically worse" and a "totalitarian regime" estabished by the insurgents might already have seized power.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz also ran into hostile questioning on Salvadoran aid in an appearance before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Wednesday. Both the House and Senate committees have started consideration of the administration's $14.5 billion 1984 foreign aid request, including funds for El Salvador.

While no known head-count exists of the numbers of lawmakers who will oppose aid to El Salvador, strong challenges are a foregone conclusion in both committees.

Eighty House members are co-sponsoring a bill introduced by Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass, to declare "null and void" President Reagan's certification in late January that El Salvador is making progress in human rights. The certifcation is required as a condition for continuing military aid.

Two congressmen who described themselves as moderates who had voted for U.S. aid to El Salvador in the past told Shultz their patience was wearing thin.

"The easy vote is to vote to cut off aid," said Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa. "The difficult vote is to support the administration and continue military aid."

Shultz said the administration would continue to oppose negotiations between the goverment and rebels to end the conflict because "we don't want to get ourselves into a position where somebody can shoot their way into government."

That brought this warning from Kostmayer: "If you continue this hardline attitude you are going to continue to lose support."

Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., who noted he also had voted for Salvadoran aid, said a guerrilla victory would be "a tragedy" and the worst outcome. But he said continuing with the present government would be the "second worst outcome" because of its abuses of human rights.

Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., a moderate member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has said "some framework for talks with the guerrillas" needs to be found. She has said she will not support the administration's request for an increase in military aid.

Under questioning from Sarbanes Thursday, Schneider acknowledged that one reason the administration didn't seek congressional authorization for the increase was worry that the lawmakers might not approve.

But he said the administration was following "the standard procedure" for providing a country with needed extra funds. He said El Salvador needs the money to counter a guerrilla attempt to undermine the Salvadoran economy.

El Salvadoran peasants flee war for destinations they don't know

TECOMATEPE, El Salvador (AP) — With possessions balanced on their heads or strapped to battered trucks and cars, peasants are fleeing the guerrilla war that's spilling over from the beseiged town of Suchitoto into their village homes and their lives.

Some refugees don't know where they will go.

"Everybody is leaving this time," said a bare-chested young man whose family packed into a yellow pickup truck with two other families.

He said guerrillas came through the rugged area around his hillside village — which they have controlled for a week — on Thursday morning.

"They took chickens, pigs, rice, beans, cattle, even some furniture," said a woman with him. "All we are taking are the most important things we have left. We're leaving the rest. No, I don't know when we can come back."

She clutched a picture of her family and a painting of the Last Supper.

"They shot a 90-year-old man in the hut down there," said one man as others nodded in agreement. "He told them he didn't want to be robbed so they shot him." The man did not say who "they" were.

On Thursday government troops battled rebels who had taken refuge in abandoned homes on the south side of Suchitoto, a strategic northeastern town on the edge of guerrilla-held territory. A national guard officer said one civil defense patrolman and at least nine guerrillas were killed in the fighting.

Intermittent fire was reported from guerrillas on the east side of Suchitoto and on the west side, the rebels retreated to a hilltop hamlet half a mile away and screamed insults over loudspeakers.

The besieged town is near two hydroelectric dams on the southern shore of Lake Suchitlan that generate half this little Central American country's electricity.

Khadafy threatens action in face of Mediterranean maneuvers

By The Associated Press

Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Khadafy has threatened military action if Libya is "pushed too far" by U.S. naval maneuvers that might extend into Mediterranean waters claimed by his country.

He said the Gulf of Sidra will be turned into a "red gulf of blood" if the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz and its battle group move too far into the disputed waters in the southern Mediterranean off Libya's north coast.

"We will not permit America or any foreign state to enter the Gulf of Sidra or any other part of Libyan waters," Khadafy said Thursday in a speech to his Parliament. "The Libyan people are ready to fight to defend their land, their water and skies."

President Reagan has said there are no plans to engage U.S. forces in the region even if Libya clashes with its U.S.-backed neighbor Sudan. But Reagan did say American troops are authorized to defend themselves if fired upon.

In August 1981, two U.S. jetfighters from the Nimitz shot down a pair of Libyan planes after being fired on while conducting war games over the gulf. The Nimitz and its battle group just completed another set of maneuvers in the area.

Today, the official Soviet news agency Tass denounced the U.S. naval movements as a "dangerous provocation ... a continuation of the U.S. anti-Libyan campaign."

Tass said the Pentagon's "provocative militarist fuss" was intended to "establish undivided rule of U.S. imperialism in the region through military pressure, undisguised blackmail and diktat."

Khadafy, in his speech, said, "Entering Sidra is an invasion of Libya. Libyan people want to live as free people and won't accept foreign occupation. The Gulf of Sidra will turn into a red gulf of blood if anyone tries to sail through it by force."

Some of the waters claimed by Libya are 100 miles from its coast. The United States recognizes a three-mile limit.

Khadafy, whose speech was broadcast by Libya's official JANA news agency, said the U.S. Navy, operating north of the Gulf of Sidra "forms a challenge to the Libyan nation. The Libyan people won't stand and watch idly if pushed too far."

Pentagon sources in Washington said the United States has sent AWACS surveillance planes to Egypt and moved the Nimitz 100 miles off Egypt's northwest coast to counter a Libyan aircraft buildup possibly aimed at Sudan.

Reagan said the radar surveillance planes were in the area for an exercise, and Egypt said its pilots were receiving routine training in use of the planes.

Pentagon sources who declined to allow use of their names said they received a report that Libyan planes recently flew out above the Nimitz.Planes from the carrier were aloft at the time, but there were no incidents, the sources said.

War still not over for Vietnam POW

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten years ago this week, Ken Wallingford returned home a hero after spending almost a year in a wooden cage in a POW camp in Cambodia.

Now at age 35, Wallingford makes a comfortable living as a real estate broker here. He and his wife of nine years have a 5-year-old daughter and are expecting another child in September.

He is still the handsome, blond-haired, blue-eyed, all-American boy who once sat before the television cameras and articulately defended U.S. presence in Vietnam.

But after 10 years, the war is not over for Wallingford.

"It was such a life-changing experience," he said in an interview. "I think about it every day."

Wallingford, whose father retired from the Air Force just a month before Ken enlisted in the Army in 1969, is active with the local chapter of the National League of Families, who believe their relatives are still being held in Southeast Asia.

"To me it's unending — you can't close the book on it until we get an accounting of the MIAs," Wallingford said.

He was released on Feb. 14, 1973, along with 26 others captured in a battle at Loc Ninh, near the Cambodian border. The battle raged for three days. Wallingford and his company were pinned down. The 23-year-old sergeant was hit by shrapnel and received 17 separate wounds.

He said it took him only three or four months to readjust after his release. His only lingering effect was a disabled little finger and a few months of claustrophic spells. "I didn't like being around large crowds of people. I felt restrained or locked in."

He said he found Christianity on the second day of that battle 10 years ago when he began praying he would live. His capture, he said, was a religious experience.

"The clouds were very low hanging. You could hear the fighting off in the distance, but right there in that little compound, it was almost like the Lord was standing over us. It was peaceful and tranquil.

"I think the Lord put me in that situation," said Wallingford, because he vowed to come home and live a new life.

He still believes the war was justified, although "botched," and he still holds a grudge against actress and former anti-war activist Jane Fonda, who Wallingford said he heard over radio Hanoi during his captivity.

"I still think she's a communist and should be thrown out of the country," he said.

Wallingford said he would not change anything, except one.

"I'd go through it all over again for what it's done for me personally. But it's like going into battle with a friend and one of you going home and one of you staying behind. I think most of us would have stayed over there however long it would have taken if all of us could have come back."

Gene Goss, better known as Goss the Ross the Tradin Hoss, also known as the Mayor of Ross Avenue, poses at his used car lot in Dallas. For 40 years he's built his empire by selling cheap cars to the down-and-out.

Used car dealer built his empire selling cheap autos

DALLAS (AP) — He is, to be sure, a successful, self-made Dallas businessman with all the proper trimmings:Cadillacs, a house in affluent Highland Park and friends in high places.

But that's where the comparisons end.

Gene Goss, better known as Goss on Ross the Tradin' Hoss, is incomparable.

And he knows it.

For 40 years he's built his world by selling cheap used cars to the down-and-out. He'll trade almost anything and sell you a car if you've got the $95 down payment and a bright four-month future in his mental crystal ball.

On a 1.8 mile strip on the east side of Dallas' downtown, 34 lots proclaim "We Finance" and "No Credit Checks." There's Pay Day Motors — "The Walking Man's Friend" — Bout-Nu Auto Co., Ride Out Motors — "We Carry The Note" — and Chihuahua Motors.

And then there's Goss on Ross, where all of the 100 or so battered and bruised cars sold each month leave the lot with a bumper sticker offering "Hope You Get Home" and a guarantee of free jumper cables.

Gene Goss, the self-proclaimed mayor of Ross Avenue, doesn't hide anything. Even though he's been a used car dealer for most of his life, he won't try to give you a hard sell.

"I break my cars into two catagories," Goss grumbled while standing in front of the junk-cluttered, dusty shack that is his office. "There's get-to-work-slow cars and there's get-to-work-late cars."

Goss, whose wrinkled face and spreading nose mark years of doing business in a tough neighborhood, claims he can't ever stay away from his work. At 65, he's on his lot seven days a week and continues to be the entire sales and buying force. His wife, Betty, handles the bookkeeping department.

"I come down here on Sunday and don't even open up. I feed my dogs and talk to my cars. Every car has a story, you know. And I can figure out their history just by looking at 'em."

Goss on Ross, who says he's been known to spin a few yarns, has settled down now from his days of drinking and carousing. He's kept his gruff exterior, and still wears a grimy cowboy hat. He claims to have had 2,000 fights, many of them in barrooms, and says every bone in his body has been broken.

"I feel like I've been through three bodies. This one is worn out and so is this place. You can't turn the miles back on this body like you can on those cars.

"I've been up and down and broke more than anybody. But I never worried about it. When you haven't got anything, you've got nothing to lose."

Goss, gravel voice booming, boasts to a visitor that "I'm just an old outlaw."

Betty Goss, who says she would rather be working in a nicer office in a safer part of town, assures the visitor that her husband is not an outlaw.

"He has a rather unusual way of doing business. He's kind of gruff but he's always fair," said Mrs. Goss, who is as genteel as Gene is rough.

"To stay in this business for 40 years you have to be a little good at it or you wouldn't stay," she said. "I realize that he's a very unusual person...He just likes the rundown trader image."

On his wall are pictures and business cards of friends — lawyers, home building tycoon David Fox, entertainers, and former football coach Darrell Royal. Dallas corporate lawyer Clinton Foshee said he drops by Goss on Ross to visit his old friend, and he brings a seat cushion to keep his suit clean.

"I just enjoy him. He's a very interesting person," Foshee said.

Out back are piles of junked cars — "Death Row" Goss calls it: "It's my parts department."

Hanging under his desktop is a shotgun. Next to that is a pistol. He's been robbed three times, a crime rate he says is much lower than his competitors'.

Lawyers and shotguns. Businessmen and outlaws. Cadillacs and '71 Fords. It's all the paradoxical world of Goss on Ross.

"Ninety percent of my customers haven't got enough credit to buy a pair of roller skates," Goss said. "I finance my own cars. It gets down to fortune telling, to psychology. I look into his (the buyer's) future for four months and see if I think he can pay. I ask him questions about his situation and see if it all adds up.

"It all comes down to this: short profits, short contracts and large volume."

The psychology seems to work. Mrs. Goss said that most of their customers finish paying for their cars.

In the past six months, Mrs. Goss said, volume has been higher than ever.

"We're seeing an awful lot of people right now from up north coming down and trying to get some money out of their cars. A lot of them come from Detroit and a lot of them are refugees from Vietnam and Cambodia and Cuba and even Iran," she said.

"The tougher it gets," Goss said, "the better it is for me. I sell a lot of $895 cars. There's a lot of people right now in that bracket."

Not all of Goss' money came from cars. When he first set out in business at the end of World War II, his lot was in downtown Dallas, set on property he later sold to Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison for a $50,000 profit — "and I spent it in two months on that booze."

He's most proud of his children — three sons who together operate a growing chain of restaurants called The County Line, which are found in Austin, El Paso, San Antonio, Lubbock and Oklahoma City.

Goss rattles off the stories, like the time he went to repossess a car and came away with a couple of chickens, or the time he traded for a hog that wouldn't get off of his hood so he left the car in front of a Cadillac dealership.

Goss said he won't retire, he'll continue to "survive."

"I don't want to quit. I enjoy these old cars. That's my life."

He said he started out downtown, sold the place and moved a bit to the east. "My next move," he said, "is the graveyard."

He's had the time of his life on Ross Avenue, he says.

"Most people haven't spent most of their days on one street," said the Ross Avenue mayor. "And I have. I've spent all my boozing days, all my church days, all my romancing days, and all my working days right here."

Reagan designates building

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office Building and an adjoining plaza on Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington will be known as the "Nancy Hanks Center," in memory of the late chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts.

President Reagan has signed legislation designating the center.

"Nancy Hanks served with distinction as chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts from 1969 to 1977," Reagan said in a written statement. "Hers was a strong and effective voice both for the arts and for safeguarding the creative integrity of artists and arts institutions."

Miss Hanks died of cancer Jan. 7 at age 55.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

It is possible to have two scarlet fever attacks

Dear Dr. Solomon: The doctor I have now says that my 12-year old son has scarlet fever. A few years ago when we lived in another city, the doctor I had then also said that my son had scarlet fever at the time. Is it possible to have scarlet fever more than once or was one of the doctors making a mistake? — Mrs. N.I., Easton, Pa.

Dear Mrs. I.: Although it is unusual, it is possible for a person to have more than one attack of scarlet fever.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard on the radio that children with leukemia were doing a lot better than they used to. Nothing was said about adults with leukemia. How are they doing? — Bea, Cambridge, Mass.

Dear Bea: Most patients with acute leukemia experience complete remission after chemotherapy, and many remain free of disease for more than five years. Dr. Harmon J. Eyre, of the University of Utah College of Medicine in Salt Lake City, says it is still too early to say whether these patients will ever be considered cured, but fewer and fewer of them are dying with each passing year.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been relying on one of those home pregnancy kits to tell whether I am pregnant. I thought they were reliable until a friend of mine found out she was pregnant when she went for a regular physical examination. According to the kit she was not pregnant and it came as a big surprise. I know that nothing can be right 100 percent of the time, but how much can I rely on one of these home testing kits? — Melissa, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Melissa: There appears to be some discrepancy between what manufacturers claim for their home pregnancy test kits and what some researchers have found.

Researchers from the University of Cincinnati report that although manufacturers claim a sensitivity of from 90 to 98 percent for their kits, the actual accuracy rate is about 75 percent. In particular, false-negative rates have been found to be high among women who have just begun menstruating, women from lower income groups, and women who perform the test less than nine days after a menstrual period. This means that the tests show these women not to be pregnant when they actually are.

Inaccurate results may also occur because of improper use of the kits.

For Sandi, Indianapolis, Ind.: Dr. John F. Huddleston, of the University of Alabama School of Medicine in Birmingham, has pointed out that the determination of whether labor during pregnancy and delivery were normal is always made after the fact. In other words, there is some risk in every pregnancy and a problem may surface in even the most normal pregnancies. No one can say in advance that a pregnancy will be problem-free.

This is not meant to raise unnecessary concerns among women, but to emphasize that all pregnant women should have appropriate medical care.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Maryland town to get plumbing for first time

OELLA, Md. (AP) — This ancient village of brick and stone houses has for years been a "forgotten corner," a former mill town 10 miles from Baltimore where many houses still lack indoor plumbing.

Now change is on the way, and if all goes according to plan, some residents will be able to use flush toilets or take showers inside their homes for the first time this fall. That's when Baltimore County officials expect to complete the installation of sewer and water pipes, a project costing $5.5 million.

But there's also a fear that the traditionally low rents will be increased to pay for plumbing installation, causing the displacement of residents whose families have lived here for generations.

Oella's citizens rely on wells and community pumps for their drinking water, on the nearby Patapsco River for waste disposal and in their outhouses. Oella is 175 years old; the plumbing plans date back only to 1976.

"Nobody would pay for it," said county Public Services Bureau Chief Robert Morton. "It's all rock. It's very tough construction."

But residents of Oella argue that the town was neglected by county officials until the mid-1970s.

"In the past, it was a forgotten corner of the county," said Nicholas Sheridan, director of the Friends of the Patapsco, which oversees Oella's development.

The project was sparked by concern over the community's health and pollution to the river, which runs between Oella's western edge and Howard County. More than half the money was provided by grants from the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Environmental Protection Agency. Most of the rest came from the county.

"Oh my God, I hope I'm here" the day the sewer lines are completed, said 77-year-old Clara Cavey, who as treasurer of town's improvement association has been in the forefront of the efforts to install the lines.

"I'll bring champagne through every fire plug in Oella. I won't really get drunk, but I'll be very happy to know that my dream has come true."

But, Mrs. Cavey added, "I hope that the rents don't go too high, that the older people don't get out. If they do (increase), we'll either pay it or die in despair."

About 5,000 people live in Oella's 350 houses. Some 300 homes lack "acceptable plumbing," according to Charles Wagandt, the town's largest landlord.

"By that I mean they either have septic systems, outhouses or toilets that dump into a creek or directly into the Patapsco River," he said.

The village was founded in 1808 by Union Manufacturing Co. as a site for a textile mill and its employees.

Soon after the War of 1812, the mill grew to be the largest in the country, but an expansion in 1886 apparently strained Union's resources and the business — mill and town — was placed on the auction block in 1887.

W.J. Dickey and Sons Inc.'s $125,000 offer was the winning bid. The homes in the acquisition included groups of stone houses and a row of 30 six-room brick houses. Most of the homes still stand today.

The company also built the town's church and provided low rents to its workers. The mill closed more than a decade ago, but Wagandt, Dickey's 57-year-old great-grandson, has continued the low rents in the 105 homes he still owns.

Wagandt said monthly rents currently range from $60 for homes without running water to $485 for a recently renovated house. He also said he has signed an "agreement of intent" with the county to hold down rents charged to long-time residents for six years after the water and sewer project is completed.

"All the older folks who have been here for any length of time are paying only a small chunk" of what rents could be, Wagandt said. "My goal is to continue to provide housing for those older people who have lived here a long time."

Meanwhile, there are other signs of change in Oella. At the old mill, artisans making pottery and woodworkers building furniture work where the looms once stood. The county has given preliminary approval to a 150- to 200-unit townhouse project.

Wallace "Bunky" Merryman, 54, is looking forward to the new plumbing.

Re-Creation to entertain hospitalized U.S. veterans

SELINSGROVE, Pa. (AP) — The United Service Organizations doesn't have enough money to entertain hospitalized veterans, and neither do the eight college students who make up "Re-Creation."

But the singers and dancers from Susquehanna University here feel their faith in the Lord and their fellow men will provide the $77,000 they need to fund a 220-show tour of veterans' hospitals.

"I really don't know how we'll do it," said Hugh Brooks, Re-Creation's director and founder. "The only way is through donations."

They've collected $6,000 so far, and a major motel chain and fast food chain have agreed to provide free lodging and some meals for the troupe and groups it books for the hospital tour, Brooks said.

"When Mr. Brooks told us about it, my first reaction was 'Fantastic!' " said sophomore Jim Worthing, 20, a communications major from Altoona.

"It's a great opportunity to do more service and that's what our group is all about," he said.

The USO had provided professional entertainment at the 172 veterans hospitals until last summer.

"We just don't have the money anymore," said Kevin McCarthy, USO's director of entertainment.

The Veterans' Administration then turned to Re-Creation, which had done shows at hospitals in the past. Re-Creation hopes to do 40 to 50 veterans shows itself and serve as a booking agent for the remainder.

Re-Creation will receive $250 per show from the VA, which estimates that just food, lodging and transportation costs for each show is $600.

"Our prime reason for doing it is to serve the Lord," said Brooks, whose group already provides free shows at the state's prisons and mental institutions.

"We ain't doing it for the bucks," laughed Brook's daughter Katie, 24, whose four-member professional group will tour the hospitals from through March 31, doing up to five shows a week.

"This is no sacrifice for me. It's the greatest opportunity I've had," said Miss Brooks, who also works as Re-Creation's choreographer.

"All of these veterans at some point were willing to put everything they had on the line, so it's not much for us to give up a little time or money. I wanted to go on a diet anyway."

If Re-Creation hadn't agreed to handle the veterans' entertainment through 1983, "I would expect there might have been some difficulty in continuing (hospital) shows. It would have been a problem trying to find another quality show for $250," said Wallace Lynch, director of recreation services for the VA.

Re-Creation sings both secular and Christian music, but in its association with the Veterans Administration the group will perform strictly secular programs at the hospitals.

"We have a strong patriotic portion in every program," Brooks said as his singers rehearsed one song and dance routine that uses small American flags. "Our music is geared to be popular with all ages.

The Re-Creation singers come from a variety of backgrounds, majoring in geology, liberal arts and business

GSA gets Golden Fleece award

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., has awarded his "Golden Fleece of the Month" to the General Services Administration, and the agency says it is surprised by the award.

Proxmire said GSA was "wasting $1.5 million — with a potential for $13 million more — trying to renovate an old train station in Nashville, Tenn." The station is not needed for federal office space and it has cost taxpayers $500,000 to clean up after pigeons that roosted in the station, he said.

"We're trying to do the same thing he wants us to do," said Herb Koster, a spokesman for the agency, which manages federal buildings. "We were surprised."

Armadillos may get leprosy

GALVESTON (AP) — The armadillo, that endearing armor-plated mammal that is a candidate for the state's official animal, has been found to contract leprosy naturally in the wild, a University of Texas doctor said.

Dr. Jerome H. Smith, of the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston said that a survey of wild armadillos found that about 5 percent of the animals in Texas have a disease that is identical to human leprosy.

The medical researcher said that this is the first time that science has established that leprosy exists naturally in animals other than humans.

He recommended that people who routinely handle armadillos wear rubber gloves as a precaution, but he emphasized "we don't know if armadillos get leprosy from people or people get it from armadillos, or if they get it from a common source."

Soviet official held on spy charge

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Interior Ministry said today a Soviet trade official arrested Thursday in Cologne is being held on suspicion of espionage, but denied he was the KGB station chief in West Germany.

"He is held on charges of espionage, but to say anything more than that now would be an exaggeration," said Interior Ministry spokesman Michael Butz.

Butz said reports that the arrested man was Soviet spy chief in West Germany were "journalistic license.'

Former Green Beret denies role in raid

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Former Green Beret Lance Trimmer said today that reports he operated a radio during an unsuccessful raid to rescue missing American soldiers in Laos were "lies."

Trimmer again denied that he was involved in the mission led by former U.S. Army Lt. Col. James "Bo" Gritz, also once a Green Beret.

Trimmer and the 25-year-old daughter of an Air Force colonel shot down over Laos in 1971 were arrested Sunday in Nakhon Phanon, on the Thai-Laotian border. Trimmer and the woman, Lynn Standerwick, were arrested at a house that police suspect had been occupied by Gritz.

Two executed for hijacking of ship

PEKING (AP) — Two men were executed this month and 12 others sentenced to prison for trying to hijack a ship carrying 900 passengers to a Nationalist Chinese island off Taiwan, Canadian Television reported today.

CTV correspondent Bob Hurst told The Associated Press by telephone that he recently photographed two posters about the hijacking attempt. He said the posters were in Marwei, a naval port in mainland China about 90 miles across the Taiwan Straits from Nationalist China.

According to Hurst, the posters said that on Feb. 5 the Public Security Bureau executed two men and sentenced 12 others to terms of from three to 12 years for trying to hijack the passenger ship Muo Xing on Aug. 20.

Police still searching for racehorse

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police have alerted Interpol in case the abductors of champion race horse Shergar try to smuggle him abroad, but they are looking for a horse trailer spotted near the scene of the crime.

Despite anonymous calls claiming Shergar had been taken to the Middle East, police said Thursday they believed the $13 million racehorse was still in Ireland. But a police source said Interpol, the French-based international police liaison organization, had been contacted.

Queen Elizabeth sails Mexican coast

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II, after a stop in this posh seaside resort, sailed up the Mexican coast today to visit a steel mill being financed by British bankers.

The British monarch and her husband Prince Philip were greeted by thousand of swimsuit-clad tourists when they arrived in Acapulco by Royal Air Force jet Thursday from the Cayman Islands. They will spend eight days cruising along Mexico's Pacific Coast as they continue a month-long tour of the Americas.

They set sail aboard the royal yacht Britannia at midnight and were scheduled to reach Lazaro Cardenas, site of a steel works 216 miles north of here, this afternoon.

Death row resident has 91st birtday

TOKYO (AP) — Sadamichi Hirasawa, a Japanese convict who after nearly 28 years is said to be the world's longest resident of Death Row, observed his 91st birthday today at Sendai Prison in northern Japan.

Hirasawa, Japan's oldest prison inmate, has been behind bars in Sendai, 189 miles north of Tokyo, for 35 years.

He was sentenced to death after being convicted of killingg 12 people and robbing 160,000 yen from a Tokyo bank in January 1948. The sum is the equivalent of about $7,300 at current rates.

Policeman injured in street fighting

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — A flying brick shattered a policeman's jaw and several other officers were injured today in a street clash with youth activists who tried to take over a building in this city's decaying Noerrebro district, police said.

A police spokesman, who asked not to be named, said the violence started after "a large number of riot-clad police" routed about 100 young squatters from a building shortly before midnight.

He said the police action touched off "several hours of street fighting, in which several of our people were hurt, many shop windows were smashed and several refuse containers were set afire and pushed into the street."

Radio Solidarity ruling to be appealed

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Military prosecutors say they will file an appeal seeking harsher penalties for nine Radio Solidarity personnel who received sentences lighter than those requested by the government.

A Polish military court Thursday convicted physicist Zbigniew Romaszewski, 42; his wife, Irena Zofia, 36, and seven others of spreading false information and conducting illegal union activity by their work with the underground radio station.

The station went on the air last April, four months after the independent labor federation Solidarity was suspended under the Dec. 13, 1981, martial law decree. The union was formally banned last October.

The prosecution said it would appeal the suspended sentences and also asked that three of the defendants be kept in custody until the appeal was decided. The judges released one of them for health reasons.

The military prosecutor had demanded an 8-year prison term for Romaszewski, who was accused of organizing the station, and five years for his wife, who was an announcer on several broadcasts in the Warsaw area. The court gave him 4½ years and sentenced her to three years.

The other defendants and their sentences were Marek Rasinski, 26, 2½ years; Dariusz Rutkowski, 2 years; Danuta Jadczak, 35, 18 months; Jacek Bak, 24, 18 months; Irena Rasinski, 52, 18 months suspended and a fine of $70; Zbigniew Pietrzak, 24, 18 months suspended and a fine of $1,588, and Anna Owczarska, 32, seven months suspended.

Pietrzak was released for health reasons.

The court said the sentences were lighter than the prosecution asked because of the Romaszewskis' exemplary work records and because of family and health reasons for the others. But some observers interpreted the comparative leniency as a signal that the government no longer considers itself threatened by the Solidarity underground.

Radio Solidarity became popular with its first broadcast.

Teen charged with setting portion of Australian fire

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Police charged a teen-ager today with deliberately setting one of a string of blazes that killed at least 69 people in the drought-punished southeast coast and left farms and forest looking like they were "attacked by napalm."

Meanwhile, fire roared through the parched hills ringing Melbourne and threatened the town of Warburton, 50 miles north of the city. Flames swept through a forest in the watershed that supplies Melbourne's drinking water.

Andrew Mervyn Davey, 19 and unemployed, was charged with unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to scrub Wednesday at Kersbrook, about 22 miles northeast of Adelaide.

Davey was ordered to be held in custody for his own protection.

"I must look at the safety of the public and, in this case, the safety of the defendant," Magistrate Andrew Moss said of Davey. "He will not be the most popular person in Adelaide," he said.

Davey's lawyer said he believed his client would be found innocent. Davey was ordered to appear in court again on March 4.

Earlier, authorities said the fire Davey was accused of setting erupted in the Adelaide hills, where nine people died and 100 homes were destroyed Wednesday.

Badly-burned animals were being shot today by workers from the agricultural department in the state of Victoria. A spokesman said at least 15,000 sheep and 8,000 cattle had died in the fires, which destroyed about 750 Victoria farms.

"The fire-hit areas of Victoria looked like had been attacked by napalm," said Adm. Sir James Murray, the governor of that state.

"It was like a giant flame-thrower," an exhausted firefighter said.

At least 69 bodies had been found by this morning, including those of 12 volunteer firemen who died when flames engulfed two fire trucks in Cockatoo. About 900 people were reported injured, and officials estimated damage along a 500-mile stretch affected by the brushfires at $400 million.

Italian publishing heirs, aide arrested

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Angelo and Andrea Rizzoli, the heirs to an Italian publishing dynasty with communications interests worldwide, were arrested today on charges of fraudulent bankruptcy, police said.

Bruno Tassan Din, the managing director of Rizzoli Editore, was arrested along with the Rizzoli brothers on warrants issued by Milan's state attorney.

Agents of the Guardia di Finanza, Italy's customs and tax police, picked them up at their homes in this northern Italian city shortly after dawn.

If convicted, they face from three to 10 years in prison.

Rizzoli, with interests in newspapers, magazines, films, books and bookstores, has been suffering financial difficulties arising from links to a now-liquidated bank.

Court-appointed executives now running the company reported after a recent audit that about $19.6 million was unaccounted for, and court sources said this was the major reason for the arrest of the three.

Angelo, 39, who took over the presidency of the communications group from his father Andrea in 1978, was a reputed member of a secret Masonic lodge now outlawed by Parliament.

Another alleged member of the lodge was Roberto Calvi, the president of Banco Ambrosiano, who committed suicide in London last year and left a multi-million shortfall in the books of Italy's largest private bank.

Banco Ambrosiano, liquidated by the government last year, owned a 40 percent stake of Rizzoli Editore through its holding company, La Centrale.

Hart unconcerned that he's not front-runner for party's nomination

DENVER (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart says he is unconcerned that he is not a front-runner for the Democratic nomination for president, but admits he has "a long, difficult way ahead."

Hart became the second Democrat to announce his candidacy for president, revealing his long-expected decision Thursday on the sunlit steps of the state Capitol before more than 1,000 supporters.

Flanked by his wife, Lee, his two teen-age children and a phalanx of the state's top Democrats — including Gov. Richard Lamm and State Party Chairwoman Ann Bormolini — Hart pledged to walk a narrow path between the big-spending ways of some Democrats and "an insensitive government which warms only to the claims of money and privilege."

An advocate of a balanced budget, Hart nonetheless urged a social program that will "move this nation forward while leaving none behind."

"We can be tender-hearted if we are also tough-minded," he said, drawing applause as he did about 20 times during his prepared speech.

Hart's announcement follows that of California Sen. Alan Cranston, while former Vice President Walter Mondale is scheduled to reveal his candidacy next Monday. Also expected to enter the race are former Florida Gov. Reuben Askew, U.S. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio and Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

At 45, Hart is the youngest of those expected to try for the Democratic nomination. Cranston is the oldest at 68, Mondale is 55, Askew is 54, Glenn and Hollings are 61.

At a news conference after his announcement, Hart said he was not worried that he is not yet — like Mondale — considered a prime contender for the nomination.

"We have a long, difficult way ahead," he said. "I do not envy the intense scrutiny Fritz (Mondale) will have."

Hart likened his bid to Jimmy Carter's long-shot race for the presidency in 1976. He noted that Carter was successful in gaining support from the traditional Democratic stronghold of the Northeast, as well as from his native South.

"I plan to try for the West what Jimmy Carter did in the South," he told reporters, his cowboy boots conspicuous beneath his conservative suit. "I intend to run as a Westerner and make a big issue out of that."

This means addressing issues important to the West such as energy and the environment, as well as hitting on such Hart favorites as a nuclear freeze and a strong conventional military.

He has voted against issues dear to many Democrats, including the multi-million-dollar bailout of Chrysler Corp. in 1979, which Hart admits probably lost him some party support.

Reagan launches drive for new chemical weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rebuffed by Congress last year, the Reagan administration is launching a fresh drive to win approval for production of a new generation of nerve gas weapons.

Army officials are pushing for a nearly $140 million program which would include money to start turning out 155-millimeter shells to carry binary chemicals.

Binary weapons are those in which two non-lethal chemical components are packaged separately and then combine to form a killing nerve agent while the projectile carrying them is in flight toward a target.

Specialists contend the new binary weapons will not be dangerous either to military personnel handling them nor to civilians living around storage areas.

President Reagan appealed to Congress in 1982 to approve production of new lethal nerve gas weapons, contending they are needed to deter Soviet use of chemicals in a war.

Critics claim the program is militarily unnecessary and politically unwise.

James F. Leonard, a former U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency official, testifying before a congressional committee considering the administration's request last year, said their production "would give the Soviet Union a propaganda windfall it does not deserve and...upset our allies."

The United States has manufactured no chemical weapons since 1969. Meanwhile, military officials have told Congress repeatedly that the current stockpile of chemical weapons is old and that many of the munitions are unusable.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., whose state would produce the chemical weapons, argued against the plan last year, saying the United States has "an enormous existing stockpile of chemical weapons."

Postman solicits SIDS donations

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — When postal carrier S.R. "Shep" Sheppard delivered the mail to a Port Angeles neighborhood recently, he knew the contents of many of the letters before he left the post office.

Sheppard had written the letters, nearly 300 of them, to ask for donations in memory of a child on his route who died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome. He hardly knew the child's parents.

Patty and Sid Hicklin, whose 28-day-old baby died of the mysterious disease Dec. 28, recall occasionally chatting with the letter carrier who served their neighborhood. But his actions to raise money for research into SIDS came as a surprise.

Doctors do not know what causes the disease. It strikes infants who appear perfectly healthy otherwise.

When he learned of the disease, "I didn't know what to do," Sheppard said in a recent interview. "I kept mulling it over in my mind."

He said he considered sending the family flowers or a card, but neither seemed appropriate. He then read an obituary in the newspaper which suggested memorials be sent to the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Foundation in Seattle.

He was about to send some money to the fund, but decided instead to use the money to buy stamps and write to the Hicklins' neighbors.

U.S. Marshal Service offers $25,000 for apprehension of anti-tax radical

JAMESTOWN, N.D. (AP) — After four days of futile searching, the U.S. Marshal Service is offering a $25,000 reward for the arrest of an anti-tax radical accused of killing two marshals, because "the perpetrator is so dangerous."

The announcement Thursday night came hours after a small army of law enforcement officers searched three houses in Ashley and a farm in nearby Wishek without finding the protester, Gordon Kahl.

"This is the first time we've offered a reward of this amount," said U.S. Marshal Howard Safir. "We do this because we feel that this case is so significant and that the perpetrator is so dangerous that the sooner we can get him apprehended, the better off the citizens of North Dakota and of the country will be."

The reward will be paid for information leading to Kahl's arrest, Safir said.

Drivers could be jailed, fined

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Two drivers in last month's fatal bus-truck accident on the New York State Thruway could be jailed for up to 30 days and fined $100 if convicted of reckless driving, officials say.

The Jan. 21 crash on the superhighway between a Montreal-bound Greyhound bus and a tractor-trailer near exit 19 in Kingston killed three people and injured 22.

Investigator Bruce Hanford of the state police said Thursday that truck driver Michael J. Catti and bus driver Frederick DeChristopher face a variety of charges, including reckless driving.

DeChristopher remains hospitalized in good condition after losing a leg in the accident.

Environmentalists get new chance

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Environmentalists have been given another chance to challenge Los Angeles' right to divert water from the million-year-old Mono Lake Basin.

The state Supreme Court told a lower court Thursday to reconsider the impact on the public trust of diverting the water.

Environmentalists estimate that since the Los Angeles Water and Power Department began diverting the water in 1940, the lake's volume has been reduced by half and more than 14,000 acres of previously submerged land has been exposed.

Democrats push for jobless benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, overriding objections from the Reagan administration and Republicans in Congress, are pushing to provide up to 10 additional weeks of jobless benefits for unemployed victims of the recession.

A ways and means subcommittee approved the proposal Thursday, calling for a maximum of 65 weeks of benefits in the worst-off states. That would match the maximum level of unemployment compensation available in the recession of 1974-1975, according to congressional aides.

The push by Democrats was a sharp contrast to the spirit of bipartisan cooperation on another proposal for recession relief.

There is a little larceny in all of us. And at the bridge table, we all have a sneaky admiration for the artist who can convince another that the tricks he is looking at are a mirage. A galaxy of deceptive plays has been collected by Scottish author Hugh Kelsey under the title, The Tricky Game (Max Hardy, 14484 S. Yukon Ave., Hawthorne, CA 90250. 198 pp., paperback, $6.95 plus $1 postage and handling). Many of the hands and situations will be familiar to readers of this column, but this book will provide several hours of pleasant reading and could help you to be less obvious in your play of the cards.

This example features two of the great pairs of yesteryear. Sitting North-South were Eric Jannersten and Jan Wohlin of Sweden, while East-West were Boris Schapiro and Terence Reese of Great Britain. The contract was normal, and Reese made his natural lead of the queen of hearts.

The unthinking play by declarer at trick two is to start on diamonds. But watch what would happen. East would win and continue with a heart, and declarer would be able to take only eight tricks before he had to start on clubs. West would then make the rest of the tricks with the ace of clubs and three hearts.

Wohlin saw that he would get no more than eight tricks if he went after diamonds, so at trick two he boldly led the king of clubs! West had no idea that it was his partner who held the queen — he was afraid that, by winning the ace of clubs, he would set up dummy's suit — so he held up.

With a club trick in the bag, declarer quickly shifted to the king of diamonds. Now he could run nine tricks before the defenders could get the hearts going.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. LULAC ready to work with sponsors of immigration reform legislation

By PHILLIP SWANN

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In an apparent switch in strategy, the nation's largest Hispanic group said Wednesday that it wants to work with congressional supporters of immigration reform to write a bill that would be acceptable to Hispanics.

But it is unclear whether sponsors of the immigration legislation are interested in the offer.

Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., and Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., plan to reintroduce an immigration reform bill this week that will be identical to the one that failed to pass Congress last year. The League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) and other Hispanic groups strongly oppose a part of the bill that would impose sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

Arnold Torres, LULAC's executive director, said at a news conference Wednesday that his group "will do all we possibly can to work out our areas of differences with the proponents (of the bill.)"

Torres added: "Despite our posture of last year, despite the reluctance of proponents of this legislation to accept reasonable amendments to improve the obvious shortcomings of the bill...we regard the slate clean and are hoping that this process will allow for reasonable change and improvements."

But spokesmen for Simpson and Mazzoli said the congressmen are "committed" to employer sanctions and would not consider a compromise.

"We welcome a renewed spirit of cooperation (but) you can't have an effective immigration reform bill without employer sanctions," said Mary Kay Wilson, an aide to Simpson.

Congressional observers said the Mazzoli-Simpson bill, which passed overwhelmingly in the Senate last year, also had the votes to pass the House. But House leaders, seeking to bring the lame-duck session to an early close, agreed to postpone action because debate on the bill was dragging on.

Torres was asked if he is now needs to work with the bill's supporters because he fears Hispanic groups lack the clout to kill the bill in this Congress.

"There's (time) left to get nasty," said Torres, adding that LULAC will eventually oppose the bill if changes are not made.

"But this is a new year," he said. "There has to be give and take. We feel very strongly about working out our differences."

Reagan sticks by controversial aides in spite of their political liabilities

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backing off in one confrontation with Congress but drawing battle lines in another, President Reagan has tied himself more firmly than ever to two aides who could become expendable.

That is not to say that Ann M. Gorsuch will not weather the controversy that has prompted no fewer than six congressional investigations into the Environmental Protection Agency she heads. Nor does it mean that Kenneth Adelman will one day be jettisoned as Reagan's nominee to become director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Nevertheless, fairly or unfairly, it sometimes develops that the people presidents choose to help run the government become political liabilities. And when the political price becomes too high, they usually go.

Expressions of presidential confidence don't change that. Jimmy Carter was more than confident in Bert Lance, he was proud of him. But in the end, Lance resigned under congressional fire as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

When Congress balked at Carter's nomination of Theodore C. Sorensen to head the Central Intelligence Agency, the president resisted for a while, they acquiesced in Sorensen's withdrawal. He might have won, but the political price would have been too high.

ADELMAN AND Mrs. Gorsuch can look at Reagan's presidency for good news, or bad. Labor Secretary Ray Donovan has survived investigations and ridicule. Interior Secretary James Watt has outlasted countless calls for his retirement. Only Richard V. Allen — the president's initial national security adviser — has resigned after drawing fire from outside the administration, but the nomination of Ernest LeFever to be assistant secretary of state for human rights was withdrawn after drawing opposition in the Senate.

Presidential nominations are not customarily rejected. At the Cabinet level, it has happened only eight times in American history. That's because the presumption is the one Reagan expressed regarding Adelman: "I believe that I have a right to ask for my choice of who I thought could be of help to me."

Reagan said Wednesday that he was not about to surrender the Adelman nomination.

He declared complete confidence in Mrs. Gorsuch as the boss at EPA, even as he agreed to compromise in her confrontation with the House over the withholding of documents under executive privilege. She did so on presidential instructions, the only way executive privilege can be invoked. The House cited her for contempt.

THE CONTROVERSY over alleged political manipulation and mismanagement at EPA already has led to one dismissal there. Reagan fired Rita M. Lavelle as head of the agency's hazardous waste program. But that didn't contain the controversy.

While Reagan had ordered the withholding of about 100 documents sought by congressional committees, he said Wednesday night that he would no longer insist on executive privilege.

"Now with this thing that has come up suggesting that there might be wrongdoing, we will never invoke executive privilege to cover up wrongdoing," he told his news conference. "And so I have ordered complete investigation by the Justice Department into every charge that is made."

Mrs. Gorsuch told a Senate committee that there are some politicians and environmentalists who criticize everything she does. "Nobody can be that wrong all that much of the time," she said. "Personally, I have to finally judge that a great deal of it is political harassment."

Some authorities say stiff penalties may not stop fraud in research

NEW YORK (AP) — The severe penalties given to a former Harvard doctor for falsifying research results may not be enough to stop scientific fraud, say some authorities, who urge laboratory directors be more aggressive in supervising the work done in their labs.

On Tuesday, the National Institutes of Health moved to withhold federal research funds for 10 years from Dr. John Darsee, 34, formerly of the Harvard-affiliated Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, and now at a hospital in Schenectady, N.Y.

Dr. William Raub, associate director for extramural research and training at the National Institutes of Health, says closer supervision by laboratory directors is essential to the prevention of scientific fraud.

"The closer the involvement of the senior lab chief, the less likely there will be misunderstanding," Raub said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Senior researchers "bear a significant responsibility" for the work done under them, Raub said. "They are role models for the younger scientists and they set the tone in terms of discipline, objectivity, intellectual vigor."

Darsee's research was conducted in the laboratory of Dr. Eugene Braunwald and financed by a $122,371 contract between the Brigham and Women's Hospital and the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute, a part of the National Institutes of Health.

In addition to proposing that Darsee be barred from additional funds, the institutes have asked for the repayment of the money.

"The fact that the study results were irrevocably compromised meant that the heart, lung and blood institute did not get what it paid for," Raub said.

Darsee, who has admitted falsifying data, has not returned telephone calls by reporters seeking comment on the action by the National Institutes of Health. Braunwald has denied in writing to the NIH that he was not cafeful enough in supervising Darsee's research.

Unilateral twist

Americans should beware. The latest twist of the nuclear freeze movement amounts to nothing less than a call for unilateral disarmament.

This foolhardy policy was adopted in St. Louis last week by freeze leaders, who voted to pressure Congress to stop funds for testing, producing, and deploying nuclear weapons.

Although the delegates also called for the Soviet Union to stop its testing, can anyone seriously believe the Soviets would heed such a request?

The latest freeze move would simply force the United States to halt its nuclear arms defenses, leaving the Soviet Union a free hand to subject the whole Western world to nuclear blackmail.

The nuclear freeze movement has enjoyed considerable success, with voters in nine states approving ballot resolutions for a bilateral freeze.

The sentiment expressed by the voters, however, can in no way be interpreted as endorsement of unilateral disarmament. The resolutions approved explicitly called for mutual verification of any nuclear freeze by the United States and the Soviet Union. Now the freezers who put that over are backtracking on the one safeguard that made those state initiatives palatable.

Inasmuch as the bilateral freeze resolutions would leave the United States permanently inferior to the Soviet Union in nuclear strength, they should have been defeated. But at least they provide assurances for compliance by both sides.

No such protection is in the dangerous plan now offered by the freeze leaders, who also decided to campaign for political candidates supporting their views.

We are confident the vast majority of American voters will reject any candidate who is foolish enough to support unilateral disarmament.

Industry policy needed

What this country needs is a comprehensive industrial policy to help American industry meet the challenge of competition from abroad.

Such a policy would involve a more active and better coordinated role for government in promoting industry.

The alternatives are to do nothing, allowing foreign competitors to beat us out in our own market and in world markets, or to erect tariff barriers, protecting our own market but risking a trade war that would close foreign markets to us.

We must reject do-nothingism and protectionism.

We must lay aside outmoded prejudice against using government to promote industry. American industry need no longer be viewed as a giant to be shackled, lest it trample the rights of the people. Now alien giants are growing rapidly overseas, threatening to subdue our giant.

It wasn't socialism when the government dug the Erie Canal, subsidized the railroads by land grants, built the interstate highway system or launched the space program. It isn't socialism when the government spends billions for research and development. It isn't socialism when the Export-Import Bank subsidizes loan rates to sell goods abroad. It isn't socialism when the government stimulates the energy industry with tax breaks. It isn't socialism when the government buys surplus farm products and sells them overseas.

And it wouldn't be creeping socialism if all of these policies were coordinated in a strategy to promote industrial growth and increase U.S. exports.

Instead of claiming that Japan's industrial policy amounts to an unfair trading practice, we should adopt an industrial policy of our own. And soon.

Another View:

Rescue the jobless

It is beginning to look as if Congress will enact some sort of job-creation program. Although President Reagan has yet to enlist in the cause, Democratic and Republican lawmakers alike are scrambling to introduce job legislation.

The urgency surely is justified. Even if the business recession is beginning to ease, as many economist say it is, the expectation is that unemployment will remain high for several years. Predictions of an economic pickup are scant comfort to the millions who would remain jobless.

Frankly, we have some doubts about the strength of a recovery that leaves some 10 million jobseekers idle and relegates millions of others to part-time work. The consumer economy needs those people as participants if it is to be robust.

Aside from macroeconomic considerations, sound social policy dictates that work opportunities be created for the jobless. The fabric of the country will be subjected to too much strain if large segments of the population are told, in effect, that they are surplus people. Imagine what it must be like to hear that the country is on the mend but that your own hopes for economic self-sufficiency will remain shattered!

Yet another strong reason to put the jobless to work: Their labor could be very useful. Throughout the country, decay and disintegration are taking a toll on streets, highways, bridges, waterworks, sewer systems, public buildings. The longer repairs are postponed, the larger the task will become. The weakening of the infrastructure won't just inconvenience the public; it will hamstring industry as well.

Quite obviously, it makes sense to match the need to build the infrastructure with the need to put people to work. Yes, it will cost money, and federal deficits already are a formidable problem. That means Congress will have to push hard for savings in other programs — such as entitlement benefits for the well-to-do and certain questionable military projects. It also means that revenues may have to be increased.

As for the design of the job program, we think it should include work for some of the long-term unemployed in the inner cities as well as for people more recently laid off. In order to let as many workers as possible take part, the government would need to depart from the traditional practice of paying "prevailing" (that is, union) rates on the construction projects. A recent court decision redefining prevailing rates may help somewhat, but more needs to be done, such as establishing a special rate for beginners.

One of the admirable features of such a program is the opportunity it could offer for previously excluded people to learn skills and become self-supporting. Remember that many people who got their start on the WPA of the 1930s went on to productive careers as construction craftsmen.

As Congress seeks to design a program for today's jobless, it should not hesitate to copy some of the best features of the WPA — a program that shored up the infrastructure, rescued jobless workers, provided learning opportunities, and gave the collapsed consumer economy a lift.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Marijuana-use test wrecking careers

WASHINGTON — Ensign Dave Scheuermann's promising career as a Navy flier was shot down in flames in March 1982 — by a laboratory analysis whose reliability has been questioned by some of the nation's leading medical experts.

Jack Anderson

The lab test indicated that Scheuermann had been using marijuana. The ensign, who stood first in his class at flight school in Pensacola, insists he has never smoked pot while in the service. Here's the story:

A Navy legal officer heard rumors of a "wild party" at Scheuermann's home. Called on the carpet, the pilot denied that there had been any use of drugs at the party. The legal officer asked him to submit to a urinalysis test to detect marijuana use. The test is called EMIT — Enzyme Multiplied Immuno-assay Test.

Confident that he had nothing to fear, Scheuermann agreed to take the test. To his shock and dismay, the results came back positive.

Scheuermann was about to be drummed out of the Navy when an investigation turned up several irregularities. His urine specimen had changed custody four times on its way through the laboratories — and the chain of custody couldn't be traced.

Worse yet, the test result came back as part of a report titled: "Aircraft Accident: Non-fatal." Scheuermann has never been in an aircraft accident of any kind.

Scheuermann took a second EMIT test; the result was negative. He passed three lie-detector tests. Still his commanding officer refused to reinstate him as a pilot.

It wasn't just procedural irregularities that cast doubt on Scheuermann's case. The EMIT test itself has been criticized by eminent pathologists and toxicologists as being hopelessly inconclusive.

One of the companies that developed EMIT has acknowledged that 5 percent of the test results are deceptive. Medical experts told my reporter Don Corrigan the range of error is much higher than that.

Dr. Richard Hawks, chief of research at the National Institute on Drug Abuse, said it is totally unacceptable to use EMIT results as a basis for disciplinary action without corroborating data. Official Pentagon policy requires confirmation by more reliable testing. But that policy is violated regularly.

All across the country, service personnel and civilians are being fired or otherwise punished for flunking EMIT tests:

— At Fort Lewis, Wash., a specialist fourth class is seeing his six-year Army career go down the drain after he flunked an EMIT test. He says he hasn't smoked pot.

— A Coast Guard petty officer in St. Louis is facing dismissal on the basis of an EMIT finding. He insists he has not used marijuana.

— Casey Triblo, a paramedic in the Detroit Fire Department, was fired after two EMIT tests a month apart came back positive. "At no time during my employment did I smoke pot," Triblo said. "After the first test, the chief gave us 30 days to clean out our systems. I'd have to be an idiot to use pot."

— Larry Parker, a maintenance man with the Chicago Transit Authority for 11 years, was fired in April 1981 after a single positive EMIT result.

— Edward Burge, a Greyhound bus driver in San Francisco, was fired on the basis of two EMIT tests given 10 days apart. He described the positive test results as "impossible."

Dr. Arthur McBay, a pathology professor and chief toxicologist for the state of North Carolina for 13 years, has joined other prominent experts in the field in a denunciation of the inappropriate use of EMIT. Their letter appears in the current issue of the prestigious Journal of the American Medical Association.

R.I.P.: REQUIESCAT IN PACs?: Three Democratic presidential hopefuls have already announced they will accept no campaign contributions from PACs — political action committees. This reflects the bad odor that has emanated from the free-spending special-interest groups in recent years.

Interestingly enough, the case against PACs has just been succinctly stated by the National Asphalt Pavement Association, which was one of the first industry groups to set up a political action committee. Now NAPA has decided to abolish its PAC. In a letter to members of Congress, the association explained why:

"The sums of money being spent on federal elections have become ludicrous. The public perception of special interests controlling the Congress, that a Congressman's vote can be purchased or rented, threatens the very fabric of government."

FUNNY FRITZ: Sen. Ernest (Fritz) Hollings, D-S.C., may bring a needed leavening of humor to the Democratic presidential campaign. Some not-so-earnest Hollings quips:

— President Reagan's favorite economy theory: "Surprise-side economics."

— The Kemp-Roth tax cut: "Economic laetrile."

— On Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's globetrotting to arrange U.S. arms sales: "He's like TV's Paladin: Have gun, will travel."

— How many White House aides does it take to change a lightbulb? "None," says Hollings. "They like to stay in the dark."

— On Reagan's 1982 election slogan: "We don't need to stay the course; we need to stay the execution."

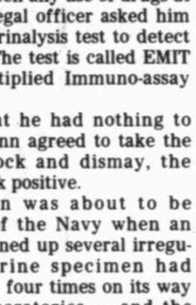
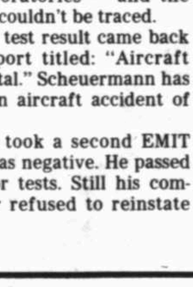
INSIDE REPORT:

No-win election for Pershing IIs

BONN, West Germany — The March 6 West German elections offer these melancholy prospects for Washington: a "calamitous defeat" (in the words of a senior U.S. diplomat here) if the Social Democratic Party (SPD) regains power or deepening trouble if the Christian Democratic Party (CDU) conservatives stay in power.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

President Reagan can kiss goodbye deployment of Pershing II missiles on West German soil if the most divisive election campaign since Bonn joined NATO restores the Socialists to power. The U.S. has no contingency plan whatever to deal with the possible defeat of the plan to modernize NATO's nuclear missiles — modernization that an SPD government specifically asked for only four years ago.

But even if conservative Chancellor Helmut Kohl wins — with or without the aid of his small Free Democratic (FDP) coalition partner — new controversy planted in this campaign threatens Western unity in the days and years ahead.

The Left's growing emotionalism against Pershing IIs — which would no more than balance Soviet SS-20 missiles still being deployed week by week against Western Europe — has become the driving force behind the peace movement. That is unlikely to change after the election.

As of today, the conservatives are strong but not prohibitive favorites. If Kohl wins, deployment of the new Pershings here — and of ground-launched cruise missiles in Italy and Britain — seems assured, more or less on schedule. But the SPD, prodded by the pacifist Green Party it has been assiduously courting, will exploit the nuclear modernization issue into the future, trying to undermine Kohl's government.

SPD leader Hans-Joachim Vogel scored a political triumph here when Soviet leader Yuri Andropov gave him the longest audience granted any foreign leader he has met. Perhaps unfairly, CDU leaders say Vogel has allowed himself to be perceived as "Andropov's candidate," or at least the architect of a policy of "equidistance" between Washington and Moscow. No previous candidate for chancellor of West Germany dared risk such epithets.

Vogel is pressed hard on his flank by the radical left-wing nationalist Egon Bahr, the SPD's expert on Soviet affairs. Bahr wants West Germany to find a new East-West perch closer to Moscow to advance the reunification of the two Germanys.

Bahr publicly accepted the Soviet position on nuclear modernization recently in Oslo; he complained that the official West German-U.S. demand for dismantling the SS-20s as the price for "zero" Pershings was not a "true" zero option. It would, said Bahr, leave 162 French and British medium-range missiles in place, thus giving NATO an unfair advantage. That parroted Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's line here last month.

Vogel himself is stealing peace-movement rhetoric from the Greens, who are plotting a national campaign of mass demonstrations and lie-ins to prevent Pershing deployment. Socialist leader Horst Ehmke told us that the SPD "has not joined the peace movement," but critics disagree. They claim that the party of Vogel and Bahr will never again return to what in retrospect is the hard-headed realism of SPD Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. Early last month, Schmidt himself privately admonished Vogel to "stiffen up" on his dealings with the Soviets.

So concerned is President Reagan over the know-nothing anti-nuclear movement that he dispatched his national security assistant, William P. Clark, to a recent high-level, informal U.S.-German conference in Munich. Clark drove home American insistence that only by dismantling its SS-20s can the Soviets ward off new Pershings.

But not even Reagan himself could make that condition credible either to Andropov or to Vogel and the SPD. With Schmidt by his own choice out of the party leadership and still rankling over his shabby treatment from former President Jimmy Carter, the SPD is veering left at a reckless pace.

Bahr created a storm when he told Clark at the Munich conference that West Germany could indeed have a "security partnership" with the Soviet Union. That novel perception of the East-West struggle by the SPD's acknowledged Soviet expert will not vanish any time soon whatever happens on March 6.

CHARLEY REESE

Real wealth enjoyed by relative few

Some people have accused me of sounding like a liberal lately. In conservative circles, that's the equivalent of being called a Zionist by the PLO. It is, they think, the worst name you can call a fellow.

Charley Reese

Well, for the record, I haven't changed my basic beliefs. I still believe that free enterprise is the best economic system. I still believe the right to own property is the base on which all other rights rest. I still believe most government welfare programs are boon-doggles.

There are three reasons for the direction my columns have taken in recent weeks. One is that I'm doing what I've always done and that is write what I believe to be the truth. Another is that with so many millions of Americans out of work, it seems inappropriate to waste time nit-picking bureaucratic mistakes. I frankly don't care if three people who don't deserve them get food stamps as long at the two people who do also get them. In hard times, it is better to err on the side of compassion.

The third reason is that my study has led me to the conclusion that what we now have in our country is not free enterprise, but finance capitalism, a system in which ownership of real wealth is concentrated in fewer and fewer hands. Such a system, which is the kind of capitalism England adopted, will inevitably lead to socialism just as soon as the majority catches onto the fact that they have been duped into a form of serfdom.

The kind of capitalism our forefathers envisioned was the kind based on the widest possible ownership of real wealth which consists of land, tools and other goods. They wanted a nation of people who owned their own businesses, their own farms, their own homes. They knew that just as concentration of power in government is dangerous to liberty so, too, is concentration of economic power. They knew that a man who was not economically independent could never be truly free in a political sense, that when push came to shove, he would vote his economic interest, not his conscience.

What they wanted and what this nation had for a time requires three things. It requires a stable currency. It is impossible to save if the coin of the realm is being robbed of its purchasing power by inflation. Without savings, it is impossible to acquire real wealth. It also requires a minimum use of credit and low interest rates, with most of the growth financed by savings. People who spend their labor paying interest and retiring mortgages will never be independent. Third, it requires a clear recognition that bigger is not always better.

As you can see, we don't at the present have any of those things. It has become accepted to finance growth on credit. The idea that you are not a "success" if you are not continuously acquiring more and more and more has been sold to practically everyone which is why practically everyone is in debt. And we have been conditioned to think in terms of cash instead of in terms of real wealth.

Thus, the farmers were lured to the mortgage window by being convinced they should grow only a single cash crop. The small towns were emptied by promises of big paychecks in the city factories.

And what has been the result? Today, 95 percent of all Americans work for somebody else. Just 100 corporations own nearly 60 percent of all corporate assets. Just 10 banks own a large majority of all banking assets. And virtually every man, woman, and child in the nation is saddled with an enormous burden of public and private debt.

The concentration of ownership of real wealth in a few hands is far more prevalent than most people realize. Thomas Dye, a professor at Florida State University, has calculated there are not more than 5,000 positions of real power — public and private — in the United States and these are held by 4,000 individuals (some hold more than one).

What's the way back to our beginnings? Repeal the Federal Reserve Act and restore a stable currency. Break up the big corporations. Revise the tax code which now favors the few and puts the burden on the middle class. Judiciously apply tarriffs and local content laws to protect our industrial base. Put firm controls on interest rates. Encourage saving and discourage the use of credit. Recognize that in every field there are natural limits on growth.

The destination at the end of our present path is some form of political tyranny, either socialist or fascist.

Doctor tried by jury of his patients

MONAHANS (AP) — Defense and prosecuting attorneys in the trial of a doctor accused of attempting to murder a mortally wounded patient have just one more chance to sway a jury that includes 10 of the physician's patients.

Cuban-born Dr. Juan Perez Valladarez is accused of trying to hasten the death of a dying gunshot victim by injecting 20 cubic centimeters of air into one of the patient's veins.

Presiding State District Judge Joe Connally of Odessa told attorneys to present their final arguments today in what he said is the "first trial on murder by air injection in Texas" and perhaps the first in the nation.

The American Medical Association's law department in Chicago said Thursday that no physician has ever been convicted of attempted murder or murder for injecting air into a patient's blood stream.

Perez, 57, is charged with attempting to kill Michael S. Hoffman on Nov. 4, 1981, while the Bloomington, Ind., truck driver was being treated at Ward Memorial Hospital in Monahans.

Two attending nurses, Brenda Rowan and Peggy Brown, testified Hoffman died within two minutes after they saw Perez inject air into the patient's blood stream.

However, pathologist Richard Cohen said the bullet fired through Hoffman's head 40 minutes earlier was the cause of death, not an injection of air.

Perez has denounced allegations by the attending nurses, the hospital administrator and an ambulance driver that he confessed to the injection.

The nurses also testified that Perez complained that he was tired the evening of the incident and wanted to go home.

And they said the Havana native, a popular Monahans physician for 15 years, violated medical ethics when he collected urine and blood samples from Hoffman before the victim had died.

Hoffman had been shot once above his left eyebrow at point-blank range during a barroom brawl in Monahans.

James Ralph Echols of El Paso has been charged with shooting the 28-year-old and is being held on a 1982 robbery charge in Riverside, Calif.

Cohen also testified it would take 100 to 300 cubic centimeters of air injected rapidly to kill an adult.

But Cohen said he was perplexed by allegations that Perez, one of five town doctors, injected air into the victim to cause an embolism. An embolism is a mass of air that travels through the bloodstream to the heart and causes heart failure, Cohen said.

"There is no known theraputic benefit to injecting air into a human," he said.

The defense rested its case Thursday without calling Perez.

Thursday, 31 witnesses, including two priests and two nurses, testified Perez was a gentle practitioner and was incapable of committing a violent act.

"He's a good man and a good doctor. He likes baseball and is interested in youth. That's the type of man he is," oil executive Bill Hammett said.

A highly partisan crowd echoed Hammett's feelings and gasped when allegations against Perez were made in court.

"Everyone who knows Dr. Perez knows he is not a murderer," Joe Bravo said.

Groups wrangle over 'buffalo wallows'

By PAUL SUSSMAN

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Wildlife groups, the federal government and two Texas congressmen continue to battle over whether Texans need permits to dredge or fill in usually dry lake beds in the Panhandle region.

The latest chapter in the struggle is a lawsuit filed by a coalition of 16 wildlife groups against the Army Corps of Engineers, which regulates the so-called "playa lakes."

Playa lakes, also called "buffalo wallows," are shallow depressions that are filled with water only after a rainfall. About 1 million acres in Texas, Arizona and Oklahoma are included in the playa lake area.

Coalition spokesmen claim that the Corps overstepped its authority last summer when it eliminated the need for farmers or builders to obtain permits before making substantial changes in the lakes. The group says that the lakes are important animal habitats that will be destroyed without government oversight.

Texas congressmen, led by Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, and Republican Sen. John Tower, have maintained that the regulations were so restrictive that they caused farmers to ask permission from the government to dig ditches in their own back yards. Both introduced bills last year that would have amended the Clean Water Act to eliminate the permit regulations.

The playa lake argument was spurred by a 1976 federal court ruling that required the Corps to begin regulating bodies of water that are non-navigable and not connected to any other body. The decision was interpreted by the Corps to require anyone wanting to make substantial changes in playa lakes to apply for a government permit.

But last summer, as part of the Reagan administration's plan to reduce government regulations, the Corps eliminated the permit requirement.

"What the Corps has said is that these types of wetlands are not very important resources and anyone who wants to can dump anything they want to, in any amount they want to, on them," said Michael Bean, an attorney with the Environmental Defense Fund.

Bean said the lakes are an important breeding and resting ground for animals, particularly water fowl, as well as providing run-off areas in storms. He said the wildlife groups want the Corps' regulations to be redrawn so that work in the playa lake area could not be done without at least notifying the government.

Blacks could turn the tide in Chicago's mayoral election

Ministers urge their congregations to vote

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Eddie R. Williams, pastor of the South Park Baptist Church, clears his throat and proceeds to hammer home the gospel that is sweeping Chicago's black community.

"We will vote," Williams intones as two dozen residents of the Pioneer Court old folks home listen in respectful silence. "We will vote because it is our duty to vote. Pass the message on that we are going to vote."

The message is repeated endlessly in senior citizens centers, churches and mass transit stations on Chicago's predominantly black South and West sides as blacks gear up for Tuesday's Democratic mayoral primary.

For the first time, a black is rated as a serious contender.

"I have the votes," two-term U.S. Rep Harold Washington repeats at every campaign stop. "Now all I have to do is get them out."

That claim is open to dispute.

But in the last eight months, blacks have swarmed large numbers onto Chicago's voter rolls as a result of an impressive registration drive. Latest estimates of black ballot-box strength range from 600,000 to 670,000 of the city's 1.6 million voters.

Whites, who make up 60 percent of Chicago's population of 3 million, are mainly split between Mayor Jane M. Byrne and Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, son of the city's late mayor.

If Mrs. Byrne and Daley divide the bulk of the white vote evenly and blacks turn out in big numbers, Washington might sneak in.

For the last dozen years, blacks have had enough votes to oust white officeholders here if they found them irksome. Mrs. Byrne defeated former Mayor Michael A. Bilandic with votes from black wards in 1979. One of Daley's predecessors as Cook County state's attorney, Edward V. Hanrahan, also lost after antagonizing blacks.

After Mrs. Byrne's election, some South Side politicians started talking about supplanting her with a black in 1983. A Chicago Urban League study published in 1981 suggested "blacks might more effectively determine the outcome" of this year's mayoral race with a voter participation increase of 5 percent to 10 percent.

The voter registration drive was launched last summer — in churches, at welfare offices and on street corners. One black pastor told his flock not to show up on Sunday without a voters card.

The first effects were felt in the Nov. 2 election. Republican Gov. James R. Thompson was expected to win easily over Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson. Instead, he barely squeaked through with a 5,074-vote edge, in part because of a large turnout in the black community.

Washington is hoping for a repeat in the turnout Tuesday. And he may get it.

"People simply feel good," Alderman Danny Davis says. "Not only about Harold Washington and the campaign. They feel good about themselves. I hear people saying, 'I wouldn't miss this election for anything in the world.'"

"It's turning into a crusade," William Grimshaw, an Illinois Institute of Technology politicial scientist, says. "I think blacks now have a much better sense of political power."

But Washington's prospects are iffy.

A Chicago Sun-Times poll shows him getting 49 percent of the black vote — far from enough to win — with 29 percent going to Mrs. Byrne and 11 percent to Daley. "That's a telephone poll,"

Mayor Jane M. Byrne

Washington scoffs. "You can't poll the black community by telephone. They aren't going to tell you anything."

Washington clearly is popular. At a mass transit stop he is besieged by autograph seekers. As his campaign car crisscrosses the city, blacks on street corners call out: "Good luck, Harold."

Back when Daley's father was in his heyday, blacks were among his strongest backers. But few of them were cut in on City Hall decision-making power. Grimshaw says this situation spawned "a tradition of puppetry" in South Side politics.

The civil rights movement, however, changed that. It spawned anti-City Hall candidates for minor South Side offices. The first breakthrough came in 1970 when blacks voted Republican and against Hanrahan, who had ordered a police raid in which two Black Panthers were killed.

Two years later, anti-City Hall blacks struck again when Daley tried to unseat U.S. Rep. Ralph H. Metcalfe, popular on the South Side. The mayor's candidate was buried.

In 1978, the popular Metcalfe died just before the congressional election but after the primary. That enabled ward leaders to insert in the congressional seat, Bennett Stewart, an easy-going black alderman and proven City Hall loyalist who, among other things, accidentally voted in favor of a tax break for segregated private schools.

Washington, a veteran of 12 years in the state legislature, easily won the seat two years later. Immediately, he began dropping hints about a mayoral run.

Meanwhile, his candidacy has created in its wake numerous fights for seats in the City Council. There is a contest in every black ward.

Richard M. Daley

"Elections in this city," Renault Robinson, a local housing official and avid Washington backer says, "will never be the same again."

Butte may become mount

BEND, Ore. (AP) — When is a butte actually a mountain? That's the question facing a committee of the Bend Chamber of Commerce pondering whether to change the name of Bachelor Butte to Mount Bachelor.

Frank Loggan, chairman of the committee, supports the name change, saying the word butte doesn't quite capture Bachelor Butte's "imposing" appearance.

As defined by the Dictionary of Geographic Terms, Loggan says, a butte is a "small mesa or steep hill standing alone in a plain."

But Loggan said according to Lewis McArthur's authoritative work Oregon Geographic Names, "Bachelor Butte has an elevation of 9,060 feet...and is one of the imposing isolated peaks of the middle Cascade Range of Oregon."

Besides, the name Bachelor Butte isn't used by most people in referring to it, Loggan said.

Midland High beats Plainview in playoffs, 64-51

Lady Bulldogs take on El Paso Eastwood in second round

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

BROWNFIELD — When Jane Young, Midland High girls basketball coach, and several of her players fell to the court wrapped in each others arms, it was evident they had made the most of their first post-season appearance. Midland outclassed the Plainview Bulldogs in every phase of the game in the decisive 64-51 victory here Thursday.

"I thought we played super," Young said. "We did exactly what we wanted to do. We stopped their point guard and we scored off their press."

During the past week Young emphasized the key to victory would be controlling Plainview's fastbreak offense.

"Our cold press worked and we got them to play a half-court offense," Young said.

The 'cold' press is not necessarily designed to create turnovers but rather to control the pace of a game. And that's exactly what the Tall City Bulldogs did. They dominated virtually every aspect of the game with the exception of rebounds and held Plainview to two fast-break baskets.

AT FIRST it appeared the game would be much the same as the previous meeting, which Plainview won 55-48, as the Panhandle Bulldogs jumped to a 7-2 lead.

But this time Midland recovered early and with 1:11 left in the opening quarter, Penny Griffin hit two of her 10 free throws to tie the game at 11-11. Thirty-seven seconds later the 5-foot-6 foward hit another bonus situation giving the Tall City Bulldogs a 13-11 lead.

Griffin finished the game with 12 points including a 10 of 13 performance from the charity stripe. She spent most of the night battling for rebounds in a physically tough game, one she decribed by saying, "It hurt."

In the fourth quarter the senior was called for a technical after she grabbed a rebound and was fouled.

"All I said was 'Thank you' and the ref called the technical," she said.

Most of Griffin's 77 percent free throw shooting came in the foul- plagued fourth quarter when Midland scored 17 of its 23 points from the charity stripe.

The Bulldogs shot 72 percent, 26 of 36, from the line while Plainview hit only 11 of 27 for 41.

PLAINVIEW TOOK the opening tip off in the second period and scored to tie the game at 13-13. It was the last time they would share the lead.

Seconds later Cindy Besek gave the Bulldogs the lead for good with her only field goal of the game.

In the second period Midland was successful running a screen-and-cut offense against the man-to-man defense employed by Plainview.

The results were dramatic as the Bulldogs hit seven of 10 shots from the field. Meanwhile, Plainview couldn't seem to buy a basket, hitting on four of 18 attempts. Midland outscored Plainview 14-11, stretching the lead to five, 27-22.

"WE COULDN'T hit anything tonight," Plainview coach Carl Price said. "We couldn't even hit during warmups. Lately we've been shooting well, tonight we shot poorly."

The Panhandle Bulldogs put up 72 shots in the game but sank only 20 for 28 percent. In contrast Midland hit 19 of 33 for 58.

"All we had to do was hit our normal percentage from the field and we win," Price said.

At least part of the poor shooting is attributable to the Midland zone defense.

"Their good players are inside players," Young said. "So we gave them the outside shot and it worked."

Midland's hot second quarter was nothing compared to the precision the offense showed in the third stanza. After some early turnovers the Bulldogs hit five of six shots and again outscored Plainview 14-11 to widen the margin to eight, 41-33.

SHEILA CHRISTIAN, who had been held to three points in the first half, came alive in the third quarter with three baskets and two free throws. The senior finished with a game-high 13 points.

But Christian's contribution to the game wasn't as much in the number of points she scored as it was her ability to pick apart the Planview defense.

"I've never seen a girl pass that well," a reporter form the Lubbock Avalanche Journal said.

It's a sentiment her coach and players agree with. "Sheila does so much more than score," Young added.

"I get points because of Sheila's passing," said Rebeeca Caton. "She sees me all the time."

Caton scored 12 points before fouling out with six minutes left in the game. "I can't ever remember fouling out before," she said.

Angela Young led Plainview with 12 points and Synthia Hemphill had 10.

Midland advances to the area contest against El Paso Eastwood. Thursday Eastwood, now 17-9, upset El Paso Coronado, which finished with a 25-3 record. The game will be played Monday or Tuesday with the time and site to be determined.

The Bulldogs beat the Troopers earlier this season in the Tall City Tournament, 60-59.

MHS needs help to stay in 4-5A race

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Even with a season-ending contest between cross-town rivals, today's 8 p.m. basketball clash between Midland High and Midland Lee has all the shades of a lackuster finish for both teams.

The major decisions in the District 4-5A arena will be made on other courts. The Bulldogs need a bizarre set of events to take place tonight to keep playoff hopes alive and Lee would probably just as soon get out from under this learning season.

Lee, made up of mostly juniors and sophomores, has suffered enough humiliation in what has been a 3-26 campaign thus far.

Midland High saw its playoff hopes all but go up in smoke last week with back-to-back losses to San Angelo and Abilene High. They will be playing Lee tonight, but thoughts may be elsewhere.

FOR MHS to still get a chance at the state playoffs, a wierd set of circumstances must take place on foreign hardwood. Big Spring must beat San Angelo in San Angelo and Abilene High must lose to Abilene Cooper. Anything less than that and the Bulldog basketball season is over.

The major trouble with the MHS' hopes is that they have to root for two decided underdogs in Big Spring and Cooper.

Odessa High, who leads the district chase with a 9-4 record is of no concern to Midland High. The Bronchos win the district championship tonight if they can whip 6-7 Odessa Permian.

San Angelo and Abilene High are neck-and-neck in second place with 8-5 records while Big Spring and Midland High are one game back at 7-6. Should San Angelo and Abilene High both lose and MHS win, there would be a four-way tie for second place with Big Spring and Midland High. Even then a district playoff would have to be held to determine the second place playoff team.

Should Odessa High lose and San Angelo and Abilene High win, there would have to be a three-way playoff to determine the top two teams. If all three win, San Angelo and Abilene High would have to have a playoff for second place.

"We're out of the running for the championship," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "We still have a shot at second place, but that may be too much to ask for at this point in time. This district has been strange all year and I guess anything can happen."

LEE WILL finish the season in the 4-5A cellar regardless of how they fare against the Bulldogs. The Rebels have won only one of 13 district games.

"This is a very young team and most of our players will be back next year," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "We've had some shots at some wins, but we just haven't gotten them. We will be much better next year."

Lee has been close. Five teams Lee has held a lead with under five minutes left in the fourth quarter only to see victory slip away. If the Rebs had won those games, they could be 6-7.

Chaps roll past Plainsmen, 97-78

With a lock already fastened on the Western Junior College Conference basketball title, no one could blame the Midland College Chaparrals if they let up a bit in their final three games of the regular season before entering Region V tournament play.

"You can't play hard for 31 regular season games. No one can come out night after night and pound people into the the ground," said Stone. "Sometimes it's hard to get up for a game."

It really didn't look that way Thursday night at Al G. Langford Chaparall Center as Midland College used two big scoring spurts to lead the way to a 97-78 victory over Frank Phillips for a 25-3 overall record, 14-1 in WJCC. It was MC's 21st consecutive victory in Chap Center.

"I think when we got hooked up we were able to do that (pull away from the Plainsmen)," said Stone. "We have that habit when we get a lead to start looking at the scoreboard and let up a bit. Last year we did it a lot. This year not so much."

THE FIRST scoring spree for MC came early in the first half. With the score deadlocked at eight, the Chaps started collecting buckets from every angle and as the run continued, that angle moved closer and closer to the basket. By the time it came to an end and the Plainsmen were able to regather their troops, they were trailing by a 34-12 count. In 10 minutes of play, Frank Phillips manged only four points.

Inching their way back slowly for the remainder of the first half and for several minutes into the second, the Plainsmen looked like they would have some measure of hope down the final stretch. They cut the 22-point margin down to 15 at the half and were able to pull within nine twice, 53-44 and 55-46 with 13:06 left, before the Chaps took off once again.

This time, down 11, 63-52, the Plainsmen were staggering on the ropes before the Chaps were finished having their way with them. MC scored 17 straight points, effectively closing the door to clinch the victory.

THE CHAPS, led by Chester Smith's 23 points, Spud Webb's 18, Jerome Crowe's 17 and Nate Bufford's 14 opened the game with three quick long-range baskets before finding the opening inside. Once they did, it was like shooting ducks in a barrel. Eighteen of their 34 field goals came from under the basket with a half a dozen more coming from the five-to-10 foot range.

For Frank Phillips, now 15-14, 7-9, James Wright provided most of the offensive spark with his 23 points while Avery Lovely added 11 and David Strothers and David Chriesman added 10 each.

On Monday, Midland College will play it's final home game of the regular season schedule, hosting Odessa College in a give-away night.

Several Midland merchants are giving away free tickets to the 8 p.m. game and they can be picked up at Midland Park Mall, Stadium Sports, Texas Reds Barbecue and the three locations of Whataburger

The Chaps will close out the regular season on Thursday in Snyder against Western Texas College.

Crashes mar Daytona qualifying

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Journeyman driver Bruce Jacobi was critically injured Thursday in one of two spectacular cartwheeling crashes that marred the Uno Twin 125-mile qualifying races for the Daytona 500.

Neil Bonnett and Dale Earnhardt maneuvered through the accident-filled sprints and overtook two of racing's biggest names, Richard Petty and A.J. Foyt, on the last laps to win the qualifiers and earn second-row starts in Sunday's $1 million Grand National stock car race.

Pole-winner Ricky Rudd and Geoff Bodine clinched the front-row positions by posting the fastest qualifying speeds Monday.

Jacobi, 47, of Speedway, Ind., was injured in the first qualifying race, and Rusty Wallace escaped serious injury in a similar crash in the second.

Jacobi was taken to Halifax Hospital where he was being treated for head injuries. He was running alone when his Grand Prix ran off the inside of the track coming off the second turn. As it flipped through the infield grass, the top was torn off the car — leaving only the steel roll-cage — and both ends were badly mangled.

Wallace's Buick Regal wound up in similar shape, but the young driver from Valley Park, Mo., suffered only minor injuries.

A SECOND crash in the opening race and several other tangles in the second qualifier were less serious. No injuries were reported.

The qualifying victories were worth $18,000 each to Bonnett and Earnhardt, and 14 of the top 15 finishers in each race on Daytona's 2.5-mile, high-banked trioval earned starting places in Sunday's 500.

Earnhardt averaged 154.746 mph in the first race, while Bonnett finished the 50 laps with an average of 122.183.

Bonnett, who won $50,000 Monday in capturing the Busch Clash, slipped his new Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS past Petty, a seven-time Daytona 500 winner, two turns from the end and held off a strong move by Petty's Pontiac Grand Prix to take the second race by three-quarters of a car length.

"When I was leading the race, I knew I couldn't lead and win it. So I thought I'd follow Richard and try to get around him (at the end)," Bonnett said.

"I'm going into the race with the intention of finishing. I hope to be there on the last lap and do it one more time."

In the first race, Earnhardt, with drafting help from Buddy Baker, whipped his 1983 Ford Thunderbird around Foyt on the backstretch of the last lap.

FOYT'S MONTE Carlo SS took over the top spot on the 28th lap of the first race and stayed there until the lead pack came down the backstretch on the 50th lap. At that point, the second-place Earnhardt and third-place Baker pulled low on the track and, using their own draft, shot past Foyt.

"I sat there until it was time," said Earnhardt, the 1980 Winston Cup champion. "I didn't know if I could draft by him (Foyt). I didn't try it down the backstretch.

"Then, I had to worry about Buddy, but he ran out of racetrack."

Golf's diabolical gods: They don't believe in justice

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Golf is the most unfair of all sports. In most other sports, you get what you deserve. But golf is cruel. It metes out what Aristotle called "undeserved misfortune." It takes great delight in punishing the guiltless. If it were human, it would be Ivan, The Terrible. Himmler. Bobby Jones, himself, called the golfer "the dogged victim of inexorable fate" – i.e., doomed.

Consider the case of Jack Renner, a golfer of mild repute from San Diego. If you were watching Sunday, you saw Jack just win his third tournament on the PGA tour, the Hawaiian Open. I mean to say, Jack left the 17th green all tied with the Japanese golfer Isao Aoko, at 18-under-par. Then, Jack proceeded to ice the tournament, to all intents and purposes.

He slammed a gorgeous drive off the par-5 18th. Long and solid, it came to rest so far down the fairway, Renner had no trouble going for the green with his second shot. He hit a textbook three-wood to the front of the green and bounced it forward to within 15 feet of the cup. He was looking at a makeable eagle 3.

MEANWHILE, BACK on the tee, the golfing Samurai, Aoko, appeared to have fallen on his sword. He slammed a hacker's drive into the right ruff off the tee, in stubble so unnegotiable that his fairway wood shot out of it was hooked badly into the left ruff, a ball so mired in the broccoli that it looked like his best shot was a treezer.

Here was the picture then: Renner was on the green, 15 feet from the hole, in 2. Aoki was in the ruff, 128 yards from the green, in 2. The game's over, right? Renner makes 3, Aoki makes 6, right?

You don't know golf. It dreams of setups like this. It's like the practical joker who works all his life to get the right pail of water, the cayenne in the sugar jar, the phony wallet just right to humiliate the unsuspecting.

Renner missed that little putt. Well, he didn't exactly miss it. Golf is not that kind. It hit the hole and lipped out. Never mind. Aoki is still out there in lion country. He's looking at 5 – if he's lucky. Renner makes his tap-in 4. Even if the roof falls in, he now makes no worse than a playoff.

Aoki then chips in. Well, make that "pitches" in. One-hundred and 28 yards is not exactly a "chip." It's more like a hole-in-one, a 100,000-to-1 shot.

Isolated instance? Not at all. Golf is full of perversions like that. It's a sport for the Marquis de Sade.

IT SELDOM rewards the just. It punishes the worthy. Who can forget a PGA played in Columbus, Ohio, in 1964? Tee-to-green that year, Arnold Palmer played an impeccable round of golf on the final day. Bobby Nichols, the ultimate winner, played by the way of Philadelphia. Hole-after-hole, Palmer would be found standing on a green in regulation with a short putt for birdie and Nichols would be out in the briars looking for his ball. All of a sudden, twigs would fly, stones rattle, cans scatter, branches and squirrels running all over the place – and here would come Nichols' ball screaming out of the garbage and coming to rest one foot from the pin. Shaken, Palmer would miss the putt. Palmer would never win a PGA. Golf is relentless, too.

You can recall Lee Trevino winning a British Open with a scull shot out of a trap that hit the flag and dropped straight down into the cup. If it misses the stick, it's in the Firth of Forth or Scapa Flow or someplace nestled around the sunken subs.

Who can forget Tom Watson, hip deep in the weeds, chipping in from the edge of a ledge to win last year's U.S. Open? A colleague, Lyle Spencer, watching with me, leaned over to tap me on the shoulder as Watson studied his disastrous lie. "He'll lose now. He'll make a 4 from that lie. Or a 5, maybe," he said. "What if he makes a 2?" I challenged. You see, I know golf for the perverse dastard that it is.

You make a good pitch in baseball, you get the guy out. Chances are, you throw a good pass in football, you score. You hit a winner in tennis, and the guy can't get his racket on it.

You play golf the way it was supposed to be played, and some Japanese knocks in a 128-yarder from the ankle-deep ruff on you. The gods of Golf somewhere are helpless with mirth.

SPEAKING OF the Japanese, it was not so many years ago, before Pearl Harbor, that the technicians of New England's small-tool industry used to tell an illustrative story. It seems the micrometer scientists, in an effort to impress their Japanese counterparts, had sent to Japan a marvel of Yankee ingenuity: a common pin with the Lord's Prayer inscribed on the head of it, a jewel of miniaturization.

The Japanese sent that pin back with a little fine hole drilled right down through the center of it, a feat at least doubly impressive.

I bring this up because Isao Aoki is the first Japanese ever to win a golf tournament on the American tour.

He won't be the last. I have a feeling that the U.S. golf tour is shortly going to have this fine little hole drilled right down through the center of it, and our major events soon will be taken over by a flood of these little Japanese compacts, who play a very economical game, in particular from 126 yards – in city driving, that is.

Pacemaker doesn't keep teenager from running

Kevin Callahan gained recognition as a top-flight competitor when he performed for his high school cross-country track team last fall, but he jumped his biggest hurdle when he ran around the block this week. A 15-year-old track star with Highland Park High School, Kevin ran for the first time Tuesday night with his new pacemaker. "It was really great," Kevin said Wednesday. "The doctors said I could still run fast, and I did." The pacemaker was implanted in January after doctors at Presbyterian Hospital here discovered the youth's heart was pumping blood irregularly. The problem had caused him to black out and collapse three times since November...

Kelly paces St. John's past Connecticut

Redmen rebound from 17-point loss to Boston College

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

By The Associated Press

Leave it up to Lou Carnesecca to put a basketball game in perspective.

"Their Kelley was out — and our Kelly was in," said St. John's colorful coach.

With Connecticut's leading scorer, Earl Kelley, out of action with a sprained right ankle, Bob Kelly of St. John's scored 20 points, dished out seven assists and made seven steals to lead the sixth-ranked Redmen to a 98-78 victory over the Huskies in a Big East game Thursday night.

Kelly had been averaging less than three shots a game this season. But Thursday night, he took nine. He was also having problems with his free throws. But Thursday night, he was 10-for-10 from the foul line.

"All along, Lou's been telling me, 'You have to shoot more,' " Kelly said. "Tonight I got the ball in a lot of great situations. It was easy for me to score."

THE REDMEN rebounded from a 17-point loss to Boston College Tuesday night.

"It was important for us to win this game, after having such a bad game against BC," Carnesecca said. "You want to bounce back and we did. There was still one part of the game I wasn't happy about, however — turnovers."

The Redmen endured 22 turnovers.

Chris Mullin was the high scorer for St. John's with 27 points. The Redmen never trailed, leading by as much as 24 points at one stage, to boost their record to 21-3. Bruce Kuczenski led Connecticut with 17 points, followed by Vernon Giscombe with 15.

In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 10 UCLA whipped Stanford 99-86; No. 12 Missouri held off Kansas 74-69 and No. 20 Ohio State walloped Northwestern 71-55.

Top Twenty

Darren Daye scored 18 points and Brad Wright added 15 to lead UCLA to an easy victory over Stanford.

The Bruins, 18-3, displayed a balanced attack with seven players scoring in double figures. Kenny Fields and Rod Foster had 14 points apiece and Ralph Jackson, Michael Holton and Gary Maloncon scored 10 each.

Greg Cavener scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds to help Missouri beat Kansas. Missouri broke open a close game in the last three minutes as Cavener scored nine of his points.

Cavener had been shooting only 58 percent from the free throw line this year. But he hit five key free throws in the late stages for the Tigers.

"He made them when we had to have them," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "We thought about taking him out of the game when we went to the half-court offense late in the game, but he hung tough and he was the one who made them when we needed them."

Tony Campbell scored 21 points and Ohio State pulled away from Northwestern in the second half.Campbell hit seven of 15 field goal attempts, seven straight free throws and collected eight rebounds before leaving the game with more than five minutes to play and the Buckeyes owning a 62-42 cushion.

Jim Stack, whose three-point play at the buzzer beat Ohio State in their first game this season, led the Wildcats with 21 points.

"Defense, especially by our guards, was the difference in the second half," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "We cut down their penetration. We just thought about defense in the first half."

Others

In other action, Derek Harper scored 25 points to lead Illinois to a 91-71 victory over Michigan; Russell Cross scored 31 points and outscored Michigan State 7-1 during a stretch in the closing four minutes as Purdue defeated the Spartans 61-55; Virginia Commonwealth, led by Calvin Duncan and Randy Corker, hit 20 consecutive free throws in the second half and rallied to defeat Alabama-Birmingham 80-68; Glenn Rivers scored 11 of his 19 points in the second half as Marquette squeaked out a 68-62 decision over Wisconsin and James Jackson scored 19 points and West Texas State withstood a trio of Southern Illinois charges for a 89-81 triumph.

Also, Felipe de las Pozas scored a career-high 30 points to lead The Citadel to an 83-80 overtime victory over Western Carolina; Steve Taylor's field goal with 2:46 left gave Tennessee Tech its first lead of the game and its winning basket in a 66-65 win over Austin Peay; Voise Winters scored 20 points and dished out 10 assists to lead Bradley to an 82-56 win over Indiana State; Troy Lee Mikell scored 22 points as East Tennessee State tripped Marshall 86-82; Mike O'Reilly hit two free throws after time had expired in the second overtime as George Washington defeated Rhode Island 84-82 and Steve Harris' 20 points led Tulsa over Creighton 67-65.

Cummings paces Clippers to victory

NBA

By The Associated Press

As Terry Cummings gets better and better, so do the San Diego Clippers.

The brilliant rookie scored 37 points, his National Basketball Association high, and added 15 rebounds as the Clippers rolled to a 112-102 victory over the Golden State Warriors Thursday night.

The triumph improved San Diego's record since Christmas Day to 14-13 after a 4-23 start. In that same span, Cummings was named NBA Rookie of the Month in January with a 23.5-point average and has been even more impressive in February with a 27.7 norm.

"In basketball, for me, it's not enough to be one of the best," Cummings said. "I want to be the best."

In other NBA games, New York beat Cleveland 108-92, Denver tripped New Jersey 117-108, Detroit edged Houston 113-110, Los Angeles bombed Dallas 127-110 and Portland defeated Boston 121-114.

San Diego Coach Paul Silas says that one secret to Cummings' success is that the Clippers' other starting forward, 6-foot-9 Tom Chambers, forces other teams to use their small forwards to guard Cummings.

Silas said Cummings, also 6-9, "can score on anybody, and he works so hard. He's quick, so he can go around bigger guys and he can outmuscle the smaller guys. He's almost impossible to stop."

"I guess I'm the biggest 'small forward' in the league," Cummings said. "The bigger forwards usually have to guard Tom Chambers, and that puts smaller guys on me. We have an awfully big front line. We give a lot of teams a lot of trouble now."

Chambers scored 16 points and center Bill Walton had 12 points and eight assists to complement Cummings, who scored 13 points in the final period to establish his season high. Previously, he had 34 points on two occasions.

The Clippers led 80-74 after three quarters and built a 13-point lead late in the game, although Golden State pulled to within six points in the final minute.

The Warriors were led in scoring by center Joe Barry Carroll, with 30 points, and guard Ron Brewer, who had 27.

Lakers 127, Mavericks 110

Los Angeles had lost twice in Dallas this season on last-second Mavericks' shots, but the Lakers left no doubt about the outcome this time as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and Norm Nixon and Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 25 each.

Los Angeles, which outrebounded the Mavericks 55-39, outscored Dallas 27-17 in the fourth period by hitting 12 of 14 shots in the quarter. The Mavericks managed only six baskets in 19 shots in the period.

"The Lakers were upset about losing to us and they were out to get us," said Mark Aguirre, who led Dallas with 22 points.

Nuggets 117, Nets 108

Alex English hit 15 of 17 free throws and had 33 points and 14 rebounds to lift Denver over New Jersey.

Kiki Vandeweghe added 28 points for the Nuggets, who came back to beat the Nets one night after they had trailed Philadelphia by 32 points at halftime and lost by 21.

"We seem more capable of winning after a poor effort," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We'll be in the hunt for the playoffs if we play like this every night. If we could only respond to wins this way. Unless adversity gets bad enough, we're too nice."

Trail Blazers 121, Celtics 114

Kenny Carr scored 26 points, 10 of them in the final period, as Portland handed Boston its first loss to a Pacific Division team this season.

Jim Paxson, who added 25 points for the Blazers, had eight during a 12-0 run that gave Portland its biggest lead, 84-66, with 7:47 left in the third period. The Celtics, who got 36 points from center Robert Parish, got within one point twice in the fourth quarter, but never were able to pull even.

Pistons 113, Rockets 110

John Long and Terry Tyler each had three baskets as Detroit outscored Houston 28-16 down the stretch to overcome a 10-point deficit in the final minutes.

The Pistons' run included 10 straight points after Houston led 103-99 with four minutes remaining.

Tyler finished with 25 points to lead Detroit, while Elvin Hayes paced the Rockets with 24.

Knicks 108, Cavaliers 92

New York defeated Cleveland for the 18th straight time in the last three years as Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 25 points.

One NBA owner hinting he'd like to see a strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Although at least one owner is hinting National Basketball Association owners would be better off if the players went on strike, the official league line is that a walkout would hurt the sport.

Sam Schulman, owner of the Seattle SuperSonics, said Thursday he would relish a players' strike because it "would enable us to return things to normalcy."

"I dare them to strike," Schulman said. "The players are overpaid."

An NBA spokesman, responding to Wednesday's announcement by players association general counsel Larry Fleisher that a strike was possible if a collective bargaining agreement is not reached by April 1, said, "We think a strike would do great harm to the sport."

The spokesman added that the league believes the best hope for a settlement is for the players to agree to a revenue-sharing plan "to help ensure the stability of the league."

IN A written memo, Brian McIntyre, director of public relations for the league, said that NBA players average $246,000 a year. Since the previous collective bargaining agreement expired last June, McIntyre said, "the NBA and its teams have continued to provide every each and every benefit previously given to the players under the prior agreement."

Kings' Triple Crown Line at best in tie with Wings

NHL

By The Associated Press

They're called the Triple Crown Line and they are the crown jewels for the Los Angeles Kings.

Thursday night, the forward unit of center Marcel Dionne, right wing Dave Taylor and left wing Charlie Simmer was at its sparkling best, combining for all five goals in the Kings 5-5 National Hockey League deadlock with the Detroit Red Wings.

Dionne scored three times and set up Taylor's two goals, while Simmer added three assists in the come-from-behind tie for L.A. Dionne's power-play score with 2:07 remaining produced the tie.

Dionne, Taylor and Simmer have accounted for 30 goals and 38 assists in 13 games since Taylor's return on Jan. 18 from a broken wrist.

"I think since Taylor has come back and got a few games under his belt the line is really playing well," said Kings Coach Don Perry. "We knew they were going to put a checking line on them, but if that's all the other team is doing, they're not going to have any offensive threats."

Dionne scored three goals for the 24th time in his career, the most for any active NHL player. Doing it in Detroit, where he played for four seasons, made it extra special for the veteran center, who was booed by the Red Wings fans.

"I would come back here any time," he said. "The fans are great here, I've said that all along."

Elsewhere, it was Minnesota 6, Quebec 3; the New York Islanders 4, Pittsburgh 1; Philadelphia 7, Edmonton 3; Hartford 4, Montreal 1, and Toronto 6, St. Louis 3.

The Triple Crown Line was the NHL's most dangerous until injuries ripped it apart two seasons ago. First Simmer broke his leg and missed much of last season. Then Taylor went down this year.

But the trio is back together and back on stride, taking the Kings right along. LA ended a four-game road trip with a 2-1-1 record.

"That's the best road trip we've had$in years," said Perry. "It came at a time when we needed a lift mentally more than anything else. We'd really like to try to overcome (third place) Winnipeg, not just make the playoffs."

While the Kings trail the Jets by four points and are two up on last-place Vancouver in the Smythe, the Red Wings stand fourth in the Norris Division, only one point in front of Toronto.

Detroit Coach Nick Polano, who saw Mark Lofthouse and John Ogrodnick each score twice for his team, was livid with referee Wally Harris for calling an interference penalty on defenseman Greg Smith with 2:26 left.

"It was the worst call in the history of sports," Polano fumed."We played hard and we played well enough to win — and the referee took it away from us."

North Stars 6, Nordiques 3

Rookie Brian Bellows and veteran Willi Plett each scored twice for Minnesota to offset two goals by Michel Goulet of Quebec, who now has 45. The North Stars have lost only once 13 games.

"They said I had the worst shot in the league," Bellows said of the reaction by his teammates to his shot. "I was holding the stick wrong. You do something for 10 years and it's hard to adjust. I just stayed after practice and worked on it with a couple of the guys."

"I'm glad I didn't come in here as a goal scorer. I never scored 50 goals in the juniors."

Maple Leafs 6, Blues 3

Toronto downed St. Louis for the second straight night and moved within a point of Detroit in the battle for the final playoff spot in the Norris Division. A pair of Czechoslovakian expatriates — Miroslav Frycer and Peter Ihnacak — and Swedish defenseman Borje Salming led the way. Frycer had two goals and an assist, Ihnacak a goal and two assists and Salming three assists. It was Toronto's second road victory this season.

Flyers 7, Oilers 3

Mark Howe set up three goals, Darryl Sittler collected an assist to boost him into a tie with Frank Mahovlich for 19th place on the all-time scoring list, and rookie goalie Bob Froese remained unbeaten in the NHL. Froese, 10-0-1, stopped 21 shots and is off to the best start by a first-year goalie since Bill Durnan went 11-0-3 in 1943-44.

Everyone credited the Philadelphia defense for the victory.

"They cut me off at the net," said Wayne Gretzky, who had two assists.

PGA longshot holds San Diego Open lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jon Chaffee, a tour longshot who spent last year as an assistant golf pro in Minnesota, was at a career crossroads when he returned for another try last month.

"This is my fifth year," said Chaffee, 27, who lost his qualifying card in 1982. "I had better make the top 125 this year or find something else to do."

Chaffee, currently ranked 150th in money earnings with $827, got the spurt of the confidence he needed Thursday. A 7-under-par 65, one shy of the course record, gave him a one-stroke lead going into today's second round of the $300,000 Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open.

"I did what everyone hopes to do on the North Course — and that's play the par 5s well," said Chaffee, who eagled two of the par 5s and birdied the other two during a bogey-free round.

His first eagle came on the 499-yard 18th hole, where he put a 1-iron within three feet. On the final hole, No. 9, he belted a 3-iron to within 15 feet and sank the putt.

Three months ago, Chaffee was among six golfers who tied for 45th and earned a qualifying card by one stroke after a six-round qualifying tournament in Ponte Vedra, Fla.

Fifteen golfers were within three strokes of the Austin, Minn., native after Thursday's opening round. Among the quartet was Ben Crenshaw, who is attempting a comeback after a 1982 collapse.

Crenshaw, 31, said his problems last year — he finished 83rd with $54,227 — forced him to make changes.

"It was time for rebuilding," he said. "I was hitting the ball too stiff legged and my body took over at the top."

Since making modifications, he has rediscovered the form that propelled him to fifth place on the money list in 1979 and 1980. He had six birdies Thursday.

Currently 12th with $37,963, Crenshaw was third in the Hawaiian Open last week, his best finish since winning the Anheuser Busch Classic in 1980.

Tied with Crenshaw at 66 were Tom Jenkins, Scott Simpson and Bruce Fleisher.

At 5-under 67 were Bob Gilder, Barry Jaeckel and Gary Mccord. Eight players were three shots off the lead, including Tom Kite, Lon Hinkle, D.A. Weibring and Bill Calfee, who fired their 68s on the more demanding 7,002-yard South Course.

Chaffee's round came on the 6,667-yard North Course, where 36 of the 58 players broke par. Both courses are par 72s.

Defending champion Johnny Miller was five strokes back and Tom Watson, out to become the first three-time winner in San Diego, was among 19 tied at even par.

Arnold Palmer, a two-time winner of the tournament, had a 73.

Major league championship to be best of seven series

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball's championship series, which determines the World Series teams, will be expanded to a best four-of-seven event this year if the players' union approves, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Thursday.

Since the American and National League Championship Series were introduced in 1969, they have been a best three-of-five series.

Kuhn said baseball's executive council made the decision to switch at a meeting here Wednesday.

"It's the first we heard of it," saids Arthur Schack, administrator for the Major League Baseball Players Association. "We'll have to study it. Otherwise, we have no comment."

Kuhn, chairman of the 11-man committee, said in a statement: "It is the feeling of the Council that the time has arrived to take this step. It is not an overnight decision. There has been a great deal of sentiment for some time and that feeling continues to grow.

"One reason that seems to stand out is that after playing 162 games to determine division championships, a best four-of-seven series would be a fairer way to decide league championships. It is a better test of team strength, especially the pitching."

The league series would be identical to the World Series format, also a best-of-seven. The first two games in each league would be played in the home stadium of one team, the next three in the other team's stadium and the last two would return to the site of the first two games.

If the new setup is approved, the league series would start on Tuesday in at least one league, Kuhn said. The World Series would return to a Saturday start with Game 7 eight days later.

Steelers' Ham retires

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Linebacker Jack Ham, part of the "Steel Curtain" defense that brought the Pittsburgh Steelers four Super Bowls, retired Thursday to pursue his off-season job as a coal salesman.

"I'm not playing as well as I did," the 12-year veteran said at a news conference. "I'm my own worst critic. I watch the films. They don't lie."

Ham, 34, will work as a salesman for a Pittsburgh-based coal supplier to factories, mills and utilities in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and New York.

An All-Pro for eight straight years through 1981, Ham said the dislocation of a bone in his left foot in 1979 slowed his play until he realized last season "that it probably was going to be my last. I couldn't get the push off, I couldn't get the explosion I wanted, especially going from my left to my right."

He played with Steeler defenders such as Jack Lambert and the retired L.C. Greenwood and "Mean" Joe Greene and said he was quitting after 12 years because "I'm not playing as well as I did."

Ham's retirement further reduces the Super Bowl-era teams. Now only nine active Steelers played in all four championship games and only Lambert, linebacker Loren Toews and safety Donnie Shell remain from the once-formidable Steel Curtain defense. Wide receiver Lynn Swann retired last month.

Ham, a native of nearby Johnstown, played for Penn State and was a second-round draft pick by the Steelers in 1971. He won a starting spot in his rookie season and eventually played 178 of 190 games.

He was known for his speed, reflexes, mobility and ability to read offensive plays but, playing outside linebacker rather than in the middle, he won less acclaim than Lambert.

Nevertheless, he had 32 regular-season interceptions, the third highest by a pro linebacker, and twice led NFL linebackers in interceptions.Steelers President Dan Rooney said Ham "set the standard on how linebacking in the National Football League should be played."

Ham said the highlight of his career was two interceptions during the Steelers' 24-13 victory over the Oakland Raiders in the 1974 American Conference championship game, which preceded the Steelers' first Super Bowl victory, 16-6 over the Minnesota Vikings.

Arkansas favored to win, SWC indoor track meet

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Arkansas is favored to defend its Southwest Conference indoor track and field championship Friday night but the individual spotlight will be on Texas Christian's Phillip Epps, a wide receiver for the Green Bay Packers who will run in the 60-yard dash where he has world class times.

Epps is a fifth-year senior but still is eligible for track under NCAA rules.

In the collegiate division of the recent Dallas Times Herald Invitational meet, Epps posted the fifth fastest time ever in the 60-yard dash — 6.07 seconds.

The world record of 6.02 was established by Carl Lewis that night.

Epps ran a time of 6.10 seconds at the Hardy Invitational Meet in Oklahoma City Saturday night.

Epps' primary threat will come from Texas' Herkie Walls, who will making his first indoor appearance of the year, Baylor's Bruce Davis, and Vince Courville of Rice.

TCU Coach Bubba Thornton said Epps "was beaten out of his blocks at Oklahoma City and still ran down Davis and Courville. He knows he doesn't have to have a great start to win a race. His confidence is really high."

The SWC will crown its first women's track and field champion in this meet. It's the 10th year for the men.

Arkansas returns athletes who scored 75 and one-half of its 129 points last year.

Texas was the runnerup with 87 points. SMU had 54, Houston 51 and Texas A&M 45.

The Razorbacks' victory in 1982 was the second leg on their triple crown of SWC running championships in cross-country, indoor, and outdoor.

"Houston, Texas and SMU will be the teams to beat this year," said Coach John McDonnell of the Razorbacks.

Ten of last year's 13 individual championships were won by upperclassmen who are eligible to defend their titles. Five current record holders return.

The meet is sponsored by the Fort Worth Coaches Association and is run in conjunction with the Fort Worth High School Indoor Meet.

Arkansas will be without two key performers, two-mile specialist Tony Leonard, who broke a toe in the Sooner Invitational in Oklahoma City and Bill DuPont, who was ruled out for the season because of a blood clot in his right shoulder.

GM, Toyota sign pact; Should create many jobs

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — After signing a pact with Japan's Toyota Motor Corp. to build cars in the United States, the General Motors' chairman said he will "sit down and discuss the labor situation" with the union representing thousands of laid-off autoworkers.

GM Chairman Roger Smith and Toyota Chairman Eiji Toyoda signed memorandums of understanding Thursday at an idle GM plant, as about 350 United Auto Workers union members milled about outside. Nearly all lost their jobs when the plant ended production March 4.

The pact to build 200,000 cars a year is expected to create 12,000 new jobs in the United States, officials said.

"I am quite hopeful that the venture will not only offer the high-quality and fuel-efficient cars to American consumers but also provide very good employment opportunities," Toyoda said.

The agreement should "set an example of new industrial cooperation that may give a solution to the trade problems that exist between our two countries," he said.

Neither Toyoda nor Smith, however, offered assurances that workers with seniority would be rehired.

The new company, said Smith, would "start from scratch without any legal obligations to anyone. With the new venture, neither of us have wanted to handicap (the pact) with new legal impediments."

But he said officials will "sit down and discuss the labor situation with the UAW."

About 3,000 people are expected to work at the GM plant, which will include a new stamping plant adjacent to the existing 2.9 million square-foot structure.

Another 9,000 jobs would be created in related industries.

At a Detroit news conference, UAW head Douglas Fraser said Smith had told him the UAW would represent the Fremont plant workers.

Fraser greeted the Toyota-GM pact with a prepared statement: "We are certain we can maintain a constructive and harmonious collective bargaining relationship resulting in a highly productive and efficient venture producing quality cars for American consumers."

The peaceful gathering of unemployed union members at the plant gates seemed a bittersweet reunion for the workers who have no assurance of jobs when the plant reopens under new management in the summer of 1984.

"They are going to have to take some of us back or they're going to have picketing," warned 41-year-old Nancy Austin of Union City, a GM worker for 10 years. Her husband, Kennerd, worked at the plant for 19 years.

Raymond Lill, 42, a GM worker for 21 years, mused that the American workers could learn much from the Japanese about efficient production techniques.

"I believe it's time to learn new techniques, to learn to do jobs differently," Lill said. "There's a whole lot to be gained for everybody provided we're not sold down the river."

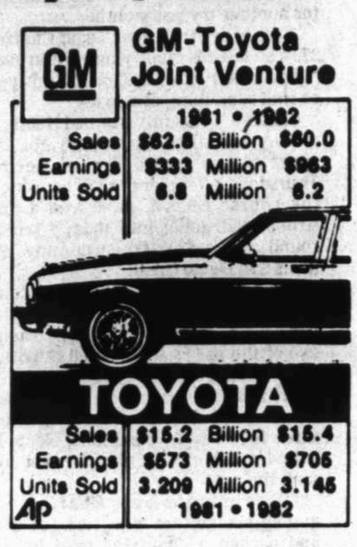
If that happened, he warned, "there'd be real trouble."

The 12-year agreement calls for GM, the world's largest automaker, and Toyota, the No. 3 automaker, to manufacture 200,000 cars a year, Smith said, noting that the agreement will be in its second year when production starts and will have about 10 years remaining to run.

Details of the memorandums of understanding signed Thursday are to be negotiated later, and Smith said there has been no decision on what will occur after the contract lapses.

The U.S. Federal Trade Commission must determine, however, if the agreement between GM and Toyota violates antitrust laws.

"We don't have to break any laws to do what we want to do here," Smith told reporters, adding that the agreement was drawn with recognition of the trade laws in the United States and Japan.



Dole didn't tell 'em what they wanted to hear

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a little bit of history in the making. A politician didn't tell them what they wanted to hear.

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, went before leaders of the American Bankers Association Thursday and told them they've been irresponsible, unfair and misleading in trying to win repeal of tax withholding from interest and dividends.

Further, he said as his audience sat in silence, if bankers are so concerned about fairness, they will have a chance, starting March 11, to explain to his committee why they should continue receiving tax preferences that make the banking industry one of the lowest-taxed in the country.

"The tactics used by many banks, savings and loans and credit unions have reached a historic low, at least if one judges institutions like banks by the standards of trustworthiness and responsibility they hold out as their calling card," Dole said.

David Hastings of Richmond, Va., who heads the association's task force on withholding, said the bankers were persuaded "not in the least" by Dole remarks.

BNOC proposes $3 cut in price of North Sea oil

LONDON (AP) — The state-owned British National Oil Corp. today proposed a $3 cut in the price of North Sea crude oil.

The new price of $30.50 a barrel, retroactive to Feb. 1, was proposed in telex messages sent to oil companies and customers.

The change will become effective once the companies accept the recommendation.

In the United States, meanwhile, more oil companies — including industry leaders Exxon Corp. and Mobil Corp. — joined other refiners in cutting by $1 a barrel the price they will pay for domestic crude oil.

The British oil corporation made no formal announcement today, but government Energy Department spokesman Stephen Chantrell confirmed the price cut. He said crude oil is selling for around $30 a barrel elsewhere and said it was "nonsense" to suggest Britain was leading the market's downward move.

Industry sources had said they expected about $2 to be trimmed from the current British oil benchmark price of $33.50 a barrel, but other reports had predicted a $3 cut per barrel. A barrel is about 42 gallons.

The cut by British Northern Oil, which now produces about 2.2 million barrels a day, is the most significant price cut by a foreign oil producer since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed to agree on pricing and production at their emergency meeting in late January.

Any price cut by the British corporation is expected to be matched by other North Sea oil producers such as Statoil, the Norwegian state oil concern.

That would put added pressure on OPEC producers to officially cut their prices from the cartel's current benchmark price of $34 a barrel, although some OPEC members are reported already selling oil below that price.

Besides Exxon and Mobil, Gulf Oil Corp., Sun Co. Inc., Chevron, a unit of Standard Oil Co. of California, Atlantic Richfield Co. and Amoco, a unit of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), matched the $1-a-barrel cut in the price they will pay for U.S. crude that was initiated by Texaco Inc. earlier this week.

It is the second time in less than a month that domestic refiners trimmed their buying prices by $1 per barrel.

The new prices for crude depends on its quality and where it is produced, but prices for basic crudes generally now range between $29 and $30.50 a barrel.

Each $1 cut in U.S. crude oil prices generally translates to a 2½-cent drop in the retail price of a gallon of gasoline. But recent cuts may not be fully reflected at the pump, because dealers pinched by weak sales may choose to bolster their profit margins rather than cut prices.

Because of conservation and recession in several industrial nations, there is a worldwide surplus of oil, which has driven down its price over the past two years.

RRC sets oil allowable at 100 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' oil allowable once again has been set by the Railroad Commission at 100 percent of capacity, continuing a practice that has been in effect almost every month for 11 years.

The commission order Thursday covers all but 10 fields, including East Texas, which was restricted to 86 percent to avoid possible waste.

Commission Chairman Mack Wallace reported that crude oil and petroleum products imported into the United States averaged 4,547,000 barrels daily for the four weeks ending Feb. 4, down 571,000 barrels from the same period a year ago.

Major purchasers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,449,172 barrels a day in March, a decrease of 8,222 barrels daily from this month.

The commission has invited oil and gas company ewxecutives to its March 17 meeting in Midland to talk about the state of the industry.

Gas well killed

AUSTIN (AP) — A gas well blowout that was producing 26 million cubic feet of gas a day in the Panhandle has been killed, according to Railroad Commission field inspectors.

The commission said Thursday gas from Apache Corp.'s Key No. 1 well in Wheeler County (Morrow, Upper field) was not lost because a pipeline company had hooked up a line to casing not damaged in the blowout.

The well blew out Oct. 4, 1981, and on Jan. 4 of this year the commission issued an order directing Apache to kill or control the well. The blowout was stopped on Feb. 6 by pumping mud and cement into the wellbore through a relief well.

Acting on a commission order, Palo Duro Pipeline Co. had been taking the gas rather than flaring it.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 232 taxable funds)		37	7.8	7.8

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 232 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 declined $2.4 billion to $188.8 billion for the week ending February 16, 1983.

The funds' 7-day average yield increased to 7.82% from 7.77%. The funds' 30-day average yield fell slightly to 7.80% from 7.85%.

The funds' average maturity figure declined one day to 37 days following one week at 38 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Reflecting the recent uptick in short-term interest rates, the money funds' 7-day average yield rose slightly this week. In the past two weeks money fund portfolio managers have shortened the funds' average maturity figure by two days. Watch the average maturity index in coming weeks to see where money fund portfolio managers think interest rates are headed. Remember, when interest rates are rising, the funds' average maturity figure shortens. When interest rates are falling, expect the average maturity figure to lengthen.

Continuing to be a smart place for investors in 40% or higher tax brackets, tax-free money funds grew $199.5 million to $16.0 billion this week. The tax-free funds' 7-day average yield of 4.56% translates into a 9.12% yield for investors in a 50% tax bracket."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date. Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA.

Two killed in Eddy County accident

From staff and wire reports

CARLSBAD, N.M. — A natural gas well blew out as crews were trying to move the well head, throwing one man into the well's derrick and tossing another more than 40 feet, authorities say.

Jay Cope, 38, of Carlsbad, and Wayne Hicks, 34, of Hobbs, were killed in the accident Thursday seven miles south of Malaga, officials said.

The well is INEXCO's Bison Wallow Unit No. 1. It is located 1980 feet from the east, and 660 feet from the south line of section 34, township 25s, range 29 east, in Eddy County, N.M. The site is four miles north of the Texas stateline on U.S. Highway 285, and seven miles east on a dirt road. The accident occured about 2 p.m. Thursday.

Cope was the owner of Cope's Welding Service in Carlsbad. Hicks was an employee of Baber Oil Service Inc.

Workover crews were trying to move the well head from the well head assembly when the well blew, officials said.

Five men received minor scrapes and bruises, said Eddy County Chief Deputy Sheriff John Lewis.

Pressure from escaping gas seemed to have done the most damage, Lewis said. The well head was blown off the casing and a small fire erupted that was quickly snuffed by gas pressure, he said.

The well was being guarded pending the arrival of health and safety investigators, Lewis said.

Synfuel projects closer to funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 2½ years, the U.S. Synthetics Fuels Corp. say 12 projects designed to convert coal, lignite and tar sands into synthetic oil and gas are a little closer to getting federal loan guarantees or price supports.

But corporation officials said they cannot pin down a date when the agency will actually begin awarding some of the $15 billion Congress has appropriated since 1980 to help develop the industry.

Corporation Chairman Edward Noble said Thursdwy he is willing to sign non-binding letters of intent offering nearly $200 million in federal aid for two California projects if certain conditions are met.

Ralph Bayer, the agency's vice president for projects, said those letters could go out "within weeks." Once a letter of intent is sent, agency officials said, contract awards could be made within three or four months.

Thus far, no money has been awarded. And Noble has sent only two such letters, promising to help finance the Santa Rosa oil sands project in New Mexico and the First Colony peat-methanol project in North Carolina.

Noble said Thursday that negotiations with sponsors of the California tar sands and coal gasification projects have progressed to the point where he can consider signing the promises to help finance them.

In Kern County, Calif., the Hop Kern project sponsored by seven relatively small companies would get $56.7 million in loan guarantees and $20 million in price supports to build a plant aimed at extracting 6,000 barrels of crude oil a day from tar sands.

The Cool Water Gasification project, under the proposed letter of intent, would get up to $120 million in price supports over a five-year period.

The coal conversion project has several large sponsors, including Texaco, General Electric and a Japanese consortium.

Noble told the Senate Energy Committee earlier this month that the corporation anticipates spending about $7.2 billion in fiscal 1984 to help finance "about a dozen" projects.

Meanwhile, The board on Thursday moved 10 other projects into the final phase of negotiations for funds and dropped six projects from futher consideration because of technical, management, or financial shortcomings.

The 10 projects passing the agency's "maturity" criteria join 12 others for which financial aid negotiations are under way.

Those projects that advanced Thursday to the final phase of negotiations are:

The Cathedral Bluffs project in Rio Blanco County, Colo.; the KILnGAS project in East Alton, Ill.; the American Syn-Crude project in Olive Hill, Ky.; the Means Oil Shale project in Montgomery County, Ky.,; and the Keystone project in Somerset, Pa.

Also, the Chaparrosa Ranch Tar Sands project in Zavala County, Texas; the Forest Hill project in Wood County, Texas; the Enpex Syntaro project in Mavericak and Zavala counties, Texas, and the Seep Ridge amd White River projects, both in Uintah County, Utah.

The projects dropped from further consideration are: The Can-Do anthracite-gas project in Lucerne County, Pa.; the Silmon Smith oil shale project in Garfield County, Colo.; the Falcon Scienes tar sands project in Butler County, Ky.; the National Synfuels lignite-gasification project in Texas; and the Porta-Plants and Whiterocks tar sands projects at Roosevelt Utah.

The Pacific Oil Shale project in Garfield County, Colo., was withdrawn by its sponsor, Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., before Thursday's meeting.

Ex-police officer released, posts bond on charges

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Ex-police officer Lonnie Payne was released from custody Thursday after posting $5,000 bond on felony charges of abusing a prisoner during a shoplifting arrest earlier this month.

Payne, 32, was indicted Wednesday on a state civil rights statute and faces a maximum 20-year sentence and $10,000 fine. Officials — including Chief of Police Wayne Gideon — say it's the first time in memory that a Midland police officer has been indicted on a brutality complaint.

The complaint was lodged with the sheriff's department by George Benavides, a 20-year-old Odessa man arrested for allegedly attempting to steal $32 worth of meat from the M-System Food Store at Scharbauer Drive and A Street Feb. 8.

The same grand jury that indicted Payne also indicted Benavides on a misdemeanor theft charge.

Payne was suspended without pay, according to Gideon, pending the outcome of several investigations that led to his indictment. He was then stripped of his badge and gun and dismissed from the force.

He surrendered himself for processing at the county jail shortly before 11 a.m. Thursday and was released after posting bond, which was set by State District Judge Vann Culp.

A $1.2 million lawsuit against Payne and M-System has been filed by Midland attorney Sandy Torres. Payne was working as a part-time security guard for the store at the time of Benavides' arrest.

The suit and the indictment allege Payne used unnecessary force in arresting Benavides, who originally was charged with robbery. He was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for injuries allegedly suffered during the arrest.

During a press conference Thursday, Sheriff Dallas Smith said Benavides' injuries "consist of a non-displaced fracture of the second vertebra of the neck, a fracture of the nasal bone and numerous bruises of the face, neck and back."

Texas Rangers — along with the sheriff's department, the district attorney's office and the internal affairs division of the police department — investigated the complaint and helped present the case to the grand jury, according to District Attorney Vern Martin.

Commenting on the indictment, Gideon said: "No one regrets this more than I do. But we will not tolerate or condone this type of activity."

Payne, who had been with the department since July 1980, could not be reached for comment. He previously worked for the Abilene police force, has 13 years' experience in law enforcement and worked as a canine officer for the Midland force.

Promoter: Suit against Ozzy 'unconstitutional'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Ector County's ploy in trying to thwart British rock 'n' roll singer Ozzy Osbourne's scheduled March 8 performance in Odessa is "unconstitutional," contends a defendant in a federal suit against Osbourne's company and promoter.

At the bidding of Ector County commissioners, County Attorney Steven Groh last Feb. 9 filed the complaint in seeking a declaratory judgment from U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton on the rights of the parties and requested that the court "declare the...contract terminated."

The commissioners had bowed to pressure of Odessans for Decency and others who contend that Osbourne worships the devil, and in past performances has mutilated animals by allegedly biting the head off of a bat and doing other acts which some Odessans might find offensive.

Ector County is arguing that it has a right to cancel the contract and not suffer a penalty, since Osbourne's past performances have violated local ordinances and state law, including breach of contract.

In his response, promoter Randy Shelton of Stardate says he has "promoted concerts with Mr. Osbourne in the past and that none of the alleged acts in the performance have occurred and none will in the future."

The contract, which Shelton signed Jan. 10, prohibits any "illegal, indecent, obscene or immoral" act on stage during the 8 p.m. March 8 concert in the Ector County Coliseum. Ector County agreed to provide 15 security guards and one emergency medical technician.

Osbourne's company, Blizzard Productions Inc., has yet to respond to the Ector County suit.

In his defense and in showing why the contract should not be canceled, Shelton is saying that:

—Ector County's attempt to void the show is unconstitutional and is in violation of the First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech and the right of people peaceably to assemble, and the Fourteenth Amendment, which protects a person's life, liberty and property.

—Neither Shelton nor his agents "have done any acts in violation of the terms of the contract and have never threatened any future violation of the contract.

—Past Osbourne performances promoted by Shelton have not included "the alleged acts."

—Ector County's "mere claim" of Osbourne's "past alleged relevant conduct" presents no factual, reasonable and legal basis for anticipating for future "alleged relevant conduct."

In that regard, says Osbourne's promoter, Ector County "may not legally or constitutionally exercise prior restraint on defendant's First Amendment Rights to perform the concert and not susceptible to courses of action for breach of contract."

Shelton's Stardate is asking the judge to dismiss the Ector County complaint or to find that the contract is valid and binding and that any breach of the contract "would be actionable under law."

Worn flags anger duo

"It's disgraceful," Barbara Larsen seethed after she had played nine holes of golf with her partner, Rita Boe.

But it wasn't the golf game which angered her.

Rather, it was the tattered flags — Old Glory and the Texas standard — fluttering in the wind at the city's Hogan Park Golf Course. Both were about half their original sizes. They had been worn thin by the wind, sand and rain.

"It's disrespectful," Ms. Larsen steamed. "They're just pieces of cloth to those people."

Ms. Larsen she was going to drill Hogan golf pro Rex Worrell on flag care and customs but didn't get around to it; he was out of town, anyway.

"I grew up respecting the flag," she said, "...and honoring God, country and whatever comes third. I'm so disgusted, I don't know what to do."

So, she called the newspaper to share her concern. In turn, a reporter sighted the flags and confirmed the golfer's observations. The reporter called Worrell, who was unavailable; the golf course's Rick Haywood, who had retired for the day; and, finally, Wayne Kohout, the city's parks and recreation director, who answered the telephone.

"We need to follow protocol," said Kohout, who said he'd have the honored flags lowered and new ones hoisted.

And the new wavering flags may help improve Ms. Larsen's golf game, though she declined to reveal her score or handicap. The flags distracted her.

Former accounts collector files suit against MMH

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Bobby Jackson, former collector of accounts for Midland Memorial Hospital, is charging the hospital with racial discrimination in a suit filed in federal court in Midland.

He is alleging that he lost his hospital job "because of his race — black," though his immediate supervisor's reasons for his job termination were "fallacious and untrue."

Jackson, 35, on Thursday declined to say what those reasons were, but did say he had collected about $750,000 on delinquent accounts in the eight months he was a collector. Requests or demands for payment on delinquent accounts were made by letter or telephone, he said.

Jackson said he was asked to resign in November 1981, but didn't and was fired.

Jackson, who claims that his civil rights have been violated, got permission to sue the hospital from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) last November after the commission, he said, had tried to negotiate with the hospital in reinstating Jackson in the job. After that failed, the EEOC granted Jackson permission to take the hospital to court.

Ray Branson, MMH president, declined to comment on Jackson's suit. He said the hospital's policy is not to comment on active litigations.

However, Ted Kerr, the hospital's attorney, said the hospital would deny Jackson's allegations of racial discrimination and any violations of his civil rights.

Hospital letters and memos dealing with Jackson indicate that Jackson had on-going conflicts with John Harrison, the hospital's former collection supervisor. Harrison resigned his job about the time Jackson was fired.

In an open letter, dated July 31, 1981, in response to Harrison's "personnel warning memorandum," Jackson countered Harrison's "half-truths and lies." Conflicts, according to Jackson, included:

—Harrison suspected Jackson of not being on the job or on the hospital grounds. "I again informed him of my whereabouts...."

—In a sarcastic manner, Harrison "made reference to the way I dress" and commented on "my being overqualified for my job and wanted to know 'just what I was doing at MMH anyway.'"

—Jackson sensed that Harrison was trying to provoke him. "In nearly every confrontation I've had with him, I've been reminded that if I don't do this and if I don't do that, I can and will be terminated. So maybe I have been difficult to work with — Who wouldn't be? — under this type of pressure."

—Rather than getting disturbed over the hospital's collect-letter system, Jackson said he became "upset when I was told to sign letters that would make me look like a fool as a collector." Jackson said he wanted to check the letters for accuracy before signing them.

—Jackson allegedly upset other collectors. "I admit they did get upset but only because both collectors have very recently been reprimanded because of incorrect information on letters sent out with their signature(s) on them."

—Jackson admitted resting his feet on his desk. "This has happened numerous times," he wrote. "I subconsciously do it when I'm thinking about something." Jackson said what annoyed him was Harrison's demand that he remove his feet off the desk. "He literally screamed a command at me."

Dr. Piyush V. Patel explains how a cardiac catheterization can treat heart disease.

Midland doctor wants to purchase cardiac catheterization equipment

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A $500,000 purchase will crimp a Midland physician's pocketbook, but Dr. Piyush V. Patel hopes to put a dent in heart disease with the diagnostic equipment.

Patel, a cardiologist and internist, said the cardiac catheterization equipment planned for his office "is not economical for me, but is very valuable for my patients."

The equipment, used to diagnose heart disease and decide if surgery is necessary, makes it possible for the doctor to pass a catheter, a small flexible tube, through a vein in the arm or leg and into the chambers of the heart. The test is used to take blood samples, determine heart pressure and detect cardiac abnormalities. Patel will insert the fine catheter through the groin area to the heart and will view the procedure with a fluoroscope.

"It's not only a diagnostic tool, but can also be therapeutic," Patel said. "Nowadays, some diseases of the heart can be treated by doing a catheterization. A very recent technique used is putting a deflated balloon-tipped catheter into the coronary artery, placing it where the lesion is. Then, inflate the balloon, so it opens the lesion and then deflate the balloon right away."

A cardiac catheterization is a delicate, expensive test. Patel, who has additional training in invasive heart procedures, will offer the service in his office. He said the test can be done for half of what it costs in the hospital.

"It's a fairly safe procedure that I can do on an outpatient basis."

Before a new medical service or equipment costing more than $400,000 can be brought into the community, a certificate of need application is usually filed with the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin. The THFC is charged with ensuring that health services and facilities are made available to all citizens of the state in an orderly and economical manner.

"It's not only a diagnostic tool, but can also be therapeutic. "Nowadays, some diseases of the heart can be treated by doing a catheterization. A very recent technique used is putting a deflated balloon-tipped catheter into the coronary artery, placing it where the lesion is."

Because this equipment is for Patel's private practice, he has requested the commission rule the application is not necessary.

A THFC hearing is scheduled today to decide whether the equipment can be acquired without the certificate of need application procedure.

"I have requested Midland Memorial Hospital (to purchase this equipment), but at this time they don't have any space and don't have any plans," Patel said. "I'm the only one who is qualified (in Midland) to do this test. I have so many patients who need this test and they ask me to do it, but I must send them where it is available.

"I'm prepared to pay part of the cost (with MMH), but they do not have any plans for this kind of procedure," he said. "I'm prepared to run in loss, because this will be beneficial to the patients."

If the THFC rules in his favor, Patel said the equipment could arrive by the end of March. Then, he will do some remodeling and if "there's not too much paperwork for that, I'll be able to start offering the service by this summer."

Meanwhile, Patel has been granted medical privileges at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

"My patients have been going to Odessa, Houston and Lubbock," he said. "Now that I have privileges in Odessa, my patients will getting their test done there by me."

Owner of Midland publishing firm faces temporary injunction hearing

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

The owner of a Midland publishing company faces a temporary injunction hearing in San Angelo's 119th District Court today in a suit filed by the state attorney general's office.

In an original petition filed Dec. 29, 1982, the attorney general charged John Stumpff, owner of Lance Publications, with violating seven sections of the state's Consumer Protection Act.

The plaintiff charges that Stumpff has "engaged in false, misleading and deceptive acts or practices" while in the business of publishing tourist guides for several Texas cities, including Midland, San Angelo, Lubbock, Corpus Christi, Austin, Laredo, El Paso and San Antonio.

The suit charges that Stumpff:

—Failed to publish or distribute the directories within a time period promised or within a reasonable time afterward.

—Accepted advertisers' money but failed to provide the directory and failed to refund the money.

—Represented to advertisers and others that his company was a member of the Better Business Bureau (BBB).

—Failed to inform advertisers and others that he failed to publish or distribute previous directories.

—Told advertisers and others that his company conducted valid readership studies for the directories when no such studies were conducted.

The attorney general's consumer protection division is authorized to seek $2,000 in civil penalties per violation, with penalties not to exceed $10,000.

Stumpff told The Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sept. 30 that printing delays, over-optimistic promises made by ad salespeople and a "cash-flow problem" have contributed to delays in publishing and distributing several directories.

He said the publications — including directories in San Angelo, Corpus Christi, Lafayette, La., and Midland — would be published and distributed.

In September 1982, a San Angelo BBB spokeswoman said Stumpff had indicated a directory, San Angelo Forte, would be published by August 1981. At the same time, a Corpus Christi BBB spokesman said a Corpus Christi Forte was also promised by August 1981.

The phone at Lance Publications, 808 W. Missouri Ave., has been disconnected or is no longer in service. Stumpff could not be reached for comment.

Victoria Esson, assistant attorney general in the Lubbock office, said Stumpff was already bound by a temporary restraining order during a previous hearing.

Pending the outcome of Friday's hearing, Stumpff could be served with a civil penalties and a permanent injunction.

White: He'd rather have lower bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he would rather have lower utility bills for Texas consumers than a top credit rating for the state's bonds.

White also told a Thursday news conference he thought hardened criminals should be securely confined but he did not want to waste money building "Cadillac prisons."

The governor was asked if the recent shakeup in the Public Utility Commission, when two of the three commissioners resigned, would affect Texas' credit rating.

"It's very simple for a monopoly to make money. The consumer has no alternative, so don't let the bond ratings be the indicator of the vitality of the industry," White said.

He said he was pleased to hear that bonding companies which rate the quality of utility companies had taken Texas out of first place in being the least effective regulator among other states.

"That's a step in the right direction," the governor said. "I want them to say that Texas is the most effective regulator. When you do that, you'll have a healthy utility industry and you'll have a consumer, be he homeowner or businessman, that can afford their electric bills."

White also said he was against an $81 million emergency appropriaition to build new prisons. The emergency request by Prison Director Jim Estelle is in addition to the original $1.5 billion prison system budget request.

Estelle said Wednesday the Legislature would either have to pay for the prisons or re-think tougher sentencing laws that are sending more prisoners to Huntsville.

"I would oppose the repeal of these measures," White said. "People who use firearms in the commission of a crime should be dealt with most harshly. I think they are kparticularly the individuals tha need to be placed in the penitentiary and out of society."

Former MMH collector files suit

"I feel there is a racial problem surfacing," Jackson wrote. "Mr. Harrison has made several errors in the Collection Department that could have been avoided had he only listened to some suggestions made by me instead of trying too hard to prove me wrong.

"I have as a result of this been under fire and the object of John Harrison's resentment. Others in our department have left the grounds. I wonder why nothing has been said. Could it be because I'm black?"

In November 1982, Jackson submitted a letter to the hospital's grievance committee, which he said was a committee of one: Branson. "He was the grievance committee."

In the letter, Jackson mentioned a physical contact between Harrison and him. He said his former supervisor called him a "—— nigger."

"I want to be reinstated with a raise, receive my service time, receive pay for time lost, all negative comments (concerning this incident) removed from my personnel records, no hassles if I'm reinstated, and a written apology."

Midlander remains in critical condition

A 27-year-old Midland man remains in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital today after suffering an electrical shock in an industrial accident at the hospital Thursday morning.

Keith Shaffstall of 308 Mariana, Apt. A, was installing equipment in the hospital's X-ray room when he suffered a severe electrical shock about 9:50 a.m. Thursday, according to MMH Public Relations Director Arlene Strickland.

Shaffstall, who works for the Dallas-based Gilbert X-Ray Co., was working alone and was discovered lying unconscious on the X-ray room floor by a radiation technologist.

He has since regained consciousness and is showing signs of progress in the hospital's intensive care unit, according to an MMH spokeswoman this morning. It is not yet known how the accident occurred.

Lipizzan stallion dies

BIG SPRING (AP) — One of the six Royal Lipizzan Stallions, billed as the greatest equine extravanganza in the world, collapsed and died of an apparent heart attack at a performance here.

Hank Thompson, a local veterinarian, examined the 15-year-old animal after it fell to the ground about a third of the way through its act Wednesday. Thompson said the animal apparently experienced heart failure, but an autopsy will be performed.

State officials given 50-year water plan

AUSTIN (AP) — More than a year of work and 700 pages later, state water officials have been presented with a 50-year water plan that offers the same old dry picture.

"We do not have a solution to all the projected water demand quantities in the state," engineer Herbert Grubb told the Texas Water Development Board on Thursday.

Grubb, the board's director of planning and development, said conservation is more important than ever, but Texans cannot save their way to plentiful water.

The only hope, he told the board, is importing water from other states.

"We have identified surplus water, but the neighboring states have not volunteered to allow us to secure it."

The 700-page report — entitled "Water for Texas, Planning for the Future" — gives a basin-by-basin glimpse of the future. The report says it will cost $40.2 billion to try to keep up with the growing demand and shrinking supply of water.

Texans will get to comment on the report at hearings around the state in coming months. The board could revise the report after the hearings.

The state's first long-range water plan was produced in 1968. The report released Thursday updates the 1968 report and plugs in newer data.

"There's a lot more emphasis on conservation than there was in the past," Grubb said.

He told reporters that the biggest waste of water for household use is watering of lawns. However, he said household conservation can only make a small dent in the overall problem. In 1980, agriculture accounted for 72 percent of the water used in Texas.

"The big payoff is in agriculture," he said. "By 2020, even if conservation is fully implemented, the water (in the High Plains) would support only 70 percent of the 5.7 million acres now under irrigation."

Texas' major cities face crises before the end of the century, according to the report. Even if Houston spends $1 billion on new projects, the city could run out of water bu the mid-1990s.

Men charged with possession of marijuana released

Two men charged with felony possession of marijuana have been released from custody after posting $7,500 bond each set Thursday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Twenty-one-year-old Gregory Lynn Ward of 117 S. Dewberry and Curtis Scott Lemons, 22, of Garfendale, were arrested Wednesday night by city police during a burigary investigation in the 200 block of Eisenhower Street.

A large but unspecified amount of marijuana allegedly was found in the suspects' pickup truck. Judge Pine today said the amount "exceeded five pounds."

In theft and burglary complaints, a neighbor reported that the Holly Bird Jr. residence at 3606 Hyde Park Ave. was broken into and several thousands of dollars worth of jewelry, cash and personal items taken. The Birds are out of town, according to police, and no exact figure could be immediately placed on the loss.

Sergio Ochoa, a 17-year-old student at Lee High School, reported the theft of $1,400 in cash from his locker at the school's field house Thursday. Ochoa, who plays baseball for Lee High, said the money was to be used to purchase a car.

And $1,595 worth of stereo equipment was reported stolen Sunday from the Christian Life Center at 2901 W. Kansas Ave. The theft was not discovered until Thursday.

Edwin Wilson faces 25 years in prison if labeled 'dangerous, special offender'

HOUSTON (AP) — Former CIA agent and convicted arms smuggler Edwin Wilson, accused of plotting to hire the killing of two federal prosecutors, faces 25 years in prison if he is declared a "dangerous, special offender."

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling scheduled a 1:30 p.m. hearing today on a motion by government prosecutors for the designation.

Wilson was convicted Feb. 6 on charges of conspiring to transport explosives, filing false customs documents, exporting without a license and illegally transporting hazardous materials.

He was accused of plotting to ship 21 tons of the plastic explosive C-4 to Libya in October 1977. The explosives were placed in five-gallon cans that were topped off with drilling mud and labeled as drilling mud, a substance used to lubricate and cool oil well drilling bits.

Shortly after the verdict was returned, prosecutors asked Sterling to declare Wilson a "dangerous special offender," which would boost the sentence from 17 years to 25 years, eight more than the maximum. Wilson also could be fined up to $145,000.

The 54-year-old Wilson was convicted on a similar charge in Alexandria, Va., in November and sentenced to 15 years and a $200,000 fine.

He also faces trial in Washington, D.C., on charges of conspiring to murder a Libyan defector and to train terrorists for Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

Prosecutors contend Wilson in November trying to sell $1.25 million in murder "contracts" for two assistant U.S. attorneys and six witnesses against him.

Wilson and his 22-year-old son, Erik, were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury in New York on charges they hatched the murder-for-hire plot while the elder Wilson was being held in the federal jail in lower Manhattan.

Erik Wilson was accused of passing a $9,800 down payment on the murder contract to a supposed "hit man," who was actually an FBI agent. His bail was set at $500,000, and he was ordered to surrender his passport and remain in the city.

Charges against the Wilsons include conspiracy to murder, attempted murder, criminal solicitation, obstruction of justice, witness tampering and retaliation against witnesses.

Conspiracy to murder the prosecutors carries a possible life sentence on conviction and the other most serious charges, conspiracy and attempted murder, are punishable by up to 25 years.

Wilson's alleged hit list contained the names of E. Lawrence Barcella and Carol Bruce, the assistant U.S. attorneys preparing the case against him in Washington. Wilson allegedly was prepared to pay $250,000 for the deaths of each prosecutor.

The indictment said a price of $500,000 was put on the head of Francis Heydt, identified by authorities as a former partner who Wilson says cheated him out of $3.5 million.

For five past or prospective witnesses against him, Wilson offered $50,000 each, the government said.

They were Ernest Keiser, who helped lure Wilson out of Libya to his arrest last June; Jerome Brower, an explosives dealer; Reginald Slocombe, a Wilson associate; Edward Coughlin, Wilson's accountant, and Rafael Quintero, a Cuban and former associate of Wilson.

2 flounder fillets (about ½ pound)
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons fine crumbs made from round buttery crackers

Line a very shallow baking pan, into which the fillets will just fit, with foil; butter foil. Arrange fillets in a single layer; sprinkle each with 1 tablespoon cheese. In a 6-inch skillet melt butter; stir in crumbs; sprinkle over fillets. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until fish is opaque and flakes when tested with a fork — 5 minutes. Broil close to high heat to golden-brown crumbs — a few seconds. Makes 2 servings.

Pass-throughs decorated to coordinate rooms, occasions

Copley News Service

Q. The kitchen pass-through to the dining area in my condominium is giving me problems. I like the pass-through for everyday use because a dining bar extends along the dining area wall. But when I entertain I like to use the dining bar as a buffet and don't want guests looking into the kitchen.

I have considered wooden louvers but they are a bit expensive. Could you suggest a solution I might be able to do myself? I am quite good at sewing. — R.P.

A. You could fashion an Austrian shade for your pass-through. For everyday use, pull the blind up. When entertaining, it would be easy to lower.

Choose an interesting fabric that will lend life to this part of your condominium. You could also repeat the fabric on chair seats and make matching place mats and table runners.

Q. I want to arrange my sofa and chairs in a comfortable conversational setting. What distaoce should there be between seating pieces? — N.C.

A. Most designers suggest there should be no more than 8 feet separating people for a comfortable conversational arrangement. Figure about 18 to 20 inches between sofa and chair and the coffee table. That is about a minimum amount of space for walking without bumping shins.

Tentatively arrange furniture but remain flexible. You may find the arrangement looks good when the room has no people in it but too crowded when you entertain.

Q. I am creating a high-style living room in my new apartment — fawn walls, beige carpet, coffee-colored modular seating, a beige, blue and cream area rug and fawn vertical blinds at the windows.

What kind of lighting should I plan? I don't want to clutter up the room with little end tables and table lamps. R.P.L.

A. Many designers say the more dramatic the lighting in a modern setting, the better. Consider ceiling spotlights, recessed lighting on a wall or ceiling to throw illumination up or down, or track lighting that can be directed as you wish. This can provide general room lighting.

Also, consider floor-standing lamps in brass. They induce only minimal visual distraction and provide necessary task lighting for reading and close work. Also, small spotlights at the base of a large indoor plant can be dramatic and focus interesting shadows on walls and ceiling.

Q. We are finding it hard to decorate our living room because it is so long and narrow, extending 50 feet from one end to the other.

I would like some suggestions on breaking up this room without building walls or any major remodeling. — E.D.K.

A. You probably can break up the length and disguise the narrowness of your room through careful furniture arrangement.

Consider having two different types of furniture arrangement. One arrangement could include a pair of short sofas facing each other with a coffee table in the middle. Place these short sofas so they parallel the narrow walls. This would be better than a long sofa that would only emphasize the length of the room.

In another section of the room, arrange three lounge chairs with a center table. Remember to allow for traffic to flow through the room. Don't arrange furniture so you have to walk around it.

You also could paint the narrow walls a dark shade and the longer walls a lighter shade. This will tend to bring the room into a more pleasing rectangle.

Teen-age girls have say in household buying

NEW YORK (AP) — Not only do teen-age girls purchase many household goods on their own, but they also have a strong voice in what kinds of products and which brands the family uses, a recent survey indicates.

"With so many mothers working, teen daughters are often actual partners in managing the home," says Ruth Clark, senior vice president of Yankelovich, Skelly and White, which conducted the survey sponsored by Seventeen magazine.

Shop around

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Many people "shop around" before making a major purchase in an effort to find a reliable merchant. This comparison shopping technique should also be used before deciding on an automobile mechanic, advisen an automotive parts nanufacturer here.

"Asking your friends to recommend a mechanic and visiting the repair shop should always be done before you bring your car in for work," says Dave Bowman, Technical Communications Manager for Fram Corp. He offers these tips on what to look for in a repair shop. — Look around the shop. If the test equipment, tools or repaired cars are filthy, it could be a trouble sign. People who take pride in their work usually keep their shop in good condition.

— Check for certification. The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence is a nationally recognized mechanic certification group.

DEAR ABBY

Widow haunts neighbor

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago my husband and I lost a very good friend and neighbor. Naturally we offered our condolences and help to this man's widow, who happens to be a very attractive woman about my age (middle 60s). Now my husband gets calls quite often. Her faucet is dripping, her furnace is making a noise, her storm window needs fixing, etc.

His last visit to her house lasted 44 minutes. And there's always a freshly baked apple pie waiting for him over there. (His favorite.)

Tomorrow he is taking her to the dentist! That's where I put my foot down. But he said he had already promised to take her, so off they went. Of course, this is only the first of three appointments. Another neighbor made a little joke about how attentive my husband has been to this widow. I laughed it off, but I was burning up inside.

What now? I feel better just putting this down on paper. – GOOD OLD JANE

DEAR JANE: Don't be too "good" or you'll be old before your time, Jane. Tell your helpful hubby that the neighbors are talking and enough is enough already. Then go along for the ride. And while you're sitting between them, get Jane's recipe for the apple pie. Three may be a crowd, but there's safety in numbers.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but here goes: I am dating a younger man I'll call Jimmy. I am deeply in love with him. The problem is that there is this girl at work who is after him. (Let's call her Shirley.) Shirley is married, but she wants to have Jimmy's baby. She says she isn't in love with him, but her husband has a low sperm count and they can't seem to have a baby, which they want very much.

Jimmy tells me that he doesn't want to lose me but he would like to accommodate Shirley. He says he doesn't love her the way he loves me, but they have necked in his car a few times.

This hurts me, Abby, because Jimmy and I have talked about marriage and I was counting on maybe having a spring wedding.

Please tell me what to do. – JUST ABOUT HAD IT

DEAR JUST: You don't say how "young" Jimmy is, but he sounds immature and naive. A man who would consider fathering a child as an accommodation is not ready for marriage. And the fact that he and Shirley have necked in his car a few times indicates that he has more than a casual interest in her. Wise up, and say goodbye to Jimmy.

DEAR ABBY: I recently read a verse in the letters to the editor column in the Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator.

I don't know whether it's original, but I think it's worth passing on. I hope you agree. -- NEWCASTLE READER

DEAR READER: I do. And here it is:

IT ISN'T THE CAR, IT'S THE DRIVER

"Sir: It isn't the car that begins to whine when forced to stop for an old stop sign – it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that takes a drink, then quickly loses its power to think – it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that fails to heed the dangers of reckless, discourteous speed – it's the driver.

"It isn't the car that steps on the gas and causes an accident trying to pass – it's the driver.

"A car may be bent and twisted awry, but it isn't the car that will have to die – it's the driver." – JOSEPH D. VRABLE, CAMPBELL, OHIO

Waves show fetal growth

BOSTON (AP) — Pregnant women who see images of their growing netuses on television screens during ultrasound tests may be less likely to have abortions, two doctors say.

Ultrasound, a test that uses sound waves to take a picture of the fetus, is becoming increasingly common to check development early in pregnancy.

Even though some fear that the test is likely to dehumanize the bond between a woman and her fetus, the doctors said the procedure is more apt to have the opposite effect.

"There is good reason to expect that on such occasions, parents probably will experience a shock of recognition that the fetus belongs to them," the doctors wrote.

"Viewing the fetal form in the late first or early mid-trimester of pregnancy, before movement is felt by the mother, may also influence the resolution of any ambivalence toward the pregnancy itself in favor of the fetus," they wrote. "Ultrasound examination may thus result in fewer abortions and more desired pregnancies."

The report, written by Drs. John C. Fletcher of the National Institutes of Health and Mark I. Evans of George Washington University Medical School, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors recounted two instances in which the test seemed to encourage an early bond with the fetuses.

A woman who had been beaten early in pregnancy was given the test to see whether her fetus had been injured. When she saw the image of her small fetus moving on the screen, she said: "I feel that it is human. It belongs to me. I couldn't have an abortion now."

Bartender-turned-columnist serves advice in newspaper

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bartender-turned-columnist Steven Austin gives "Straight Up" advice to readers of a North Carolina newspaper, and he hopes someday to mix it up with the likes of Dear Abby and Ann Landers.

Austin, 31, has been a bartender for most of his adult life, but he has been giving advice to readers of The High Point Enterprise since late August. He doesn't claim to have any special training for his job, other than the advice he has given while tending bar.

"That's the appeal of the column. I'm just a regular guy doing it," he said. "I'm not a clever editor or publisher. I'm not a journalist. I'm actually what I say I am — a complex person who has been behind that bar and has known every type of person in every walk of life."

AUSTIN SAID he got the idea for the column three years ago when he was pouring drinks at a Miami bar. He was handing out advice to one of his regular customers, who told him he should put his advice in a syndicated column like Ann Landers and Abigail Van Buren.

Austin, a New York native, liked the idea, and began writing newspapers throughout the country to try and sell them on the idea. In the meantime, he moved to Jamestown, N.C., and Joe Brown, editor of The High Point Enterprise, agreed to give him a chance.

Austin said there was a need for an advice column with a male perspective and one that also gives a viewpoint from a different generation than Ann Landers and Dear Abby, who are in their 60s.

He says there are questions that he can deal with from a younger person's standpoint that they just can't relate to.

He calls his column "Straight Up With Steven The Bartender."

He responded to one letter from someone who had written to complain about getting a traffic ticket for driving too fast in a school zone even though the kids were in school by saying, "Dear Idiot. When I read your letter I had to pinch myself to see if I was dreaming. You make me sick."

But most of the responses he gives are not harsh at all. They are straightforward, common-sense approaches to problems people ask him about. He answers each letter personally, and insists that no one else sees who the letters are from — not even his fiancee.

HE SAYS HE receives questions on every type of problem imaginable. He says if he suspects that someone needs professional advice in a specific area, he will say so in his response.

SOMETIMES HIS answers require some research, while others just call for good old-fashioned horse sense.

He knows that his outlook differs from many who read his column, such as standing by his position that if you're old enough to serve in the military, you're old enough to be allowed to drink.

"I have had many customers at a bar who can easily qualify as senior citizens but have the maturity of babies," he wrote in response to one letter. "On the other hand, some of the most interesting and personable people I have met are too young to be served a drink anywhere. It's all relative, pal."

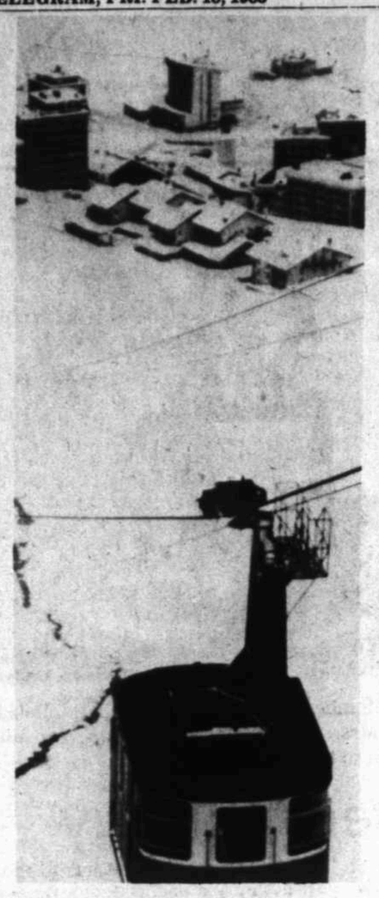
He says he has received letters of admonishment from people disagreeing with responses he has given.

"Mostly they send passages from the Bible, or Billy Graham, things like that," Austin said.

BROWN SAID he had turned down many requests from people who want to write columns, but that Austin impressed him.

"He's the first one that absolutely convinced me that he's capable. He has the determination and he's going to do it," he said.

Austin makes no secret of his desire to become nationally syndicated. Even if that happens, he still plans to go on bartending, at least on a part-time basis, to keep in touch with people.



This gondola rises to celestial heights to provide a never-to-be forgotten experience from this heavenly view.

Canadian Rockies' area ideal

Copley News Service

In the Canadian Rockies, ski time can be hot and cold for both young and old, expert and beginner.

The mountains are high and the powder snow deep at three resorts within an hour of each other and, for afterward, there are several hot thermal springs, just right for soaking away the aches and pains of those who overdo it.

Lake Louise is the largest and most popular of the three ski areas. It is especially attractive to families because of its day-care center and the Safari Park, a mini-ski hill for youngsters.

There are some 34 runs on two mountains. They range from deep powder skiing in bowls above the treeline, to gentle paths meandering through deep evergreen forests. The runs are as much as two miles in length.

Previously, accommodations were at a premium in Lake Louise, with only the plush Lake Louise Inn and several smaller establishments open. But this year, for the first time, the venerable Chateau Lake Louise has opened for the skiing public.

This palace of a hotel, built by a railroad tycoon, offers more than 400 world-class rooms on the shores of Lake Victoria and within sight of the Victoria Glacier.

The area receives nearly 200 inches of snow a year but at times it wears thin because of heavy use. Then skiers should head to Sunshine Village, halfway between Banff and Lake Louise. This resort in the clouds is thousands of feet higher than the other two resorts, and almost always has tons of snow — up to 400 inches a years.

The only way to get to the resort is by taking a 15-minute ride on the world's fastest and most modern gondola. The resort is located in a high mountain bowl some three miles from the gondola base. The day lodges and resort are located in the bottom of the bowl with dozens of runs spreading out on all sides of it, like spokes of a wheel.

A really long run starts at the mountain peak far above treeline, then swooshes down through the bowl and through a wooded valley under the gondola. The run goes on for 5½ miles before ending at the gondola base. But there are plenty of shorter runs for all levels of skiers throughout the resort.

The third area is Mount Norquay, within sight of the town of Banff, the main accommodation and entertainment center for the region. Its huge hill attracts expert skiers, although there are several intermediate and beginner slopes as well.

After skiing, many cold and weary skiers head for the Banff Hot Springs, perched on a mountaintop above the town, or take a scenic hour's drive west to the Radium Hot Springs. These naturally hot waters flowing out of the rocks provide welcome relief. It can be a surrealistic experience sitting in the hot water, with clouds of steam rising into the chill winter air.

Although Radium is farther away, it is less crowded and it is not unusual to see mountain goats climbing on the rocky ledges a few hundred feet above the bathers' heads. And elk and other animals often wander onto the high mountain road connecting the area with Banff, adding yet another bit of excitement to a ski trip to the Canadian Rockies.

Philosopher of happiness contends people set own standards to determine degree of contentment

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The students in Allen Parducci's "Theories of Happiness" class at the University of California, Los Angeles, are not expecting to get much happier this quarter.

That is, unless they get A's in the class and receive frequent A's throughout their academic careers. If getting an A would be a first for a student and more A's were unlikely, Parducci reasons, the student might actually be happier and less frustrated in the long run with a lower grade.

That rationale is included in the psychology professor's theory of happiness, which the class studies along with the thoughts of Plato, Aristotle, Mill, Freud, Maslow and other philosophers.

Parducci has conducted research on happiness that concludes that "if the best can come only rarely, it is better not to include it in the range of experiences at all. The average level of happiness can be raised by arranging life so that high levels of satisfaction come frequently, even if this requires renunciation of the opportunity for occasional experiences that would be even more gratifying."

JUST THE SAME, Parducci's students are not likely to renounce any A's. As most of them are members of the university's honors collegium, they're fully accustomed to frequent high marks. And most of them appear clear that personal happiness was not high among the reasons they enrolled in the class anyway.

As Mitch Guonzler, a 17-year-old sophomore, put it, "The class may not make you happier. It's not meant to. It's meant to teach you something about what happiness is. And that may be as useless as simply wasting a quarter or as useful as telling you how to live the rest of your life."

Added John Eknoian, a freshman, "The class gives you pause to think when someone asks you whether you're happy or not. Other than that, the thing I'm happiest with is being exposed to these philosophies. It makes me look good at parties."

Asked if teaching theories of happiness makes him happy, Parducci replied, "I get a certain intrinsic pleasure out of hearing people play with ideas."

A MAN WHO began studying happiness when he was 16 years old and kept daily records of his affective states when he served in the Navy, the silver-haired Parducci described himself as "on the happy side." But he was quick to point out that he is not as overwhelmingly happy as Americans (and Cubans) regularly report themselves to be in polls. (Americans and Cubans regularly score highest in self-rated happiness polls, and Parducci thinks they're probably overrating themselves.)

Married to the same woman for 33 years, Parducci formalized his "relational" theory of happiness around 1960, six years after he received his Ph.D. in psychology from University of California, Berkeley, and three years after he left Swarthmore College for a post at UCLA.

In layman's terms, the theory says essentially that a lot of money, great looks, a splendid economy, enormous intelligence and peace on earth are not the things that determine our happiness or unhappiness. Instead, Parducci contends that people who are happy are people whose circumstances are good relative to the standards they set for themselves.

THE THEORY explains why, for instance, one individual can be happy despite circumstances as grim as a concentration camp and another can be miserable despite all the material comforts in the world.

As a corollary, Parducci noted that there is often a "tug of war" between achievement and happiness.

"The higher goals we set for our children, the more they're going to accomplish," he said, "but the higher the goals the less likely they're going to achieve the goals. We're told to aim high, to reach for the stars, but this is a prescription for a sense of failure. Parents tell their children, 'You can be in the Olympics if you work hard enough' or they see the salary a tennis champion makes and they encourage their children to strive for that goal."

The antidote, Parducci indicated, is a familiar prescription: Compete only against oneself; lower standards or goals relative to individual levels of performance. This is often hard to do, he added, because individuals may not have much control over standards that have been set.

"SOME PEOPLE" are not very smart, but they are perfectly content about their grasp of things," he said. "They don't compare themselves with people who know more, so they don't label themselves stupid. They may even think they're smart. Some geniuses, on the other hand, feel intellectually inadequate."

But even if standards are lowered, Parducci cautioned, it is possible to place too much emphasis on happiness. "Some people want to be happy all the time and assume something is seriously wrong when they feel unhappy, anxious or disappointed. Everybody is going to have low points, and sometimes those low points will be miserable. There's no way out of that."

As for how much application his theories have seen in his own life, Parducci said he was not exactly sure. "I think perhaps it's made me a little less ambitious, but I'm not convinced it has." And there have been times, he acknowledged, when he has ignored the theory altogether and just done as he pleased.

HIS THEORY, which can be worked out mathematically and plotted on graphs to demonstrate that happiness is a "negatively skewed distribution," would suggest, for instance, that he should sail a different type of boat (a pram) than the type he does (a catamaran).

As he wrote in an article for Scientific American, "The catamaran (the fastest sailboat in many conditions) attains its best performance only on rare days when the wind and other conditions are just right. The pram (the slowest of the popular boats), on the other hand, rarely attains a speed above five knots, but since it is the design rather than the weather that places an upper limit on the pram's performance, the vessel sails at close to its maximum speed a large part of the time."

Perhaps one day the theory will be refined to explain why, despite his low odds for maximum performance sailing outings, Parducci feels happier on his catamaran. As student Lisa Rojanyas explained, "Our goal in this class is to make the abstract seem plausible."

Sun hopes Mhing zaps Pac-Man in the long run

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Years from now, when Pac-Man is old and feeble and can no longer race around the video screen gobbling dots, Robert Sun hopes people still will be playing Mhing.

"The reactions have been very positive," the Easton businessman and former electrical engineer said of his recently introduced card game, which is based on the ancient Chinese game Mah Jongg.

While Sun is targeting his game at adults, rather than the video-enamoured youth, he believes that Mhing will be successful and will endure, as Mah Jongg has endured.

His confidence in the game's success is embodied in Suntex International Inc., the company he formed to market the new game. It employs 12 people full time, including Sun.

Although the parts are manufactured elsewhere, the game is assembled and packaged here.

Mah Jongg has been played in China for more than eight centuries but was not introduced in the United States until the 1920s.

But Mah Jongg had its problems, Sun explained. Westerners were not used to playing a game that used ivory tiles, and the sets were expensive — usually between $75 and $100. Plus, the rules had been changed when the game came to the West.

"Without realizing it, they took away a lot of the intrigue," Sun said.

He believed that the game had not reached its potential, and decided to do something about it.

"I had the idea over two years ago," he said, describing the genesis of Mhing. "The Mhing concept came to me in a dream."

Within two weeks of that dream, Sun had completed the first draft of the simplified rules. But he spent the next two years looking for an artist to design the cards. Finally he settled on Peter Cohen, a well-known artist based in Stroudsburg.

The cards that Cohen designed fit just what Sun was looking for — a combination of clean, contemporary design and the ancient flavor of the game.

"I wanted something that people wouldn't tire of," Sun said, flipping over a card and examining the red-and-gold dragon scales printed on the back.

The rules, similar to those Sun learned as a child in Shanghai, allow faster and easier play without losing the intrigue and skill Mah Jongg is known for, Sun said.

By reading the instructions, a player can learn the game in about 40 minutes, he said, but it only takes 15 minutes to teach a friend once you learn.

Mhing consists of 156 cards in three suits: dots, bamboo and characters. There are also honor cards, flower cards and wild cards.

Congressmen look for dairy plan

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen in dairy states are again looking for an acceptable plan that will convince dairymen to curtail operations and help eliminate the milk surplus.

"We recognize reality," says Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., whose state accounts for a quarter of the nation's milk producers.

Congress tried to bring the mounting dairy surplus problem under control last year when it authorized Agriculture Secretary John Block to levy a 50-cent assessment on every hundred pounds of milk produced beginning Dec. 1.

That assessment would effectively reduce the price support level for milk with the theory being that lower prices would force reduced production.

At the same time, the income from it could underwrite hundreds of millions of dollars in the cost of price supports that are running in excess of $2 billion a year.

But the plan has not been accepted by the industry and it has run into legal problems that have blocked collection of the fee from almost the day it was imposed.

Meanwhile, American dairymen have continued producing at a record pace even though demand for milk and dairy products remains well below the supplies they're offering.

Last year, milk production hit 136 billion pounds, the third straight record year, and the trend continued in January, according to USDA statistics, with monthly production, number of cows and milk per cow all running ahead of last year's record levels.

"Faced with the ineffectiveness of price cuts alone as a method of reducing surplus dairy production, we will introduce a plan that will provide the necessary incentive and financial return for dairy farmers to cut production while adequately maintaining their family dairy operations," Proxmire and the rest of the Wisconsin congressional delegation have declared.

Some have proposed repealing the assessment provisions completely, but the Wisconsin delegation is introducing legislation that would take the revenues from that assessment and give them back to dairymen who actually reduce their production this year from their 1982 levels. A plan based on the same principle is also being pushed by the National Milk Producers Federation.

"The 50-cent assessment is here to stay," Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., said Wednesday, but he said using it to finance cash payments to dairymen curtailing production "provides an incentive to cull cows not cull farmers."

Hearings are expected in the next few weeks on alternatives to the current assessment program with congressional action all but assured because of the worsening surplus situation that threatens the future of the entire price support program.

Under the incentive payment plan, dairymen will receive regular price support protection for all their production and continue returning the 50-cent assessment for every hundred pounds.

But those agreeing to reduce production at least 5 percent from the 1982 level will get $10 for every hundred pounds they don't produce.

In most cases, the plan's backers say, the combination of the incentive payment and reduced expenses because of curtailed operations will more than offset the loss in income because production has been cut back.

That means, Proxmire said, that farmers reducing production can probably make as much if not more than those who don't cut back or continue to increase.

The plan is expected to cut price support costs from more than $2 billion to less than $500 million by 1985 and reduce the surplus from about 14 billion pounds to less than 3 billion.

Its sponsors admit that if it is to pass, the incentive program must have broad-based national support and that will be hard to get, especially from the Southeast.

Dairy farmers in the South, who claim that producers in the Midwest and West are responsible for the surplus problem, generally support a flat reduction in the price support level.

This is the way the nation's weather will look for the next thirty days in terms of temperature and precipitation according to the National Weather Service.

Weather service predicts less rain, snow than usual

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less rain or snow than usual is expected over most of the United States through mid-March, the National Weather Service predicted today.

The new 30-day forecast calls for heavier than usual precipitation only in portions of California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas along the Mexican border, in North Florida and in coastal sections of New England.

Below normal precipitation is expected elsewhere with Montana and North Dakota showing the strongest likelihood of dry weather.

Turning to temperatures, warmer than normal readings for the season are expected along the California coastline and in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Minnesota and the northern half of South Dakota.

Below normal temperatures are considered likely along Texas' Gulf Coast and in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, East Tennessee, the Carolinas and in south central and tidewater Virginia. Near normal readings are expected elsewhere.

Farm wives' group says influence on national politics increasing

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A group of Nebraska farm wives, frustrated by what they felt was their secondary role in debates over farm policies, gathered in 1976 to do something about their common concerns.

The result was WIFE — Women Involved in Farm Economics.

The women felt they were not being allowed to contribute to the efforts of male-dominated farm groups like the Farm Bureau or Grange, according to the president of the Nebraska chapter of WIFE, Luella Stevens of Gothenberg.

"I was kind of tired of setting up chairs, making coffee and being part of the cute little programs they would work out for the women at their conventions," said Mrs. Stevens.

From that small beginning in Sydney, Neb., WIFE now has 3,000 members in 18 states. And it is claiming growing influence in its struggle for a meaningful voice in farm economics.

"Farm women today are more educated, more sophisticated," said Mrs. Sydney Beck of Pansley. Ala., WIFE national vice president. "They do more on the farm, and they want to do more about the issues."

A month after WIFE was founded, it sent two busloads of farm wives to Washington, where they dressed in red to symbolize the plight of their family budgets. They buttonholed members of Congress to express their anger over low commodity prices.

In contrast to the tractorcade protests of the American Agriculture Movement a few years ago, WIFE members are low-key. "We try to be positive. We research intensively, and then we just try to make our points in Washington," said Mrs. Beck.

WIFE still sends groups of two or three members to Washington every month (and they still wear red), Mrs. Beck said. "Each state takes a month and is responsible for sending someone. One of our biggest battles in getting money for the trips," she added.

What has WIFE accomplished since 1976? Mrs. Stevens said the organization can't point to specific pieces of legislation, but counts as its greatest accomplishment getting its foot in the door in Washington.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, calls WIFE an "effective" group because it is able to clearly communicate the plight of the farmer.

"We still haven't brought prosperity to agriculture," Mrs. Beck said. "But we're growing in influence."

When they go to Washington, according to Mrs. Beck, WIFE members try to hammer home the message that many agricultural producers have to pay more to grow food than they get when they sell it. Eliminating that situation is the organization's major goal, she said.

As Mrs. Stevens put it to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block when he visited Nebraska last spring, they ask officials: How does the government expect farmers to pay 1981 production costs with 1931 receipts?

U.S. tornado death toll below annual average

WASHINGTON (AP) — The death toll from tornadoes in the United States last year was 64, well below the annual average of 111 deaths, the National Weather Service reports.

The decline came despite the large number of twisters during the year, 1,022. That number has been exceeded only once, in 1973, the service said.

Presidential candidates ready for 'Super Tuesday'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential candidates already are referring to March 13, 1984, as "Super Tuesday" and suggesting that may be the date the Democratic presidential nominee is determined.

At least 10 states are likely to hold Democratic presidential primaries or caucuses on that day.

They range from Florida, Alabama and Georgia in the South, Maine and Massachusetts in the Northeast, Minnesota and Oklahoma in the Midwest and Washington, Alaska and Hawaii in the West.

And there are rumbles from California and Ohio that those two states may decide to join the Super Tuesday bandwagon.

That's a lineup that is spawning a lot of anguish among the strategists for Democratic presidential aspirants and endless speculation about who will benefit from the early crush of delegate selection.

Here are some of the possibilities:

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale generally is given the edge over his rivals in organization and fund raising and those two factors could prove the most important to anyone's hopes of a good showing in a single day in which 10 or more states are choosing delegates.

Another factor in Mondale's favor is name recognition. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio is the only other candidate who is as well known as Mondale.

If Mondale also enters the early primaries and caucuses with the organizational boost of an endorsement from the AFL-CIO, that could be another plus on a crowded schedule.

But there's hope for others in the delegate distribution.

Florida chooses 123 delegates and former Gov. Reubin Askew expects to get most of them.

Glenn is hopeful of running well in states like Alabama with 52 delegates, Georgia with 70, Oklahoma, 43, Washington 61 and Alaska 11.

Two other Southern states, Mississippi and South Carolina, will choose their delegates the following Saturday. And even if Glenn is nearly as popular in the South as he thinks he is, he'll have tough competition for support in the region.

Proposed cuts may hurt low-income students

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposed cuts in education assistance mean 5,000 qualified low and middle-income students would miss out on medical school, a student aid official says.

"The administration's 1984 budget will heighten existing pressure to shift available aid to upper-class students and to admit first-year students who are best qualified to pay rather than best qualified to study medicine," said Robert J. Boerner, director of the Association of American Medical Colleges' student programs division.

His loss of companionship hastened death of Groucho Marx, doctor says

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A psychiatrist who heard Groucho Marx confess the terrors and fears of old age says the comic's death was hastened by the loss of Erin Fleming's companionship in his final days.

Dr. James Grold said he saw Marx deteriorate when he visited him in the hospital in 1977 after Miss Fleming became the target of a conservatorship battle with the Marx children and was limited in her visits to the comedian.

"He responded to her absence," Grold said. "...The question posed was, 'Where is Erin?' He said it on a number of occasions."

Grold testified Thursday that Marx would have lived much longer if Miss Fleming had free access to visit him.

Johnny, June Carter Cash in hospital

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash, were in satisfactory condition early today in a Nashville hospital, a spokesman said.

Cash, 51, was admitted Monday with pneumonia, spokesman Paul Moore said. He was put in a room next to his wife, who underwent abdominal surgery Feb. 2.

Cash is expected to be released soon, Moore said, but he did not know how long Mrs. Cash would be hospitalized.

Crystal Gayle expecting first child

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Crystal Gayle says she and her husband Bill Gatzimos expect their first baby to arrive around Sept. 1.

"My doctor told me that Labor Day might have a double meaning for me this year," she said in a brief statement Thursday released by spokesman Paul Shefrin.

Miss Gayle, 31, whose "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue" was a hit in 1977, probably will stop touring in late spring or early summer, Shefrin said.

"She's going to try the road out and see how things go as far as morning sickness and things like that," he said. Miss Gayle is the younger sister of country singer Loretta Lynn.

'Hot news' ruling will cost magazine

NEW YORK (AP) — When former President Gerald R. Ford told how he pardoned former President Richard Nixon in his memoirs five years after the fact, it was not "hot news," a federal judge has ruled.

The ruling will cost The Nation magazine, which published an article based on a draft of the memoirs obtained before the book was published, at least $12,500 for copyright infringement.

U.S. District Judge Richard Owen granted the initial damages to the plaintiffs in the suit, Harper & Row Publishers Inc. and Reader's Digest Association, owners of publication rights to the memoirs entitled, "A Time To Heal." It represented loss of a pre-publication rights deal which was canceled by Time magazine.

Ernest Borgnine has surgery on thumb

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Ernest Borgnine, tired of having a crooked thumb, underwent surgery "so his thumb can straighten out," says his secretary.

"It's just elective surgery on his left hand. He has a short tendon or something and can't straighten out his thumb," Donna Alfassa said Thursday. "It was just annoying him."

Borgnine, 65, who won an Oscar in 1955 for the movie "Marty," was admitted to the hospital Wednesday. He will not suffer any permanent impairment because of the operation, but "he has to keep his hand elevated for a week," said Miss Alfassa.

Borgnine starred in television's "McHale's Navy" series and the movie "The Dirty Dozen."

Helen Hayes to attend fund-raiser

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Actress Helen Hayes will be the honored guest at the Madonna Foundation's annual "Angels of Madonna" fund-raising dinner here.

Proceeds from the April 18 event will go to the Madonna Professional Care Center, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year.

The Madonna Foundation runs nursing homes for the elderly.

Miss Hayes, 82, began acting at the age of 6. She has won two Oscars for her roles in movies, has appeared in 70 Broadway plays and has written two books.

She has been active in advocating the rights of elderly and disabled people.

David Soul admitted to abuse program

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor David Soul of TV's "Starsky and Hutch" has been admitted to a two-year program, similar to probation, after being charged with misdemeanor wife abuse and battery.

Soul, 39, was allowed into the diversion program with the approval of city prosecutors Thursday. The program places first-time offenders under the jurisdiction of probation authorities, and Soul will have no conviction on his record.

Soul's wife, Patricia, 31, previously had asked a judge to drop charges that Soul struck her Oct. 25.

Andy Williams hospitalized for tests

ENCINITAS, Calif. (AP) — Singer Andy Williams has been resting comfortably after a series of tests to determine the cause of chest pains and indigestion, hospital officials say.

Williams, 52, entered Scripps Memorial Hospital on Wednesday after withdrawing from the pro-am event of the Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open, a golf tournament he has helped sponsor since 1968.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Jane Halsey said Thursday it was not known when Williams will be released.

Heart recipient's condition improves

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark's condition improved slightly today, but he remained in an intensive care room battling kidney and lung problems, a hospital spokesman said.

Meanwhile, the Salt Lake City-based company that markets the mechanical heart in Clark's chest announced Thursday it had received enough money to hasten development of a portable drive system for Clark's heart.

The 62-year-old Clark was moved to a private room in the University of Utah Medical Center for two days early this week. But he was returned to intensive care late Tuesday when his lungs and kidneys began to function poorly.

'Winds of War' unfair to Soviets, diplomat says

SEATTLE (AP) — Ending unflattering stereotypes of Soviet people — like those in the television miniseries "The Winds of War" — would improve relations between the Soviet Union and the United States, a Soviet diplomat says.

A scene in last week's ABC presentation showed a drunken Soviet army officer being carried out of an elegant dinner at the Kremlin, and nothing like that has ever happened, said Valentin M. Berezhkov of the Soviet embassy in Washington, D.C.

"The only person who was ever carried out of a Kremlin dinner was a bodyguard to (Winston) Churchill," Berezhkov said Thursday before a news conference here to discuss the arms race.

In an off-hand exchange about the movie portraying events leading up to World War II, Berezhkov said he thought the film version of Herman Wouk's epic novel didn't do justice to the original story.

"The book was somehow more balanced," Berezhkov said. "Many things (in the movie) were quite distorted, as if they were trying to show the whole second world war was fought by America. We are shown there by chance."

The 18-hour series "didn't show the real significance of the contributions of the Soviet Union," Berezhkov said.

"Gandhi," a film which opens tonight at a Midland theater, received 11 nominations for the upcoming 55th Annual Academy Awards presentation. Richard Kingsley, in the title role, was nominated for best actor. Also pictured is Martin Sheen.

Oscar seems to like 'sex changes'

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Sex changes are popular this year with Oscar voters, who heaped a total of 19 Academy Award nominations on movies that feature men playing women or women playing men playing women. It can get a little confusing.

One of those movies, "Tootsie," drew 10 nominations Thursday, including best picture, actor, supporting actress and supporting actor — a total topped only by the 11 nominations for "Gandhi," which had no sex changes at all.

"Tootsie" will vie for best picture of 1982 along with "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" (nine nominations), "Gandhi", "The Verdict" (both with five nominations) and "Missing" (four nominations).

In all, 34 movies will be competing in 24 Oscar categories on April 11 in ceremonies broadcast live by ABC-TV from Los Angeles.

Before the nominations were announced by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, movie industry punsters had suggested tongue-in-cheek that Academy voters would not know in which category — male or female — to place Julie Andrews, who played a female posing as a male cabaret artist performing in drag in "Victor-Victoria," and Dustin Hoffman, who was a female soap opera star in "Tootsie."

But Hoffman was adjudged a male and Miss Andrews a female. He won his fifth best actor nomination, while she picked up her third best actress nomination for "Victor-Victoria," a movie that tallied seven nominations in all.

Hoffman won best actor in 1979 for "Kramer vs. Kramer," while Miss Andrews was named best actress in 1964 for "Mary Poppins."

Another sexual turncoat, John Lithgow, won a best supporting actor nomination Thursday for his football-player-turned transsexual in "The World According to Garp."

It was not the first time cross-over acting roles have been nominated: Jack Lemmon picked up one of his eight Oscar nominations in 1959 for "Some Like It Hot," in which he and Tony Curtis were memorable "females" opposite the real thing: Marilyn Monroe.

This year Lemmon picked up his seventh best actor nomination for his role as a worried father in "Missing" — making it a good year for veteran performers.

Other than Ben Kingsley, who was nominated as best actor in his film debut for "Gandhi," the other male lead nominees have been there many times before.

Paul Newman, the down-and-out attorney in "The Verdict," has been nominated five times as an actor and once as a producer, while Peter O'Toole, the perpetually soused matinee idol in "My Favorite Year," has been nominated seven times.

Meryl Streep, who was nominated this year as best actress for "Sophie's Choice," also knows what Oscar jitters are: she's had damp hands on four previous award nights.

This year she'll compete against Miss Andrews and two-time nominee Sissy Spacek — nominated for "Missing" — along with first-time nominees Jessica Lange, "Frances;" and Debra Winger, "An Officer and a Gentleman".

Miss Lange became only the third actress ever to be nominated in the best actress and best supporting actress categories in the same year: she'll also be competing for her supporting role in "Tootsie." The last time this happened was with Teresa Wright in 1942 ("Mrs. Miniver" and "Pride of the Yankees").

Her competition in the supporting actress category this year will be two-time nominee Kim Stanley, "Frances," along with first-timers Glenn Close, "The World According to Garp," which was her motion picture debut; Teri Garr for "Tootsie" and Lesley Ann Warren for "Victor-Victoria".

In the best supporting actor category, Lithgow goes against Charles Durning, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas;" Louis Gossett Jr., "An Officer and a Gentleman;" James Mason, "The Verdict;" and Robert Preston, "Victor-Victoria."

Richard Attenborough, who for 20 years tried to make the movie Hollywood wouldn't, "Gandhi," was rewarded with a best director nomination for his efforts. After he made the film with English and Indian financing, Columbia Pictures agreed to release it.

Also receiving several nominations were the films "Tootsie" and "Victor/Victoria." In "Tootsie," Dustin Hoffman portrays both Michael Dorsey and Dorothy Michaels, who is seen at right above on an excursion with actor Charles Durning. Taking both title roles in "Victor/Victoria" is Julie Andrews, at left below, in a scene with actor Robert Preston.
