MISD seeks unitary status

Attorney: District must show it can be trusted

■ After hearing remarks, judge declares gathering, reviewing information "a long row to hoe."

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

In the middle of struggling with budget cuts and funding teacher pay raises, school board trustees found out that seeking unitary status could be a lengthy process.

In a Friday morning hearing on unitary status, federal Judge Royal Ferguson requested documents, briefs and responses to information through June 26.

"It looks like this is going to be a longer row to hoe than anticipated," Ferguson said, after hearing remarks from attorneys for MISD, the U.S. Justice Department and the plaintiffs for the Aug. 12, 1976, lawsuit that forced desegregation in Midland public schools.

At the May 24 school board meeting, school board trustees voted 5-2 — with Adela Marmolejo and James Fuller opposing the motion — to seek unitary status with the court system.

Despite the hundreds of people who turned out for the May meeting with many speaking against seeking unitary status, trustees voted to seek an escape from federal court decrees governing some board decisions.

Some Midland parents have said the court order prevents the district from trying any new programs such as "controlled choice" or setting up pilot magnet schools.

Officials: Former minister kills two at abortion clinic

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A shotgun-wielding former minister killed a doctor in a bulletproof vest and his escort outside an abortion clinic Friday in the second such deadly attack in Pensacola in 17 months, police said. Another person was wounded.

Dr. John Bayard Britton was killed by an abortion opponent, Friday.

Paul Hill, 40, who had openly advocated violence as a divinely sanctioned means of stopping abortions, was chased down within minutes of the slayings at the Ladies Center for Abortion after witnesses pointed him out to police.

"Now is the time to defend the unborn, the same way you'd defend slaves about to be murdered!" he shouted as he was transferred from the police station to jail.

Hill was held without bail on two charges of murder and one of attempted murder. He could also face federal charges under a law enacted in May in

Hispanic chamber receives award

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce received the 1994 Small Chamber of the Year award presented by the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC).

Mike Flores — the chamber's chairman of the board — received the award Friday morning at TAMACC's state convention in Fort Worth.

This is the third time the chamber has been honored with the award.

"It was a very big honor for us and the city of Midland and we're very proud to accept this honor and represent the city of Midland," Flores said.

The support of corporations, members and volunteers has helped the chamber achieve success and recognition, he said.

Flores, summarizing his acceptance speech, said the hard work of the chamber leading up to the award "was just a start of things to come."

Charlene Romero Wurtz, executive director of the Midland Hispanic chamber, said the award is "presented to chambers that have shown an in-

Arafat closes pro-Jordan newspaper

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, angry over this week's Israel-Jordan summit, lashed out Friday at Palestinians with ties to Jordan and ordered a pro-Jordanian newspaper closed.

The closure of the daily An-Nahar, long a supporter of Jordan's King Hussein, widened the rift between Arafat's self-rule government and Amman and brought outcries against censorship.

Closing An-Nahar, which has a circulation of about 5,000 in east Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and West Bank, left Palestinians with just one daily newspaper, the PLO-backed Al-Quds.

The move was criticized by prominent pro-Jordan Palestinians, as well as leaders of the Muslim fundamentalist group Hamas, the main opposition to the self-rule government.

"Where is political freedom? This is a policy of suppression that our people will not accept," said Ahmed Bahr, a leading Hamas spokesman.

At this week's Washington summit between King Hussein and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, the two leaders stressed the Jordanian monarch's continued control over the Muslim holy sites in Jerusalem.

That was interpreted by Palestinians as an attempt to undercut their claim to east Jerusalem as the capital of an eventual Palestinian state. Under the Israel-PLO autonomy accord, the status of Jerusalem is to be discussed in three years.

As tensions rose, Jordan rushed to reassure the Palestinians that its role in Jerusalem concerned only religious jurisdiction and had no political connotations.

An official statement issued in the Jordanian capital, Amman, said Jordan supported the Palestine Liberation Organization's goals concerning Jerusalem.

However, "Jordan will continue its historic role of exercising its religious jurisdiction over Islamic holy shrines in Jerusalem," it said.

Arafat and King Hussein have long competed for the role of chief representative for the world's 5.5 million Palestinians.

Jordan ruled the West Bank and east Jerusalem for 19 years before the 1967 Middle East war. Hussein renounced all claims to the territories, except the holy shrines, in favor of the PLO in 1988.

Palestinian leaders called for a meeting to defuse the growing tensions with Jordan.

WEATHER WATCH

There's slight chance of rain today

Staff Report

The weatherman is extending hopes for showers today to cool and dampen the hot, dry West Texas land.

There is a 20 percent chance of rain today, said the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, and a slight chance of morning showers and thunderstorms under partly cloudy skies.

The high temperature today is to be in the mid-90s. Winds are to be southeasterly at 10 to 20 mph. The low temperature tonight is to be near 70 degrees. Skies are to be partly cloudy on Sunday, when the temperature is to be in the mid-90s.

Today's peak temperature was 97 degrees, and the overnight low was 67 degrees.

The record high temperature for July 29 is 105 degrees in 1960. The record low temperature for July 30 is 59 degrees in 1971.

STATE

Texans lazed instead of blazed Friday as mostly sunny but unusually mild weather persisted over the state.

Coastal Bend skies were mostly cloudy to cloudy. Some high cloudiness also was reported in West Texas and a small part of North Texas for much of the day. Some showers were reported in the Panhandle.

Temperatures were generally in the mid-90s, except for the low 90s in the Panhandle and the upper 80s in the Davis and Guadalupe mountains were in the upper 80s.

Temperatures ranged from 80 degrees at Port Aransas to 97 degrees at Killeen.

Forecasters say West Texas skies will be fair, except for partly to mostly cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms in the Panhandle, Big Bend, mountains and far west through Sunday.

NATION

Cool air toppled temperature records Friday across the Plains and the South, and thunderstorms were scattered across the eastern half of the nation with hail as big as golf balls.

For the second straight day, the unusually cool weather caused temperatures to fall into the 50s and 60s. That produced the coolest morning on record for the date in parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky and Florida, the National Weather Service said.

Concordia, Kan., cooled to 51, erasing a record of 54 set in 1892.

SHOOT: Gunman kills 2 outside abortion clinic response to 1,000 cases of abortion-related violence since 1977.

Dr. John Bayard Britton, 69, and 74-year-old James Herman Barrett had just arrived for work and were sitting in a pickup truck outside when the gunman approached and opened fire with a 12-gauge shotgun, hitting both men in the head, police said.

Barrett's 68-year-old wife, June, a retired nurse who like her husband worked as a volunteer escort shielding clinic employees from protesters, was also in the truck. She was wounded in the arm and was listed in good condition.

The clinic had been bombed twice in 1984 and vandalized in 1986.

Hill, a former minister with the Presbyterian Church in America and The Orthodox Presbyterian Church, is director of Defensive Action, an anti-abortion group he founded after Dr. David Gunn was slain outside another Pensacola clinic last year.

"The Christian principle is to do unto others as you would have them do unto you," Hill said in an interview this year. "If an abortionist is about to violently take an innocent person's life, you are entirely morally justified in trying to prevent him from taking that life."

After a doctor was shot and wounded in Wichita, Kan., last August, Hill said the Sixth Commandment requires "that we try and prevent killing, and requires that we use force if necessary to do that."

A half-hour before Friday's shooting, a police officer spotted Hill putting out crosses in front of the clinic and warned him it was against the law, Sgt. Jerry Potts said. The officer then left.

Potts said Hill was a regular outside the Ladies Center and was arrested June 17 for disrupting the clinic by shouting to patients: "Please don't kill your innocent child! Don't let them make you the mother of a dead baby! Mommy, mommy, don't let them kill me!"

Police tried to keep an eye on Hill, but "there was no way we could put a 24-hour surveillance on him," Potts said.

Witnesses reported hearing six to nine shotgun blasts.

"I heard the first shot. I turned around and heard other shots," said the manager of a store across the street, speaking on condition of anonymity. "I saw a man running away from in front of the clinic. I ran in to call the police and when I came out the police were around him on the ground."

Police recovered a shotgun.

The attack came just minutes before an off-duty police officer was to arrive to provide routine security at the clinic, a two-story, wood-frame house on the suburban north side of Pensacola, a conservative city in the Florida Panhandle.

On one side of the building stands an anti-abortion monument put up by protesters. Nearby is a billboard depicting a fetus and American flag backdrop; it reads, "God Bless America."

Gunn, who also performed abortions at the Ladies Center, was killed March 10, 1993, behind Pensacola Women's Medical Services, the first slaying during an abortion protest. Michael Frederick Griffin, 31, is serving life in prison.

Britton traveled from his home town across the state near Jacksonville to perform abortions in Pensacola after Gunn's murder, according to a profile in February's GQ magazine. He had received threats, including a message left in the office door that read: "What would you do if you had five minutes left to live?"

The Barretts would escort him to the clinic in a minivan with a box containing a gun, according to GQ.

TERROR: Woman tells story of military rape dumped her on a roadside. Staggering home in the dark, she was stopped in the street by two civilian auxiliaries of the Haitian army and raped again.

(From 1A)

She hasn't seen her husband since.

The brutal attacks on Pierre, 29, are part of a disturbing trend: rape is increasingly being used as a weapon against supporters of deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, rights groups say.

The abuses are another facet of army-tolerated repression that has claimed up to 3,000 lives in political killings since soldiers overthrew the elected Aristide in September 1991.

A report released earlier this month by Human Rights Watch and the National Coalition of Human Refugees accused Haiti's military, police and paramilitary forces of using rape as a terror tactic. U.N. human rights monitors, kicked out of Haiti last week by the military-dominated government, made the same charges and documented several cases.

Many of the rapes involved women accused of supporting Aristide — women like Jasmine Pierre.

She nursed her 5-month-old infant Kathy while describing her ordeal to a journalist in the safe house where she is hiding while she tries to gain political asylum in the United States. She's been turned down once but has a second interview scheduled for Aug. 3.

Her other two children, 8-year-old Mackenson and 4-year-old Lina, are living with a cousin.

The attack that tore up Pierre's family happened the night of April 20, but harassment against the couple started shortly after Aristide was ousted.

Pierre and her husband, Vilman St. Juste, 27, were outspoken supporters of the populist priest. Pierre, who sold used shoes and clothing at a market in Gonaives, belonged to a women's group organized to help merchants.

After Aristide's ouster, the army came looking for his supporters, and the couple was forced to flee, eventually coming to Port-au-Prince.

"On the 20th of April at 2 o'clock in the morning, some people knocked on the door. We didn't open it," Pierre said. "They said, 'You bunch of pigs, you bunch of Lavalas, aren't you going to open the door?'" Lavalas is the name of the grass-roots movement that supports Aristide.

Four military men in olive-green uniforms forced the door open and started beating St. Juste. They handcuffed and blindfolded him, made the children lie face-down on the floor, and demanded money, Pierre said.

She was afraid to give them her purse because it contained pro-Aristide leaflets and her ID as a member of the deposed president's political party.

"My husband said, give it to them so they'll let us live," recounted Pierre, trembling. "Someone put an Uzi to my ear. I took the bag and gave it to them. . . .

"Then all four of them raped me." She began quietly sobbing, clutching her baby to her breast.

"I was almost choking. My whole body hurt."

Throughout the ordeal, the children were lying on the floor of the same room and saw what happened, Pierre said.

When it was over, the soldiers carted the couple away in a pickup truck and dropped Pierre a mile away.

"When I was getting out of the pickup truck, one of the soldiers kicked me in the back," she said, wiping her eyes.

On the painful walk home, two civilian auxiliaries of the army stopped her.

"I could barely walk. I couldn't speak," Pierre said. "They laid me down in the middle of the street and raped me again."

Even more traumatic than the rapes, Pierre said, was the loss of her husband. "I never saw him again."

She sought the comfort of a cousin, then went into hiding.

One night in May, her brother-in-law was killed in the seaside slum of Cite Soleil, an Aristide stronghold. "Thirteen bullets to the head," Pierre said.

In this safe house, where Pierre has been staying two weeks, she feels secure. But she misses her children.

HELP: O.J. defense alludes to mysterious witness the crime scene about the time of the slayings.

(From 1A)

Prosecutors allege Simpson, who is black, acted alone.

The disclosure came during a brief hearing on a sweeping defense request for total disclosure of evidence in the case.

During the hearing, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito scheduled the trial for Sept. 20, then later moved it to Sept. 19 because of a miscalculation, putting the case on an unusually fast track. Criminal cases, particularly those dealing with murder and high-powered defense teams, can slog through the courts for years.

But defense attorney Robert Shapiro said Simpson, jailed in solitary confinement without bail since June 17, is eager to proceed.

"The environment that he is in is not the environment he prefers," Shapiro said outside court. "He'd like to return to his family."

In court, another Simpson attorney, Johnnie Cochran Jr., said that the mystery witness has spoken to police and that the defense deserves to see investigators' reports.

The witness "has given testimony or evidence that is totally inconsistent with the theory of a lone assailant, and it's entirely inconsistent with the fact that Mr. Simpson is that assailant," Cochran said.

Another source said the prowler, who lives in Northern California near the Oregon line, met with detectives Friday at the crime scene. No details were available.

Detectives on the case, conferring in a hall at police headquarters after the hearing, refused to comment on the witness.

The 47-year-old Simpson is accused of stabbing to death his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, a friend of hers, on June 12.

Among other things, the defense on Friday demanded reports of prowler and burglary calls in the neighborhood, records of unsolved murders and records of emergency room visits for dog bites during the 24 hours after the slayings on the chance that Ms. Simpson's dog may have bitten the killer.

Deputy District Attorney William Hodgman promised to provide as much information as he could.

"The LAPD is investigating any and all leads, whether potentially exculpatory or potentially inculpatory," he said. "I assure counsel that when that material becomes available to us, we'll turn it over."

But he maintained there were limits to the prosecution's cooperation. "If the defense wants to go fishing, on this particular one, they're going to have to use their own pole and own tackle box," he said.

Hodgman agreed to supply computer matches of unidentified fingerprints recovered from the crime scene.

To sort out leads and other matters, the two sides agreed to meet outside court. The judge set an Aug. 9 hearing to discuss their progress in sharing information.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled decades ago that prosecutors must give defendants any information that could help exonerate them. Convictions have been reversed over prosecutors' failure to turn over such information.

Among the leads in the Simpson case, according to the defense, are statements from at least one witness who claims there may have been more than one killer.

"There are witnesses there that have theories of multiple assailants of different ethnic background than Mr. Simpson that we think should be pursued vigorously," Cochran said. One witness in particular may be key.

Hodgman said that witness "lives very close to another state" and that police are "following up on this."

The witness, according to one of the AP sources, is the same man quoted in the Los Angeles Times on Thursday as saying he saw two white men carrying a bag or pillowcase flee Ms. Simpson's property from the front.

FREE: MISD seeks escape from federal court decrees case said, "School districts will have to show they've eliminated vestiges of past bias to the extent practicable."

(From 1A)

MISD attorney Charles Tighe said at Friday's hearing that MISD has followed the court order "in good faith for 18 years and has done away with the vestiges of segregation. There comes a time when . . . you have to trust."

Tighe also represented MISD during the original lawsuit that forced desegregation.

Supreme Court rulings have decreed that districts seeking unitary status must show that vestiges of segregation have been removed from the following areas: transportation, student assignments, extracurricular activities, building facilities and staffing.

Wendy Parker, a Justice Department attorney, said the three criteria that must be met for unitary status to be granted are:

- The district must show it has consistently carried out the orders of the court since the ruling.
- It must show it has done away with all vestiges of segregation.
- The school district must prove it can be trusted again.

"A big question is: What's going to happen next?" Ms. Parker said.

"You look east of Big Spring Street and the school facilities are not equal to those west of Big Spring Street," she said at Friday's hearing.

Attorney Brice Cunningham, who was representing the intervenors — the parties who were added to the original lawsuit — said the 1976 decree was a result of "many, many nights of planning and discussion. It was truly a compromise."

Cunningham — one of the attorneys who signed the 1976 consent decree — said the school district "must come forth with evidence it can be trusted."

Ferguson said he would like to see a brief from the school board outlining a long-range plan that would ensure schools remained desegregated.

"There is a lot of work to be done here," Cunningham said.

Attorney Gary Bledsoe, co-counsel with Cunningham, said, "There is serious reason to believe there has not been full compliance. Mr. Tighe said the board wants to establish trust. You have to look at the future prospects if the district is released from this decree.

"Would you call it a good-faith effort that the district spent five years in litigation trying to defeat minority efforts to get minorities on the board through single-member districts?

"Why is it votes so often split 2-4 on minority issues (since the two minority representatives vote differently than the other four persons on the board). How about which area of town is getting the new schools?" Bledsoe said.

"All of these things are part of good faith. It is the position of the intervenors" that this doesn't show compliance, he said.

Bledsoe also mentioned that the Midland community was divided along racial lines over issues such as the Lee High School's Rebel flag and controlled choice.

"If we have problems with racial overtones, can unitary status be declared?" he said.

Ferguson asked for various documents, reports, briefs, expert witness lists and exhibits to be drawn up and shared by the parties. He handed down a list of deadlines for each document and response.

"I know this is a pocketful, and I know the district has kids to educate, but all of this discovery is but otherwise the two centers are unrelated, said Dr. Timothy George, medical oncologist.

TREAT: New center has everything under 1 roof

Collaboration between medical colleagues is an important part of providing the best treatment regime for individual patients, George said. The new center provides strategically located conference areas where doctors and other caregivers can confer.

More than 100 physicians treat patients at the center. Keeping up with the latest information is a top priority at the center. In addition to the regular seminars and research reviews, physicians at the center meet monthly to review information.

The new center has eight stations where people receive their chemotherapy agents, which are delivered intravenously, Ms. Hansard said. These sessions can last more than three hours, so each station is equipped with a television and VCR. A collection of tapes is available on request.

Among the latest advances in chemotherapy, physicians at the center use Taxol® — a drug isolated from the bark of the Pacific yew tree — and other derivatives, Ms. Hansard said. Taxol has received national notoriety recently, she said.

The most impressive recent advances have been in the area of "chemoprevention," said Dr. Pankij Khandelwal, a medical oncologist at the center.

In this kind of care, precancerous tissues are identified and measures are taken to destroy these cells before actual cancer erupts.

Center physicians are continually participating in research projects. From this research comes the cancer-fighting knowledge of tomorrow, Khandelwal said.

One of the greatest tools for chemoprevention and the treatment of some kinds of cancer is a drug called retinoic acid, which causes cancer cells to mature quickly. This restricts their procreation and hastens their death, he said.

Another tool is the use of "bio-response modifiers" that beef up the body's own immune system to fight cancer and precancerous tissues, Khandelwal said.

New to the center is in-house radiation treatment, often used in conjunction with chemotherapy.

Radiation is applied to cancer cells in various ways, Dr. Joe Kaczor said.

Radiation — applied as energy only — uses a $1.3 million linear particle accelerator housed on the bottom floor of the new center.

This machine tightly focuses X-rays or beams of electrons on cancer cells, damaging strands of DNA within the cancer cell and causing the cell's death upon its next replication.

Physicists are employed to operate this high-tech equipment. The physicists, who coordinate with the physician, use a complex computer to provide a digitally generated image of the patient and his cancer cells. This image is used to design the best approach to irradiating the proper cells while sparing radiation damage to healthy cells, said Rich Fairall, a physicist at the center.

Other methods of radiating cancer cells use radioactive isotopes, which are elements altered at the nuclear level. These are divided into sealed and unsealed sources, Kaczor said.

Unsealed sources use isotopes of iodine and strontium and other elements. Once delivered into the blood stream, the radioactive iodine is taken up by cancerous cells, such as in the thyroid gland, and are destroyed through a constant bombardment of radiation. Iodine not absorbed by these cells is excreted from the body.

Strontium 89, because of its similarity to calcium, is used to irradiate cancerous bone tissue. This is often used to alleviate pain from bone cancer, Kaczor said.

Sealed sources use highly radioactive isotopes — such as those of cesium — that are sealed in small containers and placed (surgically or otherwise) in the proximity of cancer cells, Kaczor explained.

The cancer center began in 1979 with oncologists consulting once a week at an Odessa hospital, Ms. Hansard said. In 1981, one oncologist began seeing Odessa patients full time. In 1984 an office was opened on Golder Avenue, where the center operated until June 6.

In 1987 the center treated 533 patients. This number has grown every year and in 1993, the center treated 1,340 patients.

Patients from as far west as Van Horn and as far south as Alpine come to the Odessa center for treatment, Ms. Hansard said.

The center receives about 40 new patients a month. Plans are already under way to add more advanced diagnostic and treatment services at the center, she said.

POLICE REPORTS

Jailed

A 52-year-old Gonzales man, Robert Lee Anders Jr., who allegedly threw a drink into a flight attendant's face and punched the attendant in an El Paso-to-San Antonio flight on Southwest Airlines on Friday afternoon, is jailed in Midland, according to Federal Bureau of Investigation Special Agent Tom Kirspel of Midland.

Anders, who is charged with interference with a flight attendant, is to undergo a detention hearing next week in United States Magistrate Louis Guirola's court in Midland.

If convicted, Anders could be sentenced up to 20 years in federal prison and fined $10,000, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery of Midland.

In his initial hearing on Friday before the magistrate, Anders was ordered jailed at least until the outcome of his detention hearing in which the magistrate will decide to grant or decline bail for Anders.

The seriousness of the offense is linked to the flight attendant's duties, including his role in "guaranteeing the safety" of the aircraft and the safety of the aircraft's passengers and crew, Beery said.

"We are going to treat it very seriously from the very beginning," Beery said. The prosecutor noted that an airborne disturbance in an airliner could get out of hand. "It could lead to any number of disastrous consequences very quickly."

The disturbance on Southwest Airlines Flight 448, a scheduled non-stop flight from El Paso to San Antonio, occurred between El Paso and Midland and about 100 nautical miles west of Midland, Kirspel said. The flight was diverted to Midland International Airport, where Midland police arrested Anders, who subsequently was turned over to the FBI in Midland.

Clinton orders U.S. troops to Rwanda as French begin pullout

Some worry that French withdrawal will flood Zaire with another tidal wave of refugees. Clinton says troops will be on humanitarian rather than peacekeeping mission as he asks Congress for $320 million more in aid.

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — French soldiers sent to halt the mass slaughter in Rwanda began leaving Friday, despite fears their withdrawal could set off a new exodus of panicky refugees fleeing into Zaire.

The United Nations is unprepared to fill the void that will be left by the departure of France's 2,500 troops, said Peter Hansen, U.N. undersecretary-general for humanitarian affairs.

The French are credited with preventing nearly 2 million Rwandans from fleeing their country by creating a safe haven in southwestern Rwanda.

But Hansen said that when the French leave, those Rwandans who have sought safety in protection zone could trek into Zaire, where 1.8 million refugees have already fled.

More than a million refugees are packed into fetid, disease-ridden camps around Goma, where about 1,800 are dying each day from cholera and other diseases. Hansen said the French withdrawal could create a second Goma in days.

"It's imperative the international community acts to prevent this," Hansen said in Geneva, Switzerland.

French Prime Minister Edouard Balladur said France would take the situation on the ground into account as it withdraws its soldiers, who he said will be replaced by troops from African countries.

France plans to have all its troops out by Aug. 22, when its mandate expires. By remaining, French soldiers inevitably would have been sucked deeper into the humanitarian and political crisis that has swamped Rwanda.

"We will not take any decisions that could make the situation even more precarious or cause alarm," Balladur told reporters in Abidjan, Ivory Coast.

About 300 French special forces pulled out early Friday from their bases in southwestern Rwanda and Goma, where they redeployed from Rwanda to help manage the flood of refugees and dig mass graves for the thousands of dead.

American servicemen based at Goma airport said the French are providing crucial work round the clock, but they looked forward to taking on a more prominent role as the French pulled out.

"They dig graves all day and patch the runway at night," said Army spokesman Maj. Guy Shields. "We will have to fill the gap here when they go."

President Clinton on Friday decided to send U.S. troops to Rwanda's capital of Kigali to open the airport for relief flights, administration officials said. They said the expanded role would be a humanitarian one and that the U.S. troops would not be on a peacekeeping mission.

Earlier Friday, Clinton asked Congress to approve $320 million more in emergency aid for Rwandan refugees, which would bring American aid to half a billion dollars since April.

Clinton said the Pentagon may use the airport in Kigali as a staging base for aid deliveries, in addition to the airport at Entebbe, Uganda. Most U.S. food and equipment now goes from Entebbe to Goma.

The Rwandan Patriotic Front, the Tutsi-led rebel force that defeated the country's Hutu government in 14 weeks of fighting, is poised to move into the protective zone when the French leave.

Today's air ban on Haiti slams door on persecuted

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — All scheduled air service to Haiti ends today, stranding hundreds of persecuted Haitians who have gained U.S. political asylum but have no way to leave their army-ruled nation.

Human rights advocates say it's unconscionable that the United States, which led the air ban as part of sanctions against Haiti's military coup leaders, has been unable to safeguard those granted asylum.

Washington cut off American flights to Haiti on June 24, and all American citizens in Haiti were advised to leave then.

U.S. officials say they have been trying for three weeks to charter a plane for the refugees, but they can't get permission from Haiti's de facto government to land.

There was no room for refugees aboard the last plane out today, an Air France jetliner to the neighboring Dominican Republic. Following U.S. and Canadian flight bans, Air France had been the only airline servicing Haiti.

"This is last-minute scrambling to deal with a problem they (had) denied existed," said Gretta Tovar Siebentritt, a research associate with Human Rights Watch-Americas.

Several refugees have begun hunger strikes in protest.

"I regret not having chosen to go by sea," said Amy Cadet, referring to the exodus of more than 21,000 Haitian boat people over the past six weeks.

Cadet, a 27-year-old seamstress who has been living in two safe houses since May, stopped eating Wednesday.

The United States has considered other ways of getting the Haitians out, such as by U.S. Coast Guard cutter or by land to the Dominican border. But air charters remain the main option, U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said.

The International Organization for Migration, which works with the United States on getting those granted asylum out of Haiti, has 500 ready to leave.

Another 800 Haitians approved for asylum are securing final papers, such as valid marriage certificates and blood tests, Schrager said.

More than 55,000 Haitians have filed asylum applications for themselves and their families. Up to 3,000 people have been killed since the military overthrew elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September 1991.

The air ban and economic sanctions aim at pressuring Haiti's military to step down and restore the elected government.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, the Security Council on Friday was studying a U.S. draft resolution authorizing a possible invasion to oust Haiti's army rulers.

Council members were awaiting a letter from Aristide, authorizing an invasion.

Many nations, especially in Latin American and the Caribbean, remain opposed to an invasion.

Envoys forge tougher sanctions to punish Serbs

GENEVA (AP) — Papering over their differences, envoys from the United States, Russia and Europe worked Friday on tougher sanctions to punish Bosnian Serbs for rejecting a peace plan.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher is to meet today with his counterparts from Russia and Europe to approve a package of reprisals aimed at further isolating the Serbs and pressuring them to end Bosnia's two-year war.

But despite unanimity on broadening economic sanctions against the Serbs, consensus broke down over military action and weapons sales to Bosnia's Muslims and Croats, who have formed a federation.

Vitaly Churkin, Russia's deputy foreign minister, said Moscow opposed the use of air strikes against Serb targets. Britain and France oppose allowing weapons sales to the Muslim-led government, as Washington wants to do.

Diplomats said the immediate priority was to clamp down on imports, which reach the Bosnian Serbs via Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

The economic embargo, imposed on Yugoslavia in 1992 for its role in fomenting Bosnia's war, would likely be widened to ban financial transactions and remittances from other countries. That may require an additional U.N. Security Council resolution.

The next steps would be tightening controls around the U.N.-designated safety zones of Sarajevo and Gorazde to prevent incursions by Serb forces or weaponry, and creating similar zones around four Muslim areas.

However, the 21,000 peacekeepers in Bosnia are already thinly stretched and governments are reluctant to volunteer additional troops. Air power alone would not be enough to enforce the zones.

Britain and France, the nations contributing the most troops, have both warned they may be forced to pull back because of deteriorating security.

Italy sentences ex-premier to 8.5 years in jail

ROME (AP) — Italy's sweeping corruption scandal claimed its highest-ranking figure Friday when former Premier Bettino Craxi was convicted of taking kickbacks from a bank and sentenced to 8½ years in prison.

Craxi, however, denounced the conviction from self-imposed exile at his villa in Tunisia, saying it was "preordained" by his political enemies.

Premier Silvio Berlusconi, Craxi's close friend and confidant, tried to shore up his own political credibility by promising to place his media and retail empire into a blind trust.

His Milan-based Fininvest SpA conglomerate has been linked to a growing investigation of bribery and tax fraud that has implicated his brother and others. The $7 billion-a-year company includes three private television stations and the nation's biggest retail chain.

Craxi was one of more than 3,000 politicians and businessmen implicated in kickback scandals involving Italy's closely linked business and political worlds since 1992.

Other former prime ministers, including Giulio Andreotti, seven-time premier from the Christian Democrat Party, are under suspicion. Craxi's conviction seemed to confirm that Italy's tradition of protecting its elite classes is drawing to an end.

Craxi left Italy for Tunisia in the spring and claimed he was too sick with diabetes to return for his trial in Milan. He was tried in absentia.

But to many Italians, his prosecution is of passing consequence. The main billing is Berlusconi and his efforts to keep his 10-week-old coalition government together.

Berlusconi's younger brother, Paolo, surrendered on Friday to authorities investigating alleged bribes and tax fraud at Fininvest and was put under house arrest.

Northern Europeans gasp amid highest temperatures in 100 years

■ Swedish psychologist advises newspaper readers to slow down and be mindful that thinking starts to become difficult at 75 degrees.

By Arthur Allen
Associated Press

BONN, Germany — It was so hot that fish suffocated, Germans drove only 55 mph on the autobahn, and from Ukraine to the U.K., it was almost impossible to buy a fan.

Northern Europe has had one of its hottest Julys in a century, with daytime temperatures averaging up to 95 degrees for weeks on end as far north as Scandinavia.

In Stockholm, Sweden, psychologist Curt R. Johansson advised readers of the Sydsvenska Dasgbladet newspaper to slow down and be mindful that thinking starts to become difficult at 75 degrees.

Above 81 degrees, "it's difficult to concentrate on anything at all," Johansson said.

In Germany, the heat wave has cooked up toxic smog. Hesse state ordered speed limits of 55 mph on Tuesday on the usually limitless superhighways after ozone levels around the city of Frankfurt shot up to dangerous levels.

The speed limits, relaxed Friday night, set off an angry debate. The conservative federal government charged that the measure by the left-wing Hesse government would do no good and was a publicity stunt.

But 80 percent of drivers were obeying the regulation, police said.

In Poland the trains ran late, with engineers lowering their speeds to avoid derailing on overheated tracks.

As for fans, "you won't find one in all of Europe anymore," exaggerated Juergen Skott of the fan company Fakir. Production schedules were based on the cool summer of 1993, and most companies won't be able to deliver new fans before September, he said.

Japan also has been sweltering in a summer heat wave. Unusually low rainfall has left several regions of the country parched, leading to water rationing and some 110,000 chickens dead of heat prostration.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, a 27-year-old asthmatic man died because of heat, and ambulance services reported high numbers of old people and children suffering heat stroke.

Danes were told to take thermometers to the market to make sure wheezing refrigerators were keeping the meat fresh, and about 15,000 canceled vacations to Greece, apparently because the North Sea seemed warm enough.

Toxic blue-green algae belts have blossomed in the Baltic because of the unusually warm, calm weather.

At lakes in the northeast German state of Mecklenburg-Western Pomerania, high temperatures hatched insects and algae that used up the oxygen, littering beaches with suffocated fish.

The danger of wildfire forced foresters to ban cookouts, a staple of the German picnic.

The searing heat was occasionally broken by violent thunderstorms. Mud slides isolated several towns in Austria's Tyrolean Alps for several days this week.

In Britain, "Beer sales have been buoyant," said Vicky Wood.

5 hostages die when Russian police choose bullets over talk

MINERALNYE VODY, Russia (AP) — After four major kidnappings in eight months, police chose violence over negotiation to end a kidnapping in this southern resort town. Five hostages and a hijacker died in a shootout Friday.

Authorities hope the new hard-line approach will end the rash of hostage-taking in Mineralnye Vody. The Caucasus Mountain town, once renowned for its soothing mud baths, has become a symbol of the country's growing lawlessness.

In the three previous hijackings — in December, May and June — authorities paid multimillion dollar ransoms to secure the release of hostages, then captured the kidnappers afterward.

But on Friday, police commandos instead stormed a helicopter the four hijackers had demanded. Four women hostages and a kidnapping suspect died in the 3 a.m. shootout, and a fifth hostage, an 18-year-old woman, died on the way to the hospital.

About 15 people were wounded, authorities said. The three surviving kidnapping suspects were taken into custody.

The kidnapping drama began Thursday when masked gunmen, waving pistols and hand grenades, hijacked a bus carrying about 40 passengers at Mineralnye Vody's train station and ordered the driver to go to the airport.

The Ministry for Emergency Situations said one of the gunmen detonated a grenade and there was shooting before the commandos stormed the helicopter at the airport.

"That was the only possible option," said Vladimir Tomarovsky, a spokesman for the Federal Counterintelligence Service in Moscow.

"The gunmen presented a real threat to the hostages, it wasn't just blackmail. Having analyzed the situation, authorities came to the conclusion that it would be too dangerous to let the hostage-takers depart in a helicopter."

Besides the helicopter, the hijackers had demanded $15 million in U.S. currency, which they did not receive.

Riots, strikes cripple Nigerian oil exports

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria plunged deeper into chaos Friday when its largest labor group threw its weight to a wave of strikes that have crippled the nation but, so far, failed to topple the iron-fisted military regime.

The unrest and economic deterioration of this nation of 90 million people, Africa's most populous, is acclerating daily as the grass-roots movement to oust Gen. Sani Abacha gains momentum.

On Friday, oil workers threatened to sabotage the nation's oil companies unless they shut down immediately; student riots broke out in Lagos for a fifth straight day; a defiant judge ordered the government to reopen an outlawed newspaper; and a main human rights group accused police of murdering its leader.

The nation's top Christian clergyman, in the latest of increasingly harsh letters to Abacha, released what he said was his final missive to the embattled ruler.

"God has decreed your exit from power and nothing can change it," Angliclan Archbishop Abiodun Adetiloye wrote. "Good luck if you choose to ignore his orders."

Oil workers vow to sabotage nation's petroleum firms unless they shut down immediately.

But by far the biggest development was the decision to strike by the National Labor Congress, a coalition of 41 trade unions representing 5 million workers.

The strike was to begin Wednesday, a huge boost to oil workers whose nearly month-long walkout has already prompted strikes by other workers and threatened to strangle the nation's main source of revenue.

The crisis began July 4 when oil workers went on strike to protest the imprisonment of Moshood K.O. Abiola, the probable winner of the June 12, 1993, presidential election aimed at ending a decade of military rule.

Abiola was arrested after declaring himself president to mark the first anniversary of the election, which was annulled by the generals while votes were being counted.

Shell petroleum announced for the first time that its operations have been hurt by the strike. Shell produces more than 50 percent of the crude oil in this major exporting nation.

"We expect a significant reduction in crude oil production, which may well be in excess of one-third of normal levels," it said in a statement.

A scheduled meeting Friday between Abacha's junta and leaders of the National Union of Petroleum and Gas Workers collapsed when the union said it would not attend because "Abiola has not been released." The union represents 50,000 rank-and-file oil workers.

They were backed by the union representing upper-level employees, the Petroleum and Natural Gas Senior Staff Association, which also refused to attend and urged any of its 10,000 members still working to stay home.

Later, union president Bola Owoduni said the union told executives at Shell and Chevron to shut down oil production or risk sabotage.

Senators inquire into Foster's death; some see 'interference'

■ GOP specifically accuses 1 official of lying to Congress, charges that White House conceals truth about how presidential aides dealt with Whitewater.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican senators accepted that Vincent Foster Jr. committed suicide as they gingerly inquired into the year-old death Friday, but they also charged that the White House interfered with a police investigation.

At the same time, the Republicans fired off a fresh barrage of charges that the White House was concealing the truth about how presidential aides dealt with Whitewater. They specifically accused one official of lying to Congress.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York, the chief GOP accuser, said the White House "has concealed, disguised and distorted the truth, all in the service of politics and the president's self-preservation."

Democrats rejected those claims.

Even after the Senate Banking Committee took sworn statements from 37 people and collected 10,000 documents, said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., "There is no indication whatsoever of direct presidential abuse or involvement."

Added Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.: "To compare Whitewater with Watergate and Iran-Contra, as some have done, borders on the ridiculous."

Foster, 49, deputy White House counsel, handled Whitewater matters for the Clintons in the White House. He was an old friend and a law partner of Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Some conservatives, including talk show broadcasters and elements of the religious right, have characterized Foster's death as an unsolved mystery — or even a murder.

Dodd called such talk "obscene," and Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., accused congressional Republicans of encouraging it.

D'Amato asserted White House interference in the police investigation of Foster's death. He produced a sworn statement by U.S. Park Police Capt. Charles Hume, who had been scheduled to testify Friday but did not show up.

He quoted Hume: "It became a joke, that the Park Police had to wait to get permission from the White House before they could do their job."

Cheryl Braun, a U.S. Park Police sergeant, testified that Webster Hubbell, then an associate attorney general and a friend of Clinton and Foster, pulled her away when she tried to question Foster's sister, Sheila Anthony, about Foster's state of mind before his death.

"It was rude," said John Rolla, an investigator with the Park Police. "Cheryl was angry."

Other police investigators complained of "stonewalling." But Braun and Rolla said that term referred to Foster's relatives, not the White House, in the moments immediately after they learned of his death. They said no one at the White House tried to influence their decisions.

Despite the nature of the testimony, Rolla brought laughter to the hearing room when he told of the moment he realized he was not handling a routine suicide investigation.

"I realized this guy is fairly important," he said. "And when the president of the United States walked in, it dawned on me."

Some wonder if Aristide letter sanctions invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and U.S. officials agreed Friday on the contents of a letter from him to the United Nations as it considers a U.S.-backed resolution sanctioning potential use of force against Haiti's military regime, an Aristide associate said.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said all parties were happy with Aristide's letter, which had been sought by some Security Council members before they were willing to vote for the resolution.

However it could not be learned immediately whether the letter specifically endorsed the U.S.-proposed language of the resolution calling for "all necessary means" to drive the military coup leaders from power.

Aristide's associate said earlier that the Haitian leader insisted on making sure he did not endorse invasion.

The phrase "all necessary means" to restore Aristide's democratically elected government is widely interpreted as being the phrase that would sanction a U.S.-led invasion, if President Clinton decided to launch one.

According to one State Department official, Aristide had expressed no problem with that phrase, and in fact, suggested only a few changes to the resolution.

His backing is important to the Clinton administration because some Security Council members said they would not approve the resolution unless Aristide supported it.

Several Latin and Caribbean countries on Thursday expressed opposition to a potential invasion, saying diplomacy and sanctions need more time to work.

Whether Aristide's letter would meet their concerns was unclear.

Aristide previously has stated the Haitian constitution prevents him from calling for invasion, a point disputed by some U.S. officials.

U.S. officials have expressed confidence the Security Council would support their resolution,

Congress debates influence of welfare on out-of-wedlock births

■ More nation news/8B

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lukisha Jackson was 16 when she had her first baby. She knew about birth control, she told Congress on Friday, but getting pregnant was "not a serious issue. If I got pregnant, it would be accepted."

Today, four years and another child later, Jackson is on welfare and in her fourth year at the University of Maryland. The father of her children is behind bars and cannot support them.

"It's not a big deal to get pregnant," the 20-year-old woman told the House Ways and Means subcommittee on human resources during a hearing on the rise in out-of-wedlock births and the question of whether welfare encourages illegitimacy.

"I believe teen-agers have babies for a variety of reasons, such as needing love, rebelling against authority and to feel grown up," she said.

"However, I feel that the overlying reason is because it is accepted by society. Our mothers, fathers, teachers, even our ministers, and especially our peers and including the government accept that American teen-agers are producing babies faster than any other country."

Nearly one in three children is born to an unwed mother and the number is expected to climb to one in two by the turn of the century.

Conservatives say the welfare system is illegitimacy's economic life support system because it provides single mothers with cash, food, medical and housing benefits that combined are a better deal than working in a minimum-wage job with no health insurance and day-care costs.

"What the welfare system does is enable a young woman to legitimately say to herself 'If I have this baby I can support it without husband,'" said American Enterprise Institute fellow Charles Murray.

Sexist, racist, violent: Is this Disney film?

By David Foster
Associated Press

Sexist. Racist. Homophobic. Violent. Even, perhaps, a threat to democratic ideals. What kind of depraved entertainment could generate such bitter epithets? A Snoop Doggy Dog video? An Andrew Dice Clay concert?

Would you believe "The Lion King," Disney's G-rated, coming-of-age saga that's well on its way toward becoming the highest-grossing animated film in history? Believe it.

Some parents, psychologists and pundits read between the lions and see not family fun but shocking violence and offensive stereotypes: subservient lionesses, jive-talking hyenas, a swishy Uncle Scar, a father's murder.

"The movie is full of stereotypes," Harvard psychologist Carolyn Newberger complained in an op-ed piece for The Boston Globe.

"The good-for-nothing hyenas are urban blacks; the arch-villain's gestures are effeminate, and he speaks in supposed gay cliches."

Classy fluff

IT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU

At right, waitress Yvonne Biasi, (Bridget Fonda), and policman Charlie Lang, (Nicolas Cage) find their lives turned upside down by the promise of sudden wealth in "It Could Happen to You." Above, Lang, Biasi and Muriel, played by Rosie Perez share a $4 million lottery prize.

■ All-star cast saves film with fun-loving case of cutes.

By Yardena Arar
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — "Fairy tales can come true, it could happen to you," goes the line from the old standard that inspired the title of the newest romantic comedy in the studio summer lineup.

Actually, however, the story of a New York cop who offers a down-on-her-luck coffee shop waitress half of any winnings from a lottery ticket in lieu of a tip — and keeps his end of the deal even when the ticket wins $4 million — was inspired by a true incident hinted at in closing credits.

But reality checks should be the last thing on the mind of prospective viewers of this gentle urban fable. "It Could Happen to You" is no "Sleepless in Seattle" — playwright Jane Anderson's screenplay is too much sugar and too little spice — but director Andrew Bergman's quirky comic sensibility and a super cast headed by Nicolas Cage, Bridget Fonda and Rosie Perez make for very classy fluff.

■ "It Could Happen to You" is playing at North Park.

Cage plays Charlie Lang, the patrolman everyone wants on their beat — a guy so caring that he spends his time off duty playing stickball with the kids in his Queens neighborhood. Of course, this also may be due to the fact that his hairdresser wife, Muriel (Perez), is no joy to come home to.

A world-class kvetch, she's totally obsessed with money and frustrated by Charlie's devotion to his low-paying profession. If only Charlie were on the take, Muriel tells a client — "Then, I could understand."

In another part of town, meanwhile, waitress Yvonne Biasi (Fonda) has spent her morning in court, where she is forced to declare bankruptcy because her estranged, ne'er-do-well actor husband has run up thousands of dollars on her credit card.

Wandering with his partner into the coffee shop where Yvonne works to grab a quick lunch, Charlie realizes he doesn't have enough cash on him to tip her for the meal he doesn't even have time to eat. But sensing that she's having a bad day, he tries to make up for it by promising to

Many call title change big blunder of movie season

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — One of the great things about movies is that any trivial thing they do can suddenly become controversial.

For example: "It Could Happen to You," or as some would prefer it still was called, "Cop Gives Waitress $2 Million Tip." The production was known by the latter title or variations thereof throughout its development and most of its pre-release period. The less tabloidish, equally awkward "Could Happen" was applied a few months ago.

The original title sounded less generic and it better described the film, in which Nicolas Cage's New York policeman splits a winning lottery ticket with Bridget Fonda's hard-luck hash-slinger. Other than that, big deal, right?

Well, some people think so. Both Siskel and Ebert expressed their appalled dismay with the title change on their weekly movie review program, and Entertainment Weekly film critic Owen Gleiberman pontificated that "the decision to change the title may go down as one of the bigger blunders of the movie season."

Well, this must be serious — at least to critics who would rather think about anything other than the coming Little Rascals or Pauly Shore movies. But before the scandal gets completely out of control, it's only fair to give the producer of — oh, let's call it "Cop Happens to Waitress'" — a chance to explain himself.

"The other title was very catchy, but it just didn't have the tone of the movie," Mike Lobell said. "It sounded cheap. We felt it was a romantic movie that needed a romantic title.

"We loved that other title," Lobell added, perhaps thinking damage control. "But the title we have now really suits the movie. And no, it didn't come out of the song 'Young at Heart,' the phrasing is different."

Hollywood prepares to close summer of unexpected

By Bernard Weinraub
N.Y. Times News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Summer only began a couple of weeks ago, but in Hollywood it's almost over.

The 14 weeks between Memorial Day and Labor Day are the richest box-office period of the year for movies, but the results — or most of them — are already in, and there are lots of surprises.

Topping the list is "Forrest Gump," the Tom Hanks comedy-drama that has exceeded all expectations to become one of the biggest hits of the season, and "Speed," the high-voltage action spectacular starring Keanu Reeves, Sandra Bullock, Dennis Hopper and a bus with nine lives.

The two followed "The Lion King," the Disney animated musical, which is thus far the most profitable movie of the summer, having grossed $200 million.

'Stars can only enhance a movie that people want to see in the first place. If people don't like what a movie is about — or think they've seen it before — they just won't go. Star or no star.'

—Marvin Antonowsky
movie marketer

Besides "The Lion King," "Forrest Gump," and "Speed," the major summer successes include "The Flintstones" and, perhaps, "True Lies," the newly opened Arnold Schwarzenegger action-drama.

Coming after last year's disastrous Schwarzenegger epic, "The Last Action Hero," the apparent success of "True Lies" underscores the power of some movie stars at the box office. But only in the right movie.

"A true star outlasts his or her flops," said A.D. Murphy, a longtime box-office analyst who works for The Hollywood Reporter. "But the public is very forgiving of these stars. Clark Gable and Bette Davis had significant failures. The public forgave them. That's the sign of a star."

Marvin Antonowsky, a movie marketing authority, said simply: "Stars can only enhance a movie that people want to see in the first place. If people don't like what a movie is about — or think they've seen it before — they just won't go. Star or no star."

CRITICS: Many find fault with disney's 'The Lion King'

(From 1B)

The movie's plot is a sort of Hamlet-meets-Abbott-and-Costello-in-the-jungle: The lion king Mufasa is murdered by his evil brother Scar, who then lays the blame on Mufasa's son and heir, Simba.

Riddled with guilt, Simba runs away and is befriended by a warthog named Pumbaa and a meerkat named Timon who teach him to forget his troubles. Scar takes over and the kingdom plunges into chaos.

Eventually, Simba returns to overthrow Scar and reclaim his rightful crown. In between, there's lots of singing and dancing and a few bad vaudevillian jokes.

Criticism isn't new for Disney. Parents still fret about the death of Bambi's mother. Some feminists are uncomfortable with the prince-as-savior themes in "Sleeping Beauty," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," and "Cinderella."

More recently, some Arab-Americans denounced "Aladdin" as racist.

Ann Adams of Cotuit, Mass., said she hadn't planned to take her 3½-year-old daughter to "The Lion King," but gave in after listening to Allison count the days to the movie's premiere.

Now she wishes she hadn't. She feels deceived by the movie's G rating.

"It's supposed be a family show, a movie that you can take any child to," Adams said. "We ended up sitting in the lobby for half the movie. Bambi was a piece of cake next to this."

Adams cited the scene most often criticized: the murder of Mufasa, in which the lion falls to his death as Simba watches. That scene, along with the climactic battle between a grown Simba and Scar, has prompted some psychiatrists to recommend that preschoolers and sensitive older children not see the film.

"It's well beyond what I'd want to take a 2- or 3-year-old to see — just the wickedness of it," said Dr. Laurie Humphries, who heads a committee on television and the media for the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. "These are pretty bad guys."

But that's just the start of a spirited Disney dissection.

"The Lion King" is "a fundamentally sexist film," wrote Detroit Free Press columnist Neil Chethik.

Simba's young sweetie, Nala, may beat him at wrestling early on, but when things go bad under Scar's rule, she and the other lionesses become "impotent victims whose only hope is to find a male lion who can save them," Chethik wrote.

Then there are Scar's henchmen, those slobbering hyenas.

Jane R. Eisner of The Philadelphia Inquirer found a harmful message in the helplessness of Scar's subjects, who wait for the royal Simba to save them.

"Anybody at Disney heard of 'empowerment?'" she asked.

"If we are ever going to move into the next century with political and organizational structures that truly reflect the wants and needs of the populace, we must teach our children to see beyond the dependency of early childhood, beyond the sense of entitlement and victimization so many embrace and into a world where they believe they can and should and will be responsible for themselves."

Wow. Is this a deep cartoon, or what?

"These people need to get a life," said Disney spokeswoman Terry Press. "It's a story. It's fiction."

Press offered a point-by-point defense.

Mufasa's death? "It's made very clear in the movie that Simba is not responsible for the death of his father," Press said.

Sexism? Without his girlfriend Nala's prodding, Simba would not return from exile. But that's beside the point, Press said: "It's not her story. It's his story, about his coming to terms with who he is."

Racism? "The hyenas are voiced by Whoopi Goldberg and Cheech Marin," Press said. "Do you think Whoopi Goldberg would lend her voice to a character that is racist? I don't think so."

Press said the movie's popularity speaks for itself. It grossed $174.3 million in ticket sales in five weeks.

"People are going back again and again, so it must have some resonance," Press said. "I can't get into addressing everyone's personal concerns with the characters."

HAPPEN: Stars save 'cute' romance

return the next day with either the normal gratuity or half of whatever he winds up winning with a lottery ticket he has bought at Muriel's request.

The ticket comes in a winner, of course, and over an irate Muriel's vehement protests Charlie fulfills his end of the bargain. His act of generosity makes him and the two women instant media darlings, but as Charlie and Yvonne sense that they have more in common than their shared good fortune, his already-shaky marriage becomes more and more unbearable.

However "It Could Happen to You" is too smart to take its Capra-esque scenario very seriously.

From the beginning, a narrator identified only as Angel (Isaac Hayes) couches it in once-upon-a-time terms, and much of the story unfolds as headlines in the New York Post.

The city itself plays a starring role — in many ways, it's the cinematic equivalent of an "I (heart) New York" bumper sticker. No rain, not much traffic, only small town-type crime, and the nicest people you'd ever meet. Well, it is a fairy tale.

Cage and Fonda play the sweet-natured soulmates with genuine conviction and just the right measure of sex appeal. Yeah, they're sort of wimpy, but boy, do they look great together.

ON SCREEN

N.Y. Times News Service

Condensed movie reviews by Los Angeles Daily News film critics. The rating system for the film list is: 4 stars — Don't miss it; 3 stars — worth your while; 2 stars — Has it moments; 1 star — If you must.

ANGELS IN THE OUTFIELD: Schmaltzy, dysfunctional family film remake of the zestier '50s comedy about major league losers and heavenly help. Danny Glover is the short-fused manager of the cellar-dwelling California Angels. Joseph Gordon-Levitt is the foster home kid who has pennant-winning visions. Christopher Lloyd leads the celestial, computer-assisted cleanup crew. PG. Rating: 2 stars.

BABY'S DAY OUT: Writer-producer John Hughes' latest step on the road to infantilism is a "Ransom of Red Chief" rip-off, in which bumbling kidnappers chase a gleefully oblivious 9-month-old around Chicago. A sick idea — baby is constantly crawling into life-threatening situations — is played out with comic gusto, if not exactly sophistication. PG-13. Rating: 2½ stars.

BAD GIRLS: Silly, sporadically fun western, in which Madeleine Stowe, Mary Stuart Masterson, Andie MacDowell and Drew Barrymore indulge in all the dumb cowboy movie cliches guys have for decades. The negligible plot is something about prostitutes-turned-outlaws-turned-good guys. Guns and glamour keep facing each other down, while our interest trots off into the sunset. R. Rating: 2 stars.

BEING HUMAN: The director of "Local Hero" presents a whimsical but ultimately puzzling voyage through history in five segments starring Robin Williams as caveman, Roman slave, medieval traveler, Portuguese castaway and modern-day slumlord and parent. Williams is a charming everyman, dealing with important human issues ranging from love and loss to greed and the quest for comfortable footwear. But what's the point? PG-13. Rating: 2½ stars.

BEVERLY HILLS COP III: The heat is gone from this third go 'round for Eddie Murphy's maverick cop. This time he's after a criminal who also heads the security force for a Southern California theme park. Director John Landis ("The Blues Brothers") has a lot of fun shooting up attractions, and Murphy is comfortable in the undemanding role. But this thing is so detached and repetitious, it's like watching a tape loop of the first "Beverly Hills Cop." R. Rating: 2 stars.

BLOWN AWAY: "Speed" without the bus. As it turns out, the bus was really important. Overdramatized but underimagined, this thriller about a mad bomber's (Tommy Lee Jones) vendetta against a Boston bomb squad ace (Jeff Bridges) is slowed down by specious character development and looney, symbolic stretches of "meaning." All of this nonkinetic drivel just provides down time for one to think about how preposterous the whole thing is. R. Rating: 2 stars.

CITY SLICKERS II: Billy Crystal is back in the saddle, but the herd of laughs has disappointingly thinned out in this urbanites-on-the-range sequel. This time, our favorite New York cowboys are searching for hidden gold instead of male-bonded smiles, and it's neither as sweet nor as fun. Jack Palance rustles the show from everyone else, again, as the late Curly's even nastier twin brother, Duke. PG-13. Rating: 2 stars.

THE CLIENT: Susan Sarandon and Tommy Lee Jones star as dueling attorneys in the case of a young boy (Brad Renfro), who knows a mob secret but fears reprisals if he reveals it to government prosecutors. First-rate performances, Joel Schumacher's direction and a screenplay that focuses on relationships rather than a fairly thin story line make this third screen adaptation of a John Grisham thriller the best yet. PG. Rating: 2½ stars.

THE COWBOY WAY: "Coogan's Bluff," "McCloud," "Crocodile Dundee," "Midnight Cowboy" — throw them all in a blender, scrape up whatever flies out, and you've got this senseless, cowboys-in-New-York comedy thriller. Woody Harrelson and Kiefer Sutherland are the rustics who bust up an illegal alien enslavement ring. Harrelson supplies the film's only charm, and that's dependent on your tolerance of male narcissism. PG-13. Rating: 2 stars.

THE CROW: This dark, visceral rendering of James O'Barr's comic books is also a haunting tribute to the late Brandon Lee, whose graceful performance will doubtless establish him as a cult figure on a par with his father Bruce Lee. Rookie director Alex Proyas has made one of the most visually striking violent movies in recent memory — and don't forget the killer alternative rock score. All in all, an impressive package. R. Rating: 3 stars.

EVEN COWGIRLS GET THE BLUES: Gus Van Sant ("Drugstore Cowboy") directs Tom Robbins' overwritten, counterculture novel into the ground. Uma Thurman stars as the large-thumbed goddess of hitchhiking who gets involved with a lesbian feminist insurrection at a western beauty ranch. Horrid dialogue, smug attitudes and incomprehensible storytelling lose the day. R. Rating: 1½ stars.

FEAR OF A BLACK HAT: The funny rap version of "This Is Spinal Tap" (as opposed to "CB4"). This mock documentary about a fictional group, NWH, lampoons just about every excess modern urban music — and the alarmed, white response to it — indulges. Rusty Cundieff, who also plays band leader Ice Cold, wrote and directed. R. Rating: 3 stars.

THE FLINTSTONES: The live-action version of the Hanna-Barbera cartoon looks super, delivers dozens of Stone Age sight gags and paleolithic puns, and boasts the incomparable John Goodman as bumbling Fred Flinstone. But with only the flimsiest of stories to tie it all together, the film gradually becomes a yabba-dabba-yawner. PG. Rating: 2 stars.

FORREST GUMP: A superb blend of satire and sentimentality powers this look at 30 years of tumultuous history through the eyes of a lovable fool. Low IQ'd Forrest (Tom Hanks) becomes a football star, a Vietnam War hero, a business success and a pop culture guru, all through pretty much dumb luck. Director Robert Zemeckis ("Back to the Future") goes for some impressive computer effects and some baldly feelgood manipulations. Yet the film's underpinnings remain as dark and complex as those events of the past four decades that have made us all feel kind of like idiots. PG-13. Rating: 4 stars.

FOUR WEDDINGS AND A FUNERAL: "Enchanted April" director Mike Newell tackles a more contemporary collection of Britons in this stylish and winsome romantic comedy strung out over two years' worth of social gatherings. Hugh Grant shines as a commitment-phobic Londoner in non-pursuit of a forthright American beauty (Andie MacDowell), but the entire ensemble cast is first-rate. A fine, frothy entertainment, perfect for the date crowd. R. Rating: 3 stars.

GETTING EVEN WITH DAD: Macaulay Culkin is paired with Ted Danson in this clunky comedy about a widowed ex-con whose plans for one last heist run into unexpected interference from his lonely, precocious son. Saul Rubinek and Gailard Sartain play Danson's cartoonish henchmen, and Glenne Headly plays an undercover cop who winds up making nice with Dad. Danson's street accent is painfully bogus; Culkin is still cute but he can't do much with this picturesque goo. PG. Rating: 1 star.

GO FISH: Girl meets girl in this intimate, wryly funny, super-low-budget lesbian love story produced and written by director Rose Troche and leading lady Guinevere Turner. Amateurishly filmed and acted, but still an engaging, uncompromising portrait of everyday life in a community that doesn't get much mass-media exposure. Not rated. Rating: 2½ stars.

END: Hollywood to close summer season

(From 1B)

wanted to see in the first place were:

— Julia Roberts, who played an unlikely journalist in a weak comedy, "I Love Trouble." Ms. Roberts and her co-star, Nick Nolte, didn't get along in the making of the film, and it showed onscreen in their lack of chemistry.

— Kevin Costner, in the title role of "Wyatt Earp," a Western that was not only very long (over three hours) but also not very well timed. It was released less than a year after "Tombstone," a successful two-hour action-drama that was also about the celebrated lawman and starred Val Kilmer and Kurt Russell. (On the other hand, "Maverick," with Mel Gibson, Jodie Foster and James Garner, was a success, drawing big audiences for several weeks.)

— Macaulay Culkin, who failed to lure audiences in the comedy "Getting Even With Dad," thus raising questions about his box-office clout as he reaches adolescence. (At the same time, his co-star, Ted Danson, proved that being a television star doesn't translate into movie stardom. The same applies to Woody Harrelson, another alumni from "Cheers," whose expensive comedy, "The Cowboy Way," died quickly.)

This hasn't been a particularly warm summer for sequels, either, as films like "Beverly Hills Cop 3," and "City Slickers 2," proved. Both performed tepidly.

Other casualties were Rob Reiner and Penny Marshall, top-notch directors who tasted their first failures with a couple of big-budget losers, "North" and "Renaissance Man."

"Wolf," which paired another high-profile director, Mike Nichols, with two major stars, Jack Nicholson and Michelle Pfeiffer, opened strongly, but then quickly wilted in the summer heat. It may eke out a small profit.

"The Client," based on the John Grisham best seller, drew large crowds in its first weekend despite its lack of top stars like those in such other Grisham-based films as "The Firm" (Tom Cruise) and "The Pelican Brief" (Ms. Roberts and Denzel Washington).

But "The Shadow," a high-tech adventure starring Alec Baldwin, was a disappointment to its producers and studio, Universal.

Failures also outweighed successes in the family-film category, where "Baby's Day Out," "Getting Even With Dad," "Little Big League" and, most recently, "North" and "Lassie" all fared worse than expected. On the other hand, the baseball fantasy for children, "Angels in the Outfield," has been doing surprisingly brisk business.

To studio executives, this raised questions about the current glut of films. By the end of this summer, a record 65 will have opened, many of them aimed at family audiences, or directly at children. Though many parents may doubt it, there is a limit to how many movies even a child can attend.

"First and foremost, it creates a booking problem in theaters," Robert G. Friedman, president of worldwide advertising at Warner Brothers, said of the summer avalanche. "Secondly, it creates an identity problem for the movies among the public. For the first time since I can remember, there are very few movies that are registering in terms of public awareness until the week they open. The audience is so focused on what happened last week, they haven't had a chance to think about what's coming. That's based on the glut of movies."

"The good news," he added, "is that a lot of people seem in the mood to go to the movies this summer."

Murphy of The Hollywood Reporter describes this summer's moviegoing as "excellent, so far: not as good as last year, but then we had 'Jurassic Park.' "

Officially, the summer's not over, even in Hollywood. Major films to be released in the next few weeks include "Clear and Present Danger," the Harrison Ford action-drama based on the Tom Clancy book, and Oliver Stone's "Natural Born Killers," a blood-splattered satire about two serial killers.

However well or badly these films do, they aren't likely to displace "Forrest Gump" as the summer's most-talked-about movie.

A romance about a slow-witted youth whose generosity, innocence and optimism takes him on a historical march through the last three decades, "Gump" promised to be a modest success at best. Even at Paramount, the film's producers are amazed at the reaction, which has resulted in a $100 million gross in the movie's first 18 days. Despite the current extremely competitive atmosphere, it is No. 1 at the box office.

"It's truly appealing to every demographic, from 8 to 80," said the director, Bob Zemeckis, in an interview. "That's the surprise. Teen-agers are seeing it more than once. I thought it wouldn't appeal to anyone under 25. I was wrong."

Seeking to explain the film's success, Zemeckis said: "There's something in it that moves people, and that's rare in a movie these days."

'Black Beauty' receives more neighs than yeas

By Todd Camp
N.Y. Times News Service

Top-notch screenwriter Caroline Thompson's directorial debut may not be on the same level as her past projects, but kids should enjoy it nonetheless.

Anna Sewell's children's classic "Black Beauty" gets the big-screen treatment once again — not that it needed it. It's a sentiment echoed from Thompson's previous writing project, last year's brilliant realization of "The Secret Garden."

The big difference is "The Secret Garden" was well worth another look. "Black Beauty" should have stayed in the stable.

Thompson's biggest contribution is letting the story unfold through the eyes (and voice) of the horse itself. Both earlier incarnations of the tale — the 1946 American version and the 1971 British version — were told by humans.

But depending upon your ability to suspend disbelief, the thoughts of a horse come off as somewhat silly. Kid stories told from the animal's point of view are dicey ventures at best, and very few manage to pull off the effect successfully.

The story spans two decades, as Black Beauty tells of his various owners: a loving well-to-do family, a snooty aristocratic couple, a tawdry but pleasant cabby and several others.

While the horse talks of his animal friends, his near scrapes with death and his dreams of finding his original owner, the film travels from the sprawling, lush English countryside to the dirty cobblestone streets of old London.

All of this makes for plenty of pretty pictures and lots of lovely cinematography, but not much story. All the story-telling genius that Thompson exhibited in movies like "Edward Scissorhands" and "Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas" seems to have melted away into one galloping montage after another.

Danny Elfman's lush score blends beautifully with the images but still can't manage to make the whole thing seem coherent.

Parents engaged in the endless search for suitable entertainment for young eyes will be pleased with this animal yarn, but even the syrupy "Lassie" comes off as having more substance.

■ Midlander to be missionary

Nathaniel Aaron Tague, son of Midlanders Gary and Betty Anne Tague, has been assigned to the France Bordeaux Mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for a two-year voluntary mission beginning Aug. 12.

Tague

A missionary farewell will be held for Tague at 9 a.m. Sunday in the chapel, 4805 Gateway Street. Visitors are welcome.

A hotel/restaurant institutional management major at Texas Tech University, Tague graduated from Lee High School in 1993 where he was a member of the band.

While in high school, he also received his Eagle Scout Award, was a Christmas in April volunteer and graduated from his church's four-year early morning seminary program.

Missionary work has become a tradition in the Tague family with older brothers, Daniel and Edward, having served missions in Pittsburgh and South Africa respectively and following in the footsteps of their father who, as a young man, served a mission in Texas.

Upon his return, Tague plans to finish his degree at Texas Tech before attending cooking school where he plans to become a chef specializing in French cusine.

■ Church to host talent show

ODESSA — Desert Rose Ministries, Quad K Radio and Heavenly Treasures will present the "Jesus West Texas '94 Vocal talent Show" Aug. 6 at Life Unlimited Church, Highway 191 and Loop 336, Odessa.

More than $1,500 in prizes will be awarded with winners in each category performing songs on stage at "Jesus West Texas '94" Aug. 20 at Centennial Plaza here.

Age categories are 0-5, 6-11, 12-16, male 17 plus, female 17 plus and vocal ensembles with up to five singers.

Registration is $15 and may be paid at the church at 9:30 a.m. the day of the event. Each category will compete at different times of the day.

For more information, call Kathy Redwine at 550-5209 or 550-9808.

■ Unitarians offer Egypt forum

The Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely Ave. at Midkiff Road, will present a forum showcasing Egypt at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

The forum, which will include numerous photographs of tombs, temples and pyramids, will be presented by Danita Langford. Ms. Langford will share her experiences from cruising on the Nile to riding in a hot air balloon.

Child care will be provided.

■ Cuthbert 'note burning' service

Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church is holding a "note burning" service at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The church parsonage was paid off in June and now all church property is debt-free.

The 7 p.m. service will be a fifth Sunday singing. Guest singers and church members will be singing gospel songs.

■ Christians to pray for Rwanda

United Methodists are being asked to join in a worldwide "Day of Prayer and Healing for Rwanda" on Sunday.

United Methodists and other denominations of the National Council of Churches are among those being asked to focus on the African nation and its people in prayers, sermons and giving. The day of prayer was initiated by the All-Africa Council of Churches.

And, as refugees continue to pour out of Rwanda, the United Methodists Council of Bishops is launching a Bishops' Appeal and Campaign for Africa.

This year, the UM Committee on Relief already has spent $1 million to assist African refugees.

Graham mixes holy rock with salvation message

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A smile lit up the warm, leathery face of the Rev. Billy Graham when asked about the state of evangelism in the world today.

"It's excellent," said the 75-year-old evangelist.

The world is in the midst of a gigantic religious revival, he said, the likes of which he's never seen.

Graham has reached out to more than 180 million people in 180 countries and territories preaching the Gospel. He has met with prime ministers, popes, presidents and kings. He has written 17 books and has won at least 12 major awards ranging from the Presidential Medal of Freedom to the Clergyman of the Year honor from the National Pilgrim Society.

The reception of his message around the globe has encouraged Graham but he said the most crucial segment of the population to reach now is today's youth — the teen-to-twentysomething generation. He said an evangelist from a different generation needs to also be an interpreter of sorts if he wants to touch today's youth with the Gospel.

"We have a lot of belief without commitment — people believe in God with their heads but they are not committed," Graham said. "But I still think we are within a gigantic religious revival. That seems strange when you read the headlines with all the crime and terrible things going on. Christ forecast such a time when the good would get better and the evil would get worse. And we've seen that in this generation.

"That's where our greatest emphasis is, on the youth," Graham said. "And that's who we've been seeing more and more. For them, there are a lot of hopeful signs."

He saw one sign on a recent trip to Cleveland. Graham helped organize a rally in Municipal Stadium complete with contemporary music from various Christian rock artists. He did not understand the music but more than 62,000 youths exuded what he called an "electric energy" over it. He was apprehensive about following the rock concert with his own spoken message but he said the vocal throng went deathly silent when he took the podium.

"I wondered if these same people who listen to the rap music and all the rest of that would actually listen to a 70-year-old man," Graham said. "But they did listen all the way. It was quiet enough to hear a pin drop."

Graham himself still feels strong physically and said he has no inclination of reducing his workload or retiring.

Vacation Bible schools celebrate centennial

By J. Michael Parker
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Like the proverbial acorn that became a mighty oak tree, a summer Bible class that opened for 37 Illinois children a century ago has blossomed into a summer tradition embracing millions of youngsters.

This summer, churches throughout the nation are celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Vacation Bible School movement.

Emily McMenamin, a 6-year-old member of Leslie Boriack's class at King of Kings Lutheran Church in San Antonio, said she looks forward to the class each year.

"We get to do art projects and learn about Jesus. We're learning about how he healed 10 lepers but only one came back to thank him.

"The most fun thing about it is the music," she declared.

Classmate Lucas Mitchell agreed, saying: "It's a good way to learn about God, and it's fun."

In 1894, Mattie Miles, a Methodist preacher's wife in Hopedale, Ill., opened what's believed to be the first Vacation Bible school in a red brick public schoolhouse and an adjacent park.

With the help of teen-age volunteers, she used music, crafts, storytelling, contests and games to illustrate scriptural teachings traditionally learned by listening to sermons and Sunday lectures.

Her idea spread to more than 100 religious denominations; and today, millions of American children attend Vacation Bible school in thousands of churches across the nation.

Although the movement's a century old, this year there's a new twist: Many schools are attracting adults as well as children.

Terry Schoenert, program director of St. John's United Methodist Church in San Antonio, said staff members proposed adding an adult class last year and it was a big hit.

"About 20 people signed up, which is a good response in a church our size for a first-time night class. This year, we have about the same number," she said.

"We had it during the daytime for many, many years, but the only adult participants were the teachers," Schoenert said.

"At night, adults and children are together, so parents don't use Bible school as a baby-sitting thing. We have a meal beforehand, and everybody's together at the beginning of the class and again at the end," she said.

Schoenert said Vacation Bible schools are just as necessary today as they were a century ago.

"They bring the Bible stories alive. Students act out the stories, so they learn the stories better. They also have a lot of fun.

"It's very different from Sunday school more active. They get to play more and interact rather than just sit there listening," Schoenert said.

And that's not all, she added.

"We've had a lot of grandparents."

World religions bus takes information superhighway

By David Gonzalez
N.Y. Times News Service

Yeshiva students can learn about Judaism through computer links to teachers in Moscow, London and Israel while Southern Baptists download updated Sunday school lessons and exchange electronic mail with those in far-flung missionary posts.

Every week, Sharon Castellanos turns on her computer and prays.

She's not asking for divine help, as desperate computer users have been known to do when confronted by a suddenly blank screen or balky disk drive. Rather, it is part of her religious routine as the moderator of an on-line prayer group that meets weekly for an hour of fellowship and prayer on the Compuserve Information Service.

From her home in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Ms. Castellanos exchanges prayer requests and spiritual insights with dozens of like-minded computer users across the nation on the service's Religion Forum.

Thousands of people like her have enlisted the highest of technologies in seeking answers to the oldest of questions. Just as computer technology has filtered down to countless aspects of secular life, it is now being used for on-line religious discussions, digitized Bibles and Korans, electronic bulletin boards run by religious denominations, and church management software that allows ministers to refine and personalize their pastoral efforts to a degree never before imagined.

Despite a scarcity of teachers in Riga, Latvia, yeshiva students can learn about Judaism through computer links to teachers in Moscow, London and Israel. Southern Baptists can download updated Sunday school lessons and exchange electronic mail with one another nationwide and in far-flung missionary posts through the Southern Baptist Convention Network.

Muslims surfing the Internet can access Mas'ood Cajee's Cybermuslim document, which features introductory information on Islam, addresses of mosques in North America and updates on events in the Islamic world.

Proponents of using such technology to run religious institutions say it can greatly increase a minister's effectiveness, though not necessarily save time.

On the individual level, especially with the on-line services, information-sharing reduces barriers between faiths and democratizes religious dialogue, taking it from the province of the ordained and into the realm of the everyday.

Ms. Castellanos' forays into cyberfaith have not replaced her churchgoing, but they have become a spiritual outlet available anytime, not just on Sunday morning. The discussions and prayers have given her an extended fellowship that has deepened her belief, especially when she finds herself confronted by doubters, newcomers and others facing spiritual crises.

"I have felt a tremendous growth in my own prayer life and in my ability to to deal with the problems of other people and being of some help to them," Ms. Castellanos said.

"There's also the challenge of having to defend what you believe and having to pick it apart, of going back to the Bible and looking for the why and wherefore instead of just accepting."

Just as the Bible was the first book to be printed, it was among the first products available on computer disk, said Steve Hewitt, the editor of Christian Computing magazine.

Some 200 companies now produce software for churches and Christians, he said, and his magazine reflects that growth with 35,000 subscribers in 45 countries.

Many of those software companies will be exhibiting later this week at the magazine's Chicago convention, one of three it sponsors each year. He said the products run the gamut from the ever-popular Bible study software that allow for comparisons of Biblical text in English, Greek and Hebrew, to arcade-quality games, like Defender of the Faith, that add a dose of religion to the usual video shoot-'em-ups.

While Bible study software originally was intended for use by seminarians and ministers, it has become increasingly popular among lay people. The founders of Logos Resources developed their software for their own use, after being dissatisfied with what was commercially available.

They developed a Windows-based program that allows the user to put a half dozen versions of the Bible on the screen simultaneously, as well as a concordance and an easier search feature for spelling names.

The company, which publishes its software in English, Spanish, Dutch, French and Korean among other languages, also sells add-on packages like the Bible Atlas, which graphically presents the countries of the Old and New Testaments as well as other maps that represent such Biblical events as the battle of Jericho or the journeys of St. Paul.

Bill Nienhuis, a Logos spokesman, said the company is now developing CD-ROM software that would allow for video images and full sound.

While such software is increasingly popular among lay people, churches have been slower to enter the world of cyberfaith.

"The church as a generalization operates from the mind set of sanctuary and safety and security, even more so than fuddy-duddy businesses," said James Johnson, a consultant to the Christian Computing trade show. "There's an ideological base that works against using the new."

The old wasn't doing much for the members of White's Chapel United Methodist Church in Southlake, Texas. "The little old church was just about dead," recalls Steve Scott, a congregation member who used to sell computers. "We were a few months away from closing the doors."

So nearly three years ago he persuaded John McKellar, a friend who was the church's new pastor, to try using computers to develop mailing lists for brochures announcing new programs.

He also wanted computers to do automated phone calls thanking people for visiting the church. A member database made it easy to sort out people by interests, age or address, as well as reminding the pastor about important anniversaries of weddings, births and deaths.

"We're all missionaries, we're all disciples," said Scott.

Abortion protester advocates violence

■ Man charged with abortion clinic shootings appears on national talk shows such as "Donahue" to advocate violence against doctors who perform abortions.

By Bill Kaczor
Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Paul Hill's violent rhetoric frightened even some of his fellow abortion foes. But the former minister had insisted he never resorted to violence himself.

"And I don't intend to," Hill told reporters earlier this year while attending Rachelle Shannon's trial in the 1993 shooting of an abortion doctor in Wichita, Kan.

"I believe a police force can be justified in the use of force to prevent a crime, but I don't feel that I should have to join the police force."

He'd called Shannon's crime "honorable," just as he'd said the 1993 killing of Dr. David Gunn outside a Pensacola abortion clinic was "an act of heroism." A killing of an abortion doctor last August in Mobile, Ala., "had the desired effect," he said, even though police determined the motive was robbery.

Hill appeared on national talk shows such as "Donahue" to advocate violence against doctors who perform abortions.

On Friday, police said Hill walked up to a pickup truck outside the Ladies Center for Abortion, pointed a 12-gauge shotgun at the doctor and two escorts inside, and pulled the trigger again and again.

Dr. John Bayard Britton, 69, and 74-year-old James Herman Barrett were hit in the head. Barrett's 68-year-old wife, June, a retired nurse, was wounded in the left arm.

Married with a son and two daughters, Hill, 40, had been a minister with the Presbyterian Church in America and The Orthodox Presbyterian Church. Hill decided to give up his ministerial credentials in the Orthodox Presbyterian in 1992, said Ross Graham, spokesman for the church.

He earned his living as a car-detailer. But he apparently found his calling as director of Defensive Action, an anti-abortion group he founded after Gunn was killed.

"The Christian principle is to do unto others as you would have them do unto you," Hill said in an interview this year. "If an abortionist is about to violently take an innocent person's life, you are entirely morally justified in trying to prevent him from taking that life."

His point of view did have supporters. The Rev. David Trosch, the priest who lost his parish in Alabama last year after trying to take out a newspaper ad suggesting killing abortion doctors amounted to "justifiable homicide," described himself Friday as a close friend of Hill.

But other activists avoided Hill at protests, said Mike Conroy, a founder of the pro-life group Legal Action for Women. "The pro-life movement distanced themselves from Paul Hill," he said.

Some Internet users protest porn convictions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hours after a couple were convicted of sending images of bestiality and sexual fetishes over a computer bulletin board, the Internet was humming with warnings and protests.

"If this case stands, you can bet there will be a hell of a lot more prosecutions on the same basis in extremely short order," Karl Denninger of Chicago wrote Friday on the computer network.

Robert and Carleen Thomas, both 38, of Milpitas, Calif., were each convicted Thursday of 11 counts of transmitting obscenity through interstate phone lines via their bulletin board on Internet, which serves 25 million computer users worldwide.

Each count carries up to five years in prison and $250,000 fine. Defense lawyer Richard Williams said they will appeal.

Approaching deadline finds U.S., Japan at odds on trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators from the United States and Japan reported no breakthrough Friday in efforts to resolve a bitter fight over lowering Japanese trade barriers.

But U.S. officials insisted they will not extend a Sunday night deadline to resolve the dispute, which involve American demands that Japan lower barriers faced by foreign companies seeking to sell medical and telecommunications equipment.

Japanese Deputy Foreign Minister Sadayuki Hayashi met with Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky for more than three hours Friday. He refused to answer reporters' questions about whether any progress had been made, but other officials said the talks were expected to continue through the weekend.

In another trade dispute involving Canadian wheat, officials also reported no final agreement, although negotiators said they were making some headway Friday in narrowing differences.

Stephen Breyer, center, flanked by President Clinton and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, speaks at the White House after the Senate voted 87-9 to confirm him as the nation's 108th Supreme Court justice. Breyer, who replaces Justice Henry Blackmun, is expected to be sworn in next week.

Breyer gets Senate's OK for court

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Senate on Friday overwhelmingly confirmed Stephen G. Breyer, a moderate federal judge from Boston, to succeed the Supreme Court's most liberal member.

The 87-9 vote, with only Republicans in opposition, reflected the lack of controversy about the jurist, who enjoyed bipartisan support from having worked as a popular Senate aide 15 years ago.

Breyer, chief judge of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals headquartered in Boston, is to be sworn in as the 108th Supreme Court justice next week.

President Clinton said Breyer's confirmation will encourage jurisprudence "that unites the American people rather than divides them."

Breyer called his new responsibilities "awesome, rather humbling."

"The goal of that job is the same as that set for all of us who work in the law — as lawyers, judges, public servants — to help make the law work better for people," he said.

The Senate confirmation process, unlike some recent dramatic confrontations, lacked fireworks.

"This guy was everything from an Eagle Scout to articles editor of the law review at Harvard Law School," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., Breyer's boss when the nominee was staff director of the Judiciary Committee.

Despite "his share of personal pain and travail," Biden said, "he's succeeded in everything he has undertaken."

A multimillionaire whose wife is from a family of British nobility, the main criticism of Breyer came from his investments in Lloyds of London syndicates. Some members of the Senate who opposed the nomination contended the investments were so risky they reflected "extraordinarily bad judgment," as Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said.

"Judge Breyer has serious financial entanglements with the Lloyds syndicates that will last for years," Lugar said. "I appreciate in a very poignant way that this is a personal tragedy for Judge Breyer."

The consensus in the Senate, however, was relief at being faced with a nominee who has been criticized mostly for being dry and dull — a "technocrat" — rather than for being an ideologue of the left or right.

Breyer, 55, who takes a practical approach to the law, will replace the court's liberal bulwark of recent years, 85-year-old Justice Harry A. Blackmun, known for impassioned decisions and dissents. Blackmun recently took the position that the death penalty is unconstitutional in all cases, the only member of the court who has that view.

The switch of justices is not expected to change emotional rulings on issues like abortion and the death penalty, however. Breyer said at his confirmation hearings that he considers law in both areas to be settled by Supreme Court precedents.

But he has not ruled as a judge on the death penalty, because no states in his appeals circuit have the punishment, and his abortion-related rulings give contradictory signals.

Breyer will join Clinton's one other Supreme Court appointee, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who gained Senate confirmation last year by an even greater vote margin, 96-3.

Two die when plane fighting fire crashes

Associated Press

The wildfires ravaging the West turned deadly Friday when a tanker plane crashed in Montana near the Flathead Indian Reservation, sparking a fire. Two crewmembers were killed in the crash.

The plane went down about 20 miles west of Missoula, starting a fire that quickly spread over 10 acres, the Forest Service said.

Tim Love, Forest Service fire information officer, said he did not know which of the fires in northwest Montana the contract plane had been dropping retardant on or other details about the crash.

All told, firefighters were still battling 25 major fires in eight western states and British Columbia that had burned about 150,000 acres, said Charlene Browning of the Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho. Dozens of smaller fires also were being fought.

Reinforcements began arriving early Friday from as far away as Florida to help battle Montana's Henry Peak fire. It forced several families to flee as it grew to an estimated 6,000 acres.

Thunderstorms and erratic winds Friday spread the flames.

More than 800 firefighters were on the lines Friday but the fire still was only about 10 percent contained, said fire information officer Mike Kopitzke, of the Department of State Lands.

The other big blaze in northwestern Montana, the Niarada One fire, grew to 4,300 acres on the Flathead Indian Reservation and fire managers were concerned about an expected change in the weather.

"We're bracing ourselves for a cold front that will bring possibly lightning and some winds," said Jack De Golia, a Forest Service fire information officer at Niarada. "Our goal is to survive that event; then we can probably taper off here."

Niarada One was 70 percent contained and firefighters were hopeful that — weather permitting — it could be fully contained within fire lines by this evening.

In Washington, a huge fire approaching the vacation community of Chelan slowed in cooler weather and calmer winds. Firefighters were told that hundreds of Marines were being sent to help.

House Dems unveil health-care plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Likening the moment to the birth of Social Security, House Democratic leaders rolled out their plan Friday to provide health insurance for all Americans by 1999, financed largely by employers.

The approach jettisons several unpopular proposals President Clinton made a year ago.

"It will be every American's guarantee of security, dignity and decency, as long as they live," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., point-man in the House for the effort to make good on Clinton's call for universal coverage.

Leaders are pushing for passage in two weeks. But aides said they could not yet count the votes to prevail over opposition from virtually all Republicans, who say it would destroy jobs while damaging the current health-care system, and many moderate and conservative Democrats.

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., who opposes requiring businesses to pay for coverage, said lawmakers were being asked to "bet their careers" on a proposal that would never become law because of opposition in the Senate.

Across the Capitol, Majority Leader George Mitchell sketched details of a health-reform measure he is expected to formally unveil next week. It is expected to defer any mandatory employer financing proposals until insurance reforms have been given a chance to work — probably 2001. It would then apply them on a state-by-state basis, with states exempted if they had achieved sufficient progress toward universal coverage.

Republicans continued to jab at the Democratic efforts.

Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole said he was still "in search of the phantom bill" that Mitchell was drafting in the privacy of his office.

In the House, Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois, said: "The Clinton-Gephardt bill will impose mandates on employers, thus leading to the loss of upwards of a million jobs and the reduction of wages and benefits for many more Americans."

Republicans generally favor using insurance reforms and subsidies to expand coverage.

Clinton embraced the work of the House Democratic leaders.

In a statement, he said it would move the nation "a step closer to real health security. They chose a pragmatic and more moderate path," he said, acknowledging the unpopularity of his own plan, with its reliance on government price controls and mandatory purchasing cooperatives.

Democratic leaders emphasized the differences between their measure and the one originally offered by Clinton. They included a sheet of paper in material distributed to lawmakers entitled: "Key Differences from the Clinton plan."

Gephardt said he hoped to eventually receive Republican support for his legislation, but that seemed unlikely. And in a closed-door caucus, he read aloud from floor statements that Republicans made 30 and 60 years ago in opposition to Social Security and Medicare when they were enacted.

"This is clearly a bill of the magnitude of the Social Security Act and the Medicare Act," said House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington.

The proposal, in general, calls on businesses to pay 80 percent of the cost of insuring workers, with individuals responsible for the balance. The requirement would apply to large firms on Jan. 1, 1997, and two years later for smaller firms. Small employers, particularly those with low-wage earners, would be eligible for federal subsidies that could reduce their costs by half. Low-income individuals would also be eligible for federal subsidies.

Woman, once romantically linked to Cisneros, sues him

Cisneros

LUBBOCK (AP) — Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros was hit Friday with a fraud and breach-of-contract lawsuit by a former campaign aide who had a much-publicized affair with him.

Linda Medlar, who now lives in Lubbock, claims in her lawsuit that Cisneros has stopped making $4,000 monthly payments as part of a verbal agreement they reached in 1990. Cisneros already had paid her close to $200,000, her attorneys said.

Cisneros agreed to make the payments because he "recognized his responsibility for making her name, photograph, and life a public spectacle and for her public humiliation, and for the destruction of her career and her marriage, and agreed that he had a responsibility for the damage done," according to the lawsuit.

In an interview, Cisneros acknowledged that he had given Ms. Medlar financial support but denied there was any kind of contract or obligation to do so. He said he provided the "transitional assistance" because their relationship had created "difficulty" in her life.

"I voluntarily assisted her for a time," he said, adding that he has not given Ms. Medlar any money since assuming office in January 1993.

"I felt that I had done everything a person could reasonably do, especially since I had assisted her for the better part of three years," Cisneros said.

"I'm only aware of the legal action through press accounts, but I believe it has no merit since there is no obligation, legal or otherwise."

Cisneros said he had not been served with legal papers.

Cisneros said he had consulted with his wife, Mary Alice, about the payments. He claimed that Ms. Medlar told him she required three years of payments after he offered her one more year of help.

"I was just not in a position to do that," he said, noting that he is now on a fixed government salary. "At some point, you can't give in to the threat if you don't have the money."

Ms. Medlar, who moved to Lubbock in 1991, has an unlisted phone number.

Floyd Holder, Ms. Medlar's attorney, said he has bank statements proving the payments were made to her Lubbock account, but he declined to show them.

He said the agreement was that Cisneros would make payments each month until Ms. Medlar's daughter — now 16 — graduated from college.

"He's the one that drug her through the mud," Holder said. "He's been forgiven, and she's the woman scorned."

The nine-page lawsuit was filed in state court in Lubbock. It seeks $256,000 in actual damages and unspecified punitive damages.

The lawsuit says Cisneros and Ms. Medlar had a two-year affair during his fourth term as mayor of San Antonio.

In 1988, Ms. Medlar, a former Cisneros campaign aide, declared her love for Cisneros in a newspaper article and he acknowledged having a relationship with her. They later said they had ended their romantic involvement.

Cisneros' wife, Mary Alice Cisneros, filed for divorce in October 1991, claiming cruel treatment and adultery by her husband. Mrs. Cisneros implied in a newspaper report at the time the split was prompted by her husband's continued link to Ms. Medlar.

"I love Henry very much, and we have been through an enormous amount," Mrs. Cisneros said in the report. "It is my intent to no longer live under a circumstance that involves adultery."

Richards camp blasts Bush on gambling ties

■ Gubernatorial candidate's business partner met with governor's chief of staff to push for legalization of casinos before buying into casino, gambling machine company, according to report.

Associated Press

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards' campaign called on GOP challenger George W. Bush to "come clean" Friday about any gambling ties. Bush's camp said the Democratic governor's campaign was slinging mud.

Richards turned up the heat after The Dallas Morning News reported that Bush's close business partner Richard Rainwater — before buying into a casino and gaming machine company — met with Richards' chief of staff to push for legalizing casinos in Texas.

Rainwater, a Fort Worth investor, is a partner with Bush in the Texas Rangers and has given Bush $100,000 in campaign donations.

"The chain of events is very suspicious-looking, and it's important that Mr. Bush come clean on the extent of his personal involvement in the gaming business. Let's shoot straight with the people of Texas," said Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for the governor.

"If his business partner has plans to bring state-sponsored gaming to Texas, that's an issue Mr. Bush has got to deal with," he said.

Bush campaign spokeswoman Karen Hughes said a financial disclosure statement filed by Bush "clearly reveals he has no gambling interests."

"Ann Richards needs to rein in her cheap-shot artists," Ms. Hughes said. "Since she accepted hundreds of thousands of dollars from gambling interests and since her position on casino gambling is virtually the same as George Bush's, it is most hypocritical for her campaign to throw around wild accusations."

McDonald said the issue is Bush's business interests, not contributions accepted by the candidates. "It would not have mattered if Mr. Rainwater had not given the George Bush campaign even a dime," he said.

"George Bush is talking about the issues," Ms. Hughes said. "If Ann Richards wants to continue to throw mud about the private business interests of one of his friends, she can continue to do so and lose this election."

Bush has said he didn't know of Rainwater's financial interests in casino gambling. He has described himself as "skeptical" of legalizing such gaming, which is expected to be a controversy in the 1995 Legislature.

Richards — who has taken $100,000 from a Dallas developer who is an investor in a casino planned for New Orleans — has said she is opposed to casino gambling.

But she also has cautioned that another look at the issue may be needed if a federal court rules that Indians may operate casinos on their land.

The Houston Post reported Friday that Rainwater's casino industry ties might violate major-league baseball rules separating the game from gambling.

A lawyer for Rainwater said his "passive" interest in the gambling industry doesn't violate baseball rules. If officials decide there is a problem, lawyer Gerald Haddock said, Rainwater would sell either his Rangers interest or his investment in the gambling business.

Rainwater didn't immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

The AP reported on Wednesday that Rainwater was one of several investors in New York-based Kirkland Investment Corp., which took control of United Gaming Inc. following a $5 million investment last year.

According to published reports and information from the company, United Gaming operates gambling machines in Nevada and video poker devices in Louisiana. It also owns or operates casinos in Nevada and Mississippi.

And on Friday, the Houston-based Lone Star Casino Corp. announced terms of a deal with United Gaming to develop a casino resort site in Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Lone Star said United Gaming will invest up to $15 million for a 50 percent equity interest in the project. The value of the complex was put at $100 million in an earlier news report.

"We are pleased that United Gaming, a leader in the industry, has joined with Lone Star to seek to develop the company's Pine Hills site," said Roger Cope, president and chief operating officer of Lone Star.

The proposed project is expected to consist of 60,000 square feet of gaming, restaurant and back office facilities as well as an 18-hole championship caliber golf course and clubhouse, according to a company statement.

It said Lone Star owns the majority interest in Papone's Palace Casino in Central City, Colo..

TU Electric customers to get refunds on September bills

DALLAS (AP) — TU Electric on Friday proposed refunds that will knock an average $21 off its residential bills in September.

That, however, will be coupled with a special fuel charge, meaning North Texans served by the utility will see only a drop of about $13.

If the Public Utility Commission approves, the refunds will be made beginning Aug. 25.

The rebate represents the difference between the 9 percent hike approved by the PUC in May and the higher, 15.3 percent increase the utility had imposed in hopes of winning its full request in its last rate case.

The total refund, including interest, is $237.5 million. Refunds to TU Electric's 2.3 million customers will be made based on their kilowatt-hour use for September bills.

However, the refund will be partially offset by an unrelated fuel surcharge of $147.5 million that has been approved by the PUC.

For a residential customer using 1,000 kwh, a bonded rate refund of $27 offset by a fuel surcharge of $14 would mean a net credit of $13. For average residential use on September bills of 1,700 kwh, a rate refund of $45 combined with a fuel surcharge of $24 would mean a net credit of $21.

"The refund should have a mitigating effect on what generally are the highest monthly bills of the year," said Tom Baker, TU Electric's executive vice president.

Another adjustment related to a state franchise tax also will be recovered.

Unit of Texas Air National Guard to fly Rwandan relief operations

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas Air National Guard unit was to depart today for East Africa as part of expanded U.S. relief operations to help Rwandan refugees.

Twenty-five members of the 136th Airlift Wing based at Hensley Field in Dallas spent Friday being processed and briefed for their role in the rescue effort broadened by President Clinton on Friday.

The 25 troops, including two women, will shape up into two crews that will fly their C-130 cargo plane around the clock between a base in Mombasa, Kenya, and fields in Rwanda and nearby Zaire, National Guard officials said.

Sgt. Krista Hays, a flight engineer in the group, is taking time from her nursing studies to be part of the effort.

"It's a chance to do something real-world, something we've been training for, helping people, taking supplies in."

Landowners organize to fight for their private property rights

AUSTIN (AP) — The federal government's moves to protect endangered species and other environmental protection actions have an army of Central Texas landowners organizing to defend what they see as an assault on their rights.

"We don't think a federal bureaucrat who has never ridden a horse ought to be telling us what to do with our land," said Ed Small, an Austin lawyer and rancher, who represents the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

"We think we operate our land better than the federal government operates its land," he told the Austin American-Statesman.

"Everybody is just as mad as hell," Hays County rancher Marshall Kuykendall said.

Kuykendall is an organizer of Take Back Texas, a fledgling grassroots group dedicated to protecting private property rights. "We've got to go back and re-establish our Fifth Amendment rights," he said.

The Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution says Americans cannot be deprived of their property without due process of law, nor can property be taken without just compensation.

But some farmers and ranchers believe the government is trampling on those rights.

Hays County Commissioner Jeff Barton, who owns ranch land and considers himself an environmentalist, said there is a backlash developing against the federal government.

"The backlash is not from any one issue but from the culmination," Barton said.

Proposals that have raised Texan landowners' ire include:

■ A preliminary proposal to establish "critical habitat" for the endangered golden-cheeked warbler, a migratory songbird. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is studying parts of 33 Central Texas counties.

■ Efforts to achieve "outstanding national resource waters" protection for five Texas waterways, including Caddo Lake in East Texas, and Barton Springs and Barton Creek in Austin. Gov. Ann Richards supported that designation for two months, but withdrew her support this week and called the federal government "ham-handed."

Family sues businessman who told police he accidentally shot, sealed up woman

FORT WORTH (AP) — A businessman who told police that he accidentally shot a woman and then sealed her body in a barrel because he was scared is being sued by the victim's family.

Relatives of Carri Coppinger filed the lawsuit Thursday against Warren Miles Bondurant, who is free on $100,000 bail after telling officers about the 22-year-old woman's death.

Bondurant, 59, told police he accidentally shot Coppinger and then panicked. Police arrested him July 16 on suspicion of murder.

"I do find it hard to believe that you accidentally kill someone and instead of helping them, you stuff them into a barrel and caulk it shut," said Fort Worth attorney Rickie L. Powell. "But that's his story."

Papers filed in the lawsuit accuse Bondurant of intentionally causing Coppinger's death, said Powell.

The lawsuit, which seeks unspecified damages, alternatively accuses Bondurant of negligently causing the death by pointing a loaded weapon at Ms. Coppinger and pulling the trigger.

"We've convinced ourselves that it was not an accident and that is why we intend to file the murder charge," said homicide Sgt. Paul Kratz.

O.J.'s goods stolen

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's 1968 Heisman Trophy and No. 32 Trojan football jersey were stolen from the display lobby Southern California's Heritage Hall.

The items were reported stolen Thursday at 10:50 p.m., the university said Friday. Police were investigating the theft.

The Heisman Trophy and jersey were removed from a clear, plastic display case as a security precaution on June 17, the day Simpson was arrested for the killings of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Lyle Goldman.

The items were put back in the case three days later.

The Heisman Trophy is given each year by New York's Downtown Athletic Club to the top college football player.

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Orlando Magic signed free agent forward Horace Grant on Friday night, a move that had been expected for almost a year.

Earlier Friday, Bulls chairman Jerry Reinsdorf said he would no longer try to re-sign Grant, whom he accused of backing out of a handshake deal for a five-year contract worth more than $20 million.

Terms of the deal between Grant and the Magic were not disclosed.

Rogers' gem leaves glimmer on fading season

Drafted as an outfielder, Kenny Rogers pitches Texas' first-ever perfect game Thursday.

By Charles Richards
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — Kenny Rogers gave baseball fans a perfect example of what they could be missing in two weeks if the players go on strike.

Rogers became the first left-hander in American League history to pitch a perfect game and for one night at least, turned the focus from labor back to baseball.

His gem, the 12th perfect game in baseball history, came just hours after the players union set an Aug. 12 strike deadline. And while Texas fans considered the impact of a possible work stoppage on their first-place team, Rogers and the Rangers turned in a flawless 4-0 victory over the California Angels on Thursday night.

Helped out by a dazzling ninth-inning catch by center fielder Rusty Greer, Rogers (11-6) retired all 27 batters he faced. It was the fifth no-hitter in Rangers history, including two by Nolan Ryan.

The 29-year-old Rogers has turned into a pleasant surprise for the club over the past two seasons. It was only last year that he became a fulltime starter for the Rangers, who drafted him in June, 1982 as an outfielder.

A sellout home crowd of 46,581 was on its feet, cheering Rogers on.

"It was great, having the fans cheer every pitch. They were on their feet. Walking off after the eighth, I had to look up and see it," he said.

Rogers thought his changeup was only so-so against California, saying it was "more of a fastball, curveball night," but the Angels didn't agree.

"His changeup and his curve were so good, it made his fastball look like he was throwing it 95 mph," said the Angels' Rex Hudler, who almost broke up the perfect game with a line drive that Greer snared after a face-first, diving, backhand catch in the ninth.

Rogers had been suffering through arm and shoulder problems and had been very tentative in recent outings.

"I didn't expect to go nine innings. I was not trying to throw past people. When your arm is sore and tired, you don't do that, and it probably helped me," he said.

Rangers shortstop Esteban Beltre said that as Rogers closed in on history he hoped the Angels would hit the ball to him. He got his wish and smoothly handled Chris Turner's grounder for the second out of the ninth inning.

On Tuesday, Beltre had a throwing error that led to two runs against Minnesota. On Wednesday, he rode the bench. Behind Rogers, Beltre handled three chances flawlessly.

The rest of the infield, shaky most of the season, followed the lead, producing 10 outs for Rogers.

"We played real good defense. We got some great plays from Rusty and Dean (Palmer)," Rangers first baseman Will Clark said.

Clark said he began thinking about the no-hitter in the seventh inning.

"Once you go through the lineup two times, that's when you start to feel it. That's when you go one hitter at a time, one pitch at a time," he said.

Talks resume Tuesday

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — With two weeks left before the union's Aug. 12 strike deadline, players and owners agreed to resume negotiations next Tuesday.

Both sides, however, said Friday they intended to stick to the positions that are threatening baseball's eighth work stoppage in 22 years. The union says it won't agree to a salary cap, and owners say they won't make a deal that doesn't establish fixed labor costs.

"Today the problems of the game are such that the owners aren't going to budge from their position," management negotiator Richard Ravitch said Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Eugene Orza, the No. 2 official in the union, debated Ravitch during the interview and left little hope for a quick settlement.

"In the context of a salary cap, there's probably no way we can work this out," he said.

Union head Donald Fehr and Ravitch said Friday that they hoped setting the strike date would start serious negotiations.

AUSTIN — When Warren Moon makes his first appearance for the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday night, he'll go against what is rapidly becoming one of the best secondaries in the NFL.

The defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys have two of the best cornerbacks in Larry Brown and Kevin Smith. One of the Cowboys, safety James Washington, was second only to Emmitt Smith in Super Bowl MVP balloting and Darren Woodson is a third-year safety with a star tag.

Backup cornerbacks Clayton Holmes and Dave Thomas would be coveted by any team in the league. In nickel pass downs, the Cowboys can put Kenny Gant, still recovering from hernia surgery, veteran Bill Bates and such youngsters as Brock Marion, Darren Studstill or Joe Fishback.

"We've got great athletes in our secondary," said Smith. "We probably have the fastest secondary in the league.

O'Brien strolls to win; relay blazes best time

■ The U.S. sweeps the relays events and wins five gold medals at the Goodwill Games Friday.

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — Dan O'Brien was jogging. He could have been on a leisurely stroll in the park.

This was no way to break a world record. And he didn't.

For the second time in six weeks, O'Brien was in range Friday of breaking his world mark in the decathlon — only to fail miserably in the final event, the 1,500 meters.

■ Goodwill Games

"I've yet to develop the mental toughness that it takes to run the 1,500," O'Brien said. "There are Bruce Jenners out there that love that race. I have yet to find a liking for it."

O'Brien went into the race seven points behind world record pace. He needed to run 4:40.92 or better to break it.

It didn't take long to realize he wouldn't do it. O'Brien immediately fell into last place and settled into a trot, huffing and puffing like your average jogger.

He fell further and further behind, never picked up the pace and eventually dropped more than half a lap behind the leader. He crossed the line in 5:10.94 — good enough for the gold medal but 30 seconds slower than he needed for the record.

O'Brien finished the 10-event competition with 8,715 points, 176 points fewer than his record of 8,891, set in 1992 in Talence, France.

It was similar to his performance last month at the U.S. Championships in Knoxville, Tenn., where he was 14 points ahead of record pace going into the 1,500 and ran a 5:16.42 to finish with 8,707 points.

"I just don't have a great fitness base behind me this year," O'Brien said. "I'm a sprinter, not a 1,500 runner. I just run the 1,500 the best I can. My legs were tired after the first lap. I was just plain old tired."

Greer uses stick in Ranger win

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Rusty Greer and Dean Palmer hit two-run homers and Roger Pavlik notched his first victory in almost two months as the Texas Rangers won for the fourth time in five games, 5-3 over the California Angels Friday night.

Greer, whose sliding catch in the ninth inning Thursday night helped preserve Kenny Rogers' perfect game, hit his ninth homer of the year during a three-run second inning as the Rangers took a 3-2 lead.

Palmer, mired in a 4-for-48 slump, added his 19th in the sixth off Mark Langston (6-7) after Juan Gonzalez drew a one-out walk, padding Texas' lead to 5-2.

Pavlik (2-5), who hadn't won since May 31, allowed two runs and four hits in 6 2-3 innings, with five strikeouts and five walks.

Langston, who is now 13-7 in his career against the Rangers, allowed five runs and six hits in six innings, with seven strikeouts and six walks.

The Angels dropped their eighth game in a row.

Tom Henke recorded the final four outs for his 13th save.

Yankees 5, Indians 2

NEW YORK — A three-run fourth inning and a solid outing by Sterling Hitchcock sent New York to its seventh straight win over Cleveland this season, a win in a matchup of the American League's top two teams.

Albert Belle went 3-for-4 with his 34th home run for the Indians, who had their three-game losing streak snapped.

Earlier in the day, Belle had his suspension for using a corked bat reduced from 10 days to six days at a hearing with AL president Bobby Brown. Belle, who hit his eighth homer in 11 games, will begin serving his suspension Monday when the Indians open a a four-game series at home against Detroit.

Hitchcock (3-1) allowed baseball's best-hitting team only two runs and nine hits in 7 2-3 innings. The left-hander walked two and matched a career-high with seven strikeouts.

Bob Wickman closed the eighth and Steve Howe pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

Red Sox 7, Brewers 2

BOSTON — Mo Vaughn homered twice and Tim VanEgmond pitched a five-hitter for his first major league win as Boston beat Milwaukee.

Vaughn, who also had an RBI groundout in the first, led off the sixth with a 425-foot drive into the right-field stands and hit a two-run homer into the screen atop the left-field wall as Boston scored four in the seventh. Vaughn, who has 24 home runs, has homered twice in a game four times this season.

Tim Naehring added three hits and an RBI for the Red Sox.

VanEgmond (1-3), called up from the minors June 24, was making his sixth career start. He walked three and struck out four while lowering his ERA from 9.41 to 7.26.

Royals 5, Twins 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Gary Gaetti hit two solo home runs and made a sparkling defensive play to power Kansas City past Minnesota.

Their seventh straight victory, combined with Cleveland's 5-2 loss to the New York Yankees, brought the Royals within 4½ games of the lead in the AL Central.

Athletics 6, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Ruben Sierra hit his 22nd home run, breaking an eighth-inning tie and sending Oakland over Detroit.

Seven Oakland pitchers combined on a four-hitter. Bob Welch (3-6) won in relief and Dennis Eckersley got his 17th save.

Blue Jays 4, Orioles 3

Paul Molitor had two hits and scored twice for Toronto, which snapped a three-game losing streak.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

CHICAGO — Alex Fernandez won his fifth game without a loss in July, leading Chicago past Seattle.

Rookie homer launches Braves

■ NL Roundup

ATLANTA (AP) — Fred McGriff's two-run single capped a three-run fifth inning and Javier Lopez hit a two-run homer an inning later as the Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia 5-2 Friday night, snapping the Phillies' four-game winning streak.

The rally from a 1-0 deficit kept Danny Jackson (13-5) from becoming the NL's second 14-game winner this year. Montreal's Ken Hill is the only pitcher in the league with 14 victories.

Steve Avery (7-3) allowed six hits, walked none and fanned eight.

Dodgers 7, Astros 5

LOS ANGELES — Delino DeShields' three-run homer in the ninth gave the NL West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers a victory over Houston.

Dave Hansen singled with one out in the ninth off reliever John Hudek (0-2), who walked Brett Butler with two outs. DeShields then drove a 2-1 pitch to right field for his second homer of the season, giving the Dodgers only their fourth victory in 15 games.

Houston's loss coupled with Cincinnati's victory at San Diego, dropped the Astros out of first place in the NL Central and put Cincinnati on top.

It was DeShields' second dramatic game-winning hit in a month. His three-run double in the ninth inning on June 30 against Philadelphia gave Los Angeles a 4-3 win.

Mets 4, Pirates 1

PITTSBURGH — Bobby Jones continued to excel on the road and Ryan Thompson stayed hot in Pittsburgh, leading New York past the Pirates.

Jones (11-7) limited Pittsburgh to seven hits and a run over seven innings and is 7-1 with a 1.67 ERA away from Shea Stadium this season. He has a 9-2 career road record.

The right-handed Jones is 4-0 with two no-decisions and a 2.80 ERA since his last loss on June 26 and has yielded more than three earned runs only twice in his last nine starts.

Thompson homered in the seventh and is 5-for-15 with three homers and five RBIs in Three Rivers Stadium this season. Jeromy Burnitz and Jeff Kent added run-scoring singles as the Mets improved to 3-1 in Pittsburgh.

Expos 8, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Montreal broke open a tie game with a four-run seventh inning on just two hits as the Expos beat Florida.

Larry Walker's single drove in Rondell White with the tie-breaking run. The Expos also scored on a walk, a hit batsman and Sean Berry's sacrifice fly, all with the bases loaded.

Berry hit his seventh homer, a solo shot in the fourth, and White doubled twice and scored three times.

The Expos, who have won nine of their past 10 games, maintained a 2 1-2-game lead over the second-place Atlanta Braves in the NL East. The Marlins lost their fourth in a row, all at home, and fell 12 games below .500 for the first time this season.

Jeff Shaw (5-2) pitched 1 1-3 innings of perfect relief for the victory. Mel Rojas and John Wetteland combined to shut out the Marlins over the final three innings.

Cubs 8, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Jim Bullinger pitched eight solid innings and Steve Buechele hit a two-run homer and an RBI triple to lead the Chicago Cubs to an 8-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Friday night.

The Cubs have won eight of their last 11 games, while the Cardinals have lost six straight, and 19 of their last 25. The two teams are tied for last place in the NL Central.

Bullinger (6-2) won his third straight start as he allowed three runs on four hits with two walks and four strikeouts.

The Cubs scored five runs off starter Allen Watson (6-5) when they sent nine men to the plate in the first inning.

Glenallen Hill drove in the first run with a single and Derrick May followed with a two-run double.

Giants 8, Rockies 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams drove in three runs Friday night to lead San Francisco to a victory over Colorado and into second place in the NL West.

The Giants, who have won 15 of their last 19 games, moved past the Rockies and are one game behind the Los Angeles Dodgers, who beat the Houston Astros 7-5.

Williams' first-inning single drove in John Patterson, and Darryl Strawberry's sacrifice fly scored Barry Bonds to give the Giants a 2-0 lead. Patterson and Bonds had singled and walked with one out.

The Rockies got a run back in the third when Nelson Liriano homered to left, his third of the season. The Giants made it 3-1 in the bottom of the inning on consecutive doubles by Bonds and Williams.

Reds 4, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Jeff Branson hit a two-run homer and Bret Boone went 3-for-4 with two RBIs as Cincinnati defeated San Diego.

Pete Schourek (6-2) pitched 6 2-3 innings, allowing one run on nine hits, with six strikeouts and one walk. Jeff Brantley pitched the final 2 1-3 innings for his 12th save, allowing just one hit.

Branson hit his homer to right field in the second off Andy Ashby (4-11), who has lost five straight starts and is 0-6 lifetime against Cincinnati.

It was Branson's fifth homer of the year, all coming in his last 41 at-bats.

LABOR: Talks to continue

(From 1C)

"By serious negotiations, we mean negotiations outside the context of a salary cap," Orza said, "because you cannot be serious thinking that this union is going to take — after 20 uears of trying to avoid them — a salary cap when the game is so healthy."

Fehr and the union staff met Friday with the Cleveland Indians, who were in New York to play the Yankees. Fehr also spoke by telephine with executive council chairman Bud Selig and said the two would either meet next week or talk more by telephone.

"We've been crossing signals and we try to get a time to talk next week," Fehr said.

The full bargaining teams will meet Tuesday, discussion groups will gather Wednesday and the full teams will meet again Thursday.

Ravitch claims 19 of the 28 teams will lose money this year but refuses to make the owners' books public.

"The parties that are bargaining have all the information," said Selig, the Milwaukee Brewers owner.

Selig said he hoped the sides would use the next few days for reflection.

"I agree with Bud on that," Fehr said. "People ought to be taking stock of their positions."

Ravitch, who went to Washington on Friday before returning to his Pound Ridge, N.Y., home for the weekend, said he didn't anticipate any developments this weekend. When asked his plans for the next two days,

AL President lightens suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Cleveland slugger Albert Belle, ordinarily a man of few words, made a simple declarative statement regarding his corked bat controversy on Friday.

"I have never used or knowingly attempted to use a corked bat in a game," he said.

With that, Belle accepted a six-day, seven-game suspension from American League president Bobby Brown, who reduced the 10-day suspension he had originally imposed. As part of the settlement, the Major League Baseball Players Association withdrew the appeal of the punishment.

Seminoles suspend 4 players for violations

■ All-American Derrick Brooks and running back Tiger McMillon are suspended for two games for accepting gifts a football agent.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — National champion Florida State suspended four players Friday, including All-America linebacker Derrick Brooks, for taking clothing and other gifts in a $6,000 shopping spree with agents last year.

Brooks and tailback Tiger McMillon were suspended for the first two games of the season that starts Sept. 3. Offensive guard Patrick McNeil will be suspended for the first three games.

Offensive tackle Forrest Conoly was suspended indefinitely until he cooperates with the school's investigation into the incident last November at a Foot Locker store in Tallahassee, school officials said.

Florida State president Talbot D'Alemberte announced the disciplinary action during a news conference Friday. He said the school's investigation into possible NCAA violations continued.

"I'm pretty confident our players have learned a real lesson from this and I'm sorry that we really have to punish players," he said. "But they knew the rules. They violated the rules. But I have a real sense that these players are, in many respects, themselves victims."

Florida State's first three games of the season are at home against Virginia on Sept. 3, at Maryland on Sept. 10 and at Wake Forest on Sept. 17.

Coach Bobby Bowden said the penalties went beyond his recommendations.

"They are somewhat excessive to what I recommended and what I was hoping," Bowden said. "My job is to implement it."

In a related announcement Friday, suspended kicker Scott Bentley was reinstated after he completed his sentence for illegally tape recording a sexual encounter with a female student. Bentley paid a $500 fine and worked 40 hours on a Leon County sheriff's department road crew in May.

The Foot Locker incident was first disclosed in Sports Illustrated magazine, which reported in May that would-be agents Raul Bey and Nate Cebrun, both of Las Vegas, and Paul Williams of Tallahassee organized the shopping spree.

Brooks accepted two sweatshirts and a meal and McMillon took a pair of shoes, a workout outfit, a meal and $60 cash, according to a report by the law firm Bond, Schoeneck & King in Overland Park, Kan., which is handling the university's internal investigation into possible NCAA violations.

McNeil received a pair of shoes and a baseball cap, and also asked Cebrun for money to buy clothing, according to the report.

Conoly has refused to discuss the incident with investigators, who said in their report that he may not have been present at the store. D'Alemberte said Conoly will remain suspended until he cooperates.

All the players who received gifts and cash are required to make restitution if they are to play, D'Alemberte said. Only McMillon, who did not play in 1993 because of a knee injury, had already done so.

"I acknowledge that I made a mistake and I admitted my mistake," McMillon said in a statement released by his lawyer. He added that he had cooperated with the investigation and learned from his mistake.

The shopping spree occurred several days before Florida State's only loss last season, to Notre Dame. Eleven players were involved but only five are eligible to play this season.

Brooks, McMillon and McNeil are seniors, Conoly a junior.

Offensive guard Marcus Long also was present, but there was no evidence he accepted free clothing or cash. He was not suspended.

D'Alemberte said there was no evidence that coaches or athletic officials knew about the incident before it was reported. He said he imposed the suspensions in the event a subsequent NCAA investigation finds any players violated rules against accepting gifts and cash from agents.

"We believe we've been fair," he said. "We believe if anything we've erred on the side of being a bit tough. Some would argue we're being too tough."

The suspensions come at a time authorities are cracking down on sports agents who aren't licensed in Florida.

Cebrun, Williams and another agent all have been charged with failing to register with the state as an agent. All have pleaded no contest.

Other arrests are expected.

Failing to register as an agent is a third-degree felony that carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Cebrun, 48, was sentenced Thursday to 30 days in jail and fined $2,000 for failing to register with the state. He was placed on 18 months probation and ordered to pay $255 in court costs. His record will be cleared if he completes probation without committing any crime.

Williams, a former high school coach in Tallahassee, is serving 30 days in jail and will be on probation for a year after his release. He was ordered to pay $255 in court costs.

Doug Andreaus, 29, was fined $1,000 and has agreed to pay $255 in court costs. He was placed on 18 months probation. He helped arrange $23,000 in loans for the mother of former Florida State wide receiver Tamarick Vanover.

De La Hoya KOs Paez for title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Unbeaten Oscar De La Hoya sent out "The Clown" in a hurry Friday night, knocking out veteran Jorge Paez in the second round to win the vacant WBO lightweight championship.

IBF super middleweight James Toney, also undefeated, took considerably longer, but ended his fight on the MGM Grand card in similar fashion.

SWC: Past gridiron greats receive honor car growing up.

And Southern Methodist coach Tom Rossley said he will feel a little choked up when his team makes its road trips to SWC schools this year.

While the SWC coaches who gathered in Dallas Friday for a kickoff luncheon spoke enthusiastically about the upcoming season, nostalgia emerged as the league prepares to enter its second-to-last year.

"One day they will be begging me for this watch," said Hatfield, who has taken over at Rice after coaching several years at Arkansas and most recently at Clemson. "It will be a collector's item. There will be enough traditionalists who will want it. I'm hanging onto it."

Dykes, who is the dean of SWC coaches, said he feels great sadness over the impending breakup of the conference. In 1996, Texas, Texas A&M, Baylor and Tech will head to the Big 12 Conference. SMU, Rice and Texas Christian will enter the Western Athletic Conference.

"I grew up in the Southwest Conference," Dykes said. "I wasn't ever good enough to play in it. But I watched it on TV. I put those SWC bumper stickers on my car and you needed dynamite to get them off. You couldn't scrape them off. Heck, you needed to trade cars if you wanted to get rid of them.

"It just makes me sad that it's come to this. I hope we can put on a good show for the last two years and end this thing with class."

Rossley said he left his high school coaching days in Ohio in the early 1970s with the intention of one day coaching in the SWC "because the best football is in Texas."

"This year will mark our last trips to Lubbock, Austin, Waco and Houston," Rossley said. "It will hit the coaches at different times this year, but it's going to start sinking in. And it's going to hit the alumni and ex-players too, maybe even harder than the current players."

All the league coaches praised a group of former star conference coaches and players who were inducted Friday into the SWC Hall of Honor, including Texas coach Darrell Royal, Texas Tech linebacker E.J. Holub, TCU defensive standout Bob Lilly and Baylor linebacking terror Mike Singletary.

"Thanks for making this conference great," Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said to the inductees.

Slocum, whose team has been banned from television and bowl games this year due to NCAA probation, apologized to his colleagues for any negative attention that A&M may have shed on the SWC.

But Slocum provided a defense for his team's recent troubles that came to him during a reading by his minister about the garden of Eden.

Leagues delay decision on Tier I bowls

GRAPEVINE (AP) — After hearing bids from nine college bowls competing for three top television slots, conference commissioners said Friday they need more time to choose the winners.

The commissioners had indicated they might pare down the list of finalists, but after hearing presentations from all nine, they said they had no short list because the bids were so competitive.

"I guess what we had hoped was that there would be three very clear winners in this thing," said Gene Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference. "I think we all had in our mind how things were going to come out and they didn't come out that way. When you figure everything in, it was amazing how close it was."

Corrigan, Big Eight commissioner Carl James and Southeastern Conference commissioner Roy Kramer said they would take the bids back to their member schools for consideration.

They hope to pick the three Tier 1 bowls by the end of next week.

The proposed Tier 1 bowl alliance would feature exclusive prime time television slots on Dec. 31, Jan. 1 and Jan. 2, beginning after the 1995 season.

Friday's delay in choosing the final three Tier 1 bowls was not related to the Holiday Bowl letter, the commissioners said.

The top bids for the spots were from the Fiesta Bowl, Gator Bowl and Orange Bowl, all offering $100 million-plus. In a last minute effort, the Cotton Bowl boosted its bid Thursday to the $100 million range, up from $80 million to $85 million.

Also making bids were the Citrus Bowl, the Peach Bowl, the Carquest Bowl, the Sugar Bowl and the Alamo Bowl.

Veteran QBs to make first start

Associated Press

Warren Moon is at one end of the scale — at age 37 — in the final stages of his NFL career. Dave Brown and Kent Graham are at the other, third-year players getting their first cracks at an NFL starting job.

■ NFL Roundup

All can be excused, however, if they enter the NFL's first exhibition weekend with a few jitters.

Moon will make his debut with the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday night against the Dallas Cowboys, in the first game for Barry Switzer in place of the departed Jimmy Johnson as head coach of the two-time Super Bowl champions.

Brown and Graham, meanwhile, continue Saturday night their attempt to succeed the departed Phil Simms, whose release by the Giants last month sent shock waves around the league.

For Brown and Graham, the game against Miami represents both a step toward the starting quarterback job and a concurrent effect — the respect of their teammates.

"I'm sure they're confident in themselves, but the whole team has to have confidence in the quarterback," says wide receiver Mike Sherrard, seeing his first game action since breaking his hip in the fourth game last season. "Quarterback is the key position."

The season officially opens with the Hall of Fame game between Atlanta and San Diego at Canton, Ohio. Then the Giants and Dolphins meet at Giants Stadium Saturday night.

There are three games Sunday.

Denver and the Los Angeles Raiders meet at Barcelona, Spain — the third straight game for the Broncos against the Raiders; Houston is at Kansas City and Minnesota at Dallas.

Colts

ANDERSON, Ind. — Rookie linebacker Trev Alberts' contract problems have come to an end following several days of negotiations and confusion, the Indianapolis Colts general manager said Friday evening.

"We got the language worked out, and it has been sent to the league," Jim Irsay said. "Trev will be allowed to resume practice."

Alberts had missed nearly two weeks of training camp and a five-day rookie orientation before recently signing a six-year contract reportedly worth about $8.1 million. He then missed four practice sessions because of concerns about the contract's language.

Seahawks

KIRKLAND, Wash. — Sam Adams, the eighth overall draft pick, agreed to terms with Seattle on a five-year contract believed to be worth about $6.5 million.

Adams may become the starting left tackle alongside right tackle Cortez Kennedy in Seattle's 4-3 defense this season.

The length of Adams' contract was a sticking point. He wanted to sign a four-year deal.

NFL players can become unrestricted free agents after four seasons.

Adams will be in camp Saturday to sign his contract and will begin working out with the Seahawks on Monday. He has been in the San Francisco area.

The 6-foot-3, 285-pounder from Texas A&M will be the last Seahawks' player to sign his contract. He was an 18-day training-camp holdout.

Redskins

CARLISLE, Pa. — The Washington Redskins ended their ninth day of training camp Friday without No. 1 draft pick quarterback Heath Shuler, but a source close to the contract negotiations said the sides were close to a deal after progress was made in the talks.

"There's been progress. I'm very optimistic we should have something nailed down reasonably quickly," possibly by Sunday, said the source.

The two major sticking points had been the amount of money Shuler would make on an average per year basis and the amount of the signing bonus.

Shuler had been asking for a $6 million signing bonus; the Redskins were offering no more than $5 million.

Shuler's representatives, led by agent Tom Condon, had wanted the salary to average $3 million on a yearly basis if Shuler were able to opt out of a long-term contract early by meeting certain incentives. The sides have agreed the contract may be voidable after three years.

Both sides are close to agreement on a figure somewhere between $5 million and $6 million on the signing bonus and between $2.78 million and $3 million on the average salary per year. The $2.78 million figure is the average yearly salary in the deal signed last year by New England Patriots' draft pick quarterback Drew Bledsoe.

Rams

IRVINE, Calif. — Defensive end Fred Stokes sustained a potentially serious knee injury during practice Friday with Los Angeles and wide receiver Greg McMurtry walked out of training camp.

Stokes, a returning starter who had 9½ sacks last year, injured his left knee during a one-on-one pass drill. He had to be carried off the field and was scheduled for further examinations Friday night.

Earlier, McMurtry met with the coaching staff and left training camp, apparently because he didn't feel he was going to make the team.

Oilers

SAN ANTONIO — The attorney for unsigned guard Doug Dawson talked with Houston Oilers general manager Floyd Reese, but said little progress was made in contract negotiatons.

"We really did not make much progress," Ewing said as he watched the Oilers' final practice before their opening exhibition game Sunday night in Kansas City. "But with that said, I'm still optimistic that we will get him signed at some point."

The team has today off.

Dawson, an eight-year veteran, is an unrestricted free agent after playing three years with Houston.

More Sports/10C

The Oilers have refused to budge from a one-year contract offer for the NFL minimum of $162,000, plus incentives that could push his salary above $800,000.

Steelers

LATROBE, Pa. — Pittsburgh Steelers guard Carlton Haselrig will miss up to two weeks of training camp with a dislocated wrist he insisted isn't badly injured.

Coach Bill Cowher said X-rays revealed no fracture.

"I don't think I could stop a 300-pounder right now." Haselrig said. "If there were a game tomorrow, I couldn't play. But this is training camp, so if it takes time to get better, that's what I'll do."

Haselrig's injury will give former Minnesota Vikings guard Todd Kalis additional playing time in today's scrimmage against the Buffalo Bills in Edinboro and the Aug. 6 exhibition game in Miami.

The Steelers signed Kalis as an insurance policy last spring when team officials were uncertain if Haselrig would return.

Chiefs

RIVER FALLS, Wis. — Kansas City learned that NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue had finally given formal approval to the May 2 trade in which they acquired quarterback Steve Bono from the San Francisco 49ers in exchange for a draft pick.

Chiefs president Carl Peterson read a statement from Tagliabue saying, "I do not find clear proof of a violation of league rules and policies."

Bono has been working out with the Chiefs since spring. But Tagliabue, who must approve all NFL trades, had withheld formal approval while investigating allegations raised by an unidentified team that the 49ers and Chiefs had violated the collective bargaining agreement.

Bono had been released by San Francisco, re-signed for a lower salary and then traded to Kansas City.

Houston Oiler defensive end Henry Ford tries to overcome label of being lazy during training camp.

Oilers try to jumpstart Ford on defensive line

By Michael Lutz
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — There's a pattern to Henry Ford's football career— he gets yelled at a lot at the start of each new level.

It happened in high school at Fort Worth, it happened in college at Arkansas and it's happening again as the Houston Oilers No. 1 draft pick of 1994 tries to make the adjustment to pro football.

Defensive line coach Jim Stanley has taken up the cry of previous Ford mentors. He doesn't mince words.

"He's got some ability and he's got some laziness in him," Stanley said.

"That's something he'll have to get out of him if he's going to stay in pro football."

Ford, 6-3, 285, is an easy-going defensive end with enormous talent but his low-key approach has his position coach worried. Stanley showed Ford some practice film to make his point and told the rookie:

"Henry, this isn't going to cut it," Stanley recalled. "He kept looking at the floor."

Ford mashed enough quarterbacks to lead the Southeastern Conference in sacks with 14 last season, establishing a school record. He was voted the Razorback's defensive most valuable player and was second on the team with a career-best 68 tackles.

But he didn't start out with such favorable stats at Arkansas.

"When I first got to college the coaches got on me a lot," Ford said. "The first year, they didn't like anything that I did. But I think they thought that I could develop into a good player.

Now he's moved up to the pros where there is pressure on every play and someone capable of beating you on every down. He seems lost in the intensified atmosphere of his first pro camp.

"I've always been the quiet person in the group," Ford said. "Some people say I'm anti-social but I'm just quiet."

COWBOYS: Smith shines in preseason

(From 1C)

"We may be a little cocky but you can't play in this league if you don't have a little confidence."

Smith, a first-round draft pick out of Texas A&M, has forged a reputation as a tight cover man based on performances against San Francisco wide receiver Jerry Rice. He made a brilliant interception of Cody Carlson last Saturday night in a scrimmage against the Houston Oilers.

"Kevin is on his way to a Pro Bowl year," said Cowboys scouting director Larry Lacewell. "He has been tremendous, probably our best player in training camp."

Smith said he has honed his skills in practice sessions against Michael Irvin and Alvin Harper.

"They are the best," Smith said. "Michael has been hurt this training camp so you can kind of build up your confidence when you don't have to go against him."

Smith said this third training camp isn't filled with apprehension like ones in the past.

"I'm not nervous any more because I'm comfortable at my position now," Smith said. "I'm bigger, faster and improved. I'm not worried anymore about guys beating me."

Smith said the players have accepted the switch over in coaches from Jimmy Johnson to Barry Switzer.

"We need to avoid comparing the two coaches," Smith said. "Barry Switzer is a winner. He's been a winner all of his life."

Switzer makes his professional coaching debut in the 8 p.m. game against the Vikings at Texas Stadium. More than 50,000 fans are expected in Switzer's first game since he was at Oklahoma.

"We'll be pretty intense for him," Smith said. "Our intensity will carry right over from the Super Bowl. We've been working hard. We don't take many days off around here."

Defensive coordinator Butch Davis said Moon will give his secondary an excellent test.

"He won't be doing it from the run-and-shoot like he did at Houston," Davis said. "There will be a tight end in the Minnesota offense. It will be interesting to see how he looks over in the NFC. He'll probably hit 22 of 27 against us and everybody will wonder what's wrong with our defense. In training camp it has been looking pretty good, particularly the secondary. I think that's our strong point."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Adopting a more relaxed manner will help you develop quicker rapport with influential people. Your financial position improves when you seek a leadership position. Be ready to take advantage of any unexpected travel or educational opportunities. Your peace of mind will grow along with your savings. Avoid taking any unnecessary monetary risks early in 1995.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Paul Anka, actress Delta Burke, basketball player Bill Cartwright, law professor Anita Hill.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your winning personality makes you very popular this weekend. Romance is more exciting than in the past. Try to reach a compromise with a neighbor to avoid paying costly legal fees.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A perfect day to pursue activities that give you pleasure. You may become the center of attention at an organizational function. Avoid sounding negative. Revamp an exercise program to reflect recent changes in your fitness.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spend time with someone you may not have seen lately due to work pressures. Afternoon hours favor puttering around the house or catching up on your reading. Dress up if going out this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The financial outlook is rosy! You can run across bargains, invest wisely or realize cash gains. Those with artistic gifts should showcase them to the best advantage. Give family members extra affection and encouragement tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Partnerships and other close ties are emphasized this weekend. Consult with your mate before deciding whether to accept an offbeat invitation. The romantic roller coaster is about to start up again. Try to maintain your equilibrium.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep important papers and contractual agreements in a secure place, away from curious eyes. You may be unwilling to enter a romance with certain strings attached. Be true to your ideals. You deserve better!

Jagger answers questions, gives tips on Prodigy service

NEW YORK — Mick Jagger hit the information superhighway Friday before going on the road.

The Rolling Stones' lead singer tapped into the Prodigy service, answering questions about the Stones' upcoming 43-city U.S. tour and offering some listening tips.

Jagger said fans should listen up for "Waiting on a Friend," which will be a hot number in concert. But forget "Stray Cat Blues." He said it's sounding "dreadful" in practice.

As for the hits that top his list, Jagger said the group's most important songs are "Satisfaction" and "Honky Tonk Woman," because they were the biggest hits, not necessarily the best.

The tour opens Monday in Washington.

BURBANK, Calif. — Nicole Kidman will star opposite Val Kilmer, Tommy Lee Jones and Jim Carrey in "Batman Forever," the third in the caped crusader series.

Nicole Kidman to star in 'Batman Forever.'

The movie's director, Joel Schumacher, announced Miss Kidman's casting on Thursday.

She will play a psychiatrist specializing in the study of the criminal mind. She tries to anticipate the next assaults of Gotham City's masterminds Two-Face and The Riddler.

LOS ANGELES — The Tokens have roared back into the spotlight with the song "The Lion Sleeps Tonight" 30 years after it first became a hit.

The tune, based on a Zulu folk song, was No. 1 on the pop charts for three weeks in October 1961.

It is now featured in both Disney's "The Lion King" and a Burger King commercial featuring the movie's characters. Although the song isn't on "The Lion King" soundtrack record, RCA is re-releasing the single.

"Now that it's current, we're current. I am thrilled," said Phil Margo, one of the original Tokens.

Margo remembers auditioning in the '60s for RCA executives who wanted the doo-wop group to sing "The Lion Sleeps Tonight."

"We said what kind of a ridiculous song is this?" Margo recalled. "We tried to convince them not to put it out. They said, 'Go home. This is going to be a smash.'"

NEW YORK — Hoping to save her troubled husband, Courtney Love called fellow rocker Perry Farrell and asked him to speak with Kurt Cobain. Farrell never got the chance.

"I would have told him, listen, let's — I don't know — go to a film festival in Utah or something. Get . . . out of town," Farrell said in the August issue of Spin magazine. "I don't mean to make a pun out of it, but rock 'n' roll isn't worth dying over. Fame goes away."

Farrell, lead singer of Porno for Pyros and the founder of the Lollapalooza tour, said Love called him two days before Cobain's suicide by shotgun in April.

Love, lead singer of the band Hole, "asked me if he was at my house. He ran away from rehab, and she thought he might be heading my way," Farrell said.

"I wasn't close with him, but from what she told me, he respected my work, so she thought he would listen to advice."

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Warren Zevon's $2,500 12-string guitar was stolen from his recreational vehicle, parked outside during a concert.

Warren Zevon's $2,500 guitar was stolen during a concert.

"It's unfortunate, but I don't want to talk about it," the singer-songwriter said. "I'll just say it could have been much worse."

The guitar was taken early Thursday along with two cameras, lenses, a television and a videocassette recorder. The items were valued at about $4,300.

Zevon's songs include "Excitable Boy" and "Werewolves of London."

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. — It's a little bit country, and now it's a little bit rock 'n' roll.

Dollywood — the theme park named for country star Dolly Parton — is being expanded with a $6 million, seven-acre section focusing on rock.

It will include a 1,000-seat theater for a 1950s music show, a restaurant, an antique car show and a new ride using 1950s-style cars.

Parton hails from these parts of the Smoky Mountain foothills. The park opened in 1986.

GOODWILL: Americans capture gold

(From 1C)

His coach, Mike Keller, said the problem was as much in O'Brien's head as in his legs.

"There's a big disappointment with the 1,500 meters," Keller said. "It always seems to come down to that for us. It's not a physical thing, it's a mental thing with him, obviously.

"Somewhere along the line, we'll need a sports psychologist to deal with the 1,500. We need to do something different than we're doing. Obviously it's not working for us.

"We've had two opportunities to break a world record, his own world record, and he hasn't been able to do it ... We need a victory over the 1,500 more than anything else."

Keller also suggested that O'Brien was reluctant to suffer the pain needed to run a strong 1,500.

"He's run 4:33 in the 1,500 back in 1989, but maybe his memory is pretty good, and he remembers how much it hurt," he said.

O'Brien had compiled 4,736 points in the opening five events Thursday, putting him 16 ahead of his pace of two years ago.

He started Friday with a bang, winning the 110-meter hurdles in 13.81 seconds, smashing the American decathlon record for the event. He then threw the discus 157 feet, 10 inches, pole vaulted 16-0¾ and threw the javelin 204-1.

Those performances gave O'Brien a total of 8,217 points, with only the 1,500 remaining.

He will make another attempt at the record — and the landmark barrier of 9,000 points — in September in Talence. His No. 1 rival, Eduard Hamalainen of Belarus, and the rest of the world's top decathles will be there, too.

In other events on the final day of track and field competition, Americans won five other gold medals, sweeping all four relays.

■ The team of Natasha Kaiser-Brown, Maicel Malone, Jearl Miles and Michele Collins took the women's 1,600-meter relay in 3:22.27, the year's leading time.

■ Mike Marsh, Leroy Burrell, Sam Jefferson and Carl Lewis won the men's 400 relay in 38.30.

■ Cheryl Taplin, Dannette Young, Collins and Gwen Torrence won the women's 400 relay in 42.98, the best in the world for 1994. It was the third gold medal for Torrence, who earlier won the 100 and 200 meters.

■ Derek Mills, Andrew Valmon, Jason Rouser and Michael Johnson took the men's 1,600 relay in 2:59.42, the year's fastest and a Goodwill Games record.

■ Kenny Harrison led a 1-2 U.S. finish in the triple jump, sailing 57-2¼. Olympic champion Mike Conley was second at 56-7¼.

In boxing, Russia and Cuba split the Games' first six gold medals.

Fuzzy, 'Merry Mex' lead at halfway marks

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Fuzzy Zoeller is taking his victories on the PGA Tour on a round-by-round basis these days.

"I guess I'm comfortable. I've got two rounds of golf under my belt," Zoeller said Friday after shooting a 65 for a two-round total of 131 and a two-stroke lead in the $1.25 million Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

■ Golf Roundup

"I didn't hit the ball as well as I did yesterday. It was a weird day of golf, but I'll stick with it."

Tour rookie Dicky Pride, who started the day among the leaders, finished with a 67 for 133. He was tied at 9-under with Gene Sauers and Jay Haas, each with 66s.

Nick Price, the British Open winner who is the defending champion here, had a two-day total of 138 after shooting a 66.

The cut came at 2-under 140, with casualties including John Daly, Tom Kite and Hale Irwin.

Zoeller's last victory was the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic in 1986. The 42-year-old Hoosier struggled, particularly with a bad back, for years before turning it around in 1993, winning $378,175. He's doing even better this year, ranking ninth with $523,000.

Zoeller said he wasn't impressed with his play Friday on a course he helped design.

"Most people think 65 is a hell of a round of golf and when you look at it on a card, but ... I was a little errant today," he said.

But he's ready to win, any time and anywhere.

"Any time you win, whether it's a golf course I helped design or any golf course, just beating the best in the world is a good feeling," Zoeller said.

LPGA Ping-Welch's

CANTON, Mass. — Juli Inkster didn't throw any balls or fling any clubs. She didn't even kick a trash can. The emotional golfer had plenty of reason to do all of that Friday.

Then she eagled the last hole.

It gave her a one-stroke lead after the second round of the LPGA Ping/Welch's Championship and it salvaged a day that had her muttering to herself.

"I bogeyed two par-5s, which is criminal out here," she said. "That's where you're supposed to get the birdies."

But on the four par-5s Friday, she had two bogeys, one par and the eagle that gave her a 7-under-par 137 as she leapfrogged Pat Bradley, Helen Alfredsson, Annika Sorenstam and Melissa McNamara, who were at 138.

There was a three-way tie at 139, two strokes off the lead, among Marianne Morris, Pearl Sinn and Robin Walton.

Northville Classic

JERICHO, N.Y. — Lee Trevino, reunited with longtime caddy Herman Mitchell, who had been sidelined since March with heart problems, and Jimmy Powell, each shot 6-under-par 66s to share the first-round lead in the $650,000 Northville L.I. Classic.

Trevino, 54, who already has five victories in 15 tournaments this year, needs one more to tie Miller Barber for the Senior PGA Tour career lead at 24.

Powell, 59, who did not join the regular PGA Tour until he was 45, shot a bogey-free round at the 6,775-yard Meadow Brook Club course.

Jack Nicklaus, Jim Colbert and DeWitt Weaver are at 70. For Colbert, who has won two of the last three senior tournaments, it was his 10th-consecutive sub-par round.

Andretti jumps out to quick start at Marlboro

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Michael Andretti was the fastest of the fast Friday as practice began for the Marlboro 500.

Andretti's fast lap of 234.049 mph was just a bit shy of the track record of 234.275 set last July by Mario Andretti, Michael's father and former teammate. The time difference between the two fast laps was three-hundredths of a second.

■ Marlboro 500

"We're doing these times with other cars out on the track," said the younger Andretti, a two-time winner at Michigan International Speedway. "That means people are stirring the air around and freeing it up, making it easier to do a faster lap.

"I'm really amazed at the time dad did last year. He was out there by himself in qualifying. That was an awesome lap."

Five other drivers broke the 230 barrier Friday on the two-mile, high-banked oval, with Raul Boesel closest to Michael at 233.866.

Nigel Mansell, the defending race and series champion and the elder Andretti's current teammate, was third at 232.785, followed by Mario at 232.633, Emerson Fittipaldi at 230.945 and Robby Gordon at 230.424.

Mansell, taking a few light jabs at the rough track — particularly an area between turns three and four — said, "This track is a lot more demanding than Indy. You carry all of your speed into the turns and then you hit the bumps. But I know what to expect here now. When you hit the bump (in turn three), you settle down about 150 feet later."

Michael Andretti, who missed the race last season while competing on the Formula One circuit, said, "I think they've improved the track, really. ... But it's Michigan, it's bumpy and that's the way it's been since I've been coming here. You just have to adjust to it."

The top four drivers on Friday were in cars powered by Ford Cosworth engines. That is just the opposite of the way it has been most of the season, with the Ilmor-powered Penske trio of Fittipaldi, Al Unser Jr. and Paul Tracy dominating with seven victories in nine starts.

Agassi rallies to beat Bruguera in 3 sets

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

TORONTO — Andre Agassi pulled off one of his biggest victories in months Friday night, beating two-time French Open champion Sergi Bruguera of Spain 4-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-1 in a quarterfinal match of the $1.7 million Player's International tennis tournament.

Agassi, seeded eighth, used a powerful forehand to chase the top-seeded 23-year-old Spaniard around center court at the National Tennis Centre and relied on his return of service to keep Bruguera off balance.

"It was real important for me to be aggressive out there," Agassi said. "I played a real solid game."

Agassi advanced to a semifinal match against sixth-seeded Wayne Ferreira of South Africa, who beat No. 14 Malivai Washington 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

On the other side of the draw, Jim Courier, a former No. 1 player, beat Sweden's Thomas Enqvist 6-2, 6-2 to earn a semifinal spot opposite unseeded Jason Stoltenberg of Australia, who eliminated 15th-seeded Richey Reneberg 6-4, 6-2.

In a doubles quarterfinal, the top-seeded team of Zimbabwe's Byron Black and American Jonathan Stark beat Canadians Albert Chang and Brian Gyetko 6-4, 7-5.

Stratton Tennis

STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. — Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, playing two singles matches in a day for the first time within memory, won them to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Women's Hardcourts tournament.

The top-seeded Spaniard, the No. 2 player in the world, survived a scare in the morning to beat Sandra Cacic 6-4, 3-6, 6-1. In the afternoon, she wore down Tami Whitlinger-Jones 6-3, 6-0.

The double day was necessary after rain and fog allowed only three matches to start Thursday.

Sanchez Vicario, who still had a doubles match to play after the singles, recalled playing one singles and two doubles matches in a day at the 1992 French Open, but could not remember playing two singles matches the same day.

No. 3 seed Mary Joe Fernandez of Miami did not fare as well. She beat Sonja Jeyaseelan of Canada 6-1, 6-0, but lost to No. 5 Iva Majoli of Croatia 6-3, 5-7, 7-6 (7-3).

Defending champion Conchita Martinez of Spain, second seeded and No. 3 in the world, gained the semis by beating Marianne Werdel of San Diego 6-0, 6-4. Martinez had only one match to play after winning the only match completed Thursday.

Stryian Open

MARIA LANKOWITZ, Austria — Top-seeded Anke Huber of Germany and No. 2 Judith Wiesner of Austria advanced to the semifinals of the $100,000 Styrian Open clay-court tournament.

In other quarterfinal play, Silvia Farina of Italy defeated third-seeded Barbara Rittner of Germany, who retired with a hand injury after losing the first set 6-3.

No. 4 Sandra Cecchini of Italy got by Petra Ritter of Austria 6-2, 5-7, 6-0.

Wiesner will face Farina, and Huber will play Cecchini in semifinal matches today.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.
