Arms control talks end on 'bitter' note

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

VIENNA, Austria — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze ended arms control talks today in sharp disagreement over "Star Wars" and ways to reduce superpower nuclear arsenals.

After five hours of meetings with Shevardnadze over two days, Shultz told reporters: "I can't say the meetings have moved us along in any significant way, and I regret this."

Shevardnadze said he departed with a "bitter taste" and accused the United States of retreating from positions agreed to at the Oct. 11-12 summit in Reykjavik, Iceland.

Speaking to reporters at Schwechat Airport before leaving for Moscow, Shevardnadze said the Soviets would submit further arms control proposals at the Geneva talks Friday. He did not elaborate.

The two men met for nearly two hours this morning at the Soviet Embassy, after holding three hours of talks Wednesday night at the U.S. Embassy. In addition, U.S. and Soviet arms control experts held a three-hour working session that ran into the early hours of today.

In the only apparent glimmer of progress, Shevardnadze agreed to consider a proposal by Shultz that U.S. and Soviet experts meet when regular U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations in Geneva are in recess. The current round winds up next week and talks are not scheduled to resume until January.

Shevardnadze said the arms control positions conveyed by Shultz "represent a mixed bag of old mothballed views and approaches.

"One cannot avoid the impression that our partners (the Americans) wished to forget Reykjavik as soon as possible," he said, speaking through a translator.

The Reykjavik summit ended in deadlock after President Reagan rejected Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's demand for restrictions on the U.S. space-based anti-missile program, formally called the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"Though the conversations left us with a bitter taste, we do not lose hope that sooner or later leaders in Washington will understand: There is no way back, we have to advance forward toward a complete elimination of nuclear weapons," the Soviet minister said.

The Soviets insist that a tentative understanding on ridding the world of all nuclear arms was reached at Reykjavik. The Americans say only elimination of ballistic missiles was seriously discussed.

Shultz, speaking to reporters at a downtown hotel, said the United States had come to Vienna "prepared to move forward" but the Soviets were intent on crippling Star Wars.

"If that is their purpose, it is not going to work," he said, but added, "We'll keep at it. There's a chance in the end we'll get there. ... The pace cannot be forced by either party."

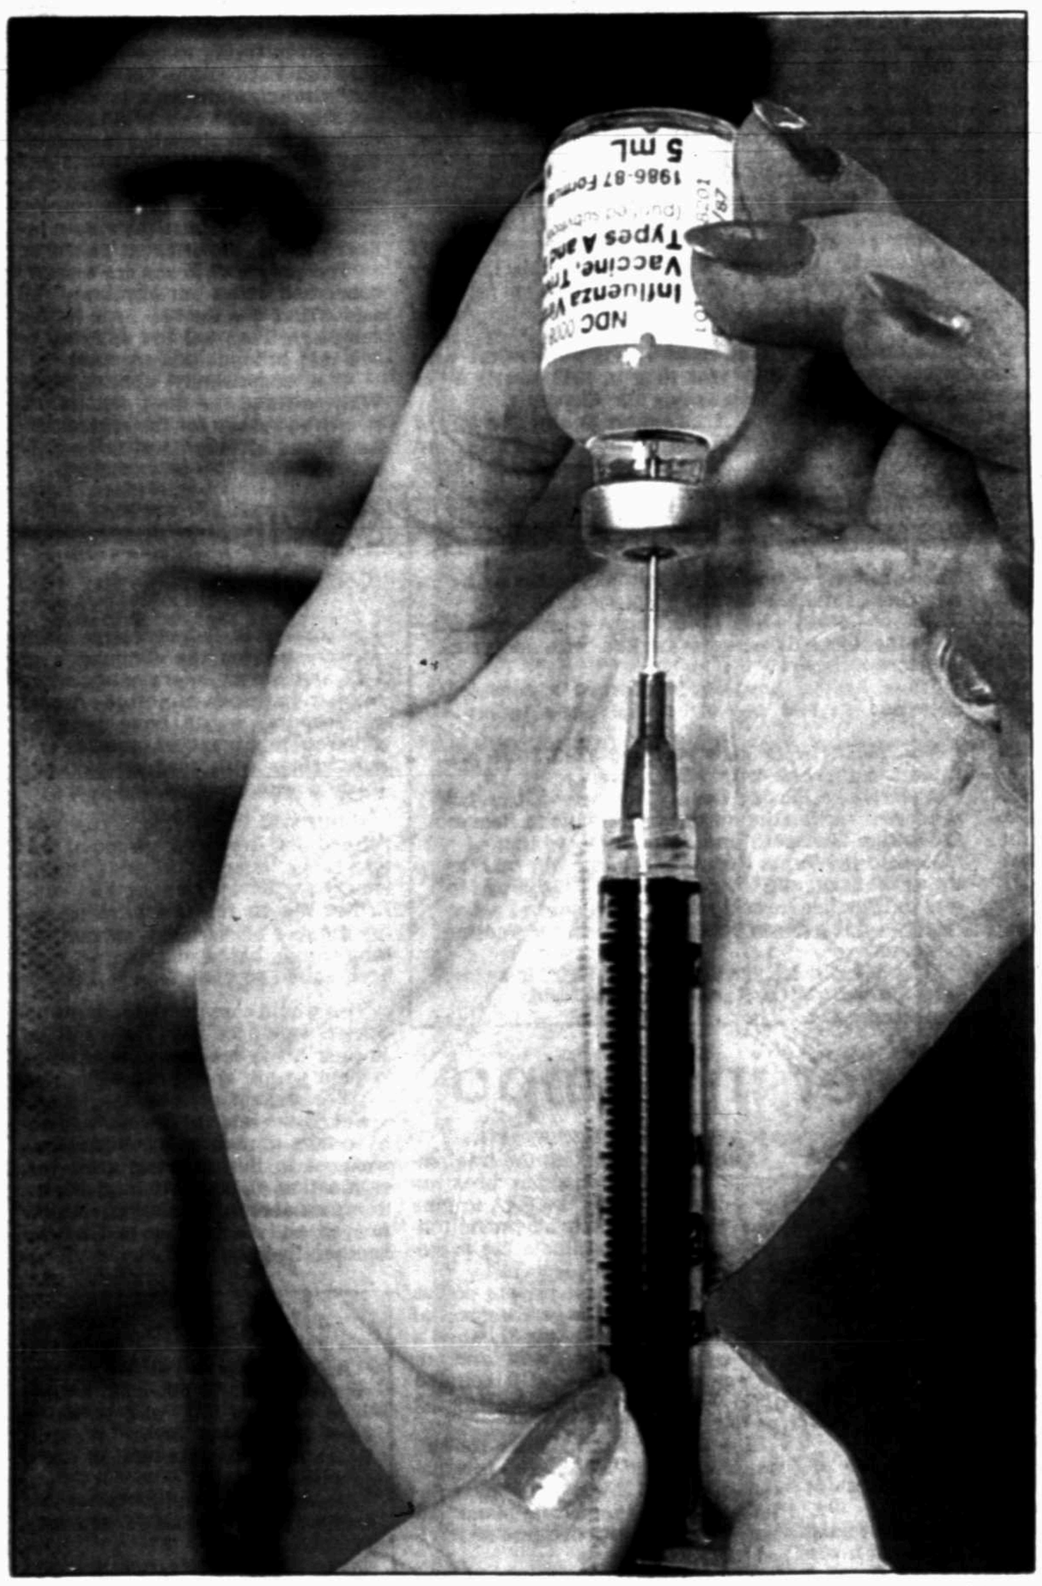

Shevardnadze also held out hope of an upswing in the future, saying, "Reykjavik has made such a deep trace that it cannot be deleted."

Chief U.S. arms negotiator Max Kampelman, who accompanied Shultz, said today on NBC-TV's "Today" program that Shultz and Shevardnadze would meet again, although no date was set.

He said it would be "over-dramatic" to describe the talks as a failure, and insisted, "We have not retreated from our positions in Reykjavik."

Shultz said the two sides disagreed on all three areas of nuclear weapons control — long-range missiles, intermediate-range missiles in Europe and space-based defenses — and on nuclear tests and methods of verifying compliance with past agreements.

Light identified as Soviet rocket

Associated Press

A Soviet rocket booster fell into the atmosphere late Wednesday as a multi-colored fireball that blazed hundreds of miles across the Western sky as a startling string of lights, officials and witnesses said.

"It looked like 100 stars all falling together — it was moving very fast and appeared to be like a comet with bright debris falling off it," said Adrienne Berry at McCarran International Airport in Las Vegas, Nev.

"The United States' space command at Cheyenne Mountain reports that a Soviet rocket body used to launch a satellite reentered the earth's atmosphere at 9:11 p.m. tonight over the western United States," said Air Force Lt. Col. Chuck Wood at the North American Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The lights were reported from El Paso, Texas; Carson City and Las Vegas, Nev.; Phoenix, Ariz.; the Southern California desert and San Diego.

The craft, which NORAD had monitored on its route back to Earth, burned up on re-entry into the atmosphere, he said. NORAD generally tracks such objects, but cannot tell precisely when, and therefore where, they will come down.

"Ground and satellite systems all over the world had given indications that the rocket was due down this week," Wood said. The rocket was launched on Sept. 5, he said, but he did not know from where.

The falling satellite had a north-to-south trajectory, said astronomer Sam Barden at Kitt Peak Observatory in Tucson, Ariz.

Ms. Berry said she and other controllers spotted the fireball about 8:10 p.m. "I've never seen anything like it," she said, adding that it lasted about 45 seconds. "It was a string of lights with a Milky Way effect."

"It almost looked like a sparkler going down," said San Bernardino County sheriff's Deputy Fred Wegner in Needles. "It appeared to have a smoke trail.... When we first saw it, it was so big we figured it was right here over us."

Will state pay judges' phone bills?

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midland County is trying to get the state to pay about $20,000 worth of phone and postage bills.

But the state is reluctant to shell out the money, and County Attorney Mark Dettman is requesting an Attorney General's opinion to interpret a state statute.

Dettman contends a Texas Revised Civil Statute makes the state liable for the telegraph, telephone and postage expenses of district judges and district attorneys.

"I'm always looking for ways to save money. The state's always dumping things on the county. We don't want them to make us pay for anything else," Dettman said.

But the Comptroller of Public Accounts contends the state only has to pay the phone and postage expenses of judges and district attorneys who work in more than one county.

Melvin Sobotik, supervisor of the comptroller's travel judiciary section in Austin said, "The way we interpret the appropriation bill is it has to be multi-county."

Several county attorneys have tired to get the state to pay their district attorneys' and district judges' phone expenses, but no one has taken it as far as seeking an attorney general's opinion, Sobotik said.

Sam Clonts, executive director of the Texas Association of Counties said more and more counties are making similar requests to the state.

Eighteen killed, 27 missing after North Sea copter crash

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — A helicopter flying from an offshore oil rig with 47 people aboard crashed and sank today in the icy North Sea off the Shetland Islands, and Shell Oil Co. said 18 bodies were recovered and 27 people were missing.

Two survivors were plucked from the sea moments after the twin-rotor Chinook went down north of Scotland. Helicopters, ships and fishing vessels searched the crash site for survivors, fighting strong winds and 12-foot-high waves.

Shell, in a statement from Aberdeen, said no other survivors had been found nearly three hours after the crash.

"It is with regret that we confirm that at present 27 passengers and crew are still missing," the Shell statement said. "Eighteen bodies have been recovered from the sea and two survivors have been taken to the Gilbert Bain Hospital in Lerwick," the capital of the Shetlands.

The Chinook carrying 44 passengers and three crew crashed at 11:38 a.m. (6:38 a.m. EST) two miles off Sumburgh Head, the southern tip of the Shetlands, the Royal Air Force reported. It was ferrying Shell oil workers from the Brent offshore field 135 miles northeast of the Shetlands to Sumburgh airport.

Sumburgh lighthouse keeper Doug Dale said he could see bodies bobbing up in the waves from his post four miles from the crash scene.

"It looks as if the helicopter has broken up beneath the water and bodies are gradually being released from the wreckage," said Dale.

"I have already seen five bodies being winched up by helicopter, and there are more in the water," he said. "There is an area of about 500 square yards and you can see bodies floating about everywhere. It is a terrible scene."

The two survivors, a passenger and a crew member, were suffering from back injuries and exposure, said David March, spokesman for the 10-bed Gilbert Bain Hospital. "They are very cold and their temperature is down but they are in good shape and will pull through," he said.

March said he was putting extra beds in the corridors of his hospital in case other survivors were brought in. He said another survivor was believed picked up by a fishing vessel, but that report could not be reconciled immediately with the Shell statement.

Mark White waited for votes that never came

By STEVE LEVINE
and JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Television stations across the state faded out from Bill Clements' victory speech and opened up on Mark White headquarters. All three networks had called the election for Clements, but White stubbornly held out hope.

Rather than offer his concession statement for the 10 o'clock news, White sent a half dozen stand-ins to face the sea of TV cameras.

"I still say it's too early to tell," former aide John Odam told the audience watching from Dallas.

"It ain't over 'till it's over," fundraiser Joe Bill Watkins said into a radio microphone.

"We just have to hope at this point that we have a very, very strong vote in South Texas," campaign spokesman Mark McKinnon told reporters.

Mark White — the man who had never lost an election, the premier Texas politician with national stars in his eyes — waited one more hour for the South Texas vote to come in like it did in 1982. It didn't.

That's just one of the reasons White lost a bitter race to the Republican governor he had swept from office four years earlier. But it wasn't just the Rio Grande Valley. It was yellow-dog-Democrat East Texas. It was arrow-straight Republican Midland and Odessa. It was a turncoat Fort Worth. It was the teachers and the unions. It was the rain.

FBI probing Reeves County voting irregularities

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Federal Bureau of Investigation said today it is investigating alleged voting irregularities in Reeves County after Tuesday's general election.

But a spokeswoman for State Rep. Larry Don Shaw said the investigation does not pertain to Shaw's narrow victory over Republican challenger J.R. "Rich" Anderson.

Final results show Shaw, D-Big Spring, winning the 69th District race by 724 votes, or less than 3 percent. Shaw received 12,849 to Anderson's 12,125 votes.

FBI Special Agent Earl Harris said the agency is "investigating possible voting improprieties in Pecos in Reeves County."

Harris declined to disclose details of the investigation.

An Analysis

White went from winning by 230,000 votes to losing by the same margin. In short, everything Mark White did right in 1982 he did all wrong in 1986.

Some examples:

— White swept the 30-county, East Texas region with more than 60 percent of the vote in 1982. Clements squeaked out a 51-49 victory Tuesday. White supporters rightly fretted when heavy rains hit the area just as many voters would have left work and gone to the polls. Only 44 percent of the 720,000 registered voters cast ballots this year compared to nearly 47 percent in 1982.

Clements believes states economy made difference

DALLAS (AP) — A jubiliant Bill Clements said Wednesday the downtrodden Texas economy helped him recapture the governor's job from Democrat Mark White, who ousted him in an upset four years ago.

But the economy apparently didn't hurt Democrats in other state offices where incumbents maintained their stronghold, nor in the state's 27-member congressional delegation where all incumbents of both parties were re-elected.

"There's only one answer to the race. I think that Texans, the people of Texas, are concerned about our economy. That was the difference. They want something done about this economy of ours," Clements said at a news conference in Austin the morning after ousting White, who recently raised taxes.

With 99.8 percent of the vote in, Clements had 1,804,065 votes, or 52.7 percent, to 1,575,740 votes, or 46 percent, for White. A third candidate, Libertarian Theresa Doyle of San Antonio, polled only 42,346 votes, or 1.23 percent.

THE STATE ELECTED its first Hispanic to statewide office, giving Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez, who was appointed to the bench by White two years ago, the nod for a full term on the nine-member court.

Voters in the 12th congressional district elected incumbent Democratic U.S. Rep. Jim Wright to a 17th term, virtually assuring Wright of becoming speaker of the House, succeeding Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill.

Wright declared that his likely rise to House speaker, combined with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's upcoming chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee, means a return to the days not unlike those when Lyndon Johnson and Sam Rayburn helped run Congress.

Four state constitutional amendments passed, including one that allows branch banking, whose supporters say will make life easier for both banks and consumers.

THE GUBERNATORIAL CAMPAIGN was marked by bitter rhetoric, harsh campaign advertising and an electronic bug reported found in the office of a Clements adviser. Both campaign staffs were cleared of any wrongdoing by investigators in the bugging case.

The devastated oil market sent the once-booming state economy into a tailspin. White, trying to portray himself as a tough-minded decision-maker, urged state legislators to approve a tax hike and "blame me."

Some White campaign officials speculated later that perhaps the voters did blame him.

In congressional races, Democrats won 17 seats in the state's 27-member delegation, returning seven unopposed U.S. House members and 10 incumbents in contested races.

The Republicans won 10 contests, holding on to several of the seats gained on the coattails of Ronald Reagan's 1984 victory.

AT THE STATE LEVEL, Texas found itself with two top office-holders from different political parties, as it did in 1978 when Clements first was elected.

Fourteen-year veteran Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat, won more than 60 percent of the vote to easily defeat GOP business consultant David Davidson of Austin and Libertarian candidate Bill Howell of Dallas.

Incumbent Attorney General Jim Mattox dashed Republican San Antonio district judge Roy Barrera Jr.'s hopes, even though Mattox's victory of less than 52 percent was far smaller than he had expected.

In the land commissioner's race, incumbent Democrat Garry Mauro, trounced Republican M.D. Anderson and Libertarian Honey Sue Lanham of Austin with more than 61 percent of the vote.

One-term agriculture commissioner Jim Hightower sailed to victory with more than 60 percent of the vote, defeating Republican Bill Powers of Austin and Libertarian Rebecca Reed, a university student in San Antonio.

State Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, was elected to the Texas Railroad Commission with 55 percent, besting Republican state Rep. Milton Fox of Houston and Libertarian candidate Chloe "Jack" Daniels of Farmers Branch.

State treasurer Ann Richards and comptroller Bob Bullock, both Democrats who faced token opposition from Libertarian candidates, won easy victories of more than 90 percent in each race.

In the Texas Supreme Court races, all three justices who faced opposition were re-elected to the Democratic-controlled court, including Gonzalez. James Wallace and Gonzalez defeated Republican challengers, while Robert Campbell handily beat his Libertarian opponent.

Democratic state Sen. Oscar Mauzy won election to a vacant seat on the court, beating challenger Charles Ben Howell, an appeals court justice.

UNOPPOSED FOR SEATS on the Court of Criminal Appeals were Rusty Duncan and Justices Marvin O. Teague and Mike McCormick, all Democrats.

In the 21st congressional district, the only one without an incumbent running, Republican former Bexar County Commissioner Lamar Smith beat former state Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland. The post was vacated when Tom Loeffler made his unsuccessful run for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

In contested races with major party candidates, Democratic incumbents Ralph Hall of Rockwall, John Bryant of Dallas, Jack Brooks of Beaumont, Jake Pickle of Austin, Ron Coleman of El Paso and Martin Frost of Dallas whipped GOP contenders, while Mickey Leland of Houston beat a Libertarian opponent.

Republican incumbents Dick Armey of Denton, Tom DeLay of Sugar Land, Beau Boulter of Amarillo, Larry Combest of Lubbock, Jack Fields of Humble and Steve Bartlett of Dallas beat their challengers.

Freshman Republican Joe Barton of Ennis barely pulled out a victory from Fort Worth lawyer Pete Geren, and freshman Rep. Mac Sweeney of Wharton eked out a win over West Columbia lawyer Greg Laughlin.

In legislative races, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, beat GOP challenger K. Wayne Lee.

In the constitutional amendment election, voters said yes overwhelmingly to branch banking, as well as three other amendments. Those amendments will change the Legislature's subject caption requirement on legislative bills, grant some mutual insurance companies permission to sell policies to political subdivisions, and allow counties to value certain railroad equipment for tax purposes.

In other races around the state, voters chose a conscientious objector over an ex-Green Beret war hero for Travis County judge, and re-elected incumbent District Attorney Vic Feazell of Waco.

STATE

— The South Texas vote hurt and hurt hard. Turnout dropped from 1982 and many of those who came to the polls pulled Clements' lever. In heavily Hispanic Nueces and Hidalgo counties alone, White lost more than 11,000 votes from his 1982 margin.

Clements' strategist Karl Rove credited GOP attorney general candidate Roy Barrera Jr. for some of the difference. And he was right. Barrera outpolled incumbent Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox by 18,000 votes in the 37-county region.

— Where Clements barely won in conservative West Texas and the Panhandle four years ago, he clobbered White by 54,000 votes — a 61-49 margin — Tuesday. He picked up 9,800 votes in Amarillo, 7,200 in Odessa, 4,300 in Lubbock and 1,200 in Midland.

Bouyed by Democratic Congressman Ron Coleman's hard fought race in El Paso, White picked up 5,000 votes — actually Clements lost them all — in the border city. But hoped-for help from Democratic congressional candidate Pete Snelson of Midland never materialized. Snelson, in fact, lost his home county by 2,700 votes.

— White's only bright spot came in three heavily unionized counties along the Gulf Coast. He carried Jefferson, Orange and Galveston counties handily. But not handily enough, as he lost 36,000 votes from his 1982 margin there.

Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard said union members went to the polls and voted Democratic, in down-ballot races. "It was just a lack of interest over White," Hubbard said. "You heard things like, 'He's making me wear a seatbelt,' and 'He made me pay $20 more for my license for my cattle trailer.'"

Like union members, Texas teachers worked overtime for White in 1982. Like union members, they couldn't get excited about him this time around. "There's a decided contrast," said Jim Butler, executive director of the Texas State Teachers Association. "There wasn't much enthusiasm in the candidate."

— Ironically, the GOP may have helped Clements by fielding a week opponent against Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. In the Democratic sweep of 1982, Hobby fought hard to trounce George Strake and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen pulled out all the stops against Jim Collins. The Bentsen-Hobby machine, fueled by a massive volunteer effort from teachers and union members, literally carried Democratic voters to the polls in 1982. That machine sat idle Tuesday.

— White won again in Houston and San Antonio — as he did four years ago — but lost 35,600 votes from his 1982 margin. Clements won again in Dallas, picking up 21,000 extra along the way. Fort Worth flipped, turning a 4,200-vote White victory to a 19,900-vote loss for the incumbent.

Clements' strategist Rove said his troops worried that a strong get-out-the-vote effort by Democratic U.S. Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth would hurt Clements. But Rove perked up when early results showed Clements running strong there, despite a strong performances by local Democrats.

And in strongly Democratic Austin, popular Congressman J.J. "Jake" Pickle beat former Austin Mayor Carole Rylander by almost 3-to-1, largely because of the veteran lawmakers' success in getting Democrats to the polls. Even with Pickle's help, White's margin declined by 28,000 votes from four years ago.

— In the rapidly growing Austin suburbs in Williamson County, one-third more voters went to the polls this year than in 1982, nearly all of them voting for Clements.

— Even Fannin County, the soul of the Texas Democratic Party and birthplace of long-time U.S. House Speaker Sam Rayburn and White campaign manager Dwayne Holman, went for Clements. Turnout dropped by 1,400 votes, and those who did vote gave Clements a 152-vote victory.

— Like most other southern Democrats, White needed the minority vote to win. Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said White's over-eager approach cost him dearly among whites — and blacks and browns.

"In the last week, Mark White started to see his support among minorities go soft, and he went further than I've ever seen anyone in our state go in trying to use fear to get that vote back and to peak its interest," Gramm said. "As it turned out, not only did that clearly alienate everybody else, it alienated the minorities themselves."

— Clements refused to delve into the nuts and bolts of his victory, maintaining only that the voters believed in his jobs-oriented platform.

"The people of Texas are terribly concerned about our economy," he said. "That was the one issue in this campaign. That was the unifying issue that brought this together."

— A surprisingly upbeat Mark White offered the most concise answer when asked for the critical factor behind his loss. "Just not nearly enough votes," he said, smiling.

SHAW

"The investigation does not directly affect the (Shaw-Anderson) race, but indirectly it does," said Jack Brewer, spokesman for the Reeves County District Attorney's office.

Brewer said the agency, U.S. Postal Service and FBI began inquiring into possible election fraud last week.

"We don't have evidence of any change in the outcome of the election," Brewer said. "We have evidence of ballot contamination which would influence the voter count of every candidate on the ballot including the governor's race down to the JP races."

Shaw said his understanding of the voting irregularities in Reeves County concerned 44 absentee ballots.

He said he has been aware of the investigation since absentee voting began, but added that he has not been contacted by the FBI.

Reeves County Clerk Catherine Ashley said 44 of the absentee ballots were marked with incorrect precinct numbers.

Those ballots, however, concerned a constable race and "would not affect the Shaw-Anderson race."

Mrs. Ashley said Shaw received 3,012 votes and Anderson finished with 1,329 votes.

Anderson, a Borden County rancher, said he has requested verification of the vote counts in Reeves, Culberson, Hudspeth and Jeff Davis counties.

He said the Texas Republican Party will conduct the verification and the results will be deciding factors on whether he will request a recount of votes.

Shaw said he doesn't blame Anderson for wanting a recount.

"That is really his privilege and his right. In a close race I would do the same thing," he said.

SOVIET

At Reykjavik, tentative agreement was reached on the elimination of U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear warheads in Europe. Another proposal would have reduced globe-circling bombers, missiles and submarines with nuclear payloads by 50 percent within five years.

Shultz said the United States had refined its Reykjavik proposal on long-range weapons to allow more leeway for Soviet systems, and confirmed reports that a sub-ceiling on the number of warheads carried by long-range ballistic missiles had been raised to 4,800 from 4,500.

This would ease the reductions the Soviets would be required to make in their heavy land-based missiles to remain within an overall ceiling of 6,000 on strategic warheads by 1991.

But Shultz said the Soviets wanted to retain a monopoly on nuclear weapons in Europe, even after the elimination of both U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles, which Reagan and Gorbachev had set as another five-year goal.

Small plane his jetliner in Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A twin-engine aircraft hit a Pan American World Airways jet on a fog-shrouded airport taxiway today and burst into flames, killing the lone occupant of the small plane, officials said.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman reported no injuries among the 23 people on the Pan Am Boeing 727, but Paul McAlester of the Hillsborough County Aviation Authority reported four people suffered minor bumps and bruises.

MacAlester said Pan Am Flight 301 to Miami was taxiing for a takeoff from Tampa International Airport at 7:05 a.m. when the twin-engine Piper Aztec crashed into it.

"The Pan Am aircraft was struck head-on by a small twin-engine aircraft apparently trying to land on the runway," said MacAlester. "But instead of being lined up with the runway, it appears the small aircraft was lined up with the taxiway."

The commercial craft's occupants were fortunate that the small plane struck just below and to the right of the nose, then slid underneath and beyond the jet before exploding and bursting into flame, said MacAlester.

The small plane could have carried up to seven people. Its flight plan and the name of its pilot were not immediately diclosed.

The 17 passengers, three flight attendants and the three-member flight crew on the jetliner were taken back to the terminal immediately after the accident, FAA spokesman John Whiteside said. FAA spokeswoman Joanne Sloan said in Washington that the passengers were evacuated by emergency chutes.

The taxiway borders runway 36L, a lighted, north-south landing strip at the regional airport.

Whiteside said visibility at the airport was limited to one-sixteenth of a mile in heavy fog.

The National Transportation Safety Board dispatched a team of investigators to Tampa.

The collision occurred amid increased concern among aviation safety experts about both a higher incidence of on-the-ground accidents at the nation's airports and the dangers posed by the mingling of private and large commercial planes.

The NTSB earlier this year concluded a special study of ground airport accidents prompted by several incidents, including one in which two jetliners almost collided at Minneapolis.

The board found that the frequency of such incidents has been increasing and urged the FAA to take new measures to help air traffic controllers better coordinate the movement of planes at airports.

The concern about private planes interferring with large commercial jets came into focus Aug. 31, when a single-engine Piper PA-28 and an Aeromexico Airlines DC-9 collided over Cerritos, Calif., killing 82 people.

The jetliner was making a routine approach to the Los Angeles International Airport. Investigators have determined that the private plane had improperly encroached into restricted airspace.

The worst plane disaster in history was the collision of two jets on the ground during a fog. A total of 582 people died March 27, 1977, when Boeing 747s operated by Pan Am and KLM collided at the airport on Tenerife in Spain's Canary Islands.

On Dec. 7, 1983, an Iberia Boeing 727 and an Aviaco DC-9 collided on a fog-shrouded runway at Madrid's Barajas Airport, killing all 42 aboard the DC-9 and 52 aboard the 727. Aviaco is Spain's internal domestic airline.

In Wednesday's edition it was reported that Republican Keith Jobe received 782 votes in Precinct 308 in his Justice of the Peace race. His vote total in that precinct was 152.

He defeated Aquilla Watson, a Democrat, in Tuesday's general election.

54-year-old Texas man killed in Kansas plane crash

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP) — A 54-year-old Texas man was killed in the crash Wednesday night of his twin-engine Cessna 310 at Liberal in extreme southwestern Kansas.

The Kansas Highway Patrol said the crash occurred around 9 p.m. just moments after pilot Glen Lemon of Perryton, Texas had taken off from the Liberal airport on the west edge of Liberal.

Witnesses told officers the aircraft appeared to stall and then plunged nose down to the ground near the south end of the runway.

The patrol said the aircraft exploded and burned on impact. There were no passengers aboard the aircraft.

There was no immediate indication of where Lemon began his flight or where he was heading.

"That's probably coming to the forefront right now when everybody's strapped for funds," he said.

"I think there is more concern about who should pay what. Whereas before, counties may have been more willing to pay even though they may have not been mandated to," Clonts said.

Before the attorney general's office makes an opinion, they have requested briefs from the comptroller's office, the Texas Association of Counties and the District & County Attorneys Association.

The attorney general opinion request was filed on Sept. 12, but Dettman said it could take up to year before an opinion is issued.

The statute was designed to help counties out so they do not have to absorb the complete costs of the district judge and district attorney offices, Sobotik said.

Dettman said he wouldn't be surprised if the attorney general's office rules in the state's favor.

"The statutes are quite clear that they have to, but the state doesn't have any extra money either and the attorney general represents the comptroller's office," Dettman said.

If the attorney general does not issue an opinion making the state pay for the county's phone and postage expenses, Dettman said the commissioners could then sue the state.

Cargo plane shot down part of 'secret' White House-initiated plan

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The C-123K cargo plane shot down a month ago while flying supplies to Nicaraguan Contra rebels was part of a secret White House-initiated program that relied on ex-intelligence operatives to circumvent a ban on U.S. military aid, according to sources involved in the effort.

The White House operation began in early 1984 when President Reagan approved a plan to replace CIA assistance to the rebels with help from Americans outside the government and from U.S. military allies, current and former administration officials and Contra leaders say.

The operation has come in for renewed attention now that Eugene Hasenfus, the C-123K's cargo handler who parachuted from the plane and was captured, has been put on trial in Managua.

Although aspects of the White House program had been disclosed previously, the Oct. 5 crash of the arms-laden aircraft in southern Nicaragua revealed a previously secret supply network using American pilots and operating out of El Salvador's military airfield at Ilopango.

Sources both inside the supply network and the administration said U.S. officials played at least a supporting role in the operation — placing the ex-CIA operative who directed the flights at Ilopango and helping to coordinate the flow of supplies. The sources discussed the U.S. role only on condition they not be named.

Administration officials have denied responsibility for the flight and professed ignorance about who was behind it.

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin America, told Congress last month that it would be "inappropriate" to investigate the supply operation, which he described as a "private initiative...not organized, directed or financed by the U.S. government."

House and Senate intelligence committees have begun examining the supply flights to see if the alleged White House ties constituted a violation of a two-year congressional ban on the U.S. government providing military assistance to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

According to a report prepared by a private arms dealer in the supply network, Felix Rodriguez, a former CIA operative who uses the pseudonym Max Gomez, was placed at El Salvador's Ilopango military airfield by Donald Gregg, Vice President George Bush's national security adviser, and Nestor Sanchez, a senior Pentagon official in charge of Central American military aid programs.

The report said Rodriguez had regular contact with Bush's office. Bush, who was CIA director in 1976, and Gregg, who was a top executive at the spy agency, have acknowledged meeting with Rodriguez but deny directing the supply operation.

Hasenfus has said he believed he was part of a covert operation mounted by the U.S. government and directed by two Cuban-Americans, whom he knew as Max Gomez and Ramon Medina and thought worked for the CIA.

Hasenfus said he was recruited for the operation by William Cooper, who was killed in the crash. Cooper and Hasenfus worked for the CIA-owned Air America during the Vietnam War. Wallace B. Sawyer Jr., the co-pilot who died in the plane, worked at least until April for Southern Air Transport of Miami, a former CIA-owned company.

Flight logs kept by Sawyer showed him flying Southern Air planes into Central America as well as other cargo planes into the U.S.-built Contra airfield at Aguacate in Honduras. According to Pentagon records, Southern Air has emerged as a leading contractor flying logistical supplies for the Defense Department since 1983.

Salvadoran telephone bills also show repeated calls in September from a safe house used by the supply network to White House phones used by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a deputy director for political-military affairs on President Reagan's National Security Council.

Through a spokesman, North said that "to his knowledge, (he) has never received any phone calls from the safe houses." But a source close to North said he would not necessarily have known where calls were coming from. Another source said North helped "facilitate" the flow of supplies if the private network encountered problems.

For the past several years, North has overseen U.S. support for the Contras and, according to current and former administration officials, prepared a three-page plan in early 1984 for enlisting private Americans and third countries to aid the Contras in the face of a congressional cutoff.

According to those sources, then-national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane outlined the plan orally to Reagan and received the president's approval. The plan then fell to North to implement, the sources said.

Edgar Chamorro, then one of eight directors of the rebels' Nicaraguan Democratic Force, FDN, said that in early 1984, North assured the FDN "of continued United States government support, notwithstanding the refusal of the Congress to appropriate more funds," according to Chamorro's sworn affidavit provided to the World Court after Nicaragua accused the United States of violating international law.

Rebels plan clandestine radio messages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nicaraguan rebels plan to begin clandestine AM radio broadcasts to their homeland soon to provide the Nicaraguan people with an alternate point of view, according to an insurgent leader.

Ernesto Palazio, head of the United Nicaraguan Opposition office in Washington, said Wednesday there has been no independent media outlet in Nicaragua since the Sandinista government shut down the opposition newspaper La Prensa last summer.

The new station will be called Radio Liberacion and will supplement a short wave radio operation the Contras have been operating, he said.

It represents an "objective and serious effort" to enhance the political credibility of the rebel movement, he said.

He declined to say from where the broadcasts will originate or the source of the station's financing. He said only that the $100 million approved by Congress recently for the rebels will not be used to operate the station.

Asked about the rebel plan, State Department press officer Pete Martinez declined comment Wednesday except to confirm that the Contras are preparing such an operation.

The station's programming will consist of news, commentary and music — much like the Voice of America's Radio Marti broadcasts to Cuba. Palazio said Contra officials responsible for making arrangements for the operation have been getting ideas by listening to Radio Marti.

The station's signal will be powerful enough to reach virtually all of Nicaragua and some programming will be targeted for the Miskito Indian population in eastern Nicaragua, where resistance to the revolution has been widespread.

If the Sandinistas try to jam the station, Palazio said, "we are prepared to take counter-measures."

The staff, he said, will be drawn in part from independent stations that used to operate during the government of Anastasio Somoza, who was ousted by the Sandinistas in 1979.

Beech-Nut charged with selling sugar-water as apple juice

NEW YORK (AP) — Beech-Nut and two company officers have been charged with selling sugar-water as apple juice for babies to avoid losing $3.5 million the company spent on concentrate it knew was bogus, authorities say.

Beech-Nut Nutrition Corp. was indicted Wednesday on 470 counts of conspiracy, mail fraud and violations of the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. President and chief executive officer Neils L. Hoyvald and John F. Lavery, vice president for manufacturing, and four other people were indicted on conspiracy and food and drug violations.

The Fort Washington, Pa.-based company sold millions of bottles of apple-flavored sugar water labeled as pure apple juice to avoid losing $3.5 million it spent on what it knew was phony concentrate, the indictment said.

Beech-Nut blamed suppliers for misrepresenting the concentrate and said in a statement that it was not able to detect the counterfeit juice at the time.

"The issues in the federal case are technical and hinge on whether or not the Beech-Nut employees had sufficient knowledge about the supplier's product," the statement said.

The counterfeit juice, sold from 1978 to 1983, was not believed to be a health hazard and no more is on the market, said U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney, "I understand it looked like apple juice, tasted like apple juice and it may have done nutritionally many of the things that apple juice does, but it wasn't apple juice."

The adulterated concentrate was made from beet sugar, malic acid, apple flavor, caramel color, corn syrup and cane sugar syrup but was sold in bottles labeled "100 percent apple juice," Maloney said.

Maloney said Hoyvald and Lavery learned from government food inspectors and their own employees in the summer of 1982 that the concentrate was phony but continued to sell it.

To avoid a potential loss of $3.5 million if the phony concentrate were seized, on Aug. 12, 1982, they allegedly ordered 25,000 cases shipped in nine trucks from the company's Canajoharie warehouse in western New York to another warehouse in Secaucus, N.J., the indictment said.

On Sept. 1, 1982, the concentrate was moved to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and elsewhere and sold, the indictment said.

The company shipped the phony juice to 20 states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and five foreign countries, it said.

Hoyvald and Lavery denied the charges, the company said. Company attorney John S. Martin had no other comment.

The indictment also charged Zeev Kaplansky, former president of Universal Juice Co. which, along with two other companies he operated out of Riverdale, allegedly sold large quantities of bogus concentrate to Beech-Nut.

Crippen takes NASA post as astronauts gain power

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's appointment of veteran shuttle commander Robert Crippen to the new post of deputy director of the space shuttle program is the latest step toward giving astronauts more management power.

The space agency on Wednesday also announced the appointment of Arnold Aldrich, one of the officials involved in the decision to launch Challenger on Jan. 28, to be shuttle program director at NASA headquarters.

Aldrich essentially will be performing the same duties he did as shuttle manager at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. But in Washington, he will have greater authority and under the management restructuring announced Wednesday, he will have clearer lines of communications to the agency's field centers.

The announcement was made by Rear Adm. Richard H. Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight.

Crippen, who has flown four shuttle missions, and Truly, who has flown two, are among four astronauts named to high-level positions at headquarters since the Challenger explosion that killed seven crew members.

Other astronauts now in Washington are Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, who is special assistant to the administrator for strategic planning, and Frederick Hauck, deputy associate administrator for external relations.

After the Jan. 28 tragedy, the astronaut corps complained bitterly that it had not been fully informed on safety issues, including concerns about the shuttle booster rocket joints and their protective O-rings seals.

They insisted they be included in key decisions, and many played major roles in the investigation of the explosion.

The Rogers commission that investigated the accident criticized the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for management weaknesses, and Wednesday's personnel moves were part of the response to that criticism.

Several management changes had been made earlier, including naming a new administrator, James C. Fletcher, and replacing directors at all three field centers involved in shuttle planning, Kennedy in Florida, Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama and Johnson.

Crippen, a Navy captain, also is the sixth military officer named to an agency management position since January. Military payloads are slated to fly on nearly half the shuttle missions in the first six years after the fleet begins flying again, now targeted for February 1988.

Truly, speaking at a Washington news conference monitored here, said the restructuring will establish clear lines of communications and strengthen shuttle leadership in Washington.

"The shuttle program needs full-time leadership," he said. "The formation of this program management organization is one of the most positive steps NASA has taken in the last several months to strengthen the shuttle program and return to flight status."

Richard H. Kohrs, who has been Aldrich's deputy in Houston, was named deputy shuttle director for program, and Crippen was appointed deputy director for operations.

Crippen told the news conference he would take himself off flight status, saying he felt he could contribute more to the program from the management side.

Truly also announced that William R. Marshall, manager of the shuttle projects office at Marshall, will report directly to Kohrs. The Marshall center is managing the redesign of the shuttle booster rockets.

Aldrich, who has been associated with the U.S. man-in-space program since its inception in 1959, was one of the key officials in the control center who approved the launch of Challenger despite freezing temperatures the night before that left the launch pad caked with icicles.

Three men indicted with real estate fraud, bribery

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Veterans Administration appraiser, his son and son-in-law were indicted for fraudulently obtaining $1.8 million in government loans for property with inflated prices to be bought by ficticious buyers.

The 121-count indictment, handed up in U.S. District Court on Wednesday, charges that 69-year-old Jakey Madeoy, a government-certified appraiser, received $19,000 in bribes from his son, who set up "straw buyers" to buy homes using loans sponsored by the Federal Housing Administration.

The indictments charge Jakey Madeoy, real estate speculator Steven Madeoy, 34, and his brother-in-law, 46-year-old real estate lawyer Michael Friedman, with racketeering, conspiracy to defraud the government, bribery, mail fraud and wire fraud.

In exchange for bribes, Jakey Madeoy would submit to the VA a report inflating the value of the properties, the indictment said.

Vets honored with flowers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sunrise on Veterans Day will unveil a 15-by-25 foot floral flag at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, containing a flower for each of the Americans who died in that war, organizers of the event say.

The flag of red, white and blue carnations and roses will be woven Monday night on the Mall directly over the polished black granite memorial dedicated there in 1982 to the 58,113 Americans who lost their lives in Vietnam, said Jan Scruggs, the veteran who conceived the monument.

"There will be a flower for every American who died there," he said Wednesday, adding that it will be "unveiled by the sun" rising on Veterans' Day.

Scruggs spoke at a news conference called to discuss the construction of similar memorials to Vietnam veterans throughout the United States.

He said the monument in Washington is "truly a national shrine" that "has been a catalyst which led to the building of other memorials throughout the country."

South African flights eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was examining a proposed order awaiting his approval to ban flights by South African Airways in the United States.

The Transportation Department said Wednesday it has sent the proposed order to the White House at the request of the president, who was acting on directions from Congress to suspend air service between the two countries.

The order revokes South African Airways' operating permit for this country and prohibits any U.S. air carrier from providing direct service between the United States and South Africa.

South African Airways recently reduced from four to two the number of weekly roundtrip flights between New York and Johannesburg. No U.S. airline provides direct service between the two countries.

Congress ordered the termination of direct air service between South Africa and the United States as part of its anti-apartheid sanctions package.

Waite says speculation could cause his death

LONDON (AP) — Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, in a rare show of anger, said he does not represent any government in his efforts to free American and other hostages in Lebanon and that such speculation could cost him his life.

Waite, who helped win the release of American hostage David Jacobsen on Sunday, spoke to reporters at London's Heathrow Airport late Wednesday:

"The rumor and speculation of the last few days has made my own contacts a little nervous. It means there is a new vulnerability in the situation."

He commented on his return from Wiesbaden, West Germany, where he left Jacobsen and the freed hostage's family, reunited at an American military hospital. U.S. Air Force doctors said Wednesday that Jacobsen suffered no major medical problems from his 17 months in captivity and could leave whenever he wanted.

Waite said he had been waiting for word on prospects for further releases, but had none.

"Now the situation has changed. There has been so much speculation, a great deal of misinformation and various people cutting in for a variety of reasons that it has made the whole scene extremely complicated," he said.

Asked if he would return to Beirut, Waite said: "I am ready to go to Beirut if the signal comes that it is wise to do that or to an adjacent country if the signal comes that it is wise to do that."

Looking tired, the tall, bearded envoy of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie added: "I need further information that may affect my return to Beirut. This is not a setback, it's the normal process. But I wish it had been different and we could have got a few more people out."

Waite has also been trying to win the release of other hostages, including Americans Terry Anderson, Associated Press chief Middle East correspondent, and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut.

Waite, normally patient and calm, angrily criticized some press speculation following Jacobsen's release.

"There are certain speculative comments now moving around that perhaps Mr. Waite is used by or closely associated with governments.

Hostage releases linked to arms shipments to Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The freeing of three American hostages in Lebanon over the last 14 months came as U.S. and Iranian officials held a year of secret talks on Tehran's need for military supplies, a published report says.

The report, carried in today's editions of The Washington Post, also said the release of the Americans came after a series of arms shipments were made to Iran.

The United States has embargoed all arms sales to Iran since 1979.

The report comes during a week when the speaker of Iran's parliament, Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, said President Reagan's former national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, had traveled to Tehran recently in an effort to improve relations.

The arms shipments were approved personally by the president and have angered both Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, according to anonymous administration officials quoted today by the Los Angeles Times.

One administration source told The Associated Press that McFarlane's reported trip, which apparently was in September, seemed part of a broader effort by the White House to win the release of AP Correspondent Terry Anderson and educator Thomas Sutherland, who are held in Lebanon by Islamic Jihad, a Shiite group with ties to Iran. Hostage David P. Jacobsen was released Sunday.

White House officials have declined to confirm or deny McFarlane's reported trip, and he has not returned reporters' telephone calls.

The Post quoted unidentified sources as saying a DC-8 cargo plane believed to be American-owned, flying on Sept. 14, 1985, to Spain from Tabriz, Iran, had carried military equipment that had orginated in Israel. The trip had been arranged following talks between the American officials and Iran, the newspaper said.

The same day, the Rev. Benjamin Weir was released from captivity in Lebanon.

Enjoying it less

This year's political campaigns weren't amusing. So stop laughing. In fact, this year's campaigns were sort of reminiscent of the old cigarette commercial that asked: "Are you smoking more, but enjoying it less?"

What's that? You're laughing because you're so disgusted. Join the club. They called this the "Year of the Negative Campaign," they being political observers around the nation.

From what we've seen, they're not far off base. A prime example in Texas, of course, was the Mark White-Bill Clements bout for the Governor's Mansion. Clements won that race, but not before both men had fallen into the pit of negative campaigning and resorted to taunting the other with half-truths and character assassination attacks.

Of course, such tactics weren't limited to Texas. On the contrary, it was the conduct of political campaigns throughout the nation that qualified this political period for the haughty title "Year of the Negative Campaign." In fact, it was so bad that the best part about this election may be that it's over.

In a way, one should not expect more from the arena of politics. By its nature, the political arena is a competitive situation that pits one person against another. As campaigns have become more expensive, that fact has heightened the perceived importance of the events not only to the candidates but also to the public. That has generated even more campaign volatility.

To get the headlines, attract the cameras and gain the attention of the voters, candidates move constantly closer to the limit of acceptability. At some point, many slide across the limit into questionable campaign practices. This election campaign more than usual did so.

Does that make it right or okay? Of course not. Rather it detracts from the political process and causes voters to become disenchanted with both the process and the candidates in general. That is the real danger: Long-term damage to the institution of politics.

One shouldn't risk merely writing off such campaigning with a wave of the hand and a dismayed "That's politics!" Political campaigns and elections are going to be around in this nation for awhile and we have a right to expect a better grade of politics. But how do we get to that "higher road?" Down through the years, various changes have been made to clean up the political process and make campaigns more substantive in terms of information provided the voters and easier for the public to stomach. Most of the changes have been ineffective or, at best, meager in impact.

As in other areas of public conduct, the real responsibility for cleaning up political campaigns rests with the voters. If voters demand clean, informative and honest campaigning, that's what they'll get. If they accept less, that's what the politicians will give them.

In terms of campaigns, it seems, the old standby holds true: What you see is what you get.

S&L execs fighting bank reformist

WASHINGTON — Edwin Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, is trying to save the savings and loan industry from itself by curbing the reckless investment practices that have caused a wave of S&L failures and that threaten to bankrupt the federal government's deposit insurance fund.

Jack Anderson

But Gray's reform efforts are being systematically opposed by the thrift industry's powerful executives — and they aren't choosy about the methods they use to attack their top regulator. The S&L high rollers have deep pockets and apparently are willing to go to great lengths to stop Gray.

Last year, a group of Texas S&L executives discussed how to get Gray off their backs, and raised a $20,000 kitty toward achieving that goal, according to banking sources and government officials. Sources also say a private detective was hired by a group of thrift executives in the Southwest, apparently to dig up dirt on Gray as a means of forcing him from office.

There was also a bizarre attempt to unseat Gray: A politically well-connected thrift official tried to hire him, evidently to lure him away from his government job.

The incident was related to Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., ranking minority member of the Senate Banking Committee in two confidential statements — one by Gray himself, who did not attend the November 1985 breakfast meeting where the offer was made, the other by his chief of staff, Shannon Fairbanks, who was present. The job offer was made by Charles H. Keating Jr., board chairman of American Continental Corp., the holding company for Lincoln Savings & Loan Association of Irvine, Calif.

Wrote Fairbanks: "Mr. Keating told me that he wanted Mr. Gray to come with his organization in a job capacity which he described as 'using Mr. Gray's contacts and skills to further the corporate interests and activities of Lincoln Savings.' Mr. Keating explained his motivation by noting that 'there seems to be a problem in our ability to have our message heard' by the regulators and that he needed someone to help 'get our corporate initiatives past the existing regulatory roadblocks.'"

Gray rejected the offer at once. In his statement to Proxmire, he wrote: "I was frankly very surprised that an institution which had vigorously and continuously opposed key regulatory actions the board had both proposed and adopted would apparently be seeking to get me out of my job."

When Keating, who has long been active in Republican politics, failed to get rid of Gray with the offer of a lucrative job, Lincoln Savings & Loan appears to have tried to tap White House contacts to reach the same goal. Sources told our associate Michael Binstein that Lincoln lobbied intensely to have Gray removed. The effort almost paid off, as White House officials quietly spread the word last year that Gray was about to resign, apparently hoping that he would.

He didn't, though, and recently his opponents tried a new tack: getting him outvoted by new appointments to the three-man regulatory board. In August, the White House informed the House and Senate Banking committees it was considering two nominees to the board, Atlanta attorney Lee Henkel Jr. and University of Rochester economics professor George Benston.

Henkel's resume shows that he does legal work for Lincoln Savings. Benston was paid by Lincoln in 1984 for a study that attributed the S&L industry's troubles to high interest rates, not bad investments. The study was denounced by the bank board and many other experts.

Neither nomination has been formally submitted by the White House.

The principal issue that has made Gray an embattled David facing the S&L Goliath involves direct investments by the industry in risky ventures with federally insured deposits. Instead of sticking to their traditional investments in home mortgages, S&L executives have been trying for the big, fast bucks by plunging on such longshots as windmill farms, Arabian horse sperm banks, fast-food restaurants and commercial real estate.

Gray has made the curbing of such gambles one of his top regulatory priorities, and Proxmire supports him. The industry's high rollers oppose him.

Footnote: We made repeated attempts to reach Keating for his comments. His secretary finally told us he "refused to comment."

MINI-EDITORIAL: We salute Elaine L. Morton, who was bounced from the National Security Agency because she refused to submit to a polygraph test. We note that she did let FBI agents search her home without a warrant, and has denied that she was the source of a leak to the press on the administration's "disinformation" plan against Libya. But she wouldn't be hooked up to a so-called lie detector, saying the device is "about as useful as a divining rod in telling if you were a witch in Salem." Morton has now been transferred back to the State Department, where her boss, George Shultz, has voiced similar hostility toward polygraph testing.

Another View:

Reason to cheer

Of the Americans taken hostage in Lebanon, three — the latest being David Jacobsen — have now been released, and two are reported dead. That leaves five, of whom two were seized in the days of Lebanon's disintegration in 1985 and three this fall.

The record affords scant cheer: American hostages have a not much better chance of being freed than of being killed. But in the circumstances it is not an altogether dismal record either.

The terrorists prefer underground ways — to cultivate a mystique, perhaps, and to reduce exposure to outside pressures. Yet it is clear they belong to Islamic factions seeking to destroy the existing Middle East order of which the United States is a part, and they act, under uncertain control, for regimes of the region, principally Iran and Syria.

In seeking the hostages' safety and return, Washington has tried to make sure it would not incidentally serve the terrorists' or their sponsors' political aims, a difficult intention to fulfill, but a necessary one. "No political goals are or will be achieved by resorting to terror and terrorism," President Reagan said in welcoming back David Jacobsen.

The United States has sought, with some success, to draw the terrorists into an indirect dialogue on the American agenda, release of the hostages. (Only now, by the way, and responding in part to a clamor to match its public exertions for Nicholas Daniloff, does the White House call this dialogue a "negotiation," a word that it formerly rejected as tantamount to capitulation.)

At the same time, the administration has rightly rejected the terrorists' call for talks on their agenda — a prisoner exchange for the 17 of their comrades, convicted terrorists all, whom Kuwait has held since 1983.

Caring as they do for their endangered fellow citizens, Americans feel the strain. Yet the terrorists are under strain too, and are plainly fazed by American constancy, by the feeling that has mounted against them internationally and, conceivably, by the apparent restlessness of the Syrians and Iranians, whose officials met just as the latest release took place.

Islamic Holy War, announcing this release, reached for the moral high ground ("In the name of God ...") in a way suggesting that the United States has successfully shifted the onus from its own regional role to the criminality of the terrorists themselves.

We hope so. "In the name of God" they should stop threatening innocent lives.

Cloister-like calm settles on U.S. after voting

WASHINGTON — The cloister-like calm of American life has been momentarily restored by the merciful end of the election season, so now a large, echoing fact can be quietly contemplated: In 1976, there was a majority party. In 1986, there is not. There is rough parity between the parties as the 1988 campaign for supremacy commences.

George F. Will

In two fields of competition, the party with the most to lose (Republicans defending more Senate seats and Democrats defending more governorships) lost more. Republicans can take some comfort from this, for several reasons.

First, to be blunt, fewer of the inadequacies of the Republican Senate "coattail class" of 1980 proved fatal than could have. Second, the "sixth-year itch" made retention of Senate control by Republicans unlikely. In the last six elections in a President's sixth year (1918, 1926, 1938, 1958, 1966, 1974), the party not holding the White House has won between four (Republicans, 1966) and 13 (Democrats, 1958) Senate seats. The average gain has been seven. This year Republicans were going to lose the Senate even if they did as well as any party has done in the six "sixth-year" elections: four losses. Tuesday, the Republicans lost eight, one more than the average.

In 1982, a change of just 43,000 votes — a submicroscopic total — spread over five states (Missouri, Vermont, Rhode Island, Nevada, Wyoming) would have restored Democrats to Senate control.

And Democrats would already have controlled the Senate then, if in 1980 just 34,000 votes spread over five states (Idaho, Arizona, North Carolina, New Hampshire, Georgia) had gone the other way.

In 1980, Republicans gained 12 seats although Democratic Senate candidates got nearly 3 million more votes, largely because of landslides for John Glenn in Ohio and Alan Cranston in California. Cranston ran 180,000 votes ahead of Ronald Reagan in their home state in 1980.

The 1980 Republican freshman class averaged just 53 percent of the vote. Six freshmen got less than 51 percent. That, in a year when the Republican vote was unnaturally large and many depressed Democrats stayed home. Furthermore, in 1980 some weak Republican candidates beat some Democratic incumbents who were weaker than their electoral record indicated, because they had had an easy ride in the Republicans' disaster year of Watergate, 1974.

Republicans have tended to think that in 1980 the Democratic Party crumbled to dust like a scorched leaf. But even in the heat of Reagan's 1980 success, Democrats won 65 percent of all contested elections. One reason Democrats made relatively disappointing gains in the House this year (seven seats, the "sixth-year" average is 53) is that Republicans made so little progress in 1984, even when assisted by Reagan's landslide.

In 1984, Republicans gained just 14 House seats. Reagan carried 372 of the 435 congressional districts, but Republicans won only 181. In Warren Harding's 1920 landslide, there were only approximately 15 such "splits." Today's electorate is adept at ticket-splitting.

Another reason for Republican consolation is that there are limits to the damage a hostile Senate can do to the Reagan agenda, and such a Senate will be an inviting target in 1988. The Reagan economic program is in place. His military buildup has been derailed by his deficits. In 1988, Republicans can run against the whole legislative branch as the cause of whatever blemishes remain on the Republic. By gaining eight governorships, and especially those of Florida and Texas, Republicans have strengthened their hand in competing for electoral votes in the 50 elections that comprise the presidential election. And Republicans have improved their position for the coming contest of the early 1990s — the struggle to shape state redistricting plans after the 1990 census, thereby gaining seats in the House of Representatives.

In 1986, Republicans invested extravagant hopes in their advantage at fund-raising and their ability to finance "the blocking and tackling of politics" — the computerized mailing and phoning that identifies, contacts and goads particular voters to the polls. However, one heartening lesson of Tuesday's results is that television, technology and Niagaras of cash reach a point of sharply declining utility.

The cloister-like calm will soon be shattered by the thundering herd of presidential candidates, one of whom may be pleasantly surprised by gaining from his party's losses. Because of his role as Majority Leader in the televised Senate, Robert Dole had the best 1986 of any Republican presidential aspirant. Before Tuesday, he said his chances would be hurt by a Democrat takeover of the Senate.

But he actually may be helped, and not just because he will have fewer institutional reponsibilities keeping him from campaigning. Now he will be conspicuous as Reagan's embattled advocate in a boiling sea of Democrats. That is an enviable role for a Republican aspirant.

ART BUCHWALD

French know how to counter terror; give up!

There are many methods of handling countries who train and harbor terrorists. One way is what the British did recently when they broke all relations with Syria and booted their Ambassador out of the country. The reason was the Syrians were found to be knee deep in helping a terrorist blow up an El Al plane. The British asked their NATO allies to support them in punishing the Syrians for their lousy behavior. Naturally the French refused.

Art Buchwald

Why did the French turn the British down?

Once again it was a question of French pride.

Gaston de Boccador, a deputy French Minister of Duplicity, said, "It was either a question of honor or of selling the Syrians a half-billion dollars' worth of arms. What choice did we have? We had to send a message to Damascus."

"What kind of message?"

"France doesn't hold grudges."

"My dear friend there are bombs going off all over Paris these days. Doesn't that get the French angry at Syria?"

"You miss the point. If Syria knows who is responsible for the bombings in France, then she is the only one who can stop them. It would be a serious mistake to annoy a country who has such close links to the people who are trying to blow us up."

"There is something wrong here. Syria starts the terrorism and you have decided to be nice to her so she'll stop it. Haven't you people in France ever heard of blackmail?"

Gaston looked shocked. "France never pays blackmail. What we are doing is taking a 'special' role in the Middle East crisis. We can't play that role if we take Britain's side over Syria's."

"Have you ever heard of Georges Ibrahim Abdallah?" I asked.

"We are holding him in prison in Paris because he is a terrorist swine and a presumed murderer."

"Do you know that when he comes to trial this winter the French have assured Syria they will acquit him?"

"It isn't that simple. We will only acquit him if Syria promises us that the terrorist bombings in Paris will stop."

"Is that blackmail or isn't it?"

"No, it's smart thinking," he said. "We have to persuade Syria that we have good faith so she'll help us free our captured French hostages."

"Which Syria was instrumental in kidnapping in the first place. What happens when they release these hostages and then kidnap nine more?"

"We can deal with it," Gaston said. "France knows more about fighting terrorism than any country in Europe."

"How is that?"

"When someone insults us and slaps us across the face, we say, 'What do you want from us?' And when they tell us we give it to them."

"That will get you respect every time," I said.

"We like to think we're more practical than our NATO allies. When the Syrian Embassy got involved in trying to blow up a 747 the British kicked them out. And what did they get for it? Nothing but scorn from their friends in the Middle East. On the other hand the French, by ignoring Syrian dirty tricks, will not only wind up with a very good trade business, but with a sympathetic ear in Damascus the next time the Syrians try to pull off another bombing."

I said to Gaston, "The French really seem to know how to handle terrorism."

He agreed, "We have to be weak or people will walk all over us."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Jacobsen spends day with family before flying home

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — David Jacobsen, given a clean bill of health after 17 months of captivity in Lebanon, spends a final quiet day with his children in West Germany today before they all head home.

"They are scheduled to leave on Friday," Air Force spokesman Jeffery Mulcahy told reporters today.

He said the family planned a tranquil day.

Doctors, after completing three days of examinations at a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, said Wednesday that Jacobsen, 55, suffered no major health problems during his captivity.

However, the physicians said they had recommended the Huntingdon Beach, Calif., native have routine follow-up tests after going home.

Jacobsen was kidnapped in Beirut, Lebanon, on May 28, 1985, while on his way to work as director of the American University Hospital there.

Vance leaves Vietnam

TOKYO (AP) — Former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met with senior Politburo member Le Duc Tho and other Vietnamese leaders during a six-day private visit, state-run Radio Hanoi reported today.

Vance, who served under President Jimmy Carter, had separate talks with Premier Pham Van Dong and Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, Radio Hanoi said in a brief dispatch monitored in Tokyo.

Vance left Hanoi Wednesday, the radio said. He was accompanied by Robert B. Oxnam, president of the New York-based Asia Society, it said, without giving any other details.

Before traveling to Vietnam, Vance said that among things he hoped to discuss with Vietnamese officials was the issue of U.S. servicemen still listed as missing from the Vietnam War.

During the early 1970s, Le Duc Tho and then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger negotiated the U.S. pullout from Vietnam. On several occasions, Le Duc Tho has said Vietnam and the United States should start talks to normalize relations.

Police remove strikers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — General Motors of South Africa said it called police to remove 500 dismissed workers staging an illegal strike at its Port Elizabeth plants.

The strikers, who were demanding severance pay when GM turns over its South African interests to new management, had occupied the plant for eight days, but left without incident when police asked them to do so late Wednesday, a company official said in a statement.

The Bureau of Information, in its daily report, said one black man was killed and two were slightly injured in separate incidents Wednesday night when black crowds attacked security force vehicles with stones and gasoline bombs.

Security forces responded with birdshot in both cases, it said.

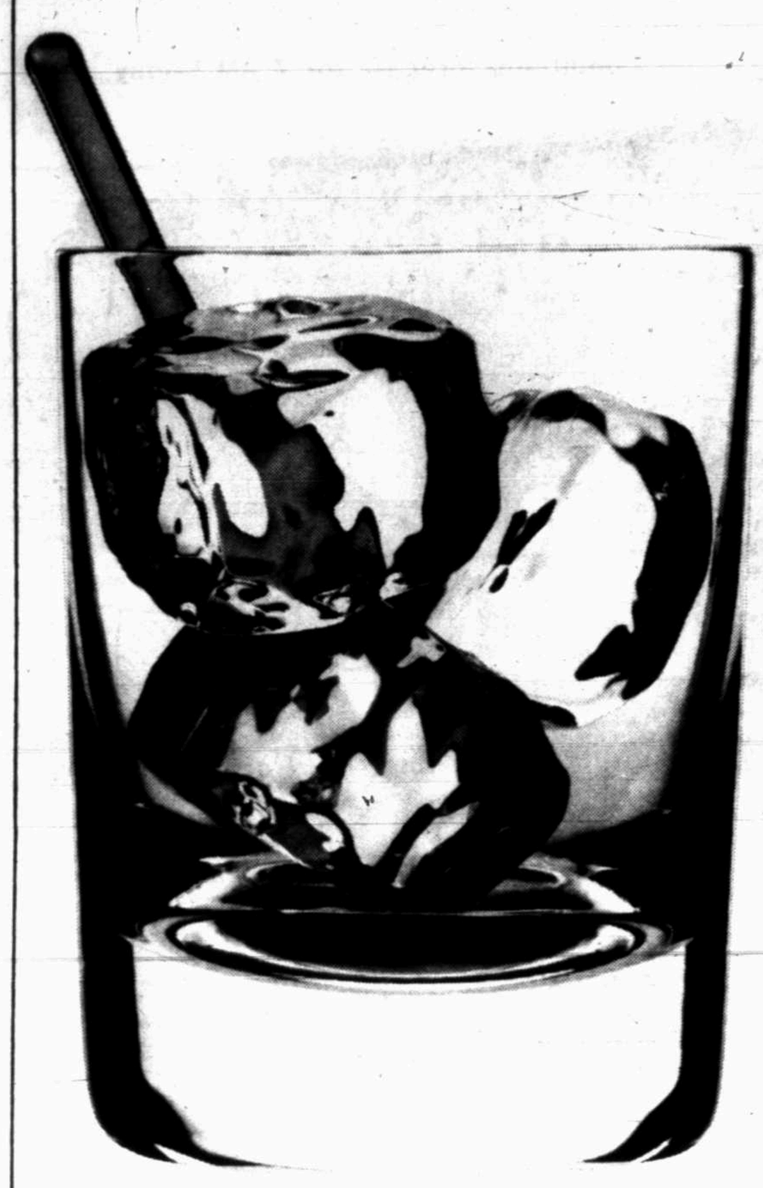

The bureau also reported extensive damage from stone-throwing at buses of the Public Utility Transport Co., the government-subsidized bus company that serves Soweto, Johannesburg's largest black township. Attacks on buses began last Friday after a fare increase was announced.

Paper: Suspect pulled pin

TOKYO (AP) — A suspect in a nearly disastrous explosion aboard a Thai jetliner told investigators he took a grenade into one of the plane's toilets and pulled the safety pin, a leading Japanese newspaper reported today.

The suspect, a 43-year-old man who has been widely described in the press as a member of Japan's largest underworld gang, was quoted by the Asahi Shimbun as telling police, "I brought a bomb with me into the toilet (and) I pulled its safety pin." The incident occurred Oct. 26.

The Asahi said the man, who was one of 62 people injured among the 247 aboard Flight 620 of Thai Airways International, has yet to clarify what he was trying to do and how he obtained the grenade.

Uribe seeking support for state-sponsored lottery

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A senator who swung through Midland Wednesday pushing the cause for a state lottery claimed legislation passed during a Continental Congress session created funding for American Revolution munitions to come from a state-sponsored lottery.

Though Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, didn't claim to be a modern-day Benjamin Franklin, he did take credit for introducing the lottery bill during the past special session of the Texas Legislature.

Uribe said the bill passed committee and the Senate, but was grounded in the House. He is on an eight-city tour through Texas claiming lottery-playing Texans are pouring hundreds of millions of dollars into 26 other states' coffers who have lotteries.

"Passing the Senate was a major milestone in the lottery's progress," Uribe said, "but by failing to take action on my bill, the House forfeited huge sums of money that would have been used to help balance the state budget and finance vital programs."

Uribe said there are "two compelling reasons to adopt a state lottery in Texas."

"The state wants it. A poll conducted by the Austin firm of Shipley and Associates in July 1986 found 68 percent — or more than two-thirds — favor the adoption of a lottery.

"SECONDLY, IF a lottery was passed in the election yesterday (on Nov. 4) it would have raised $1.5 billion in non-tax revenue by 1991," Uribe said.

Under the legislation previously filed by Uribe, a statewide election would be conducted to allow the people to decide whether a state-operated lottery should be created.

Upon approval, a measure would set up a lottery commission (composed of the chairman of the Public Safety Commission, the state treasurer, the state comptroller of public accounts and two public members appointed by the governor) to run it.

Additionally, Uribe said legislation would apply strict accounting and other supervisory controls to ensure the lottery is operated in an honest and open manner.

Figures Uribe had show that if a lottery bill could be passed in time for the start of the 1987 fiscal year, it would garner no funds for the state the first year and cost the state in start-up costs some $11.4 million.

In 1988, Uribe's figures show the monetary gain from the state lottery fund would be $395 million with $156 million going to the state general revenue fund. By 1991, according to his statistics, those figures would have increased to $1.52 billion going into the state lottery fund with at least a $5.9 million addition to the state general revenue fund.

Out of the state lottery fund, Uribe said the state would receive no less than 40 percent yearly of state lottery monies and that no more than 15 percent of those state lottery funds going to administrative expenses.

HE ADDED that no less than 40 percent would go to the various lottery winners.

A major part of Uribe's hurdle is to "dispel the myths" associated with a lottery.

The "myth" that a lottery preying on the poor is not true, Uribe said.

"Surveys show the poor and wealthy play in disproportionate numbers. The majority of those who play earn between $15,000-$30,000 a year and have up to two years of college education.

"It is seen by them as a form of entertainment — good, clean fun," Uribe said.

"Some say the poor have less money, so in essence it is a regressive tax on them. No one has to play a lottery. Everyone has to pay taxes (increased because of a state's budget shortfall) and the poor will have to pay higher taxes as well," Uribe said.

That a state lottery is not a good form of revenue is not true either, Uribe said.

"NOT A single state has lost money on a lottery. The states who have a lottery jointly raised over $9 billion last year," Uribe said.

The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Midland's Kelview Heights Baptist Church, disagreed on that point, however.

"All they have to do is look at the states who have it (a lottery). They're not bringing in anything now. It's impractical," Johnson said.

The state could save millions of dollars, Johnson said, by shutting down "about half of the major colleges in Texas," Johnson said.

In addition, Johnson said if the state would end subsidized busing of students, it would save enough money to the point "we could nearly pay the kids to go to school."

A lottery doesn't create compulsive gamblers either, the senator claimed.

"Firstly, there is no empirical evidence to support this argument. It is merely someone's opinion.

"COMPULSIVE GAMBLERS need a high that just isn't found in playing a lottery. It's a slow game — not like horse racing, cards or roulette," Uribe said.

"The purchase of a lottery ticket is impulsive and not compulsive."

"People who say lotteries are immoral may not realize that Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth and Brown universities, all of which were created as schools of divinity, were funded through lotteries.

"The Webster's Dictionary defines immoral as what a majority of the people think is not acceptable. Then a majority of Texas must be immoral," Uribe said.

Bankruptcy, civil filing fees will increase

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Just as bankruptcies are on the increase, so are civil and bankruptcy filing fees in federal court.

"Effective immediately, civil-filing fees are increasing, doubling, from $60 to $120," said John D. Neil, deputy-in-charge of the U.S. District Clerk's Office for the Midland-Odessa Division of the federal court system's Western District of Texas. Those civil filings, which totaled 274 in 1984, 244 in 1985, and 207 so far this year, do not include bankruptcy filings.

The filing fee opens — activates — a case for consideration by the court — either through the judge or by the judge and jury.

Fees for bankruptcy filings are on the rise, too.

The fees for filing for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 for reorganization under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code are to be increased from $200 to $500 on or about Nov. 26.

Fees for filing under the Bankruptcy Code's Chapter 7 for liquidation and Chapter 13 for the wage-earner's plan for repayment of debts have been increased from $60 to $90.

Neil said he "really can't say" that the filing fees pay for the cost of processing paperwork. "It's quite time consuming for each of these (cases)."

From Jan. 1, 1986, through Wednesday, Nov. 5, bankruptcy filings have totaled 480 — well over the 367 which were filed here in 1985.

MOST OF THE FILINGS here have been for liquidation under Chapter 7. In 1985, Chapter 7 filings totaled 220, Chapter 11 filings reached 78, and Chapter 13 filings totaled 69. So far this year, filings totaled 346 for Chapter 7, 66 for Chapter 11, and 68 for Chapter 13.

Midland attorney E.F. "Trey" Lohman III said he "can't see where the filing-fee (increase) would affect anything."

"If a guy is going to get rid of $30,000 or $40,000 worth of debt, what difference would $1,000 or $1,500 (in attorney's and filing fees) make?" Lohman said. "The filing fees are the least of their problems."

The Midland-Odessa Division takes in the counties of Andrews, Crane, Ector, Martin, Midland and Upton.

Larry Bick, deputy district clerk in charge of the Bankruptcy Unit of the Western District of Texas, said overall bankruptcies are increasing about 55 percent in the district, which spreads westwardly from the Austin-Waco-San Antonio area to El Paso.

"I don't think we'll see a leveling off for another year," Bick said. "I don't know."

In Midland, bankruptcies have increased about 52 percent. In San Antonio, where Bick is headquartered, the gain in bankruptcy filings over last year is 87 percent, and in Austin, 103 percent. The increase in El Paso is about 10 percent.

"There are a lot of Chapter 11s," he said.

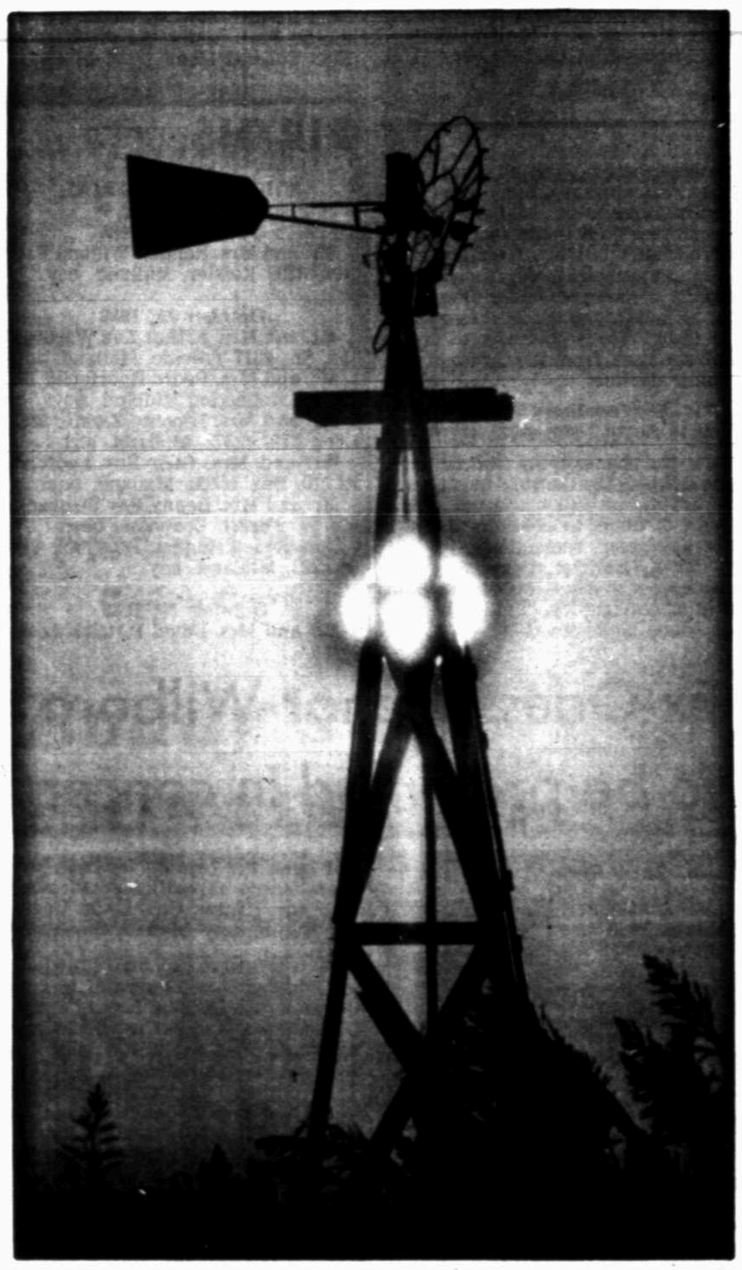

IN AUSTIN, many of the bankruptcies are in real-estate development. "I think they just overbuilt," he said. In San Antonio, the number of foreclosures is averaging more than 700 a month.

"I'm not too sure that the economy of the state is settled down yet."

Bick declined to predict the route bankruptcies would take in the near future.

However, "I don't think they are going to decrease," he said. "The price of oil continues to be 'the big deal' in this state."

FAA: Skydiver's arm tangled in parachute cords

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The right hand and forearm of the Odessa skydiver who died Saturday after his main and reserve parachutes failed to fully open in a 2,700-foot exhibition jump over Odessa were entangled in the cords of his main parachute before he impacted the ground, the Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday.

"We probably won't know what caused the (main) 'chute to fail," said Eual McCrite, FAA airworthiness unit supervisor in Lubbock.

The skydiver, Vernon Eugene "Gene" Walden, 38, was one of three skydivers who jumped from a twin-engine aircraft during Odessa Fall Festival Days in Sherwood Park about noon Saturday. The other skydivers landed safely. Walden, who had logged more than 1,800 free-fall jumps in 13 years, was associated with WesTex Sky Sports in Stanton.

"When it (his main parachute) didn't deploy," McCrite said, "he started trying to pull it out with his right hand. He started digging into it."

But his hand and forearm got entangled in the parachute's cords apparently as the parachute started to open. The parachute apparently streamed but didn't fully open.

McCrite said that there was virtually "no way" Walden could have then freed his arm from the entanglement due to the air pressure even after he had tried to "cut away" from the parachute.

Walden then pulled the rip cord of the reserve parachute, but by then, he apparently was too close to the ground for the parachute to fully open.

"There wasn't any indication that the (reserve) 'chute was packed wrong," McCrite said. He said the reserve parachute was packed by an FAA-certified parachute rigger.

"When it (his main parachute) didn't deploy, he started trying to pull it out with his right hand. He started digging into it..." But his hand and forearm got entangled in the...cords apparently as the parachute started to open.

— Eual McCrite, FAA Federal Aviation Administration

But Walden had borrowed an unpacked main parachute from another jumper. "I assume that he packed himself."

"The reserve 'chute was pulled," McCrite said, "but apparently was never completely deployed." He said that there was a "good possibility" that the reserve parachute would have opened had Walden farther to fall. But he said that the 13 seconds it took Walden to fall the 2,700 feet "isn't very long. It doesn't give you time to say, 'I wish I had done this or done that.'" Walden was "an experienced jumper," he said.

McCrite said that Walden's right arm was "still wrapped very tightly in the shroud" after he had fallen into a backyard near the park.

McCrite noted that witnesses from the ground presumed that the two parachutes had become entangled.

Walden, a radio tower inspector, was a professional skydiver.

Parrish named one of most effective college administrators

From Staff Reports

Dr. Jess H. Parrish, president of Midland College, has been identified as one of the nation's most effective chief executive officers in higher education.

He was among 100 college presidents, representing approximately 3 percent of the top administrative officers of U. S. colleges and universities, listed by a study conducted by Bowling Green State University.

His selection came as part of a study designed by Dr. James L. Fisher, president emeritus of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education in Washington D. C., and author of the book, "The Power of the Presidency," and Dr. Martha Tack, professor of educational administration and supervision at Bowling Green State University.

The study, entitled "The Effective College President," is a two-year project funded by the Exxon Education Foundation. It examines the personal characteristics, professional background, and attitudinal differences that personify the men and women who have been identified by their peers as the nation's most effective college presidents.

Presidential profiles were developed through personal interviews and by the administration of the Fisher-/Tack Effective Leadership Inventory which proved statistically significant in differentiating between effective and representative presidents.

According to Fisher, "This study demonstrates that effective presidents are different. They are strong risk-taking leaders with a dream."

Among those also listed were present or former chief executive officers of Notre Dame, University of Texas System, University of Michigan, Brown University, Boston University, State University of New York-Albany, Miami-Dade Community College, Ohio State, University of California-Berkeley, and Johns Hopkins University.

In addition to Midland College, Texas also was represented by the presidents of Trinity University, Rice University, Baylor University, Southwestern University, Dallas County Community College District, and Tarrant County Community College District.

"I'm most honored to have been selected, and placed among such widely recognized educational leaders," Parrish said, "But the praise must go to the people of Midland and to the leadership of the Midland College Board of Trustees, who have held education in such high esteem and who have devoted their time, their efforts, and their resources to the development of this college. I've been fortunate to be in the right place at the right time...and to have been associated with enthusiastic and dedicated faculty and staff who believed that community colleges should be in the forefront of educational excellence."

A native of Ballinger, Parrish earned his B.S.E., M.E., and Ed.D. degrees from Texas Tech University, was Dean of Student Life and Director of Testing and Counseling at Angelo State University and Vice President for Student Affairs at Memphis State University.

In 1970, he was selected to become founding president of Shelby State Community College in Memphis, a post he held for 10 years.

He was named president of Midland College in August 1981.

Parrish is a former director and chairman of the board of the American Association of Community/Junior Colleges, in 1985 was named to the board of directors of the AACJC Presidents' Academy, and past president and director of the Southern Association of Community and Junior Colleges.

He was named "Distinguished Alumnus of 1985" by the Texas Tech School of Education. He was the 1985 recipient of the Marie Y. Martin Award from the Association of Community College Trustees as the nation's outstanding community college administrator.

'Skid-row disease' is feeling of hopelessness

Just as skid row is a state of mind, so is silk-stocking row.

However, the rows are just as real as they are imaginary.

Now, I have not literally been a card-carrying member of either class. I have not been cast into or crawled into the abyss that is the drunk's pit — his abode in and along the streets and gutters of Grub Street and his haven under the bridges that are marks in civilization and where the bum often "shakes to" following a stupor or sleep. Indeed, I have napped under a bridge and in a culvert. But I have not yet slept in a cardboard box or in a Dumpster just to keep warm or dry. I have not yet had to panhandle to get enough coffee money so that I could have an elixir — spiked wine or cheap whiskey. I have not yet had to scrounge for clothing — a warm coat — by appealing to the Salvation Army or had to stand in a soup line or take food through bars. Not yet.

I have not yet squatted with fellow "bums" around a campfire and felt grateful for the warmth and comradeship even while my heart was pierced with hopelessness and emptiness.

But I have sensed hopelessness, helplessness, emptiness, and that void feeling wherein the heart seems hollow and without care.

On the other extreme, I have not listed my address as Silk-Stocking Row. I have never owned exquisite limousines and sports cars, never lived in mansions and have never had my every whim catered to by servants. I have never not been concerned about having enough money or enough security or enough things to make my life "happier." But I have been granted the sense to know that happiness is not "possessing things."

I have not been counted among the super-rich, semi-rich, moderate-rich or "comfortably-situated" folks.

I have not joined or been invited to join a country club, racquet club or a country gentleman's cricket club. I have not mounted an elephant in India, a camel in Egypt, been on a safari in Africa, or been in the intimate company of blue-blooded royalty. I don't wear designer clothes and don't receive the Neiman-Marcus catalogue.

But, to my credit, I have browsed in a Chicagoland's Brooks Brothers clothing store and was accorded with utmost courtesy even when I was "down and out" and all the clothing I owned that winter was desperately clinging to me. I was impressed. Thanks to God, I then had a dear friend who outfitted me and sent a reluctant Ed Todd back into the so-called real world. That was in another time in an adventure land that wasn't particularly romantic.

In spirit, I, indeed, have lived on skid row. My spirits — or lack of — were there. I suspect that the responsibility of being on skid row is nil to grave — depending on your will to survive and on what level.

The skid-row disease which occasionally attacks me when I am vulnerable (which is always) is that feeling of hopelessness, that void feeling, when I have lost or denied myself contact with God and with His spirit through others. It is in those times when I am at peace with God, with myself and with my fellow man that I am richly rewarded. My attitude soars. And I do believe that any man and any woman at any station — from skid row to silk-stocking row, from jail to penthouse — can share in the joy and peace of living a spiritual life. The class matters not, though it matters greatly to many, when it comes to the life within.

Police investigating Midlander's stabbing

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the stabbing of a 26-year-old Midland man early this morning in the parking lot of a local nightclub, according to reports.

Officers were dispatched to the Club Jamaica, 610 E. Industrial, about 2:30 a.m. today following the report of an assault. The victim, Edward Dunson, 300 S. Clay, told officers he was in the parking lot of the club when he was assaulted by two females. He said one of the woman then stabbed him twice in the chest. According to reports, no reason for the attack was given.

Dunson was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

Police have similar descriptions of a suspect in two separate residental burglaries that occurred between 12:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, both on N. Midland Dr.

A videocassette recorder valued at $250 and a public address system valued at $50 were reported stolen from a residence in the 2600 block of N. Midland Dr., sometime between 3 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Wednesday. The suspect is described as a black male, 23 or 24 years old, six feet tall, weighing approximately 140 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

In the other case, a stereo valued at $800 was stolen from an apartment in the 3400 block of N. Midland Dr., sometime between 12:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. The suspect is described as a black male, 26 years old, five feet seven inches tall, weighing approximately 130 pounds.

Several other burglaries are being investigated, including the theft of an AM-FM cassette player valued at $600, an equalizer valued at $250, and two speakers valued at $150 from a residence in the 2800 block of Moss Ave. According to reports, the burglary occurred between 6 p.m. Tuesday and 6 a.m. Wednesday.

In other reports, a .25 caliber automatic pistol valued at $50, three silver dollars, and $30 in coins were stolen from a residence in the 4300 block of Pleasant. Police said the burglary occurred Wednesday between 8:15 p.m. and 9:45 p.m.

FEES

The fuel that gave rise in bankruptcies in Midland gained momentum in late 1982.

"I think probably the big companies that were really hurt when oil prices went down real quick were suffering from the 1982 decline in the oil industry," Neil said. "It picked up a little bit, and the bottom fell out."

Companies either filed for bankruptcy, sold out, restructured, or "managed to hold on," he said. "The ones that had to file — those that really suffered — have already filed. They tried to reorganize."

"The others are trying to hang in there, cut employees or cut unnecessary expenses," Neil noted. Workers who lost their jobs, could not find replacement work and were facing mounting bills which they could not resolve often filed for bankruptcy under Chapter 7.

WHAT NEIL CALLS the "trickle-down" effect of bankruptcies has put many individuals, including white-collar and blue-collar people, out of work. And individuals, like companies buried in debt, were unable to appease their creditors, who, too, may have filed for bankruptcy, as the domino effect of the economic downturn continued.

"It's not easy out there," Neil said.

Sharon Mendenhall, deputy district clerk who processes bankruptcy files in Midland, said that "all of a sudden, we are getting a rash of (Chapter) 11s." Ms. Mendenhall noted that many companies and individuals, "due to the recession, have expended their capital and other remedies, sold assets and made other cost-cutting measures, and have laid off employees" but found that those efforts didn't "reduce their liabilities to any appreciable degree." The filing for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 is "a final tool or the last-resort kind of thing" for a company to try to salvage itself from the throes of economic decline.

"It keeps creditors from hounding you to death," she said.

In the bankruptcy proceedings, the Bankruptcy Court or trustee will supervise the full or partial repayment of debts to creditors if there are any assets remaining.

"It's a financial stigma that you don't want to have," Ms. Mendenhall said of bankruptcy, "unless there is no other alternative."

Paramedic honored for saving life

From Staff Reports

A 33-year-old paramedic credited with saving the life of a Midland man in September was awarded the 1986 Firefighter of the Year plaque Wednesday at a luncheon of the Downtown Midland Lions' Club.

Steve Lyons was presented the plaque, a copy of which will be placed permanently at the Midland Central Fire Station, and a $250 check by Batallion Chief Eddie Klatt.

Klatt told the assembled group that on Sept. 18, just before 1 a.m., Lyons was awakened by a neighbor at the Sierra Paseo Apartments. A fire had broken out in a nearby apartment, and the occupant, Byron McQuinlan, could not be found.

Lyons crawled into the apartment and carried McQuinlan, who was lying on his bed unconscious, to safety, Klatt said.

"There might very well have been one less soul on this earth had it not been for Steve's quick response," Klatt said.

Lyons, in accepting the award, said acts of heroism occur every day, and tribute should not be paid excusively to him.

"I didn't do anything that anybody else in this fire department wouldn't have done," Lyons said.

Lyons, who joined the department in 1980, is a state certified firefighter and paramedic, and an Emergency Medical Services instructor at Midland College. A native of Oklahoma City, he is working on his Applied Science degree in Fire Technology.

Production increases

The gross value of agricultural production in Latin America, at constant prices, grew an estimated 3.3 percent in 1984, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. This compares with negative growth rates of 0.6 and minus 0.3 percent, respectively, in 1983 and 1982.

LOTTERY

A lottery, with tickets priced anywhere from $1 to $10 Uribe said, is not the panacea to the state's budget problems, but Uribe contends the people should be given the choice of deciding if one is needed in Texas.

In addition to providing funding for essential state services, Uribe said a lottery would provide tickets purchased and sold through agents — which would include small businesses, grocery stores, restaurants — who would earn 5-15 percent of the price of the ticket.

He said the reason the bill didn't pass the House in the last special session was because House members bought the myths he said are just not true.

Pope to say open-air Mass at San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An open-air Mass and an address in Spanish will be on Pope John Paul II's agenda when he visits San Antonio Sept. 13 during a nine-day tour of eight U.S. cities.

The Vatican confirmed Wednesday the San Antonio visit, which should begin with the pope's arrival at Kelly Air Force Base at 10 a.m., Archbishop Patrick Flores said Wednesday.

"Our arms and our hearts are open," Flores said. "We expect a big crowd, bigger than any crowd ever seen in San Antonio."

Ex-Odessa tenor Wilborn to be presented in concert

From Staff Reports

Wilborn

Midland Opera Theater will present tenor Kip Wilborn in concert Saturday at Midland Community Theater. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

"It is a great pleasure to present this talented young man who studied voice with Janice Archer of Midland," says Nancy Anguish, MOT's president.

Wilborn changed his voice from a baritone to a tenor prior to auditioning for the Metropolitan Opera in El Paso in January of 1983. There he received the District Metropolitan Opera Award of Encouragement.

This former Odessan recently received his degree from Kansas City Conservatory of Music, where he had been the leading tenor in the opera studio as well as performing with the Kansas City Lyric Opera and Community Opera Company.

He is a fulltime soloist at the Second Presbyterian Church of Kansas City and on the voice faculty at the University of Kansas City. In 1986, he has sung as an apprentice with the Sarasota Florida Opera Co., the New York Opera Company and was selected as one of the Outstanding American Singers to perform for the newly organized Austin Lyric Opera Company at the gala benefit in April.

At the 40th anniversary celebration of Odessa College held this September, Wilborn was among the six performers and groups, along with the Gatlin Brothers, chosen for the evening concert of alumni graduates.

For further information on the concert, call Midland Opera Theater at 684-4101. General admission is $10. Student and senior citizen tickets are $8.

Jeff Carlton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Carlton, has received the Eagle Scout award. He is a member of Troop 270 and is a student at Midland Freshman School, where he is a member of the band. He is also active in the Youth Fellowship at First Presbyterian Church.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED REDUCTION IN AT&T's TEXAS RATES

The Public Utility Commission of the state of Texas has entered orders in two recent cases that would substantially reduce the charges which AT&T pays to the state's local telephone companies and which could allow AT&T to reduce prices for most of AT&T's customers on calls placed within the state of Texas.

The total amount of the reduction to AT&T's customers is expected to be between $115.3 million and $120.6 million. This is in addition to the $19.8 million reduction in AT&T's Texas basic long distance prices that went into effect on March 1, 1986 and is in addition to the approximately $2 billion in AT&T interstate price reductions that took effect earlier this year.

If the changes are approved, all of AT&T's direct dialed long distance, directory assistance, WATS and 800 service customers would be affected, and would experience a decrease in their prices for these services when calling within the state of Texas. The following tables show the anticipated impact of the changes on AT&T customers by service category.

Class of Service	Approximate Overall % Reduction	Approximate Overall Dollar Reduction (in millions)
Long Distance	9.2	$ 68.4
Directory Assistance	20.0	1.0
WATS	29.1	29.7
800	19.9	21.5

The rate reductions are presently anticipated to occur in two phases on or about October 22, 1986 and November 12, 1986. The matter has been assigned as Docket Nos. 6926 and 7113. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf. A complete copy of the tariffs reflecting the potential rate reductions will be on file with the Commission on or before October 23, 1986.

LHS marching band will travel to Austin for marching contest

By DAVID WEIS and SHANNON FOX

Congratulations to the Rebel Band, led by director Randy Storie and assistant director Betty Pierce, who won All-Region UIL Marching Contest recently.

According to Joseph Stevens, one of the members, the band will continue on to the state marching contest in Austin. Members will be leaving Midland on Sunday and will perform on Monday. Thanks to everyone for their support.

Congratulations are also in order for 15 students from the Rebel Choir who distinguished themselves by making the pre-area cut.

They are, Ami Smith, Felicia Long, Jessica Garrett, Wayne Hyde, James Hare, John Latham, Mark Harwell, Barry Hendrix, Dana Boes, Bethany Skiles, Amanda Paris, Chris Berry, Nancy Cunningham, Missy Baxter and Kazuyo Odajima.

These students will try out next on December 5 or 6 for the next cut.

The final cut will be held on January 10 for the 1986-87 All State Choir.

This past Tuesday was the German and French Dinner, held at the home of Sophomore German student Shannon Fox. Each student brought food representing the country whose language they are studying. A special thanks goes to David Kleinbeck, German teacher, and Mrs. Agnes Atkins, French teacher, for once again allowing us to have this annual dinner.

The sun continues to shine on Dixie. This Friday Abilene High ventures into Memorial Stadium, where the Rebels hope to clinch an outright district championship. The next week the football team will begin its quest for a state title.

The girls volleyball team completed its season this past Saturday with a 6-6 record and a third place finish in the district. Senior members of the team include Darla Hatch, Dana Jones, Kristi Shelton, Daphne Rhodes, Michelle Lant, Michelle Lance, Perthelene Garnett, Pam Hutson and Monica Garcia. Susie Dunn will be returning for the Rebels next year.

Both the girls and boys basketball teams have begun practicing for the upcoming season. Supporters of the boys team can have an early glimpse of this year's team by attending the scrimmage at Lee Gym with the Levelland Lobos. Scrimmage time is set for 1 p.m. Saturday.

There will be an After The Game dance Friday at the Youth Center and will be sponsored by the Student Council.

Here's a reminder to parents that the "I wish I were a kid again" fundraiser for both youth centers is set for Saturday. Fee is $25 at the door and all proceeds go to the youth centers.

The Lee Freshman Student Council Dance is slated for 8-11 p.m. on November 15.

Clements has already begun work

Clements

AUSTIN (AP) — Work already has begun for his next administration, Gov.-elect Bill Clements says, adding that the state's faltering economy will get the attention it needs.

"We'll immediately get to work," Clements said Wednesday, a day his aides said was marked by numerous meetings with advisors.

Clements credited his emphasis on jobs as a key factor in his win over Democratic Gov. Mark White. He told a news conference he will appoint within days an economic task force of 40 to 50 prominent business and academic leaders to write recommendations on creating jobs and business development.

"When you have a problem that's well-identified, you don't sweep it under the rug. You do something about it," Clements said. "These problems are crying for solutions. I intend to put some solutions on the table."

Full proposals from his task force will be presented to the Legislature when it convenes in January, he said. "We're already starting to talk about it..."

Texas' first Republican governor in 102 years when elected in 1978, Clements capped his comeback bid with a decisive victory over the man who ousted him four years ago.

According to near-final returns compiled by the secretary of state, Clements received 1,804,065 votes, or 52.71 percent, to White's 1,575,740, or 46.04 percent. Libertarian Theresa Doyle received just 42,346 votes, or 1.23 percent.

Clements, 69, said his emphasis on jobs was crucial because Texas unemployment has soared to record high levels.

"The people of Texas are terribly concerned about our economy. That was the difference. It was a unifying factor that pulled everybody together," Clements said.

In a wide-ranging news conference, Clements gave a preview of his next administration's agenda.

Tied to the economic problems is the state budget. The Legislative Budget Board was told Wednesday that 1988-89 revenues could fall $3.5 billion to $5 billion below what originally was anticipated.

However, Clements reiterated that overall state income is up, and he pledged to cut spending where needed and limit the growth of many programs.

"We are not going to have the growth in some of the programs that have heretofore been anticipated. Our revenues will be up; they will not be down. But we will not have the growth some people would like," he said.

Clements pledged a thorough review of the state's tax structure, suggesting he may back a plan similar to that recommended by Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock's plan calls for a broader sales tax base — to apply the levy to many goods and services, such as lawyer's fees, not now covered — and lowering the rate from the 5¼ percent it will hit in January.

The governor-elect stopped short of endorsing that plan, however, and said any overhaul should be "revenue-neutral."

"We've already been talking to Mr. Bullock's office," Clements said. "We will take a hard look at restructuring our Texas tax base on a revenue-neutral basis...We need to look at restructuring the entire tax base and see if we can build a broader sense of fairness and equity."

Clements said he would make good on campaign pledges and seek resignations from the three state Public Utility Commission members, Texas Department of Corrections boss Lane McCotter and members of the state prison board.

He said he will offer the Legislature a plan for "restructuring the Texas criminal justice system...from the court system itself, the judges, the sentencing process, right through probation and parole and the prison system."

Texans will notice another big difference between his administration and White's — a closer relationship with the White House, Clement said..

"The change is, I've already heard from them," he said. Clements received congratulatory phone calls election night from Vice President George Bush and White House chief of staff Donald Regan, and he talked with President Reagan on Wednesday afternoon, he said.

White looking for silver linings

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White spent much of his first lame-duck day out of the public eye, perhaps taking time to think about something he had dismissed as unthinkable.

As he flew around the state Monday in a final campaign swing, White declined to answer questions about the possibility of losing to Republican challenger Bill Clements.

"I don't even think about it. Never," he said.

On Wednesday, the day after Clements whipped him, White sounded buoyant and looked for silver linings. He found one in East Austin, where Willow, his family's cocker spaniel, was located after abandoning the Governor's Mansion on Election Day.

"The good news today is we found the dog," White said at a brief news conference in the Senate chamber that followed a meeting of a committee on which White sits.

He told reporters he was headed back to the mansion across the street.

"We're going to have a little party, Linda Gale and I, just a little celebration," he said.

Asked what he was celebrating, White said, "The day."

"I just feel good. I'm looking at the future," he said.

Asked how he planned to make a living, the lawyer and part-owner of a barbecue company said, "I'll probably, somewhere between practicing law and selling barbecue, find something to do.

"I've had several offers but I'm not entertaining those now," White said.

Of future political races, he said, "I'm not going to be worrying about that or commenting on that today. I have a couple more months of work to do."

White said Republican Bill Clements, in regaining the governor's job, set a precedent that could possibly be followed by other defeated governors. Clements lost to White in 1982, but defeated him Tuesday by about 225,000 votes.

"I wouldn't want to set a practice of doing that. I think it's a terrible tradition to try to come back and do it again. But then again, some have done it successfully and others might," he said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Crane topples into lake

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A construction worker escaped serious injury Wednesday when a 20-ton crane he was operating on the Lake Nasworthy bridge toppled into the lake, authorities said.

Jesse Villalon, an employee of Strickland & Knight Construction Co. of Big Spring, was rushed to the emergency room of Angelo Community Hospital, where he was treated and released, hospital officials said.

According to Louis Selvera, also an employee of the construction company, Villalon was lifting concrete curbing sections when the crane toppled into the water.

"He (Villalon) was swinging the load over to unload on the truck when the crane went over. He was in the cab when it hit the water. The cab door was open, but he did not try to jump out," Selvera said.

The crane was submerged in the water about one or two minutes before Villalon came to the surface, Selvera said.

Policeman shot in hip

TEXARKANA (AP) — A policeman was shot in the hip and clubbed in the head early Wednesday after his foot chase of a man who had been driving a vehicle with no license plates, officials said.

Police Chief Lee Spradlin said officer Bob Birl, 28, was found lying wounded in a Texarkana alley after radioing in at 3:05 a.m. that he was preparing to chase a suspect on foot.

Birl was in stable condition Wednesday in the surgery intensive care unit of Wadley Regional Medical Center.

Spradlin said Birl reported that he stopped a 1977 Toyota after noticing it had no license plates. A later check of the vehicle's serial number showed it had been reported stolen Tuesday in Dallas.

Birl's service revolver was found beside him in the alley, and Spradlin said the officer apparently was shot with his own gun.

A man identified as Anthony Jackson, 24, of Dallas was found hiding under a house nearby, Spradlin said. He was arrested and charged with attempted capital murder and with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

INS to continue raids

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service has turned down a request by local officials to stop raiding a downtown day-laborer site.

Assistant City Manager Rolando Bono told immigration officials that raids on the site had prompted protests from business people and caused traffic problems.

In a letter Wednesday, immigration service District Director Richard Casillas said the raids will be "infrequent" but will continue.

Bono said in an earlier letter to Casias that the day-labor site was established to ease traffic problems caused by employers picking up laborers in different areas of downtown.

INS agents raided the area and arrested seven undocumented workers four days after the site opened.

Alien smuggler arrested

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal agents arrested a Detroit truck driver who they said was carrying 11 undocumented aliens in his tractor-trailer rig, authorities said Wednesday.

Randell Archie Cope, 42, was charged with transporting undocumented aliens and was being held on a $20,000 bond.

Cheesecake month takes cake

By LINDA ANDERSON

This is a real stop-the-presses:

November is National Cheesecake Month.

I don't know if that means anything to you, but around here it is reason for celebration. After all — to paraphrase an old commercial — you never outgrow your need for cheesecake.

However, even though I love cheesecake, I have never made one from scratch. Cheesecake recipes call for huge amounts of cream cheese and sour cream and springform pans, ingredients I never happen to have on hand when I'm in my baking mode. Besides, they also require a certain amount of time, which is often at a premium around our house.

Enter Jell-O to the rescue, with its Jell-O Real Cheesecake mix in a box. Looked easy enough, so we checked it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

An 11-ounce box of cheesecake mix cost $1.69, which is considerably less than a bought cheesecake. That averages out to about 21 cents per serving, if you actually cut the cheesecake into eight pieces as suggested. (There are places in town where you can buy slices of cheesecake for $2 or more per slice — that's per slice! Granted, they are large slices, but even so, they aren't that big!) (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The Jell-O cheesecake was easy enough to make — most of the ingredients were in the box; all the cook has to do is add sugar and margarine to the crust mixture and milk to the filling mixture.

And here's good news — according to label information, the cheesecake really does have some nutritional value (maybe not much, but some). One serving, prepared as directed, is listed as containing 280 calories, 10 percent of the protein and riboflavin, 15 percent of the calcium and 20 percent of the phosphorus suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

Label advertising claims the product is "the best tasting cheesecake mix." I don't know about best-tasting, but in taste test, the cheesecake turned out to be very pleasant — nothing to write home about, but pleasant. It will never take the place of real, from scratch, hard-to-make cheesecake, but for dessert lovers in a hurry, the Jell-O cheesecake could be a useful way bring a cheesecake craving under control — until the real thing comes along.

Snacks nutritionally significant

By MARIAN FARR

Recent research shows snacks are making a greater nutritional contribution to the diets of women and children. U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists compared data on the food intake of women and children in 1977 to new data collected in 1985.

The 1985 data showed more women and children reported eating four times a day than three times a day. In 1977, three meals a day was reported most frequently.

Seventy-six percent of the women and 83 percent of the children in the current study identified one or more of their eating occasions as a "snack." Those figures were much lower — 60 percent for women and 62 percent for children — in 1977.

Because we're eating more snacks, they are making a greater nutritive contribution to our diets. For example, women in the USDA study got 9 percent to 19 percent of their calories and nutrients from snacks in 1985, compared with 6 percent to 15 percent in 1977.

Children got 9 percent to 22 percent of their food energy and nutrients from snacks in 1985, compared with 6 percent to 16 percent in 1977.

Figures like these should make us stop and think about the kinds of foods we're eating and feeding our children for snacks. Many standard snack foods — chips, cookies, sodas, candy bars — are relatively high in sugar, sodium and fat for the nutrients they provide. If a snack is going to be the fourth "meal" of the day, it should fit into a balanced diet.

A balanced diet will include protein foods, dairy products, grains and cereals, fruits and vegetables each day, while going light on fats, sugars and alcohol.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Pomegranate juice made

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I use pomegranates for juice. We make a mess when working with them. Is there an easy way to get them apart and get rid of the bitter white part? We would also like to know how they are done commercially because our juice isn't clear like the kind one can buy. Mrs. L.W. Masebrook, Ontario, Calif.

A. In the book "Canning, Freezing and Drying," by the editors of Sunset Books and Sunset Magazine, the following method of making pomegranate juice is offered:

"Cut the crown off each pomegranate and lightly score the peel lengthwise down the sides in several places. Submerge the scored fruit in a bowl or sink full of cold water and let soak at least five minutes. Holding the fruit under water, break sections from the pulp; as you work, the seeds will sink to the bottom and the peel and pulp will float. With a wire strainer, skim off and discard the peel and pulp.

"Whirl about 1½ cups pomegranate seeds at a time in a blender or food processor until liquefied. Pour through a jelly bag or cheesecloth-lined strainer and let juice drain gradually. Or, to speed the straining, press juice through the cheesecloth. Wear rubber gloves to avoid staining hands. Store in refrigerator up to five days.

"You'll get about 3½ cups juice from seven eight medium-sized pomegranates."

Q. When I ate at one of the Stuckey's restaurants (a chain along the Eastern seaboard), my hot dog left a red dye on the bun. It turned my stomach. Where do they get these hot dogs, and what caused the red color? B. McGregor, Kingston, N.Y.

A. Stuckey's restaurants has recently instructed its franchisees to switch to Oscar Mayer all-beef hot dogs, according to Burns Rockwell, vice president. Apparently you were not alone in finding the old hot dogs unsatisfactory.

In Mr. Rockwell's experience there are two ways of making hot dogs: One: "The hot dog is put in a casing. It is then put in a steam chest until cooked. When the meat is cooked it is white. The casings are removed and the hot dog is then dipped into a vat of red dye. The meat used for this product is usually not a very high quality."

Two: "Smoke the hot dog until it is cooked. This is a slow process and only the top-quality meat packers use the process. The hardwood smoke is what gives the hot dog the red coloring."

And incidentally, the redness of a hot dog is caused by the chemical sodium nitrite. This chemical also causes the redness of bacon and ham, bologna and other lunch meats.

Q. I often drive by a lumberyard that has a sign outside offering free sawdust. I like to get anything for free, but what do you use sawdust for? I don't have the nerve to go in and ask. P. Lacey, Mill Valley, Calif.

A. Long ago if you had a butcher shop or an Italian restaurant you could spread sawdust on the floor, a quaint practice one doesn't see anymore, let alone butcher shops. I once bought a stuffed raccoon at a country auction and when I brought it in the house my dog attacked it, and sawdust flew in all directions from the dead animal's innards.

Other than stuffing raccoons, I couldn't think of what to do with sawdust until I called a lumberyard to ask if they gave away sawdust. The manager said they gave away small amounts of it for people to use as mulch in their gardens, or for ground cover to deter the growth of weeds. They also give away shavings for animal bedding. Large amounts of sawdust are sold to make particle board.

Any readers who use sawdust for other purposes please let us know.

Q. In a recent column you mentioned old-fashioned whipping cream. The supermarkets where I shop carry ultra-pasteurized heavy cream but no unadulterated cream. Where can I find the old-fashioned kind? C. Redoutey, Detroit, Mich.

A. The problem may be that you're looking for whipping cream that has no additives whatsoever. The only way you can get such pure cream is to pour it off the top of a bottle of milk that hasn't been homogenized, and although I wish unhomogenized milk were available, I haven't seen this product in years.

Basically there are two types of whipping cream available in most areas — the regular kind, which contains a number of additives (including coloring in some cases) and that which is called old-fashioned, or old-time, which is more expensive but usually contains mono- and di-glycerides, polysorbate-80 and carrageenan. Their purpose it to thicken the cream, to make it more stable and to keep it from separating. The additives are harmless.

Vanessa Harris, a home economist at Michigan State University, advises us that in the Detroit metropolitan area "old-fashioned" whipping cream may be found at the Farmer Jack stores.

DEAR ABBY

Talks one-sided

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a girlfriend who calls me on the phone. I call her, too, and we talk. (I am also a girl.) The trouble is she does most of the talking. Like last night she called and asked what I was doing over the weekend. I told her, "Nothing special." Then she said, "Well, I'm going camping with so-and-so and then we're going here and there," and on and on and on. Then I started to tell her what I had done a few days ago and she said, "Sorry, I have to go now — my favorite TV show is coming on."

This girl lays all her problems on me. What do I do when I have problems and want to tell her about them and she doesn't have time to listen? She's never interested in what I do; she just wants to talk about herself. — HURT IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR HURT: Don't phone; tell her in person exactly what you have told me. Let her know that you feel hurt, used and frustrated when she wants to talk only about herself and never has time to listen to you. Having said that, if she changes her tune and makes your relationship one of give and take, you'll know she's a friend worth having. If not, you won't have to look far to find a more considerate and generous friend.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin and I have been arguing about something for years and I think you are the one who can settle it. How do people figure out how old a dog is? I say when a dog lives 10 years, he is a 10-year-old dog.

My cousin insists that we do not calculate a dog's age the same way we calculate a person's age. For example, a dog who lives for 20 years is ready to die of old age. Please explain this. — REP IN SAVANNAH, GA.

DEAR REP: According to my veterinary expert, Dr. James Isaacs of Encino, Calif., the first year of a dog's life is equal to 15 in a human's. The second year brings the dog to a "human" age 24. After that, each year is equal to four years more of human life. Interestingly, the smaller the dog, the longer the life. So if your pup has been with you for 16 years, you have an 80-year-old dog.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have had a running battle about something we hope you can settle. You see, we have a 2½-year-old daughter who has been in two beauty pageants and has won trophies, crowns, ribbons and banners. I would like to hang a few large pictures of her in a beautiful dress, wearing her crown, surrounded by all her trophies. We are both very proud of her, but he says it's not proper and he's so stubborn I can't budge him. He insists pictures like that belong in our bedroom, and if I want pictures in the living room, that's what albums are for.

It was his idea to write to you. My mother agrees with my husband. — STILL ARGUING

DEAR STILL: So do I.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Different in Indiana," who wanted to be married in black, called to mind this little poem I've known since childhood:

Married in white, you've chosen right,
Married in blue, you will always be true.
Married in green, ashamed to be seen,
Married in red, you'll wish you were dead.
Married in brown, you will live out of town,
Married in gray, you will go far away.
Married in yellow, you're ashamed of your fellow,
Married in black, you will wish you were back. (single)

I never thought I'd ever write to Dear Abby, but I couldn't resist the temptation. — OKLAHOMA WIDOW, AGE 96

Traditional 'American hot fudge sundae' made in microwave oven

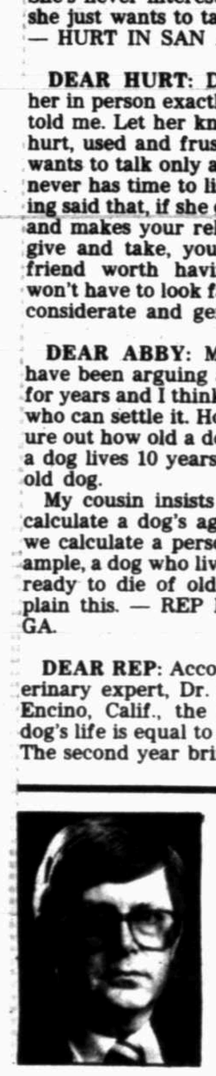

United Press International

RADNOR, Pa. — The latest microwave food is none other than the good old American hot fudge sundae, and marketing research results indicate that it tastes just fine.

According to Food Engineering magazine, the Johnstown Company, a Milwaukee-based food manufacturer, has developed a microwaved sundae called "Hot Scoop," using a patent-pending process.

If heated for the right amount of time (about 28 seconds) the topping becomes warm and the ice cream stays cold.

Three varieties — hot fudge, caramel and mint hot fudge — are being developed, Food Engineering reports. In home tests with 150 families in two cities, reaction to the product was favorable. The results showed 95 percent purchase interest and an "all family" appeal.

BETTER BUSINESS

Coupons tricky

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Coupon books have been around for years and some have worked well for merchants and for consumers. However, there have been some that have caused problems.

For the consumer: If considering buying a coupon book, examine the proposition carefully. Be sure you understand all of the conditions. Some coupons are for limited times and days or usable only by appointment. Remember, the merchant who participates does not receive the purchase price — the promoter takes out his expenses and profit. And decide how much effort is involved. It is worth the price?

For the merchant: Be sure to read and understand any contract presented by the coupon book promoter. It would be best to have your attorney look at it. Be sure to look at your coupon before it is sold, and be sure you can afford to give away free services or products. Could you accomodate all coupon holders if they came in? Remember, the profit-making potential may not be real. Lots of coupon book buyers are bargain-chasers, and seldom convert to steady customers. Check on the promoter's reputation and track record, too. Don't forget, your firm's reputation could be damaged.

John K. Schmidt is president of Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

Midland High Bulldogs shoot for winning season

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ABILENE — The Midland High Bulldogs went through their final practice session of the 1986 season Wednesday at Memorial Stadium and they made it a light one. No contact, wearing shorts, shoulder pads and helmets.

"We just decided, since it was the last work day, to run through the plays and make it a learning day," said MHS head coach Doug McCutchen. "We're just trying to get our legs back under us."

THE BULLDOGS are coming off a 35-15 victory over Odessa High to end a four-game losing streak and are looking for a win over Abilene Cooper Friday night at P.E. Shotwell Stadium to claim a winning season. The 'Dogs are taking a 4-4 record into the contest, 1-4 in District 4-5A play while Cooper is 2-7, 1-4.

"It's a big game for us," said McCutchen. "If we win this one we go to 5-4 and three of our losses will have been against Top 10 teams in the state. All three teams, Lee, Permian and San Angelo have been in the Top 10 at one time or another."

The game is equally important for Abilene Cooper, especially since the Cougars have a lot of underclassmen on the team and a win could help them in 1987. Also, it would snap a long dry spell Cooper has suffered at home.

"Our seniors have not won in Shotwell Stadium since 1984," said Cooper head coach Larry Peel. "They didn't win a game here in '85 and haven't won this year so it's very important to our seniors that we win one here to give us a positive frame of mind going into the off season."

For the Bulldogs to win, McCutchen feels it's important for Midland to adjust to Cooper's constantly shifting defensive unit.

"We've got to be able to move the ball against all those defensive formations," said McCutchen. "If they continue to shut us out, it could be a great opportunity for them."

And that means taking on several key Cougar defenders like linebackers James Hunter and Russell Webb, who are "returning starters for them," said McCutchen. "Those two are a big key to their defense."

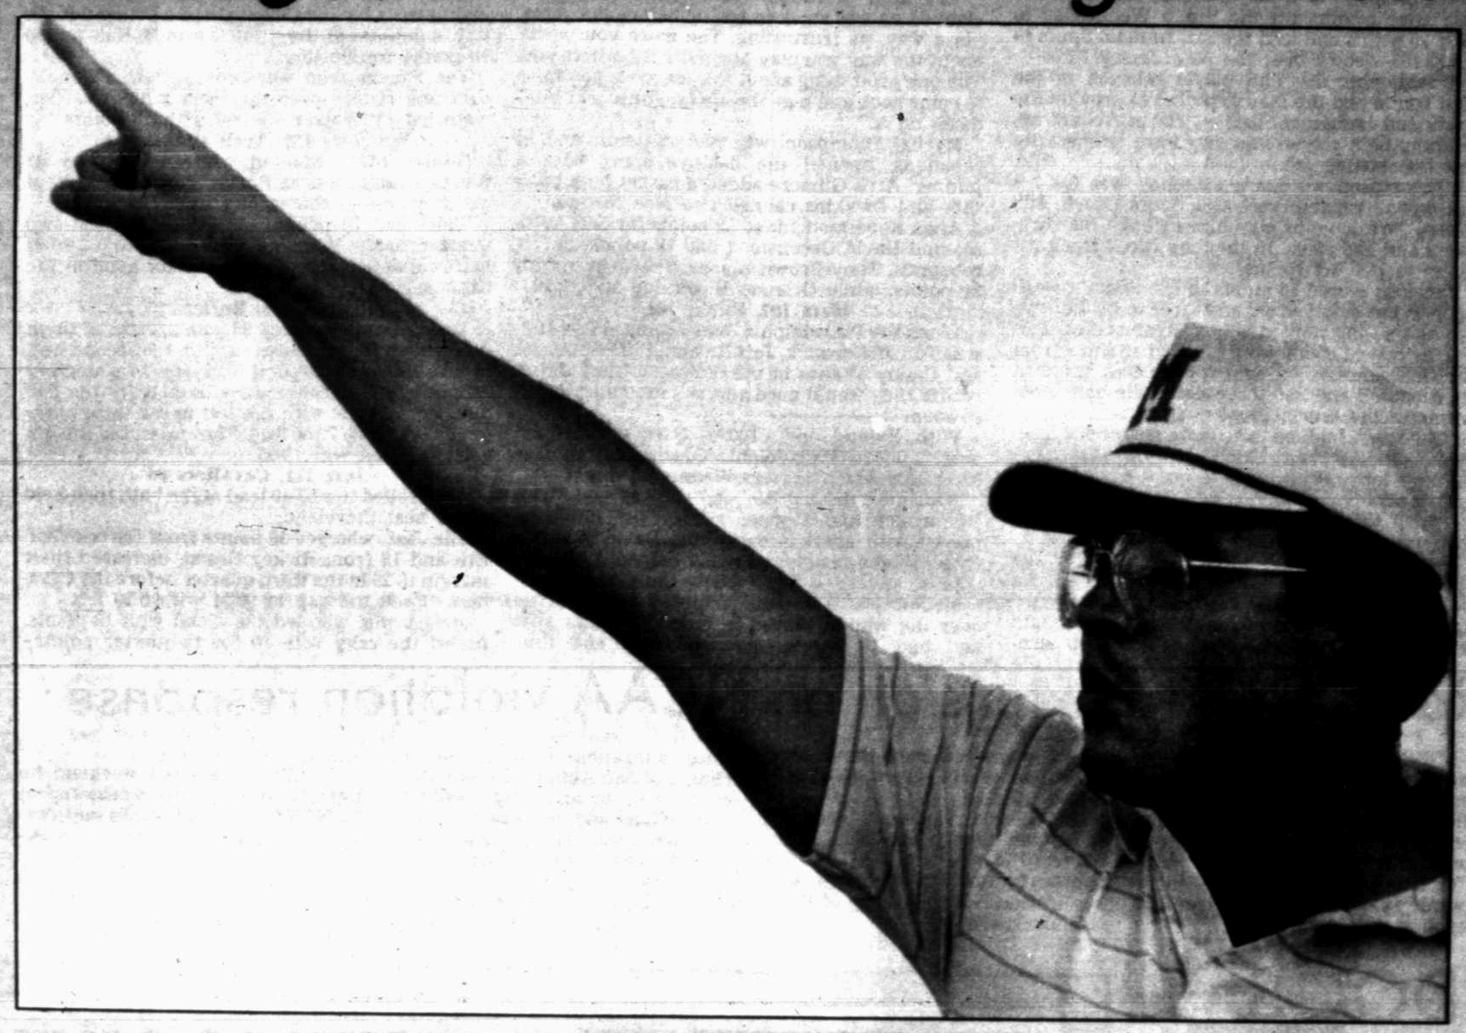

When the Bulldogs have the ball, Peel is most concerned about halfback Anthony Adkison and quarterback Jaime Madrid.

"They run the veer and we have to be sure we stop their triple option," said Peel. "We have to have someone responsible for the dive, somebody for the quarterback and somebody stationed for the pitch.

"The key to stopping Midland is stopping Adkison. He's got good speed, good quickness and he's dangerous when he gets past the line of scrimmage. Also, we have to control the quarterback. Madrid does a good job running the veer and throwing the football."

AND FOR Cooper to beat Midland?

Two coaches bite dust early in NHL season

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Boston Bruins lost a game and a coach Wednesday night.

Second-year coach Butch Goring got the ax Wednesday night after the slumping Bruins were pummeled 8-3 by the Buffalo Sabres for their third straight loss. Ironically, it happened in Buffalo, where Scotty Bowman's job as coach and general manager of the Sabres had seemed to be the one in jeopardy.

Instead, the Sabres, who've now won three in a row, helped end Goring's first NHL coaching stint after just 93 regular-season games with their second blowout of the Bruins this week. Boston is now 5-7-1, just three points ahead of the last-place Sabres in the NHL's Adams Division.

Meanwhile, Scotty Bowman, the winningest coach in the NHL history, has stepped down as coach of the Buffalo Sabres and will be replaced by assistant Craig Ramsay, according to a report published today.

The Buffalo News reported the team will hold a news conference today to announce the switch.

The paper, quoting unidentified sources outside the team, reported that Bowman made the decision to step down.

The newspaper said Bowman will keep the title of general manager and director of hockey operations.

Bowman was under pressure last week after the team got off to the worst start in its 17-year history and owned the worst record in the league at 1-7-2. The Sabres have won their last three games, however, but still are only 4-7-2 and last in the Adams Division.

Reports of Goring's impending departure began to surface after a 7-1 loss Sunday to Buffalo and culminated when Bruins publicity director Nate Greenberg made the announcement after Wednesday's game.

"He got his notice from Harry Sinden and left," Greenberg said. "I have no further comment as to who the coach will be."

"This is a business," Goring said during an interview Tuesday. "This isn't a game anymore. We all have to act like business people. If you don't do well, business people get fired, be it me or the players themselves."

Several of the Bruins' players felt Goring was not to blame for the team's problems.

"I feel bad for Butch," said winger Rick Middleton. "Collectively, as a team, we let him down. We didn't expect this thing to happen. I don't like to see anyone lose his job."

"It's so sad. We've had so many injuries and tonight we tried to be too cautious," added left wing Charlie Simmer, who was Goring's teammate when they played for the Los Angeles Kings. "We wanted to win so badly for Butch. We had to play a perfect game. We didn't, we went out and made a lot of mistakes. He didn't have too many breaks. He inherited a lot of injuries. It was a tough start, I thought."

The two candidates mentioned for the Bruins job after Goring was fired were Terry Crisp, a former Bruin and current coach of Moncton in the American Hockey League, and former NHL coach Tom McVie.

Chap Classic underway

Three Point Play makes college debut

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Another basketball season got underway at the Chaparral Center today and the three-day Chap Classic marks the introduction of the Three-Point Shot, not to be confused with the Three-Point Play. It's a play that could send shockwaves through the game..or will it?

According to Midland College Coach Jerry Stone the much-anticipated rule change, will have very little effect on the offensive machinations of a team, yet it will have a dramatic effect on the game.

"The Three Point Play isn't going to make that much difference on offense," says Stone, "That is, it's not going to change anything until you get down to the finish when it will win and lose games."

As far as strategy and plays, it will have no effect. "But it will still have an impact. Three shots and you can be down 9-0," says Stone.

Stone's Chaps and the Three Point Play will be on display at 7 p.m. against Grayson County College. Barton County and South Plains College will play at 9 p.m. to complete the first round.

Earlier today, the tournament got underway with Odessa College and Cisco at 3 p.m. and Howard College and Garden City, Kan., at 5 p.m.

Stone feels the three-point arc, 19 feet nine inches, "is a shot anybody can make. Surely, people are not going to sit back in a zone. That's where you'll see the change, on defense."

One other expected impact area resulting from last year's legislation is Proposition 48, which so far has had no noticeable effect. Some predicted a lot of high risk students would be skipped over by the four-year colleges and would wind up in junior college until they could make their grades.

"I don't see that yet," said Stone. "They are taking those players and making them sit out the freshman year. They can't even work out with the team."

That means no practice, no competition and no progress for the student sidelined by 48 and only three years of eligibility after that freshman year.

For that reason, Stone believes that perhaps in the future, next year, the high risk student may be recommended to academically reliable two-year colleges.

When play resumes Friday, the top bracket will find the Howard-College-Garden City and Midland College-Grayson losers playing at 5 p.m. and winners at 7 p.m.

In the lower bracket, the Odessa College-Cisco and Barton County-South Plains losers will play at 3 p.m. while the winners meet at 9 p.m.

Saturday's games will be at 1, 3, 5 and 7 (chammpionship) p.m.

Citrus, Fiesta bowls start war for No. 1

DALLAS (AP) — The Florida Citrus Bowl and the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl launched a bidding war for a New Year's Day national championship game between No. 1 Miami and No. 2 Penn State, The Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions.

Each bowl is offering a $2.6 million package, the newspaper reported.

The Citrus Bowl committee decided Wednesday to offer each team $2.4 million and free hotel space in Orlando, Fla. The accommodations added $200,000 to the offer.

The newspaper attributed the report to unnamed bowl sources.

The Fiesta Bowl, played in Tempe, Ariz., will offer each team as much as $2.6 million, including $200,000 in travel costs. The Fiesta Bowl is considering guaranteeing the money even if one of the teams loses a game after this weekend.

Bruce Skinner, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl, said it appeared that the Fiesta and Citrus were the top contenders for a Penn State-Miami matchup.

"I think it's a 50-50 proposition," Skinner said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

The negotiations are under way two weeks before bowl invitations officially can be tendered on Nov. 22.

Miami was leaning to the Fiesta Bowl because it initially was willing to match the $2.4 million offered by the Orange Bowl.

One of the keys to the Citrus deal was a renegotiation of television advertising rates. Originally, commercials for the national telecast cost $40,000 per minute. But with the prospect of a national championship game, the Citrus Bowl asked its advertisers for $75,000 a minute in exchange for higher ratings that the game would probably produce.

Putting pluses with minuses

Perhaps an apology is in order.

After all, in this day of financial stress, matters concerning money are not to be treated with calloused indifference, a crime to which the plea is "guilty as charged."

It was assumed that those confused by the weekly point spread were few and far between, so the bewildered were dismissed with a flip column, too few, really, to bother with.

On both counts we were wrong, the flip treatment and the "too few" attitude. There are never "too few" and, in truth, probably represent the tip of the iceberg any way. At least, that's what has since been discovered.

The pluses and minuses taken for granted here might as well be the Theory of Relatively or Plato in the original version to many readers.

They don't and didn't have the slightest idea of what Notre Dame minus 20 over Navy meant. And after the smoke had cleared Monday, they didn't have the slightest idea of whether I had a good or bad week.

Probably, it would be better left that way for the sake of their pocket books and my reputation as an infallible seer of coming events.

It was during the Tennessee River Boys last week that a reader sought an explanation of the pluses and minuses and whether they were good or bad.

When it was suggested to the Mrs. that maybe a more detailed explanation was in order, the gentleman in front of us growled, "You do that and you'll have everybody in town looking for their bookie."

So the quandry remained. Explain in more detail or keep the readers in the dark for their own protection.

Although it will ruin my reputation, demonstrating the folly of trying to beat the spread might in the long run prove a public service.

It really isn't that complicated once you understand it. It only becomes complicated when one tries to turn the know-how into cash in hand.

For example, last week's line gave TCU plus 5 against Houston.

Translated, that meant that before the game even kicked off, TCU led Houston 5-0. Houston was a five-point favorite, according to the line.

It might also be pointed out that the line changes during the week in accordance with the response to the bait. If TCU plus 5 is tempting to Horned Frog faithful and they back it up with substance, the line may shrink to, say, TCU plus 3 by game time. The idea is to lure Houston money into the action and off set the TCU money.

At any rate, a prediction of TCU plus 5 against Houston, means Houston must win by at least six to collect on a Houston bet. If the score was 13-7 for Houston, the UH bettor would collect.

If TCU wins, or loses by less than five, 10-13, 6-7, 7-9, the Horned Frog bettor collects.

In last week's line, SMU was listed as plus 4 against Texas A&M. The actual score was 39-35 in favor of Texas A&M which made it a betting score of 39-39, which is called a push. Neither side collects. It's a tie, no bets collected or paid.

That's why you'll frequently see such lines as Texas Tech 1½ over Texas. It averts the possibility of a betting tie because a half point can't be scored.

Of course, you get some real cinches sometimes, like Navy plus 20 against Notre Dame. With Navy's record this year, they even lost to non-scholarship Penn, Notre Dame minus 20 over Navy is money in the bank. Only trouble was Navy only lost 33-14, only 19 points, so Navy plus 20 over Notre Dame was the winning pick.

The best bet is North Carolina State, a team that plays everything right down to the wire 31-30. Last week the line was South Carolina plus three against North Carolina State. The obvious pick was South Carolina plus three over NC State, the reasoning being that NC State might win, but it would be by a whisker. Sure enough, State won on the last play, 23-22.

Easy, huh?

But don't bet on it. The bookie wants his cut and it's 10 percent of the losing bet. They call it Juice.

Rookie sparks Spurs' NBA victory

Associated Press

The pressure of being first-round NBA draft choices seems to be having different effects on Johnny Dawkins and Dwayne 'Pearl' Washington in the early weeks of the season.

Dawkins, the 10th pick overall in last year's draft, seems to be a player whose star is on the rise after coming off the bench Wednesday to tally 25 points and lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 112-103 vicotry over the New Jersey Nets.

Washington, the 13th player selected in the first round and the man expected to provide the spark and excitement in the Nets' backcourt, appears to be a player who may have temporarily lost his starting job.

"The reason we drafted Johnny was for his one-on-one capabilities," said Spurs Coach Bob Weiss. "We have to play him through his turnovers and bad shots. In the long run, I think it's going to pay off for us."

Dawkins scored 16 points in the Spurs' season opener, but only had six and three in his last two outings, seeing limited action. Against New Jersey, he played 35 minutes, hit 10 of 15 shots from the field and five of eight free throws, grabbed six rebounds and had three assists. He had seven points in the crucial final quarter.

"The coach told me to be more aggressive, penetrate and look for my shot," Dawkins said. "He's shown a lot of confidence in me. I worked a lot both mentally and physically to prepare for this season. I think the mental pressure is tougher than the physical pressure."

But while Dawkins was a key man for the Spurs in the decisive fourth quarter, Washington was on the bench. The former Syracuse guard upset Nets Coach Dave Wohl by showing up late for the team's pre-game meeting and then turning in a lackluster effort that included 10 points and one assist in 19 minutes.

Although Wohl would not specifically name Washington, it appeared his star rookie was the target when he said after the game: "I expect to change my starting lineup for the next game."

The Nets meet Milwaukee here on Friday.

"It's kind of tough," said Washington, who claimed he was stuck in traffic before the game. "In a way, its frustrating. The more you worry about the way you play, the more it bothers you. The one good thing about this league is you have to come back and play the next night so you can't dwell on it."

Mychal Thompson, who had 22 points and 11 rebounds, opened the decisive spurt with a jumper. Artis Gilmore added a basket on a hook shot and Dawkins canned two free throws.

Alvin Robertson added 22 points for San Antonio and David Greenwood had 19 points and 11 rebounds. Tony Brown topped New Jersey with 21 points, while Orlando Woolridge added 19.

76ers 107, Bucks 101

When the Philadelphia 76ers acquired Roy Hinson, Tim McCormick, Jeff Ruland, Cliff Robinson and Danny Vranes in the offseason, they didn't realize they would need all that frontcourt depth so soon.

With Ruland and Charles Barkley sidelined with injuries, Philadelphia Coach Matt Guokas used only seven players Wednesday night.

"Our guys did a great job," Guokas said. "Tim McCormick had a super game. Cliff Robinson played with great intensity and David Wingate came off the bench and really helped. I like the role of underdog and I know the players do."

McCormick, a 7-footer acquired from Seattle over the winter, played in Ruland's center spot and had 18 points, nine rebounds and four blocked shots. Julius Erving also scored 18 points, while Robinson and Hinson added 16 each and Wingate, a rookie, had 12.

Celtics 133, Pacers 102

Boston demolished Indiana, taking a 76-49 halftime lead and coasting to its 43rd consecutive home victory.

Larry Bird had 38 points, 11 rebounds and eight assists for the Celtics despite sitting out the last 14 minutes of the game. Kevin McHale added 23 points for Boston.

The Pacers, who were coming off a double-overtime victory over the 76ers a night earlier, were led by Walker Russell with 16 points.

Warriors 102, Trail Blazers 92

Golden State handed winless Portland its fourth straight loss as Purvis Short scored 20 of his 31 points in the second half.

Short had 10 points in each of the last two quarters as the Warriors came back from a 46-44 halftime deficit to take the lead for good in the third period.

Pistons 109, Bullets 85

Adrian Dantley scored 28 points, eight of them in less than four minutes early in the second half to give Detroit a 22-point lead over Washington.

Dantley's four consecutive baskets for the Pistons, the last one with 8:05 left in the third quarter, gave them a 72-50 lead. The closest the Bullets got after that was 78-65.

Jazz 111, Cavaliers 95

Utah rolled to a 67-40 lead at the half, then held on to beat Cleveland.

The Jazz, who got 20 points from Darrell Griffith and 18 from Rickey Green, increased their margin to 29 in the third quarter before the Cavaliers closed the gap to 99-91 with 5:20 left.

Mel Turpin, who led Cleveland with 18 points, fueled the rally with 10 fourth-quarter points.

California fires Joe Kapp

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — University of California officials announced Wednesday that Joe Kapp will not return as head football coach after he completes this season.

Athletic Director Dave Maggard said he asked Kapp to resign last Saturday, but the coach refused. Maggard said the university decided to let Kapp coach the Golden Bears, 1-7, through its final three games this year and then dismiss him.

"I think everybody wants to have a winning coach," he said. "I think everybody is looking for a new coach who can win ... who can improve the situation."

Kapp, a former quarterback in the National Football League, has been the head coach of the Golden Bears since 1982.

Raiders given extension on NCAA violation response

LUBBOCK (AP) — The NCAA has extended by three months the deadline for Texas Tech to respond to allegations of recuiting violations, Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones said.

Tech now has until Feb. 1 to respond, said Jones. The previous deadline was Monday.

Tech was notified of the charges in September and given 45 days to appeal.

The alleged violations occurred under the tenure of Coach Jerry Moore, who was replaced last December by David McWilliams, who was previously a University of Texas assistant coach.

Most allegations involved the recruiting of San Antonio Judson players Chris Pryor and Chip Lambert.

Pryor has said he was provided with cash, boots, and the use of hotels and a rental car by Tech booster Charles Whisenhunt, former Red Raiders player Danny Whisenhunt and former Tech assistant Rodney Allison, now at Duke.

McWilliams said last weekend he didn't think the school would appeal the NCAA'S findings. Jones said Texas Tech has completed its own investigation into the allegations.

Jones said the NCAA notified the school it was extending the deadline because of a busy NCAA schedule.

"We're going to have to throw the football," said Peel. "That's what we do best. Three or four weeks ago we decided to throw the football and we have been doing it very well. Scotty (Pugh) has matured very well."

Pugh has matured enough to catch McCutchen's attention.

"Their quarterback is a sophomore and he has really been getting better every game, which sophomores tend to do," said McCutchen."

Statistically, the Bulldogs have the edge on both sides of the ball. The Midland High offense has gained 2,154 total yards to rank fourth while Cooper is sixth at 1,766.

Defensively, the Bulldogs have allowed 2,004 yards to Cooper's 2,349. Both have played pass defense well this year with MHS allowing only 595 yards (second in 4-5A) and Cooper 805 (fourth).

Individually, Adkison is the game's top runner with 571 yards, closely followed by Cooper's Roderick Brown at 537. The two are fifth and sixth in district rushing stats.

Passing the football, Pugh is the No. 1 quarterback in the district with 1,025 total yards but has only thrown four touchdowns compared to 11 interceptions.

Midland counters with Madrid in fourth place with 728 yards with five TDs and five interceptions.

The Cougars own the top three receiving spots with Robert McAdams, Brown and Jeff Ireland leading the pack with 25, 16 and 14 catches. Midland's top receiver is Clyde Govan with 10 catches.

Odom, Saul nail passing records

Associated Press

Wilbur Odom of San Antonio Holmes and Kirk Saul of Valley undertook a massive rewrite of the state's passing records last weekend.

Odom, who plays for Texas' No. 1-ranked Class 5A team, broke two state records with 411 passing yards and touchdown passes of 53 and 14 yards in rallying Holmes past San Antonio Clark 31-30.

Saul, who had seven touchdown passes in a game earlier this year for his Class 1A team in the Texas Panhandle, hit five more last week against Knox City in a 54-19 victory that gave him a state record-tying 39 touchdown passes this season.

Saul completed 13 of 22 passes for 204 yards and touchdowns of 8, 5, 16, 45 and 51 yards to tie the record set by Barbers Hill's Randy McCollum in 1963.

Both players earned spots on The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

Odom hit 27 of 46 passes for a state Class 5A record 411 yards. His TD passes also gave him the state 5A record with 56 career touchdown passes, breaking the record of 54 by San Antonio Lee's Tommy Kramer, who went on to play for Rice and the Minnesota Vikings.

Maverick Detlef Schrempf (32) is beginning to improve as he gets more playing time in Dallas.

Mavericks getting 'Schrempf' feast

DALLAS (AP) — Detlef Schrempf found himself lost in the Dallas Mavericks' small forward shuffle last year. It was his first and what he hopes will prove his most miserable NBA season.

Ahead of Schrempf on the depth chart was, first and foremost, the team's top scorer, Mark Aguirre. No problem there. Schrempf was not about to try to float the idea that he was better than Aguirre.

But Jay Vincent and Dale Ellis also were there to stake their claims on minutes.

That left Schrempf, the Mavericks' top pick in the 1985 draft, to deal with erratic swings in playing time. He played only 969 minutes although he did better in the playoffs, averaging about 12 minutes in 10 post-season games.

Schrempf did not smile much. At one point, he considered going public with his gripes, but decided against it on the advice of teammate Rolando Blackman.

Then, during the off season, the Mavericks cleared out Vincent and Ellis for the purpose of creating minutes for Schrempf.

Tuesday night, Schrempf backed up his claims with what Coach Dick Motta said was Schrempf's best game as a pro.

Schrempf, getting 22 minutes due to Aguirre's foul problems, hit 8 of 9 shots and scored 18 points in Dallas' 118-86 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers. That was Schrempf's most productive scoring game since a 20-point effort last December against Boston.

"From all phases of the game, that was Detlef's best game since he's been with us," Motta said. "He was under control and hit his shots."

Schrempf did his damage on short jumpers, drives and offensive rebounds. At 6-foot-10, he usually has a height advantage on most small forwards.

"And a lot of times (against the Clippers), I had a big forward on me and I was able to use my quickness to beat him," Schrempf said.

Schrempf also was confused last season because he was being used as a shooting guard. This season, he knows what position he will play and when he will be put into the game.

"Last year, I really wasn't sure what to expect," Schrempf said. "Now I've got some idea. I never knew where I stood in the rotation. This year, the minutes are there, although I know I'm not just going to get them automatically. I've got to earn them."

Motta recognized that Schrempf was often in a funk last season because of his situation. There was nothing Schrempf could do but wait it out.

"He's a very self-critical person, and it wasn't exactly an easy situation for anyone," Motta said. "It was easy for him to get frustrated. Now we've taken away the logjam, and it's nice to see him respond."

Schrempf hit a 3-pointer Tuesday night, making him 3-for-3 this season. He was 3-for-7 for all of last season.

Lanier named top NL manager

Hal Lanier

HOUSTON (AP) — When Hal Lanier became the manager of the Houston Astros, he knew some people expected the team "to lose 100 games" this season.

Instead, the Astros won nearly 100 and became the National League West champions. And on Wednesday, Lanier became the first rookie to be named the NL Manager of the year.

"It was a great year for the team, and a great year for me," he said.

Lanier received the award one day before he was to start a belated honeymoon to Fiji. He and his wife, Mary, were married in the spring.

Lanier received 19 of a possible 24 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Davey Johnson, who managed the World Series champion New York Mets to a victory over the Astros in the NL playoffs, was second with three first-place votes. Roger Craig of the San Francisco Giants got the two other first-place votes and finished third.

The voting by two writers in each league city was done before the playoffs. Five points were awarded for a first-place vote, three points for second and one point for third.

Lanier finished with 108 points to 62 for Johnson, 42 for Craig, three for John Felske of the Philadelphia Phillies and one for Jim Leyland of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Last week, Lanier was named Associated Press Manager of the Year in nationwide balloting by sports writers and broadcasters. Earlier this week, Boston's John McNamara was named American League Manager of the Year by the BBWAA.

Lanier had been a coach for St. Louis for five years before Houston hired him after the 1985 season, one in which the Cardinals used pitching and an aggressive style to win the NL pennant. Lanier took over a Houston team that in 1985 finished tied for third in the division with an 83-79 record, 12 games behind the champion Los Angeles Dodgers.

"No one picked us to do well. People were saying we would finish in fifth place and lose 100 games," Lanier said.

But the Astros, with a style similiar to what Lanier had seen in St. Louis, went on to a 96-66 record, the second-highest victory total in the major leagues. Houston finished 10 games ahead of runner-up Cincinnati and won its second division championship.

The Astros lost to the Mets in six games in the closely contested playoffs, with the final game going 16 innings.

"We won the division and had a chance at going to the World Series," Lanier said. "We didn't quite make it, but what we did was satisfying."

Lanier said his biggest contribution to the Astros may have come off the field.

"I think I helped bring a winning attitude," he said. "The ballclub felt it was a good ballclub, but the desire to win this year seemed to be more than it had in the past."

Lanier said that once the season ended, "it crossed my mind" that he might win the award.

"But I didn't know if I was going to receive this honor," he said. "This is the biggest honor for me in my 25 years in baseball."

The Manager of the Year award was one of the few things that eluded Johnson and the Mets this season.

Johnson, reached in Tokyo where is managing a U.S. all-star team against a Japanese all-star team, said he didn't expect to win.

"I congratulate Hal Lanier," Johnson said.

Ditka ends QB suspense by calling on Tomczak

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Coach Mike Ditka ended the suspense Wednesday by announcing that Mike Tomczak will start at quarterback for the Chicago Bears when they meet the Buccaneers on Sunday at Tampa Bay.

Tomczak said he was ready for the challenge.

"Any time you get a chance to start, you try to do your best," he said.

There had been speculation earlier that Ditka might start Steve Fuller or Doug Flutie, who was activated Tuesday.

"I wouldn't hesitate to use Steve or Doug if the situation is right," Ditka said, adding that with the Bears' slump to 7-2, there may be more pressing problems than finding a replacement for the sore-shouldered Jim McMahon at quarterback.

"I don't think we should put all the responsibilities on the back of the quarterback," Ditka said. "He should have some help."

The Bears' latest outing was a 20-17 loss Monday night to the Los Angeles Rams.

Fuller started against the Rams and was yanked in the third quarter in favor of Tomczak. Fuller completed nine of 19 passes for 102 yards but was intercepted twice.

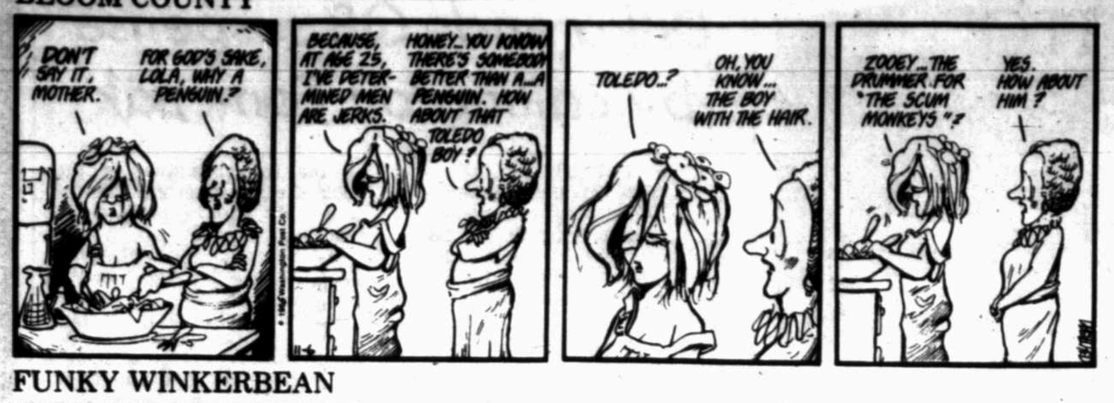

Tomczak completed only two of eight passes for 28 yards but was there to hand off to Thomas Sanders, who scored touchdowns on runs of 10 and 34 yards.

That gave the Bears a 17-10 lead, but Steve Dils hit Ron Brown with a 65-yard touchdown pass, and Mike Lansford booted a 50-yard field with four seconds remaining to give the Rams the victory.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

The Brilliancy Prize at the 10th European Junior Bridge Championship was won by Norway's Jon Andreas Hofstad for this fine effort from his country's match against Belgium.

The auction was tortuous. After cue-bids in the minor suits, North's four no trump was key-card Blackwood and South's response showed three aces (counting the king of trumps as an ace).

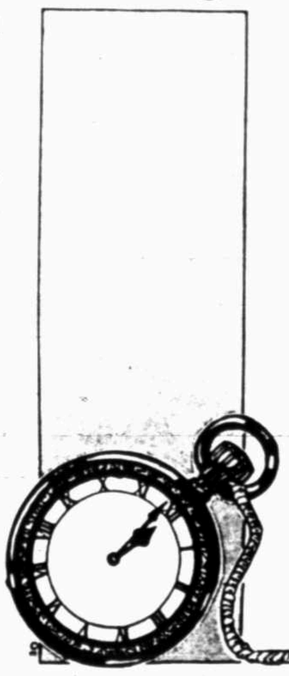

The final contract of six hearts was unimpeachable, and would have been easy with a normal 3-2 trump break. A slightly less inspired lead than the jack of trumps would have left declarer with no play, but he was quick to seize the opportunity he was given.

He won the first trick with dummy's ace, revealing the trump position. He cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club, came to the ace of diamonds and finessed the queen of spades. After cashing the ace of spades for a club discard, he ruffed a spade in hand and a club with the table's last trump. He reached the end position he desired by cashing the king-queen of diamonds.

By now, both declarer and West were down to nothing but three trumps each. All that remained to be done was to ruff a diamond with the seven of trumps. West could overruff, but he was then forced to lead away from his J-6 of trumps into declarer's K-8 tenace.

Economic troubles ensure Connally's horses won't win, place or show

Connally

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Former Gov. John Connally says business pressures are forcing him to auction off quarter-horse and thoroughbred racing stock.

"At the time we first acquired our running horses, I thought we would have ample time to devote to the breeding, training and racing of the horses, but that has not been the case," Connally said Wednesday. "The economic downturn and the pressures of the real estate business have demanded my total attention; consequently, we have decided to change the nature of our business."

Connally and his wife Nellie, who started breeding horses several years ago, plan to sell about 130 at a Nov. 22 auction at their Picosa Ranch.

They plan to replace their racing operation with a stud farm, starting with three horses, including Moneychanger TB, a thoroughbred by Buckpasser out of a full sister to the 1964 Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes winner, Northern Dancer, according to a statement.

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Houston Police Chief B.G. "Pappy" Bond was found shot to death Wednesday, apparently from a self-inflicted wound, authorities said. He was 61.

The former police chief was pronounced dead at his Houston home with a head wound about 6 a.m., police said.

Bond had been suffering from cancer, heart disease and diabetes for some time, according to his son, Buddy Bond.

"He had a bout with cancer and he had a heart attack and some medical problems. He was very depressed for some time," Buddy Bond said.

Harris County Medical Examiner Joseph Jachimczyk said his initial findings were that Bond committed suicide.

"There's little doubt that it was suicide," Jachimczyk said, adding that the official ruling will not be made until toxicology tests results are completed.

Bond was police chief from Jan. 20, 1976 until June 10, 1977, and had worked for the department for 24 years. He was appointed by then Mayor Fred Hofheinz to succeed Chief Carrol M. Lynn, who resigned.

Clark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dick Clark, who has been building on his televised dance show for 34 years, is offering stock in his company.

Dick Clark Productions said Wednesday it will offer 1.6 million shares it hopes will fetch $8 to $10 each, and use proceeds to expand its TV programming.

Dick Clark Productions was founded on the entertainer's long-running American Bandstand show.

A prospectus indicated that Clark received $1.55 million in compensation as chairman and chief executive in fiscal 1986 as well as another $1.1 million in performance fees from his company.

He will retain those titles in the public company and receive a base salary of $750,000 a year plus bonuses and performer fees, the prospectus said.

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday rejected an attempt by reclusive writer J.D. Salinger to block publication of an unauthorized biography that includes material from Salinger's copyright letters.

Salinger, author of the novel "The Catcher in the Rye," sued Random House and author Ian Hamilton to block publication of "J.D. Salinger: A Writing Life."

The book draws on copyright letters written years ago by Salinger and now filed in libraries at Harvard and Princeton universities and the University of Texas.

Salinger's lawyers obtained a temporary restraining order last month and sought a preliminary injunction on the theory that Salinger's copyrights were violated.

But U.S. District Court Judge Pierre N. Leval denied the injunction, writing in his decision that "Hamilton's use of Salinger's copyrighted material is minimal and unsubstantial...It does not diminish the commercial value of Salinger's letters for future publication."

Despite the copyright, Leval said, Hamilton was entitled to "fair use" of the letters. "Although a large amount of information is taken from the letters," he ruled, "the information is not protected by the copyright."

Hamilton's use of the copyright material, Leval ruled, "is limited to about 30 instances of the use of a word or a phrase or an image. In the rarest case, a complete sentence is taken."

NEW YORK (NYT) — Red Skelton won words of lofty praise in the Soviet newspaper Pravda the other day.

The story goes back to World War II, when the United States and the Soviet Union were allies and the American comedian, a hugely popular performer on radio and in the movies, bought a warplane in the fall of 1943 and gave it to the Russians as a contribution to the war effort.

He christened the plane "I Dood It," a phrase he had coined and popularized as the "mean widdle kid" on his radio program. It was also the title of a comedy, one of four movies he completed that year.

The Skelton plane, a Douglas A-20 attack bomber of a type that was commonly sent to the Soviet Union under the Lend-Lease program, was assigned to the First Guards Air Regiment, the air arm of the Baltic Fleet.

In a recent reunion of Baltic Fleet aviators, the talk was about the exploits of the succession of three-man crews that flew the gift plane from the American, Pravda said in its issue of Oct. 4.

"Many goods words were spoken about Red Skelton," Pravda said, as the veterans recalled the plane with the strange English phrase painted on its fuselage.

Skelton, now 73, lives in Rancho Mirage, Calif., and continues to make public appearances. His secretary, reached by telephone, said he was on tour this week and could not be reached for comment on Pravda's recalling the wartime episode.

The Soviet newspaper said that the regimental chief, Ivan I. Borzov, who later rose to air marshal and commanded all of naval aviation, first assigned the Skelton plane to one of the best pilots in the unit, Capt. Pyotr Streletsky, with Nikolay Afanasyev as navigator and Ivan Trusov as gunner and radio operator.

A few months later, in December 1943, the Soviet Navy newspaper Krasny Flot reported that "I Dood It" had sunk two large German transports.

Pravda did not say that the Skelton plane was only one of 14,000 Lend-Lease planes delivered to the Soviet Union in World War II, 3,000 of them A-20s. Like the Skelton plane, many of the A-20s sent to Russia were of the torpedo bomber version, carrying a 2,000-pound torpedo for use against enemy shipping.

Dollar mostly higher

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was stronger against most European currencies and the Japanese yen in active trading today. Gold was down in Europe after losing more than $6 in Hong Kong.

Dealers said that the dollar, after falling early Wednesday on news of Republican Party setbacks in U.S. Congressional elections, recovered and continued to climb.

The dollar's recent gains followed news that the United States and Japan had agreed that the dollar had fallen sufficiently since September 1985, when it was trading at 242 yen.

Originally there was no indication of a U.S.-Japan target for a desirable yen-dollar exchange rate, but the national newspaper Mainichi Shimbun, in today's editions, interpreted remarks by Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa as indicating a range of 154-160 would be appropriate.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

—2.0683 West German marks, up from 2.0635

—1.7265 Swiss francs, up from 1.7222

—1.3884 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3880

In London, the British pound rose against the dollar and was quoted at $1.4263, compared with $1.4210 Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $405.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $406.00. The midmorning recommended price fixed by the city's five major bullion dealers was unchanged from the opening bid price.

In Zurich, the bid price was $404.60, down from $406.50 late Wednesday.

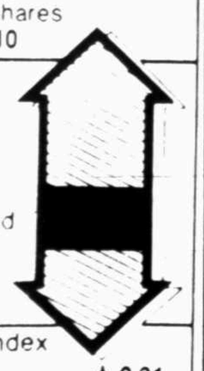

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $6.57 to close at a bid $403.02.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.62 a troy ounce, down from Wednesday's $5.68.

Lear reassures stockholders

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Lear Siegler Chairman Norman A. Barkeley said Wednesday that he has doubts that the aerospace and manufacturing conglomerate based here can remain independent in the face of offers from several companies to buy all or part of it.

Barkeley said that in recent weeks the company has received unsolicited bids from several "major American industrial and financial" companies as well as from the investment group of AFG Partners. The bids, he said, are under review by Lear Siegler's investment banker, Drexel Burnham Lambert, and he expects that the company will respond by the end of the year.

Although Barkeley would not name the other companies that have made bids, analysts have speculated that parts of Lear Siegler could be attractive to Ford, Allied Signal, Rockwell International and General Electric. Representatives of those companies could not be reached for comment late Wednesday.

Even before the offers were received, Barkeley said, the company saw itself as an attractive takeover target and was trying to restructure its operations to defend against moves from the outside.

Barkeley noted that, within the last 18 months, the company has sold six of its 52 operations and consolidated the rest into 29 divisions to streamline management. In addition, he said the company had been talking about a further restructuring involving just its automotive and aerospace units when AFG Partners' takeover bid was made last week.

"We had anticipated that we were a candidate for takeover," he acknowledged in an interview after the company's annual shareholder meeting. "I can't say I'm optimistic that we will keep the company independent," Barkeley added.

Those interview comments were his most extensive since AFG Partners, which owns 9.8 percent of Lear Siegler's stock, launched its unexpected $1.5 billion takeover attempt last week. Still, he would not give specifics of the company's defense strategy or the moves available to it.

"You can appreciate the sensitivity of this," Barkeley told reporters at a news conference after the subdued annual meeting in which he tried to assure shareholders that profits would perk up this yea after a 45 percent drop in fiscal 1986.

In a special notice to shareholders distributed at the meeting, Barkeley said Drexel's evaluation of restructuring alternatives "will be received in a short time, and we expect to announce a detailed plan or recommended course of action in the near future."

On Wall Street, investors again bid up the price of Lear Signal shares Wednesday to a new all-time high. In active trading, the stock closed at $90.25, up $2.

Analysts said the continued buying spree indicates that investors, who include a substantial number of arbitrageurs, believe that AFG Partners will not win Lear Siegler for its earlier, minimum $85-a-share bid. Analysts have repeatedly said that the company could bring between $90 and $105 a share from the right buyer or combination of buyers.

GM plants reported targeted for closing

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., ending weeks of speculation, announced today it will close 11 plants employing 29,000 people in four states.

"The decision ... is the first phase of the GM reorganization and modernization program, and other assembly, stamping, engine and component facilities are under study," the automaker said.

Closings were expected after GM announced third-quarter operating losses of about $338 million.

The 11 operations are in Michigan, Ohio, Missouri and Illinois.

They include the Fleetwood and Clark Street assembly plants, with 6,600 employees in Detroit, to be closed by the end of 1987; the Flint Body-Pontiac assembly operation making Chevrolets, Buicks and Oldsmobiles in Flint and Pontiac, with 4,500 employees, by the end of 1987; and the Chevrolet-Pontiac-Canada group plant that produces Chevrolet Camaros and Pontiac Firebirds, with 4,000 employees in Cincinnati, in mid-1988. Also to be closed is a stamping plant in Hamilton, Ohio, with 2,500 employees.

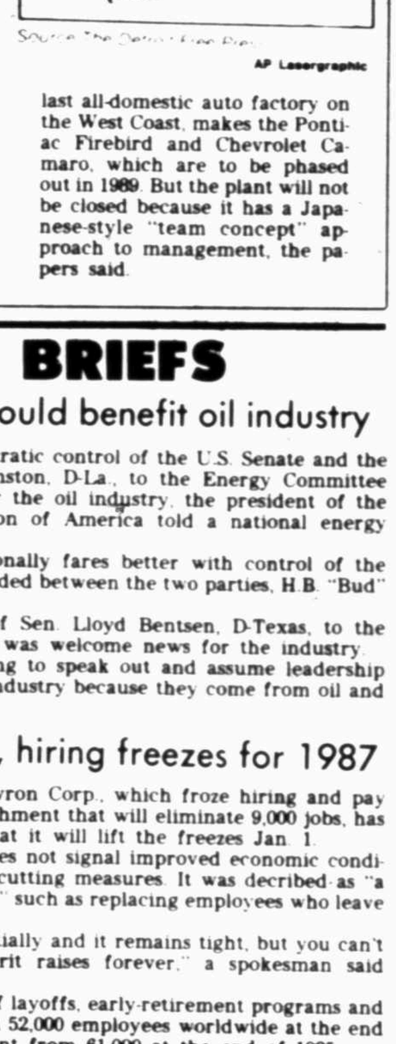

Also, a GM Truck & Bus Group plant employing 2,200 people in St. Louis, by mid 1987; a Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac group stamping plant that produces body panels, with 2,900 employees at Willow Springs, Ill.; and the Conner Street stamping plant in Detroit, with 700 workers.

GM said the three stamping plants will be phased out gradually, and will be closed by 1990.

The other two closings are the Pontiac Central Plant, has 2,200 employees building trucks and buses, by August 1988; and the Truck and Bus Assembly plant No. 1 in Flint, which employs 3,450 people, by August 1987. A second production line at that Flint plant will not be affected.

The GM assembly plant in Van Nuys, Calif., will remain open, according to unidentified sources quoted today by the Daily News of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Times.

The 39-year-old facility, the last all-domestic auto factory on the West Coast, makes the Pontiac Firebird and Chevrolet Camaro, which are to be phased out in 1989. But the plant will not be closed because it has a Japanese-style "team concept" approach to management, the papers said.

Judge will award fine in Texaco case

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — A federal judge will decide who will receive $7 million in a dispute between Texaco Inc., the Department of Energy and Hockley County royalty owners about overcharges by Texaco before crude prices were deregulated.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward Tuesday heard arguments in the case, which began in 1980 over federal regulations affecting oil properties in Hockley County.

The $7 million, which has been in escrow at a Lubbock bank since the suit was filed, represents the difference between the price Texaco was charging for oil from the field and a lower price mandated by the Department of Energy before deregulation in 1981.

Texaco, which owns the mineral rights, and royalty owner Stanford Harrell contend that the oil company deserves as much as 83 percent of the money because the company refined most of the oil. The Department of Energy claims that it should get all the money and distribute it to those whom Texaco overcharged.

The Energy Department bases its case on Texaco's acceptance in August of $46 million in a $257 million settlement of the department's multi-state stripper well court actions. Earlier court cases upheld the department's regulations defining what types of wells could be counted toward marginal production property, thus determining what prices companies could charge for oil.

Woodward did not set a date for the ruling.

Toys as far as the eye can see

ClayDesta Communications lists new clients

From Staff Reports

Approaching its two-year anniversary, ClayDesta Communications got a jump on the celebration Thursday by releasing a list of prominent, new state-wide customers on its long distance network.

Baylor University, Texas' oldest university, and MTech, the nation's largest financial institution data processor, top the list. In the last 30 days, ClayDesta sales and technical teams have signed up and connected the Texas offices of Halliburton, Dun & Bradstreet, E.F. Hutton, Santa Fe Minerals and ARCO. These companies join Texas Commerce Bank, InterFirst, MBank and Waco's Scott & White Hospital on the ClayDesta system.

By choosing ClayDesta Communications, Baylor becomes the first major university in Texas to provide long distance for its students. ClayDesta will handle the long distance traffic for Baylor's 4,000 on-campus students as well as all administrative long distance traffic. ClayDesta's digital fiber optic network will also link the Waco campus to the Baylor Medical Center in Dallas with 56k data transmission lines.

With MTech, the developer and operator of MPact, one of the nation's largest ATM networks, ClayDesta handles all of the company's voice and data traffic. In addition, MTech will also offer ClayDesta's digital long distance products along with its other turnkey services.

The network has undergone extensive changes since its original design as a West Texas network. Today the ClayDesta network spans the state with digital microwave towers and digital fiber optic cable, and makes up the state's first totally digital long distance network.

ClayDesta now has a local presence in 12 major Texas cities. In addition to its Midland and Odessa offices, other ClayDesta offices include Amarillo, Lubbock, San Angelo, Abilene, Dallas, Austin, Waco, Bryan/College Station, San Antonio and Houston. State-wide, ClayDesta now employs 300 people, and in Midland/Odessa there are 135 communications employees.

Like the number of employees, ClayDesta's market shares continue to grow. Midland and Odessa lead the way with 25 percent and 15 percent, respectively. In other areas, ClayDesta currently holds 23.6 percent of San Angelo, 7.8 percent in Austin, 11.3 percent in Amarillo, 10.7 percent in Waco and 10 percent in Bryan/College Station. Sales continue to grow at 10 percent per month, according to Clayton Williams, owner of ClayDesta Communications.

"We're not the same company we were two years ago," he said. "We've listened to businesses and we've tailored our services to fit those needs. An example is our state-wide WATS offering which lets a company combine all of its offices' long distance use taking advantage of a higher volume and resulted in the lowest possible price. By owning our own network, we can do a better job of controlling costs and providing the services our customers tell us they need to control their costs."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Democratic leaders could benefit oil industry

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Democratic control of the U.S. Senate and the elevation of Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., to the Energy Committee chairmanship spell good news for the oil industry, the president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America told a national energy conference.

The petroleum industry traditionally fares better with control of the White House and the Congress divided between the two parties, H.B. "Bud" Scoggins Jr. said Wednesday.

Scoggins added the elevation of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to the Finance Committee chairmanship was welcome news for the industry.

Johnston and Bentsen are willing to speak out and assume leadership roles on behalf of the petroleum industry because they come from oil and gas producing states, he said.

Chevron to thaw pay, hiring freezes for 1987

SAN FRANCISCO (LAT) — Chevron Corp., which froze hiring and pay early this year as part of a retrenchment that will eliminate 9,000 jobs, has said in an in-house publication that it will lift the freezes Jan. 1.

The company said the action does not signal improved economic conditions or any relaxation of its cost-cutting measures. It was decribed as "a return to fairly normal procedures," such as replacing employees who leave through normal attrition.

"The belt was tightened substantially and it remains tight, but you can't not hire people or not give merit raises forever," a spokesman said Wednesday.

Chevron is winding up a series of layoffs, early-retirement programs and other actions that will leave it with 52,000 employees worldwide at the end of the year, down about 15 percent from 61,000 at the end of 1985.

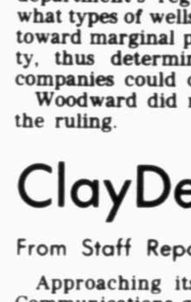

Lubbock firm shops K-Mart for cafeteria buy

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A Lubbock-based, privately held investment company is purchasing the Furr's Cafeterias chain from K Mart Corp.

Calvalcade Holding Inc. is acquiring the cafeteria's for an undisclosed price.

Don W. Fritz, chairman of Furr's Cafeterias Inc., and Harold W. Andrews, president, said K Mart has signed a definitive agreement with Cavalcade for the sale of all the outstanding shares of Furr's stock plus that of Bishop Buffets Inc. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

K Mart acquired the cafeterias in February 1980 for approximately $70 million.

Politicians and television — a lethal combination

Having just survived the nastiest political season ever, played out in our collective living and family rooms, everyone deserves a little rest and relaxation, at least — or more appropriately, a Distinguished Service Medal.

Judging from the sampling of this fall's commercials shown as part of the networks' election coverage on Tuesday, the mud slung by local and statewide candidates was rather garden-variety. The White-Clements "sludge-fest" seems typical of the quality of campaign in vogue this fall — concentrating on personalities, name-calling and character assassination — rather than issue-oriented candidate positioning.

Clements' ads offering a definition of "prevaricate" and the "What do you call a man who buys a foreign-built jet with tax money?" ad offer little insight into Clements' plans for coping with state revenue shortfalls.

White's radio campaign "In search of the Secret Plan..." did little to outline the candidate's positions, but did offer some measure of comic relief.

South Dakota Congressman Tom Daschle staged an inside look at a "strategy session" for incumbent Sen. James Abdnor, plotting how to make his challenger look unsympathetic to the plight of farmers. "We can make anybody look bad. That's our job," says one cigar puffing politico. "We'll say 'Daschle has never done anything for farmers.'," he gloats.

"But that's not true," rejoins a cohort.

"Who cares," comes the response.

Humor can defuse, but not hide, the venom behind the political strategists' plans.

In California, Sen. Alan Cranston's campaign forces fielded "Jackman Wolf," a typical TV record commercial huckster offering opponent Congressman Ed Zschau's "Greatest Hits." In the ad, Jackman promotes, "I Agree With Both Sides Now," "I'll Send your Dollars to the Contras," and "Caught in a Toxic Waste Dump."

The political opportunists were jumping on Zschau's earlier campaign rally singing and using it to poke fun at him.

Although Cranston came out on top of the voting, the biggest winners in the election were California television and radio stations and newspapers. The two men spent a total of $20.5 million — $3.75 per voter — in their statewide campaigns.

Closer to home, Lamar Smith and Pete Snelson spent more than $1 million in their run for the 21st District congressional seat.

From late last week until Monday, local radio and TV revenues must have peaked as county commission, judicial, congressional and other races came to a head. The best thing about the increase in ad sales — aside from the boost in revenues for local businesses — is that when they're selling time, we're not subjected to those annoying promo clips and public service announcements that they use to fill unsold time.

The television/politics coalition doesn't end there: Gopher is going to Washington.

Fred Grandy — the yeoman purser from The Love Boat — won his race for a Congressional seat from Iowa. With Gopher on Capitol Hill, can Capt. Merrill Steubing's appointment as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff be far behind?

The flip side of actors turning to politics — which is old hat these days, with Knute Rockne in the White House and Dirty Harry ruling Carmel-by-the-Sea — is prime time soaps turning to contemporary politics for story lines.

I'd be willing to bet that more people around the country have become aware of the concept of crude oil import fees in the past six weeks, since the Ewings of Dallas have begun debating them, than ever got the message from traditional industry efforts.

It's just possible that a few more people may understand the problems of today's oil field economy because Bobby and Pam have helicoptered out to the fields to shut down stripper wells and lay people off.

While J.R. is still far from being a sympathetic or fully drawn typical oil man, it's refreshing to see at least a touch of reality slipping onto the set.

Nebraska oil drillers hurting

SIDNEY, NEB. (UPI) — Nebraska companies plan to drill about 125 oil wells this year, compared with 330 last year, an industry spokesman said.

Paul Roberts, director of the Nebraska Oil and Gas Commission at Sidney, said the current drilling rate is about 25 percent of what it was a year ago. At present, oil is bringing about $14 a barrel on spot markets.

"Most of the industry seems to feel that they can get back and drill wells at $18," Roberts said recently. "But it won't be like it was in 1980."

However, Byrd Garrison, 61, owner of Banner Drilling Co. of Scottsbluff, said he going out of business and $18 oil would not bring him back.

"The oil business will go on without us and there'll be some money made," Garrison told The Omaha World-Herald.

Garrison, who started in the oil business just after World War II said, "The economy got so bad, and we couldn't see a turnaround in the near enough future, maybe not until 1990."

"We were losing $10,000 a month and four years at $10,000 a month — you just can't keep that up," he said.

Garrison sold his three drilling rigs this fall and laid off all 39 employees, keeping a secretary until his final paperwork is done this month.

He said he plans to work on his own on two upcoming wildcat well projects he is helping to finance.

Roberts said the oil industry knows little about Hasham Hazer, who replaced moderate oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani last week as head of Saudi Arabia's oil industry.

Yamani's moderation led him to avoid direct confrontation with other oil producing countries, Roberts said.

"If we lost that moderation, if someone exceeds their quota, the new man might be willing to open up the gates and flood the market," Roberts said. "A lot depends on what Nigera and Venezuala do. They've been the biggest cheaters on the quotas."

Roberts said Nebraska's crude oil production this year probably will be near 6.8 million barrels, possibly a percentage point or two below last year's production.

He said some existing wells are producing more because of new secondary recovery techniques.

While the total drilling volume is down, Roberts said some speculative drilling in Nebraska could give the state's industry a boost regardless of oil prices.

He said True Oil Co. of Casper, Wyo., is drilling into a deep-level formation in Sioux County that seismic data reveal holds the possibility of a major oil discovery.

Another well into the same formation is to be drilled in Cheyenne County, Roberts said.

He said Exxon Corp. also is signing oil leases in some parts of the Panhandle yet to be extensively explored.

If any of the wildcat companies yield large deposits of oil, Roberts said, oil companies could begin drilling rapidly regardless of the current oil price.

If that happens and if the demand for drilling in the state brings back profitable drilling fees, Garrison said he might consider getting back into business.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Many dividends declared on common stocks time to time

By BILL DOYLE

Q. When the first dividend check arrived on some common stock I purchased, it was for twice the expected amount. The account data enclosed with the check shows me owning twice the number of shares I bought. The stock certificate I received is for the correct number of shares.

This windfall has me wondering if I will be called upon, even sued, to return the excess dividend amount. Or, is it likely the company will never notice the error? I am tempted to keep this money.

Doyle

A. First off, make sure the dividend check is larger than the one to which you were entitled. You might find out that the company whose stock you bought either increased its dividend or paid an extra dividend.

Granted, a 100 percent increase in a regular dividend payment is unusual. However, when a company is very prosperous, that size dividend hike can happen. If that's the case, you'll be getting those fatter checks every time a dividend is paid.

Many companies declare extra dividends on their common stocks from time to time. Let's say the company pays 50 cents quarterly on its common. If you own 100 shares, you're entitled to $50 every three months. However, if the company declared an extra 50-cent dividend, along with the regular 50-cent quarterly dividend, you had a $100 check coming. Perhaps that's what happened.

You can check the correct dividend with your broker or in financial manuals at a big public library.

Here's hoping you learn you were entitled to that larger-than-expected dividend check. If you find out you were not, you're in a "let your conscience be your guide" situation.

Because you have possession of a stock certificate registered in your name, your ownership of the correct number of shares is recorded on the the books of the transfer agent. If the dividend checks are bigger than you're entitled to, there's an error on the dividend paying agent's books. There's a strong possibility that discrepancy will be discovered. But it might go undetected.

The last time this column mentioned a somewhat similar situation the mailbag bulged with screaming-mad letters from brokers, accusing me of encouraging customers to cheat.

Not true! I assume all readers of this column are upright citizens who overcome temptation, correct errors and immediately return money not rightfully theirs. Would that the same could be said about all brokers.

Q. I bought 200 shares of stock in January 1979. The stock was split two for one in 1980 and I received a certificate for 200 more shares. In 1981, needing money for cancer surgery, I sold the 400 shares. So, for five years, stocks were the last thing on my mind.

Just lately, I was told I should have received 400 additional shares — not 200 — as a result of the two-for-one split. I feel like a fool. I know I should have taken action on this long ago. What can I do about this, at this late date?

A. Nothing. Stop berating yourself. You did nothing wrong. You received the correct number of shares at the time of the split.

Whoever told you you were entitled to 400 additional shares gave you absolutely incorrect information. A two-for-one split cuts each share into two shares. You owned 200 shares before that split. The two-for-one split made you the owner of 400 shares. The company sent you a certificate for 200 shares — exactly the number to which you were entitled.

It would have taken a three-for-one split for you to get 400 additional shares.

Q. A company in which I own 500 shares of common stock is in bankruptcy reorganization. The stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange and is quoted around $2.50. I want to sell my shares and take my capital loss this year. Can this be done while the reorganization plan is pending?

A. Sure. As long as there is a market for the stock, you can sell. The stocks of many bankrupt companies continue to trade, either on exchanges or in the over-the-counter market, during reorganization proceedings.

Santa, dogs work as team

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Christmas isn't going to the dogs, but pet owners can help Santa raise some money for the financially troubled animal shelter.

The Humane Society has persuaded Santa to pose with pets for seasonal photos, with the proceeds going to the shelter.

The financial problems could force the shelter, which operates on donations, to close by the end of the month, said society vice president Helen Jaspar.

The pictures will be taken Friday, Saturday and Sunday at a cost of $10 for two 4-by-6-inch color pictures, Ms. Jaspar said.
