Tracy togs

NEW YORK (AP) — Even if your chin couldn't cut sheetrock and you don't have a two-way wrist radio, you, too, can look like Dick Tracy — thanks to a line of Tracy togs and accessories at a department store near you.

Nobody held a gun on the shoppers who turned out at Manhattan stores Friday, kicking off the Tracy paraphernalia onslaught by laying out cash for yellow fedoras ($30), Tracy towels ($20) and Tracy T-shirts ($14).

Want the great detective's jutting jaw on your face? $50 for a mask. How about a denim jacket with his likeness across the back? $115. Believe it, sweetheart. It's all in connection with the Warren Beatty flick that opened nationally Friday.

Memories

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Randy Travis says his current single record, "He Walked on Water," brings back memories of his own grandfather.

Travis

The song is about a boy's relationship with his great-grandfather and was written by Allen Shamblin.

"I had a grandfather that I can relate that to, very much so," Travis said. "I used to ride with him on the tractor and go with him in his car everywhere he went, ride on the horse if he was plowing with the horse."

He says once he ran over his grandfather's hat with his bicycle after being warned to be careful.

"He caught me by the arm, jerked me off that bicycle and popped me one time real good," Travis said. "I ran off and got a few feet from him and picked up a handful of rocks and started throwing them at him. So he started throwing them back at me.

"It was funny, neighbors driving by and here's this man — he was about 60 at that time — and his grandkid out there throwing rocks at each other."

Wall of water hits Ohio town

■ Eleven persons were killed and 51 are missing after thunderstorms flood Ohio River community.

By Margaret Caldwell

SHADYSIDE, Ohio (AP) — Torrential thunderstorms sent a flash flood surging through a valley into this Ohio River town, killing at least 11 people, leaving 51 missing and scores of others homeless Friday, authorities said.

Raging floodwaters late Thursday swept homes off foundations and washed away cars. About 200 people were reported evacuated in central Ohio.

"The valleys are choked with debris," Gov. Richard Celeste told reporters after flying over the hilly Appalachian region in eastern Ohio. "A wall of water wiped a path through the area."

The governor declared a state of emergency, and dispatched about 50 National Guardsmen to the area.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency declared Belmont County, which includes Shadyside, and Jefferson and Franklin counties disaster areas, making federal aid available to residents. Seventeen counties now have been declared disaster areas because of flooding or tornadoes since May 29.

Ten bodies were taken to the Bauknecht Funeral Home in Shadyside, said Bob Bell, funeral director. One body was taken to Bellaire City Hospital, he said.

Chuck Vogt, Belmont County coroner's investigator, also said there were 11 confirmed dead.

Earlier, Fire Chief Mark Badia had said 14 adults and two children were dead. The names of the victims have not been released.

County Sheriff Tom McCort, who said he was running the recovery effort, said 51 people in Shadysville and Meade Township, where the two creeks run south of the village, were missing as of 8:45 p.m.

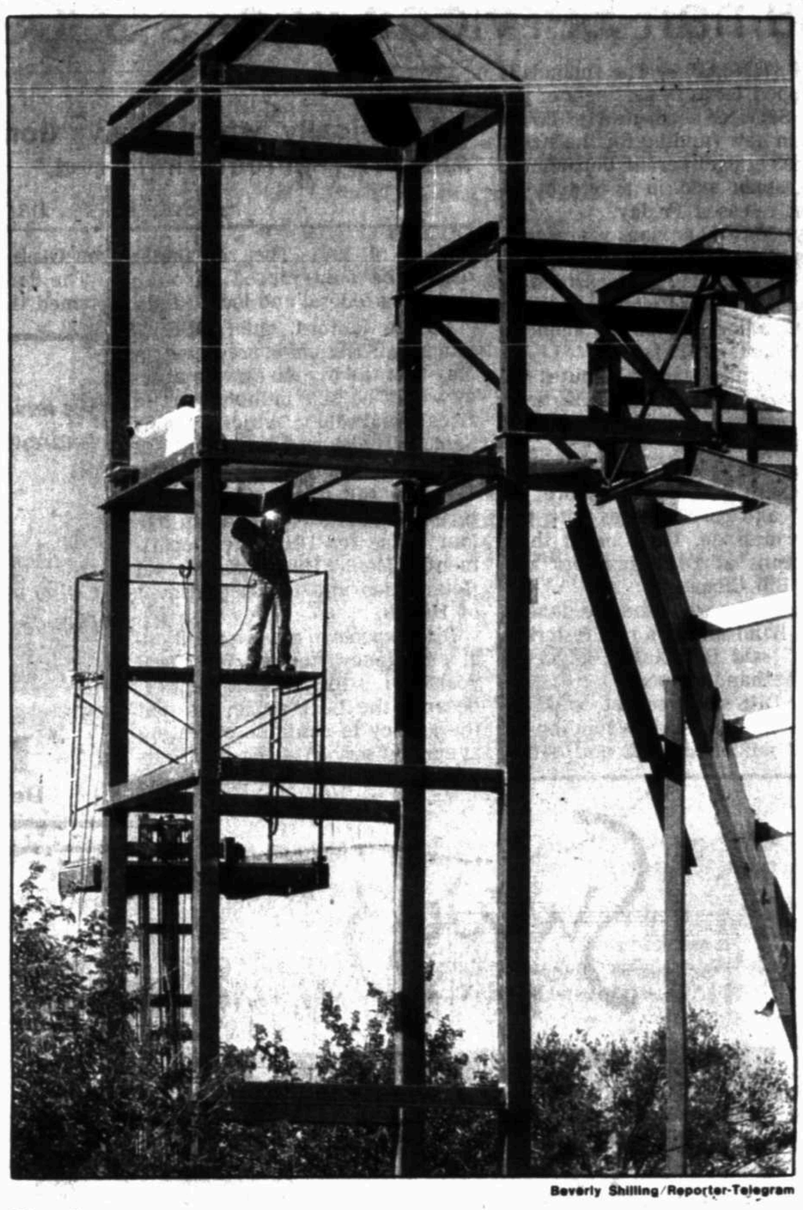

The list was compiled through telephone inquiries with townspeople and relatives and interviews with people evacuated from the area.

About 200 people came and went from a Shadyside disaster center during the day, seeking news of missing friends and relatives.

Vogt said two bodies were found in the Ohio River and one was found in a field next to the river after water receded. He said the rest were found in the creeks, which flow into the river.

Some of the bodies were taken to a

Surgery on eyelids discussed

■ A procedure that corrects baggy or swollen eyelids isn't just "cosmetic" — it's necessary to save vision for many "mature" patients.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

An opthalmologist told her audience they didn't have to live with "that bulldog look," a baggy or swollen eyelid condition common in older people, during a seminar at Physicians & Surgeons Hospital.

Dr. Mikiko Flynn discussed the pros and cons of blepharoplasty, cosmetic surgery that removes excess skin and fat from around the eye. She specializes in the procedure at the Eyes of Texas Clinic & Surgery Center of Midland and Odessa.

Although the surgery is primarily cosmetic, and popular with executives, Mrs. Flynn said it also can improve vision for people with extreme conditions of blepharochalasis (swollen eyes) and dermatochalasis (baggy eyes).

A slide presentation showed the steps of the operation, which takes about two hours and is performed as an out-patient service at Physicians & Surgeons.

Mrs. Flynn begins by evaluating candidates for the procedure. She said in many cases she can tell just by looking at the patient that she should do the surgery.

"In extreme cases the field of vision is almost blocked by overhanging lids," Mrs. Flynn said. "The upper lid acts like the sunvisor on a baseball cap."

In other cases the upper and/or lower eyelid is abnormally turned in toward the eye or out from it. When the eyelid is turned in, eyelashes can scratch the surface of the eye and cause infections. A

Teachers take first look at Kumon math

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Although proponents of Kumon Mathematex herald their method of learning math as the greatest cultural import since sushi, some Midland education professionals disagree.

Kumon Mathematex — a private afterschool supplemental math program — opened its doors in Midland Friday. Dave Walker, chief of operations from the company's headquarters in Houston, discussed the program at the Friday news conference.

Walker said that Kumon — a program used by 1.4 million Japanese — is not "Japanese math."

"There is no such thing as Japanese math. There is no difference between American or Japanese math," Walker said. "There is a difference in the teaching, however."

Kumon math, a method of self-paced instruction, was developed 30 years ago by Japanese math teacher Toru Kumon, who organized the program to help his son.

District 8 TRC director Strong resigns as assistant demoted

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

Ron Strong has resigned as District 8 Railroad Commission director in Midland after what Texas Railroad Commission spokesman Gary Garrison called personnel changes.

"There have been some changes in the personnel in the Midland office to improve operations in that district," Garrison said. He noted that was all he was authorized to say on the matter.

Hank Krusekopf, District 8 assistant director also was demoted as part of the personnel changes, according to sources at the Midland office.

The Texas Railroad Commission at Austin would not confirm the local personnel changes were related to a controversy over the handling of plugging complaints in Martin County.

But the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, reported Sunday that Mark Hoelscher, vice president of the Texas Groundwater Conservation Districts Association said he had been having problems with Krusekopf and felt that the Midland TRC office was biased in favor of the oil industry.

Greyhound to ban smoking on buses

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc., taking a cue from the airline industry, announced Friday it would ban smoking on its buses beginning Monday.

"Signs are going up right now," company spokesman George Gravley said from the company's Dallas headquarters Friday.

The ban takes effect at 12:01 a.m. Monday on regularly scheduled buses. Charter service is not affected, the company said.

"Greyhound research shows that only 22 percent of our passengers smoke, compared to 29 percent of the general public," said marketing vice president Ralph Borland. "In recent surveys our passengers told us they prefer non-smoking service, so we're responding to them."

Only one passenger interviewed by The Associated Press at the Greyhound terminal in downtown Dallas approved of the smoking ban on all buses.

"I think it stinks," said Merle Kelley of Austin, Minn. "Greyhound's getting just like the airlines on this, and I have a pet peeve with them, too."

The 60-year-old truck driver said if the carrier would install what he called adequate ventilation systems, smoking could continue in the last four rows of each bus.

"The system they had up until now is OK," said Reggie Allen, 31, of Youngstown, Ohio. "They don't have to ban it altogether. It is an infringement on our rights as smokers."

The company said the anti-smoking efforts of Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan led the company to adopt the ban without waiting for federal regulators to impose one.

Eight states currently ban smoking on all buses.

Sullivan, in a statement, hailed the move.

"The decision by Greyhound is one more indication that Americans are waking up to the seriousness of the tobacco health threat and taking action to protect their health," Sullivan said.

The American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society and the American Lung Association, united as the Coalition on Smoking or Health, also hailed the move.

Gravley acknowledged that some passengers would not be happy about it. "This is a very controversial issue because no doubt some people are going to be unhappy about it," Gravley said. "No business likes to do something that its customers don't like, even if it's a small percentage of them."

A federally imposed smoking ban began earlier this year on airplanes.

Greyhound said its surveys showed almost 40 percent of its passengers thought trips would be more comfortable in a smoke-free environment and another 20 percent would take more trips if smoking were banned. Only 6.6 percent said they would not ride Greyhound if smoking were banned, he said.

"We hope we don't lose too many, that's the first step," Gravley said. "We hope that not too many present passengers will leave us and we do hope that if the atmosphere on the bus is more pleasant that we will attract some new people."

Human Services seeks $309 million funding hike

'Basically, what they've done is put a Band-Aid on a real festering need.'

— Bob Kafka, handicapped advocate

AUSTIN (AP) — The financially strapped Texas Department of Human Services needs nearly $1.3 billion in new funding for the state's 1992-93 budget period, department spokesmen said in a budget request released Friday.

But 30 to 40 anxious representatives of social service groups, fearful that DHS may not be providing enough for those who need it the most, rallied outside the agency's headquarters Friday.

Their rally started minutes before the agency's board of directors met to consider the staff funding request.

The service providers gave speeches, chanted "no more games," and carried signs with the same message. They aimed their criticisms at DHS directors and Gov. Bill Clements.

"Basically, what they've done is put a Band-Aid on a real festering need," said Bob Kafka, advocate for the handicapped.

The DHS staff request would increase human services funding by $309.7 million in 1992 and $417.6 million in 1993. The remainder would be contributed through matching federal and local funds.

Burton Raiford, chief DHS financial officer, had predicted in May that the human service agency would be $178 million short in fiscal year 1991, which begins Sept. 1. The agency was about $22 million short for 1990.

Earlier this month, the Legislature provided $100 million in bailout funds for DHS, the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and the Department of Health.

DHS expects to receive additional emergency funding for fiscal year 1991, which begins Sept. 1, because the Legislature has told the agency to continue operating at current service levels, said Warren Glass, a DHS budget analyst.

The demonstrators Friday complained that state government ignored human services funding problems.

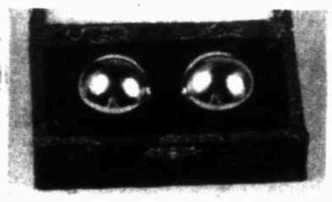

The advocates, including the Gray Panthers, Texas Alliance for Human Needs, Texas Council on Family Violence and Texas Citizens Action, urged the DHS to shift its service emphasis from providing institutional care to community services.

Stiffer pollution laws would impact TACB

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Air Control Board could triple its budget and see a major increase in its duties as a result of proposed changes in the federal Clean Air Act.

Congress is working on a new Clean Air Act that is expected to put more stringent controls on ozone and carbon monoxide emissions, with more of an effort to control smaller pollution sources, such as dry cleaners, service stations and private vehicles.

Congressional negotiators this summer are expected to work out differences between House and Senate versions of what would be the first major revision of the Clean Air Act since 1977.

Areas that already have ozone levels above the national standard, including Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, Beaumont-Port Arthur and El Paso, will have to comply with additional hydrocarbon controls on plants ranging from refineries and chemical plants down to service stations, dry cleaners and painting operations, said Beverly Hartsock, executive assistant to the director of the Texas Air Control Board.

Areas that do not exceed ozone levels, including Midland and Odessa, would not face those hydrocarbon controls unless they rise above those standards, she said.

But chemical plants and refineries also will be required to adopt controls to meet limits on toxic emissions, and the Air Control Board will be assuming more responsibility in issuing permits and monitoring compliance, she said.

To do the expanded job, the Air Control Board plans to seek a 75 percent increase in its staff during the next two-year fiscal period, with the money to come from federal fees of $25 per ton of permitted emissions.

The state agency, whose budget is now $15.5 million, expects to get more than $40 million as its share of user fees through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The state agency, which now employs 401, plans to seek authority to fill another 281 staff positions, which would include 90 in regional field offices, Hartsock said.

"We think we're going to continue to grow over the next four to six years in order to really do the job in the way it's set out in the act," she said.

The field staff will be available to enforce the rules, to conduct investigations, she said.

The board also will be able to afford more air quality monitors, she said.

Ken Kramer, state director of the Sierra Club, said most environmental groups do not mind that the Air Control Board is assuming more of the environmental responsibility from the EPA, as long as the EPA maintains strong oversight over the state programs.

"If the state programs are as strong as EPA would otherwise implement, plus you have the additional opportunity of more personnel available through the state programs, then I think we have a potentially good mix of state and federal activity," Kramer said.

Kramer also is member of an interim committee of legislators and public members that will study the problem of toxic air emissions in Texas and recommend to the Legislature in 1991 where state law might go further than the federal law.

The Texas Water Commission already has assumed responsibility for administering the federal hazardous waste regulatory program previously administered by the federal EPA.

STATE IN BRIEF

Lake Meredith cleanup OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a bill that will let the federal government help pay for keeping salt deposits from reaching Lake Meredith, which provides drinking water for many Panhandle communities.

"The quality of the drinking water that serves 11 communities from Lamesa to Lubbock and in to Amarillo has been continually deteriorating to a point that it is sometimes below health and environmental standards," said Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock.

The $8 million project will remove salt from a 150 mile reach upstream from the lake, which is north of Amarillo.

Since the lake was constructed in 1965, its salt concentration has steadily increased because of a brine seepage into the Canadian River along the reach. Studies suggest the brackish water seeps into the reach through salt-laden geologic formations.

Police arrest suspect

ENNIS, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers arrested a suspect Friday in the shotgun slaying of an Ellis County man and his 5-year-old son, the Department of Public Safety said.

Ellis County deputies said they had no motive for the shootings at a rural home Thursday night.

Shepperd term filled

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced he appointed Byron Louis LeFlore of San Antonio to the Texas State Library and Archives Commission, and Delia M. Reyes of Dallas to the Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Commission.

LeFlore, president of Jefferson State Bank, fills the unexpired term of John Ben Shepperd, who died in March.

Ms. Reyes is vice president and owner of ADRIAN Research Group, a marketing research consulting firm.

MATH: Reaction to method mixed

(From 1A)

"Math is like a foreign language," Walker said. "When we speak over your level of ability, we are not communicating."

Walker said the hallmarks of Kumon are speed, repetition and accuracy. He said Kumon has met with success as a supplemental program in more than 200 American public schools. According to Walker, pupils in a rural school in Sumiton, Ala., raised their average scores on Kumon diagnostic tests from the 70s to the 90s in eight months on the program.

The Kumon method is a system of supplementary instruction for all grade levels. Walker more than 26,000 clients are enrolled in the program nationwide, from age two to adulthood.

Clients attend a Kumon center for about 40 minutes twice a week — at the cost of $60 per month — to work math problems on worksheets and complete 15 minutes of homework daily. They are placed in the program according to the results of a diagnostic test.

Attending the center, which is open 12 months a year, for a cost of $720 per year is a comparable cost to hiring a private tutor, according to Bill Duncker, math coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

Kumon relies on techniques of drill and practice, and mastering one section of math before going on to the next.

"Mastery means getting 100 percent of the problems correct," Walker said.

"Proficiency is acceptable in the American classroom. Knowing only 70 percent is acceptable in the classroom. That means you haven't mastered 30 percent of the tasks. Kumon says you are either right or wrong — you can't be a percentage right — and must master 100 percent."

Clients work at their own pace without any assistance from teachers, and students learn to work problems before they understand the concepts behind them. Kumon instructors provide the worksheets and correct answers, but clients essentially teach themselves.

Duncker expressed concern that there are no teachers involved. "I disagree with the term 'non-teaching,'" he said. "Even in Japan, someone has to intervene, instruct or offer assistance to the students," he said.

Walker said if clients produce incorrect answers on a worksheet, that worksheet is repeatedly given to them until they get all the answers right.

"It's a form of memorization, but is not memorization by rote," Walker said. "Sure, they memorize the answers, but answers never change in math. It's just like memorizing the multiplication tables."

Duncker said he is "not keen on constant drilling and practicing. It's what professionals call 'drill and kill' because it tends to kill enthusiasm," he said.

"Good results would probably accrue for students who study with the same intensity as the Japanese — with mom and dad watching over their shoulder," Duncker said.

Jerry Helmer, coordinator of computer instruction for MISD, agreed. Helmer — who has taught analytical geometry, calculus, trigonometry, statistics and algebra — said, "When parents start supervising — where there has been no previous supervision — you are going to see results. I think our public schools are great, but I am obviously biased."

Duncker said American schools generally are "grade-for-grade" two years behind their Japanese counterparts. "Their third graders may be operating at our fifth grade level," he said. Nonetheless, Duncker said Midland second graders operate at third grade level (3.1) in math scores when 2.6 is considered above average.

Walker said there is a "math scare" among Americans, referring to recent international studies that ranked American 13-year-olds last in the world in math competence.

Duncker said mastering math is a societal expectation in Japan. "Where parents may see to it that their children attend swimming, ballet or Little League after school here, Japanese parents are more concerned that their children do well academically."

Walker agreed. "While an American would be upset if his child made an error on second base, a Japanese parent would be concerned if his child missed a math problem," he said.

Although Kumon math is practiced by Japanese, it is not taught in the Japanese schools, Walker said. "In Japan education is centralized. Kumon is taught in private after-school centers there and has not been approved to be taught in the schools."

Walker said the Japanese would lose face by accepting Kumon. "It's as if, by accepting it, they would be admitting that something is wrong with their public schools," he said.

Despite the fact that more than 200 American schools have added Kumon as a supplemental teaching tool, Helmer said, "I am suspect of any program that does not have teachers to provide explanations and there have not been any control groups in the Kumon studies. But, I am all for the free enterprise system.

"I spent a military career protecting his (Walker's) right to free enterprise, and we are both on the same team somewhat since we both want to see children learn math."

Despite his differences with the program Duncker said, "It was like a breath of fresh air to see someone put attention on math. Learning math is an important issue in this country. I believe that not all of us learn in the same way. Schools may not correct all our problems, and I'm all for anything that helps children learn math."

Janie Dodson, former assistant superintendent in Denver City and educator for 33 years, is the instructor and franchisee for Kumon Mathematex, 3303 N. Midkiff, #156, in San Miguel Square. Free diagnostic tests will be offered from 7-9 p.m. Monday.

servation District, said Permian Basin water district managers were assured at a May 17 meeting with railroad commission officials that the Midland office would be more cooperative with underground water district managers.

"We really need to be able to go to the Railroad Commission with problems and be able to solve them together. We have to solve our water problems in West Texas or we won't have any water to drink," Hoelscher said.

The Texas Railroad Commission did not say who would replace Strong and Krusekopf as director and assistant director.

FLOOD: Ohio community hard hit by disaster

(From 1A)

funeral home that set up a temporary morgue in Shadyside, about 10 miles south of Wheeling, W.Va.

Officials from Ohio, West Virginia and the U.S. Coast Guard were searching the Ohio River for survivors and bodies, and Badia said National Guardsmen were to continue searching the creeks throughout the night.

At least five houses along Wegee Creek were washed away, and two cars were floating in water in one of the basements. Anything that was still standing was covered with at least 6 feet of debris such as trees, appliances and furniture.

The National Weather Service issued no flood warning before the disaster, although it did issue a flood watch, said Al Wheeler, deputy meteorologist in the bureau's Cleveland office.

Weather service offices in Cleveland, Akron, Columbus and Pittsburgh showed the storm had diminished over eastern Ohio when it had actually intensified, Wheeler said.

Thursday night's thunderstorms caused flash flooding across a wide area of central and eastern Ohio, northern West Virginia and western Pennsylvania. The floods closed roads, damaged homes and forced hundreds of people to evacuate.

But no place was hit with anything approaching the ferocity of the flooding in Shadyside.

About 5.5 inches of rain fell between 7:30 p.m. and 11 p.m., turning two Ohio River tributaries outside the village of 4,300 people into dangerous torrents.

About 35 buildings, including a tavern, were damaged along Wegee Creek, and 50 buildings were hit by a flood along Pipe Creek, four miles south of Wegee Creek, said Dick Quinlin, Belmont County emergency services coordinator.

Part of the tavern was washed away when water caved in the back wall, said Judy Phillips, a sheriff's department spokeswoman.

EYES: Surgery can save sight for some

(From 1A)

turned-out lid offers little protection to the eye.

More common are sagging eyelids where the skin under the eyebrow has stretched and folds over the upper eyelids and collects in bags around the lower lids, Mrs. Flynn said.

"The cause is being more mature," she said, raising a laugh from her audience of predominantly middle-aged women.

Mrs. Flynn said most of her patients come to her with less severe, non vision-threatening eye bags that they want corrected to reduce signs of aging.

"When someone comes to me and wants her eyes done, I ask if it's for cosmetic reasons or because of symptoms like eye fatigue, watery eyes or vision impairment," she said.

"I have to talk to my patients a lot if it's for cosmetic surgery. I ask if they're having problems at work or with a spouse, if they're depressed.... Making the face better won't cure those problems, won't cure depression," Mrs. Flynn said.

"Sometimes we don't operate because the patient's expectations are unreasonable."

After she's established the motivation for the surgery, Mrs. Flynn does a complete eye examination and asks the patient to get a clean bill of health from her doctor.

Mrs. Flynn checks for potential dry eye syndrome, which can be aggravated by the surgery. She also ensures that the patient doesn't suffer from Graves Disease, the illness that caused Barbara Bush's eye problems; lagophthalmos, an inability to completely close the eyes; diabetes, arthritis or high blood pressure, all of which can complicate the outcome of the surgery.

She tells her patients to stop taking aspirin, ibuprofen and other anticoagulant drugs several weeks prior to the surgery because they can cause excessive bleeding, bruising and scarring.

Mrs. Flynn said blepharoplasty has few risks besides the pain, bruising and swelling common to all surgical procedures. She said the black-and-blue marks typically last a week and the swelling may take a month or two to diminish.

Infections are rare because of the large blood supply to the region, she said.

"Of course the most worrisome thing to someone considering the surgery is the loss of sight," Mrs. Flynn said. "I don't know of anyone who has had this problem but a journal I read said the risk was 1 in 2,500."

She reduces the concern by using cornea protectors placed over the patient's eyes before beginning the incisions.

The surgery is performed with the patient under local anesthetic, awake but sedated.

Mrs. Flynn starts by pinching the eyelid and drawing a dotted line around the area to be excised. She then makes incisions, removing underlying fat deposits and cutting away excess skin, sometimes shortening the curve of the lid in the process. When she's finished, she sutures the lid back together, hiding the scars in the folds of the lids.

Both lids on both eyes take Mrs. Flynn about two hours.

Mrs. Flynn showed before and after pictures of her patients.

"This one is a 95-year-old woman who told me her eyes had gotten really small. When I told her to relax her eyebrows, her lids completely covered her eyes," she said.

Other pictures showed patients with lumps or tumors under their eyes or side bags so pronounced that they cut off peripheral vision. Although most of her patients appeared to be older people, Mrs. Flynn has also performed the surgery on children.

Mrs. Flynn's fees are $1,800 for the upper lids only, or $2,200 for all four lids. Anesthesiologist's fees will run about $600 and Physicians and Surgeons will charge $121 for a pre-operation examination and $1,400 for the upper lid surgery or $1,500 for all four lids.

The total cost is about $4,300 for both lids on both eyes, a figure that raised a few brows in the audience.

"I could get a whole facelift for $5,000 in Houston," one woman said.

Mrs. Flynn said Medicare will pay for the surgery if it establishes that the condition obstructed the patient's vision.

Correction

The figures for Community National Bank were incorrectly reported in the first quarter banking story which appeared in the Thursday Reporter-Telegram.

The correct figures for deposits are as folows: first quarter 1989, $31,188,000; previous quarter, $30,889,157, and year ago, $30,526,000. Deposits were up $298,843 over last quarter and $662,000 from one year ago — a 2.2 percent increase.

End of first quarter loan total was $8,165,000; previous quarter, $8,318,000 and $9,025,000 one year ago. Those figures were down $153,000 from last quarter and $860,000 from last year — a 9.5 percent decline.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

POSTERS: MBCE plans annual scholarship effort ago and later saw a poster he had created for an Austin group.

"The idea for the scholarship fund posters slowly came together. African-American art is becoming the fastest selling art in the United States. By doing this we are helping an African-American artist to prosper, plus helping business," Mrs. Fuller said.

Joseph is known for his colorful work which he said expresses happiness. "They express their emotions in the colors. Bright colors to make you smile and warm colors to befriend you," Joseph said in an interview.

Mrs. Fuller said the original of "Music Happiness" is valued at $600, but the first 100 posters will sell for $35 each. She said the poster sales should raise $5,000 for the scholarship fund. Texas Instruments helped underwrite the cost of the 18" X 20" special edition poster. Mobil also contributed to the cost of the reception.

Artist Carol Joyce will create a special edition poster in February during African American History month.

"We will be presenting her work here in July," Mrs. Fuller said. The Black Chamber has not selected an artist to create next years scholarship poster.

Sunday evening the Chamber will present five students with scholarships from 4 p.m.- 6 p.m., June 17, at the Northeast YMCA.

Mrs. Fuller said she hopes the Chamber will be able to award scholarships to two students from each of Midland's two high schools next year.

Romania begins to 'normalize' as miners return home

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — President-elect Ion Iliescu on Friday ordered home thousands of club-wielding coal miners after thanking them "with all my heart" for helping hunt down anti-government demonstrators.

Iliescu's inauguration, scheduled for Friday, was postponed following three days of rioting, arson and mayhem in this capital of 2.2 million residents.

Random attacks by the miners terrorized Bucharest in the country's worst violence since the December revolution that toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu. Many miners were seen leaving Friday.

State radio said at 10 p.m. the situation in Bucharest "is beginning to normalize."

At a news conference, Premier Petre Roman acknowledged the government held little sway over the mob of miners who indiscriminately attacked passers-by in the capital, beat journalists and ransacked opposition party headquarters.

In Washington, a Bush administration official said non-humanitarian aid to Romania will be withheld to protest the violence.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said aid programs being considered would be held up "until the democratic process has been restored." He said $80 million in food aid and $1 million in medical aid would not be affected.

Miners trashed the home of Ion Ratiu, chief of the opposition National Peasant Party, who called the violence a "death of democracy."

WORLD

"(It's) the rule of the mob, no respect for human rights. The forces of law and order stand by instead of maintaining law and order," he said.

Ratiu said he was briefly detained Thursday night and his colleagues were beaten by miners.

Police and army units normally charged with law enforcement had watched without intervening as miners, loyal to Iliescu, assaulted scores of people.

Roman said the pit workers had been asked only to peacefully occupy University Square, and that the government deplored all subsequent violence.

Wednesday's police crackdown on a 53-day protest in the central square set off riots in which demonstrators threw firebombs at police headquarters and the Interior Ministry and overturned vehicles. Soldiers fired on the rioters.

The miners — whose benefits greatly increased following the revolution — streamed into the capital early Thursday after Iliescu pleaded for help to put down what he called a "fascist" revolt.

At least five people died, and figures published Friday by the state news agency Rompres said 367 people were injured, with 112 still hospitalized.

The demonstrators say the government — led by Iliescu and his National Salvation Front and elected overwhelmingly in free elections on May 20 — is dominated by former Communists who they say continue Ceausescu's repressive policies.

The demonstrators want former Communist leaders, including Iliescu, banned from holding public office for 10 years.

On Friday, Iliescu told cheering miners at the National Exhibition hall in northern Bucharest, "You are a strong force with much civic discipline, people you can trust in good times and bad." State television broadcast part of the meeting, in which he thanked them "with all my heart."

Later, authorities began putting miners on buses for the city's northern railroad station. They were to return on special trains to their homes in the Jiu valley mining region of western Romania, Rompres said.

It said Iliescu met miners' leaders Friday and ordered them to leave the capital. Tens of thousands were reported to have come to Bucharest.

Several packed buses inexplicably turned back into the city core, stopped and disgorged hundreds of miners.

On Boulevard Magheru, the central street leading from University Square, scores of marauding miners lashed out at random with wooden clubs at shoppers and kicked at a fallen man. Others chased foreign journalists into the nearby Intercontinental Hotel.

Four killed in Pacific quake

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A strong earthquake hit the central Philippines, killing at least four people and injuring 15 and damaging roads, bridges and houses, a civil defense official said today.

The earthquake, which measured 6.2 on the Richter scale, struck Thursday at 4:47 p.m. and was followed by five aftershocks, said Julio Sabit of the Institute of Volcanology and Seismology.

Preliminary readings indicated the quake was centered just outside Kalibo on central Panay Island, 260 miles south of Manila.

The quake was felt from the northern tip of Mindanao Island to Manila on Luzon Island, Sabit said.

Four people were killed in Kulasi, a town in Antique province, said Rodrigo Roldan, regional director of civil defense in the city of Iloilo. No further details of the deaths were immediately available.

Army being cut in half

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro said Friday the Sandinista army will be reduced by half and senior officers will be retired.

Mrs. Chamorro, who took over after the leftist Sandinistas were defeated in free elections, said the cutbacks would take effect by Aug. 3.

She did not specify whether the cuts would affect reserve forces as well as active-duty troops.

Pact admits errors

EAST BERLIN (AP) — The Warsaw Pact admitted past errors, including the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia and the Soviets' crushing of the Hungarian uprising 12 years earlier, East Germany's defense minister said Friday.

After a three-day Warsaw Pact meeting outside East Berlin, the Soviet commander of the group's military forces acknowledged dissent within the ranks of the once rock-solid alliance.

With last year's pro-democracy revolutions in Eastern Europe, the seven-nation Warsaw Pact has been facing increasing pressures from within. East German Defense Minister Rainer Eppelmann has even predicted the breakup of the pact's military structures by the end of this year.

"The defense ministers for the first time clearly discussed the past errors of the Warsaw Pact," Eppelmann told a news conference following the meeting in the suburb of Strausberg.

Eppelmann specifically mentioned as examples the Warsaw Pact invasion to put down the Prague Spring revolution by reform Communists in 1968.

U.N. backs sanctions

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. delegates, marking the 14th anniversary of South Africa's worst riots, declared that sanctions against its white government should remain in place until apartheid is abolished.

The government of F.W. de Klerk has been asking foreign governments to lift economic sanctions.

The meeting by the Special Committee Against Apartheid was held one week before black African leader Nelson Mandela addresses the United Nations.

Iran, U.S. settle $600 million claim

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Iran removed one of the biggest obstacles to renewed trade with the United States on Friday by agreeing to pay a U.S. oil company $600 million for facilities seized during the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Two claims totaling $600 million were awarded to the American oil giant Amoco, said an official of the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal. It was the biggest settlement in the arbitration body's nine-year history.

The Tehran government has hinted recently that the resolution of financial disputes with the United States might contribute to the release of the six American hostages held by pro-Iranian Shiite extremists in Lebanon.

Last month, settlement of a much smaller claims package was announced shortly after the release of American hostages Robert Polhill and Frank Reed.

American and Iranian officials at the tribunal have vigorously denied conducting any direct talks on the hostage issue. They said the tribunal deals only with arbitration of financial disputes.

The Amoco settlement was among more than $1.8 billion in oil company claims stemming from Iran's Islamic revolution led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

U.S.-Iranian ties were severed over the holding of hostages at the United States Embassy in Tehran for 444 days by Iranian militants.

The tribunal official, in a telephone interview, repeated "our strong position" that the arbitration is not tied to the fate of the American hostages in Lebanon.

At issue in Friday's settlement were two claims filed by Amoco subsidiaries against the National Iranian Oil Company, according to the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity in line with tribunal policy.

The Amoco Iran Oil Co. is receiving $540 million worth of compensation for the seizure of four Persian Gulf drilling fields and the oil terminal on Kharg island, which is Iran's most important oil terminal.

The Amoco International Finance Corp. is to receive $60 million for the expropriation of a petrochemical processing plant on Kharg, the official said.

Iran derives 90 percent of its foreign currency earnings from oil exports, and President Hashemi Rafsanjani has been making efforts recently to improve and expand trade with the West.

However, he has faced strong opposition from Islamic militants who want nothing to do with the United States.

Until Friday, a $116 million award made in 1986 to the Sedco firm had been the biggest single settlement by the tribunal since its 1981 inception, according to the official. The firm built drilling platforms in Iran before the revolution.

The tribunal was set up as part of the 1980 Algiers Accord, which helped win the freedom of the embassy hostages.

The panel has three American judges, three Iranians and three third-nation members. So far it has settled $3.2 billion worth of government-to-government and private claims.

Two Germanys resolve property dispute

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The two German states agreed Friday to return property seized in East Germany by the Communist government or pay the owners compensation, West German officials announced.

The property issue has been one of the most contentious as the unification of the two German states approaches.

Also Friday, West Germany's unification committee, comprised of representatives of all parties in Parliament, agreed on a treaty that paves the way for economic unity July 2.

Parliamentary ratification of the agreement was expected late next week.

The property agreement was the result of weeks of negotiations between the German governments. It was outlined in a four-page statement read at a news conference by Rudolf Seiters, chief of staff for Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

The accord, however, does not apply to property confiscated during the 1945-1949 Soviet postwar administration of the territory that later became East Germany, Seiters said. He said the Soviets and East Germans balked at that idea.

It was not immediately clear how much of the property in question was taken during the four years after the war, and officials could not be reached for comment Friday night.

Seiters said it would be up to a future joint German Parliament to make a final decision on any governmental compensation for property seized in the four years after the war.

The property agreement was part of overall accord on upcoming monetary and economic unification.

Bureaucrat defeats Yeltsin ally

MOSCOW (AP) — A bureaucrat was elected prime minister of the Russian republic Friday, defeating a reformist ally of the federation's president, Boris Yeltsin, the Tass news agency reported.

The new prime minister is Ivan Silayev, who has been a deputy prime minister in the Cabinet of Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov.

The victory of a man with ties to the government of Yeltsin's rival, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, may make it more difficult for Yeltsin to pursue changes that go beyond Gorbachev's reform program.

On Tuesday, the Russian parliament led by Yeltsin took its first step on a path of more radical reform by approving a resolution that declared that the republic's laws take precedence over Soviet ones.

Silayev won 70 percent of the vote in the Russian Supreme Soviet legislature to defeat Mikhail Bocharov, a leader in the Democratic Russia bloc along with Yeltsin and a factory manager who has led experiments with leasing his company from the state, Tass said.

Silayev, 60, is a mechanical engineer by training who started his career at the Gorky aircraft factory, Tass said.

He moved up to minister of the aircraft industry, and then became minister of the machine tool and instrument-making industry. He became a deputy prime minister of the Soviet Union in 1985.

Yeltsin's reform drive is important to Gorbachev's because the federation contains more than three-quarters of the nation's land, including Moscow, and about 80 percent of the Soviet Union's people are Russian.

U.S. treatment center to help Chinese with drug problem

By Jim Abrams

BEIJING (AP) — An American drug rehabilitation center has agreed to help the government tackle China's growing problem with drug addiction, the head of the U.S. program said this week.

Monsignor William B. O'Brien said his New York-based Daytop Village would collaborate in a drug treatment center in Kunming, capital of Yunnan province in southwestern China.

Yunnan borders Burma and Laos and has long been a favorite route for heroin and opium smugglers from the so-called Golden Triangle, the lawless border areas of those Southeast Asian nations and Thailand.

The Beijing government, which until recently denied the existence of drug addiction in China, now acknowledges that narcotics abuse is common in rural Yunnan and that 70 percent of the province's crime is drug-related.

The government also revealed late last year that 146 AIDS-infected intravenous drug users were discovered in a remote village on Yunnan's border with Burma. Previously, only seven Chinese nationals had been recognized as carriers of the AIDS virus.

"There's a real concern in the Yunnan province area," O'Brien said.

Under the agreement, Daytop Village will help set up a 30-bed "therapeutic community," based on the organization's principles that former addicts should help others kick the habit in a drug-free, family, work-oriented environment.

Daytop will finance construction of the center, train four Chinese staff members in the United States and send one Chinese-speaking expert to China. O'Brien said the American would stay for up to three years, after which the Chinese would run the operation.

O'Brien said Daytop, which he helped found in 1963, has collaborated in drug programs in 54 countries. He said the Chinese approached him after an official toured a Daytop-backed drug center in Thailand.

China has set up two drug rehabilitation centers in Yunnan since 1988. A treatment center was opened in Beijing last year.

Would Gorbachev just throw in towel, resign?

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

Resignation would be a tactic — although, admittedly, a risky one — aimed at creating ... a huge political vacuum....

PARIS — As Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's troubles pile up to Himalayan heights, some Western Kremlin-watchers are writing a new script about his future.

Until now, Western analysts have speculated that, unless the Soviet Union's internal crisis ceases fairly soon, Gorbachev either will be overthrown or forced to resort to the iron-fisted methods that have been the stock-in-trade of Soviet and Russian rulers in the past.

Neither alternative may be entirely realistic any longer, according to some Western European officials.

Events inside the Soviet Union are moving too fast to make either likely, they say.

Instead, both the French and West German governments are reported to be giving serious consideration to another possibility that's been raised by their diplomats in Moscow.

That scenario says Gorbachev might throw in the sponge, challenging his critics to do better in his place.

A French government source said the Soviet leader's resignation would be "entirely in keeping with his record of moving in thoroughly unexpected ways, catching everyone off-guard."

French diplomats don't believe he would quit with the intention of abandoning power permanently.

In their view, resignation would be a tactic — although, admittedly, a risky one — aimed at creating such a huge political vacuum that the Soviet public would quickly clamor for his return.

"Gorbachev badly needs something to galvanize popular opinion in his country," the official pointed out.

"Resignation in circumstances which brought home to the Soviet people that, whatever his failings, he remains indispensable could be a way of doing it."

Although during his recent summit trip to the United States, American observers were struck by Gorbachev's apparent self-assurance and air of confidence, Western Europeans who've met him recently came away with a different impression.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who met with him last week in Moscow, told journalists that he'd admitted to her he had difficulty sleeping at night because of worries about the Soviet economic and ethnic crises.

Former Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, also a recent Moscow visitor, described him as "an exasperated and frustrated man."

Western diplomats in Moscow are predicting that Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov, the putative author of last month's hotly disputed plan to reform the economy and raise food prices, will soon be forced from office.

"But he's Gorbachev last line of defense," the French official said. "After he goes, there will be no one left to blame and to dismiss, except Gorbachev himself. He'll then be directly in the line of fire of public discontent."

However, diplomatic analysts here and in Bonn increasingly discount the likelihood of an attempt to topple him — either by the hardline communist right or by reform-minded radicals like Boris Yeltsin, the newly elected head of the Russian Federation, the Soviet Union's largest republic.

"Nobody wants Gorbachev's job," West German foreign ministry official Alfred Schaumburg said. "They're all content to let him take the blame for failure."

West German officials add that Gorbachev may no longer have the option of exercising dictatorial powers as a last resort, despite the vast authority given to him on paper as Soviet executive president, an office created to his measure three months ago.

The West German evaluation is that democratic momentum in the Soviet Union has gone too far for him or anyone else to attempt it, short of imposing an outright military regime.

If it came to that, Bonn diplomats predict, Gorbachev would step aside, rather than put himself completely at the mercy of his generals.

Henri Lamballe of Paris University's Institute of Soviet Studies said that, while the voluntary resignation of a Soviet leader would be unprecedented, it "isn't an outlandish idea in the present situation."

Gorbachev has repeatedly threatened to resign in the past to get his way, most recently at a Central Committee session last December when his conservative Communist Party foes openly challenged him over his whole program of reform, according to Lamballe.

"His threat was enough to put down the challenge," he said. "But it shows that he understands the uses of the resignation threat as a political weapon and might be ready to go all the way with it if conditions become desperate enough."

According to Lamballe, "If things get much worse, he may really have nothing to lose."

Age, lifestyles hurt ladies club

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — The century-old Ladies Reading Circle, its membership whittled down by age and changing lifestyles, on Thursday closed the book on a tradition dating back to a more genteel era.

A luncheon at the Gideon Putnam Hotel in this city famed for its mineral waters and horse racing was the last meeting for the literary club, which is disbanding after watching its ranks shrink over the years from 25 to 10 active members.

"We're all getting older," said club president Ellen Qua, a member since 1957 who turns 80 in September. "I'm one of the young kids."

The last book read by the club was Bruce Courtenay's "The Power of One," about South Africa. The first was "In Darkest Africa" by Henry V. Stanley, the famed explorer who published the two-volume work in 1890. The club was founded that year by women parishioners at the local Baptist church.

"That was before television, radio and telephone. That's the way they got together. Reading circles were common then," Ms. Qua said.

The club met once a week, but over the years that was reduced to every other week, then every month and finally whenever members could get together. The last meeting before Thursday's was in February, although winter meetings became infrequent as more members spent the season in Florida, Ms. Qua said.

'Women are too busy with families and businesses to carry on in the afternoon ... reading and reviewing books.'

— Ellen Qua, president
Ladies Reading Circle

Club meetings featured readings and discussions of books on history, architecture, geology, economics, poetry, as well as biographies and various works of fiction.

"Everything from cooking to Mozart," said vice president Althea Moncsko.

Today's women have less time to devote to meet and talk about books, members said.

"Women are too busy with families and businesses to carry on in the afternoon with something like this, reading and reviewing books," Ms. Qua said.

"It has been quite a social, close-knit group," she said. "We do just hate to give that up."

Economic woes push Nicaraguans out of Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Many Nicaraguan refugees who fled their war-torn country are on the move again, fleeing South Florida's stagnant economy and less hospitable atmosphere for other U.S. cities.

Social service groups say the Nicaraguans are finding higher wages and lower rents in Charlotte, N.C.; Toledo, Ohio; Houston and other locations.

By some estimates, as many as 150,000 Nicaraguans have settled in the Miami area during the last decade, a large proportion of them since 1988.

But the later refugees have run into problems their predecessors in both the Cuban and Nicaraguan migrations did not have, including a softening job market as Florida's economic boom ends.

"We get people coming to us all the time saying they're getting evicted," said Mike Pszyk, director of Miami's Church World Services, which has relocated about 30 Nicaraguans this year.

The group uses Protestant and Catholic church networks to find better situations for the refugees, but resources are inadequate to do the job.

"It's a small fraction of what needs to be done," Pszyk said.

Typical are Carlos and Caridad Lopez, who along with their five children are being evicted from their leaky apartment for not paying their May rent.

They hope to go to Houston, where a daughter lives and where rents are cheaper.

"What has me to the point of desperation is what to do with the children," said Lopez.

Part of the blame, his wife said, is the lack of unity and support in Miami's Latin and Nicaraguan communities.

Miami's well-established Cuban community has not given the same kind of welcome to the Nicaraguans as it has to its own compatriots, say those receiving the refugees.

"Miami is more Cuban-colonized. The Cubans help the Cubans and that's as far as it goes," said Frank Ruiz, interim pastor for the Hispanic Baptist Church in Toledo. "They forgot what it's like. The Nicaraguans are very welcome here."

Toledo and Charlotte churches are offering English lessons and other courses in a local community college, and are going to great trouble to settle Nicaraguan families that have left Miami.

In Charlotte, Pastor Salvador Negrin, with Voice of Hope Baptist Church, said a decision to help one Nicaraguan family evolved into a church effort to relocate 30 families in the area.

Nicaraguans are attracted to the church in part because, unlike Miami, the small Hispanic community in Charlotte is close-knit, Negrin said.

The Nicaraguan exodus will probably continue as long as local and federal politicians seem uninterested in the refugees' plight.

Even some of the steps that were taken created hard feelings, such as the opening of Bobby Maduro Miami Stadium. When word got out, homeless Nicaraguans flocked to the stadium and the situation quickly ballooned out of control.

"It's tremendously frustrating," said Monsignor Bryan Walsh, head of Catholic Community Services in Miami.

Medinah gives way

■ Tim Simpson's second-round 69 gives him the U.S. Open lead as 47 sub-par rounds were recorded Friday at Medinah, Ill.

Associated Press

MEDINAH, Ill. — Another day, another round of record-breaking scoring in the U.S. Open. Tim Simpson will take the blame — and the lead.

"I guess when I go out and shoot 66 everybody says, 'Hey, it can be done,' and they rise to the occasion," a mystified Simpson said Friday after taking sole control of the second-round lead in the Open.

To get to the top at the halfway point of the tournament, Simpson had to birdie two of his last three holes and overcome the most prolific scoring spree in Open history.

His early 6-under-par score on Thursday provoked a record romp of 39 sub-par scores in the first round, the most ever posted in 18 holes of Open competition.

That mark didn't last a day, as 47 sub-par scores came in Friday. One of those was another 66, this one by Mike Hulbert.

Astoundingly, all this happened on a course that was reputed to be one of the most difficult the Open has seen.

Rain-softened greens took the teeth out of it Thursday, however, and the second round was played in an almost total absence of wind. The greens remained soft and yielding and only the hint of a breeze stirred the leaves in the huge oaks and elms that failed to protect Medinah's par.

Simpson's second-round 69, capped by a four-foot putt on the 18th hole, helped set the record for the most sub-par scores in any complete, 72-hole U.S. Open championship.

Inevitable talk in Detroit of three straight

■ The Pistons' chances of three consecutive titles may hinge on whether head coach Chuck Daly decides to coach or become an announcer in 1990-91.

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons' chances of becoming the second team in NBA history to win three straight titles may depend on where Chuck Daly decides to use his voice next year — in the Pistons' locker room or over the airwaves.

"I kind of like coaching," said Daly, high on the list of candidates to join NBC when it takes over network coverage of the NBA next season.

"I've gotten reasonably good at it. I'm just going to take my time and see what happens. I want to enjoy this. Not many coaches get a chance to savor back-to-back championships."

The Pistons wrapped up the title with a 92-90 win in Portland Thursday night, completing a three-game road sweep to win their second straight.

But it remains more concerned about the present than the future.

Isiah Thomas, the most valuable player in the Finals, said the team doesn't discuss its place in NBA history.

"We never talked about it all season, but for the past four or five years, we felt like we were one of the best teams in the history of basketball," Thomas said. "We wanted to repeat as champions, but not so much to prove it to anybody else; we wanted to do it for ourselves."

Only once before has a team won three straight titles — the Boston Celtics, who won 11 titles in 13 years, including a run of eight straight from 1959-66.

Two years ago, the Los Angeles Lakers became the first team in two decades to repeat and last year the Pistons prevented the Lakers from making it three straight.

Why?

Age, injuries and the loss of key players are the crippling blows that keep champions from repeating. But the Pistons avoided or overcame those pitfalls, even thrived on them.

— They had an average age older than the Lakers, but survived after Los Angeles was eliminated in the first round.

— They lost starting power forward Rick Mahorn in the expansion draft, and plugged in James Edwards as a replacement without depleting their bench strength.

— They lost All-Star guard Joe Dumars with a broken hand down the stretch of the regular season, and managed to hold on to the best record in the Eastern Conference.

— They lost starting forward Dennis Rodman with an ankle injury for almost two games in the NBA finals.

"We've never depended on one guy," Dumars said. "We rely on different people doing it every night and playing defense night after night."

Daly said the Pistons accomplished the repeat title because the players are defensively sound and the team is deep.

"They operate offensively extremely well and they are unselfish," he said. "All those things make them a great team."

Team leaders post 65

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Former winners Ron and Dub Huckabee teamed for a superlative six-under-par 65 Friday in the first round of the Green Tree Jamboree golf tournament, but that score was not good enough for sole possession of first place in the Championship Flight.

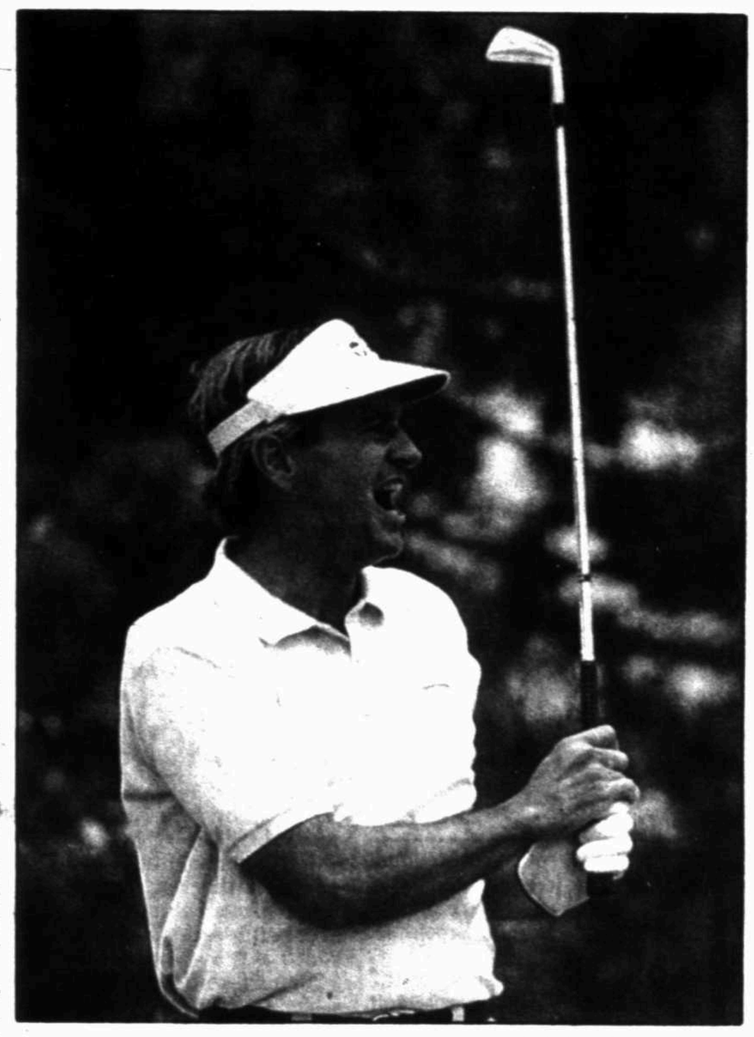

Wayne Youngs and John Bettis also managed a 65 to take a share of first place in the three-day event that began with best-ball play Friday at the Green Tree Country Club East and West courses.

Today's round will be played in a scramble format, and team totals will be utilized Sunday.

Youngs and Bettis and the Huckabees worked their magic just one stroke better than four teams that finished in a logjam at 66.

But the best efforts of the day were turned in in St. Andrews Flight play as two teams played to a 64-stroke first-place tie.

Tyson starts comeback trail

■ In his first ring appearance since losing the heavyweight title to Buster Douglas, Mike Tyson looks for vindication tonight against Henry Tillman.

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson admits to having been devastated by his title loss to James "Buster" Douglas, but claims there will be no after-effects.

Henry Tillman, who will fight Tyson tonight, has his doubts. So does George Foreman, who will be an interested spectator.

"I'm in a great frame of mind," Tyson said.

"I'm sure his confidence was affected," Tillman said. "The question is how long his recovery time will be."

The oddsmakers don't believe Tillman will be able to answer the question of how Tyson was affected by his 10th-round knockout by Douglas Feb. 11 at Tokyo. Tyson was a 30-1 favorite. Of course, Douglas was even a bigger underdog.

Foreman, who is a strong favorite to beat Adilson Rodrigues on the card at Caesars Palace and who wants to fight Tyson, feels it's too soon for Tyson to be trying to answer questions about his ability and career.

"If I were managing Tyson, I'd let him take off two years — 18 months minimum, let him get hungry again," said Foreman, who knows how it feels to have the mantle of invincibilty stripped away.

Foreman was an intimidating, brooding heavyweight champion — then was upset by Muhammad Ali in 1974.

"It was a shock at first, but that only lasted for about two days," Tyson said of his loss. "After that I was back to normal."

"I was depressed for a year," Foreman said of his loss to Ali. "I'd wake up in the night sweating —

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Do we really want 1994 World Cup?

The United States' return to World Cup play after a 40-year absence has been a disaster in more ways than one.

Williamson

First, there was that 5-1 loss to Czechoslovakia, a team many thought that the U.S. could play on even terms. But that was only part of the bad news.

Sunday's game against Czechoslovakia got a meager 1.8 rating and a 6 share in the United States. The same game got a 64 share in Italy. The United States just doesn't seem ready for soccer. In fact, it has so little regard in the U.S. that the world's No. 1 sport has fewer viewers here than anywhere else on the globe, except for maybe some headhunters in the jungles of lower Asia, who still think sport is finding supper.

Then came the 1-0 "moral victory" loss to Italy Thursday, but the Italians controlled the ball 70 percent of the time and missed a 95 percent certain penalty kick. Italy was its own worst enemy despite the fact the U.S. did show some defensive skills not shown against the Czechs.

But the bad news is that we have only four years to develop a soccer mind. Dallas is supposed to play host to the 1994 World Cup. Can we pull it off with some semblance of interest?

The lack of interest in the U.S. is also being noted worldwide. There's increasing talk among the European sports community that the 1994 World Cup should be taken away from the United States because there's not enough interest in soccer in America.

Former New York Cosmos star Giorgio Chinaglia repeatedly has attacked the American team and federation and many European sports columnists are saying that the United States doesn't deserve the World Cup.

"Dylan to Springsteen, football to NBA, NY to California, the United States is beyond soccer," read Wednesday's headline in Gazzetta dello Sport.

Chinaglia recently said, "It's absurd to have the World Cup in America. They don't care about soccer and the average citizen won't even know we are there, no matter how the media plays it up."

Of course, you will hear the other side of the coin on America's overall interest. The games are being telecast over cable's TNT. Not enough homes are equipped to receive TNT to make a big dent in the total share count. Also, the games are not being televised exactly at prime time, with telecasts coming in mornings and early afternoon when the majority of America's workforce is supposedly on the job.

Still, the overall indication is that America isn't burning with desire to know what last night's World Cup scores happened to be. Cameroon over Argentina? No big deal here, but it about busted the Argentinian stock market. The rest of the world is still in shock. America never blinked.

It's still the thought here that the U.S. will never be soccer crazy until the national team pulls out some gold like the U.S. hockey team did against the USSR in the Winter Olympics. Then interest will rise.

Unfortunately, that isn't going to happen in the next four years. The U.S. has already seen to that in the 40-year return.

But Dallas and other host sites, still to be determined, will gain millions of dollars in 1994. The world's soccer rowdies are some of the biggest spenders known to mankind.

The United States may be behind the rest of the world when it comes to soccer, but America is appealing to soccer players.

"They're still several years ahead of us," Italian forward Aldo Serena said of life in general. "I want to visit the United States to see what our life will be like in the future. I'll bet many soccer fans in the world will feel the same way."

So, never fear. The rest of the world will carry us in 1994. We may not know the Cup scores, but we do know how to collect and spend their money.

A's come back to stay in first

Associated Press

AL Roundup

The two-time American League champion Oakland Athletics, five outs away away from dropping out of first place, got two-run hits from Dave Henderson and Terry Steinbach in an eighth-inning rally and slowed down the surging Chicago White Sox.

The White Sox, who could have surged past the A's by five percentage points with a victory, led 4-1 behind Greg Hibbard's solid pitching. But Mike Gallego and Walt Weiss opened the eighth with singles and Barry Jones (7-1) relieved.

A single by Rickey Henderson loaded the bases and Dave Henderson, who homered in the first inning, doubled to make it 4-3. After Carney Lansford struck out, Mark McGwire was intentionally walked but Steinbach singled home the tying and winning runs.

Bob Welch (10-2) won his seventh straight game despite yielding all the Chicago runs and seven hits in seven innings. Dennis Eckersley got the final out for his 21st save. The A's, who have led the AL West since the first week of the season, are two games ahead of the White Sox and have two more games in Chicago this weekend.

The game was played in front of 40,417, the White Sox' first sellout since Opening Day of 1984.

After Dave Henderson gave Oakland a 1-0 lead with his ninth home run, the resourceful White Sox scored their first three runs on a double play, a wild pitch and a passed ball.

They manufactured a run to tie the game in the bottom of the first. Lance Johnson drew a leadoff walk, stole second, took third on Robin Ventura's single and scored when Ivan Calderon grounded into a double play.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

Tom Candiotti scattered seven hits in 8 1-3 innings and Jerry Browne and Candy Maldonado hit RBI doubles in the first inning as the Cleveland Indians treated the largest major-league crowd of the season — 63,546 — to a victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Doug Jones relieved Candiotti (7-3) after Greg Brock's one-out double in the ninth and retired the last two batters for his 21st save in 23 opportunities. Rob Deer and Greg Vaughn homered for Milwaukee.

Mitch Webster and Browne each drove in a run and scored a run as the Indians spoiled Dennis Powell's Milwaukee debut. Powell (0-1), called up earlier in the day from Class AAA Denver, yielded all five Cleveland runs — four earned — and nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

The crowd was boosted by an oil company promotion that gave away free tickets with gasoline fillups.

Blue Jays 5, Yankees 4

Kelly Gruber, pinch-hitting for the first time this season, put Toronto ahead with a bases-loaded triple in the eighth inning and scored the decisive run on Pat Borders' single as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the New York Yankees for their 12th victory in the last 13 road games.

Gruber, given a day off to rest, rescued Toronto with a two-out triple for a 4-3 lead. He pinch hit once last season and homered.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 3

Wes Gardner upped his record to 5-0 against Baltimore with his first victory since last Aug. 1 and Danny Heep, who began the game hitting .178, put Boston ahead with a two-run double in the second inning as the Red Sox beat the Orioles.

Gardner (1-3) gave up two runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings and won a road start for the first time since April 29, 1989. He entered the game with a 7.79 ERA and lowered it to 6.65.

Tigers 2, Angels 1

Scott Lusader drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk from California reliever Bryan Harvey to force home the winning run in the 10th inning as the Detroit Tigers beat the Angels.

Royals 5, Twins 1

Danny Tartabull hit a three-run homer and Kevin Appier scattered five hits in eight innings as Kansas City handed Minnnesota its eighth straight loss.

Rockets maneuvering to draft OSU guard

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets are trying to trade up in the June 27 NBA draft in order to select Oregon State guard Gary Payton, the player told Houston's KRIV-TV Friday.

Rockets general manager Steve Patterson confirmed the Rockets are trying to move up from the club's No. 12 selection.

"Houston is trying to do a couple of things to pick me," Payton said. "They explained it to me today in the interview. Hopefully, they'll get to the position to where they can draft me."

Payton said the Rockets were attempting to move up to one of the top four selections.

Payton, 6-4, 190, averaged 18.1 points and 7.8 assists in four seasons at Oregon State. Last season he averaged 25.7 points and had 235 assists in 29 games.

Payton scored 58 points against Southern Cal, the second highest single game last season. He is Oregon State's all-time leading scorer with 2,172 points.

Sleepy Floyd, the Rockets' starting point guard last season, will become a free agent July 1.

Dumars leaves for father's funeral

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — Hours after the Detroit Pistons won the NBA Championship, Joe Dumars left the cheering behind to return to this little town and bury his father.

"We talked to Joe right after the game. He was excited, but it was sad," said Martha Dumars, Joe's sister. "I knew he was thinking about it during the game. I could see some emotion on his face."

The Pistons won 92-90 Thursday night in Portland, to win their second straight title. Dumars, an All-Star guard and the most valuable player in last year's championship series, scored just eight points in the final game.

Dumars flew out of Portland at 6 a.m. Friday to return home, Martha Dumars said. Joseph Dumars Jr.'s funeral was scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday in Natchitoches, a town of 17,000.

The family planned to hold the funeral in the Ben Johnson Auditorium because it can seat about 1,000.

"It's a small town," Martha Dumars said Friday, "but we know everybody here."

Burial was to be at the Lawrence Serenity Sanctum.

The elder Dumars died Sunday of congestive heart failure.

O'Neill snaps slump, Astro streak

Associated Press

NL Roundup

Paul O'Neill couldn't explain it.

One night after he was beginning to worry about his role with the Cincinnati Reds, O'Neill broke out of a slump by going 4-for-4 and driving in three runs for a 6-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

O'Neill, relegated to part-time status with a .222 average in his last 15 games, singled three times and doubled home two runs to help Jack Armstrong get his ninth victory and snap the Astros' winning streak at six games.

"You can never figure out this game," said O'Neill, who broke out of a 10-for-48 slump. "It's funny. You go home last night and turn on the news, and they've got you traded to 15 other cities. You come out tonight and go 4-for-4, and everybody's cheering. It's a strange game."

Armstrong could second that.

The right-hander singled in the third inning with the bases loaded for his first two major-league RBIs on only his second hit of the season. The hitting helped Armstrong (9-3) become the third National League pitcher to win nine games.

Armstrong had his league-leading earned run average inch up to 1.99 as he struggled with his control early, giving up eight hits in the first four innings. But O'Neill's hitting and Armstrong's own single compensated.

Armstrong gave up nine hits in 7 2-3 innings and struck out seven for his first win since May 25. He had a no-decision and two losses in the meantime.

"Today I came out very relaxed," Armstrong said. "My brother (Rob) was in town from the Navy, and I hadn't seen him in two years. I got into a lull where I wasn't concentrating."

Randy Myers retired the last four batters for his 12th save.

O'Neill, making just his second start in five games, singled home a run in the first inning as Cincinnati went up 2-0, and doubled home two more as part of a four-run third off Jim Clancy (2-6).

"My breaking ball was up and I had to rely on my fastball, but I couldn't fool them," Clancy said.

Phillies 6, Cubs 5
Phillies 7, Cubs 0

The Chicago Cubs lost a doubleheader for the second time in three days as Philadelphia's Bruce Ruffin pitched a three-hitter in the nightcap after rookie Jim Vatcher won the opener with a run-scoring bases-loaded single in the 10th inning.

The Cubs, who have lost five straight games, dropped a doubleheader to the New York Mets, 15-10 and 9-6, on Wednesday at Wrigley Field.

Ruffin's only other shutout was in 1987, his first full year with the Phillies.

The Phillies wrapped up the second game with a five-run sixth inning as 10 batters went to the plate against Mike Bielecki (3-6). Bielecki allowed seven runs and 10 hits in seven innings.

After Lenny Dykstra was walked to load the bases, Bielecki ruined the strategy by walking Rod Booker to force home the first run. One out later, Charlie Hayes singled home two runs. John Kruk drew an intentional walk to load the bases again and Carmelo Martinez singled home two more.

Ruffin (4-6) earned his first victory since May 24. He held Ryne Sandberg hitless to end his 11-game hitting streak. Sandberg had two hits in the opener and has 22 hits in his last 50 at-bats, including seven home runs.

Mets 7, Pirates 5

Darryl Strawberry continued his home run assault on Pittsburgh pitching with a three-run shot and Dave Magadan went 4-for-4 with two doubles, leading the streaking New York Mets to a victory over the Pirates.

The Mets have scored 50 runs in winning four straight games and have won seven of eight and nine of 11, including four of five against the National League East-leading Pirates.

Bob Ojeda (3-3), who is 12-4 lifetime against the Pirates, allowed four runs and nine hits over 6 1-3 innings for the victory, the Mets' sixth in a row in Pittsburgh dating to last season. John Franco took over for Alejandro Pena in the eighth and pitched 1 2-3 innings for his 10th save.

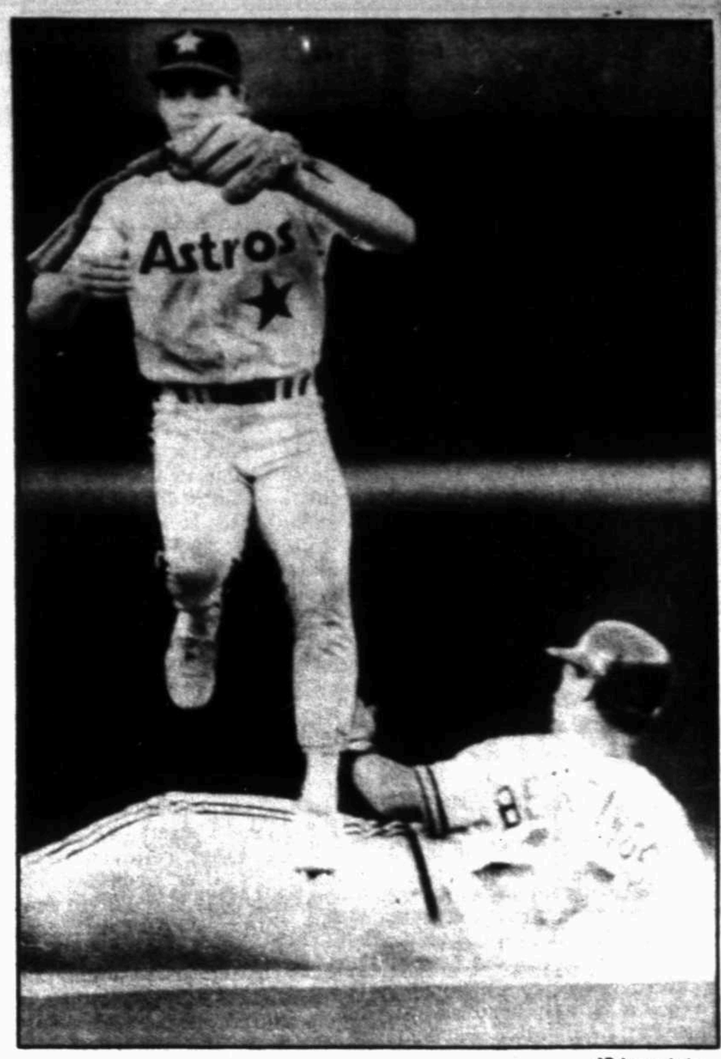

New York didn't take long to solve Walt Terrell (2-6), who has surrendered 13 runs in nine innings in two starts against the Mets. Magadan and Gregg Jefferies singled with one out ahead of Strawberry's long homer to right, his 13th of the season and his fifth in his last four games against Pittsburgh.

Strawberry has homered at least once in the Mets' last four games against Pittsburgh and is hitting .431 with eight homers and 18 RBIs in his last 16 games.

Expos 7, Cardinals 4

Montreal rallied for six runs before making an out in the ninth inning as Dave Martinez hit a three-run triple and Nelson Santovenia added a two-run pinch homer to power the Expos past the slumping St. Louis Cardinals.

It was the Cardinals' fifth straight loss and eighth defeat in their last nine games.

Nobody's sure why baseball run production up

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

Baseball is one big hit this season.

Lively ball, lousy pitching or lockout — take your pick. Whatever the reason, it's a great year to grab a bat.

"The numbers seem to be favoring the hitters so far," Houston pitcher Jim Deshaies said. "I'm not sure why it is."

No one is, for certain. But here are the stats: home runs are up 23 percent in the National League, 9 percent in the American League and 15 percent overall since last year.

"Yeah, I've noticed it," Los Angeles pitcher Tim Belcher said. "I'm on a pace to give up 35 home runs."

The biggest increases all are in the NL. Scoring is up about a half-run per game, batting averages have climbed from .243 to .261 and home runs have increased from 466 to 572.

In just three games this week, the New York Mets scored 43 runs on 57 hits at Wrigley Field. That came soon after San Francisco set a team record with 23 runs and 27 hits in Atlanta.

"I see those big numbers over there and wonder what's going on," Baltimore manager Frank Robinson said.

In the AL, the runs and batting averages are about the same. And the home-run jump is mostly because of two reasons, Jose Canseco and Cecil Fielder.

"Well, I didn't play the first half of last season," said Canseco, who hit 20 homers before going on the disabled list this week.

Fielder, who leads the majors with 24 home runs, played in Japan last year. Canseco and Fielder are among 19 major leaguers with at least 11 homers; one-third of the way through last season, only nine had that many.

Fielder already has hit three home runs in a game twice, and Kevin Mitchell, Glenn Davis, Randy Milligan and Jeff Treadway also have done it. In the past two seasons, there was a total of five three-homer performances.

"I don't know, we're just hitting," said Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla, who has 15 home runs. "It's hard to tell. Really, it just happens."

And it goes beyond sluggers. Alvaro Espinoza hit his first home run in 746 major-league at-bats recently and Wally Backman hit two homers in 134 at-bats after hitting a grand total of five in the last six years.

But figure this: there have been three no-hitters this season, by Nolan Ryan, Randy Johnson and a combined effort by Mark Langston and Mike Witt. There weren't any no-nos last year.

Overall, though, balls are flying over the fence 20 percent less than in 1987, when an all-time record of 4,458 home runs were hit. Back then, everyone said it was a lively ball. Everyone, that is, except major league baseball and Rawlings, who makes the balls.

This time, there are plenty of theories.

"If I had to point to one thing, it would be the lockout," Belcher said. "That's the most disastrous thing that has happened. It put pitchers behind and it put a lot of pitchers at risk as far as injuries."

Adds Montreal manager Buck Rodgers, "I think the reason is that some good pitchers have been hurt. You have guys like Orel Hershiser and John Smiley out and that could be a factor."

Most others agree. Pitching ain't what it used to be, especially this year.

"When we went to 27 men, some teams were carrying 12 pitchers. When you're carrying two pitchers that should be in the minor leagues, that fattens up the batting averages," San Francisco manager Roger Craig said. "Then, too, maybe because of the lockout, a lot of pitchers are going down, and you've got to bring up pitchers who are maybe not quite ready. They in turn are giving up a lot of hits and runs."

Said Deshaies: "In some cases, earlier this year the starting pitching was only averaging five or six innings, so the bullpen was getting more work."

"Eventually, the fatigue factor set in. Sooner or later some bullpens needed a rest and somebody had to stay out there and give up nine or 10 runs," he said.

Just look at those complete games. There aren't any. In the NL, there were just 56, compared to 75 last season, while the AL total decreased from 102 to 61.

"A lot of teams are hurting, starting Triple-A or Double-A pitchers who are not quite ready," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said.

Maybe that's why the NL's earned-run average has gone from 3.41 to 3.95. The AL's ERA has actually decreased slightly, from 3.92 last year to 3.89.

Scharbauer horse set for Remington

Staff Report

OKLAHOMA CITY — Sound Victory, a three-year-old quarter horse owned by Midland's Clarence Scharbauer and trained by Jack Brooks, the nation's leading trainer, is among the talent-laden field of 12 going postward in the $273,700 Remington Park Quarter Horse Derby Sunday.

The Scharbauer family is best known in the horse racing industry by producing Alysheba, who retired as thoroughbred racing's richest horse with earnings of $6.5 million. Alysheba won the 1987 Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes before losing the third leg of the Triple Crown in the Belmont. Alysheba also won the $3 million Breeders Cup Classic in 1988.

However, the Scharbauers have won virtually every major quarter horse stakes event, with the exception of the All-American Futurity in Ruidoso, N.M.

Sound Victory earned a spot in the Remington Park derby by covering the 440-yard trial race in 22.83 seconds on June 6, placing 10th in the 12-horse field.

The top qualifier was Miss Racy Vike, owned by Margaret and George Smith of Victoria, Tex. The state of Texas will be highly represented in Sunday's rich event as nine of the 12 qualifiers have Texas based owners.

The 12 qualifiers for the $273,700 Remington Park Quarter Horse Derby with horse's name, qualifying time and owner.

Owner says Akeem won't be a Laker

Worthy, Scott, Green rumored trade bait in exchange for Olajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets are denying all reports involving a trade involving All-Star center Akeem Olajuwon.

Olajuwon has been the subject of Los Angeles Lakers trade rumors in recent weeks but Rockets owner Charlie Thomas denied those reports.

"I'm not looking at any trade concerning Akeem and the Lakers," Thomas told The Houston Post on Wednesday. "If he ever did get traded, he's going east, not west.

"Akeem and I are very close friends, and the value I would put on the guy is something I don't think anybody could meet. I can assure you there's no trade working."

Names of James Worthy, Byron Scott and A.C. Green have been mentioned as part of a compensation package.

Thomas and Olajuwon reportedly met recently, with the player requesting a trade to the Lakers.

Thomas, asked in Portland, Ore., whether such a meeting took place, said, "I couldn't say it did or didn't happen."

Olajuwon has an unlisted telephone number and could not be contacted by The Associated Press.

Last February, he had said he would evaluate his future in the off-season and decide which direction he wants to go.

A six-year veteran, Olajuwon often expressed concerns this past season about whether he would be able to win a championship if he remains with the Rockets.

Olajuwon is under a long-term contract and cannot leave under his own volition. So the Rockets would have to decide whether to accommodate him if he demanded a trade.

"I think all players, at one time or another, go through phases where they might feel they want to renegotiate a contract or be traded," said Thomas. "That's just part of the business."

Rumors surfaced last month that Olajuwon was destined for Cleveland or the Los Angeles Clippers. But Thomas brushed them off.

"It's best to just drop it right there," said Thomas. "Akeem is not on the market."

Piston fans' celebration causes seven deaths

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Pistons fans celebrating the team's second consecutive NBA championship turned violent today as at least seven died and several more were critically injured.

The scene in the packed downtown streets was reminiscent of 1984 when the Detroit Tigers won the World Series and the celebration got out of hand.

Four of the deaths today were caused when a car plowed into pedestrians on the east side about 1:15 a.m., Detroit police Lt. Phil Foster said.

After that crash, a 9-year-old boy was pronounced dead at Children's Hospital, a 10-year-old boy and a 15-year-old girl died at St. John's Hospital, and a 21-year-old man died late this morning at Detroit Receiving Hospital, Detroit police Sgt. Christopher Buck said.

Another man with broken legs was being treated at Detroit Receiving Hospital. The driver of the car remained at large.

A parking-lot shooting killed a 19-year-old man and critically injured a 25-year-old man at 2:15 a.m., Foster said.

A 4-year-old suburban Detroit child was struck and killed by a car during a street celebration in River Rouge, said Lt. David Israel of the southern suburb's police department.

"The child was excited and ran into the street," said Israel, who withheld the name pending notification of relatives.

A 21-year-old man fell from the roof of an apartment building during a celebration party and died later at Detroit Receiving, hospital spokeswoman Diane Cooper said.

Vandalism, scattered looting and other violence were reported around the Detroit area. River Rouge police arrested 28 revelers, most on disorderly conduct charges, Israel said. Detroit police had no overall arrest count.

Looters caused an estimated $15,000 in damage at Monte Carlo Market on Detroit's west side, WDIV-TV reported. Rowdies overturned one car and smashed the windows of one of the station's news vans on the city's near east side.

Robert Egan, a Mount Carmel Hospital nurse, said fights even broke out in the hospital's emergency room early this morning.

"We were running around like crazy. We registered something like 20 gunshot wounds between midnight and 4 a.m.," Egan said. "It was ridiculous. In my three years here, I've never seen anything like this."

Partiers told television crews they were robbed as they stood on the streets and others said people reached into their cars, stealing such things as stereo speakers and wallets, as they tried to drive through the crowds.

In Ecorse, a neighbor to River Rouge, police reported damage to some area businesses but made no arrests, Chief Francis DeCrease said.

"The crowd of about 600 people were partying and got out of hand and busted a scout car window," DeCrease said. "Some people were shooting weapons in the air. They try to treat it like New Year's Eve.

"They outnumbered us."

Immediately after the game, traffic in downtown Detroit ground to a halt as merrymakers weaved between the cars, hugging and chanting "Bad boys!" in the hours after Vinnie Johnson's shot with seven-tenths of a second left gave the Pistons a 92-90 victory over the Trail Blazers in Portland, Ore., Thursday night.

"This is better than last year. We're in history now. We're part of a dynasty, we're up there with the Los Angeles Lakers and the Boston Celtics, the only ones to repeat," said Herb Hayden, 28, of Detroit.

"This feels so good, I've already started on next year's celebration," said Dion Ware, 19. "We're gonna do it again — three-peats, hear what I'm saying?"

"We were down. We came back with experience and obliterated them. We kicked their butts," said Marianne Courey, 24, of St. Clair Shores.

Earlier, at The Palace of Auburn Hills, the Pistons' suburban Detroit home court, 21,400 devotees paid $3 each to watch the game on a huge overhead television screen.

Irvan wins Miller 500 pole

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Ernie Irvan won his second pole of the season Friday in qualifying for Sunday's $571,000 NASCAR Miller 500 stock-car race.

Irvan's Oldsmobile toured the 2½-mile at Pocono International Raceway at 158.750 mph, just shy of a track record.

One of the last to make a qualifying run, Irvan knocked Dick Trickle off the pole. Trickle's Pontiac will sit next to Irvan on the front row after a 157.729 mph lap.

Irvan said he wasn't nervous before his lap.

"I'd have been real nervous if I was Dick Trickle sitting in the pits," he said.

Bill Elliott, who won one of the two NASCAR races at Pocono last year, will start third, with Geoff Bodine fourth and Greg Sacks fifth.

Irvan's second career pole earned him a shot at a $38,000 bonus if he can also win the race. The race winner is expected to get at least $50,000.

The Concord, N.C., driver said a drop in temperature in the afternoon helped his effort.

"The cooler we could keep the tires, the better off we were," said Irvan, whose lap was just off Alan Kulwicki's track-record 158.806 mph, set two years ago.

The pole continued a strong string of races for Irvan, who won his first pole at Bristol, Tenn., in April. Since joining the Morgan-McClure Racing team for the fourth race of the year, at Atlanta on March 18, he has started lower than ninth only twice.

Irvan is still looking for his first victory but has finished in the top 10 in the last four races and was third at Atlanta.

Trickle just missed getting his second pole in three weeks. He started from the front on June 3 in the Budweiser 500 at Dover, Del.

None of the top three drivers in the Winston Cup points race qualified in the top 10, and only leader Mark Martin, who will start 11th, managed to crack the top 15.

Czechoslovakia's Tomas Skuhravy (10) jumps in an attempt to score against Austrian Klaus Lindenbarger.

ROME (AP) — While Czechoslovakia and West Germany joyfully joined Cameroon and Italy as qualifiers for the second round of the World Cup, America's soccer players quietly were doing some celebrating of their own.

The Czechoslovaks, another of the surprising teams in the first round of the tournament, advanced with a 1-0 victory over Austria, and West Germany continued its powerful display with a 5-1 victory over the United Arab Emirates on Friday. The day before, Cameroon and Italy moved on.

The Italians struggled to beat the United States 1-0 Thursday night. The next day, it was the Americans who spoke positively about the result.

"I don't think you can get any higher than this," forward Peter Vermes said.

"I think we came out of there as winners," added Coach Bob Gansler. "Winners don't always get the W's."

No, the United States, in the World Cup for the first time in 40 years, isn't likely to get a W out of this tournament. But they have gotten respect.

"I think that for an up-and-coming team like us, you can call it a perfect night," Vermes said. "I think that we played well."

The Czechoslovaks have played well enough to get to the final 16 and set up a game with Italy on Tuesday night for the Group A title. Michal Bilek scored on a penalty kick in the 30th minute and Czechoslovakia, which lost its last four pre-tournament games, held off the rugged Austrians. Austria was handed five yellow cards.

Austrian goalkeeper Klaus Lindenberger pulled down Jozef Chovanec, who was coming in after defender Anton Pfeffer's sloppy backpass that forced Lindenberger to come out after the ball. Chovanec was carried off the field with a leg injury, but he knew Bilek would connect.

"Now Michal's scoring this penalty and we're going to win 1-0," he remembered thinking.

Bilek did score, then ran over to embrace Chovanec, lying at the side of the goal.

"This is just a symbol of how united we are as a team," Chovanec said.

For West Germany, Rudi Voeller scored twice and Lothar Matthaeus once, raising their totals to three apiece to lead all World Cup scorers. The West Germans routed the overmatched Middle East team, taking 23 shots to just two for the UAE.

"We made some small mistakes, but generally speaking I am satisfied," said West German coach Franz Beckenbauer.

Using the same lineup that trounced Yugoslavia 4-1 in its opening game Sunday, West Germany immediately put the UAE team under pressure and could have been up four goals by the 15th minute.

The West Germans can win the Group D championship with a victory against Colombia on Tuesday.

Klinsmann twice hit the post, while Voeller once had his shot saved by goalkeeper Muhsin Faraj, who faced 23 shots in the game.

Soviet soccer officials made a verbal protest to FIFA over the refereeing in the tournament. In both Soviet losses, which left the team virtually eliminated, there were controversial calls and non-calls involving hand balls.

"At first we considered filing an official written protest, but then we concluded that no eventual FIFA judgment could morally satisfy us," Soviet soccer federation vice president Nikita Simonyan said.

The Soviets say Fredriksson, the referee in the Soviets' 2-0 loss to Argentina on Wednesday, missed a hand ball by Argentine star Diego Maradona in front of the Argentine goal. The game was scoreless at the time and television replays indicated the ball hit Maradona's hand.

Three birdies give Johnson share of lead

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — Chris Johnson birdied three of the five par-3 holes en route to a 3-under-par 67 Friday and shared the second-round lead of the Atlantic City Classic with Sherri Steinhauer.

Johnson, looking for her first victory since 1987, and Steinhauer, a non-winner in four-plus years on the LPGA Tour, were a contrast in styles.

Johnson, 32, was steady, not making a bogey in reaching the halfway point at 4-under-par 136. Steinhauer, 27, had six birdies, including five straight early in a round of 2-under-par 68, but also had four bogeys.

Dale Eggeling, who reached six under midway through the round, faltered down the stretch with a double bogey and two bogeys and finished tied with Lenore Rittenhouse, two shots behind the leaders. Eggeling had a second-round 1-over-par 71 and Rittenhouse a 68.

Defending champion Nancy Lopez, looking for her first victory of the year, was three strokes behind the leaders, tied with Beth Daniel, a two-time winner this year.

Ayako Okamoto of Japan headed a trio of players at even-par 140 and first-round leader Liselotte Neumann of Sweden found herself five shots back after a miserable 5-over-par 75.

Instead of the steady drizzle that fell during most of Thursday's opening round, blue skies, sunshine and a good breeze greeted the players at the 6,015-yard Sands Country Club.

The breeze made the course play longer and Johnson and Steinhauer seemed to handle it best.

Johnson, who started the round one under, birdied three of the first 10 holes. She rolled in a six-footer on the 165-yard second hole, added a five-footer at the 185-yard seventh and used a "Texas wedge" to blade in a 20-footer from the fringe on No. 10.

The final four holes gave the laid-back Johnson some trouble, but par-saving putts of four and 12 feet got her out of most of the trouble.

Steinhauer's birdie binge started on the fourth hole with a 10-footer and ended with a tap-in, 18-incher on the eighth hole. She also had birdie putts of 12 and 25 feet and a chip-in from 20 feet.

It marked the fourth time this year that a player has made five straight birdies on the LPGA tour. The tour record is eight, set by Mary Beth Zimmerman in 1984.

The fifth birdie put Steinhauer at six under but she had three bogeys and a birdie over the final 10 holes.

Eggeling, who hasn't won since 1980, started on the 10th hole and was cruising along at six under until she reached the No. 1 hole, her 10th of the day. She knocked her drive into the rough, failed to chip out and eventually three-putted for a double bogey.

Hendrickson takes senior lead

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Dick Hendrickson's eagle gave him a 7-under 65 and the first-round lead in the $400,000 MONY Syracuse Senior Golf Classic for the second straight year.

He sank a three-foot putt for an eagle on the par-5 eighth hole, leaving him one shot ahead of Mike Hill, who was tied for the lead, but bogeyed the final hole after landing in a bunker on his approach shot.

Joining Hill at 66 were defending champion Jim Dent, Walter Zembriski and Larry Mowry.

Bobby Nichols was two strokes behind at 67, despite consecutive bogeys on the 11th and 12th holes. Bill Collins was also at 5-under.

Lou Graham, Jack Kiefer and Chi Chi Rodriguez were at 68.

Hendrickson, who has never won a Senior Tour event, led for 52 of 54 holes last year at the Lafayette Country Club, but was overtaken by Dent.

The leader was first off the 6,540-yard, par-72 course, but trailed Hill by a stroke before eagling the eighth hole. Hendrickson left his second shot just short of the cup with a 2-iron.

Hill, who had five birdies in a six-hole stretch, led after 12 holes. Starting on the back nine, Hill was 1-under after four holes, but came back with birdies on No. 16 and No. 17, both par 5s.

He shot par on the next hole then started the front nine with three consecutive birdies.

Le Mans set to start despite myriad of troubles

LE MANS, France (AP) — Beset by a squabble over safety conditions, the Le Mans 24 Hours race is set to get under way Saturday, but without the luster of complete international sanction.

Jaguars, Porsches and Nissans will be the main contenders in the 58th running of the famed endurance auto event from mid-afternoon Saturday to mid-afternoon Sunday in this city in central France.

But, like last year, the race will not be part of the sports prototype world championship season to determine an overall champion.

The International Automobile Federation (FIA) and its sport's governing body the International Federation of Automobile Sports (FISA) have had a dispute with the organizers of the competition, the Automobile Club of the West, over the last 18 months.

First was a battle over television rights. Then it boiled over into a battle over the safety of the famed 3.6-mile Mulsanne straightaway where cars reached speeds of almost 250 miles an hour.

Last December FIA suddenly passed a new regulation limiting straightaways to 1.2 miles in length. Le Mans was the only race course affected.

After a barrage of name-calling from both sides, Le Mans officials reluctantly agreed to put in two new chicanes, or small curves, to appease FIA. But the sport's governing body still did not include the Le Mans race on the world champion season.

Women's city golf slated

Staff Report

The 27th annual Women's City Golf Championship is set for July 23-26 and will again rotate its action across four local courses in a match play format.

The tournament is open to all women golfers who have resided in Midland at least 30 days and who have established handicaps.

Qualifying is required for the championship flight while handicaps determine the make-up of other flights. All golfers interested in playing are urged to establish a handicap and plan to take part. Although handicaps will determine flight draws, competition will be by match play and handicaps will not provide a factor in tournament play.

The qualifying round will be played July 23 at Ranchland Hills Country Club. First day of match play action starts at Hogan Park on July 24 and will be followed by rounds at Midland Country Club and Green Tree Country Club.

Members of the tournament steering committee are Trina Albright, chairman; Jo Dixon, Edie Stahl and Merrilyn Walker.

SEC's maneuvering prods Metro Conference to expansion

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A recent move toward expansion by the Southeastern Conference is prompting the eight-school Metro Conference to consider doubling its size, the Roanoke Times & World-News reported Friday.

Two Metro schools — Florida State and South Carolina — have been mentioned in connection with the SEC. Unlike the Metro, the SEC has a champion in football as well as basketball. The SEC reportedly also has targeted Miami, an independent.

Raycom Sports & Entertainment is doing an expansion study for the Metro, which originally intended to add either two or four schools, but is considering other options because of the SEC's plans.

The Metro's new options include possibly adding eight of the nine non-Metro teams canvassed by Raycom: Boston College, East Carolina, Miami (Fla.), Pittsburgh, Rutgers, Syracuse, Temple and West Virginia. Penn State, the other school in the study, recently was admitted to the Big Ten.

Douglas remains banned

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Despite the pleas of his family and friends, the late Phil Douglas, a pitcher banned from baseball in 1922, won't be returned to major-league baseball's good graces in the near future.

Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent has decided against reopening the case against Douglas, who was thrown out of baseball in 1922, an attorney for the family said Friday.

"I was surprised," lawyer Joseph I. McCullough Jr. said in a telephone interview from his office in Collingswood, N.J. "I thought — and I still think — it would be very, very simple for them to give us the most simple of hearings."

Douglas, who grew up in southeast Tennessee, was banned by Commissioner Kennesaw Mountain Landis for writing a letter to Leslie Mann, a former teammate who played for the St. Louis Cardinals, suggesting he would leave the New York Giants in return for money. The letter was turned over to Cardinals' officials who forwarded it to Landis.

Family members contend Douglas, an alcoholic, was confused when he wrote the letter because he had just been forced to undergo a painful, five-day treatment in a sanitarium. He was also frustrated because Giants manager John McGraw, with whom he was always at odds, had refused his request to be traded to the Cardinals.

Landis, a former judge who was hired to clean up baseball in the wake of the 1919 Black Sox Scandal, banned Douglas after a brief hearing in which the pitcher admitted writing the letter.

Douglas, a right-hander whose best pitch was a spitball, had a 93-93 record with a 2.80 earned run average in nine major-league seasons with five teams.

Nicknamed "Shufflin' Phil," he was 15-10 with the Giants in 1921, his best season, and struck out Babe Ruth four times while winning two games in the World Series. He died in 1952 in Sequatchie, Tenn.

In a letter to McCullough dated April 27 but released only this week, Deputy Commissioner Stephen D. Greenberg wrote:

"It is our opinion that a resurrection of the Phil Douglas case today would not be appropriate. The events surrounding the matter cannot be recreated in sufficient detail to provide an adequate basis to reverse Commissioner Landis' decision.

"Commissioner Vincent cannot substitute his judgment nearly 70 years after the fact for the judgment of a commissioner with a reputation for the highest degree of integrity."

McCullough, in a letter to Greenberg on Wednesday, said he was shocked by the commissioner's refusal to reverse what the attorney called a "legal atrocity."

Then-Commissioner Bowie Kuhn rejected a similar hearing request by Douglas' granddaughter in 1979, but the family renewed its efforts earlier this year.

A petition drive urging Vincent to hold a hearing is under way and Sunday will be celebrated as Phil Douglas Day at Chattanooga's Engel Stadium.

Despite the letter from Greenburg, McCullough said he is confident baseball will eventually reopen the case. If not, he said, the case may end up in court.

Neurobiochemist Hossein A. Ghanbari (left) and researcher Peter Davies (right) have discovered a new biochemical test that has proven highly reliable for detecting a protein linked to Alzheimer's disease. Their study was recently released in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Test detects Alzheimer's

CHICAGO (AP) — A new biochemical test has proven highly reliable for detecting a protein linked to Alzheimer's disease in autopsied brain tissue, and could pave the way to a diagnostic test, researchers say.

"The test actually measures a protein that so far has been proven to be associated with Alzheimer's and not present in detectable amounts in the brains of normals and those with other neurological disorders," said neurobiochemist Hossein A. Ghanbari.

"The importance of this finding is that the protein can be used later on as a model to come up with a diagnostic test in spinal fluid," said Ghanbari, senior research scientist at Abbott Laboratories in suburban North Chicago.

But a test for living patients remains at least two years away, said Ghanbari, lead author of the study in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study was funded in part by Abbott and supported by the National Institute of Mental Health.

The protein, which researchers simply call the "Alzheimer's disease-related protein" was found in 48 of the 56 Alzheimer's patients, the researchers reported.

No detectable levels of the protein were found in autopsied brain tissue from 27 patients free of neurological disease and 28 patients with neurological diseases other than Alzheimer's, the researchers said.

Since they submitted their report, they have tested about 240 more brain samples. "We still have about a 90 percent agreement with the diagnosis," Ghanbari said in a telephone interview.

Even after autopsy, current methods are inexact for diagnosing Alzheimer's, a degenerative brain and nerve disorder that robs people of their memories, abilities to function and eventually their lives.

An estimated 4 million U.S. adults, mostly over age 65, have the disease, and diagnosis depends mostly on looking for symptoms. They begin with memory loss and difficulty speaking and progress to loss of ability for self-care, personality changes and failure to respond to the environment.

Death usually comes in five to 10 years after complications from bed sores, feeding problems and pneumonia.

Confirming the diagnosis in patients who have died requires dissecting the brain, examining stained samples under a microscope and counting the characteristic nerve tangles and hardened deposits, or plaques, of Alzheimer's.

"This new test would remove the subjective component — either it's there or it's not," Phelps said. As such, it would be "the only quantitative test that we have."

The test will need confirmation by other scientists, said Phelps, a former program director at the National Institute on Aging's Neuroscience and Neuropsychology of Aging Program.

Judge upholds 'right to die'

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A judge cleared the way for a 31-year-old quadriplegic to end his life after hearing the disabled man's ailing father testify his son wants to die before him.

State District Judge Donald Mosley granted a petition June 8 sought by Kenneth A. Bergstedt that would allow a doctor to give Bergstedt a sedative and disconnect him from the respirator that he needs to help him breathe.

"He wants to go before I do," Bergstedt's 65-year-old father, Robert, testified. "There's no future for him. He knows he'll never walk again. He knows he has to depend on someone else the rest of his life."

But Mosley ordered the state attorney general's office to appeal to the Nevada Supreme Court and cautioned the elder Bergstedt against acting too hastily. "This merely allows you the option," Mosley said.

Mosley ordered an expedited appeal so the Supreme Court could set a precedent. Nevada has no laws governing such cases.

"One district court judge's opinion does not put this to rest," Mosley said. "For the residents of the state of Nevada, and for Kenneth Bergstedt, a definitive resolution needs to be had."

The request for the order was not opposed by Deputy Attorney General Donald Haight, who said he based his opinion on Bergstedt having a constitutional right to privacy.

Bergstedt, who did not attend the hearing, has been paralyzed from age 10 since his neck was broken when a girl jumped into a pool on him while he was swimming.

The elder Bergstedt said his son has wanted to end his life for 17 years, ever since he came to the realization he had no hope of recovering from injuries that shattered any chances of leading a normal life.

"He sees all these things are denied him that a normal man would do," he said.

He said his son, who spends most of his time on a gurney and cannot feed himself or handle any of his bodily functions, sees no reason to continue living.

He has cared for his son on a 24-hour basis since his wife died in November 1978, and he said his son fears being put in an institution when he dies.

The elder Bergstedt has one leg, suffers from high blood pressure and said he recently had a spot discovered on a lung.

"It would probably be very difficult for him to adjust to a bunch of different people caring for him," Bergstedt said.

GOD'S ENDURING LOVE

Imagine that you are standing in a giant redwood forest in California. Remarkably, one of these trees may have started to grow in 549 A.D., nine hundred and forty three years before Columbus discovered America, and continues to thrive today, fourteen hundred and forty one years since it began as a seedling. Almost unbelievably, this redwood tree has survived incredible natural and manmade turbulence, growing to an average height of two hundred and fifty feet, with a trunk twelve feet in diameter.

Continue to cast your eyes upward. The foliage is dense, but you may catch a glimpse of the heavens beyond the tree tops.

Now, consider God's love. He created the redwoods. He created the universe and all that is in it. God's love is so great that its dimensions are immeasurable.

Discover God's enduring love as you worship Him at your church or synagogue this week. God's love lives on . . . and on . . . forever.

Lost causes, hot jazz fill this church

By Mary Foster
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS — It's fitting the little statue labeled St. "Expedite" should end up at Our Lady of Guadeloupe. The old Roman Catholic church on the edge of the French Quarter with its shrine to St. Jude has long been a haven to the homeless, the helpless and many of life's misfits.

On a bright spring morning a young man kneels in prayer at the altar, an elderly woman lights a candle at the statue of St. Jude, and an old man in ragged clothes sits in a patch of sunlight by the door, his shopping bags around his feet.

"People come here from all over the city, but we have a lot of people who come from the French Quarter and here on Rampart Street and from the Iberville housing project directly behind us," said the Rev. William Zapalac, who has been at the church eight years. "We see a lot of life in this location. Things are always hopping."

Called the Mortuary Chapel for many years, the church was built in 1826 to handle the funerals of victims of the an outbreak of yellow fever.

"In those days they thought it was spread by the dead so they didn't want to have them in the Quarter," said Millie Brown, an 80-year-old parishoner. "They'd bring them here and then zip them right across the street to the cemetery. They say there would be hundreds of wagons with coffins lined up on them outside the church."

St. "Expedite" showed up about the turn of the century. Legend has it the statue arrived at the docks without paperwork or address.

"The only thing they saw was the word 'Expedite' on the side of the crate," said Tom Finney, spokesman for the New Orleans Diocese. "In those days there were a lot of first-generation Italians and Irish on the New Orleans docks and they didn't read English very well. They thought 'Expedite' was the name of a saint so they delivered the statute to the church."

Today it stands by the door, a cross in one hand and a sheaf of wheat in the other. The name on the statue is in quotes, St. "Expedite."

"There really is a St. Expedite. I don't know if this is him or not, but he fits in here, anyway," said Zapalac.

Four times a year the little church is host for a nine-day St. Jude Novena that draws 3,000 to 4,000 people a day. St. Jude, the patron saint of lost causes, spends the rest of the year dealing with a variety of people and pleas from the local community. There is no lack of work, Zapalac said.

"Being right here by the French Quarter we get a lot of the more unusual people from there. In New Orleans, I find people are much more tolerant of unusual people. Some places, people would be afraid of many of the people we really enjoy here," the priest said.

Rampart Street, with its seedy hotels and cheap bars, has become a mecca for the homeless, Zapalac said.

"We're seeing more and more homeless people all the time. Some of them we get to know very well," he said.

Some of them, like a mother and daughter who lived on the streets, are puzzles without solutions, he said.

The church found housing several times for the mother, who was in her 50s, and her daughter, in her 30s, but they always returned to the streets, Zapalac said.

"I don't know what happened to them. They finally disappeared. I think they were afraid of being trapped somehow if they stayed in the housing we found for them," he said.

But on Saturday nights it's not problems that are the focus of the early Mass, it's the city and its music that come to the forefront in the church's Jazz Mass. The Jazz Mass is the only one in the world, Zapalac believes.

From her emotionally troubled background, God has combined her humor and her knowledge of His word to develop profound truths for living."

The topic of her seminar is "God Uses Cracked Pots."

Cost of the seminar is $10 per person and includes a light lunch. For more information or to schedule reservations, call 682-3842.

'War room' tracking oil spill

By Kelly Rucker
Hearst News Service

That picture is an ever-changing composite drawing by man and machine, said Gary Petrae, second in command of the hazardous operations branch of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Petrae and 10 of his colleagues came here Sunday from as far away as Seattle and Miami to track the Mega Borg spill, using radar and expert observations. Many of them were here for the 1979 Ixtoc spill and they have also tracked the recent spills in Alaska and Long Beach.

They attribute much of their success in tracking spills to their SLAR, or side-looking airborne radar.

Mounted to the belly of a Coast Guard Falcon jet, the radar focuses beams sideways on the Gulf of Mexico to make a "broad swath" picture of the spill, Petrae said.

"Radar is reflected by waves in the ocean," he said.

Making an average of three flights daily, the team has watched the spill spread toward the coast and they have been able to predict when and where the spill will hit. But that information is only for the Coast Guard.

"If they do (make predictions), it's something we're working on with the Coast Guard," said NOAA spokes man Hal Alabaster. "You don't know with enough certainty to put out information that would be useful at this point." The team has combined radar data with drawings made by scientists flying over the spill to graph its position by hand.

Mega Borg spill totals 4.3 million gallons of oil

GALVESTON (AP) — State officials dumped oil-eating microbes into the Gulf of Mexico to help break up a slick from a Norwegian supertanker, which burned for seven days before the flames finally were doused Friday.

The ship leaked 4.3 million gallons of oil, making it the fifth worst spill in U.S. History.

Although the stubborn flames were snuffed Friday afternoon, officials still feared heat remaining on the vessel could cause a renewed fire, Coast Guard Petty Officer Todd Nelson said.

"There are no flames, however it's still real hot and if we walk away from it right now, it may reflash," Nelson announced shortly before 5 p.m. Friday. "It's real hot, but it's not yet dead."

EARLIER FRIDAY, firefighters had sprayed flame-smothering foam on the 886-foot ship, which exploded and caught fire June 8 some 57 miles off Galveston.

The Coast Guard Friday afternoon said the first tar balls from the oil slick were expected to wash ashore on Bolivar Peninsula, across the bay from Galveston Island, but by late Friday afternoon, there were no unusual reports of oil on shore.

State officials aboard a Coast Guard boat poured oil-gobbling microbes on a section of the oil slick Friday afternoon.

Altogether, about 100 pounds of microbes were sprayed over an acre in a procedure that lasted about 30 minutes Friday afternoon. Officials will check the area Saturday to see if the experiment was successful.

The bacteria eat the oil and reduces it to a fatty substance that fish can eat. When the oil runs out, the microbes die.

The process, known as bioremediation, has never been tried on an oil spill in open seas, although lab experiments have been successful, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said.

ON SHORE, Galveston officials were keeping an eye on the beaches.

Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene said the oil in the water was headed toward Bolivar Peninsula and San Luis Pass near Galveston.

"This is the most likely area where we're going to see tar balls come to shore," he added.

Galveston City Manager Doug Matthews said his city is not out of the woods.

"We don't anticipate the oil will come before Sunday. We're prepared," Matthews said.

More than two dozen smaller boats continued skimming the oil Friday. Salvage crews said they had skimmed 76,389 gallons of oil. The Coast Guard said most of the light crude evaporated or burned, and less than 14,000 gallons remained in the water.

ALTHOUGH GRAY smoke could be seen coming from the rear section of the vessel Friday morning, none could be seen later in the afternoon.

"At this time, we're conducting mop-up operations. We're getting foam to a few hot spots that are left and hopefully we'll be able to officially announce that (the fire) will be out shortly," John Driscoll, a representative for the salvage company fighting the tanker blaze, said earlier Friday afternoon.

Once the fire is out, crews will let the vessel cool for at least 24 hours and may have to wait up to two days before they can begin transferring the oil off the crippled tanker.

Firefighters were pumping oil from a leaking cargo tank into another tank to try and cut off the fuel source from the fire. Previously, firefighting efforts have consisted mostly of showering water on the vessel.

"This could improve the situation," Greene said earlier. "We're planning to work on this in conjunction with putting out the fire."

The leaking tank, which has a capacity of 5.5 million gallons, contains oil and some water from the fireboats trying to fight the blaze.

CREWS ALSO were pumping water from a tank on the left side of the boat to help stabilize the ship. Its rear section has been awash and listing slightly to the left.

In Galveston, a Norwegian maritime panel Friday ended three days of questioning surviving crew members in hopes of finding out what caused the explosion and blast. They re-called third mate Jaipal Singh Mahlawat to elaborate on a fuel leak discovered in the ship's pump room six hours before the explosion.

"I saw the pump man, he was screwing a coupling (fastener) back to stop the oil from leaking," Mahlawat said. "No oil was leaking. He had already wiped it out."

Coast Guard investigator Ruben Arredondo, who sat in on testimony but was not a member of the panel, said the oil leak may have contributed to the explosion. "We know now we had a fuel source (from the leak) and the spark could have been started by dropping a tool, a bad light fixture, or by oily rags lying around."

The hearing panel will send its report to the Norwegian maritime investigative bureau.

Oil spill attacked by super-eating microbes

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON — State officials and a persistent scientist Friday unleashed trillions of hungry microbes on an oil slick from the wrecked Norwegian tanker Mega Borg.

"This is breakthrough technology," Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said of the process called bioremediation.

Rolling in open seas aboard a 41-foot Coast Guard boat, officials sprayed a square acre in the Gulf of Mexico that was intermittently laced and blanketed by oil.

Bioremediation uses naturally occurring bacteria that have been bred as super-eaters to break down oil into harmless fatty acids that later are eaten by marine life, said Carl Oppenheimer, who developed the process.

Oppenheimer, a University of Texas microbiologist who has been working on the process for 15 years, predicted success. Within one or two days, there will be a clear square acre in the middle of the slick, he said.

"I think it is going to open the door now to bioremediation on a much wider scale," he said.

The process never has been done in the open seas but officials allowed a test on the slick from the Norwegian supertanker that exploded June 8.

Skeptics have criticized Oppenheimer's work, Mauro said, because the concept is so simple.

Oppenheimer would only say of the experiment, "It's been a long time coming."

He said some tests have been performed on controlled spills in inner harbor areas but never on the open sea.

"We need bioremediation," said Texas Water Commission Chairman B.J. "Buck" Wynne III. "This is a man who had an idea and no one would listen. He hasn't been able to get through all the snake oil salesmen."

Oppenheimer said crews would return later to retrieve samples of the water that was treated with the microbes.

About 100 pounds of the sand-like substance was mixed with sea water and sprayed onto the slick.

Oppenheimer said the slick, about three miles southeast of the Mega Borg, probably was about one-eighth of an inch thick.

Wynne said he was so encouraged by Oppenheimer's work that he was going to recommend the microbes be used on Galveston beaches if tar balls from the slick washed ashore.

Governor threatens to veto abortion bill

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana's House passed the nation's toughest state abortion bill and sent it to the Senate, but Gov. Buddy Roemer promises a veto unless exceptions are made for victims of rape and incest.

The House voted 74-27 Thursday to sentence people to up to 10 years in prison for performing abortions. The House twice rejected amendments with the exceptions Roemer wants.

"A bill that treats rape and incest for what they are — unusual, extraordinary, violent, degrading — and gives the mother a choice there, I can live with that," the Democratic governor said.

Proponents of the measure said they hope the conservative U.S. Supreme Court eventually will receive the bill and use it to overturn the court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

State Rep. Woody Jenkins, the bill's Democratic sponsor, said he can't concern himself yet with Roemer's long-standing veto threat.

"The governor will have to consider it and make the decision himself," Jenkins said. "If he would veto the bill, we would certainly try to override it."

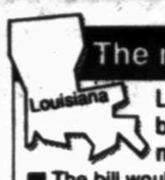

The Louisiana Legislature hasn't overridden a veto in 70 years, Jenkins said.

The bill could be in trouble in the Senate, where a number of lawmakers agree with Roemer, said Sen. Mike Cross. He will handle the measure when it comes up for a Senate vote, expected in about two weeks. The Senate bill might contain exceptions for rape and incest.

The House bill would impose prison terms of up to 10 years and fines of up to $100,000 on people who perform abortions. It would not penalize women who receive abortions.

Jenkins has claimed that abortion is tantamount to abuse against women.

Opponents called the measure an affront to women, especially the poor.

The nation's toughest state abortion bill

Louisiana's House passed a bill Thursday that would ban all abortions except those performed to save the mother's life.

- The bill would impose up to a 10-year prison term and a fine of up to $100,000 on anyone who performs the procedure. It would not penalize women who seek them.
- Gov. Buddy Roemer promises a veto unless exceptions are made for rape and incest victims. The House twice rejected amendments to that effect.
- The bill could face trouble in the Senate this month, where a number of lawmakers agree with Roemer.

Everything a pet will ever need on display

ATLANTA (AP) — The cat litter that transforms waste into a disposable rock seems like a good idea, although the neon doggie sun visors appear flamboyant enough to make Lassie blush.

Just about anything a pet owner could ever need — and much that he may never need — is on display at the pet product industry's annual trade show.

Among the 485 exhibit booths at the American Pet Products Manufacturers Association show that concludes Saturday are the standard pet foods, animal litter and bird cages — the kind you find in any pet store.

But the imagination of some manufacturers is a little untamed. Is your pet a football fan? How about a bowl that's truly super, one emblazoned with the San Francisco 49ers' logo? A canary can also join in with a genuine helmet bird feeder.

Has your hamster become bored in his old-fashioned cage? Welcome it to the New Age with a multicolored modular model, featuring a looping overhead plastic walkway. And neon sun visors will keep your dog safe from the ozone.

Karen Long MacLeod, editor of Pet Age, a trade publication, said the items aren't as frivolous as they seem.

A major thrust of the industry, she said, is to provide products that make pets more a part of the family, rather than just passive creatures.

"It's important to get kids and adults to think about their pets and bring them into the family, not just look at them as disposable things," Ms. MacLeod said. "Those products are designed to keep pets healthy and to have fun."

Particularly in the areas of food and litter, the industry is very research driven, she added.

"It's a pretty healthy industry," Ms. MacLeod said. "We see it in the number of new companies entering the industry and staying in, and in shows like these. An industry that's stagnant wouldn't be doing it."

Draft copy of EPA's passive smoke report contains disclaimers

NEW YORK (AP) — A finding that second-hand tobacco smoke causes 32,000 heart disease deaths in non-smokers has been incorporated into a draft Environmental Protection Agency report on passive smoking.

The report, a "technical compendium" of the latest research on passive smoking, has not yet been released. Documents with information on its contents were obtained by The Associated Press from the Tobacco Institute and from the office of Rep. Thomas Bliley of Richmond, Va.

Bliley and the Tobacco Institute, an industry group, have pressed the EPA to revise or withdraw a chapter linking heart disease to passive smoking, often referred to as "environmental tobacco smoke," or ETS.

"It would...in my judgment be most inappropriate to include this paper in its present form in the EPA ETS Compendium of Technical Information," wrote W. Gary Flamm, a Tobacco Institue consultant, in summarizing the six-inch high stack of comments that the Tobacco Institute sent to the EPA.

The chapter was written by Stanton Glantz and William Parmley, both professors in the department of medicine at the University of California, San Francisco. Parmley is a past president of the American College of Cardiology.

Elissa Feldman in the EPA's indoor air division said the technical compendium is still undergoing revision, and that it would probably not be released until later this summer.

Glantz presented many of the chapter's findings on May 21 at a scientific conference in Boston, but he did not disclose that they were included in the EPA's passive smoking report.

Robert Axelrad, director of the EPA's indoor air division, said Glantz had been given permission to discuss his findings as long as he did not mention his connection with the EPA.

He noted that the technical compendium was not a determination by the EPA of the risks associated with passive smoking, but a collection of state-of-the-art summaries of research on passive smoking.

"It will contain disclaimers that the views of the individual authors do not represent the views of the EPA," he said.

The link between the EPA document and Glantz's presentation in Boston came in a June 6 letter to EPA Administrator William Reily, in which Bliley said that Glantz's presentation in Boston was based on the EPA report.

Bliley has had a long interest in tobacco issues. Philip Morris is the largest private employer in his congressional district.

The chapter concludes that passive smoking causes 32,000 heart disease deaths each year and a total of 50,000 deaths each year, when heart disease and cancers are combined.

That makes passive smoking the third leading cause of preventable death, behind smoking and alcohol, the report concludes.

The study, based on a review of existing scientific stuuies, also concludes that passive smoking increases a non-smoker's chance of dying from heart disease by 20 percent to 30 percent.

Glantz said he could not discuss the details of the criticisms from the Tobacco Institute and Bliley until the EPA report is released.

He did make several general comments, however. "All of the people who have reviewed this material, both within the EPA and as it was submitted to the scientific peer review process, have been favorable — except the Tobacco Institute," he said.

The comments from the Tobacco Institute and Bliley's letter both include a strongly worded personal attack on Glantz, using similar language. They accused him of being an anti-smoking advocate whose political activity compromises the integrity of his scientific work.

"The fact that they're conducting an ad-hominem attack on me shows that they can't find anything wrong with our work," Glantz said.

Returned Marine deserter discharged after 21 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American who has spent half his life in Canada after deserting to avoid Vietnam was discharged from the Marine Corps Friday, 21 years after he left.

Ron Jacko, 42, was given physical and dental exams, $61.50 and an "other than honorable" discharge before being released outside the gates of the Marine base at Quantico, Va., said Lt. Col. Robert McLean.

Jacko had surrendered at the base south of Washington on Wednesday, after telling his story to reporters and his hometown congresswoman, Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio.

After determining there were no other outstanding charges, the base commander, Lt. Gen. W.R. Etnyre, granted the discharge request and Jacko was sent on his way "in a matter of hours," said spokesman McLean.

"We want to move as expeditiously as we can in these cases," he said.

Regulations required the Marines to provide the examinations, plus money equal to three-fourths of a one-way bus ticket to the town from which he entered the service — in this case, Cleveland.

"It's quite frankly no concern of ours where he goes," McLean said.

Jacko's attorney said a young Marine gave Jacko a ride to National Airport outside Washington.

"He knew who he was, too. Ron was sort of bowled over," said Tod Ensign of the New York-based Citizen Soldier, which arranged Jacko's return and pre-surrender publicity.

Jacko said in an interview Tuesday he had spent the past two decades in Toronto, where he managed health food stores. He said he decided to turn himself in because he wanted to be near his mother, who is in poor health in Cleveland.

Atlanta hospital loses Medicare, Medicaid

N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — One day after state officials announced plans to close Atlanta Hospital, the federal government notified the troubled facility Thursday that it would end federal Medicare and Medicaid reimbursements on July 5.

Clarence J. Boone, associate regional administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, which governs the health plans, said his agency found "an immediate and serious threat to the health and safety of patients" at Atlanta Hospital based on an inspection report by the Georgia Department of Human Resources.

Meanwhile on Thursday, doctors there heated the blood of a 37-year-old AIDS sufferer in a second highly controversial effort to cure the disease with hyperthermia.

Surgeons said the experimental procedure, on a Chicagoan identified by the hospital only as Tony, went as smoothly as the first done four months ago on an Atlanta waiter, Carl Crawford.

By Thursday evening, they said, the newest patient was awakening from the anesthesia.

DR. WILLIAM Logan, the heart surgeon who carried out the procedure, said, "I am happy to report to you that as far as we can tell our efforts in the operating room were successful." He said there were no complications. "He is now resting in the intensive care unit and remains very stable."

Hospital officials said it would be a matter of a few days before the results of the experimental procedure are known.

"I'm sure the physicians will be looking for the initial turnaround of his (AIDS) infection," said hospital Administrator James Haas.

"His Kaposi's sarcoma should begin to disappear fairly quickly — in the other patient it began to crust over fairly quickly; it took about three days."

Doctors carried out the experiments one day after state regulators made public an investigation of the hospital disclosing numerous alleged violations including unnecessary, unjustified or inappropriate treatment of more than 20 patients — eight of whom died.

The hospital plans to appeal the state's action and plead its case in a formal hearing, a move that could delay possible closing.

"The allegations that were brought forward are still only allegations, and we have the right to respond to those," Mr. Haas said. "I feel very confident that as we go through that process, we will be vindicated and any errors that have been made will be corrected."

STATE REGULATORS said Thursday that they had received numerous calls from AIDS activists in New York and Florida charging that the state investigation was a pretext trumped up to end the hyperthermia experiment.

Marjorie Smith, deputy director of regulatory services for the Department of Human Resources, said the state's case against the hospital is unrelated to hyperthermia or AIDS. "It's a statement about patient care at the hospital," Ms. Smith said.

Hyperthermia, a treatment that has been used sparingly against cancer, involves raising the temperature of the blood to 108 degrees Fahrenheit, in an attempt to reduce the concentration of AIDS virus. But heating the body to the temperatures needed to kill the AIDS virus can damage normal tissue — causing heat stroke, brain damage, even death.

Scientists also have raised concerns about experimenting in humans without extensive laboratory and animal studies.

Dr. Jim Curran, director of the AIDS division of the Centers for Disease Control, said, "It's very important when you have so many desperately ill people that new therapies be subjected to intense scientific scrutiny — that includes laboratory scrutiny."

So far, scientists have completed two studies on hyperthermia in AIDS. Both involved heating AIDS virus in a test tube — and both suggested that heat increases, rather than slows, the growth of the virus.

RESULTS OF the Atlanta Hospital experiment have never been validated by other scientists or published in peer-reviewed medical journals, which ordinarily evaluate the soundness of experiments.

Doctors at Atlanta Hospital instead staged their second experiment Thursday in the light of intense public scrutiny — with a television camera from Cable News Network broadcasting live from the operating room and mobile units from channels 5 and 11 parked on the lawns.

Mr. Haas said the hospital is getting 200 calls a day from people who are interested in hyperthermia — including the presidents of France and the Philippines and the embassy of Saudi Arabia.

Dr. Melanie Thompson, an Atlanta infectious disease specialist and head of a local AIDS drug research consortium, said her patients are so desperate for any help that they have told her they would cash in their life insurance policies and spend their life savings to undergo the experimental procedure.

The hospital says it absorbed the $35,000 cost of the first case.

Bush urged not to veto family leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats pressed President Bush on Friday to sign a bill guaranteeing workers emergency family leave, quoting 1988 candidate George Bush to support their arguments against his threatened veto.

The Republican sponsor of the bill also urged Bush to sign it, saying a veto on such a "bedrock family issue" could backfire for the GOP.

The family leave bill went to the White House after the Senate approved it Thursday evening on a voice vote.

Bush did not respond to a question about it during a photo session Friday. But press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said "Yes" when asked if Bush would veto the bill.

White House officials have said Bush does support "flexible family leave policies" by all employers but believes they should not be mandated by government.

The bill's main Republican sponsor, Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., urged Bush not to act until she and other backers could meet with him. She said a veto would leave the Republican Party open to charges it is insensitive to working families.

"The point that has to be considered here is, do we want to be perceived as the party that fights for a reduction in the capital gains tax while we turn our backs on taxpaying, hard-working American families who are in medical crisis," she said.

The bill passed comfortably in the House last month, although the margin fell 46 votes short of the two-thirds majority that would be needed to override a veto.

Senate passage came without a recorded vote. Sponsor Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said he was "within two or three votes" of a two-thirds majority.

Bush has vetoed 12 bills so far and hasn't been overridden on any.

The new legislation would require business and government employers to provide workers with up to 12 weeks of unpaid medical leave or with leave so they could care for a newly born or adopted child or an ill child, parent or spouse.

Employers would have to continue health coverage and then restore a returning employee to his or her previous job or an equivalent position.

Seemingly confident the bill has broad public support, Democrats taunted Bush with his own campaign rhetoric.

Democrats saw the issue as raising family values in a way that favors them politically, at a time when many are under attack for opposing Bush's constitutional amendment against flag burning.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., described Bush as "wrapping himself in the flag and coming out against parenthood."

The bill would cover about half of all U.S. workers.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your professional and personal affairs will go swimmingly once you get better organized. Streamline office procedures before September ends. A business deal in November will boost profits and create new jobs. By December, financial worries should be a thing of the past. Romance will blossom after the first of the year. A young person finds your words very comforting. A legacy or windfall is featured next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Erich Segal, actress Joan Van Ark, boxer Roberto Duran, comedian Stan Laurel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can gain a lot — money, romance and new business — from traveling now. Stay alert to fresh opportunities. An outsider opens the door to success. A novel scheme deserves further investigation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to ask for more time to do a project right. A careful explanation will get you what you want. Constant travel takes its toll. Reserve more time for rest, relaxation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are overly sensitive about something you did and now regret. Stop making a mountain out of a molehill. Put your mistakes behind you and move forward with confidence. An old flame returns.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Projects begun now will turn out great! Be bold and try something new. Let higher-ups know in advance if you will need extra time to complete an assignment. Your honesty pays dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance reaches a turning point. Do not hide your vulnerability from mate. If you do, your good intentions could be misread. A new friendship may leave you with some doubts about yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You should do quite well in any competition you enter today. Preparation pays off. Regular exercise will increase your stamina. Just avoid going to extremes! Romance enjoys favorable influences tonight.

Arlington woman 'rewarded' by playing 'Dick Tracy' game

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — An Arlington woman won $1 million in the "Dick Tracy Crimestopper" game being promoted by McDonald's Restaurants.

Ethel Cunningham, 45, was certified as the winner of the first of two $1 million prizes on Friday in Arlington, an advertising firm handling the promotion said.

Mrs. Cunningham has worked nine years as a commercial teller at Bank of Arlington.

"I cannot believe this. I cannot believe this," said Mrs. Cunningham. She is married and has one daughter, who picked up the winning ticket on Sunday. The money will be paid in $50,000 increments over 20 years.

Schwarzenegger

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Schwarzenegger, his wife Maria Shriver and their daughter will be their church's "honorary chair family" for a benefit this fall.

The star of such action thriller films as "Total Recall," "Terminator" and "Conan the Barbarian" will help promote the Oktoberfest at St. Monica's Catholic Church, Monsignor Lloyd Torgerson said Thursday.

"We are very grateful to the Schwarzenegger family, who are parishioners to our parish, to participate in our event as the honorary chair family," said Torgerson, the pastor.

Other celebrities who said they would attend include Meredith Baxter-Birney, Lou Ferrigno, Paul Michael Glaser and Cindy Williams.

The 10th annual Oktoberfest, beginning Oct. 5, is a three-day fund-raiser to benefit St. Monica's parish, parish schools and local outreach programs for the homeless.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Jean MacArthur, the 91-year-old widow of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, had her long-time pal Barbara Bush at her side Friday when she cut a ribbon to open a new research center of the MacArthur Memorial.

Mrs. MacArthur said it was her first speech. "I left all that to the general," she said.

"When I was with my husband during World War II, I visited many of the hospitals and I used to say to myself that I was so proud of the American military because they were so proud of being Americans," Mrs. MacArthur said.

"She stood by the general through Corregidor, Australia and Japan," Mrs. Bush said of her friend. "This quiet, gentle woman is loved by all who know her."

MacArthur commanded American troops in the Pacific during World War II and oversaw the occupation of Japan at the end of the war. He also was commander of United Nations forces in Korea before being relieved in 1951 by President Truman.

The $1.1 million expansion of the MacArthur Memorial was paid for through private donations. The city-owned memorial draws 80,000 visitors a year. MacArthur's body is entombed there.

Taylor

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor was home recuperating Friday, "very weak" but in good condition after a two-month fight with pneumonia, her spokeswoman said.

"She's doing fine," Taylor's spokeswoman Chen Sam said Friday.

The violet-eyed actress, with hair coiffed and makeup on, waved and smiled to reporters Thursday night as she was driven from the hospital toward her Beverly Hills home.

"She's very weak from having been in the hospital for a very long time but thank heaven she's home," Ms. Sam said.

Miss Taylor, 58, will stay home for a couple of months, Ms. Sam said.

The New York publicist quoted Miss Taylor as saying, "I am finally glad to be going home. My sole concern at this time is focused on my getting well and carrying on with my life."

Miss Taylor was in St. John's since April 16. She had been in the hospital's intensive care unit for treatment of viral pneumonia. At one point in late April, her breathing was assisted by a ventilator.

The screen beauty has won two Oscars. She starred in "Butterfield 8," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and more than 50 other films.

LONDON (AP) — A 1964 acoustic guitar from the collection of English classical guitarist Julian Bream has been sold for $26,100, a world auction record for the instrument, Sotheby's said.

The guitar, made by Robert Bouchet in Paris, was bought Thursday by a Japanese dealer whose name was not available. The previous record was $18,900, paid in 1974 for a south German guitar made in 1624.

Acoustic guitars are the traditional models of the instrument and they tend to wear out fairly quickly when used.

Bream has said he plays his guitars for two years and then likes to sell them for others to play.

Electric guitars, when associated with rock stars, sell for far more money: one owned by the late Jimi Hendrix sold in April for $322,000.

The record guitar and five others sold by Bream Thursday brought in a total of $56,100.

Drug dealing gangs hit in 11 states

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An 11-state sweep targeting street gangs that export drug dealing from California ghettos to other states netted more than 170 arrests, authorities said Friday.

The action dubbed operation Street Sweep began Thursday, with hundreds of federal agents and local law officers moving in on members of the Crips and Bloods, violent gangs spawned in poor Southern California neighborhoods.

By late afternoon Friday, 174 arrests had been made, officials said.

"What began as a Los Angeles problem has now spread to a national one," said Stephen E. Higgins, director of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Arrests were made in California, Louisiana, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Oregon, Washington, and two other states that weren't identified because warrants were still being served.

Authorities at a news conference to announce the sweep displayed a sample of confiscated weapons, but did not detail the quantity of weapons or drugs seized.

A national investigation by the bureau revealed the rival Crips and Bloods were heavily involved in crack cocaine distribution and firearms trafficking nationwide, Higgins said.

"Gang members are involved in murders, drive-by shootings, narcotics trafficking, assaults, credit car fraud, robberies and money laundering," he said, adding the operation was "intended to send a message to violent street gangs."

More arrests were expected through the weekend, ATF spokesman Jack Killorian said from Washington, D.C.

"This was not a search and investigative operation. It was an arrest operation," Killorian said. "Most of the arrests were fugitives and the majority were charged with federal weapons charges."

The sweep focused on Southern California, where 134 arrests were made in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino and San Diego counties.

Arrests in Louisiana were related to a January seizure in Shreveport of nearly 13 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $250,000, Killorian said.

Higgins was unable to say if those arrested were gang leaders.

"They aren't formally structured in that sense, (but) these are people who control a fair amount of the (drug) market," he said.

Although outnumbered by drug traffickers, law enforcement officers' efforts to eradicate drug dealing could prevail, he said

"I'm convinced it's a winnable war," Higgins said. "We're in it for the long term."

Intestine transplant successful

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Surgeons at a Pittsburgh hospital said they have performed the nation's first successful transplant of a small intestine.

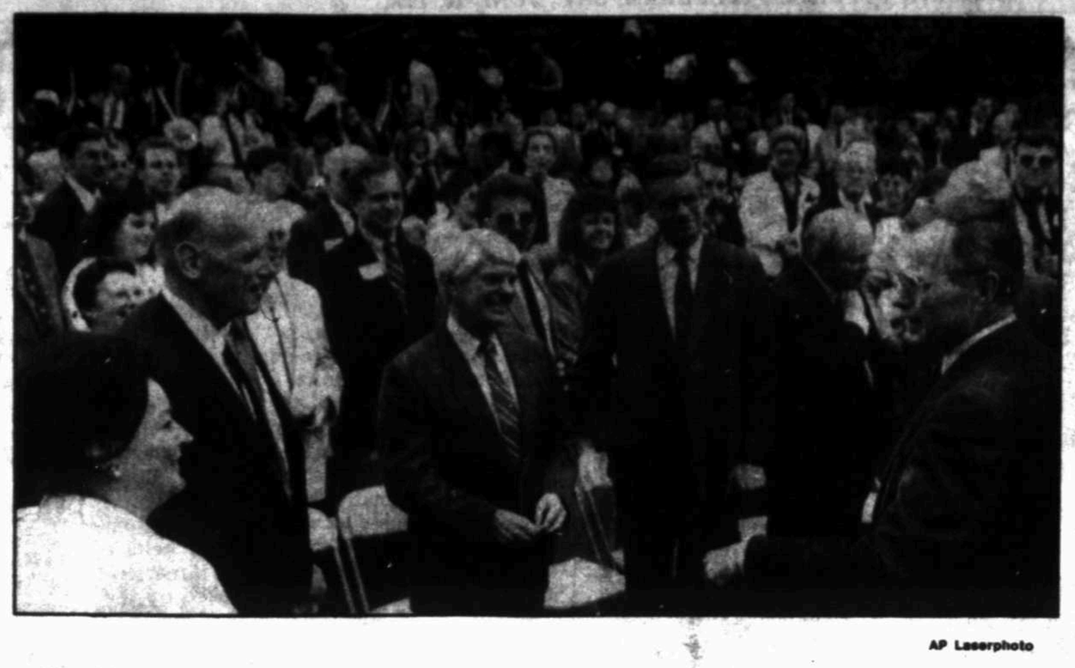

The patient, a man shot in the abdomen in October, was kept alive on intravenous feedings until undergoing the transplant at Presbyterian-University Hospital, said Dr. John Fung, assistant professor of surgery at the University of Pittsburgh.

"He is eating but I can't venture to say what will happen in the long term," Fung said. "He's still in the hospital because he is still recovering and we are doing more testing."

Transplant pioneer Dr. Thomas Starzl and Fung mentioned the surgery Wednesday in a meeting with the University of Pittsburgh's board of trustees. The physicians declined to be interviewed following the meeting, and hospital officials refused to disclose any other details. Fung said the operation was done about two months ago on the patient, who was not identified.

Hospital spokeswoman Lisa Rossi said Thursday it was premature to discuss the surgery. She said small intestine transplants previously were attempted at the hospital only as part of three multiple-organ transplant operations. All three patients died.

Dr. Ronald Ferguson, chief of transplantation at Ohio State University Hospital in Columbus, said the operation was encouraging. He said very few small intestine transplants have been attempted, and none of the patients survived.

President Bush gives a White House send-off Friday to 121 teachers who are taking the Peace Corps to Poland and Hungary for the first time. The volunteers were in Washington for their final orientation. Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., center, was one of several dignitaries who attended the ceremony.

Peace Corps volunteers ready for service in Poland, Hungary

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush dispatched 121 Peace Corps volunteers to Poland and Hungary on Friday to join "in the exhilarating process of building new democratic societies."

Volunteers from across the United States gathered under a light drizzle in the Rose Garden of the White House for a ceremonial send-off. They will be the first Peace Corps workers ever to go to Eastern Europe.

The group ranged from recent college graduates to mid-career teachers and volunteers in their 70s. They will fan out to schools and colleges, fulfilling a promise made by Bush a year ago during his travels to Hungary and Poland.

"English literacy has become the key to progress," Bush told the volunteers. He said they would find that "the hunger is powerful, and the need is real for the nourishment of free ideas and the sustenance of free enterprise" in those newly developing democracies.

Paul D. Coverdell, a former Atlanta insurance executive who is director the Peace Corps, told the group, "Yours is an historic mission of profound significance." The Peace Corps, begun in 1961, has sent more than 120,000 Americans to countries of the world. Currently, 6,100 volunteers serve in 72 nations.

The expansion into Poland and Hungary and a similar Peace Corps program planned for Czechoslovakia "are another tangible element of America's sustained commitment to Central and Eastern Europe's democratic transformation," said Bush.

Earlier this spring, the U.S. government sent a team of financial experts to Poland to assist in setting up a free market system after four decades of communism. These volunteers, including lawyers, accountants, and bankers, spent only a brief time there.

In addition, some 1,000 individuals, companies and private foundations have signed up for the Citizens Democracy Corps, an organization announced by Bush last month. A clearinghouse at the State Department opened its doors May 23. The volunteers, using their own sources of financing, are expected to arrive in Eastern Europe as early as Aug. 1.

They will act as advisers and teach courses in the free press, public health, market economics, legal affairs, environmental action and the English language.

Governors attack federal priorities

CHICAGO (AP) — Billions for banks and drugs and pennies for jobs and housing is no way to run a country, the nation's mayors said Friday in a bitter attack on the federal government.

"Federal policy towards our cities and towards economic opportunity today is as bankrupt as the corrupt savings and loans which are robbing our young peoples' future," Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn said at the opening session of the mayors' annual summer meeting.

"While we waited at Washington's back door for a few crumbs for urban America, these bandits heisted over $300 billion from our nation's treasury," Flynn said.

"These are funds that could have been used for job training, for college scholarships, for helping young families buy their first home, as well as building a national economy set to compete with Europe and Japan."

Ironically, the S&L industry's trade group was meeting elsewhere in the same Chicago hotel.

Flynn's remarks opened a joint meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors task forces on drug abuse and homelessness. Flynn, chairman of the latter group, and several other mayors said tensions are on the rise in American cities.

The mayors placed most of the blame on federal aid cutbacks they said have left cities too poor to provide job training and other alternatives to youths.

The session, designed to show the relationship between drug use, poverty and homelessness, was conducted in a pep rally atmosphere. Big-city mayors led an attack on federal spending priorities and called on their fellow mayors to work harder to lobby for more federal aid.

"Our budgets are not equipped to handle these crises," said San Diego Mayor Maureen O'Connor.

The joint meeting of the task forces was the first major event at the six-day conference.

Retail prices rise modest 2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail prices rose a modest 0.2 percent in May, easing the strain on consumers' budgets for the second straight month after a painful spurt in prices early in the year, the government said Friday.

In other economic news, the Commerce Department said the U.S. trade deficit shrank to $6.94 billion in April, the second lowest level in the last six years.

And, the Federal Reserve said industrial production rebounded an unexpectedly strong 0.6 percent last month after holding steady in April.

The April and May moderation in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index curbed inflation for the first five months of the year to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.8 percent.

That's up significantly from the 4.6 percent rate for all of last year, but down sharply from the worrisome 8.5 percent rate in the first quarter.

"Inflation remains low and under control," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The better news on inflation was expected by most economists, who said prices are recovering from weather-related increases for food, energy and clothing. Prices for fuel oil and vegetables shot up in January and February in reaction to an unusually severe freeze around Christmas.

After that, a warm spell stimulated early sales of more expensive spring clothing lines, sending apparel costs higher.

"What you need to keep in mind here is that the moderation in May is mainly an unwinding of the price spikes you got earlier in the year," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch. "Although we should be happy to get these kinds of numbers, they are probably understating inflation just as the numbers at the beginning of the year were overstating it."

Food prices rose only 0.1 percent last month after falling 0.2 percent a month earlier. Energy costs dropped 0.7 percent, the fourth monthly decline following a large increase in January.

Prices excluding the volatile food and energy sectors, often taken as a better barometer of underlying inflation than the overall calculation of prices, rose a moderate 0.3 percent after increasing 0.2 percent a month earlier.

The various changes put the index for all consumer prices at 129.2 in May. That means a hypothetical selection of goods and services costing $100 in the 1982-84 base period would have cost $129.20 last month, up from $123.80 a year ago.

The recent mild inflation meant that Americans' average weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, increased 0.3 percent in May. Still, for the last 12 months, earnings fell 0.1 percent. Average weekly earnings in May, before adjusting for inflation, were $344.31, up from $330.86 a year earlier.

Both the 17 percent improvement in the trade gap and the moderation of inflation were taken by analysts as a sign of a weak domestic economy, which translates into lower demand for imports and lower prices for goods in general.

The industrial production report, although a sign of strength, was considered somewhat of a fluke. Much of it was attributed to a buildup in inventories by the Big Three automakers worried about a strike in September.

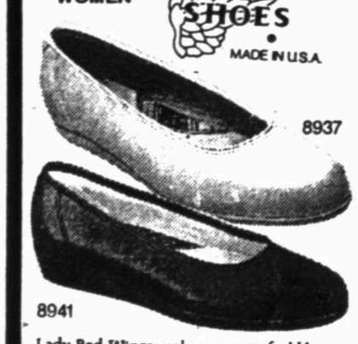

Opinion was mixed over whether economic weakness will prompt the Federal Reserve to nudge short-term interest rates lower. Bond prices plunged after the reports, a sign that traders believed the economy was not weak enough nor inflation calm enough to trigger an easier monetary policy.

But Steinberg, noting the long lag between a change in policy and a corresponding reaction in the economy, said, "It seems to me the Fed, if it doesn't want to see the economy weaken further, will have to ease sometime in the near future, probably in July."

The department offered these other details of May consumer prices:

—Fruit and vegetable costs fell 2.4 percent, their third substantial drop in a row. Vegetable prices soared 29.2 percent in the first two months of the year before falling 23.6 percent in the next three months. Dairy costs fell for the third consecutive month while prices were up for sweets, fats and oils and beverages.

'No smoking' sign of the times

By Christopher Sullivan

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco USA, the smoke shop is called, but it could be a nickname for this region. And so when Greensboro hung a "No Smoking" sign in this and other businesses, it was a sign of the times, hard times, for tobacco.

"You get some hostile reactions," acknowledged Matthew Pappas, who works at Tobacco USA, a wholesale-retail outlet. "Some people, you tell 'em they can't smoke in the store, they'll throw their cartons down and walk out."

They're not just reacting to the irony of smoking regulations in a cigarette store. Even here at home, they realize, they can't escape the sea change in American attitudes toward smoking.

Not that long ago, it wasn't just OK to smoke. It was Kool. "I'd walk a mile for a Camel," the slogan said. "Winston tastes good like a cigarette should." There was the "Lucky Strike Radio Hour," the barn painted with the familiar Mail Pouch logo.

Remember the Winston man in the ads, the hero who'd rescue someone and then light up? Nowadays, the model who portrayed him is stumping for the anti-smoking forces.

And what about the romance that drifted on cigarette smoke through "Casablanca" and so many other old movies? Now, one James Bond film with a pack of smokes as a prominent prop carries an on-screen health warning.

During World War I, the New York Medical Journal said that given the nervous strain at the front, it would be "folly, both from a medical and a military standpoint, to deny tobacco to the men." Now, study after study cites new dangers. U.S. surgeons general refine their warnings. More than 40 states and 400 localities restrict smoking. Even Greensboro.

"It's everywhere you turn," said Martha Vick, who grew up on a tobacco farm, raises the leaf with her husband and is director of a museum of tobacco farming in Kenly, N.C.

"This is a legal crop we produce," she said. "Tobacco farmers are hardworking, God-fearing citizens. ... I imagine every producer wonders what the future is going to hold."

To economic forecaster Geoffrey Greene, the future of smoking in the United States can be glimpsed in the demographics of the baby boom generation.

"There was a long period of time when there was inertia building, when the evidence became more and more clear that there were concrete health effects," said Greene, senior economist at Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Then a few years ago came the spur. "You started hearing the stories — Joe X from college dropped dead of a heart attack at 39 or 42. ... People who'd always been thinking about, 'Well, maybe I ought to quit smoking,' started saying, 'Now I'm going to do it.' "

Around the same time, then Surgeon General C. Everett Koop issued a report on the effects of breathing smokers' "sidestream" smoke — a message baby boomers were ready to hear, in Greene's view.

"We're increasingly aware that it's an interconnected world," he said, and there's "more willingness to accept some constraint on individual liberties" if others could be harmed.

The milestones of tobacco's recent decline are just as clear to Billy Yeargin, president of Tobacco History Corp., which studies and preserves the commodity's heritage.

The surgeon general's report in 1964, warning of health risks from smoking, gave birth to the organized efforts against tobacco, and later reports by Koop and other officials have conferred "the sanction of the government" on tobacco's antagonists, Yeargin said. Since 1965, the percentage of adults who smoke has dropped from 40 percent to 29 percent.

Still, anti-smoking sentiment is not new. It goes back at least to King James I of England, who in 1604 blasted the "black, stinking fume" of this "custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs."

Now, Yeargin said, old objections are increasingly taking the form of law. Even in Virginia, where tobacco exports began just eight years after King James issued his broadside, the Legislature recently overwhelmingly approved limitations on public smoking.

"It has certainly alarmed me," Yeargin said of the accelerated pace of restrictions. "Someone once said the surest test of democracy is how society treats its minority" — in this case, those who smoke.

In Greensboro, home of Lorillard Inc., which makes Newport, Kent and True cigarettes and employs 2,300 people, the referendum restricting smoking passed by 173 votes out of about 30,000 cast last November.

A slim margin, yes, acknowledged David Hudgins, a leader of the group Greensboro to Alleviate Smoking Pollution. But the vote changed people's views, he said, predicting a repeal effort now being discussed will fail if it goes to a vote.

"People have just had enough of it," Hudgins said, referring not just to breathing others' smoke but to the campaign by tobacco companies against the referendum.

"They finally realize that they can speak out and there can be some pride in not supporting tobacco. It's not a stigma, just because we're from North Carolina."

The American Cancer Society's Joann Schellenbach in New York agreed. "When the ordinance passed in Greensboro it was considered one of those major battles in the war, a real turning point."

Business has realized there are savings if employees don't smoke, in everything from the cost of insurance to office-cleaning, she said.

Do the anti-smoking forces have tobacco on the run? "Absolutely," she said.

In Washington, Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, would like to believe that, but said tobacco companies have grown stronger along with the anti-smoking movement.

A bill he sponsored, one of dozens of smoking-related measures before Congress, aims to protect children from tobacco advertising by banning all but text-only ads in newspapers and magazines and by stopping what Luken considers circumvention of a federal ban on broadcast advertising and a requirement that tobacco ads carry warning labels.

His office points to a $350,000 contract to use a pack of Lark cigarettes to conceal a detonator in the James Bond film "License to Kill."

"When we got in touch with the producer he voluntarily agreed to put a warning label at the end of the movie, the first time a movie has ever had a health warning," said Luken aide Benjamin Cohen.

Andrew White, a spokesman for Philip Morris USA, said that Larks are sold by Philip Morris in Japan, not in the United States, and that the contract was part of a Japanese promotion of the movie.

"We adhere to both the letter and the spirit of the law," White said.

At the Tobacco Institute, the industry's lobbying arm in Washington, spokeswoman Brennan Dawson said it is peer pressure that makes teen-agers smoke, not stadium billboards or magazine ads.

Yes, she said, the regulators have won many recent rounds, including a virtual ban on smoking aboard airliners, and yes, for those in the industry, "it's certainly a difficult climate."

But smoking's decline in this country should not be exaggerated, Ms. Dawson said.

"If it's something that 50 million people still do, I'm not sure that I buy that it's been de-socialized," she said.

Billy Yeargin, at right in top photo, poses next to a mannequin at a country store display a the Tobacco History Corp. at Duke Homestead in Durham, N.C. As president of the Tobacco History Corp., Yeargin is responsible for studying and preserving the commodity's heritage. Tobacco firms' profits aren't going up in smoke

By Skip Wollenberg

NEW YORK (AP) — All the huffing and puffing against smoking has failed to blow tobacco's house down.

Profits in the tobacco business are growing at a double-digit clip due to higher prices, improved production efficiency, stable leaf costs and clever marketing, industry analysts say. And they expect similar increases in the future.

But the growing campaign against smoking could have an unintended side effect: Some media executives say newspapers and magazines will be hurt if new limits on tobacco advertising are adopted.

Publishers planning new magazines, for instance, must consider when devising a business plan whether the publication could survive if tobacco advertising was banned.

"Anybody launching a magazine today would have to consider that," said Michael Klingensmith, publisher of Time Warner Inc.'s four-month-old Entertainment Weekly. About 10 percent of the magazine's ad revenue comes from cigarette companies, he said.

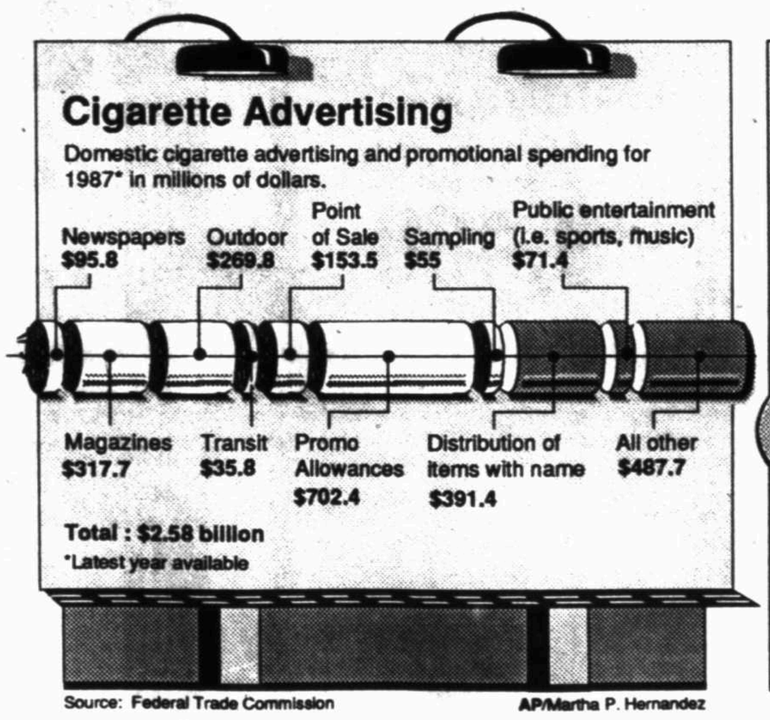

Alan Wragg, publisher of TV Time, a new weekly TV listings magazine, said he is counting on a "much smaller contribution from cigarette advertising than if we were doing this five years ago."

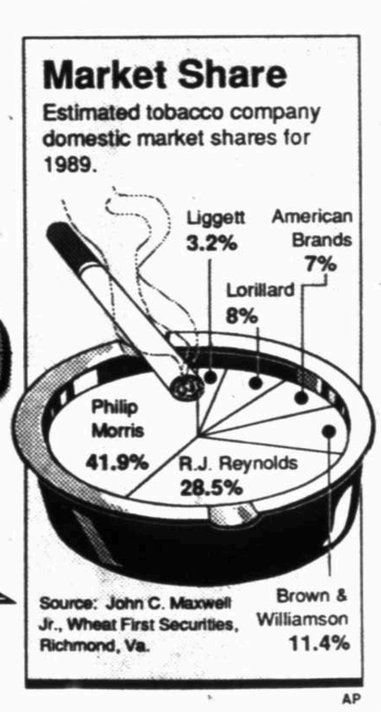

Tobacco opponents say their chief goal hasn't been to make tobacco less profitable but to raise awareness of health issues and puncture the glamorous image of smoking that some cigarette ads still promote.

Results of their efforts are readily apparent — smoking is prohibited on most domestic air flights and in many public places such as restaurants, hospitals and offices. One tobacco company withdrew plans to test a new cigarette aimed at blacks after disclosure of the plans stirred a barrage of complaints that it was preying on a minority group.

The segment of the adult population that smokes tumbled to 29.1 percent in 1987, the most recent year for which such statistics are available, from 40.7 percent in 1966, the U.S. Office on Smoking and Health says.

Cigarette sales volume also has dropped steadily in recent years.

The Tobacco Institute, a trade organization, said 562 billion cigarettes were shipped in 1988, down 2.3 percent from 1987 and 12.2 percent from the peak of 640 billion in 1984.

John C. Maxwell Jr., who follows the tobacco business for Wheat First Securities in Richmond, Va., estimates sales dropped by 6.1 percent to 524 billion cigarettes in 1989. The decline would have been half as large without unusual efforts by one company to reduce inventories held by wholesalers, he said.

But the decline in sales volume and the percentage of smokers has not translated into a decline in cigarette revenue or profits.

The Tobacco Institute said domestic cigarette revenue reached a record $35.8 billion in 1988, up 6.5 percent from 1987.

Tobacco companies' domestic pretax operating profits rose more than 10 percent last year to $7.2 billion, said industry watcher Diana Temple.

Philip Morris USA, the industry leader with 41.9 percent of the market and the best-selling Marlboro brand, had an operating profit of $3.6 billion alone on revenue of $9.5 billion in 1989.

Ms. Temple, an analyst for the Salomon Brothers Inc. investment firm, said the industry has reported an average 14 percent annual increase in operating profits over the past five years. The dropoff in 1989 reflected the unusually large volume decline, not anti-smoking efforts, she said.

Maxwell said the tobacco companies have been able to overcome the impact of volume declines by raising prices as often as twice a year. An average pack of cigarettes cost $1.44 in 1989, up 11 percent from 1988, Ms. Temple said.

Tobacco companies also have controlled costs by investing in machinery that produces nearly twice as many cigarettes a minute. In addition, domestic growers have been reluctant to raise raw leaf prices, fearing cigarette-makers will buy from foreign suppliers, Maxwell said.

Analysts also said that despite the well-publicized misstep in developing a new cigarette for blacks, the tobacco companies have proven adept marketers able to identify customers and tailor messages for them.

Ms. Temple said tobacco companies also have grown more profitable because few have dared challenge the six leaders: Philip Morris, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, Brown & Williamson, Lorillard, American Brands and Liggett Group.

"It is an unglamorous business that doesn't attract a lot of new entrants," she said.

Proposals to restrict tobacco advertising would not necessarily hurt profitability and could improve it, analysts said.

Maxwell said an ad ban would save money that would "come right down to the bottom line" for tobacco companies.

The tobacco companies probably would shift ad spending to promotions, such as distributing free samples, sponsoring concerts or sports events or setting up more store displays, Ms. Temple said.

Federal Trade Commission figures show the tobacco companies spent $2.58 billion on advertising and promotions in 1987, including $413.5 million on advertising in newspapers and magazines.

A recent study by a group of advertisers, media companies and advertising agencies said that by 1993, a ban on tobacco advertising could drive 165 magazines, or 1.3 percent of the projected total of 12,490, and 12 newspapers, or 0.8 percent of the projected total of 1,506, out of business.

Prices would have to rise to compensate for lost ad revenue.

U.S. tobacco companies muscle in on foreign markets

Associated Press

Long banned from American airwaves, the Marlboro Man still gallops across television screens in the Philippines and other developing countries where U.S. tobacco companies are selling more cigarettes than ever and lung-cancer rates are soaring.

As the market shrinks at home, the U.S. government is helping American tobacco companies invade foreign markets, particularly along the booming Pacific Rim.

In Thailand, where 65 percent of men over 20 smoke, the U.S. Trade Office is threatening sanctions unless import taxes and other barriers to American cigarettes are lowered.

Health groups from nine Asian countries sent a letter to President Bush last year calling the threat "a mockery of your country's efforts to curb the export of other addictive drugs into your country."

Billboards for Marlboro and Winston are common in Bangkok, despite a year-old law prohibiting all cigarette advertising. Thai health officials fear opening the door to U.S. tobacco interests, as South Korea, Japan and Taiwan did four years ago, could mean a sharp increase in the number of teen-age and female smokers.

"My bottom line is anti-smoking," said Dr. Prakit Vatee-Satokit of the Thai Anti-Smoking Campaign Project. "I don't care if it's Thai or American cigarettes. I see people die of smoking every day."

In Hong Kong, where American cigarettes dominate 70 percent of the market, lung-cancer deaths increased 58 percent in the last decade and the number of teen-age smokers is on the rise. Taiwanese anti-smoking advocates say 85 percent of young smokers, whose ranks are being filled through American hard-sell, prefer imports.

Smoking — and lung-cancer deaths — are declining overall in some Western European countries where health concerns mirror those in the United States.

In Britain, the heaviest smokers are blue-collar workers and people in their 20s, but the number of teen-age smokers is dropping. They were the target of the government Health Education Authority's recent $16.5 million no-smoking campaign and an anti-smoking group called Parents Against Tobacco.

Young adults also are Italy's most avid smokers, although smoking is declining overall. The most recent statistics say 29 percent of Italians smoked in 1986, down from 35 percent in 1980.

The warning "Smoking is dangerous to your health" is printed on all cigarette packs sold in Argentina and Uruguay, but surveys say 68 percent of all men in Uruguay and 32 percent of women smoke.

About 60 percent of the population of Japan smokes, and the admonition "Be careful not to smoke too much for your health" in barely visible print on cigarette packs does little to counteract the impact of television advertising. Foreign actors such as James Coburn and Roger Moore appear in ads promoting a glamorous image for smoking, and Japanese cigarette companies have taken a cue from their American counterparts by creating products for specific groups, such as a brand for teen-agers called Dean after the late actor James Dean, a hero among Japanese youth.

Anti-smoking efforts have fared poorly in Japan, South Korea and China, where 250 million smokers follow their leaders puffing Panda and other domestic brands.

An official Czechoslovakian anti-smoking campaign called "Chance For 3 Million" — a reference to the number of babies expected to be born in that country in the next decade — appeared to put a damper on smoking for the first half of 1989. But smoking is on the rise again, and the Health Ministry now calls the campaign a failure.

A prayer to the Holy Spirit. You who made me see everything & showed me the way to reach my ideal. You who gave me the divine gift to forgive & forget the wrong that is done to me. And You who are in all my instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be, I want to be with You, and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. Amen. Persons must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish. After the 3rd day, your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may seem to be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as favor is granted. C.C.M.C.

FENCE YOURSELF IN

Just like a frame sets off a picture, fences show off your home to its best advantage. They help keep children and pets from wandering and make your home more private. But above all, they beautify your property as well as your neighbor's. So go ahead and fence yourself in. This plan offers a fence for every function. The entire story is there, from digging the post holes to hanging the gate.
